XIII. RECORD, AND PROCEEDINGS NOT IN RECORD.*

D. Contents, Making, and Settlement of Bill of Exceptions — 1. Origin of Bill. The power of a court to sign bills of exceptions and make the facts therein stated a part of the record is not derived from the common law,[1] but had its origin in the Statute of Westminster II (13 Edw. I, c. 31), whereby the judge signing the bill was required to come into the appellate court and there confess or deny his seal to the bill.[2]

2. Office or Purpose of Bill. The office or purpose of a bill of exceptions is to preserve in, and make a part of, the record such matters as transpired in the progress of a trial, which otherwise would not become a part thereof.[3] It must,

Form of bill of exceptions is set out in:

Alabama.—Thomason v. Odum, 31 Ala. 108, 68 Am. Dec. 159.

Arkansas.— Real Estate Bank v. Rawdon, 5 Ark. 558.

Illinois.— People v. Pearson, 3 Ill. 189, 33 Am. Dec. 445.

dence set out in a bill in another case does not incorporate such evidence in the bill.[8]

b. Caption. Regularly, a bill should have a caption or introductory part showing that it is a bill of exceptions.[9] It has been held, however, that a bill duly signed by the trial judge is sufficient though it has no formal caption.[10]

c. Separate Bills. It is not necessary that a separate bill of exceptions be made to each ruling or decision complained of. Where it appears that exceptions to the several rulings were taken at the proper time, they all may be embodied in one bill.[11]

d. Signature of Parties or Counsel. A bill must be signed by appellant or his counsel when so required by statute.[12]

Indiana.— Baber v. Rickart, 52 Ind. 594.

West Virginia.— Spragins v. West Virginia, etc., R. Co., 35 W. Va. 139, 13 S. E. 45; State v. Dotts, 31 W. Va. 819, 8 S. E. 391.

Reference to exhibits.—Where a bill, instead of stating distinctly the matters of law in the charge which are excepted to, refers to an exhibit annexed, containing the evidence, with minutes that certain parts of it were objected to, and another exhibit containing the charge in full, with the stenographer's notes of an ensuing conversation showing that counsel excepted to that part of the charge which bore upon a certain subject, or to the refusal of the court to charge as orally requested in the course of that conversation, the bill is insufficient in form, and will not be considered. Hanna v. Maas, 122 U. S. 24, 7 S. Ct. 1055, 30 L. ed. 1117. See also Dunn v. State, 23 Ohio St. 167.

Where two bills of exceptions, taken together, contain sufficient to present a question, the court will consider the same, though neither bill, standing alone, is sufficient. Kuhns v. Gates, 92 Ind. 66; Lewis v. Buskirk, 14 Ind. App. 439, 42 N. E. 1118.

8. Tecumseh Nat. Bank v. Best, 50 Nebr. 518, 70 N. W. 41.

9. Huston v. Cosby, 14 Ind. App. 602, 41 N. E. 953. See also Jenkins v. Wilson, 140 Ind. 544, 40 N. E. 39, wherein it was held that a transcript of the evidence which has no formal commencement as a bill of exceptions, and was not filed in the clerk's office, is insufficient to bring the evidence into the record, though it concluded as a bill of exceptions and was signed by the trial judge as such.

See 21 Cent. Dig. tit. "Exceptions, Bill of," § 22.

10. Dennis v. State, 103 Ind. 142, 2 N. E. 349: Everman v. Hyman, (Ind. App. 1891) 28 N. E. 1022.

Entitlement.— If a bill is regularly certified by the clerk as appertaining to the cause it is no objection that it is not entitled of any court or cause. Gordon v. Parker, 2 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 485. So a bill settled and signed by the trial judge will be treated as such, although it is denominated a "statement." People v. Crane, 60 Cal. 279; U. S. v. Alexander, 2 Ida. 354, 17 Pac. 746; Schultz v. Keeler, 2 Ida. 305, 13 Pac. 481. And a paper incorporated in the record, certified to be a part thereof by the court below, and having all the requisites of a bill of exceptions, though entitled a "Case and Exceptions," is a sufficient bill. Herbert v. Butler, 97 U. S. 319, 24 L. ed. 958.

11. District of Columbia.— Stewart v. Elliott, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 307.

Georgia.— Martin v. Huson, 42 Ga. 83.

Indiana.— Doe v. Makepeace, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 575.

Iowa.— Anderson v. Ames, 6 Iowa 486.

Maryland.— Essentially distinct propositions should be embodied in distinct bills of exceptions. Tall v. Baltimore Steam Packet Co., 90 Md. 248, 44 Atl. 1007, 47 L. R. A. 120; Ellicott v. Martin, 6 Md. 509, 61 Am. Dec. 327.

Mississippi.— Lindsey v. Henderson, 27 Miss. 502.

New Jersey.— Jersey Co. Associates v. Davison, 29 N. J. L. 415.

New York.— Brewer v. Isish, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 481.

Virginia.— Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Shott, 92 Va. 34, 22 S. E. 811; Brown v. Hall, 85 Va. 146, 7 S. E. 182.

West Virginia.—Snyder v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 11 W. Va. 14.

England.— 2 Tidd Pr. 864.

See 21 Cent. Dig. tit. "Exceptions, Bill of," § 31.

As to proceedings before different judges see infra, XIII, D, 6, a, (IV).

Joinder of parties in same bill.—All parties to a suit, whether they are suing individually or in representative capacities in the trial court, must be joined in the bill of exceptions. Harrington v. Roberts, 7 Ga. 510. But, when the parties are different, several suits cannot be blended in one bill of exceptions. Mayberry v. Morse, 39 Me. 105. So, where two actions in favor of the same plaintiffs against different defendants were tried together by the same jury under an order for the rendition of separate verdicts in each case, defendants could not unite in one bill of exceptions. Western Assur. Co. v. Way, 98 Ga. 746, 27 S. E. 167.

12. Wellborn v. Atlanta Consol. St. R. Co., 92 Ga. 577, 17 S. E. 672; McAlister v. Eastman, 92 Ga. 448, 17 S. E. 675; Anderson v. Baker, 58 Ga. 604. But see Smith v. Frye, 14 Me. 457, wherein it was held that, regularly, exceptions should be signed by the party excepting or by his counsel; but if this is omitted, and the exceptions are allowed and

4. Contents of Bill — a. In General. A bill should only contain matter material to the question of law excepted to.[13]

b. Incorporating Evidence — (I) In General. The evidence adduced at the trial should either be incorporated into the bill of exceptions[14] or be particularly referred to, and by express terms made a part of it.[15] Evidence not contained in the bill, nor made a part thereof, will not be considered by the appellate court[16] even though appended to the bill.[17] A literal transcript, however, by question and answer, of all the testimony, taken from a stenographic report of the proceedings, need not be incorporated at length into the bill.[18]

(II) Documents — (A) In General. Under common-law practice, documents were required to be written out in full in a bill of exceptions,[19] and this rule is signed by the judge, no advantage can be afterward taken of the omission.

See 21 Cent. Dig. tit. "Exceptions, Bill of," § 23.

As to signing by judge see infra, XIII, D, 6, e.

Exceptions in chancery must be signed by a solicitor of the court. Cross v. Cohen, 3 Gill (Md.) 257.

Place of signing.—An indorsement of the name of the attorney on the back of the bill is not a signing, within Ga. Code, § 4251. Brand v. Garrett, 62 Ga. 165.

13. Alabama.— Tyree v. Parham, 66 Ala. 424; Seawell v. Henry, 6 Ala. 226; Chamberlain v. Darrington, 4 Port. (Ala.) 515.

Indiana.— Grisell v. Noel Bros. Flour-Feed Co., 9 Ind. App. 251, 36 N. E. 452.

See 21 Cent. Dig. tit. "Exceptions, Bill of," § 17.

Cumulative testimony of several witnesses, when substantially the same, should not be stated at length in the bill of exceptions. Tyree v. Parham, 66 Ala. 424.

Reduction to narrative form.—Where all questions and answers were taken down by a shorthand reporter, and the testimony is voluminous, the judge settling the bill of exceptions may, in his discretion, require the testimony to be reduced to narrative form. Karasich v. Hasbrouck, 28 Wis. 569.

19. Chicago v. South Park Com'rs, 169 Ill. 387, 48 N. E. 680; Stratton v. Kennard, 74 Ind. 302; Irwin v. Smith, 72 Ind. 482; Mills v. Simmonds, 10 Ind. 464; Vincennes University v. Embree, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 461; Spears v. Clark, 6 Blackf. Omission to incorporate in a bill certain papers cannot be cured by a stipulation that the clerk shall attach them. Byrne v. Clark, 31 Ill. App. 651; Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. De Graff, 12 Mich. 10.

Records and documents neither offered nor read in evidence should not be incorporated in a bill, though they refer to the same matter as that in controversy and were commented on in the argument at the trial. Matter of Moore, 78 Cal. 242, 20 Pac. 558.

Substance of documents.—A bill of exceptions setting forth in substance deeds and other documents affecting land, and describing them according to their legal effect, is still adhered to in one state to the extent, at least, that the instrument must appear in the bill when considered by the appellate court.[20]

(B) Skeleton Bill. In many jurisdictions a more relaxed rule now prevails. In such jurisdictions it is sufficient to identify a document by a reference in the bill, marking the place where it should be incorporated by the words, "Clerk Here Insert," or otherwise ordering it to be made a part of the bill, and identifying it, if it is not actually copied into the bill.[21] But, to incorporate a document into a bill by this method — known as a skeleton bill — the document must be so described as to leave no doubt as to its identity or room for mistake on the part of the clerk.[22] The document, too, must be subsequently inserted as intended, or it will not be considered by the appellate court.[23]

(III) Matters Not Formally Introduced in Evidence. The rules of practice of the trial court, or events transpiring in the presence of the court, may be incorporated in the bill of exceptions, even though not formally introduced in evidence.[24]

(IV) Stenographer's Report. The stenographer's report of the evidence is not a part of the bill of exceptions unless referred to and incorporated therein.[25]

c. Incorporating Instructions. Instructions, in order to become a part of the bill of exceptions, must be incorporated therein,[26] or be so marked and referred to that they may be identified.[27]

d. Incorporating Motions and Affidavits. Where it is attempted to make motions or affidavits a part of the record by bill of exceptions, they must be set out at length in such bill, or be referred to therein as properly appearing elsewhere in the record.[28]

e. Incorporating Verdict or Judgment. A bill of exceptions is not the proper place for either a verdict or judgment to be shown. The record proper, which preserves itself and needs no bill of exceptions, is the appropriate and only necessary place wherein they should appear.[29]

f. Showing as to Compliance With Statutory Requirements. Compliance with statutory requirements as to the time of settling, signing, and filing should be shown on the face of the bill.[30] If the bill was not filed during the term of

In Mississippi, under the act of March 18, 1896 [Miss. Laws (1896), pp. 91–93], a copy of the stenographer's notes may be filed with the clerk, to be used on appeal instead of a bill of exceptions, when the correctness of such notes is agreed to. Under this statute it has been held that such agreement need not be indorsed on the notes themselves, but may be on a separate paper, and that the time within which it may be filed, not being fixed by the statute, is limited only by the time within which the appeal is required to be perfected, and not by the time fixed for presenting a bill of exceptions for settlement. Sanders v. State, 74 Miss. 531, 21 So. 299.

The stenographer's report of oral testimony is not a "written instrument" or "documentary evidence," within the meaning of a statute providing that it shall not be necessary to copy "a written instrument, or any documentary evidence," into a bill of exceptions. Patterson v. Churchman, 122 Ind. 379, 22 N. E. 662, 23 N. E. 1082; Flint v. Burnell, 116 Ind. 481, 19 N. E. 140; Stone v. Brown, 116 Ind. 78, 18 N. E. 392.

Oath of stenographer.— It is no objection to a bill that the stenographer who took the evidence incorporated therein was not sworn. Williams v. Pendleton, etc., Turnpike Co., 76 Ind. 87.

Transcription by third person.— The fact that the evidence was written out by some one other than the shorthand reporter who acted on the trial is immaterial if such evidence is contained in a bill of exceptions which purports to contain all the evidence. Hill v. Hagaman, 84 Ind. 287.

Reference to instructions in a bill, by citing the page of the transcript on which they appear, is an insufficient incorporation thereof. Jefferson City v. Opel, 67 Mo. 394; Collins v. Barding, 65 Mo. 496.

28. Shields v. McMahan, 101 Ind. 591.

A bill stating "that thereupon plaintiff filed his certain motion, with affidavits attached, to set aside said verdict," does not so refer to the affidavits as to make them part of the record. Moffit v. Rogers, 15 Iowa 453.

Affidavits copied at length in the bill as a part of the evidence heard by the judge in a proceeding at chambers are authenticated by a general certificate to the bill of exceptions, and need not otherwise be identified. Yoemans v. Yoemans, 77 Ga. 124, 3 S. E. 354.

Admission or exclusion of evidence.—A bill of exceptions to the admission or exclusion of certain evidence must show what the objection to such evidence was. Johnson v. Newman, 35 Tex. 166; Wright v. Thompson, 14 Tex. 558; Ingenhuett v. Hunt, 15 Tex. Civ. App. 248, 39 S. W. 310. See also Kimball v. Carter, 95 Va. 77, 27 S. E. 823, 38 L. R. A. 570; Johnson v. Jennings, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 1, 60 Am. Dec. 323.

Insufficiency of evidence.— Under a statute providing that, when the exception is to the verdict or decision on the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence to justify it, the objection must specify the particulars in which such evidence is alleged to be insufficient, a statement in the bill of exceptions "that the evidence does not show" certain facts is equivalent to saying that it "is insufficient to justify" a finding of such facts. Matter of Fath, 132 Cal. 609, 64 Pac. 995. Where no point is made as to the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict the bill need not specify the particulars in which the evidence is insufficient. Shadburne v. Daly, 76 Cal. 355, 18 Pac. 403; Hunt v. Steese, 75 Cal. 620, 17 Pac. 920.

that the error to which the exception is addressed will clearly appear to the appellate court.[34]

h. Showing as to Parties. A bill of exceptions should show on its face who are the parties thereto.[35]

i. Showing as to Taking of Exception. A bill of exceptions should show upon its face that the exception was taken at the time the alleged erroneous ruling or decision was made.[36] Accordingly, a bill of exceptions to the admission or exclusion of evidence will not be considered on appeal where it fails to state that there was an exception to the court's ruling at the time.[37]

5. Construction of Bill. As a bill of exceptions is deemed to be a pleading of appellant, it will be construed most strongly against him.[38] The appellate court will, for the purpose of sustaining the ruling of the primary court, give to the words used their natural import and meaning;[39] and if a bill is defective in Contradictory statements.—Where the bill of exceptions contains contradictory statements it will be construed against appellant. Redfern v. McNaul, 179 Ill. 203, 53 N. E. 569 [affirming 79 Ill. App. 232]. Where a bill of exceptions states that there was no evidence of indebtedness, and this was repugnant to other statements in the bill, the court will construe the expression to mean that there was no positive proof. Goodgame v. Clifton, 13 Ala. 583.

When there are interlineations in a bill and also in one of the affidavits of authentication, an addition to the interlined affidavit, subsequent in date to the original, to the effect that the interlineations were sworn to, without stating what interlineations, will be construed as referring to the interlineations in the affidavit, and not to those in the bill. Cowart v. Page, 59 Ga. 235.

Michigan.— Mich. Laws (1879), p. 5, expressly provide for a settlement of exceptions preside during the progress of a trial, each should sign a bill of exceptions as to the proceedings before him.[49]

(v) Special Judge. A bill of exceptions in a cause tried before a special judge should be signed by such special judge.[50] So, a special judge who has given time to file a bill of exceptions has power to sign the bill at the time fixed, and to order it to be filed, though he no longer has any power for any other purpose.[51] The record, however, in case of a bill signed by a special judge, should show his authority to act.[52]

(vi) Stipulation as to Settlement. It has been held that a judge other than the trial judge,[53] or the clerk [54] may sign a bill of exceptions, if authorized to do so by stipulation of the parties.

b. Manner of Settlement — (i) In General. A bill of exceptions must be settled in the manner indicated by statute or rule of court, or it will not be by the successor of the judge who tried the cause. Mason v. Phelps, 48 Mich. 126, 11 N. W. 413, 837. Service on part of appellees.— On appeal from a final decree it is error to refuse to settle the bill of exceptions on the ground that it has not been served on all the parties to the action, as the rights of the parties not served, and the necessity of whose presence is not apparent from the record, may be protected if it appears on the hearing of the appeal that they will be affected by the proposed modification of the decree. W. 606, wherein it was held that where there is no particular controversy between two or more defendants against whom plaintiff is seeking to enforce a claim, service of the bill on one of such defendants, or his attorney, is sufficient.

Sufficiency of submission.—A proposed bill of exceptions is not submitted to the adverse party, or his attorney of record, by leaving it at the office of the attorney in his absence. Lancaster County Bank v. Gillilan, 49 Nebr. 165, 68 N. W. 852. Such service would be sufficient under Clark's Code Civ. Proc. N. C. (1900), § 597 (4). Watkins v. Raleigh, etc., Air Line R. As such a settlement is purely statutory, the requirements of the statute relating thereto must be strictly observed.[59]

(B) Time of Taking Proceedings. A proceeding to establish exceptions must be instituted within the time indicated by statute or rule of court.[60] In the absence of a statute or rule of court fixing the time, the proceedings must be instituted within a reasonable time after the exceptions are taken.[61]

(C) Notice. A proceeding to establish exceptions must be on notice to the adverse party.[62]

(D) Petition. A petition to the supreme court for the settlement of a bill of exceptions should set forth the exceptions taken, and the evidence in support thereof.[63]

After adjournment.— In Massachusetts it has been held that it is too late, after the adjournment of the court without day, to apply to a judge of the supreme court for the allowance of exceptions. Phillips v. Soule, 6 Allen (Mass.) 150.

After perfection of appeal.— In California it has been held that it is too late after the court below has acted upon a new trial statement, duly settled, and an appeal has been perfected, to petition to prove an exception in the supreme court. Frankel v. Deidesheimer, 83 Cal. 44, 23 Pac. 136.

Necessity of petition.— In Massachusetts it has been held that an application to establish the truth of exceptions could not be made to the supreme court where there had been a failure to file and serve a petition, although a copy of the exceptions sought to be proved, as well as an affidavit of their truth, were duly filed and served. Marble v. Keyes, 4 Gray (Mass.) 570 note; Phillips v. Hoyle, 4 Gray (Mass.) 568.

Verification.— In Massachusetts, by rule of court, a petition to establish exceptions must be verified by affidavit. Lyons v. Cambridge, 131 Mass. 571. Under this rule it has been held that an affidavit merely to the truth of the exceptions, and not alleging the truth of

(iv) Settlement by Bystanders. By statute, in other states, a bill of exceptions may be signed by bystanders if the trial judge neglects or refuses to allow and sign it;[64] but to entitle a bill to be so settled the conditions pointed out by the statute must be shown to exist, and the requirements of the statute must be observed.[65] In the absence of such a permissive statute, a bill cannot be allowed by bystanders.[66]

c. Notice of Settlement. A settlement of a bill of exceptions after adjournment of the term should be on notice to the adverse party.[67]

the allegations of the petition (Tufts v. Newton, 117 Mass. 68), or an affidavit on information and belief only (Hadley v. Watson, 143 Mass. 27, 9 N. E. 806), is insufficient. But, after the filing of the report of a commissioner to whom a petition to prove exceptions has been referred, it is too late to object that the petition is not verified in accordance with the rule. d. Time of Settlement [68]— (I) In General. Originally, exceptions were required to be taken at the time the alleged erroneous ruling or decision was made, and the bill must have been presented, settled, signed, and sealed before verdict, or before the jury were discharged. But, to meet the convenience of bench and bar, the practice obtained of allowing the bill to be reduced to form after judgment, the bill in such cases being signed nunc pro tunc.[69] In modern times, statutes or rules of court provide, as a rule, a time for settling a bill of exceptions. Under such statutes or rules of court the bill must be settled within the time so prescribed, or it will not be considered.[70] In the absence of a regulation, by statute or rule of court, as to the time when a bill is to be presented, it must be presented within a reasonable time.[71]

(II) After Expiration of Time For Appeal. In the absence of mandatory limitation of the time by statute, the court has power to settle a bill of exceptions after expiration of the time allowed for appeal, if the appeal has been taken within such time.[72]

(IV) At Trial Term or Time Then Granted — (A) In General. Generally, it may be said that a bill of exceptions should be settled during the term of court at which the trial was had and judgment rendered,[74] unless, by consent or agreement of the respective parties,[75] special order of court,[76] or under the provisions of a statute,[77] the time is extended. After the expiration of the trial term, the trial court is without authority, in the absence of a permissive statute or the express agreement or consent of the parties,[78] to either sign and allow the

Legal holiday.— In Massachusetts it has been held that, where a judge has extended the time for the filing and presentment of exceptions to a particular day, which turns out to be a legal holiday, and they are not presented until the next day, objections by the adverse party to their allowance will result

In computing this time, Sundays must be included,[88] in the absence of a statute to the contrary.[89] It has, however, been held that, where no statute or rule of court intervenes, if the last day allowed by an order for the settling of a bill of exceptions falls on Sunday, the bill may be settled on the following Monday.[90]

(VII) EXTENSION OF TIME[91] — (A) In General. Statutes or rules of court in most, if not all, of the states authorize an extension of time beyond the trial term for filing bills of exceptions.[92] To entitle a bill to be so filed, however, there must be a substantial compliance with such statutes or rules of court.[93] The bill must be filed within the extended time, or it will not be considered.[94]

(B) In Vacation. In the absence of a statute permitting it,[95] a trial judge has no authority, in vacation, to extend the time fixed for filing a bill of exceptions.[96]

(C) Length of Extension. The time fixed by the court for the settling and filing of a bill of exceptions must be a definite time.[97] If the statute limits the time of extension, an order cannot be granted giving longer time.[98]

(D) Notice. In the absence of a statute requiring it,[99] notice need not be given to the adverse party of an application to the trial court for an extension of time within which to prepare and serve a bill of exceptions.[1]

(E) When Time Begins to Run. Where an order is made in term-time, extending the time for settling a bill of exceptions, the time under such order will not be deemed to run until an adjournment of the term,[2] unless there is something in the order or record evidencing a contrary intent.[3]

(F) Second Extension. Where the court extends the time for filing a bill of exceptions, it has no power, after the expiration of such time, in the absence of a statute permitting it or the consent of the parties,[4] to again extend the time for settling and signing the bill.[5] A second extension, in order to be valid, must not be considered on appeal, though counsel stipulate its correctness.[12] It has also been held that even a statement in the record that defendant filed a bill signed by the trial judge is not sufficient to cure a defect arising from the absence of the judge's signature to the bill.[13]

(II) Place of Signing. As the act of signing a bill of exceptions is the act of the judge and not of the court,[14] it is not essential that the bill shall be signed in open court.[15]

(III) Time of Signing. Where a bill of exceptions is presented to the trial judge within the time prescribed, the rights of appellant or plaintiff in error will not be prejudiced by the judge's delay in signing it. In such case the maxim actus curiæ neminem gravabit applies.[16]

Iowa Code (1873), § 200, providing that no pleading shall be considered as filed until a memorandum is made on the appearance docket, does not apply to a bill of exceptions. Royer v. Foster, 62 Iowa 321, 17 N. W. 516.

Sufficiency of filing.— Causing a bill of exceptions to be actually placed in the hands of the clerk of a trial court within the time prescribed by law for filing the same in his office is all that is required of a plaintiff in error or his counsel. McDaniel v. Columbus Fertilizer Co., 109 Ga. 284, 34 S. E. 598; Preble v. Bates, 40 Fed. 745. The filing of a bill of exceptions in open court is equivalent to a filing in the clerk's office. Wabash Paper Co. v. Webb, 146 Ind. 303, 45 N. E. 474. The fact that a bill of exceptions was filed by the judge of the district court on his own motion, and not on the motion of either of the parties to the action, does not affect its conclusiveness as a part of the record. Shepherd v. Brenton, 15 Iowa 84.

Omission of file-mark.—Where a bill of exceptions was delivered to the clerk for the purpose of being filed within the prescribed time, the omission of the filing-mark is not proof that it was not filed. Young v. Gaut, (Ark. 1901) 61 S. W. 372; Eldred v. Malloy, 2 Colo. 20; Foster v. Hinsen, 75 Iowa 291, 39 N. W. 505. See also Anderson v. Leverich, 70 Iowa 741, 30 N. W. 39.

Amendment of bill.—Where a bill of exceptions is changed by the judge after service is acknowledged on it, it must be served anew. Wynn v. Benning, 42 Ga. 656.

Sufficiency of service.— It is not necessary that service be made by plaintiff himself. Walter v. Kierstead, 74 Ga. 18. Leaving a copy at the residence of defendant in error is sufficient. Montgomery v. Walker, 41 Ga. 681. Mailing a copy addressed to the attorneys of defendant is not enough, though such attorney admits receiving it. Clark v. Lyon, 48 Ga. 125.

Waiver of service.—Where there has been no service of the bill of exceptions as required by law, the written waiver of such service will not operate to give the appellate court jurisdiction of the same. A bill of exceptions, taken by a part of defendants to the overruling of a demurrer to a bill in equity, need not be served on the other defendants. Mechanics', etc., Bank v. Harrison, 68 Ga. 463.

Service on attorney only.—Where there was no evidence that defendant in error was a non-resident, and the return shows a bill of exceptions served on his attorney only, a writ of error will be dismissed. Southwestern Georgia Bank v. Tillman, 94 Ga. 731, 20 S. E. 4.

See 21 Cent. Dig. tit. "Exceptions, Bill of," § 104.

Acknowledgment without date.—A writ of error will be dismissed where the acknowledgment of service on the bill of exceptions is without date and signed by attorneys who appear neither in such acknowledgment nor elsewhere on the record to represent defendant. Weatherly v. Mimms, 63 Ga. 161.

After the time allowed for filing a bill of exceptions has expired it is too late to file an affidavit of service, or indorse it on the bill of exceptions. Plummer v. Moore, 63 Ga. 626.

In California it has been held that a petition for a mandate to settle a bill of exceptions must show that the bill was presented to the judge on the required notice to the district attorney, and when it was presented to the judge or delivered to the clerk. Leave of court.—In Illinois it has been held that a petition for mandamus, and summons issued to compel the judge of the superior court to sign a bill of exceptions, without leave of court first obtained, will be quashed. Hawkins v. Harding, 35 Ill. App. 25.

Necessity of petition.—A petition must be filed, setting forth the grounds of the application, before the supreme court will award a mandamus to compel a judge to sign a bill of exceptions, a mere affidavit by one of the attorneys in the case, accompanied by the bill of exceptions which the judge refused to sign, being insufficient. People v. Loomis, 94 Ill. 587. See also Ruppertsberger v. Clark, 53 Md. 402, wherein it was held that a compulsory writ, requiring the judge to sign the bill of exceptions, must be specifically prayed in a proper proceeding for that purpose as against the judge, and cannot be granted upon a bill against the other parties to the cause and under the prayer for general relief.

Oral proof.— The trial court should not allow, on oral proof alone, a nunc pro tunc correction of the bill of exceptions. Driver v. Driver, 153 Ind. 88, 54 N. E. 389; Hamilton v. Burch, 28 Ind. 233; Ross v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 141 Mo. 390, 38 S. W. 926, 42 S. Presumption as to amendment.—Where a bill of exceptions was amended by the court by inserting matters in pais after the term, and after the lapse of time allowed for presenting and filing it, it will be presumed that the court was in possession of sufficient memoranda or notes to give definite information as to what the actual proceedings were. Summons as notice.—Where an application to correct a bill of exceptions is made, a notice served on the opposite party is sufficient to bring him into court, and, if a summons is issued and served, it will be treated as a mere notice. Harris v. Tomlinson, 130 Ind. 426, 30 N. E. 214.

Incorporation of amendments into bill.— Amendments allowed by the trial court to the proposed bill of exceptions should be incorporated in the bill as finally settled and signed. King v. Farmington, 90 Wis. 62, 62 N. W. 928; Killops v. Stephens, 74 Wis. 39, compel the court to amend a bill of exceptions according to the truth of the case.[48]

f. Appeal. Proceedings to amend bills of exceptions are not actions separate and distinct from the original action, but are merely auxiliary thereto, and should, where an appeal in the main action is pending, be brought up on appeal as a part of that action, and not as an original case.[49]

8. Quashing or Striking Out Bill — a. Grounds. A motion to quash or strike out a bill of exceptions, to be effective, must be based on some objection to the bill itself, either in the manner of its preparation and signing, or in other like respects.[50]

b. Application — (I) Manner of Application. An application to quash or to strike out a bill of exceptions may be made by motion.[51]

(II) Time of Application. A motion to quash or strike out a bill of exceptions must be seasonably made, or it will not be considered.[52]

State v. Wentworth, 56 Wis. 531, 14 N. W. 634.

Taking improperly from files.— The fact that the bill of exceptions was improperly taken from the files of the trial court by counsel after it was signed is no reason why the appellate court should strike it from the files. Sedam v. Meeksback, 6 Ohio Cir. Ct. 219.

Where bills of exceptions have been fraudulently obtained, or sealed irregularly, improvidently, or in clear violation of a plain rule of law, the court to which the writ of error has been returned will quash them. An objection to a bill of exceptions, on the ground that it was not properly made a part of the record in the court below, should be presented in the appellate court by motion to strike it from the record. Jones v. Hockman, 12 Iowa 101. But see Castleman v. Griffin, 13 Wis. 535, wherein it was held that an objection that the bill of exceptions was not filed within the time required by rule of court cannot be made in the appellate court, the remedy being by a motion to strike from the files, made in the court below.

Sufficiency of motion.—A motion to quash a bill of exceptions, being a technical objection, must itself be free from fault, and where the grounds assigned are "because the same was not made and signed as required by law," the motion should be overruled unless there is a total want of some material requirement, such as the signature of the judge. Walker v. Morse, 33 Nebr. 650, 50 N. W. 1055.

52. Crane Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Keck, 35 Nebr. 683, 53 N. See 21 Cent. Dig. tit. "Exceptions, Bill of," § 113.

After joinder in error.— The right to move to strike out a bill of exceptions is not lost by joining in error. Farrar v. Finney, 21 Mo. 569.

c. Effect of Striking Out Bill. Where a bill of exceptions has been stricken from the files, and the errors assigned are all based on matters contained therein, the appeal will be dismissed or the judgment below will be affirmed.[53] The bill itself in such case cannot be considered by the appellate court for any purpose.[54]

9. Effect of Motion For New Trial on Bill. The authorities are in conflict as to the effect of a motion for a new trial on exceptions previously taken. Some hold that such a motion is a waiver of the exceptions unless they are incorporated in the motion.[55] Others take the contrary view.[56]

E. Contents, Making, and Settlement of Case or Statement of Facts — 1. By Whom to Be Made. Effect on special bill.—When an exception has been taken upon the trial to the refusal of the judge to give instructions, and the instructions have been written out and indorsed by him as refused, and the exception noted, and it is signed and filed, it constitutes a special bill of exceptions; and, though incorporated into the general bill of exceptions, it is not affected by the subsequent striking from the record of the general bill for failure to settle it in time. Express waiver.—After verdict for plaintiff, defendant secured an extension of time to file a motion for a new trial, stating that he did not intend to proceed under his exceptions. The time was further extended, and the motion was filed and argued. A new trial was refused, and defendant, at the next term, and eight months after the trial, moved for signature of his bill of exceptions, and petitioned for a writ of error founded thereon. It was held that the motion should be overruled and the writ refused, the exceptions having been waived and the bill being presented for signature neither within the term nor within a reasonable time. 56. Sorrelle v. Craig, 9 Ala. 534; West v. Cunningham, 9 Port. (Ala.) 104, 33 Am. Where a party files both a bill and a motion for a new trial, and, at the judge's suggestion, a hearing is had on the motion after the filing of the exceptions, he may hold, though the motion for a new trial is refused, that the excepting party has not waived the exceptions by participating in the argument upon the motion. In Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Ft. Scott, 15 Kan. 435, 477, it was held that "the making and serving of a case are the acts of the plaintiff in error; the suggestion of amendments the act of the defendant in error; and the settling and signing of the case the duty of the judge."

Duty of judge.— Under Mass. Stat. (1893), c. 61, § 7, the appellant is entitled to a report statute,[59] it is generally the duty of the party appealing to furnish a statement of the evidence;[60] and, where the parties disagree as to a statement of the evidence, or of the facts proved, it must be made by the court.[61] When, however, any party desires a fuller case or statement, it becomes the duty of such party to cause the facts or evidence deemed material by him to be inserted.[62]

2. Scope and Sufficiency — a. In General. A case made or statement of facts on appeal should contain within itself all matters necessary for a review by the appellate court, and should affirmatively show that it is complete.[63] to the appellate court of the material facts found by the trial judge as a matter of right when appellant's request is made within the four days. Worcester v. Lakeside Mfg. Co., 174 Mass. 299, 54 N. E. 833.

Effect of admission of error by defendant.— Where defendant in error has pleaded limitations in bar of plaintiff's writ of error, and the issue joined on that plea has been found in favor of plaintiff, though defendant impliedly admits that there is error in the record, nevertheless it is the duty of plaintiff to make up the error book. Hymann v. Cook, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 201.

Effect of failure to make.— The appellate court will not examine voluminous evidence where appellant makes no statement of it, and lends no assistance thereto. Paxson v. St. Louis Drayage Co., 55 Mo. App. 566; Mitchell v. Tedder, 107 N. C. 358, 12 S. E. 193.

Verdict subject to opinion on points reserved.— In Eagle v. Alner, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 332, it was held that when a verdict is taken subject to the opinion of the court on points reserved, plaintiff must make up the case and have it settled, and cannot move for judgment because no case is made.

The proper course in chancery cases, where the evidence of witnesses is taken in open court, is for the party desiring the testimony to be certified to make a case, setting such testimony forth, present it to the circuit judge, and procure his order fixing the time and place when and where it shall be settled, and forward notice to the opposite party in order that the latter may attend and propose amendments, or, instead thereof, take other equivalent proceedings. The practice should be simulated as near as may be to that of making cases for review at law. Wright v. Dudley, 8 Mich. 74.

59. In Louisiana, under La. Code Prac. art. 601, either party might require the clerk to take down the testimony in writing, which should serve as a statement of facts if the parties should not agree to one. Under this article, together with articles 586, 602, 603, it has been held that where all the parol evidence offered on the trial has been taken in writing by the clerk, and all the written evidence noted by him, the judge cannot be required to make a statement. Hennen v. Hennen, 10 La. 560.

In South Carolina, under the thirteenth clause of the act of 1839 "concerning the office and duties of ordinary," it was the duty of the ordinary to furnish an appellant with a copy of the evidence taken by him in a proceeding had before him. Clark v. West, 1 Strobh. Eq. (S. C.) 185.

(Pa.) 125 (holding that, under the Pennsylvania act of Feb. 24, 1806, where, on the request of a party, a judge reduces his opinion to writing, he is not obliged to furnish a copy of his notes of evidence, to be transcribed and annexed to the record); Bassler v. Niesly, 1 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 431.

In Louisiana, under La. Code Prac. art. 1042, the judge of a probate court cannot be called upon to make a statement of the evidence in causes tried before him. It is the duty of the party intending to appeal to have the evidence taken down in writing. Tompkins v. Benjamin, 16 La. 197.

62. Where party making up case omits any of the evidence it is the duty of the other party, if the latter deems the evidence material to sustain the findings, to cause it to be inserted by amendments. Perkins v. Hill, 56 N. Y. 87.

Where a referee settled a case on appeal without certifying that it contained all the evidence, and appellants, at the time, made no demand for such certificate, but afterward desired to have such certificate, and moved for a resettlement, an order permitting respondents to add any testimony that might be necessary to enable the referee to certify that the case contained all the evidence was held error, since it was appellants' duty to furnish such omissions, as they, and not respondents, desired the certificate. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2483.

Affidavits used on the hearing of a motion should be made a part of the case-made or statement of facts on appeal from the decision on such motion (Gallaudet v. Steinmetz, 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. 239; Clay v. Selah Valley Irrigation Co., 14 Wash. 543, 45 Pac. 141); but where a statute requires that affidavits so used shall be indorsed by the judge or clerk "at the time as having been read or referred to on the hearing," affidavits not so indorsed will be stricken from the statement on appeal (Albion Consol. Exceptions to findings after filing of judgment-roll.— In Pettit v. Pettit, 20 Wkly. Dig. (N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 994, should file the same and affix them to the judgment-roll as a part of his return on appeal, and that it is not necessary that such written exceptions should be made part of the case to be passed upon on settlement by the trial judge.

ter that cannot be the subject of review by the appellate court need not be inserted.[65]

(B) Incorporating Evidence — (1) In General. So much of the evidence introduced or the facts proved in the trial court should be incorporated in a case-made or statement of facts on appeal as may be necessary and requisite to fully present the exceptions taken,[66] and, where the evidence is itself used, it should be Objections and exceptions made by the prevailing party should not be incorporated into a case upon appeal unless their insertion can be justified by the existence of a special reason therefor. Beach v. Cooke, 28 N. Y. 508, 86 Am. Dec. 260; Dabney v. Stevens, 32 N. Y. Super. Ct. 415, 10 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 39, 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 341; In re Post, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 812; Clarke v. House, 16 N. Y. Suppl. 777.

Orders denying motions.— On appeals from orders denying motions the case-made or statement of facts should not only show that the motion was duly made, but should contain the order denying the motion. Specification of facts for review.— N. D. Rev. Codes, § 5630, as amended by Sess. Laws (1897), c. 5, requires appellant to incorporate with the statement of the case, where he desires to review only one or more particular facts, specifications pointing out such particular fact or facts, and when he desires a retrial of the whole case in the supreme court that fact must also be specified in the statement of the case. Farmers, etc., Nat. Bank v. Davis, 8 N. D. 83, 76 N. W. 998.

Transcript of record.—A case-made need not contain a certified transcript of the record. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Snedeger, 5 Kan. App. 700, 49 Pac. 103.

Unauthorized omissions.—Appellant is not authorized to assume that any portion of a statement, on an appeal from an order denying a motion for a new trial, is immaterial, and omit it, except by stipulation with the other party. Kimball v. Semple, 31 Cal. 657.

Power of judge to insert matter.—In Walsworth v. Wood, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 483, it was held that a circuit judge might insert in a case such facts as he might deem necessary to render his charge intelligible. He might state his charge as he deemed correct, and, if no charge had been delivered, but opinions had been expressed by him in the hearing of the jury in the progress of the trial, he might, with propriety, state such opinions in the settlement of the case. Effect of irrelevant matter in statement by judge.—When the judge himself makes the statement of fact, a needless encumbrance of the record with interrogatories and answers of the witnesses is no ground for dismissal of the appeal. Silver Valley Min. Co. v. North Carolina Smelting Co., 119 N. C. 415, 26 S. E. 27; Durham v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 108 N. C. 399, 12 S. E. 1040, 13 S. E. 1; McManus v. Wallis, 52 Tex. 534.

Where a case is tried by the court without a jury, and the objection of appellant is upon the legal principle involved, and not with regard to the illegal admission or rejection of evidence, the statement of the case need contain only the facts found by the judge, and not the testimony on which such facts are based. Benedict v. Howell, 39 N. J. L. 221; Douglas v. Douglas, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 406. See also Lynch v. Crain, 2 La. Ann. 905, in which it was held that where the parties consent that the testimony taken on the trial shall be reduced to writing by the judge in a certain manner, to serve as a statement in case of appeal, and the mode adopted is as well calculated to secure a fair and accurate statement of the evidence as if the testimony had been incorporated in a condensed and narrative form.[67] It is not necessary to recite at length evidence elsewhere embodied in the record, but a reference thereto is sufficient.[68]

(2) Stenographer's Report. The minutes of a stenographer taken at a trial are not official records, and can only be made part of the record in the cause by being incorporated in a case or bill of exceptions signed and settled by the judge.[69] The use of such notes is not a matter of absolute right, but rests in the discretion of the judge who settles the case or statement,[70] and, where used, the notes should be condensed and the evidence recited in a narrative form.[71]

(3) Statement That All Evidence Is Included. It is not necessary that the case-made should show that it contains all the evidence,[72] and, where a party desires that the case-made shall show that it contains all the evidence introduced taken down by the clerk, neither party can object to it upon appeal.

But see In re Perry, 42 S. C. 183, 20 S. E. 84.

Reference to petition.—Where a statement of facts recites that a witness testified in accordance with the allegation in the petition, and the petition is given, the statement is sufficient. Nicholls v. Bienvenue, 47 La. Ann. 355, 16 So. 811.

Statement that evidence is to be inserted.—A case made out and served on appellee is sufficient to authorize the clerk to copy, as a part of the case on appeal, the judge's notes of the evidence (which Clark's Code Civ. Proc. N. C. (1900), § 412, subsec. 2, requires the judge to file in cases of appeal), though the case so served contains the words: "Here the clerk will copy the evidence" instead of directing him to copy "the judge's notes of the evidence," such notes being the only record thereof. Wood v. Southern R. Co., 118 N. C. 1056, 24 S. E. 704. Similarly, the fact that a case served upon a party on appeal does not, owing to the other engagements of the stenographer, contain the testimony, but only a statement showing that the testimony was to be inserted, is not ground for dismissal of the appeal, although it might be ground for a motion to recommit for further settlement. W. 556, wherein appellant failed, in making up the statement of the case, to comply with Tex. Dist. and County Ct. Rules, Nos. 72–78 [20 S. W. xvi], requiring a condensed statement of the facts proved, the statement being, instead, a transcript of the stenographer's report in a condensed and narrative form, and it was held that this would not necessitate a dismissal of the appeal.

Compulsory incorporation.— In State v. Superior Ct., 13 Wash. 514, 43 Pac. 636, it was held that a party applying for a settlement of a statement of facts in the superior court could not be compelled by the judge to embody therein a transcript of the stenographer's notes taken on the trial.

Abridgment of documents and exhibits.— In Albion Consol. Min. Co. v. Richmond Min. Co., 19 Nev. 225, 8 Pac. 480, it was held that, where deeds and other documentary evidence are introduced to show title, and not objected to at the time as insufficient, such deeds and documentary evidence need not be copied in full in the statement of case on appeal, but the substance of the document is sufficient. See also Smith v. Newell, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 501 (in which it was held that N. Y. Supreme Ct. Gen. Rules, No. 34, directing that, on appeal, the exhibits shall not be printed at length, should be observed); Hawkins v. Lee, 22 Tex. 544.

Formal parts of pleadings.— In Cooper v. Cooper, 9 N. J. Eq. 566, it was held that the formal part of a bill in chancery may be omitted on appeal, and the pleadings generally abridged.

Immaterial exhibits.— Copies of exhibits, which are not material for a proper determination of the controversy, need not be included in a settled case on appeal. Matter of Lyons, 42 Minn. 19, 43 N. W. 568.

It was held that, under Tex. Rev. Stat. arts. 1411, 1413, 1414, providing that the transcript shall, except in certain cases, contain a full and correct copy of all the proceedings had in the case, the evidence referred to could not be considered for any purpose.

Waiver of incorporation by respondent.—In Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633, 22 Pac. 26, 131, it was held that where an exhibit has been omitted from the statement, and no objection made, and the attorneys for respondent indorse on the statement: "The forego-

(D) Showing Disagreement of Parties. Where a judge is required to make a statement of fact in case of a disagreement of the parties, the fact of such disagreement need not be set out in his statement, but will be presumed.[75]

(E) Request For Settlement and Allowance. A party may, where such request is necessary to the validity of the statement, insert in the proposed statement of a case a request for its settlement and allowance.[76]

(F) Form and Arrangement. Both as to form and arrangement, a case-made or statement on appeal should comply with the requirements laid down by statute or by rule of court. As a general rule, all matters should be inserted in their order of occurrence, and prior to the certificate and signature of the judge.[77]

(II) Case Settled by Referee. Where an action has been tried by a referee nothing should be contained in the case on appeal except such evidence, findings, and exceptions as are expressly allowed by him.[78]

3. Making, Filing, and Serving Proposed Case or Statement — a. Necessity of. The record of a cause brought up for the purpose of review by a case-made or statement of facts must show that the case or statement was made, filed, and served in the prescribed time, and that the opposite party was present at, or was notified, or waived notice of, the time and place of settling the case or statement, or waived his right to make amendments thereto.[79] It has accordingly been held

Immaterial non-conformity.— In Archer v. Long, 35 S. C. 585, 14 S. E. 24, it was held, under S. C. Supreme Ct. Co-parties.—In Kansas, where, in an action by plaintiff against several defendants, judgthat, unless the defect is waived[80] by appellee or defendant in error, service, otherwise than at the time, in the manner, and by the officer authorized by statute, is invalid.[81]

b. Time For — (1) In General. The provisions of law as to the time of making and filing the case-made or statement of facts, and for service thereof upon the adverse party, are mandatory, and should be strictly observed.[82] In some states the statutory period of limitations begins to run from the time of the decision; in others, from the entry of the decree or judgment; and, again, in others, from the time of notice of the judgment or from the adjournment of the term at which it is rendered.[83] The time is computed by excluding the first day and including the last, whether such time is fixed by statute or order of court.[84]

ment is rendered for plaintiff, and one defendant brings error, it is necessary to serve the case-made upon his co-defendants, and the difficulty of service on account of their residence abroad will not change the rule. Lapham v. Bailey, (Kan. 1900) 60 Pac. 743. See also Rose v. Baker, 99 N. C. 323, 5 S. E. 919, in which it was held that, where one appeals from so much of a judgment as is in favor of his co-defendant, he must serve his statement of the case on such co-defendant.

Effect of subsequent settlement.—The failure of appellant to legally and seasonably serve his case on appeal on appellee cannot be cured by the judge's subsequent settlement of the case. Barrus v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 121 N. C. 504, 28 S. E. 187; McNeill v. Raleigh, etc., Air Line R. Co., 117 N. C. 642, 23 S. E. 268; Forte v. Boone, 114 N. C. 176, 19 S. E. 632.

80. Waiver.—A motion to dismiss an appeal, on the ground that the case was not properly served, will not be sustained where no objections were made to the service at the time, and exceptions to the case were subsequently filed. Asheville Woodworking Co. v. Southwick, 119 N. C. 611, 26 S. E. 253.

81. Smith v. Smith, 119 N. C. 311, 25 S. E. 877; Roberts v. Partridge, 118 N. C. 355, 24 S. E. 15 (holding that service by counsel is a nullity unless accepted by appellee); McNeill v. Raleigh, etc., Air Line R. Co., 117 N. C. 642, 23 S. E. 268 (holding that service by a proper officer is insufficient if after prescribed time); Archer v. Long, 35 S. C. 585, 14 S. E. 24; Barkley v. Barton, 15 Wash. 33, 45 Pac. 654. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2508.

Service in separate parts of a proposed case will not affect the validity of the service. Archer v. Long, 35 S. C. 585, 14 S. E. 24.

Stipulation as to time of service.—A stipulation that appellants are to serve the case on respondent by a certain time does not waive service in a legal manner. Smith v. Smith, 119 N. C. 311, 25 S. E. 877. Compare Willis v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 119 N. C. 718, 25 S. E. 790.

In Pennsylvania the certificate required of counsel, stating the grounds of appeal, must be made during the sitting of the lower court when the appeal rests on facts not apparent on the record. Cramond v. Gibson, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 122.

Service before filing.—Where a statute provides that a party desiring to have a statement of facts certified must file it in the action, and serve a copy on the adverse party, the service cannot precede the filing. (II) Extension of Time—(A) In General. The time within which a case or statement on appeal must be made, filed, and served in some jurisdictions may be extended by the court below, within its discretion, upon sufficient cause being shown, and such extension may itself be enlarged, but in others it can only be extended by consent of the parties;[85] when the time has elapsed the court is without power to grant an extension for that purpose, or to settle and sign a case or statement which may thereafter be presented,[86] and, a fortiori, where an extension of time previously granted has expired, no further extension can be allowed.[87]

Washington.— McQuesten v. Morrill, 12 Wash. 335, 41 Pac. 56.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2503.

A discretionary power.— The granting or refusing of a motion for leave to propose and settle a case after the time limited by the statute is within the discretion of the trial court, and nothing but a clear abuse of such discretion will justify the interference of the higher court. State v. Powers, 69 Minn. 429, 72 N. W. 705. Contra, State v. Price, 110 N. C. 599, 15 S. E. 116.

Effect of termination of office.—After a judge pro tempore has ceased to sit as a court he cannot extend the time for making and serving a case-made. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Leeman, 5 Kan. App. 804, 48 Pac. 932.

By successor in office.— In Hulme v. Diffenbacher, 53 Kan. 181, 36 Pac. 60, it was held, under section 549 of the code, authorizing the court or judge to extend the time for making or serving a case on appeal, that that duty might be performed by the successor in office of the judge who tried the case.

A motion for a new trial does not extend the time for filing a statement on appeal. Mahoney v. Caperton, 15 Cal. 313. But see Manley v. Park, (Kan. 1899) 58 Pac. 961; Union Park Land Co. v. Muret, 57 Kan. 192, 45 Pac. 589.

The extension of the time to appeal does not of itself extend the time to file and serve exceptions or a case with exceptions. Salls v. Butler, 27 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 133.

The extension of time to make implies an extension of time to serve. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Guild, 61 Kan. 213, 59 Pac. 283.

An order, made without the state by a trial judge, extending the time within which a case for the supreme court could be served, settled and signed, is a nullity. Dunn v. Travis, 45 Kan. 541, 26 Pac. 247; Blanchard v. U. S., 6 Okla. 587, 52 Pac. 736.

Stipulation of parties.— An extension of the time within which a case or statement should be made cannot, in the absence of an order of the court, be made by stipulation between the parties. Limerick v. Haun, 44 Kan. 696, 25 Pac. 1069; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Koons, 26 Kan. 215. See also Horner v. Christy, 4 Okla. 553, 46 Pac. 561, where it was held that such a stipulation must be approved by the court. Contra, Sondley v. Asheville, 112 N. C. 694, 17 S. E. 534.

South Carolina.— Stribling v. Johns, 16 S. C. 112.

Compare Volmer v. Stagerman, 25 Minn. 234, in which it was held that where, after the expiration of the time limited for the making of a case, no judgment having been entered, leave to make a case is granted by the court, such leave operates as an extension authorized by Minn. Gen. Stat. (1878), c. 66, § 125. And see Matter of Williams, 6 Misc. (N. Y.) 512, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 433, 57 N. Y. St. 711, in which it was held that the surrogate's court has authority, under N. Y. Supreme Ct. Rules, No. 32, to permit a party at any time after an appeal is taken to serve a case, if the application is seasonably made thereafter, and good reasons shown.

The court below cannot, however, extend the time in which to make and serve a case or statement on appeal beyond the time limited by statute in which an appeal or writ of error may be prosecuted.[88]

(B) Notice of Application. No notice of an application for an extension of time in which to make and serve a case or statement need be served on the opposite party.[89]

c. Failure to Make, File, or Serve in Time — (I) In General. Where an appellant or plaintiff in error fails to make, file, or serve his case or statement of facts within the time allowed by statute or by order of the court, such case or statement cannot be considered by the appellate court.[90]

(II) Excuse and Relief. Such failure will be excused and relief granted, however, where it is caused by the act of the adverse party or of the court, and there has been no default or negligence on the part of appellant or plaintiff in error.[91]

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2504.

A jurisdictional question.— An objection that a statement of facts is not filed within the statutory time goes to the jurisdiction of the appellate court, and may be first made in that court. Loos v. Rondema, 10 Wash. 164, 38 Pac. 1012.

Appeal not dismissed.— Ordinarily, an appeal will not be dismissed on motion on the ground that a case has not been served in time, since appellant has a right to rely upon any errors apparent upon the face of the record proper. Kavanagh v. Maus, 28 Cal. 261; Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107; Macomber v. Chamberlain, 8 Cal. 322; Leech v. West, 2 Cal. 95; Brown v. Heacock, 9 How. Pr. (N. Effect of subsequent settlement.— The failure to serve the case on appeal within the time limited by law cannot be cured by a subsequent settlement of the case by the judge. Barrus v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 121 N. C. 504, 28 S. E. 187; McNeill v. Raleigh, etc., Air Line R. Co., 117 N. C. 642, 23 S. E. 268; Forte v. Boone, 114 N. C. 176, 19 S. Washington.— McQuesten v. Morrill, 12 Wash. 335, 41 Pac. 56.

Wisconsin.— Stevens v. Campbell, 13 Wis. 375.

To whom application for relief made.—An application for relief from default in serving a case on appeal should be made to the court from whose judgment the appeal is taken. Odell v. McGrath, 16 N. Y. App. Div. 103, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 119.

Mistake.— In Wade v. Wade, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 7, plaintiff's attorney secured an order after trial for time to prepare and serve a case, and for a stay, but, by mistake, failed to serve the order until eight days afterward. Defendant had, in the meantime, entered the judgment and given notice of costs, and it was held that plaintiff would have twenty days to make and serve a case, judgment standing as security.

(III) Waiver of Objections. An objection based upon the failure of appellant or plaintiff in error to make, file, or serve his case or statement of facts within the required time may be either expressly or impliedly waived.[92]

d. Evidence of Service. The record should contain evidence of due and timely service of the case or statement of facts upon appellee or defendant in error.[93]

4. Proposed Amendments or Counter-Case or Statement — a. In General. If the case-made or statement of facts, as presented for settlement to the court below by appellant or plaintiff in error, does not state all the evidence or facts, and the exceptions of both parties on the points presented, it is the right of the other party to have such evidence or facts and exceptions inserted before the case or statement is settled.[94]

Subsequent settlement and allowance.— In Volmer v. Stagerman, 25 Minn. 234, it is said that failure to make timely service of a case is cured by a subsequent settlement and allowance by the court, this, under Minn. Gen. Stat. c. 66, § 105, being equivalent to an allowance of service after time, or to an enlargement of the time of service. Contra, Barrus v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 121 N. C. 504, 28 S. E. 187.

Effect of commencing appeal.—Where a party takes steps to appeal from a judgment he cannot claim that, because of respondent's failure to serve notice of the entry of the judgment, the time of appeal does not commence to run, within the provisions of Wash. Laws (1893), p. 116, § 13, to the effect that a statement on appeal must be filed within thirty days after the time begins to run within which an appeal may be taken. McQuesten v. Morrill, 12 Wash. 335, 41 Pac. 56.

Want of due diligence on part of appellant will debar him from relief. Whiting v. Kimball, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 690; Rains v. Wheeler, 76 Tex. 390, 13 S. W. 324.

An announcement by the judge that court will not adjourn until a day fixed (meaning that the court cannot adjourn before that time, if the business is not then finished), will not excuse a failure to file a statement of facts, where the court adjourns before the time announced. Akes v. Sanford, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 39 S. W. 952.

92. Waiver by agreement.— Sondley v. Asheville, 112 N. C. 694, 17 S. E. 534; Twitty v. Logan, 85 N. C. 592.

Waiver by admission of "due service."— State v. Baxter, 38 Minn. 137, 36 N. W. 108. But the mere acceptance of service, after the time limited by statute, will not waive the objection, and it is competent for counsel, in so accepting service, to add the date to the indorsement. Barrus v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 121 N. C. 504, 28 S. E. 187.

Waiver by participation in making up case. Abbott v. Nash, 35 Minn. 451, 29 N. W. 65; Byrd v. Bazemore, 122 N. C. 115, 28 S. E. 965; Roberts v. Partridge, 118 N. C. 355, 24 S. E. 15.

Failure of appellee to object.— In Bryan v. Maume, 28 Cal. 238, it was held that an appellee, by not returning the copy of the statement served on him, or by not making any objection, did not waive objection or consent to an order of the court giving appellant more than fifty days in which to file a statement.

North Carolina.—Walker v. Scott, 104 N. C. 481, 10 S. E. 523, holding that N. C. Acts (1889), c. 161, extending the time in which a case on appeal could be served, even though restoring the rights appellant had lost by his delay, would not be considered to cut off the rights of appellee, who, relying on appellant's case not having been served in time, had served no counter-case, and that appellee might file his exceptions to appellant's case nunc pro tunc.

South Carolina.— See Sanders v. Sanders, 28 S. C. 609, 9 S. E. 465.

Washington.— Warburton v. Ralph, 9 Wash. 537, 38 Pac. 140, holding that the ten days allowed by Wash. Laws (1893), pp. 114, 115, § 9, for filing amendments to a proposed statement of facts, cannot be extended by the court.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2511.

Failure to show allowance of time for amendments.—A case-made will not be considered where the record fails to show that, as required by statute, defendant in error was given three days in which to suggest amendments, or that he waived his right to suggest them. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Roach, 18 Kan. 592; Weeks v. Medler, 18 Kan. 425. Contra, State v. Crook, 91 N. C. 536, holding that upon the case signed by the judge there arises the presumption of regularity, which must be rebutted.

Extension of time for making case.— In Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Ft. Scott, 15 Kan. 435, it was held that, under the statute allowing three days after the time fixed for making and serving a case for the suggestion

b. Manner of Making Amendments. It is the duty of the appellee who proposes alterations in the case or statement served to do so either by writing his proposed amendments on the case itself or on a separate paper, with a designation of the page and line of the original case proposed to be altered, and a specification of each alteration proposed; and, if on a separate paper, he should mark distinctly on the original case or statement each place and page to which amendments are proposed.[95]

c. Effect of Failure to Serve Objections or Counter-Case. Where the case or statement on appeal is served in time, and no exceptions are taken thereto, nor any counter-case served in the required time, it will be settled as the case or statement on appeal.[96]

d. Waiver of Defects in Exceptions. Defects in exceptions to a proposed case or statement on appeal, or in the service thereof, may be either expressly or impliedly waived.[97]

5 Time For Settlement — a. In General. A case-made or statement of facts on appeal should be settled as soon after judgment or decree as possible,[98] and of amendments, an extension of time for making and serving a case does not take away the three days for such suggestion. Such latter time commences to run, not from the date of the actual service of the case-made, but from the expiration of the period of extension.

95. Tyng v. Marsh, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 465 (holding that it is not necessary, generally, to insert in extenso or any considerable portion of the stenographer's notes of the trial in the proposed amendments to the case, but that, where they are in possession of one of the parties, they may be referred to by the folio or page); Stuart v. Binsse, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 657 (holding that the settled practice in New York requires that the lines of the proposed case be numbered, and that the amendments should be proposed in detail); Milward v. Hallett, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 344.

Amendment by substitution.—When a case is made by one party, and intended to be amended by the other, the right to amend will not authorize a new case to be made by way of a substitution for the first. Stuart v. Binsse, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 657, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 616; Eagle v. Alner, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 332. Compare State v. King, 119 N. C. 910, 26 S. E. 261; Harris v. Carrington, 115 N. C. 187, 20 S. E. 452; Horne v. Smith, 105 N. C. 322, 11 S. E. 373, 18 Am. St. Rep. 903 (in which it was held that where appellee makes his objections to appellant's statement to the case on appeal by asking that a statement prepared by him be substituted, it is a sufficient compliance with Clark's Code Civ. Proc. N. C. (1900), § 550, which provides that appellee shall return the copy of appellant's case served on him "with his approval or specific amendments indorsed or attached"); State v. Gooch, 94 N. C. 982.

C. 961, 21 S. E. 409; State v. Arthur, 7 Wash. 358, 35 Pac. 120. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2514.

Default in service without laches.— In Arrington v. Arrington, 114 N. C. 115, 19 S. E. 145, appellee mailed his counter-case, with fees, to the sheriff of the county in which appellant resided, and the sheriff, in due course of mail, should have received it in time to serve, but did not take it from the post-office until too late, and it was held that there were no laches on appellee's part.

Failure of a case-made to state that no exceptions were made is not ground for dismissal where the case shows that it was served within the time granted by the court, and the certificate of the judge shows that the case was duly presented for settlement, both parties being present, and that no objection was made to the settlement. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Sullivan, (Kan. App. 1897) 48 Pac. 945.

Failure to return statement with exceptions.—Where the exceptions to appellant's case on appeal are served within the required time, appellant cannot complain that the statement of his case on appeal was not returned to him, but must have the case on appeal settled. Stevens v. Smathers, 123 N. C. 497, 31 S. E. 721; McDaniel v. Scurlock, 115 N. C. 295, 20 S. E. 451.

Where the counter-case was erroneously served by mistake on an attorney who did not appear for appellant, the cause was remanded, with leave to proceed in the proper manner. Russell v. Koonce, 102 N. C. 485, 9 S. E. 403.

97. Express waiver.— Where appellant's counsel telegraphs, after the time appellee is required to serve his counter-case, that he will, on his return home, accept service, he is not estopped to claim that the counter-case was not served in time; otherwise if before the expiration of the time prescribed for service. Watkins v. Raleigh, etc., Air Line R. Co., 116 N. C. 961, 21 S. E. 409.

Implied waiver.— By presenting exceptions to a proposed case on appeal to the judge for settlement, without objection, appellant waives defects therein. Byrd v. Bazemore, 122 N. C. 115, 28 S. E. 965; Asheville Woodworking Co. v. Southwick, 119 N. C. 611, 26 S. E. 253.

In Louisiana the statement must be made before the appeal is granted or the writ of error sued out;[99] and, where the statute fixes a specific time within which a case or statement on appeal shall be settled, a settlement after the expiration of such period is invalid.[1]

b. Extension of Time. In some jurisdictions, where a case or statement of facts on an appeal has not been settled in due time, an extension of time will be granted, upon good cause shown, in which to settle it,[2] and, although an order before the judgment is signed (Burke v. Erwin, 5 La. 320; Mitchel v. Jewel, 10 Mart. O. S. (La.) 645); but, where the parties agree thereto, the statement may be made after the judgment is signed (Jones v. Neville, 9 Rob. (La.) 478; Meeker v. Galpin, 4 Rob. (La.) 259).

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2516.

If settled and certified before the rendition of judgment a statement of facts will, in an equity case, be stricken from the record as insufficient, as there must be an affirmative showing that all the necessary facts are before the court. Bartlett v. Reichenecker, 6 Wash. 168, 32 Pac. 1062. See also Waldo v. Waldo, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 251; In re Prout, 18 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 270, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 160; Tilby v. Tilby, 3 Dem. Surr. (N. Y.) 258; Hartwell v. McMaster, 4 Redf. Surr. (N. Y.) 389.

Settlement in vacation.— A case-made may be settled and signed after the trial term, and in vacation, on the order of the trial court or judge. Shumaker v. O'Brien, 19 Kan. 476. See also Allen v. Ward, Dall. (Tex.) 371.

Waiver of question of jurisdiction.—Where a party appeared before the judge the day after the date fixed in the notice to settle a statement of facts, and objected to settlement only because the notice had not been given in time, he thereby waived the jurisdiction of the court to settle the statement on that date. McGlauflin v. Merriam, 7 Wash. 111, 34 Pac. 561.

Laws (1883), p. 59, § 3, relating to the manner of settling and certifying a statement of facts on appeal, is permissive, and does not affect the jurisdiction of the supreme court, and that such statement may be certified by the lower court after the appeal is perfected. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2517.

After dismissal of suspensive appeal.— If a statement be made before a devolutive appeal, taken any time within the year, it will be in time, though a previous suspensive appeal has been dismissed for insufficiency of the security. Jones v. Neville, 9 Rob. (La.) 478; Meeker v. Galpin, 4 Rob. (La.) 259.

After expiration of time to appeal.—A case or statement on appeal cannot be settled after the expiration of the time in which an appeal or writ of error may be prosecuted (Lee v. Tillotson, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 27); but where the time fixed by the court within which amendments to the case-made may be served extends beyond the time allowed by law in which appellate proceedings can be taken, the judge, at chambers, has authority so to modify the order as to enable the case to be settled in time to be filed in the appellate court (Files v. Baldwin, 9 Kan. App. 425, 58 Pac. 1039).

Before notice of appeal.—A statement of fact may be settled in advance of giving notice of appeal. Littlejohn v. Miller, 5 Wash. 399, 31 Pac. 758.

Before return to supreme court.— In Pratt v. Pioneer Press Co., 32 Minn. 217, 18 N. W. 836, 20 N. W. 87, it was held that a case may be made and settled at any time before the return is sent to the supreme court, notwithstanding that an appeal has in fact been taken.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2518.

Computation of time.—In Martin v. Sunset Telephone, etc., Co., 18 Wash. 260, 51 Pac. 376, it was held that the statute providing that, in computing time, the first day shall be excluded and the last included applies in computing the time to be fixed of a notice of an intended application to the court to settle the statement of facts on appeal.

Extension granted by appellate court.— In Bass v. Barton, 12 La. 437, it was held that, at any time before or at the argument of the cause, appellant may obtain further time and a mandamus to the judge below to complete the record.

fixing the time when a case-made or statement of facts shall be settled and signed should be observed, it is, nevertheless, within the power of the court or judge, thereafter and upon reasonable notice, to settle and sign the case or statement.[3]

e. Failure to Settle in Time. The effect, generally, of a failure on the part of appellant or plaintiff in error to have a case or statement on appeal settled in time is to prevent a review by the appellate court of any matters to a consideration of which a case or statement is necessary;[4] but where the failure to settle is caused by no fault of appellant,[5] or where he is misled by the adverse party,[6] or where the failure is caused through a bona fide mistake,[7] it may be excused, and relief granted.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," §§ 2523, 2524.

Notice to all defendants in error.— Where plaintiff sued several defendants for specific performance of a contract executed by them, and, on judgment for defendants, failed to give a part of them notice of the presenting and settling of a case-made, and did not serve the case-made on all the defendants, the petition in error was dismissed. Shepard v. Doty, (Kan. App. 1900) 61 Pac. 870. Where defendants have different interests and are represented by different counsel each set must be served with notice. Shober v. Wheeler, 119 N. C. 471, 26 S. E. 26.

Premature notice.—Where due notice of the time and place for settling a case-made has been given, the adverse party cannot ignore it although the time fixed may be earlier than the case could properly be settled. Gross v. Funk, 20 Kan. 655; Nelson v. Becker, 14 Kan. 509.

Presumption of regularity.— In Battersby v. Abbott, 9 Cal. 665, it was held that it is no objection to the statement that it did not affirmatively show that the settlement was upon proper notice, or in the presence of both parties. But compare Ward v. Tucker, 7 Wash. 399, 35 Pac. 126, 1086. See also Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Coverdale, 9 Kan. App. 651, 58 Pac. 1029 (where it was held that a appellee or defendant in error to propose amendments or a counter-case to the case or statement of facts served upon him, will obviate the necessity of a notice of settlement.[9]

b. Time of Notice. Where a time is fixed by law within which the notice of settlement shall be served, such limitation must be observed.[10]

c. Service of Notice. Notice of the time and place of settlement should be served in the mode prescribed by statute for the service of notices generally.[11]

d. Sufficiency of Notice. A notice of settlement should clearly show the object of the notice, and specify the time and place of application with certainty.[12]

e. Failure to Give Notice. A case or statement of facts on appeal cannot be considered by the appellate court where no notice of settlement has been given to the opposite party, or where such notice has not been given in the required time.[13] finding, made and entered in the case-made by the judge while settling and signing such case, showing that notice has been given of the application for settlement, is sufficient, prima facie, to prove the fact that such notice was given); Attica State Bank v. Benson, 8 Kan. App. 566, 54 Pac. 1037.

Expiration of term of judge.—Where the person who presided at a trial has ceased to be a judge, the notice to settle the statement of facts should be that it will be settled before the court wherein the action is pending, and when the case is brought on for hearing it will be continued until a judge qualified to act is present. Watt v. O'Brien, 6 Wash. 415, 33 Pac. 969.

In North Carolina, by statute [Clark's Code Civ. Proc. N. C. (1900), § 550], the trial judge, upon disagreement of counsel, settles the case although he has gone out of office. Ritter v. Grimm, 114 N. C. 373, 19 S. E. 239.

In North Carolina it has been held that when appellant's counsel, on receipt of appellee's case, sends the papers to the judge to settle without any "request" as required by Clark's Code Civ. Proc. N. C. (1900), § 550, to fix a time and place for settling the case, the judge is not required to give him notice. Walker v. Scott, 106 N. C. 56, 11 S. E. 364. See also State v. Debnam, 98 N. Notice before judgment.—A statement of facts settled, with the knowledge of all parties, after the rendition of judgment, will not be stricken from the record because the notice for application for settlement was given before the rendition of judgment. Phillips v. Port Townsend Lodge No. 6, F. & A. M., 8 Wash. 529, 36 Pac. 476.

Before notice of appeal — Under Wash. Laws (1883), p. 59, § 3, requiring notice of a settlement of a statement of facts to be given within thirty days after rendition of judgment, and section 5, providing that notice of appeal may be given within six months after the rendition of judgment, it has been held that notice of settlement of facts may precede notice of appeal. King County v. Hill, 1 Wash. 63, 23 Pac. 926.

Time computed from filing of judgment.—Under a statute requiring that notice of a settlement of a statement of facts shall be made within thirty days after rendition of judgment, it has been held that a notice to settle given twenty-one days after judgment has been filed was in time, though not given until thirty-three days after the date of the judgment and the filing of the findings of fact. McGlauflin v. Merriam, 7 Wash. 111, 34 Pac. 561.

11. McCurdy v. Bowman, 27 Mich. 214 (in which service upon the party himself, instead of upon his solicitor, he being a solicitor of the court and having taken part in the trial of the cause, was held sufficient); Bowen v. Cain, 7 Wash. 469, 35 Pac. 369 (in which notice mailed to an adverse party residing in the same town was held insufficient, there being no statutory provision for serving notices by mail where both parties live in the same town).

See, generally, NOTICES.

Denial of motion to compel acceptance.—The denial of a motion to require an attorney to accept service of a case and exceptions is proper where he has never refused to receive them when properly served, and has merely neglected to reply to a letter asking him to accept service. A notice fixing Sunday as the day for settling a statement of facts on appeal is void, and subsequent orders of the judge extending the time for settling the case, based on such notice, are without authority. Cadwell v. North Yakima First Nat. Bank, 3 Wash. 188, 28 Pac. 365.

f. Waiver of Notice. The appellee or defendant in error may, either expressly or by implication, waive notice of settlement or defects therein.[14]

7. Settlement and Signing — a. Necessity of. In some jurisdictions a case-made or statement of facts on appeal must be settled or approved by the court, while in others this is necessary only when counsel do not agree upon a case.[15]

b. By Whom Made — (I) In General. A case or statement of facts on appeal should be settled and signed by the judge who tried the cause.[16]

Waiver by appearance.— An objection that appellant's proposed statement of facts was filed and settled without notice to respondents is not well taken where the record discloses that such statement was filed in due time, and that respondents appeared and objected to its certification, as such appearance obviates the necessity for such notice. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," §§ 2530, 2531.

Settlement by lapse of time.— A case which becomes settled by lapse of time after the amendments are served, or by arrangements between the parties, must be drawn up, copied, and served at or before the notice of argument in the same manner as where it is settled by a judge. Jackson v. Harrington, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 537.

Counsel have a right to be heard in settling a case before a judge. Root v. King, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 569.

In New York, on an appeal to the court of appeals from an intermediate court, a case must be prepared and settled by or under the direction of such court, and annexed to the judgment-roll. The case upon which the judgment was rendered should not be transmitted to the court of appeals. N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1539; People v. Featherly, (N. Y. 1892) 30 N. E. 48; Cowenhoven v. Ball, 118 N. Y. 231, 23 N. E. 470, 28 N. Y. St. 870; Jaycox v. Cameron, 49 N. Y. 645; Essex County Bank v. Russell, 29 N. Y. 673; Purchase v. Matteson, 25 N. Review of referee's decision.— In Johnson v. Whitlock, 13 N. Y. 344, it was held that, in the absence of any agreement between the parties and of any different settlement by the supreme court, the review of a referee's decision by the court of appeals must be on the same case on which the review was had at general term.

Where stipulated against.— A stipulation by the parties, or their counsel, that the case or statement of facts is correct, and that it may be filed and considered without the approval of the trial judge, will not dispense with such approval. Hodgden v. Ellsworth County, 10 Kan. 637; Abrahams v. Sheehan, 27 Minn. 401, 7 N. W. 822; Watson v. Duncan, 29 Misc. (N. Y.) 447, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 755; Johnson v. Blount, 48 Tex. 38.

(II) On Appeal From Referees. Where a referee has heard and decided the case, and an appeal is taken from the judgment, the case or statement on appeal should be settled by the referee, and not by the judge of the court.[17]

(III) Effect of Termination of Office—(A) Settlement by Trial Judge. In some jurisdictions, upon the expiration or other termination of a judge's term of office, a case or statement of facts on appeal must, nevertheless, be settled and signed by him.[18]

(B) Settlement by Successor. In other jurisdictions, the power to settle and sign the case or statement must be exercised by the successor in office of the trial judge.[19]

(C) Grant of New Trial. In North Carolina, if a judge dies before preparing a case on appeal, a new trial will be awarded unless the parties agree upon a statement of the case.[20]

After removal from district.— In Washington, under section 2137 of the code, providing that the judge of one district may sit in any other when requested by the judge of the latter, it has been held that the judge before whom a trial has been had can make a settlement of the statement of facts for appeal after removing from the district where he tried the case. King County v. Hill, 1 Wash. 63, 23 Pac. 926.

From two or more referees.— Where, on appeal from the determination of three referees, a case was settled by two of the referees in the absence of a third, and without notice to him, such proceeding was held irregular, and the case sent back for resettlement. Fielden v. Lahens, 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 48.

Where referee is interested — In Leonard v. Mulry, 93 N. Y. 392, it was held that where plaintiff had given the referee in the cause a lien on the judgment for his fees, both plaintiff and the referee knowing that defendant had appealed, the referee was disqualified from settling the case.

In Kansas, if the term of the trial judge expires before the time fixed for making and serving a case, he should settle the same as if his term had not expired; and, if his term expires after the time fixed for making and serving a case, yet if the time for settling a case had been fixed before the expiration of his term, which time did not expire until after the expiration of his term, he should also settle the case. Motions for new trial before successor.— Where the successor of a judge who tried an action hears and denies the motion for a new trial made upon the record and minutes of the court, the subsequent statement on appeal from the order denying the motion should be settled by the judge who made the order, and not by his predecessor who tried the action. Cummings v. Conlan, 66 Cal. 403, 5 Pac. 796, 903.

Death of judge.—A case-made, being purely the creation of statute, cannot be settled or signed except as provided for therein; and where the statute does not provide for the signing and settlement of a case-made on the decease of the judge who tried the cause, it cannot be settled and signed by the latter's successor. Parrault v. Marsant, 9 Kan. App. 419, 58 Pac. 1027; Taylor v. Simmons, 116 N. C. 70, 20 S. E. 961; Heath v. Lancaster, 116 N. C. 69, 20 S. E. 962. Compare Hasard v. Conklin, 1 N. Y. C. 108.

If there was laches on part of appellant

c. Place of Settlement. A case or statement on appeal is not jurisdictional, and it seems that it may be settled without the jurisdiction of the judge who tried the case.[21]

d. Adjournment of Settlement. The settlement of a statement of facts may be adjourned to another time or place specified in the order of the court, or in a stipulation between the parties.[22]

e. Mode of Determining Contents. While a case or statement of facts on appeal should properly be settled upon the minutes and recollection of the trial judge,[23] yet, if necessary, means may be taken to ascertain the truth by the examination of witnesses or other appropriate modes, before making up the appeal papers.[24]

f. Adopting and Incorporating Amendments or Counter-Case — (I) Adopting and Incorporating Amendments. Where there are amendments to a proposed case or statement of facts on appeal, the draft prepared and the amendments allowed should be incorporated into one document. In their separate form they do not constitute such a statement as will be noticed on appeal.[25]

(II) Adoption of Counter-Case. Where appellee returns a counter-case as a statement of his exceptions to appellant's case, and such counter-case is adopted by the court, it constitutes the case on appeal.[26]

(III) Disallowed Amendments. Where the court below disallows proposed amendments to a case or statement of facts, the controversy with regard to their

C. 358, 12 S. E. 193. Compare Weems v. McDavitt, 49 Kan. 260, 30 Pac. 481, in which it was held that amendments to a case-made may be attached to and made a part thereof as exhibits, and, when so certified to by the trial judge, become a part of the record.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2538.

Duty of court in absence of appellee's attorney.— It is the duty of the trial judge to consider and allow, disallow, or modify amendments to the case proposed by appellant's attorney, and prepared and served by respondent's attorney, whether the latter appears at the time and place of submitting the case and amendments for settlement or not. Chalk v. Patterson, 4 S. C. 98.

Amendments striking out exceptions.— In Canzi v. Conner, 4 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 148, it was held that on a settlement of a case on appeal, an amendment striking out an exception which did not appear upon the judge's minutes or stenographer's notes was properly allowed, though appellant's counsel made affidavit that it was taken at the trial.

Notice of adoption.—It is not necessary for appellant or plaintiff in error to give notice of the adoption of amendments, the absence of notice being equivalent to an admission that they are to be allowed, and the subsequent settlement of the statement, by adoption of the amendments by the judge, is a substantial compliance with statutory requirements. Black v. Hilliker, 130 Cal. 190, 62 Pac. 481.

26. Harris v. Carrington, 115 N. C. 187, 20 S. E. 452.

Laches of appellant.—Where, after appellee has duly objected to appellant's case on appeal, there has been an unexplained delay of seven months by appellant in applying to the trial judge for a settlement of the case, and the judge is unable to distinctly remember what took place at the trial, the supreme court will take appellee's case as the case on appeal, Clark's Code Civ. Proc. N. C. (1900), § 550, providing that, where appellee has duly filed objections to appellant's case, appellant shall "immediately" request the trial judge to fix a time for settling the case. Simmons v. Andrews, 106 N. C. 201, 10 S. E. 1052. See also Stevens v. Smathers, 123 N. C. 497, 31 S. E. 721. Similarly, where appellant failed to apply to the court to settle the case, appellant's statement, as amended by appellee's exceptions, may be taken as the case on appeal. McDaniel v. Scurlock, 115 N. C. 295, 20 S. E. 451.

subject-matter is ended, and they should not be added to the case or statement on appeal.[27]

g. Formality Required. Statements of proceedings and copies of evidence intended to be incorporated in a case-made or statement of facts on appeal should precede the order of the judge settling the case, so as to make it manifest that they have been considered and allowed by him as parts of the record for review;[28] but mere informalities that can in no wise adversely affect the rights of the parties will not invalidate the case or statement.[29]

h. Signature of Judge. A case or statement of facts on appeal must be signed by the judge who settles it.[30]

i. Amendment, Correction, or Setting Aside Settlement — (I) At Time of Settlement. The trial judge, in settling a case-made or statement of facts on appeal, has the power, of his own motion or at the suggestion of either party, and before signing such case-made or statement of facts, to make such alterations in it, and such erasures and additions, as may be necessary to make it conform to the truth.[31]

(II) After Settlement — (A) By Court. In some jurisdictions the power of the court to amend, correct, or set aside the settlement of a case or statement of facts after signing is denied,[32] while in others it is allowed.[33]

27. The reason being that the appellate court cannot consider the reason actuating a judge in his allowance or disallowance of such amendment. Presumption of regularity.—"Where a case for the supreme court is made and served upon the defendant within proper time, and is settled and signed by the judge of the district court, and properly attached and filed by the clerk, it will be presumed, in the absence of anything to the contrary, that the case was settled in accordance with the requirements of the law." Striking out evidence.— In settling a case, the trial judge cannot strike out testimony set forth in the case drawn up by the party making the same, and not proposed to be stricken out by the adverse party in the amendments served by him. Denison v. Seymour, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 103. See also Healey v. Terry, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 321, 26 N. Y. St. 929 (in which it was held that it was error for the trial judge to arbitrarily strike from appellant's exhibit any words which form a part of it); Becker v. Third Ave. R. Co., 46 N. Y. Suppl. 503. But compare Watson v. Duncan, 29 Misc. (N. Y.) 447, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 755, where it was held that it is the duty of the trial judge to refuse to settle a case which contains evidence not material to the question to be raised.

Insertion of irrelevant matters.— In Doyle v. McLeod, 4 Wash. 732, 31 Pac. 96, it was held that where the statement contains all matters material to the appeal, the subsequent addition and settlement of matters irrelevant thereto does not afford grounds for striking out the statement.

The court, however, distinctly denied the general power of a judge to amend a case-made after settlement.

(B) By Parties. No change can be made in a case or statement of facts by any of the parties after it has been settled and signed by the judge who tried the case.[34]

8. RESETTLEMENT — a. In General. Where there are defects or omissions in the case or statement on appeal as settled, in some jurisdictions, a motion lies to the court or judge by whom it was settled for correction and resettlement[35] notwithstanding the case is pending in the appellate court.[36]

b. Time For Resettlement. A motion for a resettlement of a case or statement on appeal is too late if made after argument and decision in the appellate court.[37]

c. Appeal From Order Denying. Orders granting or refusing motions for a resettlement are appealable, but such appeals are not regarded with favor, and the decision of the trial judge is conclusive upon the appellate tribunal, except in cases where it is apparent that there has been a denial of a substantial right.[38]

Additional exceptions.—In Correll v. Georgia Constr., etc., Co., 35 S. C. 593, 14 S. E. 65, it was held that appellant may file additional exceptions where they become necessary by reason of a change allowed in the case-settled.

Correction of certificate.— Under Wash. Laws (1893), c. 60, §§ 9, 11, it has been held that while the judge may correct or supplement his certificate according to the facts at any time before an appeal is made, he can correct it only in accordance with the facts as shown by the statement at the time of settlement, and he cannot correct the statement and then make his certificate conform to the facts of the new statement. Suppl. 46; Newman v. Dodson, 61 Tex. 91. Compare Boggess v. Harris, 90 Tex. 476, 39 S. W. 565, in which it was held that an unauthorized interlineation by appellant's attorney, without the knowledge of appellant, would not defeat appellant's right to have the case reviewed on the real record made below.

Alteration after service.— In Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Ditmars, (Kan. App. 1895) 42 Pac. 933, it was held that where a case-made is served on, and acknowledged by, the opposite party, a statement of something which occurred subsequent to said service cannot be made a part of the legal case-made, since such statement has not been served upon the opposite party.

By referee.— Where a case on appeal has been settled by the referee before the trial was had, the court cannot resettle the case, but may send it back to the referee for that purpose, with proper instructions. Jaeger v. Koenig, 28 Misc. (N. Y.) 436, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 182; Cheever v. Brown, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 918, 17 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 51. And see the opinion of Bartlett, J., in Abbott v. Thomas [quoted in Cheever v. Brown, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 918, 17 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 51].

Remandment for settlement.— In Jackson v. Miller, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 38, it was held that, unless there was a very plain mistake, a case would not be remanded for settlement as to the evidence where it has been settled by the lower court according to the practice of the court.

36. It is not necessary to apply first to the appellate court to have the cause remitted to the court below before making an application for resettlement. Witbeck v. Waine, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 433. See also Luyster v. Sniffin, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 250; Rew v. Barker, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 408, 14 Am. Dec. 515. But see Adams v. Bush, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 118.

9. Proceedings to Compel Settlement. Mandamus is the appropriate remedy to compel a judge to settle and sign a case or statement of facts on appeal, where he wrongfully and wilfully refuses and neglects to do so.[39] But a judge will not be compelled by mandamus or other proceedings to settle a case or statement on appeal where the applicant has been guilty of laches;[40] nor will an appellant, who is apprised of the trial judge's refusal to prepare a case or statement of facts, and who fails to apply for a mandamus to compel the judge to do so, be entitled to a reversal for the failure of the judge to discharge his statutory duty.[41]

10. Filing After Settlement — a. In General. After settlement, a case or statement on appeal must be filed in the lower court,[42] and a requirement, whether by statute or by rule of court, that it shall be filed within a certain time after settlement, must be complied with.[43]

b. Failure to File. A case or statement of facts on appeal which is not filed within the required time after settlement cannot be considered by the appellate court.[44]

C. 294, in which a writ of certiorari was asked to compel a judge to settle a case and certify the same to the supreme court. It did not appear that the neglect of the judge below was due to a wilful violation of his duty, and the court refused to grant the writ, but granted a writ of certiorari directed to the clerk below, commanding him to certify the case settled upon appeal when, and as soon as, the judge should file the same, and to certify a copy of its opinion to the judge whose duty it was to settle the case. It is to be noted, however, that the supreme court refused to say that certiorari was the proper remedy applicable to compel a judge to settle a case where he wilfully refuses to do so, saying that they did not deem it necessary to settle the point under the circumstances. See also Peebles v. Braswell, 107 N. C. 68, 12 S. E. 44, in which case also a certiorari was applied for, but refused because there was no affidavit negativing laches on the part of appellant.

See, generally, Mandamus.

Contents of petition.— In Morgan v. Fleming, 24 W. Va. 186, it was held that the facts or evidence which it was alleged the court below erroneously refused to certify should be set forth in the petition for mandamus, or otherwise brought before the appellate court.

Showing as to jurisdiction.— A rule taken against the judge of a lower court, to compel him to show cause why he should not furnish a statement of facts to be used in a suit on appeal, will be dismissed unless it is shown that the suit is within the appellate jurisdiction of the court. This will not be inferred from the fact that the judge below had granted an appeal. State v. Judge, 13 La. Ann. 485.

After time limited by statute.— The granting or refusing of a motion for leave to propose and settle a case after the time limited by the statute is within the discretion of the trial court, and nothing but a clear abuse of such discretion will justify the interference of the appellate court. State v. Powers, 69 Minn. 429, 72 N. W. 705.

Motion to resettle in city court of New York. A motion to compel a referee, before whom a case was tried, to resettle the case on appeal should be made at the general, and not the special, term of the city court. Jaeger v. Koenig, 28 Misc. (N. Y.) 436, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 182.

11. PRINTING. Non-compliance with a rule of court requiring that cases and statements of facts on appeal should be printed will subject appellant to a dismissal of his appeal.[45]

12. AGREED CASE OR STATEMENT. In some jurisdictions it is held that an appeal may be prosecuted upon a case or statement of facts agreed upon,[46] and

Evidence as to time of filing.—Where the indorsements of the clerk of the trial court show that the statement of facts was filed within the time required, but that it was not received by him until after the expiration of such time, the reviewing court will consider an affidavit of appellant's attorney, and a certificate by the clerk attached thereto as an exhibit filed in the case, for the purpose of determining whether such statement of facts was filed in time. Hilburn v. Preston, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 32 S. W. 702.

Excuse for failure.— In Simonds v. Marco, 38 S. C. 554, 16 S. E. 830, it was held that failure to file a case for appeal within ten days after settlement was not excused, under S. C. Code Civ. Proc. § 349, allowing relief on the ground of mistake or inadvertence, or misapprehension on the part of counsel.

In Texas it is provided by statute [1 Sayles' Civ. Stat. Tex. art. 1379*a*], that when a statement of facts is filed after time, and the party filing it shows that he used due diligence and that the delay resulted from causes beyond his control, the court shall allow said statement as part of the record. Under this statute it was held that an affidavit that the statement was presented before adjournment to the judge, who agreed to approve and file it, but failed to do so, showed no sufficient diligence on the part of appellant. Worlev v. McIntire, (Tex. Civ. App. 1893) 23 S. W. 996.

Statement prepared by judge.— 1 Sayles' Civ. Stat. Tex. art. 1379*a*, does not apply where the statement of facts is prepared by the judge after failure of the parties to agree on such statement, and the judge, through no fault of appellant, fails to file it within proper time. A mere colorable compliance with a rule requiring the printing of a case on appeal will be treated as none at all, and the appeal will be dismissed. Witt v. Long, 93 N. C. 388.

Time of printing.— While it is better and more convenient to have the record printed as soon as the case is docketed in the appellate court, yet it is a compliance with the rule if the record is printed when the case is called in its order for argument. Witt v. Long, 93 N. C. 388.

Must contain all facts.— An agreed statement of facts, in order to enable the case to be heard thereon, must cover all the facts, and not leave some of them still controverted. Ford v. Cameron, 19 Mo. App. 467.

An agreed statement presenting essentially different facts from those presented to the court below, will not be considered by the appellate court. Crawford v. Kelly, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 697.

Necessary parties.— In Missouri, it is not necessary that all parties to an action should agree upon and join in the agreed case provided by Mo. Supreme Ct. Rules, No. 20, so as to place the appeal properly before that court, but only those actually appealing. Kansas City v. Hill, 80 Mo. 523.

Amendments.— An agreed case is not to be amended without a clear showing of mistake or fault. Hutchinson v. Bours, 13 Cal. 50.

Matters included.—An agreed case, under the Texas statute, should contain a brief statement of the case and of the facts proven, with or without copies of any of the proceedings, signed by the parties[47] and approved by the judge before whom the proceedings were had.[48]

13. CERTIFICATES OF EVIDENCE — a. In General. Certificates of evidence, like cases made and statements of facts, are of statutory origin, and like them, must be procured and incorporated in the record in compliance with the requirements of the statutes creating them.[49]

b. Contents. A certificate of evidence should contain all the evidence introduced at the trial below.[50]

c. Time of Making and Filing. A certificate of evidence must be made and filed within the time specified by statute, or it will not be considered by the appellate court.[51]

In chancery causes, the sole office or function of a certificate of evidence is to truly set forth the evidence offered, rejected, received, and considered on the hearing, and any attempt to make it subserve the purpose of preserving a motion and order thereon for the appellate court is inoperative. Colehour v. Roby, 88 Ill. App. 478.

It is the duty of the court, in a chancery case in which oral evidence is admitted, to see that such evidence is, in some mode, incorporated into the record, and, where the judge cannot remember such evidence, he has the right to send for and reëxamine the witnesses to determine the facts to be incorporated in his certificate. People v. Williams, 91 Ill. 87. Compare Saratoga European Hotel, etc., Co. v. Mossler, 76 Ill. App. 688, in which it was held that a certificate of evidence, made solely upon the recollection of the judge as to what occurred at a prior term, will not be considered by a reviewing court, if objected to in apt time by either party.

It is the duty of the prevailing party to preserve what other evidence there may be in some appropriate manner, and his failure to do so estops him from complaining that the certificate of evidence does not contain all the evidence heard in the cause. John V. Farwell Co. v. Patterson, 76 Ill. App. 601.

In Pennsylvania, under the act of Feb. 24, 1806, the judge who delivers the opinion of the court is required, on request of either party, to reduce his opinion, and the reasons therefor, to writing, but cannot be compelled to write out the evidence or send up his notes. Enlargement of extended time.— Leave to file a certificate of evidence having been granted at the term at which the final decree was rendered, and the time therefor having been extended to a subsequent term, such time may, at such subsequent term, be extended, without notice, to a later day in the term. Railway Pass., etc., Conductors' Mut. Aid, etc., Assoc. v. Leonard, 166 Ill. 154, 46 N. E. 756 [reversing 62 Ill. App. 477].

Order filing nunc pro tunc.— In Callies v. Callies, 91 Ill. App. 305, complainant prepared and presented to the chancellor a certificate of the evidence at the term of court at which the decree had been rendered, and

d. By Whom Made. A certificate of evidence should, as a rule, be made by the judge before whom the case was tried.[52]

e. Proceedings to Compel Certification. Where the judge below refuses to make a certificate of evidence mandamus lies to compel him.[53]

14. Supplemental Case, Statement, or Certificate. A case-made, statement of facts, or certificate of evidence imports absolute verity, and an appellate court will not consider assignments of error founded upon a supplemental case, statement, or certificate.[54]

15. Parties Bound by Case or Statement. Only those parties to a suit or action who are duly served with notice, or who, either personally or by their attorneys, participate in the settlement and signing of a case or statement of facts on appeal, will be bound by such case or statement.[55]

the chancellor made a note on it that it was so presented. The certificate was not filed, however, until a subsequent term, and it was held that the chancellor might properly enter an order that the same be filed nunc pro tunc as of the day it had been presented to him.

Certification prevented by judge's absence.—Where an order, granting an appeal in a chancery suit, gives thirty days to the party to prepare a certificate of the evidence and present it to the judge for signature, if, before the expiration of such time, the judge leaves the state without signing the same the party will have the right to have the same signed after the return of the judge, and after the expiration of the time originally fixed, when he is not chargeable with laches, and the appellate court will grant a writ of mandamus to compel the judge to sign a proper certificate. People v. Williams, 91 Ill. 87.

Estoppel.— One who stipulates that a certificate of evidence shall be incorporated in the transcript in lieu of a copy for the purpose of appeal, after the time allowed the other party for filing the certificate has expired, is estopped from objecting that it was not filed within the time allowed by the court therefor. After expiration of term of office.— Under Iowa Code (1873), § 2742, requiring evidence on appeal in equitable actions to be certified by the judge, such certificate, if made by the judge after the expiration of his term of office, is not sufficient. Teague v. Fortsch, 98 Iowa 92, 66 N. W. 1056; Burnett v. Loughridge, 87 Iowa 324, 54 N. W. 238. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2569.

Where a change of judges is made after the partial trial of a case, and on the second hearing the notes of the reporter, taken on the first hearing, are used as correctly presenting the evidence, the certificate of the incoming judge is alone of any value as to what constituted the evidence on which he tried the case. Conflicting evidence.— Where evidence is conflicting the court may refuse to certify facts proved, but must certify the evidence if required. Powell v. Tarry, 77 Va. 250.

Reviewable error.— In Powell v. Tarry, 77 Va. 250, it was held that, while mandamus will lie to compel a judge to certify the evidence when he shall refuse to do so, his refusal is error, of which any party injured may complain to the appellate court, and for which an appellate court will reverse the judgment of the court below.

Mere lapse of memory is no reason for a trial judge to absolutely refuse to certify the evidence in a case preparatory to an appeal. Dillard v. Dunlop, 83 Va. 755, 3 S. E. 383.

b. Who Must Make. The duty of making proper abstracts of record devolves upon plaintiff in error or appellant.[59]

3. Scope and Sufficiency — a. Formal Requisites[60] — (i) Entitling. A paper relied upon as an abstract will not be disregarded merely because it is not entitled as an abstract, and contains no averment that it is an abstract.[61]

(ii) Index. It is usually required that the abstract shall be indexed, and a failure to comply with such requirement has been held ground for dismissal.[62]

b. Matters Included — (i) In General. With regard to the matters properly included in an abstract of record it may be stated, as a general rule, that such An abstract not required by rule or statute will be stricken out. Tacoma v. Tacoma Light, etc., Co., 16 Wash. 288, 47 Pac. 738.

An appeal, perfected before the passage of a statute providing for an abstract, is not affected by such statute. Buddee v. Spangler, 12 Colo. 216, 20 Pac. 760.

Recitals in a bill of exceptions will not supply the record proper required by Mo. Supreme Ct. Rules, No. 13 [16 S. W. vi] in an abstract. Walser v. Wear, 128 Mo. 652, 31 S. W. 37.

For "statement of the case" as substitute for abstract see Crosby v. Clary, 43 Mo. App. 222.

Unauthorized abstract of evidence disregarded.— A paper in the transcript on appeal which is certified as containing "an abstract of the evidence given on the hearing" is not authorized by law, and will not be noticed by the appellate court. Matter of Tanner, 70 Cal. 22, 11 Pac. 326.

Requirements as to abstracts should not be waived or dispensed with either by the court or the parties. Spain v. Thomas, 49 Ill. App. 249; Thuet v. Strong, 7 N. D. 565, 75 N. W. 922; Spencer v. McMaster, 3 Wyo. 105, 3 Pac. 798.

Where there are several defendants and all appeal, and one of them furnishes a complete abstract, it has been held that the other appellants are not required to furnish an abstract also. Badger Lumber Co. v. Stepp, 157 Mo. 366, 57 S. W. 1059.

60. Showing name of presiding trial judge. —In Iowa it is provided by the supreme court rules that the abstract shall show the name of the judge who presided at the trial. Pitkin v. Peet, 96 Iowa 748, 64 N. W. 793. It is sufficient if the name of the trial judge appear in any part of the abstract. Pitkin v. Peet, 96 Iowa 748, 64 N. W. 793. Where such name does not appear, the decision will be withheld until an amended or additional abstract is filed which complies with the rule. Kissinger v. Council Bluffs, 72 Iowa 471, 34 N. W. 215. See, however, Wilson v. Russell, 73 Iowa 395, 35 N. W. 492, in which it was held that the fact that an appellant's abstract incorrectly designates the judge making the certificate of the evidence can have no effect in the determination of the appeal.

Statement that abstract is complete.— According to some decisions an abstract cannot be considered which does not state that it is full and complete, its correctness being denied by the appellee. Avery Planter Co. v. Martz, 96 Iowa 747, 65 N. W. 989. See also State v. Hogan, 81 Iowa 747, 45 N. W. 903, in which it was held that where the abstract on appeal contains the certificate of the judge, or statement in the bill of exceptions that all the evidence, proceedings, and rulings in the case are therein set out or referred to in the bill of exceptions, but it is not alleged or shown that it contains an abstract of all the record, the case cannot be reviewed by the supreme court. But, when the abstract purports to contain a copy of a paper which is a part of the record, it is not necessary for the abstract to state that what it sets out is the whole of the paper. Baird v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 61 Iowa 359, 13 N. W. 731, 16 N. W. 207.

Enumeration of titles of other cases.—An appeal will not be dismissed because of the enumeration, in appellant's abstract, of the titles of numerous other cases intended to be submitted with the case of which a record is presented, where there is no showing of prejudice to appellee, and the titles are so separated as to avoid confusion. Searles v. Lux, 86 Iowa 61, 52 N. W. 327; Searles v. Haag, 85 Iowa 754, 52 N. W. 328.

62. Staude v. Schumacher, 187 Ill. 187, 58 N. E. 318; State v. Abegglen, (Iowa 1896) 69 N. W. 256. Murrell v. McGuigan, 148 Mo. 334, 49 S. W. 984; Ramsdell v. Duxberry, (S. D. 1901) 85 N. W. 221.

Excuse for failure to index.— Where appellant has shown a sufficient excuse for his failure to annex an index to the original abstract, and, before the hearing, served and filed abstracts properly indexed, the motion to strike out the abstract will be denied. Ramsdell v. Duxberry, (S. D. 1901) 85 N. W. 221.

Marginal references to record.— In Illinois it is provided by a rule of court that the abstract of the record shall refer, by numerals on the margin, to appropriate pages of the record. Easterday v. Cutting, 77 Ill. App. 601; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Creighton, 53 Ill. App. 45 (holding that the absence of marginal references renders an abstract imperfect, but constitutes no ground for an affirmance); Lake v. Lower, 30 Ill. App. 500.

abstract should be literally an abstract, or abridgment, of the record, containing only so much thereof as is necessary to a full understanding of the questions presented for review.[63] It should be as brief as possible so long as all material matters are presented,[64] and an abstract which does not comply with this rule to a sufficient extent to obviate the necessity of a resort to the record is insufficient.[65] What-

App. 451, 46 Pac. 370.

Florida.— Williams v. Pitt, 38 Fla. 162, 20 So. 936 (holding that a mere list of the papers filed in the case, in chronological order, with a slight history of the proceedings and allusions to contents of the papers filed, and reference to the transcript of the record, is insufficient); Allen v. Lewis, 38 Fla. 115, 20 So. 821 (holding that counsel must not state conclusions of the legal effect of the transcript, but facts must be given, so that the opposite party may admit them or question their correctness or fullness of statement); Poyntz v. Reynolds, 37 Fla. 533, 19 So. 649.

Illinois.— People v. Cook County, 180 Ill. 160, 54 N. E. 164; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Wolf, 137 Ill. 360, 27 N. E. 78; Bochner v. Automatic Time Stamp Co., 80 Ill. App. 27; Ellinger v. Caspary, 76 Ill. App. 523, holding that, where there is nothing in the abstract to show whether or not a case was properly placed upon the short-cause calendar, the appellate court will not search the record for information on the question.

W. 906; Sedgwick County v. Newton County, 144 Mo. 301, 46 S. W. 163; Ramsey v. Shannon, 140 Mo. 281, 41 S. W. 732; Ormiston v. Trumbo, 77 Mo. App. 310; Hanauer v. Bradley, etc., Co., 64 Mo. Utah.— Liter v. Ozokerite Min. Co., 7 Utah 487, 27 Pac. 690.

Wisconsin.— Butler v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 28 Wis. 487, holding that, under the rule requiring the printed case to contain a "brief abstract" of the return of the clerk, when the full phonographic report of the trial is printed the supreme court will not hear it read by counsel, and will not read it in the consultation room.

A good "abstract of the record" is an abbreviated but clear statement of every material thing in the pleadings, proof, instructions, affidavits, and entries in the order-book having a necessary and material bearing on the question presented, and embraced in the error assigned and relied on. Chapin v. Clapp, 29 Ind. 611.

Mere index has been repeatedly held to be insufficient as an abstract. Traeger v. Mutual Bldg., etc., Assoc., 189 Ill. 314, 59 N. Prolix abstract stricken from files.— "The rules of this court require that the abstract show only so much of the record as is necessary to determine the questions presented by the appeal. An objectionable abstract may be stricken from the files, and appellant is allowed sixty days in which to file an abstract in conformity with the rules." Seekell v. Norman, 76 Iowa 234, 40 N. A printed abstract of the record, filed in lieu of a transcript, under Mo. Rev. Stat. (1889), § 2253, must contain a statement of every matter sought to be reviewed on appeal and of all facts giving the appellate court jurisdiction of the cause, with the exception of the record entry of the judgment and the allowance of the appeal, which must be shown by the certificate of the clerk of the trial court. Wesby v. Bowers, 58 Mo. App. 419. See also Mo. Rev. Stat. (1889), § 2257; Doyle v. Turpin, 57 Mo. App. 84.

Necessity of setting out material parts in hæc verba.— Under Kansas City Ct. App. Rules, No. 15, the abstract must not be a mere statement of what the record is, but must set out in hæc verba the material parts. Matter of Redding, 31 Mo. App. 425.

ever is relied upon as error should be shown,[66] and an appellant's abstract will, as against him, be deemed sufficiently full and accurate to present all the errors on which he relies.[67] The abstract should not, however, contain matters wholly immaterial and unnecessary in aiding the reviewing court to determine the appeal.[68]

Nebraska.— Manning v. Freeman, 58 Nebr. 485, 78 N. W. 924.

Oregon.— Neppach v. Jones, 28 Oreg. 286, 39 Pac. 999, 42 Pac. 519, holding that the fact that appellant's abstract does not contain a formal statement of errors does not render it fatally defective where it sufficiently appears from the abstract that the alleged error upon which appellant relies is the sustaining of appellee's motion for such decree.

South Dakota.— Neilson v. Holstein, 13 S. D. 459, 83 N. W. 581.

Questions presented by argument of counsel will not be considered on appeal if the abstract does not contain the proceedings of the trial court on which the argument is based. Shideler v. Fisher, 13 Colo. App. 106, 57 Pac. 864.

Wisconsin.— Walker v. Gulliford, 36 Wis. 325; Austin v. Bacon, 28 Wis. 416, holding that the "printed case" should contain only an abstract of the testimony, and should omit all irrelevant and impertinent matter.

"Preserve everything material to the question to be decided, and omit everything else," is the important suggestion contained in S. D. Supreme Ct. Rules, No. 12. Bedford v. Kissick, 8 S. D. 586, 67 N. W. 609.

Wisconsin.— Walker v. Newton, 53 Wis. 336, 10 N. W. 436; Karasich v. Hasbrouck, 28 Wis. 569.

An abstract, consisting mostly of counsel's conclusions as to the substance and effect of the testimony of the several witnesses, interspersed with arguments as to its weight, and confidential side-remarks, does not call for the review of any questions of fact. Folger v. Bishop, 48 Ill. App. 526.

In narrative form.— Ill. App. Ct. Rules, No. 20, require the appellant to furnish a complete abstract of the record, in which shall appear the evidence in narrative form. Ferguson v. Chas. F. Adams Mfg. Co., 66 Ill. App. 154.

Mere reference to record insufficient.— So held in Florez v. Brown, 37 Ill. App. 270, construing Ill. App. Ct. Rules, No. 21.

When the abstract fails to show what evidence was admitted and what excluded the court will not determine whether or not appellant was prejudiced by admission or exclusion of evidence. Lucas v. Jones, 44 Iowa 298.

gation to resort to the record to ascertain what material evidence was introduced on the trial, but may rely on the abstract furnished by appellant.[70] The abstract should, as a rule, abbreviate and condense the evidence, and the whole of the testimony of witnesses should not be set forth by question and answer.[71]

(B) Statement That All Evidence Is Included. In Iowa, if the case is to be tried de novo, appellant's abstract should show that it is an abstract of all the evidence.[72] Such a statement will be sufficient if the opposite party and the

Where an instrument is objected to, so much of it as may be necessary to present the point must be inserted in the abstract on appeal. Lewis v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 5 S. D. 148, 58 N. W. 580. See also Western Electric Co. v. Parish, 83 Ill. App. 210. But see Moddie v. Breiland, 9 S. D. 506, 70 N. W. 637, to the effect that a note sued on by plaintiff, and excluded for alleged alterations, may be inspected on appeal, and it is not enough that it is a part of the bill of exceptions, but plaintiff should, in his abstract, print a facsimile, or allege that there was no alteration apparent on its face; and, if not denied by additional abstract, this contention would be conceded, or, if denied, the original could be examined.

Where error is assigned upon the overruling of a motion for a continuance by the court below, and the affidavit upon which the motion was based does not appear in the abstract, the court will not consider it. Coleman v. Wiley, 56 Ill. App. 466. In some states, no appeal lies for granting or refusing a continuance. Piedmont Wagon Co. v. Bostic, 118 N. C. 758, 24 S. E. 525.

In equity cases in Missouri the appellate court must have the entire evidence, and the case is tried on the abstract, and not on the transcript. Brand v. Cannon, 118 Mo. 595, 24 S. W. 434; Garrett v. Kansas City Coal Min. Co., 111 Mo. 279, 20 S. W. 25; Wilds v. German Ins. Co., 65 Mo. App. 78; Trimble v. Wollman, 62 Mo. App. 541. But see New Haven Water Co. v. Wallingford, 72 Conn. 293, 44 Atl. 235, wherein it is said that, in equity, only the portions of evidence bearing upon the points intended to be raised on appeal should be certified to the appellate court, when the evidence is voluminous and much of it has no bearing on such questions, and all having such bearing can be easily separated from the rest.

In Iowa it is held that, in an equitable action, a recital in an abstract that the judge certified the evidence, stating the date of such certificate, is sufficient, without setting out the certificate itself. Yant v. Harvey, 55 Iowa 421, 7 N. W. 675. In actions at law in cases involving less than one hundred dollars it is necessary that the question certified shall be set out in the abstract, and it must appear by the abstract that the trial judge certified that it was desirable to have the question involved determined by the supreme court. "Counsel for appellant should at least state that they have furnished an abstract of all the evidence. If this is not properly controverted, it will be accepted as true. If it is thus controverted, then appellant should furnish an abstract of the certificate of the clerk or judge, showing what evidence was used in the trial below, and if the abstract furnished covers it all, it will be accepted unless an amended or controverting abstract is furnished by the other party." Britton v. Central R. Co., 39 Iowa 390.

Unnecessary on appeal from decree entered in accordance with procedendo.— The supreme court will take notice of its decision, and the record of a case in which, on rehearing, it has entered a procedendo, so that an abstract on appeal from a decree entered in accordance with the procedendo need not set out the evidence in the case. Pitkin v. Peet, 96 Iowa 748, 64 N. W. 793.

Abstracts held sufficient without such statement.— An appeal will not be dismissed because the abstract does not purport to contain all the evidence in the case, when there are questions which may be determined without all the evidence being before the court. Balm v. Nunn, 63 Iowa 641, 19 N. W. 810. Nor will an abstract be stricken out because it does not contain all the evidence, where it contains everything essential to enable the court to pass on the errors urged. McDermott v. Abney, 106 Iowa 749, 77 N. W. 505. So where the trial court directed a verdict for defendant at the close of the evidence, a motion to strike plaintiff's abstract from the files, because it did not contain all the testimony of defendant's witnesses, could not be granted, since the evidence of plaintiff only was necessary to pass on the validity of the verdict.

court are fairly apprised that appellant claims that he has presented an abstract of all the evidence.[73] That this statement may not be strictly true is not material.[74]

(III) Recitals as to Error in Giving or Refusing Instructions. The instructions in regard to the giving or refusing of which error is assigned, should appear in the abstract,[75] and the record will not be referred to to supply the omission.[76]

(IV) Recitals as to Exceptions Taken and Bill of Exceptions Filed. The abstract should show the exceptions taken to the proceedings of the court below,[77] and if it does not show that any exceptions were taken the supreme court will not look into the record to see if any were taken.[78] So, it may be stated that, as a general rule, an abstract of record should show that the bill of Use of "testimony" for "evidence."— If it can be fairly inferred, however informal the language, that appellant claims that he has presented all the evidence in his abstract, though the word "testimony" be used instead, it will be assumed that he has done so, unless appellee sets out additional evidence. Miller v. Wolf, 63 Iowa 233, 18 N. W. 889.

Where appellant's abstract states that it is "a complete and correct abstract of the pleadings, evidence, and records in the cause," this is a sufficient claim that it contains all the evidence, and it will be so considered in the absence of an abstract by appellee showing additional evidence. Guinn v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 80 Iowa 346, 45 N. W. 880.

Statement in appellant's amended abstract.—An objection that appellant does not state in his original abstract that it contains all the evidence is without merit where such statement is made in an amended abstract, and is not denied. Thompson v. Anderson, 86 Iowa 703, 53 N. W. 418.

The certificate of the judge, reporter, or clerk, to the effect that all the evidence is preserved by the record, if printed with the abstract, will not, alone, show that the abstract contains all the evidence. The printing in the abstract of the motion for a new trial in which is inserted instructions given or refused by the court will not authorize a review of such instructions by the appellate court. Sufficient reservation of exceptions to rulings.— Where an abstract sets out the assignments of error, the ruling and objections thereto, and concludes: "Proper exceptions were reserved to each and all the foregoing assignments of error," there is a sufficient reservation of exceptions to the rulings, though the proper practice is to set out in the abstract the rulings, with objections and exceptions reserved, just as they appear in the bill of exceptions. Western R. Co. v. Williamson, 114 Ala. 131, 21 So. 827.

exceptions was signed and filed, properly and in due time;[79] but, according to some decisions, unless it appears affirmatively by appellant's abstract that no bill of exceptions was taken, the abstract will not be stricken from the files simply for want of a statement that it was taken,[80] and, in the absence of controversy, it will be presumed that such bill of exceptions was filed regularly and in due time.[81]

(v) Recitals as to Judgment or Order Appealed From. An abstract should show the rendition of a judgment or decree below,[82] and in whose favor rendered.[83]

(vi) Recitals as to Motion For New Trial. In some jurisdictions it is essential that an appellant's abstract should set forth his motion for a new trial, and should show that the same was filed within due time and that it was acted upon by the court.[84] Where, however, a party is given the right of appeal from the judgment on the judgment-roll, he may, if he deems proper, take it without bringing up in the abstract of the record the proceedings on the motion for new trial.[85]

(vii) Setting Out Pleadings. So much of the pleadings in a case as are necessary to a complete understanding of the question presented for decision should be set out in the abstract.[86]

4. COUNTER-ABSTRACT — a. Office and Functions — (I) IN GENERAL. An additional or counter-abstract is proper for the purpose of setting out other or additional matter not found in the appellant's abstract, and necessary to a full understanding of the questions presented to the court for decision.[90] So, also, where respondent desires to correct appellant's abstract by striking out matters that are not contained in the original record, an additional abstract is proper.[91]

(II) AS CURING DEFECTS AND WAIVING OBJECTIONS. Filing an additional abstract, setting out in full certain facts of record and certain evidence alleged filed to secure the payment of some thirty miners' claims, each being a duplicate of the others save as to names and amounts, stating two causes of action, submitted under a stipulation of the parties, was sufficient where it contained facts which enabled the court to decide the contested questions, and stated that all the other cases were precisely similar except the names of the parties and the amounts. not to be found with sufficient fullness in the original abstract, has been regarded as an admission on the part of respondent that the original abstract, together with the additional abstract, completely present the case.[92]

Kelly-Goodfellow Shoe Co. v. Vail, 84 Mo. App. 94.

Where, however, appellee in his abstract alleges that appellant's abstract does not contain all the evidence, and, after presenting additional evidence, states that both abstracts fail to present all the evidence, and appellant's abstract does not claim to present all the evidence, the supreme court must consider that all the evidence is not before it. Estoppel to urge that all evidence is not before the court.— When an appellee files an additional or counter-abstract setting out certain evidence which he alleges to be omitted from the abstract of appellant, without any claim or statement that, together, the two abstracts do not present all the evidence, he cannot be heard to urge that all the evidence is not before the appellate court. Certificate of clerk as substitute for additional abstract.— Though appellant's abstract is not denied by an additional abstract, yet where appellee files a certificate of the clerk that no translation of the shorthand notes has been filed in his office, that answers for an additional abstract and is to be regarded as an amended abstract showing the true condition of the record in that respect. Harrison v. Snair, 76 Iowa 558, 41 N. W. 315.

e. Effect of Failure to File. Where no additional abstract is filed denying the correctness or sufficiency of appellant's abstract, the latter must be taken as correct.[94] A denial of its correctness, made in the argument on appeal, is insufficient and will be disregarded.[95]

d. Filing Unnecessarily. Where an additional abstract filed by a respondent is clearly unnecessary and uncalled for, it may be stricken from the files on motion.[96]

e. Time of Filing and Serving. The time within which a respondent's additional abstract should be filed and served is usually fixed by rules of court.[97] Notwithstanding the fact that the time is thus fixed, it would seem to be the usual rule that an additional abstract, though not filed or served within the time fixed by the rule, will not be stricken out where it does not appear that the submission of the cause has been delayed or prejudice caused by such failure to comply with the rule.[98]

Though the original abstract fails to reproduce the evidence clearly, if counsel for appellee fails to file a further abstract the court will not resort to the transcript, but will confine itself to the abstract. Niles v. Kennan, 27 Colo. 502, 62 Pac. 360.

Iowa Supreme Ct. Rules, § 19, require the additional abstract to be served within ten days after the service of the abstract, but an additional abstract, when served after the expiration of the ten days, will not be struck out when the final submission of the cause is not delayed by permitting it to remain on file. Briggs v. Coffin, 91 Iowa 329, 59 N. W. 259.

f. Denial of Additional Abstract — (I) Necessity of — (A) In General. An additional abstract which is not denied by the opposite party will, as a general rule, be deemed to be admitted and to correctly present the contents of the record.[99]

(B) When Additional Abstract Is Not Justified by Record. The point that parts of an additional abstract are unwarranted by the record should be made, not by motion, but by a printed denial in the nature of a reply, which may, if necessary, contain a further abstract of the record in explanation of the denial.[1]

(II) Procedure Upon Denial. Where an additional or counter-abstract is properly denied by appellant, the court will resort to the transcript to determine the questions raised as to the contents of the record.[2]

The appellate court will disregard a second additional abstract, served by respondent without leave, after the expiration of the fifteen days specified in S. D. Supreme Ct. Rules, No. 15, and promptly returned by the adverse party for that reason. Sutton v. Consolidated Apex Min. Co., 12 S. D. 576, 82 N. W. 188.

D. 219, 56 N. W. 748. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2591 et seq.

Where the additional abstract of appellee merely presents additional matters and does not otherwise controvert the correctness of appellant's abstract, it will be assumed that appellee's additional abstract is correct, and that there is no controversy, unless appellant files a paper expressly notifying the court that there is a controversy and an issue raised for determination; but where appellant's abstract states that it is an abstract of all the evidence, and this is denied by the abstract of appellee, the case would be different, and it should not be assumed that the original was untrue. Burkhart v. Ball, 59 Iowa 629, 10 N. W. 260, 13 N. W. 666.

"This rule does not apply when the controversy arises as to a bill of exceptions. In a very large number of cases the appellant's abstract simply sets forth the testimony, without any statement that it has been properly preserved by bill of exceptions. If no question is made as to the proper filing of a bill of exceptions, we presume that the evidence has been properly preserved. If the appellee states in his abstract that no proper bill of exceptions has been filed, and moves to strike out the evidence on that ground, we do not take the statement as true, but we refer to the transcript for a determination of the question." Wilson v. Mt. Ayr First Presb. Church, 60 Iowa 112, 14 N. W. 136.

Denial in argument insufficient.— A denial of additional abstract in appellant's argument will not be considered on appeal. Kunz v. Young, 97 Iowa 597, 66 N. W. 879.

Necessity for denial being sustained by a certification of the record.— In Iowa corrections made by appellee in his additional abstract will be taken as true where appellant's denial is neither confessed nor sustained by a certification of the record. Mosgrove v. Zimbleman Coal Co., 110 Iowa 169, 81 N. W. 227, decided in accordance with Iowa Supreme Ct. Rules, § 22.

What amounts to a denial.— Appellee filed an additional abstract denying many statements in appellant's abstract, and then claimed that his additional abstract must be taken as true because not denied by appellant. But appellant filed a separate paper, called a statement, in which he stated that he had caused a transcript to be filed, and demanded that the costs of the transcript be taxed to appellee, and attached an index to the transcript, "by the aid of which all the material facts and points for the verification of the abstract can readily be found in the transcript." It was held that this was by implication a reaffirmance of the correctness of the abstract and required the court to resort to the transcript to determine the questions raised as to the contents of the record. Joy v. Bitzer, 77 Iowa 73, 41 N. W. 575, 3 L. R. A. 184.

Written objection.— Where the appeal is on the short method, and appellant wishes to controvert respondent's additional abstract, he should specify his objections thereto in writing and file them with the clerk of the appellate court, that he may order a certified copy of the original bill of exceptions. Badger Lumber Co. v. Stepp, 157 Mo. 366, 57 S. W. 1059; Patterson v. Gallimore, 79 Mo. App. 457; Badger v. Stephens, 61 Mo. App. 387.

1. Briggs v. Coffin, 91 Iowa 329, 59 N. W. 259.

A motion to strike out a bill of exceptions from an additional abstract filed by appellees, where appellant's abstract contains no bill of exceptions, will be refused where such bill of exceptions does not change the legal import of the record as presented by appellant's abstract. Garrett v. Bicklin, 78 Iowa 115, 42 N. W. 621.

A motion to strike out a portion of appellee's amended abstract, on the ground that it contains matter not contained in the transcript, will not be passed on if the original abstract sufficiently shows the fact intended to be shown by the amendment. Fowler v. Strawberry Hill, 74 Iowa 644, 38 N. W. 521.

2. Joy v. Bitzer, 77 Iowa 73, 41 N. W. 575, 3 L. R. A. 184.

Allowance of time to file transcript.— "The

5. Agreed Abstracts — a. In General. In some jurisdictions a case on appeal may be submitted on an agreed abstract of the record;[3] and where a case is thus submitted the court will not look beyond the abstract.[4]

b. Specification of Errors. Where a case is submitted on an agreed printed abstract, such abstract must include the petition in error or an abstract of the assignments of error.[5] appellee's statement that the evidence was not made of record would be taken as true if not denied by appellant. In case it were denied, we would determine the question between the parties by an inspection of the transcript, and, if no transcript had been filed and there had been no lack of diligence on the part of the appellant after the necessity of a transcript had become apparent, we would allow a reasonable time to file one." Loan v. Hiney, (Iowa 1879) 1 N. W. 587.

Enforcement of agreement to allow time to file transcript.— Where counsel agreed to dispense with a transcript unless one was required, and that appellant should have time to file one, and it became necessary to file one on account of denials made in an amended abstract, and appellant showed by affidavit, submitted with the case, that one of the papers required for a transcript was temporarily lost from the files of the court below, it was held that the denials in the amended abstract should not be taken as true, but that appellant's motion to strike it from the files should be overruled, the submission set aside, and the cause continued with leave to appellant to file a transcript. Artz v. Culbertson, 71 Iowa 366, 32 N. W. 384.

Order to send up certified transcript.— In Missouri, if the appeal is on the short method and appellant does not concur in the counter-abstract filed by the respondent, the clerk of the appellate court, on written objection being made, is required by statute to send an official order to the clerk of the trial court to send up a certified transcript of so much of the record as is in dispute. A cause may be submitted at any time upon a written stipulation of the parties, on printed briefs, accompanied by or containing an agreed printed abstract of the record and evidence upon which the case is to be determined. Closson v. Rohman, 50 Nebr. 323, 69 N. W. 760.

Affidavit of counsel insufficient to show agreed abstract.—That an abstract shall be an agreed abstract cannot be established by affidavits of counsel. Doerr v. Southwestern Mut. L. Assoc., 92 Iowa 39, 60 N. W. 225.

Necessity for proof that agreed abstract is such.— Where appellant's abstract is entitled or indorsed "Agreed Abstract of Record," it will, in the absence of a denial, be accepted as such; but when appellee denies that it is an agreed abstract the appellant must prove it. Shattuck v. Burlington Ins. Co., 78 Iowa 377, 43 N. W. 228.

Submission on appellant's abstract.— In Iowa, by agreement of the parties, the cause may be submitted on appellant's abstract. Talbort v. Noble, 75 Iowa 167, 39 N. W. 250, holding, also, that, where the stipulation makes no reference to the transcript and does not in terms waive any defect in appellant's abstract, the omission of the abstract to state that an appeal was taken is not waived and the court will not go back of the abstract to ascertain from the transcript whether an appeal was in fact taken. See also Riegelman v. Todd, 77 Iowa 696, 42 N. W. 517, wherein it was held that a motion to strike from the files an additional abstract, filed by appellees, on the ground that it was verbally agreed between the attorneys to submit the case on appellant's abstract, which agreement is denied by appellees, should be refused, though affidavits of attorneys for appellants were filed in support thereof.

Additional abstract by one party not considered.— Where an agreed abstract is filed by the parties to an appeal an additional abstract afterward filed by one party and contradicting the former abstract, will not be considered. Holmes v. Lucas County, 53 Iowa 211, 4 N. W. 918.

Presumption as to character of evidence introduced.— If it appears from such an agreed printed abstract that evidence was introduced, the nature of which is not disclosed, it will be presumed to have been of such a character as to sustain the finding of the district court. Shewell v. Nebraska City, 52 Nebr. 138, 71 N. W. 952.

Stipulation identifying record must show rendition of final judgment.— In a case submitted in accordance with Nebr. Supreme Ct. Rules, No. 2, under an agreed printed abstract, the court will not look beyond the abstract; and, to entitle the complaining party to a review of the judgment sought to be reversed, the stipulation identifying the record must show the rendition of the final judgment. Zink v. Westervelt, 52 Nebr. 90, 71 N. W. 960.

5. Renard v. Wyckoff, (Nebr. 1900) 84 N. W. 410; O'Neill v. Flood, 58 Nebr. 218, 78 N. W. 497.

6. Amended or Supplemental Abstracts — a. In General. It is not unusual to allow parties to file amended abstracts when they discover that their cases were not fully presented in the original abstracts;[6] and the rules of court in some jurisdictions expressly provide that when a party, through mistake or excusable neglect, has made or consented to an abstract which is incorrect or imperfect, he may, upon a satisfactory showing, be allowed to file an additional abstract.[7]

b. Time of Filing. As a general rule the appellate court need not consider an amended or supplemental abstract, if filed without leave after the case has been submitted,[8] except in very exceptional cases.[9]

c. Obtaining Leave to File. It has been held that it is not necessary to obtain leave of court to file an amended abstract, at least where the filing is within the proper time;[10] and that either party may do so as of course.[11]

Hence, where a cause is submitted on an agreed abstract of the record and the printed abstract contains no specification of the errors relied on for reversal, no question is presented for decision and the judgment will be affirmed. People's Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Pearlman, (Nebr. 1900) 84 N. W. 408. In order to effect a reversal of judgment below, error must affirmatively appear from the abstract itself. Closson v. Rohman, 50 Nebr. 323, 69 N. W. 760.

Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2611 et seq. See also Lewiston Steam Mill Co. v. Merrill, 78 Me. 107, 2 Atl. 882, holding that one relying on an error of law must see that it appears on the record, and, if the abbreviated record allowed by Me. Rev. Stat. c. 79, § 11, does not show the error, the party should have the record extended and presented to the court for inspection.

An amendment of the record, obtained from the lower court after the filing of an appeal, may be brought before the appellate court by supplemental abstract. Mahaffy v. Mahaffy, 63 Iowa 55, 18 N. W. 685.

Abstract containing matter dehors pleading struck from files.— On appeal from a judgment sustaining a demurrer to the complaint, a supplemental abstract, filed by defendant, containing matter dehors the pleading, may properly be stricken from the files. Colorado Fuel, etc., Co. v. Rio Grande Southern R. Co., 8 Colo. App. 493, 46 Pac. 845.

7. Ayers, etc., Co. v. Sundback, 5 S. D. 362, 58 N. W. 929.

An additional abstract of evidence, filed by appellant with his argument in reply, can be considered only so far as it controverts the correctness of appellee's abstract. Johnson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 51 Iowa 25, 50 N. W. 543.

The portion of the record relied on must be set out by appellant in his first or original abstract. He cannot fail or refuse to furnish such abridgment or abstract in the first instance and then, after respondent shall suggest in his brief such failure, cure the defect by a so-called supplemental abstract. Tipton Bank v. Davidson, 40 Mo. App. 421; Cuomo v. St. Joseph, 24 Mo. App. 567.

Necessity for denial.— Where an abstract as amended is not denied, the usual rule applies (see supra, XIII, F, 4, f, (I)); and its recitals will be taken as true (Frost v. Parker, 65 Iowa 178, 21 N. W. 507).

Notice of motion to strike amended abstract.— Motions to strike an amended assignment of error and amendment to the abstract cannot be considered unless notice of their filing has been given to appellant. Wicke v. Iowa State Ins. Co., 90 Iowa 4, 57 N. W. 632.

The fact that no service of an amended abstract is made on appellee will not authorize an order striking it from the files, where such abstract was made necessary on account of a change of the record in the trial court upon appellee's motion. Peterson v. Adamson, 67 Iowa 739, 21 N. W. 701.

This rule is not of universal application.— When the amended or supplementary abstract is essential to a fair presentation of the cause and the opposite party is not prejudiced by the delay, the mere fact that it was not filed in time will not entitle the opposite party to have it stricken from the files. McCuen v. Manning, (Iowa 1899) 79 N. W. 274; Galer v. Galer, 108 Iowa 496, 79 N. W. 257; Croddy v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 91 Iowa 598, 60 N. W. 214; Richards v. Knight, 78 Iowa 69, 42 N. 7. BRIEFS OF EVIDENCE — a. In General. In Georgia the evidence on appeal must be brought up by what is known as a brief of evidence,[12] and where the evidence is not properly brought up by brief as the statute requires it is not before the appellate court for consideration.[13] The supreme court has generally held that, where there is nothing to consider but the evidence, and the brief is not prepared according to law, the presumption is that there was evidence to sustain the verdict or ruling, and has in such cases affirmed the judgment of the lower court.[14]

b. Incorporation in Bill of Exceptions. Formerly, a brief of evidence, though expressly approved and filed, did not become a part of the record.[15] It could not come up in the transcript, but had to come up in the bill of exceptions, or as an exhibit to the same;[16] but this practice was changed by express statutory provision.[17] Under the present code provisions,[18] if plaintiff in error shall so elect, he may have such brief of so much of the evidence as is necessary to a clear understanding of the errors complained of approved by the judge, made a part of the record, and sent up by the clerk as a part thereof, rather than have the same incorporated in the bill of exceptions.[19]

c. Scope and Sufficiency[20] — (1) IN GENERAL. A brief of evidence must be

"Appeal and Error," § 2607 et seq.; and infra, XVII, E, 2.

There may be a few cases where, by inadvertence, a dismissal was entered instead of an affirmance. But it has been held that the effect in either event is to affirm the judgment of the lower court. Price v. High, 108 Ga. 145, 33 S. E. 956.

Where a brief of evidence is in such a confused state, by reason of corrections made by cross-marks, indicating in another place, by corresponding marks, where and how the corrections are to be made, that it cannot be read intelligibly as one statement, and the court cannot be sure that it has deciphered the corrections properly, the decision of the court below refusing to disturb the verdict will be sustained, though the preponderance of the evidence appears to be against the verdict. Kelley v. McWhorter, 77 Ga. 91.

Where, however, there is any point in the bill of exceptions which can be decided without reference to the brief, it has been held that the supreme court will not dismiss a writ of error on account of a defect in the brief of evidence. Price v. High, 108 Ga. 145, 33 S. E. 956.

E. 787; Searcy v. Tillman, 75 Ga. 504; Stephens v. Woolbright, 60 Ga. 322 — to the effect that, while the former practice might still be followed, under the statute, the brief of evidence on motion for a new trial, filed and approved according to law, was "declared to be a part of the record of the case to which it applies, and need not, except by reference thereto, be embodied in the bill of exceptions." See also Central R., etc., Co. v. Opie, 58 Ga. 346, holding that this statutory provision is permissive, and not mandatory.

Under this act it was held that, in all cases where no motion for a new trial was made, the brief of evidence should be embodied in the bill of exceptions or attached thereto, and properly identified by the signature of the judge. Partridge v. Hollinshead, 105 Ga. 278, 30 S. E. 787; Hodges v. Roberts, 79 Ga. 212, 9 S. 20. Manner of preparation. — It has been held, in some decisions, that no agreement or understanding of counsel can dispense with the requirements of the law as to the manner in which briefs of evidence shall be prepared. Augusta Southern R. Co. v. Williams, 99 Ga. 75, 24 S. E. 852. Where, however, a condensed and succinct brief of the material portions of the oral testimony, including a similar brief of interrogatories read on the trial. In such brief there shall be included the substance of all material portions of all documentary evidence.[21]

(II) Briefing Documentary Evidence. When the evidence consists in part of papers and documents, such evidence should, where possible, be briefed and abstracted.[22]

d. Amendment — (I) By Trial Court. The trial judge may correct the brief of evidence to make it conform to the facts proven before him as he remembers them.[23]

(II) Time of Making. Such corrections may be made even after the brief has been agreed upon by counsel, approved by the court, and filed.[24]

e. Approval by Trial Judge. A brief of the evidence must, in order to render it a part of the record on appeal, be approved by the trial judge,[25] or be agreed upon by the parties or by counsel.[26] The approval by the trial judge must be in express the respondent, in a motion for a new trial, agrees to a brief of evidence filed by the movant, and the motion is heard without objection and denied, and the bill of exceptions sued out by the movant affirmatively recites that this brief of evidence was approved as correct and ordered filed, the writ of error will not be dismissed because such brief does not conform to the law prescribing how briefs of evidence shall be prepared, nor because it does not appear from the transcript of the record that the brief of evidence was filed in due time. Berg v. Baer, 104 Ga. 587, 30 S. E. 744.

Full stenographic report of the testimony, containing all the questions to the witnesses, and their answers, is not a compliance with the requirements of the statute. Augusta Southern R. Co. v. Williams, 99 Ga. 75, 24 S. E. 852; Stubbs v. State, 86 Ga. 773, 13 S. E. 107; Brown v. Moore, 83 Ga. 605, 10 S. E. 277.

Interrogatories and answers must be contained in the brief of evidence, and it is not sufficient that they appear in another part of the record. Turner v. Wilcox, 65 Ga. 299.

Only so much of the record of the proceedings in the court below need be filed as is necessary for a proper hearing and determination of the cause. Watts v. Kilburn, 7 Ga. 354.

Report of the trial, consisting of interrogative and responsive dialogue between counsel and witnesses concerning the facts, interlarded with remarks by court and counsel, is not a brief of evidence. That bill of exceptions sets forth some of the material evidence by recital and exhibit will not fulfil the requirement that the evidence must be properly briefed. Kirby v. Lippincott, 98 Ga. 426, 25 S. E. 267.

The substance only of the material testimony should be set out in succinct narrative form. Tate v. Griffith, 83 Ga. 153, 9 S. E. 719. But see Merchants Nat. Bank v. Vandiver, 104 Ga. 165, 30 S. E. 650.

22. Merely to copy in full the contents of such documents, part of which is immaterial, is not a proper brief within the meaning of the statute. Cash v. Lowry, 91 Ga. 197, 17 S. E. 121; Whelchel v. Duckett, 91 Ga. 132, 16 S. E. 643; Farmers Alliance Exch. v. Crown Cotton Mills, 91 Ga. 178, 16 S. E. 985; Harris v. McArthur, 90 Ga. 216, 15 S. E. 758.

Agreement that documentary evidence referred to in brief may be used.— If a brief of the evidence be agreed upon by the counsel of the parties the brief of the evidence may be necessary, that is a sufficient compliance with the rule of court. The party so consenting cannot take advantage of the failure or omission to incorporate the written testimony into the brief. Gauldin v. Crawford, 30 Ga. 674.

Where the brief of evidence, with the agreement of counsel entered thereon, is attached to the bill of exceptions as an exhibit and is referred to therein, the writ of error will not be dismissed for the want of the approval of such evidence by the judge. Central R., etc., Co. v. Opie, 58 Ga. 346.

Brief not signed by all the counsel or approved by court.— Where there is in the record what purports to be a brief of the evidence, but it is not signed by all the counsel, nor approved and ordered filed by the court, terms,[27] and must be shown by an entry signed by the judge, or by direct affirmation in the bill of exceptions.[28]

f. Time of Filing. A brief of evidence must be filed within thirty days after the trial.[29]

G. Making, Form, and Requisites of Transcript or Return — 1. Office and Functions. The purpose and functions of a transcript or return is to bring the record of the court below, or a part thereof, into the appellate court, in order to exhibit to that court the proceedings of the trial court. As to all matters which are properly of record in the trial court, a transcript duly certified by the clerk of that court will be recognized as legal evidence of the facts therein contained;[30] but, in cases where abstracts of the record are permitted to be made and filed, a transcript will not be considered in behalf of a party who has prepared and filed an abstract of record.[31]

2. Necessity — a. In General. Upon an appeal or writ of error prosecuted from a decree or judgment of a lower court, a transcript of the record is necessary.[32] Where both parties to a cause appeal the appeals are regarded by the Fact of revision and approval to be entered on minutes.— The brief of evidence agreed upon by counsel, and revised and approved by the court upon motion for a new trial, need not be entered in the minutes of the court; but the fact of revision and approval should be entered upon the minutes as a part of the proceedings. On appeal from an order made after final judgment, it is the duty of appellant to cause the record to contain all the papers used on the trial at which such order was entered, and respondent can compel appellant to present to the supreme court a perfect record. Ervin v. Collier, 2 Mont. 605.

Remandment for transcript.— In North Carolina the supreme court will not hear arguments on appeal until the transcript of the record is perfected, but will remand the cause to the end that a proper record may be certified. Bethea v. Byrd, 93 N. C. 141.

Where errors appear in bill of exceptions.— Although alleged errors fully appear in a bill of exceptions taken at the trial, a transcript appellate court as distinct, and separate transcripts of the record must be made and filed.[33]

b. Substitutes. Unless authorized by statute,[34] no substitute can, as a rule, be made to take the place of a transcript or return.[35]

Contents in case of cross-appeal.—The transcript of the record for use on cross-appeals from a decree by which a cross-bill was dismissed should include the cross-bill and proceedings thereon, although the party filing the cross-bill was dismissed as a defendant in the original bill, and is not named as appellee in the appeal of the original complainant. It is the duty of appellant or plaintiff in error to take all steps necessary to the preparation by the clerk of the trial court of a correct transcript of the record, and, in those jurisdictions where only so much of the record need be returned to the appellate court as is necessary to a review of the errors alleged, he must point out to the clerk those portions of the record which he desires to have transcribed. Hardee v. Lovett, 85 Ga. 620, 11 S. E. 1021; Clover v. Morrissey, 1 Mo. App. 603; Gould v. Ogden, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 52. In North v. Alles, 50 Ill. App. 266, it was held that the præcipe for a record, provided for by rule of court, is intended to aid the clerk in determining what a complete record is, and does not affect the statute re-against whom mandamus will issue in case of his refusal to furnish it when requested to do so.[37]

b. New Transcript in Lieu of Defective One. Where the clerk of the trial court negligently prepares and returns a defective transcript of the record, a new one will be required.[38]

c. Schedule For Partial Transcript. In Kentucky, in order to authorize the prosecution of an appeal upon a partial transcript, appellant must file a schedule with the clerk of the trial court within ninety days after the granting of the appeal, specifying the portions of the record to be transcribed.[39]

quiring a complete record. Under Burns' Rev. Stat. Ind. (1894), § 661, providing that when an appeal is taken a præcipe shall be filed designating the portion of the record to be included in the transcript, a bill of exceptions copied in the transcript, but not included in the præcipe, will not be considered on appeal. McCaslin v. Advance Mfg. Co., 155 Ind. 298, 58 N. E. 67. See also, to like effect, Hollis v. Roberts, 25 Ind. App. 426, 58 N. E. 502.

It is the duty of the attorney on an appeal to see that the transcript of the proceedings is properly made up by the clerk. Bridger v. Thrasher, 22 Fla. 383.

It is the duty of the county judge or justice of the peace to make out a transcript, and, on demand, to deliver it to appellant or his agent, but the demand and the delivery should be at the office of the officer. It is not his duty to deliver a transcript at some other place by mail or messenger. Van Sant v. Francisco, 55 Nebr. 650, 75 N. W. 1086. See also Union Pac. R. Co. v. Marston, 22 Nebr. 721, 36 N. Under a statute providing that the clerk of a court shall be disqualified from acting as such when he is a party to an action, an appeal will be dismissed in which a clerk prepared the appeal papers while he was a party to such appeal. Womack v. Stokes, 9 Tex. Civ. App. 592, 29 S. W. 1113.

When time for appeal has expired.— In Houston v. Ducker, 86 Ky. 123, 5 S. W. 382, it was held that the court of appeals would not compel the clerk of the lower court to make a transcript where it appeared from the record that the appeal had not been taken within the prescribed time after the right to do so had accrued.

37. Mandamus will lie to compel a prompt preparation of the transcript. In re Barstow, 54 Ark. 551, 16 S. W. 574. See also MANDAMUS; and cases cited supra, note 36.

Effect of change of venue.—Where an order has been made changing the venue of a suit or action, and the record therein has been transferred in pursuance of such order, the clerk of the original court no longer has power to make return to an appeal, even from an order in the cause entered previous to the change. The transcript and return must be made by the clerk of the court to which the proceedings have been transferred. Blood v. Martin, 21 Ga. 127; Hyde v. Gleichman, 41 Wis. 516. But compare Haas v. Weinhagen, 30 Wis. 326.

The time at which the transcript is made out on appeal is not material, in the absence of any regulation by statute or rule of court, provided it is filed with the clerk of the appellate court in due time. Prewitt v. Woods, 1 Tex. 521. See also Gardner v. Brown, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 351.

38. Wright v. Bonta, 19 Tex. 385. But where the clerk claims that the transcript was made in its defective form by, or under, the supervision of appellant, he will not be compelled to make, at his own cost, a new transcript. Edson v. McGraw, 37 La. Ann. 294.

Time of filing.— The schedule must be filed after the appeal is granted (Wilder v. Hudson, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 719; Hatcher v. Snowden, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 733), and within ninety days therefrom (Adams v. Bement, 96 Ky. 334, 29 S. W. 22; Brenner v. Renner, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 337. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2668.

Counter-schedule.—Where appellant desires to prosecute, upon a partial transcript, an appeal granted by the clerk of the appellate court, he must allow appellee twenty days after the filing of the schedule in which to file a counter-schedule. Farmers' Bank v. Pentecost, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 96; Cain v. Cain, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 360.

Notice of filing schedule.—Where appellant wishes to file a partial transcript he must not only file his schedule, but must cause notice of the filing thereof to be served on appellee. Ford v. Smith, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 237; Traders' Deposit Bank v. Meguiar, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 95; Cleaver v. Philips, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 264. But see Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Brice, 83 Ky. 210. The filing in open court of a schedule for an appeal does not dispense with notice of such filing. Farmers' Bank v. Pentecost, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 96.

The failure of appellant to file the schedule and assignments of errors in the office of the clerk of the inferior court within ninety days after appeal granted is cause for dismissal. Hawthorne v. McArthur, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 39; Gilmore v. Stone, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 683; Martin v. Martin, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 648; Brenner v. Renner, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 337. 4. Scope and Sufficiency — a. Formal Requisites — (i) In General. As a rule the transcript must be arranged in an intelligible and orderly manner, the subject-matter set forth separately and distinctly, and proper captions or marginal notes employed to separate and distinguish the documents or papers made a part of it.[40]

(ii) Chronological Order of Papers. The papers and documents incorporated in the transcript of the record on appeal should be arranged in chronological order.[41]

(iii) Index and Marginal Notes. Rules of court requiring alphabetical indices specifying the page of each paper, order, and proceeding in the transcript, and marginal notes on each page indicating the matter to be found upon it, must be observed, and a failure to do so may, in the discretion of the court, entail a dismissal of the appeal.[42]

4 Ky. L. Rep. 265. But where appellant takes up the entire record, his failure to file the schedule, indicating the portions of the record required to be filed in the appellate court, is no ground, under Ky. Civ. Code, tit. 10, c. 3, for the dismissal of an appeal. Bush v. Webster, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 215. See also Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Brice, 83 Ky. 210.

On cross-appeal.— In Adams v. Bement, 96 Ky. 334, 29 S. W. 22, it was held that, as one who files a cross-appeal has the right to file a schedule of the parts of the record he wishes copied in addition to that filed by appellant, he is bound by the record on appeal if he fails to do so.

Interlineations in printed transcript.— Where a printed transcript is certified by the clerk to be correct, interlineations and writings on the margins of the pages will not be considered. Heilbron v. Heinlen, 72 Cal. 376, 14 Pac. 24.

The record of several proceedings, constituting one suit, cannot be changed in its nature, so as to affect the rights of the parties, by being divided and certified as separate proceedings by the clerk. Ayers v. Mussetter, 46 Ill. 472.

Rules of court regulating the form and arrangement of transcripts on appeal should be observed, though their non-observance will not, usually, necessitate the dismissal of the appeal.

California.—Martin v. Hudson, 79 Cal. 612, 21 Pac. 1135.

If it is set out in the bill of exceptions, and the clerk states in the record, immediately after the complaint, that the deed marked "Filed with the complaint" thereafter appears in the record in the bill of exceptions, it is sufficient. See also Truitt v. Griffin, 61 Ill. 26.

Kentucky.— Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Schick, 94 Ky. 191, 21 S. W. 1036.

(iv) Indicating Objectionable Instructions. Instructions, or portions thereof, which are objected to, should be clearly and intelligibly pointed out in the transcript of the record.[43]

(v) Numbering Lines, Folios, and Pages. Rules of court requiring the pages, lines, or folios of transcripts on appeal to be numbered are regarded in some jurisdictions as mandatory,[44] while in other jurisdictions they are regarded as directory merely.[45]

b. Matters Included — (i) In General. To be sufficient, a transcript or return must contain all matters and proceedings necessary to a review of the alleged errors. Unless otherwise provided by statute or rule of court, cases must be submitted on appeal or writ of error upon a full transcript of the extended, unabbreviated record; and, where a partial transcript is permissible, it must be complete in itself, and contain sufficient matter to clearly show the errors alleged.[46]

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2664.

43. Inclosure in brackets.— In Dikeman v. Arnold, 83 Mich. 218, 47 N. W. 113, it was held that on appeal it is permissible to indicate the clauses in the judge's charge objected to by inclosing them in brackets in the printed record, and referring to the brackets by number, especially where the record accompanies and forms a part of appellant's brief.

Marks in the margin of the record, such as the words, "Given" or "Refused," placed opposite an instruction in the margin of a transcript, form no part of the record. Barbee v. Hereford, 48 Mo. 323.

(II) Bill of Exceptions—(A) In General. A bill of exceptions, to be considered a part of the record, should be embodied in the transcript and shown by the record to have been allowed by the court below.[47]

Wyoming.— Underwood v. David, (Wyo. 1900) 61 Pac. 1012; Dobson v. Owens, 5 Wyo. 85, 37 Pac. 471.

United States.— Curtis v. Petitpain, 18 How. (U. S.) 109, 15 L. ed. 280; Keene v. Whittaker, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 459, 10 L. ed. 246.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2673 et seq.; and infra, XIII, G, 4, b, (VII).

Determination of sufficiency.— Where the clerk of the court below tenders to appellant a transcript on appeal which appellant deems insufficient, its sufficiency cannot be determined on an application for mandamus to compel such clerk to furnish a sufficient transcript. State v. Clerk Eleventh Judicial Dist. Ct., 46 La. Ann. 1289, 16 So. 207.

Name of the judge and the place of the seal at the end of the bill of exceptions should be shown in transcript. Jones v. Sprague, 3 Ill. 55.

Order of adjournment of the term at which final judgment was rendered should be shown in order that it may appear whether the appeal bond was filed in time to perfect the appeal. Burr v. Lewis, 6 Tex. 76. But see Nisbet v. Lawson, 1 Ga. 275.

Presumption as to seal.—Where the transcript of a paper required to be under the seal of the record recites in the copy of the instrument that the seal of the court is affixed, and contains in the margin opposite, the word "Seal," it will be presumed, nothing appearing to the contrary, that the seal affixed is that of the court of which the attesting officer is a clerk. Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150, 81 Am. Dec. 108.

Reference to transcript in another case.— A transcript on appeal should contain all the matters on which the cause is to be determined, and it is insufficient to refer to the transcript in another case to supply omissions in the case on appeal. See Spangler v. San Francisco, 84 Cal. 12, 23 Pac. 1091, 18 Am. St. Rep. 158; Pennock v. Monroe, 5 Kan. 586.

Showing as to jurisdiction of lower court.— The transcript must show when, where, and the court before which the proceedings were had, so that it shall appear from the records that they were had before a competent court, and were coram judice. Cook v. Loftin, 31 Ark. 567; Clark v. Wright, 6 Nebr. 413; Orr v. Orr, 2 Nebr. 170; Jones v. Hoggard, 107 N. C. 349, 12 S. E. 286. Compare Chandler v. Montgomery County, 31 Ark. 25.

Showing as to proceedings for preparation. — Va. Code (1883), § 3457, requiring notice to be given to the opposite party of an intention to apply for a transcript on appeal or writ of error, and providing that a certificate of the clerk, stating that such notice has been given, shall accompany the transcript when presented to the appellate court, is merely directory, and a failure to comply therewith will not defeat the jurisdiction of such court. Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Dunnaway, 93 Va. 29, 24 S. E. 698. See also Mears v. Dexter, 86 Va. 828, 11 S. E. 538.

Showing as to taking and perfecting appeal. — Everything necessary to the taking and perfecting of the appeal must be shown in the transcript.

Texas.— Dutton v. Norton, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 357.

Specification of errors.— The transcript on appeal must contain a specification of the errors assigned. Maulden v. Runyan, 26 Ind. 175; Campbell v. Polk County, 3 Iowa 467; McLeod v. Dickenson, 11 Mont. 438, 28 Pac. 551.

Assignment of error.— The rule in respect to abstracts does not relieve the necessity of setting out the assignments of error in the transcript. Cottingham v. Armour Packing Co., 109 Ala. 421, 19 So. 842.

Variance between transcript and record.— Where the parties to the record returned with the writ of error appear to be different from the record and proceedings required to be removed to the appellate court, the writ of error will be dismissed. McKee v. Murphy, 1 Ark. 19.

Where two or more causes are consolidated, the transcript on appeal will be that of the causes as consolidated. Harvey v. Harvey, 44 La. Ann. 80, 10 So. 410. See also Vascocu v. Woodward, 35 La. Ann. 555.

47. Illinois.— Rock Island v. Riley, 26 Ill. App. 171.

Wisconsin.— Orton v. Noonan, 19 Wis. 350, holding that the mere incorporation of the bill of exceptions in the printed case is not sufficient.

Entries in the transcript, on a page following the close of a bill of exceptions, cannot be considered a part of the bill; and, if they pertain to rulings of the court, and exceptions thereto, the clerk's certificate cannot make them a part of the record. Rock Island v. Riley, 26 Ill. App. 171. See also De Hart v.

(B) Original Bill. Unless authorized or required by statute,[48] the original bill of exceptions should not be returned to the appellate court, but a copy thereof should be incorporated in the transcript.[49]

(III) Case or Statement of Facts—(A) In General. The case-made or statement of facts on appeal must be sent up with the transcript or return in compliance with an order of the judge, court, or referee who settles it.[50]

Johnson County, 143 Ind. 363, 41 N. E. 825.

Erasures by judge before certifying.—Where the circuit judge, before certifying and signing a bill of exceptions, strikes or erases matters therefrom, such erased or stricken matter forms no part of such bill, and it should be omitted by the clerk in copying such bill into the transcript. Jacksonville St. R. Co. v. Walton, (Fla. 1900) 28 So. 59.

In the case of conflicting bills of exceptions presented to be made part of the record, that which the judge declares to be the true one is to be received. Lecatt v. Strang, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 230.

Presumption from incorporation.—Where a bill of exceptions is regularly incorporated in a transcript of record which is properly certified by the clerk below to contain a true and correct copy of such "papers and proceedings in said cause as appear upon the records and files at his office," in the absence of any proper showing to the contrary, it is sufficient evidence of the fact that such bill of exceptions was filed with the clerk below. Jacksonville St. R. Co. v. Walton, (Fla. 1900) 28 So. 59.

Reference for contents to other papers.— In copying into the transcript a bill of exceptions containing the evidence, it is sufficient, after stating that an instrument has been read in evidence, to refer to a preceding page of the transcript where the instrument is copied as an exhibit filed with the pleadings. It need not be copied again, even though it was copied into the bill of exceptions filed. Binkley v. Forkner, 117 Ind. 176, 19 N. E. 753, 3 L. R. A. 33. See also Klingensmith v. Faulkner, 84 Ind. 331.

Unauthorized interpolations in a bill of exceptions should be omitted by the clerk in certifying the record to the appellate court. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 24.

Where a bill of exceptions refers to matters which can be identified, the clerk of the trial court, in making a transcript for the supreme court, may write said matters in full after the words "Here insert." Garrick v. Chamberlain, 94 Ill. 588.

Where judgment is rendered absolute, exceptions cannot, except by special order, be annexed to the judgment-roll for the purpose of review. Anderson v. Dickie, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 83.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2647.

In Illinois, under section 8 of chapter 53 of the revised statutes, it has been held that the original bill of exceptions, instead of a copy, can be incorporated in the transcript of the record on appeal only when so agreed. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Hession, 50 Ill. App. 685.

In Indiana, if the bill of exceptions is taken solely for the purpose of incorporating the evidence into the record, the original bill may be certified to the appellate court by the clerk. Where the bill contains other matter a copy must be incorporated into the transcript. Falvey v. Jackson, 132 Ind. 176, 31 N. E. 531; McCoy v. Able, 131 Ind. 417, 30 N. E. 528, 31 N. And see Holt v. Rockhill, 143 Ind. 530, 40 N. E. 1090, where it was held, under Ind. Rev. Stat. (1881), § 1410, providing that the original longhand manuscript of the evidence may be certified up to the supreme court after being filed and incorporated in a bill of exceptions, does not authorize the original bill to be certified up where, in addition to the evidence, such bill includes instructions given and refused, and the exceptions thereto, and if so certified it will be disregarded. To like effect see Leach v. Mattix, 149 Ind. 146, 48 N. E. 791; Hamilton v. Hamilton, (Ind. App. 1901) 59 N. E. 344; Gish v. Gish, 7 Ind. App. 104, 34 N. E. 305.

In Nebraska the original bill of exceptions may be filed in the supreme court, but the clerk must certify that it is the original bill, or it will be quashed. Aultman v. Patterson, 14 Nebr. 57, 14 N. W. 804.

In New York, after judgment absolute, a case, though made and settled on notice, cannot be annexed to the judgment-roll except by a special order. In the absence of such order an appeal is to be heard on the judg-

(B) Original Case or Statement. Whether the original case or statement of facts, or a transcript thereof, is to be returned to the appellate court depends upon statutory requirements.[51] But, even where a copy is called for by the statute, the fact that the original is returned instead is not ground for dismissal.[52]

(IV) EVIDENCE. Unless required by statute, or where necessary to a clear understanding of the errors assigned, all the evidence introduced, or offered and excluded, in the trial court need not be set out in the transcript of the record. As a rule, only so much of the evidence need be set out in the transcript as is necessary for a review by the appellate court of the errors alleged; and where the appeal or writ of error is prosecuted only for errors apparent of record, the transcript need not contain the evidence, or any part thereof.[53]

(V) ORIGINAL PAPERS—(A) In General. Unless required by statute,[54] by

ment-roll itself. Anderson v. Dickie, 1 Rob. (N. Y.) 700, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 83.

On second trial.— An appeal from a judgment entered after a second trial brings up for review only the judgment appealed from, and the record transmitted to the appellate court should not contain, in addition to the case and exceptions made upon the second trial, the case and exceptions made upon the first trial. Wilcox v. Hawley, 31 N. Y. 648.

When amendments to a proposed statement are proposed and allowed, such amendments must be incorporated into the statement before the statement is transcribed in order for the appellate court to consider them. The attachment of the amendments to the statement is not sufficient. Hattabaugh v. Vollmer, (Ida. 1896) 46 Pac. 831; Pence v. Lemp, (Ida. 1895) 43 Pac. 75. See also Smith v. Davis, 55 Cal. 26.

51. In Kansas the original case or statement, and not a copy, must be attached to the petition in error and filed with it in the supreme court. Thompson v. Williams, 30 Kan. 114, 1 Pac. 47; Missouri, etc., Transp. Co. v. Palmer, 19 Kan. 471.

order of the trial judge,[55] or by order of the appellate court,[56] the original papers in a cause, such as pleadings,[57] evidence,[58] appeal bonds, etc.,[59] should not be returned on appeal. They should, as a rule, be copied into the transcript.[60]

55. See Frieder v. B. Goodman Mfg. Co., 101 Ala. 242, 13 So. 423; Hobson v. Kissam, 8 Ala. 357; Blackburn v. Randolph, 33 Ark. 119; Rabon v. State, 7 Fla. 9.

Unless there is some special reason why they should not be copied, or something is to be determined by inspection of them, original papers should not be returned to the appellate court. School Trustees v. Welchley, 19 Ill. 64.

56. On suggestion of the necessity of inspection, the supreme court will, for that purpose, request the clerk of the trial court to send up the original papers in his hands. Anonymous, 40 Ill. 77.

Original paper in hands of party.—Where an original paper used on the trial below is in the hands of a party to the suit the appellate court can compel its production. Holbrook v. Nichol, 40 Ill. 75.

57. Where an appeal is required to be heard on a certified transcript of the proceedings, it cannot be heard on the original pleadings, even though the parties may so stipulate. School Dist. No. 49 v. Cooper, 44 Nebr. 714, 62 N. W. 1084; Bell v. Beller, 40 Nebr. 501, 58 N. W. 941; Moore v. Waterman, 40 Nebr. 498, 58 N. W. 940. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2639 et seq.

In Kansas it has been held that the supreme court must treat as a transcript whatever the clerk of the court below certifies to be such, though the judge of that court has inadvertently, and the clerk illegally, permitted the original papers to be incorporated therein. Drake v. Dodsworth, 4 Kan. 135.

On appeal from interlocutory order.—A clerk should not, even by consent of counsel, send up the original papers of a cause on an appeal from an interlocutory order. Emmons v. McKesson, 58 N. C. 92; Douglas County v. Walbridge, 36 Wis. 643. But a decree, interlocutory in form, but settling the merits of the case, is so far final as to authorize the clerk, under Wis. Stat. (1859), c. 139, to send up, on appeal therefrom, the original papers instead of copies, unless otherwise directed by the judge. Bird v. Morrison, 9 Wis. 551.

Original papers from other clerks' offices will not be received to complete a record in the supreme court. Hayes v. Clarke, 12 La. Ann. 666.

Original papers without a certified transcript of the record confer no jurisdiction upon the supreme court on appeal. Huston v. Huston, 3 Greene (Iowa) 248.

Sending up originals — Relief of appellee.— In Bird v. Morrison, 9 Wis. 551, it was held that if a clerk, not necessarily, though properly, sends up the original papers on appeal instead of copies, so that the appeal incidentally stays proceedings below, appellee may have copies made, and the originals sent back at his own expense, unless the larger undertaking be filed.

(B) Sufficiency of Copies Where Originals Are Required. Where, owing to special reasons, an inspection of an original paper is necessary to a review by an appellate court, a copy will not be allowed in the transcript or return on appeal.[61] But where the original is merely required by statute, and there are no special circumstances rendering its inspection by the appellate court necessary, the substitution of a copy will not necessarily prove fatal.[62]

(VI) Papers Not of Record or on File. The fact that papers not in the judgment-roll are in the transcript and certified by the clerk does not make them any part of the record on appeal when they are not brought into the record by any bill of exceptions, case, or statement of facts, or in some other way recognized by law.[63]

(VII) Record, or Part Thereof—(A) In General. In the absence of statutory authority to carry up less than the complete record,[64] the whole record of the court below, including copies of the pleadings,[65] of the judgment or final order

61. Halliwell v. Spring, 16 Ark. 644; Harsh v. Hanauer, 15 Ark. 252.

Similarly, a copy of a supposed duplicate in place of a copy of an original paper is insufficient. Montgomery v. Gorrell, 49 Ind. 230, in which it was held that, where a writing that ought to be copied into the transcript on appeal cannot be found, a supposed duplicate should not be substituted without appellee's consent, but in such case proper proceedings should be had to compel the production of the original, or to prove its contents.

62. Louisiana State Bank v. Morgan, 4 Mart. N. S. (La.) 344.

Loss of original.— Where a copy of an instruction was filed in the supreme court, accompanied by a certificate of the clerk of the lower court that the original was lost and by the affidavit of the person who drew it that it was an exact copy, it was held that it would not be stricken from the files on the ground that it was a copy and not the original. Hitchcock v. Shager, 32 Nebr. 477, 49 N. W. 374.

A question for appellate court.— In Portwood v. Feld, 72 Miss. 542, 17 So. 373, it was held that since, on appeal, the question as to what papers are properly a part of the record is a matter to be determined by the appellate court, the clerk cannot be enjoined by the lower court from incorporating certain papers in the transcript on the ground that they are not properly a part of the record.

Where acted on by court below.— In Landreth v. Landreth, 9 Ala. 430, it was held that where a paper is sent up with the transcript which is not necessarily a part of the record, it may be noticed by the appellate court if it appears to have been made such, or at least to have been acted upon by the court below. See also Hess v. Winder, 30 Cal. 349.

64. The clerk of court has no authority to determine the contents of the transcript or return. These are fixed by law, by order of court, or by the party calling for the transcript. Witteman v. Ludden, etc., Music House, 88 Ga. 223, 14 S. E. 211; Day v. Hanks, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 138.

In California it has been held that where an amended complaint and answer are filed, and no question arises on the original complaint, it is not necessary to make the latter a part of the transcript on appeal. Marriner v. Smith, 27 Cal. 649. See also, to like effect, Butte Butchering Co. v. Clarke, 19 Mont. 306, 48 Pac. 303; Raymond v. Thexton, 7 Mont. 299, 17 Pac. 258.

In Iowa if there is no question made as to the correctness of the findings of fact in the appealed from,[66] of the judgment-roll,[67] of the notice or citation on appeal, etc.,[68] should be included in the transcript and returned to the appellate court.[69] But court below, the pleadings need not be set forth. Hall v. Smith, 15 Iowa 584. But see McMullen v. Polk County, 4 Iowa 593.

In Nebraska, if no objection is made to motions, demurrers, or other pleadings below, they should be omitted from the transcript. Winkler v. Roeder, 23 Nebr. 706, 37 N. W. 607. 8 Am. St. Rep. 155. In equity all papers filed in the case become, on appeal, part of the record, and are to be included in the transcript. Lemay v. Johnson, 35 Ark. 225.

Right of appellant to determine.— In Indiana the appellant may bring up on appeal such parts of the record as he chooses, but the supreme court will not act upon less than is necessary to enable it to determine whether the transcript should not be encumbered with useless repetitions and irrelevant matter.[70]

(B) On Second Appeal. Where a cause has been remanded by the appellate court for a new trial, and an appeal is taken from the judgment or decree rendered at such new trial, the transcript of the record need contain only so much of the proceedings as have taken place subsequent to the remandment of the cause.[71]

(VIII) Special Orders as to Contents. Where a complete transcript is required by statute or rule of court it is not competent for a court or judge to make special orders with regard to the contents of the transcript or return on appeal.[72]

(IX) Stipulations as to Contents — (A) In General. Unless allowed by statute or rule of court,[73] it has been held that a stipulation between the par-

Instructions are no part of the record, and should not be included in the transcript unless incorporated in the bill of exceptions. Puget Sound Iron Co. v. Worthington, 2 Wash. Terr. 472, 7 Pac. 882, 886. Compare Longino v. Ward, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 522.

Interlocutory proceedings.— In Kanouse v. Martin, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 252, it was held that nothing should be returned to a writ of error except the judgment record. Interlocutory proceedings should not be included.

On appeal from the denial of a motion which raises an entirely new and separate issue and involves none of the matters litigated in the original cause, the transcript need not contain the record of the original cause. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Gaulter, 165 Ill. 233, 46 N. E. 256.

Orders of postponement and notices and subpœnas to take depositions are never necessary to make a complete transcript. Affidavits or vouchers with proofs of claims may or may not be necessary to a complete record, this depending upon the questions to be tried. Alvord v. Mallory, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 80.

Where appeal is taken on the judgment-roll alone the transcript need not contain a statement of the grounds of the appeal. Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 28.

Insertion of mandate.— It is not necessary that the transcript contain a copy of the mandate of the appellate court issued on its former judgment. Warren v. Frederichs, 83 Tex. 380, 18 S. W. 750. Compare Nashua, etc., R. Corp. v. Boston, etc., R. Corp., 61 Fed. 237, 21 U. S. App. 50, 9 C. C. A. 468.

In Louisiana, if a previous appeal has been taken in the same cause, it is not necessary, on the second appeal, to copy the matter already embodied in a transcript on file in the appellate court. Harrison v. Their Creditors, 43 La. Ann. 91, 9 So. 15, in which it was held that the clerk's certificate that the new transcript, "together with the transcript of appeal in this case already on file in the supreme court," do contain, etc., will be sufficient.

The opinion delivered by the appellate court on a former appeal should not be inserted in the transcript on a second appeal. Life Assoc. of America v. Neville, 72 Ala. 517; Lake v. Security Loan Assoc., 72 Ala. 207. See also Lipscomb v. McClellan, 72 Ala. 151, in which it was held that the opinion of the supreme court in an attachment suit, on which the pending action was based, was no part of the record.

72. Williams v. Jones, 69 Ga. 277.

In a doubtful case, if the clerk is requested by one party to an appeal to insert in the transcript what he is requested by the other party to leave out, a direction by the court is proper. Hoe v. Kahler, 27 Fed. 145.

In Kentucky, under title 10 of chapter 3 of the civil code, it has been held that appellant should present to the judge his assignment of errors, and the judge should make an order to the clerk specifying the parts of the record to be copied material to the questions raised on the appeal. Tompkins v. Southern Baptist Seminary, 78 Ky. 72.

ties to the cause as to the contents of a transcript of the record on appeal is inoperative.[74]

(B) As to Completeness. In California a stipulation by the parties that the transcript is complete and correct is permissible as a substitute for the clerk's certificate, and will estop them to impeach it subsequently.[75] In Nebraska such a stipulation will not dispense with the clerk's certificate.[76]

5. Paper Books. A statute or rule of court requiring paper books on appeal, and prescribing their contents, must be substantially complied with. As a rule, everything must be included in the paper book necessary to a review by the appellate court of the errors assigned.[77]

Stipulation as to additional transcript.— The transcript on appeal must be complete in itself, and omissions therein cannot be remedied by a stipulation between the parties for the use of another transcript. Kern v. Pfaff, 44 Mo. App. 29.

Stipulation as to original bill of exceptions. —Under the provisions of the statute in Illinois the original bill of exceptions may be incorporated into the transcript of the record by stipulation. Daube v. Tennison, 154 Ill. 210, 39 N. E. 989 [reversing 54 Ill. App. 290]; American Vault, etc., Co. v. Springer, 80 Ill. App. 231. See also Lake Shore, etc., R. App. 289; Rohde v. Lehman, 50 Ill. App. 455; Zielinski v. Remus, 46 Ill. App. 596.

Waiver.—Where counsel stipulated that all depositions on file might be "read and referred to on the hearing of defendant's motion for a new trial herein as part of the foregoing statement," and that the same "shall be printed in the transcript on appeal" and "form a part of the statement," it was held that a strict compliance with the requirements of the statute as to the manner of making them parts of such statement was waived. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633, 22 Pac. 26, 131.

When made after trial of cause.— Even where stipulations between the parties as to the contents of a transcript are effective, they cannot be made after the trial of the cause. Indianapolis v. Turner, 23 Ind. App. 139, 55 N. E. 41.

Where several causes are tried together, but not consolidated, and an appeal is taken in two or more, the transcript in each must contain all the evidence pertinent to it, and that in one will not be considered in another even though there be a stipulation of the parties to that effect. Evidence.— In Pennsylvania it is the duty of appellant, and not appellee, to furnish in his paper book all the evidence in the case. Smith v. Arsenal Bank, 104 Pa. St. 518; McCandless v. Young, 96 Pa. St. 289; Wharmby's Appeal, 4 Kulp (Pa.) 23; Crawford v. Allegheny, 23 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 141, 16 Atl. 476; Solts' Appeal, 4 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 298.

Evidence excluded should be shown in the paper book to obtain a review of the ruling of the court thereon. Sweetzer v. Atterbury, 100 Pa. St. 18; Mitchell v. Com., 37 Pa. St. 187.

Evidence not introduced upon the trial of a case cannot, by being inserted in a paper book, be brought to the attention of the supreme court. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Conway, 112 Pa. St. 511, 4 Atl. 362.

Exceptions must be entered in the paper book in order that the party excepting may avail himself of them (Walworth v. Abel, 52 Pa. St. 370); and the paper book must show that the exception was taken in due time (O'Donnell v. Allegheny R. Co., 50 Pa. St. 490).

Exception to the allowance of an amendment to the declaration will not be considered where neither the original nor the

6. Supplemental Transcript or Return. Where necessary to eorrect errors, defects, or omissions in the original transcript or return as filed in the appellate court, an additional or supplemental transcript or return may be obtained upon proper application, and when filed in the appellate court it will be considered as part of the original transcript or return, and the assignment of errors upon the original will be sufficient.[78]

H. Authentication and Certification — 1. Necessity — a. In General. It is a very general requirement that the transcript, case-made, abstract of reeord, etc., on appeal must be authenticated or certified, or the appeal will be dismissed,[79] amended declaration is set out in the paper book. Richardson v. Gosser, 26 Pa. St. 335.

Impertinent matter.—Where a paper book impugns the motives of a master whose report was confirmed by the court, and speaks contemptuously of the master himself, it may be suppressed by the supreme court. Matthew's Appeal, 13 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 502.

Wisconsin.— Orton v. Noonan, 27 Wis. 572.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2685.

By appellee.—Where appellee or defendant in error is not satisfied with the transcript filed by appellant or plaintiff in error in the appellate court, he may file a more perfect record, to be filed and docketed as a part of the same case. Cassin v. Zavalla County, 71 Tex. 203, 9 S. W. 105.

Time of application.— In Illinois it has been held that where neither a suggestion of diminution of the record nor a motion to supply a further record was made on, or prior to, the second day of the term, when, by the rule, they should have been made, nor until the succeeding term, the appellate court was without jurisdiction to allow a supplemental transcript to be filed. Chicago City R. Co. v. Smith, 82 Ill. App. 305. See also, to like effect, Thomas v. John O'Brien Lumber Co., 185 Ill. 374, 56 N. E. 1113 [affirming 86 Ill. App. 181].

Filing after submission.—Where the transcript of an amended record shows that notice was given to the opposing counsel of the time when application would be made in the court below for leave to correct the record, and that a copy of the petition in that behalf had been furnished, the amendment having been made, and the cause being still pending in the supreme court, leave will be granted, in furtherance of justice, to file the supplemental record, although the cause has been submitted to the previous term. Stebbins v. Anthony, 5 Colo. 342. See also Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Davis, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 54 S. W. 381. But see Johnson v. Johnson, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 215, in which it was held that an additional return will not be allowed after assignment of errors and joinder therein.

Matters subsequent to decree.— Leave having been granted to file a supplemental transcript of record in the supreme court, and it appearing that the supposed supplemental record was of matters subsequent to, and independent of, the decree in the original record, the same was stricken out upon the court's own motion. Becker v. Henderson, 5 Colo. 346.

Want of jurisdiction in the appellate court cannot be shown by a supplemental transcript. Watson v. Sawyer, 12 Wash. 35, 40 Pac. 413, 41 Pac. 43.

Where a transcript of the record below appears on its face to be complete, the appeal will be heard on it as such, and an oral dispute between counsel, in which complainant's counsel claims that leave had been reserved to her to incorporate omitted evidence, and defendant's counsel contends that complainant had not sought with due diligence to avail herself of such leave, and that the transcript is in fact complete, will be disregarded. Evans v. Evans, (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 57 S. W. 367.

Where a supplemental return is not made up with the required formality, the appeal will be heard on the original return unless an amended return in proper form is obtained from the lower court within the time granted for that purpose by the appellate court. Cumiskey v. Lewis, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 466, 15 N. Y. St. 364.

In Oklahoma the transcript from a probate court must be certified to by the probate judge, and not by the clerk. Walton v. Williams, 5 Okla. 642, 49 Pac. 1022.

Change of venue.—When a suit is brought in one parish and transferred to another, where it is tried and judgment rendered, the clerk of the court in which the cause originated cannot certify the record. McIntyre v. Whiting, 6 La. 35.

Stenographer.—It is not within the province of the official stenographer to certify that the transcript, bill of exceptions, or case-made is complete. Wieland v. Potter, 6 Colo. App. 451, 46 Pac. 370; Gibbs v. Oskaloosa, 103 Iowa 734, 72 N. W. 416; Fairfield Independent Dist. v. Farmer, 74 Iowa 744, 35 N. W. 450; Ryan v. Madden, 46 Kan. 245, 26 Pac. 679; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Grimes, 38 Kan. 241, 16 Pac. 472. But, in Oregon, a transcript of evidence in an equity case, tried by the court and certified by the official stenographer, is sufficiently authenticated to be considered by the appellate court on appeal. Tallmadge v. Hooper, 37 Oreg. 503, 61 Pac. 349, 1127.

85. California.— Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633, 22 Pac. 26, 131.

Colorado.— Dingle v. Swain, 15 Colo. 120, 24 Pac. 876.

Georgia.— Fleming v. Bainbridge, 84 Ga. 622, 10 S. E. 1098; Elsas v. Clay, 67 Ga. 327.

Illinois.— Charles v. Remick, 50 Ill. App. 534.

Iowa.— Johnston v. McPherran, 81 Iowa 230, 47 N. W. 60.

Nebraska.— Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ringo, 52 Nebr. 163, 71 N. W. 1016.

North Dakota.— Taylor v. Taylor, 5 N. D. 58, 63 N. W. 893.

Oregon.— Skinner v. Lewis, (Oreg. 1900) 62 Pac. 523.

Wisconsin.— Binder v. McDonald, 106 Wis. 332, 82 N. W. 156.

86. State v. Millis, 19 Mont. 444, 48 Pac. 773; Scott v. Overall, 50 Nebr. 144, 69 N. W. 777.

87. Howard v. Ross, 3 Wash. 292, 28 Pac. 526.

When a review is sought on a transcript of was offered or considered on a motion,[88] nor concerning matters not in the record.[89]

b. De Facto Officer. Where the certificate of a transcript purports to be signed by the trial judge, the transcript will not be stricken from the files on motion, on the ground that the officer giving the certificate was not in fact the judge.[90]

c. Deputy Clerk. Where the statute or rule of court authorizes a certification by the clerk, a certificate of a deputy clerk is a sufficient authentication.[91]

3. Requisites and Sufficiency — a. In General. The mode of authentication prescribed by statute must be strictly adhered to.[92] Where the statute does not the record, the clerk of the district court is not authorized to determine what are or what are not material acts and proceedings of the court, but should make a full and correct transcript of the record and proceedings in the cause, and certify the same as such, and, where he has not substantially done so, the petition in error will be dismissed. Cook v. Challiss, 55 Kan. 363, 40 Pac. 643; Santa Fe Bank v. Hussey, 6 Kan. App. 893, 50 Pac. 977. Nor is he authorized to designate what portion of the record pertains to any particular issue, nor to determine what part of the record relates to any particular matter adjudicated by the court. Melrose v. Bernard, 126 Ill. 496, 18 N. E. 671. See also Territory v. Neligh, (Ariz. 1886) 10 Pac. 367.

89. Thompson v. Reno Sav. Bank, 19 Nev. 293, 9 Pac. 883.

90. Harris v. Harris, 41 Ala. 364. See also Clay v. Rogers, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 340, wherein a record, made out and sworn to be correct by one not the clerk, the clerk having died and no successor having been appointed when necessary to file the record, was admitted in order to prevent dismissal of the appeal.

The clerk pro tempore may attest the copies of the record of a district court. Com. v. Gay, 153 Mass. 211, 26 N. E. 571, 852. See also Com. v. Connell, 9 Allen (Mass.) 488; Com. v. Clark, 16 Gray (Mass.) 88. See also Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Ft. Scott, 15 Kan. 435, wherein it was held that a judge pro tempore may, after the expiration of the term at which the case has been tried before him, settle and sign a case-made, if he does so within the time allowed by law or the order of the court. And see Garvin v. Jennerson, 20 Kan. 371, wherein it was held that, where proceedings are sought to be reviewed upon a case-made, and it appears that the proceedings below were before a judge pro tempore, it is not necessary, as a part of the authentication of the case-made, that the record show the reasons of the selection of the pro tempore judge, or his qualification for the office.

On appeal from a judgment of a town recorder, where the amended transcript is certified by one who describes himself as "formerly recorder," and signs himself as "Recorder" of the town, it is sufficient. Kirkwood v. Heege, 9 Mo. App. 576.

91. Eldridge v. Deets, 4 Kan. App. 241, 45 Pac. 948; Burton v. Hicks, 27 La. Ann. 507; Downes v. Tarkington, 3 La. Ann. 247; Garnau v. Dosier, 100 U. S. 7, 25 L. ed. 536. But see Tison v. Morgan, 41 Ga. 410, wherein a writ of error, taken, by the incumbent contestant to the office of the clerk of the superior court, without a supersedeas, was dismissed on the ground that the record, certified by his alleged deputy clerk, was not "certified by the clerk of the court."

In Massachusetts the assistant clerks of municipal courts have authority to attest copies of the record to be transmitted to the superior court. Com. v. Crawford, 111 Mass. 422; Com. v. Harvey, 111 Mass. 420.

Nebraska.— Shaffer v. Vincent, 53 Nebr. 449, 73 N. W. 932.

Wisconsin.— Thornton v. Eaton, 45 Wis. 618.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2698.

Abbreviating name of plaintiff.—A certificate of the clerk to a supplemental record is not insufficient because it employs the abbreviation "Chicago F. G. A. Co." for "Chicago Fuel Gas Appliance Company." Chicago Fuel Gas Appliance Co. v. Jewett, 66 Ill. App. 489.

Date.—When the clerk of a court below certifies and sends up a transcript, the certificate must be dated, in order to show that it was sent up within the prescribed time. Arnold v. Wells, 6 Ga. 380. See also Atlanta, etc., Air-Line R. Co. v. Smith, 66 Ga. 205. Where the judge's certificate to a transcript of appeal bears one date at the head, and another at the bottom, just before the judge's signature, the latter date will be taken to be the date of the certificate. Sayles v. Smith, 71 Iowa 241, 32 N. W. 333.

Place of authentication.—Where the transcript is a single document, it is immaterial in what part of it the authentication is made. Clements v. Collins, 59 Ga. 124.

The use of the word "testimony" for "evidence," in the certificate of the trial judge in prescribe a mode of authentication, the appellate court may ratify the mode adopted by the lower court.[93]

b. Inclusion of All Proceedings. The statutes generally require that the certificate affirm that the transcript contains a full, true, and complete copy of all of the proceedings.[94] It is not, however, necessary that the certificate should be framed in the exact language of the statute.[95] It is sufficient, even though infor-

the allowance of a bill of exceptions, if the meaning is obvious, or it is clear that the latter is intended, will not render the document inoperative. Columbia Nat. Bank v. German Nat. Bank, (Nebr. 1898) 77 N. W. 346.

Form of certificates to abstracts of record, transcripts, etc., are set out in the following cases and rules of court:

mal, if, when fairly and reasonably construed, it affirms that all the proceedings are included.[96]

c. Seal. To give jurisdiction on appeal the transcript must, in most jurisdictions, be under seal,[97] and the fact that the seal is not in the usual place does not render the certificate insufficient.[98] The question whether the transcript is properly verified by the seal of the lower court is for the determination of the appellate court.[99]

d. Signature. The certificate must be signed, in order that the transcript may be considered on appeal.[1] the requirement that the record shall be printed depends upon the amount involved.[8]

b. Effect of Not Printing. A failure to comply with the rule requiring the printing of the records is ground for dismissal,[9] or for affirmance of the judgment.[10]

c. Excuses For Failure to Print. It is the duty of appellant to see that the requirements as to printing are complied with,[11] and he cannot excuse a failure to Alleging failure to pay fees for printing.— Where it is not alleged that appellant has failed to pay the clerk the estimated cost and fees for printing the record, an appeal will not be dismissed on the ground that the record has not been printed. Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 73 Fed. 314, 19 C. C. A. 477.

Reinstating cause after reversal for non-appearance, on account of failure to print.— Where a judgment is reversed under the rule for non-appearance of the respondent, a motion to vacate the judgment and reinstate the case will be granted where appellant has failed to print and serve his case, which fact was not known by the court when the judgment was reversed. Bonin v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 210.

Size and style of type.— Under N. Y. Gen. Rules Prac. No. 43, prescribing the style of type to be used in printing records for the appellate division, the printing of part of the evidence contained in the record in italics is ground for an order requiring substitution of a properly printed case. Campbell v. Jughardt, 50 N. Y. App. Div. 460, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 198. But compare Archer v. Long, 35 S. C. 585, 14 S. E. 24. In Iowa the fact that the paper filed in the supreme court is printed in type larger than that prescribed by the rules of the court is not ground for striking it from the files. Ankrum v. Marshalltown, 105 Iowa 493, 75 N. W. 360.

Incorporating two appeals in one book.— Under the New York practice, two independent cases cannot be incorporated in one appeal book. Geneva, etc., R. Co. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 24 N. Y. App. Div. 335, 48 N. Y. Suppl. 842. In Garner v. Fry, 104 Iowa 515, 73 N. W. 1079, it was held that, where appeal is taken from the judgment sustaining a mortgage and also from a subsequent order denying an injunction restraining foreclosure of the mortgage, a motion to strike out the latter appeal, as in no way connected with the main case, will be overruled, as the rules do not prohibit the printing of two appeals under one cover.

Statutes or rules requiring the printing of records on appeal do not apply to appeals pending before their passage. Stifel v. Metz, 35 Ohio St. 396. See also Rawlings v. Neal, 122 N. C. 173, 29 S. E. 93. Contra, Dresser v. Brooks, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 207.

10. Sanborn v. Robinson, 22 Mich. 92; Swanson v. Leavens, 26 Oreg. 561, 40 Pac. 230.

11. Duty of having the record printed is not a professional one.— When counsel attends to it, he acts merely as the agent of appellant for that purpose, and his neglect in this regard is the neglect of the party himself (Stainback v. Harris, 119 N. C. 107, 25 S. E. 858; Wiley v. Bessemer City Min. Co., 117 N. C. 489, 23 S. E. 448; Neal v. Old North State Land Co., 112 N. C. 841, 17 S. E. 538;

print by showing his inability to pay the costs of printing,[12] that an unexpected delay in the mails prevented the printing where appellant himself procrastinated without reason until almost the last minute,[13] or that he merely requested the clerk, giving him no further instructions, to have the printing done and send the bill to appellant.[14]

d. Time When Printed Record Must Be Ready. It is sufficient if the record be printed at the time the case is called for argument.[15]

e. What Must Be Printed. Unless the court modifies the rule,[16] enough of the record must be printed to enable the court to act understandingly.[17] It should at least contain a brief abstract of the return of the clerk and all the pleadings and evidence bearing on the question sought to be reviewed,[18] this including Edwards v. Henderson, 109 N. C. 83, 13 S. E. 779; Stephens v. Koonce, 106 N. C. 255, 11 S. E. 282. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2774), who cannot excuse himself by alleging that he was ignorant of the requirement (Griffin v. Nelson, 106 N. C. 235, 11 S. E. 414).

Misapprehension of requirements.— Cases of the above class were distinguished in Smith v. Summerfield, 107 N. C. 580, 12 S. E. 465, from those where appellant displays diligence in learning the requirements of the rules and in complying therewith, but honestly misapprehends instructions given him by his counsel and the clerk. Here the record was printed, but only one copy was sent to the court; the requisite number being filed later, the motion to reinstate was granted.

Who must procure printing.— Under Cal. Supreme Ct. Rules, No. 12, providing for the filing of a written transcript when accompanied by funds to pay for printing it, and requiring the clerk to have it printed, the clerk cannot allow appellant himself to procure and pay for the printing of the transcript and forward a printed copy for filing. Objection cannot be taken to the failure to file printed abstracts and brief until the calling of the cause. Gibbs v. Blackwell, 40 Ill. 51.

Time extended.— The object of allowing ten days to file a case after settlement is to enable appellant to prepare a copy of the case, as settled, from which to print, and, hence, extending the time to file is equivalent to extending the time to print. Donohue v. Hicks, 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 438.

Rules Prac. No. 41, requires that such papers be printed, the court, on appeal from an order of confirmation of a referee's report, may excuse the printing of clearly immaterial portions of such papers.

2. Transmission and Filing — a. In General. Strict compliance with rules of court requiring the transmission and filing of transcripts or abstracts of the record will be enforced.[23]

b. Appellant's Duty. It is generally the duty of appellant to see that a sufficient transcript or abstract of the proceedings below is filed in the appellate court.[24] Appellant cannot devolve this duty upon appellee,[25] nor upon the clerk of the lower court.[26]

c. Clerk's Duty. It is the duty of the clerk of the lower court to transmit the transcript of the record on appeal.[27] In performing this duty the clerk acts a failure to file is an affirmance of the judgment or decree;[33] and, in some few cases, it has been held that the court may, in its discretion, require the appellant in such default to supply a transcript.[34]

e. Effect of Filing Imperfect Transcript. Where appellant files an imperfect transcript, the court will make such order as seems proper under the circumstances.[35]

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," §§ 2618 et seq., 2691, 2721.

Dismissal or continuance at discretion of court, see Bostwick v. Williams, 40 Ill. 113; Gibbs v. Blackwell, 40 Ill. 51. At option of respondent, see Sanders v. Chartrand, 158 Mo. 352, 59 S. W. 95.

General rule upon plaintiff in error to file an abstract of the record is necessary before the cause will be dismissed or continued for want of an abstract. Bostwick v. Williams, 40 Ill. 113. See also Spear v. D'Clercy, 40 Ill. 56.

Questions affecting jurisdiction.— Appellant's abstract stated in general terms that defendant appealed from the judgment, and contained a copy of such judgment, but omitted to state, as required by N. D. Supreme Ct. Rules (1897), No. 13, [74 N. W. viii] that such appeal was taken by serving and filing notice of appeal and supersedeas bond. A motion to dismiss the appeal on the ground that the abstract failed to show on its face that an appeal had been perfected was made. No claim was made that the appeal itself was irregular. The motion was denied on the ground that, as to questions affecting jurisdiction, the court should, if necessary, examine the record proper where the abstract is faulty. Erickson v. Citizen's Nat. Transcript unnecessary.— In Abrens, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Patton Sash, etc., Co., 94 Ga. 247, 21 S. f. Time For Transmission and Filing. The time within which the transcript or abstract of record, as the case may be, must be transmitted and filed is usually regulated by statutes or rules of court.[36] These statutes and rules of court are not uniform in their provisions; some require the transmission and filing to be made before the return-term of the appellate court,[37] others that the transmission and filing shall be during the return-term of the appellate court,[38] and others that the transcript must be filed during the term next succeeding the allowance of the appeal.[39] Under the requirements of some statutes and rules the transcript must 36. In the absence of a statute fixing the time within which the transcript or abstract of record must be filed (Benjamin v. Davis, 6 La. Ann. 472; Sosman v. Conlon, 59 Mo. App. 313; Kirkwood v. Cairns, 40 Mo. App. 631; Crary v. Port Arthur Channel, etc., Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 842. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2724 et seq.), the trial court may adopt a rule fixing such time (Challenor v. Mulligan, 110 Ill. 666; Johnson v. Stephenson, 104 Ind. 368, 4 N. E. 46).

Compare Union Nat. Bank v. Legendre, 35 La. Ann. 787; Laicher v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 28 La. Ann. 320; Benjamin v. Davis, 6 La. Ann. 472 — to the effect that, if the return be filed on the day fixed by law, an error of the court in fixing the return-day will not prejudice appellant. And see also Ford v. Lyons, 40 Hun (N. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2726.

Continuance of term below.— As the proceedings of a court of record may be modified or set aside during the term at which they are had, it is not regular to take a transcript of the judgment before the end of the term without leave of the court, and the continuance of the term below after the commencement of the term in the appellate court is sufficient reason for not filing the record. Truesdail v. Sanderson, 30 Mo. 113.

The record and bill of exceptions on appeal in an injunction case must be transmitted to the clerk of the supreme court by the clerk below within fifteen days from the service on the opposite party. Cunningham v. Scott, 87 Ga. 506, 13 S. E. 635; Markham v. Huff, 72 Ga. 106.

g. Computation of Time. In computing the time within which the transcript or abstract of record must be filed the provisions of the statutes relating thereto must be liberally construed.[43] Whether the words "to" or "until" are to be held words of inclusion or exclusion is usually determined by the context of the statute, rule, or order in which they are used, and will be held to include or exclude the day named, as the evident intention requires.[44] Some courts adopt the rule, in computing the time, that the day on which the time commences to run is to be excluded, and the day to which it should run is to be included;[45] other courts include the first day and exclude the last.[46] Again, it has been held that there is no difference between a rule requiring the performance of an act within ten days of a given time, and a rule which requires the same thing to be done before the expiration of the tenth day; in either case, in computing these ten days, the day from which the time begins to run and the day on which the act is to be done are not to be included.[47] The day on which the term begins is to be reckoned as the first day of the term.[48] The fact that Sunday is not a judicial day does not render it any the less a day of the term;[49] but if the last day of the period falls on Sunday such day shall be excluded.[50]

h. Extension of Time — (i) Power to Extend. The return-day of the appeal cannot be prolonged by the court below, but only by the appellate court.[51]

But, in Kentucky, under Ky. Civ. Code, § 738, which requires the transcript to be filed a specified time before the first day of the second term of the appellate court following the granting of the appeal, the time must be computed from the date of the order granting the appeal, and not from the date of filing the bill of exceptions. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Johnson, 100 Ky. 589, 38 S. W. 1043. See supra, note 39.

The disallowance of a bill of exceptions, or the refusal of the court to settle a proposed bill, has the same effect as the settlement with regard to the running of the time. White v. White, 112 Cal. 577, 44 Pac. 1026.

A transcript required to be filed by the second day, is in time if filed on the second day. Wachsmuth v. Routledge, 36 Oreg. 307, 51 Pac. 443, 59 Pac. 454.

In Louisiana the appellant has three days for filing after the return-day, and these are judicial days. He is in time if he files his transcript on the third judicial day. Chaffe v. McIntosh, 36 La. Ann. 824; Bouligny v. White, 5 La. Ann. 31. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2736. If an extension be granted the additional time commences to run after the expiration of the three days of grace. Gigand v. New Orleans, 52 La. Ann. 1259, 27 So. 794; Delaney v. Rochereau, 34 La. Ann. 1123, 44 Am. Rep. 456. But no days of grace are allowed after the day to which an extension is granted, and the fact that such day is not a judicial day can make no difference if it be a legal day. file a transcript, the time has been extended where the clerk, after bond filed, refused, until after the return-day, to deliver the transcript because his costs were not paid,[57] where the delay arose from the desire of appellant to reduce the bulk of the record, and save the court from unnecessary labor;[58] as well as under an agreement to the effect that a transcript might be dispensed with unless the court should require it, and that in such case appellant should have a reasonable time to prepare one, coupled with a statement that a necessary paper has been lost from the court below.[59] But it has been held that the time should not be extended where the bond required to perfect the appeal has not been filed;[60] where the clerk of the lower court certifies that he cannot, consistently with his other duties, have the record ready in time;[61] or where the trial judge rescinds an order of appeal previous to the return-day, and, on a rule to reinstate it, makes a decree after the return-day has gone by.[62] Neither will the negligence of appellant's counsel,[63] the pressure of his engagements in other courts, and his inability to procure a stenographer to transcribe the testimony,[64] nor the fact that appellant was financially embarrassed and unable to file the requisite bond in time, constitute a ground for extending the time for filing the transcript.[65]

Impossibility of living up to agreement.— In Swygert v. Swygert, 30 S. C. 609, 9 S. E. 657, the parties, disregarding the rule as to what constitutes a return and as to the time of filing, agreed on a case, and that it should be filed by a certain day. The appellant, finding that he could not file by the day named, asked for further time, which was refused. It was held that because of his failure thereupon to file the return within the time required, which he could have done, his appeal should be dismissed.

Notwithstanding the courts are disposed to be liberal in relieving parties from the strict transcript within the time prescribed is a jurisdictional matter, the time for filing cannot be so extended.[67] Neither a stipulation extending the time for filing bond and bill of exceptions,[68] nor a stipulation extending the time for appellant's sureties to justify, has the effect of extending the time for filing the transcript.[69]

i. Effect of Failure to File in Time — (I) Dismissal or Affirmance — (A) In General. Failure to file the transcript or abstract of record, as the case may be, within the time prescribed by statute or rule,[70] or within the extension, if any has been granted, may be treated as an abandonment of the appeal, and may be taken advantage of by motion to dismiss:[71] or, in some jurisdictions the letter of the rule wherever a proper case is made, they will not allow a cause to remain on the docket undisposed of for an unconscionable length of time even by stipulation, in the absence of a reasonable excuse for the delay, and may, sua sponte, dismiss the appeal. Waiver by subsequent general appearance. — But where appellees do not rest upon their motion to dismiss because of the filing of the transcript after the statutory period, but proceed to file pleadings and try the case on its merits, they waive the right to object to the delay. Omaha Coal, etc., Co. v. Fay, 37 Nebr. 68, 55 N. W. 211.

68. Swafford v. Rosenbloom, 189 Ill. 392, 59 N. E. 790. But in Hopper v. Beck, 83 Md. 647, 34 Atl. 474, the appellate court refused to dismiss on motion of appellee because the transcript was not filed within the statutory time, a stipulation having been entered into to extend the time for preparing the bill of exceptions, which made the preparation of the transcript impossible within the prescribed time, the appellee becoming thereby a participant in the delay. In Buerhaus v. De Saussure, 39 S. C. 548, 17 S. E. 500, there was a stipulation extending the time for preparation and service of such appeal. The appellants, having been otherwise diligent, were held to have excused themselves when they alleged that they construed the stipulation as extending the time for filing the return, and were held to be entitled to relief under S. C. Code, § 349.

69. The reason of this is that the failure of the sureties to justify does not render the appeal ineffectual, but merely operates to avoid stay of the execution appealed from. Wittram v. Crommelin, 72 Cal. 89, 13 Pac. 160.

An agreement waiving any advantage on account of time of filing the transcript does not reach the defect of no transcript. Wolff v. Toepperwein, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 28 S. W. 1009. And see Pipkin v. Green, 110 N. C. 462, 14 S. E. 966.

A stipulation that the transcript of a former appeal may be used does not dispense with the requirement as to filing in due time. Long v. Herrick, 28 Fla. 755, 10 So. 17.

70. Statutes fixing the time for filing, but not prescribing any penalty for failure to file, are directory, and the court in such cases may, in its discretion, refuse to dismiss the appeal. Pierce v. Lyman, 28 Ark. 550 (where the appellee having been summoned within the requisite time by the appellant, the case was regularly disposed of); Durand v. Gage, 76 Mich. 624, 43 N. Statutes fixing the time for filing the transcript are not statutes of limitation.—Laws prescribing rules of this character, although time may be an element in them, are intended to define the circumstances and manner of prosecuting appeals, while statutes of limitation refer to, and prescribe the time within, which the right of action must be exercised. The latter has relation to the right, the former to the rules controlling and directing its exercise. Cunningham v. Perkins, 28 Tex. 488.

Purpose of this rule.— This practice simply provides means by which a respondent may have the fact that an appeal has been abandoned made a matter of record. It cannot be used for the purpose of determining any controverted questions in the case. Henrichsen v. Smith, 29 Oreg. 475, 42 Pac. 486, 44 Pac. 496. And see Smith v. Fowler, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 925, where it was held that a partial transcript filed by appellee on a motion to dismiss was not such a transcript as would have the same effect as if filed by appellant.

Under this rule appellee cannot get a hearing of the case within the time allowed appellant in which to file the record and prepare his cause for trial, and such a right is not conferred by a statute giving appellee the right to have a transcript made out and delivered to him. Crary v. Port Arthur Channel, etc., Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 842.

If appellee, instead of seasonably filing his transcript for affirmance, sleeps on his rights he, in effect, extends the day of grace to his adversary, and the latter may thereafter file his transcript, and a motion to affirm, subsequently made, will be denied. Armijo v. Abeytia, 5 N. M. 533, 25 Pac. 777; Armour Packing Co. v. Williams, 122 N. C. 406, 29 S. E. 366; Hunt v. Askew, 46 Tex. 247. But compare Copley v. Routh, 3 La. Ann. 189.

Premature filing by defendant in error.—

The courts, however, have frequently refused to entertain a motion for dismissal made after the default of appellant has been cured by his affirmative action.[73]

If plaintiff in error or appellant files the record within the prescribed time, a copy previously filed by defendant in error or appellee is premature. Hartshorn v. Day, 18 How. (U. S.) 28, 15 L. ed. 272.

Relief cannot be had by a nunc pro tunc order.— Courts will seldom, if ever, relieve from result of negligence of appellant or his attorney in this way. Newbury v. Getchell, etc., Lumber, etc., Co., 106 Iowa 140, 76 N. W. 514.

The necessity of a motion.— In some states the mere failure to file the transcript does not, ipso facto, destroy the appeal, it being contemplated by the statutes and rules of court on the subject that the dismissal of the appeal or affirmance of the judgment shall be on motion only. Winthrow v. Woodward Iron Co., 81 Ala. 100, 2 So. 92; Sears v. Kirksey, 81 Ala. 98, 2 So. 90. In Cook v. Klink, 8 Cal. 347, no motion had been made to dismiss, and it was held to be too late to make the objection in brief after submission. And see Holmes v. Hull, 48 Iowa 177, where it was said: "Under our practice we would not look at the transcript if one had been filed."

In some cases, on the other hand, the courts, apparently treating the question as one of jurisdiction merely, have dismissed of their own motion. Schillo v. Anderson, 51 Ill. App. 403 (an appeal from an interlocutory order of injunction under a statute allowing such appeal only when perfected by filing the transcript within sixty days from the entry of order); Floyd v. Penick, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 719 (where appellee did not enter his appearance); Cunningham v. Perkins, 28 Tex. 488.

And, under a statute providing that the failure of appellant to file the record within the time allowed shall constitute an abandonment of the appeal, it has been held that the appeal terminated by operation of law when the time had elapsed without the record having been filed, and that the clerk of the lower court should issue execution immediately upon satisfactory showing of the abandonment of the appeal. Sydenstriker v. Beard, 4 W. Va. 707. And see Rau v. Bennis, 49 Md. 316, construing Md. Acts (1864), c. 322.

Under the Louisiana practice, the rule that motions to dismiss must be made in three days has no application to motions of this class, since the appeal is considered abandoned if the transcript is not seasonably filed. An order of the court is held to be merely declaratory of an existing fact. Coudroy v. Pecot, 51 La. Ann. 495, 25 So. 270; Mutual Loan, etc., Assoc. v. First African Baptist Church, 48 La. Ann. 1458, 21 So. 24.

The necessity of filing transcript of judgment.— In order that the appellate court may affirm the judgment or dismiss the appeal there must be on file a transcript of the judgment of the inferior court. The certificate of the clerk, filed for affirmance, is not sufficient. Lloyd v. Barnett, 36 Tex. 190. But it is not requisite that two transcripts should be on file. So, if, after the expiration of appellant's time, he should file a transcript the same action may be taken thereon as though it had been filed by appellee. Muldoon v. Levi, 25 Nebr. 457, 41 N. W. 280.

The remedy considered as cumulative.— The remedy provided by Md. Acts (1864), c. 322, authorizing the lower court, in case the record is not transmitted to the appellate court within the time prescribed in the act, to strike out the appeal and proceed to execute the judgment as if no appeal had been taken, in no manner interferes with the right of appellee to have the record sent up to the court of appeals if appellant neglects to have it done within the time prescribed by law. Rau v. Bennis, 49 Md. 316.

Michigan.— Gorton v. Person, 97 Mich. 561, 56 N. W. 936. The decision in Snyder v. Washtenaw Cir. Judge, 80 Mich. 511, 45 N. W. 596, was made clearly on the proposition of the text, though some of the justices also thought that the right to move to dismiss was waived because the objections of appellee on the calling of the docket were calculated to lead appellant and the court to suppose that the objections related only to a want of notice of trial. In Merriman v. Peck, 95 Mich. 277, 54 N. W. 871, it was held that the statutory provision relating to the time of the filing of the copy of the record was mandatory, but this case was not intended to overrule Snyder v. Washtenaw Cir. Judge, 80 Mich. 511, 45 N. W. 596, nor to hold that the failure to perfect the appeal within the time might not be waived. The difference in the circumstances of the cases was pointed out.

(B) With Damages. In some states, in the absence of a showing of "good cause" for appellant's failure to seasonably file the transcript, the court may, upon motion, not only dismiss the appeal or affirm the judgment, as the case may be, but may also award damages as for an appeal taken merely for delay.[74]

(II) Excuses For Delay—(A) In General. Generally speaking, if some satisfactory cause for the delay is given, the court may, in its discretion, allow the transcript to be filed after the expiration of the time prescribed.[75]

(B) Appellant's Fault Presumed. The usual presumption is that the delay is the fault of appellant, and, before permission can be obtained to file at a later day or relief be had from the consequences of failure to file, the court must be satisfied by a clear showing that appellant used proper diligence.[76]

(C) Appellant's Laches or Negligence. In order to avail himself of an excuse for failure to file his papers on appeal in the time prescribed, it must appear that appellant has prosecuted his appeal in good faith, used every means to comply with the rules regulating the same, and has not been guilty of laches or neglect of duty in any respect.[77] Appellant may be guilty of laches in not tendering to

Duty of clerk as to transcript received too late.— By the rules of the Texas court of civil appeals, if the transcript is received by the clerk too late for filing, it is his duty to keep it without filing, subject to the order of the person sending it, or the disposition of the court. The burden of proof is upon appellant to relieve himself from the presumption arising from his failure to transmit and file the transcript within the time prescribed. To do this, he must furnish proof from which the court will be able to see that the burden put upon him is fully answered, and, generally, this proof must be under oath and usually in the form of affidavits, unless it be of some matter to which an official seal, under the rules of evidence, will impart verity. 77. Regulations of this nature are made in the public interest. Their object is to prevent all avoidable delays. If appellant has in all things concerning the appeal been free from any charge of neglect of duty, and has, as far as lay in his power, done everything that he is required to do in order to bring the case in proper shape before the appellate court, the Irregularities of the mail.— Where it is alleged, without contradiction, that the transcript was mailed in ample time to have reached the office of the clerk of the appellate court before the expiration of the limit, and that the delay was caused by some irregularity in the mail, a motion to dismiss will be denied. Walker v. Scott, 104 N. C. 481, 10 S. E. 523. But, where a party holds the papers without cause till barely enough time is left for them to reach their destination, he cannot excuse himself by alleging delay in the mail. C. 283, 28 S. E. 365; Bailey v. Brown, 105 N. C. 127, 10 S. E. 1054.

A clerk has a right to refuse to transmit the transcript until he is paid for it (Steiner v. Harding, 88 Md. 343, 41 Atl. 799; Parsons v. Padgett, 65 Md. 356, 4 Atl. 410; British, etc., Mortg. An exorbitant charge for the transcript is proper showing, would have been granted,[79] or in failing to resort to mandamus or other appropriate remedy to procure the transmission and filing of the transcript.[80] The general rule is that the neglect or fault of the attorney is imputable to the client.[81]

(D) Nature of Excuse — (1) IN GENERAL. By the wording of some provisions appellant's delay in filing his transcript can only be excused by his showing the delay to have been consequent upon the happening of an event beyond his control;[82] other provisions are to the effect that a good cause is sufficient to excuse the delay,[83] and still others go so far as to excuse such a delay only for providential cause.[84]

(2) ABSENCE OR INABILITY OF APPELLANT'S ATTORNEY. The absence from the state of appellant's counsel,[85] though it is alleged to have been unavoidable,[86] unless under circumstances which appeal strongly to the discretionary power of the court, and every effort is made to atone for the delay, is not sufficient excuse for a failure to file a transcript within the prescribed time;[87] but it has been held that, if appellant uses all possible diligence, his failure to properly present his case on appeal, in consequence of the illness of his attorney, may be excused.[88]

(3) APPELLANT'S INABILITY TO PAY COSTS. While, as a general rule, delay in filing a transcript cannot be excused because appellant failed to provide his attorneys with funds to pay therefor,[89] it has been held that if appellant has been diligent in the prosecution of his appeal, and appellee is not prejudiced by the delay, the former will not be deprived of the benefit of the appeal merely because he was unable, by reason of poverty, to provide the funds for the payment of the costs within the time prescribed by the rules for filing the transcript.[90]

(4) FAULT OF APPELLEE OR RESPONDENT. Appellee cannot be successful, in a motion to dismiss the appeal or affirm the judgment, on the ground of delay in transmitting or filing the record, where such delay occurred through his own fault, or was equally attributable to him.[91] On the other hand, the court may take such action as will fully protect appellant's rights.[92]

(5) FAULT OF OFFICER OF COURT. In the language used by several courts, if due diligence is shown, parties will not be allowed to suffer through the default of an officer of the court.[93] This rule has been applied where it was shown that sufficient length of time before the case arises in the appellate court to enable appellant to procure another attorney, is not a sufficient excuse. House v. Williams, 40 Tex. 346.

The fact that an appellant is so ill as to be unable to attend to the filing of the papers and the payment of fees is no excuse for delay when it is not shown that his attorney was unable to attend to the matter. McManus v. Humes 6 Iowa 159.

Where the attorney's clerk, contrary to his employer's instructions, took the appeal during his employer's illness, but failed to file the transcript, the attorney knowing nothing of this till he was served with notice of motion to dismiss, after which he used all diligence in rectifying the mistake, a motion to dismiss was properly denied. Bates v. Schroeder, (Cal. 1888) 19 Pac. 121.

89. Monett Bank v. Moulder, 43 Mo. App. 279 (where the party had left the state shortly after the trial); Bobb v. Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 32 Mo. App. 256 (where appellant was a non-resident); Trotter v. Kleinschmidt, 21 Mont. 532, 55 Pac. 29 (where appellant had left the state temporarily, without leaving any address). See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2759.

Appeal by an administrator.— In Becker v. Fairley, 41 Mo. App. 52, an administrator de bonis non, who had been appointed since the appeal was taken, attempted to excuse the delay by alleging that there were no means of the estate wherewith to pay for the transcript, but made no affidavit of the fact. The court affirmed the judgment, saying that the fact that an administrator might appeal without bond, the appeal itself operating as a supersedeas, forms an additional reason why he, above all others, should be held to a diligent prosecution of his appeal.

Michigan.— Wattles v. Warren, 7 Mich. 309, where the papers were in the possession of counsel for defendant in error.

Missouri.— Musick v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 124 Mo. 544, 28 S. W. 72, where it was held, however, that appellant could not shift the consequences of his own neglect in not demanding in due season the papers left with appellee's counsel.

New Hampshire.— Rochester v. Roberts, 25 N. H. 495.

South Carolina.— Geddes v. Hutchinson, 39 S. C. 550, 17 S. E. 560, where appellant was not intentionally led to believe that a delay would not be taken advantage of.

South Dakota.— Merchant's Nat. Bank v. McKinney, 1 S. D. 78, 45 N. W. 203, where the delay was on account of the loss of papers which, on a diligent search, could not be found in time, and which were subsequently found in the office of respondent's counsel.

Tennessee.— Hahr v. Musgrove, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 289.

Texas.— Reynolds v. Dechaumes, 22 Tex. 116.

United States.— And see U. S. v. Gomez, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 752, 18 L. ed. 212.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2755.

92. Remandment.— In Beard v. Poydras, 13 La. 82, it was held that, if it appear that appellant is without fault and had been prevented by the adverse party from bringing up a complete record, the court may, in its discretion, remand the cause.

Rule to show cause against reversal.— Where the original papers in a suit are lost or destroyed by the prevailing party, so that the opposite party is precluded from having a transcript made for his appeal, the appellate court will grant a rule on such prevailing party to show cause why the decree shall not be reversed if the papers are not produced. Quarles v. Hiern, 70 Miss. 259, 12 So. 145.

93. Westheimer v. Thompson, 2 Ida. 1137, 31 Pac. 797; Allis v. Newman, 29 Nebr. 207, 45 N. W. 621.

the delay in filing the transcript was due to no shortcoming of appellant,[94] but was caused entirely by the neglect or fault of the clerk or judge.[95] But the failure of a judge or clerk acting, not in the performance of any official duty, but as an agent of appellant, is the failure of appellant.[96]

(6) INEFFECTUAL ATTEMPT TO FILE. If appellant alleges that he made an attempt to file the transcript, but found the clerk's office closed, he must, in order to make his excuse valid, show that he attempted to file during business hours.[97]

94. Inadvertence of the clerk in entering judgment as of a later day than that on which it was rendered cannot be urged by appellant as an excuse. Vigo County v. Terre Haute, 147 Ind. 134, 46 N. E. 350.

That the official stenographer was busy with other matters and did not transcribe the evidence is not a sufficient excuse for failure to file transcript. Stewart v. Davis, 44 Mo. App. 562.

In some states, by statute, the mere failure of the clerk to perform his duty within the time prescribed works no injury to the party. Farrar v. Oglesby, 84 Ga. 188, 11 S. E. 133. But, if the officer is prevented from performing his legal duty by the acts of appellant or his attorney, the delay will not be tolerated. Ashley v. Howard, 99 Ga. 132, 24 S. 97. In the absence of proof, it will be presumed that he went to the clerk's office after business hours. Buckley v. Lacroix, 14 La. Ann. 29. In Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 73 Fed. 314, 19 C. C. A. 477, appellant's excuse was accepted where he showed that he carried the transcript to the door of the clerk's office at five o'clock, on the last day of filing. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2763.

(7) MISTAKE. A mere mistake of fact or of law, for which appellee is not responsible, will not excuse the failure to file within the prescribed time.[98] It has been held, however, that a mistake as to the construction of a statute relating to the time of filing is good cause for failure to file in time.[99]

(8) PENDENCY OF NEGOTIATIONS FOR COMPROMISE. That negotiations are pending for a compromise is no reason for not seasonably filing the transcript.[1]

(9) PENDENCY OF PROCEEDINGS TO PERFECT APPEAL. A failure to seasonably file a transcript, or causing an incomplete transcript to be filed, in the appellate court, which failure is due to the pendency of proceedings to perfect the appeal or settle the case or exceptions, is ordinarily excusable, it appearing that appellant had done all that is required of him to entitle him to a settlement of the bill of exceptions, case, or statement.[2]

The rule applies with equal force where the clerk ineffectually attempts to send up the transcript as where he wholly forbears from doing so, unless the attempt be such as, if made by the party himself, would have been deemed a substantial compliance with the requirements of the law. Hester v. Hester, 20 N. C. 376.

C. 583, 10 S. E. 552 (where a motion to reinstate was made, on the ground of appellant's belief that the filing had been done within the required time); Ihley v. Thompson, 32 S. C. 582, 10 S. E. 550; Calvo v. Railroad Co., 30 S. C. 608, 10 S. E. 389 (where appellant thought that the pendency of a motion to vacate the judgment prevented him from proceeding). See also Ballew v. Anderson, 31 S. C. 602, 9 S. E. 743, to the effect that a local practice cannot take the place of a rule of court.

Washington.— See Tustin v. McFarland, 4 Wash. 103, 29 Pac. 929, where appellant sought to excuse delay in filing briefs by the excuse that he was not sure whether the delayed filing of the transcript was sufficient.

United States.— In Owings v. Tiernan, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 447, 9 L. ed. 489, however, where appellants had lodged the transcript with the clerk, who refused to file the same till the fee bond was executed, and appellants refused to execute the fee bond, supposing that they had done all that the law required them to do, the court refused to dismiss, and allowed additional time.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2757.

Mistake relieved from under provisions of a statute.— In Tribble v. Poore, 28 S. C. 565, 6 S. E. 577, where the delay had arisen through the mistake of appellant's counsel in supposing that the case formed part of the return, the court, being satisfied that the appeal was taken in good faith and not for delay, held that the case came within S. C. Code, § 349, providing that, when any party shall omit, through mistake or inadvertence, to do any act necessary to perfect an appeal, the supreme court may, in its discretion, permit such act to be done on such terms as may be just. See also Cummings v. Wingo, 30 S. C. 611, 9 S. E. 658. It having been frequently pointed out, however, that the case forms no part of the return, recent cases have held such a mistake inexcusable. See Lamb v. Padgett, 45 S. C. 534, 23 S. E. 628.

99. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. McMahan, (Tex. Civ. App. 1892) 20 S. W. 954, it appearing that there was uncertainty surrounding the statutory provisions and a lack of any authoritative construction. See also Nottingham v. McKendrick, (Oreg. 1899) 57 Pac. 195, where the delay was caused by a misunderstanding of the rule.

1. British, etc., Mortg. Co. v. Long, 116 N. C. 77, 20 S. E. 964. Similarly, in Price v. Price, 91 Iowa 693, 60 N. W. 202, 51 Am. St. Rep. 360, 29 L. R. A. 150, it was held that a motion to affirm a judgment for want of an abstract and argument should be denied where the failure to file was due to pending negotiations for a settlement, and, upon the failure of such negotiations, full abstracts and arguments were filed.

2. California.—In re Walkerly, (Cal. 1894) 37 Pac. 893; Matter of Burton, 93 Cal. 613, 29 Pac. 224; Hyde v. Boyle, (Cal. 1890) 24 Pac. 1060.

Missouri.— Kirkwood v. Cairns, 40 Mo. App. 631, holding, however, that an appellant fails to show conclusively that he could not, by the use of reasonable diligence, have filed a complete transcript in the appellate court by showing that an extension of time to file his bill of exceptions was granted, extending over the time for filing the transcript, unless he shows also that the extension was necessary.

Nebraska.— But in Omaha L. & T. Co. v. Ayer, 38 Nebr. 891, 57 N. W. 567, an equity cause, it was held that, the statutory provision requiring appeals in equity causes to be taken within six months, being mandatory (Fitzgerald v. Brandt, 36 Nebr. 683, 54 N. W. 992), and jurisdiction being conferred

j. Manner of Transmission. The manner in which the transcript shall be transmitted is left to appellant's option, and he uses any method at his own peril,[3] statutory provisions relating to the transmission being considered as merely directory.[4]

k. Sufficiency of Filing. Not only must appellant see that the appeal papers are transmitted to, and filed in, the appellate court,[5] but it is also his duty to see that they are filed and entered on the docket in the proper manner.[6] by filing transcript of pleadings and final decree (Schuyler v. Hanna, 28 Nebr. 601, 44 N. W. 731, 11 L. R. A. 321), the failure to file transcript within the time limited would not be excused by inability of appellant, without any fault of his, to procure allowance of bill of exceptions within such time.

South Carolina.— In Donahue v. Enterprise R. Co., 33 S. C. 608, 12 S. E. 560, 665, appellee's amendments to the case not having been agreed to, the case was referred to the judge for settlement, who allowed the amendments, but, at the request of both parties, allowed the omission of such formal facts as counsel should agree upon. It was held that appellant was not justified in omitting to file within the proper time, because it would have entailed upon him some inconvenience to do so, in view of the interlineations and corrections made by such subsequent agreement. See also Beattie v. Latimer, 41 S. C. 552, 19 S. E. 748, holding that, the case as prepared for argument being no part of the return, an inadvertent delay in settling it is not ground for reinstating an appeal, dismissed by the clerk for failure to file the return in season.

Washington.—Norager v. Norwald, 3 Wash. Terr. 246, 14 Pac. 593.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2761.

Exceptions to rulings after judgment.— But it is no excuse for failure to file in time that a bill of exceptions, taken to rulings on motions made subsequent to entry of judgment, had not been settled. Pignaz v. Burnett, 121 Cal. 292, 53 Pac. 633.

Motion to dismiss on this ground will be denied, where the notice of such motion is given before the settling of the bill of exceptions. Reay v. Butler, (Cal. 1890) 25 Pac. 350, where the bill of exceptions was settled only two days before the return of the notice. And see Matter of Scott, 124 Cal. 671, 57 Pac. 654, where the statement was settled subsequent to the giving of the notice to dismiss.

Where the full time allowed for settling has elapsed without appellant having taken any step in the matter, he cannot excuse his failure to file the transcript on the ground that the bill of exceptions is not settled. Smith v. Solomon, 84 Cal. 537, 24 Pac. 286.

Where the time for a statement on appeal in the lower court has expired, the presentation of such statement, after a motion to dismiss in the appellate court has been made for want of transcript, is not an excuse that will prevent dismissal. Buckley v. Althoff, (Cal. 1890) 24 Pac. 635.

3. Placing the document in the hands of an express company, to be forwarded to the clerk for filing, is not the equivalent of filing. Ward v. Healy, 110 Cal. 587, 42 Pac. 1071. And see Blackburn v. Blackburn, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 564, 42 S. W. 132.

Showing that transcript was forwarded by mail by the clerk of the lower court, appellant making no effort to learn of its arrival or non-arrival, is not a showing of the diligence required by law. Hathaway v. Smith, 3 Ark. 248.

4. In Beebe v. Young, 13 Mich. 221, it was held that a statutory provision, requiring the return to be transmitted to the nearest clerk's office, was not designed for the protection of the rights of parties, but only to promote the orderly transaction of business, and was to be regarded as directory only.

Compare, however, Best v. Young, 6 Wis. 67, wherein it is held that, if it is required that the clerk shall attach together and file certain papers which shall constitute the judgment-roll, sending up in an envelope a number of papers not attached is not sufficient.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2743.

Requirement that papers are to be "enveloped" when transmitted means simply that they should be securely wrapped. It does not require that they should be sent under seal. Harring v. Barwick, 24 Ga. 59.

5. See supra, XIII, I, 2, b.

6. Furthman v. McNulta, 182 Ill. 310, 55 N. E. 371; Grunow v. Menge, 36 La. Ann. 925; Walton v. Campbell, 51 Nebr. 788, 71 N. W. 737. But see Brafford v. Reed, 124 N. C. 345, 32 S. E. 726, to the effect that, when a case on appeal comes into possession of the clerk of the supreme court, it is his duty to docket it at once.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2743; and supra, VII, F [2 Cyc. 876].

File-marks are but evidence of filing, and, if the necessary papers are transferred to the office of the clerk of the appellate court, this is a sufficient filing without additional file-marks. Nimmons v. Westfall, 33 Ohio St. 213. See also Newman v. Clyburn, 40 S. C. 549, 18 S. E. 889 (where the case was delivered at the clerk's office on the last day of the time allowed, but not marked "Filed" by him till the next day); Aultman v. Utsey, 33 S. C. 611, 12 S. E. 628 (where the papers were taken from the office of the clerk for the use of the printer before they had been marked "Filed").

Marking as filed in the lower court.— In Holmes v. Parker, 2 Ill. 567, a writ of certiorari was granted to have a true record sent up, because, among the papers sent up in the record, were some that had not been marked "Filed" in the court below.

3. Withdrawal and Refiling. Appellant will be allowed to withdraw the transcript and supply defects and omissions in his appeal.[7] On refiling a record which has been withdrawn, plaintiff in error should comply with all the statutory requirements.[8]

4. Service of Copies — a. Necessity. When required by statute or rule of court to do so, a party appealing must serve on appellee or respondent a copy of the papers on appeal within the time prescribed for so doing.[9]

Obvious mistakes, which do not tend to prejudice either party, will be ignored. McClellan v. Pycatt, 49 Fed. 259, 4 U. S. App. 98, 1 C. C. A. 241.

E. 425; Nichols v. Fraser, 54 Ga. 696; Miller v. Jasper, 10 Tex. 513 (in which case it was held that, where appellant had filed his transcript before he was compelled to, he might, on motion, withdraw it); Porter v. Foley, 21 How. (U. S.) 393, 16 L. ed. 154; Ballance v. Forsyth, 21 How. (U. S.) 389, 16 L. ed. 143. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2723. Compare Brafford v. Reed, 124 N. C. 345, 32 S. E. 726, wherein it is said that, when the transcript reaches the clerk, it becomes a record of the appellate court, and neither party to the appeal has thereafter any control over it.

If an application for a supersedeas be overruled, the transcript of the record must remain with the clerk of the court applied to, unless the court refused to decide on the merits of the errors assigned, for want of jurisdiction. Whitney v. Douds, Hard. (Ky.) 373.

Where, after argument and before decision, counsel for plaintiff in error moved to withdraw the bill of exceptions, on the ground that the case had not been settled, the motion will be granted even though other counsel, who were interested in the decision but did not represent the original parties, objected. Glenn v. Botts, 79 Ga. 212, 9 S. E. 425. But see, however, Green v. Southern Express Co., 41 Ga. 515, and Chambers v. O'Brian, 14 Tex. 205, to the effect that the record should at all times be guarded with vigilance, and that, after a cause has been argued and submitted, the withdrawal of the record might seriously impede the course of justice, and neither party should be permitted to take it out of the clerk's office. So, also, when a case has been finally determined in the appellate court, important rights depending upon the judgment may be acquired by third parties, and sound policy demands that the transcript upon which the case has been decided should be carefully preserved, and not withdrawn even with the consent of the parties. Hart v. West, 92 Tex. 416, 49 S. W. 361. To the same effect see Cheney v. Hughes, 138 U. S. 403, 11 S. Ct. 303, 34 L. ed. 993.

Where the transcript has been prematurely sent up by defendant in error before errors have been assigned, the proper course for plaintiff in error is to file an assignment, and then apply for a new transcript, and not to move to withdraw the assigned errors. Hutchinson v. Owen, 20 Tex. 287.

Withdrawal by appellant of the entire record on appeal, leaving nothing of the case in the supreme court after the expiration of the six months from the rendition of the decree, without any saving order as to appellant's rights under the appeal, is equivalent to a voluntary dismissal of the appeal. Jefferson County v. Saxon, 10 Nebr. 14, 4 N. W. 309.

Withdrawn to be used in another proceeding.— Leave will be granted to withdraw the record from the supreme court, in order to be used in the appellate court on a motion to tax costs, the record to be returned after use. Highway Com'rs v. People, 100 Ill. 474.

Withdrawn without leave of court.— But where the transcript was filed before errors were assigned, and was afterward withdrawn, without leave, that errors might be assigned and made part of the record, and was not again filed before the expiration of the time limited, the appeal was dismissed. Flanagan v. McClarty, 10 Tex. 286.

8. Nichols v. Fraser, 54 Ga. 696.

Where the transcript has been prematurely filed appellant may, on motion, withdraw it, and, upon returning it to the clerk with a copy of the assignment of errors attached, it may be refiled; or, if he returns it with such a copy and requests the clerk, in the presence of the appellee's attorney, to attach it, it is sufficient even though the clerk refuses to do so. Miller v. Jasper, 10 Tex. 513.

9. Wade v. De Leyer, 63 N. Y. 318; Wright v. New York, 13 N. Y. St. 153. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2773 et seq.

A rule requiring, in effect, that respondent be served with a copy of the judgment-roll is not abrogated by a statutory provision requiring appellant to furnish the court with such copy. Livingston v. Miller, 1 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 117.

Effect of discontinuance of call.— It is held in Missouri that, where the hearing of a call is ordered continued, this is tantamount to an order for a resetting of the docket, and, if counsel prepare and serve their abstracts and briefs in time for the day on which the case is set, they will not be deemed in default. Badger Lumber Co. v. Stepp, 157 Mo. 366, 57 S. W. 1059.

Rule applies to appeals pending at the time of its adoption. Dresser v. Brooks, 2 N. Y. 559.

Service not necessary on one not a party.— In Holliman v. Hawkinsville, 109 Ga. 107, 34 S. E. 214, a bill of exceptions was sued out to review a certiorari to a judgment of a municipal court, where there had been conviction for violating a municipal ordinance, and it was held that, the state not being a party, there need be no service on the solicitor-general.

b. Effect of Failure to Serve. Appellant cannot be deprived of the full time allowed in which to serve the papers.[10] But if he fails to serve a copy of the record or other papers within the time allowed, as a general rule his appeal will be dismissed on motion as a penalty for the delay.[11]

c. Excuse For Failure to Serve. The rule to dismiss for a failure to serve appeal papers within the prescribed time [12] is in the public interest and to promote the dispatch of business,[13] and, however hard its enforcement may seem in individual cases, the court is bound to look at both sides, and will, generally, grant the motion.[14] The facts that the case was so bulky that it could not be

Service must be made upon all of the opposite parties or their attorneys. It is not sufficient to serve one where there are several. Jacksonville, etc., R., etc., Co. v. Broughton, 38 Fla. 139, 20 So. 829.

Where a joint and several judgment is rendered against a number of defendants, and proceedings in error are instituted by a part of the defense, the other defendants must be served with a copy of the case. Eaton v. Mendenhall, (Kan. 1896) 44 Pac. 683.

Where there are several plaintiffs in error, or appellants, it is sufficient if one of them serves a copy of the transcript on the opposite party or his attorney. Jacksonville, etc., R., etc., Co. v. Broughton, 38 Fla. 139, 20 So. 829.

A failure to serve a substantially correct copy is equivalent to want of service. Green v. McMann, 79 Cal. 561, 21 Pac. 964. However, in Allen v. Lewis, 38 Fla. 115, 20 So. 821, the paging of the copy served was different from that of the original, but appellee was not allowed to gain advantage from this, because he refused to surrender it to appellant for correction within the time allowed for service. And see People v. Infant Asylum, 4 N. Y. St. 669, where the papers were returned with objections.

File-marks need not appear in the copy served. Spokane, etc., Lumber Co. v. Loy, 21 Wash. 501, 58 Pac. 672, 60 Pac. 1119.

If some defendants are not interested in the appeal, a motion to dismiss, on the ground that the statement was not served on all the adverse parties, will be denied. Dore v. Dougherty, 72 Cal. 232, 13 Pac. 621, 1 Am. St. Rep. 48.

In North Carolina it is held that the proper way to take advantage of a failure of appellants to serve a case-stated on appeal is, in the absence of errors appearing in the record or properly assigned, to move to affirm the judgment. Howell v. Jones, 109 N. C. 102, 13 S. E. 889; Walker v. Scott, 102 N. C. 487, 9 S. E. 488.

Remedy by dismissal not exclusive.—Brown v. Niess, 46 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 465. And see Wright v. New York, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 349.

Service of imperfect case.— In Bowers v. Tallmadge, 20 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 516, it was held there could be a motion to dismiss only where there has been a total failure to serve the case within the time required. Upon service of an imperfect case the remedy is by motion to amend.

To justify the court in dismissing the cause for failure of service appellee must take advantage of such failure in the manner and at the time prescribed in the rule. Mora v. Schick, 4 N. M. 158, 13 Pac. 341. And it has been held that an order of dismissal for such a cause cannot be regularly entered, if service has actually been made. By failure to follow up his advantage, respondent waives the laches of appellant. Flanders v. McDonald, 39 Wis. 288; Hundhausen v. Atkins, 36 Wis. 250. So, an objection that the statement was not authenticated, as not being signed, cannot be made by appellee when, without objection, he accepted service from appellant's attorney of a statement indorsed: "Defendant's Statement of the Case." Richardson v. Eureka, 96 Cal. 443, 31 Pac. 458.

Question raised after commencement of argument.—In Davis, etc., Bldg., etc., Co. v. Riverside Butter, etc., Co., 84 Wis. 262, 54 N. W. 506, the court refused to entertain a motion to dismiss for failure to serve within the proper time, made after the argument had been commenced.

Under a rule requiring service of copies within twenty days after the filing of the return, where the return had not been filed when notice requiring service was given, and no demand that the return be filed has been made as required by another rule, it was held, in Hogg v. Pinckney, 15 S. C. 616, that the notice was premature, and that the appeal should not have been dismissed for failure to comply with it.

14. Lysaght v. Berkeley County Land, etc., Co., 41 S. C. 554, 19 S. E. 747.

Where the appeal is brought in good faith it has been held that a default in not serving printed within the time allowed for service, and the party failed to ask for an extension of time,[15] or that respondent's former attorney declined to surrender exhibits used upon the trial, upon which exhibits the attorney claims a lien, are not sufficient excuses to prevent the application of the rule.[16] An oral agreement of counsel that the rule might be dispensed with will not, generally, be considered.[17]

J. Defects, Objections, Amendments, and Correction — 1. Effect of Defects or Omissions — a. In General. Where the transcript, return, case, or statement on appeal is so imperfect, by reason of defects or omissions therein, that the rights of the parties cannot properly be determined, the practice to be pursued varies in the different jurisdictions. In some, the appeal will be dismissed;[18] in others, the judgment below will be affirmed;[19] in others, an opporpapers within the time prescribed will be relieved against unless respondent shows some delay or inconvenience resulting therefrom. Waterman v. Whitney, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 407. And see Jones v. Mann, 72 Fed. 85, 18 C. C. A. 442. Compare Matter of Boyd, 25 Cal. 511, wherein it was held that, if reasonable diligence has been used, the appeal will not be dismissed, though appellant will not be permitted to bring up the hearing on the first term against the objection of respondent that he has not had time since the service to prepare for argument.

tunity will be afforded to correct the defects;[20] in others the cause will be remanded;[21] while yet in others the disposition of the case is dependent upon the discretion of the court, in view of all the circumstances.[22] Judgments of reversal have also been entered where the record fails to show facts necessary to the jurisdiction of the court below.[23] But an appeal will not be dismissed, nor the judgment affirmed, if any questions properly arise on the partial record.[24]

b. Particular Defects or Omissions — (i) In Authentication or Certificate. The due authentication of the transcript or return is necessary in order to confer jurisdiction on the appellate court, and, consequently, defects of a material character in the certificate of the judge or clerk below will necessitate the dismissal of the appeal or writ of error.[25] But mere formal or trivial defects are not ground for dismissal, and, where necessary, they may be corrected upon proper application.[26]

(II) In Evidence. In some jurisdictions, the failure to incorporate in the transcript or return all the evidence introduced, or offered and excluded, which is necessary to a decision upon the errors assigned, will cause the appeal or writ of error to be dismissed. In others, for cause shown, or in the discretion of the court, the case may be remanded, or certiorari issue, for insertion of omitted matter, or, in the absence of errors upon the face of the record proper, the judgment may be affirmed.[27]

(III) In Findings or Judgment. The omission from the transcript or return on appeal of the findings upon which the judgment or decree below was based will necessitate the dismissal of the appeal or writ of error.[28] So, where the transcript or return does not contain the judgment or decree appealed from,[29] or show that one was, in fact, rendered, the appeal or writ of error will be dismissed.[30]

(IV) In Making Up Case, Statement, Transcript, or Return—(A) Case or Statement—(1) In General. A case or statement of facts on appeal, not made up, settled, signed, and filed as required by statute, will, on motion in the appellate court, be stricken from the record;[31] and, in some jurisdictions, the appeal or writ of error will be dismissed or the judgment below affirmed.[32] But,

Though the transcript states that a judgment was rendered, the appeal will be dismissed if the judgment of the trial court does not appear in the record. Johnson v. McFall, 61 Mo. 413; Matter of Spencer, 61 Mo. 375.

And see Rauh v. Scholl, 19 Wash. 30, 52 Pac. 332, in which it was held that a motion to strike out a statement of facts, because settled by a judge after his term of office had expired, will be denied where a certificate was also procured from his successor.

Wisconsin.—The supreme court will not entertain a motion for respondent to dismiss an appeal because of appellant's non-compliance with the rules respecting the mode of preparing the printed case, but will, on its own motion, make such order as may be proper. Pearson v. Martin, 38 Wis. 265.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2785.

Filing copy instead of original.—In Archer v. Long, 35 S. C. 585, 14 S. E. 24, it was held that the filing of a copy instead of the original case, as provided for in S. C. Cir. Ct. Rules, No. 49, was not ground for dismissing the appeal.

Filing original instead of copy.—It is no ground for striking the statement of facts from the transcript or dismissing the appeal that the clerk has sent up the original statement instead of a copy, such error not being prejudicial. Ward v. Huggins, 7 Wash. 617, 32 Pac. 740, 1015, 36 Pac. 285; Wilson v. Morrell, 5 Wash. 654, 32 Pac. 733.

Remandment for settlement.—In U. S. v. Adams, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 101, 18 L. ed. 792, it was held that, though the statement of facts by the court below did not comply with the rules of the supreme court, this would not affect the jurisdiction of the appellate court or be a ground for the dismissal of the case. The case should be remanded to be resettled.

Want of seal.—Even though a seal is required by statute, the want of it will not invalidate a statement of facts. Lacey v. Ashe, 21 Tex. 394. By permission of the appellate court, the seal may be attached to the clerk's certificate of a case-made which was settled and signed in due time, even after the expiration of the time to appeal. E. 942. Compare Wilson v. Janes, 29 Kan. 233, in which it was held that a case-made will not necessarily be dismissed for the reason that it was changed by the judge below after, strictly speaking, it had passed from his jurisdiction, the alteration being one manifestly originally intended by both parties, and one which justice required should be made.

Waiver.—A petition in error will not be dismissed because the case for the supreme court was settled and signed without notice to defendant in error, if the latter acknowl-

where appellant or plaintiff in error is not chargeable with negligence, the error may be overlooked, and, where necessary, the case or statement remanded for resettlement.[33]

(2) Failure to Take Proceedings in Time. The effect of failure to make, settle, sign, or file a case or statement of facts in the prescribed time varies in different jurisdictions. In some the appeal or writ of error will be dismissed,[34] while in others the case or statement will be disregarded, and, in the absence of errors apparent upon the face of the record, the judgment below affirmed.[35]

(B) Transcript or Return. For a failure to comply with the rules of court as to the making of a transcript or return, the appeal or writ of error may be dismissed or continued, or the judgment below be affirmed or reversed, or such other order made as the court may direct.[36]

(V) In Pleadings. Where the transcript of the record on appeal or the return contains no pleadings, an appeal or writ of error will be dismissed,[37] or the edged service of the case-made and afterward suggested amendments, all of which, of any importance, were made. Kansas Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Amick, 36 Kan. 99, 12 Pac. 338.

judgment will be affirmed,[38] or the cause remanded;[39] and, where it appears that no declaration was filed or issue joined, the judgment below will be reversed.[40]

(VI) In Proceedings For Review. An appeal or writ of error will be dismissed where the transcript or return fails to show affirmatively that all the steps necessary to a review — as the taking of the appeal or suing out of the writ of error,[41] the service of notice, where required,[42] the granting of the appeal,[43] and the filing of the required bond, which must be transcribed[44] — have been taken.

d. Inclusion of Unnecessary Matter. The practice of the courts varies as to the disposition of an appeal or writ of error where the transcript, return, case, statement, or abstract is encumbered with unnecessary matter. The true rule would seem to be that the appellate court, in the absence of statutory enactment on the subject, will be guided by the circumstances of each case, and make such order as will be most just and equitable.[46]

2. Amendment and Correction[47]— a. Defects or Errors Which May Be Amended or Corrected. Defects or errors in a transcript or return on appeal, when not of a jurisdictional character, are, as a rule, amendable, in the discretion of the court, where laches is not imputable to the applicant.[48] They must,

Omission of immaterial instructions.— Where the trial judge certified that the statement contained all the material facts in the case, it was held that the omission of an instruction not claimed to be material by appellees was no ground for dismissing the appeal. Haas v. Gaddis, 1 Wash. 89, 23 Pac. 1010.

Omission of immaterial issue.— In Dufau v. Couprey, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 170, 8 L. ed. 359, it was held that a writ of error would not be dismissed because one of the matters put in issue in the court below did not appear by the record to have been decided, where the issue actually found made the other issues immaterial.

Civ. App. 50, 44 S. W. 684). Similarly, an appeal will not be dismissed on the ground that the certificate of the clerk contains more than is necessary. Simon v. Walker, 26 La. Ann. 603.

however, in order to allow their correction, either be apparent upon the face of the transcript or return, or be satisfactorily shown by affidavit or other evidence.[49]

b. Jurisdiction — (i) Of Lower Court. Defects and omissions in the record may be amended in the lower court in all cases where the amendment or correction is made before filing in the appellate court.[50] As to the power of the lower court to amend after the transcript or return has been filed above, except in the case of formal or trivial errors,[51] the decisions are hopelessly conflicting.[52]

(ii) Of Appellate Court. While the appellate court may make appropriate orders for the amendment or correction of a record by the lower court, it cannot, itself, make such amendments or corrections[53] save in cases of formal and

d. Procedure — (I) In Lower Court — (A) Application. Notice of an application to amend the record should be given to the adverse party.[64]

(B) Certifying, Transmitting, and Incorporating Amendments — (1) In General. Amendments to the record made in the court below must be properly certified, and incorporated in, or annexed to, the transcript or return, and transmitted to the appellate court, or they cannot be considered. And where the transcript or return is already on file in the appellate court, and has not been withdrawn for amendment, the amendments, after certification, should be transmitted to the appellate court, and there annexed to the transcript or return.[65]

(2) Necessity of Certiorari or Other Order. Amendments and corrections made in a record before the transcript or return has been certified to, and filed in, the appellate court may be incorporated in, and made part of, the transcript or return without certiorari or other order of the appellate court.[66] But, after the transcript or return has been filed in the appellate court, amendments can, as a rule, only be made by certiorari or other order of that court.[67]

In Illinois no writ of certiorari is necessary to bring up an amended record, but the party interested in making the amendment can file it as an additional or amended record, and it will be considered in connection with the original transcript. Rowley v. Hughes, 40 Ill. 71. See also Flagler v. Crow, 40 Ill. 70, in which counsel for the plaintiff in error asked leave to file an additional transcript of the record instead of applying for a writ of certiorari. The court said: "There being no objection, the motion will be allowed."

In Louisiana the filing of properly certified

(II) In Appellate Court — (A) In General. To correct defects, omissions, or errors, the appellate court may, on motion, issue certiorari,[68] remand for correction,[69] or make such other order as may appropriately meet the requirements of the case.[70]

(B) Remitting Cause to Lower Court. An order remitting a cause to the lower court, in order to allow an amended transcript or return to be filed, may be made, in the discretion of the appellate court.[71] A remandment, however, cannot be made to permit an amendment as to matters outside of the record.[72] An appellate court will often, instead of causing amendments to be made, disregard mere formal and harmless defects in the transcript or return.[73]

copies of missing parts of a transcript, absent by fault of the clerk of the lower court, is permissible, although it is not the method prescribed for perfecting an incomplete record. Borde v. Erskine, 29 La. Ann. 822.

In New York the court below may amend the record and order the amendment certified to the court of appeals and filed with the clerk of that court after the record has been filed pursuant to the notice of appeal. A motion to remit the record for the purpose of an amendment is unnecessary. Peterson v. Swan, 119 N. Y. 662, 23 N. E. 1004, 30 N. Y. St. 208.

e. Review of Action Allowing or Refusing Amendments. On appeal from an order amending or refusing to amend the record, every presumption will be in favor of the action of the lower court; unless there is record evidence clearly showing that the order of the lower court is erroneous, the appellate court will not interfere.[74]

f. Stipulations For Amendment. An appellate court will not, as a rule, consider agreements of counsel to amend and supply deficiencies in a properly certified and authenticated transcript or return;[75] but, where the consent of the court below to such amendment is obtained, it seems that such agreements may be considered.[76]

g. Operation and Effect of Amendment. Amendments and corrections, duly made, certified to, and filed in the appellate court, are considered, together with the original transcript or return, as constituting the true record of the court below, upon which the decision of the appellate court is to be rendered.[77]

3. Waiver of Defects and Objections — a. In General. Defects and omissions in the transcript or return may be either expressly or impliedly waived where they are not jurisdictional.[78]

Effect of unauthorized amendment.—Where the judge of the trial court, without authority from the appellate court or assent of both parties, amended the bill of exceptions after it had been entered in the supreme court, it was held that a party who did not assent to the amendment might elect either to argue the bill as amended, or to have it stand over for hearing before the trial judge. b. Failure to Make Application For Amendment. The failure of a party to apply for amendment of the transcript or return, or to object on the ground of defects or omissions therein, will constitute a waiver of the objection where the defects do not go to the jurisdiction of the appellate court.[79]

c. Failure to Object in Trial Court. The failure to object in the lower court to defects or omissions in the transcript or return, where the amendments might be there made, constitutes a waiver of non-jurisdictional defects.[80]

d. Stipulation to Waive. Defects and omissions in the transcript or return of a case on appeal may be waived by stipulation.[81]

Objection made in brief.— In San Francisco, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson, 77 Cal. 297, 19 Pac. 517, it was held that an objection to the sufficiency of the certificate that an undertaking had been filed, made in a printed brief, together with a request that an appeal be dismissed, was a sufficient compliance with a rule of the supreme court requiring such objection to be taken and notice given to appellant in writing.

The submission of a cause by agreement without objection, on the ground of defects in the transcript, is a waiver thereof. State v. Madison County, 92 Ind. 133. See also Anderson Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Thompson, 88 Ind. 405.

4. Certiorari to Bring Up Record — a. Jurisdiction to Issue — (I) In General. The authority to issue certiorari, or to make similar orders directing a return of a full and complete transcript, is vested in the appellate court, and may be exercised, in its discretion, in all proper cases.[82]

(II) Issuance by Court Sua Sponte. Where, upon inspection of the record, it appears that there are defects or omissions in the transcript or return which may be important, the appellate court may, of its own motion, issue a certiorari to the proper court or officer to supply such defects or omissions.[83]

b. Grounds of Issuance — (I) In General. Where there is shown to be a defect[84] or a diminution in the record,[85] or for the purpose of bringing up amend-

After submission.— In St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wills, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 30 S. W. 248, it was held that, after an appeal has been submitted, the record may be perfected by certiorari so as to incorporate therein the judgment of the trial court, which had been omitted, and thereby give the appellate court jurisdiction of the appeal.

Upon a review of a judgment of an intermediate court dismissing an appeal thereto from a judgment of a justice of the peace, the appellate court cannot require the justice to certify directly to itself an amended transcript. appellate court is authorized to ascertain matters of fact necessary to the proper exercise of its jurisdiction, it may inquire as to the truth of the record sent up.[10]

3. Conflict in Record — a. In General. In case of conflicting statements entitled to equal weight the court will consider the whole record, and put that construction upon it which is consistent and which is evidently in accord with the facts.[11] A recital in the judgment will be given credit in preference to a memorandum on the bench docket,[12] the record of the clerk,[13] the minutes of the judge,[14] or a declaration in an assignment of error.[15] And the record-entry governs a certificate of the clerk.[16] So, too, the regular record-entry of the verdict will be received in preference to a copy of the verdict inserted elsewhere in the transcript.[17]

b. Between Abstracts. In case of discrepancy between an abstract and a counter-abstract, the original record will be examined.[18]

tions, duly signed and sealed by the judge, are not in harmony, the real truth will be taken to be as stated by the latter.[19] Thus, if a bill of exceptions has been agreed to by the parties, and has been approved by the judge, its statements cannot be varied by a subsequent statement of facts in the case settled on appeal to which the parties have not agreed.[20] But that which belongs to the record proper and is contained therein cannot be contradicted by anything contained in the bill of exceptions.[21]

d. Between Case and Other Parts of Record. Where there is a discrepancy between the record and the case on appeal, the record controls.[22]

2. Jurisdiction of Trial Court. Objections, on appeal, to the jurisdiction of the trial court will not be considered when the record contains recitals showing jurisdiction, and nothing conflicting therewith except allegations of a motion by the objecting party for the dismissal of the cause.[25]

3. Form of Action. In order to determine questions as to the proper form of action on appeal, the evidence on which the judgment was based should be made to appear by the record.[26]

4. Parties. Where no question as to parties is presented by the record none will be considered.[27]

Denial of relief.— An appellate court cannot pass on a question of the power of the lower court to grant certain relief unless it appears in the order or decree that the denial of such relief was upon the ground of want of power. Matter of Whittall, 49 N. Y. Suppl. 282.

Disqualification of trial judge.— An objection, on the ground of the disqualification of the trial judge, cannot be sustained where the case or statement of facts fails to show the disqualification. Thomson v. Brown, 48 S. C. 350, 26 S. E. 655; Wright v. Sherwood, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 37 S. W. 468.

Failure to show that property seized was without the limits of the trial justice.— Where the record does not state that property seized in replevin was without the territorial limits of the justice of the peace who tried the cause, such an objection cannot be considered. Coleman v. Gordon, (Miss. 1894) 16 So. 340.

26. Bartling v. Thielman, 183 Ill. 88, 55 N. E. 677, wherein it was held that, in the absence of a bill of exceptions containing the evidence, the supreme court cannot sustain an objection that the action should not sound in tort; Janes v. Buzzard, Hempst. (U. S.) 240, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,206*a*, wherein it was held that an objection, entered because of the misconception of an action, is not valid in error where the bill of exceptions does not present all the facts as detailed in evidence in the court below.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 2873.

As to record showing that action was properly constituted see supra, XIII, A, 3, a [2 Cyc. 1035].

Cause of action.— The appellate court will not pass upon a question as to the cause of an action unless all the evidence is in the record. Gunn v. Strong, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 650, 47 S. W. 339; Bragg v. Rutland, 70 Vt. 606, 41 Atl. 578.

Defenses to action.— Where the answer is omitted from the record, and there is nothing to show that the defense insisted upon was an issue in the trial court, the question as to the alleged defense will not be considered. St. Louis Brokerage Co. v. Bagnell, 8 Mo. App. 565.

Splitting cause of action.— A defendant may, if he wishes, waive the benefit of the rule that a single cause of action cannot be split; a refusal of the trial court, therefore, to find that there was a single cause of action will not be disturbed on appeal unless all the evidence is in the record, as there may have been evidence of the waiver of defendant. Infancy or incapacity to sue.— The question of a plaintiff's infancy or his legal incapacity to sue is not presented on appeal where his age is not stated in any of the pleadings. Edwards v. Beall, 75 Ind. 401.

New parties.— Upon the allowance of an amendment introducing new parties it is the duty of appellant to put into the record all the grounds he relies on to show error in that allowance, and if none appear it will be sustained. Pass v. McRea, 36 Miss. 143.

5. Process. Questions as to the sufficiency of process, or the service or return thereof, will not be considered where such process or the return thereto are not contained in the record.[28]

6. Pleadings — a. In General. An assignment of error in regard to the pleadings will not be considered on appeal if the record does not contain the pleadings.[29]

b. Amendments. The action of the trial court in allowing, or refusing to allow, an amendment of a pleading will not be reviewed where the record fails to show the amendment allowed or refused.[30]

As to record showing service of process see supra, XIII, A, 2, b, (III) [2 Cyc. 1034].

As to review of discretion of trial court as to amendment of process see infra, XIII, F, 2, a.

Absence of seal.— Where the validity of process is challenged on appeal, on the ground of the absence of a seal, the record must affirmatively show that the seal was not on the writ; and the mere fact that there is no scroll or word "Seal" on the copy at the place where the seal is usually affixed is insufficient to show the absence thereof, when opposed to a recital in the writ itself that the seal was affixed. Morris v. Bunyan, 58 Kan. 210, 48 Pac. 864.

Showing as to finding upon service.— Upon appeal from an order vacating a judgment for want of service of process, it is necessary that the record should show how the judge found upon the question of such service. Cardwell v. Cardwell, 64 N. C. 621.

Variance between summons and copy.— In order that an appellate court may take notice of an alleged variance between the original summons and the copy served, the record should fully set out such variance, so that the court may determine its materiality. Dunschen v. Higgins, 2 Mont. 302.

Where, in support of the objections to service of summons, made by a special appearance for that purpose, affidavits were filed, but did not appear in the record, the rulings of the lower court must be sustained. Life Ins. Clearing Co. v. Altschuler, 53 Nebr. 481, 73 N. W. 942.

As to original pleading as part of record see supra, XIII, B, 1, c, (VI) [2 Cyc. 1060].

As to presumptions as to amendments see infra, XVII, E, 2, c.

As to review of discretion of trial court as to amendments of pleadings see infra, XVII, F, 2, b, (I).

Necessity of evidence.— An order permitting an amendment to conform to the proof will not be reviewed in the absence of the evidence. Harvey v. Ferguson, 10 Ind. 393.

Showing as to original pleading.— Permission to amend a complaint by substitution will not be reviewed if the record does not disclose the original pleading. O'Connor v. Adams, (Ariz. 1899) 59 Pac. 105. See also Long v. Bolen Coal Co., 56 Mo. App. 605.

Showing as to ruling.— In order to decide whether the court below erred in refusing to allow the filing of an amended complaint, the record should set forth a statement of the grounds on which exception was taken, and the ruling of the court below. Rooney v. Tong, 4 Mont. 597, 2 Pac. 312.

Showing as to submission of amendment.— Where the record does not show that the substituted answer was proposed and submitted to the court, with a motion for leave to file it, the appellate court cannot consider the substituted answer. Schmidt v. Braley, 112 Ill. 48, 1 N. E. 267. So, refusal to allow an amendment is not error where the transcript does not show that any amendment was prepared or submitted, or that good cause was shown therefor. Showing in bill of exceptions.— In Alabama demurrers will not be considered on appeal where the rulings thereon are shown in

d. Striking Out. The ruling of the lower court, on a motion to strike out a pleading, or a part thereof, will not be considered on appeal where the motion,[34] the pleading to which the motion is addressed,[35] and the ruling on the motion[36] are not, by bill of exceptions or otherwise, made a part of the record.

7. Interlocutory Proceedings[37]— a. In General. The action of the trial court upon interlocutory proceedings will not be reviewed on appeal unless the record sets out such facts in regard to such proceedings as will enable the appellate court to determine the propriety and correctness of the decision of the trial court.[38]

As to review of discretion of trial court as to continuance see infra, XVII, F, 2, g, (vi).

Calling application to court's attention.— Error, complaining of the refusal of a continuance, cannot be considered where the record, though showing an application therefor was made, does not show that the error was called to the court's attention. Bumpass v. Anderson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 51 S. W. 1103. See also Nelson v. Farmland Security Co., 58 Nebr. 604, 79 N. W. 161.

Continuance because of amendment.— It is only when material amendments are made changing in some degree the character of the claim that a continuance is allowed, and a refusal of a continuance because of an amendment to the declaration cannot be reviewed where the record does not show what the amendment was. Eames v. Morgan, 37 Ill. 260; Tittle v. Vanleer, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 736.

Number of continuances.— The denial of a motion for a continuance cannot be reviewed on appeal where the bill of exceptions does not disclose how many continuances had already been granted to the applicant. East Dallas v. Barksdale, 83 Tex. 117, 18 S. W. 329; Arnold v. Hockney, 51 Tex. 46.

Showing of merit.— In the absence from the record of an affidavit showing merit, the supreme court will not review the decision of the trial court in refusing another continuance in a case which has been continued for several terms. Moore v. Dickson, 74 N. C. 423.

9. Trial by Jury — a. Right to Jury Trial. In order that the appellate court may pass upon the refusal of a trial by jury the record should show that the case was a proper one for a jury,[46] that a request therefor was made at the proper time, that such request was refused, and that an exception was taken.[47]

b. Impaneling of Jury. Before an appellate court can examine alleged errors occurring in the impaneling of a jury, the evidence and proceedings in the lower court must be preserved in the record.[48]

10. Reference. Questions relating to the report of a referee cannot be reviewed unless the record shows what issues were referred,[49] the evidence,[50] the referee's report of the proceedings had before him,[51] and the exceptions taken thereto.[52]

11. Conduct of Trial[53] — a. Argument of Counsel. Alleged improper remarks by counsel, made in argument to the jury, should be incorporated in the record in order to make them a basis for error.[54]

b. Poll of Jury. A trial court's refusal to allow a poll of the jury will not be reviewed on error where there is nothing on the face of the record to show any demand made by plaintiff in error for a poll.[55]

c. Separation of Jury. Alleged error in permitting the jury to separate after hearing the evidence and arguments, without instructions as to their duties, cannot be considered where the fact of such separation and failure to instruct is not shown by the record.[56]

Vermont.— Ward v. Baker, 16 Vt. 287.

Exceptions to conclusions of law.— On appeal from a judgment entered on the report of a referee, appellant may be heard on exceptions taken to the referee's conclusions of law upon the facts found although the printed case does not contain any of the evidence, but cannot be heard on exceptions to the findings of fact. Frost v. Smith, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 108.

Issues presented by pleadings.— Inasmuch as error may be assigned upon issues of fact presented by the pleadings, although the record contains no certificate of evidence, the appellate court will review, without a certificate of evidence, an order of the court below directing the referee to ignore questions relating to a certain defense set up by the pleadings. As to review of discretion of trial court as to opening and closing see infra, XIII, F, 2, g, (III).

Reading book to jury.— An exception to a ruling allowing counsel in argument to read to the jury portions of a book is not available where it does not disclose what the counsel read, or even that he read anything. Lyons v. Erie R. Co., 57 N. Y. 489. Compare Kingsland v. New York, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 420, 37 N. Y. St. 943.

Refusal to permit argument.— If a party litigant desires to raise the question in the appellate court of the refusal of the court below to allow him to argue the case, he must not only preserve such action of the court by a proper bill of exceptions, but also the fact that he did not argue the case at all. Curtin v. Long, 62 Ill. App. 36.

Right to open and close.— Where the answer upon which a case proceeded to trial is not before the court it cannot be determined whether the trial court abused its discretion in permitting plaintiff to open and close a case. Keokuk Stove Works v. Hammond, 94 Iowa 694, 63 N. W. 563. So, a judgment will not be reversed for error in granting one party the right to open and close where the bill of exceptions fails to show that such privilege was exercised. (2) Sufficiency of Showing. In the absence of a positive statute or rule of court to the contrary, a recital or certificate need not state in express terms that all the evidence is set out. It is sufficient if it affirmatively appears from a reasonable construction of the language used that all the material evidence is preserved.[72] It has been held, however, that a statement "that this was all the testimony given in the cause" is defective, "testimony" and "evidence" not being synonymous.[73] given which would be erroneous under any conceivable state of facts, such instruction may be reviewed, even though the evidence does not appear of record.[77]

(11) Showing That Evidence Is Set Out. The record should also purport to contain all the evidence, or so much, at least, as is essential to determine the correctness of the rulings of the trial court in giving or refusing an instruction.[78] It has been held, however, that, where a ruling of the trial court is erroneous on the evidence set forth, regardless of what other evidence might have been introduced, it is of no consequence that the record does not purport to set out all the evidence.[79] It has also been held that, although a bill of exceptions does not purport to contain all the evidence, the appellate court will review a refusal to give an instruction if sufficient evidence upon which to base such instruction appears.[80]

b. Necessity of Setting Out Instructions Given or Refused. Objections to instructions, given or refused, will not be considered on appeal where such instructions do not appear of record.[81]

Showing that evidence is set out.— Where the certificate of the trial court simply recites that the statement contained all the evidence "considered and proceedings had," findings of fact proposed and refused below cannot be inquired into. Edmonson v. White, 8 N. D. 72, 76 N. W. 986.

Where a former adjudication between the same parties is set up in defense of an action and found against defendant, and the finding where the only error complained of is that the conclusions of law are not sustained by the findings of fact, and the record fully presents that question, the question may be reviewed although the evidence is not preserved in the record.[89] It has also been held that, where the court has tried the facts, and a conclusion of law drawn by the court could not have been authorized by any evidence, the appellate court will reverse for the error although the bill of exceptions does not purport to contain all the evidence.[90]

c. Necessity of Setting Out Pleadings. Since findings of fact and conclusions of law can be measured only in the light of the issues submitted to the trial court, exceptions to conclusions of law will not be considered on appeal in the absence of the pleadings from the record.[91]

17. Judgment — a. In General — (1) Necessity of Setting Out Evidence. An assignment of error that the court erred in rendering judgment against appellant does not present a question which, in the absence of the evidence, can be reviewed.[93] It is not, however, necessary to bring up the evidence where the objection to the judgment is that it is not consistent with the pleadings,[94] or that in this respect is alone sought to be reviewed, the bill of exceptions will be sufficient if it contains all the evidence relating to the former suit, although it may not purport to contain all the evidence given on the trial. Howell v. Goodrich, 69 Ill. 556.

As to presumptions as to judgment see infra, XVII, E, 2, g.

The action of the court in entering judgment nunc pro tunc, at a term subsequent to that at which it was rendered, after hearing evidence, will not be reviewed where the evidence is not brought up. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. James, (Tex. 1888) 10 S. W. 332.

A motion to modify a judgment by striking out an order requiring defendant to pay into court a certain sum of money, and by taxing the costs of a certain receivership to plaintiff, cannot be reviewed in the absence of the evidence. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Cason, 151 Ind. 329, 50 N. E. 569.

94. Seattle, etc., R. Co. v. Ah Kow, 2 Wash. Terr. 36, 3 Pac. 188. See also Patterson v. Sharp, 41 Cal. 133, wherein it was held that whether a judgment rendered on facts it is not supported by the findings of fact,[95] or by the verdict rendered in the cause.[96]

(II) Necessity of Setting Out Judgment. The sufficiency of a judgment which is not found in the record before the reviewing court cannot be determined on appeal.[97]

(III) Necessity of Setting Out Pleadings. Where the case on appeal contains no copy of the pleadings, an objection that the trial judge went beyond the scope of the pleadings in rendering his decree will not be considered.[98]

b. Arrest of Judgment. A ruling on a motion in arrest of judgment will not be considered on appeal unless the record contains the motion, and the grounds thereof.[99]

c. Vacating or Setting Aside Judgment — (I) In General. An order of the trial court, granting or refusing an application to open, vacate, or set aside a judgment, will not be reviewed on appeal in the absence of the evidence before the trial court.[1]

(II) Judgment by Default. An appeal from an order denying a motion to open a default will not be considered when the pleadings and the evidence before the trial court do not appear in the record.[2] alleged in the complaint, and not denied in the answer, ordered the taking of too large a sum of money is a question to be determined on the judgment alone, without bringing up the evidence.

On an appeal from a decree, without preserving the evidence, the only question for consideration is the conformity of the decree to the allegations and prayer of the bill. Portland Steamship Co. v. Dana, 172 Mass. 447, 52 N. E. 524.

Evidence of the provisions of a parol prayer for an appeal may be taken in the appellate court, where such evidence does not contradict the recitals in the bond and transcript. White Water Valley Canal Co. v. Henderson, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 528.

Probate appeal.— Under a statute providing that all persons aggrieved by any decree of a court of probate, who were present or who were notified to be present, shall appeal, if at all, to the next term of the superior court, it is not necessary that the record of the decree should show whether a party in interest was present or was notified to be service, signing, and settlement of the case-made,[21] or a waiver of the right of appeal.[22]

c. Matters Judicially Noticed — (I) In General. Matters of which an appellate court may take judicial notice need not be incorporated in the record in order to be considered.[23] But rules of the trial court,[24] statutes of a foreign state,[25] municipal ordinances,[26] or a roll of attorneys,[27] unless offered in evidence in the court below and made part of the record, cannot be considered by the appellate court.

(II) Records. An appellate court will take notice of its own records, when properly suggested,[28] but will not take notice, in deciding one case, of what may present. The fact may be shown by parol evidence. Hiscox's Appeal, 29 Conn. 561.

Attorneys.— Where an appearance is entered in the inferior court and never withdrawn, an appeal taken, the judgment below be contained in the record of another and distinct case, unless it be brought to the attention of the court by being made a part of the record of the case under consideration.[29]

d. Official Certificates or Statements. The record on appeal cannot be varied, added to, or explained by, a statement or certificate of the judge before whom the case was tried,[30] the stenographer who took the evidence on the trial,[31] or the clerk who made the record.[32]

e. Stipulations and Agreements. The parties to a cause cannot, by agreeing to a change of the record on appeal,[33] or by stipulation,[34] present for consideration a question different from that which appears by the record to have been decided in the court below.

As to opinion of intermediate appellate court see infra, XVII, J, 2, c.

Where a cause is removed from a state court to the United States supreme court by opinion forms no part of the record,[38] even though copied therein.[39] Facts which appear only from the trial court's opinion will not be considered.[40]

XIV. DISMISSAL, WITHDRAWAL, OR ABANDONMENT.

A. Power to Order Dismissal—1. IN GENERAL. An appellate court, on grounds hereinafter indicated, has power to dismiss an appeal or writ or error either on motion or on its own motion.[41]

2. POWER OF LOWER COURT. After the jurisdiction of the appellate court over an appeal has attached, the trial court is without power to dismiss an appeal allowed by it.[42]

B. Dismissal by Court Sua Sponte. Want of jurisdiction,[43] defects going writ of error, the opinion of the state court cannot be resorted to for the purpose of showing that a question of federal cognizance was decided by such court. It must appear in the record. made by the lower court without having before it the necessary parties,[71] the fact that an action triable de novo is appealed upon errors alone,[72] the fact that an appeal was taken before entry of record of an order denying a motion for a new trial,[73] the fact that the transcript was filed before the appeal was perfected,[74] the fact that the appeal bond runs to the wroug parties,[75] the fact that appellant's attorney became surety on the appeal bond, in violation of a court rule,[76] or perjury committed by the surety in the appeal bond, in making oath to his property,[77] has been held not to be ground for dismissal.

2. ERROR NOT SHOWN. An appeal regularly taken and docketed should not be dismissed on the ground that there is no error apparent of record, but the judgment below should be affirmed.[78] Where, however, the failure of the record to show error is due to defects or irregularities in the proceedings for review, it is the practice, in many jurisdictions, to dismiss.[79]

3. PROCEEDINGS FRIVOLOUS OR FOR DELAY. Though an appellate court may have the power to dismiss an appeal which is manifestly and palpably frivolous and without merit,[80] it will not, as a rule, dismiss on such ground, but will affirm the judgment below.[81]

4. REVIEW UNNECESSARY OR INEFFECTUAL. An appeal or writ of error may be dismissed if, pending it, an event occurs which makes a determination of it unnecessary, or renders it impossible for the appellate court to grant effectual relief.[82]

An appellate court may, however, entertain an appeal where the question involved is of public interest, though it is no longer a practical one.[83]

5. Want of Jurisdiction. Want of jurisdiction in the appellate court, if it is patent, or can be readily ascertained by an examination of the record, warrants the dismissal, on motion, of the appeal or writ of error.[84] But want of jurisdiction in the trial court is not ground for dismissing an appeal. In such case the appellate court will hear the appeal on its merits, and dismiss the action.[85]

6. Want of Prosecution. In many jurisdictions a failure to prosecute an appeal or writ of error within the time prescribed by statute or rule of court is ground for dismissal, on motion, in the absence of a sufficient excuse for such failure.[86] An appeal will not be dismissed, however, for want of prosecution, where the attorneys have agreed to postpone the case for the term.[87]

8. Want of Right to Appeal. The objection that one who has appealed has no right to the appeal because not aggrieved by the decision may, in some jurisdictions, be taken by motion to dismiss the appeal.[89]

9. Waiver of Grounds. Treating an appeal as valid,[90] and proceeding without preliminary objection to defects and irregularities not going to the jurisdiction, is, in many states, deemed a waiver of the right to have the appeal dismissed for such defects and irregularities.[91] But an appearance in a collateral proceeding to have a receiver appointed pending the appeal is not a waiver of the right to have the appeal dismissed for non-joinder of necessary parties appellant.[92]

Squire v. McDonald, 138 N. Y. 554, 34 N. E. 398, 53 N. Y. St. 269.

Where the record in an action to enjoin a liquor nuisance shows that the person who instituted the action, as attorney for the state, is a citizen of the county where the nuisance exists, and that the notice of an appeal by defendants was directed to, and served on, him as such attorney, he is a person authorized to move that the appeal be dismissed. State v. Sioux Falls Brewing Co., 2 S. D. 363, 50 N. W. 629.

Where judgment-defendants unsuccessfully attempt to perfect an appeal after plaintiff's death and before any substitution is made in the trial court, the appellate court will not refuse to dismiss the appeal because there has been no substitution in such court, and the motion does not purport to be made on behalf of any interested party. 2. Who May Oppose. One who might have been made a party defendant in the court below may be heard in the appellate court to oppose a motion to dismiss.[99]

3. Notice — a. Necessity. No notice of a motion to dismiss, where jurisdiction is involved, is necessary.[1] But in some states a motion to dismiss for defects or irregularities in the proceedings for review must be on notice to the adverse party.[2]

lee recognizes an appeal as duly taken, and raises no question touching the validity of the judgment below, appellant cannot urge, for the purpose of having the appeal dismissed, that it was taken too late or was taken from a void judgment. But see Goodwin v. Burney, 6 Rob. (La.) 151, wherein it was held that, where the amount really in dispute is under the jurisdictional amount, the appeal must be dismissed, though at the instance of a party who, by a fictitious claim for interest, attempted to bring the case within the jurisdiction of the appellate court.

See also Blanc v. Rodgers, 47 Cal. 606, wherein it was held that a defendant who appeared separately in an action in which there were several defendants, and who was not served with notice of appeal, nor made a party to any proceedings subsequent to the judgment, cannot move to dismiss an appeal taken by one of the other defendants. And see Gilbert v. Washington Beneficial Endowment Assoc., 10 App. Cas. (D. C.) 316, wherein it was held that where, in an equity cause, an intervening petitioner is made a party, but no service of process is had upon any of the parties, a motion made by the petitioner in the court of appeals to dismiss an appeal taken by one of the original parties will not be considered.

b. Requisites and Sufficiency. A notice of motion, where such notice is required, should set out the grounds on which the motion is based,[3] and specify the time at which the motion will be made.[4]

c. Service. Notice of a motion to dismiss an appeal may be served on one of a firm of attorneys representing appellant.[5]

d. Waiver. Appearance on motion to dismiss constitutes a waiver of want of notice of the motion.[6]

4. Time of Making — a. In General. A motion to dismiss an appeal or writ of error will not lie, until after the jurisdiction of the appellate court has attached, by the performance of the conditions made requisite by statute or rule of court to the perfection of the appeal or writ of error.[7]

Y. 627, wherein it was held that a notice of motion to dismiss an appeal to the court of appeals is not fatally defective because of an omission to specify therein upon what papers the motion will be made, when the nature of the motion apprises appellant that it is based upon the record. See also Garvin v. Pettee, 13 S. D. 239, 83 N. W. 251, wherein it was held that a notice that a motion to dismiss an appeal will be made in the supreme court at a time and place stated is sufficient to entitle the moving party to a hearing, although the motion is not entitled as being made in that court.

By whom served.— In Florida it is not necessary that the notice of a motion to dismiss an appeal, on account of not filing a transcript of the record, should be served by the sheriff, or by any officer. Williams v. La Penotiere, 25 Fla. 473, 6 So. 167.

Service on non-judicial day.— An objection to a motion to dismiss an appeal, on the ground that the notice of the motion was not duly served because served on the day of a general election, cannot be urged where the return and admitted service, signed by appellants' attorneys, appear to have taken place on a subsequent day. State v. Sioux Falls Brewing Co., 2 S. D. 363, 50 N. W. 629.

Sufficiency of service.— Where the affidavit of service on the adverse attorney of a notice of motion to dismiss an appeal does not show that any attempt was made to serve him at his office between the hours of eight o'clock A. M. and six o'clock P. M. of the day when the notice was left at his residence, the motion to dismiss will be denied. Sneath v. Waterman, (Cal. 1892) 28 Pac. 1061.

Time of service.— A motion to dismiss an appeal, on the ground that appellant has drawn from the clerk of the district court the money awarded him by the decree, will be heard notwithstanding notice of the motion was not served on appellant until after the time prescribed for serving briefs, when it appears appellee did not know the facts on which the motion was based before the briefs were due. And see Judson v. Love, 35 Cal. 463, wherein it was held that the rule requiring five days' notice of a motion to dismiss an appeal is merely to avoid surprise; and an objection that it was not complied with will be considered as waived if not made at the time of the motion.

b. For Defects Going to Jurisdiction. A motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction over the subject-matter in controversy,[8] or for jurisdictional defects,[9] may be made at any stage of the proceedings.

c. For Defects in Proceedings For Review. A motion to dismiss an appeal or writ of error for defects or irregularities in the proceedings for review, not going to the jurisdiction, should be made at a preliminary stage, or the defects or irregularities will be deemed waived.[10] Such a motion, made after joinder in Motion in open court.— An appeal will not be dismissed for failure to file the transcript in time where no motion therefor is made in open court, before the case is submitted, a mere statement of counsel in his brief that he moves to dismiss the appeal not being sufficient. Bailey v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1617, 44 S. W. 105.

A mere suggestion of a prior affirmance of the judgment will not authorize the court to dismiss a writ of error, nor to institute proceedings against the clerk for issuing the writ; but a rule may be had for plaintiff in error to show cause why the writ should not be dismissed. McRae v. Columbus Bank, 1 Ala. 578.

A paper filed in the appellate court for the dismissal of an appeal, on the ground of limitations, though called a motion, is sufficient where it amounts substantially to a plea of limitations, to which appellant can reply. Duff v. Duff, 103 Ky. 348, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 52, 45 S. W. 102.

A paper, found inclosed in the transcript, purporting to be a motion to dismiss the appeal, but not marked "Filed" nor found on the motion docket, will not be considered. Capehart v. Granite Mills, 97 Ala. 353, 12 So. 44.

Necessity of writing.— The motion must be in writing when so required by the rules of court. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Binkopski, 72 Ill. App. 22; Schoonover v. Osborne, (Iowa 1899) 79 N. facts on which the motion is based are controverted, it is a common practice to overrule it.[19]

b. Time of Hearing. Rules of court usually prescribe the time at which motions to dismiss may be heard.[20]

c. Evidence. As a rule a motion to dismiss a writ of error does not lie when, to support or resist it, proof is necessary dehors the writ.[21] It has been held, however, that extrinsic evidence is competent to show that the controversy has ceased to exist.[22] It has also been held that it may be shown that an appeal was taken before the judgment or order appealed from was entered, and this may be done by affidavit, or by the certificate of the clerk, though outside of the record.[23]

d. Matters Determinable. On a motion to dismiss, the appellate court will not pass on the merits of the appeal.[24] And in case that, in passing on a motion appellant shows that the ground on which a motion to dismiss is based is not true, such motion should be overruled. In Kirk v. Barnhart, 74 N. C. 653, it was held that, where an affidavit was filed and uncontradicted that all the requirements as to making and serving the case were complied with in the court below, a motion to dismiss because it did not appear that such requirements had been complied with would not be granted. If averment is contradicted the question should be submitted to the court below to find the facts. McDaniel v. Scurlock, 115 N. C. 295, 20 S. E. 451; Cummings v. Hoffman, 113 N. C. 267, 18 S. Contradictory evidence of waiver of irregularity.— When a motion to dismiss an appeal for failure to serve a statement of the case is resisted on the ground that the irregularity has been waived, the court cannot consider contradictory evidence on the fact of waiver, but must grant the motion, if the waiver is denied, unless it can be established from the moving papers. Reference to determine facts.—In Missouri, on motion to dismiss an appeal for the reason that since taking it appellant had enforced the judgment by execution, and ratified the judgment, the appellate court may refer the case to determine the facts; but where they are easily determined, and the evidence is mainly of record, the appellate court will hear and pass on the facts. e. Curing Defects. An appellate court may refuse to dismiss for defects and irregularities in the proceedings for review when such defects and irregularities have been subsequently cured.[26]

f. Rehearing. The court may grant a rehearing of an overruled motion to dismiss an appeal.[27]

7. Amendment. A motion to dismiss may be amended by the addition of another ground for dismissal.[28]

8. Successive Motions. A second motion to dismiss an appeal, based on the same grounds as a former motion, or on grounds existing at the time of such former motion, will, as a general rule, be denied.[29]

9. WAIVER OF MOTION. Appellee, by filing a brief to the merits before a decision on his previously-interposed motion to dismiss has been made, waives such motion.[30] But the right to have a writ of error dismissed, on objection accompanying the brief, is not waived by the filing of a brief on the merits.[31]

G. Order of Dismissal. An order of the appellate court dismissing an appeal is a judgment of the court within the meaning of a statute providing that the clerk, on the rendition of judgment in the appellate court, should remit the proceedings to the court below.[32]

H. Effect of Dismissal[33]—1. IN GENERAL. When an appeal or writ of error is dismissed, whether on motion or for other cause, the whole case is out of court.[34] Consequently, the appellate court is without power, on dismissal, to

Mont. 470, 62 Pac. 783, wherein it was held that, though a second motion to dismiss an appeal on grounds existing at the time of the first motion should ordinarily not be heard, it will be heard if the first motion was denied, with leave to move anew, on grounds not stated in the first motion, without restriction as to presentation of matters occurring after the filing of the first motion.

A motion to dismiss, founded on an imperfect record, is no bar to a like motion upon an amended and perfect record. Seacrest v. Newman, 19 Iowa 323.

Entry of order.— An order of the district court, entered on its minutes by the clerk, directing the dismissal of an appeal taken to that court from a judgment of the county court, does not accomplish the dismissal without the entry of a judgment in the district court upon such order, whether or not the motion to dismiss was made by appellant. The dismissal of a suspensive appeal does not prejudice whatever right the party may have to a devolutive appeal. Woodville v. Klasing, 51 La. Ann. 1057, 25 So. 635.

Orders made in appellate court.— Where an order substituting a party was made in the appellate court, in a case supposed to be pending there, though in fact the appeal was abortive, the order of substitution will fall with the dismissal of the appeal. Home for Care Inebriates v. Kaplan, 84 Cal. 486, 24 Pac. 119.

Rights of third persons.— An abatement of a suit in the appellate court works no abatement as respects the rights of third persons acquired under the judgments or decrees of affirm, modify, or reverse the judgment of the lower court,[35] or to direct the entry of judgment.[36]

2. As Affirmance of Judgment. The rule obtains in many states that the dismissal of an appeal by the appellate court operates as an affirmance of the judgment of the trial court.[37] It has been held, however, that the dismissal of an appeal because prematurely taken,[38] for failure of appellant to file the record within the time required,[39] for defects in the undertaking,[40] or, in some states, for want of prosecution,[41] does not so operate.

3. In Lower Court. On the dismissal of an appeal the cause stands in the trial court as if no appeal had ever been taken.[42] But if appellee, plaintiff below, dismisses his suit in the appellate court, in which the trial is de novo, he thereby destroys the force of his judgment in the lower court.[43]

I. Abandonment —1. What Amounts to. An appeal will be considered as abandoned where appellant fails to perfect or prosecute it within the time prescribed by statute or rule of court,[44] or does an act inconsistent with a prosecution of it.[45]

2. Effect. One who has abandoned his appeal cannot afterward prosecute it, as the appellate court, by the abandonment, loses jurisdiction.[46] The lower court in such case may proceed in the cause as if no appeal had been taken.[47]

3. Order Declaring Proceedings Abandoned. In New York an order declaring an appeal abandoned could not be made by a special term.[48]

Reargument of appeal.—The jurisdiction of the circuit court to make orders in a case after appeals therein have been dismissed by the court of appeals is not ousted by the pendency in the latter court of a motion for reargument of said appeals. Chappell v. Chappell, 86 Md. 532, 39 Atl. 984.

And see Watertown Nat. Bank v. Holabird School Tp., 2 S. D. 224, 49 N. W. 98, wherein it was held that where an appeal was dismissed by one of appellant's attorneys, without the consent of other attorneys for appellant, whose compensation was dependent, by contract, on the success of appellant's defense, the court will not reinstate the appeal on the motion of the nonconsenting attorneys, they having merely an unsecured claim against appellant, resting upon its personal responsibility, the right to enforce which was not affected by dismissal of the appeal.

d. Requisites and Sufficiency. A motion to reinstate should set out the grounds therefor,[55] and show apparent merit in the appeal.[56]

3. Mandamus to Compel Reinstatement. Though there are decisions which seem to hold that mandamus will lie to compel an intermediate appellate court to reinstate an appeal improperly dismissed by it,[57] the weight of authority and the better reason is to the contrary. The remedy in such case is by appeal from the order of dismissal.[58]

XV. Dockets, Calendars,[59] and Proceedings Preliminary to Hearing.

A. In General. It has already been shown that, before a cause can regularly come before the appellate court for a hearing, such cause must be entered on the docket or placed upon the calendar of the appellate court,[60] and that the prescribed method of so docketing or placing the cause on the calendar should be substantially followed.[61] The cause should be placed upon the proper calendar or days, no longer time should be allowed within which to move to reinstate an appeal dismissed under a rule of court. Rayne v. O'Brien, 12 La. Ann. 400.

In Wisconsin the supreme court retains jurisdiction of the case for the purpose of a motion to vacate an order dismissing the appeal, and to reinstate the appeal, in the nature of a motion for rehearing, made more than thirty days after the decision dismissing the appeal, though a motion for rehearing should be made within thirty days after the decision. In Missouri the supreme court has no appellate jurisdiction over the Kansas City court of appeals, but the constitution gives it "superintending control over the courts of appeals by mandamus, prohibition, and certiorari." Accordingly, mandamus will lie to compel the Kansas City court of appeals to reinstate and hear an appeal wrongfully dismissed. State v. Philips, 97 Mo. 331, 10 S. W. 855, 3 L. R. A. 476.

2. Grounds For Advancing — a. In General. In some states the statutes expressly designate certain causes for which cases on appeal shall be entitled to preference on the calendar.[67]

b. Frivolous Appeals. It has often been held that a case which plainly appears to be frivolous, and entered for the purpose of delay, may be taken up out of its regular order on the docket.[68] Decisions are not wanting, however, to the effect that an appeal cannot be brought on out of its order on the calendar merely upon the ground that it is frivolous[69] or is without merit.[70]

c. Questions of Public Importance. While grave public consideration may sometimes justify the court in advancing important cases,[71] as a general rule the mere fact that the questions involved in a cause are of public importance will not necessarily entitle the parties to an advancement of such cause to a hearing in preference to others.[72]

d. Where State Is Interested — (i) As a Party. Under statutes and rules of court, in some jurisdictions, it is held that causes to which a state is a party, including criminal cases, are entitled to a preference over other causes,[73] but the state must be not only a party in name, but must also be materially interested.[74]

Discretion of court in criminal cases.— In Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. (U. Time of making application.— In some jurisdictions, where, as a matter of right, or for good cause shown, a case may be advanced, it is the practice not to entertain an application until the abstract and all the briefs have been filed, and the case is ready for submission. Dickinson v. Freed, 24 Colo. 483, 52 Pac. 209; Stout v. Harlem, (Ind. App. 1897) 48 N. E. 235; Texas Land Co. v. Williams, 48 Tex. 602; and cases cited supra, note 76.

Kansas.— Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Bailey, (Kan. App. 1898) 52 Pac. 916, holding that the reasons assigned for advancement must be shown to be existing at the time of presenting the application.

New York.— Nichols v. Scranton Steel Co., 135 N. Y. 634, 32 N. E. 75, 48 N. Y. St. 461, holding that, to obtain a preference in a case not designated, by statute or rule of court, as one entitled to advancement, the application for advancement must be addressed to the discretion of the court, and must show such facts as may be deemed to render a preference proper in the interests of justice.

Vermont.— Manning v. Leighton, 66 Vt. 56, 28 Atl. 630, in which it is said that the supreme court will not favor motions to advance cases unless the alleged errors are specifically pointed out in the motion for advancement.

United States.— Call v. Palmer, 106 U. S. 39, 1 S. Ct. 2, 27 L. ed. 61, holding that the motion to advance under the rule of court should be accompanied by an agreed statement of the case, or of such extracts from the record as will show that the case is one to which the rule for advancement is applicable.

Necessity for statement of claim in notice of argument.— In New York it has been held that, notwithstanding statutory provisions giving preferences among civil causes, one claiming a preference in the court of appeals advance, unlike that of an application for an oral argument, written notice must be given to the adverse party or his attorney.[79]

c. Order. It is expressly provided, in some jurisdictions, that, where the right to a preference depends upon facts which do not appear in the pleadings or other papers upon which the cause is to be tried or heard, the party desiring a preference must procure an order therefor from the court or a judge thereof, upon notice to the opposite party.[80]

d. Fast Writs of Error. In Georgia it is provided by statute that, upon the receipt of a fast writ of error by the clerk of the supreme court, it is his duty to place it immediately on the docket of the circuit court to which it belongs; but, at the request of either party, the judges shall hear said case without delay, and without respect to the order of circuits or its order in its own circuit.[81]

C. Striking Cause From Calendar[82] — 1. Grounds. Upon proper application, a case, under certain circumstances, may be stricken from the docket or calendar of the appellate court.[83] Thus, it has been held that such application should be granted where it does not appear of record that an appeal has been taken or a writ of error has been issued,[84] that the bill of exceptions, case, statement, or record on appeal has been made, settled, filed, or served,[85] or must comply with the rule requiring him to state such claim in his notice of argument, and the grounds of the preference. Taylor v. Wing, 83 N. Y. 527, 1 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 43. See also People v. Kinney, 92 N. Y. 647.

In Connecticut it has been held that the superior court will not, on motion, erase a case from the docket unless the grounds for the erasure appear on the record. Saunders v. Denison, 20 Conn. 521 [citing Wickwire v. State, 19 Conn. 477; Amidown v. Peck, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 467]. And in Halliday v. Collins Co., (Conn. 1900) 47 Atl. 321, it was held that a motion to erase, not filed within the time required by law, should be denied where the matters relied on in the motion did not appear on the face of the appeal process.

Time of application.— In Calvert v. Row, 1 Browne, (Pa.) 256, it was held that a motion to strike should not be made until the first day of the term to which the appeal is entered.

Quashing causes.— In Nebraska and Pennsylvania a motion to quash the cause, instead of a motion to dismiss or strike from the docket, is the proper remedy in some cases (Carlson v. Beckman, 35 Nebr. 392, 53 N. W. 203; Seymour v. Herbert, 2 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 363), as where the objection is that what purports to be a bill of exceptions is not such in fact (Mewis v. Johnson Harvester Co., 5 Nebr. 217. See also Hollenbeck v. Tarkinson, 14 Nebr. 430, 16 N. W. 472), or where the objection is that the bill of exceptions was not properly signed (Carlson v. Beckman, 35 Nebr. 392, 53 N. W. 203). In Seymour v. Herbert, 2 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 363, it was held that a motion to quash a writ of error to a judgment entered on a bond, with warrant of attorney, in a case which released all errors, could not be heard until the cause had reached its regular place on the list.

Nebraska.— It has, however, been held in this state that the rules of the district court as to noticing causes for trial do not require that a notice must be filed in cases for hearing on error, before the same can be heard. The petition in error is the only pleading required in such cases, and the issues are formed as soon as it is filed. Lehnoff v. Fisher, 32 Nebr. 107, 48 N. W. 821.

New Jersey.— Harwood v. Smethurst, 31 N. J. L. 502, holding that, where a rule is obtained to bring a cause to a hearing, a copy thereof must be served upon the opposite party, although the motion for the rule was made in his presence.

Causes not noticed will be placed at foot of calendar, without regard to the date of their issues. Anonymous, Col. & C. Cas. (N. Y.) 160.

Effect of addition of questions after case reserved has been noticed.— Where, after a case reserved for the opinion of the supreme court has been noticed for hearing, an addition of specific questions is made to it by the circuit judge without the consent of one party, such party will not be required to go to a hearing of the case upon the notice previously given. Farrand v. Collins Iron Co., 8 Mich. 136.

Necessity for noticing new issue.— Where, after a case on appeal is noticed for hearing, a new issue is raised by plea in bar to the writ, the new issue must also be noticed for hearing. Crane v. Sumner, 31 Mich. 199.

Renoticing of causes not brought on.— Causes which have been noticed for argument, and duly entered by the clerk, if not brought on, are to be renoticed to the clerk for him to reënter, as they will not be, of course, carried over to the next term of the calendar. The fact that the bill of exceptions has been removed from the files for amendment, by order of the court, and that the amendments are not completed nor the bill of exceptions returned, does not prevent noticing the case for hearing. Polhemus v. Ann Arbor Sav. Bank, 27 Mich. 44.

Countermand of notice.— An attorney for the plaintiff in error who has noticed a cause for hearing may countermand such notice. Willey v. Kilduff, 25 Mich. 161.

92. By whom noticed.— In some jurisdictions the case may be noticed for hearing or argument by respondent or defendant in error, as well as by appellant or plaintiff in error. Frost v. Lawler, 34 Mich. 235 (holding that a notice by defendant in error constitutes a waiver of any right to complain of failure to serve upon him a copy of the assignment of errors); English v. Maxwell, 25 Mich. 462 (relating to causes noticed by solicitors); Willey v. Kilduff, 25 Mich. 161 (wherein the motion of defendant in error was denied on account of his failure to notice a case for hearing); Durfee v. McClurg, 5 Mich. 532 (to the effect that a notice of hearing given by appellee in a chancery case constitutes a waiver of irregularity in taking the appeal); Harwood v. Smethurst, 31 N. Y.) 129 (holding that, where a party on appeal entitled to open or begin the argument has delayed for a term to notice the cause for argument, the opposite party may regularly proceed, by a notice of motion in the nature of a rule, to set the cause down for argument); Anderson v. Dickie, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 199 (holding that, where a case or exceptions are filed but not made a part of the judgment-roll, respondent may notice a case for argument and put it on the calendar of the general term before the expiration of the time for filing the case or exceptions after settlement); Hand v. Callaghan, 12 Misc. (N. Y.) 88, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 176, 66 N. Y. St. 863 (holding that respondent, having given notice of argument, should have placed the cause on the general term calendar and brought the appeal to a hearing, and not have applied for a dismissal on account of appellant's failure to serve notice of argument); Cutler v. Ainsworth, 20 Wis. 651 (holding that the party not noticing a cause for argument cannot demand a hearing where his opponent asks for a continuance).

93. Time of notice.—A cause cannot be noticed for argument in the supreme court until after the return is filed. Torrent v. Muskegon Booming Co., 21 Mich. 1; Stockton v. Garland, 14 Mich. 333; Reynolds v. Steamboat Favorite, 9 Minn. 148; Commonwealth Ins. Co. v. Pierro, 6 Minn. 569; Eaton v. Tallmadge, 23 Wis. 442.

It is irregular to notice an appeal in chan-prescribed,[94] and in the manner provided, by the particular statute or rule of court.[95]

2. Service of. Service of notice may be served on the attorney of the opposite party.[96]

XVI. Hearing and Rehearing.

A. Hearing[97]— 1. Arguments — a. In General. Argument by counsel before an appellate tribunal is governed largely by rules of court, to which reference should be had to determine matters relating thereto.[98] cery before the expiration of the time for filing the transcript. Torrent v. Muskegon Booming Co., 21 Mich. 1.

94. Length of notice.— Usually, the notice must be of a prescribed length. Greve v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 25 Minn. 327; White v. Boice, 1 N. Y. St. 570. But the party entitled to such notice may waive the length of time by admitting due service of the notice. Stubbs v. Stubbs, 11 N. Y. Wkly. Dig. 244; White v. Boice, 1 N. Y. St. 570, wherein it was held, however, that where respondent retained a notice of argument served on December 10th until December 14th, he did not waive the regular eight days' notice required in such cases. But see Gibbs v. Blackwell, 40 Ill. 51, where the court held that, on neglect of plaintiff in error to have a scire facias issued or served in proper time, defendant in error might join in the error, and have the cause heard at the current term, without giving ten days' notice, as required by rule.

Computation of time.— In Michigan, when Sunday is an intervening day, it has been held that it should be included in computing the time of such notices. Corey v. Hiliker, 15 Mich. 314; Anderson v. Baughman, 6 Mich. 298. But in Minnesota, in giving the ten days' notice of argument required by the rules of the supreme court, it has been held that both the day of service and the first day of the term should be excluded. Greve v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 25 Minn. 327.

95. For forms of notice held sufficient see Brushaber v. Stegemann, 22 Mich. 199; Franklin v. Mansfield, 8 Mich. 99.

Notice without date, setting forth "that the cause will be brought on for hearing at the next term of said court." is good in form. Brushaber v. Stegemann, 22 Mich. 199.

Effect of irregular, defective, or improper notice, when duly served.— Though a notice of a motion to set a cause on appeal for argument may be irregular or defective, or in any other respect improper, yet, if there has been a due service of it, the party on whom it has been served must appear to oppose the motion, or his consent to it, or a renunciation of his right to oppose it, will be presumed from his absence or silence equally as if the notice had been perfect and the motion proper in the case. Hoyt v. Campbell, Col. & C. Cas. (N. Y.) 129.

96. Roskopp v. Canfield, 97 Mich. 628, 56 N. W. 940, holding that where the attorneys of record for plaintiff in attachment defend a proceeding to dissolve the writ, and one of them makes an affidavit of appeal from the order of dissolution, in which affidavit he states that he is one of the attorneys for appellant, notice of trial of the appeal is properly served on such attorneys.

On the death of appellee, notice of argument cannot be served on his attorney, who has received no authority to represent the estate. Warren v. Eddy, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 664, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 28.

Motion for affirmance, after service of notice.—Where notice of the rule for defendant to join in error has been served, the plaintiff should apply for affirmance for defendant's failure to join, at the term after service of the rule. Seely v. Shattuck, Col. & C. Cas. (N. Y.) 127, in which case notice of the rule for defendants to join in error in eight days, or plaintiff would be heard ex parte, having been served in April vacation, 1798, it was held that it was too late for plaintiff to move for affirmance at the October term, 1800, for failure of defendant to join error, since plaintiff should have applied to the term after service of the rule.

Improper argument.— In Sax v. Drake, 69 Iowa 760, 28 N. W. 423, defendants' counsel were severely censured for remarking in opening argument that "it is proper to state that J. B. Sax and Charles Sax [plaintiffs] are the sharpest clothing dealers among the Jewish merchants of Ottumwa." See also Paine v. Frost, 67 Iowa 282, 25 N. W. 243.

In some courts an oral argument is allowed upon the final hearing only upon the interposition of a timely request therefor. Butler v. Rockwell, 17 Colo. 290, 29 Pac. 458, 17 L. R. A. 611; De Votie v. McGerr, 14 Colo. 577, 23 Pac. 980; Rownd v. State, 152 Ind. 39, 51 N. E. 914, 52 N. E. 395. In some courts an oral argument is not allowed on motions to dismiss appeals, or writs of error. Merriam v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 126 Mo. 445, 29

b. Opening and Closing. The right to open and close the argument is, generally, given to appellant.[99] If both plaintiff and defendant appeal, plaintiff will be allowed to open and close.[1]

c. Submission Without Argument. It has been held that stipulations of counsel to submit a case under rule of court, on printed argument alone, cannot be withdrawn by either party without the consent of the other, except by leave of the court upon cause shown.[2]

2. Consideration of Cause as a Whole. A cause will be considered and determined in the appellate court as a whole,[3] and part of it will not be heard in advance of the regular hearing.[4]

3. Consolidation of Causes. Where all the questions involved in two cases on appeal have grown out of the same transaction and depend upon the same facts, the cases may be argued together.[5]

4. Continuance of Hearing. An appellate court may, for good cause, continue or postpone the hearing of an appeal.[6]

But see Peters v. Farnsworth, 15 Vt. 786, wherein it was held that, where exceptions were taken by defendant, involving the right of recovery, and by plaintiff as to the rule of damages, defendant should open and close. Compare Sellew's Appeal, 36 Conn. 186; Adams v. Lewis, 31 Conn. 501.

S. 123, 8 S. Ct. 398, 31 L. ed. 352, wherein it was held that where the parties enter into a stipulation to submit a cause without oral argument, and without reference to any particular time, or to a rule which permits submission of printed arguments within the first ninety days of the term, that rule will not be applied on suggestion of one party against the protest of the other, since the terms will be fulfilled if the submission is made when the case is reached in its order.

out mistakes of law or fact, or both, which it is claimed the court has made in reaching its conclusion.[11]

4. Grounds For Rehearing — a. In General. To entitle a party to a rehearing there must be manifest error in the opinion.[12] If no material fact or principle of law has been overlooked or disregarded,[13] or if it is clear that no other conclusion than that already reached is possible, a rehearing will be denied.[14]

b. Change in Personnel of Court. A change in the personnel of the court furnishes, of itself, no ground for a rehearing.[15]

c. Defects or Errors in Record. A rehearing will not be granted because of defects or errors in the record.[16]

d. Failure to Set Out Reasons For Opinion. The fact that the appellate court did not in its opinion detail the evidence and circumstances, showing the process by which it reached its conclusion, is not ground for reargument.[17]

e. Failure to Sufficiently Present Cause. The failure of counsel to sufficiently present the cause for the determination of the appellate court furnishes no ground for a rehearing.[18]

f. Important Questions Involved. A rehearing will not be granted solely because questions of great importance are involved.[19]

g. Inaccuracy of Statement. A rehearing will not be granted because of inaccuracy of statement in the opinion filed, where such inaccuracy is wholly immaterial to the conclusion therein reached.[20]

Questions of public importance.— It is no ground for exception to the rule that a rehearing will not be granted, though the court was equally divided, unless some material fact or principle has been overlooked or disregarded, that the question involved is of grave public importance, involving the interests of the public, generally, as well as of the parties, and that the question arises out of the construction of a written instrument in its relation to a statute. In New York a motion for reargument, on appeal to the city court, must be made to the general term at no later period than the next succeeding term after the decision. Fraser v. Alpha Combined Heating, etc., Mfg. Co., 30 Misc. (N. Y.) 206, 61 N. Y. Suppl. 1129.

In North Carolina a petition for a rehearing is filed when first received by the clerk, and is docketed when he enters it on the record at the order of the justice granting the rehearing. Bird v. Gilliam, 123 N. C. 63, 31 S. E. 267.

After adjournment.— Under a rule of court requiring a motion for a rehearing to be filed within ten days after the filing of the opinion in the cause, a petition filed within ten days, but after the adjournment of court for the term, is not in time. Hughes v. Woodard, (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 63 S. W. 191.

Computation of time.— A rule of court that petitions to rehear must be filed within ten days means ten days from the delivering of the decision, and not ten days from the entering of a decree thereon. Patterson v. Greenville First Nat. Bank, (Tenn. 1898) 48 S. W. 225. And where, owing to the transcript being temporarily misplaced by the clerk after an opinion is filed, and the adjournment of the court for the holidays, before it is found, it is, without fault of counsel, impossible to make an application for a rehearing within the time prescribed by a rule of court, the appellate court, in computing such time, will count only the days in which the court is in session. Major v. Stone's River Nat. Bank, (Tenn. Ch. 1899) 64 S. W. 352. The first day of the period allowed is to be excluded, and the last day, also, when it falls on Sunday. Barcroft v. Roberts, 92 N. (II) At Subsequent Term. An application for a rehearing, made at a term subsequent to that at which the judgment in the case was rendered by the appellate court, will not be entertained.[34]

(III) Extension of Time. The court may, under special circumstances, extend the time for filing the application.[35]

e. Service of Application. A copy of an application for a rehearing should be served on the opposite party when so required to be done by rule of court.[36]

f. Answer. In Illinois the court will not permit an answer to be filed to a petition for a rehearing.[37]

g. Second Application. A second application for the rehearing of a cause, by the same party and upon the same grounds as a former application that has been considered and denied, will not be entertained.[38]

v. Henry, 34 Tex. 143; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Grigsby, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 639, 35 S. W. 815, 36 S. W. 496; Kneeland v. Miles, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 25 S. W. 486.

Additional suggestions in respect to the grounds of an application for rehearing, proposed to be made after the time prescribed by the rules for the filing of the petition, will not be received as of course, but only upon proper cause shown. Hawley v. Simmons, 101 Ill. 654.

It is not sufficient excuse for failure to file a motion for rehearing in time that counsel, immediately on receiving notice of the decision, requested associate counsel, who resided in the city in which the court sat, to file such motion, and that such associate counsel was then sick, and, by reason thereof, failed to respond promptly to the request. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3214.

h. Striking Out Application. A motion to strike out a petition for a rehearing must be made on notice.[39]

6. Scope and Conduct of Rehearing — a. In General. Where a rehearing is granted, generally, the cause is before the court for examination and decision as though it had never been considered and decided;[40] but, under an order granting a rehearing as to certain questions therein specified, no other questions will be considered.[41]

b. Continuance. If a rehearing is ordered on an ex parte application, the other side may be allowed a continuance for preparation.[42] But the court will not postpone a decision, upon an application for rehearing, in order that arguments and authorities, made and presented in another case, may be considered.[43]

c. Equal Division of Court. Equal division of the court on a motion for the rehearing of a judgment of reversal, previously rendered, leaves that judgment in force, and does not result in affirming the judgment of the lower court.[44]

d. Oral Arguments. Counsel will not be permitted to argue an application for a rehearing orally, if, by statute, the application is made the argument therefor.[45]

e. Use of Affidavits. On an application for a rehearing, affidavits outside the record will not be considered by the court.[46]

7. Effect of Granting Rehearing. When a rehearing is ordered, the first opinion is suspended and ceases to have any effect, excepting as incorporated in, or approved by, the opinion which is filed on rehearing.[47]

W. 90, wherein it was held that, where the court on the rehearing of a cause is equally divided as to whether the judgment of the lower court should be affirmed, that judgment stands affirmed by operation of law, regardless of the fact that the court, in its first opinion, may have thought that the judgment should be reversed.

XVII. REVIEW.[48]

A. Scope and Extent of Review — 1. In General. The power of appellate courts is limited and defined by constitutions and statutes made in pursuance thereof. Save where expressly conferred, they have no original jurisdiction, and in the exercise of their appellate jurisdiction are limited to a review of the actual proceedings of the lower court, and can consider no original matter not connected with those proceedings and acted upon below. Where, however, an appellate court has once obtained jurisdiction of a cause, it obtains it for all purposes, and may give judgment upon all points properly presented for decision.[49]

2. Appeal From Part of Judgment. In case of an appeal from a part of a judgment or decree, the appellate court will not review the whole judgment or decree.[50] cumstances as, if true, would entitle him to a reversal of the decree. Luckett v. White, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 480.

Vacation of judgment.— The granting of a rehearing without restriction operates to vacate the judgment of the appellate court, so that thereafter the cause stands as if no judgment had been entered. Hook v. Mercantile Trust Co., 95 Fed. 41, 36 C. C. A. 645. See also Crown Point First Nat. Bank v. Richmond First Nat. Bank, 76 Ind. 561, 40 Am. Rep. 261.

65. Definition.— An interlocutory order is one given, in the progress of a cause, upon some plea, proceeding, or default which is intermediate only, and does not finally determine or complete the suit. Bouvier L. Dict. [citing 3 Bl. Comm. 396]; Fox v. Matthiessen, 155 N. Y. 177, 49 N. E. 673 [reversing 84 Hun (N. Y.) 396, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 356, 65 N. Y. St. 554, 24 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 285]; Hymes v. Van Cleef, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 341, 39 N. Y. St. 810.

66. In some jurisdictions, by statute, interlocutory orders may be reviewed on appeal from a final judgment, even though such orders may be reviewed by separate appeal. Wright v. Chapin, 74 Hun (N. Y.) 521, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 825, 56 N. Y. St. 718. See also supra, III, D, 2 [2 Cyc. 591].

But if the order has been already appealed from, it will not be considered on an appeal from the final judgment. Wiener v. Morange, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 446; Zunz v. Heroy, 3 Misc. (N. Y.) 614, 23 N. Y. Suppl. 15, 52 N. Y. St. 123. This rule, however, is said not to apply where the separate appeal, though it has been taken, has not been prosecuted. Alexander v. Alexander, 120 N. C. 472, 27 S. E. 121; Hyatt v. McBurney, 17 S. C. 143. The dismissal of error brought on the final judgment rendered in the cause.[67] The interlocutory judgments and intermediate orders which may be considered on review of the final judgment are frequently designated by statute, usually being specified as orders which necessarily affect the final judgment itself, or involve the merits of such judgments; and this rule has been applied, among other orders and rulings,[68] to rulings upon demurrers determined adversely to the party appealing an appeal from an interlocutory order on the ground that it is premature does not affect the right of the appellate court to review such order on appeal from the final judgment. Morgan v. Smith, 59 S. C. 49, 37 S. E. 43.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3487 et seq.; and supra, III, D, 1 [2 Cyc. 586].

Error should have been properly assigned, or appear of record in respect of such orders. See supra, XI [2 Cyc. 985]. But see Brown v. Thomson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 31 S. W. 1087, to the effect that an assignment of error is not essential.

Proper objections and exceptions should have been taken as to such orders. Smith v. Glen's Falls Ins. Co., 62 N. Y. 85; Milbank v. Jones, 4 Misc. (N. Y.) 613, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 356, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 152, construing N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1301, 2545, 2571, to the effect that this rule should be more liberally construed with respect to appeals from the surrogate. But see Brown v. Pechman, 55 S. C. 555, 33 S. E. 732, to the effect that no notice of appeal from such order is necessary. Omission to so specify in the notice of appeal cannot be remedied by an amendment so as to extend the statutory time in which an appeal may be taken. Webster v. Clark, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 279, 51 N. Y. St. 808.

will the appellate court review, in a collateral proceeding, a decree from which no appeal has been taken.[75]

(II) On Appeal From Final Decree in Equity. While an appeal from a final decree in equity, ordinarily, brings up the whole cause upon its merits, including interlocutory orders connected with the decree,[76] such an appeal cannot bring up a question which was definitely adjudicated and disposed of prior to the time of making and entering the final decree appealed from.[77]

Contempt proceedings.— Such proceedings are criminal in their nature, and distinct from the suit in which the contempt is committed. Hence, rulings made in the contempt proceedings are not brought up for review on appeal from the decree entered in the cause. Choquette v. McCarthy, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 56 S. b. Subsequent Orders and Proceedings. On an appeal from a judgment subsequent orders or proceedings cannot be reviewed.[79]

2. ON APPEAL FROM PRIOR ORDER — a. In General. While an appeal from an interlocutory, as well as from the final judgment or decree, brings up for review all the proceedings in the cause anterior to the final judgment or decree,[80] an appeal from an interlocutory order or decree alone brings up for review only the order or decree appealed from.[81] This rule has been applied to interlocutory

This rule has been applied to motions to strike out cost bill, made long after the appeal was perfected (Howard v. Richards, 2 Nev. 128, 90 Am. Dec. 520; but compare cases cited supra, note 73), and to subsequent scire facias proceedings (Greenway v. Dare, 6 N. J. L. 305).

The rule is not applicable, however, where a decree has been set aside and subsequently reinstated, since the validity of the original decree rests upon the order reinstating it (McGowan v. James, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 445); and it has been held that, on a petition in error to review a final judgment, a subsequent order of the trial court, striking from the record the bill of exceptions, might be reviewed without a second petition in error (Potter v. Myers, 31 Ohio St. 103).

The court, however, will look to the complaint and test its sufficiency in so far as it relates to the appointment of the receiver, even though the appointment be an auxiliary to an action. Supreme Sitting, Order Iron Hall, v. Baker, 134 Ind. 293, 33 N. E. 1128, 20 L. R. A. 210.

The distinction must be carefully made between the cases where the appointment of a receiver is but an auxiliary to the pending action, and cases where such appointment is the main relief sought. See Pearce v. Elwell, 116 N. C. 595, 21 S. E. 305.

But all questions upon which the validity or regularity of such appointment depends are necessarily involved in the appeal, and may be considered, and so the refusal to change the venue may be reviewed. Extent and limits of the rule.—It has been held that even the consent and request of both parties will not have the effect of enlarging the scope of the inquiry in the appellate court. Columbus Watch Co. v. Robbins, 52 Fed. 337, 6 U. S. App. 275, 3 C. C. A. 103. But see, contra, Dudley E. Jones Co. v. Munger Improved Cotton Mach. Mfg. Co., 50 Fed. 785, 2 U. S. App. 188, 1 C. But in some jurisdictions, it seems, it is a rule of equitable convenience, that, if the full record is brought before the court in an appeal against an injunction granted by an interlocutory decree, after a full hearing, the court will go into the full merits as shown

b. Order Overruling or Sustaining Demurrer. As a rule, on appeal from an order sustaining[88] or overruling a demurrer to a complaint or bill, only the causes assigned by the demurrer can be considered.[89]

3. On Appeal From Subsequent Order. The general rule is that, in the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary,[90] on appeal from an order, no previous order or judgment which is final in its nature, and from which

by the record. But it is only when the determination of the question whether the injunction is erroneous requires an examination of the whole case on its merits that this course will be pursued. Connecticut.— Boland v. O'Neil, 72 Conn. 217, 44 Atl. 15, holding that the filing of a second amended complaint is a withdrawal of the first, and, on appeal from a ruling sustaining a demurrer thereto, a demurrer to the first amended complaint cannot be reviewed.

New York.— Sheridan v. Jackson, 72 N. Y. 170, holding that if plaintiff excepts to the dismissal of his complaint, the latter not stating facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, instead of asking leave to amend, the appellate court will treat the complaint as if it had been demurred to, and will consider only its sufficiency.

Wisconsin.— Taylor v. North, 79 Wis. 86, 48 N. W. 126, holding that the appellate court cannot go back of the proceedings to which the demurrer is interposed to inquire whether it is regularly in the case.

United States.— Barnes v. Union Pac. R. Co., 54 Fed. 87, 12 U. S. App. 1, 4 C. C. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error." § 3537 et seq.

But, on review of the denial of motion to quash execution, the court will look back to the original judgment so far as to ascertain if the execution is supported thereby (Creighton v. Denby, Minor (Ala.) 250); although it will not consider the propriety of the original judgment (State v. Blair, 29 W. Co., 76 Hun (N. Y.) 181, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 561, 57 N. Y. St. 307 (which holds that, in an action against two defendants, an error in the admission of evidence offered by one of the defendants, over the objection and exception of the other, is available to the objecting defendant as against the plaintiff, upon appeal from a judgment entered upon a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, when such erroneous evidence was received, generally, in the case as to all parties and the jury was not instructed to disregard it as against the objecting defendant, and the probable effect of the evidence and of the charge of the court in reference thereto was to influence the verdict); and Zimmer v. Third Ave. R. Co., 36 N. Y. App. Div. 265, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 308 (which holds that, in an action against joint tort-feasors wherein plaintiff recovered, either defendant is entitled to a reversal if the charge was erroneous as to him, even though it was given at his co-defendant's request).

When plaintiff and some defendants are not adverse parties.— Some of the defendants filed cross-complaint praying for substantially the same relief as that sought by the complaint. Judgment was rendered in favor of the other defendants, and the defendants who filed the cross-complaint appealed. It was held that they could not, on appeal, question the sufficiency of the original complaint, since they and the plaintiff were not really adverse parties. Bingham v. Walk, 128 Ind. 164, 27 N. Delay in appealing.— An execution having been levied on certain lands, a junior encumbrancer filed his bill to compel the judgment ment or decree under review,[12] even though the relief sought extends only to the adjustment of the costs,[13] or to the increase or reduction of the amount of the recovery.[14] For the same reason, an appellee or defendant in error is not entitled to allege error in the rendition of judgment against him on his counter-claim, when he failed to prosecute an appeal therefrom, or to sue out a writ of error thereto.[15]

(III) To Sustain Judgment. But, in some jurisdictions, when the whole record is carried up upon appeal, the appellee is permitted to present and urge exceptions taken by him below, for the purpose of sustaining his judgment,[16] or creditor to levy on other property of the judgment debtor. The chancellor decided against his right so to do, and he prayed an appeal, but, before prosecuting his appeal, the property was sold under the execution. He moved this court to have the sale set aside. It was held that, although he was entitled to the ruling originally prayed for, yet as by his delay in prosecuting his appeal he had permitted the sale to take place, it was too late to afford him relief, and the sale could not be set aside. of demonstrating that appellant is not entitled to the relief he seeks, at the hands of the appellate court, notwithstanding the errors committed against him at the trial.[17]

(IV) In Actions For Accounting. The right of a party to a bill seeking an accounting to assign errors upon his adversary's appeal is a question presenting much difficulty, as the authorities are about equally divided.[18]

(V) Urging Error Against Co-Appellee or Co-Defendant in Error. An appellee or defendant in error will not be heard to assign errors against his co-appellee or co-defendant in error unless he has prosecuted a separate appeal, or writ of error, for that express purpose.[19]

c. Persons Not Parties in Appellate Court. One who has not appealed or brought error, and who is not a party to the proceedings in the appellate court, has no standing to allege error,[20] and can derive no advantage from errors assigned by others who are properly before the appellate court.[21] It follows, therefore, that one who was not a party to the proceedings below will not be heard to complain of such proceedings in the appellate court.[22] Nor can the judgment or decree of the lower court be modified or reversed to the prejudice of one who has not been brought within the jurisdiction of the appellate court, by being made a party to the proceedings therein.[23]

d. Where Error Affects Co-Party Only. A party is not entitled to have a judgment or decree reversed or modified because of errors affecting only his co-party below, where the latter is not before the appellate court complaining thereof.[24] Similarly, when the error concerning which complaint is made does not affect his interests in any way, a defendant who appeared in the cause or who was properly a party to the cause below, and against whom judgment was rendered, cannot predicate error upon the rendition of judgment against a co-defendant, not properly served with process, who has failed to appeal from the judgment,[25] or has waived or released the error.[26] Thus, it has been held that one who has not been injured thereby cannot assign as error that the judgment against his co-party was irregular or improper because based upon defective pleadings[27] or verdict,[28] or because of erroneous rulings as to pleadings,[29] evidence,[30] or instructions,[31] when such co-party does not complain thereof, and the error does not vitiate the entire judgment. Where the liability of defendants is several or independent, one of them, upon an appeal by himself alone from a judgment against all, will not be heard to complain that the judgment was improper or incorrect as to his co-defendants,[32] or that it was irregular because of the failure to first enter a formal default or pro confesso against them.[33] Irregularities in the proceedings below which affect the interests of minor defendants only[34]—such as the failure to appoint a guardian ad litem for them[35]—cannot be assigned as error by any of their co-defendants. Errors in a judgment against the sureties on a judicial bond are not available in behalf of the principal, who alone appeals from the judgment, which is correct as to him.[36]

2. Estoppel of Party to Allege Error — a. Error Committed or Invited by Party — (I) In General. An appellant or plaintiff in error will not be permitted to take advantage of errors which he, himself, committed,[37] or invited or induced the trial court to commit,[38] or which were the natural consequences of his own neglect[39] or misconduct.[40]

(II) Relating to Jurisdiction. While the authorities are in conflict, the better rule would seem to be that, as consent cannot confer jurisdiction,[41] a plaintiff against whom judgment is rendered is not estopped to assert, upon appeal or error, that the court to which he resorted had no jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the suit,[42] or of the person of the defendant.[43]

When rule of "invited error" does not apply.— Where defendant, in an action against him for an accounting as a surviving partner, successfully objected to evidence of the value of partnership property at the time it was sold by him, basing his objection on an erroneous ground, the rule of "invited error" does not apply so as to preclude him from urging, on appeal, error in the statement of the account charging him with the value of the property on dissolution, such evidence being inadmissible under the pleadings. Code, §§ 3515, 3516, 3521; and Peralta v. Mariea, 3 Cal. 185, wherein it was held that a plaintiff who is nonsuited in the trial court cannot, on appeal, raise the question of the lower court's want of jurisdiction, the court saying that that would be only an additional reason to sustain the nonsuit. The point that consent could not confer jurisdiction was urged by appellant's counsel, but was not considered or passed upon by the supreme court.

(III) Relating to Grounds of Action or Defense. When a party relies, in the trial court, upon a certain ground of action or defense, he is bound thereby, and will not be allowed to assume, in the appellate court, any position which is inconsistent therewith,[44] nor will he be heard to question the propriety or validity of his course in that behalf.[45]

(IV) Relating to Nature and Theory of Cause. Parties cannot elect to try their causes on one theory in the lower court, and, when defeated on that line, assume a different position in the appellate court.[46]

(V) Relating to Parties. It being the plaintiff's duty to bring the proper parties before the trial court,[47] he will not be heard to assert, on appeal or error, that the proceedings below were defective for want of proper parties, when the defect was caused by his own neglect or misconduct.[48] One who has made others parties to the proceedings below is thereby estopped to predicate error thereon,[49] and an appellant or plaintiff in error cannot complain of a misjoinder[50] or non-joinder when it is the result of his own action.[51] A person who voluntarily became a party to a proceeding below will not be heard in the appellate court either to deny that he was a party,[52] or to question the regularity or propriety of the manner in which he became one.[53]

(VI) Relating to Pleadings—(A) Of Complaining Party. An appellant or plaintiff in error is estopped to take advantage of his own fault in pleading—as, for instance, that his pleadings were defective,[54] or that he neglected[55] or refused to plead.[56] Nor will he be allowed to impeach in any way the correctness, propriety, or truth of his pleadings, or to repudiate an adjudication made in conformity thereto.[57]

Secondary evidence.— A party will not be allowed to take advantage, in the appellate court, of an error in the admission of secondary evidence when, by his own conduct, he made the production of the best evidence impossible (Sellman v. Cobb, 4 Iowa 534; Ivy v. Yancey, 129 Mo. 501, 31 S. adversary.[68] In like manner, an error in the admission of evidence is waived when the party aggrieved thereby subsequently introduces the same evidence.[69]

(c) Excluded on Offer of Adverse Party. When a party procures the exclusion of adverse evidence he is estopped to assign as error the fact that such evidence was excluded.[70]

(d) Excluded on Offer of Complaining Party. And he is likewise estopped to complain of the subsequent exclusion of similar,[71] or rebuttal, evidence offered by himself,[72] even though such evidence was competent.[73] An appellant or plaintiff in error is also precluded from complaining of an erroneous ruling excluding evidence offered by himself, when, after such ruling, he adopted a course inconsistent with his position at the time he offered the evidence.[74]

(e) Sufficiency of Evidence. It is not competent for a party to assume, on appeal or error, an attitude different from that which he occupied at the trial, and object to the judgment against him because of the want of evidence which was possible to tell what effect the admission of improper evidence had upon the minds of the jury in arriving at their verdict, the judgment must be reversed, even though appellant himself first introduced the objectionable class of testimony.

One who has, himself, introduced secondary evidence is thereby estopped to allege as error that his adversary was permitted to meet him with like evidence.

The rule is otherwise, however, when a party, after objecting to evidence and excepting to the ruling thereon, introduces similar evidence solely for the purpose of meeting his adversary's case, rebutting or combatting the evidence to which he excepted, and without any intention of abandoning his exceptions.

Limitation of effect of evidence.— Where a party objects, generally, to the admission of evidence, and the court thereupon admits it or limits its effect, the objecting party cannot be heard, on appeal, to complain of the action of the trial court in thus limiting its effect. W. 970); or where he used, in his own behalf, the evidence against which the excluded evidence was directed (Hobart v. Hobart, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 296).

So, it has been held that a judgment will not be reversed because of the erroneous exclusion of evidence which is indirect and inconclusive in its nature, when the complaining party had an opportunity to introduce direct evidence on the same point, but neglected to do so. cannot assign as error an inconsistency in the charge which was produced by the giving of an instruction which he requested.[81]

(B) Given at Request of Adverse Party. The principle of invited error estops a party from complaining in the appellate court of an instruction, given at the request of his adversary, which is substantially like one given at his own request.[82]

(C) Given by Trial Court — (1) IN GENERAL. Nor will a party be heard to complain, on appeal or error, of the giving by the trial court of any instruction, even though erroneous, which was substantially similar to one requested by him.[83]

Improper use of word.— An error in improperly using the word "not" in an instruction drawn by appellant's counsel, and which was the latter's own mistake, is no ground for reversal. Golder v. Mueller, 22 Ill. App. 527.

Modification at appellant's instance.— Where the court modified the charge at the request of plaintiff, the latter cannot take advantage of any error in such modification, especially where no exception was taken thereto. Regensburg v. Nassau Electric R. Co., 58 N. Y. App. Div. 566, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 147. But see Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Mann, (Va. 1901) 37 S. E. 849, holding that, where an instruction presented by defendant was modified by the court, and defendant excepted to the modification, the contention that defendant cannot ask a reversal for error in the modified instruction, because he invited the error, was without merit.

Time when instruction was given.—A party cannot complain of a charge that it was given at the wrong time when it was given as and when requested by him. Yore v. Mueller Coal, etc., Co., 147 Mo. 679, 49 S. W. 855.

App. 23; Mullaney v. Evans, 33 Oreg. 330, 54 Pac. 886.

Presumption as to contradictory instructions.— In the absence of a showing to the contrary, the presumption is that instructions prepared by counsel and presented to the court, though contradictory, were requested to be given, so that the giving of them cannot be assigned as error by the party offering them. Guarantee Co. of North America v. Mutual Bldg., etc., Assoc., 57 Ill. App. 254.

Modifying or refusing conflicting instructions.— Nor can a party, who requests conflicting instructions, complain, on appeal or error, of the action of the trial court in refusing one of them (Clark v. Pearson, 53 Ill. App. 310; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Fox, 60 Nebr. 531, 83 N. W. 744), or modifying them for the purpose of reconciling them (Funk v. Babbitt, 156 Ill. 408, 41 N. E. 166).

Waiver of error in instructions.— Error in an instruction is waived when the complaining party subsequently adopts the same error in instructions which he asks the court to give. Davis v. Brown, 67 Mo. 313; Drennon v. Dalincourt, 56 Mo. App. 128; Brady v. Georgia Home Ins. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 59 S. W. 914; Richmond Traction Co. v. Hildebrand, 98 Va. 22, 34 S. On the other hand, a party is not estopped to allege error in an instruction to which he reserved a proper exception, when he does not abandon his exception or adopt the error, but simply requests an instruction designed to meet the theory of the case contained in the erroneous instruction. Implied change produced by appellant's request.— In ejectment, the court charged the jury that they could not find for plaintiff on his alleged paper title. Defendant afterward requested the court to charge that the description contained in the deed to plaintiff did not include the locus in quo, which the court refused, and charged that the description did include the locus in quo. his instance,[96] or were invited or induced by his own conduct.[97] Thus, a party is not entitled to assign as error improper remarks made at the trial by adverse counsel, when they were called forth by equally improper remarks made by his own counsel.[98] It seems, however, that an error in such a proceeding, which goes to the foundation of the judgment, may be presented and urged for the first time in the appellate court by the party who is responsible therefor.[99]

(XI) Relating to Verdict. A party cannot be heard to complain of a verdict which was based upon incompetent evidence introduced by himself,[1] or of a verdict on the ground that the jury disregarded certain instructions, upon the giving of which instructions he also alleges error,[2] or of a verdict when at the same time he seeks to reverse an order setting aside the verdict and granting a new trial.[3] that it is erroneous.[8] One who asks and obtains relief cannot appeal from the decree granting it because the effect thereof differs from his anticipations.[9]

(XIV) Relating to Amount of Damages. An appellant or plaintiff in error is precluded from objecting, on appeal, that an excessive allowance was made to his adversary out of a fund in which both of them are interested, when he has received the benefit of a similar allowance;[10] or that judgment was rendered against him below for an excessive amount, when the error was due to his own negligence.[11] Upon his adversary's appeal a party is estopped to claim damages in the appellate court which he voluntarily remitted in the lower court.[12]

(XV) Relating to Orders Granting or Denying Motions. The entry of an order granting or denying a motion cannot be assigned as error by one who procured the making and entry of the order.[13] On the same principle, the failure of the trial court to act on a motion cannot be assigned as error by one who was responsible for the court's non-action.[14]

(XVI) Relating to Defects in Proceedings For Review. An appellant or plaintiff in error will not be permitted to base an assignment of error upon a defect in the record, such record being made up, at his instance, for the purpose of taking the cause to the appellate court.[15] Nor can appellant assert that his

Illinois.— Gage v. Chicago, 141 Ill. 642, 31 N. E. 163, where the party elected to take a new trial rather than abide by the judgment, and was not allowed to urge as error the setting aside of the judgment.

Indiana.— Byers v. Hickman, 36 Ind. 359; Evans v. Queen Ins. Co., 5 Ind. App. 198, 31 N. E. 843, to the effect that one who has amended his pleading after a demurrer has been sustained cannot present for review a ruling on the demurrer. See also Kessler v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 20 Ind. App. 427, 50 N. E. 891, a failure to object to the entry of a judgment on a special verdict.

Iowa.— Walker v. Beaver, 50 Iowa 504; Rees v. Leech, 10 Iowa 439, holding that where, after amendment of a petition, evidence offered by plaintiff was admitted which had been rejected before the amendment, the rejection of the evidence in the first instance could not be urged as error by plaintiff.

Mississippi.— Reed v. Wiley, 5 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 394, where one participated in a hearing of a case referred which was not properly referable.

Missouri.— Baker v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 107 Mo. 230, 17 S. W. 816, holding that under the operation of this rule a party who declined to participate in the trial below, after an adverse ruling against him, is not entitled to a review of the judgment subsequently rendered against him.

New York.— Lawrence v. Church, 128 N. Y. 324, 28 N. E. 499, 40 N. Y. St. 406 [reversing 10 N. Y. Suppl. 566, 32 N. Y. St. 751], where the party elected to reduce his judgment in order to prevent the reversal thereof and was not allowed to question the correctness of a court rule requiring the reduction. See also Mills v. Stewart, 88 Hun (N. Y.) 503, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 786, 68 N. Y. St. 584, 2 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 165, participation in a reference where the case was not referable.

Pennsylvania.— Scranton Bldg. Assoc. v. Ranck, (Pa. 1888) 13 Atl. 840, where the party elected to take one of two judgments offered him by the court.

Texas.— Anderson v. Walker, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 49 S. W. 937, holding that where a demurrer by one of two defendants is sustained and the action dismissed as to him, such demurrer is an acquiescence in the ruling.

Wisconsin.— Newton v. Allis, 16 Wis. 197, acquiescing in the entry of a judgment on a defective verdict.

In Louisiana an appellee who answers the appeal, and prays the reversal of the judgment on its merits, thereby waives the right of asking the review by the appellate court of a decree in favor of appellants, overruling a plea of misjoinder. World's Industrial, etc., Centennial Exposition v. North, etc., American Exposition, 39 La. Ann. 1, 1 So. 358.

Election to appeal.— Where the court orders that a temporary injunction be dissolved, and that the injunction bill be dismissed if complainant wishes to take an appeal, an appeal from the order constitutes an election to have the bill dismissed, and complainant cannot urge such dismissal as error. Gardt v. Brown, 113 Ill. 475, 55 Am. Rep. 434.

When rule does not apply.— A plaintiff by entering judgment on a verdict in his favor, in order to appeal therefrom, is not estopped to object to the verdict for inadequacy of damages. Smith v. Dittman, 16 Daly (N. Y.) 427, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 769, 34 N. Y. St. 303. So, where plaintiff objected to an order for the change of venue, and filed his bill of exceptions in the court that made the order, he did not waive his objection by appearing in the court to which the case was removed, but was entitled to have it reviewed on appeal. Gee v. St. Louis R. Co., 140 Mo. 314, 41 S. W. 796.

22. Tucker v. Tucker, 5 N. Y. 408; Burton v. Brown, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 1.

One who accepts relief, which is granted upon terms imposed as a condition, will not be heard to complain, on appeal, that he was required to abide by or perform the condition. Mahone v. Williams, 39 Ala. 202; Howard v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 11 App. Cas. (D. C.) 300; Tupper v. Kilduff, 26 Mich. 394; American Exch. Bank v. Brentzinger, 10 Ohio Dec. 208.

Rejection of relief offered on terms.— After judgment against a party who rejected a continuance offered on terms, the ruling of the trial court on the merits of his motion for a continuance cannot be reviewed in the appellate court. Couts v. Neer, 70 Tex. 468, 9 S. W. 40.

23. Georgia.— Metropolitan St. R. Co. v. Powell, 89 Ga. 601, 16 S. E. 118; MacKenzie v. Jackson, 82 Ga. 80, 8 S. E. 77, acquiescence by failure to plead.

Louisiana.— Trouilly's Succession, 52 La. Ann. 276, 26 So. 851.

Michigan.— Slater v. Breese, 36 Mich. 77, acquiescence by failure to object to reference and report.

New York.— Kohler v. Wright, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 318; Beekman v. Bond, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 444.

Texas.— Sugg v. Thornton, 73 Tex. 666, 9 S. W. 145.

Wisconsin.— Evans v. Enloe, 64 Wis. 671, 26 N. W. 170.

United States.— Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 54 Fed. 262, 12 U. S. App. 85, 4 C. C. A. 313.

See supra, XVII, C, 2, a, (III), (IV).

This rule, however, is subject to the exception that a party who conceded the unconstitutionality of a statute in the trial court is not precluded from asserting its constitutionality on appeal. Mouat Lumber, etc., Co. v. Freeman, 7 Colo. App. 152, 42 Pac. 1040, the court saying: "It is not competent for counsel to stipulate the unconstitutionality of a law."

25. Recognizing sufficiency of adversary's pleading.— McCabe v. Ætna Ins. Co., 9 N. D. 19, 81 N. W. 426, 47 L. R. A. 641.

See supra, XVII, C, 2, a, (VI).

A party cannot base an assignment of error upon a defect in his adversary's pleadings when he had waived such defect either by express stipulation (Kelsey v. Lamb, 21 Ill. 559; Munson v. Hegeman, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 112), or by treating the pleadings as sufficient (Work v. Kinney, (Ida. 1900) 63 Pac. 596; Holly v. Powell, 63 Ill. 139).

But a party does not treat a defective pleading as sufficient when he simply asks an instruction which is designed to meet and combat the theory of the case as disclosed by such pleading. McClintic v. McClintic, 111 Iowa 615, 82 N. W. 1017.

See supra, XVII, C, 2, a, (VI), (B).

26. Permitting admission of evidence.—The appellate court will not permit a party to assign as error the admission of evidence which he agreed that his adversary might introduce.

Indiana.—Wakeman v. Jones, 1 Ind. 517.

Maryland.— Edelen v. Hardy, 7 Harr. & J. (Md.) 61, 16 Am. Dec. 292.

Missouri.— McClanahan v. West, 100 Mo. 309, 13 S. W. 674.

Nebraska.—Elsanger v. Grovijohn, 29 Nebr. 129, 45 N. W. 273.

New York.—Where parties agreed at the trial that they would not object to evidence taken under a commission, except as noted on the return, and one party, himself, under such agreement, introduced illegal testimony, he will not be allowed, on appeal, to object to the incompetency of the testimony of the adverse party admitted under such agreement. Matter of Bull, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 510, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 52, 16 N. Y. St. 674.

Wisconsin.— Flanegan v. Earnest, 2 Pinn. (Wis.) 196, 1 Chandl. (Wis.) 149.

United States.— Deering Harvester Co. v. Kelly, 103 Fed. 261, 43 C. C. A. 225.

See supra, XVI, C, 2, a, (VII).

Likewise, it has been held that a party is estopped to complain of the erroneous admission of evidence over his objection when he subsequently permitted evidence of the same tenor to be introduced without objection (McPherson v. Andes, 75 Mo. App. 204), or when he had previously permitted the introduction of similar evidence (McLeod v. Barnum, 131 Cal. 605, 63 Pac. 924).

See supra, XVI, C, 2, a, (VII).

27. Instructions given.— An appellant or plaintiff in error is estopped to question the correctness of a rule of damages stated in the charge at the trial, when he had consented to the adoption of such rule. Frye v. Hinkley, 18 Me. 320; Bielman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 50 Mo. App. 151.

See supra, XVII, C, 2, a, (VIII).

28. Submission of issue or question to jury. —Lemmon v. Sibert, (Colo. App. 1900) 61 Pac. 202; Davis v. Winslow, 51 Me. 264, 81 Am. Dec. 573. Where an instruction is based on a statement of the question in issue, and such statement is assented to by a party, he cannot complain that the instruction makes the verdict depend on the decision of that question. Rowersock v. Beers, 82 Ill. App. 396.

See supra, XVII, C, 2, a, (VIII).

duct of the trial below.[29] On the other hand, when he does not abandon his exceptions and does not acquiesce in the objectionable proceedings, he is not estopped to complain thereof, upon appeal or error, by simply taking steps in the trial court with a view of meeting his adversary's case as affected by such proceedings.[30]

(II) By Pleading Over or Proceeding to Trial. One who pleads over or proceeds to trial on the merits, after an adverse decision on his demurrer,[31] motion for verdict,[32] or motion for nonsuit, will not be permitted to allege error in such decision, as he will be presumed to have acquiesced therein.[33] In some jurisdictions a party is deemed to have acquiesced in a decision granting a new trial when, after excepting thereto, he appears at the new trial and participates therein.[34]

(III) By Taking or Failing to Take an Appeal. A party who takes an appeal from a judgment against him so recognizes it that he is estopped to attack it, in the appellate court, on the ground that he was not properly made a party to the proceedings,[35] or that there was an irregularity in the entry of the judgment.[36] On the other hand, he is not thereby estopped to raise the question

29. Blain v. Manning, 36 Ill. App. 214 (where the evidence was heard by the trial judge at a place without his jurisdiction); Angier v. Howard, 94 N. C. 27 (where a paper not in evidence was submitted to the jury).

See supra, XVII, C, 2, a, (IX), (X).

Compare Lennox v. Vandalia Coal Co., 158 Mo. 473, 59 S. W. 242 (which holds that where part of the petition is stricken out on demurrer, to which the plaintiff excepts, but goes to trial without asking leave to file an amended petition or formally refiling the original, he is entitled, on appeal, to review the action of the trial court in striking out part of the petition); also Johnson v. Clements, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 112, 54 S. W. 272 (wherein it was held that a defendant who demurred to the petition, and, after his demurrer was overruled, admitted the cause of action as alleged, to acquire the right to open and conclude, as provided by Tex. Dist. and County Ct. Rules, No. 31, did not thereby waive his right to complain of the ruling on the demurrer, as it could not be the purpose of the rule to require defendant to waive a fundamental error).

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3614.

Unanswered demurrer.—If an unanswered demurrer is on record and the parties go to trial by consent, it will not be cause for reversal. Parker v. Palmer, 22 Ill. 489.

32. Motion for verdict denied.— Where a defendant, after the overruling of his motion to instruct the jury that plaintiff is not entitled to a recovery, puts in his case, he cannot avail himself of any error in the denial of his motion. Campau v. Bemis, 35 Ill. App. 37; Accident Ins. Co. of North America v. Crandal, 120 U. S. 527, 7 S. Ct. 685, 30 L. ed. 740. To same effect see Erickson v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 9 N. Estoppel to complain of decision granting new trial.— A judgment rendered on a new trial will not be set aside because the new trial was allowed on insufficient grounds, if the adverse party admitted before the court below the truth of certain evidence, showing that the first judgment was wrong; and the fact that such admission was made to prevent a continuance makes no difference. Houck v. Deitz, 3 Ind. 385.

Misnomer in entry of judgment.— Where the court, after allowing an amendment of a summons by substitution of defendant's proper corporate name, assumes jurisdiction and en-of the lower court's lack of jurisdiction to entertain the cause at all,[37] or to render judgment for the amount which it did.[38] Upon the same theory, a party who has taken a limited appeal — as an appeal which is from a portion of the decree only,[39] or which does not embrace an appealable order[40] — is deemed to have acquiesced in all other parts of the proceedings, and is precluded from asserting that there is error other than fundamental error in them.

D. Amendments of Pleadings, Additional Proofs, and Trials De Novo — 1. Amendments of Pleadings — a. In General.[41] A case must be heard, on appeal, on the issues tried below, and on no others; and, except by consent of the adverse party, no amendment will be allowed in the appellate court which will have the effect of reversing the judgment or in any way affecting a substantial right of such party.[42] It seems, however, that, if the objection is purely formal, if the real question in controversy has been fully and fairly tried and correctly settled, and if the identity of the original cause will be preserved, the appellate court may allow the pleadings to be amended, when such a course is necessary to meet the requirements of justice.[43] ters judgment against defendant as originally summoned, the recital, in an appeal bond of defendant, that the judgment was against it is a recognition of the judgment. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Perkins, 7 Colo. App. 184, 42 Pac. 1047.

b. To Conform to the Evidence, Verdict, or Judgment. Upon a proper showing, the appellate court may allow an amendment of the pleadings so as to make them conform to the proof, the verdict, and the judgment thereon,[44] where such amendment will not substantially change the claim or the defense.[45]

c. To Show Jurisdiction. Where enough appears on the face of the papers to give the appellate court jurisdiction, it is within the discretion of the court to allow the pleadings to be amended upon motion, provided no new cause of action, affecting the jurisdiction of either court, is thereby introduced.[46]

45. An amendment changing action from one cause to another and different ground of action cannot be made to support the judgment, and is not allowable on appeal. Fisher v. Rankin, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 837, 27 N. Y. St. 582, 25 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 191. See also Hondorf v. Atwater, 75 Hun (N. Y.) 369, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 447, 57 N. Y. St. 694.

Defense to counter-claim.— A counter-claim is in the nature of a cross-action on which defendant may have affirmatice relief against plaintiff, and plaintiff, to sustain judgment for him, cannot, on appeal, amend his reply so as to set up the statute of limitations in bar. Williams v. Willis, 15 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 11.

Extent and limits of rule.— While, within certain limitations, a record may, upon proper notice, be so amended as to make it truly state what actually occurred in court, and which should have been entered of record at the time (Higgs v. Huson, 8 Ga. 317), it cannot be amended with the purpose of interpolating into it matters which did not actually take place (Ogden v. Lake View, 121 Ill. 422, 13 N. E. 159). Nor will the court order an amendment to create error; no amendment will be allowed in the appellate court for the purpose of reversing a judgment. Howell v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 92 Hun (N. d. With Respect to the Parties. Where a case has been tried on the merits, and the allowance, on appeal, of an amendment as to parties would be a technical matter prejudicing the rights of no one, such amendment may be allowed.[47] jurisdiction, if the appellate court has jurisdiction over the subject-matter and the parties, it may, with the consent of the parties, allow an amendment to correct a defect caused by inadvertence). See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3618.

2. Additional Proofs. Defects in proofs cannot be supplied in the appellate court — that court can determine a cause only on the record of the court below, and cannot, without consent of the parties, hear additional proofs.[48] Sometimes, however, even though new evidence cannot be introduced in the appellate court for the purpose of making a case, the appellate court will send down to the lower court for papers, found, during the investigation, to be necessary for their information, in order to explain and show the effect of the evidence in the case;[49]

Limitations of this rule. — But an amendment cannot be granted so as to confer jurisdiction upon the appellate court (Agnew v. Dorman, Taney (U. S.) 386, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 100); or to introduce new matter which the court below had not jurisdiction to determine (Osgood v. Green, 30 N. H. 210). (II) In Equitable Proceedings — (A) In General. Under the old chancery practice suits in equity were tried de novo on appeal upon the entire record and evidence;[54] and it has been said that "the adoption of the codes scarcely made

The practice in Iowa.— Generally.—In this state a case in equity will not be tried de novo unless it affirmatively appears that all the evidence of every character offered or introduced in the court below is brought up. Watson v. Burroughs, 104 Iowa 745, 73 N. W. 866; Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. Hansen, 104 Iowa 307, 73 N. W. 827; Smith v. Knight, 103 Iowa 733, 72 N. W. 413; Carlton v. Brock, 91 Iowa 710, 58 N. W. 1069. There must be an issue of fact joined, and the evidence must be in writing, properly certified by the trial judge, and made a part of the record within the time allowed for the appeal. Ring v. Froelich, (Iowa 1898) 77 N. W. 506; Smith v. Wellslager, 105 Iowa 140, 74 N. W. 914; Payne v. Cresap, 104 Iowa 749, 73 N. W. 882. If these requirements are complied with, a case is triable de novo in the appellate court although no motion or order be made that the case be tried on written evidence. Hines v. Horner, 86 Iowa 594, 53 N. W. 317.

A certificate that the record contains all the evidence offered and introduced on the trial is not sufficient. Cheney v. McColloch, 104 Iowa 249, 73 N. W. 580; Monmouth Second Nat. Bank v. Ash, 85 Iowa 74, 51 N. W. 1160. But see Adams County v. Graves, 75 Iowa 642, 36 N. W. 889, for a certificate which was held to be sufficient. The clerk's certificate is not sufficient to secure a trial de novo. It is the office of the certificate of the judge to identify the evidence and make it of record when filed, while it is the office of the certificate of the clerk to identify and authenticate the record. Bauernfiend v. Jonas, 104 Iowa 56, 73 N. W. 500. It must appear that the judge's certificate was signed within the time prescribed by law. Wisconsin, etc., R. Co. v. Braham, 71 Iowa 484, 32 N. W. 392; Russell v. Johnston, 67 Iowa 279, 25 N. W. 232; Mitchell v. Laub, 59 Iowa 36, 12 N. W. 755.

Trial de novo should not be refused for formal defects in the record which cannot affect the final result (Smith v. Watson, 88 Iowa 73, 55 N. W. 68), or where a complete transcript has been filed after errors in the abstract have been pointed out (Hoyt v. McLagan, 87 Iowa 746, 55 N. W. 18), or where the case was brought up under the mistaken belief that it was not a case for trial de novo, and the abstract, for that reason, did not properly present it (Sherwood v. Sherwood, 44 Iowa 192). But see Snider v. Wilson, (Iowa 1899) 78 N. W. 802, for instance of proper refusal to grant trial de novo.

Party estopped to object to trial de novo.— A party upon whose motion the cause is tried as an equitable action cannot object to the trial of the cause de novo on appeal. Sands v. Peirson, 61 Iowa 702, 17 N. W. 107; Fortney v. Jacoby, 51 Iowa 95, 49 N. W. 1053.

Where the appeal is tried by the second method — that is, the same as in ordinary proceedings — the case is not triable de novo on appeal. Only legal errors can be reviewed. But where an equitable issue was raised in an action at law to determine the title to real property, and the relief was of an equitable character, the case was held triable de novo. Ingle v. Culbertson, 43 Iowa 265.

Removal of case to chancery courts.— If a case instituted as a law case is transferred to the chancery court, being of an equitable nature, in subsequent proceedings the chancery practice must be followed, and, on appeal, the hearing will be de novo. Shelby County v. Bickford, 102 Tenn. 395, 52 S. W. 772.

59. Sallady v. Webb, 2 Ohio Cir. Ct. 553, holding that an appeal from a petition setting forth a cause of action purely equitable does not open for retrial issues joined on cross-demands, disclosing legal causes of action.

answer[60] will not open for retrial an independent legal cause of action disclosed therein.

(III) On Appeals From Probate Courts. Generally, appeals from courts of probate jurisdiction are regulated by statutory provisions peculiar thereto, and on such appeal the superior court tries the cause de novo and renders such judgment or makes such order as the probate court should have rendered or made. The judgment is not affected by any defect or infirmity that might pertain or belong to the judgment in the probate court.[61]

c. Scope of Inquiry — (I) In General. On a new trial in the appellate court the whole case is open for judicial inspection.[62] All questions may be presented which legitimately arise on the record, whether urged or relied on in the lower court or not.[63] But the court will not review the evidence in detail.[64]

(II) Adhering to Issues Tried in Lower Court. The cause is to be tried in the appellate court upon the same issues that were presented in the lower court,[65]

Under a statute providing that in all cases of appeal, whether on a judgment by default or otherwise, the case "shall be entered, tried, and determined in the court appealed to in like manner as if it had been originally commenced therein" unless there is some waiver or stipulation to vary the rights of parties, an appeal opens the whole case as to the law, the facts, and the judgment. The objection to new issues, however, must be made at the time of framing the issues. The rule cannot be invoked when evidence is offered in support of such issue. Madison First Nat. Bank v. Carson, 48 Nebr. 763, 67 N. W. 779.

Where one of two defendants appealed from a judgment in an action to recover the purchase-price of goods, and, in the appellate court, plaintiff filed his petition, based on the

d. Mode and Conduct of Trial — (I) Pleadings — (A) In General. While pleas in bar may be introduced as well on the appeal as upon the original hearing, the rule is that pleas in abatement should be interposed at the first opportunity in the court below.[68]

(B) Amendments — (1) In General. For the same reasons which allow new pleadings to be filed, the appellate court may permit amendments to be made in trials de novo as freely as though the action had been originally begun in the appellate court, provided such amendments do not change the cause of action sued on in the lower court.[69] If, upon inspection, the pleadings prove to be so

Effect of filing new answer.— Under Mass. Superior Ct. Rules, No. 43, requiring that a written answer shall be filed in all appeal cases unless the court otherwise order, the filing of such answer does not withdraw a special denial filed in the lower court. True v. Dillon, 138 Mass. 347.

Right of one defaulted below to file answer. — Under a statute providing that where judgment has been rendered by default the defendant "shall have a right to plead any and all defenses which he might have pleaded had the cause been originally brought" in the appellate court, the defendant may, without first asking leave, file his answer in the appellate court. Martin v. McLaughlin, (Colo. 1885) 6 Pac. 137. In the absence of such statute there is no such right. Cain v. Harden, 1 Oreg. 360.

Sufficiency of plea.—The permission to plead orally in the lower court, and to file a new plea or answer in writing after appeal, does not relieve defendant of the obligation, when he pleads tender, to perfect his tender by paying the money into the lower court before trial of the case, or from making that fact appear in his answer in the appellate court. Brickett v. Wallace, 98 Mass. 528.

In Connecticut it has been held that, on an appeal from the county court to the superior court, the parties might, when the cause came up entirely unembarrassed by previous proceedings, plead anew, as if there had been no pleadings below. King v. Lacy, 8 Conn. 499. But, if the cause proceeds to trial without new pleadings, the presumption is that the pleadings below are relied upon. In Massachusetts, under Mass. Superior Ct. Rules, No. 43, defendant may file an answer setting up that the action was prematurely brought, this being a defense which may be pleaded in bar, and not a mere matter of abatement. Fels v. Raymond, 134 Mass. 376. And it was held that if the court of common pleas refused to receive a plea in abatement which ought to have been received, and defendant was obliged to plead over, the supreme judicial court should have allowed it to be filed on appeal. informal as to be senseless, repugnant, ambiguous, argumentative, or so indefinite as to make the trial of any issue embarrassing, an amendment should always be allowed, but not to the extent of raising any new or substantially different issue from the one tried in the lower court.[70]

(2) AFFECTING JURISDICTION. If, however, the jurisdiction of either the appellate court or the court below would be affected by the amendment, it cannot be made.[71]

(II) EVIDENCE — (A) Admissibility — (1) IN GENERAL. As a rule, either plaintiff or defendant may, on a trial de novo, produce in the appellate court any competent testimony tending to establish his position,[72] whether introduced in the court below or not.[73]

Ware v. Griner, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 26 S. W. 898.

Waiver of objection to amendment.— Where, on appeal, a complaint is amended so as to change the action from one against defendants as partners to one against them as individuals, they waive the objection by thereafter defending the suit. Durkee v. Conklin, 13 Colo. App. 313, 57 Pac. 486.

Where one of several defendants appeals.— Under a statutory provision declaring that an appeal, though entered by only one of several joint defendants, brings up the whole record, requires a de novo investigation, and entitles all the parties to be heard on the whole merits of the case, a defendant who does not join in the appeal, since he is bound by the result, may make any appropriate amendment to an answer already entered. C. 478 (holding that any evidence which would have been competent in the lower court is admissible); Slade v. Burton, 28 N. (3) On Appeal From Probate Courts. On appeal from a probate court, the appellate court, trying the cause de novo, standing in the place of the probate court, should render such judgment as the latter should have rendered,[76] and to this end it may hear evidence, it being generally held that new evidence may be introduced in the appellate court.[77]

(B) Burden of Proof, and Right to Open and Close. On a trial de novo of an equity case the plaintiff below makes the opening argument, the burden of proof being on him precisely as in the lower court.[78]

(III) Submission of Issues to Jury. At common law, where a case has once been tried by a jury, there cannot be a new trial by jury in the reviewing court;[79] and it may be stated, as a general rule, that trials by jury will not be allowed in the appellate court.[80]

But, under a constitutional provision giving the supreme court power to issue writs of error "and to hear and determine the same,"

E. Presumptions and Inferences Upon the Record — 1. In Support of the Appeal — a. Right of Appeal. A right of appeal may not be created by presumption; but, where the facts upon which the right depends admit of different constructions, that construction may be adopted as presumably correct which permits the appeal, as against that which forbids it.[81] On the other hand, a right of appeal may not be destroyed by presumption; but a presumption of law, admitting of but one construction, may intervene to prevent its inception.[82]

b. Compliance With Statutory Prerequisites. That all statutory prerequisites to the perfecting of an appeal have been complied with must, as a general proposition, appear in the record, unsupplied by any presumption of law arising simply from an attempt to appeal,[83] when the question is raised in the appellate it has been held that a venire may be issued for a jury to try an issue of fact in the supreme court. Teller v. Wetherell, 6 Mich. 46.

An order allowing plaintiff to amend will be presumed to have been upon the motion of plaintiff, and, because plaintiff appealed, does not admit of the construction that plaintiff declined to amend, or that there was an order of dismissal. White v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 26 W. Va. 800.

Compliance with a statutory condition upon which the right of review depends will not be presumed in the absence of a showing to that effect in the record. Hunt v. Downs, 50 Iowa 696.

Consent decree cannot be appealed from by a party consenting; and, where the record showed such consent, the fact that appellant had formerly been adjudged in default was held not to rebut the presumption in favor of the correctness of the record. Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Smith, 56 Iowa 763, 9 N. W. 328. The authority of appellant's attorney to consent to a decree not wholly outside the scope of the case as made by the pleadings will be presumed when questioned for the first time on appeal. Schmidt v. Oregon Gold-Min. Co., 28 Oreg. 9, 40 Pac. 406, 1014, 52 Am. St. Rep. 759. In the absence of any showing that recitals of appearance and consent to a judgment were false, they must be presumed to be correct. Ingle v. Bell, 84 Tex. 463, 19 S. W. 553.

Continuance of motion for new trial was inferred from the overruling of the motion and settling exceptions at the term next succeeding that of the judgment, where, otherwise, the right of appeal would have been lost. St. Louis Plattdeutscher Club v. Tegeler, 17 Mo. App. 569.

Intention to appeal from a final judgment, instead of an interlocutory order, may be inferred from the greater importance of the former, where the appeal relates to both in terms but can stand only as to one, the appeal from the latter being rejected as surplusage. Williams v. Williams, 6 S. D. 284, 61 N. W. 38. Aliter, where the appeal is from two appealable orders of the same character. Hackett v. Gunderson, 1 S. D. 479, 47 N. W. 546.

Where the entertaining of an appeal from an interlocutory order is discretionary upon it being made to appear that the allowance of a special appeal would subserve the ends of justice, in the absence of special circumstances, it was presumed that a temporary restraining order was right and proper, and not reviewable on appeal. Siggers v. Snow, 15 App. Cas. (D. C.) 575.

As against recited facts presumptions to support an appeal will not be indulged. Tate v. McCrary, 21 Ala. 499.

Right of appeal as nearest of kin not presumed from the description of appellants from a decree of probate merely as "brothers and sisters" of the deceased. Hill v. Hill, 6 Ala. 166.

But see Feurth v. Anderson, 87 Mo. 354, to the effect that "an appeal from an inferior court will be presumed to have been taken within the time allowed by law when the record shows nothing to the contrary." Compare, also, Bolling v. Anderson, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 550, where a five-years' neglect to move for a dismissal for certain defects was held to raise the conclusive presumption that all steps necessary to bring the case to the appellate court had been regularly and properly taken.

84. Collateral inquiry.— When the appellate court has acted upon the appeal, with jurisdiction of the subject-matter conferred by law, and jurisdiction of appellee by his appearance, compliance with statutory prerequisites for the taking of such appeal cannot thereafter be questioned in any collateral proceeding. Board of Education v. Campbell, 17 Kan. 537.

Texas.— Rodgers v. Ferguson, 32 Tex. 533.

Washington.— Yakima Water, etc., Co. v. Hathaway, 18 Wash. 377, 51 Pac. 471 (inference that acknowledgment of service of notice of appeal was made before filing notice); Matter of Day, 18 Wash. 359, 51 Pac. 474 (inference that oral notice of appeal was given at time of the judgment); Dahl v. Tibbals, 5 Wash. 259, 31 Pac. 868; Elma v. Carney, 4 Wash. 418, 30 Pac. 732 (inference to sustain notice of appeal).

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3788 et seq.

That authority to execute bond existed.— In case of a corporation surety, authority may be inferred from the corporate signature and seal (Gutzeil v. Pennie, 95 Cal. 598, 30 Pac. 836), although only a scrawl appeared for a corporate seal (Miller v. Superior Mach. Co., 79 Ill. 450). In case of an execution by in the absence of any showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the duties of officers in this respect have been fulfilled,[87] and that the ruling of an intermediate court upon the sufficiency of an appeal to that court was correct,[88] as well, also, as all rulings of the trial court upon the taking of the appeal.[89] agent, authority may be inferred from approval of the bond. Union Gold Min. Co. v. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank, 2 Colo. 226; Belew v. Jones, 56 Miss. 592; Robertson v. Johnson, 40 Miss. 500. In case of an execution by appellant's attorney or by an attorney in fact, authority may be inferred from acceptance of the bond. Sullivan v. Dollins, 11 Ill. 16; Camphell v. State Bank, 2 Ill. 423.

That the bond was approved may be inferred from acceptance (Marshall v. Croom, 50 Ala. 479); from filing (Rawson v. Dofner, 143 Mass. 76, 8 N. E. 892; Robinson v. Chadwick, 22 Ohio St. 527); from acceptance and filing (Hanaw v. Bailey, 83 Mich. 24, 46 N. W. 1039, 9 L. R. A. 801); and from its presence in the record (Rodgers v. Ferguson, 32 Tex. 533; Evans v. Pigg, 28 Tex. 586), provided it be also apparently filed (McLane v. Russell, 29 Tex. 127).

That the bond was duly filed may be inferred from an entry of its filing with "F. S. H., Clerk" (Carothers v. Wheeler, 1 Oreg. 194); from its presence in the transcript (Allen v. Rhodebaugh, Wright (Ohio) 322; Evans v. Pigg, 28 Tex. 586), if the bond be also approved (McLane v. Russell, 29 Tex. 127); and from a filing on the same day with the notice of appeal (State v. Alta Silver Min. Co., 24 Nev. 230, 51 Pac. 982; Dahl v. Tibbals, 5 Wash. 259, 31 Pac. 868).

That the bond was within time may be inferred from acceptance and approval (Nisbet v. Lawson, 1 Ga. 275; Carroll v. Jacksonville, 2 Ill. App. 481); though the time was erroneously extended beyond the term (Carmichael v. Trustees School Lands, 3 How. (Miss.) 84); though not formally filed, if dated (Allen v. Rhodebaugh, Wright (Ohio) 322); though the bond is without date, except the date of justification (Harmon v. Herndon, 99 N. C. 477, 6 S. E. 411); and though the date of approval is shown only by the date of filing (Robinson v. Chadwick, 22 Ohio St. 527), or by the date of the bond (Evans v. Pigg, 28 Tex. 586).

That the objections to the bond were waived may be inferred from its filing and approval, without apparent objection and proper exception, in the case of an insufficient bond (Hancock v. Bramlett, 85 N. C. 393), and in the case of a filing beyond the time limit (Singer Mfg. Co. v. Barrett, 94 N. C. 219; Taliaferro v. Herring, 10 Humphr. (Tenn. 271).

87. Presumptions of official duty fulfilled. — That the judge did not violate the law by granting a suspensive appeal, where only a devolutive appeal was permissible. State v. Judge Second Dist. Ct., 5 La. Ann. 518. That the judge did not abuse his discretion in fixing the return-day, where such discretion is limited by statute to the giving of additional time for the preparation of the record on appeal. Bartoli v. Huguenard, 39 La. Ann. 411, 2 So. 196, 6 So. 30. That an appeal bond was taken by the judge where it was improper for the clerk to take it because he was surety. Russell v. Sprigg, 10 La. 421. That the clerk issued writ of error upon a sufficient petition, where the petition was not in the record. Tombigbee R. Co. v. Bell, 4 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 689. That the clerk transmitted the record within the time limit, where the time of transmission was not shown. State v. Mackall, 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 456. That the clerk had the lawful custody of papers to which he made certification, although, prior thereto, the papers had been delivered to another court. Reed v. Wilson, 75 Wis. 39, 43 N. W. 560. That the clerk recorded "forthwith" a notice of appeal which is in the transcript. Garrison v. Parsons, (Fla. 1899) 25 So. 336. That the discrepancy in the dates was a mere clerical error. Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 533, 10 S. Ct. 867, 34 L. ed. 262. That counsel's sworn and uncontroverted statement as to a diminution of the record is true. Johnston v. George, 6 Md. 452.

Contra.— The authority of a deputy revenue collector to stamp an appeal bond, left unstamped through inadvertence, was held not to be a proper subject of presumption where his authority was special, to be exercised only in case of the sickness or inability of the collector, which was not shown, and leave of court to affix the stamp not having been obtained. Brown v. Crandal, 23 Iowa 112.

88. Arkansas.— Atkins v. Johnson, etc., Co., 67 Ark. 493, 55 S. W. 930.

Colorado.— Hall v. Denver Omnibus, etc., Co., 13 Colo. App. 417, 58 Pac. 402.

Indiana.— Whisenand v. Belle, 154 Ind. 38, 55 N. E. 950; Maxam v. Wood, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 297.

Kentucky.— Greer v. Spencer, 3 Ky. L. Rep. 469.

New York.— Ely v. McNight, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 97.

Wyoming.— Daley v. Anderson, 7 Wyo. 1, 48 Pac. 839, 75 Am. St. Rep. 870.

89. Presumption to sustain favorable rulings of trial court.— A sufficient affidavit, petition, or prayer for appeal may be presumed in support of an order granting or allowing the appeal, without specific objection (Abeyta v. Lynch, 6 Colo. 40; Sallee v. Ireland, 9 Mich. 154; Mundy v. Ross, 15 N. J. L. 466), although the order was made beyond the time for the filing of the petition (Espen v. Hinchliffe, 131 Ill. 468, 23 N. E. 592).

An award of supersedeas may be inferred from the circumstance that both parties acted on that hypothesis, a bond therefor being given, and no entry or record thereof being required by law. Whitehead v. Boorom, 7 Bush (Ky.) 399; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Vanderwarker, 19 W. Va. 265. See also supra, VIII, C, 1, b [2 Cyc. 886].

In the absence of the grounds of dismissal

c. Joinder of Parties on Appeal. The record, unaided by any legal presumption not equally available to either party, must show that all parties necessary to a determination of the appeal have been joined;[90] but, where the necessity for parties other than those joined is not apparent on the record, according to every reasonable inference, there is no presumption that others are necessary, and the burden is on the objecting party to establish a defect of parties;[91] but ambiguities and uncertainties in this respect are to be resolved most strongly against appellant, in order to support the judgment.[92]

d. Sufficiency of the Record — (I) Bill, Case, or Statement — (A) Sufficiency of Settlement. From the settlement of a bill of exceptions, case-made, or statement it will be presumed, in the absence of an affirmative showing to the contrary on the record, that all necessary preliminary steps were taken[93] and that of an appeal by the trial court, or of a bill of exceptions showing that the dismissal was groundless, the dismissal must be presumed to have been upon one or more sufficient grounds. Warren v. Oliver, 111 Ga. 808, 35 S. E. 673.

Leave to withdraw appeal may be inferred from the allowance of a second appeal, and citation only on the latter. Taylor v. Huey, 11 La. Ann. 614.

Necessary action of lower court presumed. — The granting of an appeal may be inferred from the taking of a recognizance. Hillhouse v. Dunning, 7 Conn. 139. From the fixing of the amount of the appeal bond and granting time to file same. Abeyta v. Lynch, 6 Colo. 40. From the filing and approval of the bond:

Colorado.— Callahan v. Jennings, 16 Colo. 471, 27 Pac. 1055.

United States.— Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Washington, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 575, 19 L. ed. 274.

Notice of application for extension of time to file bond may be presumed in order to sustain an order allowing such extension. Pennington v. McNally, 11 Colo. 557, 19 Pac. 503.

The allowance within time was inferred from the date of the judgment where the order granting the appeal bore no date, was signed by a justice other than the one who rendered the judgment, and was attached to the judgment. McMillan v. Davis, 52 N. C. 218.

Writ quashed in lower court.— Where a writ of error coram vobis is quashed in the lower court for insufficiency of notice thereof, and the judge states that there were objections besides those in the record, it will be presumed that the omitted objections justified the ruling. Dorris v. Calow, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 370.

90. See supra, XIII [2 Cyc. 1025].

No presumption to supply necessary parties.— From a notice of appeal purporting to have been taken from an intermediate appellate court by all necessary parties, where the judgment of such court showed that one joint defendant had been omitted on the appeal from a justice of the peace. Elster v. Goodyear, 55 N. Y. App. Div. 190, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 951.

Presumption that clerk acted within his authority.— Where the clerk certifies that one of two defendants sued out a writ of error, and executed bond, etc., the presumption is that one sued out the writ in the name of both defendants, "because on such case alone is the clerk authorized to issue it, or to supersede the judgment." Foster v. Harrison, 3 Ala. 25.

91. Gumbel v. Pitkin, 113 U. S. 545, 5 S. Ct. 616, 28 L. ed. 1128.

Several appeals with one bond not inferred. — From a recital in the bond of "sundry executions" having been levied on the property in question, "it cannot be intended that the justice directed a consolidation of the cases before him; the most natural inference would seem to be that but one of the cases had been tried, or, if all had been tried, but one had been appealed from." Murray v. Ezell, 3 Ala. 148.

Identity of appellant may be inferred, as one of two parties who jointly gave notice of motion for new trial, from the fact that the order denying the motion was limited to that on behalf of "defendant," and appellant was the only one prepared and settled a case on appeal. Barnhart v. Edwards, 111 Cal. 428, 44 Pac. 160.

92. Jennings v. Davis, 5 Dana (Ky.) 127.

Dismissal of one defendant may be presumed, in order to sustain the judgment, from the fact that he was not included in the judgment, where such dismissal could have been properly ordered, and there is no showing that it was not. Smith v. Wilson, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 24, 44 S. W. 556.

Dismissal inferred from disclaimer.— Although the record fails to show a judgment of dismissal on the disclaimer of a defendant, yet, where the cause has proceeded in the lower court without further regard to such defendant, a dismissal as to him will be inferred. Gullett v. O'Connor, 54 Tex. 408.

93. All necessary steps of settlement presumed.— California.— Sullivan v. Wallace, 73 Cal. 307, 14 Pac. 789; Reay v. Butler, 69 Cal. 572, 11 Pac. 463; Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646.

Florida.— Bowen v. Darby, 14 Fla. 202.

the settlement occurred within the time prescribed by law,[94] provided that the settlement is legally regular,[95] which may also be presumed where the judge of

As to settlement of bill, case, or statement see supra, XIII, D, E.

For presumptions about taking exceptions see infra, XVII, E, 2, a.

Submission to opposing counsel before settlement may be presumed where the record is silent on that point, the bill having been settled in proper time and marked part of the record. Findlay Brewing Co. v. Brown, 62 Ohio St. 202, 56 N. E. 871; Steinbock v. Covington, etc., Bridge Co., 6 Obio Dec. 328, 4 Ohio N. P. 229.

94. A settlement within time will be presumed where it does not affirmatively appear that the settlement was beyond time.

Alabama.— Cox v. Whitfield, 18 Ala. 738.

California.— Reay v. Butler, 69 Cal. 572, 11 Pac. 463.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3797.

As to time of settlement of bill, case, or statement see supra, XIII, D, 6, d; XIII, E, 3, b.

Presumptions removing doubts as to time. — That an extension of time was granted or consented to. Robinson v. Hartridge, 13 Fla. 501; Singleton v. Kennedy, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 222; Allen v. Levy, 59 Miss. 613; contra, Otero County v. La Junta First Nat. Bank, 8 Colo. App. 371, 46 Pac. 618. That a nunc pro tunc settlement was due to a justifiable omission, not the fault of appellant. Nesbitt v. Dallam, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 494, 28 Am. Dec. 236; McGavock v. Woodlief, 20 How. (U. S.) 221, 15 L. ed. 884; contra, Underwood v. Masterson, 67 Ill. App. 315. That a bill settled a few days after trial was prepared during trial. Smith v. Kaiser, 17 Nebr. 184, 22 N. W. 368. That a settlement of a bill at a second succeeding term after trial was due to continuance of the hearing on motion for new trial. Nelson v. Withrow, 14 Mo. App. 270. That good cause was shown for an extension of time to make a case. Campbell v. Reese, (Kan. App. 1899) 56 Pac. 543.

A date of settlement before submission of the case for trial has been presumed to be a clerical error, and that the bill was signed at a time when the judge had a right to sign it. Dement v. Tubman, (Md. 1894) 29 Atl. 11.

A settlement beyond time, in Indiana, was held not to have been cured by any presumption arising from a recital in the bill that "now, within the time fixed, the defendants present their bill of exceptions." Orton v. Tilden, 110 Ind. 131, 10 N. E. 936.

95. Agreement of parties will be presumed from the certificate of the judge to a statement as an agreed statement, though signed by counsel for one party only. Schneider v. Stephens, 60 Tex. 419.

Disagreement of parties will be presumed from a statement of facts by the judge, made as upon such disagreement. Sabine, etc., R. Co. v. Joachimi, 58 Tex. 452; McManus v. Wallis, 52 Tex. 534.

Direction to attest and seal will be presumed from the fact that the clerk attested and sealed the case-made, which it was his duty to do only when so directed by the judge. Hammerslough v. Hackett, 30 Kan. 57, 1 Pac. 41.

Presumption as to separate statements.— Where the case on appeal is not settled in the court below, but the different statements of counsel are separately brought up, the appeal will not be dismissed, but the court will presume that the amendments contained in appellee's case were consented to by appellant, and it will be taken as the case on appeal. Owens v. Phelps, 92 N. C. 231.

Presumption of extrajudicial signing.— A bill of exceptions not appearing to have been either signed or filed in court, but time being allowed for completing it in vacation, is presumed to have been prepared and signed extrajudicially, out of court, and is unauthorized and void. Corley v. Evans, 4 Bush (Ky.) 409.

Settlement presumed.— When an appeal is moved in its order on the calendar, the court will presume that the case therein has been settled, unless moved to interfere on affidavits alleging the contrary. Frost v. Smith, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 108.

That there was no settlement may be presumed from the omission of the judge's name in copying the bill of exceptions, so that it appears that he did not sign it (Jones v. Sprague, 3 Ill. 55); and, where there is no bill and suggestion of a diminution of the record, the presumption is that the original bill was not signed. (Pierson v. Watters, 7 Ill. App. 400).

the trial court has assumed to act, and the want of authority is not shown,[96] and provided, also, that the bill, case, or statement has been filed after settlement.[97]

(B) Sufficiency of Contents. From a proper settlement it will be presumed that the contents of the bill, case, or statement are all that is necessary for presentation of the points in dispute[98]—for example, all of the evidence[99] or proceedings[1]

96. Signature before expiration of office may be presumed from the signature as during office, where the date did not appear, and sixty days had been given to file exceptions, the official tenure of the judge expiring in twenty days and the bill being filed thereafter. Bowen v. Preston, 48 Ind. 367.

That circuit justice did not sit may be presumed from a settlement by the district judge. Cooke v. Avery, 147 U. S. 375, 13 S. Ct. 340, 37 L. ed. 209.

That judges not signing bill were absent may be presumed from a signature by the president alone, though his associates were present at the commencement of the term. Miller v. Burger, 2 Ind. 337.

That signing judges heard motion for new trial may be presumed from the fact that the exceptions related only to the overruling of the motion, which, however, was based on the claim that the judgment was against the weight of the evidence, and it did not appear that either of the judges participated in the trial, though they were of the same judicial district. Wilson v. Giddings, 28 Ohio St. 554.

That superior judge was absent may be presumed from a settlement by another judge. Sheehan v. Davis, 17 Ohio St. 571.

Presumption that bystanders who settle bill are reputable.— Hixon v. Weaver, 9 Ark. 133.

Authority of a special judge, in Indiana, to sign a bill of exceptions was held not to be presumed in the absence of anything in the record to show how he came to be thus acting. Fountain County v. Coats, 17 Ind. 150.

97. A filing after time-limit may be presumed to have been by permission for special reasons or by consent, where the filing was without objection (Chadwell v. Chadwell, 98 Ky. 643, 33 S. W. 1118; Henrizi v. Kehr, 90 Wis. 344, 63 N. W. 285); and such filing has been held not to rebut the presumption that the settlement was within time (Goodrich v. Cook, 81 Ill. 41. Compare Underwood v. Masterson, 67 Ill. App. 315). In Indiana it has been held that the record must affirmatively show that leave was given during the term for a filing after term, and that a bill, not shown to have been filed in open court or during the term, will be presumed to have been filed after the term (Hart v. Walker, 77 Ind. 331); but, where there had been an order extending the time, it was presumed that a bill regularly in the transcript was filed in accordance therewith (Armstrong v. Harshman, 93 Ind. 216); and, where a bill was filed during the trial term, it was presumed to have been filed within the time given to the applicant for that purpose (Lake Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Fix, 88 Ind. 381, 45 Am. Rep. 464).

Irrespective of the time of filing, it has been held that a bill which is silent as to when it was settled will be presumed to have been properly settled in term or, by agreement, after term. Claggett v. Gray, 1 Iowa 19.

Signature before filing was presumed where the bill was filed in open court, appeared to have been signed, and the record did not show that it was signed after filing. Minnick v. State, 154 Ind. 379, 56 N. E. 851; Martin v. State, 148 Ind. 519, 47 N. E. 930.

98. Contents of a copy of a bill filed in the appellate court is presumed to be the same as the original in the trial court. Clayton v. May, 68 Ga. 27; Harman v. State, 22 Ind. 331.

As to contents of bill, case, or statement see supra, XIII, D, 4; XIII, E, 2.

Upon an agreed statement, there are no such presumptions in regard to the sufficiency of its contents as attend the settlement of a case by the trial judge. Maghee v. Baker, 15 Ind. 254.

99. Presumption that all of the evidence was included.— Alabama.—Gresham v. Bryan, 103 Ala. 629, 15 So. 849; Hendricks v. Johnson, 6 Port. (Ala.) 472.

Arkansas.— Leggett v. Grimmett, 36 Ark. 496.

As to necessity of incorporating evidence in bill, case, or statement see supra, XIII, D, 4, b; XIII, E, 2, b.

1. Proceedings presumed included.—All affidavits in support of a motion. Hood v. Pearson, 67 Ind. 368; Whitestone Milling Co. v. Zahm, 10 Ind. App. 471, 36 N. E. 764; Green v. Shute, 15 Daly (N. Y.) 361, 7 N. Y. Suppl.

in the lower court, or so much thereof as may be necessary[2]—in the absence of a contrary showing in the record;[3] and the truth of all recitals or statements therein as to such contents is presumed,[4] as well, also, as recitals and statements

646, 27 N. Y. St. 816; Hroch v. Aultman, etc., Co., 3 S. D. 477, 54 N. W. 269. All instructions given. Dulaney v. Nunnery, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 304.

Uncertainties of trial-court proceedings cured by presumption: Omission to specifically mark and identify copies of pleadings and proceedings in case-made. Farmers', etc., Bank v. Glen Elder Bank, 46 Kan. 376, 26 Pac. 680; Ryan v. Madden, 46 Kan. 245, 26 Pac. 679. Omission to specify that portions stricken out of the original bill were stricken out by order of the trial judge, where the copy filed in the supreme court, disregarding the portions stricken out, corresponded with the original in the lower court. Clayton v. May, 68 Ga. 27. Omission to state that the signature of the judge was affixed to the record at the close of the day's proceedings, as required by statute, where such signature appears, together with the clerk's certificate that the transcript is an entry of record of the day's proceedings. Scott v. Millard, 10 Ind. 158.

West Virginia.— Edgell v. Conaway, 24 W. Va. 747.

United States.— Arthurs v. Hart, 17 How. (U. S.) 6, 15 L. ed. 30.

All material evidence presumed to have been included.— Though all the evidence be not included, and certain rulings requested were refused upon all the evidence, the presumption is that all of the material evidence bearing on the question is set out. Foster v. Ropes, 111 Mass. 10. Where it is provided that only so much of the evidence of proceedings shall be incorporated in the bill of exceptions as may be necessary to explain the rulings below which have been excepted to, there is no presumption beyond such necessity. Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 12 S. Ct. 679, 36 L. ed. 485 [affirming 35 Fed. 176].

Failure to include any particular evidence raises the presumption that the omitted evidence was unfavorable to party excepting or would not have aided his case. Tabor v. Judd, 62 N. H. 288; Lobdell v. Marshall, 58 N. H. 342.

Failure to suggest a diminution, in case the record shows that certain evidence is not in the transcript, is warrant for the presumption that the omitted evidence is not material. Peebles v. Green, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 471.

3. No presumption of further evidence or proceedings from the omission to specify that all was included in the record — that which was included being sufficient to support the judgment. Gresham v. Bryan, 103 Ala. 629, 15 So. 849; Hidden v. Jordan, 28 Cal. 301; Ryan v. Sanford, 133 Ill. 291, 24 N. E. 428; Cattle v. Haddox, 14 Nebr. 59, 14 N. W. 803. Aliter, where a further presumption is necessary to support the judgment. Bowman v. Bowman, 64 Ill. 75. But no such further presumption will be indulged upon an agreed statement of facts. Hall v. Virginia City, 91 Ill. 535.

The contrary must appear from the record. Porter v. Duglass, 27 Miss. 379.

The contrary appearing on the record, the ordinary presumption that the record contains all matters pertinent to the proper presentation of the appeal is overcome, notwithstanding the presumption is required by statute, for, in such case, the statute is held not to apply. Poujade v. Ryan, 21 Nev. 449, 33 Pac. 659.

4. Statements or recitals as to contents presumed true.— That all of the affidavits read and filed with a motion were included. Vanscoyoc v. Kimler, 77 Ill. 151. That all of the evidence was included. Bishop v. Taylor, (Fla. 1899) 25 So. 287; Maghee v. Baker, 15 Ind. 254; Schermerhorn v. Merritt, 123 Mich. 310, 82 N. W. 513, 83 N. W. 405; Porter v. Duglass, 27 Miss. 379; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Myers, 63 Fed. 793, 24 U. S. App. 295, 11 C. C. A. 439. That all of the facts given in evidence were included. Bennett v. Dowling, 22 Tex. 660. That certain evidence was admitted. Avocato v. Dell 'Ara, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 57 S. W. 296.

An indorsement of approval and assent by attorney for appellee will carry the presumption that the memorandum contained everything material to the question raised. Creshull v. Mullen, 104 N. Y. 660, 10 N. E. 430.

Attorney's certificate of no amendments to a bill of exceptions, when presented for that purpose, implies that all of the testimony has been included. Cattle v. Haddox, 14 Nebr. 59, 14 N. W. 803.

Recital of an admission, in the acknowledgment of service of a case-made, that it contains all of the proceedings will be taken as true and that all the testimony was included. Lindsay v. Kearny County, 56 Kan. 630, 44 Pac. 603.

Recital of a direction to clerk to insert certain proceedings is ground for the presumption that the insertion was made — for example, that all of the instructions were inserted. King v. Barber, 61 Iowa 674, 17 N. W. 88.

Repugnant statements reconciled by pre-of the facts proved or occurring on the trial,[5] and the genuineness of the documents included therein.[6]

sumption.— An expression that there was no evidence of any indebtedness was construed to mean that there was no positive proof, evidence of such indebtedness appearing from other statements. Goodgame v. Clifton, 13 Ala. 583.

5. Pennsylvania Co. v. Swan, 37 Ill. App. 83; Chrisman v. Gregory, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 474; Swenson v. Kleinschmidt, 10 Mont. 473, 26 Pac. 198; Marsh v. Synder, 14 Nebr. 237, 15 N. W. 341.

Recitals or statements of fact presumed true.— That the official reporter was duly appointed and sworn as such. Garn v. Working, 5 Ind. App. 14, 31 N. E. 821. That the reasons stated for a ruling are the only reasons. State v. Farrer, 35 La. Ann. 315; Dunham v. Forbes, 25 Tex. 23. That exceptions were taken at the trial, and in the order and at the time stated in the bill (Hyde Park v. Dunham, 85 Ill. 569); and a statement that an exception was taken implies that it was taken at the proper time and in the proper manner (Thiving v. Clifford, 136 Mass. 482; Simonton v. Kelly, 1 Mont. 363; Hunt v. Bloomer, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 567; Hall v. Harris, 2 S. D. 331, 50 N. W. 98; Washington, etc., Tel. Co. v. Hobson, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 122; contra, Borah v. Martin, 2 Pinn. (Wis.) 401, 2 Chandl. (Wis.) 56); but a statement, in a bill settled after the trial, that the plaintiff "excepts" will not warrant the presumption that the exception was taken at the trial (Dufield v. Cross, 13 Ill. 699; contra, Wakeman v. Lyon, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 241). That due service of the notice of appeal and undertaking was made and admitted. Bell v. Thomas, 7 S. D. 202, 63 N. W. 907. That a waiver of an exemption was executed, and was in writing, though the writing was not stated. Hearn v. State, 62 Ala. 218.

Statement that certain facts "appeared" is equivalent to a statement that there was no controversy in regard to it (Noyes v. Rockwood, 56 Vt. 647); and, though evidentiary questions be also stated in the exceptions in relation to what appeared, the statement of what appeared will control (Amsden v. Floyd, 60 Vt. 386, 15 Atl. 332).

Statement of fact not conclusive.— A certificate that there was evidence tending to prove certain facts does not preclude the theory that there was evidence to the contrary. Ft. Wayne v. Durnell, 13 Ind. App. 669, 42 N. E. 242; Bourne v. Merritt, 22 Vt. 429.

Uncertain statements will be so construed, if possible, as to support the judgment.

Alabama.— Wilson v. Wilson, 18 Ala. 176.

Louisiana.— Dromgoole v. Gardner, 10 Mart. (La.) 433.

Massachusetts.— Bingham v. Boston, 161 Mass. 3, 36 N. E. 473.

Nebraska.— Marsh v. Synder, 14 Nebr. 237, 15 N. W. 341.

Nevada.— Wilson v. Hill, 17 Nev. 401, 30 Pac. 1076.

Virginia.— Smith v. Walker, 1 Call (Va.) 28.

Presumption does not go beyond statement.
— Alabama.— Murray v. Tardy, 19 Ala. 710.

Illinois.— Johnson v. Johnson, 187 Ill. 86, 58 N. E. 237.

Missouri.—Cummiskey v. Williams, 20 Mo. App. 606.

Ohio.— Mathews v. Leaman, 24 Ohio St. 615; Eclipse Ins. Co. v. Schoemer, 2 Cinc. Super. Ct. (Ohio) 474; Hooker v. Wittenberg College, 2 Cinc. Super. Ct. (Ohio) 353.

Vermont.— Clemmons v. Danforth, 67 Vt. 617, 32 Atl. 626, 48 Am. St. Rep. 836; Bourne v. Merritt, 22 Vt. 429.

Presumption will not exceed or contradict statement, even to support judgment. Townsend v. Jeffries, 17 Ala. 276; Shaw v. Hoffman, 25 Mich. 162. Thus, a statement that the evidence upon a certain point is not set out "because it fully sustains the verdict" does not imply that the verdict might not have been otherwise if excluded evidence had been admitted. Dossett v. Miller, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 71.

No presumption of truth of a contradicted statement — for example, where an instrument was recited as a bond, and, upon being set out, it appeared not to have been sealed. Hamilton v. Hamilton, 27 Ill. 158.

Recital of a legal conclusion will not be presumed to be correct in the absence of sufficient evidence to support it, but may be disregarded as the assertion of an erroneous legal proposition. Crothers v. Ross, 17 Ala. 816.

6. Copies of documents contained in the bill of exceptions will be presumed to be copies of the identical ones in evidence where bill purports to contain all the evidence, though the particular documents are not separately certified. Imperial Hotel Co. v. H. B. Claflin Co., 175 Ill. 119, 51 N. E. 610.

The copy of a bond, regular on its face, is presumed to be a correct copy of the instrument sued on, though the result is a reversal of the judgment for defendant, because of testimony received which was admissible, upon the hypothesis that the bond bore on its face evidence of erasure after delivery. Edelin v. Sanders, 8 Md. 118.

An insertion, by reference, of a document is not conclusive that the document was inserted at, or prior to, the settlement of the bill, and, where it appears that the clerk copied it thereafter, it will not be considered as before the court. Seymour Woollen Factory Co. v. Brodhecker, 130 Ind. 389, 28 N. E. 185, 30 N. E. 528. From a proper insertion by reference it is presumed that the whole paper is intended to be presented, and not merely so much as best comports with its description. Moore v. Bond, 18 Me. 142.

(II) Transcript or Abstract of Record. In the absence of any showing to the contrary, the correctness and completeness of a duly certified transcript or abstract of the record is to be presumed,[7] and amendments thereto, when permissible, are presumed to have been ordered upon sufficient reasons, when the reasons therefor are not shown.[8] Again, an amendment may be presumed though the fact does not appear;[9] also, that the amendment contains all important facts

Answer of garnishee not filed.— Where the judgment purports to be founded upon the answer of a garnishee on file, and it does not appear from the record that plaintiff required an oral answer, the appellate court will presume that the answer in writing upon the record, though not marked "Filed," is the answer indicated by the judgment. Lewis v. Duhose, 29 Ala. 219.

Stipulation of counsel presumed to have been executed, where there was an appearance and trial in the court below — otherwise in case of judgment by default. Moore v. Briggs, 14 Ala. 700.

Texas.— Johnson v. Galbraith, 17 Tex. 364.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3804 et seq.

As to requisites of transcript or abstract of record see supra, XIII, F, G.

Error in record presumed, to sustain order of trial court.— Where it appears from the record that an order of sale notified all persons "to appear on this day," and that the order to show cause was made returnable on the next day of the month, an error in making up the record will be presumed rather than that the order was made before the return-day. Russell v. Lewis, 3 Oreg. 380.

Facts held to repel presumption.— Omission of filing mark. Wooster v. McGee, 1 Tex. 17. Statement in the clerk's certificate that the sheets preceding it "contain a transcript of all the proceedings on which the cause was tried, since the last appeal, with the exceptions of the transcripts of the two former appeals, which are already in the supreme court." Allain v. Preston, 5 La. 478.

Facts held not to repel presumption.— The presence of a paper with a date later than the judgment. Gordon v. Donahue, 79 Cal. 501, 21 Pac. 970. Careless and negligent manner of making records, resulting in probable clerical mistakes. Judah v. McNamee, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 269. Omission to attach certificate until nearly a month after filing. Skagit R., etc., Co. v. Cole, 1 Wash. 330, 26 Pac. 535. Omission to state that evidence was certified by trial judge. Kirchman v. Standard Coal Co., (Iowa 1901) 84 N. W. 939. Making a written request to the clerk to insert a copy of bill of exceptions, under a statute requiring the clerk to insert the original when requested, the original having been inserted, and it being presumed that this was done upon an oral request made subsequently to the written one. Tombaugh v. Grogg, 156 Ind. 355, 59 N. E. 1060.

If a record is susceptible of different constructions it will be harmonized, if possible, with the end in view of supporting the judgment below. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Horney, 5 Kan. 340.

Oral testimony will be presumed to be included. Morrison v. Lynch, 36 La. Ann. 611.

Partial transcript, irregularly made out, will be presumed to contain all of the record relevant to the issues presented. Lane v. Farleigh, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 328.

Private seal will be presumed from scroll and recital of seal. Hines v. North Carolina, 10 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 529.

Scrawl by the copyist will be presumed to be a copy of an official seal, where an official seal is required, though there is nothing to show that it is not a private seal, since a literal copy of a seal cannot be transcribed (Moore v. Titman, 33 Ill. 358); and a mere recital of such a seal has been held sufficient, without a scrawl (Norfleet v. Russell, 64 Mo. 176); but where there is neither scrawl nor recital it is presumed that there was no seal (Daugherty v. Yates, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 646, 35 S. W. 937).

Revenue stamp will be presumed to have been upon an instrument where required, though none is copied, since a revenue stamp is no part of the instrument. Owsley v. Greenwood, 18 Minn. 429.

Where abstracts of the evidence, furnished by both parties, were conflicting and neither were certified, the defendant's version, which supported the judgment, was presumed correct. McGuire v. De Frese, 77 Mo. App. 683.

8. Youngblood v. Youngblood, 54 Ala. 486; Pyle v. Pyle, 158 Ill. 289, 41 N. E. 999; Gebbie v. Mooney, 121 Ill. 255, 12 N. E. 472; Kirkwood v. Heege, 9 Mo. App. 576.

9. An amendment was presumed where two exemplifications of a record were before the appellate court, one of which showed a valid omitted from the original,[10] or that, in the absence of an amendment, the original contains such facts.[11]

2. In Support of the Judgment — a. General Rules. As a general rule, the judgment appealed from is presumed to be right until, by an affirmative showing on the record, the contrary is established.[12] It follows, therefore, that every service of process, and the other did not. Farrelly v. Cross, 10 Ark. 197.

Interlineations — Amendments after filing. — Where there was no evidence in the record from which it could be inferred that interlineations in a bill, alleged to have been made as amendments, were made after the bill was filed, it was presumed that the court below had evidence that they were a part of the original bill, or, at least, that there was no evidence that they constituted amendments. Mason v. Bair, 33 Ill. 194. It will not be presumed that a cipher telegram, copied into the record without explanatory interlineations which appeared thereon when produced on appeal, bore such interlineation at a time before the trial when it was sought to charge a party with notice thereof. J. K. Armsby Co. v. Eckerly, 42 Mo. App. 299. A printed abstract, containing a written interlineation in the petition set out therein, without which interlineation the trial court's finding could not be sustained, will be presumed to be a correct amended abstract, in the absence of any contrary showing in the record. Mahaska County v. Ruan, 45 Iowa 328. Where an affidavit on a motion to set aside a judgment by default alleges that the return to the summons was not signed by the sheriff, but the transcript shows the presence of the sheriff's signature at the time of the default, a presumption will arise, in the absence of clear proof to the contrary, that an amendment was lawfully made, so as to have the return declare the truth. Heaton v. Peterson, 6 Ind. App. 1, 31 N. E. 1133.

10. Conneautsville First Nat. Bank v. Robinson, 105 Iowa 463, 75 N. W. 334; O'Brien v. Harrison, 59 Iowa 686, 12 N. W. 256, 13 N. W. 764.

11. Bell v. Thomas, 7 S. D. 202, 63 N. W. 907; Davenport v. Buchanan, 6 S. D. 376, 61 N. W. 47.

A failure to incorporate evidence in the transcript raises the presumption that the parties intentionally waived its presence. Sugg v. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Assoc., (Tenn. Ch. 1901) 63 S. W. 226; Renshaw v. Tullahoma First Nat. Bank, (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 63 S. W. 194.

Substantial error will not be presumed to have been cured in the absence of an affirmative showing in the record to that effect, though it was capable of being rendered harmless. Michalitschke v. Wells, 118 Cal. 683, 50 Pac. 847. Aliter, where there is no bill of exceptions containing the proceedings on the trial. Anniston First Nat. Bank v. Cheney, 114 Ala. 536, 21 So. 1002.

13. Every reasonable presumption is against appellant, and the burden is upon him to show error.

Vermont.— Cram v. Cram, 33 Vt. 15; Oaks v. Oaks, 27 Vt. 410.

Wisconsin.—Van Patten v. Wilcox, 32 Wis. 340.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," §§ 3669, 3670.

Facts supplied by presumption to support judgment, in the absence of showing to contrary: That a debt was payable within the state. Martin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 50 Mo. App. 428. That a contract of insurance was made where an insurance company was shown to have authority to transact business. American Ins. Co. v. Woodruff, 34 Mich. 6. That a mortgagor resided in the town where his mortgage was recorded. Jenks v. Smith, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 592. That intersecting streets are common thoroughfares, which a municipality is under duty to keep in repair. Sheridan v. Salem, 14 Oreg. 328, 12 Pac. 925. That a shed, the subject of a trespass, was so attached to the realty as to entitle plaintiff to maintain the action. Kelley v. Seward, 51 Vt. 436. That defects in an exhibit were supplied by sufficient proof. Henry v. Evans, 58 Iowa 560, 9 N. W. 216, 12 N. W. 601; Davenport Plow Co. v. Mewis, 10 Nebr. 317, 4 N. W. 1059. That a change in the manner of holding stock — from a pledge to absolute ownership — was legally made. Williams v. Walker, 9 N. Y. St. 60. That an ordinance under which plaintiff claimed, in existence at the time of the trial, was in force at the time the claim arose. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Feehan, 149 Ill. 202, 36 N. E. 1036. That lis pendens notice was properly filed and before the court. Sage v. McLaughlin, 34 Wis. 550. That a notice, required to be in writing, was verbal, the bill of exceptions showing only that a notice was given. Harris v. Rowlands, 23 Ala. 644. That an appraisement and classification of public lands set out was duly and legally made. Clark v. McKnight, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 61 S. W. 349.

Exhibits to pleadings are presumed to have been offered in evidence, though no statement to that effect is made, the contrary not appearing. Wynn v. Rosette, 66 Ala. 517; Gafney v. Reeves, 6 Ind. 71; Henry v. Evans, 58 Iowa 560, 9 N. W. 216, 12 N. W. 601.

Presumption against fact.— A note described as made at "Columbus, Geo.," was presumed not to have been made in the state of Georgia, where such presumption was necessary to affirm the judgment. Hargrove v. Smith, 1 Ala. 80.

Presumption of compliance with the law, in the absence of showing to the contrary: That a notary recorded an instrument of protest. Pogne v. Hickman, 9 Rob. (La.) 158. That a certificate which bears no date and no stamp was furnished before the going into effect of the act in reference to stamped instruments. Citizens' Bank v. Dixey, 21 La. Ann. 32. That a recorded deed was recorded upon motion, as required by law. Robb v. Ankeny, 4 Watts & S. (Pa.) 128.

That contingency which will support the judgment will be presumed, though there is a probability of another contingency which would defeat it.

the judgment is right becomes conclusive upon a failure of the record to show that the necessary exceptions were duly taken to the rulings complained of,[14] and,

Texas.— Gammage v. Moore, 42 Tex. 170; Pierce v. Pierce, 21 Tex. 469.

West Virginia.— Werninger v. Wilson, 2 W. Va. 1.

That the court has not made a void order will be presumed if the order in question is susceptible of the opposite construction. Pereria v. Wallace, 129 Cal. 397, 62 Pac. 61; Malmo's Appeal, (Conn. 1900) 47 Atl. 163; Stewart v. Logan County, 2 Ohio Cir. Ct. 134, 1 Ohio Cir. Dec. 404.

Wrong date will be presumed to have been sufficiently explained to trial court, in the case of a date of a forthcoming bond subsequent to the time therein stipulated for delivery of the property (Hyman v. Seaman, 33 Miss. 185); and in a default judgment upon a note, where the declaration shows an apparent discrepancy between the date of maturity and the date of demand (Williams v. State Bank, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 43).

Presumptions not to be indulged in support of judgment: That the name of a township had been changed. Neal v. Keller, 19 Kan. 111. That plaintiff did not have an ox-cart, under a statute exempting a wagon or an ox-cart, as the debtor may choose, and the judgment being in trover for the recovery of the value of a wagon sold on execution. Chamberlain v. Whitney, 65 Vt. 488, 27 Atl. 72. That proof was made of a bond alleged, but not set out, in the bill and denied in the answer. Holdridge v. Bailey, 5 Ill. 124. That a sale of liquors was unlawful. Brown v. McHugh, 36 Mich. 433. That certain documentary evidence necessary to the judgment was filed. Herbert v. Uhl, 20 N. Y. Suppl. 743, 49 N. Y. St. 496. That proof was made of a matter not properly put in issue, though necessary to the judgment. Comstock v. Hollon, 2 Mich. 355. That a bond sued on, regular on its face in the record, was materially altered after delivery. Edelin v. Sanders, 8 Md. 118.

From the silence of appellee on a given point made by appellant in his brief it cannot be presumed that the point is waived or admitted, nor can appellant be thus relieved of the burden of showing error. Martin v. Martin, 74 Ind. 207.

Rule of presumption is not abrogated by a statute permitting an appellant to bring up, upon appeal, only those parts of the proceedings below which he considers necessary to his case. McKee v. Stein, 91 Ky. 240, 16 S. W. 583; Huffaker v. National Bank, 13 Bush (Ky.) 644; Phillips v. Phillips, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 816.

14. Presumption is conclusive in the absence of exceptions, where exceptions are necessary.

United States.— Searcy v. Hogan, Hempst. (U. S.) 20, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,584*a*.

As to necessity of reservation in lower court of grounds of review see supra, V [2 Cyc. 660].

Exception is not presumed to have been taken at the trial, merely from the use of the word "excepts" in the bill settled thereafter. Dufield v. Cross, 13 Ill. 699. But see Wakeman v. Lyon, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 241; and, contra, Foree v. Smith, 1 Dana (Ky.) 151.

Exceptions are presumed to have been taken properly, from a notation by the judge on instructions given that they were excepted to (Kellow v. Central Iowa R. Co., 68 Iowa 470, 23 N. W. 740, 27 N. W. 466, 56 Am. Rep. 858); from a statement thereof in the abstract, though it is omitted from the amended abstract (Palmer v. Rogers, 70 Iowa 381, 30 N. W. 645); from a statement that all and each of a series of instructions were excepted to, and that the exceptions were taken separately (Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Retford, 18 Kan. 245); from a settlement of the bill after the trial (Hughes v. Robertson, in addition thereto, sufficient assignments of error,[15] and facts in the record to support such assignments.[16] When all of the facts are properly before the appel-

1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 215, 15 Am. Dec. 104; Toole v. Bearce, 91 Me. 299, 39 Atl. 558); from the statement of an overruled objection, though no special exception appears (McBride v. Cicotte, 4 Mich. 478).

Exceptions not passed on will be presumed to have been accepted. Jones v. Call, 93 N. C. 170.

Exceptions unnecessary.— In equity cases, in Iowa, exceptions are unnecessary to a review by the appellate court, and, where all of the evidence is in the record and the issues are equitable, it will be presumed that the trial was in equity (Baldwin v. Davis, 63 Iowa 231, 18 N. W. 897), and that the evidence was taken in writing, pursuant to an order upon motion therefor (Bailey v. Landingham, 53 Iowa 722, 6 N. W. 76; Ryan v. Mullinix, 45 Iowa 631; Hammersham v. Fairall, 44 Iowa 462).

15. Presumption conclusive in the absence of assignments of error.— Campbell v. Dooling, 26 Ark. 647; Vaughan v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 34 Mo. App. 141; Wynne v. Kennedy, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 693, 33 S. W. 298.

As to necessity of assignments of error see supra, XI, B [2 Cyc. 980].

16. Presumption conclusive in the absence of facts to support error.— The silence of the record as to facts showing error cannot be supplied by presumption.

Wisconsin.— Butler v. Gillis, 104 Wis. 421, 80 N. W. 735.

Omitted evidence apparently insufficient.— Where the record purports to contain all the evidence except certain documents referred to but not incorporated, the nature of which shows them to be insufficient, even when taken together with all the other evidence, to support the judgment, it is not to be presumed that there was other evidence omitted which would support it. Beaird v. Wolf, 19 Ill. App. 36.

Rules of practice of trial court not appearing, the presumption is that the action taken was in accordance therewith. Holloway v. Freeman, 22 Ill. 197; Tyler v. Murray, 57 Md. 418; Kunkel v. Spooner, 9 Md. 462, 66 Am. Dec. 332; Calvert v. Coxe, 1 Gill (Md.) 95.

An incomplete transcript or judgment-roll will, as to the omitted portion, be presumed to support the judgment.

Doubtful statements, unsupported by facts, will support presumptions against appellant. Stark v. Whitman, 58 Tex. 375.

17. Miller v. Havens, 51 Mich. 482, 16 N. W. 865.

Upon all the evidence, the same presumptions will arise as should have been indulged in the trial court. Blunt v. Bates, 40 Ala. 470; Spears v. Clark, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 167. In such case the appellate court will not presume what the record fails to disclose. Davis v. Poland, 92 Va. 225, 23 S. E. 292.

Upon an agreed statement of facts, the court will not presume, in support of the judgment, that any essential fact not shown therein was established on the trial. Rogers v. Gould, 20 Tex. 437; Thatcher v. Mills, 11 Tex. 692. Nor will it presume that any fact shown therein was not considered; the question thus presented is purely one of the proper application of the law to admitted facts. Barden v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co., 3 Mo. App. 248.

Facts which cannot be brought into the record — for example, such as are solely within the personal knowledge of the trial judge — will be presumed to support the judgment below. Welch v. Welch, 33 Wis. 534.

In Arkansas it has been held that no presumption will be indulged in favor of the regularity of the proceedings over which a special judge presides unless they appear to have been had in the regular progress of the business of the court, the term of which appears to have been opened by the regular judge. Cruson v. Whitley, 19 Ark. 99.

20. Presumptions to sustain special authority of regular judge.— That the hearing of a motion for a new trial before a judge other than the one who presided at the trial was directed in a regular manner by the presiding judge. Martin v. Platt, 131 N. Y. 641, 30 N. E. 565, 43 N. Y. St. 326 [affirming 16 N. Y. Suppl. 115, 40 N. Y. St. 761, (affirming 26 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 382, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 49)]. That a judge who presided outside of his circuit, county, or district did so in accordance with special statutory authority. In re Corralitos Co-operative Drying, etc., Co., (Cal. 1900) 62 Pac. 1076; Scott v. White, 71 Ill. 287; Stricker v. Kubusky, 35 Ill. the amount in controversy,[23] the exercise of authority in a regular manner[24] at a regular term,[25] or the sufficient and due appointment of a special term.[26] When the lower court has expressly determined the jurisdictional matter in question, such determination will be presumed to be right unless the record clearly shows it to be wrong.[27]

v. Stewart, 109 Iowa 561, 80 N. W. 657. That the subject of a foreclosure was situated within the court's jurisdiction. Brown v. Anderson, 90 Ind. 93; Culph v. Phillips, 17 Ind. 209. That a tort for which judgment was given occurred within the court's jurisdiction. Wade v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 78 Mo. 362. That statutory consent, to enable a justice of the peace to entertain a suit involving over one hundred dollars, was given. Hopkins Fine Stock Co. v. Reid, 106 Iowa 78, 75 N. W. 656.

As to necessity of record showing jurisdiction of subject-matter see supra, XIII, A, 2, b, (IV) [2 Cyc. 1035].

23. Amount will be presumed within jurisdiction if the contrary does not clearly appear of record. Hackney v. Schow, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 613, 53 S. W. 713; Mathews v. Ripley, 101 Wis. 100, 77 N. W. 718. See also supra, XIII A, 2, b (V) [2 Cyc. 1035].

Consent, in the absence of objection, may be presumed, in order to enable a justice of the peace to entertain jurisdiction of a suit for more than one hundred dollars, where the amount in controversy was within that which could have been so litigated by consent. Hopkins Fine Stock Co. v. Reid, 106 Iowa 78, 75 N. W. 656.

Facts not rebutting presumption in favor of jurisdictional amount.— Judgment for a less sum than that for which the court was authorized to entertain a suit, where the amount claimed was within the amount limit and a set-off had been pleaded. Camp v. Marion County, 91 Ala. 240, 8 So. 786. Judgment for a small sum in excess of the amount limit, where such excess was within that which could have been allowed as interest upon the amount claimed (Richards v. Belcher, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 284, 25 S. W. 740), or where a slight excess was more than compensated for by a lower rate of interest than that which might have been allowed (Simmons v. Rhodes, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 903).

24. Presumptions of regular judicial action. — That an absent judge was disqualified to act. Bates v. Sabin, 64 Vt. 511, 24 Atl. 1013. That a disqualified judge did not act. Martyn v. Curtis, 68 Vt. 397, 35 Atl. 333. That an adjournment requiring consent of parties was made upon consent. Wood v. Spofford, 29 Misc. (N. Y.) 357, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 492. That an order was made by a judge (not named) who had authority (Matter of Ross Tp. Public Road, 5 Pa. Super. Ct. 85), though the sole judge of the district was disqualified (Link v. Connell, 48 Nebr. 574, 67 N. W. 475. That a case, tried by the regular judge, had been abandoned by a special judge to whom it had been transferred. Hervey v. Parry, 82 Ind. 263. That an order made outside the circuit was heard within the circuit. State v. Satterwhite, 20 S. C. 536. That only one of two judges present presided. Sargent v. Evanston, 154 Ill. 268, 40 N. E. 440. That a cause, indefinitely continued, was not placed on the dead docket. Dours v. Cazentre, McGloin (La.) 251.

Facts held to rebut presumption of regularity.— Leaving the bench in the course of the trial, by the regular judge, whose place was assumed and the trial determined by another person, the latter being a member of the bar but not a judge. Van Slyke v. Trempealeau County Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 39 Wis. 390, 20 Am. Rep. 50; and, to similar effect, see Fountain County v. Coats, 17 Ind. 150. That a term in another county had been adjourned so as to permit the continuation of the term in question after the time fixed for the former. Weaver v. Cooledge, 15 Iowa 244. That a term was not allowed to lapse by the intervention of a long period — that is, twenty-three days since a given term-day. Hyde v. Kent, 47 Nebr. 26, 66 N. W. 39. That a garnishment suit was continued over the term at which judgment in the principal suit was rendered. Old Second Nat. Bank v. Williams, 112 Mich. 564, 71 N. W. 150.

26. Presumptions as to special term.—That a special term was duly held in pursuance of an order therefor (Sparkman v. Daughtry, 35 N. C. 168), and for the transaction of general business (Hicks v. Ellis, 65 Mo. 176). That a special term was regularly appointed. Harman v. Copenhaver, 89 Va. 836, 17 S. E. 482. That a general term was adjourned, so as to permit the holding of a special term. Myers v. Mitchell, 1 S. D. 249, 46 N. W. 245.

(B) Statutory Exceptions. By statute, some courts of limited or special jurisdiction can be held to have acquired jurisdiction only when certain prerequisite facts are affirmatively shown.[28] But, even in such cases, authority, once shown, is presumed to have been rightfully exercised unless the record shows the contrary.[29] In the United States courts, also, for statutory reasons, the presumption is that the court below was without jurisdiction when the record, as to the existence of necessary jurisdictional facts, is silent.[30]

(II) OF THE PERSON—(A) General Rule. Upon an incomplete record of the lower court, as to the facts necessary to vest jurisdiction of the person of defendant, and from an apparently regular judgment, it will, on appeal from such judgment, be presumed that such jurisdictional facts, as to all necessary

Facts not rebutting presumption of correct determination below.— The overruling of an objection to the qualification of the trial judge "without hearing evidence," because "this does not necessarily imply that the court refused to hear evidence, but may well mean that none was offered." Stark v. Whitman, 58 Tex. 375. The introduction of the judgment-roll of a case wherein the surrogate was a party, as such, this being consistent with the assumption that the surrogate had no personal interest in the subject-matter. The judgment of an intermediate court upon jurisdictional facts of the trial court will be supported by presumptions similar to those which attend a determination by the trial court. 30. Börs v. Preston, 111 U. S. 252, 4 S. Ct. 407, 28 L. ed. 419. But see Keith v. Clark, 97 U. S. 454, 24 L. ed. 1071, holding that, where a point which would give the lower court jurisdiction appears in the record as the basis of the judgment, it will not be presumed, in order to defeat the jurisdiction, that the decision was upon some other point not found in the record, and not appearing to have been suggested in the lower court.

Destroyed records may be presumed to have shown diverse citizenship.— Where, after removal of a case from a state court to a United States circuit court, the records were destroyed by fire and the trial proceeded, without objection, upon substituted pleadings which did not show the citizenship of the parties, it was presumed that diverse citizenship, authorizing the removal, had previously been shown. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Ramsey, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 322, 22 L. ed. 823.

Jurisdiction appearing from some of the counts, though not from others, and the judgment being supported by the former, no objection having been taken to the jurisdiction and the evidence not appearing to show that the judgment was upon the latter, jurisdiction will be presumed. United States Bank v. Moss, 6 How. (U. S.) 31, 12 L. ed. 331.

Presumption of leave to dismiss as to one defendant.— Where an amended bill was filed, by leave of court, omitting one of the original parties defendant, whose presence might have defeated the jurisdiction of the court upon the ground of diverse citizenship, it was presumed, in the absence of a contrary showing, that leave to dismiss as to such party was given. Hicklin v. Marco, 56 Fed. 549, 6 C. C. A. 10.

In summary proceedings, on notice and motion, the same presumptions as to jurisdictional facts are indulged as in the case of actions upon summons and complaint. Shouse v. Lawrence, 51 Ala. 559.

32. Showing of process must be presumed conclusive, in the absence of a showing to the contrary. Haworth v. Huling, 87 Ill. 23; Lynch v. Johnston, Hard. (Ky.) 372.

Facts held not to impeach showing of process.— The presence of only one summons, returnable to the first term, showing that some of defendants were not found, since there is a possibility of an alias summons at a subsequent term (Haworth v. Huling, 87 Ill. 23); and the same holding was made where the only summons in the record was defective (Turner v. Jenkins, 79 Ill. 228). The absence of a seal from the copy of the process in the record, the presumption being that the original was duly sealed. Bryan v. Spruell, 16 La. 313.

Facts held to impeach recital of process.— Presence in the record of a summons insufficient because returnable too soon. Carlton v. Miller, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 619, 21 S. W. 697. Presence in the record of a summons which is defective because not containing the names of some of defendants. Dickison v. Dickison, 124 Ill. 483, 16 N. E. 861. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3693 et seq.

Facts held not to impeach showing of personal service.— An indorsement of acknowlment of service by one defendant, dated prior to the time the officer received the notice for service on other defendants. Doswell v. Stewart, 11 Ala. 629. The absence of a date on the officer's return, the presumption being that the return was made before the hearing, and on time. Rivard v. Gardner, 39 Ill. 125; Shea v. Plains Tp., 7 Kulp (Pa.) 554. The presence of only one summons, where the record discloses that two were issued and served. O'Driscoll v. Soper, 19 Kan. 574. Service by the coroner after issuance of process to the sheriff, for it may be presumed that such service was made because of a vacancy or disability in the office of sheriff. Adamson v. Parker, 3 Ala. 727; Rodolph v. Mayer, 1 Wash. Terr. 133. Residence of one of defendants in another county, because he may have been found by the officer in the county in which service was made. Saunders v. Gilmer, 8 Tex. 295. The absence of the officer's signature on the copy of his return before the court, the presumption being that the original was duly signed. Rives v. Kumler, 27 Ill. 291.

A negative admission, in a motion to quash service, that the movant "was not served with summons on the amended and supplemental petition" has been held to be ground for the presumption that summons on the original petition was duly served. McKay v. Mayes, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 862, 29 S. W. 327.

In case of service upon agent, the agency of the person served will be presumed if not questioned; and, where the question has been determined in the trial court, in the absence of the evidence, the determination will be presumed correct. Farragut F. Ins. Co. v. Ford, 15 Tex. Civ. App. 70, 38 S. W. 638.

Setting out in the record of an insufficient service rebuts the presumption arising from a recital of service, since it may not be pre-tion,[34] the waiver of process by a general appearance,[35] and any other fact necessary to invest the court with jurisdiction of the person[36] of all necessary sumed that another sufficient service was made. Law v. Grommes, 158 Ill. 492, 41 N. E. 1080; Botsford v. O'Conner, 57 Ill. 72, Lonkey v. Keyes Silver Min. Co., 21 Nev. 312, 31 Pac. 57, 17 L. R. App. 457; Spraker v. Ennis, 78 Ill. App. 446).

34. Record recitals from which due publication may be presumed.— That proper order of publication — appearing in the record — was published in a newspaper. Swift v. Stebbins, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 447. That publication was made conformably to an order therefor, which order is shown in the record. Kyle v. Philips, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 43; Moore v. Holt, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 284. That requisite notice was given. Pierce v. Carleton, 12 Ill. 358, 54 Am. Dec. 405. That the court found proper publication of notice. McLain v. Duncan, 57 Ark. 49, 20 S. The affidavit and order for publication not appearing in the record, their sufficiency cannot be reviewed, but will be presumed. Lyle v. Siler, 103 N. C. 261, 9 S. E. 491.

Facts held not to rebut presumption of publication.— The absence of an affidavit showing necessity for publication. Herd v. Cist, (Ky. 1889) 12 S. W. 466. Failure of affidavit for publication to state that it was made for plaintiff. Charley v. Kelley, 120 Mo. 134, 25 S. W. 571. Omission, in the order for publication, to state that affidavits afforded satisfactory evidence of necessity for publication. Barnard v. Heydrick, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 62, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 47. But see Tunis v. Withrow, 10 Iowa 305, 77 Am. Dec. 117, wherein it was held that the presumption of due publication was rebutted, by a showing, in a record containing all the facts, of insufficient publication. Compare Styles v. Laurel Fork Oil, etc., Co., 45 W. Va. 374, 32 S. E. 227, to the effect that a recital: "Duly executed as to defendants," should not be presumed to apply to a defendant not included in the order of publication.

35. Statements held conclusive of a general appearance, in the absence of any showing to the contrary: Recital of appearance by attorney. Keith v. Cliatt, 59 Ala. 408; Catlin v. Gilders, 3 Ala. 536; Reid v. Morton, 119 Ill. 118, 6 N. E. 414; Yaeger v. Henry, 39 Ill. App. 21; Potter v. Parsons, 14 Iowa 286; Manning v. Nelson, 107 Iowa 34, 77 N. W. 503; Adamson v. Sundby, 51 Minn. 460, 53 N. W. 761; Yturri v. McLeod, 26 Tex. 84. Recital, in an order against a foreign corporation, of due service, and that the order was made after hearing counsel for defendant in opposition thereto. People v. American L. & T. Co., 17 N. Y. Suppl. 76, 43 N. Y. St. 332. Recital in the record that defendants demurred (Beal v. Harrington, 116 Ill. 113, 4 N. E. 664; Edwards v. Beall, 75 Ind. 401), or filed an answer (Sidwell v. Worthington, 8 Dana (Ky.) 74), or pleaded the statute of limitations (Shields v. Farmers' Bank, 5 W. Va. 259); but not merely a recital that defendant had leave to answer (Bailes v. State, 20 Tex. 498). Recital in the judgment that it was rendered in accordance with prayer and stipulation. Grete v. Knott, 2 Ida. 18, 3 Pac. 25.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3698.

Authority of attorney to enter appearance will be presumed until the contrary is shown. Stubbs v. Leavitt, 30 Ala. 352; In re Meade, (Cal. 1897) 49 Pac. 5; Potter v. Parsons, 14 Iowa 286; Byers v. Sugg, (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 57 S. W. 397.

The reasons for withdrawal of appearance by an attorney will, where the record upon the matter is silent, be presumed to have been allowed upon satisfactory evidence presented. Symmes v. Major, 21 Ind. 443.

Facts held not to impeach recitals of general appearance.— One of the defendants served by publication. Chester v. Walters, 30 Tex. 53. Two defendants represented by different attorneys, or one, only, being represented by attorney, the recital of appearance being general. Jennings v. Conn, 11 Iowa 542; Yturri v. McLeod, 26 Tex. 84.

Facts supplied by presumption to support an appearance.— That "Mrs. P. McMahon," who entered appearance, was identical with the McMahon against whom judgment was rendered without personal service. St. Louis v. Lanigan, 97 Mo. 175, 10 S. W. 475.

Judgment by default for failure to appear, upon an insufficient summons, rebuts the presumption arising from a recital of appearance. Norblett v. Farwell, 38 Cal. 155.

Recital of appearance limited to parties served.— Where some of defendants were personally served and others were not, and the recital was merely that "the parties came by their attorneys," the recital was held to refer only to the parties served, and not to warrant a presumption that those who were not served appeared. Ladiga Saw-Mill Co. v. Smith, 78 Ala. 108. Contra, Shields v. Farmers' Bank, 5 W. Va. 259; Ely v. Tallman, 14 Wis. 28.

36. Other facts presumed in the absence of countervailing facts: That a suit was properly revived upon the death of a plaintiff or defendant. Godbold v. Meggison, 16 Ala. 140; Rundles v. Jones, 3 Ind. 35; Parshall v. Moody, 24 Iowa 314; Porter v. Sharpe, 16 Iowa 438; Kelley v. Stevens, 58 Kan. 569, 50 Pac. 595; Glenn v. Kimbrough, 70 Tex. 147, 8 S. W. 81; Reinig v. Hecht, 58 Wis. 212, 16 N. W. 548. That a guardian ad litem for minor defendants was duly appointed. O'Callaghan v. Bode, 84 Cal. 489, 24 Pac. 269; parties; but such a presumption can never be indulged, when it affirmatively appears that the trial court did not have jurisdiction of the person of the parties.[37]

(B) In Default Judgments. On appeal from a judgment by default the distinction has been made that jurisdiction of the person of the defendant must affirmatively appear of record in the lower court in order to sustain the judgment of that court, and that, therefore, the presumption, upon an incomplete lower-court record, is that the lower court did not have such jurisdiction;[38] but this distinction has not been universally acknowledged,[39] and, even if it be acknowledged, it cannot avail an appellant or plaintiff in error unless it also appears that the entire record of the matter in the lower court is before the appellate court,[40]

Batchelder v. Baker, 79 Cal. 266, 21 Pac. 754; Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529, 2 Pac. 418; Williams v. Stratton, 10 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 418; Mason v. McLean, 6 Wash. 31, 32 Pac. 1006; Reinig v. Hecht, 58 Wis. 212, 16 N. W. 548. That a party defendant, who is claimed to be a minor, was of full age. Kavalier v. Machula, 77 Iowa 121, 41 N. W. 590. That defendant resided within the jurisdiction of the court. Kenney v. Greer, 13 Ill. 432, 54 Am. Dec. 439; Horner v. O'Laughlin, 29 Md. 465. That a defendant sued as guardian was such in fact. Clayton v. McKinnon, 54 Tex. 206.

37. A defect of parties must affirmatively appear, else it will be presumed that all necessary parties were before the court.

Alabama.— Pinney v. Werborn, 72 Ala. 58.

Minnesota.— Tune v. Sweeney, 34 Minn. 295, 25 N. W. 628.

Mississippi.— Henderson v. Guyot, 6 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 209.

Nevada.— Alford v. Dewin, 1 Nev. 207.

New Jersey.— Wood v. Fithian, 24 N. J. L. 838.

Virginia.— Thomas v. Dawson, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 531; Ball v. Johnson, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 281.

Consent to new party will be presumed where no objection appears, and the trial has proceeded upon issues raised by such party. Huntingdon, etc., R. Co. v. McGovern, 29 Pa. St. 78.

Facts not rebutting presumption as to necessary parties: The striking out of a party defendant, the grounds therefor not being shown. Odom v. Shackleford, 44 Ala. 331. Conveyance by plaintiff, pending suit, of the property for damages to which the judgment is rendered, the presumption being that subsequent proceedings were for the benefit of the grantee. Heilbron v. Land, etc., Co., 96 Cal. 7, 30 Pac. 802.

Facts rebutting presumption.— Where the record shows minor defendants, not represented by a proper guardian, the presumption of jurisdiction of the persons of all necessary parties is rebutted. Cavender v. Smith, 5 Iowa 157.

In the absence of proceedings material to an order granting or denying the substitution or addition of parties, the presumption follows that the order was right. Cockrill v. Clyma, 98 Cal. 123, 32 Pac. 888; Fairbanks v. Farwell, 141 Ill. 354, 30 N. E. 1056; Porter v. Sharpe, 16 Iowa 438; Rains v. Herring, 68 Tex. 468, 5 S. W. 369.

Upon a bill admitting of different constructions, one of which shows a defect of parties and the other does not, the appellate court will presume that construction the correct one which supports the judgment below. Jennings v. Davis, 5 Dana (Ky.) 127.

38. Arkansas.— Rutherford v. State Bank, 3 Ark. 558.

California.— Schloss v. White, 16 Cal. 65.

Nevada.— Lonkey v. Keyes Silver Min. Co., 21 Nev. 312, 31 Pac. 57, 17 L. R. A. 351 [overruling Blasdel v. Kean, 8 Nev. 305].

Texas.—Nasworthy v. Draper, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 28 S. W. 564; Carlton v. Miller, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 619, 21 S. W. 697.

Wisconsin.— Wilkinson v. Bayley, 71 Wis. 131, 36 N. W. 836.

Continuance not presumed.— Where the scire facias to revive a dormant judgment was not contained in the transcript of a judgment by default, and no continuance was shown and such judgment could not legally be entered on the first day of the term, it was held that the presumption of a continuance from a former term could not be indulged in support of the judgment. Hollis v. Herzberg, (Ala. 1901) 29 So. 582.

Record statements in judgments by default held insufficient.— Recital in the judgment entry that due service was made on defendant. Law v. Grommes, 158 Ill. 492, 41 N. E. 1080; Lonkey v. Keyes Silver Min. Co., 21 Nev. 312, 31 Pac. 57, 17 L. R. A. 351; Nasworthy v. Draper, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 28 S. W. 564; Carlton v. Miller, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 619, 21 S. W. 697. Record of an order for continuance after a default was taken. Norblett v. Farwell, 38 Cal. 155.

39. Facts supplied by presumption in default judgments, in the absence of any showing to the contrary: That a vacancy occurred in the office of sheriff, so as to authorize a service by the coroner of process delivered to the sheriff. Adamson v. Parker, 3 Ala. 727. That sufficient proof of service was given at the time of entry of judgment, where the proof in the record was defective. Skillman v. Greenwood, 15 Minn. 102; Gemmell v. Rice, 13 Minn. 400. That the appearance of defendant was duly entered by the court upon a returned summons before default, as required by law. Horner v. O'Laughlin, 29 Md. 465.

40. In the absence of a bill of exceptions, containing the proof of publication upon which a default judgment was rendered, it has been held that sufficient proof thereof and that thereupon jurisdiction of the lower court of the person of the defendant does not appear.[41]

c. Pleadings — (I) Right of Action — (A) Capacity to Sue. In the absence of an affirmative showing to the contrary, the plaintiffs in an action will be presumed to be invested with the legal capacity which they assume,[42] and in which the judgment is rendered,[43] and, also, where, in addition, special authority is requisite, that they have received such authority;[44] and all rulings based upon capacity or incapacity to sue will be presumed correct in the absence from the record of the grounds for such ruling, or in the absence of error apparent therefrom.[45]

(B) Cause of Action. Although, as a general rule, a cause of action in support of a judgment will not, on appeal, be presumed where it does not fairly would be presumed to have been made. McBride v. Hartwell, 2 Kan. 410. So, also, where the affidavit of a third person as to the genuineness of defendant's signature to an acceptance of service was not before the court, it was presumed that the affidavit was made in open court. Norwood v. Riddle, 1 Ala. 195.

Showing, in an incomplete transcript, of default judgment held conclusive.— A finding that proof of publication was duly made. State v. Elgin, 11 Iowa 216. A recital of facts amounting to an appearance, though the transcript contained no process. Guy v. Winston, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 149.

41. Uncertainties held not fatal to jurisdiction in default judgments.— The name of the sheriff who executed the process appearing to be identical with that of one of defendants. Cumming v. Richards, 32 Ala. 459. Failure in the return to designate the person served as defendant, as in such case the court will not presume that there might have been other persons of the same name upon whom the summons might have been served. Long v. Gaines, 4 Bush (Ky.) 353.

42. Allegations of capacity presumed in the absence of denial.— That petitioners are aliens. Breedlove v. Nicolet, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 413, 8 L. ed. 731. That several plaintiffs have a joint interest in the cause, upon which a joint judgment is rendered. Anderson v. Rogers, 1 Bush (Ky.) 200; Wood v. Fithian, 24 N. J. L. 838. That plaintiff is a corporation. British American Land Co. v. Ames, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 391; Hunter v. William J. Lemp Brewing Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 46 S. W. 371. That plaintiff holds the office by virtue of which he sues. Paige v. Fazackerly, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 392.

As to pleadings as part of record see supra, XIII, A, 3, b [2 Cyc. 1035].

Allegations of capacity, in the absence of the pleading, may be presumed to have been made. Long v. State, 17 Nebr. 60, 22 N. W. 120.

Facts presumed to sustain capacity.— That letters of administration with the will annexed which had been issued to plaintiff were so issued upon a renunciation of the trust by executors appointed in the will. Finch v. Houghton, 19 Wis. 149. That the widow of the father of infant plaintiffs, joined with them, was their mother and competent to maintain suit for them as guardian in socage. Bartholomew v. Lyon, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 86.

Facts showing capacity presumed in the absence of objection in lower court: That a showing of right to sue as a poor person was sufficient. Hood v. Pearson, 67 Ind. 368. That plaintiff was a person of full age. Edwards v. Beall, 75 Ind. 401. That the insertion of the word "as," showing suit "as trustee," was made as a proper amendment before verdict. Stanton v. Estey Mfg. Co., 90 Mich. 12, 51 N. W. 101; Smith v. Pinney, 86 Mich. 484, 49 N. W. 305. That the cause of action accrued to the plaintiff in his representative capacity. Baker v. Ormsby, 5 Ill. 325; Williams v. Williams, 1 Ind. 450.

Facts held not to rebut presumption of capacity: Action by a mother in behalf of her son for a right accruing to her, there being nothing to show that she had not relinquished her right in his favor. Abeles v. Bransfield, 19 Kan. 16. Expiration of the term of a temporary administrator, there being nothing to show that the appointment had not been continued. Williams v. Planters', etc., Nat. Bank, 91 Tex. 651, 45 S. W. 690.

Suit in a double or a doubtful capacity will be presumed to have proceeded upon that which will support the judgment, in the absence of objection in the lower court. Abeles v. Bransfield, 19 Kan. 16; Bisland v. Provosty, 14 La. Ann. 169; Stidle v. Twin City Council No. 121, Jr. O. U. A. M., 8 Pa. Super. Ct. 178, 42 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 554.

That an objection to capacity was made may be presumed from the fact that a general demurrer was filed, presented, and overruled. Smith v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 86 Iowa 202, 53 N. W. 128.

43. A judgment against plaintiffs, because of the exclusion of evidence showing a cause of action if plaintiff sued as husband and wife, will be supported by the presumption that plaintiffs sued in their individual capacity, nothing to the contrary appearing in the declaration, and although the caption of the bill of exceptions designates plaintiffs as husband and wife. Strickland v. Burns, 14 Ala. 511.

44. Baltimore v. Baltimore, etc., Turnpike Road, 80 Md. 535, 31 Atl. 420; McMechen v. Baltimore, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 41; Jerauld County v. Williams, 7 S. D. 196, 63 N. W. 905; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 518, 14 L. ed. 249.

45. Hood v. Pearson, 67 Ind. 368.

appear upon an inspection of the record,[46] yet, where the objection is made for the first time in the appellate court,[47] every reasonable presumption as to uncertainties will be indulged in favor of a cause of action,[48] and, upon an incomplete record, the absent portion will, in support of the judgment, be presumed to show, if possible, a sufficient cause of action;[49] and the correctness of all rulings

46. Failure to allege cause of action will not be supplied by presumption.

Indiana.— Beaird v. U. S., 5 Ind. 220.

Maryland.— Lester v. Hardesty, 29 Md. 50.

Washington.— Johnson v. Cook, (Wash. 1901) 64 Pac. 729.

Wisconsin.— Farrell v. Drees, 41 Wis. 186; Johnson v. Johnson, 4 Wis. 135.

Fact presumed to defeat cause of action, in the absence of contrary allegation: That plaintiff had knowledge of an alleged fraudulent transaction on the day following its occurrence. Wills v. Porter, (Cal. 1900) 61 Pac. 1109.

Recovery on a void contract cannot be presumed to have been supported by a right of quantum meruit, for labor under such contract, which was not pleaded. Clark v. Davidson, 53 Wis. 317, 10 N. W. 384.

47. The recital of a ruling upon demurrer raises the presumption that a demurrer was interposed, though none appears in the record. Commercial Electric Light, etc., Co. v. Tacoma, 17 Wash. 661, 50 Pac. 592.

48. Doubtful or ambiguous pleadings, which do not, upon a favorable construction, omit any fact essential to a cause of action, will, if possible, be resolved in favor of a cause of action which will support the judgment. Belmont Bank v. Durbin, 2 West. L. Month. 543.

Essential facts presumed, in the absence of objection in lower court: That an alleged date of a note, subsequent to date of notice to pay, is a clerical error. Raspadori v. Cresta, (Cal. 1900) 62 Pac. 218. That land, the subject of the action, was acquired by a bank in satisfaction of a prior debt, where the purchase would otherwise have been illegal. Litchfield v. Preston, 98 Va. 530, 37 S. E. 6.

Inferences from facts supplying alleged defects: That defendant in a divorce proceeding was a free person of color, where there was an allegation that complainant was such a person. Hansford v. Hansford, 10 Ala. 561. That a caption entitled as of a term subsequent to the judgment was a clerical misprision. Tunstall v. Donald, 15 Ala. 841. That a governor's certificate of a right to an office, shown "as filed," to obtain a mandamus, was filed by the applicant. Harwood v. Marshall, 10 Md. 451.

One good paragraph in a complaint will be presumed to be the one upon which the judgment is based, nothing to the contrary appearing. Deweese v. Hutton, 144 Ind. 114, 43 N. E. 13; Rochester v. Bowers, (Ind. App. 1899) 52 N. E. 814. Aliter, where it appears that a demurrer to an insufficient paragraph was overruled, and it was otherwise uncertain on which paragraph the verdict and judgment rested. Lake St. El. R. Co. v. Brooks, 90 Ill. App. 173; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Voght, (Ind. App. 1901) 60 N. E. 797.

Similarly, a bad special count will not defeat a judgment where it may be presumed to have been justified under the common counts. Rowell v. Chandler, 83 Ill. 288.

Upon inconsistent causes of action, one of which supports the judgment, it will be presumed, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, that the others were abandoned. Davis v. Severance, 49 Minn. 528, 52 N. W. 140; Trimble v. Doty, 16 Ohio St. 118.

49. Facts presumed upon incomplete record.— That the action was in tort, conformably to the judgment (Allen v. Harper, 26 Ala. 686); otherwise where there was a plain misjoinder of counts (Creel v. Brown, 1 Rob. (Va.) 281). That an order was made permitting plaintiff to sue in replevin for a portion of his property which was sold, and thereafter to seek damages for the sold portion. Taub v. McClelland-Colt Commission Co., 10 Colo. App. 190, 51 Pac. 168. That a writ, omitted from the record, was not issued until the cause accrued, though the complaint was filed before. Charlestown School Tp. v. Hay, 74 Ind. 127.

In the absence of the pleading, a cause of action will be presumed, if the judgment is possible and admits of any cause of action.

Alabama.— Allen v. Harper, 26 Ala. 686.

Illinois.— Corrigan v. Reilly, 64 Ill. App. 531.

Kentucky.— Harvey v. Payne, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 451; Tucker v. Medsker, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 429.

Minnesota.— Davidson v. Farrell, 8 Minn. 258.

Nebraska.— Reynolds v. Reynolds, 10 Nebr. 574, 7 N. W. 322.

Pennsylvania.— Rundell v. Kalbfus, 125 Pa. St. 123, 17 Atl. 238.

Contra.— Murray v. Tardy, 19 Ala. 710; Waggoner v. Green, 40 Ill. App. 648.

A cause appearing to be barred, except for the existence of special facts, may be sustained by the presumption that such special facts were shown in evidence, where the evidence is not in the record.

Arkansas.— Hensley v. Moore, 9 Ark. 69.

Iowa.— Ward v. Cochran, 36 Iowa 432.

Kansas.—Otis v. Jenkins, McCahon (Kan.) 87.

Michigan.— Lester v. Thompson, 91 Mich. 245, 51 N. W. 893.

Mississippi.— French v. Davis, 38 Miss. 218.

Missouri.— Bridges v. Stephens, 132 Mo. 524, 34 S. W. 555.

North Carolina.— Greer v. Herren, 99 N. C. 492, 6 S. E. 257.

Also, where the time of the institution of touching the existence or sufficiency of the cause of action will be presumed until the contrary plainly appears, whether favorable to the cause of action[50] or adverse to it.[51]

(11) Pleas and Defenses. In the absence from the record of a special plea the presumption is that the trial proceeded upon the general issue,[52] or that plaintiff's suit is doubtful, the cause will be presumed to be not barred. Hughes v. Libby, 41 Wis. 469.

An original petition, brought into an amendment by reference, will, when absent from the record, be presumed to contain every necessary allegation, though the amendment, which is set out, does not. Continental Ins. Co. v. Com., 6 Ky. L. Rep. 450.

Oral pleadings which have not been brought into the record must, if possible, be presumed to state a cause of action supporting the judgment. Hennessey v. Barnett, 12 Colo. App. 254, 55 Pac. 197; Merkin v. Gersh, 30 Misc. (N. Y.) 758, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 75; Grahosski v. Gewerz, 17 N. Y. Suppl. 528, 44 N. Y. St. 127; Crawford v. Sanders, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 38 S. W. 820. Aliter, where the record shows that a particular issue was not pleaded. Morris v. Long, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 26 S. W. 467.

Where different constructions are admissible upon an uncertain record, that will be presumed correct which finds a cause of action and supports the judgment. Evans v. Schafer, 88 Ind. 92.

Where one of two counts is missing, and the count set out is sufficient to support the judgment, and under which it appears that the evidence was admitted, it will be presumed, as against an objection that the evidence should have been admitted under both counts, that the missing count was withdrawn. Butte Hardware Co. v. Wallace, 59 Conn. 336, 22 Atl. 330.

Where the evidence, but not the declaration, is in the record, a sufficient cause of action will be presumed to have been stated in the pleading, if the evidence sustains any cause of action. Deane v. Michigan Stone Co., 69 Ill. App. 106; Corrigan v. Reilly, 64 Ill. App. 531; Crawford v. Sanders, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 36 S. W. 820.

50. An order overruling a general demurrer to the complaint will be sustained by every possible presumption. Lawrence Nat. Bank v. Kowalsky, 105 Cal. 41, 38 Pac. 517; Balue v. Taylor, 136 Ind. 368, 36 N. E. 269.

In the absence of an original petition, the amendment thereto being in the record, an order overruling a demurrer to the latter was sustained, upon the presumption that the original and amendment, together, stated a cause of action. Huffaker v. National Bank, 13 Bush (Ky.) 644.

In the absence of one paragraph of a complaint, the overruling of a general demurrer will be presumed to have been correct. Dekalb Nat. Bank v. Nicely, (Ind. App. 1899) 55 N. E. 240.

No presumption that omitted original petition stated a different cause.— It has been held, on appeal from a judgment holding a cause of action barred by limitation, that it could not be presumed, in order to sustain the ruling, that the original pleading, which appears to have been filed before the running of the statute, stated a cause of action different from that stated in the amendment which was filed thereafter. Dwight v. Matthews, (Tex. 1901) 62 S. W. 1052 [reversing (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 60 S. W. 805].

Where one of two inconsistent causes of action is sustained, and the other ignored by the trial court, it will, in the absence of the proceedings upon the trial, be presumed that plaintiff elected to proceed upon the cause of action which was sustained. Davis v. Severance, 49 Minn. 528, 52 N. W. 140.

51. A special count must appear in order to secure a review of a judgment against plaintiff, though the court is presumed to have knowledge of what the common counts in assumpsit contain. Evans v. Gould, 82 Ill. App. 151.

In the absence of the pleading, a ruling against cause of action is presumed correct. Winchel v. Sullivan, 48 Ind. 253.

Recital of ruling contrary to judgment.— In a suit on a note and for foreclosure of a mortgage, where the judgment recited that a demurrer to the petition was overruled and gave judgment for plaintiff only on the notes, it was presumed that the demurrer was sustained as to the foreclosure. Morrison v. Bean, 15 Tex. 267.

To defeat a ruling against a cause of action, the lack of essential averments cannot be supplied by presumption. Wilson v. Gaines, 103 U. S. 417, 26 L. ed. 401.

52. Polla v. Searcy, 84 Ala. 259, 4 So. 137; Hatchett v. Molton, 76 Ala. 410; Felger v. Etzell, 75 Ind. 417; Columbia v. Davis, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 358. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3701.

Plea special to original, and general to amended, complaint.— Where special pleas were filed to the original complaint, and issue was joined on an amendment thereto without showing any special plea to the latter, it was presumed that the trial proceeded upon the special pleas to the original complaint and the general issue to the amendment. Steed v. Knowles, 97 Ala. 573, 12 So. 75 [following Odum v. Rutledge, etc., R. Co., 94 Ala. 488, 10 So. 222].

Presence of certain pleas in the record raises the presumption that there were no others. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Crocker, 95 Ala. 412, 11 So. 262.

Presumption of general issue may be rebutted by proceedings inconsistent therewith. Brinson v. Edwards, 94 Ala. 447, 10 So. 219.

Trial upon a special plea not in the record the defense which might thereby have been interposed was waived[53] or did not exist,[54] unless the judgment appears to be based upon the missing special plea or upon a special defense in a missing answer.[55] But, where the record is complete, the presumption does not relate to defenses which appear not to have been made;[56] and, where the court below has ruled upon the sufficiency or existence of a plea or defense, the correctness of the ruling will be presumed until the contrary is shown.[57] In the absence of an objection or ruling thereon in the

has been held to raise the presumption that the plea was formally made. Russell v. Wright, 98 Ala. 652, 13 So. 594.

53. Bliss v. Sneath, 119 Cal. 526, 51 Pac. 848.

Withdrawal of pleas upon which issue has been joined raises the presumption that, as to other pleas to which demurrers had been sustained, the intention was to stand on the sufficiency of the pleas not withdrawn. Hall v. Perkins, 5 Ill. 548.

54. Hochstein v. Berghauser, 123 Cal. 681, 56 Pac. 547.

55. Sufficient plea or answer presumed, where none appears, in order to sustain judgment, the record not showing that such plea or answer was not filed and considered.

Alabama.— Knight v. Bradley, 101 Ala. 517, 14 So. 406.

Indiana.— Holding v. Smith, 42 Ind. 536. Contra, Dart v. Lowe, 5 Ind. 131.

Texas.— Van Winkle Gin, etc., Co. v. Citizens' Bank, 89 Tex. 147, 33 S. W. 862.

Oral defenses, not in the record, will be presumed to contain everything necessary to the judgment. Leake v. Sutherland, 25 Ark. 219.

The plea least prejudicial to plaintiff will be presumed where the evidence might have been adduced under one of two or more pleas — for example, a plea of payment as against a set-off. Knight v. Bradley, 101 Ala. 517, 14 So. 406.

56. A complete record, showing certain defenses, raises the presumption that there were no others; wherefore it has been held that a finding on an issue not included therein must be ignored on appeal. Kemp Grocery Co. v. Sawyer, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 518, 33 S. W. 1031.

57. Facts presumed to support rulings in favor of defenses.— That a plea puis darrein continuance was filed upon a satisfactory showing or by consent, no affidavit appearing to show occurrence of facts, since the last continuance. Morrow v. Morrow, 3 Brev. (S. C.) 394. That no sufficient ground of demurrer was presented, in the absence of the overruled demurrer. Crowder v. Red Mountain Min. Co., (Ala. 1900) 29 So. 847. That an overruled demurrer, absent from the record, presented only the general ground as to insufficiency in substance. Langston v. Marks, 68 Ga. 435; Jones v. Lavender, 55 Ga. 228. That a plea or defense which was received was within time. Conrad v. Baldwin, 3 Iowa 207; Price v. Sinclair, 5 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 254; Maggort v. Hansbarger, 8 Leigh (Va.) 532. That an amended answer which was received over plaintiff's objection, but is not in the record, complied with the law. McNew v. Williams, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 364, 36 S. W. 687.

Facts presumed to sustain rulings against defenses or pleas.— That an omitted demurrer to a plea specified sufficient grounds for sustaining it. Hodge v. Tufts, 115 Ala. 366, 22 So. 422. That an omitted court rule, as to the time of filing a plea, sustains a refusal to permit the plea. Kunkel v. Spooner, 9 Md. 462, 66 Am. Dec. 332; Wilder v. Stafford, 30 Vt. 399; Washington, etc., Steam Packet Co. v. Sickles, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 611, 22 L. ed. 203. That pleas which had been made were withdrawn, where the judgment recites that defendant "says nothing in bar or preclusion of plaintiff's claim." Dearing v. Smith, 4 Ala. 432. That a recital of a sustained demurrer, as having been interposed by defendant to his own plea, was a clerical mistake. Evans v. McMahan, 1 Ala. 45. That the dismissal of another action pending occurred after the sustaining of a plea on that ground, the time of the dismissal being uncertain. Rawson v. Guiberson, 6 Iowa 507. That an action was brought in time, where the record does not show when it was instituted, and a plea of limitation has been overruled. Marbourg v. McCormick, 23 Kan. 38; Lester v. Thompson, 91 Mich. 245, 51 N. W. 893. That a plea was received too late, as to which a motion of ne recipiatur has been granted. Spencer v. Patten, 84 Md. 414, 35 Atl. 1097. That defendant was accorded sufficient opportunity to plead further. Brassfield v. Burgess, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 660, 10 S. W. 122. That a trial of the plea of nul tiel record preceded the overruling thereof. Pomeroy v. State, 40 Ala. 63. But see Anderson v. Fisk, 36 Cal. 625, for facts not presumed to sustain rulings against defenses.

Facts not rebutting presumption of correct ruling against defense.— A memorandum of pleas found on file, where the ruling was that "the defendant failed to file his plea within the time prescribed by law." Crosby v. Lassiter, 4 Ala. 201. A record statement that an answer was filed, which, however, could not be found by the clerk after diligent search, a default having been entered for failure to answer. Wall v. Galvin, 80 Ind. 447. An answer filed on the same day that a default was made final. Blessey v. New Orleans Oil Factory, 13 La. Ann. 310. The absence from the record of a demurrer which is recited to have trial court, every reasonable presumption as to the existence or sufficiency of a defense will be indulged in order to support the judgment.[58]

(III) Replication. A replication to, or denial of, a defense, when necessary, to sustain the judgment, will be presumed to have been made or waived unless the contrary affirmatively or clearly appears from a complete record,[59] and its presence in the record raises the presumption that it was properly filed and considered.[60]

(IV) Rejoinder. The existence of a rejoinder, and the sufficiency thereof to raise the issue upon which judgment is based, will be presumed unless the contrary clearly appears.[61] been sustained. Barney v. Bush, 9 Ala. 345.

Erroneous ruling against defense will not be presumed to have been cured on the trial. On the contrary, the presumption will be that the theory upon which the ruling was made was consistently adhered to in the admission and exclusion of evidence, unless the reverse appears. Michalitschke v. Wells, 118 Cal. 683, 50 Pac. 847; Albany City F. Ins. Co. v. Keating, 46 Ill. 394; Wheeler v. Me-shing-go-me-sia, 30 Ind. 402.

Presumption that a plea was not filed.— Where the record showed that defendant filed "the following plea," setting it out, but it was not marked "Filed," nor was there any entry of the time it came in, nor any notice taken of it by the court or either party, it was presumed that the plea was placed among the papers by mistake or interpolation. Moore v. Stone, 5 Ark. 256.

Upon an incomplete record of the pleading, from which it cannot certainly be ascertained that a ruling upon a demurrer to a plea was incorrect, it will be presumed to be correct. Southern R. Co. v. Guyton, 122 Ala. 231, 25 So. 34; Leath v. Wright, 2 How. (Miss.) 774.

Where it is uncertain which plea was demurred to, and there is a special plea, it will be presumed that a ruling sustaining the demurrer was directed to that plea, so that defendant might have the benefit of the general issue. Lamb v. Holmes, 60 Ill. 497.

58. Presumptions to sustain the judgment, in the absence of objection.— That an account, under a plea of the statute of limitation, was an open one, so as to bring it within the statute. Wright v. Preston, 55 Ala. 570. That a special plea was waived or abandoned, in case of a trial upon the general issue, or upon other pleas, without objection. Feagin v. Pearson, 42 Ala. 332; Evans v. Gordon, 8 Port. (Ala.) 142; Stewart v. Henry, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 445; Saum v. Jones County, 1 Greene (Iowa) 165; Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Jones, 49 Miss. 80; Roberts v. Haley, 2 How. (Miss.) 886; Jenn v. Spencer, 32 Tex. 657; Hall v. Stevens, 89 Wis. 447, 62 N. W. 81. That a plea of nul tiel record to a judgment had been waived where the judgment appears to have been read to the jury, without objection. Thompson v. Williams, 7 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 270. That an alleged agreement was in writing, or other circumstances existed taking it out of the statute of frauds. Smith v. Stevenson, 190 Pa. St. 48, 42 Atl. 380.

Nebraska.— Lewis Invest. Co. v. Boyd, 48 Nebr. 604, 67 N. W. 456.

New Jersey.— Whyte v. Arthur, 17 N. J. Eq. 521. Aliter, where it appeared from the testimony that the issue which would have been raised by a reply was not tried. Johnson v. Van Doren, 2 N. J. L. 351.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3699 et seq.

Amended answer presumed same as original.— Where, after reply, an amended answer was filed, and the record showed no reply to the amendment, and judgment for failure to reply had been denied because the reply served was a sufficient reply thereto, on appeal it was presumed, in the absence of the original answer and in order to sustain the ruling of the court below, that the amended answer was the same as the original. Lamberty v. Roberts, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 190, 31 N. Y. St. 936, 19 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 63.

An amendment of a replication may be presumed upon the same general rule of presumption which supplies a missing replication. Hammer v. Downing, (Oreg. 1901) 64 Pac. 651.

A portion only of the replication in the record, which portion does not contain a complete denial of an answer, does not rebut the presumption that there was a complete denial. Bower v. Webber, 69 Iowa 286, 28 N. W. 600.

Inference of waiver required unless issues are shown.— In Ames v. Parrott, (Nebr. 1901) 86 N. W. 503 [following Stewart v. American Exch. Bank, 54 Nebr. 461, 74 N. W. 865] it was held that, "to bring a case within the rule that no advantage may be taken in this court of failure to reply below, where trial was had on the theory that a reply had been filed, there must be something in the record from which an inference may be drawn that reply was waived, or from which this court may ascertain what issues were actually tried."

60. Rooker v. Wise, 14 Ind. 276; Tabler v. Anglo-American Assoc., 17 Ky. L. Rep. 815, 32 S. W. 602; Callison v. Autry, 4 Tex. 371.

61. Recital of general issue to replication. — Where the judgment entry recited that defendant pleaded the general issue to the replication, this was presumed to mean that

(v) Intervention. Though sufficient ground for intervention must affirmatively be shown in the petition to intervene to entitle an intervener to relief, the existence of such right will be presumed upon failure to appeal from an order allowing it,[62] and the existence of such order will be inferred from the absence of objection to the intervention proceedings.[63]

(vi) Form and Filing of Pleadings. All rulings appertaining to the form or filing of the pleadings will be presumed correct unless excepted to,[64] and the pleading in question and the ruling thereon, as well as the grounds of the ruling, embodied in the record;[65] and, when exception has been duly taken, and the pleading and ruling, and grounds of the ruling, are before the appellate court, every reasonable inference will be drawn and every reasonable presumption indulged in support of the ruling.[66] Also, in the absence of objection, proper he rejoined to the replication generally, where justice seemed to require it, and the evidence justified the presumption. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Bitner, 15 W. Va. 455, 36 Am. Rep. 820. And where a defendant omitted to join issue upon a replication to his special plea after his demurrer to the replication had been overruled, and the record only recited that "thereupon said cause came on to be heard upon the general issue of not guilty," it was presumed that he rested upon his demurrer. Hays v. Roberts, 23 Ark. 193.

62. Kinney v. Reid Ice Cream Co., 57 N. Y. App. Div. 206, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 325.

63. Virgin v. Brubaker, 4 Nev. 31.

64. Hawley v. Kocher, 123 Cal. 77, 55 Pac. 696.

Consent to a ruling will be presumed, if no objection is made, where the state of the pleadings permits the ruling only upon consent of the parties. McFadden v. Swinerton, 36 Oreg. 336, 59 Pac. 813, 62 Pac. 12.

Opportunity to except.— In the absence of anything to the contrary in the record, it will be presumed that complainant's counsel was present in court upon the granting of a motion to withdraw answer and file demurrer. Saunders v. Savage, (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 63 S. W. 218.

65. In the absence from the record of a demurrer, and the pleading to which it is interposed is demurrable, it will be presumed that sufficient grounds were stated in the demurrer if it has been sustained — otherwise if it has been overruled. Merritt v. Flemming, 42 Ala. 234; Harrison v. Nolin, 41 Ala. 256; Whitten v. Graves, 40 Ala. 578; Newsom v. Huey, 36 Ala. 37; Zimmerman v. Gaumer, 152 Ind. 552, 53 N. E. 829; Burdge v. Lewis, 43 Ind. 349.

In the absence of a joinder upon demurrer, it will be presumed that such joinder was made or waived, in view of a judgment on the demurrer. Davies v. Gibson, 2 Ark. 115; Wilcox v. Woods, 4 Ill. 51.

In the absence of specifications of defects relied on to support a demurrer, it will be presumed that the demurrer was rightly overruled. Bechdolt v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 113 Ind. 343, 15 N. E. 686.

In the absence of a stricken pleading, it must be presumed that it was properly struck out. Knowlton v. Dolan, 151 Ind. 79, 51 N. E. 97. So, where a portion of pleading was struck out, and the remainder was not in the record, it was presumed that the stricken portion was redundant, from which the remainder required no aid. Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. v. Schaack, 9 S. D. 184, 68 N. W. 287.

In the absence of the court rules, referred to as grounds of an order sustaining a motion to strike out, it will be presumed that they support the ruling. Holloway v. Freeman, 22 Ill. 197; Kimkel v. Spooner, 9 Md. 462, 66 Am. Dec. 332.

Omission of a former pleading from the record renders conclusive the presumption that the overruling of a motion to cause a pleading to comply with such former pleading was correct. Krebbs v. Holway, 58 Nebr. 65, 78 N. W. 397.

The existence of an erroneous ruling cannot be presumed from a recital thereof in a motion ostensibly made in view of such ruling — for example, a motion to amend by specially pleading the statute of frauds upon the recited ground that the court had held such special plea necessary. American Lead Pencil Co. v. Wolfe, 30 Fla. 360, 11 So. 488.

66. A ruling in general terms, upon several grounds, will be presumed to have been based upon any of the grounds which sufficiently support it, and upon such grounds only. McDonald v. Pearson, 114 Ala. 630, 21 So. 534; Baker v. Graves, 101 Ala. 247, 13 So. 275; Stone v. Watson, 37 Ala. 279; Lake St. El. R. Co. v. Brooks, 90 Ill. App. 173; Griffin v. Seymour, 15 Iowa 30, 83 Am. Dec. 396; Howe v. Elwell, 57 N. Y. App. Div. 357, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 1108.

A ruling upon insufficient grounds will, nevertheless, be presumed correct where other and sufficient grounds are specified by the objecting party. People v. Central Pac. R. Co., 76 Cal. 29, 18 Pac. 90.

Facts presumed in support of ruling.—That a party other than defendant, who signed a stricken-out plea without indicating that he signed as attorney for defendant, was not such attorney. Bellows v. Cheek, 20 Ark. 424. That a count on a contract and a count for work and labor were not for the same cause of action, in justification of a refusal to strike out the latter. Bates v. Dehaven, 10 Ind. 319.

Facts not presumed in support of ruling.— That a sustained demurrer was addressed to amendments which appear will be presumed to have been duly allowed[67] and filed,[68] even where the amendment appears only by implication,[69] and it will also some other than a plainly specified paragraph which is clearly not demurrable. Eagle Mach. Works v. Arens, 123 Ind. 233, 24 N. E. 234. That there existed grounds for striking out a plea or answer other than appear from a complete record. Farish v. Jones, 23 Ark. 323; Garnhart v. U. S., 16 Wall. (U. S.) 162, 21 L. ed. 275. That the opposing party was present in court when a motion to substitute pleadings was made, so as to dispense with notice of the motion. Murray v. Tardy, 19 Ala. 710 [overruling Wilkerson v. Branham, 5 Ala. 608].

Where it is uncertain whether a demurrer is general or special, and an order overruling it would have been wrong if special, it will be presumed to have been general. Merrill v. Pepperdine, 9 Ind. App. 416, 36 N. E. 921.

Where it is uncertain which of several demurrers was overruled, it appearing that one only was overruled, it will be presumed to have been one which is untenable. Blinks v. State, 48 Ind. 172. Conversely, where it is uncertain which of several demurrers was sustained, it will be presumed to have been the one as to which the pleading is insufficient. Troxel v. Thomas, 155 Ind. 519, 58 N. E. 725.

Where the time of a ruling on demurrer is doubtful and the ruling would have been wrong if made after an amendment, it will be presumed to have been made before the amendment. Johnson v. Tostevin, 60 Iowa 46, 14 N. W. 95.

Aliter, where the contrary presumption is necessary in order to support a ruling on demurrer. Bentley v. Dickson, 1 Ark. 165.

Presumption of allowance of amendment is rebutted by an affidavit of the clerk that he has searched the records and docket-entries pertaining to the action and has found no such order, nor any record thereof (Orton v. Noonan, 31 Wis. 90); by the fact that the judgment corresponded to the prayer of the original, and not with the prayer of the amendment (Pridgin v. Strickland, 8 Tex. 427, 58 Am. Dec. 124).

68. Smith v. Robinson, 11 Ala. 270.

Amendments as to matter of form merely, properly allowable of course in the trial court, will be presumed to have been made so as to entitle the parties to the benefit thereof, no injustice being thereby done to the adverse parties.

An amendment after evidence will be presumed to have been allowed in furtherance of justice, in the absence of an affirmative showing by the objecting party that he was thereby misled or prejudiced. Burns v. Fox, 113 Ind. 205, 14 N. E. 541. In such case it will also be presumed that the facts were fully litigated, and that there was no necessity of opening the case for further evidence. Dougan v. Turner, 51 Minn. 330, 53 N. W. 650.

A notice of an amendment which should have been given to the opposing party was presumed to have been given, in the absence of a clear showing to the contrary in the record of the lower court, though the writ of error contained a statement that no notice was given. Prior v. Wilbur, 63 Vt. 407, 22 Atl. 74.

71. Proper disallowance of amendments presumed, in the absence of any showing to the contrary. Thompson v. Young, 90 Md. 72, 44 Atl. 1037; Timmons v. Chouteau, 13 Mo. 223; Washington Bank v. Horn, (Wash. 1901) 64 Pac. 534.

Presumption that time allowed to amend was sufficient.— In view of statutes allowing no delay for amendments as to matter of form, and requiring an allowance of ten days for amendments as to matter of substance, and in the absence of the original pleading, an order allowing three days to amend was presumed to have properly contemplated an amendment as to form only. Barber v. Briscoe, 8 Mont. 214, 19 Pac. 589.

An application to amend will not be presumed, where the record is silent on the subject, for the purpose of finding error in the disallowance of an amendment. State v. Winter, 148 Ind. 177, 47 N. E. 462; Birlant v. Cleckley, 48 S. C. 298, 26 S. E. 600.

72. Facts presumed from subsequent proceedings to support a pleading.— That a petition for a temporary injunction was sworn to, there being nothing to show whether the injunction was issued upon the original petition, which was sworn to, or upon the amended petition, which was not sworn to. Johnson v. Daniel, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 63 S. W. 1032. That the objection that several causes of action were improperly united was not sustained, it being uncertain upon what ground a demurrer was sustained, trial having subsequently proceeded upon the causes in question. State v. Insurance Co. of North America, 115 Ind. 257, 17 N. E. 574. That a withdrawn demurrer was withdrawn before submission of the case to the jury. Robinson v. Francis, 7 How. (Miss.) 458. That the signature to a pleading is genuine. Lester v. Watkins, 41 Miss. 647; Brotton v. Allston, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 393. That a demurrer, appearing as not acted on, was withdrawn or abandoned, or avoided by amendment, or overruled without objection, or properly overruled.

Presumption of defects cured by verdict is rebutted by a motion for nonsuit on account of the defects. Wentworth v. Wentworth, 2 Minn. 277, 72 Am. Dec. 97. By a failure of a complete record of the evidence to show that the defect could have been supplied. Anderson v. Hulme, 5 Mont. 295, 5 Pac. 865. By a failure to state a cause of action, in which case it cannot be presumed that other facts, constituting a cause of action, were proved. Farrell v. Drees, 41 Wis. 186.

Pleadings found in the record, not signed by counsel or indorsed as filed, will, in the absence of others, be presumed to have been the pleadings which formed the basis of the proceedings. Letondal v. Huguenin, 26 Ala. 552; Reid v. Nash, 23 Ala. 733.

Upon an apparently complete record, it has been held that the existence of a pleading, necessary to the judgment and which does not appear, should not be presumed. Waggoner v. Green, 40 Ill. App. 648.

73. Facts presumed, from subsequent proceedings, to defeat a pleading.— That a demurrer to a plea was sustained without objection, judgment having been given for plaintiff. Harrison v. Martinsville, etc., R. Co., 16 Ind. 505, 79 Am. Dec. 447; Botts v. Fitzpatrick, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 397. That some of the counts of an answer were struck out, demurrer having been sustained to others and judgment having been given for plaintiff. Union Dist. Tp. v. Smith, 39 Iowa 9, 18 Am. Rep. 39. That an original petition was properly disposed of as insufficient, either upon demurrer or motion to strike out, two amendments thereto having been adjudged insufficient. State v. Pohlman, 60 Mo. App. 444.

74. Preliminary proceedings presumed, upon incomplete record, to have occurred.— That the proper pleadings were on file when the issue was joined. Wynne v. Whisenant, 37 Ala. 46; Wade v. Killough, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 431; Citizens Bank v. Bolen, 121 Ind. 301, 23 N. E. 146; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Bitner, 15 W. Va. 455, 36 Am. James v. Tait, 8 Port. (Ala.) 476. That a previous reference of the cause had been vacated. Cooke v. Williamson, 11 Ind. 242; Danville, etc., Turnpike Road Co. v. Stewart, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 119. That a court rule, requiring service of a copy of the petition with the process, had been observed. Smith v. Harrington, 89 Iowa 603, 57 N. W. 413; Knapp v. Haight, 23 Iowa 75. That a rule to plead was given. Melchior v. Ralston, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 154. That a cause, properly triable at the term at which it was heard, was duly entered on the trial docket. Syndicate Imp. Co. v. Bradley, 6 Wyo. 171, 43 Pac. 79, 44 Pac. 60. That an affidavit of inability to pay jury-fees was filed. Neeper v. Irons, 3 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 180. That an issue, appearing to have been made up, was an issue on the merits of the case. Phillips v. Kelly, 29 Ala. 628; Pryor v. Beck, 21 Ala. 393; Smith v. Branch Bank, 5 Ala. 26; Levi v. McCraney, Morr. (Iowa) 91.

that the determination of such proceedings was right, until substantial error is affirmatively shown.[75]

(II) Interlocutory and Ancillary Orders. In the absence of a clear showing to the contrary all interlocutory or ancillary orders will be presumed by the appellate court to be correct — such as orders relating to attachments,[76] garnishments,[77] injunctions,[78] arrests,[79] receiverships,[80] depositions,[81] continuances,[82]

That an issue, the character of which is not shown, was the general issue. Columbia v. Davis, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 358; Southern R. Co. v. Rhodes, 86 Fed. 422, 58 U. S. App. 349, 30 C. C. A. 157. That defendants who did not join issue were defaulted. U. S. v. Barnard, 1 Ariz. 319, 25 Pac. 523. That issue was properly joined as to all of the parties to the judgment. Berney Nat. Bank v. Guyon, 111 Ala. 491, 20 So. 520; Bettis v. Saint, 28 Ala. 214; Eastland v. Sparks, 22 Ala. 607; Lucas v. Hitchcock, 2 Ala. 287; Castleberry v. Pearce, 2 Stew. & P. (Pa.) 152; Swearingen v. Wilson, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 157, 21 S. W. 74.

Facts presumed from proceedings inconsistent with the contrary.— That a ruling sustaining a demurrer was waived or the demurrer withdrawn, by going to trial without amendment and without objection. Betts v. Betts, 18 Ala. 787. That a dismissal for failure to amend was vacated by the court or by agreement, where the trial was had without objection. Hill v. Road Dist. No. 6, 10 Ohio St. 621. That a demurrer was disposed of before trial, or waived, where trial is had without objection. U. S. v. Barnard, 1 Ariz. 319, 25 Pac. 523; Southern R. Co. v. Rhodes, 86 Fed. 422, 58 U. S. App. 349, 30 C. C. A. 157.

Waiver of ruling on demurrer not presumed. — See Kirksey v. Dubose, 19 Ala. 43.

75. A stay of proceedings will be presumed to have been invalid or non-existent where a motion to strike from the docket on that ground was overruled, and no order of stay appears in the record. Kayser v. Hartnett, 67 Wis. 250, 30 N. W. 363.

Examination of defendant before trial.— Where a defendant refused to appear and submit to examination before trial, under Ind. Rev. Stat. (1894), § 517 et seq., and, in response to a motion to strike out his pleadings therefor, filed an affidavit which was not in the record on appeal, it was presumed that the motion to strike was properly overruled. Working v. Garn, 148 Ind. 546, 47 N. E. 951.

76. Attachments.— Granting an attachment (Goddard v. Cunningham, 6 Iowa 400; Hill v. Knickerbocker Electric Light, etc., Co., 14 N. Y. Suppl. 517, 38 N. Y. St. 417, 21 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 141); revoking an order of attachment (State v. Dixon, 47 La. Ann. 1, 16 So. 589); discharging or quashing an attachment (Solomon v. Saly, 6 Colo. App. 170, 40 Pac. 150; Ballance v. Samuel, 4 Ill. 380; Harper v. Bell, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 221; Shewell v. Stone, 12 Mart. (La.) 386; Cobb v. O'Neal, 1 How. (Miss.) 581; Hilton v. Ross, 9 Nebr. 406, 2 N. W. 862). See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3718.

77. Garnishments.—Discharging a garnishment. Marriott v. Lewis, 25 Ala. 332; Price v. Thomason, 11 Ala. 875; Goodwin v. Brooks, 6 Ala. 836. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3719.

78. Injunctions.— Granting an injunction (Kaspar v. Dawson, 71 Conn. 405, 42 Atl. 78; Davis v. Covington, etc., R. Co., 77 Ga. 322, 2 S. E. 555; Patterson v. Stair, 26 Ind. 137; State v. Eggleston, 34 Kan. 714, 10 Pac. 3; Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co., 97 Mich. 583, 56 N. W. 940); granting a temporary injunction without notice (Seneff v. Olivet Baptist Church, 89 Ill. App. 352); refusing to grant an injunction (Black v. Delaware, etc., Canal Co., 24 N. J. Eq. 455); refusing to dissolve an injunction (Farni v. Tesson, 51 Ill. 393; Way v. Lamb, 15 Iowa 79). See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3717.

79. Arrests.— Granting an order of court (Ex p. Sargeant, 17 Vt. 425); refusing to vacate an order of arrest (Moers v. Morro, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 361, 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 280; Moers v. Martens, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 257; Bauer v. Schevitch, 11 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 433; Reynolds v. Conway, 61 Vt. 313, 17 Atl. 842). See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3720.

80. Receiverships.— Appointing a receiver (Gathright v. Oil City Land, etc., Co., 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1657, 56 S. W. 163; Pearson v. Kendrick, 74 Miss. 235, 21 So. 37; Fleming v. Carson, 37 Oreg. 252, 62 Pac. 374); refusing to vacate a receivership (Byrne v. Lake Charles First Nat. Bank, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 194, 49 S. W. 706).

81. Suppressing a deposition.— Vanvalkenberg v. Vanvalkenberg, 90 Ind. 433; Reese v. Beck, 9 Ind. 238; McCormick v. Largey, 1 Mont. 158; Fleming v. Beck, 48 Pa. St. 309.

Refusing to suppress a deposition.—Arkansas.— Trapnall v. State Bank, 18 Ark. 53.

Indiana.— Scott v. Indianapolis Wagon Works, 48 Ind. 75; Hussey v. McGilpin, 4 Ind. 593.

Iowa.— Turner v. Hardin, 80 Iowa 691, 45 N. W. 758; Steel v. Miller, 40 Iowa 402.

South Dakota.— Bem v. Bem, 4 S. D. 138, 55 N. W. 1102.

Texas.— Fant v. Andrews, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 46 S. W. 909; Garlington v. McIntosh, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 33 S. W. 389; Garner v. Cutler, 28 Tex. 175.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3721.

82. Continuances.— Setting aside a continuance (Amory v. Reilly, 9 Ind. 490); refusing to grant a continuance (Rock Island v. Starkey, 189 Ill. 515, 59 N. E. 971; Blair v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 89 Mo. 383, 1 S. W. 350; Steel v. McCutchen, 5 Mo. 522; Texas and other like orders;[83] also, that the hearing upon which such an order was made was regular and upon sufficient notice to the complaining party.[84]

(III) TRIAL BY REFEREE. Upon a doubtful or incomplete record every reasonable presumption is in favor of the regularity of a trial, conducted by a referee and confirmed by the court, as to such referee's authority,[85] qualification,[86] conduct of the proceeding,[87] and report thereon.[88] Also, the correctness of a ref-

83. Miscellaneous orders.—Striking a cause from the calendar (Carr v. Thomas, 34 Ind. 292); ordering a substitution of lost records (McElwee v. People, 77 Ill. 493); requiring security for costs (Farnsworth v. Agnew, 27 Ill. 42; Wagoner v. Busey, 75 Mo. App. 377); giving damages for frivolous demurrer (Frankfort Bank v. Countryman, 11 Wis. 398); issuing warrant for seizure under landlord's lien (Sharp v. Palmer, 31 S. C. 444, 10 S. E. 98); refusing to dismiss for failure to give cost bond (Hickey v. Smith, 6 Ark. 456); appointment of a court reporter (Pitman v. Marquardt, 20 Ind. App. 431, 50 N. E. 894); ordering sheriff, holding attached property, to pay labor-claims (Rauer v. Silva, 128 Cal. 42, 60 Pac. 525).

84. Sufficient notice and regularity presumed.— Where the record is in doubt, or silent. Prestwood v. Tillis, 96 Ala. 181, 11 So. 283; Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 124 Cal. 583, 57 Pac. 582; Kehm v. Mott, 187 Ill. 519, 58 N. E. 467 [affirming 86 Ill. App. 549]; Miller v. Shriner, 86 Ind. 493; Vance v. Workman, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 306; Kroder v. Trout, 8 Kulp (Pa.) 179. From an exception to the ruling thereon. Rose v. Burr, 43 Nebr. 358, 61 N. W. 593. From a failure of the complaining party to seek redress in the lower court. McAllister v. Brooks, 22 Me. 80, 38 Am. Dec. 282; Halleran v. Field, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 38; Taylor v. Carpenter, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 603. From a failure of a bill of exceptions to state that the evidence, relied on as insufficient, was all the evidence. Hyde v. Benson, 6 Ark. 396. In the absence of objection or exception. Pollard v. Lively, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 216. In the absence of the notice objected to. Mickel v. Hicks, 19 Kan. 578, 27 Am. Rep. 161; Hinckley v. Beckwith, 23 Wis. 328. From a failure of the record to show that a notice was not given. Hunt v. Downs, 50 Iowa 696.

Facts not rebutting presumption of regularity.— Taking of a deposition after the cause was set for hearing, where it may have been so taken for sufficient cause. Stubbs v. Burwell, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 536. Recital of notice of a motion in summary proceedings as having been given at a term preceding that of the decision of the motion. Garey v. Edwards, 15 Ala. 105. Hearing of receivership matter after final decree, both parties appearing, without objection. Sellers v. Stoffel, 139 Ind. 468, 39 N. E. 52. Failure to send cross-interrogatories with a commission to take depositions, where there was a possibility that they were not filed in time. McKinney v. O'Connor, 26 Tex. 5.

A complete record which fails to show notice rebuts the presumption that notice of hearing was given. Wright v. Stuart, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 120.

85. Presumption of authority of referee.— That consent of parties, necessary to a reference, was given. Daley v. Legate, 169 Mass. 257, 47 N. E. 1013; De Cordova v. Korte, 7 N. M. 678, 41 Pac. 526; Field v. Romero, 7 N. M. 630, 41 Pac. 517; Macy v. Nelson, 62 N. Y. 638; Jerauld v. Williams, 7 S. D. 196, 63 N. W. 905; Kent v. Dakota F. & M. Ins. Co., 2 S. D. 300, 50 N. W. 85; Duncan v. Erickson, 82 Wis. 128, 51 N. W. 1140; Dinsmore v. Smith, 17 Wis. 20. That the reference was one to which consent was not necessary. Schwartz v. Livingston, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 879, 46 N. Y. St. 477. That an order of reference was duly made. Lubliner v. Yeomans, 65 Ill. 305; Preston v. Hodgen, 50 Ill. 56; Wills v. Dunn, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 384. That an order of reference was made upon sufficient grounds, showing it to be a proper case for reference. Waugh v. Schlenk, 23 Ill. App. 433; Van Marter v. Hotchkiss, 4 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 484; Trummer v. Konrad, 32 Oreg. 54, 51 Pac. 447; Ferguson v. Harrison, 34 S. C. 169, 13 S. E. 332; Dinsmore v. Smith, 17 Wis. 20. That the referee has acted within his authority. Bender v. Matney, 122 Mo. 244, 26 S. W. 950; Girard L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Cooper, 51 Fed. 332, 4 U. S. App. 631, 2 C. C. A. 245.

86. Presumption of qualification.— That the referee was duly sworn or the oath waived. Story v. De Armond, 179 Ill. 510, 53 N. E. 990; Garrity v. Hamburger Co., 136 Ill. 499, 27 N. E. 11, 28 N. E. 743; Duncan v. Fletcher, 1 Ill. 323; Young v. Young, 18 Minn. 90; Hatfield v. Malcolm, 71 Hun (N. Y.) 51, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 596, 53 N. Y. St. 863, 23 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 197; Bull's Appeal, 25 Pa. St. 286; Monitor Iron Works Co. v. Ketchum, 47 Wis. 177, 2 N. W. 80. That the referee possessed the statutory qualifications. Hickman v. Painter, 11 W. Va. 386.

87. Offeciers v. Dirks, 2 Tex. 468. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3726 et seq.

88. Presumptions of regularity of report. — That the report of the referee was filed at the proper time. Montandon v. Walker, 2 Ida. 152, 9 Pac. 608; Brown v. Williams, 34 Nebr. 376, 51 N. W. 851. That no request

eree's report, which has been confirmed, will be presumed, in the absence of affirmative error,[89] and, where the report has been vacated, the same presumption obtains in favor of the order vacating it.[90] The compensation allowed to a referee will not be presumed to be excessive.[91]

(IV) TRIAL BY JURY. The fact of a trial by jury in the trial court appearing of record raises the presumption in the appellate court, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, that the jury was composed of the requisite number of persons,[92] qualified to sit as jurors,[93] who were duly selected, impaneled,[94] and was made to report contested rulings on questions of law by the excepting party. Searles v. Churchill, 69 N. H. 530, 43 Atl. 184.

89. Every reasonable inference from the facts found by a referee will be presumed to have been drawn, and will be drawn in the appellate court, in favor of sustaining the judgment rendered thereon. Hoyt v. Hoyt, 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 511; Patee v. Pelton, 48 Vt. 182; Wills v. Judd, 26 Vt. 617.

Presumption that referee's report is correct upon the evidence.— In the absence of the reason of a motion to vacate it. Moore v. Emmert, 21 Kan. 1. In the absence of the evidence. Harris v. Ferris, 18 Fla. 84; Hendron v. Kinner, 110 Iowa 544, 80 N. W. 419, 81 N. W. 783; Foster v. Voigtlander, 36 Kan. 572, 13 Pac. 777; Bond v. Bond, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 507, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 569, 21 N. Y. St. 682. In the absence of exception. Shenandoah Valley Nat. Bank v. Shirley, 26 W. Va. 563. Upon conflicting evidence. Winter v. Banks, 72 Ala. 409; Mahone v. Williams, 39 Ala. 202; Christian v. Illinois Malleable Iron Co., 92 Ill. App. 320; Stimpson v. Green, 13 Allen (Mass.) 326. Upon an uncertainty as to whether certain necessary evidence was introduced. In re Heath, 58 Iowa 36, 11 N. W. 723.

A confirmation of a referee's report may be presumed from the failure of the trial court to make any findings. Dunavant v. Caldwell, etc., R. Co., 122 N. C. 999, 29 S. E. 837; McEwen v. Loucheim, 115 N. C. 348, 20 S. E. 519; Barbee v. Green, 92 N. C. 471; Barcroft v. Roberts, 91 N. C. 363; Patee v. Pelton, 48 Vt. 182.

Where the referee has failed to make findings of fact, where findings are necessary, it has been held that a pro forma judgment upon his general conclusion does not raise the presumption that the conclusion is correct, so as to preclude a reversal upon the weight of the evidence. Needham v. Holt, 54 Vt. 326. Compare Lennon v. Smith, 161 N. Y. 661, 57 N. E. 1115 [affirming 23 N. Y. App. Div. 293, 48 N. Y. Suppl. 456]. Where the referee has made findings a pro forma judgment is presumed to be such only as to the law arising thereon. Patee v. Pelton, 48 Vt. 182.

There is no presumption that the court heard additional evidence to that upon which the findings of the referee are based, where the evidence upon which such findings are based is insufficient. Sims v. Charleston Bank, 8 W. Va. 274.

90. Retrial by the court upon consent of parties.— Where, by agreement, a cause was submitted to be tried by the court on the evidence as taken and returned by a referee, and the court accordingly tried the case, finding the facts just as the referee had found them, exceptions to the referee's report will not be considered on appeal, as it will be presumed that the court tried the case independently of such report. Silver Valley Min. Co. v. Baltimore Gold, etc., Min. etc., Co., 99 N. C. 445, 6 S. E. 735 [affirmed in 101 N. C. 679, 8 S. E. 361].

An apparent error on the face of an original report, which has been set aside, will be presumed to have been corrected by a second report which has not been excepted to. Shenandoah Valley Nat. Bank v. Shirley, 26 W. Va. 563.

An order vacating a reference may be presumed from a subsequent trial in another court, on a change of venue, without objection (Danville, etc., Turnpike Road Co. v. Stewart, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 119), or in the same court, after a reference upon a default (Cooke v. Williamson, 11 Ind. 242).

A countervailing recital that the jury was sworn "to ascertain and assess the said plaintiff's damages" has been held to rebut the presumption of a proper oath (Townsend v. Jeffries, 17 Ala. 276); also, where the recital was that the jury returned their verdict "as a jury upon oath" (Wolfe v. Martin, 1 How. (Miss.) 30); but a recital that the jury was sworn "to sit as jurors" instead of "to try the issue" was held a mere clerical error, not rebutting the presumption (Furniss v. Meredith, 43 Miss. 302); and the same was held where the recital was that the jury was sworn "the truth to speak upon the issues joined in this case" (Wells v. Smith, (W. Va. 1901) 38 S. E. 547).

That the jury was resworn, if necessary because of an amendment bringing in an additional party after administration of the oath, held to be a proper presumption where only one oath appeared in the record, since the first oath need not have been noted. Thillman v. Neal, 88 Md. 525, 42 Atl. 242.

96. Facts of regular custody and conduct presumed in the absence of any showing to the contrary.— That the members of the jury were duly polled. Parkison v. Boddiker, 10 Colo. 503, 15 Pac. 806. That the jury was accompanied while out of the presence of the court by a proper officer. Morris v. Graves, 2 Ind. 354. Consequently, every reasonable presumption should be indulged against its waiver."

In the absence from the record of a court rule which is claimed to require demand for a jury at a certain time before trial, it has been held that the refusal of a jury upon demand on the day of trial could not be presumed to have been authorized by failure to observe the rule. Woods v. Tanquary, 3 Colo. App. 515, 34 Pac. 737.

The presumption of waiver may be rebutted by the fact that defendant was not present, and had no opportunity to make demand for a jury. Paul v. People, 82 Ill. 82.

5. Sufficient cause for reopening case will be presumed. Bruce v. Smith, 44 Ind. 1; Randolf v. Bloomfield, 77 Iowa 50, 41 N. W. 562, 14 Am. St. Rep. 268; Morris v. Faurot, 21 Ohio St. 155, 8 Am. Rep. 45.

Sufficient cause for refusing to reopen case will be presumed. Morrison v. Welty, 18 Md. 169.

6. Presumptions as to orderly and proper arguments.— That the court did not fail to rebuke counsel for improper remarks to the jury, or to warn the jury to disregard them. Chattanooga, etc., R. Co. v. Huggins, 89 Ga. 494, 15 S. E. 848; Warder, etc., Co. v. Jacobs, 58 Ohio St. 77, 50 N. E. 97. That a refusal to permit a counsel to argue the case to the jury was for sufficient cause. Smith v. Harris, 76 Ind. 104. That no new points requiring reply were made by plaintiff's counsel in his closing argument in reading and commenting upon the instructions. Wiseman v. Wiseman, 89 Ind. 479. That comments upon a document not in evidence were not prejudicial, or that the court warned the jury not to consider them. Clarke v. Fast, 128 Cal. 422, 61 Pac. 72; Perkins v. Ermel, 2 Kan. 325. That the court has not abused its discretion in refusing to permit counsel to read from scientific works. Wade v. DeWitt, 20 Tex. 398. That the court exercised a sound discretion in permitting additional authorities to be read by plaintiff's counsel in the closing argument. Dewitt v. Oppenheimer, 51 Tex. 103.

7. Presumptions as to regular submission of case.— That all objections to the submission of a case, at a place other than that agreed upon, were waived. Johnson v. Mantz, 69 Iowa 710, 27 N. W. 467. That submission at a time and in a manner different from that agreed upon was upon consent. David v. Leslie, 14 Iowa 84. That all of the issues were submitted to the jury. Jennings v. Cummings, 9 Port. (Ala.) 309. That all issues except the general issue were waived. Feagin v. Pearson, 42 Ala. 332. That issues for the court and for the jury were properly submitted to each, and in their proper order. Fry v. Bennett, 9 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 45; Wall v. Fife, 37 Pa. St. 394. That a refused request to submit the case by special issues was made after a general submission. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Ford, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 131, 54 S. W. 37. That special verdicts were returned upon proper request therefor and under sufficient instructions. Shoner v. Pennsylvania Co., 130 Ind. 170, 28 N. E. 616, 29 N. E. 775. That the withdrawal of special interrogatories, submitted to the jury, was upon sufficient reasons. Groscop v. Rainier, 111 Ind. 361, 12 N. E. 694. That the submission of questions, not objected to, was upon consent. Fisk v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 83 Iowa 253, 48 N. W. 1081.

8. Presumptions of regularity in receiving verdict.—That the jury was present when the court opened the verdict and recommitted it for amendment. Fifield v. Adams, 3 Iowa 487. That the attorneys were present in court when the verdict was rendered. Parlin, etc., Co. v. Barnett, 35 Oreg. 568, 57 Pac. 625; Cranmer v. Kohn, 11 S. D. 245, 76 N. W. 937.

9. Bringing plaintiff into court on a cot, in an action for personal injuries, will be presumed to have been warranted by his physical condition, in the absence of a clear showing that this was done merely to arouse the sympathies of the court and jury. Sherwood v. Sioux Falls, 10 S. D. 405, 73 N. W. 913.

Consolidation of cross-actions was presumed to have been upon due notice and waiver of all objections thereto, the record showing no appearance by either party, nor any objection or exception. Shore v. White City State Bank, 61 Kan. 246, 59 Pac. 263.

Where no grounds of objection appear the presumption is that none sufficient were specified, if the admission of improper evidence is complained of, and that proper grounds were specified, if the exclusion of admissible evidence is complained of, and in either case thereon,[12] of exceptions thereto,[13] or of a sufficient showing of the evidence claimed to have been improperly admitted or excluded.[14] Moreover, every reasonable contingency which could support the ruling will, upon an incomplete or a doubtful record, be presumed to have existed;[15] and substantial error will not that the ruling was correct. Abshire v. Williams, 76 Ind. 97; Lee v. Hardgrave, 3 Mich. 77; Rosina v. Trowbridge, 20 Nev. 105, 17 Pac. 751; Neal v. Minor, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 26 S. W. 882. Contra, Anderson v. Snow, 8 Ala. 504; Goodtitle v. Roe, 20 Ga. 135.

Where the facts underlying the ground of objection do not appear, it will be presumed that such facts did not exist, if the objection is upon the existence of certain facts, and that such facts did exist, if the objection is upon the non-existence thereof, and in either case that the objection is untenable.

Where a bond for deed as copied in the bill of exceptions displayed a variance from the bond declared on as to the time of maturity of a note, and the bond had been excluded for variance upon another and untenable ground, it was presumed that the date given in the copy was a clerical error, and the judgment was reversed. Doubt as to which party introduced improper evidence raises the presumption that it was not improperly considered against the party as to whom it would have been prejudicial, if the record showed clearly that the other had offered it and he had objected. Morgan v. Mitchell, 52 Nebr. 667, 72 N. W. 1055.

Exclusion of proper evidence will be presumed non-prejudicial where it fairly appears that, in any reasonable view of the case, the excluded evidence would not, if admitted, have altered the result. Starr v. Mayer, 60 Ga. 546; Pomeroy v. Heddles, 95 Wis. 453, 70 N. W. 557.

Subsequent facts showing evidence inadmissible raise no presumption of prejudicial error, though no instruction to the jury to disregard such evidence appears, for, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, such instruction will be presumed to have been given. Randall v. Doane, 9 Gray (Mass.) 408.

Doubt as to reading of improper document will be resolved in favor of correct action. Thus, where a deed was improperly admitted and not then read, and it appeared that another deed of the same description was afterward read without objection, it was presumed that the deeds were not the same. Ferguson v. Cochran, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 30.

Presumption that erroneous view of the law was not changed.— Where the instructions are not in the record it has been held that it could not be presumed, in support of the judgment, that instructions were given, properly covering the law and withdrawing improper evidence from the consideration of the jury, but, on the contrary, that the court maintained its erroneous view of the law to the end of the case. Wood v. Willard, 36 Vt, 82, 84 Am. Dec. 659; Spokane, etc., Gold, etc., Co. v. Colfelt, (Wash. 1901) 64 Pac. 847.

18. Presumption of estoppel to claim error. — A party introducing evidence in chief, or drawing it out on cross-examination, thereby asserts its materiality and is estopped to deny it; and, where, upon the record, it is doubtful which party produced the evidence complained of, it may be presumed that it was produced by the party who complains of a refusal to strike it out. Hughes v. Taylor, 52 Ala. 518. Similarly, it has been held that a defendant may not claim the erroneous exclusion of answers offered in evidence unless it affirmatively appears that the exclusion was not on motion of defendant himself. Starr v. Mayer, 60 Ga. 546. And, again, where a document was appended to an answer to an interrogatory of plaintiff, it was presumed, in the absence of the interrogatory, that the answer was responsive thereto; and, hence, that plaintiff, being thus held to have called for the document, was estopped to object to its offer in evidence by defendant. Furlow v. Merrell, 23 Ala. 705.

Omission to offer evidence a second time, after subsequent evidence has shown the excluded evidence to be admissible, may be taken as an acquiescence in the ruling of exclusion instructions were given on all material points.[19] In the absence of the facts shown in evidence, it will be presumed that the law as laid down in the instructions was applicable thereto,[20] or that the law as stated in a refused instruction was inappli-where there is no ground for the presumption that the entire evidence was offered as a whole. Bryant v. Hutchinson, 30 Ala. 441.

A showing in the record that excluded evidence was afterward considered, by comments of counsel on both sides thereon in argument and without instruction to the jury to disregard it, has been held to raise the presumption that the adverse ruling and objection thereto were waived. An unexplained alteration in an instruction will be presumed to have been made before the instruction was given, if the instruction is right with the alteration and wrong without it. Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Hendrian, 190 Ill. 501, 60 N. E. 902. Contra, in a case where counsel immediately called the court's attention to the insufficiency and was allowed an exception on that ground, and the court afterward altered the report furnished by the stenographer, claiming that it was wrongly reported. In re Rosner, 5 Wash. 488, 32 Pac. 106.

The granting of a new trial because of an erroneous instruction raises the presumption that the instruction was given, though the record does not otherwise show whether it was given or not. Swope v. Shafer, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 42, 22 S. W. 78.

Where no instructions are given or refused, in a trial to the court sitting as a jury, it will be presumed that the court correctly applied the law to the facts. Joseph Schnaider Brewing Co. v. Niederweiser, 28 Mo. App. 233.

Where no written instructions were given and none are in the record, the presumption is that proper oral instructions were given, or that, by agreement, the case was submitted without instructions. Musselman v. Williams, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1077, 54 S. W. 3.

Where only a portion of the instructions are shown, the presumption is that proper instructions were given as to all other points in the case (Hewey v. Nourse, 54 Me. 256; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Lowry, 61 Tex. 149; Brabbits v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 38 Wis. 289); and also that the refusal of correct instructions was justified by giving other instructions to the same effect (Hall v. State, 23 Ind. App. 521, 55 N. E. 798).

Where the substance only of an instruction is given, and it is left in doubt as to whether the judge transcended the limits of judicial discretion in expressing his opinion as to the weight which ought to be given to the statement of a witness, it will be presumed that he did not. A former determination by the appellate court that evidence upon a particular point was insufficient to warrant its submission to the jury does not preclude the submission of the same point on a second trial, as matter of law, for the appellate court cannot inspect the former record to determine that the evidence was the same; hence, it will be presumed "that the trial court, in passing upon the instructions requested, and having before it the evidence on both trials, found a material difference in the testimony in the last trial from that of the first, and therefore determined that the opinion regarding the matter announced in the first appeal did not apply to the testimony as then existing." Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Fox, 60 Nebr. 531, 83 N. W. 744.

showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that statutory requirements as to giving or refusing instructions were complied with,[25] and that the ruling in question was otherwise regular.[26]

(D) Peremptory Instruction, Dismissal, or Nonsuit. If, upon any reasonable view of the whole case, a party has or might, if permitted, have established a prima facie cause of action or defense, a peremptory determination in favor of the other party is reversible error.[27] Therefore, on appeal from a peremptory instruction, dismissal, or nonsuit in favor of defendant, the truth of plaintiff's evidence, admitted or excluded, will be presumed, and if the most favorable inferences from relevant facts thus shown, which the court or jury might reasonably have drawn, make a prima facie case the court below will be reversed.[28] And

25. That instructions were in writing will be presumed where it is not clearly shown whether they were written or oral (Condon v. Brockway, 157 Ill. 90, 41 N. E. 634; Cook v. Piper, 79 Ill. 27. Both parties requesting a peremptory instruction has been held equivalent to a withdrawal, by consent, of the case from the jury and a submission thereof to the court; so that, in such case, the direction of a verdict will be supported by all necessary facts and inferences which can reasonably be presumed to have been derived from the evidence of the case in favor of a party for whom the verdict is directed, thus reversing the rule of presumption which ordinarily makes in favor of the other party, in a similar manner. Replogle v. American Ins. Co., 132 Ind. 360, 31 N. E. 947.

Findings inconsistent with those made cannot be supplied by presumption. Peabody v. McAvoy, 23 Mich. 526; Pratt v. Page, 32 Vt. 13; Seibel v. Bath, 5 Wyo. 409, 40 Pac. 756.

In case of a judgment upon an auditor's report the appellate court declined to presume that the trial court made findings in addition thereto which are necessary to support the judgment, and not fairly to be inferred from the report itself. Corliss v. Putnam, 37 Vt. 119; Pratt v. Page, 32 Vt. 13.

45. A waiver of express findings which do not appear may be presumed, where there is no objection or exception or other fact to show that they were not waived.

California.— Benton v. Benton, 122 Cal. 395, 55 Pac. 152; Leadbetter v. Lake, 118 Cal. 515, 50 Pac. 686.

Idaho.— Bunnell, etc., Invest. Co. v. Curtis, (Ida. 1897) 51 Pac. 767; Parker v. Beagle, (Ida. 1895) 40 Pac. 61.

Montana.— Yellowstone Nat. Bank v. Gagnon, (Mont. 1901) 64 Pac. 664.

New York.— Bartlett v. Goodrich, 153 N. Y. 421, 47 N. E. 794 [affirming 36 N. Y. Suppl. 770, 72 N. Y. St. 1].

North Dakota.— Garr v. Spaulding, 2 N. D. 414, 51 N. W. 867.

South Dakota.— Chandler v. Kennedy, 8 S. D. 56, 65 N. W. 439.

Texas.— Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Purcell, 91 Tex. 585, 44 S. W. 1058; Wynne v. Kennedy, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 693, 33 S. W. 298.

Utah.— Haynes v. Roberts, 4 Utah 405, 11 Pac. 512.

Vermont.— Pierce v. Pierce, 70 Vt. 270, 40 Atl. 728.

Washington.— Bard v. Kleeb, 1 Wash. 370, 25 Pac. 467, 27 Pac. 273.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3771.

Failure to specifically except raises the presumption that a defect in, or omission of, a finding was waived. Henry v. Everts, 30 Cal. 425.

46. Presumption abrogated by statute.— Where, by statutory requirement, the findings must contain all facts necessary to support the judgment, an essential finding which does not appear upon a complete record of the findings cannot be supplied by implication or presumption of waiver. Ball v. Kehl, 95 Cal. 606, 30 Pac. 780; North Pac. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 50 Cal. 90; Walsh v. Powers, 43 N. Y. 23, 3 Am. Rep. 654; Tomlinson v. New York, 23 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 452. Aliter, where the findings were made before the statute went into effect. Fratt v. Toomes, 48 Cal. 28. A reasonable inference from facts found may, however, even in case of such a mandatory statute, supply defects and omissions not constituting an entire lack of foundation for the judgment. Walsh v. Powers, 43 N. Y. 23, 3 Am. Rep. 654. And where, upon the record, it cannot be seen that such statute was not complied with, it will be presumed that it was. Schwartz v. Stock, (Nev. 1901) 65 Pac. 351. And in case of doubt or ambiguity as to such compliance the same rule obtains. Benton v. Benton, 122 Cal. 395, 55 Pac. 152.

47. Injurious consequences will be presumed to follow a clearly erroneous finding, although such injury is not apparent. To sustain the judgment in such case, lack of injury must affirmatively appear. That the erroneous finding was the result of inadvertence cannot be presumed. Murdock v. Clarke, (Cal. 1890) 24 Pac. 272.

48. Alabama.— Mallory v. Stodder, 6 Ala. 801.

Upon a complete record of the evidence, it cannot be presumed that there was other evidence given to support the verdict. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Becker, 76 Ill. 25.

Verdict upon a feigned issue out of chancery raises no presumption of the existence of the facts found, where the appellate court reviews the proceedings in chancery the same as the trial court. Johnson v. Johnson, 4 Wis. 135.

Documents will be presumed to have been read to the jury, where they are shown to have been admitted, and an omission of a bill of exceptions to so state may be presumed to be a clerical error. Tentonic Ins. Co. v. Howell, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1245, 54 S. W. 852.

49. That instructions of the court were followed will be presumed, unless the contrary affirmatively appears.

California.— Stanton v. French, 91 Cal. 274, 27 Pac. 657, 25 Am. St. Rep. 174.

Indiana.— La Matt v. State, 128 Ind. 123, 27 N. E. 346; Westfield Bank v. Inman, 8 Ind. App. 239, 34 N. E. 21.

Texas.— Ashcroft v. Pouns, 1 Tex. 594.

Vermont.— Walworth v. Readsboro, 24 Vt. 252.

United States.— Harper, etc., Co. v. Wilgus, 56 Fed. 587, 15 U. S. App. 143, 6 C. C. A. 45.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3757.

50. That instructions were understood will be presumed if the instructions were proper and capable of being understood by the ordinary juror.

Georgia.— Georgia R., etc., Co. v. Baker, 88 Ga. 28, 13 S. E. 831.

Massachusetts.— Raymond v. Nye, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 151.

Pennsylvania.— Lackawanna, etc., R. Co. v. Chenewith, 52 Pa. St. 382, 91 Am. Dec. 168.

Texas.— East Line, etc., R. Co. v. Lee, 71 Tex. 538, 9 S. W. 604.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3757.

51. A doubtful instruction may be presumed not to have misled the jury. Chattahoochee Brick Co. v. Sullivan, 86 Ga. 50, 12 S. E. 216; Pennsylvania Co. v. McCormack, 131 Ind. 250, 35 N. E. 27; Bundy v. McKnight, 48 Ind. 502; Million v. Riley, 1 Dana (Ky.) 359, 25 Am. Dec. 149; Heaton v. Manhattan F. Ins. Co., 7 R. I. 502.

Improper remarks, made during trial, may that undue regard has been given by the jury to evidence which was improperly introduced and subsequently stricken out,[52] which was excluded by the court,[53] or which was never submitted;[54] that the verdict is at variance with the pleadings,[55] be presumed to have been cured by instruction, where the instructions are not in the record. Yunker v. Marshall, 65 Ill. App. 667.

It will be presumed that the jury considered the whole charge, and were not misled by a single instruction, defective when standing alone. Stull v. Howard, 26 Ind. 456; Hart v. Newton, 48 Mich. 401, 12 N. W. 508; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. James, (Tex. 1888) 10 S. W. 332.

That other instructions were given, explaining and curing a defective instruction which is capable of being explained and cured, has been presumed where such instructions did not appear and it did not appear that they were not given. Hawkins v. Collier, 106 Ga. 18, 31 S. E. 755; Marshall v. Lewark, 117 Ind. 377, 20 N. E. 253; Rogers v. Wallace, 10 Oreg. 387. Contra, Bryson v. Chisholm, 56 Ga. 596; Lower v. Franks, 115 Ind. 334, 17 N. E. 630.

The refusal of a correct instruction will be presumed to have been cured by another instruction which appears to have been given but is not in the record. Cooke v. Washington, 2 Tex. Unrep. Cas. 402. Contra, where the instruction refused was "quite unexceptionable and peculiarly proper to have been given," and it did not appear that "the right of the case had been attained by the verdict." Weisiger v. Chisholm, 22 Tex. 670.

Upon a complete record, it cannot be presumed that other instructions than those set out were given or refused. Garrott v. Ratliff, 6 Ky. L. Rep. 72.

A palpably erroneous instruction, relating to material matter, and not withdrawn or cured by additional instructions, cannot be presumed to have been disregarded by the jury.

Alabama.— Ware v. Dudley, 16 Ala. 742.

Illinois.— Tipton v. Schuler, 87 Ill. App. 517.

Iowa.— Lacey v. Straughan, 11 Iowa 258.

Missouri.— Suddarth v. Robertson, 118 Mo. 286, 24 S. W. 151; Stegman v. Berryhill, 72 Mo. 307.

West Virginia.— Ward v. Ward, 47 W. Va. 766, 35 S. E. 873.

See also supra, XVII, E, 2, d, (v), (c).

52. Improper evidence will be presumed to have been disregarded, unless the contrary clearly appears, where the court has given proper instructions (Mandeville v. Guernsey, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 99); and such instructions may be presumed where the objectionable character of the evidence is shown only by facts subsequent to its admission (Randall v. Doane, 9 Gray (Mass.) 408; Tucker v. Salem Flouring Mills Co., 13 Oreg. 28, 7 Pac. 53). Aliter, where the evidence was erroneously admitted. Wood v. Willard, 36 Vt. 82, 84 Am. Dec. 659; Spokane, etc., Gold, etc., Co. v. Colfelt, (Wash. 1901) 64 Pac. 847.

53. Evidence, objectionable upon a certain contingency, will be presumed to have been disregarded if the contingency was found not to exist, in accordance with instructions to that effect. Ayers v. Hartford Ins. Co., 21 Iowa 193.

Documents, admitted only for certain purposes, will not be presumed to have been considered by the jury for other purposes, though taken out upon retiring under instructions. New York, etc., Contracting Co. v. Meyer, 51 Ala. 325; Porter County First Nat. Bank v. Williams, 4 Ind. App. 501, 31 N. E. 370.

Excluded depositions, inadvertently taken out by the jury upon retiring to consider their verdict, were presumed not to have been tampered with or considered, in the absence of an affirmative showing to that effect. Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Underwood, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 424.

54. That the jury did not go outside the evidence will be presumed unless the contrary appears; and it was not presumed that they did so from the fact that an instruction upon a particular matter was broad enough to permit it. Sanders v. Reister, 1 Dak. 151, 46 N. W. 680.

Items withdrawn during trial will be presumed not to have been included in the verdict, if the verdict may be supported by remaining items, unless it affirmatively appears that the withdrawn items were included. McVey v. Johnson, 75 Iowa 165, 39 N. W. 249.

Documents in the record may be presumed to have been received in evidence, if the contrary does not appear. Ragsdale v. Barnett, 10 Ind. App. 478, 37 N. E. 1109; Powell v. Hopson, 14 La. Ann. 666.

Documents will be presumed to have been read to the jury, or to have reached the jury in some proper form, though the record does not specifically so state, where they have been offered and received in evidence.

Illinois.— Hefling v. Van Zandt, 162 Ill. 162, 44 N. E. 424; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Swisher, 61 Ill. App. 611.

Missouri.— Webb v. Archibald, (Mo. 1894) 28 S. W. 80.

Nebraska.— Dawson v. Williams, 37 Nebr. 1, 55 N. W. 284.

New York.— Shaw v. Bryant, 90 Hun (N. Y.) 374, 35 N. Y. Suppl. 909, 70 N. Y. St. 612.

Documents, not introduced, but taken out by the jury upon retiring, were presumed to have been considered in arriving at a verdict, it appearing that the documents, if considered, had an important bearing upon the weight of the evidence in favor of the verdict. Nolan v. Vosburg, 3 Ill. App. 596.

55. Proof will not be presumed contrary to the pleadings; therefore, though the facts in evidence be not in the record, a verdict which is repugnant to admissions in the pleadings cannot stand. Luckett v. Townsend, 3 Tex. 119, 49 Am. Dec. 723.

Upon a doubtful pleading, which may be held to state a cause of action, it will be pre-not responsive to the issues raised and submitted,[56] or contrary to special findings;[57] or that passion and prejudice contributed to the result.[58]

(11) Sufficiency of Verdict to Support Judgment. Upon an incomplete or doubtful record, every reasonable presumption will be indulged to the end that the judgment may be supported by the verdict,[59] with reference to the amount sumed that the construction which will support the verdict was the one adopted on the trial and followed by the jury. Smith v. Cisson, 1 Colo. 29.

Specific grounds of relief alleged will, in the absence of the contrary, be presumed not to have been exceeded by the jury in the consideration of their verdict. Kelley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Wis. 74, 9 N. W. 816.

Where no issue is tendered on a material matter, it cannot be presumed that the jury found as to such matter. Gifford v. Carvill, 29 Cal. 589.

Necessary party omitted.— Where a husband sued for slanderous words spoken of himself and wife, but did not join the wife, an entire verdict was presumed to have included damages for the slander of the wife, and the judgment was reversed. Johnson v. Dicken, 25 Mo. 580.

56. That the verdict was responsive to the issues will be presumed, in the absence of a showing as to what the issues were, if it could reasonably have been returned upon any issue which might have arisen in a case of the character tried. Sears v. Andrews, 1 Colo. 88.

A general verdict for "defendants," in a case where counsel appeared of record "for the defendants," will be presumed to mean all of defendants who joined issue. Adamson v. Sundby, 51 Minn. 460, 53 N. W. 761.

That a counter-claim or set-off was deducted, where it has been established or admitted, will be presumed unless the contrary hypothesis is clearly apparent. Branger v. Buttrick, 30 Wis. 665.

Upon the blending of a pleaded issue with one not pleaded, a general verdict was presumed not intended to be responsive alone to the pleaded issue, in the absence of an affirmative showing that the jury were not misled. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Ward, 1 Cinc. L. Bul. 332.

Issues raised but not submitted will be presumed not to have been considered by the jury in arriving at its verdict, unless the contrary appears on the record. Davis v. Walter, 70 Iowa 465, 30 N. W. 804; Waxahachie v. Connor, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 35 S. W. 692. In such case it will not be presumed that the jury took the plaintiff's pleading out with them for consideration. North Chicago St., etc., R. Co. v. Hutchinson, 92 Ill. App. 567.

57. Special findings and the general verdict will be reconciled, if possible. Central Union Telephone Co. v. Fehring, 146 Ind. 189, 45 N. E. 64; Poseyville v. Lewis, 126 Ind. 80, 25 N. E. 593; Greenfield v. State, 113 Ind. 597, 15 N. E. 241; Indianapolis Union R. Co. v. Neubacher, 16 Ind. App. 21, 44 N. E. 669; Johnson v. Miller, 82 Iowa 693, 47 N. W. 903, 48 N. W. 1081, 31 Am. St. Rep. 514; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Noble, 43 Kan. 310, 23 Pac. 438.

In the absence of the special findings in question, or of the evidence, it must be presumed to be in accord with the general verdict. Dempsey v. Cogswell, 29 Minn. 100, 12 N. W. 148.

In the absence of a motion for judgment upon special findings, the action of the trial court overruling it will be presumed correct, since the motion may have contained something making such action proper. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Juday, (Ind. App. 1900) 56 N. E. 931.

Findings by the court in addition to special verdict.— Where certain questions are submitted and found by a jury, and the determination of other facts necessary to the judgment are not necessarily such as must have been submitted to the jury, where the evidence is not in the record, it will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that such facts not found by the jury existed and were found.

Indiana.— Langsdale v. Bonton, 12 Ind. 467.

Iowa.— Moffitt v. Albert, 97 Iowa 213, 66 N. W. 162.

Minnesota.— McNally v. Weld, 30 Minn. 209, 14 N. W. 895; Dempsey v. Cogswell, 29 Minn. 100, 12 N. W. 148.

Texas.— State Nat. L. & T. Co. v. Fuller, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 63 S. W. 552; Breneman v. Mayer, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 58 S. W. 725.

Wisconsin.— Batten v. Richards, 70 Wis. 272, 35 N. W. 542.

58. The remission of exemplary damages will not purge a grossly excessive verdict of the effect of passion and prejudice as to the remainder, but it will be presumed that the same motives influenced the entire verdict, unless it clearly appears that such remainder is amply supported by the evidence. Chicago City R. Co. v. Fennimore, 78 Ill. App. 478; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Gordon, 70 Tex. 80, 7 S. W. 695.

But a mere error in assessing the amount of damages, in a case where the evidence is conflicting and would have justified a verdict either way, does not raise the presumption that the verdict on the general facts was also erroneous, or the result of passion and prejudice. Stemmerman v. Nassau Electric R. Co., 36 N. Y. App. Div. 218, 56 N. Y. Suppl. 730.

59. A judgment contrary to the verdict, stated to have been so given "on points of law," was held erroneous, upon the presumption that the verdict was right, in the absence of an affirmative showing of good reasons why judgment was not rendered on the verdict. Evans v. Bell, 6 Dana (Ky.) 479.

thereof,[60] inaccuracies or mistakes,[61] insufficiency of form,[62] ambiguity or doubtful sufficiency of substance,[63] uncertainty as to which of several counts was made the basis of the verdict, where some portions of plaintiff's pleading are insufficient[64]

60. A verdict larger than the amount claimed does not raise the presumption that the jury intended to find double damages, in disregard of the court's instructions. Carpenter v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 20 Mo. App. 644.

Smaller verdict than could have been given under the instructions was presumed to have been an error in fixing the amount, not a virtual finding for defendant, in an action on an insurance policy, where the instruction was that, if fraud or perjury had been committed in making proof of loss, defendant would be entitled to a verdict. Wolf v. Goodhue F. Ins. Co., 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 400.

Treble damages was presumed to have been given by a general finding of damages where plaintiff was entitled to such recovery. Prignitz v. McTiernan, 18 Misc. (N. Y.) 651, 43 N. Y. Suppl. 974.

Verdict including interest.—Interest on the amount of a verdict cannot be upheld against the presumption that the jury included interest in their general verdict, where they were instructed that, if plaintiff recovered, he would be entitled to interest. Diedrich v. Northwestern Union R. Co., 47 Wis. 662, 3 N. W. 749.

61. A variance between verdict returned and that recited in judgment will be presumed to have been corrected by the jury by the return of the verdict recited in the judgment. Layman v. Hendrix, 1 Ala. 212.

One of two verdicts, which is correct, will be presumed to have been substituted by the jury for the other, which is incorrect. Smith v. Camp, 84 Ga. 117, 10 S. E. 539.

62. If the form of the verdict depends upon the evidence, the verdict in question will be presumed to be in accordance with the evidence produced, where the evidence is not in the record. Caruthers v. Hensley, 90 Cal. 559, 27 Pac. 411.

In the absence of objection to the form of the verdict because it does not find special facts, the special form will be presumed to have been waived and the special facts found, if possible. Tripp v. Smith, 50 N. Y. App. Div. 499, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 94.

In the absence of a statement as to the form of the verdict, it will be presumed that the verdict was returned in proper form. Mattson v. Borgeson, 24 Ill. App. 79.

Rule requiring principal and interest to be found separately will be presumed not to have been violated by the return of a verdict for a single sum less than the amount claimed, if the deficiency is such that it may have been intended to include no interest in the finding. Lewis v. Allen, 68 Ga. 398.

Signing will be presumed in case the record does not show a failure to sign. Douglass v. Baker, 79 Tex. 499, 15 S. W. 801.

Variance between the bill and record proper, the former showing an informal verdict and the latter a formal one, was presumed to have been cured by putting the verdict in proper form, under direction of the court, before the discharge of the jury. Allmon v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 155 Ill. 17, 39 N. E. 569.

An amendment may be presumed, where the form of the verdict is amendable, and the judgment has been properly entered. Shaw v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 557, 25 L. ed. 892.

63. A plat, as a part of the verdict, will be presumed to supply any deficiency in the verdict, such plat having been offered in evidence at the trial. Smith v. Fite, 98 N. C. 517, 4 S. E. 203. A dividing line on such map or plat, showing the method in which the verdict divides land, will be presumed not imaginary, but to have been based on monuments capable of exact location, in the absence of any showing to the contrary. Thompson v. Connolly, 42 Cal. 313.

64. That the verdict was based on a good count, if possible, will be presumed, unless the contrary appears, if one good count exists, though other insufficient counts also exist.

Connecticut.— Booth v. Northrop, 27 Conn. 325; Wolcott v. Coleman, 2 Conn. 324.

Delaware.— Ellis v. Culver, 2 Harr. (Del.) 129.

District of Columbia.— Bunyea v. Metropolitan R. Co., 19 D. C. 76.

Indiana.—Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Taffe, 11 Ind. 458; Harvey v. Laflin, 2 Ind. 477.

Ohio.—Johnson v. Mullin, 12 Ohio 10; Case v. State, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 486.

Tennessee.—Pursell v. Archer, Peck (Tenn.) 317.

Wisconsin.— McPhee v. McDermott, 77 Wis. 33, 45 N. W. 808; Bushee v. Wright, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 104.

Contra, in civil cases, unless each of the counts describe the same cause of action. Glines v. Smith, 48 N. H. 259. In Garr v. Gomez, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 649, it was held that, notwithstanding the presumption that damages were assessed on the good counts only, in case of a general verdict on several counts, some good and some bad, the judgment should be reversed.

Improper allegations of aggravation may be presumed not to have entered into the assessment of damages, in the absence of a showing that they did. Richards v. Farnham, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 451.

Where a demurrer to the insufficient counts has been overruled, it cannot be presumed that the verdict was based exclusively on the good counts, but the contrary will be presumed in the absence of any affirmative showing on the record. Rowe v. Peabody, 102 Ind. 198, 1 N. E. 353; Pennsylvania Co. v. Holderman, 69 Ind. 18; Cook v. Hopkins, 66 Ind. 208. But this contrary rule is not applicable merely because a demurrer to the evidence has been overruled, unless the grounds of the rul-or unproved,[65] uncertainty upon which of several defenses the verdict was based, where one or more are insufficient,[66] or unproved,[67] or insufficiency of special verdicts to support the general verdict or judgment.[68]

f. New Trial. An order granting a new trial, or a waiver of a motion therefor, may be presumed from subsequent proceedings inconsistent with the contrary;[69] and, in the absence of an affirmative showing that the hearing of a motion therefor was irregular, regularity thereof will be presumed.[70] Where the grounds for granting a new trial are not shown, sufficient grounds may be presumed;[71] and designated grounds, which might, in any reasonable view, have been sufficient, will be so presumed, unless the record clearly shows the contrary.[72]

ing show that the court thereby intended to hold a bad count or paragraph good. Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Collarn, 73 Ind. 261, 38 Am. Rep. 134.

65. That the verdict was based on a proved count will be presumed, if possible, and unless the contrary appears, where one or more of the counts appear not to have been proved or relied on at the trial. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Pierce, 95 Ind. 496; Powell v. Chittick, 89 Iowa 513, 56 N. W. 652; Hudson v. Matthews, Morr. (Iowa) 94; Pevey v. Schulenburg, etc., Lumber Co., 33 Minn. 45, 21 N. W. 844.

66. Where one of two defenses was clearly insufficient to support the verdict in the form in which it was rendered, the court declined to presume that the trial was confined to the other issue, in the absence of a showing to that effect. Gaines v. Tibbs, 6 Dana (Ky.) 143.

67. That a verdict was based on a proved defense will be presumed, where one is unproved, and it is not shown that it was based on the unproved defense. Hubbard v. Horne, 24 Tex. 270. Contra, especially where there are erroneous instructions upon the law of the unproved defense. Gay v. Lemle, 32 Miss. 309.

68. Failure to return an answer to a special interrogatory may not be ground for reversal. If possible upon the evidence, it will be presumed in favor of a general verdict that the facts in question were found. Huss v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Iowa 1901) 85 N. W. 627.

The burden of proof may, in some cases, be resorted to for the determination of essential facts as to which a special verdict is silent — that is, the silence of the special finding as to such fact may be presumed to be a finding against the party who has the burden of proving the fact in question. Citizens Bank v. Bolen, 121 Ind. 301, 23 N. E. 146; Nitche v. Earle, 88 Ind. 375.

69. Granting of new trial presumed, where no order appears and a new trial was had. McGehee v. Hansell, 13 Ala. 17; Fowler v. Equitable Trust Co., 141 U. S. 384, 12 S. Ct. 1, 35 L. ed. 786.

Waiver of motion presumed in the absence of an order thereon. Moore v. Gilbert, 46 Iowa 508; Darke v. Ireland, 4 Utah 192, 7 Pac. 714.

70. Presumption of regularity.— That an associate of the attorney of record had authority to accept service of a notice of motion. McCreery v. Everding, 44 Cal. 284. That counsel, by signing the settled statement on motion for new trial, waived want of notice of hearing. Cockrill v. Hall, 76 Cal. 192, 18 Pac. 318. That sufficient notice of hearing was given. Gage v. Downey, 79 Cal. 140, 19 Pac. 113, 21 Pac. 527, 855; Baldwin v. Daniel, 69 Ga. 782; Beach v. Spokane Ranch, etc., Co., (Mont. 1901) 65 Pac. 106; Murray v. Hauser, 21 Mont. 120, 53 Pac. 99. That a motion to dismiss a motion for a new trial, for want of due service, was properly denied upon the record. Cothran v. Brower, 71 Ga. 357.

71. Any ground which may support the order will be presumed to have been the basis of the new trial, where no ground is specified.

California.— Newman v. Overland Pac. R. Co., 132 Cal. 73, 64 Pac. 110; Austin v. Gagan, (Cal. 1892) 30 Pac. 790.

Georgia.— Comer v. Grannis, 66 Ga. 255.

Indiana.— Waddle v. Megee, 81 Ind. 247; Haun v. Wilson, 28 Ind. 296.

Kansas.—Hawkins v. Skinner, (Kan. 1901) 64 Pac. 969; Eskridge v. Lewis, 51 Kan. 376, 32 Pac. 1104.

Montana.— Kircher v. Conrad, 9 Mont. 191, 23 Pac. 74, 18 Am. St. Rep. 731, 17 L. R. A. 471.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 3772 et seq.

A new trial will be presumed to have been granted on the merits, so as to entitle the parties to a trial de novo, where the grounds of the order for a new trial do not appear. Brenner v. Coerber, 42 Ill. 497.

Where no errors were specified, the court declined to presume, in support of the order, that a specification of errors was waived by the opposite party. McWilliams v. Herschman, 5 Nev. 263.

Where specific grounds are shown it cannot be presumed, to sustain the order, that it was made on other grounds (Probst v. Braeunlich, 24 W. Va. 356); but where sufficient grounds are designated in the motion other than those insufficient grounds upon which the court acted, it will be presumed that the former grounds justified the order (Johnson v. Head, (Iowa 1900) 84 N. W. 678).

72. In the absence of exceptions to the granting of a new trial, or of the hearing of

The refusal of a new trial will be presumed correct, unless prejudicial error is shown by the record to have occurred on the trial,[73] and also that such error was properly brought to the attention of the trial court by a proper motion for new trial,[74]

a motion therefor upon an insufficient showing, the order will be presumed to be right, no substantial injustice appearing to have been done. Hornady v. Shields, 119 Ind. 201, 21 N. E. 554.

In the absence of the evidence, it must be presumed that the granting of a new trial, on the ground that the verdict was not supported by the evidence, was fully justified. Jones v. Jones, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 140; Nudd v. Home Ins., etc., Co., 25 Minn. 100; Bradley v. Slater, 55 Nebr. 334, 75 N. W. 826; Robertson v. Harmon, 47 W. Va. 500, 35 S. E. 832.

Upon an incomplete record, the omitted portions will be presumed to sustain an order granting a new trial. Cody v. Gainesville First Nat. Bank, 99 Ga. 405, 27 S. E. 714.

Upon conflicting or doubtfully sufficient evidence the presumption obtains that, in granting a new trial for insufficient evidence, the trial court has committed no abuse of discretion. Loomis v. Perkins, 70 Conn. 444, 39 Atl. 797; Eickhof v. Chicago North Shore St. R. Co., 77 Ill. App. 196; Commonwealth Bank v. Hiles, 4 Dana (Ky.) 598; Phillpotts v. Blasdel, 8 Nev. 61.

That the court changed its opinion as to the sufficiency of the evidence may be presumed in a case where findings had been made on conflicting evidence, and a new trial was granted for insufficiency of the evidence; and this presumption was held not to have been rebutted by the fact that the motion for new trial was heard by a judge who did not try the case. Churchill v. Flournoy, 127 Cal. 355, 59 Pac. 791; Condee v. Gyger, 126 Cal. 546, 59 Pac. 26; Hammel v. Stone, (Cal. 1887) 14 Pac. 675.

A plain error of law in granting a new trial cannot be aided by any presumption of correct action. Santa Marina v. Connolly, 79 Cal. 517, 21 Pac. 1093.

Existence of record facts.— Upon a complete record, it cannot be presumed that record facts existed other than those shown, to sustain an order granting a new trial. And this rule was applied though the order appeared to have been based upon such other facts. Hoskins v. Hight, 95 Ala. 284, 11 So. 253.

73. All of the grounds will be presumed to have been considered on the overruling of a motion for a new trial, if the contrary be not clearly shown. Schwartz v. Reesch, 2 App. Cas. (D. C.) 440; Haws v. Victoria Copper Min. Co., 160 U. S. 303, 16 S. Ct. 282, 40 L. ed. 436.

Failure to file bill of exceptions was conclusively presumed to have been the ground of refusing a motion for new trial, where a motion to refuse was made and sustained upon this ground. Emery v. Emery, 54 Iowa 106, 6 N. W. 152.

If there is any evidence to support the verdict in reviewing a refusal of a new trial, the facts shown thereby will be presumed to have been established; and if such facts reasonably tend to support the verdict the order is presumed to be right. Turner v. Huggins, 14 Ark. 21; Beach v. Zimmerman, 106 Ind. 495, 7 N. E. 237; Gist v. Higgins, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 303.

In the absence of the evidence, or of specific exception that there was a failure of evidence to support the judgment, the presumption of a correct refusal of a new trial upon that ground becomes conclusive. Reed v. Moore, 25 N. C. 310.

Overruling motion upon reduction of verdict.— In the absence of the evidence and the instructions, it was presumed that an order, directing plaintiff to reduce his verdict and thereupon overruling a motion for new trial, was authorized by reason of error in the instructions as to certain items not recoverable, the amount of which was ascertainable from the proof. Johnson v. Johnson, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 890, 47 S. W. 883. And where the order of remittitur and setting aside an order for a new trial recited an agreement of the parties, it was presumed to have been in accordance with such agreement. Goss v. Pilgrim, 28 Tex. 263.

Statement that there was no evidence, contained in the motion for a new trial, was presumed by the appellate court to be not true where the trial court overruled the motion, which was "some evidence that the statement was not true," and the decision purported to have been rendered upon "the evidence in the cause, and the arguments of counsel therein." Tilton v. Knapp, 14 Kan. 310.

That the evidence was before the trial court, upon the overruling of a motion for a new trial, based on the insufficiency of the evidence, may be presumed. Richardson v. Eureka, 96 Cal. 443, 31 Pac. 458; Morris v. Angle, 42 Cal. 236.

Upon a complete record of the evidence it cannot be presumed that there was other evidence not in the record to sustain the verdict and an order refusing a new trial. Anglin v. Bottom, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 1.

Where a plain proposition of law is alone presented, there is no especial presumption in favor of a refusal to grant a new trial upon such proposition. Byington v. Woodward, 9 Iowa 360.

74. Error not clearly specified in the motion will not be supplied in the appellate court by presumption or intendment. Mazkewitz v. Pimentel, 83 Cal. 450, 23 Pac. 527; Pico v. Cohn, 67 Cal. 258, 7 Pac. 680; Hoey v. Hoey, 36 Conn. 386.

Motion may be presumed not made where the only motion in the record is one entitled in a cause other than that on appeal (Giles v. Austin, 54 Kan. 616, 38 Pac. 811); or where none affirmatively appears (Evenson v. Webster, 3 S. D. 382, 53 N. W. 747, 44 Am. St.

or by a proper notice of a motion for new trial[75] filed within the time prescribed therefor.[76]

g. Rendition of Judgment — (1) In General. The existence of a judgment[77] raises the presumption (conclusive if not clearly rebutted) that the rendition was at a time when the judgment could legally be rendered;[78] also, that it

Rep. 802); otherwise than by an order overruling it, dated after judgment (Guetzkow v. Smith, 105 Wis. 94, 80 N. W. 1109); but, where no question of the existence of the motion is made, failure to set it out in the abstract has been held not to raise the presumption that no motion was made (Updyke v. Wheeler, 37 Mo. App. 680); and the recital of a motion in the bill of exceptions or decree has been held sufficient (Mesker v. Cutler, 51 Mo. App. 341; Scott v. Rowland, 82 Va. 484, 4 S. E. 595).

Motion may be presumed not in writing, where the record is silent upon the matter, for the purpose of upholding a refusal. Douglass v. Insley, 34 Kan. 604, 9 Pac. 475; Lucas v. Sturr, 21 Kan. 480; Rogers v. Bonnett, 4 Okla. 90, 46 Pac. 599.

Exclusion of witnesses on the hearing of a motion for a new trial will be presumed to have been proper, in the absence of a showing that they were competent and their testimony material (Davis v. Melvin, Smith (Ind.) 60); and the testimony of witnesses, for the exclusion of which a continuance on account of their absence was refused, will be presumed immaterial where the complaining party was accorded an opportunity to take the testimony of the witnesses for use at the hearing of a motion for new trial, and failed to do so (Wait v. Krewson, 59 N. J. L. 71, 35 Atl. 742).

75. Striking out notice of motion will be presumed correct in the absence of a contrary showing, and, if necessary, to have been done upon consent. Wilson v. Dougherty, 45 Cal. 34.

76. An affirmative showing that the motion was filed in time is necessary, else the presumption may follow that a refusal of a new trial was upon that ground, if necessary to sustain the refusal. Deford v. Orvis, 52 Kan. 432, 34 Pac. 1044; Eskridge v. Lewis, 51 Kan. 376, 32 Pac. 1104; Burtiss v. La Belle Wagon Co., 45 Kan. 413, 25 Pac. 852; Mills v. Vickers, 6 Kan. App. 884, 50 Pac. 976; Eldorado v. Drapeere, 5 Kan. App. 631, 47 Pac. 545; Taylor v. Genail, 10 Mo. App. 250; State v. Carondelet Sav. Bank, 6 Mo. App. 582; Masters v. Winfield, 7 Okla. 487, 54 Pac. 707. Contra, Augusta R. Co. v. Andrews, 89 Ga. 653, 16 S. E. 203.

Permission to file motion out of time will be presumed to have been for sufficient reasons, in the absence of the reasons. Fordyce v. Hardin, 54 Ark. 554, 16 S. W. 576. In the absence of objection, an extension of the time for filing motion may be presumed (Patrick v. Morse, 64 Cal. 462, 2 Pac. 49), or that the objection was waived (Augusta R. Co. v. Andrews, 89 Ga. 653, 16 S. E. 203), or that the time was extended by consent (Churchill v. Flournoy, 127 Cal. 355, 59 Pac. 791). Contra, that consent must be affirmatively shown. Hallenbeck v. Garst, 96 Iowa 509, 65 N. W. 417.

That no special reasons exist for allowing a motion beyond time will be presumed where the motion is shown to have been filed beyond time and the trial court declines to consider it for that reason, and no special reasons, taking the case out of the general rule, appear. Anderson v. Sherwood, 9 N. Y. St. 636.

The entertaining of a motion may raise the presumption that it was filed within time, where the time is not shown, in order to support an order granting a new trial. Cottle v. Leitch, 43 Cal. 320; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Davis, 10 Ind. App. 342, 37 N. E. 1069; Wichita, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson, 47 Kan. 351, 27 Pac. 980.

Where the time limit is the end of a term, and there is nothing to show when the term ended, and the motion has not been denied because filed out of time, it will be presumed to have been in time. Topeka Bank v. Miller, 59 Kan. 743, 54 Pac. 1070 [affirming 7 Kan. App. 55, 51 Pac. 964].

77. In North Carolina the entry of a judgment will be presumed where no judgment appeared to have been formally entered upon a verdict, the judgment presumed being such as the verdict, connected with the pleadings, would authorize. Barnard v. Etheridge, 15 N. C. 295.

78. Presumption of legal time of rendition. — That the rendition was before midnight of Saturday. Bishop v. Carter, 29 Iowa 165. That the cause was legally continued up to the time of judgment. Clemens v. Judson, Minor (Ala.) 395. That a case was taken under advisement until decision at a succeeding term. Brown v. Boles, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 52 S. W. 120; but compare Hann v. Field, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 376. That the judgment was rendered in term-time. Minick v. Minick, 49 Nebr. 89, 68 N. W. 374. That an entry in vacation was pursuant to a rendition in term. Parker v. Slaughter, 23 Iowa 125. That the rendition was before adjournment. Weaver v. Cooledge, 15 Iowa 244. That the judgment of a justice of the peace was within the prescribed time after submission, though the contrary is indicated by unauthenticated words under his signature to the transcript. Benson v. Gutterman, 33 Misc. (N. Y.) 753, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 89. That the judgment was announced in the presence of counsel. Burden v. Stein, 25 Ala. 455. That a justice of the peace entered judgment upon receiving the verdict, where the trial was had the day before. Beattie v. Qua, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 132.

was duly signed by the judge;[79] that it was in the form which would legally be sufficient in the particular action,[80] for the correct amount,[81] against or in favor of the proper parties,[82] and correctly describes the property involved;[83] that every essential fact prerequisite to its rendition existed;[84] that, in its rendition and

80. In the absence of objection to the form of a judgment or decree, it appearing on its face to be such as might have been rendered upon any reasonable view of the case, it will be presumed to be in the proper form according to the adjudication intended. J. V. Farwell Co. v. Zenor, 100 Iowa 640, 65 N. W. 317, 69 N. W. 1030; Johnson v. Mantz, 69 Iowa 710, 27 N. W. 467; Hall v. Law, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 135.

Judgment for damages in replevin may be presumed to have been based upon a showing that the property in controversy could not be returned. Brown v. Johnson, 45 Cal. 76.

82. Designation of parties in a judgment may be presumed correct. Thus, it has been presumed, in order to uphold a judgment, that a party has no other christian name than that by which he is designated. Fewlass v. Abbott, 28 Mich. 270; Scarborough v. Myrick, 47 Nebr. 794, 66 N. W. 867.

Consent to dismissal of some of defendants will be presumed, in the absence from the record of any showing of an objection by the other defendants, in a case where such consent alone could authorize the dismissal. Parker v. Altschul, 60 Cal. 380.

Slight variance between the judgment and the pleadings in the designation of a party does not rebut this presumption — as where the middle initial is different (Chandler v. Scherer, 32 Tex. 573); or where a designation in the pleadings "as guardian" is omitted from the judgment (Law v. Fletcher, 84 Ill. 45). In Morford v. Cook, 24 Pa. St. 92, the judgment was reversed upon a plea of death before impetration of the writ, the record showing a judgment for one as executor of the estate of his father, the father having the same name and dying four years before the action, brought by his son in the same name, but not as executor. Thereafter the judgment plaintiff was substituted "as executor," upon a suggestion of death, and from this fact it was presumed that he was not identical with the original plaintiff.

Time of the death of plaintiff not appearing affirmatively, it will be presumed that it occurred after judgment, where no substitution was made before judgment, though the representatives of plaintiff appeared on appeal. Rundles v. Jones, 3 Ind. 35.

83. A description of the property which coincides with the pleadings will be presumed correct, in the absence of a bill of exceptions (Carpy v. Dowdell, 131 Cal. 495, 63 Pac. 778), and, where the judgment included a bond not mentioned in the complaint, in the absence of specific objection, it was presumed that this was done by consent of all parties (Oliphant v. Burns, 146 N. Y. 218, 40 N. E. 980, 66 N. Y. St. 594). In case of doubt, it may be presumed that premises awarded are embraced in the description given in the complaint. Morgan v. Eggers, 127 U. S. 63, 8 S. Ct. 1041, 32 L. ed. 56. A discrepancy between the description in a judgment and a deed in the record will, in the absence of the evidence, be presumed to have been reconciled thereby. Bayha v. Kessler, 79 Mo. 555. In the absence of an exhibit referred to in the petition for recovery of land, it may be presumed that the judgment description was taken therefrom. DeHaven v. DeHaven, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 663, 47 S. W. 597 [affirming (Ky. 1898) 46 S. W. 215].

84. Prerequisite facts presumed.—The disposal of a motion for new trial, though an entry of final judgment was made in the journal on the date of the verdict, three months before disposition of the motion, this being presumed a mistake of the clerk. Heiskell v. Rollins, 81 Md. 397, 32 Atl. 249. The setting aside a default against a defendant in whose favor judgment is rendered. Von Schmidt v. Von Schmidt, 104 Cal. 547, 38 Pac. 361; Pim v. St. Louis, 122 Mo. 654, 27 S. W. 525. The granting of an application to substitute the judgment plaintiff for the original plaintiff. Virgin v. Brubaker, 4 Nev. 31. The reinstatement of the judgment plaintiff's case, which had been dismissed. Mason v. Tiffany, 45 Ill. 392; Bloomfield R. Co. v. Burress, 82 Ind. 83. The filing of a declaration before judgment in accordance with an order therefor upon the setting aside of a nonsuit. Smith v. Robinson, 11 Ala. 270. The waiver of a special plea not shown to have been decided. Turner v. Clark, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 606, 46 S. W. 381. The entry of a nolle prosequi before judgment, the transcript in the case showing such entry after judgment was presumed a mere clerical informality. Love v. Howell, 20 N. C. 54. The abandonment of a motion to restore possession claimed to have been delivered under a habere facias possessionem pending a former appeal. Scott v. Means, etc., Iron Co., 13 Ky. L. Rep. 911, 18 S. W. 1012, 19 S. W. 189.

Presumptions of prerequisite facts not in-entry, all statutory requirements have been complied with;[85] and that a nunc pro tunc entry thereof was warranted by the fact of omission to enter at the time when the judgment was actually rendered.[86]

(II) AMENDING OR VACATING JUDGMENT. The amendment or vacation of a judgment will, in the absence of a clear showing to the contrary, be presumed to have been regular[87] and upon sufficient reasons;[88] and the same presumption attends a failure or refusal to amend or vacate a judgment upon application.[89]

(III) JUDGMENT BY DEFAULT. In support of a judgment by default, unless the record shows the contrary, it will be presumed that sufficient proof of statutory notice to defendant was made;[90] that defendant was actually in default at

In the absence of findings made or requested from the evidence upon which a judgment was vacated, it will be presumed that complainant's objection is that, taking that view of the evidence most favorable to his adversary, the vacation was unwarranted; and if any reasonable view of the evidence will support the vacation it will be presumed correct. Holden v. Purefoy, 108 N. C. 163, 12 S. E. 848.

A conditional vacation (upon payment of costs) may be presumed to have become unconditional, so as to authorize an order absolute, where there is no indication that the condition was not fulfilled. Furman v. Furman, 9 N. Y. App. Div. 94, 41 N. Y. Suppl. 76.

89. In the absence of the grounds of a motion to vacate from which it may be seen that statutory grounds were alleged, the motion to vacate must be presumed to have been rightly denied. McIntyre's Will Case, 38 Wis. 318.

In the absence of the facts relied on by a party who complains of a refusal to amend a judgment, it must be presumed that the facts did not warrant the amendment requested. Hosea v. Talbert, 65 Ala. 173.

the time of the entry of default;[91] that everything prerequisite to the taking of a default had been done;[92] and that proof of plaintiff's claim, sufficient to warrant the judgment, was made.[93] In the absence of a plain abuse of discretion, the setting aside or refusal to set aside a default will be presumed to have been warranted,[94] as well, also, as a refusal to enter a default.[95]

(IV) JUDGMENT BY CONFESSION. The requisite authority to confess a judgment will be presumed to have been shown unless the record plainly shows that it was not,[96] it being required by statute to be made a part of the

91. In the absence of the court rules, the presumption in favor of a certificate of the trial court that the time to answer had expired under the rules is conclusive. Calwell v. Boyer, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 136; Schoenpflug v. Ketcham, (Tenn. Ch. 1898) 52 S. W. 666. It will also be presumed that the rules were observed in setting the case for trial without special notice to defendant. Union Brewing Co. v. Cooper, 15 Colo. App. 65, 60 Pac. 946.

In the absence of the pleadings, a finding that defendant had failed to plead will be presumed to have been made in view of all the pleadings which were before the trial court, and that a failure to plead was fully shown. Utley v. Cameron, 87 Ill. App. 71.

Where the record shows an answer or plea filed, it may be presumed either that the pleading was withdrawn or that defendant failed to bring it to the attention of the court (Pierson v. Burney, 15 Tex. 272); or that the issues thus raised were properly disposed of (Woolley v. Sullivan, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 43 S. W. 919). Contra, that default in such case was entered through inadvertence. Miller v. Hoc, 1 Fla. 221. Conditions, not clearly unreasonable, which are imposed as a prerequisite to the setting aside of a default, will be presumed to be just. Lichtenberger v. Worm, 41 Nebr. 856, 60 N. W. 93.

In the absence of the showing for the opening of a default, it must be presumed that the action of the court thereon was correct. Wright v. Griffey, 146 Ill. 394, 34 N. E. 941; Peterson v. Kittredge, 65 Miss. 33, 3 So. 65, 5 So. 824.

In the absence of objection for want of notice of a hearing of an application to open a default, the party's counsel being present at the hearing, sufficient notice will be presumed. Ballard v. Whitlock, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 235.

That ground which will support the order will be presumed to have been the one acted on, where several grounds for opening a default were alleged, some of which were insufficient, and the application was granted generally. Dinsmore v. Adams, 66 N. Y. 618.

95. Refusal to enter default presumed correct, in the absence of the grounds of the motion therefor (Plummer v. Weil, 15 Wash. 427, 46 Pac. 648), or the grounds of the refusal (Round v. State, 14 Ind. 493; Mason v. McLean, 6 Wash. 31, 32 Pac. 1006).

record;[97] and it may, also, be presumed that the judgment was rendered upon proper and sufficient evidence.[98]

(v) Judgment For Costs. The amount of costs taxed will be presumed correct and legal if the record does not positively show the contrary,[99] except in case of a retaxation, when the same presumption obtains in favor of the amount as retaxed,[1] and also in favor of the regularity of the proceeding for that purpose.[2] Similarly, it will be presumed that the costs were duly awarded against the proper party, and upon sufficient grounds.[3]

An ambiguous power of attorney may be presumed to have been explained by oral evidence, where the judgment by confession is made in open court. Links v. Mayer, 22 Ill. App. 489; Conklin v. Finnell, 12 Ind. 394.

A conditional power of attorney to confess judgment may, in the absence of a contrary showing, be presumed to have been shown to be unconditional by fulfilment of the condition. Rapley v. Price, 9 Ark. 428.

Authority of a partner to bind his copartners by a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, executed in the firm-name, or that the copartners adopted the warrant, may be presumed to have been shown. Bissell v. Carville, 6 Ala. 503.

97. In Illinois, when judgment has been confessed in open court, the authority will be presumed, but when it has been confessed in vacation the authority must be "preserved in the record." Iglehart v. Chicago M. & F. Ins. Co., 35 Ill. 514.

98. Boyles v. Chytraus, 175 Ill. 370, 51 N. E. 563; Schuler v. Hogan, 168 Ill. 369, 48 N. E. 195; Fish v. Glover, 154 Ill. 86, 39 N. E. 1081 [affirming 51 Ill. The amount of attorney's fees will be presumed to be reasonable and legal unless the contrary appears from the amount, or otherwise. Matter of Kasson, 119 Cal. 489, 51 Pac. 706; Trummer v. Konrad, 32 Oreg. 54, 51 Pac. 447.

1. England v. Roundtree, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 2003, 44 S. W. 951; State v. Hollenbeck, 68 Mo. App. 366; Watkins v. Atwell, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 193, 50 S. W. 1047.

2. Notice of the hearing will be presumed sufficient where the party complaining appeared and made no objection to the sufficiency of the notice. Brennan v. State Bank, 10 Colo. App. 368, 50 Pac. 1076.

3. Costs dependent upon amount of claim. —Where a statute required a plaintiff to pay costs of suit in a superior court where the "sum due or demanded," to be determined by the evidence, did not exceed a certain sum, and a judgment for a less sum with costs was awarded, in the absence of the evidence it was presumed that the amount was reduced by special matters of defense under the general issue, though it was certified that no evidence was given under a plea of set-off. Dayton v. Hall, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 556. To similar effect, where the rule of costs depended upon the amount recovered, see Minich v. Minich, 33 Pa. St. 378; Power v. Rockwell, 39 Wis. 585.

Costs, dependent upon special circumstances, will be presumed to have been awarded in view of such circumstances, where the record thereupon is lacking or incomplete. Hunt v. Ohmertz, 15 Colo. 447, 24 Pac. 1047; Welch v. Wallace, 8 Ill. 490; Judah v. Stagg, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 238.

Costs dependent upon an increase of judgment on appeal.— Where the legality of a judgment for costs in favor of appellant in an intermediate court, such appellant having obtained a judgment in the first court for a lesser sum, depends upon his being adjudged to recover a larger sum on appeal, exclusive of interest, to sustain the judgment for costs, it will be presumed, in the absence of a contrary showing, that a small increase of the principal judgment was not merely on account of interest. Crandall v. Colley, (Mass. 1901) 59 N. E. 844.

An apportionment of costs between the parties will be presumed correct where it appears that plaintiff's claim was reduced by counter-claim; and though the amount thus apportioned in favor of defendant, by comparison with the minimum sum which must have been allowed as a counter-claim, appeared to be excessive, yet where the maximum which might have been allowed would have been more than sufficient to justify the apportionment, in the absence of a clear

h. Orders After Judgment. Orders made after judgment, when questioned on appeal, are favored by rebuttable presumptions similar to those which are indulged to support the judgment proper — such as relate to executions,[4] supplementary proceedings,[5] writs of assistance,[6] and execution sales.[7]

F. Discretion of Lower Court — 1. Power to Review — a. In General. In the absence of a clear abuse of discretion, to the complaining party's prejudice, matters purely within the discretion of the trial court are not reviewable on appeal.[8] showing that more than the minimum was not allowed, it was presumed that the facts justified the judgment. Minnesota Stoneware Co. v. Knapp, 75 Iowa 561, 39 N. W. 893.

Costs of receivership.— In the absence of the evidence it was presumed that the facts thereby disclosed warranted a taxation of the costs of a receivership against the defeated party. Highley v. Deane, 168 Ill. 266, 48 N. E. 50.

An agreement to award against the successful party the costs of the suit cannot be presumed in the absence of anything in the record to show it. Jones v. Johnston, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 599.

4. Issuance of execution.— Where a bond is required as a condition to the issuance of an execution in attachment, it may be presumed that the execution did not issue until the bond was given. Rust v. Reives, 24 Ark. 359.

In scire facias against sureties, where the proceedings are not in the record, it will be presumed that a sufficient showing was not made by them why execution should not issue. Gutheil Suburban Invest. Co. v. Fahey, 12 Colo. App. 487, 55 Pac. 946.

Quashing execution.— The filing of a transcript of the judgment may be presumed, in support of the power to make an order quashing an execution issued to the sheriff on a district-court judgment, where otherwise the execution would have been to a constable, and the court in such case would have been without jurisdiction. Jackson v. Smith, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 201.

Refusal to quash execution, in the absence of an exception or plain error on the transcript, will be presumed correct. Morrel v. Barner, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 10.

Staying execution.— In the absence of the reasons upon which an execution was stayed, the presumption is that the reasons were sufficient. Cake v. Cake, 192 Pa. St. 550, 44 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 552, 43 Atl. 971.

Dismissal of an affidavit of illegality upon motion of the judgment plaintiff, so that execution could issue, may be presumed to have been done upon a hearing wherein the questions presented in the affidavit were correctly determined from proper evidence. Houstoun v. Bradford, 35 Fla. 490, 17 So. 664.

In favor of the moving affidavit.— Every reasonable presumption will be indulged to support an order granting a motion to set aside execution where it appears that no papers were read in opposition thereto. Jackson v. Smith, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 201, 25 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 476.

5. The return of execution necessary to supplementary proceedings in aid of execution may be presumed from the fact of an order. Bean v. Tonnelle, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 353.

6. Granting writ of assistance.— Demand upon the husband alone being shown in a hearing on application for a writ of assistance against a husband and wife, it may be presumed in support of the writ that the wife appeared to have no such interest as required a demand on her. California Mortg., etc., Bank v. Graves, (Cal. 1900) 62 Pac. 259.

In the absence of the evidence upon which a writ of assistance was ordered, it will be presumed to have been proper. Daggs v. Wilson, (Ariz. 1899) 59 Pac. 150.

Upon a complete record, an order instructing the clerk to withhold, without apparent reason, a habere facias possessionem after judgment for recovery of land, cannot be presumed to have been for sufficient reasons. Cole v. Dameron, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 314.

7. Granting an order of seizure and sale, upon evidence of special circumstances, will, in the absence of such evidence, be presumed to be right. Bloom v. Martin, 20 La. Ann. 256.

That the officer did his duty, in conducting a sale of land after foreclosure as a whole, will be presumed, in order to sustain a confirmation of the sale, where there is no record showing that the land consisted of separate tracts. Michigan Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Richter, 58 Nebr. 463, 78 N. W. 932.

The manner of sale will be presumed to have been correct and according to the order thereof, in the absence of a specific objection thereto. Hardin v. Bond, (Ky. 1900) 56 S. W. 676.

A motion to set aside an execution sale may be presumed from the fact that the sale was set aside. White-Crow v. White-Wing, 3 Kan. 276.

Adequate grounds for setting aside sale will be presumed to have existed where the affidavits presenting such grounds are not in the record. Newland v. Gaines, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 720.

The abandonment of a sale, not of exceptions to a report thereof, will be presumed, where no further action was taken after a report showing failure to comply with the decree of sale, which was promptly met by exceptions. Alsobrook v. Eggleston, 69 Miss. 833, 13 So. 850.

Failure to determine a homestead claim, preliminary to an order of sale, rebuts the presumption that such order was justified. Bunch v. Keith, 64 Ark. 654, 44 S. W. 452.

8. Alabama.— Gayle v. Bancroft, 22 Ala. 316.

Arizona.—Solomon v. Norton, (Ariz. 1886) 11 Pac. 108.

b. Refusal to Exercise Discretion. The refusal of a trial court to exercise a discretion vested in it, such refusal being based on the ground of a want of power, is reviewable on appeal;[9] but where it appears that, had the trial court exercised its discretion and granted a motion, it would not have been a proper exercise of such discretion, its action will not be reversed on appeal.[10]

c. Burden of Showing Abuse of Discretion. It will be presumed, on appeal, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that the discretionary powers of the lower court have been exercised without abuse. The burden of showing abuse is upon the party complaining.[11]

2. Questions Reviewable — a. Parties and Process. Amendments as to the parties or process are largely within the discretion of the lower court, and, consequently, reviewable only for abuse.[12]

b. Pleadings — (I) Amendment. The action of the trial court in amending, or refusing to amend, the pleadings is a matter within its sound discretion, and, in the absence of a clear abuse thereof, not reviewable on appeal;[13] but where trial court to allow or deny a motion to withdraw a pleading and substitute another.[18]

c. Provisional Remedies — (I) ARREST AND BAIL. The discretion of the trial court upon an application to discharge, change, or reduce the amount of bail will only be interfered with on a showing of abuse.[19]

(II) ATTACHMENTS. An application to dissolve an attachment is often addressed to the discretion of the trial court, and, in such cases, its action thereon will only be disturbed in the appellate court on a showing of an abuse of this discretion.[20]

(III) DISCOVERY. The granting or denying of an order for discovery is within the discretion of the trial court, and not reviewable on appeal save in a case of patent abuse of discretion.[21]

(IV) INJUNCTIONS. In instances where the granting, refusing to grant, dissolving, or refusing to dissolve, an injunction is discretionary and not matter of right, the action of the court will not, in the absence of manifest abuse, be reviewed on appeal.[22]

nesses,[45] the recall and reëxamination of a witness,[46] and the determination with regard to the competency of expert witnesses.[47]

(XIII) SEVERANCE. A statute providing that a separate trial between plaintiff and any one or all of several defendants may be allowed by the court wherever justice will thereby be promoted is permissive, and not mandatory. Accordingly, the action of the trial court in granting or refusing a severance will not be reviewed unless there is an abuse of discretion.[48]

(XIV) SUBMISSION OF ISSUES OR QUESTIONS TO JURY—(A) Interrogatories or Special Verdicts. It is within the sound judicial discretion of the trial judge to submit to, or withhold from, a jury interrogatories or questions for special findings, and his rulings in that regard will not be disturbed unless a clear case of abuse of discretion appears.[49]

(II) EXTRA ALLOWANCE. The granting of extra allowances in a cause, where permissible, is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial court, and only subject to review in case of patent abuse.[58]

(III) LIMITATION, DIVISION, OR APPORTIONMENT. The limitation, division, or apportionment of costs by the trial court will only be interfered with, on appeal, where there is an apparent abuse of discretion.[59]

(IV) SUITS IN EQUITY. The matter of costs and allowances in an equity case is peculiarly within the discretion of the chancellor, and his decision will only be disturbed for a plain abuse of discretion.[60]

1. New Trial or Rehearing. Unless manifest abuse is shown, an appellate court will not interfere with the discretionary power of the trial court in granting or refusing to grant a new trial or rehearing.[61] If, however, the record shows

Security for costs.— The question as to whether a plaintiff should be required to give security for costs is a matter for the sound discretion of the trial court, and in the absence of an abuse of such discretion the appellate court will not interfere.

under the code, the appellate court tries the whole cause anew on appeal — examines into the facts as well as the law, and determines the sufficiency of the facts to support the findings[68] — and in this connection the distinction is to be observed between the proper office of a writ of error — to present matters of law only — and that of an appeal — to take up the whole case for review on the law and the facts.[69] The extent of review, however, often depends upon the various statutory provisions regulating the general powers and duties of appellate courts and appellate proceedings, as well as the consideration of the inherent nature of the appellate tribunal as distinguished from that of the trial court, where greater opportunities are had for weighing the evidence,[70] and appellate courts are authorized and charged with the duty of examining the evidence and findings, upon proper exceptions reserved.[71]

In this state the jurisdiction of the court of last resort is restricted to a review of questions of law under the constitution and code provisions in pursuance thereof, though the court of intermediate appellate jurisdiction, from which the cause is removed to the court of last resort, examines the evidence for the purpose of ascertaining that the finding or verdict has evidence to support it or that the finding or verdict is not palpably against the weight and sufficiency of the evidence. 2. Legal Conclusions and Inferences From Facts. A finding of fact is not conclusive as to instructions and definitions under which it is made.[72] The reviewing court will, ordinarily, pass upon questions of fact to the extent of determining whether such facts amount, in law, to the ultimate legal condition necessary to support the particular cause of action or defense. Whether there is any evidence is thus considered to be a question of law,[73] and where the question is whether, on the undisputed evidence or the facts found, certain legal results follow, the judgment thereon is reviewable.[74] Where the judgment of the lower court has no

People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 70, 22 Pac. 474, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22. Mixed questions of law and fact may be reviewed. Howland v. Marshall, 127 N. C. 427, 37 S. E. 462. See also Sullivan v. Latimer, 38 S. C. 158, 17 S. E. 701. But, on the other hand, if the trial court adopts correct general principles of law, and the error, if any, consists in ascertaining from the whole mass of evidence the precise character of the conduct of the parties under the particular circumstances of the case, and the reviewing court cannot say whether the error was in the inference of fact from the testimony or in the inference of law from the facts as they lay evidence whatever to support it, the question then is one of law as distinguished from the question of fact arising upon the weight and sufficiency of competent evidence actually supporting the judgment.[75]

3. Verdicts — a. Conclusiveness in General. Findings of fact by a jury are not subject to review, but are conclusive on the appellate court, whose jurisdiction is confined to a review of questions of law arising from the record.[76] In some jurisdictions, appellate courts, in a measure, not only examine the evidence, but determine upon its weight and sufficiency (the duty of passing upon the facts as such being confined to certain courts of intermediate appellate jurisdiction in several of the states), and their power to reverse on the facts is not confined to cases where there is no evidence to support the verdict.[77]

b. Extent of Review — (i) Where There Is Evidence in Support. As a general rule, if there is any evidence which, standing alone or considered apart from opposing evidence,[78] is, if believed by the jury, legally sufficient, or might in the mind of the trial court, the finding cannot be disturbed. Murphy v. Derby St. R. Co., (Conn. 1900) 47 Atl. 120; Fox v. Kinney, 72 Conn. 404, 44 Atl. 745.

tions where they are not precluded from looking into the evidence as well as in those where the slightest evidence in support of the verdict precludes further inquiry.[81] Inferences of fact are to be deduced by the jury, and, whenever there is evidence from which an existence of facts sufficient to support a verdict might have been inferred, the verdict will not be disturbed.[82]

(II) VERDICT UNSUPPORTED BY EVIDENCE. On the other hand, a judgment based on a verdict which is altogether unsupported by evidence, or against the uncontradicted evidence and every legitimate inference deducible therefrom, will be reversed,[83] as also where the appellate court is confined to a review of questions of law. Findings of fact by a verdict are conclusive, unless entirely unsupported, and the objection is thus properly raised as a question of law.[84] For the Apparent want of affirmative proof.— The principle that a court may reverse because there is no evidence to support the verdict where the testimony is regarded by the appellate court as entirely insufficient, cannot be invoked except where there is an apparent want of affirmative proof on which the verdict can rest, and where judgment entered on the verdict has worked palpable injustice. Denver Dry-Goods Co. v. Martine, 12 Colo. App. 299, 55 Pac. 743.

Burden of proof.— Notwithstanding the jury are to draw all legitimate inferences from the evidence, facts necessary to a right of recovery must be shown by evidence having at least a preponderating influence, and a verdict resting merely on conjecture or an inference which may possibly be true will be set aside. sions,[88] or where the preponderance is such as to indicate a mistake, or that the verdict was rendered under a misapprehension of the legal effect of the evidence, or material facts are mistakenly disregarded — the verdict will be set aside.[89] And, where the verdict is manifestly against the evidence, the judgment will be reversed notwithstanding the trial court had refused to set aside the verdict.[90] But, on the other hand, the verdict must be so clearly wrong and so manifestly against the weight of the evidence as to amount to a verdict upon failure of proof, or to raise a necessary inference that it was the result of passion or prejudice, and not of an intelligent or honest exercise by the jury of its proper and lawful functions. In such emergency, however, the verdict will be set aside.[91]

c. Approval by Trial Court. Ordinarily, if the judge before whom a case is tried is satisfied that the verdict is not warranted by the evidence, he should set it aside, upon proper motion,[92] and this must furnish the only remedy to one objecting to a verdict on the ground that it is not supported by sufficient evidence, where the appellate tribunal goes no further than to ascertain if, as a matter of law, the verdict is supported by any competent evidence.[93] But, on the other hand, the rule against interference with the verdict by the appellate court, when such verdict is based upon evidence, is applicable generally where the finding has been approved by the trial court.[94] And so, where the trial court has exer-

Sufficiency of approval.— Where it appears that the trial court, though of the opinion that the preponderance of the evidence was against the verdict, refuses to set it aside, cised its discretion in setting aside a verdict upon the ground that it is against the preponderance of the evidence, or is not warranted by the evidence, its action will not be reviewed[95] unless the evidence plainly and palpably supports the verdict, or for errors of law, or where there is no basis in the evidence upon which a verdict for the unsuccessful party could be permitted to stand.[96]

d. Successive Verdicts. As a general rule, after two or more successive and concurrent verdicts, the appellate court will be strongly disinclined to interfere with the last verdict, and the findings under such circumstances are usually accepted as final,[97] if the evidence is conflicting and there is any tending to support the verthe judgment will be reversed. Turner v. Turner, 85 Tenn. 387, 3 S. W. 121. So, where the trial court overrules a motion pro forma, without approving or disapproving the verdict, it is held that the appellate court will do what the trial court should have done. Leavenworth, etc., R. Co. v. Cook, 18 Kan. 261. And where the trial judge, in overruling a motion for a new trial, said that it "was reluctantly overruled," it was held that the judgment should be reversed. Georgia Cent R. Co. v. Harden, 113 Ga. 453, 38 S. E. 949. But compare Ferst v. Hall, 108 Ga. 792, 33 S. E. 951. But the mere fact that the trial judge doubted the correctness of the verdict upon overruling a motion for a new trial was held not to be a ground for reversal. Miller v. Dumon, (Wash. 1901) 64 Pac. 804. And the mere fact that the court, in overruling the motion for a new trial, did so "without expressing any opinion as to whether or not said verdict was in accordance with a clear preponderance of the testimony," does not indicate that the trial court was of the opinion that the preponderance of the testimony was against the verdict. dict, even though it may not be entirely satisfactory or such as would lead the appellate court to the same conclusion upon an original consideration,[98] unless it is plain that the verdict is founded upon evidence which does not tend to prove a material fact necessary to a recovery, or is in palpable disregard of the evidence.[99] But where the court examines the evidence to see if there is sufficient to support the verdict, it is no reason for refusing to disturb the verdict that, on previous trials, plaintiff had succeeded, if, in the case before the court, the evidence is insufficient.[1]

e. Verdicts in Equity. Under the chancery practice, error cannot be assigned on the trial of an issue out of chancery, but the case is decided upon the law and facts presented in the record, as if no issue had been submitted,[2] the verdict being merely advisory, binding neither upon the chancellor nor upon the appellate court; the same is true where issues of fact are tried by a jury in an equity suit,

2. Willis v. Willis, 9 Ala. 330; Timmons v. Garrison, 4 Humphr. (Tenn.) 147. The validity of a decree is not determined according to the legality or illegality of proceedings on the trial of a feigned issue, because the verdict may or may not have been the ground of the decree; a bill of exceptions cannot be taken on the trial of a feigned issue, or, if taken, can be used only on a motion for a new trial, made to the court below. in analogy to the practice upon a feigned issue.[3] In such cases the verdict is not regarded as a verdict in an action at law, but the court examines the evidence to determine if the decree is sufficiently supported.[4] On the other hand, the rule that the weight of evidence is the province of the court and jury, and that the appellate court will not interfere except where the verdict is the result of a blind disregard of the evidence, is much deferred to, even in equity trials,[5] and, when the verdict has been approved and the findings adopted by the presiding judge or chancellor, the decree will not be reversed unless it clearly appears to be erroneous.[6] In some jurisdictions a verdict in such cases is given the same force as a verdict of a properly instructed jury at law,[7] and, if the findings are not objected to by motion for a new trial, or set aside by the court, they become established facts, and cannot be questioned on appeal.[8] So, where, as under a code practice, all trials assume the features of trials at law, it has been held that the appellate court accepts the verdict of a jury as generally conclusive upon the facts.[9]

Sanford v. McCreedy, 28 Wis. 103.

14. See also infra, note 15.

In many of these cases the findings are taken to be conclusive, notwithstanding the court examines the evidence to see if they are supported. If they are supported the court refuses to interfere, but if not supported the result is the same as in those cases in which the court is precluded from examining the evidence except upon a proper showing that there is no legal evidence in the case to support the finding, thus raising a question of law. The reason of the rule against weighing the evidence in many of these cases depends in part upon the greater advantage possessed by the trial court by reason of having the witnesses personally before it. evidence.[22] Where, by statute, a particular appellate court is to review the facts as well as the law, it is held, on the one hand, that the rule that, upon conflicting testimony, the facts will not be reviewed does not apply, and that the court must examine the evidence and determine the facts.[23] But, on the other hand, it is generally held, in the cases in which the evidence is reviewed, that the conflict must be substantial to preclude interference; that the judgment will be reversed if the evidence clearly and overwhelmingly preponderates against it — otherwise not, the question not involving a mere consideration of the weight to be given legal and sufficient evidence on one side as opposed to legal and sufficient evidence on the other side.[24]

which the fact is to be inferred may raise a contrary inference.[26] But if the court refuses to find a material fact established by uncontradicted evidence, this is equivalent to finding that the fact was immaterial, and is reviewable as a question of law.[27]

d. Direction of Verdict, Dismissal, or Nonsuit. The action of the court in giving a peremptory instruction directing a verdict or entering a nonsuit, or refusing to adopt such course, is reviewable, as the appellate court may determine whether such action is justified by the legal inferences to be deduced from the undisputed evidence. The appellate court does not weigh the evidence, however, but is confined to a determination of the question whether there is any evidence fairly tending to support a conclusion opposed to that involved in the action of the trial court in withdrawing the questions of fact from the jury.[28] And as the trial court is the proper tribunal to determine questions of fact upon conflicting evidence, error cannot be assigned on its refusal to dismiss.[29]

e. Demurrer to Evidence. Where the evidence does not support plaintiff's cause it is error to overrule a demurrer to such evidence;[30] but if there is any competent evidence tending to support the issues made by the pleadings the overruling of such a demurrer is proper.[31]

f. On Motion, Incidental Questions, or Other Special Proceedings — (I) GENERALLY. When the determination of questions in the course of a cause, of motions, or other special proceedings depends upon facts laid before the court, its decision is, ordinarily, governed by the same rules relating to findings of fact, generally. to a judgment on verdicts or findings of a court. Hysell v. Sterling Coal, etc., Co., 46 W. Va. 158, 33 S. E. 95.

Subsequent finding in favor of demurrant. — But if, after overruling a demurrer to plaintiff's evidence (which is in effect that plaintiff has made out a prima facie case), the court subsequently finds for defendant, this is a reversal of its former ruling, without giving plaintiff a chance to ask for declarations at law, and the appellate court will consider the case as if the demurrer to the evidence had been sustained, and from that standpoint determine whether or not plaintiff's evidence showed a prima facie case. Utassy v. Giedinghagen, 132 Mo. 53, 33 S. W. 444. Kenney v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 79 Mo. App. 204.

In equity.— The rule that, if there is some evidence tending to support plaintiff's case, a demurrer to the evidence should not be sustained does not apply in a suit in equity, as far as concerns the extent of review on appeal, but, as a demurrer to evidence is not proper in equity, the sustaining of it amounts only to a judgment that plaintiff has not sustained the allegations of his petition, and the appellate court will examine the record and determine whether the judgment of the lower court was proper. (II) When Decree Affirmed or Reversed in General. When it appears that the decision is clearly erroneous, or the finding is against the preponderance of the evidence or is unsupported by the evidence, the decree will be reversed;[40] but, conversely, if the decree is supported by the evidence, or the court is satisfied that it is not against the weight of the evidence, it will not be disturbed.[41] If the evidence, on the whole, is sufficient the decree will be sustained, even if some allegations are not proved or the appellate court does not indorse some of the minor or incidental findings.[42]

(III) Review With Deference to Findings of Chancellor — (A) In General. But while it is held that the principle that a verdict will not be disturbed unless palpably against the weight of the evidence is not pertinent to the finding of a chancellor,[43] such findings, though not conclusive, are nevertheless held to be entitled to some consideration and weight, and, while the court will sift the whole evidence, it will do so with deference to the chancellor's decision, especially when the balance is nice.[44] So, where the evidence is such that reason-

Where the testimony is conflicting.— Notwithstanding the court is not precluded from interfering unless the finding or decree is without testimony or is overwhelmingly against the weight of the testimony, if there able minds might disagree as to the facts, or where the appellate court cannot repose with entire confidence and certainty upon a conclusion in favor of either party, the decision of the lower court will not be disturbed.[45]

(B) Same Rules Applied as in Other Actions — (1) IN GENERAL. On the other hand, the extent of the review seems no greater in many cases than in other actions, generally, where the findings of fact are by the court, without the aid of a jury. Thus, the chancellor's decision will not be disturbed where there is any sufficient evidence in support thereof and where the testimony is conflicting, he being regarded as the more appropriate trier of the facts in such cases,[46] and a is sufficient to sustain the chancellor's decision the appellate court is not bound to review the evidence. Wagener v. Kirven, 47 S. C. 347, 25 S. E. 130; Land Mortg. (2) When Witnesses Are Heard Orally. The rule of procedure against interference with the findings of fact made by the lower court is in many cases applied strictly where the trial of the suit proceeds upon oral examination of witnesses, upon the principle of the superior advantage of the trial court to weigh the evidence, as distinguished from cases where the evidence is contained in depositions.[49]

5. Findings by Master, Referee, Etc. — a. In General. Notwithstanding the findings of the court in an equity cause are received with due deference, findings of fact by a referee or master in equity are not conclusive on appeal,[50] as where the reference is — as under the old equity practice — merely to take and report evidence, without requiring the officer to report conclusions of law or fact.[51] And though the court may look into the evidence to ascertain if the equities of the bill have been sustained, or questions of fact may be reviewed upon exceptions taken,[52]

Consent reference.— Where the parties select and agree upon a special tribunal for a settlement of their controversy, as distinguished from a reference to a master or referee to take and report testimony, there is no reason why the decision of such tribunal with respect to the facts should be treated as of less weight than that of the court itself where the parties expressly waive a jury or the law declares that the appellate court shall act upon the findings of the subordinate court. Vermont.— Before the practice act in this state it was firmly settled that the master's report would be regarded as settling the facts which fell within his province to find, unless it affirmatively appeared that he found the facts without evidence or against the evidence. Rowan v. State Bank, 45 Vt. 160. By a statute regulating the practice in courts of chancery it was provided that controverted questions in chancery might be tried, as to matters of fact, by masters, etc., and that their report, unless good cause be shown, should, if accepted, be conclusive of all questions of fact in issue. Hathaway v. Hagan, 64 Vt. 135, 24 Atl. 131. Such findings are conclusive if there is any evidence tending to support them (Herrick v. McCawley, 72 Vt. 240, 47 Atl. 784), unless fraud or corruption is shown (Security Co. v. Bennington Monument Assoc., 70 Vt. 201, 40 Atl. 43). Findings of referee, where there is evidence to support them, are conclusive. Turner Falls Lumber Co. v. Burns, 71 Vt. 354, 45 Atl. 896; Grand Isle v. Kinney, 70 Vt. 381, 41 Atl. 130. It is not the province of the appellate court to deduce inferences of fact from an auditor's report. Abbott v. Camp, 23 Vt. 650.

Virginia.— Findings of commissioner. Browning v. Browning, (Va. 1900) 36 S. E. 525; Magarity v. Shipman, 82 Va. 784, 1 S. E. 109. Such findings must be palpably erroneous in order to justify interference. Kent v. Kent, (Va. 1899) 34 S. E. 32.

West Virginia.— Findings of commissioner. Dewing v. Hutton, (W. Va. 1900) 37 S. E. 670; Gillaspie v. James, (W. Va. 1900) 37 S. E. 598.

Wisconsin.— Finding of referee conclusive unless against clear preponderance of evidence. Wyss v. Grunert, 108 Wis. 38, 83 N. W. 1095; Zoesch v. Thielman, 105 Wis. 117, 80 N. W. 1107.

United States.— Findings of master will not be disturbed if based on evidence. Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 15 S. Ct. 237, 39 L. ed. 289; Kilgour v. Scott, 107 Fed. 32; Singleton v. Felton, 101 Fed. 526, 42 C. C. A. 57. Finding of commissioner in proceedings to limit liability after collision. The George L. Garlick, 107 Fed. 542.

Where evidence is doubtful.— Notwithstanding evidence in support of the findings of a referee in stating an account is unsatisfactory, the findings will not be disturbed where there is no reason for belief that the appellate court could reach a more satisfactory conclusion. Conboy v. Cunningham, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 75. See also Faga v. Hemphill, 86 Iowa 713, 48 N. W. 731, 52 N. W. 561, on the report of a trial judge, acting as commissioner of the supreme court, in restating an opinion.

erroneous conclusion of law drawn from the facts cannot be sustained.[59] And where the facts are undisputed or the findings are merely deductions from undisputed testimony, such findings are of no greater weight than conclusions of law.[60]

c. Where Court and Master or Referee Do Not Concur. Where the chancellor did not accept the master's results nor adopt his figures, but based the decision upon an entirely different theory from that acted upon by the master, there is no concurrence which will preclude the court from reviewing the evidence.[61] So, the rule that the findings of a master, referee, or the like, when approved by the court, will be regarded as in the nature of a verdict, has no application where the findings are overruled and disaffirmed by the lower court; but, in this event, the appellate court will determine for itself, from the facts disclosed by the record, whether they will sustain the conclusion of the master or referee, or that of the lower court.[62] But the court will, nevertheless, presume, prima facie, that the finding of the trial judge is correct,[63] and the findings of the court will not be reversed unless clearly opposed to the evidence.[64] On the other hand, if the findings of the master, upon testimony of witnesses heard by him, are fairly sustained by such evidence,[65] or unless such findings are manifestly opposed to the weight of the evidence, they will prevail over the judgment of the court as to the facts,

Ct. 599; Pearson v. Gillenwaters, 99 Tenn. 446, 42 S. W. 9, 63 Am. St. Rep. 844 (holding that the concurrence of the chancellor, in the mere estimate of the master in fixing a fee, being an opinion based upon the facts and record, is not binding as a finding of fact, and overruling the dictum in Hicks v. Porter, 90 Tenn. 1, 15 S. W. 1071, to the contrary); Sutton v. Sutton, (Tenn. Ch. 1900) 58 S. W. 891; Egan v. Yeaman, (Tenn. Ch. 1897) 46 S. W. 1012; Dillingham v. Moran, 101 Fed. 933, 42 C. C. A. 91.

Findings in effect unsupported.— Where the evidence is reviewed, though there may be some evidence, it may nevertheless be of such a nature as to amount to no evidence in support of the findings. Kennedy v. New York, etc., R. Co., 3 Duer (N. Y.) 69. See also Douglas v. Hastings First Nat. Bank, 17 Minn. 35; Townsend v. Peyser, 45 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 211.

Conclusion of fact reported as conclusion of law.— The report of a conclusion of fact as a conclusion of law is a mere irregularity and, on error, will not alter the conclusiveness of the finding. Ferris v. Quimby, 41 Mich. 202, 2 N. W. 9.

Inadmissible testimony.— A judgment will not be reversed because of erroneous admission of testimony when it is not possible, from the other undisputed evidence, to find against the judgment. McKeown v. Harvey, 40 Mich. 226.

Erroneous inference.— If the fact found by the auditor is a mere inference from other facts stated, and the officer has misapplied the law to the facts stated and thus erroneously inferred a fact to exist, the lower court may disregard the finding and make such inference as the law would warrant from the facts stated. Briggs v. Briggs, 46 Vt. 571. So, if the conclusion of fact is based in part upon facts, not proven, which may have influenced the referee's decision — as where he found facts from which he deduced an intent and some of the material facts found were unsupported or were against the evidence — it is held that as the judgment might have been influenced by facts not proven it cannot be sustained, though the deduction may be based upon other facts proven. Matthews v. Coe, 49 N. Y. 57.

61. Horne v. Green, (Tenn. Ch. 1897) 43 S. W. 774.

Master's findings not responsive.— So, the court of chancery appeals is not bound by a finding of the chancellor, upon overruling exceptions to the master's report, where the finding of the master is not responsive to the questions before him, as in such case there is no concurrent finding of fact such as is considered binding. Fowler v. Stone's River Nat. Bank, (Tenn. Ch. 1899) 57 S. W. 209.

63. Young v. Young, 27 S. C. 201, 3 S. E. 202. Although the action of the court in setting aside a referee's finding of fact may, on exception, be reviewed, yet, where there is a mass of contradictory evidence, the appellate court will presume that the lower court properly weighed it in setting aside the findings. McHenry v. Moore, 5 Cal. 90. And, where there is conflicting evidence as to particular items of account, the appellate court will not disturb a judgment differing, as to some items, from the report of the commissioner. Reed v. Phelps, (Ky. 1886) 2 S. W. 486.

64. McJunkin v. Bright, 108 Ga. 816, 34 S. E. 132; Medler v. Albuquerque Hotel, etc., Co., 6 N. M. 331, 28 Pac. 551.

65. Williams v. Concord Cong. Church, 193 Pa. St. 120, 44 Atl. 272; Bugbee's Appeal, 110 Pa. St. 331, 1 Atl. 273.

much in the nature of a verdict of a jury.[66] Where an action which is tried by a referee is set aside and a new trial granted, the appellate court will not interfere unless the evidence manifestly preponderates in favor of the referee's decision.[67]

6. Considerations Applicable to Findings Generally — a. Matters Concluded by Findings. A verdict or finding is taken, necessarily, to find in favor of every averment, and the truth of all facts essential to sustain it, and to negative such averments and allegations as are favorable to the unsuccessful party, so as to conclude all such controverted facts.[68] If, without objection, the court restricts the issues, a general verdict is likewise final as to all issues of fact;[69] but it is not conclusive as to a point upon which evidence is introduced, but upon which the party was not allowed to rely.[70]

b. Depositions or Other Documentary Evidence. Where all the evidence is in the form of depositions, affidavits, or other documentary evidence, it is considered, in many cases, that the conditions are not the same as where the trial court hears the oral testimony of the witnesses in its presence and can consider their manner, tone, and appearance; that, therefore, the appellate court, having the same means of weighing the testimony as those possessed by the court below, will do so.[71] On the other hand, while the court inquires into the correctness of the findings,[72]

67. Koktan v. Knight, 44 Minn. 304, 46 N. W. 354. So, where, by statute, the court has the power to amend or reverse the report of the referee and make findings of fact, findings made by the court, opposed to those made by the referee, are entitled to the same weight as if the trial were originally by the court and, if supported by evidence, will not be reviewed. If the evidence on the part of defendant is uncontradicted and of such character as to relieve him from liability, and the finding of the trial court is against him and the appellate court cannot see upon what theory of the evidence the finding of the trial court is based, and there is nothing to cast suspicion upon the credit of defendant's witnesses, the judgment will be reversed. Efron v. Wagner Palace Car Co., 59 Mo. App. 641.

the rule that the evidence will not be weighed is applied even where the evidence be contained in depositions, affidavits, etc., though sometimes it is considered as applicable to a more restricted extent than where the evidence is given orally in court.[73] Where some of the evidence is oral before the court, the rule that the verdict upon conflicting evidence will not be disturbed obtains, though some of the evidence is in the shape of ex parte affidavits and depositions.[74]

73. Arkansas.— Gaty v. Holcomb, 44 Ark. 216, holding that, while findings based upon evidence in this shape are not as conclusive as a verdict or the findings of fact by a court, founded upon oral testimony, if there is a conflict in the testimony which does not clearly preponderate against the findings, they will not be disturbed.

California.— The appellate court will no doubt look a little more closely into the evidence when it consists entirely of depositions or affidavits or notes of former testimony, but it cannot be taken as settled that in such case the rule as to conflicting evidence does not apply. Missouri.— Carroll v. Frank, 38 Mo. App. 167, holding that the appellate court will not weigh conflicting evidence, even if it is wholly by deposition, when there is evidence rebutting that of the party having the burden of proof, and the judgment is against him.

Oregon.— Liebe v. Nicolai, 30 Oreg. 364, 48 Pac. 172, holding that under the statute providing that the court may make another reference, or find the facts and determine the law for itself upon setting aside a report of a referee in an action at law, the court's findings of fact are entitled to every presumption that would arise if such findings were made by the court on the original trial, though the findings are based on the evidence reported by the referee.

South Carolina.— Where the testimony is conflicting and the circuit judge has, upon weighing it, reached a conclusion which can be supported by the testimony, the appellate court will not interfere. Visanska v. Workingmen's Bldg., etc., Assoc., 41 S. C. 546, 19 S. E. 202; Gary v. Burnett, 16 S. C. 632.

Texas.— The verdict of a jury or judgment of a court is not conclusive on the question of the credibility of witnesses where their testimony is by depositions; but, notwithstanding this, the appellate court has to defer to the judgment of the lower court in weighing the evidence, and if the finding is not against the preponderance of the evidence on the main issues, it will not be disturbed, even though the appellate court might have arrived at a different conclusion upon an original examination of the evidence. W. 125, where, on appeal from a judgment of the municipal court, the circuit court heard the cause upon the evidence which had been taken by a shorthand writer at the trial, and the rule was applied that the fact that different minds might arrive at opposite conclusions upon consideration of the evidence would furnish no ground for reversal.

See also supra, XVII, G, 4, f; and XVII, G, 4, g.

The reason of the rule that the appellate court will not examine the evidence, founded on the principle that the lower court has the advantage of observing the appearance and bearing of the witnesses, is not the only reason of the rule against weighing testimony on appeal, but the rule is also founded on an essential distinction between the trial and appellate courts, growing out of considerations of jurisdiction, the province of the trial court being to decide questions of fact and that of the appellate court to decide questions of law. Reay v. Butler, 95 Cal. 206, 30 Pac. 208. See also Crabtree v. Scheelky, 119 N. C. 56, 25 S. E. 707; Trull v. Rice, 92 N. C. 572.

Evidence of former trials.— Where the evidence given at former trials was read to the court who had heard a part of the testimony orally given at the former trials, such evidence is not documentary, so as to authorize a reëxamination of it on appeal. Olivieri v. Atkinson, 168 Mass. 28, 46 N. E. 422. See also Reay v. Butler, 95 Cal. 206, 30 Pac. 208, where only a part of the evidence on a second trial consisted of the reading of testimony

c. Credibility of Witnesses. The appellate court will not pass upon the credibility of witnesses, and, where there is evidence tending to prove a material issue, a verdict or finding will not be disturbed upon the ground that the evidence was false and fabricated, or where it depends upon the determination of the credibility of the witnesses.[75]

d. Number of Witnesses. A verdict or finding will not be disturbed on appeal though the testimony of a majority of the witnesses is against it — at least, if the circumstances do not render improbable the truth of the supporting testimony.[76]

Not reviewable.— On error from the supreme court of the United States, whether the order overruling the motion for a new trial, based upon the ground that the damages were excessive, was erroneous or not, it cannot be reviewed, as the power of that court is restricted to the determination of questions of law arising upon the record. Items allowed without evidence.— So, the fact that an item of expense of sickness is allowed, without evidence to sustain it, does not show the whole verdict to be influenced by prejudice. Ellsworth v. Fletcher, (Kan. 1898) 51 Pac. 904.

Appeal from order setting aside verdict.— But when the appellate court is asked to review the act of the trial court where, in the exercise of its discretionary power, it has seen fit to set aside the verdict on this ground, every intendment is indulged in the appellate court in support of the action of the court below. Harrison v. Sutter St. R. Co., 116 Cal. 156, 47 Pac. 1019.

84. Royal Ins. Co. v. Crowell, 77 Ill. App. 544; McGowan v. Giveen Mfg. Co., 54 N. Y. App. Div. 233, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 708. It is upon the ground that, as the trial court is in a better position to judge as to the propriety of the amount to be deducted from a verdict than the court of review, the latter will not disturb a verdict for excessiveness. McNulta v. Hendele, 92 Ill. App. 273.

Excessiveness alone does not show prejudice, and the mere fact that a remittitur is required is not of itself sufficient to fix such objection upon the final judgment so as to require the case to be submitted to another jury. McNulta v. Hendele, 92 Ill. App. 273; Conrad Seipp Brewing Co. v. Doody, 25 Ill. App. 305; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Hynes, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 34, 50 S. W. 624, holding that the rule, that a verdict will not be disturbed for excessiveness unless it is the result of passion or prejudice, is not abrogated by a statute giving authority to the courts of appeals in Texas to suggest a remittitur and to affirm a judgment for the balance.

Excessive after remittitur.— If, after the remittitur, the verdict is grossly excessive, it will be set aside. Cartwright v. Elliott, 45 Ill. App. 458.

Second trial.— Where the general term of the supreme court of New York reduced a verdict, and ordered the original verdict to be set aside unless plaintiff should stipulate to vice,[85] or unless the verdict is clearly and palpably wrong, as when entirely without evidence.[86]

(iv) Gross Inadequacy. But if the finding is for such an inadequate amount as to evince perversity or a gross misconception of the evidence,[87] or, as sometimes held, if the amount of the verdict is below the pecuniary loss established and is thus, manifestly and without reason, not in accordance with the evidence,[88] or violates the measure of damages given by law, the judgment will be reversed.[89] But the appellate court will not interfere with a substantial award of damages, especially in those cases in which the damages admit of no other test than the intelligence of the jury in view of the facts, unless its inadequacy be such as to shock the conscience and to clearly show that the jury were influenced by passion or prejudice, or proceeded upon an erroneous basis in arriving at their conclusion.[90]

H. Harmless Error — 1. Effect. A judgment will not be reversed for error which resulted in no prejudice to the party seeking to take advantage of it.[91]

take judgment for the reduced amount, it was held that, where defendant did not accept the suggestion of the court and there was a retrial, the action of the court in ordering the remittitur in the first appeal would not control as to the amount of the verdict on the appeal from the verdict in the second trial. The existence of non-prejudicial error in a case affords no ground for disturbing the judgment. There must be the element of prejudice. Errors discovered go for naught unless coupled with prejudice inseparably connected with it.[92]

able rule that if a judgment is more favorable to the party complaining than he is entitled to, he cannot take advantage of it, because he is not injured by it.[94] It is not to be understood, however, that a party cannot complain merely because a judgment is rendered in his favor. There is a wide difference between a judgment in favor of a party and error in his favor. A man may be prejudiced by a judgment in his favor where it is not for the thing he asks or is for less than he asks.[95]

b. Errors Against Party Not Entitled to Succeed. So, there can be no reversal for errors committed against one who, it is apparent, is not entitled to succeed in his action or defense in any event.[96] Thus, errors in rulings against plaintiff will not be ground for reversal where the complaint states no cause of action.[97] So, rulings erroneous in respect to defendant will not operate to reverse where the evidence is such as to justify the court in directing a verdict for plaintiff.[98]

c. Other Errors. Other errors, considered harmless and which are closely allied to, if not practically the same as, those mentioned in the preceding paragraph, are technical or formal errors,[99] or errors which, on a consideration of the whole record, are shown not to have affected the judgment.[1]

3. Presumption in Respect of Error — a. View That Error Shown by Record Presumed Prejudicial. It is, of course, elementary law that the record itself must show error before there can be a reversal of a judgment or decree. There is no other method by which error can be shown.[2] The next question which arises is, how is the reviewing court to determine whether error shown by the record is harmless or prejudicial? The decisions are, at least apparently, very conflicting, but it is possible that the statements therein, when applied to the particular facts of the cases, may be harmonized. There are two rules promulgated by the decisions, and they seem to be radically opposed to each other. Thus, one line of decisions holds that, if there is error apparent on the face of the record, a presumption of prejudice arises which cannot be disregarded, unless the record affirmatively discloses that the error was not prejudicial.[3] As was said in one of these decisions: "Error and prejudice go hand in hand, until the latter, which is the creature of presumption, is met and neutralized by something in the record. It follows, therefore, that the interference of the appellate court with the judgment of the lower court can be successfully invoked by showing an error in the record, for when the error is shown the law supplies and attaches the consequence of prejudice." The judgment will necessarily be reversed unless appellee (defendant in error) shows from the record that which clearly rebuts the presumption of prejudice.[4]

b. View That Record Must Show Prejudice as Well as Error. On the other hand, the rule announced by a large number of decisions is, that the record must not only show error, but also that the party complaining was prejudiced thereby.[5]

ment of error may be waived by an entry on the record, or by express waiver in the brief or oral argument.[7]

2. Implied Waiver — a. Failure to Urge Objection.[8] Except in cases where the question involved goes to the jurisdiction,[9] rulings to which assignments of error have been taken will not be considered on appeal, where such assignments are not discussed by counsel in brief or in argument, as it will be presumed that they are waived.[10]

Agreement to argue on certain grounds only. — Where counsel agreed to argue an appeal on two grounds only, it was held to be a waiver of all other grounds of appeal. Cahoon v. Levy, 10 Cal. 216.

Waiver in brief. — In Weaver v. Apple, 147 Ind. 304, 46 N. E. 642, it was held that an error in overruling a demurrer to a complaint in an action for trespass upon land, which involved the question of title, was not available to defendant, where he admitted in his brief that the complaint was good as one to quiet title.

Waiver of record. — In Glotzback v. Foster, 11 Cal. 37, it was held that, where after notice of appeal, the parties waived, of record, all errors, the judgment should be affirmed.

b. Proceedings Inconsistent With Objection. A waiver of error will be implied where a party to an appeal takes proceedings inconsistent with the particular error assigned.[11]

J. Decisions of Intermediate Courts — 1. Scope and Extent of Review — a. In General. The review of the decisions of intermediate courts by higher appellate tribunals is regulated and defined by constitutions and statutes. To these reference should be had for the determination of the scope of review on such appeals.[12]

b. Errors in Trial Court. On appeal from the judgment of an intermediate court, the higher court will not review errors that may have occurred in the trial court.[13]

Asking affirmance as waiver of cross-errors. — Where an appellee assigns cross-errors, and in his brief asks the court to affirm the judgment appealed from, he will be deemed to have abandoned his assignment of cross-errors. Springfield Iron Co. v. McIntyre, 72 Ill. App. 444.

Request for decision in place of remandment.— Where an appellant prayed the court to decide the case before it, and not to remand it, his request was treated as a waiver of exceptions to rulings in the court below, the effect of sustaining which would have necessitated a remandment. Schlater v. Wilbert, 41 La. Ann. 406, 6 So. 127.

The filing of a brief, in which appellee discusses the merits of the case and at the same time insists that the appeal should be dismissed because defectively taken or prosecuted, is not an implied waiver of the motion to dismiss. Burdine v. Mustin, 33 Ala. 634.

c. Questions Not Raised or Passed Upon in Intermediate Court. Questions not raised in nor passed upon by an intermediate court, except questions going to the jurisdiction, will not be considered on appeal from its judgment.[14] Thus, objections as to parties, or as to pleadings or evidence, which were not raised in an intermediate court, will not be considered on appeal.[15]

d. Refusal to Consider Question of Law. The refusal of an intermediate court to consider a question of law presented for its determination is, however, reviewable on appeal.[16]

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 4271.

On appeal from reversal.— In New York, on appeal to the court of appeals, by the party who was successful in the trial court, from a judgment of reversal of the general term, where such party desires alleged errors in adverse rulings on the trial reviewed, he should go back under the order for a new trial, and raise them on the retrial, and if defeated, present them on appeal from the judgment. See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 4281.

Appeal from territorial supreme court.— Where the territorial supreme court, on appeal, considers only a part of the errors assigned, the federal supreme court, on proceedings in error, is limited to a review of the errors considered by the territorial court, and it cannot consider the other assignments. Montana R. Co. v. Warren, 137 U. S. 348, 11 S. Ct. 96, 34 L. ed. 681.

Cross-errors.— Where appellee fails to file cross-errors in the appellate court, he will not be allowed to do so on an appeal from such court. Diversey v. Johnson, 93 Ill. 547.

Failure to renew objection in intermediate court.— An objection made in the trial court, but not renewed on appeal to an intermediate court, will not be considered on a review of the judgment of the latter. Cooper v. McKeen, 11 Colo. 41, 17 Pac. 97; Meyer v. McCabe, 73 Mo. 236. But see Cohn v. Goldman, 76 N. Y. 284, wherein it was held that the fact that an objection, distinctly presented to the trial court, was not raised in an intermediate appellate court will not prevent its being considered in the highest appellate court.

A refusal by an intermediate court to review the facts found in the court below is reviewable on appeal. Legnard v. Rhoades, 156 Ill. 431, 40 N. E. 964; Kyle v. Kyle, 67 N. Y. 400. So, where an intermediate court refuses to find facts, though properly requested so to

2. Nature and Grounds of Decision — a. In General. The nature and grounds of the decision of an intermediate court are of importance in determining the correctness of its decision, and the power and extent of review, by the appellate court.[17] Thus, the appellate court will look to the judgment of the intermediate court to determine whether the latter has examined the evidence,[18] to determine the grounds of a reversal,[19] and, in New York, to determine as to the unanimity of the decision of the appellate division on the evidence, where it affirms the judgment of the lower court.[20]

b. Erroneous Reason For Correct Decision. An appellate court is not concluded by the reasons assigned by an intermediate court for its decision. If the decision can be upheld on other grounds the fact that it is based on erroneous reasons is immaterial.[21]

c. Looking to Opinion to Ascertain Grounds. As a rule, the appellate court will not look to the opinion of the intermediate court to determine the grounds of its decision, but will look to the judgment or order itself; and, in the absence of a statement of the grounds upon which the intermediate court has based its action, the appellate court will affirm, if any ground for its support is discoverable in the do, its action is reviewable on appeal. Kennedy v. Porter, 109 N. Y. 526, 17 N. E. 426, 16 N. Y. St. 613. See also National Harrow Co. v. Bement, 163 N. Y. 505, 57 N. E. 764. But see Otto v. Halff, 89 Tex. 384, 34 S. W. 910, 59 Am. St. Rep. 56, in which it was held that the refusal of the court of appeals to find additional facts cannot be reviewed on writ of error.

Failure of decision to disclose grounds.— In Powell v. Lamb, 15 Daly (N. Y.) 139, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 930, 22 N. Y. St. 233, it was held that, on appeal to the common pleas from an order of the general term of the city court of New York affirming an order of the trial term granting a new trial, where the order of the general term did not indicate on what ground the order of the trial term was affirmed, but the evidence was such that a new trial might have been granted on questions of fact, the order would be affirmed without review.

Recital of grounds in order of reversal.— Under Ohio Rev. Stat. § 6709, requiring the circuit court to state the grounds of reversal of a judgment before it on appeal, the supreme court will treat the grounds specified in the order of reversal as the only ones on which the reversal was placed. 19. Matters examined to determine grounds for reversal.— In Field v. Anderson, 103 Ill. 403, it was held that, on appeal, the supreme court will not notice proceedings, had in the appellate court in a different case which was not presented in the transcript, to see on what ground the appellate court reversed the judgment.

20. Unanimous decision.— Under N. Y. Const. art. 6, § 9, as amended in 1894, and the laws made in pursuance thereof, no unanimous decision of the appellate division of the supreme court that there is evidence supporting, or tending to sustain, a finding of fact, or a verdict not directed by the court, shall be reviewed by the court of appeals. Unanimous decision of quorum.— In Harroun v. Brush Electric Light Co., 152 N. Y. 212, 46 N. E. 291, 38 L. R. A. 615, it was held that, under N. Y. Const. art. 6, § 2, which makes four justices of an appellate division of the supreme court a quorum, a decision in which all four justices sitting concur, is a unanimous decision within N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 191, subsec. 2, providing that a unanimous affirmance in certain cases shall be final, unless a question of law is certified or leave to appeal given.

record.[22] Where, however, the judgment or order refers to the opinion for the grounds upon which it is based, the appellate court may look to the opinion for such grounds.[23]

d. Sustaining Judgment on Grounds Not Noticed. An appellate court is not confined to the grounds upon which an intermediate court has based its judgment, but, in order to uphold such judgment, may consider grounds not noticed by the intermediate court.[24]

3. Discretion of Intermediate Court — a. In General. Matters within the sound judicial discretion of an intermediate court will not be reviewed on appeal, except in case of manifest and gross abuse.[25] Thus, orders of an intermediate court dismissing or refusing to dismiss the appeal,[26] granting or refusing to grant a motion to vacate a dismissal,[27] or granting or refusing to grant a new

Absence of statement of grounds.—In Cohn v. Baldwin, 141 N. Y. 563, 35 N. E. 1087, 60 N. Y. St. 337, it was held that, where the grounds for denying defendant's motion for a bill of particulars did not appear from the order of the court below, and the denial might have been a proper exercise of discretion on the facts appearing, the court of appeals could not look to the opinion of the general term for the ground on which its decision was based, but must assume that the motion was denied in the exercise of its discretion. See also National Park Bank v. Whitmore, 104 N. Y. 297, 10 N. E. 524.

Impeaching judgment by opinion.—Recitals in the judgment of the appellate court cannot be impeached by its opinion, as it is not a part of the record. Calumet Electric St. R. Co. v. Van Pelt, 173 Ill. 70, 50 N. E. 678; Marske v. Willard, 169 Ill. 276, 48 N. E. 290. See also Seaverns v. Lischinski, 181 Ill. 358, 54 N. E. 1043.

b. Refusal to Exercise Discretion. The refusal of an intermediate court to exercise its discretion in a proper case will, however, be reviewed on appeal.[30]

4. PRESUMPTIONS. On appeal from the judgment of an intermediate court, everything necessary to uphold its jurisdiction and the correctness of its proceeding and decision will be presumed, in the absence of a clear showing to the contrary.[31] Thus, a ruling by an intermediate court, on a motion to dismiss the appeal, will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, to be justified by the facts of the case.[32]

In New York, upon an appeal to the court of appeals from a judgment reversing a judgment entered upon the report of a referee, or a determination in the trial court, or from an order granting a new trial upon such reversal, it must be presumed that the judgment was not reversed, or a new trial granted, upon a question of fact, unless the contrary clearly appears in the record body of the judgment or order appealed from. In New York, when the appellate division reverses upon the facts, there is no constitutional inhibition to the court of appeals to look into the record to see whether there was any evidence to sustain the findings, and a question of law arises. If it appears that there was any material and controverted questions of fact, the decision thereof by the appellate division is final. The court of appeals cannot now review a decision upon a question of fact when the judgment is of reversal any more than it formerly could when it was of affirmance, except that, if there is no material question of fact appearing in the record, it has jurisdiction to review, because in that case the appellate division would have had no jurisdiction to reverse. Otten v. Manhattan R. Co., 150 N. Y. 395, 44 N. E. 1033.

As to the necessity of findings of fact, in Illinois, when the appellate court differs from the trial court in its findings of fact, see Scovill v. Miller, 140 Ill. 504, 30 N. Judgment unsupported by any evidence.— The highest court cannot review a finding as being against the weight of the evidence, but may review a finding made without any evidence tending to sustain it, as it is a ruling upon a question of law. Scintilla of evidence.— Whether there is any evidence to support an issue is a question of law, and the decision of an intermediate court thereon is consequently reviewable. Siddall v. Jansen, 168 Ill. 43, 48 N. E. 191, 39 L. R. A. 112; Morris v. Murray, 22 Misc. (N. Y.) 697, 49 N. Y. Suppl. 1093; Choate v. San Antonio, etc., R. Co., 91 Tex. 406, 44 S. W. 69.

In New York and Texas, however, the rule is otherwise under the provisions of their respective codes.[35]

c. Suits in Federal Court. Where both the intermediate and trial courts have agreed as to the ultimate facts established by the evidence, their finding will be accepted on appeal, unless it clearly appears that they have erred as to the effect of the evidence.[36]

d. Suits in Probate Court. On appeal from the judgment of an intermediate court affirming or reversing a decree of a probate court on the facts, an appellate court will not, in most jurisdictions, review the facts.[37]

K. Subsequent Appeals — Former Decision as Law of Case — 1. In General. It is a rule of general application that the determination of an appellate court in a case is the law of that case. No question necessarily involved and decided on that appeal will be considered on a subsequent appeal or writ of error in the same case.[38] Consequently, where, after a definite determination, the court

The "law of the case" is a phrase which has been formulated to give expression to the rule that the final judgment of the highest court upon a question of law arising between the parties to an action on a given state of facts establishes the right of the parties in and to that controversy, and is a final determination thereof, and, like a final judgment in any other case, estops the parties thereto from afterward questioning its correctness. 2. Former Decision Erroneous. The rule just stated has been held to apply to a former determination, whether that determination was right or wrong,[41] the remedy of the party deeming himself aggrieved being to seek a rehearing.[42] Under some circumstances, however — as where there is apparent error,[43] a desire for a reargument of the questions is intimated by the court,[44] or consideration of the present appeal will be in some way controlled or affected by the previous decision[45] — an appellate court will review and reverse its former decision in the same case, more especially where it is satisfied that gross or manifest injustice has been done by its former decision, or where the mischief to be cured far outweighs any injury that may be done in the particular case by overruling a prior decision.[46]

But this review of the court's former decision is considered a matter of grace rather than a matter of right.[47]

3. ERRORS EXISTING ON FORMER REVIEW. Though there are cases which hold that an appellate tribunal is bound by its prior decision only upon the points distinctly made and determined, and not upon points which might have been raised, but were not,[48] the general rule is that, on a second or subsequent appeal or writ of error, the court will not consider matters assigned as error which arose prior to the first appeal or writ of error and which might have been raised thereon, but were not, or matters appearing in the original record which might have been corrected on the first hearing, but were not urged.[49]

In Alabama, by statute, it is the duty of the supreme court, on a second appeal, to disregard its former ruling, if it decrees it erroneous. Meyer v. Johnston, 64 Ala. 603; Moulton v. Reid, 54 Ala. 320. But the necessity of reconsidering its former decision does not devolve on the court unless properly presented (National Commercial Bank v. McDonnell, 92 Ala. 387, 9 So. 149); or where the same principles and questions decided on in the former appeal are involved and must necessarily be reconsidered (Stoudenmire v. De Bardelaben, 85 Ala. 85, 4 So. 723).

47. Bealey v. Smith, 158 Mo. 515, 59 S. W. 984, holding that on a second appeal of the same case the court may hear argument again upon the same proposition decided by it on the former appeal.

presented, he is precluded from such prosecution or presentation on a subsequent appeal.[50] It has been held, however, that, where a cause is reversed on cross-error, appellee is not estopped, on a subsequent appeal, from presenting errors which were assigned by him on the first appeal, but which he then waived by failure to argue them, where the first decision did not involve the merits of such errors.[51]

5. New Questions on Second Appeal. Where different questions arise on the second appeal, or the record presents a different state of facts, the former determination is not controlling.[52] The judgment of an appellate court can make res judicata only that which was in issue and decided.[53]

6. Subsequent Appeal in Court of Like Jurisdiction. Questions decided in the same case, on the same or substantially the same facts, by one appellate court, are binding on a subsequent appeal in another appellate court having like jurisdiction.[54] A change in the membership of the court since the first appeal,[55] or the creation or organization of a new court succeeding to the appellate jurisdiction of the court by which the first appeal was heard, will not affect the application of this rule.[56] Nor is it material that on the former appeal the members of

7. Subsequent Appeal to Intermediate Court. The determination of a court of last resort, on the review of a decision of an intermediate appellate court, cannot be questioned on a second appeal in the latter court,[58] unless a different question is presented.[59]

8. Suggestions and Statements on First Appeal. Mere expressions of opinion, or illustrations respecting matters not actually involved in the decision, have no binding force;[60] but suggestions or statements made on a former review will be regarded as the law of the case to the extent that they express the principles of law as they are applicable to the facts, although the determination is not dependent on the views thus expressed, especially where the rules of law as applied by the trial court have been expressly or impliedly approved.[61]

On a second appeal the court will not consider an objection that it had no jurisdiction on the first review,[67] nor, having decided that it was without jurisdiction, will it review its former determination, or examine questions relative thereto, though brought before it in another form.[68] Neither will the court pass on the jurisdiction of the trial court, when that question might have been raised on the prior appeal.[69]

Assumption of facts.— Where the supreme court determines a demurrer to a complaint, any judgment based on facts assumed to exist by the opinion, but which are not alleged in the complaint, is not res judicata. Case v. Hoffman, (Wis. 1897) 72 N. W. 390.

Evidence insufficient to sustain petition.— Where a petition has been held good as against a demurrer, and the evidence adduced on the trial does not sustain all of the material allegations thereof, and the decision on demurrer is not applicable to the case made by the facts proved, that decision is not con-appeal.[71] However, if the pleading is amended so as to materially change the issue on the second trial, the former decision is not the law of the second appeal;[72] but amendments which do not substantially change the character of a pleading will not change the rule.[73]

c. Evidence. On a second appeal, the court will not reëxamine evidence, the sufficiency of which, or substantially the same, was passed upon on a former appeal, but will adhere to its former ruling.[74] Otherwise where the testimony on the second trial is materially different.[75]

d. Instructions. Instructions given in accordance with a decision rendered in the cause on a prior appeal will not be reëxamined on a subsequent appeal.[76] But the propriety of instructions given or refused which are based on principles which were not considered, or which could not have been considered on the first appeal, may be examined on the subsequent appeal.[77]

XVIII. DETERMINATION AND DISPOSITION OF CAUSE.

A. Necessity of Decision — 1. In General. Where a cause is properly brought up and duly presented to an appellate court having jurisdiction thereof, it is the duty of such court to decide it;[78] but, where the controversy is terminated finally by the decision of any one or more of the points raised in the record, it is not, usually, necessary for the court to decide the remaining questions.[79] And it is a general rule that appellate courts will not decide abstract or moot questions not essential to the determination of a controversy.[80]

Where, on a retrial after reversal, appellant's counsel orally requested the court to follow the instructions given in a former trial, except certain instructions held to have been erroneous, without putting such request in writing and signing the same, and without knowledge that it contained an erroneous instruction which was given, appellant is not thereby precluded from claiming a reversal of the judgment against him on that ground. Reasons urged for new trial.— The provision in the Indiana constitution which requires the supreme court to state in writing each question arising in the record, and its decision thereon, does not require it to examine all the reasons urged for a new trial where it has decided that the court below erred in refusing to grant a new trial. Judah v. Vincennes University, 23 Ind. 272.

Where an action was abated in the court below, it is not proper, if competent, for the appellate court to hear and determine the case on the merits, after deciding that there was no error in abating the cause below. Sevier v. Teal, 16 Tex. 371.

Where judgment affirmed.— Md. Acts (1831), c. 319, requiring the appellate court to decide all exceptions taken by either side in the trial below, relates only to cases sent back under a procedendo, and does not apply to cases where judgments are affirmed in the appellate court. 2. On Cross-Appeals. When cross-appeals are pending together, neither should be decided till both are heard.[81]

B. General Matters Affecting Decision — 1. Decision on Consent. It is, generally, permissible for the appellate court to render its decision on the consent of the parties,[82] and, in pursuance of such consent, it will affirm[83] or reverse the judgment appealed from.[84] But it is the general rule that jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent;[85] so, an appellate court will not go beyond its appellate jurisdiction and act as arbitrator between the parties.[86]

81. Hundhausen v. Atkins, 36 Wis. 518.

Where cause remanded for new trial.— When the effect of a judgment on appeal "is to leave the case to be again tried in the court below," questions raised, in a cross-bill of exceptions filed by defendant in error, relating to such matters as will probably arise at the next trial, will be decided. Holmes v. Langston, 110 Ga. 861, 36 S. E. 251.

Where both plaintiff and defendant appeal, raising the same questions, and a determination of one appeal disposes of all questions raised, the other appeal will be dismissed as having been improvidently taken. Burgess v. Kirby, 95 N. C. 276; State v. McKee, 94 N. C. 325.

When cross-exceptions considered first.— Where the questions raised by the cross-bill of exceptions are controlling upon the case as a whole, they will be first considered; and, if the decision of the trial court on such exceptions is reversed, the errors complained of in the main bill of exceptions will not be considered. Confession on power of attorney.— In Alabama, the supreme court will not permit error to be confessed on a power of attorney from defendant in error, when such defendant is a female non-resident, and her attorney makes affidavit that he believes such power of attorney was fraudulently procured. Beavers v. Smith, 11 Ala. 20.

Request by appellee for conditional reversal.—A request for the reversal of a cause back to and including an error in sustaining a demurrer to a pleading, upon confession of the error by the party making the request, cannot be entertained unless notice has been given to the adverse party of the confession, or such adverse party has waived notice and consented to a conditional reversal. Alexander v. Alexander, 140 Ind. 560, 40 N. E. 55.

When no remand on confession of error.— A respondent cannot, by confessing certain errors, have a cause remanded for a new trial, without examination thereof by the appellate court, where appellant contends that the findings of fact made by the court below are such as to authorize the appellate court to direct a judgment to be entered in appellant's favor. Sun Ins. Co. v. White, 118 Cal. 468, 50 Pac. 546.

85. See supra, II, B [2 Cyc. 536].

86. An agreement between counsel, upon the reversing of a judgment rendered below, that the appellate court examine the evidence, and make a decision on the merits of the case which is to be entered as a final judgment below, will not be performed by the appellate court, as it has no authority to thus act as an arbitrator. Pearce v. Jordan, 9 Fla. 526.

2. Decision by Divided Court — a. Majority Decisions — (I) In General. As to how many concurring votes shall be necessary to a decision by an appellate court is a question depending upon statutes or constitutional provisions, but, ordinarily, a majority of the judges sitting is sufficient,[87] provided a quorum of the whole court be present.[88]

(II) Concurrence Based on Different Reasons. Where a majority of the judges agree in the decision to be rendered, it is not material that their conclusions are based on different reasons.[89]

b. Equal Division — (I) In General. It is a well-recognized rule of appellate practice, declared by statute in many jurisdictions, that, where the judges of the appellate court are equally divided in opinion, the judgment, order, or decree appealed from stands affirmed.[90] In other words, an equal division on a question renders the appellate court powerless to take affirmative action, and, consequently, the case must be left in statu quo— not because it is deemed to be proper as it stands, but because the court cannot decide it to be improper.[91]

(II) Effect of Decision. A judgment rendered by an equally divided court is as binding and conclusive on the rights of the parties as if rendered upon the full concurrence of all the judges,[92] and bars another suit for the same cause.[93] judges were equally divided in opinion upon an essential point of law, no judgment should be given. Proctor's Case, 12 Coke 117.

See 3 Cent. Dig. tit. "Appeal and Error," § 4421.

Constitutionality of statute.— In Mason v. Jones, 3 N. Y. 375, it was held that the provision of the New York code of 1849, authorizing the rendition of judgment of affirmance in cases where the judges were equally divided in opinion, was not liable to any constitutional objection.

Division as to part of judgment.—Where the court is equally divided as to part of the judgment or decree appealed from, it must be affirmed to that extent; but if they concur, as to the residue, that there should be a modification or reversal, judgment may be given accordingly. Nester v. Lockwood, 50 Mich. 42, 14 N. W. 692; Com. v. Beaumarchais, 3 Call (Va.) 122.

Under the California constitution a majority of all the judges of the supreme court is necessary to a decision, and, therefore, an equal division cannot of itself amount to an affirmance. But, for the sake of expediency, the court has been accustomed to affirm in cases of division, where there is no probability of any change in the opinions or personnel of the court, the judges in favor of reversal voting with their associates solely in order to end the litigation. Such decisions, however, are not regarded as settling the legal principles involved. Smith v. Ferries, etc., R. Co., (Cal. 1897) 51 Pac. 710; Santa Rosa City R. Co. v. Central St. R. 91. Where evidence was admitted as competent by the trial court, and the members of the court, sitting on appeal, are equally divided on the question of its competency, the opinion of the trial court must prevail. Boone v. Peebles, 126 N. C. 824, 36 S. E. 193.

Where, on an application for a rehearing, the court is equally divided, the rehearing will be refused. Towner v. Lane, 9 Leigh (Va.) 262.

Where the court was equally divided as to whether the modification should be allowed, it was held, on an application for rehearing and modification of the judgment, that the application must be denied. People v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 11.

Where the court is divided on a motion to dismiss the appeal, the motion does not prevail. Hatton v. Weems, 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 83; State v. Hays, 30 W. Va. 107, 3 S. E. 177.

Where the justices were agreed on reversal, but were equally divided as to what order should be made in regard to the proceedings which should be had in the lower court upon such reversal, it was held that the only order which could be made was that the judgment of the lower court be reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings, leaving the lower court to take such proceedings as it might deem proper under the circumstances. Question certified to federal supreme court. —Where the United States circuit court, being equally divided on a jurisdictional question, certifies the case to the supreme court, which is also equally divided, the case will be remitted, without instructions, to enable the circuit court to take such action as it may deem best, and the parties aggrieved may appeal from the final decree. Affirmance "without prejudice."— In Martin v. Welch, 4 Munf. (Va.) 60, it was held that, where a decree in chancery was affirmed by an equally divided court, it should be "without prejudice to the legal remedies of the parties."

But such judgment stands only as the decision in that particular case, and not as a precedent.[94]

3. Death of Party Pending Appeal — a. Before Submission. The effect of the death of a party before the submission of the cause on appeal need not be discussed here, having been fully treated elsewhere.[95]

b. After Submission. When a cause has been argued and submitted on appeal, it is, until the decision, properly under advisement; and the death of a party between the submission and decision does not impair the validity of a judgment rendered in the names of the original parties.[96] But it is customary for the court, on a suggestion of the death of a party, to order its judgment entered nunc pro tunc as of a date anterior to such death.[97]

4. Change in Law Pending Appeal. It is the general rule — although not invariably accepted[98] — that an appellate court must decide and dispose of the case in accordance with the laws existing at the time of its own decision,[99] even

In Wade v. St. Mary's Industrial School, 43 Md. 178, 181, the court said: "It is a settled doctrine that courts, in deciding questions arising before them, will look to the law as it is at the time, and are not to be governed by what it may have been — unless proceedings under a prior existing law had been complete, or rights had become vested. This principle has been held to apply as well to cases before an appellate court as to those that are pending in courts of original jurisdiction."

Loss of jurisdiction.—When an appeal is taken from the common pleas to the circuit though it lead to the reversal of a judgment which was proper at the time of its rendition,[1] or the affirmance of one wherein there was error which has since been obviated by a change in the law.[2] Thus, where the statute on which a judgment rests is repealed before the decision on appeal, without any saving clause as to pending proceedings, the appellate court is bound to take judicial notice of the repealing act,[3] and render its decision in accordance therewith.[4] But, of course, court, where the cause will stand for trial de novo, and a statute is passed depriving the latter court of jurisdiction of such appeal, the appeal should be dismissed. Kennon v. Shull, 9 Ind. 154. But see Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Stanley, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1243, 54 S. W. 843, in which it was held that, where the amount in controversy was sufficient to give the court of appeals jurisdiction when the appeal was granted, a subsequent change of the law could not deprive appellant of the right to prosecute his appeal.

Termination of controversy.—Where, by a change of law pending an appeal, the subject-matter of the controversy is brought to an end, the appeal will usually be dismissed. Missouri Pac. R. Rule stated by Chief Justice Marshall.—In U. S. v. Schooner Peggy, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 103, 2 L. ed. 49, Marshall, C. J., said: "It is, in general, true that the province of an appellate court is only to inquire whether a judgment when rendered was erroneous or not. But if, subsequent to the judgment, and before the decision of the appellate court, a law intervenes and positively changes the rule which governs, the law must be obeyed, or its obligation denied. If the law be constitutional, and of that no doubt in the present case has been expressed, I know of no court which can contest its obligation. It is true that in mere private cases between individuals, a court will and ought to struggle hard against a construction which will, by a retrospective operation, affect the rights of parties, but in great national concerns, where individual rights, acquired by war, are sacrificed for national purposes, the contract making the sacrifice ought always to receive a construction conforming to its manifest import; and, if the nation has given up the vested rights of its citizens, it is not for the court, but for the government, to consider whether it be a case proper for compensation. In such a case the court must decide according to existing laws, and if it be necessary to set aside a judgment, rightful when rendered, but which cannot be affirmed but in violation of law, the judgment must be set aside."

When the court below has properly rejected testimony as incompetent, and its incompetency has been removed by law before the case is heard on appeal, the appellate court will remand the cause for further proceedings. Cunningham v. Dwyer, 23 Md. 219; State v. Norwood, 12 Md. 177. But see Cole v. Fall Brook Coal Co., 159 N. Y. 59, 53 N. E. 670.

Improper admission of evidence.—A new trial will be denied when the verdict accords with the real truth and justice of the case, and the only ground for the motion was the improper admission of evidence, since made admissible by statute. E. 215, in which it was held that, where a law which would have affected an appeal had not been enacted at the time of the hearing of the appeal, and, therefore, no question was discussed with relation thereto, the court would decide the appeal as if no such act had been passed.

a change in the law cannot interfere with rights which have already vested;[5] and a statute not intended to apply to pending appeals will not affect the decision.[6]

5. Change in State of Facts Pending Appeal. Generally, the appellate court, in considering the correctness of the judgment below, will confine itself to the state of the case at the time such judgment was rendered, and will not consider any facts arising subsequently.[7] But sometimes the court will depart from this rule where, by so doing, it can shorten litigation and best subserve the ends of justice.[8]
