I. DEFINITION OF TERMS.

A guardian, in the popular sense of one who guards, preserves, or secures, is the generic term applied in legal usage to a person whose duty it is to protect the rights, whether of person or property, of some other person, his ward, who, as in the case of minors, is conclusively presumed to be incompetent to manage his affairs.¹ A "ward" as the term is used in this treatise is a minor, whose person or property or both are under the care of a guardian.²

II. CLASSES OF GUARDIANS.

A. Common-Law Guardians—1. INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT. The common law recognized four distinct forms of guardianship, viz., guardianship in chivalry, guardianship by nature, guardianship in socage, and guardianship by nurture.³

2. GUARDIANSHIP IN CHIVALRY. Guardianship in chivalry was the right of the lord to take charge of the person and property of male infants under twenty-one and female infants under fourteen if unmarried, holding lands from him by tenure of knight service, where the estate into which such infants had come

1. Woerner Guard, § 14.

Other definitions.—"One who legally has the care and management of a person or the estate or both of a child during his minority." Reeves Dom. Rel. 311.

"A guardian is a person lawfully invested with the power, and charged with the duty, of taking care of the person and managing the property and rights of another person, who, for some peculiarity of status, or defect of age, understanding, or self-control, is considered incapable of administering his own affairs." Black L. Dict. 551.

Distinction between guardian and curator.

—The term "curator" as was said in a recent decision is used in respect to the relationship of guardian and ward, to signify one who has charge only of the property or estate of the ward, while the term "guardian" includes either one who controls only the person or both the person and estate. Burger v. Frakes, 67 Iowa 460, 23 N. W. 746, 25 N. W. 735.

vested in them by descent.⁴ At an early date in English history this was the most notorious of all guardianships, being that form of guardianship prevalent among the higher classes in society, and having so many peculiar and in some respects outrageous incidents connected with it as to attract attention both in history and fiction. It was abolished in England by the famous statute of 12 Charles II, c. 24, together with other oppressive appendages of military tenures.⁵

3. GUARDIANSHIP IN SOGAGE. Guardianship in socage is similar to guardianship in chivalry, except that it arises out of socage tenure instead of tenure by knight's service. But guardianship by socage could arise only where lands in socage tenure came to an infant by descent. The right to be guardian in socage existed only in the next of kin who could by no possibility inherit the estate.⁶ A guardian in socage was entitled to the custody of the person of the infant and to the possession of his lands.⁷ He was entitled to the profits for the benefit of the heirs.⁸ He had such an interest in the land as entitled him to lease it,⁹ or to maintain trespass for injuries to it,¹⁰ or to bring an action to recover rents and profits,¹¹ or an action for possession of it.¹² He had not, however, the control of the ward's personal property.¹³ Guardianship in socage was not the subject of alienation forfeiture or succession,¹⁴ and ceased when the infant reached the age of fourteen, so far as to entitle him to enter and take the land to himself,¹⁵ or to choose another guardian;¹⁶ but it has been said that if he did not exercise his right of selection the guardianship continued until the ward reached majority.¹⁷ Guardianship in socage, while not existing in this country in its technical sense by reason of the absence of socage tenures, does exist to a limited degree as to its other features, it being held in some states indeed that a general guardian for person and estate is merely a substitution for guardianship in socage.¹⁸

4. GUARDIANSHIP BY NATURE. Guardianship by nature at common law, according to the early English authorities, was the right of the father, mother, and next of kin, in the order named, to the custody of the person of the heir apparent. According to the strict language of the common law, only an heir apparent could be the subject of guardianship by nature; "which restriction is so true, that it hath even been doubted, whether such guardianship can be of a daughter, whose heirship, although denominated apparent, yet, being liable to be superseded by the birth of a son, is in effect rather of the presumptive kind."¹⁹ Primogeniture, however, not existing in this country, all children stand alike before the law, so that in this country at least there is no place for guardianship by nature in its strict sense. What the courts are sometimes pleased to term "natural guardians" is a term of altogether different signification. In America the term is applied to all the incidents of the common-law guardianship by nature, except that of confining it to the heir apparent,²⁰ and the authorities in this country hold that a father²¹ and on his decease the mother is guardian by nature of their infant chil-

Statutes, the statutory guardianship was constituted by those statutes to take the place of the common-law guardianship in socage, and it may for convenience be called by the same name. The guardianship there constituted was like the guardianship in socage at common law, except that it continued until the infant reached the age of twenty-one years, and relatives who could inherit from the infant were not excluded." Guardianship in socage arises only where real estate vests in an infant. Foley v. Mutual L. Co., 138 N. Y. 333, 34 N. E. 211, 34 Am. St. Rep. 456, 20 L. R. A. 620; Whitlock v. Whitlock, 1 Dem. Surr. (N. Y.) 160. Where the owner of land dies, leaving a widow and infant heirs, the widow becomes vested with the powers of a guardian in socage, and as such is authorized and required to take the rents and profits of the land for the benefit of the heirs. And the legal intestend would be that from the time of her husband's death she occupied as guardian in socage. Sylvester v. Ralston, 31 Barb. N. Y.) 286.

²⁰ There is a distinction to be observed between guardians by nature as understood at common law, and what the courts sometimes even yet term natural guardians. Thus the author of note 12, section 88b, of Coke upon Littleton, says: "When guardianship by nature is extended to children in general, or to any besides such as are heirs apparent, it is not conformable to the legal sense of the term amongst us, but must be understood to have reference to some rule independent of the common law. Thus when in chancery the father and mother are styled the natural guardians of all their children born in marriage, or of any of their illegitimate issue, we should suppose those who express themselves so generally, to refer to that sort of guardianship, which the order and course of nature, so far as we are able to collect it by the light of reason, seem to point out and to mean, that it is a good rule to regulate the guardianship by, where positive law is silent, and it is in the discretion of the lord chancellor to settle the guardianship." In America, however, a different reasoning is indulged. Thus Kent says: "According to the strict language of our law, says Mr. Hargrave, only the heir apparent can be the subject of guardianship by nature. . . . But as all children, male and female, equally inherit with us, the guardianship by nature would seem to extend to all the children, and this may be said to be a natural and inherent right in the father, as to all his children, during their minority." 2 Kent Comm. 220.

²¹ Taylor v. Jeter, 33 Ga. 195, 81 Am. Dec. 202; State v. Banks, 25 Ind. 495; Curle v. Curle, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 309; Barney v. De Kraft, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,230, 2 Hayw. & H. 404.

Effect of trust created in behalf of children.

—The will of the maternal grandfather which declares that his estate should be held by trustees, in trust for his daughter and her heirs, free from the control or disposal of any husband she might have, and exempt from his debts, contracts, or engagements, does not affect the right of the husband to the guardianship of his infant children. Barney v. De Kraft, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,230, 2 Hayw. & H. 404.

Alienation of right.—The father as natural guardian cannot irrevocably alienate his right as such guardian. In re Scarritt, 76 Mo. 565, 43 Am. Rep. 768; Byrne v. Love, 14 Tex. 81; Rust v. Vanvacter, 9 W. Va. 600.

In Louisiana a father will not be excused from the obligation of accepting the tutorship of his own children, and cannot abdicate the same and permit another person to be appointed tutor. Watt's Succession, 111 La. 937, 36 So. 31.

Under statute.—Whenever our statutes use the term "guardian," the father, although in one sense the natural guardian, is never to be included, unless there be something more which imperatively demands that it should be embraced by the expression. Barney v. De Kraft, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,230, 2 Hayw. & H. 404. Therefore there can be said to be in such cases no statutory recognition of the common-law guardianship by nature.

dren.²² And after their death the paternal grandfather or next of kin is the infant's guardian by nature.²³ Guardianship by nature extends only to the custody of the person of the ward and not to his property either personal or real.²⁴ And he is subject to the control of chancery, which can deny him the right of guardianship for unfitness or immorality, or restrain him from taking his child out of the country, or from doing anything else with the child which was inimical to its own interests or to the policy of the state.²⁵

5. GUARDIANSHIP BY NURTURE. Guardianship by nurture was the right only of the father or mother to the custody of the person of an infant, not the heir apparent, who is without any other guardian. It determined when the ward reached the age of fourteen and extended only to the care of the person and education of the infant; it had nothing to do with the estate or property of any kind.²⁶ This form of guardianship never existed in this country.²⁷

B. Guardians by Custom. The books mention a species of guardianship called "guardianship by custom," as where by the special custom of a manor the lord names or is himself the guardian of an infant copyholder. The nature of the guardianship depended wholly on the custom of the particular manor.²⁸ Guardians by custom are unknown in this country.²⁹

C. Statutory Guardians³⁰ — 1. TESTAMENTARY GUARDIANS. A father had no authority by the common law to appoint a testamentary guardian for his child.³¹

Effect of remarriage of mother.—Where a mother becomes guardian by nature on the death of her husband, this right does not devolve on any future husband she may afterward marry. Freto v. Brown, 4 Mass. 675.

Refusal of mother to act.—If a mother while she is sole refuses to act as natural guardian, and upon her refusal a guardian is appointed, she may after her marriage and while she is covert, the guardian appointed having died, accept of and undertake such guardianship. *Jarrett v. The fact that the father in his lifetime gave the custody of his child into the keeping of another person in a different county can have no effect beyond the period of the father's life; and at his death the mother is the natural guardian and entitled to the custody of the child. not limit the wife's guardianship to the period of coverture, but that it survived to her after her husband's death. People v. Boice, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 307. Testamentary guardianship was instituted by the statute of 12 Charles II, by the provisions of which the father by his last will and testament or by deed might appoint a guardian for his infant child until he was of full age.³² This form of guardianship was instituted to correct the evils incident to guardianship by chivalry, which latter form of guardianship it completely abrogated.³³ The incidents attaching to this form of guardianship may be sufficiently gathered from the statute itself which we have quoted in a previous note.³⁴ In particular, attention might be called to the following: (1) The testamentary guardian could not transfer the custody of the ward by deed or will to any other person, the trust being personal.³⁵ (2) The mother, although she has the same concern for her heir as the father, cannot name a guardian.³⁶ (3) A testamentary guardian whose authority does not determine till the infant is twenty-one, or being a female attains the age or marries, the infant cannot have action of account before that time.³⁷ (4) A guardianship devised to more than one, passed to the survivor or survivors on the death of one of them.³⁸ (5) The appointment of a testamentary guardian may be made by deed.³⁹ (6) The power to appoint extends to children under age and unmarried or born after his decease,⁴⁰ but not to his illegitimate children.⁴¹ (7) The marriage of a female ward terminated the guardianship.⁴²

2. GUARDIANS BY ELECTION OF INFANT. Guardianship by the election of the infant at common law is of very obscure origin and of doubtful legality, and arose if at all only when, from a defect of the law, the infant found himself wholly unprovided with a guardian of any kind.⁴⁵ In most of the states of the Union the statutes give an infant, on reaching the age of fourteen, the right to select his own guardian within certain well defined limitations, but the right does not exist here unless expressly given by statute.⁴⁶

In Massachusetts the statute 2 Car. II, c. 24, § 8, has never been in force, but in 1832 a statute was enacted authorizing a father by will to appoint a guardian for any of his children whether born at the time of making the will or afterward to continue during the minority of the children or for any less time. Wardwell v. Wardwell, 9 Allen (Mass.) 518.

45. Mr. Hargrave in his valuable notes to Coke Littleton, § 88b, note 16, says in speaking of the occasions when an infant might elect his own guardian: "This may happen to be the case, either before fourteen, when the infant has no property such as attracts a guardianship by tenure, and the father is dead without having executed his power of appointing a guardian for his child, and there is no mother; or after fourteen, when the custody of the guardian by socage terminates, and from the want of the father's appointment there is no other ready to succeed to the trust, and to take care of the infant or his property. Lord Coke only takes notice of such an election where the infant is under fourteen, and as to this omits to state how and before whom it should be made, nor have we yet met with any prior or contemporary writer who supplies the defect. . . . As to a guardian after fourteen, it appears from the ending of guardianship in socage at that age, as if the common law deemed a guardian afterward unnecessary. However, since the 12 of Cha. 2, enabling the father to appoint a guardian to his children till twenty-one, it has been usual for want of such a guardian to allow the infant to elect one for himself; and according to one book, this practice seems to have prevailed in some degree before the Restoration. Phil. Tenend. non Tollend. 159. Such election is said to be frequently made before a judge on the circuit. 2 Ves. 375; 3 Brown C. C. 500. But we do not conceive this form to be essential. . . . Indeed it seems as if there was no prescribed form of an infant's electing a guardian after fourteen, any more than there is before; and therefore election by parol might perhaps be sufficient. . . . But we do not wonder at the deficiency; because guardianship by election of the infant is of very late origin, it being, we believe, not only unnoticed by any writer before lord Coke, except Swinburne, but there still being no cases in print to explain the powers incident to it, or whether the infant may change a guardian so constituted by himself. Swin. Testam. ed. 1590, fol. 97b."

46. See infra, III, D, 3.

47. Mr. Schouler in his excellent work on the subject of domestic relations gives a very origin of the jurisdiction of chancery over infants,⁴⁸ that jurisdiction is now nowhere questioned, and has been exercised by courts of chancery from a comparatively early period. Chancery would appoint a guardian either on a suit pending or without suit on petition; in either case the rights and duties of the guardian with regard to the person and estate of the infant was the same with those of other guardians and continued during minority.⁴⁹ As will be seen in subsequent sections⁵⁰ courts of equity in this country inherit the same jurisdiction enjoyed by the English court of chancery as to appointment of guardians over infants.⁵¹

E. Ecclesiastical Guardians. While there has been much controversy over the ancient right of the ecclesiastical courts of England to appoint guardians, it seems to be the better opinion that such a right existed at least as to the appointment of a certain curator for the personal estate, and if there was no other guardian by tenure or otherwise, for the person also.⁵² No such courts exist in interesting account of what he considers the origin of our probate jurisdiction over guardians. Schouler Dom. Rel. (5th ed.) § 291.

48. See Coke Litt. 88b, note 16.

The origin of the jurisdiction of chancery to appoint general guardians over infants is shrouded in mediæval darkness, and much wild speculation has been indulged both by those who assert that such jurisdiction was originally an usurpation and those who assert that it was a power legally delegated to the chancellor by the crown, who as parens patriæ is supposed to have a superintending care over all persons in the kingdom who are unable to protect themselves. After a careful research, we are willing to hazard the following practical and simple solution, divorced from all sentimental or speculative considerations. While it may be true under our modern conceptions of government that the state must of necessity place somewhere a superintending power over those who cannot take care of themselves we are not free to admit that under the feudal system as existing in England during the middle ages, any such conception obtained. The feudal barons exercised most of the prerogatives over their own retainers and tenants which are now conceded to the state, and all analogies point to the conclusion that originally the right of guardianship existed in the feudal lords, and only became vested in the crown by direct statute. Thus it is admitted by Fonblanque (2 Fonbl. Tr. Eq. 228 note 5th ed.), that the custody of the persons and lands of idiots and lunatics, at least of such as held lands, was not anciently in the crown, but in the lord of the fee. He also calls attention to the fact that by express statute (2 Edw. II, c. 9), the king was given the custody of idiots, which also vested in him the profits of the idiot's lands during his life. So also with regard to infants the statute of Henry VIII erecting the court of wards and liveries was in fact a mere delegation of certain feudal powers of guardianship to a special tribunal. Indeed, even a most superficial study of the feudal system and the practices obtaining thereunder as to guardianship (see guardianship in chivalry) will convince the student of the extreme power over infants and the jealous exercise of that power on the part of the feudal lords.

But how came the chancellor to obtain jurisdiction? We are strongly inclined to the opinion that the origin of this jurisdiction is to be found in the ancient writ de custodia admittendo. That writ only related to the appointment of guardians ad litem. Reg. Br. Orig. 198a. From the authority to appoint a special guardian ad litem it was easy to take the next step and by indirect methods of procedure exercise the right to appoint general guardians. Indeed, it is admitted to have been fiction for many years after the jurisdiction of the court of chancery was nowhere doubted, of requiring a suit or bill filed before the chancellor would undertake to appoint a guardian. And it is stated by Hargrave on unquestionable authority that the first instance to be found of a guardian appointed by the chancellor, on petition without bill, was in 1696, in the case of Hampden. It therefore quite clearly appears that the origin of chancery's jurisdiction over the appointment of general guardians was an usurpation arising out of the writ de custodia admittendo or their right to appoint guardians ad litem for infants who might become parties to any litigation before them. The necessities of the case might be said to be the strongest justification for this usurpation, which, indeed, is also the only justification of most of the existing and extraordinary powers of the court of chancery.

G. Guardians Under the Civil Law. Guardianship under the Roman or civil law was termed a quasi-contract because of the mutual obligations assumed by tutor and pupil.⁵⁵ At the civil law guardianship proper, or tutorship, or tutela, as it was termed, had to do only with males under fourteen and females under twelve years of age. Puberty in all cases ipso facto ended the authority of the tutor.⁵⁶ As to adult persons, or those who had arrived at the age of puberty, they had only curators assigned to them till they reached the age of twenty-five years, which was the full majority, according to the Roman law.⁵⁷ After the age of puberty was reached a curator would be appointed only in two cases: One, when the minor himself agreed to it, and the other when the persons who had matters to settle and adjust with the minors procured their appointment.⁵⁸ The tutela or guardianship might be given by will (called testamentaria),⁵⁹ by operation of law (called legitima),⁶⁰ and by appointment by the magistrate (called dativa). They were preferred in the order of their statement.⁶¹ In any one of these cases the person appointed must have the neces-appointment by the ecclesiastical courts as confined to guardians ad litem, and therefore as perfectly insignificant.

55. "As the tutor is obliged, without his will, to take care of the person and estate of the minor, so it is likewise just that the minor, on the other hand, should be reciprocally bound to the tutor, to ratify, after he comes of age, whatever the tutor shall have rightly managed, and to allow him the expenses which he shall have reasonably laid out. So that the guardianship makes a reciprocal engagement between the tutor or guardian and the pupil, in the same manner as if they had contracted with one another. And it is for this reason that this engagement is called in the Roman Law a quasi contractus." Dom. Civ. L. § 1277. Dom. Civ. L. (Cushing ed.) § 1279. In France the tutorship lasts until the persons have fully completed the age of five and twenty years.

Curatio bonorum at the civil law.—The specific difference between the "curator" and the "tutor" was, that the first object of the former was the care of the property, and the first object of the latter was the care of the person. There were two kinds of "curatio," the "dativa," by special appointment, and the "legitima," by operation of law. The "curator" was granted at the request of the "adolescens" or minor; it was the duty of the tutor to admonish the pupil to demand a "curator," or a co-litigant or a debtor might require the "adolescens" to appoint a "curator." Phillimore Priv. L. Rom. 303.

59. Tutors by will (testamentaria tutela).—The father or grandfather alone could appoint a tutor. The father could not appoint a tutor to one emancipated, nor the mother to any child. A slave of the testator might be appointed by will since his appointment was an implied grant of his freedom. If there was a delay in entering upon the inheritance or if the tutor was appointed by the will to serve for or from a particular time the magistrate appointed a tutor (dativa) for the interval. The will had to point out definitely for what children the tutor was appointed. The tutor appointed in the will has to be confirmed by the prætor in Rome or the pro-consul in a province. Phillimore Priv. L. Rom. 293, 294.

60. Tutors by operation of law (legitima tutela).—The legitima tutela prevailed when, for whatever reason, there was no testamentary tutela. The legitima tutores were those called by the law to the tutela and to the inheritance. The nearest relative or next of kin to the minor assumed the guardianship. Phillimore Priv. L. Rom. 294, 295. This form of guardianship corresponds to guardians in socage, at common law. It will be observed, however, that the next of kin to the infant are trusted in the one case while in the other they are absolutely distrusted, and the guardianship given to those who could by no possibility inherit the estate. What a reflection is this upon the morals of these respective civilizations!

61. Tutors by judicial appointment (dativa tutela).—The dativa tutela took place where neither the testamentaria nor the legitima existed. The appointment was made ex officio by the principal magistrate within his jurisdiction. Justinian gave this authority also to the bishop of the diocese. The duty of seeing that a tutor was appointed was upon whom the minor's estate would devolve in case of his death. If they did not try to have a tutor appointed within a year they would lose their inheritance. The appointment of a tutor by a magistrate necessitated compulsory service on his part; he could not decline. Certain persons were exempted from this com-sary qualifications.⁶² The tutela terminated in one of four ways, to wit: (1) By the emancipation of the pupillus; (2) by supervening incapacity; (3) by resignation legally accepted; and (4) by removal on formal complaint.⁶³ The duties of the tutors related to the care and management of the pupil's property and the custody and education of the pupil.⁶⁴ These duties do not differ so materially from the duties imposed by the common and statute law of England and America as to warrant an extended consideration of them. This form of guardianship, modified in some respects by statutes, is in force in the state of Louisiana. The various features of this system where they differ from the rules obtaining in other states will be prominently set forth under the various sections and subdivisions of this article.

H. Volunteer and De Facto Guardians. One who takes possession of the infant's property without right or lawful authority may be treated as a trespasser,⁶⁵ or the tort may be waived and the intermeddler treated as guardian in a court of equity and liable to account for the property.⁶⁶ It would be a strange rule of equity indeed if the infant were not as well protected against the violence of the wrong-doer as he is against the peculation of an appointed guardian.⁶⁷ This rule, it has been said, is a fiction of a court of equity only,⁶⁸ and an administrator or executor having rightful possession of the property of an infant cannot be treated as a guardian without his consent.⁶⁹ So where the guardian appointed fails to qualify he is neither guardian de jure nor de facto.⁷⁰

III. APPOINTMENT, QUALIFICATION, AND TENURE.

A. Purposes For Which Guardian May Be Appointed. The power of the courts to appoint a guardian may be invoked only for the protection of persons legally incompetent to control themselves or their property.⁷¹ Where one is pulsory service, to wit: persons holding certain offices, persons who had been absent in the service of the state and had not been at home for more than a year, ecclesiastics, teachers, philosophers, orators, grammarians, editors, soldiers, paupers, invalids, persons over the age of seventy, persons already caring for three tutorships or having more than three children, persons having ill-will against the father, or at litigation with the pupil. Phillimore Priv. L. Rom. 295, 296.

62. Disqualifications of guardians at civil law.—Some persons were naturally, and some legally disqualified from being "tutors." The naturally disqualified were the insane, prodigals, minor, blind, deaf, and dumb. The legally disqualified were the slave, the "deportatus," the soldier, women (the mother and grandmother excepted), upon renouncing a second marriage, and a creditor or debtor of the pupillus. All others fili familias not excepted might be tutores. Phillimore Priv. L. Rom. 292.

appointed guardian without limitation upon his power and authority, he will be regarded as the guardian of both the person and the estate, and no question as to the propriety of appointing separate guardians can arise.⁷² In at least one jurisdiction it is held that the policy of the law forbids the court of probate to award the guardianship of an infant's person to one party and the guardianship of his estate to another.⁷³ In other jurisdictions, however, the power to appoint two guardians, one for the person and one for the estate, is recognized.⁷⁴ Nevertheless where a guardian has been appointed for a ward's estate, a subsequent appointment of a guardian for both person and estate is valid as to the person only.⁷⁵ The appointment of a temporary guardian is improvident and erroneous where, in proceedings for the appointment of a guardian, there was no petition for the appointment of a temporary guardian, and no finding that such guardian was necessary, and his appointment would necessarily result in a waste of the minor's estate in the payment of fees.⁷⁶

B. Persons For Whom Guardian May Be Appointed. A guardian cannot be appointed for a minor whose natural protector is living; as for instance the husband of an infant wife,⁷⁷ provided the husband is himself of age,⁷⁸ or the father of his legitimate children where such father may act as natural guardian,⁷⁹ or the Appointment to send infant into foreign country.—A probate judge has no authority to appoint a guardian for minors, for the purpose of having them sent into a foreign country; and an appointment made upon an application, which shows that such is the purpose for which it was sought, is improvident and erroneous, and should be revoked. Eq. 344, 35 Atl. 48, in which case it was said that the rule which obtains in the orphans' court should control the prerogative court in the exercise of its jurisdiction, unless the application of the rule would be a great hardship.

Reason for rule.—"From a separation of these duties, while very little benefit can be anticipated, many inconveniences and considerable increase of expense must necessarily follow" (Tenbrook v. McColm, 12 N. J. L. 97, 98); "the great evil of two guardianships lies in two sets of accountings, and expenses for the accomplishment of that which should be one duty" (In re Ross, 53 N. J. Eq. 344, 346, 35 Atl. 48).

Reason for rule.—Familiar instances of competency for one duty and incompetency for the other are found in the case of widowed mothers who are in the highest degree competent to have the care and control of their minor children, but for want of business experience are incompetent to manage their property, and so instances are frequent where one friend of the minor is capable and willing to serve as guardian of the person, and another of the property, where neither is competent for both duties. Lawrence v. Thomas, 84 Iowa 362, 51 N. W. 11.

But under the Married Women's Act of New York, it has been held that the surrogate has authority to appoint a guardian of the estate of a married female infant even though her husband is an adult, since the latter acquires no control of her property by marriage. Matter of Herbeck, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 214.

78. Where the husband also is an infant, the wife's estate devolves upon the guardian of her husband, and the appointment of a guardian for the wife is a nullity. Hisle v. Hisle, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 237. Under the Indiana statutes a guardian may be appointed for the estate of an infant married woman, whose husband also is a minor. Decker v. Fessler, 146 Ind. 16, 44 N. E. 657.

79. No appointment will be made where the father may act as natural guardian or mother of her illegitimate offspring.⁸⁰ So under some statutes a guardian cannot be appointed even for a minor unless such minor is also an orphan.⁸¹ It is also well settled that there can be no valid appointment of a guardian for an infant who already has a guardian whose guardianship has not been revoked.⁸² And this rule applies as well to testamentary as to other guardians.⁸³ The rule does not apply, however, where the two guardianships do not conflict.⁸⁴ Nor where the former guardian is ineligible to office.⁸⁵ A guardian may be appointed for an infant whose parents have abandoned him,⁸⁶ or for an infant who by statutory proceedings has been taken from its parents and placed in the custody of a person is authorized by law to receive and account for the property of his child.

Even where the parent has surrendered the custody of his child, the court has no authority to appoint a guardian without such parents' consent. People v. Kearney, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 430, 19 How. Pr. 493. Where, however, there is no statute giving the parent the right to dispose of the custody of their children, an agreement to that effect with a stranger does not control the discretion of the probate court in subsequently appointing another person his guardian where both parents are dead. In re Lewis, 88 N. C. 31. Where either parent is living the consent of the parent must be obtained even after a surrender of custody to a stranger, before a guardian can be appointed. Dalton v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 357; Gloucester v. Page, 105 Mass. 231; Cook v. Bybee, 24 Tex. 278.

Unless the child has property no guardian at all can be appointed for a ward whose father is living. Friesner v. Symonds, 46 N. J. Eq. 521, 20 Atl. 257. Where the infant has property, however, a different rule applies. In such cases, while in most states the father has the preference, he is compelled to furnish bond, and on his failure to do so the court may appoint a stranger as guardian.

80. A bastard child on the death of its mother is an orphan and therefore entitled to the appointment of a guardian. Friesner v. Symonds, 46 N. J. Eq. 521, 20 Atl. 257; Dalton v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 357.

81. Statutory restriction of appointment to orphans includes, in addition to infancy, the necessity of proving that the child is fatherless. Poston v. Young, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 501; Jones' Succession, 12 La. Ann. 397; Cleveland v. Sprowl, 12 Rob. (La.) 172; In re Mossy, 3 Rob. (La.) 390; State v. Orleans, 6 La. 363; Acosta v. Robin, 7 Mart.

N. S. (La.) 387; Stewart v. Morrison, 38 Miss. 417. And this rule obtains even where both parents are divorced if they are still living. Lemunier v. McCearly, 37 La. Ann. 133. It has been held that where the constitution gives the probate court jurisdiction in "orphans' business," a statute confirming power in such courts to appoint guardians to minors whose fathers were living was not authorized. Earle v. Crum, 42 Miss. 165; Ex p. Atkinson, 40 Miss. 17. However in a later case the authorities just cited from Mississippi were overruled and it was held that the term "orphans' business" was not confined to the limited or popular sense, importing death of parent, and that the phrase should be construed as meaning minors' business, and would permit the appointment of a guardian for a minor whose father was yet living. Hall v. Wells, 54 Miss. 289. To the same effect see Redman v. Chance, 32 Md. 42.

84. Kearney v. Brooklyn Industrial School Assoc., etc., 1 Redf. Surr. (N. Y.) 292. C. Jurisdiction⁸⁹—1. IN GENERAL. As in England⁹⁰ so in this country the court of chancery has original inherent jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for infants within its territory; and this jurisdiction is exclusive, in the absence of statutes conferring it on other special tribunals.⁹¹ Nevertheless by virtue of statute, all courts having power to grant letters testamentary or of administration have power to appoint guardians for minors.⁹² But even in this event the jurisdiction of chancery is held to be concurrent with the special statutory tribunals thus created, unless the intent of the legislature to divest the court of chancery of jurisdiction is clearly expressed.⁹³ It is a very general principle that a court where it appears that the parents are unfit to care for the child. Com. v. Klemesen, 9 Pa. Dist. 165, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 207.

Grounds of jurisdiction.—In the exercise of this jurisdiction the court proceeds upon the theory that guardianship is a trust and intervenes to protect the interest of the infant by way of preventive as well as remedial justice—where a loss or injury is certain as well as where it has been consummated. Lee v. Lee, 55 Ala. 590.

Jurisdiction to appoint a guardian is not limited by a statute which provides that the abuse of parental authority is the subject of judicial cognizance in a civil action by a child or certain relatives, or the county supervisors, in which the child may be freed from the dominion of a parent. In re Lundberg, 143 Cal. 402, 77 Pac. 146.

Jurisdiction of a court vested with powers of a chancery court to appoint a guardian for an infant is not exhausted by a statutory proceeding in the county court in which the infant is taken from the parent and placed in the custody of a person selected by the court (In re Stittgen, 110 Wis. 625, 86 N. W. 563; In re Klein, 95 Wis. 246, 70 N. W. 64); nor by habeas corpus proceedings whereby the infant is restored to the parent's custody (In re Stittgen, supra).

Concurrent jurisdiction of chancery with statutory courts.—In Lee v. Lee, 55 Ala. 590, 598, the court said: "The statutes contain no express words, and no indication of a purpose to exclude the jurisdiction of a court of equity as it originally existed, unless such implication can be made from the fact that a similar jurisdiction is conferred on the Court of Probate. . . . The statutes have conferred on the Court of Probate large jurisdiction over these subjects. The decisions are of equity never, except in obedience to statutory enactment, loses a jurisdiction it has once assumed.⁹⁴ The chancery court will not interfere, however, where another court, which is by statute vested with jurisdiction, first assumes jurisdiction and the remedy there is adequate.⁹⁵ Under these circumstances some special equity must be shown to justify the interposition of a court of chancery.⁹⁶

2. DOMICILE AS AFFECTING JURISDICTION. The general rule is that in order to give the court jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for a minor the minor must have his domicile in the county where the court presides.⁹⁷ Ordinarily a court has no jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for a minor whose domicile is in another county,⁹⁸ even though he is residing within the county,⁹⁹ although it has been held that the legislature has the constitutional power to authorize a court to grant letters of guardianship to a particular person residing in that county, notwithstanding it is not the domicile of the minor.¹ Although the terms "residence" and uniform, that thereby the original jurisdiction of a court of equity is not impaired—that to the extent of the jurisdiction conferred on the Court of Probate, it is concurrent with that of a court of equity."

Where jurisdiction is conferred on courts of equity by the constitution, it cannot be divested by act of the legislature. Wilson v. Roach, 4 Cal. 362.

“domicile” are not in all respects convertible terms,² the word “residence” as used in the statute relating to the appointment of guardians for minors is, according to the weight of authority, to be construed as synonymous with “domicile.”³ The domicile of a minor for purposes of guardianship is that of its parents or of those standing in loco parentis, even though at the time of appointment such minor may be residing in another county,⁴ or in another state.⁵ The ward himself cannot change his domicile by removal because he is not sui juris;⁶ nor does the removal of the ward to another state or county, by relatives or friends, in any way affect his domicile.⁷

3. LOCATION OF PROPERTY AS AFFECTING JURISDICTION. The fact that a minor has property in a county does not give the court of that county jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for him if he is domiciled in some other county in the state.⁹ The court of the county in which a minor has property, and to which is confided the general power to appoint guardians for minors' estates, may appoint a guardian to control the estate of a minor if he resides outside of the state.⁹ Such court has, however, no power to appoint a guardian of the minor's person.¹⁰ But the appointment of a guardian over both the person and the estate will be good as to the estate, although such appointment is inoperative as respects the guardianship of the person.¹¹ A court vested with jurisdiction to appoint guardians for minors cannot appoint a guardian for a minor residing out of the state and who has no property within the jurisdiction;¹² nor will the bringing of the infant into the jurisdiction by stratagem for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction avail;¹³ but it is only when a minor is a non-resident of the state that property belonging to him within the jurisdiction is necessary to justify the appointment of a guardian.¹⁴

4. PRESUMPTION AS TO JURISDICTION. When the transcript of the record of a court of another state granting letters of guardianship is duly certified and authenticated under the act of congress, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the legal presumption will be that the court was one of general jurisdiction and had the authority it exercised.¹⁵

Under the Kentucky statutes the county court of a county in which real estate belonging to a minor is situated may appoint a guardian for him, although he is a non-resident of the state, is over fourteen years of age, and may not have nominated a guardian; and if there is no real estate the court of the county in which there is personal estate may appoint a guardian. McVaw v. Shelby, 75 S. W. 227, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 309.

A beneficiary certificate issued by a fraternal beneficial society, suable in Missouri, in favor of minor children domiciled in Missouri, has its legal situs at their domicile and is an asset in the hands of a guardian appointed there; and the presence of the paper in another state does not authorize the appointment of a guardian of the minors in such other state. *M. Property held in trust.—Under Gen. St. c. 109, § 13, if a person liable to be put under guardianship resides without this commonwealth, and his estate in this commonwealth consists in part of personal property, which is held in trust for him, the probate court of the county where the trustee resides has jurisdiction to appoint the guardian. *Clarke v. 2. APPOINTMENT BY DEED OR WILL—a. In General. As previously shown a father had no power at common law to appoint a guardian for his minor child by deed or will, but this right was conferred on him by the statute of 12 Car. II, c. 24, which statute has been substantially reenacted in many states of the Union.¹⁷ An appointment as guardian and trustee of the same person creates two separate and distinct offices.¹⁸ An appointment by the court of an administrator with the will annexed confers no authority on the person appointed to act as testamentary guardian.¹⁹ The court is not absolutely bound by a testamentary appointment,²⁰ and will not give effect to it where it would be prejudicial to the happiness and moral training of the minor.²¹

b. Who May Appoint. Under most statutes authorizing the appointment of testamentary guardians the father only has the right of appointment;²² and under some statutes the father cannot appoint a guardian for his children when the mother is living and suitable to have their custody.²³ The statutes do not confer power on the father of illegitimate children to appoint a guardian for them,²⁴ but the courts will adopt the nomination of the putative father if otherwise unobjectionable in deference to the wishes of the deceased but not as a matter of right.²⁵ Independent of special statutory authority the mother has no power to appoint a testamentary guardian of her minor children,²⁶ but regard will

c. Requisites and Sufficiency of Appointment. As was shown in a preceding section a testamentary guardian might under authority of the statute of 12 Car. There are, however, statutes in many jurisdictions which provide that the power shall be exercised by will only.³¹ The instrument by which a testamentary guardian is appointed must be in writing,³² and to be effectual as a testamentary appointment must show who is to have the care and nurture of the minor,³³ although it is not necessary that the word "guardian" should be employed.³⁴ It will be sufficient if it can be clearly collected from the instrument that a certain person was thereby appointed to have the custody of the persons and estate of the minors until they arrived at majority.³⁵ If the appointment is by will, it must be executed in the manner provided for the execution of other wills.³⁶ As regards probate it was said by Judge Kent that wills merely appointing testamentary guardians need not be proved.³⁷ In some jurisdictions, however, statutes expressly require probate of wills appointing guardians,³⁸ and it has been said by Judge Woerner that Kent's statement should at the present time be received with caution, for in most states wills have no validity until they are admitted to probate.³⁹ Although in cases of testamentary appointment, the guardian is said to derive his authority directly from the will,⁴⁰

Harris*, 9 Jur. 388, 14 Sim. 540, 37 Eng. Ch. 540); a direction that testator's wife so long as she shall remain his widow shall have the care and custody of his children for such time as they shall continue minors (Corrigan v. Kiernan, 1 Bradf. Surr. (N. Y.) 208); a direction that the wife shall have the "guardianship, custody, and tuition" of testator's children during their minority (Hagerty v. Hagerty, 9 Hun (N. (Balch v. Smith, 12 N. H. 437); or "to pay income bequeathed to child to the mother for the support and education of the child" (Macknet v. Macknet, 24 N. J. Eq. 277); or to hold estate in trust until the youngest child becomes of age, and use the proceeds for the support of testator's minor children (Capps v. Hickman, 97 Ill. 429). But see Kevan v. Waller, 11 Leigh (Va.) 414, 36 Am. Dec. 391; Gaines v. Spann, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,178, 2 Broek. 81.

Instruments held insufficient.—An instrument reciting that testator was lying in danger of death and that he had "found kind friends to take charge of and raise" his children and requesting managers of an asylum in whose custody the children then were to place them "in the custody of" a party therein named (Desribes v. Wilmer, 69 Ala. 25, 44 Am. Rep. 501); an instrument merely constituting the executor a trustee of testator's minor children (In re Van Horn, 5 N. J. L. J. 372). So a written request by the father of minor children that a designated person be appointed their guardian has no effect, after his death, to change their domicile, or to empower any probate court foreign to their domicile to appoint a guardian for them. M. W. of A. v. Hester, 66 Kan. 129, 71 Pac. 279. A testator bequeathed his estate to trustees, and directed them out of their investments of the same to set apart £1,000 "to be used by them for the purpose of educating and giving a profession to my son, providing he has not already been educated and received a profession." He then directed the trustees to use and apply one half of the income of the residue of the estate, as far as deemed necessary, for the maintenance and support of the said son, and that upon his arriving at the age of twenty-five years one half of the estate with all accumulations thereon should be given to him absolutely. the mere naming of one guardian in a will does not constitute him such. He must accept the appointment, and qualify and assume the performance of his duties.⁴¹

3. SELECTION OF GUARDIAN BY INFANT. It has already been shown that wards in socage, having attained the age of fourteen, might choose or select their own guardians.⁴² But since this form of guardianship does not exist in this country, such method of selection is not recognized unless expressly authorized by statute.⁴³ Nevertheless in most jurisdictions by virtue of statutory provision a minor on reaching the age of fourteen years may select a guardian for himself whom the court will appoint if in its discretion it considers it to be for the interest of the ward.⁴⁴ And an appointment by the court of a guardian for an infant over fourteen years old without giving the infant an opportunity to choose his own guardian is void for want of jurisdiction.⁴⁵ While the minor should ordinarily be permitted to exercise his right, unless the selection is detrimental to his interest,⁴⁶ the court will not ratify an appointment or selection by a ward where no guardian is necessary,⁴⁷ nor where such appointment will be prejudicial to the interests of the ward.⁴⁸ The court may exercise its discretion independently of any choice which the minor may make.⁴⁹ It is generally held, however, that the right conferred by statute on infants to select a guardian, when fourteen years of age, does not extend to infants for whom there is a guardian appointed by deed or will;⁵⁰ and there are express statutory provisions to that effect in some jurisdictions.⁵¹ So no right of selection exists for infants for whom a guardian has been appointed by a court of chancery.⁵² Powers of guardians so appointed terminates only on arrival of the ward at majority.⁵³ As regards the right of selection by an infant in cases where the probate court has already appointed a guardian before it arrives at the age of choice, there is some conflict of authority. In some jurisdictions it is held that the right of the infant to select a guardian only exists where there is no guardian appointed by the court,⁵⁴ but the weight of authority is to the contrary.⁵⁵ If no choice be made the guardian first appointed will continue in his trust,⁵⁶ and the manner in which the ward must exercise his choice must be that prescribed by statute.⁵⁷ Ordinarily the selection must be made by the infant personally in open court,⁵⁸ or in the presence of the judge.⁵⁹

4. SELECTION BY FAMILY MEETING. Under the laws of Louisiana if the mother, the natural tutrix, remarries she must have a family meeting called to decide whether she should remain tutrix.⁶⁰ If she marries without calling a family meeting she is ipso facto deprived of her tutorship,⁶¹ and the under-tutor should provoke a family meeting to select another tutor.⁶² While a family meeting may consent to her continuance as tutrix on giving security,⁶³ its favorable action is indispensable to her retention as tutrix.⁶⁴ The effect of the consent of the family meeting is to join the husband as co-tutor,⁶⁵ and a failure to consent while it authorizes removal does not ipso facto terminate the tutorship, as is the case when no family meeting is called.⁶⁶ Where the father and mother are dead,⁶⁷ or the father dead and the mother disqualified to act as tutrix,⁶⁸ the grandfather is entitled to the tutorship without the intervention of a family meeting, but it has been held that such meeting must pass on his sureties.⁶⁹ A family meeting must be composed of five relations or in default of relations of five friends.⁷⁰ In the absence of relations, it should be composed of friends.⁷¹ But where there are relatives, friends should not be called to compose the meeting.⁷² The under-tutor is required by statute to be present at family meetings to recommend the tutor, and one held without notice to him and without his presence will be set aside;⁷³ but if he has been notified to attend and fails to do so, he cannot annul the appointment.⁷⁴ Where there is no vacancy in the office of tutor, a family meeting to select one is unauthorized.⁷⁵ Where the family meeting is equally divided as to the selection of a tutor, there can be no valid appointment,⁷⁶ and where proceedings for the homologation of a family meeting appointing a tutor are pending, an application for the holding of a second meeting to recommend the appointment of a tutor is improper, and an order made on such application is void.⁷⁷ The courts have power to set aside the action of the family meeting and appoint a tutor if the physical infirmities of the one recommended for the appointment prevent him from managing his own affairs and those of the minor.⁷⁸ In the province of Quebec if the family meeting duly summoned refuses to give advice on the opportunity of having a curator appointed to an emancipated minor the judge or court may make such appointment.⁷⁹

E. What Persons May Be Appointed⁸⁰—1. CONSIDERATIONS AFFECTING SELECTION—a. Interests of Minor and Expressed Wishes of Deceased Parent. It is a well settled rule of law that in the appointment of a guardian, the interest of the minor is the paramount consideration,⁸¹ and this means not the provisional benefit but the lasting good.⁸³ The court will take into consideration not merely temporary welfare but the state of the minor's affections, attachments, his training, education, and morals.⁸³ Indeed under this rule a court may overrule even the prior claim of a surviving parent,⁸⁴ and certainly the expressed wishes of a deceased parent.⁸⁵ Nevertheless the dying wishes and earnest requests of the deceased parents of an infant will be considered by the court in appointing a guardian and, other things being equal, will turn the scales in favor of the person so designated.⁸⁶ So also will the court regard the expressed desire of the deceased parents in reference to the religious education of the infant.⁸⁷

b. Conflict of Interests of Proposed Guardian With Those of Minor. An important qualification of a guardian is personal disinterestedness and absolute freedom from social or financial obligations antagonistic to financial interests of his ward. Such opposing influences have a tendency to divide and weaken the strict loyalty which the law demands of a guardian toward his ward.⁸⁸

Insolvency of applicant for guardianship.—The interest of the ward, the safety of his funds, and the character of the guardian for integrity and sound judgment, being the considerations that should influence the court, it is an abuse of discretion to appoint a person of known insolvency, who is instigated to apply for letters by a bank for selfish purposes. *Lee v. One obliged to account for funds belonging to the minor, which came to him in the usual course of business, is not disqualified for appointment as such infant's guardian. Fuqua's Succession, 27 La. Ann. 271.

e. Religious Belief as Affecting Selection. There is no religious qualification demanded by the state for the office of guardian.⁸⁹ Nevertheless the expressed wishes of a deceased parent as to the religious education of the child will ordinarily be controlling in the selection of a guardian.⁹⁰ Where, however, no suitable person of the same faith as the parents has offered to take charge of the minor, the probate court is not debarred from committing the minor to a person of a different faith.⁹¹

2. PARENTS. It is a rule well settled by statute and judicial decision that the father and after his death the mother are entitled, if they desire it, to appointment as guardian of their minor children, under fourteen years of age, and their claim to preference cannot be disregarded except on the most compelling reasons proven and sustained before the court.⁹² But if the character of the parents or their

Bowman*, (Wyo. 1904) 77 Pac. 439, holding that under the provisions of the statutes of Wyoming prohibiting any distinction being made on account of religious belief, the courts will give no weight to evidence of religious opinions in a proceeding to determine the custody of a minor child, the difficulties and disagreements as to which arose between those concerned from their differences in religious matters.

In making a temporary disposition of the child in proceedings in which the court cannot appoint a guardian, if its interests will be as well served by giving it in charge of a person of the religious faith of its parents, it will be so disposed of. In re Doyle, 16 Mo. App. 159.

Limitations of rule.—The law is not so rigid as to compel the court to order children to be brought up under the religion of their deceased father, regardless of the consequences to themselves; and while there must be strong reasons for disregarding the parents' wishes, the court may also depart from the rule for sufficient reasons. The welfare of the infant is the ultimate guide of the court. In re McGrath, [1893] 1 Ch. 143, 62 L. J. Ch. 208, 67 L. T. Rep. N. S. 636, 2 Reports 137, 41 Wkly. Rep. 97.

Where the surviving mother has deeded the child away by adoption, she does not take in precedence of a testamentary guardian appointed by the will of the adopting parent. Halcy's Succession, 49 La. Ann. 709, 22 So. 251.

Where the parents are divorced, the mother manner of life are such as will probably result disastrously to the interests of the child, their claims will be denied.⁹³ In all cases of the custody of the children the rights and claims of parents must not be allowed to prevail over what clearly appears to be for the best interests of the child.⁹⁴ So also when a parent entitled to appointment neglects to obey the mandate of the court to appear and qualify as guardian, the court will presume that such parent has waived his right of preference and the appointment of another guardian will be proper and legal.⁹⁵ And a parent may be refused the guardianship of the estate of his infant child unless he gives security.⁹⁶

3. RELATIVES. Under the laws in force in most states, no one can claim as a right the guardianship of a child, under the age of fourteen, other than its parents or the latter's nominee by deed or will, no matter how nearly related to the child. In such case the best interests of the minors are alone to be consulted, and the probate court is not restricted in the appointment of a guardian for the minor.⁹⁷ Nevertheless in all cases it is believed to be the rule that, other things being equal, the relatives of a minor will be preferred to strangers.⁹⁸ But even will be preferred if she is a proper person, as guardian for her female infants. In re Austerhautd, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 18.

Under the Mexican law prevailing in California before the annexation to the United States, the mother of an infant by a former marriage could not be continued as natural guardian or be appointed guardian, after her second marriage. It was held, however, that an order appointing the stepfather of an infant its guardian was not void on the ground that the order making the appointment continued the mother as natural guardian. Brady v. Reese, 51 Cal. 447.

Preference of parent over grandparent.—The court on finding the father competent is without power to award guardianship to the grandmother, although it also finds that the child is delicate and that at the grandmother's home it can secure fresh air and exercise while at the father's home its only opportunity of being outdoors is the public streets of a city. In re Salter, 142 Cal. 412, 76 Pac. 51.

Illegitimate children.—The mother and after her death the putative father of an illegitimate infant are entitled to priority of appointment as guardian. Barela v. Roberts, 34 Tex. 544. in this case, as between relatives having no legal claim upon the services of the infant, great latitude is allowed to the discretion of the court in the appointment of guardian, and a reason which might be insufficient to bar the rights of the mother or father might decide the question between the claims of the other relations.⁹⁹

4. EXECUTORS, ADMINISTRATORS, AND TRUSTEES. It is provided by statute in some states that no executor or administrator shall be admitted or appointed by the probate court guardian of a minor having an interest in the estate under the care of such executor or administrator.¹ And even independent of statute it has been held that such an appointment is improvident and not to be encouraged.² It has been held, however, that where the executor is also appointed testamentary trustee for the infant in addition to being executor, there is no objection to his appointment as guardian.³ The same rules do not apply to trustees. Where therefore a person applying to be appointed guardian of an infant is already the trustee of such infant for the purpose of expending the income of the estate for his support and education, it is a circumstance in favor of his appointment as such guardian.⁴

5. MARRIED WOMEN. Coverture is at the present time no disqualification for the office of guardian. A mother therefore may be appointed guardian of the person and property of her child, although she has married again.⁵

In Texas where there is no descendant in the direct line of the infant, the statute gives the preference to the next of kin who comes immediately after the presumptive heir; but the discrimination of this statute against the appointment of the presumptive heir as guardian applies only when he is of the collateral kindred, and it is not its purpose to require the guardianship to be given to one not of the kindred of the orphan, rather than the presumptive heir. *Good v. 6. PARTNERSHIPS AND CORPORATIONS. It has been held that a partnership cannot be appointed guardian.⁶ Neither is a corporation eligible to appointment unless specially authorized to accept such trusts in its charter.⁷ Statutes in some states, however, expressly authorize the appointment of particular corporations, generally known as trust companies, as guardians of minors.⁸

7. NON-RESIDENTS. At common law there is no embargo on the appointment of a non-resident as guardian.⁹ Nevertheless the law prefers a resident guardian, and unless for good cause shown the probate court will not appoint a person guardian who is not a resident of the county.¹⁰ And statutes in many states prohibit the appointment of non-residents as guardians.¹¹

8. APPOINTMENT OF ONE GUARDIAN FOR SEVERAL WARDS. Subject to the qualification just noticed that no conflict of property interest shall exist between the guardian and his ward a guardian may be appointed for more than one ward. Thus where several wards hold by a common title, one guardian may be appointed to act for all.¹²

7. Rice's Case, 42 Mich. 528, 4 N. W. 284.

The reason for this rule is that a corporation in no case can be conceived to act for the person. They can keep a supervision over the estate, but except through a person whom they must necessarily appoint, they can sustain no personal relation to the minor. The corporation as a guardian of the person therefore is the most anomalous relation known to modern jurisprudence. See also for an interesting and full discussion of this question 58 Cent. L. J. 1.

Where an infant possessed a large estate, and the parties interested therein were to some extent at variance in regard to the management of the property which passed under the will of the infant's parents, in which he was interested, and were not agreed as to the competency of the minor's sister to manage his estate, the surrogate's appointment of such sister as guardian of the minor's person, and the appointment of a trust company as guardian of his estate, was a proper exercise of discretion. Matter of Buckler, 96 N. Appointment of a non-resident is good until revoked. Martin v. Tally, 72 Ala. 23.

The presumption that the guardian appointed was not a non-resident at time of appointment will be indulged. Martin v. Tally, 72 Ala. 23.

Reason for rule.—"Remembering that it is the duty of a guardian of the person to inculcate habits of sobriety and industry upon his ward, and to superintend his education, requiring his personal surveillance; that the guardian of the estate should give his personal attention to the proper management of his ward's property; and that it may frequently be necessary for the court to cite him before it for the purpose of accounting, or to compel other action for the benefit of the ward, which cannot be conveniently done when the guardian resides in another state to which its process does not reach, the impropriety of appointing a non-resident guardian, except in cases of extreme peculiarity, becomes apparent even in the absence of a statutory inhibition." Woerner Guard. § 33.

11. See Woerner Guard. § 33; and the statutes of the various states.

In New York in the case of Matter of Taylor, 3 Redf. Surr. 259, it was held that a statute which prohibited non-residents from assuming the office of executor impliedly negated the power of the court to appoint a non-resident as guardian. And this is held to be the law even though the non-resident seeking appointment is the father of the child. To same effect see Matter of Zeller, 25 Misc. 137, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 926; Johnson v. Borden, 4 Dem. Surr. 36. But compare Matter of Welsh, 50 N. Y. App. Div. 189, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 737.

But it has also been held that the grandparents who if residing there would be entitled to the legal tutorship could not, if absentees, claim it by proxy; the law not intending that the tutor of a minor who is in the state might reside in another state. Percy v. Provan, 15 La. 69. See also Bookter's Succession, 18 La. Ann. 157.

10. MISCELLANEOUS. No judge of any court having the right of appointing guardians can be appointed a guardian by himself or by the other members of the court.¹⁴ Where one has been removed from guardianship in one jurisdiction he is disqualified from appointment in any other jurisdiction as guardian for the same ward.¹⁵ Where the father of a minor is dead, the court may appoint the public administrator as guardian independent of any statute.¹⁶

F. Proceedings for Judicial Appointment — 1. NATURE OF PROCEEDINGS —

a. In Chancery. In selecting a guardian for a child, the court of chancery is not restricted to any particular form of proceeding. It may refer the matter to a master,¹⁷ or the facts may be inquired of in open court, or the court may determine the selection from its own knowledge alone.¹⁸ While as a general rule a proceeding in chancery for the appointment of a guardian is rare, nevertheless it has its important features, not only because the jurisdiction of chancery in this regard is concurrent with the statutory tribunals in most of the states, but because, in the absence of statutory regulations concerning any matter of procedure relative to the appointment of guardians, resort must be had to the practice in chancery from which our probate jurisdiction in this class of cases is derived.¹⁹

b. In Statutory Tribunals. In most cases statutory tribunals have been created with special jurisdiction over the appointment of guardians for minors and special statutory provisions regulate the proceedings necessary to be taken both before and after appointment.²⁰ This statutory proceeding for the appointment of a guardian is not a civil action and is therefore not subject to statutory provisions as to what actions must be prosecuted by equitable proceedings; it is what is known as a special proceeding.²¹ court can lawfully act only during the term specified by law, an appointment by the court at any other time,²² or by the judge or clerk thereof in vacation or in chamber, is of no effect.²³ In some states, however, the statutes give the clerk or judge of the court authority to make provisional appointments during vacation, which, however, must be confirmed or rejected by the court at the next regular term.²⁴

The court held that it was a special proceeding and was not entitled to enjoy the provisions relative to equitable proceedings.

2. NOTICE AND PROCESS — a. In General. In the absence of any statutory requirement notice is not required to be served on any person.²⁵ Statutes, however, in most states make careful provision for service of notice on parents and next of kin.²⁶ Where notice is required by statute to be served on any persons, such requirement is jurisdictional.²⁷ The parties to whom notice of proceedings for the appointment of a guardian is required to be given arrange themselves logically into three classes: (1) Notice to the infant himself; (2) notice to his parents; and (3) notice to relatives and strangers.²³

b. To the Infant. It is well settled that, independent of statute, notice of a proceeding to appoint a guardian for an infant under fourteen years of age is not required to be served on the infant himself, for the reason that no right of the infant is violated by such a proceeding.²⁹ But wherever the statutes give an infant over fourteen years of age the right to select his own guardian, the appoint-

Manner of giving notice.—Where notice in writing is required the statute is not satisfied by the reading of the order of the court by the constable or sheriff to the persons interested. Hart v. Gray, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,152, 3 Summ. 339. But where a statute provided that "the judge must cause notice to be given," a notice of an application for the appointment of a guardian, purporting to issue from the court under its seal, and signed by the clerk, was held sufficient. Matson v. Swenson, 5 S. D. 191, 58 N. W. 570. It is not fatal that the requisite number of days do not intervene between the notices and the hearing as provided by statute. Kelley v. Edwards, 38 Mich. 210; Matson v. Swenson, 5 S. D. 191, 58 N. W. 570; Hamilton v. Hamilton, 2 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 160.

Notice by posting.—Under a statute which provides that before making appointment of a guardian the court must cause such notice as it considers reasonable to be given to such persons having care of the minor, or such relatives as the court may deem proper, posting of notice for ten days in three public places is sufficient. Asher v. Yorba, 125 Cal. 513, 58 Pac. 137.

ment of a guardian to such infant without notice to him is void,³⁰ and an ex parte application, representing that the minor is not fourteen, will not confer jurisdiction to appoint without citation, if the minor is over that age.³¹

e. To the Parents. The father and after his death the mother of an infant are by common law and under statutes entitled to priority of appointment as guardians, unless unfit or incompetent, and under the statutes of most jurisdictions are not bound by a proceeding appointing a guardian for their children to which they are not parties or of which they have not been notified.³² The notice to a father or mother of proceedings for appointment of a guardian must be by summons, if the party be within reach of the process of the court, and by publication, if beyond its jurisdiction.³³ The fact that they live outside of the jurisdiction does not affect their right to notice.³⁴ And if after proper service of notice the father or mother fails or neglects to appear the court may appoint a stranger guardian.³⁵

d. To Relatives and Strangers. Where the statute requires notice to be served on relatives or next of kin or to persons having the custody of the child, the failure to serve such notice is fatal to the subsequent appointment.³⁶ But even where the statute does not expressly require notice to relatives, nevertheless such notice would be eminently proper.³⁷ A master has no such legal interest in the appointment of a guardian for his apprentice as to entitle him to notice of such proceedings.³⁸ But a principal of a boarding school where the minor resides may be served with notice.³⁹ Third parties cannot question the validity of an order appointing a guardian for a non-resident minor upon any allegation that insufficient notice was given of the hearing of the application for the appointment under the statute.⁴⁰

a guardian for the person or for person and estate is desired.⁴⁸ The petition should also be verified.⁴⁹

4. FILING INVENTORY.⁵⁰ The requirement in a statute that before any one shall be appointed guardian he shall file a statement of the ward's estate is directory only, and failure to file a statement will not of itself render an appointment void.⁵¹

5. TRIAL AND EVIDENCE. A party seeking appointment may testify as to an agreement with the deceased father giving him the custody of the child.⁵² On application of the father for appointment, evidence in a suit in which his wife obtained a divorce is competent to show his unfitness,⁵³ and where in such proceeding the grandmother also seeks the appointment a clause in the will of the wife appointing the grandmother is admissible to show the propriety of appointing the grandmother in case the father is found unsuitable for the trust.⁵⁴ It has been held that where one gives information to the judge of the necessity for the appointment of a tutor, it is not necessary that he should also show who are entitled to the tutorship.⁵⁵ As a general rule proceedings for the appointment of a guardian are equitable in their nature and determined by the court without the intervention of a jury. Nevertheless the question for trial, being one of fitness, may properly be submitted to a special jury.⁵⁶ The finding of a court in appointing a guardian has the effect of a verdict, and will not be disturbed when it has substantial evidence to support it.⁵⁷ Where two persons separately petition to be appointed guardian of the same minor, and there are no answers thereto, no issues are made demanding findings of facts.⁵⁸ Where a plaintiff is authorized to discontinue the cause at any time by consent of parties thereto, a petition for the appointment of a guardian may also be discontinued where petitioner and ward consent to such discontinuance.⁵⁹

6. ORDER OR DECREE⁶⁰ — a. In General. The court may impose reasonable restrictions on the person appointed guardian as a condition of the appointment.⁶¹ The appointment is not rendered void because the same order also appointed, without warrant of law, the guardian administrator of the decedent's estate,⁶² nor because the order directed that letters of guardianship of the "heirs" be granted

49. Where no particular form of verification of a petition for the appointment of a guardian is prescribed, but the statute simply requires the petition to be verified, if it is dated, signed, sworn to, and duly certified in manner similar to the practice formerly prevailing in the case of sworn bills and answers in chancery, it is sufficiently verified. *State v. Civ. Code, art. 321. The certificate must be produced to the judge before the appointment can be legally made.

without naming them, it appearing that the children were known.⁶³ Nor need the decree show upon its face any formal finding of the fact that the minors were under the age of fourteen,⁶⁴ nor go into a detailed iteration of facts showing its authority.⁶⁵ Clerical errors, such as mistakes in writing the name of one appointed guardian, are not fatal.⁶⁶ Where the decree appointed a guardian for person and estate while the bond, petition, and letters related to the estate only, the appointment will be valid as respects the estate only.⁶⁷

b. Recording Order or Decree. While there are some decisions which hold that it is unnecessary to the validity of the appointment or to entitle the guardian to sue that the order of appointment be entered of record,⁶⁸ other decisions take the contrary view;⁶⁹ and it has been held that if the infant resides out of the jurisdiction of the court, the record must show affirmatively that every step has been taken which is necessary to give jurisdiction.⁷⁰ The record need not, however, set out the names of the minors for whom a guardian is appointed,⁷¹ and an erroneous entry as to date may be amended.⁷² So where by reason of the clerk's negligence a record of appointment was not made, the court at a subsequent term may enter the order of appointment nunc pro tunc.⁷³

7. REVIEW⁷⁴—a. Right to Review. In a number of jurisdictions it is held that no appeal lies from an order appointing a guardian for a minor; some decisions being based on the ground that there is no statutory authority therefor.⁷⁵ So in others it is held that the discretion of the court in this regard is absolute and in no case reviewable.⁷⁶ It has also been held that a writ of error does not lie because the proceeding is not one according to the course of the common law.⁷⁷ Where no statutory authority for an appeal is given the decision is reviewable only on certiorari.⁷⁸ In many jurisdictions, however, by virtue of statutory provisions the decision of the court appointing or refusing to appoint a guardian is reviewable on appeal.⁷⁹ And an appeal is not the only method by which to attack the validity of a decree appointing a guardian for a minor. This may be accomplished also by any direct proceeding in the probate or any other court of competent jurisdiction.⁸⁰

b. Parties. The ward may appeal from a decree granting or refusing guardianship over him.⁸¹ A guardian is entitled to become a party to an appeal by a former guardian whom he succeeded.⁸² In some states the statutes provide that all "persons aggrieved" may appeal.⁸³

c. Procedure. If an appeal is allowed it must be taken within the time prescribed by statute;⁸⁴ and the transcript must contain all the evidence, otherwise undisclosed testimony influencing the decision will be presumed.⁸⁵ The selection of a guardian is within the discretion of the court appointing, and unless there is a clear abuse of that discretion the appellate court will not interfere.⁸⁶ The probate court must judge of the fitness of the person proposed but the action of that court can be reviewed when it disregards a positive rule of law in making the appointment.⁸⁷ In case of reversal the appellate court will not

In Michigan, under a statute providing that in "all cases not otherwise provided for, any person aggrieved by any order, sentence, decree, or denial of a judge of probate may appeal therefrom to the circuit court," an appeal lies from an order of the probate court appointing a guardian for an infant to the circuit court. Dennis, 9 Paige 202, where it was held that a court may appoint a suitable person to protect the infant's rights, although he is not a nominal party to the appeal.

d. Costs. The estate of the infant must generally bear the costs of appeal where the appeal is made in the interest of the minor by one having a prima facie right to guardianship.⁸⁹

G. Acceptance and Oath of Office. A guardian must of course have notice of his appointment and signify his consent before he can be charged with the obligations of his trust,⁹⁰ and he must take the oath of office before he is entitled to assume the duties incident to his trust.⁹¹ It has been held, however, that the guardian's liability to his ward is not affected by his omission to take the oath of office.⁹²

H. Bonds⁹³ — 1. NECESSITY — a. In General.⁹⁴ It is the general rule in all jurisdictions that before a guardian can acquire possession of the ward's estate he must give bond.⁹⁵ A bond for the faithful performance of duty is an essential

Van Tiger, (Cal. 1887) 14 Pac. 846, holding that where a mother is appointed guardian of the person and estate of her minor son and on the same day presented her bond, which was approved, a lease made by her of the ward's property from the following day was valid, although no letters of guardianship had been issued to her and she had not taken the oath of office.

Testamentary guardian.—One named as testamentary guardian in a will must qualify and take the oath of office as other guardians, or he may lose his right to act. Wadsworth v. Connell, 104 Ill. 369; Verret v. Aubert, 6 La. 350; In re Constantine, 5 N. Y. Suppl. 554; Geoghegan v. Foley, 5 Redf. Surr. (N. Y.) 501. In Louisiana where the widow, on failure of the testamentary tutor appointed by the father to qualify, nominates another tutor, the appointment and qualification of the testamentary tutor after the widow's death and the probation of the will were invalid. Farrelly's Succession, 47 La. Ann. 1667, 18 So. 756.

A tutor ad hoc should take an oath as such and not as curator ad hoc. Brian v. Bonvillain, 52 La. Ann. 1794, 28 So. 261.

Sufficiency of oath.—Where the application, the appointment, and the bond of the guardian all show that he is guardian of the person and estate of the ward, and the oath is on the same paper with the bond and is otherwise sufficient, a sale of land made by the guardian under order of the court cannot be avoided on the ground that the oath describes him as "guardian" without also reciting "of the person and estate." Greer v. Ford, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 389, 72 S. W. 73.

The appointment of a tutor without bond is authorized in Louisiana upon the advice of a family meeting. Markham v. Schardt, 26 La. Ann. 703. But see Schiltmeyer's Succession, 6 La. Ann. 64. And therefore a tutor appointed without bond will not be required to give bond simply because the assets in his hand are converted from real into personal property. Destrehan's Succession, 4 La. Ann. 367. But no person but a resident in the parish can be appointed by the judge dative tutor to a minor, without giving bond. Foley's Succession, 34 La. Ann. 129.

Bonds required of guardians where legacies or distributive shares are paid to them are not required where the payments are merely of income for the support of the minor. Matter of Lancaster, 28 Misc. (N. Y.) 595, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 1022. Compare Toler v. London, 3 Dem. Surr. (N. Y.) 337, holding that on the failure of the general guardian of an infant to give the security required as a condition of the payment to him of a legacy due his ward, the executor should be directed (Rev. St. pt. 2, c. 6, tit. 3, §§ 46-51) to pay incident to the appointment of guardians or curators over the estates of minors or other incompetents. Indeed a constitutional provision which vests in a court jurisdiction to appoint guardians impliedly invests the court with the incidental power of requiring bonds for the faithful discharge of the trust reposed in any guardian so appointed.⁹⁶ But the grant of letters of guardianship by the probate court without taking bond, although erroneous,⁹⁷ does not make the grant of letters void or affect the guardian's liability for the imperfect discharge of his duties.⁹⁸

b. In Case of Natural Guardians. Although the law recognizes the parents of a minor as the natural guardians of both his person and estate, if the minor have independent property, security must be given in the same manner as though a stranger were appointed,⁹⁹ and if he refuses for any reason to give security some other person must be appointed.¹

c. In Case of Testamentary Guardians. Ordinarily a testamentary guardian like all other guardians must give bond before he is competent to act as such,² unless the will dispenses with the bond,³ or the statute authorizing the father to appoint a guardian of his child does not contemplate the giving of bond,⁴ and on the same into the surrogate's court, as if there were no guardian.

his failure or refusal to do so it is the duty of the court to appoint another person guardian.⁵

d. Statutory Exemption From Giving Bond. An act of the legislature authorizing a particular person to act as guardian without giving the usual bond is constitutional.⁶ And such a statute is not repealed by a later one giving the court power to require a bond from such person at its discretion.⁷

2. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY — a. In General. A guardian's bond, payable to the county judge, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties as guardian, and appearing to be the bond of the guardian of certain minors, has been held a sufficient bond.⁸ The amount of the bond may be fixed by the court on the court's estimate independently of the petitioner's alleged value of the estate,⁹ and the bond should contain the amount of the penalty at the time it is signed and no one is authorized to insert the amount afterward.¹⁰ If the bond is guaranteed by a surety company the surrogate may in his discretion dispense with sureties.¹¹ Where a wife is appointed guardian, her husband should be taken as her sole bondsman only in case his pecuniary resources are ample.¹² Notwithstanding the fact that the bond is not signed by the judge it will be good as a common-law obligation if signed by the sureties, and if it recites the appointment and qualification of the guardian and is properly attested by the clerk.¹³ The fact that the paper filed as a bond is not a sealed instrument does not render the appointment void;¹⁴ and the delivery of the bond to the judge on the day before the appointment is an immaterial error.¹⁵ In some states the bond should be executed in open court.¹⁶ An order that a bond executed at a former term when the guardian was appointed for several children shall stand as his bond for another child over whom he is appointed at the later term is void.¹⁷ If the bond has been

If a guardian's bond is given to the wards, instead of to the probate court, the approval of it is merely an error in a matter of procedure, and a subsequent sale of the ward's real estate is not thereby invalidated. Kelley v. Morrell, 29 Fed. 736.

Bond of guardian for ward's estate.—Under a statute which provides that where the same person is appointed the guardian of both the person and estate of a ward, only one bond shall be given by such guardian bearing the form thereof to suit the case, a bond conditioned that the guardian will faithfully discharge the duties of guardian to the persons and estates of said minors is sufficient. Horning v. Schramm, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 327, 54 S. W. 615.

9. Greer v. Ford, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 389, 72 S. W. 73.

Amount of penalty and justification.—Upon the appointment of a general guardian for an infant by a surrogate, the surrogate should ascertain by the examination of witnesses the probable amount of the personal estate and of the income of the realty during the minority of the infant, and he should direct the guardian to give a bond, with sureties, in double that amount, and should require the sureties to justify in at least the amount of the penalty of such bond. Bennett v. Byrne, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 216. But the court may relax the rule in relation to the amount in which a guardian and his sureties are required to justify, where the estate of the infant is very large. Matter of Hedges, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) 57.

Reduction of penalty.—A petition by the guardian of an infant for leave to file a bond in a penalty less than that of the original bond, and to release petitioner and his surety (a surety company) from the original bond, alleged that all the funds that had come into his hands as guardian had been paid out, except a certain small sum, and that all the ward's land had been sold by order of court, and the proceeds deposited with the county treasurer, to be paid to the ward on his attaining his majority. It was held that the petition would be denied, although petitioner was obliged to pay his surety its charge for acting as such on the bond originally given. N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 2597 et seq., which authorizes the increasing of the penalty of a guardian's bond, containing no provision relating to a reduction thereof. In re Patterson, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 963, 1 Pow. marked "canceled," the court may order the word "canceled" to be stricken out.¹⁸ If the question of the sufficiency of sureties is referred to a master, the report should give simply the result of his inquiries and not the evidence.¹⁹ Since there is no legal objection to the appointment of one guardian for several wards jointly, there can of course be no objection to the giving of his bond in the same manner, where the wards hold by common title and as tenants in common.²⁰ For purposes of suit on a claim due the ward a guardian's bond takes effect on the day of its date and of his appointment, notwithstanding the bond may have been filed later.²¹

b. New Bonds. It is the duty of the court to require additional security if at any time it has cause to believe that the security given is insufficient.²² The power to require new security exists independent of any statutory provision,²³ and when so taken, the new or additional security is liable for all past as well as future breaches of the guardian's duty.²⁴ A new bond may be required when the guardian is about to receive funds not in contemplation when the original bond was executed,²⁵ and a new bond should be given as a condition of the payment of a legacy or distributive share to the guardian when there is any express statutory requirement to that effect.²⁶ Sureties on a guardian's bond, in case of the death or insolvency or failing circumstances of any one of them, may themselves secure an order from the court requiring a new bond or additional securities.²⁷ A proceeding to compel the giving of a new bond is in the nature of a chancery proceeding, and it is not necessary, in order to preserve questions of law for review, that propositions of law be submitted.²⁸

3. EFFECT OF RECITALS IN BOND. The recital of a guardian's appointment in the bond given by him is an admission of his appointment and makes other proof of the guardian's appointment unnecessary.²⁹

4. PRESUMPTIONS AS TO GIVING OF BOND. Notwithstanding a bond cannot be found in the records, it will be presumed that the bond was duly given where the guardian has acted as guardian and been recognized as such by the court, and it appears that the records are in a great state of confusion,³⁰ or where the statutes require the giving of bond before issuance of letters of guardianship and the letters recite the giving of the bond and the court has entertained an application of the guardian to sell his ward's land.³¹

I. Issuance and Requisites of Letters. What is known as "letters of guardianship" is in the nature of a certificate or commission, and while they furnish convincing evidence of the guardian's authority to strangers, are not necessary to authorize the guardian to act or to impress upon him the obligations and burdens of his trust.³² It is not essential to the validity of letters of guardianship that they should recite the mode and particulars of the nomination and appointment and all reasonable presumptions should be indulged in favor of their having emanated regularly, and after lawful proceedings.³³

J. Operation and Effect of Appointment. The decree of a court of competent jurisdiction appointing a guardian is conclusive upon all parties to the proceeding.³⁴ When such decree is regular on its face, it cannot be attacked collaterally for fraud or any other matter aliunde, in any kind of a proceeding.³⁵ But where, the court making the appointment is without jurisdiction the guard-

Failure to record certificate based on inventory.—The appointment of a tutrix is not subject to collateral attack by the minor because no certificate based on an inventory was recorded, as required by the code, where, prior to the appointment, the minor's uncle had recorded an affidavit showing the amount due the minor; this being equivalent to recording an extract of the inventory. New England Mortg. Security Co. v. Metcalfe, 49 La. Ann. 347, 21 So. 549.

Non-residence of minor as affecting jurisdiction is not subject to collateral attack. Deguindre v. Williams, 31 Ind. 444, 455. In this case the court said: "The question of residence is sometimes one of great difficulty, upon the evidence. Suppose such investigation to have been fully made, and an erroneous decision reached, and letters of guardianship thereupon issued. Would it be a salutary rule that every one with whom the guardian might subsequently deal in the performance of his trust might go into the question of residence again, to contest the validity of the appointment? Must such a question remain forever open? . . . Here the inquiry as to the residence of the infants was the exercise of jurisdiction. If that question was not correctly decided, it was an erroneous judgment, not a decision which the court had no power to make. The lack of power to determine should not be confounded with error in deciding a question of fact." See also to same effect argument of the court in Palmer v. Oakley, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 433, 47 Am. Dec. 41.

What is not a collateral attack.—An appeal from the orders of court appointing and confirming a tutrix is not a collateral attack upon such orders of appointment; it is a direct method of reviewing them, authorized by ian's authority is subject to collateral attack even though on the face of the record such lack of jurisdiction is undisclosed.³⁶ Nevertheless one who has procured or accepted appointment cannot deny the validity thereof, in order to evade accountability for property of the minor which has come into his hands,³⁷ and one who represents himself as acting as the guardian of another is estopped to deny that he is guardian to the prejudice of persons contracting with him in that capacity.³⁸

K. Duration of Guardianship. As is shown in a subsequent section the guardianship terminates in any event on the ward's reaching majority,³⁹ but it will continue for the full period of minority unless the guardian is appointed with express limitation as to time⁴⁰ or it is terminated for some of the causes enumerated in the following chapter.⁴¹

L. Termination of Appointment and Selection of Successor — 1. How GUARDIANSHIP IS TERMINATED — a. By Revocation of Appointment. Under the statutes existing in most of the states, the probate court has a general power to revoke the appointment of a guardian of the person and estate of an infant,⁴² and may do so before the appointee has qualified to act.⁴³

b. By Majority of Ward. The guardianship terminates at all events on the arrival of the ward at majority, except for the purposes of a final accounting and settlement with the ward.⁴⁴ This rule is applicable as well to testamentary as to law. Haley's Succession, 49 La. Ann. 709, 22 So. 251.

Woerner Guard. § 111; Reeve Dom. Rel. § 311. And see Lynch v. Munson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 61 S. W. 140, holding that, where it is apparent from the pleadings in a case that the guardian was appointed only for the purpose of selling real estate and that the ward has long since reached his majority, it was error to hold that the guardianship had not terminated, although no record of such termination was shown.

Where ward becomes insane, the guardian previously appointed on the ground of minority only cannot continue as guardian on the ground of "insanity" after the ward becomes of age without another hearing and appointment. Coon v. Cook, 6 Ind. 268.

Continuation of responsibility after termination of trust.—While a guardian's trust expires on the ward's reaching majority, the responsibilities of his relation may continue, as for instance where he has not made his final account with the ward (Stinson v. Leary, 69 Wis. 269, 34 N. W. 63); or where the guardian incurs a personal responsibility on a contract made by his ward in pursuance other guardians, the English doctrine in regard to this matter having been adopted in this country.⁴⁵

c. By Marriage of Ward. The marriage of a male ward does not terminate the guardianship over his estate,⁴⁶ although of necessity it terminates the guardianship of his person.⁴⁷ The marriage of a female ward to an adult husband terminates the guardianship.⁴⁸ Guardianship of the person it has been said is absolutely inconsistent with the conjugal rights of husband and wife,⁴⁹ and guardianship as to her property also ceases at common law, her property vesting in the husband by marriage.⁵⁰ There is some difference of opinion as to the effect of the marriage of a female ward to a minor. Some decisions hold that the guardianship terminates and that the right and power of managing the wife's estate devolves upon the husband's guardian,⁵¹ while in others it has been expressly declared that such marriage does not discharge the guardianship as to the wife's estate.⁵² On the termination of guardianship by the marriage of a female ward, the latter may call her guardian to immediate account.⁵³

d. By Death of Ward, Guardian, or Surety. The rights and duties of a guardian cease upon the ward's death,⁵⁴ and the guardian's duty is thereafter limited to of an express or implied authority (Overton v. Beavers, 19 Ark. 623, 70 Am. Dec. 610).

The ward or her husband may receive her estate from her guardian, and also receive her distributive share of her father's estate with the assent of her husband. State v. Joest, 46 Ind. 233; Fowler v. McLaughlin, 131 N. C. 209, 42 S. E. 589.

Seeking accounting from guardian who is also joint executor at time of ward's death.—One of two joint executors was appointed guardian for the testator's son; and in an action on his bond as guardian by the administrator of the son, it appeared that many years before the suit the executors had the making of a proper settlement of his trust in the probate court.⁵⁵ This, however, he is bound to do.⁵⁶ A guardianship is also terminated by the death of the guardian.⁵⁷ The death of a surety on the guardian's bond, however, does not affect the right of the guardian to hold and exercise his trust.⁵⁸ It simply imposes a duty on the probate court to require a new bond or additional security.⁵⁹

e. By Resignation of Guardian. At common law a guardian was not allowed to resign except for strong reasons showing that the best interests of the ward demanded it.⁶⁰ And under modern statutes in force in most of the states resignation of the office of guardian is not an absolute right, but is subject to a determination of its propriety by the court.⁶¹ The resignation, even if accepted, does not become effective until final accounting and discharge by the court on proper notice to all parties,⁶² unless no estate came into the guardian's hands.⁶³ There is no question, however, as to the power of the court to accept the resignation of a guardian.⁶⁴ A decree or order accepting a resignation may be vacated where the resignation and its acceptance are shown to be a fraudulent imposition.⁶⁵

f. By Selection of New Guardian by Ward. The guardianship of an infant terminates where the ward on arriving at the age of fourteen selects a guardian of his own choice who is appointed by the court in the place of the former guardian,⁶⁶ and in at least one jurisdiction because of a peculiar statutory provision it is held that the guardianship expires by operation of law when the infant arrives at the age when it may exercise its right of selection.⁶⁷ This, however, is not the rule in other jurisdictions in which it has been held that a guardian appointed by the probate court continues such until the ward reaches majority, unless the infant exercise his or her right of selection to the approval of the judge,⁶⁸ and received a considerable amount of assets, but had not settled any account with the orphans' court, and that defendant's executor was dead. The court held that defendant's guardianship ceased on the death of his ward, and that as it did not appear that he died after defendant's co-executor, the action could not be sustained, since, if the executorship were joint at the time of the ward's death the law would not adjudge the ward's proportion of the property to be in his hands as guardian after the time limited for the settlement of the estate, whether a final account had been passed by the orphans' court or not. Watkins v. People, supra, on p. 254, it is said: "Nor can it be said that the mere tender of a written resignation to the court is the proper manner to bring the matter before the court. The guardian ought to present his petition to the court for permission to resign his trust, containing some showing by which the court can see that it would be proper, accompanied by a report of the state of his account as guardian, and offering to settle the same and deliver over the estate as the court may direct."

the letters of such guardian are revoked⁶⁹ after notice has been given him of the infant's application.⁷⁰

g. By Emancipation of Infant. Where a ward is capable of taking care of himself and his property, he may be emancipated by order of court on his own petition.⁷¹

h. By Marriage of Female Guardian. Unless otherwise provided by statute,⁷² the marriage of a female guardian does not terminate her trust,⁷³ but has the effect of joining her husband with her in the trust.⁷⁴ Even where the statute permits a removal for such cause, the court will not interfere to deprive a mother of guardianship without a strong case.⁷⁵ Where the will appointing a female guardian provides that she shall continue as guardian until her marriage, the latter event ipso facto terminates her guardianship.⁷⁶

2. GROUNDS FOR REMOVAL — a. In General. It is a well recognized rule that the probate court has no power to remove a guardian except in cases relating to the faithful performance of his trust, or to the sufficiency of the security given him.⁷⁷ And where the statute enumerates the grounds on which guardians may be removed, a removal on grounds not enumerated is unauthorized.⁷⁸

b. Neglect or Misconduct in Official Capacity. Neglect or misconduct of the guardian in his official capacity, detrimental to the ward, warrants his removal. Thus it is good ground for removal that he has failed to properly care for his ward⁷⁹ or his property rights,⁸⁰ that he has failed to make a settlement of his accounts,⁸¹ to keep proper and separate accounts for each ward,⁸² or to file an inventory or account when required,⁸³ unless it can be shown that no personalty had come into his hands,⁸⁴ or that the delay in filing the inventory had done

no harm,⁸⁵ and resulted from no indisposition on the guardian's part to protect the interests of the ward.⁸⁶ It is also sufficient ground for removal that he has failed to give bond sufficient to secure the ward for the entire period,⁸⁷ or to have the bond inscribed when required by statute,⁸⁸ or that he has converted the ward's property to his own use,⁸⁹ speculated with his ward's funds,⁹⁰ improperly invested the funds of the ward,⁹¹ or converted real into personal estate without order of court;⁹² or that he is in any other manner fraudulently or improperly using, wasting, or mismanaging the ward's property.⁹³ Vague charges of misconduct and mismanagement will not authorize a removal where disinterested witnesses testify that the wards are well cared for and the petitioner does not appear as anxious for the welfare of the children as she is to get charge of the wards and the care of their estate.⁹⁴ So the guardian's refusal to appeal in a suit instituted by him and decided adversely to the wards will not authorize his removal if it is not clearly shown that he is acting contrary to the best interests of the wards.⁹⁵

Intemperance.—In one state it has been held that where father and mother are addicted to intemperance both of them may be removed as guardians of their children. Kettletas v. Gardner, 1 Paige (N. But in another, under a statute providing that no cause of removal is applicable to a father except that of unfaithfulness of his administration and notoriously bad conduct, the fact that a father is addicted to the use of liquor to excess is not ground for removal if when drunk he is inoffensive and when sober a good citizen. *Edwards v. limits of the state is a sufficient reason for severing the relation of guardian and ward and revoking the appointment.⁹⁷ But that fact alone does not divest the jurisdiction of the appointing court, or confer authority upon courts of such other state to appoint a guardian who can supersede him.⁹⁸ Under some statutes it is within the discretion of the court whether a guardian shall be removed from his office, because of his removal from the state.⁹⁹ Under others it is held that tutors, other than natural tutors, lose the tutorship ipso facto by leaving the state.¹

e. Other Grounds. In addition to the grounds already enumerated, the following have been held sufficient for removal: Unfitness of the father to perform the duties of a natural guardian;² unsuitableness of a stepfather as guardian of female ward where his wife, the natural mother, has died;³ insolvency of the guardian and one of his sureties;⁴ insanity of the guardian⁵ or ignorance of duty on his part;⁶ hostility of his individual interests to the trust;⁷ that the ward already had a guardian;⁸ appointment of a stranger in preference to next of kin;⁹ change by the guardian of the religion of the ward from that of the father to another;¹⁰ that the guardian was appointed because of false representations;¹¹ that notice of proceedings for appointment was not given to those having custody of the minor;¹² or that he has resigned.¹³ On the other hand it has been held that the fact that a father as guardian is improvident, careless in money matters, and wanting in industry does not warrant his removal.¹⁴ So it has been held that a guardian will not be removed because someone entitled to priority was out of the state at the time of the appointment and afterward came into the state;¹⁵ or where the one entitled to priority is in feeble health and supports himself by his own labor;¹⁶ or because the appointment was made without the consent and against the wishes of the ward's father;¹⁷ or where the one appointed failed to allege that there were no relatives entitled to priority of appointment;¹⁸ or because a family meeting was not unanimous in recommending the guardian.¹⁹ It is likewise no ground for removal that the guardian went into the Confederate lines and remained there during the late war;²⁰ that the guardian is of a different religious belief from that of the parents (provided no constraint is brought to bear on the conscience of the minor);²¹ that the guardian has allowed his ward to go out of the state on a temporary visit;²² that one was appointed guardian who, contrary to law, was acting as executor of an estate in which the minor was interested;²³ or that the ward has taken a dislike to her guardian.²⁴

3. PROCEEDINGS FOR REMOVAL — a. Necessity For. Although a guardian has been so derelict in his duties as to warrant his removal by the court, yet, if there has been no removal, his own misfeasance or malfeasance does not ipso facto terminate his office.²⁵ There must be a direct proceeding brought for his removal,²⁶ unless, as it has been held may be done, the court removes the guardian of its own motion.²⁷

b. Time and Manner of Commencing Proceedings. If a statute designates the time within which an application for removal must be made, the application must be made within the time so prescribed,²⁸ and in any event the application must be filed within a reasonable time.²⁹ An application is a special proceeding, properly commenced by petition, and not by summons, as an action.³⁰ that the petition of a minor, asking for the removal of a guardian and the appointment of an elder brother and stating that the guardian had by letter offered the petitioner's mother to relinquish his guardianship if she desired and the court would permit, and that she now applied along with the infant for the appointment of her other son, did not state ground sufficient to justify the removal of the guardian already appointed.

In Pennsylvania the proper practice is held to be for one opposing the appointment of a guardian on certain grounds to move to vacate the appointment. Ex p. Pratt, 1 Leg. Gaz. 56.

c. Jurisdiction. A court of equity has original jurisdiction of a proceeding to remove a guardian,³¹ notwithstanding he may have been appointed in another jurisdiction or by another tribunal in the same jurisdiction, or even by express act of the legislature.³² The most unusual jurisdictional resort, however, for application to remove guardians in this country is that system of courts clothed with express statutory authority over guardian, and known variously as probate, orphans', surrogate, or county courts.³³ And such courts have power to remove testamentary guardians as well as those appointed by the court;³⁴ and on any ground that will justify the interference of a court of equity.³⁵ Where the guardian removes with his ward to another state,³⁶ or to another jurisdiction in the same state,³⁷ the court of the jurisdiction from which the guardian has removed loses its authority over him and can entertain no petition for his removal as guardian. The rule is otherwise, however, if the guardian fails to take his ward with him out of the jurisdiction,³⁸ or removes after proceedings to remove him as guardian have been commenced.³⁹ Where a guardian pleads to the merits to a complaint for his removal, he thereby waives any objection to the jurisdiction of the court.⁴⁰

d. Parties and Persons Entitled to Institute Proceedings. A mere stranger cannot move in the probate court for the revocation of letters of appointment.⁴¹ A ward may during his minority proceed against his guardian for the purpose of having him removed for breach of trust;⁴² and the proceeding should be in the name of the minor, by his next friend.⁴³

e. Notice. Ordinarily a guardian cannot be removed from his trust for any reason without notice and citation to show cause,⁴⁴ and the weight of authority is to the effect that a guardian whom the infant on arriving at the age of fourteen wishes to supersede by a guardian of his own selection is entitled to notice.⁴⁵ The rule requiring notice, however, has been held not to apply to an improvident appointment revoked at the same term of court;⁴⁶ nor to an appointment made by the clerk in vacation and revoked by the court at its next term;⁴⁷ nor where the guardian has become a non-resident.⁴⁸ Nor is notice required to be given to the ward of such a proceeding.⁴⁹

f. Defenses. A defense to a proceeding for removal must be directed to the merits and validity of the grounds alleged in the applicant's petition; it should not set up facts involving collateral transactions.⁵⁰

g. Pleadings and Evidence. The proper proceeding for the removal of a guardian is by petition,⁵¹ a bill ordinarily being unnecessary, although the chancellor may in his discretion require a bill to be filed.⁵² The petition must contain a distinct allegation of the ground for removal;⁵³ and should allege what specific assets the guardian has in his hands.⁵⁴ Mere defects of form in the petition are not sufficient to nullify an order of removal.⁵⁵ The petition is amendable,⁵⁶ and notwithstanding it is insufficient, if issue is joined without objection, such defect is ground for his removal to the probate judge, who alone may authorize him to sue. Lillard v. Kemp, 9 Rob. (La.) 113.

waived.⁵⁷ So where the court may remove the guardian of its own motion, an order of removal is not invalid because based on a defective petition.⁵⁸ Where the petition shows grounds for removal and the guardian refuses to answer after his demurrer is overruled, he may be removed.⁵⁹ Where a defendant pleads his appointment as res judicata he admits the allegations in a petition for his removal, alleging failure to give the required notice or to disclose the names of the relatives of the minor for whom he was appointed guardian.⁶⁰ On petition for the removal of a guardian as unsuitable for the position, evidence of acts after filing the petition, and before the hearing, which show his fitness at the time the petition was filed, are competent.⁶¹ Evidence as to the petitioner's ability to care for the ward is not competent, as the court cannot in this character of proceeding determine any question as to the ultimate custody of the child.⁶²

h. Trial and Judgment. A trial for the removal of a guardian must take place in regular term and not in vacation.⁶³ The failure of the guardian to appear on trial does not justify a judgment pro confesso; in such case the proper course is to hear complainant's witnesses and judge how far it sustains the facts.⁶⁴ Orders removing a guardian and requiring settlement may be made together and embraced in one entry.⁶⁵ The decree or order need not recite the grounds of removal.⁶⁶ A judgment discharging a guardian is not a nullity because the petition is wanting in some of the elements prescribed by statute for final accounts, it being merely a defect in form.⁶⁷ It is good against collateral attack and can only be set aside by a direct proceeding within the time prescribed by statute.⁶⁸

i. Costs. Where a guardian is removed for cause on petition he is personally taxable with costs of the proceeding,⁶⁹ and will not be allowed a credit therefor on accounting.⁷⁰ If both guardian and ward seek the substitution of another guardian, and the ward will be benefited by such substitution, the costs should be apportioned between them.⁷¹ If the only object of proceedings in a contest relative to a guardianship is to ascertain which party is legally entitled to the guardianship, neither being personally interested, the costs should be paid out of the minor's estate.⁷²

guardian is a necessary party to an appeal by the old guardian;⁷⁴ but the latter cannot complain on appeal of that part of the decree appointing the new guardian, as he is concerned only with legality of his own removal and not with the legality of the new appointment.⁷⁵ A large discretion is necessarily left to the courts having original jurisdiction of the removal of guardians for a breach of their duties, and the decision will not be interfered with unless there has been a gross abuse of discretion.⁷⁶ Every presumption is indulged in favor of the legality of the proceedings for removal, and the jurisdiction of the court, unless the record shows the contrary.⁷⁷ An appeal from an order removing a guardian does not vacate or suspend even temporarily the operation of the decree, but he ceases to be such as soon as the decree is rendered.⁷⁸ A judgment for the removal of a guardian will be affirmed on appeal if no exception is taken to the order,⁷⁹ or will

k. Injunction Pending Removal. In some states county or probate courts are given authority to issue writs of injunction; under such grant of power such courts have a right to enjoin a guardian from acting as guardian pending the determination of a petition for his removal, wherever the facts of the case as alleged in the petition would justify the issuance of an injunction under the ordinary rules of equity.⁸¹

4. APPOINTMENT OF SUCCESSOR. While courts of equity have unlimited authority over the removal of guardians and the appointment of their successors, the corresponding right is not accorded courts of limited jurisdiction.⁸² It has been held though, in some jurisdictions, that the probate court which appoints a guardian for an infant has jurisdiction of the matter of appointing his successor, even though the infant is living in another county.⁸³ Where an application for the appointment of a guardian of a minor's estate has once been made and notice duly given, no further application or notice is required to warrant the appointment of a successor to the guardian first appointed and removed for cause.⁸⁴ A new guardian cannot be appointed as successor of the original guardian, until there has been a revocation of the letters of the latter;⁸⁵ such an appointment is void⁸⁶ and does not confer upon the appointee the right to cite an old guardian to a settlement of his accounts.⁸⁷ An order removing a guardian and appointing a successor is equivalent to an order to pay over the money in his hands to his successor.⁸⁸ And by the appointment of a second guardian the powers of the former and his right to receive and disburse moneys of the ward ceases.⁸⁹

M. Transfer of Guardianship From One State to Another. In one jurisdiction the statutes make special provision for a transfer of a guardianship to another state. To authorize the transfer both the guardian and the ward must reside in the state to which it is proposed to remove the guardianship,⁹⁰ and therefore an application which merely alleges that the ward has been removed to the state to which it is sought to transfer the guardianship is insufficient.⁹¹ The statute also requires, as a condition to the transfer, that a settlement be made in the courts of the state in which letters of guardianship were granted;⁹² and a transfer will not be granted where the settlement is insufficient to show the court into which the guardianship is proposed to be removed the condition of the estate, and the property of the ward, so that it may be able to see by inspection of the record with what the guardian is justly chargeable.⁹³ And in any event, in determining whether a guardianship shall be transferred, the court must necessarily exercise a sound discretion, and if the order is refused, letters of guardianship granted by the court of the state into which the transfer is proposed to be made should be treated as a nullity and as conferring no right on the person to whom they have issued.⁹⁴

An executor, as such, has no right to the custody of his testator's minor children. Boyd v. Glass, 34 Ga. 253, 89 Am. Dec. 252.

Relatives of a minor have no legal right to his custody.—The main consideration is the welfare of the child, and his own choice, although he is not of a choosing age in law, is a circumstance for consideration. Willet v. Warren, 34 Wash. 647, 76 Pac. 273. Where a father by his will appoints a testamentary guardian for his minor child, the court will not deprive the guardian of its custody and care merely because of the distress it may cause the child's grandmother, to whose charge the child was committed "for a time." Where a stranger is appointed without notice to the father or mother as guardian of his child, a court of equity has jurisdiction without revoking the letters to take the child from the custody of the statutory guardian and restore it to the father, who is not shown to be unfit to have control of the child. Bowles v. Dixon, 32 Ark. 92; Ramsay v. Ramsay, 20 Wis. 507.

In Mississippi it was held on habeas corpus proceedings by a testamentary guardian against the mother who had forcibly taken possession of their wards, who were females of tender years, that restoration of custody to the guardian would be refused where their inclination and interests would be subserved by remaining with the mother, and that too, although the guardian was not shown to be incompetent or to have abused his trust. Foster v. Alston, 7 How. 406 [reversing Freem. 732].

3. Lord v. Hough, 37 Cal. 657; Brooke v. Logan, 112 Ind. 183, 12 N. E. 669, 2 Am.

guardian is entitled to custody even as against one to whom the mother in her lifetime intrusted the child to remain in his custody until majority,⁴ or one to whom the father shortly before his death made a verbal gift of the child "to take care of . . . as his own child."⁵ It has been held, however, that a guardian appointed by will supersedes a statutory guardian.⁶ The guardian may refuse either relatives or strangers access to his ward, unless otherwise ordered by the court,⁷ which it has the power to do.⁸ Correlatively it is the legal duty of a ward to remain with his guardian and submit himself to his control;⁹ and this duty will be enforced by the courts unless the interests of the ward obviously require otherwise.¹⁰ "Like the authority of the parents, the legal right of the guardian to the custody of his ward's person must yield to the paramount consideration of the child's obvious interest."¹¹

b. Right to Change Domicile. A guardian by nature, or a testamentary guardian, may in good faith change his ward's domicile, either from one state to another state, or from one county to another county in the same state.¹² As respects natural guardians, this doctrine amounts to no more than that the domicile of the parent is the domicile of the child.¹³ The exercise of this right, however,

St. Rep. 177; McDowell v. Bonner, 62 Miss. 278; Mathews v. Wade, 2 W. Va. 464.

In order that the appointment of a statutory guardian may be conclusive as against the father, under these statutes it must appear that he was in court in such manner that the question of his fitness must have been passed on in appointing the guardian. Brooke v. Logan, 112 Ind. 183, 13 N. E. 669, 2 Am. St. Rep. 177.

In Mississippi it is held under these statutes that when a guardian is appointed, the court should not ordinarily award custody, but should leave open the question whether the parent was a "suitable" person. McDowell v. Bonner, 62 Miss. 278.

In Louisiana, although the mother forfeits or refuses the tutورشip of her minor child, yet, although a stranger is duly appointed tutor, the mother retains her parental power and, paramount to the guardian, the right to rear and educate the child where there is no imputation against her reputation. Lea v. Richardson, 8 La. Ann. 94; Berlucaux v. Berlucaux, 7 La. 539.

The controlling consideration under these statutes in deciding who shall have custody of the ward's person is the welfare and best interest of the ward. Brooke v. Logan, 112 Ind. 183, 13 N. E. 669, 2 Am. St. Rep. 177; Garner v. Gordon, 41 Ind. 92. And if a sufficient reason exists why the father should not have its custody, it will not be granted to him. Brooke v. Logan, 112 Ind. 183, 13 N. E. 669, 2 Am. St. Rep. 177.

4. Johns v. Emmert, 62 Ind. 553.

is subject to the power of the court to prevent an improper removal of an infant out of the state,¹⁴ although it will be a very extreme or special case which would induce the court to interfere with a parent's natural rights in this respect.¹⁵ While it is very generally held that any guardian appointed in the state of the ward's domicile has power to change the ward's domicile from one county to another within the same state and under the same law,¹⁶ and while there are some decisions which hold or intimate that such guardians may change the ward's domicile to another state,¹⁷ the probable weight of authority is contrary to the latter doctrine,¹⁸ and it is conceded that under no circumstances can a guardian change his ward's domicile, if the removal be purposely to the detriment of the ward or for the express purpose of working a fraud upon those enjoying the right of succession to the ward's property.¹⁹

notice to the opposite party;²² and if an appeal is taken the court should not disturb the custody of the infant until the appeal is disposed of.²³ Expenses incurred by a mother in securing the custody of her child before appointment as guardian cannot be allowed her on her settlement as guardian.²⁴ If a testamentary guardian entitled under the will to custody is denied custody on the ground that it was not advisable to remove the child from the home where he was living, and appeals from the order, he should be allowed the costs and expenses of the original hearing but not those of an unsuccessful appeal.²⁵

d. Assignability of Custody.²⁶ Inasmuch as a guardianship is a purely personal trust, the guardianship of an infant's person is not assignable.²⁷

2. SUPPORT AND EDUCATION²⁸ — a. Right to Use Ward's Estate For Support and Education — (i) USE OF INCOME. The guardian may make all reasonable expenditures for the maintenance and education of the ward from the income of its estate,²⁹ and may use the entire income for this purpose if necessary.³⁰ If during the time in which the guardian has managed the ward's estate he has not expended the principal, he cannot be held responsible for the profits or interest of the estate, although he may have spent for his wards more than the profits and interest of a given year, during that year, or less another year, provided that during the whole period of guardianship he has not expended more than the entire interest, and disbursed it reasonably and suitably to the circumstances of the ward, and legally in other respects.³¹ So it has been held that a guardian may expend on the ward in her maturer years the surplus accumulated when she was young, but there should be a necessity and propriety for the expenditures.³²

(ii) USE OF PRINCIPAL. While the rule is well settled that the guardian cannot apply any part of the principal of the ward's estate to his maintenance except under special circumstances,³³ yet where a guardian, in the bona fide discharge of his duties, finds that the income of his ward's estate is inadequate for his support and maintenance, he may resort to the principal to supply the deficiency;³⁴ but according to the weight of authority, this right is subject to the restriction that the court's permission shall be first obtained.³⁵

the court's sanction in advance of expenditures in excess of income will not be necessary if good reason can be shown why application was not made to the court for permission to make such expenditures.⁴¹

If the guardian spends more than the income without permission of court he is liable to the ward for the amount of the principal thus converted. Phillips v. Davis, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 520, 62 Am. Dec. 472.

Where the income remains uncollected by reason of a restraining order on the guardian pending proceedings for his removal, the court should not order the ward's support out of the principal. Matter of Plumb, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 119, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 831.

The clear income, within a statute providing that without an order of court the guardian may expend for the education and maintenance of his ward only the clear income of the estate, is, in the case of rents, the money received, less expenditures for taxes, insurance, and repairs. De Cordova v. Rogers, 97 Tex. 60, 75 S. W. 16.

Where the court may bind out an infant if the income from his estate is insufficient, it is of course absolutely necessary for the guardian to bring this fact to the court's attention before touching the principal. Freeman v. Tucker, 20 Ga. 6; Foteaux v. Le-page, 6 Iowa 123.

What court may grant order.—The chancery for the district in which the guardian has been appointed has jurisdiction on his application to order the principle to be expended for the ward's benefit (Hart v. Czopski, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 151; Berler v. Dunn, 3 Head (Tenn.) 87, 75 Am. Dec. 761), although the guardian and wards are non-residents of the estate and the wards are made parties by publication (Hart v. Czopski, supra); but in Tennessee the probate court has no jurisdiction to make such order (Mitchell v. Webb, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 150).

Who may obtain order.—The natural guardian of an infant legatee may, under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 2846, providing for same, on the application of any relative or other person, have an order directing the general guardian to apply the infant's property to his support and education (Matter of Quinn, 19 N. Y. St. 830, 6 Dem. Surr. 39).

Sufficiency of order.—Under a statute providing that the probate court may direct a guardian to expend a specific sum for the education and maintenance of his ward, although it may exceed the ward's income, but that without such direction the guardian shall not be allowed for such education and maintenance more than the clear income of the estate, an order of a probate court authorizing a guardian to use for the education and maintenance of his wards such portion of the corpus of the estate "as may be sufficient" for such purpose was void, as delegating to the guardian the duty of determining the sum reasonably necessary for such education and support. Wheeler v. Duke, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 20, 67 S. W. 909.

A formal order of record authorizing expenditures from the principal of the ward's estate is unnecessary under a statute providing that the expenses of the education and maintenance may be defrayed out of the income or principal in whole or in part on direction of the court. In re Hoga, 134 Mich. 361, 96 N. Application of doctrine.—In speaking of the rule stated in the text, it has been said: "There are many cases and of frequent occurrence in which great and gross injustice would be done to the parties most concerned, were it the rule. I shall refer to only a few of the many cases of frequent occurrence, such as a personal injury to the ward involving the services of a surgeon; sickness of a protracted character, requiring expensive nursing and medical bills; death of the ward, requiring expenses for decent interment; marriage of a female ward; besides a large number of social and moral emergencies necessitating instant action on the part of the guardian, involving pecuniary obligation. Such a rule looks alone to the pecuniary estate of the ward and overlooks personal comfort, health, character, social standing, accidents and emergencies. It regards nothing but the mint, anise and cummin, while neglecting weightier matters." Hobbs v. Harlan, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 268, 274, 43 Am. Rep. 309. In Weathersbee v. Blanton, 31 S. C. 604, 9 S. E. 817, it was held that where unauthorized expenditures by a guardian from the corpus of his ward's estate were for her maintenance and education, she being very deficient in the latter respect and her father having by his will directed that all his children be given an education suitable to their condition, the discretion of the court in confirming such expenditures will not be interfered with on appeal.

In Virginia the question whether there can be a subsequent ratification depends upon whether the principal converted is real estate or personalty; if the former, the statutes of most states make it impossible for the court to subsequently ratify a conversion, but otherwise if the principal consists of personalty. Binker v. Streit, 33 Gratt. 663.

b. Allowance to Guardian For Support and Education—(1) IN GENERAL. The law imposes no pecuniary responsibility on a guardian to educate and maintain his ward from his own means, unless he is also the parent, and therefore a guardian should be allowed a reasonable credit for the schooling and maintenance of his ward.⁴² Where, however, the guardian permits his ward to remain in the custody of a stranger or relative he is not entitled to credit for any disbursement paid for such support unless there was an agreement or understanding that there would be a charge for the child's maintenance and education;⁴³ nor, if the ward has parents, unless they were unable or unwilling to provide.⁴⁴ And where a third person, by agreement with the guardian or otherwise, supports and educates the ward without exacting any compensation therefor, the guardian is not entitled to any credit for such support and education.⁴⁵

(II) WHERE WARD IS A MEMBER OF GUARDIAN'S FAMILY.⁴⁶ It will be presumed that a guardian who takes his ward into his own household, and cares for it as one of his family, intends to charge the estate with its support; and all reasonable expenses will be allowed.⁴⁷ Where it is proven, however, that there was no intention to charge for the ward's support at the time it was furnished or where there was an express agreement with the guardian not to make

Where the family relation exists, whether natural or assumed, there is, in the absence of an express agreement or circumstances from which an agreement may be fairly inferred, no implied obligation to pay for board on the one hand or for work on the other. Doan v. Dow, 8 Ind. App. 324, 35 N. E. 709.

any charge for such services, he cannot afterward claim a credit therefor; ⁴⁸ and a testamentary guardian acting under a will expressly forbidding any charge for support cannot make any claim for support. ⁴⁹ There is a difference of opinion as to the effect which a failure to keep account of the expenditures incurred in the support of the ward has on the guardian's claim for such support. ⁵⁰

c. What Expenditures Are Proper—(1) IN GENERAL. The guardian is the judge of what are necessaries for his ward, ⁵¹ to the same extent that a parent is for his child. ⁵² Such articles as are proper for the infant's condition in life are supplied at the discretion of the guardian subject to the supervision of the court in passing his accounts. ⁵³ What is and what is not a proper expenditure is a question not easy of determination and depends largely on the circumstances of the ward. ⁵⁴ Even where a particular article is declared a necessary, an infant's estate is liable only for such quantity thereof as is sufficient to supply his

Porl*, 9 Ala. 615; Armstrong v. Walkup, 9 Gratt. Where the ward was conscripted into the cavalry division of the army, the guardian will be entitled to a credit for a sum expended in purchasing a horse for his ward. Harbin v. Bell, 54 Ala. 389. Keeping ward's horse may be a necessary. Owen v. Peebles, 42 Ala. 338. A guardian may be allowed a credit for a reasonable amount expended for the hire of a buggy for the ward's use. Ruble v. Cottrell, 57 Ark. 190, 21 S. W. 33. And where a guardian at the request of his ward buys a horse for her, giving his note in payment, and a third party pays such note, and, the said guardian having resigned, said third party is appointed guardian of the ward, he will be entitled to credit in the settlement of his accounts for the amount so paid. *Wallis v. Payment of a fine necessary to the release of the ward is a proper expenditure. Jones v. Parker, 67 Tex. 76, 3 S. W. 222.

Watch.—A guardian may be allowed credit for a watch furnished the ward if necessary or proper to one occupying his station in life. Jones v. Parker, 67 Tex. 76, 3 S. W. 222.

Traveling expenses.—Where a guardian appointed by will resides in another state the expense of removing the wards to that state is a proper charge against his estate and no previous order of court therefore is necessary. Cummins v. Cummins, 29 Ill. 452. It has been held, however, that expenditures in sending the ward out of the state to prevent her marriage will not be allowed by the guardian where the evidence discloses no valid objection to the man which the ward wished to marry. Wynn v. Bryce, 59 Ga. 529.

Moneys.—Where a guardian advanced money for his ward under her agreement to repay it, and on coming of age she received the articles purchased therewith and treated them as her own, the guardian was entitled to credit for the advancement in his final account. Matter of Plumb, 24 Misc. wants.⁵⁵ If the guardian furnishes the ward with money to live extravagantly he is not entitled to credit except for a reasonable amount of the ward's personal expenses.⁵⁶ He will not be allowed a credit for improper expenditures made at the ward's request.⁵⁷

(II) *EXPENDITURES PRIOR TO APPOINTMENT.*⁵⁸ The probable weight of authority is that a guardian will not be permitted to take credit for the support and education of the ward, voluntarily given by him before letters of guardianship were taken out,⁵⁹ although there are a number of decisions which maintain the contrary view.⁶⁰

(III) EXPENDITURES AFTER MAJORITY OR MARRIAGE OF FEMALE WARD. A guardian is not entitled to any allowance for the support of a ward after he becomes of age.⁶¹ Where the ward and her husband continue to live with the guardian, it will be presumed that their board should be charged to the wife's property,⁶² and the guardian will be allowed a credit for the amount on the subsequent settlement of his accounts in equity, although the husband is insolvent.⁶³

(IV) COMPENSATION PAID TO PARENT. The circumstances under which a guardian may allow compensation to the parent of the minor for support and maintenance and also the circumstances under which a parent who is guardian of his minor child may be allowed compensation for its education and maintenance are considered in another title in this work.⁶⁴ The reasonableness of the compensation allowed may be determined on the guardian's accounting.⁶⁵ If the expenditures are found to be reasonable, the guardian will be entitled to a credit therefor,⁶⁶ and a finding in his favor will not be disturbed if it was warranted by the evidence.⁶⁷

(V) PROCEEDINGS TO OBTAIN, AND AMOUNT OF, ALLOWANCE. Allowances to guardians for the support and maintenance of their wards are matters exclusively within the jurisdiction of the probate court,⁶⁸ which has power to fix and determine the amount to be expended in the maintenance and education of the ward,⁶⁹ and to determine how far the principal of the funds belonging to the

d. Responsibility of Guardian to Third Persons For Debts Incurred For Ward.

As is shown in a subsequent section the general rule is that the guardian is personally liable for all debts incurred on contracts made by him with third persons in relation to the support and maintenance of the ward.⁷² Nevertheless to render him responsible for necessities furnished the ward there must be a contract with him either express or implied.⁷³ He is presumed to furnish all necessities for his ward and a stranger who furnishes them must contract with the guardian, except under peculiar circumstances,⁷⁴ such as extreme necessity founded on the guardian's neglect.⁷⁵ Otherwise the provision that guardians shall not in their expenditures exceed the income of wards would be vain and nugatory.⁷⁶

Where a guardian has supplied the ward with necessities, neither the ward nor his estate is liable for the price of the necessities, furnished the minor by strangers. Nichol v. Steger, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 393 [affirming 2 Tenn. Ch. 328]; Elrod v. Myers, 2 Head (Tenn.) 33, 75 Am. Dec. 749.

Implied agreements.—That the guardian has heretofore paid for similar service does not raise an implied promise to pay for further services. Overton v. Beavers, 19 Ark. 623, 70 Am. Dec. 610. But see Strong v. Foote, 42 Conn. 203, where it is held that where a guardian has heretofore paid a dentist's bill, a future bill of the same character will be allowable against the estate. To the same effect as to medical services see Walker v. Browne, 3 Bush (Ky.) 686, 96 Am. Dec. 277.

Where necessities are furnished to the infant on the request of the guardian of his person, on his representation that he would pay therefor from the money received for the ward's support from the guardian of his estate, the latter is not liable therefor, especially where he made provision for paying for necessities and the guardian of the person has appropriated the goods so provided. Strubbe v. Kings County Trust Co., 60 N. Y. App. Div. 548, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 1092 [affirmed in 169 N. Y. 603, 62 N. E. 1100].

education,⁷⁸ and if he neglects this duty, he has no claim against the ward for expenditures for his support.⁷⁹ If, however, the ward is physically unable to earn his support,⁸⁰ or cannot do so without encroaching on the time necessary to acquire an education,⁸¹ the guardian is not chargeable with neglect in not making him earn his own living.⁸²

b. Right of Natural Guardian to Services and Earnings. The father, and after his death, the mother, as natural guardians, are entitled to the services and to the earnings of their children during their minority, so long as they fulfil their obligations as parents.⁸³

c. Right of General Guardian to Services and Earnings. The guardian is not entitled to the earnings of the ward accruing for services performed for another than himself.⁸⁴ As respects the services of the ward performed while a member of the guardian's family, there is some conflict of opinion. According to some decisions the ward is not entitled to a set-off, for services rendered by him to the guardian while living as a member of his family, against the guardian's claim for board and maintenance.⁸⁵ And in one jurisdiction it is held that a guardian who receives his infant ward into his family cannot appropriate his services and at the same time charge him for board.⁸⁶ Neither of these views, however, is supported by the weight of authority. While the guardian should encourage habits of industry in the ward, he has no right to profit by them. A ward is as much entitled to compensation for valuable services rendered the guardian as for those rendered a stranger.⁸⁷ Nevertheless what that compensation should be depends on circumstances.⁸⁸ If the minor is incapable of rendering services of any value because of his tender age, or for any other reason, he is of course not entitled to an allowance for services as a set-off against the guardian's claim for boarding him as a member of the family.⁸⁹ If, however, the services rendered are of value, he is entitled to set off their value against the guardian's claim for board,⁹⁰ and if the ceived in the duties of domestic life in the family of the guardian (Moyer v. Fleteher, 56 Mich. 508, 23 N. W. 198); that the guardian should train the ward to habits of industry and economy, and that if in the practical inculcation of lessons which lead to the pursuit of these he derives a benefit, the guardian should incur no charge (Bass v. Cook, 4 Port. (Ala.) 390).

value of the services is equal to the value of board furnished by the guardian he is not entitled to an allowance for such board.⁹¹ If the amount of the credit allowed by the guardian for services rendered by the ward is insufficient, the burden of showing this fact is on the ward.⁹² The probate court is the proper jurisdiction to hear and determine questions relating to the right of the ward to compensation for services rendered the guardian.⁹³

d. Permitting Ward to Expend Earnings. A guardian who permits his ward to use money earned as wages for objects which are legitimate or which may conduce to the happiness and welfare of his ward is not responsible for such expenditures.⁹⁴

4. RESPONSIBILITY OF GUARDIAN FOR WARD'S TORTS. A guardian is not liable for the torts of his ward.⁹⁵

5. RESPONSIBILITY OF GUARDIAN FOR TORTS AGAINST WARD. A guardian is responsible for torts committed by him against the ward's person.⁹⁶

6. DISPARAGEMENT. Disparagement was the common-law term used to characterize the action of a guardian in consummating a marriage of his ward with one of unequal rank or social position and therefore injurious to the ward.⁹⁷ It was a ground for the removal of a guardian but not a ground for an action for damages against the guardian.⁹⁸ While the common-law rule as to disparagement of a ward by her guardian cannot be said to be absolutely inapplicable to conditions in this country,⁹⁹ it has already been held that inequality of fortune at least does not constitute disparagement.¹

B. Authority to Represent Ward in Respect of His Estate — 1. IN GENERAL. The guardian has, by virtue of the powers vested in him by the office which he has assumed, general authority over the property and affairs of his ward and is entitled to represent him in all legal and business transactions;² and

Reprint 862, one of the guardians of an infant of nine years married her to his son who had no estate; the court ordered the guardian to produce the girl, and then committed her to the other guardian, ordering an information to be brought against the guardian who married the ward, but held that this did not amount to a contempt.

99. Shutt v. Carloss, 36 N. C. 232, quære. While the authorities are silent on this interesting question we have no doubt that if proper occasion should arise the old common-law rule would be revived to meet it. Thus suppose a guardian should marry his ward, a white girl of fine antecedents, to a negro of the lowest type, it would seem to be apparent that, if the guardian would be subjected to no severer punishment, he could be removed from his trust on the ground of consummating the marriage of his ward with disparagement.

In Louisiana it is the duty of the under-tutor to act for the minor, wherever the interest of the minor is in opposition to that persons dealing with guardians are bound to know the statutory duties and rules governing them.³

2. RIGHT TO INSTITUTE OR DEFEND ACTIONS. As is shown in a subsequent chapter the guardian may bring or defend suits by or against his ward.⁴

3. RIGHT TO COMPROMISE AND SETTLE CLAIMS. Unless restricted by statute a general guardian has authority to compromise a claim on behalf of his ward,⁵ but it must be in good faith. The ward is not bound by a compromise which is made in bad faith or which is unfair to him,⁶ and an order of court must be first obtained authorizing the compromise if required by statute.⁷ It has been held, however, that if the guardian attempts without order of court to compromise notes with the maker and discharge him from the balance in consideration of payment before maturity, the payment to the guardian is valid and to that extent discharges the maker from liability.⁸ A guardian by nature or by nurture has no power to compromise a claim of the ward, since he only has control of the minor's person.⁹

4. RIGHT TO SUBMIT CLAIMS TO ARBITRATION. Unless he has an interest adverse to that of the ward,¹⁰ a guardian has a general authority to submit to arbitration of the tutor. Meyer's Succession, 42 La. Ann. 634, 7 So. 730.

Application of rule.—A guardian of beneficiaries in a life policy has no authority, without an express order of the court, to compromise the claim and accept a settlement for less than the full payment; Starr & C. Annot. St. (1896) c. 64, § 17, authorizing a guardian to compound his ward's claim with the approbation of the court. Knights Templars', etc., Life Indemnity Co. v. Crayton, 209 Ill. 550, 70 N. E. 1066 [affirming 110 Ill. App. 648].

What is not equivalent to approval.—An order that a pending action as to the matter in controversy be "dismissed settled" is not such "approbation of the court" as is required to give validity to the settlement, as it does not appear that the terms of the settlement were ever submitted to the court for its approval. *Bunnell v. questions and controversies respecting the property and interests of his ward,¹¹ and the award will be valid and binding,¹² whether ratified by the ward when sui juris or not.¹³ But statutes allowing guardians as legal representatives to submit to arbitration matters of controversy with third persons relating to the property of their wards does not authorize such proceedings in relation to disputes between guardians and their wards.¹⁴

5. RIGHT TO CONFESS JUDGMENT. A general guardian is not competent to compromise the estate of his ward by becoming a party to a consent decree.¹⁵ It has been held, however, that in the absence of fraud such a decree is not subject to collateral attack.¹⁶

Reason for rule.—Without the right to its custody he would be unable in many instances to comply with the statute and manage the estate of the ward, and having the right to the possession he may maintain an action for its possession. Boruff v. Stipp, 126 Ind. 32, 25 N. E. 865.

The probate court has no jurisdiction to order the guardian to deposit the assets in a bank and withdraw the same only on order of court, since the guardian has a right to control the personality. De Greyer v. San Francisco Super. Ct., 117 Cal. 640, 49 Pac. 983, 59 Am. St. Rep. 220.

A guardian may petition the probate court in his own name to obtain possession of the estate of his ward. Keith v. Jolly, 26 Miss. 131.

Possession by chancery guardian.—The limited guardian of an infant's estate, appointed by the chancery court, will, upon the subsequent appointment by the probate court of a general guardian, be required to turn over the estate to such general guardian. Lake v. McDavitt, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 26.

25. Lee v. Lee, 55 Ala. 590; Bacon v. Taylor, Kirby (Conn.) 368; Hudgins v. Sansom, 72 Tex. 229, 10 S. W. 104; Truss v. Old, 6 Rand. (Va.) 556, 18 Am. Dec. 748; Woerner Guard. §§ 58, 55, 61. But see the following note.

Rule in Illinois and New York.—In New York a guardian has no power or control over real estate of the ward further than concerns the rents and profits. Genet v. Tallmadge, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 561. And see Chapman v. Tibbits, 33 N. Y. 289. So under the statutes of Illinois the only power a guardian has over his ward's lands is to lease the same upon such terms and for such length of time as the county court shall approve. He is not entitled nor is it made his duty to take possession of the real estate of his ward. Muller v. Benner, 69 Ill. 108.

Property held in trust for minors.—Since possession follows the use, it has been held that where lands are granted to one in trust for others, if these latter be minors the right of possession is in their guardian as against the trustee (Bacon v. Taylor, Kirby (Conn.) 368; Woerner Guard. § 55); but where the whole estate is devised to trustees, with direction to pay the income to minors, their guardian cannot require the money to be paid to or through them (Young's Estate, 17 Phila. (Pa.) 511; Woerner Guard. § 55). So it has been held that a general guardian has no right to the possession or management of a fund held in trust for his ward (Hallinan v. Hearst, 133 Cal. 645, 66 Pac. 17, 55 L. R. A. 216).

One who obtained possession of land as testamentary guardian cannot refuse to surrender possession to the statutory guardian appointed to succeed him, although he has a small, undivided interest in the land; his remedy being an action for division. Thompson v. Thompson, 47 S. W. 1088, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 979.

Receivership for property.—Where, in an

to the ward after the grant of guardianship.²⁶ The authority of such guardian over the estate of his ward is conclusive against the control or interference of the ward during his minority.²⁷ Notwithstanding the rule giving the general guardian the right to the possession of the ward's property, the court may in its discretion require a deposit of the ward's funds in court if this course seems proper for the minor's interests²⁸ or may refuse to order a special guardian to pay over to him moneys derived from a sale of the infant's land;²⁹ and its discretion in this regard is not reviewable.³⁰ The common-law doctrine is that a guardian by nature or by nurture has a right to the custody of the ward's person only and that he has no right to the possession or control of the ward's estate.³¹ The civil-law rule, however, seems to be otherwise.³² A guardian in socage has custody of the land but not of the personal estate of his ward.³³ A person appointed guardian by deed or will of the father may be guardian both of the person and estate of the minor, but as guardian of the person he derives his appointment from the father and of the property by authority from the court authorized to grant it.³⁴

D. Character of Guardian's Title to and Possession of Ward's Property. While the guardian's duties entitle him to the possession of the ward's action to recover certain real estate in possession of defendant, who was also guardian of a minor interested therein, on it being shown that the interests of such guardian were adverse to the minor, and that he had conveyed his property with intent to defraud his ward, the court should have fixed a day for trial of the issues, and taken a bond from such guardian to pay the rents which he might collect in accordance with any further order of the court, and, if he failed to give such bond, to direct the commissioner or a receiver to take possession and collect such rents, subject to the court's future order. *Phillips v. In Connecticut the statutes provide that in default of any special appointment by a court having jurisdiction a father as natural guardian is entitled to the possession of the property of the child. Selden's Appeal, 31 Conn. 548.

Under statute.—In Texas the statute denominates the father as the natural guardian of his minor child, but distinctly extends his authority over the estate of his ward. In a case construing this statute the court holds that except for this statute the guardian by nature would have no control over the estate of his ward, and that with this single exception all the other common-law incidents of this form of guardianship attach, including the element of non-alienability. Byrne v. Love, 14 Tex. 81.

property the possession of the guardian is the possession of the ward.³⁵ The guardian has not the legal title to the ward's estate.³⁶ The relation between the guardian and ward is that of trustee and cestui que trust, but the trust is not one which gives to the guardian the legal title to the ward's estate, as in case of executors, administrators, and trustees appointed by deed or will, or by the court. The power of the guardian is a naked trust not coupled with an interest.³⁷

E. General Considerations Affecting Management of Estate. It is the duty of the guardian to manage in person the ward's estate, and if he does not he must take the consequences.³⁸ Being trustees, guardians are held responsible as such for the faithful performance of the duties imposed by their office.³⁹ They cannot assign the guardianship of the ward's property to another,⁴⁰ and are not permitted to make gain to themselves of trust property in their hands.⁴¹ The trust must be managed exclusively for the ward's benefit.⁴² If a guardian uses trust funds in a manner not authorized by law he must bear all losses and is chargeable with all increase from the illegal ventures.⁴³ In the management of the estate he is bound to exercise such diligence and prudence as men of ordinary intelligence employ in their own affairs,⁴⁴ whether there is any statutory provision to that effect or not.⁴⁵ Where the law intrusts the estate of an infant to the care and protection of a guardian, he undertakes to be faithful, vigilant, and competent.⁴⁶ Nevertheless ordinary skill, prudence, and caution is all that can be required of a guardian,⁴⁷ and his acts in the absence of fraud will be liberally construed.⁴⁸ His duty to the ward is fulfilled when he acts as others do with their own goods in good faith.⁴⁹

F. Inventory and Appraisal of Ward's Property. The statutes of the various states require guardians to file an inventory of the ward's estate,⁵⁰ which must be returned to the court having jurisdiction of the guardian and which should constitute the basis of all subsequent accountings and settlements.⁵¹ These statutes are mandatory⁵² and are rigidly enforced,⁵³ and a non-compliance therewith as heretofore shown is a ground for removal of the guardian;⁵⁴ and failure to file an inventory as required by statute cannot be justified on the ground that through an honest misapprehension as to the law that was in force the duty had been neglected.⁵⁵ The contents of the inventory are usually prescribed by statute.⁵⁶ While the guardian is not required to file an inventory until he has been appointed and qualified,⁵⁷ the statutes usually require the inventory to be filed within a designated time after the date of letters of appointment.⁵⁸ Usually the statutes also require the chattels listed in the inventory to be appraised in the manner therein designated.⁵⁹

G. Collection of Assets — 1. AUTHORITY OF GUARDIAN TO COLLECT. A general grant of guardianship authorizes the guardian to collect the personal estate of the ward and reduce to his possession his choses in action wherever found.⁶⁰ Only a duly appointed guardian, however, has this power.⁶¹ A guardian by nature has no control of the ward's estate and hence no authority to collect assets of the infant's estate.⁶²

2. NECESSITY OF BOND. Funds due the ward should not be paid over to a guardian without security,⁶³ even though the guardian is the father and is unable to give security,⁶⁴ and the court cannot order such payment to be made without security having been given.⁶⁵

Acceptance of a third person's note in payment of a solvent debt is at the guardian's peril. Lane v. Mickle, 46 Ala. 600.

Acceptance of property to save loss.—A guardian has the same power as an executor with respect to choses in action coming into his hands for administration, and may if circumstances render it proper, to save the ward from loss, accept property, real or per-

of the United States and in the usual course of business is allowable as a credit to the guardian.⁶⁷ Such medium of payment, however, is not acceptable for debts accruing before or after the war, when payment was made after the restoration of the authority of the United States.⁶⁸ So a guardian who accepts an unsecured note in payment of a debt due his ward is guilty of laches, and is liable for the amount of the note if it cannot be collected.⁶⁹

4. EFFECT OF NEGLIGENCE IN COLLECTING ASSETS. Where a guardian is guilty of negligence in collecting the assets of the ward he is liable for any loss occasioned thereby.⁷⁰ He is bound to use the same diligence in collecting debts of his ward as a prudent man would use in the management of his own affairs,⁷¹ but his duty being to hold and retain he will not be held to the same prompt action in

The constitutionality of statutes empowering guardians to sell the ward's realty has been very generally upheld (Davidson v. Koehler, 76 Ind. 398; Boon v. Bowers, 30 Miss. 246, 64 Am. Dec. 159; Thomas v. Pullis, 56 Mo. 211; Stewart v. Griffith, 33 Mo. 13, but not otherwise. So he cannot make a valid contract to sell the ward's lands unless specially authorized by one of the methods mentioned.⁸⁰ Such a contract will not be enforced nor damages given for the breach thereof.⁸¹

2. SALE OF PERSONALTY. In the absence of any statute limiting the powers of the guardian he has, as incidental to his office and duties, the power to sell personal property of his ward,⁸² and he may do so without order of court,⁸³ unless as is the case in some jurisdictions an order of court is required by statute.⁸⁴ Personal estate of a ward is necessarily subject to more unlimited control than realty

In Louisiana, while a tutor cannot transfer bills or notes without the consent of a family meeting, the transfer is not an absolute nullity, and if the indorser shows that the transfer was for the benefit of the minor the title of the note remains in the transferee. Woodbridge v. Pope, 22 La. Ann. 293. A tutor, who is indebted to his children on mortgage notes, could not to their prejudice illegally transfer those notes before maturity to a third person, so as to give him rights superior to the children. Pertuit v. Damare, 50 La. Ann. 893, 24 So. 681.

Liability of purchaser at unauthorized sale.—One who buys from a guardian negotiable notes given for the sale of the ward's land, which notes he knows belong to the estate, there being no order for the sale of the notes, is liable to the ward for the notes, if their and may be invested, called in, and reinvested, and changed and otherwise disposed of as the exigencies of the trust in the judgment of the guardian may seem to require;⁸⁵ and the purchaser who deals with the guardian justly and fairly has a right to presume that the guardian acts for the benefit of the ward,⁸⁶ and will take a good title unless he has notice of the guardian's fraud.⁸⁷ If, however, the purchaser is cognizant of a fraudulent intent on the part of the guardian, the sale will be invalid so far as the wards are concerned.⁸⁸ And the purchaser acquires no title when there is a total failure of consideration.⁸⁹

3. EXCHANGE OF PERSONAL OR REAL PROPERTY. A guardian may lawfully exchange personal property of the ward for other personal property without order of court when a prudent man in the conduct of his own affairs would have done so.⁹⁰ He cannot exchange his realty without order of court⁹¹ unless this power has been conferred on him by deed or will.⁹²

4. MORTGAGE OF REAL PROPERTY.⁹³ The guardian has no power to mortgage his ward's real estate unless authorized by order of court in pursuance of a statute empowering the court to make such order.⁹⁴ This power, however, is conferred by statute in a number of jurisdictions.⁹⁵ And such mortgage will be void unless proceeds are misappropriated by the guardian. Gillespie v. Crawford, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 42 S. W. 621.

Where a guardian has honestly exercised his discretion in exchanging property of his wards which he considered hazardous for other property, he will not be held liable for a resulting loss. Freeman v. Wilson, 74 N. C. 368.

Effect of agreement for exchange.—A party cannot recover upon a contract wherein a guardian who owned a certain interest in land of which his ward was part owner agreed to institute and carry through court proceedings necessary to the consummation of an exchange of such property, for property owned by such party, where it appears that the guardian would have derived benefit therefrom, he refusing to fulfil his agreement. *Zander v. But see Northwestern Guaranty Loan Co. v. Smith, 15 Mont. 101, 38 Pac. 224, 48 Am. St. Rep. 662, holding that the absence of a statute authorizing a guardian to mortgage his ward's land does not render void a mortgage given by a guardian under an order of the district court by which no new debt is created, but merely an exchange of one creditor for another is effected and an advantageous extension of time and reduction of interest secured.

In Louisiana the tutor may by authority of the court under advice of a family meeting borrow money to pay charges on the estate and secure the loan by mortgage. Sadler v. Henderson, 35 La. Ann. 826. Where a family meeting advising the borrowing of money on mortgage for benefit of the minors did not recommend the waiving of appraisalment, the tutor in the mortgage cannot waive it. Scot-

there is a strict compliance with the statute authorizing it,⁹⁶ or if given by one without authority to act as guardian even though executed on order of court.⁹⁷

5. MORTGAGE OR PLEDGE OF PERSONALTY. The guardian has no authority without order of court to mortgage or pledge his ward's personal estate.⁹⁸ It is made his duty out of the income and revenues to support and educate the minor, and he must have express order and sanction of the court to exceed the income, and if he does without such authority he acts at his peril and can claim no credit for it.⁹⁹ Much less can the guardian pledge the ward's property as security for his own debt.¹

6. PARTITION. The partition of lands by a guardian may be made under statutory authority,² and according to some decisions without special statutory authority, provided the partition is fair and equal.³

7. LEASE⁴—a. Power to Make Lease. A guardian by nature⁵ or by nurture⁶ cannot lease lands of the ward, but a guardian in socage could do so⁷ for any tish-American Mortg. Co. v. Ogden, 49 La. Ann. 8, 21 So. 116.

Statutes not conferring authority.—The power to sell does not include the power to mortgage the ward's real estate (Stokes v. Payne, 58 Miss. 614, 38 Am. Rep. 340); and a statute authorizing the court to order the renting, selling, and disposing of real and personal property of minors does not give the court power to authorize a mortgage (Davidson v. Wampler, 29 Mont. 61, 74 Pac. 82; Trutch v. Bunnell, 11 Oreg. 58 [disapproving dictum to the contrary in Trutch v. Bunnell, 5 Oreg. 504]).

Illustration.—Where the court does not, as required by statute, determine or specify the annual rate of interest or length of time for which the mortgage was authorized to be given, it is void. Edwards v. Taliafero, 34 Mich. 13.

The fact that the guardian's report showed an oral contract with the proposed mortgagee does not render the mortgage void, no actual fraud being claimed or shown. Warren v. Rochester Union Bank, 28 N. Y. App. Div. 7, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 27.

An order of court permitting a guardian to improve his ward's real estate out of the surplus income does not authorize a pledge of the ward's personal property for money borrowed. In re Hinds, 183 Pa. St. 260, 38 Atl. 599.

A decree authorizing a sale does not empower the guardian to pledge property. O'Herron v. Gray, 168 Mass. 573, 47 N. E. 429, 60 Am. St. Rep. 411, 40 L. R. A. 498.

Rights of purchaser.—Where one takes as a pledge from a third person a certificate of stock on which is indorsed a transfer, signed in blank by the guardian, as such, of the person named in the certificate as owner, he is bound to take notice of the extent of the guardian's authority. *O'Herron v. Where a will directed a partition and division of the estate real and personal to be made, but did not direct how it should be made, a partition by the authority of the executor with the consent of the guardian of an infant was held to be void as against the infant. Jones v. Massey, 9 S. C. 376.

Where a will provided that the executors should control the interest of the minor devisees, after partition, until their majority the regular guardian of the estate was not entitled to represent said devisees on partition. Shiner v. Shiner, 15 Tex. Civ. App. 666, 40 S. W. 439.

In one decision it is held that such lease is absolutely void;¹² in others, that it is voidable only.¹³

b. Personal Liability of Guardian to Ward. The guardian's power to lease land makes it his duty to do so.¹⁴ Therefore if he fails to lease the ward's land or to obtain a reasonable amount of rent for land leased by him, or through negligence fails to collect the rent, he is liable to the ward for the resulting

In Canada the decisions are conflicting as to whether a guardian may lease a ward's lands without an order of court sanctioning such lease. In Switzer v. McMillan, 23 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 538 [citing Whitney v. Leyden; Smith v. Smith], and Townsley v. Neil, 10 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 72, it has been held that the guardian has no power to lease the ward's lands without an order of court. But in Clarke v. MacDonell, 20 Ont. 564, a contrary view is maintained.

Rent to pay costs of suit.—Where a guardian and ward unite in an application to sell realty for her maintenance and there appears to be necessity for the sale, but subsequently the ward becomes able to make a living and the sale is unnecessary, the realty may be rented to pay costs of suit. Harkrader v. Bonham, 88 Va. 247, 16 S. E. 159.

Lease of oil, gas, or coal lands.—Without an order of court a guardian has no power to lease lands of the ward for the purpose of mining coal or of extracting oil or gas, as these products are a part of the realty and the lease in effect a conveyance. If required by statute the lease must be in writing. Sawyers v. Zachary, 1 Head (Tenn.) 21. The omission of a covenant against waste required by statute will not vitiate lease. Ross v. Blair, Meigs (Tenn.) 525. The guardian's agreement in a lease to pay for improvements is not binding on ward. Barrett v. Cocke, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 566.

Agreement to contribute to the ward's support in return for the use of the latter's premises will be construed as a lease. Richardson v. Richardson, 49 Mo. 29.

Ratification or disaffirmance of lease of predecessor.—A guardian may disaffirm an unexpired lease made by a former guardian and make a new lease, but notwithstanding he may avoid such lease, by instituting a proceeding to lease his ward's real estate, he reinstates the lease by an acquiescence in an order in such proceedings continuing it in force. c. Personal Liability of Guardian to Lessee. If a person describing himself as guardian of another gives a lease he will in the absence of anything in the contract clearly showing a contrary intent be personally liable thereon, although the lease has been approved by the court;¹⁸ but a guardian who gives a lease of his ward's land, using the ordinary terms of demise without complying with the provisions of a statute for the execution of such a lease, cannot be held liable by the lessee upon implied covenants.¹⁹

I. Investments and Deposits — 1. INVESTMENTS²⁰ — a. Duty to Invest Ward's Funds. It is the duty of a guardian to keep the ward's funds invested,²¹ and in case of failure to do so he may become liable for interest thereon.²²

b. Necessity and Effect of Order of Court. It is not necessary, in the absence of a statute requiring it, for the guardian to obtain the sanction of the court before making a loan or other investment of the ward's funds.²³ There is, however, this distinction between loans or investments made with or without a previ-

Exceptions to rule.—This general rule is subject to the exception that an order is ous order of court. Where the guardian obtains the sanction of the court in respect of any particular loan or investment he is protected from any loss resulting therefrom unless the same is caused by subsequent acts of negligence or malfeasance on his part,²⁴ and in such case the investment or loan will not be subject to attack by the ward upon final settlement.²⁵ But where the guardian acts without an order he is held to a more strict accountability, and the investment stands so far at his risk that the ward may upon final settlement question its character and the prudence and frugality of the guardian in making it and cause the latter to be surcharged with losses resulting by reason of inadequate or improper security.²⁶ The fact that the guardian acted in good faith will not protect him.²⁷ If, however, a statute requires it, the guardian must obtain an order of court before investing the funds of the ward.²⁸ Requirements of this character are mandatory and not merely directory.²⁹ In any event the investment cannot be charged against the ward on settlement of the guardian's account with him,³⁰ and it has been held in one jurisdiction that a loan without order of court is voidable at least until approved by the proper court.³¹

c. Degree of Care Required in Making Investment. The rule is well settled that a guardian when making an investment of property for the ward is bound to act honestly and faithfully and exercise a sound discretion such as men of ordinary prudence and intelligence use in their own affairs.³² He is not, however, court is always necessary to authorize the guardian to invest the ward's funds in real estate. See infra, IV, I, 1, d, (v).

What does not amount to order of court.—Conversations between the guardian and the judge of the court having control over the estate, relative to investments by the guardian, and verbal advice by the judge that certain investments should be made, cannot be held, on an exception by the ward to the guardian's final account, to operate as orders and directions which the statute authorizes the court to make in such matters. *Nagle v. an insurer of the safety of the investments, and if he acts in good faith using due care and prudence and having regard to the best pecuniary interest of the ward he will not be liable for any pecuniary loss arising out of the transaction.³³ A mere error of judgment is not sufficient to subject the guardian to liability for a loss resulting from the investment.³⁴ So laches in suing for the rescission of an investment not authorized by order of court will not give the ward a right of action, where no damage has resulted and the judgment obtained in the suit is collectable.³⁵

d. Character of Investments Permissible—(1) PUBLIC SECURITIES—(A) In General. An investment of the ward's funds in public securities is proper in England.³⁶ In perhaps a majority of the states of the Union there is express statutory authorization for investment of the ward's funds in the funded debt or bonds of the United States,³⁷ and in some states the statutes authorize an investment in county, city, or town bonds.³⁸

(B) Confederate Bonds. Where a guardian during the Civil war invested in Confederate bonds in good faith before the restoration of the authority of the United States he is entitled to credit for such investments.³⁹ It has been held,

In making a loan of the money of his ward, the guardian should be as circumspect and prudent as an ordinarily prudent man would be in lending his own money. He should look, not alone to the ultimate sufficiency of the borrower, or of the mortgage security offered, but should also consider whether or not, when the money shall be wanted, it can probably be realized without the expense of litigation; or he should provide in the mortgage that any expense attending the foreclosure shall be secured by the premises mortgaged. *Brewer v. however, that where the investment is made at a time when the bonds were worth but a very small fraction of their nominal value it is negligence on the part of the guardian and he will be liable for the resulting loss.⁴⁰

(II) LOANS ON REAL ESTATE. A loan of the ward's funds on good real-estate security is always a proper investment,⁴¹ provided the real estate is situated within the jurisdiction of the court.⁴² The security should in all ordinary cases be a first mortgage. It is very generally considered that second mortgages or deeds of trust are not proper security for a loan by a guardian, and that such loan is justifiable only upon peculiar circumstances showing clearly the necessity for so doing.⁴³ If the value of the land on which the loan is made is largely speculative, the guardian should be given the securities and charged with the amount of the loan and interest received.⁴⁴ The fact that the guardian makes an unauthorized loan on real estate will not authorize a recovery of damages by the ward where he has suffered no loss.⁴⁵

(III) LOANS ON PERSONAL SECURITY. There is some difference of opinion as to the power of the guardian to loan the ward's funds on personal security. The rule in England was that guardians were responsible for the sufficiency of all the personal security which they took for their wards,⁴⁶ and Chancellor Kent was of opinion that in general personal security is not sufficient to shield the guardian from responsibility in case of loss.⁴⁷ The New York courts have repeatedly reaffirmed this doctrine and hold that the guardian has no right to make loans on

Instance of loan held proper.—Where a guardian loaned five thousand dollars of the estate on half of two lots located within the center of a city, less than a block from the leading hotel, and across the street from the opera house, the guardian himself owning an interest in the other half of the lots, the property having been appraised in a partition suit for more than fourteen thousand dollars, and the mortgagor having paid a cotenant seven thousand two hundred dollars for the latter's half interest, the guardian could not be surcharged with the investment, on the ground that it was injudicious. Nagle v. Robins, 9 Wyo. 211, 62 Pac. 154, 796.

Where a guardian ostensibly invested money by a loan to herself, giving notes and mortgages, the loan was not an investment of the trust fund, and the guardian was liable for the full amount. Hutson v. Jensen, 110 Wis. 26, 85 N. W. 689.

42. It has been said that the general drift of authority discourages the investment of trust funds on real estate security situated beyond the jurisdiction of the court, and such investments cannot be sustained except in case of clear necessity or a pressing emergency. *Ormiston v. personal security, and that if he does he shall be personally answerable if the security proves defective.⁴⁸ In other early decisions it was held that it is only where real security cannot with reasonable diligence be obtained that the guardian may take personal security, and it will devolve upon the guardian to show the necessity and propriety of making an investment in personalty.⁴⁹ In many jurisdictions, however, loans on personal security if made in good faith and with reasonable care are permissible, and the guardian will not be liable for any loss that may afterward occur without his negligence.⁵⁰

(iv) LOANS WITHOUT SECURITY. Where the guardian loans the money of his ward without taking any security, he takes the entire risk,⁵¹ irrespective of the credit of the borrower.⁵² The making of a loan by a guardian without security is a breach of his official duty, and the borrower if cognizant of his breach of duty becomes a trustee of the money, and the ward may at his election hold the guardian and borrower accountable as joint and several trustees.⁵³

(v) PURCHASE OF REAL ESTATE. While the guardian may convert the wards' personal estate into realty when authorized by order of court,⁵⁴ it is very generally held that this power does not exist independently of the court's sanction.⁵⁵ And if such conversion is made, the wards, on coming of age, may elect to receive their personal property, and the trustee or guardian must account and pay it over to them,⁵⁶ or the wards may retain the land and ratify the sale.⁵⁷

e. Effect of Investment in Name of Guardian. If the guardian invests the ward's funds in his own name he is liable for any loss that may result irrespective of any question of good faith or honest intention on his part.⁵⁸ To protect the guardian from loss, the investment must be made not in his name but in that of the ward, whether the investment be in real⁵⁹ or personal security.⁶⁰

2. DEPOSITS. If a guardian deposits funds of his ward in his own name he is liable in any event for any resulting loss.⁶¹ But where he deposits the money of his ward in a bank in the ward's name with the court's approval or even without such approval, if the deposit is only temporary, awaiting investment, and the guardian, as a prudent business man, has no reason to believe the bank to be insecure, he is not liable for loss resulting from the bank's insolvency.⁶² The length of time that a fund may be prudently left with a banker depends upon the condition and reputation of the bank and the duty of the trustee as to investing the fund.⁶³

J. Interest on Funds of Estate — 1. LIABILITY OF GUARDIAN FOR INTEREST. It is a general rule that a guardian is liable for interest on all moneys of his ward which come into his hands.⁶⁴ He is liable for interest where he fails to invest the funds of his ward,⁶⁵ if they could have been safely invested,⁶⁶ and he cannot be relieved from liability for interest upon a mere showing that the funds have not been used,⁶⁷ or that he has at all times had enough money of his own to settle fully with the ward, none of the money being deposited by him as guardian,⁶⁸ or that the omission to invest arose from a mistaken idea that the funds belonged to the ward's mother.⁶⁹ He is also liable for interest where he fails to render an account as to funds in his hands,⁷⁰ or where he uses the funds of the estate in his own individual enterprises, or mingles such funds with money of his own.⁷¹ "Whatever of gain or profit may flow from the employment of the ward's funds shall never enure to the benefit of the guardian, but must be faithfully secured to the ward."⁷² So he is responsible for interest on funds which he might have collected and invested for the benefit of the ward.⁷³ A guardian, however, is not liable for interest on money on which, without negligence on his part, no interest has been received;⁷⁴ as where he could not with reasonable diligence have loaned the funds with safety.⁷⁵ So no interest will be chargeable against the guardian where the receipts and disbursements are merely contemporaneous and stand in open account,⁷⁶ or where no credit was allowed him for sums paid out for the ward, which amounted to more than the interest,⁷⁷ or on amounts necessary for contingent expenses,⁷⁸ or on sums too small to be wisely invested.⁷⁹ So interest will not be charged on a balance on account in the hands of a guardian during the pendency of exceptions to an auditor's report thereon, unless the exceptions are filed by the accountant or at his instance,⁸⁰ and where the guardian is entitled to curtesy in real estate or to the interest on the proceeds of the sale during his life, he is not chargeable with interest on the proceeds from the sale.⁸¹ If a guardian tenders all the amount due to his successor he is not chargeable with interest if the money is left in his hands.⁸²

2. TIME FROM WHICH INTEREST IS TO BE CHARGED. Some decisions lay down the rule broadly that the guardian is chargeable with interest on funds of the ward from the date on which they came into his hands.⁸³ Nevertheless according to the great weight of authority the guardian is entitled to a reasonable time within which to invest the funds (usually held to be six months) and will be liable for interest only from the expiration of that time.⁸⁴ Where, however, the guardian mingles the ward's funds with his own so that they cannot be traced he is chargeable with interest from the time he receives the funds.⁸⁵ And if he converts the ward's property he is liable for interest on its value from the time of conversion.⁸⁶ As to sums due by himself he owes interest from the time of his appointment if they were previously due; otherwise only from the time they became due.⁸⁷ Where the guardian fails to pay over what is due his ward when he arrives at majority,⁸⁸ or at an age at which he is by statute required to make final accounting and settlement with the ward,⁸⁹ he is chargeable with interest on such funds from the time when they should have been paid over to the ward until payment is made.

3. RATE AND COMPUTATION. The general rule is that in the absence of special contract a guardian will not be chargeable with more than the legal rate of interest on funds of the ward invested or used by him or which he has failed to invest,⁹⁰ and he is liable for the legal rate of interest on the amount ascertained to be due the ward by judgment from the date of the judgment.⁹¹ If he is directed to deposit money with the county treasurer, and fails to do so, he is chargeable with interest thereon only at the rate it would have earned if so deposited, he not hav-

Rate as fixed by note.—Where a guardian received, as a part of his ward's estate, certain solvent notes, payable to the testator, which bore interest at eight per cent, and on an accounting he failed to exhibit any books of account, and failed to disclose the amount of interest actually received by him, he was chargeable with the rate of interest provided in the notes. *Hedges v. ing used it as his own, but merely paid it to the executor of the infant's mother under a mistaken notion of his duty.⁹² Nevertheless the guardian's liability for interest at the legal rate does not enable him to retain any excess over that rate that he may have actually realized in any way out of his ward's funds, and if it is shown that he has made more than the ordinary or legal rate he will be charged all that he has made out of the ward's estate.⁹³ Many decisions lay down the rule seemingly without qualification that the guardian is chargeable with compound interest at the legal rate.⁹⁴ Other decisions, however, hold that the guardian is chargeable with compound interest in case of fraud or gross negligence or abuse of his trust but not otherwise;⁹⁵ that in case of simple neglect of duty without fraud or intentional misconduct he will be charged with simple interest only.⁹⁶ The purpose of allowing compound interest is not so much to punish the Investment without authority of court.—A guardian without authority of the court purchased real estate with the money of his ward. The value of the real estate had somewhat depreciated when the ward became of age, and it was shown that during the ward's infancy money could be safely loaned at ten per cent per annum. It was held that the ward was entitled to recover from the guardian the amount invested by him in the property, with ten per cent interest, compounded annually. Scheib v. Thompson, 23 Utah 564, 65 Pac. 499.

Mingling of ward's funds with those of guardian.—Where a guardian receives funds of his ward, and makes no effort to invest them, but mingles them with his own, he is properly charged with interest upon the balance left in his hands at the beginning of each year after the first. *Jones v. guardian, but that the ward may receive that which in justice he should and most probably would have received if the guardian had been reasonably faithful and attentive to his trust.⁹⁷ And in any event after termination of the guardianship by marriage, death, or majority of the ward, or appointment of another guardian or death of the guardian, the guardian is not liable for anything except simple interest.⁹⁸ In determining the liability of a guardian where compound interest is allowed, the interest for a year should be added to the principal, and the current expenses of the year should be deducted from the amount, and the balance will be the principal for the next year, on which interest is to be computed, and so on from year to year.⁹⁹

K. Expenditures¹—1. IN GENERAL. In the management of the ward's estate the guardian may incur such expenses and make such expenditures as a prudent man would under all the circumstances deem proper and necessary.² Except under peculiar circumstances³ the guardian has no power to bind the infant by contract and is personally liable for expenses incurred in the management of the estate.⁴ He will, however, be entitled to a credit for expenditures made in good faith and which a reasonably prudent man in the management of his own affairs would have made.⁵ Questions relating to the necessity of previously obtaining an order of court for the making of expenditures are considered in subsequent sections of this chapter in respect of the character of the expenditure made.⁶

Limitations of rule.—Some decisions have recognized a limitation of the rule stated in the text. Thus it has been held that notwithstanding the guardian failed to obtain an order of court he will be entitled to an allowance for improvements that were reasonable and proper and manifestly for the ward's benefit and paid for at reasonable rates (Holbrook v. Brooks, 33 Conn. 347; Cheney v. Roodhouse, 135 Ill. 257, 25 N. E. 1019 [affirming 32 Ill. App. 49]; Kilpatrick's Appeal, 113 Pa. St. 46, 5 Atl. 8; Bonsall's Appeal, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 266; Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Gratt. (Va.) 143; Woerner Guard. § 176); and it has been held that if the improvements are such as on application the court would have directed to be made, the guardian will be allowed credit therefor (Waldrip v. Tulley, 48 Ark. 297, 3 S. W. 192; Woerner Guard. § 54); and that a statute forbidding guardians to make contracts for improvements on real estate binding on the estates of their wards beyond minority does not limit or control the jurisdiction of a court of equity but only limits the powers of guardians (Lenow v. Arrington, (Tenn. 1902) 69 S. W. 314). So one decision goes even further and holds that one who previous to appointment takes charge of the estate and person of the ward will be credited with improvements made at a time that there were no letters of guardianship on the estate. In re Beisel, 110 Cal. 267, 40 Pac. 961, 42 Pac. 819.

his own affairs, the guardian will be entitled to an allowance therefor in his account,²⁵ notwithstanding the fact that it does not appear that the action was not prosecuted by order of court,²⁶ or that the suit was unsuccessful.²⁷ Nevertheless to entitle him to an allowance he must have exercised good faith and sound discretion,²⁸ and he will not be entitled to an allowance for fees and expenditures unnecessarily incurred, or unreasonable in amount.²⁹ Where by order of court a certain attorney's fee has been allowed the guardian he cannot in a subsequent accounting charge more than that amount to his ward's estate, although he may have actually paid it out.³⁰

6. REMOVAL OF ENCUMBRANCES. The guardian may pay off a mortgage or deed of trust or other encumbrance upon the ward's estate.³¹ Ordinarily an order of court is necessary to the exercise of this power,³² and the order must be obtained from a court having jurisdiction to make it;³³ but it has been held that the power may be exercised without an order of court where the encumbrance if left unpaid would probably destroy the ward's interest.³⁴

33. The probate court has no jurisdiction to order a curator of infant children to pay money in his hands to discharge an encumbrance on the homestead descended to them, and such order furnishes no justification for making such payment, but the guardian should in such case appeal to the equity powers of the circuit court. Windleton v. O'Brien, 68 Mo. App. 675.

34. Cheney v. Roodhouse, 135 Ill. 257, 25 N. E. 1019, holding that it is advisable that the guardian should when it is practicable, and especially in cases of doubtful propriety, act under the direction of the court in discharging encumbrances on the land of the minor; but where he has acted in good faith, and advisedly, and his acts have been beneficial to the interests of the ward and have probably had the effect of preventing a foreclosure and the loss of the estate, justice requires the approval of such acts.

Where a guardian is tenant by the curtesy of land of which his ward is seized in fee, he cannot apply his ward's property to remove will from being sold enters into an agreement with the creditors and the executrix to pay decedent's debts out of the rents the court will ratify such agreement and treat it as if an order of court had been obtained authorizing it;³⁵ but in accounting for the proceeds of the sale on the ward's land the guardian is not entitled to credit for the amount paid on a note barred by limitations against the ward's father whose estate had been settled, it not appearing that the debt was a lien on the land.³⁶

8. PAYMENTS TO WARD OR HUSBAND OR ON THEIR ORDER. If the guardian pays over money of the ward who is of full age to her husband,³⁷ or to a third person at their direction,³⁸ he will be entitled to credit therefor. Except where authorized by an order of court, the guardian is not entitled to a credit for money furnished the ward to carry on business,³⁹ especially where the amount advanced is in excess of the income of the ward's estate.⁴⁰

9. NECESSITY OF LIMITING EXPENDITURES TO INCOME. The general rule is well settled that all expenditures by the guardian should be made out of the income and not out of the principal of the ward's estate unless expenditures out of the principal are authorized by order of court.⁴¹ The application of this doctrine in respect of expenditures for the maintenance and education of the ward has been fully explained in a previous chapter.⁴² And it applies also to expenditures made in the management and preservation of the ward's estate.⁴³ A limitation, however, has been placed upon the doctrine in cases where the expenditures in excess of the income are obviously for the benefit of the infant's estate.⁴⁴

10. RIGHT OF GUARDIAN TO INTEREST ON EXPENDITURES. The guardian being ordinarily chargeable with interest on funds of the ward coming into his hands,⁴⁵ he should be allowed interest on expenditures from the time they were made,⁴⁶ except where the receipts and disbursements are merely contemporaneous and stand in open court.⁴⁷

L. Guardian's Individual Interest in Transactions Relating to Ward's Estate⁴⁸—1. IN GENERAL. The general rule is well settled that a guardian cannot trade with himself on account of his ward,⁴⁹ nor purchase nor in any way use or deal with his ward's property for his own benefit.⁵⁰ A trustee is bound not to do anything which can place him in a position inconsistent with the interest of the trust or which has a tendency to interfere with his duty in discharge of it,⁵¹ and the doctrine that a person standing in a fiduciary relation to property cannot be allowed to purchase or hold it for his own use or benefit against the objection of the cestui que trust is fully applicable to guardians.⁵² A purchase of the ward's property is not, however, absolutely void even in equity, but the guardian purchases subject to the equity of having the sale set aside if the ward in a reasonable time elects to do so.⁵³ And the general rule does not apply where no advantage is taken by the guardian or knowledge gained by reason of the fiduciary relation to affect injuriously the interest of the ward or advance that of the guardian,⁵⁴ but in order that the transaction may be upheld it must clearly appear that the guardian acted in the utmost good faith and that it was for the benefit of the ward.⁵⁵

Effect of purchase at foreclosure sale.—If a general guardian makes a purchase in his character as such, he presumptively uses his ward's funds therefor; and if, on a foreclosure sale of his ward's land, he purchases as general guardian, the effect is to merge and extinguish the mortgage, and he can obtain no title by so purchasing which he can afterward convey without authority from a court of equity. *Low v. version of the ward's property to his own use,⁶³ or for the embezzlement of such property.⁶⁴

N. Contracts and Gifts Between Guardian and Ward—1. CONTRACTS—

a. Before Ward Is of Age. There can be no valid contract between a guardian and his ward before the latter reaches his majority.⁶⁵ The infant has no capacity 41 La. Ann. 135, 5 So. 645. Turning ancient pasture into arable land constitutes waste. Clark v. Thorp, 2 Ves. 232, 28 Eng. Reprin' 150.

The orphans' court has no jurisdiction to charge a guardian with waste committed by him during the guardianship. Crowell's Appeal, 2 Watts (Pa.) 295.

New York.—Matter of Nowak, 38 Misc. 713, 78 N. Y. Suppl. 288.

North Carolina.—Winstead v. Stanfield, 68 N. C. 40.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 295.

What acts constitute a conversion.—The following acts have been held to constitute a conversion: Investment of the ward's funds in stocks and appropriation thereof (In re Dow, 133 Cal. 446, 65 Pac. 890); a conveyance of the ward's property to secure the guardian's personal indebtedness (Shelton v. Lewis, 27 Ark. 190; Thomas v. Hite, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 590; Matter of Getts, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 441; Dobyns v. Rawley, 76 Va. 537); sale of the ward's property at private sale without order of court (Hudson v. Helmes, 23 Ala. 585; In re Hackett, 4 Rob. (La.) 290; Butler v. Her Creditors, 5 Mart. N. S. (La.) 624; Chesneau v. Girod, 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 612, 14 Am. Dec. 204); receiving and selling the ward's property in his own name (White v. Parker, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 48; Matter of Terry, 31 Misc. (N. Y.) 477, 65 N. Y. Suppl. 655. See also Ingenhuett v. Hunt, 15 Tex. Civ. App. 248, 39 S. W. 310); failure to account for moneys of the ward (Asher v. State, 88 Ind. 215); the use of a ward's funds in the guardian's business (In re Hamilton, 139 Cal. 671, 73 Pac. 578; Lowry v. State, 64 Ind. 421; Winstead v. Stanfield, 68 N. C. 40; Eversberg v. Miller, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 56 S. W. 223); and where a guardian had converted the money of his ward by using it in his own business, his liability therefor is not affected by a subsequent investment thereof by him in the name of the ward (Winstead v. Stanfield, supra). Compare State v. Henry, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 720, holding that a mere failure of a guardian to pay over to the ward a balance due on the settlement does not render him liable to indictment for wrongful conversion under the act of 1875, providing that a guardian having in his hands funds belonging to his ward which he willfully and maliciously converts to his own use and benefit and on final settlement fails to pay over to the one entitled thereto shall be punished, etc.

Where a guardian converted Confederate money of his ward, he is liable for the actual not for its face value. Brand v. Abbott, 42 Ala. 499; Winstead v. Stanfield, 68 N. C. 40.

Where a guardian mixes the ward's funds with his own, he is liable for any depreciation, as where he took Confederate money in payment of the ward's claim and mixed it with his own. Byne v. Anderson, 67 Ga. 466; McWhorter v. Tarpley, 54 Ga. 291; Cummings v. Mebane, 63 N. C. 315.

A guardian cannot consent to a conversion of the ward's property so as to defeat the ward's right to damages for the conversion. Huggins v. Moore, 3 Head (Tenn.) 426.

Gifts of ward's property.—Guardians cannot make a gratuitous disposition of their ward's property. Kempe v. Hunt, 4 La. 477. See also Norris v. Norris, 85 N. Y. App. Div. 113, 83 N. Y. Suppl. 77.

64. Embezzlement.—A guardian who in good faith uses the money of his ward in his own business, expecting to fully account for the same with interest, is not guilty of embezzlement if without fraud on his part the money is lost by the failure of his business. Myers v. State, 4 Ohio Cir. Ct. 570, 2 Ohio Cir. Dec. 712; State v. Meyer, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 746, 23 Cine. L. Bul. 251.

Texas.—Jones v. Parker, 67 Tex. 76, 3 S. W. 222.

Vermont.—Hendee v. Cleaveland, 54 Vt. 142.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 305.

Compare Moore v. Shields, 69 N. C. 50 (holding that a guardian who is a merchant may if he acts in good faith supply the wants of his ward from his own store and charge a reasonable profit upon them), and Perkins v. Bailey, 6 La. Ann. 255 (which is to the same effect).

Effect of special statutory provisions.—Under a statute providing that a minor who by permission of his guardian engages in to enter into contractual relations with anybody,⁶⁶ much less with his guardian with whom his relation is one of trust and confidence;⁶⁷ and he may disaffirm the contract after coming of age,⁶⁸ even though at the time of making the contract he represented himself to the guardian as being of age.⁶⁹ He may, however, affirm the contract on coming of age if he sees fit.⁷⁰

b. After Ward Is of Age. A contract made by a guardian with his ward soon after his coming of age will be looked upon with suspicion, and will not be binding if procured by fraud, misrepresentation, or undue influence, or if it is unfair to the ward.⁷¹ Where the guardian claims a benefit from such a contract it should be made to appear that it involves no injustice to the ward,⁷² and that the act proceeded from the volition of the ward and that he had full knowledge of its effect.⁷³ If, however, the contract is fair to the ward it will be sustained.⁷⁴

2. GIFTS— a. By Ward to Guardian. A gift from a ward to his guardian is voidable at the option of the ward,⁷⁵ and this is so even when made a short time after the ward's majority.⁷⁶ any business as an adult is bound for all contracts connected with such business, a contract entered into between the guardian and ward, during his minority, but after the discharge of the guardian, touching such business of the minor, is valid. Ullmer v. Fitzgerald, 106 Ga. 815, 32 S. E. 869.

Pennsylvania.—Eberts v. Eberts, 55 Pa. St. 110.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 306.

Gross inadequacy of consideration renders the contract of no effect. Wright v. Arnold, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 638, 61 Am. Dec. 172; Williams v. Powell, 36 N. C. 460; Eberts v. Eberts, 55 Pa. St. 110.

Conveyance in consideration of love and affection.—An instrument, executed by a ward very shortly after her majority and the termination of the guardianship, conveying an interest in her estate to her guardian in consideration of love and affection, and because of the care and kindness on the part of the guardian, is unenforceable. Williams v. Davison, 133 Mich. 344, 93 N. W. 1048.

Attack by creditors of ward.—If there is no evidence of an intent to delay, hinder, or defraud the creditors of the ward, they cannot successfully impugn the contract upon the ground that it was unequal and prejudicial to the ward. Andrews v. Jones, 10 Ala. 400.

Where the relation of quasi-guardian and ward has existed, every intentment should be made in favor of the ward in the construction of contracts between them made soon after the termination of such relation. Spalding v. Brant, 3 Md. Ch. 411.

In Louisiana contracts between guardian and ward after majority but before the settlement are voidable at the election of the ward. Frost v. McLeod, 19 La. Ann. 80; Vanwickle v. Matta, 16 La. Ann. 325; White v. Gleason, 15 La. Ann. 479.

72. Goodrick v. Harrison, 130 Mo. 263, 32 S. W. 661.

The burden of proof is on the guardian to show the fairness of the transaction. Meek v. Perry, 36 Miss. 190; Hart v. Cannon, 133 N. C. 10, 45 S. E. 351.

75. Wade v. Pulsifer, 54 Vt. 45.

A gift by will from a ward to his guardian will be presumed to be invalid, and the burden of proving its validity rests upon the one who seeks to derive advantage under it. Garvin v. Williams, 44 Mo. 465, 100 Am. Dec. 314.

76. Miller v. Simonds, 5 Mo. App. 33 [affirmed in 72 Mo. 669]; Waller v. Armistead, 2 Leigh (Va.) 11, 21 Am. Dec. 594. But where at the time of the gift several years

b. By Guardian to Ward. If a guardian makes a gift to his ward, he cannot afterward charge the amount to him or annul the gift.⁷⁷

O. Ratification and Estoppel—1. RATIFICATION⁷⁸—a. In General. The court may ratify an unauthorized contract of the guardian when it is manifestly for the ward's benefit.⁷⁹ So the husband of the ward may ratify expenditures not authorized by law incurred by the guardian,⁸⁰ or changes of the ward's personal estate into real estate or vice versa.⁸¹ Ratification by the ward is considered in the sections following.⁸²

b. Right of Ward to Ratify or Disaffirm.⁸³ A ward may on reaching majority elect either to ratify and enforce the unauthorized acts of his guardian or to disaffirm them.⁸⁴ He must, however, ratify them in toto or relinquish all rights had elapsed since the ward became of age it has been held that this rule does not apply. Ralston v. Turpin, 129 U. S. 663, 9 S. Ct. 420, 32 L. ed. 747.

77. Bond v. Lockwood, 33 Ill. 212; Barnebe v. Suaer, 18 La. Ann. 148; Matter of Mulligan, 6 Misc. (N. Y.) 546, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 435; Pratt v. McJunkin, 4 Rich. (S. C.) 5.

The only persons authorized to accept a donation for a minor are his tutor, his parents, and other legitimate ascendants. Barnebe v. Suaer, 18 La. Ann. 148.

78. Ratification of sale under order of court see infra, V, A, 10, k.

79. Hurt v. Long, 90 Tenn. 445, 16 S. W. 968; Moyers v. Kinninck, 1 Tenn. Ch. App. 65. And see Capchart v. Huey, 1 Hill Eq. 405.

A case calling for ratification is not presented, where a guardian applied live stock as a credit on a note due the ward's estate amply secured on real estate, the debt not being in any way endangered, and then immediately converted such property to his own use. Moyers v. Kinninck, 1 Tenn. Ch. App. 65.

80. Freeman v. Tucker, 20 Ga. 6.

What is not a ratification.—A guardian who invests in stock which subsequently depreciates is not relieved from responsibility by the mere enumeration or recital of such stocks in a deed of settlement made in contemplation of the marriage of the minor ward, by the intended husband and the ward to a trustee for the use of the ward, it not appearing that the trustee then knew when or by whom the stocks were purchased and no account of the guardian being then filed and which when filed was immediately excepted. Worrell's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 44.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 314.

Where the guardian makes an unauthorized investment of the ward's money in land the ward may elect to receive the land or the money and interest. Eckford v. De Kay, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 89; Royer's Appeal, 11 Pa. St. 36; Singleton v. Love, 1 Head (Tenn.) 357. But where a guardian purchases realty for the ward without authority, giving a note in part payment, the ward cannot keep the land free from the right of the vendor to proceed against it for the balance of the price. Howard v. Cassels, 105 Ga. 412, 31 S. E. 562, 70 Am. St. Rep. 44.

Where a guardian makes an unauthorized sale of lands the ward may elect to recover the lands or take the purchase-money. (Shorter v. Frazer, 64 Ala. 74; Cromwell v. Kirk, 1 Dem. Surr. (N. Y.) 599); and if he elects to ratify the sale his ratification relates back to the date of the sale and clothes him with the rights of the original vendor, including the right to enforce the vendor's lien for the unpaid purchase-money (Shorter v. Frazer, 64 Ala. 74).

A contract for the exchange of an infant's under them. He cannot elect to satisfy the contract in part and repudiate it in part.⁸⁵

c. Requisites and Sufficiency of Ratification. The ward on coming of age may ratify the unauthorized acts of his guardian expressly,⁸⁶ or by implication;⁸⁷ but such ratification must be with a full knowledge of all the facts and a full understanding of all legal rights, and must be clearly established by the evidence.⁸⁸ A ward on arriving at full age ratifies his guardian's unauthorized acts by receiving and appropriating the proceeds and benefits thereof, with full knowledge of the facts,⁸⁹ by bringing suit against the guardian to obtain the fruits lands and bonds and a deed of the infant executed on his behalf by his guardian either as agent or as guardian, as a part of the transaction, cannot be ratified by the infant after coming of age, since they are void. Dellinger v. Foltz, 93 Va. 729, 25 S. E. 998.

85. Overbach v. Heermance, Hopk. (N. Y.) 337, 14 Am. Dec. 545; Singleton v. Love, 1 Head (Tenn.) 357; Capilinder v. Stokes, Meigs (Tenn.) 175. And see Wardell's Estate, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 290.

87. Vaughan v. Christine, 3 La. Ann. 328; Healy v. Rowan, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 414, 52 Am. Dec. 94. And see cases cited in following note.

Effect on property alienated.—If minors after majority either expressly or tacitly approve of an alienation of their property they cannot afterward recover it. Huset v. Lefebvre, 6 La. 601; Chesneau v. Sadler, 10 Mart. (La.) 726.

88. Thompson v. Hartline, 105 Ala. 263, 16 So. 711; Trader v. Lowe, 45 Md. 1; Worrell's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 44; Wills' Appeal, 22 Pa. St. 325; Micou v. Lamar, 1 Fed. 14, 17 Blatchf. 378. A remark made by a ward soon after coming of age to a third person that he approved of a certain act done by the guardian will not bind him. Wills' Appeal, 22 Pa. St. 325. And the fact of a guardian's proceeding with a foreclosure and compromising a deficiency judgment after his ward arrives at majority does not raise the presumption that he continued to act with the consent and approval of the ward. Curtis v. Devoe, 121 Cal. 468, 53 Pac. 936.

Where a guardian contracts to convey his ward's lands on or before a certain date, a signature to the contract by the ward after that date does not operate as a ratification of the ward's agreement. Le Roy v. Jacobosky, 136 N. C. 443, 48 S. W. 796, 67 L. R. A. 977.

Receipt given by guardian.—On an issue as to whether a sale of an infant's interest in the land of his deceased ancestor had been lawfully made, a receipt by his guardian, who was also administrator, of all claims growing out of the guardianship or administration in favor of the ward is inadmissible, as it does not tend to show a confirmation of the sale of the land by the infant. *Young v. Where a guardian makes an unauthorized sale of the ward's land and after coming of age the ward receives the purchase-money, this will amount to a ratification of the sale, and will operate as an estoppel (Deford v. Mercer, 24 Iowa 118, 92 Am. Dec. 460; Parsley v. Hays, 17 Iowa 310; Kingsley v. Jordan, 85 Me. 137, 26 Atl. 1090; Parmele v. McGinty, 52 Miss. 745; Handy v. Noonan, 51 of the unauthorized transaction,⁹⁰ or by long acquiescence therein,⁹¹ provided the ward has full knowledge of all the facts and circumstances surrounding the transaction.⁹²

2. ESTOPPEL⁹³ — a. Of Guardian. Estoppel plays an important part in the relationship of guardian and ward, serving to protect each of them against the other. Thus the guardian cannot contest the title of his ward to property coming into his hands as guardian,⁹⁴ nor deny that property of the ward which came into

Miss. 166. Contra, Ryder v. Flanders, 30 Mich. 336; Mitchell's Succession, 33 La. Ann. 353; but it has been held that the fact that the proceeds of the sale have been devoted to the ward's support and education does not estop him from maintaining an action for the recovery of the property (Bachelor v. Korb, 58 Nebr. 122, 78 N. W. 485, 76 Am. St. Rep. 70; Rowe v. Griffiths, 57 Nebr. 488, 78 N. W. 20; Box v. Word, 65 Tex. 159; Wilkinson v. Filby, 24 Wis. 441. And see Fielder v. Childs, 73 Ala. 567); that the remedy of the purchaser is on the covenants in the guardian's deed (Wilkinson v. Filby, supra); and it has also been held that where a guardian's sale of the land of his ward is void because the guardian had no authority to make the sale, the heirs of such ward are not estopped from denying the validity of the sale by the fact that they shared as heirs of the ward in the proceeds of a sale under partition proceedings of land conveyed to the ward by the purchaser at the guardian's sale as a part of the consideration of such sale (Musson v. Fall Back Planting, etc., Co., (Miss. 1893) 12 So. 589).

The ward's acceptance of the residue of proceeds imports a ratification of a sale made without due authority of law. O'Connor v. Carver, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 436.

Where the guardian invests funds of the ward in land, taking title in the ward's name without order of court, the latter by retaining the land with full knowledge of the facts ratifies the investment. Cassedy v. Casey, 58 Iowa 326, 12 N. W. 286.

Where the guardian purchases the ward's property and the latter on coming of age receives the value thereof with full knowledge of what has been done by the guardian this amounts to an affirmance. Scott v. Freeland, 7 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 409, 45 Am. Dec. 310.

An invalid lease made by the guardian is ratified by the ward's acceptance of the benefits of it after coming of age with full knowledge of what had been done in his name. Myers v. Kingston Coal Co., 126 Pa. St. 582, 17 Atl. 891.

Where after majority the ward executes a receipt to his late guardian for the value of property obtained by him from the guardian during minority, under a voidable contract, and the same is obtained without fraud and undue influence, this amounts to a ratification, although he was ignorant that he might disaffirm. Clark v. Van Court, 100 Ind. 113, 59 Am. Rep. 774.

An unauthorized partition is ratified by a deed of the ward after coming of age conveying the land allotted to him. Johnston v. Furnier, 69 Pa. St. 449.

The enforcement by the ward of security given on an authorized loan of his funds operates only as a partial payment and not as a ratification of the loan. Lee v. Lee, 67 Ala. 406.

The mere receipt of the stipulated price for the hire of a chattel let by the guardian does not estop the ward from asserting a claim for its loss. Harrell v. Lee, 51 N. C. 280.

Where a purchaser retains a part of the price, to satisfy a claim against the ward's estate by permission of the court on a confirmation of the sale by receiving from the guardian the amount actually paid on the purchase, the ward is not estopped from objecting to the court's order allowing the claim. *Isreal v. Mere acquiescence in an unauthorized transfer of a chose in action by the guardian does not estop the ward from asserting his right thereto where nothing has been done to deprive the transferee of his proper remedy. *Foley v. his hands before final settlement was received by him as guardian.⁹⁵ He will be estopped also from contesting the validity of previous settlements and the amounts charged against himself,⁹⁶ or the judge's authority to take notes at a probate sale of minor's property in an action by him (the guardian) on such notes,⁹⁷ or to attempt to collect an account as guardian which he has permitted to be paid to the ward,⁹⁸ or to deny the legality of a conveyance made by him,⁹⁹ or of an order of court secured by him,¹ and he is bound also by his failure to appeal.² On the other hand he is not estopped by representations of one who falsely claimed to be the guardian before him,³ and where one receipts as guardian by mistake he is not estopped to claim the money received as his own.⁴ So where a widow was a co-executrix and was also a guardian for minor heirs, and had consented to improper expenditures by the executor, although she was estopped as executrix to object to the allowance of such expense, she could do so as guardian.⁵

b. Of Ward. Where one assumes to act as guardian without authority, his acts or representation cannot bind the ward.⁶ So infant wards cannot be estopped by the unauthorized or illegal acts of a properly constituted guardian.⁷ It has also been held that a ward is not estopped to assert any rights to property by reason of any negligence on the part of his guardian,⁸ nor to contest any record entries caused to be made by the guardian himself in his own favor;⁹ nor to resist any other unlawful sale, mortgage, or other transaction which he has not

Recognition of title in another.—A party, applying to be tutor of minors, who, in a petition to the parish court, obtains a decree for the homologation of an inventory in which certain property was placed thereon as belonging to the minors, for the recognition of the minors as heirs, and a decree placing them in possession of the property, is estopped by his fiduciary relations from recognizing himself the title thereto of a third person, no matter how complete the title may be. *Ingram v. expressly or impliedly ratified.¹⁰ Representations by a ward to his guardian are also ineffective to bind the former.¹¹ A ward cannot, however, admit the guardian's authority for one purpose and deny it for another.¹² And where a ward on majority ratifies by act and accepts the advantages of unlawful usurpation of authority on the part of his guardian, he is estopped from seeking to resist the effects of the whole transaction.¹³ So although a ward may repudiate a contract of his guardian in respect to the lands of his estate, he is nevertheless estopped, after repudiation, to assert any right to relief or any interest in the contract itself.¹⁴

P. Preferred Claim, Lien or Privilege, or Mortgage of Ward on Property of Guardian — 1. IN GENERAL. In some states a debt due the ward from the guardian is by statute a preferred claim against the latter's estate.¹⁵ In the absence of statute¹⁶ the ward has no lien or privilege on the estate of the guardian.¹⁷ In Louisiana the civil code gives the minor a legal mortgage on all the tutor's immovables,¹⁸ which may, however, be discharged by a conventional mortgage on particular property of the tutor;¹⁹ and in all states a guardian may secure his ward's claims by mortgage on his individual property.²⁰

2. GENERAL MORTGAGE. Upon due recordation of the tutor's bond, or of the certificate of the clerk of the district court of the amount of the minor's property according to the inventory on file in his office, a mortgage arises by operation of law in favor of the minor for the amount therein stated on all the immovable

Priorities.—The individual mortgage of a guardian of a minor to his ward to secure a debt due from him to the estate is good as against a subsequent mortgage, although the debt is secured by the guardian's bond and there is no order of court fixing the amount thereof. Jennings v. Jennings, 104 Cal. 150, 37 Pac. 794. Where a person mortgaged his property to pay debts, among which was the amount due to wards of whom he was guardian, and gave a list of his creditors in the order in which they were to be paid, and some of the creditors met and divided the property among them, agreeing that the wards should be paid out of other property about to fall to the mortgagor, which he disposed of afterward without paying the wards, it was held that as the wards were among the first creditors to be paid and had not been paid and did not agree to the division of the property, the mortgaged property was liable for the amount due them, and that the burden should fall upon those who had taken it, proportionally, according to the value which they had fixed on it at the time of division. Robinson v. Collier, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 332, 52 Am. Dec. 572.

Enforcement.—Where a guardian gives a mortgage to his successor to secure "the amount ascertained to be owing" from himself to his successor, and also delivers certain notes taken for loans of the ward's money, the mortgagee is not bound to pursue his remedy on the notes assigned before resorting to the mortgage. O'Haver v. Shidler, 26 Ind. 278.

Satisfaction.—A mortgage given by a guardian to his ward cannot be satisfied by the guardian without authority of court and without payment of the debt. Jennings v. Jennings, 104 Cal. 150, 37 Pac. 794.

Mortgage to guardian's sureties.—Where a guardian gave to his sureties a mortgage reciting the bond, and conditioned "that, if the said guardian should and would faithfully comply with the condition of the said bond by paying over to the minor mentioned in said bond all the moneys in the hands of the said guardian, as guardian of the said minor, when he arrives at full age, then the said mortgage and bond should cease and be void," it created no trust for the benefit of the minor, but the mortgagees were the absolute owners of the mortgage, having the legal and beneficial interest therein, and the property of the tutor,²¹ and it arises also in certain other instances.²² The mortgage operates not only against the tutor,²³ but also against those who intermeddle in the minor's estate.²⁴ It operates from the day of the tutor's appointment right to treat it as their own. Miller v. Wack, 1 N. J. Eq. 204.

21. Merrick Rev. Civ. Code, art. 322. And see Schneider v. Burns, 45 La. Ann. 875, 13 So. 175.

Necessity for registration.—The legal mortgage of minors on the property of their tutors is good as against the tutors, their heirs, or partners in community without being registered (Brown v. Bessou, 30 La. Ann. 734), but not as against third persons (Taylor v. Ealer, 22 La. Ann. 278. It was formerly otherwise. Pike v. Monget, 4 La. Ann. 227).

Requisites of record.—In order that the property of a tutor be affected with a tutorship mortgage, the fact of the tutorship and the name of the tutor must appear of record. Zeigler v. Creditors, 49 La. Ann. 144, 21 So. 666.

Effect of record.—The recording of an abstract of an inventory of a deceased wife of a person named fixes the presumption of the existence of minors whose rights are preserved by the recording thereof, and is sufficient notice to third persons of the existence of a tacit mortgage resting upon the property of the survivor in favor of the minors. Donnell v. Gant, 24 La. Ann. 189.

Reinscription.—The mortgages in favor of minors on the property of their tutors or curators are expressly excepted from the provision of the civil code which declares that the effect of the registry of a mortgage ceases after ten years, reckoning from its date, unless reinscribed before the expiration of that period. Sauvinet v. Landreaux, 1 La. Ann. 219. Hence an inscription of a minor's mortgage preserves the mortgage during the tutorship, and although it should continue for more than ten years after its determination, the mortgage will not perempt, and this is so even if the mortgage is evidenced by a judgment recognizing it and fixing its amount. Lemelle v. Thompson, 34 La. Ann. 1041. So where a ward, on arriving at majority, has liquidated a mortgage by judgment against his tutrix, inscription of the judgment preserves the mortgage without reinscribing the act of inventory. Smith v. Johnson, 35 La. Ann. 943. Where the legal mortgage of a minor on the property of his tutor was originally inscribed after his majority, however, failure to reinscribe within ten years, as directed by Civ. Code, art. 3369, operates a peremption, and it cannot be enforced against property formerly belonging to the tutor in the hands of a third possessor. Lusk v. Powell, 38 La. Ann. 616.

22. Broussard v. Segura, 35 La. Ann. 912 (holding that a tutor's affidavit stating with necessary facts his indebtedness to his ward is a valid registry of the ward's tacit mortgage, as effectual as if an extract from the inventory had been registered); Massey v.

Steege, 12 La. Ann. 78 (adjudication of common property as giving rise to mortgage). See also Sauvinet v. Landreaux, 1 La. Ann. 219, construing a former statute. See, however, Boudreau v. Boudreau, 23 La. Ann. 57.

Specific money judgment.—Where an account of a natural tutrix is homologated by a specific money judgment, its registry constitutes a mortgage on the property of the tutrix. Smith v. Lewis, 45 La. Ann. 1457, 14 So. 221; Smith v. Johnson, 35 La. Ann. 943.

23. Guillemin's Succession, 2 La. Ann. 634 (holding that a foreigner residing in Louisiana at his wife's death becomes of right natural tutor, and his real estate in that state becomes subject to the minor's tacit mortgage); Bernard v. Vignaud, 10 Mart. (La.) 482, 1 Mart. N. S. 1 (holding that a testamentary tutor who accepts subjects his estate to a tacit mortgage).

24. New Orleans Ins. Co. v. Tio, 15 La. Ann. 174; Nolte v. His Creditors, 8 Mart. N. S. (La.) 366 (holding that a single act by which one appropriates the minor's funds to his own use creates the mortgage); Bernard v. Vignaud, 10 Mart. (La.) 482, 1 Mart. N. S. 1 (holding that if one acts as tutor on several occasions where only a tutor should, drawing and receipting for money, his property becomes mortgaged as if he were duly appointed).

However, a minor cannot claim a legal mortgage on the property of a person who interferes with the administration of his estate, unless the person so interfering was domiciliated in Louisiana and the property was within its jurisdiction. New Orleans Ins. Co. v. Tio, 15 La. Ann. 174. And the legal mortgage does not arise against one who, having become on condition of administering the property the tutor's surety, receives from the latter funds of the minor which he fails to pay over, since having received them with the tutor's consent he is not an intermeddler. De Armas' Succession, 2 Rob. (La.) 445.

Foreign tutor.—Where a person was appointed guardian to a minor by the courts of another state, and subsequently removed to Louisiana, bringing the minor with him, thereby changing the domicile of the minor, and obtained possession of the effects of the minor in a fiduciary capacity, the minor had his tacit mortgage. Leverich v. Adams, 15 La. Ann. 310. But the minor's mortgage, so far as tacit, is confined to tutors appointed in Louisiana, or who, appointed abroad, come to Louisiana to live. Prats v. His Creditors, 2 Rob. (La.) 501.

Second husband of tutrix.—Where a widow, being the tutrix of her minor children, marries a second time, and does not call a family meeting to determine whether she shall remain tutrix, the children of the previous marriage have a legal mortgage on the propuntil the settlement and liquidation of his final account;²⁵ and it secures an accounting for all property of the minor²⁶ received by the tutor in his representative capacity.²⁷ The mortgage attaches to any immovable property²⁸ to which the tutor has or acquires title²⁹ in the course of the administration of the estate,³⁰ and it is not defeated by a transfer of the property by the tutor.³¹ The mortgage erty of the new husband for the acts of the tutrix (Keene v. Guier, 27 La. Ann. 232; Kenner v. Holliday, 19 La. 154), but if she first obtains the consent and approval of a family meeting she retains the tutorship, and her second husband becomes the co-tutor to the minors by a former marriage, and the property of the co-tutor is not under legal mortgage for the faithful administration of the tutorship (Hatcher v. Jackson, 21 La. Ann. 737).

25. Merrick Rev. Civ. Code, art. 3314. And see Major v. Creditors, 46 La. Ann. 367, 15 So. 8; Schneider v. Burns, 45 La. Ann. 875, 13 So. 175; Skipwith v. Glathary, 34 La. Ann. 28; Mille v. Dupuy, 21 La. Ann. 53; Perret v. Roussel, 19 La. Ann. 174.

Natural tutor.—The minor's mortgage dates from the tutorship, and so in case of natural tutorship from the death of the deceased parent. Montegut v. Trouart, 7 Mart. (La.) 361.

Testamentary tutor.—One who, appointed testamentary tutor, attends and subscribes the inventory, thereby accepts, and the tacit lien attaches from that day to his property. Bernard v. Vignaud, 10 Mart. (La.) 482, 1 Mart. N. S. 1.

Foreign tutor see infra, note 30.

26. Triche's Succession, 34 La. Ann. 1148, holding that debts due from a tutor individually to himself in his fiduciary capacity, when they become due during the term of the tutorship, are considered as collected by him, and are secured by the legal mortgage.

However, the debt due by a former tutor on account of sums collected by him after the emancipation by marriage of the minor is not secured either by the tutorship mortgage, or by the mortgage created by Merrick Rev. Civ. Code, art. 3315, in a case where there is no necessary connection between the after gestion and the administration as tutor, and where the duration of the gestion, the sums paid the ward, and all the facts proved a knowledge and consent on the part of the ward, thus creating an implied tacit mandate. Romero's Succession, 31 La. Ann. 721. And where, on a ward's attaining his majority, a liquidation of the tutor's debt is agreed on and time of payment extended, the legal mortgage cannot be held as security for interest accruing on the liquidated debt during the period of extension. Perret v. Roussel, 19 La. Ann. 174.

27. Woolfolk v. Woolfolk, 20 La. Ann. 513, holding that a tacit mortgage in favor of a minor attaches only where the property is received in the capacity of tutor.

28. Simpson v. His Creditors, 10 La. 170; Welman v. Welman, 5 Mart. (La.) 574, both holding that the mortgage attaches to immovables only.

29. Manson's Succession, 51 La. Ann. 130, 25 So. 639 (holding that the mortgage in favor of minors on the property of their natural tutors attaches to the property of the tutors, and not to that only apparently belonging to them); Rind v. Fluker, 22 La. Ann. 482 (holding that the tacit mortgage does not attach to property that has come into the possession of the tutor under a deed from a party who had no title to convey). See, however, Mereier v. Canonge, 8 La. Ann. 37.

Adjudication of common property.—Merrick Rev. Civ. Code, art. 343, declares "that, whenever the father or mother of a minor has property in common with them, they each can cause it to be adjudicated to them, . . . and . . . the property so adjudicated shall remain specially mortgaged for the security of the payment of the price of the adjudication and the interest thereon." Where such adjudication takes place, the right of mortgage is not restricted to the individual share of the minor, but the whole property remains specially mortgaged for the security of the payment of the price of the adjudication. Massey v. Steeg, 12 La. Ann. 78, 79.

30. Skipwith v. Glathary, 34 La. Ann. 28, holding that the mortgage affects all the immovable property of the tutor from the day of his appointment, even the property which he sold before the rights of the minor against him had arisen.

Foreign tutor.—If a foreign guardian removes to Louisiana, the tacit mortgage exists only for sums received after his arrival. Prats v. His Creditors, 2 Rob. (La.) 501.

31. Abraham v. Lob, 35 La. Ann. 377 (holding that where a tutor sells at private sale his individual share of a piece of real estate against which his minor's mortgage stands recorded, the share is transferred burdened with the encumbrance, which continues to attach thereto until removed); Skipwith v. Glathary, 34 La. Ann. 28.

However, where a tutor sells a lot of ground belonging to him individually on which a legal mortgage existed in favor of his pupil, taking a note payable to himself individually for the price, and without any legal transfer of the note to his pupil sues on it as tutor, and recovers a judgment as such with a special mortgage on the property, and receives from the purchaser of the property at a sale subsequently made by the sheriff the amount of a note given for the price, the tacit mortgage in favor of the minor is thereby annulled. Pike v. Monget, 4 La. Ann. 227. And a ward, after a settlement accepting the tutor's individual obligation in lieu of the security of his bond, is superior to all privileges and mortgages subsequently imposed on the tutor's property,³² and the rights of the minor thereunder are transferable on his reaching majority.³³ As a rule there must be a final accounting and settlement between the tutor and minor before the mortgage can be enforced,³⁴ and the mortgage cannot be enforced against a third possessor until the tutor's present estate has been exhausted.³⁵ The code prescribes no time within which an action to enforce a minor's mortgage must be brought.³⁶ The gratuitous renunciation of his mortgage by a minor, assisted by his curator, is absolutely null;³⁷ nor can a tutor seeking a discharge from his debts subject the minor to the insolvency laws so as to cancel the mortgage;³⁸ and the syndics of an insolvent tutor cannot release the minor's mortgage on property sold by the tutor previous to his loses all recourse on property of the tutor which has passed into the bona fide ownership of a third person. Kelly v. Sandidge, 30 La. Ann. 1190.

Partition of common property.—Where land of which a minor owns one undivided share and his natural tutor the other is sold to effect a partition, the legal mortgage of the minor cannot be referred to the proceeds of sale, but the mortgage remains attached to the tutor's portion until removed by special mortgage or extinguished by a settlement with the minor upon his becoming of age, the purchaser meanwhile holding such share subject to the mortgage, and retaining in his hands the price of the tutor's share. Life Assoc. of America v. Hall, 33 La. Ann. 49. So a sale of real estate under a consent decree for partition purposes, where one of the parties is a tutor, does not discharge the legal mortgage on the tutor's property. Lecarpentier v. Lecarpentier, 5 La. Ann. 497. And a tutrix who is the widow in community and who administers the succession as tutrix cannot destroy the minor's mortgage on her undivided half of the property by a sale of the succession property as that of the minors. Lyman v. Stroudbach, 47 La. Ann. 71, 16 So. 662.

32. Citizens' Bank v. Fluker, 23 La. Ann. 567; Laplace v. Haydel, 19 La. Ann. 363; Rochford v. Geraghty, 10 La. Ann. 429; Harty v. Harty, 2 La. 518; Andrews v. Ackerson, 8 Mart. N. S. (La.) 205.

However, judicial mortgages acquired by third persons on the faith of a decree of a competent court commuting the minor's general mortgage and never attacked will be satisfied before the latter. Rhodes v. Union Bank, 7 Rob. (La.) 63; Lesassier v. Dashiell, 17 La. 194; Le Blanc v. His Creditors, 16 La. 120. And an unliquidated legal mortgage arising in favor of a minor against their father as tutor from his having appropriated to his own use the proceeds of real estate which was the separate property of their mother will not prevent a sale of the tutor's property by his judgment creditor under special mortgage. Laplace v. Haydel, 19 La. Ann. 363. In case of adjudication to the surviving father or mother of property held in common with the minor, any one whose rights are affected by such mortgage may require that the exact amount of the tutor's indebtedness to the minors be judicially ascertained. Massey v. Steeg, 12 La. Ann. 78.

33. Perret v. Roussel, 19 La. Ann. 174, holding that a ward, after attaining majority, on assignment of the debt of his tutor to him, which by agreement between them has been liquidated, may transfer with it the legal mortgage, which by the terms of the agreement of liquidation has been retained as security for payment of the debt.

34. Gibbs v. Lum, 29 La. Ann. 526; McHugh v. Stewart, 12 La. Ann. 361; Gilbert v. Burg, 7 Rob. (La.) 15; Holmes v. Hemken, 6 Rob. (La.) 51.

However, a judgment in favor of a minor, rendered on an opposition made by him to a tableau of distribution presented by the curatrix of his deceased tutor, ordering the minor to be placed thereon for the amount claimed and recognizing his general mortgage, is a sufficient settlement of his tutor's accounts to warrant an order for the seizure and sale of property in the hands of third persons and subject to the general mortgage in favor of the minor. Gilbert v. Burg, 7 Rob. (La.) 15. And the rule requiring a settlement of the accounts does not apply where the tutor has abandoned his trust and left the country, thereby rendering it impossible to make demand upon him or settlement with him. Trezevant v. Holly, 24 La. Ann. 566. It is not a condition precedent to an hypothecary action by a ward, on reaching his majority, to subject the property of third persons to his legal mortgage, that the tutor's account be first advertised and homologated contradictorily with creditors and others concerned. Skipwith v. Glathary, 34 La. Ann. 28.

35. McHugh v. Stewart, 12 La. Ann. 361. Burden of proof.—In an action to enforce the tacit mortgage of a minor against real estate held by a third person under a title derived from the tutor, the burden of proving that there is other property first liable for plaintiff's claim is upon such third person. Alva v. Jamet, 4 La. Ann. 353.

36. Terrio v. Guidry, 5 La. Ann. 589; Delahoussaye v. Dumartrail, 4 La. 368.

If, however, the minor fails to demand an accounting within four years after reaching his majority, the debt of the tutor is extinguished and the general mortgage falls with it. Aillot v. Aubert, 20 La. Ann. 509.

37. Delahoussaye v. Dumartrail, 4 La. 368.

38. Major v. Her Creditors, 46 La. Ann. 367, 15 So. 8, holding that the tutor cannot bring the minors before the meeting of the creditors by assuming to vote for them.

failure.³⁹ The mortgage may be divested under a special statute,⁴⁰ and in a proper case by the court;⁴¹ but the fact that a judgment homologating the tutor's account does not mention the mortgage does not affect it;⁴² and a renunciation of the mortgage is not to be presumed.⁴³

3. Special Mortgage. The civil code authorizes the giving of a special mortgage by the tutor in substitution for the general mortgage arising by operation of law.⁴⁴ When the special mortgage is given, all the tutor's property save that specially mortgaged is released.⁴⁵ The special mortgage protects the minor ordinarily only to the extent of the amount specified therein.⁴⁶ Conditions

39. Dorfeuille v. Duplessis, 2 La. 484.

40. Lobrano v. Nelligan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 295, 19 L. ed. 694.

41. Leeds v. Jones, 37 La. Ann. 427, holding that on a rule by a judgment creditor it is competent for the court to order the cancellation of a minor's general mortgage inscribed against his tutor upon a showing that such mortgage has been legally and properly substituted by a special mortgage by the natural tutor in a sum accruing to the minor after a liquidation of the community. See, however, Fleetwood v. Bordis, 19 La. Ann. 55, where the cancellation was held void.

Parties to rule.—In a rule to cancel the inscription of a mortgage in favor of minors against their natural tutor and to invest the community to which the latter was a party with ownership of immovable property which stands in the name of the minors alone, their interests are in opposition to those of their tutor; hence he is not competent to represent them in that litigation, and their undertutor should be notified. Ashbey v. Ashbey, 41 La. Ann. 138, 5 So. 546. But an undertutor has no power to represent the minor in a rule taken by a third person to erase the general legal mortgage of the minor on certain property of the tutor in a case where there is no opposition of interest between the minor and the tutor, and a judgment to erase in such a rule is an absolute nullity. In re Fortier, 31 La. Ann. 50.

42. Taylor v. Marshall, 43 La. Ann. 1060, 10 So. 368.

43. Newell v. Buchner, 24 La. Ann. 185, holding that a mortgage given by an heir on his interest in his mother's estate to secure a debt of his father to a third person is not a relinquishment of his legal mortgage on the property of his father for debts due him by his father as tutor.

44. Merrick Rev. Civ. Code, arts. 325, 332, 333. Formerly the right to give a special mortgage did not extend to a natural tutor, such as a father or mother. McCall v. Mercier, 1 La. 343.

Proceedings for special mortgage.—Where a tutor presents a petition to the court praying that a special mortgage which he tenders to secure the rights of the minors may be accepted and the tacit mortgage annulled, he is entitled to a formal judgment on his petition; and this judgment must be entered on the minutes of the court, and reduced to writing and signed by the judge. State v. Judge Second Dist. Ct., 15 La. Ann. 164. The homologation of the family meeting's deliberations does not complete the proceedings; if the subsequent formalities are not observed the tacit mortgage is intact. Lesassier v. Dashiell, 17 La. 194. The tutor may give a special for the general mortgage without the consent of the family meeting, whose only duty is to appraise the property to be mortgaged. Lesassier v. Dashiell, supra; State v. Pitot, 2 La. 534.

Special mortgage by third person.—The special mortgage authorized to be given by the natural tutor in lieu of a general mortgage on all his property must be executed by the tutor on his own property, and cannot be given by a third person for him. Nusbaum's Succession, 34 La. Ann. 900.

The minor's mortgage on common property adjudicated to the surviving parent cannot be commuted by the substitution of another mortgage on other property. Musson v. Olivier, 7 Mart. N. S. (La.) 98.

45. Peirce v. McMahan, 15 La. 218.

The general mortgage is extinguished as to third persons by the special mortgage (Barnard v. Erwin, 2 Rob. (La.) 407; Lesassier v. Dashiell, 14 La. 467, 17 La. 194; Casanova v. Avengno, 9 La. 192), so holding even though there be error in fixing the amount as due by the tutor, even as to the land specially mortgaged (Brusle v. Hamilton, 26 La. Ann. 144. Contra, McDaniel v. Guillory, 23 La. Ann. 544). But this rule does not apply to a special mortgage stipulated on an adjudication of property owned by a natural tutor and the minor in common. Dodds v. Lanaux, 45 La. Ann. 287, 12 So. 345; Isaacson v. Mentz, 33 La. Ann. 595; Guillet v. Juré, 15 La. Ann. 417.

Fraud.—If the special mortgage is based on a homologated account of the tutor that is false and fraudulent on its face, the giving of the special mortgage and the release of the general mortgage, although sanctioned by advice of a family meeting and a decree of court, is void, not only as against the tutor's successor, but also as against any creditor of his cognizant of the fraudulent character of the homologated account. Elliott v. Elliott, 31 La. Ann. 31.

Reinstatement of general mortgage.—After the commutation the court cannot, on depreciation of the property specially mortgaged, set aside its final decree and reinstate the legal mortgage. Union Bank v. Erwin, 2 La. Ann. 657.

46. Kuntz's Succession, 34 La. Ann. 852, holding that even interest cannot be recovered under the mortgage beyond its amount, precedent to the enforcement of the special mortgage,⁴⁷ and the proceedings therefor,⁴⁸ are largely governed by statute.

Q. Liability of Guardian on Contracts Made With Third Person — 1. ON CONTRACTS MADE BY GUARDIAN. The general rule is well settled that a guardian cannot by his contract bind either the person or estate of his ward; and on all contracts made by him in the interest of and for the benefit of the ward, whether for his support and maintenance or in the management of his estate, the guardian is personally and solely liable.⁴⁹ The guardian may, however, be authorized by a court of competent jurisdiction to bind his ward by a contract. In but that if prior to a final settlement the minors have collected under a judgment or otherwise a part of the amount due them, they cannot be compelled to deduct such amount from the amount due under the mortgage, where the final settlement shows that there is still due them an amount equal to the mortgage. See, however, Barnard v. Erwin, 2 Rob. (La.) 407, holding that the amount named in the mortgage by the tutor does not conclude the minor, who may open the account on the final settlement, and enforce the true balance on the property specially mortgaged.

47. Ritter v. Faessel, 34 La. Ann. 416, holding that a special mortgage executed by a natural tutor to secure the rights of minor children and the performance of his duties as tutor cannot be enforced in the absence of evidence that the minors had attained majority, and that a family meeting had been convened and had been notified of the intention to sell the property.

48. Aron's Succession, 48 La. Ann. 817, 19 So. 763, holding that where a special mortgage has been given by a husband as natural tutor to secure the rights of minor children in the community property on the death of the wife, and the minors on attaining majority proceed by action for the sale of the mortgaged property, and the court decrees a sale thereof, the decree certified to the sheriff is a sufficient warrant for the sale without the issuance of a fieri facias.

Executory proceedings.—The special mortgage given by a tutor to his ward does not import a confession of judgment for any specific amount; and an order of seizure and sale to foreclose such mortgage is invalid, and will be set aside, where there is nothing in the record showing the amount of the indebtedness. Ritter v. Faessel, 34 La. Ann. 416; Linn v. Dee, 31 La. Ann. 217.

To pay one of the minors at majority, the property specially mortgaged must be sold subject to the mortgage of the other minors; to sell it for cash and pay the amount due the latter to the tutor would defeat the very object of the mortgage. Barnard v. Erwin, 2 Rob. (La.) 407.

Title of purchaser.—Where property encumbered with a special mortgage given by a natural tutor in favor of minor children is sold at the instance of the children on some of them attaining majority, but before others of them have become of age, a title free of encumbrance will pass to the purchaser upon his paying the whole of the price into court, there to remain until the tutor of the minor children may give bond to secure their rights in the fund. Aron's Succession, 48 La. Ann. 817, 19 So. 763.

doing so, however, he is not exercising a power belonging to his office but an extraordinary power conferred for the special purpose.⁵⁰ He may also bind the estate of the ward by contract if there is statutory authority therefor,⁵¹ and some decisions have recognized important exceptions to the rule. A contract by a guardian with an attorney for services which could be performed by any person of ordinary business capacity, which contract was not authorized by the probate court, is binding on the guardian individually, and not on the estate of the minors for whom she is guardian. Moore v. Bannerman, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 825.

Marriage articles entered into between the guardians of an infant female and her intended husband, to which she is not a party, are of no obligatory force upon her. Healy v. Rowan, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 414, 52 Am. Dec. 94.

Contracts before appointment.—Before appointment as guardian, a person has no authority to bind the estate of those who subsequently become his wards. Huntsman v. Fish, 36 Minn. 148, 30 N. W. 455.

A guardian by nature, having no right to manage the estate, can make no contracts in regard to it. Jones v. Jones, 46 Iowa 466; Young v. Gammel, 4 Greene (Iowa) 207.

may bind the estate for medical services for the ward.⁵³ So if the guardian specially stipulates that only his ward shall be chargeable for necessities furnished the ward he is not personally liable therefor.⁵⁴ Notwithstanding the ward cannot be held liable at the instance of the party contracting with the guardian, the ward's estate is liable to reimburse the guardian for all reasonable expenditures made for his benefit.⁵⁵

2. ON CONTRACTS MADE BY WARD.⁵⁶ A contract made by an infant, under the power of a guardian and by his express consent, is binding upon the guardian,⁵⁷ but not otherwise.⁵⁸

R. Presentation and Allowance of Claims in Probate Court.⁵⁹ In the absence of constitutional or statutory provisions authorizing it, the probate court has no power to hear or allow claims against the guardian, as such, or against the estate of the ward,⁶⁰ and an allowance by the probate court of such a claim is a nullity.⁶¹ Creditors must pursue the courses open to them at common law.⁶² Nevertheless, under the constitutional and statutory provisions in some states, it is held that the probate court may allow and order payment of claims for necessary services performed for the infant's benefit under the contract with the guardian.⁶³ So under the statutes in other jurisdictions, it is held that the court may

That the contract was necessary to proper management of the ward's person or estate must be shown in order to render it enforceable. Randlett v. Gordy, 32 La. Ann. 904; McIntosh v. Kelly, 31 La. Ann. 649; Woodbridge v. Pope, 22 La. Ann. 293; Carroll v. Doughty, 21 La. Ann. 374; Sandford v. Waggaman, 14 La. Ann. 852; Urquhart v. Scott, 12 La. Ann. 674; Miltenberger v. Elam, 11 La. Ann. 667.

Basis of liability.—To make a guardian responsible for the act of his ward, he must be in some way connected with it, and it must be shown to have been done by his directions, or with his assent. It is not sufficient to show that he had previously allowed the ward to make contracts in relation to his own property. Camp v. Dill, 27 Ala. 553.

Reason for rule.—Where there is no statute authorizing the allowance of creditors' claims in the probate court, it is evident that the legislature intended to prohibit proceedings in the probate court by creditors to establish claims arising in contracts with their guardian. Harter v. Miller, 67 Kan. 468, 73 Pac. 74.

Applications of rule.—The probate court has no power to compel a guardian, on a petition by counsel, to pay for professional services rendered in that and another court for an infant ward. The remedy is by action against the ward on the guardian's bond. Willard v. Lavender, 147 Mass. 15, 60 N. E. 582.

Reason for rule.—If there is a right of recovery against the estate of the ward, it

allow and order payment of claims for support and education of the ward;⁶⁴ and in one jurisdiction any legal or equitable claim against the estate of the ward may be allowed by the probate court, and an order for payment thereof out of the trust estate may be made if the court in the exercise of its discretion sees fit to do so.⁶⁵ No summons is required to obtain jurisdiction of the parties for the adjudication of claims duly filed against the estate.⁶⁶ If a contract for services necessary for the estate of the ward provides for payment out of the estate, the fact that the guardian signs it in an individual as well as a representative capacity does not make him a necessary party to a proceeding for its allowance, where the contract is not intended to bind him personally.⁶⁷ If a contract for services to the ward's estate before it was acted upon was approved by the county court, in the petition for allowance of the claim for the amount due thereunder, addressed to the same court or the district court on appeal, it is not necessary to allege that the compensation provided for in the contract is reasonable.⁶⁸ If the claim presented has been previously disallowed by the court, it is the duty of the guardian to call the court's attention to its previous action.⁶⁹ Entry of approval of a claim against the ward's estate on the claim docket, which is by statute expressly made a record book of the court, is an entry on the "records of the court," and entry on the minutes of the court is unnecessary.⁷⁰ Claims which have been duly established by the probate court are not subject to be revised and disallowed by a bill of review; the remedy of the party aggrieved is by appeal.⁷¹

is perfectly competent to pursue it in the court which has control over the person and estate of the minor, and the person and accounts of the guardian. Price's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 410, 9 Atl. 456.

Compensation measured by value of real estate.—The fact that compensation is to be measured by the value of the real estate of the ward, and, if allowed, the claim must be paid out of the real estate, for want of personal property, does not make such proceeding an action concerning real property, so as to deprive the county court, as the court of probate, of jurisdiction. McCoy v. Lane, 66 Nebr. 847, 92 N. W. 1010.

Guardian under will probated in another state.—The orphans' court has jurisdiction to make an allowance for support of a minor whose father died in California, where the will appointing a guardian was probated, after probate in Pennsylvania; the guardian, ward, and estate being in the latter state. Mayer's Estate, 10 Wkly. S. Powers and Duties of Representatives of Deceased Guardians.⁷²

The guardianship is a personal trust, and its duties, responsibilities, and rights are not transmitted to his legal representatives,⁷³ who have no power to invest the ward's funds,⁷⁴ but only to hold and account for them and turn them over to the party legally entitled to them,⁷⁵ who is the succeeding guardian if one has been appointed and he should turn over to him such funds without demand.⁷⁶ He is responsible only for such assets as have come into his hands.⁷⁷ He cannot discharge the general indebtedness of the guardian to the ward by setting apart certain effects of the guardian's estate for that purpose.⁷⁸ He has no authority to release the lien of a judgment in derogation of the interests of the wards.⁷⁹ He will not be permitted to make a charge for the care of the infant's property, where the guardian made no such charge in his annual returns.⁸⁰ Where a guardian charged himself with cash received for his wards, part of which was actually securities, and his representative assigns the securities to the succeeding guardian, leaving a balance still due the wards, and the estate of the first guardian is insolvent, in distributing his assets, the dividend should be made on the balance due the wards after deducting the securities assigned.⁸¹ The administrator of a deceased guardian is not entitled to commissions on paying over to the ward a sum due from his intestate to the ward.⁸²

V. JUDICIAL SALES AND CONVEYANCES.

A. Sales — 1. NECESSITY OF SECURING ORDER OF COURT. As already shown a guardian has no authority to sell the real estate of his ward without an order of court,⁸³ and such order he must obtain from a court having competent jurisdiction.⁸⁴

2. JURISDICTION — a. Of Courts of Equity. There is considerable conflict of authority as to the power of courts of equity to order a sale of an infant's land. Many English and some American decisions hold that such courts have no inherent jurisdiction to direct the sale of an estate of an infant.⁸⁵ Nevertheless the weight of authority, at least so far as the American decisions are concerned, estate is conclusive under a statute providing that the action of the county court in approving or disapproving a claim shall have the force and effect of a judgment.

Reversal of decree making improvident allowance.—Where there is an entire absence of proof that any services were performed for which an allowance should have been made, a decree making an allowance will be reversed as improvidently made. Vaughn v. Tealey, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1900) 63 S. W. 236.

Lord Hardwicke says: "There is no instance of this court's binding the inheritance of an infant by any discretionary act of the court. As to personal things, as in the composition of debts, it has been done; but never as to the inheritance; for that would be taking on the court a legislative authority, doing that which is properly the subject of a pri-is that courts of equity, as the general guardians of infants within their jurisdiction, have an inherent power to order the sale of an infant's real estate whenever it is beneficial to him.⁸⁶ So in some states jurisdiction is expressly conferred by statute.⁸⁷ But in one of them the court said that the inherent jurisdiction of a court of equity is more comprehensive than that provided and regulated by statute.⁸⁸

b. Of Probate Courts. Courts of probate, being courts of limited jurisdiction, deriving their power solely from constitutional or statutory provisions, have no jurisdiction to decree a sale of an infant's real estate in the absence of such authorization.⁸⁹ Nevertheless constitutional and statutory provisions in many states confer jurisdiction on these courts to sell lands of infant wards for purposes enumerated in the statutes.⁹⁰ These statutes only confer jurisdiction in proceedings commenced after the statutes took effect.⁹¹ Statutes which confer on probate courts jurisdiction to order a sale of a ward's land for purposes of investment do not deprive a court of equity of its jurisdiction to order the sale vate bill." Taylor v. Philips, 2 Ves. 23, 28 Eng. Reprint 16.

The principal reason for denying this jurisdiction in England appears to be that changing the nature of the minor's estate from real to personal, or from personal to real, the rights of third persons who will become entitled in case of the minor's death, will be materially affected as in that country personal property descends in different channels. *Hale v. The reason for the rule existing in England does not obtain in this country, as here both species of property go by descent or distribution to the same persons. The interference of the court therefore, in sanctioning a conversion of the property from real to personal, or from personal to real, does not materially affect the rights of the persons who in case of the minor's death may become entitled to succeed to his estate. Hale v. Hale, 146 Ill. 227, 33 N. E. 858, 20 L. R. A. 247.

Provisions held to give jurisdiction.—The constitutional provision that county courts shall have a reasonable jurisdiction "in all matters of probate" gives them jurisdiction of sales of infants' lands by their guardians, the legislature having declared that a probate matter. *Winch v. of an infant's land for his maintenance;⁹² and in any event it is apprehended that statutes conferring jurisdiction on probate courts to order a sale of infants' land do not oust courts of equity of jurisdiction unless there is some express provision in the statutes to that effect.⁹³

c. Jurisdiction as Affected by Situs of Property or Domicile of Ward. In some states jurisdiction for a sale of a minor's land on application of his guardian is in the court of the county in which the land is situated,⁹⁴ although the guardian may have been irregularly appointed.⁹⁵ In other states the court of the county in which the guardian received his appointment has jurisdiction to order sales of wards' real estate, whether situated in that county or in another.⁹⁶ If a probate court appoints a guardian for an infant whose domicile and property are situated in another county, and orders a sale thereof, the sale is void for want of jurisdiction in the court to make the appointment and order of sale.⁹⁷ It has been held that a probate court of the state in which land is situated may order a sale of the land of a non-resident minor to provide for his education, where the statutes specially provide for the sending of money abroad for the education of non-resident minors;⁹⁸ but a probate court cannot for any purpose render an order for the sale of lands of infants in another state.⁹⁹ Where wards own lands in several counties, it is not necessary for the guardian to institute separate proceedings in the several counties in which the land is situated for the sale of the same, but an action may properly be instituted in any county where the ward has property or in the county in which the ancestor died, where the wards all live, and where much of the real estate is located.¹

3. WHAT PROPERTY OR INTERESTS MAY BE CONVEYED. A statute authorizing the guardian to sell part of the infant's real estate does not empower the court to decree a sale of the whole.² Trust estates devised to the ward may be sold.³ Future interests may be sold as well as estates in possession.⁴ Thus it is a well settled doctrine that when authorized by court the guardian may convey a reversionary estate,⁵ or an estate in remainder.⁶ An infant's homestead may be sold.⁷ Such a sale is not forced, but voluntary, and not in contravention of the homestead laws.⁸ The decisions are not altogether harmonious as to the effect of restrictions in a will against sales of realty devised to infants.⁹ A statute providing for the sale of a ward's interest in land descended to heirs jointly, where one or more of them are minors, and where a division cannot be made, does not apply where a guardian seeks to sell a two-fourths' undivided interest of wards' interest in lands, the other interest in which belongs to persons not their coheirs.¹⁰

4. PURPOSES FOR WHICH SALE MAY BE AUTHORIZED. The statutes of the various states authorize a sale of the infant's lands for purposes therein designated. Statutory authorization is necessary, and the courts have no power to order a sale, except for the purposes enumerated in the statutes.¹¹ One of the most usual purposes for which lands of a minor is authorized to be sold is the support, maintenance, and education of a minor;¹² and this will ordinarily be done where the income of the estate, and the corpus of the personal estate, is insufficient therefor.¹³ A sale also may be ordered for the purpose of reimbursing the guardian for funds already expended by him in their behalf,¹⁴ but after the guardianship has terminated, the court cannot empower the guardian to sell lands of his former wards to pay advances made by him for their education.¹⁵ Another purpose which is usually enumerated in the statute is a sale for reinvestment, and the power may be exercised when it is shown that a reinvestment will be beneficial to the interests of the wards.¹⁶ So in some jurisdictions a sale is authorized for

9. In Southern Marble Co. v. Stegall, 90 Ga. 236, 15 S. E. 806, it was held that where land is devised to minors by will directing that no sale take place until the youngest reaches majority, the court may nevertheless direct a sale if it is impossible to carry out the terms of the will. In Fitch v. Miller, 20 Cal. 352, it was held that where a will provides that the devisees shall each take out one half of his share when he shall come of age, and the other half when all the other devisees shall come of age, the estate of the wards is vested in them upon the death of the testator and may be sold, and the sale will transfer whatever estate the wards had to the purchaser. In Shipp v. Wheelless, 33 Miss. 646, it was held that where a will prohibited the division of realty devised to minors until the youngest becomes of age or is married, the court has no power to order a sale by the guardian, and that such sale conveys no title to the purchaser.

the purpose of distributing the proceeds among the joint owners.¹⁷ On the other hand it has been held that a sale cannot be ordered for the purpose of compromising litigated claims,¹⁸ or to obtain means to make improvements.¹⁹ Nor can a sale be ordered of land owned jointly by the ward and another for the purpose of partition.²⁰ Nor for the payment of debts of a deceased ward, since the death of the ward terminates the guardianship.²¹

5. GROUNDS FOR DENYING ORDER. It is a good ground to deny an order for sale that the title is in doubt, as this might deter bidders and sacrifice the property,²² or that sufficient proceeds would not be realized from the sale for the purpose for which the sale is asked.²³ And if the purpose of the sale is to pay the ward's debts, the order should be denied where the income would in a reasonable time pay the debts.²⁴ So a sale for the support and education of the ward will not be ordered where the effect of the sale would be to leave the ward in a destitute condition.²⁵ If it be clearly for the interest of a minor that his realty be sold and converted into money, the probate court will award an order of sale, although in the event of his death during minority the proceeds would go to other parties than those to whom the land would descend.²⁶

6. WHO MAY SECURE ORDER. Only the regular statutory or testamentary guardian, duly appointed or recognized by the court and having properly qualified, may secure an order for the sale or mortgage of lands of a minor under guardianship.²⁷ And an order granted to one who has never qualified is a

In Kentucky a statute authorizes a sale by proceedings in chancery of real estate owned jointly by two or more persons, and the same cannot be defeated without materially impairing its value, although some of the owners are infants. nullity.²³ The order cannot be obtained by the father or other natural guardian,²⁹ nor by a guardian whose appointment is for any reason void,³⁰ nor by the husband of an infant wife.³¹ Where the law separates the offices of guardian of an infant's person and curator of his estate, the latter is the proper individual to apply for the sale of the ward's estate.³²

7. PROCEEDINGS TO OBTAIN ORDER OF SALE — a. In General. To give a court jurisdiction to sell lands of an infant on application of his guardian therefor, there must be a strict compliance with the requirements of the statute under which the application is made;³³ otherwise an order for sale will be inoperative and the sale thereunder void.³⁴ Enough must appear either in the application or the order, or somewhere upon the face of the proceedings, to call upon the court to proceed to act;³⁵ but to support jurisdiction of the court, it is not necessary that evidence of the facts authorizing the sale should appear upon the record.³⁶

b. Parties — (i) IN GENERAL. In some jurisdictions the view is taken that a proceeding by a guardian to obtain a sale of the ward's real estate is not an adversary proceeding, and that it is not necessary to make the ward or any other person parties.³⁷ In other jurisdictions it has been held that the ward is a necessary party.³⁸ So it has been held that where a testamentary guardian files a petition to sell land devised to his ward, the executors should be made defendants.³⁹ In proceedings to sell land held under a will an appearance by the guardian and the filing of an answer by him gives the court jurisdiction over the infant.⁴⁰

(ii) GUARDIANS AD LITEM. In jurisdictions where the ward is not a necessary party no guardian ad litem need be appointed.⁴¹ But in jurisdictions where the guardian as defendant, the latter, for the purpose of securing the order, must be considered as himself petitioning for the sale. Lampton v. Usher, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 57. And see Newbold v. Schlens, 66 Md. 585, 9 Atl. 849.

c. The Application—(i) NECESSITY FOR APPLICATION. In order to render a guardian's sale of real estate, under order of the probate court, effectual to confer a valid title, the court must have acquired jurisdiction of the case by the presentation of a proper petition by the guardian.⁴³

In many jurisdictions it is held that in the absence of a statutory requirement notice is not required to be given upon application for the sale of the land of minors.⁴⁴ In some jurisdictions, however, the statutes require notice to be given to the ward,⁴⁵ and it has been held that a sale without such notice is absolutely void for want of jurisdiction,⁴⁶ not only as to the ward but as to all the parties to the proceeding,⁴⁷ and that the want of it is not cured by appearance of the ward, because minors can

Foreign guardians.—In Kentucky the civil code, section 35, provides that an action by a non-resident infant whose guardian is also a non-resident may be brought by such guardian. Section 490 provides that real estate jointly owned may be sold in an action brought by either of the owners, although one be an infant, if the share of each be worth less than one hundred dollars, or the property cannot be divided without impairing its value or the interest of plaintiff. It was held, in an action brought under section 490, where certain of the defendants were non-resident infants, whose non-resident guardian appeared and answered, that the appointment of a guardian ad litem was not necessary, and that, when the jurisdictional facts appeared as to the subject-matter, the court obtained jurisdiction of the persons of the infant defendants by the appearance and answer of the guardian. Shelby v. Harrison, 84 Ky. 144.

waive no rights.⁴⁸ So in some jurisdictions it is also provided by statute that notice shall be given to the next of kin and all other persons interested (including such persons as would be either immediate or remote heirs in case of the infant's death) to appear and show cause why an order to sell should not be made.⁴⁹ The giving of such notice is jurisdictional.⁵⁰ Statutes of this character do not require notice to the ward.⁵¹

(B) Requisites and Sufficiency. The guardian's attorney is a proper person to give the notice.⁵² The notice need not state the reasons why the order of sale should be asked.⁵³ While it is perhaps unnecessary for the notice to describe the land,⁵⁴ yet if it assumes to do so a misdescription will be fatal to the validity of the sale.⁵⁵ So if the notice states that the application will be made at a certain term and the application is made at a different term, the proceedings will be void for want of jurisdiction.⁵⁶ On the other hand mere defects in the notice of service thereof furnish no ground to set aside the sale on a collateral attack.⁵⁷ If notice is required to be published in a newspaper at least once in each week for three successive weeks or to be posted in three public places at least three weeks before the session of the court at which the application is to be made, it is sufficient if the notice is published for three successive weeks in a newspaper and the first publication is made three weeks before the session of the court.⁵⁸

(III) TIME OF APPLICATION. The application must be made at the term stated in the notice or the sale will be invalid.⁵⁹

(IV) REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY. The application must be in writing,⁶⁰ and may be filed either in the name of the guardian for the minors, naming them, or in the name of the minors by their guardian.⁶¹ If the names of the wards

Applications of rule.—If personal service is made the fact that this is not a compliance with the statute does not deprive the court of jurisdiction (Pursley v. Hayes, 22 Iowa 11, 92 Am. Dec. 350); so the fact that notice was served shortly before the guardian's appointment will not render the sale void (Hamiel v. Donnelly, 75 Iowa 93, 39 N. W. 210); and a slight variance between the notice and the petition designating the ward by name is not a jurisdictional defect and cannot be presented as an objection in a collateral proceeding (Pursley v. Hayes, 22 Iowa 11, 92 Am. Dec. 350); so it has been held that a certificate of publication of the notice giving the last names of the publishers is not insufficient because the christian names are not given (Reid v. Morton, 119 Ill. 118, 6 N. E. 414).

Omission of a formal averment that the proceeding is brought by plaintiff as guardian is not material where the bill states that plaintiff is guardian and the whole frame of the bill is in pursuance of what is required in such a case. Cooper v. Hepburn, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 551.

Where it appears that a person was duly appointed curatrix, an objection on the ground that the petition described her as guardian appear in the body thereof, although not in the caption, this will be sufficient.⁶² It should state the necessary jurisdictional facts and not merely the conclusions of the pleader.⁶³ It must contain a correct description of the property,⁶⁴ and also state where the ward resides.⁶⁵ The title papers under which the property is held or copies thereof must be filed with the petition if required by statute.⁶⁶ It must state the purpose for which the sale is asked,⁶⁷ the necessity or propriety of the sale,⁶⁸ and the condition of the estate and facts and circumstances tending to show that the sale is necessary or expedient.⁶⁹ If the petition states a sufficient will not be sustained where the order of approval of the sale recites that "now comes said curator or guardian and submits her report of sale." Mitchner v. Holmes, 117 Mo. 185, 22 S. W. 1070.

62. Revill v. Claxon, 12 Bush (Ky.) 558. Description of the wards as the "minor children" of a designated person deceased is not a jurisdictional defect. Pursley v. Hayes, 22 Iowa 11, 92 Am. Dec. 350.

If sufficient jurisdictional facts are stated the jurisdiction of the court is not affected by the fact that some of the statements are untrue (Lynch v. Kirby, 36 Mich. 238); nor by reason of the fact that the allegations are informal and defective (McKeever v. Ball, 71 Ind. 398).

When defective description will not invalidate proceedings.—It has been held that a defective description in the petition will not invalidate the sale where the description is specific in the order of sale (Scarf v. Aldrich, 97 Cal. 360, 32 Pac. 324, 33 Am. St. Rep. 190); so the proceeding will not be invalidated by manifestly false statements in the description when the remainder of the description is sufficiently certain to enable the land to be located (Hubermann v. Evans, 46 Nebr. 784, 65 N. W. 1045); and it has been held that failure to state the county or state in which the land is situated is not fatal on collateral attack (Howbert v. Bunce, 59 Iowa 533, 13 N. W. 705 (holding that a general allegation of necessity for the sale is sufficient).

Where the petition merely alleges that the guardian "believes it to be the interest of the ward" that his land be sold, he will not be authorized to sell it. Mohon v. Tatum, 69 Ala. 466.

The condition of the ward's estate need be set forth with such fulness only as will be sufficient to enable the court to judge of the existence of one or more of the circumstances specified in the statute rendering the sale necessary or expedient (Fitch v. Miller, 20 Cal. 352), and an express statement of one of the contingencies required by statute is not necessary if its existence can be inferred from the allegations of the petition (Smith v. Biscailuz, 83 Cal. 344, 21 Pac. 15, 23 Pac. 314; Fitch v. Miller, supra. And see Sprigg v. Stump, 8 Fed. 207, 7 Sawy. 280).

Sales for debt of ancestor.—The petition must allege that the debt to be satisfied is one against the ancestor and not simply a debt contracted by the ward or his guardian. Coffield v. McLean, 49 N. C. 15. Where a petition alleged that the debt was that of the ancestor for which the heir was liable, and the land was described by calling for co-terminous tracts and the court adjudged upon the evidence of a competent witness that the matters alleged in the petition were true and an order of sale was predicated thereon this was sufficient to support the sale. Bryan v. Manning, 51 N. C. 334.

Sales to procure better investment.—Where a statute authorizes the sale of a minor's land whenever a better investment of its value can be made, an application stating that it would be for the minor's interest to exchange his land for certain other land is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction to order a sale of the minor's land for cash (Nesbit v. Miller, 125 Ind. 106, 25 N. E. 148. Compare Womble v. Trice, 112 Ky. 533, 66 S. W. 370, 67 S. W. 9, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1939, holding that plaintiff should state facts showing that the sale will be advantageous and not merely his conclusions); and where a statute provides that the court may for just cause order a sale of the ward's land on being satisfied that the guardian has applied all the personal estate a petition filed solely to procure an order of sale of unproductive real estate that was being de-ground for sale the fact that another ground which is insufficient is stated will not render the petition defective.⁷⁰ Where the statute requires notice of sale to be published "for three weeks successively next before such sale," an allegation that notice was published "for three successive weeks previous" to the sale does not show a compliance with the statute.⁷¹ If the prayer of the petition is for an order of sale an order authorizing a mortgage of the property cannot be granted,⁷² and if the petition asks a sale for the purpose of paying debts the court has no jurisdiction to order a sale for maintenance or investment.⁷³ Where a statute provides for investment of the proceeds under order of court, a decree for sale will not be invalid because the bill contained no prayer for such investment.⁷⁴ The petition may be signed in the name of the guardian as such or in the name of the ward by his guardian,⁷⁵ or it may be signed in the name of the guardian by his attorney.⁷⁶ No verification is necessary unless required by statute,⁷⁷ and while a petition should be verified if there is a statutory provision to that effect,⁷⁸ it has been held that failure to verify the petition will not render it fatally defective,⁷⁹ nor the sale invalid as verification is not necessary to give the court jurisdiction.⁸⁰

d. Family Meeting. In Louisiana a tutor cannot sell succession property by order of court without the advice of a family meeting.⁸¹ The meeting may be had on the petition of the father of the child,⁸² and it seems that no petition is necessary if the tutor and all the members being present signed the deliberations together with the heirs of age.⁸³ The presence of the under-tutor at the meeting is indispensable.⁸⁴ If partially composed of persons who have interests in conflict with the minors, the meeting is not legally constituted.⁸⁵ Where the members of the proposed meeting named in the order therefor do not attend, the meeting may select others, who are not relatives when no relatives are present.⁸⁶

e. The Hearing. The guardian must establish the existence of the grounds preciated, for reinvestment in more desirable property, is not defective for failure to allege that the guardian had faithfully applied all the personalty (Orman v. Bowles, 18 Colo. 463, 33 Pac. 109. And see In re Hamilton, 120 Cal. 421, 52 Pac. 708).

Sale in lieu of foreclosure.—A petition by a guardian for leave to sell the real estate of his wards for the purpose of paying off a mortgage thereon should not be entertained unless there is something shown in the petition more than the mere opinion of the guardian, by which the court can see that such a sale would be more advantageous to the interest of the wards than a sale upon the foreclosure of the mortgage. Greenbaum v. Greenbaum, 81 Ill. 367.

Title acquired by a bona fide purchaser by a sale of the ward's real estate has been held not to be invalidated by the omission of the petition to state the condition of the ward's estate. Fender v. Powers, 67 Mich. 433, 35 N. W. 80.

stated in his petition,⁸⁷ but it has been held that the record need not show that evidence was offered for that purpose.⁸⁸ The court must ascertain and determine whether the facts requisite to the granting of the petition exist.⁸⁹ And if the petition asks for a sale the court should select the part or parts of the property which can be disposed of with the least injury to the ward.⁹⁰ The discretion of the court in the matter is not absolute but will be controlled when improperly exercised.⁹¹

f. Order or Decree—(1) REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY. The order or decree for the sale of the ward's land must be in compliance with the requirements of the statutes relating thereto.⁹² It must describe the property with sufficient certainty to identify the premises,⁹³ but any description by which the premises may be identified will be sufficient.⁹⁴ So if required by statute it must show the existence of facts authorizing a sale,⁹⁵ recite the giving of a special sale bond,⁹⁶ specify particularly what property may be sold,⁹⁷ fix terms for the payment of the purchase-price,⁹⁸ and provide that a notice of the sale be posted in the ward of the city where the property is situated.⁹⁹ While the time of the sale should be fixed, it is not necessary to fix the precise day or hour of sale.¹ And a provision that where sales by guardians have been made to bona fide purchasers all irregularities

It is not sufficient to describe property as one hundred acres more or less without giving any definite boundaries. Spruill v. Davenport, 48 N. C. 42.

The description cannot be aided by a reference to documents not contained in the order itself. Hill v. Wall, 66 Cal. 130, 4 Pac. 1139.

Statement held sufficient.—A decree reciting that, "on such hearing, the said guardian was examined on oath, and after a full examination, it appearing to this court that it would be for the benefit of said minor that said real estate be sold, and the proceeds of said sale be placed at interest, the said real estate being now unproductive and liable to heavy taxes," is a sufficient compliance with the statutory requirement that the general fact showing such necessity be stated in the decree. Smith v. Biscailuz, 83 Cal. 344, 355, 21 Pac. 15, 23 Pac. 314.

1. Campbell v. Harmon, 43 Ill. 18, holding that it will be sufficient to fix certain reason-shall be disregarded cures errors in an order for such a sale in specifying the place of sale.² The order need not contain any statements not required by statute,³ and unless required by statute it need not be recorded.⁴ If entered before the expiration of the time required by statute to elapse between the filing of the report and action on it, such action, although erroneous, does not render the order void.⁵ The fact that the order is irregular and defective will not be available as a ground to set aside the sale in a collateral proceeding,⁶ but if there is such irregularity as to render it liable to reversal the purchaser is under no obligation to comply with the terms of the sale.⁷

(II) CONSTRUCTION, OPERATION, AND EFFECT. If the order directs a sale to raise a specific sum it must be construed to mean such sum in addition to the expenses of the sale.⁸ The order operates only upon the interest of the ward in the land held by him at the time it is made.⁹ Nor does it operate in presenti and convert the land into assets in the hands of the guardian so as to prevent a judgment recovered against the ward intermediate the order of sale and the sale for operating as a lien on the land.¹⁰

(III) REVIEW. An order or decree rendered in proceedings for a sale of a ward's real estate is reviewable on appeal and error,¹¹ but not by certiorari.¹² A writ of error does not lie in behalf of one not a party to the proceedings.¹³ A decree will not be disturbed except for controlling reasons appearing of record.¹⁴

8. OATH AND APPRAISAL OF PROPERTY¹⁵—a. Oath. It is generally required by statute that the guardian before making a sale under order of court shall take an oath to conduct the sale according to law and in a manner most advantageous to those interested therein.¹⁶ If the oath is not taken at the time prescribed by able limits both as to the day and hour and that the guardian may exercise some discretion in a mode favorable to the ward's interest.

Parties defendant to writ.—Where the estate was sold on the petition of the infants by their natural guardian, and he has taken the place of the purchaser, by a transfer from him, and given his bond for the price, which remains unpaid, he and the first purchaser are the only necessary parties defendant to a writ of error, no other person appearing to have any interest. McKee v. Hann, 9 Dana (Ky.) 526.

14. Robinson's Appeal, 11 Pa. St. 414.

Presumptions.—Where the certificate of the publication of the notice of a guardian's application for an order to sell lands was in due form, except that it did not state that the newspaper was published in the county, it was held an error to reverse the decree; that as the court below could receive other evidence of that fact it would be presumed that it did so. Spellman v. Mathewson, 65 Ill. 306. So where the application to sell a minor's realty is defective in not alleging the sale to be necessary for his support or to pay his debts, but the order of the court shows that another petition was filed in the same proceeding, and further recites that it is necessary to sell the land, it will be presumed to have contained the necessary averments. Oaths held sufficient.—Where a guardian swears to conduct the sale as should be most for the advantage of the ward this is a sufficient compliance with a requirement that he statute the sale will be invalid, although the oath was taken before the sale was made,¹⁷ and if the statute requires that it be shown by record or otherwise that the guardian took the oath the fact cannot be presumed even after confirmation of the sale.¹⁸

b. Appraisal of Property. In a number of jurisdictions the statutes require an appraisal of the infant's real and personal property for the purpose of enabling the court to determine the necessity and propriety of a sale of the real property.¹⁹ This report must be full and explicit on the matter required by statute to be ascertained and set forth therein.²⁰ If the statute so requires, it must show that the estate valued and reported by them is all of the real and personal estate of the infant.²¹ So if the statute requires the report to state that the interests of the ward require the contemplated sale, a report stating that the sale will "redound to his interests" is insufficient.²² If the law requires the appraisers to be freeholders, it may be shown by parol that the appraisers, although described in their certificate as householders, are freeholders;²³ and even though the appraisers appointed have not the proper qualifications, this will not render the sale void on a collateral attack.²⁴ According to some decisions the report required by the statute is essential to the jurisdiction of the court, and a sale made without a report or on a report not complying with the statute is void.²⁵ It has been held, however, that the sufficiency of the report cannot be called in question in a collateral attack on the decree of sale.²⁶ So it has been held that a failure to sign the report does not render void the sale as against an innocent purchaser,²⁷ and where the report is substantially filed in court before confirmation of the sale, shall take an oath to conduct the sale which shall be most for the advantage of all interested therein. Frazier v. Steenrod, 7 Iowa 339, 71 Am. Dec. 447. And see Montour v. Purdy, 11 Minn. 384, 88 Am. Dec. 88.

What is sufficient proof of oath.—The fact that a guardian licensed to sell real estate filed the oath required by statute is sufficiently proved by such an oath, dated before the sale, found among the regular files of the probate court, although the fact or date of filing was not indorsed upon it by the probate judge. West Duluth Land Co. v. Kurtz, 45 Minn. 380, 47 N. W. 1134.

An oath taken and subscribed by an attorney is not a compliance with the statute. Levara v. McNeny, 5 Nebr. (Unoff.) 318, 98 N. W. 679.

In Nebraska the statutory requirement is held mandatory and a sale made without complying therewith void. Bachelor v. Korb, 58 Nebr. 122, 78 N. W. 485, 76 Am. St. Rep. 70; Levara v. McNeny, 5 Nebr. (Unoff.) 318, 98 N. W. 679.

17. Blackman v. Baumann, 22 Wis. 611. Compare Fender v. Powers, 67 Mich. 433, 35 N. W. 80, holding that the fact that the guardian did not subscribe the oath before sale does not invalidate the title acquired by a bona fide purchaser.

Applications of rule.—In applying this doctrine it has been held that a report which, after setting forth the value of the land proposed to be sold, states that "there is no other estate in this country belonging to the heirs known to them" is insufficient. Bell v. Clarke, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 573.

And see Strouse v. Drennan, 41 Mo. 289, holding that where the court makes an order of sale without appraisal, and also approves the sale on the day it is made, the sale will not be upheld. Compare Revill v. Claxon, 12 Bush (Ky.) 558; Lee v. Page, 12 Bush (Ky.) 202.

Limitations of rule.—The absence of the report required by statute will not render the sale void, where there is an affidavit filed by two persons setting forth the required facts, which was treated by the court and the parties as a report. Hendrickson v. Canter, 49 S. W. 188, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1258.

Want of appraisal as affecting liability on bond.—The fact that an appraisal was not made will not affect the liability on the sale bond. The guardian cannot hold money obtained from such sale, on the ground that a proper appraisal was not made. Corbaley v. State, 81 Ind. 62.

the marking of it filed by the clerk is not essential to the validity of the sale.²⁸ Although it may not appear from the record that the commissioners appointed to value land were sworn, it cannot be presumed that they were in fact sworn as the law required.²⁹

9. SPECIAL BOND FOR SALE. In perhaps a majority of jurisdictions the statutes require guardians to give a special bond for the faithful application of the proceeds of the sale.³⁰ A statute of this character is a collateral provision, complete in itself, and designed to be operative in cases not embraced in or contemplated by the original appointment of the guardian,³¹ and a bond given under this statute is primarily liable for the proceeds of the sale.³² In many jurisdictions it is held that a failure to give the required bond renders the sale void.³³ In others, however, it is held that the sale is not thereby rendered void,³⁴ and that the proceedings are simply erroneous.³⁵ The bond must be executed before the sale. It is not sufficient that it be executed afterward.³⁶ The conditions of the bond must

The Mississippi statute authorizes the court to require a special bond, but in the absence of such requirement no bond is necessary. Morton v. Carroll, 68 Miss. 699, 9 So. 896.

Under what circumstances statute not applicable.—Statutes requiring bond have no application where the sale is to be on credit, payments to be secured by the purchaser and the persons into whose hands the proceeds would thereafter come not having been ascertained (Talley v. Starke, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 339); nor is a bond necessary where the fund is within the control of the chancellor (Owens v. Cowan, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 152; Power v. Power, 15 S. W. 523, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 793); nor where by statutory provision the proceeds of the sale shall not be paid but shall remain a lien on the land bearing interest until the infant comes of age (*Shelby v. be in substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute,³⁷ or it will be fatally defective.³³ The bond must be approved and filed before the sale.³⁹ It must be approved by the court and not by a clerk thereof, and the sale is void where the only approval of the bond is by the clerk.⁴⁰ If, however, the bond has been approved, failure to enter the approval of record does not invalidate the sale,⁴¹ and if the court orders the filing of the bond approval will be presumed and the sale will not be invalidated because of the absence of a formal order of approval.⁴² The obligors on the bond are estopped by its recitals, admitting the due appointment of the guardian and his full authority to sell the ward's real estate.⁴³

10. THE SALE— a. Notice.⁴⁴ The statutes relating to judicial sales of an infant's real estate usually require a notice thereof ordinarily by publication in some newspaper or by posting, or by both methods, giving the description of the land and the time, place, and terms of the sale.⁴⁵ It has been held that a sale without

Conditions of bond held sufficient.—A bond conditioned "to comply with the decree of the court authorizing the sale and with the advice and direction of the court in relation to the premises" substantially complies with a statute requiring a bond conditioned that the guardian "will apply the proceeds of such sale to the purposes for which the same was allowed to be made," and invest or dispose the same as the court may direct. McGale v. McGale, 18 R. I. 675, 29 Atl. 967. So it has been held that a bond of the guardian conditioned "for the faithful discharge of his duties" is valid and binding. Stevenson v. State, 71 Ind. 52. And see Botkin v. Kleinschmidt, 21 Mont. 1, 52 Pac. 563, 69 Am. St. Rep. 641.

Amount of bond.—The special bond is not a "mere undertaking" but a writing obligatory and must be in such sum as the court shall direct. Goldsmith v. Gilliland, 23 Fed. 645, 10 Sawy. 606.

Number of sureties.—Although a statute requires a bond "with sufficient freehold sureties," the bond is not void because it has but one surety. Marquis v. Davis, 113 Ind. 219, 15 N. E. 251; Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 129 U. S. 86, 9 S. Ct. 237, 32 L. ed. 630. Contra, Isert v. Davis, 32 S. W. 294, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 686.

Who may act as surety.—A trust company acting as guardian may sign the bond by its president without being required to produce additional securities, where a statute so provides. Phalan v. Louisville Safety Vault, etc., Co., 88 Ky. 24, 10 S. W. 10, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 663.

Validity of the sale for want of sufficient security can only be contested by the ward or someone claiming under him. Goldsmith v. Gilliland, 23 Fed. 645, 10 Sawy. 606.

If the bond is referred to in the decree of sale as having been duly executed, it must be held to have been delivered to the judge, approved and filed before the sale, although not marked filed until after the sale. *Smith v. ditioned as the law requires," this is a sufficient approval.

43. Williamson v. Woodman, 73 Me. 163.

44. For form of notice held sufficient see Wyman v. Hooper, 2 Gray (Mass.) 141.

45. Description of property.—If the notice correctly describes the land by government subdivision and is published in the county where the land lies, failure to name the county and state does not render it void for uncertainty (Richardson v. Farwell, 49 Minn. 210, 51 N. W. 915); and where the notice describing the land to be sold at a guardian sale was published the required length of time, the fact that the petition included other tracts described in another notice not so published which were not sold does not affect the validity of the sale of the land advertised, although the land described in the petition was ordered sold (Orman v. Bowles, 18 Colo. 463, 33 Pac. 109).

Terms of sale.—The fact that a notice which is otherwise regular states that the terms of sale will not be made known at the time and place of sale does not render the notice invalid or make the sale void after confirmation by the court. Richardson v. Farwell, 49 Minn. 210, 51 N. W. 915.

Publication.—The validity of the sale is not affected by the publication of the notice for a longer period than required. Morton v. Carroll, 68 Miss. 699, 9 So. 896. If the statute requires publication for four weeks successively this does not require the notice to be given for four weeks next preceding the sale (Walker v. Goldsmith, 14 Oreg. 125, 12 Pac. 537); and a requirement that the notice be published three weeks successively does not require publication for three full weeks or twenty-one days (Frazier v. Steenrod, 7 Iowa 339, 71 Am. Dec. 447). So it has been held that notice published in each daily issue of a newspaper for the full period of twenty days complies with an order requiring publication once a week for three successive weeks. Orman v. Bowles, 18 Colo. 463, 33 Pac. 109. Where a statute requires giving notice is void.⁴⁶ But irregularities or defects in the notice or publication thereof render the sale merely irregular and not void.⁴⁷

b. Time and Place. A sale at a time other than that prescribed by the decree is void, even in the case of one acquiring title in good faith, unless the sale is formally approved.⁴⁸ If, however, the sale has been confirmed the sale is not even voidable as against a bona fide purchaser.⁴⁹ So where the sale was confirmed the fact that it was adjourned to a later date than fixed by the order and for a longer time than the statute permitted will not vitiate the sale.⁵⁰ If the statute requires the sale to be made at the court-house the court has no power to order a sale on the premises, and a sale in accordance therewith is invalid.⁵¹

c. Whether Private or Public. Under the statutes of some states a sale of a ward's land by order of the court may be private instead of public in the discretion of the court,⁵² but a private sale passes no title unless the court has statutory authority for directing one.⁵³ Such a sale is none the less void because a family meeting advised it and the judge homologated the proceedings of the meeting.⁵⁴ publication, "six weeks successively next before such sale," each week begins to run on the day of publication, and if fully six weeks' notice has been given and there is a fraction of a week left before the day of sale a notice need not be published on the last recurrence of publication day immediately before sale. Dexter v. Cranston, 41 Mich. 448, 2 N. W. 674.

In Michigan notice must be posted in the ward where the land is situated. Schlee v. Darrow, 65 Mich. 362, 32 N. W. 717.

Proof of publication.—A statute providing for proof of posting notices by affidavits does not exclude other methods of proof. Larimer v. Wallace, 86 Nebr. 444, 54 N. W. 835. Where a statute requires notice to be published in a "newspaper, if there be one printed in the same county," and the order directed it published in a certain paper "printed in the county" and the affidavit showed it to have been given in a certain paper "published and circulating in the county," this was sufficient. Dexter v. Cranston, 41 Mich. 448, 2 N. W. 674. If the statute provides that proof of publication may be made by the affidavit of the printer of the newspaper in which it was published or of his foreman or principal clerk an affidavit by the bookkeeper is not sufficient, but may with a copy of the notice be admitted as evidence of the time, place, and manner of giving the notice, when the affidavit is in positive and affirmative language. Schlee v. Darrow, 65 Mich. 362, 32 N. W. 717.

Waiver of notice.—Under a statute providing that judicial sales shall, "unless otherwise agreed upon by the parties," be advertised in a newspaper, an infant party to proceedings for the sale of real estate of which he is part owner may, with the chancellor's approval, consent to a sale without newspaper advertisement. Hieatt v. Schmidt, 84 S. W. 740, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 239.

Pleading publication of notice.—Where the statute requires publication "for three weeks successively next before such sale" an allegation in a pleading that the notice was published "for three successive weeks previous to the day appointed for sale" does not show a compliance with the statute. Montour v. Purdy, 11 Minn. 384, 88 Am. Dec. 88.

d. By Whom Conducted. The appointment of a guardian generally implies a confidence in his personal integrity and judgment and he cannot delegate his authority to make a sale of the infant's land.⁵⁵ While the law does not require him to attend in person to every detail, and while he may employ the services of an auctioneer⁵⁶ or real-estate agent⁵⁷ to assist in conducting the sale, it must nevertheless be made under his personal supervision.⁵⁸

e. Who May Purchase at Sale. According to the weight of authority a guardian cannot acquire a valid title to lands of his ward by purchase at a sale thereof procured on his own application,⁵⁹ especially where the order of sale has been procured by fraud.⁶⁰ Nevertheless in the application of the rule, it is immaterial whether the guardian acts in good or bad faith, or whether the price paid for the property is adequate or the reverse;⁶¹ and it is likewise immaterial whether the purchase be direct or indirect, in person or to an agent, or by the medium of a person who subsequently reconveys to the guardian,⁶² the rule being that one shall not act for himself in any matters with respect to which he has duties to perform, or interests to protect, for another;⁶³ so the rule has been extended to purchases made by the husband or wife of the guardian.⁶⁴ There is some difference of opinion as to the precise effect of a purchase of the character under con-

Contrary view.—In Kentucky it has been held that a guardian may buy land of his ward sold by a commissioner under decree of court therefor, obtained on application of the guardian. Clements v. Ramsey, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 445. In North Carolina the decisions are conflicting. In the later decisions (Lee v. Howell, 69 N. C. 200; Doe v. Hassell, 68 N. C. 212), it is held that the guardian has a right to purchase the land of a ward at a sale by clerk of court, made by order of court on the guardian's application, it being said in the first mentioned decision that inasmuch as the sale is not of any validity until the sale is reported to the court, or until the court is satisfied that the price is fair, there is no reason why the guardian should not become a purchaser. Earlier decisions, however (Patton v. Thompson, 55 N. C. 285; Hoskins v. Wilson, 20 N. C.

385), seem to be in line with the rule stated in the text. In Tennessee a purchase by the guardian is considered valid where he acts fairly and does not benefit himself at the expense of the ward. Ex p. Crump, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 732; Elrod v. Lancaster, 2 Head (Tenn.) 571, 75 Am. Dec. 749; Blackmore v. Shelby, 8 Humphr. (Tenn.) 439. But if he buys in the property at a price less than the value placed upon the land by the commissioners he will be required to show that the price paid is reasonable before the sale can stand. Ex p. Crump, supra.

Under the Mexican law prevailing in California before its annexation a guardian of an infant had the right, with the approval of the alcalde, to purchase his ward's property at his own sale. Braly v. Reese, 51 Cal. 447.

Duty of guardian in making sale.—It is the duty of the guardian to realize as much from the sale of the land as possible; as buyer, it is to his interest to procure it at the least possible price. To remove all temptation to a breach of his duty, the law attaches to him a disability to purchase for himself. Brockett v. Richardson, 61 Miss. 766.

sideration. According to some decisions the sale is absolutely void.⁶⁵ Other decisions, however, hold that the sale is merely voidable.⁶⁶ Whatever may be the effect of a purchase by the guardian upon the rights of the infant, the sale will be held valid as against him and the sureties on his bond, for the purpose of collecting the unpaid purchase-money.⁶⁷ And a guardian's sale will not be set aside on the ground that the purchaser was not the agent engaged to conduct the sale, where it appeared that he was merely the agent for paying taxes on the land, that the wards had negotiated with him for a sale to him, and that the sale was made because he offered more than other prospective purchasers.⁶⁸

f. Effect of Private Agreement For Sale. There is some difference of opinion as to the effect of a private agreement of sale in advance of obtaining the order of court. According to some decisions such an agreement is contrary to public policy.⁶⁹ On the other hand it has been held that it is not contrary to public policy or fraudulent for a guardian before applying for a license to sell the real estate of the ward to procure a purchaser for an adequate price.⁷⁰

g. Report of Sale. The statutes usually require guardians who have made sales of their ward's real estate, under order of court, to make a report thereof to the court granting the order.⁷¹ A mistake in the report, apparent on its face, may be corrected on satisfactory proof.⁷² If the record shows that the report was made by the guardian, the fact that it is signed by the guardian, by another person designated, is immaterial;⁷³ and even though the report is not signed, this defect may be remedied by amendment.⁷⁴ If the report is made before the time designated by statute, the court acquires no jurisdiction to approve the sale.⁷⁵

h. Confirmation of Sale — (i) POWERS OF COURT IN RESPECT OF CONFIRMATION. The probate court has a broad discretion in the matter of approving or disapproving sales of infants' real estate by a guardian, inasmuch as title does not vest in the purchaser until the sale is approved;⁷⁶ and it may properly refuse to confirm a sale and order a resale where it appears that an injustice to the 70. Hyatt v. Anderson, (Nebr. 1903) 96 N. W. 620; Ryan v. Trimble, 60 S. W. 633, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1444. In this case a life-tenant made a contract with the guardian of the infant remainder-men, binding himself to cause the interest of the infants to bring not less than seven hundred dollars at a sale of the land to be made in a proceeding to be thereafter instituted for the purpose; the consideration being the guardian's agreement not to resist the suit for a sale of the property. It was held that the consideration is not per se vicious, and as the infants, after arriving at age, ratified what was done, the court will not hold, without averment and proof, that the contract was hurtful to them.

Under special statutes.—Under a statute providing that, upon an agreement by a special guardian for the sale of land belonging to minors being made, the same should be reported to the court on oath of the guardian, if the agreement is not in writing, the purchaser cannot be compelled to complete his purchase, but, if he accepts the conveyance and pays the purchase-price, his title will not be affected. ward is attempted,⁷⁷ that the property has been sacrificed through the negligence or misapprehension of the guardian,⁷⁸ that the property will bring a larger price on a resale,⁷⁹ or that the necessity for the sale which seemed to exist when the same was ordered has ceased.⁸⁰ And even though no application for a resale is made, yet such an order can be made on the court's own motion, in its capacity of universal guardian to all infants, and by virtue of its obligation to exercise a general superintendence and protective jurisdiction over their persons and property.⁸¹ It may also set aside a sale on petition of the purchaser on the ground of mutual mistake where the guardian and the fund are still within the control of the court and the purchase-price cannot be retained in equity and good conscience.⁸² A statute which authorizes the court to set aside a sale and order a resale when the purchaser fails to comply with the terms of the sale does not empower the court to set aside the sale and authorize the guardian to retake possession.⁸³

(II) NECESSITY AND REQUISITES. While the ward's title passes only on the execution of a deed by the guardian and not on the confirmation of the sale by the court,⁸⁴ no title passes to the purchaser until the court has confirmed the sale,⁸⁵

not even an equitable title.⁸⁶ Where a sale is in violation of an order of court, the fact that the court allowed the guardian's account charging himself with the proceeds of the sale is not a confirmation of the guardian's act, the court having no knowledge of his disobedience to his order,⁸⁷ and where no report of a sale is ever made, and several years after the sale the deeds are presented by the purchaser to the court and approved in the absence of the guardian and ward, the order of approval does not amount to a confirmation of the sale.⁸⁸ The fact that the confirmation of the sale follows instead of precedes the execution of the deed does not render it ineffectual,⁸⁹ and though the entry of an order confirming the sale before the expiration of the time required by statute to elapse is erroneous, this will not render the order void.⁹⁰ So it has been held that the fact that the guardian has been dead a number of years before the making of an order validating the sale by him does not invalidate the order,⁹¹ and that if the proceedings under which the sale was made are regular the fact that through mistake a long time elapsed before making the report will not prevent its approval when made.⁹² The approval of the court of a report of a sale of minor's lands, indorsed on the report, is valid, although the better practice would be to require an order of the court to be duly entered on the records of the court, approving the sale.⁹³

(II) OPERATION AND EFFECT. Where a sale is made by order of a court having jurisdiction on proceedings in compliance with the statutory requirements and a deed is executed and the sale confirmed, the title of the ward is divested.⁹⁴ Where the court confirms a sale made in pursuance of its order, it determines all questions as to the authority of the guardian to sell and of the necessity to sell,⁹⁵ and such determination cannot be questioned in a collateral proceeding to try title to the property sold.⁹⁶ A confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of an order of a probate court which has jurisdiction of the subject-matter ordinarily cures all defects and irregularities,⁹⁷ but does not cure and render operative a sale

Illustration of rule.—Where the purchaser of land at a guardian's sale in good faith paid the full value of the land with property, instead of cash, and the guardian reported the sale as for cash, and it was so confirmed, the title to the land passed to and remains in the purchaser while such order stands unreversed. *Stroud v. That lands were not sold in the order of the license, if a defect, is cured by confirmation of the sale. Emery v. Vroman, 19 Wis. 689, 88 Am. Dec. 726.

Limitation of rule.—If a statute provides that the sale shall not be void on account of any irregularity, provided it appears that the guardian took the prescribed oath, a confirmation of the sale does not render it valid that is void. Such confirmation is res judicata as to irregularities only and not as to matters of substance.⁹⁸

(iv) REVIEW. An order approving or disapproving the report of a guardian empowered to sell the land of his ward is generally held to be reviewable⁹⁹ on error¹ or appeal;² but an order of confirmation will not be disturbed where all the proceedings were in strict compliance with the statutory requirements.³

i. The Conveyance. While the guardian has no right to give a deed before confirmation of the sale if he does so and the sale is then confirmed the deed will be good.⁴ Title to the ward's land does not pass on confirmation of the sale,⁵ but only on the execution and delivery of a deed⁶ or the performance of some act equivalent to delivery;⁷ and until the title has been thus divested the infant may recover in ejectment against the purchaser notwithstanding the confirmation of the sale and the payment of the purchase-money.⁸ The deed may⁹ and should be executed by the guardian in his official capacity.¹⁰ If the deed shows on its face a non-observance of a statutory requirement as to the amount for which the land may be sold it is void.¹¹ The deed should show that the guardian was duly appointed,¹² and it has been held that it should refer to the order of sale, giving its date, and show that the notice of sale required by the order of sale has been given;¹³ but other decisions hold that these facts may be shown aliunde.¹⁴ So it has been held that failure to give the date of the order,¹⁵ or to comply with the requirement that the deed specify the page of the order-book containing the order of sale,¹⁶ or omitting the name of one of the minors,¹⁷ or other informalities in the recitals¹⁸ will not invalidate the deed. It is not necessary to state the reason for granting the order of sale.¹⁹ The deed will not be void for uncertainty when the court can determine by aid of a surveyor's plat, a copy of which was in the record, what land was intended to pass.²⁰ A guardian's deed has only the effect of a deed of quitclaim. The guardian cannot bind his ward by any covenants in the deed, but binds himself personally.²¹ If he chooses to insert covenants in the deed, the grantee must look to him alone for redress.²² A corporation acquiring a right of way through a minor's land by virtue of a deed reserving to the minor a right of way over the railroad right of way cannot object to the reservation because the order of the court authorizing the minor's curator to execute the deed contained no such reservation, where the company received all it paid for.²³

j. Purchase-Price and Payment. Where the ward's property is ordered to be sold on application of a guardian, after appraisal, a sale for less than the appraised value is void.²⁴ It has been held that the guardian cannot lawfully accept anything except money in payment of the purchase-price.²⁵ He cannot accept in payment his own notes or other individual obligations.²⁶

k. Ratification and Curing Defects. Notwithstanding a judicial sale is voidable for irregularities in the proceedings to obtain the decree or order of sale or in the decree or order itself or the proceedings subsequent thereto, the ward may on coming of age ratify the sale,²⁷ and is held to do so when with a full knowledge of the facts he executed a deed to the purchaser,²⁸ or receives and retains the purchase-money,²⁹ or acquiesces in the sale for a considerable length of time after coming of age.³⁰ Where, pending proceeding for rescission of a conveyance of realty pursuant to probate proceedings which are claimed to be irregular, the guardian for the minors making the conveyance applies to the probate court directing attention to the defects in the proceedings, the court may authorize conveyances to perfect the title.³¹ Subsequent proceedings by the guardian in the probate court to cure defects in a former proceeding authorizing the sale of minor's realty are not affected by the fact that the clerk of the probate court had demanded of the guardian a new bond.³²

cial sales and providing that if the land is sold for less than two thirds of its value it may be redeemed, are not applicable to sales by guardians but only to those made under judgments against debtors.³³

m. Vacating Sale and Recovery of Property Sold³⁴—(1) GROUND'S FOR AVOIDANCE OF SALE. The grounds for which a sale will be avoided must be of a substantial character.³⁵ If the court has jurisdiction and the proceedings are regular, it is not a ground to set aside the sale that in the light of subsequent events it proved injudicious and unfortunate for the ward,³⁶ or because of irregularities in the execution of the order of sale,³⁷ or because the vendee was not required to pay until the infant reached majority and that too without any intermediate interest.³⁸ So a sale will not ordinarily be avoided because of inadequacy of price,³⁹ nor on the ground of the ward's minority alone,⁴⁰ nor because the guardian has not applied the funds arising from the sale of the lands to the ward's benefit,⁴¹ nor, as respects a bona fide purchaser from the guardian, that the land was purchased indirectly by the guardian at his own sale,⁴² nor because there was a lien upon the land of the ward and the proceeds of the sale were liable therefor.⁴³ So where license to sell is granted by the court appointing the guardian, the fact that the preliminary steps required by statute were not taken is immaterial.⁴⁴ It has also been held that where a guardian who has received his appointment from a court of superior jurisdiction, having authority to make such appointments and jurisdiction of guardians' petitions to sell lands, but without jurisdiction to make the particular appointment, sells lands of his ward, under an order of such court, to one who purchases and pays for such land, relying in good faith on such order, such purchaser will be protected in the title so acquired, if the guardian applies the proceeds properly.⁴⁵ The fact that the petition was filed, the appraisers appointed and sworn, the appraisement made and returned, and the order of sale made on the same day, although calculated to excite suspicion, is not sufficient ground to avoid the sale.⁴⁶ On the other hand it is a sufficient ground to avoid the sale that the property was sold on the application of one who had never qualified as guardian,⁴⁷ or whose appointment was for any reason void;⁴⁸ that the property was bought in by the guardian himself,⁴⁹ or by someone for him;⁵⁰ that the order for the sale was procured by fraud at least as to all parties or privies to the fraud;⁵¹ that there was fraud and collusion

It is fraud in law whatever the intent for a guardian to petition in a ward's name, between the guardian and purchaser;⁵² that there was an agreement between the purchaser and others not to bid against each other at the sale;⁵³ or that the guardian accepted in payment or in part payment his own notes or individual obligations.⁵⁴ If sufficient grounds for avoiding the sale exist, the ward's right to avoid it is not affected by the fact that he may have recourse on the guardian's bond,⁵⁵ nor by his bringing an action against the guardian for a settlement of his accounts,⁵⁶ nor by the fact that the property which was illegally bought in at the sale, by the guardian, had subsequently been conveyed to others,⁵⁷ nor does the fact that the proceeds were applied to the ward's maintenance estop him from asserting title, on the ground of the invalidity of the sale.⁵⁸

(11) WHO MAY ATTACK SALE. Persons claiming title adversely to the title of the ward cannot contest a sale for irregularity in the proceedings.⁵⁹ It has been held that the formalities prescribed by sale of minors' property being exclusively for their benefit, they alone can avail themselves of irregularities in the sale of the property.⁶⁰

(11) LIMITATIONS. In many states statutes have been enacted which limit the time in which proceedings may be brought to set aside sales of wards' lands by the guardian, or to recover lands so sold.⁶¹ These statutes run from the time the ward attains majority,⁶² or from the termination of the guardianship, or if the ward be a minor at that time, then a designated time after majority,⁶³ or from the time of confirmation of the sale,⁶⁴ according as the statutes may provide. The operation of these statutes is of course not limited to valid sales, since such a sale does not need the protection of a statute of limitations.⁶⁵ They apply to cases where the sale is voidable for irregularities.⁶⁶ And it has also been held that the statutes apply where the sale is void,⁶⁷ although the decided weight of authority is against this view.⁶⁸ The statutes do not apply to appeals or other proceed-without the latter's authority for leave to sell lands for the payment of claims against the estate of the ward's ancestor, and to include an invalid claim, and to represent the sale when made as a cash sale when no cash is paid, and is sufficient ground to set aside the sale. *Wohlscheid v. ings for appellate review,⁶⁹ or to sales made prior to their passage.⁷⁰ A saving clause in the statutes to the effect "that persons out of the state" may bring action for recovery of lands, within a certain period after "their return to the state," applies as well to persons who were never in the state, as to those who were temporarily absent from it.⁷¹ If personalty is sold under order of court, the ward accepting the proceeds of the sale, a suit to set aside the sale will be dismissed where the ward has been guilty of great laches in bringing it.⁷²

(IV) PLEADINGS AND EVIDENCE. If fraud and collusion between the guardian and purchaser are the grounds on which it is sought to set aside the sale, and the averment of fraud is not sufficiently specific, it may be amended, and a demurrer on that ground should be overruled.⁷³ A petition to set aside a sale is not demurrable because it does not show that plaintiff has tendered to the purchaser the amount paid for the land.⁷⁴ An averment that no purchase-money had been paid for the property sufficiently shows that the ward received no benefit from the sale.⁷⁵ If the land in controversy was sold on a proper petition and under decree of court, it will be presumed that the evidence was sufficient to support the decree.⁷⁶ If there is nothing on the face of the record to show that the license to sell or the sale itself is void the proceedings will be presumed regular.⁷⁷ After the lapse of many years and the destruction of the records, it will be presumed that the clerk filed the guardian's petition and recorded the report of sale on its approval.⁷⁸ So after the lapse of many years the regularity of the guardian's appointment and license will be presumed in the absence of any evidence to the contrary.⁷⁹ After a decree appointing a guardian and directing a sale of the minor's land the burden of proof is on any one attacking the validity of the decree.⁸⁰ So it has been held that the burden of proof upon the question whether the suit was brought within the statutory period is upon plaintiff.⁸¹ The affidavit and appraisal are admissible as evidence of the proceedings at the sale,⁸² but testimony by the guardian as to his estimate of the value of the land and his reasons for selling it below that estimate, made after the sale, are not admissible;⁸³ and where at the time of sale the land was recorded in the guardian's name and the sale made under proper order of court, evidence of statements of a third person to the purchaser that the title was not good is not admissible to show notice to the purchaser of fraud in the sale.⁸⁴ Where the sale is sought to be set aside for fraud, and many years have elapsed and important papers have been lost, the proof of fraud should be clear and convincing.⁸⁵ Recital of confirmation of the sale in a deed properly acknowledged and recorded is prima facie evidence of that fact.⁸⁶ Confirmation of the sale is prima facie evidence that notice of sale was given.⁸⁷ A deed made by a commissioner appointed by the court for that purpose is proof sufficient in the absence of any evidence to the contrary that the sale was approved by the court.⁸⁸ A recital in the decree for sale that the court was "satisfied that all persons interested herein have been duly notified" of the petition does not sufficiently show that all the necessary parties including the minor heirs were properly made parties.⁸⁹

(v) TRIAL AND JUDGMENT. Upon a bill in equity to set aside a sale by a guardian of a ward's lands under order of court, on the ground of fraud and collusion between the guardian and the purchaser, the federal court, as a court of equity, cannot sit in review to pass upon errors and irregularities in the proceedings of the probate court, but will confine itself to the issues as to whether the guardian acted fraudulently, and for his own benefit, and whether there was any collusion between him and the purchaser.⁹⁰ The question of the regularity of a guardian's sale is one of law for the court and should not be submitted to the jury.⁹¹ Where a suit to set aside the sale is consolidated with a suit by the purchaser for confirmation thereof, a judgment merely dismissing the petition to set aside the sale is informal; it should confirm the original judgment and decree of sale.⁹²

(vi) COSTS. The fact that on an appeal in a proceeding by the ward to set aside the sale because the guardian was purchaser, costs were awarded against the guardian alone, while in the lower court they were awarded against him and his vendee, does not make the judgment of the appellate court against the vendee for a less sum than that recovered in the lower court, within the meaning of a statute providing that if on an appeal by the defeated party the judgment is against him, but for a less amount, he shall recover the costs of the court above but pay those of the court below.⁹³

n. Collateral Attack. The sale of an infant's land under order of court cannot be collaterally attacked for any irregularities in the proceedings to obtain the order or for any defects in the order itself or the proceedings subsequent to the order if the court had jurisdiction to make it.⁹⁴ However irregular and

Facts sufficient to show fraud.—The circumstances that a person accepted the guardianship with the view of enabling himself to purchase the land without paying the purchase-money until the majority of the wards, and that he filed a petition stating that the purchase-money was in the hands of the trustee appointed to make the sale, when in fact it was not, are sufficient to raise the inference of actual legal fraud. *Downs v. Jurisdiction will be presumed where the record does not show a want of it. Field v. Peeples, 180 Ill. 376, 54 N. E. 304. Where the probate court of the county where a minor resides appoints a guardian, and takes jurisdiction of the estate, and subsequently, on the minor's removing to a second county, the probate court of that county takes jurisdiction over the minor and estate, and orders his real estate sold, the sale cannot be collaterally attacked on the ground of the exclusive jurisdiction of the first court, when nothing appears on the face of the record of the second court showing that the minor was a non-resident of the second county, or that the court acted without jurisdiction. Cox v. Boyce, 152 Mo. 576, 54 S. W. 467, 75 Am. St. Rep. 483.

Presumption as to evidence in support of order.—In an action brought to cancel notes given in payment for infant's lands sold by order of the circuit court, it will be presumed that such order of sale was based on sufficient testimony, although the record of the proceedings does not disclose that any testimony was taken. Castleman v. Relfe, 50 Mo. 583.

A mistake as to the interest of the parties cannot be taken advantage of to defeat the title of the purchaser after decree and expiration of the time allowed for appeal. Gilmore v. Rodgers, 41 Pa. St. 120.

What is not a collateral attack.—For an infant defendant in a suit to foreclose a mortgage given by A, on land, apparent title to which was vested in him by guardian's sale of said infant's land, to claim that the proceeding in the county court authorizing the sale was merely fictitious, to the knowledge of all the parties, for the purpose of evading the law preventing mortgage of an infant's land, is not a collateral attack of a judgment, the judgment being a nullity. *Conklin v. Illustration.—The orphans' court sale of a minor's interest in land, on the petition of his guardian, can be collaterally attacked in the common pleas where the guardian gave no security for the sale and the sale was not confirmed. Kreimendahl v. Neuheuser, 8 Pa. Dist. 558.

Limitation of rule.—If the land is purchased upon the representations of the guardian that the purchaser would acquire a good title, which turn out to be untrue, the purchaser will not be held at law or in equity, although the guardian may not have known of the falsity of his representations. *Black v. authority of the guardian to sell,¹ and the conditions and restrictions incident to its exercise.² If the sale is void, the purchaser acquires no title irrespective of any question of good faith on his part,³ and cannot recover the land from one who subsequently acquires a good title.⁴ To entitle a purchaser at a guardian's sale to his rights as such to lands sold, he must tender payment and performance within a reasonable time.⁵ If he fails to comply with the terms of the sale, he acquires no rights, notwithstanding a report and confirmation of the sale.⁶ If he pays the purchase-money under a valid order of sale and the sale is confirmed and he goes into possession he is entitled to retain possession against the wards.⁷ A purchaser of an undivided interest in land at a guardian's sale cannot object to the setting apart to one of the wards, after attaining majority, of her interest in the remainder, although the other wards might object on the ground that the guardian's sale was made at her instance in order to convey to the purchaser her interest in the land.⁸ If by mistake the proceedings, order of sale, and conveyance do not embrace all the land intended to be sold and supposed to be purchased a court of equity will not interfere as against the minors to correct such mistake and to give the purchaser the additional land intended to be conveyed but which was not in fact conveyed.⁹

b. On Restoration of Property to Ward. One who purchases land at a guardian's sale, in good faith and without notice of any irregularities or defects in the title or in the proceedings for sale, is entitled, on a restoration of the land to the ward, to have the purchase-money refunded to him,¹⁰ or the court may treat the covenants for title he only binds himself personally.

Payment to new guardian.—Payment by the purchaser to one who after the sale and after removal of the former guardian became the statutory guardian is good and sufficient, although he may not have executed bond in the circuit court as required of the guardian instituting the proceedings for the sale. *Herndon v. Reason for rule.—"The doctrine of a court of equity is, that the heir who has received the price of his real estate, sold by his guardian, cannot hold on to the money and at the same time recover the land on account of some defect in the judicial proceeding under which it was sold. The circumstances put him under an equitable estoppel, and he must come to a fair account with the purchaser respecting the money." Douglas v. Bennett, 51 Miss. 680, 684.

Resale on refusal to confirm.—Where the court refuses to confirm a sale and orders a resale, a decree therefor to direct an account to be taken of the amount of purchase-money paid, and the rents and profits of the land during the possession of the purchaser and those claiming under him, and that the balance of the sum so paid, after deducting the sum ascertained to be due for rents and profits, be a charge upon the fund arising from the resale. In re Dickerson, 111 N. C. 108, 15 S. E. 1025.

Where ward receives no benefit from sale.—Where the sale is merely voidable, the fact that the guardian converted the price paid for the land, and that the ward received no benefit from the sale, does not deprive the purchaser of his right to a refund of the purchase-money, the view being taken that he is not required to see to the proper application of the purchase-money, or that the guardian executes his trust in a legal way in his dealing with the funds of the ward after they come into his possession (Kendrick v. Wheeler, 85 Tex. 247, 20 S. W. 44); but it is held that where the sale is void and the ward receives no part of the purchase-price, the purchaser is not entitled to restoration of the purchase-money as a condition of restoring the land to the ward (Bone v. Tyrrell, 113 money as an equitable lien on the land.¹¹ A purchaser in good faith will also be entitled to a refund of taxes paid,¹² and to an allowance for improvements.¹³ One who purchases in bad faith land sold at a guardian's sale is not entitled to recover the purchase-price on restoration of the land to the ward,¹⁴ especially where the ward received no benefit from the sale.¹⁵ On recovery of the land the ward is entitled to recover from the purchaser the rents and profits accruing during his occupation.¹⁶ This liability attaches whether the purchase was made in good faith or not.¹⁷

c. Ward's Lien For Purchase-Money. A lien for the purchase-price of land sold by the guardian exists in favor of the ward,¹⁸ even independently of any statutory provision giving it; ¹⁹ but where a note given in payment is exchanged by the guardian, with the sanction of the court, for another note executed by the purchaser with security and a deed is executed to the purchaser, the only redress of the ward is against the guardian in case of a subsequent insolvency of the maker of the note.²⁰

d. Refusal to Complete Purchase, Correction of Errors, or Rescission by Purchaser. While the purchaser is not bound to accept a title which is void for non-compliance with the statutes regulating sales of infant's property by a guardian,²¹ no objections to the title which the vendor is able to remove can Mo. 175, 20 S. W. 796. See also St. Paul Sanitarium v. Crim, (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 84 S. W. 1114). Under these circumstances the rule that one who has paid money in good faith to a trustee authorized to receive the same shall not be responsible for the proper application of the money has no application. Bonc v. Tyrrell, supra. It has been held, however, that where the ward recovers the land from the purchaser in ejectment, and the guardian has not accounted for the purchase-money to his ward on majority, the probate court may decree that the guardian shall pay back to the purchaser the amount of the purchase-money. Kreimendahl's Estate, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 496.

Rights of purchaser of personal property.—Where a sale of personal property is invalid for want of confirmation by the court, and the purchaser pays the purchase-money and receives possession of the property, and the purchase-money is applied to the payment of valid claims against the ward, the purchaser when sued for the property can set up the facts of his payment of the purchase-money and its application to the debts, and compel an adjustment of his equities by having his money returned or by being subrogated to the rights of creditors whose debts were discharged with the money. *Harrison v. Amount allowable for improvements.—The purchaser is entitled to recover only for such improvements as were made before suit brought to recover the land (Gaines v. Ken- nedy, 53 Miss. 103), and it has also been held that for such improvements as were made during the disability of the ward, no allowance beyond the value of the rents and profits of the premises can be made (Summers v. Howard, 33 Ark. 490).

Who are purchasers in bad faith.—Where tutors sold the land of their minors to their own debtor in payment of their debts to him he must be held to have knowledge of the defect of his title. Rocques v. Leveque, 110 La. 306, 34 So. 454. Recording satisfaction of lien.—Where a statute requires satisfaction of the lien to be entered of record the satisfaction contemplated is not limited to an entry upon the margin of the time or to an entry of a formal order of satisfaction or acknowledgment by the court, but it will be sufficient if there be some order of the court necessarily implying an adjudication of the fact of the collection of the money and a constant discharge of the lien. *Brown v. afford him an excuse for non-performance.²² If the title conveyed by the sale is marketable, he will be required to complete the purchase.²³ Mere irregularities which do not affect the jurisdiction of the court ordering the sale afford no grounds for a refusal to complete the purchase.²⁴ If the decree of sale and proceedings are not in conformity with the statutory requirements, the purchaser may file his petition in the proceeding to have the error corrected and his title cleared, and have relief thereon so far as the court has power to give it.²⁵ If he brings suit to rescind for illegality in the sale, the bill will not be entertained unless he offers to restore possession to the guardian and account for rents and profits during the occupation.²⁶

12. PROCEEDS. The guardian and not a judge or clerk of the court is the proper custodian of the moneys arising from a sale of a ward's land,²⁷ and it is his duty to apply the proceeds of a sale to the purposes for which the land was sold.²⁸ If the sale is for the purpose of paying debts of the ancestor, the guardian must observe the same priority in payment thereof as a personal representative in applying assets.²⁹ The fact that the sale may have been irregular is no ground for refusal of a guardian to pay over the fund arising from the sale to the ward, so long as the ward is willing to abide by it.³⁰ Where there is a compliance with the statute under which land is sold, the validity of the sale is not affected by subsequent application of the proceeds.³¹ It is sufficient for the purchaser to see that there is an order for a sale made by a court of competent jurisdiction.³² An appeal does not lie from an order refusing to direct a special guardian appointed by him to pay over the money derived from a sale of the minor's lands to the general guardian, as the chancellor's power in that respect is discretionary.³³ To make a guardian responsible for a loss to the ward from a sale of his land, something more than an error of the court must be made to appear. It should at least be established that he practised a deception on the court, not by false allegations, but by the concealment of material facts.³⁴

Application of rule.—The possibility that a special guardian for infants who twenty-six years ago sold their real estate (amounting to two-sixths of the premises) to his own wife by a sale then duly ordered and confirmed and never attacked since by the infants might become tenant by the curtesy of said real estate is too remote to excuse a present purchaser of the whole premises, at a judicial sale, from taking title thereto. Strauss v. Benheim, 28 Misc. (N. Y.) 660, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 1054.

Sale under agreement with administrator.—Where an administrator of an estate, in order to save the homestead from sale to pay debts, wishes to sell realty in another state, and by arrangement with the adult heirs and guardian of the minor heirs it is sold at guardian's sale, and the guardian refuses to comply with his agreement to pay the proceeds to the administrator, the latter may maintain a suit to compel him to do so. *Bradstreet v. Applications of rule.—The fact that the court erred in directing an improper application of the fund (Fitzgibbon v. Lake, 29 Ill. 165, 81 Am. Dec. 302), as where it inadvertently awards some of the money to a person not entitled to it (Hardie v. Andrews, 13 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 413), does not affect the title. The misapplication of the purchase-money by the guardian does not affect the purchaser's title where the statutes authorizing the sale have been complied with. Exendine v. Morris, 8 Mo. App. 383. The purchaser's title is not affected by fraud existing between the guardian and the owner of the land in which the proceeds of the sale are invested. Devlin v. Bethshears, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 522.

B. Mortgage. As was shown in a preceding chapter, to authorize a mortgage of a ward's real estate it is necessary that there should be an order of court therefor in pursuance of a statute which permits such mortgages to be given.³⁵ Jurisdiction to authorize a mortgage of a ward's real estate, if given, is ordinarily conferred on probate courts or courts possessing probate jurisdiction.³⁶ The purposes for which real estate of a minor can be mortgaged are prescribed by the statutes authorizing it.³⁷ Under these statutes it has been held that a reversionary interest of a minor may be mortgaged.³⁸ They do not, however, authorize a prospective mortgage of property which it is proposed to acquire.³⁹ If required by statute the application for leave to execute a mortgage must be in writing.⁴⁰ In proceedings of this character minors are not adversary parties to their guardians, but appear by him and the proceedings are upon their application.⁴¹ A decree authorizing a mortgage by a court of competent jurisdiction, after the statutory steps have been taken by the guardian to procure it, however erroneous it may be, is not void, and a mortgage given thereon will be binding until it is reversed on appeal or otherwise set aside;⁴² nor will an appellate court disturb a decree authorizing a mortgage when all the requirements of the law have been fulfilled and the decree rendered on proper evidence thereof.⁴³ The mortgage if not in fee should not extend beyond the minority of the ward.⁴⁴ It is no objection that it was signed by the guardian as such and not by the minor,⁴⁵ nor need it expressly reserve the right of redemption where that right is given by the statute authorizing the mortgage.⁴⁶ Where a guardian incurs debts in the unauthorized prosecution of the infant's business and colludes with the creditor to secure a judgment authorizing him to mortgage the infant's estate to secure the debt, the infant may maintain a bill to vacate the judgment and set aside the mortgage.⁴⁷

37. Support and maintenance.—The probate court has jurisdiction to authorize a mortgage of a minor's real estate for his support and maintenance, and it will be good as to third parties, although a portion of the proceeds are used in paying the expenses of administration. Chase v. Brown, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 598.

Mortgage to secure aggregate debts of several minors.—Under a statute providing that the property of a minor may be mortgaged to pay or renew a lien thereon, where there are several minors owning undivided interests in the same property, each subject to a lien, the interest of each minor cannot be mortgaged to secure the aggregate of all their debts, but each must be bound only for his part thereof. Howard v. Bryan, 133 Cal. 257, 65 Pac. 462, (1900) 62 Pac. 459.

Mortgage for guardian's benefit.—The guardian can under no circumstances mortgage the property of the ward to secure his own debt (Quarin v. Carlin, 30 La. Ann. 1131), or discharge a lien on his own property (Howard v. Bryan, 133 Cal. 257, 65 Pac. 462); and such a mortgage will not be binding on the ward, although authorized by the proceedings of a family meeting and

If a guardian confesses judgment on a mortgage given by him under order of court, the validity of the mortgage cannot be inquired into on a rule to show cause why the judgment should not be opened if no fraud on the court is alleged, and the receipt of the mortgage money is not denied.⁴⁸ And such judgment will not be opened for informalities, if any, in not having a guardian ad litem appointed to represent the minors in the suit, a testamentary guardian having appeared and no defense being shown which they could have made.⁴⁹ So it is not ground to set aside a sale under judgment on a mortgage that the tutor neglected to plead prescription to the mortgage notes.⁵⁰ Statutes giving probate courts original jurisdiction of matters of probate and settlement of guardian's accounts do not confer upon them jurisdiction of the foreclosure of a mortgage upon the ward's real estate.⁵¹ Foreclosure proceedings, and a title obtained thereunder, are binding on a ward, although in the original notice directed to her guardian, and served upon her, she is not in express terms named as defendant.⁵² The fact that a guardian's sale was merely fictitious to the knowledge of all the parties for the purpose of avoiding the law against mortgaging an infant's land does not deprive the mortgagee of the right to foreclose, except as against the infant.⁵³ If there is a deficiency on foreclosure, the ward cannot be bound unless he made a distinct promise to complainant based on a sufficient consideration.⁵⁴

C. Lease. Where a statute authorizes the institution of a proceeding to lease the infant's land, by "any relation" of the infant, it is proper to make any relation a party to such proceeding when instituted by a guardian;⁵⁵ and in such a proceeding an uncle who has in effect been made a party is entitled to appeal from an order confirming the report of a referee that a lease executed by a former guardian was in force.⁵⁶ It has been held, however, that a statute allowing an appeal by any person aggrieved, by an order of probate court, does not authorize an appeal by the father of an infant from an order on the application of a guardian granting leave to lease the infant's property.⁵⁷ Where on appeal the only question is whether it is for the best interest of the infant that his property be leased, the matter is for the determination of the court.⁵⁸ A finding of a referee that the best interest of the wards do not require a public rental of their lands is bad as a conclusion of law; it should have been as to whether the renting resulted in injury to the wards, there being some evidence to that effect.⁵⁹ Where the statutes require the approval of a lease by a court, failure to obtain such approval is a good ground for a rescission of a lease by the lessees.⁶⁰ Where the guardian fails to get the approval of the court and all the parties capable of contracting in respect of the lease agree to its cancellation, a subsequent obtaining of the approval of the court by the guardian, without the lessee's knowledge, is a fraud upon him for which a court of equity will grant relief.⁶¹

of the estate over which the law gave him control and the settlement of the affairs of the trust.⁶³ In most of the states guardians are required to report annually, biennially, triennially, or on the order of the court, according as the statute may provide.⁶⁴ The safety of the guardian, the requirements of business prudence, and the welfare of the ward and his estate demand that this be done.⁶⁵ As has been said by a learned commentator on guardianship these intermediate accounts are not so much for the purpose of adjudicating the respective rights and liabilities between the guardian and ward (which is not accomplished until final settlement of the guardian's account) as to compel him to furnish evidence to the court and to the public as to the condition of the estate, its liabilities and resources, the propriety of orders touching investments of the funds, the sufficiency of the bond, the necessity of selling personalty or real estate, and like matters of valuable information touching the safety of the trust estate.⁶⁶ Guardians are required, without waiting for an order to that effect from the court, to report the amount and nature of all property of the ward that came to their possession or knowledge and to show the application of all moneys expended by them for the education and maintenance of their wards as well as in the preservation of their assets or their management.⁶⁷ So on termination of the trust it is the duty of the guardian to exhibit a final account of his guardianship to the probate court, to make a settlement with the probate judge or with the ward, and to deliver all the property or funds in his hands to the ward,⁶⁸ or to the succeeding guardian or to the person who is lawfully entitled thereto as owner, trustee, or in such other capacity as may lawfully appear.⁶⁹ The final settlement of course cannot be made before

Where a guardian is also one of the executors of the estate of his ward's ancestor, and he confuses the funds of the estate so that it is impossible to determine from his accounts as guardian from which fund the support of his wards has been paid, the court is justified in concluding that it was paid from the funds of the estate. Hill v. Smith, 8 Wash. 330, 35 Pac. 1071.

Month. 428; Yeager's Appeal, 34 Pa. St. 173; Dietterich v. Heft, 5 Pa. St. 87. Consult also statutes in the various states.

An annual account is not required by statutes providing that the guardian shall give a bond conditioned to render an account at such times as the court directs and that he must present his account to the court at the end of one year from his appointment and as often thereafter as may be required. Curtis v. Devoe, 121 Cal. 468, 53 Pac. 936.

It is no objection to a guardian's first account that it was filed before the expiration of a year from his appointment. In re Hayden, 146 Cal. 73, 79 Pac. 588.

In Louisiana, notwithstanding the act of 1855, allowing the homologation of accounts, the tutor is bound to render an account, whenever he receives orders to that effect from the court, upon the suggestion of the under-tutor or any one else; or he may, at his option, render an account annually, and have the same homologated contradictorily with the under-tutor. Sample v. Scarborough, 43 La. Ann. 315, 8 So. 940; Gaillard v. Foster, 15 La. Ann. 121; Holmes v. Hemken, 6 Rob. 51.

In Alabama by virtue of special statutory provision, if a guardian fails to file his accounts and vouchers for a final settlement when cited the court may state an account against him and render a decree against him after complying with the preliminary requisites of the statute. Moore v. Baker, 39 Ala. 704; Childress v. Childress, 49 Ala. 237; Hughes v. Ringstaff, 11 Ala. 564. It is held, however, that the statute does not contemplate the rendition of a final decree against the guardian at the term to which he is cited to appear. Wright v. Clough, 17 Ala. 490. 69. Jacobson v. Anderson, 72 Minn. 426, 75 N. W. 607, holding further that payment to the expiration of the trust.⁷⁰ A settlement made during the ward's minority and before the guardian has resigned is void.⁷¹ It is no objection, however, that the account is settled after the ward's majority, provided it embraces only what accrued during minority.⁷² Jurisdiction remains in the probate court after the minor's majority over the estate in the hands of the guardian for the purposes of an accounting as to transactions during the ward's minority, but not as to any transactions occurring after he comes of age.⁷³

2. GROUNDS FOR REFUSING TO ACCOUNT. A guardian will not be required to account where it appears that he has received nothing belonging to the minor;⁷⁴ where the guardian's estate had previously been settled as an insolvent estate;⁷⁵ where a full settlement has been made with the ward after attaining majority and the release executed with full information and without fraud, deception, or concealment;⁷⁶ where the ward forfeited his right to an accounting by laches, or neglect;⁷⁷ or where funds unaccounted for had been used for domestic purposes by the guardian as the husband of his ward with her consent.⁷⁸ If he has acted as guardian he cannot refuse to account on the ground that the records do not show that he was appointed or had qualified as such,⁷⁹ and he cannot escape liability to account for funds received by him as guardian on the ground that it belongs to someone other than his ward.⁸⁰ So notwithstanding the fact that the guardian exhibits his books of account to the ward from year to year and also when she became of age, and at that time made a statement showing the balance due her, will not exempt him from liability to an account of the whole trust where no formal account is delivered to her and she did not examine the particulars of the account in the books.⁸¹

3. PENALTIES OR FINES FOR FAILURE TO ACCOUNT. Failure to comply strictly with the statute or neglect to render accounts with some regularity and promptness does not necessarily impose punitive responsibility on the guardian. If there be loss to the estate, the question of the guardian's liability therefor depends upon the circumstances under which the loss occurred.⁸² Nor has the court any jurisdiction to fine a guardian for failure to make settlement when cited so to do. The proper course after citation and refusal to account is by attachment after rule to show cause why he should not be proceeded against.⁸³

B. Who May Be Required to Account.⁸⁴ Any person acting as guardian whether as a natural⁸⁵ or statutory guardian (even though his appointment be

In Louisiana.—A dative tutor owes such accounting as the law requires tutors to render, but after his death any balance due by him to his wards becomes a debt of his succession and must be there recovered or if there be a universal legatee in possession from him; but the legatee owes no account as tutor and his settlement of the debt due in that capacity by his testator may be made with the new tutor extrajudicially or otherwise. Begue's Succession, 112 La. 1046, 36 So. 849.

be demanded by the personal representatives of a deceased ward,⁹⁸ by a creditor of the ward's estate,⁹⁹ or by a guardian's successor in office.¹ On the other hand a conservator appointed in another state for a minor who is a lunatic cannot require the guardian to account,² and in Louisiana it is held that the under-tutor cannot require an accounting by the tutor,³ unless on his removal.⁴

D. Requisites and Sufficiency of Account—1. IN GENERAL. The account filed by the guardian must be in compliance with the requirements of the statute;⁵ but it will be sufficient notwithstanding informalities if the ward's rights are fully protected thereby.⁶ It must be clear, accurate,⁷ and complete,⁸ and should be properly itemized.⁹ It should not include transactions antedating the guardianship.¹⁰ So it should be closed at the period when the guardianship terminated,¹¹ and should not include any transactions between the guardian and ward after the latter arrives at majority,¹² except payments on the account as it stood when the ward arrived at full age.¹³ It is also improper to include items of rent due the widow who is interested with the wards in the realty.¹⁴ So a note given by the guardian as his individual contract and secured by mortgage on the ward's land is neither an asset nor debt of the estate and is properly omitted from the settlement.¹⁵

2. WHERE THERE ARE SEVERAL WARDS. If there are several wards separate accounts should be filed for each ward,¹⁶ showing the disbursements and the balance in favor of or against each; ¹⁷ but it has been held unnecessary to state a separate account between the guardian and the administrator of a deceased infant ward, where there is no allegation of any misconduct on the part of the guardian but simply an objection to the manner of stating his account.¹⁸

3. VOUCHERS. The statutes ordinarily require that proper vouchers should be furnished with each item of expenditure,¹⁹ and they must state with reasonable particularity their purpose, on what account they were made, and the time when made so that it may appear that the expenditure was proper.²⁰

E. Proceedings and Actions For Accounting—1. JURISDICTION— a. Of Particular Courts—(1) EQUITY AND PROBATE COURTS—(A) Accounting by Guardian. Courts of equity have inherent jurisdiction to require accountings and settlements by guardians,²¹ but courts of probate have no such jurisdiction

Reprint 56, holding that where a guardian, after his ward attains full age, and before the accounts of his receipts and payments during the ward's minority are settled, continues to manage the property at the request of the ward, it is in effect a continuance of the guardianship as to the property, and the guardian must state and settle the entire account, embracing transactions after, as well as during, the minority, in a tribunal having jurisdiction of the guardianship.

Sufficiency of vouchers.—A physician's receipt for fees paid by the tutor and admitted without opposition is a sufficient voucher for sums paid to procure medical attendance for the ward. Richard v. Blanchard, 12 Rob. (La.) 524. So it has been held that a written receipt given by a ward to his tutor for a certain amount paid to the former on his reaching majority shows the fact of an indebtedness to that extent and serves as a voucher on an account when filed. Kidd's Succession, 51 La. Ann. 1157, 26 So. 74. And vouchers embracing charges for several years' board specifying the time and amount claimed are not too general to be admitted in evidence to the jury but when accounts are thus presented they ought to be strictly proved. *Hendry v. Basis of equity jurisdiction.—The equity courts take jurisdiction on the ground of their general superintendence of all infants and because the guardian is a trustee; and it is the peculiar duty of chancery to insure the faithful discharge of a trust. This course has many advantages, as the guardian may be examined on oath and is compellable to produce books and papers and other written documents that may lead to a thorough investigation of the case and a just decision of the controversy. Bowman v. Herr, 1 Penr. & W. (Pa.) 282.

The fact that the guardian may have given security by bond and may be liable in an action at law does not take away the jurisdiction of a court of equity to entertain a bill for an accounting against the guardian. The remedy at law on the bond is not for all purposes so complete as a bill in equity. Davis v. Davis, 1 Del. Ch. 256.

A bill lies against a superseded guardian to settle his accounts and compel him to pay over to the new guardian the amount in his hands. Com. v. Henshaw, 2 Bush (Ky.) 286.

Bill for settlement and discovery.—In a bill by the ward against a guardian for settlement, alleging that he has wasted the estate; that his sureties have been discharged by the court of ordinary; that the waste occurred before their discharge; and that the complainants have no means of proving that fact, but by resort to the conscience of defendant, and a discovery and decree is asked, ascertaining and fixing the time of the waste, with a view to charge the sureties in a future action, the discovery and decree will be allowed. Death of the ward does not deprive a court having probate powers of jurisdiction to settle the guardian's accounts. Veal v. Fortson, 57 Tex. 482.

A proceeding to settle the accounts of a removed guardian and to determine whether he should be allowed further credits as claimed by his sureties is within the jurisdiction of the probate court and a recourse to a court of general equity jurisdiction need not be had. Cutting v. Scherzinger, 40 Oreg. 353, 63 Pac. 393, 69 Pac. 439.

Settlement after ward reaches majority.—The probate court has jurisdiction of proceedings on accounting by the guardian after the ward has arrived at majority (Pierce v. Irish, 31 Me. 254; Jacobs v. Fouse, 23 Minn. 51; Pyatt v. Pyatt, 46 N. J. Eq. 285, 18 Atl. 1048; Wills' Appeal, 9 Pa. St. 103); and it has been held that the court has jurisdiction even as to transactions occurring after the ward's majority where at the request of the ward he continues the management of his estate (Pyatt v. Pyatt, 46 N. J. Eq. 285, 18 Atl. 1048. Compare People v. Scelye, 146 Ill. 189, 32 N. E. 458); but where the ward on reaching majority executes a release to the guardian the probate court has no jurisdiction of a suit to compel the guardian to account, but the ward must resort to a court of equity to have the settlement set aside (Butterick v. Richardson, 39 Oreg. 246, 64 Pac. 390).

Scope of accounting.—Where a guardian who was required in a pending suit to make and adopt the general analogies and exercise the general power of the chancery court over the same subject.²⁴ Under the statutes of some states this jurisdiction is exclusive.²⁵ In others jurisdiction is concurrent with that of courts of chancery,²⁶ and the ward at his election may proceed in either forum to compel a settlement unless the jurisdiction of the other has attached.²⁷

(B) Accounting by Personal Representatives of Guardian. Unless taken away by statute courts of equity have jurisdiction to require an accounting and settlement by the personal representative of a deceased guardian.²⁸ So in some jurisdictions by virtue of statutory provisions probate courts have jurisdiction to compel the personal representatives of a guardian who has died without making an accounting to do so in his stead,²⁹ and in others the courts seem to have this power without any express statutory authorization.³⁰ In other jurisdictions, how-an account of her management of her ward's estate, filed her accounts, showing a full statement of debits and credits, it was the duty of the court in passing upon the account to consider both, and not merely the items with which she was charged, sending her to another forum to establish her credits. Eckford v. Knox, 67 Tex. 200, 2 S. W. 372.

Where bondsmen intervene on a final accounting and allege that certain property held in the name of the guardian was purchased with the money of the wards, the cause will not be transferred from the probate to the equity court in order to subject such property to the claims against the guardian since such money can only be traced by a suit in equity after the account has been determined by the probate court. In re Tolifaro, 113 Iowa 747, 84 N. W. 936, 87 N. W. 682.

Testamentary guardians.—Jurisdiction of probate courts does not extend to those who as trustees under a will act in the capacity of guardians. Dunham v. Hatcher, 31 Ala. 483.

Jurisdictional facts.—Courts of ordinary, in regard to the settlement of accounts of guardians, are courts of general jurisdiction; and jurisdictional facts need not appear on the face of a proceeding, to render it valid. Weldon v. Patrick, 69 Ga. 724.

On proceedings to compel an annual accounting where there is no prayer for removal of the guardian and the ward is not of age, the court has no jurisdiction to make a decree for the final settlement of the account. Diaper v. Anderson, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 168.

Suppl. 600], holding that where a husband, who is a tenant by the curtesy of his wife's estate, subsequently procures his own appointment as guardian of his children, and thereafter receipts as such guardian for the amount of an award made in proceedings taken by a city to condemn real property which had belonged to his deceased wife, the ever, it has been held that the probate courts have no such power unless conferred by statute.³¹

(II) COURTS OF LAW. According to a few decisions an action of account may be brought in a court of law whenever the guardianship for any reason terminates, without any prior accounting and settlement in the probate court.³² But the weight of authority is to the effect that no action lies against a guardian until there has been a final accounting in the probate court.³³ The reason for this is that courts having original jurisdiction of accountings and settlements by guardians have ample power to compel an accounting and settlement and can do so more conveniently than a court of common law.³⁴ Where a guardian has received money of his ward after the ward has come of age, he cannot be cited to account for it in the orphans' court. The only remedy is a suit at law.³⁵

b. Territorial Jurisdiction. Ordinarily courts of the county in which the guardian was appointed have jurisdiction of proceedings for accounting;³⁶ but a testamentary guardian not being appointed by any court is always under the control of the court of the county in which he resides, and it is immaterial in what county the will by which he was appointed was probated.³⁷ The general rule relating to statutory guardians has been held to apply, although the minor³⁸ or the guardian³⁹ has removed beyond the jurisdiction. So it has been held that one who applies for and receives letters of guardianship from the court of a county surrogate's court, by virtue of his relation of guardian, has sufficient jurisdiction to require his executor to account for the award thus received by the husband.

Where property is never in the possession of a guardian but after his decease comes into the hands of his executor, the latter cannot be compelled to account for it by the probate court. The jurisdiction of that court rests entirely upon the circumstance that the testator was liable to account for the property as guardian. Bean v. Burleigh, 4 N. H. 550.

In Louisiana it is held that on the removal of a tutor from one parish to another, the judge of the new domicile of the tutor is the one having jurisdiction over the affairs of the minor. Farmer's Succession, 32 La. Ann. 1037; State v. Petit, 14 La. Ann. 565.

other than that in which he resides submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court and may be cited to account before it.⁴⁰

2. LIMITATIONS — a. In Proceedings in Probate Court. There is some conflict of authority as to whether the statute of limitations may become operative to prevent the ward from citing the guardian to account in the probate court. In some decisions it is held that the statute of limitation cannot bar the ward's right to cite the guardian to account in this court,⁴¹ the view being taken that a citation of a guardian to account is not an action within the meaning of the statutes of limitations.⁴² According to other decisions the statute becomes operative from the time the ward becomes of age or the trust terminates in any other way,⁴³ unless the guardian has been guilty of concealment or fraud.⁴⁴ So it has been held that lapse of time may be sufficient to raise a presumption of satisfaction of the ward's claim,⁴⁵ and many decisions hold that a long delay after reaching majority for which no reasonable excuse is given will bar the ward's right to an accounting.⁴⁶ The statute of limitations has been held inoperative as against charges by a guardian in his guardianship account,⁴⁷ and in another decision it is held that any presumption of payment arising from lapse of time may be explained by the circumstances in the case.⁴⁸

b. In Suits in Equity. According to the weight of authority the statute of limitations or lapse of time in analogy to the statute may operate to bar an action at law or bill in equity for an accounting and will commence to run from the time the ward comes of age or when for any other reason the trust terminates.⁴⁹ After

The statute of limitations is operative against the administrator of the ward who died after majority on a bill brought by the administrator for an accounting by the guardian. Morgan v. Woods, 69 Ga. 599.

Where a person becomes constructively guardian by intruding upon the estate of the minor, a bill for accounting must be brought within the statutory period of limitations after the minor becomes of age. Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md. 708.

Limitations of rule.—One who received money for his late ward a few days after the guardianship had ceased—the ward continuing one of his household and he still maintaining the relation of curator—will not be protected against the claim of the

the ward comes of age he stands in the relation of a creditor to his guardian.⁵⁰ The fiduciary relation of the guardian is not treated as a continuing and subsisting trust after the time when by the terms of its creation it should terminate and the proceeds of the trust be accounted for.⁵¹ Nevertheless the statute does not commence to run until termination of the guardianship,⁵² nor will the lapse of time bar a bill for accounting when during the greater part of the time plaintiffs were under age and under coverture.⁵³

3. PARTIES — a. In Proceedings in Probate Court. A married woman who is a guardian is a necessary party to proceedings to compel a final settlement of her account.⁵⁴ In proceedings to settle the accounts of a removed guardian without attempting to surcharge his accounts, but merely to determine whether additional credits should be allowed, the removed guardian is not a necessary party.⁵⁵ Creditors of the ward cannot intervene on a final settlement by the guardian.⁵⁶ It has been held that a surety on the bond cannot intervene,⁵⁷ although there are cases in which it has been permitted under certain circumstances.⁵⁸ So it has been held that where a tutor's accounts are opposed by a minor heir a coheir may intervene to obtain from their tutor a legal settlement of their ancestor's estate.⁵⁹

b. In Suits in Equity. On a bill against a guardian for an accounting, persons entitled to the fund and interested in taking the account are necessary parties.⁶⁰ While sureties are proper parties to a bill of this character,⁶¹ they are not necessary parties.⁶² If two administrators of an estate pay to a stranger money of a distributee for whom one of the administrators was guardian both administrators are properly made parties to a suit against the guardian for an account.⁶³ To a suit by an assignee of a certain share of a ward's claim on his former guardian, brought against such guardian, for an accounting, the ward Accounting by special guardian for sale of land.—A special guardian appointed in proceedings for the sale of infants' real estate was directed to invest the proceeds on real-estate security, with annual interest, the principal to be paid when the infants should become twenty-one years old, respectively. It was held that in the absence of an open disclaimer or repudiation of the trust to the knowledge of the wards by the special guardian, after they had become of full age, the statute of limitations did not begin to run against an accounting by him. Matter of Grandin, 61 Hun (N. 4. PROCESS AND APPEARANCE. Unless he voluntarily appears a guardian should be notified of his obligation to account.⁶⁵ While actual notice to the ward by citation is not necessary before the filing of an annual account,⁶⁶ the statutes usually require notice to the ward of a final settlement by his guardian,⁶⁷ and such notice is proper, although not required by statute.⁶⁸ If such final settlement is made during the ward's minority, notice to the newly appointed guardian will not be sufficient.⁶⁹ Absence of the notice unless waived avoids the settlement.⁷⁰ In some jurisdictions the ward must also be represented by a

The voluntary appearance of a guardian, without objection, on the final settlement of his accounts in the orphans' court, dispenses with the necessity of notice. Wilson v. Knight, 18 Ala. 129; McLeod v. Mason, 5 Port. (Ala.) 223.

Presumption as to sufficiency of notice.—A notice shown by the record to have been given as required by a former order will in a collateral attack be presumed to be valid. Stabler v. Cook, 57 Ala. 22.

The omission of the word "seal" from the copy of a published citation is immaterial. Heisen v. Smith, 138 Cal. 216, 71 Pac. 180, 94 Am. St. Rep. 39.

Time and manner of service.—Under a statute providing that when notice of any proceedings in a probate court shall be required by law or be deemed necessary by the probate judge, and the manner of giving the same shall not be directed by statute, the probate judge shall order notice of such proceedings to be given to all persons interested therein in such manner and for such length of time as he shall deem reasonable, the probate court, having authority to cite non-resident guardians to file their account as such, may properly direct the time and manner of the service of such citation. Schwab v. Rappold, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 340, 12 Cinc. L. Bul. 197. Where an order for the publication of a citation on a guardian to account recites that a citation previously issued had not been and could not be personally served, and that time did not remain to make publication before the return-day, and directs the issuance and publication of a new citation the fact that such new citation was not actually issued by the clerk until after the order for publication was made is not such an irregularity as to deprive the court of jurisdiction, provided it was issued before the publication was commenced. Heisen v. Smith, 138 Cal. 216, 71 Pac. 180, 94 Am. St. Rep. 39.

Effect of failure of non-resident guardian to appear.—Where the probate court has acquired jurisdiction of a non-resident guardian by publication of its order on him to submit his accounts for settlement, it may on his non-appearance refer the account to some proper person to state and present it. Trumpler v. Cotton, 109 Cal. 250, 41 Pac. 1033.

Upon a guardian filing his account, it is to be presumed that the hearing therein is appointed on his procurement, and it is for him to take notice thereof, without service of the order fixing the time and place therefor. *Brown v. Construction of notice.—Where a guardian was cited, after the ward had become of age, to make a "report," the citation should be construed as requiring the guardian to file a "final account." Heisen v. Smith, 138 Cal. 216, 71 Pac. 180, 94 Am. St. Rep. 39.

5. PLEADINGS. A bill for accounting is defective if it seeks a settlement of one item alone and not a general settlement of the whole account.⁷⁴ The general rules of pleading in respect of definiteness of averments,⁷⁵ amendments,⁷⁶ or as to joinder of causes of action⁷⁷ apply to bills for accounting and likewise to answers in such suits.⁷⁸

6. OBJECTIONS AND EXCEPTIONS. Exceptions may be filed to a guardian's account in the probate court for the purpose of having the account corrected,⁷⁹ and no statute expressly giving the right is necessary.⁸⁰ On the hearing of exceptions to a final account any mistake or error in a former account not theretofore adjudicated as to the excepter may be corrected.⁸¹ Creditors of a deceased guard-

76. An amendment impeaching a settlement introduces a new cause of action in a suit against the guardian for an account in which he sets up a settlement, and is not permissible. Dunsford v. Brown, 19 S. C. 560.

An amendment asking judgment on the guardian's bond against a guardian alone does not change a petition for an accounting into an action on the bond. Wycoff v. Michael, 95 Iowa 559, 64 N. W. 608.

Amendment to charge guardian's estate.—In a suit for an account with complainant's guardian, the executor of the guardian being made defendant because it is claimed that he had in his hands funds belonging to complainant, where the testimony shows that the guardian did not receive the money but that he failed to do so through negligence, an amendment may be allowed to charge the guardian's estate and have an accounting on the ground of his neglect. Dodson v. McKelvey, 93 Mich. 263, 53 N. W. 517.

77. Stallings v. Barrett, 26 S. C. 474, 2 S. E. 483, a complaint by an adult ward and three minor wards for an accounting by defendant who had been appointed guardian of the undivided estate of four plaintiffs and had given his single bond as such is not a misjoinder of causes of action.

78. McKay v. McKay, 33 W. Va. 724, 11 S. E. 213, holding that where one of two wards asks an accounting of her share of money received by the guardian for the common benefit of both wards and makes the other a defendant, the latter may file an answer alleging that the money was received for the common benefit of both wards and ask an accounting and decree for what is due him and a decree should be rendered for each of the wards against defendant.

Where a guardian seeks to set up by cross bill errors committed by the probate court on the settlement of his accounts, he must in the bill show that the errors occurred without his fault or neglect. Lyne v. Wann, 72 Ala. 43.

Evidence admissible under pleadings.—In a suit by a ward against his guardian for an accounting, where the complaint alleged that the guardian's accounts were incorrect, that such guardian had not accounted for rents and profits of the ward's land, and prayed for an examination into such accounts, and the guardian denied generally that the accounts were incorrect, and demanded proof of the allegations of the bill, it was held that under such answer it was proper to pass on the merits of the guardian's claim for the costs of a barn built on the ward's land as an offset to the rents with which he was chargeable, although the guardian made no claim therefor in his account. *Sutton v. A bill to correct error in a guardian's account is itself an exception thereto. Hooks v. Sellers, 16 N. C. 61.

Necessity of exceptions.—Exceptions to a report on a reference to attack a guardian's account are unnecessary when the master assigns unsatisfactory reasons for his conclusion. Hooks v. Sellers, 16 N. C. 61.

ian may file exceptions to the balance found due against the guardian's estate.⁸² While the next friend of the ward may file exceptions in his behalf,⁸³ only the next friend or someone appointed by the court can file exceptions for the ward.⁸⁴ One who has sued the guardian on his bond for goods furnished the ward on the guardian's credit and who has consented to a personal credit against the guardian cannot file exceptions to his final report.⁸⁵ Except in case of the ward's death under these circumstances his administrator may file exceptions.⁸⁶ No demurrer lies to an exception presenting a question of law.⁸⁷

7. EVIDENCE — a. In Proceedings in Probate Court — (i) BURDEN OF PROOF AND PRESUMPTIONS. On a guardian's accounting the burden is upon him of establishing any payments alleged to have been made by him for the ward's benefit.⁸⁸ If he asks an allowance for expenditures in excess of the income of the estate, he must show as strong a case as would have been necessary to obtain an order of court allowing such expenditures.⁸⁹ If he claims a credit for a debt paid he must show a prima facie case of liability against the estate.⁹⁰ If he charges his ward with counsel fees paid by him he must show that the services for which the fees were paid were necessary.⁹¹ If he claims a credit for assets not reduced to possession, the burden is on him to show that he used due diligence to collect.⁹² If he makes a claim for improvements, he must show that they were necessary and paid for at reasonable rates.⁹³ Accounts properly presented will be presumed correct if not contested.⁹⁴ The burden of showing that a credit allowed for the ward's services is insufficient is on the ward.⁹⁵ If the ward after coming of age has given a receipt to the guardian for all claims against him without a regular accounting and the guardian is subsequently cited to settle his accounts, the burden is on the ward to show error in the settlement.⁹⁶

(ii) ADMISSIBILITY. On citation of a guardian to account he may explain by parol a mistake apparent on the face of his report as to the interest in lands purchased and the amount of money received on the sale but he is estopped to show by parol that the ward had no interest therein.⁹⁷ If on exceptions to the account the ward seeks to charge the guardian with his distributive share in his father's estate for which he gave a receipt to the administrator the guardian may show the circumstances under which the receipt was given.⁹⁸ To show good faith in making an investment evidence as to consultations with the judge of the court having control of the estate and his verbal advice in favor of the investment is admissible.⁹⁹ Notwithstanding a settlement out of court with the ward may not be a compliance with a bond requiring settlement in the probate court, if required by that court, it may nevertheless be received as evidence that a further accounting should not be had.¹ If the guardian states a balance against him in dollars and cents he will not be permitted to impeach it by showing that the money was Confederate money.² If the guardian seeks an allowance for board furnished the ward it may be shown the ward was a member of his grandmother's family and provided for as such.³

(iii) WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY. A guardian's account as settled is the best evidence to prove the account.⁴ The returns of the guardian are only prima facie evidence for or against him and may be explained by parol.⁵ Where by statute abstracts of inventories of property recorded to preserve the mortgage of minors against their tutor are not evidence of the validity of their claim as to the amount due, they are not conclusive against the tutor as to the amount appearing to be due from him.⁶

b. In Suits in Equity. On a bill for accounting, the ward may show that the credits claimed by the guardian for disbursements should not be allowed because they had been paid for by work and labor or otherwise.⁷ If the guardian is charged with fraud in procuring another to take his place, evidence that he acted openly and with the knowledge of the family of his ward is admissible in his behalf.⁸ So parol evidence is admissible in his behalf to show that the money represented by certain certificates of deposit held by him on a bark which had perished with the fall of the southern confederacy was the money of his ward.⁹ Where it did not appear of record that the guardian had settled with his ward it was competent for the guardian to show that he had in fact paid to the ward all the money he had received, to show which evidence was admissible of the ward's financial condition about the time he came of age;¹⁰ and where a ward introduced a decree of the probate court as evidence of the guardian's indebtedness, it not appearing of record that the guardian had settled with the ward, it was competent for the guardian to show that the decree had been appealed from.¹¹

8. HEARING AND ORDER OR DECREE¹²—a. In Proceedings in Probate Court—

(i) HEARING. On presentation of an account for settlement the probate court after the required notice should examine it, whether exceptions are made or not, correct its errors, and confirm it.¹³ On proceedings to compel the guardian to account, the court may refer the account to a commissioner to state and present it,¹⁴ or it may make the calculation itself.¹⁵ If the court refers the account, it is error in the order of reference to direct the commissioner to take as the basis of his report the amount found to be due the ward in such ex parte settlement and deny the right to surcharge and falsify the settlement in a proper and legal manner.¹⁶ Where the bondsmen intervene in proceedings for a final settlement, the charge that the guardian and ward combine to defraud the bondsmen may be considered.¹⁷

(II) ORDER OR DECREE—(A) Form and Requisites. A decree or order on final settlement may direct payment of a balance found due on the settlement,¹⁸ but it seems that no formal direction to this effect is necessary.¹⁹ If there are several wards the interests of each must be separately designated.²⁰ The decree should be for a specific sum,²¹ and if for the delivery of property, it must specify the property to be delivered.²² If the ward is married, the order or decree should be in favor of the ward and her husband jointly.²³ If the minor appears by her next friend in opposition to approval of a final settlement and an amount is found due from the guardian, judgment should be rendered in favor of the next friend directing the guardian to pay the sum into the registry of the county court, to be held until the ward arrives at majority or until some legally authorized person shall sooner apply therefor.²⁴

(B) Enforcement. All decrees or orders made by a court of probate on the final settlement of a guardian's account have the force and effect of judgments at law,²⁵ and an execution may issue for any balance found due the ward,²⁶ or the guardian.²⁷ It has also been held that payment may be enforced by attachment.²⁸ Some decisions hold that this is so notwithstanding the guardian may be insolvent and unable to comply with the decree;²⁹ but the weight of authority is to the effect that the court may refuse to issue an attachment when it is manifest that the guardian is unable because of financial inability to comply with the decree, if the same is not due to any fraud or wrong-doing on his part,³⁰ and that if attachment is issued and the guardian has been committed the court has power to discharge him at any time on his showing his inability to comply with the order.³¹ In any event other remedies must be exhausted before an attachment will issue.³² So an action of assumpsit against the guardian will lie to enforce payment of a balance found due the ward.³³

b. Suits in Equity. Separate suits of accounting of several wards against a common guardian may be consolidated by order of court.³⁴ If a suit is brought against the executor of one alleged to be guardian, it is error to treat him as such without proof of his appointment and qualification.³⁵ One who excepts to an auditor's findings is not bound to overcome the presumption of their correctness by evidence showing error therein beyond a reasonable doubt, and a charge to that effect necessitates a new trial.³⁶ If there are separate findings as to the amount for which the guardian is chargeable and the amount with which he is credited and each finding is excepted to, there should be a separate verdict as to each finding.³⁷ Where a bill is filed against a guardian who has never settled his accounts, equity will settle it in the same manner as if he had made regular annual accounts, but his accounts at the termination of the guardianship will be settled on the same general principles which govern the ordinary settlement of an account between debtor and creditor.³⁸ If the bill seeks an accounting of personal property alleged to have been received by the guardian from the estate of the ward's father it is a good defense that the property had been recovered in detinue by the administrator of the father's estate.³⁹ Where a decree for an accounting is awarded complainant he is entitled to costs.⁴⁰

9. APPEAL⁴¹—a. To Intermediate Courts. In some jurisdictions the statutes provide for an appeal from an order or decree made by the probate court on an accounting and settlement to courts of intermediate jurisdiction, such as circuit,⁴² district,⁴³ or superior courts.⁴⁴ As an accounting of an equitable nature it is to be tried on appeal as an equitable proceeding.⁴⁵ The cause is to be tried de novo on

Change of venue.—Where the guardian appeals from the probate court to the circuit court of that county and the guardian takes a change of venue to another county, the latter court has jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. Yeoman v. Younger, 83 Mo. 424.

Appeal-bonds.—Whether the giving of an appeal-bond by the guardian is necessary depends wholly on statutory provisions. Under the Missouri statute he may be required to give bond. Potter v. Todd, 73 Mo. 101. Under the statutes of Wisconsin he need not give any bond. Stinson v. Leary, 69 Wis. 269, 34 N. W. 63.

Order requiring accounting.—Where application is made by the ward for an accounting and the guardian denies the jurisdiction of the court on the ground that he had been granted letters of administration by the probate court in another county, he may appeal from an order granting the application. *Halbert v. the appeal, and the court will determine the matters in controversy and revise and adjust the debts and credits according to right and justice.⁴⁶ The intermediate court can only settle the balance and then remand the cause to the probate court for further proceedings on the basis of the balance so ascertained.⁴⁷

b. To Court of Last Resort. Appeals to courts of last resort from judgments or orders on settlements made by guardians are regulated by statute, and they usually authorize an appeal from an order on a final settlement by a guardian.⁴⁸ Under some statutes if the guardian is dissatisfied an appeal is his only remedy.⁴⁹ Under the statutes of some jurisdictions until there has been a final settlement and discharge so that nothing remains for the guardian to do as such, an appeal does not lie from an order concerning the settlement of the guardianship.⁵⁰ Under others certain intermediate orders have been held appealable.⁵¹ Either the guardian or ward are entitled to appeal from an order or decree on final settlement.⁵² While a creditor of the ward may appeal from the decree on the guardian's final accounting,⁵³ it has been held that a surety of the guardian cannot appeal, the view being taken that it is not necessary to his safety.⁵⁴ All persons should be made

The intermediate court has the same power to mold its judgment in order to enforce the rights of the parties as if suits had been originally instituted in that court. Howard v. Barrett, 52 Ga. 15.

Evidence admissible.—The ward may show additional indebtedness of the guardian to him (Speer v. Tinsley, 55 Ga. 89); and on the other hand refusal to admit evidence as to the necessity of expenditures made by a guardian for repairs on the ward's realty on the ground that the probate court had refused to allow any credit therefor is erroneous (Buie v. White, 94 Mo. App. 367, 68 S. W. 101).

47. Crow v. Reed, 38 Ark. 482. And see Bondie v. Bourassa, 46 Mich. 321, 9 N. W. 433.

Under a statute requiring the judgment of the intermediate court to be certified to the county court to be carried into effect it is not necessary that the judgment allow execution to be issued thereon. Petty v. Petty, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 57 S. W. 923.

48. McFarland v. McFarland, 4 Ill. App. 157; Watson v. Watson, 65 Minn. 335, 68 N. W. 44.

A decree directing a ward to elect whether he will take interest or profits derived by his guardian from an investment of the trust fund in the guardian's business is not a final decree from which an appeal lies. Seguin's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 139.

49. Cameron v. Branden, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 777, holding further that on failure to appeal he cannot surcharge the settlement in the circuit court.

50. Carswell v. Spencer, 44 Ala. 204; Pfeifer v. Crane, 89 Ind. 485; Angevine v. Ward, 66 Ind. 460.

What is not a final decree.—An entry by the court that, on auditing a guardian's account, a certain sum is found to be in his hands as guardian, which sum, as administrator of the ward's estate, he is directed to retain until the further order of the court, has none of the properties of a final judgment or decree, and no appeal can be taken on it. Carswell v. Spencer, 44 Ala. 204.

51. Watson v. Watson, 65 Minn. 335, 68 N. W. 44 (holding that a statute providing for an appeal from an order of the probate court allowing or refusing to allow an account of the guardian is intended to apply to annual accounts); Moore v. Askew, 85 N. C. 199 (holding that the ward is entitled to demand of her guardian an annual statement of the manner and nature of his investments of the estate and that a rejection of the probate court of such demand is the denial of a substantial right which entitled the ward to an appeal).

Order requiring accounting.—Where the county court makes an order requiring a guardian to account after it has lost jurisdiction by the release of the guardian by the ward after the latter has attained her majority, as authorized by Hill Annot. Laws, § 2884, an appeal will lie therefrom, since it is in effect a judgment in a new action, of which the court has no jurisdiction. Butterick v. Richardson, 39 Ore. 246, 64 Pac. 390.

An order discharging a guardian is not appealable. Lehman v. Gajusky, 75 Tex. 566, 12 S. W. 1122.

52. Petition for leave to appeal.—The erroneous belief of a guardian charged upon his non-compliance with a citation to settle an account when his ward became of age that a subsequent settlement out of court afterward repudiated by the ward made it unnecessary for him to appeal is such mistake as will entitle the guardian to maintain a petition for leave to appeal. Cutts v. Cutts, 58 N. H. 602.

parties who have an interest in maintaining the judgment,⁵⁵ and statutory requirements as to the time of taking appeals must be complied with.⁵⁶ The record should contain the evidence,⁵⁷ and in the absence thereof the finding of the court below will be conclusive.⁵⁸ It must also contain the exceptions.⁵⁹ Errors relied on for a reversal must be excepted to.⁶⁰ Objections not raised below will not be considered,⁶¹ and under some statutes only such errors as were complained of in the motion for new trial will be considered.⁶² Unless the record shows affirmatively to the contrary, the appellate court will presume in favor of the correctness of the lower court's rulings.⁶³ Decisions on questions of fact will not be disturbed unless clearly erroneous.⁶⁴ Matters as to which the court below has discretion cannot be reviewed on appeal, except in case of abuse of discretion.⁶⁵ So the court cannot grant relief proper by reason of facts occurring subsequently to the decree in the lower court. Such facts can only be reviewed on the record before the lower court.⁶⁶ And where the ward after coming of age certified that his guardian's final account was correct and gave him a release of all demands, he will not be permitted on appeal to open the settlement because the guardian had not charged himself with interest.⁶⁷ The denial of a credit for improve-factory to a surety on the guardian's bond, but the surety is entitled to a valid decree for his own protection, he may cause a new proceeding to be instituted in that court for a settlement of the account upon due notice; and the mere want of such notice, without any refusal of the probate court to cause due notice to be given, is not a ground on which the surety can appeal from the decree. Contra, Farrar v. Parker, 3 Allen (Mass.) 556.

Cissell*, 77 Mo. 371 (holding that the appeal must be taken during the term or within ten days after as prescribed by statute).

tarily appears and makes a settlement of his accounts he cannot afterward object in error that the record does not show that he derived his trust from the court with which his settlement has been made. *McLeod v. ments placed on the ward's land is a proper matter for review.⁶⁸ An inquiry whether the guardian has made use of a balance due the ward on the filing of his accounts before the final allowance thereof may be made on appeal.⁶⁹ It is not a ground to reverse that the lower court directed each party to pay his own costs,⁷⁰ that there was error committed in the mode of averaging proof if the whole evidence in the cause fully justified the credits allowed in relation to the subjects affected by such evidence,⁷¹ or that the proceeds of a small tract of land not belonging to the minor's estate were included in the accounting, the guardian after mixing funds having furnished the evidence by which they might be separated.⁷² So if the entire estate in the hands of the guardian is not more than necessary to pay expenses proper and necessary to be made, and which were made, the court will not reverse a decree in order to charge the guardian with a greater sum by way of interest.⁷³ If the record fails to disclose evidence on which an allowance for expenses incurred was made, the decree will be reversed.⁷⁴ After a guardian has been refused allowance for certain credits claimed for improvements on the ward's realty, and such disallowance has been affirmed, the guardian cannot after remand present a written lease which provides that the tenant should be credited on the rent with all improvements and repairs as it was his duty to present such writing at the former trial of the case.⁷⁵ When a balance has been found against the guardian upon a settlement of his accounts, from which he has prosecuted a writ of error and superseded execution by a bond, the decree is suspended and cannot be looked to, to ascertain the amount in the hands of the guardian for which he is liable in his capacity as such.⁷⁶

F. Private Accounting and Settlement⁷⁷ — 1. WITH WARD — a. In General.

A settlement with the ward during minority and the execution of a release by him does not discharge the guardian from liability.⁷⁸ A settlement of this character would defeat the whole object of the guardianship. It is as clearly waste for a guardian to hand over the effects of his ward to be wasted by him as for the guardian to waste them himself.⁷⁹ So a settlement by a guardian with his ward shortly after the latter's majority will be closely scrutinized, and the burden of proving good faith rests upon the guardian.⁸⁰ To sustain a private settlement, the guardian must show that he fully and clearly disclosed the condition of the ward's estate at the time of the settlement,⁸¹ that he exercised no undue influence, and that the settlement is fair and equitable.⁸² Every reasonable intendment is to be made in favor of the ward.⁸³ A release given by the ward is not effective if he has acted in ignorance of his rights or the guardian is chargeable with fraud, undue influence, or failure to disclose facts which it is his duty to disclose,⁸⁴ and where a statute requires certain acts on the part of the guardian to render a private settlement valid, such settlement is void if the statutory requirements are not complied with,⁸⁵ notwithstanding the settlement is evidenced by a notarial act and confirmed by order of court.⁸⁶ It is very generally held, however, that a private settlement by the guardian with the ward after the latter has reached his majority will not be set aside where the guardian has not been guilty of fraud or undue influence and the settlement is fair,⁸⁷ especially where the ward acquiesces for a long period of time in the settlement.⁸⁸ In order that a transaction shall operate as a release by the ward the intention that it shall so operate must be clear and unequivocal,⁸⁹ and a release will not be held to include any claims not clearly within its terms.⁹⁰ A release cannot in any case be inferred from mere lapse of time.⁹¹ And a mere verbal discharge is inoperative.⁹²

b. Proceedings to Set Aside. Courts of equity have jurisdiction to set aside private settlements between the guardian and ward on the ground of fraud or undue influence,⁹³ but the probate court has no such jurisdiction unless especially conferred by statute.⁹⁴ It may retain jurisdiction over the guardian only to compel an accounting and settlement, after the ward attains his majority.⁹⁵ It is not necessary for the ward to tender back the consideration received before bringing suit to set aside the settlement.⁹⁶ It is sufficient if he offers to return whatever he may have received at the hearing.⁹⁷ The administrator of a deceased guardian and the sureties on his bond are properly joined as defendants in a suit to set aside a settlement and release obtained by the guardian.⁹⁸ If a statute makes the settlement void unless preceded by the delivery by the tutor to the wards of the full account of his gestion with vouchers in support thereof, it will be sufficient to allege non-compliance with this requirement without further alleging error or mistake.⁹⁹

2. WITH HUSBAND OF WARD OR WITH WARD AND HUSBAND. A female minor is emancipated by marriage,¹ and a settlement by the guardian with the wife and her husband and a receipt given by them is binding on the ward,² in the absence of mistake or fraud.³ Especially is this true where there has been long acquiescence in the settlement.⁴ So a settlement with the husband of the ward operates as a discharge of the guardian,⁵ especially when made with her advice and consent,⁶ and it cannot be set aside except for fraud or mistake.⁷

G. Charges and Credits—1. CHARGES. A guardian is chargeable on final settlement with the value of all personal property that came into his hands during the guardianship with interest on all cash holdings and deposits and with the income of the real estate and all investments controlled by him.⁸ This rule applies as well to property not inventoried.⁹ And he is also chargeable with all the ward's estate which he might have reduced to possession by the exercise of proper diligence and prudence.¹⁰ He must account for property received by him from another state.¹¹ The guardian as such and his sureties are not liable for money which has been improperly paid over to him.¹² The guardian cannot be required to account as such for rents and profits received by him as agent of his wife,¹³ nor for the widow's share of the personalty paid over to him by consent of the widow and of the administrator.¹⁴ And where the claim of a wife against

Novation of guardian's debt to ward.—A husband took payable to himself as his wife's trustee an individual note under seal of her guardian in settlement of his account and with his wife gave the guardian a receipt in full releasing him "from any and all liability growing out of, or connected with said guardianship." The marriage settlement under which the husband was trustee limited the property settled including the note to the wife for life with remainder over to her children. 2. CREDITS. The rules in respect of credits to which the guardian is entitled have already been considered in another chapter, and it is sufficient to state in this connection that the guardian is entitled to credit for all proper expenditures made for the care, maintenance, and education of a ward, and in the management of his estate.¹⁶

H. Compensation — 1. RIGHT TO COMPENSATION.¹⁷ In England guardians, like executors, administrators, and other trustees, are not allowed compensation for their services, either at law or in equity;¹⁸ but in the United States by virtue of statutory provisions a guardian is entitled to compensation for his services, either in the form of a reasonable allowance, or as commissions on the amount of his receipts and disbursements as shown by the record.¹⁹ But to entitle him to compensation for services they must be such as he has authority to render.²⁰

2. AMOUNT OF COMPENSATION — a. In General. The amount of the compensation is frequently fixed by statute.²¹ If the statute fixes a maximum and minimum rate of commissions, the highest rate will be allowed only in a case of the greatest merit, as where the guardian's duties have been difficult and of long continuance.²² In the absence of statute fixing the amount of the allowance it is within the sound discretion of the probate court,²³ varying according to the cir-

Allowance to father as guardian.—A father, as guardian of his minor children, should not be allowed for his services an amount exceeding five per cent of the sums received and disbursed by him. Hedges v. Hedges, 73 S. W. 1112, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 2220.

A proportionate compensation may be allowed to a retiring guardian for legitimate expenses incurred and services rendered in the conduct of the estate, although the accounting guardian, by its insolvency, prematurely terminated the trust, it appearing that the securities in which the principal was invested, except as to a minute fraction, were marketable and intact. circumstances of each particular case.²⁴ The rate of compensation will depend upon a variety of circumstances, such as the amount of the estate, the trouble in managing it, and whether fees have been paid to counsel for assisting the guardian in the management.²⁵

b. Extra Allowance. While as a general rule a guardian is not entitled to compensation beyond that allowed by law,²⁶ yet under special circumstances and for extraordinary services an extra allowance may be made in the discretion of the court,²⁷ as a different rule would tend to prevent faithfulness and care in the management of the estate.²⁸ Such allowance should be made in each case as the importance and difficulty of the management of the estate may require.²⁹

3. BASIS OF ALLOWANCE. As a general rule a guardian should be allowed commissions only on sums actually collected and disbursed by him for the benefit of the ward,³⁰ and this only when the transaction occurred before the ward came

Where a ward was difficult to manage, and her estate amounted to a little over two thousand dollars, thirty dollars per annum was a proper allowance to the guardian for services, he being charged with interest on the ward's funds held by him. Turner v. Turner, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1901) 62 S. W. 607.

Interest in lieu of compensation.—It is not error to allow a guardian the interest on a small balance in his hands, in lieu of compensation for his services as guardian. Mattox v. Patterson, 60 Iowa 434, 15 N. W. 262.

Illustrations of rule.—Where a ward's estate consisted wholly of a United States pension, the guardian was entitled to fees for collecting the same, in addition to his regular charge. Bickerstaff v. Marlin, 60 Miss. 509, 45 Am. Rep. 418. A guardian is not bound to go beyond the limits of the state in the execution of the trust, and upon doing so is entitled to extra compensation. Huson v. Wallace, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 1.

Service performed by a guardian in lending his ward's money and compounding the interest thereon does not belong to the class of special or extraordinary services, within the meaning of section 1825 of the code, which gives extra compensation for such services. Allen v. Martin, 36 Ala. 330.

An investment or reinvestment of the trust fund for the purpose of producing an income is not such a paying out of the trust moneys as entitles the guardian to commissions unless the security was turned over to the ward and applied in payment on account of the estate. Matter of Kellogg, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 265.

Commissions for the custody and safe-keeping of either money or choses in action are not allowable. Alexander v. Alexander, 8 Ala. 796.

Commissions on an amount paid the widow of the ward's father for her part of the rent of lands subject to her dower are not allowable. State v. Elliott, 82 Mo. App. 458.

Commissions on the income and compensation for maintenance may both be allowed the guardian if the rate charged for board is not excessive and no misconduct is shown. Jetter's Estate, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 319.

In Louisiana the tutor is entitled to ten per cent commission on the amount of revenues of his pupils arising from five per cent of age.³¹ He will not ordinarily be allowed commissions on funds of the ward used in his own business,³² nor on funds which did not pass through his hands and for which he is not responsible but which were received by the ward after he became of age,³³ nor on money ascertained to be in his hands on final settlement,³⁴ nor on debts of the ward paid to a firm of which the guardian is a member,³⁵ nor on charges for the infant's board,³⁶ nor for collecting or receiving back the principal of the fund invested by him,³⁷ nor for receiving the ward's property where the act was merely of a formal nature.³⁸ So annual rests in the accounts of a guardian cannot be taken for the purpose of allowing him commissions at full rates upon the balance then found.³⁹

4. TIME OF CHARGING. The charge for compensation may be made from time to time as it is earned.⁴⁰

5. WAIVER OR FORFEITURE OF COMPENSATION — a. In General. Where the guardian has voluntarily waived compensation it cannot be charged in a restated account which has been ordered for the correction of errors,⁴¹ and he is not entitled to commissions in case of an entire failure to perform his duty.⁴² So if he has been guilty of malfeasance in the management of the ward's estate or the ward's interest has suffered because of his neglect of duty in the management of the estate he will not be entitled to compensation or commissions.⁴³ He will not, interest on the pupil's funds in his hands, from rentage and other sources of revenue, but not on cash sales of personal property, and cash collected on notes inherited by the minors. In re Hollingsworth, 45 La. Ann. 134, 12 So. 12. And see Sims v. Billington, 50 La. Ann. 968, 24 So. 637.

In Mississippi it has been held that a statute providing that the clerk of the chancery court, when appointed guardian of a minor who has property, shall be allowed not more than ten per cent "on the amount of the estate," if finally settled by him, or not more than five per cent, if not so settled, applies to the personal estate and the income of the realty, and not to the corpus of the real estate. *Bass v. Limitations of rule.—If the guardian makes regular returns so as to show at all times what amount is due the ward he will be allowed commissions, although he uses the ward's money in his business (Carr v. Askew, 94 N. C. 194. Compare Seguin's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 139); and a guardian who had used some of the trust funds in his own business and, expecting to pay no interest thereon, had charged no commissions was allowed commissions on being charged with interest (Rapalje v. Hall, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 399).

Where the guardian is the borrower of the trust fund he is not entitled to compensation for taking care of it. Farwell v. Stéén, 46 Vt. 678.

however, be deprived of the right to compensation because of a mere neglect of some duty appertaining to his office if he has acted in good faith and no injury results from his neglect.⁴⁴ And a statute providing that where a guardian is found chargeable with any money not included in his statement he shall have no commission on the money not embraced therein does not bar his right to commissions on money embraced in the statement.⁴⁵

b. Failure to File Accounts. The guardian is not entitled to commissions on failure to file accounts, where a statute expressly so provides,⁴⁶ and in the absence of such provision the guardian will forfeit his commissions if his neglect is injurious to the interests of the ward.⁴⁷ If, however, he has managed the estate in good faith and his neglect to file accounts has not operated to the injury of the ward, he will be entitled to commissions.⁴⁸

I. Costs and Expenses — 1. IN GENERAL. Expenses incurred in an accounting will ordinarily be allowed the guardian in the settlement of his accounts.⁴⁹

Application of rule.—Where an audit is rendered necessary by the carelessness of a guardian in not keeping an account, the guardian's commission should not be disallowed, in the absence of any proof of fraud or dishonesty, or that any part of the fund was used in the guardian's business, or lost, or exposed to damages. Hoshour's Estate, 11 York Leg. Rec. (Pa.) 159. So where the transfer of a ward's funds from one state to another was approved by the probate court, and was necessary to preserve the ward's estate, the fact that the transfer was not made in strict conformity with the statute will not defeat the guardian's right to a commission for making the transfer. 49. In re Carman, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 690.

If he fails to account at the time required by law he will be liable for costs of the citation and the proceedings thereon.⁵⁰ If he has discharged his duties, he is entitled to a reasonable allowance for defending his settlements.⁵¹ If he has not so discharged his duties, he is not entitled to an allowance;⁵² and if in order to preserve his rights it is necessary for the ward to file objections to the account, the guardian is chargeable with costs.⁵³ If an audit is rendered necessary by the fault of the guardian he is properly chargeable with the expenses thereof,⁵⁴ but where the guardian acted in good faith with no attempt at fraud or delay no part of the costs of the audit should be imposed on him.⁵⁵ Plaintiff in error is liable for costs in correcting clerical misprisions in the entry of a decree on a final settlement.⁵⁶ Where, on exceptions by a ward to the report of his guardian, the court awarded to the guardian costs expended outside of counsel fees in resisting the exceptions to a certain investment, the guardian on appeal being surcharged with such investment, he should not be allowed such costs.⁵⁷ Where a tutor appeals from a judgment charging him with a balance as due his ward, which is arrived at by opposition made to his account as tutor, which as filed showed a balance in his favor, and such judgment is affirmed, the costs of appeal should be borne by the tutor.⁵⁸ On appeal to an intermediate court from the probate court, the intermediate court may allow the guardian his reasonable expenses in accounting.⁵⁹

2. ATTORNEY'S FEES. Under ordinary circumstances a guardian may be allowed attorney's fees incurred in preparing his final account,⁶⁰ in defending it against the ward's exceptions,⁶¹ or in contesting the accounts of a former guardian.⁶² He will not, however, be entitled to an allowance for attorney's fees incurred in preparing his accounts, if the services are rendered necessary by his own fault or neglect of duty,⁶³ or if it does not appear that the services were needed;⁶⁴ nor will he be entitled to an allowance for services rendered in obtaining an unfair settlement with the ward⁶⁵ or in keeping him out of his just rights;⁶⁶ nor in defending a suit against him for a settlement.⁶⁷ Where both parties appeal from the final settlement, the ward contesting most of the items, which were very numerous, and the balance found to be due from the ward to the guardian was increased, a judgment is properly rendered against the ward for all costs and expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred by the guardian on appeal.⁶⁸

J. Operation and Effect⁶⁹ — 1. OF FINAL ACCOUNTING AND SETTLEMENT.

Although a guardian files accounts of his guardianship as required by law, they conclude nobody, unless the court makes an order approving them.⁷⁰ If it refuses to do so, this is not such final action and judgment as to prevent the court from again examining the account and then affirming it.⁷¹ But an order or decree of the probate court rendered on a final accounting and settlement of a guardian is conclusive on the ward, the guardian, and the sureties on his bond as to all matters which are properly included in the account unless attacked in some direct proceeding on the ground of fraud, accident, or mistake.⁷² Such order or decree

In Maryland the final accounts with the guardian settled in the orphans' court are but prima facie evidence of their correctness. State v. Baker, 8 Md. 44.

In Tennessee settlements of accounts whether annual or final are prima facie evidence of the correctness of the account as stated and settled but are not conclusive. Henley v. Robb, 86 Tenn. 474, 7 S. W. 190; Matlock v. Rice, 6 Heisk. 33; Pickens v. Bivens, 4 Heisk. 229. And to be prima facie correct as against the ward, he must have notice of the settlement. McNutt v. Roberts, (Ch. App. 1898) 48 S. W. 300.

The settlement made by a guardian on his removal has been held a final settlement and as such conclusive on the sureties. State v. Bilby, 50 Mo. App. 162. See also Com. v.

cannot be collaterally attacked in any form of proceedings.⁷³ This rule, however, necessarily presupposes the jurisdiction of the court to make the order or decree. A want of jurisdiction is fatal to the decree or order whether assailed directly or collaterally.⁷⁴ So matters which were only collaterally introduced, which did not properly enter into the accounts, or which were not adjudicated by the court are not concluded by the final settlement.⁷⁵

2. OF INTERMEDIATE ACCOUNTINGS. Annual or partial accounts of a guardian, although approved by the court, have not the force and effect of a final judgment and are in no sense conclusive of the correctness thereof.⁷⁶ These accounts

Gracey, 96 Pa. St. 70. So under a statute providing that if a guardian be removed he shall account for all the property belonging to his ward at such a time as the court shall order, the court has power to determine after the guardian's removal what effects of the ward the guardian has had in his possession, and the court's judgment in the matter is conclusive against both guardian and sureties. Bopp v. Hainsford, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 340, 45 S. W. 744.

Effect of order for payment.—Where the final settlement is approved, the fact that an order is made several years subsequent thereto directing payment of the amount found due the guardian on final settlement does not prevent him from showing that he has paid the amount due in full or in part. The order is not an adjudication where the guardian had paid all or any part of the amount found due on the settlement. George v. Patterson, 55 Ark. 588, 18 S. W. 930.

Settlement during minority.—The probate court has no jurisdiction to proceed to a final settlement during the minority of the ward, and such a settlement is no bar to a bill for an accounting and final settlement filed by the ward after her marriage (Lewis v. Alred, 57 Ala. 628), or to objections to the commissions allowed or other charges in the accounts on a final accounting properly taken on the ward's

Smith*, 106 Ind. 239, 6 N. E. 333. So the final report and discharge of a guardian is not a bar to an action against him by his ward to enforce a constructive trust as to land purchased by him, where he was not required to and did not report concerning that transaction. Taylor v. Calvert, 138 Ind. 67, 37 N. E. 531. And an accounting in the probate courts does not bar a bill in equity for an accounting of rents accruing after the accounting in the probate court. *Keeney v. Qualification of rule.—In some jurisdictions the rule stated in the text has been held not to operate in the guardian's favor to the same extent as it does in favor of the ward. Thus in Mississippi it has been held that the settlement is not conclusive upon the ward (Austin v. Lamar, 23 Miss. 189); but that the annual accounts are final and conclusive against the guardian in the court where rendered and can only be set aside by due course of procedure. It is held, however, that any inaccuracies in the accounts arising from inadvertence or oversight, or from palpable mistake or miscalculation, may in proper cases be corrected (Coffin v. Bramlitt, 43 Miss. 194, 97 Am. Dec. 449; McFarlane v. Randle, 41 Miss. 411; Crump v. Gerock, 40 Miss. 765; Johnson v. Miller, 33 Miss. 553). In Pennsylvania partial or annual accounts are not conclusive upon the ward (Douglas' Appeal, 82 Pa. St. 169; Yeager's Appeal, 34 Pa. St. 173); but the guardian is estopped to deny their correctness except perhaps so far as may be necessary to correct the errors or mistakes (Walls' Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 14. And see Yeager's Appeal, 34 Pa. St. 173). So in Georgia it was formerly held that the guardian is estopped on public policy to deny the correctness of his report (Scott v. Haddock, 11 Ga. 258); later decisions, however, hold that a guardian may explain his returns by parol and show the actual truth of his accounts (Johnson v. McCullough, 59 Ga. 212; Napier v. Jones, 45 Ga. 520). In Johnson v. McCullough, 59 Ga. 212, 228, it is said: "It may be that this is treating too lightly his solemn admissions, made on oath, approved and recorded; but such seems to be the latest adjudication on the subject."

Statutory exception to rule.—Under the statutes of Ohio, an annual settlement when judicially passed upon by the court is final between the guardian and ward unless appealed from or opened in accordance with the provisions of the statutes. Woodmansie v. Woodmansie, 32 Ohio St. 18.

made in conformity with the statutory requirements,⁸³ and, although their correctness may be rebutted,⁸⁴ the burden is on the party attacking the settlement to show error therein.⁸⁵

K. Opening and Modifying or Vacating Settlement⁸⁶ — 1. JURISDICTION.

Courts of equity have jurisdiction to open and modify or set aside final settlement of guardians when sufficient grounds are shown,⁸⁷ and the settlement may be reopened on petition or bill of review in the probate court in some jurisdictions,⁸⁸ although in others the jurisdiction of courts of equity is exclusive.⁸⁹ The proceeding is properly brought in the county where the guardian qualified.⁹⁰

2. NATURE OF PROCEEDING. The proceeding to open and correct or set aside may be by original bill,⁹¹ by bill of review in equity,⁹² or by bill or petition for review in the probate court,⁹³ or this court may recall and restate an account of a guardian once allowed and passed during the same term at which it was so

Reports of husband of guardian.—If the husband of the guardian assumes to manage the ward's estate and makes reports in her name not under oath of the correctness of which she has no knowledge, the approval thereof by the court will not entitle them to the same protection under the reports as if made out in the husband's own name and as if he was legal guardian. *Lehmann v. In Texas the revision and correction of the settlement of a guardian's account in the district court upon proof of fraud or mistake under the thirty-ninth section of the act of 1848 (Hartley Dig. art. 1570) is an original proceeding, and the certiorari being designed only to bring up the record of the probate court is unnecessary where a complete transcript of the proceeding of that court is filed with the petition. Hagerty v. Scott, 10 Tex. 525.

Joinder.—A ward may bring suit on his guardian's bond and join therewith an action to set aside an order approving the last report of the guardian and discharging him from his trust; and the report of the guardian and order of the court discharging the guardian from his trust constitute no bar to such action, the matters complained of not being those disclosed in the report and adjudicated by the court, but rather the matters that were concealed from the knowledge of the court and were not passed upon in the order of approval, relating to the negligence of the guardian. *State v. In Tennessee the probate court has no jurisdiction to entertain a bill in the review of

3. GROUNDS. Fraud,⁹⁵ mistake,⁹⁶ and surprise⁹⁷ are sufficient grounds to open and correct or set aside a final settlement by the guardian, provided the complainant is without fault or negligence on his own part.⁹⁸ It is very generally held, however, that a court of equity has no jurisdiction to set aside a settlement except on these grounds, and that the party complaining must in order to entitle him to relief be without fault or negligence.⁹⁹ In some jurisdictions, however, special grounds of review in the probate court are provided by statute.¹ Mere irregularities in the execution of the trust constitute no ground to set aside the settlement where the interest of the ward did not suffer thereby,² and if a settlement was made without fraud or mistake, it will not be set aside in a court of equity, although made in a confederate court of probate.³ So a defense by a

It is not necessary to show actual fraud between the parties. If there was not a bona fide controversy between the succeeding and the retiring guardian, the settlement will be reopened at the instance of the ward. Batts v. Winstead, 77 N. C. 238.

If a guardian improperly pays out money on an order of court obtained by misrepresentation, this is such fraud as will be ground to set aside the final settlement. Wainwright v. Smith, 106 Ind. 239, 6 N. E. 333.

If a retiring guardian turns over to his successor the note of an insolvent, this is such evidence of imposition as will authorize the court in setting aside the settlement. Favorite v. Slauter, 79 Ind. 562.

Fraudulent concealment of property from the ward and the court is sufficient ground to vacate the settlement. Lataillade v. Oreña, 91 Cal. 565, 27 Pac. 924, 25 Am. St. Rep. 219.

Fraudulent collusion with third party.—Where a guardian confederating with another presents to the court a false statement and obtains an order for the payment to the confederate of a claim not properly chargeable against the estate of his ward, there is such fraud as authorizes the setting aside of his final settlement. *Wainwright v. 96. Ruble v. Helm, 57 Ark. 304, 21 S. W. 470, in which decision it was held that a mistake even as to so small an amount as ten dollars could not be disregarded under the maxim that the law takes no account of trifles.

Application of rule.—On a bill to open a settlement on the ground of mistake, relief will be denied where plaintiff at the time of the settlement had substantial information as to the facts alleged as ground for relief. McDow v. Brown, 2 S. C. 95. So a guardian cannot obtain relief against a final decree on account on the ground that it was rendered without notice to him and in his absence, that he was not entitled to notice and was guilty of laches in not attending. Allman v. Owen, 31 Ala. 167.

1. See Lee's Estate, 9 Pa. Co. guardian that in his filed accounts he had charged himself with too high rate of interest for the use of his ward's money when not made before judgment against him as guardian including such interest is not ground for setting aside the settlement.⁴

4. PERSONS WHO MAY MAINTAIN PROCEEDINGS AND PARTIES. A surety on the guardian's bond has no standing to open a decree settling a guardian's account.⁵ If the bill or petition is brought by the husband of the ward she should be joined.⁶ A bill by a ward and another entitled to an annuity charged on the property of the ward against the guardian and his sureties for a reëxamination of the guardianship account is not defective for misjoinder of parties, multifariousness, or want of equity.⁷

5. LIMITATIONS. No general rule can be stated as to the time when proceedings to open and correct or set aside a settlement must be commenced. Thus in one state the courts have adopted by analogy for suits to set aside settlements by personal representatives.⁸ In another it has been held that a bill to set aside a settlement for fraud, although not within the terms of a statute barring a bill of review after a lapse of three years, is by analogy governed by the same limitation.⁹ In another it is held that where a statute does not specify the time within which a settlement may be opened for fraud or mistake it must depend upon the sound discretion of the court, and the circumstances of each particular case considered with reference to the nature and extent of the account, the condition and situation of the parties, and the character and evidence of the alleged fraud or mistake.¹⁰ Where the procedure is by bill of review in the probate court, it has been held in one jurisdiction that the bill must be filed at the term at which the decree is rendered.¹¹ In another the courts follow by analogy the limitation of five years prescribed by the statute for review by writ, of final decrees confirming the original or supplementary account of any executor, administrator, or guardian.¹² If filed within that time the bill will be entertained,¹³ but not otherwise.¹⁴ Where the bill is based on fraud the statute commences to run from the discovery of the fraud and not from the time the account was confirmed.¹⁵ Where a statute provides that on the marriage of a female ward the guardianship shall be immediately settled and the guardian discharged, the statute runs against her right to open the settlement

9. Willis v. Rice, (Ala. 1904) 37 So. 507, holding further that where a ward after signing a paper consenting to the guardian's discharge which was procured by a fraud repeatedly sought to have a statement of the account within a reasonable time, which he refused, and thereafter and within three years after the guardian's discharge she filed a bill to set the same aside and for an accounting she was not barred either by limitation or laches.

12. Littleton's Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 177; Lee's Estate, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. 655. In this case it is said that the supreme court has suggested the rule for defining laches when they declared that it would be wise to follow in all cases by analogy the limits prescribed by the act of 1840. It will then become a statute of limitations as applicable to cases where relief is sought against fraud or where the purpose is to remedy mistake.

15. Kuhn's Appeal, 87 Pa. St. 100. Compare Blake v. Wolfe, 105 Ky. 380, 49 S. W. 19, 50 S. W. 2, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1212, 1830, holding that a statute providing that "in actions for relief for fraud or mistake, or damages for either, the cause of action shall not be deemed to have accrued, until the discovery of the fraud or mistake; but no such action shall be brought ten years after the time of making the contract or the perpetration of the fraud," an action to surcharge a guardian's settlement for fraud or mistake from the date of her marriage. The marriage of the ward terminates the trust relation theretofore existing.¹⁶

6. PLEADINGS. A bill or petition which seeks to surcharge or falsify a settlement must point out specifically the errors complained of.¹⁷ No question can be raised by exceptions merely as to the legality of particular items objected to.¹⁸ It is alone necessary that the bill negative all fault or negligence on the part of the complainant.¹⁹ The sureties not being parties to a proceeding to surcharge settlements, it is not necessary to allege that the guardian's bond was approved.²⁰ If the object of a petition is to set aside a settlement for fraud it should allege some distinct and specific act of fraud in procuring the decree and also some specific error or wrong which could not otherwise be corrected,²¹ and if the petition must be brought in any event within ten years after the ward arrived at age.

17. Fielder v. Harbison, 93 Ky. 482, 20 S. W. 508, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 481; Tanner v. Skinner, 11 Bush (Ky.) 120; Keubler v. Taylor, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 334; Allen v. Westfall, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 63; Yeager's Appeal, 34 Pa. St. 173; Jones v. Parker, 67 Tex. 76, 3 S. W. 222.

Application of rule.—A petition to surcharge a final settlement of the accounts of a guardian and to hold him liable for certain sums he had without legal authority permitted his ward to expend in excess of her income is fatally defective when it contains no specific statement of any improper credit given the guardian or of the omission of any item of indebtedness by him, and with no averment of fact to enable the chancellor to know whether any alleged excessive expenditure allowed by the guardian was improper. Fielder v. Harbison, 93 Ky. 482, 20 S. W. 508, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 481.

Waiver of objection.—While the petition should point out the specific errors complained of, and no others can be inquired into, yet if no objection is taken to the petition and the answer puts the matters complained of in issue and the case was referred to a master to hear proof and correct the settlement, it was then too late to object that the petition was not sufficient where it stated in a general way the errors complained of. Allen v. Westfall, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 63.

If a guardian seeks to establish an allowance for expenditures in support and education of the ward as an equitable set-off against a decree rendered against him on settlement of his account as guardian, he must show by definite averments that the expenditures were made under such circumstances as would have entitled him to a credit on that settlement. Waldrom v. Waldrom, 76 Ala. 285.

18. Tanner v. Skinner, 11 Bush (Ky.) 120.

19. Tutwiler v. Lane, 82 Ala. 456, 3 So. 104. And see In re Kuntz, 1 Lehigh Val. L. Rep. (Pa.) 189, holding that the petition should allege in addition to the material errors and omissions that the facts on which the petition is based were unknown until after the decree.

A mere general averment of ignorance or an averment of ignorance coupled with an admission of knowledge of facts sufficient to put him on inquiry does not entitle a party to relief against a settlement. Stoudenmire v. De Bardelaben, 72 Ala. 300.

20. Kuebler v. Taylor, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 334.

21. Marr's Appeal, 2 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 267. And see Scoville v. Brock, 75 Vt. 243, 54 Atl. 177.

Sufficiency of allegation of fraud.—An allegation that the guardian fraudulently and wrongfully charged certain sums is not a sufficient allegation of fraud as against a special demurrer (In re Wells, 140 Cal. 349, 73 Pac. 1065); nor is it sufficient to allege that defendant exhibited "certain accounts and statements of various amounts" which he claimed to be true, but which complainant afterward learned to be false; complainant should identify the accounts and statements (Davis v. Davis, 55 N. J. Eq. 37, 36 Atl. 475); but in a suit to set aside the allowance of a guardian's account by which certain bonds, stocks, etc., were delivered to the ward on his coming of age a bill alleging that defendant, contriving and intending to deceive and defraud complainant of his rights in the premises and with intent to prevent him from calling defendant to account for his breach of trust as guardian, represented that he had used all due care in managing complainant's estate, that he was under no obligation to change the securities, and that losses and depreciations were without his fault, and complainant fully believing and relying on such false representations did not object to receiving his property in the form in which it was offered to him, sufficiently alleged fraud on the part of the guardian (Scoville v. Brock, 76 Vt. 385, 57 Atl. 967).

Showing injury to complainant.—Where in a suit against a guardian for an accounting, it was alleged that he had obtained his discharge by taking advantage of the youth and inexperience of his wards, and influencing them to sign a paper consenting to his discharge, etc., and that such wards had from tender years lived and grown up under defendant's care and were easily influenced by him against their interests an assignment of demurrer to the bill that it failed to show that complainants had sustained injury by tioner seeks to avoid the bar of the statute of limitations on account of undiscovered fraud he must show that he used due diligence to detect it and should state when any particular discovery was made what it was and why it was not discovered sooner.²² On a bill for a settlement of the guardian's account the court may on a prayer for general relief set aside for fraud a decree of the probate court discharging the guardian.²³ The objection of limitations or laches cannot be raised by demurrer to the bill.²⁴

7. EVIDENCE. The grounds for correcting or setting aside the settlement must be proved as alleged.²⁵ Accounts which have been passed by the probate court are prima facie correct,²⁶ and if error or fraud are relied on the burden of showing these facts is on complainant.²⁷

8. HEARING AND DETERMINATION. A bill of review is founded on equitable principles and is never allowed to stand on strict law and against equity. It will not be allowed to review a guardian's account in order to strike out payments made by him in relief of the estate when there is no administrator to save the expense of an administration.²⁸ A bill to surcharge and falsify an ex parte confirmed settlement of a fiduciary does not overhaul the account and restate all its items, but deals only with those items surcharged and falsified. In other respects the former account stands firm, as does also the balance shown by it, and the sum of items successfully surcharged and falsified is the measure of relief on such a bill.²⁹ In an action to surcharge a settlement where it appeared that a guardian who took possession of the ward's land and appropriated the proceeds for a number of years was charged with less than the annual rent and claimed credit for less than he was entitled to, it would be a fair adjustment of the accounts to charge the guardian with the fair rental and allow him only the credit claimed in the settlement.³⁰ Where in an action against a former guardian to set aside the final account and a deed to defendant on the ground of fraud, it appeared that such account was sworn to by both parties and was accompanied by a sworn answer by complainant stating that he and his attorney had examined all the accounts and the final account was correct, and acknowledging satisfaction; that he was then of full age, doing business for himself, and not living with or under the control of defendant; and that he was aware of the balance apparently due him and of the facts constituting satisfaction in full as stated in his answer, and his evidence was also discredited by the testimony of disinterested witnesses, the bill was properly dismissed.³¹

9. APPEAL. Although the petition is entitled in the matter of the estate and guardianship of a designated minor, yet the pleadings on both sides being drafted in effect as they would be in a suit directly in equity to set aside the order settling the guardian's account, and the findings and decree being such as would follow the trial of such an action, the appeal will be considered one from a decree as regards the authentication of the record and the necessity of the findings supporting the decree.³² Where a demurrer is sustained to a petition to review a reason of the decree of discharge was without merit. Willis v. Rice, (Ala. 1904) 37 So. 507.

VII. ACTIONS.³⁴

A. Rights of Actions and Defenses — 1. ACTIONS BETWEEN GUARDIAN AND WARD OR THEIR PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVES — a. Actions by Guardian Against Ward.

A guardian cannot maintain an action at law against the ward pending the guardianship;³⁵ but an action is maintainable by a former guardian against his ward upon an order of the probate court allowing the account of the guardian for money paid for the ward's use;³⁶ and after termination of the guardianship the guardian may recover for necessities furnished the ward,³⁷ although it has been held that a guardian who voluntarily disburses on account of his ward a sum greater than the ward's estate has no recourse against the ward for the overplus unless there be a special promise to pay it.³⁸

b. Actions by Ward Against Guardian.³⁹ Ordinarily the ward cannot, pending the guardianship, maintain an action against the guardian to recover money or property due him by the latter.⁴⁰ No right of action arises in the ward's favor until after there has been a final accounting and a balance has been struck⁴¹ or

II, 104 (holding that until the relation of guardian and ward is determined, no right of action accrues to the guardian against the ward for advances).

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 408.

The proper remedy is by action of account or bill in equity, in which the equities between the parties may be adjusted (Linton v. Walker, 8 Fla. 144, 71 Am. Dec. 105, holding that an action of assumpsit is not maintainable by a ward against his guardian), or by an action on the guardian's bond (Brooks v. Brooks, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 18; Garton v. Botts, 73 Mo. 274, both holding that the guardian cannot be sued by his ward for money had and received. See, however, Culp v. Lee, 109 N. C. 675, 14 S. E. 74, holding that where a guardian of devisees settles with the executor and receives until a refusal to account.⁴² After the account has been settled⁴³ the ward may sue for the amount found due;⁴⁴ and after termination of the guardianship he may sue for money due him.⁴⁵ If a person sues another for misfeasance as guardian, he waives his right to recover on the ground that defendant wrongfully procured his appointment as guardian.⁴⁶

c. Actions by Ward Against Personal Representative of Guardian. By the weight of authority an action will lie by a ward against the estate of his deceased guardian to recover money or property belonging to the ward's estate.⁴⁷

d. Actions by Personal Representative of Ward or Her Husband Against Guardian. The administrator of a deceased ward is not entitled to recover, in an action against the guardian, moneys which came into the guardian's hands as pro-less than his wards are entitled to, the latter are not limited to a suit against the guardian on his bond, but may sue either the guardian or the executor or both).

However, a suit brought by a son against his father on account of a claim derived from his deceased mother is not a suit growing out of the father's tutorship, and hence cannot be postponed until a final account (Cambre v. Grabert, 31 La. Ann. 533); and where the infant's property consists of a single claim already ascertained and certain as to the amount, the ward may enter a decree against him for the amount, although no account has been taken (Sage v. Hammonds, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 651).

44. Thorndike v. Hinckley, 155 Mass. 263, 29 N. E. 579 (holding, however, that where plaintiffs in an action on their guardian's accounts put in evidence a trust deed by her for their benefit which admitted an indebtedness to them, and also a new trust deed in confirmation of the first, bearing even date therewith, reforming the same, and made in conformity with a decree, and where plaintiffs had ratified the action of their trustee in accepting such deeds and were parties to the proceedings which resulted in the new and reformed deed, under which they had received payments, the only action that would lie was one based on such deed and the note thereby secured); Lindsay v. Lindsay, 28 Ohio St. 157 (holding that where, upon closing his final account in the probate court, a guardian induced the ward to sign a receipt for the amount due her as though the money had been paid, agreeing to be responsible to her for the amount with interest, the ward could recover the sum actually due from the guardian, without in any way opening or reviewing the accounts).

45. Ryan v. Gallman, 12 Rich. (S. C.) 332; Stewart v. Sims, 112 Tenn. 296, 79 S. W. 385. See, however, Denison v. Cornwall, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 374, holding that the ward cannot on coming of age bring assumpsit against the guardian in the common pleas for services rendered, the orphans' court being the proper tribunal to settle the accounts.

Recovery of property received after termination of guardianship.—Where a guardian has received money belonging to the ward after the latter has come of age, the ward's remedy is by action at law, and the guardian cannot be cited to account for the money in the orphans' court. Evans' Estate, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. 324.

46. Bagley v. McFarland, 62 Vt. 79, 19 Atl. 476.

47. Georgia.—Inferior Ct. v. Cherry, 14 Ga. 594.

Indiana.—Harshman v. McBride, 2 Ind. App. 382, 28 N. E. 564, holding that where a guardian converts funds of his ward and dies, the succeeding guardian may sue the estate of the former guardian, and is not restricted to an action on the former guardian's bond.

Maine.—Fogler v. Buck, 66 Me. 205, holding that on the decease of a guardian holding property in his own name in trust for the ward, the latter being still a minor, a bill in equity may be maintained against the administrator of the deceased guardian to enforce a conveyance of the property and to account for its earnings.

Maryland.—Green v. Johnson, 3 Gill & J. 389, holding that assumpsit lies by a ward against a guardian's executrix for the value of property of the ward converted by the guardian, although defendant was a feme covert at the time of receiving it.

Mississippi.—Cocke v. Rucks, 34 Miss. 105, holding that the right to sue on a note payable to "A, guardian," passes to the successor, and not to the administrator.

South Carolina.—Ryan v. Gallman, 12 Rich. 332, holding that a ward who has attained majority may maintain assumpsit against the guardian for the proceeds of property unaccounted for in the final settlement. See, however, McColl v. Weatherly, 5 Strobb. 72, holding that where a note was made payable to one as guardian for the hire of the slave of his ward, the legal title to the note was in the guardian, and at his death, although he died insolvent, it devolved on his administrator, to whom the proceeds belonged, unless some right could be shown by the ward to receive it in opposition to him.

Contra.—Lay v. O'Neal, 27 La. Ann. 643, holding that minor heirs cannot sue the succession of their tutor, but should call upon the executors of the deceased to file an ac-

ceeds of real estate of the ward which has been sold under a decree of partition.⁴² Where a husband survives his wife but does not in his lifetime take out administration on her estate, his executor or administrator may sue the guardian of the wife for her estate committed to him.⁴⁹

e. Actions by New Guardian Against Predecessor. Until the opposition to the account of the executor for maladministration is decided, the tutor of a minor who is interested in the succession cannot sue his predecessor for failing to exact an account from the executor.⁵⁰

2. ACTIONS BY GUARDIAN OR WARD AGAINST THIRD PERSONS — a. Actions by Guardian ⁵¹—(1) PENDING GUARDIANSHIP—(A) In General. Where a general guardian has been appointed, he is usually the proper person to represent an infant plaintiff.⁵² The infant may sue by him,⁵³ and the guardian may, in his individual capacity,⁵⁴ enforce his ward's rights by appropriate action instituted in the ward's behalf,⁵⁵ although in some states it is necessary for the infant to sue by guardian ad litem or next friend.⁵⁶ So the guardian of heirs may maintain a suit against the executors for a proper sum for the maintenance and education of the heirs,⁵⁷ or a suit against purchasers of lands of the estate which are charged with the ward's support.⁵⁸ And a guardian who furnishes necessaries to the ward may count of his tutorship, and by opposition thereto raise issues involving its correctness.

Demand.—A newly appointed guardian must make a demand on the old guardian for a delivery of the ward's property before a suit will lie to recover it. Inferior Ct. v. Cherry, 14 Ga. 594.

Indiana.—Shepherd v. Evans, 9 Ind. 260, holding that under a statute providing that executors, administrators, or guardians of lunatics may sue, the guardian of a minor, although not named, may sue.

Kentucky.—Walker v. Smyser, 80 Ky. 620, 632, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 662, holding that under Code, § 53, which provides that "the action of an infant must be brought by his guardian or his next friend," and that "any person may bring the action of an infant as his next friend, but the court has power to dismiss it," the court has no power to dismiss an action brought by the regular guardian and substitute another person.

Louisiana.—See Segur v. Sorel, 11 La. 439, holding that a tutor's authority to sue is sufficiently shown by the order of a family meeting and its homologation by the judge.

Massachusetts.—Burke v. Burke, 170 Mass. 499, 49 N. E. 753.

New York.—See Carr v. Huff, 57 Hun 18, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 361, holding that where an action was brought by a general guardian in his own name as guardian for the infant named, and the recovery was for the infant's sole benefit, she is estopped, on coming of age, from suing on the same cause of action.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 411.

Leave of court and security.—Leave of court is not necessary to enable a guardian to sue in behalf of his ward. Bennett v. Bennett, 65 Nebr. 432, 91 N. W. 409, 96 N. W. 994. Contra, Muller v. Naumann, 85 N. Y. App. Div. 337, 83 N. Y. recover therefor from the ward's father.⁵⁹ However, a guardian who expends his own money for medical attention to the ward, the ward's estate being insufficient, cannot recover therefor from one whose wrongful act made the attention necessary;⁶⁰ nor may a guardian recover for loss of the ward's services, since he has no right thereto.⁶¹ The ward is not bound by an election between remedies made by the guardian.⁶²

(B) Actions Relating to Realty. In some states a guardian has no authority, in certain cases at least, to bring suits in relation to the real estate of his ward, but the suit must be brought in the ward's name by guardian ad litem or next friend.⁶³ In many states, however, the rule is otherwise, at least under some circumstances.⁶⁴

Cheseboro*, 55 Conn. 114, 10 Atl. 508 (holding that a conservator having power to lease lands of his ward may, on the expiration of the lease, maintain an action of summary process to recover possession).

Indiana.—Kinsley v. Kinsley, 150 Ind. 67, 49 N. E. 819, suit to enjoin injury to ward's land.

Louisiana.—McEnery v. Letchford, 23 La. Ann. 617 (holding that where property in possession of minors whose title is ostensibly valid and recorded is seized by an individual judgment creditor of the tutor as the latter's property, the creditor making no claim that the minor's title is invalid, the tutor may properly bring suit to enjoin the sale);

Beard v. Morancy, 3 Rob. 119 (holding that the advice of a family meeting is not necessary to authorize a suit by a tutor to recover real estate belonging to his ward).

Massachusetts.—Somes v. Skinner, 16 Mass. 348, holding that a guardian may maintain an action in his ward's name to recover property which was obtained from the ward by fraud before the guardian was appointed.

New York.—See Coakley v. Mahar, 36 Hun 157.

Ohio.—See Campbell v. Park, 32 Ohio St. 544, holding that the guardian may represent his ward's estate in asking for or opposing a road improvement.

Pennsylvania.—See Hughes' Appeal, 53 Pa. St. 500.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 411.

Ejectment.—A guardian may bring ejectment to try the ward's title. Doe v. McLeod, 8 U. C. Q. B. 344. And see Ogilvie v. McRory, 15 U. C. C. P. 557. Contra, Kinney v. Harrett, 46 Mich. 87, 8 N. W. 708. This is true of guardians in socage. Cagger v. Lansing, 64 N. Y. 417; Holmes v. Seely, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 75.

Foreclosure of mortgage.—A mortgage given to a guardian for the benefit of the ward may be foreclosed by suit in the name of the ward by his guardian. Somes v. Skinner, 16 Mass. 348. See Straka v. Lander, 60 Wis. 115, 18 N. W. 641 (holding that a general guardian may be appointed guardian ad litem and may bring an action in the name of his ward to foreclose a mortgage which he holds in his own name as general guardian, or by the guardian's successor); Norton v. Ohrens, 67 Mich. 612, 35 N. W. 175. So a guardian of minor heirs to whom have been delivered, on final settlement of the estate of the decedent, a note and mortgage as a part of their share may maintain an action to foreclose. Walter v. Wala, 10 Nebr. 123, 4 N. W. 938.

Partition.—A guardian may sue for partition in behalf of the ward. Pulse v. Osborn, (Ind. App. 1901) 60 N. E. 374; Larrabee v. Larrabee, 71 S. W. 645, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1423; *Tate v. (c) *Actions Relating to Personality.*⁶⁵ A guardian may protect his ward's rights in personality by suit,⁶⁶ and he may maintain an action to recover possession thereof,⁶⁷ or for damages for conversion thereof⁶⁸ or injury thereto;⁶⁹ and he may enforce collection of debts⁷⁰ and rents⁷¹ or hire⁷² due the ward. The guardian may also enforce a right of action for illegal restraint of the ward⁷³ or for personal injuries sustained by him.⁷⁴

(ii) *AFTER TERMINATION OF GUARDIANSHIP.*⁷⁵ It has been held that one whose guardianship has ceased cannot enforce a right of action in behalf of the former ward.⁷⁶ He has, however, a right of action for the wrongful death of the ward to the extent of reimbursing the ward's estate for moneys expended for care, medical attendance, and funeral expenses.⁷⁷ debate on the question of a judicial partition. However, tutors must be specially authorized by family meeting to sue for partition. Vinson v. Vinson, 105 La. 30, 29 So. 701; Rachal v. Rachal, 10 La. 454, holding, however, that where the property is converted into cash, there is no necessity for a partition; it is a matter of division, and each heir can demand his share. The guardian of an infant defendant in partition proceedings is not authorized to maintain an action to review such proceedings, since the ward himself is not entitled to a review. Bundy v. Hall, 60 Ind. 177.

65. Right to sue for money lost by ward in gambling see GAMING, 20 Cyc. 873.

66. Murphy v. Green, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 403, holding that a guardian may by bill in chancery defeat the claim of his ward's husband to personal property in his charge as guardian, and have the same settled upon her to her sole and separate use, as the court may direct.

67. Carrillo v. McPhillips, 55 Cal. 130 (action to recover note); Muller v. Benner, 69 Ill. 108. Contra, Buermann v. Buermann, 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 391; Sillings v. Bumgardner, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 273; Burdett v. Cain, 8 W. Va. 282, the last two cases being bills in equity.

Replevin lies by a guardian for his ward's personality. Boruff v. Stipp, 126 Ind. 32, 25 N. E. 865; Meiser v. Smith, 2 Ind. App. 37, 27 N. E. 871.

68. Ewing v. Gist, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 465.

69. Sutherland v. Goff, 5 Port. (Ala.) 508, holding, however, that a guardian cannot maintain assumpsit for the value of a slave which is the property of the ward, and which has been hired out by the guardian to defendant, on the ground that defendant had negligently caused its death, although there was a promise to pay what an arbiter should determine.

70. Shepherd v. Evans, 9 Ind. 260; Bryson v. Collmer, (Ind. App. 1904) 71 N. E. 229; Norton v. Ohrns, 67 Mich. 612, 35 N. W. 175; Mosebach v. Hess, 16 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 16, holding that a guardian has a right to collect by suit a claim due his ward which was in existence before his appointment.

Action on note.—A guardian may maintain an action on a note made payable to himself.

Baker v. Ormsby, 5 Ill. 325. And a guardian for minor heirs may sue on a promissory note payable to the ancestor of his wards on showing that they are the only heirs of the payee and no administration on his estate. Roberts v. Sacra, 38 Tex. 580.

Williamson*, 11 Ala. 343; Mebane v. Mebane, 66 N. C. 334; Harper v. Seely, Wright (Ohio) 390. See, however, Huntsman v. Fish, 36 Minn. 148, 30 N. W. 455 (holding that a guardian of minors may properly maintain an action to recover money collected for her as guardian by an attorney, although after the collection and before the commencement of the action some of the minors have become of age); Chapman v. Goodrich, 55 Vt. 354.

A guardian may sue on a lease (Pond v. Curtiss, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 45) or on a note (Chambliss v. Vick, 34 Miss. 109; Zachary v. Gregory, 32 Tex. 452; Wheelock v. Wheelock, 5 Vt. 433) taken by him during the guardianship.

Conflict of laws.—The adult age for females in Missouri being eighteen, a guardian whose female ward resides in Kentucky cannot sue in Missouri in her name as for an infant because she is not of age in Kentucky until twenty-one. Harris v. Berry, 6 Ky. L. Rep. 157.

b. Actions by Personal Representative of Guardian. It has been held that the personal representative of a deceased guardian cannot sue to enforce obligations in favor of the ward.⁷⁸

c. Actions by New Guardian. A new guardian may foreclose a mortgage given to his predecessor for the benefit of the ward,⁷⁹ and if property of the ward is improperly transferred by his predecessor to one having notice of the facts, he may recover it from the transferee.⁸⁰

d. Actions by Ward Independent of General Guardian⁸¹ — (i) PENDING GUARDIANSHIP. It is the general rule that a minor ward may, pending the guardianship, come into court as a party plaintiff by guardian ad litem or next friend and sue to enforce or to protect his rights,⁸² if the guardian is absent,⁸³ or is unable⁸⁴ or unwilling⁸⁵ to act, and the same rule is held to apply where he is disqualified tion for general damages for loss of services, etc., is in the father or mother.

78. Davis v. Fox, 69 N. C. 435, action on bond of clerk and master for fund due ward.

Action on note.—An administrator of a deceased guardian cannot maintain an action to collect a note made payable to his intestate as guardian, unless it be shown that the money due thereon had become the property of the intestate's estate upon a final settlement with his wards, but the trust funds are to be delivered over to the succeeding guardian or to the ward if of age. Alexander v. Wriston, 81 N. C. 191. Contra, Chitwood v. Cromwell, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 658. And see McCull v. Weatherly, 5 Strobb. (S. C.) 72.

79. Norton v. Ohrns, 67 Mich. 612, 35 N. W. 175.

80. Atkinson v. Atkinson, 8 Allen (Mass.) 15, holding that if a guardian who holds shares of stock issued to him in his official capacity improperly assigns them to secure a private creditor who takes them with knowledge of the facts, the guardian's successor in office may sue in equity to obtain a transfer of the shares to himself.

Bona fide purchaser.—If a guardian who holds shares of stock issued to him without expressing his official capacity assigns them to one who takes them for full value without notice, his successor in office is not entitled in equity to obtain a transfer of the shares to himself. Atkinson v. Atkinson, 8 Allen (Mass.) 15.

Connecticut.—Williams v. Cleaveland, 76 Conn. 426, 56 Atl. 850.

Illinois.—Patterson v. Pullman, 104 Ill. 80; Holmes v. Field, 12 Ill. 424, both holding that the court has discretion to permit the suit.

Maryland.—Deford v. State, 30 Md. 179; Baltimore v. Norman, 4 Md. 352.

Massachusetts.—See Burke v. Burke, 170 Mass. 499, 49 N. E. 753, construing a statute which provides that every guardian "shall appear for and represent his ward in all legal suits and proceedings, unless another person is appointed for that purpose as guardian ad litem or next friend."

Minnesota.—Price v. Phenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 497, 10 Am. Rep. 166, action on policy of life insurance payable to assured's "children for their use, or to their guardian if under age."

New York.—Segelken v. Meyer, 94 N. Y. 473 [affirming 22 Hun 6], 14 Hun 593; Porter v. Bleiler, 17 Barb. 149. See, however, Seaton v. Davis, 1 Thomps. & C. 91 (holding that an infant cannot sue by a guardian ad litem to recover possession of premises from a tenant for the life of another holding over his term, and damages for unlawfully withholding possession; such action can be brought only by the guardian in socage or the general guardian); Farmers L. & T. Co. v. McKenna, 3 Dem. Surr. 219 (holding that the code authorizes the appointment of a special guardian only where the general guardian does not appear, or the surrogate is satisfied that the latter is disqualified to protect adequately the interests of his ward).

Tennessee.—See Stewart v. Sims, 112 Tenn. 296, 79 S. W. 385.

Vermont.—Thomas v. Dike, 11 Vt. 273, 34 Am. Dec. 690.

West Virginia.—Lawson v. Kirchner, 50 W. Va. 344, 40 S. E. 344, holding that where a demand is payable to infants, suit therefor is properly brought in their names by their next friend, although the money when recovered goes to their guardian.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 412.

Contra.—Mayes v. Smith, 11 Rob. (La.) 503; Heno v. Heno, 9 Mart. (La.) 643 (holding that a minor under the age of puberty cannot appear in court as plaintiff by a curator ad litem); State v. Orleans Parish, 6 La. 363. And see Vowles v. Buckman, 6 Dana (Ky.) 466.

83. Williams v. Cleaveland, 76 Conn. 426, 56 Atl. 850.

84. Williams v. Cleaveland, 76 Conn. 426, 56 Atl. 850.

from acting,⁸⁶ and this is especially true where he does not forbid the proceeding.⁸⁷ Thus the ward may in a proper case recover funds or property which the guardian has disposed of without authority,⁸⁸ or bring an action for conversion against the transferee,⁸⁹ or sue for the price thereof.⁹⁰

(ii) AFTER TERMINATION OF GUARDIANSHIP. After termination of the guardianship the ward may recover money or property belonging to the estate in whosoever hands it may be.⁹¹ So the ward may enforce obligations taken for

86. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Haist, 71 Ark. 258, 72 S. W. 893 (holding that where suit is brought for an infant by a foreign guardian who is not qualified to sue in the state, it is proper to allow an amendment substituting another person as next friend); Williams v. Cleveland, 76 Conn. 426, 56 Atl. 850; Lanier v. Chappell, 2 Fla. 621 (action for hire of property to firm of which guardian was a member).

Disqualification by interest see infra, VII, D, 1.

87. Williams v. Cleveland, 76 Conn. 426, 56 Atl. 850; Robson v. Osborn, 13 Tex. 298; Thomas v. Dike, 11 Vt. 273, 34 Am. Dec. 690.

Suit without guardian's authority.—Where an infant has sued by his guardian without the latter's authority, the court will not order the writ to be quashed, but will order a prochein ami. Hardy v. Scanlin, 1 Miles (Pa.) 87.

88. Arkansas.—Myrick v. Jacks, 39 Ark. 293, holding that a minor may, by bill in equity, compel one who fraudulently obtained the trust fund from his guardian for an inadequate consideration to account therefor.

Georgia.—Johnson v. Janes, 41 Ga. 596, holding that a ward may, through her prochein ami, maintain a bill in equity to set aside an unlawful conveyance of her property by her guardian.

Indiana.—Bevis v. Heflin, 63 Ind. 129, suit to set aside sale.

Massachusetts.—White v. Quarles, 14 Mass. 451, holding that where property of a ward illegally sold by his guardian is the stock of an incorporated company, the ward is not confined to his action on the guardian's bond, but has the cumulative remedy against the corporation, and may repudiate the sale as void and recover the stock.

Ohio.—Mack v. Brammer, 28 Ohio St. 508, suit to enforce trust against transferee.

Tennessee.—Stewart v. Sims, 112 Tenn. 296, 79 S. W. 385, suit to recover estate from former guardian.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 412.

See, however, Dougherty v. Hughes, 165 Ill. 384, 46 N. E. 229 (holding that where a guardian expends his ward's money without authority of law, the ward has his action on the guardian's bond or may resort to a proceeding in the probate court for an accounting, but a guardian ad litem cannot resort to equity to compel a return of the money so expended); Kentucky Cent. R. Co. v. Peters, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 230 (holding that as a guardian has a right to cut and sell trees on his ward's land when the ward's interest requires it, the ward cannot maintain an action against one who purchases the trees from the guardian in good faith); Durling v. Hammar, 20 N. J. Eq. 220 (holding that where an administratrix of one of two wards secured a decree against the guardian of her intestate for the amount due intestate, and caused land held by the guardian to be sold under execution, and the land had been originally purchased by the guardian with funds of both wards and the title taken in his own name, the surviving ward was entitled to maintain a bill against the purchaser at the sheriff's sale, the administratrix, and others, asking that the purchaser might have the price refunded by the administratrix, and the land sold or held in trust).

Settlement of claims by guardian.—Equity has jurisdiction to set aside as fraudulent a settlement of a minor's claim on an insurance policy made by his guardian under direction of the probate court, there being no adequate remedy at law. Berdan v. Milwaukee Mut. L. Ins. Co., (Mich. 1904) 99 N. W. 411. See, however, Lynch v. Cogswell, 18 Ohio Cir. Ct. 641, 7 Ohio Cir. Dec. 12.

89. Hayes v. Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co., 125 Ill. 626, 18 N. E. 322, 1 L. R. A. 303; Baltimore v. Norman, 4 Md. 352; McCarty v. Rountree, 19 Mo. 345, all holding also that no demand need be made before action.

90. Ambleton v. Dyer, 53 Ark. 224, 13 S. W. 926; Bevis v. Heflin, 63 Ind. 129 (in both of which cases the guardian had received the price in his own individual paper); Peterson v. Baillif, 52 Minn. 386, 54 N. W. 185 (holding that where a general guardian refuses to collect the price of land sold by him to the minors, an action for its recovery may be prosecuted by the latter through a guardian ad litem).

Remedy of ward.—Land belonging to an infant was sold by a clerk and master under a decree in an ex parte proceeding brought by her directing title to be retained until payment of the purchase-money; and after the sale, when he became guardian, a note for the price was executed to him as such, and on settlement transferred to his ward. It was held that the ward could not sue by a separate action on the note, and to subject the land to its payment, as she was entitled to relief by motion in the original cause. Lord v. Meroney, 79 N. C. 14; Lord v. Beard, 79 N. C. 5.

91. Carter v. Lipsey, 70 Ga. 417 (bill in equity); Slusher v. Hammond, 94 Iowa 512, 63 N. W. 185 (holding that in an action to him by the guardian;⁹² and if a female ward marries, her husband may enforce such obligations if otherwise entitled.⁹³

3. ACTIONS BY THIRD PERSONS AGAINST GUARDIAN OR WARD — a. Actions Against Guardian. According to the weight of authority a suit against a guardian on a contract touching his ward's estate is personal against him,⁹⁴ and he cannot be sued on such a contract in his representative capacity so as to make the estate of the ward liable to be taken on execution.⁹⁵ Nor in any event is the ward bound by the result of a suit against the guardian individually.⁹⁶ When a personal recovery is sought against a guardian, he should be sued in his individual capacity.⁹⁷ He cannot, however, be sued personally for debts due from the ward.⁹⁸ An action on an express contract with a guardian may in some states be brought against him personally,⁹⁹ but in other states the guardian cannot be sued either at law¹ or in equity² on account of claims against him or his ward, since the creditor has other remedies.³

recover the proceeds of a note given to plaintiff's guardian and disposed of by him to defendant, the fact that the deceased guardian's accounts had not been settled would not defeat a recovery); Frazier v. Jeakins, 64 Kan. 615, 68 Pac. 24, 57 L. R. A. 575 (holding that a ward may maintain ejectment to recover land deeded by a guardian to her husband, and by him to defendant with notice of the relationship); Lewis v. Browning, 111 Pa. St. 493, 4 Atl. 842. See, however, Malpass v. Graves, 111 Ga. 743, 36 S. E. 955, holding where the guardian of plaintiff, who was a residuary legatee under the will of her grandfather, received a sum of money from the latter's executor which was expressed to be "in full of amount due my ward from residuary clause in the will of said deceased," the ward could not maintain an action against the representatives of such executor on arrival at her majority on the ground that the sum paid was less than that to which she was entitled, since the settlement made by the guardian was conclusive as against her.

92. People v. Ingersoll, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 316, 58 How. Pr. 351 (holding that where a guardian lets the ward's premises for a term beyond the ward's infancy, and the ward on coming of age affirms the letting, he or his grantee after majority may, upon alleging the facts, sustain any proper action or proceeding thereon); Usry v. Suit, 91 N. C. 406; Grant v. Anderson, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 190 (holding that a minor, after arriving of age, may sue on a note taken for his benefit but made payable to his guardian, although the latter has not been discharged, if he makes no objection to the suit).

93. Gudger v. Baird, 66 N. C. 438, action at law under code. However, where notes taken by a guardian do not pass into the possession of a ward's husband and no final settlement is had, the husband cannot collect them. Chilton v. Cabiness, 14 Ala. 447.

98. Providence Municipal Ct. v. Le Valley, 25 R. I. 236, 55 Atl. 640 (holding that the debts of a ward are not recoverable by an action against the guardian, described as guardian of the ward, the description being mere surplusage, making the action merely a personal one against the guardian); Willard v. Fairbanks, 8 R. I. 1; Arnold v. Angell, 1 R. I. 259.

99. Robertson v. Banks, 1 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 666 (holding that where the maker of a note writes "guardian" after his signature, he may be sued in his individual capacity); *McKinney v. b. Actions Against Ward. In a proper case an action may be maintained against the ward, who may defend by his guardian.⁴ However, the ward's estate is not liable in an action at law upon the contracts of the guardian,⁵ or upon the contracts of a third person.⁶

4. DEFENSES — a. In Actions by Guardian or Ward. An action by a guardian to recover a sum held in trust for the ward cannot be defeated on the ground that the probate court had no jurisdiction to appoint the guardian where no want of jurisdiction appears on the record of the probate court;⁷ nor does the fact that at the time of the appointment of a mother as natural tutrix of minor children and of her taking the oath no inventory had been recorded or taken necessarily defeat her right to maintain an action as tutrix.⁸ The defense that plaintiff has no capacity to sue as guardian is waived by pleading to the merits.⁹ A purchaser of land at a guardian's sale may set up the illegality of the sale at law as a defense to an action for the price;¹⁰ but he cannot defeat an action for the price on account of the invalidity of the title¹¹ or of the decree authorizing the sale¹² without an offer to return the property; nor is an action for the price brought by a guardian and ward defeated by the fact that in making the sale the guardian did not comply with statutory requisites imposed for the benefit of the ward.¹³ Payment of the claim in suit constitutes a defense,¹⁴ but an unsatisfied being in the probate court); Cole v. Eaton, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 587 (holding that the guardian of a minor is not liable in an action of assumpsit to one who has furnished necessaries to the ward, but only in an action on the probate bond).

Bicknell*, 111 Mass. 265 (holding that one who has paid off a mortgage on the land of infants cannot maintain an action against them for money had and received or money lent, although the mortgage was paid off at the request of their guardian); Lothrop v. Duffield, 134 Mich. 485, 96 N. W. 577 (holding that neither the probate court nor any other court has jurisdiction of a proceeding against a ward's estate by an attorney to establish a claim for compensation for services rendered, even with consent of the guardian, his remedy being against the guardian, unless he proceeds with her consent in probate court through the medium of her account); Murphy v. Holmes, 87 N. Y. App. Div. 366, 84 N. Y. Suppl. 806 (contract for necessaries). And see supra, VII, A, 3, a.

6. Fitzsimmons v. Fitzsimmons, 81 Mo. App. 604, holding that an action at law will not lie against a minor and his guardian for past maintenance furnished on the promise of the father that plaintiff would be paid for his trouble and expense out of the property which the minor would receive from the estate of his deceased mother, and that relief can be had only in a court of equity, or in the probate court where the guardianship is pending, on a showing that the father is poor, and that the minor's estate is ample for his future maintenance and education.

Griffin*, 43 Miss. 134. See also Storm v. Smith, 43 Miss. 497, holding that the purchaser's remedy is to have the decree reversed and return the property.

13. Evans v. Williamson, 79 N. C. 86.

14. Harper v. Seely, Wright (Ohio) 390, holding that where a guardian obtains a judgment against his ward's debtor, and before payment the ward dies, and upon notice from the administrator not to pay the guardian the debtor pays the judgment to the former, he may come into chancery to enjoin the guardian from collecting the judgment.

judgment against the sureties in a guardian's bond for a devastavit committed by the guardian will not bar a suit by the ward against one who participated with the guardian in the devastavit.¹⁵ Former adjudication constitutes a good defense,¹⁶ but the ward is not bound by an election made by the guardian between inconsistent remedies.¹⁷

b. In Actions Against Guardian or Ward. A guardian who receives moneys as such cannot, when called on to account therefor by the ward, set up the invalidity of his appointment¹⁸ or irregularities in the receipt of the funds;¹⁹ nor is it a defense in an action on a note given by the guardian to the ward in settlement of claims against him that the guardian had not rendered an account, as required by statute, before settling with the ward.²⁰ If the ward assigns a right of action against the guardian, the latter may make any defense against the assignee that he might have made had he been sued by the ward.²¹ The fact that a female ward has married, and that marriage to a person of full age operates as a legal discharge of the guardianship, is no defense in an action against the guardian on an express contract for the support of the ward.²² In an action to foreclose a mortgage given by the guardian of minor heirs and approved by the county court the heirs may attack its validity.²³

c. Set-Off.²⁴ The general rules of set-off ordinarily apply in actions between

However, a corporation, when sued by a guardian for dividends belonging to his ward, cannot by an equitable plea avail themselves as a defense of the fact that they paid the dividends to one not authorized to receive them, and that the money was applied to the support of the ward by the person receiving it, that person not being a party to the suit. *Southwestern R. 15. Powell v. Jones, 36 N. C. 337.

16. Shipp v. Wheelless, 33 Miss. 646 (holding that since a purchaser of land at a guardian's sale can set up the illegality of the sale at law as a defense to an action for the purchase-money, if he fails to do so without just cause, he cannot afterward come into a court of equity for relief against the judgment); Lynch v. Cogswell, 7 Ohio Dec. 12, 18 Ohio Cir. Ct. 641 (holding that a judgment of the probate court approving the payment by a guardian of a claim against the ward being conclusive between a guardian and ward, no action lies by the ward against the person to whom the payment was made).

However, the allowance by the probate judge of a guardian's account in which the guardian charged himself with the appraised value of shares of stock belonging to the ward, and the recovery of judgment upon his bond for the money remaining in his hands at the time of his ceasing to be guardian are no bar to a bill in equity by his successor in office to obtain a transfer of the shares, which have been improperly assigned to others by the guardian, if their value was not included in the judgment, although in a specification of particulars of plaintiff's demand in an action in which the judgment was recovered the balance found due by the probate account was claimed as cash in his hands. Atkinson v. Atkinson, 8 Allen (Mass.) 15.

17. Mitchell v. Rice, 132 Ala. 120, 31 So. 498, holding that the obtaining of a decree against a trustee of funds of a minor (which is uncollectable by reason of the insolvency of the trustee and his sureties) in a proceeding by the minor's guardian for a settlement by the trustee does not preclude the minor from pursuing such remedy as she would otherwise have had upon the bond of the register in chancery selling land to receive the proceeds of which the trustee was appointed.

(La.) 78 (holding that, although the sale of the property of minors may be invalid from want of the formalities prescribed by law, the tutor, who has received the price at such sale, cannot, in an action against him for the price, avail himself of such invalidity as a defense); Martin v. Stevens, 30 Miss. 159 (holding that if a guardian exceeds his authority by collecting money due his ward in another state than where he was appointed, such want of authority is no defense for him when required to account by his ward; it could only be used as defense by the wards themselves or the foreign debtors); Burke v. Turner, 90 N. C. 588 (holding that a guardian who receives for his ward money which belongs to another who by paying it estops himself from asserting a further claim to it cannot set up the right of the person so paying it for the purpose of exonerating himself from liability for it).

guardian and ward,²⁵ between the guardian and third persons,²⁶ and between the ward and third persons.²⁷ Equity will not allow a bill to obtain a set-off where the remedy at law is adequate.²⁸

B. Jurisdiction and Venue—1. JURISDICTION²⁹—a. Courts of Law. The jurisdiction of courts of law over suits by or against guardian or ward depends upon the nature of the suit,³⁰ and upon the special statutory provisions of the

25. Alabama.—Hutton v. Williams, 60 Ala. 133, holding that where the guardian, instead of lending or investing the funds of his ward which were in his hands at the commencement of the war and hiring out negroes, retained and used the money for his own benefit and became himself the hirer of the slaves, he could not be allowed, in extinguishment of the debt thus incurred, to claim credits for board, clothing, and tuition of his ward at Confederate prices.

Kentucky.—Miller v. Cropper, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 395, holding that where the estate of two wards consisted in part of a note against their guardian, upon which suit was brought after the termination of the guardianship and after the death of one of the wards, the guardian had the right to set off against the interest of the deceased ward in the note his claim for expenditures made on her account; but that he had no right to set off any part of that claim against the interest of the other ward in the note, although she had received the estate from the deceased ward to the full amount of the balance of the guardian's claim.

Michigan.—Powell v. Powell, 52 Mich. 432, 18 N. W. 203, holding that in an action on a note a claim for personalty received by plaintiff while defendant's guardian is a proper set-off, although the guardianship has been settled and the guardian discharged, it appearing that when the probate court discharged the guardian on a receipt given by defendant, the property was not included in the settlement, but was to be afterward accounted for.

Mississippi.—Ratliff v. Davis, 38 Miss. 107, holding that where a guardian executes a mortgage for a sum certain to his ward on her attaining her majority to secure what may be due from him on a settlement of his guardianship accounts, he cannot, in a suit to foreclose the mortgage, set off what is due him under a promise by his ward to pay him a fair compensation for his services as executor of her father's estate, of which she was a distributee, he being entitled under such promise only to such compensation as the law will allow him, to be fixed by the probate court upon a final settlement of the estate.

North Carolina.—Badger v. Daniel, 79 N. C. 372, holding that where a guardian sold land which was devised to his ward and afterward bought it back, paying for it with his ward's money, and the land was subsequently sold under a decree to reimburse the ward, the ward becoming the purchaser, the price bid by the ward was a proper credit to the guardian upon the charge made against him for the original price.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 424.

26. Lewis v. Edwards, 44 Ind. 333 (holding that where a guardian of minors is sued on his individual undertaking to pay for their board, in the absence of any agreement by which the wards were to be kept at work he can only set off against the claim the value of the services actually rendered); Gansner v. Franks, 75 Mo. 64 (holding that a debt due to defendant as guardian cannot be set off against a demand owing from him individually); Crafton v. Boon, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 93; McAlister v. Olmstead, 1 Humphr. (Tenn.) 210 (where A was debtor by bond to B as guardian, and A and B drew a joint bill on a house in another state for the benefit of B, and when the bill became due A paid it, and it was held, it not appearing that the draft was drawn with the agreement that A should pay it and be allowed to set off such payment on his bond to B as guardian, that such set-off could not be allowed).

27. Rose v. Birckholm, (N. J. Ch. 1887) 9 Atl. 746, holding that a balance found due against an insolvent guardian on final accounting may in equity be set off by the ward against a subsequent decree against him in a mortgage foreclosure in favor of the executor of a surety on the guardian's bond, or an assignee of such decree who took it with notice.

In Louisiana the district court is without jurisdiction of a suit against the succession of a tutor under administration in the parish court (Lusk v. Benton, 30 La. Ann. 686); and as minors administering with benefit of inventory by their tutors cannot be directly sued in the district court for succession of debts, neither can they be sued there indirectly by a claim in reconvention (Flood v. Shamburgh, 3 Mart. N. S. (La.) 622). However, the district court has jurisdiction ratione materie to establish a minor's claim against his tutor; and if no personal objection be raised the judgment is valid, even against third persons, there being no charge of collusion. various states relating to jurisdiction. The investigator should, in any case, consult the statutes of his own state.³¹

b. Courts of Equity. The relation of guardian and ward and the rights and liabilities growing out of it are peculiarly within the jurisdiction of a court of equity.³²

c. Courts of Probate. The jurisdiction of courts of probate over suits or proceedings by or against guardian or ward depends upon statute³³ and upon the nature of the suit.³⁴

674. Courts of ordinary jurisdiction have no cognizance of suits against minors who have left the state with their father and natural tutor, although a curator ad hoc be named for them in the suit. Roland v. Stephens, 3 La. 483.

In Minnesota the district court has jurisdiction of an action for the price of land sold by a guardian. Peterson v. Baillif, 52 Minn. 386, 54 N. W. 185.

In Pennsylvania the court of common pleas has no jurisdiction of an action against a guardian as such for necessities furnished the ward (Johnstone v. Fritz, 159 Pa. St. 378, 28 Atl. 148), or of an action against the guardian by a former ward for work and labor done while under guardianship (Denison v. Cornwell, 17 Serg. & R. 374); but it has jurisdiction of an action to charge a guardian individually for necessities furnished the ward (Johnstone v. Fritz, supra).

In Vermont the county court has jurisdiction of an action by the ward against the guardian after the final settlement of the accounts in the probate court after the ward's majority. Harris v. Harris, 44 Vt. 320.

32. Latham v. Myers, 57 Iowa 519, 10 N. W. 924 (holding that the circuit court sitting as a court of chancery has jurisdiction of all matters in controversy between a guardian and his wards, whether they arise after or before the wards become of age); Crain v. Barnes, 1 Md. Ch. 151 (holding that a proceeding by the representatives of a ward against the executors of a guardian to recover a legacy bequeathed to the ward which the guardian has received from the executors of the testator who made the bequest is within the jurisdiction of a court of equity); Williams v. Duncan, 44 Miss. 375 (holding that chancery has jurisdiction of a bill by infants to enforce a vendor's lien on land sold by their guardian under decree of court, or else to rescind the sale and for mesne profits). See, generally, EQUITY, 16 Cyc. 25 et seq.

However, since the orphans' court has equitable powers for settling accounts between guardian and ward, where the settlement of such an account is pending in that court the ward cannot maintain a bill in equity in the common pleas to compel a discovery and an account by the guardian of profits realized by him from investments of the ward's money and to enforce their payment to the ward. Rau v. Small, 144 Pa. St. 304, 22 Atl. 740.

34. See cases cited infra, this note.

In Arkansas a guardian cannot be sued in the probate court. Creswell v. Matthews, 52 Ark. 87, 12 S. W. 158.

In California the probate court has no jurisdiction of a proceeding to compel a guardian to advance out of the estate of his ward the necessary sums for his ward's support, or to refund money advanced by the guardian of the person of the ward or others, since no statute gives the court jurisdiction of such proceeding. Swift v. Swift, 40 Cal. 456.

In Louisiana the parish court has exclusive jurisdiction to ascertain and fix one's liability as tutor (Lusk v. Benton, 30 La. Ann. 686); and the probate court has jurisdiction of a claim on a note made by a tutor in favor of the husband for a balance due the wife (Thibodeaux v. Thibodeaux, 19 La. 439); but a minor cannot sue his tutor's vendee in the probate court to annul its proceedings releasing his general mortgage (Lesassier v. Lesassier, 15 La. 55).

In Minnesota the probate court has no jurisdiction of an action to recover the price of land belonging to minors, sold and conveyed by their guardian. Peterson v. Baillif, 52 Minn. 386, 54 N. W. 185.

In New York where the bona fides of an assignment of a ward's estate is impeached, the surrogate has no jurisdiction to try the issue. De Guerie v. Bonfanti, 19 N. Y. L. Rep. 681.

In Pennsylvania where real estate belonging to a ward, subject to a life-estate in her mother, was sold by the ward's guardian, and one third of the proceeds paid by him to the mother under the mistaken idea that she was entitled to same, the orphans' court has jurisdiction to adjudicate the rights of the parties without calling in the aid of a common-law court. Mulholland's Estate, 154 Pa. St. 491, 26 Atl. 612. And since it is the duty of the orphans' court to watch over and protect the property of minors, it has jurisdiction over the surety of a guardian to compel the surrender by him of property belonging to the minor's estate, deposited in his hands by the guardian. Brooke's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 150 [affirming 11 Wkly. Notes Cas. 483]. However, the orphans' court has no jurisdiction, it seems, of an action to charge a guardian individually for necessities furnished his ward (Johnstone v. Fritz, 159 Pa. St. 378, 28 Atl. 148); and the act of June 16, 1836, section 19, conferring jurisdiction upon the orphans' court in all cases within their respective counties wherein guardians may be possessed of or in any way accountable for any real or personal estate of a decedent, does not embrace the case of a demand by a creditor of a minor's estate the validity of which is denied by the guardian. Shore's Estate, 14 Phila. 321.

2. VENUE.³⁵ A suit against a guardian of minor children on his individual undertaking to pay for their board and care may be brought in the county where he resides.³⁶ In some states a suit against guardian and ward must be brought in the county where the estate is being administered.³⁷

C. Limitations and Laches³⁸—1. LIMITATIONS.³⁹ Statutes of limitation almost universally contain a provision that in computing the statutory period the time during which plaintiff was under disability from infancy or otherwise shall be excluded.⁴⁰ This exception applies to infants under guardianship; the statute does not run against them during their minority; ⁴¹ and it has been held that the ward's rights are not barred even though the statute has run against the guardian.⁴²

36. Lewis v. Edwards, 44 Ind. 333, so holding, although he was appointed, and the wards reside, in another county.

37. Logan v. Robertson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1904) 83 S. W. 395 (holding that a suit against a guardian for specific performance of a contract for the location of land is properly instituted in the county in which the guardianship proceedings are pending, although such county is not the residence of the parties or the county in which the land is situated); McKay v. Marshall Nat. Bank, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 632, 42 S. W. 868 (holding that where a guardianship has not been actually closed, although the ward has been relieved of disability by marriage, an action to foreclose a lien on guardianship property pledged by the guardian to secure a note given by him as such must be brought where the administration is pending, even though the note is payable in another county).

Rule applied in actions against guardian or his estate see Sewell v. McVay, 30 La. Ann. 673; Crosby v. Crosby, 1 S. C. 337 (where the equitable claim sought to be enforced was due by the guardian at the time of his appointment); Goodhue v. Barnwell, Rice Eq. (S. C.) 198 (holding that a man intruding on the estate of an infant and taking the profits thereof will be treated as guardian, and cannot set up the statute of limitations against the claim of the infant). See, however, Long v. Cason, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 60.

Vacancy of succession.—Under La. Civ. Code, art. 1088, providing that a succession is called vacant when no one claims it, or when all the heirs are unknown, or when all the heirs to it have renounced it, the mere absence of a formal acceptance by the tutors of a minor heir does not cause the estate to be regarded as vacant, so as to permit the running of limitations against the minor's claim for rents and profits against his deceased father's tutor. Rawls v. Rawls, 6 La. Ann. 665.

Where a minor has been emancipated by judgment, prescription against his right of action against his tutor for a settlement begins from the date of emancipation and not from his majority. Proctor v. Hebert, 36 La. Ann. 250.

Rule applied in actions against third persons see Grimby v. Hudnell, 76 Ga. 378, 2 Am. St. Rep. 46 (holding that where the right of action is in an infant herself, the statute does not begin to run until she attains her majority, although she has a guardian who might maintain the action in her name); Hampton v. Hampton, 9 Tex. Civ. App. 497, 29 S. W. 423; Grant v. Anderson, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 190. See, however, Crosby v. Crosby, 1 S. C. 337.

W. 385, holding that where a guardian was removed from office and directed to pay over the estate to his successor in office, but he did not do so, and the succeeding guardian neglected to bring suit, the minor might, before attaining majority, institute a suit through a third guardian as next friend to obtain the property; and a bill for such purpose filed by the minor by his regular guardian was substantially the bill of the minor, and it was error to dismiss it as an action by the guardian which was barred by limitations.

When they become of age, however, the statute begins to run, and if they do not sue within the time prescribed either generally or specially the action is barred.⁴³ Marriage of a female ward to an adult sets the statute in motion in some states as between guardian and ward.⁴⁴ A right of action in favor of a guardian against his ward may be lost by limitations even during the ward's minority.⁴⁵ Stay laws have been held to apply in actions by guardian or ward.⁴⁶

43. Illinois.—Beers v. Myers, 28 Ill. App. 648.

Indiana.—Lambert v. Billheimer, 125 Ind. 519, 25 N. E. 451; Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 33 Ind. App. 540, 71 N. E. 169.

Louisiana.—Gallion v. Keegan, 39 La. Ann. 468, 2 So. 50; Bedell v. Calder, 37 La. Ann. 805; Richmond's Succession, 35 La. Ann. 858; Shall v. Foley, 27 La. Ann. 651 (holding that where a minor receives notes in settlement with one acting as under-tutor, he cannot, after a lapse of seven years and after the notes are prescribed, bring suit against the under-tutor's executor on the ground that the notes were for the most part worthless); Aillot v. Aubert, 20 La. Ann. 509; Offutt v. Collins, 11 Rob. 491. However, the four years' prescription applicable to actions against tutors by minors after their majority does not run where a minor has died after his majority but within the four years, leaving an infant child. Rawls v. Rawls, 6 La. Ann. 665.

Maryland.—Green v. Johnson, 3 Gill & J. 389.

Missouri.—State v. Willi, 46 Mo. 236.

Pennsylvania.—Bull v. Towson, 4 Watts & S. 557; In re Miller, 26 Pittsb. Leg. J. 344, holding that where a ward took no steps to compel an accounting within six years from the time he attained his majority, a claim based on the negligence of the guardian is barred by the statute of limitations.

Washington.—Wickham v. Sprague, 18 Wash. 466, 51 Pac. 1055.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 428.

Rule applied in actions against third persons see Howbert v. Heyle, 47 Kan. 58, 27 Pac. 116; Wilson v. Sibley, 54 Miss. 656, holding that the borrower of a ward's money from his guardian is a debtor and not a trustee, and is protected by the statute of limitations from an action by the ward, although, the guardian being dead at the time of bringing the action, an action by his administrator is not barred. However, promissory notes having for their consideration money due by a tutor to his ward and executed by the sole heir of the deceased tutor are not governed by the four-year prescription applicable to an action in rendition of an account of the tutorship (Aillot v. Aubert, 20 La. Ann. 509); and the prescription of four years relating to actions of minors against their tutors is not applicable to an action to recover property sold by a tutor without observing the formalities required by law (Commagere v. Gally, 6 La. 161. See, however, Stroud v. Hawkins, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 321, 67 S. W. 534).

Who may urge defense.—If the real property of a tutor has passed into the hands of purchasers under forced alienations, they may plead prescription, even though the tutor has renounced it, to the minor's action against the tutor respecting the acts of the tutorship: Bedell v. Calder, 37 La. Ann. 805.

Waiver of defense.—Notwithstanding the action of an emancipated minor against her tutor respecting acts of tutorship is by statute prescribed by four years to begin from the date of her majority, yet if the tutor files an account of his acts of tutorship to which his former ward makes opposition, the tutor thereby waives his right to avail himself of the plea. Harvey v. Harvey, 44 La. Ann. 80, 10 So. 410.

Action to set aside gift to guardian.—Where deeds of gift to a guardian are made by a female ward soon after coming of age, and she marries immediately afterward, the lapse of twenty years during coverture will not affect her right to impeach the deeds after discoveriture. Waller v. Armistead, 2 Leigh (Va.) 11, 21 Am. Dec. 594.

44. Parish v. Alston, 65 Tex. 194, holding that when a female infant ward marries, the statute begins to run in her guardian's favor.

However, the claims of a tutor against his ward are not prescribed until the lapse of four years after the tutorship has terminated by the marriage of the ward, that being the time within which the tutor may be called to account. In re Hewitt, 23 La. Ann. 632.

45. Magee v. Keegan, 35 Miss. 244, 72 Am. Dec. 123, holding that if a guardian by mistake of law returns his own property as belonging to his ward, and recognizes the ward's title during eight years, his title is barred by limitations.

46. Byne v. Anderson, 67 Ga. 466 (holding that the Georgia act of March 16, 1869, requiring all causes of action accruing before June 1, 1865, to be sued by Jan. 1, 1870, applies to a suit by a new guardian appointed in 1869 against a former guardian for acts of mismanagement prior to June 1, 1865); Munroe v. Phillips, 65 Ga. 390 (action by ward against guardian).

However, the Georgia act of March 16, 1869, requiring all causes of action which accrued prior to June 1, 1865, to be sued by Jan. 1, 1870, does not apply to an heir's right of action against the surety of the administrator where the heir was an infant and had no guardian until after June 1, 1865, as his right of action did not accrue

2. LACHES.⁴⁷ Suits by guardian and ward are ordinarily governed as to laches by the rules applicable to suits in equity in general.⁴⁸

D. Parties⁴⁹—1. AUTHORITY OF GUARDIAN TO REPRESENT WARD. The general guardian of an infant may in a proper case institute an action in behalf of the ward.⁵⁰ If the ward is sued, he is entitled to appear by his general guardian.⁵¹ The guardian has authority to appear and defend,⁵² and it is not only his right⁵³ but also his duty⁵⁴ to represent the ward in such a case, it not being necessary⁵⁵ until the appointment. Monroe v. Simmons, 86 Ga. 344, 12 S. E. 643.

47. See, generally, EQUITY, 16 Cyc. 150 et seq.

48. Easton v. Somerville, 111 Iowa 164, 82 N. W. 475, 82 Am. St. Rep. 502 (holding a new guardian not guilty of laches in enforcing claim against his predecessor's estate); McConkey v. Cockey, 69 Md. 286, 14 Atl. 465 (holding that where a guardian, shortly after his ward's minority had ceased, has, by his influence and authority over the ward and by false and fraudulent representations as to its value, induced him to receive in settlement of all sums due him shares of stock which afterward prove worthless, and has thereby exacted for himself formal release from all accountability to his ward, the failure of the ward to file his complaint until two years after the execution of his release is not laches, when, during the two years, the guardian has continued to represent the stock to him as valuable); Mack v. Brammer, 28 Ohio St. 508 (lapse of seven years after coming of age before suing held not to constitute laches).

52. California.—Gronfier v. Puymirol, 19 Cal. 629.

Indiana.—Miller v. Smith, 98 Ind. 226, partition proceedings.

Louisiana.—Brigot v. Brigot, 49 La. Ann. 1428, 22 So. 641; McCan's Succession, 49 La. Ann. 968, 22 So. 225, both holding that the mother of minors domiciled in France, appointed and confirmed as their natural tutrix by a court of that country, is authorized as such tutrix to appear and stand in judgment in their behalf on resisting a petitory action brought to recover real estate in Louisiana in possession of tenants of the minors.

Mississippi.—Wade v. Bridewell, 38 Miss. 420, holding, however, that previous to Act (1846), p. 682, § 12, a general guardian was not a proper person as such to represent his ward in any suit.

Oregon.—Ankeny v. Blackiston, 7 Oreg. 407.

Tennessee.—Brown v. Severson, 12 Heisk. 381.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 436.

In Massachusetts by statute a general guardian cannot defend where a guardian ad litem has been appointed. Elder v. Adams, 180 Mass. 303, 62 N. E. 373.

Appointment of guardian as prerequisite.—A dative tutor illegally appointed cannot represent the minors. James v. Meyer, 41 La. Ann. 1100, 7 So. 618. So where a father appeared as general guardian for his minor children without having qualified as such, and defended an action against them with reference to their separate property, a nunc pro tunc order appointing him their guardian ad litem before judgment rendered against them was unauthorized, and they were not bound by the judgment so entered. Power v. Lenoir, 22 Mont. 169, 56 Pac. 106.

53. Smoot v. Boyd, 87 Ky. 642, 9 S. W. 829, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 615 (holding that the guardian may appear without summons); Walker v. Smyser, 80 Ky. 620 (holding that the guardian is entitled to file an answer and counter-claim).

54. Gronfier v. Puymirol, 19 Cal. 629; Chambers v. Penland, 78 N. C. 53; Rankin v. Kemp, 21 Ohio St. 651.

55. Alabama.—Cato v. Easley, 2 Stew. 214, holding that where a suit in chancery against infants is defended by their general guardian, and the answer of the guardian is received for them and full defense made under the authority and sanction of the court, the infants are equally bound as if their guardian had been appointed ad litem.

Arkansas.—Moore v. Woodall, 40 Ark. 42.
California.—Gronfier v. Puymirol, 19 Cal. 629, holding that the guardian need not be appointed guardian ad litem.

Indiana.—Hughes v. Sellers, 34 Ind. 337.
Massachusetts.—Mansur v. Pratt, 101 Mass. 60, suit in equity.

Ohio.—Rankin v. Kemp, 21 Ohio St. 651, holding that an appearance and answer by the guardian is the same in effect as if he had been expressly appointed guardian ad litem by the court. See, however, Roberts v. Roberts, 61 Ohio St. 96, 55 N. E. 411, holding that the guardian has no authority to dispense with the appointment of a guardian ad litem unless authorized so to do by statute.

Tennessee.—Cowan v. Anderson, 7 Coldw. 284.

Virginia.—Beverley v. Miller, 6 Munf. 99, holding that where the general guardian of an infant answers a bill in his behalf in the superior court of chancery under the sanction of the court, the infant will be equally or proper⁵⁶ as a rule to appoint a guardian ad litem or next friend. It follows that the ward is bound by acts of the guardian done in good faith in conducting the defense.⁵⁷ However, a guardian who has a personal interest in the controversy adverse to the interest of the ward cannot represent him either as plaintiff or defendant;⁵⁸ the ward must sue or appear by guardian ad litem, next friend, or under-tutor;⁵⁹ and the same is true where a general guardian who has been bound as if he had answered by guardian appointed ad litem.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 436.

Contra.—Saville v. Saville, 63 Kan. 861, 66 Pac. 1043 (partition suit); Bearinger v. Pelton, 78 Mich. 109, 43 N. W. 1042; Sharp v. Pell, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 486; In re Stratton, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 509 (the last two cases being partition suits); Fitch v. Cornell, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,834, 1 Sawy. 156.

56. McMakin v. Stratton, 82 Ky. 226. And see Psyche v. Paradol, 6 La. 366 (holding that a curator ad hoc cannot be appointed to a minor under the age of puberty); Farmers L. & T. Co. v. McKenna, 3 Dem. Surr. (N. Y.) 219.

However, under some circumstances the court may appoint a guardian ad litem. Patterson v. Pullman, 104 Ill. 80 (holding that the court is clothed with a discretion in appointing or allowing one other than the guardian to institute or defend a suit on behalf of an infant, which discretion is necessary to prevent many suits in reference to the same subject-matter); Alexander v. Frary, 9 Ind. 481; McMakin v. Shelton, 6 Ky. L. Rep. 154; Ewing v. Ferguson, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 548 (holding that wards in an equity suit are entitled to be defended by guardian ad litem). And see Wilder v. Eldridge, 17 Vt. 226, where it is said that if the guardian is not summoned in a trustee case, plaintiff must at his peril ask the court to appoint a guardian ad litem for the trustee. In Kentucky the statute empowers the court to appoint a guardian ad litem only in cases where there is no necessity for a cross petition to obtain affirmative relief; and even where the defense is a mere traverse or plea in bar, if the regular guardian appears, there should be a valid reason for denying him the conduct of the defense. Walker v. Smyser, 80 Ky. 620.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 436. And see cases cited infra, note 59.

The guardian's interest need not be personal, it seems, in order to disqualify him. Robinson v. Fidelity Trust, etc., Co., 11 S. W. 806, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 313 (where a guardian sued as trustee for a third person and the wards were defendants); Hagan v. Grimshaw, 15 La. Ann. 394 (holding that where in the partition of a succession there are minor heirs who have opposite interests to each other, although represented by the same tutor, there should be appointed to each of them a special tutor or tutor ad hoc). See, however, Cohen v. Ripy, 33 S. W. 625, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 1078.

Merely because there might be a conflict of interest between a widow and her minor children, if they should succeed against one claiming against both, does not deprive her of the right as their natural tutrix to appear as such on their behalf in defense of a suit attacking the rights of both, nor require the appointment of a curator ad hoc to represent them. Brigot v. Brigot, 49 La. Ann. 1428, 22 So. 641.

Mode of taking objection.—If in partition proceedings a minor heir is represented by his tutor, who is himself a party to the partition, the objection need not be made by way of opposition before the notary, before whom no contestation could be made concerning it. Aguillard's Succession, 13 La. Ann. 97.

2. NAME IN WHICH GUARDIAN SHOULD SUE.⁶¹ The question whether a guardian may sue in his own name to enforce or protect the rights of the ward is governed largely by statute.⁶² In some states it has been held that he may not thus sue; the action must be brought in the name of the ward.⁶³ In others it has been held that the guardian may sue in his own name in certain classes of cases, and in those classes only.⁶⁴ In yet other states it has been held that he may thus sue generally.⁶⁵ Where a guardian is entitled to the possession of the ward's property, he may as a rule sue in his own name to recover it,⁶⁶ or according to some decisions bring

63. Illinois.—Bowles v. McAllen, 16 Ill. 30 (holding that a suit for partition cannot be sustained where it is brought by one who describes himself as guardian of a person named, the effect of such description not being to bring the suit for the ward); Hoare v. Harris, 11 Ill. 24 (holding that, although Rev. St. c. 47, provides that guardians shall be allowed to prosecute and defend suits for their wards, a bill to enforce the rights of infant wards must be filed in their names by their guardian).

Kentucky.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Head, 84 S. W. 751, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 270, holding that where an action is for damages to an infant, it should be brought in his name by his statutory guardian. See also McChord v. Fisher, 13 B. Mon. 193, holding that the guardian of an infant, when he brings a suit as such, must sue in the name of the infant "by his guardian."

Massachusetts.—Brook v. Rogers, 184 Mass. 545, 69 N. E. 334, holding that a guardian accepting a mortgage through false representations in exchange for lands of her ward cannot maintain an action in her own name for the deceit, although after the action was brought the ward died and plaintiff was the only heir at law of the ward.

Minnesota.—Perine v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 48 Minn. 82, 50 N. W. 1022, holding that the right to sue in the guardian's name is not given the guardian by probate code, section 148, providing that every guardian shall demand, sue for, and receive all debts due his ward.

New Jersey.—Longstreet v. Tilton, 1 N. J. L. 38.

Virginia.—Stewart v. Crabbin, 6 Munf. 280, holding that an action for an assault and battery committed upon an infant must be brought in the name of the infant by his guardian.

Wisconsin.—Vincent v. Starks, 45 Wis. 458, semble.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 434.

64. Anderson v. Cameron, Morr. (Iowa) 436, holding that a statute authorizing guardians to sue for and recover moneys belonging to their wards from executors and administrators does not authorize them to sue in their own names on administrators' bonds for a failure to perform an order of court.

65. Alabama.—Hutton v. Williams, 35 Ala. 503, 76 Am. Dec. 297, holding that where one of the parties to an action by owners of land against a purchaser at a partition sale to recover damages for his refusal to comply with the terms of his purchase is an infant, his guardian may join in his own name for the use of the infant. Compare McLeod v. Mason, 5 Port. 223.

Arkansas.—Turner v. Alexander, 41 Ark. 254.

Indiana.—Bowen v. Swander, 121 Ind. 164, 22 N. E. 725, holding that a guardian may bring suit in partition in his own name for the benefit of his ward.

Nevada.—Ricord v. Central Pac. R. Co., 15 Nev. 167.

New York.—Beecher v. Crouse, 19 Wend. 306, holding that an action will not lie in the names of infants against one who intermeddles with the issues and profits of their real estate; the suit must be brought in the name of the guardian in soeage or general guardian appointed by the surrogate.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 434.

trespass⁶⁷ or trover⁶⁸ in relation thereto; but the rule seems to be otherwise as to an action on the case,⁶⁹ and as to an action to collect debts and demands due to the ward.⁷⁰ As respects contracts made by the guardian for the ward, it is very generally held that the guardian may sue thereon in his own name,⁷¹ and it has

where the matter lies in action, the suit must be in the name of the ward); Cole v. Jerman, 77 Conn. 374, 59 Atl. 425 (holding that an action for possession of a ward's land and for compensation for its use is properly brought in the name of her guardian); Andrews v. Townshend, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 140, 1 N. Y. Suppl. 421 (ejectment); Hughes' Minors' Appeal, 53 Pa. St. 500 (holding that guardians have such an interest in the estate of their wards as to enable them to avow for damages feasant or to maintain ejectment). Contra, Anderson v. Watson, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 509 (holding that suit by a guardian for personal property of his ward unlawfully detained by another must be brought in the name of the infant by his guardian or next friend); Webb v. Hayden, 166 Mo. 39, 65 S. W. 760 (holding that a curator in an action to recover property belonging to his ward must sue in the name of the latter); Bradley v. Amidon, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 235 (holding that a guardian appointed by a surrogate is not authorized to file a bill in his own name only, to obtain possession of the property of his ward); Simpson v. King, 36 N. C. 11 (holding that a suit in equity for a legacy due to minors must be brought in their name); Kinsey v. Newcombe, 17 U. C. C. P. 99 (ejectment). And see Duck Island Club v. Bexstead, 174 Ill. 435, 51 N. E. 831, holding that an action of ejectment is properly brought by a guardian in the name of the wards.

C.) 259, holding that an action for damages for the diminution of the rental value of real estate, the title of which is in infants, is properly brought in the name of the infants by their next friend or guardian, and not by the guardian in his own name. See, however, Fuqua v. Hunt, 1 Ala. 197, 34 Am. Dec. 771, holding that a guardian may maintain an action in his own name for an injury to the property of his ward in his actual possession.

Injunction against injury.—A guardian in possession of the ward's real estate may maintain a suit in his own name to enjoin injury thereto. Kinsley v. Kinsley, 150 Ind. 67, 49 N. E. 819.

Edwards*, 2 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 767, holding that an action on a note owned jointly by a guardian individually and his ward may be brought by the guardian in his own name and right without making the ward a party, as a recovery by the guardian is binding on the ward.

71. Thomas v. Bennett, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 197; Pond v. Curtiss, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 45 (holding that where a guardian made a lease of his ward's land, reserving rent, an action for non-payment of the rent was properly brought in the name of the guardian as plaintiff, although after the ward had attained his age); Jolliffe v. Higgins, 6 Munf. (Va.) 3 (assumpsit on draft or order); McKinney v. Jones, 55 Wis. 39, 11 N. W. 606, 12 N. W. 381 (express contract). See, however, Carskadden v. McGhee, 7 Watts & S. (Pa.) 140, holding that a promise "to the guardians of the minor children" of a person is a promise to the minors and should be sued in their name.

A note payable to a guardian may be sued on by him in his own name.

Alabama.—Hightower v. Maull, 50 Ala. 495. See, however, Cox v. Williamson, 11 Ala. 343, holding that where a note is payable to an individual eo nomine as guardian of an infant, she may maintain an action thereon in her own name, or after her marriage in the name of herself and husband; but that if suit is brought in the name of the ward by the guardian and her husband, it is not allowable to declare in the name of the guardian or of herself and husband, adding a count for money had and received to their use.

California.—See Sainsevain v. Luce, (1904) 35 Pac. 1033, holding that, although the code provides that a guardian must sue in the

also been held that he may sue in his own name on securities taken by him as guardian.⁷²

3. NECESSARY PARTIES⁷³—a. In General. Generally speaking the question of necessary parties in suits by or against guardian or ward is governed by the rules applicable in civil suits in general.⁷⁴ If necessary parties are not joined in a suit in equity the court may call them in.⁷⁵

b. Guardian.⁷⁶ The guardian is a necessary party to an action to recover a legacy bequeathed to the ward,⁷⁷ and, it has been held, to a suit in equity in which the ward is plaintiff.⁷⁸ He is not a necessary party to a suit against minor heirs to foreclose a mortgage;⁷⁹ nor is a former guardian who as such employed an attorney a necessary party to an action against his successor to recover for the services.⁸⁰

c. Ward. The ward is a necessary party to a suit by the guardian for relief name of his ward, a payee of a note who is described as "guardian" may sue in his own name, in the absence of evidence of a ward or trust estate.

Indiana.—Shepherd v. Evans, 9 Ind. 260, holding that where a note is made payable to "[E], guardian of the estate of [R]," upon its face E is the real party in interest and may sue in his own name, and the above words be regarded as surplusage or as descriptio personæ.

Minnesota.—McLean v. Dean, 66 Minn. 369, 69 N. W. 140, so holding, although the consideration paid for the note was funds of the ward, and the note was taken by the guardian for the benefit of the ward.

Mississippi.—Jenkins v. Sherman, 77 Miss. 884, 28 So. 726, holding also that an assignee of the note may sue thereon in his own name.

North Carolina.—See Mebane v. Mebane, 66 N. C. 334, holding that a note in favor of a ward, made payable to the guardian, if delivered to the husband of the ward, may be sued in the name of the guardian to the use of the husband.

Texas.—Zachary v. Gregory, 32 Tex. 452, holding that an action on a note given to a guardian as such may be brought in his name after he ceases to be guardian.

Vermont.—Wheelock v. Wheelock, 5 Vt. 433, holding that a note payable to A, guardian of B, must be sued in A's name, and not in that of B's administrator.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 434.

72. Catron v. La Fayette County, 106 Mo. 659, 17 S. W. 577, action on bonds assigned to guardian as such.

Suit to foreclose mortgage.—Where a bond and mortgage were assigned to the general guardian of certain infants as such, and were a part of their personal estate, an action to foreclose was properly brought by the guardian in her own name. Bayer v. Phillips, 10 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 227. See, however, Cleveland v. Cohrs, 10 S. C. 224, holding that the wards of a guardian who has taken a bond and mortgage for money of his wards loaned by him may as equitable owners maintain an action to foreclose the mortgage in their own names.

74. Smith v. Todd, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 7 (holding that where a guardian at the request of his ward gave his own note for a lot of land purchased for the ward, and, being sued on the note, prayed for relief in equity for failure of consideration, the vendors of the land as well as the holder of the note were necessary parties); Scott v. Scott, 29 S. C. 414, 7 S. E. 811 (holding that the vendor not being present when a sale to the guardian of an infant was negotiated by her husband, and having had nothing to do with the transaction except to receive and assign a note and mortgage is not a necessary party to an action by the ward on becoming of age to set aside the sale); Moorehead v. Orr, 1 S. C. 304 (holding that where a ward seeks to subject real estate of which his guardian died seized specifically to the payment of a debt due him by the latter on the ground that it was purchased with the ward's funds, the other creditors of the guardian have a right to be heard and should be made parties defendant); Cook v. Bybee, 24 Tex. 278 (holding that by statute a mother may assert her rights as guardian of her child without joining her second husband, not the child's father); Wichita Land, etc., Co. v. Ward, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 307, 21 S. W. 128 (holding that in an action by a former ward after becoming of age to set aside a sale of land under execution issued on a judgment rendered against him while a minor and against another person as his guardian who was not such guardian, the latter is not a necessary party).

78. Miller v. Cabell, 81 Ky. 178, holding that if he declines to sue he should be made a defendant. Contra, Wead v. Cantwell, 36 Hun (N. Y.) 528, holding that the guardian need not be joined with the infant as party plaintiff in a suit to procure the construction of a will.

79. Alexander v. Frary, 9 Ind. 481.

from liability on a note given by him for land bought for the ward,⁸¹ a suit by the guardian against his predecessor for a balance due the ward,⁸² and a suit by a former guardian against his successor for a balance due from the ward.⁸³ The ward is not a necessary party to a suit by a guardian to foreclose a mortgage given him as such,⁸⁴ or to a suit to cancel a conveyance of the ward;⁸⁵ nor need he be joined in an action to recover money due him and the guardian individually.⁸⁶ In some states it is provided by statute that the guardian may sue without joining the ward.⁸⁷ As a rule the ward is not a necessary party to a suit against the guardian as such.⁸⁸

86. Piedmont, etc., L. Ins. Co. v. Ray, 50 Tex. 511 (holding that a life-insurance policy payable to the widow of the insured, half in her own right and half for the use of her children, and which directs that the wife shall act as guardian without giving security, is collectable by the widow alone); Ezell v. Edwards, 2 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 767 (holding that the ward is not a necessary party to an action on a note jointly owned by him and the guardian individually).

87. Anderson v. Watson, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 509.

The guardian is "a trustee of an express trust," within the code, who may sue without joining the ward. Bayer v. Phillips, 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 425; Barnwell v. Marion, 54 S. C. 223, 32 S. E. 313. Contra, Fox v. Minor, 32 Cal. 111, 91 Am. Dec. 566.

88. Georgia.—Howard v. Cassels, 105 Ga. 412, 31 S. E. 562, 70 Am. St. Rep. 44, holding that where a guardian purchases land for his ward, giving a note in part payment, he is the only necessary party defendant in an action to enforce the note against the land. See, however, Salter v. Salter, 80 Ga. 173, 4 S. E. 391, 12 Am. St. Rep. 249, where the guardian was made a party only in his individual capacity.

Indiana.—Ray v. McGinnis, 81 Ind. 451 (action on claim due from guardian); Vogel v. Vogler, 78 Ind. 353 (holding that in an action by a county treasurer against a guardian to recover back taxes on property of the wards, it is not necessary to make the wards parties, although the property should be assessed in their names).

Kentucky.—Lindsey v. Stevens, 5 Dana 104, where a guardian contracted to pay the mother of his wards a certain sum for their support, and she sued to set off the sum against a judgment held by the guardian against her.

North Carolina.—Becton v. Becton, 56 N. C. 419, bill by the attorney-general or a solicitor against a defaulting guardian.

Texas.—Logan v. Robertson, (Civ. App. 1904) 83 S. W. 395, suit for specific performance.

Virginia.—See Sutton v. Gatewood, 6 Munf. 398, holding that a bill against a guardian to recover for advances on account of the ward is not demurrable because the ward is not made a party. However, infant children are necessary parties to a petition by a receiver against their guardian to restrict their right to the use of a fund assigned to them by virtue of their deceased father's claim of homestead. Clendenning v. Conrad, 91 Va. 410, 21 S. E. 818.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 431.

See, however, Tucker v. Bean, 65 Me. 352 (holding that infants must be made parties to bills in equity affecting their title to real estate); Wakefield v. Marr, 65 Me. 341 (holding that where a bill in equity is brought to enforce a trust, the trustee, although a minor, must be made a party); Judson v. Walker, 155 Mo. 166, 55 S. W. 1083 (holding that a minor is a necessary party to an action against his curator affecting funds in the curator's hands belonging to the estate).

Necessity of joining all of several wards.—It is no objection to a bill by one of several wards against the guardian for the proceeds of the sale of land that the others were not joined, where the petition for the sale and the settlement of the guardian ascertain the interest of complainant, especially where the assignment of errors does not embrace such objection. Taylor v. Taylor, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 559.

The administrator of a deceased ward is a necessary party to a bill to enjoin the guardian from collecting a judgment obtained by him as such in the ward's lifetime. Harper v. Seely, Wright (Ohio) 390.

The heirs at law of a deceased ward are necessary parties to an action by his administrator against the administrator of the deceased guardian to recover money received by such guardian from the sale, under a decree of court for partition, of land belonging to the ward. Allison v. Robinson, 78 N. C. 222. However, the heirs of a ward are not necessary parties in a suit against the guardian for the specific performance of a contract. Logan v. Robertson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1904) 83 S. W. 395.

90. Bloodgood v. Mickle, 15 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 103 (holding that where a testamentary trustee, with the approval of the general guardians of minors interested in the trust property, contracted for the erection of a building thereon, in an action by the contractor against the guardians and others to recover his compensation, the administratrix of the trustee was a proper party); Allen v. Hoppin, 9 R. I. 258 (holding that an action will not lie against a guardian and his ward jointly to recover a debt which the ward incurred previous to the appointment of the guardian); Smoot v. Richards, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 146, 27 S. W. 967.

Joinder of several guardians as plaintiffs.—Guardians may join in a suit on account of any joint transaction founded on their relation to their ward, even after their connection as guardians is dissolved. Shearman v. Akins, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 283.

Joinder of guardian as defendant.—Where a mortgage was made to an infant having a guardian, and the assignee of the mortgagor brings a bill to redeem, he may join the guardian with the ward. Parker v. Lincoln, 12 Mass. 16. Where a testamentary trustee with the approval of the general guardians of minors interested in the trust property made a contract for the erection of a building thereon, the guardians were proper parties to an action by the contractor to recover his compensation. Bloodgood v. Mickle, 15 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 103. In an action by a guardian against the vendors of land to recover his ward's money paid therefor by a former guardian, where it appears that such guardian and her husband gave their personal note for the amount of the purchase but applied the ward's money in payment thereof, the vendors are entitled to have them made parties, in order to make the determination to the right to the money binding on them. Smoot v. Richards, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 146, 27 S. W. 967. However, the guardian of an infant heir is not personally liable for the debts of the decedent; and hence in an action for breach of warranty of title against a grantor's heirs, it is error to make the guardian of a minor heir a party. Crocker v. Smith, 10 Ill. App. 376.

Joinder of several wards as plaintiffs.—Where one has been appointed guardian of several minor heirs, such heirs cannot jointly sue him for failure to account for property coming into his hands. Norton v. Miller, 25 Ark. 108.

Joinder of ward as defendant.—A ward is not a proper party to an action against the guardian upon a claim due from him as guardian. Ray v. McGinnis, 81 Ind. 451. And in a suit for unpaid taxes due by the ward, he is not a proper party. State v. Howard, 80 Ind. 466. See, however, Lent v. New York, etc., R. Co., 55 Hun (N. Y.) 180, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 729, where a ward was held to be a proper party plaintiff in an action by a special guardian on an award made in condemnation proceedings.

Joinder of several wards as defendants.—Where a widow as guardian of her children received rents from a lease of property held in common with a cotenant, and applied them to the use of herself and children, the latter could not be made jointly liable to the cotenant for half the money so received; if the heirs are liable to such cotenant, they are liable only separately, each for such part of the cotenant's money as was expended for his own benefit. Crocker v. Tiffany, 9 R. I. 505.

92. Perine v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 48 Minn. 82, 50 N. W. 1022 (holding that the court may amend the record in an action brought by a guardian in his own name instead of his ward's to recover insurance due the ward by inserting the ward's name as plaintiff); Weber v. Hannibal, 83 Mo. 262 (holding that a petition describing plaintiff in the caption as guardian of certain minors, but not alleging that he sued as guardian, and asking judgment for himself, may nevertheless be amended by making the minors plaintiffs and making the proper allegations in their names). Where, however, a petition for a review of the judgment and proceedings on a petition for partition has been presented in the name of one as guardian and in behalf of certain minors, and notice has been ordered thereon and the opposing party has appeared, it cannot be amended so as to make the minors petitioners by such person as their guardian. *Elwell v. E. Process³—1. Kentucky.—Clements v. Ramsey, 4 S. W. 311, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 172, holding that it is not necessary to file an amended pleading making the former ward a party.

Louisiana.—Martel v. Richard, 15 La. Ann. 598, holding that no new citation or formal change in the pleadings is necessary.

Nevada.—Ricord v. Central Pac. R. Co., 15 Nev. 167, holding that it was error, on motion of the ward, to join him as party plaintiff, as he should have been substituted as sole plaintiff.

Ohio.—See Horning v. Poyer, 18 Ohio Cir. Ct. 732, 6 Ohio Cir. Dec. 370.

United States.—Stanton's Case, 4 Ct. Cl. 456, holding that in such a case the petition should be amended so as to join the former ward as plaintiff.

Mississippi.—Smith v. Pattison, 45 Miss. 619.

Tennessee.—Britain v. Cowen, 5 Humphr. 315.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 439.

Form of writ.—Under N. H. Gen. St. c. 165, § 4, authorizing suit against a ward "by his guardian," if the writ in an action against a ward should have commanded the sheriff to summon the ward by serving the writ on the guardian, one commanding him to summon the guardian "in her said capacity to appear" is not such a departure as to be ground for demurrer. Stearns v. Wallace, 58 N. H. 228.

Sufficiency of return.—An officer returned a summons in chancery with the following indorsement thereon: "Executed on Sidney Smith, executor, Mrs. Julia L. Smith, executrix, etc., by offering to each a copy . . . ; and on Miss Fanny R. Smith . . . [and other minors], by handing to each a copy." It was held that the service was good, it appearing from the bill that Mrs. Julia L. Smith was the guardian of the minors. Smith v. Pattison, 45 Miss. 619.

Guardian individually interested.—Under Ky. Civ. Code, § 52, providing that where all parties on whom process may be served for the guardian to be served.⁶ Service of process only on the ward himself is ineffectual;⁷ to give the court jurisdiction of the person of the ward the general guardian must be served,⁸ in the absence of statute to the contrary.⁹

2. WAIVER BY APPEARANCE.¹⁰ A general guardian may in an action against him voluntarily appear without service of process;¹¹ but if the wards are not made parties to the suit, his general appearance does not give the court jurisdiction over them.¹² If suit is brought against the wards, the general guardian may an infant under fourteen years of age are plaintiffs, the clerk of court shall appoint a guardian ad litem, on whom process shall be served for the infant, a sale of property of an infant under fourteen years of age, made in an action by his father as guardian, where no guardian ad litem was appointed, and where the only process in the action was served on plaintiff himself as defendant's guardian, is void as to the infant. Isert v. Davis, 32 S. W. 294, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 686. See, however, Morrison v. Garrott, 22 S. W. 320, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 305.

Mississippi.—Moody v. McDuff, 58 Miss. 751.

Missouri.—See Smith v. Davis, 27 Mo. 298, holding that if a proceeding in partition against an infant under guardianship is instituted by notice, service thereof must be made on the guardian, but that if the proceeding is instituted by summons, the guardian is not noticed until process is served on the infant.

New York.—Bellamy v. Guhl, 62 How. Pr. 460, so holding, although a guardian ad litem appears and files an answer. See, however, Kellett v. Rathbun, 4 Paige 102, holding that the citation of an infant to appear may be served in the presence of his legal guardian.

United States.—Hatch v. Ferguson, 57 Fed. 966, construing a Washington statute.

North Carolina.—Chambers v. Penland, 78 N. C. 53.

Wisconsin.—Helms v. Chadbourne, 45 Wis. 60, holding further that the guardian must be served, not merely as a party defendant, but for defendant ward.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 439.

See also Gayle v. Johnston, 80 Ala. 395; Wornack v. Loar, 11 S. W. 438, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 6; Lloyd v. McCauley, 14 B. Mon.

(Ky.) 535. But see Morrison v. Garrott, 22 S. W. 320, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 305 (holding that under Ky. Civ. Code (1851), § 81, which provides that where defendant is an infant under fourteen the service must be on him and on his father or guardian, or if neither of these can be found then on his mother or any white person having control of such infant, service of process on an infant under fourteen, although not on her guardian—such infant having no father or mother—was sufficient, where the action was one in which such guardian was plaintiff, and sought a sale of the trust estate for the alleged benefit of such infant); Kellett v. Rathbun, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 102.

Foreign guardian.—If a defendant to a suit in equity is a resident of another state, and the court appoints his counsel to be his guardian ad litem, this will justify proceeding without notice to a guardian previously appointed in the state of his domicile. Emery v. Parrott, 107 Mass. 95. See, however, Wells v. Smith, 44 Miss. 296, holding that if the guardian is a non-resident he must be cited by publication.

If the ward is absent from the state, and his curator ad bona is party to the suit, citation on his curator ad litem is sufficient. Martin v. Martin, 5 Mart. N. S. (La.) 165.

Non-service as ground for abatement.—In an action against a minor under guardianship, the writ will not abate because the guardian of defendant was not notified. Snow v. Antrim, Kirby (Conn.) 174; Potter v. Wright, Brayt. (Vt.) 21.

Curing non-service.—A judgment of foreclosure and sale, void by reason of failure to serve process upon the general guardian, cannot be validated by service made afterward. Bellamy v. Guhl, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 460. See Woolridge v. McKenna, 8 Fed. 650.

Sufficiency of return.—Under a statute requiring service to be made by delivery of a copy of the summons to the minor personally, and also to his father, mother, or guardian "for the minor," service on the parent or guardian as a party to the suit is not sufficient, but it must appear from the officer's return that service was also made on the parent or guardian "for the minor." *Helms v. F. Pleading¹⁴ — 1. COMPLAINT OR BILL¹⁵ — a. In General. The general rules of pleading are usually applied in determining the sufficiency of the complaint or bill in an action by a ward to recover money or property due him from the guardian,¹⁶ or in an action against an under-tutor;¹⁷ in an action by guardian or ward to recover money or property due the latter from a third person,¹⁸ or to recover for taking away the ward;¹⁹ and in an action for supplies furnished the ward,²⁰ or services rendered the guardian.²¹ No further petition can be required of the ward after the guardian has filed one in the ward's behalf;²² and where one files a bill in his own name as guardian, the ward cannot file a supplemental White v. Albertson, 14 N. C. 241, 22 Am. Dec. 719, holding that where a judgment was rendered against an infant on process issuing against his guardian, who appeared for the infant, this appearance will be taken to have been sanctioned by the court.

16. Patterson v. Harper, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 446 (holding that where a ward seeks to recover the entire sum alleged to have been received by the guardian with interest thereon, he must allege that the guardian failed to expend any part of the estate or interest for the maintenance and education of the ward; and that an allegation that the guardian by virtue of her appointment received a stated sum belonging to the ward does not mean that she received it immediately upon her appointment, or entitle plaintiff to interest from that date); Townshend v. Duncan, 2 Bland (Md.) 45 (holding that as it is the duty of the guardian to take possession of his ward's estate, it is not necessary in an action for an annuity charged on property devised to the wards to allege that the guardian had received the rents and profits of their estate); Vincent v. Starks, 45 Wis. 458 (holding that in an action by a ward against her guardian on a prior judgment against the guardian requiring him to pay complainant a certain sum "on demand," an allegation that execution had been issued on such judgment and had been returned unsatisfied is a sufficient allegation of a demand).

17. Lalmont's Succession, 110 La. 117, 34 So. 298, holding that a petition setting forth particular acts of maladministration on the part of the tutor does not of necessity disclose a cause of action against the under-tutor, made a defendant in the same suit; nor does a general allegation of negligence on the part of the under-tutor unaccompanied by an averment of resulting loss to the minors.

18. Roberts v. Maddox, 5 Ark. 189 (holding that in the suit of a minor by guardian, non-payment to the guardian must be alleged); Briggs v. McCabe, 27 Ind. 327, 89 Am. Dec. 503 (holding that in an action by a guardian against the maker of a note assigned by his ward, it is not necessary to allege that the infant disaffirmed the assignment before payment by the maker to the assignee); Cohnfeld v. Walsler, 42 Misc. (N. Y.) 128, 85 N. Y. Suppl. 998 (where a complaint for funds of the ward unlawfully paid to defendant by a guardian, since deceased, was held not to be demurrable for failure to allege that a trust fund was impaired at the guardian's death, or that his estate had not accounted to the ward).

19. Fields v. Law, 2 Root (Conn.) 320, holding that no action lies in favor of a guardian to recover damages for taking away his ward, without alleging loss of service.

20. Gwaltney v. Cannon, 31 Ind. 227 (holding that a complaint against a guardian to recover for providing for his ward which does not contain any averment of a request or promise made by defendant, or any allegation that he had failed to provide within the means in his hands as guardian for the reasonable wants of his ward is bad on demurrer for want of sufficient facts); Young v. Smith, 22 Tex. 345.

21. McKee v. Hunt, 142 Cal. 526, 77 Pac. 1103 (holding that an allegation, in a complaint by an attorney against the estate of a deceased minor to recover for legal services rendered to the guardian, that plaintiff performed the services by order of the court, when considered in connection with the averment setting forth the order of court directing that plaintiff be substituted as attorney for the guardian, only refers to the order of substitution of attorneys, and not as directing plaintiff to perform legal services for the guardian); Caldwell v. Young, 21 Tex. 800 (holding that a petition against a guardian to recover from his ward's estate for services rendered them in a suit at law must allege that the employment of plaintiff was a reasonable and proper expense incurred by the guardian).

bill thereto, or an original in the nature of a supplemental bill, which shall give him the advantage of the former suit by the guardian.²³ It has been held that a libel for divorce should be subscribed by the ward and not by the guardian.²⁴

b. Allegations as to Appointment and Authority, Capacity, or Title. A general guardian suing in behalf of an infant ward must in his complaint describe himself as such so as to show that he sues in that capacity,²⁵ and allege that the ward is an infant.²⁶ He must allege his appointment as guardian,²⁷ and show his authority and capacity to sue as such, and his right to recover in behalf of the ward;²⁸ and in some states he must make profert of his letters of guardianship.²⁹

23. Bowie v. Minter, 2 Ala. 406.

24. Winslow v. Winslow, 7 Mass. 96.

25. Stanley v. Chappell, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 235, holding, however, that where, in the beginning of his declaration, plaintiff describes himself correctly as guardian, he may in all subsequent parts of his declaration refer to himself as "said plaintiff," without adding his special character.

Construction of complaint.—If a general guardian of an infant institutes a suit as guardian ad litem, but his true relation is sufficiently shown by the body of the complaint, the error is of no consequence. Spear v. Ward, 20 Cal. 659. A plaintiff who describes himself as guardian of another will be taken to sue in his representative capacity, where the allegations of the petition and the nature of the action show clearly that such was his intent, although the petition nowhere expressly states that he sues as guardian. Bennett v. Bennett, (Nebr. 1902) 91 N. W. 409. Where, however, a complaint describes plaintiff as A, "by her guardian" B, but in the body thereof B is referred to as plaintiff, the action being brought upon a contract made by B for his ward's benefit, B is the real plaintiff. McKinney v. Jones, 55 Wis. 39, 11 N. W. 606, 12 N. W. 381.

26. Stanley v. Chappell, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 235.

27. Grantman v. Thrall, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 173.

Complaint "as guardian."—Judgment for plaintiff in an action commenced in the name of an infant by her mother, designated in the title as "guardian," will not be reversed, although there was no allegation or proof that she had been appointed guardian, because she was not formally designated as next friend. Abbott v. Abbott, 68 Kan. 824, 75 Pac. 1041. See, however, Grantman v. Thrall, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 173.

Grounds of demurrer.—The objection that the complaint of an infant suing by guardian merely states that he was duly appointed cannot be taken by demurrer, but if too general the remedy is by a motion to make it more definite. Sere v. Coit, 5 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 481. On demurrer to a complaint alleging that the bond sued on had been assigned to plaintiff as guardian of certain minors, defendant cannot object that the complaint fails to allege plaintiff's appointment as guardian. Barnwell v. Marion, 53 S. C. 223, 32 S. E. 313. See, however,

Grantman v. Thrall, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 173.

Jurisdiction to appoint.—A petition alleged that petitioner was appointed guardian of a minor in conformity to law, without averring that he was duly appointed by the court having jurisdiction; but it was further alleged that petitioner made a settlement of the estate in a certain county court which had jurisdiction over the matter, and that the court approved such settlement. It was held that the allegations, construed together, sufficiently showed that petitioner was regularly appointed by the proper authority. State v. Carroll, 63 Mo. 156.

28. Stanley v. Chappell, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 235; Dalrymple v. Security L. & T. Co., 9 N. D. 306, 83 N. W. 245 (holding that it is incumbent on the guardian to set out facts in an issuable form which show his representative capacity and the character in which he sues); Com. v. Pray, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 58 (holding that the guardian must furnish evidence in his pleadings of his right to sue).

A guardian's authority is sufficiently shown by his description as such in the title to a complaint; and by allegations that he was appointed the general guardian of a legatee, an infant under the age of fourteen years; that letters of guardianship were duly issued; and that as such guardian he became entitled to receive the legacy. Wall v. Bulger, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 346.

Title of guardian.—The objection that there was no allegation, in a complaint by a guardian suing on a note and mortgage, of any assignment to the guardian by his predecessor in office, to whom the note and mortgage were executed, was merely technical when made by one not the maker, but who was made a party as claiming some subordinate interest in or lien on the premises. Penrose v. Winter, 135 Cal. 289, 67 Pac. 772.

29. Switzer v. Holloway, 2 Port. (Ala.) 88.

Grounds of demurrer.—The omission to make profert of the letters of guardianship in the declaration of a guardian can be taken advantage of only by demurrer. Switzer v. Holloway, 2 Port. (Ala.) 88.

Aider by verdict.—The omission to make profert of the letters of guardianship in the declaration of a guardian is cured by verdict. Switzer v. Holloway, 2 Port. (Ala.) 88.

He need not, however, allege a special admission to sue,³⁰ or allege that he has given security.³¹

2. ANSWER. A guardian may answer in behalf of the ward,³² and if he does so no further answer can be required of the ward.³³ The sufficiency³⁴ of an answer in an action by or against guardian or ward and the right to make amendments³⁵ are governed by the general rules applied in civil actions generally.

3. ISSUES, PROOF, AND VARIANCE. A guardian suing for the ward must prove such allegations of the complaint as are put in issue by the answer.³⁶ One who sues individually cannot recover on the strength of his ward's title.³⁷ Defenses not properly pleaded cannot be proved.³⁸ A party cannot dispute the allegations or admissions of his own pleadings.³⁹

Aider by verdict.—Failure to allege that the guardian was admitted by the court is cured by verdict. Kid v. Mitchell, 1 Nott & M. (S. C.) 334, 9 Am. Dec. 702.

31. Wall v. Bulger, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 346.

32. See supra, VII, D, 1.

An infant is not bound by the answer of his guardian if he dissents from it within the proper time. Prutzman v. Pitesell, 3 Harr. & J. (Md.) 77.

Admissions.—A tutor cannot by answer admit away the minor's rights in action against the tutor. Vinson v. Tompkins, 25 La. Ann. 437. And see Tompkins v. Tompkins, 18 N. J. Eq. 303. See, however, Kromer v. Friday, 10 Wash. 621, 39 Pac. 229, 32 L. R. A. 671, holding that the guardian was justified in admitting that property devised to the ward was community property.

33. Martel v. Richard, 15 La. Ann. 598.

34. Voiles v. Beard, 58 Ind. 510, holding that where, in an action to recover for work performed for defendant, the answer alleged that such services had been performed while defendant was guardian of plaintiff; that defendant had fully settled his trust, received the receipt of his ward in full, and been discharged from his trust by the proper court on filing his final report; and that the report had been approved more than three years prior to the commencement of the action, the answer was insufficient for want of a direct averment that the matter in controversy had been included in such settlement.

35. Bowman v. Long, 27 Ga. 178 (holding that if the guardian of a legatee whose legacy is limited over in remainder if he should die before he attains the age of twenty-one years sues for the recovery of the legacy, defendant may amend his answer before hearing and allege the embarrassed circumstances of the guardian and ask the court to require the guardian to enter into bond for the security of the remainder-man); Walker v. Smyser, 80 Ky. 620.

36. Stilley v. Stilley, 20 La. Ann. 53 (holding that, the capacity of a person sued as tutor and required to account as such being specially put in issue, plaintiff is bound to prove it, and is not excused by defendant's not denying an allegation that he had received certain moneys of plaintiff as natural tutor); Sherman v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 72 Mo. 62, 37 Am. Rep. 423 (proof of right to sue).

37. Dowd v. Wadsworth, 13 N. C. 130, 18 Am. Dec. 567.

38. Clarke v. State, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 111 (holding that where the issue was whether a guardian had collected and received money of his ward, evidence that the guardian had discharged himself by the payment of the amount proved to be in his hands to a successor legally qualified to act was inadmissible); Powell v. Jones, 36 N. C. 337 (holding that in a suit by a ward against a person who had participated in a devastavit committed by the guardian, defendant could not protect himself by showing that the guardian had assigned property to indemnify his sureties, against whom judgment had been recovered for the same waste, without filing a cross bill).

However, where defendant in an action to recover money intrusted to him by plaintiff's guardian denied that any money remained due to the ward, and in support of it relied on a release executed by the guardian, covering all claims against defendant, the ward was entitled to prove that his interests had not been protected in the transaction, and that the release was a fraud on his rights, notwithstanding that no issue was made upon the validity of the release. Montgomery v. Rauer, 125 Cal. 227, 57 Pac. 894.

Appointment as guardian.—In an action by a guardian as such, he need not make proof of his appointment, unless that matter be put in issue by special plea or demurrer. Tate v. Gilbert, 5 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 114. Objections to plaintiff's right to show that he is guardian for one of whom he sues as such, and to his competency to maintain an action in her behalf, go only to matters in abatement of the action, which must be specially pleaded, and are not available under a general denial or other defense in bar. Plath v. Braunsdorff, 40 Wis. 107. Contra, Wilson v. Vandyke, 2 Harr. (Del.) 29; Cable v. Drew, (Kan. 1904) 73 Pac. 427.

39. Huntsman v. Fish, 36 Minn. 148, 30 N. W. 455 (holding that in an action by a guardian against an attorney for money collected by him belonging to the wards, proof

G. Right of Guardian to Control Action or Defense.⁴⁰ Subject to some restrictions,⁴¹ a guardian who sues⁴² or defends⁴³ in his ward's behalf has the same right to control the action or defense that any other suitor has, and the ward is bound accordingly.⁴⁴

H. Evidence⁴⁵—1. BURDEN OF PROOF AND PRESUMPTIONS. The burden of proof in actions by or against guardian or ward is governed by the same rules that apply in civil cases generally.⁴⁶ Presumptions are indulged or not in such of a demand on the attorney for the money is dispensed with, where in his answer he alleges that he has applied the money to the payment of a claim in his own favor against the guardian); Judson v. Walker, 155 Mo. 166, 55 S. W. 1083 (holding that creditors of a decedent seeking to subject to their claims insurance money in the hands of the curator of his minor children cannot deny that as between the curator and his wards the money belongs to the latter, where the creditors aver that he collected it and holds it as curator).

However, where infant legatees have by their father filed a bill against the executors alleging the father's inability to support them and praying income from their estate for that purpose, the fact of their father's inability will be inquired into and determined by the court, although the answer admit it. Tompkins v. Tompkins, 18 N. J. Eq. 303.

41. Mitchell v. Rice, 132 Ala. 120, 31 So. 498 (holding that the ward is not bound by an election between remedies made by the guardian); Aiken v. Gatlin, 48 La. Ann. 877, 19 So. 929; Elder v. Adams, 180 Mass. 303, 62 N. E. 373 (holding that where the guardian ad litem of minor defendants signed an agreement compromising a controversy as to the validity of a will on a petition for leave by the executor, the statutory guardian has no standing to object thereto). And see Flower's Succession, 3 La. Ann. 292.

42. Patterson v. Johnson, 113 Ill. 559 (holding that a minor complainant in a bill against a trustee for an account is bound by the decision of his guardian and solicitor as to what items in the account shall be disputed); South Bend Land Co. v. Denio, 7 Wash. 303, 35 Pac. 64.

43. Walker v. Smyser, 80 Ky. 620, holding that a general guardian of a defendant who files an answer and counter-claim in behalf of the ward is entitled to control the defense and cross action.

44. See supra, VII, A, 2, a; VII, D, 1.

45. See, generally, EVIDENCE.

Witnesses see WITNESSES.

46. Georgia.—Munroe v. Phillips, 64 Ga. 32, holding that the burden of proving that a fund in the hands of a guardian was converted into Confederate bonds according to the provisions of the statutes in force at the time is upon the guardian, where he defends on that ground.

Illinois.—Hughes v. People, 19 Ill. App. 148 [affirmed in 111 Ill. 457], holding that where a loan is made by a guardian without the previous approval of the court, and a loss ensues, the guardian must show that the loss did not occur on account of the want of good business judgment in taking the security.

Indiana.—Slauter v. Favorite, 107 Ind. 291, 4 N. E. 880, 57 Am. Rep. 106, holding that since as a general rule the guardian should require the wife of one to whom he loans his ward's funds to join in executing mortgage security, if she does not do so the burden of showing that the husband's interest in the land furnished ample security is on the guardian.

Kentucky.—Mudd v. Reed, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 998, holding that in an action against the guardian by his ward for rent which the guardian failed to collect, the burden is on the guardian to show that he could not have collected reasonable rent, and on the ward to show that the guardian could have collected the rent contracted for.

Louisiana.—Chesneau v. Sadler, 10 Mart. 726, holding that when minors sue for property whose alienation without legal formalities is absolutely null, they need show no injury from such alienation.

Maryland.—Magruder v. Peter, 4 Gill & J. 323, holding that where plaintiff in ejectment relies on a lease made by a guardian, it is necessary to prove that the ward was under age when the lease was made.

Michigan.—Moyer v. Fletcher, 56 Mich. 508, 23 N. W. 198, holding that where a guardian has kept no account of money actually received as interest, the burden of proof is on the ward to show that he received more than the legal rate.

South Carolina.—Sullivan v. Brooks, Rice, 41, holding that in assumpsit by a guardian against one who had received money belonging to his ward, plaintiff must show the receipt of the money by defendant, and an express promise to pay to himself as guardian.

Texas.—Young v. Gray, 65 Tex. 99 (holding that a plaintiff alleging that a guardian's final account showing credits evidenced by vouchers was improperly approved has the burden of showing errors in such account); Barnes v. Hardeman, 15 Tex. 366 (holding that where, in an action to recover a tract of land, the answer alleges title in defendants by a sale of the land by the guardian of actions as in other civil cases.⁴⁷ Thus transactions between guardian and ward are plaintiff under an order of court, and the replication is that the order for sale was void by reason of fraud of the guardian and the purchaser, the burden of showing that defendant is not a purchaser in good faith for value is on plaintiff); Moore v. Bannerman, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 825 (holding that where, in an action against a guardian for services performed under a contract, some of the services were properly chargeable against the estate and some were not, but there was no evidence as to the value of those that were proper charges, the burden of proving the separate value of those charges that were proper was on plaintiff).

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 447.

Appointment and authority.—A guardian suing as such must show his appointment as such. Sullivan v. Brooks, Rice (S. C.) 41. So one claiming under a lease made by a person purportedly guardian must prove the appointment as such. Magruder v. Peter, 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 323. However, in an action for the recovery of land by one claiming under a conveyance from a guardian, the burden of showing foreign letters of guardianship to be void rests on the party attacking the sale on that ground. Farrington v. Wilson, 29 Wis. 333.

Action for necessities furnished ward.—Where an infant ward has a guardian who has furnished her with such necessities as in his judgment he regards ample for her support according to her age and condition, a tradesman who seeks to recover the price of articles furnished the ward in addition to those furnished by her guardian must show the estate and condition of such ward, and also what particular articles of necessity the guardian has furnished for the ward and that the same were not sufficient for her support and maintenance according to her estate and position in society, and that the additional articles which he furnished were necessary for such support and maintenance. Nicholson v. Spencer, 11 Ga. 607. See also Hastings v. Bachelor, 27 Tex. 259. Where the tutor of a minor has created an indebtedness without authority of law which exceeds the revenues of the minor, the creditor, to recover, must show that the indebtedness was absolutely necessary either for the support of the minor or the preservation of his property, and that the supplies furnished inured to the benefit of the minor. Sanford v. Waggaman, 14 La. Ann. 852; Urquhart v. Scott, 12 La. Ann. 674.

47. Alabama.—Flinn v. Carter, 59 Ala. 364, holding that a surety on a guardian's bond who succeeds his principal guardian will not be presumed to have paid himself the amount of the decree against his predecessor the moment he enters upon the duties of his office.

Connecticut.—Brown v. Eggleston, 53 Conn. 110, 2 Atl. 321, holding that it will be presumed that the guardian paid for proper services rendered in behalf of the ward at his request, and properly credited such payments in his account, and that the person who rendered such services cannot recover therefor in an action against the estate of the ward.

Illinois.—Steyer v. Morris, 39 Ill. App. 382, holding that in the absence of evidence to the contrary it will be presumed that a guardian might have kept funds of his ward at interest.

Indiana.—Jennings v. Kee, 5 Ind. 257, holding that courts will presume strongly in favor of the ward and against the guardian, if he has been delinquent or guilty of neglect.

Louisiana.—Spencer v. Conrad, 9 Rob. 78.

New York.—Torry v. Black, 58 N. Y. 185 [reversing 65 Barb. 414] (holding that a release executed by the statutory guardian of an infant, if under seal and expressing a valuable consideration, is prima facie valid and effectual; and that if the ward after becoming of age seeks to impeach it, the burden is on him to show that it was not made in good faith but in fraud of his rights); Monell v. Monell, 5 Johns. Ch. 283, 9 Am. Dec. 298 (holding that if two guardians join in a receipt for money, the presumption is that the money came equally into the possession or under the control of both).

North Carolina.—Luton v. Wilcox, 83 N. C. 20 (holding that in an action against a guardian for negligence in compromising a debt due his ward, the making of the compromise is not prima facie evidence of negligence, but the burden of proving the negligence is on plaintiff); Johnston v. Haynes, 63 N. C. 509 (holding that where land of an infant ward was sold under decree of the chancery court, it will be assumed that the clerk, who had no instructions to the contrary, was authorized to receive payment of the price in Confederate money, and that the guardian was authorized to receive it from the clerk).

Tennessee.—Sanders v. Forgasson, 3 Baxt. 249 (holding that the taking by a guardian of security in his individual name for a loan of the trust funds in his hands raises a presumption that he has converted such funds to his personal use); Carter v. Wolfe, 1 Heisk. 694 (holding that where, in a bill filed by a guardian to enjoin a suit at law on a note, the guardian states that he executed the note as guardian, and that he afterward settled with the county court in the absence of proof, the presumption is that he was allowed for the note on his settlement).

United States.—Micou v. Lamar, 7 Fed. 180, holding that where the guardian transferred to his newly-appointed successor railroad and city bonds, together with past-due coupons accompanying them, and it was agreed that the bonds were worth at the time a certain per cent of their face value, this was prima facie evidence that the over-due coupons were worth an equal percentage of their face value.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 447.

presumed to be invalid as against the latter, and the guardian must accordingly adduce evidence of their fairness, else he can derive no advantage therefrom.⁴⁵

2. ADMISSIBILITY. The admissibility of evidence in actions by or against guardian or ward is governed by the rules applying in civil actions generally;⁴⁶

Presumptions as to appointment, qualification, and authority see Taylor v. Kilgore, 33 Ala. 214 (holding that a foreign court of equity is presumed to have acted correctly in appointing a guardian to an infant within its jurisdiction, that being within the general powers of a court of equity, although the mother who made the application was married, and the infant was not made a party to the proceeding); Cole v. Collett, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 47 (holding that a person to whom the personal estate of an infant was delivered over with the approbation of a court of another state having competent jurisdiction of such matter is presumed to have been a guardian, or otherwise vested with legal authority to receive the same, although the record is silent as to any such character or authority); Vanderveere v. Gaston, 25 N. J. L. 615 (holding that a letter of guardianship regular on its face and issued by a court having jurisdiction in the premises will be presumed, in a collateral proceeding, to have been legally issued); Clark v. Smith, 13 S. C. 585 (holding that under the circumstances appointment could not be presumed); Brown v. Severson, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 381 (where in an action against infant defendants it appeared that the mother, who answered for them as their guardian, had been appointed by will as such guardian, no security being required of her, and it was held that, in the absence of contrary evidence, she should be presumed to have been regularly qualified); Louisville Bank v. Leftwick, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 471 (holding that in the absence of exceptions to the report of a judicial sale, or to the guardian's answer on behalf of minor defendants to the bill praying the sale, his appointment will be presumed, although not appearing in the record); Kelley v. Morrell, 29 Fed. 736 (where in the record of a probate court it did not appear that notice required by law was given to all persons interested that an application for the appointment of a guardian would be made, and it was held that, the court being a court of record and not strictly one of special and limited jurisdiction, and the manner of notice to interested parties required by the statute being left to its discretion, it must be presumed, as bearing upon the validity of a subsequent guardian's sale, that proper notice was given).

Presumption of regularity see Bentley v. Dailey, 87 Ala. 406, 6 So. 274 (holding that the mere fact that a guardian took Confederate money in payment of notes taken by him for his ward, and that this money became worthless at the close of the war does not overturn the presumption of correctness of a decree allowing the guardian a credit for the amount of his settlement); Schaale v. Wasey, 70 Mich. 414, 38 N. W. 317 (holding that by statute all proceedings leading to the issuance of a license to a guardian to sell real estate are conclusively presumed to be valid).

48. Malone v. Kelley, 54 Ala. 532 (holding also that the fact that the ward has had intelligent and disinterested advisers will not relieve the guardian from the duty of a full disclosure of facts affecting the bargain); Wainwright v. Smith, 106 Ind. 239, 6 N. E. 333 (holding, however, that no such burden is on the guardian in a suit to set aside his final settlement report for negligence or misconduct).

Transactions soon after termination of guardianship are subject to the same presumption. McParland v. Larkin, 155 Ill. 84, 39 N. E. 609; Goodrick v. Harrison, 130 Mo. 263, 32 S. W. 661; Williams v. Powell, 36 N. C. 460. Where, however, a ward on coming of age joined with her brothers, sisters, mother, and stepfather in executing a release of a farm to her guardian, who was her eldest brother, in order to carry out a family arrangement of what had been before done, the ordinary presumption as to a release from "a ward just out of leading strings" does not apply. Cowan's Appeal, 74 Pa. St. 329.

49. Indiana.—Binford v. Miner, 101 Ind. 147, holding that in an action by a guardian for an amount found due his ward on a settlement made with defendant at a certain date, as to which an issue has been made, proof of such settlement and the matters which entered into it is admissible.

Maryland.—Trader v. Lowe, 45 Md. 1 (holding that a ward seeking to recover a balance alleged to be due her from her guardian, who sets up in defense a settlement with the ward's husband, authorized and acquiesced in by her, and offers in evidence a receipt in full from the husband, and also a bill of sale from him to the ward reciting that the consideration thereof is the amount due her from the guardian has the right to explain by evidence the nature and extent of her knowledge of her legal rights, and to show the circumstances under which the receipt and bill of sale were given, and that she accepted the bill of sale supposing it was all she could get); Clarke v. State, 8 Gill & J. 111.

Missouri.—Folger v. Heidel, 60 Mo. 284, holding that verbal directions of a judge of probate will not protect a guardian, and are not receivable in evidence in defense of his action.

New Hampshire.—Ela v. Brand, 63 N. H. 14 (holding that on the question of what allowance, if any, shall be made to a stepfather out of the property of the children for their support, evidence of a contemporaneous agreement between the parties is admissiand this is true as to the admissibility of documentary evidence in actions of this character.⁵⁰

3. WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY. The weight and sufficiency of evidence in actions by or against guardian and ward is ordinarily governed by the same rules that apply in civil actions generally.⁵¹ The general rules have been held applicable ble, although not necessarily conclusive); Cook v. Bennett, 51 N. H. 85 (holding that in an action against a guardian for board of his ward, evidence is competent that the guardian voluntarily promised to pay a certain physician for medical services rendered the ward while boarding with plaintiff).

New York.—Lamb v. Lamb, 146 N. Y. 317, 41 N. E. 26, holding that on an issue whether an agreement by a guardian to allow the mother of the minors a certain amount for their support in a city was such a reasonable one as to be binding on the minor, evidence of the cost of boarding the minors in the country for the summer months is not admissible.

Texas.—Young v. Gray, 65 Tex. 99, holding that a guardian sought to be held liable for not suing the sureties on the bond of his predecessor for moneys expended by the latter for which proper vouchers are not shown may, for the purpose of showing that he was not in fault, introduce testimony that the moneys were fairly expended, so that his predecessor's sureties would not be liable, notwithstanding the defective vouchers.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 450.

Admissions and declarations.—That one claimed to be, and asserted that she was, the guardian of her children is not admissible to affect their interests. Ellis v. Le Bow, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 449, 71 S. W. 576 [affirmed in 96 Tex. 532, 74 S. W. 528]. Parol declarations by a guardian in her lifetime that she did not intend to charge her ward for board are admissible to repel a charge by her representatives for such board. Hooper v. Royster, 1 Munf. (Va.) 119. Admissions and declarations by guardian as evidence against ward see EVIDENCE, 16 Cyc. 984, 1037.

Parol evidence.—The trust which arises in favor of a ward on land purchased with his funds by the guardian, the title to which was taken in the guardian's name, may be shown by parol. Shelton v. Lewis, 27 Ark. 190. Evidence may be received to show that a note which was given by the former tutor of a minor in his own name was in fact signed by him in his capacity of tutor, and that the consideration was a debt due by the minor. Leonard v. Hudson, 12 La. Ann. 840. See also Thorndike v. Hinckley, 155 Mass. 263, 29 N. E. 579. A tutor who has fraudulently released a mortgage belonging to the minor may, in an action brought by his successor to set aside the release, testify that his admission of judgment made in an authentic act was false. Kemp v. Rowly, 2 La. Ann. 316.

50. Louisiana.—Spencer v. Conrad, 9 Rob. 78, holding that where, in an action against a tutor's succession for the amount of a note belonging to the minors, the maker testified that fourteen years before he had paid the note to a holder, who advanced the amount to the tutor, the latter's receipt therefor being indorsed on the note, the receipt need not be produced, as it is to be presumed that the note when paid was surrendered, and that, being supposed of no value to any one, it had not, after such a length of time, been preserved.

Mississippi.—Moore v. Cason, 1 How. 53, holding that an order of court that an account purporting to be the final settlement of a guardian be recorded, and allowing the guardian eight per cent on the amount expended, is not evidence to support an action by the guardian against the ward for the balance upon such final settlement.

North Carolina.—Anthony v. Estes, 101 N. C. 541, 8 S. E. 347, holding that in an action for damages for a guardian's neglect to resist an administrator's sale of land, papers forming part of the record of the administrator's suit and showing the disposition of the personal and real estate and the accounting of the administrator are admissible as showing the extent of the interest descending to the ward.

Texas.—House v. Brent, 69 Tex. 27, 7 S. W. 65 (holding that a deed from the heirs of the original owner of lands, some of whom were minors at the time of its execution, is inadmissible to prove the grantee's title, unless it is shown that the person who signed it as guardian for such minors was duly appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction, and had authority from the court to make such conveyances); Mitchell v. Adams, 1 Tex. Unrep. Cas. 117 (holding that where, in an action for the recovery of a share in a tract of land, defendants offered in evidence a power of attorney which purported to have been executed by a guardian appointed for plaintiff during his minority, and under this power defendant expected to establish his title, and there was no evidence of any benefit to the minor from the acts of the person purporting to represent him, or of any recognition of such acts, the power was inadmissible).

England.—Eccleston v. Petty, Cart. 79, 3 Mod. 258, 2 Vent. 72, holding that an answer to a bill in chancery filed by a guardian in behalf of the ward cannot be read in evidence against the infant in a subsequent suit.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 450.

51. Indiana.—Wainwright v. Burroughs, 1 Ind. App. 393, 27 N. E. 591, evidence held not to show negligence on part of guardian.

Louisiana.—Fendler v. Daigre, 22 La. Ann. 239, evidence held not to justify a recovery in an action against a daughter after she came of age to recover for a diamond necklace which was claimed to have been in respect of evidence of guardianship,⁵² and evidence of fraud or conversion by a guardian.⁵³ bought for her by her mother as tutrix and to have been received by her and still possessed.

New York.—Fowler v. Hebbard, 40 N. Y. App. Div. 108, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 531, evidence held to sustain a finding that the ward knew of the entries in the guardian's account-book at or about the time they were made, and agreed to them.

Virginia.—Ammon v. Wolfe, 26 Gratt. 621, holding that the fact that a guardian collected money belonging to his wards and invested it in Confederate bonds in his own name, which upon his death were found inclosed in a paper marked with the name of the wards, is not sufficient evidence that the investment when made was intended for the wards.

West Virginia.—Maguire v. Doonan, 24 W. Va. 507.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 451.

Degree of proof.—If a guardian loans the ward's money without the approval of the court, and a loss ensues, want of negligence must be shown by him beyond a reasonable doubt. Hughes v. People, 10 Ill. App. 148 [affirmed in 111 Ill. 457]. Parol proof of the trust arising in favor of a ward in lands purchased with his funds by the guardian must be full, clear, and conclusive. Shelton v. Lewis, 27 Ark. 190.

Fabrication and spoliation of evidence.—Where the maker of notes was appointed the payee's guardian, and there was evidence that he had access to the payee's papers, that he had tried to make it appear that another had written, claiming the notes, but that these letters were in a feigned hand and written by or for him, and that after they were filed in court he defaced postmarks on the envelopes supporting the theory that he was their procurer, the court was justified in charging him as guardian with the amount of the notes. Murray v. Lepper, 99 Mich. 135, 57 N. W. 1097.

Documentary evidence.—The fact that goods furnished to minors on request of their guardian were in the first instance charged on the books of the merchants to the minors is not conclusive that they were not furnished on the credit of the guardian (Loomis v. Smith, 17 Conn. 115); but the testimony of a mother from memory merely that she had never received items of cash that the regular entries in a guardian's book of original entries showed had been paid to her in behalf of her children six years before is not sufficient to contradict such entries (Mattox v. Patterson, 60 Iowa 434, 15 N. W. 262). Upon the question whether a guardian, after Jan. 1, 1863, improperly invested trust moneys in Confederate funds, his version of the transaction made at the time of the investment and verified by his return under oath was properly believed by the jury in preference to a contradictory version at the time of the trial. Venable v. Howard, 68 Ga. 167. A guardian's own receipt to himself furnishes not the slightest proof of the justness of a charge against his ward (Hendry v. Hurst, 22 Ga. 312); but an acknowledgment by the husband in the form of a receipt that he has received from the wife the amount of paraphernal funds therein expressed will authorize a judgment in favor of the heirs in a suit against their father in his capacity of tutor (In re Smith, 22 La. Ann. 253). That a sum of money in a guardian's hands was paid over to the ward is not established by the guardian's final report showing such sum with a prayer for his discharge and an order of the court approving his report and discharging him. Naugle v. State, 101 Ind. 284. A guardian's deed is not evidence of conveyance of the land therein described, without proof of authority to execute it. Gatten v. Tolley, 22 Kan. 678. A mortgage on the property of a minor was attacked on the ground that the under-tutor was not called to the family meeting which consented to the mortgage. At the foot of the proceedings of the family meeting was a writing signed by the under-tutor as follows: "The under-tutor of said minor children having waived due notice to attend, and having taken full cognizance of the foregoing proceedings, declared that he approved of the same in every respect." It was held that it could not be inferred from the acknowledgment that the under-tutor was absent from the family meeting. Judson v. Hertz, 11 La. Ann. 715. An appraisal of a ward's property made by order of the orphans' court is not conclusive evidence of the value of such property against the guardian. Magruder v. Darnall, 6 Gill (Md.) 269. In an action by the guardian of minor heirs on a note made payable to their ancestor, the production of the note is sufficient evidence to entitle him to recover. Roberts v. Sacra, 38 Tex. 580.

52. Prescott v. Cass, 9 N. H. 93 (holding that in a suit against a ward, where the defense was that the ward contracted without the assent of the guardian, the letter of guardianship is prima facie evidence of appointment, without showing an application to the judge of probate and a notice to defendant before such letter issued); Martin v. Martin, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1899) 52 S. W. 902 (holding that, although letters of guardianship are not filed, yet if plaintiff testifies without objection that he is in fact guardian, it is sufficient proof of guardianship, in the absence of exception to the competency of the testimony). See Maguire v. Doonan, 24 W. Va. 507.

53. Johnson v. Burns, 29 Kan. 81 (evidence held not to show that land bought by guardian individually was paid for out of ward's funds); Brent v. Grace, 30 Mo. 253 (holding that it is no proof of fraud that

I. Trial⁵⁴—1. IN GENERAL. The trial practice in actions by or against guardian or ward is the same as in other civil actions.⁵⁵

2. QUESTIONS FOR COURT AND FOR JURY. Questions of law are for the court.⁵⁶ Issues of fact, on the other hand, are for the jury,⁵⁷ and if the evidence as to a disputed fact is such that reasonable men might come to different conclusions, the question must be submitted to the jury.⁵⁸

J. Judgment⁵⁹—1. GENERAL RULES. A judgment against a guardian as such binds the ward,⁶⁰ if he is a party to the suit.⁶¹ A judgment cannot be entered against a defendant ward without proof on his guardian's failure to answer;⁶² nor can a decree be entered against the ward on his guardian's consent.⁶³ In an action against a guardian on contracts made in course of administration, judgment should be rendered against him personally;⁶⁴ but it is otherwise where the guard-a guardian gave his own note for debts incurred for the ward's benefit, taking receipts from the creditor, and obtained a credit on his account for the sum so paid, and that the note remains unpaid); Eberhardt v. Schuster, 10 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 374 (holding that the fact that a guardian kept the fact of an insurance on the life of the ward's mother for the ward's benefit, collected by the guardian, a secret from the ward, and denied existence of the insurance is some evidence that the guardian intended to appropriate the money). See Maguire v. Doonan, 24 W. Va. 507.

54. See, generally, TRIAL.

55. See cases cited infra, this note.

Motions.—Where a bill is filed by the general guardian of an infant legatee for payment of the legacy, an application for leave to give the security required in such cases cannot be made by an oral motion at the hearing, but must be by regular petition. Hoyt v. Hilton, 2 Edw. (N. Y.) 202.

Waiver of proof.—An ex parte waiver of proof of a substantial fact by a defendant tutor from which it may be inferred that he consents to the judgment prayed for against his ward may not be considered by the district court, but the court may require that proof be offered in open court on an application to confirm a default. Aiken v. Gatlin, 48 La. Ann. 877, 19 So. 929.

Dismissal.—Where an action by a dative tutor against a former tutor and under-tutor is dismissed quoad the tutor on the ground that the remedy is to demand an account and oppose the same, such action, predicated on particular acts of alleged maladministration on the part of defendant tutor, can no longer be maintained as against the under-tutor. Lalmon's Succession, 110 La. Ann. 117, 34 So. 298.

Misconduct of a guardian in obtaining a verdict against a third person vitiates it as to the ward. Baker v. Hunt, 3 Atk. 542, 26 Eng. Reprint 1113, 1 Ves. 28, 27 Eng. Reprint 869.

56. Reed v. Timmins, 52 Tex. 84, question whether guardian should be charged with compound interest.

57. Huff v. Wolfe, 48 Ill. App. 589 (holding that whether an amount agreed on between a guardian and his ward, come of age, as his compensation is fair and just is a question for the jury to determine on proof of the amount of the property and the length and nature of the service); Sowle v. Sowle, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 376 (holding that if there is any question of the identity of the wards mentioned in a letter of guardianship, the guardian's petition for license to sell property, the license, and the deed, although different names are used, it is a question of fact); State v. Slevin, 93 Mo. 253, 6 S. W. 68, 3 Am. St. Rep. 526 (holding that whether a guardian is reckless or injudicious in loaning his ward's money is a question for the jury).

58. State v. Miller, 44 Mo. App. 118; Murphy v. Holmes, 87 N. Y. App. Div. 366, 84 N. Y. Suppl. 806; Salem Female Academy v. Phillips, 68 N. C. 491.

St. Rep. 249, holding that a decree entered in an action in equity affecting the rights of an infant whose guardian was an individual party to the bill and not as guardian is not binding.

62. Richards v. Richards, 17 Ind. 636.

63. Hite v. Hite, 2 Rand. (Va.) 409.

Waiver of proof.—An ex parte waiver of proof of a substantial fact by a defendant tutor from which it may be inferred that he consents to the judgment prayed for against his ward may not be considered by the district court, but the court may require that proof be offered in open court on an application to confirm a default. Aiken v. Gatlin, 48 La. Ann. 877, 19 So. 929.

64. Clark v. Casler, 1 Ind. 243, Smith 150; Rollins v. Marsh, 128 Mass. 116.

Where, however, the petition in an action on a note avers that the maker is guardian of a minor for whose board the note was given, and alleges the minor to be indebted, and prays judgment against her, it is error to render judgment against the guardian individually. McDaniel v. Mann, 25 Tex. 101.

Amendment.—A direction in a judgment

ian defends an action against the ward.⁶⁵ A judgment against a party as guardian of a person named is a judgment against the guardian personally;⁶⁶ but a judgment in favor of the guardian is in effect a judgment for the ward.⁶⁷ The judgment must conform to the process⁶⁸ and complaint or bill⁶⁹ as to the party for or against whom a recovery is awarded. The death of the guardian and ward pending an action in the ward's behalf does not necessarily render a subsequent judgment for defendant absolutely void.⁷⁰ A decree compelling a ward to convey his land⁷¹ or establishing a lien thereon⁷² should not be rendered till he reaches majority. The guardian cannot, as against the ward, release the debtor in a judgment in the ward's favor;⁷³ nor can a ward in whose behalf a guardian has obtained judgment release the same, on coming of age, to the guardian's prejudice.⁷⁴ A rule to liquidate a judgment against a tutor may be served on his attorney of record.⁷⁵

2. EXECUTION AND ENFORCEMENT⁷⁶ — a. In General. The execution and enforcement of judgment by or against guardian and ward, while governed in general respects by rules applicable to executions generally, are affected by rules, statutory and otherwise, peculiar to the law of guardian and ward.⁷⁷

b. Persons and Property Liable. Execution on a general judgment against against a guardian that it be levied on the goods and chattels of the ward in his hands will be treated as a mere clerical misprision, amendable on motion either in the trial court or on appeal. Sellers v. Smith, 11 Ala. 264.

65. Steelman v. Cox, 3 N. J. L. 953.

66. Morris v. Garrison, 27 Pa. St. 226; Tobin v. Addison, 2 Strobb. (S. C.) 3.

67. Martel v. Richard, 15 La. Ann. 598.

If a guardian procures a judgment in his own name on a chose in action belonging to his ward, and the penalty of the guardian's bond has been exhausted, leaving an unsecured balance due the ward, after the guardian's insolvency the ward may have a decree against the guardian and the assignee of the judgment, who took the assignment with knowledge of the facts, vesting in the ward the title to the judgment. Moon v. Martin, 55 Ind. 218.

68. McLeod v. Mason, 5 Port. (Ala.) 223; Walker v. Acklen, 19 La. Ann. 186.

69. Walker v. Acklen, 19 La. Ann. 186; State Bank v. Craig, 6 Leigh (Va.) 399. See, however, Taylor v. Cline, 35 S. W. 109, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 9, holding that in an action by guardian judgment may be rendered for the ward by next friend.

70. Best v. Nix, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 349, 25 S. W. 130, it not appearing that the ward was a minor at the time of his death.

71. Perry v. Perry, 65 Me. 399.

72. Coffin v. Heath, 6 Mete. (Mass.) 76.

73. Davis v. Beall, 32 Tex. Civ. App. 406, 74 S. W. 325.

74. Curran v. Abbott, 141 Ind. 492, 40 N. E. 1091, 50 Am. St. Rep. 337, holding that where a guardian obtains a judgment, and pending an appeal the ward, having attained her majority, settles the suit and executes a satisfaction of the judgment, such satisfaction to the amount expended by the guardian and the liabilities incurred by him in the suit will be set aside if he has no funds belonging to the ward to pay the same.

75. Smith v. Barkemeyer, McGloin (La.) 139, holding that where judgment runs against "B, tutor," service of a rule to liquidate the judgment accepted by A, "attorney for B," is sufficient, if the rule bears in the caption the proper title of the suit as against "B, tutor," and B individually does not appear in the suit as a party in interest, and A is the counsel of record for the tutor; also that on a rule to liquidate a judgment rendered after due citation, the appearance of the counsel of record of the tutor is sufficient.

76. See, generally, EXECUTIONS.

Execution for costs see infra, VII, K.

77. Coffin v. Eisiminger, 75 Iowa 30, 39 N. W. 124, holding that when a judgment has been obtained against a guardian in the district court in garnishment proceedings on a judgment against the ward, and the guardian fails to pay it, and neglects to ask the probate court for instructions, the judgment creditor may obtain from the same court, acting as a probate court, an order directing the guardian to pay it; also that a proceeding in the probate court to compel a guardian to pay a judgment against him is not an "action" within Iowa Code (1873), § 2521, which forbids the bringing of an action on a judgment of a court of record within fifteen years after rendition without leave of court.

An under-tutor cannot sue out execution on a judgment he has obtained for the minor against the tutor until the latter's functions have terminated. Holmes v. Hemken, 6 Rob. (La.) 51.

Execution against guardian before final accounting.—A scire facias may issue on a transcript of a balance due by a guardian on the settlement of his account in the orphans' court, and the matter be submitted to arbitration and execution issue for the amount awarded, even though a subsequent account stated by the guardian to be a final account is exhibited about the time of the issuing of the scire facias, and ex-

a guardian cannot issue against the property of the ward.⁷⁸ Execution may in a proper case issue against the guardian generally.⁷⁹ After a ward has come of age, his creditors may levy on his property, although it remains in the hands of his former guardian.⁸⁰

K. Costs.⁸¹ A guardian who represents his ward in an action is not taxable with costs⁸² if he acts in good faith⁸³ and is not delinquent;⁸⁴ but the ward's estate may be liable;⁸⁵ and in some states a plaintiff guardian may be required to give security for costs.⁸⁶ The guardian is entitled to costs in a proper case.⁸⁷

ceptions to same are pending in the orphans' court. Royer v. Myers, 15 Pa. St. 87.

Ex parte order forbidding execution.—Where the guardian of a minor recovers a judgment for libel against the proprietor of a newspaper, and after the minor attains her majority she settles with the proprietor and executes a release of the judgment, an ex parte order forbidding the issuing of an execution on the judgment is not binding on the guardian. Curran v. Abbott, 141 Ind. 492, 40 N. E. 1091, 50 Am. St. Rep. 337.

Execution must conform to the judgment.—Snively v. Hardrader, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 487.

Abatement and revival.—An execution issued in the name of a curator who pending its injunction is discharged and so unable to act for the heirs may, the injunction being dissolved, still continue. Roberts v. Kinchen, 5 Mart. N. S. (La.) 419. If a guardian obtains a judgment, he may have a scire facias to revive it and have execution thereon after a new guardian is appointed. Welker v. Welker, 3 Penr. & W. (Pa.) 21.

Sale.—La. Civ. Code, art. 342, prohibiting the sale of a minor's property for less than its appraised value, does not apply to sales under execution. Martin v. Lake, 37 La. Ann. 763.

78. Baird v. Steadman, 39 Fla. 40, 21 So. 572; Tobin v. Addison, 2 Strobb. (S. C.) 3. And see Rawlins v. Giddens, 46 La. Ann. 1136, 15 So. 501, 17 So. 262, holding that where the guardian inflates his credit, and pays no money to the ward, and in a settlement turns over property only that belongs to the ward, the creditor of the guardian has no right to subject the ward's property thus turned over to the satisfaction of the debt.

Property bought by guardian for ward.—The fact that a guardian has wrongfully invested his ward's money in real estate will not render such real estate liable to be seized on execution by his creditors. Bancroft v. Consen, 13 Allen (Mass.) 50. And see Gully v. Dunlap, 24 Miss. 410.

By statute, in proceedings to enforce stockholders' individual liability, the real property in general of a ward whose guardian holds stock for him and who continues a minor down to the time when a levy can be made of an execution to enforce the liability may be taken and sold. Mansur v. Pratt, 101 Mass. 60.

79. Gibson v. Irby, 17 Tex. 173, holding that since a guardian who executes a note in his own name as "guardian of" the ward is personally liable thereon, the proper judgment against him on the note is that plaintiff have execution, and not that the judgment be paid in due course of administration.

However, where a guardian shows that he has no funds belonging to his ward's estate, it is error to order him to pay a judgment rendered against him for clothing furnished the ward; and the fact that he is the surety on the bond of his predecessor, who is insolvent and against whom he holds a judgment for funds of the estate converted by him, affords no reason for granting such order. Stumph v. Goepper, 76 Ind. 323.

Execution against curator as administrator.—Where an administrator who was ordered to pay a sum to himself as curator of a distributee made final settlement as curator without charging himself with such sum, an execution issued by his successor as curator against him as administrator will not be quashed. Adams v. Tracy, 13 Mo. App. 579.

80. Crymes v. Day, 1 Bailey (S. C.) 320, holding that if the guardian has any claim on the property he must resort to equity.

Execution for costs cannot be issued against a guardian on a judgment for defendant in a suit in a minor's name brought by said guardian. Bigger v. Westby, 13 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 347.

83. Supreme Council L. of H. v. Nidelet, 85 Mo. App. 283.

84. Com. v. Shanks, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 304, holding under a statute that clerk's and sheriff's fees are to be charged to the guardian if found delinquent, but that the county attorney has no right to any tax fee.

85. Laughter v. Seela, 59 Tex. 177, where the ward's estate is by statute made liable for the ward's proportion of the expenses of a partition proceeding, to be enforced by execution against the ward's estate, provided that the guardian has not applied for an order to sell so much of the estate as is necessary to pay such share of the expenses.

However, where one made defendant as general guardian and as guardian ad litem appears in both capacities by one attorney,

L. Appeal and Error.⁸³ The rules applied in civil actions in general are ordinarily applicable to proceedings by appeal or error in actions by or against guardian or ward.⁸⁹ This is true of questions concerning the right to appeal,⁹⁰ and the capacity in which the appeal should be taken;⁹¹ the time for appealing,⁹² and the necessity of citation⁹³ and bond;⁹⁴ the effect of the appeal;⁹⁵ the necessity of making objections in the lower court;⁹⁶ the scope of the review,⁹⁷ the extent to which a verdict or finding will be reviewed,⁹⁸ and the presumptions a dismissal of the cause against him as general guardian will be without costs. Davis v. Davis, 27 Misc. (N. Y.) 455, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 223. And where a guardian puts an administrator's bond in suit for his own use, he may recover only costs paid by himself; to recover the portion due his wards it is necessary to put the bond in suit for their use. Devore v. Pitman, 3 Mo. 182.

88. See, generally, APPEAL AND ERROR.

89. See cases cited infra, note 90 et seq.

90. Miller v. Smith, 98 Ind. 226 (holding that a guardian may appeal in behalf of his ward from a decision in partition proceedings); Morris v. Garrison, 27 Pa. St. 226 (holding that a ward cannot appeal from a judgment against the guardian which binds him individually).

Effect of appointment of guardian ad litem.—In an action for partition and assignment of dower, the guardian of an infant defendant has authority to appeal from a decree in the name of the infant, although a guardian ad litem has been appointed for the infant during the pendency of the proceedings. Sill v. Sill, 185 Ill. 594, 57 N. E. 812. Contra, Elder v. Adams, 180 Mass. 303, 62 N. E. 373.

91. In re Byland, 38 La. Ann. 756, holding that a tutor's appeal from a judgment charging him with a personal liability, if taken only in the capacity of tutor, will be dismissed.

92. Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 1 Ohio Cir. Ct. 345, 1 Ohio Cir. Dec. 192, holding that in all proceedings by guardians of minors, no proceedings in error in the minor's name will lie after he becomes of age unless brought within the time limited for other proceedings in error.

93. Nobles v. Bernet, 109 La. 278, 33 So. 313, holding that where, after judgment in favor of a minor in an action in which she was represented by her tutor, his resignation was accepted, and another person qualified as her dative tutor, and defendant applied by petition for a devolutive appeal, and asked for citation, but did not name the person upon whom citation was to be made, and filed no pleadings after a motion to dismiss for want of citation, the appeal will be dismissed.

94. Watson v. Guest, 41 Tex. 559, holding that a guardian cannot in an ordinary suit appeal or obtain a writ of error without giving bond.

Appeals from justices' courts.—A guardian has no authority to appeal from a justice's court to the common pleas without giving bond. Botten v. Rolo, 4 Ohio Dec.

(Reprint) 80, 1 Clev. L. Rep. 9. Contra, Kerr v. Stone, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 810.

95. Flower's Succession, 3 La. Ann. 292, holding that a tutor who has taken a suspensive appeal from a judgment against the ward is without authority subsequently to acquiesce in the judgment by voluntarily paying it.

96. Jones v. Beverly, 45 Ala. 161 (holding that a bill filed by wards to charge their guardian with the value of cotton received by him in payment of a note in his hands belonging to their estate cannot be objected to for the first time on appeal because it seeks a settlement of that item only, and not a general settlement of his accounts); Bellinger v. Thompson, 26 Ore. 320, 40 Pac. 229, 37 Pac. 714 (holding that in an action by a guardian against the sureties on an executor's bond to recover an amount due his wards, the objection that the action should have been brought in the name of the wards cannot be raised for the first time on appeal); Masson v. Swan, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 450 (holding that it is no ground of exception in the supreme court to the answer of a guardian that it was not subscribed by him, the certificate of the clerk showing that the answer was "sworn to by the defendants," and no exception having been taken in the court below); Martin v. Martin, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1899) 52 S. W. 902 (holding that where both parties in the lower court assume that plaintiff is guardian, they cannot object on appeal that the proof of guardianship is insufficient); Whitehead v. Bradley, 87 Va. 676, 13 S. E. 195 (holding that where the purchase-money under an order directing the sale of an infant's real estate is paid to an unbonded commissioner who without previous sanction of the court pays it to the guardian, and a petition is then filed against the purchasers to show cause why the property should not be resold, alleging the guardian's insolvency, an objection that the remedy against the guardian and his sureties was not first exhausted comes too late when made for the first time in the appellate court).

97. In re Byland, 38 La. Ann. 756.

98. State v. Clark, 16 Ind. 97 (holding that where a jury has declared that expenditures for the support of a ward from the principal of the ward's estate are proper, the supreme court will not ordinarily disturb such finding); McGary v. Lamb, 3 Tex. 342 (holding that a verdict on a question respecting the correctness of accounts rendered by a guardian against his ward is entitled arising on appeal;⁹⁹ the requirement that to work a reversal error must have been prejudicial;¹ the right to dismiss the appeal;² and the disposition to be made of the case by the appellate court.³

VIII. GUARDIANSHIP BONDS.⁴

A. Requisites and Validity — 1. PARTIES. It seems that sureties on a guardianship bond are liable thereon, although the guardian is incompetent to execute it.⁵ In any event this is so where the guardian is not made a necessary party to the bond by statute.⁶ If a surety is also an obligee, the bond is void at law,⁷ but not in equity.⁸ Statutes frequently prescribe to whom the bond shall be given,⁹ and a failure to comply therewith invalidates the security as a statutory bond,¹⁰ although it may be valid as a common-law obligation¹¹ or be enforceable in equity.¹² If the ward is not named in the bond, he is not entitled to judgment against the sureties.¹³

2. ORDER FOR BOND, EXECUTION AND DELIVERY, AND APPROVAL. An order requiring a bond is not a prerequisite of the sureties' liability thereon.¹⁴ A person may bind himself as additional security by signing the bond given by the guardian to great weight, and should not be set aside unless clearly and palpably against evidence).

99. Fleming v. Johnson, 26 Ark. 421 (holding that proceedings in a probate court on a petition by a guardian to sell the ward's land, in which it has jurisdiction, will be presumed on appeal in a collateral action to be regular); Baker v. Ormsby, 5 Ill. 325 (holding that where, in an action by a guardian on a note, it does not appear of record whether the note was payable to the guardian or his wards, it will be presumed that it was payable to the guardian).

1. Fowler v. Hebbard, 40 N. Y. App. Div. 108, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 531 (holding that where a guardian's account-book showed a payment by him for medical services to the ward it is not reversible error to admit, in corroboration thereof, evidence of the person to whom the payment was made that it was made by the guardian, although the justice of the bill paid was not shown, there being no proof to the contrary); Hurt v. Long, 90 Tenn. 445, 16 S. W. 968 (holding that the fact that a petition was not brought by original bill was at most harmless error).

2. South Bend Land Co. v. Denio, 7 Wash. 303, 35 Pac. 64, holding that a guardian may dismiss his appeal. See, however, Flower's Succession, 3 La. Ann. 292.

3. Vinson v. Tompkins, 25 La. Ann. 437, where the judgment was reversed in part, and the case remanded for the purpose of allowing plaintiff to introduce legal evidence as against the minor's rights to the property in question.

9. See the statutes of the different states. And see Pasquotank v. Shannonhouse, 13 N. C. 6; Emery v. Vroman, 19 Wis. 689, 88 Am. Dec. 726.

10. Currituck v. Dozier, 14 N. C. 287; Justices Caswell County Ct. v. Buchanan, 6 N. C. 40.

However, a bond given by a guardian to a judge of probate, solvendum to him "or his successor in such office," is plainly intended for an official bond, and although artificially drawn is good. Grand Isle Dist. Prob. Ct. v. Strong, 27 Vt. 202, 65 Am. Dec. 190.

11. Currituck v. Dozier, 14 N. C. 287.

12. Wiser v. Blachly, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 607 (where the surety gave a bond to the surrogate in the name of the people instead of the infant, and the court corrected the mistake, and considered the bond equally valid as if taken in the name of the infant); Ferrell v. Dooly, 6 Humphr. (Tenn.) 110.

13. Greenly v. Daniels, 6 Bush (Ky.) 41.

However, the omission of the ward's christian name (Turner v. Alexander, 41 Ark. 254), or the insertion of his name in the wrong place (Sprinkle v. Martin, 69 N. C. 175), or a discrepancy between the true christian name, which is given in the bond, and a false name in the order of appointment of the guardian (Shuster v. Perkins, 46 N. C. 325) is not fatal to the bond.

14. Sebastian v. Bryan, 21 Ark. 447, holding that an obligor in a bond that has been originally.¹⁵ To be valid the bond must be delivered.¹⁶ It is the guardian's duty to have the bond approved,¹⁷ but the absence of approval does not vitiate it as to the sureties.¹⁸

3. CONDITIONS AND RECITALS. Substantial compliance with the statutory requirements as to the condition of the bond is sufficient.¹⁹ So the fact that the bond contains more²⁰ or less²¹ than the statute requires does not necessarily invalidate it. The guardian's appointment need not be recited in the bond.²²

4. PENALTY. If the bond names no penalty it is invalid at law,²³ in the absence of statute to the contrary,²⁴ but it may be enforced in equity.²⁵ A mistake in naming an excessive penalty is one of law and cannot be corrected in favor of the sureties.²⁶ accepted by the probate court is estopped from setting up that the court did not order it to be made.

This rule applies to new or additional bonds. Potter v. State, 23 Ind. 550; Elam v. Barr, 14 La. Ann. 671; McWilliams v. Norfleet, 60 Miss. 987.

15. Ammons v. People, 11 Ill. 6; State v. Woods, 84 Mo. 163; Hammond v. Beasley, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 618.

If the ordinary acts as obligee and not as a court in releasing a surety, one who signs the original bond as a substitute and not as an additional surety is not bound. Hill v. Calvert, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 56.

16. Brooks v. People, 15 Ill. App. 570 (holding that where, before the appointment of a guardian, his bond was presented in court, and the surety not being sufficient was returned, and additional sureties were obtained, and the court pronounced them satisfactory, saying, "That is all right," and the bond was left with the judge by the party's attorney, and before the appointment of the guardian one of the sureties died, there was no delivery); Fay v. Richardson, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 91 (holding that where a bond is put into possession of the obligee by a person who has no authority to deliver it, there is no delivery); Fitts v. Green, 14 N. C. 291 (where delivery to the clerk of court was held not to be a delivery to the justice, the obligee). See, however, Ordinary v. Thatcher, 41 N. J. L. 403, 32 Am. Rep. 225, where delivery to the surrogate was held to be a delivery to the ordinary, the obligee.

An escrow cannot be created by delivery to the obligee. Ordinary v. Thatcher, 41 N. J. L. 403, 32 Am. Rep. 225.

Conditional delivery.—Notice to an infant that the bond is delivered only upon condition does not estop the infant. Bangs v. Osborn, 2 N. Y. St. 685. Delivery on condition that others shall sign see PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

Time of delivery.—The fact that the guardian's bond is delivered to the judge on the day before his appointment is immaterial, and the sureties are estopped by the bond itself from denying its legal effect on such a ground. Vincent v. Starks, 45 Wis. 458.

17. Blackwell v. State, 26 Ind. 204.

18. State v. Britton, 102 Ind. 214, 1 N. E. 617. And see Peelle v. State, 118 Ind. 512, 21 N. E. 288.

In any event where an order of the county court appointing a guardian recites that he was sworn and together with his sureties entered into a covenant conditioned as the law requires, the order of appointment is a sufficient approval of the surety and the bond. Clement v. Hughes, 17 S. W. 285, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 720, 16 S. W. 358, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 352; Devlin v. Bethshears, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 522.

19. Grand Isle Dist. Prob. Ct. v. Strong, 27 Vt. 202, 65 Am. Dec. 190.

In any event the bond is valid as a voluntary obligation so far as it embodies the statutory policy. Ordinary v. Heishon, 42 N. J. L. 15.

This rule applies to special sale bonds. —Stevenson v. State, 69 Ind. 257; Botkin v. Kleinschmidt, 21 Mont. 1, 52 Pac. 563, 69 Am. St. Rep. 641. And see Fee v. State, 74 Ind. 66.

20. McFadden v. Hewett, 78 Me. 24, 1 Atl. 893 (holding that the bond is not converted from a statutory into a common-law bond merely because it contains conditions not required by statute, if they are in accordance with law); State v. Williams, 77 Mo. 463; Frenkel v. Caddou, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 40 S. W. 638 (holding that a bond which, in addition to the statutory condition, imposes an obligation "to pay all costs of court in the matter of said estate" is not invalid as being more onerous than the law requires, since it is a part of the guardian's duty to pay such costs); Pratt v. Wright, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 175, 67 Am. Dec. 767.

21. Pratt v. Wright, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 175, 67 Am. Dec. 767, holding that if its condition relates to only a part of the guardian's duty, it is valid to that extent.

22. Pratt v. Wright, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 175, 67 Am. Dec. 767; Call v. Ruffin, 1 Call (Va.) 333.

23. Bumpas v. Dotson, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 310, 46 Am. Dec. 81.

24. Britton v. State, 102 Ind. 214, 1 N. E. 617, 115 Ind. 55, 17 N. E. 254.

25. Bumpas v. Dotson, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 310, 46 Am. Dec. 81, holding that on proof that the guardian obtained his ward's estate on the faith of the bond, the beneficiaries in the bond are entitled to a decree for an account against the guardian and his sureties.

26. Peelle v. State, 118 Ind. 512, 21 N. E. 288, holding also that even if the mistake were one that could be corrected, the surety

5. INVALIDITY OF GUARDIAN'S APPOINTMENT AS INVALIDATING BOND. By the great weight of authority the invalidity of the guardian's appointment does not invalidate the bond as against the sureties.²⁷ If the bond recites the guardianship the sureties are thereby estopped to deny it.²⁸

6. BOND BY ONE GUARDIAN FOR SEVERAL WARDS. The fact that a single bond is given for the benefit of more than one ward does not vitiate it as a statutory bond,²⁹ even though it expresses a joint obligation as to the wards while the statute requires it to be several.³⁰ But it is the better practice to take a separate bond for each ward.³¹

7. NEW AND ADDITIONAL BOND.³² The court may in a proper case authorize the guardian to give additional security,³³ or require him to give a new bond,³⁴ and the new sureties are accordingly bound thereon. A person who has been substituted in place of one of two original sureties is liable on the bond, although the other original surety is thereby released.³⁵

B. Construction and Effect — 1. IN GENERAL. A bond conditioned for performance of duties as guardian "to" the ward does not imply that the guardianship is merely of the ward's person.³⁶ The bond is to be construed with reference to the law in force when and where it was given.³⁷ A bond given by a guardian with surety is presumed to be joint and several.³⁸ If two guardians jointly appointed for the same ward execute a joint bond, each is a security for the cannot, after his principal has received money of the ward on the faith of the bond, procure a reduction of the penalty and thereby cause loss to the ward.

Contra.—Heilman v. Martin, 2 Ark. 158; Crum v. Wilson, 61 Miss. 233; Thomas v. Burrus, 23 Miss. 550, 57 Am. Dec. 154. And see Bomar v. Wilson, 1 Bailey (S. C.) 461, holding that a surety of a guardian appointed under S. C. Acts (1808), pp. 47, 48, by the court of common pleas, to take charge of an infant's property partitioned by it, is not liable for the guardian's failure to account for other property which the court appointed him to take charge of, although the bond purported to include such a liability, as the court had no authority to appoint the guardian to take charge of such other property.

Acts of guardian in another capacity.—The sureties of a general guardian are not liable to the ward for damages resulting from his fraud or negligence with respect to litigation in which he acted for the ward under a separate appointment as guardian ad litem. Matter of Ransier, 26 Misc. (N. Y.) 582, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 650. Liability for property received or held in another capacity see infra, VIII, B, 2, b, (v).

Duty to refund money.—The sureties of a guardian are responsible to an administrator for the amount which it becomes the duty of the guardian to refund to the administrator to pay debts against the estate. Wilson v. Soper, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 411, 56 Am. Dec. 573. Liability for property which guardian was not entitled to receive see infra, VIII, B, 2, b, (ii).

Failure of a guardian to obey an order of court constitutes a breach of his bond (Ammons v. People, 11 Ill. 6), provided that the order is valid (Gillespie v. See, 72 Iowa 345, 33 N. W. 676; Harter v. Miller, 67 Kan. 468, 73 Pac. 74). Failure to obey order to account and turn over estate see infra, note 45.

Failure to pay wages due ward.—The securities of a guardian cannot be made liable for an account for the work and labor of the wards done for the guardian. Phillips v. Davis, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 520, 62 Am. Dec. 472.

Omission to give special bond on sale of real estate does not constitute a breach of the general bond. Warwick v. State, 5 Ind. 195; Williams v. Morton, 38 Me. 47, 61 Am. Dec. 229. Liability of sureties for failure to account for proceeds of realty see infra, VIII, B, 2, b, (iv).

Wolff*, 91 Mo. App. 133 (where the guardian surrendered a note to the maker); State v. Gilmore, 50 Mo. App. 353 (holding that if a guardian converts his ward's funds to his own use, the sureties on his bond are liable, although a succeeding guardian, or the administrator of the converting guardian, may by some act of commission or omission be also liable); In re Hamlen, Tuck. Surr. (N. Y.) 408; Robb v. Perry, 35 Fed. 102 (the last two being cases of embezzlement by guardian). See, however, Cassilly v. Cochran, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 269 (holding that a mere deposit of a ward's funds in bank in his own name is not a breach of the bond); Case v. State, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 486, 10 West. L. J.

from for the maintenance of the ward,⁴⁴ to render true account thereof and turn it over to the person entitled thereto.⁴⁵

163 (holding that conversion by a guardian of money of his ward to his own use is not of itself a breach of his bond, since if he has the money ready to turn over to the ward when it is legally demanded of him, it discharges his duty under the trust).

Investment or loan of ward's funds.—A loan by a guardian without security renders him and his sureties liable therefor, no matter how solvent the borrower may be when the loan is made. Lee v. Lee, 67 Ala. 406. And see Bell v. Rudolph, 70 Miss. 234, 12 So. 153. So if a guardian makes an improvident loan of his ward's money, taking only the debtor's personal note therefor, the sureties on his bond are liable immediately, and continue to be liable, although the debtor is appointed administrator of the guardian upon his death, and returns the note as assets in his account of his intestate's guardianship. Richardson v. Boynton, 12 Allen (Mass.) 138, 90 Am. Dec. 141. If the guardian loans the ward's money to himself or without leave of court, the sureties are liable. Freedman v. Vallie, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 75 S. W. 322. However, where a guardian ostensibly invested money by a loan to herself, giving notes and mortgages, the mortgage may be treated as an application by the guardian of so much of her property to a repayment of the money improperly diverted, and in an action therefor against the sureties they are entitled to credit for all the sums received thereunder. Hutson v. Jensen, 110 Wis. 26, 85 N. W. 689. And the investment of the ward's funds by the guardian in his own name does not constitute a breach of the bond. Cassilly v. Cochran, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 269.

Failure to invest.—A surety on a guardian's bond is not liable for interest that the guardian could have realized by loaning the ward's money before the execution of the bond. Freedman v. Vallie, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 75 S. W. 322.

Removal of property from state.—Under Ky. Gen. St. p. 508, c. 48, § 18, providing that resident guardians shall not remove their ward's property from the state without the sanction of a court of chancery, the sureties on the bond of a guardian who sells property of his wards to non-residents and takes notes therefor payable to himself as guardian are liable for the amount of such notes with interest, in case the guardian fails to account therefor. Lyne v. Perrin, 97 Ky. 738, 31 S. W. 869, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 504.

44. Freedman v. Vallie, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 75 S. W. 322, holding that a guardian of two wards equally interested in the estate cannot lawfully expend more than half of the estate for one of them, and this his surety is presumed to know.

A parent who is guardian of his minor children does not breach the bond by expend-ing their estate for their support if he is unable to support them (Overfield v. Overfield, 30 S. W. 994, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 313); otherwise where the children have by their labor compensated him for what he has expended in their support (Bell v. Kinneer, 101 Ky. 271, 40 S. W. 686, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 545, 72 Am. St. Rep. 410. And see Overfield v. Overfield, supra). See Hutson v. Jensen, 110 Wis. 26, 85 N. W. 689, holding that where, as guardian of her minor children, the mother filed a report at the end of a year, stating that "all of said minors are living with said guardian, and she will make no charge at this time on account of expenses, such as board and clothing, for any of the wards," and they continued to reside with her until her death, six months later, the sureties on her bond were not entitled to an allowance for board, etc., in an action against them for a balance due by the guardian.

45. See cases cited infra, this note et seq.

Failure to account (State v. Berger, 92 Mo. App. 631) after citation (Dawes v. Bell, 4 Mass. 106) or within the period prescribed by statute (Pierce v. Irish, 31 Me. 254; Case v. State, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 486, 10 West. L. J. 163) is a breach of the bond. If, however, the ward, on examining the final account, gives a discharge of the balance, and the account is then settled, the damages may be presumed to be included in the settlement or waived. Pierce v. Irish, supra.

Failure to pay over the balance found due on final accounting constitutes a breach of the bond. Naugle v. State, 101 Ind. 284; Bell v. Rudolph, 70 Miss. 234, 12 So. 153; State v. Williams, 77 Mo. 463; State v. Colman, 73 Mo. 684; State v. Greer, 101 Mo. App. 669, 74 S. W. 881; Ordinary v. Wolfson, 65 N. J. L. 418, 47 Atl. 457; Scobey v. Gano, 35 Ohio St. 550 (holding that where, in the settlement of a guardian's account, he was credited with the payment of moneys for his ward which in fact had not been paid, and the account was subsequently corrected during the minority of the ward, the liability of the surety in the guardian's bond was not affected). This is especially true where the court has ordered the payment to be made. People v. Seelye, 146 Ill. 189, 32 N. E. 458 [reversing 40 Ill. App. 449]; Byrd v. State, 44 Md. 492 (holding that where a guardian was removed and ordered to pay over the ward's moneys to his successor, and failed to do so, it was no defense to an action on his bond that his successor had charged himself with the fund in the hands of the first guardian, if in fact he never had received it); Brooks v. Tobin, 135 Mass. 69. However, a surety who gives bond that a guardian shall pay over according to the directions of the court is not obliged to refund a balance found against the guardian by referees appointed

b. Funds and Property Covered⁴⁶—(i) IN GENERAL. A bond conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of the guardian of a person named as the heir of a certain decedent covers moneys of the ward received from other sources than the decedent's estate.⁴⁷ The bond covers the increase and profits of the ward's estate,⁴⁸ and also property acquired by the ward after the execution of the bond if it comes into the guardian's hands.⁴⁹ So it covers life-insurance money accruing to the ward pending the guardianship.⁵⁰

(ii) FUNDS AND PROPERTY WHICH GUARDIAN WAS NOT ENTITLED TO RECEIVE. It has been held that a guardian's bond does not cover money improperly paid to the guardian,⁵¹ or property which the guardian had no authority to receive;⁵² but there are cases in conflict with this rule.⁵³ by the guardian and his successor without the knowledge of the surety. Com. v. Simon-ton, 1 Watts (Pa.) 310. And where a widow who is also guardian of her deceased husband's children receives all his slaves of the administrator to hold as widow or as guardian, she and her sureties on her guardian's bond may be exonerated by the delivery of all, except one third, to a subsequent guardian. Mitchell v. Miller, 6 Dana (Ky.) 79.

Failure to render an intermediate account is a breach of the bond. Eiceman v. State, 75 Ind. 46; Black v. Kaiser, 91 Ky. 422, 16 S. W. 89, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 11. However, the penalty imposed by Iowa Code, §§ 3203, 3204, on a guardian who fails to make an annual report, cannot be recovered by the ward in an action on the guardian's bond for damages for failure to account for and pay over the ward's money. Townsend v. Stern, (Iowa 1904) 99 N. W. 570.

The mere non-payment of a balance due at an annual settlement, there being no final settlement, does not fix any liability on the guardian or his sureties. Sebastian v. Bryan, 21 Ark. 447.

Court to which account should be made.—A bond executed before the creation of the probate court was conditioned that the guardian should settle his accounts in the county court. It was held that the failure to settle according to the order of the probate court was a breach of a condition, since it is the duty of the guardian to settle his accounts when called upon to do so in any court of competent jurisdiction. People v. Seelye, 146 Ill. 189, 32 N. E. 458 [reversing 40 Ill. App. 449].

that where, before confirmation of a guardian's sale of his ward's land, the sureties on his original bond were released and a new bond taken, they were not liable after confirmation for the money received by the guardian before confirmation, although at the time of its reception they had not been released.

Payment of legacy of ward.—Where an executor whose duty it is to hold the legacy and account for it to the legatee on his attaining his majority pays it to the legatee's guardian, the latter's sureties are not liable for the same. Hindman v. State, 61 Md. 471; Allen v. Crosland, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 68.

Payment of the ward's distributive share by the administrator to the guardian, who fails to account therefor, does not charge the sureties as against the ward (State v. Bond, 121 Ind. 187, 22 N. E. 998), nor as against the person entitled to the money (Ballard v. Brummitt, 4 Strobb. Eq. (S. C.) 171. Contra, Wilson v. Soper, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 411, 56 Am. Dec. 573).

53. People v. Medart, 166 Ill. 348, 46 N. E. 1095 [affirming 63 Ill. App. 111] (holding that where money has been paid without legal authority to the guardian, irregularities in the receipt of the money are no defense to an action on his bond); Warwick v. State, 5 Ind. 350 (holding that the sureties on the bond of a guardian who has received personal estate belonging to his ward are responsible for a faithful application of it, although it came into his hands from an estate on which no administration had been had); Carr v. Askew, 94 N. C. 194 (where a father insured his life for the benefit of his two children, both minors, and one died shortly after the death of his father, and the guardian of the other received the entire sum due under the policy, and it was held that his bond was liable for this entire amount); Allen v. Stovall, 94 Tex. 618, 63 S. W. 863, 64 S. W. 777 [reversing (Civ. App. 1901) 62 S. W. 87] (holding that where a guardian received money for his wards in set-

(III) *FUNDS AND PROPERTY RECEIVED BEFORE APPOINTMENT OR EXECUTION OF BOND.*⁵⁴ A guardian's bond covers property in the guardian's hands at the time it was given, although the guardian received the property before execution of the bond;⁵⁵ but in most states if the bond does not expressly provide that it shall operate retrospectively, the sureties are not liable for property received and converted or wasted by the guardian before the bond was given.⁵⁶

(IV) *PROCEEDS OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE.*⁵⁷ In many states the sureties on the general bond are not liable for the guardian's failure to account for the proceeds of a sale of real estate,⁵⁸ especially where the guardian has given a special pling a legal controversy in which they were interested, the guardian's bondsmen are liable for the money, although the guardian had no authority to settle a legal controversy); Frenkel v. Caddou, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 40 S. W. 638 (holding that where a minor procured letters as guardian of her minor children on the representation that the proceeds of insurance on their father's life belonged to the estate of the minors, and reported it when collected as the property of the estate, and the bond of her sureties was given with reference to her representation that the money belonged to her wards, and was acted on as their property by the court and mother during her guardianship, the sureties cannot say that the money was not the property of the minors).

The burden of showing that the money was converted before the guardian was appointed is on the sureties. Fardette v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., 86 N. Y. App. Div. 50, 83 N. Y. Suppl. 521.

56. Howe v. White, 162 Ind. 74, 69 N. E. 684; White v. Parker, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 48 (defalcations prior to guardian's appointment); Freedman v. Vallie, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 75 S. W. 322; Holden v. Curry, 85 Wis. 504, 55 N. W. 965 (defalcations prior to guardian's appointment).

Condition for faithful performance of duties.—The sureties on a guardian's bond conditioned for the future faithful performance of the guardianship, but not extending to indemnify the ward for previous defaults of the guardian, are not liable for a previous default. Sebastian v. Bryan, 21 Ark. 447; Cotton v. Wolf, 14 Bush (Ky.) 238; Fuselier v. Babineau, 14 La. Ann. 764; State v. Shackelford, 56 Miss. 648. Contra, Dougllass v. Kessler, 57 Iowa 63, 10 N. W. 313, (1880) 7 N. W. 619.

Condition to account and pay over fund due ward.—The surety on a guardian's bond conditioned that he shall account for all funds coming into his hands and pay them over to the ward is not liable for what came into the tutor's hands before signing the bond. Fuselier v. Babineau, 14 La. Ann. 764; State v. Shackelford, 56 Miss. 648. Contra, State v. Buck, 63 Ark. 218, 37 S. W. 881.

Restoring converted funds and failing to account therefor.—Where a guardian converts his ward's money prior to giving a bond, and subsequently he replaces it, his sureties are liable if he fails to account for the money so replaced. Parker v. Medsker, 80 Ind. 155.

The sureties are liable for funds shown to be due the ward by the guardian's accounts when the bond is given, although the money was previously misappropriated. Freedman v. Vallie, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 75 S. W. 322. So the sureties are liable for misappropriations occurring before execution of the bond, where the amount was carried forward in the guardian's settlements, and made up a part of the balance against him on his final settlement, and his failure to pay over such sum occurred during the existence of the bond. State v. Bilby, 50 Mo. App. 162.

57. Liability of sureties on new or additional bond see infra, VIII, B, 3.

58. Indiana.—Warwick v. State, 5 Ind. 350. See, however, Colburn v. State, 47 Ind. 310, where it is said that this rule does not apply where the sale is made on application of someone other than the guardian.

Iowa.—Bunce v. Bunce, 65 Iowa 106, 21 N. W. 205.

Kansas.—Morris v. Cooper, 35 Kan. 156, 10 Pac. 588.

Kentucky.—Irvine v. McDowell, 4 Dana 629; Grimes v. Com., 4 Litt. 1. Contra, Taylor v. Taylor, 6 B. Mon. 559; Withers v. Hickman, 6 B. Mon. 292 (both denying the rule even where special bond has been given); Barker v. Boyd, 71 S. W. 528, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1389 (holding that the sureties on a special sale bond and the sureties on the general bond stand as cosureties and joint obligors to the extent of the estate which passes into the guardian's hands from the sale). And see Johnson v. Johnson, 1 Dana 364, holding that an ordinary bond of a guardian renders him and his sureties liable to the wards for every obligation resulting from acts which he was legally authorized to perform, and if, when the bond was executed, he was authorized to sell their land, it secures the proceeds to them.

Maine.—Probate Judge v. Toothaker, 83 Me. 195, 22 Atl. 119; Williams v. Morton, 38 Me. 47, 61 Am. Dec. 229.

bond.⁵⁹ In other states the general sureties are liable⁶⁰ even where a special bond has been given.⁶¹ This conflict of authority exists also with reference to the proceeds of partition sales.⁶²

(v) *FUNDS AND PROPERTY RECEIVED OR HELD BY GUARDIAN IN ANOTHER CAPACITY.*⁶³ The sureties on a general guardian's bond are not as a rule held responsible for their principal's failure to account for property paid to him in another capacity.⁶⁴ But if a person occupying the dual relation of guardian and executor or administrator or trustee holds funds in the latter capacity which are Massachusetts.—Lyman v. Conkey, 1 Mete. 317.

Missouri.—State v. Peterman, 66 Mo. App. 257. Now, however, since Rev. St. (1889) § 2593, authorizes the probate court to order a sale of a ward's land without requiring a special bond from the guardian, the sureties on the guardian's general bond already in existence are responsible for the proper administration of the trust. State v. Bilby, 50 Mo. App. 162.

Nevada.—Henderson v. Coover, 4 Nev. 429.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. American Bonding, etc., Co., 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 570, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 145, holding that where a bond is on its face a general guardianship bond, and the surety had no knowledge that it was intended for any other purpose than that which appeared on its face, the surety cannot be held liable for the misappropriation by the guardian of the proceeds of the sale of real estate sold by the guardian under an order of court.

Tennessee.—Shelton v. Smith, 3 Baxt. 82. However, the sureties upon a general guardian's bond are liable for a fund derived from the sale of real estate under a decree of a chancery court and paid into the hands of the guardian, the sale having been made and notes taken for the purchase-money before the appointment of the guardian and before the execution of the guardian's bond. McClendon v. Harlan, 2 Heisk. 337.

In New York the sureties on the bond of a guardian requiring him to faithfully discharge the trust reposed in him and render a true account of the moneys and property received by him are liable for the proceeds of real estate sold under an order of the county court as necessary for the support of a ward in addition to what he could earn by his own exertions, which proceeds were paid over to the guardian without additional security, where his executor on his death fails to pay them to the new guardian as directed by the court. Allen v. Kelly, 171 N. Y. 1, 63 N. E. 528 [reversing 55 N. Y. App. Div. 454, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 97 (reversing on other grounds 30 Misc. 377, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 1031)].

If the proceeds are mixed with other funds, and the account is so kept that a proven defalcation cannot be identified with either fund, it is a breach of both bonds; and the action may be on either bond, if not for the entire loss, certainly for a pro-rata share of it. West Virginia.—Kester v. Hill, 42 W. Va. 611, 26 S. E. 376. And see Findley v. Findley, 42 W. Va. 372, 26 S. E. 433, holding that where a guardian gives bond, and later land of his ward is sold under a decree and he gives an additional bond to secure its proceeds, the latter bond is primarily liable for such proceeds.

Anderson, 5 Harr. 221, holding that where an administrator having in his hands a residuary balance distributable among the representatives of the intestate is also guardian of a minor representative of the intestate, and neglects or refuses to render any account charging himself as guardian with the funds in his hands as administrator, the child can, in an action brought upon the guardian's bond against the principal and sureties thereof after the determination of the guardianship, recover such share as damages upon showing that the remedies at law against the principal and surety in the administration bond have been exhausted.

Illinois.—Fogarty v. Ream, 100 Ill. 366, holding that where one liable for trust funds to an infant is appointed guardian of the infant, and in his report to the county court charges himself with such money as is then in his hands, the surety of the guardian cannot exonerate himself from liability as to such money by showing that the person who had thus become guardian had squandered the same before his appointment.

Maryland.—Seegar v. State, 6 Harr. & J. 162, 14 Am. Dec. 265.

New York.—Matter of Noll, 10 N. Y. App. Div. 356, 41 N. Y. Suppl. 765 (holding that where a decree settling the accounts of an administrator directs him to deposit certain sums to his credit as guardian of the heirs, he becomes liable in that capacity, and the sureties on his guardian bond cannot set up, as a bar to their liability, that before the decree was made, he had misappropriated the funds in his hands as administrator, and never received them as guardian); Matter of Brown, 72 Hun 160, 25 N. Y. Suppl. 694 (holding that where an executor who is also guardian of one of the legatees in the final settlement of his account files receipts from himself as guardian for the sum due his ward and thereon procures his discharge, the sureties on his guardian's bond cannot deny liability to the ward for the money thus receipted for, in the absence of collusion between him and the ward for the purpose of creating a situation where the guardian would be relieved at the expense of the sureties).

North Carolina.—Loftin v. Cobb, 126 N. C. 58, 35 S. E. 230; Harris v. Harrison, 78 N. C. 202, the principal having charged himself as guardian with the property.

Pennsylvania.—In re McIntosh, 158 Pa. St. 525, 27 Atl. 1042, holding that where a guardian of the children of intestate, acting as agent of the administratrix, collected the assets, paid the debts, and kept the surplus, the guardian's bondsmen were liable.

South Carolina.—Todd v. Davenport, 22 S. C. 147; Gray v. Brown, 1 Rich. 351, holding that where the right of receiving a fund as guardian and the duty of paying it as trustee unite in the same person, the law presumes a performance of the duty, and without further proof the surety of the person as guardian is liable.

Tennessee.—Adams v. Gleaves, 10 Lea 367, holding that where an executor, after the time when he should by law have settled his executorship, is appointed guardian of minors to whom his testator was liable for a legacy, and as such administrator with the will annexed of another party charges himself and credits himself as executor with the amount going to his wards, and charges himself with the amount in his hands in his report of the ward's estate, this is sufficient to charge his sureties on his guardian's bond with the fund, notwithstanding there was no actual transfer of the money, that being impossible.

Texas.—Gillespie v. Crawford, (Civ. App. 1897) 42 S. W. 621, holding that where an independent executor under a will bequeathing property to minors has himself appointed guardian of such minors, qualifies and acts as such, and afterward misappropriates such property, the sureties on his bond as guardian cannot claim that he held such property as executor.

Virginia.—Broadus v. Rosson, 3 Leigh 12, holding that where an administrator with the will annexed was also guardian of the children of the testator, who were entitled to the proceeds of the sale of land directed to be sold by the will, and he sold the land under the power in the will and the authority of the statute, and took bonds for the purchase-money payable to him as guardian, his sureties in his guardianship bond were responsible.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 595.

See, however, Johnson v. Fuquay, 1 Dana (Ky.) 514 (holding that where one was both administrator and guardian, and there is no proof showing a change of assets in his hands as administrator into a holding as guardian, his sureties in the latter capacity are not chargeable for his default); Conkey v. Dickinson, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 51; State v. Riffin, 4 Mo. App. 583 (holding that where the same person is both trustee and curator, he and his sureties are not liable on his bond as curator for any portion of the trust fund not inventoried by him as curator); Swope v. Chambers, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 319 (holding that an executor who is also the guardian of a legatee cannot elect to hold a legacy as guardian before it is payable, so as to release his sureties as executors and charge his surety as guardian).

Estoppel.—Where an administrator who was also guardian of his intestate's children charged himself as guardian with having received from himself as administrator a certain sum in cash, he cannot plead and prove, guardian, shift the liability of his sureties as guardian to his sureties as trustee, where there is no transfer of substantial assets.⁶⁶

(VI) DEBTS DUE FROM GUARDIAN PERSONALLY TO WARD. The sureties in a guardian's bond are liable for a debt which the guardian owed the ward at the time of his appointment, provided that the guardian was then solvent;⁶⁷ and they are also liable for debts subsequently incurred by the guardian individually to the ward.⁶⁸

(VII) FOREIGN ASSETS. A general guardian's bond covers funds received by the guardian from assets situated in another state.⁶⁹

(VIII) FUNDS AND PROPERTY RECEIVED AFTER REMOVAL OF GUARDIAN OR DEATH OR MAJORITY OF WARD. As a rule the sureties of a guardian are not liable for funds or property received by him after he has been removed,⁷⁰

in defense to an action on his bond as guardian, that the amount so charged as cash was in fact made up of notes on divers persons who were solvent at the time but had since become insolvent, that with some of the notes he purchased slaves in his own name in order to save the debts, and that such negroes had become valueless on account of emancipation. Crawford v. Brewster, 57 Ga. 226.

66. State v. Branch, 112 Mo. 661, 20 S. W. 693, 126 Mo. 448, 28 S. W. 739, 134 Mo. 592, 36 S. W. 226, 56 Am. St. Rep. 533, 151 Mo. 622, 52 S. W. 390. And see infra, XII.

Estoppel.—Where, on final accounting in the probate court, a guardian files receipts for funds on hand from himself as trustee, and afterward the beneficiary receipts for moneys received from him as trustee, and in a suit in the circuit court to remove him from his trusteeship charges him with the possession of the funds in that capacity, and the court so finds, the beneficiary is estopped as against the sureties on the guardian's bond from claiming that he did not transfer the money to himself as trustee, if, when he made his settlement as guardian, he possessed property from which by proper diligence he could have transferred the trust funds to himself as trustee. State v. Branch, 134 Mo. 592, 36 S. W. 226, 56 Am. St. Rep. 533.

67. Johnson v. Hicks, 97 Ky. 116, 30 S. W. 3, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 827; Black v. Kaiser, 91 Ky. 422, 16 S. W. 89, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 11, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 328; Clement v. Hughes, 17 S. W. 285, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 352, 16 S. W. 358 (where the guardian charged himself as such with the debt); O'Neill v. Herbert, Dudley Eq. (S. C.) 30 (holding that if one be indebted to himself as guardian, the debt will be presumed to be paid, and he and his sureties will be liable for it, but that where one of two co-administrators becomes guardians for minors interested in the estate, he is legally liable on their joint bond for the acts of his co-administrator, and it is not such an indebtedness to himself as guardian as would render his sureties liable, where the extent of such liability was not ascertained by a judgment previous to the acceptance of the guardianship); Sargent v. Wallis, 67 Tex. 483, 3 S. W. 721 (holding that a person indebted to an infant's estate, who is thereafter appointed and who accepts the guardianship of the estate, as he cannot sue himself, must in legal contemplation be considered as having paid the debt to himself, and both he and his sureties are answerable therefor as for money actually received). And see Lee v. Lee, 67 Ala. 406; Richardson v. Boynton, 12 Allen (Mass.) 138, 90 Am. Dec. 141; Todd v. Davenport, 22 S. C. 147.

68. Clements v. Ramsey, 4 S. W. 311, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 172 (holding that the sureties of a guardian are responsible for the amount for which the ward's lands were sold to the guardian under order of court); State v. Hull, 53 Miss. 626 (holding that where a guardian buys her husband's land on credit at a sale by the administrator of his estate, giving her notes with security, and the administrator afterward surrenders the notes to her and she charges herself with the amount, the surety on her bond is liable for such sum); Avent v. Womack, 72 N. C. 397 (holding that where a guardian bought property for himself at the administrator's sale of the estate of his ward's father, giving bond therefor to the administrator, who afterward surrendered the bond, the guardian receipting therefor as so much money paid his ward under the impression that the ward was entitled to some of the estate as distributee, and the estate proved insolvent, the surety on the guardian's bond was liable for the non-payment of the amount receipted for); Sanders v. Forgasson, 3 Baxt. (Tenn.) 249 (holding that where a guardian procures a sale of his ward's land, and becomes the purchaser, and the sale is set aside by the chancery court, the sureties on the guardian's bond are liable for rent to the wards during the period the guardian held the land under his void purchase).

69. McDonald v. Meadows, 1 Mete. (Ky.) 507; Collins v. Slaughter, 1 Ky. L. Rep. 261; State v. Hull, 53 Miss. 626; Pearson v. Dailey, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 674.

70. Merrells v. Phelps, 34 Conn. 109, holding also that the surety is not estopped from denying the continuance of the guardianship because the guardian has collected money with the knowledge of the surety after removal. See, however, Sage v. Hammonds, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 651 (holding that it is the duty of a guardian whose power as such is re-

or after the ward becomes of age.⁷¹ They have been held liable, however, for funds received after the ward's death.⁷²

c. Duties of Sureties. It is the duty of the sureties on a guardian's bond to see that the conditions of the bond are fulfilled by the guardian.⁷³ If a mortgage owned by the ward is assigned by the guardian to a surety as indemnity, the surety must use due diligence to enforce it.⁷⁴ It is neither the right nor the duty of sureties of a deceased guardian to take possession of the ward's estate and manage it for his benefit;⁷⁵ but it is their duty to make a report on the guardian's death, and they are not entitled to a credit for attorney's fees for making it; nor for costs of the guardian's personal suits.⁷⁶

3. NEW AND ADDITIONAL BONDS.⁷⁷ Where new sureties are given or added to supplement an old bond, they of course become liable for future defaults of their principal,⁷⁸ and according to many authorities, depending, however, on statutory voiced account to his wards, or to his successor as guardian, if there be one, for their estate, including evidences of claim which may have come to his hands; and if after such revocation he collects any money on account of any such claim, he and his sureties are accountable therefor, provided such payment be made in good faith by a person who is not informed of such revocation, and who believes when he makes it that the party claiming to be guardian is so in fact and has authority to receive the money); Farrington v. Secor, 91 Iowa 606, 60 N. W. 193.

Reinstatement of guardian.—Where a guardian was removed and another appointed in his place, and the order appointing the second guardian being revoked, the first guardian continued to act, and was recognized as such by the court, the sureties of the first guardian were not liable for moneys which came into his hands after the order of removal. Douglass v. Kessler, 57 Iowa 63, 10 N. W. 313, (1880) 7 N. W. 619.

71. In re Marck, 8 Lane. L. Rev. (Pa.) 306 (holding that where a husband appointed guardian for his wife received money for her after she became of age, he will be held to have received it as his wife's agent, and not as guardian); Shelton v. Smith, 3 Baxt. (Tenn.) 82.

72. Carr v. Askew, 94 N. C. 194, where a father insured his life for the benefit of his two children, both minors, and one died shortly after the death of his father, and the guardian of the other received the entire sum due under the policy, and it was held that his bond was liable for this entire amount. And see infra, VIII, C, 1, b.

73. Schlee v. Darrow, 65 Mich. 362, 32 N. W. 717; State v. Branch, 151 Mo. 622, 52 S. W. 390.

It is no defense for a surety that the estate of the deceased guardian sufficient to pay the ward went into the hands of his administrator and was wasted by him, and that the administrator and his sureties are insolvent. Humphrey v. Humphrey, 79 N. C. 396.

Estoppel.—Where a ward, after final settlement by her guardian in which he accepted as trustee to himself as guardian for a legacy in his possession, received money from him as trustee and acknowledged payment by receipt to him as trustee, and thereafter petitioned for his removal as trustee on allegations that he had misappropriated funds as such, it does not estop her to sue the sureties on his bond as guardian, if the misappropriation was made by him while guardian, and the sureties had no knowledge of such statements by her, and did not act on such knowledge to their own injury. State v. Branch, 151 Mo. 622, 52 S. W. 390.

74. Barton's Estate, 3 Del. Co. (Pa.) 338.

75. Garrett v. Reese, 99 Ga. 494, 27 S. E. 750, holding that the duty devolves upon the guardian's successor.

76. Freedman v. Vallie, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 75 S. W. 322.

77. Effect as discharging original sureties see infra, VIII, C, 1, e.

78. McWilliams v. Norfleet, 63 Miss. 183; Tuttle v. Northrop, 44 Ohio St. 178, 5 N. E. 659; Hall v. Hall, 45 S. C. 166, 22 S. E. 818.

Primary liability.—Where it does not appear that such additional bond was executed as merely subsidiary to or security for the original bond (McGlothlin v. Wyatt, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 717), a surety on the additional bond is primarily bound for a breach thereof, either separately in a suit thereon against him alone, or jointly with the surety on the original bond in a suit on both bonds against all the sureties (Allen v. State, 61 Ind. 268, 28 Am. Rep. 673). And see Chilton v. Parks, 15 Ala. 671; Sutton v. Williams, 77 Ga. 570, 1 S. E. 175; Hartman v. Com., 10 Pa. Cas. 196, 13 Atl. 780.

Assets in guardian's hands when new bond is given are covered by the bond. Moody v. State, 84 Ind. 433; Case v. State, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 486, 10 West. L. J. 163; Clark v. Wilkinson, 59 Wis. 543, 18 N. W. 481.

Assets converted before new bond is given, replaced thereafter, and subsequently converted are covered by the bond. Parker v. Medsker, 80 Ind. 155.

Assets shown by guardian's report to be on hand when new bond is given.—Where on the execution of a new bond the guardian as such has in fact no assets, the surety is not liable, although the guardian then and subsequently charges himself in his reports to the court as with assets on hand. Lowry v.

provisions and the peculiar conditions of the particular bond, they are also liable with the old sureties for all the guardian's defaults since the giving of the original bond.⁷⁹

4. SPECIAL SALE BONDS. The special bond given by a guardian on procuring a license to sell his ward's real estate secures a compliance with the order of court issuing the license,⁸⁰ and an accounting by the guardian for the proceeds of the State, 64 Ind. 421. See State v. Stewart, 36 Miss. 652.

Time of misappropriation.—Where money is wrongfully deposited to the guardian's individual credit while a bond is in force, sureties on a later bond are liable for a conversion of the money while their bond is in force and after the sureties on the former bond have been discharged. Cassilly v. Cochran, 13 S. W. 844, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 119. So the sureties on a guardian's second bond are liable for the loss of money loaned by the guardian before the execution of the second bond, but which he might have collected after its execution. McWilliams v. Norfleet, 63 Miss. 163. And they are liable for the proceeds of sales of the ward's real estate which he received before the new bond was given and afterward fails to account for to his successor. Tuttle v. Northrop, 44 Ohio St. 178, 5 N. E. 659. A default by a guardian discovered on final settlement is presumed to have occurred during the term of the last bond executed by him, in the absence of proof to the contrary. Pummill v. Baumgartner, 4 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 69, 3 Ohio N. P. 40. So the sureties on a guardian's additional bond may be liable for his failure to account for money on hand when it was given, the presumption being that the misappropriation was afterward. Clark v. Wilkinson, 59 Wis. 543, 18 N. W. 481. So in the absence of evidence showing whether at the time the new bond was given the guardian held money previously received or had misappropriated it, the new sureties are liable for the entire guardianship. Douglas v. Kessler, 57 Iowa 63, 10 N. W. 313. See, however, Williams v. State, 89 Ind. 570.

Bond given by removed guardian to secure money converted see Union Trust Co. v. Conus, 129 Mich. 156, 88 N. W. 407.

Bond given in foreign state for foreign assets see State v. Williams, 77 Mo. 463.

79. Connecticut.—Merrells v. Phelps, 34 Conn. 109.

Georgia.—Bryant v. Owen, 1 Ga. 355; Justices Morgan County Inferior Ct. v. Woods, 1 Ga. 84.

Illinois.—Ammons v. People, 11 Ill. 6.

Iowa.—Knox v. Kearns, 73 Iowa 286, 34 N. W. 861; Douglas v. Kessler, 57 Iowa 63, 10 N. W. 313.

North Carolina.—Bell v. Jasper, 37 N. C. 597.

Ohio.—Case v. State, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 486, 10 West. L. J. 163.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. Cox, 36 Pa. St. 442. See, however, Woomer's Appeal, 144 Pa. St. 383, 22 Atl. 749.

South Carolina.—Field v. Pclot, McMull. Eq. 369.

Tennessee.—Crook v. Hudson, 4 Lea 448; Tennessee Hospital v. Fuqua, 1 Lea 608; Jamison v. Cosby, 11 Humphr. 273; Steele v. Reese, 6 Yerg. 263; Collins v. Knight, 3 Tenn. Ch. 183, holding that the sureties on the biennial statutory bonds of a guardian are all liable to the ward for the guardian's official delinquencies, even though as between themselves their liability be in the inverse order of the execution of the bonds.

Virginia.—Sayers v. Cassell, 23 Gratt. 525. See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 602.

In some states, however, the liability of a surety on a "new bond" executed by a guardian after a conversion of his ward's estate is only prospective (Williams v. State, 89 Ind. 570; Parker v. Medsker, 80 Ind. 155; Lowry v. State, 64 Ind. 421; State v. Page, 63 Ind. 209; McWilliams v. Norfleet, 60 Miss. 987; State v. Stewart, 36 Miss. 652), while the liability of "additional sureties" covers past defaults (Armstrong v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 81; State v. Hull, 53 Miss. 626). So it has been held that a breach of a guardian's bond occasioned by his surrender of a note to the maker can be continued so as to bind the sureties on his second bond only by the guardian's carrying the note forward into a final settlement of his account as guardian. Lincoln Trust Co. v. Wolff, 91 Mo. App. 133.

80. Schlee v. Darrow, 65 Mich. 362, 32 N. W. 717, holding that where lands are directed to be sold by a guardian to support and educate his ward, it is a breach of the bond to fail to maintain and educate the ward with the proceeds of the sale.

The guardian's failure to invest such of the proceeds as are not needed for the ward's maintenance is a breach of the bond. Cogswell v. State, 65 Ind. 1; McKim v. Morse, 130 Mass. 439.

Failure to sell in legal manner.—The surety is bound to see that his principal sells the land in the manner prescribed by law. Schlee v. Darrow, 65 Mich. 362, 32 N. W. 717. In any event if the guardian sells real estate and receives the proceeds the sureties cannot avoid liability for his failure to account therefore by setting up defects in the sale (Hobbs v. Pemberton, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 535 [those defects being such as might have been corrected at any time by a proceeding to perfect the title]; State v. Towl, 48 Mo. 148); especially where the ward ratifies the sale (Johnson v. Johnson, 1 Dana (Ky.) 364; Williamson v. Woodman, 73 Me. 163; Schlee v. Darrow, supra). However, the surety in a sale bond is not liable for the proceeds of a tract for which no license to sell was is-

sale.⁸¹ Beyond this the sureties are not liable.⁸² In some states the sureties on the special bond are jointly liable with the sureties on the general bond for the proceeds of sale;⁸³ in other states the special sureties are primarily liable therefor;⁸⁴ in yet others they and they alone are liable for the proceeds of sale.⁸⁵

5. ESTOPPEL BY BOND. The obligors are estopped to deny the facts recited in the bond.⁸⁶

C. Discharge or Release of Sureties⁸⁷ — 1. SURETIES ON GENERAL BOND — a. In General. The sureties on a guardian's bond are not discharged by the fact that the proceeds of a sale of real estate are paid to him without first requiring him to give a special sale bond,⁸⁸ nor by breach of the guardian's promise to the sureties to give a bond with new sureties,⁸⁹ nor by the failure of the court to compel the guardian to file an inventory⁹⁰ and make annual settlements,⁹¹ nor by the guardian's failure to account within the time prescribed by statute,⁹² nor by a deposit of the ward's funds in bank pursuant to an order of court.⁹³ Nor does the consent of a surety that the guardian may retain and use the ward's money, and a subsequent order of the court authorizing him to do so "until further order," operate to release a cosurety.⁹⁴

b. By Death of Guardian, Ward, or Surety. The death of one of two joint guardians does not release the surety on the joint and several bond for future defaults of the survivor;⁹⁵ nor is a bond given by a guardian of several wards sued. Tomlinson v. Simpson, 33 Minn. 443, 23 N. W. 864.

81. Stevenson v. State, 69 Ind. 257; Cogswell v. State, 65 Ind. 1; State v. Steele, 21 Ind. 207, 83 Am. Dec. 346. See, however, Fay v. Taylor, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 529, holding that the bond does not render the sureties liable for the failure of the guardian, at the expiration of his trust, to pay over and deliver the proceeds of such sale, or the securities therefor, to the person who is legally entitled thereto.

Conversion of the proceeds of sale by the guardian is a breach of the bond. Cogswell v. State, 65 Ind. 1; Lowry v. State, 64 Ind. 421; Schlee v. Darrow, 65 Mich. 362, 32 N. W. 717.

Commingling funds.—Where a guardian who has given an additional bond for the proceeds of land sold by him is in default, so that it is impossible to ascertain whether the money unaccounted for consisted of the proceeds of the land or not, the ward may recover to the extent of the defalcation from whichever set of bondsmen he may choose. Yost v. State, 80 Ind. 350. The special sureties must account for all proceeds of the real estate if the general balance with which the guardian is chargeable exceeds said proceeds, although the guardian has made payments from the commingled fund in excess of the amount of said proceeds. McWhinney v. Swisher, 58 Ohio St. 378, 50 N. E. 812, holding, however, that the liability of the special sureties cannot be extended beyond the terms of their undertaking, although the guardian commingles such proceeds with money of his ward derived from other sources and fails to account therefor.

Acceptance by the guardian of his own note in payment of the price of his ward's land constitutes a breach of the bond. Heflin v. Bevis, 82 Ind. 388.

v. Cowing, 13 Gray (Mass.) 387; Schlee v. Darrow, 65 Mich. 362, 32 N. W. 717, holding that the bond does not cover any illegalities or defects occurring prior to the granting of the license to sell.

affected by the death of one of them.⁹⁶ And on the death of a surety his estate may be held liable on the bond.⁹⁷

c. By Extension of Time of Payment. An agreement whereby a ward who has come of age gives the guardian further time to discharge his liability releases the sureties in the bond if binding on the ward.⁹⁸ If the agreement is not binding on the ward the sureties are not released;⁹⁹ and the same is true of an agreement by a new guardian extending time to his predecessor.¹

d. By Failure of Ward or New Guardian to Obtain Settlement.² In the absence of statute to the contrary the sureties are not discharged by the failure of the obligee, after the guardian's death, to obtain an accounting and prove the ward's claim against the guardian's estate within the time prescribed by the statute of non-claim;³ nor by the failure of a new guardian to obtain payment of the amount due by the original guardian from property standing in the latter's name.⁴

e. By Giving Additional, New, or Special Bond.⁵ Sureties on a general guardianship bond are not discharged from liability already incurred merely by the guardian's giving an additional, new, or special bond with other sureties.⁶

f. By Order of Court on Special Application of Guardian⁷—(i) IN GENERAL. In many states the probate court may, upon the guardian's giving additional sureties or filing a new bond, release one or all of his original sureties from liability for his future defaults,⁸ and in some states this power extends to releasing them from liability for past defaults.⁹ The release discharges the original sureties from liability for subsequent defaults of the guardian,¹⁰ but not for his previous defaults;¹¹ and in an action against a discharged surety the burden Contra.—Sayers v. Cassell, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 525.

Hence judgment on the second bond is no bar to suit on the first, if there has been no satisfaction. State v. Page, 63 Ind. 209; State v. Drury, 36 Mo. 281. And see Alexander v. Bullard, Rice Eq. (S. C.) 23.

Liability for subsequent defaults.—The sureties on the first bond are not liable for defaults subsequent to the giving of the second bond if the court releases them (see infra, VIII, C, 1, f), or if the second bond is given on removal of the guardian to another county and his discharge by the court originally having jurisdiction (Justices Morgan County Inferior Ct. v. Selman, 6 Ga. 432, provided that the statutory requisites are followed), or if it is given on the application of the first sureties, who apprehend danger and seek relief (State v. Hull, 53 Miss. 626); but if the second bond is given merely as additional security the first sureties are liable for subsequent defaults (State v. Hull, supra; Com. v. Cox, 36 Pa. St. 442; Jamison v. Cosby, 11 Humphr. (Tenn.) 273, holding that where a guardian's bond has been renewed from time to time as provided by statute with new sureties, the old sureties are not thereby released, but the sureties on each bond are answerable for the entire guardianship, beginning with the latest and ending with the first).

7. Discharge of surety as releasing co-surety see infra, VIII, C, 1, g.

8. Bryant v. Owen, 1 Ga. 355; Johnson v. Fuquay, 1 Dana (Ky.) 514; Wilborne v. Com., 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 617; Jamison v. Cosby, 11 Humphr. (Tenn.) 273.

It is otherwise in some states. McMath v. State, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 98; Newcomer's Appeal, 43 Pa. St. 43; Hill v. Calvert, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 56.

Discharge as matter of right.—The sureties are entitled to a discharge in a proper case as a matter of right. Foster v. Bisland, 23 Miss. 296.

The insufficiency of the new bond does not invalidate the discharge of the original sureties. Crawford v. Penn, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 388.

Construction of statutes.—Statutes providing for release of sureties on application to the court are remedial and should be liberally construed. Kendrick v. Wilkinson, 18 Ind. 206. A statute providing that a surety "may at any time make complaint to the ordinary of any misconduct of his principal in the discharge of his trust, or for any other reason show his desire to be relieved as surety," and that upon citation to the guardian the ordinary may discharge the surety was construed as follows: "The words 'any misconduct of his principal in the discharge of his trust,' are obviously exhaustive of all acts, whether of commission or omission, which pertain to the guardian's mismanagement of the estate or the non-performance of any of the duties devolving upon him in his office. It follows that the words, 'any other reason,' which the surety may allege as constituting the basis of 'his desire to be relieved' from the bond, must relate to some ground or grounds of relief not ejusdem generis with those which arise from the guardian's official misconduct. Want of personal integrity, lack of business capacity, extravagant or reckless living, indulgence in vicious or immoral habits, criminality, and scores of other things which might be suggested, would certainly afford good reasons for a 'desire to be relieved as surety.'" National Surety Co. v. Morris, 111 Ga. 307, 308, 36 S. E. 690. However, the right of a surety to relief under Miss. Rev. Code, p. 461, § 145, providing that "if the sureties of any guardian should apprehend danger, and desire to be discharged," the guardian may be required to give new sureties, if the court considers the complaint well founded, is conditioned upon his danger of damage by reason of his liability thereon; a mere apprehension of danger or whim to be discharged from the suretyship is not sufficient. Coleman v. Lamar, 40 Miss. 775.

9. Watts v. Pettit, 1 Bush (Ky.) 154. Contra, Sebastian v. Bryan, 21 Ark. 447.

Failure to prosecute bond within time prescribed by court.—The sureties upon a guardian's bond should not be discharged upon their own application before the guardian has made his final account, and the ward thereby been enabled to bring suit on the bond for any balance due him on said account; but if, after majority of the ward and after final accounting, the ward neglects for an unreasonable time to bring such suit, he may, upon application of the sureties, be ordered to bring the same within a time to be named, in default of which the sureties may be discharged. Vermilya v. Bunce, 61 Iowa 605, 16 N. W. 735.

is on him to show that the guardian was not in default when the release was made.¹²

(II) PROCEEDINGS FOR RELEASE. Sureties can be released only in the manner prescribed by statute.¹³ While the better form of application for discharge is by filing a petition,¹⁴ a discharge on motion in open court is not void where the guardian voluntarily appears and gives a new bond.¹⁵ The order of discharge may be corrected by bill of review.¹⁶

g. By Release of Cosurety. If the ward, on coming of age, releases one of several sureties in the guardian's bond, it operates to release the cosureties;¹⁷ and the rule is the same where a new guardian releases one of several sureties on his predecessor's bond.¹⁸ The rule has been held to apply where the court releases one of several sureties,¹⁹ if the cosureties do not consent thereto.²⁰ If additional security has been required, a subsequent release of the original sureties does not work a release of the sureties on the new bond;²¹ nor are the original sureties released by operation of law by a subsequent release of the additional sureties.²²

C. 475, holding that where at the time of the release the guardian owed his ward and never afterward returned an account nor made a payment, no presumption of satisfaction at that or any subsequent time arises from the fact that he was then able to pay the sum he owed. Contra, Bryant v. Owen, 1 Ga. 355.

Merritt*, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 367 (holding that if the principal and surety go before the county judge and express a desire to have the surety released from further liability, and the judge makes an order accepting a new bond and releasing the surety, this dispenses with written notice); Dowell v. Guiou, 6 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 634, 7 Am. L. Rec. 273.

The motion need not be made by the surety; it is sufficient if made with his knowledge and consent by the guardian. Black v. Merritt, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 367.

Conditions precedent to release.—It is error to discharge old sureties before the new bond has been approved. Miller v. Miller, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 382, 53 S. W. 362. And see Johnson v. Johnson, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 240; Reed v. Duncan, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1900) 59 S. W. 402. But neither an accounting (Hall v. Hall, 45 S. C. 166, 22 S. E. 818; Gilliam v. McJunkin, 2 S. C. 442) nor a revocation of the letters of guardianship (Hall v. Hall, supra) is necessary before discharging a surety.

The ordinary must act as a court in releasing a surety. His act merely as obligee in the bond in erasing the name of a surety for the purpose of discharging him is void. Hill v. Calvert, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. C.) 56.

h. By Release of Co-Guardian. Where two joint guardians execute a joint and several bond, a release of one of them does not discharge the sureties as to the other.²³

i. By Release of Guardian as to One of Several Wards. The release of a guardian as to one of several wards secured by the same bond does not discharge the sureties as to the other wards.²⁴

j. By Resignation or Removal of Guardian. The sureties' liability, so far as future defaults are concerned, terminates on removal of the guardian, and the court has no power at a subsequent term to rescind the order of removal and permit the guardian to stand on his former bond.²⁵ The removal or resignation of a guardian does not relieve the sureties from liability from past defaults, however;²⁶ nor does the guardian's removal or resignation and subsequent settlement with his successor or a guardian ad litem.²⁷

k. By Settlement With Ward.²⁸ A full and fair settlement made by a guardian or his sureties with the ward after he becomes of age discharges the bond.²⁹ If State*, 80 Ind. 350 (holding that a guardian who resigns and obtains a reappointment in another county, where he gives bond and charges himself with the sums which had come into his hands under his first appointment, does not thereby discharge his first bondsmen from liability for a previous defalcation); Penn v. McBride, 1 Ohio Cir. Ct. 285, 1 Ohio Cir. Dec. 157 (holding that where a guardian after giving bond receives money belonging to his ward, which he converts, and then resigns the guardianship and removes to another state, where he is reappointed, the fact that before such second appointment he is selected by his ward as his guardian does not release the sureties from liability on the first bond); Bellune v. Wallace, 2 Rich. (S. C.) 80 (in which it is said that where letters of guardianship are revoked, and the same person reappointed, giving new bond and security, the old sureties still remain liable for any defalcation which existed before the letters were revoked).

A receipt by a ward acquitting the guardian of all claims against him does not release the sureties unless the funds due the ward are actually received by him. Griffin v. Collins, 122 Ga. 102, 49 S. E. 827; Meier v. Herancourt, 6 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 1164, 11 Am. L. Rec. 46. See also People v. Borders, 31 Ill. App. 426; Bowers v. State, 7 Harr. & J. (Md.) 32.

The guardian's acceptance of an order drawn on him by the ward in favor of a third person does not discharge sureties until paid. Bond v. Ray, 5 Humphr. (Tenn.) 492.

Acceptance of guardian's individual obligation in payment.—If the ward accepts the guardian's individual note (Price v. Barnes, (Ind. App. 1892) 31 N. E. 809. Contra, Bowers v. State, 7 Harr. & J. (Md.) 32) or bond (Ledford v. Vandyke, 44 N. C. 480; Clark v. Cordon, 30 N. C. 179) in payment of the balance found due on a settlement, it discharges the sureties, but it must appear the settlement is procured by fraud of the guardian the ward may repudiate it within a reasonable time,³⁰ in which case the liability of the sureties remains.³¹

2. SURETIES ON SPECIAL SALE BOND. The sureties on a special sale bond are not discharged by a change in the terms of sale made by the court in the exercise of a lawful discretion;³² nor by the fact that the guardian produces the proceeds in court and then withdraws them by order of court;³³ nor by the fact that the sureties purchase at the sale and pay the price to the guardian;³⁴ nor by the fact that the sale, being voidable, is ratified by the ward on coming of age.³⁵ The sureties may be released by the court on the giving of a new or additional bond the same as the sureties on the general bond.³⁶

D. Conclusiveness of Judgments, Settlements, and Reports in Favor of or Against Sureties³⁷—1. IN GENERAL. A judgment establishing the liability of the ward's estate for taxes in a suit by the guardian to restrain their collection is conclusive against the sureties in a subsequent action on the bond to collect the taxes;³⁸ but the allowance of a claim of the ward against the estate of a deceased guardian does not bind the sureties where they were not parties to the proceeding.³⁹ A finding on an application for the removal of a trustee that he had received funds as trustee from himself as guardian is not conclusive on the ward in an action on the bond given by him as guardian for conversion of the funds as guardian;⁴⁰ but where the taking of a new bond is a jurisdictional fact which is necessary to appear in order to give validity to the discharge of that the obligation was given and received in full satisfaction (Hamlin v. Atkinson, 6 Rand. (Va.) 574).

Acceptance of notes representing assets.—Acceptance by a ward, after he is of age, of promissory notes which the guardian had not collected and was therefore liable to pay is not a good plea to an action on the guardian's bond unless they are collected. Com. v. Miller, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 205.

Discharge of duty of surety to pay taxes.—Under Md. Code, art. 81, § 65, which provides that guardians shall pay all taxes on property in their hands as such, the sureties on the bond of a non-resident ward conditioned for the performance of his duties are liable for taxes assessed against the ward's property after he became of age, but before the guardian stated a final account to the orphans' court and delivered the property to the ward, although before the commencement of the suit against the sureties to enforce the collection of the taxes the guardian stated a final account in the orphans' court and delivered all the property to the ward, who executed a release to him. Baldwin v. State, 89 Md. 587, 43 Atl. 857.

St. Rep. 435 [affirming 63 Hun 413, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 685]; Kirby v. Taylor, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 242, all holding that the ward must repudiate the settlement within a reasonable time. Smith v. McKee, 67 Iowa 161, 25 N. W. 103.

Estoppel of ward.—Where a guardian obtains a receipt in full from the ward by fraud and by means of it obtains a final discharge from his guardianship on ex parte hearing, although he has never paid the ward, and then procures from the surety a release of a mortgage which he had given the surety as indemnity, the surety looking only to the court record and making no inquiry of the ward, the ward is not estopped to assert the surety's liability. Nor can the principle be invoked against the ward that where one of two innocent persons must suffer by the fraud of a third, he who put it in the power of the third person to commit the fraud must bear the loss. Gillett v. Wiley, 126 Ill. 310, 19 N. E. 287, 9 Am. St. Rep. 587. And see People v. Borders, 31 Ill. App. 426; State v. Branch, 112 Mo. 661, 20 S. W. 693.

the sureties, a recital in the order that such bond was given is conclusive in their favor.⁴¹

2. SETTLEMENTS AND REPORTS AND ORDERS THEREON. In the absence of fraud or mistake⁴² a final judicial settlement by a guardian is in most states conclusive on the sureties as to the existence and amount of the guardian's liability to the ward,⁴³ even where the sureties were not made parties to the proceeding⁴⁴ or notified thereof.⁴⁵ A final settlement is also conclusive in favor of the sureties as to all matters embraced in the adjudication,⁴⁶ in the absence of fraud.⁴⁷ Current reports and settlements by the guardian are not conclusive either in favor of or against his sureties.⁴⁸

In any event the adjudication is prima facie evidence against the sureties. May v. May, 19 Fla. 373; Fuselier v. Babineau, 14 La. Ann. 764; Moore v. Alexander, 96 N. C. 34, 1 S. E. 536. And see State v. Rosswag, 3 Mo. App. 11.

A settlement which is invalid for failure to comply with statutory requisites is not conclusive. State v. Hoster, 61 Mo. 544.

Settlement by administrator of deceased guardian.—A settlement by the administrator of a deceased curator of minors with the successor of a deceased curator does not conclude the sureties of the curator in an action by the successor of the curator against his bondsmen. State v. Berger, 92 Mo. App. 631. It is only prima facie evidence of the liability of the sureties. State v. Martin, 18 Mo. App. 468.

Latent ambiguities.—Even if an adjudication on the guardian's accounting be regarded as conclusive, a latent ambiguity in the account may be shown in order to show that the liability incurred was chargeable to a different bond than the one in suit. Lyman v. Conkey, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 317.

They are not prima facie evidence in the guardian's favor (State v. Roeper, 82 Mo. 57 [affirming 9 Mo. App. 21]), but are evidence against him (State v. Booth, 9 Mo.

E. Summary Remedies. The proper mode of proceeding against the sureties on a guardian's bond is by action; summary proceedings on the bond are not as a rule allowed.⁴⁹

F. Actions—1. JURISDICTION.⁵⁰ As a general rule jurisdiction of actions on guardians' bonds is vested in courts of law of ordinary jurisdiction.⁵¹ Courts of probate have no jurisdiction over such actions,⁵² and statutes assuming to confer such jurisdiction on probate courts are inoperative where the constitution enumerates the subjects of which probate courts have jurisdiction, and jurisdiction of actions on guardians' bonds is not one of the subjects so enumerated.⁵³ So courts of equity may have no jurisdiction where the remedy at law is adequate,⁵⁴ and consent of counsel cannot confer jurisdiction.⁵⁵ Nevertheless courts of equity have jurisdiction where the remedy in other courts is ineffectual.⁵⁶

2. CONDITIONS PRECEDENT— a. To Actions on General Guardianship Bonds—

(1) ACCOUNTING AND SETTLEMENT—(A) View that Accounting and Settlement Unnecessary. There is considerable diversity of opinion as to the necessity of App. 583; State v. Engelke, 6 Mo. App. 356).

49. Smith v. Jackson, 56 Ala. 25 (holding that on final settlement of a guardian's accounts, the decree should be rendered against a guardian alone, and not against him and the sureties on his bond); Rhodes v. Robie, 9 App. Cas. (D. C.) 305 (holding that the supreme court holding an orphans' court is without power, in a proceeding for the settlement of the accounts of a guardian, to require the sureties on the bonds of the guardian, who are not parties to the proceeding, to pay into court their respective proportions of an amount found to be due from the guardian to his wards); Whiddon v. Williams, 98 Ga. 310, 24 S. E. 437 (holding that on determining a petition by an administrator to marshal the assets of the estate, it is not proper to render a judgment in favor of the guardian of minors of whom intestate had formerly been guardian, or of the ordinary to whom intestate's bond as guardian was payable, against a living surety on that bond, or the executrix of a deceased surety thereon, either individually or as executrix). And see Schlee v. Darrow, 65 Mich. 362, 32 N. W. 717; Landon v. Comet, 62 Mich. 80, 28 N. W. 788.

In Maryland, however, the surety on a guardianship bond being dead, his personal estate and a portion of his real estate having been exhausted in the payment of his debts, and the residue of his real estate having been sold in a cause pending in court, and the proceeds being in the hands of the trustee, the wards may, if the guardian be insolvent, interpose by petition in a summary way to have their claims against the guardian satisfied out of the fund. Griffith v. Parks, 32 Md. 1.

Territorial jurisdiction.—On termination of the guardianship the ward may sue on the guardian's bond in the county of his residence, although he was appointed in another county and had not been formally discharged by the court of that county. Carpenter v. Solomon, (Tex. App. 1889) 14 S. W. 1074.

Suit for accounting and to establish liability of sureties.—A court of equity has jurisdiction of an action against the legal representatives of a deceased guardian and his sureties for settlement of a guardian's account and to establish the liability of the sureties for the amount due the ward. May v. May, 19 Fla. 373. To the same effect see Cuddeback v. Kent, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 92.

When a guardian fails to make a settlement and pay over money due the infant, and is insolvent and has left the state, the infant may maintain an action in equity by his next friend against the guardian and his sureties. Clements v. Ramsey, 4 S. W. 311, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 172.

An infant may file a bill of review to correct an error of fact in a decree rendered on his bill against the guardian and sureties for an accounting. McCown v. Moores, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 635.

Where the bond was destroyed and the guardian and one of the sureties were insolvent, the ward may sue in equity for an accounting and to enjoin the other surety from making a threatened fraudulent conveyance an accounting and settlement by a guardian as a condition precedent to an action at law on his bond. In many jurisdictions it is held that no accounting and settlement is necessary before bringing an action on the bond for a breach of its conditions.⁵⁷ The damages may be ascertained in a suit on the bond.⁵⁸ The rule applies notwithstanding the death of the guardian. Suit may be maintained on the bond against his administrator and sureties without a decree settling the amount due the ward.⁵⁹

(B) View that Accounting and Settlement Is Necessary—(1) THE GENERAL RULE AND ITS APPLICATION. According to the weight of authority there must be an accounting and settlement by the guardian before an action at law may be brought on the bond;⁶⁰ and in a considerable number of cases it is held that such an accounting and settlement is a necessary prerequisite to an action to charge of his property. Henderson v. Turner, 36 Ga. 263.

Tennessee.—Foster v. Maxey, 6 Yerg. 224; Franklin County v. Willis, 3 Yerg. 461.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 630.

The rule is not changed by statutes requiring executors and administrators to make a final settlement after two years from the publication of notice of the grant of letters, and providing that if a guardian fails to pay the ward money ordered on final settlement, the same proceedings may be had against him and his sureties as against an executor or administrator who fails to pay. State v. Slevin, 93 Mo. 253, 6 S. W. 68, 3 Am. St. Rep. 526; State v. Berger, 92 Mo. App. 631.

Failure to pay succeeding guardian.—In order to sue the sureties on a guardian's bond for his failure to deliver his ward's property to a subsequent guardian, it is not necessary to obtain an order of the probate court directing such delivery, or establishing the amount of the guardian's indebtedness. Burrus v. Thomas, 13 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 459.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Guardian and Ward," § 630.

In Georgia to a suit on a guardian's bond against the guardian alone a judgment or decree against the guardian in his representative capacity is not a condition precedent. Ragland v. Justices Inferior Ct., 10 Ga. 65. But the rule is otherwise where it is sought to charge the sureties. Forrester v. Vason, 71 Ga. 49; Justices Burke County Inferior Ct. v. Sloan, 7 Ga. 31; Ray v. Justices Macon County Inferior Ct., 6 Ga. 303.

Where the settlement of a guardian shows a balance due from him, this fixes no liability where there has been no final settlement of his accounts as guardian, or an order of court having jurisdiction requiring the guardian to pay the balance. Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Schelper, (Tex. Civ. App. 1904) 83 S. W. 871.

Heirs of a deceased minor cannot maintain an action against his guardian, and sureties, to recover money coming into the hands of the sureties on the bond.⁶¹ It is probable, however, that the courts in such cases had no intention to limit the application of the rule to the liability of the sureties alone.⁶² The general rule is based on the theory that the policy of the law is to hold the remedy on the official bond in a court of law, subject to the action of the tribunal established to adjust the accounts of the party who by his default is alleged to have forfeited his bond.⁶³ The rule applies notwithstanding the death of the guardian, in which case the accounting must be made by his personal representative.⁶⁴ The death of the guardian does not take the case out of the general rule.⁶⁵ So it has been held that the fact that a delinquent guardian, whose duty to his ward has not been ascertained by the proper court, is absent from the state and his residence unknown, does not authorize a suit on his bond without an accounting or an attempt to compel an accounting by citation,⁶⁶ and where a statute declares that an action shall be deemed pending from commencement until time for appeal has expired, no action can be maintained on a guardian's bond before expiration of the time within which appeal might be taken from an order settling his accounts.⁶⁷

(2) EXCEPTIONS TO RULE. Notwithstanding the general rule requires an accounting and settlement as a prerequisite to an action on the bond, there are special circumstances under which such accounting and settlement may be dispensed with. It is not necessary where the extent of the surety's liability has been otherwise as definitely determined as it could be by accounting.⁶⁸ And such administrator and guardian by virtue of his guardianship, until there has been a settlement of his accounts as such guardian. Crain v. Vincent, 32 S. W. 759, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 1026.

When the same person is executor of a will and guardian of a minor to whom a legacy is given by the will, he holds the amount of the legacy in his capacity of executor, and not as guardian, until he settles an account of his administration in the probate court, crediting himself as executor with the legacy, and charging himself therewith as guardian. Until such account is allowed by a decree of the probate court, an action cannot be maintained against him and his sureties on his guardianship bonds for neglect to pay the legacy; but an action may be maintained against him and his sureties on the bond given by him as executor. Conkey v. Dickinson, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 51.

Strang*, 42 Iowa 643, in which it is said that ordinarily it cannot be known what allowance for expenditures and for compensation for services will be made, until the accounting is had, and that in consequence it cannot be fairly said that the guardian is in fault in not paying over the money or property in his hands, until the amount to be paid is thus ascertained.

Illustrations.—Failure of a guardian to appear on the return-day of a petition and order to render an account of funds received amounts to an admission of the truth of the petition, that he converted the trust funds, and under such circumstances an accounting is not a prerequisite to a suit on the bond. Center v. Finch, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 146.

where an accounting is impossible or impracticable an action lies to establish the extent of the liability of the sureties.⁶⁹ So it has been held that where the action asks that a settlement and release obtained by the guardian be set aside for fraud, and for an accounting and judgment against the administrator of the sureties on the guardian's bond, an accounting in the probate court is not necessary to enable plaintiff to maintain the action.⁷⁰

(ii) PRIOR ACTION AGAINST GUARDIAN TO ESTABLISH DEVASTAVIT. A separate action against the principal and a judgment establishing a devastavit has been held unnecessary before bringing an action at law on the bond⁷¹ or a suit in equity thereon,⁷² especially where the principal has permanently left the state without making a settlement, and there is no one against whom suit may be brought except the sureties.⁷³

(iii) RETURN OF EXECUTION AGAINST GUARDIAN UNSATISFIED. Before the sureties of a deceased guardian can be sued by his successor to recover a balance found due on an account, it is not necessary that an execution be issued on the surrogate's decree and returned unsatisfied.⁷⁴

(iv) DEMAND. According to the weight of authority no demand is necessary

Plaintiff is asking that the settlement and release be set aside for and on the part of these bondsmen,—a subject peculiarly cognizable in equity."

49; Justices Burke County Inferior Ct. v. Sloan, 7 Ga. 31, holding that the sureties are not liable to suit at law on the bond until plaintiff has first established his demand against their principal in his representative character, by suit and judgment or decree of a court of competent jurisdiction.

Upon the death of the principal in a guardianship bond, the trust is thereby terminated, and the sureties become liable for the amount of money in the guardian's hands, belonging to the ward, at the time of his death; and it is not necessary that the ward should first resort to a suit against the legal representatives of the guardian. State v. Thorn, 28 Ind. 306.

Statutes going into effect after bond given.—The fact that a statute authorizing suit against the sureties, without first establishing a devastavit of the principal, went into effect after the bond was executed, does not render it inoperative as to the liability of the sureties on such bond, since the statute merely changes the remedy. Winslow v. People, 117 Ill. 152, 7 N. E. 135 [affirming 17 Ill. App. 222].

Proc. § 2607, which authorizes an action on the surrogate's decree against property of the general guardian after execution, and section 2606, providing that where a guardian dies the surrogate may compel his executor or administrator to account in the same manner as if the letters of the guardian had been revoked, and that the decree on such accounting shall have the same effect as if an execution issued upon the surrogate's decree had been returned unsatisfied); Allen v. Kelly, 55 N. Y. App. Div. 454, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 97.

as a condition precedent in an action on a guardian's bond, either for the purpose of fixing the liability of the guardian, his sureties, or the heirs or personal representatives of either the guardian or sureties.⁷⁵ So in order to hold the sureties, it is not necessary to notify them of the guardian's failure to pay over money due the ward,⁷⁶ or that he has been dishonest in making a final settlement.⁷⁷ If they neglect to see that their principal discharges his duties it is at their peril.⁷⁸

(v) LEAVE OF COURT TO SUE. Statutes providing for obtaining leave of court before suing on the bond should be reasonably construed,⁷⁹ and should not be so construed as to require a ward to obtain leave prior to suing, after he becomes of age, on a bond running to him by name;⁸⁰ and it has been held that statutes authorizing prosecution of a suit on a guardian's bond by direction of the chancellor do not make leave to sue on the bond necessary.⁸¹ When necessary to obtain leave to sue, the suit will be dismissed if no proof is given of the court's assent to sue, providing the objection is seasonably taken.⁸²

(vi) ALLOWANCE OF TIME TO COMPLY WITH ORDER OF PAYMENT. A rule of court allowing a guardian a designated time within which to comply with the final order requiring him to pay to his ward a specified sum found to be due her on an accounting, before action may be begun on his bond, does not apply where he declares that he will not pay it at all.⁸³

(vii) REMOVAL OF GUARDIAN. While an infant ward cannot maintain a suit on the guardian's bond until his removal,⁸⁴ a ward who has arrived at majority may sue his guardian on his bond without first obtaining his removal; the guardianship terminates on the ward's reaching majority.⁸⁵

b. To Actions on Special Sale Bonds. Before an action at law may be maintained against the sureties of a special guardian in proceedings to sell the unpaid real estate the guardian must be called to account and ordered to pay over by a court of competent jurisdiction,⁸⁶ unless it appears that an accounting cannot possibly change the facts upon which the liability of the surety depends. Sprague*, 3 R. I. 205.

Questions considered on application for leave to sue.—Upon an application for leave to sue on a guardian's bond, a probate court cannot pass upon the merits of the controversy which may arise upon the prosecution of the bond, or fix the liability of either principal or surety therein, and an order so doing is void to that extent. *Schlee v. these circumstances no accounting is necessary.⁸⁷ Where a bond for the sale of an infant's property is an independent undertaking, suit may be instituted on it whenever it is broken without first resorting to the original bond;⁸⁸ and such action may be maintained without a previous demand for the money due.⁸⁹ Where, however, such bond is not primary in its character, but merely auxiliary, no suit can be maintained on it until the penalty of the original bond is exhausted.⁹⁰

3. DEFENSES — a. In General. Since the equities of the surety on the guardian's bond are wholly derivative, he can make only the same defenses to the ward's action that his principal would be able to make.⁹¹ It is not a defense to an action on a bond that the ward consented and coöperated with the guardian in squandering the estate;⁹² nor that there is a fraudulent agreement by the guardian with the ward made while he was under age by which he accepted less than he was entitled to;⁹³ nor that the guardian's administrator wasted the estate;⁹⁴ nor that the county court neglected to compel the guardian to render an inventory and make annual settlements;⁹⁵ nor that the accounts of a guardian had been filed and were pending on exceptions;⁹⁶ nor that the guardian has charged himself with funds received by him as administrator and not as guardian, there being no collusion between the guardian and his ward;⁹⁷ nor that the value of personal property illegally sold by the guardian, and the proceeds of which were converted by him, was restored to the ward by the purchaser;⁹⁸ nor in an action brought in the name of the state, that the ward was a minor;⁹⁹ nor in a suit by one of several wards that one of the wards died before breach of the bond;¹ nor that premiums paid on an insurance policy, unaccounted for in the guardian's hands, were paid by the guardian in fraud of his creditors, one of whom was a surety on the bond.² So where the sureties on a guardian's bond have been rendered liable to the ward by the failure of the guardian who was also an administrator of the estate of his ward's deceased prior guardian, to collect a judgment against decedent in favor of the ward, the fact that the sureties on the administration bond are solvent, and that the ward can collect the amount of the debt from them, does not affect his right to collect the full amount of the debt from the sureties.³ It is also no defense to an action on the bond by the conversion of the proceeds of a sale of the ward's property that it was void and passed no title to the purchasers;⁴ nor can the sureties question the validity of a sale of the ward's property on the ground that the report thereof was prematurely made,⁵ or that the report was untrue, and that there was only a colorable sale by which other lands were conveyed to the ward as an offset for the lands fraudulently represented to have been sold.⁶ On the other hand it is a complete defense that the guardian paid out the entire trust funds according to orders of a court of competent jurisdiction,⁷ and the sureties may show in defense that the guardian refused to claim credits to which he was entitled.⁸ So it has been held a good defense that the guardian and ward, by agreement, without the surety's knowledge or consent, invested the ward's funds in their private business, whereby they were lost, since such an agreement, although presumptively fraudulent as between the parties, is merely voidable, and would change the principal's liability, and its invalidity would be matter for replication.⁹

b. Estoppel.¹⁰ Both the principal and sureties on a guardian's bond are estopped to deny the recitals therein.¹¹ A recital in a guardian's bond of his appointment estops both the guardian and surety to deny it,¹² and they cannot question the jurisdiction of the court, under the proceedings of which the guardian by the bond was enabled to obtain possession of the ward's money.¹³

Allowance for support and maintenance.—In an action on the guardian's bond, his surety may avail himself of the guardian's right to claim credit for the board and maintenance of the ward, if the circumstances would have authorized an allowance therefor in the probate court (State v. Miller, 44 Mo. App. 118); and no credit can be allowed for board and maintenance furnished by the guardian, without any intention of charging therefor (State v. Miller, 44 Mo. App. 118); nor if the guardian is appointed expressly on his agreement not to charge for the support of the ward (State v. Baker, 8 Md. 44. And see Allen v. Stovall, 94 Tex. 618, 63 S. W. 863, 64 S. W. 777 [reversing (Civ. App. 1901) 62 S. W. 871]).

Part payment of judgment against ward.—Where a decree obtained by a guardian in a suit in which the sureties were not made parties has not been entirely satisfied, the sureties will be entitled to credit for so much as he may have paid thereon. Sanders v. Forgasson, 3 Baxt. (Tenn.) 249.

Compensation.—Sureties made liable by a guardian on his bond are entitled to his compensation as settled by the county court, as a credit on their liabilities (Sanders v. Forgasson, 3 Baxt. (Tenn.) 249), but cannot set off a claim for services performed by the guardian, where he has forfeited his right to compensation by misconduct (State v. Stockwell, 28 Ind. App. 530, 63 N. E. 321).

If the guardian has converted a portion of the proceeds of a ward's property, to the extent of the conversion no credit can be allowed for amounts paid out for the benefit of the ward and his estate. Maryland Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Schelper, (Tex. Civ. App. 1904) 83 S. W. 871.

Attorney's fees.—A surety on a guardian's bond is not entitled to credit for attorney's fees for making the report after the guardian's death, nor for costs of the guardian's personal suit on a liquor dealer's bond. Freedman v. Vallie, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 75 S. W. 322.

when the statute of limitations commences to run against actions on guardians' bonds. This is due in some degree to a difference in the provisions of the statute, but not altogether, since statutes, provisions of which are similar or identical, have received widely divergent construction.²⁰

(B) *Final Accounting and Settlement.*²¹ In many jurisdictions the period at which the statute of limitations commences to run against rights of action on guardians' bonds is from a final accounting and settlement of the guardian;²² and it has been held that this is so, notwithstanding the ward has the right to treat the guardians' failure to settle and pay over as a breach of the bond, and bring suit immediately,²³ and that the action will not be barred by laches or the statute of limitations by reason of delay in compelling a settlement, unless prejudice has resulted.²⁴

(C) *Majority or Marriage of Ward.*²⁵ In a number of jurisdictions it has been held that the statute of limitations commences to run against actions on guardians' bonds from the majority of the ward,²⁶ and not from the accounting

Effect of removal of guardian from state.—An action against the surety on a guardian's bond for conversion of the ward's funds is not barred by failure to sue on the bond on the removal of the guardian from the state, as may be done at once in such case under Ind. Rev. St. (1881) § 2525, as the duty to pay over the funds still continued until the ward attained his majority, when the cause of action sued on accrued. Peele v. State, 118 Ind. 512, 21 N. E. 288.

The statute does not begin to run until termination of the trust by the majority of the ward.—The fact that cause for removal existed, or an earlier termination by removal does not set the statute in motion. This would be giving the guardian the advantage of his own wrong. Minter v. Clark, 92 Tenn. 459, 22 S. W. 73.

Removal of guardian from trust.—A cause of action accrued to wards, who were minors, upon their first guardian's bond, at the time of the appointment of their second guardian.

and final settlement by the guardian.²⁷ And in others the sureties will be discharged from liability if action is not brought on the bond within a designated time after the ward reaches majority.²⁸ These decisions proceed on the principle that after the ward reaches majority he stands in the relation of creditor to the guardian and that his cause of action is then complete.²⁹ If, however, there are several wards the statute does not commence to run until the youngest is of age,³⁰ but the action will be barred unless brought within the statutory period after the youngest ward reaches majority.³¹ It has also been held that a right of action for accounting accrues to a female ward on her marriage with an adult capable of suing to enforce her rights against the guardian and sureties even before she becomes of age and that the statute of limitations commences to run from that period.³²

(D) "Discharge" of Guardian. The statutes in a number of jurisdictions provide that no action shall be maintained against the sureties upon a guardian's bond, unless commenced within a designated period after his "discharge."³³ The object of these statutes is to fix a time certain for the benefit of the sureties so that they may know definitely when their obligations as sureties will terminate.³⁴ These statutes, it has been held, are for the benefit of the sureties only, and not the principal;³⁵ and the limitation therein provided enters into and forms a part of the surety's contract.³⁶ These statutes apply, notwithstanding the discharge of the guardian before they go into effect,³⁷ and they apply to sale bonds as well as to general guardianship bonds.³⁸ Under these statutes the period of limitation does not date from the time when the right of action has

It was held that the wards were not barred by the fact that their second guardian was barred, unless three years had elapsed after the removal of the disability before they sued. State v. Parker, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 495.

Effect of proviso excepting continuing trusts.—Statutes under which suit on a guardian's bond must be brought within a designated time after the ward's majority are not affected by a proviso in the chapter on limitations in which such statutes are found that such chapter shall not apply "in the case of a continuing or subsisting trust." Blake v. Wolfe, 105 Ky. 380, 49 S. W. 19, 50 S. W. 2, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1212, 1830.

Under the North Carolina statutes, if the guardian makes no final settlement the statute commences to run against a right of action on the bond, against the sureties, from the time the ward reaches majority (Self v. Shugart, 135 N. C. 185, 47 S. E. 484; Kennedy v. Cromwell, 108 N. C. 1, 13 S. E. 135;

C. 271), and the period of limitation is three years (Norman v. Walker, 101 N. C. 24, 7 S. E. 468; Hodges v. Council, 86 N. C. 181). In Johnson v. Taylor, 8 N. C. 27, it was said that the proper construction of the act of 1795, c. 15, is, that it is incumbent on an infant, after arriving at full age, not only to "call on his guardian for a full settlement," but to have a final adjustment of all accounts, matters and things, with his guardian, within three years; and either sue for any balance which may be due him, or notify the securities to the guardian bond of the situation in which he stands to the guardian. Without such conduct on the part of the infant, the securities are discharged.

accrued, but from the time of the "discharge" of the guardian;³⁹ and if no cause of action accrues within such time, by reason of failure to take the necessary steps to procure a settlement, the sureties are exonerated.⁴⁰ While the decisions are not entirely harmonious, the weight of authority is that the word "discharged" as used in the statutes means any mode by which the guardianship is effectually determined and brought to a close,⁴¹ either by removal, resignation,⁴² or death of the guardian,⁴³ marriage of a female ward,⁴⁴ or death⁴⁵ or majority of the ward,⁴⁶ and not from a final settlement or any other period or transaction.⁴⁷ There are, however, as already intimated, decisions under statutes of this character which are directly in conflict with the doctrine stated, and it has been held that limitations in actions against the guardian and his sureties on the bond do not commence to run from the date of the ward's death or majority, but only from his discharge by order of court.⁴⁸ There is, however, no question that the statute commences to run from that period.⁴⁹

(E) Demand For and Refusal of Accounting. Under the statutes of one state if there is a demand for and refusal to account both principal and sureties are absolved from liability where action is not brought on the bond within a designated time thereafter.⁵⁰

Although a cause of action on a bond may not accrue until after final accounting, this does not place the administrator of a deceased ward under a disability from the time of his death until accounting, these statutes limiting actions against a guardian's sureties to three years from the discharge of the guardian, unless the person entitled to bring the action is under a legal disability to sue. Berkin v. Marsh, 18 Mont. 152, 44 Pac. 528, 56 Am. St. Rep. 565.

Effect of saving clause as to non-residence. — A further provision in statutes of the character under consideration that "if at the time of such discharge the person entitled to bring such action is out of the Commonwealth, the action may be commenced at any time within four years after his return" does not apply to a case where an administrator of the estate of a ward is not appointed until more than four years after his death. *McKim v. at law on such bonds.⁵² While the courts may for equitable reasons adopt a shorter period of limitations, this will be done only when equity demands it.⁵³ It has also been held in one jurisdiction that even in a court of law an action on a guardian's bond may be barred by laches, irrespective of any statute of limitations.⁵⁴

6. PARTIES⁵⁵ — a. Plaintiffs. If, as is usually the case, the state, the probate court, or a judge or other officer is the obligee on a guardian's bond, an action at law on the bond should be brought in the name of the state⁵⁶ or of the court, or judge, or other officer, for the use of the beneficiaries,⁵⁷ and it will be sufficient if it appears in the declaration, although not in the writ, for whose use the action is brought.⁵⁸ Such action is properly brought at the relation of the ward if he has reached majority,⁵⁹ and if he is dead, the action should be brought at the relation of the personal representatives, and not the heirs.⁶⁰ If the ward has not reached majority, the successors of the guardian whose bond is sued on are the proper relators.⁶¹ If the ward's interest in an estate in the hands of his guardian has been assigned, the assignee and not the infant is the proper relator.⁶² A creditor of the ward is a proper relator,⁶³ but a creditor of the guardian is

Suits in equity.—The state, although nominally the obligee, is not a necessary party to a suit on the guardian's bond. Equity disregards merely useless forms and requires only those to be made parties who have some concern in the litigation, or whose presence is required to do complete justice between the parties. *Patty v. b. Defendants. Ordinarily the guardian is a necessary party to any suit against the sureties,⁷² but it has been held that a non-resident guardian need not be joined in a suit against the sureties;⁷³ nor need a guardian be made a party where it is provided by statute that his bond may be put in suit against "all or any one or more of the obligors."⁷⁴ So a bill in equity may be maintained against the sureties alone, without joining the personal representatives of a deceased guardian who has died insolvent,⁷⁵ especially when no representative has been appointed for his estate.⁷⁶ So a representative of a deceased guardian is not a necessary party to a bill against the sureties where a statute authorizes suit against one or more of several joint obligors;⁷⁷ but in the absence of such a statute the personal representatives of a deceased guardian are necessary parties if within the jurisdiction, and if the estate is not utterly worthless.⁷⁸ Sureties on the guardian's bond are proper parties in a bill in equity against the guardian to compel a settlement.⁷⁹ Under the statutes of some states suit on the bond may be brought against the guardian alone, without joining the sureties;⁸⁰ but the general rule is that in case of joint bonds all the obligees and obligors must be made parties to the suit.⁸¹ If some of the sureties are dead, their personal representative should be joined,⁸² unless the deceased surety is insolvent. This will be sufficient to excuse a joinder of his personal representative as a party.⁸³ The surety's heirs may be made parties where his estate has finally been administered and distributed, if it is sought to be reached by the bill.⁸⁴ So grantees of a deceased surety may be joined in the bill if it seeks to reach the property conveyed to him.⁸⁵ If a guardian of several wards gives separate bonds for each with different sureties on each bond, the sureties in the several bonds cannot be sued in one suit.⁸⁶ In an action on a sale bond against the guardian and the surety thereon the sureties on the general guardianship bond are not indispensable parties.⁸⁷

7. JOINDER OF CAUSES OF ACTION.⁸⁸ A cause of action on a bond may be joined with one to set aside a settlement of a guardian's accounts, providing the suit is brought in the court having control of such settlement.⁸⁹ So a suit against the guardian and his sureties for a settlement of the trust and to recover the amount found due on such settlement may properly be maintained to avoid a multiplicity of suits.⁹⁰ And it is not a misjoinder to allege conversion by the guardian of property belonging to the wards jointly and also of property belonging to one of the wards individually.⁹¹ If the legal effect of a bond is several, a separate suit may be maintained for the benefit of each ward,⁹² and a judgment in such action in favor of one ward is no bar to an action by the other.⁹³ Where an additional bond is given, its effect being merely to increase the security and not to provide the ward an additional cause of action, the ward may sue the sureties in one action as if all were embraced in one bond.⁹⁴ If a guardian of several wards gives a separate bond for each they cannot unite in one action.⁹⁵ On the Showing right of action in state.—As, by the provisions of the act of assembly in relation to suits on official bonds, judgment is to be given: (1) For the commonwealth in the amount of the obligation; and (2) for plaintiff for damage and costs, the declaration should assert a right of action in the commonwealth and an omission to do so renders it bad on demurrer. Pl. 362. Such was the course adopted here; and we think it is all that strict pleading requires."

6. State v. Carroll, 63 Mo. 156, in which it was held, however, that an allegation that defendant was appointed guardian in conformity to law, without stating the source from which the authority emanated, but alleging that he made settlement in a specified court having jurisdiction, and that the settlement was approved and plaintiff appointed guardian, sufficiently shows defendant's appointment.

7. Laswell v. Johnson, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 536, holding that it is not sufficient to allege that the bond executed by the obligors was duly proved.

In an action against the estate of a deceased obligor, it should be alleged not only that he executed the instrument, but that he was living when it was executed. If this be not alleged it is ground for special demurrer. Com. v. Pray, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 58.

8. See State v. Roche, 94 Ind. 372.

Complaint held to show approval.—A complaint which exhibits a copy of the bond with the clerk's approval thereof sufficiently shows that the bond is approved (State v. Roche, 94 Ind. 372); so a complaint alleging the appointment of a guardian sufficiently shows the approval of a bond, since qualification is a condition precedent to appointment (Schoenleber v. Burkhardt, 94 Wis. 575, 69 N. W. 343).

Date of approval.—In a statement or demand under the Pennsylvania statutes, it is sufficient to give the date of approval of a bond, although in a former declaration it seems that the date on the face of the instrument should be given. Com. v. Esterly, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. 1.

9. Clement v. Hughes, 13 S. W. 285, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 352 (holding that a complaint alleging execution of the bond set out in hæc verba sufficiently sets forth the covenants of the obligors); McKinnon v. McKinnon, 81 N. C. 201.

tainty.¹² The conditions of the bond which have been violated should be explicitly pointed out.¹³ Several breaches cannot be set forth in one assignment,¹⁴ but an assignment which in fact alleges but one breach, although possibly in a double form, is not bad on demurrer.¹⁵ The assignment of a breach is amendable.¹⁶

12. Com. v. Pray, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 58.

13. Burrus v. Thomas, 13 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 459 (holding that an assignment that the guardian "has wholly neglected and failed to perform the duty of guardian to his ward, according to law" is too general); Com. v. Pray, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 58.

Limitation of rule.—It has been held that an assignment of a breach in general terms is sufficient where the transaction includes a multiplicity of matter. Darland v. Mercer County Justices, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 523.

Mode and sufficiency of assigning particular breaches—Conversion.—An allegation that the guardian converted money to his own use need not show in what manner it was converted, and an allegation of conversion to his own use sufficiently shows the breach. Shook v. State, 53 Ind. 403. So it has been held that a complaint alleging that defendant, as guardian, received certain sums which he converted to his own use, sufficiently alleges that he received such sums after his appointment and qualification as guardian. Harness v. Turley, 143 Ind. 420, 42 N. E. 813. And where the declaration, in an action on a guardian's bond, alleges the retention of the ward's money by the guardian and its conversion by him, a violation of the bond is shown, whether or not a mere retention would be a conversion. Bonham v. People, 102 Ill. 434. But where the only allegation of the estate that came to the guardian's hands is that there came to his hands on a certain day three promissory notes of a certain value at that date, without showing that they were due or when they would become due, it is bad, although it is alleged in general terms, as a breach of the bond, that the guardian converted such assets to his own use and benefit. If the notes were not due the guardian cannot convert them to his use to the injury of the ward. Kidwell v. State, 45 Ind. 27.

Failure to account and pay over money.—A petition is not defective because it alleges that the curator had not accounted to the minors, whereas he was bound not to account to them but to his successor, since such allegation imports that there had been a failure to pay the money to the minors in the only way it could lawfully be done; that is, to the person entitled to receive the same. State v. Berger, 92 Mo. App. 631. So it is a sufficient averment of a breach, in a suit on the relation of one of the wards, that the guardian had been removed from the trust and had not accounted to them, or to any of them, for the money which had come to his hands (Moody v. State, 84 Ind. 433); and an allegation that the guardian never paid certain sums received by him to the wards, and that his personal representative had not paid the money or any portion thereof to the wards, or to any of them, sufficiently alleges a breach (Higgins v.

State, 87 Ind. 282. See also Zurfluh v. Smith, 135 Cal. 644, 67 Pac. 1089). So it has been held that where the condition of a bond is that the guardian should faithfully account to the court as directed by law, and the management of the property of the ward under his care, and deliver it up according to the order of court under the direction of law, a complaint alleging failure to account and non-payment of the money over to the ward, sufficiently alleges a breach. Trippie v. State, 46 Md. 512. On the other hand an allegation that defendant failed to account to the county court is fatally defective in the absence of an averment that he was required to do so, or of any statement from which it can be legally inferred that it was his duty to do so. People v. Steele, 7 Ill. App. 20. And an averment of the non-payment of assets to the new guardian does not allege a breach in the absence of any showing that a new guardian was legally appointed. Ordinary v. Hopler, (N. J. Sup. 1896) 36 Atl. 769.

Breach as to one guardian only.—In a suit against A and B on a joint guardian's bond for the sale of real estate, the complaint showed that they were separate guardians of separate heirs owning certain real estate as tenants in common; that A and B joined in a petition and obtained an order for the sale of the real estate of their respective wards; that A had made a sale, received the purchase-money, and failed to account for it or pay it over, and had been removed; and that the recital of the bond that they were joint guardians was a mistake. It was held, on demurrer by B, that the complaint was insufficient as to him. Hurlburt v. State, 71 Ind. 154.

Uncertainty in alleging a breach must be taken advantage of by motion and not by demurrer. Davis v. Long, 68 Ind. 104.

14. Ordinary v. Hopler, (N. J. Sup. 1896) 36 Atl. 769, holding that an assignment that several years before suit defendant received assets belonging to the ward and had filed no inventory is bad as alleging several breaches, the guardian being required to exhibit yearly accounts. But see Richardson v. State, 55 Ind. 381, holding that several distinct breaches of a guardian's bond may be joined in one paragraph of a complaint. No reason was stated for this holding.

15. Ordinary v. Wolfson, 65 N. J. L. 418, 47 Atl. 457. And see Hay v. State, 58 Ind. 337.

16. Voris v. State, 47 Ind. 345. In this case the complaint alleged that money came into the hands of the guardian, amounting to a sum specified, and that said sum, after the resignation of said guardian, remains due and unpaid. It was held amendable in the trial court by the insertion of the words "remain and" after the word "alleged."

(vi) PROFERT. Profert need not be made of a bond on file in the probate court,¹⁷ because it is no longer in the custody of plaintiffs.¹⁸

(vii) PERFORMANCE OF CONDITIONS PRECEDENT. The performance of all conditions precedent must be alleged.¹⁹

(viii) BRINGING CASE WITHIN EXCEPTIONS TO OPERATION OF STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. Averments that the guardian invested the ward's funds in land, sold the land, and converted the proceeds and afterward pretended that he had invested the proceeds in bonds—no order of the court having been obtained—show fraud and corrupt conduct on the guardian's part within the statute of limitations which excepts from its operation guardians who act fraudulently or corruptly.²⁰

(ix) ALLEGATIONS AS TO DAMAGES. Allegations showing what damages have been occasioned by the breach of the bond are necessary.²¹

(x) ALLEGATIONS PECULIAR TO SPECIAL SALE BONDS. Where a complaint on a guardian's bond alleges that it was given as an additional bond for Demand.—There is some conflict of authority as to the necessity of alleging demand. Thus it has been held that where a guardian has been removed he must pay over the money of the ward to his successor without demand and that in consequence no demand or averment thereof is necessary (Shook v. State, 53 Ind. 403); so in the same jurisdiction it has been held that, conceding that such an allegation is necessary, it is implied in an averment of failure, neglect or refusal to pay (Bernhamer v. Steeg, 10 Ind. App. 119, 37 N. E. 420); on the other hand it has been held that where the declaration alleges that certain money had come to the hands of the guardian which he had converted to his own use and refused to pay to plaintiff or the ward, although often requested so to do, no sufficient demand was alleged since it failed to show a demand by the person entitled to receive the money, together with the time and place of such demand (Case v. State, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 486, 10 West. L. J. 163).

Ascertainment of interest of person suing.—In an action on a bond, brought under a statute requiring an allegation that the interest of the person suing has been specifically ascertained by decree of the probate judge, a declaration omitting such averment may be amended. McFadden v. Hewett, 78 Me. 24, 1 Atl. 893.

Permission to sue.—It is ordinarily held that it is unnecessary to allege that permission to sue on the bond has been obtained from the probate judge, the view being taken that the obtaining of such permission is no part of plaintiff's cause of action, and an unnecessary averment that suit has been authorized by the probate court may be rejected as surplusage. McFadden v. Hewett, 78 Me. 24, 1 Atl. 893.

Return of execution against guardian unsatisfied.—Under a statute which provides that, where an execution issued on a surrogate's decree against the property of a guardian has been returned unsatisfied, suit may be brought on his official bond, a petition which fails to allege that execution had issued on the decree is fatally defective and will be dismissed (Allen v. Fahy, 30 Misc. (N. Y.) 377, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 1031); it has been held, however, that it is not necessary to allege the facts on which the judgment against the creditor was based (Vincent v. Starks, 45 Wis. 458).

Settlement of account on non-compliance with the decree.—Ordinarily, before an action can be maintained against the sureties on a guardian's bond, it must be alleged that an accounting had been made, a decree rendered in relation to the trust property, and a non-compliance by the guardian, because the sureties are not liable to the beneficiaries until a breach of the conditions of the bond (McDonald v. People, 29 Colo. 503, 69 Pac. 703; Laswell v. Johnson, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 536; Ball v. La Clair, 17 Nebr. 39); but a complaint alleging these facts sufficiently shows the establishment of the sureties' liability (Schoenleber v. Burkhardt, 94 Wis. 575, 69 N. W. 343); it has been held, however, that when facts are alleged from which it appears that there has been a breach of the conditions of the bond of a character which makes it necessary to resort to the bond in order to protect the interests of the wards, this will be sufficient, although it is not alleged that an accounting had been made by the guardian and an order rendered with which he did not comply. McDonald v. People, 29 Colo. 503, 69 Pac. 703. See also Gebhard v. Smith, 1 Colo. App. 342, 29 Pac. 303.

Insolvency of guardian.—To charge the sureties with liability on the bond it is not necessary to allege the insolvency of the guardian; such an allegation is necessary only where suit is required to be first brought against the party before an action can be brought against his sureties. Trippe v. State, 46 Md. 512.

20. Ordinary v. Smith, 55 Ga. 15.

21. People v. Steele, 7 Ill. App. 20. Compare Clancy v. Dickey, 9 N. C. 497, holding that in debts on a guardian's bond it is immaterial what damages are laid in the declaration and writ, if the damages assessed by the sale of land, and the bond itself recites merely that "if the above bound . . . who is guardian of the person and property of . . . minors . . . then the above obligation is to be void," etc., it sufficiently shows that the bond was given as an additional bond and was good for that purpose.²² Where approval of the bond should be shown it will be sufficient for this purpose to allege that the court ordered the sale.²³ It has been held that a direct averment that the property sold had been appraised was not necessary where it is alleged that an order for sale of the property was made.²⁴ In a suit to recover for money received on sale of the ward's land, and alleged to have been converted, it is not necessary to allege that the report of the sale was approved.²⁵ Nor is it necessary to show that the original bond on taking out letters of guardianship had been exhausted or that the sureties were worthless.²⁶

(XI) ALLEGATIONS IN SUITS BY WARD'S CREDITORS. Where, by statute, a creditor of the ward's estate may bring suit on the guardian's bond when his interests have been injuriously affected by the misconduct of the guardian, he may bring suit on the bond without alleging that his claim has been allowed by the court if the guardian has reported it as valid.²⁷ He can, however, recover only nominal damages where he fails to allege that he cannot collect his claim from the ward's estate.²⁸

b. Plea or Answer. In a suit on a guardian's bond the plea of performance has been held a good plea.²⁹ If the declaration assigns specific breaches, such plea should be equally specific.³⁰ If the plea professes to answer two breaches it is bad unless it sets up a good defense to both.³¹ If a settlement is pleaded it must be alleged that it was approved by the court.³² A plea that defendant had lent money which the declaration alleges was not paid over to the ward on reaching majority must show the loan was authorized by order of the court.³³ And an answer of sureties alleging that money not paid over was expended for the maintenance of the ward, and that the guardian wrongfully refused to claim an allowance of the support of the ward, is insufficient for failure to show any necessity for such use of the funds.³⁴ If the statute of limitations is relied on as a defense it must appear that the full period has elapsed,³⁵ and such plea cannot avail against a declaration which shows, although not specifically relying on it, that the the jury do not exceed the amount of the penalty; that the execution issues for the amount of the judgment but is indorsed to levy only the amount of damages for breach of conditions, together with costs.

24. Shook v. State, 53 Ind. 403, holding that it will be presumed, where the contrary does not appear, that all the necessary preliminary steps were properly taken.

25. Hudson v. State, 54 Ind. 378.

26. Shook v. State, 53 Ind. 403, these facts were not necessary to give a right of action on the bond.

32. Davis v. State, 68 Ind. 104.

Alleging conclusion of pleader.—An answer that the ward's property had been "properly" accounted for is a mere conclusion of the pleader; the answer should allege payment to the ward or that the property be accounted for to the proper court. State v. Stockwell, 28 Ind. App. 530, 62 N. E. 521.

Allegations of payment to the ward after majority or to others for his maintenance are insufficient, as it does not appear thereby what sums are actually paid to the ward, or that the guardian had the right to pay out his funds for maintenance. Peelle v. State, 118 Ind. 512, 21 N. E. 288. See also Stevenson v. State, 71 Ind. 52.

A plea that the guardian had accounted for his "doings" and for a certain note in the probate court is not a sufficient allegation that the note had become worthless because of the guardian's negligence. It cannot be inferred on the allegation that the guardian had accounted for the note that the court's attention was directed to the misconduct or want of care of the guardian whereby the note became worthless in his hands. Potter v. Hiseox, 30 Conn. 508.

33. Cottingham v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 405.

34. Myers v. State, 45 Ind. 160.

35. State v. Green, 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 381.

case is one which is excepted from the operation of the statute.³⁶ A plea that the condition, breach of which was alleged, had not damaged the ward, is bad because it neither denies the breach nor asserts that the breach has not damaged the ward,³⁷ and an answer which purports to be a complete bar to all the breaches assigned, but which omits to notice one of them, is bad on demurrer.³⁸ A plea that the guardian had paid out moneys for necessaries for the minors and was entitled to compensation out of the trust funds is not an affirmative defense, but merely a denial of the charge of conversion, and defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings is properly denied.³⁹

c. Replication. It has been held that in debt on a guardian's bond it is sufficient if the breaches are assigned in the replication, and that it is not error that the declaration is on the penalty merely.⁴⁰ If the declaration shows facts entitling the beneficiaries in the bond to the saving of a statute in favor of infants, such facts need not be availed of by a special replication to a plea of the statute.⁴¹ Avoidance of the bar of the statute by defendant's fraudulent concealment of the cause of action is matter of reply.⁴² So if the sureties plead a release arising out of a contract between the guardian and ward, it may be set up by replication that the contract was voidable on account of the influence of the guardian over the ward.⁴³

d. Demurrer. If there is one breach which is sufficient in law the declaration cannot be reached by demurrer so as to defeat the action.⁴⁴ The right of the relator to sue may be questioned by demurrer.⁴⁵ If a defense to a suit on a guardian's bond which may properly be shown under the general issue or pleaded specially at the pleader's option is demurred to, error in sustaining the demurrer is not rendered harmless because the defense might have been proved without special plea.⁴⁶

e. Pleading and Proof. Under a general denial it may be shown that the guardian disbursed, under order of court, all the money that came into his hands.⁴⁷ Payment over, in whole or in part, is also admissible under the general denial;⁴⁸ and under it the defense that certain moneys were received and converted by the guardian before his appointment is admissible in favor of the sureties.⁴⁹ So under the general issue the question of the right of the relator to sue may be raised;⁵⁰ and in an action on a bond for sale of land to which defendant pleads performance and plaintiff replies fraud and negligence in selling the land for less than its value, defendant may show, under a rejoinder of the general issue with notice of proof of special facts, that before the sale the guardian without charge to the ward made expensive improvements for which he is entitled to an allowance.⁵¹ On the other hand errors in a decree against the guardian cannot be proved by the surety, unless set out in the answer;⁵² and where the guardian does not plead a certain credit, the allowance of such credit is erroneous.⁵³

Departure.—In an action against C and his two sureties, T and S, on a guardian's bond, a declaration filed with the bond alleged the execution of the bond by T and S, and their failure to pay the amount thereof. The defense pleaded general performance on the part of C, to which plaintiff filed a replication setting out the names of the obligors in the bond with particularity, and alleging the death of C. It was held that such replication could not be considered as a departure from the declaration. Trippe v. State, 46 Md. 512.

9. EVIDENCE⁵⁴ — a. Burden of Proof and Presumptions. On plaintiff rests the burden of proving the breaches of the bond which he has alleged.⁵⁵ The mere production of the bond is not sufficient to cast the burden of proof on defendant.⁵⁶ It has been held though that the burden of proof shifts to defendant where plaintiff proves receipt by the guardian of property belonging to the ward; that it then rests upon defendant to prove the proper performance of the guardian's duties in relation to such property.⁵⁷ Where an infant wife and her husband join as co-relators in a suit on the guardian's bond, the burden is on them to show that the husband was of full age when the action was brought.⁵⁸ Under statutes providing for sale of an infant's land only when the personal property and proceeds of previous sales are insufficient to educate and maintain him, and to pay debts against the estate, plaintiff's burden of proof is not met by showing merely that none of the proceeds received by him from the real estate ever came into the hands of the ward.⁵⁹ Where in a proceeding against a guardian's estate it is adjudged that he was indebted to the estate of the ward, it will be presumed in an action on the bond that in such proceeding he was shown to be personally liable for the amount of the judgment.⁶⁰ A defalcation by a guardian, discovered on final settlement, is presumed to have occurred during the term of the last bond executed by him, in the absence of evidence to the contrary.⁶¹

b. Admissibility. A guardian's bond is not a record and before it can be used as evidence it must be proved like all other papers of a similar kind.⁶² A decree on final settlement is admissible in a suit on the bond,⁶³ although the sureties are not cited to appear.⁶⁴ So a settlement by a guardian with the probate court, after his removal, may be given in evidence.⁶⁵ Annual returns or settlements are admissible in behalf of the guardian in corroboration of his testimony,⁶⁶ and have also been held admissible against him and his sureties as being admissions made by the guardian.⁶⁷ An inventory is admissible as evidence against the guardian

To identify notes taken without security.—In an action on a guardian's bond for taking notes of insolvent persons, without security, for the rent of his ward's real estate, the guardian's reports to the court were competent evidence for the purpose of identifying such notes as the notes formerly in the guardian's possession, although such evidence was not otherwise admissible. French v. State, 81 Ind. 151.

A mere statement in the return of a guardian that a certain note dated and due several years before, payable to the guardian individually, was "for the funds belonging to his wards," did not sufficiently show that it rep-to show his receipt of the property therein listed.⁶⁸ A final report has been held inadmissible until approved by the proper court,⁶⁹ and the record of a recovery against a guardian in an action against him alone has been held inadmissible against his sureties.⁷⁰ A judgment setting aside a settlement and decree thereon is admissible against the sureties.⁷¹ An execution against a guardian in his individual capacity, issuing upon a bill seeking to charge him in that capacity for waste and return nulla bona, is not admissible to charge the surety.⁷² Notwithstanding the guardian is not served with process, evidence of his default is admissible against the surety where the bond is joint and several, as in that case the surety could have been sued alone.⁷³ Where the principal defendant admits his signature and the evidence shows approval of the bond by a clerk, the bond is properly admissible in evidence, although defendant, on oath, alleged that he never delivered it.⁷⁴ No evidence is admissible to impeach the authority or jurisdiction of the court to take the bond.⁷⁵

c. Weight and Sufficiency. Judgment cannot be rendered if the bond produced in evidence is not the bond on which the action was brought.⁷⁶ The recital of a guardian's appointment in his bond is sufficient evidence thereof.⁷⁷ An inventory filed by the guardian, acknowledging the receipt of assets, is prima facie but not conclusive evidence against the surety on the bond.⁷⁸ A balance ascertained by the administrator of the deceased guardian, to be due from the estate of such deceased guardian to his ward, is binding on his surety and is prima facie evidence of liability in an action by a subsequent guardian against the sureties of the deceased guardian.⁷⁹ Where suit is brought on the bond of a guardian who is also administrator of the estate of which his ward was a distributee, the fact that as guardian he had receipted to himself as administrator for a certain sum received from the estate and made corresponding returns as guardian, on the basis of which the ordinary had found an amount due from him to his ward, is prima facie evidence of indebtedness as against his sureties.⁸⁰ In an action on a sale bond, evidence of a sale made in accordance with the statutes regulating it, and that the proceeds had been received by the guardian, makes out a prima facie case, and a demurrer to the evidence is properly overruled.⁸¹ If the action is for the recovery of money converted by the guardian, evidence in support thereof must be the same as is required in an ordinary suit for conversion.⁸²

Inventory by principal prior to appointment.—Where, in an action against principal and sureties on a guardian's bond, the breach alleged is not failure to collect assets but failure to account for and pay over assets which came to hand, the inventory and returns made by the principal as administrator upon the ward's father's estate prior to his appointment as guardian are not competent evidence for plaintiff. 12. JUDGMENT⁸⁹ AND EXECUTION⁹⁰ — a. In General. Judgment may be taken by default in an action on a guardian's bond.⁹¹ The judgment may be made conditional if the circumstances so require; ⁹² it should be so framed that it shall be enforced against the sureties only in the event that the money cannot be recovered from the principal.⁹³ It should be rendered in form for the penal sum of the bond to be discharged on payment of the damages sustained.⁹⁴ Upon a decision for plaintiff in an action against two joint sureties of whom only one answers, judgment should be rendered against both.⁹⁵ If the bond is for the payment of money generally, the judgment should not be made payable in gold.⁹⁶ Where one of several wards sues without joining the others, the judgment should not direct the shares of the wards not joined to be paid by the sureties to the defaulting guardian.⁹⁷ A judgment may be valid against the guardian even though void as to the surety.⁹⁸ A statutory proceeding by the attorney-general on the bond does not bar a bill by the ward for an accounting.⁹⁹

b. Measure and Items of Recovery. In an action on a guardian's bond, there can be no recovery beyond the penalty of the bond,¹ with interest

In Indiana the statute provides that the measure of damages in an action on a guardian's bond is the injury to the ward, with exemplary damages at discretion, and ten per cent penalty upon the whole amount. See Peelle v. State, 118 Ind. 512, 21 N. E. 288; Meadows v. State, 114 Ind. 537, 17 N. E. 121; English v. State, 81 Ind. 455; Baldrige v. State, 69 Ind. 166; Colburn v. State, 47 Ind. 310.

Where a ward's estate has suffered no financial injury from unauthorized loans by the guardian, the ward cannot recover damages therefor, although the borrowers paid a commission to the guardian. Townsend v. Stern, (Iowa 1904) 99 N. W. 570. Where no actual loss results nominal damages are alone recoverable. State v. Bishop, 24 Md. 310, 87 Am. Dec. 608. So only nominal damages are recoverable for failure to return the inventory within the proper time. Fuller v. Wing, 17 Me. 222.

Sureties may show in reduction of damages disbursements by themselves or their principal in behalf of the ward. Davenport v. Olmstead, 43 Conn. 67. Reduction of damages: By creditors see supra, VIII, B, 2, a. Where ward receives proceeds of indemnity given by guardian to surety see PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

Application of credits to bond.—Where the wards recover judgment for an amount in excess of the bond in an action to settle the guardian's accounts, and afterward the guardian surrenders his property for the benefit of his creditors, and the wards receive a distributive share which is less than is due them, the sureties cannot require that the share so received shall be applied on the bond. Brown v. Roberts, 14 La. Ann. 259.

Where the bond is for more than one ward the amount of recovery in the aggregate cannot exceed the penalty in the bond (Knox v. Kearns, 73 Iowa 286, 34 N. W. 861), and each ward is entitled only to a recovery equal to his proportional interest in the bond (Edmonds v. Edmonds, 73 Iowa 427, 35 N. W. 505; Knox v. Kearns, supra); Hooks v. Evans, 68 Iowa 52, 25 N. W. 925). So if plaintiff ward has received a part of his share from a former guardian, the amount so received should be taken into account and the shares equalized. Colburn v. State, 47 Ind. 310. If a guardian gives a general bond, and afterward gives a special bond for the sale of real estate, and the proceeds of the sale of the land are commingled by him with other funds, and he dies insolvent, a defaulter to his wards, in an action against the sureties on both the special and general bond, the wards being owners of the real estate in equal shares, the money realized from the special bond should be equally divided among them, even though the amount due the several wards is by reason of other funds received by the guardian unequal. *Swisher v. See, however, Haden v. Swepston, 64 Ark. 477, 43 S. W. 393 (holding that where a guardian was discharged, but there was no order making a disposition of the funds, the surety on the guardian's bond is not liable for interest on the amount in the guardian's hands which accrued after the discharge); Freedman v. Vallie, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 75 S. W. 322 (holding that a surety is not liable for interest after the death of the

this is so, although the loss exceeds the amount which it was supposed would come into the guardian's hands.⁵ Costs and disbursements paid by the ward in previous litigation may in a proper case be recovered of the sureties as an item of damages.⁶ Where a new bond with different sureties and a different penalty is substituted for an old bond, although the new sureties are liable for the period of guardianship covered by the old as well as the new bond, the ward can recover only the penalty of a single bond, and not the combined penalties of both.⁷ On an application to have damages assessed after judgment against principal and sureties on a guardian's bond, they cannot set up any defenses as to liability on the bond.⁸

c. Execution and Enforcement. An execution may issue against the sureties of the guardian in a proper case;⁹ and under some circumstances the ward may maintain a bill against the administrator and distributees of a deceased surety to enforce the latter's liability.¹⁰

13. Where, however, after the ward becomes of age, he settles with his guardian without an accounting and releases him, costs subsequently incurred in an action to set aside such settlement are not within the conditions of the bond, and the sureties are not liable therefor, even though the ward was induced to make the settlement by fraud. Douglass v. Montgomery, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 464.

Costs in proceeding to remove guardian.—The sureties are liable for costs awarded against the guardian by the surrogate, which were incurred in disproving his account, filed in proceedings for his removal. Phillips v. Liebmann, 10 N. Y. App. Div. 128, 41 N. Y. Suppl. 1020. See, however, Clark v. Montgomery, 23 Barb. (N. IX. FOREIGN AND ANCILLARY GUARDIANSHIP.

A. Definitions. A foreign guardian is one appointed by authority out of the state.¹⁶ While there are no decisions defining ancillary guardianship, it may perhaps be properly defined as a guardianship in a state other than that in which guardianship is originally granted and is subservient and subsidiary to the latter.¹⁷

B. Powers of Foreign Guardians — 1. IN GENERAL. It has been said that in some of the European countries a guardian duly appointed by the law of the country where the infant is domiciled is in every other country to have the same powers, and is entitled to assert any claims over the movable property of his ward, and may sue for debts due to the ward in foreign countries, without having any confirmation of the guardianship by the local authorities, although the power over immovable property belonging to the ward must entirely depend upon the lex loci rei sitæ.¹⁸ Such, however, has never been the law in England or in the United States, where it is well settled that the authority of guardians, like that of executors and administrators, is limited to the state in which they are appointed. They are not entitled by virtue of their office to exercise any authority over the person or personal property of their wards in other states,¹⁹ but they

Foy*, 72 N. C. 247 (holding that the supreme court, sustaining some of the exceptions and overruling others, may properly refer the account to its clerk to be modified accordingly, and on confirmation, certified to the court below); Sikes v. Truitt, 57 N. C. 361 (holding that a defect in a guardian's bond arising from the mistake or ignorance of the clerk will be aided in the supreme court as against sureties); Case v. State, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 486, 10 West. L. J. 163 (holding that where the declaration contained an assignment of two breaches, one good and the other bad, and the record shows a general verdict and judgment, the court will not reverse the judgment, but will assume the damages assessed on the breach to be well assigned); Cranston Prob. Ct. v. Sprague, 3 R. I. 205 (holding that it need not appear on the record that the nominal plaintiffs, the judges of the probate court, directed the beginning of the suit in order to sustain a judgment against the sureties).

2. CUSTODY OF WARDS. As has been shown in a preceding section, a guardian appointed by the courts of one state has no right, by virtue of his office, to exercise any authority over the person of his ward in another state.²³ It does not follow, however, that his claim to the care of the child, the custody of his person, and the right to remove him to the state in which the appointment was received, is to be absolutely denied.²⁴ On the contrary the tendency of modern decisions is to recognize the rights of foreign guardians in respect of the persons of their wards;²⁵ and in many cases the courts have awarded the custody of the ward's person to foreign guardians, with the right to remove him to the state where the guardian received his appointment;²⁶ and the fact that a local guardian has been appointed does not deprive the court of its power to award the custody to the foreign guardian.²⁷ Nevertheless, in determining whether the custody of a minor shall be awarded to a foreign guardian, the court may exercise a sound

Reason for rule.—The reason for denying any recognition of title of a guardian, outside of the state or country in which he is appointed is, that all his authority springs out of his official character, and that a civil officer as such can of necessity possess no power beyond the limits of the sovereignty by which he is appointed. *McLoskey v. Effect of treaty.—A treaty between two countries providing that the citizens of each country may dispose of their personal property in the jurisdiction of the other, by testament, donation, or any other manner, and that their heirs may succeed to such property or inherit it, does not by terms, and cannot by inference, require one of these countries to recognize a guardian appointed in the other. In re Biolley, Tuck. discretion, and the welfare of the ward is always the controlling consideration.²⁸ The principal of comity must be subordinated to the welfare of the infant,²⁹ and the custody of the ward will be denied a foreign guardian if the best interests of the ward require it;³⁰ and that too, although it is not shown that the foreign guardian is an unfit person, or that he has abused the trust.³¹

3. RIGHTS IN RESPECT OF WARD'S PERSONAL PROPERTY—a. In General. As shown in a preceding section, the strict common-law rule granted to foreign guardians no rights in respect of the personal property of their wards, except on taking out ancillary letters of guardianship in the jurisdiction where the power was sought to be exercised.³² Nevertheless on principles of comity, the severity of this rule has been relaxed in some states, and the turning over of funds of the ward or other personal property to a foreign guardian, has been permitted by courts exercising chancery jurisdiction.³³ So in a number of jurisdictions, statutes exist by virtue of which foreign guardians who have complied with the conditions therein enumerated may, on a proper application, obtain a transfer to themselves of funds or other personal property of the ward, for administration in the state where the property is found, or for removal to the state in which the guardian received his appointment.³⁴ Nevertheless the guardian is in no event

In Canada there seems to be a lack of harmony in the decisions. In Hanrahan v. Hanrahan, 19 Ont. 396, it was held that a duly appointed guardian in the province of Quebec of an infant domiciled there was entitled to have paid over to him from the Ontario administrators of the father's estate, there being no creditors, money coming to the infants from the estate which had been collected in Ontario. In In re Sears (unreported decision), the rule enunciated in the above decision is recognized as correct. In Flanders v. D'Evelyn, 4 Ont. 704, it was held that a legacy due the ward should not be paid over to a Minnesota guardian, but should be paid into court. Semble, however, that the rule might be modified if the sum were small and the whole or nearly the whole were required for the infant's education and maintenance, or were required for other immediate use.

Ward becoming non-resident after appointment.—A statute providing that where there is a resident guardian of a non-resident minor, the guardian appointed in the state of his residence may compel the resident guardian to deliver to him personalty of the ward, in his hands, for removal to the ward's place of residence, embraces a case where the ward became a non-resident after the appointment of the resident guardian. *Swayzee v. Operation of statutes in respect of testamentary guardians.—N. C. Rev. St. c. 54, § 23, which authorizes guardians who have been appointed in another state to orphans who have removed to such other state and have guardians in North Carolina to demand and receive of the latter the estate of the wards, does not apply to testamentary guardians appointed in North Carolina. *Pugh v. entitled, as a matter of absolute right, to the possession of the funds or other personal property of the ward, whether the proceedings instituted by him are brought in the chancery court, or in some other court under the provisions of the statutes mentioned. The court may, and should, exercise a sound discretion in the matter.³⁵ If it appears to be for the best interest of the ward³⁶ that no principle of public policy will be violated,³⁷ and that no legal rights of citizens of the domestic state will be injured,³⁸ the order may be granted; but it should be denied if it appears that the granting thereof will be detrimental to the ward's interest,³⁹ or where no special necessity exists for a transfer to the foreign guardian.⁴⁰ Where the proceeding is brought in a court of equity, it has been held that the conditions on which the guardian's prayer will be granted are his regular appointment as guardian in the state where he resides, his fitness for the appointment, and the sufficiency of the security given by him.⁴¹ And if the guardian relies on special statutory provisions as the basis of his application, there must be a strict compliance with such provisions,⁴² and the court must be satisfied that the guardian has given a sufficient bond to secure the property.⁴³ If essential to an allowance of the order that the laws of the state where the guardian was appointed extend the same privileges to citizens of the state where the order is asked, this fact must be shown.⁴⁴ The court may order payment to the foreign guardian of the infant's distributive share in a settled estate.⁴⁵ And it may order the money representing the share of infants remainder-men paid over to such guardian.⁴⁶ On

Where the foreign guardian is a person who would be ineligible to appointment in the state where the ward's personal property is situated, he cannot collect money due the ward in such state. Habighurst v. Stevenson, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 162, 19 Cinc. L. Bul. 106.

Good cause why an order of removal from this state by a foreign guardian of the property of a ward living in another state should not be made, within the meaning of the statute, must as a general rule be such as pertains to the security of the ward's property or the protection of the resident holder of such property. The fact that the ward's mother wishes to remove to this state, with the additional fact that none of the relatives of his deceased father reside in the foreign state, does not furnish a sufficient reason for withholding an order of removal. *Lary v. b. Proceedings to Obtain Possession and For Removal of Ward's Property.⁵¹

If the form of application by the foreign guardian for the removal of the ward's property is not prescribed by statute, the application should be brought in the name of the ward.⁵² But if the statute provides for removal "upon the application of the guardian," it should be in the name of the guardian and not of the ward by the guardian.⁵³ The resident guardian is a proper party defendant, whether he has any of the property in his possession or not,⁵⁴ and necessary parties may be added by amendment.⁵⁵ The application should show a compliance with the requirements of the statute under which the proceeding is brought,⁵⁶ but it may be amended by the addition of necessary allegations.⁵⁷ No questions of fraud in the appointment of the foreign guardian, the sufficiency of the bond, or the actual residence of the ward in the state where the foreign guardian resides at the time of appointment are proper subjects of inquiry on demurrer;⁵⁸ and it has been held that objections for failure of the foreign guardian to file with his petition a certified copy of the record of his appointment and qualification cannot be raised for the first time on appeal.⁵⁹ Unless required by statute, notice of the application need not be served on the ward, nor a guardian ad litem appointed.⁶⁰ But where notice is required by statute, the requirement will be considered mandatory,⁶¹ and an order for the transfer of the property without it is erroneous.⁶² On the hearing the court should acquaint itself with all the surroundings of the parties,⁶³ take all necessary steps to ascertain whether the case is a proper one for the removal of the property,⁶⁴ and all precautions to guard against abuse and loss to the ward.⁶⁵ If, after an order authorizing removal, facts come to the knowledge of the court that show that the order was improperly made, it is the duty of the court and it has the power to direct all proper proceedings to prevent its removal, or to secure the rights of the creditors therein.⁶⁶ plication for the removal of his ward's property, is required to produce, must not only show that he has given bond, with security, for the performance of his trust, but must set out a copy of it, in order that the court authorizing the removal may see that it is sufficient to protect the ward's estate. *Carlisle v. 4. RIGHTS IN RESPECT OF WARD'S REAL ESTATE — a. In General. A guardian appointed by the courts of one state has no power as such to convey,⁶⁷ nor to bind his ward's lands in another state by an agreement to convey;⁶⁸ and a conveyance of such lands under a decree of a court, rendered in the state of his appointment, vests no title in the purchaser.⁶⁹ In a number of jurisdictions, the statutes authorize a sale of a ward's lands by a foreign guardian on compliance with the conditions therein imposed;⁷⁰ and under a statute providing that on compliance with certain conditions a foreign guardian may act as a domestic guardian, a foreign guardian may defend a petition brought for the sale of a ward's lands.⁷¹ To authorize proceedings by a foreign guardian to sell his ward's lands, he must comply with the conditions of the statute authorizing him to institute such proceedings,⁷² and when he has obtained leave he stands on no better footing than a domestic guardian, and must obtain an order of court for sale.⁷³

b. Proceedings For Sale, Sale, and Its Operation and Effect. The application for leave to sell should be made to the probate court of the county in which the land is situated,⁷⁴ and its jurisdiction is complete when there is land of the ward in the county, and the record of the court shows a petition by the guardian asking for license to sell, and notice and opportunity to be heard.⁷⁵ The proceedings for sale may be maintained by the foreign guardian without the appointment of a guardian ad litem, or a domestic guardian.⁷⁶ The application should state the derivation of the minor's title and be accompanied by a certificate that the guardian had given proper security in the state of his appointment.⁷⁷ On hearing the application for leave to sell, the court must determine the regularity of the guardian's appointment, and whether he has complied with the steps made necessary by statute to authorize him to maintain the proceeding.⁷⁸ If the statute authorizes a sale made by an attorney in fact, the oath required to be taken before fixing the time and place of the sale can be taken by such attorney, as this is included in the statutory authority to act for the guardian.⁷⁹ If the sale is duly licensed, and an order in the guardian's name correctly attached to the notice of sale, an error in the published signature of his attorney is an informality only and does not avoid the sale.⁸⁰ If the foreign guardian has complied with all the statutory requirements and obtained a license to sell, the purchaser cannot attack the sale collaterally for irregularities therein.⁸¹ And even though the guardian has not produced the proper record evidence of his appointment and qualification until after the sale, the fact being established, any defect in the title that might otherwise have existed is cured.⁸³ Where a ward's land has been sold on application of a foreign guardian, he can only receive the funds arising therefrom, on executing in the court having control of them a bond for their proper application.⁸³

5. ACTIONS AND DEFENSES IN BEHALF OF WARD. A guardian, by virtue of his office, has no power to sue in the courts of another state than that in which he receives his appointment.⁸⁴ This rule applies even to suits brought in federal courts held in a state other than that in which the guardian was appointed.⁸⁵ The right to sue, however, may be and is recognized by comity in some jurisdictions;⁸⁶ and in a number of jurisdictions, by virtue of special statutory provisions, a foreign guardian may bring suit, provided he has complied with the conditions imposed by such statutes;⁸⁷ such for instance as proving his appointment as

Limitations of rule.—The rule of state courts which prohibits a guardian from bringing suit to recover property outside of that in which he was appointed does not preclude him from instituting an action, as guardian of the domicile, in the court of claims for captured property located in a state different from that of his appointment. This court is national in its character and jurisdiction, and neither the general rule nor the reason therefor has any application. It is alike open to the citizens of every state who can bring themselves within the act of congress regulating its jurisdiction. Stanton v. U. S., 4 Ct. Cl. 456.

The Georgia statute authorizes suits by a foreign guardian only when both the guardian and ward reside in the state at the time suit is brought; it does not authorize a guardian appointed in another state to sue in the state after both he and the ward have become residents of the state. Lumday v. Thomas, 26 Ga. 537.

Statutes requiring foreign guardians to obtain permission of court before suing have been held in Illinois not to apply to proceed-

guardian,⁸⁸ or filing in the probate court of the proper county a certified copy of his letters of appointment and bond, and giving another bond to account, to the court in which he received his appointment, for moneys he may recover in the suit.⁸⁹ To authorize the action a strict compliance with these requirements is necessary.⁹⁰ In jurisdictions where a foreign guardian is permitted to sue, the right necessarily implies a correlative liability to be sued.⁹¹ Where suit is brought by a foreign guardian who has received an ancillary appointment, he may sue in his own name, and no guardian ad litem need be appointed.⁹² If suit is brought under special statutory authorization a compliance with the terms and conditions of the statute must be alleged.⁹³ If by statute the right to sue depends upon the fact that no guardian has been appointed in the state where suit is brought, the complaint need not allege the non-appointment of such guardian, but the objection must be taken by plea or answer, and the burden of proof is on defendant.⁹⁴ If a decree directing payment of money to a foreign guardian authorizes him to sue out execution, execution sued out in the name of his ward is irregular and illegal, since it does not accurately conform to the decree.⁹⁵ Where one appears in no other capacity than as alleged foreign guardian, and has asked no other relief than to be recognized as such, the decisions denying that capacity obliterate him as a party, exhaust all his rights as an appellant, and he cannot urge objections to a judgment appointing a tutor, to which he is not a party, and to which he raised no issue.⁹⁶

C. Ancillary Guardianship. As stated in a preceding section, except in jurisdictions where the rule has been relaxed by the principles of comity, or modified by special statutory provisions, a guardian can exercise no power or authority in respect of his ward's personal estate in a jurisdiction other than that of his appointment, without taking out ancillary letters in the jurisdiction where the property is situated.⁹⁷ Nevertheless, in appointing a guardian for the estate of the ward, preference will be given to the person already clothed with the authority of guardian in the minor's own state or country;⁹⁸ and in a number of states express provision is made by statute for the granting of ancillary letters to a foreign guardian.⁹⁹ Whether or not ancillary letters shall be granted is dis-

ing this fact is necessary to render the pleading available against a demurrer previously interposed. Grist v. Forehand, 36 Miss. 69.

Method of raising objections.—If a complaint fails to show a compliance with the requirements as to filing proof of appointment, the disability to sue appears on the face of the complaint and renders it demurrable (Vincent v. Starks, 45 Wis. 458); but the objection can only be taken by special demurrer pointing out the objection; a demurrer assigning as cause the want of sufficient facts is insufficient (Shook v. State, 53 Ind. 403).

If application for authority to act as guardian is made necessary by statute, such application must be alleged. Parrish v. Hatchett, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 847.

If suit is brought before compliance with the statutory requirements, but there is a subsequent compliance, an amendment showing this fact is necessary to render the pleading available against a demurrer previously interposed. Grist v. Forehand, 36 Miss. 69.

Limitation to states having similar laws.—The statutes of Texas provide, where a ward is a non-resident, for the granting of resi-cretionary with the court, and if the interests of the minors require it they should be refused,¹ and of course such letters cannot be granted if the infant has no property in the state where the appointment is asked.² So under some statutes it must appear that the removal of the ward's property out of the state will not conflict with the ward's ownership.³ To authorize an application for ancillary letters of guardianship, the applicant must have given bond in the state of his appointment.⁴ Ancillary letters will only be granted a foreign guardian on an application made by himself,⁵ duly verified,⁶ and signed by the guardian.⁷ The transcript of the record from the foreign state must show the appointment and qualification of the guardian.⁸ And where the local statutes require orders appointing foreign guardians to state whether the guardian is of the person or of the estate, or both, a foreign guardian seeking to obtain the guardianship of the estates of his wards has the burden of proving that he was appointed as guardian of their estates.⁹ On the hearing of an application for ancillary letters, evidence dent guardianship to a non-resident guardian, but that the provisions thereof shall not extend to the residents of any state in which a similar law does not exist in favor of the residents of his state. This statute does not contemplate that the benefit thereof should only apply to the residents of a state having a statute exactly the same; and a statute of another state providing for the sale of a ward's real property, when it is to the ward's interest, and for the appointment of a non-resident guardian by a non-resident ward, and for the removal by such guardian of his ward's personal property from the state, constitutes a similar law. Orr v. Wright, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 629.

Bond in court granting ancillary letters.— Since the New York code provides that ancillary letters of guardianship shall issue without security, and that the guardian may then demand and receive the ward's personal estate and remove it from the state, where ancillary letters were granted and proof that the applicant was the appointed general guardian of the minors, and had given the security prescribed by statute, it is not necessary, on his asking that executors be required to pay over legacies due his ward, that he should give a bond similar to that required under like circumstances of a domestic guardian (Hunt's Estate, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 1088, 24 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 239). So it was held that where a foreign trust company is made guardian, without bond in accordance with the laws of a foreign state, it may apply for and receive a legacy of the ward in the state where the legacy is payable, without giving bond, where the laws of the latter state permit a trust company to act as guardian without bond (Matter of Cordova, 4 Redf. Surr. (N. Y.) 66).

In Ontario it has been held that a foreign guardian appointed trustee to receive funds of the ward need not give bond in that province, on its being shown that he gave security in the court appointing him, to the satisfaction of that court. Re Andrews, 11 Ont. Pr. 199. There are, however, decisions which maintain the contrary doctrine. Re Slosson, 15 Ont. Pr. 156; Re Thin, 10 Ont. Pr. 490.

A non-resident father will not necessarily be appointed general guardian of his son of fourteen, who prefers another person, even though the father is the guardian in another state; there being property of the son in the state where the appointment is in question. *Johnson v. W. 913, holding that a transcript which did not show the guardian's application, but stated that on motion he had been appointed guardian, and which the clerk certified was an entire record where the guardian had made application for appointment, was insufficient.

9. Gill v. Everman, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 60 S. W. 913 (since in the absence of proof to the contrary the law of a foreign state is presumed to be the same); Gill v. Everman, 94 Tex. 209, 59 S. W. 531.

An order of appointment and title "in the estate of M. G. deceased," does not warrant the courts in construing the appointment to have been made concerning property derived from the infant's ancestor, and in drawing an inference therefrom that the appointment was only of the estates of the infant. Gill v. Everman, 94 Tex. 209, 59 S. W. 531.

that the ward's property cannot be sold, except at a sacrifice, is inadmissible.¹⁰ The letters, when granted, do not constitute the appointee the general guardian of all the minor's estate within the commonwealth, but limit it to the particular estate mentioned in the application; ¹¹ and where the statute expressly designates the class of property which the ancillary guardian may demand and receive, his rights are strictly limited to the property so designated.¹² Statutes which authorize the issuance of ancillary letters when it will be for the ward's interest impliedly authorize their revocation when it appears that the like result would be accomplished thereby.¹³

D. Accounting. Where a guardian has removed from the state in which he received his appointment, taking with him the property of the ward,¹⁴ or where he has removed after converting such property to his own use,¹⁵ he may be compelled to render an account for and pay over to his ward what is justly due in courts of equitable jurisdiction in the state to which he has removed, or the ward may, after the relation has terminated, maintain an action against him in the common-law courts.¹⁶ If he has taken out letters of guardianship in the state to which he has removed with the ward's property, he may be compelled to account in the probate court¹⁷ but not otherwise;¹⁸ and consent of the parties cannot give such court jurisdiction.¹⁹ Where a guardian has received appointment in two states, and has removed goods derived from a sale of the ward's property in one of the states to the state of his residence, he may be required to account by a court of equity of the latter state.²⁰ A guardian who obtains an ancillary appointment in another state and gives bond there is not bound to account for funds received by virtue of such appointment to the court by which he was originally appointed.²¹

X. JOINT GUARDIANS.

A. Powers. Where two or more persons are appointed as guardians their powers are joint and several.²² Their powers are in the nature of a power coupled with an interest, and if one guardian dies, resigns, or is removed, the complete powers are vested in the others.²³ Or if one refuses to qualify the other may

XI. SUCCESSIVE GUARDIANS.

A. Rights, Duties, and Liabilities of Retiring Guardian. A guardian whose office terminates for any reason before the ward reaches majority must account honestly to the late ward or his successor if there be one.³⁰ He cannot discharge his trust by turning over to his successor debts due to him individually from his successor,³¹ or securities in which he cannot lawfully invest the ward's funds;³² and he will still be bound in equity to the ward, unless he transfers the ward's property or money in its stead, or good securities such as are admitted to be proper investments.³³ A collusive settlement between two guardians does not conclude the ward who may bring an action to surcharge and falsify the original guardian's account for fraud.³⁴ And a receipt given him by his successor for specific personal property of the ward does not discharge him from responsibility to account for previous losses by his mismanagement of the ward's prop-ianship and there must be a new appointment (Bradshaw v. Bradshaw, 1 Russ. 528, 25 Rev. Rep. 127, 46 Eng. Ch. 470, 38 Eng. Reprint 203), but that the survivor may be appointed without a reference to the master (Hall v. Jones, 1 Sim. 41, 2 Eng. Ch. 41).

The survivor of joint guardians will be presumed to have received the whole estate, in the absence of proof that the other guardian received and retained any portion thereof. Graham v. Davidson, 22 N. C. 155.

Loss caused by insolvency of one guardian. — Where one of two joint guardians has good grounds for believing that the other guardian is good for the amount of the ward's estate in his hands, he cannot be held liable for a loss caused by the insolvency of the other guardian, merely because, knowing that his associate had no real estate, he did not inquire where the money was. Myer v. Myer, 187 Pa. St. 247, 41 Atl. 24.

A bond and mortgage given by a joint guardian to his co-guardian to secure the payment of money due and to become due to his wards is merely an indemnity to the obligee against any loss on account of any legal responsibility which rested upon him in consequence of his joint action with his co-guardian, and cannot be construed as an acknowledgment on the part of the obligor, that he had received all the money, and as conclusive evidence that it was all in his hands. Keeler v. Keeler, 11 N. J. Eq. 458.

Where joint guardians apportioned the custody and management of the property to suit the peculiar capacity and qualifications of each, each is chargeable with no more than he received if he acts with reasonable vigilance and good faith. Jones' Appeal, 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 143, 42 Am. Dec. 282.

erty.³⁵ He is not liable to account for moneys (an uncollected pension) which his successor may still collect for the ward.³⁶ And where he has turned over the ward's estate to his successor he is relieved of any further responsibility therefor and is not liable for the subsequent wasting thereof by the latter.³⁷

B. Rights, Duties, and Liabilities of Succeeding Guardian. The incoming guardian must require a strict account of his predecessor's guardianship.³⁸ He must examine his accounts for errors or improper charges, and on failure to do so is liable for any resulting loss to the estate.³⁹ He must use due care and diligence in reducing to possession the ward's estate and will be liable for any losses sustained through his negligence.⁴⁰ He cannot accept as part of the ward's estate a note payable to his predecessor in his individual capacity, and is liable for any loss sustained if the note cannot be collected.⁴¹ But acceptance as cash, under advice of counsel, from his predecessor, of judgment bonds in which the ward's funds were invested is not negligence, and he will not be liable for a loss caused by an extraordinary depreciation of the price of land.⁴² If he is aware of a misapplication of the funds by his predecessor, he is guilty of laches if he fails to charge him with the amount misappropriated.⁴³ He must bring suit on his predecessor's bond to recover the value of property removed by the latter from the state.⁴⁴ And he may follow his ward's money, and recover it from one who obtained it from his predecessor under a contract made by him in his individual capacity.⁴⁵ Failure to pursue his predecessor for mismanagement, until his account has been settled showing a loss is not negligence,⁴⁶ nor is a failure to sue on his predecessor's bond where there could be no recovery.⁴⁷ So if a guardian is discharged before his successor is appointed the latter is not chargeable with alleged excessive fees retained by his predecessor, where he acted under advice of counsel and the evidence was not conclusive as to the excessiveness of the fees, and this is so notwithstanding the decree of discharge was improvidently made.⁴⁸ If the surety of a deceased guardian who was insolvent is appointed his successor and charges himself with the balance due the ward from the first guardian this makes the second guardian liable to the ward therefor.⁴⁹ Where by statute the ward's estate is made liable on contracts of the guardian in behalf of the ward, such a contract made by a guardian is enforceable against his successor.⁵⁰ The latter cannot pay out of the principal disbursements in excess of the principal made by his predecessor for the ward's maintenance.⁵¹ The incoming guardian is entitled in equity to have securities, given by a former guardian to his sureties to indemnify them against their liability for his debt to the ward's estate, sold and the proceeds applied to the payment of that debt, the former guardian and the sureties having become insolvent, and a portion only of the debt

having been paid by the sureties.⁵² Where the appointment of a successor is void for want of notice to his predecessor payment to the successor of money due the ward is unauthorized.⁵³ Money advanced to a guardian on an illegal contract of sale never consummated cannot as against the ward be treated as a payment to his successor on a legal sale to the person advancing the money.⁵⁴

XII. GUARDIANS ACTING IN SEVERAL FIDUCIARY CAPACITIES.

Where the same person who acts as personal representative is also guardian of the distributees, whatever balance is in his hands at the rendition of the final account is held by him not as a personal representative but as guardian. This transfer is by operation of law without any act on his part.⁵⁵ So from the time that a personal representative who is also guardian has no further use for assets as executor⁵⁶ or after the time within which a final settlement should have been made has elapsed.⁵⁷ The funds in his hands are held by him as guardian whether a final settlement has been made or not. Here also the transfer is effected by operation of law and no act by the party himself is required to effect it.⁵⁸ Nevertheless it has been said that some act or election to hold the property in a different character from that in which it is received may justly be insisted on before the responsibility is shifted from one class of sureties to another,⁵⁹ and it has accordingly been held that where the representative holds assets received as such secretly as his own without acknowledgment and settles his probate account without any Reason for rule.—The administrator having in his hands a balance that ought to be paid over to the guardian, and one person representing both these characters, he cannot pay the money over to himself, nor if the payment is refused, is there any person who could enforce it. Under these circumstances the law by implication "considers it in the hands and possession of the party in that representative character that ought to receive it." Seager v. State, 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 162, 14 Am. Dec. 265.

Illustration.—Where the same person is administrator and guardian the balance in his hands as administrator, which has been ascertained by judgment and directed to be applied to the ward's debt, is presumed to be held by him as guardian. Ruffin v. Harrison, 86 N. C. 190. Compare Harrison v. Ward, 14 N. C. 417.

Where after a decree ascertaining the distributive shares of the estate, the administrator took guardianship of one of the persons entitled to a share who was a minor, it was held that by operation of law she held the amount as guardian and not as administratrix. Taylor v. Deblois, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,790, 4 Mason 131.

Rule in Alabama.—If the offices of personal representative and guardian are united in the same person, and the guardian in that capacity can acquire possession only from the representative, as guardian he does not hold the assets until they are separated and distinguished from the assets held as executor. Hutton v. Williams, 60 Ala. 107; Davis v. Davis, 10 Ala. 299.

admission of them he will be deemed to have received them as administrator and not to have retained them as guardian.⁶⁰ Where a guardian is appointed administrator of a deceased ward, the guardianship having expired before the ward's death, no act is necessary to transfer to his new capacity the liability incurred as guardian—it is transferred by operation of law.⁶¹ And it has been held that when a testator gives legacies to his grandchildren and constitutes the executor guardian, the legacy passes by operation of law to the guardian, and the bond of the executors is not liable therefor.⁶² And a guardian who is also administrator of the estate of the ward's father should not in rendering his account of the guardianship engraft upon it the account of his administration of the estate.⁶³ If a person designated in a life-insurance policy as trustee for children is appointed their guardian and subsequently receives the insurance money as trustee she is liable therefor as guardian.⁶⁴ If a guardian subsequently becomes trustee there is no presumption of law that he ceased to hold the fund as guardian as soon as he became trustee.⁶⁵ If a widow who is entitled to act as guardian in socage for her children, but who never acted in that capacity, assigns a lease, professing to act as administrator of her husband's estate, she will not be considered as having performed the act as guardian and her assignment passes nothing belonging to her children.⁶⁶ Where wards had money coming to them under a will which made provision for the appointment of a trustee by some proper court, and the appointment of the guardian was inoperative for want of authority of the court making it, the money was held by the guardian in his capacity as such.⁶⁷ Where a guardian acts in the dual capacity of guardian and trustee he cannot charge full compensation in both capacities for the same service.⁶⁸

GUEST. See INNKEEPERS.

GUIDON. An old and well-known form of a small flag or streamer, used for a variety of purposes—amongst others, as the flag of a guild or fraternity.¹

Universally, in law, it is a word which implies a violation of law—a commission of an act or omission of a duty under circumstances which render the commission or omission unlawful. Jesse v. State, 28 Miss. 100, 103, where the court said: "When it is said, 'that the law is made for the protection of the innocent by a due punishment of the guilty,' and that it is better that ninety-nine guilty persons should escape, than that one innocent should be punished,—the term

GUILTY CONNECTION. In common parlance, when applied to a man and woman, words which import a carnal connection.⁵ (See, generally, ADULTERY; FORNICATION.)

GULDEN. In commerce, a word which may be considered as expressive of the Polish word "zlotych," which signifies a piece of money.⁶

GULF. An arm of the ocean;⁷ an arm or part of the sea;⁸ usually an arm of the sea which seems to have encroached on the land.⁹ (See BAY; GULF OF MEXICO; and, generally, WATERS.)

GULF OF MEXICO. A large bay or gulf of the Atlantic;¹⁰ a basin of the Atlantic ocean inclosed by the United States, the West Indies, and Mexico.¹¹ (See ATLANTIC OCEAN; GULF; and, generally, WATERS.)

GUM SUBSTITUTE. A substitute for gum.¹² (See GLUCOSE.)

GUN. A weapon which throws a projectile or missile to a distance; a fire-arm for throwing a projectile with gunpowder.¹³ (See, generally, ASSAULT AND BATTERY; HOMICIDE; WEAPONS.)

GUNCOTTON. An explosive obtained by immersing vegetable fibre in nitric and sulphuric acids, and subsequent drying.¹⁴ (See, generally, EXPLOSIVES.)

GUNPOWDER. A mixture of saltpeter, sulphur, and charcoal, separately pulverized, then granulated and dried.¹⁵ (See, generally, EXPLOSIVES.)

GURGES.¹⁶ In its mediæval use, a term applied by classic authors to the open sea, to a lake, and to the course of a river;¹⁷ as the word is used in later times, a deep pit of water, a gore,¹⁸ or gulf, which consisteth of land and water;¹⁹ a stream or pool, a watery place, a weir, a fish-pond, a DITCH, q. v., a DAM,²⁰ q. v. (See, generally, WATERS.)

I. NATURE AND GROUNDS OF REMEDY.

A. Nature and Scope in General—1. DEFINITION AND SCOPE. The writ of habeas corpus (habeas corpus ad subjiciendum et recipiendum) is a high prerogative writ known to the common law, the great object of which is the liberation of those who may be imprisoned without sufficient cause.¹ It is defined to be a writ directed to the person detaining another and commanding him to produce the body of the prisoner at a certain time and place with the day and cause of his caption to do, submit to, and receive whatsoever the court or judge awarding the writ shall consider in that behalf.² Strictly speaking it is not an action or suit, but is a summary remedy open to the person detained.³ It is civil rather than criminal in

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Habeas Corpus," § 1.

As writ of inquiry.—The writ of habeas corpus is essentially a writ of inquiry, and upon matters of which the state itself is concerned, in aid of right and liberty. Thus a habeas corpus proceeding by the husband, as relator, against a wife, cannot be said to be a proceeding between husband and wife. State v. Michel, 105 La. 741, 30 So. 122, 54 L. R. A. 927.

The one object of the writ is to relieve the party detained from an illegal restraint. If this is accomplished before the jurisdiction of the court attaches by the service of the writ there is nothing upon which it can attach. It is not the object or intention of the writ to punish the respondent or afford the party redress for his illegal detention; but the question occupies a different attitude after the jurisdiction of the court has attached. It cannot then be defeated by the wrongful act of either of the parties. Ex p. Coupland, 26 Tex. 386.

See also to the same effect State v. Huegin, 110 Wis. 189, 85 N. W. 1046, 62 L. R. A. 700.

United States.—In re Barry, 42 Fed. 113, 136 U. S. 597 note, 34 L. ed. 503, where the court said that a proceeding by habeas corpus could in no legal sense be regarded as a suit between private parties. In some federal cases, however, the suing out of the writ has its nature,⁴ and it is a legal and not an equitable remedy.⁵ It is in the nature of a writ of error to examine the legality of the commitment,⁶ but it cannot be made to perform the office of a writ of error.⁷ It is intended solely to free the petitioner from the illegal restraint, and not to punish the respondent, or to afford redress to the petitioner for the restraint;⁸ nor can it be used as a means of obtaining evidence of the whereabouts of the person detained.⁹

2. EARLY HISTORY AND DEVELOPMENT. The early history of the writ is involved in some obscurity. The first royal recognition of it is found in Magna Charta,¹⁰ but there is ample evidence that it was in use before that time.¹¹ The common-law writ became so little respected, however, that it afforded no real or substantial protection to English subjects, and it was not until the year 1679, after the passage of 31 Car. II, known as the "Habeas Corpus Act," that the writ came to be thoroughly recognized in its fullest scope.¹² It was recognized in the colonies at an early date,¹³ and in the federal constitution¹⁴ and the constitutions of most of the states.¹⁵ It is regulated by statute to a greater or less extent, and this is permissible, provided that the restrictions placed upon its use are reasonable in their character.¹⁶

so-called takes its name from the characteristic words which it contained when the process and records of the English courts were written in Latin. There were indeed several other writs which contained the words habeas corpus, but they were distinguished from the one in question and from one another by the specific terms declaring the object of the writ.¹⁷ The writ of habeas corpus was in like manner designated habeas corpus ad subjiciendum et recipiendum, but having acquired in public esteem a marked importance by reason of the nobler uses to which it was devoted, it has so far appropriated the generic term to itself that it is now by way of eminence commonly called the writ of habeas corpus simply.¹⁸

b. De Homine Replegiando or Personal Replevin. The writ of habeas corpus is to be distinguished from the writ de homine replegiando or writ of personal replevin, which lies to replevy a man out of prison or out of the custody of any private person in the same manner as chattels may be replevied, upon giving security to the sheriff that the man shall be forthcoming to answer any charge against him.¹⁹ This writ was guarded with so many exceptions that it was not an

Other definitions are: "A writ which lies to replevy a man out of prison, or out of the custody of a private person, upon giving security to the sheriff that the man shall be forthcoming to answer any charge against him. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 66; 3 Blackstone Comm. 129. The statute—which had gone nearly out of use, having been superseded by the writ of habeas corpus—has been revived within a few years in some of the United States in an amended and more effectual form." Bouvier L. Dict.

"An ancient Writ for bailing a Man out of Prison: It lies where a Person is in Prison, not by special Commandment of the King, or his Judges, or for any Crime or Cause irreplevisable, directed to the Sheriff to cause him to be replevied." Jacob L. Dict. "Homine Replegiando."

When lies.—The writ was an original writ and the person imprisoned might sue it of right. Treblecock's Case, 1 Atk. 633, 26 Eng. Reprint 397. It lies in favor of a person unlawfully imprisoned (Hutchings v. Van Bokkelen, 34 Me. 126 [citing Richardson v. Richardson, 32 Me. 560]), but not in favor of one who has voluntarily surrendered (Garland v. Williams, 49 Me. 16). It cannot be maintained in behalf of a minor child against the father or guardian of such child, the remedy being by writ of habeas corpus. Farnsworth v. Richardson, 35 Me. 267; Richardson v. Richardson, supra; Bridges v. Bridges, 13 Me. 408. The writ does not lie in favor of a person held under legal process, that is to say, a writ or warrant issuing from any court under color of law, however defective, since persons restrained of their liberty under color of process of law have a speedy remedy by writ of habeas corpus, and one much less onerous, because requiring neither recognizance nor bond. Nason v. Staples, 43 Me. 123. See also Aldrich v. Aldrich, 3 Mete. (Mass.) 102. So where plaintiff is imprisoned in the county jail by lawful authority from a magistrate, the writ does not lie to the court of common pleas. Williams v. Blunt, 2 Mass. 207. It has been held that the writ is applicable to a trial of the question of the right of an alleged slave to freedom. In re Martin, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,154, 2 Paine 348. Contra, Morgan v. Reakirt, 4 Pa. L. J. Rep. 6, 6 Pa. L. J. 227; Huger v. Barnwell, 5 Rich. (S. C.) 273. See also Wright v. Deacon, 5 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 62.

The writ must be brought in the name of the person imprisoned or restrained of his liberty, although it may be at the procurement of another; and it cannot be used for the benefit of another person, although such person have by contract a lawful claim to his services or to the custody of his person. Farnsworth v. Richardson, 35 Me. 267; Richardson v. Richardson, 32 Me. 560.

Return.—"If the person be conveyed out of the sheriff's jurisdiction, the sheriff may return that he is eligned, elongatus; upon which a process issues (called a capias in withernam) (that you take in withernam) to imprison the defendant himself, without bail or mainprize, till he produces the party." 3 Blackstone Comm. 129. The sheriff must bring the party into court on the return of the writ. Skinner v. Fleet, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 263.

Jurisdiction.—The writ cannot legally is-effectual remedy for wrongful imprisonment in many cases, and it has fallen into disuse, having been superseded by the writ of habeas corpus,²⁰ although it has been recognized by the legislatures and courts of some states.²¹

4. EXISTENCE OF OTHER REMEDY—a. Appeal, Exceptions, or Writ of Error. The writ of habeas corpus is not designed to fulfil the functions of an appeal or a writ of error.²² It is not intended to bring in review mere errors or irregularities, whether relating to substantive rights or to the law of procedure, committed by a court having jurisdiction over person and subject-matter. Such errors and irregularities do not affect the jurisdiction of the court or render its judgment void, and the remedy is therefore by appeal, exceptions, or writ of error;²³ and this sue from any of the courts of law. Being an original writ it must issue from chancery. Johnson v. Medtart, 4 Harr. & J. (Md.) 24.

An appeal lies from the circuit court of common pleas from a judgment on a writ de homine replegiando. Wood v. Ross, 11 Mass. 271.

Former adjudication.—It is no answer to a habeas corpus in favor of a master to whom children have been apprenticed against the father for the custody of the children that the father obtained the custody of them by a writ de homine replegiando. People v. Pillow, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 672. A hearing before a judge on a habeas corpus of a fugitive slave from another state, and the judge's certificate of his absconding, delivered to the master claiming him in order that he remove the slave, are conclusive; and a writ de homine replegiando does not lie in such case to try the right of the fugitive to freedom. Wright v. Deacon, 5 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 62.

5. EFFECTIVENESS OF REMEDY. Habeas corpus is not the proper remedy where for any reason its issue would be ineffectual.²⁷

6. DISCRETION AS TO ISSUING WRIT. While the writ of habeas corpus is a writ of right in the enlarged sense of the term, its issue to some extent rests in the sound discretion of the court.²⁸

7. PERSONS ENTITLED TO RELIEF. The writ of habeas corpus is intended for the benefit of all persons who may be deprived of their liberty without sufficient cause.²⁹ As a general rule the writ should be applied for by the person detained himself, but in a proper case it may be made by some other person in his behalf.³⁰ Thus a husband is entitled to the writ to procure the discharge of his wife where she is unlawfully detained,³¹ and the wife to procure the discharge of her husband.³² So a minor may be discharged on the application of his parent,³³

Illustrations.—The writ has been issued at the instance of a special bail (Holsey v. Trevillo, 6 Watts (Pa.) 402), at the instance of a corporation having the care of destitute children (Milligan v. State, 97 Ind. 355), and at the instance of a deputy marshal who has a commissioner's warrant for the arrest on extradition proceedings of a debtor confined in jail at the suit of his creditors (In re Mineau, 45 Fed. 188); and in some cases the master has been permitted to procure the discharge of his slave (Scudder v. Seals, Walk. (Miss.) 154; Com. v. Beck, 1 Browne (Pa.) 277; U. S. v. Williamson, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,725); but where the slave had been tried as a free man and sentenced to the penitentiary, the master could not procure his discharge (Ex p. Toney, 11 Mo. 661; Ex p. Ball, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 588); and under the Mississippi statute the remedy could only be invoked where the slave had been taken by force, stratagem, or fraud (Buckingham v. Levi, 23 Miss. 590; Steele v. Shirley, 13 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 196). But as the object of the writ is to protect the liberty of the subject and not to enable a person to assert a right to property or to the services of another, it would seem that as a general rule the master ought not to be permitted to resort to habeas corpus to procure the return of his slave or of his apprentice. *Com. v. 8. PERSONS WHO MAY BE PROCEEDED AGAINST. All persons are subject to the writ of habeas corpus;³⁷ but it ought not to be directed to a corporation, as it is a mere artificial being and cannot restrain anybody; the writ should run to the officers and agents of the corporation.³⁸

B. Nature of Restraint or Detention — 1. IN GENERAL. An actual restraint is necessary to warrant interference by habeas corpus;³⁹ but any restraint which precludes freedom of action is sufficient, and actual confinement in jail is unnecessary.⁴⁰

3. VOLUNTARY RESTRAINT. If the restraint is voluntary as a general rule the writ ought not to issue.⁴³ So if a prisoner who has been released on bail surrenders himself of his own accord, it is held in several jurisdictions that habeas corpus will not lie.⁴⁴

C. Nature of Authority For Restraint or Detention — 1. PERSONAL RELATIONS OR AUTHORITY. Habeas corpus may be issued to determine the right of a parent to the custody of a child,⁴⁵ and it may be granted to inquire into the propriety of an attempt by a guardian of an incompetent or other person to exercise any restraint over him.⁴⁶

2. LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY. The legality of an imprisonment by order of a house of representatives may be inquired into on habeas corpus.⁴⁷

Anticipated guardianship.—Nor is it ground for denying the writ to restore a minor to the custody of his father that the respondent has applied for letters of guardianship in anticipation of the issuance of the writ. Ring v. Weinman, 116 Ga. 798, 43 S. E. 47.

It has been held not to lie to enable a guardian appointed according to law to obtain the custody of a minor ward who remains voluntarily with his mother (State v. Cheeseman, 5 N. J. L. 445), and this even though the ward has been forcibly removed by the mother from the possession of the guardian (Foster v. Alston, 6 How. (Miss.) 406). Nor will it lie for the custody of an infant nine years old already in the custody of its legally constituted guardian, as it could not be said to be under an illegal restraint. *People v. 48. In re Keeler, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,637, Hempst. 306.

A retired army officer is subject to arrest and detention for court-martial for an offense against the articles of war, and the fact that he is taken from his house by order of his commanding officer and held in close confinement in barracks without charges being preferred against him will not justify the civil authorities releasing him on habeas corpus proceedings. Closson v. U. S., 7 App. Cas. (D. C.) 460.

Obedience to superior.—Where a military officer made return to a writ that he declined to obey it at the present time under orders from his superior, it was held that the court would take no further action in the matter. Ex p. McQuillon, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 8,924; Ex p. Merryman, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,487, Taney 246.

The jurisdiction of a court-martial called to try an officer so arrested is not ousted by the action of the officer in suing out a writ of habeas corpus, although the time limited for his trial by the articles of war expires before the final determination of the habeas corpus proceedings. Closson v. U. S., 7 App. Cas. (D. C.) 460.

49. In re Keeler, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,637, Hempst. 306.

State courts have jurisdiction to issue a writ of habeas corpus for the purpose of inquiring into the cause of detention where one is claimed to be held under authority of the United States, and that jurisdiction is not ousted upon the making of a return alleging that such is the fact, as where an army officer returns that the prisoner is held as a deserter from the army; and if the return is traversed the court may proceed to inquire into the truth of the facts alleged, and may discharge the prisoner if it appears that he is illegally held. In re Reynolds, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,721 [explaining Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. (U. S.) 506, 16 L. ed. 169].

Exemption from draft.—Act Cong. March 3, 1863, c. 75, § 14 [12 U. S. St. at L. 733], requiring the presentation by drafted persons of all claims of exemption to the board of enrolment and making the board's decision final, does not, in the case of an exempt whose claim of exemption has been duly presented to the board and disallowed, preclude the subsequent consideration under a writ of habeas corpus of the question of his right of exemption. Antrim's Case, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 495, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 278.

The validity of the enlistment of a person into the military service of the United States may be inquired into on habeas corpus by a United States judge. If the enlistment was procured by fraudulent representations on the part of the recruiting officer and has never been ratified by the recruit, or if in consequence of his want of acquaintance with the English language a foreigner enlists, not knowing that he is actually entering the service but supposing that he is simply taking the preparatory steps, in either case he may on prompt application be discharged on habeas corpus. If, however, a person at the time of his enlistment denies that he is a married man and enlists as a single man, the fact that he has a wife and child does not entitle him to be discharged on habeas corpus, although it is provided in the army regulations that no married man shall be enlisted without special authority from the adjutant-general's office. Ex p. Schmeid, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,461, 1 Dill. 587.

See, however, In re Lesard, 134 Fed. 305, holding that where a minor under the age of eighteen years enlisted without the consent of his father, and after his arrest for desertion but before final hearing of a writ of habeas corpus by the father to obtain his discharge, formal charges of desertion and fraudulent enlistment, etc., were preferred against him by the military authorities, he could not be discharged under such writ until he had satisfied the charges pending against him by the government.

2. CRIMINAL OR QUASI-CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.⁵⁴ The writ of habeas corpus lies to test the legality of an arrest or commitment on a criminal or quasi-criminal charge,⁵⁵ that is to say, the court will inquire into the question of jurisdiction; but if it appears that jurisdiction has not been exceeded and that the proceeding is valid on its face, it is the general rule that the prisoner must be remanded.⁵⁶

6. FINAL JUDGMENT, SENTENCE, OR COMMITMENT⁶¹—a. In General. The judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, although erroneous, is binding until reversed, and it is the general rule that another court cannot, by means of the writ of habeas corpus, look beyond the judgment and reëxamine the charges and proceedings on which it was based; in other words the writ challenges the jurisdiction alone.⁶² But from this it does not follow that the only question which can be inquired into is the jurisdiction of the court over person and subject-matter, but in addition the court must, at least according to the later cases, have had jurisdiction to render the particular judgment, without which its judgment is void and the prisoner entitled to be discharged.⁶³

5. ILLEGAL EXISTENCE OF COURT. The legal existence of the court by virtue of whose process the prisoner is detained may be inquired into on habeas corpus, as this involves a question of jurisdiction.⁷⁵

6. WANT OF TITLE TO OFFICE OF JUDGE OR OFFICER. The rule is different, however, with respect to the legal title of the judge or other officer to the office; if the court or office is of recognized legal existence and the officer is at least a de facto officer and not a mere usurper, his legal title to the office cannot be questioned in a habeas corpus proceeding.⁷⁶

7. IMPRISONMENT FOR ACT NOT CONSTITUTING AN OFFENSE. In many jurisdictions it is held that habeas corpus will lie for the discharge of one imprisoned for an act which does not constitute any offense known to the law,⁷⁷ but there are some cases to the contrary.⁷⁸

8. UNCONSTITUTIONALITY OF STATUTE OR ORDINANCE. In the earlier decisions there is much conflict on the question whether the constitutionality of a statute or ordinance by virtue of which the party was imprisoned could be attacked on habeas corpus. In several states it was held that habeas corpus is not the proper remedy.⁷⁹ In a leading case in the United States supreme court, however, a different position was taken,⁸⁰ and since that decision there has been possibly a greater uniformity in the decisions of the different states, the courts of some states having changed their prior rulings,⁸¹ and it may now be said to be the general doctrine, in both federal and state courts, that the question may be adjudicated in a habeas corpus proceeding.⁸² But the courts are not uniform even at this time. Thus it has been held that the court will not determine the constitutionality of a statute in a habeas corpus proceeding if another remedy exists;⁸³ that at least after conviction in a court of competent jurisdiction the prisoner cannot attack the constitutionality of the law under which he was prosecuted;⁸⁴ that the writ may not be resorted to even after conviction;⁸⁵ that it will not lie to determine the constitutionality of an act regulating the procedure in the case of a plea of insanity in a murder trial,⁸⁶ nor to test the constitutionality of an act providing for an indeterminate sentence.⁸⁷ And where petitioner has been convicted in a state court, the federal courts will generally refuse to release him on habeas corpus, although the statute under which the conviction was had violates the federal constitution,⁸⁸ but in exceptional cases the federal courts will interfere.⁸⁹

L. ed. 717, the court saying that "an unconstitutional law is void, and is no law. An offence created by it is not a crime. A conviction under it is not merely erroneous, but is illegal and void, and cannot be a legal cause of imprisonment."

9. USE OF IMPROPER MEANS IN ACQUIRING JURISDICTION. The fact that the prisoner has been brought within the jurisdiction by improper means,⁹⁰ as by forcible abduction,⁹¹ fraud,⁹² or mistake⁹³ will not ordinarily authorize his discharge on habeas corpus. But it is otherwise where the arrest is in a civil suit brought by one concerned in the improper action.⁹⁴

10. DELAY IN PROCEEDINGS. Unreasonable delay on the part of the examining magistrate in rendering his decision might warrant the discharge of the prisoner on habeas corpus,⁹⁵ and delay in returning an indictment has in some jurisdictions been held ground for his discharge.⁹⁶ The same has been held of a delay in bringing him to trial,⁹⁷ but where he has applied to the proper court for discharge

15. EXCESSIVE SENTENCE. The fact that the sentence is for a longer period than prescribed by law does not, it is generally held, entitle the prisoner to release on habeas corpus until he has served the prescribed term;⁷ but in some jurisdictions this is held not a mere error or irregularity but an excess of jurisdiction rendering the entire sentence void, and where this rule obtains the prisoner is entitled to his discharge.⁸ The court may also have jurisdiction to commit a party on one ground but not on another, and may nevertheless commit him on both grounds, and in such case the prisoner ought not to be discharged so long as he is properly imprisoned under the valid portion of the commitment.⁹ And if a court has jurisdiction to sentence one to imprisonment or to pay a fine, and inflicts both punishments, the prisoner will nevertheless not be discharged so long as he has neither paid the fine nor served the term.¹⁰

16. CONFINEMENT IN IMPROPER PLACE. Confinement of a convict in an improper place may be ground for relief;¹¹ but the question whether the penitentiary in which a prisoner was confined was such de jure cannot be determined on habeas corpus,¹² and the fact that the penitentiary over which one of the territories claimed jurisdiction was actually located beyond its limits did not warrant the discharge of a prisoner.¹³

17. RIGHT TO ADMISSION TO BAIL.¹⁴ In the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary the writ of habeas corpus may be used to procure the admission of a party to bail.¹⁵

Jur. 89, 1 Montreal Leg. N. 102. As regards habeas corpus in criminal matters, the supreme court has only a concurrent jurisdiction with the judges of the superior courts of the various provinces, and not an appellate jurisdiction; and there is no necessity for an appeal from the judgment of any judge or court or any appellate court, because the prisoner can come direct to any judge of the supreme court individually, and upon that judge's refusing the writ or remanding the prisoner, he can take his appeal from that judgment to the full court. In re Boucher, Cassels Dig. (Can.) 327. Supreme and Exchequer Court Act, § 51, does not constitute the individual judges of the supreme court separate and independent courts, nor confer on the judges a jurisdiction outside of and independent of the court; and obedience to a writ issued under said section cannot be enforced by the judge but by the court, which alone can issue an attachment for contempt in not obeying its process. In re Sproule, 12 Can. Sup. Ct. 140. The jurisdiction of a judge of the supreme court in matters of habeas corpus is not an appellate jurisdiction over provincial courts, nor does it extend further than to give such judge equal and coordinate power with a judge of the provincial court. In re White, 31 Can. Ray*, 45 Ala. 15 (denying authority of probate judge where petitioner was confined to the county jail under indictment for murder); Hale v. State, 24 Ala. 80 (holding that under the act establishing courts of probate the probate judge had the power, afterward taken away by the code, "to grant, hear and determine writs of habeas corpus" where petitioner was confined in jail under a charge of grand larceny); State v. Guest, 6 Ala. 778 (holding that a judge of the county court was not authorized to issue the writ to bring before him the body of a prisoner committed for a felony).

Arkansas.—Wright v. Johnson, 5 Ark. 687, holding that a judge of the circuit court had full authority either as chancellor or as common-law judge to issue, hear, and determine the writ.

California.—Gardner v. Jones, 126 Cal. 614, 59 Pac. 126 (holding that where it was provided by act of legislature that any one in custody as an insane person was entitled to the writ on application to "the superior judge of the county" in which the hospital was located, and that on the return his insanity should be inquired into, the hearing might be had before a judge of another county called in to take the place of the superior judge); People v. Booker, 51 Cal. 317 (holding that where the writ is issued by the supreme court, returnable before a judge of a district court, the authority of the latter is the same as that of the supreme court if the writ had been returnable before it).

Colorado.—People v. Arapahoe County Dist. Ct., 26 Colo. 380, 58 Pac. 608 (holding that the district court had no power on habeas corpus to review a judgment of the county court in a misdemeanor case); Evans v. Bowers, 13 Colo. 511, 22 Pac. 812 (holding that where the statute vested the county judges with jurisdiction in certain habeas corpus cases, but specially provided that they should not issue the writ where there was a term of the supreme or district court within the county within thirty days from the time of the application, in computing the time the day on which the application was made should be excluded).

Georgia.—Simmons v. Georgia Iron, etc., Co., 117 Ga. 305, 43 S. E. 780, 61 L. R. A. 739 (holding that, although the application may show that the person is detained under a void sentence of the superior court, that fact would not prevent the judge of the city court from taking jurisdiction); Sumner v. Sumner, 117 Ga. 229, 43 S. E. 485 (holding that the judge of the city court of Wrightsville has "power to issue writs of habeas corpus, and hear and determine the same as judges of the superior courts may do"); Moore v. Moore, 66 Ga. 336 (holding that the ordinary has jurisdiction to issue and try the writ to determine the rights of a husband and wife living separately as to the possession of the children); Moore v. Robertson, 63 Ga. 506 (holding that jurisdiction to issue the writ was not conferred by the code upon the court of ordinary but upon the ordinary; that in hearing and determining the writs the ordinary acts as an inferior judiciary or special habeas corpus court; and that for this reason the constitution of 1877, by restricting the jurisdiction of courts of ordinary in some respects to county matters, does not terminate or withdraw the statutory power of the ordinary, previously granted, to preside on the return of the writ).

Illinois.—People v. Town, 4 Ill. 19, holding that the masters in chancery were without power to issue writs of habeas corpus, but might by indorsement on the application order the clerk of the circuit court to issue the writ, and it would be the duty of such clerk to issue the same under the seal of the court; and that the writ should not in such case be returnable before the master in chancery, but into the circuit or supreme court or some judge thereof.

Kansas.—In re Jewett, 69 Kan. 830, 77 Pac. 567; In re Crandall, 59 Kan. 671, 54 Pac. 686, holding that the probate court has full authority to issue the writ and to inquire into the legality of the detention, having in that respect equal power with the district or supreme courts.

Kentucky.—Bethuram v. Black, 11 Bush 628, 631, where the court says that "circuit judges and chancellors, and, by the provisions of the special acts creating common pleas and criminal courts, the judges of these courts also, may issue writs of habeas corpus directed to persons in any portion of the state."

Maryland.—Deckard v. State, 38 Md. 186, holding that the doctrine that where a special limited jurisdiction is conferred by statute on any tribunal its power to act must appear on the face of the proceedings does not apply to proceedings in habeas corpus.

Michigan.—Matter of Fowler, 49 Mich. 234, 13 N. W. 530 (holding that the circuit courts have power to issue the writ to enable persons convicted of disorderly conduct to come before them for the purpose of giving bail); In re Mason, 8 Mich. 70 (holding that the recorder of Detroit has no authority to issue the writ to take a prisoner from the reform school who has been lawfully sentenced there, unless to testify).

Minnesota.—State v. Hill, 10 Minn. 63 (holding that a judge of a district court has power to allow the writ returnable before himself at chambers); Ex p. Lee, 1 Minn. 60 (holding that the territorial probate court had no power to issue the writ, the statute giving such power having been impliedly repealed).

Missouri.—State v. Murphy, 132 Mo. 382, 33 S. W. 1136, 53 Am. St. Rep. 491 (holding that a judge of the St. Louis court of criminal corrections had no jurisdiction to release, on habeas corpus, one held in custody under an indictment for murder, where either of the judges of the criminal court was in the city); Martin v. State, 12 Mo. 471 (holding that a circuit court or judge thereof in vacation has authority to issue the writ for a person confined on indictment found in another court of competent jurisdiction).

New Jersey.—Buckley v. Perrine, 54 N. J. Eq. 285, 34 Atl. 1054, holding that under the supplement of 1889 to the Habeas Corpus Act the vice-chancellors had power to use the writ of habeas corpus according to its appropriate office, as the chancellor and justices of the supreme court may use it, to test the legality of personal restraint, the power of the chancellor in this respect being coextensive with that of the supreme court.

New York.—Nash v. People, 36 N. Y. 607 [affirming 16 Abb. Pr. 231, 25 How. Pr. 307, 5 Park. Cr. 473, and overruling People v. Russell, 46 Barb. 27, 1 Abb. Pr. N. S. 230] (holding that the city judge of New York has no power to issue the writ; People v. Reilley, 11 Hun 80 (holding that one in the custody of a sheriff by virtue of a warrant of extradition issued by the governor was not a person detained in the common jail of a county upon a criminal charge, within Laws (1847), c. 460, § 27, authorizing the court of oyer and terminer to issue a writ of habeas corpus); People v. Humphreys, 24 Barb. 521 (holding that under the Revised Statutes authority to entertain proceedings in habeas corpus in the case of a wife separated from her husband, applying for the custody of her minor child, was vested only in the supreme court, and a single judge of that court or a county judge had no jurisdiction); People v. Wilcox, 22 Barb. 178 (holding that a justice of the supreme court, upon a statutory writ of habeas corpus returnable before him at chambers, possesses no other powers than such as are possessed by a supreme court commissioner under the statute, and he cannot therefore exercise that species of jurisdiction which belongs exclusively to a court of equity); People v. Porter, 1 Duer 709 (holding that the powers of the superior court in granting the writ were only those enumerated in the Habeas Corpus Act); Matter of Miller, 1 Daly 562, 19 Abb. Pr. 394 (holding that an officer allowing and hearing the writ out of court is deemed a court within the meaning of the act of 1864, which forbids certain persons to be discharged before the expiration of sentence except upon review by a court superior to the magistrate making the commitment); Matter of Taylor, 8 Misc. 159, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 500 (holding that a person imprisoned for contempt of the court of oyer and terminer could not, during the session at which he was committed, be removed on habeas corpus returnable before a justice of the supreme court, although the oyer and terminer had taken a recess for several days); People v. Tucker, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 792, 16 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 126 (holding that the county judge had no power to issue the writ); People v. Chautauqua County, 11 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 172 (holding that every officer having power to grant the writ might exercise in the forms prescribed by law all the powers exercised at common law by the king's bench in England and the supreme court of the state); People v. Hoster, 14 Abb. Pr. N. S. 414 (holding that the recorder of Albany, like other recorders of cities on whom the powers of supreme court commissioners were by law conferred, might issue writs of habeas corpus; and that it was no objection to the jurisdiction in such cases that the question raised was one depending on equitable principles); People v. Heffernan, 38 How. Pr. 402 (holding that the section of the Habeas Corpus Act which provides that "during the session of a court of oyer and terminer, no prisoner detained in the common jail of the county upon any criminal charge, shall be removed therefrom by any writ of habeas corpus, unless such writ shall have been issued by such court of oyer and terminer, or shall be made returnable before it," does not apply to a case where a prisoner is detained in prison in execution of a sentence already pronounced); People v. Cooper, 8 How. Pr. 288 (holding that the supreme court had the power to award the writ at special term); People v. Hanna, 3 How. Pr. 39 (holding that a justice of the supreme court had power to allow the writ notwithstanding there might be an officer in the county authorized to exercise the same power); People v. Mercein, 8 Paige 47 (holding that the power of the chancellor to issue the writ did not depend solely upon the statutes, but was an inherent power in the court of chancery derived from common law, to be exercised in conformity to the statutory provisions); People v. Jefferds, 5 Park. Cr. 518 (holding that an application by a prisoner, indicted and imprisoned for an offense not triable at the court of sessions, to be discharged on the ground that he had not been brought to trial within the prescribed time might be made to any court having jurisdiction to issue the writ, including the supreme court); Jones' ties may issue the writ to any part of the United States.²¹ The authority of the circuit courts of appeals, on the other hand, in the absence of statute, is limited to the circuit in which it sits,²² as is also that of the circuit²³ and district²⁴ courts. The jurisdiction of the courts of the different states is of course generally dependent upon the party being confined at some place within the state,²⁵ and in the case of the lower courts and judges in some instances within the district or circuit;²⁶ but if it appears that the respondent is able to produce the party, the writ may issue notwithstanding the party is not within the state.²⁷ The court or judge sitting at the place of the confinement will have jurisdiction irrespective of the residence of the party confining,²⁸ and it is generally required in any event that the application be first made to a court or judge sitting at or near the place where the party is confined,²⁹ but for cause shown, such as the absence, disability, or refusal to act of the local judge, application may generally be made to a court

W. 281 (holding that under the amendment to the constitution of 1876 the district courts had jurisdiction to issue the writ, at the instance of parents, to determine their rights to the custody of their minor child); Rice v. Rice, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 506, 59 S. W. 941 (holding that the county court has no jurisdiction to issue the writ to secure possession of an infant, this being within the jurisdiction of the district courts); Letcher v. Crandall, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 62, 44 S. W. 197 (holding that the county judge has no power to discharge from custody on habeas corpus a person charged with a capital felony, as such court has no jurisdiction to try felonies, and that the fact that the sheriff voluntarily produced the prisoner would make no difference); Stirman v. Turner, (App. 1890) 16 S. W. 787 (holding that prior to the amendment to the constitution the county courts had jurisdiction to issue the writ for this purpose).

2. TIME FOR APPLICATION. Where the party is imprisoned under a sentence which is excessive,³⁶ or under two distinct judgments or convictions, one of which is void,³⁷ he should not as a general rule apply for release on habeas corpus until the valid portion of his imprisonment has expired. Where the case is pending before a magistrate sitting as an examining court the application is premature; the party must wait until the magistrate has refused to discharge him.³⁸ So if an application for bail is pending in such a case, it would be irregular for another court of concurrent jurisdiction to issue the writ.³⁹

4. PETITION — a. Form and Requisites in General. In most states the essential requisites of the application for a writ of habeas corpus are prescribed by statute.⁴⁷ As a general rule the petition should state that the applicant or person on whose behalf the application is made, naming him, is restrained of his liberty, the name of the officer or person by whom he is restrained, and the nature of the restraint, the place thereof, its cause, its illegality and wherein it is illegal, and conclude with a prayer for the writ.⁴⁸ The petition must state facts as distinguished

See, however, Ex p. Champion, 52 Ala. 311, holding that a petition not alleging that the prisoner is illegally restrained is not demurrable.

Habeas corpus to determine custody of child.—Requisites of petition see Hammond v. Hammond, 90 Ga. 527, 16 S. E. 265 (holding that in order for the father or any other citizen to obtain possession of a child from the mother by habeas corpus after a decree awarding it to her, the petition must contain the sworn allegation required by Ga. Code, § 4612 [g]); McGlennan v. Margowski, 90 Ind. 150 (holding that the petition of a father showing that he is deprived of the custody of his legitimate child, of the age of eleven years, by act of defendant is sufficient); Hovey v. Morris, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 559 (holding that a petition is sufficient which alleges that petitioner is the guardian of a certain child, that the child is the daughter of a named person deceased and his wife, who after the husband's death married a third person, and that the child is by such third person and wife illegally restrained of its liberty and detained from the custody of petitioner); People v. Osborne, 6 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 299 (holding that the failure to state in a petition for habeas corpus to obtain the custody of a child that the child is not detained by virtue of a final order of a competent tribunal made in a special proceeding or of an execution or precept issued upon such order is fatal); Rust v. Vanvactor, 9 W. Va. 600 (holding that a petition is sufficient if it shows that petitioner has a legal right to the custody of the infant, and that the detention is in violation of that right; also that where the infant is under nine years of age the petition need not expressly allege that it is detained against its will).

Petitions held sufficient see Sumner v. Sumner, 117 Ga. 229, 43 S. E. 485 (holding that if the application complies with every provision prescribed by the code it is not open to general demurrer); Ex p. Lawler, 28 Ind. 241 (holding that a petition is sufficient which alleges that petitioner is imprisoned by the sheriff for an alleged contempt in disobeying an order of court, and that in fact the imprisonment is not by virtue of any writ or order of court authorizing it).

Exhibits.—In a suit by a mother to recover the custody of her infant child, her from conclusions of law, so that the court may exercise an intelligent discretion in passing upon the application.⁴⁹

b. Allegations or Exhibits Regarding Process or Proceedings Authorizing Imprisonment. A copy of the warrant, order, or process by virtue of which petitioner is restrained of his liberty must generally be attached to the petition, or the essential parts thereof set out therein,⁵⁰ or a legal excuse for the omission be shown.⁵¹ And if the writ is sought on the ground that petitioner is held under a commitment issued without probable cause, it should include the evidence taken before the committing magistrate.⁵²

c. Verification. The petition should be verified.⁵³

d. Amendment. The petition may be amended in a proper case.⁵⁴

e. Mode of Objecting to Sufficiency. The sufficiency of a petition for a writ right to which has been declared in a decree in an action for divorce, a copy of the decree need not be filed with the petition. Sears v. Dessar, 28 Ind. 472. However, a guardian seeking by means of the writ to obtain the custody of his infant ward must make his letters of guardianship a part of his petition. Gregg v. Wynn, 22 Ind. 373.

Waiver of objections.—The omission of a jurisdictional allegation in the petition is not waived by the appearance of respondent or by going to trial. In re Curd, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 192, 11 Cinc. L. Bul. 186.

Validity of writ allowed on insufficient petition.—A writ of habeas corpus allowed by competent authority is not void because the petition is insufficient, and hence if respondent disregards it he is guilty of contempt. Nebraska Children's Home Soc. v. State, 57 Nebr. 765, 78 N. W. 267.

49. Arkansas.—Ex p. White, 9 Ark. 222, holding that a petition by one who has been indicted in a capital case and refused bail must state such facts in his petition as will rebut the presumption of guilt raised by the indictment, a general allegation of his innocence not being sufficient.

California.—Ex p. Walpole, 84 Cal. 584, 24 Pac. 308; Ex p. Voll, 41 Cal. 29, holding that one who applies on habeas corpus to be admitted to bail pending an appeal from a conviction for manslaughter must state facts on which the court can exercise an intelligent discretion.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Habeas Corpus," § 53.

54. State v. Giroux, 15 Mont. 137, 38 Pac. 464 (holding that where the title of the proceeding is technically wrong, the trial court should amend of its own motion); of habeas corpus should in some states be questioned, not by demurrer,⁵⁵ but by motion to quash the writ.⁵⁶

f. Conclusiveness. Facts duly alleged in a petition under oath may be taken to be true unless denied by the return or controlled by other evidence,⁵⁷ provided that the allegations are distinct and unambiguous.⁵⁸

5. ALLOWANCE AND ISSUANCE OF WRIT— a. In General. While the writ of habeas corpus is a writ of right in the enlarged sense of the term, it does not issue of course, but reasonable grounds must exist for awarding it. If it appears on the face of the petition that the party would only be remanded, the writ should be denied.⁵⁹ In a proper case the court may issue an order to show cause why the writ should not issue and dispose of the case without first issuing the writ itself.⁶⁰

b. Compelling Allowance by Mandamus. In some jurisdictions mandamus will lie to compel the issuance of the writ of habeas corpus in a proper case.⁶¹

c. Penalties For Refusal. By statutes in some of the states penalties are imposed for the improper refusal of the writ of habeas corpus.⁶²

6. FORM AND REQUISITES OF WRIT. In most of the states the essential requisites of the writ of habeas corpus are prescribed by statute. In general it should be directed to the party imposing the restraint, and should command him to have the body of the person detained, with, in some instances, the time and cause of his detention, before the court or officer named therein, immediately upon receipt of the writ or at a specified time and place, to do and receive what should then be determined, and have then and there the writ.⁶³ The writ must be signed by

Com. v. County Prison, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 191 (holding that a defect in the petition in that it was not attested and subscribed by two witnesses who were present at the delivery of the same as provided by statute may be cured by amendment).

a judge⁶⁴ and be issued under the seal of the court.⁶⁵ The writ may be issued by the clerk of the circuit court under an order of a justice of the supreme court to whom the petition was addressed.⁶⁶ The technical rules of pleading do not apply in determining the sufficiency of the writ.⁶⁷

7. JUDGE AND COURT BEFORE WHICH WRIT IS RETURNABLE. The writ may be made returnable before the court or judge issuing it.⁶⁸ In some states, in criminal cases, the writ is returnable in the county where the offense was committed.⁶⁹

8. CERTIORARI INCIDENT TO WRIT.⁷⁰ The writ of habeas corpus is effectual only to bring up the body of the prisoner with the cause of his detention. Where therefore the return to the writ shows that the prisoner is held by virtue of proceedings in a court or before a magistrate over which the court issuing the habeas corpus has a supervisory authority, the latter court will issue a writ of certiorari

67. Simmons v. Georgia Iron, etc., Co., 117 Ga. 305, 43 S. E. 780, 61 L. R. A. 739.

68. See Elliott v. U. S., 23 App. Cas. (D. C.) 456 (holding that when an application is made for the writ either to the supreme court or to a justice thereof, and the writ is issued, the return must be made, not simply to the court, but before the court or justice by whose order the writ was issued); Com. v. Sheriff, 3 Pa. L. J. 375 (holding that under Pa. Act, Feb. 8, 1785, § 6, where a relator had been bound over by the court of quarter sessions during its session to answer a charge of misdemeanor, the writ, if returnable at all, must be to the judges of the court of quarter sessions, who alone have jurisdiction until after the end of the term or session).

This is not always so, however. Thus a statute providing that any judge of a district court may hold court for any other district judge gives a district judge authority to hear a habeas corpus case for and at the request of the judge of another district who has absented himself from the district after issuing the writ. Ex p. Angus, 28 Tex. App. 293, 12 S. W. 1099. So a federal district judge allowing a writ of habeas corpus at chambers in term-time of the circuit may at his discretion make it returnable to the circuit court. In re Kaine, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,598, 10 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 257. And a writ issued by a clerk of the circuit court pursuant to an order of a master in chancery should not be made returnable before the master, but should be returned into the circuit or supreme court if in session, and in vacation before some judge thereof. People v. Town, 4 Ill. 19. In Quebec any judge may issue a writ of habeas corpus, but it should be taken to the court of queen's bench or to the superior court. If it is taken to the court of queen's bench it should be taken to the place where the appeals of the district are carried. If it is taken to the superior court the provisions of the code of civil procedure that defendant must be brought before the proper tribunal of his domicile, or that of the place where the commitment has been personally signified to him, or that where the right of action arose will prevail. Morency v. Fortier, 12 Quebec Super. Ct. 68.

69. Patterson v. State, 71 Miss. 675, 15 So. 794 (holding, however, that the code provision is directory and not jurisdictional); Ex p. Magee, (Tex. Cr. App. 1902) 71 S. W. 286 (holding that where an original application for habeas corpus to fix bail is made to the court of criminal appeals, the writ when ordered will be made returnable before a trial judge in the county where the cause is pending); Ex p. Fulton, (Tex. Cr. App. 1901) 65 S. W. 1059 (holding that where a person is arrested in one county under a capias issued in another county in which two indictments have been against him, a writ of habeas corpus issued in the county in which the arrest was made should not be made returnable in that county, the proper place being to the district court of the county in which the indictments are pending). However, a writ issued from one district court of a county which is divided into two districts may be returned to the judge of the other district, when the judge of the former has requested the latter to hear the case for him and has absented himself from the district. Ex p. Angus, 28 Tex. App. 293, 12 S. W. 1099.

Effect of change of venue.—Under Tex. Code Cr. Proc. art. 137, providing that after indictment found a writ of habeas corpus must be made returnable to the county where the offense was committed, a writ granted after change of venue should be made returnable before the district judge or district court of the county where the offense was committed. Ex p. Graham, (Tex. Cr. App. 1901) 64 S. W. 932; Ex p. Springfield, 28 Tex. App. 27, 11 S. W. 677; Ex p. Trader, 24 Tex. App. 393, 6 S. W. 533.

9. SERVICE OF WRIT. The service of the writ of habeas corpus is regulated by statute in most of the states,⁷² and in some of them the course of procedure in the case of an attempted evasion of service is prescribed.⁷³ Where service of the writ is prevented by an armed force the court may order the writ to be placed on the files to be served when and where its service may become practicable.⁷⁴

New York.—People v. Tompkins, 2 Edm. Sel. Cas. 191. By the later cases it seems that it is improper to sue out writs of habeas corpus and certiorari at the same time, as under the practice in New York the writ of certiorari is not supplemental to the writ of habeas corpus but merely an alternative therefor to be issued when it is not desirable that the body of the prisoner be produced. People v. Hagan, 34 Misc. 24, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 451. Necessity for writ of certiorari see People v. Flynn, 37 Misc. 87, 74 N. Y. Suppl. 731 [affirmed in 72 N. Y. App. Div. 67, 76 N. Y. Suppl. 293].

Sufficiency of service see People v. Walsh, 1 N. Y. Suppl. 143, 15 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 19 (holding that where relator was in the sheriff's custody, and the writ directed to the sheriff and jail warden where relator was confined, service on the warden only is insufficient unless the sheriff cannot be found); Ex p. Wilson, 4 City Hall Rec. 47; Matter of Hakewill, 12 C. B. 223, 74 E. C. L. 223 (where service by leaving with brother and agent was held sufficient).

England.—Ex p. Gale, 3 D. & L. 114, 10 Jur. 334, 14 L. J. Q. B. 316, where it was held that on habeas corpus to discharge a prisoner committed for assisting to conceal a deserter, notice should be given the secretary of war.

Canada.—Ex p. Gauvreau, 1 Montreal Leg. N. 53.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Habeas Corpus," § 61.

Sufficiency of notice see Ex p. Beatty, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 229, holding that it is not necessary to serve with such notice a copy of the petition or other paper on which the writ was granted.

Waiver of notice see People v. Kehl, 15 Mich. 330, holding that in a habeas corpus proceeding in behalf of a party held under a body execution, plaintiff does not waive his right to notice before an order in discharge is made by the fact that his attorney appears for the purpose of objecting to the hearing for the want of such notice.

of the writ itself.⁷⁶ No valid order can be thereafter entered in the original cause;⁷⁷ nor can the jurisdiction of the court issuing the writ be ousted by any act of the parties themselves, as by the release of the prisoner under bail.⁷⁸

b. As to Custody of Person Detained. The custody of the prisoner is entirely under the direction and control of the court to which the return is made.⁷⁹

12. QUASHAL, VACATION, OR ABANDONMENT OF WRIT—a. Quashal or Vacation. Motion to quash the writ may be made where it appears that there is no ground for the party's discharge.⁸⁰

b. Abandonment. A habeas corpus proceeding to procure the custody of a child will not be considered as abandoned merely because, after the order has been made, petitioner agrees that the child may remain a short time with respondent.⁸¹

C. Return, Production of Person, and Answer—1. RETURN—a. Requisites and Sufficiency—(1) GENERAL RULES.* The essential requisites of the return are prescribed by statute in most of the states. In general it should state whether or not the respondent has the person in question in his custody, and if so, under what authority and the cause thereof.⁸² In many of the states it is necessary to set out in the return a copy of the writ, warrant, or other written

New York.—In re Newkirk, 37 Misc. 404, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 777, holding that a return stating that relator is held after conviction under a warrant of commitment to a magistrate for disorderly conduct is defective, as there is no such criminal offense as disorderly conduct.

West Virginia.—State v. Reuff, 29 W. Va. 751, 2 S. E. 801, 6 Am. St. Rep. 676, holding that less certainty is required in returns than in pleadings in civil actions, but certainty to a certain intent in general is required.

United States.—In re Doo Woon, 18 Fed. 898, 9 Sawy. 417, holding that unless the return shows that the caption and detention are legal at the time of the service of the writ the prisoner ought to be discharged.

England.—Matter of Clarke, 2 Q. B. 619, 2 G. & D. 780, 5 Jur. 757, 42 E. C. L. 835, holding that a return setting up that the party was committed "upon the following order," and then setting out an order purporting to be made by the master of the rolls, is insufficient as not directly averring by whom the order was made.

Canada.—Rex v. Venot, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 209 (holding that where a return to a writ of habeas corpus or to an order of the nature of such writ specifies two warrants of commitment for the same offense, and neither the second warrant nor such return declares the second warrant to be in substitution for or in amendment of the first, which is irregular and bad, the prisoner should be discharged); Reg. v. Reno, 4 Ont. Pr. 281 (holding that a return stating that respondent holds the prisoners under a warrant of committal annexed but is unable to produce them for want of means of paying for their conveyance is not a good return, but merely alleges an excuse for not making a return).

authority, if any, by virtue of which the party is detained, and to produce the Proceedings to obtain custody of child.—Requisites of return see Bullock v. Robertson, 180 Ind. 521, 65 N. E. 5 (holding that the sufficiency of the return is not material as regards the court's power to make such a disposition of the child as appears most conducive to its welfare); In re Mahoney, 24 Nova Scotia 86 (return held sufficient); In re Smart, 11 Ont. Pr. 482 (holding that in determining the right of one parent as against the other to the custody of a child the court should look to the statutory law of the province as well as the common law).

The return should be liberally construed. People v. Nevins, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 154.

Return held sufficient see the following cases:

California.—Ex p. Noble, 96 Cal. 362, 31 Pac. 224, holding that it need not show that the ordinance under which the prisoner was convicted was properly published.

Indiana.—Brooke v. Logan, 112 Ind. 183, 13 S. E. 669, 2 Am. St. Rep. 177, holding that where the return is good on one ground it is sufficient as against a general exception.

Kansas.—In re Chipchase, 56 Kan. 357, 43 Pac. 264, holding that the return need not contain a denial of averments of the petition, nor anything more than is prescribed by law.

Nebraska.—Ex p. Dennison, (1904) 101 N. W. 1045, holding that in proceedings to obtain the discharge of one held under the governor's warrant in extradition, it is not indispensable that the return contain affirmative allegations of all the facts on which the extradition proceedings are based, but it is sufficient if it sets forth the governor's warrant, and the recitals of the warrant, together with the allegations of the application for habeas corpus, show facts justifying the detention of accused.

New York.—People v. Protestant Episcopal House of Mercy, 128 N. Y. 180, 28 N. E. 473 (holding that the requirement of the writ for a return of the day and cause of the imprisonment is sufficiently complied with by a return of the commitment); People v. Pinkerton, 77 N. Y. 245 (holding that a return setting forth a warrant of the governor for the arrest of a fugitive from the justice of another state, which contains recitals of facts necessary to confer authority under the constitution and laws of the United States to issue it, is a sufficient justification for holding the prisoner, without producing the papers or evidence on which the governor acted); People v. Workhouse Warden, 37 Misc. 639, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 1111 (holding that a return to a writ of habeas corpus to produce the release of a prisoner from the workhouse which states that he is held under a commitment from a city magistrate is not defective in failing to show that he was arrested under a warrant, as it will be presumed that the magistrate acquired jurisdiction over the prisoner in the proper manner; also that when the relator claims that he is entitled to be released under Greater

New York Charter, § 710, authorizing the release of convicts for vagrancy in less than the term of sentence if the records show that they have not been committed to the workhouse, penitentiary, or county jail within two years for public intoxication, disorderly conduct, or vagrancy, it is not necessary that the return show that he has been so committed); In re Newkirk, 37 Misc. 404, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 777 (holding that where a return states that relator is held under a warrant for "disorderly conduct," and is defective in that there is no such offense under the statutes, but it appears that the relator is held as a "disorderly person," and the commitment states that he has abandoned his wife without adequate support, which brings him within the definition of a disorderly person, under Code Cr. Proc. § 899, the writ will be dismissed); People v. Fox, 34 Misc. 82, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 545, 15 N. Y. Cr. 373 (holding that the return need not contain the evidence on which the prisoner was convicted).

Wisconsin.—In re Mowry, 12 Wis. 52, holding that where a petition for a habeas corpus alleges that petitioner is confined in jail on an execution against his person, which was issued irregularly or in an action in which petitioner was not liable to arrest, the return of the jailer is sufficient if it shows that petitioner is held by virtue of an execution against his person which is valid upon its face and which is produced and a copy of it annexed to the return.

United States.—In re Moy Quong Shing, 125 Fed. 641 (holding that under Act Cong. Feb. 14, 1903, c. 552, § 7 (32 U. S. St. at L. 828 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. (1903) p. 46]), placing jurisdiction of the deportation of aliens in the department of commerce and labor, a return to a writ of habeas corpus sued out by an alleged Chinese alien showing that respondent was an officer of immigration under control of the commissioner general in charge of the port where the alien attempted to enter, by designation of the secretary of commerce and labor, and that he held such Chinese person as such officer, sufficiently shows authority for the detention); In re Ah Toy, 45 Fed. 795 (holding that the return is not demurrable for not setting out the ordinance under which the prisoner was convicted, where it was set out in the petition).

Canada.—U. S. v. Gaynor, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 205, holding that a return to a writ of habeas corpus issued pending a remand in extradition proceedings is good if it discloses an information duly laid before an extradition judge having jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the inquiry, the appearance of the accused before such judge, and a warrant under the hand and seal of the judge remanding him into custody until the time fixed for proceeding with the hearing.

(ii) VERIFICATION. By statute in most of the states the return unless made by a public official must be verified.⁸⁷

most jurisdictions for a failure to obey the writ in this respect in the absence of a sufficient excuse.⁹⁷

3. ANSWER TO RETURN AND ISSUES THEREON. In a habeas corpus proceeding the person in whose behalf the writ is issued may deny any of the facts set forth in the return and may allege new matter in avoidance thereof,⁹⁸

^{97.} See the statutes of the different states. See also Ex p. Coupland, 26 Tex. 386; In re Stirling, 23 Nova Scotia 195; Reg. v. Stirling, 22 Nova Scotia 547.

An essential element of the remedy by habeas corpus is the power to compel the production of the body of the prisoner before the judge. It is this very feature which is embodied in the distinctive words which give the name to the writ. Nebraska Children's Home Soc. v. State, 57 Nebr. 765, 78 N. W. 267.

Upon return of the writ not found no further proceedings should be had on the merits. Com. v. Chandler, 11 Mass. 83; Lowndes County v. Leigh, 69 Miss. 754, 13 So. 854; Ex p. Coupland, 26 Tex. 386.

Excuses for non-production of body.—It is a sufficient excuse for the failure of a respondent sheriff to produce the prisoner that the latter was in his custody under sentence to hard labor for the county, and, being subject to the control of the court of county commissioners, had been delivered up on their order and to their agent after the service of the writ. Ex p. Shaudies, 66 Ala. 134. It is a sufficient excuse for failing to produce the person in habeas corpus proceedings in a state court that the prisoner is held by respondent, a United States marshal, under the authority and process of the United States (Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. (U. S.) 506, 16 L. ed. 169; In re Farrand, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,678, 1 Abb. 140. See also In re Spivey, 60 N. C. 540; In re Rafter, 60 N. C. 537), as where he is held by respondent pursuant to U. S. Rev. St. §§ 5278, 5279, as a fugitive from the justice of another state (In re Robb, 19 Fed. 26, 9 Sawy. 568). An order from a subordinate in the war department to a United States marshal who holds in custody a person arrested by him under orders issued by the war department not to produce such person before a United States court under a writ of habeas corpus issued by it is no justification for disobeying the writ. Ex p. Field, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,761, 5 Blatchf. 63. See, however, Ex p. Benedict, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,292, holding that a statement by a United States marshal in the return to a writ of habeas corpus that he had disobeyed the writ and deported the prisoner in accordance with instructions from the secretary of war is a sufficient return. Where it appears from the petition that respondent, to whom a child had been intrusted, handed over the child to another person to be taken out of the jurisdiction, without authority from the parent, and that he did not know the address of such person, or where the child was, the writ should issue. Reg. v. Barnardo, 24 Q. B. D. 283, 59 L. J. Q. B. 345, 38 Wkly. Rep. 315. So if respondent had illegally disposed of the children whose custody it was sought to obtain in habeas corpus proceedings, a return does not show that every effort possible to produce them was made by respondent, where it shows merely that nothing had been done by respondent beyond writing a letter to her solicitors, and writing a few other letters, and sending to the persons who were supposed to have the children a messenger who was a stranger and not accredited as coming from her, the messenger's inquiries being unsuccessful, and nothing further being done. In re Stirling, 23 Nova Scotia 195. See In re Mahoney, 24 Nova Scotia 86, where the excuse was held sufficient.

If the person detained has been released from custody previous to the service of the writ, the court will take no order on the subject. Com. v. Chandler, 11 Mass. 83; Ex p. Coupland, 26 Tex. 386.

Civil liability of one removing child to avoid production.—A father cannot recover damages for the removal of his infant child to prevent its production on habeas corpus where he has not an absolute right to its custody and it is incapable of rendering services of value, since in such case no special damage is shown. Rising v. Dodge, 2 Duer (N. Y.) 42.

Suppl. 401], holding that the court is not authorized to proceed in a summary way to hear the evidence in support of or against the imprisonment and to dispose of the person as the case requires, where the material allegations of the return are not controverted; also that an allegation of the traverse on information and belief that the child whose custody it was desired to obtain was not examined is not sufficient to raise an issue as to the fact of her confession, which she made as a party to the proceedings.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Habeas Corpus," § 75. And see the statutes of the different states.

D. Evidence, Dismissal, and Hearing—1. EVIDENCE. The general rules of the law of evidence relating to burden of proof and presumptions² and the admis-traverse to the return. In re Smith, 143 Cal. 368, 77 Pac. 180.

Sufficiency of answer or traverse.—A traverse showing that the child whose custody it was sought to obtain was wrongfully convicted of an offense, but not showing that there was no evidence before the magistrate justifying his conviction is insufficient, since a retrial on the merits cannot be had in habeas corpus. People v. New York Catholic Protectors, 106 N. Y. 604, 13 N. E. 435 [affirming 44 Hun 526]. A traverse on information and belief of the sheriff's return to a writ of habeas corpus that he had custody by virtue of the commitment of a justice named is sufficient where it denies that it appeared from the evidence taken before the justice in the preliminary examination that the crime alleged against the prisoner had been committed, and that there was sufficient cause to believe the prisoner guilty thereof, and that there was no sufficient evidence before the justice on the examination that the crime had been committed, or sufficient cause to believe the prisoner guilty thereof, and thus, in the language of N. Y. Code Cr. Proc. § 207, providing when and how an accused is to be discharged, negatives the existence of the facts necessary to the magistrate's jurisdiction. People v. Wells, 57 N. Y. App. Div. 140, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 59. Where the return to a writ of habeas corpus states that petitioner is held under a warrant of commitment under an indictment, a traverse that the indictment is void because found on no legal evidence is good. In re Klein, 17 Misc. (N. Y.) 107, 39 N. Y. Suppl. 873.

2. Alabama.—McQueen v. State, 130 Ala. 136, 30 So. 414 (holding that where an escaped convict who has been sentenced to hard labor is rearrested by the sheriff, and it does not appear either by the petition for habeas corpus or the return or evidence when he was rearrested, the presumption is that the rearrest was made so recently before the issuance of the writ that there was no reasonable time or opportunity for the sheriff to redeliver the prisoner to the hirer of county convicts, and consequently the writ will be dismissed); Ex p. Bizzell, 112 Ala. 210, 21 So. 371 (holding that where petitioner was convicted for the violation of a municipal ordinance which created several offenses and which contained several distinct and independent provisions some of which were valid and others invalid, it will be presumed that petitioner was convicted for violating a valid provision of the ordinance); Ex p. McGlawn, 75 Ala. 38 (holding that a commitment by a Louisiana.—In re State, 48 La. Ann. 1363, 20 So. 894, holding that where a sheriff places the prisoner for safekeeping in the jail of another parish than that in which the arrest was ordered, the presumption is that the prisoner was brought to the jail under proper order and authority.

sibility and sufficiency of evidence³ are ordinarily applicable in habeas corpus proceedings, although they are not so strictly applied as in actions at law or criminal trials.⁴

2. DISMISSAL. If the application for the writ is made without the authority of the person detained, he being sui juris, the proceeding should be dismissed.⁵ Likewise if the unlawful restraint has terminated prior to the service of the writ,⁶ and the same is true it seems after service of the writ if the party is not held for crime;⁷ but where the restraint is under criminal process the release of the party after service of the writ does not deprive the court of jurisdiction.⁸

3. Indiana.—Smith v. Clausmeier, 136 Ind. 105, 35 N. E. 904, 43 Am. St. Rep. 311 (holding that in a habeas corpus proceeding by a person imprisoned on a mittimus by a justice of the peace, where the correctness of the record of the justice is denied, it is error to refuse evidence that the affidavit set out in the record and purporting to be that on which a warrant issued for defendant and upon which he was tried was in fact not filed with the justice until after the trial and imprisonment of defendant); Davis v. Bible, 134 Ind. 108, 33 N. E. 910 (holding that in habeas corpus proceedings wherein a mittimus is attacked, it is not error to refuse to allow the prisoner to testify that the charge against him before the justice was not one for grand larceny, as such testimony would be a legal conclusion).

Iowa.—Cowell v. Patterson, 49 Iowa 514, holding that the waiver of preliminary examination before the committing magistrate will not deprive defendant of the right, in a habeas corpus proceeding, to introduce testimony for the purpose of showing that he is not detained upon sufficient evidence to sustain the charge.

Kansas.—In re Elliott, 63 Kan. 319, 65 Pac. 664, holding that a supplemental bill of exceptions in a criminal case, settled and allowed after the term at which judgment of conviction was rendered and reciting that the conviction was had on the verdict of only eleven jurors, constitutes a part of the record of the case, although the court refused to correct the journal entry of conviction so as to show the actual fact, and hence it is admissible evidence upon an application for habeas corpus to release the prisoner from confinement in the state penitentiary.

E. Scope of Inquiry and Powers of Court—1. IN REVIEWING ARREST IN CIVIL ACTION OR PROCEEDING. As a general rule the court will not in a habeas corpus proceeding on behalf of one confined under mesne process in a civil action inquire into the truth of the facts alleged in the declaration and affidavit upon which the order for arrest is made,¹⁸ but the legal sufficiency of the affidavit and warrant to authorize the arrest is a proper subject for consideration.¹⁹ And this is true even where the prisoner is detained by virtue of process against his body issued upon a final judgment.²⁰

2. IN REVIEWING ARREST AND COMMITMENT ON CRIMINAL CHARGE BEFORE INDICTMENT —

a. In General. Before indictment returned the courts will in many jurisdictions in a habeas corpus proceeding look into the evidence before the court or committing magistrate to ascertain whether there is any evidence to warrant the detention of the prisoner;²¹ but if jurisdiction exists the proceedings before the court or magistrate will not be reviewed to any further or greater extent; the merits of the case will not be determined;²² and in some instances the inquiry is limited to the question of jurisdiction.²³ Mere matters of defense must be reserved for decision in the trial court.²⁴

the states preclude the court on habeas corpus from looking into the evidence to ascertain whether any ground exists for the detention of the prisoner.²⁵

c. Federal Courts. In the federal courts the decisions as to how far the inquiry may go in this respect have not at all times been entirely uniform; ²⁶ but according to the present practice if there is any evidence tending to show that the party accused is guilty, the action of the committing magistrate will not be reviewed,²⁷ and this it seems even though it may be clear that upon all the evidence the holding of the accused was unwarranted.²³ But if it appears, not alone that no probable cause was shown, but also that there was no legal evidence tending to incriminate the prisoner, his discharge is warranted.²⁹

3. IN REVIEWING COMMITMENT ON INDICTMENT. After indictment returned the inquiry is as a general rule more limited, for in such a case the question whether there is reasonable or probable cause for holding the accused has been passed upon by a judicial body charged with determining that very question,³⁰ and as a general rule the courts will not in a habeas corpus proceeding review that determination.³¹

4. IN REVIEWING FINAL JUDGMENT, SENTENCE, OR COMMITMENT. After a final judgment of conviction in a criminal case, the courts will not in a habeas corpus proceeding retry a question of fact or inquire into the sufficiency of the evidence to warrant the conviction of the person imprisoned, for even if insufficient it is error merely and not a ground for discharge in habeas corpus proceedings.³²

25. Ex p. Sternes, 82 Cal. 245, 247, 23 Pac. 38, where the court says that the case is different from one in which an indictment has been found. But in Indiana under a statutory provision a different rule obtains. Farmer v. Lewis, 92 Ind. 444, 47 Am. Rep. 153.

5. IN REVIEWING COMMITMENT FOR CONTEMPT. In a habeas corpus proceeding to review an order committing a witness for contempt of court, it has been held in the federal circuit court that that court will look beyond the commitment and consider the testimony and facts on which the court acted in making it;³⁴ but in the case of a contempt consisting in an assault on a United States marshal in the presence of the court, it has been held in the federal supreme court that the truth of the facts recited in the commitment cannot be questioned;³⁵ but the petitioner may in the habeas corpus proceeding supplement the record by showing such additional facts, not contradicting the record, as tend to show that his action was not a contempt.³⁶ According to the weight of authority in the state courts the findings of fact recited in the order of commitment cannot be questioned on habeas corpus,³⁷ but the contrary rule prevails in some states.³⁸ Mere matters of defense are not a proper subject for inquiry,³⁹ but the court may as in other

the proceeding will not as a rule be inquired into,⁴⁸ but the proceedings may be reviewed to see that no extradition is consummated upon a mere pretext or to subserve private malice.⁴⁹ If the preliminary papers upon which the executive acted are presented to the court they may be investigated to determine whether they are sufficient under the law to justify the warrant of extradition;⁵⁰ but if they are not presented, the court, it has been held, can look only to the warrant itself.⁵¹ The technical sufficiency of the indictment or information in the demanding state is not material;⁵² and in the absence of proof to the contrary it will be assumed in the case of an indictment that it charges an offense against the law of the demanding state.⁵³ Where the requisition is based upon an affidavit, the validity of the affidavit cannot be impeached if it distinctly charges a crime;⁵⁴ and the court must be clearly satisfied that error has been committed before it will interfere.⁵⁵

8. IN HABEAS CORPUS TO DETERMINE CUSTODY OF INFANT.⁵⁹ In a habeas corpus proceeding to determine the custody of an infant the court is bound to free it from any improper restraint; but whether it will direct it to be delivered to any particular person rests in the court's discretion, and the welfare of the infant is the governing consideration.⁶⁰ If the infant is of proper age its wishes should be taken into consideration,⁶¹ and in some cases the court will merely free him was not committed in the district to which removal is sought.

9. IN HABEAS CORPUS TO OBTAIN DISCHARGE OF LUNATIC⁷² OR DRUNKARD.⁷³ In habeas corpus proceedings to obtain the discharge from custody of a person confined as a lunatic, the court may inquire into the character and nature of the derangement and determine the necessity of confinement.⁷⁴ Its power is not limited to a mere determination of the question of sanity but it may go further and if proper discharge the party from custody.⁷⁵ In some of the states it is held that the question of sanity ought not to be tried while other statutory proceedings are pending to determine the same question,⁷⁶ but in others the pendency of another proceeding constitutes no objection.⁷⁷ In a proper case a drunkard may be released from his committee in habeas corpus proceedings.⁷⁸

10. IN HABEAS CORPUS TO OBTAIN ADMISSION TO BAIL.⁷⁹ Before indictment the court, on an application by habeas corpus to be discharged on bail, may even in a capital case examine into the evidence, and, unless the proof is strong or the presumption great, allow the application.⁸⁰ In some jurisdictions the finding of an indictment does not raise such a presumption of guilt as to preclude the court from examining into the evidence with a view to allowing bail,⁸¹ but in other states after indictment guilt will be assumed.⁸² Where one petitions for the writ solely on the ground that the sheriff has refused to admit him to the jail liberties the validity of his commitment is not before the court.⁸³

F. Disposition of Person.⁸⁴ If upon the hearing of a writ of habeas corpus it appears that the present imprisonment of the party is illegal, the court may nevertheless as a general rule refuse in a proper case to discharge him absolutely and may order him held to be dealt with according to law,⁸⁵ or it may in a

Disposition of child.—Where children are in the custody of their father, and brought by him into court in obedience to a writ of habeas corpus sued out by the mother, he thereby surrenders them to the custody of the court as parens patriæ, pending the litigation; and where the father and mother thereafter stipulate and consent that the writ be dismissed, it is proper that the order of the court entered upon that consent should not only direct that the writ be dismissed, but should dispense with the longer attendance of the children in court by remanding them to the custody of the father, with whom the court found them and who is prima facie entitled to them, although a neglect to add such an express provision to the order of dismissal of the writ is not necessary for the purpose of rehabilitating the respondent with parental authority, when the relator abandons the attempt to change the custody of the children to herself. Matter of Viele, 44 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 14. In Com. v. Sage, 160 Pa. St. 399, 28 Atl. 863, the court denied the power to remand a child to the custody of its father and compel the mother to go to a foreign state to have her rights determined. Minnesota.—State v. Lawrence, (1902) 90 N. W. 769, denying authority of court commissioner to make order practically removing guardian of person and property of incompetent.

Montana.—State v. Second Judicial Dist. Ct., (1905) 79 Pac. 409, holding that in habeas corpus proceedings, no other relief can be granted than the release of complainant from unlawful custody; and the court cannot therein review the action of the committing court in applying a deposit in lieu of bail to the payment of a fine assessed against complainant, nor determine who is entitled to the money, nor direct the official to whom it was paid to refund it to complainant.

New York.—People v. Donohue, 14 Hun 133 (holding that in proceedings by habeas corpus or certiorari under the Habeas Corpus Act a judge cannot command an inferior tribunal having jurisdiction of a matter pending before it to take such action as may to the judge seem proper, even though it appears that the inferior tribunal was exceeding its authority in the mode of conducting the proceedings before it, the only mode of interference in such cases being by mandamus or possibly by that form of certiorari which would bring up for review to a court having jurisdiction for that purpose the illegal assumption of power on the part of the inferior tribunal); People v. Ciarccia, 49 N. Y. App. Div. 90, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 497 (holding that where a court properly entered an order dismissing a writ with costs, a subsequent judgment reiterating the dismissal as embraced in the order and embodying a taxation of costs in a specific amount, although unnecessary, is not error, but may be regarded as a final judgment in the case).

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. Biddle, 4 Pa. L. J. Rep. 35, 6 Pa. L. J. 287, denying authority of court on discharging a minor illegally enlisted to compel return of the bounty or clothing received.

which the sheriff may discharge him on his giving the required bail, is merely directory); People v. Kelly, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 444 (holding that the order of discharge granted by a judge out of court need not be entered).

To whom directed.—An order in habeas corpus proceedings for admission to bail of one who has been transferred from the county in which he is to be tried to the jail of another county is properly directed to the sheriff of the latter county, who has the prisoner in custody. Holcombe v. State, 99 Ala. 185, 12 So. 794.

Release without prejudice.—In releasing on habeas corpus one detained under an illegal sentence, the order will frequently be made without prejudice to the right of the prosecution to have the party resentenced. In re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 14 S. Ct. 323, 38 L. ed. 149; In re Christian, 82 Fed. 199.

Remand without prejudice.—Where a prisoner was in custody under an order for his imprisonment for a year and requiring him in addition to pay a certain penalty and costs within thirty days and in default to imprisonment for three months unless sooner paid, it was held that although in habeas corpus proceedings instituted within the year the objection that the costs were not ascertained or stated in the order and that the warrant of commitment erroneously stated that the time for payment of the penalty and costs had expired could not be considered, yet the right should be reserved to the prisoner to apply again for his discharge at the expiration of the year. *Rex v. Exercise of discretion.—A federal court will not allow an appeal from its decision refusing a writ of habeas corpus to release one convicted of murder by a state court, when on a previous writ of error the United States supreme court had decided that no rights secured to the accused by the federal constitution had been violated, and the only ground for the application is that defendant was never properly charged before a committing magistrate (Ex p. Look, 134 Fed. 308), or an irregularity of the state court in fixing a date for the execution (In re Durrant, 84 Fed. 314, 317). Where respondent produced the body of an infant before a judge in chambers and filed affidavits in answer to the writ, making his return thereto, and applicant thereupon applied for an enlargement, which the judge granted upon condition of his paying respondent a sum for counsel fees and expenses, and applicant appealed from the order embodying such condition to a divisional court, which dismissed the appeal, giving him leave, however, to have the original application heard upon payment of the sum already ordered to be paid and a further sum, the court of appeal refused applicant leave to appeal from the order of the divisional court. Re Weatherall, 1 Ont. L. Rep. 542.

sioner,²⁰ such decisions being reviewable by another tribunal.²¹ Appeal on error does not lie to an appellate court from another court of coördinate and concurrent jurisdiction.²² No right exists to appeal from a federal circuit court to the federal supreme court²³ save in certain prescribed cases.²⁴ The right to appeal to the federal supreme court from a territorial court is governed by statute.²⁵

(II) *AS DEPENDENT ON NATURE AND SCOPE OF DECISION.*²⁶ The authorities are not in accord as to whether a decision in a habeas corpus proceeding is reviewable. In some states it is laid down generally that such a decision may be reviewed by appeal, writ of error, or exceptions,²⁷ according to the practice of the

ments of courts and not to orders and judgments authorized to be made out of court, and hence an order of a judge dismissing a writ of habeas corpus, although made in term-time and spread on the order book, is not appealable; Mann v. Russell, 60 S. W. 522, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1340.

Michigan.—People v. Judge Calhoun Cir. Ct., 30 Mich. 266, holding that proceedings in habeas corpus before a circuit judge at chambers are not according to the course of the common law such as are reviewable on error, the remedy being by certiorari.

Wisconsin.—State v. Brownell, 80 Wis. 563, 50 N. W. 413.

Wilmore*, 51 Fed. 200.

Canada.—In re McKenzie, 14 Nova Scotia 481, holding that if the judge refuses to grant the order applicant may go to each of the other judges separately. Contra, Re Harper, 23 Ont. 63 (holding that since an appeal is given by statute to the court of appeal, an appeal from the decision of a judge in chambers does not lie to the divisional court); *Reg. v. Tennessee.—In re Vanvaver, (1890) 12 S. W. 786, holding, under a statute giving the right of appeal in habeas corpus cases, "provided, this act shall not apply to parties held in custody in criminal cases," that the proviso applies only to persons held in custody in a pending case, and that one in custody on a judgment of conviction is entitled to appeal.

Vermont.—In re Cooper, 32 Vt. 253, holding that issues on questions of law arising on the trial of a writ of habeas corpus before the county court may be passed to the supreme court on exceptions.

Wisconsin.—In re Hammer, 113 Wis. 96, 89 N. W. 111, holding that error lies to the circuit court to review its decision on an application for a review of an order of a circuit judge at chambers in habeas corpus proceedings.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Habeas Corpus," § 104.

This is the case in the federal courts. Prior to the act of congress of Feb. 5, 1867 (14 U. S. St. at L. 385 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 594]) no appeal could be had in a habeas corpus case in the federal courts. The appeal provided for by that act does not include an extradition case. In re Henrich, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,369, 5 Blatchf. 414. Pending the appeal in a particular case the appeal provided by the act of congress of 1867 was taken away by the act of congress of March 27, 1868 (15 U. S. St. at L. 44 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 594]). Ex p. Yerger, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 85, 19 L. ed. 332; Ex p. McCardle, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 506, 19 L. ed. 264. No right of appeal existed thereafter until 1885. Ex p. Royall, 112 U. S. 181, 5 S. Ct. 98, 28 L. ed. 690; Ex p. Yerger, 8 exists with reference to an order or judgment refusing the writ and dismissing the petition,³¹ an order or judgment discharging the prisoner,³² and an order or judgment dismissing the writ and remanding the prisoner;³³ and the authorities

Wall. (U. S.) 85, 19 L. ed. 332; U. S. v. Harris, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,313. By the act of congress of March 3, 1885, an appeal was again allowed. Dimmick v. Tompkins, 194 U. S. 540, 24 S. Ct. 780, 48 L. ed. 1110; Cunningham v. Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 10 S. Ct. 658, 34 L. ed. 55; Ex p. Snow, 120 U. S. 274, 7 S. Ct. 556, 30 L. ed. 658; King v. McLean Asylum, 64 Fed. 331, 12 C. C. A. 145, 26 L. R. A. 784. Thus an order of the circuit court remanding the prisoner to custody is appealable (Palliser v. U. S., 136 U. S. 257, 10 S. Ct. 1034, 34 L. ed. 514), and an order of the circuit court discharging the prisoner from custody is also appealable (Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 19 S. Ct. 119, 43 L. ed. 399).

A habeas corpus case does not involve questions of law alone, and hence an appeal therein is not authorized by a statute authorizing appeals in criminal cases on questions of law alone. Mead v. Metcalf, 7 Utah 103, 25 Pac. 729.

A habeas corpus case is not a civil suit within the provision of the code allowing an appeal to the supreme court in civil suits. McFarland v. Johnson, 27 Tex. 105.

An order directing a further return is not appealable under a statute authorizing an appeal from an order refusing to grant a writ of habeas corpus or from the final order made on the return of such writ to discharge or remand the prisoner or dismiss the proceedings, and providing that an appeal does not otherwise lie. In re Larson, 96 N. Y. 381 [reversing 31 Hun 539].

Final judgment.—The determination in a habeas corpus proceeding is not a "final judgment" within a statute allowing an appeal to defendant from a final judgment. State v. Kennie, 24 Mont. 45, 60 Pac. 589; Mead v. Metcalf, 7 Utah 103, 25 Pac. 729.

Final order affecting substantial right.—A final order in habeas corpus proceedings is not a final order affecting a substantial right made in a special proceeding, within a statute authorizing an appeal in such cases. Carruth v. Taylor, 8 N. D. 166, 77 N. W. 617. Contra, In re Hammill, 9 S. D. 390, 69 N. W. 577.

31. Appeal or error lies.—An order dismissing a petition by one who is in custody of a United States marshal under a capias ad satisfaciendum is final and appealable where the habeas corpus proceeding is an independent suit growing out of the cause in which the capias ad satisfaciendum issued but having no connection with it. Costello v. Palmer, 20 App. Cas. (D. C.) 210. Error lies. Ex p. Edwards, 11 Fla. 174.

Appeal or error does not lie.—No appeal lies from the refusal of a police judge to grant a writ of habeas corpus, since the order is not final and conclusive. Gill's Petition, 92 Ky. 118, 17 S. W. 166, 13 Ky. L.

Rep. 351. An appeal does not lie to the supreme court (Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 6; Ex p. Ainsworth, 27 Tex. 731) or to the court of criminal appeals (Ex p. Magee, 44 Tex. Cr. 384, 71 S. W. 599) from an order denying the writ without a trial. And see infra, note 33.

32. Order reviewable.—Error lies to review an order discharging relator. Atwood v. Atwater, 34 Nebr. 402, 51 N. W. 1073; Henderson v. James, 52 Ohio St. 242, 39 N. E. 805, 27 L. R. A. 290; State v. Smith, 65 Wis. 93, 26 N. W. 258, holding that an order of the circuit court affirming an order of the commissioner discharging a relator may be reviewed by the supreme court on error. An order of a county judge in a habeas corpus proceeding holding invalid a warrant on which relator was detained and directing his discharge is appealable by statute. Matter of Scrafford, 59 Hun (N. Y.) 320, 12 N. Y. Suppl. 943. See also People v. Tucker, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 792.

Order not reviewable.—An order of discharge on a writ of habeas corpus is not a final order in the sense that an appeal or writ of error may be prosecuted therefrom. Mergerstadt v. People, 105 Ill. App. 316; People v. Gilbert, 57 Ill. App. 505; Napier v. People, 9 Ill. App. 523; Annapolis v. Howard, 80 Md. 244, 30 Atl. 910; Ex p. Jilz, 64 Mo. 205, 27 Am. Rep. 218; Ferguson v. Ferguson, 36 Mo. 197; Russell v. Com., 1 Penn. & W. (Pa.) 62; Dirks v. State, 33 Tex. 227; Re Blair, 23 Nova Scotia 225 [distinguishing In re Sproule, 12 Can. Sup. Ct. 140]. To allow a review would be inconsistent with the object of the writ. Knowlton v. Baker, 72 Me. 202; Wyeth v. Richardson, 10 Gray (Mass.) 240; State v. Miller, 97 N. C. 451, 1 S. E. 776; In re Clasby, 3 Utah 183, 1 Pac. 852.

Order admitting to bail.—No appeal lies from the order of a judge admitting relator to bail. People v. Schuster, 40 Cal. 627. See, however, Carico v. Wilmore, 51 Fed. 200, where an order discharging relator from custody but holding him to bail for his appearance in another jurisdiction was held appealable.

33. Order reviewable.—An appeal lies by statute. Smotherman v. State, 140 Ala. 168, 37 So. 376; Matter of Scrafford, 59 Hun (N. Y.) 320, 12 N. Y. Suppl. 943; In re Foye, 21 Wash. 250, 57 Pac. 825 [followed in In re Sylvester, 21 Wash. 263, 57 Pac. 829; In re Baker, 21 Wash. 259, 57 Pac. 827]. An appeal may be taken by relator where the court or judge has decided against the application for discharge after a trial. Ex p. Ainsworth, 27 Tex. 731; Ex p. Trader, 24 Tex. App. 393, 6 S. W. 533. It seems that error lies. Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 540, 10 L. ed. 579.

Order not reviewable.—Appeal or error does not lie in the absence of statutory authority are likewise in conflict as to whether a decision as to the right to the custody of a minor is subject to review.³⁴

c. Parties.³⁵ An appeal from an order made on the return to a writ of habeas corpus directed to the warden of the jail of the District of Columbia, discharging a prisoner from custody, should be taken by the warden and not by the United States.³⁶

d. Transfer of Cause ; Requisites and Proceedings Therefor.³⁷ A motion for a writ of error should in some states be based on a petition,³⁸ but ordinarily no notice thereof is necessary ;³⁹ a citation on appeal is apparently not necessary if respondent appears generally in the appellate court,⁴⁰ but an appeal-bond is therefor (In re Knox, 64 Ala. 463; Howe v. State, 9 Mo. 690; State v. Shelby County Taxing Dist., 16 Lea (Tenn.) 240; State v. Elmore, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 528; State v. Galloway, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 326, 98 Am. Dec. 404; Lea v. White, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 73, 67 Am. Dec. 599; State v. Malone, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 413), since the order is not final and conclusive (Ex p. Thompson, 93 Ill. 89; Hammond v. People, 32 Ill. 446, 83 Am. Dec. 286 [overruling People v. Hessing, 28 Ill. 410]; People v. Skinner, 19 Ill. App. 332; Wallace v. Cleary, 5 Ill. App. 384; Ferguson v. Ferguson, 36 Mo. 197).

Order remanding petitioner without trial.—No appeal lies in a criminal case from an order of a district judge sustaining exceptions to the petition and remanding the petitioner on a return of the writ, such action being equivalent to a refusal to grant the writ in the first instance. Ex p. Coopwood, 44 Tex. 467; Ex p. Martinez, (Tex. Cr. App. 1904) 81 S. W. 728; Ex p. Blankenship, (Tex. Cr. App. 1900) 57 S. W. 646; Ex p. Hodges, (Tex. Cr. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 913; Ex p. Strong, 34 Tex. Cr. 309, 30 S. W. 666.

Order vacating discharge.—An order of a district or circuit court vacating an order of a court commissioner discharging relator is appealable. State v. Hill, 10 Minn. 63; Longstaff v. State, 120 Wis. 346, 97 N. W. 900.

An order refusing bail in a habeas corpus proceeding is appealable. Ex p. Walker, 3 Tex. App. 668.

Appeal unnecessary.—Pending a contest originating in the district civil court as to the validity of a local option law the court of criminal appeals will not entertain an appeal from an order denying the writ to one charged with a violation of the law, since if the law is invalid relator may show it on the trial of his case. Hickman v. State, (Tex. Cr. App. 1894) 28 S. W. 687.

34. Decision reviewable see Stewart v. Paul, (Ala. 1904) 37 So. 691 (by statute); People v. Ct. of App., 27 Colo. 405, 61 Pac. 592, 51 L. R. A. 105; McKercher v. Green, 13 Colo. Decision not reviewable see Matthews v. Hobbs, 51 Ala. 210; Guilford v. Hicks, 36 Ala. 95; Wilkinson v. Murphy, 20 Ala. 104

(all so holding in the absence of statute); Hart v. Cotten, 44 Fla. 172, 31 So. 817; People v. Skinner, 19 Ill. App. 332; Ferguson v. Ferguson, 36 Mo. 197; People v. Sternberger, 153 N. Y. 299; Com. v. McDougall, 203 Pa. St. 291, 52 Atl. 254.

An order directing a party to make application to the court for the custody of children is not appealable. St. Clair v. Williams, 23 Wash. 552, 63 Pac. 206.

An order directing that the writ stand over as a pending writ subject to such further action as the court might adjudge right is not appealable. Com. v. Blatt, 165 Pa. St. 213, 30 Atl. 674.

Decree in chancery.—Whether or not a writ of error or an appeal will lie from a decision in a proceeding strictly by habeas corpus, an appeal will lie from a decree in chancery which permanently settles the right to the custody of an infant, although the proceeding was commenced by habeas corpus. State v. Baird, 19 N. J. Eq. 481.

A court of criminal appeals has no jurisdiction of an appeal in proceedings to recover the custody of a child. Legate v. Legate, 87 Tex. 248, 28 S. W. 281; Ex p. Calvin, 40 Tex. Cr. 84, 48 S. Confinement of relator as prerequisite to attaching of appellate jurisdiction see infra, II, H, 2, h, (II), (c).

38. Ex p. Finch, 15 Fla. 630, holding that the discretion of the court in granting a writ of error cannot be intelligently exercised upon a mere motion without any statement of the case, and hence a petition setting forth the nature of the case, accompanied by a certified copy of the record of the judgment, must be presented.

39. Ex p. Finch, 15 Fla. 630, unless so directed by the court.

40. Leonard v. Rodda, 5 App. Cas. (D. C.) 256, where an appeal from an order dischargusually required,⁴¹ all these matters depending upon the practice prevailing in the particular jurisdiction.

e. Supersedeas⁴² and Effect of Proceedings For Review.⁴³ The institution of a proceeding for review in a habeas corpus case does not operate as a supersedeas,⁴⁴ and in the absence of statutory authority therefor⁴⁵ a supersedeas cannot be granted by the court.⁴⁶ Pending the review the courts will preserve the status quo.⁴⁷

f. Record.⁴⁸ Questions concerning the record in a proceeding to review a decision in a habeas corpus case are governed by local practice.⁴⁹

ing a prisoner was taken in open court at the time the order was made, and the prisoner was rearrested and required to enter into a recognizance to answer to the appeal, and he appeared in the court of appeals by counsel at the beginning of the term.

If the United States is the real appellant no bond need be filed. Palmer v. Thompson, 20 App. Cas. (D. C.) 273 (nominal appellant being a United States marshal); Leonard v. Rodda, 5 App. Cas. (D. C.) 256 (nominal appellant being jail warden of District of Columbia).

44. Jackson v. Mayo, 34 Ga. 105; Irwin v. Jackson, 34 Ga. 101 (both holding that the filing of a bill of exceptions does not operate as a supersedeas); State v. Fenton, 30 Wash. 325, 70 Pac. 741 (holding that an appeal from a judgment remanding a prisoner against whom an information exists does not suspend prosecution of the information).

Appeal from denial of writ as stay of sentence see CRIMINAL LAW, 12 Cyc. 791.

45. See the statutes of the different states.

Civil and criminal cases.—A statute providing for a stay of proceedings by appeal in civil and criminal cases does not contemplate a stay in habeas corpus proceedings. State v. Fenton, 30 Wash. 325, 70 Pac. 741.

Recognizance.—A relator who is remanded to custody on a bench warrant and desires a stay under the code, pending an appeal to the court of appeals, must himself personally execute the recognizance within the jurisdiction of the court. People v. Mead, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 252.

Terms.—On error to review a final order of discharge on habeas corpus, the order may be stayed by the supreme court without fixing any terms other than the stay of the execution of the order. Henderson v. James, 52 Ohio St. 242, 39 N. E. 805, 27 L. R. A. 290.

46. State v. Fenton, 30 Wash. 325, 30 Pac. 741.

Emanuel, 4 La. Ann. 424; People v. Stout, 10 Misc. (N. Y.) 247, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 421.

An order remanding the prisoner cannot be superseded. Ex p. Mooney, 26 W. Va. 32. A court will not grant a stay of proceedings on the prosecution of the writ of error to review an order remanding a prisoner detained in extradition proceedings, there being no statutory authority therefor. In re Clark, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 212.

State and federal courts.—The practical effect of staying proceedings on appeal from an order dismissing a writ of habeas corpus sued out by a pauper immigrant detained by the commissioners of immigration must be to enjoin agents of the federal government from exercising functions devolved upon them by a federal law relating to a subject clearly within the legislative powers of congress; and even if the state courts have concurrent jurisdiction, the federal tribunals constitute the most appropriate forum in which to test the constitutionality of such law. People v. Hurlburt, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 362.

47. In re McKane, 61 Fed. 205, holding that pending an appeal from a refusal to grant the writ in behalf of a person under sentence of a state court, the custody of the prisoner cannot be disturbed by habeas corpus in a federal court.

48. See, generally, APPEAL AND ERROR, 2 Cyc. 1025 et seq.

Defects in record as ground for dismissal of proceeding for review see infra, II, H, 2, h, (II), (B).

Presumptions arising from record see infra, II, H, 2, k.

49. See cases cited infra, this note.

On appeal from refusal to admit to bail the record should contain the testimony of the peculiar circumstances of the accused so as to enable the court to act advisedly in fixing the amount of bail if granted. Miller v. State, 42 Tex. 309; Ex p. Walker, 3 Tex. App. 668.

The transcript of the record must contain the writ of habeas corpus and the return thereto, and it must show that notice of appeal was given and by what authority the appeal was sent to the branch of the court of appeals in which it is filed. Ex p. Barrier, 17 Tex. App. 585.

No bill of exceptions is necessary on appeal from a federal district judge. Solomon v. Davenport, 87 Fed. 318, 30 C. C. A. 664.

Authentication.—The transcript of the record must be certified as in other cases. Ex p. Barrier, 17 Tex. App. 585. However, under

g. Briefs.⁵⁰ The ordinary rule as to the time of filing briefs does not apply to habeas corpus cases.⁵¹

h. Dismissal⁵²—(1) IN GENERAL. Where a transcript of the record on appeal has been filed in the court of appeals, an order to the lower court dismissing the appeal is a nullity.⁵³ There is no necessity for a motion to quash an appeal taken in express violation of statute.⁵⁴ Ex parte affidavits may be received in a proper case on a motion to dismiss.⁵⁵

a statute providing that where a writ of habeas corpus is returnable before a court in session the clerk shall make entry as in other cases, and that if returnable before the judge in vacation the judge shall make such record, if the writ is granted by a judge in chambers but the proceedings are actually had before the court in session, the transcript may be certified by the clerk and need not be certified by the judge. Ex p. Blankenship, (Tex. Cr. App. 1900) 57 S. W. 646. And where the court discharged relator and on the same day reconsidered the order of discharge and remanded him to custody, and the usual certificate that the transcript contained all the orders and proceedings in the cause was attached to the record and followed by a certificate to the order remanding relator, the order of remand became a part of the record. Crandall v. Nevada, 131 U. S. appendix lxxxiii, 18 L. ed. 744.

The statement of facts must be approved or authenticated as in other cases. Sheldon v. Boyce, 20 Tex. 828; Ex p. Hartley, (Tex. Cr. App. 1900) 58 S. W. 110; Ex p. Barber, 16 Tex. App. 369 (holding that if the statement of facts is not approved until after the expiration of ten days allowed by order of court it cannot be considered); Ex p. Cole, 14 Tex. App. 579. An instrument neither signed by the attorneys as an agreed statement of facts nor bearing the certificate of approval of the judge cannot be considered as a statement of facts. Ex p. Sebastian, (Tex. Cr. App. 1899) 53 S. W. 690 (holding that it is not enough that it is called an "agreed statement of facts" where neither signed by the parties nor approved by the judge); Ex p. Malone, 35 Tex. Cr. 297, 31 S. W. 665, 33 S. W. 360. If the cause is tried in vacation the statement of facts must be prepared and certified by the trial judge. Ex p. Malone, supra. Approval of the statement of facts by the trial judge cannot be waived by agreement of the attorneys. Sheldon v. Boyce, supra.

Transmission and filing.—The rules governing the transmission of transcripts to the court of appeals in ordinary criminal cases do not govern in habeas corpus appeals, which are specially regulated by statute. Ex p. Kramer, 19 Tex. App. 123. The fact that a habeas corpus case is heard at chambers and is speedily returnable does not require that it should be treated as an extraordinary remedy, within Ga. Civ. Code, § 5540, prescribing twenty days in which bills of exceptions should be presented in such cases. Barranger v. Baum, 103 Ga. 465, 30 S. E. 524, 68 Am. St. Rep. 113. For the purpose of an appeal to the supreme court of Canada in a habeas corpus case, the first step is the filing of a case on appeal with the registrar. In re Smart, 16 Can. Sup. Ct. 396.

Questions presented for review.—Where neither the petition for habeas corpus, the writ, the sheriff's return, nor the rulings are shown other than in the bill of exceptions, there is nothing for the court to review, since these matters are a part of the record and are not presented by the bill. Pendry v. Shows, 87 Ala. 339, 6 So. 341. The sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the finding in habeas corpus proceedings cannot be considered unless the evidence is brought up in the abstract, although by reason of the absence of the reporter petitioner could not preserve the evidence. In re Bresee, 82 Iowa 573, 48 N. W. 991. Where no copy of the petition for habeas corpus is set forth in the record, error cannot be predicated on the refusal of the lower court to admit evidence. State v. Ensign, 13 Nebr. 250, 13 N. W. 216. If the record does not show by what proceeding or upon what charge or conviction or for what offense relator was in custody the court cannot say that the judgment of the district court was not legal, and it will be affirmed. Sheldon v. Boyce, 20 Tex. 828. The refusal of an application to discharge one accused of theft of cattle on the ground that the bail required was excessive, being five hundred dollars, will be sustained on appeal in the absence of a statement of facts. Ex p. Clay, (Tex. Cr. App. 1899) 51 S. W. 241. The court of appeals cannot revise the opinion of the lower court on incidental questions arising on the hearing of the habeas corpus case, but the appeal must be determined exclusively on the facts and the law arising on the record. Ex p. Rothschild, 2 Tex. App. 560.

An abstract containing matter not before the trial court and not a part of the record cannot be considered on appeal. Carter v. Barlow, 105 Iowa 78, 74 N. W. 745.

50. See, generally, APPEAL AND ERROR, 2 Cyc. 1013 et seq.

51. Smith v. State, 21 Nebr. 552, 32 N. W. 594, holding that the case will be heard as soon as practicable after petitioner's brief is filed.

52. See, generally, APPEAL AND ERROR, 3 Cyc. 182 et seq.

53. Leonard v. Rodda, 5 App. Cas. (D. C.) 256.

54. In re Lazier, 29 Can. Sup. Ct. 630.

55. Ex p. Cole, 14 Tex. App. 579, so holding as to affidavits offered to show that relator is not detained by any person.

(II) Grounds—(A) In General.⁵⁶ An appeal or writ of error may be dismissed on various grounds.⁵⁷

(B) Defects in Record.⁵⁸ Defects in the record of the habeas corpus case may constitute ground for dismissing the proceeding for review.⁵⁹

(C) Enlargement of Prisoner. If pending the proceeding for review or prior thereto the prisoner is enlarged, the proceeding will be dismissed.⁶⁰

i. Hearing and Rehearing.⁶¹ An appeal in a habeas corpus proceeding will

56. See, generally, APPEAL AND ERROR, 3 Cyc. 185 et seq.

57. Ex p. Jones, 7 Tex. App. 365 (holding that the appeal will be dismissed where appellant had already had the benefit of a prior appeal); U. S. v. Arnold, 82 Fed. 769, 27 C. C. A. 342 (holding that where an appeal is perfected after the time allowed and after the prisoner has been transferred to another district for trial so as to be beyond the reach of the court's process, it will be dismissed).

Failure of grand jury to indict.—An appeal from an order remanding defendant to the custody of the sheriff to await the action of the grand jury will be dismissed where, pending the appeal, the grand jury convene and return no indictment against him. Ex p. Davis, (Tex. Cr. App. 1896) 36 S. W. 441.

Indictment pending appeal.—If pending an appeal by a petitioner who has been bound over to the grand jury an indictment is found, the appeal will be dismissed. Witmore v. Burgan, 70 Iowa 161, 30 N. W. 391; Ex p. Tripp, (Tex. Cr. App. 1903) 77 S. W. 222; Ex p. Brown, (Tex. Cr. App. 1900) 55 S. W. 814; Ex p. Cannon, 41 Tex. Cr. 76, 51 S. W. 914. So an appeal from an order refusing to release an accused on bail is abated by the return of the indictment for the same offense pending the appeal. Ex p. Forney, (Tex. Cr. App. 1903) 76 S. W. 440; Ex p. McDonald, (Tex. Cr. App. 1901) 65 S. W. 188; Ex p. Kennedy, (Tex. Cr. App. 1900) 56 S. W. 921.

59. Hart v. Cotten, 44 Fla. 172, 31 So. 817 (as where the transcript is not properly certified); Ex p. Adams, (Tex. Cr. App. 1900) 58 S. W. 86 (as where the record shows neither final judgment nor notice of appeal); Ex p. Calvin, 40 Tex. Cr. 84, 48 S. W. 518; Ex p. Williams, 39 Tex. Cr. 524, 47 S. W. 365, 1118; Ex p. Overstreet, 39 Tex. Cr. 468, 46 S. W. 929 (the last three being cases where the proceedings were tried in vacation, and the transcript was certified by the clerk and not by the judge); Ex p. Snyder, 39 Tex. Cr. 120, 44 S. W. 1108 (as where the record fails affirmatively to show that relator is in confinement).

Where, however, a clerk of the lower court, on an appeal from an order directed to the warden of the district jail discharging a prisoner from custody, erroneously recites in the citation that the appeal is by the United States, and upon the filing of the transcript of the record in the court of appeals the clerk entitles the cause and enters it on the docket as an appeal by the United States, the error is not ground for dismissal. Leonard v. Rodda, 5 App. Cas. (D. C.) 256.

60. People v. Mead, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 252 (holding that to perfect his appeal a prisoner who has been remanded must be within the jurisdiction of the court, so as to comply with its mandate when issued); Ex p. Pereira, 6 Rich. (S. C.) 149; Ex p. Wolston, (Tex. Cr. App. 1902) 68 S. W. 679; Ex p. Brown, 43 Tex. Cr. 45, 64 S. W. 249; Ex p. McMinn, (Tex. Cr. App. 1901) 63 S. W. 322; Ex p. Douthitt, (Tex. Cr. App. 1901) 63 S. W. 131; Ex p. Allen, (Tex. Cr. App. 1900) 56 S. W. 926; Ex p. Harrison, (Tex. Cr. App. 1898) 47 S. W. 471; Ex p. Talbutt, 39 Tex. Cr. 12, 44 S. W. 832; Ex p. Branch, 36 Tex. Cr. 384, 37 S. W. 421 (the last two holding that if a petitioner who is remanded to custody appeals, he must be placed in confinement in order that the jurisdiction of the appellate court may attach; that he cannot enter into a recognizance or deposit a sum of money for his appearance to abide the judgment of the court, but he must remain in custody so that the mandate of the court will be operative on him when issued); Ex p. Cole, 14 Tex. App. 579 (holding that the mandates of the court of appeals in habeas corpus cases operate directly on the officer or other person by whom relator is detained and are not transmitted to inferior tribunals for enforcement as in ordinary appeals, and if when the jurisdiction of the court of appeals is invoked the applicant is not restrained of his liberty, there is no case for the cognizance of that court and the appeal will be dismissed); Ex p. Cohn, 2 Tex. App. 380; Fraser v. Tupper, 3 Montreal Leg. N. 394 (holding that an appeal will not lie in any case of proceedings upon a writ of habeas corpus when at the time of bringing the appeal appellant is at large).

Expiration of sentence.—Habeas corpus and writ of error thereon having been brought to free a person from imprisonment under an illegal sentence, the writ of error will not be dismissed when reached for argument because the period of time covered by the sentence has then expired, there being no presumption that an illegal imprisonment has terminated or will terminate in a voluntary discharge. Lark v. State, 55 Ga. 435.

Release on bail.—An appeal from an order dismissing a petition for a habeas corpus will not be dismissed because appellant has been released on bail pending the appeal. Costello v. Palmer, 20 App. Cas. (D. C.) 210. See, however, Ex p. Walton, (Tex. Cr. App. 1903) 74 S. W. 314.

be heard in a summary way.⁶² The review is not conducted as a trial de novo.⁶³ In some cases an appeal may be heard by a justice in chambers.⁶⁴ A motion for rehearing will be dismissed if the prisoner is enlarged.⁶⁵

j. Scope and Extent of Review⁶⁶—(i) IN GENERAL. The scope and extent of the review of a decision in a habeas corpus proceeding are, generally speaking, governed by the rules applied in appeals in other cases.⁶⁷

(ii) DISCRETION OF LOWER COURT.⁶⁸ If a decision rests in the discretion of the lower court or judge, it will not be interfered with on appeal or error,⁶⁹

62. In re Foye, 21 Wash. 250, 57 Pac. 825; Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, 22 S. Ct. 72, 46 L. ed. 120. See also Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 6 S. Ct. 291, 29 L. ed. 544, holding that appeals in habeas corpus cases may in the discretion of the court or judge be sent to an appellate tribunal at a term of court current at the time when the appeal is taken.

Advance hearing.—On appeal from an order discharging petitioner, but requiring him to give bail for his appearance as might be determined by any final order made on appeal, the portion of the order admitting him to bail will not be taken up for consideration on motion in advance of the regular hearing unless there are special reasons therefor. U. S. v. Lee Yen Tai, 108 Fed. 950, 48 C. C. A. 157.

63. Dunkin v. Seifert, 123 Iowa 64, 98 N. W. 558; Seavey v. Seymour, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,596, 3 Cliff. 439. See State v. Merrill, 83 Minn. 252, 86 N. W. 89, holding that an appeal from an order of a court commissioner in habeas corpus proceedings may be heard on the record returned, where the certificate of the district clerk shows all proceedings had therein; and where no application is made for hearing of evidence in the supreme court, the appeal will be disposed of upon the certified return of the clerk. Trial de novo see supra, II, H, 2, i.

67. Matter of Marsh, 1 MacArthur & M. (D. C.) 32 (holding that on appeal from a decision of a judge of the supreme court discharging a writ of habeas corpus and remanding the prisoner, the general term is not confined to the reasons assigned by the judge for his decision, but may review the order appealed from on its merits); Wright v. Wright, 74 Wis. 439, 43 N. W. 145 (holding that on error to review habeas corpus proceedings, the supreme court is confined to the question of jurisdiction and cannot review errors committed in the exercise thereof); Thomas v. Winne, 122 Fed. 395, 58 C. C. A. 613 (holding that where, in habeas corpus for the discharge of a naval recruit, no issue as to his intoxication at the time of enlistment was presented by the pleadings, the fact that he was permitted apparently without objection to testify to such intoxication does not constrain the court on appeal to review that question); In re Hall, 8 Ont. App. 135 (where a prisoner was remanded for extradition by the chancery division of the high court of justice, which decision on appeal to the court of appeals was affirmed, the court being equally divided, and a second writ of habeas corpus was thereupon obtained and the prisoner brought before the common pleas division, when he was again remanded, whereupon he again appealed to the court of appeals, and it was held by two of the five justices that the prisoner must abide by the result of the first appeal).

68. See, generally, APPEAL AND ERROR, 3 Cyc. 325.

69. Myers v. Clearman, 125 Iowa 461, 101 N. W. 193 (holding that under Iowa Code, § 4453, providing that, although the commitment of plaintiff in habeas corpus may have been irregular, yet if the court or judge is satisfied from the evidence that he ought to be held to bail or committed either for the offense charged or any other the order may be made accordingly, the question whether the court possessed the power in a particular case to direct the prosecution of plaintiff in a justice's court is not reviewable on appeal, as at most such a course was discretionary); State v. Boyle, 25 Md. 509; Yarbrough v. State, 2 Tex. 519; U. S. v. Ronan, 33 Fed. 117 (the last three cases holding that the decision in a habeas corpus case is discretionary and will not be reviewed on appeal). And see Re Murphy, 28 Nova Scotia 196.

Custody of child.—Large discretion is vested in a judge in habeas corpus cases to determine the custody of a child, and the appellate court will not interfere unless that discretion is manifestly abused. Smith v. Bragg, 68 Ga. 650; Bentley v. Terry, 59 Ga. 555, 27 Am. Rep. 399; Payne v. Payne, 39 Ga. 174; Boyd v. Glass, 34 Ga. 253, 89 Am. Dec. 252; In re Welch, 74 N. Y. 299. So the refusal of the court to assent to the choice of children aged ten and thirteen years as to their custody will not be disturbed on appeal. Hibbette v. Baines, 78 Miss. 695, 29 So. 80, 51 L. R. A. 839. However, the right of the mother as natural guardian of her minor children after the death of the father being inferior to the right of a guardian appointed by the probate court, where the superior court on a writ of except in cases where the lower tribunal has manifestly abused the discretion confided in it.⁷⁰

(III) *FINDINGS OF FACT.*⁷¹ Findings of fact in a habeas corpus case generally have the effect of the verdict of a jury in an action at law,⁷² and hence they will not be disturbed on appeal or error if there is any evidence to support them.⁷³

k. *Presumptions.*⁷⁴ Presumptions are indulged on appeal or error in habeas corpus proceedings the same as in other cases.⁷⁵ habeas corpus discharged the children from the custody of the legal guardian and gave them to the mother, it was not such an exercise of discretion as could not be reviewed on error. Macready v. Wilcox, 33 Conn. 321.

W. 1031 (holding that a finding in a proceeding for the custody of a child that it is for the child's best interests that it should be awarded to the custody of a certain person has the same binding effect on appeal as the verdict of a jury); Bonnett v. Bonnett, 61 Iowa 199, 16 N. W. 91, 47 Am. Rep. 810.

73. Starr v. Barton, 34 Ga. 99 (so holding, although there is evidence strongly in conflict with the finding); Myers v. Clearman, 125 Iowa 461, 101 N. W. 193; Dunkin v. Seifert, 123 Iowa 64, 98 N. W. 558; Kline v. Kline, 57 Iowa 386, 10 N. W. 825, 42 Am. Rep. 47 (holding that, the proceeding being regarded as an action at law, the court can interfere only where the finding is manifestly unsupported by the evidence); In re Clyne, 52 Kan. 441, 35 Pac. 23 [followed in In re Freeman, 54 Kan. 493, 38 Pac. 558] (holding that the supreme court will generally decline to review the evidence and determine as to the existence of probable cause for the prosecution on appeal from an order remanding the prisoner). See also Ex p. Moore, 5 Tex. App. 103, holding that although the judgment of the lower court on the facts is not binding on the court of appeals, yet in case of conflicting testimony great deference is to be accorded to his opinion.

However, the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the findings will be passed upon. Jones v. Darnell, 103 Ind. 569, 2 N. E. 229, 53 Am. Rep. 545; Ex p. Kendall, 100 Ind. 599. And while the supreme court will generally decline to review the evidence and determine as to the existence of probable cause for the prosecution on appeal from an order remanding the prisoner, yet where important questions of law are presented that must necessarily be passed on at the trial and are decisive of the case, the court will decide them. In re Clyne, 52 Kan. 441, 35 Pac. 23.

Custody of child.—A judgment determining the right to the custody of a child will not be disturbed if based on conflicting evidence (Chunn v. Graham, 117 Ga. 551, 43

S. E. 987; Ring v. Weinman, 116 Ga. 798, 43 S. E. 47; Marlow v. Marlow, 105 Ga. 178, 31 S. E. 146), or if it has any evidence to support it (Dunkin v. Seifert, 123 Iowa 64, 98 N. W. 558). It will not be disturbed unless it is clearly contrary to the evidence as to the best interests of the child. Jenkins v. Clark, 71 Iowa 552, 32 N. W. 504. Contra, McKercher v. Green, 13 Colo. App. 270, 58 Pac. 406, holding that the rule that findings of fact will not be disturbed on appeal unless manifestly against the weight of the evidence is not applicable in a proceeding in habeas corpus for the custody of an infant.

75. Alabama.—Pruitt v. State, 130 Ala. 147, 30 So. 451, holding that on appeal from an order remanding petitioner to jail with the privilege of bail, where it appears that petitioner was originally committed to jail by order of the mayor of a municipality, and there is no bill of exceptions in the transcript, and nothing to show that the trial judge's consideration of the case was restricted to the validity of the commitment, and no error is affirmatively shown, it will be presumed that the order was correct and that in making it the judge acted within the power conferred on him by law.

Georgia.—Simmons v. Georgia Iron, etc., Co., 117 Ga. 305, 43 S. E. 780, 61 L. R. A. 739, holding that where a writ of habeas corpus has issued and respondents have appeared at the time appointed and a hearing is had, it will be presumed on appeal, nothing to the contrary appearing, that relator was before the court at that time.

Illinois.—People v. Hessing, 28 Ill. 410, holding that on error to a decision of the county court in a habeas corpus case, all the evidence in the court below should be incorporated in the record or the supreme court will not review the decision, the presumption being in favor of the ruling of the court below.

Mississippi.—Ex p. Jefferson, 62 Miss. 223, holding that where the record on appeal from an order refusing to discharge relator fails to show that the justice of the peace upon whose mittimus he was held in custody made an examination of the charge against him, the supreme court will presume that the examination was waived by relator.

Oregon.—Ex p. Stacey, 43 Oreg. 85, 75 Pac. 1060 (holding that if relator does not show that no plea of not guilty was entered to the information under which he was convicted, it is presumed on appeal from a judgment remanding him that the court had jurisdiction of his person, the bill of exceptions

Texas.—Ex p. Kramer, 19 Tex. App. 123, holding that if the record shows the remand of applicant to the custody of the officer detaining him under a warrant, the presumption is on appeal that he is held in custody by the officer in obedience to the order.

77. Ex p. Dennison, (Neb. 1904) 101 N. W. 1045 (holding that in determining whether the evidence below is sufficient to support the judgment, the supreme court will not regard errors in admitting incompetent evidence, if it appears from the whole record that no other conclusion could be reached on the competent evidence than the one reached; and that while a relator who gives evidence in his own behalf should not be cross-examined on matters not relating to his examination in chief, an error in so doing is without prejudice where the trial is to the court and no other judgment than the one entered could have been rendered on the competent evidence); Ex p. Qualls, (Tex. Cr. App. 1901) 61 S. 78. Matter of Larner, 79 N. Y. App. Div. 134, 79 N. Y. Suppl. 1039, holding that error in imposing conditions on an order discharging an alleged habitual drunkard from the custody of his committee cannot be complained of by the committee.

83. Lambert v. Barrett, 159 U. S. 660, 16 S. Ct. 135, 40 L. ed. 296, holding that where a person was convicted in a state court, and his application for a writ of habeas corpus was denied by the federal circuit court, and an appeal to the federal supreme court was dismissed, the authorities of the state wherein appellant was convicted had power to proceed upon final judgment being entered in the supreme court, and especially after the mandate had issued, although the mandate was delivered to the state authorities instead of to the circuit court.

North Carolina.—State v. Herndon, 107 N. C. 934, 12 S. E. 268. See also Walton v. Gatling, 60 N. C. 310, holding that a decision on a writ of habeas corpus to free a person from restraint for any other cause than the commission of a minor offense is a judgment and subject to review by certiorari, and that where the question is concerning the power of commitment his decision is thus subject to review; but that where the object of the writ of habeas corpus is to inquire whether there is probable cause for commitment the decision on it is not subject to review by certiorari.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Habeas Corpus," § 116.

See, however, Husted's Case, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. W. 111 (holding that, although there is no adequate remedy by appeal or writ of error to review an order of a circuit judge at chambers remanding an applicant in habeas corpus proceedings to jail, certiorari will not issue to review such order, since the applicant has an adequate remedy in his right to apply to the circuit court to have the order reviewed).

Persons entitled to writ.—The superintendent of an insane asylum may sue out writ of certiorari to review habeas corpus proceedings instituted in behalf of an inmate. Palmer v. Kalamazoo County Cir. Judge, 83 Mich. 528, 47 N. W. 355.

Verification of petition.—The petition for certiorari must be verified. Stibbins v. Butler, Minor (Ala.) 121.

Evidence.—In certiorari to review the proceedings of a commissioner on habeas corpus to inquire into the cause of the imprisonment of one held on execution from a justice's court in an action of replevin, the statement in the affidavit for certiorari of the contents of the justice's docket in the replevin suit cannot be received as evidence of the contents unless adopted by the return as true. Tomlin v. Fisher, 27 Mich. 524.

Decision.—If the supreme court on certiorari reverses the judgment in a habeas corpus case and the proceedings are remanded, no procedendo issues to any particular judge, but petitioner may exercise his statutory right to apply de novo to any judge authorized to grant the writ of habeas corpus. *State v. W. 787, the two last cases holding that on certiorari issued by the circuit court to review an order of a court commissioner discharging a prisoner from custody on habeas corpus the only issue reviewable is the jurisdiction of the commissioner, and on error to the circuit court to review its action the issue is the same. See also People v. Ct. of App., 27 Colo. 405, 61 Pac. 592, holding that certiorari will not lie to review a decision of the court of appeals on the ground of the application of a wrong legal determination in reversing a judgment of the district court in a habeas corpus proceeding and awarding the custody of a child for its benefit to relatives of its deceased mother instead of the father, who was not shown to be disqualified, where there is no decision of the supreme court announcing the contrary doctrine.

E. 268 (holding that the action of a trial judge in a habeas corpus proceeding in determining what amount of testimony is proper to be heard and whether petitioner should be admitted to bail is not subject to review, but if the judge refuses to hear any testimony or to investigate the case on the return of the writ on the ground that it appeared that a true bill for a capital offense had been found against petitioner, this is a ruling of law which petitioner is entitled to have reviewed); Com. v. McDougall, 203 Pa. St. 291, 52 Atl. 254 (holding that a proceeding equivalent to certiorari to review a decision in a habeas corpus case will be dismissed in the absence of irregularity in the record of the habeas corpus case, of which the opinion of the lower court is no part).

J. Operation and Effect of Determination⁹⁰—1. IN GENERAL. A judgment on a writ of habeas corpus remanding the prisoner has been held not to be a bar to a subsequent action by him for false imprisonment.⁹¹ The judgment can have operative force only within the state where it was rendered.⁹²

2. EFFECT OF DISCHARGE.⁹³ The discharge of the prisoner on habeas corpus will as a general rule in the absence of statute constitute a conclusive determination that at the time of his discharge he was improperly restrained, and he cannot be arrested a second time without some new circumstance to authorize the arrest which did not exist when the discharge was granted;⁹⁴ and in some jurisdictions

Costs against county.—In Iowa proceedings on a writ of habeas corpus cannot be regarded as criminal, and therefore costs in such case, where the applicant fails, cannot be taxed to the county in which the application is made and heard. State v. Collins, 54 Iowa 441, 6 N. W. 692. Under Shannon Tenn. Code, § 5545, however, providing that if plaintiff in habeas corpus proceedings be accused of a misdemeanor the judges shall deliver the bill of costs to the county clerk, by whom the same shall be allowed as in other cases, the costs of such proceeding should be paid by the county, and this whether accused is discharged or not. Henderson v. Walker, 101 Tenn. 229, 47 S. W. 430. Defendant in habeas corpus proceedings cannot recover his expenses as against the county where the requisite statutory steps were not taken by him. Foulke v. Arapahoe County Com'rs, 9 Colo. App. 201, 48 Pac. 153.

Security for costs will not be required of relator (State v. Lyon, 1 N. J. L. 403), even though he is a non-resident (People v. New York Soc. P. C. C., 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 677, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 1100).

In Alabama if a circuit judge refuses to discharge petitioner he may make a second application to the supreme court to revise the action of the lower court (Ex p. Cleveland, 36 Ala. 306; Ex p. Croom, 19 Ala. 561); but the jurisdiction of the supreme court is revisory only, and it cannot receive or consider evidence that was not before the lower court (Ex p. Brown, 63 Ala. 187). Consequently the evidence on which the action of the lower court was based must be brought to the supreme court's notice. Ex p. Cleveland, supra. See Ex p. West, 100 Ala. 65, 14 So. 901, holding that after a probate judge has refused a writ of habeas corpus to one accused of crime and duly committed in default of bail, the supreme court will not issue the writ, although a witness examined by the probate court gave testimony tending to show an alibi.

In Texas the matter is regulated by statute. Hibler v. State, 43 Tex. 197; Ex p. Forney, (Cr. App. 1903) 76 S. W. 440; Ex p. Rosson, 24 Tex. App. 226, 5 S. W. 666; Ex p. Wilson, 20 Tex. App. 498; Ex p. Foster, 5 Tex. App. 625, 32 Am. Rep. 577.

In the Canadian provinces the laws are not uniform. Thus it has been held that an application for a discharge on a writ of habeas corpus may, after the refusal of one judge in chambers, be renewed before another judge in chambers, and the latter may grant the discharge notwithstanding its refusal by a judge of coördinate jurisdiction. Rex v. Carter, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 401. Contra, Ex p. Donaghue, 9 L. C. Rep. 285; Barber v. O'Hara, 8 L. C. Rep. 216. See also Taylor v. Scott, 30 Ont. 475; In re Hall, 8 Ont. App. 135.

III. SUSPENSION OF REMEDY.

A. Power to Suspend. Under the constitution of the United States³ and those of the different states⁴ the power to suspend the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus exists in and is limited to cases where by reason of insurrection, rebellion, or invasion the public safety may require it.⁵ The president has assumed to suspend the privilege of the writ, but his power to do so has been seriously questioned, it being the general holding in both the federal⁶ and state⁷ courts that the suspension of the writ requires legislative action.⁸ After an attempted suspension of the writ by the president during the Civil war without legislative authority, congress by an express act⁹ authorized him to suspend it, the validity of which has been upheld against an objection that it was an attempted delegation of legislative power.¹⁰ The authority of the president and of congress to suspend the issue of the writ by a state court has been denied.¹¹

B. Effect of Suspension. The president's proclamation of Sept. 15, 1863, suspending the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus was construed to suspend all proceedings pending upon writs served before that day;¹² but it did not sus-

But in In re King, 66 Kan. 695, 72 Pac. 263, 97 Am. St. Rep. 399, 67 L. R. A. 783, it was decided that the prior judgment would not prevent another court from making a different order, where the welfare of the child required it, although no material change of circumstances was shown.

The truth of recitals of fact in a proclamation issued by the governor declaring a certain county of the state to be in a state of insurrection and rebellion will not be inquired into or reviewed on application for a writ of habeas corpus. In re Boyle, 6 Ida. 609, 57 Pac. 706, 96 Am. St. Rep. 286, 45 L. R. A. 832.

Right to review of decision.—The provision of the federal constitution against the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus applies solely to the absolute denial of the writ, and has no reference to the delay involved in a review by the higher court of the judgment of a lower one on such a writ. Macready v. Wilcox, 33 Conn. 321.

For act of parliament suspending writ see Rex v. Earl, 8 Mod. 51.

Effect of martial law.—The kind of suspension of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus that comes with war and exists without proclamation or other act is limited by the necessities of war, and applies only to cases where the demands upon the officer's time and services are such that he cannot consistently with his military duty obey the mandate of the civil authorities, and to cases arising within districts properly subjected to martial law, and may take place without the exercise of the power of congress under U. S. Const. art. 1, § 9. In re Kemp, 16 Wis. 359. The president has authority to proclaim martial law, and as a necessary consequence the suspension of the writ in the case of military arrests. Ex p. Field, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,761, 5 Blatchf. 63. See also In re Boyle, 6 Ida. 609, 57 Pac. 706, 96 Am. St. Rep. 286, 45 L. R. A. 832.

However, in U. S. v. Porter, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,074a, 2 Hayw. & H. 394, a writ was issued just prior to its suspension as a military necessity by the president, and the marshal was directed by the president not to execute it, and the court unanimously protested against the action of the military authorities.

pend the writ itself, which issued as of course, and on the return made to it the court decided whether the applicant was entitled to relief.¹³

HABEAS CORPUS AD DELIBERANDUM ET RECIPIENDUM. Literally, “you have the body to try and receive.” A writ used to remove a prisoner to the jurisdiction wherein an offense was committed.¹

HABEAS CORPUS AD FACIENDUM ET RECIPIENDUM. Literally, “you have the body, to do and receive.”² A writ used to remove an action from an inferior to a superior court.³

HABEAS CORPUS AD SUBJICIENDUM. Literally, “you have the body, to submit to.”¹⁰ (See, generally, HABEAS CORPUS.)

HABEAS CORPUS AD TESTIFICANDUM. Literally, “you have the body, to testify.”¹¹ A writ used to bring a witness into court, to give testimony in a cause.¹²

HABEAS CORPUS CUM CAUSA. Literally, “you have the body, with the cause.”¹³

HABEMUS OPTIMUM TESTEM CONFITENTEM REUM. A maxim meaning “We consider as the best witness a confessing defendant.”¹⁴

HABENDUM. Literally, “to have.”¹⁵ A clause in a deed, defining and limiting the estate or thing conveyed.¹⁶ (See, generally, DEEDS.)

Effect of act and proclamation.—After the passage of the act of congress of March 3, 1863, and the proclamation of the president of the 15th of September following, there was a valid suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in the cases therein defined (In re Oliver, 17 Wis. 681); and the act applies to the case of a person detained by the military authorities as a volunteer in the service of the United States (In re Oliver, supra. Contra, *People v. I. POWER TO REGULATE.

A. In General. The licensing of hawkers and peddlers is within the power of the legislature,¹ provided that the statutes do not discriminate² between the citizens or the products of the several states or foreign countries,³ and that the purpose is not merely to benefit the resident merchants of a city.⁴ Furthermore the legislature has no power to discriminate in favor of citizens of one county as against citizens of other counties in the same state,⁵ or to require a license for the peddling of goods only where manufactured in the state.⁶ So it cannot exempt sales to all manufacturers and dealers residing or doing business in a certain territory.⁷ But it is generally held to be allowable to exempt from the operation of the statute certain persons who peddle their own products or manufactures,⁸ such as farmers, butchers, and manufacturers;⁹ persons under physical disability;¹⁰ and soldiers.¹¹ So it is held to be proper for the legislature in the enactment of such statutes to discriminate in favor of certain articles by not requiring a license to peddle them.¹²

B. Power of Municipal Corporation. As the power to license hawkers and peddlers and to regulate their conduct is not one of the incidents of the general powers of a municipal corporation, such power cannot be exercised by a municipal corporation unless conferred on it by the legislature.¹³ Furthermore a municipal corporation given power to license peddlers cannot extend the definition of peddlers,¹⁴ as by including persons expressly excepted by statute.¹⁵ And, under a power given to license and regulate, it cannot practically prohibit the business by requiring an excessive license-fee.¹⁶ The license-fee should not exceed the necessary or probable expense of issuing the license and of inspecting and regulating the business which it covers;¹⁷ and such further reasonable sum as the city may deem necessary in order to secure the orderly pursuit of the business by excluding therefrom irresponsible and disorderly persons.¹⁸

Patent rights.—But a statute requiring the payment of a license-tax and the obtaining of a license by peddlers before they can sell or offer for sale a patent right, or any territory covered by such patent right which has been granted by the United States, is unconstitutional, where the license-tax imposed on the peddlers of patent rights is double the amount required of other peddlers. In re Sheffield, 64 Fed. 833.

Gilbert*, 5 Can. Sup. Ct. 356. Power of municipal corporation to pass particular ordinances see LICENSES; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

14. Moberly v. Hoover, 93 Mo. App. 663, 67 S. W. 721, holding that if the word "peddler" is defined by statute, the use thereof in a municipal ordinance must be understood as defined in the statute.

A municipal corporation cannot include in the term "peddlers" those who take orders for goods and deliver them afterward. Emons v. Lewistown, 132 Ill. 380, 24 N. E. 58, 22 Am. St. Rep. 540, 8 L. R. A. 328 (book canvassers); Davenport v. Rice, 75 Iowa 74, 39 N. W. 191, 9 Am. St. Rep. 454; Trenton v. Clayton, 50 Mo. App. 535. Contra, Graffy v. Rushville, 107 Ind. 502, 8 N. E. 609, 57 Am. Rep. 128, which holds that a person who sells by sample is a peddler within the generally accepted definition of the term. Nor can a license-fee be imposed on a farmer who delivers milk as an incident to his business. South Easton v. Moser, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 343. Neither can a farmer who sells fresh meat, the animals being raised and butchered by him, be compelled to take out a license. Ex p. Snyder, (Ida. 1905) 79 Pac. 819.

15. Ex p. Snyder, (Ida. 1905) 79 Pac. 819; St. Louis v. Meyer, 185 Mo. 583, 84 S. W. 914, holding that a municipal corporation is powerless, by definition or otherwise, to embrace in an ordinance as peddlers and subject them to penalties for a violation thereof, a class of persons who by a general law of the state are within the exception of the terms of the statute defining the class who are in fact peddlers.

16. People v. Jarvis, 19 N. Y. App. Div. 466, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 596.

If the license is authorized simply as an exercise of the police power it cannot be used as a means of revenue. State v. Bevins, 70 Vt. 574, 41 Atl. 655.

However, a higher license-fee may be imposed on one kind of peddlers than on others. Mechanicsburg Borough v. Koons, 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 131. Thus the amount of the license may be fixed according to the value of the goods carried and according to whether the peddler goes on foot or uses a horse and wagon. New Castle v. Cutler, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 612. See also LICENSES.

II. WHO ARE.

A. Definition — 1. HAWKERS. Strictly speaking a hawker is a peddler who cries out his goods,¹⁹ although for all practical purposes the terms are considered synonymous.²⁰

2. PEDDLERS — a. In General. Inasmuch as the term "peddler" is defined in nearly every statute or ordinance requiring such persons to take out a license, it is important to ascertain who is a peddler only when the term is not so defined by statute or municipal ordinance or where the power of a municipal corporation to enlarge the generally accepted meaning of the term is questioned. In the absence of a definition by statute or municipal ordinance,²¹ a peddler or hawker, within the generally accepted meaning of the word, is a small retail²² dealer who

White, 43 Minn. 250, 45 N. W. 232; ten dollars a year for the sale of milk (Littlefield v. State, 42 Nebr. 223, 60 N. W. 724, 47 Am. St. Rep. 697, 28 L. R. A. 588).

The following fees have been held unreasonable, viz.: Fifty dollars for a license (State v. Glavin, 67 Conn. 29, 34 Atl. 708); ten dollars a day (Carrollton v. Bazzette, 159 Ill. 284, 42 N. E. 837, 31 L. R. A. 522, itinerant merchant); two dollars a month (Peoria v. Gugenheim, 61 Ill. App. 374, itinerant vendor); twenty-five dollars a day or two hundred and fifty dollars a month (Ottumwa v. Zekind, 95 Iowa 622, 64 N. W. 646, 58 Am. St. Rep. 447, 29 L. R. A. 734, transient merchant); "not less than one or more than twenty-five dollars for a fixed time, in the discretion of the mayor" (State Centre v. Barenstein, 66 Iowa 249, 23 N. W. 652); ten dollars a month for selling fresh meat (Chaddock v. Day, 75 Mich. 527, 42 N. E. 977, 13 Am. St. Rep. 468, 4 L. R. A. 809); ten dollars for the first day and five dollars for each subsequent day for hawkers and peddlers traveling on foot, and for traveling with one horse twenty dollars and fifteen dollars, and with two or more horses twenty-five and fifteen dollars (Brooks v. Mangan, 86 Mich. 576, 49 N. W. 633, 24 Am. St. Rep. 137); ten dollars a month (State v. Angelo, 71 N. H. 224, 51 Atl. 905); ten dollars a day (People v. Jarvis, 19 N. Y. App. Div. 466, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 596); twenty-five dollars, where licensing was authorized merely as an exercise of the police power and not to obtain revenue (State v. Bevins, 70 Vt. 574, 41 Atl. 655).

Reasonableness as a question of law.—Whether in a given case the sum charged for the license is unreasonable, while generally a question of fact, is a question of law, where no two minds can dissent from the opinion that a certain sum is unreasonable. State v. Bevins, 70 Vt. 574, 41 Atl. 655.

19. Kennedy v. People, 9 Colo. App. 490, 49 Pac. 373 (holding that the term "hawker" as formerly defined was an itinerant trader who, like a peddler, carried his goods with him for sale, but also directed attention by public outcry or placard or exposure); Com. v. Ober, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 493 (holding that as generally understood the term "hawker" means one who not only carries goods for sale but seeks for purchasers, either by outcry or by directing notice and attention to them as goods for sale, by an actual exhibition or exposure of them, by placards or labels, or by a conventional signal, as the sound of a horn for the sale of fish).

Those deceitful fellows who went from place to place buying and selling brass, pewter, and other goods and merchandise which ought to be uttered in open market were of old so called hawkers; and the appellation seems to grow from their uncertain wandering, like persons that with hawks seek their game where they can find it. Jacob L. Diet.

Laws (1895), c. 116, § 23, which defines a peddler as any person going about in a wagon, cart, or buggy for the purpose of "exhibiting or delivering" any wares or merchandise, one who goes from house to house in a buggy containing samples and solicits orders is a peddler, although he delivers them without the use of a buggy, cart, or wagon); State v. Franks, 130 N. C. 724, 41 S. E. 785 (holding that under N. C. Laws (1901), c. 9, § 54, providing that any person who shall carry from place to place goods, etc., offering the same for sale, or who carries a wagon, cart, or buggy to exhibit or deliver goods, is a peddler, one who travels on foot making sales by sample, and afterward delivers the goods traveling on foot, is not a peddler).

The sale must be to the consumer to constitute one a peddler. State v. Fetterer, 65 Conn. 287, 32 Atl. 394; Standard Oil Co. v. Com., 107 Ky. 606, 55 S. W. 8, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1339, 80 S. Sale of oil to a retailer from a tank wagon is not peddling. Standard Oil Co. v. Com., 107 Ky. 606, 55 S. W. 8, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1339, 83 S. W. 557, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 1187. So a sale by an agent of an oil company who had been but a few days in its service and was without experience in its business, to two persons, one of whom was supposed to be a retailer of oil and a regular customer of the company, and the other had told him that his house sold oil, does not constitute peddling. Hays v. Com., 107 Ky. 655, 55 S. W. 425, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1418. A firm are not retailers in oil because they occasionally furnish their employees with oil for personal use, or because they would have sold it to others. But where an agent who sells oil from a wagon to retailers repeatedly sells oil to one not a retailer, such acts constitute peddling. Standard Oil Co. v. Com., 80 S. W. 1150, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 142.

Sale to employees.—The fact that goods are sold only to employees of his principal does not relieve a seller of the character of peddler. Hall v. State, 39 Fla. 637, 23 So. 119.

23. Rex v. McKnight, 10 B. & C. 734, 8 L. J. M. C. O. S. 86, 21 E. C. L. 310, holding that there is no "carrying to sell" unless the goods or a sample thereof are carried along and shown when the order is taken.

The means of transportation is immaterial.—A peddler is liable to a license-tax whether his goods are carried in a pack or on a steamboat or canal-boat. Cole v. Randolph, 31 La. Ann. 535; The Stella Block v. Richland Parish, 26 La. Ann. 642; Fisher v. Patterson, 13 Pa. St. 336.

24. The primary idea of a hawker and peddler is that of an itinerant or traveling trader who carries goods about in order to sell them, and who actually sells them to purchasers, in contradistinction to a trader who has goods for sale and sells them in a fixed place of business. Com. v. Ober, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 493.

A person who occupies a store or other permanent stand, and does not travel from place to place offering his goods for sale, is not a hawker or peddler. Randolph v. Yellowstone Kit, 83 Ala. 471, 3 So. 706; Gould v. Atlanta, 55 Ga. 678; Delisle v. Danville, 36 Ill. App. 659; State v. Hodgdon, 41 Vt. 139.

Traveling merely from the town where the trader resides to another town constitutes going from town to town. Atty.-Gen. v. Woolhouse, 12 Price 65, 1 Y. & J. 463.

There can be no "carrying from place to place" where there is but a single sale. See infra, II, A, 2, note 3.

25. Traveling from place to place in one town constitutes one a peddler as well as traveling from town to town. Stuart v. Cunningham, 88 Iowa 191, 55 N. W. 311, 20 L. R. A. 430; Andrews v. White, 32 Me. 388.

26. It is the manner of sale that makes a peddler, and hence it is immaterial whether he owns the article sold or acts as agent of the owner. In re Wilson, 19 D. C. 341, 12 L. R. A. 624; Spadone v. Reed, 7 Bush (Ky.)

455; State v. Smithson, 106 Mo. 149, 17 S. W. 221; Com. v. Gardner, 133 Pa. St. 284, 19 Atl. 550, 19 Am. St. Rep. 645, 7 L. R. A. 666; Com. v. Morgan, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. 292.

Statute requiring ownership.—Under the Pennsylvania act of 1867, which provides a special license for disabled soldiers who are peddlers, but requires that they shall be the bona fide owners in their own right of the goods peddled, a disabled soldier, selling under such license in partnership with another disabled soldier having the same kind of license, is guilty of a violation of the statute. Com. v. Rosenerans, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. 399.

Who is an agent.—A member of a firm who makes sales is not an agent within the meaning of a statute defining a hawker as inter alia an agent for persons not residing within the county. Reg. v. Marshall, 12 Ont. 55.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. Edson, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 377.

Tennessee.—Woolman v. State, 2 Swan 353.

Another definition is: A peddler is an itinerant individual, ordinarily without local habitation or place of business, who travels about the country carrying commodities for sale. Davenport v. Riee, 75 Iowa 74, 39 N. W. 191, 90 Am. St. Rep. 454.

The object of the legislature was to protect, on the one hand, fair traders, particularly established shopkeepers, resident permanently in towns or other places, and paying rent and taxes there for local privileges, from the mischiefs of being undersold by itinerant persons, to their injury; and, on the other, to guard the public from the impositions practised by such persons in the course of their dealings; who, having no known or fixed residence, carry on a trade by means of vending goods conveyed from place to place by horse or cart. Atty.-Gen. v. Tongue, 12 Price 51.

There are five elements required to constitute a peddler: (1) That he should have no place of dealing but travel around from place to place; (2) that he should carry with him the wares he offers for sale and not merely samples thereof; (3) that he should sell them at the time he offers them and not merely enter into an executory contract for future sale; (4) that he should deliver them then and there and not merely contract to deliver them in the future; and (5) that is immaterial that the goods are bartered instead of sold,²⁸ that the sale is a conditional one,²⁹ or that it is on the instalment plan.³⁰ A single act of selling does not, however, make the seller a peddler.³¹ It is not necessary that the seller cry his goods in the street.³² A peddler is to be distinguished from a drummer³³ and from a merchant who has a place of business.³⁴ The statutes and ordinances often limit the term to sellers of particular articles.³⁵ the sales made by him should be to consumers and not confined exclusively to dealers in the articles sold by him. St. Paul v. Briggs, 85 Minn. 290, 88 N. W. 984.

A lightning-rod man is a peddler (State v. Wilson, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 28), but a lightning-rod agent who sells no rods without putting them up, and who charges by the foot for his work in putting up the rods or repairing them is not a peddler (Ezell v. Thrasher, 76 Ga. 817).

Whether the goods sold are in a raw or manufactured state is immaterial. Rex v. Pease, 8 L. J. M. C. O. S. 87.

Regular customers.—It is immaterial that the peddler has regular customers. Chicago v. Barte, 100 Ill. 57.

Offering for sale only to particular persons.—The fact that the goods are offered for sale by one traveling by wagon only to persons who had previously been visited by a canvasser and had expressed a desire to see the machines does not obviate the necessity of taking out a hawker's license for the person actually offering them for sale. Holland v. Hall, 20 Cox C. C. 167, 66 J. P. 424, 86 L. T. Rep. N. S. 355, 50 Wkly. Rep. 525.

What constitutes "trading, dealing and trafficking."—The carrying about and offering for sale is considered as trading, dealing, and trafficking in goods within a statute providing that no person shall "trade, deal and traffic" as a peddler. Merriam v. Langdon, 10 Conn. 460.

A law office is not a public place within an ordinance prohibiting the offering for sale of goods on the public streets, alleys, or other public places of the town. Spencer v. Whitting, 68 Iowa 678, 28 N. W. 13.

The term "other trading persons" applies to persons of the same description as a hawker and peddler. Dean v. King, 4 B. & Ald. 517, 6 E. C. L. 584; Rex v. Pease, 8 L. J. M. C. O. S. 87. A licensed auctioneer conveying goods by a public stage-wagon from place to place and selling them on commission is a "trading person." Rex v. Turner, 4 B. & Ald. 510, 6 E. C. L. 581. See also Manson v. Hope, 2 B. & S. 498, 8 Jur. N. S. 971, 31 L. J. M. C. 191, 6 L. T. Rep. N. S. 326, 10 Wkly. Rep. 664, 110 E. C. L. 498.

Who are traders.—Women who travel from house to house to sell articles, the proceeds to be applied to the missionary cause, cannot be said to trade so as to come within the definition of a peddler. Gregg v. Smith, L. R. 8 Q. B. 302, 42 L. J. M. C. 121, 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 555, 21 Wkly. Rep. 737.

However, it has been held that a single act constitutes peddling if it be accompanied with the intent to continue in such acts. Keller v. State, 123 Ala. 94, 26 So. 323.

Driving a load of ice through the streets, calling out "ice," and twice selling ice to a person standing in the street, who then and there paid for the same, is sufficient evidence that defendant was going from place to place, carrying and exposing merchandise for sale. Com. v. Reid, 175 Mass. 325, 56 N. E. 617.

32. People v. Baker, 115 Mich. 199, 73 N. W. 115.

Electrotype wares are not jewelry within an ordinance which makes a seller thereof a hawker (Reg. v. Chayter, 11 Ont. 217), but plain gold ear-rings and ear-knobs are jewelry (Com. v. Stephens, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 370).

Wine roots or plants are not "goods, wares or commodities" so as to make a seller thereof a peddler. Best v. Bauder, 29 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 489.

Oil.—A tax on traveling vendors of "patent or proprietary medicines, special nostrums, jewelry, paper, soap, or other merchandise" does not embrace vendors of oil. Standard Oil Co. v. Swanson, 121 Ga. 412, 49 S. E. 262.

What are "dry-goods."—Clothing for which orders are solicited after exposing samples of the clothes from which it is to be manufactured is not within the term "dry-goods" as used in an ordinance defining a hawker as one who sells or offers for sale, as an agent

b. As Distinguished From Itinerant Vendors. The term "itinerant vendor," or its equivalent, is often used as synonymous with "peddler,"³⁶ although usually the former is defined by statute or ordinance as one who hires, leases, or occupies a building for a limited time, that is, a merchant who goes from town to town but not from house to house.³⁷

B. Persons Selling by Sample or Order. One who sells by order or sample, but does not deliver the articles sold at the time of the sale,³⁸ such as a

Definition.—One who takes a stock of goods from city to city and who sells his goods and transacts business as a merchant for a few weeks only in each place is an itinerant merchant. Carrollton v. Bazzette, 159 Ill. 284, 42 N. E. 837, 31 L. R. A. 522.

Fixed place of business.—To constitute an "itinerant vendor" it is not necessary that a person should travel all the time and have no fixed place of sale. He may have a place of business where he sells his goods during a part of the time, and he may travel for the sale of his goods at other times. Snyder v. Closson, 84 Iowa 184, 50 N. W. 678. The term "itinerant vendor" in Connecticut does not include those whose business in the state is permanent, even when such persons carry on a part of their business temporarily in a place apart from their usual location. State v. Powell, 69 N. H. 353, 41 Atl. 171. A person is an itinerant vendor whether his whole business is selling temporarily or transiently, or whether he does it more or less frequently in connection with a permanent business at a fixed place or places. Com. v. Crowell, 156 Mass. 215, 30 N. E. 1015.

Itinerant "merchant."—There is a difference between an itinerant "merchant" and a peddler, although it is not always easy to determine who is a merchant. Carrollton v. Bazzette, 159 Ill. 284, 42 N. E. 837, 31 L. R. A. 522.

A "transient trader" is defined by ordinance as one who "occupies premises" in the municipality for a temporary period, and whose name has not been duly entered on the assessment-roll in respect to income or personal property for the then current year. Where goods are consigned to be sold on commission, and they are so sold in the shop or premises of the commission merchant and by him or on his behalf, he is not a transient trader merely because he happens to accompany the goods and assist in their sale. Reg. v. Cuthbert, 45 U. C. Q. B. 19.

Single transaction.—A single transaction does not constitute a person an itinerant vendor, but the selling of goods must constitute his occupation. State v. Feingold, 77 Conn. 326, 59 Atl. 211.

Sale of goods in freight depot.—Merchants who ship provisions from another state to an agent, who sells the goods so shipped by traveling around the city and then delivering them from the cars or freight depot, and who has no store or warehouse or other place of business in the city, are itinerant traders. Burr v. Atlanta, 64 Ga. 225.

Itinerant "trader."—A trader who opens a house within a city for the purpose of selling out therein a stock of goods, and who deposits in the house a large stock and proceeds to sell them out in the one place by auction or otherwise, and who does not convey any of the goods, or carry samples thereof from point to point in the city for the purpose of sale, exhibition, or the solicitation of orders, is not an itinerant "trader." Gould v. Atlanta, 55 Ga. 678.

Taking orders for goods to be manufactured by the principal does not constitute peddling. Elgin v. Picard, 24 Ill. App. 340; Spencer v. Whiting, 68 Iowa 678, 28 N. W. 13; Radebaugh v. Plain City, 11 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 612, 28 Cinc. L. Bul. 107.

drummer,³⁹ book-cavasser,⁴⁰ or a merchant who has a store and solicits orders,⁴¹ is not a peddler, except where the statute or ordinance includes such persons within the definition of a peddler;⁴² and a single or occasional sale and delivery from his samples does not make him a hawker or peddler.⁴³ But if the usual practice is to deliver when the goods are sold, the seller is a peddler, notwithstanding the fact that he does not always do so.⁴⁴

Subsequent delivery by seller.—A sale by sample does not constitute peddling where there is no delivery at the time, irrespective of whether the subsequent delivery is made by the seller or by another. Potts v. State, 45 Tex. Cr. 45, 74 S. W. 31.

A person who is employed at a monthly salary to sell goods by samples for his principal, and who takes orders for future delivery, and carries his samples with him in a wagon, both being the property of his principal, and who afterward delivers the goods upon their being shipped to him, is not a peddler. Kennedy v. People, 9 Colo. App. 490, 49 Pac. 373.

"Expose for sale or sell."—A person employed to go from place to place within a county taking orders for certain kinds of merchandise, to be furnished from his employer's store, and to be delivered by the agent in about a week from the time when the order is taken, where he neither carries nor exposes for sale any goods but confines himself to taking orders and delivering the goods to fill them, does not "expose for sale or sell" goods within the meaning of the statute. State v. Wells, 69 N. H. 424, 45 Atl. 143, 48 L. R. A. 99.

Ordinance discriminating between "peddlers" and "transient dealers."—Where an ordinance in one section provides that "peddlers engaged in selling any kind of merchandise, shall pay per year five hundred dollars," and in another section provides that "transient traders or dealers who shall take orders for any of the following-named articles at retail shall, before offering the same for sale, or soliciting orders, take out a license to be fixed by the mayor, viz., clocks, watches, clothes, shirts, dry-goods, boots, shoes, hats, caps, hardware, jewelry, spectacles, silver and plated ware, fancy goods, groceries or furniture," an agent engaged in going from house to house carrying samples of curtains and rugs and taking orders for such goods, which orders are filled by his principal, is not a peddler, within the meaning of the ordinance. Kimmel v. Americus, 105 Ga. 694, 31 S. E. 623.

42. See the statutes of the different states.

The statute in North Carolina includes as a peddler one who "exhibits" wares or merchandise carried in a wagon. State v. Ninestein, 132 N. C. 1039, 43 S. E. 936; Collier v. Burgin, 130 N. C. 632, 41 S. E. 874; State v. Franks, 127 N. C. 510, 37 S. E. 70; Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Carver, 118 N. C. 328, 24 S. E. 352 [distinguishing the earlier case of State v. Lee, 113 N. C. 681, 18 S. E. 713, 37 Am. St. Rep. 649, which was decided before the definition of the word "peddler" by statute].

A person who travels from house to house soliciting orders for goods, although he makes no delivery at the time of sale, is by ordinance a peddler. New Castle v. Cutler, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 612.

An ordinance which includes persons "offering to sell" goods as peddlers embraces one who sells by sample and delivers afterward. Spanish Fork v. Mortenson, 7 Utah 33, 24 Pac. 620.

Mercantile agent.—A person taking orders for the sale of goods for future delivery by himself or by some other person has been, by ordinance, defined as a "mercantile agent." He differs from a "peddler" in that he makes no sales or delivery of goods carried with him for that purpose, and from a "drummer" in that he takes orders for goods from customers and not from retail merchants. Brookfield v. Kitchen, 163 Mo. 546, 63 S. W. 825.

43. Kimmel v. Americus, 105 Ga. 694, 31 S. E. 623; Kansas City v. Collins, 34 Kan. 434, 8 Pac. 865; Com. v. Farnum, 114 Mass. 267; State v. Moorehead, 42 S. C. 211, 20 S. E. 544, 46 Am. St. Rep. 719, 26 L. R. A. 585.

The reason for the rule that one who occasionally sells the sample which he is carrying around is not a peddler is that the sale of samples is merely incidental to the regular employment of selling by sample for future delivery. State v. Moorehead, 42 S. C. 211, 20 S. E. 544, 46 Am. St. Rep. 719, 26 L. R. A. 585.

44. McDermott v. Lewistown, 92 Ill. App. 474, holding that a person is a peddler where he carries with him, in grips, articles called samples, which he delivers when sold in so far as he has the goods with him, although he does not deliver until afterward if he has not sufficient samples with him.

Under Mo. Rev. St. § 7211, declaring any person who deals in goods by going from place to place to sell the same to be a peddler, one who, as an agent of an establishment lo-

C. Persons Delivering Goods Sold. Except where otherwise provided by statute,⁴⁵ one delivering goods previously sold by himself or another is not a peddler,⁴⁶ unless the separation of the sale and the delivery is in pursuance of a scheme to evade the payment of the license.⁴⁷ But one who makes a practice of selling while delivering goods previously bought is a peddler.⁴⁸

D. Persons Who Peddle as an Incident to Their Business. Irrespective of statute, persons who raise or produce what they sell, such as farmers⁴⁹

eated in another state, takes one of the harrows which it has shipped into the state to an agent, and goes through the country with it, sometimes selling the single harrow outright, at other times taking a written order and then delivering the one with him, and at other times taking a written order and then going back to the agent to whom they had been shipped for one, is a peddler. State v. Snoddy, 128 Mo. 523, 31 S. W. 36 [following State v. Emert, 103 Mo. 241, 15 S. W. 81, 23 Am. St. Rep. 874, 11 L. R. A. 219].

45. See the statutes of the different states.

In North Carolina for instance, any person using a wagon, cart, or buggy for the purpose of exhibiting or "delivering" any wares or merchandise is defined as a peddler. State v. Franks, 127 N. C. 510, 37 S. E. 70; Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Carver, 118 N. C. 328, 24 S. E. 352.

46. Iowa.—Stuart v. Cunningham, 88 Iowa 191, 55 N. W. 311, 20 L. R. A. 430, merchandise, consisting of spoons, albums, rugs, etc.

Kentucky.—Brenner v. Com., 9 Ky. L. Rep. 289.

New York.—Stamford v. Fisher, 140 N. Y. 187, 35 N. E. 500 [affirming 63 Hun 123, 17 N. Y. Suppl. 609].

England.—Rex v. McKnight, 10 B. & C. 734, 8 L. J. M. C. O. S. 86, 21 E. C. L. 310.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Hawkers and Peddlers," § 6.

Collecting the price from the purchasers does not make a person who delivers goods previously sold by another a peddler. Stuart v. Cunningham, 88 Iowa 191, 55 N. W. 311, 20 L. R. A. 430.

Delivery of larger quantity than that ordered.—It is not a violation of the peddling act for an agent to deliver goods, made by his principal in Boston, to traders in the country who had previously ordered them from his principal, nor to deliver at the same time and under the same circumstances a larger quantity of the same goods than they had previously ordered. Com. v. Ober, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 493.

47. Duncan v. State, 105 Ga. 457, 30 S. E. 755; Com. v. Edson, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 377, holding that while the delivery of goods to those who have previously ordered them is not in violation of an act forbidding hawking and peddling without a license, yet the carrying goods under cover of such orders for sale whenever and wherever one could find purchasers, without regard to any preëxisting arrangements, is a violation of such an act.

48. Com. v. Reid, 175 Mass. 325, 56 N. E. 617; Com. v. Ober, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 493, holding that one who sells prohibited goods from house to house, at the request of purchasers, while driving about delivering goods for a manufacturer, and without any previous intention of selling or exposing goods for sale, is nevertheless a peddler.

Butchers who deliver meat to their customers from a wagon to fill orders previously given, and also sell meat from said wagon to persons who have not previously ordered it, and whose driver is in the habit of going to houses and soliciting the inmates to buy when they do not see the wagon and come out on the street, are peddlers, although they only sell meat to regular customers. Davis v. Macon, 64 Ga. 128, 37 Am. Rep. 60; Duluth v. Krupp, 46 Minn. 435, 49 N. W. 235; Ballston Spa v. Markham, 58 Hun (N. Y.) 238, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 826; Elizabeth v. Braum, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 257.

Seller of picture frames to subscribers for pictures.—A person who follows up an agent who has obtained orders for enlargement of pictures and who delivers the picture in a frame which he offers for sale to persons who had ordered pictures is a peddler (State v. Montgomery, 92 Me. 433, 43 Atl. 13), although it has been held that where an agent, in delivering portraits which his principal manufactured under contracts requiring their delivery in frames, sold the frames to the portrait buyers, the option to purchase being given them by the contracts, but did not sell to other than portrait buyers, or go anywhere to sell except where he had to deliver portraits, the sale of the picture frame is a mere incident to the business in which the agent is regularly engaged, and hence he is not a peddler (State v. Coop, 52 S. C. 508, 30 S. E. 609, 41 L. R. A. 501).

Seller of sewing-machines.—Local merchants who carry a stock of sewing-machines, and who after taking orders therefor at their store deliver them in the country, through their agent, are not peddlers, because the agent while in the country filling orders occasionally sells from the delivery wagon a new machine or an old one taken in trade. Alexander v. Greenville County, 49 S. C. 527, 27 S. E. 469.

49. Roy v. Schuff, 51 Ia. Ann. 86, 24 So. 788; St. Louis v. Meyer, 185 Mo. 583, 84 S. W. 914; Com. v. Gardner, 133 Pa. St. 284, 19 Atl. 550, 19 Am. St. Rep. 645, 7 L. R. A. 666; Irwin Borough v. Douglass, 8 Pa. Dist.

and butchers,⁵⁰ have been held not to be peddlers,⁵¹ although there is authority to the contrary.⁵²

E. Persons Exempted by Statute or Ordinance—1. IN GENERAL. In many of the states the statute exempts from its operation any manufacturer, mechanic, nurseryman, farmer, butcher, or fish or milk dealer, who sells, either by himself or an employee, his manufactured articles, wares, or products.⁵³

2. MANUFACTURERS. So by the provisions of the statute or ordinance as the case may be one selling goods of his own manufacture is exempted in many states,⁵⁴ but this exemption does not extend to an agent employed by the manufacturer.⁵⁵

505; Lansford v. Wertman, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 469.

Farmer who peddles milk.—A farmer, a non-resident of a borough, who as incident to his business delivers milk to regular customers, part of which is the product of his own dairy and part of which is purchased from others, is not a peddler. Lehighon Borough v. Smith, 9 Pa. Dist. 428; South Easton v. Moser, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 343. It would seem, however, that if the ordinance expressly requires a license from a milk dealer selling from door to door, it would embrace farmers who peddle their milk. See Chicago v. Barte, 100 Ill. 57.

Farmer who sells fresh meat.—A farmer may sell without license beef from slaughtered animals raised and slaughtered by him, since he is not a peddler. Ex p. Snyder, (Ida. 1905) 79 Pac. 819.

50. State v. Kumpel, 2 Marv. (Del.) 464, 43 Atl. 173.

One whose principal business is killing cattle as a butcher and selling at a shop, and also delivering meat from a wagon and incidentally selling from the wagon to those who come to it to purchase, is not a peddler. Com. v. Roenick, 10 Pa. Dist. 51.

51. Reason for rule.—Farmers are not exempt merely because they raise what they sell, but because the selling of their products from house to house is incidental to their business as farmers. Com. v. Roenick, 10 Pa. Dist. 51.

52. State v. Jensen, 93 Minn. 88, 100 N. W. 644, in which the decision is based on the ground that there is no just reason why the farmer, gardener, etc., should not be placed on the same basis as those who purchase their stock from others.

53. See the statutes of the different states. See also Roy v. Schuff, 51 La. Ann. 86, 24 So. 788, holding that an exemption of all persons engaged in agricultural pursuits from the payment of a license-tax covers the sale by the farmer of the products of his farm.

Meat as "product of farm."—A farmer who buys cattle, fattens and butchers them, and sells them by retail from a wagon, is a farmer vending "his own products." State v. Spagh, 129 N. C. 564, 40 S. E. 60.

Whether persons named are peddlers irrespective of statute or ordinance see supra, II, D, note 49 et seq.

54. Com. v. Stull, 9 Luz. Leg. Reg. (Pa.) 129.

Who are manufacturers.—One need not manufacture every portion of the material used and construct from the original material in order to be a manufacturer. When by the application of skill and labor an article or articles are so transformed as to become a different article of increased value, such article may generally be classed as a manufactured article. Radebaugh v. Plain City, 11 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 612, 28 Cinc. L. Bul. 107. A non-resident merchant tailor who takes orders by sample for future delivery of suits to be made by him is a manufacturer (Radebaugh v. Plain City, 11 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 612, 28 Cinc. L. Bul. 107); but a butcher is not a manufacturer (Tippecanoe v. Boercher, 5 Ohio Cir. Ct. 6, 3 Ohio Cir. Dec. 4), nor is a jeweler purchasing movements, hands, and cases, separately, and assembling these several parts into watches, and putting them into a marketable condition (Com. v. Percival, 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 608). Admixture by boiling together certain drugs to form a nostrum is not a process of manufacture. State v. Morrell, 100 N. C. 506, 6 S. E. 418.

For other cases as to who is a manufacturer within a statute or ordinance exempting manufacturers from payment of license-fee, where not peddling, see LICENSES.

Sale of goods resold to manufacturer.—Where a manufacturer sells goods of his own manufacture to customers, and afterward buys them back, and sells them again as a traveling merchant or peddler, he is still selling goods of his own manufacture, and is not guilty of a penal offense. Com. v. Morgan, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 164.

Who are "makers."—Manufacturers on a large scale, employing workmen on the premises where they do not reside, and doing no manual labor themselves, are makers. Rex v. Faraday, 1 B. & Ad. 275, 9 L. J. M. C. O. S. 35, 20 E. C. L. 483. A person buying books in sheets and making them up is not a maker of books. Moore v. Edwards, 2 Chit. 213, 18 E. C. L. 596.

By 50 Geo. III, c. 41, the manufacturers of goods cannot sell them except in certain places. Rex v. Websdell, 2 B. & C. 136, 3 D. & R. 360, 9 E. C. L. 67.

55. State v. Rhyne, 119 N. C. 905, 26 S. E. 126; Com. v. Morgan, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. 292; Com. v. Winslow, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 667. Contra, Com. v. Feinburg, 3 Pa. Dist. 361, 13 Pa. Co. Ct. 527; Com. v. Morgan, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 164, the last two cases being based on Hart v. Willetts, 62 Pa. St. 15, in which case, however, no such question was raised.

Construction of statute.—A statute ex-

Usually, however, the exemption in the statute or ordinance is limited to goods manufactured within the state.⁵⁶

3. PERSONS SELLING PARTICULAR GOODS. The sellers of certain enumerated articles are often exempted by statute or ordinance from the necessity of taking out a license.⁵⁷

III. THE LICENSE.⁵⁸

A. Necessity. It may be necessary to take out a license, although the seller is expressly exempted from the necessity of paying therefor.⁵⁹

B. To Whom Issued. The license must be issued to the person actually peddling,⁶⁰ and is not transferable.⁶¹ It follows that a license cannot issue to a emptying "the real worker or maker of any goods, or his or their children, apprentices, or known agents or servants usually residing with such real workers," does not extend to an agent or servant residing in a separate dwelling-house, although solely employed by such worker or maker. Rex v. Mainwaring, 10 B. & C. 66, 8 L. J. M. G. O. S. 36, 5 M. & R. 57, 21 E. C. L. 38.

56. Naff v. Russell, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 36 (holding that where stoves, sheet iron, and tin were brought in from another state, and the sheet iron and tin were made into pipes and cooking utensils and sold with the stoves, they were not exempt); Woolman v. State, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 353 (holding that a merchant who has imported cloth into this state, manufactured in another state or country, has paid the regular merchant's tax on it, and made it into clothing, cannot sell the clothing in any county in this state as a peddler, without such license as is required by the revenue laws to be issued to peddlers).

"Foreign goods" as meaning goods of foreign country.—It has been held that candy made in another state is not "foreign goods," within the meaning of the Pennsylvania act of April 16, 1840, which prohibits the hawking and peddling of foreign goods without license, inasmuch as the word "foreign" refers to a foreign country (Hart v. Willetts, 62 Pa. St. 15), but a later case intimates that if the question were to arise again it would be held to mean all goods "not the growth, product or manufacture of this state" (Com. v. Brinton, 132 Pa. St. 69, 18 Atl. 1092).

57. See the statutes of the different states. "Provisions."—Fruits commonly used as articles of food are "provisions" within N. H. Laws (1897), c. 76, § 1, exempting the latter from the articles as to which a peddler must obtain a license. State v. Angelo, 71 N. H. 224, 51 Atl. 905. Ice is not included in the term "provisions," which may be sold without a license. The word "provisions" means food, victuals, fare, and provender. Com. v. Reid, 175 Mass. 325, 56 N. E. 617.

Victuals.—Barm or yeast is victuals within the exempting clause of an act providing that nothing therein should prohibit persons from selling "any fish, fruit or victuals," etc. Rex v. Hodgkinson, 10 B. & C. 74, 8 L. J. M. C. O. S. 47, 5 M. & R. 162, 21 E. C. L. 41.

Books.—A number of sheets well bound, for the use of farmers in keeping a record of their transactions, with printed headings, and also other printed matter, should be considered a book. Coffey v. Hendrick, 65 S. W. 127, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1328. So the sale of territory for the sale of a book is within the exception, the substance being the selling of the book. Coffey v. Hendrick, supra.

Tinware.—Washing machines manufactured wholly of tin are tinware within a statute exempting peddlers thereof from the necessity of taking out a license. Lynch v. State, 78 Miss. 347, 29 So. 76.

58. Whether amount is excessive see supra, I, B, note 16 et seq.

59. Shaffer's Petition, 7 Pa. Dist. 412, holding that the act of June 9, 1891 (Pamphl. Laws 250), providing that no charge shall be made for issuing a peddler's license to certain persons described therein, does not exempt them from the provisions of the act of April 2, 1830, requiring the giving of a bond and prescribing the manner of procuring the license.

60. Mabry v. Bullock, 7 Dana (Ky.) 337; Temple v. Sumner, 51 Miss. 13, 24 Am. Rep. 615; State v. Downing, 22 Mo. App. 504; Ford v. McArthur, 37 U. C. Q. B. 542.

But in Texas, under Gen. Laws, p. 27, which provides for the collection of an occupation tax from every person or firm who peddles out cooking stoves or ranges over the county, it has been held that where a range company pays the state tax, and the tax for the county in which it does or proposes to do business, the number of teamsters or wagoners it employs to do the peddling is discretionary with the company, and its teamsters or wagoners are not liable for the tax as individual peddlers, where they are paid wages for their services, and receive no other compensation. Ex p. Butin, 28 Tex. App. 304, 13 S. W. 10.

61. Gibson v. Kauffield, 63 Pa. St. 168. See also cases cited supra, III, B, note 60.

Penalty for transfer.—A peddler who employs a servant to drive his wagon and sell his goods does not render himself liable to the penalty of the statute which forbids the transfer of a peddler's license; but the servant renders himself liable to the penalty of the act of 1840, which forbids peddling without a license, as the license is a special personal privilege. Gibson v. Kauffield, 63 Pa. St. 168.

Letting to hire or lending license.—In England a licensed hawker who gave his license to be used by his servant employed to sell corporation except in the name of a designated agent.⁶² Where the statute authorizes the issuance of a license to "any citizen of the United States," an alien cannot obtain a license.⁶³

C. Evidence to Be Produced. As a prerequisite to the issuance of a license it is necessary, under some ordinances, to establish certain facts, as, for instance, a good moral character,⁶⁴ or disability to earn a livelihood,⁶⁵ or that the applicant is a disabled soldier who has been honorably discharged.⁶⁶

D. Duration. The duration of the license is regulated by statute.⁶⁷

E. Indorsement. In some jurisdictions to entitle one to peddle in a county other than the one where the license is issued it is necessary that the license be indorsed by the proper official of the county in which the peddling is to be done.⁶⁸

F. Recordation. The failure of the proper officer to record the license does not invalidate it.⁶⁹

G. Effect. A license does not authorize the violation of a lawful police regulation of the city.⁷⁰

IV. VALIDITY OF CONTRACTS.

A. Action to Recover For Goods Sold Without a License. If the statute requiring a license seeks only the collection of revenue, a sale without a goods on his account was not liable as for letting to hire or lending the license. Hodgson v. Flower, 2 Campb. 288.

62. Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Johnson, 84 Ga. 754, 11 S. E. 233, 8 L. R. A. 273. So held under Ky. St. § 4219, which requires proof of the good moral character of the applicant for a peddler's license, and that "the name, age, character, weight, height, color of hair and eyes of the applicant" shall be entered of record, and that no person so licensed shall sell by an agent or clerk. Standard Oil Co. v. Com., 107 Ky. 606, 55 S. W. 8, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1339.

63. State v. Montgomery, 94 Me. 192, 47 Atl. 165, 80 Am. St. Rep. 386.

64. Wolf's Application, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 231, holding that under the peddler's license acts of 1830 affirmative evidence of the honesty and moral character of the applicant must be furnished to the court before a license will be granted; and that this may be done by the affidavit of at least two citizens, setting forth the length of time they have known him and the means of their knowledge.

65. Ex p. Springer, 4 Pa. L. J. Rep. 275, holding that, under the act of May 5, 1841, section 7, requiring an applicant for a peddler's license to lay before the court satisfactory evidence of his inability to earn a livelihood by bodily labor, the reasons, as well as the opinions, of medical witnesses should be stated before the application is granted.

66. Morris' Petition, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. 193; Smith's Application, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 233; Ex p. Fisher, 3 Lanc. Bar (Pa.) 27, applying only to residents of county at time of enlistment.

The statute exempting Confederate soldiers from paying a license-tax is applicable to those soldiers who are either disabled or indigent, and it need not appear that the soldier is both disabled and indigent. Holliman v. Hawkinsville, 109 Ga. 407, 34 S. E. 214.

67. State v. Downing, 22 Mo. App. 504, holding that under a statute designating six months as the term for a peddler's license, a license issued for a shorter period is invalid. See also Buffington v. Dinkgrave, 4 La. Ann. 548, holding that a license, under Act May 3, 1847, No. 224, § 4, issued at any time during the year, expires with the current year.

68. Pritchett v. Dixon, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 529, holding that a peddler's license for the entire state confers no authority to peddle in a county other than that in which it was issued, until it is indorsed "genuine" by the clerk of the county court in such other county.

69. Foster v. Dow, 29 Me. 442.

70. Com. v. Lagorio, 141 Mass. 81, 6 N. E. 546.

So a license from the state does not authorize the peddler to violate a city ordinance relating to peddling. Com. v. Ellis, 158 Mass. 555, 33 N. E. 651.

A peddler having a license to sell foreign goods, under the act of March 4, 1824, is liable to a penalty of fifty dollars for selling any foreign goods, however small the amount, from house to house, in violation of the act of March 28, 1799, the former act only authorizing their sale in one place. Com. v. Willis, 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 398.

It seems that a hawker's license is separate and distinct from a market license, so that in England the possession of the one does not entitle the trader to sell in a market-place. Woolwich Local Bd. v. Gardiner, [1895] 2 Q. B. 497, 18 Cox C. C. 173, 59 J. P. 597, 64 L. J. M. C. 248, 73 L. T. Rep. N. S. 218, 15 Reports 590, 44 Wkly. Rep. 46 [refusing to follow Howard v. Lupton, L. R. 10 Q. B. 598, 44 L. J. M. C. 150].

A hawker's license does not give the privilege of selling goods in a borough where, by a by-law made pursuant to a charter and ancient custom, strangers are not permitted license is not so illegal as to affect the validity of the contract between the peddler and the buyer,⁷¹ unless the transaction is declared void by statute;⁷² but if the statute is based on public policy the contract is illegal.⁷³ If the statute absolutely prohibits the sale without a license the sale is void.⁷⁴ Of course the sale, to be invalid, must be made when the seller is engaged in the business of peddling.⁷⁵

B. Action to Recover Compensation For Peddling. It has been held that no action lies for services rendered in peddling goods for another without a license.⁷⁶

C. Action to Recover Goods From Bailee. One delivering goods to a third person with knowledge that they are to be sold without a license cannot recover them from a bailee with whom the third person has deposited them.⁷⁷

V. WHO MAY BE PUNISHED WHERE SALE IS BY AGENT.

The general rule is that the employer,⁷⁸ even though a corporation,⁷⁹ may be punished by fine or forfeiture, where his or its agent or employee peddles without a license, although there are cases holding that inasmuch as a license can be taken out only by the person who actually peddles he is the only one who can be punished.⁸⁰ to trade. Simson v. Moss, 2 B. & Ad. 543, 1 L. J. M. C. O. S. 120, 22 E. C. L. 229.

71. Banks v. McCosker, 82 Md. 518, 34 Atl. 539, 51 Am. St. Rep. 478; Mandlebaum v. Gregovich, 17 Nev. 87, 28 Pac. 121, 45 Am. Rep. 433.

72. Rash v. Farley, 91 Ky. 344, 15 S. W. 862, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 913, 34 Am. St. Rep. 233; Rash v. Halloway, 82 Ky. 674; Bull v. Haragan, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 349; Mabry v. Bullock, 7 Dana (Ky.) 337; Pritchett v. Dixon, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 529.

Presumption that peddler has a license.—On proof that a note was given to a peddler for goods sold, the legal presumption arises that he had a license; and hence that the contract is valid. The license need not be exhibited unless the presumption is overcome. Spadone v. Reed, 7 Bush (Ky.) 455; Brown v. Young, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 26.

A note taken by a peddler, in Kentucky, for the things sold, is void unless the words "peddler's note" are indorsed thereon, as required by Ky. St. § 4223. Bohon v. Brown, 101 Ky. 354, 41 S. W. 273, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 540, 72 Am. St. Rep. 420, 38 L. R. A. 503, 49 S. W. 450, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1496. A statute requiring every "peddler's note" to be so marked is a proper exercise of the police power, although it affects notes given for patent rights. Rumbley v. Hall, 107 Ky. 349, 54 S. W. 4, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1071; Bohon v. Brown, supra. It constitutes no defense to a note that it has not written upon it the words "peddler's note," unless it is alleged and proved that the payees of the note were itinerant persons or peddlers; it not being sufficient to allege that the note "is what is denominated under the laws of Kentucky a 'peddler's note,'" as that is a mere legal conclusion. Bohon v. Brown, supra.

73. Banks v. McCosker, 82 Md. 518, 34 Atl. 539, 51 Am. St. Rep. 478, promissory note. See also Taliaferro v. Moffert, 54 Ga. 150, druggist.

74. Best v. Bauder, 29 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 489.

Prohibiting "carrying to sell or exposing for sale."—Where the statute subjects to a penalty "every pedlar, or other person going from place to place, . . . carrying to sell, or exposing for sale, any goods, &c., without license," it is the "carrying to sell, or exposing for sale" that is prohibited. The sale is valid. Jones v. Berry, 33 N. H. 209.

Where the statute fixed a fine and authorized a forfeiture for selling without a license, the contract was held valid. Burbank v. Mc Duffee, 65 Me. 135.

Rule as to licenses in general see LICENSES.

77. Duffy v. Gorman, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 45.

78. Irwin v. Douglass, 8 Pa. Dist. 505.

A cooperative society may be convicted as a hawker since it is a person within the meaning of the statute. Co-operative Drapery, etc., Co. v. Bligh, 4 Just. Cas. 97.

Where a medical company employs an agent in a certain territory, and enters into a written contract with him for the sale of its drugs, etc., for a certain period, prescribing his duties, manner of selling and reporting, compensation, etc., the medical company is the seller of the drugs, etc., and as such is required to take out a license under the act to regulate the practice of medicine in the state of Illinois. Watkins Medical Co. v. Paul, 87 Ill. App. 278.

79. Com. v. Standard Oil Co., 60 S. W. 518, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1567.

Punishment may be inflicted not only on the corporation and the agent who actually makes the sales but also on the officers of the corporation in charge of the business. Crall v. Com., 103 Va. 855, 49 S. E. 638.

80. Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Johnson, 84 Ga. 754, 11 S. E. 233, 8 L. R. A. 273; Howard v. Reid, 51 Ga. 328 (holding that, under a statute prohibiting peddlers from selling without license, and requiring that the license shall "describe the person of the peddler," process to enforce the penalty

It has been held that one who accompanies the owner of the goods and assists him in peddling, for which he receives his expenses, may be punished.⁸¹

VI. PENALTIES⁸² AND ACTIONS THEREFOR.

A. Remedy. The remedy to recover the penalty usually is by a civil action.⁸³

B. Pleading.⁸⁴ The declaration must clearly set out the violation of law relied upon. It must expressly state that defendant is a hawker or peddler, within the statute or ordinance,⁸⁵ and must show the sale of goods.⁸⁶

C. Evidence.⁸⁷ The rules of evidence prevailing generally in civil actions apply.⁸⁸

VII. CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.⁸⁹

A. Defenses. The fact that the peddler only carries his parcels on his person is no defense to a complaint under a statute requiring the conspicuous posting of his name, residence, and number of license on his parcels or vehicle.⁹⁰

B. Indictment and Information⁹¹ — 1. FORM AND CONTENTS — a. In General. The indictment must allege the facts which constitute the offense.⁹² of the statute must issue against the person actually peddling without license, and not against someone for whom he is acting; Burbank v. McDuffee, 65 Me. 135.

A corporation cannot be punished as a peddler. Bohannon v. Wrought-Iron Range Co., 111 Ga. 360, 36 S. E. 907; Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Johnson, 84 Ga. 754, 11 S. E. 233, 8 L. R. A. 273.

83. Webster v. People, 14 Ill. 365; Com. v. Winslow, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 667; Plymouth v. Williams, 8 Kulp (Pa.) 167, which holds that a proceeding to recover the penalty for the violation of an ordinance requiring peddlers to take out a license is a civil action, within the jurisdiction of a burgess.

Action in name of county or of informer.— Under the act of 1835, "regulating the mode of granting license to clock peddlers," an action to recover a penalty cannot be commenced in the name of the people, but must be brought in the name of the county or of the informer. Higby v. People, 5 Ill. 165.

Indictment.— The act of March 9, 1889, amending the act of April 16, 1840, which provided a penalty for hawking or peddling, continues in force the remedy by debt for the recovery of the penalty. Therefore an indictment will not lie. Com. v. Stiles, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 665.

87. Evidence generally see EVIDENCE, 16 Cyc. 821.

88. Webster v. People, 14 Ill. 365.

Proof beyond a reasonable doubt is not necessary; and proof convincing the judgment, although a doubt may still remain, is sufficient to authorize a verdict of guilty. Webster v. People, 14 Ill. 365.

To show the character of defendant's business, evidence is admissible that on former occasions within a short time before defendant left home with said goods, he had repeatedly carried about and sold, as a peddler, etc., certain specified articles of foreign goods. Merriam v. Langdon, 10 Conn. 460.

It is necessary to prove, not only a sale, but such a sale as the law forbids, by one obviously a peddler in such traffic. Proof of only two sales at one time is insufficient. Bacon v. Wood, 3 Ill. 265.

Evidence admissible under the pleadings.— Under an information which alleged that defendant offered his goods for sale to the public generally, and to certain individuals named, the complainant may under such averment prove distinct offers to sell to each of these persons severally. Merriam v. Langdon, 10 Conn. 460.

92. Sterne v. State, 20 Ala. 43 (which holds, however, that in an indictment under the act of March 6, 1848, charging defendant with being "engaged in the business of hawking and peddling," it is unnecessary to allege the facts which constitute hawking and peddling, since the gist of the offense, under that statute, is the being engaged in the business of hawking, etc.); Reg. v. Roche, 32 Ont. 20.

Forms of indictment see Hays v. Com., 107 Ky. 655, 55 S. W. 425, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1418; Standard Oil Co. v. Com., 80 S. W. 1150, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 142.

When sufficiently specific.— A warrant charging defendant with "hawking and peddling without license, as is required by law," is sufficiently specific. State v. Sprinkle, 7 Humphr. (Tenn.) 36. An indictment for peddling without license, which

b. Description of Defendant. The indictment must allege that defendant was a peddler at the time the sale or sales were made,⁹⁵ and if the statute or ordinance classifies peddlers and prescribes a different penalty for each class, it must designate the class to which defendant belongs.⁹⁴ It must also allege that the sale was made by him in the capacity or character of a peddler.⁹⁵

c. Fact of Sale or Sales. The indictment must allege that a sale was made,⁹⁶ but need not state the price paid.⁹⁷ There is a conflict in the opinions as to whether it must name the person or persons making the purchase or purchases.⁹⁸ The kind of merchandise sold must be specifically stated where the prosecution is based on a statute relating only to particular merchandise.⁹⁹

d. Negating Exceptions. Unless they form an essential part of the description of the offense,¹ exceptions and provisions contained in the statute or ordinance need not be negated.²

2. VARIANCE. An indictment in the ordinary or common-law form for hawking and peddling without a license cannot be sustained by proof of acts which would not, independent of statutory definition, constitute him a hawker and peddler.³

C. Evidence. The rules of evidence prevailing generally in criminal prosecutions are applicable.⁴

charges that accused "did unlawfully, not having a license so to do, and being then and there an itinerant person, vend, sell, and offer to sell, goods, wares, and merchandise, to wit, oil," to a person named, is good, it not being necessary to state any other facts showing that defendant was engaged in the business of a peddler, or that he made the particular sale by peddling, or to state that he delivered the oil sold. Hays v. Com., 107 Ky. 655, 55 S. W. 425, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1418.

Conclusions of law.—A warrant for selling clocks in violation of law, which stated that defendant had no "legal license," stated a mere conclusion of law, and presented no case authorizing the court to hold that accused was peddling his goods in violation of the law. Com. v. Lewis, 2 Ky. L. Rep. 216.

93. Hall v. State, 39 Fla. 637, 23 So. 119 (holding that where defendant is one not embraced within the general words "hawkers and peddlers," but is within the statutory definition, the indictment must follow the language of the definition); Com. v. Dudley, 3 Mete. (Ky.) 221 (holding that an indictment charging that defendant did "peddle and sell" in the county of Mason, buggies, etc., without license, is insufficient for vagueness).

The words "being then and there an itinerant vendor" sufficiently charge that defendant was an itinerant vendor. State v. Foster, 21 R. I. 251, 43 Atl. 66.

94. Hirschfelder v. State, 18 Ala. 112.

95. Standard Oil Co. v. Com., 80 S. W. 1150, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 142; Com. v. Bruckheimer, 14 Gray (Mass.) 29, holding that an indictment which alleges that defendant at a certain time and place was a hawker, peddler, and petty chapman, and did then and there go from place to place exposing goods to sale, and did then and there sell certain goods, is insufficient.

1. State v. Montgomery, 92 Me. 433, 43 Atl. 13 (holding that a complaint for peddling pictures and picture frames without a license, under Laws (1889), c. 298, sufficiently negatives the exceptions in the enacting clause of the statute by the use of the general expression, "other than such as he is by the statutes allowed to grow for sale and expose for sale without a license"); *Reg. v. fendant to prove his license. State v. Parsons, 124 Mo. 436, 27 S. W. 1102, 46 Am. St. Rep. 457. So where a person found peddling admits that he has no license, the burden is on him to prove that he comes within the exemption to the general prohibition against peddling without a license, in favor of goods which are of the peddler's own manufacture, or are the product or manufacture of the state. Com. v. Brinton, 132 Pa. St. 69, 18 Atl. 1092. But it has been held that in a prosecution for peddling goods, except of the produce or manufacture of the United States, it is incumbent on the state to prove affirmatively that the goods were of foreign produce or manufacture. *Com. v. Evidence to show itinerant nature of business.—On a prosecution for carrying on, without a license, the business of a transient or itinerant dealer of goods, evidence of sales made in other counties than that named in the indictment is admissible to show the itinerant nature of the business. *Shiff v. I. CREATION AND ORGANIZATION OF SANITARY AUTHORITIES.

A. By Federal Government. In 1879 a national board of health was established by act of congress.¹ But this provision was subsequently repealed by an act granting additional quarantine powers to and imposing additional duties upon the marine hospital service.² This latter act expressly recognizes the validity of state laws and requires the supervising surgeon-general of the marine hospital service to cooperate with and aid state and municipal boards of health in the execution and enforcement of their rules and regulations.³

B. By State or Local Government—1. IN GENERAL. Various statutory and constitutional provisions exist in the different states for the establishment of boards of health or the appointment of health officers, and this both for the state at large⁴ and for counties or other local subdivisions of the state.⁵ The establishment of a state board of health and conferring jurisdiction thereon in matters relating to the public health will not have the effect of depriving local boards of jurisdiction previously vested in them in the absence of legislative enactment clearly to that effect.⁶

2. MUNICIPALITIES. Municipal corporations are generally empowered either expressly or impliedly to adopt measures of police for the preservation of the public health,⁷ and the establishment of state or local boards of health is not to be regarded as detracting from the general powers of municipal corporations in this respect unless such legislative intent clearly appears.⁸ As an incident to this power a municipal corporation has been held authorized to pass ordinances creating a board of health.⁹ Indeed in the absence of a board of health the members of the city council have sometimes been held under statute to constitute the board of health.¹⁰ In the absence of statutory authority a city council cannot delegate to the mayor the power to appoint a board of health.¹¹

3. APPOINTMENT TO MEMBERSHIP IN LOCAL BOARD BY STATE AUTHORITIES. It has been held that the functions of a local board of health are not so strictly local or municipal as to come within the provisions of the constitution of Michigan forbidding the power of appointment or election to municipal offices to be taken from the municipality and vested in the state authorities.¹² But under constitutional provision in New York securing to the respective localities the power of Statutes expressly authorizing cities to appoint boards of health see Bell County v. Blair, 50 S. W. 1104, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 121; People v. Daley, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 461.

Mandamus to compel appointment.—Under statute in New York making it the duty of trustees of a village to appoint a board of health for the village, it has been held that in case of non-compliance with this statutory duty any citizen of the village may apply to the court for a mandamus to compel such compliance. People v. Daley, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 461.

New London, 74 Conn. 695, 51 Atl. 1082, holding under statute that a city could not be said to have a legally appointed health officer, where the powers and duties of such officer were vested in the common council and were discharged by a committee of such body aided by a regularly detailed policeman.

election or appointment of city, town, and village officers, the power to appoint or to fill vacancies, in default of action on the part of the local authorities, cannot be left to a county judge, to the state commissioner of health, or to a board appointed by the governor.¹³

4. APPOINTMENT OF SUBORDINATE OFFICERS OR AGENTS. The power of boards of health to appoint subordinate officers, such as sanitary inspectors, is not inherent.¹⁴ Such power, however, need not be expressly conferred by statute but may arise by implication, as for instance, from a provision granting to the board the power to make by-laws for the regulation of the action of the board, its officers and agents, in the discharge of their duties.¹⁵

5. EFFECT OF IRREGULARITIES IN ORGANIZATION OR APPOINTMENT. A mere irregularity in the appointment of health officers, or in the passage of an ordinance establishing a board of health, is no defense to proceedings brought to recover penalties for violation of health regulations or the expense of removing nuisances, the acts of the sanitary authorities being regarded as acts of de facto officers.¹⁶

II. QUALIFICATIONS OF HEALTH OFFICERS.

A. Non-Residents. Health officers or members of a board of health are sometimes required by statute to be residents of the state,¹⁷ and indeed of the town or district in which they are to serve.¹⁸

B. Physicians. Statutes sometimes require that the board of health shall be composed in part of physicians.¹⁹

C. Women. Under a statute providing that the governor, with the advice and consent of the council, shall appoint nine persons who shall constitute a state board of health, etc., it has been held to be competent to appoint a woman as a member of such board,²⁰ and the constitutionality of such legislation has been upheld.²¹

III. TERM OF OFFICE.

The tenure of office of health officers is frequently prescribed by statute or the state constitution.²² In the absence of statutory or constitutional provision mak-

Chicago*, 78 Ill. 405, where it is said: "If the legislature possesses power to provide that some judicial officer of the state may appoint a board of health of a city and that board can be empowered to make ordinances, the people will be governed by ordinances adopted by a body they had no voice in electing, this is repugnant to our theory of government; but it is not necessary to decide this question here."

19. State v. Kohnke, 106 La. 420, 31 So. 45, holding that a statute providing that three out of five members of the board of health "shall, if practicable, be duly registered and licensed physicians" was not intended to prohibit the organization of a board of health with more than three physicians as members.

In Massachusetts it is held that a city physician appointed pursuant to St. (1877) c. 133, and St. (1878) c. 21, is by virtue of his office a member of a board of health. Com. v. Swasey, 133 Mass. 538. But it is held that St. (1878) c. 21, is confined to cities which have accepted St. (1877) c. 133, or the corresponding provisions of the public statutes. Atty.-Gen. v. McCabe, 172 Mass. 417, 52 N. E. 717.

20. Opinion of Justices, 136 Mass. 578, 581, where it is said: "The duties of the board are mostly administrative, and are such as may well be performed by women. There is no incompatibility between the nature and character of the duties and their due performance by women."

21. Opinion of Justices, 136 Mass. 578.

In California under a constitutional provision that all public officers whose terms are not fixed shall hold at the pleasure of the ap-

ing a health officer removable for cause only or fixing the term of his office, such officer holds at the pleasure of the appointing authority.²³

IV. COMPENSATION OF OFFICERS.

A. In General. Members of a board of health, and other persons sustaining an official relation to the health department of the general or local government, are entitled to compensation for their public services only in so far as provision is made therefor by law; in the absence of such provision their services are deemed to be rendered gratuitously.²⁴

B. Amount of Compensation. The amount of compensation to which a member of a board of health or other officer employed by or connected with the health department is entitled is sometimes fixed by express statute,²⁵ and sometimes determined through the instrumentality of officers or official boards designated by law for this purpose.²⁶ A statute fixing the annual salary of a member of a board of health without limitation as to time may be abrogated by subsequent enactments appropriating a less amount for the services of such officer and clearly evincing the intention not to create any liability for such purpose beyond the amount appropriated.²⁷ pointing authority, a health inspector whose term is not fixed by the constitution or by statute cannot be made removable for cause only. Patton v. San Francisco Bd. of Health, 127 Cal. 388, 59 Pac. 702, 78 Am. St. Rep. 66. So it has been held that where the legislature has prescribed an unconstitutional term of service for a member of the board of health or has otherwise failed to fix a term, such officer by express constitutional provision holds during the pleasure of the authority making the appointment. People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105, 21 Pac. 423.

Review of action of board in removing officer.—Where a subordinate officer, as for instance a registrar of vital statistics, is removable by the board of health for cause, it has been held that the proceedings for removal may be reviewed on certiorari and the action of the board reversed if there is no evidence to support it. People v. Long Island City Bd. of Health, 76 Hun (N. Y.) 5, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 660.

Preferential character of warrants issued to members of board of health.—La. Const. art. 178, directing that the general assembly shall provide for the establishment and maintenance of a board of health does not make it the imperative duty of the legislature to provide for such a board by means of appropriations from the state treasury, since the act is merely permissive and not mandatory, and hence does not give to warrants issued to the board of health in pursuance of statute a legal preference over other appropriations or warrants, although such preference might result from mandatory constitutional provisions regarding the support of the board or of its work. State v. Burke, 37 La. Ann. 196.

V. POWERS AND DUTIES OF SANITARY AUTHORITIES.

A. In General. The powers of boards of health or other sanitary authorities are generally regulated and prescribed by the legislature either by direct statute or indirectly through municipal ordinance.²⁸ While boards of health are frequently given authority over things which are not injurious to the public health, but merely offensive to the senses, or injurious to property,²⁹ yet in the absence of such statutory extension of their powers they cannot take cognizance of matters not affecting the public health.³⁰

B. Rules and Regulations. The rule is generally recognized that within certain limits boards of health, both state and local, may be invested by the legislature with the power of making rules and regulations for the protection of the public health,³¹ and when rules and regulations are duly adopted by virtue of legislative authority they have the force and effect of law within the districts over which the jurisdiction of the board extends.³² But the extent to which this

82], holding that while the act of 1879 establishing the national board of health may be said to have created the office of that board for a fixed salary and without express limitation as to time, there was no implied contract that a member of the board should be compensated otherwise than out of the moneys specially appropriated to meet the expenses incurred by the board in the performance of the duties imposed upon it where a contrary purpose on the part of congress was evinced by the act of 1879 itself, and subsequent legislation enacted before plaintiff became a member of the board.

A general power to preserve the public health and to make regulations for that purpose authorizes the health authorities to require burial permits (Graves v. Bloomington, 17 Ill. App. 476), or licenses for cleaning cess-pools (Boehm v. Baltimore, 61 Md. 259; Meadville v. Hummel, 3 Pa. Dist. 780, 15 Pa. Co. Ct. 298), or a license-fee for maintaining barber shops (La Porta v. Hoboken Bd. of Health, 71 N. J. L. 88, 58 Atl. 115), or to prohibit the cooking of garbage in open places (Newton v. Lyons, 11 N. Y. App. Div. 105, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 241); to make provision for the burying or removal of dead animals (In re Hempstead, 36 N. Y. App. Div. 321, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 345; Morgan v. Cincinnati, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 280, 12 Cinc. L. Bul. 41); or to regulate the deposit of decayed animal matter (Rochester v. Collins, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 559). On the other hand general powers to preserve the public health have been construed not to authorize a board of health to require a permit or license for the collection of garbage (Philadelphia v. Lyster, 3 Pa. Super. Ct. 475); or to demand the construction of water-closets (Philadelphia v. Provident L., etc., Co., 132 Pa. St. 224, 18 Atl. 1114).

Power to regulate interments includes the power to control the removal of dead bodies from one place to another. Com. v. Goodrich, 13 Allen (Mass.) 546.

power may be delegated is a subject of great difficulty,³³ and the power attempted to be conferred is sometimes held illegal on constitutional grounds.³⁴ It has been held that under a power to establish a board of health and define its powers and duties a common council may not confer upon the board powers of police regulation which it should exercise itself, since otherwise there would be two legislative bodies within the city with concurrent jurisdiction over this branch of municipal affairs.³⁵ On the other hand the delegation of the power to make necessary rules and regulations by a municipal council to a board of health has been recognized as valid.³⁶ Boards of health cannot, by the operation of their rules and regulations, enlarge or vary the powers conferred upon them by the legislature, and any rule or regulation which is inconsistent with the statute creating the board and defining its powers or which is antagonistic to the general law of the state is invalid.³⁷ So the power to make rules and regulations must be exercised reasonably,³⁸ and without discrimination.³⁹ Before an ordinance or regulation of a board of health can be said to be unreasonable, however, it should clearly so appear.⁴⁰ The publication of a rule or regulation is sometimes by statute made a prerequisite to liability to punishment for its violation.⁴¹

C. Contracts—1. IN GENERAL. Boards of health, being as a rule administrative bodies without corporate capacity and without taxing power, it follows that they cannot take measures for the promotion of the public health which involve the acquisition of valuable property, the undertaking of public works, the letting of large contracts, or the incurring otherwise of heavy expenses unless the power to do so is clearly conferred by law.⁴² Where, however, the sanitary authorities are expressly empowered to take certain measures which involve the employment of the services of others, the power to make reasonable contracts for that purpose is clearly implied.⁴³ So the rule has been laid down that the discovery of a contagious disease like smallpox in the community creates an immediate necessity for activity on the part of the officers charged with the duty of preventing its spread and creates a liability on the part of the general or local government to pay any necessary expenses incurred.⁴⁴ Thus under the general power to preserve the public health and to provide against the spread of infectious or contagious diseases it has been held that a board of health may be justified in renting⁴⁵ or even purchasing a pest-house or hospital.⁴⁶

2. MEDICAL SUPPLIES AND SERVICES — a. In General. The most usual contracts are those which are made for the furnishing of medical supplies, nurses, and medical treatment, and it is a general rule under the various statutes that in the case of persons quarantined the sanitary authorities may, on the public account, make such contracts of this character as are necessary to protect the public from the spread of disease.⁴⁷ Where the statute makes the furnishing of medical assistance conditioned upon the previous declaration of quarantine, there is no authority to incur expense for such service without such declaration.⁴⁸

b. Implied Contracts. Where the employment of medical aid is shown, a specific sum need not be agreed upon in advance, but a reasonable sum may be recovered after the services are rendered.⁴⁹ But there is no liability upon implied contract merely because the services were rendered, since the benefits to the public are not such that they can be rejected or relinquished; and hence their retention is not against good conscience.⁵⁰

c. Financial Ability of Patient. The liability of the public for medical treatment contracted for by the health authorities is by statute frequently made dependent upon the inability of the patient to pay.⁵¹

3. SUPPORT OF PERSONS QUARANTINED. By statute in many jurisdictions the health officers may furnish support on the public account to persons isolated through quarantine.⁵² On the other hand it is held that in the absence of statute the general or local government is not liable for support or necessities furnished to persons not paupers while quarantined in their residences,⁵³ although a different rule has been applied in the case of persons confined in a pest-house.⁵⁴

6. LIABILITY OF PATIENT. Statutes giving to boards of health or similar officials the power to provide for the care of persons afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases frequently make provision for charging the patients themselves with the expense thereby incurred, provided they are able to pay.⁶⁰ Statutes of this character have in some instances, however, been construed as imposing a primary liability on the public for such expenditures with the right to reimbursement by the patients.⁶¹ A distinction has been made under statute in some jurisdictions between expenses incurred for the purpose of preventing the spread of disease and expenses in caring for the individual sick, the patient not being chargeable with the former.⁶² In the absence of statute it has been held that the expense of caring for a person involuntarily confined in a pest-house or hospital, under regulations of the health officers which barred him from providing assistance for himself, cannot be made chargeable against him.⁶³

7. LIABILITY OF MUNICIPALITIES. Various statutory provisions exist making the expenses of municipal boards of health a charge against the municipality,⁶⁴ and it has been held that mandamus will lie against the municipal authorities to compel them to allow and audit a charge incurred by the board of health,⁶⁵

Prior appropriation.—It has been held that a board of health cannot make a debt or contract binding on the city of Philadelphia unless an appropriation to pay the same has been previously made by the city council. Parker v. Philadelphia, 92 Pa. St. 401; Bladen v. Philadelphia, 60 Pa. St. 464. Compare Kent v. North Tarrytown, 50 N. Y. App. Div. 502, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 178. New Orleans*, 37 La. Ann. 894. See also Coleman v. Cadillac, 49 Mich. 322, 13 N. unless a discretion in making such allowance is vested in the municipal authorities.⁶⁶

8. COUNTY LIABILITY ON CONTRACT BY TOWN OR CITY BOARDS — a. In General. By statute in several states the expense of measures taken by township or municipal boards to combat contagious or infectious diseases is laid upon the county.⁶⁷

b. Constitutionality of Statutes Creating Liability. The constitutionality of this legislation has been sustained,⁶⁸ although it cannot be given retroactive operation as against the vested rights of individual creditors.⁶⁹

c. Character and Extent of Liability. The liability of the county is strictly confined to the cases included in the statutory provisions,⁷⁰ and as a general rule the amount actually expended is the measure of recovery.⁷¹ It has been held not to be necessary, however, in order to charge the county, that the township or municipality shall have paid the expenses; it is sufficient that the obligation has been incurred.⁷² So it is held that, although the action of the municipal board be required in order to bind the county, the requirement may be held satisfied by the subsequent ratification on the part of the board of the previous unauthorized act of its chairman.⁷³ In some jurisdictions the liability of the county is conditioned upon the inability of the patient, or of those liable for his support, to pay;⁷⁴ and such inability must be alleged in the claim against the county.⁷⁵

d. Conclusiveness of Action of Board. The determination of the town-

Where a county has provided medical care for paupers, employment by the township trustees will not give a physician a claim against the county (Gawley v. Jones County, 60 Iowa 159, 14 N. W. 236; Mansfield v. Sac County, 59 Iowa 694, 13 N. 9. RATIFICATION OF CONTRACTS OF SUBORDINATE OFFICERS. A board of health may ratify contracts entered into by one of its officers or members provided it could have authorized the making of the contracts in the first instance.⁸⁰ Accordingly it has been held that if a physician is employed by one of the members of a board of health, without the authority of the board, and subsequently his bill is presented to and allowed by the board at a regular meeting, this constitutes a ratification which validates the original irregular and unauthorized employment.⁸¹

D. Powers in Dealing With Contagious Diseases — 1. VACCINATION — a.
In General. The legislature may by express provision require or delegate to local or administrative authorities the power to require the vaccination of adult persons, in places where smallpox exists or its outbreak is apprehended.⁸² But even without express provision to that effect it will be a good defense to the requirement of vaccination that it would be unsafe to submit to it, by reason of the special condition of the health of the individual.⁸³

b. School Children. The legislature may also by express provision require or empower a local or administrative authority to require vaccination of children as a condition of their being admitted to the public schools, although smallpox be not prevalent or its outbreak not apprehended.⁸⁴ Even without a specific delegation of power local or administrative authorities having control of the schools or general care of the public health are justified by the existence of an emergency in making vaccination a condition for admission to the public schools.⁸⁵ But a

In Iowa it has been held that a board of health cannot delegate to a committee the power to employ a physician, none of whom are members of the board, and that such employment cannot be ratified by the separate acts and declarations of members of the board, but that a ratification to be valid must be made by the board acting as a unit before the service is performed. *Young v. Compulsory education law inapplicable.—A parent whose child is refused admission for non-vaccination cannot be held liable for mere general power vested in administrative authorities to make such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to the preservation of the public health, or to take such measures as in their judgment may be necessary for the protection of the people from dangerous diseases, does not, in the absence of the existence or present menace of such disease, justify a regulation forbidding children to be enrolled as pupils in the public schools without a certificate of vaccination, for in the absence of danger the establishment of compulsory vaccination is not an administrative but a legislative measure, and as such ought to proceed from or be directly authorized by the legislature.⁸⁶

2. QUARANTINE AND DISINFECTION — a. Quarantine. The power of the legislature to enact quarantine laws has been recognized in many decisions,⁸⁷ and the duty of executing these laws is frequently imposed upon boards of health or some other authorities acting in the same capacity.⁸⁸ But a municipal corporation has been held to have no power to establish quarantine unless such power is expressly granted or is implied as an incident to a power granted or is essential to the declared objects and purposes of the corporation.⁸⁹ The power to remove and quarantine persons who have been infected with communicable disease or exposed to contagion need not, however, be conferred on sanitary authorities in express terms; but may be implied from the general power to preserve the public health, or to guard against the introduction or spread of contagious diseases.⁹⁰ The non-compliance with express statutory conditions will render the establishment of quarantine unlawful, and constitute a good defense to a prosecution for its violation.⁹¹ Provision is sometimes made by statute for the issuance of a warrant authorizing the removal of a patient to the place of quarantine.⁹² In Maine, however, it is held that in order to secure the removal of the person who is to be quarantined, reasonable force may be used, and that while a warrant issued by a judicial officer may be employed it is not essential to authorize the seizure.⁹³ Statutes also provide that where patients cannot be removed they may be quarantined in the house in which they are, and that such house may be subjected to quarantine regulations, extending even to persons in the house who have not been attacked by the disease.⁹⁴ Statutes of this character have been held not to authorize the taking possession by the board of health, acting without a warrant, of premises to the exclusion of the owner thereof, or of the person entitled to lawful possession, even where one is too sick to be removed, but to authorize such premises and the use thereof to be subjected to regulations of a very stringent character.⁹⁵

Power of state and local boards.—Quarantine powers, although affecting the state at large, may, it has been held, be committed to a local and locally appointed board.

People v. Williamson, 135 Cal. 415, 67 Pac. 504. In People v. Roff, 3 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 216, it is held that a local authority may not establish a quarantine in such a way as to prevent state officers from leaving a quarantine station established by the state. In Young v. Flower, 3 Misc. (N. Y.) 34, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 332, it is held that the officer of the port of New York, being a state officer, may select a site for a quarantine station in another county against the protest of the local authorities.

b. Disinfection of Property. Under powers similar to those which authorize the establishment of quarantine, sanitary authorities may require the disinfection not only of property that has actually been exposed to contagion, but of all articles liable to convey infection, especially where it is impossible to ascertain their history or the place from which they originally came.⁹⁶ But the general power to abate nuisances does not in the absence of contagious disease or of great emergency justify the summary and forcible vacation of a house and the ejection of its tenants for the purpose of having it cleaned and repaired.⁹⁷ It is no defense to an order for disinfection that the owner has already caused the property to be disinfected on his own account, where the authorities regard such previous disinfection as inadequate.⁹⁸ The expense of disinfection may be imposed upon the owner of the property disinfected.⁹⁹

3. IMPRESSMENT — a. In General. Statutes have been enacted in several jurisdictions authorizing under prescribed conditions the impressment of persons or property for the care and accommodation of the sick and the protection of the community.¹ But it has been held that the right to impress is not to be implied and can only be exercised when expressly granted.² Thus it is not to be implied from the authority to establish quarantines.³ Moreover the statutes granting such power are to be strictly construed,⁴ and the statutory prerequisites for the exercise of the power must be complied with, since otherwise there is no impressment, but merely a wrongful act of individual officers for which a municipal corporation is not liable.⁵ Under this rule it has been held to be a prerequisite to a legal impressment that it should take place only by virtue of a warrant regularly issued and served by executive officers.⁶

b. Compensation For Property or Services Impressed. Under the statutes of some jurisdictions provision is made for a just compensation for property or personal services impressed or for infected property destroyed.⁷

4. NOTICE TO HEALTH AUTHORITIES. The duty to notify sanitary authorities of deaths, births, or of contagious diseases is not uncommonly imposed by law upon physicians, in whose practice, or upon householders, in whose families, they occur, and a failure to perform this duty may under such legislation subject the delinquent to liability in a criminal or penal action.⁸ The constitutionality of such legislation has been upheld.⁹ In reporting cases, the physician performs a public duty, and has been held not to be liable to the patient for damages resulting from lack of skill in making an erroneous diagnosis.¹⁰

E. Powers in Dealing With Nuisances and Offensive Conditions¹¹ —

1. LICENSES GRANTED BY SANITARY AUTHORITIES. The power to make orders for the suppression of offensive employments, occupations, or establishments has been held in Massachusetts to authorize a regulation by which exceptions from a general prohibition are sanctioned under a special permit from the sanitary authorities.¹² On the other hand it has been held in New York that the statutory authority to make general regulations for the preservation of the public health does not invest boards of health with the licensing power to dispense with their general regulations in individual cases.¹³ There is considerable conflict among the

A christian scientist is held not to be a physician within the meaning of an ordinance making it the duty of physicians to report cases of contagious or infectious diseases. Kansas City v. Baird, 92 Mo. App. 204.

Character of disease.—It has been held that where the law requires a physician to

But in People v. Shurly, 131 Mich. 177, 91 N. W. 130, it was held that the question whether consumption is to be classed with smallpox, scarlet fever, etc., should not have been submitted to the jury, since if the disease is contagious and dangerous to the public health, the law classifies it.

Effect of subsequent legislative recognition of regulation.—But a regulation of the board of health of New York city, requiring decisions regarding the validity of licenses or permits generally, left to the unregulated discretion of administrative officers or even of municipal governing bodies.¹⁴ The rule has been announced that the legislature may, through the instrumentality of a board of health, legalize so far as the public is concerned a work or business which by the common law would otherwise be a nuisance.¹⁵ But while the legislature may thus authorize a public nuisance, yet its intention to do so will not be lightly presumed, and a license to conduct a particular business will be construed as a license to conduct it with the greatest possible care; the fact of a license being granted by a board of health does not therefore necessarily prevent the indictment of the licensee if he creates and maintains a public nuisance.¹⁶ On the other hand it has been held that in an action by a private individual a nuisance cannot be justified on the ground that it was created by the order of the board of health where such order was not authorized by statute,¹⁷ and in such a suit evidence of the action of a board of health is therefore irrelevant.¹⁸ Where the requirement of a license may be validly imposed, the fact that it is illegally refused or coupled with unlawful or onerous conditions does not constitute a defense for acting without a license.¹⁹

2. ORDERS OR RESOLUTIONS DECLARING NUISANCES — a. In General. Boards of health are frequently invested with authority by the legislature, either by direct statute or indirectly through municipal ordinance, to make not only general regulations but also special orders for the suppression of nuisances or conditions interfering with the public health,²⁰ and the authority of the legislature to confer powers of this character is sustained by the courts.²¹ The power of boards of health to deal with special cases of nuisances per se has been held not to be dependent upon the prior passage by them of a code of ordinances, although invested with the authority to do so.²² But while a board of health may be a permit as a prerequisite to selling milk, has been held to be valid on the ground that it was contained in the sanitary code which was recognized by the legislature as binding and in force in New York city. People v. Vandecarr, 175 N. Y. 440, 67 N. E. 913 [affirming 81 N. Y. App. Div. 128, 80 N. Y. Suppl. 1108]. See also People v. Davis, 78 N. Y. App. Div. 570, 79 N. Y. Suppl. 747.

Enjoining licensed erection.—It has been held that when the license for the erection of a stable has been granted by a board of health after a hearing, a court of equity will be justified in refusing an injunction asked for upon the ground of the probable injurious effects that might result from the use of the structure. White v. Kenney, 157 Mass. 12, 31 N. E. 654.

Taking away lateral support.—In McKenna v. Eaton, 182 Mass. 346, 65 N. E. 382, 94 Am. St. Rep. 661, it was held that an order by the board of health to take down a house afforded a sufficient defense in an action for taking away a right of lateral support; that since there was no obligation to keep the house in repair, defendant was not liable for the dilapidation of which the order was a necessary consequence.

22. State v. Henzler, (N. J. Ch. 1898) 41 Atl. 228, holding under statute that for the extirpation of nuisances per se the board of health can act as protectors of the public health without passing a code of ordinances.

invested with quasi-judicial powers in the determination of the question of the existence of a nuisance, and its acts declaring nuisances may be presumptively valid until questioned or assailed,²³ it is held in many jurisdictions that a board of health cannot determine conclusively that a nuisance exists; that a business or other thing is a nuisance unless it is such in fact,²⁴ and this, although the decision is made after notice and hearing.²⁵ Upon the same principle the measure ordered must keep within the limits of what is necessary to remove the offensive condition, and particular improvements may not be ordered under a power to remove the cause of a nuisance, simply because they would tend to prevent the recurrence of offensive conditions.²⁶ Unless the statute expressly empowers the board to specify the kind of improvement which it deems necessary to relieve the offensive condition,²⁷ the choice of measures by which to accomplish the object must be left to the owner.²⁸ Even where there is a power to regulate, for example, the drainage of stables, a provision giving the owner the right to submit to the board plans for its approval negatives the idea that the board may deprive him of that privilege by prescribing a definite plan, when another method would be equally effectual.²⁹ When the abatement of the nuisance is ordered in general terms, the additional direction of some specific measure which is not absolutely necessary for the accomplishment of the object may be regarded as surplusage so as not to affect the valid part of the order.³⁰ discharging sewage in such a manner as to create a nuisance in another municipality have been sustained at the instance of the health authorities of the latter municipality.³²

c. Notice and Hearing. The validity of an order declaring the existence of a nuisance and directing its removal by the person responsible therefor is frequently made dependent upon a prior notice and hearing, the statutory requirement being sometimes express³³ and sometimes implied.³⁴ On the ground, however, that in matters of health and safety the delay involved in the giving of the notice and hearing would often be fatal to the object sought to be accomplished, a statute may constitutionally authorize peremptory orders directing repairs, alterations, or the abatement of a nuisance without making provision for previous notice.³⁵ But the order is not to be taken as finally determining the existence of a nuisance, and as precluding a person affected thereby from any further remedy or redress, where he has had no previous notice and opportunity to be heard,³⁶ and he is entitled to a hearing in subsequent legal proceedings, whether brought by the reasonable rules for the decent use of the markets merely because thereby a nuisance may be abated.

Slaughter-house licensed by city.—In Cambridge v. Trelogan, 181 Mass. 565, 64 N. E. 204, it was held that a board of health may forbid the carrying on of a slaughter-house as dangerous to health, although a license therefor has been granted by the municipal authorities.

General resolution.—In Belcher v. Farrer, 8 Allen (Mass.) 325, it was intimated that even a general resolution adopted by board of health in accordance with statute, which might operate to render valueless a large property by forbidding the prosecution of the business for which it was erected, would be sanitary authorities to enforce their own action or to recover expenses incurred, or brought by a party affected by the order to restrain enforcement or to hold the health authorities liable in damages.³⁷ Where an opportunity of a hearing is given before the order is finally acted on, previous notice is not required because the order is itself in the nature of a notice or order to show cause,³⁸ and this, although the order may be obligatory pending the final decision.³⁹ Accordingly it has been held that the rights of any person to be affected by an order are reasonably secured without prior notice by requiring the order to be served upon him or the person in charge of his business, and by allowing him an appeal to a jury.⁴⁰

d. Enforcement of Orders or Resolutions—(1) JUDICIAL ENFORCEMENT—

(A) *Penalties*⁴¹ and Fines.⁴² Power to maintain actions for the recovery of penalties for the violating of their general resolutions or special orders is frequently conferred by statute on the health authorities, the penalty being sometimes fixed by the health authorities and sometimes by statute.⁴³ But the power to enforce either general regulations or special orders by the imposition of fines or penalties must be expressly conferred in order to be exercised, since a penalty cannot be raised by implication but must be expressly created and imposed.⁴⁴ And where invalid as in violation of one of the fundamental principles of justice, but for a provision of the statute which gave to the party a right of appeal from the order enforcing the regulation, and upon such appeal to have the whole matter involved in the issue tried by jury. Penalty prescribed by municipal authorities.—It has been held that if the board of health is a branch of the municipal government, the governing body of the municipality has also power to enforce the regulations of the board by prescribing penalties for their violation. State v. Holecomb, 68 Iowa 107, 26 N. W. 33, 56 Am. Rep. 853. But where a board of health has enacted an ordinance in relation to open plumbing and for a violation of the ordinance the owner is by statute made subject to a penalty on the prosecution of the board of health, it is held that a city council in whom is vested the control of the water-supply of the municipality has no authority to cut off the water-supply from private premises solely because of the owner's failure to comply with the ordinance of the board of health, since such action would subject the owner to an additional penalty. *Johnston v. the right to maintain a penal action is conferred the general rule that the declaration in an action for a statutory penalty must present a case strictly within the statute, directly averring every essential fact, is applicable.⁴⁵

(B) *Injunctions.*⁴⁶ By statute in several jurisdictions the health authorities are either expressly or impliedly authorized to maintain a suit in equity to enjoin or suppress nuisances, and to restrain violations of sanitary laws and regulations.⁴⁷ Indeed this has been held to be the proper remedy where there is doubt as to the existence of a nuisance.⁴⁸ But an injunction will not be granted to enforce an ordinance or regulation where the thing forbidden is not a nuisance in fact.⁴⁹

(II) ABATEMENT. The power to abate, suppress, and remove nuisances is not uncommonly found in acts creating boards of health and defining their powers,⁵⁰ provision sometimes being made for abatement by the board of health upon the refusal of the person maintaining the nuisance to remove it in obedience to the order or regulation of the board.⁵¹ But the exercise of this power cannot be justified where the thing abated is not a nuisance in fact or the measure adopted exceeds what is necessary to remove the offensive condition.⁵² Where, however, the nuisance actually exists and the jurisdiction of the board of health has been regularly exercised the members of the board who abate the nuisance have a protection which they would not have as private individuals, in abating, not a private nuisance especially injurious to them, but a public nuisance injurious to the general public only.⁵³ The board of health may proceed without notice to abate a nuisance in cases of emergency.⁵⁴

F. Extraterritorial Acts. It has been held that while a board of health may only proceed to abate a nuisance existing or carried on within the territory for which the board was organized, it may abate either on its own motion or by the aid of a court of equity a nuisance maintained within its territory, although the nuisance is hazardous only to the health of persons living outside of the territory.⁵⁵ Moreover it is held that while a board of health may not itself abate a nuisance outside of the territory for which it was organized, it may invoke the aid of a court of equity to abate a nuisance injurious to the health of persons living within such territory, although the nuisance is located in another jurisdiction.⁵⁶ A statute may give a sanitary authority powers extending beyond its district, and it has been accordingly held that where boards of health are empowered to grant transit permits for the transportation of dead bodies of persons who are to be carried for burial beyond the limits of the county where the death occurs, no further permit is required of the board of the county in which the body is to be buried.⁵⁷ While city health authorities may provide for the care of persons afflicted with contagious disease outside of the city limits,⁵⁸ yet the mere power to acquire property outside of the city limits for hospital purposes does not override the power of the sanitary authorities of adjoining districts to control the location of an institution of that kind within their territory, the corporate power of the city yielding to the police power of the board of health of the adjoining locality.⁵⁹

G. Capacity to Sue and Be Sued. By statute in some jurisdictions boards of health are expressly made bodies corporate with the capacity to sue and be sued,⁶⁰ but without incorporation or express authority neither the board⁶¹ nor its officers⁶²

In Kentucky it is held that a county board of health, being a high governmental agency, endowed with distinct legal rights, may enforce them by proceedings in the courts, although it is not made a corporation by statute. Henderson County Bd. of Health v. Ward, 107 Ky. 477, 54 S. W. 725, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1193.

62. Buckstaff v. Oshkosh, 92 Wis. 520, 66 N. W. 707, applying the rule, although the can sue or be sued in an official capacity, the proper proceedings in several jurisdictions being for the action to be brought in the name of the municipality in which the sanitary authority is organized.⁶³ Where a remedy is given by statute to a board of health, the repeal of the statute abrogates the remedy,⁶⁴ and the creation of a new board, succeeding to the statutory rights and powers of an old board, is not sufficient, without a saving clause, to keep alive an action instituted under the old statute.⁶⁵

H. Delegation of Powers. The general principle that official powers of a legislative or judicial nature may not be delegated to others applies to the powers of a board of health.⁶⁶ But it is competent for the legislature to vest in an individual health officer or member of a board powers ordinarily exercised by a board,⁶⁷ and to the same extent it may authorize boards of health⁶⁸ or the municipal authorities⁶⁹ to delegate such powers.

I. Record of Proceedings. In some jurisdictions either under or apart from statute a record is required to be kept of the proceedings of a board of health,⁷⁰ and where this requirement exists parol evidence is not admissible to prove such proceedings unless the absence of the record is satisfactorily explained.⁷¹

VI. REMEDIES AGAINST ACTION OF SANITARY AUTHORITIES.

A. Appeal. Prompt and vigorous action in cases affecting the health of the community is frequently of the highest importance and statutes intended to promote the public health and safety will be generally so construed if possible as to officer was required to take such measures as he might deem needful for the prevention of disease.

67. Brown v. Pierce County, 28 Wash. 345, 68 Pac. 872, holding that by statute power is conferred upon a duly qualified health officer to enable him under exigency calling for immediate action to take steps in seizing property for a pest-house without express authorization by the board.

In Indiana it has been held that a secretary of the board of health does not have absolute authority independently of the board in matters pertaining to the public health. Martin v. Montgomery County, 27 Ind. App. 98, 60 N. E. 998, holding that the secretary cannot without authority from the board bind the county for an indebtedness incurred in abating a stagnant pond which has become a nuisance. On the other hand it is held that an emergency may arise sufficient to authorize the secretary to make contracts for which the town will be liable (Knightstown v. Homer, (Ind. App. 1905) 75 N. E. 13 [approving Monroe v. Bluffton, 31 Ind. App. 269, 67 N. E. 711]).

make them immediately effective,⁷² and in the absence of a statute permitting it there is no right of appeal from the orders of boards of health either to higher administrative authorities or to the courts.⁷³ But an express right of appeal is sometimes provided for by statute.⁷⁴

B. Certiorari.⁷⁵ The general rule that a writ of certiorari lies to review the proceedings of inferior tribunals and administrative boards or officers acting in a quasi-judicial capacity to the end that the validity of the proceedings may be determined, excesses of jurisdiction restrained and errors if any corrected,⁷⁶ has been held applicable to proceedings on the part of boards of health.⁷⁷

C. Injunction.⁷⁸ The jurisdiction of courts of equity to restrain boards of health or other health authorities has been asserted, where the proposed action of the board threatens to create a nuisance injurious to health or property,⁷⁹ where the statute or ordinance under which the action is to be taken is unconstitutional,⁸⁰ or where the sanitary authorities have acted fraudulently and oppressively.⁸¹ And the same rule has been applied where the sanitary authorities propose to act in a matter beyond their jurisdiction,⁸² or have failed to observe jurisdictional prerequisites prescribed by statute,⁸³ or threaten to adopt measures of summary abatement not called for by the conditions to be remedied,⁸⁴ or to enforce an order made without notice or hearing.⁸⁵ On the other hand the general rule has been laid down that a court of equity, upon an application for an injunction to

This rule has been applied where assessments for expenses incurred by a board of health have been levied upon a person without notice or a hearing (Hall v. Staples, 166 Mass. 399, 44 N. E. 351; Grace v. Newton Bd. of Health, 135 Mass. 490); and where there had been no hearing before the condemnation of property (Munn v. Corbin, 8 Colo. App. 113, 44 Pac. 783); but the writ will not lie to annul an unauthorized regulation made without hearing, since that is a legislative and not a judicial act (People v. New York Bd. of Health, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 344, 20 How. Pr. 458); or to vacate an order allowed by statute to be made without notice upon the personal knowledge of the sanitary officers, since there are no judicial proceedings and no evidence to be returned to the court (People v. Yonkers Bd. of Health, 140 N. Y. 1, 35 N. E. 320, 37 Am. St. Rep. 522; People v. Fayette Bd. of Health, 83 N. Y. App. Div. 571, 82 N. Y. Suppl. 21. Compare *People v. restrain a board of health from the summary abatement of what it has adjudged to be a public nuisance detrimental to the public health, will decline to restrain the proposed action of the board unless it is made to appear clearly that the board has acted wantonly and in bad faith or has transcended its jurisdiction.⁸⁶ And indeed the rule has been broadly laid down that an injunction will be denied where the jurisdiction conferred by statute on the board is summary in its nature, since the objects to be attained by its exercise would be defeated in many cases if the orders of the board of health were subject to judicial examination and revision before they could be carried into effect.⁸⁷ It is well settled that a court of equity even if it has the power will not, except upon good cause shown, interfere in the measures taken by public officials to protect the public health.⁸⁸ So an injunction will be denied where there is in the opinion of the court an adequate remedy at law.⁸⁹

D. Action For Damages — 1. LIABILITY OF INDIVIDUAL OFFICERS. A health officer who by statute is authorized to take action for the prevention of the spread of disease is not liable for injuries resulting from such reasonable and customary measures as he may in good faith adopt or direct for that purpose with regard to persons or matters subject to his jurisdiction.⁹⁰ But health officers may be held personally responsible for gross and wilful carelessness in the exercise of their powers,⁹¹ acts of corruption,⁹² or acts in excess of their authority.⁹³

Where property has been destroyed as a nuisance summarily and without judicial inquiry, the owner may maintain his action to recover damages, where it is shown that no nuisance in fact existed. People v. Yonkers Bd. of Health, 140 N. Y. 1, 35 N. E. 320, 37 Am. St. Rep. 522; Lowe v. Conroy, 120 Wis. 151, 97 N. W. 942, 102 Am. St. Rep. 933, 66 L. R. A. 907. Compare Raymond v. Fish, 51 Conn. 80, 50 Am. Rep. 3, holding that health officers are not liable for destroying property

The wrongful act of a member of a board of health does not, however, become the wrongful act of other members by their subsequent ratification of it.⁹⁴

2. LIABILITY OF INCORPORATED BOARD OF HEALTH. Incorporated boards of health invested by statute with functions of a public nature to be exercised for the public benefit are, in the absence of statute, exempt from liability in their corporate capacity to actions of tort.⁹⁵

3. LIABILITY OF MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS. By the weight of authority a municipal corporation is not liable for the unauthorized or illegal acts of sanitary officers, such for instance as their negligence in allowing infectious diseases to spread, whether through omission of preventive measures or through carelessness in their execution,⁹⁶ or the illegal detention of persons or seizure or destruction of property,⁹⁷ the reason frequently given for the doctrine being that sanitary not actually a nuisance, where in seemingly extreme cases there is reasonable ground to believe that immediate action is necessary and reasonable ground to believe the supposed nuisance to be one in fact.

W. 324 (where the illegal action, i. e., burning of wearing apparel, was under the special direction of the corporate authorities); Dalbee v. Montreal, 22 Quebec Super. Ct. 23.

Contract for remuneration.—Under a statute in Arizona declaring every county a body politic and corporate with such powers as are necessarily implied from those expressed, and giving the board of supervisors power to adopt such health regulations as they may deem necessary and such as are not in conflict with the general laws, it has been held that a county is liable for a house officers, acting under statutes passed for the promotion of a general governmental object, are not regarded as agents of the city.⁹⁸ Liability has been denied, especially when the damage complained of was merely the necessary consequence of precautions which the individual should have taken for his own benefit.⁹⁹ But a municipality may be liable where property is used and destroyed under a statute giving authority for that purpose and making provision expressly or impliedly for due compensation.¹ Moreover it seems that a municipal corporation may, apart from statute, be liable where the sanitary authorities have maintained a nuisance to the detriment of private property.²

HEALTH INSURANCE. Indemnity to persons for expense and loss of time occasioned by disease.¹ (See, generally, ACCIDENT INSURANCE; LIFE INSURANCE.)

HEALTHY.² Sound; free from disease.³

HEAR. As a verb, the term implies that some one is before the court to speak, to determine, involves the possibility of forming an issue to determine.⁴ (See HEARING.)

and goods therein taken and destroyed by order of the board of supervisors under the advice of a physician, and under a contract with the owner to pay for the same, to prevent the spread of a contagious disease. Haupt v. Maricopa County, (Ariz. 1902) 68 Pac. 525. But in Spring v. Hyde Park, 137 Mass. 554, 50 Am. Rep. 334, it was held that the wrongful seizure of property by the health authorities will not support an action against a city upon the theory of implied contract.

Property destroyed as nuisance.—In Dunbar v. Augusta, 90 Ga. 390, 17 S. E. 907, it was held that a municipal corporation is not liable to an action for damages for the condemnation and destruction of damaged grain as being a nuisance and dangerous to health in the absence of an allegation and proof that the grain was not in fact a nuisance.

The word "healthy," in its ordinary acceptance, means, free from disease or bodily ailment, or a state of the system peculiarly susceptible or liable to disease or bodily ailment. Bell v. Jeffreys, 35 N. C. 356, 357 [quoted in Harrell v. Norvill, 50 N. C. 29, 32].

Health is "soundness of body; freedom from disease, sickness or pain" (Worcester Dict. [quoted in Hubbard v. Paterson, 45 N. J. L. 310, 312, 46 Am. Rep. 772]); "freedom from pain or sickness; the most perfect state of animal life" (Bouvier L. Dict. [quoted in Hubbard v. Paterson, 45 N. J. L. 310, 312, 46 Am. Rep. 772]); "that condition of a living organism and of its various parts and functions which conduces to efficient and prolonged life" (Century Dict. [quoted in Reg. v. Coventry, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 541, 543]). The word "health," as ordinarily used, is a relative term. It has reference to the condition of the body. Peacock v. New York L. Ins. Co., 20 N. Y. 293, 296. It is said to be derived from an Anglo-Saxon word, of which we yet retain a trace in the word "hale," and which may be rendered "whole" or "sound." Hubbard v. Paterson, 45 N. J. L. 310, 312, 46 Am. 14. "Iron is heavy, feathers are light or bulky. Yet a pound of feathers is as heavy as a pound of iron. Hence, an article is heavy when a certain bulk has a certain weight, while one which has the same bulk, but weighs less, will not be heavy. On this principle we call iron heavy and feathers light. The difficulty is in drawing the line of demarcation, or in ascertaining when the weight of an article, compared with its bulk, makes it a heavy article." Elder v. Charlotte, etc., R. Co., 13 S. C. 279, 281.

The term "heavy articles" is used in a technical sense, and not according to its popular sense, from the fact that it is contrasted with articles of measurement. Bonham v. Charlotte, etc., R. Co., 13 S. C. 267, 277. A bale of cotton is a "heavy article," and not an article of measurement, according to the custom and practice with railroads and common carriers in South Carolina. *Bonham v.
