by any other competent evidence sufficient to satisfy a jury,<sup>88</sup> including parol testimony, according to the doctrine prevailing in many states,<sup>89</sup> although in some such testimony is not admissible unless the failure to produce a receipt or record evidence is first satisfactorily accounted for.<sup>90</sup>

c. Weight and Sufficiency. A receipt from the proper officer is prima facie evidence of the payment of taxes, and is sufficient proof thereof unless successfully contradicted.<sup>91</sup> Where other evidence is introduced, it is governed by the ordinary rules, and in order to establish the fact it should be clear and positive and of a satisfactory character.<sup>92</sup> If no receipt is produced, and no witness testifies taxes made and kept by the collector are competent evidence of the fact of payment. Harrison v. Sauerwein, 70 Iowa 291, 30 N. W. 571; State v. Ring, 29 Minn. 78, 11 N. W. 233; McIntosh v. Marathon Land Co., 110 Wis. 296, 85 N. W. 976. Compare Pier v. Prouty, 67 Wis. 218, 30 N. W. 232.

as to paying the tax or having seen it paid, it will be concluded that no payment was made.<sup>93</sup>

4. APPLICATION OF PAYMENTS.<sup>94</sup> In making a payment on account of taxes the owner has a right to direct its application to a particular tax or to a particular piece or item of property, and the receiving officer is bound by such direction, and the effect of the payment will not be defeated by its misapplication by the officer.<sup>95</sup> Where part of a tax which has been paid in full is afterward adjudged invalid, the taxpayer may have the excess applied on valid taxes thereafter accruing.<sup>96</sup>

5. TAX RECEIPTS OR CERTIFICATES.<sup>97</sup> A tax collector is not bound to give a receipt for taxes paid to him if the law does not require it,<sup>98</sup> but if it is made his duty to give such a receipt, it may be enforced by mandamus.<sup>99</sup> The taxpayer is not prejudiced by any defect or informality in his receipt, such as the lack of a proper signature.<sup>1</sup> If the receipt is indefinite or ambiguous it may be explained and interpreted.<sup>2</sup> While it is prima facie evidence of payment,<sup>3</sup> it does not estop the municipal corporation collecting the tax from showing that the tax was not in fact paid, or that it was not paid "in full" as recited in the receipt.<sup>4</sup>

6. OPERATION AND EFFECT OF PAYMENT. Full payment of the taxes due on particular property discharges the tax lien, releases the owner from liability, and invalidates any subsequent proceedings taken for the enforcement of the lien or the tax through the mistake or fault of officers.<sup>5</sup> But if the payment is less than the full amount due, its receipt does not estop the state or municipality from collecting the balance.<sup>6</sup> Where the statute under which the tax is levied is unconstitutional, but only in respect to a matter of form, voluntary payment of the tax is a waiver of objections on this ground.<sup>7</sup> But if the tax is entirely illegal and void, and is nevertheless paid, the taxpayer is entitled to a credit for the sum so paid on a subsequent valid assessment.<sup>8</sup> If property is wrongly assessed in one county and the taxes there paid, this does not relieve the owner from liability to pay the tax assessed on the same property in another county, but he is entitled to a return of the money paid in the first.<sup>9</sup>

release or remit particular taxes altogether or authorize their compromise or settlement on part payment,<sup>11</sup> unless prevented by a constitutional prohibition.<sup>12</sup> But a grant to a person to take the benefit of past due taxes to his own use, like a grant of exemption from future taxation, is to be strictly construed, and the right is not to be taken by implication.<sup>13</sup> It seems that counties, towns, and municipal corporations cannot compromise or release claims for taxes legally assessed, at least if the debtor is able to pay, unless they are authorized by the legislature to do so,<sup>14</sup> and certainly they cannot do so even then if there is a constitutional prohibition.<sup>15</sup> Where a tax has been regularly assessed under a statute and the liability therefor is fully fixed, the repeal of the statute does not have the effect of remitting such tax, unless such an intention on the part of the legislature appears.<sup>16</sup>

Compliance with invalid statute.—Where an unconstitutional statute remitting certain taxes assessed against a railroad company was acquiesced in by the local authorities, who refrained from requiring the collector to collect the taxes or to account for them, this did not prevent the assertion of a claim for such taxes in the succeeding year. Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 546.

Unliquidated demand.—In Kentucky it is held that the constitutional prohibition against releasing or authorizing the release, in whole or in part, of indebtedness due to the commonwealth or to any county or municipality, does not forbid the compromise of an unliquidated demand for taxes, and that a judgment upon an agreed stipulation of facts will not be disturbed ordinarily, except for fraud or mistake. *Com. v. In Arizona, Rev. St. (1901) par. 973, conferring on boards of supervisors power to direct and control the prosecution and defense of all suits to which the county is a party, and to compromise the same and to do and perform all other acts and things which may be necessary to the full discharge of the chief legislative authority of the county government, did not confer on a county's board of supervisors authority to compromise an action for the collection of taxes. Territory v. Gaines, 11 Ariz. 270, 93 Pac. 281. A compromise of delinquent taxes, made subsequent to the passage of the act of March 19, 1903 (Laws (1903), p. 168, No. 92), amending Revenue Law, § 91 (Rev. St. (1901) par. 3922), and specifying the conditions under which a board of supervisors may compromise taxes, which compromise is not based on any of the conditions specified, is void. *Territory v. 2. AUTHORITY TO REFUND. The state may authorize the refund of taxes already paid, either out of its own treasury or those of the municipalities, but it must be by a valid and constitutional act of the legislature,<sup>17</sup> and the repeal of such an act takes away the right of the citizen to claim a refund and of the public officers to make it.<sup>18</sup> In the absence of such a statute, no power to refund taxes is lodged in the executive or administrative officers of the state or municipality;<sup>19</sup> and if the power is given to them by law it must be strictly followed.<sup>20</sup> The statute must be given a retrospective as well as a prospective operation if such appears to have been the intention of the legislature.<sup>21</sup> Where a statute providing for a refund of excessive or erroneous taxes paid is general in its terms, it applies to voluntary as well as to involuntary or compulsory payment.<sup>22</sup>

3. GROUNDS FOR REFUNDING — a. In General. To take advantage of a statute authorizing the refund of taxes illegally or wrongfully assessed, it must be shown

17. State v. Goldsmith, 162 Ala. 171, 50 So. 394; State v. Graham, 25 La. Ann. 625 (holding refunding act unconstitutional); In re L. E. Waterman Co., 33 Misc. (N. Y.) 569, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 892. See also Mills v. Hendricks County, 50 Ind. 436 (construing a statute which directed the charging back against a county of taxes illegally exacted, but made no express provision for repayment to the individual taxpayers, but which was nevertheless held to render the county liable to each person who had paid such taxes); People v. Erie County, 193 N. Y. 127, 86 N. E. 348 [reversing 126 N. Y. App. Div. 920, 110 N. Y. Suppl. 1140]; People v. Haverstraw Bd. of Education, 126 N. Y. App. Div. 414, 110 N. Y. Suppl. 769 [affirmed in 193 N. Y. 601, 86 N. E. 1130].

Statute constitutional.—N. Y. Laws (1907), c. 721, § 1, subd. 3, providing for the refund to taxpayers of excessive school taxes judicially determined excessive, and which prescribes limitations to the application which it authorizes, and which applies retrospectively as well as prospectively, and authorizes the refunding of taxes determined illegal on certiorari issued under Laws (1880), c. 269, which law was repealed in Laws (1896), c. 908, is not obnoxious to Const. art. 7, § 6, which section is aimed against the allowance of stale demands against the state. People v. Haverstraw Bd. of Education, 126 N. Y. App. Div. 414, 110 N. Y. Suppl. 769 [affirmed in 193 N. Y. 601, 86 N. E. 1130]. Nor is such statute unconstitutional as imposing upon one person the debt of another, since taxes are not to be regarded as debts within the constitutional prohibition relating thereto, and even if they were, the statute merely adjusts the debt, in that it returns to the "debtor" the excess paid by him over what was due from him, and merely provides for an abatement of the excessive portion of the tax and not for a donation or gift. People v. Haverstraw Bd. of Education, supra.

Provision for interest.—The fact that the application of a statute allowing refund of excessive taxes, together with interest from the date of payment, to taxes paid twenty years before, is in effect to give an interest paying investment for twenty years to the taxpayer, affords no justification for nullifying the statute by judicial legislation; such criticism of the statute not being one against the refund, but against the express provision of the statute affording interest thereon. People v. Haverstraw Bd. of Education, 126 N. Y. App. Div. 414, 110 N. Y. Suppl. 769 [affirmed in 193 N. Y. 601, 86 N. E. 1130].

Railroads and other corporations.—Acts (1907), p. 227, c. 142, providing that taxes illegally assessed, and paid through mistake of fact, shall be apportioned and refunded, being general in its terms, applies to the property of all taxpayers, natural or artificial, including railroads. *Sahm v. Action for illegal refund.—A taxpayer of a county has sufficient interest in the subject-matter to maintain an action against the board of supervisors for illegal action in refunding certain money paid for taxes. Hosper v. Wyatt, 63 Iowa 264, 19 N. W. 204.

Construction of statutes see Sahm v. State, 172 Ind. 237, 88 N. E. 257; People v. Erie County, 193 N. Y. 127, 86 N. E. 348 [reversing 126 N. Y. App. Div. 920, 110 N. Y. Suppl. 1140]; *People v. that the tax was illegal, that the assessors acted without jurisdiction, that the property should not have been assessed at all, or that the taxes claimed were not justly due; it is not sufficient to show mere irregularities or errors of judgment in the assessment or in the mode of making it,<sup>23</sup> or that the valuation of the property was excessive or was increased without authority.<sup>24</sup> But where an assessment is made on property which has no existence in fact, the error is one which may justify a refund of the taxes paid.<sup>25</sup> A statute providing for a refund, on petition in the court of county commissioners, to any person who, through mistake in the assessment or collection of taxes, has paid money that was not due from him for taxes, refers merely to cases where there has been a mistake in the assessment or collection of taxes, and does not clothe county commissioners or the board of review with the judicial function of passing on the constitutionality of a taxation law.<sup>26</sup>

b. Persons or Property Exempt or Not Liable. An assessment of taxes on persons or property which are exempt by law is illegal and not merely erroneous, and if the taxes have been paid a refund may properly be claimed in some jurisdictions.<sup>27</sup> The same is true where one has been illegally and improperly

23. Arkansas.—Clay County v. Brown Lumber Co., 90 Ark. 413, 119 S. assessed for property which he does not own or have any interests in, and he has paid the tax.<sup>28</sup>

4. PROCEEDINGS TO SECURE REFUND. According to the usual course of proceedings, a claim for the refund of taxes must be filed within the time limited by law,<sup>29</sup> with the official body or board which is authorized to order the refund, generally the administrative board of a county or city,<sup>30</sup> and this board has a judicial function to perform in hearing and trying the application, so that mandamus will not lie to control its decision, but only to compel it to take up the case, or to require it to ascertain and determine the amount to be refunded where the right to a refund is clearly apparent as a matter of law or rests on undisputed facts.<sup>31</sup> The board should act on proper and competent evidence presented to it,<sup>32</sup> and if it refuses to grant the relief demanded the remedy is by appeal,<sup>33</sup> and not by mandamus.<sup>34</sup> In some jurisdictions, however, the proceeding is taken in a court of original jurisdiction,<sup>35</sup> on a petition which must clearly set forth a good and sufficient ground for ordering the refund of the taxes.<sup>36</sup> In either case, if the facts are found for the petitioner, he is entitled to an order for the restoration of the entire tax paid, if none of it was due, or so much of it as was in excess of the sum rightly chargeable, with interest,<sup>37</sup> and then it becomes the duty of the proper officer to draw his warrant upon the treasury which has received the tax and which is liable to refund it.<sup>38</sup>

No estoppel.—Notwithstanding the failure of the taxpayer to list his taxable property, he may recover taxes wrongfully charged against him under color of Kan. Gen. St. (1901) § 7599, authorizing the county clerk or board of county commissioners, upon notice to a taxpayer who has failed to list all his taxable property, or who has undervalued it, to correct the returns of the assessor and charge the person with the proper amount of taxes, and which he has paid under the compulsion of a tax warrant. One who, to avoid the seizure and sale of his property under a void tax warrant, pays the amount of the charge may recover it in a proper action, notwithstanding his fault in failing to make a statement of his taxable property in the previous year, and notwithstanding he has never discharged his moral obligation to contribute in proportion to his means to the public expenses of that year. Douglas County v. Lane, 76 Kan. 12, 90 Pac. 1092. Where a person has no property in a municipality liable to assessment, his failure to appear before a board of review does not

2. OTHER REMEDIES AVAILABLE. An action for the recovery of taxes paid cannot be maintained, however, where plaintiff has another and more appropriate remedy provided in the ordinary course of the tax proceedings themselves,<sup>45</sup> as by an application to the board of equalization or other body for an abatement or reduction of taxes assessed illegally or excessively,<sup>46</sup> or by an appeal or certiorari to review the assessment complained of,<sup>47</sup> or by mandamus to obtain the correction of errors or irregularities in the assessment,<sup>48</sup> or to compel the refunding of taxes illegally exacted.<sup>49</sup> In some cases also an action for damages against the assessors is a more appropriate remedy than one for the recovery of the taxes paid.<sup>50</sup>

3. EFFECT OF PAYING OVER OR DISTRIBUTING MONEY. It is generally held that an action may be maintained against a county, town, or other municipal corporation for the recovery of taxes illegally exacted only while the fund so raised remains in the possession of defendant.<sup>51</sup> Hence if a county has collected general taxes, part of which are for itself and part for the state or for townships, school or road districts, or the like, no recovery can be had after the funds have been divided up and paid over to the several treasurers or receiving officers.<sup>52</sup> Nor can a recov-estop him from contesting the validity of an assessment in an action to recover taxes paid under protest. Rice v. Muskegon, 150 Mich. 679, 114 N. W. 661.

there is some constitutional or statutory provision expressly or impliedly giving him such right although the tax is paid without compulsion.<sup>55</sup>

b. What Constitutes Voluntary Payment.<sup>56</sup> A payment is voluntary, in the sense that no action lies to recover back the amount, not only where it is made willingly and without objection;<sup>57</sup> but in all cases where there is no compulsion or duress nor any necessity of making the payment as a means of freeing the person or property from legal restraint or the grasp of legal process.<sup>58</sup> Hence a payment made in pursuance of a bargain or compromise between the taxpayer and the state or municipality is voluntary,<sup>59</sup> and so is a payment of taxes levied under a void statute, since the citizen should know that its invalidity is a complete defense and that he could not be coerced into making payment.<sup>60</sup> So also where there

Hamilton County, 120 Tenn. 1, 113 S. W. 361. A payment of taxes in order to be involuntary, so as to entitle the taxpayer to recover them for illegality, must be made on compulsion to prevent an immediate seizure of the taxpayer's goods or the arrest of his person; mere threats of litigation or apprehension of levy of distress warrants being insufficient. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hamilton County, supra. To make a payment of taxes involuntary, it must appear that the officer authorized to collect the same had in his hands process authorizing the seizure of the person or property of the taxpayer, that such seizure was imminent, and that there were no other legal means of protecting the person or property than by payment; and under such circumstances payment under protest saves the rights of a taxpayer to recover if the taxes are illegal. has been no demand for the taxes, no steps taken to enforce them, and no pressure exerted to compel their payment.<sup>61</sup> A payment made merely to save the property from being returned delinquent is voluntary,<sup>62</sup> and so is one made to prevent the sale of land for an illegal tax.<sup>63</sup> On the other hand, money illegally exacted as a condition of redeeming lands from tax-sale is not paid voluntarily,<sup>64</sup> and a payment by a bank of illegal taxes upon the shares of its stock, without consent of the owners, is not voluntary.<sup>65</sup>

c. Mistake of Law or Fact. Taxes voluntarily paid under a mistake of law cannot be recovered back, whether the mistake be as to the validity of the statute under which they are levied, the legality of the assessment, or the legal liability of the person or property.<sup>66</sup> But it is sometimes held that there may be a recovery

Texas.—Galveston County v. Gorham, 49 Tex. 279.

Washington.—Peacock Mill Co. v. Honeycutt, 55 Wash. 18, 103 Pac. 1112. In this case plaintiff purchased certain wheat in February, 1907, but no title passed until delivery between March 7 and the following April. The wheat was listed for taxation as plaintiff's property on March 1, 1907, but plaintiff's manager first refused to pay taxes on it until the assessor informed him that the seller claimed that he had sold the wheat and would not pay the taxes, whereupon plaintiff's manager listed the wheat and paid the taxes, knowing that there had been no delivery prior to March 1. It was held that the taxes were paid under a mistake of law, without fraud or any attempt to take advantage of plaintiff, but with full knowl-

if the mistake is one of fact,<sup>67</sup> particularly if made by the revenue officers in the form of a statement to the taxpayer or in taking some official action on the correctness of which the latter has a right to rely,<sup>68</sup> although it is otherwise where the mistake is made by the taxpayer himself, and is the result of his neglect of some legal duty, or where the facts which would have shown the mistake were within his own possession or within his reach,<sup>69</sup>

d. Duress or Compulsion. Where payment of an illegal tax, or one for which the person is not liable, is enforced by duress or compulsion, the payment is not voluntary and the amount may be recovered back in a proper action.<sup>70</sup> There is duress in this sense when the taxpayer has been placed under arrest, or when there has been a distraint or seizure of his chattels, for the purpose of compelling him to pay the tax,<sup>71</sup> or when the officer, being armed with lawful process and having authority to enforce his demand, has made a distinct threat to seize and edge of the facts, and were therefore not recoverable.

Levy on stranger's goods.—A stranger to the tax who pays money to prevent a seizure of his property to satisfy the tax cannot recover it back; and where a stranger's property is levied on and advertised for sale, but no actual possession is taken, his payment of the tax is voluntary, although under protest, there being an adequate remedy by replevin. *Canfield Salt, etc., Co. v. sell property or is searching for property on which to levy.<sup>72</sup> And according to the great preponderance of the authorities it is enough to constitute duress if the officer simply demands payment of the tax under color of a warrant or other process which gives him legal power to enforce his demand by compulsory proceedings against the person or property and which makes it his duty to do so, although he makes no threat and takes no steps to distrain or levy; for in this case the process has the force of an execution, and the taxpayer is justified in believing that if he refuses to pay the tax a levy on his property will follow as the only alternative, and therefore he is not obliged to wait for a distraint or even a threat.<sup>73</sup> But there is no duress or legal compulsion where the payment is made before the tax is due or delinquent,<sup>74</sup> or where the officer has no warrant, or has a warrant which is entirely void, so that he could not carry out his threat.<sup>75</sup> Nor is it regarded as a case of legal compulsion where the payment is made to prevent a sale of land, but the circumstances are such that a tax deed, if executed, would be void for defects appearing on the face of the record, so that it could not cloud the title.<sup>76</sup> On the other hand, where a corporation pays a tax the validity of which it disputes, for the purpose of avoiding heavy penalties imposed by statute for non-payment, the payment is not voluntary.<sup>77</sup> And the same may be true of payments made not under threat of the seizure and sale of property, but to avoid the sacrifice of or serious injury to the taxpayer's rights in other directions.<sup>78</sup> taxes and against being compelled to pay them.<sup>79</sup> But as a general rule this privilege is given only in cases where the tax is entirely invalid or unauthorized, not where the ground of objection goes only to errors or overvaluations in the assessment.<sup>80</sup> And many decisions hold, in the absence of a statute, that a protest does not save the payment from being voluntary, in the sense which forbids its recovery back, if it was not made under any duress, compulsion, or threats, or under the pressure of process immediately available for the forcible collection of the tax.<sup>81</sup>

b. Requisites and Sufficiency of Protest. If the statute does not require a protest to be in writing, no particular formality in making it is necessary;<sup>82</sup> but if a written protest is required, the statute is not satisfied by an oral objection, even though accompanied by a memorandum written on the tax bill or on the margin of the assessment roll.<sup>83</sup> If in writing, the protest should not be couched in general terms, but should state distinctly and specifically the grounds on which the taxpayer objects to the legality of the tax,<sup>84</sup> except that it need not set forth facts of which the tax collector has notice, or which he is bound to know, officially.<sup>85</sup>

6. ACTIONS OR PROCEEDINGS FOR RECOVERY OF TAXES — a. Nature and Form of Remedy. The proper remedy for the recovery of taxes paid is an action at law in the form of assumpsit as for money had and received,<sup>86</sup> unless some other remedy is provided by statute,<sup>87</sup> not a proceeding in equity.<sup>88</sup> Where a taxpayer brings an action under a statute to recover interest on taxes wrongfully exacted, it cannot recover independently thereof.<sup>89</sup>

b. Conditions Precedent. It may or may not be a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action to recover back taxes paid that plaintiff shall first have applied to the board of equalization or review for such relief as it could afford,<sup>90</sup> or that he shall have endeavored to have the assessment vacated or set aside,<sup>91</sup> these matters depending on the local statutes. But in the absence of a statute specifically requiring it, it is not necessary that plaintiff shall have made a formal demand for the restoration of the taxes or exhibited or submitted his claim to the local officers.<sup>92</sup> belief of ownership, the statute begins to run from the end of the litigation which settles the question of title.<sup>96</sup>

d. Parties Plaintiff. The proper plaintiff in an action of this kind is the person who is ultimately entitled to the money if it shall be recovered.<sup>97</sup> In some states one taxpayer is allowed to bring such a suit in behalf of himself and of all other persons similarly interested;<sup>98</sup> but in such case plaintiff must have a substantial interest in the controversy, and he cannot assume to represent others if his own pecuniary interest is a mere trifle.<sup>99</sup>

e. Defendants. An action for the recovery of illegal taxes paid to a collector or other receiving officer may be maintained against such officer personally if he still has the money in his possession.<sup>1</sup> But after he has paid it over to the proper officers of the county or other municipal corporation his own responsibility is at an end, and the suit should then be brought against the municipality.<sup>2</sup> In the case of taxes collected for and paid over to the state the matter is not so clear. There is authority for holding that a suit to recover money paid as taxes, when brought against the treasurer or other officer of a state, is not a suit against the state itself within the inhibition of the federal constitution.<sup>3</sup> But some states have obviated the difficulty by giving express permission for the maintenance of suits against their officers in cases of this kind,<sup>4</sup> and others have provided for the refunding of state taxes through the several counties in which they were collected.<sup>5</sup>

No action against county.—In some jurisdictions no action can be maintained by a taxpayer against a county for taxes wrongfully collected, whether the taxes have been paid out by the county or not, no right of action being given by statute. Owen County Fiscal Ct. v. F. & A. Cox Co., 132 Ky. 738, 117 S. W. 296; First Nat. Bank v. Christian County, 106 S. W. 831, 32 Ky. L. Rep. 634.

Money paid over to state.—In an action

f. Pleading. The petition or complaint in an action to recover back money paid as taxes must allege distinctly the facts relied on as rendering the tax illegal or its exaction unlawful, and this not in general terms, but with such particularity that the court may judge of their sufficiency.<sup>6</sup> It must also allege the payment of the tax,<sup>7</sup> and that such payment was involuntary, when this is necessary to entitle him to recover, with facts showing duress or compulsion or some compelling necessity of making the payment,<sup>8</sup> and a proper demand for the return of the tax against a city for the repayment of a tax on real estate paid by its former owner by mistake, and in ignorance of the fact that title to the property had passed to the city, the fact that the amount had been paid over to the state, so that the city could not get a credit or repayment thereof, was no defense, since if the city, as owner of the property, was not entitled to make the payment to the state, it should not, with knowledge of the facts, have done so. Lesster v. New York, 33 N. Y. App. Div. 350, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 934 [affirmed in 161 N. Y. 628, 55 N. E. 1092].

Right of appeal.—State and county officers concerned in the collection of a tax levied without authority, against whom no costs are awarded, have no interest in and cannot appeal from that part of a decree which directs the refunding of such tax. Rutz v. Calhoun, 100 Ill. 392.

United States customs officers.—The rules stated in the text apply to these officers. If they demand and collect illegal or excessive customs duties, they may be sued personally for the amount so long as the money remains in their hands, but not after they have paid it into the treasury. Cheatham v. Norvekl, 92 U. S. 85, 23 L. ed. 561; Maxwell v. Griswold, 10 How. (U. S.) 242, 13 L. ed. 405; Elliott v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 137, 9 L. ed. 373; U. S. Rev. St. (1878) § 3011.

before suit brought, if that is required by the statute.<sup>9</sup> The plea or answer should meet specifically the allegations of the complaint and raise an issue.<sup>10</sup>

g. Evidence. The presumption is in favor of the validity of tax laws and of the regularity of official action taken under them; and the burden is on plaintiff to prove the illegality of the tax or other grounds on which he particularly relies to establish his right to recover back the amount he has paid in the form of taxes.<sup>11</sup> In particular, he must prove the fact of payment to the officer authorized by law to receive the taxes,<sup>12</sup> and that the payment was not voluntary, but was made the sheriff, in obedience to a warrant attached to the roll, notified plaintiff of the tax specified, that the exaction was just and due, and unless it was paid, he would "in due time" collect it by sale of the property, but which nowhere alleged that the sheriff was either in the act of selling, or that he threatened immediately to do so, or that plaintiff, believing that the menace would be instantly executed, was by the abrupt urgency ensnared into meeting the payment, or that he had no other expedient of freeing his property. *Johnson v. Condition precedent to power to tax.—If a charitable corporation omits after notice from the assessors to bring in the list and statement of all real and personal estate held by it for charitable purposes required by Mass. Rev. Laws, c. 12, § 41, the corporation under section 5, clause 3, of the same chapter, still is exempt from taxation for that year unless such omission was wilful, and, in an action brought by it against a city to recover a tax paid under protest, the burden of proving that such an omission was wilful is on defendant. *Masonic Education, etc., Trust v. under duress or compulsion, when this is necessary to a recovery,<sup>13</sup> and he must show clearly the exact amount he is entitled to recover;<sup>14</sup> and where the payment was made under a protest, plaintiff is generally restricted to the grounds of objection stated therein.<sup>15</sup>

h. Amount of Recovery. If the decision is in favor of plaintiff, he will be entitled to recover the whole amount of taxes paid by him, or so much thereof as defendant ought not in justice to retain.<sup>16</sup> But if part of the tax was legal and valid, only the invalid portion can be recovered, if they are separable;<sup>17</sup> and plaintiff is not entitled to a decree establishing the amount he is entitled to recover as a set-off against other taxes or taxes subsequently accruing.<sup>18</sup> He will in some states be entitled to recover interest from the date of demand,<sup>19</sup> but not the costs of a distress or other proceedings to collect the tax.<sup>20</sup>

X. COLLECTION AND ENFORCEMENT AGAINST PERSONS AND PERSONAL PROPERTY.

A. Collectors and Proceedings For Collection—1. IN GENERAL—

a. Power to Enforce Collection. The sovereign power to lay and assess taxes necessarily implies authority to provide means for enforcing their collection,<sup>21</sup> and it belongs to the legislature of a state to prescribe the remedies by means of which this shall be accomplished,<sup>22</sup> and from time to time to change the same, in its discretion, there being no such thing as a vested right in the continuance of a mere remedy,<sup>23</sup> subject only to the limitation that the taxpayer shall not be deprived of his property without due process of law,<sup>24</sup> and that, whatever methods of collecting the taxes are ordained, they shall apply uniformly to all persons or property of the same class or kind.<sup>25</sup> The regulation of administrative details in the collection of the taxes levied by counties and other municipal divisions may, to a limited extent, be left to the determination of the local authorities.<sup>26</sup>

b. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions. Constitutional directions as to the collection of taxes must of course be observed and obeyed by the legislature,<sup>27</sup> but otherwise, as above stated, its discretion is practically unlimited.<sup>28</sup> The repeal of a statute providing for the levy and collection of taxes will not operate retrospectively so as to affect unpaid taxes already due or pending proceedings for their collection.<sup>29</sup> And the repealing effect of a new tax law will be confined within narrow limits, so that it will not be held to abrogate laws applicable to particular localities nor the details of previous general laws which are not clearly in conflict with it.<sup>30</sup>

2. APPOINTMENT, QUALIFICATION, AND TENURE OF COLLECTORS — a. Creation and Abolition of Office. If the constitution creates the office of tax collector, or names the officer who shall act in that capacity, its provisions cannot be varied in the least degree by the legislature.<sup>31</sup> But otherwise it belongs to the legislature to create this office and to abolish and change it at pleasure, although the effect may be that persons lawfully acting as tax collectors shall be legislated out of their office.<sup>32</sup> Authority may also be given to cities or other municipal corporations to create the office of tax collector, for their own purposes, and to prescribe his duties, but such authorization must be strictly pursued.<sup>33</sup>

b. Eligibility. Whatever may be prescribed by law as the qualifications of a

Not a judicial function.—It is no part of the functions of a court to appoint a collector of taxes, nor can a tax, levied and assessed for a particular purpose, be treated as an equitable asset or chose in action; and hence where a court of the United States has rendered judgment against a municipal corporation, although it may by mandamus compel the proper local officers to levy and collect a tax to pay it, yet, if there are no state or local officers authorized to make the collection, the court cannot appoint a tax collector or a receiver. *Rees v. fail to act, the governor of the state is authorized to make an appointment.<sup>41</sup> But generally, in the absence of contrary directions in the constitution or a general law, the power of appointing officers for this purpose is vested in the legislature in respect to state taxes,<sup>42</sup> and in the executive board or officers of counties, cities, and other municipalities, the action of such appointing power not being open to collateral impeachment nor to review by the courts, except where taken illegally or without jurisdiction.<sup>43</sup> Where the power of appointment is thus lodged in a county or other municipal board, they may appoint several collectors, unless their authority is specifically limited in this respect,<sup>44</sup> and may make an appointment pro tempore or to fill a vacancy.<sup>45</sup> But the practice of selling the office of tax collector at public auction to the lowest bidder, without regard to his suitability or qualifications, is severely condemned by the courts and generally held illegal.<sup>46</sup> Where the sheriff or some other officer is entitled to the office of tax collector, and another may be appointed only in case he declines to act or fails to qualify, these conditions must be fulfilled before a valid appointment can be made.<sup>47</sup>

47. Arkansas.—Bosely v. Woodruff County

But no person can be compelled to serve as tax collector against his will, although duly elected or appointed.<sup>48</sup>

e. Qualification. A collector of taxes must take the official oath required by statute or ordinance.<sup>49</sup> His failure to do so will not necessarily deprive him of the right to demand and receive payment of the taxes and give a good receipt therefor,<sup>50</sup> but if he has not been sworn his office will not protect him, nor will he be warranted in selling lands for the non-payment of the tax.<sup>51</sup> The same rules apply generally to other requirements of the statutes in regard to the qualification and commissioning of tax collectors.<sup>52</sup>

f. De Facto Collectors.<sup>53</sup> The acts of one who assumes to exercise the office of tax collector and who has color of title to the office will be sustained, so far as necessary for the protection of third persons and the public, as the acts of an officer de facto, although there may be a defect in his appointment or qualification.<sup>54</sup> But this does not apply where he owes his appointment to a board or officer having no authority whatever to make it,<sup>55</sup> nor where he acts after his office has been judicially declared to be vacant.<sup>56</sup>

officio collector of taxes, he is not generally entitled to any compensation additional to his salary as sheriff or treasurer.<sup>67</sup> Further, according to the systems generally in force, the tax collector can claim commissions only on sums actually collected as taxes,<sup>68</sup> and may forfeit his right to the same by negligence or misconduct in his office.<sup>69</sup> If he continues to act after the expiration of his term of office he cannot claim pay for extra services on the theory that he is no longer collector, as he will not be permitted to deny his official character.<sup>70</sup>

(II) NATURE OF SERVICES. When the collector's compensation is in the form of a commission on taxes collected, it can be claimed only in respect to taxes which he has actually collected and by his own efforts;<sup>71</sup> and where he is to receive graduated fees for special services rendered, such as serving a warrant, making a distress, selling property, and the like, the services must have been actually and necessarily rendered and his acts such as were authorized by law.<sup>72</sup> Hence a fee chargeable for taxes collected by distress or by levy and sale cannot be claimed where payment was made on mere demand or after a levy and without a sale.<sup>73</sup>

A tax collector is not entitled to commissions on the sums for which the state bids in land at a delinquent tax-sale. State v. Brewer, 64 Ala. 287. Nor is he entitled to commissions on taxes worked out on the roads. Brennan's Appeal, 1 Walk. (Pa.) 522.

(III) AS BETWEEN SUCCESSIVE COLLECTORS. As a rule a collector of taxes, or a sheriff in his capacity as a collector, is not entitled to commissions on taxes collected by his successor in office.<sup>75</sup> But an outgoing sheriff is entitled to the commissions on the amount of taxes he pays to his successor in office, as required by statute.<sup>76</sup> And it has been held under certain circumstances that where the substantial and responsible duties of the collector of back taxes were performed by one collector, while actual payment was made to his successor, the former was entitled to the statutory fees.<sup>77</sup>

b. Amount of Salary or Commissions. The amount receivable by a tax collector as salary, commissions, or fees is ordinarily regulated by statute, and the provisions of the law in this particular will be strictly followed and will be superior to any local ordinance or any private contract between the local authorities and the collector.<sup>78</sup> A statute allowing the tax collector a commission on the "sum

Cowser*, 24 Ark. 51, holding that a sheriff is not entitled to commissions except where he collects the taxes, and if he fails to take the tax book, and it is delivered to his successor, he has no claim for commissions on the taxes collected by his successor. See also Graves v. Bullen, (Tex. Civ. App. 1909) 115 S. W. 1177, holding that where plaintiff was legally elected collector of a county, he became entitled to the office and the emoluments thereof as soon as he took the oath of office and qualified. In the case last cited defendant, before retiring from the office of tax collector, executed, as paid, the tax receipts of a large number of taxpayers in the county, listed on his official tax roll. The taxes had not been paid or tendered, defendant's purpose being to advance the money and pay the taxes, holding the receipts as a personal claim for the money so advanced against the taxpayers, and thus benefit by the commissions after his term. When plaintiff qualified as tax collector, these receipts had not been removed from the office nor delivered by defendant to the taxpayers, nor the taxes paid either by them or by defendant, who, after retiring from the office, paid the taxes in full. It was held that such transaction was without authority, and that plaintiff was entitled to recover commissions on the taxes so paid.

Collector employed by treasurer.—A person employed or appointed by a county treasurer under Ohio Rev. St. § 2858, as collector of delinquent personal taxes, in making his contract of employment assumed the risk of the death of the treasurer appointing him, and of the loss of income which a revocation of his appointment by the successor of the treasurer would entail, and he was not entitled to commissions on taxes after the termination of his employment by the death of the treasurer appointing him, and revocation of his appointment by the successor, the right to compensation being coexistent with the right to hold the position. Brady v. French, 9 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 202, 6 Ohio N. P. 127.

App. 205, holding that a collector who performed all preliminary duties as to the collection of back taxes, began a suit to recover them, and conducted it to judgment, was entitled to the commissions provided by the statutes, although he was not in office when the judgment was rendered and when the taxes were collected thereon.

Penalty accruing to officer demanding taxes as fee.—Under a statute to enforce the collection of taxes against banks, etc. (Ohio Act March 14, 1853), providing that if the taxes should remain unpaid until a certain day, the treasurer of the county should "forthwith demand payment of the amount of such taxes, and five per centum penalty thereon, which penalty shall be for the use of the treasurer," it was held that the treasurer making the demand was entitled to such penalty as fees, and might retain it, and might recover it from his successor if collected by the latter. It was said, however, that he was not entitled to the one per cent commission for collection of the taxes, as that accrued, if at all, to the treasurer who actually collected the money. *Thomas v. Unlawful increase of compensation.—A statute allowing a commission for the collection of license-taxes is not applicable to the case of a tax collector whose term began before the statute was passed, as otherwise the constitutional provision against an increase in compensation during the term of an incumbent would be violated. *Butte County v. Recovery of commissions after payment to county.—In Missouri, where a collector of taxes is allowed by statute to retain five per cent of back taxes collected as commissions, together with a penalty of four per cent collected from the taxpayer, and it is provided (Rev. St. (1899) § 9255) that a collector shall file each month with the county clerk a statement of the taxes collected during the preceding month, and shall "pay the same, less his commissions, into the state and county treasuries," it was held that a collector who retains the penalty and pays the entire amount of the taxes collected to the county cannot thereafter claim payment of the five per cent commission from the county; his mistake in failing to deduct his commissions being one of law. Hethcock v. Crawford County, 200 Mo. 170, 98 S. W. 582.

Certification of levy.—It is the duty of the sheriff or collector of revenue to take notice of the levy of taxes by the fiscal court and to collect and distribute it as by law required, and a special certification of the levy is not of one county has no authority to go into another county and in person execute his process for taxes there.<sup>91</sup>

b. Taxes Within Authority of Collector. Although taxes levied by various authorities or for various purposes may all be assessed on the same persons or property and all be due at the same time, it does not follow that they are to be collected by the same persons. Regard must be had to the statutes or ordinances, which often distribute the duty among collectors for various municipal divisions or for various funds; and generally, authority to collect one particular tax does not carry with it authority to collect another.<sup>92</sup> A collector generally has authority to demand and enforce the payment of all the taxes on the list committed to him, although assessed before he was appointed,<sup>93</sup> or although they become delinquent and the time expires when he should make his return;<sup>94</sup> and he may also be given authority to collect arrears of taxes or the delinquent taxes of preceding years.<sup>95</sup>

c. Death or Expiration of Term. A collector of taxes generally has authority to proceed with the collection of all the taxes on the list or roll committed to him, even after the expiration of the year or other term for which he was appointed, and although his successor has been chosen and qualified.<sup>96</sup> Upon the death of a collector, the completion of his work will ordinarily devolve upon his successor in office, although statutes have sometimes been enacted authorizing the sureties on the deceased collector's bond, or his administrator, to collect the balance of the taxes.<sup>97</sup> collector's authority to proceed with the collection of the taxes is based on the delivery to him of the original assessment roll or list or a duplicate thereof; having this he needs no other warrant, but without it he cannot lawfully proceed.<sup>98</sup> The list or duplicate must be properly certified or authenticated as the law directs,<sup>99</sup> and should be delivered to the collector at or within the time appointed, although a delay not shown to have been prejudicial to any one will not invalidate the further proceedings.<sup>1</sup>

Nebraska.—The tax list in the hands of the county treasurer will authorize him to collect the taxes described therein; but, to invest him with jurisdiction to seize personal property in satisfaction of a tax lien thereon, the clerk's warrant provided for by statute must be attached to the list. Unless the clerk's warrant provided for by statute is attached to the tax list in the hands of the county treasurer, there exists no enforceable lien for the payment of taxes against the personal property of a tax debtor. *Platte Valley Milling Co. v. damages for his official acts done in obedience to it,<sup>4</sup> and is prima facie the measure of his accountability, all the taxes specified in the warrant or in the accompanying list being presumptively collectable.<sup>5</sup>

(II) AUTHORITY TO MAKE AND AUTHENTICATION. The official who is to issue the tax warrant is designated in the statute, and no other can perform this duty;<sup>6</sup> but on the other hand, if he unjustifiably refuses to issue the warrant he may be compelled by mandamus.<sup>7</sup> The warrant is always required to be signed by the proper authority;<sup>8</sup> but if that authority is a board of officers, the signatures of a majority are sufficient.<sup>9</sup> It is sometimes required to be under seal, and the omission of the seal is a fatal defect.<sup>10</sup> In some of the states, by statutes, the warrant may be renewed or extended for a further period of time, by an appropriate indorsement by the proper authorities.<sup>11</sup>

(III) FORM AND REQUISITES. Statutory directions as to the form and contents of a tax warrant must be followed, at least substantially; but mere informalities or irregularities not going to the essence of the collector's authority will not vitiate it.<sup>12</sup> This warrant is not "process" in the ordinary sense of the term, and therefore need not run in the name of the people or the state,<sup>13</sup> and an error in its date, apparent on the face of the warrant, will not invalidate it.<sup>14</sup> It should of course be directed to the proper person to execute it, and an error in this respect is fatal; but it need not name the officer if it correctly describes him.<sup>15</sup> Unless the warrant itself contains a list of the persons and property assessed and the amounts severally due, it should be attached to or accompanied by an assessment list or rate bill giving these particulars.<sup>16</sup> It should command the collector to collect the several items,<sup>17</sup> and should give him all necessary authority and directions to enforce payment by such measures of distraint, sale of property, etc., as are authorized by the laws of the state.<sup>18</sup> Further, the warrant should direct the collector to pay over the money collected to the proper officer, but the omission of this clause, or an error as to the person to whom he is to account, does not necessarily vitiate it.<sup>19</sup>

f. Tax Bills. Where the statute requires tax collectors to render to known owners of property a bill of their taxes, this provision is mandatory, and it must be complied with before any further steps can lawfully be taken.<sup>20</sup> The bill should contain such a description of the property taxed and such further information as will make it perfectly intelligible to the owner of the property.<sup>21</sup> Tax bills are usually by statute made prima facie evidence of the validity of the assessment and that the amount stated as due is just and correct.<sup>22</sup>

g. Authority to Compromise. A tax collector has no authority to compromise with a delinquent taxpayer by accepting less than the full amount due.<sup>23</sup>

5. ACCOUNTING AND PAYING OVER TAXES COLLECTED — a. Accounting by Tax Collectors — (i) IN GENERAL. A collector of taxes is bound and may be compelled to settle his accounts at the time fixed by law or extended by the proper authorities,<sup>24</sup> and no previous demand for an accounting is necessary.<sup>25</sup> The accounting should be before the proper officers and in conformity with all the directions of the statute, there being generally no power to waive positive requirements of the law in this regard.<sup>26</sup> In some states the practice is to charge the collector with the amount actually received by him as taxes and allow him proper credits against the same;<sup>27</sup> in others he is primarily charged with the entire amount of the tax list or duplicate, and must then, in addition to ordinary allowances and deductions, establish his right to exoneration for taxes uncollected.<sup>28</sup> But under either system neither the collector nor the county can offset a claim or demand which is not directly connected with his acts or duties in the character of tax collector.<sup>29</sup> Penalties on delinquent county taxes belong to the county, and the sheriff collecting them must account for them on his official bond.<sup>30</sup>

(II) CONCLUSIVENESS AND EFFECT OF ACCOUNTING. A settlement of a tax collector's accounts, properly had, is prima facie evidence against all parties concerned, including the sureties on his bond, as to the amount due or chargeable, but is not conclusive in any direct proceeding,<sup>31</sup> although it is not impeachable collaterally.<sup>32</sup> But where the settlement is made with a court of law or a board acting judicially, its finding and adjudication as to the state of the accounts has the force of a judgment and is of course conclusive.<sup>33</sup>

b. Responsibility For Money Collected. A collector of taxes is not regarded as a bailee of the money collected by him and remaining in his hands, but he is an insurer of its safety against loss by any means whatever, including such losses as arise from the act of God or the public enemy.<sup>34</sup> He is therefore responsible for the taxes collected, although he is robbed of the money or it is stolen from him,<sup>35</sup>

And see State v. Houston, 78 Ala. 576, 56 Am. Rep. 59, construing a statute requiring

c. Duty and Liability to Pay Over Funds. It is the duty of a tax collector to pay over the money actually received by him in the form of taxes, notwithstanding the tax may be illegal or there may be defects in the levy, assessment, or tax warrant.<sup>39</sup> And this he must do punctually at the time or times required by law.<sup>40</sup>

Taxes paid under protest.—A tax collector should pay into the treasury money paid for taxes under protest, although the taxpayer notified him not to make such payment, and that he intended to sue him to recover the money back; and the collector is not liable to the taxpayer for making such payment. Phelan v. San Francisco, 120 Cal. 1, 52 Pac. 38.

Restraint by injunction.—Where a collector obtains an unauthorized extension of time to pay over the money collected, he is already in default, and it is no defense that at the end of the extended period, when he was ready to pay, there were two rival governments in existence and he was enjoined from paying over the money to one of the claimants of the office of auditor, and afterward, and before the injunction was dissolved, the money was stolen from him. State v. Lanier, 31 La. Ann. 423.

Credit for abatements.—A collector is accountable to the town for all tax abatements allowed by the state treasurer, but not allowed to him by the selectmen. Essex v. French, 50 Vt. 413. And see Chadwell v. State, 8 Heisk. (Tenn.) 340.

Auditors' reports.—Where a tax collector's liability is fixed at a sum stated for a particular year by the auditors, the fact that in subsequent years the auditors' reports make no further mention of such balance does not relieve the collector from its payment. Com. v. Maxwell, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 631.

40. Lawson v. Pulaski County, 3 Ark. 1;

d. Mode and Effect of Payment and to Whom Made. A tax collector is discharged from all further liability or responsibility on paying over the whole amount of his collections.<sup>41</sup> But to have this effect the payment must be made to the officer duly authorized to receive it,<sup>42</sup> and in case of several taxes concurrently collected but payable to different officers, the correct amount of each tax must be turned over to the proper officer.<sup>43</sup> The payment must also be made in cash or its equivalent, and the collector cannot pay in state, county, or municipal scrip or warrants or certificates of indebtedness, unless these are by law a legal tender for this specific purpose.<sup>44</sup> Nor is it permitted the collector to pay judgments or other claims against the county or town out of the taxes in his hands, and receive credit as for so much cash, unless he does it in obedience to an order of court or a valid order drawn on him by the proper municipal authorities.<sup>45</sup>

e. Application of Payments. A tax collector who is indebted to the treasury for taxes collected in more than one year, and who makes a partial payment, may appropriate it as he pleases.<sup>46</sup> In the absence of any such appropriation, the law will apply the payment on the oldest debt,<sup>47</sup> except where the money is identified as coming from a particular taxpayer for the taxes of a particular year, in which case it will not be applied on the collector's debt for another year.<sup>48</sup>

f. Liability For Interest and Penalties. When a collector of taxes fails to pay over the money in his hands on the day appointed by law, he is generally chargeable with interest thereafter on the amount for which he should account,<sup>49</sup>

or, in some states, he is subjected to a penalty, which may be either a fixed amount in the nature of a fine or a heavy percentage on the amount due, by way of liquidated damages;<sup>50</sup> but a statutory penalty of this kind cannot be enlarged by charging interest upon it, at least before judgment.<sup>51</sup> A statute imposing damages for failure of a tax collector to pay over taxes collected is penal and must be strictly construed, and the conduct of the officer must come strictly within the terms of the law.<sup>52</sup>

Rate of interest.—The legislature may constitutionally impose on collectors of taxes who fail to pay over money collected by them at the prescribed time a higher rate of interest than that generally established. State v. Harrison, Harp. (S. C.) 88.

Excuses for non-payment.—Where the state remits a part of the indebtedness of a tax collector, authorizing the cancellation of his bond on payment of a fixed amount, it is a renunciation of the right to claim the interest allowed by statute as a penalty. State v. Leckie, 14 La. Ann. 636. So the penalty should not be claimed for a year in which there was no county treasurer and no demand upon the collector to pay over the balance in his hands to any particular person. Bates v. Knott County Ct., 67 S. W. 1006, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 73. So also where the collector had been requested by the officer to whom money collected as a special tax should be paid over to retain it in his hands for a time. Hardy v. Logan County Ct., 23 S. W. 661, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 405.

Waiver or release.—In the absence of statutory authority an auditor has no power, in settling with a tax collector, to waive or contract away the rights of the state by waiving payment of, or releasing the collector from liability for, interest due from him to the state. Remission of damages.—In Mississippi the governor and attorney-general may, under the statute, at any time before rendition of the judgment or decree, make the proper certificate, resulting in the remitting of the damages for the failure of a county tax collector to pay the state and county taxes collected by him. 52. Adams v. Saunders, 93 Miss. 520, 46 So. 960. In this case a county tax collector promptly paid the taxes due the county as shown by the tax books, but withheld taxes collected. A part of the amount withheld was damages collected by him, a part was money paid to him for taxes due to separate school districts and a part was an overpayment of the true amount of taxes due from a number of taxpayers. It was held that, although the collector, having collected the funds in his official capacity, was obliged to pay the same into the county treasury, he was not liable to the penalty imposed for non-payment of taxes collected; the object of the statute imposing the penalty being to force a prompt payment into the treasury, after collection of all taxes due the county and state.

and statutory requirements in this regard must be complied with at least substantially and in due season.<sup>56</sup> It is also a usual requirement that he shall return a list of delinquent taxpayers or property, both for the purpose of claiming credit or exoneration for the taxes which he has not been able to collect,<sup>57</sup> and as a basis for further compulsory proceedings against land or other property.<sup>58</sup>

7. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES AS TO TAXES UNCOLLECTED — a. Liability of Collector in General. A tax collector is prima facie accountable for all the taxes on his list or warrant, and may be held liable not only for his actual collections but also for taxes which he might have collected by due diligence and by the employment of such legal remedies as are within his authority,<sup>59</sup> including the penalties charged against delinquent taxpayers for their delay,<sup>60</sup> and including interest on the amount chargeable to the collector from the time of a demand on him.<sup>61</sup> Where a sheriff seizes and sells property for taxes and fails to collect the price from the purchaser, he becomes responsible therefor to the state and county.<sup>62</sup> levied under an unconstitutional statute, and cannot be held liable for his failure to do so.<sup>63</sup> And the same rule applies where the assessment or the warrant was so defective or insufficient that it gave him no legal authority to proceed and would have afforded him no protection against suits,<sup>64</sup> where he was enjoined from collecting the particular tax,<sup>65</sup> or where, by reason of delay in the delivery of the warrant to him or by his resignation or removal from office, it was impossible for him to make the collections within the time limited by law.<sup>66</sup>

c. Allowance of Credit For Taxes Returned Delinquent. In some states it is the practice, on a tax collector's accounting, to charge him with all the taxes on his list or warrant and then allow him credit for such as are properly returned delinquent or uncollectable; but to avail himself of this means of exoneration he must proceed in the manner and at the time and place prescribed by law.<sup>67</sup> Authority to audit his account and make such allowances is sometimes committed to a court,<sup>68</sup> and sometimes to the board of county or municipal officers.<sup>69</sup> But in either case it is a duty to examine the account and adjudicate upon the claims for exoneration and to allow credit only for such taxes as are determined to have been properly returned delinquent,<sup>70</sup> and it is sometimes required that the collector's application in this behalf shall be supported by his affidavit that he has exhausted all legal means of enforcing payment.<sup>71</sup>

Defects in the warrant, caused by non-observance of statutory provisions which are only directory, and which do not affect the authority which it purports to give, but are designed only for the protection of the collector, do not excuse him for failure to collect taxes, if he accepts the warrant without objection. *Bradley v. ### 8. LIABILITY FOR OFFICIAL ACTS — a. Liability For Negligence or Misconduct.

A tax collector who proceeds unlawfully in the execution of his writ, or makes an illegal levy or seizure, or practises extortion, oppression, fraud, or other misconduct in dealing with the taxpayer or his property, is liable in trespass to the party injured.<sup>74</sup> But if he makes a lawful levy or distress, his subsequent omission or neglect of duty will not make him a trespasser ab initio.<sup>75</sup>

b. some of the cases, however, the tax collector's warrant is held to afford him no protection if there was a want of jurisdiction, or if the tax itself was illegal or invalid.<sup>77</sup>

c. Defects in Assessment Roll or Warrant. If a tax warrant or other process is void on its face, or contains patent defects of such a nature that it confers no authority on the collector, he is not protected by it for acts done under it;<sup>78</sup> and so if the assessment roll or list attached to the warrant is fatally defective, or if either the roll or the warrant shows illegality on its face.<sup>79</sup> But mere clerical errors or verbal inaccuracies do not deprive the warrant of its force as a protection to the officer.<sup>80</sup>

d. Indemnity to Collector. In some states municipal corporations are bound by statute, and in others it is held that they may bind themselves by contract, to indemnify their tax collectors against suits for damages growing out of the illegality of the tax or assessment or anything but the collector's own negligence or misconduct.<sup>81</sup>

held lawful to proceed against defaulting tax collectors in a summary manner, as by a motion for judgment or a rule to show cause why judgment should not be entered.<sup>82</sup> But it is of course essential that there should be due notice and an opportunity to defend,<sup>83</sup> and the judgment must show on its face everything necessary to sustain the jurisdiction of the court.<sup>84</sup> The statement or certificate of the auditor or other public officer charged with the duty of settling the collector's accounts may be presumptive evidence against him of the amount due, if made so by statute.<sup>85</sup>

b. Person acting as collector without authority.—Where a person exercising the duties of tax collector has, in proper legal proceedings, been adjudged a usurper, and to be exercising the office without authority, and ordered to pay over the money in his hands to the clerk of the court, an execution cannot be issued against him as collector for the amount of the taxes collected by him. Hartley v. State, 3 Ga. 233.

law, the statute authorizing them must be very strictly followed in every essential particular.<sup>87</sup>

c. Attachment of Person. It is within the authority of the legislature, although no longer usual, to provide that a defaulting tax collector shall be forced to discharge his liability to the public by an attachment or warrant for his arrest and commitment to prison.<sup>88</sup>

d. Actions — (i) FORM OF REMEDY. As a rule, a suit by the state or a municipal corporation against a tax collector, to recover taxes collected by him and not paid over, is properly brought in the form of an action of assumpsit, as for money had and received.<sup>89</sup> Under some circumstances, however, a bill in equity may be maintained.<sup>90</sup>

(ii) RIGHT OF ACTION AND DEFENSES. At common law and without special statutory authority, either the state or a municipal corporation may maintain an action at law against a delinquent tax collector for the money received by him.<sup>91</sup> In such a suit defendant can plead nothing but payment or its equivalent,<sup>92</sup> or that the money in question never came into his hands.<sup>93</sup> In particular, a plea of set-off is not allowed.<sup>94</sup>

(III) JURISDICTION AND PROCEEDINGS. A suit against a delinquent tax collector should be brought after demand and refusal of payment if that is required by statute, although otherwise it is not necessary;<sup>95</sup> and it should be brought within the time limited by law for such actions,<sup>96</sup> in a court of competent jurisdiction,<sup>97</sup> and in the name of the proper state or municipal authorities.<sup>98</sup> It should be founded on a declaration containing all the essentials of a good cause of action,<sup>99</sup> and supported by competent and satisfactory evidence.<sup>1</sup> The recovery may include interest and penalties if the statute so provides.<sup>2</sup>

10. BONDS OF TAX COLLECTORS — a. In General — (i) REQUIREMENTS AS TO EXECUTION AND AMOUNT. It is commonly required by law that a collector of taxes shall give a bond with sureties conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties or to secure his due accounting for the money collected.<sup>3</sup> And in some states it is considered that the execution of this bond is a condition precedent to the right of the collector to demand the taxes or to enforce their payment.<sup>4</sup> The amount of the bond is prescribed by statute, and is commonly not less than double the amount of the taxes to be collected.<sup>5</sup> But a bond for a greater amount is not invalid;<sup>6</sup> and on the other hand, the fact that it is for less than the statutory penalty does not protect the collector against a judgment.<sup>7</sup> Even where such bond is not prescribed by law, it is held that the local municipal authorities may require the collector to give it,<sup>8</sup> and that they may at any time call upon him for a new bond or for additional sureties.<sup>9</sup>

(II) TIME FOR MAKING. Where the statute fixes the time within which a person elected or appointed tax collector must file his official bond,<sup>10</sup> failure to comply with its provisions will be tantamount to a refusal to serve and will justify another election or appointment;<sup>11</sup> and a bond filed after the time limited is prima facie invalid if not void,<sup>12</sup> although it is held to be within the power of the proper authorities to approve and accept it,<sup>13</sup> in which case it will be a good common-law bond, even if not valid as a statutory bond.<sup>14</sup> Where the law requires the bond to be given annually, a bond given for the collector's term of office, extending over more than a year, is not good.<sup>15</sup>

(III) REQUISITES AND VALIDITY. A tax collector's bond should be executed in due form of law,<sup>16</sup> and run to the proper obligee,<sup>17</sup> and be conditioned substantially, if not exactly, in accordance with the statute.<sup>18</sup> But minor irregularities, defects, variances, or misrecitals will not be allowed to invalidate it or release the collector or his sureties from liability under it.<sup>19</sup> And it is to be noted that such a bond, although wholly ineffective as a statutory obligation, may still be a good common-law bond, so that it may be sued on as at common law, although statutory remedies are not available.<sup>20</sup>

(iv) ACCEPTANCE OR APPROVAL. It is a common and an important provision of the statutes that the collector's bond shall be approved by some court or some officer designated for that purpose;<sup>21</sup> although it is held that the bond may be binding on the collector and his sureties, if he acts under it, in the absence of such approval.<sup>22</sup> A part of the duty of the court or officer is an inquiry into the financial responsibility of the sureties offered.<sup>23</sup> But if the bond presented is correct in form and amount, and the sureties are satisfactory, the court or board which is to pass upon it must accept it, and may be compelled by mandamus to do so.<sup>24</sup>

(v) BONDS OF OTHER OFFICERS AS COLLECTORS. Where the collection of taxes is committed to one holding another county or municipal office, as, for example, a sheriff, it is common to require a separate bond for the collection of the taxes,<sup>25</sup> and in an action thereon no question can be raised as to the validity of his title to the office of sheriff, provided he was at least sheriff de facto, nor as to the execution or sufficiency of his bond as sheriff.<sup>26</sup> In other respects bonds so given are governed by the same principles which apply to the ordinary bonds of tax collectors.<sup>27</sup>

b. Liability on Bonds — (i) SCOPE AND EXTENT IN GENERAL.<sup>28</sup> The extent of liability on a tax collector's bond is measured in the first instance by the condition of the bond, which is construed with strictness.<sup>29</sup> It includes of course the due payment or accounting for all the taxes collected,<sup>30</sup> and may also extend, either by force of a statute or the terms of the bond itself, to the protection of individuals against the tortious or illegal acts of the collector;<sup>31</sup> and it is said that the law controlling the assessment and collection of the public revenue becomes a part of the contract entered into by the collector and his sureties, and is as binding as any express condition of the bond.<sup>32</sup>

(II) NATURE OF TAX. If the bond is conditioned only for the collection and payment of a particular tax by name, or a particular class of taxes, it cannot be extended to cover any tax not clearly within the description.<sup>33</sup> But if it is conditioned for the faithful performance of the collector's duty, or for the payment of all money collected by him, it will cover every class and variety of taxes lawfully committed to him for collection,<sup>34</sup> and hence may include arrears of taxes remaining uncollected by his predecessor,<sup>35</sup> or a special tax which he is charged to collect, although he may be required to give, or may actually give, a separate bond to cover it,<sup>36</sup> and even new taxes provided for by statutes enacted after the execution of the bond.<sup>37</sup>

(III) AMOUNT OF LIABILITY. Within the limitation of the penal sum of the collector's bond, and subject to any arrangement specified in it for a division of liability among the several sureties,<sup>38</sup> the measure of their responsibility is the

38. When a tax collector's bond recites that the principal and sureties bind themselves in a certain sum, and then specifies the amounts for which each surety binds himself, the principal is bound in said cer-

amount actually due from the collector to the public authorities and remaining unpaid.<sup>39</sup> But if the law imposes a penalty upon the collector for his delinquency, either in the form of liquidated damages or in the form of interest at an extraordinary rate, this also is included in the liability of the sureties.<sup>40</sup>

(iv) TERM OR PERIOD COVERED. Where a tax collector is elected or appointed for a limited term, the sureties on his bond are responsible only for his official acts within that term, and hence not for collections made after its expiration.<sup>41</sup> But it makes no difference that some of the money was collected before the bond was executed,<sup>42</sup> or that part of the taxes were imposed by a levy made after the giving of the bond, if within the collector's term.<sup>43</sup> Where the collector is continued in office for more than one term, but gives separate bonds with different sureties, the liability of the sureties is to be estimated the same as if a different tain sum, although there is no specification as to him in the bond. People v. Love, 25 Cal. 520. Where the bond stipulates, in regard to the sureties, that "we or either of us will pay" the sum of ten thousand dollars, the fact that a sum of one or two thousand dollars is prefixed to the signatures of the sureties will not alter their joint and several liability as fixed by the terms of the instrument. Baker County v. Huntington, 48 Oreg. 593, 87 Pac. 1036, 89 Pac. 144.

<sup>39</sup> State v. Daspit, 30 La. Ann. 1112; Brunswick v. Snow, 73 Me. 177, holding that where a collector fails to pay over taxes collected, the measure of the liability of the sureties is the amount actually collected as taxes and interest, and interest thereon from the date of demand, less payments made by the collector, and also deducting the compensation of the collector for collections actually made and paid over.

Interest see Hartford v. Franey, 47 Conn. 76; Com. v. Carson, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 437. Under Ballinger & C. Comp. Oreg. § 4595, allowing interest on moneys after the same become due, interest cannot be allowed on a disputed claim until judgment is rendered, whether the dispute is as to the fact of liability or only as to the amount, and therefore, when the sureties on the bond of a sheriff as tax collector controverted their liability for his default, although acknowledging the extent of his defalcation, it was held that interest was not allowable on the demand against them until its liquidation by judgment. Baker County v. Huntington, 48 Oreg. 593, 87 Pac. 1036, 89 Pac. 144.

person had been appointed to fill the second term,<sup>44</sup> although some of the decisions hold that if the collector has in his hands, at the beginning of the second term, public money which he has not accounted for, the sureties on the bond for the second term are liable for it.<sup>45</sup>

(v) BREACH OF CONDITION — (A) Payment Without Authority. If the tax collector pays over the money in his hands to any person other than the officer authorized by law to receive it, it is a breach of the condition of his bond; and even if the municipality entitled to the taxes eventually receives the whole of the money, he is still liable in nominal damages.<sup>46</sup>

(B) Failure to Pay Over Collections. The collector and his sureties are liable for taxes received by him and which he has failed to pay over at the appointed time;<sup>47</sup> and it is immaterial, so far as respects the liability of the sureties, whether he had a warrant or other lawful authority to make the collection; if the taxes have been voluntarily paid to him, it is his duty to account for them, and failure to do so is a breach of the condition of the bond.<sup>48</sup>

Dodds*, 90 Miss. 767, 44 So. 767. Under section 3820, providing that, where the owner of land sold for taxes shall accept the overbid of the purchaser, he shall pay interest, and section 3824, providing that the tax collector, on redemption being effected, shall refund the overbid to the purchaser, a tax collector is not liable for interest on overbids on lands being redeemed; the overbids being on deposit with him to await the contingency of redemption. *Indianola Bank v. (c) Failure to Collect. Failure of a tax collector to collect the legal taxes within the time required by law is a breach of the condition of his bond for which his sureties are liable,<sup>49</sup> at least to the extent of such taxes as were lost through his remissness or neglect,<sup>50</sup> although the sureties may show in mitigation of damages, if not in bar of the action, any circumstances which made it impossible for their principal to effect collections or which would be a sufficient legal excuse for his failure to do so.<sup>51</sup> The sureties are also liable for taxes for which the collector has given receipts without making the collection.<sup>52</sup>

(vi) APPLICATION OF PAYMENTS.<sup>53</sup> If a tax collector serves for two successive terms and is in default, and makes payments on account of his liability to the municipality which he serves, it is his right to appropriate them to the deficit of either term, and if he does not so appropriate them the municipality may do so, and if neither makes an appropriation, the law will apply the payments to the oldest debt.<sup>54</sup> And if a payment is thus appropriated or applied on the deficit of the first term, and is sufficient to discharge it, the liability of the sureties on the bond given for that term is extinguished; but on the other hand, the sureties on the bond for the second term are liable for the resulting deficiency in the collector's accounts for that term.<sup>55</sup>

c. Remedies and Actions on Bonds—(I) SUMMARY REMEDIES—(A) In General. In many states the laws provide summary remedies for enforcing the liability of the sureties on a tax collector's bond, as well as against the collector himself, by motion, rule to show cause, tax execution, or distress.<sup>56</sup> But to make these remedies available, the bond must comply fully with the statutory requisites; if defective or irregular it may be good as a common-law obligation, but in that case only common-law remedies upon it may be pursued.<sup>57</sup>

(B) Parties and Proceedings. A summary proceeding of this character should be brought in the name of the obligee in the bond,<sup>58</sup> and may be against the collector and his sureties jointly,<sup>59</sup> or, according to the practice in some states, against the sureties alone or any of them individually.<sup>60</sup> Notice of a motion or rule to show cause must generally be given,<sup>61</sup> and while it need not contain every matter essential to a declaration at common law,<sup>62</sup> it should describe the bond and set forth enough other facts to show a cause of action.<sup>63</sup> The bond should be proved in the ordinary way at the hearing,<sup>64</sup> and if its execution is denied, an issue may be framed and sent to a jury.<sup>65</sup> On default, or failure of the defense, judgment may be entered at once for the amount found to be due,<sup>66</sup> and such judgment is conclusive of all claims and matters of defense which might have been litigated in such proceeding.<sup>67</sup>

(II) LIEN OF BOND ON PROPERTY OF COLLECTOR AND SURETIES. The statutory lien of a collector's bond on his property, and in some states on that of his sureties also, is not merely a remedy to enforce his duty of accounting, but is a part of the contract constituted by the giving of the bond, and has much the same effect as a mortgage.<sup>68</sup> It attaches ordinarily at the time of executing the bond, but in some states only from the rendition of a judgment against the collector.<sup>69</sup> The lien binds property acquired after the execution of the bond,<sup>70</sup> and follows the property into the hands of any purchaser, with or without notice.<sup>71</sup> It is entitled to such priority over other liens as the statute may give it,<sup>72</sup> and is not released by an extension of the time for paying over the taxes collected, at least if the sureties consent thereto.<sup>73</sup> This lien can be foreclosed only in equity.<sup>74</sup> In a decree for the sale of land under the lien of such a bond, it is error to allow defendant to redeem within the time fixed for redemption from sale under execution.<sup>75</sup>

(III) ACTION OR SUIT — (A) Right of Action and Conditions Precedent. A formal demand of payment is not generally a condition precedent to the institution of a suit on a tax collector's bond,<sup>76</sup> although in some states it is necessary that his accounts shall have been audited or adjusted, so that the precise sum may be ascertained for which judgment shall be demanded.<sup>77</sup> Ordinarily the sureties may be joined in the action as defendants;<sup>78</sup> but in some jurisdictions, apparently on the theory that their undertaking is in the nature of a guaranty, they cannot be sued until after the recovery of a judgment against their principal,<sup>79</sup> or even, in some states, until after the exhaustion of remedies against the principal and his property.<sup>80</sup> At common law the proper form of action on a tax collector's bond is debt or covenant, usually the former, and not assumpsit;<sup>81</sup> but in some states, by statute, assumpsit will lie, notwithstanding the instrument is under seal.<sup>82</sup> Under some circumstances a suit in equity will lie.<sup>83</sup>

(B) Defenses — (1) IN GENERAL. Neither the collector nor his sureties can allege the illegality of the tax as a defense to a suit on his bond, when the ground of action is his failure to pay over money actually collected.<sup>84</sup> Nor can they, in the same circumstances, allege illegality, irregularity, or defects in the levy or assessment of the taxes,<sup>85</sup> or in the tax list or warrant or other process under which the collector acted.<sup>86</sup> Nor is a set-off allowed in this action.<sup>87</sup> But they may plead the statute of limitations, if any is applicable to the case,<sup>88</sup> or a waiver of a breach of condition of the bond,<sup>89</sup> or a former recovery;<sup>90</sup> or they may impeach for mistake a settlement of the collector's accounts with the auditing officers.<sup>91</sup>

Appointment of new collector.—A failure of municipal authorities to obey a statute which requires them, on application of the sureties on a defaulting tax collector's bond, to take from such collector the power to collect the taxes remaining uncollected, and to appoint another collector, will not release the edge affecting the solvency or honesty of the collector, unless it amounts to a wilful and fraudulent concealment.<sup>1</sup>

(c) Parties. Suit on a tax collector's bond is properly brought in the name of the state or municipality to whose use or for whose protection it was given,<sup>2</sup> and where the bond runs to the state, and the breach alleged is the failure to pay over county taxes, the proper plaintiff is the state and not the county, although the suit may be to the use of the county or the judgment recovered will be in trust for the county.<sup>3</sup> According to the form of the bond, there may also be cases in which it should be sued on by the particular officer to whom, in his official capacity, it was given.<sup>4</sup> Both the collector and his sureties may and ordinarily will be sureties. Stoeckle v. Armstrong, 8 Del. Ch. 150, 38 Atl. 1059.

Intervention by scire facias on judgment.—

In Pennsylvania, where an official bond given by a tax collector to the commonwealth has been entered up by the county, a borough, and a school-district acting together, and judgment entered thereon, a poor district which has placed its duplicate for poor taxes in the hands of the collector may subsequently intervene as a party plaintiff by a scire facias on the judgment; and it is immaterial that the judgment was entered on a warrant of attorney, and was not the result of an adverse action on the bond. *Com. v. Treasurer's suit for commissions.—Where it is the duty of the tax collector to turn over to the county treasurer the taxes collected by him, and the treasurer is entitled to retain his commissions out of such funds, and the collector fails to pay over the money, the treasurer can sue the collector and his sureties for the amount of such commissions, although the statute requiring the bond makes no provision for such a suit. *Carothers v. joined as defendants, but if the bond is joint and several it is not necessary that all should be included in the suit.<sup>5</sup>

(D) Pleading. The declaration, petition, or complaint should show the right of plaintiff to maintain the action, which may be predicated on the refusal of the proper officer to institute the proceeding.<sup>6</sup> It should also allege the levy and assessment of the taxes,<sup>7</sup> and the official duty of defendant to collect them, which will include his election or appointment and the delivery to him of the warrant or other process which authorized him to act,<sup>8</sup> and it should aver distinctly the collection by defendant of a certain and definite sum of money,<sup>9</sup> in his capacity as collector of taxes and while he continued in office,<sup>10</sup> and his refusal or failure to pay it over to the proper officer at the proper time.<sup>11</sup> The plea or answer should be responsive to the declaration and should negative its essential allegations.<sup>12</sup> A material variance between the conditions relied on in the declaration and those in the bond may be fatal.<sup>13</sup>

(E) Evidence. It is incumbent on plaintiff to prove the execution, approval,

Bond with indefinite obligee.—Where a collector's bond is made payable to "whomsoever it may concern," and he fails to obey the law requiring him to settle annually with the school trustees for school taxes collected by him, and to pay over the amount in his hands, the trustees are the proper parties to sue on the bond, the statute requiring actions to be prosecuted in the name of the "real party in interest." *Walton v. School-district as beneficial plaintiff in suit by state.—Where a suit is brought on a tax collector's bond in the name of the state, although for the use of a school-district, the statement should set forth the manner in which the judgment should be entered in order to secure the proper amount to the school-district, but the omission of this particular may be cured by amendment, and if there is no demurrer, the amendment will be considered as having been made, after trial on the merits and judgment. *Com. v. and acceptance of the bond,<sup>14</sup> the levy and assessment of the taxes to be collected,<sup>15</sup> and the official character of defendant and his authority to proceed with the collection of the taxes.<sup>16</sup> Where the breach of condition alleged is the failure to pay over money collected, its actual receipt and the amount must also be shown by the evidence for plaintiff,<sup>17</sup> as well as the fact that it has not been paid over to the proper officers or legally accounted for;<sup>18</sup> and if defendant claims credit for partial payments, or payments made in pursuance of orders drawn on him, he has the burden of establishing this fact.<sup>19</sup> On the other hand, where the breach relied on is the failure to collect taxes which defendant should and could have collected, the case for plaintiff is sufficiently made out by showing defendant's prima facie liability for the entire list committed to him, and it is then for him to prove any circumstances justifying or excusing his failure to make the collections.<sup>20</sup>

11. CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY OF COLLECTORS. By force of statutes in the different states, a tax collector may be liable to criminal prosecution when he embezzles the public money in his hands or unlawfully refuses to pay it over,<sup>26</sup> or if he unlawfully collects taxes when none are due, or wilfully and unlawfully exacts or demands more than is due.<sup>27</sup> But if he acts under a good and sufficient warrant in proceeding to collect a tax duly levied, he is not criminally liable for his act in exacting payment from a person who was improperly assessed.<sup>28</sup>

B. Property Subject to Process For Collection<sup>29</sup> — 1. IN GENERAL. The personal property of the taxpayer is the primary fund out of which all his taxes are to be made,<sup>30</sup> and for this purpose almost every variety of personal property is subject to compulsory process, provided it is found within the district in which the collector's authority runs,<sup>31</sup> and he is not restricted to those particular articles on which the particular assessment was laid or on which a particular tax lien rests.<sup>32</sup> As a general rule there is no exemption of any class or kind of personalty from distress or seizure for taxes;<sup>33</sup> it is immaterial that the property in question may be by law exempt from levy and sale on ordinary executions,<sup>34</sup> or even that it was exempted by statute from taxation, or otherwise was not subject to taxation at the time of the assessment.<sup>35</sup>

2. OWNERSHIP AND POSSESSION. It is a general rule that the property of one person cannot be seized and sold for taxes due from another person.<sup>36</sup> Hence, although property may be assessed to one who holds it in the character of an agent, consignee, or assignee for creditors, this does not make his individual property liable for the tax.<sup>37</sup> So the property of a corporation is not liable to be taken for the satisfaction of taxes assessed upon its shareholders in respect to their ownership of the stock.<sup>38</sup> Exceptions are made by statute in some of the states, in view of the importance of collecting the public revenue without delay or litigation, so far as to authorize the seizure of property which is in the possession of the person who owes the tax, although he does not own it,<sup>39</sup> or to make taxes assessed upon the owner of real property in respect to such property collectable by seizure of the goods of a tenant in possession,<sup>40</sup> but these statutes are oppressive and are strictly construed.<sup>41</sup>

3. LIABILITY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY FOR SATISFACTION OF TAX ON LAND. In some states taxes assessed upon land cannot be collected by sale of personal property but only by proceedings against the land itself.<sup>42</sup> But more commonly the Liability for taxes as between vendor and vendee see supra, III, A, 3, f.

Applications of rule.—The property of one joint owner of a mining claim cannot be taken on execution to satisfy a tax due from an employee of the other. Meyer v. Larkin, 3 Cal. 403. The property of a guardian cannot be taken to pay a tax assessed against him on the property of the ward. Tousey v. Bell, 23 Ind. 423. Nor can the property of a husband be made liable for a tax assessed against his wife before their marriage. Sumner v. Pinney, 31 Vt. 717. Taxes against a man not being a lien on his wife's property, sale of such property for such taxes is void. Brocking v. O'Bryan, 129 Ky. 543, 112 S. W. 631. But on the other hand the individual goods of a partner may be taken by distraint for the payment of a tax against the firm. Van Dyke v. Carleton, 61 N. H. 574. And an assessment and judgment for taxes against a succession, as such, are legal when the heirs have not obtained and recorded a decree putting them in possession. Carter v. New Orleans, 33 La. Pretended sale to evade distress.—Where a person against whom a tax is assessed makes a pretended sale of personal property for the express purpose of preventing a levy for the tax, retains possession of the property, and receives no consideration for the sale, and the vendee takes the bill of sale in order to assist in defeating the collection of the tax, a levy may be made on such property notwithstanding the sale. Gray v. Finn, 96 Mich. 62, 55 N. W. 615.

officer is not required to sell the land if he can find personal property sufficient to satisfy the tax,<sup>43</sup> at least if it is on the premises;<sup>44</sup> and indeed it is a statutory requirement in many states that personal property of the delinquent taxpayer shall be exhausted before proceeding to sell his land.<sup>45</sup> But the personal property of a purchaser of land is not liable, unless by statute, for the satisfaction of a tax assessed on the land while it belonged to his vendor.<sup>46</sup>

4. PROPERTY IN HANDS OF RECEIVER. A tax collector cannot seize and sell property in the hands of a receiver, even for the purpose of collecting taxes.<sup>47</sup> The remedy is by application to the court to direct payment by the receiver, or for a sale of property for the purpose, where there are no available funds.<sup>48</sup>

C. Actions and Proceedings For Enforcement and Collection —

1. SUMMARY REMEDIES — a. In General. Summary proceedings are commonly authorized by law and resorted to for the collection of taxes; and they are not governed by the rules applicable to ordinary judicial proceedings, but only by such as the statute prescribes.<sup>49</sup> But a law of this kind is strictly construed and will not be extended by implication, and strict compliance with its provisions is essential to the validity of the proceedings.<sup>50</sup> In addition to the proceedings by distress, attachment, and tax executions, discussed in the succeeding sections, we may here mention, as examples of more or less summary methods of collecting taxes, the authority of a court which has an estate under its control, as in the case of a probate administration or a receivership, to order payment of taxes on a simple rule to show cause,<sup>51</sup> the authority of the state to retain the taxes assessed on its bonds out of the interest due the holders,<sup>52</sup> and the right of the tax collector to use the process of garnishment,<sup>53</sup> and of proceedings supplementary to execution, in enforcing payment.<sup>54</sup>

Injunction against enforcement of tax.—

A court whose receiver is in charge of a railroad may properly issue an injunction pendente lite forbidding the state taxing officers to collect disputed taxes levied against a part of the railroad property. Clark v. McGhee, 87 Fed. 789, 31 C. C. A. 321. And on a bill by a receiver to enjoin the enforcement of a tax alleged to be invalid, the power of the federal court to issue a temporary injunction is not affected by the fact that the state law denies any relief against an illegal tax except payment under protest and suit to recover the amount. Ex p. Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 13 S. Ct. 785, 37 L. ed. 689, 149 U. S. 191, 13 S. Ct. 793, 37 L. ed. 698. And see Ex p. Chamberlain, 55 Fed. 704.

b. Remedies Against Corporations. Corporations as well as individuals are amenable to the laws giving summary remedies for the collection of taxes, and may be proceeded against in the same way.<sup>55</sup> In addition, the laws of some states provide a drastic method of enforcing the payment of state taxes by corporations, by authorizing the courts to enjoin a delinquent corporation from the transaction of any business, or from any exercise of its corporate franchises, until the taxes are paid, and even by forfeiture of its charter.<sup>56</sup> When a corporation is in the hands of a receiver, taxes may be collected by a proceeding in the court having charge, directing the receiver to pay the taxes out of the funds in his hands.<sup>57</sup>

c. Personal Liability For Taxes. In some states it is held that the owner of property is personally liable for the taxes assessed upon it, irrespective of the existence of a lien for the taxes or of other remedies for their collection.<sup>58</sup> But this is denied in other states,<sup>59</sup> particularly where the person in question did not become the owner of the property until after the levy and assessment of the tax,<sup>60</sup> and it is a generally accepted rule that an action will not lie at common law for the recovery of a tax.<sup>61</sup>

N. S. 323, a summary process to enforce the payment of taxes under one act does not extend to new taxes on other objects levied by subsequent acts.

d. Constitutionality of Statutes. Laws providing summary remedies for the collection of delinquent taxes are not open to constitutional objection because they dispense with some of the formalities of ordinary judicial procedure, or cut off technical defenses, or authorize the seizure of property first and a hearing afterward, provided only that the taxpayer is given an opportunity, at some stage of the proceedings and before his rights are finally cut off, to contest the validity of the tax or his liability in respect to it.<sup>62</sup>

e. Defenses and Objections. No lapse of time bars the right of the state or of its municipalities to collect delinquent taxes,<sup>63</sup> unless the statute of limitations is expressly made applicable to such proceedings.<sup>64</sup> Nor can a set-off or counterclaim be interposed in proceedings for the recovery of taxes.<sup>65</sup> But the taxpayer may always contest the legality of the tax or the assessment or the question of his liability to it.<sup>66</sup>

2. WHETHER STATUTORY REMEDIES EXCLUSIVE. It is generally held that where a statute provides a remedy for the collection of taxes in given circumstances, that remedy must be pursued to the exclusion of all others based on general principles of law,<sup>67</sup> except in cases where the statutory remedy is inadequate in the particular case or has been exhausted without satisfaction.<sup>68</sup> But if a law imposing taxes provides no means for enforcing their payment, recourse may be had to the ordinary processes of law.<sup>69</sup> A statute providing a different remedy for the collection of taxes from that previously in force may be retroactive, so as to be available for the collection of taxes levied before its passage.<sup>70</sup> But even though it repeals former laws, it will not affect the collection of taxes which have been duly assessed under previously existing laws.<sup>71</sup>

3. TAX EXECUTION OR WARRANT — a. law requires a demand to be made upon the taxpayer before proceeding with the execution, a levy without such demand is illegal,<sup>79</sup> and in any case the citizen must be allowed the full time which the statute grants him in which to pay his taxes voluntarily.<sup>80</sup> Whether the officer's authority is restricted to the town, borough, or other minor municipal division, or extends throughout the county or the state, depends on the local statute.<sup>81</sup> He is required to make return of his doings on the execution to the proper court or officer, but not to the taxpayer.<sup>82</sup>

c. Release or Delivery of Property on Bond. In some states provision is made by law for the release or surrender of personal property levied on under a tax execution, on the giving of a forthcoming bond or a bond for the payment of the taxes, by the owner or by a third person claiming the property.<sup>83</sup> But in the absence of a statute, no such bond can lawfully be taken by the collector or officer serving the writ.<sup>84</sup> If a claim to the property is interposed by a stranger, it should be referred to the court for trial.<sup>85</sup>

d. Supplementary Proceedings. A statutory "proceeding supplementary to execution" is an examination of a judgment debtor under oath, touching all his property and effects, with a view to the discovery of property subject to levy, which may be resorted to when an execution is returned unsatisfied; and in some states this proceeding is authorized to be taken as an aid in the collection of taxes.<sup>86</sup> It is founded upon a return by the tax collector that the tax remains unpaid and that he is unable to find property on which to levy,<sup>87</sup> and on an application to a proper court for an order requiring the taxpayer to submit to examination,<sup>88</sup> and is generally governed by the same rules as are applicable to proceedings on an ordinary judgment.<sup>89</sup>

Registering the tax does not divest the right of the tax collector to levy for the same, but his remedy is cumulative. Biddle v. Blackburn, 5 Pa. L. J. 419.

Money in custody of law.—The levy of a tax on money gives the county a lien, but if the money has come into the custody of the law, the lien can be availed of only by direct application to the court having the fund in possession. Yuba County v. Adams, 7 Cal. 35.

e. Assignment of Tax Execution. In Georgia the statute provides that if any third person will pay the amount of a tax execution it may be assigned and transferred to him, and he shall have the same rights of enforcing payment and of priority which the execution carried in the hands of the officer holding it.<sup>90</sup> Without the permission of such a statute a tax execution is not assignable.<sup>91</sup>

4. DISTRESS — a. Nature and Scope of Remedy. A distress warrant is process in the nature of an execution;<sup>92</sup> but it must be authorized by statute; as applied to the collection of taxes, it has no justification in the common law.<sup>93</sup> Being a severe remedy, it is restricted in its operation to the person against whom the tax is assessed,<sup>94</sup> and the officer executing it is very strictly limited in respect to the taxes which he may enforce in this manner,<sup>95</sup> the territorial extent of his authority,<sup>96</sup> and all other matters affecting the rights of the delinquent.<sup>97</sup> But if property taken on distress is replevied or is released on the claim of a third person, or on

Effect of payment by debtor.—Where the tax execution is satisfied by retaining a sufficient amount out of the proceeds of a judicial sale of the taxpayer's lands on another writ, it is extinguished and cannot afterward be transferred under the statute. Blalock v. Buchanan, 114 Ga. 564, 40 S. E. 717.

Amount to be paid by assignee.—No legal transfer of a tax execution can be made except upon payment of the full amount due on it, including costs. Wilson v. Herrington, 86 Ga. 777, 13 S. E. 129.

Necessity of recording to preserve lien.—A third person buying a tax execution is required by the statute to have it entered on the execution docket of the superior court within thirty days after the transfer. If he fails to do this, the execution no longer has any force except as against defendant only. As to purchasers of the property or any third persons, it is extinguished. *Funkhouser v. the owner's giving a note for the amount of the taxes, the taxes are not paid, and it is no bar to a subsequent distress.<sup>98</sup>

b. Conditions Precedent. It is generally required that a distress for taxes shall be preceded by a demand on the taxpayer for their payment and his refusal or neglect to comply; and without this the distress is illegal.<sup>99</sup> It may also be provided that the collector shall have the delinquent tax list in his possession, or that he shall exhibit it to the debtor; and such a requirement is mandatory.<sup>1</sup>

c. Property Subject to Distraint. As a rule, subject to statutory exceptions, any property which is in the nature of personalty as distinguished from realty is subject to distraint for taxes,<sup>2</sup> provided it is found within the jurisdiction,<sup>3</sup> and the officer is not restricted to seizing the particular property on which the tax was assessed.<sup>4</sup> Primarily, no property can be taken but such as belongs to the tax debtor and which is in his possession at the time;<sup>5</sup> but to expedite the collection of taxes, leaving contests as to the ultimate liability to pay them to be settled later, the laws sometimes provide that property in the possession of the tax debtor as agent, bailee, or custodian may be taken on distress,<sup>6</sup> and so as to property

Luscher*, (Ky. 1909) 121 S. W. 954.

Sufficiency of demand; overcharge.—A written demand for the payment of taxes which calls for a greater amount than is legally due is not sufficient as a demand, to precede a distress, even as to one of the items which is legally due and is separately stated. Foote v. Blanchard, 4 Manitoba 460. And see McRae v. Corbett, 6 Manitoba 426.

Refusal to pay.—When a taxpayer is aware of the taxes charged against him, and their amount, and declares that he will not pay them, it is a waiver of any more formal demand. Marshall v. Hunt, 89 Ill. App. 634; Clark v. Smith, 31 Misc. (N. Y.) 490, 65 N. Y. Suppl. 646. So also his refusal to pay the tax unless a receipt is given to him therefor is equivalent to an absolute refusal to pay, and waives his right to a statutory notice of six days before distress. *Stiles v. Intangible property—Judgment.—Distress for the collection of taxes is not a judicial process, and hence, in the absence of a statute, only such property can be distrained as is tangible and capable of seizure and sale. Acme Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Hinkley, 23 S. D. 509, 122 N. W. 482, holding that a judgment in favor of a taxpayer, although personal property, is intangible and cannot be taken or levied on in distress proceedings to recover taxes owing by the judgment creditor.

Part interest in vessel.—Where one owns a one-sixteenth interest in a vessel, and has failed to pay his taxes on such interest, the collector cannot take possession of such vessel and sell it for such arrears of taxes under the statute authorizing distraint. Cuyahoga County v. Benham, 18 Ohio Cir. Ct. 862, 9 Ohio Cir. Dec. 847.

purchased by him after the attaching of a lien for taxes against the former owner,<sup>7</sup> and so also in some states as to the goods of a tenant or occupant of the premises.<sup>8</sup> But property which is in the custody of the law cannot thus be taken.<sup>9</sup>

d. Proceedings on Distress. In regard to the quantity and value of property to be seized on a distress warrant, the collector must exercise a sound discretion, so as to secure satisfaction of the demand with the least loss and inconvenience to the debtor; but if he takes such an amount of property as to be excessive and oppressive, his action is illegal.<sup>10</sup> He must take actual possession of the property where that is physically possible, a constructive or symbolic seizure being permitted only in cases where the property is not susceptible of manual seizure.<sup>11</sup> The costs and fees of such a proceeding are regulated by statute.<sup>12</sup> Property illegally seized may be recovered in replevin, the burden of proof being on the claimant,<sup>13</sup> or the distress may be withdrawn on payment of the taxes and costs.<sup>14</sup> The officer's return on a distress warrant is prima facie evidence in his favor.<sup>15</sup>

5. SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY — a. Conditions Essential to Legal Sale —

(1) IN GENERAL. To justify an officer in selling personal property for taxes he must have a legal and sufficient warrant,<sup>16</sup> for taxes which remain due and unpaid,<sup>17</sup> and which are chargeable to the person whose property is to be sold,<sup>18</sup> and the property to be sold must be in his possession or subject to a lien for the taxes.<sup>19</sup> If the law requires him to keep the property distrained for a certain number of days before selling, in order to give the owner an opportunity to redeem, the provision is mandatory,<sup>20</sup> although he may begin his advertisement of the sale within that time, provided the sale is not prematurely made.<sup>21</sup>

(II) NOTICE OF SALE. Whatever notice the statute requires as preliminary to a sale of chattels for taxes must be given, in at least substantial compliance with the law's directions; without this the sale is void.<sup>22</sup> But defects or irregularities in the notice not calculated to mislead or in any way to prejudice the rights of the owner do not vitiate the proceedings.<sup>23</sup>

b. Time, Place, and Conduct of Sale. The sale must take place at the time appointed by law or specified in the notice; if held either earlier or later, it will be irregular if not absolutely void,<sup>24</sup> although it may be adjourned from time to time for sufficient cause.<sup>25</sup> It must also be held at the place where the property was seized or where the delinquent owner resides, if so directed in the statute.<sup>26</sup> The officer must stop when he has sold enough property to satisfy the taxes and costs; if he continues, he becomes a trespasser as to the excess and the sale is void.<sup>27</sup> So also if he sells property in lots which should have been offered as separate articles.<sup>28</sup> But inadequacy of price, without fraud, is not sufficient to vitiate the sale.<sup>29</sup> In other particulars, not specially covered by the statute, the sale is to be governed by the same rules which apply to sales under executions on judgments.<sup>30</sup>

c. Return of Sale. The officer making the sale should make such return of his doings under the warrant or execution as the law requires;<sup>31</sup> and the return is presumed to be true and correct in all particulars until it is successfully contradicted by evidence.<sup>32</sup>

d. Rights and Liabilities of Purchasers. Any person may become the purchaser at such a sale who is under no legal or contractual duty to pay the taxes for which the sale is made.<sup>33</sup> He is not bound to see to the strict regularity of all the proceedings, but is protected by the warrant, if fair and regular on its face,

(1) RIGHT OF ACTION IN GENERAL. As a tax is not a debt in the ordinary meaning of that word,<sup>37</sup> it is generally held that no action will lie for its recovery, that is, that a suit at law cannot be maintained against the taxpayer unless a statute authorizes such an action.<sup>38</sup> Such a provision, however, is now quite

Where no statutory remedy provided.—It is the doctrine of some of the cases that where a statute imposes taxes but makes no provision whatever for their collection, it must be presumed that the legislature intended that they should be collected by suit, and consequently an action will lie as at common law. See Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 546; State v. New York, etc., R. Co., 60 Conn. 326, 22 Atl. 765; Territory v. Reyburn, McCahon (Kan.) 134; Irwin's Succession, 33 La. Where statutory remedy not declared exclusive.—Some of the decisions go much further than this, and hold that an action common in the revenue laws of the states,<sup>39</sup> and such statutory authorization of suit may be made retroactive,<sup>40</sup> and may apply to taxes on omitted property or to taxes of previous years.<sup>41</sup> As to the form of action, if the suit is brought as at common law, it should be in assumpsit, but if on the statute, either debt or case.<sup>42</sup>

(II) EXCLUSIVENESS OF STATUTORY REMEDIES. It is held in some states that where the statute creates and prescribes a particular remedy for the collection of delinquent taxes, it is exclusive, and therefore prohibits the maintenance of an action at law.<sup>43</sup> But exceptions to this rule are sometimes made where at law may be maintained for the recovery of taxes, although the statute provides a special remedy for their collection, provided this statutory remedy is not in terms made exclusive. Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 546; Burlington v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 41 Iowa 134; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39 Iowa 56; State v. Southern Steamship Co., 13 La. Ann. 497; *Dugan v. Promise of taxpayer.—Where the taxpayer promises the collector, on a good consideration, to pay the amount of the tax, it seems that an action may be maintained on this promise. Burr v. Wilcox, 13 Allen (Mass.) 269. But compare Brule County v. King, 11 S. D. 294, 77 N. W. 107.

the statutory remedy is not adequate,<sup>44</sup> where it is such as cannot be enforced in the particular case,<sup>45</sup> and where it has been exhausted without satisfaction of the taxes.<sup>46</sup>

(III) SUITS IN EQUITY. The return of a tax warrant unsatisfied has sometimes been held sufficient ground for a proceeding in equity to enforce payment of the tax;<sup>47</sup> but as a general rule, the powers of the court of chancery cannot be invoked in matters of this kind except upon grounds of fraud, trust, or some other well-recognized head of equity jurisdiction.<sup>48</sup>

(IV) ACTIONS TO ENFORCE LIEN. A court of equity has inherent jurisdiction of proceedings to enforce a tax lien independently of any statute.<sup>49</sup> If personal property subject to such a lien is in the possession of a third person, the proper officer may maintain replevin to recover it,<sup>50</sup> and if it has been sold, he may proceed in equity to charge the proceeds of sale with the tax lien.<sup>51</sup>

But compare Anniston v. Southern R. Co., 112 Ala. 557, 20 So. 915; Howard v. Houston, 59 Tex. 76. And see cases cited supra, note 38. In Massachusetts the remedies which the statutes provide for the collection of a tax are cumulative, and a tax collector, proving a claim for unpaid taxes in bankruptcy proceedings against the bankrupt, does not waive any right created for his benefit under the bankrupt's common-law assignment for the benefit of creditors in trust to pay preferred claims, including taxes. Boston v. Turner, 201 Mass. 190, 87 N. E. 634.

Back taxes.—In Mississippi, construing Code (1906), § 4256, providing that every lawful tax is a debt due by the person owning the property and may be recovered, and section 4740, providing that if, after the fiscal year in which taxes become due, the revenue agent discovers that property has not been assessed, he shall notify the tax collector, who shall assess it, and if the assessment is approved, and no appeal is taken, and the taxes are not paid within thirty days, the property, if realty, shall be ordered sold, as provided by section 4367, it was held that section 4256 provides a more effective remedy by which the essential nature of the obligation as for taxes is changed to that of debts and applies to back taxes and the method provided by section 4740 for collecting back taxes is not exclusive. Delta, etc., Land Co. v. Adams, 93 Miss. 340, 48 So. 190.

Right to forfeit corporate charter.—Although a state has the right to have the charter of a domestic corporation declared forfeited on its failure to pay taxes, this fact is no bar to the right of the state to bring a creditor's suit for the taxes, the forfeiture being a penalty which the state may insist on or waive at its election. State v. Hirsch, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 40 (failure to collect taxes by ordinary method due to defendant's fraudulent representations). And see Adams v. Stonewall Mfg. Co., 80 Miss. 94, 31 So. 544. Under Mass. Rev. Laws (1902), c. 13, § 32, a tax collector may sue in equity to enforce a trust for unpaid taxes created by a common-law assignment for benefit of creditors in trust for the payment of preferred claims, including taxes; the word "action" as used in said section meaning the pursuit of a right in a court of justice, without regard to the form of legal proceedings. Boston v. Turner, 201 Mass. 190, 87 N. E. 634. The fact that Miss. Code (1906), § 4256, provides for a recovery of taxes by "action," does not confine the remedy to courts of law, in view of sections 4738, 4742, and 4743, giving the revenue agent authority to sue in either a court of law or equity. Delta, etc., Land Co. v. Adams, 93 Miss. 340, 48 So. 190.

Suit to enjoin sale of land and for personal decree.—In Mississippi a bill in equity will lie to restrain the sale of land until taxes thereon are paid and for a personal decree for the taxes. Delta, etc., Land Co. v. Adams, 93 Miss. 340, 48 So. 190. In such a suit, where an injunction is granted, and on the hearing on the merits a decree for the taxes is rendered, the injunction should be dissolved, as the decree, when properly enrolled, establishes a lien for the taxes. Delta, etc., Land Co. v. Adams, supra.

(V) AUTHORITY OF PARTICULAR OFFICERS. The statutes usually designate the particular state or municipal officer who shall have authority to institute and prosecute suits for the recovery of delinquent taxes; and where this is the case such an action will not lie in the name of any other officer.<sup>52</sup>

(VI) JOINER AND CONSOLIDATION. Taxes levied for different years or other fiscal periods are distinct causes of action, and can be united in one suit only under circumstances which would justify such joinder in the case of other liabilities, or when it is so directed by the statute.<sup>53</sup> The same rule applies to taxes due to different treasuries, as to the state and a county, to a county and a school-district, or to a county and town.<sup>54</sup> So also the taxes due from the same owner on separate parcels of land should be sued for in as many separate suits, but these may be consolidated on motion, and it is generally proper to do so.<sup>55</sup>

(VII) PERSONS LIABLE TO SUIT. The suit should be brought against the person who is directly and primarily liable for the payment of the tax,<sup>56</sup> and this is ordinarily the one to whom the property was assessed, although he may have parted with the title in the mean time, no personal liability attaching to the purchaser unless by force of a statute.<sup>57</sup> If death or insolvency intervenes, the action may be against the personal representatives or assignee of the taxpayer.<sup>58</sup>

In case of a private corporation, the suit should be against the corporation as such, and not against the directors or any officer.<sup>59</sup> Proceedings may be taken against a non-resident owner, but only so far as to make the property assessed liable to the satisfaction of the tax, not to impose on him a personal liability.<sup>60</sup>

b. Conditions Precedent — (I) IN GENERAL. It is always essential to the maintenance of the action that there shall have been a proper assessment of the property and such a failure on the part of the owner to pay the tax as constitutes a legal default;<sup>61</sup> and also, in some states, a proper return, certification, and filing of the delinquent list,<sup>62</sup> an authorization of the suit to be given by some superior officer, which may include his audit and settlement of the claim,<sup>63</sup> and sometimes the issue and return unsatisfied of a tax execution or distress warrant.<sup>64</sup> Any other conditions precedent imposed by the local statute must of course be observed or the suit will fail.<sup>65</sup>

(II) DEMAND. If the statute requires a demand upon the taxpayer and his refusal to pay to precede the institution of an action against him, it is mandatory; and this rule is sometimes applied in the absence of a statute requiring it,<sup>66</sup> although not invariably.<sup>67</sup>

c. Jurisdiction and Venue. A suit for the recovery of taxes must be brought in the court, if any, specially invested by statute with jurisdiction for that purpose;<sup>68</sup> and where there is such a grant of special jurisdiction, the ordinary limita-

Removal from precinct.—Where a statute gave a right of action to the tax collector in his own name against any citizen who should remove out of his precinct without paying his taxes this was held to warrant a suit against a person who left the precinct in the circumstances mentioned, although he intended to return at some future time (Houghton v. Davenport, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 235), but not against one who had removed from the precinct before the tax was assessed, although after it was voted (Ware v. Sherburne First Parish, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 267).

68. See the statutes of the different states. And see the following cases;

tion of the jurisdiction of the particular court to suits involving a certain minimum sum does not apply.<sup>69</sup> Where the taxes to be recovered are assessed on real estate the action should ordinarily be brought in the county where the land lies;<sup>70</sup> but personal taxes should be sued for where defendant resides,<sup>71</sup> and there may a change of venue if the suit is begun in the wrong place.<sup>72</sup>

d. Defenses — (I) IN GENERAL. The statutory rule in some states, and the general tendency of the courts in others, is to exclude such defenses as do not affect the substantial justice of the tax itself.<sup>73</sup> But defendant may always plead want of authority in the officer bringing the suit,<sup>74</sup> or payment of the tax or anything equivalent thereto,<sup>75</sup> or a former recovery.<sup>76</sup> Where an owner of property seeks to enjoin the collection of a tax he must pay the amount legally due before he can have affirmative relief against that which is illegal;<sup>77</sup> but when it is sought to enforce the payment of a tax against him he may defend, and judgment will be rendered only for the amount shown to be legally due.<sup>78</sup>

(II) INVALIDITY OR IRREGULARITY OF PRIOR PROCEEDINGS. A suit for taxes may be resisted on the ground that the tax in question is unconstitutional or otherwise illegal,<sup>79</sup> or that the action of the assessors was without jurisdiction because either the particular person or the particular property was exempt or beyond their territorial authority.<sup>80</sup> But no defense can be founded on mere irregularities, errors, defects, or omissions of statutory duty, either in the assess-

And even a prior sale of the land for the taxes is no defense to the suit when such sale was void because held under an unconstitutional statute. McIntosh v. People, 93 Ill. 540. ment or in the proceedings which followed it, up to the commencement of the suit, which do not affect the substantial liability of the defendant to pay the tax,<sup>81</sup> unless they amount to a deprivation of his right to be heard in opposition to the assessment, its legality, or its amount.<sup>82</sup>

(III) UNEQUAL OR EXCESSIVE VALUATION. It is no proper defense to a suit for the recovery of taxes that there were inequalities in the assessment of property,<sup>83</sup> or that the assessment of defendant's property was excessive or based on an overvaluation,<sup>84</sup> unless it can be shown that it was fraudulent;<sup>85</sup> for his remedy against a mistake or injustice of this kind is by appeal to the board of equalization or other reviewing body,<sup>86</sup> and his failure to avail himself of such remedy estops him from interposing the same objections in a suit for the taxes,<sup>87</sup>

unless he can show that he was deprived of the hearing to which he was entitled or that he had a perfectly valid excuse for failing to claim it.<sup>88</sup> To make a defense of double taxation available, defendant must show that he has paid one of the taxes.<sup>89</sup>

(iv) SET-OFF OR COUNTER-CLAIM. The general rule is that a set-off or counter-claim cannot be interposed in an action for the recovery of delinquent taxes.<sup>90</sup>

(v) LIMITATION OF ACTIONS. No statute of limitations runs against the right of the state to collect its taxes, unless expressly made applicable;<sup>91</sup> but in respect to municipalities, and also the state when included within the statute, the ordinary period of limitations applicable to "liabilities founded on statute" or to claims not specially enumerated may be pleaded in defense to a suit for the recovery of taxes,<sup>92</sup> unless there is a statute specifically prescribing the period of limitations for suits of this class, which, in that case, would alone be applicable.<sup>93</sup> The statute begins to run from the date of the assessment of the taxes,<sup>94</sup> or from the time of delinquency, that is, the expiration of the time allowed the property-

Exemption—Answer or rejoinder.—In an action against a bank to collect taxes, a claim that United States bonds held by the bank were exempt should be set up in the answer, instead of the rejoinder, since it is a defense pro tanto to the cause of action set up in the petition. *Citizens' Nat. Verification of answer see Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401.

Demurrer see Robinson v. Grant, 119 Iowa 573, 93 N. W. 586.

Allegations as to preliminary proceedings.—The denial of knowledge or information, as to the allegations of the complaint reladisclaim all interest in the property upon which he was assessed for the taxes sought to be collected.<sup>22</sup>

(III) ISSUES, PROOF, AND VARIANCE. The proof will be confined to the matters distinctly put in issue by the pleadings,<sup>23</sup> rejecting immaterial allegations and surplusage.<sup>24</sup> But as to any facts essential to the validity of the tax, the liability of defendant thereto, or the amount due, a variance between the pleadings and the proof will be fatal to the case.<sup>25</sup>

g. Evidence — (1) PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF. Plaintiff, whether it be the state, a municipality, or the tax collector, must first prove a levy and assessment of the tax in question,<sup>26</sup> and defendant's liability by reason of his ownership of the property assessed or otherwise,<sup>27</sup> both of which facts may ordinarily be proved, prima facie at least, by the production of the assessment roll or the delinquent list, aided by the presumption of the correctness of acts performed by public officers in the line of their duty.<sup>28</sup> But when these matters are established, defendant must assume the burden of proving any illegality, defect, or ground of non-liability on which he relies to defeat the action.<sup>29</sup>

tive to the various steps in the tax proceedings raises no issue, such matters being of record and open to public inspection. McLean v. Julien Electric Co., 19 N. Y. Suppl. 906, 28 Abb. N. Cas. 249.

The fact that several different methods of valuation or assessment are stated in an action to recover a tax does not make a case for an election, the proper practice being a motion to strike out the allegations as to the improper methods alleged. Vanceburg, etc., Road Co. v. Maysville, etc., R. Co., (Ky. 1901) 63 S. W. 749.

Action against receiver.—A rule may issue against the receiver of a railroad for the payment of taxes due, where the answer of the receiver only shows that it is not convenient to pay the taxes and also operate the road. Athens County v. Dale, 60 Ohio St. 180, 53 N. E. 958.

22. State v. Central Pac. R. Co., 20 Nev. 372, 22 Pac. 237. Since Nev. Comp. Laws, § 1124, in defining what defenses may be made in tax suits, when title to the property is denied, provides that defendant must deny all interest at the time of assessment, a defense that the property belonged to another when the county board of equalization increased the valuation was not available where defendant failed to allege that at the time of assessment the property was not its property. State v. Carson, etc., R. Co., 29 Nev. 487, 91 Pac. 932.

Proof of actual value.—In an action to recover omitted taxes, where it appears that notes and bonds held by a taxpayer had been returned for taxation for several years at less than their face value, the burden is on the state to show that their actual value was greater than the valuation as returned, since the presumption is that the assessor did his duty. *Com. v. (II) ADMISSIBILITY. The assessment roll or duplicate, the delinquent list, and tax bills properly made out are admissible in evidence to prove the facts appearing on the face of them,<sup>30</sup> as also the records of the board of equalization or review or the testimony of past members of such board,<sup>31</sup> and the taxpayer's schedule or inventory returned for the purpose of taxation may be evidence for or against him.<sup>32</sup> The ordinary rules for the admissibility of evidence are applicable to the proof of such facts as the value of property, the residence of defendant, or his liability to the particular tax,<sup>33</sup> as also to questions concerning the payment of the tax in question,<sup>34</sup> or plaintiff's authority to sue for it.<sup>35</sup>

(III) WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY. The assessment list or roll, when properly identified,<sup>36</sup> is prima facie evidence, and sufficient, until successfully impeached,

Parol evidence.—Neither the abstract of the individual list of a taxpayer directed by Vt. Pub. St. (1906) § 565, to be lodged with the town clerk by the listers, nor the completed grand list provided for by section 571, being required to show the different steps taken by the listers in making up the list of a recusant taxpayer pursuant to section 561, parol evidence was properly received, in an action for taxes for that purpose. Smith v. Stannard, 81 Vt. 319, 70 Atl. 568.

Irregularities as to notice of hearings by listers.—Vt. Pub. St. (1906) § 566, requiring notice of the place of hearing by listers of persons aggrieved by their appraisal to be posted in the town clerk's office and two other public places, on or before a designated date, is mandatory, and compliance therewith is essential to the validity of a grand list, and hence, there being no evidence, as to two of the notices, tending to show that they had been posted in time, or tending to show that any of the notices posted stated the place of hearing, it was error to receive the grand list in evidence in an action for taxes. *Smith v. Missouri.—State v. Merchants' Bank, 160 Mo. 640, 61 S. W. 676. In an action by the state to collect taxes assessed by the state board of equalization against a ferry company, it was error to exclude evidence offered by the state that the company owned all the stock of two railroad companies, and that all three were working in unison as one transportation company, although those facts were established by evidence subsequently admitted. *State v. to show the fact and amount of the assessment and defendant's liability thereto,<sup>37</sup> unless it shows on its face that the assessment was erroneously made,<sup>38</sup> and the official delinquent list is presumptive evidence that the tax remains due and unpaid.<sup>39</sup> Other matters in issue must be proved by such evidence as is considered sufficient in ordinary suits at law.<sup>40</sup>

h. Trial, Judgment, and Review — (i) TRIAL. With respect to the time of trial and the facts and findings necessary to support a judgment, the directions of the statutes must be carefully observed.<sup>41</sup> Where defendant denies the right to tax his property, all questions bearing upon that right may be inquired into.<sup>42</sup> Questions of fact, such as the place of defendant's residence, or an alleged device to escape taxation, must go to the jury.<sup>43</sup>

(ii) JUDGMENT — (A) In General. The judgment in an action for taxes must be based on a valid assessment,<sup>44</sup> and on pleadings sufficient in law to sustain it,<sup>45</sup> otherwise it may be set aside; but these requirements being fulfilled, it possesses all the ordinary attributes of a judgment,<sup>46</sup> is final and conclusive as to all supervisor that he made the tax roll, that he delivered it to the county treasurer, and that he obtained it from the latter's office for use upon the trial is sufficient identification to justify its introduction in evidence. And see State v. Chicago R. Co., 165 Mo. 597, 65 S. W. 989.

the matters in issue and decided,<sup>47</sup> and cannot be impeached in any collateral proceeding.<sup>48</sup> If the action is against several defendants, some of whom were improperly joined in the assessment, or who are otherwise not liable to the tax, they will be omitted from the judgment.<sup>49</sup> The judgment should be for the whole amount due, and may contain such provisions for its enforcement as the statutes may authorize.<sup>50</sup> If part of the tax claimed is shown to be illegal, but is readily separable from the rest, judgment may be given for the remainder.<sup>51</sup> Statutes sometimes authorize the court, in proceedings to enforce payment of personal property taxes, to dismiss the proceedings in its discretion, on such terms as shall be just, where it is satisfied that the person taxed is unable to pay the taxes.<sup>52</sup>

(B) Recovery of Interest. Delinquent taxes do not bear interest unless it is expressly so provided by statute.<sup>53</sup> But where interest is allowed by law, it is recoverable in the same proceedings which are brought for the collection of the taxes and as a part of the same;<sup>54</sup> and the judgment in a tax suit will bear interest from the date of its rendition the same as other judgments.<sup>55</sup>

(c) Costs and Fees. An unsuccessful defendant in a tax suit is ordinarily chargeable with the fees and expenses of officers in the proceedings to enforce the tax,<sup>56</sup> and generally with the costs of the action, provided a demand for payment of the tax was first made,<sup>57</sup> and in some states provision is also made by law for the payment of attorney's fees.<sup>58</sup> Whether or not the costs can be charged against the state or county, in a case where defendant prevails, depends entirely upon the local statute.<sup>59</sup>

(III) APPEAL AND ERROR. Where the law prescribes a particular procedure for reviewing a tax judgment, it is exclusive of other methods of review, such as certiorari, which would ordinarily be available.<sup>60</sup> On appeal, if it appears that the judgment is for a greater amount of taxes than could lawfully be levied, or includes an illegal item, it will be reversed or the illegal charge will be stricken out;<sup>61</sup> and on the other hand, if it omits items which it was the duty of the court to include, an appeal lies on behalf of the state.<sup>62</sup> The judgment will not be reversed for harmless or immaterial error, nor for errors cured by the subsequent course of proceedings.<sup>63</sup> An appeal-bond takes the place of the property assessed and releases the lien of the tax upon it.<sup>64</sup>

not ordinarily a primary remedy, but one which may be resorted to only in case the collector is unable to find property of the delinquent on which to levy an execution or distress.<sup>66</sup> Nor can a person be arrested who is not liable to taxation in the town in which the tax is assessed.<sup>67</sup> But a taxpayer lawfully assessed for taxes in the town in which he resided at the time may be followed by the collector of that town into another town, to which he afterward removed, and there arrested for non-payment of the tax.<sup>68</sup>

b. Warrant and Proceedings Thereon. A warrant for the arrest of a delinquent taxpayer must be issued by lawful authority,<sup>69</sup> and must conform at least substantially to the directions of the statute and contain what is essential to make it a lawful process.<sup>70</sup> It cannot be executed before the taxes become delinquent, that is, before the expiration of the full time allowed to the taxpayer to make voluntary payment; <sup>71</sup> but although the time for completing the collection of the taxes is specified in the warrant, it may be served later.<sup>72</sup> The officer must have the warrant with him at the time he effects the arrest, and it is immaterial that the delinquent does not demand its production.<sup>73</sup> Under the statutes as generally framed, this warrant is not a returnable process; <sup>74</sup> but the officer is required to leave a copy of it with the jailer and to certify thereon his doings with respect to the delinquent, and this certificate should contain the facts necessary to justify him in making the arrest and commitment.<sup>75</sup>

c. Liability of Officers. If the officer proceeds under an insufficient warrant, exacts illegal charges, or fails to comply strictly with the statute, he becomes Sufficiency of complaint.—A proceeding under Conn. Gen. St. (1902) § 2395, as amended by Pub. Acts (1907), p. 619, c. 50, authorizing the commitment of persons failing to pay military taxes, etc., is a special statutory proceeding, and is not an action governed by ordinary rules of pleading in civil or criminal cases, and its purpose is not to enable the tax collector to obtain a judgment for the amount of the taxes, nor to require him to establish before a court the validity of the same; and a complaint under said statute, which describes complainant as the tax collector of a town, duly appointed and qualified, and that defendant has failed to pay the military commutation taxes assessed against him for the annual town taxes of designated years, which taxes became due on designated dates, that payment thereof has been legally demanded, and that defendant has failed to pay the same, is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction to order the commitment of defendant for non-payment of such taxes. Atwater v. O'Reilly, 81 Conn. 367, 71 Atl. 505.

liable as a trespasser.<sup>76</sup> This is the case where he fails to levy on personal property which is available for the purpose,<sup>77</sup> or where he does not comply with the law requiring him to deposit a certified copy of his warrant with the jailer.<sup>78</sup>

d. Release or Discharge. One imprisoned for non-payment of taxes may obtain his release on giving bond,<sup>79</sup> or on the poor debtor's oath;<sup>80</sup> but he is not entitled as of right to the writ of personal replevin and to be discharged thereon,<sup>81</sup> or to be released simply on his production of sufficient property to pay the tax;<sup>82</sup> nor can he take advantage of an order releasing the collector from his personal liability to the town for the taxes in question.<sup>83</sup>

e. Defenses, Objections, and Review. On appeal from an order committing defendant for failure to pay his tax, or other review of the proceedings, he may show that the collector made no sufficient effort to levy on personal property,<sup>84</sup> or that defendant was not liable to be charged with the tax in question;<sup>85</sup> but he cannot object that the levy or assessment was excessive, at least if he made no effort to have it corrected at the proper time.<sup>86</sup> of taxes,<sup>89</sup> and in others the legislature has restricted the scope of judicial authority in these matters by various other provisions.<sup>90</sup> But independently of these statutes, the courts are always disposed to remit the complaining taxpayer to such remedies as are provided for him by the common law or by the acts governing the proceedings in tax cases,<sup>91</sup> and they refuse to stop the process of collection on allegations of mere irregularity or of unfairness not involving a violation of the fundamental law.<sup>92</sup> The courts of the United States are not without power to enjoin the collection of taxes levied by the authority of the states, but they will proceed with great caution, and will grant such relief only when it appears that the tax is illegal, that the taxpayer has no remedy by the ordinary processes of law, and that there are special circumstances bringing the case under some recognized head of equity jurisdiction.<sup>93</sup>

(III) INVALID LEVY. A court of equity will not issue its writ of injunction simply because some formality or legal requirement in levying a tax is wanting, if it is levied for an authorized purpose and by the persons designated by law;<sup>6</sup> but if officers or individuals assume, without authority, the right to levy a tax, or, having the right to levy a tax for a specified purpose, assume to levy a tax for an unauthorized purpose or in excess of the legal limit, equity may interpose by injunction.<sup>7</sup> And so, where an exaction is demanded under the guise of taxation, but without any levy and assessment.<sup>8</sup>

(IV) DEFECTS IN ASSESSMENT. The collection of a tax will not be enjoined on account of defects, mistakes, irregularities, or omissions of statutory requirements in the process of assessing, listing, and valuing the property, which are not of such a nature as to affect the substantial justice of the tax itself or work irreparable injury to the rights of the complainant.<sup>9</sup> Nor can a taxpayer have

(VII) DEFECTS OR ERRORS IN PROCEEDINGS FOR COLLECTION. An injunction will not be granted on account of defects in the process under which the collecting officers act, or in their official authority, or on account of errors or irregularities in their proceedings in respect to levying on or distraining property,<sup>23</sup> except where the property of one person is levied on to pay the taxes of another,<sup>24</sup> or where the taxes had been fully paid and discharged before the levy.<sup>25</sup>

b. Special Grounds of Equity Jurisdiction — (I) IN GENERAL. A court of chancery will not ordinarily take jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin the enforcement of a tax unless the complaint shows, in addition to the illegality or injustice of the tax demanded, some special ground of equity jurisdiction,<sup>26</sup> such as the avoidance of a multiplicity of suits,<sup>27</sup> or the prevention or removal of a cloud on the title to realty,<sup>28</sup> or fraud, accident, or mistake,<sup>29</sup> or irreparable injury to the complainant which would result from the threatened proceedings for the collection of the tax. are some cases in which such an action would not be an adequate remedy, as where the property in question possesses a peculiar intrinsic value not to be estimated in money,<sup>31</sup> or where the sale of the property on execution or distress would interfere with the business of the complainant or interrupt the exercise of a valuable franchise or damage his credit beyond repair.<sup>32</sup>

(II) INADEQUACY OF REMEDY AT LAW — (A) In General. Equity will not take jurisdiction of a suit of this character if there is a plain and sufficient remedy at law for the injuries complained of or threatened.<sup>33</sup> But if the law affords no remedy, or if the only remedy available would not be adequate, it is ground for the interference of equity.<sup>34</sup> Where the taxpayer can pay the amount demanded

Jurisdiction depending on absence of remedy at law.—In a proceeding in equity, the objection that there is a plain and adequate remedy at law is jurisdictional, and a bill for injunction to restrain the collection of a tax must be dismissed where such a remedy exists, notwithstanding the objection is not in any way raised by the defendant. Hoey v. Coleman, 46 Fed. 221.

Effect of prior adjudication.—The existence of an adequate remedy at law cannot successfully be urged to defeat ancillary relief by way of injunction in aid of a decree enjoining the collection of state taxes, since that question was foreclosed by the original decree. *Gunter v. Replevin.—Where proceedings are pending for the sale of personality to collect an invalid tax, injunction will lie to restrain the sale and the enforcement of the tax, although the complainant could recover the property in replevin, since he is also entitled to a remedy to prevent any further attempt to collect the tax, which could not be obtained in replevin. Spencer v. Wheaton, 14 Iowa 38.

of him, under a protest, and then maintain an action at law to recover back the whole amount paid, or so much of it as was illegally exacted, this is ordinarily regarded as an adequate remedy.<sup>35</sup> And so is an action of trespass against the officer seizing and selling property to pay the tax,<sup>36</sup> unless it is shown that a judgment against him could not be collected by reason of his insolvency or otherwise.<sup>37</sup>

(B) Remedy in Assessment Proceedings. Where the statutes provide a board of equalization or review or other revisory body, with power to revise, correct, and equalize assessments, a taxpayer who feels himself aggrieved by any error, inequality, or overcharge in his assessment which that board has power to correct must seek his remedy by proper proceedings before the board, and if he fails to do so he cannot have relief by an injunction to restrain the collection of the tax.<sup>38</sup>

Code (1902), § 413, giving a taxpayer the right to pay taxes under protest and sue a county treasurer for taxes supposed to have been illegally paid, does not provide an adequate remedy against alleged illegal license-taxes imposed on a corporation by the license tax act of 1904 (24 St. at L. p. 462), as amended by the act of 1905 (24 St. at L. p. 827), which taxes are not under the control of any county treasurer, but are assessed on the books of the state controller-general and are payable directly into the state treasury.

But where no action lies to recover back the tax if once paid, equity has jurisdiction to determine its legality and to enjoin its collection if illegal. Pacific Express Co. v. Seibert, 44 Fed. 310 [affirmed in 142 U. S. 339, 12 S. Ct. 250, 35 L. ed. 1035]. So in a state where an action to recover taxes paid will lie only when they have been paid under duress of a distraint, such remedy is not an adequate one where the taxing officers, instead of distraining, may bring an action at law to collect the tax; for a remedy at law cannot be adequate if its adequacy depends on the will of the opposing party. *Stone v. But this principle does not apply where the assessment was made without jurisdiction, as where the complainant was not the owner of the property assessed to him or had no taxable property within the county;<sup>39</sup> nor does it apply where his objections to the tax are of a character which the reviewing board would have no jurisdiction to consider,<sup>40</sup> or where it is certain, from the publicly known and fixed attitude of the board with respect to applications of the kind, that complainant's representations would have been disregarded and his application refused.<sup>41</sup> On the same principle, where the law provides a remedy for the review of assessments by appeal, certiorari, or motion, injunction cannot be granted to stop the enforcement of the tax.<sup>42</sup>

(III) AVOIDING MULTIPLICITY OF SUITS. A court of equity may enjoin the collection of an illegal tax when such action will prevent a multiplicity of suits which otherwise would be brought.<sup>43</sup> This may be the case where the property of the complainant, all equally affected by the same tax, is distributed through various taxing districts, or where the tax, if paid, would be divided up among various counties or cities, necessitating an action against each for its recovery.<sup>44</sup>

Other remedy available.—The argument that a multiplicity of suits may be prevented will not induce a court of equity to take jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin a tax where the complainant has failed to pursue the remedy afforded him by the statutes, by appealing to a board of review and ultimately to the courts. Also it is generally held that where the ground of objection or illegality is one which equally affects a large number of taxpayers, so that many individual actions at law would be brought if payment of the tax were enforced, this is ground for equity to interpose and determine the fundamental question in one action for injunction.<sup>45</sup> Some of the decisions, however, hold that this should not be permitted where the persons affected by the tax have no joint or common interest in any piece of property assessed, as they would not be allowed to join in a suit for injunction but would have to file as many separate bills.<sup>46</sup>

(IV) PREVENTING CLOUD ON TITLE. Injunction will lie to restrain the collection of an illegal tax which is a lien on real estate and creates a cloud on the title.<sup>47</sup> But this is only where the illegality or defect is not apparent but could only be shown by extrinsic evidence; if the tax is on its face unconstitutional or otherwise invalid it constitutes no cloud on the title and there is no ground for the interference of equity.<sup>48</sup> So where, by the law of the particular state, a tax deed is no evidence of title, there is no reason for equity to interpose and prevent a sale;<sup>49</sup> nor can such interposition be justified where a levy has already been made on personal property for the satisfaction of the tax, as in that case the cloud, if any, is presumptively removed.<sup>50</sup>

c. Proceedings and Relief — (1) JURISDICTION AND RIGHT OF ACTION. A suit to enjoin the collection of taxes should be brought in a court having jurisdiction under the laws of the state.<sup>51</sup> To enable the court to take jurisdiction

venience to the government would be much more serious if equity should thus interpose than if the complainants were left to their legal remedy, an action against the assessor.

it is essential that there shall have been an assessment of the tax in question,<sup>52</sup> and that the tax shall be due and its forcible collection threatened, otherwise the action is premature.<sup>53</sup> On the other hand, such a proceeding is not within the statute of limitations, although the right of action may be lost by unreasonable delay amounting to laches.<sup>54</sup> The mere fact that a complainant accepted and recorded a deed purporting to convey to it lands, the legal and equitable title to which were both in fact in the United States, does not estop it to maintain a suit in equity to enjoin the collection of taxes levied on said lands by the taxing officers of the county who had actual knowledge of the condition of the title and of the claim of complainant that the land was not taxable and were not misled by such deed or record.<sup>55</sup> And the fact that a complainant was not the owner of lands at the time of an illegal levy of taxes thereon does not deprive him of the right to maintain a suit in equity to enjoin the enforcement of such taxes by a sale of the lands after he has become the owner.<sup>56</sup>

(II) PAYMENT OR TENDER OF TAXES DUE. Equity will not enjoin the collection of taxes, any portion of which is legal and valid or admitted to be due, except upon the payment or tender of that portion.<sup>57</sup> But of course this does not apply where the assessment is wholly and entirely void,<sup>58</sup> nor will it be made a condition of relief that taxes should be paid on property of the complainant which is taxable but which has not been assessed.<sup>59</sup> And it has been held that where suit is brought to enjoin that part of certain taxes only that are claimed to be invalid, complainants are not required to pay the taxes not sought to be enjoined as a condition precedent to their right to sue.<sup>60</sup> This condition is complied with by a tender in good faith of the amount believed to be justly due; the fact that the court finds a greater amount to be due is no cause for dismissing the bill, but only affects the question of costs.<sup>61</sup>

61. Landes Estate Co. v. Clallam County, 19 Wash. 569, 53 Pac. 670; Chicago, etc., R.

(III) PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION. A preliminary injunction to restrain the collection of the tax may issue where a strong case against its legality is made out by the complaint and affidavits and where the danger of forcible proceedings against complainant's property is imminent and grave injury is likely to result.<sup>62</sup> But this step will not be taken where the legality of the tax is plausibly defended and there is no special urgency to relieve the complainant and the public revenues would be tied up in such a way as to cause serious public inconvenience.<sup>63</sup>

(IV) PARTIES — (A) In General. As a general rule a bill for an injunction can be brought only by a taxpayer,<sup>64</sup> and only by one whose own property is affected by the tax in question, no one being permitted to enjoin the collection of taxes assessed against another.<sup>65</sup> Neither is it proper for several persons to join in the bill who have no community of interest nor any common ground of objection to the tax in question;<sup>66</sup> although if the objection urged is one going to the legality of the tax in general, or to the validity of the entire assessment, and which affects all the taxpayers equally and in common, and which can be determined on a single issue with the like effect as to all concerned, it is proper for any number of taxpayers to unite in the suit,<sup>67</sup> in which case the bill must

A holder of bonds of a corporation secured by mortgage has no standing to enjoin the collection of taxes on the mortgaged property, unless where he alleges that the mortgagee refuses to bring the suit and joins him as a defendant. Bayles v. Dunn, 116 Fed. 185, 54 C. C. A. 549.

A partnership cannot enjoin the sale of the individual personal property of one partner for taxes due from the firm. Lyle v. Jacques, 101 Ill. 644.

But a mortgage of land does not change the title so as to debar the owner of the equity of redemption from suing to enjoin illegal taxes. Flint, etc., R. Co. v. Auditor-Gen., 41 Mich. 635, 2 N. W. 835. Compare, however, Sholes v. Omaha, 78 Nebr. 576, 111 N. W. 364, holding that after the purchase of mortgaged premises at foreclosure by the mortgagee the mortgagor cannot sue to restrain the collection of taxes levied after the execution of the mortgage, unless bound by a special covenant to pay such future assessments.

be filed in behalf of plaintiffs and all others similarly situated, this averment being essential.<sup>68</sup> All the officers who have any duty to perform in regard to the collection of the taxes should be made parties,<sup>69</sup> as also the municipal corporation which is to receive them;<sup>70</sup> and in addition it is proper to bring in any persons who are directly interested in the proceeds of the tax or for whose special benefit it was levied, as judgment or bond creditors of a municipality or a railroad aided by the tax.<sup>71</sup>

(B) Corporation and Stock-Holders. A corporation cannot maintain a suit to enjoin the collection of taxes assessed on the shares of stock held by its individual shareholders,<sup>72</sup> except where, by statute, it is primarily liable for the payment of such taxes, having the right to reimburse itself out of dividends or otherwise.<sup>73</sup> But it seems that in the reverse case a stock-holder may sue to enjoin taxes assessed on the stock of the corporation.<sup>74</sup>

(v) PLEADING — (A) In General. Whatever may be the complainant's ground of objection to the tax which he seeks to enjoin, he must allege it clearly and distinctly in his pleading, and not by way of inference or legal conclusions, but with a detailed statement of the facts on which he means to rely.<sup>75</sup> Thus, it is not sufficient to allege that the tax is "illegal" or "invalid," but the facts which show it to be so must be set forth.<sup>76</sup> The complaint must also show the amount of the tax assessed against plaintiff or demanded of him,<sup>77</sup> and if any part of it is admitted to be legal the amount thereof must be specifically stated.<sup>78</sup> Complainant must also show that the necessary authority to collect the tax is in the hands of the proper officer and that proceedings against him or his property are imminent,<sup>79</sup> and that they will cause him an irreparable injury, and as to this, he must state the facts showing what the injury will be and how and why it will result.<sup>80</sup> The same general rules, in respect to particularity and specific averments, apply also to the answer of defendant.<sup>81</sup> A complainant is not debarred from maintaining a suit to enjoin the enforcement of taxes illegally levied upon lands because its bill does not allege it to be the owner of such lands where no objection is taken to the pleading, and the proofs, taken by stipulation, establish its ownership.<sup>82</sup>

Showing illegal discrimination.—In a suit to enjoin a discriminating assessment of railroad property by a state commission, on the ground that there was an established rule by which all other property in the state was assessed at less than its actual value, where it is impossible to prove directly the adoption of such a rule by the assessing officers, it is competent for the complainant to establish its existence by inference from a uniform course of conduct, and for that purpose to introduce evidence of particular assessments and the value of the property assessed. Southern R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp Commission, 104 Fed. 700.

Showing fraudulent overvaluation.—In a suit to enjoin collection of taxes, the presumption of fraud that might arise from the fact that plaintiff's property is assessed at a higher valuation than a similar tract owned by another is not conclusive of overvaluation, in the light of evidence indicating rather that the latter property is under-assessed than that the former is over-assessed. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Pierce County, 55 Wash. 108, 104 Pac. 178.

Notice of raise of assessment.—Where the owner of land, in a suit to enjoin collection of taxes based on a raise of the assessment by the board of supervisors without proper dispensed with.<sup>86</sup> On the issues arising in a suit of this kind it is commonly proper to receive in evidence the original or duplicate assessment lists,<sup>87</sup> the records and minutes of official boards,<sup>88</sup> and, where necessary, the testimony of the assessors who made the assessment which is the subject of complaint.<sup>89</sup>

(VII) SCOPE OF INQUIRY. Any question bearing on the liability of the complainant to taxation or the amount of the taxes with which he is justly chargeable is a proper subject of inquiry;<sup>90</sup> but not the motives or reasons for levying the tax in question, unless it is charged to have been levied for an unlawful purpose,<sup>91</sup> nor the title of the assessing or collecting officers to their offices.<sup>92</sup> And it has been held that the court, in a suit by a railroad to enjoin the collection of taxes levied by local officers on money, cannot inquire into the evidence on which the state tax commissioners acted in assessing the property of the railroad, but must presume that the board discharged its duty and considered the money of the company in determining the valuation of the property.<sup>93</sup>

(VIII) DECREE AND RELIEF GRANTED. When a court of equity acquires jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin the collection of an illegal tax, it may settle fully the rights of the parties as to the entire subject-matter of the litigation.<sup>94</sup> If any separable portion of the tax is just and legal, only the remainder should be enjoined, not the whole; and the same rule applies where the tax as a whole is found to be excessive in amount.<sup>95</sup> But, subject to this rule, the court may so frame its decree as to give the successful complainant complete protection against any notice, exhibits the notice actually served, which does not comply with Ky. St. (1903) § 4122, he overcomes the presumption that proper notice was given, and defendant must overcome the presumption that this was the only notice given by showing that one was given by posting on the land, as required by statute. Ward v. Wentz, 130 Ky. 705, 113 S. W. 892.

Subsequent wrongful sale of property by defendant for taxes.—The court having acquired jurisdiction of an action to restrain enforcement of taxes against property exempt by law from taxation, the subsequent wrongful act of defendant in selling the property for the taxes will not deprive it of the power to grant such ultimate relief as plaintiff may be entitled to on such facts occurring during pendency of the suit and fully presented by the supplemental complaint. *Colorado Farm, etc., Co. v. attempt to enforce the tax or against any semblance of liability for it.<sup>96</sup> On the other hand, if the issues are found for the defendant municipality, it is entitled to a judgment for the sale of the property to pay the tax;<sup>97</sup> or if nothing is found but a defect in the tax proceedings, the case may be continued to enable the defendant to amend or cure it.<sup>98</sup> The matter of costs and attorney's fees is regulated by the local statute;<sup>99</sup> and in some states the law also provides for the imposition of a penalty, generally in the form of a heavy percentage, as damages for an unsuccessful attempt to enjoin the collection of taxes.<sup>1</sup>

3. ACTIONS FOR WRONGFUL ENFORCEMENT — a. Right of Action and Form of Remedy. A person aggrieved by the wrongful enforcement against his person or property of a tax illegally levied or for which he is not liable may have an action of assumpsit against the county or municipality,<sup>2</sup> or he may maintain an action for damages against the tax collector, or a purchaser from him, which may be, according to the local practice and the circumstances of the particular case, in the form of trover and conversion,<sup>3</sup> or trespass,<sup>4</sup> or, where he was placed under arrest, assault and false imprisonment;<sup>5</sup> or, under proper conditions, and in the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary, he may replevy the goods under seizure.<sup>6</sup>

b. Measure of Damages. Where property is unlawfully sold for taxes, or under circumstances rendering the officer a trespasser, the measure of damages in an action against him is the actual value of the property at the time of the sale, less the amount properly applied in payment of the tax,<sup>7</sup> or, according to some of the authorities, the amount of the bid, with a similar deduction.<sup>8</sup> Exemplary damages are not allowed.<sup>9</sup>

c. Parties and Proceedings. The declaration or complaint must contain the allegations essential to show plaintiff's right of action and the liability of the officer as a trespasser,<sup>10</sup> and plaintiff must assume the burden of proving the invalidity of the tax or of defendant's proceedings in its collection.<sup>11</sup> The officer's plea of justification need not allege compliance with each requirement of the statutes, but should show the liability of plaintiff or his property to the payment of the tax and defendant's authority to collect it.<sup>12</sup> The tax lists and other official documents are admissible in evidence and may be supplemented by testimony as to the essential facts.<sup>13</sup>

d. Justification of Officer Under Warrant. A tax warrant or execution, valid and regular on its face, protects the tax collector or other officer acting under it.<sup>14</sup> But when sued in trespass he must sustain the burden of showing his lawful authority.<sup>15</sup> And to this end he may plead his warrant or other process in justification of his official acts,<sup>16</sup> and to support such pleading, may introduce

XI. SALE OF LAND FOR DELINQUENT TAXES.<sup>19</sup>

A. Right or Power to Sell — 1. IN GENERAL. If lands are subject to taxation they may be made subject to sale for taxes, the power to tax involving the power to enforce payment in this manner.<sup>20</sup> But authority to sell real estate for delinquent taxes must be expressly conferred by statute and can be exercised only in the precise cases specified in the law,<sup>21</sup> and an act granting this authority will not apply to taxes already delinquent unless it is expressly made retroactive;<sup>22</sup>

17. Hood v. Judkins, 61 Mich. 575, 28 N. W. 689; Smith v. Mosher, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 786; Eldred v. Sexton, 5 Ohio 215; Goodwin v. Perkins, 39 Vt. 598.

18. Hoitt v. Burnham, 61 N. H. 620.

19. Tax-sale defined.—A sale on an execution, although issued on a judgment recovered for taxes, is not a sale for the non-payment of taxes, in the ordinary acceptation of that term. "A 'tax sale,' or, what is the same thing, a 'sale for the non-payment of taxes,' has a distinct and well-defined meaning. It means a sale made in a proceeding 'in rem,' and was so generally understood when the Homestead Law was enacted. It will be considered the phrase, a 'sale for the non-payment of taxes,' was employed in the statute in the sense it was commonly understood at the time, and that was, as has been seen, a sale made in a proceeding in rem, and not a sale on an execution issued on a judgment in personam." Douthett v. Winter, 108 Ill. 330, 334. A "tax-sale" is a sale made of property proceeded against by the state as belonging to someone other than itself, in enforcement of taxes due by that property and its owners. Gulf States Land, etc., Co. v. Wade, 51 La. Ann. 251, 260, 25 So. 105.

Proceedings are administrative not judicial.—The state or a municipality, in seizing and selling lands for the non-payment of taxes, acts administratively and not judicially, and hence it is within the constitutional power of the legislature to authorize and direct such sales to be made without a previous judgment or decree ordering it. Lucas v. Purdy, 142 Iowa 359, 120 N. W. 1063, 24 L. R. A. N. S. 1294; In re New York Protestant Episcopal Public School, 31 N. Y. 574; Nind v. Myers, 15 N. D. 400, 109 N. W. 335, 8 L. R. A. N. S. 157; League v. State, 93 Tex. 553, 57 S. W. 34. But compare State v. Sargent, 12 Mo. App. 228 [affirmed in 76 Mo. 557], holding that a sale under a judgment in a proceeding to collect back taxes was a judicial sale, the sale being made and tax deed executed by the sheriff under direction of the court. And see Wellshear v. Kelley, 69 Mo. 343. The overdue tax suit for the foreclosure of a tax lien, authorized by Ark. Acts (1881), p. 63, is a judicial proceeding, and the sale pursuant thereto is a judicial sale. Indiana, etc., Lumber, etc., Co. v. Milburn, 161 Fed. 531, 88 C. C. A. 473.

Concurrent remedies.—Proceedings for the sale of land for delinquent taxes are not precluded by the fact that the state or municipality may have another remedy or method of collection. Akers v. Burch, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 606; Masterson v. State, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 91, 42 S. W. 1003. But see Logan County v. Carnahan, 66 Nebr. 685, 92 N. W. 984, 95 N. W. 812.

Estoppel to enforce collection by sale.—In a case where the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia was applied to for a statement of the unpaid taxes on certain real estate, by one who did not disclose the object of the inquiry or state that he was about to purchase the land, it was held that the district was not estopped from making a sale of the property for unpaid taxes thereon, which had been omitted from the statement furnished on such request, although the applicant relied on the collector's statement in afterward purchasing the property. Elliot v. District of Columbia, 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 396. And see Diamond Coal Co. v. Fisher, 19 Pa. St. 267. But see supra, IX, A, 1, g, (II).

nor can the power be exercised after the end of the period of time limited by law for that purpose.<sup>23</sup> As to the authority vested in the officer making the sale, it is a naked power not coupled with an interest, and must be exercised in exact conformity with the law; a tax title is stricti juris, and its holder must be prepared to show full compliance with the directions of the statute.<sup>24</sup>

2. AUTHORITY OF MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS. A municipal corporation has no power or authority to sell land for non-payment of taxes unless this power be granted to it in express terms by statute and unless the power be deducible from a strict construction of the law; a general grant of authority, for example, to "assess and collect taxes" not being sufficient warrant for the sale and conveyance of lands for their non-payment.<sup>25</sup>

3. EFFECT OF CHANGE OF BOUNDARIES. Where land is assessed for taxes in a county, a subsequent change in the county boundaries, having the effect of transferring the land to another county, will not defeat the lien of the assessment or prevent the tax collector of the former county from enforcing the collection by sale of the land.<sup>26</sup>

4. STRICT COMPLIANCE WITH STATUTES REQUIRED. So far as regards provisions of law designed for the protection and security of the citizen, it is essential to the validity of a tax-sale of lands that there shall be a strict compliance with all the directions of the statute, both in relation to the observance of any conditions or prerequisites to the exercise of the power of sale, and to the conduct of the sale itself, as well as to the performance of conditions subsequent to the sale.<sup>27</sup>

But a more liberal rule is applied to those statutory provisions which are intended only for the convenience of officers or to promote system and despatch in the conduct of public business; as to these, a substantial compliance with the statute is sufficient.<sup>28</sup>

5. WHAT LAW GOVERNS. So far as concerns the essential elements of the power to sell land for taxes and the conservation of vested rights, such a sale is governed by the law in force at the time of the assessment;<sup>29</sup> but as regards the proceedings relating to the sale itself it is governed by the statute in force when the sale is made,<sup>30</sup> unless there is a saving clause as to pending proceedings.<sup>31</sup> Hence if the existing statute is repealed, the proceedings must be conducted under the new and not the old law;<sup>32</sup> and this is the case where the new statute makes a complete change in the method of collecting taxes or introduces a wholly new system,<sup>33</sup> although the various laws will be so construed, if possible, as to avoid repugnancy or repeal.<sup>34</sup>

B. Conditions Precedent — 1. DEMAND AND DEFAULT — a. Necessity in General. Where the statute requires a demand to be made upon the taxpayer for the payment of the taxes on his land, or a bill or statement to be rendered to him, there can be no valid sale of the land until this requirement has been fulfilled and the owner put in default by his failure to meet the demand,<sup>35</sup> nor until the delinquency shall have continued for the length of time prescribed by the statute before the sale is made.<sup>36</sup>

b. Effect of Payment. When the taxes upon a particular parcel of real estate have once been paid,<sup>37</sup> whether by the owner himself or by any other person entitled to make such payment,<sup>38</sup> to an officer authorized to receive them,<sup>39</sup> the

It will be presumed, if necessary to sustain a tax-sale of land in pursuance of a township treasurer's return of delinquent taxes, that personal demand for the taxes was made on resident owners. Dickison v. Reynolds, 48 Mich. 158, 12 N. W. 24.

Ground of refusal to pay immaterial.—The effect of a tax-sale on the title of the owner of the land is not changed by the fact that his refusal to pay the taxes assessed on it as part of a certain warrant was based on an honest, although erroneous, belief that it was within another warrant on which he paid the taxes. Wilson v. Marvin, 172 Pa. St. 30, 33 Atl. 275.

Effect of pendency of suit.—Where a state officer is suing a railroad company to recover the taxes assessed against it, for the purpose of obtaining an adjudication as to the validity of an exemption claimed by the company, the sheriff cannot, pending the suit, interfere by selling the property of the company for the taxes. Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. West, 78 Miss. 789, 29 So. 475.

37. Payment of taxes in general see supra, IX, A.

Presumption of payment from lapse of time.—After the lapse of more than thirty years, the taxes on land are presumed to have been paid, and if paid, a sale founded on them is invalid. McLaughlin v. Kain, 45 Pa. St. 113.

Satisfaction by levy on personalty.—Where personal property levied on and sufficient in value to pay the taxes on the land was lost solely through the negligence of the officer, the taxes will be held to have been paid and the land cannot be sold therefor. Campbell v. Wyant, 26 W. Va. 702.

38. Persons by whom payment of taxes may be made see supra, IX, A, 1, b.

Joint owners.—If land is owned by two persons as joint tenants or tenants in common, payment of the whole amount of the tax by either of them will destroy the power to sell the land, and this whether the land is assessed to that owner as an entirety or whether their several interests are separately assessed. Snodgrass v. Joliff, 59 W. Va. 292, 53 S. E. 151.

Payment by stranger.—If a stranger without title pays taxes on part of a tract of unseated land, without defining its location or boundaries, this will not defeat the title of a purchaser of such tract at tax-sale. Crum v. Burke, 25 Pa. St. 377.

39. To whom payment of taxes to be made see supra, IX, A, 1, d.

Authority of collector.—To prove payment of taxes it is not necessary to show that the collector was duly appointed; it is sufficient to show that he acted and was acknowledged as such. Smith v. Redford, 12 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 316.

lien of the tax is discharged, and all authority to sell the land is at an end, and a subsequent sale of the land for those taxes is void and passes no title.<sup>40</sup> This rule is applied, for example, where the receiving officer makes a mistake and credits the payment to a different tract of land,<sup>41</sup> or where the taxes are paid on a piece of property appearing on the tax roll by its legal and correct description but it is afterward sold under a different and incorrect description.<sup>42</sup> It is also held that the sale is void if made for the taxes of several years when the amount due for one or more of those years has been paid.<sup>43</sup> But the payment must be made before the sale; if made afterward it does not affect the purchaser's title, although it reduces the amount required to redeem.<sup>44</sup> It should also be observed that the general rule here stated is not admitted in some of the states, where the proceeding is by suit against the owner of the property and payment of the taxes is required to be set up as a defense before judgment, the doctrine being that actual payment of the taxes does not affect the jurisdiction of the court, and hence cannot invalidate the judgment or sale.<sup>45</sup>

c. Effect of Tender or Offer to Pay. A lawful tender of the tax on lands to the officer authorized to receive payment is equivalent to an actual payment, in so far that it divests the officer of authority to sell the land for such tax;<sup>46</sup> and the same rule applies where the owner, acting in good faith and with due diligence, offers or attempts to pay the taxes on his land, or pays all that he can ascertain to be due, and the offer or payment fails of its intended effect solely through the mistake or fault of the officer or in consequence of misleading information given by him.<sup>47</sup>

d. Estoppel to Deny Payment. The state is not estopped to enforce the collection of taxes by sale of the land by the fact that, when defendants purchased the land on which they were assessed, there was an erroneous entry on the list in the auditor's office to the effect that the taxes had been paid, nor by the fact that the auditor indorsed on their deed a statement that the taxes were paid.<sup>48</sup>

2. EXHAUSTION OF PERSONALTY — a. Where a tax deed fails to show that the personal property of the delinquent had been exhausted before the sale of his real estate, or that he had no such property, such deed, unless accompanied by proper evidence of that fact, is not admissible as evidence of title. Smith v. Kyler, 74 Ind. 575; Ward v. Montgomery, 57 Ind. 276.

Sale voidable but not void.—Some of the cases hold that where land is sold without first exhausting the personalty, although the sale is ineffectual to convey title, yet it will transfer to the purchaser the lien of the state and therefore is not absolutely void. Tax and penalties not released.—The failure of the collector to make the taxes out of available personal property will not save the delinquent owner from the penalty or release him from the tax. Foresman v. Chase, 68 Ind. 500.

Who may complain.—Only the taxpayer himself can complain of a sale of his real estate made without first having recourse several of the states, no such statute being in force, it is held that a tax-sale of land may be made for the taxes due on it, without reference to the question whether or not there is personalty which could have been seized and sold.<sup>50</sup>

b. Collector's Search For Personalty and Return. Whether the statute merely requires the tax collector to make a demand for personal property, or requires him to make a "reasonable" or "diligent" search for such property, he must obey its directions, and if he fails to do so a subsequent sale of the land is not valid.<sup>51</sup> Also the collector is generally required to make a return, certificate, or affidavit of his doings in this regard and of his failure to find personal property, and this likewise is essential to the validity of a sale of the land.<sup>52</sup> The return or certificate should be in the form, if any, prescribed by statute, or otherwise should show all that is essential to the right to have recourse to the land.<sup>53</sup>

Practice in Alabama; affidavit of collector.

—In this state the tax collector is required by statute to make, subscribe, and enter in the book containing the list of delinquents, an affidavit that he has been unable to find a sufficiency of personal property from which to collect the taxes; and it is held that this is a jurisdictional fact, which must affirmatively appear, and without which the court has no authority to make an order of condemnation and sale, and where sale is made without such affidavit, the purchaser takes no title. *Cary v. C. Taxes For Which Land May Be Sold — 1. LIABILITY OF LAND IN GENERAL. The decisions generally recognize the following fundamental rules: That a tax-sale is invalid for every purpose unless the property was at the time liable for all the taxes for which it was sold;<sup>55</sup> that where land is sold to pay the taxes due upon it, together with the taxes due upon other lands, whether belonging to the same or a different owner, the sale is void;<sup>56</sup> and that each parcel of a person's land, separately assessed, is only liable to sale for its own specific tax.<sup>57</sup>

2. VALIDITY OF TAX AND OF LEVY AND ASSESSMENT. It is essential to the validity of a tax-sale of land that the tax for which it is sold shall be a lawful and enforceable demand;<sup>58</sup> that it shall have been duly levied according to law and by the properly constituted authority;<sup>59</sup> and that it shall have been assessed upon the

where the legal portion of the tax can be clearly and definitely separated from the rest.<sup>63</sup>

b. Statutes Validating Sales For Taxes Partly Illegal. In several of the states laws have been enacted providing that a sale of land for illegal or erroneous taxes shall nevertheless be effectual to pass the title if any portion of the taxes for which the land was sold was legal. The validity of these statutes is sustained, and their effect is that a tax-sale and deed, if otherwise regular, will not be rendered invalid by an error or illegality in the tax, if any part of the taxes for which the land was sold constituted a legal and valid charge upon it.<sup>64</sup>

4. SALE FOR ALL TAXES DUE. Where the statute provides that sales of land for delinquent taxes shall be made for the total amount of the taxes due, including those in arrear for previous years or those assessed under different authorities or for different purposes, a sale for only a portion of the taxes due will not pass title to the purchaser, although he may be entitled to a lien for the taxes paid.<sup>65</sup>

But a statute providing as to sales of land for taxes that "the courts shall apply the same liberal principles in favor of such titles as in sales by execution" is intended to prevent the mere irregularities which do not avoid execution sales from being held to avoid sales for taxes, and not to cure illegality in the levy or assessment, and does not change the rule that a sale of land for taxes a part of which are levied or assessed illegally is void. Gamble v. Witty, 55 Miss. 26.

Statute held directory.—Some of the decisions hold that a statutory provision such as that mentioned in the text is only directory, and not mandatory, and that a failure to obey it is a mere irregularity which does not vitiate the sale. Kessey v. Connell, 68 Iowa 430, 27 N. W. 365; Allen v. Ramsey County, 98 Minn. 341, 108 N. W. 301.

What taxes included see Crowell v. Merrill, 60 Iowa 53, 14 N. W. 81, holding that the statutory provision refers only to state and county taxes, and that a separate sale for delinquent taxes voted in aid of a railroad is properly had.

Under a provision of this kind land should not be sold successively for the taxes of different years, but only once for the whole amount.<sup>66</sup>

5. PENALTIES, COSTS, AND FEES. It is proper to include in the charges for which the land is sold interest on the taxes, if allowed by law, penalties imposed by statute for default in payment, and the costs and fees of the collector and other officers concerned with the sale.<sup>67</sup> But if any item thus included is unwarranted by law, or is in excess of the legal limit, it will vitiate the sale.<sup>68</sup>

6. PERSONAL TAXES. Where by law the taxes assessed on personal property become a lien on the owner's realty,<sup>69</sup> the lien may be enforced by sale of the land for the delinquent personal taxes,<sup>70</sup> after complying with any conditions prescribed by the statute.<sup>71</sup> But in some states land cannot be sold to satisfy the taxes on personal property.<sup>72</sup>

D. Real Property Subject to Sale — 1. IN GENERAL. As a general rule only the land which is specifically charged with a tax can be sold for its non-payment,<sup>73</sup> and only such land as falls within one or another of the classes described

Taxes due only in part.—Where an officer sells land for the taxes of two years, when he had a right to collect only those due for the last year, the sale is void. Douglass v. Short, 14 N. C. 432.

Effect of trifling deficiency.—Where a tax-sale is made for one cent less than the taxes, penalties, and costs allowed by law, the defect is not sufficient to defeat the sale, if otherwise regular. Ireland v. George, 41 Kan. 751, 21 Pac. 776.

Land previously sold on execution.—It is not a fraud for a sheriff to sell for taxes, on due levy and return to him by a constable, the same land which he had previously sold under a general execution against the same defendant. Wilson v. Boyd, 84 Ga. 34, 10 S. E. 499.

Tenant's interest in crops.—Where, by an agreement in the form of a lease between the owner of land and another, the owner lets certain fields for the term of a year which the other agrees to plant in a specified manner and to pay or deliver to the lessor a certain portion of each crop, the tenant's interest in the undivided crop may be seized by the statute as liable to sale for taxes.<sup>74</sup> A tax collector has no power to sell land beyond the limits of his own county;<sup>75</sup> nor can he make a valid sale of any land which is exempt by law or otherwise not liable to taxation,<sup>76</sup> or land belonging to the state or held by a municipality in its governmental capacity,<sup>77</sup> or such as has been forfeited to the state for previous taxes or bid in for the state at tax-sale,<sup>78</sup> or, as a rule, property which is under the jurisdiction and control of a court of equity through a receiver or otherwise.<sup>79</sup> A homestead estate is ordinarily

Acts (1893), providing that lands "hereafter" bid off in the name of the state and thus held shall not be included in a petition for sale for taxes, had no application to a petition made in 1894 by the auditor-general for a sale on account of the tax of 1892, where, when such petition was made, the land had not then been "hereafter" bid off in the name of the state. Owens v. Auditor-Gen., 147 Mich. 683, 111 N. W. 354.

Waiver of forfeiture.—Where property has been forfeited or adjudicated to the state for the non-payment of taxes, but the state continues to assess the same property to the owner and to collect taxes thereon for a number of years, equity will treat the transaction as a waiver of the forfeiture. Booksh v. Wilbert Sons Lumber, etc., Co., 115 La. 351, 39 So. 9; Clarke v. Strickland, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,864, 2 Curt. 439. See Hodgdon v. Wright, 36 Me. 326; Crane v. Reeder, 25 Mich. 303.

79. Prince George County v. Clarke, 36 Md. 206; Weaver v. Duncan, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1899) 56 S. W. 39 (holding that where a proceeding was pending to foreclose a trust deed, and a receiver had been appointed and taken possession of the property, it was in custodia legis; and hence a county trustee could not maintain a suit to subject it to payment of delinquent taxes, except in the court appointing the receiver, or with such court's consent); Virginia, etc., Steel, etc., Co. v. Bristol Land Co., 88 Fed. 134 (receiver); Burleigh v. Chehalis County, 75 Fed. 873 (sale enjoined). See also supra, IX, A, 1, c; X, B, 4. But the mere fact that a court of equity has ordered a receiver to take possession of property in litigation does not prevent its sale, before the receiver takes possession, for taxes due the state; and the tax purchaser, having obtained his deed, may take possession, if he finds no one in possession, without applying to the court for leave. Metcalfe v. Commonwealth Land, etc., Co., 113 Ky. 751, 68 S. W. 1100, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 527. And the fact that property is in possession of a sheriff under a seizure is no obstacle to its sale for taxes. Flower v. Beasley, 52 La. Ann. 2054, 28 So. 322. Nor subject to taxation and to sale for the taxes assessed against it, but not subject to sale for taxes charged upon other property.<sup>80</sup>

2. SEATED AND UNSEATED LANDS. In those states where a distinction is taken, in reference to the assessment and collection of taxes, between "seated," "resident," or "improved" lands on the one hand, and "unseated," "non-resident," or "wild" lands on the other hand, jurisdiction depends on the character of the land, and land belonging in fact to the one class cannot be sold as land of the other class; a sale so made is void and conveys no title.<sup>81</sup>

3. VALIDITY OF SALE DEPENDING ON OWNERSHIP<sup>82</sup>—a. In General. To justify a tax-sale of land, the person assessed must have at least a beneficial ownership of it,<sup>83</sup> and if real property is assessed to a person who is not the owner of it and sold for non-payment of the tax so assessed, the sale is invalid.<sup>84</sup> Taxes assessed

As to separate assessment and taxation of seated and unseated lands see supra, VI, C, 5, b.

Division of tract.—If part of a tract of land is seated and part unseated, the parts being separated by lines marked on the ground and held under independent titles, the unseated portion may be separately sold for taxes. Harper v. McKeehan, 3 Watts & S. (Pa.) 238. And where the whole of such a tract is assessed together and sold for taxes, it seems that, notwithstanding the irregularity of the assessment, the sale will pass a title to the part unseated and none to the part that is seated. Dietrick v. Mason, 57 Pa. St. 40.

Change in character of land.—Land that has once been seated may become unseated and liable to be sold as such for taxes. Robinson v. Williams, 6 Watts (Pa.) 281. And if land be unseated at the time the assessment is made, a subsequent seating, although in the same year, will not defeat a tax-sale. Murray v. Guilford, 8 Watts (Pa.) 548.

against a decedent's estate may, however, be collected in the same manner as those due from a living person.<sup>85</sup>

b. Persons Under Disabilities. The fact that land belongs to a person who is under legal disabilities, as an infant or feme covert, does not prevent its sale for the non-payment of taxes assessed against it, nor will it prevent the title from passing by a tax deed, although favor is usually shown to such persons in regard to the time or terms of redemption.<sup>86</sup>

c. Non-Resident and Unknown Owners.<sup>87</sup> A sale of land for taxes as of an unknown owner is void unless the assessment was in this form and unless there has been due observance of all steps made necessary by statute as a condition of the right to proceed against the land after this method.<sup>88</sup> The land of a non-resident may be sold for non-payment of the taxes assessed upon it, but only in the mode and on the conditions pointed out by the statute,<sup>89</sup> and if it was erroneously assessed as the property of a non-resident, the sale is not valid.<sup>90</sup>

Meaning of "non-resident."—In the laws of Louisiana relating to the sale of land for taxes, the term "non-resident" includes those who reside in the state, but out of the parish in which the land is situated and the tax assessed. Thompson v. Rogers, 4 La. 9.

collected is imperative. This list is one of the foundations on which the power to sell the particular tract of land rests, and hence is essential to the validity of the sale,<sup>91</sup> and it is also, in any judicial proceedings preliminary to the sale, prima facie evidence of the validity of the levy and assessment and of the fact of delinquency.<sup>92</sup>

b. Making and Requisites — (i) IN GENERAL. The delinquent list must be made and filed by the proper officer,<sup>93</sup> under his hand and seal if that is required by law,<sup>94</sup> and at or within the time prescribed by the statute.<sup>95</sup> If filed prematurely it will not support a tax-sale,<sup>96</sup> and if filed after the proper time it will invalidate the further proceedings, at least if rights of third persons have intervened or if any resultant injury to the owner is shown.<sup>97</sup> If the statute prescribes a form for this list, it is sufficient to follow the form substantially, but the United States.—Under the statutes of Washington, until property shall have been listed as delinquent for non-payment of taxes by a description thereof sufficiently accurate to identify it, so that an intelligent owner, acquainted with his property, on having the delinquent list brought to his attention, will be able to recognize the description as being applicable to his property, it does not become delinquent, nor subject to foreclosure and sale for non-payment of taxes. Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong, 162 Fed. 999 [reversed on other grounds in 171 Fed. 51, 96 C. C. A. 293].

See 45 Cent. Dig. tit. "Taxation," § 1280.

Sufficient to enable surveyor to locate lands.—A description in a delinquent tax list which is sufficient to enable a competent surveyor to locate the land is sufficient. People v. International Salt Co., 233 Ill. 223, 84 N. E.

(III) NAME OF OWNER. It is also necessary as a further means of identification, where the statute so requires, that the delinquent list shall contain the names of the respective owners of the several parcels of land included; and a defect in this particular will be fatal to the further proceedings.<sup>2</sup>

(IV) TAXES, ETC., DUE. It is further essential to the validity of the tax-sale that the delinquent list shall contain a statement of the amount of taxes due on each parcel of land, if this is required by the statute, an omission or error being fatal,<sup>3</sup> and that it show for what years the taxes are delinquent,<sup>4</sup> and show separately the taxes due to the state and those due to the county or other municipality.<sup>5</sup> The sums due may be shown in figures, but these must either be accompanied by the usual abbreviations for dollars and cents or so arranged in columns separated by the customary ledger lines as to indicate clearly the denominations of money.<sup>6</sup>

278; Sholl v. People, 194 Ill. 24, 61 N. E. 1122.

Use of abbreviations.—Where well-understood abbreviations are used in a delinquent tax list, and a competent surveyor can locate the land from such descriptions, they are sufficient. Sholl v. People, 194 Ill. 24, 61 N. E. 1122. But figures placed in perpendicular columns, without any heading to show what they refer to, do not constitute a sufficient description of the land. Knudson v. Curley, 30 Minn. 433, 15 N. W. 873. See Washington Timber, etc., Co. v. Smith, 34 Wash. 625, 76 Pac. 267.

Failure to repeat or use ditto marks.—Under Wis. Rev. St. (1898) § 1047, providing that in all tax proceedings any description of land which shall indicate the land intended with ordinary and reasonable certainty shall be sufficient, the descriptions of parcels of land in the delinquent return are not insufficient because the section, township, or range descriptions are not repeated or indicated by ditto marks for each parcel. Van Ostrand v. Cole, 131 Wis. 446, 110 N. W. 891.

Payment on part of tract.—Where a tract of land containing more than one subdivision is assessed to the owner of one parcel thereof, who pays the proportion of taxes chargeable against his land, the residue of the tract should be returned as delinquent. Pennell v. Monroe, 30 Ark. 661.

2. Ropes v. Minshew, 51 Fla. 299, 41 So. 538; Halsey v. People, 84 Ill. 89; Le Seigneur v. Bessan, 52 La. Ann. 187, 26 So. 865; Ex p. Thacker, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 344. But in Minnesota proceedings to enforce the collection of real estate taxes are purely in rem; and hence a statute requiring the owner's name to be given in the list of delinquent taxes is merely directory, and an erroneous statement of the owner's name in such list will not avoid the tax judgment, where the land itself has been correctly described. McQuade v. Jaffray, 47 Minn. 326, 50 N. W. 233.

Joint owners.—Where land is owned by and assessed to two persons jointly, a description of it in the delinquent list which states it to be the property of one of them, by name, "et al." is insufficient. Asper v. Moon, 24 Utah 241, 67 Pac. 409.

3. California L. & T. Co. v. Weis, 118 Cal.

489, 50 Pac. 697; Mann v. People, 102 Ill. 346; Cole v. Van Ostrand, 131 Wis. 454, 110 N. W. 884.

Where error not jurisdictional.—Where the delinquent list is not used as direct authority for the sale of the land, but only as notice to the owner and as a foundation for judicial proceedings which are to culminate in a judgment ordering the sale, as is the practice in some states, an omission or error in stating the amount of the taxes due is not a jurisdictional defect, but is merely a matter of defense which the owner waives if he does not plead it. State v. Baldwin, 62 Minn. 518, 65 N. W. 80; Collins v. Welch, 38 Minn. 62, 35 N. W. 566; Coffin v. Estes, 32 Minn. 367, 20 N. W. 357; Kipp v. Dawson, 31 Minn. 373, 17 N. W. 961, 18 N. W. 96; Darling v. Purcell, 13 N. D. 288, 100 N. W. 726.

Trifling error.—The fact that the delinquent list overstated the amount of taxes due, in one case by three cents and in another by four cents, will not invalidate the sale, the maxim "de minimis non curat lex" applying. Colman v. Shattuck, 62 N. Y. 348.

Taxes, penalties, interest, and costs.—These need not be separately stated or itemized, it being sufficient to state the total in a lump sum. Chapman v. Zoberlein, 152 Cal. 216, 92 Pac. 188; Cass County v. Security Imp. Co., 7 N. D. 528, 75 N. W. 775.

A tax-sale was not invalid because there was nothing, in connection with figures, in the delinquent tax list under the head of fees and valuation of the land, to indicate specifically that they were intended to c. Verification and Certification. Some of the statutes require that the collector's return of delinquent lands shall be attested by him under oath, and under such a statute a tax-sale cannot lawfully be made without an attestation of the list substantially in the form prescribed by the law.<sup>7</sup> And it is also and equally essential that the affidavit shall be sworn to before an officer duly authorized to administer the oath.<sup>8</sup> The same imperative character is to be attributed to a statutory requirement that the delinquent list shall be certified by the clerk of the court or some other officer designated for the purpose;<sup>9</sup> and the certificate must be made at the time required by the statute.<sup>10</sup>

d. Filing and Recording. A statute requiring the delinquent list to be filed or recorded in the office of the county clerk or some other public office is mandatory, and compliance with its provisions is essential to a valid tax-sale of the lands affected, if the record is intended as official evidence of the facts recited in the list, or as notice, or as the foundation for process against the land;<sup>11</sup> but otherdenominate sums of money, since, lands being assessed in dollars and cents, taxes being payable in money, and it being common knowledge that dollars are expressed in the whole numbers and cents and mills decimally, the significance of the figures was clear. Sawyer v. Wilson, supra. A tax-sale is not void because in the delinquent list the amount due was indicated only by the word "amount," and immediately under it the figures "4 00," without any dollar sign, but with a space between the figure 4 and the two ciphers, as they usually appear when intended to mean dollars. *Carter v. wise if the record is only intended for the purpose of preserving the list.<sup>12</sup> A filing of this list before the end of the time allowed for the voluntary payment of the taxes is premature and avoids the sale.<sup>13</sup>

e. Publication and Proof Thereof — (i) IN GENERAL. Publication of the delinquent list, when required by statute, is generally an essential step in the collection of the taxes, being designed to give notice of the fact of delinquency and the amount due, particularly to non-resident and absentee owners.<sup>14</sup> And a substantial variance between the original list and the list as published will be fatal to the further proceedings.<sup>15</sup> As to the number of times the list shall be published or the length and continuity of publication, or the completion of publication before a prescribed date, the provisions of the statute must be carefully followed, as a defect in this particular may avoid the subsequent sale.<sup>16</sup> Proof of the publication, whether required to be made by the certificate of the officer having charge of the list or by the affidavit of the printer or publisher of the newspaper, is also an essential step, and exact compliance with the directions of the statute is held to be necessary.<sup>17</sup>

(II) REQUIREMENTS AS TO NEWSPAPER AND DESIGNATION OF SAME. The newspaper in which the delinquent list is to be published must be selected or designated in the manner prescribed by the statute and by the officers to whom authority for that purpose is committed by law,<sup>18</sup> and within the time limited;<sup>19</sup> and if there is no official action of this kind, or if an attempted designation is at the foot of the record of the delinquent tax list when and in what newspaper the list was published, and for how long, does not require the certificate to state that the newspaper had a bona fide circulation in the county for thirty days before the publication. Leigh v. Trippe, 91 Ark. 117, 120 S. W. 972. The certificate of a county clerk that a list of lands delinquent for taxes was published in one newspaper for two weeks, weekly, the "first publication being on May 25, the next June 1, and the last, June 8, 1895," and in another paper, "the first publication being May 23, the second May 30, and the last June 6, 1895," shows the length of time notice of the sale was published "before the second Monday in June," within the requirements of the statute. *Sawyer v. California.—Haaren v. High, 97 Cal. 445, 32 Pac. 518; Warden v. Broome, 9 Cal. App. 172, 98 Pac. 252. Under Cal. Pol. Code, § 3764, requiring the publication of a delinquent list containing the names of the persons and a description of the property and the amount of taxes, penalties, and costs, and section 3765 requiring the collector to publish with the delinquent list a notice that the property will be sold, etc., it was held that where a delinquent list otherwise correct stated that the taxes, penalties, and costs against the property in controversy were nineteen dollars and ninety cents, when the correct amount was nineteen dollars and forty cents, for which the property was in fact sold to the state, the sale was void. Warden v. Broome, supra.

See 45 Cent. Dig. tit. "Taxation," § 1283. Proof of publication as essential to jurisdiction.—Where the publication of the delinquent list is not direct authority for the sale of the lands, but only the foundation for judicial proceedings in rem, culminating in a judgment ordering such sale, it is held that proof of the publication, to be made as the statute directs, is not essential to the jurisdiction of the court, provided the publication was in fact made as the law requires, but the omission of such proof is at most an amendable defect. Mille Lacs County v. Morrison, 22 Minn. 178; Raley v. Guinn, 76 Mo. 263. But compare Holmes v.

Loughren, 97 Minn. 83, 105 N. W. 558, holding that where the printer's affidavit of publication of a delinquent list was sworn to before a notary public, but no notarial seal was affixed thereto, there was no publication of the delinquent list, and the court had no jurisdiction to enter judgment against a lot contained in it.

Parol proof of publication.—Where the delinquent list and proof of its publication are required to be perpetuated by record, and to be certified by the clerk before the sale, parol evidence is not admissible to supply its omission in a suit to confirm a tax title. Martin v. Barbour, 34 Fed. 701.

Presumption as to date.—Although the certificate of the county clerk as to the publication of the delinquent tax, required by Kirby Dig. Ark. § 7086, is not dated, it will be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that it was entered of record before the date of sale, as is necessary. Cook v. Ziff Colored Masonic Lodge, No. 119, 80 Ark. 31, 96 S. W. 618.

Filing and recording certificate.—Under Ill. Revenue Law, § 186 (Hurd Rev. St. (1905) c. 120), requiring the certificate of the publication of a delinquent tax list to be filed as part of the record of the county court, a filing thereof by the county clerk is not a sufficient compliance with the law, although the offices of county clerk and clerk of the county court are filled by the same person, and, notwithstanding Hurd Rev. St. (1905) p. 1946, c. 131, § 1, providing that the words "county clerk" shall be held to include "clerk of the county court," and the words "clerk of the county court" to include "county clerk," unless such construction would be inconsistent with the manifest intent of the legislature or repugnant to the context of the same statute. McCraney v. Glos, 222 Ill. 628, 78 N. E. 921.

At adjourned meeting.—Under Minn. Gen. St. (1894) § 1581, providing that a newspaper for publication of the delinquent list shall be designated by the county commissioners at their annual meeting in January, the designation is valid if made at an adjourned meeting. *Minnesota Debenture Co. v. too indefinite or informal to meet the requirements of the statute, it invalidates the further proceedings founded on such publication.<sup>20</sup> It is also commonly required that a certified copy of the resolution designating the newspaper shall be filed or deposited with the clerk of the court.<sup>21</sup> The medium of publication selected must answer the description of a "newspaper" and be printed in the English language;<sup>22</sup> and if the tax list is printed in a supplement or on extra sheets, the circulation of the same must be equal to that of the paper itself.<sup>23</sup>

f. Posting of List. Where the statute directs that a copy of the delinquent list shall be posted, its provisions must be obeyed in respect to the fact of posting and the time and place of so doing; if not, a subsequent sale of the lands is void.<sup>24</sup>

2. PROCEEDINGS TO ENFORCE LIEN — a. Nature and Form of Proceeding and Jurisdiction. A suit in equity may be maintained for the foreclosure of a tax lien on land when such a proceeding is directly authorized by statute,<sup>25</sup> or when the statute has omitted to make any provision for enforcing the payment of the tax or the remedy provided is lost for any reason,<sup>26</sup> but not when the statutory

Sufficiency of resolution.—Where a certified copy of a resolution recommended the acceptance of the bids of the Minneapolis Tribune for the publication of the delinquent list, and that the contract be awarded to "them" on the filing of a proper bond, and the resolution was adopted, it was not insufficient, as any person of ordinary intelligence would have understood that the Minneapolis Tribune had been designated. *Minnesota Debenture Co. v. Change of name of paper.—The mere fact that a newspaper, officially designated as the medium of publication of the delinquent list, changes its name between the time of the designation and the time of the publication of the list does not destroy the identity of the paper or render the publication invalid. Reimer v. Newel, 47 Minn. 237, 49 N. W. 865.

What law governs.—In a tax foreclosure suit, the statute in force when the action is instituted governs in all matters of procedure, and it is not affected by requirements subsequently enacted. Taylor v. Huntington, 34 Wash. 455, 75 Pac. 1104.

Right of action.—Since taxes are levied by and are due to a county, either for itself or as trustee for various corporations, such as the state, cities, villages, and school-districts, it is not necessary for the county to pay delinquent taxes before suing to foreclose the lien therefor. Lancaster County v. Trimble, 34 Nebr. 752, 52 N. W. 711. And see Meyer v. Burritt, 60 Conn. 117, 22 Atl. 501.

Lien on railroad property.—Where the law provides for the levy and assessment of remedy by advertisement and sale of the property is intended to be exclusive or is at any rate available and adequate.<sup>27</sup> An action to foreclose such a lien must be brought in the county where the land lies,<sup>28</sup> and, although several taxes all equally attaching to the property as liens may be included in one suit,<sup>29</sup> it is not permissible to unite several parcels of land which were or should have been individually assessed.<sup>30</sup>

b. Demand, Time to Sue, and Limitations. In the absence of a statute no demand is necessary before suing to foreclose a tax lien.<sup>31</sup> If the statute provides that a suit to enforce a lien for taxes shall not be brought until they have been delinquent for a certain length of time, an action begun before the expiration of that time will be dismissed as premature.<sup>32</sup> On the other hand, no such action can be maintained after the end of the time limited for its institution, or after the end of the period to which the continuance of the lien is specifically limited by law.<sup>33</sup> But aside from such statutory restrictions, mere delay in bringing the suit will not prevent the enforcement of the lien.<sup>34</sup>

c. Parties and Process or Notice. Whether a suit of this kind should be brought in the name of the tax collector, the municipal corporation, or the people of the state, depends on the provisions of the local statute.<sup>35</sup> It is always proper, and sometimes it is required by law, that the suit shall be against the "owner" of the land, which means the owner of record at the time the action is begun;<sup>36</sup> taxes against railroads, and makes them a lien on the section of the road lying within each county, but, for reasons of public policy, will not permit the sale of such part of the road, or of any personal property used in its operation, to compel payment of the tax, and the whole of the road cannot be sold for taxes in one county, it is evident that no provision is made for the enforcement of the tax; and therefore the law must be held to contemplate its enforcement by ordinary remedies, one of which is a proceeding in equity to establish and enforce the lien for the tax against its property. Dobbins v. Colorado, etc., R. Co., 19 Colo. App. 257, 75 Pac. 156.

Sale on execution.—Taxes on land are a specific charge upon it, and their payment cannot be enforced by a sale of it under execution of a judgment in personam. Clegg v. State, 42 Tex. 605.

Where the land affected is encumbered by a deed of trust in the nature of a mortgage, the trustee is regarded as the "owner" for the purpose of a tax suit, but the beneficiary named in the deed, or the holder of the note secured, will not be bound by the judgment but provision is usually made by law for bringing in non-resident or unknown owners on process served by published advertisement,<sup>37</sup> and in some jurisdictions a general citation may be issued to all persons having or claiming any interest in the land or lien upon it, which notice is also served by publication,<sup>38</sup> although ordinarily the process should be served as in ordinary cases involving real estate.<sup>39</sup> A statute sometimes provides for the entry of a warning order on the records of the court in which the suit is brought, and compliance with the statute is necessary to confer jurisdiction.<sup>40</sup> If the theory of the statute is that the action is a personal one, the decree will bind only those who were made parties to the suit;<sup>41</sup> but on

if he is not made a party to the suit. Williams v. Hudson, 93 Mo. 524, 6 S. W. 261; Allen v. McCabe, 93 Mo. 138, 6 S. W. 62; Cowell v. Gray, 85 Mo. 169; Boatmen's Sav. Bank v. Grewe, 84 Mo. 477; Gitchell v. Kridler, 84 Mo. 472.

Life-tenant and remainder-man.—A judgment in a tax suit brought against the life-tenant without joining the remainder-man cannot be collaterally attacked by the life-tenant in an action by him against the purchaser at the tax-sale to recover the land. Hogan v. Smith, 11 Mo. App. 314.

See also infra, XI, E, 3, d, (II).

Affidavit of non-residence.—Where an affidavit of non-residence for an order for the publication of process in a suit to foreclose a tax lien was made before a notary public, and alleged defendant's non-residence, the fact that it was mistakenly first filed with a justice of the peace, who had no jurisdiction of the action, and was then withdrawn and filed in the circuit court, did not render it ineffective to sustain the order. Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Co. v. Keener, 217 Mo. 522, 117 S. W. 42.

Insufficient summons by publication.—Under Wash. Laws (1897), p. 182, c. 71, § 97, providing that the summons in a tax foreclosure proceeding shall be served in the same manner as summons in a civil action in the superior court, and Ballinger Annot. Codes & St. § 4878, providing that the summons in a civil action in the superior court shall contain the date of the first publication and shall require the defendant to appear and answer within sixty days from the date of the first publication thereof, a summons by publication in a tax foreclosure proceeding, which directs defendant to appear within sixty days after the service of the summons upon him, exclusive of the day of service, and defend the action, confers no jurisdiction on the court to render judgment; and Laws (1899), p. 285, c. 141, relating to revenue and taxation, did not attempt to change the statutes controlling the service of summons in such proceedings. Bartels v. Christensen, 46 Wash. 478, 90 Pac. 658; Dolan v. Jones, 37 Wash. 176, 79 Pac. 640; Thompson v. Robbins, 32 Wash. 149, 72 Pac. 1043.

It is the duty of parties made defendants to a suit to foreclose a tax lien, on the ground that they have or claim some interest in the property, to set forth by answer any interest they may have. Port Townsend v. Trumbull, 40 Wash. 386, 82 Pac. 715.

39. Cruzen v. Stephens, 123 Mo. 337, 27 S. W. 557, 45 Am. St. Rep. 549. A court cannot enter a valid decree foreclosing a tax lien on property, unless it has acquired jurisdiction over the person of the owner by the service of process or notice in some mode prescribed by law, or by his appearance, or over the property in rem by its seizure under process. Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong, 162 Fed. 999 [reversed on other grounds in 171 Fed. 51, 96 C. C. A. 293], Washington statute.

In Washington, a tax foreclosure by a county being a proceeding in rem, it is immaterial what name is used in the summons as the owner of the property, or whether any be used. It is enough, in the absence of fraud, that the summons properly described the property. Noble v. Aune, 50 Wash. 73, 96 Pac. 688.

40. Foohs v. Bilby, 83 Ark. 234, 103 S. W. 386 (holding that the entry upon the records of a court of the warning order describing lands proceeded against in an overdue tax proceeding was a jurisdictional matter, and the failure to embrace in the entry a description of a particular tract rendered the subsequent proceedings against that tract and the sale thereof void); Pope v. Campbell, 70 Ark. 207, 66 S. W. 916 (entry of the warning order upon the record of proceedings at law, instead of the chancery record, fatal); Gregory v. Bartlett, 55 Ark. 30, 17 S. W. 344.

the other hand, if it is regarded as in rem, and especially after the publication of a general citation as above mentioned, the judgment is conclusive upon all persons having any interest.<sup>42</sup>

d. Proceedings and Judgment. The bill, petition, or complaint should describe the land sought to be charged,<sup>43</sup> and set forth the levy and assessment of the tax and the amount due and unpaid.<sup>44</sup> The answer may set up the invalidity of the levy or assessment,<sup>45</sup> or deny the legality of the tax.<sup>46</sup> The assessment list or collector's book is prima facie evidence of the liability of the land to the payment of the particular sum shown thereby.<sup>47</sup> The judgment or decree, if for plaintiff or complainant, should describe the land, state the amount of taxes due on each tract, and decree the foreclosure of the lien;<sup>48</sup> and such other or further relief may be granted as the pleadings and evidence will warrant.<sup>49</sup> It is conclusive of the facts essential to the maintenance of the action and of such matters of defense as were or should have been pleaded, including the legality of the tax and levy and the fact of delinquency.<sup>50</sup> The matter of costs and fees in actions of this kind is regulated by the local statute.<sup>51</sup>

3. PROCEEDINGS FOR JUDGMENT — a. Nature and Form of Action. In some states, by constitutional provisions or by statute, real estate cannot be sold for the non-payment of taxes except under the judgment or decree of a court.<sup>52</sup>

In a tax suit facts must be alleged showing, not only a statutory liability, but complainant's right to recover. Miami v. Miami Realty, etc., Co., supra. It is the bill of complaint in a tax suit, and not the notice of lien, which must set out the cause of action. Miami v. Miami Realty, etc., Co., supra.

In Nebraska, in an action to enforce collection of delinquent taxes and assessments on real estate under Comp. St. (1905) c. 77, art. 9, commonly known as the "Scavenger Act," the petition, by express provision of the statute, must be taken as prima facie evidence of the legality of the tax and as-essment set forth therein and of the several amounts levied on behalf of the state, county, or city, in which the lands are located, and that such taxes are unpaid and delinquent. State v. Several Parcels of Land, 78 Nebr. 581, 111 N. W. 367.

Where this is the case the right of suit rests solely upon the statute, and the provisions of the statute must be closely followed, as the proceedings cannot be aided by analogies drawn from common-law actions.<sup>53</sup> But an action for taxes may assume two forms. In the first place it may be a personal proceeding against the delinquent taxpayer, in which event it is strictly an action in personam, and the judgment is not directed against any specific tract of land, but may be enforced by execution like any other judgment.<sup>54</sup> In the second place, it may have for its objective the condemnation and sale of the particular parcel of land on which the taxes are assessed, in which case it is, according to some of the decisions, not strictly a judicial proceeding but rather administrative in character;<sup>55</sup> but it is at any rate a proceeding in rem, directed against the land itself, based on jurisdiction of the property rather than of the owner, and not involving the latter in any personal liability nor subjecting him to a general or personal judgment.<sup>56</sup>

b. Time to Sue and Limitations. A proceeding in rem for the collection of delinquent taxes on land being an action for the enforcement of a public right, rather than for the recovery of a debt, is not barred by any statute of limitations,<sup>57</sup> unless it is expressly so provided by law.<sup>58</sup> But if the statute prescribes that man, 56 Mo. 104; Alexander v. Helber, 35 Mo. 334.

Tax lien not affected by judgment.—Where a personal judgment of this kind has been obtained, the state cannot, in an action against the alienee of defendant's property, enforce the judgment as a lien on the property without averring and proving all the steps necessary to the creation of a valid tax lien, as the lien exists by virtue of the statute and is not affected by the judgment. Kentucky Cent. R. Co. v. Com., 92 Ky. 64, 17 S. W. 196, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 484.

Judgment as bar to proceeding in rem.—Where the remedy in personam against the taxpayer has been pursued first, and a sale of the property made, and the proceeds applied to the payment of the taxes, such proceedings bar any subsequent proceeding in rem against the property for the same taxes. People v. Winter, 116 Ill. 211, 5 N. E. 536. But the mere recovery of a judgment without satisfaction wholly or in part does not have this effect. People v. Stahl, 101 Ill. 346.

judgments of this kind shall be rendered at a specified term of the court, it is to be taken as mandatory, and a judgment rendered at a different term will be void.<sup>59</sup>

c. Jurisdiction — (i) IN GENERAL. Jurisdiction of proceedings of this kind can be entertained only by those courts to which it has been specially committed by law;<sup>60</sup> and as their proceedings are special and statutory and of a more or less summary character, it is necessary that every fact essential to the jurisdiction of the court shall appear on the record.<sup>61</sup>

(ii) JURISDICTION DEPENDING ON DELINQUENCY. It is held in numerous cases that where the proceeding is by suit to enforce the collection of taxes against real estate, culminating in a judgment, the jurisdiction of the court, as to a particular tract, is not affected by the fact that the taxes upon such tract have previously been paid, this being a matter of defense merely; or at any rate that the judgment, if regular and otherwise valid, and showing jurisdiction on its face cannot be impeached in any collateral proceeding by proof of such prior payment<sup>62</sup>

Repeal of statute.—Minn. Laws (1902), p. 40, c. 2, § 82, repealing the statute of limitations as to the enforcement of taxes, applies to taxes delinquent at the time of its passage, as to which the limitation had not then run. State v. Foster, 104 Minn. 408, 116 N. W. 826.

59. Brown v. Hogle, 30 Ill. 119; Spurlock v. Dougherty, 81 Mo. 171. And see Stilwell v. People, 49 Ill. 45; Kinney v. Forsythe, 96 Mo. 414, 9 S. W. 918. But compare Akers v. Burch, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 606. And see Douglass v. Leavenworth County, 75 Kan. 6, 88 Pac. 557.

Effect of delay in proceedings.—A statute in Minnesota providing that in proceedings to enforce delinquent taxes the answer shall stand for trial at the same or next general or special term of court is held to be merely directory, and hence a delay on the part of the state to bring such a proceeding to trial for over six years does not operate as a discontinuance or entitle defendant to a dismissal. State v. Baldwin, 62 Minn. 518, 65 N. W. 80.

60. Covington v. Highlands Dist., 113 Ky. 612, 68 S. W. 669, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 433; Wellshear v. Kelley, 69 Mo. 343.

In Tennessee, it is stated that the grounds of fact on which the jurisdiction rests are that the land lies in the county, that the sum due for the taxes remains unpaid, and that there was no personal property which could be distrained for the payment. Anderson v. Patton, 1 Humphr. 369; Anderson v. Williams, 10 Yerg. 234; Hamilton v. Burum, 3 Yerg. 355.

In Alabama it is considered that the affidavit which the collector is required to make, as to his inability to find personal property after diligent search, is a jurisdictional fact without which the order of sale is void. Fleming v. McGee, 81 Ala. 409, 1 So. 106.

Demand and notice of delinquency.—It has been held essential to the jurisdiction of the court that a proper demand should have been made by the collector on the taxpayer for the amount of the taxes unpaid, and that this must appear on the face of the proceedings. Mayhew v. Davis, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,347, 4 McLean 213. And in Louisiana it is said that the notice of delinquency required to be given or mailed to the tax debtor is "sacramental," and the failure to give it vitiates all subsequent proceedings. Tensas Delta Land Co. v. Sholars, 105 La. 357, 29 So. 908. But see State v. St. Paul Trust Co., 76 Minn. 423, 79 N. W. 543.

Exemption of property.—In a proceeding to sell land for non-payment of taxes, the fact that the land is exempt from taxation does not deprive the court of jurisdiction, as that is one of the questions to be decided. Chisago County v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 27 Minn. 109, 6 N. W. 454.

d. Process or Notice — (1) IN GENERAL. Notice in some form to the delinquent owner is essential to the jurisdiction of the court, and no valid judgment can be rendered except it be founded on a citation, notice, or summons such as the law provides for,<sup>63</sup> conforming to the statute in respect to its terms and recitals,<sup>64</sup> naming the parties correctly if their names are known,<sup>65</sup> served in such a manner as the statute directs and upon the proper persons,<sup>66</sup> and with such proof of its service and such filing or recording of the notice as the statute may call for.<sup>67</sup> In some states this initiatory process is a notice of the collector's intention to apply for a judgment and order of sale against the lands therein described as delinquent. This must state that such an order of sale will be asked for,<sup>68</sup> and must state the year or years for which the taxes are due,<sup>69</sup> and their amount,<sup>70</sup> with such other particulars as the law directs to be included.<sup>71</sup> And especially the notice must contain such a description of the land sought to be charged as will suffice to identify it with reasonable ease and certainty.<sup>72</sup> But an owner

(II) NOTICE BY PUBLICATION. In cases where personal service of process in a suit of this kind cannot be had, the jurisdiction of the court may be founded on a proper service by publication.<sup>74</sup> But this must be based on a proper allegation in the petition or an affidavit or return that defendant is a non-resident or unknown owner,<sup>75</sup> and the citation must be directed to the right person,<sup>76</sup> and by

The sufficiency of the citation in a suit for taxes against non-resident or unknown owners cannot be inquired into collaterally in trespass to try title against the purchaser at tax-sale. Kenson v. Gage, 34 Tex. Civ. App. 547, 79 S. W. 605.

Unknown heirs see Young v. Jackson, 50 Tex. Civ. App. 351, 110 S. W. 74. Where a suit to foreclose a tax lien was brought against unknown heirs of a person named and the unknown owners of the land, and the judgment recited that "defendants" were served, and that an attorney appointed filed answer for "defendants," and the foreclosure was in general terms without any mention of any defendants, but "defendants" were given the right to have the property divided and sold in tracts less than the whole survey, the sale to be subject to the right of "defendants" to redeem, the judgment foreclosed the lien as against all the unknown owners made defendants. Sellers v. Simpson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1909) 115 S. W. 888.

Scales*, (Tex. Civ.

App. 1909) 119 S. W. 879. A judgment foreclosing a tax lien against unknown owners of land rendered upon a citation served by publication is not binding upon persons in actual possession of the land at the time of the filing of the suit and the rendition of the judgment, but not served with citation. Sellers v. Simpson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1909) 115 S. W. 888.

Not authorized against resident.—Where the owner of land is an actual resident thereon, service by publication is unauthorized, and a tax judgment and deed obtained therein are properly vacated. Rust v. Kennedy, 52 Wash. 472, 100 Pac. 998; Pyatt v. Hegquist, 45 Wash. 504, 88 Pac. 933; McManus v. Morgan, 38 Wash. 528, 80 Pac. 786.

Sufficiency of affidavit.—Under Sayles Annot. Civ. St. Tex. (1897) art. 5232c, providing that, upon affidavit setting out that the owner of land reported sold or returned delinquent for taxes is unknown to the attorney of the state, notice of tax foreclosure suit may be given by publication, an affidavit by the county attorney that the statements are true to the best of his knowledge and belief is sufficient. Young v. Jackson, 50 Tex. Civ. App. 351, 110 S. W. 74.

Effect of false return.—The jurisdiction of the court is based on the order of publication and its due publication and proof thereof; and the judgment will be valid, although the order was based on a false return of the officer that the party was a non-resident, when in fact he was a resident; and a sale under the judgment will be good, as against the apparent owner and his grantees, if the purchaser had no notice that he was a resident. Schmidt v. Niemeyer, 100 Mo. 207, 13 S. W. 405; Payne v. Lott, 90 Mo. 676, 3 S. W. 402. See Martin v. Parsons, 49 Cal. 94.

76. Irwin v. New Orleans, 28 La. Ann. 670; Earnest v. Glaser, 32 Tex. Civ. App. 378, 74 S. W. 605; Bush v. Williams, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,225, Cooke (Tenn.) 360. The citation served by publication in an action for delinquent state and county taxes may be addressed directly to defendants, and it need not be addressed to any officer or require any officer to make return thereof. Gibbs v. Scales, (Tex. Civ. App. 1909) 118 S. W. 188.

Order embracing several properties.—There is no objection to one affidavit and one general order of service of summons by publication being made for several cases in which several lots of land have been assessed to unknown owners by fictitious names. Moss v. Mayo, 23 Cal. 421.

his correct name if it is known,<sup>77</sup> and the citation must also be in the form prescribed by the statute, if any, or contain all the particulars essential to a full and valid notice,<sup>78</sup> and in particular it must describe or identify the lands proceeded against,<sup>79</sup> and correctly inform the owner of the time when he must appear and answer,<sup>80</sup> and it must be published for the requisite length of

Effect of assessment to wrong person.—Where land is erroneously taxed to another than the owner, a judgment foreclosing the tax lien against the person to whom the land was taxed, in an action to which the owner was not a party and of which he had no knowledge, is not binding upon him. Grigsby v. Akin, 128 Ind. 591, 28 N. E. 180; Allen v. Ray, 96 Mo. 542, 10 S. W. 153.

77. See, generally, cases cited infra, this note. A judgment, in a tax suit against non-residents, notified by publication, who are described in the proceedings as "Mollie H. Lemen" and "Birdie E. Stone," instead of "Mary A. Lemen" and "Hattie E. Stone," is void as to them. Keaton v. Jorndt, 220 Mo. 117, 119 S. W. 629. But the judgment is not void because a defendant is described in the proceedings as "Kate A. Viger," instead of "Katie Antoinette Viger." Keaton v. Jorndt, supra.

The principle of idem sonans does not apply, as the notice is intended for the eye, not the ear. Chamberlain v. Blodgett, 96 Mo. 482, 10 S. W. 44; Troyer v. Wood, 96 Mo. 478, 10 S. W. 42, 6 S. W. 690, 9 Am. St. Rep. 367; Whelen v. Weaver, 93 Mo. 430, 6 S. W. 220. See Eels v. Blair, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 60 S. W. 462.

Use of initials.—Where notice by publication is addressed to defendant by the initials of his christian name only, while the record title to the land is in his full name, the court does not acquire jurisdiction, and judgment by default on such notice is void. Burkham v. Manewal, 195 Mo. 500, 94 S. W. 520; Evarts v. Missouri Lumber, etc., Co., 193 Mo. 433, 92 S. W. 372; Spore v. Ozark Land Co., 186 Mo. 656, 85 S. W. 556; Mosely v. Reily, 126 Mo. 124, 28 S. W. 895, 26 L. R. A. 721.

Surplusage.—Under Sayles Annot. Civ. St. Tex. (1897) art. 5232o, requiring notice of suits to collect delinquent taxes to be "directed to all parties owning or having or claiming any interest" in the land in question, etc., a notice "to unknown owners, and to all persons owning or having, or claiming any interest," etc., is sufficient, at least on collateral attack, even though immediately preceding that paragraph are recitals not required by the statute, for they may be treated as surplusage. Young v. Jackson, 50 Tex. Civ. App. 351, 110 S. W. 74.

78. Chiniquy v. People, 78 Ill. 570; Kenson v. Gage, 34 Tex. Civ. App. 547, 79 S. W. 605; Netzorg v. Green, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 119, 62 S. W. 789. A proceeding against the unknown owner of land to foreclose a delinquent tax assessment as authorized by Tex. Laws (1897), p. 138, c. 103, § 15, is a special proceeding in which the citation need not state the file number of the proceeding, as required by Rev. St. (1895) art. 1214, regulating citations in general. Unknown Owner v. State, (Tex. Civ. App. 1909) 118 S. W. 803.

Immaterial departure from statute.—Under Sayles Civ. St. Tex. (1897) art. 5232o, prescribing the requisites of citations in suits to recover delinquent taxes against unknown owners of land, where a citation departed from the express terms of the statute by having the notice to the unknown owner preceded by a direction to the sheriff or constable to serve it by publication, and by following the notice with a command for a return showing how the writ was served, notice or citation to the owner was not invalidated; the commands to the officer by separate paragraphs, made entirely distinct from the notice to the owner, being not as a matter of law misleading to the owner. State v. Unknown Owner, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 188, 103 S. W. 1116.

Statement of taxes due see Young v. Jackson, 50 Tex. Civ. App. 351, 110 S. W. 74.

But compare Goldsworthy v. Thompson, 87 Mo. 233. Under Sayles Annot. Civ. St. Tex. (1897) art. 5232o, providing that the notice in tax suits shall be directed to all persons claiming any interest in the land so described as to identify it, a notice in a tax suit for taxes due on the "A. Netherly" survey issued to the unknown owners of the "A. Wetherby" survey, and published as directed to the unknown owners of the "A. Weatheraby" survey, is fatally defective. Harris v. Hill, (Tex. Civ. App. 1909) 117 S. W. 907.

Christensen*, 46 Wash. 478, 90 Pac. 658; Young v. Droz, 38 Wash. 648, 80 Pac. 810. Under Wash. Laws (1897), p. 182, c. 71, § 96, subd. 3, authorizing service of summons in proceedings under the revenue act by publication, and providing that a summons so served shall direct the owner of the property to appear within sixty days after the date of the first publication exclusive of said day, a published summons citing defendant to appear "within sixty days after service of this notice and summons, exclusive of the day of service," is insufficient to confer jurisdiction. Gould v.

time,<sup>81</sup> in a newspaper officially designated for that purpose or answering the requirements of the statute in respect to the character of its circulation, the place of its publication, or otherwise.<sup>82</sup> Proof of publication must be made in the form and manner directed by the statute, and is generally considered essential to the jurisdiction.<sup>83</sup>

e. Parties. Whether a suit of this kind should be brought in the name of the state or county or of some public officer designated for the purpose depends on the local statute.<sup>84</sup> The proper defendant is the actual owner of the land, if known, or the person appearing of record to be vested with the title.<sup>85</sup> Sometimes the law directs or requires the joinder of all persons having or claiming any error to make the real estate a party, as in proceedings in rem, in an action to collect taxes); Desormeaux v. Moylan, 26 La. Ann. 730; Schnitger v. Rankin, 192 Mo. 35, 91 S. W. 122; Evans v. Name of married woman defendant.—Proceedings for the recovery of a tax judgment against land owned by a woman, and assessed in her name while a widow, may be conducted in that name, although prior to the institution of the proceedings she has married a second time. Lavergne v. New Orleans, 28 La. Ann. 677.

Guardian for infant defendant.—The fact that an infant defendant is not represented by a guardian, in an action to enforce a tax lien on his land, does not render the judgment void, but merely erroneous. Keller v. Wilson, 90 Ky. 350, 14 S. W. 332, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 471.

Husband and wife.—Neither is a necessary party to a suit to enforce a tax lien against the lands of the other. Roberts v. Zansler, 34 La. Ann. 205; Lavergne v. New Orleans, 28 La. Ann. 677; Berry v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 46 S. W. 273; Bean v. Brownwood, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 43 S. W. 1036. In a suit for back taxes on land owned by a married woman, she is the only necessary party defendant. Sanzenbacher v. Santhuff, 220 Mo. 274, 119 S. W. 395.

Deceased owner.—The suit cannot be brought or continued against an owner who is dead, but should be against his heirs and devisees. Howcott v. New Orleans, 107 La. 305, 31 So. 668; State v. Edwards, 136 Mo. 360, 38 S. W. 73; Crosley v. Hutton, 98 Mo. 196, 11 S. W. 613; Brickell v. Farrell, 82 Fed. 220. There can be no citation to an estate, as an estate, to appear to defend an action to foreclose a lien for taxes. Perry v. Whiting, (Tex. Civ. App. 1909) 121 S. W. 903.

interest in the land in question;<sup>86</sup> but persons having no title to the property or interest in it are not permitted to interpose and present objections to the rendition of judgment, unless they appear as agents or attorneys of the parties in interest.<sup>87</sup>

f. Defenses. The owner of the property may in general set up any defense which repels the claim of the state or municipality to enforce the particular charge against the particular property.<sup>88</sup> Thus he may object to the legality or validity of the tax itself,<sup>89</sup> or of the assessment of the same on his property,<sup>90</sup> although mere irregularities or informalities in the assessment are not generally sufficient to defeat the action.<sup>91</sup> Also he may deny the delinquency of the tax or the liability of himself or his property to its payment.<sup>92</sup> But mere excessive valuation of the property for the purpose of assessment is not available as a defense,<sup>93</sup> unless it is shown to have resulted from an intentional or fraudulent disregard of the statutory requirement of equality and uniformity.<sup>94</sup>

g. Pleading. To sustain an action of this kind, the petition or complaint must be properly entitled,<sup>95</sup> and must describe sufficiently the particular property to be proceeded against,<sup>96</sup> and contain allegations as to defendant's ownership

Notice before increase of assessment.—In an action for delinquent taxes, a defense being that the assessment was increased with-

The legality of the tax is also presumed,<sup>9</sup> and the fact that it was lawfully voted or levied.<sup>10</sup> Other questions, such as the residence of defendant, the presence of property within the jurisdiction, or the title to the land in suit, are governed by the ordinary rules of evidence.<sup>11</sup>

i. Trial or Hearing.<sup>12</sup> Where there is but one application by a taxing power for judgment for delinquent taxes and all objections are made by the same property-owner, the objections may properly be joined and heard in the same proceeding, although several taxes are involved, the statute providing that the objections shall be heard and determined in a summary manner without pleadings.<sup>13</sup>

j. Judgment or Decree — (1) IN GENERAL. A judgment in a tax case is void if rendered prematurely or before the expiration of the time allowed by law for the filing of objections,<sup>14</sup> or if it is delayed beyond the term of court at which the statute requires it to be rendered.<sup>15</sup> But a judgment by default may be entered in proper cases,<sup>16</sup> and the court has power to make such orders as are necessary to facilitate the proceedings,<sup>17</sup> although not to pronounce two final judgments in the same case,<sup>18</sup> and its authority generally extends to the grant of such relief as the justice and equity of the case may require.<sup>19</sup> Statutory provisions as to the enrolment or recording of the judgment are to be strictly followed; the validity of the further proceedings may depend on their due observance.<sup>20</sup> out notice, where the clerk of the board of review testified that notice was mailed to the owner, which was shown by the entry on his record, the conclusion was warranted that the notice was mailed and received by some other officer of the owner, although its president and vice-president testified that they received no notice. People v. Odin Coal Co., 238 Ill. 279, 87 N. E. 410.

Overvaluation.—In a suit for unpaid taxes, the defense being that the assessment was fraudulent, evidence held to justify an honest belief by the board of review that the property was valued for taxation at its fair cash value see People v. Odin Coal Co., 238 Ill. 279, 87 N. E. 410. Evidence that the full value of certain real estate and improvements did not exceed seventy-five thousand dollars, but that the assessing officers had valued it for taxation at one hundred and eight thousand five hundred and fifty dollars, without more, was insufficient to show a fraudulent overvaluation justifying judicial interference in proceedings for judgment and sale. *People v. (II) FORM AND CONTENTS. The tax judgment should be substantially in the form prescribed by statute, if any,<sup>21</sup> and should show on its face all the facts essential to sustain the jurisdiction of the court.<sup>22</sup> In particular it must contain such a description of the land affected as will suffice to identify it with reasonable certainty,<sup>23</sup> and the description must correspond with that in the petition or complaint and in the notice or published advertisement, at least so far as to show that the same tract or parcel of land is intended,<sup>24</sup> and if several parcels of land are included in the one proceeding, the judgment should be rendered against each tract separately for the amount due on each.<sup>25</sup> Further, where the name of Evidence to identify.—A description in a tax judgment which distinctly points out the land in such a way as to leave no room for mistake as to the property intended is sufficient, and evidence of extrinsic facts is admissible to apply the description and identify the land. National Bond, etc., Co. v. Hennepin County, 91 Minn. 63, 97 N. W. 413. A judgment is not void because of a misdescription of the survey in the petition, citation, and judgment, where the description was accurate as to the number of acres, the abstract, and certificate numbers, and as to the original grantee, but gave a wrong name as the name of the patentee, where it was shown that there was no such survey in the county as the one named, and the abstract and certificate numbers and the grantee as stated in the petition, citation, and judgment, could apply to no other survey, and it also appeared that in an exhibit attached to the petition the description was accurate. *Wren v. Where tax bills against land on which an action by a city was based did not describe it, but merely mentioned it in one bill as fifty-seven acres, and in the others as sixty and twenty-nine one-hundredths acres northwest, and eighty-one and fifty-one one-hundredths acres southwest, and the judgment under which the land was sold described it as being in three tracts, giving the metes and bounds and courses and distances of each, the first tract containing eleven and twenty-six one-hundredths acres, more or less; the second containing seventeen and thirty-five one-hundredths acres, more or less; and the third containing forty-four and fifty-two one-hundredths acres, more or less, it was held that as there was no similarity between the description of the land in the petition referring to the tax bills as a part thereof, and the description in the judgment, and as it could not be told by an inspection of these two papers whether or not the land, or any part of it on which the city asserted its lien, was sold, the judgment should be vacated and set aside. Turner v. Middlesboro, (Ky. 1909) 117 S. W. 422.

the owner or defendant is required to be stated, it must be given correctly and not approximately.<sup>26</sup> The judgment should also contain an order for the sale of the land and give proper directions as to the time and conditions of such sale.<sup>27</sup> It should be dated and signed as the law directs,<sup>28</sup> and blanks occurring in the judgment in places necessary to be filled will be fatal to its validity.<sup>29</sup> But subject to these conditions, mere irregularities or informalities, or mere surplusage, will not vitiate the judgment to such an extent that it cannot support a tax-sale.<sup>30</sup>

(III) AMOUNT OF JUDGMENT. The judgment must state the amount of taxes found to be chargeable on the land and for which it is to be sold;<sup>31</sup> and this amount must either be written out or expressed in some other unmistakable manner; the use of numerals simply, without any words, marks, or signs to indicate that they stand for money, and for what denominations of money, is not sufficient.<sup>32</sup> Further the judgment should be for a definite amount against each tract or parcel of land included, and not in gross against them all.<sup>33</sup> It is error to include taxes not claimed in the petition or complaint,<sup>34</sup> or costs or fees not due or earned at the time of the rendition of the judgment.<sup>35</sup>

(iv) AMENDMENT AND OPENING OR VACATING. A tax judgment may be amended in matters of form or for the correction of clerical errors,<sup>36</sup> although not, it seems, where the defect proposed to be amended is such as renders the judgment entirely void.<sup>37</sup> It may be opened or set aside for sufficient cause,<sup>38</sup> on the application of a party in interest,<sup>39</sup> who is not chargeable with laches or unreasonable neglect of his own interests.<sup>40</sup>

(v) CONCLUSIVENESS AND EFFECT. A judgment ordering the sale of land for delinquent taxes, when rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction, is binding and conclusive like any other judgment,<sup>41</sup> on the owner of the property and those in privity with him and on other persons joined as defendants,<sup>42</sup> even

In Nebraska, where the amount or existence of a tax involved in a scavenger suit for the collection of taxes is not put in issue or determined as a controverted question prior to the entry of a decree, the court retains jurisdiction of the subject-matter for the purpose of correcting mistakes until the confirmation of the sale, under Comp. St. (1903) c. 77, art. 9, §§ 38, 39. State v. Several Parcels of Land, 79 Nebr. 668, 113 N. W. 196.

In Illinois it was at one time the settled doctrine that a judgment by default in a tax suit was not conclusive on the taxpayer and might be collaterally impeached. Gage v. Busse, 114 Ill. 589, 3 N. E. 441; Riverside Co. v. Howell, 113 Ill. 256; Gage v. Bailey, 102 Ill. 11; Belleville Nail Co. v. People, 98 Ill. 399; McLaughlin v. Thompson, 55 Ill. 249; Gage v. Pumpelly, 115 U. S. 454, 6 S. Ct. 136, 29 L. ed. 449. But this rule was very much narrowed by a statute (1879) which enacted that such a judgment should be conclusive evidence of its regularity and validity in all collateral proceedings, and should estop all parties from raising any objections which existed at or before the rendition of the judgment and could have been presented as a defense thereto, except in cases where the tax had been paid or the land was not liable for the tax. Revenue Laws, § 224. But cases in which the tax is claimed to be illegal or unauthorized fall within the exception. Hammond v. People, 169 Ill. 545, 48 N. E. 573; Gage v. Goudy, 141 Ill. 215, 30 N. E. 320; Drake v. Ogden, 128 Ill. 603, 21 N. E. 511.

Judgment as bar.—A judgment rendered in favor of a delinquent taxpayer on account of informality in the assessment is no bar to an application for judgment against realty for the same taxes the following year. People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 140 Ill. 210, 29 N. E. 730.

42. Boatmen's Sav. Bank v. Grewe, 13 Mo. App. 335.

Parties not joined as defendants.—A judgment in a statutory suit for taxes is strictly against the property, and does not bind the parties further than it may affect their interest in the property itself, yet, unless one having an interest in the land is made a party to the suit, his interest is not affected by the judgment. Walker v. Mills, 210 Mo. 684, 109 S. W. 44. Where defendant claims under a tax deed, plaintiff can show that, although he was the owner of the land, he was where the land was erroneously assessed and proceeded against in the name of one who was not the true owner,<sup>43</sup> and precludes inquiry in subsequent proceedings as to all matters of objection or defense which were or might have been raised in opposition to the rendition of the judgment,<sup>44</sup> including the regularity and validity of the assessment,<sup>45</sup> and the fact of the delinquency of the taxes.<sup>46</sup>

(VI) PRESUMPTION OF VALIDITY AND COLLATERAL ATTACK. Where a proceeding of this character is considered as summary, statutory, or in the exercise of a limited jurisdiction, the facts essential to the jurisdiction of the court must appear on the face of the proceedings and cannot be made out by the aid of presumptions.<sup>47</sup> But in other states a judgment of this kind is regarded as rendered in the exercise of a general jurisdiction and is supported by the same presumptions as obtain in the case of any other judgment of a court of general jurisdiction.<sup>48</sup>

not a party to the judgment on which the deed was based; the tax being levied against "unknown owner," and such evidence not being in contradiction of the record, but only questioning the identity of the parties. Wren v. Scales, (Tex. Civ. App. 1909) 119 S. W. 879. Where the proceeding is against property encumbered by a deed of trust, the beneficiary named in the deed, or the holder of the note secured, must be made a party; if not, he will not be bound by the judgment. Giraldin v. Howard, 103 Mo. 40, 15 S. W. 383; Williams v. Hudson, 93 Mo. 524, 6 S. W. 261. So where the decree bars only the equity of redemption, the right to redeem may be raised by an objection to a motion to confirm the sale. Logan County v. McKinley-Lanning L. & T. Co., 70 Nebr. 406, 101 N. W. 991. Again, if remainder-men are not made parties to the proceeding, they are not bound by the judgment. McCune v. Goodwillie, 204 Mo. 306, 102 S. W. 997. And although a tax judgment against land may be conclusive as against private persons, the public easement in a highway cannot be affected thereby. Sanborn v. Minneapolis, 35 Minn. 314, 29 N. W. 126. Where a suit to foreclose a lien for taxes was brought solely against the estate of a certain person, which was not an entity in law, and citation was addressed to such estate, and judgment rendered against it, the owner of the property was not bound. Perry v. Whiting, (Tex. Civ. App. 1909) 121 S. W. 403.

Non-service on one of several defendants.—A judgment in a statutory suit for taxes, brought against several defendants, may be vacated as to one and stand good as to the rest, and where two defendants in such a suit are served with process but the third defendant is not, the former cannot complain of the non-service on the latter. Walker v. Mills, 210 Mo. 684, 109 S. W. 44.

Record owner.—If the judgment is against the owner of record, a sale thereunder will pass the title as against the grantee in an unrecorded deed from him, unless the purchaser had notice of such deed. Payne v. Lott, 90 Mo. 676, 3 S. W. 402; Vance v. Corrigan, 78 Mo. 94. But this rule does

Where a default judgment for delinquent taxes did not state the years for which the taxes were due, as required by Rev. St. (1899) § 9304 (Annot. St. (1906) p. 4277), and the petition in the action was lost, and the contents thereof were not shown, the court could not presume, on collateral attack, that the petition alleged the years, as required by section 9303 (Annot. St. (1906) p. 4274), for the purpose of supplying the omission in the judgment. Cooper v. Gunter, (Mo. 1908) 114 S. W. 943. A suit to foreclose a lien for delinquent taxes on property of an unknown owner is a proceeding in rem, not strictly judicial, but only a step in administration proceedings, and the judicial department is resorted to only on account of the dereliction of the owner. Hence, the jurisdiction so invoked being special and limited by the act of the legislative department, noth-

In the latter case, and also in the former case provided the necessary facts do appear of record, the judgment is not open to collateral impeachment or attack on account of any errors, irregularities, informalities, or objections which might have been presented in defense to the action,<sup>49</sup> although its invalidity may be shown collaterally where the court was in fact entirely without jurisdiction.<sup>50</sup>

k. Appeal and Review. The statutes generally provide for an appeal from a judgment against land for taxes,<sup>51</sup> by a party to the action having an interest in ing is taken by intendment in favor of the court's action, but it must appear from the record itself that the facts existed which authorized the court to act, and that it kept within the limits of its lawful authority in so doing. Young v. Jackson, 50 Tex. Civ. App. 351, 110 S. W. 74.

4. WARRANT OR EXECUTION — a. Nature and Necessity. Where the statute itself contains explicit directions as to the sale of real property for the satisfaction of delinquent taxes, it may constitute a sufficient basis for the collector's proceedings in making such sale, without the necessity of providing him with a warrant or other process.<sup>64</sup> But on the other hand, if the law directs the issuance of a warrant, execution, or other writ, it is indispensable and no valid sale can be made without a valid process,<sup>65</sup> of the specific kind described, the law being construed with strictness in this regard.<sup>66</sup>

b. Form and Contents. The tax execution, precept, or warrant must be issued by the officer having authority for that purpose,<sup>67</sup> and be under seal, if so required by law,<sup>68</sup> and bear his proper written or printed signature,<sup>69</sup> and be addressed

In Illinois the statute provides that the county clerk and the collector shall make a certificate, to be entered on the record following the order of court, that such record is correct and that the judgment was rendered on the property therein mentioned, etc., which certificate shall be the process on which real property or interests therein shall be sold for taxes. It is held that the omission of such a certificate, or the fact that it is made or dated on a day other than that fixed by law for the purpose, will invalidate the sale. Glos v. Hanford, 212 Ill. 261, 72 N. E. 439; Kepley v. Scully, 185 Ill. 52, 57 N. E. 187; Sankey v. Seipp, 27 Ill. App. 299.

An order by the county court that the sheriff proceed to levy on and sell all property delinquent for taxes for a certain year on and after a certain day is not a compliance with a statutory provision that all unpaid or delinquent taxes may be collected from the land taxed or the persons liable on a warrant issued under the order of the county court. Hughes v. Linn County, 37 Oreg. 111, 60 Pac. 843.

Signature by majority of board.—Where the duty of issuing the warrant resides in a board of officers, as the board of assessors, it will be sufficient if a majority of them sign it; but the signature of any less number than a majority will not make the warrant valid. Belfast Sav. Bank v. Kennebec Land, etc., Co., 73 Me. 404; Sanfason v. Martin, 55 Me. 110; Sprague v. Bailey, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 436.

A printed signature is sufficient; it will be presumed that the officer authorized it to be affixed in that form. Hitchcock v. Latham, 97 Ga. 253, 22 S. E. 997; Textor v. Shipley, 86 Md. 424, 38 Atl. 932.

The misspelling of the officer's name does not invalidate the warrant, where it appears that he authorized another to sign it in his presence or actually adopted the signature and acted upon it. Vickers v. Hawkins, 128 Ga. 794, 58 S. E. 44.

Official description.—If the warrant is issued and signed by the officers having authority for that purpose, it is not a material omission that their official description is not added. Sheldon v. Van Buskirk, 2 N. Y. 473. But compare Short v. State, 79 Ga. 550, 4 S. E. 852. The addition of the letters "T. C." to the signature to a tax execution sufficiently indicates that the official who to the person who is the proper officer to execute it, either by name or by a sufficient general description.<sup>70</sup> It should contain all the necessary jurisdictional facts or all the facts required by statute to be stated in it,<sup>71</sup> and if it issues upon a judgment, it should so state, and must correspond with the judgment, any material variance being fatal.<sup>72</sup> In particular, the process must name or describe the person against whose property it is issued, if a known owner,<sup>73</sup> and contain a description of the land sufficient to identify it and prevent mistakes,<sup>74</sup> and state the amount of taxes for which the sale is to be made and also, if the law so provides, the year or years for which they are due.<sup>75</sup> Mere informalities or irregularities, not going to the essence of the officer's authority to make the sale, will not be regarded as vitiating the process;<sup>76</sup> but if it was absolutely void in the beginning, a sale made under it cannot be validated by a subsequent amendment of the process.<sup>77</sup>

c. Levy and Return. The levy of a tax execution on land must be made by the proper officer,<sup>78</sup> on property subject to seizure and sufficient to satisfy the writ.<sup>79</sup> Unless required by statute the levy may be made constructively and without going upon the premises by making a suitable indorsement upon the warrant or execution,<sup>80</sup> containing a sufficient description of the property seized,<sup>81</sup> and followed by notice to the party entitled to receive it.<sup>82</sup>

5. RESTRAINING SALE — a. Grounds For Injunction — (i) IN GENERAL. A court of equity has inherent jurisdiction, in the absence of statutory prohibition, to enjoin a threatened tax-sale of lands.<sup>83</sup> But this jurisdiction will not be exercised merely on a complaint that the proceeding would be oppressive or unfair, nor unless the application is brought under some recognized head of equity jurisdiction.<sup>84</sup> The principal ground for restraining such a sale is that it would be illegal, although not patently so, and therefore would cast a cloud on the owner's title;<sup>85</sup> but this does not apply where the proceedings are void on their face.<sup>86</sup> An injunction may also be granted where the party against whose property the proceeding is taken is not the tax debtor and the property is not that on which the tax was laid;<sup>87</sup> also where the taxes in question have already been paid or compromised,<sup>88</sup> and in some states where the owner has leviable personal property within the jurisdiction on which the collector has neglected to levy.<sup>89</sup>

(ii) ILLEGAL OR FRAUDULENT LEVY OR ASSESSMENT. If the levy of taxes was unauthorized, contrary to law, or in excess of legal limits, or if the assessment on complainant's property was illegal and void, and not merely irregular, equity may interfere by injunction to prevent a sale of the land assessed.<sup>90</sup> And so also where the assessment was made fraudulently or in arbitrary disregard of the law and of complainant's rights.<sup>91</sup>

(III) EXCESSIVE VALUATION. An excessive valuation placed on complainant's property for the purpose of taxation is not ground for an injunction, unless so grossly excessive as to furnish evidence of fraud or of an intentional disregard of the principle of equality and uniformity.<sup>92</sup>

(IV) ERRORS AND IRREGULARITIES. Equity will not enjoin a tax-sale of lands on account of errors or irregularities in the assessment or other proceedings which could have been corrected on a proper application and which do not affect the substantial justice of the tax or the liability of the land for its satisfaction.<sup>93</sup>

(v) ADEQUATE REMEDY AT LAW. Equity will not enjoin a tax-sale of real estate where complainant has an adequate remedy at law for the injustice or injury alleged,<sup>94</sup> as, by an appeal or certiorari,<sup>95</sup> mandamus to compel the board of equalization or review to hear and consider his application for a reduction,<sup>96</sup> action at law to recover back taxes illegally exacted,<sup>97</sup> or action for damages against the collector or officer making the sale.<sup>98</sup>

b. Conditions Precedent. One applying for an injunction to restrain a tax-sale of land must tender the taxes or so much thereof as he admits to be legal,<sup>99</sup> and must also show a sufficient excuse for his failure to appeal to the board of review for such relief as they could have granted him.<sup>1</sup>

c. Parties and Proceedings. Any person having a beneficial interest in the land in question, but no other, may sue to enjoin its sale for taxes,<sup>2</sup> and several complainants may join in the suit if they are all equally affected by the tax in question and allege against it grounds of objection common to them all.<sup>3</sup> The officers charged with the duty of making the threatened sale are the proper defendants,<sup>4</sup> and an adverse claimant of title may be brought in where the adjudication of his title is necessary to the determination of the issues.<sup>5</sup> The taxpayer should move without unnecessary delay,<sup>6</sup> and his complaint must set forth fully and distinctly, and not by way of inference or legal conclusion, the facts on which he

Wisconsin.—Kaehler v. Dobberpuhl, 56 Wis. 480, 14 N. W. 644; Dean v. Gleason, 16 Wis. 1. In the case last cited it appeared that, in making the assessment roll of a city, large amounts of personal property were omitted which very little diligence would have enabled the assessors to reach, and there were many errors and inequalities in the valuation of real estate which it seemed hardly possible for men of ordinary intelligence, acting under oath, to have committed; yet, as it could not be said, upon the whole evidence, that these errors resulted from anything but want of judgment and lack of diligence and business habits, it was held, in a suit to enjoin the sale of real estate for the taxes levied upon such assessments, that such errors did not invalidate the whole tax, and that the only remedy for such grievances was in the election of more diligent and competent officers.

relies for the grant of an injunction,<sup>7</sup> and he must prove his case,<sup>8</sup> encountering and overcoming, where necessary, the presumption of law that public officers have duly and regularly performed their duties.<sup>9</sup> A preliminary injunction will not be granted except in a very clear case and where it is apparent that it is necessary to protect the complainant's rights;<sup>10</sup> and in any case the court will so frame its decree as to require the complainant to pay so much of the tax as it finds to be legal and just.<sup>11</sup>

d. Operation and Effect of Decree. A decree enjoining the sale of land for taxes is not a ministerial act but a judicial decision against the validity of the tax, and therefore it is binding and conclusive until reversed, and any sale made contrary to the terms of the decree is illegal and void.<sup>12</sup>

F. Notice of Sale — 1. REQUIREMENT OF NOTICE OR ADVERTISEMENT. It is essential to a valid tax-sale of land that the statutory directions as to notice thereof shall have been complied with substantially if not literally; and whether this notice is required to be individual or general, and whether by personal service, published advertisement, or posting, the omission of it is not a mere irregularity but a defect which invalidates all subsequent proceedings.<sup>13</sup>

2. PERSONAL NOTICE TO RESIDENTS. Where the law requires personal notice to be given to the owner of the property, if he is known and a resident, it is mandatory and no valid sale can be made without such notice.<sup>14</sup> Within the meaning of such a provision, the "owner" includes all persons who are interested in the property, as coheirs or joint tenants or tenants in common,<sup>15</sup> and it means the person who owns the property at the time the notice is given, and not a former owner in whose name the land was assessed.<sup>16</sup> The law also intends that reasonably diligent action shall be taken to discover the true owner and make the notice effectual;<sup>17</sup> and thus if the owner is dead, an endeavor must be made to ascertain who are his heirs or representatives, and serve the notice on them, and if they are known or may be discovered, a notice addressed to the "estate" is insufficient.<sup>18</sup> Similar principles apply where the notice is directed to be given to the "occupant" of the premises,<sup>19</sup> or to the person "in actual possession" of the land.<sup>20</sup> Where the statute authorizes this notice to be given by mail, it is sufficient if a proper notice

3. PUBLICATION OF NOTICE. The laws of several states require, in the case of unknown and non-resident owners,<sup>22</sup> and sometimes in the case of all owners, whether resident or not,<sup>23</sup> that notice of tax-sales shall be given by advertisement published in one or more newspapers, and the sale will not be valid unless the provisions of such a statute are fully complied with.<sup>24</sup> A direction that the notice shall be published in a newspaper "published in the county" where the land lies is imperative and must be obeyed if there is such a paper.<sup>25</sup> It is commonly provided that the paper shall be selected or "designated" by the proper authorities of the city or county; and this is also a mandatory requirement;<sup>26</sup> and so where the paper is particularly named or described in the statute.<sup>27</sup> It is always under-

Publication in two papers.—The official publication of notice of city tax-sales in two newspapers, when the law requires it to be published officially in one newspaper, renders the sale invalid. Orlando v. Equitable Bldg., etc., Assoc., 45 Fla. 507, 33 So. 986.

A change in the name of the paper in which the notice is required to be published

stood, if not expressly required, that the advertisement shall be in the English language and published in a paper which is printed in the same tongue.<sup>28</sup> But it is a good publication if the notice is published in a supplement to the paper, or on an extra sheet, provided the circulation thereof is exactly the same as that of the paper itself.<sup>29</sup>

4. FORM, REQUISITES, AND VALIDITY OF NOTICE. Although some of the decisions maintain that mere informalities or irregularities in the notice of tax-sale will not invalidate it,<sup>30</sup> yet the tendency is to require a very strict and precise compliance with all the directions of the statute.<sup>31</sup> If the statute itself prescribes a form of notice, it cannot be safely departed from in any particular.<sup>32</sup> In any case the notice must show that it is official and proceeds from proper authority,<sup>33</sup> and must be in writing or printed and show clearly what it is intended to be.<sup>34</sup> In particular, it must state what tax it is that is delinquent,<sup>35</sup> and for what year levied or assessed,<sup>36</sup> and the amount of the tax for which the property is to be officer,<sup>42</sup> and that it will be a public sale or sale at public auction.<sup>43</sup> The time within which the owner may redeem from the sale is not usually required to be stated in this notice; but if so, it cannot be omitted.<sup>44</sup>

5. DESIGNATION OR DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY. The notice of tax-sale must describe the lands to be sold with such certainty and particularity that they can be clearly identified, without any reasonable chance of mistake, so that the owner may know that it is his property which is advertised and an intending purchaser may know what lands are to be sold; if the description is insufficient for this purpose, the notice is fatally defective,<sup>45</sup> as is also the case where the description, although clear and intelligible in itself, does not apply to the particular premises intended,<sup>46</sup> or where the notice describes the lands as belonging to a person other than the true owner.<sup>47</sup> If the statute requires the description in the notice of sale to follow that in the assessment, it is imperative that this shall be done, although this does not affect the question of the sufficiency of the description.<sup>48</sup> A faulty description in the notice cannot be cured by verbal communications made to bidders at the sale or by a correct description in the report of sale.<sup>49</sup>

6. TIME AND NUMBER OF PUBLICATIONS. The time prescribed by statute for the notice of sale is essential to its validity, and if the notice is given for anything less than the statutory time, the proceedings are as fatally defective as if no notice at all had been given.<sup>50</sup> Neither must the notice be prematurely begun, for it is

Description indefinite as to quantity.—A description in a notice of tax-sale is bad for uncertainty which states that the officer will sell a certain tract of land "or such undivided portion as may be necessary," or "two-thirds thereof," or so many acres "more or less." Sanford v. Sanford, 135 Mass. 314; Wall v. Wall, 124 Mass. 65; Bidwell v. Coleman, 11 Minn. 78; McKay v. Crysler, 3 Can. Sup. Ct. 436. But compare Schmoele v. Galloway Tp. Committee, 44 N. J. L. 145.

Effect of including lands not delinquent.—Where the notice of sale embraces all the lands on which taxes are assessed, and is not restricted to the lands upon which taxes are unpaid, it is irregular and defective. Morehouse v. Bowen, 9 Minn. 314; Prindle v. Campbell, 9 Minn. 212.

What portion to be sold.—The notice must also follow the statute in stating whether the whole tract will be sold, or an undivided interest in it, or a designated portion of it, or so much of it as may be found necessary. *Wall v. Actual date of publication governs, not nominal date.—In a case in Manitoba it appeared that lands were advertised for sale for taxes in two numbers of the "Gazette," as required, but that those numbers, although bearing certain dates, did not in fact issue equally defective in that case.<sup>51</sup> Where the statute requires a publication of the notice for so many weeks "successively," or once a week for a certain number of weeks, or a certain number of times within a limited number of days or weeks, it must be literally and exactly complied with, at the risk of invalidating the sale.<sup>52</sup> Whether the publication, under a statute of this kind, is required to be continuous up to the date of the sale depends on the wording of the local statute;<sup>53</sup> but if the last publication is made on the day of the sale, it is clear that it must actually be made before the hour fixed for the sale, otherwise it cannot be counted.<sup>54</sup> Two attempts at advertisement, both irregular on account of the time, cannot be coupled together so as to authorize a sale.<sup>55</sup>

7. POSTING OF NOTICES. A statute requiring the notices of tax-sales to be posted at certain places, or at public and conspicuous places in the county, is mandatory and failure to obey its directions will invalidate the sale.<sup>56</sup> It is also until later dates, dates too late to comply with the statute. On motion for an injunction to stay the sale, it was held that the statute was not sufficiently complied with, but that insufficient advertising would not, under the present laws, render the sale void, for which reason the injunction was refused. Wood v. Birtle, 4 Manitoba 415.

Publication on Sunday.—The publication is not sufficient if made on Sunday only. Ormsby v. Louisville, 79 Ky. 197, 2 Ky. L. Rep. 66. And if the last of the number of days prescribed should be Sunday, the notice should be published on Monday. Alameda Macadamizing Co. v. Huff, 57 Cal. 331.

Publication for ten days, Sundays excepted.—Where notice is required to be published for ten days, Sundays excepted, and it is omitted for two days, not Sundays, it is void. Haskell v. Bartlett, 34 Cal. 281. It is also defective if it be omitted one week day and published one Sunday. People v. McCain, 50 Cal. 210.

Contents of notice.—If the statute requires the posted notice to give the name of the oc-essential that the notices shall be posted at the time prescribed by the statute or at the required interval before the day of sale.<sup>57</sup> If the statute itself designates the particular places where the notices are to be posted, it must be shown that the requirement was exactly followed.<sup>58</sup> If the direction is that the posting shall be at "public" places, it is a question of fact whether or not a given house or place was "public" in this sense, the answer depending not alone on the character of the building or place, but also on the popular habit of resorting thereto or the reverse, and on its comparative publicity with reference to the other houses or buildings in the place.<sup>59</sup>

8. PROOF OF NOTICE OR ADVERTISEMENT. Whatever proof the statute may require as to the publication or posting of tax-sale notices, it must be strictly complied with or the sale will be invalid.<sup>60</sup> And ordinarily, if the statute appoints the evidence by which the fact of giving notices shall be proved, and directs how it shall be made and how recorded or preserved, such preappointed evidence is cupant of the building, it is necessary, in the case of the sale of a tenement-house, to give the names of the occupants; otherwise the sale is void. Amoskeag Sav. Bank v. Alger, 66 N. H. 414, 29 Atl. 407.

G. Mode and Conduct of Sale—1. OFFICERS AUTHORIZED TO SELL. It is essential to the validity of a tax-sale that it shall be made by the officer designated by law for that purpose.<sup>66</sup> It is also the general rule that after a collector's or treasurer's term of office has expired, and after his successor has been elected and qualified, he cannot make a valid sale of land for taxes, although the taxes were assessed and became delinquent before he went out of office.<sup>67</sup> But on the other hand the officers of a county have authority to sell lands for taxes which, after the assessment of the taxes, were included within the bounds of a new county.<sup>68</sup>

2. CONDUCT OF SALE IN GENERAL. A sale of land for taxes will be governed by the law in force at the time, and, as to any matters not specifically covered by the statute, by the laws applicable to judicial sales in general.<sup>69</sup> The officer's power to sell, being a naked power not coupled with any estate or interest of his own, is strictly construed, and in its execution he must conform to the statute which creates and confers it.<sup>70</sup> It is also his duty to see that the sale is conducted

An order of the county court cannot confer the power to sell land for the non-payment of taxes on any officer not authorized by law to make such sales. Twombly v. Kimbrough, 24 Ark. 459.

Officer de facto.—It has been held that a person filling the office of county treasurer, to which office the duty of making tax-sales belongs, may make a valid sale of land for taxes, although his appointment to office was wrongful. Watkins v. Inge, 24 Kan. 612. Compare, however, Baker v. Webber, 102 Me. 414, 67 Atl. 144 (holding that it is indispensable to the sale of real estate by a tax collector for non-payment of taxes that the collector be shown to have been legally elected and qualified to act in that capacity); Gould v. Monroe, 61 Me. 544; Payson v. Hall, 30 Me. 319.

Qualification of officer see X, A, 2, e.

Acting by deputy.—As to validity of tax-sales made by a deputy or a clerk of the county treasurer see Hall v. Collins, 117 Mich. 617, 76 N. W. 72.

Action of part of board.—Commissioners of forfeited lands may each convey alone the lands which he has declared forfeited, and all need not join in the conveyance; but where one commissioner has sold and received the price, his successor cannot make the conveyance without an order of court. Miller v. Williams, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 213.

lands on execution and make the deed. Webster v. Smith, 78 Mo. 163.

Sale must be valid or void as a whole. Where the statute prescribes different methods or regulations for the sale of different classes of land, as, improved and unimproved lands, or for sales for the taxes of different years, a sale which includes the different classes of lands or the taxes for different years must be valid as a whole or the title under it will fail entirely. Wallingford v. Fiske, 24 Me. 386; Moulton v. Blaisdell, 24 Me. 283.

A bidder at a tax-sale which is not conducted in the manner prescribed by law cannot be regarded as a purchaser and is not entitled to a deed of the land. Garlington v. Copeland, 32 S. C. 57, 10 S. E. 616.

in a fair and proper manner, with abundant opportunity for free competition among bidders, and any conduct on his part tending to stifle competition, favor certain purchasers at the expense of others, or sacrifice the property, is fraudulent and will invalidate the sale.<sup>71</sup> In particular the sale must be made for cash,<sup>72</sup> and at auction,<sup>73</sup> and it must be free, public, and open to all competitors,<sup>74</sup> except that, in some jurisdictions, the treasurer is permitted to make a private sale of lands which have already been offered at public sale and remain unsold for lack of bidders, when he has duly reported the facts.<sup>75</sup> Aside from such a statutory exception as this, it is a fraud for the officer to enter into a private arrangement by which he allows individuals to select the lands they wish to purchase, and Slaughter, 49 Tex. Civ. App. 180, 108 S. W. 703.

But minor informalities or irregularities, not of a nature to injure the rights of any one concerned or to deprive the sale of the character of a free and open competition, do not necessarily invalidate it. Drake v. Ogden, 128 Ill. 603, 21 N. E. 511; Youngs v. Povey, 127 Mich. 297, 86 N. W. 809; Cook v. John Schroeder Lumber Co., 85 Minn. 274, 88 N. W. 971; State Finance Co. v. Trimble, 16 N. The absence of the county treasurer at the time a bid was made at a tax-sale, although the statute requires his presence, is, at most, an irregularity not involving the sale. Minnesota Debenture Co. v. Scott, 106 Minn. 32, 119 N. W. 391.

Previous offer to rent.—The statute in Georgia requiring that when property which is not returned for taxation is sold there shall be an offer to rent or hire the property before the same is offered for sale does not apply to sales of wild lands. Barnes v. Carter, 114 Ga. 886, 40 S. E. 993.

Sale by wrong description.—In New York a sale of lands by the controller by descriptions other than those returned to him by the county treasurer is a jurisdictional defect rendering the sale void. People v. Golding, 55 Misc. (N. Y.) 425, 106 N. Y. Suppl. 821.

Statements depressing bids.—Any conduct on the officer's part which tends to prevent the attendance of bidders or a fair competition among those present will ordinarily avoid the sale. Townsend Sav. Bank v. Todd, 47 Conn. 190; Younger v. Meadows, 63 W. Va. 275, 59 S. E. 1087. But the fact that the officer stated at the sale that he hoped no one would bid more than the amount of the taxes and charges, on account of the inconvenience of disposing of the surplus, will not render the sale void. Southworth v. Edmands, 152 Mass. 203, 25 N. E. 106, 9 L. R. A. 118.

Emmons*, 34 Kan. 732, 9 Pac. 951, where it appeared that a county treasurer, conducting a sale of land for taxes, in good faith struck it off to one not present and bidding; and it was held that the sale was not void but that this was merely an irregularity.

3. PLACE OF SALE. The tax-sale must be held at the exact place designated by law or named in the advertisement, otherwise it will be void.<sup>77</sup> And this rule is applied with so much strictness that several cases hold that where the statute directs the sale to be held before the court-house door of the county, a sale made inside the court-house is void and passes no title.<sup>78</sup> The sale must also be made within the county in which the lands lie,<sup>79</sup> but not necessarily on the premises.<sup>80</sup>

No place designated.—Md. Hours of sale.—A law which requires the sale to be kept open from nine o'clock in the morning until four o'clock in the afternoon the discretion of the officer to fix the time of sale,<sup>82</sup> or where the proceedings have been delayed by appeal, injunction, or other process,<sup>83</sup> or where the time for holding tax-sales has been duly extended by competent authority.<sup>84</sup> On similar principles, where the law is such that the sale is to take place after a prescribed publication of notice, it must be held on the very day appointed in the notice or advertisement.<sup>85</sup> Whatever the requirement of the law may be, the day of sale can neither be anticipated nor delayed. If it is held prematurely, that is, on a day earlier than that authorized by law or appointed in the notice, it is invalid,<sup>86</sup> and so if it is held after the expiration of the tax lien or of the warrant or other process of the officer.<sup>87</sup> Nor, as a rule, can a valid tax-sale be made on Sunday or other non-judicial days.<sup>88</sup> is mandatory and must be strictly complied with. State v. Farney, 36 Nebr. 537, 54 N. W. 862. See also Keenan v. Slaughter, 49 Tex. Civ. App. 180, 108 S. W. 703.

b. Postponement or Adjournment. An officer making a tax-sale has no power to adjourn or postpone it unless such authority can be derived from the statute;<sup>89</sup> and an adjournment, when authorized, must be in the manner and for the causes prescribed by law, and a sale made at a time to which there has been no legal adjournment is not valid.<sup>90</sup> Where an adjournment from day to day is authorized, the sale cannot be postponed for more than one day at a time,<sup>91</sup> except that the officer may adjourn it over a legal holiday.<sup>92</sup> The sale with its adjournments constitutes but one transaction and may well be dated as of the day when it commenced.<sup>93</sup>

5. AMOUNT FOR WHICH LAND MAY BE SOLD — a. In General. It is always the intention that land offered at tax-sale shall bring not less than the whole amount of taxes due on it with the lawful costs and charges, and in some states this is positively required by law, so that a sale made for a less amount is void.<sup>94</sup> But this condition being fulfilled, the mere inadequacy of the price paid, considered with reference to the true or market value of the land, is no valid objection to the sale,<sup>95</sup> although in some jurisdictions we find laws forbidding the sale of prop-

A sale for delinquent taxes for less than the amount of the taxes, interest, and costs due thereon is only a sale of the taxes and not of the land, and its only effect is to transfer the lien of the county to the purchaser, who may enforce his lien by proper proceedings. *Barker v. But compare Holbrook v. Kunz, 41 Ind. App. 260, 83 N. E. 730, holding that one whose land is sold at tax-sale for less than the amount due for taxes cannot complain of such irregularity in the sale, since he can have the land restored to him by paying off the lien for the amount for which the land was sold.

Taxes partly paid.—A tax-sale of land for the whole of the taxes assessed, when part of the taxes thereon have been paid, is void. Dickinson v. Arkansas City Imp. Co., 77 Ark. 570, 92 S. W. 21, 113 Am. St. Rep. 170.

Sale for taxes of one year only.—A sale of land for taxes due for one year does not discharge those levied and delinquent for previous years. Medland v. Connell, 57 Nebr. 10, 77 N. W. 437.

Accepting less than statutory amount of interest.—Where the auditor-general in the sale of state tax land accepted six per cent interest on the state's claim instead of one per cent a month, as required by Pub. Acts (1893), p. 16, No. 16, § 74, the sale was held void. Horton v. Salling, 155 Mich. 502, 119 N. W. 912; Horton v. Helmholtz, 149 Mich. 227, 112 N. W. 930.

erty under these conditions for less than two thirds of its assessed or appraised value.<sup>96</sup>

b. Sale For Excessive Amount. If real property is offered at tax-sale for an amount exceeding the aggregate of taxes, costs, penalties, and charges for which the land is legally and actually liable, the sale, as a rule, is entirely void and passes no title.<sup>97</sup> But it will not be lightly assumed that the sale was made for an excessive amount; on the contrary, this must be clearly shown.<sup>98</sup> And in some states, in such a case, the owner of the property can have relief only on condition of paying or tendering what was justly due.<sup>99</sup>

c. Including Unauthorized Fees or Charges. The amount for which the land is offered may include costs and fees which are due and legally chargeable on the property up to the time of sale;<sup>1</sup> but the sale is invalid if such amount is made to include any fees, costs, commissions, or other charges which are illegal, excessive, unauthorized, or not yet accrued or due.<sup>2</sup>

But gross inadequacy of price may justify the courts in laying stress on other matters, constituting in themselves only irregularities, which otherwise would not be sufficient to invalidate the sale, and so finding ground upon the whole case to set the sale aside. Davis v. McGee, 28 Fed. 867. And see Walters v. Herman, 99 Mo. 529, 12 S. W. 890; Younger v. Meadows, 63 W. Va. 275, 59 S. E. 1087.

d. Application of the Maxim De Minimis. The maxim "de minimis non curat lex" has a very limited application to the case where land has been sold at tax-sale for a sum exceeding the amount legally due upon it, and the cases show that very small sums, illegally included in the aggregate, will invalidate the sale.<sup>3</sup> Some of the decisions indeed maintain that this maxim cannot be invoked at all in the case supposed, and that any excess in the charges, however trifling, will vitiate the whole proceeding;<sup>4</sup> while others refuse to sustain the sale if the excess was greater than the smallest fractional coin authorized by law.<sup>5</sup>

6. ESTATES OR INTERESTS SOLD. The statutes sometimes permit the owner of a specified and determinate fraction of a tract of land, or even of an undivided interest in it, to discharge the tax lien as respects that portion by paying a proportionate share of the gross tax; and where this is the case, a sale of the entire tract for the taxes assessed upon it as a whole, after payment of the tax on such a portion or interest, is void.<sup>6</sup> It is also the rule in some states to make separate Contra.—Wells v. Burbank, 17 N. H. 393.

3. See generally cases cited infra, this note. The following cases show what sums, in excess of the legal charges, have been held sufficient to invalidate the sale:

Arkansas.—Harvey v. Douglass, 73 Ark. 221, 83 S. W. 946 (one dollar and eighty-five cents); Salinger v. Gunn, 61 Ark. 414, 33 S. W. 959 (twenty-five cents).

Wisconsin.—Chippewa River Land Co. v. J. L. Gates Land Co., 118 Wis. 345, 94 N. W. 37, 95 N. W. 954 (twenty-five cents); Kimball v. Ballard, 19 Wis. 601, 88 Am. Dec. 705 (five per cent too much). And see Milledge

v. Coleman, 47 Wis. 184, 2 N. W. 77; Baker v. Columbia County, 39 Wis. 444; Barden v. Columbia County, 33 Wis. 445, 14 Am. Rep. 762, the last three cases holding that the unlawful addition of the sum of five cents for a United States revenue stamp would invalidate the sale.

United States.—Baker v. Kaiser, 126 Fed. 317, 61 C. C. A. 303, sixty cents.

On the other hand, the following cases held that the sums respectively mentioned, and which were charged in excess of the amount legally due, were too inconsiderable to affect the validity of the sale:

California.—O'Grady v. Barnhisel, 23 Cal. 287, a sum "slightly in excess" of the proper amount.

Kansas.—Ireland v. George, 41 Kan. 751, 21 Pac. 776 (one cent); Salls v. Barons, 40 Kan. 697, 20 Pac. 485 (five cents).

Mere erroneous calculation.—But where, in computing the penalty to be added to the tax against land, the county clerk treated a fraction of between five and ten mills as an entire cent, instead of rejecting it, as required by Kan. Gen. St. (1901) § 7614, it was held that a tax deed based therein was not rendered invalid; the excess being due to an erroneous calculation rather than an intentional overcharge. *Glenn v. assessments on the separate interests of tenants in common or other persons jointly interested, and where this is done the interest of one, although undivided, may be sold for his own default, without disturbing the title of the other.<sup>7</sup> But aside from these exceptions, it is the general rule that the tax collector has no authority to sell an undivided interest in land, but if the tract is to be divided the part sold must be a designated portion by metes and bounds.<sup>8</sup> It is also a general rule that the interest sold must be an estate in fee, not for years or any lesser estate.<sup>9</sup>

Exceptions to rule.—A part of a lot may be sold to pay taxes when they have accrued on that part. Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 349, 7 L. ed. 882. And half of a piece of land can legally be sold under an advertisement of the whole, if there is legal cause for staying the sale as to the other half, as where the whole tract was advertised as belonging to unknown owners, but the owner of one half subsequently appears and pays his tax. Clay v. O'Brien, 24 La. Ann. 232.

been paid.<sup>12</sup> But in other states, where all the property of the owner is liable for the taxes on any part, the collector is not bound to sell the particular parcel assessed, but may levy on other land.<sup>13</sup> Where this rule obtains, it is sometimes the privilege of the owner to designate the property to be levied on and sold,<sup>14</sup> or it may be left to the discretion of the collector whether to sell the whole or a part of the tract selected,<sup>15</sup> unless the local statute requires him to offer first a fractional part of the tract and not to sell the whole unless that is necessary to secure a bid.<sup>16</sup> Aside from such statutory requirements, there is no absolute limit on the quantity of land which may be put up for sale;<sup>17</sup> but it is held that the levy of a tax execution for a very small sum on a tract of land of large value is an abuse of discretion amounting to a fraud on the law, and is ground for avoiding the sale.<sup>18</sup>

b. Sale of "As Much as May Be Necessary." A statute providing that the collector shall sell each tract of land separately, "or so much thereof as may be necessary" to satisfy the taxes and costs, imposes an imperative limitation upon him, and the sale will be voidable, if not absolutely void, where he sells an entire tract when a portion of it would have been enough, or sells a larger portion than was necessary, or continues selling after enough has been disposed of to raise the required amount; and the fact that it was necessary to sell the quantity actually sold must appear of record.<sup>19</sup> But of course this rule does not apply where

Rule in Mississippi.—It is the duty of the tax collector, in making sales, to offer some one particular eighth of a section of land for sale, designating the particular eighth so offered, and if it will not bring the amount of the taxes due, he is then to designate some other particular eighth and offer that and the first together, and if the two thus offered will not sell for the amount of the taxes due he is to offer a third designated eighth, and so on until he has offered a sufficient quantity to bring the amount of the taxes due. *Herron v. a division of the land into smaller portions and the sale of one cannot be effected without material injury to the remaining portions or to the whole;<sup>20</sup> nor does it apply where the officer making the sale acts under a judgment and writ which commands him to sell the entire parcel.<sup>21</sup>

c. Sale of "Least Quantity" Necessary. In other states the law directs the officer to sell the least quantity of the tract that any purchaser will take and pay the taxes and costs. Here the purchase-money is invariably the amount of the charges for which the sale is made, and the best bidder is the one who will take the smallest fraction of the land at that price. A provision of this kind is mandatory, and if the sale is made in any other manner it is void.<sup>22</sup> But the whole of a tract of land may be sold to one bidder if no one will offer to pay the taxes and costs for less than the whole tract.<sup>23</sup>

8. SALE IN PARCELS. Where so required by law, a tax collector must divide the tract into parcels and offer them for sale separately; and if this direction is not obeyed the sale is not valid.<sup>27</sup> So also, where the taxes are assessed to different persons, or upon different and distinct interests, or on separate lots or parcels, the officer cannot legally sell the whole of a tract, including the several interests or lots separately taxed, but each interest or lot must be separately sold for the payment of that tax only for which it is liable; otherwise the sale is void.<sup>28</sup> But exceptions to this last rule are made where several contiguous tracts owned by one person are assessed as one whole,<sup>29</sup> where two or more lots, owned by the same person, are used and occupied as a whole or for one purpose,<sup>30</sup> where two distinct lots belonging to the same owner are offered separately and no bids are received,<sup>31</sup> and where the officer, in making the sale, obeys the directions of a judgment.<sup>32</sup> Conversely, where a tax of a single gross sum is assessed on several lots or parcels of land, grouped as an entirety, all the lots must be sold together for the payment of the tax, and the tax cannot be arbitrarily apportioned and the lots sold separately, each for the payment of its proportionate share.<sup>33</sup>

H. Persons Who May Purchase—1. GENERAL RULE. Any person who owes a positive duty to the state or municipality to pay the taxes on a particular tract of land cannot become a purchaser at a sale of the property for such taxes, or if he does so purchase it is deemed merely a mode of paying the taxes and does not found a new title or affect the existing title in any way.<sup>34</sup>

2. OWNERS AND OTHERS LIABLE. In most jurisdictions the owner of land can neither add to nor strengthen his title by omitting to pay taxes on it for which he is liable and then buying at the tax-sale; such a transaction amounts to no more than a payment of the taxes.<sup>35</sup> And the same rule applies to any person

The mere fact that taxes on land are assessed against a particular person does not impose on him the duty of paying the taxes if in fact the land does not belong to him and he stands in no trust relation to the owner; such person may permit the lands to be sold for the taxes and acquire a valid title to them by purchase at the tax-sale. Fink v. Miller, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 556. Compare, however, infra, note 36.

Stock-holders of corporation.—The fact that purchasers of property at a tax-sale were stock-holders in a corporation which then owned the legal title to the property is not sufficient to constitute such purchase a payment of the taxes, in favor of a subsequent purchaser of the property at a foreclosure sale. Contra.—In a few states it is held that the owner of land has the same right as a stranger to buy it at tax-sale, and he may thereafter rely on his original title or the tax title or both. Branham v. Bezanson, 33 Minn. 49, 21 N. W. 861; Neill v. Lacy, 110 Pa. St. 294, 1 Atl. 325; Coxe v. Gibson, 27 Pa. St. 160, 67 Am. Dec. 454; Stewart v. Taggart, 22 U. C. C. P. 284.

Land of purchaser sold jointly with land of another.—Where a party purchases at a tax-sale his own land, together with land of another, which he had listed in one tract as belonging to himself, he simply pays his own taxes and the sheriff's deed conveys no title. who is bound to keep down the taxes on the land either by contract with the owner of it or because of his fiduciary relation to the latter,<sup>36</sup> as in the case of a trustee, who cannot defeat the interests of the cestui que trust by a purchase at tax-sale,<sup>37</sup> or the beneficiary under a trust deed,<sup>38</sup> or a guardian in respect to the lands of his ward.<sup>39</sup> But the rule does not apply to one who claims the land under a voidable or radically defective title, for he may abandon it and rely on his tax title;<sup>40</sup> or to one who purchased the land subsequent to the levy of the tax and did not become responsible for its payment, for he may strengthen his title by discharging the tax lien in this manner;<sup>41</sup> or to a person who is not the owner of the land, although it is assessed in his name illegally and without his consent.<sup>42</sup>

3. MORTGAGOR AND MORTGAGEE. Where land is encumbered by a mortgage, neither the mortgagor nor a purchaser from him, who has assumed the mortgage, can defeat the lien of the mortgage by buying the property at a sale for taxes.<sup>43</sup> It is also quite generally held that the mortgagee, in similar circumstances, cannot oust the title of the mortgagor by a purchase at tax-sale.<sup>44</sup> And neither of two

5. DOWRESS AND LIFE-TENANTS. A tenant for life cannot purchase at a tax-sale or acquire an interest adverse to the reversioner or remainder-man by obtaining an assignment of the tax title.<sup>48</sup> But a widow in possession of land after her husband's death, and before the assignment of dower to her, has been held entitled to purchase the property at a tax-sale.<sup>49</sup>

6. JOINT TENANTS, TENANTS IN COMMON, ETC. Where land is owned by joint tenants, coparceners, or tenants in common, and taxes are assessed upon it as a whole and it is sold for non-payment of the same, neither of the cotenants can purchase a title at the sale which shall be paramount to that of his companions or operate to dissolve the relationship; he has a claim upon the others for reimbursement, but his payment inures to the benefit of all.<sup>50</sup> But where the undivided interests of the tenants in common are separately assessed, or where the statute provides that either may relieve his undivided share from the lien of the assessment by paying a proportionate amount of the tax, it is considered that a cotenant who has paid his share may buy the other's interest when it is sold for taxes.<sup>51</sup> A partition effected before the assessment of the particular tax leaves either party free to purchase, but not so where the division is made after the assessment, although before the sale.<sup>52</sup> One who has parted with his interest and ceased to be connected with the title as a tenant in common may buy an outstanding tax title;<sup>53</sup> and if the purchase at the tax-sale is made by an entire stranger, and the title is held by him until it has become fixed and mature, either of the former cotenants may then buy from him without restoring the relation of cotenancy or

Applications of rule.—The rule stated in the text applies to the husband of a tenant in common or coheir; he cannot obtain title as against her cotenant by purchase at a tax-sale. Busch v. Huston, 75 Ill. 343; Burns v. Byrne, 45 Iowa 285; Austin v. Barrett, 44 Iowa 488; Robinson v. Lewis, 68 Miss. 69, 8 So. 258, 24 Am. St. Rep. 254, 10 L. R. A. 101; Chace v. Durfee, 16 R. I. 248, 14 Atl. 919. But see Broquet v. Warner, 43 Kan. 48, 22 Pac. 1004, 19 Am. St. Rep. 124. So a trustee holding the legal title to an undivided interest in the land cannot acquire a tax title adverse to the cotenants of his cestui que trust. Sorenson v. Davis, 83 Iowa 405, 49 N. W. 1004. And the grantee of a tenant in common cannot divest the interests of the cotenants of his grantor by buying at tax-sale. Tice v. Derby, 59 Iowa 312, 13 N. W. 301; Austin v. Barrett, 44 Iowa 488; Flinn v. McKinley, 44 Iowa 68. But compare Sands v. Davis, 40 Mich. 18. And see St. Mary's Power Co. v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co., 133 Mich. 470, 95 N. W. 554. But on the other hand, the owner of mineral rights under a reservation in a deed of the surface of the lands may purchase the estate of the other at tax-sale, since they are not cotenants. Hutchinson v. Kline, 199 Pa. St. 564, 49 Atl. 312. And a purchaser at mortgage foreclosure sale, acquiring title to an undivided interest in the land, although he occupies in law the position of a tenant in common with the mortgagor, may take title to the remainder of the property by purchase of an outstanding tax title of the whole. Wright v. Sperry, 21 Wis. 331.

Title good against strangers.—A title thus acquired under a tax-sale by one of the cotenants will be good as against strangers. Burgett v. Williford, 56 Ark. 187, 19 S. W. 750, 35 Am. St. Rep. 96.

As foundation of claim of adverse possession.—Although a cotenant wrongfully purchases the property at tax-sale, yet if he takes out a tax deed and holds possession of the property for twenty years, claiming to be the exclusive owner, he may acquire a complete title by adverse possession. English v. Powell, 119 Ind. 93, 21 N. E. 458. But see Davis v. Chapman, 24 Fed. 674.

Remedy of cotenants.—Where the statute makes a tax deed prima facie evidence of title, the only remedy of the cotenants against one wrongfully taking a tax title to the whole estate is in equity; they have no title to support an action at law. Johns v. Johns, 93 Ala. 239, 9 So. 419.

being required to hold in trust for the others,<sup>54</sup> provided this is not done in pursuance of an arrangement or scheme to use the stranger as a cover and oust the cotenants.<sup>55</sup>

7. HUSBAND AND WIFE. It is a general rule that neither husband nor wife can purchase the other's land at a tax-sale,<sup>56</sup> although there are some authorities to the effect that the wife may thus purchase her husband's lands, where she is not under any obligation to pay the taxes, provided she acts in good faith and uses her own money.<sup>57</sup>

8. AGENTS AND ATTORNEYS.<sup>58</sup> It is a breach of trust for an agent or attorney having the management and control of real estate to purchase it at a tax-sale; and such a purchase vests no title in him, but inures to the benefit of the owner.<sup>59</sup>

Volunteer agent.—If land belonging to minors is selling for taxes, and a friend of the family buys it with his own money, and takes a deed to himself in trust for the minors, and gives his own bond for the surplus purchase-money, the title thereby made is as good and effectual in him as if no such trust had been expressed in the deed. Until the minors come of age it is unknown whether they will accept the purchase and repay his money, or refuse to pay and leave the land his. If he had bought with money furnished by the family, the case might fall within the rule forbidding a man to buy, directly or indirectly, his own land at a tax-sale. Harper v. McKeehan, 3 Watts & S. (Pa.) 238.

Where property is returned for taxes in the name of "Unknown," but represented by a third person, who bids in the land at a tax-sale and obtains a sheriff's deed, the third person acquires no title. Hudson v. Schumpert, 80 S. C. 22, 23, 61 S. E. 104, 105. And see Pope v. Wilder, 41 S. C. 540, 19 S. E. 996.

Attorneys at law.—The mere fact that the tax purchaser had been, during the life of the deceased owner, his attorney in certain suits would not cast upon him any

But the existence of a previous agency of this kind will not disqualify the person from purchasing if it has been finally terminated or explicitly renounced.<sup>60</sup> Some decisions, however, hold a purchase made in violation of such a trust to be only voidable at the option of the principal, who, if he wishes to set it aside, must refund the money paid;<sup>61</sup> and it appears that if the agent, after making such a purchase, conveys the premises to an innocent grantee for value, the latter will be protected against the equities of the former owner.<sup>62</sup>

9. LANDLORD AND TENANT. A tenant in possession of land who has stipulated or is required by statute to pay the taxes cannot acquire any rights as against his landlord by a purchase at tax-sale.<sup>63</sup> But if the tenant is not bound, either by contract or by statute, to keep down the taxes, there are some decisions to the effect that he may lawfully buy the premises at a tax-sale,<sup>64</sup> although the doctrine generally accepted is that the relation between the parties will not permit the tenant to take advantage of the omission of his landlord to pay the taxes and obtain an independent title to the land through a tax-sale.<sup>65</sup>

10. CLAIMANTS OF TITLE. If a person in the occupation of land is a mere intruder, holding the bare possession without any claim or color of title, there is nothing in his relation to the land or to the real owner to disqualify him from buying at a tax-sale;<sup>66</sup> but if he is in possession under claim and color of title, it duty to pay the taxes or affect his right to purchase. Pack v. Crawford, 29 Ark. 489. But it is otherwise if he is counsel for the owner in any matter relating to the title. Wright v. Walker, 30 Ark. 44; Lynn v. Morse, 76 Iowa 665, 39 N. W. 203; Paul v. Hill, 3 Tenn. Ch. 443.

is his duty to pay the taxes, and therefore he cannot purchase;<sup>67</sup> and irrespective of the question of possession, the rule is sometimes broadly laid down that any person who buys at a tax-sale land to which he claims title does not thereby strengthen his title, but only removes the encumbrance created by the tax lien.<sup>68</sup> As to the holder of a tax title, it is held that if he is in possession under his deed, his title is not strengthened by successive purchases at subsequent sales of the same land for taxes;<sup>69</sup> but that one who holds a tax deed, whether valid or void, under which he has not gone into possession, may abandon all claim of title under it and buy at a subsequent tax-sale.<sup>70</sup>

11. VENDORS AND PURCHASERS. A grantor of land on which taxes are delinquent cannot destroy the estate of his vendee by buying at the tax-sale, but his purchase is regarded as no more than a payment of the taxes.<sup>71</sup> Similarly a vendee who is in possession of land under an executory contract for its purchase, particularly if he has stipulated to keep down the taxes, cannot buy the land at a tax-sale and set up the title so acquired against his vendor.<sup>72</sup> But when an oral contract for the sale of land has been broken, or when, in the case of a formal contract, the vendor has accepted a surrender of it and released the vendee, the latter may thereafter purchase the land at a sale for taxes, although they were assessed on it during his tenancy.<sup>73</sup> A purchaser of land at judicial sale is generally bound to pay the accruing taxes during the period allowed for redemption or before confirmation by the court, and therefore cannot acquire a new title by buying it at tax-sale.<sup>74</sup> But after such a sale is vacated or set aside, he is under no such disability.<sup>75</sup>

12. PUBLIC OFFICERS. A tax collector, treasurer, or other officer cannot personally or by an agent purchase real estate at an official sale thereof, made by himself, for delinquent taxes thereon, and he acquires no title by such a purchase.<sup>76</sup> Neither can he act in such a purchase as the agent of a third person.<sup>77</sup> And the same rule is generally applied to all public officers who have any duties to perform in connection with advertising or selling the lands or recording the sales or issuing tax deeds.<sup>78</sup> But clerks or deputies are not generally within the pro-

Payment of bid.—Where a county purchases lands for delinquent taxes, it is not necessary for it to pay the amount to the treasurer. Lancaster County v. Trimble, 34 Nebr. 752, 52 N. W. 711.

86. See supra, XI, H, 14, a.

the object of the purchase is not the acquisition of property but rather the collection of the taxes; hence it is not, at least in its inception, an absolute legal title, carrying with it the right of possession and of disposition, but in the nature of an equitable title existing for the purpose of compelling satisfaction of the taxes and charges due;<sup>87</sup> or, according to some of the decisions, it is in the nature of a lien, which may be foreclosed by proper proceedings,<sup>88</sup> although it is generally held that the lien of the taxes for which the sale was made is extinguished by the sale and purchase.<sup>89</sup> The property continues subject to redemption for the same time and on the same conditions as if it had been bought by a private purchaser,<sup>90</sup> and a third person taking a conveyance from the state or municipality acquires whatever title his vendor had and holds it subject to the same equities and defenses.<sup>91</sup>

d. Certificate or Deed. In some states the law intends that a tax deed shall be issued to the state or a municipality buying at tax-sale, the same as to a private person.<sup>92</sup> But a more usual provision is for a list of the lands struck off to the state or municipality, to be made and certified by a designated officer,<sup>93</sup> and in some jurisdictions no deed or other similar document is required as evidence of the purchase.<sup>94</sup>

Thompson*, 40 Fed. 375. Compare Guidry v. Broussard, 32 La. Ann. 924.

In California, under Pol. Code, § 3788, providing that a tax deed to the state conveys absolute title as of the date of five years from date of sale, the sale vests the equitable and the deed the legal title in the state, and as against the state the owner at the end of five years forfeits all rights excepting the privilege under section 3817 to redeem at any time before the state actually enters, sells, or disposes of the land. Young v. Patterson, 9 Cal. App. 469, 99 Pac. 552. And see Baird v. Monroe, 150 Cal. 560, 89 Pac. 352; Santa Barbara County v. Savings, etc., Soc., 137 Cal. 463, 70 Pac. 457.

Not a title by escheat or forfeiture.—Lands purchased by a county on a sale for delinquent taxes are held in trust for the state for itself and for other political subdivisions entitled to any portion of the fund, and are not obtained by escheat or forfeiture so as to belong under the constitution to the school fund. Woodrough v. Douglas County, 71 Nebr. 354, 98 N. W. 1092.

Abandonment of title by subsequent collection of taxes.—Where there was nothing to show that county commissioners in assessing and collecting taxes upon unseated land returned by a township assessor knew that the same was a part of a warrant sold for taxes situated in another township, they discharged their duty in regularly assessing it and collecting taxes thereon, and were not called upon to satisfy themselves as to the accuracy of the return; and there was no basis for the claim that the commissioners had abandoned their title acquired by purchase by them at the tax-sale, because, after such purchase, they continued to assess and collect taxes upon the same. Gamble v. Central Pennsylvania Lumber Co., 225 Pa. St. 288, 74 Atl. 69.

e. Resale. The statutes commonly provide authority for the resale of lands bid in by the state or municipalities at a tax-sale.<sup>95</sup> Under one system of making such resales, an application to purchase may be made by any person who will pay the necessary amount and a certificate may thereupon be issued or assigned to him.<sup>96</sup> But elsewhere the sale must be made at public auction and usually at the time of the annual tax-sales.<sup>97</sup> In either case it is customary to require service or publication of notice to the former owners or those entitled to redeem.<sup>98</sup> The officers charged with the conduct of such sales are sometimes authorized to fix the terms of sale, which, however, must include payment in cash;<sup>99</sup>

Alabama.—Purifoy v. Lamar, 112 Ala. 123, 20 So. 975.

California.—Whether the state had acquired the right to sell land which it claimed to hold for non-payment of taxes must be determined by the proceedings prior to the delivery of the deed of the tax collector to the state pursuant to the original tax-sale. Chapman v. Zoberlein, 152 Cal. 216, 92 Pac. 188. Under Pol. Code, § 3897, authorizing a sale of lands sold to the state for taxes whenever directed by the controller and noticed by the tax collector, the original owner cannot require a sale to be made or not made on a particular day. Young v. Patterson, 9 Cal. App. 469, 99 Pac. 552. The constitutional provision that all grants, etc., shall be in the name of the people of the state, and signed by the governor, etc., does not apply to the statute empowering tax collectors to grant to purchasers at public auction land bought by the state at sales for delinquent taxes. When tax-sale complete.—A sale on proper notice by the state of land sold to it was complete when the purchase-money was paid and deposited in the county treasury; delivery of the deed not being essential. Young v. Patterson, 9 Cal. App. 469, 99 Pac. 552.

but generally they are forbidden to sell for less than the amount of taxes and costs due, including the taxes accrued for years subsequent to the original tax-sale.<sup>1</sup> The title of the purchaser at such a resale is so far founded on the original tax-sale that he acquires only such title as was vested in the state or municipality, not a new and independent title.<sup>2</sup>

f. Second Sale For Other Taxes. Where the law is such that the state or municipality acquires a complete and absolute title by purchase at a tax-sale, or by the expiration of the time allowed for redemption from such sale, the land is not thereafter assessable for taxes of subsequent years; and if it is so assessed and is sold, the second sale is invalid and passes no title,<sup>3</sup> or, according to the doc-

Sale to highest bidder.—The state has power to provide that the sale of its title to land for non-payment of taxes after the expiration of the redemption period shall be made for the highest price offered, regardless of the amount of taxes, interest, etc., accrued against the property, etc. Chapman v. Zoberlein, 152 Cal. 216, 92 Pac. 188; Fox v. Wright, 152 Cal. 59, 91 Pac. 1005. Under Pol. Code, § 3897, providing that, when the state shall become the owner of property sold for taxes, in reselling it, the tax collector shall sell the property to the highest bidder for cash, etc., the term "highest bidder" means the one who will make the highest cash bid for all the property, and not the person who will pay all the tax for the least amount of the land. Fox v. Wright, supra. In Nevada property bid in by a county at a tax-sale must be sold for its full value, and not merely for the taxes and costs due, as the treasurer is required by law to pay into the general fund of the county any balance remaining after the payment of the taxes and costs. *Lyon County v. Effect of subsequent assessment and collection of taxes.—Where, after property was sold to the state for taxes, the state continued to assess the property in the name of the former owner, and the tax thus assessed was paid by the purchaser from the state, the continuing thus to assess did not operate as a waiver of the first sale, having the effect of reinstating the title in the former owner. Lavedan v. Choppin, 119 La. 1056, 44 So. 886.

Estoppel of state to impair title granted.—Where lands have been sold for taxes and bid in for the state, and the state subsequently assigns all rights and interests acquired by it under such sale to an individual in no way interested in such lands prior thereto, who thereafter perfects the title thereunder, the state cannot impeach or impair such title by a resale of the lands for taxes due and unpaid for prior years. State v. Camp, 79 Minn. 343, 82 N. W. 645. And see Minnesota Debenture Co. v. Scott, 106 Minn. 32, 119 N. W. 391; Gates v. Keigher, 99 Minn. 133, 108 N. W. 860.

Purchase by original owner.—Where an owner of lands paid the delinquent taxes thereon by purchasing the interest the state acquired in the land by reason of the non-payment of the taxes, the tax title, whether valid or not, became merged in the original title, and a stranger thereto could not question the validity of the tax title. *Clippinger v. trine prevailing in some states, the second sale amounts to a waiver and relinquishment of all rights or titles acquired by the state or municipality under the first.<sup>4</sup> But on the other hand, where the original purchase is regarded as vesting in the state or municipality no more than a lien, or a right to hold the lands for redemption, it is not in any way affected by a second assessment and sale.<sup>5</sup> When property has passed absolutely to the state for taxes, the original owner is not concerned in the legality of tax-sales subsequently made.<sup>6</sup>

I. Bids and Terms of Sale — 1. BIDS AND BIDDERS. Any person competent to purchase the land may attend the tax-sale and bid,<sup>7</sup> and the sale, when required by law to be made to the highest bidder, must appear of record to have been so made.<sup>8</sup> But where the bid is for a certain quantity of land, instead of a sum in cash, it must be definite and precise or it may be rejected;<sup>9</sup> and under some statutes the property must be struck off to the bidder who will agree to accept the lowest rate of interest from the date of the sale on the amount of the tax.<sup>10</sup> There is no objection to requiring a deposit of a reasonable portion of the price as an evidence of good faith.<sup>11</sup> The successful bid at a tax-sale may be assigned by the bidder making it.<sup>12</sup>

2. STIFLING COMPETITION AND COMBINATIONS AMONG BIDDERS. A tax-sale will be invalidated by any fraudulent conduct on the part of the successful bidder which tends to prevent competition or procure an undue advantage for himself,<sup>13</sup> as for instance where he makes statements at the sale to the assembled bidders disparaging the title to be sold or otherwise tending to chill their bidding or warns or requests them not to bid against him.<sup>14</sup> So also any agreement among the bidders at the sale, express or tacit, that they will take turns in bidding and not compete against each other, is a fraud on the law and on the owner of the land and will render the sale voidable at his instance, if not absolutely void.<sup>15</sup> But two or more persons may agree to bid jointly at a tax-sale, or form a partnership for that purpose, if it does not appear that this tended to keep down competition or to prevent a fair sale.<sup>16</sup> And fraud and collusion among the other bidders, to which the actual buyer is not privy and of which he is ignorant, will not vitiate the sale.<sup>17</sup> The existence of an unlawful pool or combination among the bidders must be proved by a clear preponderance of the evidence,<sup>18</sup> and cannot be inferred from the mere fact that there were several persons present at the sale and that they did not bid against each other.<sup>19</sup> There are also decisions to the effect that fraud committed by the purchaser, by a combination with other bidders or otherwise, will not defeat the title of his subsequent vendee without notice of the fraud and for value.<sup>20</sup>

3. TERMS OF SALE. A tax-sale must be made on the basis of a payment in cash, and the officer can neither give credit to the purchaser nor accept his note or due-bill in payment.<sup>21</sup>

J. Payment of Price and Disposition of Proceeds — 1. PAYMENT AND RECOVERY OF PRICE. To acquire title under a tax-sale the purchaser must pay the amount of his bid<sup>22</sup> to the officer authorized to receive it<sup>23</sup> within the time limited by statute for that purpose,<sup>24</sup> or, if the law requires payment to be made "forthwith" or "immediately," then with proper promptness, a short or inconsiderable delay not being held to invalidate the sale,<sup>25</sup> especially when caused by the congestion of business in the treasurer's office.<sup>26</sup> The purchaser cannot be required to pay costs or charges or anything beyond the amount of his bid,<sup>27</sup> except where the statute requires him to pay interest also.<sup>28</sup> Payment of the bid may be enforced by suit,<sup>29</sup> or, if payment is refused, the land may be reoffered for sale.<sup>30</sup>

2. SURPLUS BOND. In some states the surplus of the purchase-money, to which the owner of the land is entitled, is secured to him by a bond of the purchaser to account for the excess over the taxes and charges, which bond is made a lien upon the land.<sup>31</sup> The giving of this surplus bond is a condition precedent to the passing of title to the purchaser,<sup>32</sup> provided there is any surplus to be covered

What constitutes sale on credit.—The fact that the treasurer, in conducting a tax-sale, instead of stopping to take the money when the property is struck off, postpones payment of the amounts to a time immediately following the sale, does not constitute a sale on credit. Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Wall, 129 Iowa 651, 106 N. W. 160.

Giving credit after sale.—It is no objection to the validity of a tax-sale that, in a case where the treasurer had made no agreement to give any credit to the purchaser, he took his note for a part of the price, as the treasurer is bound to account for the whole sum, and the taking of the note is a matter between the purchaser and himself in his private character. Purchase by county.—Where land is struck off to the county, it is unnecessary that the amount of the bid shall be paid, as the officer receiving it would be obliged at once to turn it back into the treasury in payment of the taxes. Bond given by third person.—Where the treasurer sold the land to one person, and by it,<sup>33</sup> and payment of the whole amount of the purchase-money to the treasurer cannot be taken as a substitute for it.<sup>34</sup> It should be executed promptly after the sale, but a delay in respect to this requirement is not a fatal defect, provided the bond is given before the expiration of the time allowed for redemption.<sup>35</sup> The bond should describe the land affected<sup>36</sup> and state the amount of the surplus correctly.<sup>37</sup> If its execution and delivery are brought into issue, these facts must be proved affirmatively,<sup>38</sup> although they may sometimes be presumed, under proper circumstances, and especially after the lapse of many years.<sup>39</sup> The right of action on such a bond is in the treasurer named therein as the obligee.<sup>40</sup>

3. DISPOSITION OF PROCEEDS. The proceeds of a tax-sale must be paid into the proper treasury and applied in discharge of the various taxes and costs against the land, being distributed among the different municipalities interested in proper proportions;<sup>41</sup> but the tax purchaser is not responsible for the application of his money, and his title is not affected by a misappropriation of it.<sup>42</sup> The surplus, if any, belongs to the owner of the land at the time of the sale,<sup>43</sup> and will be paid the deed was made to another, and the latter gave his bond for the surplus money, it was an irregularity, but a stranger could not take advantage of it. Morton v. Harris, 9 Watts (Pa.) 319.

Omission to file bond.—The omission of the treasurer to file the surplus bond will not vitiate the purchaser's title. Burns v. Lyon, 4 Watts (Pa.) 363; White v. Willard, 1 Watts (Pa.) 42.

33. Devinney v. Reynolds, 1 Watts & S. (Pa.) 328 (surplus bond not required where the cost of giving it would exceed the amount of the surplus); *Gibson v. 34. Connelly v. Nedrow, 6 Watts (Pa.) 451. But see Rogers v. Johnson, 67 Pa. St. 43, holding that payment of the entire purchase-money, instead of giving a surplus bond, is a mere irregularity, not fatal to the sale, and cured in five years.

Mandamus to compel payment.—The owner, whose title has been cut off by a tax-sale, may have mandamus to compel the payment to him of any surplus money received on the over to him provided he applies for it within the proper time.<sup>44</sup> But if there are liens or encumbrances on the property, by mortgage, judgment, or otherwise, and these are divested by the tax-sale, then it is generally held that the surplus should be applied to the various liens in their order,<sup>45</sup> and under this rule it may go to a subsequent purchaser at execution sale.<sup>46</sup>

4. FEES AND EXPENSES OF SALE. The costs and expenses of a tax-sale are payable out of the proceeds of the sale,<sup>47</sup> and the county or city is not to be held liable for them;<sup>48</sup> on the contrary, the officer whose duty it is to advertise and sell is personally liable for expenses incurred outside his own office, such as the charges of the printer for publishing the advertisements.<sup>49</sup> In regard to the various items sale. People v. Hammond, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 276.

Liability on bond.—A tax collector and sureties on his bond are liable for any surplus in his hands from the proceeds of sales of real property sold for taxes under a condition in the bond for his faithfully executing his office and the several duties required of him by law. State v. Wilson, 107 Md. 129, 68 Atl. 609.

Authority of court and remedy of collector.—Under Md. Code Pub. Gen. Laws (1904), art. 81, §§ 51, 53, directing the tax collector to sell property levied on for taxes for cash to the highest bidder, retaining the amount of the taxes with interest and costs, and "paying the surplus . . . to the owner thereof," and requiring him to report the sale to the circuit court for its ratification, where no sufficient cause to the contrary is shown, etc., the circuit court has no authority to distribute the proceeds of a sale by the collector, and where the collector cannot determine to whom the surplus is due he may institute a proceeding to which all persons interested may be made parties. State v. Wilson, 107 Md. 129, 68 Atl. 609.

Claims against United States.—If land is sold by the United States for a federal tax and bid in for more than is due, the government is liable to the landowner for the surplus. U. S. v. Lawton, 110 U. S. 146, 3 S. Ct. 545, 28 L. ed. 100. But he cannot sue until after demand made on the secretary of the treasury; and the statute of limitations runs from the date of his application. U. S. v. Taylor, 104 U. S. 216, 26 L. ed. 721.

Void sale.—If the tax-sale was entirely void, no part of the money paid by the purchaser can be claimed or recovered by the owner; as in that case he may disregard the pretended sale or may have it set aside, but the purchaser is entitled to have his money refunded. Goddard v. Seymour, 30 Conn. 394; Sponable v. Woodhouse, 48 Kan. 173, 29 Pac. 394; Haxton v. Harris, 19 Kan. 511. The two cases last cited hold that if the county treasurer becomes the purchaser at tax-sale, contrary to his official duty, the money paid by him into the treasury does not belong to the owner, nor can it be returned to the treasurer, but is forfeited to the public.

of the surplus money, he will be held to have ratified the sale and cannot afterward impeach its validity. Clyburn v. McLaughlin, 106 Mo. 521, 17 S. W. 692, 27 Am. St. Rep. 369.

Mortgagee.—A mortgagee who was under no duty or obligation to pay the taxes on the land, and whose title is divested by the tax-sale, has an equitable lien on the surplus proceeds of the sale, as against the mortgagor and those claiming under him. McDuffee v. Collins, 117 Ala. 487, 23 So. 45; Worcester v. Boston, 179 Mass. 41, 60 N. E. 410; Brockway v. Humphrey, 4 Nebr. (Unoff.) 403, 94 N. W. 625; Sutherland v. Brooklyn, 156 N. Y. 605, 51 N. E. 433 [reversing 87 Hun 82, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 959]. After sale of land for taxes, and before redemption, a mortgagee's interest is practically transferred to the fund, and he is entitled to any excess paid by the purchaser over the tax lien to be applied on the mortgage debt. Farmer v. Ward, 75 N. J. Eq. 33, 71 Atl. 401.

47. Burke v. Blan, 79 Ala. 97; O'Grady v. Barnhisel, 23 Cal. 287; Kregelov. Flint, 25 Kan. 695.

Void sale.—But the costs of sale cannot be charged against the land where the sale was invalid. Texarkana Water Co. v. State, 62 Ark. 188, 35 S. W. 788; Covell v. Young, 11 Nebr. 510, 9 N. W. 694; Hamer v. Weber County, 11 Utah 1, 37 Pac. 741.

Amount chargeable.—A county cannot collect a larger sum for advertising a tract of land in a delinquent tax list than it pays to the publisher. Genthner v. Lewis, 24 Kan. 309.

48. Payne v. Washington County, 25 Fla. 798, 6 So. 881; Ward v. Appling County, 80 Ga. 662, 6 S. E. 914; People v. Long, 13 Ill. 629; Abbett v. Switzerland County, 124 Ind. 467, 24 N. E. 1090.

49. Moore v. Magee, 48 Miss. 567; Enloe v. Hall, 1 Humphr. (Tenn.) 303.

Suit by treasurer.—Where a county treasurer sells land for delinquent taxes, but fails to collect from the purchaser the sum bid, he cannot maintain the statutory action of fees and costs allowed and the circumstances under which they may be charged, the matter is entirely regulated by statute;<sup>50</sup> and sometimes special provisions are made for the case where the state or municipality becomes the purchaser.<sup>51</sup> But it is a general rule that no officer is allowed to make unnecessary costs; and thus where the land is sold at one sale for the delinquent taxes of two different years, only one set of costs can be made;<sup>52</sup> and so, where the same person buys several parcels of land and a single deed is desired and can be made to answer for all, the officer is not allowed to charge for as many separate deeds.<sup>53</sup> And if the lands of many persons are included in one advertisement, the entire cost cannot be charged against one of them, but it must be justly apportioned.<sup>54</sup>

K. Report and Confirmation of Sale — 1. REPORT OR RETURN AND RECORD — a. In General. The report or return of the officer who has made a tax-sale, setting forth his doings and the particulars of the sale, is an essential element of the sale, serving several very important purposes, and it must affirmatively appear that such report was duly made or the tax title will in most states be voidable if not absolutely void.<sup>55</sup> Furthermore, if the statute requires the report against the purchaser for the fee allowed the treasurer in cases of "actual" sales; an actual sale involves the collection of the price. Miles v. Miller, 5 Nebr. 269.

See also cases cited in the following notes.

Sale to state.—A sale of land by the trustee of a county to the treasurer of the state at a tax-sale is void in Tennessee, where the said trustee fails to file in the office of the clerk of the circuit court a certified list of the land so sold by him, as required by Acts (1897), p. 34, c. 1, § 63. Harris v. Mason, 120 Tenn. 668, 115 S. W. 1146, 25 L. R. A. N. S. 1011; Tax Title Cases, 105 Tenn. 243, 58 S. W. 259.

Purposes of report.—The report of tax-sales is said to be conducive to the protection of the persons interested in the land, and hence the statute must be strictly complied with. Landis v. Vineland, 60 N. J. L. 271, 37 Atl. 1099, 61 N. J. L. 424, 39 Atl. 685. Again, it may be important to furnish record evidence of the fact and the particulars of the sale, and serve as the basis for making out the tax deed at the proper time. Morton v.

to be made within a limited time after the sale, it must be strictly complied with, and it is a fatal defect if the report is made too late.<sup>56</sup>

b. Effect of Omission of Report or Return. It is generally held that the omission of the proper officer to make his report or return of the tax-sale is a fatal defect and one which invalidates the title founded on such sale,<sup>57</sup> although in some states this is considered only an irregularity, not fatal to the title, especially in view of constitutional or statutory provisions dispensing with the extreme strictness of the rule regarding tax titles.<sup>58</sup> And it should be noted that the loss of such a report or return once duly made, or the fact that it cannot be found in the proper office, will not necessarily affect the tax title, since here the presumption may be invoked that public officers have duly and regularly performed the duties with which they were charged.<sup>59</sup>

Reeds, 6 Mo. 64. See Wescott v. McDonald, 22 Me. 402. And it furnishes the proper official evidence of the amount for which each tract of land was sold, and hence is important as determining the amount required for redemption. *Salinger v. Duty of recorder.—It is the duty of the clerk or recorder to admit the report of tax-sales to record, if it conforms to the statute, without inquiring into the validity of the sale. Randolph Justices v. Stalnaker, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 523.

Manner and sufficiency of filing or recording.—Where the tax collector presented his certificates of the tax-sales to the county recorder for filing, and the latter received them, but did not mark them "filed" because no fees were paid him, it was held that the certificates must be deemed to have been filed, because the recorder was not entitled to fees. Rollins v. Wright, 93 Cal. 395, 29 Pac. 58. But on the other hand, a report attached to the tax record which must remain in the treasurer's office cannot be regarded as having been filed in the clerk's office. Jenkinson v. Auditor-Gen., 104 Mich. 34, 62 N. W. 163. In New Hampshire, if the collector's return is put on file in the clerk's office, it is not necessary that it shall be copied into the records. Gibson v. Bailey, 9 N. H. 168.

Separate records of sales to state and to individuals.—Kirby Dig. Ark. § 7092, requiring the clerk of the county court to make a record of all tax-sales in a substantial book, to "record in a separate book" each tract sold for taxes to the state, and to certify to the auditor of state a copy of each of said sale lists "as recorded in said book," contemplates separate records of sales to individuals and sales to the state, but not that the first record shall contain a list of sales to the state, nor that the record of sales to the state must be kept in a separate book. Leigh v. Tripp, 91 Ark. 117, 120 S. W. 972. Such statute is directory and does not invalidate a sale to the state where the records are not kept separately, technical irregularities not prejudicial to the owner not being regarded, and section 7114 requiring proceedings to set aside sales on account of such irregularities to be instituted within the period allowed for redemption. Leigh v. Tripp, supra.

Time of filing see supra, XI, K, 1, a.

Noting time of filing.—Under some statutes it is imperative that the recorder shall note on the list or otherwise the time of filing the same. McCallister v. Cottrille, 24 W. Va. 173; Simpson v. Edmiston, 23 W. Va. 675; Barton v. Gilchrist, 19 W. Va. 223; Fay v. Crozer, 156 Fed. 486, West Virginia statute.

Authentication of record.—Records of tax-sales may be entered in a separate book kept for that purpose, but they must be authenticated by the official signature of the recording officer. Isaacs v. Shattuck, 12 Vt. 668. See Mersereau v. Miller, 112 Mich. 103, 70 N. W. 341, as to effect of county clerk signing himself as "register" instead of "clerk."

Record as evidence.—When the county treasurer's record of a tax-sale and the certificate based thereon conflict, the former must be treated as the original entry. Kneeland v. Hull, 116 Mich. 55, 74 N. W. 300. Where the report of sale of taxes made by the county treasurer was received in evidence, and was indorsed, "Received and filed" on a certain date, and signed by the county clerk, the proceedings were not open to the objection that there was no report of the county treasurer's sale, which the law provides must be made by the county treasurer and filed with the county clerk. Temple v. Preston, 150 Mich. 486, 114 N. W. 336.

In Mississippi a sale of land to the state in 1868 for taxes cannot be held void merely because it appears only in the obsolete records and was not brought forward under the abatement act of 1875 (Acts (1875), p. 11, c. 2) or the acts of 1880 (Acts (1880), p. 88, c. 9) or 1890 (Acts (1890), p. 16, c. 5), requiring compilation of lands claimed to be held by the state; those acts not canceling tax-sales which were not listed in compliance therewith, unless the lands were omitted by and with the advice of the attorney-general, as rea tax deed based thereon may not be valid.<sup>61</sup> In particular, the report must show the essentials of a valid sale,<sup>62</sup> setting forth specifically the time and manner of giving notice thereof,<sup>63</sup> the time of the sale,<sup>64</sup> and the place where it was held,<sup>65</sup> and it must contain such a description of the land sold as will suffice to identify it clearly,<sup>66</sup> and say what estate in the land was sold,<sup>67</sup> and that it was necessary to sell the whole of a given tract in order to make the taxes and charges, if such was the case,<sup>68</sup> and it must also name or designate the purchaser,<sup>69</sup> and state the Act (1899), p. 1084, c. 435, requiring the county trustee to make public sale of land subject to delinquent taxes, and requiring that he strike off to the treasurer all lands in lots so sold, when the full amount of taxes, penalties, and costs are not bid at the sale by some private person, and that he shall then file with the clerk a certified list of the lands so struck off, specifying the days of sale, the amounts of the respective taxes for which the sale was made, and each item of cost thereof, where a list contained figures, between perpendicular lines, with nothing to indicate that the figures stood for dollars and cents, and there was no separation of the tax due the state from that due the county, or the amount of any special tax, the list was void, and did not operate to pass any title to the state.

amount for which the land was sold.<sup>70</sup> It is generally necessary that the report shall be officially signed, and if the law requires it also to be certified, attested, or verified by affidavit, this too is indispensable.<sup>71</sup> Finally if the collector neglects to comply with a direction of the statute requiring him to state that he "is not now, nor has he at any time been, directly or indirectly interested in the purchase of any such lands," this will be ground for setting aside the sale and restraining the execution of a deed.<sup>72</sup>

e. Amendment. Where the report or return, or record thereof, shows a fatal defect in the proceedings on the face of it, it cannot be amended in such a manner as to make the sale appear valid, at least after the right of redemption has expired,<sup>73</sup> or where the effect of the amendment will be to divest the title of a bona fide purchaser from the original owner.<sup>74</sup>

2. CONFIRMATION OF SALE BY COURT. Proceedings for the confirmation of a tax-sale are prescribed or authorized by law in several of the states,<sup>75</sup> and in these jurisdictions, as a rule, a sale of land for taxes pursuant to a decree in an overdue tax suit vests no title in the purchaser until confirmation.<sup>76</sup> Such proceedings

Objections after default decree in "scavenger" suit.—In Nebraska the validity of taxes involved in a default decree rendered in a scavenger suit under Comp. St. (1907) c. 77, art. 9, may be contested on an application to confirm the sale; and when it appears on objections to such application that the decree includes taxes which are illegal and void, the motion to confirm the sale should be denied and the error in the decree corrected. State v. Several Parcels of Land, 81 Nebr. 770, 116 S. W. 682; Prudential Real Estate Co. v. Hall, 79 Nebr. 805, 808, 113 N. W. 243, 116 N. W. 40; State v. Several Parcels of Land, 75 Nebr. 538, 106 N. W. 663. A proceeding which deprives a person of his property by means of a void tax is gross injustice within the meaning of Comp. St. (1907) § 5235, providing that a confirmation of a tax-sale shall be denied where the taxes and assessments or a part thereof were based on proceedings wherein there had been gross injustice. State v. Several Parcels of Land, supra.

Where a purchaser at a void sale for taxes sues to foreclose the tax lien and the land is sold, it is a judicial sale, and does not become final until confirmation. Barker v. Hume, 84 Nebr. 235, 120 N. W. 1131.

Sale to state.—Confirmation of a tax-sale is necessary where the land was struck off to the state, as well as in the case of an individual purchaser; and until the sale is confirmed, the state is only a preferred bidder. Neal v. Andrews, 53 Ark. 445, 14 S. W. 646. After various decrees and orders, and vacations thereof, in proceedings for the sale of land for the non-payment of taxes, it appeared that the money paid by the purchasers had been distributed and was beyond their reach; and, the purchasers having neither money nor deeds of the land, a chan-must be brought before a court of competent jurisdiction,<sup>77</sup> and upon the giving of the prescribed notice to the owner of the land and other parties in interest.<sup>78</sup> They are founded on the report or return of the officer making the sale, supplemented by testimony if necessary,<sup>79</sup> and the purchaser must show full compliance with the law regulating such sales.<sup>80</sup> The order or decree of the court confirming the sale<sup>81</sup> may be vacated by the court while the proceeding remains within its jurisdiction,<sup>82</sup> or, if it is void for want of jurisdiction or erroneous on its face, it may be set aside or reversed on appeal;<sup>83</sup> but otherwise it has the force and effect of a judgment, and in some states is held so far conclusive as to cut off all inquiry into the validity of the tax-sale,<sup>84</sup> although in some others it only establishes a prima facie case for the purchaser at the tax-sale, so as to cast the burden of proving its invalidity on the party objecting to it.<sup>85</sup> In any case, however, the order or decree is limited to determining the validity of the sale; the proceeding is not every court directed the commissioner to make a statement showing his disposition of the proceeds, and, this being done, confirmed the report of sales and ordered the commissioner to execute deeds to purchasers, conveying only such title as the decree or decrees were competent to pass. It was held that such order only confirmed sales of lands made to individuals, and did not apply to lands struck off to the state. Indiana, etc., Lumber, etc., Co. v. Milburn, 161 Fed. 531, 88 C. C. A. 473.

Code (1892), § 3813, was competent, as explanatory of how the sale was conducted, and did not fall within the rule that an officer may not impeach his official acts.

Robinson*, 72 Ark. 339, 80 S. W. 227. In Michigan the sale stands confirmed, subject to the right of redemption, without the entry of an order or further notice, unless objections are filed within eight days after the time for filing the report; and the mere fact that no formal order of confirmation has been entered is no ground for setting aside the sale. Conley v. McMillan, 120 Mich. 694, 79 N. W. 909.

a suit to quiet title, and it can neither establish nor confirm in the purchaser a title which he would not acquire under the sale.<sup>86</sup>

L. Certificate of Sale—1. NATURE AND PURPOSE.<sup>87</sup> A tax-sale certificate is intended to identify the purchaser, and to be the official evidence of his right to receive the redemption money if tendered in time or a tax deed if there is no redemption, and of his rights ad interim. It does not create or pass a title to the land, but it is the proper evidence and assurance of the purchaser's inchoate or inceptive title.<sup>88</sup> It may be recorded if the law of the state so provides,<sup>89</sup> and it imparts constructive notice to a subsequent purchaser of the property.<sup>90</sup> On the death of the holder, it descends to the heir, and is not assets in the hands of the executor.<sup>91</sup>

2. TIME OF EXECUTING. The tax-sale certificate is intended to be made on the day of the sale; if made before the sale actually takes place it is void;<sup>92</sup> and although a brief and not unreasonable delay in making it would probably not invalidate the title, yet there is no authority to make and deliver such a certificate after the lapse of several years from the sale.<sup>93</sup> The certificate should be dated as of the day of the sale, to which time it relates back.<sup>94</sup> If its delivery is refused or unreasonably delayed, the person entitled to it may have mandamus to compel its issuance.<sup>95</sup>

3. FORM AND CONTENTS. A tax-sale certificate should follow the statutory form, if any, and at any rate contain all the particulars essential to a complete instrument.<sup>96</sup> It must be signed by the proper officer and must be under seal if

Effect of failure to make certificate.—The tax-sale certificate is intended for the benefit and protection of the purchaser; and the failure of the county treasurer to make and execute this certificate in no way affects the

An omission to recite the year for which land in controversy was assessed in the certificate of the sale of the land for taxes was not a mere clerical misprision, which could be avoided under Pol. Code, § 3885, authorizing disregard of irregularities. Preston v. Hirsch, supra. Under the express terms of Pol. Code, § 3776, the only amount required to be stated in a tax-sale certificate is the amount of the assessment, and a certificate is not invalidated by failure to separately set forth the amount of the penalties, costs, and charges. Surplusage.—A certificate of sale of land for taxes was not invalid because it recited that the amount for which the land was sold, being the same as the amount charged, was for taxes of every kind charged against the property and penalties and costs and "charges"; the word "charges" being mere surplusage. Chapman v. Zoberlein, 152 Cal. 216, 92 Pac. 188.

of the time when the purchaser will be entitled to a deed, if no redemption is effected.<sup>4</sup>

4. TAX CERTIFICATE AS EVIDENCE. A certificate of purchase at tax-sale is prima facie evidence of the facts which it recites.<sup>5</sup> But as to the regularity and validity of the prior proceedings, from the assessment up to and including the sale, the authorities are divided, some holding the rule that the certificate is presumptive evidence of all such matters, casting on the party claiming adversely to it the burden of proving any particular defect alleged,<sup>6</sup> while others require the party claiming under the certificate to show a strict compliance with the statutes in all the steps necessary to be taken prior to the issue of the certificate.<sup>7</sup> As the certificate, however, is not an instrument of title, but only certifies to the right of the holder to obtain a deed, at a certain time and on certain conditions, it is not admissible, in an action such as ejectment, as evidence of title, even when accompanied by an offer to prove a demand and refusal of a tax deed.<sup>8</sup>

5. RECORDING OR FILING. A statute requiring the tax certificate to be recorded or a duplicate of it to be filed officially, as a condition to the issuance of a tax deed or to its reception in evidence, is imperative and not merely directory.<sup>9</sup>

6. DELINQUENCY CERTIFICATES. A statute sometimes authorizes the proper county officers, after the taxes on given land have been delinquent for a prescribed length of time,<sup>10</sup> to issue a certificate of delinquency to any person paying the entire amount of the taxes and charges due,<sup>11</sup> or, under certain conditions, to the county.<sup>12</sup> The holder of such certificates must then foreclose the right of redemption still remaining in the owner of the property by an action brought for that purpose.<sup>13</sup> To sustain such action the certificates must be substantially in the form prescribed by the statute,<sup>14</sup> and otherwise comply with mandatory requirements of the statute.<sup>15</sup>

M. Setting Aside or Canceling Sale or Certificate — 1. JURISDICTION AND AUTHORITY OF COURTS AND OFFICERS. Where a tax-sale or the certificate issued thereon was entirely void, the owner is not obliged to redeem the land, but may have relief even before the expiration of the time limited for redemption. If the defect is not apparent on the face of the proceedings, a court of equity will set aside the sale and certificate as constituting a cloud on title, or to prevent a multiplicity of suits, or to prevent an injurious act by a public officer for which the law gives no adequate redress.<sup>16</sup> Where the tax-sale was founded on a judgment, the owner may move to vacate the judgment and the sale.<sup>17</sup> Where the purchaser applies for a writ of assistance or otherwise seeks to gain possession, the owner may file a petition in such proceeding to vacate the sale.<sup>18</sup> But where the rights of the purchaser at a tax-sale or holder of the certificate have passed to a third person for value and without notice, he cannot be affected by collateral proceedings, but a direct action against him must be brought.<sup>19</sup> In some states authority to cancel tax-sales or certificates is given by law to certain public officers.<sup>20</sup> But in the absence of such a statute the officers of a county, having bid in lands for it at a tax-sale, cannot cancel or rescind the sale except on the same conditions as would apply in the case of a private purchaser.<sup>21</sup>

14. Ballinger Annot. Codes & St. § 1749, providing for issue by the treasurer of a certificate of delinquency, and requiring a stub which shall be a summary of the certificate and shall contain among other facts the name of the owner or reputed owner if known, refers to the name of the owner as stated on the assessment roll, and does not require the treasurer to draw upon his own knowledge or investigate to determine the actual or reputed ownership, and he is not negligent if he follows the record as it appears in his office. Shipley v. Gaffner, 48 Wash. 169, 93 Pac. 211. McKay*, 15 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 328. This was an action of ejectment by the purchaser of lands at a tax-sale which was alleged to have been illegal, and the court declined to interfere by injunction to restrain the suit, saying that the proper course in such a case, in the event of the sale being found invalid, was for the owner to tender a deed to the purchaser for execution, and, on his refusal to execute such deed, to apply to the court for relief.

2. GROUNDS FOR VACATING. In some states the courts hold that a tax-sale should be set aside unless all the legal conditions precedent have been performed.<sup>22</sup> But the general rule is that relief of this kind should not be granted on account of mere errors or irregularities where no fraud or substantial injustice is shown.<sup>23</sup> It is, however, not a mere irregularity, but good ground for vacating the sale, where there was fraud and collusion between the officer making the sale and the purchaser,<sup>24</sup> where the owner of the property had no notice of the proceedings against it,<sup>25</sup> where the taxes were paid before the sale,<sup>26</sup> where the land was exempt from taxation,<sup>27</sup> or where there was a fatal defect in the assessment, as where the land was wrongly listed in the name of a stranger or was not sufficiently described for identification.<sup>28</sup> But a tax-sale will not be set aside for mere inadequacy of price,<sup>29</sup> or on account of any defects or injurious acts which resulted from the owner's own conduct or from his neglect to avail himself of his proper remedies in due season.<sup>30</sup> In some states the only matters which invalidate a tax-sale are prescribed by statute and no other grounds can be relied on.<sup>31</sup> A sale of land for taxes after service of an injunction on the commissioners who levied the tax, enjoining them from "collecting or proceeding to collect" the tax on such land, is irregular and will be set aside.<sup>32</sup>

3. PAYMENT OR TENDER. It will be made a condition to granting relief on an application to vacate a tax-sale that the owner of the property shall pay or tender to the holder of the tax certificate whatever sum he paid for his purchase with interest, or at least so much thereof as was for taxes justly and legally due.<sup>33</sup> And where plaintiff seeks to cancel a void sale of state tax lands and to purchase the land himself, he should be required to repay the amount paid on such void sale and subsequent taxes.<sup>34</sup>

8. REVIEW. A proceeding to vacate a tax-sale may be reviewed either on certiorari or appeal, according to the local statute.<sup>51</sup> As in other cases, the reviewing tribunal will consider only objections properly brought before it and will not allow the parties to shift their ground.<sup>52</sup>

N. Presumptions of Validity and Collateral Attack—1. RIGHT TO IMPEACH SALE. The right to impeach a tax-sale and have it set aside appertains in general to the owner of the property at the time of the sale and his personal representatives,<sup>53</sup> to a creditor holding a mortgage on the land or any part of it,<sup>54</sup> and to a subsequent purchaser from the owner who is in possession.<sup>55</sup>

2. PRESUMPTIONS AS TO VALIDITY. In most jurisdictions the general presumption of law that public officers charged with particular duties affecting the rights of individuals have performed them regularly and properly and in conformity with statutory directions applies to tax-sales; and one impeaching such a sale must show affirmatively any irregularity, omission, or dereliction of duty on the part of the officers concerned in it, on which he may rely.<sup>56</sup> plaintiff to pay taxes legally due); Auditor-Gen. v. Newman, 135 Mich. 288, 97 N. W. 703 (refunding taxes paid by purchaser).

Charging purchaser with costs.—Where the purchaser at the tax-sale was not a party to any irregularity or impropriety, he should not be charged with the costs of a proceeding to set it aside, unless he was afforded an opportunity of investigating the matter and elected to stand a suit rather than abandon his claim. Blanchard v. Scanlan, 3 Manitoba 13.

Effect of decree.—A decree vacating a tax-sale does not discharge the land from the payment of the taxes, but it should be again placed on the delinquent list. McWhinney v. Brinker, 54 Ind. 360. But where the land was mortgaged to secure notes held by several different parties, a decree annulling the tax-sale inures to the benefit of all of such holders, and not solely to the holder at whose suit the decree was made. Weaver v. Alter, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,308, 3 Woods 152.

Estoppel of owner.—The mere presence of the owner at the tax-sale does not estop him from complaining of irregularities in the sale. Claxton v. Shibley, 9 Ont. 451. Otherwise if he points out the land to be levied on, directs the sheriff to advertise and sell it, and is present in the character of a bidder at the sale. Byars v. Curry, 75 Ga. 515.

3. COLLATERAL ATTACK. As a general rule the regularity and validity of a tax-sale of land cannot be impeached in any collateral proceeding,<sup>57</sup> unless by statute,<sup>58</sup> or unless the nullity of the sale is apparent on the face of the proceedings.<sup>59</sup> And within the meaning of this rule the following are held to be collateral and not direct proceedings: Trespass to try title, ejectment, or suit to quiet his title brought by the purchaser at the tax-sale,<sup>60</sup> partition,<sup>61</sup> suit to foreclose a mortgage on the land,<sup>62</sup> and summary proceedings to recover the land by the purchaser at a foreclosure sale against the purchaser at the tax-sale.<sup>63</sup>

O. Curative Statutes — 1. IN GENERAL. Proceedings in the assessment and collection of taxes which the legislature might have dispensed with or made immaterial in the statute under which the proceedings are taken may be dispensed with or made immaterial by a statute passed after the proceedings have been taken and acting retrospectively, and thus defects or omissions in those proceedings may be cured; but if the defect is jurisdictional, that is to say, if it goes to the root of the authority to act, if it involves the omission of a step which the legislature could not have dispensed with, or if it consists in an irregularity which the legislature had no power to declare immaterial, it is beyond the reach of a curative statute.<sup>64</sup> Further it is to be observed that a curative statute may or

Although the record in tax foreclosure proceedings does not show directly that a certified copy of the order of sale was delivered to the officer making the sale, the recital in his return that the order was "directed and delivered" to him was sufficient evidence, on a collateral attack on the sale, that the order was delivered to him, if that be necessary. *Timmerman v. dered, can be said to have been intended to authorize an attack on tax proceedings by direct attack only, its effect has been nullified by the later statute of 1897 (Laws (1897), p. 190, c. 71, § 114), which expressly permits collateral attacks where the taxes have been paid. Bullock v. Wallace, 47 Wash. 690, 92 Pac. 675. Under the latter act, making tax judgments conclusive evidence of their regularity in all collateral proceedings except in cases where the taxes have been paid, an owner who has paid his taxes may defeat a tax judgment in a collateral proceeding where the tax judgment was taken by default on constructive service. *Bullock v. may not be retrospective, and if not intended to be so, it will have no effect on prior proceedings.<sup>65</sup>

2. DEFECTS CURABLE. A retrospective statute may cure any informality or want of authority in the persons levying a tax,<sup>66</sup> but cannot validate a levy which was entirely illegal, made without any authority at all, or in excess of legal limits.<sup>67</sup> So where there was any informality or irregularity in the assessment of the property, it may be cured by statute,<sup>68</sup> but not a total lack of any assessment or an assessment so fatally defective as to be entirely void.<sup>69</sup> Failure to give the owner of the property the requisite notice of the assessment or subsequent proceedings or of the sale, whether by advertisement or otherwise, is a jurisdictional defect and not one which can be cured.<sup>70</sup> And the same is true of a sale of land notwithstanding the fact that the taxes had actually been paid.<sup>71</sup>

3. CONSTRUCTION OF CURATIVE STATUTES. A curative statute should be so construed as to carry into effect the legislative intention, and neither so strictly as to defeat the purpose of the enactment, nor so loosely as to inflict unintended injury on individuals.<sup>72</sup> Such statutes are generally retrospective, but cannot be so construed unless it is plainly intended.<sup>73</sup> And a prospective curative statute will not be interpreted as nullifying the effects of fundamental and jurisdictional errors.<sup>74</sup>

P. Wrongful Sales. Where land of a taxpayer is unlawfully sold for delinquent taxes, the officer is a trespasser and is liable to the owner in an action for damages,<sup>75</sup> the measure of his recovery being the value of the property lost to him in case the sale passed a good title to the purchaser, or otherwise the amount he has been obliged to pay to clear his property from the encumbrance of the tax-sale.<sup>76</sup> But as to the purchaser at such a sale the rule is different. At common law he comes strictly within the rule of caveat emptor, and unless aided by express statutory authority he is not entitled to recover back his money in a suit against the officer or the municipality.<sup>77</sup>

XII. REDEMPTION FROM TAX-SALES.

A. Right to Redeem — 1. RIGHT AND NECESSITY IN GENERAL. A statutory right to redeem from tax-sales differs essentially from an equity of redemption proper; the former is self-executing and requires no judicial proceedings to make it effective; it is claimable as a matter of mere right by the owner of the property and is not founded on any special equities, and it is available not only where the sale was irregular or defective, but also, and especially, where the sale was perfectly regular and valid.<sup>78</sup> Indeed if the sale was void the owner is under no necessity of redeeming, but may have it vacated or set aside without redemption.<sup>79</sup> Such a statutory right of redemption is given by law in almost all the states, and is intended to afford the owner a last opportunity to save his property.<sup>80</sup> But it

Gage County, 67 Nebr. 6, 93 N. W. 194, 99 N. W. 524.

78. Lincoln v. Lincoln St. R. Co., 75 Nebr. 523, 106 N. W. 317; Carly v. Boner, 70 Nebr. 674, 102 N. W. 761; Logan County v. McKinley-Lanning L. & T. Co., 70 Nebr. 406, 101 N. W. 991.

Foreclosure of equity of redemption.—In some states the statutes provide for an action by the holder of a tax-sale certificate to foreclose the owner's equity of redemption. Such laws are valid and constitutional. Partridge v. Corkey, 4 Greene (Iowa) 383; Durbin v. Platto, 47 Wis. 484, 3 N. W. 30. As to action and proceedings under such statutes in general see infra, XII, A, 5.

Effect of confirming tax-sale.—A judicial decree confirming a tax-sale, although it precludes all further objection to the sale on account of informality or illegality, does not cut off the statutory right of redemption. Smith v. Thornton, 74 Ark. 572, 86 S. W. 1008. The right of redemption from sales of real estate for non-payment of taxes given by Nebr. Const. art. 9, § 3, applies to judicial as well as administrative sales, and the confirmation of such sales in no way adjudicates the right of redemption. Butler v. Libe, 81 Nebr. 740, 744, 116 N. W. 663, 117 N. W. 700. Even assuming that the court has jurisdiction, in confirming a judicial sale for taxes, to cut off the right of redemption, an order of confirmation which does not in terms deny to the owner such right will not be construed as having such effect. Smith v. Carnahan, 83 Nebr. 667, 120 N. W. 212.

In case of sale of lands to state.—The laws of Michigan do not prevent the sale or disposition of lands sold to the state at tax-sales, but give the owners the right of redemption after such lands have been sold to private purchasers from the state. Griffin v. Kennedy, 148 Mich. 583, 112 N. W. 756. Compare State v. Jackson, 56 W. Va. 558, 49 S. E. 465. Under Minn. Rev. Laws (1905), §§ 936-940, lands bid in to the state and not assigned to purchasers within three years are subject to redemption by the owner or other persons entitled to redeem. Minnesota Debenture Co. v. Scott, 106 Minn. 32, 119 N. W. 391.

Estoppel of purchaser to deny right of redemption.—In a suit by the person assessed with taxes against the purchaser at the tax-sale, to set aside a tax deed, the defendant, having bought plaintiff's title, is estopped to deny his right to redeem. Townshend v. Shaffer, 30 W. Va. 176, 3 S. E. 586.

The owner's failure to pay taxes on unimproved and unoccupied land does not necessarily defeat his right to redeem from the holder of an invalid tax title. Nicodemus v. Young, 90 Iowa 423, 57 N. W. 906.

79. Shoemaker v. Lacy, 45 Iowa 422; Stewart v. Chrysler, 100 N. Y. 378, 3 N. E. 471; Simpson v. Meyers, 197 Pa. St. 522, 47 Atl. 868; French v. Edwards, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,098, 5 Sawy. 266.

Voluntary redemption from void sale.—If the owner of land, instead of resorting to litigation, seeks to redeem the same from an invalid tax-sale, he is required to pay the purchaser only the amount of his bid with common interest thereon, not the statutory rate of interest required on redemption from a valid sale. Roberts v. Merrill, 60 Iowa 166, 14 N. W. 235; Lynam v. Anderson, 9 Nebr. 367, 2 N. W. 732. Compare Jones v. Duras, 14 Nebr. 40, 14 N. W. 537. But if the owner, with full knowledge of the character of the sale and all the facts affecting its validity, pays the money required of him as the cost of redemption, the payment is voluntary and he cannot recover back the money from the county; the mere fact that a tax deed will be issued to the purchaser if he does not redeem does not put him under duress. Morris v. Sioux County, 42 Iowa 416; Shane v. St. Paul, 26 Minn. 543, 6 N. W. 349. But compare Brownlee v. Marion County, 53 Iowa 487, 5 N. W. 610; Marsh v. St. Croix County, 42 Wis. 355.

80. See the statutes of the different states. And see the following cases:

Iowa.—Henderson v. Robinson, 76 Iowa 603, 41 N. W. 371.

Kansas.—Where the holder of an invalid tax deed in possession sues to quiet title, and the tax deed is held void, but the lien of the taxes is preserved, and the land is sold to satisfy the same. Laws (1893), p. 188, c. 109 (Gen. St. (1901) §§ 4927 et seq.), providing for redemption on foreclosure of mortgage trust deeds, mechanics' liens, or other liens, has no application, and neither the defendant owner nor the holder of the mortgage lien has any right to redeem therefrom. Davidson v. Plummer, 76 Kan. 462, 92 Pac. 705.

Michigan.—G. F. Sanborn & Co. v. Alston, is not ordinarily intended that separate parcels of the same tract, or separate undivided interests, shall be separately redeemed, the privilege extending only to the redemption of the whole tract or the whole title as sold.<sup>81</sup> Neither the sole owner of land nor a tenant in common is under any duty to redeem from a tax-sale;<sup>82</sup> and a purchase by him from the tax-sale purchaser after the time for redemption has expired does not amount merely to a redemption unless such is the intention.<sup>83</sup>

2. STATUTORY PROVISIONS AND THEIR CONSTRUCTION. The right of redemption from a tax-sale must be governed by the law in force at the time of the sale, not that in force at the time of the redemption; the relative rights of the parties, having become fixed and vested by the sale, cannot be affected by subsequent legislation.<sup>84</sup> Hence a statute abolishing, abridging, or enlarging the right of

But there are exceptions to this rule, by statute, in some states (see Garbanati v. Patterson, 37 Colo. 230, 85 Pac. 845), and in cases where the sale was irregular for including several distinct parcels or subdivisions of land in one tract (Penn v. Clemans, 19 Iowa 372; Byington v. Woods, 13 Iowa 17), and where the two lots were separately assessed and sold for taxes, although they afterward come into the hands of the same owner (*Boatmen's Sav. Bank v. 83. Duson v. Roos, 123 La. 835, 49 So. 590, 131 Am. St. Rep. 375, holding that where a purchaser at a tax-sale conveyed the land to a tenant in common after the expiration of the period of redemption, and the price required to redeem was a little over twenty-six dollars, while the amount paid for the conveyance was two hundred and fifty dollars, this did not show that the sale by the tax-sale purchaser was a mere redemption by the tenant in common.

Purchase from state.—A purchase by a person from the state of land, title to which has become absolute by failure to redeem from the sale to the state, cannot be deemed a redemption, of which the prior owner or his grantee should have the benefit, although such purchaser obtained his deed on false affidavits that he was the owner. Embury v. Goodenough, 157 Mich. 140, 121 N. W. 744.

Copeland*, 20 Iowa 22; Adams v. Beale, 19 Iowa 61. See Thompson v. Sherrill, 51 Ark. 453, 11 S. W. 689.

redemption or otherwise changing it will be construed, if possible, as prospective only or as saving existing rights,<sup>85</sup> or as merely amendatory or supplementary to existing statutes.<sup>86</sup> But the rule that the rights of parties in tax proceedings are to be determined by the law in force at the time of the tax-sale and the issuance of the certificate does not prevent the legislature from making changes in the manner of enforcing the lien which do not substantially impair any of the obligations of the contract.<sup>87</sup> And of course it is within the power of the legislature to repeal a law granting or regulating the right of redemption, as applied to future sales, and its intention to do so is evidenced by the enactment of a new statute providing a complete system of regulation and inconsistent with the former law.<sup>88</sup> Statutes allowing redemption from tax-sales are to be construed liberally and generously in favor of the redemptioner, and not to be applied with any greater severity or narrowness than the terms of the law absolutely require.<sup>89</sup>

3. PERSONS ENTITLED TO REDEEM — a. In General. As a general rule any person may redeem land from a tax-sale who has an interest in the property which would be affected by the maturing of the tax title in the purchaser.<sup>90</sup> This includes a lessee of the premises,<sup>91</sup> the wife or minor child of the owner, where the

Determination of right to redeem.—Under a statute providing that land sold for taxes may be redeemed by any person who has a claim in it, when an application to redeem is made to the treasurer, he must determine whether the applicant has a right to redeem, and his decision of that question will be presumed to be correct until the presumption is overcome by evidence to the contrary. *Hartman v. property is a homestead,<sup>92</sup> and creditors holding liens on the property by judgment or otherwise.<sup>93</sup> Even in those states in which the statutory provision is simply that the "owner" may redeem,<sup>94</sup> this term will be stretched by construction so as to include the heirs of a deceased former owner,<sup>95</sup> or his executor or administrator,<sup>96</sup> or either the trustee or beneficiary, where the title to the land is held under a trust,<sup>97</sup> or another tax-sale purchaser;<sup>98</sup> and in fact so as to include the holder of almost any substantial estate or interest in the land, although it may be merely contingent or expectant.<sup>99</sup> But there is no right of redemption in an owner who has entirely divested himself of all title to the property sold,<sup>1</sup> nor in Relative of owner.—The mere fact that one is son-in-law to the owner of land will not entitle him to redeem it. Dixon v. Hockady, 36 S. C. 60, 15 S. E. 342.

Assessment to unknown owner.—The fact that land was assessed as "unknown," when in reality it was improved and occupied, and no effort was made to ascertain the name of the owner, will not deprive the true owner of the right to redeem. Lynam v. Anderson, 9 Nebr. 367, 2 N. W. 732.

Washburn*, 56 Wis. 303, 14 N. W. 189. A trustee in a trust deed is a purchaser for value. Being a purchaser for value, and holding the legal title, he is an owner having a right to redeem from a tax-sale, as permitted to owners under W. Va. Code (1899), c. 31, §§ 15, 24. Clark v. McClougherty, 53 W. Va. 376, 44 S. E. 269.

98. Where a statute limits the right of redemption from a sale for taxes to the owner, the word "owner" is not limited to the person who owned the land when the tax from which redemption is sought was assessed, but includes a purchaser at tax-sale, who thereupon becomes entitled as owner to redeem from prior sales. Rogers v. Lynn, 200 Mass. 354, 86 N. E. 889. A city which has bought in lands at a tax-sale may redeem them from a purchaser at a subsequent sale. Meagher v. Sprague, 31 Wash. 549, 72 Pac. 108. one whose only claim of title to the property is founded on a conveyance which is entirely invalid.<sup>2</sup>

b. Mortgagees, Etc. A mortgagee of real estate who is obliged to redeem the same from a tax-sale for the protection of his own interest therein has clearly such an interest in the property as entitles him to do so; and he is entitled to add the amount which he pays to effect the redemption to his mortgage debt and receive it back on redemption from the mortgagee or on foreclosure of the same.<sup>3</sup> This rule applies also to the beneficiary in a deed of trust in the nature of a mortgage or the holder of the note secured thereby;<sup>4</sup> and it applies to an assignee of the

Grantor by warranty deed.—But under Nebr. Const. art. 9, § 3, giving not only the owner, but any person interested in real estate, the right to redeem from a tax-sale, the owner, who conveys the land by warranty deed after a sale for taxes, has such an interest in the land as entitles him to redeem. Douglas v. Hayes County, 82 Nebr. 577, 118 N. W. 114.

Bankrupt owner.—The fact that the owner of land has been adjudicated a bankrupt does not deprive him of the right to redeem it from a tax-sale, if no assignee has yet been appointed or if no conveyance to the assignee has yet been made. Hampton v. Rouse, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 263, 22 L. ed. 755.

c. Holder of Inchoate, Equitable, or Adverse Title.<sup>8</sup> In many states the laws permit a redemption from a tax-sale to be made by one whose claim of interest in the land is based on an imperfect, incomplete, or equitable title,<sup>9</sup> including a purchaser from the original owner under an executory contract of sale,<sup>10</sup> one who has bought the land at a sale on execution, foreclosure, or other judicial process,<sup>11</sup> a purchaser at a sale for later or different taxes,<sup>12</sup> or even one who is in possession under claim and color of title or without any paper title.<sup>13</sup>

d. Agent or Attorney of Owner. An agent or attorney, acting under instructions from the owner of the land, may redeem it from a tax-sale,<sup>14</sup> and if he is clothed with a general authority to take care of the property and protect the interests of the owner, no special direction or authority to redeem is required.<sup>15</sup>

If a person assumes without any authority to act as the owner's agent and pays the redemption money, the owner may accept and ratify his act, and the self-styled agent will not be permitted to deny the character in which he acted or to set up a claim of title in himself or assert any other claim to the land than as security for his reimbursement.<sup>16</sup>

e. Attempted Redemption by Stranger. A party having no interest in land, and not representing the owner, has no right to redeem it from a tax-sale, and if he tenders the redemption money to the holder of the tax-sale certificate the latter may refuse to receive it, or if the money is paid to the proper officer, the tax purchaser may repudiate it, and in either case the title of the latter is not divested, nor will the attempted redemption inure to the benefit of the real owner.<sup>17</sup> If, however, the tax purchaser consents to the redemption and accepts and retains the money, it is clear that he will be estopped to deny the effect of the transaction as a redemption,<sup>18</sup> and it seems that in such case the act of the stranger will inure to the benefit of the true owner of the land, at least if he chooses to ratify it and claim the advantage of it.<sup>19</sup>

is usually accorded a longer period for this purpose.<sup>22</sup> This right of redemption vested in a minor is a transferable interest and passes to his vendee.<sup>23</sup> So also a married woman may redeem her property from a tax-sale,<sup>24</sup> and so may the guardian or committee of an insane person.<sup>25</sup>

4. TIME FOR REDEMPTION — a. In General. Unless there are some special equities in the case giving the owner a right to maintain a suit for redemption from a tax-sale,<sup>26</sup> he must exercise his privilege of redeeming within the specific time limited by the constitution or statute for that purpose, or lose it finally. This time varies in the different states, but is usually one, two or three years from the time of the sale or execution of a tax deed, or a certain length of time after receiving notice from the purchaser.<sup>27</sup> Under some statutes the owner

Judicial sale on foreclosure of tax lien.—In Nebraska, where there has been no valid administrative tax-sale, the owner has two years from and after the confirmation of the judicial sale in the action to foreclose the tax lien in which to redeem his land from such sale. Barker v. Hume, 84 Nebr. 235, 120 N. W. 1131; Smith v. Carnahan, 83 Nebr. 667, 120 N. W. 212; Douglas v. Hayes County, 82 Nebr. 577, 118 N. W. 114; Butler v. Libe, 81 Nebr. 740, 116 N. W. 663; *Wood v. Where a county before any administrative sale of real estate for taxes sues to foreclose a tax lien and obtains a decree, a sale thereunder is a judicial sale and does not become complete until confirmation; the time for redemption dating from such confirmation. Smith v. Carnahan, supra.

Sale under void decree.—But the limitation of two years within which a party may redeem from sale for taxes does not apply to a sale made under a void decree foreclosing a tax lien. Payne v. Anderson, 80 Nebr. 216, 114 N. W. 148.

Redemption by county.—The statute allowing two years for redemption from a tax-sale is not a statute of limitations within Miss. Const. § 104, providing that limitations shall not run against the state or any county, etc., and a county has not the right after the expiration of the two-year period to redeem land, which after the tax-sale it bought at a trustee's sale, to protect a loan made by it on the land prior to the tax-sale. Tallahatchie County v. Little, 94 Miss. 88, 46 So. 257.

Redemption of land sold to state.—Under Ky. St. (1909) § 4152, providing that, in the redemption of land sold to the state for taxes, the county clerk, at any time within two years after the sale, or until the revenue agent under the auditor's direction assumes charge of a collection by sale or otherwise, is vested with authority to collect the delinquent taxes, interest, and penalties, and may redeem from taxes and tax-sales at any time before execution and delivery of a valid tax deed.<sup>28</sup>

b. Computation of Time. Where the statute provides that the owner shall have a certain length of time after the sale in which to redeem, this period begins to run from the day of the sale, and not from the time the purchaser takes a deed.<sup>29</sup> Under some statutes, however, the tax deed is to be issued directly after the sale, and not at the end of the redemption period, and where this is the case the time for redemption begins to run from the date of filing or recording the deed.<sup>30</sup> Under other statutes, again, the right of redemption is limited to a certain length of time after giving of notice of the sale or notice to redeem; and this is computed in the ordinary way, the requirements as to the fact and sufficiency of notice being applied with some strictness.<sup>31</sup>

c. When Time Expires. When the time for redemption is limited to a certain number of days after service of notice, or to one or more years from the sale, the day of giving the notice or the day of the sale is to be excluded, and the owner will be allowed the whole of the last day in which to redeem,<sup>32</sup> so that a tax deed section 4154 allowing the revenue agent fifteen per cent for the collection and payment of delinquent taxes, interest, etc., it is held that, notwithstanding the fee-simple title to land sold to the state for taxes vests in the state on the expiration of the two-year redemption period, such title is subject to be divested by the payment of the taxes by the delinquent prior to the sale of the land by the revenue agent. James v. Blanton, 134 Ky. 803, 121 S. W. 951, 123 S. W. 328.

Void deed.—Limitations do not run in favor of a tax deed, void on its face, and under Rev. Pol. Code, § 2205, providing that the owner of land sold for taxes may redeem any time before the tax deed was issued, such a deed will not bar a redemption by the owner after the period of limitations. *Battelle v. made on that last day, although it be in the afternoon, is premature;<sup>33</sup> and if the last day is Sunday, the owner will have the whole of the following day, Monday, in which to redeem.<sup>34</sup>

d. Statutes Extending or Abridging Time. In view of the contractual elements involved in a purchase at tax-sale, it is held that the legislature cannot constitutionally extend the period for redemption, as respects sales already made,<sup>35</sup> or curtail it in such a manner that, as applied to a particular previous sale, the right of redemption would be entirely cut off,<sup>36</sup> although this period may be abridged by a retroactive statute, provided that in each case affected a reasonable length of time is still left to the owner in which to redeem.<sup>37</sup>

e. Time Allowed Persons Under Disabilities. Unless specially favored by the statute, infants, married women, and persons under other disabilities have no longer time than other persons in which to redeem their lands from tax-sales.<sup>38</sup> But in many states laws are now in force according to such persons a period of

Effect of issuance of deed.—Neither the premature issuance of a tax deed nor the failure to issue it as soon as the purchaser becomes entitled to it will extend the statutory period allowed for redemption. Wood v. Coad, 120 Iowa 111, 94 N. W. 264; Ellsworth v. Low, 62 Iowa 178, 17 N. W. 450. And an offer to redeem comes too late after the holder of the tax certificate becomes entitled to a deed, which he is prevented from obtaining only by an injunction wrongfully obtained by the owner. Long v. Smith, 62 Iowa 329, 17 N. W. 579.

Redemption too late.—An offer to redeem after the expiration of the statutory period, although only by one day, is too late. McIntosh v. Marathon Land Co., 110 Wis. 296, 85 N. W. 976; Proudfoot v. Bush, 12 U. C. C. P. 52.

Exception where state is purchaser.—The rule stated in the text is held not to apply where the state itself is the purchaser at the tax-sale, as the extension of the time for redemption is in this case not a violation of contract rights but an act of grace. Adkin v. Pillen, 136 Mich. 682, 100 N. W. 176; State v. Smith, 36 Minn. 456, 32 N. W. 174.

Failure to record deed.—A statute which authorizes the redemption of land sold for taxes at any time before the deed executed upon such sale is recorded is not void on the ground that it impairs the obligation of contracts or divests a title previously acquired. *International L. one or more years after removal of the disability in which to redeem.<sup>39</sup> A statute of this kind does not suspend the right of redemption during the infancy or coverture of the owner, but it may be exercised as well before as after the removal of the disability;<sup>40</sup> and a minor's right to redeem cannot be extinguished by any alienation or transfer during his minority.<sup>41</sup> But to claim the right of redemption after attaining his majority the minor must have been the owner of the property at the time of the sale;<sup>42</sup> if the owner of the property at that time was an adult, his infant heir will have no longer time to redeem than his ancestor would have had.<sup>43</sup> A purchaser from the infant owner will have the same time allowed to his vendor;<sup>44</sup> but the heir of the infant owner, even though himself a minor, must redeem within the statutory period after the infant's death, which in law terminates his disability, and cannot wait until after the time when the infant owner, had he survived, would have attained his majority.<sup>45</sup> As a general rule the right of a minor to

Construction of statutes.—A statute entitling the purchaser at a tax-sale to a deed at the end of three years and one permitting persons under disabilities to redeem within five years, being in pari materia, must be construed so as to give effect to both. Dayton v. Relf, 34 Wis. 86.

Meaning of "orphans."—A statute granting a special time for redemption to "orphans" does not apply to minors who are not orphans. Downing v. Shoenberger, 9 Watts (Pa.) 298.

Application to married women.—Where lands of a married woman have been sold for taxes, she may, in conjunction with her husband, institute proceedings to redeem at any time during the coverture, although the ordinary period for redemption has expired. Plumb v. Robinson, 13 Ohio St. 298. The interest of the wife in the homestead is such an estate as entitles her to redeem after the coverture ceases. Adams v. Beale, 19 Iowa 61. But it seems that a married woman having a separate estate in lands sold for taxes is not under such a disability as respects such lands as will extend the time for redemption. Williamson v. Russell, 18 W. Va. 612. See Ethel v. Batchelder, 90 Ind. 520. And the widow of a person whose lands have been sold for taxes has no extended time for redemption, on the ground of having been a feme covert, her only interest at the time of the sale having been a contingent right of dower. Finch v. Brown, 8 Ill. 488.

What constitutes ownership.—A minor owner of land is entitled to the statutory time for its redemption, although his deed was not recorded until after the sale (Tailman v. Cooke, 39 Iowa 402), or although his interest in the land had been sold under a void judgment (Tucker v. Whittlesey, 74 Wis. 74, 41 N. W. 535, 42 N. W. 101). So if the redemptioner is the heir of a mortgagee of land, or if his guardian holds a mortgage in trust for him, in either case he is entitled to redeem within the special time provided for minors. Witt v. Mewhirter, 57 Iowa 545, 10 N. W. 890; Burton v. Hintrager, 18 Iowa 348. But the production from the custody of the minor's guardian of an unacknowledged conveyance does not entitle the minor to the benefit of the special statute. Walker v. Sargent, 47 Iowa 448.

Brockway, 8 Watts (Pa.) 162. Contra, Jones v. Collins, 16 Wis. 594. And see Reynolds v. Lieper, 7 Ohio, Pt. II, 17, holding that, although a forfeiture of lands for non-payment of taxes may have been incurred during the owner's lifetime, yet if he dies before the sale his infant heirs may redeem within the period allowed to owners who are minors.

redeem after reaching full age is limited to his own interest in the premises and does not extend to that of other owners or tenants in common with him.<sup>46</sup>

f. Redemption After Time Expires. Although the statutory time for redemption may have expired, yet the holder of the tax certificate may consent to a redemption by the owner, and if he receives the money on that understanding, it is a redemption and not a purchase.<sup>47</sup> So the right of redemption is not barred by the lapse of the statutory time when the owner was prevented from exercising it within that period by the fraud of the purchaser,<sup>48</sup> or the fraud, fault, or mistake of a public officer,<sup>49</sup> or where the purchaser has failed to comply with some statutory requisite to the vesting of his title,<sup>50</sup> or redemption has been prevented or postponed by the pendency of proceedings either to recover the land or to enjoin the execution of a deed,<sup>51</sup> or perhaps on other equitable grounds.<sup>52</sup>

5. ACTIONS TO FORECLOSE RIGHT OF REDEMPTION <sup>53</sup> — a. In General. In several of the states a process has been provided by statute by which the tax purchaser, at the expiration of the proper time, is to bring his suit, in the nature of a bill in equity and substantially as if it were founded on a mortgage, to foreclose the right of redemption subsisting in the former owner.<sup>54</sup> This action must not be instituted until the owner has had the full time allowed him by law for a voluntary

Extension of time by agreement.—Where the tax debtor, whose property has been sold for taxes, offers to redeem within the statutory time, but does not know the amount to be tendered, and the purchaser consents to the redemption and promises to furnish a statement of account, the time for redemption will continue until the statement is furnished, or notice given that it will not be furnished. Sportono v. Howcott, 119 La. 1032, 44 So. 855.

Land bid in by county.—Where the county becomes the purchaser at the tax-sale, it is thought to be within the authority of the proper county officers to permit a redemption after the statutory time, and accept the redemption money, as it would be in the power of a private purchaser. *Philadelphia v. redemption,<sup>55</sup> and on the other hand it cannot be maintained after the time limited by law for such proceedings.<sup>56</sup> Jurisdiction depends on the fact of non-redemption, and if a redemption is actually accomplished pending the suit, it is error to retain the cause and a judgment for costs is void.<sup>57</sup>

b. Parties. The suit is to be brought by the purchaser at the tax-sale or his assignee.<sup>58</sup> The owner of the property is of course the principal and primary defendant; but a proceeding of this character is held to be in rem against the land, and therefore if it was assessed and taxed to "unknown owners" the suit may be entitled in the same way,<sup>59</sup> or, according to statutes in some of the states, the suit may properly be brought against the person appearing on the tax list or assessment roll as the owner, whether or not he has title.<sup>60</sup> But if the actual owner of the land is known to complainant, or could have been discovered by reasonable diligence, it is generally held that he is entitled to notice and will not be bound by the judgment if not served.<sup>61</sup> It is proper, if not necessary, to join as defendants other parties holding liens on the property or executory or equitable interests in it such as will be divested by a decree of foreclosure.<sup>62</sup>

c. Process or Notice. A proper summons or notice and service thereof is essential;<sup>63</sup> and the summons or notice must strictly follow the requirements of the statute, in respect as well to its form and contents as to the manner of its service.<sup>64</sup> If the owner is a non-resident or unknown, service may be made by publication of the summons, as in other cases, the same careful compliance with the statute being required.<sup>65</sup>

d. Pleadings and Procedure. If the tax certificate is made prima facie evidence of title in the holder, it is not necessary for his complaint in foreclosure to set out the antecedent proceedings;<sup>66</sup> otherwise it should show his right to sue and contain the essential elements of a good declaration or complaint.<sup>67</sup> Defendant may plead payment or a redemption already effected,<sup>68</sup> or irregularity or excess in the assessment,<sup>69</sup> and, in some states, he may set up defenses in no way connected with the tax proceedings.<sup>70</sup> Unless his defense goes to the groundwork of the tax, he should tender the amount justly due.<sup>71</sup> The ordinary rules of evidence apply in a proceeding of this kind.<sup>72</sup> The judgment or decree<sup>73</sup> will grant such relief as may be appropriate in the premises,<sup>74</sup> and if it directs foreclosure, it will cut off all preëxisting liens or interests.<sup>75</sup> It is conclusive as to the matters in issue and cannot be assailed collaterally on account of any irregularity in the prior proceedings,<sup>76</sup> although in a proper case it may be reviewed on

What amounts to payment see supra, IX. Where B, while wrongfully in possession of certain premises and collecting the rents, paid the taxes thereon, and, to defraud the creditors of the real owner, took receipts and certificates of delinquency in the names of others, such acts constituted a payment of the tax and precluded the holders of such certificates

B. Notice to Redeem — 1. NATURE AND NECESSITY. It is required in several states that the purchaser at a tax-sale shall give notice to the owner of the property, within a designated reasonable time, of the expiration of the period allowed for redemption and of his intention thereupon to claim a deed. A law of this kind is to be construed liberally and beneficially in the interest of the owner,<sup>79</sup> and in some jurisdictions it may be made retroactive, so as to apply to sales made before its passage, provided the purchaser is accorded in each case a reasonable time to give the notice,<sup>80</sup> although on the other hand, the right of the owner to receive such a notice, vested at the time of the sale, cannot be taken away by a subsequent statute.<sup>81</sup> The tax purchaser must comply with such a statute so far as it is in his power to do so, although a notice may be dispensed with in cases where there is no person legally entitled to it, as where the land is unoccupied and was assessed to unknown owners;<sup>82</sup> and the notice must be such as the law requires and given as it directs, in order to preserve the purchaser's rights.<sup>83</sup>

W. 821 (holding that a notice of expiration of the period for redemption of property sold for taxes in 1901, prepared and served in accordance with Gen. St. (1894) c. 11, § 1564, was sufficient); Kipp v. Johnson, 73 Minn. 34, 75 N. W. 736; Gaston v. Merriam, 33 Minn. 271, 22 N. W. 614; State v. McDonald, 26 Minn. 145, 1 N. W. 832. Death of owner.—The fact that the owner of the lands is dead does not dispense with the necessity of notice, as in the case of an unknown owner. Kessey v. Connell, 68 Iowa 430, 27 N. W. 365.

St. 31 (discovery by the owner that his property has been sold for taxes is not equivalent to notice).

Issuance of notice.—A notice of expiration of time of redemption is not invalidated because it does not appear that the holder of the tax certificate presented it to the county auditor under Gen. St. (1894) § 1654, in order that the notice might issue. Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 N. W. 406; Lawton v. Barker, 105 Minn. 102, 117 N. W. 249. Nor is such notice invalid because it does not appear that the auditor delivered the notice to the person applying therefor as required by statute. Slocum v. McLaren, supra.

Form and requisites of notice see infra, XII, B, 6.

Service and proof thereof see infra, XII, B, 7.

2. EFFECT OF WANT OR INVALIDITY OF NOTICE. Failure to give the required statutory notice for redemption, or the existence of fatal defects in the notice given, will render a tax deed subsequently issued voidable, if not absolutely void, and entirely ineffective either as a grant or as an evidence of title,<sup>84</sup> and will leave the owner's right of redemption open and unlimited as to time;<sup>85</sup> and although it will not destroy the purchaser's lien for the taxes, he may be put to an action to foreclose it.<sup>86</sup>

3. TIME FOR GIVING NOTICE. Where the law directs the notice to be given after the purchaser shall have received his deed, or after the lapse of a certain time from the sale, a notice prematurely given is of no effect.<sup>87</sup> Where the provision is that the notice shall be given within a certain period before the end of the time for redemption, it is invalid unless the service is effected or the publication completed within the time prescribed.<sup>88</sup> In other cases the owner is allowed a certain number of days, after the notice, in which to redeem; and here he may rely on his right to the notice and wait until he receives it before taking any proceedings to redeem.<sup>89</sup> Where it is the duty of the tax purchaser to give this notice, he cannot validate a tardy notice by extending the time for redemption.<sup>90</sup>

4. PERSONS WHO MAY GIVE NOTICE. In order that the redemption notice may be legal and sufficient it must emanate from some person who is legally qualified to give it.<sup>91</sup> Ordinarily the proper person is the purchaser at the tax-sale, but it may be given by an assignee of the certificate, even under an informal or irregular assignment,<sup>92</sup> but not by the original purchaser after he has sold and assigned the certificate.<sup>93</sup>

5. PERSONS ENTITLED TO NOTICE— a. In General. The person to be served with the notice to redeem is generally the record owner of the land,<sup>94</sup> although for convenience the notice is sometimes permitted by law to be served on the person to whom the property is assessed or on the person found in possession or occupation of it.<sup>95</sup> Cases may occur in which the purchaser at the tax-sale is himself the person whom the law points out as entitled to be served with the notice; and here it may be dispensed with altogether,<sup>96</sup> unless personal service of such notice, and a return thereof, are made by statute necessary preliminaries to some further proceeding, such as a publication of the notice.<sup>97</sup>

b. Persons to Whom Land Is Taxed. In some states the redemption notice is

Time of publication in discretion of clerk.—Where the statute required the county clerk to publish lists of unredeemed lands sold for taxes "at least six months" before the end of the time for redemption, it was held that a publication made sixteen months before was within the discretion of the clerk. required to be served on the person to whom the land is "assessed" or "taxed."<sup>98</sup> This means the person in whose name the land is assessed or taxed at the time of giving the notice, not at the date of the sale,<sup>99</sup> and the notice must be served on him, although the assessment to him is a mistake, another being the true owner,<sup>1</sup> or although his only title to the property is based on an unrecorded deed.<sup>2</sup> The validity of the tax deed will depend upon a literal compliance with this provision of the statute,<sup>3</sup> it being the duty of the tax purchaser to examine the records and ascertain in whose name the land is taxed,<sup>4</sup> and he will be required, if necessary, to prove the correspondence between the assessment and the notice.<sup>5</sup> But where, at the time of giving the notice, the land is not taxed to any one, or is taxed to unknown owners, a statute of this kind dispenses with the notice.<sup>6</sup>

it was taxed to him at the time of giving the redemption notice, in the absence of evidence to the contrary.

7. See the statutes of the several states.

Owner and occupant.—Statutes of this kind are designed to secure the notification of the person in actual occupation of the land, and if the notice is served as the law directs, it is not material that notice is not given to the actual owner of the property (Woodward v. Taylor, 33 Wash. 1, 73 Pac. 785, 75 Pac. 646), or that the occupant has no title of record to the premises (Cahalan v. Van Sant, 87 Iowa 593, 54 N. W. 433). Similarly, the fact that the land was assessed to "unknown owners" does not excuse the tax purchaser from notifying the person whom he finds in possession. Cahalan v. Van Sant, 87 Iowa 593, 54 N. W. 433. It is his business to ascertain who is in possession, and he cannot excuse his failure to give the required notice on the ground that the property was in the possession of some person unknown to him. Combs v. Goff, 127 Ill. 431, 20 N. E. 9.

Sufficiency of compliance with statute.—Service of notice to redeem on one who is in possession as the agent of the tax purchaser himself is not a compliance with the statute. Burton v. Perry, 146 Ill. 71, 34 N. E. 60. So of service on one in whose wife's name the property stands. Medland v. Walker, 96 Iowa 175, 64 N. W. 797.

Mere squatters and the like.—Under the New York statute (Laws (1855), p. 794, c. 427, § 68), requiring service of the redemption notice "on the person actually occupying" the land, the notice must be served upon the actual occupant, although he does not occupy under any claim or color of title, as in the case of a mere squatter. People v. Ladew, 189 N. Y. 355, 82 N. E. 431, 190 N. Y. 543, 82 N. E. 1092 [reversing 103 N. Y. App. Div. 356, 95 N. Y. Suppl. 1151]; Matter of Rourke, 63 Misc. (N. Y.) 354, 118 N. Y. Suppl. 415. The occupant to whom the notice of tax-sale must be given is one in actual possession, independently of title, actual and not merely constructive possession is intended.<sup>8</sup> But this does not mean that the possession must be that of one who is living on the premises,<sup>9</sup> for it is sufficient if he manifests an intention to use and enjoy the property, in the character of one entitled to its possession, by building on it, fencing or otherwise improving it, or cultivating it systematically,<sup>10</sup> although no possession or occupancy, within the meaning of the law, can be predicated on an occasional or temporary use of the premises by one who does not claim an interest in them,<sup>11</sup> nor on such accidental intrusion upon the property as may result from a mistake as to the boundaries.<sup>12</sup> A tenant occupying under a lease is in possession of the premises and should be served with the notice,<sup>13</sup> but not so of mere laborers, and even though the occupancy is not such as to constitute adverse possession. Smith v. Sanger, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 360 [reversed on other grounds in 4 N. Y. 577]; Comstock v. Beardsley, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 348.

The forest preserve commission in New York, which is by statute given the care, control, and supervision of the forest preserve, and which, through its wardens, foresters, and protectors actually occupies the preserve, is an "occupant" within the meaning of the statute relating to redemption notice. People v. Kelsey, 180 N. Y. 24, 72 N. E. 524 [reversing 96 N. Y. App. Div. 148, 89 N. Y. Suppl. 416].

Occupant under master's deed.—Under Ill. Revenue Law (Hurd Rev. St. (1908) c. 120) § 216, providing that a purchaser of land for taxes, before he is entitled to a deed, shall cause a notice to be served on the occupant of such land, and on the owners thereof, of the time of redemption, one claiming the land in good faith as owner thereof, under a master's deed purporting to convey to him the title, is entitled to notice as being the actual occupant, whether or not he is the actual owner. Kenealy v. Glos, 241 Ill. 15, 89 N. E. 289.

8. Taylor v. Wright, 121 Ill. 455, 13 N. E. 529.

the same see People v. Gaus, 134 N. Y. App. Div. 80, 118 N. Y. Suppl. 756.

"Actual possession" by cultivation or improvement.—The failure of the holder of a tax title to serve notice of the expiration of redemption on one who, through another, had cultivated and cropped the land, and was therefore in actual possession, avoided the notice. Wallace v. Sache, 106 Minn. 123, 118 N. W. 360. An improvement of property was notice of possession, making it incumbent on the holder of a tax certificate to serve notice on such person of the expiration of redemption. Wallace v. Sache, supra.

Cutting timber.—Where the land was not fit for cultivation and was unoccupied, but was used by the owner, who lived in the same county, to cut timber therefrom, it was held that he was "in possession" so as to be entitled to personal notice to redeem. Ellsworth v. Low, 62 Iowa 178, 17 N. W. 450.

Illustrations.—Building a stack or two of hay on a tract of land actually occupied by another and inclosing the stack with boards to protect it from the rain is not occupancy within a statute requiring the "occupant" to be notified of a tax-sale. Drake v. Ogden, 128 Ill. 603, 21 N. E. 511. Occupying, at irregular intervals, as a hunting camp, a log house located on an island within or near the property in question, without any use of the main land except to roam over it in pursuit of game, does not constitute "actual occupancy" under the statute (People v. Campbell, 143 N. Y. 335, 338, 38 N. E. 300); nor does the mowing of a portion of land erroneously included in a fence. It seems there must be a substantial occupancy with intention to enjoy the property either by right or by wrong (Smith v. Sanger, 4 N. Y. 577).

servants, or care-takers.<sup>14</sup> If there are several tenants, all must be served,<sup>15</sup> and so of one who is in the occupation of a part of the lot.<sup>16</sup> But the person to be notified is the one who is in possession at the time the notice is given, not at the time of the sale,<sup>17</sup> and consequently one who comes into possession after the notice, although before the end of the time for redemption, is not entitled to a new notice.<sup>18</sup> If the person designated by law is the "occupant" of the premises, and the land is actually vacant and unoccupied, notice need not ordinarily be given to the owner.<sup>19</sup>

d. Mortgagees. Where the statute explicitly requires that notice to redeem shall be given to the mortgagee as well as to the owner, the lien of the mortgage is not divested or in any way impaired by the execution of a tax deed without such notice to the mortgagee.<sup>20</sup> But there is nothing in the nature of the mortgagee's relation to the title which gives him the right to notice unless the statute contains provisions which clearly bring him within its terms.<sup>21</sup>

6. FORM AND REQUISITES OF NOTICE — a. In General. If the statute prescribes a form for the redemption notice, such form must be substantially followed and every requirement observed, whether deemed material or not, or the notice will be insufficient.<sup>22</sup> If no form is prescribed, at any rate the notice must contain all that is essential for the precise and full information of the owner of the prop-

Payment by mortgagee before expiration of time for redemption.—Under N. H. Pub. St. (1901) c. 61, § 8, declaring that the purchaser at a tax-sale within thirty days from the sale shall notify all mortgagees of the date of the sale, the amount for which the land was sold, and the amount of his costs of notifying mortgagees, and that the sale shall be void as against any mortgagee to whom such notice shall not be given, a mortgagee who has paid the taxes before expiration of the time to notify him of the sale of the mortgaged property cannot complain that the sale was void because of want of notice. O'Donnell v. Meredith, 75 N. H. 272, 73 Atl. 32.

Ancient mortgage.—The mere fact of the existence of a mortgage recorded forty-eight years before the tax-sale is not sufficient to require proof of the service of notice upon the mortgagee. Martin v. Stoddard, 127 N. Y. 61, 27 N. E. 285.

erty, and without any false or misleading statements.<sup>23</sup> If these conditions are fulfilled, it is permissible in some states to include several distinct tracts of land in one notice, even though owned by different persons.<sup>24</sup>

b. Identification of Sale. The notice must clearly identify the sale from which the owner is required to redeem; and in particular it must state the day and year of the sale,<sup>25</sup> the amount of the taxes for which the property was sold,<sup>26</sup> and the year for which they were levied or assessed;<sup>27</sup> and also, if the statute so requires, it must state clearly whether the sale was made for non-payment of a general tax or of a special assessment.<sup>28</sup>

c. Designation of Person to Be Notified. As a general rule the redemption notice must be addressed to the person upon whom it is to be served;<sup>29</sup> and if that person is designated in the statute as the owner, or the person to whom the land is taxed, or who is in possession, a notice addressed to any other person is fatally defective.<sup>30</sup> Any substantial mistake in the name, of such a character as to be misleading and not cured by the principle of idem sonans, will also invalidate the notice.<sup>31</sup>

23. Knight v. Knoblauch, 77 Minn. 8, 79 N. W. 582.

Effect of misstatements.—Where the notice sets forth the matters required by the statute, but misstates the date of the sale or any other material fact, and the misstatements are so interwoven into the notice as to contradict its statutory requirements, and the notice is thereby rendered misleading, the defect is fatal to the validity of the tax deed. Long v. Wolf, 25 Kan. 522.

Notice misdated.—If a notice containing all that is required by law is served more than thirty days before the day specified as the time when the purchaser will apply for a deed, as directed by the statute, it is sufficient, although dated within that time. Clarke v. Mead, 102 Cal. 516, 36 Pac. 862.

Stating effect of failure to redeem.—The notice must state that unless the land is redeemed by a certain day it will be conveyed to the tax purchaser; and if it fails in this it is insufficient. Simonton v. Hays, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 286.

Where a controller's sale of land for taxes commenced on Nov. 10, 1881, and closed on November 23 following, a notice fixing the last day on which the sale was made as the time from which the two years given by the statute to redeem should run was not defective because the land was in fact sold November 19. *Halsted v. Statement sufficient.—Where a notice to redeem contained two descriptions of lands and in the last column, opposite both descriptions, under the heading "Tax for Years," contained the figures 1898, 1899, 1900, 1901, and 1902, it was not defective for failure to indicate to which description such years applied, but they referred to all that appeared in the preceding columns, and meant that the amount was paid as to each description for the taxes named in the years enumerated. *Gogebic Lumber Co. v. d. Description of Property. The redemption notice should describe the property with sufficient clearness and precision to inform the owner, with reasonable certainty, what particular lot or tract of land is intended; and a misleading description or substantial defect in the description will invalidate the notice and consequently also the tax deed.<sup>32</sup>

e. Amount Necessary to Redeem. The redemption notice is required to inform the owner of the amount which he will be required to pay in order to effect the redemption, and this statement should be clear and explicit and should disclose the exact and correct amount, otherwise the notice is invalid.<sup>33</sup> It has been Notices served by a tax purchaser, which omit the name of the state and county in the description of the land in the body of the notices, are insufficient. Curry v. Larke, 153 Mich. 348, 116 N. W. 1075; Tucker v. Van Winkle, 142 Mich. 210, 105 N. W. 607. And the omission is not cured by the fact that the state and county are indorsed on the back, for the indorsements are no part of the statutory notice. Curry v. Larke, supra.

Misstatement of quantity.—If the notice erroneously states the quantity of the land, but otherwise correctly describes the property, the statement of the quantity will be treated as mere surplusage. Rowland v. Brown, 75 Iowa 679, 37 N. W. 403.

(N. Y.) 406.

Amount necessary to redeem see infra, XII, C, 1.

Land bid in by state.—Land bid in by the state for taxes having been assigned by a purchaser, the sum paid by him is the "amount sold for" to be inserted in the redemption notice. Sperry v. Goodwin, 44 Minn. 207, 46 N. W. 328.

Prior void tax-sale.—In stating the amount required to redeem it, it is not necessary to include the amount of the state's lien arising from a prior void tax-sale. Minnesota Debenture Co. v. United Real Estate Corp., 99 Minn. 287, 109 N. W. 251.

Adding delinquent taxes.—If the correct amount required to redeem is stated, the addition of the words "and delinquent taxes" may be regarded as surplusage where there is no claim that there were any delinquent taxes on the land. Phelps v. Powers, 90 Minn. 440, 97 N. W. 136. But where a notice to eliminate the right of redemption stated the amount: "$36.08 together with $94.11 unpaid on delinquent taxes, interest, costs and penalties accruing subsequent to said sale," and in fact, there were no unpaid delinquent taxes at the time the notice was given, it was held that the notice was void and the landowner had not lost his right to redeem. Minnesota Debenture Co. v. Harrington, 104 Minn. 16, 115 N. W. 746.

Interest.—The notice is void if it fails to state the rate of interest to be paid on the amount required to redeem. Lawton v. Barker, 105 Minn. 102, 117 N. W. 249. Substantial compliance with the statute as to statement of interest see Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 N. W. 406.

Penalty.—A tax-sale redemption notice, describing the property and giving the amount of taxes and costs accrued up to that time, being the consideration paid by the state at the sale, and reciting that unless such amount, with thirty-seven and one-half per cent additional and ten cents for the comptroller's deed, should be paid into the treasury, etc., the right of the occupant or other persons would be forever barred, was not held, however, that a very trifling inaccuracy in the statement of the amount will not vitiate the notice.<sup>34</sup> But if the error is substantial it cannot be disregarded, even though it consists in stating a smaller sum than is legally due, and so is apparently advantageous to the redemptioner.<sup>35</sup> If the notice includes several distinct parcels of land, it must state the amount required for the redemption of each, and not the aggregate sum.<sup>36</sup>

f. Time For Redemption. The time when the right of redemption will expire by law must be stated in the redemption notice and correctly given, and if the time is there stated earlier or later than the time fixed by law, although it be by a single day, the notice is void.<sup>37</sup> Where the last day of the statutory time for redemption falls upon a Sunday, and the notice appoints the same day as the last for redemption, the notice is void, because in that case the owner will have the whole of the succeeding day in which to redeem.<sup>38</sup> The notice must also state the time precisely and specifically; if there is any indefiniteness, ambiguity, or uncertainty in this respect, it will not be effective to foreclose the right of redemption.<sup>39</sup> objectionable for failure to set out in figures the amount of the thirty-seven and one-half per cent penalty. Halsted v. Silberstein, 196 N. Y. 1, 89 N. E. 443 [reversing 122 N. Y. App. Div. 909, 107 N. Y. Suppl. 1129].

Amount paid for controller's deed.—Where a tax-sale redemption notice requires payment of ten cents for a controller's deed, it is not defective for failure to state in terms that that amount has been paid to the controller, for executing and delivering the deed. Halsted v. Silberstein, 196 N. Y. 1, 89 N. E. 443 [reversing 122 N. Y. App. Div. 909, 107 N. Y. Suppl. 1129].

Successive sales.—A notice of expiration of the time to redeem from a tax-sale need not include the amount necessary to redeem from a later tax-sale to the same purchaser, as payment of such amount is not necessary in order to redeem from the first sale. Brodie v. State, 102 Minn. 202, 113 N. W. 2.

Notice sufficient.—Where a delinquent tax-sale is held Sept. 4, 1900, and the final redemption notice states that lands sold at that sale must be redeemed on or before Sept. 4, 1903, or they will be deeded to the purchasers, such notice gives full three years after the sale for redemption and is not void. Michner v. Timmermeyer, 36 Kan. 252, 13 Pac. 211. But when the notice gives the full statutory time for redemption and one day more, and the last day named in the notice is Sunday, the owner will not be permitted to set aside a tax deed following such notice without showing that he was misled by the notice and that he offered to redeem on the day after the last day named. Hicks v. Sherwood, 31 Kan. 35, 2 Pac. 874 (statement that the land will be deeded, if not redeemed, "on and after September 5, 1879, or within three years from the day of sale" is insufficient).

7. SERVICE OF NOTICE — a. Personal Service. The statutes ordinarily require personal service of the redemption notice to be made on the owner of the property if he can be found, or on the person in possession or occupation of the premises.<sup>40</sup> The notice must be served in the same manner as a judicial writ, or at any rate in such a manner as to bring it effectively to the notice of the person to be served.<sup>41</sup> This service is sometimes required by the statute to be made by the holder of the tax certificate, and in that case it cannot be served by a public officer;<sup>42</sup> but if

"Sixty days after service of this notice."—Sufficiency of this phrase see Mather v. Curley, 75 Minn. 248, 77 N. W. 957, 74 Am. St. Rep. 462; Kipp v. Fitch, 73 Minn. 65, 75 N. W. 752; Kipp v. Johnson, 73 Minn. 34, 75 N. W. 736; Kenaston v. Great Northern R. Co., 59 Minn. 35, 60 N. W. 813; Parker v. Branch, 42 Minn. 155, 43 N. W. 907.

40. See the statutes of the different states. And see Smith v. Gage, 12 Fed. 32, 11 Biss. 217.

Service on owner.—Service of the redemption notice on the grantee named in a recorded tax deed, which is void on its face, is not a service on the "owner" such as the law requires. Hodgson v. State Finance Co., (N. D. 1909) 122 N. W. 336; State Finance Co. v. Mulberger, 16 N. D. 214, 112 N. W. 986, 125 Am. St. Rep. 650; State Finance Co. v. Beck, 15 N. D. 374, 109 N. W. 357. Nor is the law complied with by service of the notice on a laborer employed by the owner but who is not in any sense the owner's agent for any such purpose. Gage v. Schmidt, 104 Ill. 106. But if the owner cannot be found in the county, the tax purchaser is not required to hunt up other parties claiming to have some interest in the premises. Frew v. Taylor, 106 Ill. 159. In Iowa a tax deed was invalid where the holder of the tax certificate failed to serve on the person in possession of the land, and on the person in whose name the land was taxed, notice of the expiration of the right of redemption, as required by Code, § 1441. Ashenfelter v. Seiling, 141 Iowa 512, 119 N. W. 984. In North Dakota such service must be on the owner of the land personally, if known to be a resident of the state; but, if a non-resident, service must be made by registered letter, addressed to the owner's last known post-office address, and must also be served personally on the person in possession. Hodgson v. State Finance Co., supra. Under Nebr. Scavenger Tax Act (Comp. St. (1903) c. 77, art. 9), §§ 33, 34, separate notice to redeem from a tax-sale should, when published, be given to the owner of the land sold. Ambler v. Patterson, 80 Nebr. 570, 114 N. W. 781. Evidence held to sustain a finding that the landowner was personally served with notice to redeem the land from tax-sale see Curry v. Backus, 156 Mich. 342, 120 N. W. 796.

Showing as to delivery of notice to sheriff.—A notice of expiration of time of redemption is not invalid because it does not appear that the person holding the tax certificate ever delivered the notice to the sheriff for service. Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 N. W. 406.

41. See, generally, cases cited infra, this note.

Husband and wife.—Where the land is owned by a married woman, due service of the notice is not effected by leaving a copy with her husband. Cotes v. Rohrbeck, 139 Ill. 532, 28 N. E. 1110. And if the notice is to be served upon a husband and wife, it is not sufficient to hand a copy to the wife in the absence of the husband. Gage v. Bani, 141 U. S. 344, 12 S. Ct. 22, 35 L. ed. 776.

Service on a partner of the owner or person in possession is not sufficient. Gage v. Reid, 118 Ill. 35, 7 N. E. 127.

Service of notice on two of three tenants in common insufficient see White v. Shaw, 150 Mich. 270, 114 N. W. 210.

Public corporation.—Service of the notice on each of the three commissioners of a drainage district is sufficient service on the district. Hammond v. Carter, 155 Ill. 579, 40 N. E. 1019.

Service of a copy of the notice is sufficient. Duncan Land, etc., Co. v. Rusch, 145 Mich. 1, 108 N. W. 494.

Exhibiting evidence of title.—The law does not require that the tax purchaser, in serving the redemption notice on the owner, shall exhibit the deed and evidence of the sale or confirmation as in foreclosure cases. Bradley v. Williams, 139 Mich. 230, 102 N. W. 625.

Mailing notice.—Under the laws of North Dakota, the notice for redemption may be mailed at the residence of the holder of the certificate, although a non-resident. Nind v. Myers, 15 N. D. 400, 109 N. W. 335, 8 L. R. A. N. S. 157.

Place of service.—If the notice is properly served on the person in possession of the premises it is not necessary that the service should take place on the premises. Gage v. Bailey, 102 Ill. 11.

Effect of accepting service.—Where the law requires the notice to be served at least three months before the expiration of the time for redemption, a notice dated less than a month before that time is not sufficient, although service of it is accepted on the last day for redemption. Matthews v. Nefsy, 13 Wyo. 458, 81 Pac. 305, 110 Am. St. Rep. 1020.

42. Ellsworth v. Van Ort, 67 Iowa 222, 25 N. W. 142; Hall v. Guthridge, 52 Iowa 408, 3 N. W. 475. And see Scheffels v. Tabert, 46 Wis. 439, 1 N. W. 156. But compare Hale v. Hughes, 6 Ariz. 255, 56 Pac. 732.

Service by assignee.—Where the statute directs service of the notice to be made by the purchaser at the tax-sale or his assignee, the notice is directed to be served by the sheriff, his deputy may properly act for him in serving it.<sup>43</sup>

b. Service by Publication or Posting. Where the land is vacant and unoccupied, or the owner is a non-resident, service of the notice for redemption is generally directed to be made by publication.<sup>44</sup> A proper foundation for this mode of service must be laid in accordance with the statute, whether by a return of non est inventus by the sheriff,<sup>45</sup> or by proof of a diligent and unsuccessful search for the owner.<sup>46</sup> The published notice must correspond in all essential particulars with the original,<sup>47</sup> and must be addressed exactly as the statute prescribes;<sup>48</sup> and there must be strict compliance with the statute in respect to the location or character of the newspaper in which it is published,<sup>49</sup> and the time of publication and number of insertions.<sup>50</sup> Similar rules apply where the notice, instead of being published, is to be posted in certain public places.<sup>51</sup>

c. Return, Proof, and Record of Service — (1) IN GENERAL. To the lawful issuance and valid effect of a tax deed it is essential not only that the redemption notice shall have been served, but also that return or proof of service, complete and sufficient and such as the statute requires, shall have been made and filed, and that it shall be recorded with the conveyance when this is required by the statute,<sup>52</sup> service by one who answered neither description is insufficient, although he afterward became assignee. Chappell v. Spire, 106 Ill. 472.

44. See the statutes of the different states. And see Gage v. Bailey, 100 Ill. 530; McCash v. Penrod, 131 Iowa 631, 109 N. W. 180; State v. Halden, 62 Minn. 246, 64 N. W. 568.

When owner is "in possession" see Ellsworth v. Low, 62 Iowa 178, 17 N. W. 450. And see supra, XII, B, 5, c.

Personal service on non-resident.—Although the owner is a non-resident, publication of the notice is not necessary where it has been served on him personally while within the county (Baker v. Crabb, 73 Iowa 412, 35 N. W. 484), or even if it is served on him outside the state, provided the statute is broad enough to cover that case (Seymour v. Harrison, 85 Iowa 130, 52 N. W. 114).

Owner in fact a resident.—A service by publication where the owner was in fact a resident of the state, although defective, will not render the tax deed void. McQuity v. Doudna, 101 Iowa 144, 70 N. W. 99.

Death of owner.—Where the owner of the property dies before any attempt to serve the redemption notice, the case should be treated as though the assessment had been made to an "unknown" owner, and no publication of the notice is necessary. Nugent v. Cook, 129 Iowa 381, 105 N. W. 421.

App. Div. 909, 107 N. Y. Suppl. 1129]; People v. Ladew, 189 N. Y. 355, 190 N. Y. 543, 82 N. E. 431, 1092 [reversing 108 N. Y. App. Div. 356, 95 N. Y. Suppl. 1150]; Lockwood v. Gehlert, 127 N. Failure to record service of notice with the conveyance, as required by N. Y. Laws (1855), p. 794, c. 427, § 68 et seq., is fatal. People v. Ladew, 189 N. Y. 355, 190 N. Y. 543, 82 N. E. 431, 1092 [reversing 108 N. Y. App. Div. 356, 95 N. Y. Suppl. 1151]. Under section 68 of said statute, providing for the serving of a notice of the expiration of the time to redeem and declaring that no conveyance made pursuant to such section shall be recorded until the expiration of such notice, and that the evidence of service shall be recorded with such conveyance; section 72 declaring that the grantee or person claiming under him within one month after the service of the notice shall file with the controller a copy of the notice served, together with the affidavit of some person who shall and the burden of showing due service and proof thereof rests on the party asserting title thereunder.<sup>53</sup> This proof is commonly required to be made by an affidavit of service by the holder of the tax certificate or his assignee or agent,<sup>54</sup> which is prima facie but not conclusive evidence, and may be contradicted or impeached by evidence;<sup>55</sup> but which, if it is defective in failing to show compliance with the statute, cannot be supplemented by extrinsic evidence.<sup>56</sup> The affidavit or the officer's return, as the case may be, must be signed and verified as the law directs,<sup>57</sup> and it must set forth all the facts necessary to show a due and legal be credited as credible by the officer before whom the affidavit shall be taken, that such notice as is required was duly served specifying the mode of service; and section 73 providing that if the controller shall be satisfied that the proper notice has been served, and if the moneys required to be paid for the redemption of the land shall not have been paid he shall certify the facts, and the conveyance before made shall thereupon become absolute, the essential fact establishing a bar of the owner's rights is the controller's certificate that the notice complied with the statute, that it had been duly served, that the time within which a redemption might have been made had expired, and that the land had not been redeemed; and hence, this certificate being the evidence of notice and service which is required to be recorded in connection with the deed, it is not necessary that the notice or copy thereof with the affidavit of service shall be recorded. Halstead v. Silberstein, 196 N. Y. 1, 89 N. E. 443 [reversing 122 N. Y. App. Div. 909, 107 N. Y. Suppl. 1129].

Where land was taxed to unknown owners, proof of service of notice to redeem may be dispensed with. Chambers v. Haddock, 64 Iowa 556, 21 N. W. 32.

Return of service by mail.—A sheriff's return that he served the notice by depositing in the post-office for transmission one registered letter, containing a true copy of the notice, addressed to the secretary of the owner, "Mil., Wis.," sufficiently indicated that the abbreviations quoted stood for Milwaukee, Wis. Gogebic Lumber Co. v. Moore, 157 Mich. 499, 122 N. W. 128.

53. Mueller v. Jackson, 39 Minn. 431, 40 N. W. 565; Nelson v. Central Land Co., 35 Minn. 408, 29 N. W. 121; Seaman v. Thompson, 16 Nebr. 546, 20 N. W. 857; Cruser v. Williams, 13 N. D. 284, 100 N. W. 721.

Effect of tax deed as presumptive evidence.—If the statute makes the tax deed prima facie evidence of the regularity of all proceedings prior to its execution, it will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that the redemption notice was duly served upon the proper person. Soukup v. Union Inv. Co., 84 Iowa 448, 51 N. W. 167, 35 Am. St. Rep. 317.

Loss of affidavit.—The presumption of regularity, when supplemented by testimony showing that the required affidavit of service was actually made, cannot, in the absence of contradictory evidence, be overthrown by the mere fact that the affidavit cannot be found in the proper custody and that there is no record of it. Baker v. Crabb, 73 Iowa 412, 35 N. W. 484. But see Dalton v. Lucas, 63 Ill. 337.

54. Perry v. Bowman, 151 Ill. 25, 37 N. E. 680 (an affidavit made by one who is neither the holder of the tax certificate nor his assignee and which does not describe him as the agent of either of them is void); Hintrager v. McElhinny, 112 Iowa 325, 82 N. W. 1008, 83 N. W. 1063 (certificate of service by a constable is insufficient); Stevens v. Murphy, 91 Iowa 356, 59 N. W. 203, 51 Am. St. Rep. 348 (affidavit of service by one not described as the holder of the certificate or his agent is void); Babcock v. Bonebrake, 77 Iowa 710, 42 N. W. 559 (tax purchaser may make proof of service after conveying his interest by quitclaim deed but without assigning the certificate); Rowland v. Brown, 75 Iowa 679, 37 N. W. 403 (proof by agent); Baker v. Crabb, 73 Iowa 412, 35 N. W. 484 (proof of agency).

Cook*, 140 Mich. 483, 103 N. W. 869; Nind v. Meyers, 15 N. D. 400, 109 N. W. 335, 8 L. R. A. N. S. 157; Gage v. Bani, 141 U. S. 344, 12 S. Ct. 22, 35 L. ed. 776. And see Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 N. W. 406. Under Iowa Code (1897), § 1341, if there be a material omission in any of the required steps by which the period of redemption from a tax-sale may be cut off, the presumption arising from the treasurer's record of service of notice of expiration of time for redemption is overcome. Ashenfelter v. Seiling, 141 Iowa 512, 119 N. W. 984.

A sheriff's return of service of a notice to redeem land from tax-sale is evidence of the fact of service, although it may be defeated by proof that service was not made as alleged. Gogebic Lumber Co. v. Moore, 157 Mich. 499, 122 N. W. 128.

In proceedings to recover land bought at tax-sale, service of the notice required to be given to the owner must be proved by competent common-law evidence, not merely by the affidavit of service required to be filed. People v. Walsh, 87 N. Y. 481 [affirming 22 Hun 139]. And see Jewell v. Truhn, 38 Minn. 433, 38 N. W. 106.

57. Lynn v. Morse, 76 Iowa 665, 39 N. W. 203; Stein v. Hanson, 99 Minn. 387, 109 N. W. 821 (return of service of notice not vitiated service of the notice, including the time, place, and manner of service, the person on whom service was made, and the fact that he was the proper person to be served, and this with certainty and accuracy.<sup>58</sup>

(II) PUBLICATION SERVICE. Where service of the redemption notice is made by published advertisement, proof and record thereof as required by the statute is equally essential as in the case of personal service,<sup>59</sup> and the burden of proving it is on the party asserting title under the tax-sale, the affidavit of publication being prima facie evidence in that behalf.<sup>60</sup> But in the absence of statutory provision the proof is not invalidated by a failure to record the affidavit or by its loss, a copy being admissible in the latter case.<sup>61</sup> If the law requires proof of publication to be made by the holder of the tax certificate or his agent or attorney, an affidavit of the publisher of the newspaper in which it was printed by incorrect date); Clason v. Baldwin, 152 N. Y. 204, 46 N. E. 322 (controller's certificate of service of redemption notice must be under seal); Lockwood v. Gehlert, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 15, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 20 [affirmed in 127 N. Y. 241, 27 N. E. 812] (certificate signed by one controller and sealed by his successor in office is not good); Broughton v. Journeay, 51 Pa. St. 31 (proof of service should be preserved in the archives of the treasurer's office).

58. Brickley v. English, 129 Ill. 646, 22 N. E. 854; Wallahan v. Ingersoll, 117 Ill. 123, 7 N. E. 519; Davis v. Gosnell, 113 Ill. 121; Rice v. Bates, 68 Iowa 393, 27 N. W. 286 (if service is made on the proper person it is immaterial that the land is assessed to another at the time proof of service is made); Trulock v. Bentley, 67 Iowa 602, 25 N. W. 824 (proof defective in failing to state some of the facts required by statute); Caulkins v. Chamberlain, 37 Hun 163; Nind v. Myers, 15 N. D. 400, 109 N. W. 335, 8 L. R. A. N. S. 157.

Inability to find owner in county.—A return of service of a notice of expiration of time of redemption, that after diligent search the sheriff had been unable to find the within-named person within his county, instead of that the person named in such notice could not be found in the county, was nevertheless valid. Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 N. W. 406.

Time and place of service see Barcroft v. Mann, 125 Iowa 530, 101 N. W. 276; Wilkin v. Wilkin, 91 Iowa 652, 60 N. W. 194; Rowland v. Brown, 75 Iowa 679, 37 N. W. 403; People v. Cady, 105 N. Y. 299, 11 N. E. 810.

Service by leaving copy at residence.—Under N. Y. Laws (1855), pp. 794, 795, c. 427, §§ 68, 69, providing for the service of a redemption notice on the occupant personally, or by leaving the same at his dwelling-house with any person of suitable age and discretion belonging to his family, a return of service by leaving a copy of the notice at the occupant's place of residence with his wife is sufficient, as it will be presumed that she was a person of suitable age and discretion and that, as she was occupying the occupant's dwelling-house, she belonged to his family. Halsted v. Silberstein, 196 N. Y. 1, 89 N. E. 443 [reversing 122 N. Y. App. Div. 909, 107 N. Y. Suppl. 1129].

Naming and describing person served.—As to particularity required in naming the person served, and effect of misnomer, and as to statements showing him to have been the "owner" or the "person in possession" at the time the service was made see Lauer v. Weber, 177 Ill. 115, 52 N. E. 489; Hughes v. Carne, 135 Ill. 519, 26 N. E. 517; Stillwell v. Brammell, 124 Ill. 338, 16 N. E. 226; Wisner v. Chamberlin, 117 Ill. 568, 7 N. E. 68; Gage v. Hervey, 111 Ill. 305; Rice v. Haddock, 70 Iowa 318, 30 N. W. 579. Where an affidavit showed that Harry R. Edwards was the same person to whom land was conveyed by deed to "Harry P. Edwards," a tax redemption notice, served by registered letter, addressed to Harry P. Edwards, shown by the receipt to have been received by H. P. Edwards, per H. R. Edwards, was shown to have been addressed to the proper party, whose name appeared as the record owner, and was received by the person whose real name was misnamed of record. Gogebic Lumber Co. v. Moore, 157 Mich. 499, 122 N. W. 128. Although a return of service of redemption notice would be in better form if it described the persons on whom served as in actual possession, the absence of the term "actual" is not material. Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 N. W. 406.

Residence of person served.—A statement in a sheriff's return that he served a notice on M. "of the city of Marquette, Marquette county, Mich." justified an inference that M resided in Marquette county. Gogebic Lumber Co. v. Moore, 157 Mich. 499, 122 N. W. 128.

Description of premises in return of service see Slocum v. McLaren, 106 Minn. 386, 119 N. W. 406.

Attaching copy of the notice.—It is not necessary that a copy of the notice to redeem from a tax-sale shall be attached to the affidavit of service or filed with the county treasurer. Knudson v. Litchfield, 87 Iowa 111, 54 N. W. 199.

is not sufficient,<sup>62</sup> although the affidavit of the holder of the certificate may incorporate and refer to an affidavit of the publisher, and the two may be read together and may jointly make up the requisite proof.<sup>63</sup> The affidavit must set forth the particulars of the publication, as the name and description of the newspaper, the time of the publication, and the number of insertions,<sup>64</sup> and it must also set forth the facts laying a foundation for this mode of service, as by reciting that the owner was a non-resident or could not be found on diligent inquiry, or that the land was unoccupied or was taxed to unknown owners.<sup>65</sup>

8. FEES. The matter of fees for serving notice to redeem and making proof thereof is regulated by the local statutes.<sup>66</sup>

Showing by whose direction service was made.—Under Iowa Code, § 1441, providing that the service of a redemption expiration notice shall be complete only after affidavit has been filed showing the service, and under whose direction it was made, etc., an affidavit reciting that affiant was agent of W, and that he served a notice on P by causing it to be published three times, etc., was fatally defective for failure to show under whose direction the service was made. Peterson v. Wallace, 140 Iowa 22, 118 N. W. 37. Under said section, where the purchaser of the certificate signed the notice as the lawful holder thereof, and it appeared from his affidavit that he was then the lawful holder of the certificate, and that he served the same on the owner of the property by causing the notice to be published, giving the dates and the places where published, this sufficiently showed that the service was under his direction, although the affidavit did not so specifically state. Lindsey v. Booge, (Iowa 1909) 122 N. W. 819.

A "premium sale" under the Nebraska statute (Comp. St. (1907) § 5223), declaring that no redemption from a premium sale shall be allowed for less than the amount of the decree, interest, and costs and subsequent taxes paid, is a sale made for less than the amount of the decree, whether there were several bids or only one bid; and where the owner of land that has been sold at public sale under a tax decree under the statute for less than the amount of the decree fails to redeem by paying the full amount of the decree, interest, and costs, the purchaser is entitled to a confirmation, whether there has been one bid or more. State v. Several Parcels of Land, 84 Nebr. 719, 121 N. W. 977.

Void tax foreclosure.—Redemption from a void tax foreclosure should be allowed upon payment of the tax lien, the taxes subsequently paid, together with interest, and the value of permanent improvements made by the purchaser. Humphrey v. Hays, 85 Nebr. 239, 122 N. W. 987.

Where two tracts of land belonging to different owners are assessed together, one of the owners would not have to pay on both tracts, or redeem both, if sold for taxes; but he could pay on or redeem any subdivision, under Miss. Annot. Code (1892), § 3824, providing that if the purchaser at a tax-sale bid was struck off to the state or county, this is usually the amount of all taxes delinquent and unpaid;<sup>68</sup> but in the case of a private purchaser, it is ordinarily the amount paid by him at the tax-sale,<sup>69</sup> together with such interest and penalties as the law prescribes,<sup>70</sup> and the costs and expenses of advertising and selling the land,<sup>71</sup> to which may be added the value of improvements put upon the land by the tax purchaser after the sale,<sup>72</sup> but deducting the sum of rents and profits or the fair rental value of the land if the purchaser has been in possession.<sup>73</sup> Where a tract of land was divided into parcels for the purpose of assessment and sale, the owner of any one parcel may redeem it by paying the price which it brought;<sup>74</sup> but in the absence of a statute the owner of an undivided interest in a tract, or of a separate portion of a tract which was assessed and sold as an entirety, cannot redeem his part or interest by payment of a proportionate part of the entire amount, but must redeem the whole.<sup>75</sup> Where land is sold to a private purchaser and pay a larger sum than the amount of taxes, damages, and costs, and the excess at redemption be in the collector's hands, it shall be refunded to the purchaser, and if only a part of the land be redeemed the excess shall be apportioned ratably to the amount of taxes due at the time of sale on the respective parts, and section 3853, providing that the owner of land sold for taxes may redeem any part of it, where it is separable by legal subdivisions of not less than forty acres. *Moore v. A very trifling difference between the amount paid or tendered in redemption from a sale for taxes and the correct amount, if it is such only as might result from different modes of calculation, will not invalidate the redemption. Wyatt v. Simpson, 8 W. Va. 394.

Addition of judgment lien.—Where the holder of a judgment procures a tax deed to lands of the judgment debtor, which he agrees shall be subject to redemption by payment of the judgment, other claimants of the land can redeem only on complying with the terms of the agreement. *Jordan v. Lands bid in to state and sold to purchasers.—Under Minn. Rev. Laws (1905), §§ 936-940, where lands are bid in to the state and not assigned to purchasers within three years from the sale at which they were offered to purchasers at the highest price are expressly subject to redemption by the owner or other person duly and properly entitled to redeem. Upon redemption the full consideration of the sale must be paid to the tax purchaser, but the person redeeming is entitled to a return from the state of the surplus above the amount due the state. *Minnesota Debenture Co. v. at a tax-sale and he again purchases it at a subsequent tax-sale, the owner on redeeming from the first sale is not bound to pay the amount necessary to redeem from the later sale.<sup>76</sup>

b. Interest and Penalties. The statutes commonly provide that the purchaser at tax-sale shall be entitled to receive from one redeeming the land interest at a specified rate, which is generally to be computed on the amount of the purchase-money paid by him,<sup>77</sup> although sometimes only on the amount of taxes which he has paid,<sup>78</sup> and where redemption is effected through the aid of a court of equity, interest at the legal rate will be allowed.<sup>79</sup> In addition, the statute frequently provides for the payment to the purchaser of a heavy premium, in the nature of a penalty, usually calculated as interest at an extraordinary rate.<sup>80</sup> The constitutionality of such an enactment is no longer denied,<sup>81</sup> but the repeal of a statute imposing such a penalty works a remission of the penalty and it cannot be collected after the repeal.<sup>82</sup> Neither the statutory interest nor the penalty is to be calculated on the costs and expenses of the sale.<sup>83</sup>

c. Subsequent Taxes. The tax purchaser is also entitled to be reimbursed for the amount of all taxes paid by him upon the property after his purchase and before the redemption, with interest thereon,<sup>84</sup> provided he complies with the direc-

What effects redemption a question of law.—Whether the act of a person paying to the clerk of the county court the sum of money specified in his official receipt has operated as a redemption or not is a question of law for the court. Elliott v. Shaffer, 30 W. Va. 347, 4 S. E. 292.

manner,<sup>90</sup> and must be specific, that is, directed to a specific tax-sale and offering a particular amount,<sup>91</sup> and unconditional.<sup>92</sup> A tender must also be made by a person entitled to make it.<sup>93</sup> Further the money must be produced and tendered; that is, an offer to pay the amount necessary to redeem does not amount to a tender without the production of the money,<sup>94</sup> unless such production is waived or rendered unnecessary by the purchaser's refusal to receive the money, either in consequence of his denial of the right to redeem or of his claiming a larger sum.<sup>95</sup> Payment of the redemption money must be made in cash and in coin or legal tender notes, unless this is waived or unless the medium tendered is equivalent by law to current money.<sup>96</sup>

b. To Whom Made. The redemption money should generally be paid to the holder of the tax title at the time of the redemption, and hence not to the original purchaser if he has meanwhile conveyed his interest;<sup>97</sup> but to his vendee or the

A small deficiency in the amount tendered for redemption from a tax-sale, attributable to mistake, will not vitiate the tender. Mosser v. Moore, 56 W. Va. 478, 49 S. E. 537.

Where offer is refused.—If a tax purchaser refuses to permit a redemption, not on account of the amount of money tendered, but claiming the validity of his purchase and refusing a tender generally, the amount of the tender, although too small, is immaterial. *Mosser v. Necessity for tender and waiver.—Where a purchaser at tax-sale refuses to allow redemption to be made, the party wishing to redeem should tender the necessary amount, unless the purchaser waives a formal tender. Douglas v. Hayes County, 82 Nebr. 577, 118 N. W. 114. But the refusal of the purchaser to receive anything less than an amount which is larger than that to which he is entitled is a waiver of a formal tender. Douglas v. Hayes County, supra. Where the owner of part of a tract of land sold for taxes wrote to the person holding title under the judgment, stating that he desired to redeem his interest in the land, and the holder replied that he would be unwilling that a portion only of the land should be redeemed, and no tender of the amount due was made, nor any offer by the owner in his action for the land, there was no wrongful refusal of permission to redeem the land. Blanton v. Nunley, (Tex. Civ. App. 1909) 119 S. W. 881.

On bill to redeem.—A bill in equity filed by minors to redeem land from a tax-sale, as provided by law, implies an offer to pay such amount as the law allows to the purchaser, and such tender, not being met by any objection to its terms, or to the fact that no money is actually produced, terminates the estate of the tax purchaser. *Bender v. assignee of the tax certificate,<sup>98</sup> unless there is some statutory provision to the contrary.<sup>99</sup> Payment may also be made to any duly authorized agent of the person entitled to receive it.<sup>1</sup> Even where the statute specifically designates a public officer as the person to receive the money, yet a tender or payment to the purchaser himself will be a sufficient compliance with the law, at least in equity;<sup>2</sup> and especially is it proper to deposit the money with the proper public officer when the purchaser cannot be found within the county.<sup>3</sup>

3. PROCEEDINGS ON REDEMPTION. The law does not generally require any formal application to redeem or any notice of an intention to do so,<sup>4</sup> but upon payment or tender of a sufficient amount to the proper party the redemption is effected without further formality.<sup>5</sup> In some states the holder of the tax title is required to execute a quitclaim deed to the redemptioner, and this right may be enforced judicially.<sup>6</sup> Where the payment is to be made to a public officer, the mere payment and receipt of the money are generally sufficient to effect the redemption, statutes prescribing the reports, entries, or other acts to be done by the officer being merely directory as respects the rights of the redemptioner.<sup>7</sup> When a

St. (1895) art. 5187, providing that the owner may within two years after the sale redeem "by paying or tendering to the purchaser, his heirs or legal representatives, double the amount paid for the land," payment may be made to the purchaser, although he has transferred his interest, and the owners have notice of such transfer, as the word "purchaser," as used in the statute, applies only to one who purchases at the tax-sale, such statutes being liberally construed in favor of the owner, and such right is not affected by a judgment in an action by the owners against the original purchasers in which the right to redeem was conferred on the owners by payment or tender of the amount due the purchasers or those holding under them.

Redemption by insolvent corporation.—A corporation which is insolvent and in the hands of a receiver must redeem its lands from tax-sale in the same way as an individual owner, namely, by payment to the holder of the tax certificate; and the latter is not required to file his claim with the receiver as a creditor. *Rice v. Va. 394 (filing duplicate of receipt for redemption money). But compare Cook v. Jones, 80 Ark. 43, 96 S. redemption has thus been made it can neither be revoked by the party's withdrawing his money,<sup>8</sup> nor canceled or vacated by the receiving officer.<sup>9</sup> But if the right to redeem is disputed or denied, it may generally be determined in proceedings of a summary character before a court or judge on the application of the party offering to redeem,<sup>10</sup> or of the holder of the tax certificate.<sup>11</sup>

4. CERTIFICATE OF REDEMPTION OR RECEIPT. In those states where the redemption money, instead of being paid directly to the tax purchaser, is deposited with a public officer, it is made by law the duty of that officer,<sup>12</sup> on being satisfied of the right of the party offering to redeem and on receipt of the proper amount,<sup>13</sup> to issue a certificate of redemption setting forth the material facts of the transaction.<sup>14</sup> As a rule, it does not invalidate the redemption if the officer neglects to issue this certificate or withholds it until the time for redemption has expired,<sup>15</sup> but if his duty in the matter is clear he may be compelled by mandamus to perform it.<sup>16</sup> The certificate is competent and even conclusive evidence of the fact of payment of the amount of money received for,<sup>17</sup> but is not evidence of title or of the right of the redemptioner or any fact essential thereto.<sup>18</sup> The certificate or a duplicate of it is commonly required to be filed or recorded, but the neglect to do so does not usually defeat the redemption.<sup>19</sup> Under some statutes, however, the receipt of the treasurer for the redemption money is required to be filed with a particular officer, and compliance is necessary to effect a valid redemption.<sup>20</sup>

c. Recovery Back of Redemption Money Paid. Where taxes are illegally levied or assessed on property and the land is nevertheless sold for their non-payment and the owner pays the amount necessary to redeem, it is generally held that such payment is voluntary and cannot be recovered back in an action against the municipality or the tax purchaser, even though made under protest.<sup>29</sup> There are, however, some decisions to the contrary,<sup>30</sup> and some which hold that an action may lie against the officer receiving the payment, although not against the city or county.<sup>31</sup>

or a third person acting for the owner, redeems land from tax-sale, he is entitled to reimbursement, and may if necessary be subrogated to the rights of the holder of the tax certificate.<sup>32</sup> But this does not apply to one who pays the redemption money in the character of a mere volunteer, not acting on the owner's request or instructions nor having any interest in the land.<sup>33</sup> Where one joint tenant or tenant in common redeems the entire estate, the others must contribute ratably to his reimbursement.<sup>34</sup>

6. REDEMPTION BY AGREEMENT OF PARTIES. The statutory method of effecting redemption is not so far exclusive but that the parties in interest, by their mutual agreement, can vary the mode, place, or terms of redemption, as by fixing the price at less than the law would allow in consideration of its earlier payment, or extending the time for redemption beyond the statutory limit.<sup>35</sup> So also, instead of pursuing the usual method, the owner of the property may effect a redemption by taking an assignment of the certificate of purchase,<sup>36</sup> or even a formal conveyance from the tax purchaser or one claiming under him.<sup>37</sup> But it may become

Lien and enforcement.—Where a redemption is made under Burns Annot. St. Ind. (1908) § 812, providing that where one owning an interest redeems the property, he shall have a lien on the several shares of the other owners for their respective shares of redemption money, the redemptioner holds his lien in the nature of an assignee of the original lien-holder, the lien not being removed, but continued, and it can be enforced at any time after expiration of the time for redemption without further demand for repayment. *Elison v. Application of rents.—Where one was in possession of the land when it was sold for taxes, and became the purchaser, and the yearly rental of the land was worth considerably more than the taxes due on it at the time it was sold, it was held that the indebtedness of the occupant to the owner of the land for rent operated as an immediate redemption of the land. *Gaskins v. Where the purchasers of land sold for taxes accepted the amount of the tax with one hundred per cent additional and costs from the holder of the original title, and deeded the land to him on the succeeding day, the purchasers waived all right to question the regularity of the redemption on the ground that the grantee was not the person entitled to redeem. Holmes v. Loud, 149 Mich. 410, 112 N. W. 1109.

Claiming benefit of sale to third person.—One whose land has been validly sold for taxes and who has not redeemed or offered to redeem within the time allowed by law, cannot claim the benefit of a sale made to a third person by the tax purchaser, as effecting a redemption, merely because such person falsely represented that he was a cred-

a question whether a given transaction was intended as a redemption or as a purchase of the outstanding title, and this is generally a question of fact for the determination of a jury,<sup>38</sup> except that equity will construe it as a redemption if the person making the payment stood in such a fiduciary relation to the owner or to other persons interested in the property as to make it inequitable for him to acquire a title for his own benefit.<sup>39</sup>

7. OPERATION AND EFFECT OF REDEMPTION. A valid and effective redemption will divest the lien of the tax for which the land was sold and leave it as free as before,<sup>40</sup> although it will not have this effect as to prior delinquent taxes or as to rights growing out of a prior tax-sale.<sup>41</sup> Redemption will also put an end to the inceptive or inchoate title or interest acquired by the purchaser at the sale,<sup>42</sup> and render invalid a tax deed afterward issued to him.<sup>43</sup> It will restore the owner to his title as it stood before the sale;<sup>44</sup> but he will take that title exactly as it was, not acquiring a new title, but restoring at the same time any liens, encumbrances, or conflicting claims which were previously operative against him.<sup>45</sup> Neither will the redemption transfer to the owner any title or interest which the tax purchaser itor of the tax debtor, and as such entitled and ready to redeem, and thus induced the purchaser to sell. Staples v. Mayer, 44 La. Ann. 628, 11 So. 29.

Where, after the sale of a designated homestead for taxes, the owners filed suit to set aside the sale and conveyance, and the suit was compromised within the two years from the date of the sale allowed for redemption, it being agreed that a judgment should be entered for the purchaser, he at the time executing a conveyance to the owners for a consideration small in comparison to the then value of the property, and the owners remained in possession from the date of the designation of the homestead until the husband's death, some four years subsequent to the time of the compromise, the transaction was a redemption. *Bente v. The action of the commissioner of state lands in allowing a person to redeem land from a tax-sale and in executing a deed to him establishes merely his right to redeem, and is not an adjudication of his ownership of the land in litigation with another person. Meyer v. Snell, 89 Ark. 298, 116 S. W. 208.

held independently of the tax-sale.<sup>46</sup> There are cases in which a redemption effected by a third person will inure to the benefit of the owner, as where it is accomplished by a mortgagee or by one of several tenants in common.<sup>47</sup>

8. FAILURE TO REDEEM — a. Effect in General. Failure to redeem from a tax-sale divests the title of the owner under ordinary circumstances;<sup>48</sup> but not where it is brought about by the fraud, deceit, or breach of promise of the tax purchaser.<sup>49</sup> Mere excuses or mistakes, however, are not generally sufficient to relieve the owner from the consequences of failing to exercise his statutory right within the limited time.<sup>50</sup>

b. Fault or Mistake of Officer. It is the duty of the proper officers to impart correct information to those seeking to redeem from tax-sales, and an owner does not lose his right to redeem by permitting the appointed time to elapse, or paying less than the proper amount, or otherwise failing to comply with the directions of the statute, when this was caused by the fraud of a public officer,<sup>51</sup> or by the latter's mistake, negligence, or miscalculation, or by misleading advice given by him.<sup>52</sup> Similarly, a redemption is not defeated by the failure or neglect of the officer to make the entries or reports, or to do the other acts required of him by law after the payment of the redemption money.<sup>53</sup> But to enable an owner to claim the right to redeem on this ground it must appear that the fault or mistake was exclusively that of the officer, unmixed with any mistake or negligence on the part of the owner himself,<sup>54</sup> and he cannot by his own neglect make it the duty of the officer to furnish him with the required information a second time.<sup>55</sup>

D. Actions to Redeem — 1. JURISDICTION AND RIGHT OF ACTION. Where a purchaser at a tax-sale refuses to allow redemption to be made on legal terms, an action to redeem will lie in favor of the owner or party interested.<sup>56</sup> But if the owner of land has failed to exercise his statutory right of redemption from a tax-sale, a bill in equity will not generally lie to effect a redemption unless expressly authorized by statute,<sup>57</sup> or unless there are in the case such circumstances of fraud, accident, or mistake as to bring it under a recognized head of equity jurisdiction,<sup>58</sup> or unless redemption in due season was prevented by failure to give the proper notice,<sup>59</sup> or by the minority or other legal disability of the owner, in which case he may sue in equity for redemption after the removal of the disability.<sup>60</sup> But the complainant must show himself to be free from any laches or negligence,<sup>61</sup> and the suit cannot be maintained unless brought within the time allowed by the statute of limitations,<sup>62</sup> which, however, in the case of persons chaser does not receive all that he is entitled to, his remedy is against the officer. Dietrick v. Mason, 57 Pa. St. 40; Bubb v. Tompkins, 47 Pa. St. 359.

under disabilities, may begin to run only from the removal of the disability.<sup>63</sup> Possession of the property is not necessary to enable one to maintain a bill to redeem from a tax-sale and enjoin the execution of a tax deed.<sup>64</sup>

2. PARTIES. In some states it is considered that a suit to redeem is essentially in rem, so that it is not necessary that any particular person shall be named as a defendant or served with process.<sup>65</sup> But generally it is considered that the purchaser at the tax-sale or his successor in interest is an indispensable party,<sup>66</sup> and that others should be joined who have or claim interests in the premises which may be affected by the decree.<sup>67</sup>

3. PLEADING AND EVIDENCE. An action to redeem land from a tax-sale is governed, of course, by the general rules of pleading<sup>68</sup> and evidence.<sup>69</sup> The complainant must allege and prove that he was the owner of the property at the time of the tax-sale or had such an interest as would entitle him to redeem,<sup>70</sup> and must allege such facts as to show that his right is not barred by limitations.<sup>71</sup> If the validity of the taxes or the sale is not denied, or if redemption is sought on the ground of the refusal of a sufficient tender, the tender must be kept good, or at least the bill must aver an offer or willingness to pay the required amount.<sup>72</sup> But

Amendment of petition.—Under Nebr. Code Civ. Proc. § 144, providing that the court may, before or after judgment in furtherance of justice, amend any pleading by correcting a mistake therein, it was error to deny a motion, after decree, for leave to amend a petition to redeem from a tax-sale, so as to correctly describe the land, where no injustice would have been done defendant, while a great injustice was done plaintiff by denying it. *Bancher v. Degree of proof required.—It is sufficient to show a prima facie title or interest entitling complainant to redeem, and the court will not inquire into its validity. Comings v. Wilson, 59 Iowa 14, 12 N. W. 747. And where both parties claim from a common grantor, plaintiff need only show a perfect chain of title from such grantor, without showing title in him. Westerfield v. Merchant, 93 Miss. 791, 47 So. 434; McKee v. Spiro, 107 Mo. 452, 17 S. W. 1013. It is enough to show such an interest as entitles plaintiff to redeem, although it be less than the absolute ownership of the land. White v. Smith, 68 Iowa 313, 25 N. W. 115, 27 N. W. 250.

A bill by a part-owner of land to redeem the whole tract from a sale for taxes need not particularly describe his interest or part ownership. Colver v. Watson, 28 N. J. Eq. 548.

in that case the complainant cannot have relief on the ground of illegality of the taxes or defects in the proceedings prior to the sale.<sup>73</sup> It is held, however, that on bill to redeem and demurrer thereto the record and exhibits will be considered most favorably for the complainant.<sup>74</sup>

4. JUDGMENT OR DECREE. The judgment or decree, if for plaintiff,<sup>75</sup> will grant him a proper and reasonable time in which to redeem,<sup>76</sup> charge the purchaser with rents and profits received by him while in possession of the premises,<sup>77</sup> allow him credit for money expended in necessary repairs and improvements,<sup>78</sup> and for all subsequent taxes paid by him,<sup>79</sup> and, if necessary to clear the title, require him to execute a quitclaim deed to plaintiff.<sup>80</sup> But plaintiff cannot generally recover costs unless he has paid or tendered the amount admitted to be due.<sup>81</sup> The judgment or decree in an action of this kind is conclusive on the merits and cannot be impeached collaterally.<sup>82</sup>

5. ACTION TO REDEEM AFTER EXECUTION OF DEED. After the execution of a tax deed no action to redeem can be maintained unless it is authorized by the statute.<sup>83</sup> Such statutes are in force, however, in some states, and are applicable particularly in the case of infant owners,<sup>84</sup> and in cases where there was no sufficient compliance with the statute requiring notice to redeem.<sup>85</sup> The complainant in such an action must allege and show title in himself or such an interest as gives him the right to redeem,<sup>86</sup> and must allege payment of all taxes due on the premises at the commencement of the suit.<sup>87</sup> The inquiry on the hearing will be confined to the right of redemption and the equities between the parties,<sup>88</sup> and the costs must generally be borne by plaintiff.<sup>89</sup>

Costs of foreclosure suit and sale.—Where a decree foreclosing a tax lien was entered against the owner of real estate, a resident of the state, on service by publication so that the foreclosure and sale thereunder were void, it was error, in an action to redeem from a sale under such decree, to require plaintiff to pay the costs of the foreclosure suit and of the sale thereunder. *Wagner v. ## XIII. TAX DEEDS.

A. Nature and Necessity — 1. IN GENERAL. In most states neither a legal nor an equitable title to land sold for taxes will vest in the purchaser until the execution and delivery of the tax deed; until that time he has but a chattel interest or a statutory lien on the land.<sup>90</sup> Where the sale is founded on the judgment or decree of a court, the deed may stand on the same plane with sheriff's deeds in other cases;<sup>91</sup> but generally it is of no validity or effect unless supported by a valid sale.<sup>92</sup>

2. STATE OR COUNTY AS PURCHASER. Where property at a tax-sale is bid in by the state or municipality for want of other bidders, it is not intended to be held permanently but only for the purpose of a resale; and hence it is generally held that no deed to the state or municipality is necessary or proper, unless required or authorized by statute,<sup>93</sup> although in a few states the rule prevails that a deed must be issued, just as in the case of a private purchaser, and without it the title of the former owner is not cut off.<sup>94</sup>

B. Right to Deed and Application Therefor — 1. RIGHT TO DEED IN GENERAL. The purchaser at the tax-sale will generally be entitled to receive a deed for the land at the proper time,<sup>95</sup> provided the issuance of a deed is author-

Contra.—In some states it is held that the purchaser at tax-sale becomes invested with the title as soon as the time for redemption expires and on performance by him of all that is necessary to entitle him to a deed, although the deed is not yet issued to him. *Youngs v. Repeal of statute authorizing.—2 Mills' Annot. St. Colo. § 3900, authorizing the issuance of a tax deed to a county upon demand of the county clerk, was superseded by Laws (1893), p. 428, § 1, whereby the right of a county to take a tax deed was taken away, and providing that tax-sale certificates be assigned upon conditions specified, and hence, a tax deed, showing on its face that it was made to a county several months after the law of 1893 went into effect, was a nullity. Dimpfel v. Beam, 41 Colo. 25, 91 Pac. 1107.

94. Dyke v. Whyte, 17 Colo. 296, 29 Pac. 128; Canole v. Allen, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 244.

95. See, generally, cases cited infra, this section.

No statutory provision for tax deeds.—If the statute which authorizes and regulates the sale of land for non-payment of taxes makes no provision whatever for the execution of deeds, none can lawfully be made; and if the collector making the sale gives a deed it conveys no title. Doe v. Chunn, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 336.

Defective tax-sale.—A bidder at a tax-sale which is not conducted in the manner prescribed by law, and at which the land bid for by him is not laid off as directed by statute, cannot be regarded as a purchaser and is not entitled to a deed. Garlington v. Copeland, 32 S. C. 57, 10 S. E. 616.

Property in possession of receiver.—It has been held that the fact that lands are in the possession of a receiver of a federal court, as part of the assets of an insolvent corporation, ized by statute,<sup>96</sup> and provided he is still the holder of a valid and uncanceled certificate of purchase,<sup>97</sup> and has done all that is necessary on his part to entitle him to a conveyance,<sup>98</sup> and provided that the property has not been redeemed.<sup>99</sup> But if the purchaser was disqualified from bidding at the sale, as, where he was under a legal or moral obligation to pay the taxes or stood in such a relation to the owner of the property that it would be a fraud for him to acquire a tax title, he is not entitled to a deed and will not be assisted in procuring it.<sup>1</sup> If the original purchaser has assigned his certificate of purchase, the assignee succeeds to his rights and will be entitled to a deed if his assignor was;<sup>2</sup> and the executor of a deceased purchaser may be considered the "assign" of his decedent within this rule.<sup>3</sup>

2. CONDITIONS AND PREREQUISITES. A tax deed cannot be issued unless there has been a sale of the land.<sup>4</sup> Any provisions of the statute imposing on the tax purchaser the duty of complying with prescribed conditions or obligations before taking out his deed are to be considered mandatory and essential to the validity of the deed.<sup>5</sup> This is particularly the case where the purchaser is required to produce his certificate or give evidence of his right to a deed, to cause the land to be surveyed, to file an affidavit concerning the occupancy or possession of it, or to serve notice to redeem on the owner or others.<sup>6</sup> does not affect the right of a purchaser of such lands at a tax-sale to demand and receive a deed therefor when entitled thereto under the state laws. Whitehead v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 98 Fed. 10, 39 C. C. A. 34; Rice v. Jerome, 97 Fed. 719, 38 C. C. A. 388. Compare, however, Johnson v. Southern Bldg., etc., Assoc., 132 Fed. 540, holding that a tax deed executed after the property has passed into the custody of a court, by its appointment of a receiver in foreclosure proceedings, is void and does not cut off the receiver's right to redeem.

96. Doe v. Chunn, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 336; Sibley v. Smith, 2 Mich. 486; Byrd v. Phillips, 120 Tenn. 14, 111 S. W. 1109; Smith v. Todd, 55 Wis. 459, 13 N. W. 488; Knox v. Peterson, 21 Wis. 247. And see Powell v. Jenkins, 14 Misc. (N. Y.) 83, 35 N. Y. Suppl. 265. See also infra, XIII, C, 1.

Implication.—The power to issue a tax deed is not implied from the power to sell for taxes. The principle that every grant of power carries with it the usual and necessary means for the exercise of that power, and that the power to convey is implied in the power to sell, does not apply in the construction of statutes which are in derogation of the common law, and the effect of which is to divest a citizen of his real estate. Doe v. Chunn, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 336; Sibley v. Smith, 2 Mich. 486. Compare, however, Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 221, 46 Am. Dec. 447, where it was said that an auditor, being authorized by statute to sell lands for taxes, and having executed that power, would have been authorized to execute deeds to the purchaser without any express provision on the subject.

97. Ogden v. Bemis, 125 Ill. 105, 17 N. E. 55, holding that a mere showing that a tax certificate was canceled as to a part of the property does not deprive the holder of the right to a deed for the balance.

Savage*, 90 Ala. 383, 8 So. 93, holding that no tax deed can be issued to the administrator of a deceased purchaser where the statute only authorizes a deed to the original purchaser or to "the assignee, by written indorsement, of the certificate of purchase."

4. People v. Golding, 55 Misc. (N. Y.) 425, 106 N. Y. Suppl. 821, holding that where lands were withdrawn by the controller from sale in a statement that they belonged to the state, a conveyance given without any actual sale was a nullity.

Foreclosure of certificate where land sold to county.—A deed from the county commissioners for land sold to the county for delinquent taxes without foreclosure of the certificate is a nullity. Smith v. Smith, 160 N. C. 81, 63 S. E. 177; Wilcox v. Leach, 123 N. C. 74, 31 S. E. 374.

6. Production or exhibition of tax certificate see Duggan v. McCullough, 27 Colo. 43,

3. TIME OF ISSUING DEED. In some states a tax deed may issue directly after the sale and without waiting for the owner to redeem;<sup>7</sup> but the usual provision is that the purchaser may apply for and obtain his deed after the expiration of a certain time or when the period allowed for redemption shall have expired.<sup>8</sup> If issued before the expiration of such time it is premature and invalid,<sup>9</sup> and the invalidity is not cured by the fact that the owner allows the remainder of the time to run out without effecting a redemption;<sup>10</sup> and since the owner has the whole of the last day in which to redeem, a tax deed issued on that day is void.<sup>11</sup> It is also a customary provision that the purchaser must claim his deed within a certain number of years after the sale or after the end of the redemption period; and if he neglects to do this, his rights under the sale are lost and he cannot procure a deed;<sup>12</sup> and there is also authority for holding that the purchaser's rights may be waived or lost by laches, so that his long-continued neglect to take out a deed will raise a presumption that he has abandoned his claims and estop him from afterward asserting them.<sup>13</sup>

Allowing subsequent sale for taxes.—Under a statute providing that where a purchaser of land at a tax-sale allows it to be sold within two years, whether for the same class or for other taxes, his right to a deed shall be postponed, a deed obtained within this limitation is void. *Denike v. Suspension by injunction.—In Illinois this statute of limitations is suspended during any time when the purchaser may be prevented by an injunction or order of court from applying for his deed; but the time begins to run from the dissolution of the injunction or decree reversing it. Gage v. Parker, 178 Ill. 455, 53 N. E. 317; Gage v. Reid, 118 Ill. 35, 7 N. E. 127.

4. APPLICATION FOR DEED — a. Notice of Application. Where the statute requires the holder of the tax certificate to give to the owner or occupant of the premises written notice of his intention to apply for a deed, this is essential to the validity of the deed, and the notice must be in the form prescribed by the law and served as therein directed.<sup>14</sup> A statutory requirement of this kind may constitutionally apply to the holders of tax certificates made before its enactment, provided they are given a reasonable time in which to comply with the new law,<sup>15</sup> but not in cases where the right to a deed had become fixed and fully vested before the passage of the statute.<sup>16</sup>

b. Proceedings on Application. The procedure on applying for a tax deed and on executing the same is governed by the law in force at the time of the sale rather than at the time of making the deed.<sup>17</sup> In ordinary cases nothing more is

Application to assignees of counties.—In Wisconsin, in the case of one taking an assignment of a tax certificate from a county, the time begins to run from the date of the assignment; this does not mean the time when the county accepts his bid, but the time when the assignment is entered on the records of the county. Hotson v. Wetherby, 88 Wis. 324, 60 N. W. 423; Hiles v. Cate, 75 Wis. 91, 43 N. W. 802.

Retroactive statute of limitations.—If a later statute restricts the time allowed to the tax purchaser to make application for his deed within narrower limits than those prescribed by the statute in force at the time of the sale, or when the right to a deed accrued, it is not unconstitutional in such retroactive application, provided it grants to persons holding tax certificates at the date of its passage a reasonable length of time thereafter in which to procure deeds. *Wheeler v. Sales to state.—Cal. Pol. Code, § 3785, requiring thirty days' notice to be given of the expiration of the time for redemption from a tax-sale or intention to apply for a deed, applies to a sale to the state as well as to a sale to an individual. Wetherbee v. Johnston, 10 Cal. App. 264, 101 Pac. 802.

Definiteness of statute.—The provision of Va. Act, April 2, 1902 (Acts (1901–1902), p. 779, c. 658), declaring that no deed shall be made to any purchaser of delinquent lands until after he has given to the person in whose name the land stood at the time of the sale four months' notice of his purchase, must, so far as it relates to notice, be read in connection with Code (1904), § 3207, prescribing the mode of serving notice, and the provision, when so read, is not bad for indefiniteness. Kelly v. Gwatkin, 108 Va. 6, 60 S. E. 749.

Effect of assignment for benefit of creditors.—Where a company in whose name land was returned delinquent is in existence, although it has made a general assignment, the purchaser can comply with Va. Act April 2, 1902 (Acts (1901–1902), p. 779, c. 658), providing that a purchaser of delinquent lands shall give notice of his purchase to the person in whose name the real estate stood at the time of the sale. *Kelly v. required of the purchaser than that he shall satisfy the officer of his right to receive the deed, but this he must do in the mode pointed out by the statute.<sup>18</sup>

5. RESTRAINING ISSUANCE OF DEED — a. In General. Any person who shows a sufficient title to or interest in the property in question<sup>19</sup> may apply to a court of competent jurisdiction<sup>20</sup> for an injunction to restrain the execution or delivery of a tax deed, on the ground that it would create a cloud on his title,<sup>21</sup> provided the vice or defect relied on does not appear on the face of the proceedings.<sup>22</sup> Relief of this kind may be granted where the tax was illegal or the assessment entirely invalid,<sup>23</sup> although not on the ground of an excessive valuation or of mere errors or irregularities in the prior proceedings.<sup>24</sup> So also an injunction may be granted Authority of court to appoint commissioner to execute tax deed see Davis v. Jackson, 14 W. Va. 227.

Examination and approval by court.—Under Ark. Acts (1881), p. 70, § 15, prescribing the form of the deed to be executed by the commissioner in proceedings to enforce the payment of overdue taxes, and providing that, after confirmation of the sale and the expiration of the period for redemption, the commissioners shall execute a deed to the purchaser in the manner provided by law in cases of sales in other chancery proceedings, and Kirby Dig. § 6323, providing that a conveyance by a commissioner shall not pass any right until it has been examined and approved by the court, which approval shall be indorsed on the conveyance and recorded with it, where an order duly entered of record confirmed the sale and directed the commissioner to execute a deed, a conveyance by the commissioner without the examination and approval of the court gave the purchaser an equitable title, and the former owners were not entitled to have the sale and conveyance canceled on account of the defect. *St. Louis, etc., Lumber, etc., Co. v. Mortgagee.—That a mortgagee, although not in possession, has such an interest as entitles him to maintain a bill to enjoin the execution of a tax deed of the premises see Horn v. Garry, 49 Wis. 464, 5 N. W. 897. But compare Cook v. Miller, 26 Ill. App. 421, where it appeared that the mortgagee had ample security on other property and an injunction was refused.

Canada.—Schultz v. Alloway, 10 Manitoba 221.

See 45 Cent. Dig. tit. "Taxation," § 1500. Assessment fairly proportioned.—If it appears that the assessment upon plaintiff was no more than his proportionate share, and the objection does not go to the ground-work of the tax itself, the bill will be dismissed for want of equity. Perley v. Dolloff, 60 N. H. 504.

Neglect of legal remedies.—Failure to appear before board of equalization to complain of unjust assessment as ground for refusing injunction see Kittle v. Shervin, 11 Nebr. 65, 7 N. W. 861. Although plaintiff ought to have applied to the city council to cancel the sale before the filing of the bill, to give the city an opportunity of considering whether or not it would do so, this objection should not prevail after the city has put in an answer setting up the validity of the sale. Schultz v. Alloway, 10 Manitoba 221.

where the tax-sale was invalidated by disobedience to the directions of the law as to its conduct, by selling for an excessive amount, or by fraudulent combinations preventing competition,<sup>25</sup> or where the conduct of the purchaser has been fraudulent, in deceiving or misleading the owner as to the fact or time of redemption.<sup>26</sup> Both the tax purchaser, or holder of the certificate, and the officer whose duty it is to execute the deed should be made parties to the injunction suit.<sup>27</sup>

b. Payment or Tender. On the principle of doing equity, the complainant in an action of this kind should as a rule offer to reimburse the bona fide purchaser to the extent of the taxes lawfully chargeable upon the land and all legal costs;<sup>28</sup> and the court may order such payment as a condition to granting the relief asked.<sup>29</sup>

6. MANDAMUS TO COMPEL EXECUTION OF DEED. If the property has not been redeemed,<sup>30</sup> and the purchaser or holder of the tax certificate has done all that is required of him in the way of giving notice,<sup>31</sup> and otherwise has a clear right to receive a deed, mandamus may issue to compel the proper officer to execute such a deed,<sup>32</sup> or to issue a second and perfect deed where the one originally given was

Curative statute.—Under a statute providing that no "sale" of land for taxes shall be impeached because of the addition of interest to the taxes, a bill will not lie to prevent the execution of a tax deed in pursuance of a sale on the ground that such an addition had been made, as the statute is not confined in its operation to a sale completed by conveyance, but makes valid the sale itself. Schultz v. Winnipeg, 6 Manitoba 269.

Purchaser rescinding sale.—A tax purchaser cannot have mandamus to compel the issuance of a deed to him where it is shown that the money paid by him was tendered back to him on the same day and was accepted, and that the lands were afterward conveyed to other persons before he again tendered the money. Aitcheson v. Huebner, 90 Mich. 643, 51 N. W. 634.

Purchaser's assignee.—An assignee of the certificate of purchase may be entitled to compel the execution of a deed by mandamus, but not where he neglected to file or record the assignment and meanwhile a tax deed so defective as to convey no title.<sup>33</sup> On an application of this kind it is not necessary for the petitioner to show the regularity of all the previous proceedings;<sup>34</sup> but the writ will not be granted if the record shows fatal defects or irregularities,<sup>35</sup> or if an action is pending in another court to have the tax proceedings declared void.<sup>36</sup>

C. Making and Issuance of Deed and Recording—1. AUTHORITY AND DUTY TO MAKE<sup>37</sup>—a. Officer Executing Deed. The officer who shall execute tax deeds is designated in the statutes, and no other can perform this office.<sup>38</sup> But if the deed is made by the proper officer, a trifling misdescription in the style of his office is not material.<sup>39</sup> An officer de facto may make the deed, but not one who has not taken the oath of office;<sup>40</sup> and if the same person fills two offices it must appear that both lawfully devolved upon him and that he is qualified in both.<sup>41</sup> Where land duly assessed and delinquent is thrown into a new county by a change of boundaries, both the sale and the deed should be made by the proper officers of the old county.<sup>42</sup>

b. Deputies. A deputy to a public officer, authorized by law to perform the duties of the office, may sign and execute a tax deed in cases where that duty would devolve upon his principal;<sup>43</sup> and in case he is authorized to act for his

Limitation of actions.—The statute of limitations begins to run against an application for mandamus to compel the execution of a tax deed from the date when the purchaser becomes entitled to demand it. Hint-rager v. Traut, 69 Iowa 746, 27 N. W. 807.

Form of deed.—Where the statute does not require the officer to give the purchaser any particular form of deed or to embody in it any particular recitals, mandamus will not lie to secure a deed in a particular form or with particular recitals. State v. Mantz, 62 Mo. 258. Nor will this writ issue to compel the officer to make a deed containing recitals which are contradicted by the return of the tax-sale. Hewell v. Lane, 53 Cal. 213.

principal only in the event of the latter's death, absence, or disability, it will be presumed in support of the deed that the contingency existed which empowered him to make it.<sup>44</sup> It is generally held that a deed so made should be executed in the name of the principal "by" the deputy,<sup>45</sup> although in some states the deputy may execute it in his own name.<sup>46</sup>

c. Expiration of Term of Office. In some states it is considered that the power to sell and convey land for the non-payment of taxes is entire, and that the officer who made the sale is the one who must execute the deed, although meanwhile he has gone out of office, and that his successor cannot execute it.<sup>47</sup> In other states, however, it is held that the deed is to be made by the person who is the incumbent of the office at the time of its execution, whether the sale was made by him or by another.<sup>48</sup>

d. Second Deed on Same Sale. A treasurer or collector who has made a tax deed so irregular or imperfect as not to pass title may, where the law has been substantially complied with, execute a second or other deed correct in fact and regular in form so as to invest the purchaser with the legal title, and if he refuses, he may be compelled by mandamus.<sup>49</sup> But this authority cannot be used to cure defects in the anterior proceedings or misstate the prior proceedings;<sup>50</sup>

Where first deed valid.—Where the treasurer has executed to the purchaser a valid deed, he cannot divest the title thus conveyed by the execution of a second deed, as his authority to make a second deed extends only to the case of the insufficient execution of the first. Bulkley v. Callanan, 32 Iowa 461.

Loss or destruction of first deed.—Where the statutory provision relating to the issuance of a second deed requires it to recite the loss or destruction of the first deed, this fact must not only be recited but must actually exist before a second deed can lawfully be made or have any effect as a conveyance. Burroughs v. Goff, 64 Mich. 464, 31 N. W. 273.

Limitation of time for applying.—A statute providing that no new deed shall be issued after three years from the recording of the insufficient or defective one cannot apply retroactively to persons whose deeds had been recorded more than three years before its enactment. 2. PROPERTY TO BE INCLUDED — a. In General. The tax deed must show that the property conveyed is the same as that assessed, sold, and described in the certificate of sale; if it purports to convey more or other land, it is not valid.<sup>52</sup>

b. Conveyance of Several Tracts in One Deed. Where separate parcels of land are separately sold at the same tax-sale to the same purchaser, there is no legal objection to their being united in one conveyance;<sup>53</sup> and this may be done, although they belong to different owners,<sup>54</sup> and even where they are sold to different purchasers, provided the grantee in the deed has lawfully acquired all the different certificates of purchase.<sup>55</sup> Also it is held that where the same person buys a large number of lots at the same sale, he may require that they shall all be included in one deed, or he may take a separate deed for each lot at his option.<sup>56</sup>

3. EXECUTION, ACKNOWLEDGMENT, AND DELIVERY — a. Execution — (1) IN GENERAL. The manner and form of the execution of a tax deed must conform at least substantially to the directions of the statute; and failing in this it is not valid.<sup>57</sup> This rule is applied to the requirement of its being signed by a particular

(II) SEAL. A tax deed not under seal or not sealed as the law requires is void; and whether the statute directs it to be under the seal of the county or municipality or the official seal of the treasurer or other officer or under his private seal, there can be no substitution, but the law must be strictly obeyed or the deed will be invalid.<sup>61</sup> It has sometimes been ruled that a scroll may take the place of a seal under a requirement of this kind;<sup>62</sup> but the tendency is to require a literal compliance with a statute directing the deed to bear the official seal of the municipality or the officer,<sup>63</sup> in so much that where a statute required tax deeds

Contra.—Stockand v. Hall, 45 Wash. 197, 88 Pac. 123. Under S. D. Rev. Pol. Code, § 2213, requiring a tax deed to be executed by the county treasurer under his hand, etc., but not expressly requiring a seal, and Rev. Civ. Code, § 1243, abolishing all distinctions between sealed and unsealed instruments, and section 939, providing that the absence of the grantor's seal shall not impair the grant, it was held that, as the statute abolished distinctions between sealed and unsealed instruments, except as to the statute of limitations, the absence of a seal from a tax deed did not affect its validity, although the form prescribed by statute contained the word "seal" after the treasurer's name, the deed not being affected in any way by any statute of limitations. Northwestern Mortg. Trust Co. v. Levtzow, 23 S. D. 562, 122 N. W. 600.

Seal of county clerk used as seal of county.—A tax deed bearing the county clerk's certificate that he affixed the official seal of the county, and having affixed a seal reading, "County Clerk Seal Logan County, Kansas," is not void because not attested by the official seal of the county; the clerk's seal having been, with one exception, used by him and his predecessors for years to attest their official acts. Jackson v. McCarron, 77 Kan. 776, 95 Pac. 402.

Use of old seal after change of name.—Where the old seal of a municipality had been used for a tax deed, while the name of the municipality had been changed by the statutory addition of the word "Rural," but the municipality had adopted and used the old seal, this objection was held not fatal to the deed. *Nanton v. to be executed under the official seal of the county treasurer, but made no provision for a seal for that officer, it was held that no valid tax deeds could be issued until the defect should be remedied.<sup>64</sup>

b. Acknowledgment. Even without a statutory direction to that effect it is probable that tax deeds, to be valid, must be acknowledged like other conveyances,<sup>65</sup> and where the law expressly requires their acknowledgment they are entirely ineffectual without it.<sup>66</sup> The acknowledgment must be made by the officer executing the deed,<sup>67</sup> and must be taken by the particular officer designated by law for that purpose,<sup>68</sup> and must be made at the time appointed by law or in due season.<sup>69</sup> It is also necessary that the form or certificate of acknowledgment shall follow the statutory direction, if any, or otherwise contain a correct recital of such facts as are essential to a good acknowledgment.<sup>70</sup>

Delivery to "legal representatives."—Under N. Y. Laws (1885), p. 698, c. 405, § 6, providing for the delivery of a tax deed to the purchaser, his "legal representatives" or assigns, a deed is properly delivered to the sole devisee of the purchaser's estate, the quoted term not being necessarily confined

As in the case of other deeds, both the fact and the time of delivery of a tax deed may be shown by parol evidence.<sup>72</sup>

4. RECORDING OR REGISTRATION — a. Necessity in General. In some states a tax deed becomes null and void if not recorded within a limited time.<sup>73</sup> And although in some states deeds of this kind are not considered to be within the recording acts relating to conveyances in general,<sup>74</sup> yet it is more usually held that such deeds must be recorded, even though the law does not expressly require it, in order to be available as evidence,<sup>75</sup> to support ejectment or other actions by the grantee,<sup>76</sup> or to protect him against the rights and claims of third persons.<sup>77</sup> If the deed is recorded prematurely, that is, before the end of the time allowed for redemption, it is of no avail; but if the time expires without any redemption being made, such recording then becomes good and need not be repeated.<sup>78</sup>

b. Sufficiency and Effect. A tax deed duly and properly recorded imparts constructive notice of what it contains to all parties concerned.<sup>79</sup> But this is not the case where the deed, although actually spread upon the record, was not entitled to be recorded for lack of compliance with the directions of the statute as to its execution or acknowledgment.<sup>80</sup> Nor does the recording of a tax deed cure jurisdictional defects in the prior proceedings,<sup>81</sup> or validate a deed which is void on its face.<sup>82</sup> The index is an essential part of the record, and the deed cannot be deemed recorded until properly indexed.<sup>83</sup> In some states the Marking deed "Filed."—Under Miss. Code (1906), § 4338, requiring the tax collector to file all conveyances of land to individuals in the chancery clerk's office, to remain there for two years from the sale unless the land be sooner redeemed, it is not essential that the clerk shall mark a deed "Filed" in order that it may remain a memorial by which it may be ascertained whether the time for redemption has expired, since the time for redemption is two years from the day of sale, and not from the day of filing; the purpose of the statutory requirement being merely to lodge the deed in proper custody. *Brannon v. statute requires that the notice of expiration of the time for redemption and proof of service thereof shall be recorded with the tax deed.<sup>84</sup>

5. CANCELLATION BY PUBLIC OFFICERS. In some states authority is given by law to certain public officers to cancel a tax deed upon the discovery of fatal defects in the prior proceedings,<sup>85</sup> or where, the deed having been made directly after the sale and remaining in official custody, the owner effects a redemption within the time allowed by law.<sup>86</sup> If such officer unwarrantably refuses to cancel the deed in a case where his duty is plain, he may be constrained by mandamus.<sup>87</sup>

D. Form and Contents — 1. IN GENERAL — a. Sufficiency in General.<sup>88</sup> If no form for tax deeds is prescribed by statute, such a deed must be tested by the rules of the common law and must be sufficient to constitute a valid and operative conveyance under those rules.<sup>89</sup> Having regard to its peculiar nature, it must in particular disclose the power and authority under which it is made,<sup>90</sup> and recite the prior proceedings far enough to evidence and support that authority,<sup>91</sup> and in this respect its recitals must correspond at least substantially with the record of the proceedings.<sup>92</sup>

b. Following Statutory Form.<sup>93</sup> Where the statute prescribes the particular form of a tax deed, it is sometimes held that the form becomes substance and must be strictly pursued or the deed will be void;<sup>94</sup> but in most states it is held, and in some states expressly provided, that a substantial compliance with the statutory form will be sufficient, so that the deed need not be in the exact words of the statute.<sup>95</sup> It must, however, contain all the recitals directed by the statute to

Quitclaim deed.—Where the statute requires no greater formality in a deed from the state than in one from a private individual, a quitclaim deed conveys a good title to land sold for taxes. Mann v. Carson, 120 Mich. 631, 79 N. W. 941.

Deed conveying "right, title, and interest."—A tax deed purporting to convey to the purchaser "all the right, title, and interest" of the state in and to the premises, and not purporting to convey anything more, passes no title. Ketchem v. Mullinix, 92 Mo. 118, 4 S. W. 447; Einstein v. Gay, 45 Mo. 62. But see Cruzen v. Stephens, 123 Mo. 337, 27 S. W. 557, 45 Am. St. Rep. 549.

be incorporated, substantially, if not literally, in the form prescribed, and the omission of any such recital will be fatal to the validity of the deed,<sup>96</sup> and cannot be supplied by inference or implication however reasonable or necessary.<sup>97</sup> On the other hand, if the deed follows the statutory form, it must be held sufficient no matter what objections may be taken to the recitals or want of them.<sup>98</sup> But where the conditions of the sale were such that to follow the form would be to recite an untruth and show an illegal sale, the form must be modified to suit the facts.<sup>99</sup>

c. Omissions and Misrecitals. Although, as we have just seen,<sup>1</sup> a tax deed is fatally defective if it omits any recital which is required by the statute to be inserted in it, yet aside from such statutory requirements it is held that the deed will not be rendered invalid by omissions which are not to be regarded as essential or which can be supplied from other parts of the instrument,<sup>2</sup> or by misrecitals therein which are the result of mere clerical error and are not calculated to mislead or to affect the substantial rights of the parties.<sup>3</sup> Nor is a tax deed invalidated by the incorporation therein of incorrect matter which may be rejected as mere surplusage.<sup>4</sup>

d. Covenants. Where the statute prescribing the form of tax deeds requires that they shall contain certain covenants these are considered as official and not personal, and therefore, where the title fails, the officer making the deed is not liable for a breach of the covenant of general warranty.<sup>5</sup>

e. Parties.<sup>6</sup> If the statute requires the tax deed to be executed in the name of the state, this is indispensable, and the deed is invalid if made in different form,<sup>7</sup> although this is not technically necessary unless made so by law.<sup>8</sup> Where the sale was made for city or county taxes, the deed should run in the name of the municipality.<sup>9</sup> Several collectors cannot join in a deed of land sold by them severally for taxes.<sup>10</sup> If made to the original purchaser at the tax-sale, the deed should name him and show that he was such purchaser,<sup>11</sup> and a misnomer will be fatal unless the identity of the person is established.<sup>12</sup> If the deed is made to an assignee of the tax certificate, it should show his right to the deed and his connection with the title;<sup>13</sup> but successive assignments of the certificate, intermediate between the purchaser at the tax-sale and the final assignee who procures the deed, need not be recited therein.<sup>14</sup>

2. RECITALS — a. In General. A tax deed is void if it omits any of the recitals expressly required by statute to be incorporated in it;<sup>15</sup> and aside from such requirements, it must contain sufficient recitals of fact to show a compliance with the law under which the land became liable to sale and was sold,<sup>16</sup> and these must not be in the form of conclusions of law, as that proceedings were taken "according that grantee was purchaser at tax-sale instead of assignee); Huey v. Van Wie, 23 Wis. 613 (misnaming county). But compare Brady v. Dowden, 59 Cal. 51 (error in regard to assessment); Ritter v. Worth, 58 N. Y. 627 (false recital that land was assessed to a non-resident); Battelle v. Knight, 23 S. D. 161, 120 N. W. 1102; Burlew v. Quarrier, 16 W. Va. 108 (misstatement of year for which taxes were delinquent).

That a date named in a tax deed is out of harmony with other recitals does not justify the assumption that it is a clerical error, at least unless the date is an impossible one, or is in direct and irreconcilable conflict with some other recital referring to the same matter. *Price v. to law," or "in manner and form as directed by law," but the particular facts must be recited.<sup>17</sup> Especially it is necessary to recite enough of the previous proceedings to show authority to sell the land and authority in the officer making the sale,<sup>18</sup> and authority for the execution of the deed and the manner of its execution;<sup>19</sup> and the recitals in a tax deed of lands sold to a county must show affirmatively the right of the county to take the lands.<sup>20</sup> But these conditions being met, and the law being silent as to the incorporation of particular recitals, it is generally held that only so much of the previous history need be set out as is essential to the meaning and validity of the tax deed, standing by itself as an independent instrument of conveyance.<sup>21</sup> But of course, if it shows that it was made without any legal authority, or shows disobedience to any essential requirement of the law, it is void and inoperative for every purpose.<sup>22</sup> A tax deed need not state the address or residence of the grantee unless the statute so requires.<sup>23</sup>

b. Assessment and Delinquency of Tax. It is generally held essential to the validity of a tax deed that it shall recite the levy of the tax and its legal assessment on the land in question,<sup>24</sup> and it is void if it shows on its face an assessment that was illegal or erroneous because made to a wrong person.<sup>25</sup> The deed must also contain proper recitals to show that the taxes remained delinquent and unpaid at the time of the sale,<sup>26</sup> or, if the statute so requires, that they were not paid within a specified time after demand,<sup>27</sup> and for what year's taxes the sale was made.<sup>28</sup>

c. Proceedings Preliminary to Sale. The tax deed must recite the proceedings preliminary to the sale at least so far as to show the authority under which the officer acted.<sup>29</sup> A tax deed showing that certain essential preliminary steps have not been taken is void on its face.<sup>30</sup> In particular, it must recite a demand for payment, if that is required by law, and failure to comply therewith,<sup>31</sup> and the

See 45 Cent. Dig. tit. "Taxation," § 1508. Contra.—McQuain v. Meline, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 8,923.

Sufficiency of recital.—See Madland v. Bland, 24 Minn. 372, holding that a recital in a tax deed that lands have been duly forfeited for non-payment of taxes is a sufficient recital of the levy, assessment, and delinquency of the tax.

Misrecital of person to whom assessed.—A tax deed based on an assessment to "Priscilla Durham," which recites that the land was assessed to "Petruella Durham," is not a substantial statement of the assessment within the requirements of Ballinger & C. Comp. St. Oreg. § 3127, defining the effect of tax deeds as evidence. Bradford v. Durham, 54 Oreg. 1, 101 Pac. 897.

Kempner, 35 Ark. 505, holding that a false recital in a tax deed that the land was assessed in the name of an unknown owner does not vitiate the sale.

Sufficiency of recital.—A tax deed is not void on its face merely because of the omission of the word "remaining," where it should be stated that the land was sold for the payment of the "taxes, interest and costs then due and remaining unpaid." Heil v. Redden, 38 Kan. 255, 16 Pac. 743. A certificate of sale under which defendant claimed reciting that the taxes due were not paid and at the time of sale remained wholly unpaid, and that at the time of sale all the property assessed and delinquent as aforesaid was sold to the state, and a deed reciting that all the said property assessed and delinquent was by the sale vested in the state, substantially complied with Kan. Pol. Code, §§ 3776, 3785, providing that the certificate of sale of property for taxes and the deed thereof shall recite that the property was "sold for delinquent taxes." Phillips v. Cox, 7 Cal. App. 308, 94 Pac. 377.

Showing amount of delinquent taxes.—A tax deed from which it is impossible to determine the amount of the delinquent taxes is void. Finn v. Jones, 80 Kan. 431, 102 Pac. 479. A tax deed should show upon its face the amount of taxes, interest, and costs due upon each tract. Guffey v. O'Reiley, 88 Mo. 418, 57 Am. Rep. 424.

Laws (1893), p. 195, c. 110, § 4, in substantial compliance with the requirements of that provision, and attacked more than five years after it was recorded, was not void on its face because the granting clause of such deed did not specify the particular years for the taxes of which the land was conveyed. Gibson v. Freeland, 77 Kan. 450, 94 Pac. 782. Omission of a tax deed which was not assailed for more than five years after being recorded to state in terms in what year the taxes accrued for the land which was sold, the sale having been made in 1895, was supplied by a recital that the total consideration of the deed was made up of the taxes of 1894 and subsequent years; it being inferable therefrom that the sale was made for the taxes of 1894. judgment or order of court, if any, under which the sale was made;<sup>32</sup> and a material variance between the judgment as in fact entered and that recited in the deed will be fatal to the deed.<sup>33</sup> It must also recite the writ or tax execution under which the officer acted, where it is the practice to proceed under process of that kind.<sup>34</sup> Further if the statute requires that the owner's available personalty shall be exhausted before having recourse to his land, the tax deed must show that this was done.<sup>35</sup> Finally it is essential that the notice or advertisement of sale should be recited, and in such a manner as to show that it fully complied with the statute.<sup>36</sup>

d. Sale<sup>37</sup>—(i) IN GENERAL. The tax deed is required to show by distinct recitals that the land was in fact sold for the non-payment of taxes,<sup>38</sup> by what officer the sale was made,<sup>39</sup> to whom it was made,<sup>40</sup> and the manner of the sale, as that it was at public auction, to the highest bidder, or to the bidder who would take the least quantity of the land for the taxes on it, etc., at least so far as to show that no provision of the statute was violated in the conduct of the sale.<sup>41</sup>

Where the sale was made to the state or county, the deed must show for whom the land was bid in,<sup>42</sup> and must also show the existence of the conditions under which the state or county could become a purchaser and not make it appear as a competitive bidder.<sup>43</sup> It is also a common requirement that the deed shall state correctly the amount for which the property was sold or bid in by the state or county.<sup>44</sup> trary is shown, that it was made according to law.

Recital of wrong statute.—A statement that a tax-sale was pursuant to a particular statute, which had in fact been repealed by the general tax law, will not vitiate the deed so long as the sale complied with the general tax law. Kelly v. Austin, 132 N. Y. App. Div. 522, 116 N. Y. Suppl. 728.

Clerical errors.—A tax deed, reciting that lands were sold for the non-payment of taxes at public auction "in the county of A. and J. L. Gates to the said A. county," shows that the lands were sold to A county, and the words "J. L. Gates," inserted after the words "county of A.," describing the place of sale, cannot be transposed and inserted after "A. county," where named as the purchaser, so as to make it appear that there was a joint sale to the county and Gates, and thereby render the same void. *Maxon v. Statement of conclusion contradicted by recitals.—Where a statute prohibits a county from becoming a competitive bidder at a tax-sale, a statement in a deed conveying land sold for taxes to a county that the land was offered for sale "in accordance with law," being merely the statement of a conclusion of law, can impart no validity to a deed, in the face of plain recitals therein to the effect that the property was sold at public auction, at which the county was a bidder. Rush v. Lewis, etc., County, 37 Mont. 240, 95 Pac. 836, 36 Mont. 566, 93 Pac. 943.

Defects not fatal.—Where the printed form of a tax deed with blanks to be filled prepared for use where several tracts have been assessed and sold separately, but are to be conveyed together, was so changed by striking out words and interlining others as to leave a recital that whereas the premises "could be sold for the amount of tax and charges thereon and was therefore bid off by the county treasurer for said county," the omission of the word "not," after the word "could," after striking out the negative "neither," was manifestly contrary to the intention and a mere clerical omission not avoiding the deed. Schroeder v. Griggs, 80 Kan. 357, 102 Pac. 469. And a tax deed of record more than five years before suit attacking it is not void because it substitutes the words "no person bid" for the words "said property could not be sold" in stating the necessity for a sale to the county. *Baughman v. Amount for which bid in by county.—A tax deed, which fails to state the amount for which the land was bid in by the county, is void on its face; and the omission is not cured by recitals stating the amount for which the certificate was assigned, when it is impossible to ascertain how much was paid for the taxes for the year for which the land was sold, and how much was for the subsequent taxes. Webster v. Stevenson, 80 Kan. 92, 101 Pac. 634. See also Grinstead v. Cooper, 77 Kan. 778, 95 Pac. 401, deed recorded less than five years. But a tax deed which has been recorded for more than five years is not void on its face because it does not recite the amount for which the county

(II) TIME AND PLACE OF SALE. Where the statute requires a tax deed to contain a recital of the place where the sale was held, the omission of such recital, or a recital showing it to have been held at an unlawful place, will invalidate the deed.<sup>45</sup> So also it is generally considered necessary for the deed to state the time of the sale and show that it was held on the day appointed by law,<sup>46</sup> or at least on a day when the sale could lawfully take place, either as falling within the limits allowed by the statute or in consequence of an impossibility of making the sale on the appointed day,<sup>47</sup> the courts of some states being willing, in aid of the deed, to presume an adjournment.<sup>48</sup> It appears, however, that if the land was really sold on the legally appointed day, the purchaser's title will not be avoided by the fact that the deed recites a sale on a different day,<sup>49</sup> or by a clerical error in the recital, such as a lack of correspondence between the stated day of the week and the day of the month.<sup>50</sup>

e. Amount of Land Offered and Sold. If a tax deed shows that several lots or parcels of land were sold together, and that they were separate and distinct lots which could not lawfully be sold en masse,<sup>51</sup> it is void on its face.<sup>52</sup> But the treasurer bid in the land for the county at the tax-sale, when the deed does recite that the treasurer did, nearly three years thereafter, assign a tax certificate thereon for a sum named, "being equal to the cost of redemption at that time," the 16th day of August, 1897, and the deed further recites the amount of the delinquent taxes for each year, the amount for which the treasurer bid off the land being then a matter simply of computation. Gibson v. Ast, 77 Kan. 458, 94 Pac. 801.

Immaterial variations.—Where all the minutiae of a tax-sale are rightly described, with the judgment, so that the reference in the deed cannot be mistaken, the difference of a quarter of a cent in the amount will not vitiate. Jackson v. Cummings, 15 Ill. 449.

Several tracts in same deed.—A tax deed of several lots or tracts of land which fails to recite the separate amount for which each tract is conveyed, as required by statute, is void. *Dye v. Hour of sale.—Where the notice for a tax-sale gave the time as a certain day of the month at a certain hour, a recital in the tax deed that the sale was made on that day of the month, without mentioning the hour of the day, is insufficient. Ladd v. Dickey, 84 Me. 190, 24 Atl. 813.

mere fact that the deed comprises several distinct lots or parcels of land raises no presumption that they were sold in this manner,<sup>53</sup> and it will not be held void if it can be made out from the recitals of the deed either that the lots were in fact sold separately or that the circumstances of the particular case rendered it lawful to mass them together for the purpose of the sale.<sup>54</sup> Still, if several parcels were in fact sold separately according to law, the purchaser is entitled to a deed reciting the real facts of the sale, that all may appear to have been done legally.<sup>55</sup> In respect to other statutory directions as to the manner of offering and selling the land, the deed will be invalid if it does not show a compliance with the law, or at least if it shows the law to have been violated. This applies to the requirement that the officer shall sell the least quantity which any bidder will take for the amount of the taxes,<sup>56</sup> and to the rule which forbids the sale of the whole tract unless that course is necessary to raise the required amount.<sup>57</sup>

Description in granting clause.—A deed which contains several distinct descriptions of real estate, and the granting clause of which provides that the property "last hereinbefore described" is conveyed, these words being copied from the statutory form for tax deeds, is upon its face invalid as a conveyance of any tracts other than those included in the last description. *Spicer v. Showing sale not authorized.—A tax deed reciting that the land sold was the least quantity which would sell for the amount due for taxes, costs, and charges, is void on its face, where the statute authorizing such a sale had been repealed, and it was not authorized by the later statute, although such statement had been left in the printed form of deed by mistake. *Batelle v. f. Consideration<sup>58</sup> and Proceedings Subsequent to Sale. The tax deed is required to contain a statement of the consideration or price of the sale, substantially as directed by the statute, and must show that it did not include any illegal or excessive charges for taxes or costs;<sup>59</sup> and it will be invalidated by any material variance in this particular between the recital in the deed and that in the redemption notice or other proceedings.<sup>60</sup> If the statute also requires the deed to recite the time when the right of redemption expired, that proper notice thereof and of the amount necessary to redeem had been given, or that no redemption had been effected, these statements cannot safely be omitted.<sup>61</sup>

g. Tax Certificate and Assignment Thereof.<sup>62</sup> Where the statute provides that the matters recited in the certificate of sale shall also be recited in the tax deed, a deed which omits any material recital of the certificate, or varies from it in any material particular, is void.<sup>63</sup> Where the grantee in the deed is an assignee

Several tracts.—A tax deed which has not been recorded five years, and contains several separate tracts of land, is void on its face when its recitals do not show the amount for which each tract was conveyed, as required by the statute. Dye v. Midland Valley R. Co., 77 Kan. 488, 94 Pac. 785; Kramer v. Smith, 23 Okla. 381, 100 Pac. 532. And see supra, XIII, D, 2, d, (1), note 44.

Payment.—A tax deed, reciting that the county treasurer was conducting a tax-sale at the time and place the bid for the land was made, and that the sum bid was paid to the treasurer before the property was stricken off, is not open to the objection that it does not recite that the payment of the sum bid was made to the county treasurer. Howell v. Gruver, 78 Kan. 378, 97 Pac. 467.

Presumptions.—In the case of a tax deed less than five years old, in the absence of any showing as to the facts, the payment of subsequent taxes by the holder of the certificate must be presumed made at any date consistent with the recitals of the deed that would support its validity, and, if necessary for that purpose, it must also be presumed that the publications of the notice of sale and redemption notice were made for less than statutory maximum rates. Amount necessary to redeem.—Where a tax deed recites the amount the grantee paid for the certificate, giving the date and the amount of taxes subsequently paid, without giving the date of payment, and the final redemption notice gives as the amount necessary to redeem a sum claimed to be in excess of the proper amount, the deed will not be deemed invalid for that reason, if the amount of these payments, with interest from the date at which it could have been legally paid, equals or exceeds the sum stated in such notice. Harris*, 9 Watts (Pa.) 319, as to presuming an assignment from the fact of the deed being made to another than the purchaser.

Sufficiency of recital of assignment see Knox v. Huidekoper, 21 Wis. 527.

Successive assignments.—Successive assignments of the certificate, intermediate between the purchaser at the tax-sale and the final assignee who procures the deed, need not be recited therein. Cousins v. Allen, 28 Wis. 232.

Clerical errors and surplusage.—A tax deed, reciting that, "whereas, James L. Gates and assignee of A. county has deposited in the office of the county clerk of the county of A. 75 certificates of the county treasurer," shows that James L. Gates presented himself as assignee of A county, and, the singular verb being used, that the application was made by one person only, and cannot be construed to mean that there was an assignee of A county in addition to Gates, and the word "and" before "assignee" should be rejected as surplusage, or as written by the clerk through mistake for "an." Maxon v. Gates, 136 Wis. 270, 116 N. W. 758.

"Purchaser" to be named in deed.—The word "purchaser" in Wis. St. (1898) § 1178, requiring that the purchaser at a tax-sale be named in the tax deed, means one who has made a completed purchase, and not a mere bidder, who has forfeited his bid by failing to pay for the tax certificate, and who never obtained a delivery of the certificate. *Herbst v. Sufficiency of recitals.—A tax deed is not void where it has been of record for more than five years, because, instead of using the statutory language as to the assignment of the tax-sale certificate and all the right, title, and interest of the county in the property, it merely states that the county clerk duly assigned all the right, title, and interest of the county in the property. Baughman v. Harvey, 76 Kan. 767, 93 Pac. 146.

Deed to heirs of purchaser.—A tax deed recorded for five years reciting a sale and issue of a certificate to R, and then reciting a conveyance, on presentation of the certificate, etc., "unto the said heirs of R, deceased, their heirs, and assigns," etc., is not void on its face for failure to state all the facts in detail as to the death of R and the legal proceedings by which the heirs became the owners of the certificate, as the recitals are to be liberally construed. Rynearson v. Conn, 77 Kan. 160, 94 Pac. 205.

Reciting insufficient consideration.—A tax deed is void if it recites a less consideration than necessary to redeem. Colline v. Jolley, 79 Kan. 695, 100 Pac. 477 (thirty-nine cents less); Wilks v. De Hart, 78 Kan. 217, 95 Pac. 836 (thirty-seven cents).

Sufficiency of statement see Burton v. Carver, 80 Kan. 696, 103 Pac. 84; Hahn v. Hill Inv. Co., 79 Kan. 693, 100 Pac. 484; Sanger v. Rice, 43 Kan. 580, 23 Pac. 633; Morrill v. Douglass, 14 Kan. 293. Taxes due and chargeable before the assignment of a certificate of tax-sale issued to a county should be included in the consideration for the assignment. Colline v. Jolley, 79 Kan. 695, 100 Pac. 477.

Error as to year.—A tax deed reciting that it is based on a certificate issued for the payment of the taxes of the year prior to that in which the taxes accrued is invalid upon its face, although it has been on record for more than five years. Price v. Barnhill, 79 Kan. 93, 98 Pac. 774.

Taxes due for each year.—A tax deed need not recite the taxes due for each year, but only the gross sum necessary to redeem at the time it was executed, as in the statutory form. Hahn v. Hill Inv. Co., 79 Kan. 693, 100 Pac. 484; Pierce v. Adams, 77 Kan. 46, 93 Pac. 594.

h. Evidence to Explain, Supply, or Contradict Recitals.<sup>69</sup> Unless the statute makes the recitals of a tax deed conclusive evidence,<sup>70</sup> extrinsic evidence is admissible to explain these recitals for the purpose of supporting the validity of the deed,<sup>71</sup> as also to contradict or control them,<sup>72</sup> to supply defects and omissions in the deed,<sup>73</sup> and to correct misrecitals and clerical or other errors.<sup>74</sup>

3. DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY — a. Certainty and Sufficiency in General. The description in the tax deed must be accurate enough to convey to the purchaser the precise land which he has bought and no other, and must be sufficiently clear and certain for all purposes of identification, both in support of the tax title and in order that it may not injuriously mislead parties interested in the land; if it fails in this it is void and passes no title.<sup>75</sup> Subject to this rule, and according statutory form for a tax deed relating to the payment of subsequent taxes by the purchaser should be inserted in a deed, based on a sale to the county and an assignment of the certificate, only when the purchaser has paid taxes after the assignment of the certificate. *Pierce v. St. § 1901, prescribing the form of tax deeds, requires two descriptions of the property, one of the property assessed, and the other of the property sold, the second description need not be of the same particularity as the first, but any apt words which clearly indicate the property bid for and sold are sufficient, and hence, where the entire property assessed is sold the use of the words "said property," "the property above described," or "the whole of said property," is a sufficient compliance with the statute, being a description of the property bid for and sold by reference to the property described as taxed. *Lines v. Technical accuracy not required.—A tax deed is not void because the description is not technically accurate, where definite and certain enough to enable those familiar with it to readily recognize the land intended. Goodrow v. Stober, 80 Kan. 597, 102 Pac. 1089.

Exceptions and reservations see Abbott v. Coates, 62 Nebr. 247, 86 N. W. 1058; Day v. Needham, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 680, 22 S. W. 103; Pearson v. Mulholland, 17 Ont. 502.

Error as to one of several tracts.—An error in the description of one tract of land in a tax deed will not invalidate the deed as to other tracts included in it and properly described. Watkins v. Inge, 24 Kan. 612.

Application of recitals to several tracts.—In the case of a tax deed covering several tracts which has been of record for five years, failure to add to the statutory form, which includes but one description, words showing that the recitals apply to the tracts severally and not collectively, is not a fatal omission, but results at most in an ambiguity. Lincoln Mortg., etc., Co. v. Davis, 76 Kan. 639, 92 Pac. 707.

"Last hereinbefore described."—A tax deed which contains several distinct descriptions of real estate, and the granting clause of which provides that the real property "last hereinbefore described" is conveyed, is upon its face invalid as a conveyance of any tracts other than those included in the last description. Spicer v. Howe, 38 Kan. 465, 16 Pac. 825. A deed from a tax collector to the territory, which recites the assessment and levy of taxes for the year on property described as "Cabin and Lot 6 of Block 60 and Cabin and Lot 7 of Block 60" of a city and on personal property, and which states that the taxes were delinquent, and that the property was sold to the territory, and which conveys to the territory "all that lot . . . of land . . . above and last described in this deed," conveys only lot 7. Abell v. Swain, (Ariz. 1909) 100 Pac. 831.

Sale of least quantity bidder would take.—Where, under the statute, the sale was of the least quantity of the land which the bidder would take for the taxes, costs, etc., the deed, in addition to setting out this fact (see supra, XIII, D, 2, e), shows that the entire property assessed was sold, the use of the words "said property," "the property above described," or "the whole of said property," to indicate the property bid for and sold, describes with sufficient certainty the particular property sold, being a description of the property bid for and sold by reference to the property previously described as taxed. Lines v. Diggs, 43 Colo. 166, 95 Pac. 341. In Best v. Wohlford, 153 Cal. 17, 94 Pac. 98, a tax deed, having theretofore given a description of a parcel of land, and stated that the collector offered for sale the least quantity thereof to pay the assessment, etc., and that the grantee was the bidder who was willing to take the least quantity thereof, and pay the assessments etc., stated that the said least quantity or smallest portion of the land described was struck off to the grantee, and that the land was sold for assessments and subject to redemption. The granting clause stated that the collector thereby granted "all that lot, piece, or parcel of land so sold and hereinbefore and lastly described in this deed." It was held that the deed showed that the whole of the lot was the least quantity which any bidder was willing to take, and that such whole was in fact sold and conveyed by the deed, and that the deed was not open to the objection that it purported to convey the "least quantity or smallest portion," without designating what it was. Compare, however, Lines v. Digges, supra. A tax deed, reciting that a person named having offered to pay a certain sum, "being the whole amount of taxes, interest and costs then due and remaining unpaid on said property for 1889, to wit, NE<sup>1</sup> sec. 35-2-36, which was the least quantity bid for," is not open to the objection that the property is not described with sufficient certainty, in that the word "for" should have been used between the words "remaining unpaid" and "said property," instead of "on," as there immediately followed a description of the property, and the words "which was the least quantity bid for" removed any possible uncertainty. land; <sup>78</sup> but a description of the property as "a house and lot" on a certain street, without the number, is void for uncertainty, although the dimensions or the name of the owner may be added. <sup>79</sup> In suitable cases the land may be described by the numbers of the subdivisions of the government survey, <sup>80</sup> and the usual abbreviations for these subdivisions and for the points of the compass may be used. <sup>81</sup> If the description is otherwise correct and sufficient, it is not necessarily invalidated by omitting to name the state and county; <sup>82</sup> but it is otherwise if the name of the city or town is omitted. <sup>83</sup> No sufficient description can be given by merely stating the quantity or acreage of the land, <sup>84</sup> but if the description is otherwise perfect and correct, a mistake in this particular will not avoid it. <sup>85</sup>

b. Undivided Interest or Part of Tract. Where a tax deed attempts to convey a portion of a tract or lot, it must be so particularly described that it can be definitely and certainly located within the boundaries of the larger tract; it will not do to describe it as a "part" of the tract or the "balance" of it, or as a given fractional part of it, or as so many acres out of the tract, or as a certain tract "less" or "excepting" a given number of acres; all these forms of description being void for uncertainty. <sup>86</sup> There are, however, some decisions to the effect that when the quantity of the land intended to be conveyed is stated and also its general location with reference to the larger tract, nothing being left uncertain but the shape of the portion to be conveyed, the description may be sustained, the presumption being that the land was intended to lie in the form of a square.<sup>87</sup>

c. Intentments and Inferences. It is a general rule that no intentments can be made in support of tax deeds, but they must be sufficiently certain on their face; and hence words necessary to identify the land will not be supplied by inference or presumption;<sup>88</sup> nor is it permissible to reject any part of the description as surplusage, although, if this were done, a good and sufficient description would remain.<sup>89</sup> The rule is different, however, where the statute makes the ordinary

Deed conveying undivided interest in proportion to acreage see Sheafe v. Wait, 30 Vt. 735, holding that a tax deed which describes the land simply as so many acres of a certain lot passes an undivided interest in such lot equal to the proportion which the number of acres sold bears to the whole number of acres in the lot.

Rule in Pennsylvania.—A treasurer's tax-sale of part of a tract of land and a conveyance of that part, designating the quantity but not the locality, is good, and the purchaser has an unrestricted choice in the tract. Coxe v. Blanden, 1 Watts 533, 26 Am. Dec. 83. But compare Erwin v. Helm, 13 Serg. & R. 151.

Undivided portion.—Where the statute provides that the person who offers to pay the amount of taxes due on any parcel of land for the smallest portion of the same is to be considered the purchaser, and the portion thus designated shall be considered "an undivided portion," it is held that a tax deed describing the land conveyed as the "undivided seven-fortieths" of the entire parcel is valid. Brundige v. Maloney, 52 Iowa 218, 2 N. W. 1110. A tax deed, showing that an undivided three-fourths of a certain tract was taxable and assessed for taxation and that the same tract was sold and conveyed by the deed, sufficiently identified the tract assessed with that sold. But this does not apply where the shape of the whole tract is such that it would not be possible to lay off the required number of acres in the form of a square. Ammons v. Dwyer, 78 Tex. 639, 15 S. rules of evidence and of interpretation applicable to tax deeds, for in this case surplusage can be rejected and the maxim applies that that may be regarded as certain which can be rendered so.<sup>90</sup>

d. Extrinsic Evidence to Identify. It has been held in some cases that if the description in a tax deed is not certain and complete in itself, the deed is void and cannot be aided by extrinsic evidence.<sup>91</sup> But the rule more generally adopted is that such evidence is not admissible to supply defects or uncertainties apparent on the face of the deed or to explain a patent ambiguity;<sup>92</sup> while on the other hand if the defect or ambiguity is latent, that is, if the description is apparently certain and sufficient on its face, but needs evidence to apply it to the particular land intended, on account of a non-apparent error or mistake, extrinsic testimony should be received for this purpose.<sup>93</sup>

e. Variance Between Deed and Assessment. The description of the property in the tax deed should correspond with that in the assessment roll and other prior proceedings, and in case of a material variance the purchaser will not acquire title.<sup>94</sup> And this rule applies, although the description in the assessment list was defective or insufficient while that in the deed is perfect and complete, as the defect in the former cannot be cured by inserting a good description in the latter.<sup>95</sup>

What variance material.—A difference between the assessment and the deed, in respect

E. Amendment and Curative Statutes — 1. AMENDMENT AND CORRECTION — a. In General. A mere clerical error in a tax deed may be corrected by the proper officer;<sup>96</sup> but not so a defect of substance.<sup>97</sup> In the latter case the proper remedy is to procure the issuance of a new deed;<sup>98</sup> but it must be observed that this remedy cannot be employed to cure a fatal defect in the anterior proceedings.<sup>99</sup>

b. Reformation in Equity. A tax title being a purely technical title, as distinguished from a meritorious title, and depending for its validity on a strict compliance with the requirements of the statutes in respect to all the prior proceedings, which are wholly in invitum as respects the owner of the property, a court of equity will not interfere to reform a tax deed or order the correction of errors in it.<sup>1</sup>

2. CURATIVE STATUTES. It is competent for the legislature, by a curative statute, to obviate the effect of errors, irregularities, or defects in tax deeds, where they are of such a character that it could have rendered them immaterial in advance,<sup>2</sup> but not to cure a want of jurisdiction or other defects affecting the substantial rights of the parties or going to the ground-work of the proceedings.<sup>3</sup>

to the description of the property, is not material if it is apparent that the same land is described in each. Mitchell v. Pillsbury, 5 Wis. 407. And it is no objection to a tax deed that it contains a fuller description than that contained in the assessment, provided that both fit the land intended. Castlemen v. Phillipsburg Land Co., 1 Tenn. Ch. App. 9.

Admissibility of extrinsic evidence.—Where the only variance is a difference in the number of the district, the holder of the tax deed may show that it resulted from a clerical error made by the clerk in transcribing the record. Hilton v. Singletary, 107 Ga. 821, 33 S. E. 715. And in Blair Town Lot, etc., Co. v. Scott, 44 Iowa 143, it was held that the tax purchaser may show by extrinsic evidence that the land described in the deed is the same as that assessed, although under a different description.

Such a statute may be construed as retroactive in its operation if plainly so intended, but not otherwise.<sup>4</sup>

F. Construction and Operation<sup>5</sup>—1. IN GENERAL. The general rule, in the absence of a statute, is that a tax deed must be strictly construed in favor of the taxpayer;<sup>6</sup> but either by the aid of statutes making tax deeds prima facie evidence of title in the holder,<sup>7</sup> or after a great lapse of time,<sup>8</sup> they will be supported by all reasonable presumptions,<sup>9</sup> and in construing doubtful or ambiguous clauses that interpretation will be adopted, if possible, which would give validity to the deed rather than one which would destroy it.<sup>10</sup> A tax deed from the state conveying delinquent state tax land can receive no other construction than a deed between private persons, and the grantee therein is entitled to the performance of the conditions therein according to their exact terms.<sup>11</sup>

2. PROPERTY CONVEYED. In respect to the property conveyed by a tax deed, it will be construed according to the ordinary rules applicable to private conveyances,<sup>12</sup> except that it cannot be made to include any greater interest or other property than that described in the assessment and other prior proceedings.<sup>13</sup> The acreage or area given will not control the general description, but vice versa.<sup>14</sup> Where the deed conveys several tracts of land, an error in the description of one will not invalidate the deed as to the others.<sup>15</sup>

3. RELATION BACK TO TIME OF SALE. A tax deed, although delayed in its issuance, may relate back to the time when the purchaser became fully entitled to receive it,<sup>16</sup> or even to the time of the sale, when this is necessary to effect justice to all parties;<sup>17</sup> but it does not relate back to the time of the sale so as to clothe the

A tax deed containing several distinct descriptions of real estate, whose granting clause conveys the real property "last hereinbefore described," is on its face invalid as to any other tracts than those included in the last description. Spicer v. Howe, 38 Kan. 465, 16 Pac. 825. And see Gibson v. Kueffer, 69 Kan. 534, 77 Pac. 232; Cartwright v. Korman, 45 Kan. 515, 26 Pac. 48.

purchaser retrospectively with the rights of an owner during the interval;<sup>18</sup> nor for the purpose of making parties trespassers by reason of acts done on the land before the deed was executed.<sup>19</sup>

4. PRIORITIES BETWEEN SUCCESSIVE DEEDS. As between two tax deeds conveying the same land, the one which is later in date will outrank the other and divest any title acquired under it,<sup>20</sup> unless the latter, although earlier in date of execution, was founded on a later tax-sale;<sup>21</sup> or, according to some of the decisions, the priority is to be given to the sale and deed for the taxes of the later year.<sup>22</sup>

5. WHAT LAW GOVERNS. The validity and effect of a tax deed duly executed are to be determined by the statutes in force when the sale was made or certificate acquired, and not by any statute enacted after the sale or issue of the certificate and before the making of the deed.<sup>23</sup>

G. Tax Deeds as Evidence<sup>24</sup> — 1. AT COMMON LAW — a. Presumptions and Burden of Proof. At common law the validity of a tax-sale will not be presumed from the mere deed of the collector unaccompanied by proof of the prior proceedings and their validity.<sup>25</sup> On the contrary, in the absence of an enabling statute, the burden is upon any person who claims title to land derived from a sale thereof for taxes to prove, affirmatively and by proper evidence, that every mandatory provision of the law under which the sale was effected was strictly complied with, that each step in the proceedings, from the assessment of the taxes to the execution of the deed, was formally and regularly taken by the officers or persons legally authorized, and that he or his grantor was the purchaser at the sale.<sup>26</sup>

b. Presumptions From Possession and Lapse of Time. As a general rule, and in the absence of a statute changing the common law in this respect, mere lapse of time will not of itself afford presumptive evidence of the regularity and validity of a tax-sale, if the purchaser and those claiming under him have not had possession under the deed; that is, the antiquity of a tax deed, if no possession has been taken under it, affords no presumption in its favor, but on the contrary operates the more strongly against the holder.<sup>27</sup> But on the other hand, an ancient tax deed and its recitals, together with long-continued and uninterrupted possession, are evidence from which compliance with the statute regulating tax-sales may be presumed.<sup>28</sup> In regard to the length of time during which possession must have continued in order to raise this presumption, no certain rule can be gathered from the authorities, but it is doubtful whether any time less than the full period prescribed by the statute of limitations will suffice.<sup>29</sup>

c. Effect of Tax Deed as Evidence. At common law, neither the tax deed nor its recitals can be accepted as evidence of the existence, legality, or validity of the prior proceedings, but these must be proved step by step as a necessary preliminary to the introduction of the deed as evidence of title.<sup>30</sup> Exceptions to this tion.<sup>42</sup> But on the other hand the deed may be made conclusive of the proper notice or advertisement of sale,<sup>43</sup> the warrant or other process under which the officer acted,<sup>44</sup> the regularity of the sale,<sup>45</sup> and other non-essential matters prior to the execution of the deed,<sup>46</sup> and the due execution of the deed itself.<sup>47</sup> A statute of this kind, however, is somewhat strictly construed, and it is held that the recitals of the deed will be conclusive only as to facts which the law requires to be recited therein and not of any facts beyond the scope of the authority of the officer making the recitals.<sup>48</sup> A statute making tax deeds conclusive evidence of the regularity of prior proceedings cannot apply to deeds recorded before its passage, where it does not give the owner a reasonable time within which to assert his rights.<sup>49</sup> But it has been held that the repeal of a statute giving this conclusive effect to tax deeds does not impair the obligation of contracts, in regard to sales made or deeds executed before the repeal, but merely changes the rule of evidence.<sup>50</sup>

3. STATUTES MAKING TAX DEEDS PRESUMPTIVE EVIDENCE. In many states laws have been enacted modifying the common-law rules and making tax deeds prima facie evidence of title in the purchaser or of the regularity and legality of the preliminary proceedings as well as of the sale. These statutes are undoubtedly constitutional,<sup>51</sup> and must be given their due and proper effect by the courts,

Construction and application of statutory language.—Where a statute makes the tax deed "sufficient" evidence of the authority of the collector, or of other primary requisites, this term is held equivalent to "prima facie." Parker v. Overman, 18 How. (U. S.) 137, 15 L. ed. 318. So where a statute provides that a tax-sale shall not be impeached except for certain specified causes, it is held that this makes the deed presumptive evidence of good title in the grantee. Hardie v. Chrisman, 60 Miss. 671. But on the other hand, a statutory declaration that a tax deed shall be "good and effectual both in law and equity" gives no special sanction to the conveyance beyond that derived from the general principles of law and does not impart to it any further evidential force. Lyon v. Hunt, 11 Ala. 295, 46 Am. Dec. 216; Hadley v. Tankersley, 8 Tex. 12.

Conflict between recitals of deed and certificate.—Where the recitations in a tax certificate are in conflict with the recitations of the tax deed based thereon, the recitations of the tax deed will prevail. Keller v. Hawk, 19 Okla. 407, 91 Pac. 778.

To what deed statute applies.—Under N. Y. Tax Law, Laws (1896), p. 850, c. 908, § 157, declaring that the provisions as to sales by the state controller, for unpaid taxes and redemption, shall govern and control the county treasurer, and that the same rights and remedies shall be deemed to exist, the presumption authorized by section 131 (page 841), providing that a controller's deed shall be presumptive evidence that the sale and all proceedings prior thereto, from and including the assessment, and all notices required to be given previous to the expiration of the time allowed for redemption, were regular and in accordance with law, is applicable to a tax deed executed and delivered by a county treasurer pursuant to section 153 (page 849), and a deed of a county treasurer carries with it the same right to assume that all proceedings prior thereto were regular. *Clinton v. deed presumptive evidence of title which would not have been so at the time of the sale.<sup>55</sup> On the other hand it is competent to repeal a law of this kind, and it cannot be said that contractual rights are impaired, although the repeal affects deeds in existence at the time.<sup>56</sup>

4. EFFECT OF STATUTES MAKING TAX DEEDS EVIDENCE — a. In General. The effect of the statutes under consideration is to dispense with the necessity of proving the various steps in the tax proceedings, one by one, and to permit the introduction of the tax deed in evidence without preliminary proof.<sup>57</sup> If the statute enumerates the particular matters as to which it shall be presumptive evidence, all other essential steps must of course be proved;<sup>58</sup> but where, as is more usually the case, it makes the deed evidence of the facts recited in it, these need not be separately proved, in the first instance, but the deed will prima facie establish their existence and regularity;<sup>59</sup> and where the tax deed is made pre-will estop the party putting it in evidence from contradicting its recitals,<sup>62</sup> although he may if he chooses waive the benefit of the statutory presumption and prove the proceedings in detail.<sup>63</sup>

b. Burden of Proof. Where a statute makes the tax deed presumptive evidence of title or of the regularity of the anterior proceedings, without preliminary proof, its effect is to change the burden of proof, which before rested upon the purchaser to sustain the deed, and cast it upon the party who would contest its validity.<sup>64</sup> It is then incumbent upon the latter to point out the particular illegality or defect relied on and to prove it affirmatively; it is not sufficient to show facts from which illegality might be inferred or to cast a general doubt over the title, but some specific fault or defect must be established by sufficient and satisfactory legal evidence.<sup>65</sup> When this is done, however, the presumptive force of the deed is

Recitals conflicting with presumption of regularity.—Where a tax deed for land purchased by a county showed affirmatively that the county was a competitive bidder at the sale in violation of the statute, the purchaser thereof will not be protected by a presumption of regularity in the proceeding, or by Mont. Pol. Code, § 3897, making tax deeds prima facie evidence of certain matters, since a tax deed is construed most strongly against the grantee thereunder, and, where two presumptions are admissible from a deed, that must be indulged most favorable to the owner. *Rush v. merely makes the deed evidence of the regularity of the sale, the levy and assessment must be proved independently.<sup>71</sup>

e. Fact, Regularity, and Validity of Sale. Where the statute makes the tax deed either prima facie or conclusive evidence of the "regularity of the sale," it may be relied on, without preliminary evidence and until successfully impeached, as proving that a sale was made in fact, that it was held at the proper time and place and in the proper manner, and that all things else connected with it were done regularly and legally.<sup>72</sup> But a statute going no further than this does not dispense with the necessity of proof of the levy and assessment of the tax and other preliminary steps, nor does it make the recitals of the deed evidence of these matters.<sup>73</sup> tax-sale, and sold for the amount paid for the tax certificate, and further shows that the certificate was produced and surrendered to the clerk of the circuit court who executed the deed, it is unnecessary to prove that such certificate was assigned by the state, for it sufficiently appears that the grantees were holders of the certificate, paid for and surrendered the same to the state, and were entitled to and received the deed for the land embraced in the certificate. *Saunders v. otherwise if the statute makes the deed evidence only of the regularity of the sale.<sup>75</sup>

g. Notice of Application For Deed. Under a statute making a tax deed regular on its face prima facie evidence of the truth of the facts recited therein and of the regularity of all proceedings from the valuation of the land up to the execution of the deed, a tax deed regular on its face is prima facie evidence that a proper notice of intention to take out the tax deed was given and properly served, and the burden is on one attacking the deed to show a defective notice or service.<sup>76</sup>

h. Preliminaries to Introduction of Deed in Evidence—(I) IN GENERAL. To secure the reception of a tax deed in evidence a proper foundation for it must be laid. Without the aid of a statute such as those under consideration, this must be done by proving all the preliminary proceedings;<sup>77</sup> but if the statute dispenses with this preliminary evidence, it is only necessary that the deed shall be fair and valid on its face.<sup>78</sup> In some states, however, the party offering the deed must first show due authority in the officer making it,<sup>79</sup> and that it was executed with due observance of the statutory requirements as to signature, sealing, attestation, and acknowledgment,<sup>80</sup> and even that it has been duly recorded and a proper index of the record made.<sup>81</sup>

(II) OBJECTIONS TO FORM OR VALIDITY OF DEED. To entitle a tax deed to be admitted as presumptive evidence, under the statute, it must be substantially in the form prescribed by law<sup>82</sup> and apparently fair and regular, for if it is void on its face, or if it discloses the illegality of the tax or a fatal defect in the prior proceedings, it proves nothing and must be rejected.<sup>83</sup>

Records destroyed.—The provision of the "burnt records act" in Illinois, that one relying on a tax deed shall prove the validity of the proceedings precedent to the tax-sale, does not apply to one who is defending a suit brought under that act. Garrick v. Chamberlain, 97 Ill. 620.

Copy of deed as evidence.—In Pennsylvania it is held that a copy of a treasurer's deed, from the registry in the treasurer's office, is not evidence and cannot be made to take the place of the original. Townsen v. Wilson, 9 Pa. St. 270.

(III) JUDGMENT AND PRECEPT OR ORDER OF SALE. In some states where a tax-sale of land is founded on the judgment or decree of a court, it is necessary, before receiving the tax deed as evidence of title, that the party relying on it shall first show the judgment and the precept or order of sale thereon, these facts not being proved by the recitals of the deed.<sup>84</sup>

1. Effect of Such Statutes in Other States. A tax deed properly executed, and which is made presumptive evidence of title or of the regularity of the prior proceedings by a statute of the state where such proceedings were had, is admissible for the same purpose and has the same effect in the courts of any other state.<sup>85</sup>

5. EVIDENCE TO IMPEACH DEED OR TITLE<sup>86</sup>—a. In General. Although a tax deed is by law made prima facie evidence of compliance with the provisions of the statute regulating tax-sales, yet it may be impeached by showing any substantial failure of such compliance; and when this is done its presumptive weight is overcome and the case thrown open.<sup>87</sup> Also it may be shown against the deed that

Kansas.—City R. Co. v. Chesney, 30 Kan. 199, 1 Pac. 520.

Kentucky.—The statute requiring the original owner of land, in order to defeat a tax title, to show that the assessment, the levy, and sale were defective, shifted the burden to the owner, but did not change the rule that, before one can obtain a complete tax title, each legal step required by law to the land in question was not subject to taxation at the time it was assessed,<sup>88</sup> or that the purchaser at the tax-sale was disqualified from acquiring the title by reason of a duty resting on him to pay the taxes.<sup>89</sup>

b. Levy and Assessment. Under the rule just stated, it is competent for the party seeking to impeach or invalidate a tax title, notwithstanding the recitals in the deed, to show that there was no levy of the tax in question,<sup>90</sup> that the levy was illegal or for an unlawful purpose,<sup>91</sup> that the land was never assessed for taxation,<sup>92</sup> or that the assessment was so erroneous, irregular, or defective as not to sustain the subsequent tax-sale founded thereon.<sup>93</sup>

c. Sale. Notwithstanding the effect given by statute to tax deeds as presumptive evidence, it is competent to show, in opposition to the title founded thereon, that the necessary demand for the taxes was not made before the sale,<sup>94</sup> that there was a failure to exhaust the owner's personalty before resorting to the land,<sup>95</sup> that the requirements of the statute in regard to the notice or advertisement of the sale were not complied with,<sup>96</sup> that no sale in fact ever took place,<sup>97</sup> that it was not held at the proper time or place,<sup>98</sup> that it was not conducted in the manner prescribed by law,<sup>99</sup> or that there was fraud or collusion on the part of the officer making the sale and the tax purchaser.<sup>1</sup> But if the statute makes the deed conclusive evidence of the regularity of the sale it cannot be impeached on account of matters not going to the jurisdiction or authority to sell.<sup>2</sup>

d. Payment of Tax or Redemption. Although a tax deed may be made presumptive evidence of title, it is still permissible for a party claiming in opposition to it to impeach and defeat it by proof that the taxes on the land in question were in fact paid before the sale,<sup>3</sup> or that the property was duly and effectually redeemed after the sale.<sup>4</sup>

XIV. TAX TITLES.<sup>5</sup>

A. Title and Rights of Tax Purchaser<sup>6</sup>— 1. NATURE AND EFFECT OF SALE AS TRANSFER OF TITLE — a. In General. Tax-sales being in derogation of private rights of property, the laws authorizing and regulating them must be strictly construed, in so far as they are intended for the benefit or protection of the citizen, and their requirements must be strictly followed in order to pass any title to the purchaser.<sup>7</sup> Nor does such a title pass merely by the sale; but during the period thereafter allowed for redemption the interest of the purchaser is in the nature of a lien or mortgage, and he does not become invested with the incidents of true ownership until that time has expired and he has received a deed.<sup>8</sup>

b. What Law Governs. Questions concerning the effect of a tax-sale as a transfer of title, or the rights of the purchaser and the validity of his title, are to be determined by the law in force at the time the sale was made,<sup>9</sup> which law, indeed, constitutes a contract between the state and the purchaser, the terms of which cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation.<sup>10</sup>

Definition and nature.—"Tax title" is the title by which one holds lands purchased at a tax-sale. Willcuts v. Rollins, 85 Iowa 247, 52 N. W. 199; Beirne v. Burdett, 52 Miss. 795. It is not a derivative title (Willcuts v. Rollins, 85 Iowa 247, 52 N. W. 199); but is a purely technical, as distinguished from a meritorious title (Kern v. Clarke, 59 Minn. 70, 60 N. W. 809 [quoting Black Tax Title, § 409]).

Effect of redemption.—When the owner of the property actually effects a redemption before the county authorities direct the execution of a deed to the purchaser, a deed afterward issued is ineffectual. Merrimon v. Lyman, 124 N. C. 434, 32 S. E. 732.

2. PROPERTY AND RIGHTS PASSING BY SALE AND DEED<sup>11</sup>—a. In General. A tax-sale and deed cannot be effectual to pass title to any other land than that assessed,<sup>12</sup> or to convey any more land than the taxpayer owned at the time of the sale,<sup>13</sup> and the purchaser must take subject to any easements, such as right of way, which the owner had previously granted to third persons.<sup>14</sup>

b. Public and Exempt Lands. Since property belonging to the United States or to a state is not subject to taxation,<sup>15</sup> an assessment of taxes on such property is null and void and a sale thereunder passes no title whatever to the purchaser.<sup>16</sup> The same rule applies to the sale of land which is exempted from taxation by contract or legislative grant.<sup>17</sup> But a private person may have an inchoate or equitable title to land, the fee of which remains in the public, and this interest may be taxable and may pass to the purchaser at a tax-sale.<sup>18</sup>

18. Gwynne v. Neiswanger, 18 Ohio 400;

c. Trees and Timber. During the period allowed for redemption, the purchaser at a tax-sale has no such title to the land as will justify him in entering and cutting timber, and if he does so, he is liable in trespass to the owner,<sup>19</sup> except where both the land and the timber are assessed and sold;<sup>20</sup> and conversely, as the owner has the right to cut timber during this period, the purchaser cannot maintain replevin for what he cuts and removes,<sup>21</sup> although a court of equity will perhaps restrain the owner from stripping the land if injury to the purchaser's lien is shown.<sup>22</sup> When the time for redemption expires and the purchaser obtains his deed, he will take title to the timber remaining on the land, and also to what has been cut by the owner in the interval and not removed;<sup>23</sup> but the purchaser has no right of action for timber cut and removed before the tax-sale, by the owner or a trespasser.<sup>24</sup> without the consent of the former, it is a trespass,<sup>26</sup> although under some statutes the holder of the tax title is entitled to possession until the property is redeemed.<sup>27</sup> But when the purchaser has obtained his deed he is entitled to the possession, and to hold it against a mortgagee or cestui que trust.<sup>28</sup> He must, however, obtain the possession in fact, either peaceably or by the aid of judicial process,<sup>29</sup> the tax deed itself not being sufficient to give him a constructive possession.<sup>30</sup> But a purchaser of a tax title is not entitled to possession of the property where his purchase is only of an inchoate interest in the property.<sup>31</sup> Under some statutes the holder of a tax title is not entitled to possession as against subsequent tax titles, until he has acquired all of such subsequent titles.<sup>32</sup>

(II) LOSS OF TITLE BY FAILURE OF POSSESSION OR BY ADVERSE POSSESSION. In the absence of a statute to that effect, the purchaser at a tax-sale does not forfeit his rights by a failure to take possession of the premises.<sup>33</sup> But it is now provided by law in several states that this result shall follow if he fails to acquire the possession within a special limited time;<sup>34</sup> and either under these statutes or under the general rules of adverse possession and the limitation of actions, continued possession on the part of the owner, protracted for a sufficient length of time, will bar all claims of the tax purchaser under his deed.<sup>35</sup>

e. Rents and Profits and Waste. Before the execution of the tax deed the purchaser at tax-sale has no such title as will protect him in committing waste upon the premises;<sup>36</sup> but on the other hand, he may have appropriate remedies to restrain the commission of waste endangering his security.<sup>37</sup> During the period allowed for redemption he has no right to receive the rents and profits of the estate, unless such a right is given by statute,<sup>38</sup> and if he has been in possession during this period, the owner, on redeeming, is entitled to an accounting for the rental value of the premises exclusive of improvements made by the tax purchaser.<sup>39</sup> But a tax purchaser is not accountable for rents and profits where he does not take possession,<sup>40</sup> or where the premises had no rental value until improved by him;<sup>41</sup> nor can he be held liable for the rents and profits at the instance of a mortgagee of the premises, in a suit for foreclosure, at least in the absence of a demand therefor in the complaint;<sup>42</sup> nor is he accountable to a junior lien-holder unless he had actual possession or actually received rents.<sup>43</sup>

b. Purchase From State. Where land is forfeited to the state for non-payment of taxes, or bid in by the state at a tax-sale, its subsequent conveyance to a purchaser from the state will ordinarily invest him with any and all titles which the state holds to the particular property,<sup>47</sup> although he may take subject to conditions subsequent, such as a requirement of notice to the former owner, the non-observance of which may divest his title,<sup>48</sup> or subject to the right of the original owner, his grantees, or mortgagees to obtain a reconveyance.<sup>49</sup> The usual rule is that the state thus acquires, and likewise transfers to its vendee, the exact title held by the delinquent taxpayer at the time of the sale,<sup>50</sup> although, if the statute so declares, the transfer to a private purchaser may invest him with a new title, independent of that of the former owner, and equivalent to a grant or patent.<sup>51</sup>

c. Tax-Sale Creating New Title. Under most statutes the rule prevails that a tax title has nothing to do with the previous chain of title and is not in any way connected with it, but that it is a breaking up of all previous titles and extinguishes and destroys all other titles and liens, and consequently the issuance of a valid tax deed creates in the purchaser a new and original title, entirely disconnected from that of the former owner, going back no further than the tax-sale, and not encumbered with any previous liens or collateral interests.<sup>52</sup> is in force, a tax title cuts off all inchoate and contingent rights and titles, including interests which might vest in persons not in being;<sup>53</sup> and this may include an estate in remainder, where the property is assessed to the life-tenant,<sup>54</sup> although ordinarily, in such a case, the estate of the remainder-man is not affected by the tax-sale, either because the separate interests are separately assessed or because the state does not undertake to sell more than the interest of the tenant for life.<sup>55</sup>

e. Rights of Dower and Homestead Divested. If the statutes are so framed, as above explained, as to invest the purchaser at a valid tax-sale with the title to the land in fee simple, without regard to the previous condition of the title, even the claims of homestead,<sup>56</sup> and inchoate rights of dower,<sup>57</sup> will be divested by such a sale, and the holder of the tax deed will take an estate unencumbered with any such rights or claims.

f. Transfer of Title of Person Assessed. If the laws contemplate only the sale and transfer of the title or interest of the person in whose name the property was assessed, the purchaser at a tax-sale will become invested with precisely the same title which was held by the delinquent taxpayer, no more and no less, and will take it subject to any infirmities, limitations, or liens which attached to it in the hands of the former owner.<sup>58</sup> But if the land is duly assessed to the owner of record, the title of the tax purchaser will prevail against the holder of an unre-charged from any estate in or lien upon the same in favor of any person made a party to the proceedings.

Separate Interests Separately Assessed. If the statute deals with particular interests in land, rather than the land itself, and directs their separate assessment to their respective owners,<sup>60</sup> the purchase of a particular estate or interest so assessed, and sold for the non-payment of the taxes on it, will not in general disturb or affect any other estates or interests in the land or liens upon it.<sup>61</sup>

4. LIENS AND ENCUMBRANCES — a. In General. It is competent for the legislature to make the lien of taxes on real estate paramount to all other existing liens and encumbrances;<sup>62</sup> and when this is done, and when the tax-sale is considered as creating a new and independent title, it destroys and extinguishes all existing liens, charges, and encumbrances of every kind, and gives the purchaser a clear and unencumbered title.<sup>63</sup> But on the other hand, if the tax lien is not made

Merger of tax title in fee.—Where the purchaser of a tax title acquires the interest of the record owner by conveyance subsequent to the acquisition of the tax title and within the period allowed by statute for redemption, the tax title is merged in the title acquired from the owner of record, and the purchaser holds subject to existing liens and equities.

paramount by law, or if the tax-sale is considered as passing only the title of the person assessed, it does not divest valid liens previously attaching.<sup>64</sup>

b. Judgment and Execution Liens. If the tax lien is made paramount to all others, as just stated, the lien of a judgment or execution against the owner of the land will be divested by a tax-sale and the maturing of the title in the purchaser, and the only right of the creditor will be to come upon the surplus, if any, of the purchase-money or to redeem from the tax-sale.<sup>65</sup>

c. Mortgage Liens—(1) IN GENERAL. As a general rule, where the tax is laid upon the land as such, irrespective of separate estates, liens, or interests, and is collected by a valid tax-sale, the purchaser will take a clear title, freed from the lien of a prior mortgage.<sup>66</sup> But the mortgagee will have a right to redeem the Effect of redemption by owner.—The purchaser at a tax-sale acquires but an inchoate title, which does not divest liens against the land until the expiration of the time allowed for redemption; hence if, within that time, the owner redeems, the property remains subject to a previously attaching judgment lien. Singer's Appeal, 4 Pa. Cas. 430, 7 Atl. 800.

Gurney*, 91 Iowa 621, 60 N. W. 187.

Tax deed not acknowledged or not recorded.—Where a tax deed was executed but was not acknowledged or proved for record as required by law, and afterward the original owner still remaining in possession, a judgment was rendered against him, it was held that the lien of the judgment was superior to the tax deed, as such deed, although spread on the records, was not constructive notice to subsequent creditors. *Hill v. County as purchaser.—The authorities of a county cannot buy in a tax title, for the use of the school fund, for the purpose of property within the time limited by law, unless his rights in that behalf have been cut off by a judgment foreclosing the tax lien in proceedings to which he was a party.<sup>67</sup>

(ii) MORTGAGE TO STATE. As an exception to the general rule just stated, and by force of statute in several states, it is held that a tax-sale does not divest the lien of a mortgage given to the state,<sup>68</sup> or of one given to secure a loan of school funds,<sup>69</sup> or of the state sinking fund.<sup>70</sup>

d. Lien of Prior or Coördinate Taxes — (i) IN GENERAL. In some states it is held that the sale of land for non-payment of taxes does not divest the lien of any taxes previously assessed and chargeable on the same premises;<sup>71</sup> and this rule is undoubtedly correct where the law directs that the tax purchaser shall assume and pay all previous delinquent taxes,<sup>72</sup> or where the statute or the judgment under which the sale is made orders that he shall take title subject to the liens of existing taxes.<sup>73</sup> But ordinarily the doctrine prevails that a valid tax-sale will cut off the liens of all taxes assessed for any years previous to that for which the sale was made.<sup>74</sup> Hence a title acquired by a sheriff's or treasurer's defeating and cutting off the lien of a mortgage held by a third person and which is prior to another mortgage in favor of the fund. Miller v. Gregg, 26 Iowa 75.

Foreclosure of mortgage.—A tax-sale is not subject to the rule that one who purchases during the pendency of a suit is held bound by the decree that may be made. Wright v. Walker, 30 Ark. 44. Hence a purchaser at a tax-sale is not bound by the foreclosure of a mortgage given by the former owner of the land, and the purchaser at the foreclosure sale cannot maintain ejectment against the holder of the tax title in possession. Becker v. Howard, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 359 [affirmed in 66 N. Y. 5].

deed, in pursuance of a sale for a delinquent tax, will prevail over a tax title acquired by a similar deed for the tax of a previous year, even though the sale for the older tax was made after the sale for the later tax.<sup>75</sup> And it has been held that this rule operates as well in favor of the owner who redeems from the tax-sale as the purchaser.<sup>76</sup>

(II) SUBSEQUENT TAXES. A sale for the taxes of a given year does not discharge the land from the lien of taxes assessed for a subsequent year, whether they were assessed before the sale or in the interval before the purchaser completes his title,<sup>77</sup> except perhaps in cases where all the taxes were equally chargeable on the property at the time of the sale and might all have been included in it.<sup>78</sup>

(III) MUNICIPAL TAXES AND ASSESSMENTS. Where the statute makes the state taxes a superior lien to municipal taxes and local assessments, or where both classes of taxes are to be collected in the same manner and by the same proceedings, those of the latter class will be cut off and their lien extinguished by a sale for state taxes in which the local taxes or assessments might have been included.<sup>79</sup> But otherwise the purchaser will take subject to existing taxes of the inferior class.<sup>80</sup>

5. EFFECT OF DEFECTS AND IRREGULARITIES IN PRIOR PROCEEDINGS<sup>81</sup> — a. In General. The power to sell land for the non-payment of taxes is a naked power not coupled with an interest,<sup>82</sup> and it is essential to its valid exercise that there shall be a strict compliance with the directions of the statute authorizing and regulating such sales.<sup>83</sup> The proceedings, being all hostile to the owner, are stricti juris, and the purchaser is bound to see to their regularity, and he comes strictly within the rule of caveat emptor.<sup>84</sup> To a certain extent flaws or omissions in the prior proceedings may be rendered innocuous by curative statutes,<sup>85</sup> or by statutes making tax deeds presumptive evidence or even conclusive evidence of regularity,<sup>86</sup> or by the application of the statute of limitations to actions to impeach tax titles.<sup>87</sup> But subject to these considerations the general rule prevails that, although defects or irregularities in the prior proceedings which are not material or not of a nature to affect the substantial rights of the taxpayer, or consist merely in the disregard of directory provisions, may not invalidate a tax title otherwise good, yet any illegality, jurisdictional defect, or disobedience to mandates of the law which are designed for the protection or security of the owner of the property will render the tax title wholly void and nugatory.<sup>88</sup> But

Estoppel of state as against prior tax purchaser—Deed made conclusive evidence.—Under W. Va. Code (1899), c. 31, § 29 (Code (1906), § 888), making a tax deed conclusive evidence that the state has passed to the grantee the title of the former owner, against all persons except the former owner, his heirs and assigns and those who might have redeemed, etc., the state is estopped from proceeding to sell, as forfeited for non-entry in the name of the former owner, land conveyed by the sheriff to a purchaser pursuant to a sale thereof for non-payment of taxes thereon, although the deed, because of defects in the sale proceeding, is void as to the former owner and fails to vest his title in the grantee therein. By making such deed conclusive evidence the statute works, by estoppel, a release, grant, or transfer of the title of the former owner to the grantee therein, upon the forfeiture of such title for failure of the former owner to keep the land taxed in his name and the taxes thereon paid for five years. State v. West Branch Lumber Co., 64 W. Va. 673, 63 S. E. 372; State v. Snyder, 64 W. Va. 659, 63 S. E. 385. Although the statute does not mention the state as one of the persons concluded, it must be construed as including the state so as to make it harmonize with the principles and public policy made manifest by the organic, statutory, and judicial system of the law of the state relating to taxation and the settlement of land titles. State v. Snyder, supra. The provision in said statute that it shall not be construed as precluding the state, or any county court, board of education or municipality, from instituting and maintaining any suit which might be instituted or maintained by any person claiming the land sold or any lien thereon, for the purpose of setting aside, for any reason, any tax-sale or deed for land sold for taxes, etc., does not confer on the state power to set aside a tax deed to avail itself of a forfeiture of the former owner's title, but only to proceed, notwithstanding the defective deed, to enforce any lien it may have on the land for prior taxes, treating it, not as the state's land, but as the land of the tax-deed grantee, or former owner, for such purpose and to such extent. State v. Snyder, supra.

the sale voidable at the instance of the injured owner, does not, like a jurisdictional defect, make the sale entirely null and void.<sup>89</sup>

b. Application of Doctrine of Bona Fide Purchasers. A purchaser of real property at a tax-sale is not entitled to protection as an innocent purchaser where he purchases for a grossly inadequate consideration;<sup>90</sup> or where he fraudulently causes the land to be assessed to himself and suffers it to be sold for taxes and buys it in through the agency of a third person;<sup>91</sup> but such a purchaser is not affected by fraud contemplated by the officer making the sale of which he had no notice.<sup>92</sup> Ordinarily such persons come strictly within the rule caveat emptor,<sup>93</sup> and as the proceedings for the collection of taxes are matters of public record, to which intending purchasers have access, they are chargeable with knowledge of defects which the records disclose.<sup>94</sup> Where the proceedings are based on the judgment or decree of a court, such a purchaser may generally rely on it to protect himself;<sup>95</sup> but his title is liable to be divested by the cancellation or setting aside of the tax-sale for cause, provided he has notice of the proceedings.<sup>96</sup>

c. Amendment of Records. The purchaser of a tax title takes it subject to the right to have the record amended or corrected to correspond with the actual facts;<sup>97</sup> but on the other hand, it is generally held that tax deeds or the proceedings in tax cases cannot be reformed or amended for the purpose of supporting or validating the tax title.<sup>98</sup>

6. LIABILITY OF PURCHASER.<sup>99</sup> Beyond his liability to pay the amount of his bid and his responsibility on the surplus bond, if any was given,<sup>1</sup> and in respect to existing liens or encumbrances on the property not discharged by the tax-sale,<sup>2</sup> the purchaser at such sale is not ordinarily subject to any special liabilities growing out of the peculiar nature of his title or the mode of its acquisition. Thus he is not responsible in damages for taking the proper steps to acquire possession of the premises, if his own conduct was entirely correct, although the tax title may prove to be invalid.<sup>3</sup> But where the former owner of land pays overdue

A purchaser with knowledge that someone besides the owner of record paid taxes on the land is placed on inquiry as to the claim of such party; and if the purchaser had actual or constructive notice that the suit for taxes was not against the real owner, although against the record owner, the tax deed would be unavailing as between him and the latter. *Zweigart v. taxes in ignorance of a tax-sale, he is entitled to recover them from the tax purchaser.<sup>4</sup>

7. ASSIGNEES AND GRANTEES OF PURCHASERS — a. Assignment of Certificate of Purchase — (I) IN GENERAL. A tax-sale certificate is not a negotiable instrument, and is probably not assignable without statutory authority or permission,<sup>5</sup> and it is clear that county officers have no authority, in the absence of statute, to assign tax certificates held by their county.<sup>6</sup> Such assignments are now, however, generally authorized by law, and a transfer of the rights evidenced by a tax certificate will not be enjoined in equity, on account of errors or defects in the proceedings, without a payment or tender of the taxes justly due.<sup>7</sup> But if the purchaser at the tax-sale was incompetent to buy and hold a tax title, he cannot make a valid assignment.<sup>8</sup>

(II) MODE AND SUFFICIENCY. If the statute prescribes no formalities for the assignment of tax certificates, almost any form of transfer will be sufficient which shows the assignor's intention to transfer his entire right and interest.<sup>9</sup> These certificates, however, are not negotiable and therefore do not pass by mere delivery,<sup>10</sup> nor, unless permitted by statute, by indorsement and delivery.<sup>11</sup> In some states it is provided by law that such certificates shall be "assignable by indorsement," and this is held to make them transferable by a mere indorsement in blank with delivery to the assignee.<sup>12</sup> If the statute so requires, as is some-

So. 482, holding that a purchaser of property at a tax-sale, who notifies the occupant of his purchase and, on being informed that the tax has been paid and that the owner has the receipt, repeatedly requests the latter to produce the receipt and makes all efforts to secure such production without avail, cannot be held in damages for taking the proceedings authorized by the statute to be put in possession, as he is protected by the principles of damnum absque injuria and volenti non fit injuria; but when, after the occupant is ejected, full evidence is exhibited to the purchaser of the payment of the tax for which the sale was made, with a demand for dismissal of the proceedings, the refusal of the purchaser, compelling the owner to resort to an injunction suit in order to protect the property, and keeping him out of possession, places the purchaser in the wrong and makes him liable for all damages subsequently accruing.

times the case, it is essential to an assignment that it shall be acknowledged,<sup>13</sup> and recorded.<sup>14</sup>

(iii) WHO MAY TAKE ASSIGNMENT. Any person who is disqualified from purchasing at a tax-sale, either by reason of his title to the property or his fiduciary relation to the owner,<sup>15</sup> is equally disqualified from taking an assignment of the certificate of purchase, and if he does so, it merely amounts to a redemption.<sup>16</sup> Where municipal corporations are prohibited by law from taking assignments of tax certificates, an assignment to a town or other municipality is absolutely void, and if it in turn assigns the certificate to a stranger, he acquires no title as against the owner of the land.<sup>17</sup>

(iv) RIGHTS OF ASSIGNEES. The assignee of a tax certificate becomes invested with all the rights and interests of his assignor; he becomes entitled to the redemption money, if the same is paid, or to a deed if it is not.<sup>18</sup> But he can acquire no greater interest than his assignor had at the time, and hence takes nothing as against a prior assignee of the certificate in good faith or against one claiming an interest in the land previously granted by the assignor.<sup>19</sup> More-

Merger of tax title in fee.—An assignment of a tax certificate to one who, subsequently to the sale, has become the owner of the patent title, will not discharge the land from the lien of prior delinquent taxes. Bowman v. Eckstien, 46 Iowa 583.

Purchase by county officer.—Although county officers are strictly prohibited from buying at tax-sales, this does not necessarily prevent them from taking assignments of the tax certificates from the original purchasers, if done in good faith. *Coleman v. Agreement not to take deed.—A purchaser of a tax-sale certificate containing an indorsement by a prior purchaser not to procure a treasurer's deed of the premises, which such person had sold by warranty deed to another, will be enjoined from taking a deed under it. Soukup v. Union Inv. Co., 84 Iowa 448, 51 N. W. 167, 35 Am. St. Rep. 317.

Assignment of original and of duplicate.—A purchaser of a duplicate certificate of tax-sale cannot acquire a title under it as against, or superior to, that of a subsequent assignee of the original certificate, who purchased it and obtained a deed thereon with-over the assignee takes the certificate subject to any infirmities or imperfections which would have availed against it in the hands of the original purchaser.<sup>20</sup>

(v) TAX CERTIFICATES HELD BY COUNTY. Where land is bid in by a county at tax-sale and certificates issued to the county, these can be transferred only by due authority of law;<sup>21</sup> and the statutes relating to such transfers are construed with some strictness in regard to the particular officer who shall make or execute the transfer,<sup>22</sup> the grant of necessary authority to him to do so,<sup>23</sup> the terms of the assignment and price to be paid by the purchaser,<sup>24</sup> and the mode and manner of the assignment.<sup>25</sup> As in other cases, the assignee succeeds to just the rights held by his assignor, the county, no more and no less.<sup>26</sup>

b. Grantees of Tax Purchasers — (i) IN GENERAL. Even before the expiration of the time allowed for redemption, the tax purchaser may convey his interest otherwise than by an assignment of the certificate of sale.<sup>27</sup> After that time, he may dispose of it like any other title to any grantee;<sup>28</sup> but the nature of the title out notice of the issue of the duplicate or of the rights of the holder thereof. Griswold v. Wilson, 36 Iowa 156.

23. Woodman v. Clapp, 21 Wis. 350.

Executory contracts for sale.—As a general rule, county authorities have power only to sell tax certificates outright and for cash, not to make executory contracts of sale. Morrill v. Douglass, 14 Kan. 293; Smith v. Barron County, 44 Wis. 686. But see Douglass v. Wilson, 31 Kan. 565, 3 Pac. 330.

24. Noble v. Cain, 22 Kan. 493; Morrill v. Douglass, 14 Kan. 293; Smith v. Barron County, 44 Wis. 686, no authority to sell on credit or for anything else than money.

Consideration.—Taxes due before the assignment of a certificate of tax-sale to a county should be included in the consideration for the assignment. Colline v. Jolley, 79 Kan. 695, 100 Pac. 477. But a tax deed is not void because a certificate was assigned by the county for slightly less than the amount necessary to redeem, where the discrepancy is caused by an error in computation, and if it is traceable to the amount charged as interest the presumption is that it resulted from such an error; and such a discrepancy will not be regarded as substantial, if the interest charged is less than would result from computation in which the fractions of a cent are carried out, and greater than would result from a similar computation in which such fractions are rejected. Troyer v. Beedy, 79 Kan. 502, 100 Pac. 476.

W. 682 (holding that an assignment written on the face of the certificate is not invalid because the statute directs an assignment to be indorsed on the back); Eaton v. Manitowoc County, 44 Wis. 489 (written assignment is necessary).

Stamp instead of signature.—It is not necessary that an assessment shall be in the proper handwriting of the officer authorized to make it; his name and official title may be stamped on the paper. Dreutzer v. Smith, 56 Wis. 292, 14 N. W. 465; State v. Nelson, 56 Wis. 290, 14 N. W. 442.

Right to foreclose lien.—Where the law is such that a county, on purchasing land at a tax-sale, does not become entitled to a deed but only to foreclose the lien of the certificate, as in the case of a mortgage, the county's assignee only acquires the same right. Huss v. Craig, 124 N. C. 743, 32 S. E. 974; Collins v. Bryan, 124 N. C. 738, 32 S. E. 975.

27. Seovil v. Kelsey, 46 Ill. 344, 95 Am. Dec. 415; Lloyd v. Bunce, 41 Iowa 660, both of which also hold that if the redemption money is paid to the tax purchaser, his grantee may maintain assumpsit against him for the amount. And see Jernigan v. Flowers, 94 Ala. 508, 10 So. 437; Scott v. Watkins, 22 Ark. 556, holding that such a grantee, although not in possession, may bring a bill for confirmation of title under the statute.

28. Shelley v. Smith, 97 Iowa 259, 66 N. W. 172 (sale of tax title to county officer who is not changed by such a transfer, and the grantee must generally be prepared to maintain its validity, the same as the original purchaser.<sup>29</sup>

(II) BONA FIDES AND NOTICE OF DEFECTS. One who takes a conveyance of a tax title can claim no benefit from it if he had actual knowledge of facts which render it invalid,<sup>30</sup> or if the records show on their face fatal defects or irregularities.<sup>31</sup> But a purchaser in good faith and for value is protected against latent equities,<sup>32</sup> and against the consequences of fraud in the conduct of the tax-sale in which he did not participate and of which he had no knowledge,<sup>33</sup> and also against errors or irregularities in the proceedings of which he had no notice and of which the records give no hint.<sup>34</sup>

(III) PURCHASE FROM STATE OR COUNTY. Where the title to land under a tax-sale has become fully vested in the state or a municipality, one who thereafter purchases from the state or municipality must see to it that his deed is properly executed by the officers having authority for that purpose,<sup>35</sup> in the manner and with the formalities prescribed by law.<sup>36</sup> It is competent for the legislature could not have purchased at the tax-sale); Wygant v. Dahl, 26 Nebr. 562, 42 N. W. 735 (merger of tax title on conveyance of it to owner of fee).

A grantee of one who has conspired to eliminate competition in bidding at a tax-sale must deny notice of the misconduct of his grantor, whether alleged or not, and the burden of proof thereof is on the party seeking relief against him, but he must establish payment of consideration. *Lohr v. Adverse possession as notice.—See Leas v. Garverich, 77 Iowa 275, 42 N. W. 194. But during the period allowed for redemption the continued possession of the owner is not inconsistent with the right of the tax purchaser, and hence is no notice, to one who purchases the tax title during that time, of any infirmity in the tax-sale. Jefferson Land Co. v. Grace, 57 Ark. 423, 21 S. W. 877; Major v. Brush, 7 Ind. 232.

to enact that a title so acquired from the state shall be indefeasible and unimpeachable;<sup>37</sup> but in the absence of such a statute, the purchaser will take the title in the same condition in which the state held it and subject to the same equities and defenses.<sup>38</sup>

a. Recovery of Possession by Tax Purchaser — (i) IN GENERAL. When the time for redemption has expired and the tax purchaser has received his deed, he becomes entitled to the possession of the premises,<sup>40</sup> and he may take possession without suit if he can do so peaceably.<sup>41</sup> But if surrender of possession is refused, he may maintain a suit therefor, in the form of ejectment or other appropriate proceeding,<sup>42</sup> in a court of competent jurisdiction at law,<sup>43</sup> provided he has received his deed,<sup>44</sup> and on his complying with such conditions precedent as the statute may prescribe.<sup>45</sup> In such a suit he recovers on the strength of his tax title, and need not go behind the title of the person to whom the land was assessed, or, in the first instance, support the regularity of the prior proceedings.<sup>46</sup>

(ii) SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS. At common law the holder of a tax title cannot resort to summary proceedings or a rule to recover the possession, but must institute a regular and formal suit;<sup>47</sup> nor is it thought competent for the legislature to provide for putting him in possession forcibly and without some kind of judicial hearing.<sup>48</sup> But in some states the laws now provide for the recovery of possession

A grantee in a void commissioner's deed of land forfeited for taxes, who subdivides and plats the land and pays taxes assessed thereon as platted, does not thereby cut off the rights of the true owners in whom the title remained and who paid taxes under the correct assessment. *Morris v. 43. State v. Judge Orleans Parish Fourth Dist. Ct., 27 La. Ann. 704.

Jurisdiction of equity.—In the absence of a statute establishing a different rule, a tax title is a strictly legal title, and the holder cannot invoke the aid of equity either to reform his deed, perfect an infirm title, or enforce a valid one. Altes v. Hinckler, 36 Ill. 265, 85 Am. Dec. 406; Gwynne v. Niswanger, 20 Ohio 556. See also Pitre v. Haas, 110 La. 163, 34 So. 361, as to refusal of relief to tax title claimant who does not come into court with clean hands.

44. Costley v. Allen, 56 Ala. 198; Hibbard v. Brown, 51 Ala. 469 (holding that a certificate of purchase at a tax-sale does not vest such title in the purchaser as will entitle him to maintain ejectment against the former owner, but for this purpose it is necessary that he shall have received his deed); Grimm v. O'Connell, 54 Cal. 522 (holding that the purchaser must recover, if at all, on his tax deed, supported by evidence of the regularity of the prior proceedings, if the same are attacked).

45. Meyer v. Fountain, 34 La. Ann. 987; Hewitt v. Week, 59 Wis. 444, 18 N. W. 417, holding that until a tax deed is properly recorded the grantee cannot maintain ejectment.

Payment as defense to purchaser's suit see Alspaugh v. Reynolds, 7 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 301.

Proving prior proceedings.—Evidence that defendant had personal property out of which the tax might have been collected is not admissible. Geer v. Brown, 126 N. C. 238, 35 S. E. 470. But in Pennsylvania, where ejectment is brought on a tax title more than five years after the sale, the purchaser must show an assessment of the taxes by competent authority and that they were due and unpaid over a year before the sale took place. Rupert v. Delp, 7 Pa. Super. Ct. 209.

in these cases by summary proceedings,<sup>49</sup> as by means of an order requiring the sheriff to put the purchaser in possession,<sup>50</sup> or a writ of assistance similar to that used in mortgage foreclosure cases,<sup>51</sup> or a writ of possession,<sup>52</sup> or an action of forcible entry and unlawful detainer.<sup>53</sup>

b. Ejectment Against Tax Purchaser. Ordinarily an action of ejectment cannot be employed to destroy a tax title until the purchaser is in possession.<sup>54</sup> But in the case of vacant and unoccupied lands it is held in several states that the tax deed draws after it a constructive possession, and that the recording of such a deed is a sufficient assertion of hostile title to warrant ejectment by the former owner.<sup>55</sup> In any case, however, the owner's suit must be brought within the time limited by law,<sup>56</sup> and he must tender or offer to pay the taxes due, if the statute so directs.<sup>57</sup>

2. ACTIONS TO CONFIRM OR QUIET TAX TITLES — a. Right of Action in General. Unless by the aid of a statute, a bill in equity does not lie to confirm or quiet a tax title, the only remedy being at law.<sup>58</sup> But in many states the statutes now give to the purchaser at a tax-sale, if the deed is in his name,<sup>59</sup> or to his assignee Norgress*, 120 La. 168, 45 So. 49, holding that where an owner and tax debtor remain in possession after sale for a number of years, the remedy of the tax title owner to oust the former owner is provided by statute, and trespass is not a proper remedy.

S. 398, holding that a tax deed has no more force as a writ of assistance to procure the possession of real estate than any other deed.

Where the question of title is involved, a writ of assistance is not the appropriate proceeding in favor of a purchaser at a tax-sale to recover possession of the property from a purchaser at a previous sale. Flint Land Co. v. Grand Rapids Terminal R. Co., 147 Mich. 627, 111 N. W. 192.

After change of possession.—Where it appears that plaintiff in ejectment had taken possession of lands under a void tax deed, and put in a tenant, who surrendered possession to defendant, and defendant showed an equitable interest in the land not connected with plaintiff's claim of title, plaintiff's only remedy is to recover possession by summary proceedings. *Shaw v. 59. Ingram v. Sherwood, 75 Ark. 176, 87 S. or grantee,<sup>60</sup> the right to maintain a bill to confirm and quiet his title,<sup>61</sup> or a bill of peace or bill quia timet,<sup>62</sup> or a bill to bar and foreclose the interests of the original owner and other claimants.<sup>63</sup> It is generally not necessary to such a bill that the complainant shall be in actual possession;<sup>64</sup> but he cannot institute and maintain the action until he has obtained his deed,<sup>65</sup> or at least until the time allowed for redemption has fully expired.<sup>66</sup> The ordinary rules, unless specially varied by statute, apply to such actions in respect to the joinder of parties and the right to defend,<sup>67</sup> and in respect to the service or publication of summons or notice.<sup>68</sup> A judgment for plaintiff concludes all persons bound thereby from afterward questioning the validity of the tax deed.<sup>69</sup>

b. Defenses to Purchaser's Suit. Where a tax purchaser sues for possession or to confirm or quiet his title he of course puts that title in issue, and the original owner may avail himself, by way of defense, of any matters sufficient to overthrow the tax title, such as the non-liability of the land to taxation, the previous payment of the taxes, jurisdictional defects in the prior proceedings, or fatal irregularities in the tax-sale.<sup>70</sup>

Bill to remove cloud on tax title.—Where the proper officers of a municipal corporation refuse to cancel upon the tax records assessments for previous years, the grantee in a tax deed may maintain a bill in equity against the municipality to remove the cloud upon his title created by such assessments. District of Columbia v. Hufty, 13 App. Cas. (D. C.) 175. But a record title cut off in tax proceedings is not a cloud upon the title acquired through such proceedings, and hence a bill will not lie to remove it at the instance of the tax purchaser. *Triangle Land Co. v. c. Payment or Tender as Condition to Right to Defend. In some of the states the laws are so framed as to require a tender or deposit of an amount sufficient to cover the taxes and costs, as a condition to the right to contest a tax title, and confirmation of title cannot be prevented unless such tender or deposit is made.<sup>71</sup> Statutes of this kind will not be construed retrospectively;<sup>72</sup> nor can they constitutionally apply to cases where the defense calls in question the validity of the tax or goes to the groundwork of the tax proceedings.<sup>73</sup> But as applied to merely technical defenses or such as are based only on irregularities in the proceedings, they are valid.<sup>74</sup> It has been held, however, that a law of this character does not apply to the defense of fraud in the conduct of the tax-sale;<sup>75</sup> or where the action is brought before the expiration of the time for redemption;<sup>76</sup> or where, from the confusion of different parcels of land in the sale, defendant cannot ascertain how much to tender.<sup>77</sup>

3. ACTIONS TO IMPEACH OR VACATE TAX TITLES — a. Right to Attack Tax Title — (1) IN GENERAL. The owner of land sold for taxes, or those who have succeeded to his rights, may impeach and overturn the tax title<sup>78</sup> by an action to set aside

Doullut v. Smith, 117 La. 491, 41 So. 913 (previous payment of taxes); Lisso v. Unknown Owner, 114 La. 392, 38 So. 282; Boagni v. Pacific Imp. Co., 111 La. 1063, 36 So. 129; Fernandez v. Smith, 43 La. Ann. 708, 9 So. 482.

See 45 Cent. Dig. tit. "Taxation," § 1576.

Waiver of objections.—A waiver by all persons interested in land sold by a collector of taxes of an informality in the sale, after the bringing of a writ of entry by the purchaser at the sale against a person claiming title as a disseisor, will operate, by estoppel, to make good defendant's title as against such persons, but it will not have that effect as against the tenant. Reed v. Crapo, 133 Mass. 201.

When tender necessary.—See Orono v. Veazie, 57 Me. 517, holding that defendant may contest the sufficiency of plaintiff's evidence to establish compliance with the law, without being required to pay or tender the taxes, but must do this if he wishes to introduce evidence on his own behalf.

Unnecessary tender and deposit regarded as voluntary payment.—Although the tax on which plaintiff's deed was based was void, and it was therefore unnecessary for defendant to tender the amount, yet if he deposits it with the clerk of the court, it is a voluntary payment which cannot be recovered back. Powell v. St. Croix County, 46 Wis. 210, 50 N. W. 1013.

Title necessary to maintain suit see infra, XIV, B, 3, a, (III).

The right of parties who have purchased timber cut from lands sold for taxes cannot be litigated in a proceeding by the original owner to set aside the tax-sale and deed issued thereon. Cook v. Hall, 123 Mich. 378, 82 N. W. 59.

Action by receiver.—Where property involved in a receivership is sold for taxes, the receiver, if he wishes to attack the sale for irregularities, must institute in the county where the property is situated such appro-

the sale and deed,<sup>79</sup> a bill to quiet title or to remove the cloud from his title,<sup>80</sup> a statutory action to determine adverse claims,<sup>81</sup> or a suit to recover possession of the land, according as one or the other of these remedies may be appropriate to the particular case,<sup>82</sup> brought in a court of competent jurisdiction.<sup>83</sup> But it is a general rule that a tax title cannot be assailed collaterally, but must be attacked, if at all, in a direct action;<sup>84</sup> and hence, for example, the validity of such a title cannot be litigated in a suit to foreclose a mortgage on the land.<sup>85</sup> If, however, defendant, in an action to recover real property, sets up a tax title as that on which he relies, plaintiff may attack and impeach it without the necessity of resorting to a direct action for that purpose.<sup>86</sup>

(II) ESTOPPEL AND RATIFICATION. One may be estopped to impeach or deny the validity of a tax title by a judgment ordering the sale of the land for non-payment of taxes, to which he was a party,<sup>87</sup> by a statute making tax deeds conclusive evidence or vesting an unimpeachable title in the purchaser,<sup>88</sup> by his own acts or admissions signifying his recognition of the tax title or ratification of the tax proceedings,<sup>89</sup> as by his accepting and retaining the surplus proceeds of the sale;<sup>90</sup> appropriate action as the parties to the litigation may care to institute and the court may approve. Metcalf v. Com. Land, etc., Co., 113 Ky. 751, 68 S. W. 1100, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 527.

Town as purchaser at tax-sale.—A town which becomes the purchaser of land sold for taxes is not estopped to set up its title by the fact that for two years after the sale, and before a deed had been given by the collector, the land was taxed to the former owner and the taxes paid by him. Berry v. Bickford, 63 N. H. 328.

The effect of such ratification cannot be avoided by a subsequent grantee under a quitclaim deed, in an action to quiet title, by tendering such surplus into court to be repaid to the county. Proctor v. Nance, 220 Mo. 104, 119 S. W. 409, 132 Am. St. Rep. 555.

or by his unreasonable delay in the assertion of his rights.<sup>91</sup> But on the other hand the state is not estopped from selling and conveying land for the non-payment of taxes by a previous attempted tax-sale to another person which was null and void;<sup>92</sup> nor is the state or a county estopped from asserting title to its own non-taxable lands by the unauthorized acts of its officers in assessing and selling them.<sup>93</sup> In accordance with general principles, any party to an action of this kind is estopped from denying a title under which he claims or through which he must derive his rights,<sup>94</sup> but not by the acts or admissions of a party with whom he is not in privity.<sup>95</sup>

(III) TITLE NECESSARY TO MAINTAIN SUIT—(A) In General. In some states the statutes debar any claimant of land from disputing a tax title thereon unless he shows title acquired from the state or the United States.<sup>96</sup> And as a general rule no one will be permitted to contest a tax title without first showing title in himself or in those under whom he claims at the time of the tax-sale,<sup>97</sup>

That a deed is five years old is no ground for applying the doctrine of estoppel against a claim of its being void for not showing the amount of taxes or the amount for which the land is sold. Finn v. Jones, 80 Kan. 431, 102 Pac. 479.

Where notice to redeem is void because of the premature issue of the tax deed, the owners of the property are not barred from questioning the validity of the tax title, by reason of their neglecting to redeem under such notice. Fitschen v. Olson, 155 Mich. 320, 119 N. W. 3.

Mere failure to redeem land or neglect to pay taxes will not per se divest the title, so as to prevent the owner from maintaining an action against the claimant under a tax-sale. St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. Greeley, 11 Minn. 321.

Two tenants in common may sue jointly to set aside the sale of their land for taxes; and it is no defense that the contract between the two complainants, whereby one of them acquired his title, was champertous. Gage v. Du Puy, 134 Ill. 132, 24 N. E. 866, 137 Ill. 652, 24 N. E. 541, 26 N. E. 386.

Where both parties to a suit to quiet title claim under tax-sales which are shown to have been void, neither party is precluded from showing the invalidity of the other's title, and in such a case the position of defendant is the stronger. Meyer v. Snell, 89 Ark. 298, 116 S. W. 208.

for if a person is devoid of all interest in the land or cannot show that he was injured by the tax-sale, it would be against the policy of the law to permit him to impugn the validity of the sale.<sup>98</sup> But it is not necessary for one who shows a good title to show also possession of the premises;<sup>99</sup> nor is it necessary that the title shown as a foundation for maintaining the suit shall be a perfect title in fee simple, for generally any one who has such an interest as would give him the right to redeem from the tax-sale may contest its validity,<sup>1</sup> and his interest may therefore be in the nature of a lien,<sup>2</sup> or an inchoate title under an executory contract of sale.<sup>3</sup> Nor will he be debarred from his suit because his record title is not perfect, it being sufficient to show an adverse possession under a claim of title in good faith based on any instrument which constitutes color of title.<sup>4</sup> He will not be required, in the first instance, to prove his title completely, a prima facie showing of title being enough;<sup>5</sup> and the holder of the tax title cannot impeach the deed under which the record owner claims as having been made in fraud of creditors.<sup>6</sup>

(B) Mortgagees. A mortgagee of real property has such a title to the land, or at least such an interest in it, as will entitle him to maintain an action to set aside a tax-sale and deed thereof;<sup>7</sup> and the same is true of the purchaser at a sale on foreclosure of the mortgage.<sup>8</sup>

thereon,<sup>9</sup> at the instance of a complainant having sufficient title or interest.<sup>10</sup> Under some statutes the grounds of such an action are limited by law to the objection that the taxes were paid before sale or that the land was not taxable.<sup>11</sup> But in the absence of such a restriction, if the owner can point out any illegality, fraud, omission, or irregularity, not attributable to himself, substantially affecting the validity of the proceedings, and not concluded by a judgment,<sup>12</sup> or condoned by a curative statute, it will be a sufficient cause of action.<sup>13</sup> So also the suit may be

Nebraska.—Ambler v. Patterson, 80 Nebr. 570, 114 N. See 45 Cent. Dig. tit. "Taxation," § 1583.

Applications.—A substantial defect or irregularity in the assessment of the property may be made the basis of a suit to cancel a tax deed (Perkins v. Nugent, 45 Mich. 156, 7 N. W. 757; Blanchard v. Powers, 42 Mich. 619, 4 N. W. 542), as where the land has been listed to a wrong person and sold as his property (Yancey v. Hopkins, 1 Munf. (Va.) 419). But such a suit cannot be sustained on the ground of an objection to the assessment which could have been obviated by a timely application to the board of equalization. Duggan v. McCullough, 27 Colo. 43, 59 Pac. 743. Nor will the sale and deed be vacated merely because the property is valuable and the amount of the tax small (Nester v. Church, 121 Mich. 81, 79 N. W. 893); or because the taxes could have been collected out of personal property (Nester v. Church, supra); or because the amount stated as the consideration of the deed is excessive, when the excess can be reasonably accounted for (Kennedy v. Scott, 72 Kan. 359, 83 Pac. 971); or because the property is in the possession of a receiver as part of the assets founded on the prior payment of the taxes or redemption of the land,<sup>14</sup> or on the fact that the owner was prevented from paying taxes really due by the fraud or mistake of the officers charged with their collection,<sup>15</sup> or on fraud and collusion in the conduct of the tax-sale.<sup>16</sup>

c. Suit to Remove Cloud on Title <sup>17</sup>—(1) RIGHT OF ACTION. A court of equity has jurisdiction of a suit, on proper grounds, to annul an invalid tax deed as constituting a cloud on the owner's title,<sup>18</sup> provided that such an action is authorized by statute, or, if based on principles of general equity jurisdiction, that there is of an insolvent corporation (Whitehead v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 98 Fed. 10, 39 C. C. A. 34); or because the purchase-money due on the tax-sale has not been paid (Woody v. Dean, 24 S. C. 499); or because the taxes were not properly paid through a mistake of the owner's agent (Moss v. Mayo, 23 Cal. 421; Brooks v. Dix, 119 Mich. 329, 78 N. W. 125); or because of an alleged misdescription in the tax deed, where the court can lawfully infer that the description in the deed conveys the identical property described in the bill (Stearns v. Glos, 235 Ill. 290, 85 N. E. 335). And although a banking corporation is engaged in real estate speculations not authorized by its charter, the fact that it is one of the grantors in a chain of title derived from a tax-sale of real estate is insufficient to avoid the tax deed. Jones v. Carnes, 17 Okla. 470, 87 Pac. 652.

Gross inadequacy of price will avoid a sale for taxes when it is combined with irregularity or with circumstances indicating unfairness in the sale (Younger v. Meadows, 63 W. Va. 275, 59 S. E. 1087); but inadequacy of price which was caused by the acts of the complaining party himself cannot be set up by him as grounds for setting aside the sale (Walker v. Mills, 210 Mo. 684, 109 S. W. 44).

Suit against tax purchaser's grantee.—Where the bill is brought against the grantee of the tax purchaser, without making the latter a party, it is erroneous to set aside the deed from him to defendant, although the tax deed itself is invalid. Smith v. Prall, 133 Ill. 308, 24 N. E. 521.

no adequate remedy at law,<sup>19</sup> and provided that some sufficient ground is shown for the interference of the chancery court.<sup>20</sup> The owner of the property is not obliged to wait for an attack on his own title to be made by the holder of the tax deed, but may anticipate any hostile action by filing a bill of this kind,<sup>21</sup> although of course he must show that his predicament is not due to his own fault or negligence.<sup>22</sup>

(II) WHAT CONSTITUTES CLOUD. To constitute a cloud on title, a tax deed must have the semblance of regularity and validity and be sufficient in itself to create an apparent title in the grantee, as is the case where the illegality or defect does not appear on the face of the deed and is of such a character that it would not necessarily and indubitably appear from the evidence which the holder of the tax title would be obliged to produce in order to prove his title under the deed; but if the deed is void on its face it does not cloud the title.<sup>23</sup> It is to be noted, however, that if the statute makes the tax deed presumptive evidence of title or of the regularity of the prior proceedings, it will cloud the title, notwithstanding the fact that the irregularities or defects would be disclosed by scrutiny of the successive steps in the tax proceedings.<sup>24</sup>

(III) POSSESSION AS ESSENTIAL TO MAINTENANCE OF BILL.<sup>25</sup> Strictly speaking, an action to remove a cloud on title or to quiet title as against a tax title claimant cannot be maintained unless plaintiff is in possession.<sup>26</sup> But a different rule now prevails in many states, either because the courts make an exception to the general rule where a tax title is in question or because the statutory actions to test tax titles are not governed by the strict rules of equity.<sup>27</sup>

d. Payment or Tender as Condition Precedent<sup>28</sup>—(I) IN GENERAL. In order to secure a tax purchaser in good faith against loss, the statutes of many states provide that any one seeking to impeach or vacate a tax title shall first tender or offer to pay an amount sufficient to cover the taxes legally chargeable on the land, with the costs of the sale, or, in some cases, the purchase-money paid, with interest, or the amount required to redeem, or that this money shall be brought into court in order to be paid over to the purchaser if his title is adjudged invalid.<sup>29</sup> These

See 45 Cent. Dig. tit. "Taxation," § 1586.

In the federal courts, the payment or tender by the owner of land of the amount of taxes for which it was sold, together with the interest and penalties to which the holder of the tax certificate is entitled under the state laws, is an indispensable condition precedent to his right to maintain a bill in equity to cancel such certificate. Rice v. Jerome, 97 Fed. 719, 38 C. C. A. 388.

Form of action.—Such statutes apply notwithstanding the fact that the suit is in form of ejectment (Ward v. Huggins, 16 Wash. 530, 48 Pac. 240); but not where the proceeding is one to foreclose a mortgage (Mather v. Darst, 13 S. D. 75, 82 N. W. 407).

To what parties statutes apply.—Statutes such as those mentioned in the text apply to one holding a judgment lien on the land and suing to quiet title. Browning v. Smith, 139 Ind. 280, 37 N. E. 540; Gillett v. Webster, 15 Ohio 623. But not to an administrator who sues for an order to sell the lands of his decedent and to quiet title against a tax-sale (Hannah v. Collins, 94 Ind. 201); nor where it is the tax title claimant who takes the offensive and sues to quiet his title (Manwarring v. Missouri Lumber, etc., Co., 200 Mo. 718, 98 S. W. 762); nor where the holder of the tax title sues for partition, and the owner of the patent title pleads in bar a former adjudication declaring the tax title invalid (Thomsen v. McCormick, 136 Ill. 135, 26 N. E. 373); nor in a bill by the state to sell forfeited lands and to annul a tax deed constituting a title hostile to that of the state (State v. Harman, 57 W. Va. 447, 50 S. E. 828).

Sufficiency of tender.—A tender of the amount due on a tax certificate, with interest and costs, and requiring the holder to convey his title, is insufficient, since only conditions enjoined by law or arising out of a contract or trust relation between the parties can be attached to a tender. Glos v. Goodrich, 175 Ill. 20, 51 N. E. 643.

Where the sole requirement of the statute is a tender of all the taxes paid, the rule that one seeking the aid of equity to vacate a judgment must show that the former judgment was inequitable, and that he had a good defense, does not apply to an action to set aside a tax judgment, and a sale based thereon. Holly v. Munro, 55 Wash. 311, 104 Pac. 508.

30. Alabama.—Lassiter v. Lee, 68 Ala. 287 (holding that a statute requiring a deposit of double the amount of the purchase-money is unconstitutional as imposing an unreasonable condition); Whitworth v. Anderson, 54 Ala. 33.

Kansas.—Belz v. Bird, 31 Kan. 139, 1 Pac.

in cases where the assessment or other proceedings were affected by such a want of jurisdiction or such fundamental errors as render the tax deed entirely null and void;<sup>31</sup> where the ground of attack is that the tax itself was illegal,<sup>32</sup> that the land in question was not subject to taxation,<sup>33</sup> or that the owner had paid the taxes before the sale;<sup>34</sup> where the sum to be awarded to the tax purchaser is so indefinite or uncertain that the amount to be tendered cannot be ascertained;<sup>35</sup> where it is charged that the tax title was obtained by fraud and collusion;<sup>36</sup> where a tax deed has not yet been executed, but only a certificate of purchase;<sup>37</sup> or where an offer to redeem has been made and refused.<sup>38</sup>

(II) PAYMENT OF TAXES AS CONDITION OF RELIEF. In some states the statutes provide that no one shall be permitted to impeach a tax title without first showing that all the taxes justly due and chargeable on the land have been paid.<sup>39</sup> And independently of such statutes and on general equity principles, one seeking to have a tax deed set aside as a cloud on his title must offer to repay to the purchaser the amount of all taxes and costs paid by him, which were a just and legal charge upon the land; and it is error to set aside a tax-sale for mere irregularities or defects without requiring such repayment,<sup>40</sup> although the rule is

is not unreasonably short, these statutes are valid and constitutional.<sup>46</sup> And they are to be construed as statutes of repose, as the effect of the lapse of the prescribed time is to quiet the title and settle the question of ownership.<sup>47</sup>

(II) TO WHAT PROCEEDINGS APPLICABLE. The statutes of limitation will not be extended by implication, but will be limited to the remedies or forms of action mentioned, leaving the parties free otherwise to test their rights in other methods.<sup>48</sup> And if the statute enumerates the grounds of objection to the tax title which shall be barred after the lapse of the prescribed time, it does not affect proceedings based on other grounds,<sup>49</sup> and so as to the persons who shall be affected,<sup>50</sup> and the classes of property concerning which the action is to be brought.<sup>51</sup> Furthermore, the statutes in general relate only to direct attacks on the tax-sale, and not to suits in which the validity of the tax title may be only collaterally or incidentally involved.<sup>52</sup> In many states an action of ejectment against the tax purchaser is considered collateral, in this sense, so as not to be barred by the statute;<sup>53</sup> and if the statute only prescribes limitation for actions "for the

"judicial" sale, within a statute declaring the period within which actions must be brought against the purchaser for recovery of lands sold at judicial sale. And see Hotton v. Wetherby, 88 Wis. 324, 60 N. W. 423, holding that the statute in that state prescribes no limitation as to tax certificates, but is confined to tax deeds.

W. 1039; Smith v. Sherry, 54 Wis. 114, 11 N. W. 465.

A limitation on actions for the recovery of real estate sold for taxes does not apply to an action which questions the capacity of the person claiming title under a tax deed, to acquire title to the prejudice of others (Gilman v. Heitman, 137 Iowa 336, 113 N. W. 932); or to an equitable suit to remove a cloud (Dees v. Smith, 55 Fla. 652, 46 So. 173); or to an action to cancel a tax deed (Cauley v. Sutton, 150 N. C. 327, 64 S. E. 3).

49. See the statutes of the several states. And see Smith v. Cox, 83 S. C. 1, 65 S. E. 222, holding that Civ. Code (1902), § 426, providing that an action to recover land sold for delinquent taxes must be brought within two years from the sale, applies where lands are sold either for non-payment of taxes or for alleged non-payment of taxes by the owner of the property levied on, but does not apply to a sale for non-payment of taxes levied against a vendor, where the land was assessed against the purchaser in a deed recorded in the auditor's office, who paid the taxes.

Fraud.—A statute limiting actions for the recovery of real estate sold for taxes does not apply to actions founded on the fraud of the tax purchaser. Doyle v. Doyle, 33 Kan. 721, 7 Pac. 615; McMahon v. McGraw, 26 Wis. 614.

Disqualification of purchaser.—Where the ground of objection to the tax title is the disqualification of defendant to purchase at the tax-sale, by reason of his interest in the property or his fiduciary relation to the owner, the statute of limitations does not apply. Soreson v. Davis, 83 Iowa 405, 49 N. W. 1004; Woodman v. Davis, 32 Kan. 344, 4 Pac. 262.

52. Bowen v. Swander, 121 Ind. 164, 22 N. E. 725 (partition); Wallace v. McEchron, 176 N. Y. 424, 68 N. E. 663 (partition); Ryon v. Davis, 32 Tex. Civ. App. 500, 75 S. W. 59. But see Jackson, etc., R. Co. v. Solomon Lumber Co., 146 Mich. 204, 109 N. W. 257, holding that when the owner's right to impeach the tax-sale directly is barred, he cannot attack it in an action of replevin to recover logs cut from the land in question.

recovery of land" claimed under a tax title, it does not apply to a suit in equity to remove the cloud on the owner's title,<sup>54</sup> or to quiet the title.<sup>55</sup>

(III) RETROSPECTIVE STATUTES. It is competent for the legislature to make a statute of this kind applicable to tax-sales which have taken place before its enactment, provided a reasonable time after the passage of the act is left to the owner in which to assert his rights.<sup>56</sup> But the presumption is always against the intention to make a law retroactive, and such statutes will not be construed as having this effect unless plainly so intended.<sup>57</sup>

(IV) REPEAL OR EXTENSION OF STATUTE. Questions concerning the repeal or extension of a statute of limitations of this character, and its effect on pending matters or proceedings, are determined by the ordinary rules of construction;<sup>58</sup> with this proviso, however, that when the bar of the statute of limitations is complete in favor of the holder of a tax deed, he has an absolute title to the land, which cannot be defeated by a statute subsequently enacted removing the bar or extending the period of limitations.<sup>59</sup>

b. Persons Affected by Statute of Limitations — (i) IN GENERAL. As a general rule the special statute of limitations applies only as between the person who owned the property at the time of the tax-sale and the holder of the tax deed, or those claiming under them respectively, and cannot be pleaded by or against any third person.<sup>60</sup> In the character of a claimant under a tax-sale, the state may be bound like any private person.<sup>61</sup> But persons entitled to rely on the statute may be debarred from doing so on principles of estoppel or waiver,<sup>62</sup> or by reason of their quasi-fiduciary relation to other persons interested in the property.<sup>63</sup>

(II) PERSONS UNDER DISABILITIES. Unless there is an exception in the statute of limitations in favor of persons under disabilities, they are bound by its provisions the same as persons who are sui juris; and if there is such an exception, it is confined strictly to the terms of the statute.<sup>64</sup> Hence it has been held that the period of limitation cannot be extended in favor of an infant who acquires title to the property during the running of the statute, the owner at the time of the sale having been an adult,<sup>65</sup> nor in favor of an adult grantee of a minor owner.<sup>66</sup>

c. Actions by Tax Title Claimant — (i) IN GENERAL. A statute limiting the time for actions for "the recovery of lands sold for taxes" applies to suits by the tax purchaser, and if the time so prescribed, or that limited by any statute specifically applicable to him, elapses without effective action on his part, his rights under the tax-sale are lost.<sup>67</sup> The starting point of the period of limitation

One holding under a tax deed, and under a deed conveying the husband's curtesy in the land, which descended to the children of the deceased owner subject to the husband's curtesy, cannot, during the lifetime of the husband, avail himself, as against the children, of a statute limiting the time for the commencement of an action for the recovery of real estate sold for taxes, since the children are not entitled to possession until the termination of the life-estate, and limitations cannot begin to run against them until the termination of the life-estate by the death of the husband. *Kohle v. under the various statutes may be the execution and recording of the tax deed;<sup>63</sup> or it may be the date of the sale, which means a sale completed by the delivery of a conveyance, and hence the statute begins to run from the time the purchaser becomes entitled to a deed,<sup>69</sup> or when the period of redemption has expired.<sup>70</sup> But it has been held that a statute of this kind does not apply to an action by the tax purchaser to quiet his title;<sup>71</sup> although, on the other hand, it is not limited to actions against the original owner, but applies as well to a suit against one claiming under a later tax-sale.<sup>72</sup> Independently of statutes of this kind, great and unreasonable delay on the part of the purchaser in asserting his rights may deprive him of the ordinary remedies.<sup>73</sup>

(II) POSSESSION OR OCCUPATION OF LAND. If the tax title claimant acquires and holds possession of the premises, the statute of limitations will not run against him.<sup>74</sup> And if the land has remained entirely vacant and unoccupied during the period limited by the statute, it is considered that the tax deed gives a constructive possession, and the same result follows.<sup>75</sup> But if the original owner remains in undisputed possession, or if he takes possession at any time during the period of limitations and holds it to the close thereof, the bar of the statute may then be interposed to prevent any action by the tax purchaser.<sup>76</sup>

In Kansas, where land is actually vacant and unoccupied for more than two years after the recording of the tax deed, the holder of such deed will have two years from the time when the original owner or other person took actual possession before being barred of his action to recover possession. *Case v. d. Actions Against Tax Title Claimant — (i) COMPUTATION OF TIME —

(A) In General. Aside from the general statute of limitations, which may be invoked by a tax title claimant as against a suit by the original owner of the land,<sup>77</sup> special statutes of limitation in the various states provide that such suits must be brought within a certain time after the tax-sale,<sup>78</sup> or after the giving of notice thereof to the owner,<sup>79</sup> or after the expiration of the time allowed for redemption,<sup>80</sup> or the time when the purchaser takes possession of the premises,<sup>81</sup> or the execution and recording of a tax deed issued to him.<sup>82</sup> But the running of these statutes may be interrupted by the commencement and pendency of an action,<sup>83</sup> or their time-limit may be affected by dealings between the parties or the application of the principles of equity.<sup>84</sup>

(B) Issuance and Record of Deed. According to the limitation now most generally provided by the statutes, an action must be brought against the tax title claimant within a certain length of time after the execution and delivery of a tax deed to him or after the same is recorded.<sup>85</sup> Even where the statute

Successive tax deeds.—The statute in Kansas gives the landowner two years in which to set aside "any and all tax deeds," where different or successive tax deeds on the same sale have been put on record by the same party, not merely two years in which to set aside the last deed recorded, but two years in which to set aside all such different or successive deeds, without regard to the length of time which the prior tax deeds, merged in the last deed, have been on record. Austin v. Jones, 37 Kan. 327, 15 Pac. 166.

The recording of a valid tax title is notice that the grantee therein disclaims a tenancy under a lease of the premises, and an action against him must be brought within the statutory period. Hudson v. Schumpert, 80 S. C. 23, 61 S. E. 104.

Commencement of action.—An action against a non-resident, who is outside of the state, to defeat a tax title, is to be deemed begun, within the meaning of the statute of limitations, where plaintiff, without causing a summons to be issued, has filed his petition and affidavit for publication and caused notice to be delivered to the only newspaper printed in the county, with directions for its insertion, provided a proper publication results; and in such case the action is commenced at the date of the first publication. Canaday v. Davis, 79 Kan. 816, 101 Pac. 626. And where an action to quiet title is begun against several defendants, and the holder of the tax deed is not a defendant in the action or brought into court until more than the statutory period after recording his deed, the action will be deemed to be commenced, as to him, when he was brought into court, and he can then avail himself of the statutory limitation. *Gibson v. Extent of possession.—Actual possession by the tax purchaser of a portion of the tract, which is divided from the rest by a stream, amounts to possession of the whole tract. Butts v. Ricks, 82 Miss. 533, 34 So. 354.

Tax deed as basis of possession.—It is not sufficient merely that the tax purchaser shall be in possession, but his possession must be founded on his tax deed as the basis of his title; if he is in possession under another claim of title, the special statute of limitations will not run in his favor. Doe v. Moog, 150 Ala. 460, 43 So. 710 (possession under auditor's deed not sufficient); Quartermous v. Walls, 70 Ark. 326, 67 S. W. 1014; Gilman v. Riopelle, 18 Mich. 145. The limitation as to suits to avoid a tax-sale is not a curative statute, but the title thus acquired is in the nature of a prescriptive title, in which the deed must on its face constitute color of title under which possession is held. Martin v. White, 53 Oreg. 319, 100 Pac. 290.

Possession fraudulently acquired.—The statute does not run against a landowner in favor of one who, after acquiring a tax deed, fraudulently induces the owner's tenant to will draw after it the constructive possession of the premises, so as to support the purchaser's claim under the statute of limitations.<sup>91</sup> But under other statutes the mere delivery or recording of the deed, without possession, is not sufficient to start the running of the statute.<sup>92</sup>

other hand, if the deed is fair on its face, with no patent defects, it will be sufficient to support a claim under the statute of limitations, notwithstanding the existence of irregularities or defects of which the purchaser, taking in good faith, had no notice;<sup>94</sup> and it is held that the deed should be liberally construed, to make its recitals correspond with the real facts of the case, if it would be valid on its face when so construed.<sup>95</sup>

(IV) DEFECTS CURED BY LIMITATIONS — (A) In General. After a title has been held under a tax deed for the prescribed length of time, all irregularities, informalities, and defects of form are cured, and thereafter no questions can be raised as to the validity of the tax proceedings,<sup>96</sup> except those which concern the Defects which invalidate.—A tax deed is void, within the meaning of the rule stated in the text, when the description of the property varies materially from that in the assessment roll (Saddler v. Smith, 54 Fla. 671, 45 So. 718; Carnecross v. Lykes, 22 Fla. 587; Bird v. Benlisa, 142 U. S. 664, 12 S. Ct. 323, 35 L. ed. 1151); when it has not been acknowledged (Flowers v. Jernigan, 116 Ala. 516, 22 So. 853; Johnston v. Sutton, 45 Fed. 296); when the land in question was not subject to taxation (Taylor v. Miles, 5 Kan. 498, 7 Am. Rep. 558); when the purchaser at the tax-sale was a tenant who had agreed to pay the taxes (Carithers v. Weaver, 7 Kan. 110); when the deed was executed after a redemption had been effected (Burke v. Cutler, 78 Iowa 299, 43 N. W. 204); when the clerk was without authority to make the deed because the list filed by the county trustee did not comply with the statute (Collier v. Goessling, 160 Fed. 64, 87 C. C. A. 506); or when there is nothing to show the right of the holder as an assignee of the original purchaser (Smith v. Phillips, 51 Fla. 327, 41 So. 527). But after the statute of limitations has run, it is not a ground of objection that the treasurer executed the deed to himself. Guthrie v. Harker, 27 Fed. 586. And the omission of the deed to recite the previous issue of an irregular deed will not prevent the running of the statute. Peck v. Comstock, 6 Fed. 22.

Ann. 417, in which it was said that the good faith necessary to enable a claimant under a tax title to plead prescription is simply that he shall not have acquired the property mala fide. A purchaser is a bona fide possessor where the tax deed is valid in form, having no defect apparent on its face, and the sale was made by the proper officer; and in such a case he cannot be deprived of the right to plead prescription because he might by inquiry and careful examination have discovered want of title in his vendor.

(v) REDEMPTION OR PAYMENT OF TAXES. The statute of limitations does not protect a tax title where the taxes had been in fact paid before the sale or where the owner redeems within the time allowed by law for that purpose; and in some states this exception is incorporated in the statute, while in others it is implied from the consequent invalidity of the sale or deed.<sup>13</sup> In some jurisdictions also this rule is applied where the owner was ready and offered to pay his taxes but was erroneously informed that none were due.<sup>14</sup>

e. Laches in Attacking Tax Title.<sup>15</sup> Irrespective of the statute of limitations, or in cases where the statute would not apply, the owner of land sold for taxes will be denied relief against the sale where he has delayed, for a great and unreasonable length of time, to seek redress;<sup>16</sup> more especially where the property has meanwhile been greatly enhanced in value by the labor or expenditures of the tax purchaser,<sup>17</sup> or where it has passed into the hands of innocent purchasers from him in good faith.<sup>18</sup>

5. PARTIES AND PROCESS — a. Parties. In an action to confirm a tax title or to foreclose a tax lien, all persons should be joined as defendants who claim a title or interest in the premises adverse to the tax title.<sup>19</sup> A suit to set aside a tax-sale, or to remove the cloud on title, may be brought by the real owner of the property, or, in proper cases, by one holding the title as a trustee,<sup>20</sup> and should be brought against the purchaser at the tax-sale or his assignee or grantee and those claiming an interest under him or jointly with him;<sup>21</sup> but ordinarily no other defendants are necessary,<sup>22</sup> the state or county not being a necessary party except where it was the purchaser at the sale,<sup>23</sup> and the issue at this stage being between the former owner of the premises and the holder of the tax title, the public officers who were concerned in the tax proceedings are neither necessary nor proper parties,<sup>24</sup> under a void tax deed, whose possession has never ripened into title by prescription, and who is not protected by any statute of limitations. Marysville Inv. Co. v. Holle, 58 Kan. 773, 51 Pac. 281.

Possession not taken by tax purchaser.—Laches will not bar a landowner from assailing a tax-sale of his land where there is no actual possession under the tax title. State v. Sponaugle, 45 W. Va. 415, 32 S. E. 283, 43 L. R. A. 727. Thus where the holder of a tax title never entered into possession and never acquired a right of possession because of the service of a defective notice to redeem, the original owner was not guilty of laches in failing to institute a suit to cancel the tax deed as a cloud on his title until three or four years had elapsed after the issuance of a writ of assistance to the holder of the tax title. *G. 6. PLEADING — a. Pleading a Tax Title. Whenever a tax title is specially set forth in pleadings it is necessary that every fact should be averred which is requisite to show that each of the statutory provisions has been complied with;<sup>27</sup> and it is not enough to allege that the proceedings, or any of the proceedings, were taken "duly" or "according to the statute."<sup>28</sup> Furthermore it has been held that a statute declaring that tax deeds shall be prima facie evidence of certain facts essential to their validity does not dispense with the necessity of alleging such facts in a plea setting up a tax deed.<sup>29</sup> If plaintiff wishes to protect himself

But compare Blakemore v. Roberts, 12 N. D. 394, 96 N. W. 1029, holding that a complaint under Laws (1901), c. 5, p. 9, and based on a tax lien, need not allege that such tax lien was based on a regular assessment and levy of tax.

The year for which the tax was assessed must be averred; and moreover it is not sufficient to aver that in that year the assessor entered the levy on the assessment roll. Russell v. Mann, 22 Cal. 131.

Allegation as to possession.—In Louisiana it is not necessary that a tax purchaser suing to quiet title shall allege possession in himself or want of possession in defendant, but the fact of possession by defendant is a matter of defense. Slattery v. Kellum, 114 La. 282, 38 So. 170.

Admission of defendant's ownership.—Where, under the statute, a suit to foreclose a tax title can be brought only against the original owner, the bringing of the action is an admission that defendant was such owner, although the allegation of the fact is defective. Randall v. Dailey, 66 Wis. 285, 28 N. W. 352.

A complaint in an adversary suit to quiet title which alleges that plaintiff is the owner of the land which is unoccupied, claiming under a tax deed, and that defendant is asserting title thereto and paying taxes, states a cause of action to quiet title under the general equity jurisdiction of the court, irrespective of whether plaintiff is entitled to a general decree for confirmation of the tax-sale. Knauff v. National Cooperaage Co., 87 Ark. 494, 113 S. But see Hibernia Sav., etc., Soc. v. Ordway, 38 Cal. 679, holding against the consequences of his tax deed being held invalid, and to secure such compensation or reimbursement as the law allows in that case, he may do so by amendment to his bill or complaint, or, where he is attacked, by cross bill.<sup>30</sup>

b. Complaint or Answer Impeaching Tax Title. Where a pleading undertakes to impeach the validity of a tax title it is not sufficient to allege that the opposite party claims some interest in the premises under certain tax-sales or deeds but that the same are invalid;<sup>31</sup> but it is necessary to point out, clearly and specifically and in apt terms, the particular defect, illegality, or failure of compliance with the law which is supposed to invalidate the title and on which the pleader means to rely.<sup>32</sup> And in case the action is against a subsequent purchaser from the original holder of the tax title, there must be allegations to connect him with that naming the instrument is sufficient to show an apparent validity.

But compare Owen v. Ruthruff, 81 Minn. 397, 84 N. W. 217 (holding that it is proper pleading to specify in the complaint, in a statutory action to test tax titles, the tax certificate or deed which is assailed as invalid); Lewis v. Bartleson, 39 Minn. 89, 38 N. W. 707; Jones v. Boykin, 70 S. C. 309, 49 S. E. 877.

Alleging cloud on title.—Where the statute makes a tax deed prima facie evidence of title, in an action to remove a cloud created by a tax deed, an allegation in the complaint that the deed is regular on its face the defect complained of or to affect him with notice thereof.<sup>33</sup> The pleading should also aver facts showing complainant's ownership or right to contest the tax title;<sup>34</sup> and under some statutes must also aver payment, or tender of payment of taxes, costs, etc., and a refusal thereof;<sup>35</sup> but it has been held that where it does not appear in a complaint in an action to quiet title that taxes are due on the land in suit, the complaint is not rendered insufficient by the fact that it contains no offer to pay taxes.<sup>36</sup>

c. Issues, Proof, and Variance. In actions concerning tax titles, as in other suits, the material facts pleaded must be established by evidence,<sup>37</sup> unless sufficiently shows its apparent validity. Day v. Schneider, 28 Oreg. 457, 43 Pac. 650.

Fraud in a tax-sale may be taken advantage of by answer and cross complaint in an action by the purchaser to recover the land. Neal v. Wideman, 59 Ark. 5, 26 S. W. 16.

Complaint to test validity of forfeiture of lands to state for non-payment of taxes see Willard v. Redwood County, 22 Minn. 61.

A general allegation that the tax deed is void is sufficient in the absence of a motion to make more specific. Snell v. Dubuque, 88 Iowa 442, 55 N. W. 310. See also Sanders v. Parshall, 67 Hun (N. Y.) 105, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 20 [affirmed in 142 N. Y. 679, 37 N. E. 825].

Offer to redeem.—Where the bill in a suit to declare a tax deed void as a cloud on plaintiff's title alleges an offer to redeem, it is proper to allow an amended bill alleging with greater particularity the unsuccessful efforts of plaintiffs, before bringing suit, to redeem the land and the denial of their right to redeem on the hypothesis that the statutory period for payment had expired. Kelly v. Gwatkin, 108 Va. 6, 60 S. E. 749.

Contradictory counts.—In an action to quiet title where the first count of a replication is a general denial of defendant's answer and the second count sets up defects in defendant's alleged tax title, the counts are not contradictory. Mitchell v. Knott, 43 Colo. 135, 95 Pac. 335.

Admission of possession or interest.—Alleging reasons why a tax deed, under which defendant claims, conveyed no title does not admit defendant's possession or interest in the property. Mitchell v. Knott, 43 Colo. 135, 95 Pac. 335. So a statement in a bill to set aside a tax title that a deed was issued "whereby and by the terms of which said county treasurer granted and conveyed" property to the grantee, cannot be construed as an admission that the title passed by such deed. Kraus v. Congdon, 161 Fed. 18, 88 C. C. A. 182.

Amendment.—Where in an action to quiet title plaintiff claims title under tax deeds of which the first in date is void on its face, and the second covering in part the same property conflicts in its statements of fact with the first, defendant should be permitted to amend his pleadings to show the invalidity of the second deed. Webber v. Wannemaker, 39 Colo. 425, 89 Pac. 780.

Supplemental bill assailing tax-sale on other grounds than that set forth in the original bill as not making a new and independent case see De Forest v. Thompson, 40 Fed. 375. Where a mortgagee purchases mortgaged lands at a foreclosure sale pending a suit by him to set aside an invalid tax-sale, a supplemental bill setting up title under such sale and praying the same relief as the original bill is germane to the original bill. Miller v. Cook, 135 Ill. 190, 25 N. E. 756, 10 L. R. A. 292.

34. Harrington v. Hayes County, 81 Nebr. 231, 115 N. W. 773, 129 Am. St. Rep. 680, holding that in an action to set aside a sheriff's tax deed an allegation that plaintiffs are the owners in fee simple of the land is a sufficient plea of ownership, when the petition is attacked by a general demurrer. Compare Kraus v. Congdon, 161 Fed. 18, 88 C. C. A. 182, holding that in a suit under Ballinger Annot. Codes & St. Wash. § 552, by one in possession of lands to set aside a tax title thereon, plaintiff is not required to plead title in himself or to prove the same even if alleged.

35. Ryno v. Snider, 49 Wash. 421, 95 Pac. 644 (holding that a complaint in ejectment against the grantee of a purchaser at a tax-sale which fails to allege tender to defendant fails to state a cause of action); Kahn v. Thorpe, 43 Wash. 463, 86 Pac. 855. But see Bullock v. Wallace, 46 Wash. 690, 92 Pac. 675, holding that an action of ejectment is not an action to recover property sold for taxes within Ballinger Annot. Codes & St. § 5679, requiring the complaint in such an action to set forth that the tax has been paid or tendered.

In an action to determine adverse claims arising out of tax certificates, in which the statute provides a form of complaint, the complaint need not allege payment or offer of payment for taxes justly due, but before granting any relief the court should require such payment as a condition thereof. Powers v. Bottineau First Nat. Bank, 15 N. D. 466, 109 N. W. 361.

admitted;<sup>38</sup> and the evidence must be confined to the matters pleaded and be pertinent to the issues raised,<sup>39</sup> and a material variance between the pleadings and proofs will be fatal to the case.<sup>40</sup> Nor is it proper to set aside a tax deed on account of defects not alleged in the bill or complaint.<sup>41</sup>

7. EVIDENCE<sup>42</sup> — a. In General. When it becomes necessary to prove the various steps on which a tax title rests, the best and original evidence consists of the records made by the various officers concerned in the assessment and collection of the taxes, or certified copies thereof, if the latter are admissible under the statutory rules,<sup>43</sup> and the courts may exercise the necessary power to procure the production of such records or copies for use in cases pending before them.<sup>44</sup>

b. Presumptions and Burden of Proof.<sup>45</sup> At common law, the burden of proof is on one who claims title under a tax deed to prove the regularity and validity of each successive step in the proceedings from the assessment to the sale,<sup>46</sup> except where the statute of limitations has run in his favor, in which case he may stand on his possession and need not prove the validity of his title,<sup>47</sup> although if he is out of possession and is suing the owners who are in possession, he is bound

The defense of inadequate consideration and unfairness in the sale cannot be urged where not pleaded. Walker v. Mills, 210 Mo. 684, 109 S. W. 44.

In ejectment against a tenant and his landlords, where the tenant denies plaintiff's ownership and right of possession, and alleges that his landlords hold under a tax deed and plead limitation, the landlords can rely upon such defenses without setting them up in their own answer, since the tenant's possession inures to their benefit. Wildharber v. Lunkenheimer, 128 Ky. 344, 108 S. W. 327, 32 Ky. L. Rep. 1221.

A quitclaim deed from the holder of a tax deed to persons not parties individually but under the designation "unknown owners" who have defaulted, to a suit to cancel such tax deed as a cloud, is not admissible in such suit to show title in the grantees. *Brimson v. In Arkansas a cause instituted to confirm a tax title, but which proceeds to a final hearing as a suit by defendant against plaintiff to cancel plaintiff's tax title, is not governed by Kirby Dig. § 7105, and defendant has the burden of proving his title, and he cannot rely on the weakness of plaintiff's title. McDaniel v. Berger, 89 Ark. 139, 116 S. W. 194. So a petitioner to quiet title under a deed executed from the commissioner of state lands, conveying lands forfeited for taxes and his possession and payment of taxes, has the burden to show title. *Morris v. to assert his title and can receive no aid from prescription.<sup>48</sup> But statutes making tax deeds prima facie or conclusive evidence of title or of the regularity of the prior proceedings have the effect of shifting the burden of proof, so that it is incumbent on the party assailing the tax title to show the particular defect which is fatal to its validity.<sup>49</sup> But even with the help of such a statute, various matters may come in issue which are not covered by the recitals of the deed or the provisions of the statute, and as to these the party relying on the tax title must assume the burden of proof, such as, to identify the particular land affected,<sup>50</sup> to show an assignment of the tax certificate to himself,<sup>51</sup> to show that his purchase was fair and in good faith,<sup>52</sup> or that there has been no redemption;<sup>53</sup> or, if he means to claim reimbursement on the setting aside of the tax deed, to show the precise amount to which he is entitled.<sup>54</sup> Similarly it is a general rule that one shall not be permitted to impeach a tax title without first showing title in himself,<sup>55</sup> and in some jurisdictions he is required to prove that all taxes due on the land have been paid,<sup>56</sup> and his continued and adverse possession of the premises, if that is essential to his attack or defense.<sup>57</sup>

c. Admissibility.<sup>58</sup> As a general rule, all the books, papers, and records relating to the taxes, made by and in the custody of the proper officers, are admis-

Action before issuance of deed.—In a suit to set aside a tax-sale, commenced before a deed is issued, the burden of proof is on the purchaser to show compliance with the law, and is not changed by the fact that a deed is recorded pending the suit. Columbia Finance, etc., Co. v. Fierbaugh, 59 W. Va. 334, 53 S. E. 468.

Where in an action to test the validity of a tax deed plaintiff owns the fee and defendant is in possession under the tax deed, which the court holds to be good on its face, the burden is on plaintiff to show facts which make the deed ineffective. Taylor v. Adams, 79 Kan. 360, 99 Pac. 597.

Where in ejectment defendant exhibits a title derived from a treasurer's sale for taxes assessed on the land as unseated, regular in form and long subsequent to the acquisition of the title exhibited by plaintiffs, derived from a like sale, the burden is on plaintiffs to prove the defect alleged in defendant's title. Floyd v. Kulp Lumber Co., 222 Pa. St. 257, 71 Atl. 15.

Where a complaint alleges that tax deeds were issued and recorded, it will be assumed, in the absence of averment to the contrary, that such tax deeds were in the form required by law, thus entitling them to a presumption in favor of the regularity of all prior proceedings and to the protection of the statute of limitations when the lands are vacant and unoccupied. *Strange v. sible in evidence,<sup>59</sup> including the assessment list or roll, provided its authenticity and official character are first shown.<sup>60</sup> Parol evidence may be admissible to supply, sustain, or contradict the recitals in the tax deed,<sup>61</sup> and in other particulars the admissibility of this kind of evidence in tax cases is governed by the ordinary rules.<sup>62</sup>

d. Weight and Sufficiency.<sup>63</sup> By the aid of statutes in many of the states, the claimant under a tax title makes out a prima facie case by the production of his tax deed, which will be sufficient to establish his title unless overcome by affirmative evidence.<sup>64</sup> And on the other hand, one who seeks to have a tax-sale set aside must prove the defects relied on by clear and satisfactory evidence.<sup>65</sup> In regard to the various particular issues which may arise in the course of such a proceeding, the ordinary rules as to the probative force and sufficiency of evidence will apply.<sup>66</sup>

9. JUDGMENT OR DECREE — a. In General. A judgment or decree foreclosing a tax lien or confirming the tax title or quieting title in the claimant is not open to collateral attack or impeachment,<sup>73</sup> but is conclusive evidence of title in the tax purchaser,<sup>74</sup> as against all parties and privies,<sup>75</sup> although it may be vacated or set aside, like other judgments, if invalid.<sup>76</sup> Similar consequences attach to a judgment declaring the tax title void,<sup>77</sup> or to a conditional judgment providing for the reimbursement of the tax purchaser on the vacation of his deed.<sup>78</sup>

b. Scope and Extent of Relief Granted — (i) IN GENERAL. If the issues are found in favor of the tax title claimant, the court may in a proper case make a decree confirming or quieting his title.<sup>79</sup> On the other hand, if the determination is adverse to him, the judgment will vacate and set aside the tax-sale and deed,<sup>80</sup> not necessarily in toto, but to the extent of the interest of the person contesting it and showing title in himself.<sup>81</sup> The defeated tax purchaser may have a lien adjudged to him for the taxes which he has paid,<sup>82</sup> and may be required to account for rents and profits,<sup>83</sup> and to surrender possession;<sup>84</sup> but it is not proper to order him to convey or quitclaim to the record owner, unless there are special equitable grounds for it, although he may be perpetually enjoined from asserting his tax title,<sup>85</sup> and the purchaser shall not be restrained from acts of dominion over the land, since the owner will be able to invoke proper remedies for his protection, and there is no presumption that the purchaser will continue his efforts to hold the land.<sup>86</sup> It has been held that the court, having jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter, may also correct defects in the assessment or other proceedings.<sup>87</sup>

(II) REIMBURSEMENT OF TAX PURCHASER<sup>88</sup>—(A) In General. If a tax-sale was absolutely void, because of the illegality of the taxes, the fact that they had been paid, or for other cause, no rights accrue to the purchaser, and the owner of the land cannot be required to reimburse him.<sup>89</sup> But in the absence of defects rendering the proceedings entirely null, the statutes of many states provide for the reimbursement of the purchaser in case his deed is vacated or set aside,<sup>90</sup> and where the taxes paid by the purchaser were a just charge on the property, but the sale or deed was invalid because of irregularities, it is within the power of a court of equity to make the reimbursement of the purchaser a condition upon the granting of relief to the record owner.<sup>91</sup> Hence it is a general rule, applicable in equity on general principles and applicable at law under the statutes, that where the owner brings suit to clear or quiet his title or to have the sale and deed set aside, relief will be granted to him only on terms of his repaying to the tax purchaser what is justly due;<sup>92</sup> and where the tax purchaser sues for possession

90. See the statutes of the several states. And see Riverside Co. v. Townsend, 120 Ill. 9, 9 N. E. 65, holding such a statute not to be retrospective.

Remedy confined to equity proceedings.—Relief to the tax purchaser, on the lines stated in the text, cannot ordinarily be granted in an action such as ejectment, but is confined to purely equitable proceedings. Riverside Co. v. Townsend, 120 Ill. 9, 9 N. E. 65; Weimer v. Porter, 42 Mich. 569, 4 N. W. 306; Ellsworth v. Freeman, 43 Mich. 488, 5 N. W. 675. But relief may be granted to a claimant under a tax title who intervenes in an action of partition and sets up his tax title as paramount. North v. Lehman, 97

Ill. App. 399. But see Thomsen v. McCormick, 136 Ill. 135, 26 N. E. 373, holding that the record owner should be required to reimburse the tax purchaser only when such owner is seeking affirmative relief, and hence not when, in defense to an action for partition, he pleads in bar a former judgment declaring the tax title void.

Relief dependent on holding of tax deed.—Where the tax title claimant never had a tax deed, it seems he has no right to reimbursement. Bryant v. Nelson-Frey Co., 94 Minn. 305, 102 N. W. 859.

Offer and refusal of reimbursement.—Where the record owner, before any suit, offers reimbursement to the tax purchaser, and the latter refuses the same and elects to stand on his tax title, he cannot claim such reimbursement in a suit in equity to vacate the tax deed as a cloud on title. Perham v. Haverhill Fibre Co., 64 N. H. 485, 14 Atl. 462.

or to confirm or quiet his title, and is defeated, he is entitled to the same relief,<sup>93</sup> which may be given by decreeing a lien on the premises in his favor,<sup>94</sup> or if he is in possession, he may retain the possession until the sum found due him has been paid.<sup>95</sup>

(B) Amount of Recovery. According to the rules prevailing in some of the states, the amount to be repaid to the purchaser at a tax-sale by way of reimbursement is a sum equal to that which the owner would be obliged to pay into the public treasury if the land had not been sold, and hence it includes the taxes,

United States.—Smith v. Gage, 12 Fed. 32, 11 Biss. 217.

See 45 Cent. Dig. tit. "Taxation," § 1612.

Terms of decree.—The tax purchaser is not entitled to a personal judgment against the owner for the amount to which he is found to be entitled (Polenqueen v. McAllaster, 64 Kan. 263, 67 Pac. 826; Barker v. Mecartney, 10 Kan. App. 130, 62 Pac. 439), nor is the payment or tender of the taxes a prerequisite to the purchaser's liability for rents and profits (Heffern v. Hack, 65 Ohio St. 164, 61 N. E. 703); but the decree will make the relief awarded to the owner of the property conditional upon his paying to the tax purchaser the amount due to the latter within a reasonable time, which is generally fixed in the decree (Glos v. Brown, 194 Ill. 307, 62 N. E. 622; Larson v. Peppard, 38 Mont. 128, 94 Pac. 136, 129 Am. St. Rep. 630; Pettit v. Black, 8 Nebr. 52), and in default of such payment his bill will be dismissed (Glos v. Cratty, 196 Ill. 193, 63 N. E. 690; Farwell v. Harding, 96 Ill. 32). But the decree need not provide for the distribution of the amount deposited with the clerk of the court (Brimson v. Arnold, 236 Ill. 495, 86 N. E. 254), and a provision in the decree for a deposit to be paid to defendants as their respective rights may thereafter be determined is proper (Glos v. Cass, 230 Ill. 641, 82 N. E. 827).

Reimbursement of purchaser's grantee.—A quitclaim deed by a tax purchaser operates as an assignment of an interest in the taxes found due, and tax titles so quitclaimed should not be set aside without requiring the repayment to the grantee of his proportion of the taxes, interest, and costs. Glos v. Mulcahy, 210 Ill. 639, 71 N. E. 629.

10. APPEAL AND REVIEW. The ordinary rules as to the right of appeal and the giving of a bond or other condition apply in tax cases.<sup>2</sup> The reviewing court will ordinarily not consider objections to the regularity or validity of the tax proceedings or other exceptions not presented and urged below,<sup>3</sup> or those which are not alleged with sufficient distinctness and supported by the evidence brought up.<sup>4</sup> Reasonable presumptions will be indulged in favor of the correctness of the actions of the trial court,<sup>5</sup> and its decision will not be reversed for harmless error,<sup>6</sup> or for errors not affecting the substantial rights of the party appealing.<sup>7</sup> But in proper cases the judgment or decree may be reversed and remanded for further proceedings.<sup>8</sup>

11. COSTS. In a suit by the owner to set aside a tax-sale of his property, or to quiet his title or remove the cloud from it, the costs will be assessed against the tax purchaser if a sufficient tender has been made to him of the amount due to him;<sup>9</sup> but in the absence of such a tender, defendant cannot be charged with the

C. Reimbursement of Purchaser of Invalid Title — 1. RIGHT TO RELIEF IN GENERAL — a. Application of Rule of Caveat Emptor. At common law the purchaser at a tax-sale assumes the risks of his purchase. The proceedings are of record, and he is chargeable with notice of any defect or irregularity which the records disclose. Moreover the power of the officer to sell is a naked power, statutory, and not coupled with an interest, and the purchaser is bound to inquire whether it is rightly exercised. Therefore, in the absence of special legislation to the contrary, he comes within the rule of caveat emptor, and if his title proves worthless, he cannot recover his money from the officer or the municipality,<sup>12</sup> although on equitable principles, and if he is free from fraud or bad faith,<sup>13</sup> it is

In Michigan where a bill to remove a cloud on title to land and to redeem from a tax-sale for delinquent drain taxes is in effect a suit to set aside the drain taxes, within the meaning of the statute which precludes costs against either party in an action to set aside any sale for delinquent taxes, the auditor-general, although a necessary party under General Tax Law, § 144 (Pub. Acts (1899), p. 140), is not entitled to costs on the dismissal of the bill. Haney v. Miller, 154 Mich. 337, 117 N. W. 71, 745.

Equitable grounds for awarding costs.—A decree for costs against one holding a tax certificate or a tax deed cannot be entered until after, by a valid tender, he has been placed in the position of refusing to do equity. Stearns v. Glos, 235 Ill. 290, 85 N. E. 335; Glos v. Collins, 110 Ill. App. 121. In Pennsylvania, under an act of 1856, the rule of caveat emptor did not apply to tax-sales in case of double assessment, or where the taxes had been paid, or where the lands did not lie within the county; and in such cases the money was to be refunded to the purchaser. right that he should be subrogated to the rights of the municipality in any tax he has paid in making his purchase or in its protection.<sup>14</sup>

b. Covenants and Liabilities of Officers. A public officer may be liable in damages to a tax purchaser for neglect or inaction which prevents such purchaser from securing his rights under a valid sale;<sup>15</sup> but he is not liable in damages for a failure of title, unless due to fraud or wilful neglect on his own part.<sup>16</sup> Even where a covenant of warranty is inserted in a tax deed, as required by the statute, it is regarded as an official and not a personal covenant, and the officer is not to be held personally liable for its breach.<sup>17</sup>

2. RECOVERY FROM STATE OR MUNICIPALITY — a. Right of Action at Common Law. Unless aided by express statutory authority, the purchaser at a tax-sale whose title proves to be invalid is not entitled to recover back his money in an action against the state, or its officers, or the city or county for whose taxes the land was sold.<sup>18</sup> Neither is it competent for the officers of a county to make a special contract with tax purchasers, agreeing to refund the money if the title fails, for unless such a contract is authorized by statute it will not be binding on the county, or give the purchaser a right of action.<sup>19</sup>

b. Statutes Giving Right of Action — (1) IN GENERAL. In many states the statutes now provide that the purchase-money paid at a tax-sale shall be refunded to the purchaser if the title conveyed proves to be invalid, with a right of action against the municipality if the refund is refused.<sup>20</sup> Such laws, however, are construed with some strictness and confined to the specific cases mentioned.<sup>21</sup> They are not unconstitutional if they give a right of action against a county for a claim which it is morally or legally bound to recognize, but it is otherwise where the only basis for the action is attributable to the purchaser's own fault or neglect.<sup>22</sup> Such a statute, in force at the time of the sale, forms a part of the contract, and the rights vesting in the purchaser under it cannot be impaired or taken away by the repeal of the act.<sup>23</sup>

(II) RETROACTIVE STATUTES. A statute of this character may constitutionally be made to apply to tax-sales occurring before its enactment;<sup>24</sup> but such a law will not be construed as being retroactive unless the intention of the legislature to give it such an operation is clearly apparent.<sup>25</sup>

Demand and refusal of refund.—Where a statute provides that any taxes erroneously or illegally collected may be refunded by the county treasurer by order of the board of supervisors, the word "may" means "shall," and the board have no discretion to allow or refuse a claim for refund, and if they refuse to allow it, an action then lies against the county. Hayes v. Los Angeles County, 99 Cal. 74, 33 Pac. 766.

Effect of refunding.—The state does not lose its lien on the property for the taxes refunded. Auditor-Gen. v. Patterson, 122 Mich. 39, 80 N. W. 884; Olmsted County v. Barber, 31 Minn. 256, 17 N. W. 473, 944.

Refunding by mistake and subsequent restoration of money.—Where a purchaser of land at a tax-sale, through a mistake of fact, applies to the county to refund the amount paid, which is done, but afterward, on discovering the mistake, he returns the money, this will not estop him to perfect and rely on the tax title, at least where the former owner was in no way misled or influenced thereby; nor will this operate as a cancellation of the tax purchaser's deed, which was in fact valid, the county board having no power to refund money received on a valid sale. Edwards v. Upham, 93 Wis. 455, 67 N. W. 728.

Judgment annulling tax-sale.—Where the law provides for a refund of the purchase-money in case the tax title has been "annulled pursuant to law," this means that it must have been annulled by a judgment acting directly on the title in a proceeding analogous to a suit to quiet title, and does not apply where the tax title was merely introduced in evidence in an action of ejectment and there held defective. People v. Auditor-Gen., 30 Mich. 12. But compare Fleming v. Roverud, 30 Minn. 273, 15 N. W. 119.

Purchase from state.—The statute in Mississippi providing for refunding to the purchaser if the taxes were not due applies to the state's vendee as well as to the purchaser at a tax collector's sale. Wilkinson County v. Fitts, 63 Miss. 600.

Failure to recover possession.—Where the statute authorizes a refund in case the purchaser "shall be unable to recover possession" by reason of the invalidity of the tax-sale, he must show not only that the tax-sale was invalid but also that he has made some effort to recover possession of the land. Reid v. Albany County, 128 N. Y. 364, 28 N. E. 367.

Deed invalid but not sale.—Where the tax-sale and all proceedings preliminary thereto were regular and valid, the fact of an irregularity or error in the certificate or deed does not impair the sale, and therefore does not give the purchaser a right to recover his money. Clarke v. New York, 111 N. Y. 21, 19 N. E. 436. And see Ball v. Barnes, 123 Ind. 394, 24 N. E. 142, holding that where the sale is sufficient to pass the tax lien, although ineffectual to convey title, on account of a defective description, the purchaser must rely on his lien and cannot recover his money back from the county.

c. Grounds and Extent of Relief. The statutes in question generally give a right of action to the tax purchaser where the title fails on account of a "mistake or wrongful act of the treasurer or other officer,"<sup>26</sup> or where it is annulled in a judicial proceeding,<sup>27</sup> or proves fatally defective for other reasons.<sup>28</sup> Under such statutes it is ground for claiming a refund that the land in question was exempt or was not subject to taxation,<sup>29</sup> that no taxes were due upon it at the time,<sup>30</sup> that the taxes had previously been paid,<sup>31</sup> that the collector failed to demand and exhaust personalty before selling the land,<sup>32</sup> or that there was such a fundamental vice or defect in the assessment or subsequent proceedings as totally to invalidate the sale.<sup>33</sup> The measure of the purchaser's recovery is the amount

Error occurring before passage of act with sale after.—Even where the law is prospective in its terms, the county is bound to indemnify one who purchases at a tax-sale occurring after the act takes effect, although the error of the assessor which invalidates the title was made before the passage of the act, and consequently the county cannot recover from the assessor. *Hurd v. Railroad grant lands.—Where the law imperatively requires the treasurer to sell all lands on the delinquent list, under the warrant of the county commissioners, it is held that, in making sales, he acts in a purely ministerial capacity, and has no discretion as to any lands shown by the warrant to be liable for delinquent taxes; and hence when he sells railroad grant lands contained therein, and regularly listed to private persons, but which are in fact not yet liable to taxation, such sale is not "by mistake or wrongful act of the treasurer," within the meaning of these statutes. *Stutsman County v. paid by him for the tax title, with the statutory interest thereon,<sup>34</sup> and it may also include subsequent taxes paid by him.<sup>35</sup> But this statutory remedy is not available to a purchaser who is chargeable with fraud, bad faith, or great negligence.<sup>36</sup>

d. Persons Entitled to Reimbursement. The right of reimbursement given by the statutes under consideration inures to the heirs and devisees of the purchaser at a tax-sale,<sup>37</sup> to one to whom the tax purchaser has conveyed the land by deed,<sup>38</sup> and to the assignee of the tax certificate,<sup>39</sup> including one who takes such an assignment from the county or municipality,<sup>40</sup> although under some statutes the word "sale" is held to refer only to the original tax-sale of the land and not to a subsequent assignment of the tax-sale certificate.<sup>41</sup> But these statutes were not made for the benefit of the original owner of the land, who acquires a tax certificate by way of redemption rather than of purchase,<sup>42</sup> nor do they give a right of action to any one who becomes the purchaser at the tax-sale under an arrangement with the owner and for the latter's benefit or by the use of his money.<sup>43</sup>

e. Actions to Enforce Claims—(1) IN GENERAL. The count for money had and received is a proper form of declaration in an action against a county to recover the sum paid for an invalid tax title.<sup>44</sup> The complaint or petition for such a refunding must allege distinctly the particular matters which caused the

But on the other hand, a statute providing for the refunding of taxes wrongfully assessed applies only in favor of the owner of the property and not of a purchaser at a tax-sale. Hilgenberg v. Marion County, 107 Ind. 494, 8 N. E. 294.

A mortgagee of land, whether in possession before foreclosure or out of possession, who purchases the land at a tax-sale, is entitled to have the purchase-money repaid to him in case the sale is invalid; but not so a mortgagor who, after the assessment of the tax, became the absolute owner of the premises by purchasing at a sale under a power in his mortgage. tax-sale and deed to be ineffectual,<sup>45</sup> and plaintiff must sustain the burden of proof of these facts and of such as are necessary to bring his case within the provisions of the statute,<sup>46</sup> including compliance with any conditions precedent,<sup>47</sup> such as demand and refusal of repayment if the act makes that the proper course to be pursued before suit,<sup>48</sup> and the fact and causes of the failure of his title.<sup>49</sup> So if the statute makes it a condition precedent to such suit that the tax title shall have been adjudged void, a judicial decision to that effect must be pleaded and proved;<sup>50</sup> and where the statute authorizes reimbursement of the purchaser in case he shall be "unable to recover possession," it is essential to show at least a demand for possession and some effort to recover it.<sup>51</sup>

(II) LIMITATIONS AND LACHES. The purchaser's right of reimbursement from the municipality will be barred, if not claimed within the time prescribed by statutes of limitation, which vary in the different states.<sup>52</sup> According to local law and decisions, the statute may begin to run from the date of the sale or of the deed,<sup>53</sup> from the time when the tax title is declared void by the decision of a competent court,<sup>54</sup> from the discovery of the defect or irregularity which invalidates it,<sup>55</sup> or from the time when the purchaser, acting with reasonable promptness, fails in his effort to recover possession of the land;<sup>56</sup> and if no clause of the statute applies explicitly to such a claim for reimbursement, it will be governed by a provision limiting the right of action "on a liability created by statute other than a penalty or forfeiture."<sup>57</sup> In this connection the statute of limitations should not be construed retrospectively.<sup>58</sup> Aside from the statute the purchaser's claim may be rejected on the ground of laches.<sup>59</sup>

f. Authority and Duty of Public Officers to Refund. In some states the laws provide for the reimbursement of the purchaser of an invalid tax title by authorizing the county treasurer or other proper officer to refund the money without suit,<sup>60</sup> on the surrender of the tax certificate or deed for cancellation,<sup>61</sup> and the presentation of proper proof of the applicant's right to a return of his money.<sup>62</sup> The decision of the officer on the question of refunding is so far judicial in its nature as to be immune against collateral impeachment;<sup>63</sup> but in a case where his duty is plain he may be required by mandamus to perform it,<sup>64</sup> or if he is restrained by the order of the county commissioners, forbidding him to pay over the money, the purchaser may then bring suit against the county.<sup>65</sup>

3. PURCHASER'S LIEN — a. Right to Lien in General. A mere purchase of land at a tax-sale gives no lien enforceable in equity for the reimbursement of the money paid;<sup>66</sup> but where the tax title proves defective, the statutes of many states now create a lien in favor of the purchaser for the amount of the price paid, or to the extent of the taxes paid, either generally or in special cases.<sup>67</sup> There is, however, Vista County, 66 Iowa 128, 23 N. W. 297; White v. Brooklyn, 122 N. Y. 53, 25 N. E. 243. But compare Clapp v. Pinegrove Tp., 138 Pa. St. 35, 20 Atl. 836, 12 L. R. A. 618.

Extent of property affected.—A strip of land only a fraction of an inch wide, sold to a purchaser at a tax-sale in consideration of his paying the taxes on certain lots, is too small to enforce his lien against the same on the failure of his title. Phelps v. Brumback, 107 Mo. App. 16, 80 S. W. 678.

Lien created only by purchase at tax-sale.—Where one claims the benefit of this statutory lien, he must show that the land was sold for taxes and was purchased by him at the sale; a mere voluntary payment is not enough to entitle him to the lien. Sohn v. Wood, 75 Ind. 17.

Lands bid in for state.—Ky. Kansas.—Jeffries v. Clark, 23 Kan. 448. Where the holder of a tax deed brings ejectment and is defeated, he is entitled to a lien for the amount of the taxes paid, although his deed is based on an assessment made on each of three contiguous lots when it should have been made on the entire tract as a single description; they being owned by one person, devoted to a common use, and tion of the land will not defeat the lien, if it is capable of identification.<sup>69</sup> Where the lien exists, it will descend to the heirs or devisees of the tax purchaser,<sup>70</sup> and pass to his grantee or assignee;<sup>71</sup> and conversely one who buys from the original owner takes subject to the lien.<sup>72</sup>

b. Extent of Lien — (i) IN GENERAL. The purchaser's lien will secure the repayment to him of the taxes which were a valid charge on the land at the time of the sale, or so much thereof as he has paid in making his purchase, with interest thereon,<sup>73</sup> at a rate which is fixed by statute and varies in the different states.<sup>74</sup> Damages for waste or permanent injury to the property committed by the purchaser while in possession may be set off against his recovery.<sup>75</sup>

(ii) LIEN FOR SUBSEQUENT TAXES PAID. The lien of the purchaser of an invalid tax title will also cover taxes subsequently assessed on the land and paid by him, or previous taxes which he pays after the sale, with interest.<sup>76</sup> But

Restraining impairment of security.—The lien of the holder of a certificate of purchase at tax-sale will support an action to restrain the removal of buildings from the land; but the lien is waived as to buildings where, after their removal, the tax purchaser obtains a judgment for their value against those who removed them, which is declared a lien on the buildings. *Phillips v. some of the decisions deny his right to be reimbursed for subsequent taxes where the taxes for which the sale was made were illegal or absolutely void, on the theory that, such taxes being no lien on the land, the sale passed no interest or lien to the purchaser which would entitle him to pay subsequent taxes, and consequently such payment would be voluntary and irrecoverable.<sup>77</sup> And this rule has also been applied where the tax purchaser voluntarily had the land assessed to himself and paid the subsequent taxes on such assessment.<sup>78</sup> To enforce a lien for subsequent taxes paid, there must first be a judgment declaring the invalidity of the tax title.<sup>79</sup>

c. Priorities. The purchaser's lien, like that of the state for the taxes, may be made paramount to all others;<sup>80</sup> and will at all events take precedence of a mortgage made after the tax-sale.<sup>81</sup> But where the land is sold a second time, for subsequently accruing taxes, it is the second purchaser, and not the first, who has the prior lien.<sup>82</sup>

d. Enforcement and Foreclosure—(i) IN GENERAL. Generally the purchaser's lien may be enforced in an action or suit similar to a proceeding for the foreclosure of a mortgage,<sup>83</sup> brought in a court of competent jurisdiction.<sup>84</sup> In some states it is held that such a suit does not lie until after the rendition of a judgment declaring the invalidity of the tax title;<sup>85</sup> but in others it is not neces-

A decree settling the title to land in the original holder as against a tax purchaser does not bar an action by the latter to recover taxes thereon paid by him in good faith after the sale. Stewart v. Corbin, 38 Iowa 571.

Limitation of actions.—An action by the tax purchaser for the recovery of taxes paid by him upon the land, the title to which has been quieted in the patent owner, will be barred by the statute of limitations in the prescribed period after the taxes became delinquent. *Sexton v. Priority over lien of person redeeming for contribution.—Under Burns Annot. St. Ind. (1908) § 10,379, providing that a tax deed vests in the grantee an absolute fee-simple estate subject to claims of the state for taxes, liens, or encumbrances, the title of a purchaser of land at a tax-sale would be superior to the lien of a part-owner of land who had redeemed it from sale for a ditch assessment for contribution on the land for the shares of the other owners, that lien not being a claim or lien of the state; and if the tax-sale is invalid, the purchaser is still entitled to have his tax lien for the amount ascertained and declared superior to the lien for contribution of the person redeeming from such assessment sale. Ellison v. Branstrattor, (Ind. App. 1909) 88 N. E. 963. The fact that the purchaser at the tax-sale afterward received conveyances of the land from persons holding legal title to it at the time of the tax-sale does not extinguish his lien superior to the other's lien for contribution, but equity will keep it alive to protect his rights. *Ellison v. In Alabama the lien conferred by statute upon the purchaser at an ineffectual tax-sale for the amounts paid thereon and for subsequent taxes paid does not arise except at the end, and as the result, of a judgment in ejectment for the land so sold, and where the lien is not so established, it cannot be enforced by defendant in a suit to quiet title to the land or by a bill in equity to enforce the same. *Geo. Provision in decree setting aside tax-sale or title in purchaser's lien for reimbursement see supra, XIV, B, 9, b, (ii), (A).

fendant, in an action to quiet title against a void tax-sale, need not be given judgment for the amount tendered as a condition precedent to setting aside the sale; but while the court will allow a person, who has paid taxes on land of another in the belief that title is in him, a lien on the land for the amount so paid, when he comes into court and asserts his lien, he may waive the right, and does waive it by failure to assert it. Cordiner v. Finch Inv. Co., 54 Wash. 574, 103 Pac. 829.

Action by assignee of tax purchaser.—Where one buys land from a purchaser thereof at tax-sale and sues to recover it from a third person in possession, if he fails to recover he is not entitled to a lien for the amount which he paid to the original holder of the tax title, although the tax execution may have been a lien on the land. *Maddox v. Disability of owner.—The right of action lien, such as the assessment and amount of the taxes, the sale and his purchase thereat, and the failure of the tax title,<sup>92</sup> and his complaint and evidence must identify and locate the particular land taxed and sold and on which the lien is claimed, if there is any ambiguity or insufficiency of description.<sup>93</sup> On the other hand, the party resisting the enforcement of the lien must sustain the burden of pleading and proving facts which would defeat it, such as the illegality of the tax, the exempt character of the land, the previous payment of the tax, and the like,<sup>94</sup> and defenses will not be regarded which go only to the manner of levying or assessing the taxes or advertising or conducting the sale or the qualification of officers concerned with it.<sup>95</sup> The judgment or decree will be against the owner of the property, for the proper amount, and will direct the foreclosure of the lien in the ordinary manner.<sup>96</sup> The matter of costs and attorney's fees in such actions is regulated by the local statutes.<sup>97</sup>

(II) LIMITATIONS AND LACHES. The right of the purchaser at an invalid tax-sale to enforce his lien against the land is barred by statutes of limitation at in the tax purchaser to foreclose his lien is not affected by the fact that the owner of the land is an infant or an insane person. Leavitt v. Bell, 55 Nebr. 57, 75 N. W. 524.

Life-tenant and remainder-man.—Where only the owner of the life-estate is made defendant in such an action, and the land is sold under a decree of foreclosure of the tax lien, the purchaser acquires only the life-estate, and the lien upon the interest of the remainder-man is discharged. Williams v. Hedrick, 101 Fed. 876, 42 C. C. A. 75.

Apportionment between tenants in common.—In order that tenants in common may obtain an apportionment of liability for taxes, they must show their interests affirmatively in a suit to foreclose his lien by a purchaser at a tax-sale of the property. Jenkins v. Rice, 84 Ind. 342.

One corporation controlling another.—A railroad company owning a majority of the stock and bonds of another company, and whose agents compose a majority of the latter company's directors, is a proper and necessary party in a suit to foreclose a tax lien on the property of the latter company. *Yazoo, etc., R. If it merely gives the aggregate amount, it is not sufficiently definite. Webb v. Bidwell, 15 Minn. 479.

Uniting several tracts of land.—In an action to foreclose a tax lien, plaintiff may join as many tracts of land belonging to the same defendant, on which he holds tax liens, as he may see fit; but he should number and state the tax on each tract separately as a distinct cause of action. McNish v. Perrine, 14 Nebr. 582, 16 N. W. 837.

periods varying in the different states.<sup>98</sup> In some the statute begins to run from the end of the period allowed for redemption,<sup>99</sup> and particularly where the tax purchaser, satisfied of the inutility of an endeavor to recover the property, does not take out a deed.<sup>1</sup> In others it begins to run from the time when he becomes entitled to a deed, rather than from the date of the deed itself;<sup>2</sup> in others, from the failure of title on which the action is based, which occurs, according to some authorities, upon the issuance of a deed which is in fact void,<sup>3</sup> or according to others, upon a judicial declaration of the invalidity of the title.<sup>4</sup> When the statute has run it not merely bars an action but also extinguishes the lien.<sup>5</sup>

4. REIMBURSEMENT BY OWNER — a. Right of Reimbursement in General. At common law the purchaser of land at a void tax-sale cannot recover from the owner, even to the extent to which his purchase operated as payment of a tax legally chargeable on the land, as such payment is regarded as voluntary and not made at the request of the owner.<sup>6</sup> But some of the authorities authorize such a recovery when the tax title is set aside for causes not going to the validity of the tax or of the proceedings for its collection,<sup>7</sup> or where the only ground of invalidity is an error in the assessment.<sup>8</sup> And in some states the laws now provide for the reimbursement of the purchaser by the owner, to an amount equal to the sum which would have been necessary to discharge the land from the taxes if they had not been paid by the purchaser, or for reimbursement for subsequent taxes paid.<sup>9</sup> Such a statute should be liberally construed with a view to promote its objects,<sup>10</sup> and may be given a retroactive operation if that is plainly the intention of the legislature;<sup>11</sup> and a statute of this kind, in force at the time of the sale, vests in the purchaser a valuable right which cannot be divested by the subsequent repeal or modification of the statute.<sup>12</sup>

and also, in some jurisdictions, although not in all, any penalties prescribed for delinquency in the payment of taxes or granted by the statute to the purchaser.<sup>15</sup> The aggregate thus made up is not necessarily the price paid by the purchaser at the sale, nor will it ordinarily include the costs of the sale.<sup>16</sup> But there should be added the amount of subsequent taxes paid by the purchaser in the character of a claimant in good faith, and to the extent to which such payment has relieved the land from a legal charge,<sup>17</sup> except in cases where the tax-sale was absolutely void, as for want of jurisdiction or other such cause; for in this event the payment of subsequent taxes by the purchaser is voluntary and irrevocable.<sup>18</sup>

5. COMPENSATION FOR IMPROVEMENTS — a. Right to Compensation. Where a purchaser at tax-sale has in good faith put valuable improvements upon the land during his occupancy of it, it is commonly provided that he shall be recompensed by the owner for the value of such improvements, when the sale is afterward set aside for irregularities or the purchaser dispossessed by law.<sup>24</sup> But to be entitled to such compensation, the purchaser must have made the improvements after the tax title accrued,<sup>25</sup> in reliance upon that title alone,<sup>26</sup> and before he was notified of the owner's intention to reclaim the land, either by a tender of the amount already due or the institution of a suit.<sup>27</sup> Aside from the statutes dealing exclusively with tax titles, it is also generally held that a similar claim to compensation for improvements may be made under the ordinary "occupying claimants" acts, by a tax purchaser as well as by another.<sup>28</sup>

b. Good Faith and Color of Title. To be entitled to claim reimbursement for improvements, the tax purchaser must have held under color of title and his good faith in the matter must be beyond doubt; and if a fatal infirmity is discoverable on the face of the proceedings, or if the purchaser knows facts which render the tax-sale absolutely void, he cannot recover for betterments.<sup>29</sup> So far as the tax deed is concerned, it is sufficient to justify the purchaser if fair and regular on its face; if obviously invalid, it may still constitute color of title, but may then afford ground to impugn the holder's good faith.<sup>30</sup> But aside from the

c. Amount Claimable For Improvements. At common law, the party in possession of land, failing to make good his title, could not be allowed for improvements anything more than the value of the rents and profits.<sup>32</sup> But the special statutes applicable to these cases allow a recovery of the full cash value of the improvements, or at least the amount by which they are shown to have increased the market value of the land,<sup>33</sup> and in some states without deduction of the rents and profits,<sup>34</sup> but also without interest.<sup>35</sup>

Facts evidencing bad faith.—Where the officer who is charged with making sales of land for taxes becomes the purchaser at such a sale, he is not a claimant in good faith so as to be entitled to compensation for improvements. Clute v. Barrow, 2 Mich. 192. So where a son purchases at tax-sale a homestead set off to his mother (Allen v. Russell, 59 Ohio St. 137, 52 N. E. 121); and where the tax title claimant enters as a mere trespasser (Mumme v. McCloskey, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 83, 66 S. W. 853), or before the expiration of the time allowed for redemption (McLellan v. Omodt, 37 Minn. 157, 33 N. W. 326), or without giving the statutory notice to the former owner (Cook Land, etc., Co. v. McDonald, 155 Mich. 175, 118 N. W. 959; Corrigan v. Davis, 125 Mich. 125, 83 N. W. 1020). But on the other hand, it is said that, although the assessment and other proceedings may be marred by irregularities which would be apparent to the eye of a lawyer, it does not necessarily follow that the tax purchaser may not have had an honest belief in the validity of his title. House v. Stone, 64 Tex. 677. And where the validity or invalidity of the tax-sale must be determined upon the interpretation of a statute of very doubtful import, the holder will not be deprived of his right to reimbursement for improvements. Wederstrandt v. Freyham, 34 La. Ann. 705. And so the bona fides of a tax purchaser is not affected by the constructive notice afforded by a recorded deed of trust on the property. Boatmen's Sav. Bank v. Grewe, 101 Mo. 625, 14 S. W. 708; Whitney v. Richardson, 31 Vt. 300.

Invalid sale of seated land as unseated.—One who purchases land which is sold for taxes in the character of unseated land, and improves it, but knowing that the land was actually seated at the time the tax was assessed and payable, is not entitled to compensation for his improvements. Lynch v. Brudie, 63 Pa. St. 206; Lambertson v. Hogan, 2 Pa. St. 22; Cranmer v. Hall, 4 Watts & S. (Pa.) 36; Hockenbury v. Snyder, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 240; McKee v. Lambertson, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 107; Miller v. Keene, 5 Watts (Pa.) 348.

When a tax-sale is held invalid, the purchaser is entitled to a lien, not only for the amount paid on the purchase and for all taxes thereafter paid in good faith, with proper interest thereon, but also for improvements on and expenditures in caring for the property, and for money expended in having land surveyed to protect the timber against trespass. Hamilton v. Steele, 117 S. W. 378.

Clearing, fencing, and cultivation.—Clearing and fencing agricultural land, and rendering it cultivable, is an improvement of it within the meaning of these statutes, and the tax title claimant may recover the amount so expended. Croskery v. Busch, 116 Mich. 288, 74 N. W. 464; Towle v. Holt, 14 Nebr. 221, 15 N. W. 203. Although plowing and cultivation of land theretofore under cultivation does not constitute a permanent improvement for which a person in possession under a tax deed defeated in ejectment is entitled to compensation, the breaking and reducing of wild land to cultivation does. Gibson v. Fields, 79 Kan. 38, 98 Pac. 1112, 131 Am. St. Rep. 278, 20 L. R. A. N. S. 378.

Where the improvements are also beneficial to adjoining lands owned by the tax title claimant, he is only entitled to such a part of the cost as is proportioned to the land in controversy. Gilbreath v. Dilday, 152 Ill. 207, 38 N. E. 572.

The right to compensation is not affected by the fact that the improvements were made in supposed compliance with a municipal regulation which was void. Flanagan v. Mathisen, 78 Nebr. 412, 110 N. W. 1012.

34. Bender v. Bean, 52 Ark. 132, 12 S. W. 180, 241; Murphy v. Williams, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 56 S. W. 695. In Kansas, where a person in possession under a tax deed defeated in ejectment claims compensation for permanent improvements and taxes paid, reasonable rent without the improvements must be set off, but not rent as increased by the improvements. Gibson v. Fields, 79 Kan. 38, 98 Pac. 1112, 131 Am. St. Rep. 278, 20 L. R. A. N. S. 378. The rent to be offset against a claim for improvements and taxes is to be determined from the cash price paid for like premises during the same time and in the same locality. Gibson v. Fields, supra.

35. Steele v. Spruance, 22 Pa. St. 236.

d. Enforcement of Claim. There are various methods in which the tax title claimant may enforce his right to reimbursement for improvements. He may be adjudged to have a lien on the premises for the amount.<sup>36</sup> When judgment in ejectment or any similar action goes against him, it may be so framed that he cannot be evicted until compensated for his improvements.<sup>37</sup> He may set off such a claim on an accounting for rents and profits,<sup>38</sup> or he may interpose and enforce this claim in an equitable action for redemption.<sup>39</sup> But he cannot have a general money judgment and general execution against the owner of the premises.<sup>40</sup>

XV. PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES.<sup>41</sup>

A. Penalties<sup>42</sup> — 1. POWER TO IMPOSE. The power to levy and assess taxes includes the power to adopt such measures as will make their collection prompt and effective,<sup>43</sup> always having a regard to the requirement of due process of law,<sup>44</sup> and this includes the authority to impose penalties for delay or refusal to pay taxes justly due and for concealing taxable property or otherwise seeking to obstruct or defeat the operation of the revenue laws,<sup>45</sup> the amount of such penalties being in the discretion of the legislature, within reasonable limitations.<sup>46</sup>

2. STATUTORY PROVISIONS. A penal statute of this character will be construed strictly,<sup>47</sup> and not extended by implication to any taxes not clearly within its terms,<sup>48</sup> nor will it be given a retroactive operation unless the intention of the

See 45 Cent. Dig. tit. "Taxation," § 1650. See also infra, XV, A, 3, b, c.

Penalty as damages for breach of contract.—In Morrison v. Larkin, 26 La. Ann. 699, the right to impose penalties for the non-payment of taxes is put on the somewhat fanciful ground that there is an implied contract on the part of the individual to pay his share of the public burdens, and if he fails to meet this obligation he should pay damages for its breach.

Double punishment for same offense.—A statute imposing a penalty for refusal to give a list of all taxable property does not, on account of there being another statute imposing a penalty for furnishing a false or fraudulent list, violate a bill of rights provision that no person shall be twice punished for the same offense, as the two wrongs are not identical. Burgh v. State, 108 Ind. 132, 9 N. E. 75.

Excessive penalties.—Under the usual constitutional provision that "excessive fines shall not be imposed," it is held that a penalty prescribed by statute for failure to pay taxes is to be considered a "fine," and the statute may be invalid on this ground if the penalties imposed are excessive or liable to become so by accumulation. State v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., 100 Tex. 153, 97 S. W. 71 [reversing (Civ. App. 1906) 93 S. W. 464, and reversed on other grounds in 210 U. S. 217, 28 S. Ct. 638, 52 L. ed. 1031].

Interest as penalty.—A statute providing for the collection of interest on unpaid taxes at the rate of one per cent a month creates a penalty. People v. Peacock, 98 Ill. 172. And see Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. West, 139 Ind. 254, 37 N. E. 1009.

48. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 217 Ill. 164, 75 N. E. 368; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Com., 98 S. W. 1008, 30 Ky. L. Rep. 190; Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. v. Traylor, 104 La. 284, 29 So. 141.

legislature in that behalf is very manifest.<sup>49</sup> That body may at any time repeal a statute imposing such penalties and remit the penalties;<sup>50</sup> but the repeal of a statute under which penalties for the non-payment of taxes have already accrued will not affect the liability of the owner for the amount of such penalties.<sup>51</sup>

3. GROUNDS FOR IMPOSITION OF PENALTIES — a. In General. Penalties may be and are imposed for any conduct on the part of the taxpayer which prevents or obstructs the just application of the revenue laws to his taxable property, as where he neglects or refuses to list his property for assessment or makes a false return,<sup>52</sup> or where he wilfully neglects or refuses to pay the taxes assessed against him;<sup>53</sup> so also where he fraudulently conceals his property from the assessors or misrepresents it,<sup>54</sup> or where, for the fraudulent purpose of escaping taxation, he transfers it to another person or temporarily converts it into non-taxable securities.<sup>55</sup>

b. Failure to List or Report Property or Making False List. Where the law prescribes a penalty for the neglect or refusal to file a list or inventory of property for taxation, the simple failure to do so, without a valid excuse, is ordinarily sufficient ground for the imposition of the penalty,<sup>56</sup> provided a proper demand for such list or return has first been made if that is also a requirement of the statute;<sup>57</sup> and so also of the refusal to verify a list or return.<sup>58</sup> But where the ground for the penalty is the making of a false list or return, it must be made false intentionally or through culpable negligence, not as the consequence of an honest doubt or mistake,<sup>59</sup> and, in accordance with the rule of strict construction Filing personally with clerk of court.—Although under Ky. Gen. St. art. 1, c. 92, § 11, a non-resident owning lands within a certain county, who went in person to the assessor and listed the lands owned by him in that county within the proper time, was thereby exempted from the penalty for failure to file a descriptive list thereof with the clerk of the county court in the time required by law (Com. v. Ellis, 9 S. W. 221, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 341); such a listing with the assessor was not sufficient under Ky. St. 4039, before its amendment in 1900 (Com. v. Lauth, 56 S. W. 519, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 4), especially when the listing was done by a non-resident corporation through a local agent of limited authority, instead of through one of its officers (*Com. v. applicable to statutes of this character,<sup>60</sup> it is held that a statute providing a penalty for refusal to furnish a "statement" does not authorize a penalty for a false statement,<sup>61</sup> or for refusal to furnish lists, reports, or schedules required by other statutes.<sup>62</sup>

c. Failure to Pay Taxes.<sup>63</sup> In many states the law authorizes the imposition of a penalty for the neglect or failure to pay taxes when due.<sup>64</sup> But no additional charge by way of penalty can be made unless expressly authorized by statute,<sup>65</sup> or until the taxpayer has been accorded the full time allowed by law in which to make a voluntary payment,<sup>66</sup> or unless his neglect or omission was intentional or inexcusable.<sup>67</sup>

4. EXCUSES AND DEFENSES. The courts will not enforce a penalty against the taxpayer where he makes a good defense against its imposition or shows a legally sufficient excuse for the delinquency charged.<sup>68</sup> It is held a sufficient ground for refusing to enforce the penalty that the officers did not give the taxpayer the notice or demand to which he was entitled;<sup>69</sup> that the tax was illegal or illegally levied;<sup>70</sup> that he tendered or offered to pay so much of the tax as was legal, resisting payment only of an illegal excess;<sup>71</sup> that he made an honest mistake as to the amount, extent, or value of his taxable property;<sup>72</sup> that he entertained a sincere and reasonable belief that the particular property was exempt or was not taxable,<sup>73</sup> particularly where such belief was founded on the advice of counsel,<sup>74</sup> or was the subject of judicial consideration, or such as fairly to warrant a resort to the courts.<sup>75</sup> In some cases also impossibility of performance has been accepted as a sufficient excuse.<sup>76</sup> But an erroneous or excessive assessment is not a good excuse for non-payment of the proper amount,<sup>77</sup> nor any informalities in the qualification or bond of the assessor.<sup>78</sup> Neither can the taxpayer relieve himself by a belated payment of the taxes after the penalty has accrued or suit has been brought to enforce it.<sup>79</sup>

5. 7. ACTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS TO RECOVER PENALTIES <sup>89</sup> — a. In General. A proceeding to recover such a penalty is not a criminal prosecution to be commenced by indictment, but a penal action,<sup>90</sup> which is to be brought on the relation of the proper public officer,<sup>91</sup> within the time limited by law for such proceedings,<sup>92</sup> and must be supported by a complaint setting out sufficiently all the essentials of a cause of action for the recovery of the penalty,<sup>93</sup> to which defendant must plead according to the form of the action and the nature of his defense,<sup>94</sup> and in which the ordinary rules of evidence and procedure are applicable.<sup>95</sup> Sometimes, however, such a penalty may be recovered in a suit brought to recover the taxes proper,<sup>96</sup> or to have omitted property assessed.<sup>97</sup>

b. Amount of Penalty and Interest. The imposition of such penalties will be strictly and carefully limited to the exact amounts and the precise contingencies laid down in the law; anything beyond this is null and void.<sup>98</sup> But penal-

See Cedar Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41 Iowa 153, holding that the fact that penalties have largely accumulated while litigation has been pending respecting the validity of a tax will not justify a court of equity in remitting or diminishing them.

Value and description of property.—In actions to recover penalties, under the Indiana statutes, for failure to list property for taxation, or for making a false or fraudulent list, the complaint need not allege the value of the property (La Plante v. State, 152 Ind. 80, 52 N. E. 452), or that it is of any value (Swift v. State, 3 Ind. App. 285, 29 N. E. 488). nor need there be filed, with the complaint, copies of the false lists (State v. Halter, 149 Ind. 292, 47 N. E. 665, 49 N. E. 7), or the list actually made in case the action is for omission (La Plante v. State, supra). In Kentucky a general description of the property is sufficient, at least in the absence of a motion to make more specific. Belknap v. Com., 120 Ky. 59, 85 S. W. 693, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 473; *Bishop v. Summons.—Under the Kentucky statutes providing for the making up of issues of fact upon a summons issued by the clerk, it is a condition precedent to the issuance of the summons that the taxpayer be returned a delinquent (Evans v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 269), and it is essential to the sufficiency of the summons that it state the nature and elements of the violation of law which forms the basis of the suit (Evans v. Com., supra; McCall v. Justices Clark County Ct., 1 Bibb (Ky.) 516).

ties may be cumulative if the statute so directs; that is, a pecuniary penalty may be cumulative to one of a different nature,<sup>99</sup> and if the taxes on the same property for several years in succession remain unpaid, it may be proper to assess a penalty for each year the default continues,<sup>1</sup> although it is not generally considered permissible to assess annually the same penalty on the same tax; that is, each separate annual tax may bear a separate penalty, but continued delinquency as to the tax of a given year does not authorize the annual repetition of the penalty on that tax.<sup>2</sup> Neither should the penalties be compounded.<sup>3</sup> Interest on the amount of an accrued penalty is recoverable if the statute expressly authorizes it,<sup>4</sup> but not otherwise.<sup>5</sup>

B. Forfeiture of Property Delinquent <sup>6</sup> — 1. CONSTITUTIONALITY OF STATUTES. Notwithstanding some decisions to the contrary,<sup>7</sup> it is now generally held that statutes authorizing the forfeiture to the state of lands on which the taxes have remained delinquent for a certain length of time are not unconstitutional if they also give the taxpayer notice and an opportunity to be heard and provide for some form of judicial inquiry and adjudication.<sup>8</sup>

Provisions for redemption by or on behalf of the owner of the whole, or such part of the land as he may desire to redeem, or for a sale thereof and the return of the proceeds to the owner after deduction of all taxes and proper charges therefrom, must be incorporated in a statute relating to forfeiture for taxes in order to afford the due process of law guaranteed by the constitution of the United States. King v. Hatfield, 130 Fed. 564.

Municipal corporations have no power to confiscate and sell property of citizens for failure to pay taxes on the same. Halloway v. Livingston Police Jury, 16 La. Ann. 203.

2. CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTES. An intention to work an absolute and irredeemable forfeiture of delinquent lands will not be inferred if the statute is susceptible of any milder construction;<sup>9</sup> and a statute of forfeiture is to be construed strictly in regard to the due observance of all the steps necessary to effect a divestiture of the title;<sup>10</sup> while, on the other hand, statutes giving relief from forfeitures are to be construed liberally in favor of the taxpayer.<sup>11</sup> In other particulars the ordinary rules of interpretation apply.<sup>12</sup>

3. CAUSES OF FORFEITURE. If the statute so directs, a forfeiture may be incurred by the failure of the owner to list or report his land for taxation or have it entered on the proper books for that purpose.<sup>13</sup> But the most usual cause of forfeiture is the failure to pay the taxes charged against the land.<sup>14</sup> To make a forfeiture on his ground valid, however, it is essential that the property should have been duly and legally assessed and under a description by which it can be identified,<sup>15</sup> and there can be no forfeiture if the taxes were actually paid,<sup>16</sup> even though by one other than the true owner,<sup>17</sup> nor unless there has been a strict compliance with the statutory provisions as to reporting, returning, or recording the land as delinquent, advertising it, and other such preliminary steps.<sup>18</sup>

Kentucky statute construed.—It being notoriously true that there was a large number of outstanding patents in the hands of non-residents, some of whom were unknown, and who had persistently for a long period of years failed or refused to return their lands for taxation, the object of the Kentucky statute relating to forfeiture was to compel these owners to list their lands for taxation, or to give up their claim to the land covered by their patents. It was never the intention of the legislature, where an owner in good faith had each year after he received his patent listed what he believed was all the land he could legally claim under it, that, if it developed that there was more than was returned, the remainder might be forfeited to the state. Lockhard v. Com., 133 Ky. 369, 118 S. W. 331.

Listing and payment of taxes in the name of one in privity of title with the person in possession and holding the real title is sufficient (Kelley v. Dearman, 65 W. Va. 49, 63 S. W. 693; Blake v. O'Neal, 63 W. Va. 483, 61 S. E. 410, 16 L. R. A. N. S. 1147); and in this connection it is held that forfeiture of title to minerals in land for non-entry on the land books cannot be predicated on mere severance in title of the minerals from the surface and lapse of time, since presumptively the land was taxed as a whole when the severance occurred and has since been carried on the land book in the same manner and the taxes paid (Sult v. A. Hochstetter Oil Co., 63 W. Va. 317, 61 S. E. 307).

4. PERSONS AGAINST WHOM FORFEITURE MAY BE ENFORCED. A forfeiture of land for non-payment of taxes can be enforced only against the proper owner at the time being;<sup>19</sup> if the proceedings are in the name of a former owner, who has sold and conveyed the property to another, no title passes.<sup>20</sup>

5. PROCEEDINGS FOR ENFORCEMENT. The proceedings to enforce such a forfeiture vary in the different states, but in nearly all it is agreed that the mere failure to pay the taxes does not effect a forfeiture, but there must be some form of judicial inquiry or proceeding,<sup>21</sup> of which the owner shall have notice and in which he shall be accorded an opportunity to be heard,<sup>22</sup> and resulting in a judgment,<sup>23</sup> which can be authorized only by showing full compliance with the statutory directions as to preliminary proceedings,<sup>24</sup> and which should correctly describe and identify the land in question,<sup>25</sup> but which, having the character of an adjudication in rem, is binding and conclusive on all persons in interest.<sup>26</sup>

6. OPERATION AND EFFECT.<sup>27</sup> According to the theory prevailing in different states, a forfeiture of land for delinquent taxes may vest an absolute and irredeemable title in the state,<sup>28</sup> or an equitable title subject to a right of redemption
