To

CHARLES WALTER DUMONT

more than to any other man is due the existence of the Cyclopeda of Law and Procedure. His was the idea; his was the plan; and his has been the business ability and energetic management, as organizer and president of The American Law Book Company, which have made possible the successful publication of these volumes, which are therefore respectfully dedicated to him.

William Mack.

Private road as highway see PRIVATE ROADS, 32 Cyc. 366 et seq.

Public square.—The term "highway" is properly applied to so much of a public square as is around and about the court-house, and devoted to the purpose of a highway. It belongs to the public, and they use it of right until public authority shall abolish it, although there be no overseer of it, for an overseer is not essential to the existence of a highway. State v. Eastman, 109 N. C. 785, 787, 13 S. E. 1019.

A sidewalk is as much a part of the highway as the traveled wagon road is. People v. Meyer, 26 Misc. (N. Y.) 117, 119, 56 N. Y. Suppl. 1097. See also Martinovich v. Wooley, 128 Cal. 141, 143, 60 Pac. 760; Ex p.

by land or by water.<sup>2</sup> Ordinarily, however, the term is confined to public ways

Taylor, 87 Cal. 91, 96, 25 Pac. 258; Marini v. Graham, 67 Cal. 130, 132, 7 Pac. 442; Bonnet v. San Francisco, 65 Cal. 230, 231, 3 Pac. 815; Denver Bd. of Public Works v. Hayden, 13 Colo. App. 36, 56 Pac. 201, 204; Frankfort v. Coleman, 19 Ind. App. 368, 49 N. E. 474, 475, 65 Am. St. Rep. 412; Challiss v. Parker, 11 Kan. 384, 391.

Toll-road as highway see TOLL-ROADS.

Town way.—Under the system of public ways prevalent in some of the New England states a highway is a public way leading from town to town or place to place, in contradistinction to private ways for the use of the inhabitants of a particular town. Waterford v. Oxford County Com'rs, 59 Me. 450, 452; Harding v. Medway, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 465, 469; Com. v. Newbury, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 51, 56; Com. v. Charlestown, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 180, 188, 11 Am. Dec. 161. So in Quebec where one side of a road runs along the boundary line between two local municipalities, although such road is wholly situate in one of them, it is a county road. Walsh v. St. Anicet Parish, 25 Quebec Super. Ct. 319, 320. The distinction between highways, technically so-called, and town ways or private ways, consists in the fact that the former are laid out and may be altered or discontinued by the authorities having jurisdiction throughout the county, such as the county court, the court of general sessions, and, in modern times, the county commissioners, while the latter are laid out and may be altered or discontinued by the selectmen, with the approval of the town. In other respects they are alike, and equally parts of the system of public ways. Butchers' Slaughtering, etc., Assoc. v. Boston, 139 Mass. 290, 291, 30 N. E. 94; Denham v. Bristol County, 108 Mass. 202, 205; Flagg v. Flagg, 16 Gray (Mass.) 175, 179; Valentine v. Boston, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 75, 80, 33 Am. Dec. 711. And see Davis v. Smith, 130 Mass. 113. So in New York under the colonial laws, a country road was one which belonged to the country, and was under the direct charge of the country, as distinguished from the owners of the towns and manors; and it was a necessary line of communication between sparsely settled communities, and it was for the better laying out, repairing, and preserving the public and general highways within the colony that the legislation as to such roads was adopted. Townsend v. Brookhaven, 97 N. Y. App. Div. 316, 327, 89 N. Y. Suppl. 982. In common acceptance, however, the term "highway" means a public way, and includes a town way. Wells v. York County Com'rs, 79 Me. 522, 528, 11 Atl. 417; Cleaves v. Jordan, 34 Me. 9, 12; Clark v. Hull, 184 Mass. 164, 166, 68 N. E. 60; Blackstone v. Worcester County, 108 Mass. 68; Harding v. Medway, supra; Com. v. Hubbard, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 98; Com. v. Charlestown, supra. Contra, Com. v. Newbury, supra. In Maine, when the term is used in a statute, its import is restricted to county roads or county ways (Wells v.

York County Com'rs, 79 Me. 522, 528, 11 Atl. 417; Waterford v. Oxford County Com'rs, supra; Cleaves v. Jordan, supra), unless its connection should require some different construction (Cleaves v. Jordan, supra). In Massachusetts, however, the term is given its ordinary meaning (Janvrin v. Poole, 181 Mass. 463, 464, 63 N. E. 1066; Harding v. Medway, supra; Com. v. Hubbard, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 98, 101; Jones v. Andover, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 59, 61), unless it appears that the legislature used it in its narrower sense (Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Boston, 140 Mass. 87, 88, 2 N. E. 943; Jones v. Andover, supra).

A wharf, simply as such, and not being part of a street, is not a highway. State v. Cowan, 29 N. C. 239, 247.

Statutory construction.—As used in various statutes the term "highway" is sometimes given a narrower meaning. Mills v. State, 20 Ala. 86, 88; State v. Harden, 11 S. C. 360, 368 (in both of which cases neighborhood roads were held not to be highways); Territory v. Richardson, 8 Ariz. 336, 339, 76 Pac. 456; Wells v. York County Com'rs, 79 Me. 522, 528, 11 Atl. 417 (where the term "highway" was held not to include town ways); Paine Lumber Co. v. Oshkosh, 89 Wis. 449, 457, 61 N. W. 1108 (where the term "highway" was held not to include roads dedicated by private owners).

2. Minnesota.—Northwestern Tel. Exch. Co. v. Minneapolis, 81 Minn. 140, 154, 83 N. W. 527, 86 N. W. 69, 53 L. R. A. 175

New York.—In re Burns, 155 N. Y. 23, 29, 49 N. E. 246 [reversing 16 N. Y. App. Div. 507, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 930], the sea and the Great Lakes.

South Carolina.—Heyward v. Chisolm, 11 Rich. 253, 263.

United States.—Abbott v. Duluth, 104 Fed. 833, 837 [affirmed in 117 Fed. 137, 55 C. C. A. 153].

Canada.—Styles v. Victoria, 8 Brit. Col. 406, 414.

A canal is a highway. Shelby County v. Castetter, 7 Ind. App. 309, 33 N. E. 986, 987, 34 N. E. 687; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Colfax County, 4 Nebr. 450, 456; Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Dover, etc., R. Co., 43 N. J. L. 528, 531; Barnett v. Johnson, 15 N. J. Eq. 481, 485 (holding that a canal is a "public highway," and is not the less so because of the tolls charged, or by reason of its being subject to the regulations of the company operating it); In re Burns, 155 N. Y. 23, 26, 49 N. E. 246 [reversing 16 N. Y. App. Div. 507, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 930]; Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Oklahoma City, 12 Okla. 82, 94, 69 Pac. 1050; Bonaparte v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,617, Baldw. 205, 223. And see New Town Cut v. Seabrook, 3 Strobb. (S. C.) 380. See, generally, CANALS, 6 Cyc. 267.

A navigable river is a highway. Arkansas River Packet Co. v. Sorrels, 50 Ark. 466, 8 S. W. 683; Shelby County v. Castetter, 7 Ind. App. 309, 33 N. E. 986, 987, 34 N. E. 687; Morgan v. Reading, 3 Sm. & M. (Miss.)

Origin and development.—In the most primitive state of society the conception of a highway was merely a foot-path; in a slightly more advanced state it included the idea of a way for pack animals; and, next, roads,<sup>5</sup> streets and alleys in incorporated cities, towns, and villages,<sup>6</sup> and public ways of every description.<sup>7</sup> It accordingly includes not only public ways devoted to vehicular transportation,<sup>8</sup> but also public ways of all kinds, including a way for vehicles drawn by animals, constituting, respectively, the "iter," the "actus," and the "via" of the Romans. And thus the methods of using public highways expanded with the growth of civilization, until to-day our urban highways are devoted to a variety of uses not known in former times, and never dreamed of by the owners of the soil when the public easement was acquired. Cater v. Northwestern Tel. Exch. Co., 60 Minn. 539, 543, 63 N. W. 111, 51 Am. St. Rep. 543, 28 L. R. A. 310. And see Boyden v. Achenbach, 79 N. C. 539, 541. Highways "are of many kinds, varying with the state of civilization and wealth of the country through which they are constructed, and according to the extent of the traffic to be carried on upon them." Shelby County v. Castetter, 7 Ind. App. 309, 33 N. E. 986, 987, 34 N. E. 687.

Nature.—A public highway is a perpetual easement and a freehold estate. Taylor v. Pierce, 174 Ill. 9, 11, 50 N. E. 1109; Crete v. Hewes, 168 Ill. 330, 332, 48 N. E. 36; Chaplin v. Highway Com'rs, 126 Ill. 264, 271, 18 N. E. 765.

The way must be public else it is not a highway (Coulter v. Great Northern R. Co., 5 N. D. 568, 67 N. W. 1046, 1050. And see infra, II, B, 2, b), although it is the right to travel upon a way by all the world, and not the exercise of the right, which makes the way a highway (In re New York, 135 N. Y. 253, 260, 31 N. E. 1043, 31 Am. St. Rep. 825), and a road open to the public is a public road, although one person will be most benefited by it (Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Baudat, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 595, 600, 45 S. W. 939). It is essential to the notion of a highway that its use must be common to all citizens. Sun Printing, etc., Assoc. v. New York, 8 N. Y. App. Div. 230, 283, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 607 [affirmed in 152 N. Y. 257, 46 N. E. 499, 37 L. R. A. 788]. To constitute a highway, it must be one to which all the people of the state have a common and equal right to travel, and in which they have a common, and at least general, interest to keep unobstructed. Talbot v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 31 Gratt. (Va.) 685, 692. Accordingly the term "public highway" is a tautological expression, since a highway is a passage, road, or street which every citizen has a right to use, and is therefore necessarily public. Walton v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 67 Mo. 56, 57; Jenkins v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 27 Mo. App. 578, 583. And the public includes strangers as well as inhabitants of the district where the way exists. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Davis, 130 Ill. 146, 150, 22 N. E. 850; Lynch v. Rutland, 66 Vt. 570, 573, 29 Atl. 1015; Slicer v. Hyde Park, 55 Vt. 481, 482.

Necessity of practical passage.—The word "highway" imports a practicable passage. It is a contradiction in terms to speak of an impassable highway. Armstrong v. St. Louis, Loose use of terms.—An examination of the authorities will show that the terms "street," "avenue," "road," "public road," "county road," etc., are used loosely and indiscriminately in legislation and judicial decisions relating to public highways, and little reliance can be placed on the particular term used to describe any given way. Undoubtedly the term "street" or "avenue" commonly applies to a public highway in a village, town, or city, and the term "road" to suburban highways. But there may be roads in a city or town and streets and avenues in the country. Murphy v. King County, 45 Wash. 587, 591, 88 Pac. 1115.

A presumption of prior dedication of the land to public use is sometimes said to be the basis of prescription as applied to highways. Rosser v. Bunn, 66 Ala. 89; State v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 45 Iowa 139; Kruger v. Le Blanc, 70 Mich. 76, 37 N. W. 880.

however, the doctrine of prescription, as applied to highways, is based on the presumption of an antecedent exercise of the power of eminent domain by the proper authorities.<sup>31</sup> However this may be, it is unquestionably true that by common usage the term "prescription" and the rules applicable to estates held by prescription have been applied to the tenure of the right of the public in a highway which rests on user, so that it may be deemed not improper to say that a highway may exist by prescription.<sup>32</sup> Apart from this, in many states statutes kept in repair by the public authorities at the public expense,<sup>34</sup> or simply where it has been worked or recognized as a highway by the public authorities.<sup>35</sup>

2. SUFFICIENCY OF USER — a. In General. To establish a highway by prescription the land in question must have been used by the public<sup>36</sup> with the actual or implied knowledge of the landowner,<sup>37</sup> adversely under claim or color of right, and not merely by the owner's permission,<sup>38</sup> and continuously and uninterruptedly,<sup>39</sup> for the period required to bar an action for the recovery of possession of land or otherwise prescribed by statute.<sup>40</sup> When these conditions are present a highway exists by prescription;<sup>41</sup> otherwise not.<sup>42</sup>

b. Public User and Adaptability of Way Thereto. To create a highway by prescription the user must be by the public generally as a way common to all. A user by a few individuals as such is not generally sufficient.<sup>43</sup> The word

In Virginia, the act of Oct. 31, 1751, and the act passed in the fourth year of the reign of Queen Anne, providing for the laying out of public roads "where the same is not already done," and "that the highways already laid out . . . shall . . . be kept well cleared . . . at least thirty foot broad," does not establish as public highways all roads that are shown to have been in use at the date of the passage of those statutes. Gaines v. Merryman, 95 Va. 660, 29 S. E. 738.

Effect on common-law prescription.—Dak. Terr. Laws (1883), c. 112, declaring all public roads which had been opened and in use as such for twenty years prior to the taking effect of the act to be public highways, whether lawfully established or not, did not repeal Dak. Pol. Code (1877), c. 29, § 37, or prevent roads from thereafter becoming public highways by prescription. Walcott Tp. v. Skauge, 6 N. D. 382, 71 N. W. 544.

Operation of statute.—Mich. Rev. St. c. 25, § 29, providing that all roads not recorded which have been used as highways twenty years or more shall be deemed public highways, applies not only to cases where the period of twenty years had elapsed at the taking effect of the law, but also to cases where the full period should not elapse until afterward. Bumpus v. Miller, 4 Mich. 159.

“public,” as used in this connection, means all those who have occasion to use the road;<sup>44</sup> and the public character of a road does not depend upon the extent or quantity of travel if it is open and in use by all who have occasion to go over it;<sup>45</sup> nor is the fact that the public travel thereon bears an insignificant proportion to private travel necessarily decisive against its becoming a highway.<sup>46</sup> While a road, to become a highway, must be so situated and so conditioned as to be available to the traveling public,<sup>47</sup> yet it need not be of great length,<sup>48</sup> or connect prominent points,<sup>49</sup> or be open at both ends.<sup>50</sup> A New England town way may become a county way or highway by prescription.<sup>51</sup>

c. Definiteness of Line of Travel. The public cannot acquire a prescriptive right to pass over a tract of land generally. In order to create a highway by prescription the user must be confined to a definite and specific line or way.<sup>52</sup>

Slight deviations from the common way within the prescriptive period do not preclude the creation of a highway by prescription. Gentleman v. Soule, 32 Ill. 271, 83 Am. Dec. 264 (holding, however, that the time in which various distinct lines of travel to a certain point have been used cannot be united, so as to make up the requisite time to establish a prescriptive right to any given line of road); Berry v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 124 Mo. App. 436, 101 S. W. 714; Nelson v. Jenkins, 42 Nebr. 133, 60 N. W. 311; Bayard v. Standard Oil Co., 38 Oreg. 438, 63 Pac. 614 (semble); Cunningham v. So encroachments upon a road or changes in the line of travel at other and distant points do not prevent the road from becoming a highway by user at points where the line of travel has remained substantially unchanged. Hart v. Red Cedar, 63 Wis. 634, 24 N. W. 410. Width of highway see infra, II, B, 6, b.

Travel over entire length.—The fact that a large portion of the travel over a public road, instead of passing over the entire length of such road, turned off and passed over a shorter route to the city, will not prevent the running of the statute in favor of the public as to the portion not generally used, where there has not been an entire nonuser of such road. Beatrice v. Black, 28 Nebr. 263, 44 N. W. 189. See, however, South Branch R. Co. v. Parker, 41 N. J. Eq. 489, 5 Atl. 641. And compare State v. Nudd, 23 N. H. 327.

What constitutes interruption defeating prescription.—Any unambiguous act by the landowner that evinces an intention to exclude the public defeats prescription. Harper v. State, 109 Ala. 66, 19 So. 901; Shellhouse v. State, 110 Ind. 509, 11 N. E. 484; Megrath v. Nickerson, 24 Wash. 235, 64 Pac. 163; Stone v. Jackson, 16 C. B. 199, 81 E. C. L. 199. And see Whaley v. Wilson, 120 Ala. 502, 24 So. 855. It has been said, however, that the interruption, to defeat the right of prescription, must be an interruption of the right, and not simply of the use or possession. Madison Tp. v. Gallagher, 159 Ill. 105, 42 N. E. 316; Toof v. Decatur, 19 Ill. App. 204. The interruption must be actual and substantial. Chicago v. Howes, 169 Ill. 260, 48 N. E. 408 (holding that twenty years' use by the public of a strip of land within an alley without interruption save from temporary obstructions not of a character to exclude the public from the strip or to show an appropriation of it to private use creates a public easement therein; and that constructing a narrow sidewalk along one side of the alley and placing posts along its outer edge are not such acts by the owner as are inconsistent with the use of the whole alley as a public highway); Madison Tp. v. Gallagher, supra; Toof v. Decatur, supra; Greene County Com'rs v. Huff, 91 Ind. 333 (holding that the fact that the owner used the way to carry off surface water did not defeat prescription, where such use was not incompatible with the use of the way as a highway); Weld v. Brooks, 152 Mass. 297, 25 N. E. 719; Ellsworth v. Grand Rapids, 27 Mich. 250 (holding that the mere recording of a plat which ignores the existence of a road in actual use is not such an interference with the public use of the road as to affect the running of limitations); Power v. Dean, 112 Mo. App. 288, 86 S. W. 1100 (holding that the mere fact that a road was permissively used by adjoining landowners as a cattle lot, but without obstructing it as a roadway, is insufficient to break the continuity of an adverse user); State v. Auchard, 22 Mont. 14, 55 Pac. 361; Speir v. Utrecht, 121 N. Y. 420, 24 N. E. 692 [modifying 49 Hun 294, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 426] (holding that the fact that during part of the twenty years that a strip of land was used by the public generally for travel there were railroad tracks on a part of the strip would not prevent the strip from becoming a highway by user); Ferrell v. Ferrell, 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 329 (holding that there must be an actual and substantial suspension of the use by intervention of the owner, either by adverse occupancy or by suit); Ft. Worth v. Cetti, 38 Tex. Civ. App. 117, 85 S. W. 826 (holding that a judgment for plaintiff in a suit to foreclose a vendor's lien on land, a street through which has been dedicated by the purchaser, does not as a matter of law interrupt an adverse use of the street theretofore begun by the public); Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Baudat, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 236, 51 S. W. 541; Rhodes v. Halvorson, 120 Wis. 99, 97 N. W. 514. Mere verbal objection by the owner, without more, is insufficient to defeat prescription. Devenpeck v. Lambert, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 596. Fences and gates as obstruction see infra, this section.

If a prescriptive right is afterward asserted from subsequent user, the time necessary to perfect it must begin anew, and be computed from the date of such interruption. Whaley v. Wilson, 120 Ala. 502, 24 So. 855; Shellhouse v. State, 110 Ind. 509, 11 N. E. 484.

<sup>56</sup> Madison Tp. v. Gallagher, 159 Ill. 105, 42 N. E. 316 (holding that interruptions by a mere trespasser are of no effect); Goelet v. Newport, 14 R. I. 295 (holding that in order to work an interruption the entry must be by the legal owner of the soil in the assertion of his right).

user.<sup>57</sup> Hence if the landowner obstructs free travel by means of gates or fences, it ordinarily prevents the public from acquiring a highway by prescription.<sup>58</sup>

e. Hostility of User; Color or Claim of Right; Permissive User — (1) IN GENERAL. Mere user of another's land by the public as for a highway is insufficient of itself to establish a highway by prescription.<sup>59</sup> The user must be adverse and

Gate as allowing travel.—The fact that the landowner places a gate in a fence which he erects across a claimed highway (State v. Cipra, 71 Kan. 714, 81 Pac. 488), and leaves it unlocked (Shell v. Poulson, 23 Wash. 535, 63 Pac. 204), does not affect the rule stated in the text. And see cases cited supra, this note.

However, putting up a fence or barrier across a way does not necessarily, as matter of law, constitute an interruption of the use of the way claimed by prescription, in the absence of evidence of the occasion or circumstances or effect of the act. Weld v. Brooks, 152 Mass. 297, 25 N. E. 719. Thus fences with gates erected solely to keep cattle from straying do not defeat prescription. Clark v. Hull, 184 Mass. 164, 68 N. E. 60; *Sikes v. So where plaintiff fenced in a part of the originally traveled road, which had been used for seven or eight years, and established a new road in another place, with the intention that the road as changed should be used by the public, and it was so used for eight or nine years, the act of plaintiff, not being hostile to the right of the public, did not interrupt the running of the statute so as to prevent the whole road from becoming a highway by adverse possession. *Berry v. See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 10.

Adverse user of a highway imports an assertion of right, on the part of those traveling the road, hostile to the owner of the land over which the highway runs. St. Andrews Parish Tp. Com'rs v. Charleston Min., etc., Co., 76 S. C. 382, 57 S. E. 201. Accordingly a highway is not established where no act of control or dominion over the land was exercised or asserted by the public authorities (Hill v. McGinnis, 64 Nebr. 187, 89 N. W. 783. Recognition, maintenance, and repair by public authorities see infra, II, B, 2, e, (III)), or where the use was not inconsistent with the use of the land by the owner (Dexter v. Tree, 117 Ill. 532, 6 N. E. 506; Heilbron v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1908) 113 S. W. 610, 979). So where a city seeks to establish a highway by prescription along a railroad right of way, evidence that the city, during the period it claims adverse user, had recognized the company's right of way as an easement or by title is material and competent. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Bloomington, 167 Ill. 9, 47 N. E. 318.

Levy of taxes on land in dispute.—While the fact that the municipality has levied and collected taxes or special assessments on the land claimed as a highway within the prescriptive period tends to rebut the claim of adverse user (Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Bloomington, 167 Ill. 9, 47 N. E. 318; Huntington v. Townsend, 29 Ind. App. 269, 63 N. E. 36. And see Haan v. Meester, 132 Iowa 709, 109 N. W. 211), it is not conclusive against the claim that the land is a highway (Toof v. Decatur, 19 Ill. App. 204), especially where the highway did not cover all the tract on which the tax was levied (Cedar Rapids v. Young, 119 Iowa 552, 93 N. W. 567). And where the public has already acquired an easement by user in a highway, the listing of the land for taxes and the payment thereof by the owner do not affect the rights of the public in the land. Campau v. Detroit, 104 Mich. 560, 62 N. W. 718.

However, it is not always necessary to show some aggressively hostile act by the public, but the adverse character of the user may be presumed from the facts and circumstances of the case. Barnes v. Daveck, 7 Cal. App. 220, 487, 94 Pac. 779; Earle v. Poat, 63 S. C. 439, 41 S. E. 525 (holding that where the public has for twenty years asserted the right to a way for public purposes, it is sufficient to carry with it an adverse use by the public); Hall v. Austin, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 59, 48 S. W. 53 (holding that a highway by prescription may be established without other evidence of the assertion of an adverse claim than that afforded by the nature of the use). And see McAllister v. Pickup, 84 Iowa 65, 50 N. W. 556.

Burden of proof.—Where the public claims title to the easement in a highway by user, the burden rests on the state to show adverse possession. State v. Fisher, 117 N. C. 733, 23 S. E. 158. And where plaintiff sued for land included in a deed from his father, land.<sup>61</sup> A user by license or permission of the owner of the land sought to be impressed with a public easement of travel is not adverse, and affords no basis for prescription,<sup>62</sup> which land defendants claimed the prescriptive right to use as a road, plaintiff's evidence of title and that defendants' use of the road had been merely permissive established a prima facie case, and placed the burden on defendants to prove their adverse holding. Rose v. Stephens, (Ky. 1908) 112 S. W. 676.

Highway prescription acts.—In New York, it seems, the words, "used as public highways," in 1 Rev. St. 521, § 100, declaring that "all roads not recorded which have been or shall have been used as public highways for twenty years or more shall be deemed public highways," do not require the user to be adverse and under such circumstances as would be required to give an individual a right of way by prescription (Speir v. Utrecht, 121 N. Y. 420, 24 N. E. 692 [modifying 49 Hun 294, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 426]), although a different conclusion seems to have been reached by the courts of some other states having similar statutes (see cases cited supra, this note; infra, note 61). The user, however, must be like that of highways generally. Speir v. Utrecht, supra; Buffalo v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 68 N. Y. App. Div. 488, 74 N. Y. Suppl. 343 [affirmed in 178 N. Y. 561, 70 N. E. 1097]. The road must be not only traveled upon but kept in repair or taken in charge of or adopted by the public authorities. See infra, note 68. And the fact that a portion of the public have traveled over it for more than twenty years does not alone make it a highway. See supra, II, B, 2, b.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 11.

The claim of right must be manifested by acts indicating an intention to enjoy the land as a highway without regard to the wishes of the owner (Rose v. Farmington, 196 Ill. 226, 63 N. E. 631; Shellhouse v. State, 110 Ind. 509, 11 N. E. 484; State v. Green, 41 Iowa 693), as by some appropriate action on the part of the public authorities (Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. State, 74 Nebr. 868, 105 N. W. 713; Hill v. McGinnis, 64 Nebr. 187, 89 N. W. 783; Lewis v. Lincoln, 55 Nebr. 1, 75 N. W. 154. Recognition, maintenance, and repair by public authorities see infra, II, B, 2, e, (III)).

However, it is not always necessary for the public in using a roadway to make proclamation that they are using it under a claim of right, where the right is asserted as flowing from long usage with the knowledge and acquiescence of the owner of the land; but the claim of right may be presumed from the facts and circumstances attending the use. Barnes v. Daveck, 7 Cal App. 220, 487, 94 Pac. 779; Rose v. Farmington, 196 Ill. 226, 63 N. E. 631; Shellhouse v. State, 110 Ind. 509, 11 N. E. 484; State v. Green, 41 Iowa 693. An unexplained user of land as a highway by the public for the prescriptive period will be presumed to be under a claim of right, the user being otherwise sufficient. *Southern Indiana R. Co. v. (ii) EXCLUSIVENESS OF USER. In order to create a highway over private lands by prescription, the public user must be exclusive; that is, it must be such as to show a claim of right to use the land as a highway to the exclusion of any individual right of the owner inconsistent therewith.<sup>64</sup>

Wisconsin.—Frye v. Highland, 109 Wis. 292, 85 N. W. 351, holding that where it was claimed that a way private in its inception had become a public way by user, the fact that persons other than those who had used it by invitation were permitted to do so did not mitigate against its private character, it not being clear evidence of a change to a public thoroughfare.

United States.—District of Columbia v. Robinson, 180 U. S. 92, 21 S. Ct. 283, 45 L. ed. 440 [affirming 14 App. Cas. (D. C.) 512]; Coburn v. San Mateo County, 75 Fed. 520, holding that the fact that a landowner for a long period of years permitted the residents of a neighboring village, and visitors thereto, to pass through his gate and over his land to an attractive beach on the seashore, created no prescriptive right to a public road through his land.

Burden of proof.—Where the public has had exclusive possession and use of land for a highway for a period of time barring recovery, the burden is on the owner of the title to show that the use was permissive. *Meade v. Question for jury.—Where a railroad crossing in connection with a street has been used as a highway for twenty years, and the street has been repaired by the town and the crossing has been planked by the railroad, it is a question for the jury whether such use was adverse or permissive. Fitchburg R. Co. v. Page, 131 Mass. 391, 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 86.

A finding that for more than ten years there had existed a public road along the strip in controversy, which had been used as a public road by the people without let or hindrance of any kind, negatives any presumption that the use of the strip of land was by license or permission. Hartley v. Vermillion, 141 Cal. 339, 74 Pac. 987, (1902) 70 Pac. 273.

(III) RECOGNITION, MAINTENANCE, AND REPAIR BY PUBLIC AUTHORITIES. In many states it is provided by statute that where, for a specified time, which varies in the different jurisdictions,<sup>65</sup> a way is used by the public as a highway and worked as such by the public authorities, it shall be deemed a highway the same as if regularly laid out.<sup>66</sup> To establish a highway under these provisions it is essential that the way shall be maintained and kept in repair by the public authorities during the time so fixed.<sup>67</sup> In the absence of statute, however, the fact that the public authorities have not recognized or worked the way in question as a highway does not necessarily defeat prescription;<sup>68</sup> nor does such a statute

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 12. And see infra, II, B, 2, e, (vi), as to creation of highway by user under defective proceedings to establish same.

The operation of a statute declaring that when a road shall have been continuously used, kept in repair, and worked for six years, it shall be a highway is not affected by the fact that proceedings previously commenced to lay it out as a highway are still pending. Elfelt v. Stillwater St. R. Co., 53 Minn. 68, 55 N. W. 116. On an issue whether a road was a highway, the fact that it had never been worked by the county as required by statute is immaterial, where the road had been established by prescription before the passage of such act. Sikes v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 127 Mo. App. 326, 105 S. W. 700.

Extent of work.—It is not essential that every part of a road should be worked as a highway by the public authorities, if the road as a whole is used by the public for travel and so much of it is worked as is necessary. Gross v. McNutt, 4 Ida. 286, 38 Pac. 935; Neal v. Gilmore, 141 Mich. 519, 104 N. W. 609; State v. Macy, 72 Mo. App. 427 (holding that a statute requiring an expenditure of labor and money during the period of limitation in order to acquire title by adverse user does not require such expenditure on any particular part of the road, it being sufficient if it is made on any part of it); Scribner v. Blute, 28 Wis. 148. And see State v. Transue, 131 Mo. App. 323, 111 S. W. 523.

Waiver of objections.—Where, to establish the existence of a highway, evidence was given of immemorial user, but no evidence of repair by the town, and no exceptions were taken to the want of evidence of repair, the appellate court will assume a waiver of evidence of repair. *Hampson v. Contra.—Johnson v. State, 1 Ga. App. 195, 58 S. E. 265, semble. In New York, it seems, under 1 Rev. St. 521, § 100, declaring that preclude the creation of a highway by common-law prescription independently of its provisions.<sup>69</sup> Nevertheless the fact that the public authorities have worked the road claimed as a highway, or otherwise recognized it as such, tends to show that a highway exists, and in connection with public user for the necessary period may establish a highway by prescription;<sup>70</sup> and, on the other hand, the fact

"all roads not recorded which have been or shall have been used as public highways for twenty years or more shall be deemed public highways," the user need not be adverse and under such circumstances as would be required to give an individual a right of way by prescription. See supra, note 60. The user must, however, be like that of highways generally; the road must not only be traveled upon, but kept in repair or taken in charge of or adopted by the public authorities; and so the fact that a portion of the public have traveled over it more than twenty years does not alone make it a highway. Speir v. Utrecht, 121 N. Y. 420, 24 N. E. 692 [modifying 49 Hun 294, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 426]; Buffalo v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 68 N. Y. App. Div. 488, 74 N. Y. Suppl. 343 [affirmed in 178 N. Y. 561, 70 N. E. 1097]; Burlew v. Hunter, 41 N. Y. App. Div. 148, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 453; People v. Osborn, 84 Hun (N. Y.) 441, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 358 [affirmed in 155 N. Y. 685, 50 N. Suppl. 1097; Hamilton v. Owego, 42 N. Y. App. Div. 312, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 103 [affirmed in 171 N. Y. 698, 64 N. E. 1121]; Riley v. Brodie, 22 Misc. 374, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 347. But the courts of some other states having similar statutes reach a different conclusion. See cases cited supra, this note.

Whether the highway authorities did or did not regard the road as a highway at any particular time is of no consequence. Menard County Road Dist. No. 1 v. Beebe, 231 Ill. 147, 83 N. E. 131. So an order of county commissioners dismissing a petition for the discontinuance of a road as a highway on the ground that it is not a highway is not evidence that it has not become a highway by prescription. Com. v. Petiteler, 110 Mass. 62.

However, the surveying, platting, and recording of a road will not be presumed from the fact that the road has been worked and kept in repair by the authorities, where the evidence tends to establish that the road was never surveyed, platted, or recorded. District of Columbia v. Robinson, 180 U. S. 92, 21 S. Ct. 283, 45 L. ed. 440 [affirming 14 App. Cas. (D. C.) 512].

This applies to roads over wild and unoccupied lands. Hall v. Austin, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 59, 48 S. W. 53. And see State v. Horn, 35 Kan. 717, 12 Pac. 148. See infra, II, B, 2, e, (iv).

that the public authorities have not worked the road in question, or otherwise recognized it as a highway, while not conclusive of its non-existence as such,<sup>71</sup> tends to show that no highway exists.<sup>72</sup> In a few states a way is declared by statute to be a highway simply where it is recognized<sup>73</sup> or worked<sup>74</sup> as such by the public authorities.

(IV) USER OF WILD AND UNOCCUPIED LANDS. It is sometimes said that a highway cannot be established by prescription where the locus in quo is wild and unoccupied land.<sup>75</sup> This statement, however, is too broad. While a mere user of wild and unoccupied lands by the public for travel is insufficient without more to create a highway,<sup>76</sup> yet a highway may be prescribed over such

Approval of town supervisors.—Under a statute providing that all roads not recorded, which shall hereafter be used ten years or more, shall be deemed public highways, expenditure of money or performance of work on a road under the direction of the highway overseer is a sufficient adverse public user to establish it as a highway, without proof that his action was approved by the town supervisors. Blute v. Scribner, 23 Wis. 357.

(v) USER OF LAND OUTSIDE OF ESTABLISHED HIGHWAY. An adverse user by the public, by mistake or otherwise, for the requisite period of time, of lands outside of the lines of an established highway is generally held to create a prescriptive right to use such lands as a highway,<sup>82</sup> and after the lapse of the

Where the lands are reclaimed, and the ways thereover are left open for use and are used by the public as highways, these acts may constitute the beginning of a prescriptive right of way, and, if continued for twenty years without interruption, raise the presumption of a grant to the public. Rosser v. Bunn, 66 Ala. 89.

Question for jury.—The continuous use by the public for more than ten years of a road along a mountain valley defining its course by natural limits, although it ran through an unfenced country and had never been laid out or recognized by the authorities as a public road, is sufficient to demand the submission to the jury of the right of those using it to a highway by prescription. Presumption as to permission.—Where the public use a road through open and unfenced lands without any order of the county court making it a public road, and without any attempt to work it or exercise authority over it as a highway, the presumption is that the use of the road is not adverse to the rights of the owner of the land, but is by his consent. such,<sup>88</sup> for the requisite period, it becomes such by prescription, the user and recognition generally being referable to a claim and color of right in the public. However, in the absence of statute to the contrary, the public user, as in other cases, must be adverse and under claim or color of right, and not merely by revocable permission of the owner,<sup>89</sup> and otherwise sufficient to establish a highway by prescription;<sup>90</sup> and the land so used must be that described in the defective proceedings.<sup>91</sup> Similarly a highway may be established by prescription over land which the owner has made an ineffectual attempt to dedicate to the public as a highway.<sup>92</sup>

At one time this period was fixed by statute<sup>95</sup> at the commencement of the reign of Richard I, A. D. 1189.<sup>96</sup> Although this statute applied to actions for the recovery of land only, and not to those for the recovery of incorporeal things, the judges proceeded to apply the rule as to prescription established by the statute to incorporeal hereditaments, and among others to easements. Subsequently when by statute<sup>97</sup> the time for bringing a possessory action to recover land was reduced to twenty years, it might have been expected that the judges would, as in the case of the earlier act, apply the analogy of this act to incorporeal things. This, however, it seems, they did not do, but they effected the same end by the adoption of the fiction that a grant of the right would be presumed if it had been exercised for a period of twenty years, this doctrine of lost grant being in reality prescription under another name, shortened in analogy to the period of limitation fixed by the statute of James.<sup>98</sup> Whether this doctrine applies in strict propriety to the creation of highways by user has been elsewhere discussed.<sup>99</sup> However that may be, many courts of this country have recognized the twenty-years' period as one sufficient for and necessary to the creation of a highway by adverse user.<sup>1</sup> By the great weight of modern authority, however, in the absence of any statute specially applicable to highways, the duration of the user is governed by analogy by the local statute fixing the time for bringing an action for land, whether that time be fixed at twenty years or a greater or lesser period.<sup>2</sup> In many states, as

Knowledge of claim of right.—Under Iowa Code (1873), § 2031, providing that adverse possession must be proved by evidence distinct from the use, and that the one against whom the claim is made had express notice thereof, a highway cannot be established by user alone, although the owner had knowledge of it, unless he also had express notice that a highway was claimed independent of the mere use. State v. Mitchell, 58 Iowa 567, 12 N. W. 598.

user, it must be open and of such a character, and the facts and circumstances must be such, as to put him on notice thereof and of the fact that a public right of travel is claimed.<sup>8</sup> As just intimated, however, actual knowledge is not necessary, but it may be implied from the character of the user and the facts and circumstances of the case.<sup>9</sup>

(II) INTENT; CONSENT; MISTAKE. The intent of the landowner and his consent or dissent to the public user of his land are immaterial, standing alone, to the question whether a highway has been established by prescription.<sup>10</sup> The fact that he intends to abandon his land to the public and acquiesces in its use as a highway does not, on the one hand, detract from the hostility of the public's user so as to preclude prescription;<sup>11</sup> nor, on the other hand, does the fact that the owner does not intend to abandon his land, and dissents to its user as a highway, preclude the public from acquiring a highway over it,<sup>12</sup> unless he does some positive act amounting to an interruption of the adverse user.<sup>13</sup> So the fact that the owner's acquiescence in the adverse user is due to a mistaken belief that a highway over the land has been duly established by the public authorities does not defeat the public's prescriptive right thereto.<sup>14</sup>

3. AGAINST WHOM PRESCRIPTION MAY BE ASSERTED.<sup>15</sup> It has been seen that by the better opinion the doctrine of prescription as applied to highways is based, not on the presumption of a lost grant, but on the presumption of an antecedent exercise of the right of eminent domain by the public authorities;<sup>16</sup> and since the exercise of this power is not affected by any legal disability of the landowner,<sup>17</sup> it should follow that a highway may be acquired by prescription over lands owned by a person who is non sui juris.<sup>18</sup> Most of the cases in which this question is

Necessity of fencing as notice.—Where a pass through the mountains was the only available passway to the public, the fact that the public had not fenced it would not bar their acquiring a prescriptive right from the beginning of such use, such fence being unnecessary as notice. Hall v. Austin, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 59, 48 S. W. 53. And see supra, II, B, 2, e, (iv), note 78.

Presumption of knowledge.—While long continued notoriety of a fact is usually sufficient to raise a presumption that persons affected thereby or interested therein had full notice of the matter, yet in the case of wild and uninclosed land the presumption would not so readily arise, and adding a further circumstance of the non-residence of the owner, or the location of the lands at a distance from his place of residence, the law will not presume that the notorious use as a highway is known to the owner. State v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 45 Iowa 139. And see Topeka v. Cowee, 48 Kan. 345, 29 Pac. 560; Bethum v. Turner, 1 Me. 111, 10 Am. Dec. 36; Watson v. Adams County, 38 Wash. 662, 80 Pac. 201. involved, however, hold to the contrary,<sup>19</sup> deciding the question as if prescription were based on the presumption of a lost grant,<sup>20</sup> even in states where the presumption of an antecedent exercise of the power of eminent domain is recognized as the basis of highway prescription.<sup>21</sup> However this may be, it is well settled that a statute of limitation, in the absence of a saving clause, runs against all persons, whether sui juris or not;<sup>22</sup> and since a statute prescribing a period for the establishment of a highway by user is in effect a statute of limitation, it follows that in those states where such a statute exists the legal disability of the owner of the locus in quo does not, in the absence of a saving clause, affect the establishment of a highway by user.<sup>23</sup> In any event prescription is not defeated by a disability not existing when the user began but subsequently intervening within the prescriptive period.<sup>24</sup> A highway over lands held in trust may be established by prescription against both trustee and beneficiary.<sup>25</sup>

Burden of proof.—Where persons assert a right to a road over the land of another by prescription, the burden is on them to establish that the owners were free from legal disability and were persons against whom a prescriptive right could be acquired by adverse user. Austin v. Hall, 93 Tex. 591, 57 S. W. 563; Wright v. Fanning, (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 86 S. W. 786; Evans v. Scott, 37 Tex. Civ. App. 373, 83 S. W. 874.

Cases involving highways by dedication implied from user are not in point on this question, since dedication is based on the landowner's consent, express or implied (see DEDICATION, 13 Cyc. 452), and not on any presumption of an antecedent exercise of the power of eminent domain.

Cases involving private easements are not in point on this question, since the doctrine of prescription as applied to such easements is properly referable to the presumption of a lost grant (see EASEMENTS, 14 Cyc. 1145), and not to any presumption of an antecedent exercise of the power of eminent domain.

lished, long continued user of it by the public does not make it a county way by prescription.<sup>43</sup>

b. Extent — (1) IN GENERAL. Generally speaking, the extent of a prescriptive highway is governed by the extent of the user.<sup>44</sup> So it is frequently said that the width of the highway is measured by the actual user.<sup>45</sup> According to many cases, however, this statement is too broad, and the width is to be determined by what is reasonably necessary for the public easement of travel<sup>46</sup> and for ordinary repairs and improvements,<sup>47</sup> or by the usual width of highways in the locality,<sup>48</sup> the question of width being one of fact for the determination of the jury.<sup>49</sup> The question of the width of a highway by user is affected in some states by statutes prescribing the width of highways generally;<sup>50</sup> and an important element in determining the width of a highway by prescription is the recognition of the limits of the way by persons whose lands front thereon.<sup>51</sup>

(ii) EFFECT OF DEFECTIVE PROCEEDINGS TO ESTABLISH HIGHWAY. Another qualification of the general statement that the width of a prescriptive highway is measured by the actual user exists where a highway is acquired by prescription under color of defective proceedings to establish the same. In this event the width of the highway is ordinarily the width of the highway so attempted and intended to be established, although the user does not extend over that entire width.<sup>52</sup> On the other hand the width of the highway thus prescribed is limited to the bounds of the highway so attempted and intended to be established, where there has been no actual adverse user of lands outside of those bounds.<sup>53</sup>

7. ASCERTAINMENT AND ENTRY OF RECORD. In many states statutes have been enacted which provide for the ascertainment, description, and entry of record, by the proper authorities, of highways existing by user.<sup>54</sup> In such a proceeding

Sufficiency of evidence; appeal.—Where it has been determined that a highway has been acquired by adverse user, but it is difficult from the evidence to find the boundaries of such highway, the cause will be remanded for further proceedings to determine such boundaries. Arndt v. Thomas, 93 Minn. 1, 100 N. W. 378.

50. Montgomery v. Somers, 50 Oreg. 259, 90 Pac. 674 (where the statute affected the question of reasonable width); Yakima County v. Conrad, 26 Wash. 155, 66 Pac. 411 (where the statute affected the question of necessary width).

Presumption.—A highway by prescription is presumed to be of the statutory width (Meservey v. Gulliford, 14 Ida. 133, 93 Pac. 780; Kruger v. Le Blanc, 70 Mich. 76, 37 N. W. 880; Bumpus v. Miller, 4 Mich. 159. See, however, Michigan case cited supra, note 45), where nothing appears to the contrary (Meservey v. Gulliford, supra; Kruger v. Le Blanc, supra; Bumpus v. Miller, supra). And see infra, this section text and note).

The statute does not govern the width absolutely. A prescriptive highway may be either narrower (Davis v. Clinton, 58 Iowa 389, 10 N. W. 768; Harlow v. Humiston, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 189. And see Wayne County Sav. Bank v. Stockwell, 84 Mich. 586, 48 N. W. 174, 22 Am. St. Rep. 708) or wider (Marchand v. Maple Grove, 48 Minn. 271, 51 N. W. 606) than the width prescribed by statute for highways generally.

51. Bumpus v. Miller, 4 Mich. 159; State v. Morse, 50 N. H. 9. And see Tilton v. Wenham, 172 Mass. 407, 52 N. E. 514; Holbrook v. McBride, 4 Gray (Mass.) 215; Hull v. Richmond, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,861, 2 Woodb. & M. 337.

Fences and monuments as indicating width of highway see Com. v. Coupe, 128 Mass. 63; Kruger v. LeBlanc, 70 Mich. 76, 37 N. W. 880; Washington Borough v. Steiner, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 392; Whitesides v. Green, 13 Utah 341, 44 Pac. 1032, 57 Am. St. Rep. 740.

Estoppel.—It has been held that a person will not be heard to dispute the location of a highway, which location he has distinctly admitted by his declarations and acts. Whitesides v. Green, 13 Utah 341, 44 Pac. 1032, 57

Am. St. Rep. 740. See, generally, ESTOPPEL, 16 Cyc. 722 et seq.

52. Pillsbury v. Brown, 82 Me. 450, 19 Atl. 858, 9 L. R. A. 44; State v. Auchard, 22 Mont. 14, 55 Pac. 361; Nosler v. Coos Bay R. Co., 39 Oreg. 331, 64 Pac. 644, 855 [citing Bayard v. Standard Oil Co., 38 Oreg. 438, 63 Pac. 614]; Upper v. Lowell, 7 Wash. 460, 35 Pac. 363. And see supra, II, B, 2, e, (vi).

This rule does not apply where part of the highway as attempted to be established has been inclosed and exclusively used and occupied by the owner during the prescriptive period. Watz v. Sunderland, 147 Mich. 96, 110 N. W. 507.

53. Samuell v. Sherman, 170 Ill. 265, 48 N. E. 576; Konkel v. Pella, 122 Wis. 143, 99 N. W. 453.

If there has been an adverse user by the public, for the prescriptive period, of lands outside of the bounds of a highway so attempted to be established, the user governs the width of the highway. Com. v. Old Colony, etc., R. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 93; Bayard v. Standard Oil Co., 38 Oreg. 438, 63 Pac. 614. And see Waltman v. Rund, 109 Ind. 366, 10 N. E. 117.

54. See the statutes of the different states.

Necessity of ascertainment and entry of record.—In Idaho roads that have been used and worked at public expense for five years need not be recorded in order to become highways. Meservey v. Gulliford, 14 Ida. 133, 93 Pac. 780. In Missouri, where a road has been used adversely by the public as a highway for the prescriptive period, it becomes a highway without any formal recognition of it as such by the public authorities. State v. Wells, 70 Mo. 635; Brown v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 20 Mo. App. 427; Cox v. Tipton, 18 Mo. App. 450. In New York and Maryland under early statutes see People v. Lawson, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 277; U. S. v. Emery, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,052, 4 Cranch C. C. 270.

To what roads statute applies.—The Illinois statute applies to only those roads whose character as highways has been established by consent of the owners of the soil and by recognition as such by the proper authorities, and not any mere neighborhood

lane used for travel. People v. Worth Tp. Highway Com'rs, 52 Ill. 498. So the New Jersey statute does not apply to private roads laid out by surveyors of the highways. Yeomans v. Ridgewood Tp., 46 N. J. L. 508. The Indiana statute applies to roads established by dedication as well as user. McKeen v. Porter, 134 Ind. 483, 34 N. E. 223. And the same is true of the Rhode Island statute. Goelet v. Newport, 14 R. I. 295. But it was otherwise under an early New York statute. North Hempstead Highway Com'rs v. Queens County Judges, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 9. Ind. Acts (1897), p 192, c. 127 (Burns Rev. St. Ind. (1901) § 6762), providing that all highways which have been or may be used as such for twenty years or more shall be deemed highways, and may be ascertained, described, and entered of record by the county commissioners, and the width thereof declared and described, "which width shall not be less than 30 feet," applies only to prescriptive highways having a width of thirty feet or more. This act only partially repealed Ind. Acts (1867), p. 133, c. 62, providing that highways used as such for twenty years or more shall be highways, and giving the county commissioners power to ascertain, describe, and enter of record such highways, and left that act in force as to prescriptive highways less than thirty feet wide. McCreery v. Fallis, 162 Ind. 255, 67 N. E. 673.

Sufficiency of user.—In Indiana there must be a user with the consent of the landowner. Vandever v. Garshwiler, 63 Ind. 185. In Rhode Island there must have been an actual user of the highway for the prescriptive period; but if, notwithstanding a fence with gates erected across the highway within that period, the public quietly, peaceably, and actually used the street as a highway, the impediment of the fence and gate is unimportant; otherwise if, on account of the fence, the public ceased to use the street, or used it not as a highway but as a way of sufferance. Goelet v. Newport, 14 R. I. 295.

Duration of user.—The public authorities cannot declare an unrecorded road to be a highway unless the user has been continued for the full period fixed by statute. North Hempstead Highway Com'rs v. Queens County, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 9; Goelet v. Newport, 14 R. I. 295; Remington v. Millerd, 1 R. I. 93. And see Milam v. Sproull, 36 Ga. 393.

The constitutional rights of landowners must be respected in a proceeding under the statute. Milam v. Sproull, 36 Ga. 393; McCreery v. Fallis, 162 Ind. 255, 67 N. E. 673. Necessity of notice of proceeding see infra, note 55.

55. See the statutes of the different states, and infra, this note.

Commencement of proceeding.—Under 1 Ind Rev. St. (1876) p. 534, § 45, the county commissioners may, of their own motion, proceed to ascertain, describe, and enter of record a highway alleged to have been used for twenty years but not recorded. Higham v. Warner, 69 Ind. 549; Gibbons v. Copper, 67 Ind. 81. It is, however, proper to commence such proceedings by petition when moved by any person other than such board. Higham v. Warner, supra.

Notice.—Under Ind. Rev. St. (1894) § 6762, giving county commissioners power to cause roads which have been used as highways for twenty years without being recorded to be ascertained, described, and recorded, actual notice of the proceedings is necessary, although the statute makes no provision therefor. Hardinsburg v. Cravens, 148 Ind. 1, 47 N. E. 153; Yelton v. Addison, 101 Ind. 58 [overruling Gibbons v. Copper, 67 Ind. 81; State v. Schultz, 57 Ind. 19]; Vandever v. Garshwiler, 63 Ind. 185. However, parties who appear before the county commissioners and make no objection to the failure to give proper notice waive whatever objections might have been made, and cannot raise them on appeal. Orton v. Tilden, 110 Ind. 131, 10 N. E. 936; Washington Ice Co. v. Lay, 103 Ind. 48, 2 N. E. 222; Vandever v. Garshwiler, supra.

Parties.—Any person competent to sue may, by petition or motion, become a party to the proceedings. Gibbons v. Copper, 67 Ind. 81.

Petition.—A petition for the ascertainment and record of a highway by user need not be in writing. Higham v. Warner, 69 Ind. 549. But if in writing it should state the names of the landowners in order that the court may order the proper notice to be given. Vandever v. Garshwiler, 63 Ind. 185. However, a judgment in favor of petitioners will not be reversed for failure of the petition to state the names of all the owners, where all appeared without objecting to want of notice. Orton v. Tilden, 110 Ind. 131, 10 N. E. 936. The petition need not be signed by twelve freeholders of the county. Vandever v. Garshwiler, supra. It is not an abuse of discretion to allow an amendment changing the description so as to shift somewhat the location of the way, although there has already been one trial, and petitioners have once before amended their petition in the matter of description. McKeen v. Porter, 134 Ind. 483, 34 N. E. 223. In Gibbons v. Copper, 67 Ind. 81, the court say that no question as to the sufficiency of the petition can be raised; but in Vandever v. Garshwiler, supra, it is said that the sufficiency and certainty of the petition may be tested by demurrer or motion. However this may be, a motion to dismiss a petition, no ground for such motion being specified, is properly overruled. Vandever v. Garshwiler, supra. Necessity and propriety of petition see supra, this note, par. 1.

Election between counts.—Petitioners cannot be compelled to elect on which of several paragraphs of the petition they will proceed to trial. Vandever v. Garshwiler, 63 Ind. 185.

8. PLEADING<sup>56</sup> AND EVIDENCE.<sup>57</sup> A defense in ejectment that the locus in quo is a highway by prescription must be pleaded in order to be proved.<sup>58</sup> Such a plea is not objectionable as a plea of acquisition of title to land by parol.<sup>59</sup> An allegation that a road had been used as a highway for more than ten years prior to the commencement of the action cannot be treated as definitely describing a longer period than ten years and one day.<sup>60</sup> The pleadings and proof must correspond.<sup>61</sup> Gen-

Pleading and proof; issues; variance.—The only issue to be tried in such a proceeding is whether the alleged highway has existed by user for more than twenty years with the consent of the owners, or has been laid out and not recorded. Vandever v. Garshwiler, 63 Ind. 185. Where the petition and evidence agree that there was a highway commencing at the north end of a certain road, but disagree as to the distance of the north end of that road from the named corner of land, such variance will overthrow the proceedings. Washington Ice Co. v. Lay, 103 Ind. 48, 2 N. E. 222.

Evidence.—The burden is on petitioner to show affirmatively that none of an objector's land would be unconstitutionally taken. McCreery v. Fallis, 162 Ind. 255, 67 N. E. 673. In Rhode Island deeds showing that the lands had become a highway by dedication and had been recognized as such are admissible as tending to show that the lands had been "considered" a highway, within the terms of the statute. Goelet v. Newport, 14 R. I. 295.

Questions for jury.—The user or non-user by the public as described in the statute is a question for the jury. Goelet v. Newport, 14 R. I. 295.

Viewers need not be appointed in such proceedings. Vandever v. Garshwiler, 63 Ind. 185.

Location of road; boundaries; width.—In ascertaining and describing a road which has not been laid out but has become a highway merely by public use for twenty years, the power of the highway commissioners is limited to ascertaining the boundaries of the road according to the actual use of the twenty years and they cannot enlarge the road or change its location with reference to present public convenience. Talmadge v. Hunting, 29 N. Y. 447 [affirming 39 Barb. 654]; People v. Cortland County, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 491.

Certainty of ascertainment and description.—To entitle a highway to be entered of record, it should be ascertained and described with the same certainty that would be necessary in establishing a highway originally. Stephenson v. Farmer, 49 Ind. 234. However, where the survey gives the termini exactly and the line of the road between them by distances and directions from point to point, so that any practical surveyor could easily ascertain and describe the road as it is surveyed, it is sufficient. Higham v. Warner, 69 Ind. 549.

Sufficiency of order.—Under R. I. Gen. St. c. 59, §§ 18–21, empowering town councils to declare lands used as highways for twenty years to be public highways, the plat described by section 21 must be made a part of the declaration. Simmons v. Providence, 12 R. I. 8.

Conclusiveness of order.—In New York, when the commissioners of highways meet, and, it appearing to them that a certain road has been used as a highway for more than twenty years, order it to be ascertained and recorded, such order is not conclusive on a person claiming that the highway is a private road. Cole v. Van Keuren, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 262, 6 Thomps. & C. 480 [affirmed in 64 N. Y. 646]. But see Colden v. Thurber, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 424. So in Missouri the refusal of the county court to recognize the existence of a prescriptive highway does not affect its existence as such, or the vested rights of the public therein. State v. Wells, 70 Mo. 635; Brown v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 20 Mo. App. 427.

Appeal; injunction.—Parties aggrieved by the action of the commissioners have their remedy by appeal or by injunction. Gibbons v. Copper, 67 Ind. 81.

<sup>59</sup> Rose v. Stephens, (Ky. 1908) 112 S. W. 676, holding that where, in a suit to recover a strip of land used as a road between the lands of plaintiff and defendants, defendants, after pleading a parol agreement between prior owners for the straightening of the line providing that the strip in controversy should be thereafter used as a road for themselves and the owners of more remote land, alleged that for more than fifteen years before suit was brought defendants had occupied the strip in controversy as a public road as a matter of right, such plea was good as a plea of limitations.

<sup>61</sup> Meservey v. Gulliford, 14 Ida. 133, 93 Pac. 780, holding that where, in an action to remove an obstruction of a highway, it was alleged that for more than ten years preceding the commencement of the action the road had been traveled by the public, it was error to admit evidence that the road was first traveled more than nineteen years prior to the commencement of the action, and to find that the same had been established by user under a law which did not require such highway to be kept up at public expense, which law had been amended more than thirteen years prior to the commencement of the action so as to require it to be so kept up, erally speaking the ordinary rules of evidence relating to presumptions and burden of proof,<sup>62</sup> admissibility of evidence,<sup>63</sup> and weight and sufficiency of evi-and under which amendment the action was brought.

62. See cases cited infra, this note.

Generally speaking the burden of proof on an issue whether a highway exists by prescription rests on the party who has the affirmative of the issue, and he must in consequence convince the jury of the existence of all the essential elements of prescription as applied to highways. District of Columbia v. Robinson, 14 App. Cas. (D. C.) 512 [affirmed in 180 U. S. 92, 21 S. Ct. 283, 45 L. ed. 440]; Shaver v. Edgell, 48 W. Va. 502, 37 S. E. 664. It has been held, however, that the unexplained public user of a road as a highway for the prescriptive period raises a presumption of the existence of the other elements of a highway by user, and accordingly shifts the burden of adducing evidence. Chicago v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 152 Ill. 561, 38 N. E. 768; Toof v. Decatur, 19 Ill. App. 204.

Adverse user; claim of right; permissive user.—Presumptions and burden of proof as to adverseness of user, claim of right, and permissive user are elsewhere considered. 63. Clark v. Hull, 184 Mass. 164, 68 N. E. 60 (holding that a coast survey chart made under Act Cong. Feb. 10, 1807 (2 U. S. St. at L. 413, c. 8, § 1), providing for a coast survey, showing the roads within twenty leagues of the shore, is admissible to show the existence of an ancient way); Plummer v. Ossipee, 59 N. H. 55 (holding that a selectman's declaration that he directed the removal of a stone by permission of the adjacent landowner is evidence of a use of land for highway purposes by license, and not adversely). And see Miles v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 55 S. C. 403, 33 S. E. 493.

Ancient deeds.—On an issue whether a street was a public way by prescription, an ancient deed describing the lots therein conveyed as being bounded by the street, and referring to a plan showing the lots to be bounded on the street, was admissible to show the origin and location of the street. Bagley v. New York, etc., R. Co., 165 Mass. 160, 42 N. E. 571, holding also, on an issue whether a street which crossed a railway was a public way by prescription, that a charge that there was no sufficient evidence of such prescription before the location of the railway, but that, in passing on the question whether there had been twenty years' adverse use after the location of the railway, the jury might consider the condition of things prior to that time — as whether it was then used adversely and under a claim of right — did not authorize the consideration of an ancient deed and plan, which were made before the location of the railway and showed certain lots to be bounded by said street, as evidence of such adverse use. And see Clark v. Hull, 184 Mass. 164, 68 N. E. 60.

Defective records of highway.—In order to establish the limitation under Wis. Laws (1857), c. 19, the record of the highway may be admitted in evidence, and it is not necessary to show that the survey followed the precise route named in the petition, that the proper notices were given of the meeting of the commissioners, or that they met pursuant thereto, or that there was an appraisal of damages or compensation made to the landowner. Tomlinson v. Wallace, 16 Wis. 224. However, an invalid order laying out a highway is not admissible as a foundation for showing that a certain place is a highway by user, where it does not describe such place as an intended highway and the other evidence shows that there was no intention to lay out a highway at that place; and the admission of such an order and the statement of the trial court to the jury that it was admitted as some evidence of a highway by user is a material error, the jury having found, against a preponderance of the evidence, that the place in question was a highway. Bartlett v. Beardmore, 74 Wis. 485, 43 N. W. 492.

Primary and secondary evidence.—Parol testimony tending to prove a highway by prescription may be received without requiring the party first to show that there is no record of such road, or that the record was imperfect or beyond his reach, or the like. The parol evidence is not secondary. Eyman v. People, 6 Ill. 4; Mosier v. Vincent, 34 Iowa 478; Young v. Garland, 18 Me. 409; Brigham City v. Crawford, 20 Utah 130, 57 Pac. 842. And see Woburn v. Henshaw, 101 Mass. 193, 3 Am. Rep. 333. See, generally, EVIDENCE, 17 Cyc. 465 et seq.

Reputation.—A prescriptive highway may be established by reputation or tradition, or the general understanding in the community. Clark v. Hull, 184 Mass. 164, 68 N. E. 60; Gage v. Pittsfield Tp., 120 Mich. 436, 79 N. W. 687; Wicks v. Ross, 37 Mich. 464; Hampson v. Taylor, 15 R. I. 83, 8 Atl. 331, 23 Atl. 732; State v. Cumberland, 6 R. I. 496.

Width of way.—Evidence of the location of wheel tracks a year or more after the time in question is competent to show the limits of a highway established by user at the time in question, it being found as a matter of fact that the evidence was not too remote. Plummer v. Ossipee, 59 N. H. 55. An order made by the highway commissioners after a road has been used as a highway for dence<sup>64</sup> govern in cases wherein the existence or location of a highway by prescription is in dispute.

C. Establishment by Legislative Act or by Statutory Proceedings<sup>65</sup> — 1. CONSTITUTIONAL POWER<sup>66</sup> — a. In General. The state may, in the exercise of the inherent right of eminent domain, appropriate private property for use as a highway,<sup>67</sup> such use being public within the rule that the use for which property may be appropriated by the state must be a public one.<sup>68</sup> And in such case the owner is not deprived of his property without due process of law,<sup>69</sup> provided he is given notice of the proceedings so as to afford him an opportunity to contest the appropriation or to have the amount of his damages fairly determined.<sup>70</sup>

b. Conditions Annexed to Its Exercise<sup>71</sup> — (I) IN GENERAL. Since the power to take property for highway purposes is referable to the right of eminent domain,<sup>72</sup> it follows that the exercise of that power is subject to all the conditions and limitations annexed to the exercise of the right of eminent domain.<sup>73</sup> Furthermore, in appropriating property for a highway, as in other cases, due process of law must be observed.<sup>74</sup>

(II) PUBLIC USE; PUBLIC NECESSITY, UTILITY, AND CONVENIENCE — (A) In General. To justify the exercise of the right of eminent domain the pro-

twenty years is admissible to show the width of the highway as manifested by its use as such for twenty years, and that without proof of the commissioners' authority to make it. Ivory v. Deer Park, 116 N. Y. 476, 22 N. E. 1080. Since, when the public right rests on usage, it can be no more extensive than the usage itself, evidence of private occupancy is admissible to disprove or qualify the usage. *State v. posed use for which the property is sought to be taken must be a public use.<sup>75</sup> It is unquestioned that use for a highway is a public use for which land may be appropriated.<sup>76</sup> Nevertheless the question may arise whether in the particular case the road sought to be laid out would, if established, constitute a highway, and so justify the taking of land therefor. Bearing in mind what has been elsewhere said of the nature and essentials of a highway,<sup>77</sup> it is sufficient to say here that in order to justify the taking of land as for a highway, it is necessary that the road, if laid out, should be subject to a public easement of travel, and be so situated and conditioned as to be susceptible of use as a highway. In the absence of constitutional authority, one man's land cannot be appropriated against his consent for the sole benefit of private individuals.<sup>78</sup> In order to justify the taking of land as for a highway, there must exist a public necessity for the proposed road, and it must be of public utility or convenience.<sup>79</sup>

(B) As Affected by Termini of Road; Cul-de-Sac. The character of the place of beginning and ending of a proposed highway has a bearing on the question of the public necessity, utility, or convenience thereof. If the proposed road neither begins nor ends at a preëxisting highway or other public place, it cannot as a rule be established as a highway, since in the nature of the case no public necessity exists for it, and if formally laid out it would not be of public utility or conven-

Absolute necessity.—Under the Indiana general highway act, limiting the right of viewers to lay out highways to such highways as will in their judgment be of public utility, and declaring a want of public utility a ground of remonstrance, the question of public utility is generally one of fact to be determined in the light of public convenience and interest, but it is not essential that the contemplated road be absolutely necessary to the public. Speck v. Kenoyer, 164 Ind. 431, 73 N. E. 896; Fritch v. Patterson, 149 Ind. 455, 49 N. E. 380; Green v. Elliott, 86 Ind. 53. But in the state of Tennessee, on the other hand, the necessity for the road must be imperative. McWhirter v. Cockrell, 2 Head (Tenn.) 9.

Individual advantages.—In deciding whether the public good requires that a highway be laid out, it is proper that individual advantages going to make up the public should be considered by the commissioners. Hopkinton v. Winship, 35 N. H. 209. The charter of a bridge company providing that no way should at any time thereafter be located leading from the bridge to a certain place, which "shall be for the necessary convenience of said company, unless the entire cost and expense of building and maintaining such new way . . . shall be defrayed by said company," does not prohibit the location of any way required by common convenience and necessity. Shattuck's Appeal, 73 Me. 318. The fact that one or a few individuals will be most benefited by the proposed highway does not necessarily prevent the establishment of the road. Heath v. Sheetz, 164 Ind. 665, 74 N. E. 505; Masters v. McHolland, 12 Kan. 17; Heninger v. Peery, 102 Va. 896, 47 S. E. 1013. But see In re Richmond County Four-Cornered Road, 13 N. Y. Suppl. 458. Extent of travel as af-ience. One terminus at least must be at a preëxisting highway or other public place.<sup>80</sup> It is not requisite, however, in order to justify the establishment of a highway, that it should both begin and end at preëxisting highways or other public places, provided it is a public necessity, and, if laid out, it will be of public utility and convenience. It is sufficient if one terminus be at an existing highway or other public place.<sup>81</sup> Accordingly a cul-de-sac may be established as a highway if public necessity, utility, or convenience requires. Under such circumstances fecting establishment of highway see infra, II, C, 1, b, (II), (C).

80. In re Frankford Tp. Road, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. 649; Snow v. Sandgate, 66 Vt. 451, 29 Atl. 673; Lewis v. Washington, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 265, holding that one terminus of the proposed road must be at the court-house, or a public warehouse, landing, ferry, mill, coal mine, lead or iron works, or the seat of government, or in an already established road leading to one or more of these places. And see cases cited infra, this note. See, however, Rice v. Rindge, 53 N. H. 530.

Highway as terminus.—Selectmen of a town have jurisdiction to lay out a highway, although the streets with which it connects at one terminus are not legally established as highways. It is not necessary that access to the road in question should be by a highway which the town is bound to maintain and for defects in which it is liable; but it is sufficient if the public, or so many individuals as to make it of public utility, have access to the road in question by owning the land at its terminus, by license, by a turnpike road, a railroad depot, or by means of a wharf or landing upon navigable waters, and the like. Neither is it an objection that this right of access is limited to less than the public generally, because roads may rightfully be laid out for the accommodation of individuals. Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Folsom, 46 N. H. 64. It is not necessary that a highway with which another connects should be proved to be a legal highway in order to sustain the connecting highway. It is presumed to be a legal highway. Moore v. Roberts, 64 Wis. 538, 25 N. W. 564.

Proposed highway as terminus.—In Pennsylvania it has been held that a public road may be laid out to end in a street ordained for public use by a borough, although not opened. In re Sadsbury Road, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. 521. So it has been held that a road may terminate at a point on a county line in a prospective road to be laid out in continuation of it by the adjoining county, without proceedings under the act of 1836, relating to roads on and along dividing lines of adjoining counties, and requiring concurrent views. In re Conyngham Road, 1 Wilcox (Pa.) 245. On the other hand it has been held that the terminus of an unopened street in a borough cannot be adopted as the terminus for an adjoining township road, although the borough authorities intend to open the street as soon as the township road is open. In re Plainfield Tp. Road, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 412.

Turnpike as terminus.—A point in a turnpike road maintained by a duly incorporated company may lawfully be made the terminus of a public road, as it is a highway for such purpose. In re Derry Tp. Road, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 538. And see Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Folsom, 46 N. H. 64.

Private road as terminus.—A private road which may at any time be obstructed or closed by the owners is not a proper terminus for a highway. In re West Manchester Tp. Road, 8 York Leg. Rec. (Pa.) 169.

Railroad right of way as terminus.—It has been held that a railroad is not a proper terminus for a highway, where the station is on the other side of the track. In re Upper Darby Road, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 366, 2 Del. Co. 472. However, it has been held that it is no objection that a road begins in the middle of a right of way of a railroad where that is the terminus of a preëxisting public road. In re Upper Hanover Road, 2 Kulp (Pa.) 179.

Railroad station as terminus.—A railroad station is a proper terminus for a highway (In re Cheltenham Tp. Road, 17 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 18. And see Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Folsom, 46 N. H. 64; In re Upper Darby Road, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 366, 2 Del. Co. 472), but such a highway is not sufficiently laid out if it extends only to the line of the railroad, and does not cross it to the other side, where the station is located (In re Upper Darby Road, supra).

Watercourse as terminus.—There is no positive rule of law forbidding a town council to lay out a highway connecting another highway with the bank of a private stream capable only of being used with small boats without loads, the fact that such a stream is one of the termini of the highway going merely to the question of its public necessity. Watson v. South Kingstown Town Council, 5 R. I. 562. And see Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Folsom, 46 N. H. 64; Lewis v. Washington, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 265.

Mill as terminus.—A sawmill situate on the line of an unopened state or county road is a suitable place for the terminus of a new public road. In re Jefferson, etc., Tp. Road, 2 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 138. And see Lewis v. Washington, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 265.

School-house as terminus.—A public school-house is a proper terminus for a highway. In re London Britain Road, 13 Lanc. Bar (Pa.) 207.

Pent roads, that is, roads closed at both termini, are recognized in some states, and form an exception to the rule stated in the text. See PENT ROADS, 30 Cyc. 1380.

81. State v. Price, 21 Md. 448; Lewis v. Washington, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 265, holding that the other terminus may be at any place, public or private. And see cases cited infra, note 82.

the road when laid out need not be a thoroughfare.<sup>82</sup> The state line is a proper terminus, although there is no connecting road, existing or proposed, in the other state.<sup>83</sup>

(c) Determination as to Public Use, Necessity, Utility, and Convenience.<sup>84</sup> Generally speaking the question of the necessity or expediency of exercising the right of eminent domain is a political question to be determined by the legislature or those to whom it has delegated the power of exercising the right,<sup>85</sup> in the absence of a constitutional or statutory provision investing the courts with jurisdiction to determine it,<sup>86</sup> either in the first instance<sup>87</sup> or by way of reviewing the deter-

Richards*, 41 Mich. 680, 3 N. Rep. 758 (holding that the claim in a petition for a public road over private property that it is necessary, and that the property of petitioners cannot be reached by any convenient highway, is not issuable, since the manner of its determination is a legislative question, and since the legislature has provided that the appearance of these facts in the petition shall be sufficient to authorize the court to appoint viewers to lay out the road); Paine v. Leicester, 22 Vt. 44.

Discretion of local officers.—Determination of question of necessity, expediency, etc., held to be within the discretion of the local administrative officers see In re Conant, 102 Me. 477, 67 Atl. 564; *Strahan v. Jurisdiction in the first instance is generally vested in local administrative officers. See the statutes of the different states. And see Shattuck's Appeal, 73 Me. 318.

87. Greenburg v. International Trust Co., 94 Fed. 755, 36 C. C. A. 471, holding that N. Y. Laws (1892), c. 493, providing for the extending of highways in one town into or through other towns in the same county is not in violation of the state constitution because it confers on certain courts of the state the power to determine the necessity or expediency of such extensions, the highest court of the state having upheld the exercise of such powers by the courts in numerous analogous cases arising under the same constitution.

Intervention of committee.—Under the Connecticut statute, the court to which a petition is made for the laying out of a highway may find with regard to the convenience and necessity of the road without the intervention of a committee. Bridgeport v. Hubbell, 5 Conn. 237; Windsor v. Field, 1 Conn. 279. So in Massachusetts the appointment of a viewing committee by the court of sessions, in proceedings to lay out a highway, to report an opinion as to the convenience or necessity of the way prayed for, is not required by statute, but is discretionary with the court. Com. v. Cambridge, 7 Mass. 158; Com. v. Coombs, 2 Mass. 489.

Delegation of jurisdiction.—A general rule of court requiring viewers to report, in proceedings to lay out a new road, whether dammination of the local administrative officers.<sup>88</sup> It has been held that the issue of the utility of a proposed highway, on a trial in the circuit court, is limited to the utility of the route selected by the viewers, and that the utility of other proposed routes is immaterial;<sup>89</sup> also that the commissioners' court, in determining the expediency of establishing a highway, does not act alone upon evidence produced according to legal rules.<sup>90</sup> In determining the question of public necessity, utility, and convenience, the officers or tribunal having the matter in hand may properly consider the topography of the country,<sup>91</sup> and the wants and wishes of the people;<sup>92</sup> the condition of the population,<sup>93</sup> the location of public places,<sup>94</sup> the location of railroads,<sup>95</sup> and the location of highways already established<sup>96</sup> or pro-ages ought to be paid by petitioners or the county, involves no surrender of the power conferred on the court by the Pennsylvania act of Feb. 24, 1845, as the purpose is not to delegate to the viewers the power of conclusively determining whether there is such public necessity for the road as to warrant the payment of damages by the county, but to obtain the opinion of the viewers as an aid to the court in forming a correct judgment. In re Stowe Tp. Road, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 404.

In trespass quare clausum fregit against highway officers for opening a road over plaintiff's land, the question of the necessity of the road is for the jury. Singleton v. Road Com'rs, 2 Nott & M. (S. C.) 526.

89. Speck v. Kenoyer, 164 Ind. 431, 73 N. E. 896.

90. Lowndes County v. Bowie, 34 Ala. 461.

Materiality and definiteness.—On an issue as to the public utility of a proposed highway, it is proper to exclude a question as to how much it would cost to "make a good road through the timber," since it calls for an indefinite answer, especially where witness has testified to the cost of putting the road in such passable condition as would be required of the road district, which is as far as the inquiry is material. Sterling v. Frick, 171 Ind. 710, 86 N. E. 65, 87 N. E. 237.

Opinions.—A committee, on an application for the laying out of a highway, may receive the opinions of witnesses having knowledge of the subject as to the convenience and necessity of the road. Bristol v. Branford, 42 Conn. 321. So it is proper to allow a witness who is acquainted with the value of land in the neighborhood to testify that the proposed highway would be a convenience to persons residing on a certain part of the land, and would make a difference in the market value thereof. Hire v. Kniseley, 130 Ind. 295, 29 N. E. 1132.

Circumstantial evidence.—The public utility of a proposed highway on a decision of a board of commissioners need not be shown by direct evidence, but may be inferred from facts contained in the case. Hagaman v. Moore, 84 Ind. 496.

Evidence held sufficient to support a finding that the proposed highway would be of public utility see Heath v. Sheetz, 164 Ind. 665, 74 N. E. 505; Speck v. Kenoyer, 164 Ind. 431, 73 N. E. 896.

Proposed sidings.—A contract binding a railroad corporation having a railroad in operation to construct a side-track at a point on the railroad near the terminus of a proposed highway within a reasonable time after it shall be constructed is competent to be received and considered by the commissioners, in a hearing upon the laying out of the proposed highway, as evidence tending to show the probability that if the proposed road be laid and built persons drawing lumber over it will be furnished with railroad facilities at that point. Hayward v. Bath, 40 N. H. 100.

In Connecticut, in the determination of the question of "public convenience and necessity" in the lay-out of a highway within one hundred yards of a railroad track under Gen. St. § 2700, the main elements for consideration are those of accommodation of the public travel and the dangers arising from the proximity of the railroad. The element of increased expense by reason of the location within the prohibited distance may also be a matter of consideration, but the judge is not required to give to this element the same weight and effect that might be given to it by a committee appointed by the superior court to hear and determine the question of the lay-out of a highway under section 2713. Hartford v. Day, 64 Conn. 250, 29 Atl. 480.

posed,<sup>97</sup> but not the fact that a highway over the same route has previously been discontinued,<sup>98</sup> or the fact that the highway sought to be established might otherwise become a highway by user.<sup>99</sup> They may also consider the probable extent of travel,<sup>1</sup> and the expense of opening the highway or resulting therefrom;<sup>2</sup> but not the N. E. 65, 87 N. E. 237 (including their proximity to the proposed road and their accessibility, but not the number of miles of highway in the township); Opp v. Timmons, 149 Ind. 236, 48 N. E. 1028; Angell v. Hornbeck, 31 Ind. App. 59, 67 N. E. 237 (including their condition); People v. Moore, 60 Hun (N. Y.) 586, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 504 [affirmed in 129 N. Y. 639, 29 N. E. 1031] (holding that where a highway extends a distance of about half a mile from another highway to a point about two hundred feet from a third highway, the extension of such highway from such distance of two hundred feet is not subject to the objection that it is unnecessary); In re Richmond County Four-Corner Road, 13 N. Y. Suppl. 458; Ralpho Tp. Road, 1 Mona. (Pa.) 427 (holding that a highway is a necessity where the road formerly traveled by the inhabitants of the town has become dangerous to life and property by reason of the frequent railroad crossings and the length of road along and close to two railroads doing a large business); Franklin, etc., Road, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 273 (holding that it is improper to lay out two roads near to and parallel with each other, where it is apparent that one, or a large portion of it, is rendered useless; and it does not matter that the termini of the old and new roads are different).

However, it is not error to exclude evidence of an existing highway which does not affect the one proposed to be opened. Kyle v. Miller, 108 Ind. 90, 8 N. E. 721.

Other ways than highways.—It may be shown that the travel is already accommodated over a certain route, although it is not proved to be a highway. Hayward v. Bath, 38 N. H. 179. So evidence of the existence of private ways that are opened and used by the public, or that, although they were opened and used for the purpose, the owners have closed them, is admissible. King v. Blackwell, 96 N. C. 322, 1 S. E. 485.

The fact of a road having been an old one has no weight in determining an application for its establishment as a road under the statute. Bradford v. Cole, 8 Fla. 263.

97. Peckham v. Lebanon, 39 Conn. 231 (holding, however, that where a proposed highway runs from a town in one county into an adjoining town in another, in determining whether one section will be a road of common convenience and necessity the committee should act with great caution, in view of the fact that the other section is necessary to its usefulness and may not be laid out); Free-town v. Bristol County, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 46 (holding that where a proposed road between two towns in one county will pass through another county, the highway commissioners of the former may properly, before locating the road, take a bond from individuals that the part of the road lying in the latter shall be laid out by its commissioners, and, if not, that it shall be made and kept open and in repair).

1. Bryan v. Branford, 50 Conn. 246 (holding that it is no objection to the laying out of a highway that much of the public travel will be merely for pleasure; but that travel which is limited to the summer months is entitled to less weight than that which is constant); Heath v. Sheetz, 164 Ind. 665, 74 N. E. 505 (holding that it is not necessary to show that the entire community, or even a large portion thereof, will use the highway, but it is sufficient if it will be a public convenience); Fritch v. Patterson, 149 Ind. 455, 49 N. E. 380 (holding that a road will be established if public convenience requires it, although it will be used by a few persons more than others); Murphy v. Blandford, 11 S. W. 715, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 125 (holding that evidence that the proposed road will be a better and shorter route than any existing for probably fifty people in the vicinity to go to their railroad depot, mill, and church is sufficient to show that the road is reasonably necessary); Lewis v. Washington, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 265 (holding that no limitation to the power of the county court to establish a road is to be found in the degree of accommodation which it may afford to the public at large, but that is a matter which addresses itself, not to the authority, but to the discretion of the court).

I. 325, holding that the expense of opening a new highway, in comparison with its convenience to the public, is proper to be considered in coming to a conclusion whether it should be laid out. And see Hartford v. Day, 64 Conn. 250, 29 Atl. 480.

All the damages and benefits determinable from all the evidence are to be considered. Watson v. Crowsore, 93 Ind. 220; Rominger v. Simmons, 88 Ind. 453; Com. v. Cambridge, 7 Mass. 158. Where, however, there was evidence that the proposed highway would be of public utility, it was error to instruct that the benefits accruing to a landowner should be considered in connection "with all the other evidence in the case," as allowing the jury to consider all the evidence, when they should have been instructed to consider only such as bore properly on the issue of damages and benefits. Angell v. Hornbeck, 31 Ind. App. 59, 67 N. E. 237.

Repair of connecting highways.—The committee may consider the additional expendiamount of taxable property, the rate of road taxation, the amount of the road fund, or the number of road hands in the district.<sup>3</sup> Likewise they may consider the improvement of public grounds,<sup>4</sup> or the ability of the town or county to keep the highway in repair.<sup>5</sup> It has been held that the commissioners' court or other tribunal should not be influenced by the fact that individuals offer to pay all or some part of the damages and expenses of opening the highway prayed for, or pay the same into court,<sup>6</sup> or by the fact that an individual offers his land for the highway at a low price.<sup>7</sup> Where, however, the proposed highway lies in adjoining counties, it is not ground for setting aside the report that a majority of the commissioners of one county would not have consented to lay out the road had not a satisfactory apportionment of damages and expenses been made.<sup>8</sup>

c. Delegation of Power. In the absence of a constitutional provision to the contrary,<sup>9</sup> the legislature may delegate the power to establish highways to a local inferior body.<sup>10</sup>

ture necessitated to put a connecting highway in better condition in consequence of the new travel. Howe v. Ridgefield, 50 Conn. 592.

Evidence of the cost of new highways at remote times and places is inadmissible. Hayward v. Bath, 38 N. H. 179.

Bond for construction for certain sum.—It has been held that a bond offered to the highway authorities by a citizen for the construction of the highway for a certain sum cannot be considered on the question of cost (Hoadley v. Waterbury, 34 Conn. 38. Contra, Bern, etc., Tp. Road, 2 Mona. (Pa.) 105), in the absence of a statute to the contrary (Bryan v. Branford, 50 Conn. 246, holding that the statute which allows a committee to receive and regard as evidence on the question of the cost of a new highway a bond for the construction of the highway for a stated price applies to a highway laid out over a navigable river; also that the act which provides that such a bond shall stipulate that the work shall be done to the acceptance of the county commissioners does not repeal, but is to be taken in connection with, the former act, which provides that such a bond shall be conditioned for the doing of the work "in a specified time and manner").

So in Massachusetts as to county ways (Com. v. Sawin, 2 Pick. 547; Com. v. Cambridge, 7 Mass. 158), but not as to town ways (Copeland v. Packard, 16 Pick. 217).

Otherwise in Missouri.—Rev. St. (1899) § 9416, relative to opening highways, provides that, if the county court be of the opinion that the facts justify the location of the road at the expense of the county, they shall make an order of record requiring the county road commissioner to survey the road, or otherwise such proceedings shall be dismissed. The statute further provides that if petitioners pay into the county treasury, for the use of the landowners, the probable amount of the damages, which shall be fixed at the time by the court, then the order to the commissioner shall issue. It was held that where petitioners pay the damages into the treasury, it is not requisite that the order should find a public necessity justifying its being opened at the expense of the county. Seafield v. Bohne, 169 Mo. 537, 69 S. W. 1051.

Invalidate effect of offer or payment; presumptions.—Such offer or payment does not invalidate the laying out proceedings in the absence of evidence that the commissioners were influenced thereby. Cummins v. Shields, 34 Ind. 154; Butts v. Geary County, 7 Kan. App. 302, 53 Pac. 771. And see In re Cheltenham Tp. Road, 171 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 18. Contra, In re Knowles, 22 N. H. 361. But see Smith v. Conway, 17 N. H. 586.

Indemnity bond as evidence against public necessity.—The fact that a town council does not act on a petition to lay out a highway until petitioners have given a bond to the town to indemnify it against all expenses has no legally ascertained weight as evidence to show that the highway is not of public necessity. Watson v. South Kingstown, 5 R. I. 562.

2. LANDS SUBJECT TO EXERCISE OF POWER. Subject to certain statutory exemptions, and to certain qualifications with reference to property already devoted to public use, any land susceptible of public travel may be taken for highway purposes.<sup>11</sup>

3. PERSONS AGAINST WHOM POWER MAY BE EXERCISED.<sup>12</sup> The fact that a person is under legal disability does not prevent the taking of his land for a highway.<sup>13</sup>

4. ESTABLISHMENT BY STATUTE OR BY TOWN VOTE. It is competent for the legislature to establish a specific highway without the intervention of any inferior agency,<sup>14</sup> and this it sometimes does.<sup>15</sup> In New England a highway over private lands cannot be established simply by town vote.<sup>16</sup>

Ann. 655 (holding, however, that the Louisiana act of Feb. 7, 1829, relative to roads and levees, establishing a highway on the banks of bayous, etc., does not apply to those streams or bayous running through a high country not subject to overflow, and where the roads are made directly across the country, and not along the winding of the stream); Knowles v. Knowles, 25 R. I. 325, 55 Atl. 755 (holding that where the legislature establishes a highway no acceptance is necessary).

However, Kan. Laws (1887), p. 308, c. 215 (since repealed by Kan. Laws (1889), p. 281, c. 188), declaring all section lines in certain counties public highways, did not declare them open for travel. Hanselman v. Boan, 71 Kan. 573, 81 Pac. 182. So Nebr. Gen. St. (1873) p. 959, declaring section lines public roads, did not of itself create a lawful highway along such lines, but proper authorities must provide first for the payment of damages for the right of way. Van Wanning v. Deeter, 78 Nebr. 284, 112 N. W. 902, 78 Nebr. 282, 110 N. W. 703. Moreover, such statute was so far modified by Nebr. Laws (1879), p. 120 (Comp. St. c. 78), that section lines not used as roads for five years before the passage of the latter act cannot be opened as such without complying with the requirements of that act. Henry v. Ward, 49 Nebr. 392, 68 N. W. 518.

Highway or private way.—The general assembly ordered a committee to plat land owned by the state. The certificate of the surveyor on the plat stated that it was a draft of, among other things, a highway, the land of which was not included in the lots. The report of the committee stated that they had laid out a highway to a pond that every lot might have free access in case of drought. It was held that such statement of the reason therefor did not limit the meaning of the word "highway" so as to make it a private way. Knowles v. Knowles, 25 R. I. 325, 35 Atl. 755.

Charlestown*, 34 N. H. 23; State v. Newmarket, 20 N. H. 519 (holding, under St. Feb. 8, 1791, prescribing that where there shall be occasion for a new highway, the selectmen are empowered, on application made to them, if they see cause, to lay out the same, that a road was not legally established where a town, at a meeting warned to see if it would instruct the selectmen to lay out such road, voted so to instruct, and the selectmen returned that pursuant to the vote they did lay out the road).

Adoption of statute by local vote.—Where the alternative road law provided for by Ga. Act, Dec. 24, 1896, as amended by Ga. Where a special term of the superior court is called, and the grand jury which served at the preceding regular term is required to be in attendance such grand jury has authority to make a recommendation, under Ga. Pol. Code, § 576 et seq., that the alternative road law be adopted by the county. McGinnis v. Ragsdale, 116 Ga. 245, 42 S. E. 492. Where one member of a grand jury recommending that the provisions of the road law should go into effect in a given county was not then a resident thereof, the recommendation is not thereby vitiated, if it affirmatively appears that irrespective of the vote of such juror there was a majority in favor of the recommendation. And a recommendation of a grand jury "that our county commissioners and ordinary adopt the alternative road law as found in the Code of 1895, sections 573-579," adopts the entire "alternative road law" contained in sections 573-582 inclusive. Crawford v. Crow, 114 Ga. 282, 40 S. E. 286. Under Mich. Const. art. 4, § 49, providing that the county road system shall become operative only in such counties as shall adopt it by a majority vote of the electors, a majority vote of the electors voting is sufficient for the adoption thereof. Shearer v. Bay County, 128 Mich. 552, 87 N. W. 789.

Partial invalidity of statute.—An act which authorizes the making of a public avenue and directs the commissioners to have a map made thereof, and then provides a specified mode by which the moneys to pay for the expense of the project are to be raised, will not be sustained with respect to the making of the map, if the plan for providing the moneys turns out to be illegal; and a landowner is so far injured by the mapping out of such avenue that he is entitled to have the judgment of the law on the project, without waiting until his property is attempted to be appropriated in point of fact. State v. Hudson County Ave. Com'rs, 37 N. J. L. 12.

Construction as to which of two statutes governs see Peoria County v. Harvey, 18 Ill. 364. A power given by the legislature to road commissioners to lay out a special roadway is to be regarded as merely an addition to their previous powers, and should be exercised according to the regulations prescribed by the general laws. People v. Richmond County, 20 N. Y. 252. The provision of Tex. Sess. Laws (1895), p. 213, c. 132, constituting a special road law for certain counties, that the commissioners' court may condemn land in the same manner that a railroad company can condemn land for a right of way, is mandatory, and does not confer on the commissioners' court a merely discretionary power to proceed under the railroad law. Plowman v. Dallas County, (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 88 S. W. 252.

La. Rev. St. § 3369, is not inoperative as being in conflict with La. Civ. Code, art. 2640, governing the proceedings should be embodied in one statute, but the general rules of procedure, statutory and otherwise, may be looked to in aid of a statute providing for the establishment of highways.<sup>21</sup> The statutes must be complied with by the local authorities, substantially, if not strictly.<sup>22</sup> Questions as to the amendment or repeal of highway statutes are governed by the rules relating to statutes generally.<sup>23</sup> An unconditional repeal of the statute under which a proceeding for the establishment of a highway is pending ipso facto abates the proceeding.<sup>24</sup> If the mode of procedure is changed by statute pendente lite, the subsequent proceedings should as a rule follow the new procedure.<sup>25</sup>

Highway commissioners or supervisors see State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 195. Without an order of the quarter sessions, supervisors of the highways have no authority either to open a temporary way for the public in a case of sudden necessity through private property or to correct errors in the opening of an old one. Holden v. Cole, 1 Pa. St. 303. The South Carolina act of 1728, authorizing highway commissioners "to make, alter, and keep in repair" the roads, means only such roads as are or shall be laid out by legislative authority, and does not give the commissioners discretionary power to create highways, as the legislature showed, by other and special legislation for the creation of highways, that there was no intention to vest such power in the commissioners. Withers v. Claremont County Road Com'rs, 3 Brev. (S. C.) 83.

Highway surveyors.—The word "highway," as used in Mass. St. (1896) c. 417, providing a board of survey for the town of Revere to lay out and establish highways, covers all ways which the public interest requires to be laid out, relocated, altered, or widened by the town authorities, including an avenue in the town. Janvrin v. Poole, 181 Mass. 463, 63 N. E. 1066. Surveyors of the highways have power to lay out a road in a newly created township before the town officers can by its terms be elected. Minhinnah v. Haines, 29 N. J. L. 388.

Town selectmen see Orrington v. Penobscot County, 51 Me. 570; Butchers' Slaughtering, etc., Assoc. v. Boston, 139 Mass. 290, 30 N. E. 94.

Courts.—In Tennessee the county courts have power to lay out highways. Hydes Ferry Turnpike Co. v. Davidson County, 91

Tenn. 291, 18 S. W. 626. But not the circuit courts in Iowa. Kennedy v. Dubuque, etc., R. Co., 34 Iowa 421. Police magistrates may lay out roads in Illinois. Goshen Highway Com'rs v. Jackson, 165 Ill. 17, 45 N. E. 1000 [affirming 61 Ill. App. 381].

As between county supervisors and auditor.—Under Iowa Code (1873), § 937, providing that the auditor shall proceed to establish a highway if no objections or claims for damages are filed before a certain time; and section 939, providing that if objections to the establishment of the highway or claims for damages are filed, the further hearing of the application shall stand continued to the next session of the board of supervisors, the auditor has no authority to establish the highway where a claim for damages is filed before the time specified, although the claim is also paid before that time. Ressler v. Hirshire, 52 Iowa 568, 3 N. W. 613. Iowa Acts, 12th Sess. c. 160, § 2, making the auditor clerk of the board of supervisors, his acts "subject however, in all cases, to final review and approval by the Board," does not abridge the authority of the board to establish highways, the "review" embracing the facts, as well as the law, of each case. Brooks v. Payne, 38 Iowa 263.

As between county commissioners and public land agent.—The authority to locate roads through public lands selected for settlement being vested by Me. Rev. St. c. 18, § 32, in the county commissioners, the requirement of chapter 5, section 29, that the land agent "cause such roads to be located as the public interests," etc., "shall require," confers on him no authority to locate them. Burns v. Annas, 60 Me. 288.

As between selectmen and fire district commissioners.—N. H. Act, July 21, 1887, did not transfer from town selectmen to fire district commissioners the power to lay out highways. Henry v. Haverhill, 67 N. H. 172, 37 Atl. 1039.

As between county commissioners and district court see infra, II, C, 5, b, (IV).

As between town and selectmen see supra, II, C, 4.

Change of statute pendente lite.—Where a statute provided for courts of common pleas, and gave them all the jurisdiction vested in the former court of common pleas and of all actions pending in the several counties, it transferred to such new courts all petitions for highways from new county to county pending in the late court. In re Wheeler, 7 N. H. 280. Prior to Vt. Acts (1886), No. 20, the selectmen or the county court had no authority to establish highways at grade across a railroad; but while this case was pending on appeal, having been remanded from the supreme court to the county court, said act was passed authorizing the laying of high-court the court may act in vacation.<sup>30</sup> A proceeding which is void for want of jurisdiction does not exhaust a special power under which the commissioners may act but once.<sup>31</sup> The unconditional repeal of a statute conferring jurisdiction in highway cases pendente lite defeats further proceedings.<sup>32</sup> So if a statute allows only a certain period of time for laying out a particular road, the expiration of that time pendente lite takes away all power to act further.<sup>33</sup>

(II) AS BETWEEN COUNTY OFFICERS AND OFFICERS OF TOWNSHIP, TOWN, OR MUNICIPALITY WITHIN COUNTY. As between officers of a county and officers of a township, town, or incorporated municipality within the county, it may be said, subject to some qualifications, limitations, and exceptions, that the latter officers have the power to lay out ways which are wholly within their respective territorial jurisdictions, while the power of the county officers is confined to the establishment of ways extending beyond the limits of a township or town or without the limits of a municipality.<sup>34</sup>

ways at grade. It was held that as the act gave no original jurisdiction, and as the jurisdiction of the county court was merely appellate, it had in this case no power to establish such highway, but that proceedings must be commenced de novo. Connecticut, etc., R. Co. v. St. Johnsbury, 59 Vt. 320, 10 Atl. 573.

30. State v. Macdonald, 26 Minn. 445, 4 N. W. 1107.

31. Cole v. Cumberland County, 78 Me. 532, 7 Atl. 397.

32. William v. Lincoln County, 35 Me. 345 (semble); Terry v. McClung, 104 Va. 599, 52 S. E. 355. And see supra, II, C, 5, a.

33. William v. Lincoln County, 35 Me. 345.

34. See cases cited infra, this note.

As between officers of county and township.

— If a road lies wholly within a township, the power to establish it as a highway rests in the township officers (Keen v. Fairview Tp., 8 S. D. 558, 67 N. W. 623, road within township on section line of land belonging to United States), and the county officers have no jurisdiction (Daggy v. Green, 12 Ind. 303). In some states, however, the county officers have jurisdiction in such cases. Renard v. Grande, 29 Ind. App. 579, 64 N. E. 644; Seafeld v. Bohne, 169 Mo. 537, 69 S. W. 1051; Russell v. Leatherwood, 114 N. C. 683, 19 S. E. 643. If the road extends beyond the township, the power vests in the county officers (Daggy v. Green supra; Re Verona Borough, etc., Road, 9 Pa. Cas. 114, 12 Atl. 456; In re Chester, etc., Road, 2 Chest. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 438, 3 Del. Co. 174; In re Plymouth Borough, etc., Road, 5 Kulp (Pa.) 115; In re Ransom Tp., etc., Road, 2 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 279), and the township officers cannot act in the matter (see supra, this note). However, Mich. Const. art. 10, § 11, providing that "the board of supervisors of each organized county may provide for laying out highways, constructing bridges," etc., does not necessarily give such supervisors exclusive control over those matters, and the legislature may confer power in regard to them on township highway commissioners. People v. Mankin Highway Com'rs, 15 Mich. 347.

As between officers of county and town.— In New England town officers have the power to lay out a road wholly within the limits of the town. Hebron v. Oxford County, 63 Me. 314 (holding that the fact that a road laid out by selectmen extends to a town line does not defeat the jurisdiction, within the statute giving to county commissioners power to establish highways leading from town to town); Craigie v. Mellen, 6 Mass. 6 (holding that a way laid out by selectmen from one part to another of a county road may yet be a town way for the convenience of the inhabitants, and properly laid out by the selectmen); In re Newport, 39 N. H. 67; Hopkinton v. Winship, 35 N. H. 209. In such case the county officers have no jurisdiction (In re Newport, supra, holding that where a petition asks for the laying out of a new highway in two towns, and it appears by the report of the commissioners to whom the same is referred that no new highway is needed except in one town, the common pleas have no authority to establish the road; and a nominal laying out of the road as petitioned for in the other town, by running from the new highway over a preëxisting highway in both towns, so as to extend the new highway to the terminus of the route petitioned for in the other towns, will not give jurisdiction; In re Sumner, 14 N. H. 268; In re Bridport, 24 Vt. 176, holding that Comp. St. 1850, c 22, §§ 28, 44, providing that when public necessity or convenience requires a highway to be laid out on a line between two towns any seven or more freeholders may make application to the selectmen for such road, and if they refuse, to the county court to appoint commissioners for that purpose, empowers the commissioners to lay out the road on the line between the towns only, and a location by the side of that line and wholly within one of the towns will be set aside. Otherwise in Maine. Hermon v. Penobscot County, 39 Me. 583; Windham v. Cumberland County, 26 Me. 406; Harkness v. Waldo County, 26 Me. 353; New Vineyard v. Somerset County, 15 Me. 21), unless the way so laid out forms part of a county way (Wells v. York County, 79 Me. 522, 11 Atl. 417; Com. v. Cambridge, 7 Mass. 158; In re Griffin, 27 N. H. 343; Kelley v. Danby, 46 Vt. 504. But see Monterey v. Berkshire County, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 394; In re Newport, supra). If the way extends into two or more towns

(III) WHERE ROAD IS WHOLLY OR PARTLY IN ANOTHER COÖRDINATE TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION. The legislature may confer on the supervisors of one county the power to establish a highway in another county.<sup>35</sup> As a rule, however, if a proposed road lies in two or more counties, the officers of each must take action to establish the highway;<sup>36</sup> and a like rule applies where the proposed road lies in two or more townships.<sup>37</sup>

(IV) REFUSAL OR NEGLECT OF OFFICERS HAVING PRIMARY POWER. In New England county commissioners or certain county courts have jurisdiction to lay out a town way in case the town selectmen neglect or refuse to do so.<sup>38</sup>

the county officers have jurisdiction to lay it out (Windham v. Litchfield, 22 Conn. 226; Com. v. Stockbridge, 13 Mass. 294, holding that the court of sessions have authority to locate a highway on the divisional line between two towns, so that the whole extent of the road shall be divided lengthwise by such line; In re Newport, supra; Platt v. Milton, 55 Vt. 490; Kelley v. Danby, supra; Kent v. Wallingford, 42 Vt. 651, the last two cases further holding that, where a petition prays for a highway extending into two towns in the same county, the county court has original jurisdiction, and this is not taken away by the road's being laid out in one town only), and the selectmen cannot do so (Monterey v. Berkshire County supra; In re Griffin, supra).

As against officers of county and municipal corporation.—As a rule the county officers have no power to establish highways wholly (Philbrick v. University Place, 106 Iowa 352, 76 N. W. 742; Barker v. Wyandotte County, 45 Kan. 681, 698, 26 Pac. 585, 591; Salsbury v. Gaskin, 66 N. J. L. 111, 48 Atl. 531; In re Verona Borough, etc., Road, 9 Pa. Cas. 114, 12 Atl. 456; In re West Liberty, etc., Roads, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 586) or partly (Shields v. Ross, 158 Ill. 214, 41 N. E. 985; Atlantic Coast Electric R. Co. v. Griffin, 64 N. J. L. 513, 46 Atl. 1062; Freeman v. Price, 63 N. J. L. 151, 43 Atl. 432. Contra, Sparling v. Dwenger, 60 Ind. 72; In re Verona Borough, etc., Road, supra; In re Chester, etc., Tp. (Pa.) 279) within the limits of an incorporated city, town, or village. Proceedings of commissioners of highways attempting to lay out a highway sixty feet wide on land of which half the width was situated in an incorporated city whose charter gave it power to open, alter, and abolish streets, being void as to the land inside the city, was also void as to the half lying outside the city limits, as the statute did not allow a highway less than forty feet wide to be opened by the commissioners. Shields v. Ross, supra.

35. People v. Lake County, 33 Cal. 487.

36. See cases cited infra, this note.

Joint action is necessary. State v. Wood County Treasurer, 17 Ohio 184.

Separate action.—Where a proposed highway runs from a town in one county into an adjoining town in another county the superior court in each county has power to lay out the portion of the road within its county; and it is not a valid objection to the laying out of the road within one town that the section in the other cannot be laid out by the court of that county, since the complaint and decree can be postponed until after action has been had in the other county, or can be made in such form as to provide for such a contingency. Peckham v. Lebanon, 39 Conn. 231. In Indiana where proceedings are instituted for the location of a highway extending into two or more counties, the county board before whom the petition is first filed has jurisdiction. Cooper v. Harmon, 170 Ind. 113, 83 N. E. 704. It is not a valid objection to the location of a highway by the county commissioners of one county that the way begins at the end of a town way which extends into another county. Millett v. Franklin County, 81 Me. 257, 16 Atl. 897.

37. Mack v. Highway Com'rs, 41 Ill. 378; Brewer v. Gerow, 83 Mich. 250, 47 N. W. 113, both holding that where the road is to be on the line between two towns, the commissioners of highways of both towns must act jointly.

However, commissioners of highways have the power to locate roads anywhere within the limits of their own towns, without the intervention of the commissioners of highways of adjoining towns. Mack v. Highway Com'rs, 41 Ill. 378. And a petitioner may apply for a highway terminating at a town line, and trust to the adjoining town to treat the balance of the way to his farm as a highway, or to his being able to make other satisfactory arrangements as to that part of the road, and he need not apply under the law providing for laying out highways in two or more towns. Matter of Burdick, 27 Misc. (N. Y.) 298, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 759.

New England towns.—In New Hampshire a petition praying that a new highway may be laid out within two towns may be filed in the office of the clerk of the supreme court, or may be presented to the selectmen of such towns acting jointly; and neither such presentation, nor the neglect or refusal of the selectmen to lay out the highway, is necessary to give the court jurisdiction. Lord v. Dunbarton, 54 N. H. 405.

38. Connecticut.—Waterbury v. Darien, 9 Conn. 252, holding also that the averment of neglect and refusal by the selectmen to lay out a highway may be supported by any evidence from which the fact may be fairly inferred.

Maine.—Orrington v. Penobscot County, 51 Me. 570.

Massachusetts.—Monterey v. Berkshire

In such case the neglect or refusal of the selectmen is a prerequisite to the jurisdiction of the county commissioners or court;<sup>39</sup> and a like rule prevails in County, 7 Cush. 394; Brown v. Essex County, 12 Metc. 208, so holding, although the selectmen, in the petition to them, were requested to discontinue an old way, which they had no authority to do, as well as to lay out a new one.

New Hampshire.—Simpson v. Orford, 41 N. H. 228 (holding also that a petition to the court for the laying out of a highway for the accommodation of the public will not be dismissed for any difference between it and the petition to the selectmen, in the order of naming the termini of the route or in describing the route, provided the court can see without any possibility of mistake, from a comparison of the two petitions, that the highway they are asked to lay out is in all respects identical with the one described in the petition to the selectmen); White v. Landaff, 35 N. H. 128; In re Stratton, 21 N. H. 44 (holding further that the neglect of the selectmen to lay out a road for the space of seven months after presentment of a petition to them, and their separating at the end of that time without adjournment or recording their proceedings, constitute such neglect as will give jurisdiction to the court of common pleas).

Vermont.—Dunn v. Pownal, 65 Vt. 116, 26 Atl. 484 (holding further that where, on a petition for the appointment of commissioners to lay out a highway, defendant moved to dismiss on the ground that its selectmen had not at the time of the bringing of such petition refused to lay out a highway, and witnesses were produced by both parties, and trial had by the court, it was error for the court, on disagreeing, not to decide the issues raised, and to adjudge that petitioners were entitled as a matter of right to the appointment of commissioners); Crawford v. Rutland, 52 Vt. 412.

Extent of jurisdiction.—On the neglect or refusal of the selectmen to act, the county commissioners have the same powers, and the performance of the same duties, and none others, that were given to the selectmen under the petition when pending before them; and hence the commissioners can act only within the territorial limits of the town. In re Bridport, 24 Vt. 176.

Character of way.—The county commissioners are not restricted in laying out a way, where the selectmen of a town shall unreasonably refuse, to a way exclusively for the benefit of one or more individuals; but the statute is intended to embrace those cases also where the way should be adjudged to be of general benefit. Lisbon v. Merrill, 12 Me. 210. The authority conferred on selectmen to lay out town ways for the use of their respective towns is limited to roads having their termini within the town; but it is no objection to such laying out that the road is intended as one link in a chain of continuous roads; that it is for the convenience of the inhabitants only from its connection with some great thoroughfare; and that, when established, it will be for the use of the public generally, as well as of the inhabitants of the town in which it is situated; and if selectmen unreasonably neglect or refuse to lay out such way, the county commissioners may lay out the same; and whether a town way, for the laying out of which application is made to the county commissioners on the refusal of the selectmen to lay it out, is for the use of the town within which it is situated, is a question exclusively within the discretion of the commissioners to decide. Monterey v. Berkshire County, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 394. The court of common pleas have jurisdiction of petitions for highways in towns bordering on adjacent states, where the petitions have been presented to the selectmen of such towns and refused by them. The fact that the highway prayed for is only a part of one which may be or has been made in the adjoining states does not affect the jurisdiction. Crosby v. Hanover, 36 N. H. 404.

Subsequent action of selectmen.—After the court has acquired jurisdiction by the neglect of selectmen to lay out a road and the filing in court of a petition, it cannot be ousted of such jurisdiction by subsequent action of the selectmen in laying out the road. In re Stratton, 21 N. H. 44.

Delay in petitioning court.—The selectmen to whom a petition for a highway was first presented neglected to act upon it while they were in office from December, 1848, until March, 1849, it appearing that their refusal to lay out the highway was recorded Dec. 24, 1849, and petitioners did not file their petition to the court until Dec. 9, 1850. It was held that the delay did not oust the court of its jurisdiction. In re Toppan, 24 N. H. 43.

Refusal of town to approve laying out of way by selectmen.—The county commissioners have power to approve and allow of a town way as laid out by the selectmen, leading from one town road to another town road and passing through the land of the applicant under his possession and improvement, if the town shall unreasonably refuse or delay to approve thereof. North Berwick v. York County, 25 Me. 69.

Waiver of objections to jurisdiction of county officers see infra, II, C, 5, j, (II).

39. Wolcott v. Pond, 19 Conn. 597; Plainfield v. Packer, 11 Conn. 576 (holding that it must not only be averred in the petition that the selectmen neglected and refused to lay out such highways, but it must appear from the record that such averment is true); Lewiston v. Lincoln County, 30 Me. 19 (holding further that the town cannot be said to have delayed or refused to approve the way where the selectmen had made no proper return or report of the laying out of such way); In re Newport, 39 N. H. 67 (holding, on a petition asking for the laying out of a new highway in two towns originally pre-some other states as between other officers having primary and secondary jurisdiction.<sup>40</sup>

c. Parties<sup>41</sup> — (1) PETITIONERS. No general rule can be laid down as to the requisite number and qualifications of petitioners for a highway. It depends upon the local statutes.<sup>42</sup> When the proposed road runs into two or more terri-presented to the court of common pleas, that if it appear by the report of the county commissioners to whom the same is referred that in their judgment no new highway is really needed except in one town, and that consequently none has been actually laid out except in that town, such report is conclusive that in the opinion of the commissioners the petition should have been presented in the first instance to the selectmen of that town alone, and that the court have no original authority to establish the road actually laid out, and the report in such a case should be rejected and the petition dismissed; Hopkinton v. Winship, 35 N. H. 209 (holding, on a petition for a highway in two or more towns, that where it appears by the report of the commissioners that the object of petitioners is to obtain a road in one town alone, and thus evade the statute requiring such petitions to be first presented to the selectmen, the petition will be dismissed); In re Patten, 16 N. H. 277; Crawford v. Rutland, 52 Vt. 412 (holding, on a petition to the county court, that commissioners to inquire into the merits of the petition will not be appointed, where defendant by plea denies the refusal or neglect of the selectmen, until the question of jurisdiction shall first be determined).

However, on the presentation of a petition for a way in two or more towns, the court will not, prior to the reference of the petition to the commissioners, inquire into the fact whether the object of petitioners be not to obtain a road in one town alone, and the statute requiring such petitions to be first presented to the selectmen thus be evaded. Hopkinton v. Winship, 35 N. H. 209.

40. In re Barrett, 7 N. Y. App. Div. 482, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 266 (holding that under Laws (1890), c. 568, § 94, providing that where it is proposed to lay out a highway extending from one county to another, and the highway commissioners of the two counties cannot agree, they may certify that fact to the supreme court, which may thereupon appoint commissioners to determine the matter, the fact of the disagreement of the highway commissioners is jurisdictional); Haynes v. Satterfield, 2 Tex. Unrep. Cas. 299 (holding that where the commissioners' court has full power over the subject of opening roads, parties are required ordinarily to apply to that court for relief with respect to that matter, and that until the party has exhausted his remedies in that court he is not entitled to invoke the equitable powers of the district court).

41. Remonstrants see infra, II, C, 5, f.

42. See the statutes of the different states, and the following cases:

California.—San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175, 81 Pac. 972, holding that Pol. Code, § 2681, providing that "any ten freeholders who will be accommodated by the proposed road, two of whom must be residents of the road district wherein any part of the proposed road is situated, and who are taxable therein for road purposes, may petition therefor," etc., only requires that two of the ten freeholding petitioners shall be taxable in the district for road purposes.

Florida.—Bradford v. Cole, 8 Fla. 263, holding that the petition should be signed by twelve or more householders, inhabitants of the county, praying for the establishment of a neighborhood or settlement road, and not by an individual representing his own interests.

Illinois.—Afton Highway Com'rs v. Ellwood, 193 Ill. 304, 61 N. E. 1033 (holding that under Hurd Rev. St. (1899) c. 121, § 31, which authorizes town commissioners to lay out any road when petitioned by not less than twelve landowners, or two thirds of the landowners residing in the town within two miles of the road, petitioners must reside in the town, but need not reside within two miles of the road, unless the petition is signed by less than twelve landowners who own two thirds of the property within two miles of the road); Behrens v. Melrose Tp. Highway Com'rs, 169 Ill. 558, 48 N. E. 578 (holding that a petition for a road for private and public use may be signed by one person directly interested (Rev. St. c. 121, § 54), the provision in said section that the commissioners, on receiving the petition, shall be governed in their proceedings by the rules prescribed in said act in relation to public roads, not referring to section 31, which requires a petition for a public road to be signed by at least twelve landowners, etc., but to the sections following, which provide rules for the proceedings after the filing of the petition); Warne v. Baker, 35 Ill. 382 (holding that petitioners must be voters of the town to be affected, voters of other towns not being competent); Sholty v. Stewart, 134 Ill. App. 541 (holding that a petition for a road of less than sixty feet wide must be signed by a majority of the landowners residing along the line of the proposed road, and that, in the absence of such a petition, the commissioners are without jurisdiction to act); People v. Blackwelder, 21 Ill. App. 254 (holding that, in applying Rev. St. c. 121, § 57, requiring a petition for the opening of roads to be "signed by not less than twelve landowners residing in either county, within three miles of the road," the words "or township" must be supplied after the word "county," and the word "either" be read to mean "each").

Indiana.—Hall v. McDonald, 171 Ind. 9, 85 N. E. 707; Thrall v. Gosnell, 28 Ind. App.

torial jurisdictions, it is generally required that persons of the requisite qualifications from all such jurisdictions shall join in the petition.<sup>43</sup> The qualification

174, 62 N. E. 462, both holding that the commissioners have no jurisdiction unless it is established that twelve of the persons whose names are signed to the petition are freeholders of the county in which the highway is proposed to be located, and that six of them reside in the immediate neighborhood of such highway.

Kansas.—Olipphant v. Atchison County, 18 Kan. 386; Wabaunsee County v. Muhlenbacker, 18 Kan. 129, both holding that where neither upon the papers nor the proceedings of the county board does it affirmatively appear that at least twelve of the petitioners were householders, resident in the vicinity of the proposed road, and the proceedings are attacked directly by petition in error, the defect is fatal, and the proceedings must be set aside as void. And see Willis v. Sproule, 13 Kan. 257.

Kentucky.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Gerard, 130 Ky. 18, 112 S. W. 915, holding that the petition must be signed by at least five landowners of the county.

Maine.—Cyr v. Dufour, 63 Me. 492, holding that the provision of Rev. St. c. 18, that a petition for laying out a highway must be presented by "responsible persons," is merely directory to the commissioners, and is for the protection of the county against needless costs, if the location is not found to be of common convenience or necessity.

Michigan.—Wilson v. Burr Oak Tp. Bd., 87 Mich. 240, 49 N. W. 572, holding that a petition for a highway which does not purport to be signed by freeholders of the township confers no jurisdiction on the commissioner.

Minnesota.—Cassidy v. Smith, 13 Minn. 129, holding that the statute requiring the petition to be signed by not less than six legal voters living within a mile of the proposed road must be strictly observed.

Nebraska.—Letherman v. Hauser, 77 Nebr. 731, 110 N. W. 745 (holding that the statutory provision that the petition shall be signed by at least ten electors residing within five miles of the road is jurisdictional); Shull v. Brown, 25 Nebr. 234, 41 N. W. 186 [following Howard v. Dakota County, 25 Nebr. 229, 41 N. W. 185] (holding that where a petition for the establishment of a public road is presented to the county clerk under Comp. St. (1887) c. 78, by a greater number of signers than is required by law, and it is accompanied by an affidavit of one of such signers that all the signers are electors of the county in which the establishment of the road is desired, and that they reside within five miles of the proposed road, and is accompanied also with a deposit of money for the purpose of defraying the expenses in case the road should not be established, the county clerk will have jurisdiction to appoint a commissioner, as provided for by section 6 of said chapter, to view the proposed road); Horn v. Williamson, 4 Nebr. (Unoff.) 763, 96 N. W. 178 (holding that in the case of a consent road, all persons owning land to be taken must sign the petition).

New York.—People v. Warren County, 82 Hun 298, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 248 (holding that a highway commissioner as such cannot apply for a highway); Harrington v. People, 6 Barb. 607; People v. Eggleston, 13 How. Pr. 123; Brunswick Highway Com'rs v. Meserole, 10 Wend. 122.

Oregon.—King v. Benton County, 10 Oreg. 512 (holding that the county court has no jurisdiction to act on a petition for a county road signed by persons whose names are not on the notice); Kamer v. Clatsop County, 6 Oreg. 238 (holding that an unmarried man who keeps house and employs domestic servants is a householder, within Misc. Laws, c. 50, tit. 1, § 2, calling for a petition by householders for the establishment of a road).

South Dakota.—Kothe v. Berlin Tp., 19 S. D. 427, 103 N. W. 657 (holding that Rev. Pol. Code, § 1707, providing for the laying out of a highway on the petition of a specified number of voters owning real estate within one mile of the road, means one mile in a direct line, and not by the usual route of travel); Bockoven v. Lincoln Tp., 13 S. D. 317, 83 N. W. 335 (holding that under Comp. Laws, §§ 1296-1298, giving the board of supervisors jurisdiction to lay out highways and award compensation for the land appropriated for that purpose, on the filing of a petition with the board, signed by at least six legal voters who are owners of land or occupants under the homestead or pre-emption laws of the United States, or under contract from the state, situated within one mile from the proposed road, a petition signed by ten persons is sufficient, without designating how they held their land, although some of them were not qualified, where it appeared that six of them were competent).

Texas.—Huggins v. Hurt, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 404, 56 S. W. 944, holding that under Rev. St. art. 4671, giving commissioners' courts the power, and making it their duty, to lay out and open public roads "when necessary," that court has authority to establish a road on its own motion, and therefore is not without jurisdiction to appoint a jury of view and establish a road on petition of freeholders, because of the persons who sign the petition not exceeding five are freeholders residing in any road precinct through which the road is sought to be established.

Vermont.—Gilman v. Westfield, 47 Vt. 20, holding that a highway may be laid and established in one town solely upon the petition of residents thereof, although the only land and premises interested in the construction of the road are situate in an adjoining town.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 41.

of petitioners is a matter of evidence to be determined by the court on the hearing of the petition,<sup>44</sup> and the burden of proof is on petitioners.<sup>45</sup>

(II) RESPONDENTS.<sup>46</sup> In a proceeding to establish a highway the owner or occupant of the land affected must be made a party respondent,<sup>47</sup> and as a rule he is the only necessary party.<sup>48</sup> In New England, however, a town is a necessary party respondent in a proceeding to lay out a road therein.<sup>49</sup>

(III) ADDITION OR WITHDRAWAL. A purchaser pendente lite of land affected by a highway proceeding need not be added as a party respondent.<sup>50</sup> Petitioners for a highway are generally allowed, at any time before a final hearing and determination, to withdraw as such on payment of costs.<sup>51</sup>

Laws (1897), c. 199, authorizing county commissioners to locate a highway running into more than one town on a petition signed by twenty-four freeholders of a county, a petition containing twenty-four signatures, of which only twenty-one were those of freeholders, is fatally defective); State v. Macdonald, 26 Minn. 445, 4 N. W. 1107 (holding, under Gen. St. (1878) c. 13, § 76, which provides that "whenever a petition praying that a road be laid through two or more counties in any judicial district . . . signed by twenty legal voters, resident in said counties, shall be presented to the judge of the district court in said district, the said judge is hereby authorized to appoint three commissioners," who shall lay out such road, that the petition is sufficient, although all the twenty signers reside in one of the counties of such district); Knapp v. Reck, 90 Hun (N. Y.) 497, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 51 (holding, under Laws (1890), c. 568, providing (§ 82) that any person assessable for highway labor may apply to the commissioners to lay out a new highway, and (§ 92) that when application is made to lay out a highway in two or more towns, all notices required to be served on the commissioners shall be served on the commissioners of each town, a person in one town may initiate proceedings to lay out a highway located partly in two towns); Gilman v. Westfield, 47 Vt. 20.

Meaning of "freeholder."—Under Wis. Laws (1860), c. 31, § 2, providing that power to lay out a highway on or between lines of towns can be exercised only on petition of not less than "thirty resident freeholders," the term "freeholder" means a person who resides in the town and owns a freehold interest in land situated therein. *Damp v. The holder of an equitable title is not a necessary party. Hidden v. Davisson, 51 Cal. 138. However, one who has been placed in possession of land under a parol gift, and has lived on it for fourteen years, paid the taxes, and made lasting and valuable improvements thereon, is at least the equitable owner of the same, and where the county road commissioner is informed of these facts when he views such land in connection with proceedings to open a public road, the equitable owner should be made a party to the proceedings. Anderson v. Pemberton, 89 Mo. 61, 1 S. W. 216.

Towns in vicinity.—It is not necessary that towns in the vicinity of those through which a road is to pass, and which may be chargeable under the statute, should be made parties to the original application for the road; but where it is manifest that a town in the vicinity will be eventually charged by the commissioners with a portion of the expense, it is the better practice to make such town a party to the original petition. Webster v. Alton, 29 N. H. 369.

d. Citation and Notice; <sup>52</sup> Opportunity to Be Heard; Appearance — (1) NECESSITY. Effect on jurisdiction.—If, after the withdrawal of certain petitioners, the remaining petitioners are less than the required number, the proceeding is properly dismissed. Ralston v. Beall, 171 Ind. 719, 30 N. E. 1095. Contra, Little v. Thompson, 24 Ind. 146.

Effect of remonstrance by petitioner.—In a proceeding under Ohio Act Jan. 27, 1853, as amended by Ohio Act April 16, 1873, jurisdiction once properly attached is not defeated by any number of the petitioners becoming remonstrants against granting the prayer of the petition. Grinnell v. Adams, 34 Ohio St. 44. It is otherwise, however, under Ohio Act March 29, 1867, as amended by Ohio Act May 9, 1869. Hays v. Jones, 27 Ohio St. 218. However, until a petitioner for a road improvement has indicated in some unmistakable manner his intention to withdraw his consent and become a remonstrator, he may be counted as a petitioner. Dawson v. Barron, 9 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 706.

Waiver.—The right of petitioners to insist, in the circuit court, upon a motion to withdraw their names, made before the county commissioners had decided upon the sufficiency of the petition, is not waived by permitting the remonstrants in the first instance to move in the circuit court to dismiss the petition for want of jurisdiction, and allowing the case to be disposed of on that motion. Black v. Campbell, 112 Ind. 122, 13 N. E. 409. However, a request by a part of the signers of a petition for the alteration of a highway to withdraw their names therefrom when made for the first time after the commissioners of highways have passed on the petition comes too late. Tolono Highway Com'rs v. Bear, 224 Ill. 259, 79 N. E. 581.

Connecticut.—Shelton v. Derby, 27 Conn. 414, holding, under the statute with regard to the laying out of highways, which provides that an application to the superior court for a highway shall, unless the parties shall agree on the judgment to be rendered, be referred by the court to a committee, to be heard by them "at such time and place, and with such notice to those interested therein, as said court shall order," that by the term "those interested therein," persons other than those already before the court as parties to the record are intended, persons whose lands might be taken for the highway, or who might be injuriously affected by the laying out of the same, and who have therefore a right to be heard before the committee.

Delaware.—In re Jones, 6 Pennew. 463, 70 Atl. 15, holding, however, that service of notice of an intention to apply for the establishment of a public road upon him holding legal title to lands across which the road is to run is sufficient, although another has a life-interest therein, it being unnecessary to serve notice on the life-tenant or tenant in possession.

St. (1894) § 1808, providing that when town supervisors receive a petition for laying out a highway they shall cause notice of the time and place for hearing thereon to be served on all occupants of the land through which the highway may pass, the service must be had on the person having the actual possession and control of the land, and not on all who may reside thereon); *Cassidy v. Nebraska.—Barry v. Deloughrey, 47 Nebr. 354, 66 N. W. 410; State v. Otoe County, 6 Nebr. 129, holding that where the inhabitants jurisdictions it has been held that, in the absence of a general appearance by the per-of a county desire the opening of a new road, they must give notice that they will, at a specified time, present a petition therefor. However, the county board may, without petition or notice, make a preliminary order establishing a section-line road or declaring that it shall be opened; but before it can be actually opened there must be proceedings, upon proper notice, to ascertain damages. Damages, see infra, V, J.

New Jersey.—Pursell v. Edison Portland Cement Co., 65 N. J. L. 541, 47 Atl. 587; State v. Shreeve, 15 N. J. L. 57.

New York.—People v. Allen, 37 N. Y. App. Div. 248, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 1057 [affirmed in 162 N. Y. 615, 57 N. E. 1122], holding that proceedings for the establishing of a highway are void, even though a person whom the commissioners supposed to be the owner and occupant was served with notice and participated in the proceedings. However, notice of an application to lay out a highway need not be given to an owner who is not in occupation. The commissioners have jurisdiction if notice is given to the actual occupant of the lands required. People v. Allegany County Sup'rs, 36 How. Pr. 544. And under Long Island Highway Act (Acts (1830), c. 56), the land-owners are not entitled to notice of an application to the commissioners, or of any other steps in the proceedings. The only notice required is that to be given to the commissioners in case of an appeal from their decision. People v. Smith, 21 N. Y. 595.

Ohio.—Badgely v. Hamilton County, 1 Disn. 316, so holding as to non-resident owners.

Texas.—McCown v. Hill, (Civ. App. 1903) 73 S. W. 850. However, under Sayles Annot. Civ. St. (1897) arts. 4674, 4675, authorizing a county commissioners' court to lay out one first-class road in the direction of the county-seat of each adjacent county, and article 4676, providing the method of assessing damages from laying out such roads, notice to the owners of the land taken for the road is not essential to the validity of the proceedings. Morgan v. Oliver, (Civ. App. 1904) 80 S. W. 111 [reversed on other grounds in 98 Tex. 218, 82 S. W. 1028].

United States.—Burns v. Multnomah R. Co., 15 Fed. 177, 8 Sawy. 543.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 60.

Only owners of land taken for the proposed highway are entitled to notice. Huff v. Donehoo, 109 Ga. 638, 34 S. E. 1035, although they may be injured thereby. So where land has been occupied and held adversely for eighteen years by one claiming to be the owner, it is not necessary, in order to lay out a highway on such land, to serve the statutory notice on others claiming an interest in the land, although they are non-residents. Nedow v. Porter, 122 Mich. 456, 81 N. W. 256.

As shown by transfer books.—Under Iowa Code (1873), § 936, requiring notice of the lay-out of a highway to be served on each owner or occupier of land lying in, or abutting on, the proposed way, as shown by the auditor's transfer books, who resides in the county, failure to name, in the notice published, the record owners of the land, being non-residents, or to serve notice on the actual occupier, vitiates the proceedings. State v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 91 Iowa 275, 59 N. W. 35. The notice required to be given to each owner of land adjacent to a proposed highway must be served on those who are shown by the transfer books in the auditor's office to hold title to the land. Wilson v. Hathaway, 42 Iowa 173. And where the transfer books show title in a decedent notice need not be given to his heirs, although his death and the names of the heirs are shown by county records. Starry v. Treat, 102 Iowa 449, 71 N. W. 350. Service on railroad companies see infra, this note.

Husband and wife.—Under Ohio Act, Jan. 27, 1853 (Swan & C. St. p. 1291), relative to the opening of public roads, which requires that notice shall be given by the principal petitioner to the owner or owners of land through which the road is proposed to be laid out or altered, such notice should be given to both husband and wife, where the land sought to be appropriated is vested in the wife. Dwiggin v. Denver, 24 Ohio St. 629. S. D. Rev. Pol. Code, § 1707, provides that a petition for the laying out of a road shall contain the names of the owners of the lands, if known, over which the road is to pass. A petition for a road did not contain the name of plaintiff, who owned the land, but named her husband, who exercised acts of ownership over it, leased it in his own name, and received the rents, and plaintiff permitted her husband to represent her before the board of supervisors in the proceedings for the laying out of the road. It was held that, the husband having been named in the petition, and proper notice served on him, the failure to name the wife and to serve her with notice was not a jurisdictional defect. Kothe v. Berlin Tp., 19 S. D. 427, 103 N. W. 657. Where a wife owns an undivided interest in common with her husband in lands over which a public highway is laid out, she is entitled to receive previous written notice of the hearing. Whitcher v. Benton, 48 N. H. 157, 97 Am. Dec. 597. But a wife occupying with her husband a homestead the legal title to which is in the latter is not an owner of the land, within Kan. Gen. St. (1901) par. 6019, requiring notice of proceedings to establish a highway to be served on the owner. Mathewson v. Skinner, 66 Kan. 309, 71 Pac. 580. The marriage and subsequent change of name of one of the owners of the land through which the proposed road would run did not require a new and additional notice to her in order to give the court jurisdiction as to her. Schmidt v. Wright, 88 Ind. 56.

Infants.—To lay out a road on the lands of a minor without notice to his guardian or someone interested for him is error sufficient to set aside the report of viewers, although damages may have been assessed in his favor son interested, some form of process, such as a summons or an order to show cause, for the loss or injury occasioned thereby. Neeld's Road Case, 1 Pa. St. 353.

Heirs and legatees must have notice. Sheldon v. Derby, 27 Conn. 414 (holding that where the road was laid by the committee over land belonging to the unsettled estate of a deceased person, and the party remonstrating had no other interest than as one of the residuary legatees under the will of deceased and as one of his heirs at law, and the executors were authorized to sell the land and convert it into money, and the interest of the remonstrant under the will was liable to be divested upon a certain contingency, he had a sufficient interest in the land taken to have a right to object to the omission of the notice and to appear and remonstrate against the acceptance of the report); North Henderson Highway Com'rs v. People, 2 Ill. App. 24 (holding that where the record shows that a portion of land taken for a highway belongs to certain heirs, one of whom is a non-resident, and no notice is shown to have been given her, and it does not appear that any one is authorized to represent her, and she has never released her claim for damages, the commissioners of highways are justified in refusing to open the road); Boonville v. Ormond, 26 Mo. 193 (heirs).

Notice to agent held to be sufficient see In re Kimmey, 5 Harr. (Del.) 18 (overseer of non-resident); Pickford v. Lynn, 98 Mass. 491. Otherwise see Chase County v. Carter, 30 Kan. 581, 1 Pac. 814; Lullamire v. Kaufman County, 3 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 325, holding that a person who had been looking after land for a non-resident, and preventing persons from cutting timber on it, and who had contracted with the owner to fence the land, but who had no connection with it, was not an agent or attorney of the owner so that service on him, under Tex. Rev. St. art. 4470, in proceedings to establish a public road, of the notice required to be given, was service on the owner.

Trustee.—It is enough that notice be served on one of several trustees who has control of land. In re Ralph, 5 Pennew. (Del.) 124, 58 Atl. 1036.

The mortgagor is the proper person to serve with notice (Whiting v. New Haven, 45 Conn. 303; Goodrich v. Atchison County, 47 Kan. 355, 27 Pac. 1006, 18 L. R. A. 113; Cool v. Crommet, 13 Me. 250; Gurnsey v. Edwards, 26 N. H. 224), unless the mortgagee is in possession (Cool v. Crommet, supra; In re Parker, 36 N. H. 84, holding also that if the mortgagee in possession holds under a mortgage from a corporation, duly executed, the court will not, in a proceeding for laying out a highway, inquire whether the corporation had authority under its charter to make the mortgage).

A judgment creditor of the owner is not entitled to notice. Gimbel v. Stolte, 59 Ind. 446.

Where a highway is laid over a turnpike road, and the easement or franchise of the corporation is taken, it is not necessary to notify the owners of the land over which the turnpike road was established. Peirce v. Somersworth, 10 N. H. 369.

Death of owner pendente lite.—Where public notice of a meeting of the county commissioners for the purpose of locating a highway and assessing the damages was given in the manner prescribed by Mass. St. (1828) c. 103, § 3, it was sufficient as against the heirs of a person over whose land the highway was laid out, although such person died four days before the meeting, out of the commonwealth, and none of the heirs resided at that time within the commonwealth, or had actual notice. Taylor v. Hampden County, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 309.

A purchaser pendente lite is not entitled to notice. Murphy v. Beard, 138 Ind. 560, 38 N. E. 33; Graham v. Flynn, 21 Nebr. 229, 31 N. W. 742. Contra, Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 427.

Petitioner is not entitled to notice, since he is plaintiff. Graham v. Flynn, 21 Nebr. 229, 31 N. W. 742.

Railroad company.—A railroad running over the land of non-residents is such a resident occupier as must be served with notice of the lay-out of a highway over the land. State v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 91 Iowa 275, 59 N. W. 35. Where a railroad company's ownership of a railroad track is not shown by the county transfer book, notice of a report in favor of establishing a road across such track need not be served personally on an officer or agent of the road. State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 80 Iowa 586, 46 N. W. 741. Iowa Code (1873), § 936, relative to the establishment of highways, declares that "notice shall be served on each owner or occupier of land lying in the proposed highway, or abutting thereon, as shown by the transfer books in the auditor's office, who resides in the county, in the manner provided for service of original notice in actions of law." It was held that where it does not appear that the land proposed to be taken stands in the name of any one as owner on the auditor's books, a railway corporation which is in the open and notorious occupation of the land is entitled to notice, if a resident of the county. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ellithrope, 78 Iowa 415, 43 N. W. 277. In the application of the statutes relating to notice of the establishment of highways, a railway company is to be regarded as a resident of any county in which it operates its road or exercises corporate franchises. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ellithrope, supra; State v. Bogardus, 63 Kan. 259, 65 Pac. 251. Land belonging to a railroad company, on which its tracks are laid, is improved property, within the rule of court requiring notice to be given to owners of such property when a highway is proposed to be laid out over it. In re Lancaster City Road, 68 Pa. St. 396. A station agent at a depot on the grounds through which the highway is proposed to be laid out is the occupant of such grounds, upon whom notice may be served, under Sanborn & B. Annot. St. Wis.

is necessary.<sup>54</sup> In some of the New England states the town is entitled to notice of a proceeding to lay out a town way.<sup>55</sup> Persons interested likewise have a right to appear and be heard.<sup>56</sup> The authorities are in conflict as to whether persons interested are entitled to notice and a hearing on the question of the expediency or necessity of establishing a road, or of its public utility or convenience.<sup>57</sup>

(II) FORM AND SUFFICIENCY—(A) In General. A notice substantially conforming to the statutory requisites as to form is generally sufficient.<sup>58</sup> As a rule it should state the names of petitioners for the highway,<sup>59</sup> and the tribunal to whom the application will be made,<sup>60</sup> the time when the application is to be § 1267, providing for the service of such notices, or under section 2637, as amended by Laws (1887), c. 552 (2 Sanborn & B. Annot. St. p. 1512), providing for the service of summons in actions against railway companies. State v. O'Connor, 78 Wis. 282, 47 N. W. 433.

Township and borough officers.—Pa. Act May 2, 1899 (Pamphl. Laws 176), relating to notice to supervisors in proceedings for opening a road, does not require notice of a proposed opening and construction of a new road to be given to borough officers. In re Cornplanter Tp. Road, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 29. But all the supervisors of the township must be notified. In re Chartiers Tp. Road, 30 Pittsb. Leg. J. N. S. (Pa.) 268.

New notice after amendment of petition.—Where a petition for the location of a highway was filed after due notice, and subsequently an amended petition was filed changing the length of the proposed highway from two and one-half to one and three-quarter miles, but no new notice was given, the commissioners had no jurisdiction to determine the matters set forth in the amended petition, since in effect it amounted to a new proceeding. Thrall v. Gosnell, 28 Ind. App. 174, 62 N. E. 462.

County line road.—In proceedings to open a highway on the county line, where the petition and notice required by law are not posted in one of the counties, all the proceedings are void for want of jurisdiction. Schuchman v. Highway Com'rs, 52 Ill. App. 497.

Constructive notice is sufficient. Stewart v. Hines County Police Bd., 25 Miss. 479. And see Curran v. Shattrick, 24 Cal. 427.

54. Fletcher v. Fugate, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 631 (holding that, before appointing viewers of a proposed road, the county court should cause the owners of the land through which the road is to be passed to show cause why it should not be established); Anonymous, 2 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 91 (holding that to authorize the establishment of a public road it must appear that the owners of the land were summoned or that they appeared in court).

Sheldon*, 3 Mass. 188; Com. v. Chase, 2 Mass. 170; Com. v. Metcalf, 2 Mass. 118; Drown v. Barton, 45 Vt. 33.

However, a town in which no part of a road prayed for lies is not entitled to notice, although it is a party to the petition. Wind- sor v. Field, 1 Conn. 279. And it is not necessary that the towns in the vicinity of those through which a road is to pass, and which may be chargeable under the statute, should be notified of the hearing on the question of laying out the road. Webster v. Alton, 29 N. H. 369.

Only the town is entitled to notice of the pendency of a petition against it in court for the laying out of a road. The landowners' rights are secured by notice of hearing thereon. In re Toppan, 24 N. H. 43.

56. Shelton v. Derby, 27 Conn. 414 (holding that it was not necessary that before being permitted to appear a person interested should give a bond to the town, respondent on the record, to save it harmless from all cost resulting from his appearance, under the statute which provides that any member of a community appearing in and defending a suit brought against the community shall give such bond, since he was appearing in his own name, and to defend his own rights and not in the name or to defend the rights of the town); Storm Lake v. Iowa Falls, etc., R. Co., 62 Iowa 218, 17 N. W. 489 (tenant under lease perpetual at his option).

Con.—Lent v. Tillson, 72 Cal. 404, 14 Pac. 71; Com. v. Cambridge, 7 Mass. 158; People v. Smith, 21 N. Y. 595.

58. Stevens v. Cerro Gordo County, 41 Iowa 341, holding that a notice that a petition will be presented "for a new road" is in substance a notice of the petition for establishment of a new road, and is therefore sufficient.

59. King v. Benton County, 10 Ore. 512.

However, an immaterial variance between the names on the petition and notice is not a jurisdictional defect, and will not render the proceedings void. Bewley v. Graves, 17 Ore. 274, 20 Pac. 322.

60. Abbott v. Scott County, 36 Iowa 354 (holding, however, that notice stating that application will be made to the county auditor, who is ex officio clerk of the board of supervisors, or to the board of supervisors, is sufficiently certain, since the effect of notice is that, if the board of supervisors should be in session at the time named, the petition will be presented to them, and that, if not in session, it would be presented to the county auditor); Sweek v. Jorgensen, 33 Ore. 270, 54 Pac. 156 (holding, however, that notice that, at a session of the "county court for — County," a petition will be presented to "said court" to establish a road "within said county" along a certain line in H county, sufficiently shows, as against collateral attack, that the petition is to be presented to the county court of H county).

made<sup>61</sup> or when objections must be filed,<sup>62</sup> and the place of application.<sup>63</sup> It should also contain a description of the proposed road.<sup>64</sup> The notice is sometimes required to be signed,<sup>65</sup> but need not be under seal.<sup>66</sup>

(B) Time.<sup>67</sup> The statutory provisions as to the time of notice must be strictly observed.<sup>68</sup> It has been held that in computing the time both the day of service and the day of hearing must be excluded.<sup>69</sup>

61. State v. Waterman, 79 Iowa 360, 44 N. W. 677.

However, notice of the presentation of a petition to construct a road, stating that the petition would be presented on the first day of the next term of the board of commissioners, "which will be held on the first day of May," is not defective because such term in fact commenced on the "first Monday" in May, all persons being charged with notice of the statutory requirement (Burns Rev. St. Ind. (1901) § 7821) that such board shall meet on the first Monday of each month. Gifford v. Baker, 158 Ind. 339, 62 N. E. 690. And notice of an application for surveyors to lay out a road need not set out the precise hour of the day that the application will be made. In re Highway, 3 N. J. L. 665. See People v. Wallace, 4 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 438.

62. Beatty v. Beethe, 23 Nebr. 210, 36 N. W. 494, holding that, under Comp. St. (1881) c. 78, § 18, providing that in the location of highways a notice shall be published stating that objections to such highway must be filed by a day named therein, a notice which fails to fix such day gives the county commissioners no jurisdiction.

64. Butterfield v. Pollock, 45 Iowa 257; In re Highway, 16 N. J. L. 391, holding that the notice should designate the beginning and the terminating points.

A substantial description is sufficient. Jenkins v. Riggs, 100 Md. 427, 59 Atl. 758. Thus, although words may be used which, according to their strict literal meaning, render the description somewhat confused, yet if, on giving them their ordinary signification, and referring to the context, there does not seem to be any want of particularity as to the commencement, termination, or route of the proposed street, it is sufficient. State v. Orange, 32 N. J. L. 49. So a notice designating the points of commencement and termination of the highway, and indicating the line of route by intelligible reference to the lines of the congressional subdivisions of the land through which it passes, sufficiently describes the proposed highway. Woolsey v. Hamilton County, 32 Iowa 130. And where a notice sufficiently states the starting point and width, the use of the words, "varying so far as is necessary to find suitable ground for making a good and substantial road," will not vitiate the legality of the highway, so far as it actually follows the survey lines. Shepard v. Gates, 50 Mich. 495, 15 N. W. 878. And since the statutes do not require that the notice of an application of freeholders for appointment of surveyors to lay out a public road shall state the width of the road, proceedings will not be set aside because the width is not stated in such notice. State v. Shreve, 4 N. J. L. 297.

Obvious mistake.—A mistake in the notice respecting the proposed location will not defeat the jurisdiction of the supervisors if it is of such a character that a person would readily discover it. Butterfield v. Pollock, 45 Iowa 257.

Variance between notice and petition.—Where the description of a proposed public road in the notice to landowners of the petition for the road does not correspond with the description in the petition, the notice is insufficient. In re Parker, 2 Pennew. (Del.) 336, 45 Atl. 347. Variance between location and description in notice see infra, II, C, 5, h, (1), (C).

Douglas County*, 24 Oreg. 406, 33 Pac. 981 (holding, under Hill Annot. Laws Oreg. § 4063, providing that notice to establish a county road shall be served by posting in public places, and that it shall be posted thirty days previous to presentation of the petition, that a notice, without date, merely stating that at the next regular term of court a petition would be presented for change in a road, is not sufficient).

69. In re Public Roads, 5 Harr. (Del.) 174; Cox v. Hartford Tp. Highway Com'r, 83 Mich. 193, 47 N. W. 122; People v. Clay Tp. Highway Com'rs, 38 Mich. 247. Contra, under S. D. Comp. Laws, § 4805, which provides that the time in which any act provided by law is to be done is computed by excluding the first day and including the last.

(III) SERVICE — (A) In General. Service of the notice may be made by delivery thereof to the person concerned,<sup>70</sup> or by leaving it at his dwelling-house,<sup>71</sup> or it may be made constructively, as by publication in a newspaper,<sup>72</sup> or by posting a copy of the petition or notice.<sup>73</sup>

Williams v. Turner Tp., 15 S. D. 182, 87 N. W. 968.

70. See cases cited infra, this note.

Service on infant.—Where a committee appointed by the common pleas reported that a highway sought to be laid out would pass over the land of certain infants, a notice served on the infants themselves of the time and place for hearing the landowners is insufficient, and it was proper for the court, on motion by petitioners, to appoint a guardian ad litem for the infants, on whom legal notice might be served of the time and place of hearing. Clarke v. Gilmanton, 12 N. H. 515.

Service on town.—In proceedings under Conn. Rev. St. tit. 24, § 22, providing for an application to the superior court for relief by any party aggrieved by the doings of selectmen in laying out a highway, and that the selectmen shall be duly cited to show reason why the relief should not be granted, the town is the party respondent, and service on one of the selectmen is sufficient. Baker v. Windham, 25 Conn. 597. And see Plainfield v. Packer, 11 Conn. 576.

Sufficiency of service generally.—The fact that the copy of a petition for a highway, and of the clerk's order of notice on the petition, served on the towns, were made and served by petitioner himself, did not render the service insufficient. McClure v. Groton, 50 N. H. 49. Where witness saw plaintiff a distance from him, and called to him to come and get a notice of proceedings to open a road, and plaintiff sent his wife after the paper, and she placed it in his hands, there was a valid personal service on plaintiff. Vogt v. Bexar County, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 567, 42 S. W. 127. Where the notice by the supervisors of the time and place of meeting to decide on the application for the laying out of a highway is served by reading the notice to those entitled to it it is a personal service. Green v. State, 56 Wis. 583, 14 N. W. 620.

71. Winchester v. Hinsdale, 12 Conn. 88 (holding that service of a petition for a highway on a town by leaving a copy at the usual place of abode of one of the selectmen is good); Sanborn v. Meredith, 58 N. H. 150.

72. State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 68 Iowa 135, 26 N. W. 37 (holding also that a foreign railroad corporation across whose tracks a highway is being established is not an "owner or occupier . . . who resides in the county," within the meaning of Iowa Code (1873), § 936, requiring written notice of the proposed establishment of a highway, and consequently it is not entitled to notice otherwise than by publication); Wilson v. Hathaway, 42 Iowa 173; State v. Beeman, 35 Me. 242 (where no mode is pointed out by statute for giving notice); Pawnee County v. Storm, 34 Nebr. 735, 52 N. W. 696.

Presumption of notice.—In such case notice is imputed to the person concerned, regardless of his actual knowledge. State v. Beeman, 35 Me. 242; East Baltimore Station Methodist Protestant Church v. Baltimore, 6 Gill (Md.) 391, 48 Am. Dec. 540. And see Pawnee County v. Storm, 34 Nebr. 735, 52 N. W. 696.

Character of newspaper.—Where public notice in road cases is required to be made in two newspapers nearest the road, such publication made in two German newspapers in the German language is not according to law. In re Upper Hanover Road, 44 Pa. St. 277.

Affidavit for publication.—In an action by a county to obtain a right of way over land for a highway, the affidavit for the publication of the summons, when the person on whom service is to be made resides out of the state, must state that the proceedings directed by Cal. Pol. Code, §§ 2698-2708, have been had, or no cause of action is shown. Yolo County v. Knight, 70 Cal. 430, 11 Pac. 662.

73. Wilson v. Hathaway, 42 Iowa 173; Mathewson v. Clinton Tp., 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 204, holding that want of personal notice to the owner of seated land will not render void the decree of the court of quarter sessions establishing a road over it, although such notice is required by rule of court, notice by posting advertisements, as required by Pa. Act, Feb. 24, 1845, having been given.

Posting held to be necessary see Frizell v. Rogers, 82 Ill. 109; North Henderson Highway Com'rs v. People, 2 Ill. App. 24; Anderson v. San Francisco, 92 Minn. 57, 99 N. W. 420; Cassidy v. Smith, 13 Minn. 129; People v. Stedman, 57 Hun (N. Y.) 280, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 787, holding, under a statute which requires every person applying for the laying out of a highway to cause notices in writing to be posted in three of the most public places in the town, specifying as near as possible the proposed route of the highway, etc., that it is not sufficient to deposit such notices in the mail, addressed to the persons whose land is to be affected by the proposed highway.

Both petition and notice must be posted under a statute requiring that petitioners "shall cause a copy of their petition and notice stating when said petition will be presented to the township board to be heard, to be posted." Peed v. Barker, 61 Mo. App. 556.

Copies of the notice may be posted under Hill Annot. Laws Oreg. § 4063, providing that a petition for the establishment of a county road shall be accompanied by "proof that notice has been given by advertisement, posted at the place of holding county court, and also in three public places" in the vicinity of the proposed road. Vedder v. Marion County, 22 Oreg. 264, 29 Pac. 619.

Posting by county commissioner.—The fact that one of the county commissioners posted the notice of the petition for a highway does not affect the validity of the order establishing the road. Schmidt v. Wright, 88 Ind. 56.

(B) Return or Proof.<sup>74</sup> As a rule there should be due proof of service of the notice required by statute.<sup>75</sup>

Posting as notice to residents.—Hurd Rev. St. Ill. (1899) c. 121, § 43, providing that where it appears in proceedings before town commissioners to lay out a road that there are “non-resident or unknown owner or owners, who cannot be found and served within the county,” service of notice of such proceedings may be made on the occupant of the land and by posting notice, cannot be construed to authorize such service on a known resident landowner who cannot be found. Afton Highway Com’rs v. Ellwood, 193 Ill. 304, 61 N. E. 1033. However, the posting by the selectmen of the town of a notice of their intention to lay out a town way, as required by Mass. Gen. St. c. 43, § 61, is a sufficient notice to the owner of the land taken, although a resident of the town, if such ownership be not known to the selectmen. Healey v. Newton, 119 Mass. 480.

Place of posting.—A notice posted more than a mile from the proposed route is not a sufficient compliance with Mills Annot. St. Colo. § 3934, requiring the posting of notices along a road proposed to be established. Williams v. Routt County, 37 Colo. 55, 84 Pac. 1109. But a notice posted at a railroad depot about six or seven hundred feet from where the proposed road connects with the main highway, at which point there is no suitable place for posting it, is posted at a public place in the vicinity of the proposed road, within the meaning of Mont. Comp. St. div. 5, § 1809, providing that such notice shall be so posted. Territory v. Lannon, 9 Mont. 1, 22 Pac. 495. The word “township,” in Iowa Revision, § 823, requiring notice of presentation of a petition for the establishment of a road to be posted in three public places in each “township” through which the road passes, refers to townships created by state, and not by federal laws. McCollister v. Shuey, 24 Iowa 362. Where it was required by a town that notice of its meetings should be posted at the town house on a specified street, posting at “the town house” was held sufficient, it not being shown that more than one town house existed. State v. Beeman, 35 Me. 242. In Minnesota the petition or notice is required to be posted in three public places. Anderson v. San Francisco, 92 Minn. 57, 99 N. W. 420; Cassidy v. Smith, 13 Minn. 129. Minn. Gen. St. (1894) § 1030, providing for the posting of notices for laying out of county roads and for the designation of places for the posting of such notices, is to be so construed as to effectuate the obvious purpose of the legislature of providing effective means of securing posting of notices at public places. Accordingly where two notices were posted in strict conformity with the statute, and the third, because no post had been provided for by the supervisors until a later period, was posted at a public place, in the ordinary acceptance of the term, which had been previously designated and used for posting notices, not then a statutory place for posting, the irregularity did not deprive the county board of jurisdiction. Lutgen v. Stearns County, 99 Minn. 499, 110 N. W. 1, a case in which the third notice was posted on a tree near a designated school-house, which was one of the most public places in the township. Under Minn. Gen. St. (1894) § 1883, as amended by Gen. Laws (1895), c. 47, providing for roads in more than one county, and directing the presentation of the petition to the judge of the district court in the district in which one of the counties is situated, which must be posted thirty days prior to its presentation at three of the most public places in such judicial district, where the road runs in two judicial districts, notices of the presentation of the petition need be posted only in the judicial district wherein the petition was presented to the court. Forster v. Winona County, 84 Minn. 308, 87 N. W. 921. And in Missouri, where the statute relating to the establishment of public roads provides that notice shall be given by hand-bills put up in three or more public places in the township or townships, one to be put up at the proposed beginning and one at the proposed termination of the road, a proposed road ran through two townships, and three notices were posted, one at the beginning and one at the end of the proposed road, and the third at a public place on the line, and it was held a compliance with the statute. Bennett v. Hall, 184 Mo. 407, 83 S. W. 439.

74. Record and presumption as to notice see infra, II, C, 5, i, (1), (D).

75. Delaware.—In re Parker, 2 Pennew. 336, 45 Atl. 347 (holding that where there was no proof, by affidavit or in open court, of the service of notice on landowners of a petition for a public road, the notice was insufficient); Isaacs’ Petition, 1 Pennew. 61, 39 Atl. 588 (holding that proof of service of notice on the landowners through whose property a public road is proposed to be run must be made before the order to lay out the road is granted).

Illinois.—North Henderson Highway Com’rs v. People, 2 Ill. App. 24, holding that in the absence of proof that Rev. St. c. 121, § 71, has been complied with, requiring copies of the petition for laying out the proposed highway to be posted, etc., the commissioners must refuse to act.

Indiana.—Wright v. Wells, 29 Ind. 354, holding that the sufficiency of the proof of the posting of the notice of the petition is a jurisdictional fact, which must be determined by the board of commissioners before the appointment of viewers.

Kansas.—State v. Farry, 23 Kan. 731, holding that a county board cannot establish a road without first complying with Comp.

(IV) OBJECTIONS AND WAIVER. Notice of a proceeding to lay out a high-

Laws (1879), c. 89, § 4, which requires the giving of notice to the landowners, and the filing of affidavits of service, with copies of the notice, in the county clerk's office.

Kentucky.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Gerard, 130 Ky. 18, 112 S. W. 915, holding that the giving of notice prior to filing the petition is an indispensable jurisdictional fact that must be made to appear in the county court, either by the record or the introduction of evidence.

New Jersey.—State v. Shreeve, 15 N. J. L. 57, holding that the court of common pleas have no jurisdiction to appoint surveyors of the highways without due proof that the advertisements have been set up according to law.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 69. See, however, Pagels v. Oaks, 64 Iowa 198, 19 N. W. 905 (holding that under Code (1873), §§ 937, 938, providing that, if the auditor is satisfied that notice has been served and published as required, he shall proceed to establish the road, no filing of an affidavit of publication is necessary to give the county supervisors jurisdiction to establish a highway, and the burden of showing want of notice is on the party objecting thereto); Forster v. Winona County, 84 Minn. 308, 87 N. W. 921 (holding that Gen. St. (1894) § 1883, as amended by Gen. Laws (1895), c. 47, providing for roads in more than one county, and directing the presentation of the petition to the judge of the district court in the district in which one of the counties is situated, which must be posted thirty days prior to its presentation at three of the most public places in such district, does not require affidavits of posting to be filed at the time of the presentation of the petition; it is enough if the notices are in fact posted).

By whom made.—In Nebraska proof of posting should be made by the affidavit of the person who posted the notice. State v. Oteo County, 6 Nebr. 129. In New Hampshire, however, it is not necessary that the return of service should be made by the person making the service, but any other satisfactory proof of the fact of service is sufficient. Parish v. Gilmanton, 11 N. H. 293. In Oregon the proof may be by the affidavit of one of the petitioners, who knows that such notice has been given. Gaines v. Linn County, 21 Ore. 425, 28 Pac. 131.

Oral proof may be given that a person who was inadvertently omitted in the affidavit of service of notice on the landowners through whose property a public road was petitioned for was served with notice. Isaacs' Petition, 1 Pennw. (Del.) 61, 39 Atl. 588.

Necessity of calling witnesses.—To prove that copies of the petition were properly posted, it is not necessary to call as witnesses the parties who posted them. Their ex parte affidavits attached to the petition are sufficient. Wells v. Hicks, 27 Ill. 343.

The affidavit should state when, where, and by whom the notices were posted. State v. Oteo County, 6 Nebr. 129. Howell Annot.

St. Mich. § 1298, requires notice of proceedings to lay out a highway to be served on railroad companies by leaving a copy "with the agent in charge of any ticket or freight office of the company," etc. Section 1299 provides that, on service of the notice required by the last section, the person by whom the service was made shall make an affidavit stating the time and manner of service, "and, if upon a railroad company, the fact of such service, and upon whom." It was held that an affidavit showing merely that service was made on a railroad company "by leaving a copy of the notice with their freight agent at Dorr station," without giving his name, or showing that he was in charge of the freight office, is insufficient. Truax v. Sterling, 74 Mich. 160, 41 N. W. 885.

Certificate of posting.—Under Ill. Rev. Laws (1874), c. 121, § 71, providing that a copy of a petition for a highway shall be posted up in three of the most public places in the town, and that the posting of any such notice required by the act may be proved by affidavit of the person posting the same, or by other legal evidence, it is not sufficient proof of such posting that at the end of the petition there appears this recital, "I hereby certify this was posted according to law." Frizell v. Rogers, 82 Ill. 109.

Affidavit as aided by record.—An affidavit stating that a notice of the intention to petition for the opening of a road was posted more than thirty days before presentation of said petition, and to which a copy of the notice is attached, and which bears a notation purporting to state the date when the notice was posted, such date being more than thirty days prior to the presentation of the petition, when taken in connection with the order of the county court establishing the road, which recites that it appears from proof filed that due notice of the proceeding has been given more than thirty days prior to the presentation of the petition, sufficiently shows that the posting was made at a date more than thirty days before the presentation of the petition. French-Glenn Live-Stock Co. v. Harney County, 36 Ore. 138, 58 Pac. 35. So posting of notice in three public places within the vicinity of the proposed road is sufficiently shown by affidavits designating places where notices were posted, as a barn on the line of road, the barn of V, and a fence at the east end of the road, and the recital, in the journal entry of the court appointing viewers, that it appeared that the notice had been posted in three of the most public places along the line. Sweek v. Jorgensen, 33 Ore. 270, 54 Pac. 156. Record and presumption as to notice see infra, II, C, 5, i, (1), (D).

Power to administer oath.—Since Ind. Rev. St. (1842) p. 189, § 52, gives the county auditor power to administer all oaths necessary for the performance of the duties of his office, and since, by virtue of his office, he is clerk of the board of commissioners of highway may be waived by a landowner;<sup>76</sup> and if he appears generally and participates in the proceeding he thereby waives the absence of notice or defects therein.<sup>77</sup> So notice may be waived by the consent of the landowner to the laying out of the road.<sup>78</sup> The right to object to the absence of notice is generally regarded as personal.<sup>79</sup>

e. Petition or Other Application—(1) NECESSITY. Unless expressly required ways, the proof of putting up the notices of an intended application, and that the petition was signed by the requisite number of freeholders, might be made on oath administered by the county auditor. Milhollin v. Thomas, 7 Ind. 165.

76. McCown v. Hill, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 73 S. W. 850 (so holding, although the notice is jurisdictional); Allen v. Parker County, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 536, 57 S. W. 703. And see cases cited infra, note 77 et seq.

Kansas.—State v. Hadeen, 47 Kan. 402, 28 Pac. 203 (holding that, although no notice is given to one of the owners through whose land a highway is laid out, or any finding made that he is a non-resident of the county, the want of jurisdiction is cured by the presentation by him to the county commissioners of a claim for damages in consequence of the opening of the road); Woodson County v. Heed, 33 Kan. 34, 5 Pac. 543 (holding that where county commissioners had jurisdiction over the laying out of a road, but not over the person of one landowner, his presentation of a claim for damages after the opening of the road was a waiver of want of jurisdiction).

Massachusetts.—Hyde Park v. Wiggin, 157 Mass. 94, 31 N. E. 693; Copeland v. Packard, 16 Pick. 217 (holding that where a party was present at the town meeting when the proceedings of selectmen laying out a road were approved, and objected that he was not allowed sufficient amount of damages, he cannot thereafter object that he had not received sufficient notice of the laying out of such road); In re New Salem, 6 Pick. 470.

Michigan.—Page v. Boehler, 154 Mich. 693, 118 N. W. 602, holding that jurisdiction was obtained over a landowner by his participation in the proceedings and taking an appeal.

New Hampshire.—Roberts v. Stark, 47 N. H. 223 (holding that if a town files exceptions to the notice and at the same time contests the petition on other grounds, the defect in the notice will be waived); Peavey v. Wolfborough, 37 N. H. 286 (holding that objections to the notices, if not taken at the hearing, will be waived).

North Carolina.—Little v. May, 10 N. C. 599.

Pennsylvania.—In re Corplanter Tp. Road, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 29, holding that where a borough has actual notice of proceedings to open a road, and its representatives are present at the view, it has no standing subsequently to object that written notice was not served on its officers, and that a duly attested copy of the notice was not filed in the office of the clerk of the quarter sessions.

South Dakota.—Issenhuth v. Baum, 11 S. D. 223, 76 N. W. 928.

Texas.—Onken v. Riley, 65 Tex. 468, holding that a landowner who was present when a road was laid out through his land by a jury of freeholders appointed by the commissioner's court, and also when their action was confirmed and adopted by the court, cannot object to such road on the ground of want of notice to him of the proceedings for its establishment.

Vermont.—Robinson v. Winch, 66 Vt. 110, 28 Atl. 884, holding that want of notice of a hearing by the board of selectmen as to the necessity of a highway is waived by one's appearance at the hearing.

Virginia.—Tench v. Abshire, 90 Va. 768, 19 S. E. 779.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 70.

Otherwise unless the occupant consents to the laying out of the road over his land, or accepts damages, or in some way adopts the acts of the supervisors as his own. State v. Langer, 29 Wis. 68.

However, the consent of the proprietors of land where a road is to pass must be given in court, and not to the commissioners appointed to view the road. Crawford v. Snowden, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 228.

79. Knox v. Epsom, 56 N. H. 14 (holding that persons interested in the laying out of a highway, but who are not by statute entitled to notice of the petition, cannot object to the sufficiency of the notice given to a town which is entitled to notice); Hasler v. Hitler, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 233, 11 Cinc. L. Bul. 246 (holding that where a landowner through whose land the proposed way is to be constructed waives his right to compensation and damages for the taking of such land, persons other than such landowner cannot object that he was not served with notice of the proceedings to lay out such way). But see State v. Logue, 73 Wis. 598, 41 N. W. 1061, holding that the fact that a landowner signed the petition for a highway does not dispense with the necessity of notice to the public and other owners, and he may avail himself of want of such notice to impeach the proceedings.

by statute, which is usually the case,<sup>80</sup> it is not necessary to the valid laying out of a highway that there should have been a petition or other application therefor.<sup>81</sup>

(II) FORMAL REQUISITES. A petition for the establishment of a highway should be addressed to the court or board having jurisdiction to establish highways.<sup>82</sup> It need not be signed by petitioners,<sup>83</sup> in the absence of a statute to the contrary.<sup>84</sup>

(III) SUFFICIENCY<sup>85</sup> — (A) In General. A petition for the establishment of a highway should contain all the facts required to be stated therein by statute in order to confer jurisdiction.<sup>86</sup> It is not essential that the petition should follow the exact language of the statute. Language unmistakably indicating its object and purpose will be held sufficient.<sup>87</sup>

In Nebraska the establishment of section-line roads is governed by the special provisions of Road Law, § 46, by which all section lines are declared to be public roads, and may be opened as such whenever, in the judgment of the county boards, the public interest demands, a petition not being essential. Barry v. Deloughrey, 47 Nebr. 354, 66 N. W. 410; Rose v. Washington County, 42 Nebr. 1, 60 N. W. 352; Howard v. Brown, 37 Nebr. 902, 56 N. W. 713; McNair v. State, 26 Nebr. 257, 41 N. W. 1099; Throckmorton v. State, 20 Nebr. 647, 31 N. W. 232.

In New York it is not necessary to the valid laying out of a highway, that there should have been a written application therefor, but the commissioner may act of his own motion, 1 Rev. St. p. 513, § 55, providing that, whenever the commissioners shall lay out any road either "upon application or otherwise," they shall cause a survey to be made, etc. Marble v. Whitney, 28 N. Y. 297; People v. Richmond County, 20 N. Y. 252; McCarthy v. Whalen, 19 Hun 503 [affirmed in 82. State v. Barlow, 61 Iowa 572, 16 N. W. 733.

However, it is no cause for complaint that the petition runs to the clerk of the board of supervisors instead of the board itself. State v. Barlow, 61 Iowa 572, 16 N. W. 733. Nor is a petition fatally defective because it is addressed to the wrong court, where it was filed and indorsed in the proper court, and all subsequent proceedings, including the appointment of viewers, and the confirmation of their report, were made by that court. In re Union Tp. Road, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 573. An omission in the address, not going to the jurisdiction, cannot be taken advantage of by a motion to dismiss. Tucker v. Eden, 68 Vt. 168, 34 Atl. 698.

83. Warren v. Gibson, 40 Mo. App. 469.

84. Cooper v. Harmon, 170 Ind. 113, 83 N. E. 704, holding, however, that the fact that many of the signers of such petition signed their christian names by the initials does not warrant the dismissal of the petition, but merely entitles defendants upon proper motion to have the full christian and surname of each petitioner entered of record.

Averment of ultimate facts is sufficient. Sullivan v. Cline, 33 Oreg. 260, 54 Pac. 154.

87. Stevens v. Cerro Gordo County, 41 Iowa 341.

No particular words or form of words are required by the statute in applications to the county commissioners for the location of roads, and the greatest technical accuracy and precision is not to be expected. Windham v. Cumberland County, 26 Me. 406. Thus a petition for the appointment of a commissioner "to open a road" sufficiently complies with a statute providing for the "establishment" (Stevens v. Cerro Gordo County, 41 Iowa 341; McCollister v. Shuey, 24 Iowa 362) or "laying out" (Winooski Lumber, etc., Co. v. Colchester, 57 Vt. 538) of a road. Likewise a petition for the appointment of a commissioner to "examine into the expediency of establishing" the road confers jurisdiction un-

(B) Particular Averments — (1) QUALIFICATION OF PETITIONERS. Unless required by statute, it is not necessary that the petition should show on its face that petitioners possessed the requisite qualifications.<sup>88</sup> This fact is a matter of evidence to be determined by the board or court on the hearing of the petition.<sup>89</sup>

(2) OWNERSHIP OR OCCUPANCY OF LAND. A petition for the location of a highway is frequently required to give the names of the owners and occupants or agents of all lands over which the proposed road is to run,<sup>90</sup> or, if unknown, it must so state.<sup>91</sup>

(3) UTILITY, NECESSITY, AND CHARACTER OF ROAD. When required by statute, a petition for a highway should aver that the highway is of public utility and necessity.<sup>92</sup> But it is not necessary that the exact language of the statute der such a statute. State v. Pitman, 38 Iowa 252. Nor does jurisdiction fail merely because the word "road" instead of "highway" is used in the petition or in the record, if an examination of the whole will show what description of road was intended. Windham v. Cumberland County, supra. And see Dartmouth v. Bristol County, 153 Mass. 12, 26 N. E. 425. But a petition asking that a highway commencing and terminating at designated points "be ——" not indicating the relief desired, is insufficient to confer jurisdiction on the board to establish a highway. Lehmann v. Rinehart, 90 Iowa 346, 57 N. W. 866.

Brown*, 55 Ind. 596 (holding that it is sufficient to allege in the alternative that such persons are owners, occupants, or agents); Vawter v. Gilliland, 55 Ind. 278 (holding that the petition is fatally defective where, instead of setting out the full given names of the owners of the land, it gives initials only of the christian names of the individual owners, and the firm-names only of the owners in partnership); Hughes v. Sellers, 34 Ind. 337 (holding that it is not a sufficient designation of such owners to say that they are the heirs of a person named); Hays v. Campbell, 17 Ind. 430; Milhollin v. Thomas, 7 Ind. 165 (holding, however, that the fact that the petition, while stating the owners of the land through which the road would pass, failed to state who occupied the land, will not affect the jurisdiction of the commissioners); Cowing v. Ripley, 76 Mich. 650, 43 N. W. 648; Navin v. Martin, (Mo. App. 1907) 102 S. W. 61; Mulligan v. Martin, 125 Mo. App. 630, 102 S. W. 59; Godchaux v. Carpenter, 19 Nev. 415, 14 Pac. 140.

A map accompanying the petition, and showing the names of the landowners, may be considered in determining the sufficiency of the petition. Bennett v. Hall, 184 Mo. 407, 83 S. W. 439.

Highway crossing railroad.—Where the route of a proposed highway crosses a railroad, the petition should name the railroad company as one of the owners of the land crossed by it. Lyle v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 55 Minn. 223, 56 N. W. 820. But see Weymouth v. York County, 86 Me. 391, 29 Atl. 1100, holding that a petition need not aver the fact that the way will cross a railroad track, although the railroad company must receive notice of the pendency of the petition.

In Alabama it is held that, although the petition should properly state facts to show the expediency of the road prayed for, yet it is not demurrable for omitting to do so. Lowndes County Com'rs Ct. v. Bowie, 34 Ala. 461.

In Indiana, in a petition to locate a highway under Acts (1905), c. 167, § 21, it is not necessary to allege that the proposed highway will be of public utility, or that the cost thereof will be less than the benefits, since it is the duty of the county commissioners to appoint viewers, if the jurisdictional facts exist, and thereafter the matters suggested are to be considered. Cooper v. Harmon, 170 Ind. 113, 83 N. E. 704; Conaway as to convenience and necessity be followed, a substantial allegation thereof being sufficient.<sup>93</sup>

(4) NEGLECT OR REFUSAL OF SELECTMEN TO ESTABLISH ROAD. Under a statute authorizing an application to the county court for a highway from place to place within the same town only where the selectmen neglect or refuse to lay out the same, it has been decided that the averment of such neglect or refusal is indispensable to give the court jurisdiction.<sup>94</sup>

(5) DESCRIPTION OF ROAD. Technical accuracy is not necessary in the description of a proposed line of road.<sup>95</sup> It is sufficient if the description is so definite and certain as to enable persons familiar with the locality to locate the way,<sup>96</sup> and to enable a surveyor to run it.<sup>97</sup> Thus the petition must describe with reasonable certainty the terminal points of the proposed way<sup>98</sup> and its general

v. Ascherman, 94 Ind. 187; Bowers v. Snyder, 88 Ind. 302.

93. Plainfield v. Packer, 11 Conn. 576 (holding that a petition was sufficient which stated that, in the opinion of petitioners, common convenience and necessity required that a new highway should be laid out between the two places, and that thereby the distance would be greatly lessened, and not only the travel in the immediate neighborhood, but also the general travel, be greatly facilitated); Windsor v. Field, 1 Conn. 279 (holding that where a petition for a highway alleged that the old road was "very circuitous, hilly, and on bad ground," and that a new road might be laid out between the same termini "so as to greatly accommodate the public, with little expense to the town, or injury to private property," it was sufficient, under the statute, without alleging that the highway "is wanting," or that it would be of "common convenience or necessity"); Lockwood v. Gregory, 4 Day (Conn.) 407 (holding that an application for a highway by petition, under the statute, need not state that the road prayed for would be "of common convenience or necessity," if the facts stated induce such an inference).

94. Torrington v. Nash, 17 Conn. 197 (holding that an averment that the "town" neglected and refused to lay out the highway is not equivalent to an averment that the "selectmen" neglected and refused to lay out the highway); Plainfield v. Packer, 11 Conn. 576 (holding further that it must appear from the record that the averment is true; otherwise the proceeding is erroneous); Waterbury v. Darien, 9 Conn. 252 (holding, however, that the allegation of a special demand or request is unnecessary); Treat v. Middletown, 8 Conn. 243; In re Kennett, 24 N. H. 139 (holding that an affidavit saying, "I am confident that a petition was presented to the selectmen before any petition was filed in court," is not sufficient alone to prove that fact); In re Patten, 16 N. H. 277.

In Maine the petition must allege that the refusal was unreasonable. Goodwin v. Sagadahoc County, 60 Me. 328. But a specific statement of all the acts and facts which constitute an unreasonable refusal is unnecessary. True v. Freeman, 64 Me. 573.

The caption of a petition for a road view may be considered in connection with the petition in determining whether the termini and the names of the township and county are sufficiently stated. In re Quemahoning Tp. Road, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 150.

The petition may be aided by the report of the viewers as respects the description of the termini. In re Bensalem Tp. Road, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. 398.

The maxim that "that is certain which is capable of being made certain" applies to a petition for a road, as to stating the definite points where the road shall begin and end. State v. Lane, 26 Iowa 223; In re Private Road, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 514; In re West Goshen Roads, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 250.

Alternative termini.—It has been held that it is not a valid objection to the proceedings that the petition describes alternative places for its location or its termini. Packard v. Androscoggin County, 80 Me. 43, 12 Atl. 788; Sumner v. Oxford County, 37 Me. 112.

"At or near" designated points.—An application for a road stating the termini to be "at or near" certain designated points is sufficiently certain. Westport v. Bristol County, 9 Allen (Mass.) 203; State v. Northrop, 18 N. J. L. 271; In re Sterrett Tp. Road, 114 Pa. St. 627, 7 Atl. 765; In re Verona Borough, etc., Road, 9 Pa. Cas. 114, 12 Atl. 456; Miller's Case, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 35; In re Cornplanter Tp. Road, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 20. But see De Long v. Schimmel, 58 Ind. 64; Farmer v. Pauley, 50 Ind. 583. Thus the terminus of a public road petitioned for is sufficiently described as a stake marked in a certain way near a certain house. In re Ralph, 5 Pennew. (Del.) 124, 58 Atl. 1036. So a petition has been held to sufficiently define the terminus of a road where it describes it as ending at a certain point in a proposed public road. The fact that the road for the terminal point is not yet laid out does not render the terminus indefinite. In re West Goshen Roads, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 250.

Designation of county or township.—Ordinarily a petition to appoint viewers to lay out a public road must state the county or township in which it is to be opened. In re Private Road, 1 Pearson (Pa.) 170; In re New Hanover Tp. Road, 2 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 40. But where the terminal points are described with such particularity that no difficulty can be had in locating them, it has been held that it is not necessary to state in what county or township such points are. Sutherland v. Holmes, 78 Mo. 399; Oxford Tp. v. Brands, 45 N. J. L. 332; In re South Abington Tp. Road, 109 Pa. St. 118; In re Rostraver Tp. Road, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 195; In re Bellevernon Road, 15 Wkly. Descriptions of termini held insufficient see In re Mills, 5 Pennew. (Del.) 16, 58 Atl. 825; McDonald v. Wilson, 59 Ind. 54; Sime v. Spencer, 30 Ore. 340, 47 Pac. 919; Woodruff v. Douglas County, 17 Ore. 314, 21 Pac. 49; In re Dunbar Tp. Road, 12 Pa. Super. Ct. 491; In re Montgomery Tp. Road, 15 Pa. Co. Ct. 384; In re Pocopson Road, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 617; In re Warrington Tp. Road, 8 Del. Co. (Pa.) 79.

99. Smith v. Weldon, 73 Ind. 454; Scraper v. Pipes, 59 Ind. 158; Andover v. Oxford County, 86 Me. 185, 29 Atl. 982; Sumner v. Oxford County, 37 Me. 112.

Intermediate points.—Except when required by statute (see Nelson v. Yamhill County, 41 Ore. 560, 69 Pac. 678; Ames v. Union County, 17 Ore. 600, 22 Pac. 118; Woodruff v. Douglass County, 17 Ore. 314, 21 Pac. 49), it is generally held improper for the petition to fix any intermediate points. The terminal points and the general course only should be stated, leaving the route to the discretion of the commissioners or viewers. Wiggin v. Exeter, 13 N. H. 304; In re Highway, 7 N. J. L. 37; In re Middlesex County, etc., Road, 4 N. J. L. 34. Thus a petition which discloses an attempt to locate one fifth of a road in what purported to be a designation of one of the termini, which is followed by the viewers, makes the proceedings so defective that they must be set aside by the appellate court on review. In re Allegheny Tp. Road, 14 Pa. Super. Ct. 244. But where a single petition embraces three distinct roads designed to form a system of roads, if the termini of one road indicate intermediate points in another proposed road, it will not be fatal to the proceedings, if the jury is not controlled by the intermediate points designated. In re West Goshen Roads, 7 Pa. In Illinois, under Road Act (1883), § 54, providing for the laying out of a road "from a lot of land to a public road," the petition must contain a suitable description of the lot. Fulton County Highway Com'rs v. Malloy, 21 Ill. App. 184.

(iv) APPLICATION RELATING TO TWO OR MORE ROADS. In the absence of express statutory authority,<sup>3</sup> some decisions lay down the rule that several distinct highways cannot be prayed for in the same petition,<sup>4</sup> unless they connect with one another<sup>5</sup> or are closely identified and designed to form a system of roads.<sup>6</sup> On the other hand it has been held that while such a proceeding is doubtless irregular, and it may be safer and better to require that a separate petition be filed in each case,<sup>7</sup> such irregularity is not jurisdictional.<sup>8</sup> By the weight of authority a prayer for a new road and the vacation of an old road may be joined in the same petition,<sup>9</sup> where the former is to take the place of the latter.<sup>10</sup>

(v) AMENDMENTS. The power to allow amendments to petitions in highway cases is well established.<sup>11</sup> This power is comprehensive, and the discretion of the court or board will not be reviewed unless abused.<sup>12</sup> But it will not be construed to extend to allowing the petition to be amended in those particulars upon which the original jurisdiction of the local tribunal depends, after reference to commissioners or viewers and a report made by them,<sup>13</sup> or after the case has been removed into the appellate court.<sup>14</sup> Nor is an amendment permissible which will vary the original purpose of the proceeding.<sup>15</sup> A second petition by

Filing a remonstrance against granting a petition for the establishment of a highway, without objection to the sufficiency of the petition, waives such objection. Sowle v. Cosner, 56 Ind. 276. The reference of a petition for a highway to the commissioners without objection is a waiver of all objections to the form of the petition and preliminary proceedings. Bacheler v. New Hampton, 60 N. H. 207.

E. 702, where a person who was not a party to the proceeding appeared before the board of commissioners and filed a "plea in abatement," alleging that less than six persons signing the petition for the highway resided in the neighborhood thereof, and the board struck out the plea on the ground that the contestant offering it was not a party to the proceeding, and it was held that if contestant had a right to contest the jurisdiction of the board, he had the right without filing any plea whatever, and that the same was properly stricken out.

Who may contest proceeding.—A person through whose lands a proposed road will pass is beneficially interested, and is a proper party to contest the legality of the proceedings for the establishment of the road. Damrell v. San Joaquin County, 40 Cal. 154. But if the land assessed does not front the proposed street, or is legally exempt from assessment, the owner cannot competently object. French v. East Orange, 49 N. J. L. 401, 8 Atl. 107. And a taxpayer, merely as such, will not be heard in opposition to laying out a highway. He is represented by the town, and his interest is too remote. Burnham v. Goffstown, 50 N. H. 560. Under Ind. Rev. St. (1881) § 5023, confining the right to object to the location of a highway as use-it has been held that no such pleadings as an answer or demurrer are proper in highway proceedings.<sup>25</sup>

g. Commissioners, Viewers, Surveyors, Jurors, and Other Like Officers —
 (1) RIGHT TO AND NECESSITY FOR SUCH OFFICERS.<sup>26</sup> It is generally, although not always, required that a petition for a highway shall be referred to commissioners, viewers, surveyors, jurors, or other like officers, the question depending entirely upon the local statutes.<sup>27</sup> less to resident freeholders of the county, a remonstrance must show on its face that its signers are such resident freeholders. Wells v. Rhodes, 114 Ind. 467, 16 N. E. 830.

Dissent of a majority of the owners of land to be affected by the proposed road defeats the proceedings under some statutes. Lewly v. West Hoboken, 54 N. J. L. 508, 24 Atl. 477; French v. East Orange, 49 N. J. L. 401, 8 Atl. 107.

Time for remonstrance.—Allegations of a road petition essential to the jurisdiction of the commissioners are to be taken as true if not controverted at the proper stage of the proceedings, which is before reference of the petition. State v. Rye, 35 N. H. 368. On petition to the county court for the laying out of a highway, the question of the pendency of a prior petition to the selectmen, and the consequent unlawfulness of an assumption of jurisdiction by such court, may be raised by plea in limine, and need not await the appointment of commissioners and determination by them. Crawford v. Rutland, 52 Vt. 412.

Grounds of remonstrance.—An owner of land through which a right of way is condemned for a road cannot object on the ground that the land taken occupies the only available route for a contemplated railroad, which, if constructed, would enhance the value of his property. Phillips v. Watson, 63 Iowa 28, 18 N. W. 659. And see infra, II, C, 5, h.

Sufficiency of averments.—An averment in a remonstrance that the proposed highway would not be of "sufficient public utility" is a negative pregnant, and is equivalent to an admission that it would be of public utility. Wells v. Rhodes, 114 Ind. 467, 16 N. E. 830.

Amendments.—Where a remonstrance alleging want of public utility was rejected by the commissioners and circuit court as to that allegation, as not showing that the remonstrants were resident freeholders, the court does not err in refusing to allow the remonstrance to be amended in that respect, there being no reason why the amendment should not have been made in the commissioners' court, and no showing as to what actually occurred there. Wells v. Rhodes, 114 Ind. 467, 16 N. E. 830.

Waiver of objections.—Persons may remonstrate on the ground of the inutility of the proposed highway, and also claim damages in the same remonstrance. Schmied v. Keeney, 72 Ind. 309; Peed v. Brenneman, 72 Ind. 288. But see Fisher v. Hobbs, 42 Ind. 276, holding that where, on petition for a highway, a remonstrant over whose lands it would pass appeared in the commissioners' court and filed his claim for damages without objecting to the utility of the road, the objection was thereby waived. In a proceeding to establish a highway, a person filed with the county commissioners two remonstrances: The first relying on the ground that the proposed highway was not of public utility; the second on the ground that it ran through his inclosed land, damaging him to the extent of a sum specified, and asking the appointment of reviewers to assess his damages. It was held that the remonstrances raised no objection to the proposed highway on the ground that it ran through the remonstrator's inclosure of one year's standing without his consent, and that a good way could otherwise be had; and such objection was thereby impliedly waived. Cummins v. Shields, 34 Ind. 154.

<sup>27</sup> Georgia.—Howell v. Chattooga County, 118 Ga. 635, 45 S. E. 241, holding that Pol. Code (1895), § 520, providing that on application for any new road the ordinary shall appoint commissioners, who shall make their report that it is laid out conformably to law, is not inconsistent with the alternative road law of 1891, and must be complied with before a new public road can be lawfully established in a county where such alternative road law is operative.

Kansas.—Hughes v. Milligan, 42 Kan. 396, 22 Pac. 313, where the general road law of 1868 provides that before a highway can be laid out and opened it is necessary that viewers be appointed, whose duty it is to determine whether the road prayed for is necessary, and also to assess and determine the amount of damages sustained by any person through whose land the road may run, and Laws (1867), c. 67, as amended by Laws (1868-1869), declare section lines in certain counties to be highways, and provide that the provisions of the general road law shall be applicable where damages are claimed under the act, and it was held that the opening of a highway under the provisions of the latter act could be enjoined where no viewers were appointed.

Kentucky.—Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Gerard, 130 Ky. 18, 112 S. W. 915, holding that the provision of St. (1903) § 4296, that when, in proceedings to have a new road opened, exceptions shall be filed by either party, the court shall, unless the parties agree that it may try such issues, impanel a jury to try the issue of fact made by the exceptions, applies to questions of fact growing out of the necessity for opening the road and the amount of damages awarded, and does not apply to exceptions pointing out as errors that the jurisdictional requirements of sections 4289, 4290, as to the signing of the petition for the road and the giving of notice were not complied with.

Nebraska.—Warren v. Brown, 31 Nebr. 8, 47 N. W. 633, holding that, under Comp. St. c. 78, § 37, a county board has no jurisdiction to establish a public road where no commissioner has been appointed to examine into and report upon its expediency, unless the written consent of all the landowners whose land is sought to be taken for that purpose is filed with the county clerk.

New Hampshire.—Mitchell v. Holderness, 34 N. H. 209 (holding that under the act of July, 1855, remodeling the judiciary, all matters pending in the common pleas relative to highways and requiring a reference must be referred to the county commissioners, unless there be some special statute to the contrary); In re Howard, 28 N. H. 157 (holding that while a court might exercise its discretion to refuse to refer a petition for a highway to the road commissioners if the merits of such petition had been repeatedly passed upon, still, where two years elapse after the discontinuance of a road before the presentation of a petition for its reestablishment, the presumption would be that there was a case that should go to the road commissioners).

New York.—People v. Jones, 63 N. Y. 306 [reversing 2 Thomps. & C. 360], holding that a certificate of freeholders as to the necessity of laying out or altering a highway through improved land is necessary only where the highway is laid out without the consent of the owners.

North Carolina.—Carr v. Hairston, 4 N. C. 20, holding that under Rev. St. c. 104, §§ 1, 4, the interposition of a jury is necessary in the laying out of a road; but in deciding whether there shall be a road in a particular section of the country the whole power is in the court.

Pennsylvania.—Matter of Clinton St., 2 Brewst. 599, holding that the road law of 1836, providing for the appointment of juries of view, is not unconstitutional as giving courts power to delegate authority, since the report of such a jury is intended to do no more than to bring the questions in proper form before the court for consideration and for approval and confirmation. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8 Cyc. 857 note 50.

Tennessee.—Hawkins v. Trousdale County Justices, 12 Lea 351 (holding that it is not the report of a jury of view that determines the rights of the parties to a proceeding for laying out a road; that the county court may try the contest without a report, and determine it upon the evidence; and that a party therefore cannot be dismissed from court because the jury disagree, or even because there is no jury at all); Beard v. Campbell County

Justices, 3 Head 97 (holding that all questions connected with the establishment of public roads, whether matter of law or of fact, are determined exclusively by the county court, and a jury has nothing to do with the determination thereof).

Texas.—Allen v. Parker County, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 536, 57 S. W. 703 (holding that under Rev. St. art. 4671, which empowers and requires county commissioners' courts to order the laying out and opening of necessary public roads, and to discontinue or alter any road, when deemed expedient, as thereafter prescribed; and art. 4682, which authorizes them, on their own motion, to open new roads deemed necessary, a county commissioners' court was authorized and empowered to lay out and establish a public road, the qualification of art. 4671, "as hereinafter prescribed," only applying to discontinuance or alteration of existing roads; and hence the requirement of art. 4688 that all roads be laid out by a jury of review were not essential to the jurisdiction of such court of a proceeding to open a new road, and could be waived); Cummings v. Kendall County, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 164, 26 S. W. 439 (holding that Rev. Civ. St. art. 4361, providing that commissioners' courts may, on their own motion, open new roads, does not change the law requiring a jury of view).

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 81.

A statute is not unconstitutional which provides that a jury of view shall be appointed by the commissioners' court without the concurrence of property-owners. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Baudat, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 595, 45 S. W. 939.

Propriety of reference.—Where the parties to a petition for a highway appeared before the county court, and agreed to a reference of the petition to the county commissioners, which was ordered accordingly, the finding of such agreement was equivalent to a finding that the parties did not agree as to the judgment to be rendered. Hence the reference was proper. Harwinton v. Catlin, 19 Conn. 520. Under N. H. Pub. St. c. 68, § 5, providing that if no sufficient objection is made, all petitions for highways shall be referred to the county commissioners, what constitutes a sufficient objection is a question of fact in each case to be determined by the trial term. Gurnsey v. Keene, 68 N. H. 243, 34 Atl. 742.

29. Gist v. Owings, 95 Md. 302, 52 Atl. 395 (holding that under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 25, § 86, authorizing the county commissioners to appoint examiners in proceedings to establish a public road, the court exceeded its jurisdiction in appointing such examiners); Garretson v. Baker, 65 N. J. L. 184, 46 Atl. 705 (holding that the court of common pleas is invested by 3 Gen. St. p. 2804, with the power to appoint surveyors of the highways to lay out public roads, and when the proceedings are in conformity with the statutes relating to such subject-matter jurisdiction will always be presumed to be vested in such court, and the burden is on those by whom such proceedings are attacked to establish the want of jurisdiction; In re Highway, 3 N. J. L. 666, 881 (holding that the supreme court has no authority to appoint chosen freeholders to review the proceedings of the surveyors appointed by that court before the statute taking from it that power and conferring it on the common pleas); Matter of Baker, 173 N. Y. 249, 65 N. E. 1100 (county court); People v. Queens County, 58 Hun (N. Y.) 371, 12 N. Y. Suppl. 21 (holding that since the amendment of the general highway law by Laws (1873), c. 773, prohibiting the laying out of a road through buildings without the consent of the owner, unless the commissioners of highways certify that the public interest will be greatly promoted thereby, the board of supervisors have no power to appoint special commissioners to lay out such a road, under Laws (1838), c. 314, § 1, subd. 4, and Laws (1848), c. 164, which authorized them to make such appointment when satisfied that the road was important, and that the authority of the commissioners of highways could not or would not be exercised for the purpose).

Such power cannot be delegated,<sup>30</sup> in the absence of a statute to the contrary.<sup>31</sup>

(B) Form, Sufficiency, and Validity of Order of Appointment. It has been held that an order appointing viewers need not be made in regular term.<sup>32</sup> The omission of a seal from the order is not necessarily fatal;<sup>33</sup> nor is a clerical variance between the order and the petition.<sup>34</sup> The order need not designate the surveyors by name, if they are otherwise designated with certainty;<sup>35</sup> and a clerical error in the order appointing viewers to lay out a road, stating the number to be four instead of three, is not ground for reversal where it appears that only the legal number were actually appointed and discharged their duties.<sup>36</sup> The order need not affirmatively show that the persons selected were competent and eligible to act;<sup>37</sup>

Number of appointing justices.—An order appointing a jury of freeholders to view and lay out a public road is an order laying out a public road, within the meaning of Tenn. Acts (1804), c. 1, § 1; and therefore such an order, made by less than twelve justices, or one third of the justices of the county, is void, by Tenn. Acts (1817), c. 48. Ingram v. Wilson, 4 Humphr. (Tenn.) 424.

Time for exercise of power.—Tex. Act, Feb. 7, 1884 (Sayles Civ. St. art. 4360a, § 2), provides that it shall be the duty of each commissioners' court, within ninety days after the passage of the act, on their own motion, to appoint a jury of view to lay out certain roads, and on the report of the jury of view such roads shall be declared to be highways. It was held that while this statute made it the duty of the courts to act within ninety days, their power to act on their own motion was not limited to that time. Evans v. Santana Live-Stock, etc., Co., 81 Tex. 622, 17 S. W. 232.

30. Bennett v. Fisher, 26 Iowa 497; State v. Kimball, 23 Iowa 531, both holding that Road*, 3 Walk. (Pa.) 319 (holding that where the court omitted to affix its seal on its order to viewers, but did properly affix its seal to an order issued to reviewers, after confirmation of their report, the proceedings would not be set aside because of the irregularity of the first order issued).

34. State v. Atkinson, 27 N. J. L. 420, holding that a variance between the petition for the appointment of surveyors and the order of appointment, consisting of a clerical error in the name of one of the landowners across whose land the road was to be laid, is not such a variance as to cause proceedings otherwise correct to be set aside.

35. State v. Potts, 4 N. J. L. 401, 5 N. J. L. 1015, holding that where the statute directed the court "to appoint six of the surveyors of the highways of said county," and the court appointed them, not by name, but by townships, viz., "the two surveyors of the highways of Trenton," etc., it was sufficiently certain.

Sufficiency of recital.—The recital, in a resolution of county commissioners authorizing the opening of a road, that in accordance with their order appointing persons who possess the statutory qualifications as a board of viewers, etc., the road is ordered opened, is a sufficient record in their proceedings that the viewers possessed the statutory qualifications. Crowley v. Gallatin County, 14 Mont. 292, 36 Pac. 313.

but the place of meeting must be definitely stated therein.<sup>38</sup> In some states the order must state one or more of the statutory reasons justifying the establishment of a highway;<sup>39</sup> and it must contain a general description of the proposed road.<sup>40</sup> It being provided by statute that applications shall be referred to a committee of three disinterested persons selected by the parties, or, if the parties cannot or do not agree in the selection, by the court, it is not necessary to the validity of the appointment of such committee that the court shall have expressly found either that the parties agreed or were unable or failed to agree on the persons appointed;<sup>41</sup> and an order to a jury of re-review, reciting the action of one jury for and another against the road, is not such an irregularity as will require setting aside the proceedings of the jury of re-review.<sup>42</sup> (Ky.) 80], holding that an order appointing viewers for a road, without pointing out a general description of the ground over which the road is to pass, but leaving the viewers to the direction of the applicant; is erroneous.

It is sufficiently certain, however, if it gives the points of commencement and termination, and a general direction as to the manner in which it should pass over the intervening space. Wood v. Campbell, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 422.

W. 421 (holding that under Sp. Laws (1879), c. 248, requiring the commissioners appointed thereby to survey, locate, and establish a state road in certain counties, to meet and make oath "that they will faithfully and impartially discharge their duties, as provided by this act, and fairly and impartially assess the damage, if any, they may find to be sustained by owners of land through which said road may run, and then proceed to discharge their duties," an oath taken by the commissioners that "we will faithfully proceed to locate and establish said state road according to the provisions of said act, and according to the best of our abilities," is not sufficient); In re Cambria St., 75 Pa. St. 357 (an oath by road viewers faithfully to discharge their duties held not to comply with a statutory requirement that they make oath to perform their Oaths held to be sufficient see Com. v. Westborough, 3 Mass. 406 (holding that where a warrant to a locating committee particularly describes their whole duty, an oath "faithfully and impartially to perform the service to which they are appointed," or "faithfully and impartially to discharge the trust reposed in them," is sufficient); In re Foster Tp. Secondary evidence.—In order to prove the oath of office of surveyors, it is not necessary to produce the originals which are filed with the clerk of the township. Copies duly proved are sufficient. State v. Hutchinson, 10 N. J. L. 242.

Certificate of oath.—If a surveyor has taken and subscribed the oath of office before a justice and filed the same in due time, but the justice has failed to certify when it was taken as the law requires, it is fatal to the return; and such omission cannot be cured by a supplemental certificate of the justice. State v. Northrop, 18 N. J. L. 271. See, however, State v. Bergen, 21 N. J. L. 342.

On appeal, on the merits, under Tenn. Code, § 191, from the county court to the circuit court, in a proceeding directing the opening of a public road, the trial is de novo, and an error in the proceedings in the county court, such as the failure to show that the jury of view were sworn, becomes immaterial. Patton v. Green, 15 N. J. L. 88 (holding that if it satisfactorily appears that the surveyors of highways did take the oath of office in due time before the proper justices, and that such justices did certify in proper time, the court will not set aside the return; that it may be shown by affidavits that the persons by whom the surveyors were sworn were justices of the peace of the county residing in the respective townships for which the surveyors were chosen, and that the oaths of office were in fact administered and subscribed in those townships).

Otherwise in the absence of statute see Dollarhide v. Muscatine County, 1 Greene (Iowa) 158, holding that the official certificate, or the testimony of the officer who administered the oath required by law to road viewers, is more authentic than the mere O'Bryant*, 139 Ind. 17, 38 N. E. 416. So, where it appears from the face of the record that the viewers were duly sworn, and the exceptions filed do not refer to any defect in form of the oath, it will be presumed that the oath was in form required by statute. *In re Nescopeck Tp. Massachusetts.—Hyde Park v. Wigin, 157 Mass. 94, 31 N. E. 693, holding that where a town, by its authorized officers, appeared before the board of county commissioners pursuant to notice, and without objection participated in the hearing of a petition to lay out a highway, it cannot afterward object to the organization of the board when the notice was issued. See, however, Danvers v.

Essex County, 2 Metc. 185, holding that where, on a petition for a new road, the parties interested met the commissioners on a certain day, according to due notice, but the meeting was adjourned without any proceedings being had, an objection to the constitution of the board of commissioners made at the opening of the hearing before them on the second day of the adjourned meeting was seasonable.

or their failure duly to qualify as such.<sup>69</sup> So irregularities in the appointment or qualification of the commissioners, etc., are waived by one who appears before them generally and contests the proceeding on the merits.<sup>70</sup> If a party consents to the doing of a certain thing he has no standing subsequently to object to the irregularity thereof.<sup>71</sup>

Residents.—Proceedings for the establishment of a public road are invalid where the venire issued by the justice required the constable to summon six men to serve as jurors, "at least one-half of whom shall be residents of the town," whereas Ill. Rev. St. c. 121, § 46, provides that not more than one half of the jury shall be residents of the town. File v. St. Jacob Highway Com'rs, 34 Ill. App. 538. Where the court omits without reason to appoint the surveyors of highways in the townships where the road is to be laid, the proceedings to lay out the road will be set aside. Conover v. Bird, 56 N. J. L. 228, 28 Atl. 428. For early New Jersey cases see State v. Bergen, 21 N. J. L. 342; State v. Vanbuskirk, 21 N. J. L. 86; State v. Willingborough Road, 1 N. J. L. 150; State v. Elmer, 1 N. J. L. 67.

Freeholders.—The commissioners, jurors, etc., are not infrequently required to be freeholders of the county or township where the proposed road runs. Cumberland Valley R. Co. v. Martin, 100 Md. 165, 59 Atl. 714; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Swalm, 83 Miss. 631, 36 So. 147; In re Highway, 3 N. J. L. 665. A remainder-man, after termination of a life-estate in lands, is a freeholder within the law requiring that jurors in proceedings to establish public road shall be freeholders. Garrett v. Hedges, 17 S. W. 871, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 647. Where testator directed that land should be sold and the proceeds divided among named persons, but he named no executor, and the will contained no power of sale other than as above, title vested in the heirs at law subject to the execution of the power of sale; and hence such heirs were freeholders within the statute providing for a certificate of freeholders that a proposed highway is necessary and proper. People v. Scott, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 566. One who has title to real estate is a freeholder irrespective of the amount or value therein, and therefore he is qualified to sign a certificate as to the necessity and propriety of opening a highway. People v. Scott, supra. A person owning real estate is competent as a freeholder to act as a road viewer, although such estate is not clear of encumbrances. In re Harbaugh Ave., 10 Pa. Co. Ct. 440. However, under a statute providing that road jurors shall be suitable persons, a road juror need not be a freeholder. In re Lee, 4 Pennw. (Del.) 576, 60 Atl. 862. And under a statute requiring the viewers of a highway to be the inhabitants near where the complaint is made, it is not necessary that the court, in appointment of viewers, should select freeholders residing in the township. In re Poquessing Creek Road, 1 Browne (Pa.) 210.

Proximity to road.—County commissioners, in appointing commissioners to lay out a new road, under Ga. Pol. Code (1895), § 520, should not appoint men without reference to their fitness for the duties imposed upon them merely because they live nearer to the proposed road than others who are competent; and the county commissioners are not limited to the regular road commissioners appointed for the purpose of caring for the public roads, but may appoint any three proper persons residing as near as possible ever, the fact that one member of the body is incompetent to act does not in all cases invalidate the proceedings.<sup>74</sup> Nor does the fact that one of the surveyors of the town through which the proposed road ran objected to it and had given an opinion as to its propriety disqualify him to act.<sup>75</sup>

(B) Persons Interested. If a person has a direct personal or financial interest in the establishment of a highway, he is incompetent to act as commissioner, juror, viewer, etc.<sup>76</sup> Thus a person is so disqualified where he owns land along to where the road is intended to pass. Brown v. Sams, 119 Ga. 22, 45 S. E. 719.

Members of county court.—The county court may appoint the president of the court and the other two members of it as a committee to view the proposed road. Herron v. Carson, 26 W. Va. 62.

Surveyors, jurors, etc., having previously acted as to same road.—The fact that a person appointed as a surveyor of a highway has previously acted in the same capacity, and laid out a road over the same route, is no disqualification. State v. Bergen, 24 N. J. L. 548. In Michigan members of a township board who heard a proceeding to establish a highway on the merits, and decided the necessity for the highway, and awarded damages, were disqualified to sit on the hearing of a subsequent proceeding to establish the same highway, after the quashing of the former proceeding. Locke v. Wyoming Tp. Highway Com'r, 107 Mich. 631, 65 N. W. 558. In Pennsylvania, however, under the act of 1857, relating to the establishment of roads in Erie county, and providing that the jurors summoned by the justice in a dispute as to the location and alteration of a road, or the damages incident thereto, can be rejected for interest, but for no other cause, a juror could not be rejected on account of having sat on, and rendered a verdict in, the same case on a former trial, which had been set aside. Venango Tp. Road Com'rs v. Morgan, 47 Pa. St. 276. And where road viewers fail to report within the term, the same viewers may be appointed under the same petition at the next regular term. Union Tp. Road, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 573.

Presumptions.—Where the law directs that the court appoint three discreet and proper persons to make the review, the appellate court will presume that they are discreet and proper persons until the contrary appears. Parham v. Justices Decatur County Inferior Ct., 9 Ga. 341.

74. Betts v. New Hartford, 25 Conn. 180 (where the three county commissioners to whom a petition for a highway was referred were unanimous in their report, and it was held that even if one of them was disqualified the other two would constitute the committee, and could make their report as the entire board); Carmel Highway Com'rs v. Judges Putnam County Cts., 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 264 (holding that the fact that five out of twenty freeholders who signed a certificate as to the propriety of laying out a road were of kin to the owner of the land did not vitiate the certificate, where the act providing for the laying out of roads only required that the certificate be made by twelve freeholders).

But see Kieckenapp v. Wheeling, 64 Minn. 547, 67 N. W. 662 (where the three members of the town board of supervisors acted in laying out a highway, and one of them was interested, but the other two, constituting a majority of the board, were not interested, and it was held that the proceedings were voidable, but not absolutely void); Tiffany v. Gifford, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 43 (holding that under Laws (1881), c. 696, providing for a jury of twelve men to certify to the necessity of altering and laying out highways, and prescribing their qualifications and manner of selection, where the names of twelve men are drawn, but one is disqualified, the other eleven are not a qualified jury, and their acts as such are void, although the statute also provides that it is sufficient if nine or more of the jurors act). New York.—Matter of Baker, 173 N. Y. 249, 65 N. E. 1100.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 83.

Otherwise in absence of statute.—The common-law rule that a judge cannot sit in a cause in which he is interested does not apply to commissioners of highways. Groton v. Hurlburt, 22 Conn. 178; Foot v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 399. In the appointment of reviewers of highways in places where all the citizens are more or less interested, it is impossible to be as nice about questions of challenge for cause as in regular jury trials. Much must be left to the discretion of the court appointing them, and the court above will not interfere unless it appears that this discretion is exercised erroneously. In re Lower Windsor Tp. Road, 29 Pa. St. 18.

What interest disqualifies.—A highway established by a township board a member of which is personally or financially interested therein is illegal. Wilson v. Burr Oak Tp. Bd., 87 Mich. 240, 49 N. W. 572. The statute requiring road commissioners to be "disinterested freeholders" means that they shall be freeholders not pecuniarily interested in or over which the road is proposed to be established;<sup>77</sup> or, it has been held, where he is a taxpayer in the town through which the proposed road runs;<sup>78</sup> or where he is a relative of a person thus interested,<sup>79</sup> or a stock-holder in an interested corporation.<sup>80</sup> So in New England a resident in one of several towns through which it is proposed to run a highway cannot act as commissioner in laying it out.<sup>81</sup>

the establishment or non-establishment of the highway. Chase v. Rutland, 47 Vt. 393. However, an interest, to disqualify them, must be shown to be an immediate, direct interest in the laying out the road, as distinguished from that general interest which each citizen has in a highway. *Parham v. See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 83.

Contra.—Groton v. Hurlburt, 22 Conn. 178, holding also that a statute disqualifying judges and justices of the peace from acting in civil actions by reason of relationship does not apply to the acts of commissioners in surveying and laying out highways, as such acts are not judicial in their character.

However, an engineer is not ineligible because his brother-in-law owns real estate within the limits assessable for the construction of the road laid out, the viewers alone being empowered to make the assessments, and his duty being simply to aid the viewers in the location of the work, and in making estimates of cost, etc. Thompson v. Goldthwait, 132 Ind. 20, 31 N. E. 451. So a county commissioner is not disqualified by reason of the fact that his brother and his son are among the petitioners for the highway, in the absence of a showing that such persons have any other than a public interest in the matter. Wilbraham v. Hampden County, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 322. Where one of twelve freeholders appointed to view the site of a proposed road and certify as to its necessity was a brother-in-law of a trustee of a church, land of which would be taken if the proposed location were adopted, he was not such "kin to the owner" of the land, within the statute, as to be incapacitated from acting. People v. Cline, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 197. And the fact that a petitioner's wife was aunt of a wife of one of the road viewers is not ground for setting aside their report, where there was no intimacy between petitioner and the viewer. In re Sadsbury Road, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. 521.

However, a county commissioner is not disqualified by reason of being an inhabitant of a town to the line of which the road in question extends, and with a road in which it is intended to connect. Monterey v. Berkshire County, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 394. And although a commissioner who resides in one of several towns through which a highway is sought to be laid out is interested in the question whether the way shall be laid out, he is not disqualified, after a board of disinterested commissioners has adjudged that the way is necessary and determined its course, from acting in laying out any section in another town which cannot affect the course of the way within the town in which he resides.

(c) Petitioners.<sup>82</sup> A petitioner for a highway is generally held to be incompetent to serve as a commissioner, juror, viewer, etc., and if he does so the proceedings are vitiated.<sup>83</sup>

(iv) COMPENSATION.<sup>84</sup> The right of the commissioners, viewers, etc., to compensation, and the amount thereof, are governed by the local statutes.<sup>85</sup>

Rutland v. Worcester County, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 71. Where a road commissioner resided in a town adjoining that through which the highway prayed for was to pass, and it was alleged that such town, although not a party to the record, might be liable eventually, under the statute, to contribute toward the construction of the highway, and that therefore the commissioner was incompetent to sit upon any question in the case, the commissioner was not disqualified until the question of the liability of such town should properly and legally arise before the board, which is not ordinarily the case till after the board has decided to lay out the highway, unless such town was a party to the original application for the highway. *Mitchell v. It has been held, however, that a judgment of the commissioners' court laying out a public road is not void because some of the petitioners for the road were appointed on the jury of view, where the statute did not inhibit the appointment of petitioners as jurors, since the disqualification of jurors does not invalidate a judgment based on their verdict (Vogt v. Bexar County, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 567, 42 S. W. 127); and that, although persons unite in a petition for the opening of a road, they may nevertheless be appointed viewers of the route of the road, where they do not become parties on the record (White v. Coleman, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 138).

Evidence of identity.—The fact that two signers of a petition were W. C. E. and Carl C. and Warren E. and Carl L. C. are members of the board, will not invalidate the proceedings, in the absence of proof that the signers of the petition and the members of the board were the same persons. Bockoven v. Lincoln Tp., 13 S. D. 317, 83 N. W. 335.

Former petitioners.—One who was an applicant for a road once laid, where the proceedings were afterward set aside, is not thereby disqualified for discharging the duties of a surveyor on a subsequent application for a road over the same route. State v. Vandervere, 25 N. J. L. 669.

New Hampshire.—Peavey v. Wolfborough, 37 N. H. 286, holding that, where the report of town commissioners for the opening of a highway is recommitted, they are entitled to traveling expenses incurred, and compensation for services rendered in consequence of the recommitment.

Commissioners and viewers are restricted by and must follow with accuracy the direction of the statutes<sup>86</sup> or order of court<sup>87</sup> under which they are appointed. If appointed to lay a road within a town they can act only within the territorial limits of the town within which the road is to be laid.<sup>88</sup> They have, from necessity, full power and authority to regulate their own proceedings and to determine the order and course of business before themselves,<sup>89</sup> but they must give a full hearing on the merits to all parties interested and desiring to be heard.<sup>90</sup> They may but are not compelled to call upon the county surveyor to assist them in laying out the road,<sup>91</sup> it being held sufficient if the commissioners by their report designate the location of the road with sufficient certainty;<sup>92</sup> but if the precise location cannot otherwise be given the commissioners should order a survey to be made.<sup>93</sup>

(B) Notice<sup>94</sup> — (1) NECESSITY. Even under a code provision that the commissioner shall cause the line of the proposed highway to be surveyed and marked out when the precise location cannot be given otherwise, where the road is specifically pointed out as extending a certain number of feet on each side of the portion of a certain section line described in the petition, the mere omission of the commissioner to survey and plat the road will not invalidate the proceedings. *Palmer v. But see In re App's Tavern Road, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 388, holding that while no notice need be given to the owners of land of the time when the viewers will meet to lay out a road passing through it, the viewers ought, in passing through improved ground, to call the person living thereon.

It is immaterial that the owner knew of the view, if he was not properly notified thereof. In re Grapevine Road, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 639.

Bul. 246, holding that notice to a landowner of the pendency of a petition to establish a county road through his land and of the time and place of meeting of the viewers is not jurisdictional, where due publication of the fact of the petition has been made.

99. Leavenworth County v. Epsen, 12 Kan. 531 (holding that the notice relates not so much to the laying out of the road as to the compensation, and its omission is merely a matter for complaint by the person neglected); Tyrone v. Burns, 102 Minn. 318, 113 N. In Texas, under Rev. St. art. 4691, which provides that the jury of freeholders appointed to lay out a road shall give notice to the landowners of the time when they will lay out the road, "or when they will assess the damages," it is held that the notice refers only to the question of damages, and a notice is not required where the damages are not assessed at the time the road

missioners will not be set aside on the ground that the notice to the selectmen and landholders of the hearing was insufficient, in the absence of anything to show that any one was prejudiced;<sup>1</sup> and notice of a view to open or vacate a road has been held necessary to an adjoining property-owner only when his land is affected thereby.<sup>2</sup>

(2) CONTENTS AND SUFFICIENCY. The sufficiency of the notice must of course be determined largely by the statute or order under which the notice is given.<sup>3</sup> The notice should be of the time and place of the meeting of the commissioners and viewers;<sup>4</sup> and both time<sup>5</sup> and place<sup>6</sup> should be specified with particularity. It must describe the starting point of the road to be laid out<sup>7</sup> and the land included in the proposed highway.<sup>8</sup> If in writing, the notice should be authenticated by a responsible signature.<sup>9</sup> In the absence of a provision to the contrary, notice need is laid out. Kelly v. Honea, (Civ. App. 1903) 73 S. W. 846.

Where the statute requires a notice that the meeting is called "to decide" upon the application, this requirement is not satisfied by a notice of a meeting "to examine and consider" (Austin v. Allen, 6 Wis. 134); or by a notice by the town supervisors that they will meet at a certain time and place to take into consideration an application to lay out a highway (*Babb v. The notice required by Pennsylvania act of April 15, 1891, providing that notice of the time and place of holding a view for laying out a public road shall be given to the county commissioners, must be actual notice. In re Ryon Tp. Road, 4 Pa. Dist. 736.

Extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to explain a notice for the establishment of a highway, respecting the proposed location thereof, in determining the sufficiency of such notice. Butterfield v. Pollock, 45 Iowa 257.

Sufficiency of entry of record of notice. — The requirement of Gen. St. (1901) § 6018, that a record of the notice of the meeting of viewers shall be entered in the commissioners' journal, is satisfied by copying the contents of such notice in the journal, no references as to its publication being required. *Molyneux v. App. 237 (holding a notice of the place of meeting as "at the sight of the proposed road in said town" too indefinite, and the proceedings based therein void); Oran Highway Com'rs v. Hoblit, 19 Ill. App. 259 (holding that notice of the place of a meeting to examine a proposed route of a highway is insufficient, where it declares that the meeting will be in a certain village, which is composed of a dozen houses, without stating the particular house).

Notice held sufficiently specific as to place see Smith v. Hudson Tp. Highway Com'rs, 150 Ill. 385, 36 N. 8. State v. O'Connor, 78 Wis. 282, 47 N. W. 433, where, however, a notice was held sufficient which describes the land included in the proposed highway as a portion of the right of way of a railway company, giving the government subdivisions of which it is a part.

(3) MANNER OF GIVING. Personal notice is necessary where required by rule of court<sup>13</sup> or by statute;<sup>14</sup> but under some statutes personal notice is not necessary,<sup>15</sup> notice by posting<sup>16</sup> or by publication or advertisement<sup>17</sup> being held sufficient. And the appointment of commissioners and viewers, and their visiting the ground, have been held to be circumstances of such notoriety as to put all persons on their guard that they may know when to attend court to be heard.<sup>18</sup>

(4) TIME. The notice must be given the number of days before the meeting specified in the statute,<sup>19</sup> or, in the absence of specific provision enacted by the

must be signed by some person, either by the clerk, the viewers, persons interested, or some other responsible person or persons.

A notice of hearing signed by the chairman of the board is sufficient, where the statute does not direct by whom it shall be signed. Peavey v. Wolfborough, 37 N. H. 286. And a notice of a meeting of highway commissioners to view the route of a highway, signed "by order of the commissioners, A. B., Chairman," is sufficient over an objection that it does not appear that the notice was issued at a meeting of three or more of the commissioners. Com. v. Berkshire County, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 343.

A notice signed by a majority of the committee and duly served on all landholders interested was sufficient. Goodwin v. Wethersfield, 43 Conn. 437.

A verbal communication, made by the selectmen to a landowner at the time of hearing on a petition for a new highway, that they had decided to lay out the proposed highway, no return or record of the laying out having then been made, is not sufficient notice of the laying out to limit the time within which such landowner may appeal to sixty days, under N. (5) PROOF AND RECORD. It is generally held that the record of the proceedings must show that a proper notice of the meeting of commissioners or viewers has been duly served, published, or posted,<sup>21</sup> and that otherwise the proceedings will be void.<sup>22</sup> A report of viewers setting forth that they met "pursuant to legal notice" has been held to be sufficient, in the absence of any allegation by any property holder that he had not received notice,<sup>23</sup> as has also a report that notice of the meeting "as is required by law" was given.<sup>24</sup> But on the other hand it has been held that the fact of service and not the proof of it gives jurisdiction,<sup>25</sup> and accordingly under some of the statutes the fact of giving notice need not appear in the report, but may be shown by extrinsic evidence.<sup>26</sup> But it has been held that the record is not sufficient evidence that notice of the location of the highway was given to the owners through whose land it was to run, where the giving of such notice is contradicted.<sup>27</sup>

Return as prima facie evidence.—The return of selectmen in proceedings to lay out a townway is prima facie evidence that they gave notice on a petition for the way, and also of such other facts as are required by law to be embraced in the notice, such as that the notice contained a description of the way, and what it was. *Cushing v. (c) Adjournments and Continuances. It is competent for the commissioners or viewers to adjourn, at their discretion, to another time and place,<sup>28</sup> the commissioners being the sole judges of what is a sufficient cause to adjourn;<sup>29</sup> but where the statute limits the number of days for which adjournment may be made, proceedings at a meeting adjourned beyond the time specified are void,<sup>30</sup> the unauthorized adjournment being in effect a denial of the application of the highway.<sup>31</sup> It has been held that the commissioners must give notice of the adjournment to all interested parties;<sup>32</sup> and that if, after a commissioner sits pursuant to a proper notice, he adjourns the hearing to another day without designating the time and place, he thereby loses jurisdiction to proceed further;<sup>33</sup> but other cases hold that all parties originally notified must take notice of such adjournments without any new notice.<sup>34</sup> The omission of commissioners to adjourn from day to day, pending proceedings on a petition for a highway, is an irregularity which is not jurisdictional in its character.<sup>35</sup>

(d) Proceedings by Part of Commissioners, Viewers, or Other Officers. Under some of the statutes it is held that a majority of the commissioners or viewers can act in laying out the road.<sup>36</sup> This is so of course where the statute expressly so provides,<sup>37</sup> or even where there is a general statute providing that majorities of boards of this kind can act.<sup>38</sup> Under other statutes it is held that when several persons are authorized to view a road, they must all deliberate and view the proposed road,<sup>39</sup> although a majority may decide<sup>40</sup> or make the report,<sup>41</sup> unless the statute expressly otherwise provides.<sup>42</sup> They must, however, act as a body and not separately;<sup>43</sup> and if there be a vacancy in the board the remaining members cannot act even to make a report.<sup>44</sup> A minority cannot act;<sup>45</sup> and if the majority have met and decided against an application, the minority cannot thereafter meet and lay out the road.<sup>46</sup> It is not material to the validity of the report of road reviewers that a dissenting one was not present at the first meeting, if he afterward attended and took part in the proceedings.<sup>47</sup>

(E) Irregularities and Improper Conduct — (1) IN GENERAL. While it is held that the proceedings of commissioners, viewers, and jurors in establishing a highway cannot be guarded with the same strictness as those which are had in court, every reasonable precaution should be taken to guard against the possibility of improper influence and to insure a perfectly fair trial;<sup>48</sup> and any irregular conduct or improper evidence which appears to have unduly prejudiced their determination will furnish grounds to set the determination aside.<sup>49</sup> And thus where county commissioners introduced or encouraged conversations or discussions relative to the laying out of a highway referred to them with one party, in the absence of the other,<sup>50</sup> or where viewers refused to listen to a remonstrance by citizen taxpayers who were present at the view,<sup>51</sup> the report has been set aside; but conduct slightly irregular may not be ground for setting aside the report;<sup>52</sup> and although incompetent evidence be laid before road commissioners, yet their report will not be set aside on that account, if it appears that it was directly withdrawn, and that they gave it no consideration; and their own affidavits are admissible to show that they disregarded it.<sup>53</sup>

Effect of relationship of viewer to interested petitioner.— If one of six re-reviewers is found to be related to an interested petitioner for the road and is challenged on that account after the view has begun, and he retires, the remaining five re-reviewers may proceed to complete the review and make report. Whitmarsh, etc., Road Case, 2 Montg. St. p. 2804, § 5, regulating the laying out of public roads by surveyors of highways, contemplates the joint action of the appointees, or a majority of them, acting as a body, in dating, signing, and delivering their return, and where two of the four purporting to sign the return did so on separate dates and apart from their associates the return was invalid.

50. Peavey v. Wolfborough, 37 N. H. 286. But see Matter of Hickory Tree Road, 1 Pearson (Pa.) 202, holding that the report of viewers in a road case will not be set aside because one of them asked the owner of land how much damages he would claim for opening a road through it.

Conduct held not to be irregular or improper see Williams v. Stonington, 49 Conn. 229 (holding that there was no impropriety in the committee stating to both parties at the close of the hearing that they should not deliver their report to the party in whose favor it should be made until their fees were paid, or in counsel for one of the parties stating that if the report was in favor of his client, he would at once pay the fees); Horton v. Norwalk, 45 Conn. 237. See also In re Patten, 16 N. H. 277, holding that, where petitioner and a commissioner viewed together a part of the projected way before the meeting of the commissioners, an objection based upon this was addressed to the discretion of the court below, whose action in overruling it would not be revised.

53. Goodwin v. Milton, 25 N. H. 458.

(2) ENTERTAINMENT BY PERSON INTERESTED. While it is sometimes held that the mere entertainment of road viewers, commissioners, or jurors by an interested party is cause for setting aside their report,<sup>54</sup> the majority of cases hold that the entertainment is not of itself sufficient to invalidate the proceedings where it does not appear that they were unduly influenced,<sup>55</sup> particularly where the entertainment was at the conclusion of the work after the report had been signed;<sup>56</sup> and where it is a custom in the county for petitioners to furnish lunches to the county commissioners during the proceedings for the location of a highway, such furnishing is not a ground for quashing the same,<sup>57</sup> even though petitioner, without improper motives, urges upon the commissioners in private after the hearing the importance of the way.<sup>58</sup> But if the entertainment is of such a nature as unduly to influence the commissioners or viewers it may be a ground for setting aside their proceedings,<sup>59</sup> as it will be also where the entertainment is in violation of a rule of court that viewers shall not be entertained by or at the expense of any person interested in the proceedings;<sup>60</sup> and under such a rule the report will be set aside where the viewers were entertained at the house of a petitioner, although done at the instance of a person not interested.<sup>61</sup>

(F) Meeting at Wrong Time or Place. If viewers, commissioners, or jurors meet to transact business at a time<sup>62</sup> or place<sup>63</sup> different from that designated by their notice or order of court<sup>64</sup> their proceedings are void and will be set aside.

(G) View.<sup>65</sup> The mode of examination rests generally in the discretion of the viewers, commissioners, or jurors.<sup>66</sup> It has been held that the route over which a highway is laid out need not be examined by the commissioners before the hearing.<sup>67</sup>

(H) Reconsideration or Rehearing. The general rule is that the authority of viewers, commissioners, or jurors ends with their decision, and after they have rendered the decision and reported they cannot reconsider or alter it,<sup>68</sup> or render a second report without a fresh appointment;<sup>69</sup> and even though the power subsequently to alter a report be recognized the alterations should be made at an adjourned or called meeting of the viewers, and not by separate or individual agreement.<sup>70</sup> It has been held, however, that in proceedings by freeholders to lay out a public road, they may reconsider any vote passed before they separate.<sup>71</sup> A rehearing on the ground of newly discovered evidence will be refused where it was not shown that the evidence could not have been obtained earlier by reasonable diligence.<sup>72</sup>

(I) Waiver of Objections; Laches<sup>73</sup> — (1) IN GENERAL. Although entertainment of a highway committee may invalidate proceedings by them in laying out a highway if properly objected to,<sup>74</sup> parties who proceed with the hearing without objection cannot, after a decision adverse to them has been rendered, raise the objection for the first time,<sup>75</sup> particularly where the record shows that no real wrong was done, that the person thus objecting had a chance to except, that damages had been paid, and work on the road actually done.<sup>76</sup> Similarly an irregularity in filing a report of viewers out of time is cured by defendant's laches in not objecting until more than a year thereafter, during which time he acquiesced in the report, and plaintiff had prepared for trial.<sup>77</sup> So an appeal to the supervisors on the merits is a waiver of the irregularity in failing to adjourn from day to day.<sup>78</sup> Again, the objection that petitioner for a new highway is not a competent witness for petitioner on a hearing before road commissioners must be made when witness is offered or it will be held to be waived.<sup>79</sup> And failure of interested parties to object in due time to the report of a road commissioner upon the route of a proposed highway because of his failure to comply with the provisions of a statute directing him to report whether any yard, garden, orchard, or part thereof will be taken if the road is established is a waiver of such objection.<sup>80</sup> So a person may be estopped to set up the insufficiency of the report in the description of the land taken.<sup>81</sup> But where viewers, before they were sworn, viewed a great portion of the road, such irregularity is not a matter which counsel could waive; and hence his silence at the time cannot estop the party interested from making the objection afterward;<sup>82</sup> and in like manner the appearance by one claiming to be the attorney of the landowners, and his argument against the necessity of the highway, have been held to be no waiver of objection to the failure of the commissioners, in their order for the highway, to follow the description of the road in the application as required by statute.<sup>83</sup>

(2) OBJECTIONS TO NOTICE. Where parties entitled to notice of the time and place of the meeting of commissioners or viewers appear and make no objection at the time to the notices or the service of them, such appearance is a waiver of the right to notice,<sup>84</sup> and consequently of the right to object to the form or sufficiency of the notice,<sup>85</sup> or to the character of the service thereof.<sup>86</sup> Similarly objection to the proceedings or to the notice upon some specified ground is a waiver of objections upon other grounds;<sup>87</sup> and although the statutory requirement as to time of notice has not been complied with, one who, having informal notice of the meeting, allows the road to be made and expenditures to be incurred is estopped to deny the sufficiency of the notice;<sup>88</sup> and the omission of a town to appear in court and object to the acceptance of an award of highway commissioners or move for its recommitment has been held to be a waiver of the alleged insufficiency of the notice received from the commissioners.<sup>89</sup> Although the county commissioners are entitled to notice of road view where the county must pay the damages, they alone can object to the want of such notice;<sup>90</sup> and under a statute directing the committee to give seasonable notice to the selectmen of a town in which a highway is to be laid out, failure to give notice to the selectmen of one of two towns, both of which were parties to the proceedings, cannot be taken advantage of by the other.<sup>91</sup> Similarly where a rule requires written notice of a road view to be given to the owner or occupier of lands, and the only notice given was verbal notice to a tenant, no objection can be made thereto except by the owner.<sup>92</sup>

(j) Report in General—(1) FORM, SUFFICIENCY, AND VALIDITY IN GENERAL. No general rule can be laid down in regard to the form, sufficiency, and validity of the report or return of the commissioners, viewers, jurors, etc. It depends upon the requirements of the local statutes.<sup>93</sup>

Ct. 396, holding that where a rule of court of quarter sessions required notice of the time and place of meeting of the viewers to be given to the supervisors of the township or townships in which the road was located, such notice was not waived by the casual presence at the meeting of the viewers of one of such supervisors, his presence having no reference to the view.

New Jersey.—In re Middlesex County, etc., Public Road, 4 N. J. L. 290, holding that the fixing of the time at which the road is to be opened is an essential and indispensable part of the surveyor's duty, and such time should be stated in their return; but that a return that the road should be opened "on or before the 1st day of September next" sufficiently fixed the times.

Pennsylvania.—In re Drumore Tp. Road, (1886) 7 Atl. 193 (holding that the requirement of the act of June 13, 1883 (Purdon Dig. p. 1496, pl. 3), that a road, when laid out, shall, whenever practicable, be no more than five degrees in elevation, is not among the facts required by statute to be stated in the report of viewers); *Mill Creek Road Com'rs v. Rec. 169 (holding that the report of the viewers and the accompanying draft must be considered together, and omissions in one may be supplied by the other).

West Virginia.—Herron v. Carson, 26 W. Va. 62, holding that, although it would be more formal for a committee appointed to view a proposed road to return their report in writing, yet if it was not reduced to writing and signed by each member, but, in lieu thereof, the whole report, containing all the details required by the statute, is set out at length in the order book of the county court in the form of a recital, and an order of the court is made on such recital, it will suffice.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," §§ 108, 109.

Signature and seal.—The return of a locating committee appointed by the court of sessions in proceedings to lay out a highway must be under the hands and seals of the committee or a major part of it. Com. v. Coombs, 2 Mass. 489. However, it is not necessary that the surveyor should sign the report finding the necessity for the road. Muchmore v. Miller, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 176, 11 Cinc. L. Bul. 160. And the fact that the initial letter of the second christian name of one of the viewers is omitted in making the order of appointment, but is inserted in the signature to the report, will not warrant the setting aside of the report. In re South Abington Tp. Road, 109 Pa. St. 118. Where two of the viewers have signed the report, the fact that the third viewer does not sign it until the return-day does not vitiate the report. In re Greenwood Tp. Road, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 549. In any event the fact that only two out of three viewers signed the report is not a ground for setting aside the proceedings three years after the final confirmation of the report and after the road had been opened and public money expended thereon to a considerable amount. In re Union Tp. Road, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 573.

Report by deputy.—Under the Pennsylvania act of Feb. 24, 1873, providing that a surveyor is to be appointed for Allegheny county with authority to appoint a deputy to perform his duties, the surveyor to act as artist on road views, a report signed by the deputy surveyor is authorized where viewers were appointed, the county surveyor being named as one without designating his office. In re Killbuck Private Road, 77 Pa. St. 39. In Washington the county engineer is authorized to employ a deputy, and such deputy has the same power as his chief, and his report in proceedings to establish a road, signed by his own name, is sufficient as if made by the county engineer. State v. Clarke County Super. Ct., 49 Wash. 392, 95 Pac. 488. On a petition for viewers to lay out a road, the court appointed D, T, and B. The report of the viewers was signed by S and the latter two. After the report had been confirmed absolutely, and an order to open issued, a petition to set aside the confirmation and admit exceptions was presented. A certificate was then filed by D, who was county engineer, to the effect that S was the duly appointed deputy engineer, and was deputed by him to survey and locate the road. It was held that it sufficiently appeared that the persons who signed the report were the persons contemplated and authorized by law to act as viewers, and that the objection that the certificate was not filed by leave of court would not avail after the time for exceptions had elapsed. Re Verona Borough Road, 9 Pa. Cas. 114, 12 Atl. 456.

Certainty.—The return of surveyors of the highway will be set aside for uncertainty and show that all or a majority of the viewers or surveyors were present at the view or survey.<sup>94</sup>

incongruity. State v. Green, 15 N. J. L. 88. Viewers of a highway reported that all who signed the report were present, and that, having been severally sworn in pursuance of the order, they viewed, laid out, and appointed for public use the following road, etc., and named the properties on which no damages were claimed, and the amounts of damages allowed on other properties, and stated that they were of opinion that the road as laid out was necessary for a public road or street, and recommended it to be fifty feet wide. It was held that the proceedings were substantially correct, and would not be set aside as being inaccurate and uncertain. In re Pottsgrove Road, 2 Walk. (Pa.) 503. See also State v. Schanck, 9 N. J. L. 107. Certainty of description of road see infra, II, C, 5, g, (v), (j), (5).

Report as to competency of petitioners.—The board of county commissioners having appointed viewers, approved their report locating a road, and ordered it opened on a petition purporting to have been signed by more than twelve householders, the proceedings are valid, although the board made no express finding that petitioners were householders. Schade v. Theel, 45 Kan. 628, 26 Pac. 38. In the absence of statutory provisions as to residence and citizenship of a petitioner for the opening of a road, the commissioners need not find on those points. Crowley v. Gallatin County, 14 Mont. 292, 36 Pac. 313.

Report as to time and place of meeting.—While good practice requires it (In re Kidder Tp. Road, 1 Kulp (Pa.) 10), yet the report of road viewers need not affirmatively state that the viewers met at the time and place designated. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, or of an inference to be drawn to the contrary from something on the face of the report, it will be presumed that the jury did their duty. In re Greenwood Tp. Road, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 549; In re Kidder Tp. Road, supra. So the failure of re-reviewers to state the date of their meeting is not necessarily fatal. In re Limerick Road, 1 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 171.

Report as to adjournments.—The omission of re-reviewers to state that they had an adjourned meeting is not sufficient of itself to set aside their report, if it appears that the parties interested had due notice of the actual view. In re Limerick Road, 1 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 171. Although it is necessary that when surveyors of highways adjourn they should do so in the manner prescribed by statute, yet where surveyors met on the twenty-third, and the report was signed on the twenty-sixth, without showing that they had adjourned in the meantime, it was not defective for not stating that they adjourned in the statutory manner, since it did not certainly appear that any adjournment took place; and although surveyors met on the twenty-third, and their report is signed on the twenty-sixth of the month, and it does not appear that they adjourned in the meantime, their report is not objectionable on the ground that it ought to appear that the adjournment was legal and proper, it appearing from the length of the road to be examined that three days were necessary without having taken an adjournment. In re Middlesex County, etc., Public Road, 4 N. J. L. 290. The return made by surveyors of a highway was not vague and uncertain because the surveyors met on one day at the house of one person, and the return was dated and signed on another day of the same month at another house, without showing adjournment of time and place. State v. Schanck, 9 N. J. L. 107.

Report as to view and survey.—Good practice requires that a report of viewers should show that they viewed the ground, but an omission to state such fact is not fatal to the report. In re Kidder Tp. Road, 1 Kulp (Pa.) 10. In any event a report of the county surveyor setting forth the full description of the location of a road, together with the plat thereof, is sufficient to show compliance with the order of court directing him to view, mark out, and survey the proposed road. Spurgeon v. Bartlett, 56 Mo. App. 349.

Report as to: Notice of proceedings see supra, II, C, 5, g, (v), (B), (5). Qualification of commissioners, viewers, etc., see supra, II, C, 5, g, (II), (E).

94. See the statutes of the different states, and cases cited infra, this note.

In Illinois, where a report is signed by two only of three viewers of a road, it will be presumed that the third was present and consulting, until the contrary is shown. Louk v. Woods, 15 Ill. 256.

In New Jersey, under the statute providing that surveyors appointed to locate a highway, or a majority of them when they have met, on due proof of the performance of certain conditions precedent, shall view the premises, etc., a return signed by four out of a board composed of six, reciting that on the appointed day two of them met, and, on due proof that proper notices were given, adjourned, etc., is insufficient as showing the required proof to have been made before less than a majority. State v. Hall, 17 N. J. L. 374. A return by road surveyors must show that an absent surveyor had notice of their meeting, or such notice must appear by proof laid before the court. Bassett v. Clement, 17 N. J. L. 166. Where the return of surveyors laying out a highway is submitted by only a part of their number, it must be shown by their return that the non-subscribing surveyors were present and did not concur, or, if absent, that they had been duly notified of the meeting. State v. Van Geison, 15 N. J. L. 339. Where the return of a road is signed by less than all the surveyors, it should appear that the others either met with them or had notice of the meeting. Griscom v. Gilmore,

(3) REPORT AS TO NECESSITY, UTILITY, CONVENIENCE, AND CHARACTER OF ROAD; INDIVIDUAL ADVANTAGE OR PREJUDICE. It is sometimes required that the report should contain statements as to the necessity<sup>95</sup> or utility<sup>96</sup> of the proposed road, the public advantage and private inconvenience thereof,<sup>97</sup> and its

16 N. J. L. 105; State v. Burnet, 14 N. J. L. 385.

In Pennsylvania, it seems, the road viewers' report should state particularly who of them were present at the view. In re South Abington Tp. Road, 109 Pa. St. 118; In re Herrick Tp., etc., Road, 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 579. But see In re Springbrook Road, 64 Pa. St. 451; Greenleaf Ct. Case, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 514, holding that omissions in the report of a jury of review to state the names of the jurymen absent will not vitiate the report, although signed by five. However, a report signed by all the viewers, stating that they "had viewed," is a sufficient averment as to who were present at the view. In re Ross Tp. Road, 36 Pa. St. 87.

95. Truax v. Sterling, 74 Mich. 160, 41 N. W. 885 (holding that under Howell Annot. St. Mich. § 1300, providing that the commissioner of highways "shall, at the time appointed, proceed to view the premises described in the application and notice, and to ascertain and determine the necessity for laying out, altering, or discontinuing a highway pursuant to such application," etc., it is a jurisdictional prerequisite that the commissioner's return shall state positively that he has ascertained and determined the necessity for taking the land for purposes of a highway); In re Upper St. Claire Tp., etc., Road, (Pa. 1887) 7 Atl. 772 (holding that it is an essential requisite, under the Pennsylvania act of June 12, 1836 (Purdon Dig. p. 1496, pl. 3), specifying the requisites of the viewers' report, that the report should state that the road is necessary).

Otherwise in California. Humboldt County v. Dinsmore, 75 Cal. 604, 17 Pac. 710.

However, where the report of a committee stated that they found that a certain part of the road prayed for was not required by common convenience and necessity, and that they were of opinion that that portion of the petition should not be granted, but that they found that a certain other portion ought to be laid out, and that they therefore laid it out, it was sufficiently found that the latter portion was required by common convenience and necessity. Pierce v. Southbury, 29 Conn. 490. And it is not necessary that the surveyor should sign the report finding the necessity for the road. Muchmore v. Miller, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 176, 11 Cinc. L. Bul. 160. The viewers appointed under the Pennsylvania act of June 13, 1836, reported that "after due consideration, and diligent inquiry as to the necessity of the said road, they are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioners should be granted for the reasons set forth in their petition," and "have therefore located and distinctly marked upon the ground, and do recommend for public use the following described road," etc. It is held that the report need not be made in the very words of the act, and that the report in question substantially found that the road was necessary. In re Upper St. Clair Tp., etc., Road, 8 Pa. Cas. 470, 11 Atl. 625. So the report of viewers which states that "they laid out the road for public use," and that, "in their opinion it will fully answer as a public road, and will accommodate the traveling public," is a sufficient finding that the road is necessary. In re Versailles Tp. Road, 4 Brewst. (Pa.) 57.

96. Butts v. Geary County, 7 Kan. App. 302, 53 Pac. 771 (holding that where viewers are appointed on a petition for a highway under Gen. St. (1889) c. 89, § 29, before the board of commissioners can prove the viewers' report, and direct the highway to be located and opened, it must appear therefrom that the road proposed is practicable and of public utility); In re Marsh, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 239 (holding that a committee appointed to survey a road should decide upon its utility or inutility).

In Indiana, however, under Rev. St. § 5016, which imposes on viewers the duty to ascertain whether a highway will be of "public utility," and to "locate and mark" it "on the best ground," and under section 5017, providing for a report by such viewers giving a description of such location "by metes and bounds," their report that they have "proceeded to review, mark and locate said proposed public highway," with a description of the road, is sufficient, and they are not required to state therein that the road will be of public utility, and is located on the best ground. Campbell v. Fogg, 132 Ind. 1, 31 N. E. 454. And where the report of viewers appointed to locate a public road is favorable, but is silent as to the public utility of the location, or if it does not state that the location is of public utility, it will be presumed that they deemed it of public utility. Heagy v. Black, 90 Ind. 534. Where a remonstrance against a proposed highway includes the ground of damages and the inutility of the proposed road, it cannot be objected that the reviewers exceeded their authority in reporting the highway of public utility. Brown v. Stewart, 86 Ind. 377.

97. See the statutes of the different states, and cases cited infra, this note.

In Alabama the record must show that the road described in the order of the court was viewed and marked out by the jury "to the greatest advantage to the public, and with as little prejudice to individuals as possible, and without partiality or favor;" and where the order of the court directs the jury "to view and mark out the best route for the said road," and they report that, "being duly sworn before acting," they "performed the duty assigned them in the order to the best of their ability, without partiality or favor," this is not a sufficient compliance with the character, as whether it is a town or private way, or whether it is necessary for public or private purposes.<sup>98</sup>

(4) REPORT AS TO DAMAGES AND COST OF ROAD. It is commonly required that the report shall contain a finding as to the damages which would result to property owners from the establishment of the proposed road;<sup>99</sup> and it is sometimes necesstatute Keenan v. Dallas County Com'rs, Ct., 26 Ala. 568.

In Kentucky the report of road viewers must state the public and private conveniences to result from the proposed road (Winston v. Waggoner, 5 J. J. Marsh. 41; Fletcher v. Fugate, 3 J. J. Marsh. 631; Abney v. Barnett, 1 Bibb 557), and state them specifically (Wood v. Campbell, 14 B. Mon. 422; Peck v. Whitney, 6 B. Mon. 117; Foreman v. Allen, 2 Bibb 581).

In Maine, where the charter of a bridge company (Priv. Laws (1879), c. 128, § 6) provided that no way should at any time thereafter be located leading from said bridge to a certain place, which shall be for the necessary convenience of said company, unless the entire cost thereof be defrayed by said company, it was not sufficient that the committee adjudged the way to be a common convenience and necessity, but they must also adjudge, after due notice to the bridge company, whether the way would be a necessary convenience to the company. Shattuck's Appeal, 73 Me. 318. But under Acts (1832), c. 42, requiring county commissioners in proceedings for the laying out of the road to adjudge the road to be of "common convenience and necessity," it is sufficient if they find it of "convenience and necessity," omitting the word "common" (Cushing v. Gay, 23 Me. 9); and under St. (1821) c. 118, the evidence that a road laid out by the selectmen of a town is for the benefit of the town, or of some one or more individuals in it, is the approval and allowance of it by the town at a legal meeting or of the county commissioners on appeal, and the selectmen therefore need not state that fact in their report (In re Limerick, 18 Me. 183).

In New Jersey, in laying out a road, the requirements of the statute that the surveyors shall so lay it "as may appear to them to be most for the public and private convenience," and "in such a manner as to do the least injury to private property," are matters of substance, and the return of the surveyors must show a compliance with them. State v. Lippincott, 25 N. J. L. 434.

In Oregon the viewers, in proceedings under Laws (1903), p. 269 (Road Laws 1903), § 20, to locate a public road from petitioner's residence to another public road, being required by law to locate the road "so as to do the least damage," where this fact appears from their report, it is not necessary that the report show that the road located by them is on the most accessible or desirable route. Kemp v. Polk County, 46 Ore. 546, 81 Pac. 240.

In Vermont, under Acts (1882), No. 14, providing that commissioners appointed to lay out a highway may make their decision to lay out the road conditional upon payment by petitioners, especially to be benefited, of such sums as they may think proper toward the expense of laying out and building the road, a report showing an unconditional decision by the commissioners that the convenience of individuals and the public good required the road to be laid out, is not affected by the fact that the decision as to convenience and necessity is made conditional upon the payment of part of the expenses by one who was benefited, but who did not sign the petition, although he agreed to make the payments, as it is immaterial at whose expense it was built. Hancock v. Worcester, 62 Vt. 106, 18 Atl. 1041. And a report of commissioners laying out a highway in such manner as to protect a railroad will not be set aside if it imposes no additional burden upon defendant town, the error being only formal. Orcutt v. Bartland, 52 Vt. 612.

98. Christ Church v. Woodward, 26 Me. 172 (holding that the return of the selectmen of the laying out of a way must state whether it is a town or private way, as in the one case the damage is to be paid by the individuals benefited and in the other by the town); In re Herrick Tp., etc., Road, 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 579 (holding that the viewers' report should state whether the road is necessary for public or private purposes).

However, a report of viewers that they have laid out a road for public use is a sufficient compliance with the order to state whether it is deemed necessary for a public or private road. In re Norriton Tp., etc., Road, 4 Pa. St. 337. So it is a sufficient adjudication that the road is a public one if the viewers say they lay out the road for public use. In re App's Tavern Road, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 388. And it is not a sufficient exception to the report of a jury of review in the case of a street that it does not state whether the street be necessary for a public or a private road, where the report adopts and confirms the record of the first jury, in which the street is laid out as a public one. Greenleaf Ct. Case, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 514. Under Pa. Act, June 13, 1836, § 3, requiring the viewers of a road to state in their report whether the road is necessary for a public or private road, the report by viewers that they had laid out and "do return for public use the following road" was sufficient, as showing that it was necessary for a public road. In re West Hempfield Tp. Road, 4 Lanc. Bar (Pa.) 7.

99. Indiana.—Peed v. Brenneman, 72 Ind. 288.

Massachusetts.—Com. v. Coombs, 2 Mass. 489.

New Hampshire.—In re Patten, 16 N. H. 277.

New Jersey.—In laying out a highway over land of any one not an applicant therefor, the sary that the report should show a refusal of owners to grant a right of way over their property or to release damages.<sup>1</sup> In some states the report of the super-surveyors must certify in their return as to the damages sustained by such owner. Kearseley v. Gibbs, 44 N. J. L. 169; Washington v. Fisher, 43 N. J. L. 377; State v. Runyon, 24 N. J. L. 256; State v. Garretson, 23 N. J. L. 388; State v. Cooper, 23 N. J. L. 381. So holding unless the surveyors were misled by false statements of such owner himself. State v. Bennett, 25 N. J. L. 329. So holding, although the surveyors were ignorant of the law. State v. Everitt, 23 N. J. L. 378.

Pennsylvania.—In re New Washington Road, 23 Pa. St. 485; In re Palmer Tp. Road, 11 Wkly. Notes Cas. 429, holding that the report of viewers must either assess damages to the owners and occupants of land taken, or return a release of damages. And see In re Kingston Tp. Road, 8 Kulp 489, holding that where road viewers lay a road through land of an owner whose name does not appear on the draft, to whom no damages are awarded, and from whom no release is reported, on the reasonably prompt application of such owner, and proof that he had no actual notice of the proceedings, confirmation of the report will be stricken off.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 112.

Contra.—Detroit v. Somerset County, 52 Me. 210, holding that proceedings of county commissioners, in laying out a highway, will not be quashed because no damages are awarded to the owners of the land taken, as it is to be presumed that they decided that no damages were sustained.

Hearing.—A recital in a report that the commissioners, after due notice to all parties in interest, heard all the testimony offered as to damages, and thereon assessed such damages, sufficiently shows that the commissioners heard complaints as required by Mo. Rev. St. § 7799. Spurgeon v. Bartlett, 56 Mo. App. 349.

Amount awarded, and particular assessment to each owner.—A report of reviewers finding that damages will be suffered by a certain person but which omits to find the amount of such damages is defective. In re Kingston Tp. Road, 5 Kulp (Pa.) 43. The return of the surveyors should specify the names of all whose lands are taken, and the amount assessed to each. An assessment to "A, B, and others" is bad. Mt. Olive Tp. v. Hunt, 51 N. J. L. 274, 17 Atl. 291; State v. Oliver, 24 N. J. L. 129. And see In re Greenwood Tp. Road, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 85.

Award of lump sum.—Under Cal. Pol. Code, § 2686, providing that the report of the viewers to the supervisors shall contain "the estimate of the damage to the owner," it was held that as the report was not binding on the owner as to damages, it was sufficient to report a lump sum as the proper amount to be paid. Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507, 23 Pac. 700.

Land damaged.—Although the report of the board awarding damages on laying out a highway should specify all the land which the supervisors consider damaged, it is not necessary to specify all adjacent land which they consider as not being damaged, or with regard to which the benefits may equal the damages. Olson v. Curran, 137 Wis. 380, 119 N. W. 101.

How, when, and by whom payable.—An unauthorized direction how, when, or by whom the damages should be paid held to be surplusage and not necessarily fatal to the report see In re O'Hara Tp. Road, 87 Pa. St. 356. Under the Pennsylvania act of Feb. 24, 1845, regulating the laying out of roads in certain counties, and requiring the court to examine the amount of damages assessed by the viewers, the viewers should recommend in their report how the damages should be paid, in order that the responsible parties may have notice, and the question be raised, and the court have the findings of the viewers as a basis of action. In re Covington Road, Wilcox (Pa.) 121.

Proportion payable by different townships, etc.—Where a road is laid out in two or more townships, the surveyors must certify the proportion of assessment to be paid by the several townships in which the road is laid out. State v. Cannon, 33 N. J. L. 218; State v. Garretson, 23 N. J. L. 388. So where a road is laid out partly in a township and partly in a borough, the viewers must make a separate assessment of the damages sustained by the respective owners, showing the amounts to be paid to each by the borough, if any, and the amounts to be paid to each by the township. In re Greenwood Tp. Road, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 85. But where the return directs the different amounts awarded for damages to the landowners to be paid by the respective townships through which the road runs, it need not state the aggregate sum to be paid by each township. Oxford Tp. v. Brands, 45 N. J. L. 332.

Description of owners entitled to damages see infra, II, C, 5, g, (v), (j), (7).

1. See the statutes of the different states and cases cited infra, this note.

In Missouri, Rev. St. § 6937, recites: "The commissioner shall take the relinquishment of the right of way of all persons who may give such, and make report thereon. The commissioner shall also state, in his report, the names of all persons who have relinquished . . . or failed to relinquish the right of way, giving the names of both and the reasons therefor." It was held that this contemplates a conference between the landowners and the commissioner, which must affirmatively appear on the face of the proceedings before the county court can take jurisdiction to appoint jurors to assess damages. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Young, 96 Mo. 39, 8 S. W. 776. The report must affirmatively show the refusal of non-consenting owners to relinquish the right of way through their lands, and a recital that they failed to make the relinquishment will not suffice. Jones v. Zink, visors or commissioners must, under ordinary circumstances at least, contain an estimate of the cost of the proposed road.<sup>2</sup>

(5) DESCRIPTION OF ROAD. The report must contain a definite and certain description of the road to be laid out.<sup>3</sup> But all that is necessary is that the road

65 Mo. App. 409. However, a report that plaintiff had refused to give the right of way, and that he demanded one hundred dollars therefor, was sufficient, the commissioner not being authorized to agree with plaintiff on a price for the right of way. Lingo v. Burford, 112 Mo. 149, 20 S. W. 459.

In Pennsylvania, however, it is not necessary that the report of the viewers should state that they have endeavored to obtain the release, as it will be presumed that they did so. In re South Abington Tp. Road, 109 Pa. St. 118; In re McConnell's Mill Road, 32 Pa. St. 285; In re Cornplanter Tp. Road, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 20; In re Clinton Tp. Road, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 170. Contra, In re Warrington Tp. Road, 8 Del. Co. 79; In re Pen Argyl Road, 2 Lehigh Val. L. Rep. 370; In re Lower Chanceford Tp. Road, 8 York Leg. Rec. 165; In re Lower Chanceford Tp. Road, 8 York Leg. Rec. 8. In any event, where a report of viewers stated that, "failing to procure releases of damages from the persons through whose land the road passes," the viewers made the following assessments, the report sufficiently showed that an effort was made to procure releases. In re North Hopewell Tp. Road, 5 Del. Co. 85. And where viewers report that no damages will be sustained by the proposed road, it cannot be objected to their report that they failed to obtain releases of claims for damages. In re Hazle Tp. Road, 6 Kulp 463. But the use of the words, "no damages claimed," by viewers in their report, is not consistent with the claim that they endeavored to procure releases from landowners. In re Allegheny Tp. Road, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 30.

2. Tehama County v. Bryan, 68 Cal. 57, 8 Pac. 673 (holding, however, that to give the supervisors jurisdiction to proceed further in the opening of the road, it is sufficient if the viewers' report gives the probable cost of the construction, and the several items of expense, such as grading, bridges, etc., need not be reported separately); Seafield v. Bohne, 169 Mo. 537, 69 S. W. 1051 (holding, however, under a statute which requires the road commissioners to estimate the cost of bridges, culverts, and grading, and make a survey and plat of the proposed road, and return it to the court, that where the commissioners gave no estimate of the cost of the grading and culverts, but it was stated that the cost would be paid by petitioners, the failure to give the cost of the grading and culverts did not invalidate the proceedings).

3. Arkansas.—Beck v. Biggers, 66 Ark. 292, 50 S. W. 514.

Kentucky.—Phillips v. Tucker, 3 Metc. 69 (holding that viewers of a road must describe by metes and bounds the route laid out by them; they must fix exactly by some visible object the beginning and the termination thereof; and it will not be a satisfactory fixing of the beginning to trace back to it by the description from the end); Wood v. Campbell, 14 B. Mon. 422.

New Jersey.—State v. Hulick, 37 N. J. L. 70 (holding that where the return and map of a road do not give the length of the line through the land of the several owners, and the map does not show the division fences and lines where the road crosses them, the return is illegal); State v. Woodruff, 36 N. J. L. 204; Griscom v. Gilmore, 16 N. J. L. 105 (holding that the return should set out the road in its whole length with such precision that the landholders, and he or they who may have to open or use it, may have no difficulty in ascertaining where they have a right to travel, or where they would be trespassing; also that a return stating the beginning or ending point of the road to be at or near a certain place is too vague); State v. Green, 15 N. J. L. 88; State v. Clark, 1 N. J. L. 261.

Pennsylvania.—In re O'Hara Tp. Road, 152 Pa. St. 319, 25 Atl. 602; In re Bean's Road, 35 Pa. St. 280; In re Yardley Borough, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 179 (holding that the report of viewers and the draft accompanying it should specify the quantity of land taken, the length and width, the courses and distances, etc., so clearly that the record thereof will define the lines of the street, the grade thereof, and the boundaries of the properties thereon); In re Union Tp. Road, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 39; In re Cheltenham Tp. Road, 3 Montg. Co. Rep. 37; In re Abington Tp. Road, 2 Montg. Co. Rep. 92; In re Windsor Tp. Road, 10 York Leg. Rec. 185; In re Lehman Tp. Road, 1 Am. L. J. 321 (holding that proceedings in a road case will be set aside where the termini are shown by neither the report nor the draft).

Canada.—Boyington v. Holmes, 5 N. Brunsw. 74.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 113.

Description of land taken.—The land taken for the road must likewise be described. Rose v. Garrett, 91 Mo. 65, 3 S. W. 828; In re Franklin Tp. Road, 4 Pa. Dist. 417.

Width of road.—Under some statutes the report must state the width of the road. Hayes v. Shackford, 3 N. H. 10; Matter of Feeney, 20 Misc. (N. Y.) 272, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 830; In re Franklin Tp. Road, 4 Pa. Dist. 417; Boyington v. Holmes, 5 N. Brunsw. 74. And see Clarke v. South Kingstown, 18 R. I. 283, 27 Atl. 336. Under other statutes the rule is otherwise. Sisson v. Carithers, 35 Ind. App. 161, 72 N. E. 267, 73 N. E. 924; Tench v. Abshire, 90 Va. 768, 19 S. E. 779. And see In re Aston Tp. Road, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 372, holding that the breadth of a proposed road returned by the viewers is mere surplusage. However this may be, a report of

be so described that it can be located with reasonable certainty.<sup>4</sup> Where objectors in highway opening proceedings claimed that the description in the viewers' report was written after the report had been filed, and without the viewers' knowledge, and that the report was insufficient for want of a description, the burden was on the objectors to prove such fact in the commissioners' court.<sup>5</sup>

(6) RETURN OF MAP OR PLAT AND PETITION. It is frequently required that the report shall be accompanied by a map or plat of the proposed road;<sup>6</sup> and commissioners showing the center of the highway, but failing to set out its width, is sufficiently definite as to the width, under Wis. Rev. St. § 1264, which provides that all highways shall be not less than four rods wide. State v. Hogue, 71 Wis. 384, 36 N. W. 860.

Grade of road.—In Virginia the grade of the road need not be stated in the report of the viewers. Tench v. Abshire, 90 Va. 768, 19 S. E. 779. And in Pennsylvania, where the statute does not require that the report of viewers of a road should state the elevation, in the absence of any contrary showing in the record it will be presumed that, wherever practicable, the road was laid out at a proper grade. In re Drumore Road, 3 Lanc. L. Rev. (Pa.) 222. But under the Pennsylvania act of March 2, 1854, providing that no road shall be laid thereunder unless it can be graded at an elevation of not more than five degrees from the plane of the horizon, or be easily reduced to that elevation, it was error to confirm a report of viewers where it did not appear in the report or draft, or any part of the record, that the road could be graded as required. In re Cussewago Tp. Road, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 190. And see In re Yardley Borough, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 179.

Whole report to be considered.—In laying out a proposed road, an uncertainty in one part of the commissioners' report is not fatal, if from the whole may be gathered a description leaving no difficulty in locating the road. Todemier v. Aspinwall, 43 Ill. 401. So where the return of the surveyors commenced with a recital, it was held that for the purpose of designating the general locality of the road, the recital might be considered as part of the return, especially where the return contained words of reference to the description in the recital. State v. Cake, 24 N. J. L. 516.

Petition or order and report to be considered together.—Where, in the establishment of a highway, the locality is named in the petition and order, failure of the viewers to name it in their report is not a fatal defect. In re Hilltown, etc., Road, 2 Del. Co. (Pa.) 480.

Map or plat and report to be considered together.—That the width of a proposed highway is not indicated in the report of the council committee is immaterial, where the width is shown in a plat accompanying the report. Clarke v. South Kingstown, 18 R. I. 283, 27 Atl. 336. But where the courses and distances of the return of the surveyors lay a public road through dwelling-houses, the proceeding is fatally defective, although the map of the surveyors shows the road to be to one side of the dwellings. Mowbray v. Allen, 58 N. J. L. 315, 33 Atl. 199.

Variance between courses and distances and monuments.—Where the return of the road states that stone monuments have been set up and marked at the angles of the road, and also gives the courses and distances, which disagree with the monuments, the courses and distances may be corrected by the monuments named in the return. Woodman v. Somerset County, 25 Me. 300.

Variance between return and petition: As to length see infra, II, C, 5, h, (II). As to location see infra, II, C, 5, h, (I), (C), (1). As to width see infra, II, C, 5, h, (III), (A).

However, the neglect of the commissioners to return a plan of the way laid out is not material if they have returned a sufficient description. Howland v. Penobscot County, 49 Me. 143; Lisbon v. Merrill, 12 Me. 210, in at least one jurisdiction the petition for the road is required to be returned by the selectmen.<sup>7</sup>

(7) REPORT AS TO OWNERS AND IMPROVEMENTS. The names of the owners of the lands over which the proposed road runs,<sup>8</sup> and a description of the improvements over which it passes,<sup>9</sup> are sometimes required to be contained in the report or map or plat.

Who may make, sign, and annex map.—Where surveyors, having viewed and laid out a road, caused it to be surveyed by a practical surveyor, and marked the proper distances, and signed the return, containing a full description of the road as laid out, and annexed such map to the return, the mechanical operation of drafting the map was in no sense a judicial act, and therefore it was not necessary that they should either make it or sign it. State v. English, 22 N. J. L. 291. So the viewers, or any person by them authorized, may attach the plan of the road. In re New Hanover Tp. Road, 18 Pa. St. 220.

Time of making and annexing map.—In New Jersey the map which is required by the road act to be annexed to the return of the surveyors of the highways laying out a road may, by their direction, be both made and annexed by the practical surveyors after they have signed their return and separated. State v. English, 22 N. J. L. 713. So in Pennsylvania the plan may be attached after viewers have signed their report and separated. In re New Hanover Tp. Road, 18 Pa. St. 220.

Reference to plat in report.—Although the plat is not referred to or identified by the report of the commissioners, yet, if it is referred to by the court in the adjudication confirming the road, it is sufficient. State v. Prine, 25 Iowa 231.

Form and sufficiency of map or plat.—A return of a road will not be set aside for the reason that one course of it is, by accident, not delineated on the map, if it is given in the written report, and can be supplied therefrom. State v. Miller, 23 N. J. L. 383. Under a statute requiring surveyors of highways to make a map or draft of the road, with the courses and distances, and reference to the most remarkable places and improvements through which it may pass, a return and map were not insufficient because they did not show the township and county lines which the road crossed. In re Middlesex County, etc., Public Road, 4 N. J. L. 290. If the draft of the road shows that it passes through the lot of an individual, it need not state the precise distance it passes through it. In re App's Tavern Road, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 388. That a draft does not show on its face the name of the public road at the end of which the proposed road begins is not fatal to a viewer's report. Matter of Ross Tp. Public Road, 5 Pa. Super. Ct. 85. However, the report must be set aside where the accompanying draft does not state the courses and distances. In re Race St., 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 95. And the draft submitted by the viewers should define the location of the termini so that they correspond with those set forth in the proceedings. In re Middletown Tp. Road, 3 Del. Co. (Pa.) 208. Sufficiency as to names of landowners and improvements on land see infra, II, C, 5, g, (v), (j), (7).

7. Kidder v. Jennison, 21 Vt. 108, holding, however, that the omission of the selectmen to return to the town clerk's office the petition in pursuance of which they have laid a highway will not avoid their act in laying the highway.

Coombs*, 2 Mass. 489 (both holding that the return of a committee appointed to locate a highway must contain the names of persons over whose land the way passes, if such names are known to the committee, or, if they are unknown, a certification of that fact); Mt. Olive Tp. v. Hunt, 51 N. J. L. 274, 17 Atl. 291; State v. Oliver, 24 N. J. L. 129; In re Kingston Tp. Road, 8 Kulp (Pa.) 489. See, however, Talliferro v. Roach, 12 S. W. 1039, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 665 (holding that where the report of road viewers gives the names of all the owners of the land over which the proposed road runs, the fact that the name of a tenant under the control of an owner, or cropping on shares, does not appear, will not vitiate the proceeding); Detroit v. Somerset County, 52 Me. 210 (holding that proceedings of county commissioners in laying out a highway will not be quashed because no damages are awarded to the owners of the land taken, and the latter are not named, as it is to be presumed that they decided that no damages were sustained); Merrill v. Berkshire, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 269 (holding that the verdict of a jury appointed for the laying out of a highway need not name the owners of the land over which the way is established, for they have no authority to lay out the way over the land of any other persons except the petitioners for the jury); Stokes v. Parker, 53 N. J. L. 183, 20 Atl. 1074 (holding that the fact that the return of the surveyors described certain persons to whom awards of damages were made as residents of one town, when in fact they lived elsewhere, did not invalidate the proceedings of the surveyors).

9. State v. Hopping, 18 N. J. L. 423 (holding that "improvements" means inclosures as distinguished from wastes and commons); In re O'Hara Tp. Road, 152 Pa. However, a barn or dwelling-house is not such an improvement as is required, by the Road Act to be laid down in the map annexed to the return of surveyors. State v. Smith, 21 N. J. L. 91. Nor are boundary lines improvements. In re Leet Tp. Road, 159 Pa. St. 72, 28 Atl. 238. While a report of road viewers should set forth the improvements on the lands over which the road passes, the report will not be set aside for non-compliance with this rule, where the draft shows the residences of at least two of the adjoiners of the proposed road plainly set out, which would indicate that the land was improved, and no proof is produced of the existence of any other improvement. *In re Mt. It is sufficient if there be a reference to the improvements either in the draft or the report. In re East Earl Road, 10 Lanc. L. Rev. (Pa.) 340. The provisions of the statute making it the duty of a road commissioner, when directed to view the route of a proposed highway, to report specially whether any yard, garden, orchard, or any part thereof will be taken if the road is established are directory only. *Jeter v. See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 118.

The words "regular session" are equivalent to "term of record," and a report fixed at the next "term of record" is regular under a statute by which the court of county commissioners is required to file its report of the location of a way at its next "regular session" after the hearing. Harpwell v. Cumberland County, 78 Me. 100, 2 Atl. 880. But the report must be made to, and recorded at, a term of their court held next after such proceedings shall have been had and finished, and not at an adjournment of a term commencing previously. Parsonsfield v. Lord, 23 Me. 511.

Day of session returnable.—In Maine the report may be returned at any day of the session. Chapman v. York County, 79 Me. 267, 9 Atl. 728. Otherwise in Missouri, where the statute specifically provides that the return must be on or before the first day of the term. Rose v. Garrett, 91 Mo. 65, 3 S. W. 828. In Pennsylvania the filing of a report by viewers after the first day of the term to which the order is returnable is sufficient (In re Whitmarsh Tp. Road, 2 Montg. Co. Rep. abandoned;<sup>13</sup> and it is error in the court to award a view returnable to any but the next term, or to confirm a report made in pursuance of an order not followed up as the statute prescribes.<sup>14</sup> Furthermore under such a statute viewers cannot report during the term at which they were appointed.<sup>15</sup> Viewers may file an amended report at any time before final action.<sup>16</sup>

(b) EXTENSION. If a view cannot be had in time to report at the next term after the order issued as required by statute,<sup>17</sup> a continuance of the order from time to time may be obtained,<sup>18</sup> unless the original order is functus officio.<sup>19</sup> Where the court ordered a continuance for a report of viewers of a highway, a report cannot be filed at the same term at which the continuance was granted.<sup>20</sup>

When exceptions lie.—If the owner of land refuses to release, the viewers cannot refuse to hear his proofs, and consider his claim for damages, if he makes any; but if his claim is decided adversely his remedy is not by exception to the report, but by application for a review. *In re Upper Mt. (b) TIME OF FILING.<sup>30</sup> Exceptions to be available must be taken in good season;<sup>31</sup> and it is held that the court is without power, after the time for filing exceptions has passed, to permit the filing of another exception raising the point desired, or an amendment of a former exception.<sup>32</sup> But the court will permit an amendment to exceptions to the report of road viewers to be filed nunc pro tunc, where the magnitude of the expenses to be incurred shows that action on the report should be had only upon full notice to taxpayers and all others concerned.<sup>33</sup> The statutes person aggrieved by the report of viewers that the highway petitioned for was not of public utility was not by motion to set aside the report, but was under Burns Rev. St. Ind. (1901) § 6753, permitting action on a second petition on a bond for costs being filed by petitioners.

28. In re Long Point Road, 5 Harr. (Del.) 152 (holding that a possible diversion of travel from a tavern and wharf owned by exceptant to the commissioners' return is too remote an interest); Bernard v. Callaway County Ct., 28 Mo. 37 (holding that only those persons owning lands through which the route of a state road is located, and who consider themselves aggrieved, can object to the approval of the commissioners' report in the county court); *State v. L. 45 (holding that a party whose land has not been taken cannot object to the return of the surveyors on the ground that no compensation has been awarded to his neighbor, whose land was taken); In re Greene Tp., etc., Road, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 418 (holding that where viewers have reported on the necessity of a public road, and there appears to have been no abuse of their discretion, a turnpike company has no standing to oppose the road merely because the opening of the road would diminish the company's tolls).

Remonstrant held to have sufficient interest to appear and remonstrate against the acceptance of the report see Shelton v. Derby, 27 Conn. 414; State v. Stout, 33 N. J. L. 42.

29. Lockwood v. Gregory, 4 Day (Conn.) 407 (holding a remonstrance to the report of a viewing committee appointed on application for a highway, containing no direct denial of the facts stated in the report, or alleging matter in avoidance otherwise than by reciting a town vote, without averring the truth of the facts contained in such report, insufficient); Hayward v. Bath, 40 N. H. 100 (holding that charges of partiality, corruption, and improper conduct on the part of county commissioners in laying out a highway, unsupported by proof, furnish no cause for setting aside their report). See also In re Hilltown, etc., Road, 2 Walk. (Pa.) 78, holding that an exception to the report of viewers that it did not appear by the report that five days' notice was served, where exceptants did not claim that they were not notified, was purely technical.

The want of necessity for a proposed road is not ground for exception to the report of the viewers, that question being for the viewers exclusively. In re East Pennsylvania Tp. Road, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 453; In re North Hope-well Tp. Road, 5 Del. Co. (Pa.) 85; In re Upper Leacock Road, 8 Lanc. L. Rev. (Pa.) 76, holding that exceptions denying the necessity of the road, and alleging the existence of another similar road in the vicinity, will be discharged, in the absence of evidence to sustain them or to show misconduct of the viewers, as the viewers are supposed to have duly considered these matters. See also Brown v. Stewart, 86 Ind. 377, holding that where remonstrants united in the same remonstrance the question of utility and damages, they cannot complain that the reviewers took action on both questions and reported the highway of public utility. But see Hubbard v. Wickliffe, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 502, holding that where, upon the report of viewers relating to the establishment of a highway, a party appeared in court and suggested that it passed through his land unnecessarily, and that a better and more convenient way could be had over the land of the applicant entirely, and prayed an order of survey for the purpose of showing these facts, the court should have ordered such survey, so that it might have been produced on the final hearing.

An objector must stand upon his objections as made before the commissioners, and cannot subsequent to a hearing thereon urge objections differing from those first made. Sullivan v. Lafayette County, 58 Miss. 790.

Definiteness of objections.—Objections to the report of highway viewers in that it was "insufficient in law," and "not made in accordance with law," are insufficient for indefiniteness. Sisson v. Carithers, 35 Ind. App. 161, 72 N. E. 267, 73 N. E. 924.

generally provide the time within which exceptions or objections to the proceeding or report of commissioners, reviewers, etc., must be taken, and exceptions or objections not taken within such time are of no effect.<sup>34</sup> After a public road has been opened pursuant to order of court, it is too late to move to set aside the report of viewers for irregularities in the proceedings, in the absence of any excuse for the delay in making the motion;<sup>35</sup> and after the report of viewers appointed to lay out a road has been confirmed absolutely by the court, it is too late to take exceptions thereto which are purely technical.<sup>36</sup> An exception to the recommitment must be taken when the petition is recommitted.<sup>37</sup> But where it appears on the record that one of the viewers of a road, and one of the petitioners for viewers, is the same person, exceptions to the report of the viewers may be filed nunc pro tunc when the report is heard for final confirmation;<sup>38</sup> and exceptions may be taken to road viewers' reports even after final confirmation, where the exceptions are to matters apparent on the record, and fatal to the confirmation; and, if not allowed by the lower court, they may be taken in the appellate court.<sup>39</sup>

(3) PETITION FOR REVIEW. In some states provision is made by statute for a review;<sup>40</sup> and since the review is a matter of right, the report of a road jury cannot be confirmed pending the petition to review,<sup>41</sup> although there is nothing irregular in the appointment of reviewers while exceptions are pending to the report of viewers.<sup>42</sup> Where the statute so provides, as is sometimes the case, a petition for review must be made at or before the term of court next after that at which the viewers' report was confirmed,<sup>43</sup> and should be signed by the parties in

(4) TIME OF HEARING. A hearing on the report must be had at or within the time provided by the statute or order of court,<sup>48</sup> which is generally a specified number of days after the presentment of the report,<sup>49</sup> or at the next regular term of the court.<sup>50</sup> It has been held, however, that a confirmation of the report may be entered at a subsequent term, where objections have delayed a final decision.<sup>51</sup> Notice of the hearing must be given within a specified time after the filing of the report,<sup>52</sup> such notice being allowed to be given by any one interested in the proceeding.<sup>53</sup>

(5) CONCLUSIVENESS OF REPORT. The conclusiveness of the report of the commissioners, viewers, etc., depends largely upon the statutes in the several states. In some of the cases it is held that the report is conclusive as to all matters of which the commissioners had jurisdiction to determine, as, for instance, the question of a previous dedication,<sup>54</sup> or of the necessity, utility, or convenience of the road,<sup>55</sup> unless the commissioners acted in bad faith or were guilty of gross

Change of date for hearing report.—Where the report of a committee relative to the laying out of a new highway was presented, and notice ordered for hearing on a certain date, it was improper to rescind such order, and to fix another date and order notice of hearing to be given, without entering a formal continuance. *Clarke v. errors and mistakes,<sup>56</sup> it being held that the question of the necessity of a proposed public road must be determined in the duly appointed mode of proceeding by viewers, reviewers, and, in the discretion of the court, re-reviewers; and it is error for the court to determine the question on evidence given before it on appeal from the reports of viewers,<sup>57</sup> the court being held to exercise the same control over commissioners for laying out a road, etc., that it does over arbitrators, and no more, and that it will not review their proceedings by way of appeal.<sup>58</sup> Elsewhere the report of viewers concerning the establishment of a road is held to be designed to aid the court, but not in any manner to control it;<sup>59</sup> and where the view is taken upon the hearing evidence may be introduced in regard to the pro-

In New Jersey jurisdiction to determine the necessity of a road is conferred on the surveyors exclusively, and the power to review their determination is lodged exclusively in freeholders who shall be delegated to review their report; and unless the decision of the surveyors shall be reversed by the freeholders, the return of the surveyors is to be recorded without a review by the court. *Carpenter v. The common pleas court has, however, jurisdiction to determine whether the proceedings have been conducted according to the directions of the statute, and may set aside the surveyors' report or the freeholders' certificate for non-conformity with the statutory requirements or illegality in matter of substance, but cannot review the surveyors' determination as to the necessity of the road, nor set aside their return on the ground that their judgment was erroneous. *State v. Defects cured.—On petition for a public road over private property, designating the exact route desired, the court ordered that the road be laid in accordance with the petition. The viewers appointed by the court thereafter reported that they had laid the road as ordered, and so "as to do the least possible damage to the land over which it passed." a general rule that one road cannot be located on another regularly laid out and opened, yet one may be laid on another so far as it may be necessary to reach the terminus called for in the order.<sup>99</sup> And while grade crossings are not allowed in some states except in case of imperious necessity, a highway may nevertheless be laid out over a private siding.<sup>1</sup> Collusion between county commissioners and a railroad company in locating a proposed county road cannot be shown by the fact that the railroad company desired the location agreed to for its own purposes, where there was no evidence of improper influence or inducement.<sup>2</sup> The road should be so described in the proceedings as to be identified.<sup>3</sup> Where the road has not been opened by the supervisors under the order, a mere user with their acquiescence would not be competent to change the route located by the viewers.<sup>4</sup>

(2) FEASIBILITY. The local officers should select the most direct and feasible course for the highway.<sup>5</sup>

(3) ON SECTION LINES. Statutes often provide for the lay-out of highways on section lines;<sup>6</sup> but this does not take away power to locate them elsewhere.<sup>7</sup>

(4) IN TWO JURISDICTIONS. Where a road extends in two jurisdictions, the officers of each should act separately in locating it.<sup>8</sup>

(B) Description of Road. The judgment must describe the highway with certainty.<sup>46</sup>

Where a road has been used for more than fifty years, uncertainty in the original lay-out will not render it void. Dominick v. Hill, 6 N. Y. St. 329. So if the evidence shows that the beginning of the road is marked by a monument fixed by the commissioners who laid out said road, and that its course and boundaries have become well defined by use in accordance with said monuments, and the actual markings made by them, the judgment may be corrected to correspond with such facts, although the commissioners' report itself and the petition may have wrongly stated the distance the starting point is from the center of the section. Peterson v. Beha, 161 Mo. 513, 62 S. W. 462.

The judgment will be treated as an entirety usually. Hence if the description is in part defective the lay-out is void. Sonnek v. Minnesota Lake, 50 Minn. 558, 52 N. W. 961.

and a power given to one officer, while the survey is incomplete, to sign for another is ineffectual.<sup>60</sup>

(F) Conditional in Form. Exactly to what extent an order establishing a highway may be made conditional does not clearly appear from the cases. Thus it has been held that the court or commissioners may in the exercise of a sound discretion impose as a condition that the expense of location should be borne by petitioners,<sup>61</sup> while, on the other hand, such a condition has been held void,<sup>62</sup> as has been also a provision requiring a town to tend a draw in a bridge and to keep lamps lighted thereon,<sup>63</sup> or attempting to bind the petitioner for the road to construct and maintain a fence to protect the owner through whose land the road will run.<sup>64</sup> But the imposition of unauthorized conditions does not necessarily render void the whole order laying out a road,<sup>65</sup> although an order conditional in form may not be final.<sup>66</sup>

(II) AMENDMENT NUNC PRO TUNC. The record of proceedings may be amended nunc pro tunc if there be matter of record authorizing it,<sup>67</sup> and where the record is amended in a proper and legal manner it has the same force and effect as though originally made as amended,<sup>68</sup> and can no more be contradicted by parol than any other lawful record.<sup>69</sup> But amendment cannot be employed to alter or review what has been done judicially, but only as to ministerial acts.<sup>70</sup>

(III) RECORD AND FILING. Recording a location may be necessary to complete the lay-out,<sup>71</sup> which record should show clearly the facts,<sup>72</sup> and should be made within the time designated by statute,<sup>73</sup> although it has been held that valid, in the absence of any finding that the third commissioner did not meet and deliberate with the others.

the requirement as to the time of filing is directory merely and does not go to the validity of the proceedings.<sup>74</sup> jurisdictional facts<sup>8</sup> is generally presumed to be true when attacked in a collateral proceeding.

(iv) EQUITABLE RELIEF; INJUNCTION.<sup>75</sup> Equity may enjoin opening a road under invalid proceedings;<sup>76</sup> but that no funds are available,<sup>77</sup> or that the road would damage a landowner considerably,<sup>78</sup> will not justify an injunction, and an injunction will not lie where the landowner's legal remedy,<sup>79</sup> as by appeal,<sup>80</sup> is adequate; nor will equity interfere to control the discretion of a board having jurisdiction,<sup>81</sup> or where the injunction proceeding is a collateral attack,<sup>82</sup> or to enjoin a theoretical wrong.<sup>83</sup> All matters relied on by plaintiff as ground for the equitable relief should be averred in the complaint.<sup>84</sup>

(F) Collateral Attack. A judgment of an inferior tribunal having jurisdiction is generally binding against collateral attack;<sup>9</sup> but, such a judgment is not bind-

v. Burford, 112 Mo. 149, 20 S. W. 459 [affirming (1892) 18 S. W. 1081]; State v. Lewis, 22 N. J. L. 564; State v. Harland, 74 Wis. 11, 41 N. W. 1060.

Recital of notice may be attacked directly. Williams v. Routt County, 37 Colo. 55, 84 Pac. 1109.

A memorandum that notice was published in a particular manner is not sufficient evidence that no other publication was made. Molyneux v. Grimes, 78 Kan. 830, 98 Pac. 278.

Statements of notice held insufficient see In re Gardner, 41 Mo. App. 589; Cameron v. Wasco County, 27 Oreg. 318, 41 Pac. 160; State v. Officer, 4 Oreg. 180.

The particulars of notice should be recited. Molett v. Keenan, 22 Ala. 484; Fravert v. Finfrook, 43 Ohio St. 335, 1 N. E. 875.

8. Indiana.—Todd v. Crail, 167 Ind. 48, 77 N. E. 402; Hobbs v. Tipton County, 116 Ind. 376, 19 N. E. 186; Heagy v. Black, 90 Ind. 534; Rominger v. Simmons, 88 Ind. 453; Breitweiser v. Fuhrman, 88 Ind. 28.

Iowa.—State v. Prine, 25 Iowa 231.

Maine.—Goodwin v. Hallowell, 12 Me. 271.

Minnesota.—Bruggerman v. True, 25 Minn. 123.

New Jersey.—State v. Schanck, 9 N. J. L. 107.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 172.

Collateral attack generally see infra, II, C, 5, i, (VI), (F).

9. Arkansas.—Brumley v. State, 83 Ark. 236, 103 S. W. 615, recitation of notice "as required by law" is sufficient.

California.—San Mateo County v. Coburn, 130 Cal. 631, 63 Pac. 78, 621; Siskiyou County v. Gamlich, 110 Cal. 94, 42 Pac. 468 (attack on ground of insufficient evidence); San Luis Obispo County v. Simas, 1 Cal. App. 175, 81 Pac. 972 (attack on intermediate orders and proceedings).

Colorado.—Williams v. Routt County, 37 Colo. 55, 84 Pac. 1109.

Connecticut.—Fenwick Hall Co. v. Old Saybrook, 69 Conn. 32, 36 Atl. 1068.

Georgia.—Nichols v. Sutton, 22 Ga. 369.

Idaho.—Canyon County v. Toole, 9 Ida. 561, 75 Pac. 609.

Illinois.—Oswego v. Kellogg, 99 Ill. 590; Hankins v. Calloway, 88 Ill. 155; Wells v. Hicks, 27 Ill. 343; Looby v. Austin, 19 Ill. App. 325.

Indiana.—Todd v. Crail, 167 Ind. 48, 77 N. E. 402; Helmes v. Bell, 155 Ind. 512, 58 N. E. 707; Layman v. Hughes, 152 Ind. 484, 51 N. E. 1058; Monroe County v. Harrell, 147 Ind. 500, 46 N. E. 124; Bowen v. Hester, 143 Ind. 511, 41 N. E. 330; Evans v. West, 138 Ind. 621, 38 N. E. 65; Adams v. Harrington, 114 Ind. 66, 14 N. E. 603; Ely v. Morgan County, 112 Ind. 361, 14 N. E. 236; Burton v. State, 111 Ind. 600, 12 N. E. 486; Strieb v. Cox, 111 Ind. 299, 12 N. E. 481; McIntyre v. Marine, 93 Ind. 93 (although owner's name is not stated); Heagy v. Black, 90 Ind. 534; Million v. Carrol County, 89 Ind. 5; Miller v. Porter, 71 Ind. 521 (owners described by initial letters and as the "Bryant heirs"); Phillips v. Hutchinson, 34 Ind. App. 486, 73 N. E. 159.

Iowa.—McNamara v. Brehm, 112 Iowa 576, 84 N. W. 676; Larson v. Fitzgerald, 87 Iowa 402, 54 N. W. 441 (holding, under Code (1851), which provided for the appointment by the court of a commissioner to examine into the expediency of a proposed road, and declared that the court should fix the time for the commencement of such examination, and that, if the commissioner reported against the road, "no further proceedings shall be had thereon," that the omission to fix a time for the commencement of the examination did not invalidate a proceeding for the establishment of a road); Knowles v. Muscatine, 20 Iowa 248; Davenport Mut. Sav. Fund, etc., Assoc. v. Schmidt, 15 Iowa 213; Smiths v. Dubuque County, 1 Iowa 492.

Kansas.—Molyneux v. Grimes, 78 Kan. 830, 98 Pac. 278.

Kentucky.—Ditto v. Com., 2 Bibb 17; Com. v. Ditto, Hard. 442.

Louisiana.—Fuselier v. Iberia Parish Police Jury, 109 La. 551, 33 So. 597, unless in clear case of abuse.

Maine.—Cushing v. Webb, 102 Me. 157, 66 Atl. 719; Cyr v. Dufour, 62 Me. 20; State v. Madison, 33 Me. 267; Small v. Pennell, 31 Me. 267; Longfellow v. Quimby, 29 Me. 196, 48 Am. Dec. 525; Baker v. Runnels, 12 Me. 235.

Maryland.—Tyson v. Baltimore County, 28 Md. 510.

Massachusetts.—Gilkey v. Watertown, 141 Mass. 317, 5 N. E. 152; Durant v. Lawrence, 1 Allen 125.

Michigan.—Campau v. Le Blanc, 127 Mich. 179, 86 N. W. 535; People v. La Grange Tp. Board, 2 Mich. 187.

Mississippi.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Swalm, 83 Miss. 631, 36 So. 147.

Missouri.—Baubie v. Ossman, 142 Mo. 499, 44 S. W. 338; Mitchell v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 138 Mo. 326, 39 S. W. 790; Bruce v. Saline County, 26 Mo. 262; Walker v. Likens, 24 Mo. 298; State v. Miller, 110 Mo. App. 542, 85 S. W. 912.

New Hampshire.—Bryant v. Tamworth, 68 N. H. 483, 39 Atl. 431; Spaulding v. Groton, 68 N. H. 77, 44 Atl. 88; Dana v. Craddock, 66 N. H. 593, 32 Atl. 757 (appointment of commissioners); State v. Weare, 38 N. H. 314; State v. Rye, 35 N. H. 368; State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 195.

New Jersey.—Seabright v. New Jersey Cent. R. Co., 73 N. J. L. 625, 64 Atl. 131; ing, even as against an attack in a collateral proceeding, if the court did not have jurisdiction.<sup>10</sup>

j. Defects in Proceedings — (i) IN GENERAL. Local statutes govern questions as to what are defects in proceedings,<sup>11</sup> and who may object to them;<sup>12</sup> and exceptions taken in the course of the proceedings are governed by local rules of practice.<sup>13</sup>

Humphreys v. Woodstown, 48 N. J. L. 588, 7 Atl. 301; Niel v. Car, 1 N. J. L. J. 23.

New York.—Dederer v. Voorhies, 81 N. Y. 153; Ham v. Silvernail, 7 Hun 33; Cooper v. Bean, 5 Lans. 318; In re Emmons Ave., 1 N. Y. Suppl. 829 [affirmed in 113 N. Y. 624, 20 N. E. 877]; People v. Collins, 19 Wend. 56; People v. Kings County, 7 Wend. 530; People v. Collins, 7 Johns. 549, where an alternative mandamus had been directed to a town clerk, commanding him to record the survey of a road or show cause; and the clerk returned, inter alia, that he did not record the survey because the commissioners had not taken the oath of office and filed a certificate of the oath with the clerk, according to law, and it was held that the return was insufficient and a peremptory mandamus was awarded.

North Carolina.—State v. Yoder, 132 N. C. 1111, 44 S. E. 689; State v. Joyce, 121 N. C. 610, 28 S. E. 366.

Oregon.—Bewley v. Graves, 17 Oreg. 274, 20 Pac. 322.

Pennsylvania.—Crescent Tp. v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 210 Pa. St. 334, 59 Atl. 1103; Fowler v. Jenkins, 28 Pa. St. 176; Smith v. Lebanon, 8 Pa. Super. Ct. 481.

South Carolina.—State v. Kendall, 54 S. C. 192, 32 S. E. 300.

South Dakota.—Yankton County v. Klemisch, 11 S. D. 170, 76 N. W. 312, description sufficiently definite.

Tennessee.—Gilson v. State, 5 Lea 161.

Texas.—Vogt v. Bexar County, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 567, 42 S. W. 127 (since right of appeal exists); Sneed v. Falls County, (Civ. App. 1897) 42 S. W. 121; Kelley v. State, 46 Tex. Cr. 23, 80 S. W. 382; Crouch v. State, 39 Tex. Cr. 145, 45 S. W. 578.

Vermont.—Fitch v. Flanders, 27 Vt. 608; State v. Vernon, 25 Vt. 244.

Washington.—State v. Pierce County Super. Ct., 47 Wash. 11, 91 Pac. 241, on ground of insufficient number on petition.

Wisconsin.—Blair v. Milwaukee Light, etc., Co., 110 Wis. 64, 85 N. W. 675.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 168.

Evidence of qualifications.—When attacked collaterally, the fact that petitioners are qualified householders or freeholders may be shown by testimony aliunde the record; documentary evidence is not indispensable. Oliphant v. Atchison County, 18 Kan. 386; Austin v. Allen, 6 Wis. 134, holding also that peaceable possession under claim of title is prima facie evidence of seizin in fee. But when no such testimony is offered, the party who produces the record and rests upon it alone makes out a prima facie case that the proceedings were void. Oliphant v. Atchison County Com'rs, supra.

10. Kansas.—Howard v. Schmidt, 70 Kan.

640, 79 Pac. 142, recital of filing of claim for damages is open to contradiction.

Maine.—Small v. Pennell, 31 Me. 267.

Missouri.—Navin v. Martin, (App. 1907) 102 S. W. 61; Mulligan v. Martin, 125 Mo. App. 630, 102 S. W. 59.

Nebraska.—Peterson v. Fisher, 71 Nebr. 238, 98 N. W. 660.

New York.—Beardslee v. Dolge, 143 N. Y. 160, 38 N. E. 205, 42 Am. St. Rep. 707, false statement of jurisdiction may be collaterally attacked.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 168.

11. Defects held to be fatal see La Barre v. Bent, 154 Mich. 520, 118 N. W. 6 (defective service); State v. Stout, 33 N. J. L. 42 (applicant induced to sign by promise of damages); In re Reserve Tp. Road, 2 Grant (Pa.) 204 (confirmation of invalid proceedings nunc pro tunc); In re Rush Tp. Road, 2 Leg. Rec. (Pa.) 193 (error apparent on face of the record).

Defects held not to be fatal see Howard v. Schmidt, 70 Kan. 640, 79 Pac. 142 (although in places described as a private road); Hentzler v. Bradbury, 5 Kan. App. 1, 47 Pac. 330 (mere irregularity); Coomb's Appeal, 68 Me. 484 (landowner's agreement to claim no damages); In re Vassalborough, 19 Me. 338 (that damages be paid by those interested in establishing the road); Anderson v. San Francisco, 92 Minn. 57, 99 N. W. 420 (merely that town had an indebtedness without evidence of expense of road, financial condition of town, etc.); Warren v. Gibson, 40 Mo. App. 469 (trivial—contrary to fact); Vanderbeck v. Blauvelt, 34 N. J. L. 261 (formal error); In re Union Tp. Road, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 573 (as termini somewhat indefinite); In re Towamencin Road, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 113, 15 Montg. Co. Rep. 194 (failure to file copy of notice with the record).

12. Ludlam v. Swain, 73 N. J. L. 162, 62 Atl. 192, taxpayer by statute.

Party held not entitled to object see In re Cornplanter Tp. Road, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 20 (by landowner, although statute as to notice to supervisors not literally complied with); Allen v. Parker County, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 536, 57 S. W. 703 (only interest as resident in neighborhood); Pesant v. St. Leonard Parish, 7 Quebec Pr. 220.

13. Indiana.—Gifford v. Baker, 158 Ind. 339, 62 N. E. 690, objection to form of notice cannot be taken after action by board.

Maine.—In re Conant, 102 Me. 477, 67 Atl. 564, raised when report of committee offered for acceptance.

Mississippi.—Evans v. Sharkey County, 89 Miss. 302, 42 So. 173, to review matters of law arising on the face of the proceedings.

Pennsylvania.—In re Greene Tp., etc., Road, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 418, no exception

Questions relating to appeals in highway proceedings are discussed elsewhere in this article.<sup>14</sup>

(II) WAIVER AND ESTOPPEL—(A) In General. Objections to a lay-out of a road may be waived<sup>15</sup> by failure to make objections,<sup>16</sup> or delay in making them,<sup>17</sup> or by consenting to the irregularity.<sup>18</sup>

(B) Applying For and Accepting Damages. Application for<sup>19</sup> and acceptance to location if referred to in petition and report.

Texas.—Howe v. Rose, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 328, 80 S. W. 1019, proposal to remit all damages if road located differently from report of jury treated as an objection.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 173.

14. See infra, II, C, 5, k, (1).

15. Campau v. Le Blanc, 127 Mich. 179, 86 N. W. 535, 8 Detroit Leg. N. 273 (appeal to township board waives previous irregularities of highway commissioner); Nye v. Clark, 55 Mich. 599, 22 N. W. 57 (by petitioning and fencing); State v. Richmond, 26 N. H. 232; Woodworth v. Spirit Mound Tp., 10 S. D. 504, 74 N. W. 443 (only by parties interested, however).

A general appearance operates as a waiver of service and jurisdiction of the person. Hanson v. Cloud County, (Kan. App. 1898) 55 Pac. 468; Hurst v. Martinsburg, 80 Minn. 40, 82 N. W. 1099 (one appearing cannot object that other owners were not served with notice); Issenhuth v. Baum, 11 S. D. 223, 76 N. W. 928. See, however, McKee Highway Com'rs v. Smith, 217 Ill. 250, 75 N. E. 396, no waiver by general appearance after motion to dismiss was overruled. Compare In re Patten, 16 N. H. 277.

Acquiescence in the lay-out may work an estoppel to object thereto. Freetown v. Bristol County, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 46 (by inaction during expenditure); State v. Boscawen, 32 N. H. 331 (for twenty years); In re Woolsey, 95 N. Y. 135; Roller v. Kirby, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 76, 1 West. L. J. 550; McMurtrie v. Stewart, 21 Pa. St. 322 (seven years' use); Felch v. Gilman, 22 Vt. 38; State v. Wertzel, 62 Wis. 184, 22 N. W. 150.

A grantee of one estopped is himself barred. Miller v. Schenck, 78 Iowa 372, 43 N. W. 225; Gurnsey v. Edwards, 26 N. H. 224.

A town may be estopped as an individual would be. Ives v. East Haven, 48 Conn. 272; Freetown v. Bristol County, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 46; State v. Boscawen, 32 N. H. 331. See Damp v. Dane, 29 Wis. 419.

16. Humboldt County v. Dinsmore, 75 Cal. 604, 17 Pac. 710 (by appearing without contest); Stronsky v. Hickman, 116 Iowa 651, 88 N. W. 825 (by failure to object after notice); Seafeld v. Bohne, 169 Mo. 537, 69 S. W. 1051 (by failure to file exceptions); Huntress v. Effingham, 17 N. H. 584.

Estoppel held not to arise see Roehrborn v. Schmidt, 16 Wis. 519, by presence and silence.

17. Nobleboro v. Lincoln County, 68 Me. 548 (after judgment); Carpenter's Petition, 67 N. H. 574, 32 Atl. 773; In re Kennett, 24 N. H. 139; People v. Mills, 109 N. Y. 69, 15 N. E. 886 (not first on appeal); Marble v. Whitney, 28 N. Y. 297; Vondron v. Cranberry

Tp., 8 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 227, 6 Ohio N. P. 534 (by failure to object to location at proceedings before commissioners). See In re Patten, 16 N. H. 277.

Objection must be made before reference. White v. Landaff, 35 N. H. 128; Stevens v. Goffstown, 21 N. H. 454.

Estoppel held not to arise see Underwood v. Bailey, 56 N. H. 187; Damp v. Dane, 29 Wis. 419, by failure to object before justice who could not inquire into regularity of proceedings.

18. Miller v. Schenck, 78 Iowa 372, 43 N. W. 225 (one who had dedicated land for street is estopped); Keeler v. Lauer, 73 Kan. 388, 85 Pac. 541; Young v. Milan, 73 N. H. 552, 64 Atl. 16 (expressions of satisfaction); Patterson v. Hill County, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 546, 95 S. W. 39 (by agreement to donate land); McCown v. Hill, (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 73 S. W. 850 (by consent to route as reported). See, however, Pagel v. Ferguson County, 17 Mont. 586, 44 Pac. 86 (consent to private road does not admit public road); Scott v. State, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 629 (no estoppel by activity in having road laid out and subsequently buying land).

Petitioning for a road is no waiver of irregularities in the lay-out (Chase v. Cochran, 102 Me. 431, 67 Atl. 320; La Barre v. Bent, 154 Mich. 520, 118 N. W. 6, petitioner for highway, worked on it, and was paid therefor; Hoy v. Hubbell, 125 N. Y. App. Div. 60, 109 N. Y. Suppl. 301. See Clarke v. Mayo, 4 Call (Va.) 374), unless joined with a release of damages (Trickey v. Schlader, 52 Ill. 78; Warfield v. Hohman, 128 Ill. App. 243); but a petition to change a road may estop petitioner from objecting to the road as laid out (Kelley v. State, 46 Tex. Cr. 23, 80 S. W. 382).

Consent of legislature to laying out highway over state lands see EMINENT DOMAIN, 15 Cyc. 611.

19. Kansas.—Ogden v. Stokes, 25 Kan. 517.

Massachusetts.—Pitkin v. Springfield, 112 Mass. 509.

Nebraska.—Hoye v. Diehls, 78 Nebr. 77, 110 N. W. 714 (indefinite description); Davis v. Boone County, 28 Nebr. 837, 45 N. W. 249. New York.—Lansing v. Caswell, 4 Paige 519.

Pennsylvania.—See In re Appleby Manor Road, 1 Grant 443.

Texas.—Allen v. Parker County, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 536, 57 S. W. 703, where irregularities not fatal to jurisdiction and plaintiff claimed damages.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 175.

of<sup>20</sup> damages estop landowners to contest the validity of the lay-out of a highway.

(III) CURATIVE STATUTES. Statutes are often passed to cure defects in road proceedings,<sup>21</sup> and they are constitutional.<sup>22</sup>

k. Review—(I) APPEAL AND ERROR—(A) Right to Appeal—(1) IN GENERAL. As highway proceedings are not according to the course of the common law, they are generally considered not reviewable by writ of error;<sup>23</sup> and, in regard to appeals, the general rule that the right to appeal exists only when expressly conferred by constitutional or statutory provision<sup>24</sup> is applicable.<sup>25</sup> Under the statutes of many states, however, the right of appealing to another board or specified court exists,<sup>26</sup> some of the statutes conferring the right but limiting it

Estoppel held not to arise see Smith v. Gorell, 81 Iowa 218, 46 N. W. 992, by filing conditional claim for damages, which claim was abandoned.

20. Illinois.—Hartshorn v. Potroff, 89 Ill. 509; Town v. Blackberry, 29 Ill. 137.

Michigan.—Prescott v. Patterson, 49 Mich. 622, 14 N. W. 571.

Nebraska.—O'Dea v. State, 16 Nebr. 241, 20 N. W. 299.

Pennsylvania.—In re Chartiers Tp. Road, 34 Pa. St. 413.

Applicability.—Curative statutes held applicable see Madison v. County Com'rs, 34 Me. 592; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Boston, 127 Mass. 229 (by reference to a street as existing); State v. Bruggerman, 31 Minn. 493, 18 N. W. 454. Curative statutes held inapplicable see Thatcher v. Crisman, 6 Colo. App. 49, 39 Pac. 887; Ilwaco R., etc., Co., 17 Wash. 652, 50 Pac. 572 (where streets were not actually platted); Burns v. Multnomah R. Co., 15 Fed. 177, 8 Sawy. 543.

Roads which had ceased to exist as such held not revived by curative statutes see Hunter v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 99 Wis. 613, 75 N. W. 977; Williams v. Giblyn, 86 Wis. 147, 56 N. W. 645.

Want of jurisdiction held not cured by statutes see State v. Auchard, 22 Mont. 14, 55 Pac. 361; Grady v. Dundon, 30 Oreg. 333, 47 Pac. 915.

Retrospectiveness.—Statutes held retroactive see Simmons v. Cornell, 1 R. I. 519; Tomlinson v. Wallace, 16 Wis. 224. Statutes held prospective see State v. Atwood, 11 Wis. 422.

Irregularities in lay-out held cured see Canoe Creek v. McEniry, 23 Ill. App. 227; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 104 Ky. 35, 46 S. W. 207, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 371; Parker v. Van Houten, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 145.

25. Webster v. Cockey, 9 Gill (Md.) 92; Savage Mfg. Co. v. Owings, 3 Gill (Md.) 497; In re Chestnut St., 86 Pa. St. 88; State v. Wallman, 110 Wis. 312, 85 N. W. 975.

The rule should be carefully applied, and a statute which is not wholly silent as to the right of appeal should be liberally construed in favor of it. Cook v. Vickers, 141 N. C. 101, 53 S. E. 740.

Applicability of general statutes.—Although the highway statutes of some states are silent as to appeals, the right is sometimes held to exist under general statutes, such as those giving generally the right to appeal from decisions of commissioners. Kirsch v. Braun, 153 Ind. 247, 53 N. E. 1082. However, a statute allowing an appeal where a claim against a county is disallowed by the county commissioners does not authorize an appeal from a decision of the commissioners locating a highway and assessing the damages therefor, as such assessment does not create a claim against the county (Koenig v. Winona County, 10 Minn. 238); and where proceedings are instituted for the taking of land for a public road by private citizens, and not by the county, the road becomes a highway of the commonwealth, which the township wherein it is located is bound to keep in repair, and over which the county has no ownership or control; and in such case no appeal lies from the award of the viewers to the court of common pleas (Lamoreux v. Luzerne County, 116 Pa. St. 195, 9 Atl. 274).

26. Maine.—Cole v. Cumberland County, 78 Me. 532, 7 Atl. 397; Byron's Appeal, 57 Me. 340; Orrington v. Penobscot County, 51 Me. 570.

New York.—People v. Hildreth, 126 N. Y. 360, 27 N. E. 558 [affirming 1 Silv. Sup. 358, 5 N. Y. Suppl. 308]; People v. Temple, 27 Hun 128. But see Matter of Bowery Extension, 12 How. Pr. 97.

North Carolina.—Cook v. Vickers, 141 N. C. 101, 53 S. E. 740; Ashcraft v. Lee, 81 N. C. 135. See also Gatling v. Liverman, 23 to certain matters, such as an award of damages,<sup>27</sup> or other particular matters.<sup>28</sup> It is no objection to the validity of statutes relating to highway proceedings that they make no provision whatever for appeals.<sup>29</sup>

(2) PERSONS ENTITLED TO APPEAL. Under most statutes, in order to entitle one to appeal or have the decision of the highway board reviewed by writ of error, he must be interested in, or aggrieved by, the decision.<sup>30</sup> This rule does not confine the right to the petitioners for the road,<sup>31</sup> but extends it so as to include owners of land on and over which the road will pass,<sup>32</sup> as well as boards or com-

Texas.—Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Baudat, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 595, 45 S. W. 939.

Wisconsin.—State v. Goldstucker, 40 Wis. 124 [followed in Brock v. Hishen, 40 Wis. 674]. But see State v. Wallman, 110 Wis. 312, 85 N. W. 975.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 177. And see the statutes of the several states.

In Pennsylvania there was formerly no appeal from the court of quarter sessions (In re Roaring Brook Tp. Road, (1891) 21 Atl. 412; In re Chestnut St., 86 Pa. St. 84; In re Chartiers Tp. Road, 1 Mona. 365; In re Allegheny City State Road, 1 Pittsb. 67), but the right is now given by statute (Stauffer v. Lower Swatara Tp., 8 Pa. Dist. 104, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 151).

Prospective operation of statute.—A statute giving to landowners the right of appeal from decisions of selectmen laying out highways will not be construed as extending to proceedings pending at the time of its enactment unless such an intent of the legislature is clearly manifested. Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Cilley, 44 N. H. 578.

Successive appeals, or appeals from the court appealed to, are authorized by some statutes (see Ashcraft v. Lee, 81 N. C. 135, 79 N. C. 34), but, in the absence of such statutory authorization, no appeal lies from the decision of the court to which an appeal is first taken (Marion County v. Harper, 44 Ill. 482), unless it has exceeded its jurisdiction (Cumberland Valley R. Co. v. Martin, 100 Md. 165, 59 Atl. 714; Webster v. Cockey, 9 Gill (Md.) 92).

In Illinois the right is so limited in the case of counties not under township organization, although it seems that on the trial of the appeal the regularity of the proceedings may be inquired into (Roosa v. Henderson County, 59 Ill. 446; Lockman v. Morgan County, 32 Ill. App. 414), and when the road in controversy is on the line between two towns, an appeal may be taken from the commissioners to the supervisors (Warne v. Baker, 24 Ill. 351).

Iowa 327; Umbarger v. Bean, 15 Iowa 256; Myers v. Simms, 4 Iowa 500; Ball v. Humphrey, 4 Greene 204.

28. Foster v. Dunklin, 44 Mo. 216.

A mere resurvey is not the subject of appeal under a statute giving the right when a road has been laid out or altered. Hogaboon v. Highgate. 55 Vt. 412.

29. See Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Baudat, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 595, 45 S. W. 939; State v. Wallman, 110 Wis. 312, 85 N. W. 975.

In what proceedings statute may be attacked.—The question as to whether a constitutional provision clothing a specified court with appellate jurisdiction upon all questions concerning a roadway is violated by a statute limiting the right of appeal in condemnation proceedings to questions of law may only be raised on appeal from such proceedings, and may not be raised in an injunction suit to restrain road commissioners from proceeding to lay out a road. Painter v. St. Clair, 98 Va. 85, 34 S. E. 989.

A person who has been assessed for benefits may appeal under some statutes. Kelly v. Philadelphia, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 243. And see Hays v. Lewis, 23 Ohio St. 326.

An amicus curiæ has no right of appeal. Irwin v. Armuth, 129 Ind. 340, 28 N. E. 702.

A town, county, or state has no right of appeal, unless such right is expressly conferred on it by statute. Com. v. Dudley, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 21; Montgomery County v. Tipton, 15 S. W. 249, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 847; Carpentier's Petition, 67 N. H. 574, 32 Atl. 773.

31. Underwood v. Bailey, 56 N. H. 187.

Where a petition for a public road is granted, the petitioner is not entitled to appeal, as he has obtained the very thing which he sought. Gray v. Jones, 178 Ill. 169, 52 N. E. 941 [affirming 78 Ill. App. 309]. And see Goldman v. Grainger County Justices, 3 Head (Tenn.) 107.

Non-residence in the town within which the road is to be laid out does not affect the right of a landowner to appeal. State v. Geneva Town Bd., 107 Wis. 1, 82 N. W. 550.

The ownership of appellant is a matter of proof and need not be stated in his petition for appeal. Smith v. Boisvert, 183 Ill. 318, 55 N. E. 631.

A corporation owning land on which a highway is laid is a "person" within the missioners whose decisions have been reversed;<sup>33</sup> but although in some jurisdictions the right of appeal is held to belong to every resident taxpayer in the town, who, as such, is liable to assessment for highway labor,<sup>34</sup> the weight of authority is to the effect that one is not aggrieved so as to entitle him to appeal unless he is interested in or affected by the proceedings in some manner differently from the public, citizens, and taxpayers generally,<sup>35</sup> and some courts specifically confine the right to persons whose lands have been or will be taken.<sup>36</sup>

(3) DECISIONS REVIEWABLE. Except where the right to appeal from interlocutory orders is given by statute,<sup>37</sup> only a final determination of the proceedings may be reviewed on appeal or writ of error.<sup>38</sup> A judgment or order is final, within the meaning of this rule, when it makes a complete disposition of the cause or proceeding;<sup>39</sup> and, according to the weight of authority, it is only a final order meaning of a statute giving the right of appeal to every person who considers himself aggrieved by the decision. People v. May, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 238.

A landowner may waive his appeal from the decision of commissioners laying out a street, by going before the jury for assessing damages, and giving evidence to increase his damages. Lansing v. Caswell, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 519. Likewise a person who knowingly accepts the damages awarded him by the county commissioners' court is not afterward entitled to appeal from such award. Karnes County v. Nichols, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 54 S. W. 656.

establishing the road that may be reëxamined by a higher court,<sup>40</sup> although recent cases in a few jurisdictions hold that an order dismissing a petition for a road, or a petition for the vacation of an old road and the location of a new one, may be reviewed.<sup>41</sup> The determination as to the necessity, expediency, and utility of the proposed road is a quasi-legislative and discretionary matter which, under most statutes, is committed so exclusively to the highway board or tribunal as not to be the subject of review, or if reviewable, is unreviewable if supported by any evidence.<sup>42</sup> Under some statutes, however, an appeal brings up the whole proceedings on the merits, and it is proper for the appellate tribunal to inquire into the necessity for the road as well as the matter of damages, but not questions of the jurisdiction and regularity of the proceedings,<sup>43</sup> while under other statutes matters of power and jurisdiction are reviewable on appeal or writ of error,<sup>44</sup> but no other

Other matters of discretion are not reviewable (Parsell v. Mann, 30 N. J. L. 530), unless the lower court has exercised its discretion capriciously, in violation of settled principles of law or equity (State v. Vanderve, 25 N. J. L. 669).

Thus, an order of a county court dis-questions are.<sup>45</sup> The joint decision of commissioners of different counties is not appealable in some jurisdictions on account of a lack of statutory provision therefor.<sup>46</sup>

(B) To What Tribunal Appeal May Be Taken. An appeal in highway proceedings can be taken only to a court or judge having jurisdiction thereof,<sup>47</sup> and where the jurisdiction of different courts is dependent upon the amount of damages, the amount claimed and not that allowed by the highway board is determining.<sup>48</sup> As the right of the public in highways is a perpetual easement,<sup>49</sup> a proceeding to establish a highway involves a freehold within the meaning of statutes conferring appellate jurisdiction of such questions on certain courts.<sup>50</sup> missing an application to vacate a decision of commissioners in proceedings to lay out a highway, without a hearing on the merits, on the erroneous determination that application was not made in time, is appealable. Matter of Glenside Woolen Mills, 92 Hun 188, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 593. It has also been held that an appeal lies from a void order of the supreme court on certiorari to review the proceedings and determination of highway commissioners (People v. Ferris, 36 N. Y. 218 [reversing 41 Barb. 121]), and that where the special term, on motion, has corrected the judgment of the general term, by allowing costs against appellant who brought the appeal from the commissioners of highways, and whose lands were taken for the road, and disallowed costs as against the county judge and referees, the general term will not review the decision of the special term, since the question was one resting in the discretion of the judge at special term (People v. Robinson, 25 How. Pr. 345).

In Indiana the only remedy for an aggrieved party, when the commissioners' court acts without authority of law in setting aside its final order establishing a highway after it has been made and recorded, is by appeal (Badger v. Merry, 139 Ind. 631, 39 N. E. 309); and it also lies where the board of commissioners dismisses the petition unless the petitioners open and maintain the road at their own expense (Crossley v. O'Brien, 24 Ind. 325, 87 Am. Dec. 329), but not from an order sustaining a demurrer to an answer to a petition for a highway, as no such pleadings as an answer and demurrer are proper in such case (Logan v. Kiser, 25 Ind. 393).

A change of venue may be granted, as appeals from the order of the board of commissioners establishing or relocating a highway are on the same footing with ordinary civil actions. Schmied v. Keeney, 72 Ind. 309.

Deputy town clerk sitting on appellate board.—Where a town clerk is incapacitated to sit as a member of the township board on an appeal to it from the highway commissioner in laying out a public highway, the deputy clerk is not authorized to sit as a member of the board, as the deputy acts for his principal and cannot perform duties which his principal is incapacitated to perform. *Dubois v. In Canada highway proceedings are held not to involve title to lands or to present

(c) Reservation and Presentation of Grounds of Review. The general rule that objections cannot be raised for the first time on appeal<sup>51</sup> is applicable to highway proceedings,<sup>52</sup> even though the objector did not become a party to the proceedings until after the appeal was taken.<sup>53</sup> This rule precludes a party from having considered on appeal from the court in which a review is first sought objections which he has failed to make in the primary board or court;<sup>54</sup> and objections which he has properly made but failed to insist on in the intermediate court will not be considered by the higher court.<sup>55</sup> In order to escape the consequences of the rule the objections of a party must be specifically stated,<sup>56</sup> and it is not sufficient to adopt exceptions made by other parties.<sup>57</sup>

(d) Parties. It has been stated broadly that all persons whose rights and liabilities may in any way be affected by the final decree should be made parties to the proceedings for review,<sup>58</sup> and, more specifically, that where the case is tried de novo on appeal, the petitioner for the highway should be made plaintiff, and the remonstrants defendants.<sup>59</sup> Whether the board or court which passed on the estab-controversies of a pecuniary nature so as to give the supreme court jurisdiction of appeals. Toussignant v. Nicolet County, 32 Can. Sup. Ct. 353 [following Dubois v. Ste. Rose, 21 Can. Sup. Where either party brings a petition in error to review the proceedings, those opposed are necessary parties. Wood County v. Junkins, 19 Ohio St. 548.

The principal petitioner should be made a party defendant on a petition in error (Chase County v. Carter, 24 Kan. 511), and a statute providing that a notice of appeal shall be served on the four persons first named in the petition for the highway is mandatory, and service on a less number will not give the court jurisdiction, nor will service on a person who has the greatest interest in the establishment of the highway, and who has deposited the amount allowed the landowner (Finke v. Zeigelmliller, 77 Iowa 251, 42 N. W. 183); and the Tennessee courts hold that, on appeal, the proper parties are the justices of the county court on the one side and the parties interested or aggrieved on the other (Cannon v. McAdams, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 376; Evans v. Shields, 3 Head (Tenn.) 70).

lishment of the highway is a proper and necessary party is a question decided differently in different jurisdictions, it being held in some that it is,<sup>60</sup> and in others that it is not.<sup>61</sup>

(E) Proceedings For Transfer. The proceedings necessary to transfer a highway proceeding from the highway board to a court are prescribed and regulated entirely by statute, and when there are specific provisions relating to highway proceedings, they control over statutes relating to appeals generally.<sup>62</sup> An appeal or error proceeding is premature when instituted before the final termination of the proceedings before the board.<sup>63</sup> When a disposition of the proceedings has been made, the appeal must be taken within the time limited by statute;<sup>64</sup> and before a transfer of the proceedings is effected there must be a compliance with statutory requirements relating to the petition or application for appeal,<sup>65</sup> the

The rule in Indiana is relaxed when the board does not sit as a court, but simply calls into action the authority created by law to make a reassessment for the protection and reimbursement of the county. Goodwin v. Warren County, 146 Ind. 164, 44 N. E. 1110.

62. Baugher v. Rudd, 53 Ark. 417, 14 S. W. 623; Kimble v. Leisher, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 466.

A statute which takes effect before an appeal is taken, and which does not except pending cases from its operation, regulates the time and mode of taking such appeal. Webster v. Androscoggin County, 64 Me. 434.

Where the mode of appealing is not prescribed by statute, the statute regulating appeals from justices' courts have been followed in some jurisdictions (Blair v. Coakley, 136 N. C. 405, 48 S. E. 804. See also Peoria County v. Harvey, 18 Ill. 364), and in others a mode previously in use has been adopted (Twombly v. Madbury, 27 N. H. 433).

63. Sangamon County v. Brown, 13 Ill. 207; Irwin's Appeal, 7 Pa. Super. Ct. 354.

Under the North Carolina statutes, an appeal is not premature when taken before the order opening the road is executed (McDowell v. Western North Carolina Insane Asylum, 101 N. C. 656, 8 S. E. 118; Warlick v. Lowman, 101 N. C. 548, 8 S. E. 120), and an appeal from an order of the county commissioners establishing a public road, and directing a jury to be summoned to lay it out and assess damages, may be taken as well after the confirmation of the report of the jury as before (Lambe v. Love, 109 N. C. 305, 13 S. E. 773).

Oregon.—Miller v. Union County, 48 Oreg. 266, 86 Pac. 3 [followed in Pierce v. Union County, 48 Oreg. 622, 86 Pac. 5].

Pennsylvania.—In re Crescent Tp. Road, 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 160, limiting the rule to questions which are not jurisdictional in their nature.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 190.

Under the Maine statute an appeal may be taken after the decision has been placed on file (Gray v. Cumberland County, 83 Me. 429, 22 Atl. 376), and before the first day of the next term of the supreme judicial court (Appleton v. Piscataquis County, 80 Me. 284, 14 Atl. 284). Under a prior statute, an appeal could not be taken until after the decision had been entered of record. In re Russell, 51 Me. 384.

The time of a final order, and not that of a prior conditional one, is the starting point of the period of limitation. Wilson v. Whitsell, 24 Ind. 306.

Evasion of statute.—A person affected with notice of the proceedings from the beginning, who has allowed the time for taking an appeal to expire, cannot accomplish the same object by moving the court to strike off the order of confirmation, and then appealing from the refusal of the court to grant his motion. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co.'s Appeal, 130 Pa. St. 190, 18 Atl. 600; In re Winter Ave., 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 353; In re North Franklin Tp. Road, 8 Pa. Super. Ct. 358.

Where the statute does not expressly limit the time, the intervention of a term of court before the appeal is entered does not render it irregular and void. Shelburn v. Eldridge, 10 Vt. 123.

Where all the required steps are taken within the time allowed, it is immaterial which is taken first. Restad v. Scambler, 33 Minn. 515, 24 N. W. 197. And see Libbey v. McIntosh, 60 Iowa 329, 14 N. W. 354, holding that the filing of the transcript before service of the notice of appeal is a mere irregularity which does not affect the jurisdiction.

The fact that judgment has been entered on the award of viewers does not render too late an appeal taken within the prescribed time after the filing of the award. Brown v. Beaver Borough, 2 Pa. Dist. 318, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 313.

65. Whittaker v. Gutheridge, 52 Ill. App. 460, holding that a petition for an appeal appeal bond,<sup>66</sup> notice of appeal,<sup>67</sup> the filing of a transcript or transmission of original papers,<sup>68</sup> and the filing of an affidavit of interest by an appellant who is not a party to the proceedings.<sup>69</sup> However, only the steps required by statute need be taken in order to perfect an appeal;<sup>70</sup> and under some statutes defects may be waived by failure to object in due season,<sup>71</sup> or may be cured;<sup>72</sup> and appellee alleging that petitioner was directly interested in the decision is sufficient to show that petitioner was owner of lands adjoining a proposed highway.

Only matters specifically enumerated in the statute need be stated in the application. State v. St. John, 47 Minn. 315, 50 N. W. 200.

The address of the application need not be to the town clerk (Ross Highway Com'rs v. Newell, 53 Ill. 320) or to the supervisors (People v. Smith, 15 Ill. 326) by their respective names.

66. Schwede v. Burnstown, 35 Minn. 468, 29 N. W. 72; State v. Austin, 35 Minn. 51, 26 N. W. 906; Vaill v. New Shoreham, 18 R. I. 405, 28 Atl. 344 (holding that a statute requiring appellant to give bond to the town to prosecute his appeal is not complied with by giving a bond to the town council); Merritt v. Pryor, 86 Tenn. 155, 5 S. W. 534.

The bond should be signed, when the appeal is taken by the town, by the supervisors of the town in the name of the town, and not by the commissioners of highways. Apanooce v. Kneff, 2 Ill. App. 583.

Sureties on the bond are not required by some statutes (Oswego v. Kellogg, 99 Ill. 590), and when they are required, one appellant may be a surety for a co-appellant (Glassburn v. Deer, 143 Ind. 174, 41 N. E. 376), or where several persons interested filed separate remonstrances, one of them may appeal from the order made against him by filing bond with his co-remonstrator as surety (Lefel v. Obenchain, 90 Ind. 50, 52). However, a bond with but one surety does not satisfy a statute calling for a bond with "sufficient sureties." State v. Fitch, 30 Minn. 532, 16 N. W. 411.

Approval of the bond should be had by an official who is not disqualified by reason of his being one of the petitioners for the road (Gray v. Jones, 178 Ill. 169, 52 N. E. 941 [affirming 78 Ill. App. 309]), and should be clearly made to appear on the record as an act of his own judgment (Shepherd v. Dodd, 15 Ind. 217).

On a subsequent appeal, the bond should be conditioned to pay the costs in the court from which the appeal is taken and not those in the primary board or court. State v. Hoelz, 69 Wis. 84, 33 N. W. 597.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 189. The Maine statute is directory. Cambridge v. Piscataquis County, 86 Me. 141, 29 Atl. 960.

The notice need not state any of the reasons why the order of the commissioners of highways is erroneous or illegal (Rector v. Clark, 78 N. Y. 21 [reversing 12 Hun 189]). To like effect see Ross Highway Com'rs v. Newell, 53 Ill. 320; nor need it state that the appellant has filed the application and bond required to perfect the appeal (Andrews v. Marion, 23 Minn. 372).

Appeals from several counties.—A statute providing that, in case proceedings be had in more than one county, the auditors of each county, on being notified of an appeal, shall transmit to the court to which the appeal is taken all the proceedings in such county, does not make each appeal a separate case, which must be brought up on a separate transcript of the record. Glassburn v. Deer, 143 Ind. 174, 41 N. E. 376.

Duty of clerk.—When a transcript is required, the appellant must put the clerk under obligation to forward a proper one by paying or tendering his fees. Blair v. Coakley, 136 N. C. 405, 48 S. E. 804.

69. Jones v. Theiss, 30 Ind. 311.

A person who is named in a petition for opening a highway as one whose land is to be taken therefor need not file such an affidavit in order to appeal from an order establishing such highway, since he is a party to the proceeding. Wilson v. Wheeler, 125 Ind. 173, 25 N. E. 190.

may be estopped to attack the assignment of errors because his full name does not appear therein.<sup>73</sup>

(F) Proceedings on Appeal—(1) IN GENERAL. In many respects the procedure on an appeal in a highway case is the same as in ordinary civil actions,<sup>74</sup> such as the procedure relating to change of venue,<sup>75</sup> and appeals in the same proceeding should be consolidated.<sup>76</sup> In some jurisdictions the appeal is triable by a judge without the intervention of a jury.<sup>77</sup>

(2) NOTICE OF HEARING. It is generally required that notice of the hearing of an appeal in highway proceedings be given<sup>78</sup> to the appellants and appellees,<sup>79</sup> as well as to the owners of land through which the road will pass,<sup>80</sup> and to the commissioners or other officers who established the highway.<sup>81</sup>

(3) ADJOURNMENT. Where the appeal is heard by a board, that body may adjourn for reasonable cause,<sup>82</sup> even to a place outside of the limits of the town.<sup>83</sup> appeal is supplied and cured by giving such bond in the appellate court at the time a motion to dismiss because of no bond being given is made.

73. Hall v. McDonald, 171 Ind. 9, 85 N. E. 707, holding that, where appellees signed only their surnames and initials to a petition for highway improvements, they may not require the appeal to be dismissed because the assignment of errors describes them in the same manner and does not set out their full names, as required by the supreme court rules.

74. See cases cited infra, this note et seq.

Time of hearing.—The action is triable, under the Tennessee practice, at the same term in which the transcript required by statute is delivered to the clerk. Lafollette v. Road Com'r, 105 Tenn. 536, 58 S. W. 1065.

The right to open and close belongs to the remonstrant where the remonstrance, after having been amended, is for damages only (Peed v. Breneman, 89 Ind. 252), although ordinarily the burden is on petitioners to establish that the proposed highway will be of public utility, and upon each of the remonstrators to prove his individual damages (Heath v. Sheetz, 164 Ind. 665, 74 N. E. 505).

That parties not appealing were not duly summoned on the appeal is immaterial, when the appeal is taken in term-time, under the Indiana statutes which require summons only when appeal is taken in vacation. Kirsch v. Braun, 153 Ind. 247, 53 N. E. 1082.

Where the judges separate without conference before decision, an order signed by two of them at different times and places is irregular. Harris v. Whitney, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 175.

Justice as member of jury.—Under a statute providing for a jury trial on an appeal to a justice's court from an award of damages, the justice is not entitled to sit with the jury in the capacity of a juror. Halstead v. Sawyer, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 456, 10 West. L. J. 85.

78. Corley v. Kennedy, 28 Ill. 143.

Curing of defect.—A party who has received notice cannot object that notice has not been given to another party (Leeds v. Androscoggin County, 75 Me. 533), and a decision by a township board of an appeal which is void for failure to give notice of the time and place of hearing does not preclude a subsequent hearing of the same appeal after proper notices have been given (Sanger v. Brownston Tp. Bd., 118 Mich. 19, 76 N. W. 121). If the occupants of the land waive notice of the proceedings on appeal, but afterward, before any action is had thereon, withdraw it, the referees cannot proceed without giving notice. People v. Crosier, 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 445, 26 How. Pr. 195.

79. McPherson v. Holdridge, 24 Ill. 38; Prescott v. Patterson, 44 Mich. 525, 7 N. W. 237, holding that the action of a township board on appeal is invalid unless it appears that the party appealing had notice of the meeting, even though the return shows that it was held at his house.

Adjournment without day.—Supervisors, when they dismiss an appeal and adjourn without any intention of further action, cannot resume the subject unless notice of the time and place of a future meeting is served on the commissioners of highways, and on the three petitioners before served. Keech v. People, 22 Ill. 478.

A defect in the adjournment is waived by the appearance of the parties at the adjourned meeting. Anderson v. Wood, 80 Ill. 15.

(4) SCOPE OF REVIEW, TRIAL DE NOVO, AND PRESUMPTIONS. Appellate jurisdiction in highway proceedings is confined to the subject-matter of the original petition,<sup>84</sup> and to the issues framed in the board or court where the proceedings were first instituted, even though there is a trial de novo on appeal;<sup>85</sup> and the appellate court will not take cognizance of or consider matters not embraced in the record,<sup>86</sup> which can be made up and matter incorporated therein only in the manner prescribed by the statute and practice of the particular jurisdiction;<sup>87</sup> and matters not stated therein will be presumed not to have been done,<sup>88</sup> an exception existing as to steps not jurisdictional in their nature and which are not absolutely required to be in the record.<sup>89</sup> Where no evidence is introduced in the appellate tribunal, the review proceeds on questions of law and jurisdiction much in the same manner (Tenn.) 77. But see Cross v. Lafourche Interior Police Jury, 7 Rob. (La.) 121.

Where the right of appeal is limited by statute to the issue of damages, the determination of the commissioner's court is conclusive as to all other matters. Huggins v. Hurt, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 404, 56 S. W. 944. Likewise, on appeal from a decision on a petition to set aside the proceedings establishing the highway, the court cannot entertain a motion to amend the original petition establishing the highway as a motion in the original cause. Ashcraft v. Lee, 75 N. C. 157.

Opening of issues after trial.—The refusal of an intermediate court to which an appeal has been taken to open the issues and permit a motion to be filed after one trial of the appeal has been had, and after the case has been sent to another county for retrial, and a large amount of costs has been accumulated, is a proper exercise of discretion, and not reviewable. Fifer v. Ritter, 159 Ind. 8, 64 N. E. 463.

Evidence foreign to the issue involved should be excluded. Gayle v. Jackson County Com'rs Ct., 155 Ala. 204, 46 So. 261.

The judgment of the lower court will not be disturbed where the record does not show the grounds upon which it was based (Cox v. Lindley, 80 Ind. 327; McCain v. Putman, 36 S. W. 552, 18 Ky. L. Identity of two petitions.—The action of county commissioners in establishing a public road after dismissal of another like petition will not be reviewed on appeal, where the record does not show that the petitions are identical, and that the evidence, proof, and necessity for the road were the same in both cases. *Warlich v. In Kentucky this is now the practice. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Gerard, 130 Ky. 18, 112 S. W. 915. Under earlier statutes the right to a trial de novo did not exist. Rawlings v. Biggs, 85 Ky. 251, 3 S. W. 147, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 919; Smith v. McMeekin, 79 Ky. 24, 1 Ky. L. Rep. 259; Helm v. Short, 7 Bush 623; Morris v. Salle, 19 S. W. 527, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 117.

In Missouri the practice is now as stated in the text. Mayer v. Palmer, 206 Mo. 293, 103 S. W. 1140. Formerly such a trial was not authorized. Nickerson v. Lynch, 135 Mo. 471, 37 S. W. 128; St. Louis County v. Lind, 42 Mo. 348.

Qualified right to trial de novo.—Under some statutes there is a trial de novo on all questions presented by the notice of appeal (Williams v. Turner Tp., 15 S. D. 182, 87 N. W. 968), and under others, the appeal brings before the court the propriety of the amount of damages, and all other matters referred to in the application for appeal (Gorman v. St. Mary, 20 Minn. 392). Under the Illinois statutes, which restrict the power and authority of supervisors on appeal to call a jury to assess damages to cases where the state of the proceedings require it, that course may be taken only when it has not already been taken. People v. Highway Com'rs, 188 Ill. 150, 58 N. E. 989.

92. Kelley v. Augsperger, 171 Ind. 155, 85 N. E. 1004; Hughes v. Beggs, 114 Ind. 427, 16 N. E. 817; Fleming v. Hight, 95 Ind. 78; Breitweiser v. Fuhrman, 88 Ind. 28 (holding that it is error to refuse to allow a party to show that the county board unlawfully prevented him from filing a remonstrance); Brown v. McCord, 20 Ind. 270; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Gerard, 130 Ky. 18, 112 S. W. 915 (holding that it is necessary to prove jurisdictional facts in the appellate court, when they are put in issue by exceptions); Bennett v. Hall, 184 Mo. 407, 83 S. W. 439; Lafollette v. Road Com'r, 105 Tenn. 536, 58 S. W. 1065.

Dilatory or technical objections are out of place on such a trial and need not be entertained. People v. Smith, 15 Ill. 326. Thus a motion to set aside the proceedings of the lower board is useless, as the trial on appeal is de novo. Dillman v. Crooks, 91 Ind. 158. Likewise the court may properly refuse to allow appellant to file a plea in abatement alleging that less than six persons signing the petition resided in the neighborhood, since he has a right to contest the jurisdiction without filing any plea. Irwin v. Armuth, 129 Ind. 340, 28 N. E. 702.

The reports of viewers are of no value on such a trial and cannot be attacked for irregularity (Clift v. Brown, 95 Ind. 53); nor are they competent evidence, as they simply embody conclusions as to matters which are to be tried anew (Freek v. Christian, 55 Ind. 320; Coyner v. Boyd, 55 Ind. 166. And see Washington Ice Co. v. Lay, 103 Ind. 48, 2 N. E. 222, holding that the petition need not be offered in evidence. Compare Daggy v. Coats, 19 Ind. 259, holding that the necessary papers of record in the cause are operative in the appellate court to make a prima facie case, at least for the party in whose favor they are). However, it is not error for the court to permit the petitioners to read to the jury the report of viewers, with a plat of the lands reported benefited attached as an exhibit, under instructions that the contents of these papers are not evidence of the fact therein contained, but may be used to apply to other evidence. Fulton v. Cummings, 132 Ind. 453, 30 N. E. 949.

It is the province of the jury in such a trial to pass upon the credibility and weight of evidence; and its conclusion, when approved by the trial court, will not be disturbed on appeal. Raab v. Roberts, 30 Ind. App. 6, 64 N. E. 618, 65 N. E. 191.

ings of the lower tribunal<sup>93</sup> obtain in appeals in highway proceedings, especially on appeals from an intermediate court to a higher court;<sup>94</sup> and, among other things, it will be presumed in the absence of a contrary showing that the viewers were not only properly qualified and appointed,<sup>95</sup> but that they observed statutory requirements in performing their duties.<sup>96</sup>

3. People v. Strevell, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 218, holding that the referees may meet to consider the matter outside of the town in which the highway is located.

Where an adjournment without day is had, the powers of the referees are exhausted. Rogers v. Runyan, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 248.

After the hearing has been closed, the only power then left to the referees is to decide, including the incidental power of adjourning from time to time for this purpose, and to prepare and sign, and cause to be filed, the evidence of their decision; they have no power to entertain a motion of third persons to open the cause for a further hearing, and for the reception of evidence impeaching the original testimony. *People v. An error of the commissioners or referees does not extend back to the prior proceedings, but may be fully redressed by setting aside the report, leaving the appeal to be proceeded with as if no hearing had been had and report made. Underwood v. Bailey, 58 N. H. 59.

The report must be made within the time limited by statute, and the court has no authority to accept a report made after such time, although the delay in making it was in accordance with an express written agreement between the parties, indorsed on the back of the warrant at the time of the view and hearing. Belfast's Appeal, 53 Me. 431.

Road*, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 150 (holding that the omission to name the township in the petition, order of view, and report is not cause for reversal, where the termini are so precisely described in the report as to leave no room for doubt as to the location of the road).

Causes arising subsequent to the action of the board are not grounds of reversal, the only causes which the appellate court can recognize being those existing at the time the action was taken. Donnell v. York County, 87 Me. 223, 32 Atl. 884.

Under the Maine statutes the committee appointed by the supreme court on appeal reports whether the decision of the county commissioners should be affirmed or reversed (Cole v. Cumberland County, 78 Me. 532, 7 Atl. 397), and the only power of the court is to accept or reject the report of the committee (In re Brunswick, 37 Me. 446).

Findings.—Where the trial on appeal is de novo the verdict of the jury or decision of the court must embrace a finding of all the facts which the board would have been required to find to entitle the petitioners to the highway (Scraper v. Pipes, 59 Ind. 158), but in a special finding it is not necessary to state in detail the preliminary steps taken before the board of commissioners, if indeed it is proper to state them at all (Lowe v. Brannan, 105 Ind. 247, 4 N. E. 580).

The directions of the reviewing court may be general, such as to proceed according to law, without any specific directions as to ulterior proceedings. Winchester v. Hinsdale, 12 Conn. 88.

Award of damages by reviewing court.—Where the appellate court awards a larger sum of damages, the board of supervisors may reconsider their action establishing the road (Nelson v. Goodykoontz, 47 Iowa 32. See also State v. White, 151 Ind. 364, 51 N. E. 481), and where damages are assessed by the appellate court in favor of a remonstrant, it is not error in the court to leave it to the option of the board of commissioners to pay such assessment (Jamieson v. Cass County, 56 Ind. 466). In such a case the commissioners, by refusing a petition to open the road and pay the damages out of the county treasury, do not lose jurisdiction of the proceeding, so as to be unable to entertain a subsequent petition to open the road on the payment by the petitioners of half of the damages. Wilkinson v. Bixler, 88 Ind. 574.

13. Brook v. Hishen, 40 Wis. 674, holding, however, that a short delay in obeying the order is not fatal. And see In re Beeler's Road, 9 Pa. St. 217.

Obedience may be compelled by mandamus (Harriman v. Waldo County, 53 Me. 83; People v. Salem Highway Com'rs, 1 Cow. (N. However, mandamus will be denied where it appears that the whole proceedings were without jurisdiction. North Henderson Highway Com'rs v. People, 2 Ill. App. 24.

Retrial.—Where the judgment of a county court approving a part of a report of a certain committee laying out a highway, and disapproving another part on the ground that a part of the highway was not of convenience and necessity, was reversed on appeal on the ground that the court had no power to adopt a part of the road and reject the residue, the lower court, on a second hearing, may try the issue over again and establish the entire highway, after finding that it was of convenience and necessity. Winchester v. Hinsdale, 13 Conn. 132.

Danube*, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 142, holding that the judges of the common pleas could not lay out a road differing from the one submitted to the commissioners.

The rule is otherwise under the Maine statutes (Irving v. Sagadahoc County, 59 Me. 513. And see Winslow v. County Com'rs, 31 Me. 444), except where the appeal is to and not from the county commissioners (Orrington v. Penobscot County, 51 Me. 570).

that the highway board was without jurisdiction;<sup>17</sup> and the effect of such dismissal is to leave the cause as if no appeal had been taken.<sup>18</sup> Grounds for a dismissal may be presented orally as well as in writing.<sup>19</sup>

(G) Effect of Appeal. An appeal in highway proceedings vacates the judgment of the lower board or court,<sup>20</sup> and suspends the authority of the highway officials to open the road or take other steps in execution of the judgment.<sup>21</sup>

(II) CERTIORARI<sup>22</sup> — (A) Availability and Grounds. The writ of certiorari, or the equivalent statutory writ of review, is the proper remedy, and in some states the only remedy, for testing the jurisdiction of the board or tribunal which passed on the question of the establishment of the highway,<sup>23</sup> and for reviewing the regularity and legality of its proceedings,<sup>24</sup> or the proceedings on appeal from its

Where all the parties are not properly before the court, a dismissal is proper. Jewell v. Kirk, 47 S. W. 766, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 853.

Failure to sign petition.—It is not a sufficient ground for dismissal that one who filed a petition before the county board, in whose name, with the names of other petitioners, the case was conducted before such board and in the circuit court on appeal, did not sign the petition. Hays v. Parrish, 52 Ind. 132.

Somerset County*, 97 Me. 121, 53 Atl. 985.

Notice.—A failure to acquire jurisdiction by giving notice of the time and place of hearing on the petition is ground for certiorari (Ware v. Penobscot County, 38 Me. 492); but after jurisdiction has been once acquired, defects in subsequent notices are not grounds for the issuance of the writ where no substantial injustice has been done (Rutland v. Worcester County, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 71; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Folsom, 46 N. H. 64). Also the writ will not be granted because the record does not show how, or by whom, notice to the parties interested was given (In re Vassalborough, 19 Me. 338), or where the failure to give notice is without fault on the part of the tribunal, and is occasioned by want of knowledge of a title acquired during the pendency of the proceedings (*Pickford v. action.<sup>25</sup> It will not lie where the proceedings conform in all respects to the requirements of law,<sup>26</sup> or where there exists the right of appeal,<sup>27</sup> or other adequate remedy.<sup>28</sup> Neither is it available to question the public necessity for the road or the proper exercise of the discretion vested in the board;<sup>29</sup> and in nearly all cases the general rule that certiorari is not a writ of right but is a writ issuable in the discretion of the court to prevent substantial injustice<sup>30</sup> is applicable.<sup>31</sup> However, to prevent substantial injustice, the writ will issue,

The writ has been issued where it appeared on the record that surveyors were appointed in less than one year after a former decision (In re Highway, 3 N. J. L. 1038); that a member of the court of sessions was an interested party (State v. Delesdernier, 11 Me. 473); that the proceedings were closed earlier than the time allowed by law (In re Windham, 32 Me. 452), or recorded later than the time prescribed (Cornville v. Somerset County, 33 Me. 237); or that the road was not completely and intelligibly described (Portland, etc., R. Co. v. York County, 65 Me. 292; Lewiston v. Lincoln County, 30 Me. 19).

The writ has been refused or quashed where the only ground therefor was an immaterial one of form (Monterey v. Berkshire County, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 394; Ex p. Miller, 4 Mass. 565), such as an omission to state the name of one person whose land is taken, or to describe his land as of a person unknown (North Reading v. Middlesex County, 7 Gray (Mass.) 109). It has also been held that it is not a ground for certiorari that the court, in the appointment

(B) Persons Entitled to. The interest of a citizen and a taxpayer subject to a small and undetermined tax on account of the establishment of a road is not sufficient to entitle him to a writ of certiorari or review to reverse the proceedings; to come within the class of persons entitled to the writ he must show by the records that he owns land through which the road runs,<sup>34</sup> in addition to the fact that he was a party to the proceedings,<sup>35</sup> although this latter requirement is held to be fulfilled by showing that his rights are concluded by the judgment;<sup>36</sup> and a person prima facie shows legal injury and a right to the writ by establishing his ownership together with the illegal establishment of the road.<sup>37</sup> Highway commissioners are entitled to have a reversal, by supervisors on appeal, of their order laying out a highway, reviewed by certiorari.<sup>38</sup> A landowner estops himself by instituting proceedings to recover damages.<sup>39</sup>

(C) Application For and Return of Writ. Application for a writ of certiorari is premature when made before the final termination of the proceedings to establish or lay out the highway,<sup>40</sup> or before the disposition of an appeal therefrom;<sup>41</sup> and of freeholders, passed over one of the freeholders of the town through which the road ran, and appointed one from another town (In re Highway, 3 N. J. L. 1026), or that the county commissioners failed to include an underpass for cattle awarded to a landowner by the selectmen (Bethel v. Oxford County, 60 Me. 535), or that the petition for the highway described the petitioners as "inhabitants of said town, or owners of land therein," where it affirmatively appears in the petition for certiorari, and in the agreed statement, that the original petitioners were in fact inhabitants of the town (Hebron v. Oxford County, 63 Me. 314). Under the New Hampshire statute, providing for the taking of a bill of exceptions, the supreme court will pass on the admissibility of evidence, but where it has adjudged certain evidence to be incompetent, it will not receive evidence that the commissioners did not in fact deem the evidence at all material, or consider it in making up their opinion. In re Landaff, 34 N. Errors of law are ground for reversal, even though made within the jurisdiction of the lower board or court (In re Landaff, 34 N. 1. Costs and Expenses — (i) OF ORIGINAL PROCEEDINGS. As in civil actions generally,<sup>59</sup> costs in highway proceedings follow the event of the suit and go to the prevailing party;<sup>60</sup> but this rule must be applied in conjunction with the rule that there exists no right to recover any costs in the absence of statutory authority therefor,<sup>61</sup> and with statutes which expressly or impliedly deny the right to recover costs to the applicant or petitioner for the road,<sup>62</sup> or which impose liability therefor upon the county or town,<sup>63</sup> or exempt a remonstrant from liability.<sup>64</sup> Liability for fees of referees, the expense of laying out the road, and other charges not included in costs proper is dependent largely upon statute,<sup>65</sup> the rule, in the absence

Laying out of road conditioned on payment of expense.—Where a petition for the location of a highway is granted on condition that the expenses of its location should be borne by the petitioners, the petitioners are not bound to cause the road to be laid out; but, if they do, they assent to the condition imposed, and are bound by it. Partridge v. Ballard, 2 Me. 50.

Determination as to liability and amount.—It has been held that if county commissioners lay out a highway across a township, but fail to determine who is to bear the expense, the proceedings are invalid (Ware v. Penobscot County Com'rs, 38 Me. 492), and that before a recovery of expenses may be had, it must be shown by the record of the county commissioners to whom, and by whom, the amount was adjudged to be paid (Waldo County v. Moore, 33 Me. 511). Under the Maine statute regulating the proceedings of the county commissioners in laying out highways, the towns may be cited to object to the of statute, being that the county or town is not liable, but that the party who invokes the action of the officials is.<sup>66</sup> Statutes requiring the giving of cost bonds in highway proceedings are generally given a liberal construction, and irregularities in regard to the contents, sureties, approval, or filing are rarely held to be incurable or fatal to jurisdiction.<sup>67</sup>

(II) OF PROCEEDINGS FOR REVIEW. The right of an appellate court to make any award of costs in highway proceedings has been denied;<sup>68</sup> but on the other hand, it has been held that it should at least dispose of the costs made in its own court,<sup>69</sup> and the statutes of some states confer upon it a discretion as to the terms of the award,<sup>70</sup> while in other states the rule giving costs to the prevailing party is applicable.<sup>71</sup> A party seeking a review of the proceedings by either the original

Payment and collection.—Under the Minnesota statute, the county is not liable for payment of commissioners' services in opening a road, until their work is finished and the road opened (Thorn v. Washington County, 14 Minn. 233); and under a statute providing that the fees of the commissioners appointed to open a state road through three counties named shall be paid out of the county treasuries of the three counties "in proportion, as near as may be, to the extent of said road situated in each of said counties," one of such commissioners cannot, in an action against one of the counties, and upon proof that a certain number of days' service was performed by him in that county, recover the sum due for such services, since payment by the counties according to the terms of the act might impose a different measure of liability upon each county from that of paying for all the work upon the portion of the road lying in that county (Steele v. Randolph County, 63 Ill. 460). Under the New York statutes a petitioner is not remitted to a presentation of his claim to the supervisors, but on confirming a commissioners' report in proceedings to lay out a highway, the county court has authority, under Code Civ. Proc. § 3240, to allow the petitioner's costs and disbursements in excess of the fifty dollars provided by Highway Law, § 152. In re Peterson, 94 N. Y. App. Div. 143, 87 N. Y. Suppl. 1014.

Reimbursement may be had by petitioners who have expended money in procuring the establishment of the highway of the remaining petitioners, unless the petition has been materially altered without their consent. *Jewett v. A bond is not required under the Oregon statutes (Douglas County v. Clark, 15 Oreg. 3, 13 Pac. 511), and in Massachusetts the fact that a town, in applying to the county commissioners to lay out a highway, gave no recognizance for costs, is not a ground for quashing the commissioners' proceedings upon the application of one over whose lands the way was located (Blake v. Norfolk County, 114 Mass. 583). board or tribunal or a higher court is chargeable with the costs of the steps which he takes to obtain such review upon the dismissal of his exceptions, either of his own motion or by the court; <sup>72</sup> and where the cause is dismissed by the appellate court for want of jurisdiction in the lower board or court, the applicant for the road is liable for all the costs of the proceedings, including those of appeal. <sup>73</sup>

m. Operation and Effect of Establishment — (i) IN GENERAL. When all the steps required by statute have been regularly taken, a road is established and is, in contemplation of law, open, notwithstanding the fact that it is not actually open, <sup>74</sup> or that the time for an aggrieved party to apply for a discontinuance has not expired, <sup>75</sup> and when so established, it remains such until vacated by the public authorities or abandoned. <sup>76</sup> The public has a perpetual easement, which is a freehold, in its highways, <sup>77</sup> as the valid establishment of a public highway deprives an owner of land over which it passes of his freehold therein, <sup>78</sup> although he still retains certain prescriptive rights, such as easements which are not inconsistent with the easement of the highway. <sup>79</sup>

(ii) CHARACTER, LOCATION, AND EXTENT OF ROAD. <sup>80</sup> The character of a road is usually determined by the terms of the statute and order under and by

Partial affirmance.—Where, on the trial of a highway appeal, there is a finding establishing such highway, but allowing damages therefor to a remonstrant, the costs accruing from the trial of the former issue should be assessed against such remonstrant, and that accruing upon the latter against the petitioners. Jamieson v. Cass County, 56 Ind. 466. Under a statute making the referees' fees a county charge when the highway commissioners' decision is "reversed" on appeal, the word "reversed" applies to a case of reversal in part, as well as to an entire reversal. People v. Orange County, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 196 [affirmed in 85 N. Y. 641].

Liability of petitioner.—In Maine the district court on appeal has no authority to award costs either for or against the original petitioners (In re Jordan, 32 Me. 472), while Iowa Code (1873), § 963, provides that if an appeal has been taken by claimant, the petitioner for the highway or the county must pay the costs occasioned by the appeals (Hanrahan v. Fox, 47 Iowa 102).

As the commissioners have no personal interest in the matter, an award of costs should not be made against them personally (Russell Com'rs' Ct. v. Tarver, 25 Ala. 480; Alexander v. Rubensam, 12 Ill. App. 120), except where they have made themselves parties to the appeal or certiorari (Russell Com'rs' Ct. v. Tarver, supra; Sonora Highway Com'rs v. Carthage, 27 Ill. 140).

Under the Minnesota statutes, a county road does not in all cases become a public highway open to public use, immediately upon the order of the county commissioners granting the prayer of the petition. Thus, where the road is over inclosed lands, it is essential that the road be opened by the supervisors of the town. State v. Leslie, 30 Minn. 533, 16 N. W. 408.

When contingent on act of landowner.—Where a street has been laid out and confirmed, subject to the right of the owner of the land to have compensation before it is opened, it becomes a public highway when opened as such by the owner of the land, and may lawfully be used as such, although a turnpike road and toll gate are thereby avoided. Greensburg, etc., Turnpike Road Co. v. Breidenthal, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 170.

Likewise, under a statute providing that if the court approve the report allowing a road it shall direct the breadth of the road, and at the next court the whole proceedings shall be entered on record, and thenceforth the road shall be deemed to be a lawful road, the road becomes a public highway on the report being confirmed and the exceptions dismissed, without waiting for the expiration of the succeeding term of court. *Hibberd v. virtue of which it was established,<sup>81</sup> and its character as a public highway is not changed or affected by the fact that it is used for only a few purposes or by only a few persons,<sup>82</sup> by the fact that it terminates on private lands,<sup>83</sup> or that the erection of gates upon it is authorized.<sup>84</sup> In determining the location and extent of a public highway the courts endeavor to so construe the location as to make it certain and within the powers of the officers who made it.<sup>85</sup> An intention to furnish access to public waters will be carried out by holding that a road thereto extends to the water's edge,<sup>86</sup> and monuments will be held to govern courses and distances;<sup>87</sup> but in the case of a variation between a location by monuments and the return of the authorities, the latter is controlling.<sup>88</sup>

In Vermont, all highways, whether open, cross roads, lanes, or pent roads, are public highways, although a highway will not be presumed to be an open one where the record is silent as to the nature of the road but designates a width less than that required by law for an open highway. *French v. The incidents of a public highway, such as the facts that it is a public charge and has an overseer, are not conclusive as to its character. State v. Smith, 100 N. C. 550, 6 S. E. 251.

A mere assumption by highway commissioners that a certain strip of land is a public road does not make it such (Speir v. New Utrecht, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 294, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 426 [modified in 121 N. Y. 420, 24 N. E. 692]); nor does a certificate by officials having no authority in the matter that a certain road is a by-road have the effect of making it such (Heiser v. Martin, 9 N. J. L. J. 277).

and description are also sufficient,<sup>90</sup> and an averment that the road was duly and legally established authorizes a showing of dedication and public acceptance.<sup>91</sup>

(II) EVIDENCE<sup>92</sup> — (A) Presumptions and Burden of Proof. The burden of proving the legal establishment and existence of a public highway is on the public authorities or other parties who allege its existence;<sup>93</sup> but where it is shown that the authorities which established the road had jurisdiction, every presumption thereafter is in favor of the legality and regularity of their proceedings,<sup>94</sup> and the burden of showing an abandonment of the road is on the owner of the land through which the road passes.<sup>95</sup> Where ancient records are offered as proof of the existence of a way, all reasonable presumptions are to be taken in favor of their validity.<sup>96</sup>

(B) Admissibility.<sup>97</sup> While the records of the establishment of a highway constitute the regular proof of its establishment, existence, and location, and according to some authorities are the only evidence admissible on those questions, unless their loss is accounted for,<sup>98</sup> the weight of authority favors the view that these facts may be proved by reputation or hearsay, such as by ancient records and documents and the declarations of deceased persons,<sup>99</sup> or by other parol evi-

Irregularity in the establishment of a road is well pleaded by alleging facts showing a failure to post the notices of the proceedings in the manner required by statute, and it is not necessary to allege fraudulent purpose in failing to post them, or that the parties had no notice of the proceedings. Williams v. Routt County, 37 Colo. 55, 84 Pac. 1109.

90. Freshour v. Hihn, 99 Cal. 443, 34 Pac. 87; Thompson Tp. Highway Com'r v. Beebe, 55 Mich. 137, 20 N. W. 826.

A transcript of the board's proceedings need not be filed with the pleading, since, when it has jurisdiction, its proceedings are attended with the same presumption of regularity as are those of a court of general jurisdiction, and are not susceptible of collateral attack. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Sutton, 130 Ind. 405, 30 N. E. 291.

91. Hartford v. New York, etc., R. Co., 59 Conn. 250, 22 Atl. 37.

But see Heacock v. Sullivan, 70 Kan. 750, 79 Pac. 659, holding that in an action to enjoin a road surveyor and the board of county commissioners from attempting to lay out a public highway along a section line, the burden of proving the non-existence of the road in question is on plaintiff.

94. Biglow v. Ritter, 131 Iowa 213, 108 N. W. 218; St. Bartholomew's Parish Lower Bd. Road Com'rs v. Murray, 1 Rich. (S. C.) 335.

The presumption is one of fact merely, and may be rebutted by showing that the proper steps were not in fact taken. State v. Logue, 73 Wis. 598, 41 N. W. 1061.

Presumption of jurisdiction.—Where the return of selectmen shows that they acted upon a petition for a way, and when the use of the way has been acquiesced in for several years, there is a prima facie presumption that the petition was sufficient in form to give the selectmen jurisdiction to act. Cushing v. Webb, 102 Me. 157, 66 Atl. 719.

The actual location of the road will be presumed to be correct until the contrary is shown. Council Grove Tp. v. Bowman, 76 Kan. 563, 92 Pac. 550.

dence,<sup>1</sup> the use of a way by the public and the limits thereof being considered a public fact concerning which any one with knowledge may speak.<sup>2</sup> Any or all of the records of the proceedings establishing the way or certified copies thereof, including the notes and maps of the surveyors and viewers, are admissible,<sup>3</sup> especially under statutes requiring a record to be made,<sup>4</sup> or under statutes making them or a certified copy thereof competent evidence;<sup>5</sup> and under the presumption of regularity which attaches to the proceedings of the board,<sup>6</sup> the record, to be admissible, need not be explicit as to all the preliminary steps, provided it shows jurisdiction and the final order;<sup>7</sup> but the records are not admissible when so incomplete or manifestly irregular as to be misleading and untrue,<sup>8</sup> or when made by one without author-

Compare Shepherd v. Turner, 129 Cal. 530, 62 Pac. 106, holding that while it is competent to prove the use made of the road, it is not competent to prove such user by the declaration of third persons or by reputation.

1. Georgia.—Penick v. Morgan County, 131 Ga. 385, 62 S. E. 300, holding admissible evidence of acts of control and dominion over road by public authorities.

Illinois.—Ferris v. Ward, 9 Ill. 499; Nealy v. Brown, 6 Ill. 10; Eyman v. People, 6 Ill. 4.

Tennessee.—Mankin v. State, 2 Swan 206. See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 228.

The actual location of the road may be proved by parol testimony as to its opening and use. Louk v. Woods, 15 Ill. 256; Arnold v. Flattery, 5 Ohio 271.

To prove that a road is not a public highway, testimony of the county supervisor who has charge of all the highways and public road of the county is admissible. Miles v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 55 S. C. 403, 33 S. E. 493.

2. Brown v. Jefferson County, 16 Iowa 339.

3. Penick v. Morgan County, 131 Ga. 385, 62 S. E. 300; Louk v. Woods, 15 Ill. 256; Roehrborn v. Schmidt, 16 Wis. 519; Reg. v. McGowan, 17 N. Brunsw. 191. And see Atty.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 188, 69 J. P. 141, 3 Loc. Gov. 1071, 92 L. T. Rep. N. S. 790, 21 T. L. R. 471.

The original survey and minutes of the commissioners in the laying out of a road are admissible in evidence, instead of authenticated copies (King v. Kenny, 4 Ohio 79); and when the original records have been destroyed by fire, secondary evidence of their contents is competent (Wildrick v. Hager, 10 N. Y. St. 764).

A report found on the files of the town, but not otherwise recorded, is sufficient evidence of the laying out of a highway. Hardy v. Houston, 2 N. H. 309.

An act of the legislature recognizing the road as a highway, together with proof that a person under whom plaintiff claims title was cognizant of the application to the legislature for the passage of the act, and subsequently acted under it as commissioner, is admissible in evidence. Tyson v. Baltimore County, 28 Md. 510.

4. Jonestown Road Case, 1 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 487 (certified copy); Randall v. Rovelstad, 105 Wis. 410, 81 N. W. 819.

The neglect to have filed and recorded the proper records, as required by law, does not raise a presumption that the authorities proceeded contrary to statute in establishing the road, or render inadmissible evidence that the necessary acts were in fact done. Carron v. Clark, 14 Mont. 301, 36 Pac. 178.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 231.

Compare Williams v. Holmes, 2 Wis. 129, holding that before a petition for laying out a road is admissible in evidence, it must be affirmatively shown that there were six freeholders, petitioners.

Omission of provisions as to compensation or damages does not affect the admissibility of the records. Howard v. State, 47 Ark. 431, 2 S. W. 331; Thompson v. Major, 58 N. H. 242. But see Dunning v. Matthews, 16 Ill. 308.

8. Watrous v. Southworth, 5 Conn. 305; State v. Snyder, 25 Iowa 208 (holding the record in question objectionable for uncertainty in not stating the termini of the road); State v. Berry, 21 Me. 169 (holding that the records of a town which are not admissible to prove the existence of a legal town way cannot be admitted to show the limits or outside lines of the road); Young v. Garland, 18 Me. 409.

Jurisdiction must be shown in order to render the records admissible. Mankin v. State, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 206.

Where certification is required, failure to obtain it is fatal to the admissibility of the records. Blodget v. Roylton, 14 Vt. 288.

Slight discrepancies, or clerical mistakes, which may be readily corrected by reference to other papers of the record, are of no moment in passing on the admissibility of the evidence (Humboldt County v. Dinsmore, 75 Cal. 604, 17 Pac. 710; State v. Prine, 25 Iowa 231); but where selectmen, in laying out a highway, referred for a particular deity.<sup>9</sup> Such records are at least prima facie evidence of the facts which they recite,<sup>10</sup> and are not subject to direct contradiction by parol evidence,<sup>11</sup> except as to jurisdictional facts,<sup>12</sup> although evidence abunde may be received to explain and supply defects therein,<sup>13</sup> or to identify the subject-matter.<sup>14</sup> The writings or parol testimony offered must be relevant and purport to be evidence of the matters intended to be proved.<sup>15</sup>

(c) Weight and Sufficiency. In considering evidence as to the legal or actual existence and limits of a highway, care should be taken against giving any one item conclusive effect,<sup>16</sup> and of giving any independent weight to evidence which scription to a plan recorded in the registry of deeds, in proving the limits of such highway, the records thus referred to should be produced as a part of the description (Hall v. Manchester, 39 N. H. 295).

Although inadmissible to prove a laying out, on account of irregularity, the records may nevertheless be admitted as evidence to show the commencement of the way, in order to rebut a presumption of a dedication (Avery v. Stewart, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 496), or to show a prescriptive right (Wright v. Fanning, (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 86 S. W. 786).

9. Gray v. Waterman, 40 Ill. 522.

The certificate of a person not acting judicially but only as commissioner to see the work executed is but prima facie evidence of the facts recited therein, and may be contradicted by parol. Davis v. Concordia Police Jury, 19 La. 533.

The appointment of a person who has made a report must be established, before such report may be admitted in evidence. Fowler v. Savage, 3 Conn. 90.

A report embodying matters not within the jurisdiction of the persons making it is no evidence of such matters. Schuylkill County's Appeal, 38 Pa. St. 459.

10. Waterman v. Raymond, 34 Ill. 42; Lowe v. Aroma, 21 Ill. App. 598 (holding that Rev. St. c. 121, § 52, making the town clerk's record prima facie evidence of the regularity of proceedings in relation to highways, applies where the road was established before, as well as after, its enactment); Shaffer v. Weech, 34 Kan. 595, 9 Pac. 202 (map and field notes of surveyor); Willis v. Sproule, 13 Kan. 257; Roehrborn v. Schmidt, 16 Wis. 519.

Allen, 6 Wis. 134, holding that, in proving that the signers of the petition were freeholders, resort to documentary evidence is not necessary. Compare Butterfield v. Pollock, 45 Iowa 257 (holding that in determining the sufficiency of a notice, extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to explain it); Stewart v. Wallis, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 344.

Evidence of user in aid of defective record see supra, II, C, 5, i, (VI), (B).

14. Penick v. Morgan County, 131 Ga. 385, 62 S. E. 300, where testimony to show that the road referred to in the minutes was the road testified about was held to have been properly received.

15. Shepherd v. Turner, 129 Cal. 530, 62 Pac. 106 (holding that as the refusal to vacate a highway does not tend to make the premises a highway, an order making such refusal is inadmissible); Wooster v. Butler, 13 Conn. 309; Lincoln v. Com., 164 Mass. 1, 41 N. E. 112; State v. Alstead, 18 N. H. 59 (holding that the testimony of one that he has acted as a road surveyor, and in execution of his warrant caused a road to be repaired, is not evidence of such road having been established as a public highway, when there is no evidence that it was within his district, and his warrant has not been produced or accounted for).

The condition of a road is not evidence as to whether or not it is a highway. Zimmerman v. State, 4 Ind. App. 583, 31 N. E. 550.

Identification of the records and the entries therein by showing when the book or record came into existence, in whose custody it is, and when the entries therein were made is a condition precedent to its admissibility. Shepherd v. Turner, 129 Cal. 530, 62 Pac. 106; Penick v. Morgan County, 131 Ga. 385, 62 S. E. 300.

Facts showing a sufficient identification see Hall v. Manchester, 40 N. H. 410.

Verdicts and judgments between other parties are not admissible to show the establishment of a highway, except in the case of highways claimed by prescription and user. Fowler v. Savage, 3 Conn. 90.

16. Beach v. Meriden, 46 Conn. 502.

A plan filed by a town in compliance with a statutory requirement, showing a number of roads, some of which were admitted to be county roads, and showing also brooks and other things not called for by the act, is not conclusive evidence that a way delineated is of no worth unless accompanied by other evidence.<sup>17</sup> Thus, surveys, reports, and other preliminary proceedings are insufficient to establish the existence of the highway without proof of an actual opening to public use;<sup>18</sup> and in general the rules and standards prevailing in other civil actions<sup>19</sup> are applicable in passing on the weight and sufficiency of evidence relating to the existence of a highway.<sup>20</sup>

D. Alteration, Vacation, and Abandonment — 1. ALTERATION<sup>21</sup> — a. In General — (i) WHAT CONSTITUTES ALTERATION. An alteration of a highway, as the expression is used, generally refers to a change in the course thereof,<sup>22</sup> and therefore necessarily involves to some extent the establishment of a new highway, and the vacation of the part of the old highway for which the substitution is made.<sup>23</sup> But the term has been extended to include a widening or narrowing,<sup>24</sup> and the thereon is a county road. Butchers' Slaughtering, etc., Assoc. v. Boston, 139 Mass. 290, 30 N. E. 94. Likewise a plat returned by county commissioners of the location of a public road is not conclusive evidence of its actual location. Hiner v. People, 34 Ill. 297.

Order to remove fence.—An order of the town supervisor requiring an occupant of land to remove a fence on the ground that it encroaches upon a public highway is not conclusive evidence of the legal existence of such highway. Soule v. State, 19 Wis. 593.

17. Brantly v. Huff, 62 Ga. 532.

18. Ottawa v. Yentzer, 160 Ill. 509, 43 N. E. 601. And see O'Connell v. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co., 184 Ill. 308, 56 N. E. 355.

Subsequent surveys leave the proof of the existence of the road precisely as it was before. Gentleman v. Soule, 32 Ill. 271, 83 Am. Dec. 264.

19. See EVIDENCE, 17 Cyc. 753.

20. See Neff v. Smith, 91 Iowa 87, 58 N. W. 1072; State v. Horn, 34 Kan. 556, 9 Pac. 208 (holding that where the record of the county board recites that two of the viewers acted and made a report, but the report itself shows otherwise, the report is the better evidence and must prevail); Warner v. Holyoke, 112 Mass. 362; Bellevue v. Hunter, 105 Minn. 343, 117 N. W. 445; Arndt v. Thomas, 90 Minn. 355, 96 N. W. 1125; Postal v. Martin, 4 Nebr. (Unoff.) 534, 95 N. W. 8; State v. Morse, 50 N. H. 9; State v. Stites, 13 N. J. L. 172 (holding that a written petition for a highway is more conclusive, as evidence of the route applied for, than the subsequent declarations of the applicants); Tincher v. State, 19 Tex. 156; Bare v. Williams, 101 Va. 800, 45 S. E. 331; Austin v. Allen, 6 Wis. 134 (holding that proof of peaceable possession under claim of title is prima facie evidence that the signers of the petition were freeholders).

Evidence sufficient to go to jury see Reed v. Harlan, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 553, 3 West. L. Month. 632.

The sufficiency and effect of the records are for the determination of the court alone. State v. Prine, 25 Iowa 231.

A recorded plat is not evidence of the existence of a road, but is only evidence of its precise locality. Naylor v. Beeks, 1 Oreg. 216.

Absence of record proof.—Evidence that a road has been used and traveled by the public, and kept in repair by the road overseer of the district in which it is located, is sufficient prima facie to establish the existence of such road as a public highway (Madison Tp. v. Scott, 9 Kan. App. 871, 61 Pac. 967); and the mere absence of record proof is insufficient to establish the fact that the place in question is not a public highway (State v. Robinson, 12 Wash. 491, 41 Pac. 884).

"Alter" means to change or modify; to change in form without destroying identity. Heiple v. Clackamas County, 20 Oreg. 147, 25 Pac. 291.

A change making a right angle instead of an obtuse angle in an existing highway is an "alteration" thereof. People v. Jones, 63 N. Y. 306.

23. People v. Jones, 63 N. Y. 306; Buchholz v. New York, etc., R. Co., 71 N. Y. App. Div. 452, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 824 [affirmed in 177 N. Y. 550, 69 N. E. 1121]; Millcreek Tp. v. Reed, 29 Pa. St. 195; In re Loyalsock Tp. Road, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 219; West Penn. Road, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 477.

A technical alteration is the substitution of one way for another. Bigelow v. Worcester, 169 Mass. 390, 48 N. E. 1; Johnson v. Wyman, 9 Gray (Mass.) 186.

"Alteration" distinguished from "discontinuance" see Thompson v. Crabb, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 222.

straightening of a crooked highway.<sup>25</sup> But the mere leveling,<sup>26</sup> or change of grade,<sup>27</sup> of an existing highway is not an alteration thereof. Nor is it permissible upon a petition for an alteration in an existing highway to establish a new highway.<sup>28</sup>

(II) POWER TO ALTER — (A) In General. The power existing in the legislature to establish highways includes the lesser power to alter them, subject only to the duty of making compensation for the property taken or injured thereby.<sup>29</sup> The subject of alteration of highways is regulated by statute, and courts and public officers have no power except such as the statute confers.<sup>30</sup> This power of alteration may be exercised by the legislature itself,<sup>31</sup> or it may be delegated to subordinate governmental agencies, such as county commissioners<sup>32</sup> or supervisors,<sup>33</sup>

McNeil, 2 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 140; Heiple v. Clackamas County, 20 Oreg. 147, 25 Pac. 291. But see Alston's Petition, 1 Pennew. (Del.) 359, 40 Atl. 938; State v. Vanderveer, 48 N. J. L. 80, 2 Atl. 771.

In Pennsylvania the word "change" in the act of 1836 was construed to mean a change of location only, and not a change of width. In re Liberty Alley, 8 Pa. St. 381; In re Church Road, 5 Watts & S. 200. But the act of 1850 may be regarded as an amendment of the eighteenth section of the act of 1836 whereby the term "change" as used in that section was enlarged beyond the construction previously given to it, so as to include a widening, as well as an alteration of location of parts of the road and the vacation of the parts supplied. In re Loyalsock Tp. Road, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 219. And the word "altering" as used in the act of 1868 is sufficiently broad to cover the widening of a road. In re Loyalsock Tp. Road, supra.

H. 307 (holding that the commissioners, in straightening curves or corners, may depart entirely, for short distances, from the route of the old highway; and the fact that the new route varied in some places four rods from the limits of the old road is no objection); State v. Vanderveer, 48 N. J. L. 80, 2 Atl. 771; State v. Reesa, 59 Wis. 106, 17 N. W. 873. But see Weber v. Ryers, 82 Mich. 177, 46 N. W. 233.

But where a highway is raised eighteen feet and carried by a bridge over a railroad formerly crossed at grade, it is a change in the structural formation of the way, not merely made for repair, and can be effected only under the authority of, and on a plan fixed by, those having power to lay or alter ways, and order specific changes. *Dana v. In Massachusetts the omission of the selectmen to make a written report to the town of their alteration of a town way, on a written petition for an alteration, is such a refusal or neglect to alter it as gives jurisdiction of the matter to the county commissioners, under Rev. St. c. 24, § 71. New Marlborough v. Berkshire County, 9 Mete. 423.

A single commissioner has no power to alter a road. St. Bartholomew's Parish Road Com'rs v. Murray, 1 Rich. (S. C.) 335.

Iowa Code (1897), § 427, enacts that the board of supervisors of any county shall have power, on its own motion, to change and establish a highway along a stream, when it can avoid bridging such stream. This statute does not require the road to be constructed on the immediate bank of the stream, but it may be within a reasonable distance. Stahr v. Carter, 116 Iowa 380, 90 N. W. 64.

N. Y. Acts (1875), c. 482, conferring upon boards of supervisors authority to authorize road or highway commissioners,<sup>34</sup> towns in town meeting,<sup>35</sup> selectmen<sup>36</sup> or other town authorities,<sup>37</sup> surveyors,<sup>38</sup> railroad commissioners,<sup>39</sup> and various courts.<sup>40</sup> A public highway, however established, cannot be altered or changed at the will of the owner of the land over which it passes.<sup>41</sup>

(B) Roads in Different Jurisdictions. In the absence of statutory prohibition, local tribunals have authority to make alterations in a highway within the limits of their town or county, although such highway is a part of a continuous line of road running into other towns or counties.<sup>42</sup> Special provision is usually made, however, for the alteration of highways extending through or into more than one town or county.<sup>43</sup>

the laying out of highways of a less width than is now required by law, and reducing the width of highways now in existence, does not confer upon such boards power to adopt a resolution or ordinance reducing the width of a road already in existence, but merely authorizes them to provide by suitable legislation for the doing of those acts by commissioners of highways or by other suitable agencies. Phillips v. Schumacher, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 405.

Wis. Rev. St. (1871) c. 19, § 105, confers upon the board of supervisors of any county, through which any state road may be laid out, authority to alter the same within the limits of the county, but not to discontinue unless the road lies wholly within the county. *Hark v. N. Y. Laws (1882), p. 381, c. 317, provides that county boards of supervisors may authorize town boards to alter or discontinue any public highway laid out by the state within their boundaries. *People v. Wis. Rev. St. (1898) §§ 1265-1269, authorizes town supervisors to lay out, widen, alter, or discontinue highways on petition therefor. State v. Burgeson, 108 Wis. 174, 84 N. W. 241.

A member of a highway committee of a town council cannot give permission to widen a highway. Stone v. Langworthy, 20 R. I. 602, 40 Atl. 832.

For example, where the removal of a grade crossing renders it necessary to lay out and construct a new highway for a short distance, the action of the railroad commissioners does not interfere with the general power of towns as to laying out new highways, but such action is merely the alteration of an existing highway, and not the establishment of a new one. Doolittle v. Branford, 59 Conn. 402, 22 Atl. 336. So where two highways cross a railroad half a mile apart, and unite, a short distance after, on the east, the railroad commissioners have authority, under Conn. Sess. Laws (1876), p. 102, and Sess. Laws (1884), p. 378, to make an order to unite these highways on the west side of the railroad, thus saving more than one crossing of the railroad. Suffield v. New Haven, etc., R. But the quarter sessions has no authority to grant a review to widen, straighten, and fix the limits of a road already laid out and used for many years. Its power is only to lay out, vacate, and alter or change an established route. In re Church Road, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 200. Under the Pennsylvania act of 1874, requiring the proceedings for widening a street, on approval of the board of surveyors, to be "as now required by law," the Pennsylvania act of 1871 in this regard governs, and the court of quarter sessions of the county of Philadelphia has no jurisdiction of a proceeding to widen a street on one side upon petition of the property holders only on the side to be widened. In re Chestnut St., 86 Pa. In Vermont the county courts are authorized, through the aid of commissioners, to alter highways extending through or into more than one town, but wholly within the county (Hutchinson v. Chester, 33 Vt. 410); and the supreme court has the same powers

(c) By Jury; Massachusetts Statute. Under the Massachusetts statute a party aggrieved by the doings of the county commissioners in the location or alteration of a highway may, upon proper preliminary proceedings, have a jury to determine the matter of his complaint, and the jury may make any alterations that are prayed for between the termini, so far as they shall think them necessary or proper.<sup>44</sup> Under this provision, the jury may make alterations in a highway that has been located anew by the commissioners.<sup>45</sup> The power which the statute gives to such a jury is very limited.<sup>46</sup> They cannot revise the judgment of the commissioners as to the common convenience and necessity of laying out or altering the way in question;<sup>47</sup> neither have they authority to make an entire new line of way from one terminus to the other,<sup>48</sup> nor to change the termini of the road as located by the county commissioners,<sup>49</sup> nor to remove the road, or any part of it, to the land of another proprietor.<sup>50</sup> They can only make minor alterations, limited to the land of the petitioners, and thus render the way less burdensome to when the highway petitioned to be altered extends through or into more than one county (Hutchinson v. Chester, supra).

In Wisconsin the power given by Rev. St. § 67, c. 19, to the supervisors of two adjoining towns to lay out a town line road, is held to include the power of altering such road upon application duly made to them for that purpose. Neis v. Franzen, 18 Wis. 537. The statutes seem to make a distinction between state and territorial roads. Laws (1869), c. 152, § 90, prohibits town boards of supervisors from altering any and all state roads. But such statute does not take away the power of such boards to alter territorial roads provided they lie "wholly within such towns," which words are held to mean and define a road which begins or ends within the town limits. State v. Hayden, 32 Wis. 663.

44. Mass. Rev. St. c. 24, § 13; Mass. Gen. St. c. 43, §§ 19, 20. See also Dean v. Lowell, 135 Mass. 55; Yeamans v. Hampden County, 105 Mass. 140; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Middlesex County, 1 Allen (Mass.) 324; State Lunatic Hospital v. Worcester County, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 437.

Two objects are contemplated by the statute, to be accomplished by a jury; one is to alter the assessment of damages made by the commissioners, and the other is, within certain limits, to make alterations in the location of the road by the commissioners. Lanesborough v. Berkshire County, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 278.

Party aggrieved.—In the location of a highway by the county commissioners, the town through which it passes is a party, and as such may apply for a jury to make alterations in the location, and may appeal from the decision of the court of common pleas adjudicating upon the acceptance of the verdict. Westport v. Bristol County, 9 Allen (Mass.) 204; Lanesborough v. Berkshire County, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 278; Gloucester v. Essex County, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 375.

Verdict.—The verdict of a jury altering the location by the commissioners is sufficiently certain if it gives the commencement and termination, and the courses and distances. Merrill v. Berkshire, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 269. It is not necessary to name in the verdict the owners of the land over which the road is established, because the jury have no power to lay out the road over the land of any other person. Merrill v. Berkshire, supra.

45. Gloucester v. Essex County, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 375; State Lunatic Hospital v. Worcester County, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 437; Merrill v. Berkshire, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 269.

46. Yeamans v. Hampden County, 105 Mass. 140; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Middlesex County, 1 Allen (Mass.) 324; Lanesborough v. Berkshire County, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 278.

The regularity and legality of the proceedings of the commissioners are to be assumed by the jury (Yeamans v. Hampden County, 105 Mass. 140), and all evidence relating thereto or to prior proceedings in regard to the same and other ways in the vicinity is irrelevant except so far as it tends to prove the extent and character of the travel over the way in question, as bearing upon the question of what width it needs to have (Yeamans v. Hampden County, supra).

48. Hobart v. Plymouth County, 100 Mass. 159; Gloucester v. Essex County, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 375; Merrill v. Berkshire, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 269.

Worcester County*, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 437; Lanesborough v. Berkshire County, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 278; Merrill v. Berkshire, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 269.

The phrase "alterations between the termini," in the meaning of the words in their ordinary use, distinctly imports a change in the course or direction of the road, and not in the mode of its construction, or in the place and manner in which it is to be built and finished; and in respect to this latter the jury have no duty to perform. Westport v. Bristol County, 9 Allen (Mass.) 204; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Middlesex County, 1 Allen (Mass.) 324.

them.<sup>51</sup> But a petition is not vitiated by including it in a prayer for alterations which it would not be in the power of the jury to grant.<sup>52</sup>

(III) WHAT ROADS MAY BE ALTERED. A road becomes a public highway within the meaning of a statute authorizing the alteration of public highways<sup>53</sup> either when it has been laid out pursuant to statutory directions,<sup>54</sup> or where it has been used over twenty years as a highway,<sup>55</sup> or where it has been laid out and dedicated to public use as a highway by the owner of the soil, and accepted or ratified as a highway by the township in which it lies.<sup>56</sup> The fact that a highway has not been opened or used will not prevent its alteration if the circumstances require it.<sup>57</sup> The alteration of special classes of highways may be provided for by special statute.<sup>58</sup>

(IV) GROUND OF ALTERATION. Public roads are laid out for the public convenience, and therefore should not be altered, except when the interests of the public require the alteration.<sup>59</sup> If the public interest requires the alteration, 51. Wilson v. Beverly, 103 Mass. 136; Hobart v. Plymouth County, 100 Mass. 159; Gloucester v. Essex County, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 375; Merrill v. Berkshire, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 269.

52. Westport v. Bristol County, 9 Allen (Mass.) 204.

The proper course is for the commissioners to issue the warrant for a jury in the general form to determine the matter of the petitioners' complaint, and to make such of the alterations prayed for therein as may be lawful and meet. Westport v. Bristol County, 9 Allen (Mass.) 204. When the jury is impaneled, it then becomes the duty of the presiding officer to decide, upon the facts as they are made to appear, whether any specific alteration asked is within their power. Westport v. Bristol County, supra.

53. The words "public highway" may be regarded as used to designate and comprehend all roads open to the public, owned by the state, as the ultimate proprietor, for use as highways, maintained at public expense, subject to legislative control, and under the protection and management of governmental agencies, such as counties, townships, or road districts, and to distinguish such highways from others owned by private corporations, and maintained at private expense, as toll roads owned by turnpike or gravel road companies. *Houlton v. Section lines.—Under the South Dakota territorial act of Jan. 12, 1871 (Comp. Laws, § 1189), declaring that all section lines shall be public highways so far as practicable, "provided that nothing in the act shall be so construed as to interfere with existing highways in the settled portions of the territory," a person seeking to prevent the change of a highway must show that it was legally established in a settled portion of the territory, or existed by prescription, at the time such act was passed. Keen v. Fairview Tp., 8 S. D. 558, 67 N. W. 623.

3 Howell Annot. St. Mich. §§ 1365, 1366, providing that when any public highway "which passes along the bank" of any lake, river, or other watercourse, and which is not included in the limits of a city or village, shall, by the washing away of the banks, or from any other cause, become reduced to a width of less than fifty feet, the highway commissioners shall lay out such highway upon adjacent lands to that width, does not refer to highways in which a ditch or other artificial watercourse may be laid, and which may be so reduced in width. *De Lapp v. By "necessity" is not to be understood absolute physical necessity, but so great a public benefit that the want of the way is a great public convenience. Com. v. Cambridge, 7 Mass. 158.

Evidence as to utility of change.—The opinion of a witness as to the public utility of a proposed change of a highway is not admissible as evidence. Thompson v. Deprez, 96 Ind. 67; Yost v. Conroy, 92 Ind. 464, 47 Am. Rep. 156.

Danger from railroad trains.—The fact that a public road cannot be traveled without danger from locomotives and cars operated on a railroad is sufficient to justify the county court in changing the road, however great the inconvenience which may result therefrom to the owners of the lands on which the change is proposed, for which, and for the value of the land taken, they may be compensated. Helm v. Short, 7 Bush (Ky.) 623. Conversely when it appears that a county road gives the public reasonably convenient access to a railroad station, and that it will be made, even at any sacrifice of private interest; but such sacrifice will never be required, except upon the ground of the general good.<sup>60</sup> Conversely if no inconvenience results to the public, the mere fact that the change promotes the interest of an individual will not make such change unlawful.<sup>61</sup>

(v) PROCEEDINGS — (A) In General. Authority under the order to open is exhausted by the action of those to whom it is directed, and cannot be resumed;<sup>62</sup> and a road, once laid, cannot be altered, except by a new and original proceeding, according to the road law.<sup>63</sup> This would be so, even though the boundaries do not precisely conform to the survey.<sup>64</sup> The alteration of a highway must be effected in a regular proceeding for that purpose,<sup>65</sup> and the statutory requirements must be strictly adhered to and complied with,<sup>66</sup> especially in all matters that are intended to affect individuals or the general public with notice.<sup>67</sup> Under some circumstances, however, there may be a legal change in the location of the highway, notwithstanding the want of statutory proceedings.<sup>68</sup> And in some cases it will

a proposed change of the road, so as to make it pass nearer the station, would make the road longer, and render the danger of horses becoming frightened from the trains greater, while it would not make the road itself better, the change is properly refused. Bennett v. Greenup County, 17 S. W. 167, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 349. Conn. Gen. St. § 3489, provides that the railroad commissioners, where the public safety requires it, may order such alterations in any highway crossed at grade by a railroad as they shall deem best. Doolittle v. Branford, 59 Conn. 402, 22 Atl. 336.

Mo. Laws (1893), p. 222, providing the same method of procedure for changing highways as for establishing new ones, authorizes the changing of roads on any ground for which a new road might be established. Turlow v. Ross, 144 Mo. 234, 45 S. W. 1125.

Time of commencing proceedings.—Proceedings by the township commissioner of highways to condemn land for the purpose of altering a highway, under Howell Annot. St. c. 29, §§ 1296–1305, are not irregular and premature because taken during the pendency of certiorari to review a former decision of the commissioner discontinuing such highway, where such decision is afterward held void. Weber v. Road, 8 Kulp (Pa.) 58, holding that proceedings for vacating and relaying part of a road which practically permit the petitioners and the court instead of the viewers to relay the road are fatally defective.

A statute providing for the discontinuance of roads does not apply to cases of alteration of roads. Thompson v. Crabb, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 222.

To make a change from the route of the original view before the road is opened in whole or in part, the proper proceeding is not a petition to change and vacate, but a petition to review, upon which the court is at liberty to adopt the report of the viewers, or that of the reviewers as may seem best. *In re Vernon Tp. be presumed that formal proceedings were taken for the alteration of the highway in question.<sup>69</sup>

(B) Petition and Parties — (1) PETITION — (a) IN GENERAL. Under the provisions of some early statutes an application to change or alter a public highway could be made by motion, provided notice was given, but the later statutes of practically all the states require such application to be made by written petition, the form and contents of which are usually expressly prescribed.<sup>70</sup> It is not necessary that the statutory form be strictly followed. A substantial compliance is sufficient, expressing with reasonable certainty the action desired.<sup>71</sup> The petition must state specifically the object; and that must appear to be clearly within the purview of the act giving the court jurisdiction, otherwise the proceedings are irregular.<sup>72</sup> It should further describe the existing road,<sup>73</sup> the route of the proposed road,<sup>74</sup> the termini thereof,<sup>75</sup> the character of the alterations pro-

the commissioners other land, with a view to effecting a necessary change in the road, and the road is by order of the commissioners opened on the lands conveyed, and is so used by the public and by the proper authorities, there is a legal change in the location of the highway, notwithstanding the want of statutory proceedings for that purpose.

In Kentucky under the provisions of the general statutes an application to open a new road, or to change an old one, could be made by motion, provided the usual notice had been given in writing of the proposed application; but the act of 1894, which is chapter 110 of the Kentucky statutes, made a material change in these proceedings by requiring that such application should be by written petition, signed by at least five landholders of the county, and setting forth a description of the road, etc. Ford v. Collins, 108 Ky. 553, 56 S. section lies a mile in extent on the state line; but if the point in the road where the proposed change is to commence is definitely pointed out, and the line of the change designated, it will be sufficient); Scherer v. Bailey, 34 Ind. Township or county.—A petition for the alteration of a highway must state the township (State v. Convery, 53 N. J. L. 588, 22 Atl. 345; Parkhurst v. Vanderveer, 48 N. J. L. 80, 2 Atl. 771) or county (In re Quemahoning Tp. Road, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 150) in which the proposed road lies. But the omission to name the township in the petition, order of view, and report is not cause for the reversal of an order of confirmation, where the termini are so precisely described in the report as to leave no room for doubt as to the location of the road. In re Quemahoning Tp. Road, supra.

75. Raymond v. Cumberland County, 63 Me. 112; Johns v. Marion County, 4 Ore. 46.

Reasonable certainty is required in defining the termini of the proposed route. In re West Penn Road, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 477.

The caption of a petition may be considered in connection with the petition in determining whether the termini and the names of the township and county are sufficiently stated. In re Quemahoning Tp. Road, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 150.

Description held sufficient see In re Lee, 4 Pennw. (Del.) 576, 60 Atl. 862; Hyde Park v. Norfolk County, 117 Mass. 416.

Where the petition designates other points on the road besides the termini, the proceedings will be set aside on exceptions. In re posed,<sup>76</sup> and whatever else the statute may require.<sup>77</sup> Unless required by statute,<sup>78</sup> it is not necessary that the petition shall contain any averment as to notice,<sup>79</sup> or as to the length<sup>80</sup> or width<sup>81</sup> of the proposed road, or that it will be of public utility.<sup>82</sup> The petition should describe the petitioners, so as to make it appear that they have an interest in the subject-matter of the legal controversy which the petition initiates,<sup>83</sup> and should state the names of the property-owners over whose lands the proposed road is to be located.<sup>84</sup> A new and separate highway cannot be laid out upon an application to alter an existing highway.<sup>85</sup> Nor does a petition to lay out a road give jurisdiction to alter an already existing road.<sup>86</sup> But there is no objection to asking in the same petition for the vacation of one highway and the establishment of another in lieu thereof,<sup>87</sup> unless such alteration will effect such a radical change in the route of the road as practically to amount to a new road.<sup>88</sup>

(b) AMENDMENT. A petition to alter a highway is subject to amendment in a proper case.<sup>89</sup> But the commissioners have no right to amend a petition signed

Dallas Tp. Road, 8 Kulp (Pa.) 58, holding that the viewers should be left free to exercise their own judgment and discretion for the public good rather than be bound or controlled by that of the petitioners for private purposes. But see In re Covington Road, Wilcox (Pa.) 121, holding that in proceedings to vacate and relay part of a road it was not error for the petition to mention other points in the road besides the termini.

76. Raymond v. Cumberland County, 63 Me. 112.

77. Intention to vacate part supplied.—Where the statute does not permit the alteration or change of a portion of a highway without at the same time vacating the part rendered unnecessary by reason of the alteration, the intention to vacate such unnecessary part should be specifically mentioned in the application, and set out on the plans and surveys accompanying the same. In re Washington Pike, 9 Pa. Dist. 52.

To move the discretion of the court, it is proper to recite in the petition the particular defects in the present location of the road (In re Ottercreek Tp. Public Road, 104 Pa. St. 261); but this need not be done (In re Manheim Tp. Road, 12 Pa. Super. Ct. 279).

Residence.—Under the Pennsylvania act of June 13, 1836, a petition to change an old road need not indicate the residence of the petitioners. In re Friendsville, etc., Road, 16 Pa. Co. Ct. 172.

The petition should show that the petitioners are freeholders, and that six of them "reside in the immediate neighborhood of the highway proposed to be located, vacated, or of the change to be made." Conaway v. Ascherman, 94 Ind. 187.

where the change will vacate an existing way running over the lands of more than one person, and relocate it upon the lands held by two or more different owners. And see Wagner v. Mahrt, 32 Wash. 542, 73 Pac. 675.

Consent.—Where the petition does not disclose that consent of the landowner was not had, for the purpose of admitting evidence as to proceedings based upon that petition, it will be presumed that such consent was obtained. Wagner v. Mahrt, 32 Wash. 542, 73 Pac. 675.

Such a petition is not double because it seeks to have a part of an old highway vacated and a new one established in lieu thereof, as a change of highway implies a departure from the road already established and the opening of a new road. Kelley v. Augsperger, 171 Ind. 155, 85 N. E. 1004. The change of a highway necessarily requires the vacation of a portion of the highway and the location of such portion upon a different line, and in this sense a vacation and location are authorized in the same proceeding. Bowers v. Snyder, 88 Ind. 302. And see Patton v. Creswell, 120 Ind. 147, 21 N. E. 663; State v. Burgeson, 108 Wis. 174, 84 N. W. 241.

Berkshire County*, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 423 (holding that a petition to county commissioners to alter a town way according to a report of selectmen, which the town is alleged to have unreasonably refused to accept, may be amended, even after a hearing of the parties on the petition, by striking out the alleged unreasonable neglect of the town, and substituting an allegation of the unreasonable neglect of the selectmen to alter by others, after it has been acted upon by them, and thus confer upon themselves a jurisdiction which they did not possess when the petition was presented.<sup>90</sup>

(2) PARTIES. The proper persons to join in a petition to secure the alteration of a highway must be determined by reference to the particular statute under which the proceeding is brought.<sup>91</sup>

(c) Notice. A proceeding to change a public road requires notice to be given, as in the case of new roads,<sup>92</sup> and there must be proof of this notice in court.<sup>93</sup> Such notice may be required to be given to the parties interested,<sup>94</sup> to the town

In Illinois, under a law authorizing the commissioners of highways to lay out or alter any road upon the petition of not less than twelve legal voters residing within three miles of the road, it was held that the persons joining in a petition to the commissioners must be citizens of the town to be affected by such location or alteration. Warne v. Baker, 35 Ill. 382.

In Indiana, under the act of 1838, § 12, the petitioners for a change of part of a road must own all the land through which the part of the road proposed to be changed runs. Taylor v. Lucas, 8 Blackf. 289.

Under Mass. Pub. St. c. 112, § 129, providing a method for altering the location of highways at railroad crossings, the petition in such case must be brought by the mayor and aldermen of the city or the selectmen of the town in which the crossing is, or by the directors of the railroad corporation. Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Middlesex County, 177 Mass. 511, 59 N. E. 115.

In Missouri, under Wagner St. p. 1129, §§ 56-58, persons wishing for a change in a county road can only apply for it by a petition showing a wish to cultivate their lands. Wilson v. Berkstresser, 45 Mo. 283.

Exceptions to rule.—Where the owners or occupants of the lands to be affected by a proposed alteration in a highway are the petitioners for such alteration, notice of the meeting to decide upon the petition need not be served upon them. *State v. Suppl. 845), or filing a remonstrance (Patton v. Creswell, 120 Ind. 147, 21 N. E. 663), waives the giving of notice.

No notice required for making repairs.—A statute requiring notice to landowners when a highway is altered does not apply to the making of specific repairs. Bigelow v. Worcester, 169 Mass. 390, 48 N. E. 1.

In South Carolina, under the act of 1825, relating to roads, the board of commissioners had power to make alterations in a road without giving notice. *St. Bartholomew's Parish Road Com'rs v. to be affected by such alteration,<sup>95</sup> to the highway commissioner,<sup>96</sup> or to the public generally.<sup>97</sup> The form and contents of the notice, as prescribed by statute, must be substantially complied with.<sup>98</sup>

(D) Remonstrance. The object of requiring notice is to invite objection to the proposed change, and any one whose interest may be affected may contest the matter.<sup>99</sup> And a "remonstrance" is usually expressly provided for.<sup>1</sup> Such a remonstrance, whether against the public utility of the proposed highway or on account of damages, constitutes an answer to the petition and tenders an issue which must be examined by the commissioners.<sup>2</sup> The right to remonstrate against the utility of a road is not waived by first remonstrating on account of damages.<sup>3</sup>

(E) Hearing and Determination. It is the duty of the public officers or court acting upon a petition to alter a highway to make a full investigation, and this involves a hearing and due consideration of all such facts as have a proper bearing on the merits of the petition both for and against.<sup>4</sup> The determination of the matter must be made within a prescribed time from the date of the hearing.<sup>5</sup>

In Delaware the return of the commissioners to a petition for a change in a road should determine what part of the old road should be vacated on opening the new, and who should inclose the same. In re Lee, 4 Pennew. 576, 60 Atl. 862. Such return is not required to state what portion of the costs the persons who inclose the vacated portion ought to pay. In re Lee, supra.

Under Ga. Code, § 603, which provides that road commissioners shall report upon the utility of all applications for new roads, or alterations in old ones, and shall mark out the same, the county commissioners have no power to establish the new road until it has been marked out, and its utility reported, as provided by said law. Cotting v. Culpepper, 79 Ga. 792, 4 S. E. 388.

Ind. Acts (1903), p. 255, c. 145, § 3, requires viewers to "make a report to the board of commissioners and file the same with the auditor of the county, which report shall show the public utility or convenience of the proposed improvement, an estimate of the costs and expenses thereof, the damages assessed to the several tracts of lands, the benefits of each 40 acres or less tract of land where such exists, and give a description of the work proposed, the grade, drains, culverts, kind of improvement, the commencement and terminus of the road." Spaulding v. Mott, 167 Ind. 58, 76 N. E. 620. The report is not required to contain a statement of the necessity for widening the highway. Spaulding v. Mott, supra.

In Kentucky the report of commissioners appointed to view a proposed change of a road must show whose land will be affected by the change, and also the public and private conveniences and inconveniences of the old and new roads. Poston v. Terry, 5 J. J. Marsh. 220. It must describe the route by metes and bounds, and by courses and distances (Craig v. North, 3 Metc. 187; Garrett v. Hedges, 17 S. W. 871, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 647), and must show what amount of land is to be taken for the purposes of the road, as well as its precise locality (Craig v. North, supra). A report giving the courses and distances of a single line run on the proposed route is a substantial compliance with the statute, which requires the report to describe the route laid out and reported by metes and bounds, and by general courses and distances. Tingle v. Tingle, 12 Bush 160. The viewers are not expressly required to name, in their report, the persons through whose land the road may be proposed to run. Gashweller v. McIlvoy, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 84.

The New Jersey Road Act requires of the surveyors of highways, when acting under appointment of the court, to determine on the necessity for the road applied for. If they determine it to be a matter of public need, they are required to lay the road "as it may appear to them to be most for the public and private convenience, having a regard to the best ground for a road, and the shortest distance, in such a manner as to do the least injury to private property," and they must certify in their return that they have observed these statutory directions. If they fail to so certify, the court, in reviewing their proceedings, will presume that they have neglected the statutory requirements, and set aside their return for that reason. Hampton v. Poland, 50 N. J. L. 367, 13 Atl. 174; Roth v. Yauger, 29 N. J. L. 384; Brock v. Lippincott, 25 N. J. L. 434. A map of the road vacated must accompany the return, as well as a map of the road laid out. The road vacated must be described in the return with as much certainty as that laid out. Brock v. Lippincott, supra.

Under the Pennsylvania statute the report of a jury of view should state the courses and distances of the road altered. In re validity of their report,<sup>12</sup> but it will be presumed to have been made in conformity with the statute, where nothing to the contrary appears.<sup>13</sup> The report of the viewers is not conclusive and final,<sup>14</sup> but is subject to the approval of the court.<sup>15</sup> When insufficient,<sup>16</sup> or incorrect in form or detail,<sup>17</sup> the report may be recommitted or referred back for correction.

(G) Order or Judgment — (1) IN GENERAL. The order for the alteration of a highway must be for such a way as the one described in the petition.<sup>18</sup> The order should preferably follow the terms of the statute, but if it substantially conforms thereto, it will be sufficient.<sup>19</sup> Such an order is usually required to contain a description of the highway so altered,<sup>20</sup> and the kind of improvement to be Londongrove Road, 2 Lanc. L. Rev. 160. But the omission to designate the township in which the road is situated is not such an irregularity as will justify reversal, where the petition and order designate the township in which the road begins and ends, and there is no uncertainty as to its location. In re Manheim Tp. Road, 12 Pa. Super. Ct. 279. Moreover it must state briefly the improvements through which the old road passes. In re West Penn Road, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 477. It should fix the termini at some fixed and permanent object, and a slight change of termini for the purpose of starting from some fixed object will not invalidate the action of the viewers. In re Friendsville Road, 16 Pa. Co. Ct. 172. The act of June 13, 1836, requires that the report of viewers should set forth inter alia that they were severally sworn or affirmed. In re West Penn Road, supra. But there is nothing in the act which requires the oath taken by the viewers to be in writing and attached to the report. In re West Penn Road, supra. Neither is it necessary to attach to the report the copy of the notice posted, or the proof of said posting. It is sufficient if the report sets forth that the notice of the proposed meeting was duly put up at least ten days before the time of meeting in the vicinity of the place to be viewed. In re West Penn Road, supra.

The inclusion of matters upon which the viewers are not authorized to pass renders the report irregular and illegal. In re Sunbury Borough Church St., 8 Pa. Dist. 457. But where the tribunal appointing the viewers had power to authorize them to do what they actually did, it may subsequently ratify such unauthorized acts. Hark v. Gladwell, 49 Wis. 172, 5 N. W. 323

12. Craig v. North, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 187; Fowler v. Larabee, 59 N. J. L. 259, 35 Atl. 911.

Description of proposed route.—A statute regulating the alteration of public roads requires the utmost attainable certainty in the description to be given by the viewers of the route of the proposed alteration. Craig v. North, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 187. But see Robson v. Ryler, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 374, 37 S. W. 872, holding that the degree of certainty required in the description of the road is not the highest, but only such as is reasonable. If the description be such as that the places designated will enable persons familiar with the locality to locate the way with reasonable certainty, it will be deemed sufficient.

Mere ambiguity and lack of precision of statement, if, in substance, the order was complied with, is not a sufficient ground to quash the proceedings. In re Brecknock Tp. Road, 2 Woodw. (Pa.) 13.

13. Heagy v. Black, 90 Ind. 534, holding that if the report be favorable, and silent as to the public utility of the location or change, or if they do not report that the location or change is not of public utility, it should be presumed that they deemed it of public utility.

14. In re Penn Tp. Cove Road, 8 Pa. Dist. 391 (holding that the fact that the road as relocated requires a retaining wall, which, as erected, is of doubtful integrity, presents a reason for non-approval of the report of viewers); Robson v. Byler, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 374, 37 S. W. 872.

15. In re Penn Tp. Cove Road, 8 Pa. Dist. 391.

The report of viewers is not prima facie evidence of the matters therein contained, but is merely intended to aid the court, and may be by it rejected in whole or in part, either on its own knowledge, or after hearing opposing evidence. Bennett v. Greenup County, 17 S. W. 167, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 349.

16. Fowler v. Larabee, 59 N. J. L. 259, 35 Atl. 911, failure to assess damages.

Clerical errors.—The report of a jury of view laying out a road and vacating an old road, thereby rendering it useless, should state the courses and distances of the road vacated; but such omission is merely a clerical error, and may be corrected by referring the report back. In re Londongrove Road, 2 Lanc. L. Rev. (Pa.) 160.

19. Cox v. East Fork Tp. Highway Com'rs, 194 Ill. 355, 62 N. E. 791; Mitchell v. Thornton, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 164.

Surplusage.—If a statement improperly included in an order may be treated as surplusage, the remainder of the order will not be affected. Tolono Highway Com'rs v. Bear, 224 Ill. 259, 79 N. E. 581.

20. Levee Dist No. 9 v. Farmer, 101 Cal. 178, 35 Pac. 569, 23 L. R. A. 388 (holding that an order of the board of supervisors laying out a new road, and vacating an old made.<sup>21</sup> The order need not be absolute, but may be made to depend upon a future contingency;<sup>22</sup> but it should be specific and not in the alternative.<sup>23</sup> A void order may be set aside or vacated at a subsequent term ex mero motu,<sup>24</sup> or at the instance of a party aggrieved.<sup>25</sup> But a valid order cannot be vacated at a subsequent term.<sup>26</sup>

(2) FILING AND RECORD. As the altering of a road necessarily vacates at least a part of the old road, there ought to be some record by which it can be determined what was vacated and what was newly established;<sup>27</sup> and provision for the recording of the order of alteration is often expressly made.<sup>28</sup>

(3) CONCLUSIVENESS AND COLLATERAL ATTACK—(a) IN GENERAL. The rule that a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction cannot be collaterally attacked in any other court for irregularity has been applied by many courts to the orders of county officers exercising their statutory authority in proceedings for the altering of a public highway.<sup>29</sup> Much less can a fact necessary to confer jurisdiction, which is found and made a part of the proceedings, be collaterally denied and put in issue.<sup>30</sup> If, however, the order or judgment is wholly void it is impeachable in collateral proceedings.<sup>31</sup> The jurisdiction of the local authorities to alter one, is not void because it fails to show on its face that there is any connection or relation between the two roads, if the surveys and descriptions of the new and the old roads show the connection); State v. Burgeson, 108 Wis. 174, 84 N. W. 241.

The description cannot be aided by extrinsic evidence of the intention of those who laid out the highway as changed. Rud v. Pope County, 66 Minn. 358, 68 N. W. 1062, 69 N. W. 886.

Remedy for uncertainty in description.—Uncertainty in the description of the intended change occurring in an order directing a change in the location of a highway may be remedied by motion before the commissioners, or, failing this, at the final order of the common pleas; but it is not ground for a dismissal of proceedings. Daggy v. Coats, 19 Ind. 259.

Misdescriptions in the order will not vitiate the same if, taking the whole location together with the description and plan, the way intended can be identified and constructed with reasonable certainty. Gilkey v. Watertown, 141 Mass. 317, 5 N. E. 152.

21. Spaulding v. Mott, 167 Ind. 58, 76 N. E. 620, holding that where the report of the viewers, in proceedings under Acts (1903), p. 255, c. 145, for the improvement of a public highway, contained plans and specifications for the improvement and was made a part of the order of the board of commissioners directing the improvement, the order sufficiently stated the kind of improvement to be made.

Norfolk County*, 114 Mass. 583, holding that the contingent part of the order, if void, does not affect the validity of the alteration. But see Williams v. Mitchell, 49 Wis. 284, 5 N. W. 798.

If the condition is against public policy, it will render the order void. State v. Ryan, 127 Wis. 599, 106 N. W. 1093.

Construction of statutory provisions.—In some states the statute requiring an order of alteration to be filed in the offices of the town and county clerks within a specified time is held merely directory (Hark v. Gladwell, 49 Wis. 172, 5 N. W. 323), and the alteration is lawful, although the order is not filed as required (White v. Morris, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 2; Boston v. Brazer, 11 Mass. 447). roads is generally considered special and limited, and consequently all the essential facts necessary to confer jurisdiction to make the alteration must appear on the face of the record.<sup>32</sup> But where the court has general jurisdiction of the subject of alteration of roads,<sup>33</sup> or where jurisdiction is established upon the record,<sup>34</sup> then all reasonable intendments will be made in favor of the regularity and validity of the proceedings. In some states an order altering a highway is made by statute prima facie evidence of the regularity of all proceedings prior thereto,<sup>35</sup> subject to rebuttal by any person questioning the validity of such proceedings.<sup>36</sup>

(b) BAR TO SECOND APPLICATION. It is provided by statute in some states that upon the final determination of proceedings to alter a highway, no other proceedings shall be had, nor any petition entertained, in regard to the same road, for a limited time thereafter.<sup>37</sup> Such a limitation does not include a decision refusing to alter,<sup>38</sup> or a decision reversing or setting aside an order to alter.<sup>39</sup>

(H) Defects and Objections. As a general rule all objections to alteration proceedings must be made before the inferior tribunal,<sup>40</sup> and if not so presented they will be considered by the appellate court to have been waived.<sup>41</sup>

In New Jersey section eleven of the act of 1799 provided as follows: "That it shall not be lawful for any court to appoint surveyors of the highways to lay cut, vacate or alter any road oftener than once in the course of the same year, except where the return of said surveyors shall have been set aside for irregularity or illegality of procedure." To this act a supplement was passed in 1807 (Pamphl. Laws, p. 70), providing for the appointment of freeholders, and if they should certify that the road was necessary, such certificate should be binding; but if they found it unnecessary, then the road was to be vacated, and could not be again applied for under the term of one year. Since the road acts of 1818 and 1846, repealing the act of 1799, do not prohibit a second appointment of surveyors for the alteration of a highway within one year after the road is applied for, such application may be allowed within the year. *Smock v. (1) Supervision of Courts — (1) IN GENERAL. Where county authorities alter a public road in the mode pointed out by law, courts will not interfere with the exercise of their discretion unless it is manifestly abused.<sup>42</sup> Mere errors made by them, or irregularities in their proceedings, are reviewable only upon appeal, when permitted by statute,<sup>43</sup> or certiorari,<sup>44</sup> and do not form a proper foundation for a bill in equity.<sup>45</sup>

(2) APPEAL. An appeal is a purely statutory remedy, and only exists in those cases specified or reasonably implied by the statutes; and this is true of appeals in proceedings to alter highways.<sup>46</sup> Being purely statutory it must be taken as the statute directs, and all the jurisdictional requisites must be complied with.<sup>47</sup> When conferred the right of appeal is usually limited to persons interested,<sup>48</sup> or

Mass. Rev. St. c. 24, § 71, provides that, on the refusal or neglect of the selectmen to make an alteration upon petition, an appeal will lie from their decision to the county commissioners. New Marlborough v. Berkshire County, 9 Mete. 423.

1 N. Y. Rev. St. 518 provides that every person who shall conceive himself aggrieved by any determination of the commissioners of highways, either in laying out, altering, or discontinuing, or in refusing to lay out, alter or discontinue any road, may appeal to any three of the judges of the court of common pleas. People v. Harris, 63 N. Y. 391; People v. Cortland County Judges, 24 Wend. 491. By the statute of 1847 (c. 455), the appeal was required to be made to the county judges, by whom referees were to be appointed to hear the appeal, and the same powers and duties before devolved upon the judges were devolved upon them. People v. Harris, supra; People v. Newgass, 12 N. Y. St. 760.

In Pennsylvania no appeal lies from the decree of the court of quarter sessions in the case of a street or road. In re Chestnut St., 86 Pa. St. 88.

47. See cases cited infra, this note.

Filing copy of notice of appeal.—Under Minn. Laws (1895), c. 54, which requires a copy of the notice of appeal from a change in the location of a highway to be filed with the clerk of each town in which such highway may be situated, the district court can acquire no jurisdiction of the subject-matter without such filing. Hagemeyer v. Wright County, 71 Minn. 42, 73 N. W. 628. The jurisdictional thing is the fact of filing, and not the proof of it; so that proof of the fact may be made, if the question is raised on appeal. Hagemeyer v. Wright County, supra.

Appeal-bond.—In Indiana, where an appeal is taken to the circuit court by remonstrants from an order of the board of county commissioners directing a change in a highway, the appeal-bond must be approved by the county auditor; and if not so approved the appeal may be dismissed. Scotten v. Divilbiss, 46 Ind. 301.

Time for taking appeal.—Under Vt. Rev. Laws, § 2940, providing that a landowner dissatisfied with the alteration of a highway by selectmen may petition the county court, at the next term, "if there is time for notice," if not, at the succeeding term, for commissioners to rehear the cause, the petition need not be brought to the first term if, in addition to the time for notice, there is not reasonable time for considering the case and preparing papers. Crook v. Bradford, 65 Vt. 513, 27 Atl. 118.

48. Who are "persons interested."—In Missouri only those whose private rights are affected — whose property is taken — have the power of appeal. Foster v. Dunklin, 44 Mo. 216; Cooper County v. Geyer, 19 Mo. 257. It is said that perhaps twelve remonstrants might appeal if they sustained no special damage, because of their statutory right to remonstrate. Schroeder v. Jabin, 94 Mo. App. 111, 67 S. W. 949. But if fewer than twelve would appeal, they must show a special injury that will be sustained by them, besides what the public at large will sustain. Schroeder v. Jabin, supra. In Illinois one not owning land upon that part of a highway reaggrieved,<sup>49</sup> or who consider themselves aggrieved.<sup>50</sup> This appellate jurisdiction does not involve the right to review the discretion of the commissioners or lower court,<sup>51</sup> unless there has been a manifest abuse thereof.<sup>52</sup> Under some of the statutes, the appellate court has jurisdiction only of matters of law arising on the record;<sup>53</sup> under others such court must try the cause upon its merits, and not as a court of error.<sup>54</sup> located, and who has no interest in the alteration of the road as a thoroughfare, and who is not a taxpayer, is not "a person interested" in the proposed alteration. Brown v. Robertson, 123 Ill. 631, 15 N. E. 30 [affirming 23 Ill. App. 461]. In Iowa an order for the removal of a road, upon payment of damages by the petitioners therefor, gives a sufficiency of private interest, as contradistinguished from that of the public, to permit of an appeal being taken. Spray v. Thompson, 9 Iowa 40.

49. Who are "persons aggrieved."—The owner of lands through or along which the highway runs is a party aggrieved, entitled to appeal and to have his damages assessed, if any were occasioned by the alteration of the road, although the injury he suffers is of the same nature as that shared in common by the other inhabitants. Wendt v. Minnetrista, 87 Minn. 403, 92 N. W. 404. But see Chandler v. Commonwealth R. Com'rs, 141 Mass. 208, 5 N. E. 509. Both the petitioners for an alteration of a highway (Emery v. Pembroke, 55 N. H. 229) and the remonstrants (Bond v. Mullins, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 282) are entitled to appeal under a statute giving this remedy to "persons aggrieved."

No distinction between "any party aggrieved" and "a party aggrieved" see Chandler v. Commonwealth R. Com'rs, 141 Mass. 208, 5 N. E. 509.

Where the general public is aggrieved by an alteration in a road, the county attorney may prosecute an appeal in their behalf. Com. v. Kimberlin, 8 Bush (Ky.) 444.

Under the English Highway Act of 1835 (5 & 6 Wm. IV, c. 20) §§ 85, 89, where, on an appeal against a certificate for the diversion of a highway, the jury find in answer to questions left to them, that the proposed new highway would be more commodious to the public, but that the parties appealing would be injured or aggrieved by the diversion, the appeal must be allowed notwithstanding the first finding of the jury. Walker v. York, [1906] 1 K. B. 724, 70 J. P. 270, 75 L. J. K. B. 413, 4 Loc. Gov. 524, 94 L. T. Rep. N. S. 744, 22 T. L. R. 456, 54 Wkly. Rep. 493 [reversing 69 J. P. 304].

50. Under Wis. Rev. St. § 1776, any freeholder of the town who "considers" himself aggrieved may appeal from an order altering a highway, and he need not own land affected by the highway, or have any special interest therein. State v. Wheeler, 97 Wis. 96, 72 N. W. 225.

Evidence.—Since the case is tried de novo in the appellate court, a report of viewers appointed to pass on the advisability of a change in a highway is inadmissible in evidence on an appeal from an order entered on their report directing the change. Freck v. Christian, 55 Ind. 320. And see Daggy v. Coats, 19 Ind. 259. The case is to be heard upon facts existing at the time the hearing is had. Rector v. Clark, 78 N. Y. 21 [reversing 12 Hun 189]. Upon such hearing the appellant cannot attack the regularity of the proceedings before the commissioners. Rector v. Clark, supra; People v. McNeil, 2 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 140; People v. Newgass, 12 N. Y. St. 760.

55. Appeal.—Certiorari is ordinarily not available when the right of appeal exists (Grinstead v. Wilson, 69 Ark. 587, 65 S. W. 108; Spray v. Thompson, 9 Iowa 40); but where it appears that petitioner has lost his right of appeal without his fault, he may have a remedy by certiorari (Grinstead v. Wilson, supra).

tion.<sup>57</sup> But the decision upon the necessity of the alteration, and the manner in which it shall be made, and the limits of it, is final, and will not be considered.<sup>58</sup> The application for a certiorari is always addressed to the sound discretion of the court.<sup>59</sup> It is to be granted, not as a matter of right, for the purpose of enabling a party to reverse proceedings for mere errors of form, or technical objections, but only where substantial injustice has been done to the party seeking redress.<sup>60</sup> The time also of making the application for a certiorari,<sup>61</sup> and the whole circumstances of the case, and particularly the consequences resulting from a reversal of the proceedings, have a material influence upon the action of the court in such cases.<sup>62</sup> As a rule the writ is available only to one who is directly interested in the proceedings sought to be reversed and who will suffer a special injury.<sup>63</sup> The trial is solely by inspection of the record, no inquiry as to any matter not appearing by the record being permissible.<sup>64</sup> If the errors are such as to demand it, the judgment should be that the proceedings below be quashed.<sup>65</sup>

(J) Costs. In proceedings before the county commissioners for the alteration of a town way costs are discretionary with the commissioners,<sup>66</sup> and a writ of certiorari will not be granted for the purpose of revising their adjudication as to such costs.<sup>67</sup> On appeal by one of the petitioners for the alteration of a highway he

Effect of laches.—As a general rule, applications for a certiorari are not to be granted where a party, with full knowledge of the course of the proceedings, by his own laches, has neglected to avail himself of the proper opportunity to arrest the action of the inferior tribunal, while the case was in its incipient stages, and before any mischievous consequences would result from setting aside the proceedings. Watertown v. Middlesex County, 176 Mass. 22, 56 N. E. 971; Whately v. Franklin County, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 336.

The parties cannot lie by and permit great expenditures to be incurred, the benefits of which they will, to some considerable extent, enjoy, and then avoid all responsibility for the payment of those expenditures, by quashing those proceedings under which the expenditures were ordered. Whately v. Franklin County, supra.

In reference to the subject of notice to the town or parties interested in the proposed location of a highway, although there has been a plain and obvious defect in not complying with the statute provisions as to notice of the time of making the location, yet this defect may be waived by the conduct of the party interested, and in such case it is too late to take the exception after the road is actually made and heavy expenditures have been made. *Board of Sup'rs v. (VI) OPERATION AND EFFECT. It has been repeatedly decided that an alteration by competent authority of an existing road or way operates as a discontinuance of such portions of the old road as are not embraced within the limits fixed for the new one,<sup>69</sup> and no special order of discontinuance is necessary.<sup>70</sup> There are, however, certain cases in which alteration will not have this effect, as where the old road is not thereby rendered unnecessary;<sup>71</sup> where there is strictly no alteration, but rather the establishment of a new road;<sup>72</sup> or where there is no record to show that an alteration was intended.<sup>73</sup> In any case the old road continues the public highway until the new is laid out and made practicable.<sup>74</sup> Where a road has no ground for a writ of certiorari to remove the record of their proceedings in altering the way conformably to such petition.

Morris, etc.*, R. Co., 19 N. J. Eq. 386 (holding that the vacation of a public highway which crosses another public street or highway, even where for a short distance it runs along the highway so crossed, where the two highways are parts of different routes, will not vacate the part of the road crossed by the highways so vacated).

72. Vedder v. Marion County, 28 Oreg. 77, 36 Pac. 535, 41 Pac. 3, holding that the establishment of a new road upon a petition for the establishment of such road, and also for the vacation of an old road, does not operate to vacate the latter, where the new road does not lie within the termini of the old one, and connects with it only at one end.

73. Johnson v. Wyman, 9 Gray (Mass.) 186, holding that, in the absence of any record of the laying out of either way, evidence of the construction and subsequent repair of the new way by public authority does not necessarily presuppose the discontinuance of the old one.

74. Lawson v. Shreveport Waterworks Co., 111 La. 73, 35 So. 390; Witter v. Damitz, 81 Wis. 385, 51 N. W. 575. See also Heagy v. Black, 90 Ind. 534; Keystone Bridge Co. v. Summers, 13 W. Va. 476.

The neglect of the town authorities to put such new highway in fit condition to be traveled cannot deprive the public of the right to use the old highway. Witter v. Damitz, 81 Wis. 385, 51 N. W. 575.

By statute it is sometimes provided that before a public road can be vacated by the opening of a new road in accordance with the statute for changing and vacating, it must appear that the new road is open and in good condition, and an order vacating the old road must have been made. Phelps v. Pacific R. Co., 51 Mo. 477. Under such statute an order shutting up the old road before the new one is opened is void, and a subsequent order setting aside the first furnishes no ground for been discontinued by the effect of an alteration therein, it can be reëstablished only by the proper statutory proceedings,<sup>75</sup> or by the dedication of the owner.<sup>76</sup>

b. Relocation. Under the Massachusetts statute, the county commissioners are authorized to relocate or locate anew any road laid out by the authority of a town, or otherwise, either for the purpose of establishing the boundaries, or of making alterations in the course or width of the same.<sup>77</sup> Under this authority the commissioners may make some departure from the old or existing boundaries,<sup>78</sup> and so much of the old road as is not included within the new lines is thereby discontinued.<sup>79</sup> To relocate is the same thing as to locate anew;<sup>80</sup> and under a petition to relocate the commissioners may widen a road and change its grade, and include within its boundaries new strips of land, and exclude other strips.<sup>81</sup> All the expenses of locating anew may be assessed upon the petitioners, the town, or the county, as the commissioners may order.<sup>82</sup>

2. VACATION<sup>83</sup> — a. Power to Vacate — (i) BY LEGISLATIVE ACT. Public highways are created by statute either directly or through delegated power, and are under full control of the legislature.<sup>84</sup> While this control is, as regards vacation generally, exercised through the instrumentality of local governmental subdivisions of the state,<sup>85</sup> the legislature may, in the absence of constitutional limitations,<sup>86</sup> discontinue highways by direct legislative act.<sup>87</sup>

The word "relocate," without addition or qualification, means to locate again, and implies a preservation of the identity of the way without material change. Bennett v. Wellesley, 189 Mass. 308, 75 N. E. 717.

Distinguished from alteration.—A relocation of the way under Rev. Laws, c. 48, § 12, is a different proceeding in law from an alteration of a way under section 1 or section 65 of the same chapter, although a relocation may sometimes include an alteration in the course or width of the way, and an alteration under section 1 or section 65 may sometimes involve, at least in part, a kind of relocation. Holbrook v. Douglas, 200 Mass. 94, 85 N. E. 854. The jurisdiction of the county commissioners to act under one section or the other is determined by the language of the petition, interpreted in its application to the way referred to. *Holbrook v. 78. Cambridge v. Middlesex County, 167 Mass. 137, 44 N. E. 1089.

The main purpose of locating anew or relocating is to establish the boundary lines of a road which are in doubt or dispute. Bennett v. Wellesley, 189 Mass. 308, 75 N. E. 717; Tufts v. Somerville, 122 Mass. 273. Relocating is not intended to be used as a method of making important changes in a way.

(B) Roads in Two Jurisdictions. A highway in two counties, located by the commissioners of both counties acting jointly, cannot be discontinued, in whole or in part, by one of said boards acting separately.<sup>95</sup>

The commissioners in such cases must act in concert, and the road cannot be vacated in either county until it is so ordered in both. Lamansky v. Williams, 125 Iowa 578, 101 N. W. 445.

continuous thoroughfares extending to other towns.<sup>97</sup> The fact that the vote is conditional has been held not to make the vacation void.<sup>98</sup>

b. What Roads May Be Vacated — (i) IN GENERAL. Where statutes confer general authority to vacate public highways, it is immaterial how such highways originated, whether by long usage,<sup>99</sup> dedication,<sup>1</sup> or under authority of a special charter.<sup>2</sup> The application to vacate may be limited to a part of a road,<sup>3</sup> and in such case it is lawful to vacate such part only;<sup>4</sup> but the vacation cannot lawfully be less extensive than the application.<sup>5</sup> In the absence of express statutory authority,<sup>6</sup> that where the vote of a town was "to rescind all action taken by the selectmen relating" to a proposed highway, and the "action taken by the selectmen" was the laying out of the highway in question, the purpose of the vote was sufficiently stated to be the discontinuance of the highway; Currier v. Davis, 68 N. H. 596, 41 Atl. 239 (holding, however, that a highway originating by user cannot be discontinued by a town without the consent of the court); Drew v. Cotton, 68 N. H. 22, 42 Atl. 239; Thompson v. Major, 58 N. H. 242 (holding that where a highway laid out by a town subsequently became a part of a new town, the latter town could discontinue the same as if laid out by its own selectmen).

In Connecticut a town in town meeting cannot discontinue a highway. Greist v. Amrhyh, 80 Conn. 280, 68 Atl. 521.

In New Hampshire the consent of the supreme judicial court to the discontinuance of highways by towns is necessary in all cases, except where the highway was laid out by the selectmen; and the exception does not include highways existing by prescription, it not being made to appear that they were laid out by the selectmen. In re Campton, 41 N. H. 197.

A public landing is not a way, and a town has no power to discontinue it. Com. v. Tucker, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 44.

Actual shutting up of road is unnecessary to render vacation effectual. Coakley v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 159 Mass. 32, 33 N. E. 930.

Alteration.—A statute providing that "a town, at a meeting regularly called for the purpose, may discontinue any town way or private way," does not authorize a town, by a mere vote, to alter one of the boundary lines of a town way, and discontinue that portion of the way which lies outside of the newly located line. Such action can properly be taken only by a tribunal proceeding judicially, after notice thereof to the landowners along the way. Lincoln v. Warren, 150 Mass. 309, 23 N. E. 45.

The private interest of the voters does not debar them from voting, or the town from acting. New London v. Davis, 73 N. H. 72, 59 Atl. 369.

Time when vote takes effect.—A vote absolute in its terms takes effect from its passage, although the meeting at which it is passed may be adjourned to a subsequent day. Bigelow v. Hillman, 37 Me. 52. Whether such a vote can be reconsidered after the rights of third persons have intervened quære. Bigelow v. Hillman, supra.

97. Drew v. Cotton, 68 N. H. 22, 42 Atl. 239; Styles v. Victoria, 8 Brit. Col. 406.

98. See cases cited infra, this note.

For example the general discontinuing power may be exercised to take effect at a time subsequent to the vote, or when another highway shall be laid out and constructed to take the place of the old one. Coakley v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 159 Mass. 32, 33 N. E. 930; New London v. Davis, 73 N. H. 72, 59 Atl. 369.

Whether the condition is precedent or subsequent depends on the intent of the parties. Sears v. Fuller, 137 Mass. 326.

Effect of illegal proviso.—A proviso in the vote of discontinuance empowering abutting owners to use the way as a private way for their especial use does not render the discontinuance void, even if the proviso itself is illegal, as converting a town way into a private way, where the town thereafter ceased to work the road, and posted notice that it was not a public way. Coakley v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 159 Mass. 32, 33 N. E. 930.

2. State v. Snedeker, 30 N. J. L. 80.

Where a turnpike road has been abandoned for many years by the company which built it, and has been used by the public as an ordinary highway, and repaired at the public expense, it becomes subject to the laws concerning roads, and the surveyors of the highways have power to vacate it. The power and jurisdiction of the surveyors over such a highway is the same as they have over any other highway, except only as to those holding under the turnpike company, and entitled to their chartered rights. State v. Snedeker, 30 N. J. L. 80.

3. Condict v. Ramsey, 65 N. J. L. 503, 47 see State v. Bassett, 33 N. J. L. 26.

4. State v. Bassett, 33 N. J. L. 26.

Any portion of a road which is useless is a road for all the purposes of exercising authority for its discontinuance, and may be discontinued without affecting the residue. People v. Nichols, 51 N. Y. 470; In re Swanson St., 163 Pa. St. 323, 30 Atl. 207. And see State v. Bassett, 33 N. J. L. 26.

In Indiana the statute not only confers the authority in general terms to vacate highways, but expressly provides for the vacation of a highway, "or any part thereof." Hughes v. Beggs, 114 Ind. 427, 16 N. E. 817.

mere private ways are of course not subject to vacation by the public authorities.<sup>7</sup> The vacation of particular classes of roads may be provided for by special statutes.<sup>8</sup>

(II) ROADS LAID OUT BUT NOT OPENED. In the absence of any statutory limitation relating thereto,<sup>9</sup> a highway is subject to discontinuance after it has been laid out and recorded, although it has never been opened,<sup>10</sup> where the original occasion for it has ceased by reason of the opening of another highway, or where there has been a material change as to its necessity;<sup>11</sup> and in some states express statutory provision is made for the vacation of highways laid out and recorded, but not opened.<sup>12</sup>

In Pennsylvania the act of 1836 prohibits the courts from vacating streets laid out by private persons, even after dedication to public use. In re Streets in Wayne, 2 Del. Co. 115. The act of April 21, 1846, extends the power of the court to all roads, public or private, except private ways resting in express grant, the evidence of which is still existing. In re Streets in Wayne, supra.

Lateral road.—Ky. Gen. St. c. 110, authorizes the county court to close up any lateral road when running within one mile of a turnpike or plank road. Bradbury v. Walton, 94 Ky. 163, 21 S. W. 869, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 823. Such a provision has been construed not to apply to a lateral road which, in one direction, has no common terminus with the other road, wherefore one of them could not reasonably subserve the purposes of the other. Shuck v. Lebanon, etc., Turnpike Road Co., 9 Bush (Ky.) 168.

9. See cases cited infra, this note.

New York; four years.—By section 9 of chapter 455 of the Laws of 1847, when the referees "shall make any decision laying out, altering or discontinuing any road in whole or in part," it shall be the duty of the commissioners to carry out the decision, etc., "and such decision shall remain unaltered for the term of four years from the time the same shall have been filed in the office of the town clerk." People v. Pike, 18 How. Pr. 70. The affirmance of the decision of the commissioners is making a decision laying out the road, within the meaning of that provision. People v. Pike, supra. The policy of the provision is to prevent litigation for the period specified in regard to the road, after the decision on appeal; and it is applicable to a case of affirmance of a decision of the commissioners laying out, as to a case where they have refused, and the referees have laid out the road. People v. Pike, supra. By a similar provision in the Revised Statutes, when the appeal was to the judges, "no road which has been fixed by the decision of the judges, on appeal to them, shall be discontinued or altered," for the time therein mentioned, etc. This relates to cases of affirmance, as well as reversal and laying out. People v. Pike, supra.

In Pennsylvania, where a road has been laid out according to law, and adequate compensation has been paid to the owners of the land, it will not be vacated against the protest of the original petitioners on petition presented within two years. In re Spring Tp. Road, 2 Woodw. 179. When a public road has been laid out and opened, it is improper to entertain proceedings to vacate within sixty days after its completion, and before its usefulness can be fairly tested by the community. In re Cassville Road, 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 212.

Wisconsin; one year.—Under Wis. Rev. St. c. 19, § 83, a town meeting has no jurisdiction over the subject of abandoning highways, and even the supervisors cannot vacate a road within one year after laying it out. Brock v. Hishen, 40 Wis. 674.

In Pennsylvania, the nineteenth section of the act of 1836 provides, "that roads laid out and confirmed, but not opened, may be vacated and annulled upon the petition of a majority of the original petitioners for the said road, within the respective counties in the same manner as other roads may be vacated." In re Greenwich Tp. Road, 11 Pa. St. 186; In re Heath Tp., etc., Road, 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 254. There is nothing in the act of 1836 which would authorize such a proceeding where the road is in part opened. In re Greenwich Tp. Road, supra; In re Heath Tp., etc., Road, supra. But an application will not be defeated by merely showing that the road has been worked on by the public authorities. It must appear that part of the road has actually been opened for safe and convenient public travel. In re Heath Tp., etc., Road, supra. This want of authority to vacate roads opened in part produced the act of May 3, 1855, authorizing the courts

c. Grounds For Discontinuance — (1) IN GENERAL. Public highways cannot be vacated unless they are useless, inconvenient, or burdensome.<sup>13</sup> In determining whether or not a highway is useless, the question is not what is the opinion of the greatest number of people, but what are the facts as to the actual use of, and necessity for, the road.<sup>14</sup> Although a road is useless in itself, yet if it is intersected by or is the terminus of other public roads, it should not be vacated.<sup>15</sup> to change or vacate such roads, but this law expressly excepted state roads authorized by a special law. In re Phoenixville State Road, 52 Pa. St. 161. A road opened for a distance of eighty-five feet, wide enough for ordinary travel, and cleared and graded, is "opened in part," whether any travel goes over it or not, within the act of May 3, 1855 (Pamphl. Laws 422), allowing the appointment of viewers to vacate such roads. In re Union Tp. Road, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. 433.

13. Com. v. Roxbury, 8 Mass. 457; Matter of Coe, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 549, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 910; In re Howland, 108 N. Y. Suppl. 1122; People v. Pike, 18 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 70; In re Sewickley Tp. Road, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 170, holding that under the Pennsylvania act of June 13, 1836 (Pamphl. Laws 558), § 18, the court cannot vacate a road, unless it has become useless, inconvenient, or burdensome, and can take no action on a mere statement by viewers in their report that they "are of the opinion that the same is becoming useless and inconvenient on account of the construction of a coal tipple and railroad siding."

Meaning of "useless."—A statute authorizing the discontinuance of a highway as "useless" has been held to mean "practically useless," and not "absolutely useless." Matter of Trask, 45 Misc. (N. Y.) 244, 92 N. Y. Suppl. 156; In re Howland, 108 N. Y. Suppl. 1122. Compare Matter of Coe, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 549, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 910. Nor does it mean a uselessness existing at the laying out of the highway. People v. Griswold, 67 N. Y. 59; People v. Mills, 8 N. Y. St. 734 [affirmed in 109 N. Y. 69, 15 N. E. 886].

The Ohio statute (Swan Rev. St. p. 810, § 53) requires the concurrence of two circumstances to authorize township trustees to vacate a township road: (1) That the road shall have become useless; and (2) that no injustice shall be done by its vacation. De Forest v. Wheeler, 5 Ohio St. 286.

In Pennsylvania the power of the quarter sessions to vacate the whole or part of a road laid out and opened can be exercised only when the road becomes useless, inconvenient, and burdensome. If laid out but not opened, it can be exercised only when a majority of the original petitioners resident in the county invoke it; but the extent of the power is the same in both cases. In re Madison, etc., School House Road, 37 Pa. St. 417.

Danger from railroad.—Under W. Va. Code (1899), c. 43, § 30, the county court may discontinue the portion of a county road made highly dangerous to the public by the legal occupancy and use thereof by a railroad, and their discretion in so doing cannot be controlled by prohibition. Armstrong v. Taylor

County Ct., 54 W. Va. 502, 46 S. E. 131. See also In re Palto Alto Road, 160 Pa. St. 104, 28 Atl. 649.

Burden of proof.—In proceedings to vacate a road, where there is a report of viewers in favor of the vacation and a report of reviewers against it, the burden is on the petitioners of satisfying the court that the road has become useless, inconvenient, or burdensome. In re Exeter Tp. Road, 1 Kulp (Pa.) 363; Oulton v. Carter, 9 N. Brunsw. 169.

14. Ashcraft v. Lee, 81 N. C. 135; In re Exeter Tp. Road, 1 Kulp (Pa.) 363.

Opinion evidence is inadmissible on an issue as to the utility of vacating a highway. Hughes v. Beggs, 114 Ind. 427, 16 N. E. 817. But see Robertson v. McDowell, 24 S. W. 7, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 503. The motives and opinions of prominent persons sought to be elicited by the testimony might warp the judgment and influence the action of jurors, but would not legitimately conduce to a fair and full understanding of the matter in dispute, or contribute to the formation of a just and correct opinion of its merits. Ashcraft v. Lee, 81 N. C. 135.

The proper inquiry is, Does the public convenience require the road, and does it furnish needed facilities of transit to such a number as to give it a public character. Ashcraft v. Lee, 81 N. C. 135. While the private interest and convenience of the citizens must be considered in determining whether or not to vacate a township road (De Forest v. Wheeler, 5 Ohio St. 286), the fact that the road is convenient and necessary to a few persons is not decisive of the question of common convenience and necessity (Scutt v. Southbury, 55 Conn. 405, 11 Atl. 854). Still if it appears that the road is necessary for any considerable portion of the people for public use, it ought not to be vacated, even though a still larger number of the people in the vicinity would never require its use. In re Exeter Tp. Road, 1 Kulp (Pa.) 363.

The private benefit of a person or corporation is not a proper ground for vacating a highway. In re Lehman Tp. Road, 7 Kulp (Pa.) 404; In re Roaring Brook Road, Wilcox (Pa.) 263; Armstrong v. Taylor County Ct., 54 W. Va. 502, 46 S. E. 131. Thus a public road cannot be vacated, so as to leave a part of it leading to the house of an individual for his sole accommodation; but, a public school-house being a proper terminus for a highway, a road already established may be so vacated that it ends at a school-house. In re London Britain Road, 1 Chest. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 396.

15. Matter of Susquehanna Road, 1 Pearson (Pa.) 59.

(II) ROADS LAID OUT BUT NOT OPENED. To sustain an application for the discontinuance of a highway laid out but not constructed, it is necessary for the applicants to show new matter accruing since the establishment of the highway,<sup>16</sup> removing the occasion for it and rendering it unnecessary,<sup>17</sup> or the matter will be considered res adjudicata, and no longer open to litigation.<sup>18</sup> The changes which may occur to affect the expediency or necessity of constructing a particular road, in a country undergoing a constant change, are various and incalculable.<sup>19</sup> The period at which the change occurred is immaterial, provided it was since the road was laid out.<sup>20</sup>

d. Mode of Effecting Vacation — (i) IN GENERAL. Public highways can be discontinued or vacated only after proper proceedings had in the manner pointed out by statute.<sup>21</sup> They cannot be discontinued at the pleasure of a

17. People v. Griswold, 67 N. Y. 59; Miller v. Oakwood Tp., 9 N. D. 623, 84 N. W. 556.

18. Webb v. Rocky-Hill, 21 Conn. 468. If the commissioners find that no change has occurred since the highway was laid out substantially affecting the expediency of laying the same, that is an end of their inquiries, and they will report that fact to the court. In re Goffstown, 43 N. H. 199. But if changes are proved, affecting the expediency of laying out the highway, then the commissioners will go farther and inquire what the state of facts was, existing at the time the road was laid out, in order to see how the changes affect those facts. In re Goffstown, supra.

19. In re Hopkinton, 27 N. H. 133.

What may be sufficient to justify the abandonment of a projected improvement of that sort, it would be wholly impossible to predetermine, or even to indicate the nature or subject-matter of such changes. All that can be done is to ascertain from the report that substantial changes have intervened, and that they are such that they may reasonably be supposed to influence the course of public travel, or the expenses of constructing the road, and that, in the opinion of the commissioners at least, they actually have varied, or of necessity must vary, the business and wants of the community in a manner pointed out by the report and to a degree to supersede the need of the contemplated road, and to justify the abandonment of it. In re Hopkinton, 27 N. H. 133. The same change of circumstances that would warrant the discontinuance of a highway in one case might be entirely insufficient in another, depending on the degree of necessity there was for the original laying out of the highway. In re Goffstown, 43 N. H. 199.

The laying out in good faith of another highway obviating the necessity for the first might constitute a sufficient change of circumstances to authorize a discontinuance. In re Webster, 60 N. H. 576; Matter of McFadden, 96 N. Y. App. Div. 58, 89 N. Y. Suppl. 104; People v. Reading Highway Com'rs, 1 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 193. But the mere facts of the pendency and the reference of a petition for another highway which might be a substitute for the first do not constitute a sufficient change of circumstances. In re Marlborough, 45 N. H. 556. Nor does the fact that a highway has been laid out and opened over substantially the same ground for one third of the distance constitute such a change of circumstances. Perkins v. Andover, 31 Conn. 601.

A diminution of the ability of a town to build and maintain a highway may be a sufficient change of circumstances to authorize the discontinuance of the highway. Tuftonborough v. Fox, 58 N. H. 416. See also In re Marlborough, 45 N. H. 556. The indebtedness of a town, incurred after a highway was laid out and before it was constructed, may be a proper cause for discontinuance of such highway, but although such indebtedness may be large, it is not necessarily such a cause; that must depend upon all the circumstances of the case. In re Marlborough, 46 N. H. 494.

The construction and near completion of a railroad are a change of circumstances proper to be reported by the road commissioners as a reason for discontinuing a highway not opened for travel. In re Bethlehem, 20 N. H. 210. So upon a petition for the discontinuance of a highway laid out but not constructed, the road commissioners may lawfully consider the extension of a railroad, which railroad had been partly constructed when such highway was laid out, as a "change of circumstance" affecting the question before them. In re Hopkinton, 27 N. H. 133.

Increase of damages.—The fact that a jury appointed to reassess the damages to be paid to landowners have raised the damages from the sum of one hundred and ten dollars, as allowed by the committee which laid out the highway, to the sum of three hundred and sixty dollars, is not a sufficient change of circumstances. Perkins v. Andover, 31 Conn. 601.

20. In re Hampstead, 19 N. H. 343, holding that it is no objection to a report discontinuing a highway that the changes described therein have occurred since the petition was committed.

(II) PETITION AND PARTIES — (A) In General. Description of road.—In an application to vacate, the petition must necessarily describe the portion of the highway sought to be vacated. Cook v. Quick, 127 Ind. 477, 26 N. E. 1007. But unless expressly required by statute the petition need not describe it by termini, courses and distances, metes and bounds, following the exact description of the laying out. In re Milford, 37 N. H. 57. It is sufficiently certain if, by clear reference to the former proceedings, it enables the court and commissioners to know and understand, without possibility of mistake, what highway is referred to. In re Milford, supra. And see Vedder v. Marion County, 22 Ore. 264, 29 Pac. 619. The fact that an application for discontinuance of a portion of the highway describes a larger part of the highway than the applicant on the hearing seeks to have discontinued does not render the application invalid. Matter of Trask, 45 Misc. (N. Y.) 244, 92 N. Y. Suppl. 156.

Designation of intermediate points.—Although a petition to lay out a new road should designate only the termini, a petition to vacate an old road may point out intermediate spots to show defects which may be remedied by selecting another route. In re Ottercreek Tp. Road, 104 Pa. St. 261; In re Ottercreek Tp. Road, 41 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 243.

Under the Pennsylvania statute of 1836, a petition to vacate a public highway must set forth in a clear and distinct manner, not only that the road is useless, inconvenient, and burdensome (In re Hamiltonban Tp. Road, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 648), but the situation and other circumstances which render it so (In re Ross Tp. Road, 36 Pa. St. 87; In re Shaler Tp. Road, 5 Pa. Super. Ct. 270; In re Abington Road, 3 Pa. Dist. 226; In re Curtin Tp., etc., Road, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 328; In re Hamiltonban Tp. Road, supra; In re Blakely Road, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 498; In re Hunlock Tp. Road, 9 Kulp 432, 15 Montg. Co. Rep. 143; In re Jefferson Tp. Road, 2 Lack. Leg. N. 287 [affirmed in 3 Pa. Super. Ct. 467]; In re Cheltenham Tp. Road, 17 Montg. Co. Rep. 18; In re Hancock Tp. Road, 13 York Leg. Rec. 48; In re Peachbottom Tp., etc., Road, 11 York Leg. Rec. 11, 65). If this be not done, and the defect be not supplied by the report of the viewers, it is fatal to the proceedings. In re Ross Tp. Road, supra.

Requisite number of petitioners.—Unless required by statute, it is not essential to the validity of a vacation of a highway by the commissioners that either the petition on which they act or the order of vacation should recite that the petition was made by the requisite number of landowners. Shields v. Ross, 158 Ill. 214, 41 N. E. 985. Contra, State v. Douglas County, 27 Nev. 469, 77 Pac. 984.

Names of owners or occupants of land through which highway passes see Houpt v. Dutton, 170 Ind. 69, 83 N. E. 634.

Variance.—There is no fatal variance between a petition for the discontinuance of a highway, which describes it as laid out across a particular river, near a certain locality named, and the record of the laying out of said highway, which describes it as laid out across the same river near the same locality, but designates the locality as equally well known by another name also as by that set forth in the petition. In re Milford, 37 N. H. 57. Nor is there any such fatal variance between a petition which describes the highway as laid out by the court of common pleas, and the record of the proceedings of the town in relation to the discontinuance, wherein it is described as having been laid out by the road commissioners. In re Milford, supra.

<sup>28.</sup> Matter of Rushmore, 57 Misc. (N. Y.) 555, 109 N. Y. Suppl. 1099, holding that when not required the petition need not allege that the part of the highway to be discontinued is useless.

(Pa.) 18 (holding that an original petition for the vacation of a road, and the laying out of a new one in place thereof, may be supplemented by a petition giving the reasons for the vacation).

Parties interested.—The statutes frequently require notice of proceedings to discontinue a highway to be given to "interested parties." Abutting landowners are to be deemed interested parties. Hill v. Hoffman, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1899) 58 S. W. 929. And the owner of a parcel of land not fronting upon any highway, and whose only outlet is a private way two rods wide, belonging to him and extending therefrom to the public highway, is entitled to notice of proceedings to discontinue such public highway, as much as if his whole parcel abutted upon it. People v. China Highway Com'rs, 35 Mich. 15. But where a highway is laid out wholly over the land of one who owns the land abutting on the north, the abutting owners on the south are not interested in the highway. Atty.-Gen. v. Sherry, 20 R. I. 43, 37 Atl. 344. Where the discontinuance of a highway leaves the way to a landowner's house a cul-de-sac, he is directly interested in the proceedings, and entitled to notice. Goss v. Westphalia Tp. Highway Com'rs, 63 Mich. 608, 30 N. W. 197.

Owners or occupants.—The notice is often required to be served on the owners or occupants of lands through which the road passes. Moffitt v. Brainard, 92 Iowa 122, 60 N. W. 226, 26 L. R. A. 821; Kimball v. Homan, 74 Mich. 699, 42 N. W. 167; Ross v. Taylor Tp. Highway Com'rs, 32 Mich. 301; People v. Nunkin Highway Com'rs, 14 Mich. 528; Morris v. Edwards, 132 Wis. 91, 112 N. Under such a provision the occupants of lands abutting upon the portion of such highway not sought to be discontinued are entitled to have notice served upon them personally or by copy just as much as the occupants of lands abutting upon the portion of such highway so sought to be discontinued. Bd., 144 Mich. 266, 107 N. W. 1058.

Supervisors.—Under the provisions of the Pennsylvania act of May 2, 1899, notice must be given to the supervisors of the township or townships affected by the road to be vacated, and a copy of such notice, properly attached, must be filed among the records of the court having cognizance, and a failure to do so will be sufficient ground for an application to set aside the proceedings. In re Curtin Tp., etc., Road, 23 Pa. Variance.—Under a statute requiring the publication of notice of application for vacating a county road, a variance between the notice and petition for vacation in stating the place of termination of the road is fatal to the jurisdiction of the county court. Fisher v. Union County, 43 Ore. 223, 72 Pac. 797.

Proof of notice.—Where the petitioners are required to give the notice, they are competent to furnish proof that it has been given. Vedder v. Marion County, 22 Ore. 264, 29 Pac. 619; Gaines v. Linn County, 21 Ore. 425, 28 Pac. 131.

W. 833, holding that failure to give notice to other landowners of proceedings to vacate highways does not render the proceedings invalid as to the landowners properly notified.

40. See cases cited infra, this note.

By acquiescence in order of discontinuance.—Although notice is required to be posted before a road, or any portion thereof, can be lawfully discontinued, yet, after the final order discontinuing it has been acquiesced in for a period of eighteen years, the omission of such notice will be regarded as waived. Yates v. West Grafton, 33 W. Va. 507, 11 S. E. 8.

By appearance.—Appearance of the parties entitled to notice is regarded as a waiver thereof (Chrisman v. Brandes, 137 Iowa 433, 112 N. W. 833; Candia v. Chandler, 58 N. H. 127; Matter of Susquehanna River Road, 1 Pearson (Pa.) 59), or defects therein (In re Lower Merion Tp. Road, 8 Pa. Dist. 581, 15 Montg. Co. Rep. 177). But see Mitchell v. Bond, 11 Bush (Ky.) 614, 615 (where, construing a requirement of public notice, the court say: "The object of the notice required . . . is to give notice to the public at large, and to enable any citizen who may wish to do so to appear and resist the making of the order applied for, and any one who does appear thereby becomes the representative of the public, but he cannot waive the rights of the public, and by his mere silence give the court jurisdiction of a matter affecting the interest of the public of which it would, but for such silence, have had no jurisdiction"); Hatt v. Napoleon Tp. Bd., 144 Mich. 266, 107 N. W. 1058 (holding that the fact that a party entitled to notice of proceedings for the discontinuance of a highway does not complain of the proceedings taken does not cure the irregularity in proceedings taken without giving him such notice).

41. See the statutes of the several states, and cases cited infra, this note.

Persons through whose land road passes.—In some states a remonstrance against the vacation of a highway can only be filed by persons through whose lands such highway may pass. Under such a statutory provision the persons who may complain of the vacation of a way must be such as are directly affected in their convenience of access to their property, and who are liable to lose their immediate means of communication. Kimball v. Homan, 74 Mich. 699, 42 N. W. 167. A person through whose land a highway passes may remonstrate, although the part to be vacated does not pass through his land, but merely touches it. Hout v. Dutton, 170 Ind. 69, 83 N. E. 634. A person whose premises are so situated that he could not reach the discontinued way without first crossing a public street, communicating with others in various directions, and furnishing abundant guards against isolation, has no right to complain. Kimball v. Homan, 74 Mich. 699, 42 N. W. 167. The fact that a highway proposed to be vacated intersects with another highway, on which an owner's lands abut, does not make him an abutting owner, within the meaning of such a statute. Brandenburg v. Hittel, 16 Ind. App. 224, 45 N. E. 45. A person through whose land it may be proposed to vacate a highway may remonstrate

the remonstrant has the statutory qualifications; otherwise the remonstrance is fatally defective.<sup>42</sup>

(v) HEARING AND DETERMINATION. Upon the hearing of a vacation proceeding there are but two questions to try; one the utility or non-utility of the highway;<sup>43</sup> and the other the question of damages, if they are allowable, and asked for by a remonstrant.<sup>44</sup> These can be ascertained by testimony addressed to the court or board,<sup>45</sup> unless a jury of view is required to be appointed by statute.<sup>46</sup> Adjournments are regulated by statute.<sup>47</sup>

(vi) COMMISSIONERS, VIEWERS, AND OTHER LIKE OFFICERS. A petition being filed, provision is usually made in the statutes for the appointment of commissioners or viewers who shall examine and report.<sup>48</sup> Their authority is limited on the ground that the highway is of public utility, and in the same remonstrance claim damages in consequence of the proposed vacation. Butterworth v. Barlett, 50 Ind. 537.

All freeholders of township.—In other states the right to object to proceedings to vacate a county road is not limited to land-owners whose lands are occupied by the road, but extends to all the freeholders of the township. In re Big Hollow Road, 40 Mo. App. 363.

In New Jersey it is said that every citizen is interested, more or less, in every highway and has a right to submit any questions affecting such interests to the court. State v. Snedeker, 30 N. J. L. 80.

42. Early v. Hamilton, 75 Ind. 376; Brandenburg v. Hittel, 16 Ind. App. 224, 45 N. E. 45.

43. Cook v. Quick, 127 Ind. 477, 26 N. E. 1007; Nicholson v. Stockett, Walk. (Miss.) 67.

Evidence.—Evidence as to the original purpose in opening a road is not material to the question of the expediency of its discontinuance. Ashcraft v. Lee, 81 N. C. 135. Nor is it competent to permit petitioners for the vacation of a highway to prove the offer of individuals to maintain private ways or bridges. Whetton v. Clayton, 111 Ind. 360, 12 N. E. 513. Evidence that the road hands in a certain township are in number insufficient to keep up all the roads in that township has no tendency, unless connected with other facts, to show that any particular road should be discontinued. Ashcraft v. Lee, supra.

45. Thomas v. Hawkins, 20 Ga. 126.

In Mississippi the statute declaring that no person shall turn, alter, or change any public road unless it is by order of court, founded upon the report of a jury, does not require the intervention of a jury in proceedings to discontinue a road. Nicholson v. Stockett, Walk. 67.

46. See infra, II, D, 2, d, (vi).

47. Howell Annot. St. Mich. § 1300, provides that the commissioner may adjourn proceedings to discontinue a highway no longer than twenty days. Therefore proceedings had on June 3, pursuant to a twenty-day adjournment from May 18, are irregular and void. Price v. Stagray, 68 Mich. 17, 35 N. W. 815.

48. See the statutes of the several states, and cases cited infra, this note.

In Maryland, under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 25, § 86, and the local laws of Baltimore county (Acts (1900), p. 1086, c. 685, § 280), providing that, whenever the county commissioners shall deem it expedient that examiners shall be appointed to view the grounds for the purpose of opening, altering, or closing a road, they shall appoint three persons as examiners, etc., the appointment of examiners to view the grounds on the closing of a road is within the discretion of the commissioners. Riggs v. Winterode, 100 Md. 439, 59 Atl. 762.

In Michigan the amendment to the state constitution (Laws (1859), § 1102) gives authority to highway commissioners to discontinue such roads as they have jurisdiction over without the intervention of a jury. People v. Nankin Highway Com'rs, 15 Mich. 347.

In New Hampshire, before the act of June 20, 1840, providing for the election of road commissioners, it was the established practice in the court of common pleas to refer petitions for the discontinuance of highways to the same committees which had passed upon the question of laying them out; and after the passage of that act all such petitions were, by a rule of that court, uniformly referred to such commissioners. Such a rule of court was well adopted, and the Revised Statutes have made no change in the law in this respect. In re Howard, 28 N. H. 157; In re Hampstead, 19 N. H. 343; Hopkinton v. Smith, 15 N. H. 152; In re Strafford, 14 N. H. 30; In re Nashua, 12 N. H. 425.

Under the New York Highway Law, § 83 (Laws (1890), p. 1193, c. 568), if a petition for the discontinuance of a highway is presented in good faith, it is the duty of the county court to appoint commissioners as asked for. Matter of McFadden, 96 N. Y. App. Div. 58, 89 N. Y. Suppl. 104.

Under Pa. Act (1836), § 18, the appointment of viewers to vacate a highway rests in the discretion of the court, and is not a matter of right. In re Ottercreek Tp. Public Road, 104 Pa. St. 261; In re Newville Road, 8 Watts 172; In re Abington Road, 3 Pa. Dist. 226; In re Cassville Road, 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 212; In re Sheik's Pond Road, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. 360.

In Vermont, in petitions to discontinue roads laid out by committees appointed by

by statute or by the terms of the order appointing them.<sup>49</sup> While all the viewers must participate in the view,<sup>50</sup> or at least be given an opportunity to do so,<sup>51</sup> if a minority for any reason do not take part, the others may proceed in their absence,<sup>52</sup> and may make a valid report.<sup>53</sup> The form and contents of such reports are usually prescribed by statute.<sup>54</sup> According to the circumstances of the case court, the practice is to appoint the same committee that laid out the road. Livingston v. Jerico, 11 Vt. 96.

Qualification of commissioners or viewers.—Commissioners or viewers appointed to pass on the question of discontinuance of a highway are usually required by statute to be disinterested persons. Moore v. Sandown, 19 N. H. 93 (holding that one who several years before had signed a petition to lay out the highway was not incompetent to act upon the petition for its discontinuance); In re Nashua, 12 N. H. 425 (holding that a citizen of the town through which the road passed was incompetent to act as commissioner upon a petition for its discontinuance). The New York Highway Law (Laws (1890), p. 1193, c. 568), § 84, requires that the three commissioners appointed to determine the uselessness of a highway shall be disinterested freeholders. Under this act, to be qualified, a commissioner must have been a freeholder at the time of his appointment, and the fact that he became one before the hearing of an application to vacate his appointment is insufficient. Matter of Trask, 81 N. Y. App. Div. 318, 81 N. Y. Suppl. 53. In Pennsylvania, questions relating to the disqualification of viewers are usually left to the judgment of the court below. In re McCandless Tp. Road, 110 Pa. St. 605, 1 Atl. 594, holding that the fact that one of the viewers was among those who signed the petition to vacate does not necessarily disqualify him to act.

49. In re Hampstead, 19 N. H. 343; Matter of Coe, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 549, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 910 (holding that commissioners appointed to determine the uselessness of highways proposed to be discontinued (Laws (1890), c. 568, § 84) have no authority to require the opponents of the application to pay a sum of money in order to be heard in the proceeding); In re Silver Lake Tp. Road, 84 Pa. St. 131.

An order to lay out a road does not authorize the viewers to vacate any part of the road, although the petition asked for such vacation. In re Silver Lake Tp. Road, 84 Pa. St. 131; In re North Branch Tp. Road, 1 Leg. Chron. (Pa.) 119; In re Franklin Tp. Road, 1 Leg. Chron. (Pa.) 57. But on petition of a majority of the original petitioners for the road, viewers may report in favor of vacating part of the unopened road, and return the remainder for public use. In re Madison School-House Road, 7 Luz. Leg. Reg. (Pa.) 242.

Time of making view.—Viewers have no authority to view and lay out the road after the commencement of the term to which their order is returnable. In re Metzler, etc., Road, 62 Pa. St. 151; In re Newlin Road, 2 Chest.

Co. Rep. (Pa.) 373; In re Madison Road, 2 Lanc. L. Rev. (Pa.) 35. Nor does it make any difference that the viewers had previously met and then adjourned for further deliberation and action until the day the road was laid out. Viewers have no authority after the term commences to do more than to make out their return and report their previous action to the court, unless a continuance of their order has been obtained from the court, or the report is returned by the court for amendment or correction. In re Newlin Road, supra.

Place of hearing.—It is usual to have the hearing as near to where the highway proposed to be discontinued is located as possible; but where there is nothing in the statutes, or in the decisions of the courts, which compels the commissioners to have the hearing at any particular place, they may select any place in the town where the highway is located for the hearing of the application. Matter of Coe, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 549, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 910.

50. In re Farrell Road, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 86.

A report signed by all the viewers, stating that they "had viewed," is a sufficient averment of who were present at the view. In re Ross Tp. Road, 36 Pa. St. 87.

51. Condict v. Ramsey, 65 N. J. L. 503, 47 Atl. 423.

52. Condict v. Ramsey, 65 N. J. L. 503, 47 Atl. 423.

53. In re Farrell Road, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 86, holding that a report of reviewing road commissioners in proceedings to vacate a road under the Pennsylvania act of July 2, 1901 (Pamphl. Laws 607), signed by only two of the three commissioners, and not showing on its face that all of the commissioners participated in the review, is not fatally defective.

Report of joint board.—Under a statute providing that all petitions relating to roads which pass over land in two or more counties shall be referred to the commissioners of all such counties, "and they shall constitute a joint board," it is not necessary that reports upon petitions for the discontinuance of highways be signed by a majority of the commissioners of each county. If signed by a majority of the joint board, it is sufficient. In re Goffstown, 35 N. H. 292.

54. See cases cited infra, this note.

The report should preferably pursue the words of the statute strictly (Oulton v. Carter, 9 N. Brunsw. 169); if not it must use words necessarily equivalent thereto (Oulton v. Carter, supra, holding that to justify the shutting up a highway under 1 Rev. St. cap. 66, the return of the commissioners must show, either expressly or by necessary im-the report will be confirmed,<sup>55</sup> set aside,<sup>56</sup> or recommitted for correction or amendment.<sup>57</sup>

(VII) ORDER OR JUDGMENT AND RECORD — (A) In General. An order or judgment discontinuing a public highway must substantially conform to statutory requirements.<sup>58</sup> Where the law appears to have been properly complied plication, that the road is not required for the convenience of the inhabitants of the parish. The words "not required for the inhabitants" and "not required for the convenience of the inhabitants" are not identical in meaning).

Description of road.—It is sufficient, in a report discontinuing a highway, to describe it as the highway laid out upon the petition of certain individuals named, without particularly setting it forth by metes and bounds, courses and distances. In re Mt. Vernon, 37 N. H. 515. A report is not void for uncertainty because its only statement of the roads vacated is by reference to a draft attached to the report on which such vacated roads are so indicated. In re Whiteley Road, 2 Mona. (Pa.) 194, 15 Atl. 895. Where there is on the files of the court a draft of a road, to vacate which road proceedings are commenced, a draft of the road thus vacated need not be returned by the viewers, although the order of the court direct it to be done. In re Jackson Tp. Road, 9 Pa. St. 85.

In Michigan a copy of the notice served must be appended to the report. In order to comply with the statute, it should appear upon what particular persons the notice was served, and whether served by copy left at the residence, or personally, in order that there may be distinct proof of the parties bound by such notice. People v. Nankin Highway Com'rs, 14 Mich. 528. The public places where the notices were posted should also be designated. People v. Nankin Highway Com'rs, supra.

In New Hampshire county commissioners, in their report discontinuing a highway, should state that the highway has become no longer necessary, and that changes which have occurred since its laying out require its discontinuance, and should state, not only the changes generally, but also the particular circumstances, and how they affect the case. In re Marlborough, 46 N. H. 494; In re Hopkinton, 27 N. H. 133; In re Hampstead, 19 N. H. 343.

Conditional report.—A report of viewers appointed to vacate parts of a public road stating that the road had become useless, dangerous, inconvenient, and burdensome, and should be vacated, and, furthermore, that said vacation should take effect from the time a certain railroad company had completed, ready for use, an overhead bridge over the tracks of its road, is not objectionable as containing a condition. In re Londonderry Tp. Roads, 24 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 327.

55. In re Forks Tp. Road, 2 Lanc. L. Rev. (Pa.) 307, holding that where viewers, in proceedings to vacate a highway, reported in favor of vacating the road, and reviewers reported adversely, but re-reviewers agreed with the first viewers, the court will confirm the report for vacation.

Premature confirmation.—Where viewers have been appointed and they have made their report vacating the road, an entry of confirmation thereon, without giving the petitioners the right to be heard, is premature. In re Spring Tp. Road, 2 Woodw. (Pa.) 179.

56. In re Lower Makefield Road, 71 Pa. St. 175 (holding that a report of reviewers vacating parts of a road will be set aside for want of a return of the plot, although the omission was not excepted to below); In re Lower Merion Tp. Road, 8 Pa. Dist. 562, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 299, 15 Montg. Co. Rep. 81 (holding that in proceedings to vacate a public road, the report of viewers will be set aside where it appears that the rule of court was not observed in regard to the posting of notices of the time and place of the meeting of the jury of view).

57. In re Marlborough, 45 N. H. 556, holding that where the county commissioners, upon petition for leave to discontinue a new highway laid out but not constructed, report in favor of the discontinuance of such new highway for two reasons, of which one is legally insufficient and the other not conclusive in law, in the absence of anything to show that they considered the latter reason alone sufficient, the report will, on motion, be recommitted.

Amendment of clerical errors.—The court has power to send a report back to the viewers for amendment of clerical errors before confirmation. In re Silver Lake Tp. Road, 84 Pa. St. 131.

58. McKenzie v. Gilmore, (Cal. 1893) 33 Pac. 262 (holding that an order vacating a public highway is legislative, and the act ought to appear in the order); Elliott v. Treadway, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 22 (holding that to give validity to an order discontinuing a road, it must be shown that it was ordered by a court properly constituted); Com. v. Roxbury, 8 Mass. 457.

Signature.—Under Minn. Gen. St. (1878) c. 13, § 37, providing for the laying out, altering, or discontinuing of any highway, a public highway can be vacated only by an order signed by the town supervisors, and until signed such order has no force or effect as an order. Keyes v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 36 Minn. 290, 30 N. W. 888. In some states it is sufficient if a majority of the members of the board sign the order. State v. Goodwin, 24 Wis. 286.

Posting order of discontinuance not necessary to validity.—In New York, failure of a town clerk to post notices of the order of the discontinuance of a highway in the place where the town meetings are held does not with, immaterial defects in the order will not invalidate it.<sup>59</sup> Conditional adjudications of tribunals having the power to discontinue ways are not uncommon, and have often been upheld.<sup>60</sup> Sometimes, however, the condition has been declared void,<sup>61</sup> and sometimes it has made the whole adjudication of no effect.<sup>62</sup> An order discontinuing a road, however irregular, cannot be rescinded for that cause at a subsequent term.<sup>63</sup> But if it is wholly void, it may be set aside at any subsequent term.<sup>64</sup> The facts essential to the jurisdiction of a county board or court to vacate a road must affirmatively appear on the record of the proceedings, or such record will be fatally defective.<sup>65</sup> When the exercise of authority is limited by statute, and its exercise affects the private rights of individuals by divesting them of property or valuable rights, the record of the proceedings must show that the act by which this is done is within the limits of the power conferred.<sup>66</sup> Presumptions of law favoring the validity of a judgment rendered by an inferior court or tribunal do not arise, unless it affirmatively appears in the record that the court or tribunal has jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the action or proceeding pending, and the parties litigant.<sup>67</sup> But when the record shows jurismake the order invalid. Elgleman v. Langhorst, 6 N. Y. St. 322.

60. Sears v. Fuller, 137 Mass. 326; New London v. Davis, 73 N. H. 72, 59 Atl. 369. And see Coakley v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 159 Mass. 32, 33 N. E. 930.

61. Coakley v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 159 Mass. 32, 33 N. E. 930; Cheshire Turnpike v. Stevens, 10 N. H. 133, holding that a town cannot discontinue a highway during pleasure, with a reservation of a right to open it at any time, without paying damages. The reservation in such case will be void, and the discontinuance absolute.

62. Hayes v. Tylor, 85 Iowa 126, 52 N. W. 116.

63. Barr v. Stevens, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 292.

64. Conrad v. Lewis County, 10 W. Va. 784.

65. Imhoff v. Somerset Highway Com'rs, 89 Ill. App. 66; Crawford v. Elk County, 32 Kan. 555, 4 Pac. 1011; Price v. Stagray, 68 Mich. 17, 35 N. W. 815; People v. Caledonia Highway Com'rs, 16 Mich. 63; Letherman v. Hauser, 77 Nebr. 731, 110 N. W. 745.

The order must be complete and sufficient on its face, and its defects cannot be helped out or supplied by parol. Keyes v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 36 Minn. 290, 30 N. W. 888.

Notice.—The record must show affirmatively that the notice provided for in the statute has been given, so that the court may be able to see, either from the facts themselves, or specific recitals of those facts, that "due notice" was given. Troxell v. Dick, 216 Ill. 98, 74 N. E. 694; Imhoff v. Somerset Highway Com'rs, 89 Ill. App. 66; Mitchell v. Bond, 11 Bush (Ky.) 614; People v. Caledonia Highway Com'rs 16 Mich. 63; Gaines v. Linn County, 21 Oreg. 430, 28 Pac. 133. But see In re Sewickley Tp. Road, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 170, holding that proceedings to vacate a portion of the public road will not be quashed merely because it does not appear from the record that the notice required by the act of May 2, 1899 (Pamphl. Laws 176), was given when there is no denial of the fact that the notice was given, and the report of the viewers expressly states that "due notice of the view" was served on the supervisors. In Yates v. West Grafton, 33 W. Va. 507, 11 S. E. 8, it is said that there is nothing in the chapter authorizing these proceedings which directs such notice to be made a part of the record. If not given, and it be a case requiring it, the omission, in order to be taken advantage of, must appear on the record, or there must be sufficient positive evidence abundante introduced to rebut the presumption that the proceedings were regular.

View of premises and finding of public necessity.—An order discontinuing a highway is void when the record of the commissioner's proceedings does not show that he viewed the premises, or determined the public necessity of such discontinuance. Furman v. Furman, 86 Mich. 391, 49 N. W. 147.

Residence of petitioner.—Under section 4661, Ohio Revised Statutes, providing for the vacation of county roads, residence in the vicinity of the road proposed to be vacated is an essential qualification of a petitioner for vacation; and the fact of such residence is a jurisdictional one and must affirmatively appear in the record to confer jurisdiction on the board of commissioners to order a vacation. Smith v. Frenzer, 12 Ohio Cir. Ct. 250, 5 Ohio Cir. Dec. 658.

66. Pearsol v. Eaton County, 71 Mich. 438, 39 N. W. 578, holding that under a statute requiring every order, resolution, and determination of the board of supervisors, made in pursuance of the act authorizing them to lay out and discontinue state roads, to be recorded and signed by the chairman and clerk, there can be no presumption that they performed their duty; and, it not appearing in the record that the interests of the public were considered, the discontinuance is invalid.

67. Smith v. Frenzer, 12 Ohio Cir. Ct. 250, 5 Ohio Cir. Dec. 658.

Effect of statute making record prima facie evidence of regularity of proceedings.—Section 52 of chapter 121, Hurd Rev. St. Ill. (1897), which provides that the record of the town clerk, or a certified copy of such diction in the court or tribunal, and does not disclose some prejudicial error in the proceedings, in such cases presumptions of law arise and sustain the judgment or order.<sup>68</sup>

(B) Conclusiveness and Collateral Attack — (1) IN GENERAL. In some states it seems that the principle which obtains in suits at common law, that a former judgment is conclusive upon all points directly in issue upon the trial, does not apply strictly to proceedings to procure the discontinuance of highways.<sup>69</sup> But as a rule it is held that an order or judgment discontinuing a public road must be deemed conclusive so long as it remains in force,<sup>70</sup> and the correctness of such a proceeding cannot be attacked collaterally,<sup>71</sup> unless it is void.<sup>72</sup>

(2) BAR TO FURTHER PROCEEDINGS. It is commonly provided by statute that after the final determination of a proceeding to discontinue a highway no further proceedings shall be had in reference to the same highway,<sup>73</sup> until the expiration of a limited time.<sup>74</sup> In the absence of a statute on the subject no general rule can be laid down as to how far a court or board will go in entertaining successive petitions to vacate.<sup>75</sup>

record and papers relating to the establishment, location, alteration, widening, or vacation of any road, shall be prima facie evidence in all cases that all necessary antecedent provisions have been complied with, and that the action of the commissioners or other persons and officers in regard thereto has been regular in all respects, applies only where the papers show jurisdiction on their face. Imhoff v. Somerset Highway Com'rs, 89 Ill. App. 66. The presumption raised is not conclusive, but is subject to rebuttal. Schroeder v. Klipp, 120 Wis. 245, 97 N. W. 909.

In Iowa, Code (1873), § 927, providing that if a commissioner, after a general examination, "shall not be in favor of establishing a proposed highway, he will so report, and no further proceedings shall be had thereon," is applicable to proceedings to vacate a highway. Devoe v. Smeltzer, 86 Iowa 385, 53 N. W. 287; Cook v. Trigg, 52 Iowa 709, 3 N. W. 725.

74. See cases cited infra, this note.

In New Jersey, Revision, p. 1013, § 100, provides that in case the surveyors shall return that they think the laying out, vacation, or alteration of the road to be necessary, no new application touching said road shall be made under one year after said appointment. Under such a provision surveyors of the highways cannot be appointed to vacate a road while proceedings upon a previous appointment of surveyors to vacate the same road are still pending. State v. Adams, 55 N. J. L. 334, 26 Atl. 914 [reversing (Sup. 1891) 21 Atl. 938].

Under N. Y. Laws (1847), c. 455, § 9, a refusal of referees to discontinue a road is no bar to new proceedings within four years for that purpose; such a decision is not one for "laying out, altering or discontinuing a road." People v. Nichols, 51 N. Y. 470.

75. See cases cited infra, this note.

In an early New Hampshire case it is said: "Even if there have been a decision upon the merits of a road petition, it has not been the practice here to apply to it the common law principle, that a former judgment is conclusive upon all points directly in issue upon the trial, and necessarily determined. But perhaps if the merits of a road petition had been repeatedly passed upon and examined, the court might, by analogy to proceedings in suits at law, exercise a legal discretion, and refuse to entertain it." In re Strafford, 14 N. H. 30. If a second petition is founded upon the same vote of the town which formed the basis of the former application, the matter will be regarded as res judicata, and the petition will be dismissed. In re Bath, 22 N. H. 576. Upon a fresh vote, however, the presumption is that a new state of facts has arisen, and the court will take such a course with a petition founded upon such a vote, as though no previous application had been made. In re Bath, supra.

77. Williamson v. Houser, 169 Ind. 397, 82 N. E. 771 (holding that a landowner who did not appear before the commissioners cannot present an application for damages or a remonstrance that the proposed vacation is not of public utility for the first time in the circuit court on appeal); Millett v. Franklin

(IX) APPEAL AND ERROR. Unless allowed by statute,<sup>78</sup> no appeal lies from an order or judgment vacating a highway.<sup>79</sup> Where appeals are permitted, the jurisdiction of the appellate court is, in some states, appellate only, and the merits of the case cannot be entered into;<sup>80</sup> nor can the order or judgment of the inferior tribunal be reversed unless for some error or irregularity apparent on the record,<sup>81</sup> or because the court below exceeded their jurisdiction or erred in their judgment in point of law.<sup>82</sup> In other states the case is tried de novo in the appellate court.<sup>83</sup> The persons entitled to appeal, as in the case of appeals in proceedings to establish highways, must be determined by reference to the local statutes.<sup>84</sup> Further-

County, 81 Me. 257, 16 Atl. 897 (holding that an objection not made at the hearing, but only after the report of the committee had been returned to court, came too late); In re Manchester, 28 N. H. 296 (holding that the exception that a town has passed no legal vote to discontinue a highway cannot be taken after a petition for such discontinuance has been referred to the road commissioners without objection, and a report has been made thereon); In re Allentown Road, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 442.

Appeal lies only from final order or judgment see Cook v. Quick, 127 Ind. 477, 26 N. E. 1007; Green v. Ayers, 31 Ind. 248.

If the order or judgment is void it is not the subject of an appeal. People v. Three Suffolk County Judges, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 249; In re Perry Tp. Road, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 131.

Time for taking appeal.—An appeal to the circuit court from an order of the county court closing a road need not be prosecuted within sixty days, as required in other appeals from the county court, but may, under Ky. Gen. St. c. 94, art. 1, § 43, be prosecuted at any time within one year. Rountree v. Lebanon, etc., R. Co., 9 Ky. L. Rep. 817. Me. Rev. St. c. 18, §§ 48, 49, giving the right of appeal to a committee to revise the doings of county commissioners in discontinuing a highway, requires that the committee be appointed at the first term after appeal, and that the committee shall view the route, hear the parties, and make their report at the next term of the court after appointment. The statute is mandatory, and it is no objection to the report of such committee that the hearing before them took place while exceptions touching questions of law in the case were pending in the law court. Millett v. Franklin County, 81 Me. 257, 16 Atl. 897.

Action to set aside judgment obtained by fraud.—The rule that a new action may be maintained to set aside and annul a judgment obtained by fraud is applicable to set aside the verdict of a jury rendered on an appeal from an order vacating a highway. Street v. Alden, 62 Minn. 160, 64 N. W. 157, 54 Am. St. Rep. 632.

ing that under the Pennsylvania act of May 16, 1891 (Pamphl. Laws 75), giving a right of appeal to abutting owners from ordinances opening, widening, extending, or otherwise improving any street, no appeal lies from the vacating of a street.

84. See the statutes of the several states, and cases cited infra, this note.

Persons interested.—To entitle a person to appeal from an order or judgment vacating a highway it is commonly required that he be "interested" therein. See Barr v. Stevens, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 292; Brown v. Sagadahoc County, 68 Me. 537. Under such a requirement, the right of appeal is sometimes held to be limited to the owners of land abutting the road to be vacated. Bloomington Highway Com'rs v. Quinn, 136 Ill. 604, 27 N. E. 187 [overruling Whitmer v. Dry Grove Tp. Highway Com'rs, 96 Ill. 289]; Taylor v. Normal Highway Com'rs, 88 Ill. 526. But it has been held that a party may be directly interested in such a matter, although he does not own any lands directly abutting upon the road to be vacated. This may affect the degree of his interest, but he may have a direct, valuable, and substantial interest without such ownership, entirely different from that of a person residing in a remote part of the county. Hull v. Stephenson, 19 Wash. 572, 53 Pac. 669. Thus in New York resident taxpayers of a town may appeal from a decision discontinuing a highway, although they are not owners of any of the land over which the highway passes. Matter of Coe, 19 Misc. 549, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 910. Under Hurd Rev. St. Ill. (1897) c. 121, §§ 31, 59, persons residing within two miles of a road which highway commissioners have decided to more the right to appeal should appear affirmatively from the record; otherwise the appeal will be dismissed.<sup>85</sup>

(x) CERTIORARI. A proceeding to discontinue a highway is judicial in its nature and therefore reviewable by certiorari.<sup>86</sup> It is the duty of the superior tribunal to inspect the record as it is returned in obedience to the writ,<sup>87</sup> and to determine whether the inferior tribunal had jurisdiction,<sup>88</sup> or whether it exceeded its jurisdiction,<sup>89</sup> or otherwise proceeded in violation of law.<sup>90</sup> Matters within the discretion of the inferior tribunal will not be reviewed.<sup>91</sup> A petition for a writ of certiorari is an application to the judicial discretion of the court,<sup>92</sup> and will not be granted for formal and technical errors only, where no real injustice has been done;<sup>93</sup> nor will it be granted, even where more substantial errors are apparent in the proceedings, upon the application of one whose rights are not affected injuriously by such errors.<sup>94</sup> vacate are entitled to appeal from the commissioners' decision. Imhoff v. Somerset Highway Com'rs, 89 Ill. App. 66. In Kentucky it has been held that the owners of land through which a highway passes has not such an interest in the road as to entitle him to question, by appeal or writ or error, the order of a county court discontinuing such way. Cole v. Shannon, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 218.

Parties to proceeding.—Under the statutes of some states either party to a petition to discontinue a public highway has a right to appeal. Ashcraft v. Lee, 81 N. C. 135; Fisher v. Union County, 43 Oreg. 223, 72 Pac. 797.

Party or person aggrieved.—Ind. Rev. St. (1843) pp. 186, 187, provides that if the person aggrieved by the decision, and appealing therefrom, be not a party to the matter or proceeding, the appeal shall not be allowed, unless he makes himself a party by affidavit setting forth explicitly the nature of his interest in the subject-matter. Odell v. Jenkins, 8 Ind. 522.

Persons aggrieved are sometimes granted the right to appeal. Under such a provision freeholders remonstrating against the discontinuance of a county road may appeal to the circuit court from a judgment of the county court vacating the road, and adjudging costs against them. In re Big Hollow Road, 40 Mo. App. 363 [affirmed in 111 Mo. 326, 19 S. W. 947].

Person who may feel himself aggrieved.—Minn. Gen. St. (1878) c. 13, § 59, provides that "any person who may feel himself aggrieved" by an order discontinuing a highway may appeal. This is not to be taken literally. A person having no interest which could be affected might imagine himself aggrieved, yet the statute could not have intended to give such a person a right to appeal. The person claiming the right must undoubtedly be in a position to be injuriously affected by the order or determination made; in a position to sustain special injury, disadvantage, or inconvenience not common to himself with the other inhabitants or property-owners of the town. One through whose land a new road is laid out is in such a position; and so is one through, to, or along whose land an old road to be discontinued runs. State v. Holman, 40 Minn. 369, 41 N. W. 1073; State v. Barton, 36 Minn. 145, 30 N. W. 454; Schuster v. Lemond, 27 Minn. 253, 6 N. W. 802.

The answer or return to a writ of certiorari to revise an order vacating a highway must show that the board had jurisdiction to make the order which they defend. State v. Washoe County, 12 Nev. 17.

(xi) INJUNCTION. Injunction will not lie to restrain the vacation of a highway, if an adequate remedy at law exists.<sup>95</sup> But in the absence of such an adequate remedy, injunction will lie.<sup>96</sup> In such an action the burden is upon plaintiff to establish the fact that he has rights which will be abridged or destroyed by such vacation.<sup>97</sup>

(xii) COSTS. Unless authorized by statute,<sup>98</sup> no costs can be allowed upon petitions for the discontinuance of highways.<sup>99</sup>

e. Operation and Effect. An order vacating a public highway should be limited to the road it purports to vacate, and which alone was authorized to be vacated.<sup>1</sup> The effect of such vacation is to extinguish the public easement,<sup>2</sup> and to relieve the public from any duty to keep the road in repair.<sup>3</sup> But it does not extinguish or alter private easements and rights in lands covered by the highway.<sup>4</sup> Nor is the easement of the public in a prescriptive way, which has been extinguished by the location of a highway, revived or restored by the subsequent discontinuance of the highway.<sup>5</sup>

f. Damages.<sup>6</sup> In the absence of special legislative provision,<sup>7</sup> it is held in Mere apprehension that a highway is about to be vacated is not sufficient ground for interference by injunction. Troy v. Doniphan County, 32 Kan. 507, 4 Pac. 1009.

Those whose lands abut a highway, and are affected by an unlawful closing thereof, may maintain a suit in equity to restrain the closing, although their lands do not abut the highway at the exact point of the obstruction. Hill v. Hoffman, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1899) 58 S. W. 929. But the closing of a public road will not be restrained so that plaintiff may continue its use in reaching a boat landing, where it appears that, if the road remained open, plaintiff could not thereby reach the boat landing without also crossing private property. Hyde v. Teal, 46 La. Ann. 645, 15 So. 416.

In New Hampshire petitions for the discontinuance of highways are held to be embraced in the general rule of the Revised Statutes that costs follow the event of every action or petition unless otherwise directed by the law or by the court. In re Barrington, 19 N. H. 399. Upon a petition by a town for leave to discontinue a road, such of the original petitioners as prove by affidavit that they appeared as parties on the docket to resist the petition are entitled to recover costs against the town, including the travel and attendance of witnesses, and the sums paid by the commissioners for their services; but no one who appeared as a party is entitled to be taxed as a witness. In re Barrington, supra. The original petitioners are chargeable only for such costs as are occasioned by their opposition to the discontinuance. In re Grafton, 22 N. H. 216; In re Hampstead, 20 N. H. 241. They are not answerable for the costs which are incurred before their appearance, or for such as must be incurred whether there is an appearance or not, or for the fees of the commissioners. In re Hampstead, supra. All costs which must be incurred, whether there is an appearance to oppose the petition or not, must be borne by the town. In re Grafton, 22 N. H. 216.

some jurisdictions that the vacation of a highway is not an injury to abutting landowners for which compensation must be made.<sup>8</sup> Nor can it make any difference that the party claiming damages has some interest in the road different from that of the public in general.<sup>9</sup> On the other hand many cases hold that the vacation of a highway in such a manner as to deprive an abutting owner of access to his property is a "taking" of property within the constitutional prohibition, for which compensation must be made.<sup>10</sup> This right to damages does not extend to owners of land not abutting on the highway vacated, and accessible by other

The vacation of a road does not take any person's private property. It leaves the property of individuals just as though no road had ever been established. If a party owns the land over which the road runs, his rights and privileges are increased by the vacation of the road, instead of being diminished. If he does not own the land over which it runs, then of course no property of his can be taken from him. Coffey County v. Venard, 10 Kan. 95. A private citizen has no right of property in a public road, although it passes over his own land, unless he owns the land itself subject to the easement. If the owner of land abutting on a public road has a right of property in the easement, it necessarily follows that no change or alteration can be made without first making compensation to the owner, as it would be a taking of private property for public use without compensation; but he has no other interest except such as is common to the entire public, and where he is the owner of the land and the road is discontinued, its use then reverts to him to the extent he has title, but no further. *Bradbury v. ways,<sup>11</sup> unless the statute allowing damages is broad enough to include such persons.<sup>12</sup> In no case can the petitioner establish a claim for damages unless he first shows that there has been a highway discontinued.<sup>13</sup> A petition for the assessment of damages must show a sufficient legal interest in petitioner.<sup>14</sup> The amount of damages awarded will not be reviewed in the absence of any suggestion of misconduct on the part of the tribunal charged with the duty of estimating the same.<sup>15</sup>

3. ABANDONMENT<sup>16</sup> — a. In General. A public highway may be extinguished and lost by abandonment.<sup>17</sup> To effect an abandonment there must be an

The term "taking" should not be used in an unreasonable or narrow sense. It should not be limited to the absolute conversion of property, and applied to land only; but it should include cases where the value is destroyed by the action of the government, or serious injury is inflicted to the property itself, or exclusion of the owner from its enjoyment, or from any of the appurtenances thereto. In either of these cases it is a taking within the meaning of the provision of the constitution. Pearsall v. Eaton County, 74 Mich. 558, 42 N. W. 77, 4 L. R. A. 193.

11. Nichols v. Richmond, 162 Mass. 170, 38 N. E. 501; Castle v. Berkshire County, 11 Gray (Mass.) 26.

The line has to be drawn somewhere, on practical grounds, between those who may and those who may not recover for damages caused by the discontinuance, in whole or in part, of a street or way; and it has been drawn so as to limit the right of recovery to damages which are special and peculiar, and different in kind from those suffered by the public at large. Nichols v. Richmond, 162 Mass. 170, 38 N. E. 501.

Time of accrual.—The damages for the closing of a road accrue at the time of the closing, as a personal right of the owner at that time, although they are not at once fixed and ascertained, and remain his, although he conveys the land previous to the award for damages being made, unless they are embraced in the deed. King v. New York, 102 N. Y. 171, 6 N. E. 395 [affirming 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 406].

12. See cases cited infra, this note.

Under the New Hampshire statute providing for "damages occasioned to any person" by the discontinuance of a highway, the county commissioners should assess such damages as are occasioned to owners of land abutting on the highway by the discontinuance, and to those whose land does not abut thereon, who suffer a peculiar and special damage not common to the public. In re Concord, 50 N. H. 530.

In Indiana Rev. St. (1894) § 6746 (Rev. St. (1881) § 5019), relating to the establishment and vacation of highways, and giving a remedy to any person "through" whose land the highway or change may pass, read in the light of that part of the statute relative to the opening and vacation of highways running into more than one county, which does not limit the right to recover damages to persons "through" whose land the road runs, gives a right to damages for vacation of a road to owners of land merely abutting on it.

Sherborn*, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 388 (holding that a petition for a jury to assess damages occasioned by discontinuing a town way, which did not contain a particular description of the land of the petitioner, and the situation of the same in relation to the way, or an allegation of the injury sustained by the petitioner, did not show sufficient legal interest in him to maintain the action).

Possession of land under a claim of title in fee is prima facie sufficient to support a petition for damages thereto sustained by reason of the discontinuance of a highway. Hawkins v. Berkshire County, 2 Allen (Mass.) 254.

intention to abandon;<sup>18</sup> and when relied upon it must be clearly and satisfactorily proven.<sup>19</sup>

b. By Non-User — (1) IN GENERAL. It seems to be settled by the weight of authority that non-user will not operate to discontinue a legally established highway,<sup>20</sup> unless coupled with affirmative evidence of a clear determination to abandon.<sup>21</sup> Especially is this so when there is no use of the premises adverse to the right in the public.<sup>22</sup> Nevertheless it is said that the law will raise a presumption of an extinguishment of the right when the road had been abandoned for a long period.<sup>23</sup> And cases concerning public highways can arise of such a character, and be founded upon such an actual notorious abandonment of the highway by the public, that justice requires that an equitable estoppel shall be asserted even against the public in favor of individuals.<sup>24</sup> By statute in some states non-user of a highway for a designated period operates as an abandonment thereof.<sup>25</sup>

The term "highway" applies to a street in a village incorporated under the general act for the incorporation of villages. Excelsior Brick Co. v. Haverstraw, 142 N. Y. 146, 36 N. E. 819; Horey v. Haverstraw, 124 N. Y. 273, 26 N. E. 532.

Prospective or retrospective operation.—In accordance with the general rule, such a statute is to be so construed as to operate prospectively, and unless the legislative intent that it shall act retrospectively is expressed in clear and unambiguous language, such a construction must be given to it. Amsbry v. Hinds, 48 N. Y. 57 [reversing 46 Barb. 622]. In Williams v. Smith, 68 Nebr. 329, 94 N. W. 150, it is held that Comp. St. (1901) c. 78, § 3, providing that all roads that have not been used within five years shall be deemed vacated, applies exclusively to roads that had not been used within five years before the enactment of such section. O'Dea v. State, 16 Nebr. 241, 20 N. W. 299.

A transient or partial non-user will not suffice. Cox v. East Fork Tp. Highway Com'rs, 194 Ill. 355, 62 N. E. 791; Lewiston v. Proctor, 27 Ill. 414.

Time of continuance.—Non-user by the public, in order to work abandonment of a highway acquired by prescription, must be shown to have been as long continued as its use originally was necessary to raise a prescriptive right, or as long as an adverse claimant must show possession in order to maintain title by force of the statute of limitations. Kelly Nail, etc., Co. v. Lawrence Furnace Co., 46 Ohio St. 544, 22 N. E. 639, 5 L. R. A. 552. It appears to be well settled by the authorities that, in order to work abandonment by simple non-user of an easement, all acts of enjoyment must have totally ceased for the same length of time necessary to create the original presumption. Kelly Nail, etc., Co. v. Lawrence Furnace Co., supra.

27. Newsome v. Walker, 1 Nebr. (Unoff.) 587, 95 N. W. 772.

The term "highway" does not mean that any part of a highway, however small, that has not been traveled or worked for five years, shall be considered legally discontinued. It is a highway eo nomine, as a generic term, to which the statute relates; at least enough of any public road or thoroughfare to be called in ordinary parlance a highway. Maire v. Kruse, 85 Wis. 302, 55 N. W. 389, 26 L. R. A. 449. Such term in a statute providing that any highway abandoned as a route of travel, and on which no highway tax had been expended for five years, shall be considered discontinued, was construed to include a country road more than half a mile in length connecting two other highways. Herrick v. Geneva, 92 Wis. 114, 65 N. W. 1024. Failure to use three miles of a road thirty miles long vacates such unused portion. Newsome v. Walker, 1 Nebr. (Unoff.) 587, 95 N. W. 772.

In Michigan it is held that part of a highway may be lost by non-user, but that such non-user will not affect the part kept in use. Wayne County Sav. Bank v. Stockwell, 84 Mich. 586, 48 N. W. 174, 22 Am. St. Rep. 708; Coleman v. Flint, etc., R. Co., 64 Mich. 160, 31 N. W. 47; Lyle v. Lesia, 64 Mich. 16, 31 N. W. 23; Gregory v. Knight, 50 Mich. 61, 14 N. W. 700.

29. Quinn v. Baage, 138 Iowa 426, 114 N. W. 205 (holding that the fact that a fence was not changed, save by one of two adjacent owners after the location of a highway between them, will not prevent the public from asserting its right to the portion inclosed by the other adjacent owner whenever increased travel and the exigencies of the public so require); Webb v. Butler County, 52 Kan. 375, 34 Pac. 973; Lane v. Kennedy,

Nor does a statute providing that all roads that have not been opened or used within a certain time shall be deemed vacated apply so as to vacate a part of the width of a road not actually used.<sup>30</sup>

c. By Failure to Open, Construct, or Repair. In the absence of any statutory provision on the subject, the fact that there has been delay in opening up a highway cannot generally be relied on to defeat the right to the way.<sup>31</sup> Nor will failure to keep a road in repair constitute an abandonment of the road.<sup>32</sup> But statutes exist in most states providing that highways shall be considered vacated unless opened within a certain time after their establishment.<sup>33</sup> These statutes are con-

Huebner*, 45 Iowa 574 (holding that where a highway has been established by the proper legal authority, although never actually opened, mere non-user for a period of ten years will not operate to defeat the right of the public therein, where there has been no adverse use of the land); Bruce v. Saline County, 26 Mo. 262 (holding that the lapse of six years after a road is ordered to be opened, before it is really opened, does not authorize a presumption that it has been abandoned).

33. See the statutes of the several states, and cases cited infra, this note.

The effect of such a statute is to invalidate the laying out of the highway if it is not opened within the prescribed time. Seidenschlag v. Antioch, 207 Ill. 280, 69 N. E. 949 [affirming 109 Ill. App. 291]; Marble v. Whitney, 28 N. Y. 297.

What constitutes "opening."—What must be done to constitute an opening of the road within the meaning of the statute is not precisely defined. It may be formally opened by the road overseers along the line of the road, or it may be informally opened by themselves or by others; or it may be opened in fact by the public travel taking possession of it and using it. Wilson v. Janes, 29 Kan. 233.

The opening of a highway for travel, under such a statute, is accomplished by removing obstructions existing at the time the highway is established, and it is not essential to the opening of a highway that unlawful obstructions subsequently erected thereon should be removed. Wragg v. Penn Tp., 94 Ill. 11, 34 Am. Rep. 199. A road is "opened," where the trees on it have been felled and cut up for more than the statutory period, although it is impassable except for those on foot. Baker v. Runnels, 12 Me. 235. It cannot be said that a road has been "opened" when nothing has been done to a large portion of it, and the remainder was a road opened and used as such before. State v. Cornville, 43 Me. 427. But it is not necessary, in order to prevent the discontinuance of a highway by operation of the statute, that it should be in such a state of repair as not to be subject to indictment. State v. Cornville, supra. Where a culvert is put in an established highway by the officer having authority to work the same, and the road is traveled more or less until fenced in by plaintiff, the facts are sufficient to show an acceptance of such highway by the public. Devoe v. Smeltzer, 86 Iowa 385, 53 N. W. 287. In the following cases the "opening" of the road was held sufficient to take the case out of the statute: Wiley v. Brimfield, 59 Ill. 306; Baker v. Runnels, 12 Me. 235; Marble v. Whitney, 28 N. Y. 297.

When limitation begins to run.—The time when the limitation begins to run is usually to be determined by reference to the particular statute. Under the Ohio statute the seven years' limitation runs from the date of the order granted for the opening. McClelland v. Miller, 28 Ohio St. 488. In Kansas, in the case of a county road established by a special act, the provision of Gen. St. (1901) § 6058, that any county road should be vacated if it remains unopened for seven years after the order is made or the authority given for opening the same, refers to the time that the act is passed, and not to the time an order for an opening of the road is made by the county commissioners. Cowley County v. Johnson, 76 Kan. 65, 90 Pac. 805. In New York the twenty-third section of the act which was passed March 19, 1813 (2 Rev. Laws 277) enacts, "that if any public highway already laid out, or hereafter to be laid out, shall not be opened and worked within six years after the passing of this act, or from the time of its being so laid out, the same shall cease to be strued to apply only to roads which have been authorized, but never in fact opened.<sup>34</sup> To avoid vacation the road must be opened its entire length within the time limited.<sup>35</sup>

a public highway or road, for any use, intent or purpose whatsoever." The act is prospective. It speaks in the future tense. It requires that the road shall be opened and worked, &c. — not, shall have been opened and worked, &c. The clause, "or from the time of its being so laid out," refers to those roads only, to be laid out subsequent to the time at which the act passed. Lyon v. Munson, 2 Cow. 426. Time consumed in litigation must not be estimated as part of the period within which a public road is required by statute to be opened after it is laid. Lyons Highway Com'rs v. People, 38 Ill. 347.

In Massachusetts, under Pub. St. c. 49, § 88, providing that the laying out of a way shall be void as against the owner of any land over which the same is located, unless possession is taken of such land, for the purpose of constructing such way, within two years from the time when the right to take it accrues, failure to take possession for such time avoids the proceedings, so as to leave the county commissioners to proceed again for laying out a way including the same land. Folsom v. Middlesex County, 173 Mass. 48, 53 N. E. 155; Pickford v. Lynn, 98 Mass. 491. An entry upon any part of the land embraced in the location or alteration of a way within two years from the passage of an order therefor is a sufficient entry upon all under such statute. Poor v. Blake, 123 Mass. 543. And see Gilkey v. Watertown, 141 Mass. 317, 5 N. E. 152. The placing of stone bounds in accordance with an order for widening a street is not, as a matter of law, a taking possession, within section 88. Parker v. Norfolk County, 150 Mass. 489, 23 N. E. 231.

34. Topeka v. Russam, 30 Kan. 550, 2 Pac. 669; Wilson v. Janes, 29 Kan. 233; Tainter v. Morrilstown, 19 N. J. Eq. 46; Hedleston v. Hendricks, 52 Ohio St. 460, 40 N. E. 408; Grove v. Graham, 41 Ohio St. 303; McClelland v. Miller, 28 Ohio St. 488; Peck v. Clark, 19 Ohio 367.

In Indiana, Rev. St. (1843), p. 332, § 54, providing that every highway which shall not be opened and worked within six years from the time of its being laid out shall cease to be a highway, does not apply to streets. Indianapolis v. Croas, 7 Ind. 9.

In Kansas, under an act of the legislature declaring all section lines in a certain county to be public highways, and providing that they shall be opened by the county commissioners on the petition of ten householders, such section lines become county roads within Gen. St. (1901) § 6058, providing that any part of a county road not opened for travel within a stated time shall be vacated. Cowley County v. Johnson, 76 Kan. 65, 90 Pac. 805.

The New York statute provides that "every public highway and private road already laid out and dedicated to the use of the public, that shall not have been opened and worked within six years from the time of its being so laid out, and every such highway hereafter to be laid out that shall not be opened and worked within the like period, shall cease to be a road for any purpose whatever." The courts of that state have repeatedly held that this statute applies to all county roads and city streets in which the public have an easement only. Horey v. Haverstraw, 124 N. Y. 273, 26 N. E. 532; Buffalo v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 68 N. Y. App. Div. 488, 74 N. Y. Suppl. 343 [affirmed in 178 N. Y. 561, 70 N. E. 1097]; Mangam v. Sing Sing, 11 N. Y. App. Div. 212, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 950; Buffalo v. Hoffeld, 6 Misc. 197, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 869.

In Washington, Ballinger Annot. Codes & St. § 3803 (Pierce Code, § 7854), providing that any "county road" or part thereof, which remains unopened for public use for a space of five years after the order is made or authority granted for opening the same, shall be vacated and the authority for building it barred by lapse of time, is applicable to streets dedicated through platted land outside the limits of any incorporated city or town. Murphy v. King County, 45 Wash. 587, 88 Pac. 1115.

The Wisconsin statute provides that "every public highway already laid out, or which shall hereafter be laid out, shall cease to be considered a public highway at the expiration of four years from the time it was so laid out, except such parts thereof as shall have been opened and worked within such time." And the court has held that the act only applied to roads or streets laid out by the public authorities. The language of the statute referred to is not applicable to streets dedicated or granted by recorded plat, operating as a statutory conveyance. Paine Lumber Co. v. Oshkosh, 89 Wis. 449, 61 N. W. 1108.

35. Wragg v. Penn Tp., 94 Ill. 11, 34 Am. Rep. 199 (holding that no unlawful obstruction of an established highway, after it has been opened for travel, can be considered in determining whether the entire road has been opened within the five years required by law after its establishment); Green v. Green, 34 Ill. 320; State v. Cornville, 43 Me. 427 (holding that it cannot be said that a road has been "opened" when nothing has been done to a large portion of it, and the remainder was a road open and used as such before); Beckwith v. Whalen, 70 N. Y. 430, 435 [affirming 9 Hun 408] (where it is said: "A highway cannot be said to be opened and worked, unless it is passable for its entire length. It must be opened as a highway over its entire route. It need not be worked in every part, but it must be worked sufficiently to be passable for public travel"). Compare Beckwith v. Whalen, 65 N. Y. 322 [reversing 5 Lans. 376]; Marble v. Whitney, 28 N. Y. 297; People v. Marlette, 94 N. Y. App. Div.

d. By Reason of Obstructions or Encroachments. It is a familiar rule that an encroachment or obstruction placed upon a highway,<sup>36</sup> or the erection of bars and gates,<sup>37</sup> will not affect or diminish the public rights in it, or constitute an abandonment in favor of an abutting owner. The encroachment may, however, be submitted to for such a period of time as to raise a fair presumption of abandonment;<sup>38</sup> and the public may be estopped to claim any easement in a road where it has for years been in disuse and closed to travel by permanent structures built across the entire width.<sup>39</sup>

e. By Acceptance or Use of New Road in Place of Old. The mere building of a new highway is ineffectual to work an abandonment of an old road, where the former is a new and separate highway.<sup>40</sup> But the public will lose their right to a highway where they have abandoned it and accepted another in its stead for such a length of time, and under such circumstances, as to give them a title to the substituted road.<sup>41</sup> In order to provide against the implication arising from the establishment of a new road, it is sometimes provided by statute that the old road shall not be vacated thereby, unless such vacation is prayed for in the petition, and so declared in the order establishing the new road.<sup>42</sup>

Y. 148 (where it is said: "At most it shows an acquiescence by the public and the public authorities, in a partial obstruction of the highway, for the convenience of the occupants; but such acquiescence is no evidence that the road was not opened and worked as a public highway, or that it was abandoned as such"); *Hill v. Acceptance of new road necessary.—A party cannot, by his own act, relocate a road. That can only be done by those having the power by law. The fact that a party has given other ground for a road, without proof of acceptance by the public authorities, will not show an abandonment of the old line. Galbraith v. Littiech, 73 Ill. 209.

42. See Lyons v. Mullen, 78 Nebr. 151, 110 N. W. 743. In Chadwick v. McCausland, 47 Me. 342, it is held that if by long user the public has acquired an easement in the land over which a road passes, the laying out by the town of another road near the first one will not operate as a discontinuance of the latter, or defeat the public easement, if the record is silent upon the subject.

does not constitute an abandonment of such road, even under a statute providing that a road remaining unopened or unused for a certain period shall be deemed vacated.<sup>46</sup>

III. TITLE TO HIGHWAYS, AND RIGHTS OF PUBLIC AND ABUTTING OWNERS.

A. Title to Highways <sup>47</sup> — 1. IN GENERAL. The laying out of a highway gives to the public a mere right of passage; and the owner of the soil is not thereby divested of his title to the land.<sup>48</sup> While it is entirely competent for the legis-

A highway is nothing but an easement comprehending merely the right of all the individuals in the community to pass and repass, with the incidental right in the public to do all the acts necessary to keep it in repair. This easement does not comprehend any interest in the soil, or give the public the legal possession of it. Smith v. San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 463, 30 Pac. 591; Newton v. New York, etc., R. Co., 72 Conn. 420, 44 Atl. 813; Peck v. Smith, 1 Conn. 103, 6 Am. Dec. 216; Starr v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 24 N. J. L. 592; Kelsey v. King, 1 Transcr. App. (N. Y.) 133, 33 How. The general rule is that when the language of the statute will bear a construction which will leave the fee in the landowner, that construction will be preferred. Mott v. Eno, 181 N. Y. 346, 74 N. E. 229.

52. Alling v. Burlock, 46 Conn. 504.

Particular deeds construed.—Where land was conveyed by a warranty deed to a town "for the sole use and purpose of a public highway," it was held that the deed conveyed more than an easement, and that so long as the premises continued to be used for a highway the town had a complete title to the fee of the land. Taylor v. Danbury Public Hall Co., 35 Conn. 430. So where owners of land abutting on a road conveyed a strip to the city by a deed reciting that the grantors "grant, release and forever quit claim" so much of their lands as might be necessary for a road of a specified breadth "to and for the sole and only use of a public road forever," it was held that the deed conveyed to the city a fee in the land covered thereby. Mitchell v. Einstein, 105 N. Y. App. Div. 413, 94 N. Y. Suppl. 210 [reversing 42 Misc. 358, 86 N. Y. Suppl. 759]. Where one grants land for the purpose of a public highway, adding also "the reversion and remainder," his reversionary right vests in his grantee. Vaughn v. Stuzaker, 16 Ind. 338.

Particular deeds construed.—An exception or reservation of an existing highway passing through the lands conveyed is held to embrace only the easement or right of the public in the highway and does not exempt the fee. Peck v. Smith, 1 Conn. 103, 6 Am. Dec. 216; Day v. Philbrook, 85 Me. 90, 26 Atl. 999; Kuhn v. Farnsworth, 69 Me. 404; Stetson v. Dow, 16 Gray (Mass.) 372; Capron v. Kingman, 64 N. hold his interest in a road to the middle of it, after parting with all his right and title to the adjoining land, is never to be presumed.<sup>55</sup>

2. ON VACATION OR ABANDONMENT.<sup>56</sup> From the principles stated in the preceding section it regularly follows that when the highway is discontinued or abandoned the land becomes discharged of this servitude,<sup>57</sup> and the entire and exclusive enjoyment reverts to the proprietor of the soil,<sup>58</sup> except where the fee to the highway has passed to the public.<sup>59</sup> This general rule governs even in cases where a new and different one is substituted for the one abandoned.<sup>60</sup> Where the public easement upon lands has been once extinguished, it cannot be revived except by new dedication or condemnation.<sup>61</sup> Under the statutes of some states the adjoining owners are entitled to reclaim the soil of a vacated road to the center thereof,<sup>62</sup> unless the ground was originally taken in unequal proportions, in which case the

of the land covered by a public highway across the premises, and not simply of the easement therein, and the fee of such land remained in the grantor and passed to a subsequent purchaser from him. The exception is "from the premises," and the decision is based upon the phraseology, without impairing the general doctrine of the above cases. A reservation of the right to open a highway "the whole length of said east line. And if, at any future time, a public highway shall be laid out . . . all the rights of [the grantor], in said reserved highway, shall revert to [the grantee]," reserves the right to dedicate a highway, the fee therein to belong to the grantee. Dunn v. Sanford, 51 Conn. 443. Where one dedicated a strip of land in front of his premises to the public as a highway, and expressly excepted it as such in his deed of the land, the grantee cannot assume the ownership of the strip, although it was never actually used as a public highway. *Southern Pac. Easements of this character may cease to exist, like all other burdens upon land, and when they do the land is freed from the encumbrance as completely as though it had never existed, and the owner of the soil has an absolute title to the same. Benham v. Potter, 52 Conn. 248.

According to the civil law, a grant of land calling for a public road as a boundary conveyed no title to the soil covered by the road; but the title to the road-bed remained in the sovereignty. Hence, upon the abandonment of the road as a highway, the land covered by it became vacant public domain, subject to entry, and did not belong, as it would at common law, to proprietors whose lands were bounded by the road. Mitchell v. Bass, 33 Tex. 259.

Consideration for such reversion.—The acquisition of title to vacated streets by reversion to the abutting lot-owners is supported by the consideration of the enhanced price paid for such lots in consequence of the prospective use of such streets. *Olin v. Effect on private easements.—While the effect of N. Y. Laws (1867), c. 697, authorizing the closing of the Bloomingdale road, was to extinguish the public easement, it did not operate to extinguish private easements and rights in lands covered by the public highway, but left them as they were. *Holloway v. owners may reclaim in the proportion of the original contribution.<sup>63</sup> The legislature, in discontinuing a road, can vest in abutting owners only such title to the road-bed as is owned by the public.<sup>64</sup>

3. RIGHT TO SOIL AND MATERIALS<sup>65</sup> — a. In General. Notwithstanding the laying out of the highway and the condemnation of the land to the use of the public for travel, the title to the soil, and all the profits thereof consistent with the existence of the easement, remain in the original owner.<sup>66</sup> The title of the owner, subject only to the easement, remains perfect, not only to the land covered by the highway, but to all the material within its boundaries, except such as may be needed to build or to maintain the road.<sup>67</sup> He therefore has title to any superfluous earth, gravel, or rock, not necessary or useful to the construction or repair of the highway,<sup>68</sup> and to all mines or quarries,<sup>69</sup> trees,<sup>70</sup> grass,<sup>71</sup> springs of water,<sup>72</sup> growing

The only right the public acquire in relation to such trees is that of cutting down and removing to a convenient distance, for the use of the owner, such trees as it is necessary to remove in order to the making or repair of the road in a proper and reasonable manner. They acquire no right to use any trees or timber growing on the land for the purpose of building or repairing the road. Baker v. Shephard, 24 N. H. 208; Niagara Falls Suspension Bridge Co. v. Bachman, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 523 [reversed on other grounds in 66 N. Y. 261]; Tucker v. Eldred, 6 R. I. 404. And see Makepeace v. Worden, 1 N. H. 16.

81. New Haven v. Sargent, 38 Conn. 50, 9 Am. Rep. 360; Overman v. May, 35 Iowa 89; Anderson v. Van Tassel, 53 N. Y. 631; Jackson v. Hathaway, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 447, 8 Am. Dec. 263; Felch v. Gilman, 22 Vt. 38.

Whether the use made of the stone was reasonable and proper is a mixed question of law and fact. Overman v. May, 35 Iowa 89.

Split stone.—The ownership of split stone lying upon land taken for a highway is not affected by the location, and the officers of the town have no right to use such stone in constructing the highway. Small v. Danville, 51 Me. 359.

B. Rights of Public — 1. TO USE HIGHWAY FOR OTHER PUBLIC PURPOSES.<sup>82</sup>

The right of the public in a highway consists in the privilege of passage,<sup>83</sup> and such privileges as are annexed as incidents by usage or custom,<sup>84</sup> as the right to make sewers and drains,<sup>85</sup> lay gas and water pipes,<sup>86</sup> make reservoirs,<sup>87</sup> and many other

Right to remove materials from one point to another.—As to the right of the authorities to take material from within the limits of a highway at one point, not for, or as an incident to, the improvement of the highway at that point, but for use upon that or other highways remote from the owner's land, without making compensation therefor, the authorities are at variance. In Bissell v. Collins, 28 Mich. 277, 15 Am. Rep. 217, the officials were held authorized to take gravel from below grade on one street, and haul it out to improve another, filling with less valuable material the excavation thus made. In line with this case are Bundy v. Catto, 61 Ill. App. 209; Upham v. Marsh, 128 Mass. 546; Denniston v. Clark, 125 Mass. 216, 222; Adams v. Emerson, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 57; Baxter v. Winooski Turnpike Co., 22 Vt. 114, 52 Am. Dec. 84; Huston v. Ft. Atkinson, 56 Wis. 350, 14 N. W. 444. In Denniston v. Clark, supra, it is said that highway officials are authorized "for the purpose of repairing the same highway, turnpike or railroad, to take earth, gravel or stones from one part and deposit them on another," and that all the highways within one municipal jurisdiction are, for such purposes, to be regarded as one. New Haven v. Sargent, 38 Conn. 50, 9 Am. Rep. 360, decides only that the city is entitled to use, to grade one street, soil which must necessarily be removed in grading another street. In Robert v. Sadler, 104 N. Y. 229, 10 N. E. 428, 58 Am. Rep. 498, the court of appeals, after reviewing some of these cases, with others from New York, declined to accede to the Michigan doctrine, and declared that the municipality could not remove, for use in other places, the gravel, etc., from within the boundaries of the highway, where this removal was not necessary to, or intended for, the establishment of the proper grade on that part of the highway. To the same effect are Anderson v. Bement, 13 Ind. App. 248, 41 N. E. 547; Ladd v. French, 3 Silv. Sup. (N. Y.) 1, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 56. In Niagara Falls Suspension Bridge Co. v. Bachman, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 523 [reversed on other grounds in 66 N. Y. 261], it was said that gravel might be removed to other parts of the road, but it is apparent that this was gravel necessary to be removed in order to get the highway to its grade. In Turner v. Rising Sun, etc. Co., 71 Ind. 547, it is decided that, although, by a lawful appropriation, a public highway had become the property of the turnpike company, for the purpose of maintaining and constructing its road thereon, with a statutory provision authorizing it to take from the land so occupied stone, gravel, etc., for the road's construction, yet, under the law, it could not open a gravel pit in the highway, and haul out the gravel generally upon its road, without compensating the landowner therefor.

No distinction between streets and highways.—As to the rights of the public in highways held under valid dedications and acceptances, and the power of the legislature over the same, there is no distinction between streets of incorporated cities and towns and country roads. Hardman v. Cabot, 60 W. Va. 664, 55 S. E. 756, 7 L. R. A. N. S. 506.

The user of a highway by touts for the purpose of watching the trials of race-horses on adjoining downs was held to be an unreasonable user, and such as to render them liable in an action of trespass to the owner of the soil. *Hickman v. 87. West v. Bancroft, 32 Vt. 367, holding that the proper public authorities of a town have a right to place in a highway a reservoir for the purpose of retaining water to sprinkle the highway with, and the owner of the fee of the land where such reservoir is placed cannot maintain an action against such authorities for so doing.

acts which the public may require;<sup>88</sup> but the public has no right in a highway which is incongruous with the purpose for which it was originally created, and which at the same time is injurious to the proprietor of the soil.<sup>89</sup>

C. Rights of Abutting Owners<sup>92</sup> — 1. IN GENERAL. An abutting landowner has by reason of that ownership some interest in the highway which is not common to the public generally,<sup>93</sup> and this regardless of whether the fee of the highway is in him or not.<sup>94</sup> This interest includes the easement of access,<sup>95</sup> and

All acts which tend to facilitate travel, and add to the ease, comfort, and convenience of the traveler, or his beasts, whether it be by cutting down the hills, filling the ravines, paving the roads, erecting watering troughs, or sprinkling the streets, are acts which it is proper and often necessary for the public to do. West v. Baneroff, 32 Vt. 367.

Construction of side-path.—Laws (1900), c. 640, § 2, providing that no side-path shall be constructed on or along any regularly constructed sidewalk except with the consent of the abutting owner, does not require the abutting owner's consent to a side-path without the sidewalk. *O'Donnell v. These easements of the abutting landowner are in addition to such as he possesses as one of the public, to whose use the property has been subjected. This easement of access includes the right of ingress, egress, and regress, a right of way from a locus a quo to the locus ad quem, and from the latter forth to any other spot to which the party may lawfully go, or back to the locus a quo. *Newton v. of light and air,<sup>96</sup> the right to lateral support,<sup>97</sup> and the right to have the highway kept open as a thoroughfare to the whole community for the purpose of travel.<sup>98</sup>

2. To USE HIGHWAY FOR PRIVATE PURPOSE.<sup>99</sup> The owner of land through which a highway passes has a right to make any reasonable use of the highway which does not interfere with the enjoyment of the public easement.<sup>1</sup> Thus a reasonable necessary for him to reach the traveled part, he has the right to bridge a ditch or construct a grade for that purpose (Newton v. New York, etc., R. Co., supra; Eagle Tp. Highway Com'rs v. Ely, 54 Mich. 173, 19 N. W. 940); but in doing so he has no right wilfully to obstruct such ditch or highway, his rights as a private landowner being subordinate to the public right of constructing and keeping the highways in repair (Eagle Tp. Highway Com'rs v. Ely, supra). So he may ordinarily construct a sidewalk, set hitching-posts, and place stepping-stones to enable passengers to enter or alight from a carriage more readily. Newton v. New York, etc., R. Co., supra. But this right is subject to the condition that it must not unreasonably obstruct the way. Appleton v. Nantucket, 121 Mass. 161. Such a sidewalk laid by an individual lot-owner along the line of his lot, which projects seven and one-half feet into the public highway, and the placing by said lot-owner of six trees and two hitching-posts along the outer edge of said pavement, do not constitute a public nuisance, in the absence of anything further to show that they create an unreasonable obstruction to the carriage-way. See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 296.

What may be deemed a reasonable and proper use of a public highway must depend much on the local situation, and much on public usage. Underwood v. Carney, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 285; Van O'Linda v. Lothrop, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 292, 32 Am. Dec. 261.

Right to work quarry.—Where defendant was the owner of the land within the limits of a country highway, subject only to the public easement, and the land contained a valuable deposit of sandstone, it was held that defendant was not required to maintain the highway unobstructed to its full width, so as not to interfere at all with the use of the highway for public travel, as a condition of its right to remove the sandstone, but was only required to keep a passageway open and in good repair within the limits of the highway on the surface of the ground, or by bridges of width sufficient to enable teams to pass each other. Clarendon v. Medina Quarry Co., 102 N. Y. App. Div. 217, 92 N. Y. Suppl. 530 [affirmed in 92 N. Y. Suppl. 1148].

Right to dig ditch.—A property-owner has a right to dig a ditch, necessary for the drainage of his lands, along a highway bordering his property, provided he does not render the use of the highway less safe, useful, or convenient for the public; but if his ditch creates an obstruction his acts become unlawful (Woodruff v. Neal, 28 Conn. 165; Nelson v. Fehd, 203 Ill. 120, 67 N. E. 828 [affirming 104 Ill. App. 114]; Clay v. Hart, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 110, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 43 [affirmed in 41 N. Y. App. Div. 625, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 1150]; Baring v. Heyward, 2 Speers (S. C.) 553); and to this end he is bound to erect bridges over the passage where it crosses the highway, and keep them in repair; and a subsequent owner of the land who continues the watercourse across the highway is bound to repair the bridge (Woodring v. Forks Tp., 28 Pa. St. 355, 70 Am. Dec. 134). No person has a right to dig on his own land so as to endanger the safety of the highway or to cause the earth to fall down. Hudson County v. Woodcliff Land Imp. Co., 74 N. J. L. 355, 65 Atl. 844; Milburn v. Fowler, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 568.

Right to plant trees and shrubs.—An abutting owner, although owning the fee to the center of a street, can only maintain trees and shrubs thereon subject to the right of other abutters to have them removed in the exercise of their right to use the whole length and breadth of the street for passage. Pinkerton v. Randolph, 200 Mass. 24, 85 N. E. 892. N. Y. Laws (1863), c. 93, providing that persons owning land fronting on any highway may plant shade trees along the roadside within a certain distance from the outward line of the highway, authorizes abutting owners to plant trees in the highways, without reference to the ownership of the fee. Edsall v. Howell, 86 Hun (N. Y.) 424, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 82.

use may be made of highways for moving buildings,<sup>2</sup> receiving or delivering goods from stores or warehouses or the like,<sup>3</sup> and temporarily depositing goods, fuel, and building materials;<sup>4</sup> but a systematic and continued encroachment upon a highway, although for the purpose of carrying on a lawful business, is unjustifiable.<sup>5</sup> These rights of the owner may grow less and less, as the public needs increase.<sup>6</sup> But at all times he retains all that is not needed for public uses, subject, however, to municipal or police regulations.<sup>7</sup>

Right to maintain gates for protection of adjoining land.—Unless authorized to do so (see infra, VI, D), landowners have no right to put up gates on public highways for the purpose of protecting their land from injury (Henby v. Ripley Tp., 10 Ind. 45); but where a road has been encumbered for forty years with movable bars or gates, the right to use the road exists subject to such obstruction (Green v. Bethea, 30 Ga. 896; Hinks v. Hinks, 46 Me. 423).

The control of highways and the grades and changes made thereon are not to be determined by the abutting owners, but are by statute placed under the control of the local municipal authorities. It follows that an abutting owner has no right to take possession of a public road or street and change its grade without authority from the body having it under statutory control, and when such action is taken a right of action inures to other abutting owners. McCarthy v. Pennsylvania Land, etc., Co., 5 Pa. Super. Ct. 641. And see Davis v. Pickerell, 139 Iowa 186, 117 N. W. 276.

Dec. 159, for illegal acts affecting his limited interest. In Mayhew v. Norton, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 357, 28 Am. Dec. 300, it was held that trespass may be supported by the owner of the soil for taking away the grass or herbage, but will not lie for any encumbrance or nuisance erected.

Vermont.—Pettibone v. Purdy, 7 Vt. 514.

United States.—Barclay v. Howell, 6 Pet. 498, 8 L. ed. 477.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 297.

Where one owns lands extending only to the line of the road, case is the only remedy. Bingham v. Doane, 9 Ohio 165.

Necessity of interest in road.—One who has moved to establish a public road across another's land has no interest in the road by virtue of any agreement with the owner of the fee that entitles him to maintain trespass on the case against a railroad for injury to the roadway by making a deep cut across it. Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Rasnake, 90 Va. 170, 17 S. E. 879.

Use of abusive language by passer-by.—A person is a trespasser who, instead of passing along on the side of a street, stops on it, in front of a man's house, and remains there, using toward him abusive and insulting language. Adams v. Rivers, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 390.

13. Bradley v. Pharr, 45 La. Ann. 426, 12 So. 618, 19 L. R. A. 647.

Necessity of special injury.—The owner of the fee in lands abutting upon or constituting a part of a public road is entitled to equitable relief for injuries or obstructions of a special or distinct character from those sustained by the general public (Dubach v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 89 Mo. 483, 1 S. W. 86; H. B. Anthony Shoe Co. v. West Jersey R. Co., 57 N. J. Eq. 607, 42 Atl. 279; Prudden v. Morris, etc., R. Co., 19 N. J. Eq. 386; Bechtel v. Carlslake, 11 N. J. Eq. 500; Ackerman v. True, 175 N. Y. 353, 67 N. E. 629 [reversing 71 N. Y. App. Div. 143, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 695]; Madden v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 73, 11 Ohio Cir. Dec. 571; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 269; Pettibone v. Hamilton, 40 Wis. 402), as where his right of access is interfered with (Ruthstrom v. Peterson, 72 Kan. 679, 83 Pac. 825; Finegan v. Eckerson, 26 Misc. (N. Y.) 574, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 605; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 487; Gorton v. Tiffany, 14 R. I. 95).

An abutting owner who does not own the ultimate fee in the soil has nevertheless his rights of ingress and egress, and if he sustains private or particular injury not in common with the annoyance to the public, may have his redress. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist.

487. But he cannot maintain a suit to restrain a nuisance which injures him only in a right enjoyed by him as one of the public. H. B. Anthony Shoe Co. v. West Jersey R. Co., 57 N. J. Eq. 607, 42 Atl. 279; Cobb v. Warren St. R. Co., 218 Pa. St. 366, 67 Atl. 654.

Property need not actually abut way.—It is not essential, in order to entitle such property-owner to an injunction, that his property should actually abut upon such way. It is sufficient if it is near enough to be materially affected by closing or obstructing such way. Madden v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 73, 11 Ohio Cir. Dec. 571.

It must appear that the injuries will be reasonably certain to occur before the court should interfere with or obstruct highway commissioners in improving the public roads according to their judgment. Barnard v. Nokomis Highway Com'rs, 172 Ill. 391, 50 N. E. 120 [affirming 71 Ill. App. 187].

Temporary, and not unreasonable, use of the roadway in front of plaintiff's premises, by teams and trucks standing in line to unload in turn on defendant's adjoining premises, will not be enjoined. Manley v. Leggett, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 562, 17 N. Y. Suppl. 68.

To restrain trespass.—An injunction to restrain trespasses will be refused where such trespasses were merely technical and no property rights were threatened or infringed. Fielden v. Cox, 22 T. L. R. 411.

14. California.—Coburn v. Ames, 52 Cal. 385, 28 Am. Rep. 634.

Illinois.—Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill. 157.

Indiana.—Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Noftsgger, 148 Ind. 101, 47 N. E. 332; Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542, 11 N. E. 467, 59 Am. Rep. 225; Ross v. Thompson, 78 Ind. 90.

Maine.—Sutherland v. Jackson, 32 Me. 80.

New York.—Ackerman v. True, 175 N. Y. 353, 67 N. E. 629 [reversing 71 N. Y. App. Div. 143, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 695], holding that the fact that an encroachment on a highway by an adjoining landowner was also a public nuisance does not prevent a private action against him for injuries to the adjoining lands.

Texas.—Heilbron v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co., (Civ. App. 1908) 113 S. W. 610, 979.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 297.

The interruption of access is a special injury different in kind from that suffered by the public generally, and entitles an abutting owner to maintain an action for damages. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Noftsgger, 148 Ind. 101, 47 N. E. 332; Dantzer v. Indianapolis Union R. Co., 141 Ind. 604, 39 N. E. 223, 50 Am. St. Rep. 343, 34 L. R. A. 769; Walker v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 52 La. nuisance.<sup>15</sup> So trover lies for cutting timber within the limits of a highway,<sup>16</sup> or for taking earth or stone not necessary to the construction or repair thereof.<sup>17</sup> No action lies for obstructing a highway until it is opened.<sup>18</sup>

IV. HIGHWAY DISTRICTS AND OFFICERS.

A. Districts—1. NATURE. Road districts are involuntary political subdivisions of the state created by general laws to aid in the administration of government.<sup>19</sup>

Pleading.—A complaint for impeding plaintiff's ingress and egress to his lots, by obstructing the highway on which they abut, need not aver he had the right of ingress and egress, such right being presumed. Yates v. Big Sandy R. Co., 89 S. W. 108, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 206. A complaint alleging that defendant placed an embankment four feet high in the highway in front of and parallel with plaintiff's lots, thereby impeding his ingress and egress, shows apparent injury. Yates v. Big Sandy R. Co., supra.

Who may sue.—One may sue for damages to lots by obstruction of a highway, although the legal title is held by another as trustee for him. Yates v. Big Sandy R. Co., 89 S. W. 108, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 206.

Damages.—In ascertaining the damages an abutting owner sustains by reason of an obstruction or encroachment on the highway, the rule is to prove the value of his property with the obstruction or encroachment, and its value with the same removed, and the difference is the measure of the loss. Ackerman v. True, 175 N. Y. 353, 67 N. E. 629 [reversing 71 N. Y. App. Div. 143, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 695], holding that the fact that plaintiff can sell his property for more than he could before the alleged encroachment does not render a dismissal of the complaint on the merits proper, where his property is worth about fifteen thousand dollars less with the encroachment than without it. In an action to recover damages for an obstruction of an abutting lot-owner's rights in a highway, where the character of the injury is permanent, and the complaint recognizes the right of defendant to continue in the use of the property wrongfully appropriated, and to acquire, as a result of the suit, the title thereto, the damages should be assessed on the basis of the permanent depreciation in value of the property injured (Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542, 11 N. E. 467, 59 Am. Rep. 225; Wallace v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 47 Mo. App. 491, holding that an embankment of stone and earth in a street in front of a lot obstructing ingress and egress thereto is a permanent structure, and damages for such injury are original and may at once be estimated and compensated); but where the action is in trespass, to recover for a past injury, without recognizing the legality of the obstruction, or defendant's right to continue it as a result of the suit, only such damages can be recovered as accrued up to the time of the commencement of the action (Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, supra). Incidental damages in common with the rest of the public are not the subject of recovery. Dantzer v. Indianapolis Union R. Co., 141

Ind. 604, 39 N. E. 223, 50 Am. St. Rep. 343, 34 L. R. A. 769; Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, supra. Thus for merely incidental damages as result from the careful construction and prudent operation of a railroad on the land of another, even though it be in a public street, the adjacent proprietor cannot recover. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Noftzger, 148 Ind. 101, 47 N. E. 332. So an obstruction or discontinuance of the highway at another place, although it may indirectly affect the value of his property by requiring a longer and more circuitous route to reach it, is not an injury or tort for which the landowner can recover damages. Newton v. New York, etc., R. Co., 72 Conn. 420, 44 Atl. 813; Jacksonville, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, 34 Fla. 346, 16 So. 282, 26 L. R. A. 410. The mere fact of interference with his right of access will entitle an abutting owner to at least nominal damages. Bannon v. Murphy, 38 S. W. 889, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 989. Damages arising from both a temporary and a permanent nuisance may be recovered in the same action. Wallace v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 47 Mo. App. 491.

15. Hargro v. Hodgdon, 89 Cal. 623, 26 Pac. 1106; Coburn v. Ames, 52 Cal. 385, 28 Am. Rep. 634; Green v. Asher, 11 S. W. 286, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 1006; Smith v. Putnam, 62 N. H. 369; Ackerman v. True, 175 N. Y. 353, 67 N. E. 629 [reversing 71 N. Y. App. Div. 143, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 695].

Abatement by owner.—Every proprietor of land adjoining a highway has a right to reasonable access to its traveled part; and any fence or other obstruction which so annoys or encumbers it as essentially to interfere with this right is a nuisance, and may be removed by such proprietor. Hubbard v. Deming, 21 Conn. 356. So where one stops in the road and uses loud and indecent language, he thereby becomes a trespasser, and the owner of the soil has the right to abate the nuisance. State v. Davis, 80 N. C. 351, 30 Am. Rep. 86.

Pleading.—Where a complaint to abate a nuisance does not explicitly state that plaintiff has sustained an injury different in kind from the general public, it is insufficient on special demurrer; but when such injury appears by inference it is proper to overrule a motion for judgment on the pleadings at the commencement of the trial. Hargo v. Hodgdon, 89 Cal. 623, 26 Pac. 1106.

16. Sanderson v. Haverstick, 8 Pa. St. 294.

17. Phillips v. Bowers, 7 Gray (Mass.) 21.

18. Southerland v. Jackson, 30 Me. 462, 50 Am. Dec. 633.

19. Farmer v. Myles, 106 La. 333, 30 So. 858.

In some jurisdictions, however, road districts have no separate corporate existence, and are not political entities.<sup>20</sup>

3. ASSIGNMENT TO OFFICERS. It is the duty of the proper authorities to assign road districts to the care of the proper officers.<sup>25</sup>

20. San Bernardino County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 137 Cal. 659, 70 Pac. 782; Denver v. Myers, 63 Nebr. 107, 88 N. W. 191; Dixon County v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 1 Nebr. (Unoff.) 240, 95 N. W. 340; Madden v. Lancaster County, 65 Fed. 188, 12 C. C. A. 566; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Oswego, 59 Fed. 58, 7 C. C. A. 669.

21. Idaho.—Genesee v. Latah County, 4 Ida. 141, 36 Pac. 701, under control of the trustees.

Illinois.—Keech v. People, 22 Ill. 478, for roads on division lines.

Iowa.—Marks v. Woodbury, 47 Iowa 452, only territory not in a city.

Missouri.—State v. Gordon, 197 Mo. 55, 94 S. W. 987, confined to counties not having township organization.

New York.—See Shapter v. Carroll, 18 N. Y. App. Div. 390, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 202, where road district within a town was treated as distinct from the rest of the town.

Pennsylvania.—Pitt Tp. Road Case, 8 Watts & S. 74, district being subject to general road laws until it is admitted into the city.

Vermont.—Newbury v. Tenney, 2 Aik. 295, public record of division being necessary.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 301.

Different systems of road supervision compared see Miller v. Kern County, 137 Cal. 516, 70 Pac. 549; Raymond Special Road Dist. v. Huber, 212 Mo. 551, 111 S. W. 472; Brant v. Tracey, 70 N. J. L. 497, 57 Atl. 125; Bowman v. Essex, 69 N. J. L. 109, 54 Atl. 818.

Territory included.—Surveyors' districts are not required to be so limited as to include the whole territory of the town. It is sufficient if they include a definite part of the highways. It is not necessary that they should include the residences of all the persons named in their lists of taxes. Thompson v. Fellows, 21 N. H. 425.

22. Lyon v. Kee, 120 Ind. 150, 22 N. E. 128 (by township trustees); Dunster v. Smith, 49 N. J. L. 150, 6 Atl. 663 (cannot change limits after election of overseer, however).

One division of a township into road districts may exhaust the power of local authorities. People v. Whipple, 187 Ill. 547, 58 N. E. 468 [reversing 87 Ill. App. 145]; Scott v. Mount Tabor, 48 Vt. 391. See Lamphire v. Windsor, 27 Vt. 544.

23. See the statutes of the different states.

Withdrawal of petitioner.—A signer of the petition required by Iowa Acts 20th Gen. Assembly, c. 200, § 4, relating to the consolidation of the road districts of a township on petition of a majority of the voters, may withdraw his name therefrom at any time before action is taken; and the signing of a remonstrance to such consolidation, by one who had previously signed the petition, operates to withdraw his signature from the petition. Dunham v. Fox, 100 Iowa 131, 69 N. W. 436.

Review by certiorari.—Under Iowa Acts 20th Gen. Assembly, c. 200, § 4, providing that the board of township trustees may on petition, etc., consolidate the road districts of the township into one highway district, the proceeding so authorized is judicial in its nature, within the meaning of Iowa Code, § 3216, declaring that a writ of certiorari may issue when an inferior tribunal or board exercising judicial functions has exceeded its proper jurisdiction. Dunham v. Fox, 100 Iowa 131, 69 N. W. 436.

Who may attack consolidation.—A taxpayer has such interest in the subject-matter as will entitle him to maintain proceedings to set aside an illegal order of the board of township trustees consolidating all the road districts of the townships, even though he is not directly prejudiced thereby. Dunham v. Fox, 100 Iowa 131, 69 N. W. 436.

24. People v. Sly, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 593. See, however, Tehama County v. Bryan, 68 Cal. 57, 8 Pac. 673, holding that a repealing act did not abrogate existing road districts.

25. Morgan v. Monmouth Plank Road Co., 26 N. J. L. 99. And see cases cited infra, this note. See, however, Callender v. Marsh, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 418, holding that the provision for assignment is directory only.

Who should assign district.—When a town chooses surveyors of highways, it is not necessary that the vote of the town should assign a particular district to each surveyor; that is properly left to be done by the selectmen. Palmer v. Carroll, 24 N. H. 314.

Mandamus to compel assignment.—A mandamus will be granted to compel a township committee to assign a road to the overseers of the highways. Anonymous, 7 N. J. L. 192, holding, however, that it will not be granted until after the committee have had due notice of the motion. And see People v. Mills, 8 N. Y. St. 734 [affirmed in 109 N. Y. 69, 15 N. E. 886]. See, generally, MANDAMUS, 26 Cyc. 125.

Who may object to non-assignment.—Want of assignment cannot be attacked by third persons. Ward v. Folly, 5 N. J. L. 482.

Powers and duties of surveyors or overseers in case of non-assignment.—Where no assignment of the limits and divisions of the ways of a town is made to each highway surveyor

B. Officers — 1. APPOINTMENT, ELECTION, AND QUALIFICATION — a. In General.

The election<sup>26</sup> or the appointment<sup>27</sup> of highway officers must be made according to statute by the proper authorities,<sup>28</sup> and must be of someone of a class eligible,<sup>29</sup> under Mass. Gen. St. c. 44, § 6, the surveyors may nevertheless act together, or by a majority of the whole board. McCormick v. Boston, 120 Mass. 499. And see Callender v. Marsh, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 418. The neglect or refusal of a township committee to assign a road to an overseer, or appropriate money to work it, does not authorize any one to close or obstruct it, or absolve the overseer from his duty enjoined by law to open, clear out, and work the public roads. Morgan v. Monmouth Plank Road Co., 26 N. J. L. 99. And see Ward v. Folly, 5 N. J. L. 482, holding that the overseer is justified in repairing a road, although not assigned to him in writing by the township committee. While it is the duty of the committee to assign to the overseers in writing their several limits and divisions of the highways, yet if the committee neglects to do so, the overseers are to observe and conform themselves to such assignment as may have at any time theretofore been made. Morgan v. Monmouth Plank Road Co., supra.

26. Connecticut.—Pinney v. Brown, 60 Conn. 164, 22 Atl. 430, appointment void where not properly warned in town meeting; appointment must be of first selectman for time being as provided by town meeting.

Massachusetts.—Walker v. West Boylston, 128 Mass. 550 (at special meeting at which act providing for road commissioners is accepted); Benjamin v. Wheeler, 15 Gray 486 (where selectmen were chosen surveyors by town vote).

Michigan.—Davies v. Saginaw County, 89 Mich. 295, 50 N. W. 862, a statute creating road districts with road officers is void where the constitution provides for annual elections of town officers.

New Hampshire.—Brewster v. Hyde, 7 N. H. 206, where warrant for town meeting was issued without authority.

New Jersey.—Winans v. Crane, 36 N. J. L. 394 (statute authorizing town committee to fill vacancies entitles them to elect in case of tie vote); Green v. Kleinhaus, 14 N. J. L. 473 (at annual town meeting).

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 304.

27. Alabama.—Thompson v. State, 21 Ala. 48, appointment of overseer by probate court while another is in office is voidable.

Delaware.—State v. Rothwell, 5 Harr. 312, in writing.

Idaho.—Meservy v. Gulliford, 14 Ida. 133, 93 Pac. 780, order of appointment need not recite vacancy.

Kentucky.—Poole v. Slayton, 128 Ky. 514, 108 S. W. 903, 33 Ky. L. Rep. 373.

Michigan.—Wayne County Road Com'rs v. Wayne County, 148 Mich. 255, 111 N. W. 901 (holding that Act No. 146, Pub. Acts (1905), in so far as it provides in section 6 for the appointment of county road commissioners for Wayne county by the county clerk and the mayor of Detroit, conflicts with the theory of local self-government guaranteed by the constitution, and cannot be sustained); People v. Springwells Tp. Bd., 25 Mich. 153 (state commissioners cannot become town officers by acquiescence).

Missouri.—State v. Gasconade County Ct., 25 Mo. App. 446, appointed by court only where taxpayers fail to act.

New Jersey.—See Poinier v. State, 44 N. J. L. 433, as to statute validating appointment made under an unconstitutional law.

New York.—People v. Richmond County, 20 N. Y. 252 (holding that where two persons are appointed to fill vacancies in the office of commissioners of highways, without designating the class to which they shall respectively belong, the one first named in the appointment is to be regarded as appointed to the first class, or that highest in numerical order); Matter of Kerr, 57 Misc. 324, 108 N. Y. Suppl. 591 (holding that where the concurrence of four members of a town board is essential to an appointment of a highway commissioner, no valid appointment is made by a concurrence of four members of whom the appointee is one).

Tennessee.—State v. Maloney, (1901) 65 S. W. 871, appointment of officer to board newly created until the next election is an appointment to fill a vacancy within the constitution.

who must duly qualify.<sup>30</sup> The election or appointment is not necessarily defeated by informalities.<sup>31</sup> The appointment of someone to fill a vacancy may be enforced by judicial order.<sup>32</sup>

b. Bond. Statutes commonly provide that road officers shall give bond for the faithful performance of their duties.<sup>33</sup> However, the omission to give bond does not ipso facto oust the appointee from office or render him a trespasser. He is at least an officer de facto.<sup>34</sup>

Constitutional objections.—The board of road commissioners for Wayne county, appointed by the county clerk and the mayor of Detroit, as provided by section 6, Act No. 146, Pub. Acts (1905), being appointed in an unconstitutional manner, are not officers de jure, and are therefore not entitled to disburse the fund raised by a tax levied by them, notwithstanding the board of supervisors recognized them as officers in so far as to spread the tax levied by them. Wayne County Road Com'rs v. Wayne County, 148 Mich. 255, 111 N. W. 901.

32. People v. Marlette, 94 N. Y. App. Div. 592, 88 N. Y. Suppl. 379 [affirming 41 Misc. 151, 83 N. Y. Suppl. 962]. And see MANPAMUS, 26 Cyc. 251.

33. Wells v. Stombock, 59 Iowa 376, 13 N. W. 339 (expending money for materials which he should pay over to township clerk is a breach of the bond); Ham v. Silvernail, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 33 (that in receiving and keeping money the officer acted without authority is no defense); Mead Tp. v. Couse, 156 Pa. St. 311, 27 Atl. 26.

No action lies on the bond for personal injuries resulting from the breaking of a bridge (Coleman v. Eaker, 111 Ky. 131, 63 S. W. 484, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 513), or for failure of the commissioner to take a bond from a contractor for the payment of labor and material used in his work (State v. Miller, 123 Mo. App. 730, 101 S. W. 616).

Refusal to accept bond.—Where a supervisor is duly elected, and is ready and willing to give a proper bond, as required by the Pennsylvania act of March 16, 1860 (Pamphl. Laws 174), the township auditors cannot refuse to accept the security because the supervisor owes a debt to the township which he refuses to pay; but the duties of the auditors are to accept the security offered, and, if a balance is due to the township by the supervisor, to proceed to collect the same by legal process. Rice's Appeal, 158 Pa. St. 157, 27 Atl. 842.

Prerequisite to action on bond.—It is not necessary, as a prerequisite to an action on the official undertaking of a highway commissioner, that a demand be made upon him for the records of his office under Town Law, § 84. That section has reference only to a proceeding to secure such records. Hadley v. Garner, 116 N. Y. App. Div. 68, 101 N. Y. Suppl. 777.

Parties defendant.—In an action by a town against the sureties on an official undertaking of the commissioner of highways, it is not necessary to join the commissioner as a party defendant. Hadley v. Garner, 116 N. Y. App. Div. 68, 101 N. Y. Suppl. 777.

Sufficiency of complaint.—An allegation that the bond was executed in the county court or approved by that court is necessary. Coleman v. Eaker, 111 Ky. 131, 63 S. W. 484, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 513. When the official undertaking of a commissioner of highways states that J of the town of H has been duly elected commissioner of highways, without stating for what town he was elected, a complaint setting out such undertaking does not fail to state a cause of action on the theory that no specific obligee is named, for by Town Law, § 50, only electors and residents of a town are eligible to town offices. And while it is inartificial to set out the breach of an undertaking by negating the language of its conditions, yet it is sufficient as an allegation of breach upon demurrer. In any event the remedy for the defect is by motion to make the complaint more definite and certain. Hadley v. Garner, 116 N. Y. App. Div. 68, 101 N. Y. Suppl. 777.

Evidence.—Where an account is required to be filed "on or before" a certain date, evidence that defendant did not file it "on" that date is insufficient to show a breach of his bond. Sherwood Forest v. Benedict, 48 Wis. 541, 4 N. W. 582.

34. Wiley v. Windham, 95 Me. 482, 50 Atl. 281; Foot v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 399; Matter of Kerr, 57 Misc. (N. Y.) 324, 108 N. Y. Suppl. 591 (holding that, although a statute provides that if one elected highway commissioner neglects to file his bond within ten days of notice of his election he shall be deemed to refuse to serve, and that the office may be filled as in case of vacancy, where applicant was elected November 5, filed his oath November 21, was notified of his election December 7, his predecessor's term expired December 31, and he presented his bond for approval January 2 following,

2. CREATION AND TENURE OF OFFICE. The creation and tenure of highway offices depends on statute.<sup>35</sup> Highway officers may hold over on failure to elect a successor,<sup>36</sup> and may be appointed to fill a vacancy.<sup>37</sup> They may lose office by operation of law,<sup>38</sup> by resignation,<sup>39</sup> or removal.<sup>40</sup> Commissioners of highways, receiving their powers from express grant of the legislature, are not corporations, and, in the absence of express authority, have no right to expel from among them one appointed to the position by the state.<sup>41</sup>

3. MEETINGS AND RECORDS. A road district board may commonly act by a majority at a meeting legally called or in which all participate.<sup>42</sup> It has been

he is entitled to the office, no valid attempt to fill the vacancy, if one existed, having been made, and no actual vacancy having been judicially determined to exist); Lower Merion Tp. v. Frederick, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 448, 15 Montg. Co. Rep. 105.

35. People v. Carver, 5 Colo. App. 156, 38 Pac. 332; Kinmonth v. Wall Tp., 73 N. J. L. 440, 63 Atl. 861; Harrington Tp. Road Commission v. Harrington Tp., 54 N. J. L. 274, 23 Atl. 666.

The legislature cannot enlarge the term of an elected town officer by an act passed after his election; and hence the provisions of Laws (1893), c. 344, for the enlargement of the term of office of certain town highway commissioners from one year to two years, are to be construed as applicable only to officers elected after its passage. People v. Randall, 151 N. Y. 497, 45 N. E. 841 [affirming 91 Hun 266, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 202].

When term expires.—By force of the Public Officers Law (Laws (1892), c. 681, art. 1, § 5), where an officer subject to its provisions, such as a town commissioner of highways, is lawfully holding over, the office is to be deemed vacant for the purpose of electing a successor from and after the expiration of the term for which the incumbent was chosen, although the term of the office, as distinguished from the term for which he was chosen, may have been in the meantime enlarged. People v. Randall, 151 N. Y. 497, 45 N. E. 841 [affirming 91 Hun 266, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 202].

37. See cases cited infra, this note.

Notice.—When there is a vacancy in the board of road commissioners which can legally be filled in vacation by a judge of the court of common pleas, it is not necessary for the party applying to have the vacancy filled to give notice of the application. Goodwin v. Milton, 25 N. H. 458. So the power conferred by the New Jersey act of 1872 upon the judge of the circuit court to fill a vacancy in the board of commissioners to make assessments resulting from death, absence, or other disability can be exercised when a member of the board resigns, and no notice of such appointment is necessary in the absence of a statutory requirement to that effect. King v. Duryea, 45 N. J. L. 258.

When vacancy exists see People v. Sandman, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 165. Failure to elect is not treated as a vacancy. State v. Rothwell, 5 Harr. (Del.) 312. Contra, People v.

Randall, 12 Misc. (N. Y.) 619, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 450.

38. See cases cited infra, this note.

One becoming a non-resident may lose his office ipso facto. Mauck v. Lock, 70 Iowa 266, 30 N. W. 566. But see Mitchell v. State, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 554 (holding that removal from bounds does not excuse officer from acting); State v. Nelson, 7 Wash. 114, 34 Pac. 562 (holding that commissioners cannot oust overseer by changing boundaries of his district).

The refusal of a highway surveyor to execute a receipt for a tax bill does not vacate his office. Cummings v. Clark, 15 Vt. 653.

39. State v. Ferguson, 31 N. J. L. 107, holding, however, that resignation takes effect only when accepted at a meeting duly notified.

40. People v. Carver, 5 Colo. App. 156, 38 Pac. 332, holding that under Colo. Sess. Laws (1891), p. 303, providing that the general road overseer may be removed by the board of county commissioners for reasons satisfactory to them, they may remove him at will without any hearing; but that under Gen. St. (1883) § 1160, providing that the board of county commissioners shall meet on certain days, and at such other times as in the opinion of the board the public interests may require, a road overseer cannot be removed or appointed at a special meeting, called for another purpose, at which all the commissioners are not present.

41. State v. Lancaster Road Com'rs, 2 Brev. (S. C.) 293.

42. Lancaster Highway Com'rs v. Baumgarten, 41 Ill. 254.

All must act in Pennsylvania (Batten v. Brandywine Tp., 5 Pa. L. J. 546, on questions requiring deliberation. And see Somerset Tp. v. Parson, 105 Pa. St. 360 (holding that one cannot bind the township); Logan v. Rochester Tp., 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 113 (holding that where a township has but two supervisors, they must honestly confer with each other, and fairly deliberate in the interest of the taxpayers before they attempt to bind the township by their action). Contra, Com. v. Colley Tp., 29 Pa. St. 121, where supervisors divide the township among them), unless the act is purely ministerial (Brodhead v. Lower Saucon Tp., 2 Lehigh Val. L. Rep. 381). So in New Hampshire it is only where it would be impossible to convene the board that the action of a minority is legal, notwithstanding a usage of a town for highway surveyors to furnish their own services and pay without special authority. Scribner v.

held that the district officers need not keep a record,<sup>43</sup> in the absence of statute to the contrary.<sup>44</sup>

4. COMPENSATION. Highway district officers are entitled to compensation as fixed by statute.<sup>45</sup>

Hollis, 48 N. H. 30. In Illinois in an emergency an individual commissioner has power to make a temporary crossing without special authority given to him at a regular or special meeting of the board of commissioners, where no expense would thereby be cast on the body politic. Meacham v. Lacey, 133 Ill. App. 208.

Unless those absent were duly notified of the meeting a majority cannot act. People v. Williams, 36 N. Y. 441 [overruling Tucker v. Rankin, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 471]; Mericle v. Mulks, 1 Wis. 366. So an order of commissioners of highways signed by only two, and not reciting a meeting, etc., of three, or notice to a third, is void unless it affirmatively appears that the town had only two commissioners. It cannot be presumed that there was not a third. Simmons v. Sines, 4 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 246, 4 Keyes 153.

Commissioners of highways must act as a body, and not as individuals, to bind the body. So where a paper was signed by them, agreeing to dismiss a proceeding to assess damages for land for a road, no two of them being together when signing, and they had never met and conferred together in reference to the agreement, and had made no minutes or entry thereof, it was held no error in the justice to refuse to dismiss the proceeding. McManus v. McDonough, 107 Ill. 95.

Where a vacancy exists in a board of road commissioners, there is no authority in the remaining members to discharge the duties intrusted to the board. Palmer v. Conway, 22 N. H. 144.

Where a commissioner is disqualified.—Va. Acts Assembly (1897-1898), § 5, authorizing the opening of roads, provides that when either of the members of a district road commission to which an application for opening a road is made is personally interested therein by reason of ownership of any land affected, etc., the chairman of the board of supervisors shall summon the road commissioners from the nearest district in which the commissioners may have no such interest or relationship, to act on such application. It was held that such chairman must summon the whole board of such adjoining district, and not simply one of its members to take the place of the disqualified member of his commission. Painter v. St. Clair, 98 Va. 85, 34 S. E. 989.

Notice of adjournment.—Where the commissioners of highways at their meeting to consider the propriety of laying out a public road make an adjournment, that fact should be publicly announced, and notice of the adjourned meeting should be posted up at the place where the first meeting is had; but a failure to post such notice at the place required by law, when it appears that such notice was posted at a more public place than that where the first meeting is had, is but an irregularity that will not affect the jurisdiction of the board of commissioners. Wright v. Middlefork Highway Com'rs, 145 Ill. 48, 33 N. E. 876.

43. Old Town v. Dooley, 81 Ill. 255 (holding that commissioners are quasi-corporations and need not keep any records); Interstate Independent Tel., etc., Co. v. Towanda, 123 Ill. App. 55 [affirmed in 221 Ill. 299, 77 N. E. 456] (holding that a notice given by highway commissioners pursuant to statute is valid, notwithstanding an authorizing resolution was not made a matter of record; except where the statute specifically so provides, highway commissioners may act without an antecedent record being made).

Deficiency in funds.—If road taxes are nearly all paid in work, so that there are not funds enough to pay the road overseer, the deficiency should be paid from the county treasury. State v. Bourn, 75 Mo. 473.

A road-master may recover for the use of his team by consent of the town officers (Wiley v. Windham, 95 Me. 482, 50 Atl. 281), but not where such use is unknown to the supervisors (Andrus v. Shippen Tp., 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 22).

A road overseer must have his account approved by the town board. Denver v. Myers, 63 Nebr. 107, 88 N. W. 191.

Statutes.—In the absence of statute authorizing it road officers are not entitled to compensation. Sikes v. Hatfield, 13 Gray (Mass.) 347. Ky. St. § 4310, fixes the compensation of road overseers by exempting them from jury service and from poll tax for road and bridge purposes, and this excludes the idea that they can legally be allowed anything in addition thereto for their services

5. POWERS AND AUTHORITY — a. In General. The authority of road officers is entirely dependent on legislative act,<sup>46</sup> and is strictly confined to the highway limits<sup>47</sup> and to highway matters.<sup>48</sup> They may in general employ counsel when necessary,<sup>49</sup> and necessary clerical services;<sup>50</sup> but they cannot bind towns by contracts.<sup>51</sup>

b. Indebtedness and Expenditures. Highway officers have ordinarily no authority to issue certificates of indebtedness,<sup>52</sup> to create indebtedness,<sup>53</sup> or to purchase on credit;<sup>54</sup> and they have a limited authority to expend money.<sup>55</sup>

b. Personal Liabilities. A highway officer may be liable for his own negligent<sup>61</sup>

as overseers. Vaughn v. Hulett, 119 Ky. 380, 84 S. W. 309, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 35. Statutes concerning compensation are not usually retroactive. Placer County v. Freeman, 149 Cal. 738, 87 Pac. 628; Blanchard v. La Salle, 99 Ill. 278 [affirming 1 Ill. App. 635].

commonly determine the liability for costs in actions brought by or against highway officers.<sup>82</sup>

b. Penal or Criminal — (i) IN GENERAL. Statutes often impose liabilities for penalties,<sup>83</sup> and commonly provide for indictment of road officers,<sup>84</sup> for misfeasance or neglect of their duties in regard to road work and repairs. Under such statutes road officers cannot be prosecuted for misuse of their discretion,<sup>85</sup> and it is a good defense that the work was rendered impossible by facts not attributable to the officer's fault.<sup>86</sup>

(ii) INDICTMENT. The indictment of a highway officer for a criminal offense should contain plain averments of the offense charged,<sup>87</sup> stating the bridge. See Jewett v. Sweet, 178 Ill. 96, 52 N. E. 962 [affirming 77 Ill. App. 641] (commissioners cannot set up rights of adjacent owners); Rex v. Norfolk, [1901] 2 K. B. 268, 65 J. P. 454, 70 L. J. K. B. 575, 84 L. T. Rep. N. S. 822, 17 T. L. R. 437, 49 Wkly. Rep. 543 (power of county council to defend an action brought against surveyor or against individuals).

<sup>82</sup>. See the statutes of the several states. And see People v. Madison County, 125 Ill. 334, 17 N. E. 802 [affirming 23 Ill. App. 386] (liable as commissioners and not individually); Lyons v. People, 38 Ill. 347.

Costs held not recoverable against supervisors see Bettis v. Nicholson, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 349; Bittle v. Hay, 5 Ohio 269; Carter v. Hawley, Wright (Ohio) 74.

Liability of town for costs.—Town held liable see Sebrell v. Fall Creek Tp., 27 Ind. 86; McCoy v. McClarty, 53 Misc. (N. Y.) 69, 104 N. Y. Suppl. 80. Town held not liable see Gardner v. Chambersburgh, 19 Ill. 99.

<sup>83</sup>. See the statutes of the several states. And see Hizer v. Rockford, 86 Ill. 325 (penalty imposed on overseer for neglect to obey order of commissioners); Salt Creek v. Mason County Highway Com'rs, 25 Ill. App. 187; Bentley v. Phelps, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 524; State v. Chappell, 2 Hill (S. C.) 391.

A statute as to guide-boards does not apply to roads by dedication or use. State v. Siegel, 54 Wis. 86, 11 N. W. 435.

Acts held not to subject the officer to the penalty see Moll v. Pickaway, 14 Ill. App. 343 (removing plank put down by individual); Com. v. House, 4 Pa. L. J. 327 (refusing to open road pending petition for review); U. S. v. Custis, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,909, 1 Cranch C. C. 417 (overseer not notified of his appointment).

The neglect of a town to erect and maintain guide-posts at all intersections of highways within its limits is one entire offense, and a separate penalty does not accrue for each intersection of roads at which the town has neglected to erect guide-posts. Clark v. Lisbon, 19 N. H. 286.

Virginia.—Com. v. Piper, 9 Leigh 657.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 320.

Number of offenses.—However long a road may have been out of repair before indictment, it is but one offense; but if, after conviction, it still continues out of repair, the commissioner may again be indicted. State v. Chappell, 2 Hill (S. C.) 391.

Where a court directs a road wider than the law requires, a presentment may be sustained against the surveyor for not keeping it in repair to the legal width. Com. v. Caldwell, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 168.

Failure to maintain guide-posts when required by law is punishable under the statutes. Lequat v. People, 11 Ill. 330; State v. Nicholson, 6 N. C. 135. But see State v. Smith, 25 Tex. Suppl. 64.

<sup>85</sup>. Eyman v. People, 6 Ill. 4; Shanks v. Pearson, 66 Kan. 168, 71 Pac. 252; Com. v. Thompson, 126 Pa. St. 614, 17 Atl. 754.

<sup>86</sup>. Mendham Tp. v. Losey, 2 N. J. L. 347 (where township had not furnished money for repair); State v. Small, 33 N. C. 571 (bad weather); State v. Broyles, 1 Bailey (S. C.) 134 (defense by one commissioner of roads for not repairing his division of a road that it was ordered discontinued by the whole board); Howell v. State, 29 Tex. App. 592, 16 S. State*, 27 Tex. App. 439, 11 S. W. 457 (impossible to make road passable if overseer had worked all his hands full time).

That defendants opened the road on a different location is no defense. Com. v. Johnson, 134 Pa. St. 635, 19 Atl. 803.

<sup>87</sup>. McCullough v. State, 63 Ala. 75 ("failed to discharge his duties as such overseer" held sufficient); State v. Brown, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 69 (road so obstructed by trees as to be nearly impassable).

(III) PROOF. As in other criminal prosecutions, the evidence must show the elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt, as that the road is public,<sup>93</sup> as described in the indictment,<sup>94</sup> the appointment,<sup>95</sup> notification,<sup>96</sup> and qualification<sup>97</sup> of the officers, and the offense complained of.<sup>98</sup> The burden of proving matter of defense is on defendant.<sup>99</sup>

A presentment need not be in the form of an indictment. Blankenship v. State, 40 Ga. 680.

Indictments held bad for not negating defenses see State v. Shields, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 151; State v. Mathis, 30 Tex. 506 (failing to negative existence of intermediate town from which mile-posts might be reckoned); State v. Smith, 25 Tex. Suppl. 64.

Duplicity held no defense to the indictment see Edge v. Com., 7 Pa. St. 275 (neglect to open and repair may be joined in one count); State v. Jopling, 10 Humphr. (Tenn.) 418 (to mile-mark and put up pointers at forks). But see Greenlow v. State, 4 Humphr. (Tenn.) 25, holding that charges of failure to repair and to mile-mark a road cannot be joined in one count.

Wilfulness if an element of the offense should be set out. State v. Walker, 82 Mo. 489; State v. Levens, 22 Mo. 469; State v. Miller, 100 N. C. 543, 5 S. E. 925.

89. Ward v. State, (Ala. 1905) 39 So. 923; State v. Halifax, 15 N. C. 345 (holding that commissioners of towns are not of common right bound to repair the streets, and an indictment against them for not repairing must set forth how the obligation arises, charging what duty neglected); Massure v. State, 36 Tex. 377 (must show that overseer bound by law to keep road in repair). See also State v. Kopper, 65 Mo. 478, holding that the order of court designating how much inhabitants shall work on the roads should be set forth.

Where the duty is imposed by general law it need not be alleged. State v. Miller, 100 N. C. 543, 5 S. E. 925.

Indictments held bad as not pointing out the officers' district see State v. McElroy, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 69; State v. Hale, 21 Tex. 587.

The means available should be set out where the officer's duty was conditioned on a sufficiency. Lequat v. People, 11 Ill. 330 (labor); People v. Adsit, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 619 (funds). In some cases it is held, however, that lack of means is matter of defense which need not be set out in the indictment. State v. Brown, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 69; State v. Harsh, 6 Blackf. Howell v. State, 29 Tex. App. 592, 16 S. W. 533. But see State v. Lee, 15 Tex. 252, holding that where the offense is charged to be committed in the county, the indictment need not aver that road was in the county.

A description of the particular road should be given. State v. McMurrin, 1 Ind. 44; Spear v. State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 517 (must allege in which county certain road lying in two counties is out of repair); Hardeman v. State, 25 Tex. 179 ("road number seven" is insufficient description); Sigler v. State, 17 Tex. 304 (description of road by its course as traveled). See also Com. v. Howard, 1 Gratt. (Va.) 554. But the description of the road in the indictment need not include its termini, but may describe it simply as running from S in said county in the direction of G in said county. *State v. ## V. CONSTRUCTION, IMPROVEMENT, AND REPAIR.

B. Mode, Plan, and Sufficiency<sup>8</sup>—1. IN GENERAL. The method or plan of work is in the discretion of the road officers,<sup>9</sup> within the restrictions of (whether road in as good condition as other roads in community held irrelevant); Ward v. State, (Ala. 1905) 39 So. 923; Tate v. State, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 73 (that defendant could not keep road in repair through default of county commissioners); Com. v. Cassatt, 3 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 19; Sennett v. State, 17 Tex. 308 (must prove failure of other overseers to set up milestones as alleged which prevented him from setting up his); Sigler v. State, 17 Tex. 304. See also Com. v. Johnson, 134 Pa. St. 635, 19 Atl. 803.

4. State v. Marion County, 170 Ind. 595, 85 N. E. 513; People v. Springwells Tp. Bd., 25 Mich. 153; Jensen v. Polk County, 47 Wis. 298, 2 N. W. 320, holding that an act which provides for the laying out and opening of a state road, and imposes the cost of the road upon the towns and counties through which it is to pass, is not in conflict with Const. art. 8, § 10, forbidding the state to carry on works of internal improvement.

Action under unconstitutional statute.—A contemplated road improvement, voted under an unconstitutional statute, is not made lawful by the fact that a majority of those voting on the subject voted in favor of it. Hixson v. Burson, 54 Ohio St. 470, 43 N. E. 1000.

Whether the result fulfils the requirement of the statute must be ultimately passed upon by the court and jury when the question arises. Cunningham v. Frankfort, 104 Me. 208, 70 Atl. 441.

Only one system can be in force in a county at a time. Wright v. Sheppard, 5 Ga. App. 298, 63 S. E. 48.

The order of construction cannot be attacked collaterally except on the ground of fraud. Le Moyne v. Washington County, 213 Pa. St. 123, 62 Atl. 516.

The side-path commissioners of a county have authority to take up a curbstone and relocate it so as to make room for a side-path along the sidewalk. O'Donnell v. Preston, 74 N. Y. App. Div. 86, 77 N. Y. Suppl. 305.

Under authority "to grade hills" in laying out a way, the commissioners may fill the valleys. Acton v. York County, 77 Me. 128.

A change of the line of road may be authorized in improvement (Knox County v. Kennedy, 92 Tenn. 1, 20 S. W. 311), or in altering or straightening an existing road law,<sup>10</sup> and subject to the rights of abutting owners.<sup>11</sup> They may direct how much of the road shall be improved<sup>12</sup> and provide for railroad rights of way.<sup>13</sup> Their duties extend to remedying defects and obstructions caused by snow.<sup>14</sup>

2. TAKING MATERIAL FROM ABUTTERS. Statutes sometimes authorize road officers to take materials from the land of abutters, due compensation being provided.<sup>15</sup> The officer is the sole judge of the necessity of the taking,<sup>16</sup> and so long as he does not wilfully annoy the owners of property a court of equity will not restrain him;<sup>17</sup> but the officer cannot pass over cultivated or improved land for this purpose;<sup>18</sup> nor can an overseer take for public use timber prepared for the owner's own use;<sup>19</sup> and purchase of material at a specified price is not authorized under a statute allowing the overseer to take.<sup>20</sup> In the absence of statute no authority to take from abutters exists.<sup>21</sup>

3. REMOVAL OF FENCES, BUILDINGS, AND OTHER PROPERTY. Road officers are commonly required by statute to give a reasonable time on laying out or altering a road for the removal of timber, fences, buildings, or other property,<sup>22</sup> after notice old roads.<sup>34</sup> The proper authorities are not bound to repair a highway discontinued<sup>35</sup> or abandoned,<sup>36</sup> but are bound to make passable necessary temporary by-ways.<sup>37</sup>

2. ROADS IN DIFFERENT JURISDICTIONS. Where the center of the road forms the line between two municipalities and no crosswise division has been made, each must repair the portion on its side of the line.<sup>38</sup> To avoid the inconvenience of this, however, statutory provision is sometimes made for a crosswise division, whereby each municipality repairs the part of the road assigned to it,<sup>39</sup> or requiring the joint action of the two;<sup>40</sup> but unless under some such arrangement a road officer cannot extend improvements into adjacent road districts;<sup>41</sup> and if he does so any improvements he may make are under the control of the supervisor of the district into which they have been so extended.<sup>42</sup> When a municipal corporation is created over territory lying within a township or county the power and duty to repair roads therein depends upon the statutes,<sup>43</sup> which sometimes give the municipality power over that part of the highway within its limits, but allow the township to retain possession over the highways of the town outside of the city limits,<sup>44</sup> or which may allow the county officers to improve a state, county, or township road, although the improvement embraces part of the highway within the limits of the municipal corporation.<sup>45</sup> But the liability of a town to build a highway pursuant to decree is not discharged by severance from the town of that part of its territory in which the road has been laid out and incorporating it preliminaries as may have been prescribed by the statutes of their particular states.<sup>59</sup>

b. As Dependent Upon Availability of Funds. The duty to repair and consequent liability for failure has in many cases been held to be dependent upon availability of funds for the work.<sup>60</sup> On the other hand it has been held that the duty to repair is absolute,<sup>61</sup> and that a statute providing therefor is peremptory, and that the question of ability is not open in an action for a defective highway;<sup>62</sup> and this rule applies where a portion of the expense is to be borne by the state,<sup>63</sup> or where, under the statute, if the town is poor a proceeding is provided for casting the expense of the road upon the county;<sup>64</sup> nor can liability be avoided where the means of raising sufficient funds were at hand, as by additional assessment,<sup>65</sup> by borrowing,<sup>66</sup> or by making the repairs upon the credit of the town as authorized by statute;<sup>67</sup> nor where the amount needed to repair was small and could be taken from funds due for repairs already made,<sup>68</sup> or transferred from a fund not exhausted by the building of another road;<sup>69</sup> nor will a town be relieved where failure of funds in the hands of road officers is due to the fault of another town officer,<sup>70</sup> or where the defect has existed during a time within which funds could have been had.<sup>71</sup> Similarly, that there are no funds on hand to meet the cost of opening a road is no answer for failure to open the road, when it is not shown that the officers had exhausted the power of taxation,<sup>72</sup> or when town funds were available,<sup>73</sup> or if, as is sometimes provided, the road committee has power to call out the inhabitants to do the work.<sup>74</sup> Nor have supervisors the right to refuse to open a road merely because funds in their hands are necessary for other purposes,<sup>75</sup> or because sufficient funds are not on hand at any one time to make all necessary improvements.<sup>76</sup> But a township committee malicious<sup>99</sup> or corrupt<sup>1</sup> action, or for acting without authority<sup>2</sup> in constructing or maintaining drains, but not for damage caused by drainage established by them within their authority.<sup>3</sup>

3. ABATEMENT OF DRAINAGE NUISANCE. If drainage upon adjacent land is in the nature of a nuisance the landowner may have a right to cure the trouble himself by peaceable abatement,<sup>4</sup> as by filling a ditch,<sup>5</sup> or opening one,<sup>6</sup> or filling his land to bar surface water from the highway.<sup>7</sup>

4. ENJOINING WRONGFUL DRAINAGE. Injunction may be allowed to protect individual landowners from irreparable injury from wrongful drainage,<sup>8</sup> only, however, where the work is clearly improper,<sup>9</sup> and not to prevent flowing which is the natural consequence of the building of the road;<sup>10</sup> and it is held that courts ought not to control by injunction the action of road commissioners in deciding on the necessity of a change of drainage and the mode of doing it.<sup>11</sup> Where the facts are in dispute an injunction will not be granted until they are established by a jury.<sup>12</sup>

F. Expenses<sup>13</sup> — 1. APPORTIONMENT. The statutes of the several states provide that the expense of road work shall be apportioned among the districts, towns, or counties benefited, the manner of apportionment differing widely under the different statutes.<sup>14</sup> A town not in the district in which the road exists may

3. PERFORMANCE AND PAYMENT. Payment should be made only on fulfilment of the contract according to its terms,<sup>50</sup> and on acceptance of the work,<sup>51</sup> in accordance with the decision of the engineer, or architect, or other officer named in the contract.<sup>52</sup>

4. CONTRACTOR'S BONDS.<sup>53</sup> Under many statutes authorizing contracts for road work contractors are required to give bonds,<sup>54</sup> which must follow the statute,<sup>55</sup> although mere informalities in the bond or in its execution will not necessarily avoid the bond.<sup>56</sup>

5. ACTIONS. The manner of enforcement of payment for road work depends on local law<sup>57</sup> which governs the parties,<sup>58</sup> pleadings,<sup>59</sup> evidence,<sup>60</sup> and defenses.<sup>61</sup> The public officials should enforce the contracts as made,<sup>62</sup> or avoid them when

H. Establishment, Construction, Repair, and Improvement of Free Gravel Roads and Turnpikes—1. IN GENERAL. In some jurisdictions statutory provision is made for the establishment, construction, improvement, or repair of free gravel roads or turnpikes,<sup>66</sup> the establishment of which does not differ materially from the establishment of other highways.<sup>67</sup> The statutes require the filing of a petition,<sup>68</sup> with a specified board or officer,<sup>69</sup> signed by a specified number of persons interested,<sup>70</sup> describing properly the construction 77 Pac. 633 (commissioners should not release bidders); Middlefield v. Church Mills Knitting Co., 160 Mass. 267, 35 N. E. 780 (town may enforce a covenant to repair).

Defenses see Brookfield v. Reed, 152 Mass. 568, 26 N. E. 138 (contractor may show that town repaired road in a too costly manner); Kingsley v. Butterfield, 35 Nebr. 228, 52 N. W. 1101 (no defense that location of railroad prevented opening).

Where the board acts on its own initiative a petition is unnecessary. McClure v. Franklin County, 124 Ind. 154, 24 N. E. 741.

Agreement among owners as not invalidating petition.—It is no ground for enjoining proceedings for a road improvement that one or more signed the petition therefor upon the promise of others to pay all assessments that might be made on his or their lands to defray the cost of construction. Makemson v. Kauffman, 35 Ohio St. 444.

Notice of filing the petition is unnecessary. Thompson v. Love, 42 Ohio St. 61.

Resident tenants in common are counted as if owning in severalty. Makemson v. Kauffman, 35 Ohio St. 444.

The burden is on petitioners to show that the proper number have signed. Fleming v. Hight, 101 Ind. 466.

Withdrawal or addition of petitioners.—Petitioners may withdraw (Black v. Campbell, 112 Ind. 122, 13 N. E. 409; Dunham v. Fox, 100 Iowa 131, 69 N. W. 436, holding that signing of remonstrance operates as a withdrawal; Hays v. Jones, 27 Ohio St. 218), or may be added (Black v. Campbell, supra; Parker v. Burgett, 29 Ohio St. 513), before final action, but a petitioner cannot withdraw after a finding by the board (Ralston v. Beall, 171 Ind. 719, 30 N. E. 1095).

L. 448, 60 Atl. 1132; State v. Trenton, 40 N. J. L. 89.

Combining petitions.—Duplicate or triplicate petitions may be combined and treated as one original. Brown v. Miller, 162 Ind. 684, 71 N. E. 122; Putnam County v. Young, 36 Ohio St. 288; Makemson v. Kauffman, 35 Ohio St. 444; Campbell v. Park, 32 Ohio St. 544; Braden v. Logan County, 31 Ohio St. 386. But names on a former abandoned petition cannot be counted (Makemson v. Kauffman, supra); and parties signing only one of two successive petitions cannot be combined to make requisite total (Auditor-Gen. v. Fisher, 84 Mich. 128, 47 N. W. 574).

or improvement proposed,<sup>71</sup> and containing all other matters required by the statute.<sup>72</sup> Pleadings in reply should be according to the statute.<sup>73</sup>

2. COMMISSIONERS OR VIEWERS. The statutes provide for the appointment of commissioners or viewers, who must be appointed in accordance therewith,<sup>74</sup> and who must make a report,<sup>75</sup> which forms the basis of further proceedings.<sup>76</sup> If the desired improvement or construction is decided upon the viewers should make an order,<sup>77</sup> which must follow the petition.<sup>78</sup> The order may be vacated for sufficient reasons,<sup>79</sup> but is conclusive unless directly attacked.<sup>80</sup>

3. HEARING. The hearing upon the petition must be in accordance with the statute,<sup>81</sup> and must be held after the prescribed notice.<sup>82</sup>

4. RECORD. The record need not show that the improvement was necessary,<sup>83</sup> unless the statute so requires,<sup>84</sup> and the adoption of the order may be a sufficient statement of necessity.<sup>85</sup>

5. APPEAL. The proceedings may be reviewed by appeal.<sup>86</sup>

A petition setting forth two alternative routes is void. In re Middletown Road, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 167.

That the petition asks for two improvements instead of one, because the work contemplated includes part of a road already constructed, does not render the proceedings void. Evans v. West, 138 Ind. 621, 38 N. E. 65.

72. Cottrell v. Middlesex County, 55 N. J. L. 238, 26 Atl. 94, holding that statement in petition that petitioners will pay one tenth of actual benefit does not comply with law requiring promise to pay up to ten per cent of entire cost.

74. Fulton v. Cummings, 132 Ind. 453, 30 N. E. 949.

Fraud in obtaining the appointment of commissioners to lay out and construct a turnpike is no ground for a suit to enjoin them. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. McVean, 34 S. W. 525, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 1283.

Personal interest of commissioners does not necessarily disqualify them. Carroll County v. Justice, 133 Ind. 89, 30 N. E. 1085, 36 Am. St. Rep. 528 (where one of commissioners was a landowner and no other landowner objected); Thompson v. Love, 42 Ohio St. 61 (holding that a county commissioner may act, although a landowner and petitioner). But see Tolland v. Berkshire County, 13 Gray (Mass.) 12, where one commissioner resided in town where highway was, and this was held to disqualify him.

I. Proceedings Regulating — 1. IN GENERAL. Various statutory proceedings are provided for enforcing the construction and repair of roads;<sup>87</sup> and in addition mandamus is an available remedy to compel road repairs by a private corporation bound to construct and repair,<sup>88</sup> or by public officers or municipalities.<sup>89</sup>

2. CRIMINAL.<sup>90</sup> In some jurisdictions towns may be proceeded against criminally for failure to repair or to construct highways,<sup>91</sup> and similarly individuals bound to repair may be indicted.<sup>92</sup> The proceedings must be properly commenced,<sup>93</sup> and the indictment must contain a complete, accurate, and concise statement of the crime charged,<sup>94</sup> and must be founded upon sufficient evidence.<sup>95</sup>

N. E. 494; Pruden v. Jackson County, 156 Ind. 325, 58 N. E. 437 (holding that appeal lies from order submitting only the second of two petitions to the voters); Cason v. Harrison, 135 Ind. 330, 35 N. E. 268; Fleener v. Claman, 126 Ind. 166, 25 N. E. 900; Stipp v. Claman, 123 Ind. 532, 24 N. E. 131; Black v. Campbell, 112 Ind. 122, 13 N. E. 409; *Osborn v. Indictments held bad see State v. Milo, 32 Me. 55 (alternative allegation); Com. v. North Brookfield, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 463 (uncertain in which town way is); State v. Burkett, 83 Miss. 301, 35 So. 689 (failing to state adoption of certain system in county); Burkett v. State, (Miss. 1903) 33 So. 221 (failure to state that defendants had time and opportunity to repair); State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 195 (failure to allege that highway needs making or is impassable); Lodi Tp. v. State, 53 N. J. L. 259, 21 Atl. 457 (where town line ran to center of road only, and indictment alleged that road was in township).

Streets on town lines; joinder of towns.—Where towns are so situated that the center of a street is the dividing line between them, each town being liable for the defects in the highway within its limits, and neither being liable for neglect of the other, they cannot be jointly indicted for a defect in the highway. State v. Thomaston, 74 Me. 198.

Defendants may introduce any competent evidence tending to show freedom from guilt;<sup>96</sup> but that the original lay-out of the road was defective is not a defense to an indictment for failure to repair.<sup>97</sup> Where the obstruction complained of has ceased to exist at the time of trial a nominal fine and costs may be imposed.<sup>98</sup>

3. INJUNCTION AGAINST ILLEGAL WORK. Construction or improvement in violation of or non-compliance with law may be restrained by injunction,<sup>99</sup> not, however, where the injury would be slight,<sup>1</sup> and not irreparable,<sup>2</sup> or where there is an adequate remedy at law.<sup>3</sup> The injunction will be granted only to citizens or taxpayers,<sup>4</sup> and upon joining the proper parties.<sup>5</sup> The usual defenses to an injunction are available.<sup>6</sup>

H. 307; State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 195 (holding that where it is alleged that the neglect to repair a highway is a nuisance, evidence that the highway for which an indictment is found is not connected with any other highway is admissible, as bearing on the question of nuisance).

Claims held insufficient as a defense see Ward v. State, (Ala. 1905) 39 So. 923 (failure of apportioner to furnish a written list of hands); State v. Madison, 59 Me. 538 (that road was within toll-road limits); Com. v. Deerfield, 6 Allen (Mass.) 449 (that destruction of bridge beyond town limits made road useless); State v. Canterbury, 40 N. A railroad company, having built a platform on land already dedicated to public use as a highway, cannot prevent the opening of the highway on the ground that the platform is necessary for transaction of its business. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Drummond, 45 N. J. L. 511.

Curing objection pending suit.—Pending a suit by a landowner to enjoin the opening of a road through its lands, the public officers may take steps to acquire the right to use the land for a road, although, by reason of ineffectual efforts on their part in that direction, there was ground for injunction when the suit was brought; and therefore an answer alleging facts showing that such steps have been taken is not subject to demurrer. See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 358 et seq.

Interest.—A township is not liable for interest on damages appraised for laying out a highway, except by custom or statute. People v. La Grange Tp. Bd., 2 Mich. 187.

Damages disallowed see Jewett v. Israel, 35 Iowa 261 (where damages for the new road in view of vacation of old road are less than damages from old road); Allaire v. Woonsocket, 25 R. I. 414, 56 Atl. 262 (where owner had himself laid out street on a plat and sold lots thereon); Ex p. Parlee, 25 N. Bruunsw. 51.

The destruction of trees planted on the highway is not a foundation for damages by an abutting owner. Sherman v. Butcher, 72 N. J. L. 53, 60 Atl. 336. But see Pinkerton v. Randolph, 200 Mass. 24, 85 N. E. 892, holding that loss from qualified right to maintain trees and shrubs on highway may be recovered.

Injury to business is not to be considered by itself (Huff v. Donehoo, 109 Ga. 638, 34 S. E. 1035, where the opening of a new road attracted travel and customers away from plaintiff's land on the old road left open; Hudson County v. Emmerich, 57 N. J. Eq. 535, 42 Atl. 107), nor on the other hand will future benefit from possible increase of business be considered (Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Middlesex County, 1 Allen (Mass.) 324).

13. Damages for change of grade of streets see MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 28 Cyc. 1069.

cause of action for consequential damages caused thereby.<sup>14</sup> In many states, however, this rule is changed by express statutory enactment allowing such damages.<sup>15</sup> It is held furthermore that compensation for damages to property directed by constitutional provision will include consequential damages caused by change of grade or other highway work.<sup>16</sup>

c. For Unauthorized Acts. A municipality is not liable for damages caused by its officers acting without authority,<sup>17</sup> but is liable for improper construction within their authority.<sup>18</sup>

2. LIABILITY. The municipality is liable in general for damages caused by the establishment, relocation, or alteration of highways.<sup>19</sup> While this liability generally rests on the municipality, yet individuals also may be liable under some circumstances for damages caused by road work.<sup>20</sup> Thus a private individual may be liable as a trespasser to the owner of land over which there is a highway for injury done in widening or repairing the highway outside the traveled part,<sup>21</sup> and a highway officer negligently or without authority injuring the owner's land may also be personally liable.<sup>22</sup>

3. PAYMENT OR ASSESSMENT AS PREREQUISITE TO ROAD WORK. The statutes often provide that road work shall not be begun until the landowner is protected, as by payment<sup>23</sup> or assessment,<sup>24</sup> unless there has been a release,<sup>25</sup> or agreement,<sup>26</sup> as to damages.

4. MEASURE OF DAMAGES; OFFSETTING BENEFITS. The damages recoverable are to be based on the difference in market value of the land before and after the work,<sup>27</sup> including compensation for all land actually taken,<sup>28</sup> and actual damage to the remaining land,<sup>29</sup> deducting benefits accruing because of the construction or improvement,<sup>30</sup> which deduction must, however, be confined to direct benefits

W. 1081), for while the owner of the property taken is entitled to a full compensation for the damage he sustains thereby, if the taking of his property for the public improvement is a benefit rather than an injury to him, he certainly has no equitable claim to damages (Livingston v. New York, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 85, 22 Am. Dec. 622 [explained in Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 548, 17 S. Ct. 966, 42 L. ed. 270]).

E. Persons Liable — 1. IN GENERAL. Any one who causes or permits an obstruction to be placed on the highway is liable therefor.<sup>89</sup> Thus the owner is liable where a contractor abandons a contract to move a building and leaves it in the road,<sup>90</sup> and a landowner is similarly liable for the acts of his licensee.<sup>91</sup> Corporations are liable in like manner as natural persons,<sup>92</sup> and a municipality may itself be liable.<sup>93</sup>

2. NECESSITY OF NOTICE TO CHARGE DEFENDANT. In some jurisdictions notice to defendant is necessary before liability for obstructions.<sup>94</sup> Thus notice has been held to be necessary before action,<sup>95</sup> indictment,<sup>96</sup> or summary removal.<sup>97</sup> But the requirement is limited to the cases covered by the statute, and thus under the particular circumstances notice has been held unnecessary<sup>98</sup> before summary removal,<sup>99</sup> indictment,<sup>1</sup> or suit to remove,<sup>2</sup> or before an action for a penalty.<sup>3</sup>

F. Remedies<sup>4</sup> — 1. ACTION FOR DAMAGES — a. By Private Person — (1) RIGHT; PROCEDURE. A private person can bring action for the unlawful obstruction of a public way only if he has sustained special damage thereby, different not merely in degree, but in kind, from that suffered by the community at large.<sup>5</sup> Such actions are governed by the ordinary rules of law and and evidence,<sup>9</sup> and by the ordinary rules governing trial,<sup>10</sup> verdict,<sup>11</sup> and decree,<sup>12</sup> and also appeal.<sup>13</sup>

(II) DAMAGES. Damages recoverable are such as proximately result from the wrong complained of,<sup>14</sup> and may consist of the difference between the rental value of property affected with and without the nuisance,<sup>15</sup> or the diminished value of plaintiff's land,<sup>16</sup> and the length of time the obstruction remained may be taken into account,<sup>17</sup> and the cost of removal of the obstruction may be allowed where it could be removed at trifling cost.<sup>18</sup> Punitive damages may be allowed for wilful obstructions.<sup>19</sup> On the question of damages in an action by a private person a road is not to be considered a public way unless actually in condition for use.<sup>20</sup>

b. By Municipality. A town<sup>21</sup> or county<sup>22</sup> may maintain an action for damages against one who injures the roads, and ejectment by the town will lie against those encroaching.<sup>23</sup>

2. INJUNCTION<sup>24</sup> — a. In General. Injunction will commonly lie to compel the removal of an obstruction,<sup>25</sup> on showing that it exists in a public highway,<sup>26</sup>

Special damages must be alleged. Waltman v. Rund, 94 Ind. 225; Roberts v. Fitzgerald, 33 Mich. 4, holding that plaintiff must plead specially damage by reason of a third person passing over plaintiff's land to avoid obstruction.

Complaint held sufficient see Leslie County v. Southern Lumber Co., 89 S. W. 242, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 335.

9. Wicks v. Ross, 37 Mich. 464, quantity of wood plaintiff might have taken to market held inadmissible in absence of evidence that he desired to do so.

Notice to the owner of a telegraph wire of its condition should be shown. Smith v. Gilreath, 69 S. C. 353, 48 S. E. 262.

The burden of proof is on plaintiff. Lewiston Turnpike Co. v. Shasta, etc., Wagon Road Co., 41 Cal. 562; Waddle v. Duncan, 63 Ill. 223 (to show he is an elector of the town as statute requires); Matlock v. Hawkins, 92 Ind. 225 (existence of highway).

special damage,<sup>27</sup> an irreparable injury,<sup>28</sup> and the non-existence of an adequate remedy at law,<sup>29</sup> although in some cases injunction has been held to be a cumulative remedy.<sup>30</sup>

b. By Public Authorities. The suit for injunction may be maintained by the county<sup>31</sup> or municipality,<sup>32</sup> or by the state,<sup>33</sup> or by road officers,<sup>34</sup> only, however, on a proper bill in equity<sup>35</sup> showing danger of great and irreparable injury.<sup>36</sup>

c. By Private Person. A private individual is entitled to an injunction Injunction will be refused where it is not shown that the highway ever has been opened or used. Seeger v. Mueller, 133 Ill. 86, 24 N. E. 513 [affirming 28 Ill. One who has erected costly buildings may enjoin the obstruction of the highway, constituting his only means of ingress and egress to the buildings, before he has suffered actual damage from the obstruction. Ross v. Thompson, 78 Ind. 90.

The fact that no actual damages can be proved, so that in an action at law the jury could award nominal damages only, often furnishes the very best reason why a court of equity should interfere in cases where the nuisance is a continuous one. Newell v. Sass, 142 Ill. 104, 31 N. E. 176. See also Clowes v. Staffordshire Potteries Water-Works Co., L. R. 8 Ch. 125, 42 L. J. Ch. 107, 27 L. T. Rep. N. S. 521.

49. Peterson v. Beha, 161 Mo. 513, 62 S. W. 462.

The judgment must be definite in description (Peterson v. Beha, 161 Mo. 513, 62 S. W. 462), but need not recite in what part of road the line between certain sections came (Wilson v. Hull, 7 Utah 90, 24 Pac. 799).

Mandamus refused see State v. Thompson, 6 N. J. L. J. 214.

It is a good defense that the officer had already served notice to remove (Cook v. Gaylord, 91 Iowa 219, 59 N. W. 30), or that the road commissioner believes after investigation that no unlawful encroachment exists (White v. Leonidas Tp. Highway Com'rs, 95 Mich. 288, 54 N. W. 875).

Although indictment lies for the officer's neglect, yet mandamus may issue. Brokaw v. Bloomington Tp. Highway Com'rs, 130 Ill. 482, 22 N. E. 596, 6 L. R. A. 161. But see

b. Order and Notice. The order or notice to remove obstructions should be issued by the proper court,<sup>58</sup> and served on the party interested,<sup>59</sup> and must be in the form required by statute,<sup>60</sup> containing a specific description of the encroachment,<sup>61</sup> allowing a proper length of time for removal,<sup>62</sup> and ordering the removal to be made at the proper time.<sup>63</sup>

c. Appeal or Certiorari. The decision as to removal may be reviewed by appeal,<sup>64</sup> or by certiorari.<sup>65</sup>

Contest for position.—Where two parties, each without any better right than the other, strive to occupy the same place in the public highway, he is in the wrong who first uses force. Goodwin v. Avery, 26 Conn. 585, 68 Am. Dec. 410. Thus where plaintiff's cab occupied a position in the line at a cab stand which defendant was entitled to, defendant had no right to take forcible possession of the position by backing his cab against plaintiff's horse, to its injury. *Curley v. Rep. 146, riding on foot-paths beside roads. But see Compton v. Revere, 179 Mass. 413, 60 N. E. 931, holding that the fact that some wagons passed over the highway was insufficient to show that it was open for public travel.

Use of sidewalk by bicyclists and others on city streets see MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 28 Cyc. 911.

50. Gurnsey v. Northern California Power Co., 7 Cal. App. 534, 94 Pac. 858 (holding that a county board can only control road to facilitate travel); Smith v. Leavenworth, 15 Kan. 81; State v. Buckner, 61 N. C. 558, 98 Am. Dec. 83.

In Louisiana the right of passage over a highway is, under Civ. Code, art. 727, a discontinuous servitude, which, under article 766, can be established only by title, immemorial reasonable manner,<sup>51</sup> as to drive cattle,<sup>52</sup> or for haulage,<sup>53</sup> but not for sports or diversions.<sup>54</sup> But even one using the highway unlawfully has rights against the negligence of others.<sup>55</sup>

2. BY VEHICLES <sup>56</sup> — a. Automobiles. Automobiles are a reasonable means of using the public highways.<sup>57</sup> Their owners are, however, subject to reasonable and possession itself not being sufficient. Lawson v. Shreveport Waterworks Co., 111 La. 73, 35 So. 390.

There is no right to have cattle drink out of a ditch in a highway. Van Roy v. Watermolen, 125 Wis. 333, 104 N. W. 97.

Regulation.— The driving of cattle may be limited to certain hours. Cooper v. Schultz, 32 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 107. Persons driving animals over highways may be made liable for special damages caused. Brimm v. Jones, 11 Utah 200, 39 Pac. 825, 29 L. R. A. 97.

Rights of abutting owner.— As from the nature of cattle it is impossible even with care to keep them upon the highways, unless the adjoining land is properly fenced, it has been settled that the owner of unfenced lands upon such ways cannot seize as damage feasant, or sustain an action for the injury caused by cattle that wander thereupon, if reasonable care has been used in driving them along the highway, or if they have so escaped, having been properly managed, if reasonable effort has been made to remove them. Hartford v. Rockingham County Light, etc., Co., 75 N. H. 23, 70 Atl. 385, holding that as to incidental diversions of travelers of mature years, the rule is that the point at which such diversions pass the bounds of legitimate recreation as a proper use of a highway is to be found by solving the question of reasonable use as a question of fact.

so appropriated by public authority or by the general license of the owners thereof, express or implied; and such owners themselves, while using their land as a road, must conform to this law. Com. v. Gammons, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 201.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 461.

How far.—One driving on a highway need not turn to the right, so that all of his vehicle is to the right of the center, if he turns far enough so that a passing vehicle, without turning at all, could pass safely. Buxton v. Ainsworth, 138 Mich. 532, 101 N. W. 817; Crampton v. Ivie, 124 N. C. 591, 32 S. E. 968 (holding it enough that he turns as far as he can); Quinn v. O'Keefe, 9 N. Y. App. Div. 68, 41 N. Y. Suppl. 116 (need not turn to the extreme right). But see Needy v. Littlejohn, 137 Iowa 704, 115 N. W. 483, driver compelled to give one half by statute.

81. Illinois.—Ford v. Hine Bros. Co., 115 Ill. App. 153.

(II) HORSEMAN OR LIGHT VEHICLE PASSING HEAVIER VEHICLE. A horse-man<sup>86</sup> or light vehicle<sup>87</sup> is ordinarily bound to avoid a heavier vehicle, and should wait where dangerous.<sup>88</sup> On the other hand, it is the duty of heavy vehicles to keep well to one side to allow lighter vehicles to pass, and failure to do so will render the former liable for accidents directly attributable thereto.<sup>89</sup>

Canada.—White v. Gnaedinger, 7 Quebec Q. B. 156.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 461 et seq.

A traveler has a right to presume that one whom he sees approaching will comply with the statute directing the manner of passing, and will not be precluded from recovering damages for a collision resulting from the other's want of care and skill, merely because, when first observing him approaching, the injured party had ample space to pass in safety. b. Overtaking and Passing. Unless there is a statute or municipal regulation to the contrary,<sup>90</sup> one overtaking and passing another may pass on either side,<sup>91</sup> using proper caution,<sup>92</sup> and keeping a safe distance behind when not passing.<sup>93</sup> The leading team may travel anywhere it pleases,<sup>94</sup> using, however, due care.<sup>95</sup>

c. Turning Across Road. A driver must use due care in turning across a road,<sup>96</sup> but need not necessarily anticipate that a team is behind,<sup>97</sup> or give a signal,<sup>98</sup> and may recover from another whose carelessness causes a collision.<sup>99</sup>

d. Meeting at Cross Roads. The law of the road requiring turning to the right does not apply to persons meeting at cross streets,<sup>1</sup> but each must use due care,<sup>2</sup> and approaching at speed a turn without ability to see up the cross road is commonly negligence.<sup>3</sup> One turning a corner should keep away from the left curb.<sup>4</sup>

e. Pedestrians — (i) IN GENERAL. The law of the road does not apply to pedestrians, who may pass on either side of vehicles,<sup>5</sup> may walk on any part of the road,<sup>6</sup> and need not cross at a regular crossing.<sup>7</sup> Persons driving vehicles are bound to use due care to avoid pedestrians,<sup>8</sup> who, however, have no right of way,<sup>9</sup> and who cannot recover when negligent.<sup>10</sup>

(ii) CROSSING ROAD. A pedestrian need not cross at a regular crossing,<sup>11</sup> and wherever he crosses he may recover for injuries sustained if he has not been guilty of contributory negligence,<sup>12</sup> although he does not stop, look, and listen,<sup>13</sup>

3. FRIGHTENING HORSES. A person frightening horses on a highway is not liable for injury resulting therefrom if he has been guilty of no wrong or negligence;<sup>37</sup> but an action lies for negligently frightening horses and so causing damage,<sup>38</sup> as by automobiles.<sup>39</sup> But persons making use of horses as the means of travel or traffic on the highways have no rights therein superior to those who make use of the ways in other permissible modes; improved methods of locomotion are admissible, and cannot be excluded from existing public roads if not inconsistent with the present methods,<sup>40</sup> and thus automobile noises are not of themselves evidence of negligence,<sup>41</sup> although the operator must take care so to operate his machine as not to frighten horses,<sup>42</sup> and must stop on signal,<sup>43</sup> and even without signal on seeing the fright of horses.<sup>44</sup>

(II) ROADS UNDER REPAIR.<sup>30</sup> A duty rests upon the municipality to care for travelers while a highway is undergoing repair,<sup>31</sup> as by a barrier<sup>32</sup> or fencing,<sup>33</sup> mere warning being held insufficient.<sup>34</sup> But reasonable obstructions for repair work are not defects upon which liability can be predicated,<sup>35</sup> nor will defects in a temporary road cause liability.<sup>36</sup>

c. Defects and Obstructions Causing Injury — (I) GENERAL NATURE; ENUMERATION. A defect or obstruction in a roadway subjecting the municipality to liability is in general any object in, upon, or near the traveled path, which would necessarily obstruct or hinder one in the use of the road for the purpose of traveling, or which from its nature and position would be likely to produce that result by impeding, embarrassing, or opposing passage along the road,<sup>37</sup> as by a

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 483.

The term "defective highways" as used in a statute imposing upon towns liability for damage by reason of defective highways is used in reference to their condition for pub-ditch across<sup>38</sup> or unguarded beside<sup>39</sup> the way, a hole in the roadway<sup>40</sup> or so near the traveled way that travelers are likely to fall into it in avoiding another obstruction,<sup>41</sup> an uneven surface,<sup>42</sup> projections across the highway,<sup>43</sup> or railroad crossings;<sup>44</sup> objects falling upon the road,<sup>45</sup> except where liability is predicated upon peculiar local statutes not covering such cases,<sup>46</sup> structures in the highway,<sup>47</sup> posts,<sup>48</sup> trees,<sup>49</sup> fences,<sup>50</sup> piles of material,<sup>51</sup> or other objects upon the lie travel upon them which their designation as highway imports and in view of the purpose for which they are established and maintained (Whitney v. Ticonderoga, 127 N. Y. 40, 27 N. E. 403), and such a statute as to defects applies only to defects interfering with travel and not to failure to keep a sluiceway clear, causing water to set back on land of an abutter (Winchell v. Camillus, 190 N. Y. 536, 83 N. E. 1134 [affirming 109 N. Y. App. Div. 341, 95 N. Y. Suppl. 688]).

The obstruction need not wholly stop travel to render the town liable, it is sufficient if travel be impeded. Chase v. Oshkosh, 81 Wis. 313, 51 N. W. 560, 29 Am. St. Rep. 898, 15 L. R. A. 553.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 484.

(II) DEFECTS CAUSED BY THE ELEMENTS; SNOW AND ICE.<sup>63</sup> The municipality will be liable, although the defect is caused by the elements, if it should have known of the condition,<sup>64</sup> as where a way is defective from the presence upon it of snow and ice in large quantities negligently permitted to remain by the municipal authorities<sup>65</sup> after the lapse of sufficient time to clear the way;<sup>66</sup> but a municipality is not ordinarily liable for injuries resulting from mere slipperiness from ice.<sup>67</sup>

Notice to one commissioner of a board of town commissioners of highways of a defect is insufficient to charge the board with notice. Malloy v. Pelham, 4 N. Y. St. 828.

Although the defect is out of the surveyor's jurisdiction, if he does not so inform the citizen, the town may be held bound thereby. Rogers v. Shirley, 74 Me. 144.

particular defect which caused the accident,<sup>94</sup> and should be notice not only that the defect existed but that it might become dangerous,<sup>95</sup> and that the object complained of is unnecessarily in the highway.<sup>96</sup> Notice is immaterial where the defect was caused by the town's servant,<sup>97</sup> or where the town could not have prevented the accident if notified.<sup>98</sup>

2. RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF PERSON INJURED — a. Who Can Recover<sup>99</sup> — (i) TRAVELER — (A) In General. A traveler on the highway may recover for injuries from defects or obstructions therein,<sup>1</sup> although he stops temporarily.<sup>2</sup> But one who is not in any sense a traveler cannot usually recover for defects.<sup>3</sup>

(B) Outside of Traveled Path.<sup>4</sup> Municipalities are held to have fully performed their duty when they have constructed highways of reasonable width and smoothness, and if a traveler chooses, without reasonable cause, to travel outside such way, he assumes the risk,<sup>5</sup> and thus ordinarily there is no liability

94. McFarland v. Emporia Tp., 59 Kan. 568, 53 Pac. 864 (that fence insufficient); Littlefield v. Webster, 90 Me. 213, 38 Atl. 141 (holding that notice of another defect or of a cause likely to produce a defect is insufficient); Hurley v. Bowdoinham, 88 Me. 293, 34 Atl. 72; Pendleton v. Northport, 80 Me. 598, 16 Atl. 253 (holding that notice to municipal officers that a culvert was not of sufficient size readily to vent the water, seeking its way through it in time of a freshet, is not notice of a defect in the way produced by an overflow of the water at such a time); Osterhout v. Bethlehem, 55 N. Y. App. Div. 198, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 845.

95. Cunningham v. Clay Tp., 69 Kan. 373, 76 Pac. 907.

Diligence after notice.—The fact that defendant town had no reason to expect that the stoppage of the water in a highway would render the road unsafe did not relieve it from liability for failure to exercise diligence after the defect had been developed. Brown v. Swanton, 69 Vt. 53, 37 Atl. 280.

Notice of the actual condition is sufficient, although town officers may think it is not a defect. Hinckley v. Somerset, 145 Mass. 326, 14 N. E. 166.

The purpose of the travel is immaterial. Schatz v. Pfeil, 56 Wis. 429, 14 N. W. 628; Hammond v. Mukwa, 40 Wis. 35.

"Team" in a statute may include horses or cattle in droves driven along the highway. Elliott v. Lisbon, 57 N. H. 27.

A blind mare walking unattended on a highway is a traveler only if her owner was not negligent in letting her out. Howrigan v. Bakersfield, 79 Vt. 249, 64 Atl. 1130.

It is a question for the jury whether one was traveling on a highway (Sleeper v. Worcester, etc., R. Co., 58 N. H. 520; Cummings v. Center Harbor, 57 N. H. 17; Hardy v. Keene, 52 N. H. 370), unless no evidence exists on which to find that plaintiff was not a traveler (Norris v. Haverhill, 65 N. H. 89, 18 Atl. 85).

Cummington*, 107 Mass. 347 (to pick berries); Babson v. Rockport, 101 Mass. 93 (to fill up hole in roadway). But see Richards v. Enfield, 13 Gray 344, holding that a traveler upon a highway who stops and ties his horse outside of the limits of the highway using due care cannot, if the horse gets loose and runs upon the highway, and suffers an injury from a defect therein, maintain an action against the town.

New Hampshire.—Varney v. Manchester, 58 N. H. 430, 40 Am. Rep. 592 (to see procession pass); Hardy v. Keene, 52 N. H. 370 (stopping to watch work).

Children playing on the highway have been held entitled to recover in some cases (Chicago v. Keefe, 114 Ill. 222, 2 N. E. 267, 55 Am. Rep. 860; McGuire v. Spence, 91 N. Y. 303, 43 Am. Rep. 668), and not entitled in others (Stinson v. Gardiner, 42 Me. 248, 66 Am. Dec. 281; Tighe v. Lowell, 119 Mass. 472).

upon the municipality for accidents outside the traveled path;<sup>6</sup> but the circumstances may be such that even in such a case the municipality may be held, if the injury is not proximately due to the negligence of the traveler.<sup>7</sup>

(II) LAWBREAKERS.<sup>8</sup> A person injured may recover, although he was at the time violating the law by driving on the wrong side of the road,<sup>9</sup> or by driving on Sunday.<sup>10</sup> Under some statutes if the load is heavier than permitted by law the town is not liable.<sup>11</sup>

(III) PERSONS BOUND TO REPAIR. Persons bound to repair a road cannot recover for injuries from defects which they should have remedied,<sup>12</sup> but anything less than a duty to repair will not bar plaintiff.<sup>13</sup>

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 498. Presumption of safety of road.—A traveler has a right to rely to some extent on the duty of the municipality to make its roads safe and to presume that they are so. Neal v. Wilmington, etc., Electric R. Co., 3 Pennw. (Del.) 467, 53 Atl. 338; Atchison v. Plunkett, 8 Kan. App. 308, 55 Pac. 677; Glidden v. Reading, 38 Vt. 52, 88 Am. Dec. 639 (holding that a traveler knowing nothing of a road, and being unable to discover anything to the contrary, has a right to presume that the road is reasonably safe in its surface and margin); Seward v. Milford, 21 Wis. 485 (travel by night).

Where a person is riding with another in the same carriage and has an opportunity to observe and give notice of dangers that may be avoided, he is not in law relieved of all care because the other is the one driving. It is the duty of a passenger, when he has opportunity to do so, as well as of the driver, to learn of any danger in a highway, and avoid it, if practicable. Whitman v. Fisher, 98 Me. 575, 57 Atl. 895.

Driving at night.—It is not necessarily negligent to drive at night if care commensurate with such travel is shown. Salem v. Walker, 16 Ind. App. 687, 46 N. E. 90; Rysdyke v. Mt. Hope, 46 N. Evidence that plaintiff was commonly careful and skilful is incompetent on the question of plaintiff's negligence (McDonald v. Savoy, 110 Mass. 49), as is also evidence as to the habits of plaintiff (Langworthy v. Green Tp., 88 Mich. 207, 50 N. W. 130), or plaintiff's anxiety to reach home (Harris v. Clinton Tp., 64 Mich. 447, 31 N. W. 425, 8 Am. St. Rep. 842), or that plaintiff was habitually reckless (Brennan v. Friendship, 67 Wis. 233, 29 N. W. 902).

Evidence of plaintiff's due care held sufficient see Rusch v. Davenport, 6 Iowa 443 (inference from circumstances that plaintiff was not negligent); Foster v. Dixfield, 18 Me. 380; Carville v. Westford, 163 Mass. 544, 40 N. E. 893 (attempt to pull wagon back in road); Snow v. Provincetown, 120 Mass. 580.

b. Who Liable — (i) ABUTTING OWNER.<sup>50</sup> An abutting owner is liable for an injury caused by his encroachment,<sup>51</sup> by an obstruction originating on his premises,<sup>52</sup> or by his unreasonable or negligent use of the highway,<sup>53</sup> but he is not liable for a proper temporary use of the highway,<sup>54</sup> or of that portion of the land between the highway fences not subject to the right of way,<sup>55</sup> or for the condition of a sidewalk in front of the premises.<sup>56</sup>

(ii) ROAD OFFICER.<sup>57</sup> Under some statutes it is held that an individual specially damaged by a defect on the highway can maintain an action against a highway officer who having funds in his hands negligently fails to perform his duty,<sup>58</sup> other cases, however, taking an opposite view,<sup>59</sup> particularly where the officer is also liable to a penalty.<sup>60</sup>

(iii) COUNTY. Counties are considered as quasi-corporations rather than corporate entities and are therefore not generally, in the absence of statute, liable even for defects in roads under their control; <sup>61</sup> but in many states statutes imposing liability exist, and under such statutes the county may be held. <sup>62</sup>

(iv) ROAD DISTRICTS. In the absence of statute road districts are not responsible for injuries caused by defects in roads under their control. <sup>63</sup>

Canada.—Wells v. Western Union Tel. Co., 40 Nova Scotia 81.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 509.

An independent contractor for the erection of a building is liable for defects in or obstructions upon the highway caused by him (Jones v. Chantry, 4 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 63; Hundhausen v. Bond, 36 Wis. 29; Knight v. Fox, 5 Exch. 721, 14 Jur. 963, 20 L. J. Exch. 9. But see Moss v. Rowlett, 112 Ky. 121, 65 S. W. 153, 358, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1411), as may be also the owner (Ohio Southern R. Co. v. Morey, 47 Ohio St. 207, 24 N. E. 269, 7 L. R. A. 701; Hundhausen v. Bond, 36 Wis. 29).

One coasting on a street, and injured by colliding with a vehicle left standing in the street, cannot recover of the one who left the vehicle there, but did not know that the street was being used for coasting. Reusch v. Licking Rolling Mill Co., 118 Ky. 369, 80 S. W. 1168, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 249.

That the highway was not legally established is no defense. Pewonka v. Stewart, 13 N. D. 117, 99 N. W. 1080.

Liability as insurer.—One who unlawfully obstructs the free use of a highway is charged as an insurer against accident to one properly traveling the highway and injured by such obstruction; but where the highway is obstructed under license, the person responsible therefor is chargeable only with ordinary care to see that the obstruction does not cause injury to persons lawfully using the highway. Stockton Automobile Co. v. Confer, 154 Cal. 402, 97 Pac. 881. See also State v. Miller, 110 Mo. App. 542, 85 S. W. 912; Watts v. Southern Bell Tel., etc., Co. 100 Va. 45, 40 S. E. 107. Nor can the principle which makes a person interfering with the safety of a public highway as such, and for private ends, an insurer of the safety of all persons traveling over the same who may be injured in consequence thereof without fault on their part be extended to cover a case where a contractor is engaged in taking down a building, and there is no excavation or obstruction in the street by reason of said work. Eccles v. Darragh, 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 186.

Where one person's property is made an obstruction by another the former if not a party to the wrong is not liable. Davis v. Williams, 4 Ind. App. 487, 31 N. E. 204. But see Linsley v. Bushnell, 15 Conn. 225, 38 Am. Dec. 79, holding that one permitting property to remain on a road is liable, although the property was placed there by a trespasser.

b. Notice of Injury as Condition Precedent — (i) NECESSITY; WAIVER.<sup>79</sup> Notice of an injury from a defect in a highway is often required by statute to be served within a specified time.<sup>80</sup> This statutory notice cannot be waived.<sup>81</sup>

(ii) FORM AND CONTENTS. The notice should be in the name of the person claiming damages,<sup>82</sup> addressed to all parties liable,<sup>83</sup> and should set out distinctly the claim<sup>84</sup> in writing,<sup>85</sup> and describe the nature<sup>86</sup> and cause of the injury,<sup>87</sup> the time<sup>88</sup>

79. Notice or presentment of claim for injury on city street see MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 28 Cyc. 1447.

80. Clark v. Tremont, 83 Me. 426, 22 Atl. 378 (holding that a vote of a town to pay damages passed before notice given is a mere gratuity on which no action can be brought); Greenleaf v. Norridgwick, 82 Me. 62, 19 Atl. 91; Jackman v. Garland, 64 Me. 133; Madden v. Springfield, 131 Mass. 441; Holland v. Cranston, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,606, 1 Curt. 497; Chartrand v. Montreal, 17 Quebec Super. Ct. 143.

Notice to a property-owner liable for a defect is unnecessary. Stevenson v. Joy, 152 Mass. 45, 25 N. E. 78; Fisher v. Cushing, 134 Mass. 374.

Incapacity to give notice is a question for the jury. Welch v. Gardner, 133 Mass. 529; Page v. Campton, 63 N. H. 197.

81. Gay v. Cambridge, 128 Mass. 387; Gregg v. Weathersfield, 55 Vt. 385 (holding a vote of a town to pay a person who has lost his legal rights without consideration and void); Wheelock v. Hardwick, 48 Vt. 19. See also Hoyle v. Putnam, 46 Conn. 56; Hubbard v. Fayette, 70 Me. 121, holding that denying the claim of a husband is no waiver of notice of a claim by the wife. Compare Jones v. Stephenson, 32 Ont. 226.

82. Keller v. Winslow, 84 Me. 147, 24 Atl. 796; Hubbard v. Fayette, 70 Me. 121; Sargent v. Gilford, 66 N. H. 543, 27 Atl. 306.

Notice by husband does not include claim of wife (Keller v. Winslow, 84 Me. 147, 24 Atl. 796; Hubbard v. Fayette, 70 Me. 121. But see Carberry v. Sharon, 166 Mass. 32, 43 N. E. 912), and conversely (Sargent v. Gilford, 66 N. H. 543, 27 Atl. 306).

Notice held sufficient see Dean v. Sharon, 72 Conn. 667, 45 Atl. 963 (although the husband signed with the claimant); Carberry v. Sharon, 166 Mass. 32, 43 N. E. 912 (signed by plaintiff's husband saying, "We will be obliged to make a claim"); Taylor v. Woburn, 130 Mass. 494 (by a father for a minor daughter and for a deceased son); Ayer v. Somersworth 66 N. H. 476, 30 Atl. 1119 (by agent); Church v. Westminster, 45 Vt. 380 (by married woman alone); Carpenter v. Rolling, 107 Wis. 559, 83 N. W. 953; Parish v. Eden, 62 Wis. 272, 22 N. W. 399 (by administrator); Teegarden v. Caledonia, 50 Wis. 292, 6 N. W. 875 (served by party; signed by attorneys).

Notice held insufficient as to cause of injury see Biesiegel v. Seymour, 58 Conn. 43, 19 Atl. 372; Hubbard v. Fayette, 70 Me. 121; Farnsworth v. Mt. Holly, 63 Vt. 293, 22 Atl. 459 (notice not stating how the culvert was out of repair or that it was in defendant town); Bartlett v. Cabot, 54 Vt. 242 (not stating the respect or particular in which the highway was out of repair).

88. Taylor v. Woburn, 130 Mass. 494.

The date is sufficient. Lilly v. Woodstock, 59 Conn. 219, 22 Atl. 40; Pendergast v. Clinton, 147 Mass. 402, 18 N. E. 75; Welch v. Gardner, 133 Mass. 529 (holding the time of day unnecessary); Sherry v. Rochester, and place<sup>89</sup> of the accident, and the damages claimed.<sup>90</sup> The sufficiency of the notice is a question of law for the court.<sup>91</sup> Whether what it describes is a defect is a question of fact for the jury.<sup>92</sup> It cannot usually be amended.<sup>93</sup>

(III) SERVICE. The notice must be served as the statute provides,<sup>94</sup> and must be received in time;<sup>95</sup> but under exceptional circumstances not attributable to the fault of the claimant a notice made later than provided for in the statute has been held good.<sup>96</sup>

62 N. H. 346. But see White v. Stowe, 54 Vt. 510.

89. Horne v. Rochester, 62 N. H. 347; Fassett v. Roxbury, 55 Vt. 552 (holding that the place must be shown with such certainty that it can be ascertained); Underhill v. Washington, 46 Vt. 767; Law v. Fairfield, 46 Vt. 425. See also Tobin v. Brimfield, 182 Mass. 117, 65 N. E. 28, holding that plaintiff has the burden of proving that defendant was not misled by an inaccurate description of the place.

Description held sufficient see Brown v. Southbury, 53 Conn. 212, 1 Atl. 819; Tuttle v. Winchester, 50 Conn. 496; Tobin v. Brimfield, 182 Mass. 117, 65 N. Location in the town must appear. Graves v. Waitsfield, 81 Vt. 84, 69 Atl. 137 (holding that "traveling on the public highway in your town" sufficiently locates it in town); White v. Stowe, 54 Vt. 510.

That the town officers had seen the defect is to be considered in weighing the sufficiency of the notice. Taylor v. Woburn, 130 Mass. 494; Redepenning v. Rock, 136 Wis. 372, 117 N. W. 805; Salladay v. Dodgeville, 85 Wis. 318, 55 N. W. 696, 20 L. R. A. 541.

H. 363 (plaintiff was unavoidably prevented); Eames v. Brattleboro, 54 Vt. 471; Gonyeau v. Milton, 48 Vt. 172 (claimant bereft of reason by the injury). But see Nash v. South Hadley, 145 Mass. 105, 13 N. E. 376, holding death no excuse where claimant lived ten days in condition in which he might have given notice.

c. Time to Sue.<sup>97</sup> An action may be brought within the time allowed for notice,<sup>98</sup> the right of action accruing when the injury has been consummated.<sup>99</sup>

d. Pleading—(1) DECLARATION OR COMPLAINT. In actions for injury from a defect in a highway the general rules of pleading governing civil cases<sup>1</sup> apply. Plaintiff's pleadings should contain a full, clear statement of the alleged grounds of liability,<sup>2</sup> setting out the particulars<sup>3</sup> and the place<sup>4</sup> of the defect, as within a highway<sup>5</sup> duly established,<sup>6</sup> alleging also notice to defendant, 97. Time to sue and limitations of action for injury in city street see MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 28 Cyc. 1462.

1. See PLEADING, 31 Cyc. 1.

2. Barbour County v. Horn, 41 Ala. 114 (holding that the complaint must allege that no guaranty was taken by the town from the contractor); Griswold v. Gallup, 22 Conn. 208; Corey v. Bath, 35 N. H. 530; Bodah v. Deer Creek, 99 Wis. 509, 75 N. W. 75 (holding that the complaint must state that the defect was the cause of the accident). But see Read v. Chelmsford, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 128, holding a declaration sufficient which did not state that the town was bound to maintain the road.

A declaration against "inhabitants of the town" instead of against the town is good. Flanders v. Stewartstown, 47 N. H. 549.

Surplusage may be struck out and if not prejudicial is not ground for a new trial. Smith v. Piermont, 31 N. H. 343.

Sufficiency of funds for repair need not be alleged, but is a matter of defense. Hayner v. Schaghticoke, 126 N. Y. App. Div. 498, 110 N. Y. Suppl. 714. But see Eveleigh v. Hounsfield, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 140.

Defendant's negligence held properly alleged see Dean v. Sharon, 72 Conn. 667, 45 Atl. 963 (holding that the complaint may allege several acts of negligence); Huntington County v. Huffman, 134 Ind. 1, 31 N. E. 570; Roblee v. Indian Lake, 11 N. Y. App. Div. 435, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 326; Ivory v. Deerpark, 6 N. Y. St. 2.

A conclusion contra formam statuti is unnecessary. Read v. Chelmsford, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 128. See also Reed v. Northfield, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 94, 23 Am. Dec. 662, holding that the complaint need not allege that negligence was contra formam statuti where the action is remedial and not based on an offense.

3. Ashborn v. Waterbury, 70 Conn. 551, 40 Atl. 458 (holding that plaintiff must plead the same defect as caused the injury); Elson v. Waterford, 138 Fed. 1004 [affirmed in 149 Fed. 91, 78 C. C. A. 675] (holding that the complaint must show the same defect as set out in notice).

The particulars in which the highway was defective need not be set out. It is sufficient to allege generally that the injury was caused by the defect, insufficiency, and want of repairs of the highway. Corey v. Bath, 35 N. H. 530.

Pleadings held sufficiently to particularize defect see Lewman v. Andrews, 129 Ala. 170,

E. 1096, 20 L. R. A. N. S. 980 (holding "out of repair" broad enough to cover a want of a railing); Taylor v. Constable, 131 N. Y. 597, 30 N. E. 63 [affirming 15 N. Y. Suppl. 795] (holding complaint sufficient, although not expressly alleging that fall of the bridge was due to its defective condition); Curry v. Luzerne Borough, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 514 (holding that plaintiff may show that the horse was frightened first by steam escaping from a boiler, under a claim for absence of a railing); Stone v. Pendleton, 21 R. I. 332, 43 Atl. 643 (holding that plaintiff's allegation that the horse became frightened by heaps of sand which obstructed a highway is sufficient, without stating that the sand was such an obstruction as was calculated to frighten horses of ordinary gentleness); Powers v. Woodstock, 38 Vt. 44; Stauffer v. Sylvester, 113 Wis. 559, 89 N. W. 495 (injury on a traction engine); Paulson v. Pelican, 79 Wis. 445, 48 N. W. 715 (snow and ice in "uneven and slippery" condition); Cremer v. Portland, 36 Wis. 92 (stump).

Statement of defect held insufficient see Uecker v. Clyman, 137 Wis. 38, 118 N. W. 247 (an allegation that snow and ice had accumulated two weeks or more not a statement that it had continued for three weeks); Susenguth v. Rantoul, 48 Wis. 334, 4 N. W. 328.

Wisconsin.—Doan v. Willow Springs, 101 Wis. 112, 76 N. W. 1104.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 522.

Description of locus held insufficient see Kellogg v. Northampton, 4 Gray (Mass.) 65, "near the house of said George Kellogg."

5. Penick v. Morgan County, 131 Ga. 385, 62 S. E. 300; Snow v. Adams, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 443.

An inference that the highway was within the town at the point where the injury was sustained may be drawn. Read v. Chelmsford, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 128; Corey v. Bath, 35 N. H. 530.

6. Hurley v. Manchester, 39 N. H. 289, holding, however, that the complaint need actual<sup>7</sup> or constructive,<sup>8</sup> showing that plaintiff was not in fault,<sup>9</sup> and specifying his injuries<sup>10</sup> and the damages claimed.<sup>11</sup> The declaration may be amended to better state the same cause of action,<sup>12</sup> and after verdict will be presumed sufficient.<sup>13</sup> The declaration may be good, although differing somewhat from the statutory notice.<sup>14</sup>

(II) PLEA OR ANSWER. As in other actions, the plea or answer must clearly state facts sufficient to constitute a good legal defense.<sup>15</sup> The town may deny the existence of the road as a public highway,<sup>16</sup> even though it has repaired not allege establishment in the mode authorized by statute.

7. Smiley v. Merrill Plantation, 84 Me. 322, 24 Atl. 872 (holding, however, that the complaint need not allege the place of delivery); Low v. Windham, 75 Me. 113; Berry v. Wauwatosa, 87 Wis. 401, 58 N. W. 751 (holding that an admission in an answer that some notice was served is not an admission that the notice required was duly served); Paulson v. Pelican, 79 Wis. 445, 48 N. W. 715; Susenguth v. Rantoul, 48 Wis. 334, 4 N. W. 328. Contra, Kent v. Lincoln, 32 Vt. 591, holding that notice, being no part of the cause of action, need not be alleged.

A general allegation that the required notice was given is sufficient. Cairncross v. Pewaukee, 78 Wis. 66, 47 N. W. 13, 10 L. R. A. 473.

8. Reusch v. Licking Rolling Mill Co., 118 Ky. 369, 80 S. W. 1168, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 249; Moody v. Shelby Tp., 110 Mich. 396, 68 N. W. 259 [following Storrs v. Grand Rapids, 110 Mich. 483, 68 N. W. 258], that defendant by reasonable care might have known and thereafter had sufficient time to repair. See also Thornton v. Springer, 5 Tex. 587, petition defective as not alleging that the road was out of repair for twenty days, and that the overseer had been notified of his appointment. Compare Dean v. Sharon, 72 Conn. 667, 45 Atl. 963, holding that knowledge is presumed and need not be alleged.

9. Connecticut.—Clinton v. Howard, 42 Conn. 294.

Georgia.—Penick v. Morgan County, 131 Ga. 385, 62 S. E. 300; Kent v. Southern Bell Tel., etc., 120 Ga. 980, 48 S. E. 399.

South Carolina.—Walker v. Chester County, 40 S. C. 342, 18 S. E. 936.

See 25 Cent. Dig. tit. "Highways," § 522.

No express denial of contributory negligence is required in some jurisdictions. See Reading Tp. v. Telfer, 57 Kan. 798, 48 Pac. 134, 57 Am. St. Rep. 355; Corey v. Bath, 35 N. H. 530. And see, generally, NEGLIGENCE, 29 Cyc. 575 et seq.

Double damages.—In actions on the case, under Mass. St. (1786) c. 81, § 7, to recover double damages for defects in highways or bridges, it is not necessary to allege that plaintiff is entitled to double damages. Worster v. Proprietors Canal Bridge, 16

14. Breen v. Cornwall, 73 Conn. 309, 47 Atl. 322 (holding that it may allege cause more specifically in complaint than in notice); Wadleigh v. Mt. Vernon, 75 Me. 79; Young v. Douglas, 157 Mass. 383, 32 N. E. 354; Spooner v. Freetown, 139 Mass. 235, 29 N. E. 662. See also Farlow v. Camp Point, 186 Ill. 256, 57 N. E. 781.

15. Dunn v. Gunn, 149 Ala. 583, 42 So. 686 (holding insufficient an answer that it was not obvious to defendant that the ditch would be dangerous, as not denying defendant's knowledge that the road was traveled); Wickham v. Twaddell, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 188 (holding insufficient an answer that travel did not need the obstructed space); Carpenter v. Rolling, 107 Wis. 559, 83 N. W. 953 (holding that a denial of legal lay-out is not a denial putting the existence of the road in issue); Cuthbert v. Appleton, 24 Wis. 383 (holding that a denial that a highway was "in a dangerous condition to travelers exercising ordinary care and diligence" was not a sufficient denial that it was out of repair).

But the purpose for which the material was placed on the highway need not be pleaded. Carlton v. Greenfield, 130 Wis. 342, 110 N. W. 208.

16. Todd v. Rome, 2 Me. 55; Jones v. Andover, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 146; Wentworth v. Rochester, 63 N. H. 244; Wooley v. Rochester, 60 N. H. 467; Tilton v. Pittsfield, 58 N. H. 327; Eames v. Northumberland, 44 N. H. 67; Hall v. Manchester, 39 N. H. 295.

Mere irregularities in the lay-out cannot be set up. Norris v. Haverhill, 65 N. H. 89, 18 Atl. 85 (as for instance that a petition on which the lay-out was made was insufficient in form); Randall v. Conway, 63 N. H. 513, 3 Atl. 635 (that the return was made late); Horne v. Rochester, 62 N. H. 347; Haywood v. Charlestown, 43 N. H. 61; Proctor v. Andover, 42 N. H. 348 (that lay-out was wider than petition prayed for).

If the inhabitants of a town, in making a road, deviate from the true location, they are estopped to deny their liability to maintain it as constructed, in an action against them for injury occasioned by want of repair.

it,<sup>17</sup> although in some cases it has been held that a town was estopped by repairs to deny that the road was public.<sup>18</sup>

e. Issues, Proof, and Variance. As in other actions,<sup>19</sup> the evidence must conform to the pleadings,<sup>20</sup> a material variance having a fatal effect.<sup>21</sup> The usual defenses are open under the general issue.<sup>22</sup>

f. Evidence — (i) PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.<sup>23</sup> The burden is on plaintiff to prove his injury,<sup>24</sup> due notice thereof to the municipality,<sup>25</sup> that he was on the highway legally,<sup>26</sup> and in the exercise of due care,<sup>27</sup> except in those

No material variance found see Linsley v. Bushnell, 15 Conn. 225, 38 Am. Dec. 79 (holding that a statement that defendant placed a cart in a highway and negligently permitted it to remain there is sustained by evidence that he placed the cart in highway, that it was moved, and that defendant allowed it to remain); Holt v. Penobscot, 56 Me. 15, 96 Am. Dec. 429 (breaking down of causeway); Tripp v. Lyman, 37 Me. 250 (an allegation of accident on December 18 held sufficient if proved in the month of December); Goldthwait v. East Bridgewater, 5 Gray (Mass.) 61 (an allegation that a horse fell into a pond and broke his shoulder; evidence that he broke his shoulder on stone post in road); Stedman v. Southbridge, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 162 ("town way or road" in declaration; ancient highway proved); Merkle v. Bennington Tp., 68 Mich. 133, 35 N. injury.<sup>37</sup> The ability of the town to repair is admissible in evidence,<sup>38</sup> as is also evidence of the condition of the road in question at other times<sup>39</sup> and places<sup>40</sup>

Evidence held incompetent see Davis v. Guilford, 55 Conn. 351, 11 Atl. 350 (that plaintiff would not have sued if the town had repaired the injury); Creamer v. McIlvain, 89 Md. 343, 43 Atl. 935, 73 Am. St. Rep. 186, 45 L. R. A. 531 (that another riding with plaintiff had previously driven recklessly); Brown v. Lawrence, 120 Mass. 1 (holding that evidence of a vote to repair is not evidence that they did repair); Brooks v. Acton, 117 Mass. 204 (depth of snow in neighboring woods); Wheeler v. Framingham, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 287 (report of a committee that a certain way is unsafe, which report was accepted); Dudley v. Weston, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 477 (reports of committees and votes of town not setting forth facts showing liability); Langworthy v. Green Tp., 88 Mich. 207, 50 N. W. 130 (that plaintiff had made no claim on the town); Harris v. Clinton Tp., 64 Mich. 447, 31 N. W. 425, 8 Am. St. Rep. 842 (whether the road was safe is held incompetent, as town is only bound to keep roads reasonably safe); Clark v. Kirwan, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 21 (as to where materials were to be delivered under contract); Stone v. Pendleton, 21 R. I. 332, 43 Atl. 643 (whether plaintiff would have gone that way had he known of the defect); Burt v. Utah Light, etc., Co., 26 Utah 157, 72 Pac. 497; Cheney v. Ryegate, 55 Vt. 499 (that the team of a third person which ran into plaintiff had a habit of running away); Fehrman v. Pine River, 118 Wis. 150, 95 N. W. 105 (whether during summer and fall preceding accident); Prahl v. Waupaca, 109 Wis. 299, 85 N. W. 350 (measurements of highway after changes); Stricker v. Reedsburg, 101 Wis. 457, 77 N. W. 897 (where fences extended by user would lead to a stump); Doan v. Willow Springs, 101 Wis. 112, 76 N. W. 1104.

Admissions held competent see Guertin v. Hudson, 71 N. H. 505, 53 Atl. 736 (statement by plaintiff that he was going on an improper expedition); Grimes v. Keene, 52 N. H. 330 (payment to another passenger in the same carriage); Coffin v. Plymouth, 49 N. H. 173 (that selectmen had paid a claim for damages of the owner of a wagon in which plaintiff was riding).

37. Libbey v. Greenbush, 20 Me. 47, horse falling through a causeway held not prima facie evidence that subsequent illness was result of fall.

Evidence held admissible see Whitney v. Leominster, 136 Mass. 25 (that horse had a track record); Maggi v. Cutts, 123 Mass. 535 (horse's habits before and after the accident); Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Zopfi, 73 Fed. 609, 19 C. C. A. 605 (slipping while stepping over a telegraph pole).

38. Weekes v. Needham, 156 Mass. 289, 31 N. E. 8 (population of town, length of roads, amounts raised and expended); Sanders v. Palmer, 154 Mass. 475, 28 N. E. 778; Rooney v. Randolph, 128 Mass. 580 (cost of clearing snow); Malloy v. Pelham, 4 N. Y. St. 828

(holding that proof that the commissioners of highways had sufficient money to have made certain repairs on the highway in question is sufficient, it not being necessary to show that they had sufficient to make all desirable improvements). Contra, Winship v. Enfield, 42 N. H. 197.

Lack of funds eighteen months before the accident cannot be shown. Bryant v. Randolph, 2 Silv. Sup. (N. Y.) 381, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 438.

Maryland.—Hartford County v. Hause, 106 Md. 439, 67 Atl. 273.

Massachusetts.—Stone v. Hubbardston, 100 Mass. 49, holding admissible evidence that ice usually formed at the point in question.

Michigan.—Langworthy v. Green Tp., 88 Mich. 207, 50 N. W. 130, measurements of log imbedded in road four weeks after accident.

New York.—Stone v. Poland, 81 Hun 132, 30 N. Y. Suppl. 743; Clapper v. Waterford, 62 Hun 170, 16 N. Y. Suppl. 640 [reversed on other grounds in 131 N. Y. 382, 30 N. E. 240 (condition on morning after accident)]; Maxim v. Champion, 50 Hun 88, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 515 [affirmed in 119 N. Y. 626, 23 N. E. 1144] (that highway had been in the same condition without accident for sixty-eight years); Bryant v. Randolph, 2 Silv. Sup. 381, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 438.

Pennsylvania.—North Manheim Tp. v. Arnold, 119 Pa. St. 380, 13 Atl. 444, 4 Am. St. Rep. 650, that lumber was piled on the road previously held admissible to show notice of obstruction.

Utah.—Burt v. Utah Light, etc., Co., 26 Utah 157, 72 Pac. 497.

Vermont.—Brown v. Swanton, 69 Vt. 53, 37 Atl. 280; Cook v. Barton, 66 Vt. 65, 28 Atl. 631; Cheney v. Ryegate, 55 Vt. 499; Walker v. Westfield, 39 Vt. 246.

Wisconsin.—Salladay v. Dodgeville, 85 Wis. 318, 55 N. W. 696, 20 L. R. A. 541; Schuenke v. Pine River, 84 Wis. 669, 54 N. W. 1007.

Augusta*, 32 Me. 536); privation, inconvenience, bodily and mental suffering, and pecuniary loss likely during remainder of life (Scott Tp. v. Mont-gomery, 95 Pa. St. 444); physical and mental suffering from premature birth of children, but not mental suffering following their loss (Bovee v. Danville, 53 Vt. 183); miscarriage (Oliver v. La Valle, 36 Wis. 592); and loss of services of wife and expenses of her sick-damages being allowed only in exceptional cases,<sup>80</sup> and mental suffering being compensated only when accompanied by actual injury.<sup>81</sup> Damages are confined to damages stated in the notice<sup>82</sup> and consequences directly resulting.<sup>83</sup>

i. Appeal and Error.<sup>84</sup> The right of appeal in actions for injuries resulting from defects or obstructions depends on local practice,<sup>85</sup> and is only open on points made in the lower court,<sup>86</sup> and not as to facts found by the jury,<sup>87</sup> or where no substantial error was committed.<sup>88</sup>

VIII. ROAD TAXES.

ness (Hunt v. Winfield, 36 Wis. 154, 17 Am. Rep. 482).

Items held not recoverable see Chidsey v. Canton, 17 Conn. 475 (consequential damages, loss of service, expense of nursing); Dubuque Wood, etc., Assoc. v. Dubuque, 30 Iowa 176 (loss of goods which plaintiff could not move over the roads); McLaughlin v. Bangor, 58 Me. 398 (loss of use of coach held not "damage in his property," within the meaning of the declaration); Brown v. Watson, 47 Me. 161, 74 Am. Dec. 482 (being compelled to take circuitous route); Sargent v. Hampden, 38 Me. 581 (interest); Weeks v. Shirley, 33 Me. 271 (loss of time and expenses held not included under "damage in one's property"); Reed v. Belfast, 20 Me. 246 (loss of services of minor son); Smith v. Dedham, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 522 (damage from loss of access to highway); Harwood v. Lowell, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 310 (mere consequential damages); Lavery v. Manchester, 58 N. H. 444 (for injuries caused by falling into cellar which plaintiff maintained as a nuisance); Griffin v. Sanbornton, 44 N. H. 246 (damage from obstruction suffered in common with general public); Page v. Sumpster, 53 Wis. 652, 11 N. W. 60 (use of mare between injury and her death, including plaintiff's services in taking care of her).

Damages are for the jury and an instruction should not be based on the assumption that injuries will be permanent. Colby v. Wiscasset, 61 Me. 304.

and purpose of the acts.<sup>92</sup> Two different systems may be in effect at the same time,<sup>93</sup> although property may be liable only to a road tax by one authority.<sup>94</sup> A statute as to road taxes will be applied only to districts expressly designated.<sup>95</sup>

b. Amendment and Repeal. Statutes inconsistent with earlier law may be regarded as amendments to it,<sup>96</sup> and a road tax statute may be repealed by implication by a later act<sup>97</sup> or general revenue law,<sup>98</sup> and a general law may be repealed by a later special act.<sup>99</sup>

Courts are not authorized to resort to any refined construction in order to subject lands to special burdens not fairly within the words or general scope of the statute. The boundaries of a district specifically described in the statute to be taxed for a local improvement cannot be enlarged by construction. The power to levy an assessment for a local improvement exists only where it is clearly and distinctly conferred by legislative authority, and, if not so conferred, the assessment is void. If there is any necessity to resort to construction at all it must be in favor of the property-owner rather than

(to non-residents by advertisement); Williams v. Wright, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 497; St. Bartholomew's Parish Lower Bd. of Road Com'rs v. Murray, 1 Rich. (S. C.) 335. But see State v. Yoder, 132 N. C. 1111, 44 S. E. 689, holding that notice called for three days' labor is no defense for failure to work the two days for which defendant was liable.

Oral notice may be sufficient. Lowry v. State, 52 Ark. 270, 12 S. W. 563 (conversation); Sims v. Hutcheson, 72 Ga. 437; State v. Telfair, 130 N. C. 645, 40 S. E. 976; State v. Baker, 108 N. C. 799, 13 S. E. 214.

17. Moore v. State, 52 Ark. 265, 12 S. W. 562, holding that where three days' notice is required notice on Saturday is bad as to Tuesday but good as to Wednesday.

18. Mason v. Thomas, 36 N. H. 302; Biss v. New Haven, 42 Wis. 605.

19. State v. Covington, 125 N. C. 641, 34 S. E. 272; State v. Sharp, 125 N. C. 628, 34 S. E. 264, 74 Am. St. Rep. 663; St. John's Parish Road Com'rs v. Keckely, 4 McCord (S. C.) 463.

Service is void when made on the wife of defendant (Lowry v. State, 52 Ark. 270, 12 S. W. 563), or to a third person for delivery to him (State v. Wainright, 60 Ark. 280, 29 S. W. 981); or to the overseer of slaves instead of to the owner (James v. Clarke County, 33 Ala. 51; Cooke v. Copial County Police Bd., 38 Miss. 340).

The inhabitants of an incorporated city (Es p. Roberts, 28 Tex. App. 43, 11 S. W. 782) or town (De Tavernier v. Hunt, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 599) cannot be forced to work the roads outside the city or town limits.

Mere sojourners are not commonly liable. Taylor v. State, 147 Ala. 131, 41 So. 776; Barber v. State, 83 Ark. 246, 103 S. W. 724; State v. Hinton, 131 N. C. 770, 42 S. E. 611; Cantrell v. Pinkney, 30 N. C. 436 (holding, however, that one residing four months of the year regularly in the state on an estate of his own is liable, although one traveling and remaining more than that would not be); Chinese Tax Cases, 14 Fed. 338, 8 Sawy. 384 (Chinese laborers engaged temporarily in railroad work in district). But liability has been held to exist as to a railroad overseer (English v. Batton, 73 Ga. 146), a non-resident laborer for an indefinite period (State v. Johnston, 118 N. C. 1188, 23 S. E. 921), and a section hand on a government railroad (Fillmore v. Colburn, 28 Nova Scotia 292).

C.) 400 (clerks of court); Jackson v. State, 101 Tenn. 138, 46 S. W. 450 (national guard). But see State v. Craig, 81 N. C. 588, holding a pilot not exempt but excusable when engaged.

Firemen are exempt.—Lewin v. State, 77 Ala. 45 (by charter of incorporated fire company); Porter v. State, 141 Ind. 488, 40 N. E. 1061; Leedy v. Bourbon, 12 Ind. App. 486, 40 N. E. 640. But see Chidsey v. Scranton, 70 Miss. 449, 12 So. 545, holding exemption of members of fire company unconstitutional.

Railroad men.—Railroad men have been held exempt (State v. Womble, 112 N. C. 862, 17 S. E. 491, 19 L. R. A. 827; State v. Hathcock, 20 S. C. 419, 47 Am. Rep. 842; Hawkins v. Small, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 193. But see State v. St. George's Parish Road Com'rs, Cheves (S. C.) 95), while on the other hand exemption of railroad men has been held unconstitutional (Johnson v. State, 91 Ala. 70, 9 So. 71. See also Johnson v. State, 88 Ala. 176, 7 So. 253).

Exemptions disallowed see James v. State, 41 Ark. 451 (mail riders); State v. Lawren's Dist. Road Com'rs, Cheves (S. C.) 210 (postmasters); State v. Lancaster Dist. Road Com'rs, 3 Hill (S. C.) 314 (warner of the hands).

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE.

Submission of controversy is a proceeding of statutory origin,<sup>1</sup> whereby the parties submit any matter of real controversy between them for final determination,<sup>2</sup> to any court that would otherwise have jurisdiction,<sup>3</sup> upon an agreed statement of facts,<sup>4</sup> signed by the parties,<sup>5</sup> and supported by an affidavit that the

E. 231 (holding that in New York the practice seems to have had its origin in the report of the commissioners appointed to revise New York practice and procedure under the constitution of 1846); Campbell v. Cronly, 150 N. C. 457, 64 S. E. 213; Grandy v. Gulley, 120 N. C. 176, 26 S. E. 779 (holding that the practice was unknown at common law); Derby v. Jacques, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,817, 1 Cliff. 425 (holding that judgments upon agreed statements of fact were unknown at common law, but the general usage of the courts have sanctioned it and it has now become a part of the common law).

Failure to observe the statutory provisions will deprive the court of jurisdiction. Odell v. Cromwell, 10 N. Y. Wkly. Dig. 273. But where a complaint is filed giving jurisdiction, and a stipulation is then filed, treated by the court and parties as amending the complaint and raising an issue, the case is not an agreed case, which has to be submitted with the formalities required by the statute to give jurisdiction. Bickford v. Kirwin, 30 Mont. 1, 75 Pac. 518.

controversy is real and the proceeding in good faith to determine the rights of the parties.<sup>6</sup> It is a very old practice,<sup>7</sup> and is a substitute for an action,<sup>8</sup> and stands in lieu of a special verdict,<sup>9</sup> and is entirely different from an agreed statement of facts used merely as evidence upon the trial,<sup>10</sup> which is simply the result of an agreement of the parties as to what the evidence in the case will prove.<sup>11</sup> The practice is encouraged whenever the facts can be agreed upon.<sup>12</sup>

II. COURTS HAVING JURISDICTION.

What courts have jurisdiction of a controversy submitted without action, or upon an agreed case, depends upon the statutes regulating the proceeding,<sup>13</sup> it

6. See infra, IV, B.

Illustration.—Where it was agreed, in an action to compel an administrator to account, that the court below might decide from the pleadings, admissions, and inspection of an account offered in evidence, whether plaintiff was entitled to judgment, it was in effect a submission of the case as a case agreed. Grant v. Hughes, 94 N. C. 231.

Distinguished from trying a case before court without jury.—This practice is quite distinct from the right given by constitution to try a case by consent before the court without a jury. In the former case the court is in the exercise of its inherent functions to decide questions of law submitted to it, while in a trial before the court, sitting, by consent, without a jury, it deals with the facts in all respects as a jury would do. Tyson v. Western Nat. Bank, 77 Md. 412, 26 Atl. 520, 23 L. R. A. 161.

Distinguished from arbitration.—A proceeding under the act of June 17, 1887, providing for submission of all matters in controversy to a circuit court judge, from whose decree no appeal shall be taken, is not an arbitration, but is a proceeding in a court of general jurisdiction, either at law or in chancery, according to its nature. Farwell v. Sturges, 165 Ill. 252, 46 N. E. 189.

Effect of misnomer of agreement.—Where two persons cause to be filed in the records of the court of common pleas as of a certain term a paper, the caption of which shows that the parties have assumed the positions of plaintiff and defendant, and the body of the paper stipulates that the cause shall be tried by the court without a jury, the court will construe the paper as an agreement for an amicable action under the act of June 13, 1836 (Pamphl. Laws 568), although the parties may have designated the papers as a case stated. Miller v. Cambria County, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 591.

In North Carolina, Code Civ. Proc. § 315, relating to submission of controversy, is still in force, notwithstanding Acts (1868-1869), c. 76, suspending the code in certain cases. Hervey v. Edmunds, 68 N. C. 243.

affect either party, or to be regarded as made except for the purpose of this controversy upon the foregoing statement," it must be dismissed, for admissions therein must have all the effect which they could have if in pleadings and a judgment thereon); Berlin Iron Bridge Co. v. Smith, 111 Mo. App. 683, 86 S. W. 586 (holding that Rev. St. (1899) § 793, providing for the submission of controversies without action, does not apply to the submission of an ordinary action on an agreed statement of facts); *Van Sickle v. A case agreed upon by the parties is not a mere stipulation concerning evidence, from which inference of fact may be drawn; but it is equivalent to a finding of facts by a court, or the special verdict of a jury, in which every fact necessary to a recovery must be expressly found. Goodrich v. Detroit, 12 Mich. 279.

being generally provided that the court must be one which would have had jurisdiction if an action had been brought;<sup>14</sup> and the submission of facts must represent a statement of a controversy existing between the parties, on the determination of which a judgment which the court would have jurisdiction to enter in an action brought to determine the controversy could be granted;<sup>15</sup> and where a court has only appellate jurisdiction the agreed case and the decision of the court below should be regularly certified into the appellate court, which otherwise has no jurisdiction of the case.<sup>16</sup> Submission of a controversy without action will be dismissed where the effect of the decision would be to modify or change a decree of another court in the state of equal jurisdiction.<sup>17</sup>

III. CONTROVERSIES WHICH MAY BE SUBMITTED.

The controversies which may be submitted depend upon the statutes granting the right, it being usually provided that any question may be submitted which might be the subject of a civil action, between the parties,<sup>18</sup> and under these provisions questions which could not be the subject of an action between the parties cannot be entertained,<sup>19</sup> nor can a controversy be submitted where the eral states. And see People v. Boughton, 5 Colo. 487 (holding that, under Code Civ. Proc. c. 28, the supreme court has no jurisdiction of a controversy submitted without action); Chase v. Miller, 41 Pa. St. 403 (holding that the authority of the supreme court to revise and correct the proceedings of inferior courts extends to all cases except where expressly excluded by statute, or where a case is stated by the parties, where they agree to submit their disputes to the common pleas, without expressly reserving their right to a writ of error).

Estoppel or waiver of want of jurisdiction, by submission.—A party, by joining in a case stated in a court of equity submitting the question of the validity of an award, is not precluded from objecting to the want of jurisdiction. The consent of parties cannot give jurisdiction which does not exist. Beeson v. Elliott, 1 Del. Ch. 368.

14. White v. Clarke, 111 Cal. 425, 44 Pac. 164 (holding that an agreed case shows that the right of action of one party depends on his right to enter certain lands under the homestead laws of the United States presents a question which cannot be the subject of an action in the state courts, and cannot be entertained); Territory v. Clark, 2 Okla. 82, 35 Pac. 882.

15. Kelley v. Hogan, 69 N. Y. App. Div. 251, 74 N. Y. Suppl. 682.

16. Plumleigh v. White, 9 Ill. 387, holding that where a case is pending in the circuit court the parties cannot, under Rev. St. c. 29, §§ 16, 17, agree upon the facts, and file such agreement originally in the supreme court, without any record of the court below; but the circuit court must first pass upon the case made. See also APPEAL AND ERROR, 2 Cyc. 536.

17. Gregory v. Perdue, 29 Ind. 66.

18. See the codes and statutes of the several states. And see White v. Clarke, 111 Cal. 425, 44 Pac. 164; West Hartford v. Hartford Water Com'rs, 68 Conn. 323, 36 Atl. 786; Marx v. Brogan, 188 N. Y. 431, 81 N. E. 231; Cunard Steam-Ship Co. v. Voorhis, 104 N. Y.

525, 11 N. E. 49; Hobart College v. Fitzhugh, 27 N. Y. 130; Patterson v. Mutual Life Assoc., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 290, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 636; Newark, etc., R. Co. v. Perry County Com'rs, 30 Ohio St. 120.

Where the writ of quo warranto is abolished and it is provided that the remedies heretofore obtainable in that form may be obtained by a civil action, a controversy to determine the right to an elective office which might have been determined in an action in the nature of quo warranto may be submitted on an agreed case without action. Alexander v. McKenzie, 2 S. C. 81.

Relief by injunction in such a proceeding is expressly prohibited by N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281. Cunard Steam-Ship Co. v. Voorhis, 104 N. Y. 525, 11 N. E. 49; Patterson v. Mutual Life Assoc., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 290, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 636. But where a controversy is submitted whereby an injunction is sought to restrain defendant from continuing business in an alleged unlawful manner, and to recover a penalty for an alleged violation of law, the proceeding as to the injunction will be dismissed, but the case may be retained for disposition as to the penalty. People v. Binghamton Trust Co., 65 Hun (N. Y.) 384, 20 N. Y. Suppl. 179 [affirmed in 139 N. Y. 185, 34 N. E. 898].

An application for mandamus requiring the construction of a statute may be submitted to the supreme court by agreement without process, under St. (1893) c. 66, art. 21, § 541, providing that the parties to a question which might be the subject of a civil action may agree on a case, and submit the same to any court which would have jurisdiction if an action had been brought. Territory v. Clark, 2 Okla. 82, 35 Pac. 882.

Claims against decedents' estates, the filing and allowance of which are governed by a special statute, cannot be adjusted by submission of controversy. Henes v. Henes, 5 Ind. App. 100, 31 N. E. 832.

19. In re De Luca, 146 Cal. 110, 79 Pac. 853; Bates v. Lilly, 65 N. C. 232 (holding that a mere dispute between creditors relief sought could not be given in an action, such as is sought to be submitted.<sup>20</sup> The controversy must be real,<sup>21</sup> and not a merely colorable dispute suggested in order to have the law in the case ascertained,<sup>22</sup> nor a mere abstract question presented to get the advice of the court, the decision of which will not terminate the controversy between the parties,<sup>23</sup> and by which only a preliminary question will for the possession of a fund, in the hands of the sheriff, raised under different executions against the same defendant, does not constitute such a case as may, under the code of procedure, be submitted to a judge, without a suit between the adverse claimants, because no action could be brought, the parties having no claim one against the other, although they both may have claims against the sheriff who is not a party to the controversy).

Where an action could not be brought within a certain period no controversy can be submitted within that time. Hobart College v. Fitzhugh, 27 N. Y. 130.

Unless determinable in an action as distinguished from a special proceeding the controversy cannot be submitted. Woodruff v. People, 193 N. Y. 560, 86 N. E. 562, holding that a controversy cannot be submitted where, if the questions are answered in plaintiff's favor, judgment is to be entered directing defendant highway commissioners to lay out a highway petitioned for by plaintiff, such relief being properly granted through mandamus, and where, if the questions are answered in defendant's favor, a judgment is to be entered affirming defendant's order denying plaintiff's petition — relief properly awarded on certiorari.

20. People v. Mutual Endowment, etc., Assoc., 92 N. Y. 622, holding that where, in a controversy sought to be submitted, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1279, between the state and a corporation, the only relief to which the former is entitled, if any, is to restrain the corporation from exercising franchises unlawfully, the proceeding should be dismissed, as that relief may not be given therein.

Where the right to salary depended upon the right to a public office, and the right to public office could only be tried in an action in the name of the people, the submission of a controversy by a city as to which of the two defendants was entitled to the office of health physician, in order that it might pay him the salary, could not be had. Buffalo v. Mackay, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 204.

21. Kelley v. Hogan, 69 N. Y. App. Div. 251, 74 N. Y. Suppl. 682; Williams v. Rochester, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 169; Bloomfield v. Ketcham, 5 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 407; Van Sickle v. Van Sickle, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 265; Berks County v. Jones, 21 Pa. St. 413; Forney v. Huntingdon, 6 Pa. Super. Ct. 397; Mudey v. Schuylkill County, 2 Leg. Rec. (Pa.) 178; Dunn v. Meixell, 1 Lehigh Val. L. Rep. (Pa.) 168.

Where the same attorney prepared the statement and briefs of both parties, a decision of the general term in a controversy submitted on an agreed statement under Code

Civ. Proc. § 1279, which provides for such submission, in good faith, of a real controversy, for the purpose of determining the rights of the parties, will be set aside, as not of the independent character contemplated by the code. Wood v. Nesbitt, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 423.

There must be an actual dispute between real parties. Witz v. Dale, 129 Ind. 120, 27 N. E. 498. The parties must be adversely interested. Champlin, Petitioner, 17 R. I. 512, 23 Atl. 25, holding that Pub. Laws (1876), c. 563, § 16, which provides that any persons interested in any question of the construction of any statute may concur in stating such question to the supreme court, and court of common pleas, in the form of a special case for the opinion of said court, etc., does not authorize the rendition of an opinion as to the construction and constitutionality of a statute upon the petition of persons who are not parties to a case involving adversary claims for decision.

Controversy held to be real within the meaning of the statute see Com. v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 29 Pa. St. 370; Greene, Petitioner, 17 R. I. 509, 23 Atl. 29.

22. Berks County v. Jones, 21 Pa. St. 413; Forney v. Huntingdon, 6 Pa. Super. Ct. 397; James v. Fennicle, 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 91 (holding that the court will not consider an agreed case which is not based upon a real case, but is simply intended to secure the opinion of the court as a guide to executors in the distribution of an estate); Mudey v. Schuylkill County, 2 Leg. Rec. (Pa.) 178; Dunn v. Meixell, 1 Lehigh Val. L. Rep. (Pa.) 168.

23. Capen v. Washington Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 517 (holding that the court will not give an opinion upon a statement of facts which presents merely a speculative or abstract question, the decision of which either way will not terminate the controversy between the parties; but the agreed statement will be discharged); Woodruff v. People, 193 N. Y. 560, 86 N. E. 562; People v. Mutual Endowment, etc., Assoc., 92 N. Y. 622 (holding that to give the court cognizance of a case submitted, the facts stated must show that there was, at the time the submission was made, a controversy or question of difference between the parties on the point presented for decision, and that a judgment can be rendered thereon, for the court may not pass upon a mere abstract question); Troy Waste Mfg. Co. v. Harrison, 73 Hun (N. Y.) 528, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 109; James v. Fennicle, 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 91; Pittsburgh v. Allegheny, 1 Pittsb. (Pa.) 97.

The remedy is not intended to enable parties to use the court as advisory in their cases, but is intended as a convenient form of submission of a controversy upon an agreed state of facts for the judgment of the court be settled, leaving the merits undecided,<sup>24</sup> and the court will not entertain a question of law presented by agreement of the parties, but which does not arise out of the facts in the case.<sup>25</sup>

IV. REQUISITES OF THE SUBMISSION.

A. Agreement of Facts. The submission must contain an agreement as to the facts which are admitted, for the court cannot be required to take the evidence in a case and ascertain the facts from the testimony which is thus admitted,<sup>26</sup> and all the facts agreed on must be distinctly stated, and not left to inference,<sup>27</sup> so that the court may have nothing to do but pronounce the law arising out of them.<sup>28</sup> A controversy submitted for the opinion of the court contain-as in a civil action, which would have the same force and effect on the case agreed upon that it would have if the case had gone through the ordinary course of a civil action. Newark, etc., R. Co. v. Perry County Com'rs, 30 Ohio St. 120. Any attempt to obtain the opinion of the court upon a question of law, through the instrumentality of a mere spurious case, is reprehensible, and the parties offending may be punished for a contempt of court. Washburn v. Baldwin, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 472.

24. Austin v. Wilson, 7 Mass. 205; Clapp v. Guy, 31 N. Y. App. Div. 535, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 33, holding that the opinion of the court cannot be obtained in a proceeding of this character upon a mooted question of law merely because the answer thereto would or might be a guide to the determination of a lawsuit between the parties interested, to be instituted upon other and further facts than those stated.

25. Smith v. Cudworth, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 196; Blair v. Illinois State Bank, 8 Mo. 313, holding that, although parties to a suit may agree on the facts of a case and submit the law to the court, they may not agree on facts not in the cause, and thus obtain the opinion of the court on matters wholly disconnected with the suit.

26. Woodman v. Eastman, 10 N. H. 359; Clark v. Wise, 46 N. Y. 612 (holding that unless, in a controversy submitted without action, a case is presented in which there is no dispute as to facts, the court cannot pronounce judgment; and thus where a question is involved in a controversy as to the intent of a transfer of property, and there is no agreement as to that fact in the statement of facts, the proceeding must be dismissed); Begen v. Curtis, 81 N. Y. App. Div. 91, 80 N. Y. Suppl. 929 (holding that where, on a submission of controversy without action, there is opposite the title a memorandum to the effect that it is a case agreed upon in a controversy submitted without action, pursuant to the code of civil procedure, but it is not stated that the case agreed upon contains a statement of the facts, as required by the code, and there is no stipulation between the parties that the papers constitute a case containing a statement of the facts which have been agreed upon, the submission will be dismissed); Newark, etc., R. Co. v. Perry County Com'rs, 30 Ohio St. 120 (holding that an agreed case will be dismissed,

27. Phelps v. Phelps, 145 Mass. 416, 14 N. E. 625 (holding that a case cannot be submitted on a statement of facts imperfect and inconclusive in itself, with an agreement that if, on any facts, plaintiff's case can be maintained, the case may be referred to a master or assessor to determine whether such vital facts exist); Hughes v. Moore, 17 Mo. App. 148; Kelly v. Kelly, 72 N. Y. App. Div. 487, 76 N. Y. Suppl. 558; Schuylkill County v. Shoener, 205 Pa. St. 592, 55 Atl. 791; Com. v. Howard, 149 Pa. St. 302, 24 Atl. 308; Berks County v. Pile, 18 Pa. St. 493; Rockwell v. Warren County, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 584; Washburn v. Baldwin, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 472 (holding that a case stated must contain a full and certain statement of all the facts belonging to the case, so that when a judgment is entered thereon it shall be capable of enforcement to the same extent as though reached by the verdict of a jury); Lippincott v. Ledyard, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 18 (holding that the court, upon a case stated, is not to exercise the functions of a jury, or find facts, and hence the case submitted must be free from ambiguity, and contain all the facts necessary to a precise application of the law); James v. McWilliams, 6 Munf. (Va.) 301.

If there be any ambiguity or lack of certainty on a material point, the case will be dismissed. Gage v. Gates, 62 Mo. 412; Hughes v. Moore, 17 Mo. App. 148.

An agreed case in ejectment, admitting lease, entry, and ouster, sufficiently admits that all of defendants are in possession of the land in controversy. Mooberry v. Marye, 2 Munf. (Va.) 453.

28. Holmes v. Wallace, 46 Pa. St. 266; Com. v. Baum, 1 Lehigh Val. L. Rep. (Pa.) 187; Royall v. Eppes, 2 Munf. (Va.) 479. See Henniker v. Hopkinton, 18 N. H. 98, holding that if a court cannot determine a controversy submitted without action upon the facts stated, the case must be dismissed.

The remedy is not intended to embrace issues where any dispute of fact is involved but is confined to causes depending wholly upon questions of law. Marx v. Brogan, 188 N. Y. 431, 81 N. E. 231.

If legal conclusions or principles are included in the statement the court will disregard them. Southern R. Co. v. Greenville City Council, 49 S. C. 449, 27 S. E. 652.

C. Pleadings. An agreed case does not require any pleadings,<sup>46</sup> and should they be filed they must be disregarded,<sup>47</sup> for an agreed case takes the place of pleading,<sup>48</sup> the very purpose of the proceeding being to dispose of the formalities of a summons, complaint, and answer, and upon an agreed statement of the facts to submit the case to the court for decision;<sup>49</sup> and it has been held that where a submission is made upon an agreed case the pleadings should be dismissed;<sup>50</sup> and where an action is commenced, and thereafter a case containing the facts upon which the controversy depends is agreed on and submitted, if the action is not thereby discontinued, it is so discontinued when judgment is entered upon the submission, and until that time it is suspended.<sup>51</sup>

V. SCOPE OF INQUIRY AND POWERS OF COURT.

A. General Rules. Only the determination of questions between the parties affecting their interests may be made, and the court cannot go beyond a decision affecting such interests;<sup>53</sup> and the inquiry is confined to the precise question put in issue;<sup>54</sup> and the court has no power to permit either party against

The court has a right to order that an issue be formed upon an agreed case, especially where the agreement in express terms provided that the court was to try the issue upon the facts as agreed, and has a right to inquire whether such agreement was obtained by fraud. *Keith v. on the demurrer to the petition was reserved by the court below for hearing before the judges at general term, when the submission was made on the agreed case, the case on the pleadings should have been dismissed, but that nevertheless the court would hear the case as submitted.

C. United States.—Burr v. Des Moines R., etc., Co., 1 Wall. 99, 17 L. ed. 561, holding that the statement must be sufficient in itself, without inferences or comparisons, or balancing of testimony, or weighing evidence, to justify the application of the legal principles which must determine the case. It must leave none of the functions of a jury to be discharged by this court, but must have all the sufficiency, fulness, and perspicuity of a special verdict. If it necessarily requires of the court to weigh conflicting testimony, or to balance admitted facts, and deduce from these the propositions of fact on which alone a legal conclusion can rest, then it is not such a statement as this court can act upon.

See 44 Cent. Dig. tit. "Submission of Controversy," § 14.

In Maryland the former rule was as stated in the text. Vansant v. Roberts, 3 Md. 119 (holding that, where a case is submitted on an agreed statement of facts, the court was bound to decide upon the facts as presented in the record, and they could make no inferences, unless of law, or such as were undeniable consequences resulting from the facts agreed on); Neptune Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 11 Gill & J. 256; Hysinger v. Baltzell, 3 Gill & J. 158. But under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 26, § 15, the court may draw all inferences of fact or law that court or jury could have drawn from the facts agreed on as if they had been offered in evidence on a trial. Baltimore v. Consolidated Gas Co., 99 Md. 540, 58 Atl. 216.

But see Kingsland v. New York, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 599, holding that where, on submission of controversy without action, and pursuant to the stipulation defining the relief to which plaintiff would be entitled if successful, a judgment was ordered for plaintiff, and after judgment had been entered on this decision, the court of appeals handed down a decision which would enlarge plaintiff's rights, a motion by plaintiff to amend his prayer for relief in the case submitted, so as to secure to him the benefit of this decision, should be denied, since even if the court had power to allow an amendment of the submission at that stage of the proceedings, it would not be a provident use of the power to grant such an amendment after the case itself had been heard and decided, and the rights of the parties had been defined by the judgment already entered.

A tax collector may not submit an agreed case involving the validity of a tax, since the county, and not the tax collector, is a party to such question. Bailey v. Johnson, 121 Cal. 562, 54 Pac. 80.

Designation of parties.—On submission of a controversy one of the parties should be designated as plaintiff and the other as defendant, and the claim of each set forth in the nature of a prayer for judgment, so as to permit the application of Code Civ. Proc. § 1280, declaring that after the filing of the submission the controversy becomes an action, subject to each provision of law relating to proceedings in an action. Matter of Yerks, 97 N. Y. ## VII. JUDGMENT, DISMISSAL, AND CANCELLATION.

On submission of controversy the court is bound to render such judgment as the facts call for, whether legal or equitable;<sup>81</sup> but statutory provisions allowing submission of controversy are held not to contemplate the entry of a judgment by default,<sup>82</sup> nor the direction of a judgment against an undisclosed defendant.<sup>83</sup> The court will dismiss the submission where it may properly decline deciding the questions submitted,<sup>84</sup> or where it appears that a decision would work injustice;<sup>85</sup> and a contract submitting an agreed case may be canceled by a suit in equity for fraud, duress, or mutual mistake;<sup>86</sup> but where an agreed case might be set aside on a motion to discharge, equity will not relieve on bill to set aside such case for fraud, accident, and mistake, there being an adequate remedy at law.<sup>87</sup> The mere inartificiality in the drawing of the case stated is not sufficient ground to set it aside.<sup>88</sup> The submission of a controversy will not be dismissed upon the motion of one who is not a party to it.<sup>89</sup>

Suppl. 595 (holding that a submission of controversy on agreed facts between the parties to a contract for sale of real estate, as to the validity of an assessment against it, will not be considered, defendant having made default and presented no argument, and the persons interested in enforcement and collection of the assessment not being made parties); *Kelley v. But see Neilson v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Duer (N. Y.) 455, holding that when a controversy is submitted under the code, the court, at general term, can only determine the questions of law arising from the facts agreed on by the parties, it cannot vacate the submission, or refer the facts to the determination of a jury.

Where a case agreed is too imperfectly stated for the court to proceed to judgment it will be set aside and new proceedings ordered. Thompson v. Miller, 14 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 132; Brewer v. Opie, 1 Call (Va.) 212.

85. Bell v. Twilight, 17 N. ## VIII. COSTS.

Where a cause is submitted by agreement and the submission does not provide for costs, the awarding of costs is discretionary with the court;<sup>90</sup> and upon the dismissal of an agreed case because the facts stated will not warrant a judgment for either party,<sup>91</sup> or because the case is submitted without plaintiff or defendant,<sup>92</sup> the costs should be divided. The parties may, however, stipulate regarding costs, and where the submission of the controversy provides that no costs shall be awarded to plaintiff against defendant, the judgment will provide that no costs be recovered.<sup>93</sup> Where a submission of controversy provides that judgment shall be given with costs and disbursements, no additional allowance to counsel can be made.<sup>94</sup>

IX. REVIEW.

An exception to the decision on the trial of an agreed case is necessary to a review thereof,<sup>95</sup> and an appeal cannot be taken before judgment below;<sup>96</sup> and where an order of the inferior court directs that an agreed statement of facts be discharged on account of a mistake or misunderstanding, and that a trial be had, the discharge and trial cannot be carried to the appellate court by bill of exceptions before the trial so directed.<sup>97</sup> Where the case submitted fails to show what the controversy was, or that there was a controversy between the parties, the decision of the court on the question submitted is not appealable;<sup>98</sup> but where a controversy involving a question of importance to the public is submitted, the appellate court may properly determine the question of law raised, although the statement of facts is not full enough to enable it to render judgment between the parties.<sup>99</sup> The transcript on appeal must contain a copy of the affidavit required by statute,<sup>1</sup> showing the reality of the controversy and the good faith of the proceeding;<sup>2</sup> and the appellate court will not indulge in any presumption in favor of the judgment of the court below on a case submitted there without action, inasmuch as the upper court has the same means of reaching a correct conclusion

Other definitions are: "A substitution, ordinarily the substitution of another person in the place of one creditor, so that the person in whose favor it is exercised succeeds to the rights of the creditor in relation to the debt. More broadly, it is the substitution of one person in the place of another, whether as creditor, or as the possessor of any other rightful claim. The substitute is put in all respects in the place of the party to whose rights he is subrogated." Sheldon Subr. 1, 2 [quoted in Townsend v. Cleveland benevolence,<sup>2</sup> and like contribution and other similar equitable rights was

"The equity, by which a person who is secondarily liable for a debt, and has paid the same, is put in the place of the creditor so as to entitle him to make use of all the securities and remedies possessed by the creditor, in order to enforce the right of exoneration as against the principal debtor, or of contribution against others who are liable in the same rank with himself." "The demanding of something under the right of another, to which right the claimant is entitled for the purposes of justice to be substituted in place of the original holder. . . . It is the machinery by which the equity of one man is worked out through the legal rights of another." Chaffe v. Oliver, 39 Ark. 531, 542.

"The substitution of one person in place of another, whether as a creditor or as the possessor of any other rightful claim, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim and its rights, remedies or securities." Leavitt v. Canadian Pac. R. Co., 90 Me. 153, 160, 37 Atl. 886, 38 L. R. A. 152.

"The act of putting, by a transfer, a person in the place of another, or a thing in the place of another thing. It is the substitution of a new for an old creditor and the succession to his rights, transfusio unius creditoris in alium." Spray v. Rodman, 43 Ind. 225, 228. See Townsend v. Cleveland Fire Proofing Co., 18 Ind. App. 568, 47 N. E. 707 [quoting Anderson L. Diet.].

"A fiction of the law, which in the language of the Code [of Louisiana], 'is the right of a creditor in favor of a third person who pays him.' Bradford v. Damare, 46 La. Ann. 1530, 1534, 16 So. 487 [quoting Roman v. Forstall, 11 La. Ann. 717].

"A substitution of one person or thing for another." Swarts v. Siegel, 117 Fed. 13, 15, 54 C. C. A. 399.

"The equitable result of payment." Nesbit v. Martin, 4 Pa. Co. Ct. 95, 97.

In a more restricted sense a remedy afforded by courts of equity to the surety, upon paying the debt of his principal. Lee County Justices v. Fulkerson, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 182, 193. The right of the surety, when he pays the debt of his principal, to be subrogated to whatever security the creditor had. Richeison v. Crawford, 94 Ill. 165, 173.

In Louisiana, under Civ. Code, art. 2157, subrogation is legal or conventional, and takes place of right in favor of one paying a debt he is interested in discharging, when he is bound for or with another, or for the same debt for which another is bound, and he who is bound for another, or for the same debt as another, and pays, is subrogated to all the creditor's rights against the principal; but, as to those with whom he is bound, he will be subrogated only for their virile portions. Howe v. Frazer, 2 Rob. (La.) 424.

Sometimes denominated a fictitious cession made to one who has a right to offer or make payment to the creditor. Staples v. Fox, 45 Miss. 667, 680. The cession of remedies. Furnold v. Missouri Bank, 44 Mo. 336.

It is used synonymously with substitution. See Pryor v. Davis, 109 Ala. 117, 19 So. 440; Loeb v. Fleming, 15 Ill. App. 503; Ducker v. Stubblefield, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 577; Staples v. South Carolina.—Gadsden v. Brown, Speers Eq. 37, 41.

It has been variously described as: A device to promote justice (Acer v. Hotchkiss, adopted from the civil law,<sup>3</sup> and its basis is the doing of complete, essential, and perfect justice between all the parties without regard to form,<sup>4</sup> and its object

97 N. Y. 395 [quoted in Cornell Steamboat Co. v. The Jersey City, 43 Fed. 166]; a creature of equity designed for the promotion of justice (Ohmer v. Boyer, 89 Ala. 273, 7 So. 663); a doctrine founded on pure equity (Erb's Appeal, 2 Penr. & W. (Pa.) 296); the offspring of natural justice (Royalton Nat. Bank v. Cushing, 53 Vt. 321; Douglass v. Fagg, 8 Leigh (Va.) 588); a principle elevated and pure (Gowing v. Bland, 2 How. (Miss.) 813); one of the benevolences of the law, created, fostered, and enforced in the interest and for the promotion of justice (Sands v. Durham, 99 Va. 263, 38 S. E. 145, 86 Am. St. Rep. 884, 54 L. R. A. 614); and an equitable device (Opp v. Ward, 125 Ind. 241, 24 N. E. 974, 21 Am. St. Rep. 220).

Equitable assignment and subrogation distinguished.—As soon as the sum justly due on a joint obligation or on equitable contribution is enforced, all subrogated rights cease. This is not so in an equitable assignment, as in such case the whole face of the debt, although purchased for a much less sum, can be collected; the purchase of a chose in action by a stranger to the instrument, accompanied by delivery of possession, would be an equitable assignment; but, where one of two joint debtors pays off the debt, between him and his coöbligee there is some equitable reason why the other should have paid it. Chancery gives relief by subrogation, and this is the true distinction between an equitable assignment and subrogation. Nesbit v. Martin, 4 Pa. Co. Ct. 95; Buchanan's Estate, 2 Chest. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 74. Furthermore, assignment is the act of the parties, and depends generally upon intention; but where the nature of the transaction is such as imports a payment of the debt, and a consequent discharge of the mortgage, there can of course be no assignment, for the lien of the mortgage is extinguished by the payment. C. M. Hapgood Shoe Co. v. Crockett First Nat. Bank, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 506, 56 S. W. 995 (holding that a distinction must be observed between subrogation to and an assignment of a mortgage, for subrogation is an act of law, and not of contract, and the doctrine of subrogation does not apply to a case where it was the agreement and intention of the parties that the mortgage should be kept alive for the protection of the assignees against judgments in favor of other parties); Gatewood v. Gatewood, 75 Va. 407 [cited in Fulkerson v. Taylor, 100 Va. 426, 41 S. E. 863]. And while subrogation is predicated upon payment of the debt, the whole doctrine of equitable assignment is based upon an assumption of the continuation of the indebtedness. Ellsworth v. Lockwood, 42 N. Y. 89. See Lamb v. Montague, 112 Mass. 352. The two terms are, however, often used synonymously without strict regard to technical accuracy. Crippen v. Chappel, 35 Kan. 495, 11 Pac. 453, 57 Am. Rep. 187; Everston v. Central Bank, 33 Kan. 352, 357, 6 Pac. 605 (where the court uses the expression: "The rule of 'subrogation' or in other words, the rule of 'equitable assignment'"). And see Faires v. Cockerell, 88 Tex. 428, 31 S. W. 190, 639, 28 L. R. A. 528 (holding that subrogation is but an equitable assignment, and puts the parties where they would be if an actual assignment had been made). In the case of The Sarah J. Weed, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,350, 2 Lowell 555 [cited in Dunlop v. James, 174 N. Y. 411, 67 N. E. 60], subrogation is defined as an equitable assignment operated by the law itself, when justice requires it.

It is of grace and not of force. Rice v. Winters, 45 Nebr. 517, 63 N. W. 830; South Omaha Nat. Bank v. Wright, 45 Nebr. 23, 63 N. W. 126; Eaton v. Hasty, 6 Nebr. 419, 20 Am. Rep. 365 (holding that, although the right of subrogation is one of the highest equity, still it is purely an equitable result); In re Shimp, 197 Pa. St. 128, 46 Atl. 1037; Budd v. Olver, 148 Pa. St. 194, 197, 23 Atl. 1105; In re Hennessy, 4 L. T. N. S. (Pa.) 9; National Surety Co. v. State Sav. Bank, 156 Fed. 21, 84 C. C. A. 187, 14 L. R. A. N. S. 155.

The equity of subrogation springs out of the right to contribution and is only one of the means by which that right is enforced. Dowdy v. Blake, 50 Ark. 205, 6 S. W. 897, 7 Am. St. Rep. 88 [citing Bishop, Eq. § 335].

Suppl. 1048, holding that "subrogation" was a creation of the civil law, but was never recognized to its full extent by the common law. It was called by the civilians a "species of spontaneous agency." To lay a foundation for a claim of recompense or remuneration on the part of the negotiorum gestor, the labor or expense must be bestowed either with the direct intention of benefiting the third party, against whom the claim is made, or in the bona fide belief that the subject belongs to the person by whom the expense or labor is bestowed.

the act of the creditor, but may be independent of him and also of the debtor.<sup>7</sup> The right may, however, be modified or extinguished by contract,<sup>8</sup> and subrogation cannot be invoked to override and displace the real contract of the parties;<sup>9</sup> and thus if the facts and circumstances show definitely that at the time of payment the right of subrogation was not intended to be exercised, but, on the contrary, that the purpose was not to keep the debt alive but to extinguish it, then the right of subrogation cannot be held to exist.<sup>10</sup> While subrogation is not founded on contract, there must, in every case where the doctrine is invoked, in addition to the inherent justice of the case, concur therewith some principle of equity jurisprudence as recognized and enforced by courts of equity.<sup>11</sup> Where the right of subrogation exists it is subject to prior equities and all the rules of equity.<sup>12</sup>

B. Conventional Subrogation. The subrogation just described<sup>13</sup> is very generally referred to as legal subrogation<sup>14</sup> to differentiate it from conventional subrogation or subrogation arising from express contract between the payer and Subrogation involves the idea of a right existing in one, with which another, under certain circumstances, is clothed—a right capable of enforcement (Lawrence v. U. S., 71 Fed. 228, 230), and contemplates some original privilege on the part of him to whose place substitution is claimed (Merchants', etc., Bank v. Tillman, 106 Ga. 55, 31 S. E. 794).

In Louisiana under Civ. Code, §§ 2159-2162, subrogation to the right of a creditor in favor of a third person who pays him is either conventional or legal. The subrogation is conventional: (1) When the creditor, receiving his payment from a third person, subrogates him in his rights, actions, privileges, and mortgages against the debtor, and this must be expressed and made at the same time as the payment; (2) when the debtor borrows a sum for the purpose of paying his debts, and intending to subrogate the lender in the rights of the creditor. To make this subrogation valid, it is necessary that the act of borrowing and the receipt be executed in presence of a notary and two witnesses; that in the act of borrowing it be declared that the sum was borrowed to make the payment, and that in the receipt it be declared that the payment has been made with the money furnished for that purpose by the new creditor. That subrogation takes place independently of the will of the creditor. Legal subrogation takes place of right: (1) For the benefit of him who, being a preferred creditor, pays another creditor, whose claim is preferable to his by reason of his privileges or mortgages; (2) for the benefit of the purchaser of any immovable property who employs the price of his purchase in paying the creditors, to whom this property was mortgaged; (3) for the benefit of him who, being bound with others, for the payment of the debt, had an interest in discharging it; (4) for the benefit of the beneficiary heir, who has paid with his own funds the debts of the succession. See Spiller v. His Creditors, 16 La. Ann. 292; Wiggin v. Flower, 5 Rob. (La.) 406. The subrogation established by these articles takes place as well against the sureties as against the debtors. It cannot injure the creditor, since, if he has been paid but in part, he may exercise his right for what remains due, in preference to him from whom he has received only a partial payment. See Torregano v. Segura, 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 158.

In Canada, under the civil code of the Province of Quebec, (arts. 1154 to 1158), the law is the same as under the Louisiana code, with the exception that in the case of a debtor borrowing money with subrogation of the lender, the written act of loan need not be notarial but may be executed before two subscribing witnesses. And, there also, the whole matter of subrogation is ruled by the maxim of the civil law, Subrogatum sapit naturam subrogati. 5 Mignault, 561.

Conventional subrogation of joint judgment debtor.—It is proper to award subrogation against one of the parties bound by a judgment, and not against the others, where one of several defendants procures the means of satisfying the demands of plaintiffs from a third person, and agrees that a suit may be marked to the vendor's use. Eddy v. Reed, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 116.

Doctrine applied to mortgages.—One who pays a mortgage debt, under an agreement for an assignment of the mortgage, or that he shall have the benefit of it, is subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee (Thompson v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 139 Ind. 325, 38 N. E. 796; Shreve v. Hankinson, 34 N. J. Eq. 76; Miller v. Rutland, etc., R. Co., 40 Vt. 399, 94 Am. Dec. 414), but a court of equity will not convert a payment into a purchase in favor of a party advancing the money where there is a superior countervailing equity in another party (Miller v. Rutland R. Co., supra), and an agreement which amounts to no more than a promise to pay off the sum advanced on mortgage is not sufficient to subrogate the promisor to the rights of the mortgagee (Desot v. Ross, 95 Mich. 81, 54 N. W. 694). The mortgagee cannot, by executing and recording a release, without consent, cut off the rights of a person who pays the obligation at its maturity, under an agreement with the mortgagor that he shall be substituted in the place of such mortgagee (Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Wert, 26 Fed. 294); nor can the holder of a second mortgage object to the substitution (Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Wert, supra).

Doctrine applied to judgments.—Although ordinarily where a judgment debtor borrows money with which to pay off a judgment against him, and uses the money for this purpose, the judgment becomes satisfied and is no longer operative as a lien upon the debtor's property (Patterson v. Clark, 96 Ga. 494, 23 S. E. 496; Downer v. Miller, 15 Wis. 612); and while a mere understanding between a borrower and a lender that the sum loaned shall be applied in a judgment does operate to transfer the lien to the lender, although the loan is so applied (Unger v. Leiter, 32 Ohio St. 210), if a judgment debtor agrees with one who lends him money for such a purpose that the judgment and execution shall not be satisfied by the payment to the holder but shall be transferred to the lender as security for the loan, the agreement will be enforced (Patterson v.

and furthermore can arise only by reason of an express or implied agreement between the payer and either the debtor or the creditor,<sup>17</sup> and the agreement, like other agreements, must be supported by a consideration.<sup>18</sup> It is not essential to subrogation by convention that the creditor should be a party to the agreement between the debtor and a third party, provided no intervening rights to the security have occurred;<sup>19</sup> but subrogation by convention is not applicable where it would prejudice the rights of innocent parties.<sup>20</sup> A stranger who by the authority and consent of the debtor and on his agreement that he shall be subrogated to the rights of the creditor makes payment for the debtor will be subrogated if the payment is made with the express declaration of the subrogation in the release made by the creditor.<sup>21</sup>

Clark, 96 Ga. 494, 23 S. E. 496; Potts v. Richardson, 2 Bailey (S. C.) 15, holding that where money was advanced by a third person to procure indulgence for a defendant on an execution, and payment was made to the plaintiff, under an agreement that the lien of the judgment should be preserved, a subsequent assignment to the person who advanced the money operated to vest the judgment in him with all its incidents. And see More v. Trumbour, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 488; and where a judgment has been recovered against the principal debtor and his sureties, and a third person afterward agrees with the creditor to become surety for the payment of the debt, upon an agreement with such creditor that the new surety shall have the benefit of the judgment for his protection and indemnity, he has a prior equity over the first sureties, and is entitled to enforce the collection of the judgment for his own benefit and protection (La Grange v. Merrill, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 625; Downer v. Miller, supra); and although the judgment was discharged by the debtor fraudulently, the lender is entitled to be subrogated to priority over other encumbrancers whose rights existed at the time of the discharge and were not acquired upon faith of the discharge (Downer v. Miller, supra). Similarly where, before becoming a surety on a note given for money borrowed to pay a judgment against the principal, a party stipulates with the principal that the judgment shall remain open against the principal in order to indemnify the surety against loss by reason of the suretyship, the payment of the judgment by the principal with money raised on a note on which the surety was indorser does not extinguish the same (Patterson v. Clark, supra). And see Perry v. Miller, 54 Iowa 277, 5 N. W. 727, 6 N. W. 302), and a surety advancing the amount of a judgment to plaintiff may stipulate for substitution and for the control of the judgment and execution (Morris v. Evans, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 84, 36 Am. Dec. 591); and if money is paid by a surety to plaintiff in an execution, on an understanding that the judgment is to be assigned to a third person, for the benefit of the surety, and such assignment is subsequently made, this is not a payment of the judgment, but it may be enforced against the principal, in the name of plaintiff, for the benefit of the sureties (Barringer v. Boyden, 52 N. C. 187; Sherwood v. Collier, 14 N. C. 380, 24 Am.

Dec. 264; Hodges v. Armstrong, 14 N. C. 253). A joint obligor may properly advance the amount of a judgment against himself and another, and contract with the creditor for the control of the execution, and will be therein protected by a court of law until he has reimbursed his proportion, in opposition to the wish of the creditor (Morris v. Evans, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 84, 36 Am. Dec. 591).

In Louisiana by the code conventional subrogation in favor of a third person who pays the debt must be express and made at the time of payment (Brice v. Watkins, 30 La. Ann. 21; Durac v. Ferrari, 26 La. Ann. 114; Surghnor v. Beauchamp, 24 La. Ann. 471; Levy v. Baer, 19 La. Ann. 468; Sewall v. Howard, 15 La. Ann. 400; Harrison v. Bisland, 5 Rob. (La.) 204), and facts to show the parties' unexecuted intention will not suffice (Chambliss v. Miller, 15 La. Ann. 713; Shaw v. Grand, 13 La. Ann. 52; Harrison v. Bisland, supra), nor can it be inferred from an agreement to transfer the obligation or credit in satisfaction of which the payment is made (Wilson's Succession, 11 La. Ann. 294).

19. Bissett v. Grantham, 67 Mo. App. 23; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Wert, 26 Fed. 294.

But in Louisiana the creditor must be a party to the agreement. Hoyle v. Cazabat, 25 La. Ann. 438; Nugent v. Potter, 21 La. Ann. 746; Virgin's Succession, 18 La. Ann. 42.

The fact that a wife was not a party to the agreement by her husband did not entitle her to hold the property free from the lien which plaintiff's money discharged, while refusing to abide by the contract under which it was paid. Heuser v. Sharman, 89 Iowa 355, 56 N. W. 525, 48 Am. St. Rep. 390.

II. EXTENT AND LIMITATION OF RIGHT.

A. In General. Formerly the right of subrogation was limited to transactions between principals and sureties;<sup>22</sup> but it is no longer confined to cases of strict suretyship, but is broad enough to include every instance in which one party is required to pay a debt for which another is primarily answerable, and which, in equity and good conscience, ought to be discharged by the latter, and is the mode which equity adopts to compel the ultimate discharge of the debt by him who, in good conscience, ought to pay it, and to relieve him whom none but the creditor could ask to pay.<sup>23</sup> Thus where two or more persons are equally liable to the creditor, if as between themselves there is a superior obligation resting on one to pay the debt, the other after paying it may use the creditor's security to obtain

Scope of the remedy defined.—Subrogation takes place as follows: (1) For the benefit of insurers; (2) for a surety who pays the debt of his principal; (3) for one cosurety against another cosurety, to compel contribution; (4) for a purchaser who extinguishes an encumbrance on an estate purchased; (5) for a creditor who satisfies a lien for a prior creditor; (6) for an heir who pays the debt of the succession; (7) for one who has paid his own debt, which, for a valuable considera-reimbursement;<sup>24</sup> or where one has performed the obligations of another, or has paid his own debt, the burden of which has, for a valuable consideration, been assumed by another, or when he has paid encumbrances for the protection of his own title or interest, the payment of which he has not assumed by contract,<sup>25</sup> or has been compelled to pay the debt of a third person in order to protect his own rights or to save his own property,<sup>26</sup> and generally where it is equitable that a person, not a mere stranger, intermeddler, or volunteer,<sup>27</sup> furnishing money to pay a debt should be substituted for or in the place of the creditor, such person will be so substituted.<sup>28</sup> But subrogation is not intended to be applied in all cases without regard to circumstances where there is security for a debt, but in those only in which justice demands its application,<sup>29</sup> and thus it will not be ordered where it can be of no real benefit to the one seeking to be subrogated,<sup>30</sup> or when the party claiming it has in fact been reimbursed and has thus sustained no loss,<sup>31</sup> and the rights of one seeking subrogation must have a greater equity than those who oppose him;<sup>32</sup> the burden being upon the would-be subrogee to establish his right,<sup>33</sup> for subrogation will be ordered only in a clear case of pure equity.<sup>34</sup> The right is never allowed one who would thereby reap advantage in tion, was assumed by another, but not paid. Townsend v. Cleveland Fire Proofing Co., 18 Ind. App. 568, 47 N. E. 707.

B. Tendency to Extend Scope. The nature and grounds of subrogation are very clear. The difficulties arise in its application to the innumerable complications of business.<sup>41</sup> The courts incline, however, rather to extend than restrict the principle;<sup>42</sup> and the doctrine has been steadily growing and expanding in importance, and becoming more general in its application to various subjects and classes of persons, the principle being modified to meet the circumstances of cases as they have arisen,<sup>43</sup> and the doctrine has been applied much more extensively in American than in English jurisprudence,<sup>44</sup> under the initial guidance of Chancellor Kent.<sup>45</sup>

C. Application to Subrogation of the Ordinary Equity Maxims. The ordinary equity maxims<sup>46</sup> are applicable to the equitable remedy of subrogation. Thus subrogation is not allowed where there is an adequate remedy at law,<sup>47</sup> and, as in other cases of equitable relief, the party seeking subrogation must not be guilty of laches;<sup>48</sup> and the familiar rule in equity, that where one of two innocent parties must suffer by the fraudulent conduct of a third, the one who has, by his negligence or failure to do something that a prudent man under the circumstances should have done, enabled the fraud to be committed, must suffer the loss occasioned thereby, applies.<sup>49</sup> Nor can the doctrine be extended so as to authorize the application of the principle for the relief and benefit of a party who voluntarily surrenders a right or suffers an injury, the consequence of his own wilful neglect or wrong, or who has connived at and assisted in the wrong,<sup>50</sup> for one seeking subrogation must come into court with clean hands.<sup>51</sup> The rule that he who seeks equity must do equity applies,<sup>52</sup> and the pleading seeking equity must offer to do it where others have rights and must not seek to set them off.<sup>53</sup>

D. Inapplicability of Doctrine to Primary Liability. Subrogation is allowed only in favor of one who under some duty or compulsion, legal or moral, pays the debt of another;<sup>54</sup> and not in favor of him who pays a debt in performance of his own covenants,<sup>55</sup> for the right of subrogation never follows an actual primary liability,<sup>56</sup> and there can be no right of subrogation in one whose duty it is to pay, or in one claiming under him against one who is secondarily liable, or not liable at all. In such cases payment is extinguishment.<sup>57</sup>

the debt of the party whose rights are claimed to be used for the purpose of protecting the interest of the applicant for substitution remains unsatisfied, although it be in part only,<sup>59</sup> and the payment must have been of the debt of another.<sup>60</sup> It is not necessary, however, that payment be in money; anything accepted by the creditor is sufficient, provided it is actually accepted.<sup>61</sup>

B. Voluntary Payment.<sup>62</sup> It always requires something more than the mere payment of a debt in order to entitle the person paying the same to be substituted in the place of the original creditor.<sup>63</sup> There must be the discharge of a legal obligation for another, who is under a primary obligation, for no man can make another his debtor without his consent;<sup>64</sup> and only a creditor or person under liability can invoke the doctrine — there being no debt, there can be no ground for subrogation.<sup>65</sup> Furthermore the payer must have acted on compulsion to save himself from loss, and it is only in cases where the person paying the debt of another stands in the relation of a surety or is compelled to pay in order to protect his own interests, or by virtue of legal process, that equity substitutes him in the place of the creditor without any agreement to that effect; in other cases the debt is absolutely extinguished,<sup>66</sup> and thus a mere volunteer or inter-

See 44 Cent. Dig. tit. "Subrogation," § 47.

A tender by the lessee of land to a judgment creditor of the amount due, accompanied with a demand that the judgment be assigned to him, could not in any event entitle such lessee to subrogation, since the tender, accompanied by the demand, was not equivalent to payment. Forest Oil Co.'s Appeals, 118 Pa. St. 138, 12 Atl. 442, 4 Am. St. Rep. 584.

One who gives a note to secure the debt is not entitled to subrogation till the note is paid. Sickels v. Herold, 15 Misc. (N. Y.) 116, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 488 [modified in 149 N. Y. 332, 43 N. E. 852].

Where land of the vendee is seized on execution against the vendor, and the vendee pays the execution, he is not entitled to be subrogated to the rights of plaintiff, where he has only given bonds for the purchase-money, as payment of the execution would be a defense to the bonds, although assigned by the vendor. In re McGill, 6 Pa. A famous and often quoted exposition of the doctrine.—Chancellor Johnson, in Gadsden v. Brown, Speers Eq. (S. C.) 37, 41, says: "The doctrine of subrogation is a pure unmixed equity, having its foundation in the principles of natural justice, and from its very nature, never could have been intended for the relief of those who were in a condition in which they were at liberty to elect whether they would or would not be bound, and as far as I have been enabled to learn its history, it never has been so applied. If one with the perfect knowledge of the facts, will part with his money, or bind himself by his contract, in a sufficient consideration, any rule of law which would restore him his money or absolve him from his contract, would subvert the rules of such order. It has been directed in its application exclusively to the relief of those that were already bound, who could not but choose to abide the penalty. . . . But I have seen no case, and none has been referred to in the argument, in which a stranger, who was in a condition to make terms for himself, and demand any security he might require, has been protected by the principle." Quoting the above in subrogated only by virtue of an agreement, express or implied,<sup>68</sup> or by request from the debtor to pay, which is in effect an implied contract,<sup>69</sup> by ratification,<sup>70</sup> or by taking an assignment of the debt.<sup>71</sup> But payments made in ignorance of the real state of facts cannot be said to be voluntary,<sup>72</sup> and a person who has paid a debt under a colorable obligation to do so, that he may protect his own claim, or under an honest belief that he is bound, will be subrogated;<sup>73</sup> and a person who mistakenly but in good faith believes that he has an interest in property, to protect which

Ætna L. Ins Co. v. Middleport, 124 U. S. 534, 8 S. Ct. 625, 31 L. ed. 537, the court says: "This is perhaps as clear a statement of the doctrine on this subject as is to be found anywhere. . . . Subrogation as a matter of right, as it exists in the civil law, from which the term has been borrowed and adopted in our own, is never applied in aid of a mere volunteer."

A stranger, within the meaning of this rule, is not necessarily one who has nothing to do with the transaction out of which the debt grew; any one being under no legal obligation or liability to pay the debt is a stranger, and if he pays the debt, a mere volunteer. Suppiger v. Garrels, 20 Ill. App. 625 [quoted and approved in Traders' Bank v. Myers, 3 Kan. App. 636, 44 Pac. 292, 295].

One having a contract to purchase land, who is insisting on its being carried out, is not a volunteer for the purpose of subrogation. Landis v. Wolf, 119 Ill. App. 11.

Subrogation as a matter of right as it exists in the civil law is never applied in favor of a mere volunteer. Legal substitution into the rights of a creditor takes place only for his benefit who, being himself a creditor, satisfies the lien of a prior creditor or for the benefit of a purchaser who extinguishes the encumbrances upon his estate, or of a coobligor or surety who discharges the debt, or of an heir who pays the debt of the succession (Shinn v. Budd, 14 N. J. Eq. 234); and a person will not, under the civil law, be subrogated to the rights of the original creditors without a deed of subrogation, unless he was bound for the debtor, in which case subrogation takes place by action of law (Virgin's Succession, 18 La. Ann. 42; Harrison v. Bisland, 5 Rob. (La.) 204), for every one who furnishes money or binds himself unconditionally for a debt does not thereby entitle himself to the creditor's rights; a legal subrogation exists in favor, not of all who pay a debt, but of those only who, being bound for, discharge it (Harrison v. Bisland, supra; Nolte v. His Creditors, 7 Mart. N. S. (La.) 602), and it is of the essence of legal subrogation that the person making the payment should be a third person in respect to the obligee of the debt he is seeking to prime thereby, and that he should himself be a creditor of inferior rank of the common debtor whose debt he pays (New Orleans Nat. Bank v. Eagle Cotton Warehouse, etc., Co., 43 La. Ann. 814, 9 So. 442).

One who claims the ownership of a note secured by a mortgage, who is not shown to have been a creditor, is not entitled to legal subrogation. Coco v. Gumbel, 47 La. Ann. 966, 17 So. 421.

One who voluntarily pays a tax to a city, for which neither he nor his property is liable, is not entitled to be subrogated in equity to the rights of the city as against the property or its owner. Montgomery v. Charleston, 99 Fed. 825, 40 C. C. A. 108, 48 L. R. A. 503. Thus, where a county treasurer, without any previous request or subsequent promise of indemnity, voluntarily paid taxes on the land of another, he was not entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the state and county. Repass v. Moore, 98 Va. 377, 36 S. E. 474. And see In re Brinker, 128 Fed. 634.

Payment after the statute of limitations has run is voluntary. Collings v. Collings, 92 S. W. 577, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 51. But see infra, text and note 77.

Where one furnishes material or performs labor for a contractor charged with the erection of a public building, or other public work, where there is no statute, and no contract to effect the status of the parties, the simple relation of a debtor and creditor exists between the materialman, laborer, and contractor, and the former can resort only to the remedies common to such creditors for the collection of their debts. Townsend v. Cleveland Fire-Proofing Co., 18 Ind. App. 568, 47 N. E. 707 [citing Riggin v. Hillard, 56 Ark. 476, 20 S. W. 402, 35 Am. St. Rep. 113].

Where the same person is administrator and guardian to the heirs, the fund held by him in one capacity cannot be subjected to the relief of another, on the principle of substitution, unless it appear clearly that the former fund was liable to the debt which the latter has discharged. Greenlee v. McDowell, 56 N. C. 325.

68. Richmond v. Marston, 15 Ind. 134; Williamson's Appeal, 94 Pa. St. 231 (holding that volunteers can obtain the right of subrogation only by contract); Mosier's Appeal, 56 Pa. St. 76, 93 Am. Dec. 783; In re Martin, 25 R. I. 1, 54 Atl. 589.

69. Wilson v. Brown, 13 N. J. Eq. 277; Miller v. Moreau, 10 N. Y. St. 711.

70. Bowen v. Gilbert, 122 Iowa 448, 98 N. W. 273, holding that where, after a junior lien-holder had paid the senior mortgage without the mortgagor's consent, the latter paid him one or more instalments thereon, and tendered still others, the mortgagor thereby ratified the payment.

he discharges a lien, is subrogated to the lien for his repayment;<sup>74</sup> and subrogation is sometimes extended to cases of payment by persons not legally bound to pay, but who do so, not as volunteers, but with a well-founded expectation, justified by the conduct or contract of the debtor, that they will be entitled to hold all the securities for their indemnity which the creditor had against the debtor;<sup>75</sup> and in one jurisdiction it has been held that a stranger who pays a debt without request by the debtor, when his payment is not ratified by the debtor, may bring a suit in equity praying relief in the alternative, that if the debtor do not ratify such payment, the debt may be enforced in his favor, as its equitable assignee, or, if so ratified, that he be decreed repayment of the amount paid for the use of the debtor.<sup>76</sup> Payment under a moral obligation is not voluntary.<sup>77</sup>

C. Part Payment. There can be no subrogation to the rights of another unless the claim of that other is fully satisfied; and, until the whole debt is paid there can be no interference with the creditor's rights or securities which might, even by bare possibility, prejudice him in the collection of the residue of his claim,<sup>78</sup> for a right of subrogation is rather against the debtor than against the creditor,<sup>79</sup> and subrogation will be denied one who did not pay or furnish the means to pay the entire debt.<sup>80</sup> But if by some error or mistake of calculation as to interest or costs not quite enough is paid to meet the whole debt, when the intention was to pay the whole debt, equity under its general power to relieve from mistake will grant subrogation pro tanto;<sup>81</sup> and one who endeavored but failed to ascertain the exact amount due, and then paid into court a sum in excess of the debt, interest, and costs is entitled to subrogation;<sup>82</sup> and where a creditor to whose rights subrogation is claimed has been satisfied in full, the fact that such satisfaction has been brought about by two persons will not prevent each
