Loss or injury.—Where freight is injured while in carriage by several carriers, the presumption is that it was injured on the last line.[63] It may be a question for the jury whether damage occurred on the line of the initial carrier.[64] The final carrier is not liable where the loss occurs by a delay on the part of the initial carrier,[65] so, where a carrier delays vegetables, it is liable for the natural consequences even beyond its own line.[66] After limitation of liability to loss and damage occurring on the initial carrier's road and to causes within its control, it is not liable for a delay occasioned by an agreement between the last carrier and the consignee, resulting in a storage of the goods, and finally an absolute refusal to receive them.[67]

Statutory regulations.—A statute that carriers receiving goods for through transportation between points in the state shall be regarded as connecting car-

57. Where a railroad company receives cotton for delivery to a steamship company it is not bound, where the carrier by water refuses to accept it on account of the fact that fire has broken out in the cotton, to place the cotton in condition for shipment and again tender it, but after having notified the owner of refusal is justified in storing it to wait his orders—Buston v. Railroad Co. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 808; aff. jt. 116 Fed. 235, but disapproving opinion announced on this point that the railroad should place the cotton in fit condition and renew the tender.

58. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Reiss, 183 U. S. 621, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 358.

59. It is held that though the pier was the place agreed on between the railroad company and steamship company for delivery of cotton, it was not sufficient if the railroad company had full control, and under certain contingencies could send the cotton by another steamer, and the steamship company could not take it until a steamer was sent to the pier for such purpose—Texas & P. R. Co. v. Callender, 183 U. S. 63, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 362.

60. Washburn, Crosby Co. v. Railroad Co., 180 Mass. 252. The railroad company in this case gave the steamship company notice by letter which was acquiesced in, that unloading at the pier constituted delivery by the railroad company, and it afterward assumed no liability therefor.

61. Buston v. Railroad Co., 116 Fed. 235.

62. The contract contained a provision that the company to which the goods were delivered by the initial carrier should be regarded as the agent of the owner and liable for subsequent damages—Mills v. Weir, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 801.

63. Cote v. Railroad Co., 182 Mass. 290. Presumption arises from receipt in good condition by an initial carrier and delivery in a damaged condition by a terminal carrier—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Mazie (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 56.

64. A car of fruit not iced remained for several days during hot weather in the possession of the initial carrier and was not opened until arrival at its destination—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Mazie (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 56.

65. As where goods packed to remain in good condition from 2½ to 3½ days, were in the hands of the initial carrier about 2¾ days, being carried about 50 miles and defendant could not carry them the remainder of the journey in less than from 2 to 3 days—Farmers' Nursery Co. v. Cowan, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 192.

66. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 792. A delivering carrier is not liable for damage to fruit resulting from decay commenced owing to its inherent nature in the initial carrier's possession and which could not be stopped—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Mazie (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 56.

67. Harris v. Railroad Co., 36 Misc. (N. Y.) 181.

riers and agents for each other does not apply to an interstate shipment.[68] Statutory provisions requiring any member of a line of connecting carriers to obtain and furnish information as to the place of loss of freight and the manner thereof, together with the persons by whom such facts may be established, are not unreasonable, and are not unconstitutional in that they compel by penalty the production of information which the company is entitled to withhold.[69] The validity of the act or the legal sufficiency of the application for information cannot be tested by a motion for non-suit, nor can failure of the evidence to show that a carrier has failed to trace freight as requested, and that it showed the damages were the result of plaintiff's negligence, be so urged.[70] The shipper, though not the owner of the goods, may bring an action.[71] It cannot be shown that defendant delivered the freight to a succeeding carrier in good order if by its terms the act expressly applies, though by contract or law the responsibility of a carrier shall cease on such delivery.[72] A petition will not be regarded as stating a cause of action under a statutory provision authorizing action against the last of several connecting carriers, by reason of the fact that it alleged that defendants received goods in good order at a station on its line and transported them to their destination.[73]

§ 12. Limitation of liability.[74]—A carrier may limit his common law liability by a just and reasonable contract made as a basis merely for his charges and responsibility.[75] He may exempt himself from liability for loss from specified causes other than his own negligence,[76] though he cannot avoid the latter liability.[77] Carriers may contract against their liability as mere bailees.[78]

Validity and effect of particular limitations.—The carrier may exempt itself from liability for damage by wetting not due to its negligence.[79] Though the carrier cannot stipulate against its own negligence, it may, for a consideration, contract for notice of damage within a reasonable time,[80] but the time for notice will not expire while facts remain undiscovered.[81] Where a bill of lading contains a clause "subject to delay," the carrier is not liable for delay resulting from the detention of the goods as contraband of war.[82] An express company's receipt.

68. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Berry (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 326.

69. Civ. Code Ga. §§ 2317, 2318—Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Murphey (Ga.) 43 S. E. 265.

70. Savannah, F. & W. Ry. Co. v. Elder (Ga.) 43 S. E. 379.

71. Civ. Code, §§ 2317, 2318—Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Murphey (Ga.) 43 S. E. 265.

72. Civ. Code, §§ 2317, 2318—Savannah, F. & W. Ry. Co. v. Elder (Ga.) 43 S. E. 379.

73. Civ. Code, § 2298—Philadelphia & R. Ry. Co. v. Venable (Ga.) 43 S. E. 407.

74. See post, § 19, contracts for carriage of livestock. L. 1883, c. 124, § 13, providing that railroad companies cannot, except as provided by regulation of the board of railroad commissioners, limit their common law liability, became inoperative and void by reason of L. 1898, c. 29—Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Park (Kan. Sup.) 71 Pac. 586.

75. O'Malley v. Railway Co., 86 Minn. 380. By contract based on special freight rate or other valuable consideration—Ullman v. Railway Co., 112 Wis. 168. A limitation of liability based on the rate of freight paid may be binding on shippers with notice—Klair v. Steamboat Co. (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 694.

76. Morse v. Railway Co., 97 Me. 77; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Landers, 135 Ala. 504.

77. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Berdan, 22 Ohio Circ. R. 326; Morse v. Railway Co., 97 Me. 77; Fasy v. Navigation Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 469.

78. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Schuldt (Neb.) 92 N. W. 162.

79. A receipt providing that no carrier or party in possession shall be liable for damages from wetting, does not relieve from damages due to carriers' own negligence—Mears v. Railroad Co. (Conn.) 52 Atl. 610, 56 L. R. A. 884.

80. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Morris, 65 Kan. 532, 70 Pac. 651.

81. A provision that claims must be presented within 90 days does not relieve an express company from liability for wrongful delivery where the claim is presented as soon as a fraud is discovered though more than two years after delivery—Security Trust Co. v. Wells, Fargo & Co. Exp., 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 426.

82. Having a traffic agreement with a steamship company a railroad accepted lead for transportation to Japan and forwarded it seasonably to a steamship bound therefor, clearance of which was refused as long as the lead was on board, China and Japan be-making it liable as a forwarder only, does not relieve it from liability for a wrongful delivery.[88] Evidence and findings as to the construction of contracts are to be construed as in other cases, though the contracts themselves are to be strictly construed against the carrier.[84] A specific exception of a certain kind of property, from clauses limiting liability, controls.[85]

Limitation of amount.—A carrier cannot limit its liability to an arbitrary sum, but a fair agreement, liquidating the loss or damage in advance on an agreed actual or maximum value basis, is not contrary to public policy, though the loss be attributable to the carrier's negligence.[86] A limitation of liability to value at place of shipment is invalid.[87] A limitation of the extent of liability for loss does not cover liability for negligence in delivering after notice to stop in transit,[88] nor does it relieve the carrier from liability to the extent of value of the goods, where they are entirely lost by him, there being no stipulation relieving the carrier from his own negligence.[89] A limitation of liability as carrier does not operate as limitation of liability as a bailee for hire, and the carrier may be, as such, liable to the full value of the goods.[90]

Necessity and sufficiency of agreement between carrier and shipper.—The limitation may be in a shipping receipt.[91] Acceptance of a receipt by the shipper containing the clause, "subject to the terms and conditions of the railroad company's bill of lading," renders the limitations therein a part of the contract.[92] Mere acceptance of a bill of lading containing restrictions of the common-law liability of the carrier, without notice thereof, does not render the restrictions binding on the consignor,[93] otherwise where there is knowledge of and no objection to the terms.[94] It is held that in the case of an express company, acceptance of a receipt containing a limitation of liability makes the contract binding on both parties.[95] The shipper need not sign or agree to the terms of the bill in writing.[96]

Evidence to show assent.[97]—The contract is not conclusive as to the fairness under which it was entered into.[98] The burden of showing assent to the terms ing at war—Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. Railroad Co., 112 Fed. 829.

83. Security Trust Co. v. Wells, Fargo & Co. Exp., 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 426.

84. Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 606.

85. Where a clause modifies the common law liability of the carrier as to property in its possession ready for delivery to the next carrier or awaiting further conveyance, and another clause provides that cotton is excepted from any clause therein on the subject of fire, the carrier shall be liable as at common law for loss or damage of cotton by fire—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Callender, 183 U. S. 632, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 362.

86. Contract limiting amount of liability for "accident" construed to include loss or injury from negligence—Ullman v. Railway Co., 112 Wis. 168; Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 606.

87. Though concerning an interstate shipment—Southern Pac. Co. v. D'Arcais, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 57.

88. Rosenthal v. Weir, 170 N. Y. 148.

89. Blum v. Monahan, 36 Misc. (N. Y.) 179.

90. Bermel v. Railroad Co., 62 App. Div. (N. Y.) 389.

91. As where entered into in consideration of a reduced rate of shipment—Mears v. Railroad Co. (Conn.) 52 Atl. 610, 56 L. R. A. 884.

92. Clause exempting the carrier from liability for loss or damage by causes beyond its control, or by floods or fire not due to its own negligence, though the shipper was not aware that such provision was contained therein—Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Berdan, 22 Ohio Circ. R. 326.

93. Elgin, J. & E. Ry. Co. v. Machine Co., 98 Ill. App. 311.

94. Exemption from liability for fire—Cau v. Railway Co. (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 91; Charnock v. Same, Id. 92. Acceptance without objection of a bill of lading stating the value or maximum value of property received for shipment, whether it does or does not state such value to be declared by the shipper, shows an assent to the terms thereof as regards value—Ullman v. Railway Co., 112 Wis. 168.

95. Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 606. Though the shipper did not read it—Mills v. Weir, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 801.

96. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Berdan, 22 Ohio Circ. R. 326.

97. It is sufficient to show that on information that a rate would be a certain amount if the value was not more than a sum fixed, the shipper authorized the agent to fix the value at a greater sum for a greater rate—Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 606. Proof held insufficient to of the bill of lading is on the carrier.[99] It will be presumed that a freight rate is based on an agreed valuation where there is no evidence to the contrary.[1] If the contract limits liability to a certain sum in case a greater value is not stated, a statement of a greater value indicates an intention to limit the liability to the amount stated.[2]

Waiver of exemption.—If the consignor of freight insures it in favor of the carrier, such act is a sufficient consideration for a promise by the carrier not to insist on the exemption in a bill of lading from damage by fire.[3]

§ 13. Remedies and procedure.[4] Persons who may sue.—Action for nondelivery may be brought by the consignor, where there is evidence that the consignee is not the owner, as where goods are shipped subject to inspection,[5] or are consigned for sale on commission.[6] Evidence sufficient to establish plaintiff's title as against the seller of goods is sufficient as against a carrier.[7]

The right of action to recover for a loss by fire is not affected by a conditional payment of insurance on account of the loss.[8]

Form of action.—Replevin will not lie for mere delay if there is no demand for return of the goods.[9]

Venue.—By statute, actions for loss or damage in the hands of connecting carriers may be brought against one or all of them in any county in which either of them extends or is operated,[10] and a carrier may be sued in the county in which goods are shipped, though its line does not run through such county, and the receiving carrier is not joined.[11]

Pleading.—Where forms of action are abolished, it is sufficient in an action to recover the value of goods represented by bills of lading to allege facts raising a duty in defendant to properly deliver the goods represented, and show a breach of such duty by delivery to a third person.[12] A statement in an action before a justice is insufficient if in one portion it seeks a recovery as for a conversion, and does not elsewhere state whether the action is based on contract or tort, or the amount of damages sustained.[13] A verbal agreement of shipment cannot be declared on subject to the terms and conditions of a written receipt, providing for delivery to another consignee.[14] An averment that the plaintiff consignee purchased the goods from the consignor and was the owner at the time of damage is a sufficient allegation of ownership.[15] An allegation that the sinking of a bridge causing the loss of goods was caused by the negligence of defendant, its officers and employes, is a sufficiently definite averment of negligence.[16] A complaint is sufficient which alleges the difference between the value of the goods as delivered show a custom among water carriers to stipulate against liability for loss by fire—Robinson v. Steamship Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 431.

98. Limitation of liability purporting to be based on the charges fixed—O'Malley v. Railway Co., 86 Minn. 380.

99. Elgin, J. & E. R. Co. v. Machine Co., 98 Ill. App. 311.

1. Goods accepted under contract limiting liability to an agreed valuation.—Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 606.

2. Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 606.

3. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Cau (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 15.

4. See post, § 20, actions against carriers of live stock. Questions of damages will be treated in the article "Damages."

5. Levy v. Wier, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 361.

6. Failure to deliver promptly—Southern R. Co. v. Deakins, 107 Tenn. 522.

7. Union Feed Co. v. Clipper Line (Wash.) 71 Pac. 552.

8. Judd v. Steamship Co. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 206.

9. Wabash R. Co. v. House, 101 Ill. App. 397.

10. Gen. Laws 1899, p. 214—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 65.

11. Acts 26th Leg., p. 214—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Middleton, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 481.

12. Southern Ry. Co. v. Bank (C. C. A.) 112 Fed. 861.

13. Redmon v. Railroad Co., 90 Mo. App. 68.

14. Thomas v. Railroad Co. (Del.) 3 Pennewill, 81.

15. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Dorsey (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 575.

16. Marsden Co. v. Bullitt, 24 Ky. L. R. 1697, 72 S. W. 32.

and as they should have been delivered.[17] Where a statute provides that in certain cities and towns notice of arrival must be given to terminate the liability as carrier, incorporation need not be pleaded if the statute makes no distinction between incorporated and unincorporated cities.[18] In action against the consignor and the carrier where the consignee's title is in issue, a refusal of the consignor to pay a claim for damage, stating that it must be collected from the carrier, is proper under the general allegation of ownership and may be presented in a supplemental pleading.[19] A replication to a plea setting up a limitation against liability for loss by fire is not good on demurrer, if it merely sets up a statutory provision requiring notice to the consignee to enable a carrier to reduce its liability to that of a warehouseman by storage of the goods.[20]

Conformity of pleadings and proof.—The bill introduced may contain limitations of the carrier's common-law liability, though the declaration is in statutory form "for suits on a bill of lading of a common carrier."[21] Recovery because the carrier wrongfully delivered goods without collecting a draft attached to the bill of lading is not warranted by a petition alleging that the goods were to be delivered to plaintiff's order, and defendant wrongfully delivered them to a third person, and proof that the goods were sold by plaintiff to such third person and were to be delivered to him on payment of the draft.[22] A contract to notify the consignee of an arrival at destination must be alleged, to permit a failure to be a ground of recovery.[23] Declaration on a contract as executed by an agent prevents denial of the agent's authority to agree to a limitation of liability.[24]

Burden of proof.—The carrier must show that injury was not due to its negligence,[25] unless recovery is sought against it merely as voluntary bailee,[26] or there has been a prima facie showing that losses resulted from an excepted cause,[27] so, where there is a contract against liability for delay, the shipper must show that delay was caused by negligence.[28] Wetting of goods in a carrier's possession does not compel an inference of negligence.[29] Where the carrier has exercised wrongful control, it must show that loss did not occur in its hands.[30] In action for conversion, plaintiff must prove nondelivery.[31]

Evidence admissible.—Rulings as to admissibility of evidence are grouped in the notes.[32]

17. Action for delay in delivery, damages special, on account of rice being wet when shipped—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Bigham (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 522.

18. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Johnson, 135 Ala. 232.

19. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Dorsey (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 575.

20. Code, § 2244, requires a notice within 24 hours in towns of over 2,000 population having a daily mail service. The plea set up that the property was destroyed by fire in the carrier's depot without fault on its part and the replication was held merely to be a denial or a confession and avoidance—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Johnson, 135 Ala. 232.

21. Declaration in form prescribed by Code, No. 15, p. 946—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Landers, 135 Ala. 504.

22. Fowler v. Railway Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1077.

23. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Darby (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 129.

24. Complaint in action against an express company, alleged the contract was executed by complainant's agent—Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 606.

25. Goods injured by water—Mears v. Railroad Co. (Conn.) 52 Atl. 610, 56 L. R. A. 884.

26. Goods destroyed before delivery to the consignee—Frederick v. Railroad Co., 133 Ala. 486.

27. Morse v. Railway Co., 97 Me. 77.

28. In a jurisdiction where the carrier is prevented from contracting against liability for negligence—Anderson v. Railway Co., 93 Mo. App. 677.

29. Mears v. Railroad Co. (Conn.) 52 Atl. 610, 56 L. R. A. 884.

30. A carrier which did not, as required by its contract, give an owner an opportunity to take charge of the entry of a trunk at a port but sent it to a customs house, and after its entry and release sent it by express to the owner's address, must show that a loss therefrom did not occur while it was in its actual custody—Fasy v. Navigation Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 469.

31. Mere showing that goods were turned over to a carrier to be delivered to a certain person is not sufficient—Collins v. Railway Co., 94 Mo. App. 130.

32. Not fatal to admit evidence of defect in a locomotive claimed to have set the fire.

Questions of law and fact.—Liability of the owner of a car for the mistake of an employee of a railroad company in sending the car to a wrong destination with its contents is a question of law.[32] The carrier is entitled to have the question of whether damages were sustained before delivery to it submitted to the jury,[34] or the furnishing of sufficient watchmen,[35] or whether a denial of liability did not excuse a definite tender of injured goods.[36]

Instructions.[37]—Where the consignee's title is denied, an instruction that a sale would not be presumed in the absence of cash payment or an actual delivery is improper.[38]

Sufficiency of evidence.—Particular holdings are grouped in the notes.[39]

§ 14. Freight and other charges.[40]—A rate per hundred pounds in car lots delivered at the point named covers switching charges at terminals or tolls over other lines, and an unfilled car if accepted is taken at such rate.[41] Collection of though it was shown not to have been near the place at the time of the fire—Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Peterson (Colo. Sup.) 69 Pac. 578. Unless it was shown to be raining at the time, an expressman to whom delivery was made cannot be asked as to care taken on rainy days—Mears v. Railroad Co. (Conn.) 52 Atl. 610, 56 L. R. A. 884.

Bill of lading acknowledging receipt of goods is evidence of delivery to the carrier—Fasy v. Navigation Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 469. Freight bill not connected with the goods in question does not show an assumption of liability by the carrier in an action for goods shipped to the consignee and stored on his failure to remove them, the freight bill being relied on to show an agreement to return the goods to the consignor—Samuelson v. Steamship Co., 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 867. Custom to contract to carry over the carrier's and connecting lines may be shown in connection with the evidence that it so contracted—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Leatherwood (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 119. In an action for failure to deliver freight it may be shown that the consignees have never received it—Alabama Midland Ry. Co. v. Thompson, 134 Ala. 232; and plaintiff may testify that he has not received payment—Southern Ry. Co. v. Allison, 115 Ga. 635. Where it is contended that not all goods received had been delivered, it may be shown that the car was sealed at the loading point and remained sealed until delivery—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Simonson, 64 Kan. 802, 68 Pac. 653, 57 L. R. A. 765. Evidence admissible that expressman, receipting for goods, looked at the box in which they were and made no complaint—Mears v. Railroad Co. (Conn.) 52 Atl. 610, 56 L. R. A. 884. It may be shown that the shipper chose to ship "owners' risk," rather than "shippers' risk" at a higher rate—Mears v. Railroad Co. (Conn.) 52 Atl. 610, 56 L. R. A. 884.

33. Richer v. Fargo, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 550.

34. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Dorsey (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 575.

35. Though it is contended that a watchman personally discovered the fire as soon as it started, if the jury may inquire from the evidence that the fire may have been in existence some time before its discovery and a sufficient force of watchmen would have aided in putting it out—Marande v. Railway Co., 184 U. S. 173, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 487.

36. The first complaint of the consignees was, "We feel justified for putting in a claim for the entire shipment and holding the goods subject to your inspection"—Hardy v. American Exp. Co., 182 Mass. 328.

37. Instruction in an action against connecting carriers for delay does not allow the jury to fix the liability of each carrier without regard to the evidence, where it directs them to apportion the entire amount of damages among the defendants, "according to and in proportion to their respective liability as indicated by instructions already given"—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Cushney, 95 Tex. 309. When a contract containing a limitation of liability is declared on and the carrier by answer relies on the limitation, the only question presented is that of negligence and the jury should not be instructed as to the elements of a contract limiting liability and the burden of proof of establishing it—Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Bell, 65 Ohio St. 408.

38. There may have been an intention to vest title in the consignee sufficient to maintain the action—Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Dorsey (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 575.

39. Delay in shipment of vegetables—San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 792. To support a recovery against an express company for fish improperly delivered to a game warden—Graham v. Express Co. (Minn.) 94 N. W. 548. To show receipt of freight—Southern Ry. Co. v. Allison, 115 Ga. 635. To show proper care against fire—Marande v. Railway Co., 184 U. S. 173, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 487. Evidence of cause of a fire based on a defect in an engine shown not to have been near the depot at the time, held insufficient—Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Peterson (Colo.) 69 Pac. 578. It need not be shown that a locomotive was near cotton destroyed by fire, on the day of a fire, in order that the case may go to the jury, since the fire may have been started on preceding days and have smouldered until discovered—Marande v. Railway Co., 184 U. S. 173, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 487. Evidence held sufficient for submission to the jury of issues as to shipment and destruction of goods by fire en route—Rowan v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 114 N. Y. St. Rep. 226.

40. See ante, § 2, for unjust discrimination.

41. Chesapeake & Ohio R. Co. v. Dobbins, 23 Ky. L. R. 1588, 65 S. W. 334.

an increased rate is not justified by the fact that a rate fixed by an agent was due to a mistake, and knowledge of a general tariff rate does not prevent a recovery of the difference between such rate and a lesser one, where the consignee has knowledge that the lesser rate is being given in other cases.[42] A contract to pay "at the rate of tariff" does not create a liability to pay more than the rate agreed on.[43] Rates over roads of different gauge may be apportioned according to an arbitrary standard.[44]

Evidence of establishment of rates.—Commission rates cannot be established by a letter from one of the commissioners.[45] The fact that a rate higher than that contracted for is in a tariff filed in the office of the general freight agent does not show that it was established and published as required by the Inter-State Commerce Act.[46]

Rebates.—A shipper is not entitled to a reduction from the rate fixed by a railroad commission for cotton to be compressed in transit, where a shipment made under a bill of lading containing such privilege is not compressed.[47]

Persons liable for charges.—The consignor is not discharged from liability by the fact that charges are to be collected from the consignee, as the consignee is not bound to pay freight charges in the absence of an agreement, but if a consignee, with knowledge that charges are not paid and that the carrier is surrendering its lien therefor, accepts the goods and removes them, an agreement to pay the known and stated charges may be implied.[48]

Advances.—A carrier pays a lien on goods, for the purpose of continuing transportation, at its own risk, if without consent of the owner, but the connecting carrier may advance charges incident and necessary to the transportation paid by the preceding carrier and retain possession of the goods for its reimbursement, so the connecting carrier is entitled to freight paid by it to the initial carrier, though such carrier, there having been no instruction, has so routed them as to incur greater charges than had they been sent by the most direct line.[49] A carrier has no lien for customs duties paid, if goods shipped in bond to a specific port have been diverted.[50]

The receiving carrier is not liable for an additional charge exacted by a final carrier, unless it is shown that it received a portion of the sum so collected.[51]

Demurrage.—The carrier may provide a reasonable demurrage charge;[52] if it is reasonable, the shipper need not be consulted, and he is charged with notice by the regular rendition of bills for violation.[53] Weather will not excuse a consignee for failure to unload within the time stipulated by the bill of lading.[54]

Liens and enforcement.—A lien for demurrage may be had, though there is no express stipulation therefor, and it is not lost by delivering cars on to a switch

42. Southern Ry. Co. v. Machine Co., 135 Ala. 315.

43. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Leatherwood (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 119.

44. Where freight rates in a shipment over a narrow gauge and standard gauge road are proportioned at the rate of three narrow gauge to two standard gauge cars, the fact that the standard guage road is not compelled to use its proportionate number of cars to carry the shipment does not create an overcharge in the case of a shipment beginning on the narrow gauge line—Carlisle v. Railway Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 475.

45. Wells, Fargo Exp. Co. v. Williams (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 314.

46. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Leatherwood (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 119.

47. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Orthwein-Fitzhugh Cotton Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 490.

48. Central R. Co. v. MacCartney (N. J. Law) 52 Atl. 575.

49. Glover v. Railway Co., 95 Mo. App. 369.

50. Pearce v. Railroad Co., 89 Mo. App. 437.

51. Chicago, R. I. & T. Ry. Co. v. Henderson (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 36.

52. Darlington v. Railway Co. (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 122.

53. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Steel Co., 201 Pa. 624.

54. Darlington v. Railway Co. (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 122.

track.[55] On refusal of goods owing to damage in transit, if the carrier sell them to third persons, it may retain its charges from the proceeds of the sale.[56]

Recovery of overpayment.—Freight paid under protest in excess of the rate mentioned in the bill of lading may be recovered.[57] A letter quoting a rate agreed on, written by the general freight agent to the shipper, is admissible in an action to recover excess freight.[58] In an action to recover the difference between the actual rate and the rate exacted over a connecting line, the actual rate having been stated by the receiving carrier, a general denial raises the issue as to whether the statements are binding on him.[59]

Actions for freight and charges.—It is sufficient to aver that a demurrage rule since its adoption has formed a part of the contract of carriage.[60] In the notes are decisions as to admissibility of evidence.[61] Demurrage rules may be so reasonable as not to be a question for the jury.[62]

Part 3. Carriage of live stock. § 15. Duty to carry and contract of carriage generally.—A carrier of live stock has a reasonable time after notice in which to furnish cars.[63]

A written contract supersedes an oral contract.[64] The written contract may be signed after delivery to the carrier if at the time of delivery it was the intention to execute such a contract.[65] An agreement to carry cattle to their destination in a shorter time is on a sufficient consideration, if based on an agreement of shipment in larger lots.[66]

§ 16. Care required of carrier.—A carrier of cattle is bound to the care, prudence and caution which ordinarily careful, prudent and cautious men exercise under like circumstances.[67] It is not an insurer.[68] It must carry with reasonable diligence.[69] It is not bound for injuries resulting from the inherent viciousness of the stock or their propensity to injure one another,[70] nor for dam-

55. It may repossess itself of such cars to enforce demurrage charges though the switch track is on private land leased by the consignee—Darlington v. Railway Co. (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 122.

56. Gulf, W. T. & P. Ry. Co. v. Browne, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 437.

57. Southern Ry. Co. v. Anniston Foundry & Mach. Co. 135 Ala. 315.

58. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Leatherwood (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 119.

59. McLagan v. Railway Co., 116 Iowa, 183.

60. Pacific R. Co. v. Steel Co., 201 Pa. 624.

61. Bill of lading is admissible in an action for freight where the plaintiff relies on a special promise made by defendant before car is shipped, though after issuance of the bill, providing that the consignee should pay freight. Defendant may testify that when freight was to be prepaid plaintiff so indicated it on the bill of lading, though he has never before shipped to a station at which prepayment was required, and he may show that he had no title to the goods after they were placed in the car—Montpelier & W. R. Co. v. Macchi, 74 Vt. 403.

62. Rule charging one dollar per day per car after forty-eight hours from time of readiness for delivery—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Steel Co., 201 Pa. 624.

63. Illinois Cent. Ry. Co. v. Bundy, 97 Ill. App. 202.

64. Oral contract to furnish cars and a written contract providing that the shipment was not to be transported at any specified time, delivered at any particular hour, or in season for any particular market, and that the shipper released any cause of action for damages accruing to him by any previous contract—Helm v. Railway Co. (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 148. Recovery cannot be had on an oral contract of shipment, though it is contended that a written contract afterwards signed limiting defendant's liability was executed under duress, where the shipper at the time of the oral contract had knowledge of a requirement that contracts of shipment be in writing—Texas Mexican Ry. Co. v. Gallagher (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 97.

65. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Byers Bros. (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 427.

66. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Barnes (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 1041.

67. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Tribble (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 890. An instruction is erroneous binding the carrier for injuries unless occasioned by act of God, a public enemy, negligence of the shipper, or some vicious propensities of the animals themselves—Fort Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Lock (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 456. A carrier is not liable for the death of a horse from meningitis if it was not forewarned and took all possible care of the animal after the attack—Klair v. Steamboat Co. (Del.) 54 Atl. 694.

68. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Harned, 23 Ky. L. R. 1651, 66 S. W. 25.

69. Held error to instruct that it must carry stock to its destination in as safe and speedy a way as possible—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Young (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 68.

70. Instructions to this effect should be ages of which the shipper's negligence is the proximate cause.[71] The fact that a shipper has expressed satisfaction with the bedding placed in cars before they are turned over to him may prevent his assertion of negligence in such regard.[72] The carrier is liable for ill treatment of cattle being held for charges.[73]

In loading, the carrier is bound to the care required in dealing with the particular animal, reference being had to his known instincts and habits.[74] An unnecessary delay, exposing cattle to severe cold, cannot be excused on the ground that the unseasonable cold was an act of God.[75] Making a flying switch may be gross carelessness.[76]

Unreasonable delay in the transportation of stock is not excused by a slippery track resulting from a heavy dew.[77] The carrier is usually liable for damages resulting from deviation from the route selected by the shipper,[78] but if the shipper has made no selection, the initial carrier may choose the route, the shipper's rights being duly regarded.[79]

§ 17. Delivery.—On an agreement to deliver to a consignee at the stock yards, it cannot be contended that delivery was undertaken only to the ordinary freight station.[80] The carrier need not deliver stock to connecting roads for delivery to other yards in the city, if it has provided adequate yards of its own.[81] Since the consignee is not bound to receive cattle at midnight, the carrier's liability does not cease on a tender at that time.[82] The shipper cannot hold the carrier as for a conversion by reason of a mere delay.[83]

§ 18. Liability of carrier or connecting carrier. Through contracts.[84]—The liability of an original carrier for negligence of a final carrier is purely statutory where so provided,[85] and is the same whether the original contract is verbal or written.[86] If the carrier contracts to deliver at a certain point, it is liable for injury on a connecting line,[87] though not where the consignor accepts a bill of lading from another carrier beyond the terminus of the initial carrier,[88] or if the contract is to carry by connecting lines, the first acting as agent only for such lines with distinct freight charges, in which case the contract is severable.[89] A through contract of shipment is sufficiently shown by evidence that the shipper arranged for transportation to a point beyond the terminus of the carrier, with given—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Young (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 68.

71. Where dogs, shipped by a train earlier than directed, are returned to the place of shipment, there being no one to receive them and the shipper directs that they be sent back the next day without caring for them, the carrier is not liable for the death of one of them from confinement—Harrison v. Weir, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 248.

72. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. O'Laughlin (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 610.

73. Recovery is not prevented by the fact that shippers have refused for a time to pay a rate, higher than contracted for, demanded at the destination—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Leatherwood (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 119.

74. A steamboat company is not relieved from liability for injuries received by a jack in resisting attempts to load him, by the fact that they used only necessary force in the operation—Jones v. Memphis & A. C. Packet Co. (Miss.) 31 So. 201.

75. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Smissen (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 42.

76. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Calumet Stock Farm, 96 Ill. App. 337.

77. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Truskett, 186 U. S. 479, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 1259.

78, 79. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Irvine (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 540.

80. Agreement to deliver at Kansas City stock yards is not fulfilled by delivery at Kansas City station—Jones v. Railroad Co., 89 Mo. App. 653.

81. Central Stock Yards Co. v. Railroad Co. (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 113.

82. On the consignee's refusal to receive them they were unloaded and placed in the company's pens—Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. v. Trammell (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 716.

83. Though a shipment of live stock is thereby injured and depreciated in value—Spalding v. Railroad Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 274.

84. See ante, §§ 3, 11. General rules as to connecting carriers and application to carriage of goods and merchandise.

85, 86. Rev. St. art. 331a—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Botts (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 113.

87. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. McCarty (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 229.

88. Hartley v. Railroad Co., 115 Iowa, 612.

89. Hughes v. Railway Co., 202 Pa. 222.

privilege of changing the destination to another place.[90] A way bill issued for the guidance of an initial carrier's employes does not prove partnership or agency.[1]

Where the carrier guarantees the suitableness of cars, it is liable for injuries from their defective condition, whether on its own line or on connecting lines.[2]

Rights of holders of separate bills of lading.—A connecting carrier who issues an independent bill of lading sustains no contractual relation to a transferee of the bill of lading of the initial carrier, rendering it liable, where the shipper of the goods sells a portion thereof at a point on the connecting carrier's line.[3]

Limitation of liability.[4]—Connecting carriers are not jointly liable for injuries on either line, where there is no agency or partnership, and the contract limits the liability of each to its own line.[5] A carrier may provide that its liability shall cease at its terminus when the stock is ready to be delivered to the connecting carrier.[6] After a custom to ship for many years under a contract limiting the carrier to losses occurring on its own line, it will be presumed that the shipper intended to ship in the usual way, and it will not be inferred that there was any fraud or mistake.[7] A written contract of shipment controls a verbal agreement, in the absence of evidence of fraud, compulsion or want of time to examine the writing.[8] A written contract for shipment to a point on the carrier's line, limiting liability to such line, is not affected by a way bill issued by the carrier for guidance of its employes, terming the shipment as a "through line stock way bill" to a point on a connecting line.[9]

Duty to deliver to succeeding carrier.—A connecting carrier is not justified by a void state quarantine line in refusing to transport cattle consigned on a through bill of lading not issued by it to the place of delivery to a third carrier not within the line, though the ultimate destination is within.[10]

Delay.—Where the initial carrier issues a way bill stating that the entire freight has been paid, the connecting carrier is liable for negligence of its agent, who, without notice of the fact that the freight has been paid, states to the final carrier that it was unpaid, and causes such carrier to hold the freight until payment, and is liable for damages resulting from delay.[11] Where cattle are billed to an erroneous destination on a connecting line by the agent of an initial carrier, such act is the proximate cause of loss from failure to get them on a certain market, if the connecting carrier would have delivered them on time but for the mistake.[12]

Liability of final carrier.—The last of a line of carriers is not necessarily responsible for loss of cattle where it has received a car sealed, but has not receipted for it as in good order.[13]

90. Texas Mexican Ry. Co. v. Gallagher (Tex. Civ. App.) 64 S. W. 809.

1. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Barnett, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 498.

2. Burnside & C. R. R. Co. v. Tupman, 24 Ky. L. R. 2052, 72 S. W. 786.

3. Robert C. White Live Stock Commission Co. v. Railway Co., 87 Mo. App. 330.

4. See ante, § 12, as to limitations on carriage of goods.

5. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Byers Bros. (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 427.

6. Const. § 106, denying carriers the right to contract from exemption from common law liability, does not apply—Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Viers, 24 Ky. L. R. 356, 68 S. W. 469.

7. Richmond, N. I. & B. R. Co. v. Richardson, 23 Ky. L. R. 2234, 66 S. W. 1035.

8. So a written contract to deliver cattle at a point on the carrier's line controls an alleged verbal agreement for through carriage, though the consignor claims that he was forced to execute the written contract in order to get the cattle moved, and the evidence showed that it was executed at his direction to secure free transportation for the helpers—San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Barnett, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 498.

9. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Barnett, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 498.

10. Tex. R. S. 1895, art. 4535, requiring the acceptance of freight by carriers—Fort Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Masterson, 95 Tex. 262.

11. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Dilworth (Tex. Civ. App.) 65 S. W. 502.

12. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Harris (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 71.

13. Civil Code, § 2298, provides that the

§ 19. Limitation of liability.[14]—Where, by special contract, a carrier of live stock has limited its liability to that of a private carrier for hire, it is not bound to exercise extraordinary diligence.[15] A carrier cannot exempt itself from liability for negligence with regard to stock, on consideration of making a lower rate,[16] nor can it by a contract relieve itself from liability for gross negligence.[17] It may exempt itself from liability from loss in loading and unloading.[18] The law of the place of the accident will control with regard to limitations of liability.[19] Liability for a connecting carrier's acts may be stipulated away.[20]

Limitations as to amount.—An agreement to transport cattle at a less rate, in consideration of an agreement that the value of stock shall be limited, is not invalid as a partial exemption from negligence,[21] but has been held to be against public policy, if the value stated is greatly below the true value, whether the carrier has information thereof or not.[22] In Kentucky, it is held that the carrier cannot limit its liability to a stipulated value or free itself from claims of loss or damage unless made in writing, verified and delivered to an agent of the carrier in a stipulated time from removal of the stock from the cars.[23]

Consideration.—A reduced rate is a sufficient consideration for a release of liability in excess of a declared value,[24] and a recital in a contract that a rate is a reduced one is prima facie evidence that it is.[25] A rate which is the only rate given is not a reduced rate.[26] A contract to care for stock is not without consideration, though no reduction is made in the regular rate.[27] The question of whether a limitation of liability is honestly made as a basis for freight charges is for the jury.[28]

Assent to limitation.—A shipper is not bound to a restriction in a contract unless he accepts it understandingly and assents, and the question of whether a limitation is fairly made is for the jury.[29] If the limitation is in the bill of lading, constituting both the receipt and contract, it must be shown that the shipper assented,[30] and it has been also held that the agreement must be outside the bill.[31]

Provisions that shipper shall accompany and care for or load and unload stock.—The carrier may, by contract, relieve itself of the duty of feeding and watering last company receiving the goods as in good order shall be responsible. The goods in question were shipped for a reduced rate under a special contract requiring the shipper to accompany the stock, load and unload it at its own risk, and the carrier was released from the injury and damage not caused by fraud or gross negligence—Susong v. Railroad Co., 115 Ga. 361.

14. See ante, § 12, as to carriage of goods with limitations.

15. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Glasscock (Ga.) 43 S. E. 981.

16. Normile v. Oregon Nav. Co., 41 Or. 177, 69 Pac. 928.

17. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Calumet Stock Farm, 194 Ill. 9.

18. Robert C. White Live Stock Commission Co. v. Railway Co., 87 Mo. App. 330.

19. Limitation of value will not be enforced though the contract is made outside the state by connecting carriers for carriage to a point within the state—Hughes v. Railroad Co., 202 Pa. 222.

20. See ante, § 18.

21. Normile v. Oregon Nav. Co., 41 Or. 177, 69 Pac. 928. In case there is an agreed limitation of the amount of liability the jury cannot be instructed that the measure of damages is the market value of live stock—Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Glasscock (Ga.) 43 S. E. 981.

22. Southern Ry. Co. v. Jones (Ala.) 132 Ala. 437.

23. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Radford, 23 Ky. L. R. 886, 64 S. W. 511.

24, 25, 26. Bowring v. Railroad Co., 90 Mo. App. 324.

27. Rev. St., art. 326—Tex. & P. Ry. Co. v. Peters (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 70.

28. O'Malley v. Railway Co., 86 Minn. 380.

29. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Patton, 104 Ill. App. 550. As where the evidence was that on payment of freight charges, plaintiff was given a contract which he signed without reading, there having been no representations made as to the value of stock, which was inserted in the contract by the agent, and no evidence that the freight charges were in any way controlled by valuations—O'Malley v. Railway Co., 86 Minn. 380.

30. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Calumet Stock Farm, 194 Ill. 9.

31. A provision in a bill of lading stipulating the value of horses shipped is not binding, there being no agreement outside the bill though valuable horses are shipped at a reduced rate—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Frazee, 24 Ky. Law Rep. 1273, 71 S. W. 437.

animals,[32] proper facilities being provided the shipper,[33] but remains liable where it fails to furnish such facilities,[34] and it has been held that failure of the shipper to comply with an agreement requiring him to furnish a person to accompany the stock and care for it does not relieve the carrier from the duty to transport without unreasonable delay, and to care for the stock at the shipper's expense.[35] Though cattle are to be in sole charge of a person selected by the shipper, the carrier, while not liable for lack of attention or care, is liable for a wrongful act of its employees injuring the animals.[36] If the shipper is given free transportation and facilities the carrier is not liable for an injury from failure to water, through the shipper's fault.[37] A carrier is liable for negligence in unloading, though there is a stipulation that the shipper shall unload.[38] Where a contract for reduced rate contained a provision that the owner should load and unload stock at his own risk and should ride on the freight train, he is bound to have some one representing him on the train, though he is given a pass on a passenger train.[39] A contract providing that the shipper shall load at his own risk and exempting the carrier from injury resulting from overloading, fright or crowding of the animals, relieves the carrier from liability, where loss is occasioned by putting too many horses in one car or leaving them loose in the car.[40]

Provisions for notice of injury.—A contract providing that notice of claim for injury must be given in writing before removal of stock is reasonable, and such notice is essential.[41] If notice is given for certain cattle which died before removal, recovery cannot be for cattle dying after removal.[42] A requirement of notice of injury before removal of cattle is met by notice within a reasonably short time after discovery of injury, if such injury was not discoverable before removal, though notice was given as to other cattle before removal.[43]

Waiver of limitation.—Written notice of injury is waived by action being taken on verbal notice.[44]

§ 20. Procedure in actions relating to carriage of stock.[45] Venue.—A connecting carrier receiving cattle without limitation of liability will be regarded as having ratified the original contract, and may be sued in the county where it was made.[46]

Limitations and conditions precedent.—Actions for injuries resulting from defective condition of a car, expressly guaranteed to be sufficient, are not controlled by a general limitation of actions for injuries to cattle by railroads.[47] A demand for other cars in writing is not necessary to a recovery on account of defects in cars furnished.[48]

32. As by a stipulation in case of accident or delay the owner is to care for the stock at his own expense and shall have all proper facilities on trains to take care thereof—Seaboard & R. R. Co. v. Cauthen, 115 Ga. 422.

33. Such is not a limitation of liability forbidden by the Constitution, art. 11, § 4—Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Schuldt (Neb.) 92 N. W. 162; Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Byers Bros. (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 427.

34. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Eblen, 24 Ky. Law Rep. 1609, 71 S. W. 919.

35. Spalding v. Railroad Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 274.

36. Schureman v. Railway Co., 88 Mo. App. 183.

37. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Schuldt (Neb.) 92 N. W. 162.

38. Normile v. Navigation Co., 41 Or. 177, 69 Pac. 928.

39. Susong v. Railroad Co., 115 Ga. 361.

40. Morse v. Railway Co., 97 Me. 77.

41. Southern Ry. Co. v. Adams, 115 Ga. 705.

42, 43. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Landers, 135 Ala. 504.

44. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Jacobs, 70 Ark. 401.

45. See ante, § 13, general questions of procedure.

46. Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Viers, 24 Ky. L. R. 356, 68 S. W. 469.

47. Burnside & C. R. R. Co. v. Tupman, 24 Ky. L. R. 2052, 72 S. W. 786.

48. The shipper held cattle at a certain point on account of a failure to furnish cars at an agreed time—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Irvine & Woods (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 540.

Who may sue.—Recovery of expenses of feed, due to delay in sailing, may be had by the shipper without proof of ownership of cattle.[49]

Pleading.—The shipper need not declare on the special contract exacted by the carrier, if he seeks to recover for negligence.[50] Gross negligence may be proved under an allegation of willful and reckless negligence.[51] The negligence charged may be changed by an amendment at the close of plaintiff's evidence.[52] Where there is a general denial of an allegation of the value of a horse, an affirmative allegation that the horse was traded for one of slight value is irrelevant.[53] If interest is sought to be recovered as an element of damage, it must be pleaded.[54] If a plaintiff places a contract, requiring the owner to care for stock, in issue by a supplementary petition, he cannot avail himself of defendant's failure to plead it.[55]

Variance.[56]—Where plaintiff in his evidence expressly denies a joint contract with connecting carriers and such issue is not submitted, defendant cannot have a peremptory instruction on the ground that a joint contract was declared on and not proved.[57] Recovery on contract cannot be had on a declaration on the common-law liability for negligence,[58] or recovery on liability as a warehouseman on a declaration on liability as a common carrier.[59] There is a fatal variance between a declaration on common-law liability and evidence of a valid contract stipulating for limited liability.[60]

Burden of proof.—If the shipper undertakes to care for stock and load and unload, he must show that injury resulted from the carrier's negligence.[61] Where the shipper examines cars, the burden is on him to show that an injury resulted from a concealed defect.[62]

Admissibility of evidence.[63]—Evidence of what the stock sold for at a different time and place than at the point of destination is improper.[64] Where recovery over is not sought by a defendant connecting carrier for failure of an initial

49. There being no stipulation to such effect—Morris v. Wilson Sons & Co. (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 74.

50. Where the carrier is liable, notwithstanding the contract—Southern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Arnett (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. 849.

51. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Stock Farm, 194 Ill. 9.

52. Original allegation of negligence in shipping a horse in a car recently used for transportation of fresh lime, amendment that the horse caught cold from undue exposure to the elements while in the car—Galliers v. Railroad Co., 116 Iowa, 319.

53. Galliers v. Railroad Co., 116 Iowa, 319.

54. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Lee (Tex. Civ. App.) 65 S. W. 54.

55. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Peters (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 70.

56. Where the shipper alleged that live stock was never received by him, and the answer alleged that the property had been abandoned by the shipper to the carrier while in transit, and that it had been sold on the shipper's account, and there was a tender of the proceeds, it cannot be determined whether the amount tendered was the amount actually realized or whether it was the amount that should have been realized—Spalding v. Railroad Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 274.

57. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Hall (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 1052.

58. Pennsylvania Co. v. Walker, 29 Ind. App. 285.

59. Normile v. Navigation Co., 41 Or. 177, 69 Pac. 928.

60. Normile v. Navigation Co., 41 Or. 177, 69 Pac. 928.

61. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Harned, 23 Ky. L. R. 1651, 66 S. W. 25.

62. The contract recited that the shipper found the cars in good order and sufficient, and the injury was received through the animal getting his foot in a crack—Williams v. Central of Georgia R. Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 980.

63. Death of the cattle several days after leaving the cars may be shown—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Irvine & Woods (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 540. Where a carrier shipped over a route other than that selected by the shipper, evidence as to the customary running time of trains over such route is admissible though evidence as to the speed of one freight train at a certain time is not—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Irvine & Woods (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 540. It may be shown that at the time cattle were shipped they were not fit to stand transportation from a warmer to a cooler climate through the mountains, and that the effect of their becoming numb by cold would cause them to lie down and be unable to get up—Southern Pac. Co. v. Arnett (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. 849. It may be shown that the time made was unusually slow for a stock train and that the bad condition of the cattle was due to bad treatment en route—Southern Pac. Co. v. Arnett (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. 849. Evidence that an injury occurred after a car was delivered to a connecting carrier may be excluded, where the injury is due to the defective condition of the car—Burnside & C.

carrier to notify when the cattle were ready for delivery to it, evidence as to such notice cannot be admitted.[65]

Questions of law and fact.[66]—A written statement by the person in charge of stock as to their condition need not be construed by the court.[67] Where there is a conflict of evidence, as to whether one suing shipped as owner or as factor, the question is for the jury,[68] as is the question of whether a rate named in the contract is a special or a regular one,[69] or of whether there is an agreement as to value or a mere attempt to limit liability for negligence in a bill of lading,[70] or of whether a mule unloaded is properly secured so as to cause the carrier's liability to cease.[71] After negligence is shown, the extent of the injury resulting therefrom is for the jury.[72]

Sufficiency of evidence.[73]—In actions for negligent injury to live stock, the rule of disregarding evidence in contradiction of obvious physical facts cannot be applied.[74]

Instructions.[75]—If the carrier's liability is limited to its own line, it is entitled to an instruction that it is not liable for injury after the stock passes from

R. R. Co. v. Tupman, 24 Ky. L. R. 2052, 72 S. W. 786.

64. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Young (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 68.

65. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Butler (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 84.

66. The evidence of one of defendant's witnesses that stock could, after delivery by a connecting carrier, have been delivered at its destination in time for the market agreed on, renders the question of the possibility of such delivery for the jury, though plaintiff without knowledge of the distance testified that the delivery would have been impossible—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Hall (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 1052. Where the terms and nature of a contract for delivery are in controversy, and there is evidence of damages resulting from lack of food and water, the case must be submitted to a jury—Waldron v. Fargo, 170 N. Y. 130.

67. In an action for penalty in failure to feed and water stock in transit it was held that such notice not being contractual was important only as evidence—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Peters (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 70.

68. Brauer v. Navigation Co., 66 App. Div. (N. Y.) 605.

69. Bowring v. Railway Co., 90 Mo. App. 324.

70. Southern Ry. Co. v. Horner, 115 Ga. 381.

71. Normile v. Navigation Co., 41 Or. 177, 69 Pac. 928.

72. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wathen, 23 Ky. L. R. 2128, 66 S. W. 714.

73. To show injury on defendant's line—Western Md. R. Co. v. Landis, 95 Md. 749. To show negligence in making a flying switch—Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Stock Farm, 194 Ill. 9. To show that two railroads formed a continuous line, or that at the time of the receipt of cattle, defendant knew that the other road had issued bills of lading thereon—Robt. C. White L. S. Commission v. Railroad Co., 87 Mo. App. 330. To show negligence in rounding curves —Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Harned, 23 Ky. L. R. 1651, 66 S. W. 25. To show defective car—Williams v. Railway Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 980. To show that pneumonia resulted from injuries received—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wathen, 23 Ky. L. R. 2128, 66 S. W. 714. To show diligence in transportation of cattle—Sloop v. Wabash R. Co., 93 Mo. App. 605. To warrant the recovery of a penalty for failure to feed and water cattle in transit —Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Peters (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 70. Plaintiff's evidence that the contract was for through shipment may be sufficient to warrant the submission to the jury of the terms of the contract—Faulkner v. Railway Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 927. Previous similar contracts carried out by defendant warrant the submission of an agent's authority to make such contracts to the jury—Faulkner v. Railway Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 927. It is sufficient to raise a presumption of negligence to show that 24 hours was consumed in transportation, when it usually required but from 13 to 15 and there were delays of from 2 to 4 hours at various places—Anderson v. Railway Co., 93 Mo. App. 677.

74. Evidence tending to prove negligence in operating a train and that loss was occasioned thereby, is sufficient to send the case to the jury—Bowring v. Railway Co., 90 Mo. App. 324.

75. Instruction not erroneous in allowing damages to be assessed against two carriers which in fact occurred on the lines of three —Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Hall (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 1052. Not erroneous as tending to overweigh the injuries on the line of other connecting carriers—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Hall (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 1052. Not failing to limit the value of the horses to the time immediately before and after the injury, or assuming that plaintiff had been put to expense to cure them—Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Stock Farm, 194 Ill. 9. Not erroneous as allowing a recovery while the cattle were in possession of the company operating the road from defendant's terminus to the final destination—Chicago, R. I. & T. Ry. Co. v. Henderson (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 36. As to the measure of damages—Southern Pac. Co. v. Arnett (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. 849. The issue of increased damages by shipment over a longer route than that selected by the shipper cannot be submitted in the absence of evidence of increased dam-its possession.[74] Where the only evidence is of delay in furnishing transportation, instructions based on an entire refusal to furnish should not be given.[77] Under an allegation that pens were insufficient to hold cattle, an instruction as to liability where the pens were injured by derailed car of another road is irrelevant.[78] Where the facts pleaded authorize a recovery on the carrier's common-law liability, instructions should not confine the right to recover on the existence of a particular contract, two contracts being pleaded.[79]

Judgment.—There may be a judgment over against the connecting carrier in favor of the initial carrier who has contracted to ship cattle over its own and a connecting line, the connecting carrier being primarily liable.[80] Judgment against one of two connecting carriers sued jointly for the full amount demanded is error, where neither carrier was to be responsible beyond the line of its own road, and there was evidence of negligence on the part of the carrier against whom judgment was not rendered.[81]

§ 21. Damages.—It is intended to treat here but a few particular questions of damages.[82] The measure of damages is the difference in the market price between the time at which the cattle were delivered and when they should have been delivered,[83] or the difference in market value of the stock in the condition in which they would have arrived but for the negligence of the carrier, and their value in the condition in which they did arrive.[84] Necessary deterioration must be disregarded.[85] The instructions should limit the carrier's liability to such injuries as result from its breach of contract or negligence and exempt it from ordinary shrinkage and necessary incident damage, and from inherent weakness or vice of the cattle.[86] For cattle killed in transit, the measure is the market value at the point of destination.[87] Where cattle die in transit, the amount of damages is to be reduced by the sum received by the owner on their sale.[88]

In order that commission for the purchase of cattle may be recovered on breach of a contract to furnish space on a steamer, it must be shown that the defendant was informed of the contract therefor.[89] The amount of a feed bill may be recovered if the cattle were fed contrary to the shipper's direction, or if they were not in fact fed.[90] Interest may be recovered from the time compensation was demanded.[91] There is no presumption of pregnancy augmenting damages for death of a bitch which had been but recently lined.[92] ages—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Irvine & Woods (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 540.

76. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Young (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 68.

77. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Bundy, 97 Ill. App. 202.

78. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. v. Trammell (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 716.

79. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Barnes (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 1041.

80. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. McCarty (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 229.

81. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Lee (Tex. Civ. App.) 65 S. W. 54.

82. See generally article "Damages."

83. Perry v. Railway Co., 89 Mo. App. 49. First available market day after delivery is to be taken—Sloop v. Railroad Co., 93 Mo. App. 605. Verdict held conjectural and excessive—Helm v. Railroad Co. (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 148.

84. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Patton, 104 Ill. App. 550.

85. Evidence of the market value of cattle had they been delivered in the same condition as shipped is inadmissible where it is not disputed that there was bound to be some deterioration in value—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Botts (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 113.

86. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wathen, 23 Ky. L. R. 2128, 66 S. W. 714. Erroneous to instruct that the defendant is liable for all injuries received on its line though they might not have developed or been discovered while the cattle were in defendant's custody—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Butler (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 84.

87. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Butler (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 84.

88. Amount received on sale of cattle dying in transit should be deducted—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Butler (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 84.

89. An instruction to such effect must be given where the evidence is conflicting—Brauer v. Navigation Co., 66 App. Div. (N. Y.) 605.

90. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Botts (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 113.

91. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Truskett (C. C. A.) 104 Fed. 728.

Connecting carriers.—The market price at the ultimate destination is the proper basis for estimation of damages against a connecting carrier, though it contracts for transportation over its own line only.[93] Where two connecting carriers are negligent, verdict for the entire amount of damages asked against one may be regarded as excessive.[94] Though a statute provides for apportionment of damages between several defendants who are connecting carriers, if recovered against more than one carrier, it is not necessary that the evidence show how much damage is done on each line.[95]

Part 4. Carriage of passengers. § 22. Duty to undertake and provide carriage. Who are passengers.—An express contract is not required to make a person a passenger.[96] The intention to pay fare is necessary,[97] though not actual payment or possession of ticket or pass;[98] so one who has paid no fare, traveling in charge of a race horse, cannot be regarded as a trespasser, if fare has not been demanded.[99] A child riding free in charge of an older person paying fare is a passenger,[1] as is a railroad employe traveling free though on private business,[2] but one intending to ride free under an arrangement with the conductor or brakeman, knowing that he has no authority to give free transportation, is a trespasser.[3] One traveling on a drover's pass in charge of cattle is a passenger for hire.[4]

When relation begins.—It is not necessary that a person touch a street car that he may be a passenger.[5] The intending passenger must not be at the station at an unreasonable time before the departure of the train,[6] but one at a station at train time, the time being late and the waiting room closed, may be rightfully on the platform as a passenger.[7] One having a ticket, approaching a train over the carrier's premises and under the direction of its agent, is a passenger, but must not take a short cut if too late to approach a train properly; hence, one is not regarded as a passenger who passes in front of an incoming train in order to take passage on another.[8] One who has been carried to a platform between elevated tracks and is waiting for a train is a passenger entitled to more than ordinary care.[9]

When relation ceases.—The passenger must have a reasonable opportunity to leave the car at the end of his journey;[10] so one stepping from a platform of the train, it having started without giving him sufficient time to alight, is still a pas-

92. American Exp. Co. v. Bradford (Miss.) 33 So. 843.

93. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Truskett (C. C. A.) 104 Fed. 728; Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Houghton (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 718.

94. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Lee (Tex. Civ. App.) 65 S. W. 54.

95. Gen. L. 1899, p. 214, c. 125—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Cushny (Tex. Civ. App.) 64 S. W. 795.

96. One attempting in a proper manner to enter a street car becomes a passenger—Kane v. Railway Co., 100 Ill. App. 181.

97. A passenger is defined to be one who enters the carrier's vehicle with the intention of paying the usual fare or with a ticket or pass entitling him to ride—Holt v. Railroad Co., 87 Mo. App. 203.

98. Simmons v. Railroad Co., 41 Or. 151, 69 Pac. 440.

99. Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Beardsley, 79 Miss. 417.

1. Rawlings v. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 534.

2. Simmons v. Railroad Co., 41 Or. 151, 69 Pac. 440.

3. Purple v. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 123, 57 L. R. A. 700. Boy of 17 paid a brakeman money to be carried to a certain point and obeyed instructions to ride on the platform on the baggage car, get off at all stops and keep out of sight—Mendenhall v. Railway Co. (Kan.) 71 Pac. 846.

4. Pennsylvania Co. v. Greso, 102 Ill. App. 252.

5. Where person walking along a platform to take a seat on the car, falls, he is entitled to the care due to the passenger relation—Haselton v. St. Ry. Co., 71 N. H. 589.

6. Ky. St. § 784, requires stations to be open 30 minutes before leaving time of trains, and it was held that the carrier was not liable to a person assaulted in its station three hours before time for the train which she intended taking—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Laloge, 24 Ky. L. R. 693, 696, 69 S. W. 795, 1113.

7. Plaintiff while three feet farther away from the track than the corner of the station, was struck by a piece of coal from a passing train—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 24 Ky. L. R. 1402, 71 S. W. 516.

8. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Weeks, 99 Ill. App. 518.

9. Lake St. El. R. Co. v. Burgess, 200 Ill. 628.

10. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Schmelling, 99 Ill. App. 577.

senger,[11] as is one who is descending from a street car.[12] One leaving a car before his journey's end at a regular station does not thereby cease to be a passenger, and he may still be within a statutory provision as to care toward persons "being transported," though the train is still, if he has left the car at the express or implied invitation of the carrier for necessary purposes incident to his journey.[13] The relation exists until he has left the station or has had a reasonable time for so doing,[14] but the carrier is not liable to a person as a passenger who, instead of taking an exit provided, climbs over a locked gate in the opposite direction and gets upon a track.[15]

Persons on other than passenger trains.—Where there is no rule allowing freight trains to carry passengers, one thereon is presumed to be a trespasser,[16] but persons boarding such trains, without knowledge that carriage of passengers is prohibited, may rely on the apparent authority of the conductor to allow them to ride and thus become passengers,[17] otherwise if they know, or with diligence may know, of the rule.[18] The rule is similar as to persons on a special excursion train.[19] A person who, without notice that it will not stop, boards a train which sometimes stops at his destination, is not a trespasser, unless he has failed to comply with the conductor's directions to leave at a station prior to his destination or go to one beyond.[20] One from whom a conductor on a construction train has accepted a ticket is a passenger.[21] One riding on a hand car at the invitation of a section foreman is not a passenger,[22] nor is an engine wiper riding on an engine.[23] Persons in wrong coach, though rightfully on the train, are passengers toward whom the carrier is charged with at least ordinary care.[24]

§ 23. Contracts and tickets. The contract in general.[25]—A presumption of assent to the conditions of a ticket arises from the fact that a person of ordinary intelligence signs it.[26] Where a carrier accepts freight from a connecting carrier and transports it on a through way bill for a proportion of the freight rate, it is

11. Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Gray, 28 Ind. App. 588.

12. The conductor pushed him off while he was descending and at the same time called a policeman to arrest him. Held that the company was liable if the arrest was wrongful—Grayson v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 730.

13. One leaving a train at a siding to get a drink of water who is killed while attempting to pass in front of a train on an intervening track, is not a passenger (construing Comp. St. c. 72, art. 1, § 3)—Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Sattler (Neb.) 90 N. W. 649, 57 L. R. A. 890.

14. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Batchler (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 981. It cannot be said as a matter of law that one who has alighted from a train and is standing in a space provided by the company for alighted passengers between the railroad tracks is not still a passenger—Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Schmelling, 197 Ill. 619.

15. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Harrison, 100 Ill. App. 211.

16. Purple v. Union Pac. R. Co., 51 C. C. A. 564, 114 Fed. 123, 57 L. R. A. 700.

17. Person riding on an extra freight which he has boarded in good faith, though passengers were allowed only on regular freights. The extra was in all appearance similar to a regular freight—Simmons v. Oregon R. Co., 41 Or. 151, 69 Pac. 440, 1022.

18. Purple v. Union Pac. R. Co., 51 C. C. A. 564, 57 L. R. A. 700.

19. Fitzgibbon v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 93 N. W. 276.

20. Baldwin v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 128 Mich. 417, 8 Detroit Leg. N. 706.

21. Plaintiff had ridden before on the train and had no knowledge that an official permit was required to allow passengers to be carried thereon—Spence v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 117 Iowa, 1.

22. Rathbone v. Oregon R. Co., 40 Or. 225, 66 Pac. 909.

23. Though the company has knowledge of the habitual violation of its rules against employees riding on engines—Streets v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 480.

24. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 653.

25. "I. G. Ry. special excursion ticket. Going coupon. One first class passage from Austin, Texas, to San Antonio, Texas, rate sold, $1.50," stamped with the Austin date stamp, entitles the holder prima facie to transportation from Austin to San Antonio—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Ing (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 722.

26. It need not have been read before or after signing or its conditions called to his attention to render binding provisions requiring an excursion ticket to be signed by the agent at the point of destination before it should be good for return passage—Daniels v. Florida Cent. & P. R. Co., 62 S. C. 1.

bound by an agreement made a part of the original contract by the initial carrier, that the shipper should have free return transportation over the connecting line.[27]

Discrimination.—A carrier by rail cannot lawfully discriminate in the rates of passenger fares between passengers under the same conditions and circumstances.[28] Use of an excursion ticket sold at a reduced rate may be limited to particular trains.[29]

Statutory regulation of fare.[30]—A statute providing that street car companies shall not charge more than five cents for a ride does not apply to a road which such a company leased from another company not incorporated under the act.[31] Where the same statute in separate sections provides a penalty for overcharges in fare by railroad and by street railroad companies, a defense provided by one section is applicable to the other.[32] If, after a refusal to accept a transfer and a demand of fare, before the passenger leaves the car, the conductor offers to return the fare and accept the transfer, it is shown that the overcharge is not due to gross negligence within a statute requiring the furnishing of transfers.[33] One who, under a misunderstanding, boards a car returning from rather than going to his destination must pay two fares if he continue on the car until it resumes its return trip.[34]

Mileage books.—Where mileage books entitling the holder to privileges accompanying the highest class ticket issued by the corporation are required by statute, issuance of such books cannot be conditional on use only for journeys wholly within the state.[35] A new corporation resulting from the reorganization of a former corporation is subject to the provisions of an act concerning mileage books, which is unconstitutional as to corporations organized before its passage.[36] Such a statute will be presumed to apply when it is admitted that at a previous date the defendant carrier was a domestic railroad.[37]

Through contracts.[38]—A mere statement by an agent as to the time a passenger will reach his destination does not constitute a contract making the carrier a through carrier or binding it to carry him to his destination within such time,[39] nor does the fact that a railroad sells a ticket to a point of connection with a steamship company and also an order for a steamship ticket to a further point render it liable for delay beyond its line.[40]

27. If the shipper was to receive return transportation on condition that he present to defendant's agent a transportation request issued with the contract for a return pass, the fact that the plaintiff did not present the form of request furnished is immaterial if he presented the contract itself, his identity was unquestioned and no objection to the form of the request made, and the agent received the contract, stamped it, and returned it saying that it would be all right and on ejection for failure to present the return pass or pay fare, he could recover for breach of contract without paying his fare—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 65.

28. Phillips v. Southern Ry. Co., 114 Ga. 284.

29. England v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 24.

30. Rev. St. § 3374, providing a penalty for the exaction of a passenger fare "exceeding three cents per mile for a distance of more than eight miles," does not apply until the ninth mile is reached, since it will not be assumed that the legislature intended to take account of fractions of a mile—Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Wells, 65 Ohio St. 313.

31. L. 1884, c. 252—McNulty v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 36 Misc. (N. Y.) 402.

32. Construing Laws 1890, c. 565, §§ 39, 105—Tullis v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 494.

33. Tullis v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 494.

34. McGarry v. Holyoke St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 123.

35. Such a stipulation held to mean that the book is acceptable for such part only of a journey as is within the state—L. 1895, c. 1027—Horton v. Erie R. Co., 65 App. Div. (N. Y.) 587.

36. A railroad corporation reorganized under Laws 1892, c. 688, is subject to mileage book act, Laws 1895, c. 1027—Minor v. Erie R. Co., 171 N. Y. 566.

37. L. 1895, c. 1027—Horton v. Erie R. Co., 65 App. Div. (N. Y.) 587.

38. Evidence held insufficient to show liability of Pa. R. Co., for a breach of a special contract of carriage—Tyler v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 18 App. D. C. 31.

39. Statement that plaintiff would reach Dawson City before the close of navigation, does not bind the carrier to transport plaintiff to Dawson City before such time, it being no part of the consideration—Dresser v. Canadian Pac. Ry. Co., 116 Fed. 281.

40. Railroad sold a ticket from Chicago to Seattle and an order for steamship transpor-

Where a company receives a proportion of the price of tickets sold by another company, the ticket agent of the latter company is the agent of the former, so that each is liable for his acts in failing to issue a ticket to the proper destination.[41]

Regulation of sale of tickets.—Statutes restricting the sale of railroad tickets to authorized agents of the carrier are not valid regulations of the railroad company's business, whether regarded as regulations of a corporation created by the legislature or as a police regulation.[42] A ticket broker may be liable for his acts in inducing the purchaser of a nontransferable special ticket to sell a return portion for the purpose of having it used by another.[43] A carrier cannot deny the authority of a clerk where it acts on a contract with knowledge that it has been made by the clerk assuming to act as general passenger agent.[44] A statute prohibiting others than agents from selling railroad tickets, but stating that it is not applicable to persons holding tickets not having printed on their face that it is an offense to transfer such ticket for consideration, does not render a ticket without such notice nonassignable.[45]

Who may use tickets.—A railroad ticket is transferable in the absence of contract or constitutional or statutory provisions.[46] Use of a nontransferable ticket by a transferee is actionable.[47] Under statutes providing a penalty for an attempt to use a pass which by conditions expressed thereon is not transferable, an attempt to use a pass which has no condition except that it will be taken up if presented by any person other than the one to whom it was issued does not render a person liable to the penalty.[48]

Rights on loss of ticket.—Issuance of a duplicate in place of a lost commutation ticket cannot be compelled where the ticket provides that the company shall not be required to refund if it is not used, and the holder cannot on its loss recover the amount paid by him or damages for failure to transport him without paying fare, neither has he a right to transportation except on payment of the regular fare.[49]

Round trip tickets.—If round trip tickets provide that they must be stamped on the day that they are to be used for return, the carrier is bound to have present a person authorized so to stamp the ticket a reasonable time before the arrival of trains on which it is good for passage.[50] A round trip ticket good for one day is available on the only train returning, though it may not be scheduled to stop at the station of purchase.[51]

Limited tickets.—A ticket may be good for a return journey commenced though not completed before the final limit.[52] The ticket where signed by the purchaser and bearing punch mark showing date of its expiration, is conclusive tation from there to Dawson City, which was stated to be of a certain value. The railroad's agent at Seattle purchased a regular contract ticket from the steamship company for the sum stated—Dresser v. Canadian Pac. Ry. Co., 116 Fed. 281.

41. Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Foster, 134 Ala. 244.

42. Laws 1901, c. 639—People v. Caldwell, 168 N. Y. 671.

43. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Frank, 110 Fed. 689.

44. Southern Ry. Co. v. Marshall, 23 Ky. L. R. 813, 64 S. W. 418.

45. Batts' Ann. Civ. St., title 94, c. 12a—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Ing (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 722.

46. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Ing (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 722.

47. Ticket issued at a reduced rate in consideration of persons agreeing that it should not be transferred—Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Frank, 110 Fed. 689.

48. Act June 10, 1897—Allardt v. People, 197 Ill. 501.

49. Southern Ry. Co. v. De Saussure (Ga.) 42 S. E. 479.

50. Southern Ry. Co. v. Wood, 114 Ga. 140, 55 L. R. A. 536.

51. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Harris (Miss.) 32 So. 309.

52. Rutherford v. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 161. One who begins the return journey before midnight of the final day, but owing to a delay misses a connection, may recover for his ejection from the next train of the connecting road on the ground that the ticket has expired—Morningstar v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 125 Ala. 251.

evidence to the conductor as to when it expires.[53] The passenger is not bound by limitations printed on a general ticket, where his attention is not called to them and he is not charged with notice thereof.[54]

Stop over privileges do not exist in the absence of agreement, though the ticket is unlimited.[55] A passenger is entitled to ride from a point at which he has rightfully made a stop over, though he has no written evidence of his right to passage, it having been taken up by a previous conductor, before the stop over, over the passenger's objection.[56]

Redemption of tickets.—One who has purchased tickets for the purpose only of having them redeemed is not entitled to a statutory penalty on failure of redemption. Under statutes providing a penalty on failure to redeem where a demand for redemption has been made, a second demand of the price at the end of the time within which the redemption money should have been paid is not necessary to put the carrier in default. If the agent knows that the plaintiff has tickets in his possession for the purpose of asking that they be redeemed and declines redemption, a formal tender of the tickets is not required. Where notice of the time for redemption is not posted as required by the statute, demand may be made within the period of the general statutes of limitations.[57]

Actions for failure to carry or to honor tickets.[58]—An allegation that a conductor refused to accept a fare offered does not amount to a statement that there was a refusal to carry plaintiff.[59] Where the pleadings and evidence show reliance on statements of an agent that a train will stop at a certain place, an instruction permitting recovery on the ticket as evidencing the contract without regard to the agent's statements is erroneous.[60] Where a passenger pays a fare under threat of expulsion, the question of expulsion should not be submitted to the jury in an action for damages.[61] Breach of contract of carriage, no special damage being laid, entitles the passenger only to recover the costs of transportation in the most feasible, reasonable way.[62] Where an action is for the refusal of an excursion ticket on the ground that it had expired, the difference between the excursion and the regular rate is immaterial.[63] On breach of contract to hold the train, the measure of damages is the compensation for lost time, personal inconvenience and necessitated expenses, but there can be no recovery for pain of body or of mind.[64]

Performance of contract of carriage.—An ice blockade is not an act of God excusing breach of a contract to carry to a particular port, and where a ticket provides that in case it is impossible to land a passenger safely at his port of destination he may be landed at the next port, the carrier is not entitled to land him at a 53. Rolfs v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Kan.) 71 Pac. 526.

54. Full fare was paid and it was held that the posting of notices in the waiting rooms and ticket offices was not sufficient to charge him with notice of the limitations—Norman v. Southern Ry., 65 S. C. 517.

55. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Klyman, 103 Tenn. 304, 56 L. R. A. 769.

56. Nothing on the face of the ticket inconsistent with the stop over privilege or any rule or knowledge thereof by the passenger inconsistent with such privilege was shown—Scofield v. Pennsylvania Co. (C. C. A.) 112 Fed. 855.

57. Acts 28th Genl. Assem. c. 71, § 1—Jolley v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 93 N. W. 555.

58. Evidence held insufficient to warrant a peremptory instruction to find a promise by a railroad agent, that a train should stop where plaintiff desired to alight—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Kilgo (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 556.

59. Dierig v. South Covington & C. St. Ry. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1825, 72 S. W. 355.

60. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Kilgo (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 556.

61. Myers v. Southern R., 64 S. C. 514.

62. Rose v. King, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 308.

63. Rutherford v. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 161.

64. $250 excessive, where pecuniary loss is only $22.50 and delay for one night and plaintiff was able to secure a bed and go to sleep—Southern Ry. Co. v. Marshall, 23 Ky. L. R. 813, 64 S. W. 418.

previous port, though the port of destination is ice bound and inaccessible.[65] Where the agreement is to land a passenger at a point as near the mouth of a certain river as the landing may be made in safety, the determination of the landing is to be made by the master acting in good faith.[66]

Actions for failure to perform.—A release from one of the workmen is not a defense to an action for breach of contract in failing to land plaintiff and his workmen at their destination. Where defendant testifies that its reason for landing plaintiff short of his destination was information that the port was inaccessible on account of ice, it is immaterial from whom such information was received.[67] The costs incident to reaching the proper destination are elements of damage.[68] To establish the wages lost by failure to land plaintiff and his employees at the port of destination, evidence of wages at the point where landed is admissible, if they were the same as at the point of destination.[69] In the absence of notice of special necessity, a person delayed may recover only the value of his time during the delay.[70] Exemplary damages cannot be recovered for delay, though the causes thereof were known to the agent at the time the ticket was purchased.[71]

§ 24. Extra charges where tickets are not procured, and other regulations.—Before a greater charge may be exacted of persons paying fare on trains, a passenger must be afforded a reasonable opportunity to purchase a ticket before entering a train.[72] A street railway company's rule against employees in uniform, but off duty, sitting on front seats of open cars, is reasonable, though applied to an employee paying fare,[73] but does not justify a forcible ejection by an inspector who has authority to make rules governing employees.[74] The fact that an agent sells a ticket for passage on a freight train, without informing the passenger that he must sign a special permit, does not abrogate a rule requiring the permit, since it is reasonable, and the passenger is bound to take notice of reasonable rules.[75] Persistent violation of rules regulating conduct at stations may prevent a passenger from complaining of the use of unnecessary force in compelling him to obey them.[76] The reasonableness of regulations is a question of law.[77]

§ 25. Ejection of passengers. Persons without ticket or refusing to pay fare.—Where a passenger having stop over privileges is compelled to surrender the ticket-coupon evidencing his right to passage for the remainder of the journey, his lack of written evidence of right to transportation confers no authority on the conductor of a later train to eject him, and if he attempt to ride without a ticket, he is not guilty of contributory negligence, nor is his right of action rendered complete by the fact that the coupon ticket is taken up so that he has no right of

65. Bullock v. White Star S. S. Co., 30 Wash. 448, 70 Pac. 1106.

66. Torrey v. Kelly (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 542.

67. Bullock v. White Star S. S. Co., 30 Wash. 448, 70 Pac. 1106.

68. Such as the cost of an outfit and supplies to travel to the point of destination, living expenses together with the expenses of loss of time and wages—Bullock v. White Star S. S. Co., 30 Wash. 448, 70 Pac. 1106.

69. Bullock v. White Star S. S. Co., 30 Wash. 448, 70 Pac. 1106.

70. Lawyer detained may recover value based on average earnings during at least twelve months preceding—Cooley v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 239.

71. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Pearson, 80 Miss. 26.

72. Phillips v. Southern Ry. Co., 114 Ga. 284. Fare for points within the state—Weber v. Southern Ry. Co., 65 S. C. 356.

73. Rowe v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 474.

74. Rowe v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 477.

75. Ellis v. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 114.

76. The persistent violation of regulation forbidding passengers from going to sleep in the waiting rooms or lying down on the benches causing defendant's servant to lose his temper—Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Motes (Ga.) 43 S. E. 990.

77. A rule forbidding passengers lying down or going to sleep in waiting rooms is not as a matter of law unreasonable—Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Motes (Ga.) 43 S. E. 990. Regulations as to excess rates and rebate checks—Weber v. Southern Ry. Co., 65 S. C. 356.

action for the subsequent expulsion.[78] Where a passenger is so drunk that he does not consciously refuse to produce a ticket, though he pays no attention to a request to do so, the carrier may be liable for ejecting him at night.[79]

Persons refusing to pay extra charges.—An extra charge cannot be exacted of one paying cash fare where the ticket office is not kept open up to the arrival of the train,[80] or where a ticket is not procured because of a statement of the agent that he could not sell a ticket and the passenger would have to pay fare on the train.[81]

Persons with defective tickets.—Where a coupon book provides that coupons must be detached by the conductor, one who presents a coupon from his wife's book and refuses to produce the book cannot recover for an expulsion though the conductor did not demand a cash fare or plaintiff tender payment except the coupon.[82] Where a return ticket provides that it shall be stamped by the carrier's agent, if the passenger, on the day he desires to return, is unable, by the exercise of due diligence, to find an authorized agent for such purpose, the carrier is liable for his expulsion from the train after he has explained the facts, and the passenger does not waive his right to recover by the fact that he has the ticket signed and stamped and uses it for return passage on another train.[83]

Interchangeable mileage.—Where a station is out of exchange tickets and a passenger boards a train and presents a mileage book, but the conductor refuses to issue an exchange ticket and ejects him at a station where the ticket office is closed, and refuses to allow him to re-enter the train, though he calls the conductor's attention to such fact, there is a breach of contract, the mileage ticket providing that conductors may issue exchange tickets where the train is boarded at stations where there is no ticket office or where the office is closed, and in such a case plaintiff is not required to pay his fare and rely on its recovery by suit, but may stand on his rights under the contract.[84]

Persons with defective transfers.—Where there is an agreement between two street railroads to transfer from one to the other, one company is liable for the mistake of the employee of the other in punching a transfer,[85] so a passenger who is given a transfer to a wrong line may recover if ejected after he has explained the matter to the conductor on the line over which he wishes to travel.[86] Reasonable explanations must be accepted.[87] One receiving an erroneous transfer is not contributorily negligent in case he does not understand it, and good faith of the conductor, or mistake in the way the transfer is punched, will not relieve the carrier from liability for his ejection.[88]

Right to tender fare after refusal.—A passenger may, after refusal to pay fare, tender it as he sees the conductor stop the train to put him off and the conductor

78. Scofield v. Pennsylvania Co. (C. C. A.) 112 Fed. 855.

79. Passenger was visibly intoxicated when he got on the car and had a coupon ticket to his destination the first coupon of which the conductor collected—Clark v. Harrisburg Traction Co., 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 76.

80. Laws 1857, c. 228, providing that the ticket office must be kept open for an hour prior to the departure of each passenger train—Monnier v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 405.

81. Phillips v. Southern Ry. Co., 114 Ga. 284.

82. United Rys. & Electric Co. v. Hardesty, 94 Md. 661.

83. Southern Ry. Co. v. Wood, 114 Ga. 140, 55 L. R. A. 536.

84. Pennsylvania Co. v. Lenhart, 120 Fed. 61.

85. Jacobs v. Third Ave. R. Co., 71 App. Div. 199, 10 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 462.

86. The passenger was under no obligation to make a technical examination of the transfer slip—Lawshe v. Tacoma Ry. & Power Co., 29 Wash. 681, 70 Pac. 118.

87. Indianapolis St. Ry. Co. v. Wilson (Ind.) 66 N. E. 950.

88. Passenger was ejected on account of improper punching of transfer and arrested at the request of the conductor—Jacobs v. Third Ave. R. Co., 71 App. Div. 199, 10 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 462.

must accept it,[89] though it has also been held that an offer to pay fare during the process of ejection will not render the continuance of the expulsion tortious.[90]

Passenger on wrong train.—A passenger cannot recover where he is ejected because his ticket is not good on a particular train, of which fact he has knowledge,[91] nor can one who attempts to ride on a freight train without a necessary permit.[92] A person who has been sold a ticket for passage on a particular train, and assured by the agent that the train will stop at his destination, may recover if ejected on the sole ground that the train does not make such stop, unless he has knowledge that the agent had no power to so inform him and that the conductor is prohibited from stopping there.[93] He may rely on the representations of the local ticket agent.[94] A ticket entitling the purchaser to ride on a freight train, and containing a provision that the company shall not be liable for damages to person or baggage, cannot be revoked at any time by reason of the fact that the provision is not binding on the passenger.[95]

Passenger misbehaving.—A railroad company may, without unnecessary force, eject a boisterous, violent, and intoxicated passenger.[96]

Place of ejection.—If the place of ejection for nonpayment of fare is provided by statute, the carrier, to relieve itself from liability, must prove that the terms thereof were followed.[97] In some states, a carrier is liable for putting a passenger off at a dangerous place only in the event that he is put off against his will or in such a mental condition as to be incapable of having a will.[98] The question of the dangerous character of the place of ejection is controlled by the fitness of the place which the passenger safely reaches.[99]

Manner of ejection.—Where a passenger repeatedly refuses to pay fare, the conductor may use necessary force in putting him off.[1] There may be a forcible ejection though the passenger is not touched,[2] but mere rude and not abusive language used by a conductor does not render the carrier liable in damages.[3] A boisterous and intoxicated passenger may be expelled but not assaulted,[4] and his drunkenness does not relieve the company from liability to exercise care.[5] One,

89. In this case plaintiff sought to get a ticket before going on the train and also a credit slip necessary for rebate on purchase of ticket and had refused to pay fare unless the conductor would give such credit slip—Holt v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 87 Mo. App. 203.

90. There had been a persistent refusal to pay the legal fare and physical force was being employed to eject plaintiff at the regular station—Behr v. Erie R. Co., 69 App. Div. (N. Y.) 416.

91. The ticket was an excursion ticket sold at a reduced rate and reciting that it was not good on a particular train, and the ejection was accompanied by no unnecessary force—England v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 24.

92. One knowing the necessity of a permit cannot rely on the ticket agent's statement that such permit may be obtained on the train if he know the statement is unauthorized—Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Stell (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 537.

93. Atkinson v. Southern Ry. Co., 114 Ga. 146, 55 L. R. A. 223.

94. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Little (Kan.) 71 Pac. 820.

95. This theory was advanced in an action for wrongful exclusion from a freight train—Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Almand (Ga.) 42 S. E. 67.

96. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Saulsberry, 23 Ky. L. R. 2341, 66 S. W. 1051.

97. Rev. St. 1899, § 1074. Allowing a passenger to be ejected without unnecessary force at any usual stopping place or near any dwelling house—Holt v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 87 Mo. App. 203.

98. So held construing an instruction—Bohannon's Adm'x v. Southern Ry. Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 1390, 65 S. W. 169.

99. It is not negligence to eject an intoxicated passenger, and leave him 25 or 30 feet from the track in a public street talking to a public officer—Gaukler v. Detroit, G. H. & M. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 9 Detroit Leg. N. 215, 90 N. W. 660.

1. McGarry v. Holyoke St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 123. On removal of an intoxicated passenger for nonpayment of fare the conductor must act in a prudent manner with the use of no more force than is necessary—Central Ry. Co. v. Mackey, 103 Ill. App. 15.

2. As where the conductor follows the passenger on the platform and threatens to throw him off if he does not alight—Indiana, D. & W. Ry. Co. v. Ditto, 158 Ind. 669.

3. Daniels v. Florida Cent. & P. R. Co., 62 S. C. 1.

4. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 58.

5. An instruction that if plaintiff was in such a state of intoxication as to render him with a ticket, boarding a freight train, which does not carry passengers may recover if compelled to jump from it in the dark while it is in motion.[6]

Injuries caused by passenger's conduct.[7]—One who causes added indignities to be shown him for the purpose of increasing damages cannot recover therefor.[8] Where a passenger is injured while running beside a train after his ejection, with the intention of getting on again, the carrier is not bound to stop for the purpose of finding out if he is hurt.[9] Where a person on the steps refuses to either enter or leave the car, the conductor may use such reasonable force as may be necessary to make him do one thing or the other.[10]

Actions for ejection.—Recovery for ejection on refusal to accept a transfer may be by an action in tort as well as on contract unless plaintiff's fault or negligence aided in leading up to the expulsion.[11] An action of assault and battery may be maintained for ejection on refusal to pay an extra sum wrongfully demanded.[12]

Pleading.[13]—The complaint must negative a statute authorizing the charge of an increased fare.[14] An allegation that, after tender of legal fare, passage was refused, willfully, wrongfully, unlawfully, and intentionally, sets up a cause of action for punitive damages.[15] Where rules prohibiting the sale of tickets such as was presented by plaintiff are pleaded, disuse or waiver of the rules must be also pleaded.[16] It cannot be shown that plaintiff was drunk at the time of his ejection under a mere denial of wrongful ejection, the complaint alleging that plaintiff was put off without being allowed to pay his fare.[17] Defendant's opening statement is not restrictive as to the issues involved.[18]

Burden of proof.—In the absence of a plea of non est factum plaintiff need not prove that defendant executed and issued the ticket relied on.[19] The burden is on the carrier to establish conditions in a ticket relied on as a defense.[20] Defendant has the burden of proof if it admit that plaintiff is entitled to actual damages.[21] mentally incapable of ordinary care and caution for his own personal safety, or if by reason of such state of intoxication he contributed to the injuries complained of, he could not recover, is erroneous—Central Ry. Co. v. Mackey, 103 Ill. App. 15.

Admissibility and sufficiency of evidence.—Particular decisions are grouped in the notes.[22]

6. Indiana, D. & W. Ry. Co. v. Ditto, 158 Ind. 669.

7. The carrier is entitled to have an instruction state that if a passenger refuses to comply with a request to leave the train after refusing to pay fare and resists and an injury happen, the company was not responsible—McCullen v. New York & N. S. Ry. Co., 68 App. Div. (N. Y.) 269.

8. Patterson v. Southern Pac. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 308.

9. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Saulsberry 23 Ky. L. R. 2341, 66 S. W. 1051.

10. Brace v. St. Paul City Ry. Co., 87 Minn. 292.

11. The transfer was incorrectly punched —Perrine v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co. (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 799.

12. Monnier v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 405.

13. Pleas held bad in action for ejection as not denying complaint or proper as confession and avoidance—Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Bates, 133 Ala. 447. Sufficiency of plea to place in issue the condition of a coin tendered as fare—Mobile St. Ry. Co. v. Watters, 135 Ala. 227.

14. 2 Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 5458c, et seq. —Smith v. Indianapolis St. Ry. Co., 158 Ind. 425.

15. Kibler v. Southern Ry., 64 S. C. 242.

16. Complaint alleged offer of an unlimited ticket and defendant pleaded a rule that tickets should be good for continuous passage beginning on the date of sale, knowledge of such rule by plaintiff, and notice indorsed on the ticket—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bizzell, 131 Ala. 429.

17. Raynor v. Wilmington S. C. R. Co., 129 N. C. 195.

18. If plaintiff allege that ejection is without fault or negligence on his part and the allegation is denied by answer, an issue raised by proof of plaintiff's misconduct should be submitted though the only defense alleged in defendant's opening statement was that plaintiff was not a passenger —Bough v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 771.

19. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Ing (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 722.

20. Daniels v. Florida Cent. & P. R. Co., 62 S. C. 1.

21. Civ. Code Pr. § 526—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Champion, 24 Ky. L. R. 87, 68 S. W. 143.

22. Admissibility. Where the conductor claimed that a ticket was out of date, it may be shown as a defense that the ticket was good for only one continuous passage—Louis-

Questions of law and fact.—The question of whether the conductor's act was the proximate cause of an injury may be for the jury;[23] so, also, the question of where plaintiff was ejected,[24] or what kind of a ticket plaintiff purchased.[25]

Instructions.[26]—An instruction that plaintiff may recover if a fare tendered was legal tender ignores the issue of whether the conductor could, from the condition of the coin, determine such fact.[27] Where the evidence was that the ticket was indorsed good for a continuous passage beginning on the day of sale, an instruction to the effect that there was nothing on the ticket to show the purchaser that he could not use it when he was disposed to do so, is properly refused.[28] Where the gist of the action is in the negligent expulsion of an intoxicated passenger in ville & N. R. Co. v. Klyman, 108 Tenn. 304, 56 L. R. A. 769. Evidence that other passengers complained of plaintiff's language before his ejection may be admitted where plaintiff's allegation is that he was without fault and it is denied by answer—Bough v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 771. Where it is alleged that the conductor on an offer of a third person to pay plaintiff's fare used violent language and declared that plaintiff should not ride, evidence of the offer is admissible—Weber v. Southern Ry. Co., 65 S. C. 356. Posted notices limiting the validity of tickets are not admissible unless it is shown that a passenger has read them or knows of their contents. Action for ejection on the ground that a ticket has expired—Georgia R. Co. v. Baldoni, 115 Ga. 1013. Evidence that plaintiff was drunk more than four hours after ejection is not admissible to corroborate evidence that he was drunk when ejected—Raynor v. Wilmington S. C. R. Co., 129 N. C. 195. The custom of conductors on payment of cash fares, to issue credit slips on contracts for rebate may be shown where passenger demanded such a slip—Holt v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 87 Mo. App. 203. In an action for being wantonly pushed from a car platform, evidence of the conductor's general character and conduct toward lady passengers is inadmissible, where no attempt has been made to impeach him—Berger v. Chicago & A. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 102. Questions relating to money subsequently obtained to pay fare are inadmissible, where the ground of action was the ejection of a passenger on the ground that a fare tendered was not legal tender—Mobile St. Ry. Co. v. Watters, 135 Ala. 227. Where defendant attempts to prove that plaintiff had been riding in another car than the one she alleges she was pushed from, plaintiff, in rebuttal, may show that she was not seen in such other car—Berger v. Chicago & A. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 102. Where a passenger is expelled from a train for refusal to pay fare after having presented a mileage ticket without an exchange ticket which he had been unable to procure, evidence of conversations and transactions between the passenger and a ticket agent, or the conductor of a succeeding train after the ejection, is not admissible—Pennsylvania Co. v. Lenhart, 120 Fed. 61. Evidence of negotiations for a settlement of a claim for wrongful ejection by a conductor is not admissible to show a ratification of the conductor's action—Pennsylvania Co. v. Lenhart, 120 Fed. 61. Ground for cancellation of a contract of carriage not discovered until after the ejection and not urged at the time will not constitute a defense, as where a passenger was put off on the ground that his ticket had expired and subsequent discovery that his trunk contained merchandise instead of baggage—Georgia R. Co. v. Baldoni, 115 Ga. 1013. Sufficiency: Injuries from being wantonly pushed from car—Berger v. Chicago & A. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 102. Identity of a conductor furnishing a transfer—Foley v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 114 N. Y. St. Rep. 249. Ejection from a moving train—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Bohannon (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 776. To demand submission to jury of the question whether plaintiff's delay, until an assault was made on him, before paying an extra charge for bridge toll, was for the purpose of increasing damages—Patterson v. Southern Pac. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 308. Plaintiff's evidence that she had purchased a round trip ticket is sufficient to go to the jury. Plaintiff testified as to the regular fare from her starting point to her destination and on the occasion in question she bought a round trip ticket for a less amount—Daniels v. Florida Cent. & P. R. Co., 62 S. C. 1.

23. As where one who has boarded a freight train to inquire concerning the expected arrival of his wife, refuses to leave the train while it is in motion and on refusing to pay fare is locked out on the rear platform—Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Bruyere, 114 Fed. 540.

24. Evidence examined and held to be sufficiently contradictory—Gaukler v. Detroit, G. H. & M. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 90 N. W. 660.

25. Plaintiff having lost her ticket, secondary evidence of its contents was introduced in evidence by the agent as to what sort of tickets were sold for the excursion in question—Daniels v. Florida Cent. & P. R. Co., 62 S. C. 1.

26. Instruction held erroneous as withdrawing right to exact statutory minimum charge in addition to rebate charge—Kibler v. Southern Ry., 62 S. C. 252.

27. In an action for ejectment of a passenger for non-payment of fare, an instruction that a dime introduced in evidence was of legal tender quality is warranted by the evidence of defendant's conductor, who while denying that coin introduced was the one offered for plaintiff's fare, testified that such coin was a good, visibly lettered dime—Mobile St. Ry. Co. v. Watters, 135 Ala. 227.

28. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bizzell, 131 Ala. 429.

a dangerous place, the use of the word "ejectment" in an instruction does not require the jury to find the existence of force.[29]

Elements and measure of damages.[30]—Where a person boarding a freight train without a permit is put off without force, at the place he got on, he is not damaged, not being prevented from making his journey on that day and not having demanded the money paid for his ticket.[31] The carrier is liable for nominal damages for failure to obey a statutory requirement that trains shall be stopped before ejection of passengers, though the passenger is not injured.[32] Where a passenger is, by mistake, issued a ticket to a point prior to his destination and is there ejected, the mere cost of transportation to the proper destination is not the measure of damages.[33] Compensatory damages may be awarded only for loss of time, fare on another car, and injury to feelings.[34] Where coupons are wrongfully detached by a conductor from a ticket and are declined by a subsequent conductor, the amount of damage recoverable for ejection is the fare paid by plaintiff on the next car by which he arrives at his destination.[35] Where plaintiff sues for lost time, expenses incurred, and punitive damages resulting from an exclusion from defendant's train, the action is not for one of those torts included by a statute providing that where the entire injury is to the peace or feelings, no measure of damages can be prescribed.[36] A carrier may be liable for injury to feelings without physical injury in a case of wrongful expulsion.[37] Recovery may be had for sufferings resulting from apprehension of yellow fever, caused by being put off at an improper destination, the agent knowing of the prevalence of the disease there.[38] On ejection, damages for humiliation and disgrace may be recovered, though no one was present save the conductor and the brakeman.[39] They may be included as an element of damage, though not specifically pleaded and though there is no direct testimony thereto.[40] Improper conduct is admissible in mitigation.[41]

Exemplary and punitive damage.[42]—The right to punitive damages is for the jury.[43] The carrier is liable for exemplary damages if there is gross wantonness or willfully oppressive negligence.[44] Punitive damages cannot be awarded where the conductor refuses a ticket through an honest mistake and the passenger voluntarily leaves the train,[45] or is ejected.[46] Refusal to honor ticket not good

29. Bohannon's Adm'x v. Southern Ry. Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 1390, 65 S. W. 169.

30. See article "Damages" for general questions. Where a conductor has knowledge that plaintiff has an injured hand, enhanced pain therein caused by forcible ejection may be considered as bearing on damages—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 65.

31. Ellis v. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 114.

32. Rev. St. 1899, § 1074—Holt v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 87 Mo. App. 203.

33. Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Foster, 134 Ala. 244.

34. Jacobs v. Third Ave. R. Co., 71 App. Div. 199, 10 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 462.

35. Brown v. Rapid Ry. Co. (Mich.) 90 N. W. 290.

36. Civ. Code, 3907—Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Almand (Ga.) 43 S. E. 67.

37. Mabry v. City Electric Ry. Co. (Ga.) 42 S. E. 1025.

38. Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Foster, 134 Ala. 244.

39. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Little (Kan.) 71 Pac. 820.

40. Berger v. Chicago & A. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 102.

41. Bough v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 771.

42. The jury may be instructed on the subject of punitive damages, where one unable to obtain a signature on his return trip ticket boarded a train without having it signed and stamped and though he explains to the conductor and offers to guaranty payment of his fare, is expelled early on a dark and rainy morning in a strange place—Southern Ry. Co. v. Wood, 114 Ga. 140, 55 L. R. A. 536. An instruction that the intentional doing of an unlawful act will be construed as malice so that plaintiff could have punitive damages is erroneous—Kibler v. Southern Ry., 62 S. C. 252.

43. Ejection because of expiration of the time limit of the ticket—Norman v. Southern Ry. Co., 65 S. C. 517; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bizzell, 131 Ala. 429.

44. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Little (Kan.) 71 Pac. 820.

45. The date on the ticket was indistinct and the conductor was acting under a warning to look out for a particular ticket—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Champion, 24 Ky. L. R. 87, 68 S. W. 143.

46. The mistake was due to plaintiff hurrying the issuing agent—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Moore, 79 Miss. 766.

on train is not ground for exemplary damages though the agent stated that the ticket was good on any train.[47] Exemplary damages may be recovered for an unnecessary assault.[48] Punitive damages may be awarded where a conductor speaks harshly to a passenger and wantonly pushes her from a car platform.[49] Where the holder of a limited ticket misses a connection and takes the next train after the limit has expired, if full fare is collected after expulsion the question of exemplary damages is for the jury.[50] Holdings as to excessive damages are grouped in the notes.[51]

§ 26. Liability for personal injuries. A. General principles. What law governs.—The degree of care required of a carrier is governed by the law of the state in which the injury is received.[52] A judgment will be reversed when it cannot be determined as to how far it was governed by a consideration of a repealed statute as to prima facie evidence of negligence.[53]

Degree of care required.—The degree of care required is variously defined as: "the utmost care and diligence,"[54] "the strictest diligence,"[55] "the highest degree of care,"[56] and as being liable for the "slightest negligence."[57] From the reverse standpoint the carrier's employes are not bound to exercise the "utmost human skill, diligence and foresight,"[58] "the highest degree of care,"[59] other than the highest degree of care that a very cautious person would exercise under similar circumstances,[60] or that high degree of care which would have been exercised by very cautious, prudent and competent persons,[61] though an instruction may require the highest degree of care where, by statute, a carrier is required to exercise the utmost

47. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Rodgers, 80 Miss. 200.

48. Ejection for nonpayment of fare though conductor was notified that fare was paid—Denison & S. Ry. Co. v. Randell (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 1013.

49. Berger v. Chicago & A. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 102.

50. Myers v. Southern R., 64 S. C. 514.

51. $150 is not excessive for an expulsion on a cold night where it was necessary for plaintiff to walk about ten miles and the conductor in the presence of other passengers used profane language towards him—Gisleson v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 85 Minn. 329. $250 for putting a child down at a wrong station is excessive where the child evidently suffered little distress—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Jordan, 23 Ky. L. R. 1730, 66 S. W. 27. $450 not excessive, where plaintiff was held up as one trying to ride without a lawful right—Southern Ry. Co. v. Wood, 114 Ga. 140, 55 L. R. A. 536. $500 not excessive where refusal to pay extra charge was because of inability to secure ticket and passenger was with acquaintances—Monnier v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 405. $1500 is not excessive for ejection of a passenger accompanied by an unpalliated assault—Foley v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 114 N. Y. St. R. 249. $1500 not excessive—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 65.

52. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Harmon, 23 Ky. L. R. 871, 64 S. W. 640.

53. Action for injuries from an explosion of a steamboat boiler based on Act Congress July 7, 1838, c. 191, § 13 (5 Stat. 305) repealed by Act Congress Feb. 28, 1871, c. 100, § 71 (16 Stat. 440, 459)—Richtman v. Haley, 121 Fed. 353.

54. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Tanner (Va.) 41 S. E. 721; Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Gray (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 316. An instruction that negligence is the failure to use the high degree of care that would be exercised by a prudent person under like circumstances, is erroneous—Knauff v. San Antonio Traction Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 1011.

55. Le Blanc v. Sweet, 107 La. 355.

56. Carrier is liable for any negligence unless the passenger is contributorily negligent—Knauss v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co., 29 Ind. App. 216.

57. Sambuck v. Southern Pac. Co., 138 Cal. xix., 71 Pac. 174.

58. An instruction to such effect in an action for an injury resulting from a sudden stop is erroneous—Freeman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 95 Mo. App. 314.

59. It is sufficient to use the high degree of care and prudence that will be used by very cautious, prudent and competent persons under like circumstances—Williams v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 1085. Negligence when applied to carriers means a failure in the performance of duty imposed by law for the protection of others to exercise that degree of care which very competent and prudent persons would usually exercise under the same or similar circumstances—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Harrison (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 38.

60. Over an objection that it required the greatest care which would have been exercised by the most skillful and careful individuals to be found in the class named—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Byers (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 558.

61. Action for injuries resulting through the carriage of plaintiff's wife and child in an unheated car in cold weather without water and compelling the wife to stand and hold the child—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Campbell (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 451.

care.[62] There is an implied contract that passengers shall not be imperiled by even the slightest fault of servants,[63] but only in receiving, keeping, carrying and discharging passengers is extraordinary diligence required.[64] Carriers of passengers, while not insurers, are in Illinois held to the exercise of the highest degree of care, skill and diligence practically consistent with the efficient use of the mode of transportation adopted,[65] the passenger being in the exercise of ordinary care.[66] The question whether a carrier is bound to anticipate an unauthorized act of a passenger is for the jury,[67] as is the question of whether the omission or commission of particular acts is negligence, unless omissions are made negligence by law.[68] The burden is on plaintiff to show an act resulting from culpable negligence of defendant, which was the proximate cause of the injury; recovery cannot be had for mere accident.[69]

Street railway companies may be required to exercise the "highest degree" of care,[70] and an instruction that they must use great care and caution with regard to their machinery and appliances does not impose too great a liability,[71] or "reasonable care" may be all that is required.[72] Where the situation is not one from which grave injury may be expected, a street car company is not bound to exercise the highest degree of care and skill which human foresight can provide.[73] Use of electricity or steam as a motive power raises no difference as to the degree of care required.[74]

As to dangers and perils not incident to ordinary railway travel, the carrier must use ordinary care and diligence,[75] and must adopt all reasonable precautions for the safety and comfort of persons who are at his station as passengers.[76]

Carriage of passengers on freight trains.—A carrier is bound to the highest degree of care without regard to the vehicle used for conveyance;[77] the same care is required in the carriage of passengers on freight as on exclusively passenger trains,[78] and the carrier must exercise all care available for a passenger's safety consistent with the operation of the train.[79] The carrier must exercise the highest degree of care in the operation of mixed trains consistent with their use.[80] A drover being

62. Civ. Code, § 2100—Osgood v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 137 Cal. 280, 70 Pac. 169.

63. Clerc v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co., 107 La. 370.

64. Southern Ry. Co. v. Reeves (Ga.) 42 S. E. 1015.

65. Pennsylvania Co. v. Greso, 102 Ill. App. 252; Kane v. Cicero & P. Elec. Ry. Co., 100 Ill. App. 181.

66. Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Morse, 98 Ill. App. 662.

67. Where an intoxicated passenger uncoupled a rear coach, and the air brakes automatically set thereon were insufficient to stop it before it collided with the forward section of the coach—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Storey (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 534.

68. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. McKinney, 116 Ga. 13.

69. Cleveland City Ry. Co. v. Osborn, 66 Ohio St. 45.

70. Citizens' Ry. Co. v. Craig (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 239. The carrier is bound to use the highest degree of care and diligence reasonably practicable in securing the safety of passengers by keeping its cars and appliances in a safe condition and at all times under the control and management of skilled and competent servants—McAllister v. People's Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 743.

71. Dallas Consol. Elec. St. Ry. Co. v. Broadhurst (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 315.

72. Instruction requiring a "very high degree of care" held erroneous. Passenger injured by collision with another passenger on jolt as the car rounded a curve—Merrill v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 401.

73. Such a situation is not shown in an action for injuries received in a collision between a street car and a wagon, where the wagon travelling in the opposite direction from the car was unable to turn out as quickly as usual on account of a heavy load, and plaintiff was injured by flying splinters in the ensuing collision.—Conway v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 878.

74. McAllister v. People's Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 743.

75. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Murphy, 99 Ill. App. 126.

76. Southern Ry. Co. v. Reeves (Ga.) 42 S. E. 1015.

77. Southern Ry. Co. v. Crowder, 130 Ala. 256; Muth v. St. Louis & M. R. R. Co., 87 Mo. App. 422.

78. Erwin v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co., 94 Mo. App. 289.

79. Southern Ry. Co. v. Crowder, 130 Ala. 256.

80. Stembridge v. Southern Ry., 65 S. C. 440.

transported on a freight train is not entitled to the highest degree of care or skill consistent with the nature of the undertaking, but only such care as is consistent with the operation of the train.[81] A person riding in a freight car assumes the risks incident to the necessary jerking and pushing of the car against other cars.[82] In the coupling of cars to a freight train, the carrier must use such care, prudence and foresight as would be used by very cautious, prudent and competent persons under similar circumstances.[83]

Carriage of passengers in cabs.[84]—Where a person riding in a hack is injured by the collision of the hack with a street car, she may rely on the agent of the hack line to exercise proper care for her safety, but as toward the driver, the street car company is bound to exercise ordinary care.[85]

Liability to persons riding free.—The liability for negligence is the same toward one riding on a free pass as toward a regular passenger,[86] unless there is a special agreement;[87] so a passenger carried gratuitously or who has not paid his fare may maintain an action for negligence,[88] though a person riding on a free pass, issued in violation of statute, cannot.[89]

Duty toward intoxicated, infirm, or delicate persons.[90]—A carrier's duty toward an intoxicated passenger is not affected by the fact that he violated a law in becoming intoxicated. Whether the extent of intoxication rendered the passenger unable to care for himself is for the jury.[91] A carrier is liable for injuries to a passenger, though the condition rendering her susceptible to such injury is not disclosed.[92]

Liability of carrier transporting cars or using premises or vehicles of another.—A belt line may be a common carrier and liable to the diligence exacted thereof.[93] A street railway company is not liable to persons riding in the cars of another street railway company over its tracks under an agreement,[94] but where two street railroad lines connect, and each company operates cars over both lines under an agreement by which one company receives the fare and the other a rental for its cars, with privilege of through service, the companies are jointly liable.[95] The negligence of a lessee of the tracks of a railroad company is imputable to the lessor company.[96] The carrier is responsible for the negligence of persons not its em-

81. Western Md. R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 637.

82. An instruction to such effect properly includes the word "necessary" and need not state that there can be no recovery if the car is handled in a usual and proper manner —Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 81.

83. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Buie (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 853.

84. Where a passenger in a cab was injured by a collision between the cab and a street car, an instruction that as toward the cab company the passenger was required only to sit passively in the cab to be in the exercise of ordinary care, is not erroneous as rendering the cab company an insurer of plaintiff's safety—Frank Bird Transfer Co. v. Krug (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 309.

85. See for an instruction stating the distinction in the liability—Frank Bird Transfer Co. v. Krug (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 309.

86. Young v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 93 Mo. App. 267.

87. In re California Nav. & Imp. Co., 110 Fed. 670.

88. Russell v. Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 157 Ind. 305, 55 L. R. A. 253.

89. Newspaper editor riding on an annual pass violating Laws 1891, p. 277, c. 320, § 4. forbidding discrimination—McNeill v. Durham & C. R. Co., 132 N. C. 510.

90. A complaint states a cause of action which charges that defendant's servants with knowledge of plaintiff's intoxicated condition and his inability to care for himself, allowed him to stand in the baggage car between two open doors dancing and staggering—Wheeler v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 70 N. H. 607, 54 L. R. A. 955.

91. Wheeler v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 70 N. H. 607, 54 L. R. A. 955.

92. Injury to a pregnant woman caused by allowing a car to collide with a train—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Ferguson, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 460.

93. Where it switches whole trains from a given station to the stock-yards—Fleming v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 89 Mo. App. 129.

94. Plaintiff while so riding on the platform was struck by a tree growing near the track—Sias v. Rochester Ry. Co., 169 N. Y. 118.

95. Richard v. Detroit, R., R. & L. O. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 89 N. W. 52.

96. Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Doan, 195 Ill. 168.

ployes in whose hands it places a car;[97] so, where one company operates its cars over the road of another, it is liable to passengers for negligence of servants of the licensor.[98] One holding a legal title to a street railway in trust, managing it in accordance with the instructions of a committee, is not responsible for the negligence of an employe.[99] A switching crew employed by another company may be the servants of the carrier.[1] There is a liability to a passenger who, after being thrown from the carrier's train and stunned, is run over by a train belonging to another company using the tracks under an independent right.[2]

After a mail car has been placed on a side track at the termination of its journey, the carrier is not liable to a mail clerk for an injury sustained by reason of the negligence of another corporation.[3]

Where a carrier negligently shows a passenger who has applied for a berth, to a sleeper belonging to another company, causing him to be carried out of his way and ousted from the car by the conductor, it is not liable for wrongs inflicted by the company owning the sleeper.[4]

The lessor of a steamboat is not liable for injuries resulting from the negligence of the lessee.[5]

Union stations.—The carrier has been held liable for failure to keep premises used by it to receive and discharge passengers in safe condition, though they are a union depot under control of a receiver of the depot company,[6] but it has been also held that a railroad using a station built by a terminal company is freed from liability by discharge of its passenger at such station, and is not liable for injury received by him while going through the station.[7] The carrier operating the depot is liable for an injury to a person alighting from a train on another road, if its negligence concur, and it is not necessary that its negligence be the sole cause of the injury.[8]

(§ 26) B. Condition and care of premises.—The railroad company must be reasonably sure that its stations are safe, since the erection of them is an invitation to the public to enter on business, but is not liable for injuries unless the premises are unsafe and the likelihood of injury should have been foreseen.[9] A passenger is not bound to find out whether he is dealing with an agent of the carrier in the purchase of a ticket before assuming that the carrier is bound to furnish a safe approach to its depot.[10] An intending passenger to be entitled to protection as such

97. Clerc v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co., 107 La. 370.

98. Brady v. Chicago & G. W. Ry. Co., 114 Fed. 100, 57 L. R. A. 712.

99. The holder of the legal title received no compensation other than his salary as a bookkeeper, and had signed an agreement stating that he had purchased the road with the money of the committee as their agent and in trust for them, and agreed to convey on their request—O'Toole v. Faulkner, 29 Wash. 544, 70 Pac. 58.

1. As where one half the cost of switching at a certain point was paid by defendant company and there was no evidence of the terms of a contract concerning the joint business—Gulf. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Tex.) 72 S. W. 165.

2. Southern Ry. Co. v. Webb (Ga.) 42 S. E. 395.

3. Stoddard v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 181 Mass. 422.

4. Instructions are erroneous for this reason, which require defendant to use a high degree of care in the transportation of the passenger to his destination under his ticket and allow the jury to take into consideration the manner of his injury, his mental distress, anguish and humiliation—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Evans (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 351.

5. Where not a quasi public corporation with special privileges or benefits from the state—Phelps v. Windsor Steamboat Co., 131 N. C. 12.

6. Herrman v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 27 Wash. 472, 68 Pac. 82, 57 L. R. A. 390.

7. Construing Acts 1896, c. 516, §§ 1, 2, 3, 8, 9, 10, relative to the organization of the Boston Terminal Company, which allows construction of a station by five railroads—Frazier v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 180 Mass. 427.

8. A passenger boarded a train at the station believing that it was the train of a certain road, and on finding his mistake jumped off while it was in motion, slipped on a greasy platform and was hurt—Newcomb v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 169 Mo. 409.

9. Mayne v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. (Okl.) 69 Pac. 933.

10. Action against a carrier for injury re-

must remain in the station house or on such part of the grounds as he has a legal right to be.[11] Allowing a freight train to stand so as to prevent passengers from reaching a station in time to procure tickets for their trains is negligence, but the company is not liable unless such negligence is the proximate cause of an injury which should have been foreseen under the circumstances.[12]

Duty to warm stations.—The carrier must keep fire in its stations when required for the comfort of prospective passengers, and failure to properly heat a waiting room is prima facie negligence.[13]

Duty to furnish safe platforms.—The platform must be reasonably safe for use and so located as to afford a convenient means of access to the cars.[14] Depots and platforms must be kept in a safe condition.[15] Platforms must be sufficiently high.[16] A platform used exclusively for the handling of freight, of which fact passengers have knowledge, need not be kept safe for their use.[17] Depressions in station platforms for the purpose of crossing tracks which are reached by moderate inclines do not show a negligent construction.[18] A carrier is liable for the maintenance of an unguarded stairway on its station platform, though the person injured is at the time intoxicated.[19] Where a street railroad company has adopted a platform and invited the public to use it, it must be kept in a reasonably safe condition for boarding or alighting from cars, whether it was built by the company or is in a public street,[20] but the carrier is not liable, though it permit a stump placed in the street by a third person to project above its platform.[21]

The carrier is liable for injuries to a person pushed by a crowd on to a defective spot in its platform.[22] Negligence in the construction and care of platforms may be a question for the jury.[23]

Duty to light platforms and premises.—The carrier is not bound to keep its grounds lighted at a distance from the depot where it has no reason to expect passengers to pass.[24] The platform must be sufficiently lighted,[25] and the negligence ceived at a depot controlled by a union depot company which had charge of the sale of tickets over the carrier's road—Herrman v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 27 Wash. 472, 68 Pac. 82, 57 L. R. A. 390.

11. Instruction held proper in an action for injuries received by negligence in unloading of baggage—Holcombe v. Southern Ry. Co. (S. C.) 44 S. E. 68.

12. Mayne v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. (Okl.) 69 Pac. 933.

13. Sufficiency of instruction considered—St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Wilson, 70 Ark. 136.

14. Dotson v. Erie R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 54 Atl. 827.

15. Barker v. Ohio River R. Co., 51 W. Va. 423; Duell v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 115 Wis. 516. A space not more than six feet wide between the tracks of two railroad companies filled with stone and cement and from five to seven inches below the track level is not a proper place to discharge passengers at a regular station—Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Schmelling, 197 Ill. 619. The mere fact that the bumper of a car projects slightly over the edge of a platform will not show negligence on the part of the carrier—Dotson v. Erie R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 54 Atl. 827.

16. It is negligence to leave 12 or 13 inches between the car steps and the platform—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 653.

17. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Grubbs (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 519.

18. Action for injuries sustained by passenger jumping from moving train—Newcomb v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 169 Mo. 409.

19. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Lawrence, 96 Ill. App. 635.

20. Haselton v. Portsmouth, K. & Y. St. Ry., 71 N. H. 589.

21. Stump placed by electric light company projected 11 inches above platform; plaintiff intending to board defendant's car tripped over the stump, fell on the track and was injured—Lucas v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 589.

22. Indianapolis St. Ry. Co. v. Robinson, 157 Ind. 414.

23. Haselton v. Portsmouth, K. & Y. St. Ry., 71 N. H. 589. Removing a gate which customarily protected a space between cars of an elevated train allowing the passenger to step into an unguarded hole, believing it to be the platform of an elevated car she was about to board, it being dark at the time—Lake St. El. R. Co. v. Burgess, 200 Ill. 628. Allowing platform to remain greasy—Newcomb v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 169 Mo. 409. Invitation to board the train at a place where there was a custom to stop, but where no platform was provided—Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Doan, 195 Ill. 168.

24. Spot 130 feet from the depot occupied as a wood-yard by a fuel company—Davis v. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 733.

25. Carrier held liable to a passenger injured in alighting from a moving train at of a city in failing to furnish light will be imputed to the carrier, though it has made diligent efforts to have its premises properly lighted by the city.[26] The question of negligence is for the jury.[27]

Street near tracks of street railroad.[28]—A street car company, though not bound to furnish safe places to set down passengers, must warn them of dangers known to it or assist them where such dangers are unknown to the passenger.[29] Negligence may be found from the fact that a car is stopped in the nighttime so that in alighting a passenger steps into a trench.[30] If a city ordinance requires street car companies to pave and keep in repair a space between lines one foot outside the outside rails, the company is bound to keep in repair both pavements laid under the ordinance and pavements previously laid,[31] but such ordinance does not confer a right of action on passengers injured through nonrepair independent of the consideration of the general question of negligence.[32] A street car company must provide a reasonably safe place for passengers to alight.[33] A finding that a platform has been adopted as a place to receive and discharge passengers, and the public invited to use it, is justified by the fact that the company regularly stops there to take on and discharge passengers.[34]

(§ 26) C. Taking on passengers. Duty to afford time to board trains.—The carrier must afford a reasonable opportunity to board its trains to persons who, it having notice, purpose doing so, and who present themselves under such circumstances that they may be reasonably accepted, they being in the exercise of reasonable care and expedition.[35] Statutes requiring sufficient stop to allow passengers to get on or off apply to excursion trains.[36] The carrier must not start its train while a passenger is boarding it, no matter how long it has stopped.[37] Where the ticket office is closed just before the departure of the train, but a passenger attempting to board the train without a ticket is sent by the conductor to get one, the carrier is negligent if it start the train without giving him a reasonable time, and he is injured by attempting to board the train while it is in motion.[38]

It is negligence to start a freight train with a jerk before a passenger has had time to enter the caboose.[39]

Street railroads.—A street railway company is bound to stop at its regular crossing, on a seasonable signal, to receive passengers, and a rule that its cars shall not be backed when they have stopped beyond the crossing to receive a person night at its direction—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 653; Duell v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 115 Wis. 516.

26. Owen v. Washington & C. R. R. Co., 29 Wash. 207, 69 Pac. 757.

27. Chadbourne v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 104 Ill. App. 333.

28. The fact that a street railway company engaged in an excavation for the purpose of laying down a new track, allows a pile of earth to remain on the street in broad daylight, and does not direct a person alighting from its car to take a safe course, plainly indicated by the situation, is not negligence rendering it liable to a person stepping on a pile of earth, thrown from the excavation and precipitated into the trench by the earth giving way—Lee v. Boston El. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 454.

29. Sweet v. Louisville Ry. Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 2279, 67 S. W. 4.

30. Wolf v. Third Ave. R. Co., 67 App. Div. (N. Y.) 605.

31. Fielders v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co., 67 N. J. Law, 76.

32. Fielders v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 53 Atl. 404.

33. A street car company is liable to a passenger who on a dark night trips over a pile of lumber left near the track by the carrier on the day previous—Montgomery St. Ry. Co. v. Mason, 133 Ala. 508.

34. Haselton v. Portsmouth, K. & Y. St. Ry., 71 N. H. 589.

35. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Flaharty, 96 Ill. App. 563. Liability cannot be based on knowledge of the carrier's employees that plaintiff was off its train and desired to get on again—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Gray (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 316.

36. Rev. St. 1893, § 1687—Oliver v. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co., 65 S. C. 1.

37. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Gardner (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 186.

38. Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4542, requires ticket offices to be kept open thirty minutes before the departure of trains—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Gist (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 857.

39. Kelly v. Vicksburg, S. & P. Ry. Co., 108 La. 423.

who has properly signaled is unreasonable.[40] An intending passenger has a right to get on a car which is stopped, or in the act of stopping, or is so managed as to induce the passenger to think it is about to stop, and the carrier is liable for an injury resulting from starting before the passenger is safely seated,[41] and starting without warning may be negligence;[42] but where a car has been stopped solely to enable the conductor to go forward at a railroad crossing, the motorman is not negligent in starting without first ascertaining if any one is about to get on.[43] Though the car did not stop to receive passengers, the carrier is liable to one who has signaled it and attempts to board, unless he has been warned not to.[44] One attempting to board a car which has refused to stop for him cannot recover for an injury as due to the failure to stop and accept him.[45] Where the gates are abruptly closed so as to catch the dress of an intending passenger before she has time to board the car, the carrier is liable for injury sustained by her through being thrown on the starting of the car.[46] A concealed infirmity in the passenger does not excuse a starting while she is attempting to board the car.[47] There must be evidence that a passenger was seen by the conductor in his attempt to get on.[48]

A motorman is not required to foresee that one intending to board his car may fall on the track in front of it.[49] A person crossing in front of a car, after signaling it to stop, may assume that the motorman will use reasonable care for her safety.[50]

Starting while passenger is en route to seat.—It may be negligence to start a street car before a child has an opportunity to be seated.[51] The question of the carrier's negligence may be for the jury where it starts suddenly after slowing down to receive a passenger and after the passenger has stepped on the running board.[52]

(§ 26) D. Means and facilities for transportation. Nature of accommodations.—Female second-class passengers must not be compelled to ride in an illy ventilated smoking car occupied by men only.[53] The use of reasonable care and diligence in warming coaches and providing water is not sufficient.[54]

Construction of tracks and care as to adjacent objects.—A street-car company must, with regard to its tracks, use the highest degree of care consistent with the undertaking.[55] Long continued operation of the road without accident does not

40. A passenger signalled on a rainy night in a muddy road, car 40 feet beyond the crossing, it being necessary to walk seven blocks if he was not taken up—Jackson Elec. Ry., L. & P. Co. v. Lowry, 79 Miss. 431.

41. Austrian v. United Traction Co., 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 329.

42. While a young girl is trying to board it—Schoenfeld v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 201.

43. There is no liability of a person thrown off by a sudden jerk incident to the starting of a car, he having attempted to board without giving notice of his intention to do so—Packard v. Toledo Traction Co., 22 Ohio Circ. R. 578.

44. No liability to one trying to board after warning sufficiently loud to be heard by an ordinary person—Maxey v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 95 Mo. App. 303.

45. South Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Dufresne, 200 Ill. 456.

46. Brown v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 755.

47. Austrian v. United Traction Co., 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 329.

48. Monroe v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 587.

49. Winchell v. St. Paul City Ry. Co., 86 Minn. 445.

50. Copeland v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 418.

51. Child two years and nine months old thrown down while she was temporarily beyond the reach of the person with her—Herbich v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co., 67 N. J. Law, 574.

52. Powelson v. United Traction Co., 204 Pa. 474.

53. Plaintiff was sold tickets without knowledge that they were second class though she had informed the agent that she wished to go as cheaply as possible—Southern Ry. Co. v. Wood, 114 Ga. 159.

54. Duty is to exercise such a high degree of foresight and prudence as would have been used by very cautious, prudent and competent persons under similar circumstances—Arrington v. Texas & P. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 551.

55. Galligan v. Old Colony St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 211.

show an absence of negligence as a matter of law. The question is for the jury.[56] Where a track passes through a cut not used for travel, the care required as to falling material is as if the tracks were on the land of the company.[57] Accidents from extraordinary natural causes may not impose liability.[58] It is negligence to leave a barrel of gravel so near the track as to derail a street car.[59] To place a freight car on a siding so that its doors extend over the main track is negligence,[60] and it is gross negligence to construct a freight platform so that freight thereon will strike the elbow of a passenger protruding but slightly from a passing car.[61] The question of whether a manner of construction of tracks is proper or not cannot be submitted to a jury.[62]

Construction and care of cars.—The duty of a street car company to keep car platforms and steps safe is relative to the practical operation of the road in consideration of the climate, temperature, and condition of the air with respect to snow, moisture, and frost,[63] and the fact that ice collects on the steps of a railway car does not show negligence, in the absence of evidence of time and opportunity to remove it.[64] As regards curtain rods on its cars, a street car company is not bound to the highest degree of care.[65] Fall of a window not shown to have been caused by any defects in the window or fastenings does not impose liability.[66] The fall of a fire extinguisher in a street car is prima facie evidence of negligence.[67] A carrier may be liable for the consequences of an electric shock received by a passenger.[68]

Use of usual and approved appliances.—A carrier is not liable for the use of an appliance furnished with the car by the best builder of cars and in the same condition, except as improved by the company, where it does not appear that a safer appliance is in use or could be procured,[69] though otherwise if the appliance is allowed to get out of order.[70] The most approved spark arrester in use must be provided to prevent the injury of passengers from the escape of sparks or cinders.[71]

Duty to inspect appliances.[72]—The carrier's duty to exercise the utmost care and skill which prudent men are accustomed to exercise under similar circumstances with regard to its appliances is not met by recent inspection or by inspection by a competent employe.[73] An inspection consistent with the reasonable

56. Passenger injured was on a foot-board of an open car, there were 18 inches of space between the edge of the foot-board and the bridge, and the car was going at an unlawful rate, no warning having been given—Anderson v. City & Suburban Ry. Co. (Or.) 71 Pac. 659.

57. Galligan v. Old Colony St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 211.

58. No liability where tree falls from outside the right of way across the track immediately before the accident—Alabama Midland Ry. Co. v. Guilford, 114 Ga. 627.

59. Ramson v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 101.

60. Clerc v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co., 107 La. 370.

61. Kird v. New Orleans & N. W. Ry. Co., 109 La 525.

62. The question is whether the highest degree of care for the safety of passengers has been exercised—Merchant v. South Chicago City Ry. Co., 104 Ill. App. 122.

63. Herbert v. St. Paul City Ry. Co., 85 Minn. 341.

64. Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Aldridge, 27 Ind. App. 498. Evidence held to show negligence in failing to prevent car steps from becoming slippery—Foster v. Old Colony St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 378.

65. Plaintiff was injured by the breaking of a rod in a storm and it was shown that the rods had been in use only two years, had been furnished by a maker of high standard and were in ordinary use. The break was clean and showed no flaw—Leyh v. Newburgh Elec. Ry. Co., 168 N. Y. 667.

66. Texas Midland R. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 65 S. W. 382.

67. Allen v. United Traction Co., 67 App. Div. (N. Y.) 363.

68. Buckbee v. Third Ave. R. Co., 64 App. Div. (N. Y.) 360.

69. Injury from catching dress on plunger in floor of car—Smith v. Kingston City R. Co., 169 N. Y. 616.

70. Ring in a car floor was allowed to get into such a condition that it arose when the car started and remained so unless replaced—Kingman v. Lynn & B. R. Co., 181 Mass. 387.

71. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Parks (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 439.

72. Where it is shown that if certain bolts connected with a steamboat's machinery had been properly examined the injury might have been avoided, defendant's negligence is for the jury—Wilmington Steamboat Co. v. Walker, 120 Fed. 97.

73. Davis v. Paducah Ry. & Light Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 135, 68 S. W. 140.

dispatch of business is sufficient.[74] In some jurisdictions the carrier is liable for defects in its cars which could have been discovered by the exercise of the utmost precaution, care, and skill in their construction, though not discoverable after the cars came into the defendant's possession,[75] but in others is not liable for defective appliances, where the defects are not discoverable by the most careful inspection and the apparatus is of the best pattern, purchased of a manufacturer in high standing, and frequently inspected.[76] When a train is derailed by the breaking of an axle and plaintiff is induced to jump and receives injuries, the carrier may be liable though the breaking of the axle was not the immediate cause of injury, if it was the result of a defect which could have been discovered by an ordinary inspection.[77] Allowing a switch to remain closed, causing an air brake to fail to operate, is negligence.[78]

Duty to prevent exposure of passengers to danger.—The highest degree of care exacted of carriers of passengers does not require the company to adopt any particular method of construction or to make it impossible for passengers to expose themselves to danger.[79] The carrier may be negligent in inducing a passenger to assume a dangerous position,[80] though it is not negligence per se to receive a passenger on a crowded car,[81] nor to allow passengers to ride on the footboard of open cars, where all seats are occupied,[82] though circumstances may render it so.[83] If cars are allowed to become overcrowded, additional care and caution must be exercised, and if the passenger is received under such condition that he must stand on the platform, and his fare is accepted, he must be protected from accident as far as circumstances allow.[84] Negligence in failure to provide sufficient room inside cars is for the jury,[85] as is the question of whether seats were provided.[86]

(§ 26) E. Operation and management of trains and other vehicles.[87]—By statute, a carrier may be, as a matter of law, negligent in placing burden cars behind passenger coaches.[88] It is not negligence to place a car without vestibules in a train advertised as a solid vestibuled train.[89] The question of whether a carrier is negligent in not delaying a mail train in order to place a less crowded train in front on the day of an excursion is for the jury.[90] Opening a front platform gate before a full

74. A scientific inspection is not required to discover a defect in axle or brakes of a freight car received from another company—Western Maryland R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 637.

75. Defects in street-car wheels—Siemsen v. Oakland, S. L. & H. Elec. Ry., 134 Cal. 494.

76. Breaking of a pin in a pipe preventing the turning of a switch—Buckland v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 181 Mass. 3.

77. Western Maryland R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 637.

78. McAllister v. People's Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 743.

79. Merchant v. South Chicago City Ry. Co., 104 Ill. App. 122.

80. Causing him to go on the steps where he is thrown off by a sudden stopping of the train—Southern Ry. Co. v. Roebuck, 132 Ala. 412.

81. Burns v. Boston El. Ry. Co. (Mass.) 66 N. E. 418; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Bryant (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 885.

82. Anderson v. City & Suburban Ry. Co. (Or.) 71 Pac. 659.

83. Where a car is run at the speed of 15 miles an hour around a curve near which is a pole 14½ inches from the outside of an 8½ inch running board—Hesse v. Meriden, S. & C. Tramway Co. (Conn.) 54 Atl. 299.

84. Passenger on a front platform at the conductor's request, may recover if jostled therefrom by the action of the conductor in jumping upon the front steps of the car—McCaw v. Union Traction Co. (Pa.) 54 Atl. 893.

85. The passenger was allowed to ride on a platform so crowded that he was apt to be pushed off by employes operating the car—Cattano v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 173 N. Y. 565.

86. Farnon v. Boston & A. R. Co., 180 Mass. 212.

87. Rev. St. art. 4517, does not render a carrier liable for failure to provide a handbrake and brakeman on the rear coach of a strictly passenger train—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Storey (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 534.

88. Under Sand. & H. Dig. § 6195, the carrier is liable where a train is composed of a caboose in front, followed by several freight cars, and pushed by an engine in the rear, and the caboose is derailed, causing the death of the passenger—Prescott & N. Ry. Co. v. Smith, 70 Ark. 179.

89. Sansom v. Southern Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. 887.

90. Where negligence alleged was in the permission of excursion trains to become overcrowded, and there was evidence that the order of the trains could have been changed so stop is not negligence per se.[91] A guard opening an exit door of an elevated road, before the complete stopping of a train, was not negligent though in so doing he injured the hand of a passenger, he having no knowledge of its position.[92] Carrier is liable for willful running at a speed occasioning derailment.[93]

Frightening and misleading passengers.—Negligence of a street-car company in exposing a passenger to apparently imminent danger, causing him to jump from the car, is for the jury,[94] as is continuance of operation of a car after the motorman should have known that if it was not stopped the controller would burn out.[95] Negligence in the management of an electric car, creating a panic, may be regarded as the proximate cause of an injury resulting from the panic, if the conduct of the passengers was such as might reasonably be expected under the circumstances.[96]

Duty to avoid sudden jerks.[97]—Where hilly country necessitates frequent curves, the incidental lurching is not negligence.[98] A sudden and violent stopping of a street car is not evidence of negligence unless unusual in degree, caused by a defect in the car or track, or by an unusual or dangerous speed.[99] A jerk throwing a passenger from the front platform of a horse car may be negligence,[1] but one thrown off a street car by a sudden stop to avoid a collision which was not due to the carrier's negligence cannot recover.[2] Where a sudden increase in speed is due to avoid a collision with a railroad train on an intersecting track, it will not be regarded as negligent.[3] The mere fact that a person is injured by another passenger being thrown against her while a street car is rounding a curve does not render the carrier liable.[4] If by statute separate accommodations must be furnished negroes, the carrier is liable to a negro crowded on the platform by white men occupying the negro coach and thrown therefrom by the jolting of the car.[5] Negligence is not shown by the fact that the person on a rear platform is thrown off by a sudden stop.[6]

Management of mixed, freight, and cattle trains.—A carrier in the transportation of passengers on a mixed train is not relieved from negligence in the man-as to place the less crowded train where the most people wished to board it, the question of negligence in the arrangement of the trains should be submitted by the instructions—Williams v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 1085.

91. Paginini v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 218.

92. Hannon v. Boston El. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 425.

93. Negligence and willfulness in running a mixed train on a new road is for the jury—Stembridge v. Southern Ry., 65 S. C. 440.

94. After the conductor signaled the motorman to come on across a railroad track he motioned him to stop, which he did not do, but crossed the track barely in time to avoid a collision—Robson v. Nassau Elec. R. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 301.

95. Passenger was injured by panic occasioned by the explosion of controller—Dunlay v. United Traction Co., 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 206.

96. Defective appliances produced a flash of fire followed by smoke in the car—Davis v. Paducah Ry. & Light Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 135, 68 S. W. 140.

97. The question of negligence in running a train rapidly around the curve and throwing off a passenger, is for the jury—Macy v. New Bedford, M. & B. St Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 291. Negligence in running a train rapidly around sharp curves without devices to protect its platforms—Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Adams, 116 Fed. 324.

98. A railroad running through a hilly country, necessarily having frequent curves in its track, while bound to use the highest degree of care in its construction and the management of its trains, cannot avoid the lurching incidental to such condition—Sansom v. Southern Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 111 Fed. 887.

99. Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Morse, 98 Ill. App. 662.

1. Where caused by the driver striking the team without warning—Eberhardt v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 69 App. Div. (N. Y.) 560.

2. Cleveland City Ry. Co. v. Osborn, 66 Ohio St. 45.

3. The employees of the street car had used proper care to ascertain that no train was approaching before starting on the track—Corkhill v. Camden & S. Ry. Co. (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 522.

4. Merrill v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 401.

5. Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4509, 4516—Williams v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 1085.

6. Passenger was not holding to anything; there was no showing of a defect in the car or rails or that the stop was not justifiable—Timms v. Old Colony St. Ry. (Mass.) 66 N. E. 797.

agement of the trains, or in the condition of the cars, by the fact that the passengers assume incidental discomforts,[7] but passengers on freight trains assume risks ordinarily incident to their operation,[8] and negligence will not be inferred from a jar in a sudden stopping of such a train.[9] If a conductor with knowledge that a person is in a car with stock does not warn him to get out of the car or prevent recklessness on the part of the employees, the carrier is liable for injuries resulting from sudden jolt, though plaintiff had no right to be in the car.[10]

Duty to avoid collision.[11]—A car driver who drives on a railroad crossing without stopping, looking, and listening is negligent, as where in so doing he also violates a city ordinance requiring a complete stop;[12] and failure to stop a street car and sound its gong before passing on a railroad track may be negligence per se.[13] Where a passenger is injured in a collision between a street car and a steam car, negligence of the railroad is immaterial if the street car company was also negligent.[14] Violation of rules as to the distance to be maintained between trains may be gross negligence, rendering the carrier liable for injuries from collision.[15] It is negligence to run a car at such a high rate of speed around a curve as to occasion a collision with another car.[16] The question of whether a grip-car driver is negligent in not sounding his gong is for the jury.[17] The carrier's negligence causing imminent danger of collision is the proximate cause of an injury to a passenger who jumps, or is pulled off, or is injured by one jumping on her after she has left the car.[18]

Passing cars receiving and discharging passengers.[19]—A carrier running a train past another, stopping for the purpose of receiving and discharging passengers at a station, must exercise the greatest care and caution.[20] It is negligence for a motorman passing a car stopping to discharge passengers to fail to sound his gong.[21] A car need not slow up when passing another which has just started after a stop to discharge passengers.[22] The carrier may be liable for the death of a child struck by a train on an intervening track while the child is crossing the track with its mother from a train discharging passengers at the station, there being a place provided for passengers to cross the track at that point and the conductor having

7. Symonds v. Minneapolis & St. L. Ry. Co. (Minn.) 92 N. W. 409.

8. One arising from his seat to take off his overcoat cannot recover for a sudden jar injuring him, in the absence of evidence of defects in track, train or appliances, nor of skill in handling or stoppage at an improper place—Wait v. Omaha, K. C. & E. R. Co., 165 Mo. 612.

9. Erwin v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co., 94 Mo. App. 289.

10. Bolton v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 72 S. W. 530.

11. Street car company's care in not avoiding collision with a truck held to be a question for the jury—Suse v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 24.

12. Selma St. & Suburban Ry. Co. v. Owen, 132 Ala. 420.

13. Under an ordinance requiring such stop and prescribing a penalty on motormen disregarding it—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Holt (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 591.

14. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Holt (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 591.

15. Freight train making no stops and running at a speed of from 25 to 30 miles an hour left a station from 4 to 11 minutes behind a passenger train making many stops and running at a rate of 23 miles an hour—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Richmond, 23 Ky. L. R. 2394, 67 S. W. 25.

16. Private car of the president was running around a curve at a high rate of speed with knowledge that there was another car out on the road which would come in at some time during the evening—Hennessy v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 162.

17. Action by a passenger injured in a collision between the grip-car and a buggy—West Chicago St. R. Co. v. Tuerk, 193 Ill. 385.

18. Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Butler, 135 Ala. 388.

19. It is a question for the jury whether it is negligence to run an express train at a high speed into a station at about the time a local train is receiving or discharging passengers—Girton v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 143.

20. The train ran between the stationary train and the station—Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Taylor, 102 Ill. App. 445.

21. Hornstein v. United Rys. Co. (Mo. App.) 70 S. W. 1105.

22. So held where the passenger on a north bound car attempting to alight from it in motion, was struck by a south bound car travelling at the rate of twelve miles an hour—Ackerstadt v. Chicago City Ry. Co., 194 Ill. 616.

directed them to do so.[23] It may be an element of negligence for a conductor to call "all aboard" at a time when a train in the opposite direction is bound to pass on an intervening track.[24] Signals provided for trains at public crossings are not applicable to passengers attempting to board trains at stations.[25] A carrier may be liable for the failure of a lookout to stop a train which is backing over a trestle in order to avoid injuries to intending passengers crossing such trestle.[26] Negligence in striking a passenger on a track near a station may be for the jury.[27]

The question of whether plaintiff was struck by a lump of coal from a passing train, rendering the carrier liable, is for the jury.[28]

(§ 26) F. Setting down passengers.—The carrier's duty is discharged by offering a safe place and a reasonable time to alight at the end of a journey.[29] After an intoxicated passenger leaves his train at its destination, the company is not bound to guard him further.[30] A passenger may leave a train at an intermediate station for a purpose not inconsistent with his character as a passenger, hence instructions that the carrier owes him no duty while so doing are erroneous.[31] A street car company may be not negligent in failing to discover an obstacle attached to the rear of the car by a trespasser.[32]

Duty to announce stations and direct as to place to alight.—It is not, as a matter of law, negligence for a railroad company to fail to announce the arrival of passenger trains at stations.[33] A porter is not bound to the exercise of reasonable care in directing passengers to alight, his duty being confined to announcing names of the stations.[34] Any employe may announce the stations.[35] Negligent calling of a station is the proximate cause of an injury to one induced to go on the platform at a point distant from the station and thrown off by a sudden jerk.[36]

Duty to avoid misleading passenger.—Failure to warn passengers that a stop, made shortly after the station is announced, is not at the station, is negligence,[37] though it is a question for the jury if it is negligence to stop a train at a crossing after a station has been announced without other warning to the passenger.[38] The fact that the conductor has told the passenger that the station is near does not

23. Girton v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 143.

24. Sufficiency of evidence supporting the finding of negligence—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Morgan, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 378.

25. A carrier is not relieved from liability from injuring a person crossing the track at the station to board another train by the reason that the oncoming train has given the signals required by Rev. St. art. 4507—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Morgan, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 378.

26. The lookout warned the persons to run but made no effort to stop the train or signal the engineer—Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Kotoski, 199 Ill. 383.

27. The person injured supposed that the train which was moving slowly was about to stop though it was not designed to do so—Redhing v. Central R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 54 Atl. 431.

28. The evidence varied as to the speed of the train, it being placed from 40 to 70 miles an hour, and plaintiff testified that he saw the coal leave the tender, was struck by it, and it was crushed into small fragments—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 24 Ky. L. R. 1402, 71 S. W. 516.

29. West Chicago St. R. Co. v. Buckley, 102 Ill. App. 314.

30. Not liable where he is run over by another train during the night—Nash v. Southern Ry. Co. (Ala.) 33 So. 932.

31. Instruction was that there was no duty to stop for any length of time at an intermediate station or to have its depot lighted or to stop at all—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Mathes (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 411.

32. Plaintiff was tripped by a rope which had been attached to the car while it travelled about a mile and a half but which was not discovered because of darkness—La Fond v. Detroit Citizens' St. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 92 N. W. 99.

33. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Goodyear (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 862.

34. A passenger alighted at the wrong station though the porter had twice announced its name, the carrier's employes having no knowledge that plaintiff was hard of hearing. Plaintiff testified that the porter took her grip and told her to sit still until the train stopped and in this was contradicted by the porter—Texas Midland R. Co. v. Terry, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 341.

35. Duty is not personal to the conductor—Southern Ry. Co. v. O'Bryan, 115 Ga. 659.

36. Cincinnati, H. & I. R. Co. v. Worthington (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 557, 66 N. E. 478.

37. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Farr, 70 Ark. 264.

38. Larson v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 85 Minn. 387.

authorize him to leave a moving train in the dark.[39] Where a passenger unnecessarily alights to change cars, there being proper coaches attached to the train, the conductor is negligent in having failed to inform him of such fact.[40]

Duty to avoid carrying passenger by station.—The carrier is liable for injuries received by a passenger through being set down at a wrong station,[41] or being carried by his station, and is not excused by the fact that the conductor does not know of the passenger's presence on the train,[42] but there may be no liability for the accidental carrying by of a passenger riding on a freight train.[43] The carrier is negligent if an employe, after instructing a passenger to alight, fails to stop the train to enable him to do so in safety.[44] The passenger must exercise ordinary care to assure himself that the train he enters is the proper one; it is not sufficient that he is received without protest and does not know that the train does not stop at the station he desires to reach.[45]

Duty to provide safe place to alight.—The carrier must not stop at a place unsuitable for alighting, though convenient for its employes.[46] The question of suitableness is for the jury.[47] Where a carrier has failed to provide a proper place to alight, it is not relieved from liability by the fact that a passenger between the tracks is struck by the train of another company.[48]

Duty to assist passenger.—In ordinary circumstances, the carrier is not bound to assist the passenger in alighting, though if it know of an infirmity it should render reasonable assistance,[49] as where a female passenger encumbered with baggage and children has requested assistance.[50] The duty is a question for the jury,[51] as is the duty to provide a stool for alighting passengers.[52] Failure to furnish a portable step is not negligence where the distance from the car step to the ground is not further than usual, and a large number of persons have previously alighted without accident.[53] Placing a stool on ground so soft that the stool overturns when stepped on may be negligence.[54]

Starting while passenger is alighting.—A carrier is liable for failure to stop sufficiently long to allow passenger to alight or if it start with knowledge that he is attempting to do so,[55] even though its train is late.[56] The reasonableness of the

39. Where a person on a train not stopping at his destination, is told that the train will slow up there and he attempts to get off while the train is crossing a high trestle at a rate of about 25 miles an hour, the carrier is not negligent though the conductor told him they were nearly at the station and beckoned him, but when the passenger got to the coach door the conductor was not in sight and the passenger swung off in the dark—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Hanberry, 23 Ky. L. R. 1867, 66 S. W. 417.

40. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 655.

41. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Sampson (Tex. Civ. App.) 64 S. W. 692.

42. Twelve year old girl carried some distance past station—Rawlings v. Wabash R. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 535.

43. Plaintiff desired to get off at a crossing. She was on a long freight train and the conductor could not signal the engineer in time to stop at the desired point but stopped and assisted her to alight at a crossing three quarters of a mile further. There was no showing of special damages—Smith v. Wilmington & W. R. Co., 130 N. C. 304.

44. Instruction was given with knowledge that the platform was not well lighted and there was considerable distance thereto—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 655.

45. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Campbell (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 451.

46. Simmons v. Oregon R. Co., 41 Or. 151, 69 Pac. 440, 1022.

47. Question of whether hole in street made the place obviously unsafe and was the cause of injury—Sweet v. Louisville Ry. Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 2279, 67 S. W. 4. Question of whether an injury by reason of a defective pavement, which the carrier, by municipal ordinance, was required to keep in repair, is the result of negligence—Fielders v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co., 67 N. J. Law, 76.

48. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Schmelling, 197 Ill. 619.

49. Young v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 93 Mo. App. 267.

50. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Buchanan (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 96.

51. Southern Ry. Co. v. Reeves (Ga.) 42 S. E. 1015.

52. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Sherrill (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 429.

53. Young v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 93 Mo. App. 267.

54. Southern Ry. Co. v. Reeves (Ga.) 42 S. E. 1015.

55. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Harmon, 23 Ky. L. R. 871, 64 S. W. 640.

time allowed is for the jury,[57] as is the sufficiency of notice to change cars and time therefor.[58] Where a car is stopped at a point customary for the discharge of passengers, employes must exercise extraordinary diligence, before starting a car, to see if any passengers desire to alight and to give a reasonable opportunity for so doing.[59] The conductor is bound not to signal the motorman to start until he sees that all passengers desiring to leave the car have alighted,[60] and, though the conductor may have been justified under the circumstances in thinking all the passengers had alighted, a reasonable time for all passengers to get off must nevertheless have expired.[61] Though a car was not stopped to discharge passengers, the carrier may be liable if it start the car with knowledge that a passenger is attempting to alight.[62] The stop may have been in the middle of the block,[63] and where the car is so stopped at the request of passengers desiring to alight, the carrier must use the utmost diligence for their safety, though it was not bound to make such a stop.[64] Where the speed of a car is slackened merely to permit a passenger to get on, the conductor is not bound to know that a passenger will attempt to get off.[65] It is negligence to start a car before the conductor sees that the passenger's skirts are free from the platform,[66] or to jerk or move the car while passengers are getting off,[67] or to couple a switch engine to a passenger train,[68] but an acceleration of speed while a passenger is on a bottom step of a platform preparing to alight is not negligence where the intention to alight has not been indicated to the conductor, though from the fact that he was in the front part of the car collecting fares he could not see the passenger intending to alight,[69] though the question may be for the jury.[70] If, through the passenger's negligence, she failed to alight within a reasonable time, she cannot recover for injury in attempting to alight without knowledge of defendant's employes.[71]

Where a starting signal is given, without the knowledge or authority of the conductor, by some one not in the company's employ, while a passenger is alighting, the company is not liable.[72]

Carrier by water.—A carrier assumes the risk if it attempts to land a passenger at night while the boat is in motion.[73]

56. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Byers (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 1009.

57. Crowded train, people standing in aisles, front door locked and other circumstances—Walters v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 113 Wis. 367.

58. Oliver v. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co., 65 S. C. 1.

59. Where cars are stopped in compliance with a city ordinance before reaching a grade crossing—Atlanta Ry. Co. v. Randall (Ga.) 43 S. E. 412; Ashtabula Rapid Transit Co. v. Holmes, 67 Ohio St. 153.

60. Bloomington & N. Ry. v. Zimmerman, 101 Ill. App. 184.

61. Walters v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 113 Wis. 367.

62. Stop to repair wire—Beringer v. Dubuque St. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 91 N. W. 931.

63. There had been a failure to stop at the corner but car had slowed up in such a manner as to clearly invite an attempt to alight—Betts v. Wilmington City Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 53 Atl. 358. See for instruction where a person attempts to alight while a car was stopped in the center of a block—Beringer v. Dubuque St. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 91 N. W. 931.

64. West Chicago St. R. Co. v. Buckley, 102 Ill. App. 314.

65. An instruction requiring him to exercise the highest degree of care and ascertain whether any other person might be getting on or off, is erroneous—Ashtabula Rapid Transit Co. v. Holmes, 67 Ohio St. 153.

66. Evidence of negligence in a conductor's starting a car while standing on the skirt of a passenger who had attempted to alight, held sufficient—Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Shepherd (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 765; Smith v. Kingston City R. Co., 55 App. Div. (N. Y.) 145.

67. Skelton v. St. Paul City Ry. Co. (Minn.) 92 N. W. 960.

68. Though the coupling is in the usual manner and with no more force than necessary—Raughley v. West Jersey & S. R. Co., 202 Pa. 43.

69. Sims v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 65 App. Div. (N. Y.) 270.

70. Negligence in jerking a dummy train while approaching a customary stopping place and while plaintiff was standing on the bottom step of a platform—Sweet v. Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. (Ala.) 33 So. 886.

71. Defendant is entitled to an instruction to such effect if a station is distinctly called and the passenger negligently failed to hear the same—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Mathes (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 411.

72. Krone v. Southwest Missouri Elec. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 712.

73. Le Blanc v. Sweet, 107 La. 355.

(§ 26) G. Protection from other passengers and train crew or third persons.—A carrier is bound to protect the passenger's peace, comfort and personal safety from other passengers, strangers or its servants.[74] It is liable for the acts of its servants toward passengers, though not within the scope or course of their employment.[75] It is liable for the malicious tort of a conductor in the same manner as an individual would be,[76] and so is liable to a passenger assaulted by the conductor,[77] whether such assault constitutes negligence or not,[78] and the act of the conductor in insulting the passenger is the act of the carrier.[79] Liability exists, though the assault is in retaliation for an assault committed on him, or for abusive words, or in revenge or punishment, and the only case where the rule is otherwise is where the assault is under a necessity to defend himself or a passenger from battery or in rightfully ejecting a passenger,[80] though it was held that where the passenger's violence provoked an assault, a street car company was not liable,[81] and conduct of the passenger may be considered in mitigation of damages.[82] There is also a liability for insults and violence of employes toward passengers,[83] such as insulting language and gestures by a motorman toward a passenger carried by her destination against her will,[84] but the carrier is not liable where a conductor charges a passenger with lying,[85] or where the motorman gets off the car and assails a passenger who has left the car, deposited his bundles on the sidewalk and returned to the car.[86] The carrier may by its conduct ratify an assault by its conductor.[87] The carrier is liable where its agent locks a prospective passenger in the waiting room over his protest, where such act could have been prevented with the exercise of ordinary care.[88]

Assaults and injuries by third persons.—The carrier's employes must take proper precautions to prevent injuries to passengers from third persons which they know or can know are threatened,[89] but a carrier is not liable for an assault on

74. Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Baird, 130 Ala. 334, 54 L. R. A. 752.

75. Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Baird, 130 Ala. 334, 54 L. R. A. 752; Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Divinney (Kan.) 71 Pac. 855. In a complaint in an action for assault it need not be alleged that the act was within the scope of the servant's duty, it being alleged that plaintiff was a passenger at the time—Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Mason (Ala.) 34 So. 207.

76. Grayson v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 730.

77. The rule limiting the master's liability to acts within the scope of the servant's employment does not apply—Johnson v. Detroit, Y. & A. A. Ry. (Mich.) 90 N. W. 274; St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 58; Willis v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 340.

78. Hence the carrier cannot complain of an instruction requiring the facts constituting the assault to constitute negligence—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 58.

79. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. La Prelle, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 496.

80. Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Baird, 130 Ala. 334, 54 L. R. A. 752; Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. La Prelle, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 496.

81. James v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 364.

82. Grossly insulting language used to a conductor—Houston & T. Cent. R. Co. v. Batchler (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 981; Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. La Prelle, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 496.

83. Murphy v. St. Louis Transit Co., 96 Mo. App. 272. It is actionable for a conductor to tell a woman in a loud and insulting manner so as to be heard by her children and other passengers, "The idea of a woman trying to board a train with her child without a ticket; you can go on this time but do not undertake such a thing again." Such language reasonably supports an inference of dishonesty, and though it should not it is insulting and calculated to humiliate and mortify whether the conductor intended to charge her with dishonesty or not—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Tarkington, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 353.

84. San Antonio Traction Co. v. Crawford (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 306.

85. In answer to a passenger's statement that his son was nine years old, the conductor said; "You can't give me a stiff like that, he is fourteen years old"—Grayson v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 730.

86. The act not being within the scope of the motorman's employment—Palmer v Winston-Salem Ry. & Elec. Co., 131 N. C. 250.

87. Ratification of the act of a conductor in assaulting a passenger may be shown by the fact that the company paid his fine therefor, defended him by its attorneys, and retained him in their employ, the general manager having been present at the trial—Denison & S. Ry. Co. v. Randell (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 1013.

88. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Wilson, 70 Ark. 136.

89. Employes are not charged with knowledge that tramps stealing a ride will, if brought into the car, make an assault, while endeavoring to escape, upon passengers who a passenger in its train during the absence of the train crew at dinner at a regular eating station.[90] The carrier is liable for injury sustained by a prospective passenger at a waiting room through failure to exercise ordinary care to protect him from injury by disorderly persons there congregated, which might have been prevented or lessened by the agent in charge.[91]

Where plaintiff's evidence tends to establish that he had been insulted and assaulted by fellow passengers, the conductor making no effort to prevent their acts, his complaint should not be dismissed.[92]

A street car company is not guilty of negligence in attempting to operate its cars during a strike, and need exercise only ordinary care and prudence to guard against the lawless acts of third persons not under its direction or control.[93]

The carrier may not be chargeable with the negligent performance of acts by third persons at the direction of employes.[94]

Securing arrest of passenger.—Where the rules give conductors authority to call policemen, the company is liable for wrongful act of a conductor in calling a policeman to arrest a passenger on a car.[95]

Protection of passenger from arrest.—Though the carrier is bound to use extraordinary diligence to protect passengers from violence or injury from third persons, it need not inquire into the legality of their arrest by an officer of the law, and is not liable for failure to prevent an arrest of a passenger or to refuse to stop the train to allow him to be removed by the officer, nor is it bound to see that the officer uses only the force necessary to make the arrest.[96]

Third person putting child off at wrong station.—The fact that a conductor promised to put a child off at its proper destination does not render the carrier liable where she is assisted from the train by another person before she reaches her destination.[97]

(§ 26) H. Contributory negligence of passenger.—The law of the state wherein the accident occurred with regard to contributory negligence, as admitted by the pleadings, may be submitted in instructions.[98] Slight contributory negligence will bar recovery,[99] but only ordinary care is required of the passenger,[1] the test being whether a person of ordinary prudence in the same situation and with the same knowledge would have done the alleged negligent act.[2] The passenger is not bound are not interfering with such escape—Savannah, F. & W. Ry. Co. v. Boyle, 115 Ga. 836.

90. The assault was not one which could be reasonably anticipated—Thweatt v. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 976.

91. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Wilson, 70 Ark. 136. A carrier is liable for damages sustained by a female passenger in its station through its allowance of an intoxicated person to enter, use indecent language and assault her with a knife—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Phillio (Tex.) 69 S. W. 994.

92. Koch v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 282.

93. It was not negligence justifying recovery against the carrier to fail to pull down the car blinds or stretch canvas over the outside to protect a passenger from missiles thrown by a mob of strikers—Fewings v. Mendenhall (Minn.) 93 N. W. 127.

94. A carrier is not guilty of negligence where a passenger's hand is injured by the closing of a car door by a third person at the direction of a brakeman who has his back turned toward the door and passenger.—Brineger v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1973, 72 S. W. 783.

95. Grayson v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 730.

96. In this case the carrier had no notice that the arrest was illegal—Brunswick & W. R. Co. v. Ponder (Ga.) 43 S. E. 430.

97. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Jordan, 23 Ky. L. R. 1730, 66 S. W. 27.

98. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Harmon, 23 Ky. L. R. 871, 64 S. W. 640.

99. Passenger jumping from moving train and slipping on greasy platform—Newcomb v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 169 Mo. 409.

1. Carroll v. Charleston & S. R. Co., 65 S. C. 378.

2. Clerc v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co., 107 La. 370. An instruction that the measure of care against accident which one must take to avoid responsibility, is that which a person of ordinary prudence and caution would use if his interests were to be affected and the whole risk were his own, is not erroneous as imposing on plaintiff a higher degree of care than she was bound to exercise—Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Shepherd (Ind App.) 65 N. E. 765.

to do things which in the exercise of ordinary care do not occur to him or seem feasible.[3] If carrier and passenger are equally at fault, the passenger cannot recover,[4] but negligence of the passenger in regard to a matter not the cause of the injury will not preclude recovery.[5] A boy ten years old may be negligent,[6] or one of sixteen,[7] but a plaintiff sixteen years of age cannot be held to know the seating accommodations of cars.[8] In some states contributory negligence must be based on acts, showing a willful disregard of danger, committed under circumstances making them obviously perilous.[9] Under statutes requiring criminal negligence, gross negligence amounting to a reckless disregard of safety, a willful indifference to consequences likely to follow, is intended.[10] Where drunkenness is the proximate cause of injury, there can be no recovery.[11]

Acts due to impulse of sudden danger.—Where an act is incited by sudden peril, the imputation of negligence may be removed therefrom,[12] and where the passenger has been put into a position of danger, preventing the exercise of clear judgment, he is bound only to ordinary care under the circumstances;[13] so one may leave a moving street car without negligence to avoid a merely apparent danger, and need not notify the persons in charge before jumping,[14] but absence of fault cannot be inferred from the general and known disposition of men to take care of themselves and keep out of the way of difficulty.[15] Where a driver passes on to a railroad crossing without looking for trains, his negligence is the proximate cause of an injury to a passenger who jumps to avoid an apparently imminent collision.[16]

Acts done at direction of employes.[17]—An attempt to board a moving train at the direction of an employe, which does not lead the person into apparent danger

3. West Chicago St. R. Co. v. Horne, 100 Ill. App. 259.

4. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. McKinney, 116 Ga. 113; Doolittle v. Southern Ry., 62 S. C. 130.

5. The fact that a person is riding on a bumper will not preclude a recovery where he is not injured by that reason but because he had to jump off to avoid a collision—Paquin v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co., 90 Mo. App. 118; Doolittle v. Southern Ry., 62 S. C. 130.

6. In protruding his head from a car window—Knauss v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co., 29 Ind. App. 216.

7. Extending his person beyond the line of the car—Benedict v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 86 Minn. 224, 57 L. R. A. 639.

8. A boy 16 years old who passes through seven cars of an excursion train, composed of 14 or 15 cars, without being able to obtain a seat, may be found to have been in the exercise of due care, if the jury find that plaintiff believed that the cars ahead were as crowded as those through which he went—Farnon v. Boston & A. R. Co., 180 Mass. 212.

9. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey (Neb.) 93 N. W. 526.

10. Comp. St. c. 72, art. 1, § 3—Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey (Neb.) 93 N. W. 526.

11. The passenger acted with prudence in taking a position on the car platform but would not have fallen but for his drunkenness—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Bryant (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 885.

12. An instruction to such effect was held proper where a person jumped from a derailed car, though had he remained therein he would have suffered little or no injury—Western Maryland R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 637. The fact that an old and infirm passenger thrown by a sudden start of the car while alighting catches hold of a running board and is dragged does not show contributory negligence, his act being due to the impulse of sudden danger—Indiana Ry. Co. v. Maurer is dragged does not show contributory negligence for a young girl to continue her hold on a hand rail though the car starts while she is boarding it, and though she is dragged some distance—Schoenfeld v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 201.

13. Instruction that if plaintiff stepped to the ground voluntarily and without necessity while the car was in motion, she could not recover, is erroneous, where the evidence was that plaintiff was crippled in her left leg and while putting her left foot on the ground and holding to the handle bar of the car, the car started—United Rys. & Elec. Co. v. Beidelman, 95 Md. 480.

14. Jumping from a moving car may be excused by the fact that the passenger saw an engine coming at a high rate of speed, a collision being apparently imminent though there was no actual collision—Selma St. & Suburban Ry. Co. v. Owen, 132 Ala. 420.

15. Instruction to contrary effect is not justified in a case where a drover was killed by jumping to avoid injury on the derailment of a train—Western Maryland R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 637.

16. Selma St. & Suburban Ry. Co. v. Owen, 132 Ala. 420.

17. It is a question for the jury where a passenger ignorant of railroad travel alights from a moving train in obedience to a supposed invitation of an employe—Doolittle v. Southern Ry., 62 S. C. 130.

such as a prudent person would not assume, is not contributory negligence, and it cannot be stated as a matter of law that an attempt to board a train in motion is negligence,[18] unless the danger is so obvious that it would be undertaken only by a reckless man.[19] One who neglects to alight while train is stopped, and steps off after it starts at the advice of a brakeman, is negligent.[20] It is not negligence to alight from a slowly moving train in the dark, on the station platform, at the request of an employe; it may be shown that there was no offer to stop or caution the passenger not to alight; and the fact that a passenger is asleep and does not hear an announcement as to change of cars does not relieve the carrier, where the passenger has been misled by information from the conductor that a change of cars was necessary.[21] A passenger may presume that a member of a switching crew in charge of a train has authority to direct him to alight.[22]

Approaching car or train.[23]—One who signals an approaching car is not negligent per se in failing to look behind her where she starts diagonally across the tracks in front of the car to its stopping place.[24] The question of whether a passenger crossing a railroad track to take a train is negligent is for the jury, though there was a space between two of the tracks on which he might have walked,[25] and it is not negligence per se to fail to look and listen when crossing an intervening track to a train standing at a station to receive passengers.[26] An attempt to board a train from the wrong side is not negligent per se,[27] nor an attempt to pass in front of a slowly approaching train at a station.[28] The passenger's use of a platform at a station must be limited to the purposes for which it is manifestly adapted, and he should keep such distance from passing trains as to avoid being struck by usual projections.[29] Street car passengers are not bound to look out for dangerous holes near the entrance of the cars or to be on the lookout for the removal of former safe guards.[30] One with knowledge that a step must be lowered before a car is ready to receive passengers, who attempts to board it before the step is lowered, takes the risk of being struck thereby.[31]

Boarding moving train or cars.—Whether a person is negligent in getting on a moving train is a question for the jury under the entire evidence.[32] It is not contributory negligence per se to board a moving street car,[33] unless under special

18. Pence v. Wabash R. Co., 116 Iowa, 279. One who attempts to board a moving train at the direction of the conductor, having alighted at an intermediate station, may be guilty of negligence, though the train is a freight. It is a question for the jury, the direction of the conductor, the speed of the train, and other circumstances being considered—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Glover, 24 Ky. L. R. 1447, 71 S. W. 630. Where plaintiff alleges that he was in the exercise of ordinary care in getting on a moving train, he may show that he acted at the direction of the conductor—Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Gore, 202 Ill. 188.

19. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Gore, 202 Ill. 188.

20. Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Gray, 28 Ind. App. 588.

21. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 653, 70 S. W. 359.

22. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 653, 70 S. W. 359.

23. The question of whether one walking along a platform to secure a seat in an open car is negligent is for the jury—Haselton v. Portsmouth, K. & Y. St. Ry., 71 N. H. 589.

24. Copeland v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 418.

25. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Lagerkrans (Neb.) 91 N. W. 358.

26. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Morgan, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 378.

27. Question for the jury where plaintiff owing to the crowd at the station was compelled to go to the outside of the track on the crowd being parted to make way for the train—Begley v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 201 Pa. 84.

28. Redhing v. Central R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 54 Atl. 431.

29. Dotson v. Erie R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 54 Atl. 827.

30. Lake St. El. R. Co. v. Burgess, 99 Ill. App. 499. An instruction declaring without qualification that a person who steps into a hole or on a rotten board in a platform is negligent if she fails to look or take precautions to ascertain the danger should not be given—Indianapolis St. Ry. Co. v. Robinson, 157 Ind. 414.

31. Clark v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 68 App. Div. (N. Y.) 49.

32. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Gore, 96 Ill. App. 553.

33. An instruction that it is imprudent to board a moving public vehicle should not be given—Lobsenz v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 181; South Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Dufresne, 200 Ill. 456, 102 Ill. App. 493; Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Brannon.

circumstances.[34] Slowing of a car at a street crossing is not an invitation to board it before it stops.[35]

Boarding crowded car.—It is a question for the jury whether one who, before he starts on a journey, is aware of the crowded condition of the train, is not contributorily negligent in failing to leave it.[36]

Riding in dangerous position.—A passenger who continues in a dangerous position with knowledge that it is so, or that the rules of the carrier forbid him to be there, is as a rule held negligent, unless the negligence of the carrier has been such as to be the controlling or proximate cause of the injury. Illustrative cases are grouped in the notes.[37] The rule does not apply to an intoxicated person accepted as a passenger.[38]

Riding on platform or running board of street car.—One is not per se negligent who stands on a street car platform, knowing that it is overcrowded, unless he has knowledge of other facts exposing him to danger,[39] but a rule that passengers ride on front platforms of street cars at their own risk is reasonable, and if knowingly violated by a plaintiff, precludes a recovery,[40] and is not waived by the fact that other passengers are on the front platform when plaintiff enters it.[41] It is not per se negligence to stand or walk on the running board of a crowded street car,[42] but a person riding on the side steps of a street car, where there is room inside.

132 Ala. 431. Car moving slower than a man can walk—Kimber v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 69 App. Div. (N. Y.) 353.

34. Where all the witnesses except plaintiff testify that he was injured while trying to board a moving car on a curve, a verdict for plaintiff must be set aside—Wolf v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 257.

35. The jury should be so instructed in an action where plaintiff is injured by a jerk of a slowly moving car which he has stepped on after signaling it—Monroe v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 587.

36. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Rea, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 549.

37. Held negligence per se. Riding on bumper of street car after warning—Nieboer v. Detroit Elec. Ry., 128 Mich. 486. Sitting in a chair in caboose, knowing that train is switching—Freeman v. Pere Marquette R. Co. (Mich.) 91 N. W. 1021; Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Buie (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 853. Stepping onto a forward platform from a car which was to be separated from the train and, on hearing a brakeman call "Look out," stepping back and falling between the cars—Butts v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 110 Fed. 329. Standing in an open door with hand against the casing. Injury received through the closing of the door—Brineger v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1973, 72 S. W. 783.

Held not negligence per se. Being in cattle car while train is at a stand though there is no right to be there while the train is in motion—Bolton v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 72 S. W. 530. Remaining in furniture car while it is being switched, because of lack of knowledge as to when the journey will be resumed—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 81. Standing in car with goods during switching—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 81. Being on bow-deck of a barge exposed to injury from a towing hauser—Hill v. Starin, 65 App. Div. (N. Y.) 361. White person riding in a car reserved for colored passengers though violating the rules of the company and the direction of the conductor—Florida Cent. & P. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 120 Fed. 799. Failure to secure a seat, where there were but a few vacant seats in the front cars of a train of fourteen and plaintiff passed through seven coaches looking for a seat in vain—Farnon v. Boston & A. R. Co., 180 Mass. 212. Passing from a smoking car to another coach and stepping down on the top step of the car holding by the hand rail—St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Leftwich, 117 Fed. 127.

38. Negligence of the carrier in the care of an intoxicated person, accepted by it as a passenger, is not excused by the passenger's negligence in occupying a dangerous position—Wheeler v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 70 N. H. 607, 54 L. R. A. 655.

39. Passenger riding on a front platform with others and thrown off by the jostling of the crowd through the driver's attempt to apply brakes—Cattano v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 173 N. Y. 565.

40. Cincinnati, L. & A. Elec. St. R. Co. v. Lohe (Ohio) 67 N. E. 161. Riding on platform of interurban car, there being vacant seats within the car—Cincinnati, L. & A. Elec. St. R. Co. v. Lohe (Ohio) 67 N. E. 161.

41. Burns v. Boston El. Ry. Co. (Mass.) 66 N. E. 418.

42. Sheeron v. Coney Island & B. R. Co., 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 476; Anderson v. City Ry. Co., 42 Or. 505, 71 Pac. 659. Riding upon the running board facing in—Purington-Kimball Brick Co. v. Eckman, 102 Ill. App. 183. Passenger thrown back against a pole as the car rounded a curve—Hesse v. Meriden, S. & C. Tramway Co. (Conn.) 54 Atl. 299. A large man walking back on the running board of an open car is not negligent per se so as to preclude a recovery if struck by the girder of a bridge near the track, though the only obstruction in the centre aisle was the dresses of lady passengers sitting near it—San Antonio Traction Co. v. Bryant (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 1015.

assumes the risk of being struck by poles near the track.[43] One passing vacant seats while passing along the running board of an open car is negligent if struck by a passing car, though the car that struck plaintiff was a new one of greater width than old ones, and plaintiff cannot show that he had been on the running board on previous occasions without injury.[44] Where a passenger leaning outward from a running board strikes a wagon, the conductor's negligence in increase of speed is not the cause of the injury.[45]

Riding on platform of railroad train.—If, without reasonable excuse, a passenger rides in a place not designed for the carriage of passengers, such as a car platform or steps, he is negligent;[46] though elsewhere it is held that it is not negligence per se to stand on the platform of a moving car,[47] though in violation of a rule of the company.[48] The rules of negligence applicable to street cars do not apply to persons on the platforms of interurban electric railroad cars.[49] A petition which does not show that plaintiff was not unnecessarily and voluntarily riding on a rear platform has been held demurrable.[50]

One who goes on the platform when the train starts to move and jumps in order to avoid being struck by a telegraph pole cannot recover.[51]

The question of whether a negro compelled to ride on the platform by the fact that the car set apart for negroes is crowded by whites, and by the fact that a conductor has refused to transfer him to a train following, is guilty of negligence, is for the jury.[52]

Allowing body to project from car.—Where a safe place is established within the coach, passengers have no right to ride on the platform or extend their persons beyond the car line.[53] Negligence in allowing an arm to extend from the sill of a car window is for the jury,[54] but it is held also that a passenger going to sleep and allowing his arm to project from a car window is negligent per se.[55] One who leans outward from the running board of a street car to signal the conductor is negligent,[56] though the contrary has been held of one on the footboard of an 43. Woodroffe v. Roxborough, C. H. & N. Ry. Co., 201 Pa. 521.

44. Moody v. Springfield St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 158.

45. Flynn v. Consolidated Traction Co., 67 N. J. Law, 546.

46. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Leftwich (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 127; Denny v. North Carolina R. Co., 132 N. C. 340. Person on platform in violation of rule—Kerr v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 100 Ill. App. 148. Standing on platform in violation of rule and request though there was a custom to violate the rule—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Bryant (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 885.

47. Doolittle v. Southern Ry., 62 S. C. 130. Riding on platform of a freight caboose in front of several cars of freight and lumber, pushed by the engine from the rear, believing that to ride inside was dangerous—Prescott & N. Ry. Co. v. Smith, 70 Ark. 179.

48. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Ball (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 879.

49. Cincinnati, L. & A. Elec. St. R. Co. v. Lohe (Ohio) 67 N. E. 161.

50. It is not sufficient to state that not being able to secure a seat in a rear coach which he boarded because of its crowded condition he stood on the rear platform—Meyere v. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. (Tenn.) 72 S. W. 114.

51. Lindsay v. Southern Ry. Co., 114 Ga. 896.

52. An instruction that plaintiff was not guilty of contributory negligence, is properly refused—Williams v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 1085.

53. Benedict v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 86 Minn. 224, 57 L. R. A. 639. A person standing in a place of safety on a street car is guilty of contributory negligence per se if he extends his head outside a railing protecting the platform into the path of a car approaching on the parallel track—Merchant v. South Chicago City Ry. Co., 104 Ill. App. 122.

54. Injury sustained by striking the open door of a freight car left on the switch track—Clerc v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co., 107 La. 370. It is not negligence per se for a passenger reading beside an open window to allow his elbow to extend some three inches beyond the sill—Tucker v. Buffalo Ry. Co., 169 N. Y. 589.

55. Plaintiff testified that he did not think his arm was outside of the car but two witnesses testified that he was asleep and that his arm projected and that there were no marks on the side of the car showing contact with an external object—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hoover, 3 Ind. T. 693.

56. Struck by passing wagon—Flynn v. Consolidated Traction Co., 67 N. J. Law, 546.

open car who leaned back to place change in his pocket or looked toward a friend also on the footboard.[57]

There can be no recovery where a passenger negligently extends his person beyond the car line from curiosity, though the carrier has permitted his cars to be overcrowded and required passengers to ride on the platform.[58]

Derailment of car.—There is no question of contributory negligence where a person is injured by the derailment of a car in which she is seated.[59]

Acts preparatory to alighting.—Where one, after notifying the conductor to stop at a certain point, rises and places her arm about a child to protect him from falling, and is thrown out while the car goes around a curve after failing to stop, the question of contributory negligence is for the jury.[60] The carrier is not liable for an injury to an infirm passenger occasioned by her arising before the train stopped, there being no unusual jerk, and she having been told by the conductor to wait until there was a stop.[61] It is not negligence per se for a person, after a station has been called, to go on the platform steps of a moving train in readiness to alight,[62] but the question may be for the jury.[63] One standing on the steps of a car about to stop cannot recover for a fall occasioned by the jerking of the car where it was not greater than usual.[64] A passenger is not warranted in assuming that a car will stop on the nearer side of the street so as to permit him to recover for being thrown from the footboard by a jolt, the crossing of the street not being at an unusual speed.[65]

Failure to ask assistance.—Failure to inform employes of a disability, and to ask for assistance in alighting, may be negligence.[66]

Leaving moving train or car.—One unnecessarily and knowingly leaving a railroad train in motion is as a matter of law contributorily negligent.[67] Knowledge of motion is not in all cases required.[68] In some jurisdictions it is held not necessarily negligence to alight from a slowly moving train,[69] or under circumstances

57. Anderson v. City Ry. Co., 42 Or. 505, 71 Pac. 659.

58. It is contributory negligence for a boy sixteen years old, on the platform of a crowded train, to lean out, allowing his head to come in contact with posts—Benedict v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 86 Minn. 224, 57 L. R. A. 639.

59. Ramson v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 101.

60. Whitaker v. Staten Island Midland R. Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 468.

61. Passenger arose in obedience to the cry "All hands get out here," her head being bundled up and she being unable to hear well—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Boles, 24 Ky. L. R. 2282, 73 S. W. 1034.

62. Southern Ry. Co. v. Roebuck, 132 Ala. 412.

63. Sweet v. Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. (Ala.) 33 So. 886. Passenger was holding a valise in one hand and her skirts with the other and train started before she had time to alight but she did not return to the car or hold to the railing and was thrown by a jerk incident to a second stop—Smalley v. Detroit & M. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 91 N. W. 1027.

64. Philips v. St. Charles St. R. Co., 106 La. 592.

65. Nies v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 68 App. Div. (N. Y.) 259.

66. A passenger with a weak ankle attempted to alight without looking to see whether there was a portable step or to ascertain the distance to the platform—Young v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 93 Mo. App. 267.

67. Walters v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 113 Wis. 367; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Cunningham, 102 Ill. App. 206. A woman encumbered by parcels attempting to alight from a moving train in the night, especially if she has been warned—McMichael v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (La.) 34 So. 110. Plaintiff was permitted to ride on a freight train only as a matter of accommodation and was thrown from the train as it was moving rapidly past his station, though he had been told it stopped there and one of the servants had told him it was time to prepare to get off—Peak's Adm'r v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 2157, 66 S. W. 995. Jumping from a train in rapid motion to avoid being carried by his station at which the train has not stopped—Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Martelle (Neb.) 91 N. W. 364. Evidence held sufficient—La Pointe v. Boston & M. R. R., 182 Mass. 227.

68. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Hubbard (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 112. Passenger did not look—Brown v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 181 Mass. 365. Jumping in the dark without looking—Oxsher v. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 550. Prevented from seeing by a veil—La Pointe v. Boston & M. R. R., 179 Mass. 535.

69. Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Gray, 28 Ind. App. 588. It is a question for the jury where plaintiff attempted to alight from a vestibuled train at night which had begun to move again after a stop. Plaintiff testified that he did not know the train was moving but there was evidence that the conductor told him to wait and he would misleading as to speed.[70] An attempt to alight from a moving train is not necessarily gross negligence, as where one preparing to alight alights after the train begins to move.[71] Where there is evidence that the train stopped long enough to allow plaintiff to alight, the jury should be instructed on the question of plaintiff's contributory negligence in failing to use proper diligence to leave the train before it started.[72] Negligence in alighting from a moving street car is for the jury,[73] to be determined from the attending circumstances.[74]

Where the carrier is not negligent, one stepping from a moving street car assumes the risk, though such act is not negligence per se.[75] The person attempting to alight from a moving street car cannot recover for injuries, though he has been unable to notify the conductor to stop.[76]

Alighting at dangerous place.—As a general rule, a passenger assumes the risk when he attempts to alight at a place where he is not invited to do so,[77] but it may be a question for the jury whether a passenger is negligent in getting off at a crossing stop,[78] or in alighting from the side of the train opposite the platform.[79] A passenger is not negligent in alighting from a train, where, after his station has been called, the train stops opposite a building which indicates that the stop was for a station.[80] A street car passenger is not bound to inquire whether the place of stopping is reasonably safe to alight.[81]

Care required after alighting.—One alighting at a regular stopping place is not bound to look for approaching trains on parallel tracks,[82] but a passenger who stop it, but as to whether plaintiff heard this warning the evidence was conflicting—Walters v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 113 Wis. 367. Plaintiff must show he was carefully trying to alight safely—Brown v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 181 Mass. 365.

70. A petition does not show contributory negligence per se where it alleges that plaintiff jumped from a train while it was moving rapidly in the dark, though it was still at the station and plaintiff believed it was moving slowly, no lights being placed so that he could estimate the speed—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Crockett, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 463.

71. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey (Neb.) 93 N. W. 526.

72. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. McKenzie (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 237.

73. Canfield v. North Chicago St. R. Co., 98 Ill. App. 1. Slowly moving car—Betts v. Wilmington City Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 53 Atl. 358. Injury while alighting by a sudden jerking of the car, evidence that plaintiff had signaled conductor to stop, that car had slowed up, and that he had seen the conductor's hand go up as if to signal—Harris v. Union Ry. Co., 69 App. Div. (N. Y.) 385. An instruction that the fact that a car starts before a passenger can alight does not entitle her to jump from it while it is in motion should be modified by requiring that the car must not be going at a rate of speed making it dangerous to do so—Indianapolis St. Ry. Co. v. Hockett (Ind.) 66 N. E. 39. Continuing an attempt to alight after the car started—Indianapolis St. Ry. Co. v. Lawn (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 508.

74. Bloomington & N. Ry. v. Zimmerman, 101 Ill. App. 184. One who attempts to alight from a car in motion without knowledge of the car employees, may relieve them from negligence in increasing the speed of the car. Evidence held sufficient to show such facts—Blakney v. Seattle Elec. Co., 28 Wash. 607, 68 Pac. 1037.

75. Jones v. Canal & C. R. Co., 109 La. 213. One attempting to get off a street car in motion while the motorman is slowing up after failure to observe a request to stop is negligent—Campbell v. Los Angeles Ry. Co., 135 Cal. 137, 67 Pac. 50.

76. Foran v. Union Traction Co., 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 10.

77. Leaving train at coal chute—Bohannon's Adm'x v. Southern Ry. Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 1390, 65 S. W. 169. Train stopped on switch not to discharge passengers—Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Sattler (Neb.) 90 N. W. 649, 57 L. R. A. 890. One who, wishing to go to the rear of car of a train, steps off the platform to go back on the outside and is injured by falling through a bridge, it being dark and the passenger being familiar with the station and the bridge, is negligent—Kellogg v. Smith, 179 Mass. 595. One attempting to alight from a rear platform when he knows that assistance will be afforded him at the front end of the car cannot recover for a fall due to the slippery steps, it being raining, snowing and freezing at the time—Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Aldridge, 27 Ind. App. 498.

78. Larson v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 85 Minn. 387.

79. Owen v. Washington & C. R. R. Co., 29 Wash. 207, 69 Pac. 757.

80. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Farr, 70 Ark. 264.

81. Montgomery St. Ry. Co. v. Mason, 133 Ala. 508. Question is for the jury where plaintiff was injured by stepping into a trench on alighting from a car at night, plaintiff testifying that she received no warning, did not see any ditch, barrier, or light—Wolf v. Third Ave. R. Co., 67 App. Div. (N. Y.) 605.

82. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Schmelling, 197 Ill. 619.

is injured while alighting, through proceeding in a direction where he has not been invited and the carrier has no reason to expect him to be, is not in the exercise of ordinary care,[83] though passengers may leave cars by any exit unless forbidden.[84] A passenger is not bound to keep a greater lookout for defects in a platform than is suggested by ordinary prudence; so it is not contributory negligence to step backward into a hole while the passenger is attempting to safely dispose of her children.[85] Where the passenger was injured in an attempt to reach the depot after being compelled to alight, at a distance therefrom in the dark, the question of negligence may be for the jury.[86]

Directions of passenger to driver of cab.—A passenger of a transfer company is not contributorily negligent in directing the driver to stop at a place not necessarily dangerous, though the driver stops so near a car track that the cab is overturned by a car.[87]

Miscellaneous acts considered as constituting or not constituting negligence are collected in the footnotes.[88]

Questions for jury.—The question of negligence is a matter of law only when the facts are not in controversy, or but one rational inference may be drawn therefrom.[89] Ordinarily, the question is for the jury,[90] and always where the testimony is conflicting.[91] Contributory negligence of a passenger on a mixed train may be for the jury.[92] Negligence of a person attempting to assist a passenger injured while boarding a street car is for the jury.[93]

83. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Harrison, 100 Ill. App. 211.

84. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Schmelling, 99 Ill. App. 577.

85. Barker v. Ohio River R. Co., 51 W. Va. 423.

86. Harkness v. Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. (Miss.) 33 So. 77.

87. Frank Bird Transfer Co. v. Krug (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 309.

88. A pregnant woman undertaking a journey not negligent unless the undertaking was dangerous in her condition—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Ferguson, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 460. A woman is not negligent in wearing a long skirt though her dress catches on the plunger of a street car while she is alighting—Smith v. Kingston City R. Co., 169 N. Y. 616. The fact that plaintiff made a misstep while boarding a train does not require an instruction on the subject of contributory negligence—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Gardner (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 186. Where a husband sues for an injury to his wife caused by the crowded condition of a train compelling her to stand and hold a child, his contributory negligence in permitting her to carry the child is a question for the jury—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Rea, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 549. One walking sidewise and holding the rails of a moving street car cannot recover for an injury sustained by falling into an open manhole—Sellers v. Union Traction Co., 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 5. One who steps on a street car without grasping a railing is not per se negligent. After stepping on the platform, plaintiff caught the hand hold with the hand farthest from it, reaching across his body, the other hand being occupied with packages—Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Brannon, 132 Ala. 431. A mail agent, thrown from a mail car, cannot recover where he did not have the lower doors across the door opening closed, though the safety bar was so tight in its socket that it could not be placed across the door, it not being defective and the agent having made no attempt to find anything with which to dislodge it—Martin v. Philadelphia & R. Ry. Co., 200 Pa. 603. The question of whether one whose thumb is mashed by the closing of a door of a freight caboose on a sudden jerk of the train is guilty of negligence is for the jury, as is the question of whether a jerk was an extraordinary one—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Crady, 24 Ky. L. R. 643, 69 S. W. 706. It is a question for the jury whether a passenger is negligent in passing an unvestibuled sleeper to visit a dining car—Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Adams (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 324.

89, 90, 91. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey (Neb.) 93 N. W. 526. The question of contributory negligence must be submitted to the jury where the inference may result from defendant's evidence that the accident did not occur in the manner contended for by the plaintiff's witnesses without contributory negligence on plaintiff's part—Wimpleberg v. Yonkers R. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 963. On a conflict of evidence as to whether plaintiff attempted to alight while car was in motion or whether he was thrown there from by a sudden jerk, the question of the locus of negligence is for the jury—Schilling v. Union R. Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 74; Comerford v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 181 Mass. 528. Where plaintiff was standing in a passenger coach, at the time of injury, the question whether there were vacant seats in forward cars may be left to the jury though defendant's evidence shows that there were some 1102 seats on the train and 952 passengers, and that there were plenty of seats in the two front cars, since defendant's witness might have been mistaken or the jury have disbelieved him—Farnon v. Boston & A. R. Co., 180 Mass. 212.

92. Symonds v. Minneapolis & St. L. Ry. Co. (Minn.) 92 N. W. 409.

(§ 26) I. Liability of initial or connecting carrier.—Where the carrier limits its liability toward a passenger to its own line, it is liable for an injury occurring while running its cars a short distance over a connecting line before turning them over thereto.[94]

(§ 26) J. Limitation of liability.—Statutes may provide the extent to which liability may be limited.[95] Where there is a custom to carry passengers generally on certain freight trains, contracts with passengers releasing the company from all liability while riding on such freight trains are void, though tickets are furnished by reason thereof at a reduced rate,[96] and one on a freight train in charge of freight is a passenger concerning whom the carrier cannot limit its liability to gross negligence or exempt itself from the exercise of care and diligence.[97] An agreement between a carrier and a person for whom it agrees to haul goods and employees, whereby such person agrees to indemnify the carrier for any damages to which it may be held liable in excess of a certain amount, is valid.[98] Acceptance of a reduced rate ticket, with an indorsement that the person using it assumes the risk of accident and damage, places the duty on the passenger of affirmatively proving negligence.[99] Where tickets are given in consideration of the grant of a right of way subject to a sole condition of personal use, a provision in the tickets exempting the carrier from liability for injury is without consideration and not assented to by use of the ticket.[1]

If it is provided that a person in charge of stock shall ride in the caboose and that if he leave it or pass over or along the cars or track, he assumes the risk, the carrier is nevertheless liable for an injury received by him while in the cattle car, caring for stock, through other cars being bumped into it, the duty of caring for the stock being on him under the contract.[2]

Provisions in passes.—It has been held that provisions in a free pass exempting the carrier from liability for negligence are binding,[3] and contra,[4] an exemption in a free ticket for injury to the person or loss and damage to property does not cover the death of the passenger.[5] A condition for a release of the carrier from all claims for damages for personal injuries, from whatever cause, does not release the carrier from liability for negligence.[6]

Contracts with employes of sleeping car companies.—A carrier transporting a sleeping car is entitled to the benefit of a release from liability for personal injuries, executed by an employe of the sleeping car company to the sleeping car company, since the railroad company is under no legal duty to furnish sleeping

93. Schoenfeld v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 201.

94. Oliver v. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co., 65 S. C. 1.

95. Comp. St. c. 72, art. 1, § 5, does not confer the right to limit liability by stipulation, since section 3 confines such right to the exceptions provided therein—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hambel (Neb.) 89 N. W. 643.

96. Richmond v. Southern Pac. Co., 41 Or. 54, 67 Pac. 947.

97. Pennsylvania Co. v. Greso, 102 Ill. App. 252.

98. Contract to haul defendant's circus train and to provide accommodations on passenger train for defendant's agent, contained a provision that plaintiff should not be liable for any injury to an amount more than $50, and if held liable for a greater sum, defendant would repay the excess—Seaboard Air Line Ry. Co. v. Main, 132 N. C. 445.

99. Common law rule making the carrier liable for a passenger's safety, is waived.—Crary v. Lehigh Val. R. Co., 203 Pa. 525.

1. Dow v. Syracuse, L. & B. Ry., 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 362.

2. Bolton v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 72 S. W. 530.

3. Payne v. Terre Haute & I. Ry. Co., 157 Ind. 616. Where one riding on a free pass assumes all the risks of accidents, he cannot recover for negligence, though the pass is a breach of statutes relating to interstate commerce—Duncan v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 113 Fed. 508.

4. Code, § 1296, provides that a carrier cannot agree for exemption from liability for injury from its own negligence—Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Tanner (Va.) 41 S. E. 721. Against public policy—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Flood (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 331.

5. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Adams, 116 Fed. 324.

6. Dow v. Syracuse, L. & B. Ry., 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 362.

cars, and where the employe releases the carrier from liability of any nature or character whatsoever, personal injuries caused by the negligence of the carrier are included.[7]

(§ 26) K. Damages.[8]—Where the carrier carries the passenger by his station, it is liable for any injuries which may be reasonably foreseen,[9] but he cannot recover for mere mental suffering.[10] One holding a ticket to a point at which a train stops only on signal cannot recover damages for being carried by, where she has informed no one connected with the train as to her destination and voluntarily leaves it though the conductor offers to transport her to the next stop and send her back.[11]

Elements of damage.—Where a woman has been compelled to stand, she may recover for injury on account of having to hold a child not her own, which she assumed to take care of.[12] An officer may show the amount of fees lost by his prevention of completion of his journey.[13] Loss through inability to attend to business may be an element of damage.[14] It may be shown that after his injuries plaintiff still collected his salary as a government employe.[15] An instruction need not call attention to the amount claimed for the expense of nursing and medical services.[16] The question of whether injured feelings are connected with bodily injury is for the jury, as is the question of whether negligence is the proximate cause of injuries.[17]

Excessive damages.—See foot note for consideration of particular verdicts.[18]

Punitive damages may be awarded in cases of gross negligence.[19] The passenger must have been injured by the negligence.[20] There must be willful and reckless disregard of the passenger's right, together with gross negligence, to warrant exemplary damages.[21] Punitive damages may be awarded for a malicious assault by a conductor on a passenger,[22] or for insolence and ridicule of a passenger by an employe.[23] Where an instruction as to punitive damages is given, defendant is entitled to have an instruction as to actual damages in the absence of malice.[24]

7. Russell v. Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 157 Ind. 305, 55 L. R. A. 253.

8. Merely a few peculiar cases are treated here. For a comprehensive review of all cases see article "Damages."

9. Passenger sustained severe injuries from being compelled to remain several hours in a cold, unlighted depot and in driving to her destination—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Ricketts (Tex.) 70 S. W. 315. Evidence of fright after being discharged at a station beyond the proper one, is inadmissible, unless it is shown that the locality was one to occasion fright and that the carrier had knowledge—Central of Ga. Ry. Co. v. Dorsey (Ga.) 42 S. E. 1024. A carrier is not liable for the robbery of a passenger after he is put off at a point beyond his station, defendant having failed to awaken him at the proper place, unless it is shown that the agents had knowledge of the moral repute of the locality where he was ejected—Atkinson v. Pacific Ry. Co., 90 Mo. App. 489. Damages sustained from sickness incurred by a child from falling in the mud and being wet and frightened cannot be recovered where he was carried a short distance past his station and put off without injury and without malice or inhumanity—Rawlings v. Wabash R. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 534.

10. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Dalton, 65 Kan. 661, 70 Pac. 645.

11. Pence v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 1207, 64 S. W. 905.

12. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Rea, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 549.

13. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hoover, 3 Ind. T. 693.

14. Storrs v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 134 Cal. 91, 66 Pac. 72.

15. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Carothers, 23 Ky. L. R. 1673, 65 S. W. 833, 66 S. W. 385.

16. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Sampson (Tex. Civ. App.) 64 S. W. 692.

17. Rawlings v. Wabash R. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 535.

18. $125 is not excessive where passenger is carried beyond her station and sustains abrasions and bruises while crossing a cattle guard on the way back to the station and falls at other places and becomes thoroughly wet—Rawlings v. Wabash R. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 535. $1450 ordered to be reduced to $500 where the arrest of a passenger on a street car was ordered by the conductor, the passenger was released on recognizance and was discharged on the following day, there being no appearance against him—Grayson v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 730.

19. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McClain, 23 Ky. L. R. 1878, 66 S. W. 391.

20, 21. Oliver v. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co., 65 S. C. 1. Evidence that a train was run at the rate of 60 miles an hour over a defective track is sufficient—Griffin v. Southern Ry., 65 S. C. 122.

22. Lexington Ry. Co. v. Cozine, 23 Ky. L. R. 1137, 64 S. W. 848.

23. Street railway company failed to stop at the proper signal and employee insulted the person on his becoming a passenger on

(§ 26) L. Remedies and procedure. Form of action.—An action based on negligence in maintenance of a road bed is in tort, though the plaintiff alleges a contract to carry him safely as a passenger.[25]

Venue.—An action by a nonresident against a railroad corporation for personal injuries received in another state must be brought in the county in which the chief officer of the defendant resides or in which it has its chief office.[26]

Defenses.—Recovery under accident policies is not a bar to recovery against the carrier.[27]

Pleading.[28]—Allegations of separate breaches of duty growing out of the same facts do not state separate causes of action.[29] It is not sufficient to show that plaintiff was a passenger to aver that an assault was committed "while plaintiff was engaged in or about becoming a passenger on said car."[30]

Negligence may be alleged generally in the absence of a motion for more specific statement.[31] Use of the word "negligent" may be unnecessary.[32] The fact that elements of negligence are alleged conjunctively does not render proof of all necessary.[33] An allegation that an act was done with knowledge or notice does not charge wantonness.[34] Cases in which the general sufficiency of pleading of negligence is considered are grouped in the notes,[35] so also cases of sufficiency of negativing contributory negligence.[36] the return trip—Jackson Elec. Ry., L. & P. Co. v. Lowry, 79 Miss. 431.

24. Failure to stop a passenger train in response to a signal at a flag station—Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. White (Miss.) 33 So. 970.

25. Chesapeake & N. Ry. Co. v. Hanmer, 23 Ky. L. R. 1846, 66 S. W. 375.

26. Eichorn v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 1640, 65 S. W. 797.

27. Averments in an answer that plaintiff is asserting claims for his injuries under accident policies which he held, are properly stricken out—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Carothers, 23 Ky. L. R. 1673, 65 S. W. 833, 66 S. W. 385.

28. See articles "Negligence" and "Pleading" for discussion of general rules.

29. A complaint alleging in one count that defendant negligently and carelessly caused a train to be suddenly started while plaintiff was alighting, and in another that reasonable time was not allowed plaintiff to alight, does not state two causes of action—Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Wallace, 104 Ill. App. 55.

30. Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Mason (Ala.) 34 So. 207.

31. Charge of having carelessly and negligently started a car with a sudden jerk while plaintiff was alighting, throwing her to the ground and injuring her, is sufficient—South Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Zerler (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 599. Where negligence alleged is the failure to provide a safe place to alight, the complaint need not aver what constitutes a safe place or give a minute description of the place where the stop was made, and of the injuries—Montgomery St. Ry. Co. v. Mason, 133 Ala. 508.

32. An averment that while plaintiff was attempting to alight, after the carrier had caused its passengers to go on the platform for the purpose of getting off, the train suddenly jerked and threw her off the car, is sufficient—Cincinnati, H. & I. R. Co. v. Worthington (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 478.

33. Duell v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 115 Wis. 516.

34. Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Butler, 135 Ala. 388.

35. Pleading sudden jerk—Gorman v. St. Louis Transit Co., 96 Mo. App. 602. Petition where a passenger was injured by reason of the distance from a car step to the ground held good against general demurrer—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Clark (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 587. Allegation that plaintiff was injured by the negligence of the driver of the carriage in which she was transported in stopping it too near the track, and by the negligence of the street car company in failing to operate its cars so as to avoid a collision, is sufficient against a demurrer for want of facts—Frank Bird Transfer Co. v. Krug (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 309. A declaration setting forth relation of carrier and passenger and averring defendant failed to comply with its duty to provide suitable gates, safeguards to prevent persons falling between cars, by reason of which plaintiff was injured, is sufficient as against a motion in arrest of judgment for plaintiff—Lake St. El. R. Co. v. Burgess, 200 Ill. 628. Plaintiff alleging that a train was so negligently managed that while running at a speed of 10 miles an hour, it was suddenly stopped and plaintiff injured by being thrown with violence from his seat, is good as against a demurrer that no rate of speed can be said to be negligence per se—Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Harbin (Ind.) 67 N. E. 109. An averment that defendant negligently failed to carry plaintiff safely and so negligently and unskillfully conducted itself that plaintiff was thrown to the floor, is sufficiently certain—Southern Ry. Co. v. Crowder, 135 Ala. 417. Petition construed as to whether it presented the issue of failure to open a ticket office promptly, warranting the giving of an instruction on such theory—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Cannon (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 992. Sufficiency of complaint for injuries received while crossing a track after alighting from defendant's train—Savannah, F. & W. Ry. Co. v. Hatcher,

Allegations as to manner and cause of the accident become immaterial where defendant admits the derailment by reason of which the injuries were sustained.[37]

Where contributory negligence is set up as a defense, it must be alleged that plaintiff failed to exercise ordinary and reasonable care or that he saw the cause of the accident.[38]

A complaint alleging that plaintiff was rendered unable to attend to business may be amended at the trial to show the nature of his business.[39] The complaint may be amended to conform to proof, where the variance does not affect the cause of action but merely plaintiff's contributory negligence.[40]

Conformity of pleadings and proof and variance.—Proof of the accident must conform to the allegations.[41] If negligence is pleaded specifically, the proof will be confined to the allegations,[42] and negligence not pleaded cannot be shown.[43] Evidence of particular acts, not set out in detail in the petition, done at the time of the injury may be admissible to illustrate the manner in which plaintiff claimed the injury occurred.[44] Matters of inducement need not be established.[45]

115 Ga. 379. It is not an allegation of specific negligence to allege "that the running gear, that is to say the wheels, axles and other machinery, by means of which the said car ran along said track, were defective and out of order and not fit for the purpose of supporting said car on said track," and, after averring knowledge, that the defendant "ran the said car along the said track and into said curve at a high rate of speed"—Johnson v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 173. Complaint is sufficiently specific which alleges that plaintiff's father, while a passenger on defendant's train, was killed by its derailment occasioned by the negligence of defendant's servants and agents in charge—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Contreras (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 1051. Sufficiency of a pleading as to averments that an injury was due to the negligence of the lessee of a lessor company made defendant—Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Doan, 195 Ill. 168.

36. An allegation that it was the duty of a brakeman to assist passengers in safely alighting, is a sufficient averment that advice and assistance to a passenger to alight from a moving train was in the scope of his employment—Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Gray, 28 Ind. App. 588. An allegation that a car was about to collide with a locomotive is a sufficient allegation that a collision was imminent—Selma St. & Suburban Ry. Co. v. Owen, 132 Ala. 420.

37. McNeill v. Durham & C. R. Co., 130 N. C. 256.

38. It is not sufficient to allege facts indicating that it could have been seen—Montgomery St. Ry. Co. v. Mason, 133 Ala. 508.

39. Buckbee v. Third Ave. R. Co., 64 App. Div. (N. Y.) 360.

40. A complaint averring that plaintiff was thrown by a sudden start of the car after it had stopped, may be amended to conform to proof that the jerk occurred before the car had quite stopped—Scarry v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 284.

41. Variance held fatal. Averments that plaintiff was thrown between cars while attempting to board and proof of being thrown under a car after stepping on its platform—Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Brannon, 132 Ala. 431. Allegation that a motorman negligently permitted a minor to ride on the foot board during his journey, and evidence that he rode on the front platform until within a block of his home, where the motorman intended to let him off and there stepped down on the foot board to leave the car—Richmond Ry. & Elec. Co. v. West, 4 Va. Sup. Ct. 112, 40 S. E. 643. Averments that plaintiff was thrown to the ground by the force of a collision, proof that plaintiff jumped to escape the collision—McAllister v. People's Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 743. Allegations that while plaintiff was in the act of alighting from a car which had completely stopped, it started with great suddenness and velocity throwing her, proof that plaintiff stepped off a car before it had come to a full stop—Coleman v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 836.

Immaterial variance. Allegation that a car was caused to lurch back and forward, evidence that the lurch was sideways—Hicks v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Tex.) 72 S. W. 835. Allegation that plaintiff paid his fare to a certain point and proof that he paid it to a point a mile beyond when, on being informed that the train did not stop at the latter point, with the assent of the conductor he proposed to get off at the nearer one—Southern Ry. Co. v. Lollar, 135 Ala. 375. Allegation that a conductor in charge of a street car was unfit, is supported by proof that the conductor wilfully knocked plaintiff from a car step—Willis v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 340. An allegation that a conductor negligently and recklessly interfered with plaintiff while attempting to board a car, is supported by proof that the conductor wilfully knocked plaintiff from the car steps—Id.

42. Derailment of a train—Johnson v. Galveston, H. & N. Ry. Co., 27 Tex. Civ. App. 616. Under a declaration alleging a defective airbrake, evidence that control of the car was lost through a snap switch being closed which should have been open, is not admissible—McAllister v. People's Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 743.

43. Absence of light at a station—Milligan v. Texas & N. O. Ry. Co., 27 Tex. Civ. App. 600. Bad condition of track—Nies v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 68 App. Div. (N. Y.) 259. In the absence of an averment, plaintiff cannot show that while standing on the foot board he lost his balance by reason of jolting, due to the rough condition of the track—Richmond Ry. & Elec. Co. v. West, 4 Va. Sup. Ct. 112, 40 S. E. 643.

44. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. McKinney, 116 Ga. 13.

In an action for an assault, plaintiff may testify to remarks of the employes after assaulting him, where it is alleged that after the assault, the employes continued to insult and abuse plaintiff.[46]

Under a general denial in an action for injury to one in charge of stock, while in the car tending the stock, a provision in the contract requiring plaintiff to ride in the caboose may be admitted.[47]

Special pleas which fail to negative the averments of negligence of the complaint are subject to demurrer.[48]

Presumptions and burden of proof.—To render the doctrine res ipsa loquitur applicable, the thing must indicate the negligence of defendant.[49] The doctrine applies to the derailment of street cars operated by mechanical or electrical means.[50] Evidence of a contract of carriage and injury to plaintiff while a passenger thereunder throws the burden of showing freedom from negligence on defendant,[51] or of showing that the injury arose from the negligence of the passenger or the violation of some regulation of the carrier known to him.[52] The rule extends to carriers by street cars,[53] or by steamboat.[54] The presumption of negligence from the happening of an accident does not arise unless there is evidence tending to connect the carrier or its employes or some of the appliances of transportation with the injury,[55] but a showing of an injury from a defect in anything which a carrier is bound to supply,[56] or from an apparatus wholly within the control of the carrier, is sufficient.[57] Particular cases are grouped in the notes.[58] Where injuries

45. Where it is alleged that a door was opened by the conductor and that sparks escaping from the engine, struck plaintiff, it is not necessary to establish the fact that the door was opened by the conductor, or submit it as an issue—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Parks (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 439.

46. Statement of porter "That is my bread and butter and I would do it again"—Shaefer v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 154.

47. Bolton v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 72 S. W. 530.

48. An averment that plaintiff was thrown by the starting of a train as she was attempting to board it as a passenger by invitation of an agent or servant of defendant having authority to extend such invitation is not negatived by a plea that the train had stopped sufficiently long for her to have boarded the train safely, or by pleas that she was attempting to get on without knowledge of the conductor or persons in charge of the train—Alabama Midland Ry. Co. v. Horn, 132 Ala. 407.

49. Paynter v. Bridgeton & M. Traction Co., 67 N. J. Law, 619.

50. Adams v. Union Ry. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 136.

51. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Gardner (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 186; Le Blanc v. Sweet, 107 La. 355.

52. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey (Neb.) 93 N. W. 526; Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Gardner (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 186.

53. Brimmer v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 101 Ill. App. 198.

54. Where it is shown that a passenger on a steamboat was drowned in an attempt to transfer her to the shore, the burden is on the carrier to show that the accident was without its fault—Le Blanc v. Sweet, 107 La. 355.

55. It is not sufficient to show that a foreign body came through a window and struck plaintiff without other explanation of what the body was or how it happened to come into the car—Ault v. Cowan, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 616. Negligence in jerking the train while stopping, causing a door to be violently closed upon plaintiff's hand, she having placed it on the door jamb to prevent herself from being thrown down, must be established by plaintiff—Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Fotheringham (Colo. App.) 68 Pac. 978.

56. Davis v. Paducah Ry. & Light Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 135, 68 S. W. 140.

57. Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Morse, 98 Ill. App. 662.

58. Facts raising presumption. Injury by sparks escaping from the engine—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Parks (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 439. Starting of car while passenger is alighting—United Rys. & Elec. Co. v. Beidelman, 95 Md. 480. Collision with car of another company (Construing Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1869, 1981, 1963)—Osgood v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 137 Cal. 280, 70 Pac. 169. Collision—Sambuck v. Southern Pac. Co., 138 Cal. xix., 71 Pac. 174. Shock on taking hold of the rail of a street car to board it after a stop for such purpose—Dallas Consol. Elec. St. Ry. Co. v. Broadhurst (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 315. Falling of trolley pole—Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Carroll, 102 Ill. App. 202. Passenger at a station being struck by a lump of coal from the tender of a passing train—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 24 Ky. L. R. 1402, 71 S. W. 516. Breaking of an axle injuring a drover riding on a freight train—Western Maryland R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 637.

Failure of presumption. Mere fall without showing of cause—Paynter v. Bridgeton & M. Traction Co., 67 N. J. Law, 619. Mere fact that a drover in charge of stock is killed—Western Maryland R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 637. The mere presence of saw dust and shavings and fragments of wood on an elevated rail-result from derailment and plaintiff does not rest on the presumption arising from the fact, he must show by his evidence, negligence on the part of defendant.[59] Where negligence is alleged to have been in having caused plaintiff to jump by reason of an appearance of imminent danger, the plaintiff should show that the appearance was such as to convince a reasonable person of the imminence of such danger.[60] If a blow is shown to have resulted from the carrier's negligence, and plaintiff is shown to suffer from shock, the result of a jar to her nervous system, she is not bound to show that the shock was the consequence of the blow, it being presumed that the jar and blow were due to the same cause.[61] The burden may remain on plaintiff after all the proof is in to show negligence,[62] as where there has been a showing of contributory negligence.[63] The fact that plaintiff fails to establish a certain theory of the accident does not relieve defendant from the duty of showing that it was free from negligence,[64] and see for sufficiency of evidence to shift burden.[65]

Admissibility of evidence.—Decisions as to admissibility of evidence in actions against carriers for personal injuries are collected in the foot notes.[66] road structure is not evidence of negligence where a passenger is injured thereby, and if plaintiff testifies that she does not know whether the saw dust was thrown or blown down and it is proved that there was considerable wind at the time, she cannot recover under the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur—Wadsworth v. Boston El. R. Co. (Mass.) 66 N. E. 421.

59. Buckland v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 181 Mass. 3.

60. Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Butler, 135 Ala. 388.

61. Homans v. Boston El. Ry. Co., 180 Mass. 456.

62. As where he has made a prima facie case in an action for injuries sustained in a derailment, that the car was going at "a pretty good rate" and that the accident happened, where there was a junction with side tracks—Hollahan v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 164.

63. Richmond Pass. & Power Co. v. Allen (Va.) 43 S. E. 356.

64. Failure of a passenger to establish that an accident was due to defective insulation—D'Arcy v. Westchester Elec. Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 952.

65. Evidence held insufficient to discharge the burden on the carrier of explaining an accident resulting from the refusal of an engine to work—Walker v. Wilmington Steam Boat Co., 117 Fed. 784. Proof of an accident by the sudden and unexplained stopping of a street car, raises a presumption of negligence not overcome by evidence of the use of the best known appliances, careful supervision and skillful service—Langley v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 36 Misc. (N. Y.) 804.

66. In general. Evidence of negligence may go to the jury though not shown to be the proximate cause of the injury—Doolittle v. Southern Ry., 62 S. C. 130. Possession of money to pay fare and intention to become a passenger is admissible where plaintiff's intestate was killed at a station—Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Huston, 95 Ill. App. 350. Injury to plaintiff's hat, after he left the place where he was injured cannot be shown—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Carothers, 23 Ky. L. R. 1673, 65 S. W. 833, 66 S. W. 385. What took place in the car at the time of the accident is admissible—Id. Where negligence is charged in starting the car with a jerk after a stop a conductor cannot be examined as to speed before coming to the stop—Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Ellard, 135 Ala. 433. If alleged that plaintiff, the morning after the accident, was arraigned for intoxication, the officer who took her to court should be allowed to state what plea he made at her request and what admissions she had made as to her condition the night before—Link v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 64 App. Div. (N. Y.) 406. Where there is evidence of negligence in that a steamboat was being driven with more than usual speed, the usual speed may be properly submitted to the jury. Plaintiff was injured by reason of the boat striking a tree knocking it over on him, while it was being attempted to make a landing, bow on, the river being bank full, and there being an eddy in front of the landing—Louisville & E. Mail Co. v. Gilliland, 24 Ky. L. R. 2081, 72 S. W. 1101. Plaintiff having been compelled to stand on the platform of an excursion train by reason of its overcrowded condition, it may be shown that the excursion was advertised and large crowds expected—Williams v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 1085. Where an element of damage alleged in compelling the plaintiff to ride in a second class car, though holding a first class ticket, was that rough language was used in her presence, evidence of the profanity of one of the passengers is admissible—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Kingston (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 518. Where an accident occurred from the failure of an engineer to obey signals of the conductor, evidence that the conductor thought the passenger had alighted is immaterial, it not appearing that his action would have been different—Simmons v. Oregon R. Co., 41 Or. 151, 69 Pac. 440, 1022. In an action for negligently showing a passenger into the wrong car, the unused portion of a ticket may be admitted to show the contract of transportation—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Evans (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 351. Use of steps and station platform is admissible to show their adoption by defendant as part of its accommodations—Smoak v. Savannah, F. & W. R. Co., 65 S. C. 299. It may be shown that others jumped off just ahead of plaintiff under similar circumstances, as showing that plaintiff thought he might jump with safety—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Crockett, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 463; evidence of a custom to notify passengers of the approach of a curve is inadmissible, where there is no evidence that such notice was not given. Where the injury occurred by a person being thrown against plaintiff while the car was rounding a curve, evidence that the person so thrown was talking to the conductor just before the accident is immaterial, and evidence of the peculiar motion of the car in going around a curve at other times is inadmissible, there being no allegation that the road bed was improper or out of order, or that the car was not a proper one, properly equipped—Merrill v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 401. Evidence that blood was seen running from the heads of other persons after the collision, is admissible to show its violence—Larkin v. Chicago & G. W. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 92 N. W. 891. A surgeon in defendant's employ sent to the scene of the accident may be asked as to his efforts to find out who were injured—Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Story, 104 Ill. App. 132. If it is alleged that the plaintiff alighted at a wrong station at defendant's porter's invitation, it may be shown that the porter is only required to announce stations and assist passengers to alight and not required to notify particular passengers where they should get off—Texas Midland R. v. Terry, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 341. Where the injury was from an electric shock, another person may testify that he was shocked on the same day on the same car—Dallas Consol. Elec. St. Ry. Co. v. Broadhurst (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 315. Where the person for whom recovery is sought was one to whom defendant omitted no duty, the question as to whether it was negligence to allow two trains to collide in the day time is irrelevant, and in the same case a witness need not be allowed to testify that he had been examined before a railroad commission as to double headers—Crawleigh v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 140. Where defendant claims that plaintiff is chargeable with knowledge of the nearness of poles to the track by the fact that he has passed other similar poles, it may be shown that such poles were placed at a safe distance from the track—Hesse v. Meriden, S. & C. Tramway Co. (Conn.) 54 Atl. 299.

Sufficiency of evidence.—Where evidence is equally consistent with the absence and presence of negligence, plaintiff cannot recover.[67] Under a general denial,

Construction of cars. Proof that appliances on new cars were not used on old cars does not tend to show negligence in the use of the latter—Moody v. Springfield St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 158. Where plaintiff was injured while seated in defendant's car, evidence of the car's construction and furnishing is admissible as part of the res gestae —Southern Ry. Co. v. Crowder, 130 Ala. 256.

Condition of tracks and premises. Where the declaration charges that the car was so run as to throw defendant out by a violent lurch, the condition of the track and rails at the place of the accident may be shown—Fitch v. Mason City & C. L. Traction Co., 116 Iowa, 716. On an injury from a broken rail, evidence that broken rails had been seen on other portions of the road is inadmissible, either to rebut evidence that an examination a short time before the wreck would have shown a broken rail, had there been one, or to show that the rail was broken before the train went on it—Whittlesey v. Burlington, C. R. & N. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 90 N. W. 516. Where it is alleged that there was too great a distance from the car step to the ground, the presence of a ditch at the place of accident may be shown, and a witness may testify that there was a fill at the place of accident as tending to show the absence of a platform and the distance to the ground—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Clark (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 587.

Sufficiency of stop. In order to show that a train did not make a reasonable stop, it may be shown that a third person who had purchased a ticket was, by reason of its starting, unable to board the train—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Crockett, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 463. Evidence of a crowded condition of cars and the possibility of getting on another coach may be admitted as bearing on the reasonableness of time given to change cars—Oliver v. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co., 65 S. C. 1.

Carrier's rules. Rules of the company having no relation to the issues, cannot be introduced—Deutschmann v. Third Ave. R. Co., 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 413.

City ordinances. Where plaintiff was injured while passing from the car to the sidewalk, an ordinance requiring a street railroad company to keep a space about one foot outside its tracks in repair is admissible—Fielders v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co., 67 N. J. Law, 76. Where a passenger sustained an injury by stepping into a hole on alighting from a street car, a resolution of the council giving authority to a paving company to take up the paving laid by the street car company and keep the street in accordance with the city's specifications, is admissible to show that the carrier had been relieved from the obligation of keeping the street in repair; or, though the street car company was not relieved of the obligation to keep the street in repair by the city's action, as bearing on the question of negligence (construing Railroad Law, § 98; Syracuse City Charter, §§ 30, 138)—Welch v. Syracuse Rapid Transit Ry. Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 362. Where negligence alleged is in running at a speed violating a city ordinance, the ordinance is admissible in evidence. Passenger was knocked from the running board by a bridge girder—San Antonio Traction Co. v. Bryant (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 1015.

Conversations and statements of employes. Statements of a railroad commissioner to a railroad official are admissible to show notice of the condition of a depot and platform—Smoak v. Savannah, F. & W. R. Co., 65 S. C. 299. Evidence of conversation with a brakeman about holding a train is admissible, where the contention is concerning the holding of a train at a regular stopping place to allow plaintiff to alight and secure a ticket, and it may also be shown that plaintiff was directed by the conductor to get off at the station and purchase a ticket—Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Flaharty, 96 Ill. App. 563. Where plaintiff was thrown to the floor by a sudden stop, a conversation with the there must be evidence that defendant owned or operated the road or car on which plaintiff was a passenger.[68] Where plaintiff's case rests on her unsupported testimony partially contradicted by her own witnesses, it is not sufficient as against clear evidence of contributory negligence.[69] Where it is alleged that injuries were received through the negligence of servants in charge of certain cars, it is not necessary that it be shown which servant was negligent.[70] A statement by the passenger that he was not thrown, but that a ring on his hand was caught on a car handle, tearing his finger, is not contradictory of a claim at the trial that his finger was torn by a sudden forward movement of the car.[71] Cases in which the sufficiency of evidence with regard to particular allegations of negligence has been considered are grouped in the foot notes.[72] conductor by plaintiff on entering the car is admissible to show the carrier's knowledge that plaintiff was a cripple—Louisville, H. & St. L. R. Co. v. Bowlds, 23 Ky. L. R. 1202, 64 S. W. 957. Evidence that a brakeman when he announced the station told plaintiff to follow him, inducing her to leave her seat, is admissible. The fact that plaintiff while standing up in the aisle was thrown to the floor by a sudden jerk was pleaded—Id.

67. Injury received through stepping on a nail when leaving a street car—Cahn v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 824.

68. Indianapolis St. Ry. Co. v. Lawn (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 508.

69. Attempt to alight from moving car—Hogan v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 614.

70. The rule that if plaintiff pleads specific negligence he must prove it, does not apply to an averment that defendant "did by the servants in charge of said car and its servants in charge of another of the cars, so carelessly manage and control said cars as to cause and suffer the same to collide"—Malloy v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 159.

71. Tooker v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 371.

72. To show payment of fare causing person to become passenger on freight train—Crawleigh v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 140. To connect injury with accident—Hicks v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 322; Nicholson v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 89; Buckbee v. Third Ave. R. Co., 64 App. Div. (N. Y.) 360. To connect an injury with an accident so as to permit testimony of the condition resulting from the injury two and a half years after the accident—Muller v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 221. Throwing passenger from street car—South Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Dufresne, 200 Ill. 456; Ackerstadt v. Chicago City Ry. Co., 194 Ill. 616; Witherington v. Lynn & B. R. Co., 182 Mass. 596, 66 N. E. 206; Berry v. Utica Belt Line St. R. Co., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 490. Sudden stop—Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Morse, 197 Ill. 327; Erwin v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co., 94 Mo. App. 289; Smalley v. Detroit & M. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 91 N. W. 1027. Person boarding car—Winchell v. St. Paul City Ry. Co., 86 Minn. 445. Jerking of freight train—Southern R. Co. v. Vandergriff, 108 Tenn. 14. Evidence held insufficient to show mismanagement of a freight train by which plaintiff riding in charge of stock was thrown out of a bunk—Frohriep v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 91 N. W. 748. To show negligence in the operation of a mixed train—Symonds v. Minneapolis & St. L. Ry. Co. (Minn.) 92 N. W. 409. To overcome prima facie case of negligence resulting from a train breaking in two—Larkin v. Chicago & G. W. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 92 N. W. 891. To require submission to the jury of the question as to whether a motorman on a car which struck a passenger after alighting, sounded his gong—Hornstein v. United Rys. Co. (Mo. App.) 70 S. W. 1105. Missiles thrown by strikers—Fewings v. Mendenhall (Minn.) 93 N. W. 127. Damages sustained in the ensuing panic after explosion of controller—Dunlay v. United Traction Co., 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 206. Evidence held sufficient to support defendant's theory that an assault by its conductor was provoked by plaintiff after he had jumped from the car while in motion and during the course of a conversation with the conductor, who had alighted to make inquiries—James v. Metopolitan St. Ry. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 364. Negligent construction of car window—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Phillips (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 107. To establish knowledge of plaintiff's employee of use of profane language by a fellow passenger, and that plaintiff was suffering from the overheated condition of a car, it is sufficient to show that the conductor had taken up tickets in the car and that other employees swept it out after plaintiff was a passenger—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Kingston (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 518. To show that a derailment was caused by defects in the flange of a wheel—Johnson v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 173. Street car jumping track—Hollahan v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 164. Evidence that plaintiff's foot caught and that he fell when he pulled to get it loose as he was getting off a car, does not establish negligence of the carrier—Howell v. Union Traction Co., 202 Pa. 338. Verdict for plaintiff not sustained on evidence that an accident resulted from the effects of an eddy and a stiff wind which, while possible of being overcome by the use of greater speed, use of such speed was prevented by due care of passengers—Louisville & E. Mail Co. v. Gilliland, 24 Ky. L. R. 2081, 72 S. W. 1101. Evidence held insufficient to show that a car was not stopped at a safe place or that the conductor was negligent in failing to warn a person of an excavation with which the street car company was in no way connected—MacKenzie v. Union Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 748. A mere map designating the railroad company by name is not sufficient to show ownership of a street railway at the Confusing and misleading instructions.—Decisions as to the definiteness and singleness of issues presented by instructions are grouped in the footnotes.[73]

Instructions as to burden of proof.[74]—Instructions should be so framed as to indicate the burden of proof without expressly referring to it.[75] An instruction denying the weight of the accident itself as an evidentiary fact proving negligence is not error, where plaintiff's theory as to the cause of the accident has been overthrown by sufficient evidence.[76]

Instructions invading province of jury.—The existence of negligence or of disputed facts should not be assumed.[77] scene of the accident—Citizen's St. R. Co. v. Stockdell, 159 Ind. 25.

Starting or jerking while passenger is alighting. Toler v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. (Miss.) 31 So. 788; Baldwin v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 128 Mich. 417; Steinle v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 69 App. Div. (N. Y.) 85; Ludeman v. Third Ave. R. Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 26; Muller v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 221; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Harris (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 335; Bartle v. Houghton County St. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 620; Doolittle v. Southern Ry., 62 S. C. 130. Rapid rounding of a curve, while plaintiff was standing preparing to alight—Whitaker v. Staten Island Midland R. Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 468. Starting of car by negligence of defendant's employees, where it is contended that a starting signal was given by some one on the rear platform—O'Neil v. Lynn & B. R. Co., 180 Mass. 576.

Negligence with regard to tracks or premises. Ice on street car steps—Herbert v. St. Paul City Ry. Co., 85 Minn. 341; Richmond Ry. & Elec. Co. v. West, 4 Va. Sup. Ct. 112, 40 S. E. 643; Foster v. Old Colony St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 378. Injury from being thrown under a car at a station by a crowd, the car having entered the station at a dangerous rate of speed and there being no one to control or direct the movements of the crowd—Muhlhause v. Monongahela St. Ry. Co., 201 Pa. 237. Passenger's arm struck by defective mail crane—Baltimore & O. S. W. Ry. Co. v. Sims, 28 Ind. App. 544. Evidence held insufficient to show that a derailment was due to negligence in the construction of a track, as against a theory that a rail had been intentionally removed—Whipple v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. (Mich.) 90 N. W. 287. Platform not sufficiently lighted—Duell v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 115 Wis. 516. Unlighted platform—Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. McShan (Miss.) 33 So. 223. Failure to keep station grounds lighted and safe—Davis v. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 733; Duell v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 115 Wis. 516. Express invitation by agent to pass over dangerous grounds—Davis v. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 733. Ninety-one year old plaintiff got off on the wrong side of the train, being told by the conductor that it was safe, and when after the train left, while walking along, what he supposed was the platform, in the dark, fell off and was injured, held sufficient against motion for nonsuit—Owen v. Washington & C. R. R. Co., 29 Wash. 207, 69 Pac. 757. To show that a cold contracted by an infant plaintiff was due to the negligence of the carrier in failing to heat its cars—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Duck (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 445.

Contributory negligence. Berry v. Utica Belt Line St. R. Co., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 490. Attempting to alight from a street car—Cincinnati, H. & I. R. Co. v. Worthington (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 557. Sudden starting of train—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Taylor, 24 Ky. L. R. 1169, 70 S. W. 825. Standing on the platform preparing to alight—Baltimore Consol. Ry. Co. v. Foreman, 94 Md. 226. Standing on platform—Farnon v. Boston & A. R. Co., 180 Mass. 212. Care with regard to slippery steps—Foster v. Old Colony St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 378. Passing around the rear of a street car, after alighting, on the track of a car moving in the opposite direction—Harten v. Brightwood Ry. Co., 18 App. D. C. 260; Hornstein v. United Rys. Co. (Mo. App.) 70 S. W. 1105. Fall from running board after sudden jerk of car—Sheeron v. Coney Island & B. R. Co., 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 476. Leap from the street car to avoid a collision with a railroad train—Robson v. Nassau Elec. R. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 301. Alighting from moving train or car—Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey (Neb.) 93 N. W. 526; Johnson v. Atlantic & N. C. R., 130 N. C. 488; Bruce v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 68 App. Div. (N. Y.) 242; United Rys. & Elec. Co. v. Beidelman, 95 Md. 480.

73. Definiteness. Injury to person in charge of stock—Bolton v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 72 S. W. 530. Use of word "station" concerning a street railway not erroneous—Maxey v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 95 Mo. App. 303. Permission to consider lack of the statutory number of brakemen does not allow recovery on mere ground of violation of the statute—Comerford v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 181 Mass. 528.

Double issues. Insufficiency of time to board and starting with a sudden jerk may be submitted together.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Gray (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 316. Not confusing as submitting together failure to stop and making of a sudden start.—Indianapolis St. Ry. Co. v. Hockett (Ind.) 66 N. E. 39.

74. Instructions held to properly state the rule as to burden of proof—Freeman v. Collins Park & B. Ry. Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 410. An instruction that if it is found that plaintiff was injured and suffered pain and that such injury was caused by the carelessness of defendant he might recover does not place the burden of proving defendant's negligence on plaintiff—Whittlesey v. Burlington, C. R. & N. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 90 N. W. 516.

75. Form of instructions suggested—Davis v. Paducah Ry. & Light Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 135, 68 S. W. 140.

76. Johnson v. Galveston, H. & N. Ry. Co., 27 Tex. Civ. App. 616.

77. Assuming negligence in going to sleep and jumping from moving train in the dark—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 653. In opening and shutting

Instructions emphasizing or omitting particular facts.—Facts to be established by plaintiff may be grouped in an instruction, if in such a manner as not to confuse the jury or pass an opinion on the evidence.[78]

Conformity of instructions with evidence.—Instructions not justified by the evidence should not be given.[79]

Conformity of instructions with issues.—Where there are several distinct charges of negligence, instructions should not limit plaintiff's right to recover to one only.[80] Where there is no evidence to support a count, recovery on such count should be excluded by an instruction.[81] The fact that evidence on a question not in issue was received without objection does not authorize an instruction on such question.[82] Instructions should be so worded as to preclude recovery for want of care not contributing to the accident,[83] and should not be so worded as to permit a recovery if defendant was negligent in one respect and plaintiff was injured from another cause.[84] Decisions as to the relevancy of instructions to the issues are collected in the notes.[85]

Instructions as to the extent of the carrier's liability where the decisions appear to be based on the form of the instruction, rather than the substance, are grouped below. The substantive law regarding liability has been treated in a preceding section.[86] car door—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Ball (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 879. Error to assume that car was not in sole charge of plaintiff's employer—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Carter (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 73. Error to withdraw credibility of defendant's witness and contributory negligence—Kellegher v. Forty-Second St., M. & St. N. Ave. R. Co., 171 N. Y. 309. Not erroneous as assuming that a train was being made up (Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Adams [Tex. Civ. App.] 72 S. W. 81); as assuming that injury was disputed—Whittlesey v. Burlington, C. R. & N. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 90 N. W. 516.

78. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Byers (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 558. Instruction held not objectionable as singling out particular facts in an action for injury by a collision—Fleming v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 89 Mo. App. 129. Omitting to mention spreading rails or loose spikes is not error—Johnson v. Galveston, H. & N. Ry. Co., 27 Tex. Civ. App. 616.

79. Evidence held insufficient to warrant instructions on failure of signal by plaintiff to stop and invitation by defendant to board (South Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Dufresne, 200 Ill. 456); on theory of unavoidable accident; on theory of misunderstanding not negligence (Hennessy v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co. [Mo.] 73 S. W. 162); on punitive damages for improper language and mental suffering (St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Wilson, 70 Ark. 136); on lack of knowledge of plaintiff's presence on a stock car (Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Carter [Tex. Civ. App.] 71 S. W. 73); on theory that language should be such as to humiliate person of peculiar temperament (Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Tarkington, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 353); on effect of guard rail as adding to safety (Whitaker v. Staten Island Midland R. Co., 65 App. Div. [N. Y.] 451); that plaintiff was thrown forward from his seat (Chitty v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 166 Mo. 435); on duty to prevent insults by station agents (St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Wilson, 70 Ark. 136); on scope of authority of porter of chair car (Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Kingston [Tex. Civ. App.] 68 S. W. 518); that neglect to make rules and regulations for protection of passengers is negligence—Merrill v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 401.

80. Where negligence is alleged in careless management of a car, in starting while plaintiff was getting on, and in jerking the car, an instruction that "If you believe from the evidence that by the starting of the car plaintiff was jerked, slung, or thrown one way, and by the stopping of the car plaintiff was not jerked, slung or thrown the other way, your verdict must be for defendant," is erroneous—Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Ellard, 135 Ala. 433.

81. Birmingham Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Brannon, 132 Ala. 431.

82. Where negligence alleged was in the starting of a car before plaintiff had time to alight, the jury should not be instructed on the duty of defendant to assist plaintiff off—Indiana Ry. Co. v. Maurer (Ind.) 66 N. E. 156.

83. Suse v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 24.

84. Where negligence in moving a car and in having an improperly constructed platform are submitted together—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Hay (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 171.

85. Assumption of risk by passenger after alighting (Indianapolis St. Ry. Co. v. Whitaker [Ind.] 66 N. E. 433); on care in running and management of train (Western Md. R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 637); on duty to carry passenger to destination (West Chicago St. R. Co. v. Lieserowitz, 197 Ill. 607); on similar duties of railroad company in action against street railroad (Gilmore v. Seattle & R. R. Co., 29 Wash. 150, 69 Pac. 743); on jerking before stopping—Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. v. Hudson (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 449.

86. See ante, § 26 A et seq. Instructions as to negligence need not be carefully drawn where the carrier's negligence is gross—Central Tex. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 537. Instructions held not erroneous. To the effect that the carrier owes a passenger the greatest care to save him from Instructions as to contributory negligence.—Instructions as to contributory negligence should be given where asked and required by the evidence.[87] Where the evidence is contradictory and no motion to instruct the jury was presented at the close of plaintiff's evidence, the jury need not be instructed after all the evidence is in that defendant may avail itself of contributorily negligent acts of plaintiff, whether established by the evidence of plaintiff or defendant, if the jury are instructed to say from the whole evidence whether there was contributory negligence.[88] The defendant has a right to instructions as to negligence of plaintiff in attempting to board a train while in motion.[89] Miscellaneous holdings as to instructions on contributory negligence are grouped in the notes.[90]

Instructions cured by other instructions.—Instructions improper as ignoring particular issues or failing to state the relative liabilities of the parties with sufficient particularity may sometimes be cured by the construction of instructions as a whole. For examples, see the footnotes.[91] harm, and that whether the carrier has exercised the degree of care depends on circumstances and on the jury's conception of what was the highest degree of care—Carroll v. Charleston & S. R. Co., 65 S. C. 378. Not erroneous as making carrier an insurer (Clukey v. Seattle Elec. Co., 27 Wash. 70, 67 Pac. 379); as requiring too great care to avoid collision (Memphis St. R. Co. v. Norris, 108 Tenn. 632); as demanding the highest degree of care consistent with the undertaking (Galligan v. Old Colony St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 211); as not considering the practicable prosecution of business (Larkin v. Chicago & G. W. Ry. Co. [Iowa] 92 N. W. 891); as not stating care required of pregnant woman (St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Ferguson, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 460); as limiting necessity of notice of intention to alight to porter only (Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Funderburk [Tex. Civ. App.] 68 S. W. 1006); as imposing absolute liability for boisterous language of station agent (St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Wilson, 70 Ark. 136); not restricting liability for defects in cars of other company and eliminating contributory negligence (Western Md. R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 637); as to taking care in extent of stop (St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Harrison [Tex. Civ. App.] 73 S. W. 38); as rendering carrier liable for concurrent negligence (Southern Ry. Co. v. Roebuck, 132 Ala. 412); as withdrawing question of defendant's negligence (Louisville & M. R. Co. v. Steenberger, 24 Ky. L. R. 761, 69 S. W. 1094); as requiring highest degree of care under the circumstances—Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Murphy, 198 Ill. 462.

Instructions held erroneous as not submitting defendant's negligence (Foley v. Brunswick Traction Co., 66 N. J. Law, 637); as requiring only ordinary care in starting (St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Harrison [Tex. Civ. App.] 73 S. W. 38); as imposing too great a duty to keep ticket offices open (Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Mills, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 245); as assuming duty to anticipate collision with a truck—Suse v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 24.

87. So it is improper to refuse an instruction that if plaintiff acted contrary to the way an ordinarily prudent person would have acted and his conduct contributed to the injury, he could not recover—Selma St. & Suburban Ry. Co. v. Owen, 132 Ala. 420. In an action based on the ground that plaintiff became ill through failure to heat a station, an instruction that plaintiff could not recover if she remained out of doors after a fire was built in the depot, and that such act which would not have been done by a person of ordinary care caused her sickness, should have been given—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Patterson (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 987. As where evidence conflicts as to whether plaintiff was warned that it was dangerous to remain on the platform or whether he was there at the invitation of the conductor—St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Ball (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 879.

88. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hoover, 3 Ind. T. 693.

89. Brown v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 755.

90. Proper to require plaintiff's acts to be voluntary (Gorman v. St. Louis Transit Co., 96 Mo. App. 602); to instruct that there can be no recovery for concurrent negligence—Hornstein v. United Rys. Co. (Mo. App.) 70 S. W. 1105. Improper to instruct that plaintiff must act with reasonable care and judgment for her own safety especially if the car was unusually overcrowded (Davis v. Paducah Ry. & Light Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 135, 68 S. W. 140); to instruct that it is not negligence of itself to stand on a car platform but that the jury must determine negligence from all the circumstances (St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Ball [Tex. Civ. App.] 66 S. W. 879); not to submit the question of whether the act would have been done by a prudent man—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Hay (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 171. An instruction that the jury should find for the defendant if the accident was not caused by defendant's negligence, impliedly excludes contributory negligence—Maxey v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 95 Mo. App. 303. Instruction held not to deprive defendant of the benefit of the defense of negligence arising out of plaintiff's evidence—Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Buie (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 853. An instruction concerning a dangerous position assumed by plaintiff must require that such position contributed to the injury—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Carter (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 73.

91. Error cured. Ignoring partial cause of accident or excusing negligence (Johnson v. Galveston, H. & N. Ry. Co., 27 Tex. Civ. App. 616); allowing passenger to hold to car rail after getting off—Gilmore v. Seattle & R. R.

Questions for jury.—A conflict of evidence as to facts showing negligence is for the jury.[92] Matters of common knowledge should not be submitted to the jury.[93]

Verdict and findings.—A finding that plaintiff was not injured by defendant's negligence, but by her own, precludes a recovery even on the theory that plaintiff was a passenger.[94] A finding that a passenger had so far lost his bodily powers as to be incapable of the exercise of care when he was received as a passenger can be reviewed on appeal.[95] Where it is found that there was negligence in not giving a passenger reasonable time to board a train, and in starting the train with an unusual jerk, a finding for plaintiff is conclusive against contributory negligence.[96]

Part 5. Carriage of baggage and passenger's effects. § 27. Rights, duties, and liabilities.—A transfer company accepting a passenger and his baggage becomes liable for the baggage without regard to the existence of a custom to transfer baggage.[97] In the absence of contract, the carrier's liability for baggage extends only to articles carried by the passenger for his personal use and convenience, and the carrier is not made liable as such for merchandise in a trunk by the fact that excess charges are paid thereon.[98] Knowledge of the contents of baggage may be inferred from a long custom to accept it with knowledge of the owner's occupation.[99]

§ 28. Care of baggage and effects.—A sleeping-car company is liable for passengers' effects only where it has been negligent or they have been stolen by its

Co., 29 Wash. 150, 69 Pac. 743. Failure to limit negligence to proximate cause of injury—Indianapolis St. Ry. Co. v. Hockett (Ind.) 66 N. E. 39. Failure to instruct as to burden—West Chicago St. R. Co. v. Lieserowitz, 197 Ill. 607. Failure to instruct that it is not negligence to allow a passenger to ride on a foot-board (Anderson v. City Ry. Co., 42 Or. 505, 71 Pac. 659); making a recovery depend on position of plaintiff (Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hoover, 3 Ind. T. 693); failure to submit question of plaintiff's being a trespasser in an action for assault (Murphy v. St. Louis Transit Co., 96 Mo. App. 272); failure to submit question of whether plaintiff voluntarily alighted—Southern Ry. Co. v. Coursey, 115 Ga. 602. An instruction which requires it to be found that defendant's servants or employes were not at fault before a verdict for defendant can be rendered, though there was contributory negligence, is not cured by the giving of a correct charge on request which does not refer to the erroneous one—International & G. N. R. Co. v. Anchonda (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 743. Where instructions are given as to the duty of elevated railroads not to start until the gates have been firmly closed, until passengers on the platforms have actually boarded the cars, and that the plaintiff has the right to assume that a train which she started to board would not be prematurely started, an instruction for defendant should be given that defendant had a right to close its gates and start its train when all the persons who desired to stop at the station had left the train, and all those had entered who in a manner apparent to the crowds were actually evincing a desire to board it—Brown v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 755. A charge that if plaintiff negligently failed to hear a station announced and under the impression that she had reached her detination attempted to alight without knowledge of defendant's employes after the train had been held a reasonable time, and the train was started without any jerk when started, then the finding should be for defendant, does not cover a request for an instruction that plaintiff could not recover if the station was distinctly called in her presence and hearing just before the train arrived, and she negligently failed to hear the same, and the train was held a reasonable time for passengers to alight, and she attempted to alight without the knowledge of defendant's employes and was injured in such attempt—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Mathes (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 411.

92. The case cannot be dismissed at defendant's motion—Parlier v. Southern Ry. Co., 129 N. C. 262.

93. Knowledge of a passenger on a freight train as to liability of jerks and jars is not for the jury—Southern Ry. Co. v. Crowder, 135 Ala. 417.

94. Weeks v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 198 Ill. 551.

95. Wheeler v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 70 N. H. 607, 54 L. R. A. 955.

96. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Gray (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 316.

97. City Transfer Co. v. Draper, 115 Ga. 954.

98. Ky. St. § 783—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Matthews, 24 Ky. L. R. 1766, 72 S. W. 302.

99. Merchandise had been carried by plaintiff over defendant's route for six years in trunks different from the usual ones and there was evidence that a baggageman had stated that the trunks contained ladies' dresses, though they were received as baggage—Amory v. Wabash R. Co. (Mich.) 90 N. W. 22.

servants.[1] Its liability is that of a bailee for hire and not of an insurer. It is liable for theft by its servants to a limited extent, and is bound to maintain a reasonable watch during the night to protect passengers' personal belongings.[2] Its employes may be negligent in failing to keep windows closed at stations so as to prevent theft.[3] Where a passenger is allowed to occupy a bed in the smoking compartment of a sleeper, the duties of the company toward him are the same as if he were in a regular berth, and he does not assume any greater risks as to his personal belongings. His articles of wearing apparel, etc., are in the mixed custody of the passenger and the company, and the fact that he retires with the window open to his knowledge does not render him negligent unless it was left open at his request, and even in such case he may recover unless his property is stolen from the outside through the window by a stranger.[4] The liability of a carrier for baggage is that of an insurer as to articles necessary for the passenger's comfort, but for additional articles it is but a bailee and is not compelled to carry them unless paid an additional compensation.[5] The carrier is not liable for the theft of money, by one of its employes, which has been placed on a car window sill and temporarily forgotten. It is not liable for such as a bailee, and such money, if not for traveling expenses, is not baggage.[6] Heavy rain, as an act of God, will not excuse damage to baggage unless injury could not have been prevented by any reasonable care.[7] The carrier's liability is as warehouseman for baggage left unclaimed in its station.[8] Where trunks are forwarded in the usual manner and are destroyed while being detained in a custom house, a steamship company which was the initial carrier is not liable.[9] The last of connecting carriers is not liable for baggage lost, unless it is shown that the baggage has come in its possession, or that there was a joint contract or partnership, or a ratification of a contract of preceding carriers, and proof that it employed tracers for lost baggage does not show that it is a party to the original contract, nor is a ticket bought from an initial carrier over several lines, which is signed by the last line named, sufficient to render such line liable for baggage lost, without showing that it came into its possession.[10] The fact that the agent of the initial carrier is also agent of a connecting carrier does not render it liable for injuries occasioned by connecting carriers, if the contract limit its liability to its own line.[11]

§ 29. Limitation of liability for baggage.—The fact that a ticket provides that a contract of carriage shall be governed by the English law does not render valid an exemption from liability for negligence with regard to baggage contrary to the public policy of the United States.[12] The company may limit its liability

1. Pullman Sleeping Car Co. v. Hatch (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 771.

2. Liability is for the necessary baggage or money of the passenger, regard being had to the character, duration and purposes of the journey though the passenger was negligent—Morrow v. Pullman Palace Car Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 281.

3. Evidence held sufficient for such purpose—Pullman Palace Car. Co. v. Arents (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 329.

4. Morrow v. Pullman Palace Car Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 281.

5. Passenger cannot recover for an embroidered table center piece or a dress belonging to her mother, lost from her personal baggage—Bullard v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 583.

6. Levins v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (Mass.) 66 N. E. 803.

7. J. Harzburg & Co. v. Southern Ry. Co., 65 S. C. 539; Henry Sonneborn & Co. v. Southern Ry., 65 S. C. 502.

8. Where baggage arriving at nine A. M. is not called for and is stolen from the baggage-room during the night, the carrier's liability is that of a warehouseman—St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Terrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 430.

9. The steamship agent gave a receipt of the trunks "for transfer by slow freight" to an interior town—Parker v. North German Lloyd S. S. Co., 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 16.

10. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Berry (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 326.

11. Askew v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 846.

12. Limitation of a carrier's liability for a passenger's baggage to $50 on a first cabin passage across the Atlantic in a first class steamship is unreasonable; especially where not called to the attention of a passenger for baggage by regulations, of which the passenger has notice, which are reasonable and consistent with statute or public duty, and such limitation may be by notice printed on an excursion ticket.[13] Unless negligence is alleged, the validity of a stipulation relieving the company from liability for negligence cannot be questioned.[14]

§ 30. Damages.—There can be no recovery for deprivation of the use of articles or for inconvenience and mental distress; the measure of damages is the actual value of the articles destroyed.[15]

§ 31. Remedies and procedure for injury to, or loss of, baggage.—One liable to the owner of goods which he checks as baggage may be regarded as their owner in an action for damage.[16]

The petition must state an itemized list of baggage destroyed with the value of each article and the extent of damage thereto.[17] Where a plea is in confession and avoidance, it is defective if it merely admit hypothetically.[18] If a demurrer to an answer setting up a limitation of liability is sustained, recovery on the evidence need not be restricted to the amount limited.[19]

The presumption of negligence arising from a derailment is not rebutted by the fact that the derailment was caused by a slide of dirt and rocks.[20] The passenger must prove a delivery of the baggage to the carrier.[21]

The right of a carrier to limit its liability for baggage is a question for the court, though the reasonableness of its limitation is for the jury,[22] as is the question of negligence.[23] Holdings are grouped below as to admissibility of evidence,[24] sufficiency of evidence,[25] and instructions.[26]

CASE, ACTION ON.

Case is the proper remedy in Rhode Island for recovery of a tax under a stat-and loss results from a theft or conversion by the carrier's servants—The New England, 110 Fed. 415.

13. Jacobs v. Central R. Co., 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 13.

14. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Seale (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 437.

15. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Seale (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 437.

16. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Matthews, 24 Ky. L. R. 1766, 72 S. W. 302.

17. Insufficient to state "The articles destroyed consisted of three dresses worth $300, that the articles injured consisted of shirt waists, collars, cuffs and ladies' undergarments"—Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Seale (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 437.

18. Plea in action for loss of passenger's baggage stating that if the baggage was received it was on an express limitation of liability that the law of New Jersey governed the contract if any, and that by such law defendant's liability was limited—Saleeby v. Central R., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 269.

19. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Seale (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 437.

20. Thomas v. Southern R. Co., 131 N. C. 590.

21. Evidence held insufficient to show delivery of baggage to carrier—Lustig v. International Nav. Co., 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 802.

22. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Seale (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 437.

23. The negligence of the sleeping car company and contributory negligence of the passenger as well as the sufficiency of evidence to show theft by an employe may be questions for the jury—Morrow v. Pullman Palace Car Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 281.

24. On an issue of wilful negligence, special damage may be shown where trunks are put off during a severe rain without protection—Henry Sonneborn & Co. v. Southern Ry., 65 S. C. 502.

25. Evidence that a trunk which had been delivered by a passenger to a steamship company contained her wearing apparel and was returned to her empty sometime after the termination of the voyage is sufficient, if there is no other evidence, to justify a finding that it was opened and rifled by the company's servants—The New England, 110 Fed. 415. Where a carrier refuses to transfer a box as baggage and demanded the return of a check given for it, which was done on the agent agreeing to forward the box by freight, conflicting evidence tending to show that the box was negligently treated and damaged will justify a recovery—Southern Ry. Co. v. Wood. 114 Ga. 159. Evidence held insufficient to show taking of property by sleeping car porter, rendering the company liable—Pullman Sleeping Car Co. v. Hatch (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 771. Proof that when the passenger received baggage from the transfer company to which the carrier delivered it as his agent, certain articles were missing will not render the carrier liable—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Schafermeyer (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 1037.

26. A charge that the giving of a check for a trunk imposing the burden of care in transporting and delivering it is not a charge on the facts—J. Harzburg & Co. v. Southern Ry. Co., 65 S. C. 539.

ute,[27] and case, not trespass, is the proper remedy for injuries resulting from wrongful acts of agents or servants without authority of the principal, but for which he is responsible.[28] In case for purchase of lumber by defendant with notice of a timber owner's lien, plaintiff has the burden of showing that defendant had notice of the lien as alleged.[29]

CAUSES OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.

This article deals only with abstract and fundamental principles. To collect all applications of them would be an impossible as well as useless labor. Specific articles as well as the general practice titles, herein referred to, must be consulted. Some right in the plaintiff is essential,[30] whence the court refuses to decide moot questions.[31] Some right and not a mere declaration of rights must be the object.[32] A mere anticipation of injury is not actionable.[33] Whether a cause of action is one arising out of contract or by a tort becomes material in applying certain remedies.[34] The existence of a claim implies a right of action.[35] The question most often arises as one of pleading, where it is objected that there is a misjoinder or a splitting of causes. Such cases will be found in "Pleading." In like manner questions of joinder and splitting are also referable to the title "Pleading." Joinder of parties will be treated under "Parties," and the consolidation or severance of actions under the article on "Trial." A single act may be several torts.[36] Separate obligations under one contract may each support an action.[37]

Defenses.—Impropriety of a plaintiff's motives is not a defense.[38] An offer in the nature of a disclaimer must be without reserve or condition.[39] The omission of an attorney to pay an occupation tax is not a defense against his client's action.[40] That plaintiff may have so acted as to afford a defense to action against a third person is no defense.[41] The existence of an equitable remedy is not generally a defense to an action at law,[42] but the converse is true.[43] Violation of the terms of a policy sued on is defense, but not matter of abatement.[44] An answer setting up a divorce

27. Franklin v. Warwick & C. Water Co. (R. I.) 52 Atl. 988.

28. Assault on a customer in a store by servants of proprietor—Mossessian v. Callender (R. I.) 52 Atl. 806.

29. Thornton v. Dwight Mfg. Co. (Ala.) 34 So. 187.

30. Adversary's wrong is not enough—Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber (Neb.) 93 N. W. 1024.

31. State v. Lambert, 52 W. Va. 248; State v. Savage (Neb.) 91 N. W. 557; State v. Broatch (Neb.) 94 N. W. 1016. Whether office is held by election or appointment held moot—Johnson v. Smith, 24 Ky. L. R. 883, 70 S. W. 192.

Moot questions give no right to appeal or review. See Appeal.

32. Southern Ry. Co. v. State (Ga.) 42 S. E. 508. Rights of members of insurance company—In re Hurst Home Ins. Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 940, 64 S. W. 512.

33. Priewe v. Fitzsimons (Wis.) 94 N. W. 317.

34. For example Assumpsit or Trover which see. Also to determine whether attachment will issue as on a "claim arising out of contract." See Attachment.

35. Ayres v. Thurston County, 63 Neb. 96.

36. Injury to person and property by same act—Eagan v. New York Transp. Co., 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 111. Distinct injuries to husband and wife—Stewart v. Alvis (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 937. A survivable tort to the person cannot be joined with a cause of action for death by wrongful act—Thomas v. Star & C. Milling Co., 104 Ill. App. 110.

37. Instalments under one contract—Colwell v. Fulton, 117 Fed. 931. Suing for the balance after settlement by mistake does not split the cause though an assignee sues—Goodson v. National Acc. Ass'n, 91 Mo. App. 339.

38. Suit by a stock holder to enjoin issue of bonds—Hodge v. United States Steel Corp. (N. J. Eq.) 53 Atl. 553.

39. Offer to surrender to trustee in bankruptcy provided other claims be waived—Frank v. Musliner, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 616.

40. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Carlock (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 931.

41. Roach v. Springer (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 933.

42. Garcelon v. Commercial Trav. Acc. Ass'n (Mass.) 67 N. E. 868.

43. See the title Equity citing Jones v. MacKenzie (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 390; Inglis v. Freeman (Ala.) 34 So. 394; Metz v. McAvoy Br'g Co., 98 Ill. App. 584, and many other cases.

The strictness of the rule is modified by the circumstances—Vannatta v. Lindley, 98 Ill. App. 327.

44. Refusal to be examined concerning a to an action against a husband for deserting his wife whom he had married to avoid prosecution is not in abatement.[45] A defense of prematurity may be waived by going to trial.[46] As against a denial, the court will not lightly infer from pleadings that parties have colluded to confer jurisdiction.[47]

CEMETERIES.[48]

Cemetery associations.—In Kansas, cemetery associations are public and not private corporations;[49] and lot owners may vote on all matters to the same extent as ordinary stockholders in other corporations.[50] The laws of Minnesota do not authorize the incorporation of cemetery associations for private speculation and profit.[51] The officers of the association therefore become trustees of the lot owners as to money derived from sales of lots, and the lot owners may sue to compel recognition of the trust relation and a restoration of misapplied funds to the treasury.[52] Grants of power to cemetery associations should be strictly construed.[53]

Public control of location of cemeteries.—The control of the location of cemeteries by the public is within the police power of the state.[54] On refusal of an application for location of a cemetery by the New Jersey local authorities, an appeal lies to the state board of health,[55] and interested persons have a right to be heard.[56] The state board on such proceeding is not required to examine witnesses, though their action is of a judicial nature,[57] and is not confined to sanitary considerations in determining the appeal.[58] On review of their action by the courts, there is a presumption that the decision was based on proper grounds which can only be overcome by the clearest proof.[59] Location near dwellings is not necessarily a nuisance,[60] but where so situated that life or health of persons, living in the vicinity will be endangered, the location may be enjoined,[61] and one specially injured or threatened with a special injury by the location may question the legality of steps taken to acquire the land.[62]

Acquisition of land for cemetery purposes and disposition thereof.—A cemetery company may take title to land for cemetery purposes by parol,[63] and the land so acquired may not be sold without the consent of the stockholders and persons who have interred dead therein on the faith of its perpetual use for burial purposes.[64]

fire loss—Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. v. Strain, 24 Ky. L. R. 958, 70 S. W. 274.

45. State v. Lannoy (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 1052.

A statutory legal remedy in a different but concurrent jurisdiction does not prevent resort to equity—Peck v. Ayers Tie Co. (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 273.

46. Lake v. Anderson, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 189.

47. Robinson v. Lee, 122 Fed. 1010.

48. See Estates of Decedents, for expense of monument as funeral expense. See, Taxes, for taxation of cemeteries.

49, 50. Davis v. Coventry, 65 Kan. 557, 70 Pac. 583.

51. Gen. St. 1894, §§ 2913-2929—Brown v. Maplewood Cemetery Ass'n, 85 Minn. 498.

52. A complaint alleging that the association has no capital stock, that the directors have appropriated to their own use moneys received by the sale of the lots and have refused to account for the same or return the money into the treasury of the association is sufficient—Brown v. Maplewood Cemetery Ass'n, 85 Minn. 498.

53. Palmer v. Hickory Grove Cemetery, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 973.

54. Laws of 1892, N. Y. p. 297, c. 73, governing the acquisition of lands by rural cemeteries, is a valid exercise of legislative power under a constitution giving the legislature a power to uphold general and special acts relative to corporations—Palmer v. Hickory Grove Cemetery, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 973.

55. P. L. 1885, p. 165, § 6—Dodd v. State Board of Health, 67 N. J. Law, 463.

56. Dodd v. State Board of Health, 67 N. J. Law, 463.

57. They may consider a committee report made on a previous hearing of the same matter—Dodd v. Francisco (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 219.

58, 59. Dodd v. Francisco (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 219.

60. Braasch v. Cemetery Ass'n (Neb.) 95 N. W. 646.

61. Braasch v. Cemetery Ass'n (Neb.) 95 N. W. 646.

62. Palmer v. Hickory Grove Cemetery, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 973.

63. Woodland Cemetery Co. v. Ellison, 23 Ky. L. R. 2222, 67 S. W. 14.

64. Directors selling a portion of a burial tract in good faith will not be held personally liable on setting aside the sale—Woodland Cemetery Co. v. Ellison, 23 Ky. L. R. 2222, 67 S. W. 14.

A deed to cemetery trustees, reciting a designation of trustees by town authorities with power to manage as they should deem best, gives the trustees power to sell small parcels from land so conveyed,[65] and after a long lapse of time, a presumption of proper performance of duties in this respect will be indulged.[66] A grant to a community for cemetery purposes, too indefinite to confer title, will not be allowed to fail for that reason, but equity will appoint trustees.[67] In Illinois, unincorporated towns may condemn lands for cemetery purposes.[68] That a notice of purpose to acquire land recited that it was done by order of the board of directors is not sufficient evidence that it was the act of the corporation, where rights of third persons are affected.[69] A purchase-money mortgage for cemetery lands given by a cemetery association may be foreclosed.[70]

Title to and rights in burial lots.—There is presumption of payment for a cemetery lot, where the record shows continuous ownership for thirty-seven years,[71] and trustees have no right to sell to another, unless the first purchaser has abandoned the lot by removal from the neighborhood or by other acts amounting to an abandonment.[72] One tenant in common of a lot may not appropriate a portion of a lot by the erection of a monument without consent of his co-tenants.[73] Purchasers of burial lots acquire merely a right to use the lot, subject to reasonable regulations of the cemetery association,[74] and it makes no difference that the lot was conveyed by warranty deed.[75]

Licenses for burial purposes.—In Pennsylvania, a cemetery association may grant an exclusive license to bury dead in particular lot.[76]

Grave fees.—The association may adopt regulations requiring purchasers to pay the fees for the opening and filling of graves to the superintendent, without regard to whether he does the work, where the fees are reasonable and uniform in all cases,[77] and the courts may not determine the amount to be paid.[78]

Removal of bodies.—The New York act, allowing removal of the body of the widow of the lot owner by consent of the heirs, is limited to lots set apart to particular families, and does not authorize removal of such body from an individual grave in an undivided portion of the cemetery, without the consent of the corporation.[79]

Improvements.—A cemetery company may forbid work on lots by individual lot owners and require all work in the care of graves to be performed under the direction of the superintendent at specified rates,[80] and a gardener employed by a lot owner having no contractual relations with the association, may not question the reasonableness of these regulations.[81] A bequest of a permanent fund to an individual trus-

65, 66. City of Tacoma v. Tacoma Cemetery, 28 Wash. 238, 68 Pac. 723.

67. It will not be declared a public cemetery under the control of selectmen and cemetery commissioners—Hunt v. Tolles (Vt.) 52 Atl. 1042.

68. Phillips v. Town of Scales Mound, 195 Ill. 353.

69. Palmer v. Hickory Grove Cemetery, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 973. Under an act empowering supervisors to authorize the acquisition of lands for cemetery purposes, requiring notice of the application to be published once a week for six weeks, in two newspapers having the largest circulation therein, no jurisdiction is conferred where the application was first published 38 days before the day set for hearing and was not published in newspapers having the largest circulation in the county—Id.

70. Ross v. Glenwood Cemetery Ass'n, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 357. Property not used for interments is not prevented from being sold on foreclosure by the statute denying the supreme court the right to order sale by the cemetery association of realty used for actual interments—Id.

71. McWhirter v. Newell, 200 Ill. 583.

72. Purchaser with knowledge will not be protected—McWhirter v. Newell, 200 Ill. 583. Abandonment is not shown by the fact that interments were made by a later purchaser where the owners on learning thereof insisted on removal and afterwards brought suit to compel removal of bodies—Id.

73. And other tenants may remove the monument without incurring liability (Rev. L. c. 78, §§ 26, 27)—Capen v. Leach, 182 Mass. 175.

74, 75. Roanoke Cemetery Co. v. Goodwin (Va.) 44 S. E. 769.

76. Congregation Shaarai Shomayim v. Moss, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 356.

77, 78. Roanoke Cemetery Co. v. Goodwin (Va.) 44 S. E. 769.

79. In re Cohen, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 401.

80, 81. Cedar Hill Cemetery Co. v. Lees, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 405.

tee for the improvement of a cemetery is not authorized by the California act, allowing formation of cemetery improvement corporations.[82]

Abandonment.—On abandonment of lands granted to the public for cemetery purposes, the title will revert to the original donors.[83] An ordinance prohibiting burials will not work an abandonment.[84]

Injuries to cemetery lands will be enjoined.[85]

CENSUS AND STATISTICS.

Census.—A federal census is not conclusive on the question of population,[86] and a city may take a census under a state law, within two months after the federal census, and this particularly where territory had been added in the meantime.[87] Where an ordinance providing for a census did not confine the enumerator to any particular territory, a recanvass of his work by another enumerator is not irregular.[88] An enumerator acts in his official capacity in correcting schedules after the expiration of the time for making the enumeration, and is liable under the federal statute for making a false return.[89]

Vital statistics.—In a prosecution for failure to report a case of consumption, the question whether consumption is to be classed with other dangerous diseases may not be submitted,[90] and it is not a defense that a physician may not disclose information acquired while attending a patient.[91]

CERTIORARI.

§ 1. Nature, occasion and propriety of the remedy.—Its office is very generally regulated by statute. The common-law remedy lies to reach jurisdictional errors,[92] or as a prerogative writ of appellate courts to supervise lower courts,[93] and only upon acts of a judicial nature,[94] which are final,[95] and which are not wholly void.[96]

82. In re Gay's Estate, 138 Cal. 552, 71 Pac. 707.

83, 84. Kansas City v. Scarritt, 169 Mo. 471.

85. Hunt v. Tolles (Vt.) 52 Atl. 1042.

86. State v. Davis (Neb.) 92 N. W. 740.

87. Census was taken to determine limit of debt according to population—Lancaster v. Owensboro, 24 Ky. L. R. 1978, 72 S. W. 731.

88. Lancaster v. Owensboro, 24 Ky. L. R. 1978, 72 S. W. 731.

89. 30 Stat. 1020, c. 419—Ching v. United States (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 538.

90, 91. People v. Shurly (Mich.) 91 N. W. 139.

92. People v. Warden, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 545, 109 N. Y. St. Rep. 1114. An act need not be grossly abusive of power—People v. Adam, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 604.

Errors affecting jurisdiction. Judgment by a justice which he could in no event render—Starry v. State, 115 Wis. 50. Embracing irrelevant papers in order for examination before trial and failing to limit time—State v. District Ct., 27 Mont. 441, 71 Pac. 602. Judgment after jurisdiction lost by adjournment—Vandervoort v. Fleming (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 225.

Not going to jurisdiction. Refusal of continuance—Bisque v. Herrington (Cal.) 72 Pac. 336. Rulings on trial and judgment of dismissal—State v. District Ct., 27 Mont. 280, 70 Pac. 981. Refusal to dismiss appeal—Eels v. Bailee (Iowa) 92 N. W. 668. Refusal to dismiss an appeal for want of justification of sureties—State v. District Ct., 27 Mont. 179, 70 Pac. 516. Refusal to remand cause improperly transferred—State v. Circuit Ct. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 16. Jurisdiction to appoint receiver pendente lite for cause not enumerated in statute sustained—Gibbs v. Morgan (Idaho) 72 Pac. 733. A decision on appeal held not an excess of jurisdiction as deciding points not in issue—People v. Court of Appeals (Colo.) 69 Pac. 606.

93. A ruling below on the sufficiency of the supersedeas bond may be so reviewed—Home Sav. & Tr. Co. v. District Ct. (Iowa) 95 N. W. 522. When the district court has jurisdiction, a writ of certiorari to the supreme court of New Jersey must now rest on the latter court's supervisory common law powers and not on the "District Court act" which allows certiorari only to question the jurisdiction [applied on question of costs]—

It will not issue when inadequate because of the necessity of affirmative relief,[97] or when the relator must in any event fail,[98] or where the writ will be futile.[99]

It should not be allowed in the first instance if another adequate remedy exists,[1] for instance, appeal or error.[2] But appeal is inadequate when the taking of it would waive the defect,[3] and failure to resort to appeal is excused by lack of knowledge of the judgment.[4] It may lie, though the error is capable of rectification in the proceeding brought up.[5]

C. B. Smith & Co. v. State (N. J. Law) 52 Atl. 308. It will so issue when an attempt is made to take property unlawfully by eminent domain and there is no appeal—Seattle & M. R. Co. v. Bellingham Bay & E. R. Co., 29 Wash. 491, 69 Pac. 1107; State v. Superior Ct., 30 Wash. 219, 232, 70 Pac. 484. A prerogative writ reviews only the jurisdiction and not the merits—State v. Smith (Mo.) 73 S. W. 211.

94. Gaster v. State (Wis.) 94 N. W. 787. A state auditor acts judicially in determining a controversy as to where property shall be taxed—State v. Dunn, 86 Minn. 301. Judicial act defined.—Id. Proceeding by city council of Brunswick to dismiss policeman is judicial —Gill v. Brunswick (Ga.) 44 S. E. 830. Acts of penitentiary commission in Arkansas are purely administrative—McConnell v. Arkansas Mfg. Co., 70 Ark. 568. Making a civil service classification is administrative—People v. Burt, 170 N. Y. 620. A determination of the public character of a use for which land is to be taken is judicial—Seattle & M. R. Co. v. Bellingham Bay & E. R. Co., 29 Wash. 491, 69 Pac. 1107. Act of city council in annexing territory is judicial—Moore v. City Council (Iowa) 93 N. W. 510.

Hence mandamus and certiorari are not concurrent—Flanders v. Roberts, 182 Mass. 524.

95. Unger v. Fanwood Tp. (N. J. Law) 55 Atl. 42. Order refusing to dismiss for want of jurisdiction not final—State v. Miller, 109 La. 704. Refusal to enter judgment against garnishee not final—Singer Mfg. Co. v. McNeal, etc., Co. (Ga.) 44 S. E. 801. Discharge on habeas corpus is final—Commonwealth v. Butler, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 626.

96. Levadas v. Beach, 117 Ga. 178. Fine was imposed ex parte by board of health—People v. Board of Health, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 571.

97. As where a cause was to be transferred back—State v. Circuit Ct. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 16.

98. His pleadings stated no case—Echols v. Crawford, 116 Ga. 771.

99. As to review taxes which are by statute not to be changed because current—City of Hoboken v. Jersey City (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 595.

1. The defense that property is not subject to taxation [Gen. St. 1894, § 1559] being applicable only to exempt property and not to that taxed in the wrong place, certiorari lies—State v. Dunn, 86 Minn. 301. No other remedy lies to review an order depleting an officer's salary while he is absent—State v. Lauder, 11 N. D. 136. Certiorari not available to review road proceedings when review by freeholders is allowed—Devine v. Olney (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 466.

Application to the original tribunal is dispensed with where futile because proceeding is wholly void—People v. Feitner, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 474.

2. Morse v. Baake (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 693. Lies where there is no appeal from justice—Loloff v. Heath (Colo.) 71 Pac. 1113. Appealable: Judgment for recovery of land in eminent domain is appealable and with it the order allowing the propriety of the condemnation. It is not necessary to wait for adjudication of damages—Tennessee Cent. R. Co. v. Campbell (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1012. Order for partial distribution—State v. District Ct., 26 Mont. 378, 68 Pac. 411. Judgment imposing fine for violation of ordinance, and overruling demurrer and objection to jurisdiction—State v. Lockhart, 28 Wash. 460, 68 Pac. 894. Judgment of a justice on verdict—Falconer v. Simmons, 51 W. Va. 172. Judgment for a material-man—Weldon v. Superior Ct., 138 Cal. 427, 71 Pac. 502. Refusal of district court to dismiss appeal from lower court—Eels v. Bailee (Iowa) 92 N. W. 668. Judgment in district court on appeal from mayor's court—State v. Miller, 109 La. 704. Injunctional order relating to possession of property—State v. Superior Ct., 30 Wash. 177, 70 Pac. 256. Refusal of justice to set aside default—State v. Laurendeau, 27 Mont. 522, 71 Pac. 754. Judgment rendered after an adverse decision of a jurisdictional fact—Kent v. Crenshaw (Iowa) 94 N. W. 1131. Order of highway commissioners laying road and justice's judgment assessing damages—Hagenbaumer v. Heckenkamp, 202 Ill. 621. Intermediate order reviewable on appeal with final order is not reviewable by certiorari—State v. District Ct. (Mont.) 72 Pac. 867. Not appealable: Question of public use in eminent domain—State v. Superior Ct., 30 Wash. 219, 232, 70 Pac. 484.

An order of distribution notwithstanding a pending appeal from annulment of another will is appealable by the executor who resisted it—State v. Superior Ct., 28 Wash. 677, 69 Pac. 375.

Appeal is not inadequate to review a receivership order merely because it would absorb "profits" of a business; but property must be hazarded to a loss or standing of parties jeopardized—State v. Superior Ct., 28 Wash. 584, 68 Pac. 1052.

Criminal Proceedings. Since 1884 certiorari is superseded by appeal (Code Cr. Proc. § 515) as a mode of reviewing conviction and sentence on a prosecution not by indictment —People v. Crane, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 639, 109 N. Y. St. Rep. 1111. Will not lie under N. Y. Code to review cause of imprisonment of one at large on bail—People v. Pool, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 148. Commitment for criminal contempt is not appealable, but certiorari lies—In re Teitelbaum, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 887. Certiorari as prerogative writ may lie after appeal is abandoned—State v. Pettigrew, 109 La. 132.

3. Cause was tried outside the jurisdiction—Swain v. Brady, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 459.

4. Justice's judgment made without notice,

Various proceedings which are not appealable are reviewable by certiorari.[6] It is a proper remedy in Michigan, if promptly pursued, to review the establishment of a school district.[7]

The matter ousting jurisdiction must be substantial.[8] It is sufficient that error and prejudice co-exist.[9] A verdict or judgment is not contrary to law and evidence if there is any evidence to support it,[10] or if it is conflicting.[11] It is sufficient that an attempt is made to take property for a use alleged to be private.[12]

Ancillary certiorari.—Sometimes the writ issues as ancillary to another proceeding.[13]

A prerogative writ from a court of last resort will not issue where a court of general jurisdiction,[14] or a lower court[15] affords a remedy, but it may concur with the power of a lower court to issue the writ.[16] A failure to follow decisions is not necessarily a conflict warranting it.[17] The power to issue prerogative writs "in aid" of appellate jurisdiction forbids such issue to a court whence appeal cannot come.[18] The lower court's discretion will not be disturbed unless it has been abused.[19]

§ 2. Right to certiorari; parties.—A litigable interest in relator or plaintiff is necessary,[20] for which purpose private or individual rights are distinct from a representative capacity.[21] The original record rather than a printed copy will determine who are proper petitioners.[22]

One who is in default below may lose the right,[23] as well as one who is tardy in seeking his remedy,[24] unless the proceeding is wholly unlawful.[25] time for appeal having elapsed—Elder v. Justice's Ct., 136 Cal. 364, 68 Pac. 1022.

5. Error improperly brought may be attacked by certiorari—Security Trust Co. v. Dent, 187 U. S. 237.

6. Condemnation proceedings for a ditch—Leyba v. Armijo (N. M.) 68 Pac. 939.

7. Huyser v. School Inspectors (Mich.) 91 N. W. 1020.

8. Not baseless claim of right under federal laws—State v. Bland, 168 Mo. 1.

9. Evidence necessarily harmful—Dougan v. Dunham, 115 Ga. 1012; Dye v. Napier (Ga.) 43 S. E. 860. Prejudice is presumed from wrong—State v. Sackett (Wis.) 94 N. W. 314.

10. Osborne v. Sims, 115 Ga. 97; Wall v. Macon, D. & S. R. Co., 115 Ga. 778; Southern Ry. Co. v. Fincher, 116 Ga. 966.

11. Clevenger v. Murray (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 469; Lambert Floral Co. v. Lambert, 117 Ga. 188.

12. One railroad for another's right of way—Seattle & M. R. Co. v. Bellingham Bay & E. R. Co., 29 Wash. 491, 69 Pac. 1107.

13. Mandamus and not certiorari is the remedy to bring up a record on appeal—Ex parte Grubbs, 80 Miss. 288. To bring up the record on appeal to affirm but not to reverse —Turman v. Whaley (Fla.) 32 So. 811. In aid of habeas corpus to fetch up the record—Gaster v. State (Wis.) 94 N. W. 787. To bring up a correction of record—Johnston v. Arrendale (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 44. Clerical errors cannot be corrected in appellate court—Smith v. Bunch (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 559.

14. State v. Wilson, 90 Mo. App. 154. The sole question affected an individual's rights under an illegal tax—Duluth El. Co. v. White, 11 N. D. 534.

15. Certiorari not allowed by supreme court until rehearing denied by court of appeals—Frellsen v. Ruddock Cypress Co., 108 La. 37.

16. Eminent domain proceedings not otherwise reviewable are open to certiorari despite the fact that inferior courts have constitutional power to issue the writ, the constitution in that respect being declaratory and not restrictive—Tennessee Cent. R. Co. v. Campbell (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1012.

17. The court below had not regarded it as a conflict requiring certification—State v. Smith (Mo.) 73 S. W. 211.

18. Police court case cannot go to court of appeals on an original certiorari—Sullivan v. Dist. of Columbia, 19 App. D. C. 210.

19. Home Sav. & Tr. Co. v. District Ct. (Iowa) 95 N. W. 522.

20. A military officer having a voting right may review an order for an election of officers—Smith v. Wanser (N. J. Law) 52 Atl. 309. Resident taxpayers may sue respecting annexation to municipality—Moore v. City Council (Iowa) 93 N. W. 510. No one not specially injured can assail a public ordinance—Unger v. Inhabitants of Fanwood Tp. (N. J. Law) 55 Atl. 42. Townships may sue to reverse a proceeding to apportion debts of a disorganized county among the several townships which composed it—Fitch v. Auditors (Mich.) 94 N. W. 952.

21. Administrator not privately interested in order to turn over property—State v. District Ct., 26 Mont. 369, 68 Pac. 856.

22. Real parties in interest are—Fitch v. Auditors (Mich.) 94 N. W. 952.

23. As where he absented himself and hence no objection was made to evidence before a medical board which revoked a license —Stevens v. Hill, 74 Vt. 164. Where he made no defense—West v. Parkinson (Mich.) 90 N. W. 27.

24. Huyser v. School Inspectors (Mich.) 91 N. W. 1020, citing many cases and distinguishing them. Year's delay—Coward v. Bayonne, 67 N. J. Law, 470. Two months' delay under statute requiring notice within 10

Several petitioners should not join unless one adjudication will determine their rights,[26] but one co-party can apply alone.[27] The attorney general should apply for a prerogative writ.[28] Officers who proceed improperly are the sole respondents,[29] but unnecessary parties if interested may be admitted to defend.[30]

§ 3. Procedure for writ; writ, service and return.—Application must be timely.[31] In New York, an attorney may verify the petition.[32] In Missouri, none is required.[33] Lack of jurisdiction is to be specifically averred.[34] There must be a showing that primary remedies are inadequate or not available,[35] as well as sufficient grounds for the writ.[36] Original papers should not be attached to it.[37] Application for a prerogative writ should show a want of remedy in lower courts.[38] Matters not of record may be answered to show that despite error no injustice has resulted.[39]

In New York, a reference of fact may be ordered in tax cases if the petition tenders an issue going to reduction or cancellation of the assessment.[40] A judge of the reviewing court should allow the writ.[41] Non-entry of allowance of the writ is not fatal.[42]

The statutory bond bearing the proper signature and approval is prerequisite to issuance of the writ,[43] but not in criminal cases.[44] The bond under the Georgia code can be made by an "agent" only when he is specially authorized.[45] The affidavit in forma pauperis must substantially fulfill the statute, or the writ is void.[46] days—Blumfield Tp. v. Brown (Mich.) 90 N. W. 284.

Unless excused (as by ignorance)—Elder v. Justice's Ct., 136 Cal. 364, 68 Pac. 1022. 18 months' delay after docketing case on error held too long—Ayres v. Polsdorfer, 187 U. S. 585. Party having knowledge of suit must attack it within time—Jacobs v. Brooke (Mich.) 92 N. W. 783. Six years' delay with knowledge—Budd v. Camden (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 569.

25. Eminent domain—Slocum v. Neptune Tp. (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 301.

26. Statute allows joinder to assail the "same" matter [L. 1896, c. 908, § 250]—People v. Feitner, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 130.

27. "Any party" may (Code, § 481)—Ex parte Bogatsky, 134 Ala. 384.

28. Duluth El. Co. v. White, 11 N. D. 534.

29. Adverse party to the cause should not be joined—Chamberlain v. Edmonds, 18 App. D. C. 332.

30. The city though interested is not necessary party to proceeding against tax board—In re Belmont, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 133.

31. On drain proceedings must be within 10 days—Blumfield Tp. v. Brown (Mich.) 90 N. W. 284. Finality from which time is reckoned begins when judgment is announced—Kyle v. Richardson (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 399. An order must be recorded before it becomes final and time for review begins to run—People v. Vandewater, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 60. See as to tardiness defeating right to certiorari, supra.

32. In re Belmont, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 133.

33. An illegal verification harmless because unnecessary—State v. Bennett (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 737.

34. Presumption favors it—Hegenbaumer v. Heckenkamp, 202 Ill. 621.

35. Frellsen v. Ruddock Cypress Co., 108 La. 37.

36. Weldon v. Ayers, 116 Ga. 181. Allegations that property is being taken for a use not public and without right held sufficient—Seattle & M. R. Co. v. Bellingham Bay & E. R. Co., 29 Wash. 491, 69 Pac. 1107. Error must be assigned—Clements v. McCormick H.-M. Co., 115 Ga. 851. Allegation that substantial rights are affected is mere conclusion and needless—Ferguson v. Byers, 40 Or. 468, 67 Pac. 1115, 69 Pac. 32. Allegations not sufficient to plead over valuation for taxation—People v. Feitner, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 463. Allegations should show want of knowledge of facts in order to negative acquiescense—Stevens v. Somerset County Com'rs, 97 Me. 121.

Prerogative writ will not issue to court of limited appeal unless some excess of jurisdiction appears—State v. Smith (Mo.) 73 S. W. 211.

37. Brannon v. Dunahoo (Ga.) 44 S. E. 991.

38. State v. Wilson, 90 Mo. App. 154.

39. Hence that writ should not issue—Ward v. Aldermen, 181 Mass. 432.

40. Whether conveyors of a public service company are on private land or in the street [for the purpose of applying the proper method of taxation] is a fact to be decided by reference; but the allegation that property should have been assessed below a given sum does not raise such an issue of fact as to overvaluation—People v. Feitner, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 463.

41. Comp. Laws, § 937, authorizing a court commissioner "of any county" does not mean "any other" county—Monroe v. Reynolds (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1065.

42. People v. Stillings, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 143.

43. The trial justice had mentally approved it but had not yet signed—Dykes v. Twiggs County, 115 Ga. 698. Approval allowed nunc pro tunc under Mo. statute—Gossett v. Devorss (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 731.

44. Colvard v. State (Ga.) 43 S. E. 855.

45. Alabama Midland Ry. Co. v. Stevens, 116 Ga. 790. And it cannot be ratified retroactively—Id. Chief clerk of local depot not

The writ should be directed to a municipality whose act is to be reviewed, and not to officers.[47] It must issue from a court and not from chambers.[48] It should be served on the clerk of a respondent body when its members have gone out of office.[49] It is not a summons which an officer must serve.[50] Serving a copy and filing the original when exact duplicates is unimportant.[51]

Notice of writ to parties in original cause and service.—Adverse litigants and persons who are required to appear should have notice.[52] Plaintiff must be diligent in procuring timely service.[53] A telegram properly delivered has been held a sufficient written notice to the adverse litigant.[54] A certificate of service should be dated, and if not served by an officer should be verified.[55]

The return should be signed by respondent,[56] and be sufficiently authenticated.[57] All proceedings, papers or matter in the cause must be returned,[58] and others may be in proper cases.[59] Records brought before the court on application for the writ may, if identified by the answer, be regarded as returned.[60] The return by a court of review may be the transcript from the court below.[61]

Objections and amendments.—Exceptions must be specific.[62] The relator should except to, or traverse a return which leaves it doubtful what, if anything, was done below,[63] else it will conclude him.[64] Unless the petitioner excepts to an irresponsive answer, the assignments in the petition cannot be heard.[65] If only law points be raised by a traverse, it is equivalent to a demurrer.[66] Motion to order certification of omitted material facts and not motion to quash the record is the proper remedy.[67] After the writ issues, the record is conclusive; hence, any agreed statement made on application for the writ cannot be avoided or discharged, except on application in the nature of a writ of review on grounds of mistake warranting vacation of the judgment.[68] Impeaching amendments cannot be made,[69] thus, when an "agent" competent to give bond for railroad party—Id.

46. Hill v. State, 115 Ga. 833.

47. To "township" not clerk and trustees —Young v. Crane, 67 N. J. Law, 453.

48. Const. Colo. art. 6, § 3, empowers supreme "court"—People v. District Ct. (Colo.) 69 Pac. 1066. [In this case prohibition was prayed for.]

49. Their order was on file with him—State v. Losby, 115 Wis. 57. Ex officers may be served alone if their return will be complete without that of the custodian of records or their successors (N. Y. Code Civ. Proc.)—People v. Stillings, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 569.

50. Service by private person sufficient—Gossett v. Devorss (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 731.

51. Monroe v. Reynolds (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1065.

52. Required by Georgia Code, § 4644—Sheppard v. Walker (Ga.) 44 S. E. 801. The solicitor-general, who is required to appear, must have notice on a writ to the city court from the superior court—Culbreth v. State, 115 Ga. 242.

53. Atlanta, K. & N. Ry. Co. v. Whitaker, 115 Ga. 644.

54. May be signed by relator or attorney —W. U. Tel. Co. v. Bailey, 115 Ga. 725.

55. Hardy v. Miller, 115 Ga. 107.

56. Not by counsel only—Warren v. Hart, 183 Mass. 119.

57. Certificate of evidence in inapt form and signed before writ issued held insufficient—Southern Ry. Co. v. Leggett, 117 Ga. 31.

58. Even an indictment originally presented to the reviewing court and by it transferred down—Georgia So. & F. Ry. Co. v. State, 116 Ga. 845. Tax assessors should return evidence on which they based an assessment—People v. Feitner, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 313. Justice's answer under Georgia practice includes evidence—Southern Ry. Co. v. Leggett, 117 Ga. 31.

59. Other assessments may be brought up to show inequality—State v. Sackett (Wis.) 94 N. W. 314.

Evidence must be set out by justice only in prosecution which is summary—N. J. Soc. for Prevention of Cruelty v. Mickeloit (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 559.

60. Warren v. Hart, 183 Mass. 119.

61. A transcript in error may be sent up on certiorari to the proceeding in error—Security Trust Co. v. Dent, 187 U. S. 237.

62. Exception for omission held sufficient—Daniels v. State (Ga.) 44 S. E. 818.

63. Tyner v. Leake (Ga.) 44 S. E. 812. If he does not the writ will be overruled—Buckner v. State, 115 Ga. 238. Answer must show a judgment—Garrett v. McIntosh, 116 Ga. 911.

64. Taylor v. Sandersville (Ga.) 44 S. E. 845; People v. Pool, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 148.

65. Stoner v. Magins, 116 Ga. 797.

66. A traverse to a magistrate's return that it showed no warrant held in effect a demurrer to the return—People v. Crane, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 639, 109 N. Y. St. Rep. 1111.

67. Tileston v. Street Com'rs, 182 Mass. 325.

68. Application was made to discharge agreed statement—Warren v. Hart, 183 Mass. 119.

the record is silent and the officers who made it are out of office, the return cannot be amended to show by their supplemental return that they considered evidence which would make the proceeding invalid.[70]

Effect of writ; stay.—In New York, a stay does not result, but may be allowed for sufficient reasons.[71] A recognizance for supersedeas must be before the proper officer.[72] A certiorari in aid does not bring up a cause where the principal proceeding is defective.[73]

Quashal or dismissal.—The court issuing a writ may hear a motion to quash,[74] or dismiss[75] before return. The court may dismiss if parties are remiss in not moving to correct a bad return.[76] In the note are collected grounds for dismissal.[77] While a renewal may be allowed, yet if it be dismissed as void, there is nothing to renew.[78]

§ 4. Hearing and questions which may be raised or settled.—The writ reaches only the judgment and not irregularities and mere errors.[79] Proper and timely objections should be made below,[80] though it has been held that exceptions are unnecessary.[81] Errors should be sufficiently assigned.[82] Extraneous matters,[83] even when pleaded as a reason why the writ should be refused will not, though traversed, be heard or determined on hearing.[84] The return is conclusive of facts found on the

69. Street commissioners cannot amend their record by declaring that an assessment was for a purpose other than that expressed —Warren v. Hart, 183 Mass. 119.

70. Applied where former police commissioners returned amendments to show that the record of an officer's prior conduct had been considered on the question of his guilt contrary to law—People v. York, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 432.

71. Code Civ. Proc. § 2131 does not enlarge rights to or grounds for a stay. Prejudice of relator's superior should not stay removal from office, nor should allegations of error; and when removal for cause was after hearing a stay until review is improper—People v. Sturgis, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 448.

72. If taken by a justice other than the one who rendered judgment is invalid and judgment cannot be entered on it—Wesley v. Sharpe, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 600.

73. Huguley Mfg. Co. v. Galeton Mills, 184 U. S. 290, 46 Law. Ed. 546.

74. State v. Fraker, 168 Mo. 445.

75. Motion to dismiss is in the nature of a demurrer—People v. Peck, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 89.

76. Failed to except to want of authentication—Southern Ry. Co. v. Leggett, 117 Ga. 31.

77. Tardy service because of which return was not made in time for return term—Atlanta, K. & N. Ry. Co. v. Whitaker, 115 Ga. 644. Irregularity in attaching original papers to petition not cause for dismissal—Brannon v. Dunahoo (Ga.) 44 S. E. 991. Want of sufficient answer and of motion to compel it—Fain v. Shy, 115 Ga. 765; Tyner v. Leake (Ga.) 44 S. E. 812. Issuance before approval and indorsement of bond renders writ dismissable —Dykes v. Twiggs County, 115 Ga. 698. Petition assigned no error—Clements v. McCormick H.-M. Co., 115 Ga. 851. Failure to make a full return (writ and bond omitted) may be cured—Monroe v. Reynolds (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1065. Bond improper because signed by agent cannot be made valid after motion to dismiss—Alabama Midland Ry. Co. v. Stevens, 116 Ga. 790.

Case or question become moot: Voluntary dismissal of proceeding below—State v. Third Judicial Dist. Ct. (Nev.) 71 Pac. 664. Certiorari against resolution calling charter election is moot after election at which charter is rejected—Smith v. Jersey City (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 811.

78. There was no valid bond—Southern Ry. Co. v. Goodrum, 115 Ga. 689.

79. If the order of an assessment board taxes "capital" of a partnership, certiorari will not reverse it because earlier in the proceeding the words "capital stock" were used—State v. Lewis (Wis.) 95 N. W. 388.

80. People v. Feitner, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 463. Impropriety of conduct of counsel—Lanier v. Byrd, 115 Ga. 200. See applications of analogous rule in the article "Saving Questions for Review." Errors were consented to below—Ford v. Vinegar Co., 116 Ga. 793.

81. Because certiorari is an original and not an appellate proceeding—Coffey v. Gamble, 117 Iowa, 545.

82. Stanton v. Board of Educ'n (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 236. Averment that judgment is unlawful may suffice if error is apparent on record—Marcellus v. Treasurer (N. J. Law) 52 Atl. 233. Averments held to specify but one error—Wing v. Blocker, 115 Ga. 778. Allegations of amount of benefit and of assessment held too inferential to charge error consisting in inequality—Tileston v. Street Com'rs, 182 Mass. 325. An objection insufficiently made was not newly averred in petition for certiorari—People v. Feitner, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 463.

83. Stipulations—Knoell v. Jordan (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 207. Evidence of a wrong ruling not contained in record—State v. Losby, 115 Wis. 57. Evidence of good faith—Janvrin v. Poole, 181 Mass. 463. Affidavits of jurors as to whether improper evidence was considered—Gildea v. Hill, 115 Ga. 136. Affidavits which are not part of petition or return will be ignored—Chamberlain v. Edmonds, 18 App. D. C. 332.

84. Facts alleged to make error harmless —Ward v. Aldermen, 181 Mass. 432.

evidence,[85] but this conclusiveness may, it seems, be waived.[86] Evidence is considered only so far as affects jurisdiction, and not as to sufficiency.[87] Presumptions will not be indulged against facts in the record,[88] and will favor the court below,[89] but the rulings will not be sustained on a different ground from that taken by the court.[90] In many instances the review has been extended by statute to the facts.[91]

§ 5. Judgment.—Such order only will be made as is proper on the record.[92] Final judgment should be rendered if the case admits without infringing on the trial court,[93] otherwise a remand will be made.[94] If the court below is sustained, final judgment may be entered, though evidence is conflicting.[95] A verdict in excess of the ad damnum clause may be reduced by consent,[96] or an illegal part written off and the writ overruled.[97] General judgment on the bond is not proper practice on an affirmance.[98] Findings, it seems, are not required.[99]

§ 6. Costs.—Costs are usually made discretionary, unless specifically allowed by statute.[1] A successful party is not taxed with costs merely because a judgment

85. Return of an assessment proceeding—People v. Feitner, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 204. As that a policeman was absent without leave whereupon relator police board dismissed him—People v. York, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 445. Answer that road was completed and benefits were ascertained conclusive though record showed only assessment of the sum—Janvrin v. Poole, 181 Mass. 463. Question of lunatic's residence—Commonwealth v. Harrold, 204 Pa. 154. Necessity of a road—Stowe Tp. Road, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 404.

86. Facts relative to an assessment were agreed to—Jones v. Metropolitan Park Com'rs, 181 Mass. 494.

87. West Donegal Tp. Road, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 620; Commonwealth v. Harrold, 204 Pa. 154; Sims v. Sims, 116 Ga. 679. Only jurisdictional facts on face of record—State v. Baker, 170 Mo. 383. If there is any evidence to support a commitment on a preliminary hearing, the jurisdiction is upheld—People v. Warden, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 545, 109 N. Y. St. Rep. 1114. Certiorari in aid of habeas corpus only brings up the jurisdiction and not evidence on a commitment for contempt—State v. District Ct., 26 Mont. 365, 68 Pac. 409, 471. Condition of cause and record held to admit of review of an assessment on merits—People v. Feitner, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 118.

88. Thus it is not supposed that an ordinance was introduced at a prior meeting against the fact that the only ordinance shown to have been introduced at the prior meeting differed in terms—Delaware & A. Tel. Co. v. Township Committee, 67 N. J. Law, 531.

89. Record was silent as to whether one was misled by other's nonresidence—Harris v. Doyle (Mich.) 90 N. W. 293. As to relationship disqualifying road commissioners, the record being silent—Stevens v. County Com'rs, 97 Me. 121.

90. Writ was quashed as become void by failure to return and not because of laches—Guarantee Safe Deposit Co. v. Nebeker (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 558.

91. Allowing new trial where evidence was conflicting is not necessarily error if the sufficiency of evidence was questioned—Carter v. Garrett, 115 Ga. 595. On certiorari to review an assessment there is substantially a new trial admitting of additional proof—People v. Wells, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 564.

92. Warren v. Hart, 183 Mass. 119. Proper order in a tax certiorari in N. Y.—People v. Feitner, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 313. Where return shows subsequent satisfaction of the judgment it should not be set aside—State v. Laurendeau, 27 Mont. 522, 71 Pac. 754.

93. Error was one of law—Maxwell v. Collier, 115 Ga. 304. For this purpose a finding of facts is equivalent to a special verdict on which final judgment will pass—Sullivan v. Visconti (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 598. Final judgment may be given in discretion of court in possessory warrant case—Sheriff v. Thompson, 116 Ga. 436.

94. So where a different result on the facts should have been reached—Pike v. Sutton, 115 Ga. 688. As where fact was involved—Williams v. Bradfield, 116 Ga. 705.

95. Ford v. Vinegar Co., 116 Ga. 793.

96. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Christian, 115 Ga. 742.

97. Ford v. Vinegar Co., 116 Ga. 793.

98. Suit to foreclose a lien—Barnett v. Tant, 115 Ga. 659. In entering final judgment against relator after correcting the error complained of he cannot be charged on his bond for costs—McInnis v. Greaves, 80 Miss. 632.

99. At least when hearing is on petition and return—Elder v. Justice's Ct., 136 Cal. 364, 68 Pac. 1022.

1. So in Supreme Court of New Jersey when hearing a common law certiorari in exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. P. L. 1898, p. 556, § 94 is applicable only where district court had no jurisdiction—C. B. Smith & Co. v. Holshauer (N. J. Law) 52 Atl. 308. On reversal which does not result in final judgment costs are not usually awarded by the supreme court—Id. They were refused a prosecutor on dismissal of a writ which had become futile for lack of a real question—Smith v. Jersey City (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 811. On setting aside a liquor license granted without a hearing of substantial objections remonstrant who prosecuted was allowed costs—Bachman v. Inhabitants of Phillipsburg (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 620. An arbitrary act done in ignorance by unskilled men and like the custom was held not so gross as to warrant costs—People v. Rushford, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 298. In Iowa costs are controlled by rules applicable to error or appeal—Coffey v. Gamble (Iowa) 94 N. W. 936. Costs on motion to correct an error will goes against him.[2] The relator should have costs if respondent voluntarily dismisses the case below and thereby causes dismissal of the writ.[3]

§ 7. Review of certiorari.—Certiorari, being at law, is reviewable only by technical legal procedure.[4] On appeal from certiorari, questions not properly raised are ignored,[5] and the decision below is sustained, unless error is shown.[6] The facts are not reviewed.[7] Parties may not complain that extraneous matter was considered at their instance.[8] An intermediate court which adopts the highest court's judgment of dismissal and sends it down, reserving a question of right to reinstate the cause, confers no rights but merely preserves existing ones.[9]

CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE.

A gambling or trafficking in litigation is champertous.[10] A layman cannot contract to procure employment for an attorney and collect evidence for a portion of the fees earned.[11] A lienor, though not of record in the action, may agree to maintain an action which will protect his lien.[12]

The rule against conveyances of land held adversely[13] does not apply to judicial sales,[14] nor to grants of franchises by the public in opposition to a conflicting claim of a franchise.[15] A quitclaim deed by a mortgagor, after foreclosure under a power of sale, passes an equity of redemption and not a mere right to attack the sale,[16] and a mortgagor's voluntary grantee may require the mortgagee to account.[17] In New Jersey, no policy forbids the transfer of a right of entry.[18] Possession under an adverse claim must exist[19] when lands are conveyed.[20] The adverse possession need not have ripened into a title,[21] and it need not be actual over the entire tract, but may be in part constructive.[22] In Connecticut, the possession of a mortgagee is adverse.[23] be charged to the party in fault—Fitch v. Auditors (Mich.) 94 N. W. 952.

2. The original judgment was modified at his complaint—McInnis v. Greaves, 80 Miss. 632.

3. Regardless whether certiorari was proper—State v. Third Judicial Dist. Ct. (Nev.) 71 Pac. 664.

4. By exception and not appeal when writ is denied by single justice of supreme judicial court. Appeals in law cases lie from superior court only—Inhabitants of Brockton v. Com'rs, 183 Mass. 42.

5. There was no traverse—Lanier v. Byrd, 115 Ga. 200. Error in overruling petition cannot be considered where answer did not admit or otherwise show any judgment in case reviewed—Stoner v. Magins, 116 Ga. 797. Not assigned below—Suburban Land Imp. Co. v. Borough of Vailsburgh (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 388.

6. General grounds urged were sufficient—D. M. Ferry & Co. v. Mattox (Ga.) 44 S. E. 1005.

7. Suburban Land Imp. Co. v. Borough of Vailsburgh (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 388.

8. As by agreeing to a given fact not shown by the record—Barnett v. Tant, 115 Ga. 659.

9. Lovelady v. Nursery Co., 115 Ga. 714.

10. Casserleigh v. Wood (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 308. But the state court held that the same contract was not offensive to public policy—Wood v. Casserleigh, 30 Colo. 287, 71 Pac. 360.

11. It is said to be against public policy—Langdon v. Conlin (Neb.) 93 N. W. 389, 60 L. R. A. 429.

12. Hall v. Deaton, 24 Ky. L. R. 314, 68 S. W. 672.

13. Lyttle v. Fitzpatrick, 24 Ky. L. R. 93, 67 S. W. 988; Eisemann v. Lapp, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 14. Cf. Gray v. Williams, 130 N. C. 53.

14. Griffin v. Dauphin, 133 Ala. 543.

15. People's Elec. Light Co. v. Capital Gas & Elec. Co. (Ky.) 75 S. W. 280.

16. Land was fraudulently bought in—Houston v. National Mut. B. & L. Ass'n, 80 Miss. 31.

17. Gribbel v. Brown, 202 Pa. 10. Evidence held insufficient to show that a suit was champertous because of another independent contract to sue for a certain advantage in respect to same property—Id.

18. Semble that it is a transferable expectancy—Bouvier v. Baltimore & N. Y. Ry. Co., 67 N. J. Law, 281.

19. One claiming under a remainderman cannot hold adversely to the life tenant—Davis v. Willson, 25 Ky. L. R. 21, 74 S. W. 696.

20. Claimant's tenant attorned to grantor before sale was actually made—Griffin v. Dauphin, 133 Ala. 543.

Deed is valid if grantor has a final and conclusive judgment against the tenant though writ of possession has not been served—Miller v. Farmers' Bank (Ky.) 75 S. W. 218.

21. So by statute in Tennessee—Green v. Cumberland Coal Co. (Tenn.) 72 S. W. 459.

22. Green v. Cumberland Coal Co. (Tenn.) 72 S. W. 459. The land so held must be within the boundaries recited—Slatton v. Tennessee C., I. & R. Co. (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 926.

23. Mead v. Fitzpatrick, 74 Conn. 521.

A conveyance by a disseised tenant in common is void as against the other.[24] A dispute as to a boundary is not an adverse claim to the intervening strip.[25]

If a deed is void as to the adverse possessor only, and under the law the grantee may sue in the grantor's name, a later statute giving him the same remedies as if the grantor had been in possession is purely remedial, and the grantee may sue in his own name.[26]

The common-law rule that attorneys could not contract for a fee dependent on the event of recovery or payable thereout is now largely regulated by statute.[27] An attorney must not acquire an interest in or control or direction of the action,[28] so as to take away that of the assignor.[29] Whenever a contingent fee is legal, he may agree to pay associates out of it.[30] An agreement by an attorney to prosecute at his own expense for a compensation is bad, as agreeing to advance money, and as promising a valuable consideration for the purpose of receiving a demand for suit.[31]

Under statutes prohibiting "attorneys," a layman may agree with an attorney to divide the recovery and the agreement is enforceable against the attorney.[32] Officers cannot make their fees payable out of a recovery.[33]

Champerty is a defense only to the contract infected by it.[34] Despite the invalidity of a champertous agreement for a contingent fee, a quantum meruit may be recovered,[35] and proper amendments for that purpose should be allowed.[36]

Champerty must be pleaded as a defense,[37] but champertous conveyances may be regarded as void, even by the grantor, and without pleading invalidity.[38]

CHARITABLE AND CORRECTIONAL INSTITUTIONS.[39]

Institutions Included; Soldiers' Homes; Commitment of Minors; Officers and their Powers; Labor of Inmates; Custody and Control of Inmates; Maintenance and Support; Transfers; Remission of Sentences; Discipline; Liability for Injuries to Inmates; Escapes.

Institutions included in term.—An incorporated industrial school and orphan asylum to which boys are committed from different counties by overseers of the 24. Berry v. Tennessee & C. R. Co., 134 Ala. 618.

25. Small v. Hamlet, 24 Ky. L. R. 238, 68 S. W. 395; Perciful v. Coleman, 24 Ky. L. R. 1685, 72 S. W. 29. Overhanging encroachments do not avoid a deed—Norwalk H. & L. Co. v. Vernam (Conn.) 55 Atl. 168.

26. Campbell v. Equitable L. & T. Co. (S. D.) 94 N. W. 401. Compare Galbraith v. Paine (N. D.) 96 N. W. 258.

27. In Michigan he may receive a share—Fletcher v. McArthur (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 393. So in Illinois (collection of policy on life)—Robinson v. Sharp, 201 Ill. 86. But it must not be overreaching or fraudulent—Id. Compare title Attorneys and Counselors, ante, p. 270 et seq.

28. An assignment to him to collect and pay over surplus after taking out expenses, fees and advances is void—Ravenal v. Ingram, 131 N. C. 549. No settlement was to be made unless he was present and directed it—Davis v. Chase, 159 Ind. 242. An agreement to represent several clients bringing one test case on a contingent fee for each, held valid—Tron v. Lewis (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 490. Agreement that a tax-ferret should pay all expenses and attorney fees for half of recovery held not champertous—Shinn v. Cunningham (Iowa) 94 N. W. 941.

29. Brown v. Ginn, 66 Ohio St. 316.

30. In re Fitzsimons, 174 N. Y. 15.

31. Statutes construed—Stedwell v. Hartmann, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 126. Promise to defray all expenses is one to give "a valuable thing" for employment; but to take an interest in the action to secure fees is not void—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Carlock (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 931.

32. Code Civ. Proc. § 74 construed—Irwin v. Curie, 171 N. Y. 409.

33. Edgerly v. Hale, 71 N. H. 138; Watson v. Fales, 97 Me. 366.

34. Not in the original action (Hall v. Deaton, 24 Ky. L. R. 314, 68 S. W. 672); nor in a suit to cancel a release of judgment entered in a suit where the attorney was acting champertously—Hearn v. Hearn, 24 R. I. 328. Defendant cannot plead champerty between plaintiff and plaintiff's attorney—Isherwood v. H. L. Jenkins Lumber Co., 87 Minn. 388.

35. The condition for no pay in case of failure is void with that for a percentage—Leonard v. Boyd, 24 Ky. L. R. 1320, 71 S. W. 508.

36. Leonard v. Boyd. 24 Ky. L. R. 1320, 71 S. W. 508.

37. Held in action to enjoin employment of attorney by county to discover and collect unpaid taxes—Disbrow v. Cass County Sup'rs (Iowa) 93 N. W. 585.

38. Green v. Cumberland Coal Co. (Tenn.) 72 S. W. 459.

39. See Public Works and Improvements, for exemption of hospital property from as-poor, and having only a slight income from the sale of farm products, is a charitable institution.[40] The Illinois state reformatory is not a charitable, but a penal institution.[41]

Soldiers' homes.—National soldiers' homes are regarded as part of the government of the United States, and may not be sued in tort, and the fact that the act gives power to sue and be sued at law and in equity does not change this rule, as that has reference solely to matters within the scope of the corporate powers of the institution.[42]

Commitment of minors to reformatories.—A child under sixteen years, convicted of petit larceny, must, under the New York Penal Code, be committed to some reformatory authorized by law to receive minors.[43]

Officers, their powers, duties and liabilities.—Courts of equity may not remove officers of penal institutions.[44] Generally the sheriff is entitled to the charge and custody of the county jail.[45] The warden of a penitentiary, under a law making him the custodian of funds belonging to the penitentiary, is not a mere bailee, but is an insurer of such funds and liable for their loss.[46] A like liability attaches to the treasurer of a state asylum for insane criminals.[47] Failure of the governor to approve a warden's bond will not affect its validity as against the warden and his bondsmen.[48]

Labor of inmates.—The proper officers may, in the exercise of their discretion, let out the convict labor by contract,[49] and the contract is not invalid because for a period beyond the term of the officers making the contract.[50] A convict labor contract is invalid unless the bond required by law has been duly approved,[51] and officials charged with the duty of passing on such bonds have discretion in the matter of the hiring.[52] A convict labor bond, conditioned for payment of money to become due and for the humane treatment of convicts, permits recovery for inhumane treatment only to the amount of actual damages resulting to the county.[53] The laws of Georgia prohibit the working of convicts in private chain gangs controlled by private individuals.[54] Inmates of insane asylums physically fit for labor may be employed without the grounds of the institution, where the laws do not require confinement within the grounds of the institution.[55] An act providing that not less than fifty convicts shall be hired to any person, but where convicts are worked in the county of conviction, less than fifty may be worked in one place, is not violated by a contract for hire of all convicts of a certain county to labor in another county, no number being specified.[56] A convict employed under a convict bond may be returned to custody by agreement between the hirer and the judge.[57] sessments for municipal improvements. See Taxation, for liability of charitable institution to taxation.

40. Corbett v. St. Vincent's Industrial School, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 334.

41. Marshall v. Board of Managers, 201 Ill. 9.

42. Overholser v. National Home, 68 Ohio St. 236.

43. People v. New York Catholic Protectory, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 660.

44. Marshall v. Board of Managers, 201 Ill. 9.

45. Sturr v. Buckley (N. J. Law) 52 Atl. 692. The fact that the state constitution invests a sheriff with the common law duties of such officer will not invalidate a statute taking from the sheriff the control of a jail, as the legislature has the power to change his rights and duties—Beasley v. Ridout, 94 Md. 641.

46, 47, 48. Ramsay's Estate v. People, 197 Ill. 572.

49. Comp. St. 1901, c. 86, § 16—State v. Mortensen (Neb.) 95 N. W. 831; McConnell v. Arkansas Brick & Mfg. Co., 70 Ark. 568.

50. McConnell v. Arkansas Brick & Mfg. Co., 70 Ark. 568.

51. Rev. St. § 3062—Camp v. McLin (Fla.) 32 So. 927. Comp. St. 1901, c. 86, § 16—State v. Mortensen (Neb.) 95 N. W. 831.

52. Rev. St. § 3062—Camp v. McLin (Fla.) 32 So. 927.

53. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3746—Ellis v. Ft. Bend County (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 43.

54. Simmons v. Georgia Iron Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 780.

55. Clough v. Worsham (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 350.

56. Rev. Code, § 4476, and in a suit on a bond for convicts worked in another county, a plea of invalidity because at the time

Custody and control of inmates.—Under laws releasing parents from all duties to children committed to state institutions, the authority of the officers thereof during minority is superior to the rights of a guardian, unless voluntarily relinquished,[58] and the discretion of the officers as to release will not be interfered with by courts.[59]

Maintenance of institutions and support of inmates.—An orphans' home giving moral training and religious and secular education is an asylum and not a school within the constitution of New York, prohibiting the distribution of public moneys to sectarian schools.[60] The city of New York is not liable to an asylum for the support of an incorrigible child, unless duly committed pursuant to the rules of the state board of charities.[61] In counties maintaining a poorhouse, townships are not chargeable with support of the poor.[62] A legislature may not fix one rate for pay patients admitted into a state insane asylum and a greater rate for patients admitted as paupers, who afterwards become able to pay.[63] The legal settlement of an insane person is the one primarily liable for his support if a pauper.[64] The persons or districts chargeable with the maintenance of insane persons, need not be notified of the proceedings under which the insane person was sent to the asylum.[65] After a lapse of six years, a county may not recover back amounts erroneously paid by it to the state for the support of insane sent from that county.[66] The expenses of the criminal insane are to be borne in the first instance by the county from which the insane person was sent.[67] The sheriff may appoint guards for prisoners at the county's expense when necessary.[68]

Transfer to other institutions.—A transfer of an inmate to another institution under an unconstitutional statute will not operate as a discharge.[69] An act giving of its execution defendant did not have fifty convicts as required by law was insufficient—Griffin v. Randolph County, 136 Ala. 310.

57. Ex parte Miller (Tex. Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 183.

58, 59. Armstrong v. Board of Control (Minn.) 93 N. W. 3.

60. Sargent v. Board of Education, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 588. Laws of New York, allowing distribution of the school moneys to children educated in orphan asylums were not repealed by the constitution prohibiting distribution of public moneys to sectarian schools—Id.

61. Laws of 1896, c. 546, § 9, subd. 8, requires board of Charities to establish rules—In re New York Juvenile Asylum, 172 N. Y. 50.

62. Town of Clearwater v. Town of Garfield (Neb.) 91 N. W. 496. On refusal to receive a pauper because afflicted with a contagious disease, the county is liable for money thereafter expended by the township for such pauper's support and maintenance—Rockaway Tp. v. Board of Freeholders (N. J. Law) 52 Atl. 373.

63. Schroer v. Central Ky. Asylum, 24 Ky. L. R. 150, 68 S. W. 150. Under an act changing the name of an asylum to a hospital, transferring the properties and giving the treasurer of the new institution power to sue, he may recover for the care of an inmate sent to the asylum before the change—Napa State Hospital v. Yuba County, 138 Cal. 378, 71 Pac. 450.

64. Clay County v. Adams County (Neb.) 95 N. W. 58. Where a sane person, a man, has his residence in one county and moved to another with intent to make it his home, the county from which he removed will not be liable for his support as an insane person, where he did not become insane within thirty days after abandoning his former residence—Clay County v. Adams County (Neb.) 95 N. W. 58.

65. Juniata County v. Overseers of Poor, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 187. The finding of a jury that a lunatic is a pauper will not prevent a subsequent inquiry by the state authorities as to his ability to pay—Central Ky. Asylum v. Drane, 24 Ky. L. R. 176, 68 S. W. 149; Schroer v. Central Ky. Asylum, 24 Ky. L. R. 150, 68 S. W. 150.

66. Trustees of State Hospital v. Philadelphia County, 205 Pa. 336.

67. Napa State Hospital v. Yuba County, 138 Cal. 378, 71 Pac. 450. Rev. St. 1899, §§ 4867, 4874-4878, 4883, 4887—Thomas v. Macon County (Mo.) 74 S. W. 999. It is not conclusive on the question of the convict's residence that the indictment used the words "late of the county aforesaid"; nor is conviction of a person by court of a county, prima facie proof that the person so convicted was a resident—Thomas v. Macon County (Mo.) 74 S. W. 999.

68. Dakota County v. Eastcott (Neb.) 93 N. W. 679.

69. People v. Mallary, 195 Ill. 582. The doctrine of voluntary escape would have no application to such situation because that doctrine is without application to criminal cases—Id. Constitutionality of act allowing transfer of incorrigible prisoners may be tested by habeas corpus—Id.

a board power to transfer inmates to another institution, on a showing of certain facts, invests the board with judicial powers and is unconstitutional.[70]

Remission of sentence.—Courts generally are without power to remit a portion of a sentence where there is no proceeding in error; that power being vested in other officers.[71]

Discipline.—Guards have no right to whip convicts in the absence of rules conferring that power,[72] and where a convict is whipped by a guard, he may sue for assault and battery.[73]

Liability of institutions or officers for injuries to inmates.—A charitable institution exercising due care in the selection of employes is not liable for injuries to an inmate, through the negligence of an employe.[74] An institution conducted for profit is liable for negligence of its physician treating a pay patient.[75] The surgeon in chief of a hospital, and paid by the month for his services, is the servant of the hospital and not an employe of the patient.[76] A patient in a private sanitarium may recover for unnecessary assault inflicted when he was delirious.[77] Money paid for an injury to one in the erection of a building required by a bequest will be regarded as an incident to the management, and may be charged as an item of cost of such management.[78] A convict may recover for injuries inflicted while employed under convict contract,[79] his right not affected by disobedience of orders of state officers.[80] A superintendent of an insane asylum is not personally liable for negligence of a patient employed in work outside the grounds, where the fitness of inmate to labor was passed upon by the physicians.[81]

Liability for escape.—A jailer negligently allowing escape is liable, though effected without intent on his part.[82]

CHARITABLE GIFTS.[83]

§ 1. Validity in general.—The motive of a charitable gift cannot be considered in determining its validity.[84] Statutory provisions restrictive of the right to devise or bequeath to a charity may, it is held, be waived by agreement of testator and the persons protected by such laws.[85] To be valid it must be for a public use,[86] as for the establishment of a church and mission of a particular denomination,[87] or for the support and maintenance of a pastor thereof,[88] or for foreign and home missions

70. People v. Mallary, 195 Ill. 582.
71. State v. Dalton (Tenn.) 72 S. W. 456.
72. Davis v. State (Miss.) 33 So. 286.
73. Acts 1896, p. 99; Code 1892, § 2747—Davis v. State (Miss.) 32 So. 922.
74. Corbett v. St. Vincent's Industrial School, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 334; Pepke v. Grace Hospital (Mich.) 90 N. W. 278.
75. Brown v. La Societe Francaise de Bienfaisance Mutuelle, 138 Cal. 475, 71 Pac. 516. Want of care in selecting physicians who proved to be unskillful should be alleged —Plant System Relief Dept. v. Dickerson (Ga.) 45 S. E. 483.
76. Brown v. La Societe Francaise de Bienfaisance Mutuelle, 138 Cal. 475, 71 Pac. 516.
77. And a hundred dollars is not an excessive amount—Galesburg Sanitarium v. Jacobson, 103 Ill. App. 26.
78. Though will prohibited a diversion of the fund—Winnemore v. Philadelphia, 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 625.
79, 80. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Gonzales (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 213.
81. Clough v. Worsham (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 350.
82. Lynch v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 2180, 73 S. W. 745.
83. See Charitable and Correctional Institutions for liability of such institutions or the trustees thereof for torts.
84. As that the intention of testatrix was to perpetuate the family name—Appeal of Eliot, 74 Conn. 586.
85. In re Beers' Will, 117 N. Y. St. Rep. 67.
86. Grant v. Saunders (Iowa) 95 N. W. 411. A use for a cemetery is not charitable merely because held by trustees—Congregation Shaarai v. Moss, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 356.
87. Is for a charitable object within Conn. Gen. St. § 2951—Appeal of Eliot, 74 Conn. 586.
88. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank v. Robinson, 96 Mo. App. 385.

connected therewith,[89] or for a home for old and infirm persons who may become connected therewith,[90] or a gift for the benefit of a public library,[91] or a humane society,[92] or incorporated mutual benefit associations,[93] or an incorporation for the purpose of maintaining an industrial school and asylum for the sustenance and education of male orphan children, supported by contributions and from sale of products,[94] or a gift to a city for a college for the education of orphan boys,[95] or for masses for the repose of the soul of testator,[96] but a gift for the benefit of the deceased members of a fraternal society is not for a public charity,[97] nor is a bequest of a permanent fund to maintain testator's place of interment.[98]

It is essential that there be a beneficiary named or capable of being ascertained,[99] or created as an institution by organization or incorporation.[1] A grant to an aggregation of people within certain municipal limits is not a sufficient designation of grantees.[2]

Uncertainty as to the trustee will not necessarily defeat the trust.[3] A bequest to a "nephew" is not invalid as creating a personal trust.[4] That the trustee appointed was permitted to select his co-trustees will not invalidate the trust.[5]

In some states a limitation on the amount which can be devised to charitable uses has been fixed by statute.[6] If the heirs knowingly permitted the trustees to en-

89. Bruere v. Cook, 63 N. J. Eq. 624.

90. Gen. St. Conn. § 2951—Appeal of Eliot, 74 Conn. 586.

91. As the Boston Library and the Boston Atheneum—Minns v. Billings, 183 Mass. 126.

92. Minns v. Billings, 183 Mass. 126.

93. As typographical society, teachers association and bank officers association, which are open to all qualified to join, though the gift is for the benefit of members only—Minns v. Billings, 183 Mass. 126.

94. Corbett v. St. Vincent's Industrial School, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 334.

95. St. 43 Eliz. c. 4, held in force and act 1901 authorizing the city to accept and enforce the bequest was an expression of the policy of the state—Clayton v. Hallett, 30 Colo. 231, 70 Pac. 429, 59 L. R. A. 407.

96. But there is a conflict in the decisions whether this is a charitable use; see 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law (2d Ed.) pp. 927-929—Coleman v. O'Leary's Ex'r, 24 Ky. L. R. 1248, 70 S. W. 1068.

97. Troutman v. De Boissiere's School Ass'n (Kan.) 71 Pac. 286.

98. In re Gay's Estate, 138 Cal. 552, 70 Pac. 707.

99. Beneficiaries need not be limited as to any particular place—Grant v. Saunders (Iowa) 95 N. W. 411. Gift held invalid because no existing Protestant Episcopal diocese corresponded to that named—Mount v. Tuttle, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 456. A bequest for a college for poor white male orphans "born of reputable parents" sustained though it did not define the word "reputable"—Clayton v. Hallett, 30 Colo. 231, 70 Pac. 429, 59 L. R. A. 407. A bequest for "the purpose of religion or education," or "to be applied to any charitable" use is uncertain and unascertainable—Coleman v. O'Leary's Ex'r, 24 Ky. L. R. 1248, 70 S. W. 1068. A bequest in aid of "deserving, aged native born, needing such aid" is sufficiently certain—Fay v. Howe, 136 Cal. 599, 69 Pac. 423. A bequest that the income of a certain sum be applied as "rewards of merit to pupils in the parochial poor schools in" a certain city is sufficiently definite as to purpose—Coleman v. O'Leary's Ex'r, 24 Ky. L. R. 1248, 70 S. W. 1068. A bequest for the purchase of nonsectarian books on the philosophy of spiritualism to be placed where all could read, is certain—Jones v. Watford (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 397. A bequest for a home for "poor men" is sufficiently certain and under 1 Rev. St. p 235 it is not necessary that the poor, be "aged or impotent." The trustees will have power to act under the chancellor's direction—Coleman v. O'Leary's Ex'r, 24 Ky. L. R. 1248, 70 S. W. 1068. "To the poor" to be selected by the trustee is definite—Grant v. Saunders (Iowa) 95 N. W. 411; Thompson's Ex'r v. Brown, 25 Ky. L. R. 371, 75 S. W. 210. A bequest for maintaining and aiding a kindergarten in a certain city is sufficiently certain—Owatonna v. Rosebrock (Minn.) 92 N. W. 1122.

1. A bequest for the establishment of an institution not in existence at the time of the donor's death is valid—Appeal of Eliot, 74 Conn. 586.

2. Hunt v. Tolles (Vt.) 52 Atl. 1042.

3. Bequest to the board of missions of the Baptist church of New Jersey for foreign and home missions, there being no such board, held a valid gift to the home and foreign missions of that church—Bruere v. Cook, 63 N. J. Eq. 624.

4. Fay v. Howe, 136 Cal. 599, 69 Pac. 423.

5. Coleman v. O'Leary's Ex'r, 24 Ky. L. R. 1248, 70 S. W. 1068.

6. Cal. Civ. Code, § 1313. Property described as community property by the surviving widow as executrix will be so treated in estimating the amount of the estate. In determining the one third of the widow's estate devised, where she died leaving surviving no next of kin, but two nieces of her deceased husband, property conveyed to her by her husband and another will not be considered—In re McCauley's Estate, 138 Cal. 432, 71 Pac. 512. The execution of a codicil revoking a charitable bequest within 30 days of testator's death is not a reexecution of the will so as to invalidate other charitable devises—Morrow's Estate, 204 Pa. 484; In re McCauley's Estate, 138 Cal. 432, 71 Pac. 512.

ter upon the performance of the void trust, there can be no recovery for expenditures or losses by investments thereunder.[7]

§ 2. Capacity of donee or trustee.—Corporations, municipal or private, may take a bequest for charitable purposes.[8] In case of municipal corporations, the power need not be expressly given by its charter,[9] and if its charter gave it power to assist charitable organizations, it has power to accept a bequest in trust for the establishment of a college for the education of orphan boys.[10] Merely because the donee corporation already held property up to the charter limitation will not invalidate the donation,[11] and if the disability is removed before the time for payment of the legacy, there is no failure of a trustee.[12] A charter of a corporation for charitable purposes, limiting the amount of property which it can hold free from taxation, is a limitation of its capacity to acquire property.[13] If one of the purposes of incorporation was to aid destitute seamen, it may accept a bequest for that purpose.[14]

§ 3. Interpretation and construction.—The cy pres doctrine will be applied only where the purposes of the trust are ascertainable.[15] A bequest to executors to expend a certain sum for charitable purposes constitutes them trustees of the fund.[16] A bequest in trust to be transferred to a municipality, where it shall be authorized to administer such a trust, does not make it the beneficiary but the trustee.[17] A bequest to "my nephew," naming him, does not create a personal trust which terminated on his death.[18]

§ 4. Administration and enforcement.—Incapacity,[19] or maladministration,[20] or refusal of the trustee to act,[21] or a failure of the donor to appoint a trustee,[22] or to name a successor to the appointee in case of his death will not defeat the trust,[23] nor will death of the trustee terminate it,[24] but in such case equity will administer

7. Coleman v. O'Leary's Ex'r, 24 Ky. L. R. 1248, 70 S. W. 1068.

8. Equity has adopted 43 Eliz. c. 4, to this extent, though not adopted by express legislation—State v. Toledo, 23 Ohio. Circ. R. 327. The common law of England by statute supplies defects in the state statutes, and act 1901 authorizing the city to accept the request was an expression of the policy of the state in favor of the common law—Clayton v. Hallett, 30 Colo. 231, 70 Pac. 429, 59 L. R. A. 407. Under Conn. Gen. St. § 2075 the Episcopal church has power to accept a bequest to establish a home for old and infirm ladies connected with the church—Appeal of Eliot, 74 Conn. 586. An act authorizing a municipality to accept a trust fund for educational purposes is not unconstitutional for want of corporate power to accept trusts (Rev. St. § 4105, am'd 94 Ohio Laws, p. 241)—State v. Toledo, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 327.

9. State v. Toledo, 23 Ohio. Circ. R. 327.

10. Clayton v. Hallett, 30 Colo. 231, 70 Pac. 429, 59 L. R. A. 407.

11, 12, 13, 14. Appeal of Eliot, 74 Conn. 586.

15. A trust for "the benefit of the poor" generally upheld—Thompson's Ex'r v. Brown, 25 Ky. L. R. 371, 75 S. W. 210. And see Grant v. Saunders (Iowa) 95 N. W. 411. The board of home missions, the board of the church erection fund, and the board of aid for colleges and academies, held to be legatees, under a bequest to the "boards of the Presbyterian church, to be used in home missions, church erections and aid for colleges"—Harris v. Keasbey (N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 555. A bequest to an institution "in the city of" need not be confined to an institution within the corporate limits; the word "in" will be regarded as equivalent to "at" and an institution within a mile of the city will be entitled to the bequest—Old Ladies Home v. Hoffman, 117 Iowa, 716. A bequest to the "Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Louisville for poor Catholic men" was construed to require to establishment of the home in and the beneficiaries to be selected from the diocese of Louisville—Coleman v. O'Leary's Ex'r, 24 Ky. L. R. 1248, 70 S. W. 1068. Gift to "Society for Disabled Ministers" held to mean "Disabled Ministers' Fund" etc.—Reformed Presbyterian Church v. McMillan (Wash.) 72 Pac. 502.

16. Jones v. Watford (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 397.

17. And it was the duty of the trustees to transfer the fund to the city on statutory qualification to act—Owatonna v. Rosebrock (Minn.) 92 N. W. 1122.

18. Fay v. Howe, 136 Cal. 599, 69 Pac. 423.

19. Clayton v. Hallett, 30 Colo. 231, 70 Pac. 429, 59 L. R. A. 407; Appeal of Eliot, 74 Conn. 586.

20. Von Hoven v. Immanuel Presbyterian Church, 108 La. 274.

21. The refusal of a town to accept a bequest for cemetery purposes unless certain cemetery lots owned by testator were conveyed to it will not affect a reversion of the bequest or authorize the executors to convey the lots—Campbell v. Clough, 71 N. H. 181.

22. Bruere v. Cook, 63 N. J. Eq. 624.

23. In re Gay's Estate, 138 Cal. 552, 71 Pac. 707.

24. Fay v. Howe, 136 Cal. 599, 69 Pac. 423.

it by the appointment of a trustee.[25] The executor may apply for the appointment of a trustee in case the will does not name one,[26] and the members of the church devisee may compel the board of trustees thereof to administer the trust.[27] On capacitation of a corporation trustee, the court could appoint it trustee.[28]

The provisions of the trust and not the charter of incorporation for the purpose of carrying out the trust will govern.[29] The church has implied power to determine the manner in which the bequest should be invested, where the will gave the wardens the power.[30] The trustee has implied power to select the particular persons to be benefited of a definite class of beneficiaries.[31]

A sale of part of the trust estate by the trustees, being such as would have been authorized on application to the court, will be deemed valid.[32] The presumption is that the trustee faithfully discharged his duty as he understood it.[33]

CHATTEL MORTGAGES.[34]

§ 1. What constitutes a chattel mortgage.—At common law a chattel mortgage is a sale of a chattel on a condition subsequent, upon the performance of which, the title revests in the mortgagor, and on breach of which, the mortgagee's title becomes absolute.[35]

An instrument to have the effect of a chattel mortgage must be executed with the intention or purpose of operating as a security.[36] It is not absolutely essential that it contain an express defeasance; it is sufficient if it expressly evidences a sale to secure a debt and implies a defeasance.[37]

Distinguished from other transactions.—A chattel mortgage is distinguished from a conditional sale wherein title is retained by the seller, until the performance of some condition, in that no title passes from the debtor to the creditor, but the creditor merely retains title which the debtor never had.[38] There is a sale and

25. Hunt v. Tolles (Vt.) 52 Atl. 1042.
26. Bruere v. Cook, 63 N. J. Eq. 624.
27. Von Hoven v. Immanuel Presbyterian Church, 103 La. 274.
28. Appeal of Eliot, 74 Conn. 586.
29. State v. Toledo, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 327.
30, 31. Appeal of Eliot, 74 Conn. 586.
32. As where by deed land had been conveyed to a town for cemetery purposes and the trustees sold part thereof, the proceeds being expended in improving the cemetery; particularly where the grantees were in peaceable possession for fourteen years with knowledge of the donor, the town and the cemetery trustees—Tacoma v. Tacoma Cemetery, 28 Wash. 238, 68 Pac. 723.
33. Tacoma v. Tacoma Cemetery, 28 Wash. 238, 68 Pac. 723.
34. See, Bankruptcy, for chattel mortgages as preferences or fraudulent transfer under bankruptcy act. See, Limitation of Actions, for operation of limitation laws on chattel mortgage. See Fraudulent Conveyances, for mortgage in fraud of creditors.
35. Hammon, Chat. Mortg.
36. Long v. State (Fla.) 32 So. 870. An instrument reciting indebtedness of a certain amount on land and that to secure the debt parties mortgaged certain animals, and duly signed, is a mortgage to secure the payment of the money and not an obligation to pay it —Acton v. Walker's Ex'x, 24 Ky. L. R. 2377, 74 S. W. 231.
37. Dothan Guano Co. v. Ward, 132 Ala. 380. In this case an instrument under which one promised to pay a certain amount of cotton or the market value thereof to the payee and to secure the note, granted, bargained and sold to the payee all his live stock, giving the payee after maturity the right to seize and sell as he deemed best, was held a mortgage—Id.
38. McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Mills (Neb.) 89 N. W. 621. Conditional sales, see Sales. In Missouri, Kentucky and Texas the retention of title by seller until consideration is paid, makes the instrument a chattel mortgage—Fairbanks, Morse & Co. v.

not a mortgage where a stock of goods is sold to one residing in another town, and the purchaser informs all parties interested of the purchase, and files a bill of sale in the clerk's office and removes the sign of the seller from his door.[39] So there is an executory contract for the manufacture and sale of lumber, and not a chattel mortgage under a contract for the output of a mill, the purchaser to make advances as required to procure logs and pay operating expenses, the logs and the lumber manufactured therefrom to bear purchaser's brand and be his property.[40] As between parties, a lease binding the property of lessee for the payment of the rent is a mortgage.[41]

§ 2. Subject-matter—What may be mortgaged.—The rule allowing mortgage of any chattel or chattel interest capable of sale and transfer excludes real estate[42] and liquor licenses.[43] One giving a chattel mortgage on property is estopped to deny its character as personalty.[44]

Title and interest of mortgagor.—The mortgagor's title to property need not be absolute in order to render the mortgage effective,[45] thus a series of chattel mortgages is not rendered invalid by the fact that at the date of the first, the goods covered by the mortgage had not all been acquired.[46] A mortgage on property not in existence is invalid.[47] Ownership is presumed from the fact of giving the mortgage,[48] but not as against one not a party to a mortgage.[49] In Alabama, executors are without power to mortgage crops to secure future advances necessary to raise crop.[50] A lessee's mortgage of crops will not cover crops raised by a sublessee, an order for which had previously been given to a third person.[51]

Description of property.—Except as between the parties and persons having actual notice, a mortgage of chattels must so describe them either expressly or by reference, that a stranger following the inquiry suggested by the description may definitely identify the property.[52] An erroneous geographical location may be re-

Baskett (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1113; Rankin v. McFarlane Carriage Co., 25 Ky. L. R. 258, 75 S. W. 221; Parlin & Orendorff Co. v. Davis' Estate (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 951.

39. Fisher v. Stout, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 97.

40. Stelling v. G. W. Jones Lumber Co. (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 261.

41. Feller v. McKillip (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 379.

42. Rev. St. § 3385—Beeler v. C. C. Mercantile Co. (Idaho) 70 Pac. 943.

43. Christian Feigenspan v. Mulligan (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 1124. The fact that the mortgage of a liquor license requires a sale for the best price obtainable does not authorize the mortgagee to take possession of the license—Id.

44. Gordon v. Miller, 28 Ind. App. 612.

45. Where at the time of the mortgage, neither the mortgagor nor his vendor had any title to the mortgaged property, the mortgage was void as to subsequent mortgagees from the vendor of the mortgagor, who was in possession when both mortgages were executed—New England Nat. Bank v. Northwestern Nat. Bank, 171 Mo. 307. One in possession of chattels under conditional contract of sale, has a mortgageable interest in the property—Cutting v. Whittemore (N. H.) 54 Atl. 1098; Friedman v. Phillips, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 96. Mortgage of a registered trade-mark duly described, giving mortgagee the right to manufacture a remedy, is sufficient for that p irpose though the certificate of registration is invalid—Tuttle v. Blow (Mo.) 75 S. W. 617.

46. In re Durham, 114 Fed. 750.

47. McKinney v. Ellison (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 55.

48. Mathew v. Mathew, 138 Cal. 334, 71 Pac. 344.

49. Syck v. Bossingham (Iowa) 94 N. W. 920.

50. Jones v. Peebles, 133 Ala. 290.

51. Norfleet v. Baker, 131 N. C. 99.

52. First Nat. Bank v. Johnson (Neb.) 94 N. W. 837; City Nat. Bank v. Goodloe-McClelland Commission Co., 93 Mo. App. 123. Where the description is too indefinite to furnish aid in identifying the property, the mortgage is void as to subsequent purchasers—Young v. Bank of Princeton, 97 Mo. App. 576; First Nat. Bank v. Hughes (Neb.) 92 N. W. 986. As description of animals solely by number—Hardaway v. Jones (Va.) 41 S. E. 957. A mortgage is void as to innocent purchasers, where the property is described as in one place when in fact it is in another—Jones Bros. Commission Co. v. Long, 90 Mo. App. 8. Erroneous description of subject matter may be disregarded where there is sufficient in the descriptive parts of the mortgage to definitely locate the property—Swinney v. Merchants' Bank, 95 Mo. App. 185.

There can be no mortgage lien on specific chattels by a mortgage of a certain number out of a mass without identifying them—First Nat. Bank v. Johnson (Neb.) 94 N. W. 837.

Future crops are sufficiently described by the words "all my crops I may raise during the year 1901" evidence showing that mortjected as surplusage where a construction of the entire instrument will sufficiently locate the property.[53] Recitals as to character of mortgagee[54] or place of business are not conclusive.[55] Insufficiency of description cannot be taken advantage of by a creditor with actual notice that the property is covered by a mortgage.[56] Possession taken by the mortgagee will cure a defective description of the property.[57] An erroneous description of property in the petition is cured by a correct description in the judgment rendered in an action to enforce the mortgage.[58] The question of the identity of the property covered by the mortgage is for the jury.[59]

Property covered by mortgage.—A mortgage on after acquired property is valid,[60] particularly where possession is taken before the rights of third parties attach.[61] The mortgage binds a purchaser from the mortgagor assuming his obligations under the mortgage.[62] A mortgage of machinery used for a particular purpose and necessary additions will not cover other machinery and appliances not used in that particular line.[63] A general description of merchandise covers only merchandise in stock when the mortgage was executed and not stock afterwards added by the purchaser.[64] A mortgage of a liquor license will be presumed to cover the privilege conferred by the license and not the license itself,[65] and will not authorize a mortgagee to take possession of the instrument for the purpose of preventing the mortgagor from conducting the business.[66] A chattel mortgage collateral to an agricultural lien may cover items not strictly protected by the lien.[67]

§ 3. Consideration.—In Missouri a chattel mortgage to secure a usurious loan is void.[68] The fact that a mortgage is given to secure a debt of a third person does not make the mortgagor personally liable for the debt in the absence of an express covenant to pay the money.[69] Where there is an entire failure of consid-

gagor owned land during the entire year in that county and that crop in question was raised on the land in that year—Woods v. Rose, 135 Ala. 297. After acquired property is not covered by a clause mortgaging "all cord wood and pilings cut by or for me"—Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Hill Merc. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 797.

Held sufficient: "All goods in the store of the makers doing business in a certain city," mortgagor having but one place of business in such city and the stock was the one referred to in the mortgage—Davis v. Turner (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 605. "12 two year old heifers (2 past 3 in spring) 8 spring calves, 1 bay mare 8 years old, 1 roan mare 10 years old, increase above included"—Ward v. Johnson (Kan.) 72 Pac. 242. A mortgage describing property as "1000 lbs. of lint (good cotton) corn, fodder" made or to be made on the mortgagor's land will convey the corn—Graves v. Currie, 132 N. C. 307. A mortgage of cattle as a certain number of yearlings, is sufficient to cover the cattle intended though at the time of execution of the mortgage none of the cattle were 12 months old—Sparks v. Deposit Bank, 24 Ky. L. R. 2333, 74 S. W. 185.

53. City Nat. Bank v. Goodloe-McClelland Commission Co., 93 Mo. App. 123.

54. Elston v. Roop, 133 Ala. 331.

55. Gilbert v. Sprague, 196 Ill. 444.

56. Cohee v. First Nat. Bank (Neb.) 95 N. W. 610.

57. Nichols & Shepard Co. v. Bishop (Okl.) 70 Pac. 188. Possession may be taken by any acts amounting to an assumption of possession, and control and a particular ceremony or formality is not required—Id.

58. Day & C. Lumber Co. v. Mack, 24 Ky. L. R. 640, 69 S. W. 712.

59. Third Nat. Bank v. Blosser, 65 Kan. 859, 70 Pac. 373. It is for the court to determine whether description is sufficient to identify any property and for the jury to decide whether it is sufficient to cover the property in dispute, there being an erroneous recital as to location of the property—Livingston v. Stevens (Iowa) 94 N. W. 925.

60. A chattel mortgage on a street railroad constructed and to be constructed covers additions which become an essential part of the road, though the property added was furnished under a contract that the title must remain in the seller until paid for—Westinghouse Elec. Mfg. Co. v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 334, 68 S. W. 463. Under a mortgage on stock that the mortgagor might have from time to time to secure advances up to a certain value for a year, stock purchased within the year and after the stock in existence at the time of the execution of the mortgage was destroyed by fire, are covered by the mortgage—Cooper v. Rouse, 130 N. C. 202.

61. Burford v. First Nat. Bank (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 78.

62, 63. In re Sentenne, etc., Co., 120 Fed. 436.

64. E. A. Godfrey & Sons Co. v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Neb.) 90 N. W. 239.

65, 66. Christian Feigenspan v. Mulligan (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 1124.

67. Bostick v. Ammons, 63 S. C. 302.

68. Bell v. Mulholland, 90 Mo. App. 612; Adams v. Moody, 91 Mo. App. 41; Coleman v. Cole, 96 Mo. App. 22.

69. Adams v. Moody, 91 Mo. App. 41.

eration for a mortgage, the mortgagee may not recover where the property covered is turned over to another in satisfaction of a valid claim.[70]

§ 4. Fraudulent conveyances.—A mortgage allowing possession to remain in the mortgagor with authority to sell in the usual course of business is void as to creditors,[71] unless the mortgage requires the application of the proceeds to the debt,[72] but not where the proceeds are used to pay other creditors.[73] The failure to take possession or record will postpone the mortgage to claims of creditors.[74] Creditors intended by a statute making a mortgage void as to creditors where possession is retained are those who have legally fastened a lien or charge upon the property.[75] Between the parties it is valid.[76] Under the New Jersey chattel mortgage act, invalidating mortgages where possession is retained by the mortgagee, unless an affidavit of consideration is filed, the affidavit should show that the affiant is the holder of the mortgage, or his agent or attorney.[77] The affidavit may not be made by an agent or attorney, unless the agency relates to the holding of the mortgage,[78] and the mortgagor is not permitted to act as agent of the holder.[79] A mortgagee of after acquired property is not entitled to priority as against a subsequent mortgage, where at the time of the later mortgage he had not taken possession.[80] The mortgagee's possession must be actual, constructive possession not being sufficient as against creditors.[81] Possession may be taken at any time before the rights of third persons intervene.[82] Reasonable dispatch is required, and it is a question of fact whether reasonable dispatch has been exercised.[83] An oral agreement that a mortgage should secure future advances to the mortgagor is void as to creditors.[84]

§ 5. Form, execution and delivery.—Strictness of form is not required.[85] As between the parties, it is not necessary that the mortgage should be in writing.[86] The clearest evidence is required to show that an instrument, in form a bill of sale, is in reality a mortgage.[87] In Kentucky a seal is not required where the mort-

70. Hezel v. Schatz (S. D.) 95 N. W. 926.

71. Enck v. Gerding, 67 Ohio St. 245; Stevens v. Curran (Mont.) 72 Pac. 753.

72. State v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 94 Mo. App. 184; Burford v. First Nat. Bank (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 78. Retention of possession will invalidate a mortgage given within four months of bankruptcy though it requires payment of proceeds on mortgage—Egan State Bank v. Rice (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 107.

73. Bank of Liberal v. Anderson (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 189.

74. 2 Gen. St. p. 2113—Hardcastle v. Stiles (N. J. Law) 55 Atl. 104. Comp. St. 1899, c. 32, § 14—Johnson v. Spaulding (Neb.) 95 N. W. 808; Hillebrand v. Nelson (Neb.) 95 N. W. 1068.

75. Folsom v. Peru Plow Co. (Neb.) 95 N. W. 635.

76. Rev. St. Mo. 1899, §§ 3307, 3404, invalidating mortgages not recorded in the county where the mortgagor resides applies only as to creditors and purchasers—Bagley v. Harmon, 91 Mo. App. 22.

77, 78, 79. Watson v. Rowley, 63 N. J. Eq. 195.

80. New England Nat. Bank v. Northwestern Nat. Bank, 171 Mo. 307.

81. In this case the mortgagee merely laid his hands on the articles covered by the mortgage saying that they were his property and that he demanded and took possession but removed nothing and the mortgagor continued to use the property in connection with his business—Sloan v. National Surety Co., 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 417; Rice v. Sally (Mo.) 75 S. W. 398. The requirement is not satisfied where the attorney of the mortgagee goes to the tenant of the mortgagor and states to him that he takes possession of the property, and requests him not to allow it to pass out of his hands without some authority (3 Rev. St. [9th Ed.] p. 2013)—Wild v. Porter, 173 N. Y. 614. Evidence insufficient to show a bona fide change of possession under an unrecorded mortgage—Rice v. Sally (Mo.) 75 S. W. 398.

82. McFarlan Carriage Co. v. Wells (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 878.

83. Hardcastle v. Stiles (N. J. Law) 55 Atl. 104.

84. F. Gross & Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 402.

85. Davis v. Turner (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 605. Under a statute requiring a mortgage to be in writing the fact that the parties used a form suitable to another kind of mortgage and failed to strike out an irrelevant provision will not invalidate—Harris v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 67 S. W. 327.

86. Reiss v. Argubright (Neb.) 92 N. W. 988.

87. Powers v. Benson (Iowa) 94 N. W. 929. Evidence of insolvency of a firm is admissible in a suit to have a bill of sale of plaintiff's interest in the firm to defendant declared security for the firm's indebtedness to defendant, as corroborating plaintiff's statement that the bill was merely intended to secure defendant on account of the firm's indebtedness to him—Donnelly v. McArdle, 117 N. Y. St. Rep. 193.

gage is otherwise properly executed.[88] In some states joint execution by husband and wife is required where the mortgage covers exempt property[89] and household goods.[90] A mortgage obtained by duress[91] or imposition[92] is invalid. Failure of mortgagor to read the instrument will not defeat the title of a purchaser at a foreclosure sale.[93] New Jersey requires an affidavit of consideration which must show how the relation of debtor and creditor arose,[94] and a mortgage, invalid as against a creditor for failure of affidavit, is void as against an assignee under the assignment laws.[95] In South Dakota the acknowledgment of the receipt of a copy of the mortgage must be indorsed on the mortgage over the mortgagor's signature,[96] and this defect may be attacked by subsequent mortgagees and attaching creditors.[97] As between the parties, a chattel mortgage is not invalid by failure to attach the affidavit of good faith required by the laws of Idaho.[98] This statute only invalidates the mortgage against subsequent creditors and purchasers in good faith.[99] The Illinois act requiring the mortgage to state on its face the fact of security for notes does not apply where the mortgage is held by the mortgagee, the purpose of the act being to regulate the assignment of the notes.[1] The question as to whether a mortgage is to be construed in connection with other collateral agreements affecting its character is one for the jury.[2] A mortgage signed by a member of a firm without authority or knowledge of his partners is not binding on the other partners, where delivered after dissolution of the firm and knowledge of the facts by mortgagee.[3] Mortgages valid in the state of execution will be considered valid in other states.[4]

Acknowledgment and extension.—An unacknowledged chattel mortgage is valid as between the parties.[5] In Illinois a mortgage is properly acknowledged before a justice in the town where a corporation has its office, within the statute requiring

88. Burkamp v. Healey, 24 Ky. L. R. 1926, 72 S. W. 759.

89. Gen. St. 1901, § 4255—Searle v. Gregg (Kan.) 72 Pac. 544; Alexander v. Logan, 65 Kan. 505, 70 Pac. 339; Kindall v. Lincoln Hardware & Implement Co. (Idaho) 70 Pac. 1056.

Foreclosure of mortgage executed by the husband alone will be restrained by injunction—Kindall v. Lincoln Hardware & Implement Co. (Idaho) 70 Pac. 1056. The Iowa laws providing for joinder of husband and wife in the mortgage of exempt property, do not require that the husband and wife both join in the acknowledgment where it has been signed by both (Code Iowa, § 2906)—Brown v. Koenig (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 407.

90. 2 Gen. St. p. 2111, § 41—Dunham v. Cramer, 63 N. J. Eq. 151. The New Jersey Statute requiring the signature of the mortgagor's wife to a mortgage covering household goods has no application where it is not shown that the goods were in the use and possession of the family in that state—Id. It is void as to creditors independent of the question of bad faith or intent to defraud—Id.

91. Sufficiency of evidence to sustain allegation of duress—Iowa Sav. Bank v. Frink (Neb.) 92 N. W. 916; Reichle v. Bentele, 97 Mo. App. 52. There is duress invalidating chattel mortgage where a wife executes the mortgage for her husband's debt under a threat to seize the stock on the farm and sell same at forced sale—Searle v. Gregg (Kan.) 72 Pac. 544.

92. Mis-reading instrument to illiterate and concealing its nature—Layson v. Cooper (Mo.) 73 S. W. 472. A chattel mortgage will be cancelled where mortgagor was imposed upon by representations that the instrument was a conditional contract of sale—W. W. Kimball Co. v. Deaton (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 427. Evidence that the property included in the mortgage did not belong to mortgagor, held admissible to support contention of plaintiff that he, an illiterate, was imposed upon and the mortgage was not correctly read to him—Id.

93. Jumiska v. Andrews, 87 Minn. 515; Forker v. Crockett (Iowa) 92 N. W. 76.

94. Dunham v. Cramer, 63 N. J. Eq. 151.

95. Watson v. Rowley, 63 N. J. Eq. 195.

96. Acknowledgment below mortgagor's signature is not sufficient (L. 197, c. 95, § 2)—Park v. Robinson, 15 S. D. 551.

97. Park v. Robinson, 15 S. D. 551.

98. Rev. St. 1887, § 3380—Marchand v. Ronaghan (Idaho) 72 Pac. 731. An affidavit otherwise sufficient will satisfy the law, though the word "defraud" is omitted (Rev. St. Idaho, § 3386) Deseret Nat. Bank v. Kidman, 25 Utah, 379, 71 Pac. 873.

99. Deseret Nat. Bank v. Kidman, 25 Utah, 379, 71 Pac. 873.

1. Laws 1895, p. 260—Smith v. Schey, 101 Ill. App. 223.

2. Hargadine, etc., Co. v. Bradley (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 862.

3. Meyer v. Michaels (Neb.) 95 N. W. 63.

4. Brown v. Koenig (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 407.

5. McFarlan Carriage Co. v. Wells (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 878; Brown v. Koenig (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 407.

acknowledgment before a justice in the town of the mortgagor's residence.[6] The statute of that state governing the extension of chattel mortgages is to be strictly construed, where the rights of third parties are involved, as the statute is in derogation of the common law of pledges.[7] The failure to file the affidavit with the justice will defeat an extension.[8] The act was intended only for the protection of innocent parties, and is not required as between the parties.[9] In determining whether the affidavit was filed in time, days of grace are considered.[10] One becoming a general creditor after renewal cannot take advantage of failure to renew the mortgage within thirty days preceding the expiration of the year from the time of its record.[11]

§ 6. Filing or recording and notice of title or rights.—Recording acts include all conveyances intended to operate as mortgages.[12] They do not affect the validity of the instrument as between the parties.[13] A mortgage covering both real and personal property is valid as against creditors as to the personalty only where filed as a chattel mortgage.[14] In Texas unrecorded chattel mortgages are void which cover both exempt and nonexempt property.[15] Under the Colorado assignment law, saving valid and subsisting liens, an unrecorded mortgage is void and not entitled to preference.[16] Where the mortgagee takes possession before other rights attach, it is not important that the mortgage was not recorded.[17] In some states a chattel mortgage must be recorded in the county of the owner's residence, if he has a place of residence in the state,[18] though the property is in another county.[19] In other states it may be recorded in the county where the property is situated or in the county of the mortgagor's residence, if he lives in the state.[20] In Nebraska there can be no sale of mortgaged chattels in a county other than that in which the mortgage was originally filed, unless the mortgage is also filed in the county of sale.[21] Under the California statute requiring record in the county where the property is situated, a mortgage on property situated in more than one county and recorded in one only of such counties is valid only as to the property in the county of record.[22] The mortgage must be recorded within a reasonable time,[23] where

6. Gilbert v. Sprague, 196 Ill. 444.

7, 8. Griffen v. Henry, 99 Ill. App. 284.

9. Allcock v. Loy, 100 Ill. App. 573.

10. Gilbert v. Sprague, 196 Ill. 444.

11. Baker v. Becker (Kan.) 72 Pac. 860.

12. Dunham v. Cramer, 63 N. J. Eq. 151; Clark v. Baker (Colo.) 69 Pac. 506; Chitwood v. Lanyon Zinc Co., 93 Mo. App. 225. A lease binding the property of lessee for the payment of the rent—Feller v. McKillip (Mo App.) 75 S. W. 379.

13. In re Williams, 120 Fed. 542; Warner v. Warner (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 760; Allcock v. Loy, 100 Ill. App. 573; McFarlan Carriage Co. v. Wells (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 878. The instrument is not void as to one who takes the mortgaged property under a mistaken belief of his own ownership of it (Gen. St. 1901, § 4244)—Drumm-Flato Commission Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 65 Kan. 746, 70 Pac. 874. An unrecorded mortgage good between the parties is good as against the mortgagor's assignee for the benefit of creditors—In re Thompson, 122 Fed. 174.

14. Hillebrand v. Nelson (Neb.) 95 N. W. 1068.

15. Baughn v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 207.

16. Clark v. Baker (Colo.) 69 Pac. 506.

17. First Nat. Bank v. Barse Live Stock Commission Co., 198 Ill. 232.

18. Day & C. Lumber Co. v. Mack, 24 Ky. L. R. 640, 69 S. W. 712. A purchaser at the foreclosure of an agister's lien is protected against a mortgage of the stock recorded in a county other than the one in which mortgagor resides—Duke v. Duke, 93 Mo. App. 244.

19. Rev. St. Mo. 1899, § 3404—Rice v. Sally (Mo.) 75 S. W. 398. In New York must be filed in the towns where members of partnership reside (Laws 1833, p. 402, c. 279, § 2) —Russell v. St. Mark, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 543.

20. Bank v. Bond, 64 Kan. 346, 67 Pac. 818. In the county of mortgagor's residence, must show that a mortgagor was a resident of the county in which the mortgage was filed and not that in which plaintiff's mortgage was filed—Hockaday-Gray Co. v. Jonett (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 71.

21. McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Preitauer (Neb.) 91 N. W. 499.

22. Civ. Code Cal. §§ 2959, 2962—Guras v. Porter, 118 Fed. 668.

23. Dunham v. Cramer, 63 N. J. Eq. 151. The question of the validity of a mortgage, withheld from record for sixteen months, is a question of fact for the jury where the evidence is conflicting as to whether it was so withheld by agreement of the parties—E. A. Godfrey & Sons Co. v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Neb.) 90 N. W. 239.

the statute fails to fix the time for record,[24] and is effective as notice only from the time of record.[25] Texas requires a filing forthwith.[26] Where the record on the removal of goods to another jurisdiction would be useless, it is not required, and failure so to record will not be regarded as a badge of fraud.[27] A trustee in bankruptcy attacking it for failure to record must show that there was an agreement to withhold or that prejudice resulted to creditors therefrom.[28] The question of the priority of a mortgage filed in bankruptcy proceedings and withheld from record for an unreasonable time is to be determined by the statutes of the state where the mortgage was executed.[29] A variance between a copy of a chattel mortgage filed for record and the original, to be fatal, must be in some material part.[30] The record to be notice should show correct names of the parties.[31] Whether the record of a chattel mortgage is constructive notice under the statute depends on the sufficiency of the description.[32] Under the laws of New Jersey a mortgage is invalid where recorded in the wrong book, and it is not material on the question of validity whether the negligence was that of the mortgagee or of the clerk.[33] A mortgagee under a mortgage, void as to a portion of the property for failure to record, has the burden of proving the property as to which the mortgage is valid.[34] Under acts invalidating unrecorded mortgages as against creditors, the reasons for withholding the mortgage from record are not important.[35]

Notice of title or rights.—A purchaser of mortgaged property after the making and filing of a mortgage on such property takes subject to the mortgage.[36] One who gives credit without notice of a prior lien is not affected by the lien of an unrecorded mortgage.[37] One having knowledge of a prior unrecorded mortgage takes subject thereto.[38] A creditor is not required to examine the records in another state for mortgages on his debtor's property.[39] There is notice to put mortgagee on inquiry where the mortgagor informs mortgagees that a prior mortgage was

24. Rev. St. Wis. 1898, §§ 2313, 2314—In re H. G. Andrae Co., 117 Fed. 561.

25. Rev. L. c. 198, § 1—Harrison v. J. J. Warren Co. (Mass.) 66 N. E. 589.

26. Austin v. Welch (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 881. Requirement is not satisfied where the mortgagee takes the mortgage at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and at 5 o'clock of the same afternoon passes the clerk's office without filing, the filing taking place on the next day—Id.

27. Foster v. McAlester (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 145. Under the Texas law requiring record within four months after the goods have been removed from the county where the mortgage was taken, the mortgagee loses his rights as against a subsequent purchaser in another state to which the goods were removed after their surreptitious return to Texas notwithstanding the mortgage could not have been recorded in such other state—Greene v. Bentley (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 112.

28. Deland v. Miller & Chaney Bank (Iowa) 93 N. W. 304.

29. In re H. G. Andrae Co., 117 Fed. 561.

30. Central Nat. Bank v. Brecheisen, 65 Kan. 807, 70 Pac. 895.

31. A. W. Dixon, not notice that J. W. Dixon was mortgagor—Johnson v. Wilson (Ala.) 34 So. 392.

32. Code, § 2468—Hardaway v. Jones (Va.) 41 S. E. 957.

33. Gen. St. p. 2113, § 52—Knickerbocker Trust Co. v. Penn Cordage Co. (N. J. Ch.) 55 Atl. 231.

34. Guras v. Porter, 118 Fed. 668.

35. Rev. St. 1899, § 3404—Harrison v. South Carthage Min. Co., 95 Mo. App. 80.

36. Huber v. Ehlers, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 602; Woods v. Rose, 135 Ala. 297. Constructive notice of a chattel mortgage is not furnished by a mortgage made by one not the owner of the property or by one using a fictitious name—New England Nat. Bank v. Northwestern Nat. Bank, 171 Mo. 307.

37. Westinghouse Elec. Mfg. Co. v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 334, 68 S. W. 463; Richards v. Jewett (Iowa) 92 N. W. 689. Failure to file or record is not fraud on creditors in the absence of an agreement that the mortgage was not to be recorded or that the creditors were induced to give credit on the faith that no mortgage was in existence—Miller-Arthur Drug Co. v. Curtis (Mo. App.) 67 S. W. 712. A purchaser without notice of the subject matter will take free from the lien of an unregistered mortgage—McArthur v. Mathis (N. C.) 45 S. E. 530.

38. Russell v. St. Mark, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 543; Burford v. First Nat. Bank (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 78; Reiss v. Argubright (Neb.) 92 N. W. 988. One knowing that another was engaged in the business under a business name and had executed a mortgage under such name who purchases at an execution sale of such mortgaged property against such party in his individual name is not a bona fide purchaser—Crawford v. Benoist, 97 Mo. App. 219.

39. Syck v. Bossingham (Iowa) 94 N. W. 920.

given without consideration and to protect him against creditors.[40] Persons who may avail themselves of failure to file or record a mortgage must have an interest in the property such as lienors, judgment creditors, officers, etc.[41] A statute invalidating an unrecorded mortgage as against creditors invalidates a mortgage as against an execution on the property, notwithstanding the judgment debt was in existence at the time of the execution of the mortgage.[42] One defending against a defectively executed mortgage, on the ground that he is a good-faith purchaser, must plead such defense,[43] and has the burden of proof.[44] A mortgagee is under no obligation to a subsequent incumbrancer to care for and protect the security, where he has no notice of the later incumbrance.[45]

§ 7. Title and ownership.—In South Dakota the legal title of the mortgaged property is in the mortgagor, though he has defaulted and delivered possession.[46] In other states a mortgagee, on failure of the mortgagor to pay the debt at maturity, has an absolute title to the property, subject only to the right of the mortgagor to redeem,[47] and the property may not be levied on for mortgagor's debt.[48] The mortgagor in possession is the general owner of the property in law; his ownership rests on the equitable right to clothe himself with the full legal title.[49] The mortgagee's title is special, so that until the right of redemption is extinguished, his property interest is limited to the amount due.[50] A second mortgagee cannot recover for conversion against the first mortgagee in possession, unless the property was worth more than the amount due on the first mortgage.[51] The fact that a mortgage authorized the mortgagor to remain in possession of wood mortgaged and use the same does not authorize him to sell such wood.[52] A mortgage of a trade-mark and a formula for a remedy, the mortgagor giving the secret formula to be used in case it became necessary to foreclose, conveys the right to manufacture and sell the preparation under the trade-name, though the act under which the trade-mark was registered was later declared invalid.[53]

§ 8. Right of possession.—The mortgagee is entitled to possession of the property after condition broken,[54] without the consent of the mortgagor,[55] and may maintain replevin.[56] In Iowa a mortgage may stipulate for possession to be taken whenever the mortgagee chooses to do so.[57] A mortgagee taking possession of property in any other manner than that provided by statute is guilty of conversion.[58] A mortgage may allow possession to be taken for an unreasonable depreciation of the value of the mortgaged property,[59] and the mortgagor on account of a contem-

40. Salmon v. Norris, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 892.

41. Allcock v. Loy, 100 Ill. App. 573. The Texas statute protecting subsequent purchasers intends only purchasers by contract and does not include a purchaser in attachment proceedings—Scott v. Cox (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 802.

42. Pierson v. Hickey (S. D.) 91 N. W. 339.

43, 44. Deseret Nat. Bank v. Kidman, 25 Utah, 379, 71 Pac. 873.

45. Penney v. Miller (Ala.) 33 So. 668.

46. This case held that the mortgagor could properly sue on an attachment bond where a third party levied on the mortgagor's interest and the action was dismissed—Jencks v. Murphy, 15 S. D. 425.

47. Klinkert v. Fulton Storage Co., 113 Wis. 493; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Alexander Stewart Lumber Co. (Wis.) 94 N. W. 777. Rev. St. 1892, § 3206a—St. Mary's Mach. Co. v. National Supply Co. (Ohio) 67 N. E. 1055; Western Realty Co. v. Musser, 97 Mo. App. 114.

48. Anderson v. Montgomery County Nat. Bank, 64 Kan. 587, 67 Pac. 1110. Notwithstanding possession by mortgagor long after note becomes due—Burge v. Hunter, 93 Mo. App. 639.

49, 50. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Alexander Stewart Lumber Co. (Wis.) 94 N. W. 777.

51. Dempster Mill Mfg. Co. v. Wright (Neb.) 95 N. W. 806.

52. Meyer v. Munro (Idaho) 71 Pac. 969.

53. Tuttle v. Blow (Mo.) 75 S. W. 617.

54. Edmonston v. Jones, 96 Mo. App. 83; Elston v. Roop, 133 Ala. 331.

55. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Rios (Tex.) 71 S. W. 275.

56. Feller v. McKillip (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 379.

57. Hocking Val. Coal Co. v. Climie (Iowa) 92 N. W. 77.

58. Marchand v. Ronaghan (Idaho) 72 Pac. 731.

59. An instruction that depreciation means such depreciation as impairs any clause of the security and prevents it from being as good as when the mortgage is plated removal to another location may not reduce the stock substantially,[60] nor live out of the goods to an unreasonable extent.[61] Rights under insecurity clause of mortgage must not be arbitrarily exercised.[62] The facts authorizing possession under an insecurity clause must be such as did not exist at the time of taking the mortgage, or, if they did, mortgagee was ignorant of the same.[63] Under an insecurity clause in New York, a party may take possession where there has been a failure to comply with the condition of the mortgage as to payment.[64] A first mortgagee is entitled to possession under an insecurity clause as against a second mortgagee, though his debt has not matured while that of the second mortgagee is past due.[65] A mortgagee unreasonably delaying to take possession loses his lien.[66] A wrongful seizure of the property by the mortgagor will not affect the mortgagee's rights under a possession previously taken.[67] A sale of goods by a vendor after default of the vendee under a bill of sale intended as a mortgage operates as a conversion.[68] A refusal by the mortgagor to yield possession on demand after default amounts to a conversion, where the mortgage authorizes possession on default.[69] Where the terms of a mortgage entitle a mortgagee to a crop at the time it was converted, it is not important that the mortgagee had not foreclosed his mortgage.[70] For withholding possession of mortgaged property after maturity of the mortgage debt, the mortgagee's recovery is limited to the amount due on the mortgage.[71] One selling mortgaged property and disbursing the proceeds is liable for the proceeds, though not in possession.[72] A mortgagee allowing a mortgagor to remain in possession and sell at private sale and account for the proceeds may not take possession and sell under the mortgage.[73] The character of possession under conflicting evidence is a question for the jury.[74]

§ 9. Liens and priorities; waiver.—A chattel mortgage takes precedence of a later agister's claim.[75] A factor's mortgage lien will protect a balance due the factor, where the proceeds of shipments have been partially applied on other accounts at the principal's request.[76] Release of a surety on a note and the taking of a new given, was held too restrictive—Krebs v. Zumwalt, 91 Mo. App. 404. What constitutes an unreasonable depreciation is a question for the jury—Id.

60, 61. Krebs v. Zumwalt, 91 Mo. App. 404.

62. Meyer v. Michaels (Neb.) 95 N. W. 63. The exercise of the right is authorized where the mortgagor is about to do some act tending to impair the security of the mortgage, as where a sale of a substantial part of the property covered is made without the consent of the mortgagee—Allen v. Cerny (Neb.) 94 N. W. 151.

63. Meyer v. Michaels (Neb.) 95 N. W. 63.

64. Stage v. Van Leuven, 112 N. Y. St. Rep. 960.

65. Russell v. St. Mark, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 543.

66. Pfirshing v. Peterson, 98 Ill. App. 70.

67. First Nat. Bank v. Barse Live Stock Commission Co., 198 Ill. 232.

68. Frick v. Kabaker, 116 Iowa, 494.

69. Mathew v. Mathew, 138 Cal. 334, 71 Pac. 344. A conversion defeating the mortgagee's right to the property is not excused by the fact that for several years previous an agent of the mortgagee had sanctioned such conversion—First Nat. Bank v. Minneapolis & N. Elevator Co., 11 N. D. 280.

70. La Rue v. St. Anthony & D. Elevator Co. (S. D.) 95 N. W. 292. Under a stipulation that there need be no delivery if mortgagor failed to raise more than ten bushels per acre, mortgagee's testimony that judging from the looks of the crop it must have been considerably over that amount, is sufficient proof of that fact in the absence of other evidence on the question—Id. There is sufficient evidence to establish the grade of wheat raised on certain land where the grade of one load taken from the tract is shown and there is no conflicting evidence on that point—Id.

71. Klinkert v. Fulton Storage Co., 113 Wis. 493; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Alexander Stewart Lumber Co. (Wis.) 94 N. W. 777; Anderson v. B. T. Adams & Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 982. And not the damages for loss of use thereof, unless it is shown that he could have used it if it had not been withheld—Klinkert v. Fulton Storage Co., 113 Wis. 493. In Virginia, the trustee is entitled to recover the hire of animals from the time of demand—Hardaway v. Jones (Va.) 41 S. E. 957.

72. City Nat. Bank v. Goodloe-McClelland Commission Co., 93 Mo. App. 123.

73. F. Groos & Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 402.

74. E. A. Godfrey & Sons Co. v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Neb.) 90 N. W. 239.

75. The fact that the mortgagee ratified one contract of agistment with the mortgagor will not bind him to other agreements between the mortgagor and agister—Harding v. Kelso, 91 Mo. App. 607.

76. In re Williams, 120 Fed. 542.

note by the purchaser of a note, secured by mortgage on stock, will not affect the lien of the mortgage on such stock.[77] The Alabama agricultural lien law, making the lien paramount, protects one becoming a landlord by reason of tenant's default under a contract of purchase, as against one becoming a mortgagee before the default, where the mortgagee was not an innocent purchaser.[78] The rule in Illinois, giving purchase-money mortgages priority, only applies to purchase-money mortgages on realty,[79] yet a mortgagee in that state is charged with notice of the terms on which the purchase of the mortgaged property was made, and of all facts of which he is put on inquiry.[80] The right to rescind a sale is superior to a mortgage to secure a debt contracted before sale sought to be rescinded,[81] but is inferior to right of mortgage where debt created after sale,[82] and party seeking rescission has burden of proof that mortgagee knew of the buyer's fraud or that the debt was created before the sale.[83] Equity has jurisdiction of an action to decree as to priority between chattel mortgages, the remedy at law being inadequate.[84] In Missouri it is held that the renewal of a loan and the execution of a new mortgage to secure the same will not affect the priority of the original mortgage.[85] A waiver of a mortgage lien need not be in writing.[86] Where a waiver of a lien amounts to an estoppel in favor of subsequent purchasers, it is no objection that there was no consideration therefor.[87] A mortgagee does not waive his mortgage lien by attaching the property.[88] A waiver of a mortgage lien by the mortgagee may be shown in an action by the mortgagee for the recovery of mortgaged property bought by defendant from the mortgagor.[89]

§ 10. Disposal of the property by mortgagor.—While the general property in chattels remains in the mortgagor, he may sell the same subject to the mortgage,[90] and the purchaser is estopped to question its validity.[91] The sale of the mortgaged property by consent of mortgagee invests purchaser with title free of the lien.[92] A mortgagee cannot recover for conversion as against a purchaser of the mortgaged property, where both instruments are void under the bankruptcy law and the conversion was merely technical.[93] The New York Penal Code, punishing the seller of mortgaged property, requires proof of an intent to defraud thereby.[94] The Mississippi Code, making the offense consist of the sale without consent of the mortgagee and without discharging incumbrances immediately, is not violated by a sale without paying the debt, where the debt is not due at the time of the sale.[95] In a prosecution for selling mortgaged property and representing it free from incumbrance, an averment that the seller knew that a certain corporation had a mort-

77. Mayers v. McNeese (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 68.

78. British & A. Mortg. Co. v. Cody, 135 Ala. 622.

79. Clark v. Woodruff, 100 Ill. App. 18.

80. Jones v. Glathart, 100 Ill. App. 630.

81, 82, 83. George D. Mashburn & Co. v. Dannenberg Co. (Ga.) 44 S. E. 97.

84. Salmon v. Norris, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 892.

85. Drovers' Live Stock Commission Co. v. Wilson County Bank, 95 Mo. App. 251.

86. Livingston v. Stevens (Iowa) 94 N. W. 925.

87. Livingston v. Heck (Iowa) 94 N. W. 1098.

88. First Nat. Bank v. Johnson (Neb.) 94 N. W. 837.

89. In this case evidence of prior and subsequent transactions between mortgagee and mortgagor showed that mortgagor was authorized to sell property and account to the mortgagee for the proceeds—Livingston v. Stevens (Iowa) 94 N. W. 925.

90. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Alexander Stewart Lumber Co. (Wis.) 94 N. W. 777.

91. In re Standard Laundry Co. (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 476.

92. It is not important that the mortgagor does not at the time know of the consent—Livingston v. Stevens (Iowa) 94 N. W. 925.

93. Stanley v. Southwick (Iowa) 94 N. W. 1120.

94. In this case the mortgage authorized an election to consider the debt entirely due on a removal without written consent. There was a removal but the mortgagee with knowledge accepted payment in installments. A later removal of the goods was made to another state and when requested to make further payments, the mortgagor informed the mortgagee of his location and made further payments—People v. Staton, 114 N. Y. St. Rep. 2.

95. State v. Sullivan, 80 Miss. 596.

gage on the property is sufficiently explicit to admit proof of such mortgage.[96] It is no defense that the prosecuting witness could have protected himself by examining the records.[97]

§ 11. Assignment of the mortgage.—The assignment of a note carries with it a chattel mortgage executed as security therefor.[98] A mortgagee transferring part of the mortgage debt is not thereby made a trustee for his assignee, except as to collections over his debt, but is bound to act in good faith to his assignee,[99] and is guilty of a conversion where he collects only a portion of his debt and permits an impairment of the property.[1] The assignee is estopped to impeach the mortgage debt.[2] The assignee of a chattel mortgage may maintain an action for the mortgaged property.[3] The assignee of a portion of a mortgage debt may, in a bill to compel an accounting, enforce a claim as to a second mortgage acquired by him.[4] On the question of title to a mortgage, bought from a corporation, the minutes of the directors' meeting reciting sale by the directors in connection with the by-laws of the corporation, vesting this power in the directors, is admissible.[5] Generally, the assignee of a mortgage on goods procured under fraudulent sale stands in the position of the mortgagee as to the seller.[6]

§ 12. Payment and discharge.—Payment of a mortgage indebtedness to the original mortgagee before due is at the peril of the party making the payment,[7] particularly where the mortgage does not expressly or by implication authorize the mortgagee to receive payment after transfer of the security.[8] Payments by mortgagor will ordinarily amount to payment satisfying the mortgage and not a sale of the mortgage.[9] Where mortgagee takes the goods under the mortgage and retains them instead of selling them, the debt is paid to the extent of the value of the goods taken.[10] A mortgagee paying off a prior mortgage may require the assignment of such mortgage to him.[11] The vendee of a mortgagor required to pay off the mortgage is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee in any other security he may have for the payment of the mortgage debt.[12] He may compel application of payments on the mortgage without reference to any agreement between mortgagor and mortgagee to which he is not a party.[13] Recitals in the mortgage as to order of payment will control.[14]

In states imposing a penalty for failure to satisfy of record, a mortgagee cannot assign the mortgage after it has been paid so as to avoid the penalty.[15] Notice to a corporation and its president to have all mortgages paid by the mortgagee satisfied of record is sufficient.[16] In an action therefor, a plea that defendant did not own the mortgage is insufficient, without alleging a transfer prior to its payment.[17] A recovery may not be had where there has been merely a tender of pay-

96, 97. Keyes v. People, 100 Ill. App. 163.

98. Swift v. Bank of Washington (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 643; Penney v. Miller (Ala.) 33 So. 668.

99, 1, 2. Penney v. Miller (Ala.) 33 So. 668.

3. Clem v. Wise, 133 Ala. 403.

4. Penney v. Miller (Ala.) 33 So. 668.

5. Clem v. Wise, 133 Ala. 403.

6. George D. Mashburn & Co. v. Dannenberg Co. (Ga.) 44 S. E. 97.

7. Swift v. Bank of Washington (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 643.

8. City Nat. Bank v. Goodloe-McClelland Commission Co., 93 Mo. App. 123. Payment is at his risk though the mortgage provides that when the mortgaged property is ready for market it should be consigned to mortgagee and the proceeds applied to the debt—Swift v. Bank of Washington (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 643.

9. A purchase of notes and not a payment is shown, where the person claiming to purchase gave his check payable to bearer and intrusted it to the mortgagor for delivery to the custodian, the purchaser testifying positively that he bought the notes—Powers v. McKnight (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 549.

10. M. Groh's Sons v. Feldman, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 303; Babcock v. Wells, 25 R. I. 23.

11. Williams Bros. Co. v. Hanmer (Mich.) 94 N. W. 176.

12, 13. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Alexander Stewart Lumber Co. (Wis.) 94 N. W. 777. A release of a mortgage on consideration that the proceeds of sale be applied on the debt may be enforced—California Wine-Makers' Corp. v. Sciaroni (Cal.) 72 Pac. 990.

14. Rice v. Davis (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 431.

15, 16, 17. Dothan Guano Co. v. Ward, 132 Ala. 380.

ment and the amount due is brought into court with the suit.[18] The mortgage is admissible, though it describes the note as due at an impossible date by reason of failure to fill a blank.[19] The construction of the statute may not be submitted to the jury.[20]

An erroneous satisfaction of a mortgage may be canceled.[21] A purchaser of mortgaged property, obtaining a release from the mortgagee on the property bought, is protected against liens of the mortgagee on the remainder of the mortgaged property.[22]

§ 13. Redemption.—A mortgagor is not excused from making a tender of the amount necessary to redeem by the fact that the property has been attached.[23] A tender conditional on the property being returned to the place from which it was taken is insufficient.[24]

§ 14. Foreclosure.—Jurisdiction of equity to adjudicate as to the rights of parties to a chattel mortgage is not defeated by a stipulation for foreclosure by advertisement.[25] In Oklahoma a mortgage may be foreclosed by sale of property in the manner prescribed by the mortgage or by proceedings under the civil code,[26] and probate courts have jurisdiction where the debt is within the jurisdictional amount.[27] A federal court is not deprived of jurisdiction to foreclose because the mortgagee could take possession and sell under the state statute.[28] A receiver may be appointed.[29] A creditor may maintain a suit to foreclose in his own name, though the mortgage is taken by a third person named as a trustee of the creditor.[30] A judgment for the debt or for the value of property cannot be entered against one made a party to the foreclosure action by reason of his being in joint possession of the property,[31] nor will it be granted where the property is destroyed or so changed as to be impossible of identification.[32] The Iowa Code allows a decree in a chattel mortgage foreclosure to direct the issuance of special executions to different counties,[33] and such decree cannot be collaterally attacked, though the mortgage provides for its sale in the home county.[34] An appellate court will reverse a judgment in an action of foreclosure, where it is clearly apparent that the judgment is for an insufficient amount.[35] A mortgagee selling mortgaged property must show that conditions have been broken so as to warrant the sale,[36] and the question depends upon the conditions and their performance by the mortgagor and not on facts occurring at the execution of the mortgage.[37] A mortgagee in possession who sells without special compliance with the statute must account to subsequent lien

18. Hamaker v. Bynum (Ala.) 34 So. 405. A purchaser of mortgaged property from the mortgagor whose mortgage secured a nonnegotiable note making payment to the original payee may make the same defense against the transferee of the mortgage that he could have made against the mortgagee —City Nat. Bank v. Gunter Bros. (Kan.) 72 Pac. 842.

19. Long Bros. v. Jennings (Ala.) 33 So. 857.

20. Dothan Guano Co. v. Ward, 132 Ala. 380.

21. Frost v. George, 181 Mass. 271. One taking mortgaged property subject to mortgage, and marked paid on the record by mistake, and who has paid nothing for the mortgage, may not testify as to statements of the vendor that the mortgage was paid, it not being shown that such purchaser relied on such statements—Id.

22. Drumm-Flato Commission Co. v. Barnard (Kan.) 72 Pac. 257.

23. Marsden v. Walsh (R. I.) 52 Atl. 684.

24. Gen. L. c. 207, § 13—Marsden v. Walsh (R. I.) 52 Atl. 684.

25. Meeker v. Waldron (Neb.) 90 N. W. 755.

26. Pettee v. John Deere Plow Co., 11 Okl. 467, 68 Pac. 735.

27. Stahl v. Wade, 11 Okl. 483, 69 Pac. 301.

28. H. B. Claflin Co. v. Furtick, 119 Fed. 429.

29. H. B. Claflin Co. v. Furtick, 119 Fed. 429; Haggard v. Sanglin (Wash.) 71 Pac. 711; Tuttle v. Blow (Mo.) 75 S. W. 617.

30. H. B. Claflin Co. v. Furtick, 119 Fed. 429.

31. McLain v. McCollum (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 1027.

32. Flanagan Bank v. Graham, 42 Or. 403, 71 Pac. 137, 790.

33. Code, §§ 3772, 3955—King v. Nelson (Iowa) 94 N. W. 1095.

34. King v. Nelson (Iowa) 94 N. W. 1095.

35. Marchand v. Ronaghan (Idaho) 72 Pac. 731.

36, 37. Davis v. Bowers Granite Co. (Vt.) 54 Atl. 1084.

holders for its value.[38] Proof that notices were posted at or near certain residences is too indefinite to satisfy a requirement that notices be posted at public places.[39] A liquor license may not be sold without the consent of the city to a transfer of the license.[40] In Texas the mortgagor of exempt and non-exempt property may require the sale of non-exempt property first, and have its proceeds applied.[41] Attorney's fees are properly refused where an amount nearly equal to the amount due was tendered, and other proceedings were with reference to another claim in which the mortgagee was unsuccessful.[42] The report of the sale to be delivered to mortgagor should include an itemized statement of the necessary and reasonable expenses for taking, keeping and selling the property.[43] A failure to comply with the South Dakota act making it the duty of the mortgagee to file a report of the sale in the office of the register of deeds invalidates the sale.[44] A mortgagor fully apprised of the terms of the sale and the items of expenses may not complain of a failure to serve notice.[45]

A good faith purchaser at foreclosure sale takes without notice of mortgagor's fraud in obtaining the goods.[46] The purchaser of property at a defective foreclosure sale takes the interest of the mortgagee in the property,[47] and is liable to the mortgagor only for the excess in the value of the property over the indebtedness.[48] No title is acquired by a purchaser with knowledge of facts invalidating the sale as against a creditor.[49]

§ 15. Remedies as between the parties.—Mortgagor may recover the value of his property less the amount of the mortgage debt, where the mortgagee removes the property to another county and sells without first filing his mortgage in such county.[50] Accounting for proceeds may be had.[51] An equitable claim to proceeds deposited in bank is waived where, pending the action, mortgagee sues on mortgage notes and garnishes the money so deposited as the property of the mortgagor.[52] A mortgage collateral to a contract for the sale of a crop to secure advances does not give purchaser a lien for damages for seller's breach of the contract of sale.[53] In replevin by mortgagor under a mortgage allowing a mortgagee to take possession on sale of mortgaged property, or attempts to sell the same without the permission of the mortgagee, defendant has the burden of showing a sale or attempt to sell without consent.[54]

§ 16. Remedies against third persons.—The assumption of dominion over mortgaged property by one having knowledge of a mortgage thereon amounts to a conversion.[55] A mortgagee having right of possession may recover for injuries to the mortgaged property by a third person,[56] and a description of the property, suf-

38. Dempster Mill Mfg. Co. v. Wright (Neb.) 95 N. W. 806.
39. Powell v. Hardy (Minn.) 94 N. W. 682.
40. Christian Felgenspan v. Mulligan (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 1124.
41. Baughn v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 1063.
42. Lilienthal v. McCormick (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 89.
43. Geo. J. Stadler Brg. Co. v. Weadley, 99 Ill. App. 161.
44. Edmonds v. Riley, 15 S. D. 470.
45. Starr & C. Ann. St. 1896, c. 95, par. 27—Marvel v. McKinzey, 105 Ill. App. 165.
46. George D. Mashburn & Co. v. Dannenberg Co. (Ga.) 44 S. E. 97.
47. Powell v. Hardy (Minn.) 94 N. W. 682.
48. Berg v. Olson (Minn.) 93 N. W. 309.
49. Stuart v. Mitchum, 135 Ala. 546.
50. McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Preitauer (Neb.) 91 N. W. 499.
51. Averments of a transfer of part of the notes secured by a mortgage in consideration of complainant's furnishing money to discharge a prior incumbrance will not imply that the defendant thereby became bound to account for the specific proceeds included in the property—Penney v. Miller (Ala.) 33 So. 668.
52. Young v. Bank of Princeton, 97 Mo. App. 576.
53. Lilienthal v. McCormick (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 89.
54. Matthews v. Granger, 196 Ill. 164. Defendant pleading sale of products in violation of mortgage, is restricted to such averment and may not show a mortgage of other property covered by the mortgage—Id.
55. Woods v. Rose, 135 Ala. 297.
56. O'Brien v. Miller, 117 Fed. 1000.

ficient as between the parties, is sufficient as between the mortgagee and trespasser.[57] Failure of a mortgagee to intervene in an action against a third person for conversion of chattels will not deprive the mortgagee of his lien as against the party converting the chattels.[58] Mortgagees holding under different mortgages may join in an action against a sheriff for conversion of the goods without regard to the fact that their mortgages are of varying priority,[59] or that one of the mortgages was without consideration.[60] An action for conversion cannot be maintained by the mortgagee against a third person before the law day of the mortgage,[61] and a mortgagee must show that it occurred after his right to take possession had accrued.[62] Under a mortgage covering certain crops raised during a given year in specified county, mortgagee must show that crop was raised in the county during the year mentioned.[63] A mortgagee in replevin must recover on the strength of the title of the mortgagor, if at all, where title is denied.[64] In an action for conversion, evidence to show title in a third person is admissible to defeat the action.[65] In replevin of mortgaged property, the mortgage itself and evidence of plaintiff that he had a mortgage on the property in controversy, will sustain a verdict that he had a lien on such property.[66]

CITIZENS.[67]

Citizenship may be state or federal, the former of course necessitating the latter.[68] A more or less extended meaning is that given to jurisdictional citizenship.[69] An inmate of a national soldiers' home may have a voting state citizenship.[70] Residence is not equivalent to citizenship.[71] Citizenship, when not original, may be acquired by naturalization,[72] or by allotment, if a tribal Indian,[73] or by marriage,[74] or by adoptive force of a treaty of accession. A Porto Rican is not an adopted citizen.[75] Since the French and Spanish treaties of 1803 and 1819 left citizenship of inhabitants unchanged, a Spanish born child, within what is now New Mexico, could not become an adoptive citizen except as provided by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo.[76] Expatriation results from marriage of an American woman to a foreigner.[77] The burden of proving a claim of citizenship is supported by a mere claim, after which it shifts.[78]

CIVIL ARREST.[79]

§ 1. Privilege from arrest.—A citizen of another state cannot be arrested while attending as a witness.[80]

57. O'Brien v. Miller, 117 Fed. 1000. A complaint is sufficient under the Connecticut law which states that a demand for possession had been made more than two months before the trespass complained of and it is not necessary to give the date—Id.
58. Scott v. Cox (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 802.
59, 60. Trompen v. Yates (Neb.) 92 N. W. 647.
61, 62. Johnson v. Wilson (Ala.) 34 So. 392.
63. Geo. M. Truss & Co. v. Byers (Ala.) 34 So. 616.
64. Sweeney v. Rejto (Neb.) 95 N. W. 669.
65. Reynolds v. Fitzpatrick (Mont.) 72 Pac. 510; Beyer v. Fields, 134 Ala. 236.
66. Cathey v. Bowen, 70 Ark. 348.
67. Compare related matters in titles Aliens, Domicile.
68. Situs of state citizenship and residence qualifications for election purposes, see Elections.
69. See Jurisdiction, Removal of Causes.
70. Such home is not an "asylum"—Cory v. Spencer (Kan.) 73 Pac. 920.
71. And it cannot be so pleaded—Gale v. Southern B. & L. Ass'n, 117 Fed. 732.
72. See Aliens, ante, p. 70.
73. In re Celestine, 114 Fed. 551.
74. Moore v. Ruckgaher (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 1020.
75. In re Gonzalez, 118 Fed. 941.
76. De Baca v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 482.
77. Moore v. Ruckgaher (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 1020.
78. Evidence held insufficient to show Illinois citizenship of one who claimed to reside in Indiana and yet had an office and a room in Chicago—Adams v. Shirk (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 801.
79. Inhibition of imprisonment for debt, see Constitutional Law.
80. He was entitled to discharge under Pub. St. c. 221, § 10 or § 12, though he gave

§ 2. Arrest on mesne process. When allowable.[81]—Defendant in a civil action in the municipal court of New York may be arrested on proof that he has disposed of his property with intent to defraud creditors.[82] It must appear when application is grounded on refusal to pay that the debtor had means sufficient to pay but refused.[83] A principal cannot have his agent arrested for fraud directed against a third person and not against the principal.[84] An agent arrested in a proceeding against him for failure to account may show that he had not appropriated the principal's property to his own use but that its loss resulted from other conditions; if his contract does not prevent him from selling goods on credit, he cannot be arrested for bad sales or failure in collection, no misappropriation or embezzlement being shown, and in such case the order of arrest is properly vacated and civil judgment entered for the amount.[85] Officers of a defendant corporation not parties cannot be committed by the sheriff in trover when bail may be required.[86]

A law authorizing imprisonment to enforce a license tax is not unconstitutional.[87] An award of alimony unaccrued is not a "debt."[88] Whenever an action is to recover damages for a wrong inflicted on plaintiff, malice is the gist of the action so as to warrant issue of a capias ad satisfaciendum.[89] The constitutional provision against imprisonment for debt unless in case of fraud excludes the right to arrest, where defendant was guilty of fraud in contracting the debt and in receiving a transfer of property from an insolvent, but action was not on the debt but to assail the transfer in equity.[90] An execution against the person will issue on a judgment rendered in favor of an administratrix for wrongful death of her intestate, that being an action to recover for injuries to the property rights of the beneficiaries.[91] In an action for conversion of proceeds of a sale of property an answer admitting that the property was placed with defendant for sale on plaintiff's account and tendering the proceeds less commission claimed will not change the action to one for money had and received so as to preclude execution against the person.[92]

Procedure to obtain order of arrest.[93]—An order for arrest given on two causes of action fails where the right to the order fails as to one of them.[94] A complaint is necessary in New York to an order of arrest in divorce.[95] That the summons shows an action for absolute divorce and the affidavit demands alimony is insufficient proof on which to issue an order of arrest.[96] An exemplified or bail immediately on arrest—Dickinson v. Farwell, 71 N. H. 213.

81. Sufficiency of showing of fraud for issuance of warrant under fraudulent debtor's act—William Barie Dry Goods Co. v. Casler (Mich.) 90 N. W. 670.

82. Laws 1902, p. 1508, c. 580—Auerbach v. Rogin, 83 N. Y. Supp. 154.

83. Gen. St. § 1347—Atwater v. Slepcow, 74 Conn. 761. The gist of the action must be fraud in respect to the debt—Id.

84. Fraudulent extension of credit—Holland Coffee Co. v. Johnson, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 187.

85. Arrest under Code, § 291 (2)—Southern Grocery Co. v. Davis (N. C.) 43 S. E. 591.

86. Hall & B. Woodworking Mach. Co. v. Barnes, 115 Ga. 945.

87. Rosenbloom v. State (Neb.) 89 N. W. 1053.

88. In re Cave, 26 Wash. 213, 66 Pac. 425. But commitment for contempt may be made (Rev. St. § 5640)—State v. Cook, 66 Ohio St. 566.

89. Penoyer v. People, 105 Ill. App. 481.

90. Const. art. 1, § 15, as applied to Code Civ. Proc. § 479—Cooper v. Nolan, 138 Cal. 248, 71 Pac. 179.

91. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1487, 3343—People v. Gill, 83 N. Y. Supp. 135.

92. Holmes v. Leighton, 83 N. Y. Supp. 164.

93. Sufficiency of affidavits for capias ad respondendum on ground that certain goods were obtained by false pretenses by defendant with intention not to pay for them; of proof of defendant's non-residence to sustain an order to hold him to bail in action for conversion (Kryn v. Kahn [N. J. Sup.] 54 Atl. 870); of evidence to show waiver of provision in recognizance for appearance of debtor at time stated for examination before magistrate—Speirs Fish Co. v. Robbins, 182 Mass. 128.

94. Holland Coffee Co. v. Johnson, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 187.

95. An affidavit alone is insufficient (Code Civ. Proc. § 550)—Lichstrahl v. Lichstrahl, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 331.

96. Code Civ. Proc. § 550—Lichstrahl v. Lichstrahl, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 331.

sworn copy of the record is necessary to prove that accrued alimony is due plaintiff by a decree of the court so as to issue a writ of arrest against defendant; and a statement by defendant to plaintiff as shown by her affidavit that he was about to leave the state, taking his property with him, does not show an intent to defraud creditors authorizing arrest.[97] Direct proof of payments to an agent, or excuse for failure of such proof, is necessary to an affidavit for an order for his arrest for failure to account for moneys collected.[98]

Bond; undertaking; security.—A bond to secure an order for arrest conditioned to pay all damages which defendants or either of them may sustain may be enforced by defendants severally; his recovery on the bond could not be defeated on the ground that it would leave the other party without any remedy;[99] and on vacation of the undertaking one defendant imprisoned under the order may sue without joining the others as a party and without demand. The measure of damages on the undertaking is payment for time and expense lost and nothing for injury to the person.[1]

The order and writ for arrest.—In civil arrest, a warrant is absolutely necessary.[2] An order to vacate an order of arrest may be made before a judge in the district other than the one who granted the order.[3] Where application for vacation is made to the judge who granted it, notice of the application is necessary as the judge in his discretion deems proper.[4] Omission of plaintiff's attorney to indorse on the back of a capias ad respondendum the name of the county of service and the address of the attorneys issuing the writ may be corrected by amendment, if no injury results thereby to defendant. That the affidavits and order for a capias ad respondendum were not filed in the clerk's office, until the day after the issuance of the writ and the arrest, is not ground for quashing the writ.[5]

§ 3. Execution against the body. Occasion and propriety.—Malice as a statutory ground of action for the imprisonment of a debtor applies to wrongs inflicted with evil intent and under improper motives.[6] The right to arrest may depend on whether the action was in tort. An action by administratrix to recover for wrongful death of her intestate, is an action to recover for injuries to property rights of beneficiaries.[7] In an action for conversion of the proceeds of property sold, an answer admitting that plaintiff's assignor placed the property in defendant's hands to be sold "on her account" for a certain amount less commissions, did not change the action into an action for money had and received.[8] A judgment debtor sent to the reformatory of another county is not a resident of the county so that an execution against his person issued to that county during his confinement, and returned unsatisfied, is a sufficient ground for arrest.[9] The New York statute providing that a defendant discharged from arrest for failure to take out an execution shall not be arrested on execution on the judgment, does not apply to municipal courts.[10] Former statutes in the District of Columbia permitted arrest

97. Her affidavit of award of alimony is insufficient (Practice Act, § 58 [2 Gen. St. p. 2543])—Innes v. Innes (N. J. Sup.) 53 Atl. 1041.

98. Holland Coffee Co. v. Johnson, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 187.

99. Krause v. Rutherford, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 341.

1. Krause v. Rutherford, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 382.

2. Park v. Taylor (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 34.

3. Wm. Skinner Mfg. Co. v. Fagenson, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 121.

4. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 568, 769—Wm. Skinner Mfg. Co. v. Fagenson, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 121.

5. 2 Gen. St. p. 2541, § 46; p. 2543, § 58—Kryn v. Kahn (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 870.

6. Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, p. 966, § 2—Jernberg v. Mix, 199 Ill. 254; Penoyer v. People, 105 Ill. App. 481.

7. Code Civ. Proc. § 1487, construed in connection with § 549 and Code § 3343—People v. Gill, 83 N. Y. Supp. 135.

8. Holmes v. Leighton, 83 N. Y. Supp. 164.

9. Code Civ. Proc. § 1489—American Surety Co. v. Cosgrove, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 262.

10. Code Civil Proc. § 572—Rogow v. Clark, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 208.

for fraud in conveying real as well as personal property but except as to pending actions they have been repealed.[11]

Procedure to obtain writ.—Either written pleadings or an indorsement on the summons must in the Municipal Court of New York apprise the debtor that the action is one in which he is liable to arrest.[12] Where a complaint for assault properly verified sets out facts sufficient for cause of arrest under the statute, execution against the person may issue after execution against the property returned unsatisfied, without a previous affidavit or order of arrest.[13]

Plaintiff in an action to foreclose a lien on personal property is not entitled to execution against the person, where no order of arrest has been issued.[14] An affidavit for a capias ad satisfaciendum made by the treasurer and agent of a corporation, who is the plaintiff in the suit in which the writ is issued on information and belief, is sufficient.[15] A special finding of malice in an action of tort will support a finding of malice by the court so as to warrant arrest of the defendant.[16] Where the general verdict against one imprisoned under a capias ad satisfaciendum is guilty and responds to all the counts, the burden is on petitioner to show that the verdict and judgment were based on a count not founded on malice; and he is not estopped by the judgment from showing that it was based on a count in which malice was not the gist of the action, where malice appeared in only one of the three counts.[17]

The order and writ.—A writ of execution against the body of a defendant requiring the officer to bring him before the justice issuing the writ at the time specified must be strictly followed.[18]

§ 4. Supersedeas bail or discharge from arrest. Mesne process.—Plaintiff has no interest in money deposited with an officer on release of defendant by him, where he returned on the capias that defendant was in custody, the return being conclusive on the officer and the parties, unless application is made to amend or set it aside.[19]

Final process.[20]—One arrested in assumpsit is not entitled to release under the Insolvent Debtor's act, providing for release when malice is not the gist of the action, where the declaration shows intentional injury or wrong to plaintiff, since malice in that case is the gist of the action.[21] An application for discharge from arrest must be granted if plaintiff fails to take out execution on the judgment before the expiration of 24 hours after he is entitled to it, but the failure to take out execution within such time and the discharge will not defeat plaintiff's right to a subsequent issue of body execution.[22] Where it appears in an action for breach of a poor debtor's recognizance, that he was legally arrested, that his creditor was a non-resident, that the attorney for the latter was a resident of the county,

11. Rev. St. §§ 794 and 795. These provisions were repealed by Code, § 1638, repealing Acts of General Assembly of Maryland and of the Legislative Assembly of District of Columbia—Costello v. Palmer, 20 App. D. C. 210.

12. Judgment cannot contain an order of arrest unless the summons was properly indorsed where pleadings were oral—Municipal Court Act, § 39 (Laws 1902, c. 580)—Auerbach v. Rogin, 83 N. Y. Supp. 154.

13. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 260, 291—Huntley v. Hasty, 132 N. C. 279.

14. L. 1902, p. 1486, c. 580, and Code Civ. Proc. § 1487—Liederman v. Rovner, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 606.

15. Capias issued under Rev. St. 794, 795—Costello v. Palmer, 20 App. D. C. 210.

16. Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, p. 966, § 2—Jernberg v. Mix, 199 Ill. 254.

17. Jernberg v. Mix, 199 Ill. 254.

18. In re Jennison, 74 Vt. 40.

19. Loewenthal v. Wagner (N. J. Sup.) 52 Atl. 298.

20. Sufficiency of showing under Pub. St. c. 162, § 32, that creditor in an action for breach of a recognizance by a poor debtor was a non-resident so as to require notice of a desire to take the poor debtor's oath to be served on his agent or attorney—Griffin v. Betts, 182 Mass. 323.

21. Hurd's Rev. St. c. 72, § 2—Penoyer v. People, 105 Ill. App. 481.

22. Under Municipal Court act (L. 1902, p. 1511, c. 580, § 68; L. 1902, p. 1568, c. 580, § 271)—Rogow v. Clark, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 208.

but no notice of a desire to take the poor debtor's oath was served upon such attorney as required by statute, a judgment for the creditor on the undertaking is authorized; the verdict for breach of his recognizance should be for the amount thereof as shown by the amount for which execution should issue, to be determined in the action.[23] Statutes providing for discharge of a defendant for delay in issuing execution against the person on the judgment under certain circumstance, applies only to procure discharge from arrest on mesne process.[24] Denial of a motion to vacate an order of arrest in a civil action for insufficiency of the papers is not in conflict with a decision that the judgment is improper in providing for arrest because of insufficiency of the pleadings and summons.[25]

CIVIL RIGHTS.

§ 1. What rights are civil.—By the term "civil rights" is meant general rights of a personal nature belonging to individuals as citizens. The term is most generally applied to the rights secured by the thirteenth and fourteenth amendments to the United States constitution and the statutes pursuant thereto and analogous state legislation.[26]

§ 2. Violations of such rights and prosecutions thereon.—Places of public accommodation embrace a bowling alley at a pleasure resort,[27] and a bootblack stand in the corridor of an office building, in which discrimination on account of race is unlawful.[28]

Separation of races.—The laws requiring separate schools for colored[29] or Asiatic children do not violate the 14th amendment, where the schools offer the same advantages as other public schools.[30] The constitution is not violated by a state law requiring street railroads to provide separate accommodations for white and colored passengers, where the accommodations are equal.[31]

Composition of juries.—There is unlawful discrimination against a negro on trial, where all persons of his own race are excluded solely on the ground of color.[32]

Persons liable for discrimination.—The word "person" in the Ohio Civil Rights act includes a corporation.[33]

Removal of causes.—A case cannot be removed to the federal court under act authorizing removal of criminal prosecutions against persons denied civil rights in the state courts, where the act punishing the offense does not discriminate between the races as to the punishment.[34]

23. Rev. Laws, c. 168, § 66—Griffin v. Betts, 182 Mass. 323.

24. People v. Gill, 83 N. Y. Supp. 135.

25. Suerbach v. Rogin, 83 N. Y. Supp. 154.

26. Cyc. Law Dict.

27. Johnson v. Humphrey Pop Corn Co., 24 Ohio Circ. R. 135.

28. Burks v. Bosso, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 530.

29. Laws 1879, p. 163, c. 181—Reynolds v. Board of Education (Kan.) 72 Pac. 274. A constitutional provision that white and colored races should be taught in separate schools, but that neither shall be discriminated against, is violated by an act providing that if there shall be so few of either race in the district that it shall be regarded inadvisable to organize a school for that race, the pro rata proportion of the school fund for such children should be given to an adjoining district, unless there are no children of either race in the district to be discriminated against or not enough children of both races to warrant a school for each (Pub. Laws 1901, c. 497, § 8)—Hooker v. Town of Greenville, 130 N. C. 472.

30. Wong Him v. Callahan, 119 Fed. 381.

31. State v. Pearson (La.) 34 So. 575.

32. Code, § 1722, making payment of taxes, good moral character and sufficient intelligence, qualification for jury service—State v. Peoples, 131 N. C. 784. Not shown where only a small percentage of the voters of the county were negroes and only a few of these were shown to be qualified and the jury commissioners denied discrimination—Martin v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 386; Hubbard v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 67 S. W. 413. Evidence held sufficient to show discrimination in the formation of a jury to try a negro charged with crime—Smith v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 69 S. W. 151.

33. Johnson v. Humphrey Pop Corn Co., 24 Ohio Circ. R. 135.

34. Rev. St. U. S. § 641—People v. Bennett, 113 Fed. 515.

CLERKS OF COURT.

§ 1. The office; induction into and removal from office; general duties.[35]—If the clerk of a county court has legal authority to appoint a deputy, and neither his official term nor his right of removal is limited, the latter power is incident to that of appointment and may be used at pleasure without notice or legal liability; hence a contract between the clerk and a deputy, providing that the latter should hold office at a certain salary during the entire term of the clerk, is against public policy and no action will lie for the breach thereof.[36] It cannot be objected that no county or deputy county clerk was in attendance on a prosecution at time of trial where one who had previously been appointed deputy and to whom a commission had been issued was present and acted, and it did not appear that the appointment had ever been revoked, or that she had resigned, though she had not acted for a year.[37] An appeal will not lie from an order of the judge of the circuit court in Wisconsin, denying a petition for removal of the clerk for malfeasance.[38]

It is his duty to record judgments, orders and proceedings of the court.[39] His receipt for money paid on a judgment is not evidence showing that the creditor received the money.[40] The certificate of the clerk under the court's seal shows prima facie that it is a court of record.[41] One who acts as deputy clerk of the city court by authority of the clerk of that court may legally sign processes issuing therefrom.[42] The clerk of the United States circuit court, with permission of the court, may receive money paid into court by a private party in a pending cause.[43] Mandamus will lie to compel a clerk to perform the ministerial duties of his office.[44]

§ 2. Fees and compensation.[45]—The right of the clerk to fees on all fines, forfeitures or moneys collected for the state does not apply to civil actions by the state to recover penalties, such fees being regulated by another law.[46] Costs will not be allowed to a clerk for making and sending up a transcript in which he failed to incorporate the judgment.[47] Where one who acted both as circuit court clerk and county recorder retains sufficient fees on a severance of the offices to compensate him for work as recorder, but afterward collected fees for services as clerk

35. Time of election and term of office of clerks of courts of common pleas under Rev. St. § 1240, and Act April 30, 1902—State v. Hall, 67 Ohio St. 303. Constitutionality of Act April 30, 1902, amending Rev. St. § 1240, providing that successors of clerks of common pleas whose terms expire in 1903 shall be elected at next general election following the amendment—Id. Sufficiency of evidence to show that a county had less than a certain population required for the establishment of the office of clerk of the district court—State v. Davis (Neb.) 92 N. W. 740.

36. Horstman v. Adamson (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 398.

37. Hollar v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 961.

38. Neither petitioner nor the county can suffer pecuniary loss from the order—In re Aldrich, 114 Wis. 308.

39. Boynton v. Crockett (Okl.) 69 Pac. 869.

40. Matusevitz v. Hughes, 26 Mont. 212, 66 Pac. 939, 68 Pac. 467.

41. Civ. Code, § 3621—Ford v. Nesmith (Ga.) 43 S. E. 483.

42. The power existed while Act Dec. 10, 1902, was in force—Tietjen v. Merchants' Nat. Bank (Ga.) 43 S. E. 730.

43. Rev. St. U. S. § 828, construed in connection with §§ 798, 995, 936, 5504, 5505—Howard v. United States, 184 U. S. 676.

44. To compel inclusion of certain officers in a notice of election (People v. Knopf, 198 Ill. 340); to obey an order of court allowing a change of venue and to transmit papers of the case—State v. Chapman, 67 Ohio St. 1.

45. Amount of fees to clerk for taxing bill of costs in criminal prosecution (Rev. St. 1898, § 747)—Green Lake County v. Waupaca County, 113 Wis. 425. Sufficiency of title of act fixing fees of clerks of civil and criminal district courts of parish of Orleans—Grinage v. Times-Democrat Pub. Co., 107 La. 121.

46. Code Crim. Proc. art. 1143, construed in connection with Sayles' Rev. Civ. St. art. 2423—State v. Hart (Tex.) 70 S. W. 947.

47. State v. Crook, 132 N. C. 1053.

before the settlement and paid them through mistake to the county, he could not recover such fees paid over to the county, but his remedy was to recover compensation out of fees earned while he was clerk and collected by his successor.[48] A contract will be implied to pay fees customarily allowed where counsel procures a loan of the record from the clerk of the court of appeals in Kentucky.[49] The county board in its discretion may allow supplemental compensation for services of the clerk of the county court after the services have been rendered.[50] No compensation can be recovered by the clerk in Wisconsin for issuing receipts for witnesses' certificates; nor for filing statements of witnesses' services and mileage prepared by the attorneys but not required by statute; nor for issuing affidavits to witnesses proving mileage.[51] The clerk of the circuit court in Alabama may charge compensation for entering the caption of an indictment on final record; but not under the general statute for entering the order setting the day for trial, the judgment on verdict and the sentence pronounced.[52] After passage of a law giving the clerk of the Minnesota district court a fixed salary instead of the perquisites previously given he cannot retain fees collected during office hours for furnishing unauthenticated statements to commercial or abstract companies from records in his custody.[53] The clerk of the superior court of Georgia is entitled to fees paid as for similar services in other cases for services performed after recording judgment in certiorari.[54] The clerk of the common pleas of Baltimore is not entitled to interest accruing on license fees collected by him and deposited in bank.[55] The laws providing fees to be charged by the clerk of the superior court of Washington from the beginning of suits down to entry, collection and satisfaction of final judgment does not apply to another action for reviving the judgment, such proceedings being in all respects a new suit.[56]

The clerk of the district and circuit court of the United States is entitled to his statutory per diem compensation for days on which in the absence of a judge he entered orders, decrees and proceedings on the journal transmitted to him by different judges composing the courts of the district,[57] and he is entitled to allowance of a day while the court is actually in session whether business is transacted or not;[58] but cannot claim a fee for filing various papers given to his custody by circuit court commissioners, on abolition of their office under the statute, where the filing was not required by statute nor a rule of court.[59] He may charge for filing and marking depositions and exhibits in a criminal case, and for continuances though the date of the term at which they were taken is not given, or for a certified copy of a mittimus left with the jailor, or for making duplicate copies of orders to pay jurors which the statute requires to be kept in his office for public inspection, or for copies of papers furnished United States attorneys at their request;

48. Corbin v. Adair County, 171 Mo. 385.

49. Shackelford v. Phillips, 24 Ky. L. R. 154, 66 S. W. 419, 68 S. W. 441.

50. Sess. Laws 1897, p. 239, c. 34, provide that the board may fix the compensation of the clerk of the county court—Adams County v. Bowen (Neb.) 95 N. W. 869.

51. Rev. St. 1898, §§ 747, 4060—Green Lake County v. Waupaca County, 113 Wis. 425.

52. The caption is a part of the indictment and should be copied under the charging part (Code, § 934, subsec. 9, §§ 4893, 4511); the last named items cannot be allowed under Code, § 2642, being provided for by Acts 1896-7, p. 1532—Carmichael v. Matthews, 134 Ala. 210.

53. Sp. Laws 1891, c. 373, §§ 2-6—Board of County Com'rs v. Dickey, 86 Minn. 331.

54. He is entitled to collect $3 for services performed in certiorari including entry of official judgment and record of the proceedings if required to be recorded by law (under Civ. Code 1895, § 5397)—McMichael v. Southern Ry. Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 850.

55. Construction of various provisions of the constitution in connection with various provisions of the Code—Vansant v. State, 96 Md. 110.

56. Under Laws 1893, p. 421, §§ 1, 2—State v. Collins (Wash.) 72 Pac. 98.

57. Compensation provided by Act March 3, 1887, c. 362—United States v. Finnell, 185 U. S. 236.

58. Under Organic Act, § 13, and Rev. St. c. 16, especially § 823—United States v. Warren (Okl.) 71 Pac. 685.

59. Under Act May 28, 1896—United States v. Van Duzee, 185 U. S. 278.

but not for copies of an order excusing jurors or of estimated costs furnished to internal revenue collectors, nor for making copies of interrogatories in depositions in a criminal case, nor for a copy of an indictment furnished the accused at his request if not under an order of the court, nor for cartage of court dockets, files and minute books.[60] He is not prevented from recovering fees in a suit begun before passage of a law requiring an account for fees to be presented and allowed by the auditing department because, through inadvertence or a mistake to postpone the charges until the close of the cause, he had not presented some of the charges until after passage of the law; and his right to fees for entering in his minute book a memorandum of the court business transacted, and of adjournment, does not depend upon his furnishing an itemized statement of charges.[61] The court will not interfere to allow fees suspended by the department for explanation until they have been passed upon.[62]

§ 3. Liabilities of clerk in general; bond and liabilities thereon.—Where a clerk of court delivered a transcript on appeal before action on a rule by the Supreme Court to show cause why he should not deliver it, the rule will be discharged at his cost.[63] A city court sitting in equity cannot entertain a motion against the registrar in chancery acting ex officio on the chancery side of that court for default in payment of proceeds of property sold under decrees.[64] A motion will not lie to require the clerk of the District Court to pay over money received by him on a judgment and appropriated, since it is not his duty to receive it and he is not officially liable for its conversion.[65]

The bondsmen of a county court clerk are not liable to the purchaser of a warrant forged by the clerk and sold at a discount, such act not being within his official duties.[66] A clerk and his sureties are liable on his official bond for money received in his official capacity in court in condemnation proceedings which he deposited in his name as clerk in a solvent bank without order of court and which was afterward lost by failure of the bank.[67] The clerk of the superior court receiving proceeds from partition commissioners and receipting for it as clerk is liable therefor on his bond and claimants may sue for recovery thereon.[68] The clerk of the common pleas of Baltimore will be liable on his bond for interest received on license fees received by him and deposited in bank.[69] A special bond given by a clerk in a particular proceeding as a cumulative security will not prevent liability on his general bond in that proceeding.[70] Where it appears in an action on a clerk's bond to recover interest collected on funds of the state that other money might have been mingled with the funds by the clerk in depositing funds in his custody in a bank, the burden is on him to show what part if any of the fund deposited belonged to him.[71] The bond of a United States circuit court clerk is meant for the protection of any party injured by failure of the clerk to perform

60. The last item should be allowed as miscellaneous expenses in the department of justice and presented by the marshal to the attorney general—Marvin v. United States, 114 Fed. 225.

61. Acts June 27 and July 1, 1898—Marvin v. United States, 114 Fed. 225.

62. Marvin v. United States, 114 Fed. 225.

63. State v. Estorge (La.) 34 So. 643.

64. Under Code, c. 106, § 3767, the money so received not being money collected under "process"—Parks v. Bryant, 132 Ala. 224.

65. City of Whitesboro v. Diamond (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 540.

66. State v. Harrison (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 469.

67. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Owens, 86 Minn. 188.

68. Code, §§ 72, 1883—Smith v. Patton, 131 N. C. 396.

69. An account in a bank opened by him in his name as clerk and which he afterward remitted to the state treasurer in payment of license fees collected, sufficiently shows that the funds belonged to the state so as to render him liable for interest on the deposits. Code, arts. 14 and 17. He may deposit the fees, but they constitute an emolument beyond the sum prescribed by the Constitution for his salary—Vansant v. State, 96 Md. 110.

70. The sureties have at most a right of contribution merely—Johnson v. Bobbitt (Miss.) 33 So. 73.

71. Vansant v. State, 96 Md. 110.

his duty within its conditions, and he is liable thereon for appropriation to his own use of money deposited with him by a private suitor in a pending cause with the sanction of the court. A private suitor may sue thereon for his own benefit in the name of the United States without express statutory authority.[72]

COLLEGES AND ACADEMIES.

Nature, establishment and organization.—A manual and polytechnic school established by private donation is not a public school.[73] Where the curriculum of study is the same, it is not important that an institution created as a university is termed a polytechnic school.[74] A selection of a site for a normal school, after the expiration of the time fixed by statute for the selection, is unauthorized and void.[75]

Powers of officers.—Laws prescribing the powers and duties of trustees of a college are not unconstitutional as conferring corporate powers, as the board is not a corporation.[76] Directors of an endowed institution may make rules and regulations which do not interfere with the rights of the public, and the courts will not interfere with their discretion in this respect.[77] Laws allowing college trustees to convey trust property to a city in the execution of their trust do not deprive the trustees of power under the original donation.[78]

Endowments, properties and fiscal affairs.—The course of legislation in Indiana shows a purpose to make the university a part of the public school system, and hence its endowment fund is entitled to all the protection accorded to the general public school fund.[79] Only the interest on proceeds of sales of a government land grant for normal schools may be expended for buildings and maintenance.[80] Directors may refuse a proposed donation for maintenance if deemed unacceptable, but where accepted, it must be accepted on the terms offered.[81] On failure of a college to establish a schoolarship and chair under an agreement for their immediate establishment on payment of a certain sum, an amount to be paid at donor's death cannot be collected from his estate.[82] A university formed by the consolidation of two existing institutions may sell a portion of their property, notwithstanding the agreement of consolidation makes a removal of the university work a reversion of property to the constituent colleges.[83] An act making an annual appropriation to support a state institution does not impliedly repeal another act providing for an annual appropriation, where no reference is made to the earlier act; the later act will be construed as an additional appropriation.[84] An act by the city requiring the city board of education on application of the board of directors of a college, giving instruction to pupils, to levy a tax, does not violate the bill of rights, since the help given by taxation aids public instruction.[85]

Endowment fund mortgages under Indiana law.—In Indiana a university permanent endowment fund mortgage may be foreclosed by public advertisement.[86] Publication for nine successive weeks satisfies the requirement of sixty days' no-

72. Bond required by Rev. St. U. S. § 795, as amended by Act Feb. 22, 1875—Howard v. United States, 184 U. S. 676.
73. State v. Schauss, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 283.
74. State v. Toledo, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 327.
75. Board of Education v. Territory (Okl.) 70 Pac. 792.
76. Rev. St. §§ 4099, 4105—State v. Toledo, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 327.
77. State v. Schauss, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 283.
78. State v. Toledo, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 327.
79. Fisher v. Brower, 159 Ind. 139.
80. State v. Maynard (Wash.) 71 Pac. 775.
81. State v. Schauss, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 283.
82. U. S. Grant University v. Fruit's Estate (Wis.) 94 N. W. 42.
83. Board of Trustees v. Board of Curators, 24 Ky. L. R. 476, 68 S. W. 660.
84. Agricultural & M. College v. Lacy, 130 N. C. 364.
85. State v. Toledo, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 327.
86. Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 7164—Fisher v. Brower, 159 Ind. 139. The act authorizing the state auditor to foreclose by advertisement and sale, does not confer judicial power on the auditor—McElwain-Richards Co. v. Gifford (Ind.) 65 N. E. 576.

tice.[87] The legislature has power to make permanent endowment fund mortgages prior to all other mortgages or conveyances of the property.[88] Purchasers at such foreclosure take title free from all claim of the holder of a junior mortgage.[89] There may be no redemption by the mortgagor or junior incumbrancer.[90] Since the act of 1901, the purchaser's deed is to be recorded in the auditor's office and not with the secretary of state.[91]

Courses of study; instruction; teachers.—Trustees are proper parties to suits to enjoin instruction beyond that limited by the deed of the donor establishing the institution.[92]

Instructors.—A lady teacher in a private academy may not be discharged for disobeying regulations as to times for receiving gentlemen callers, where her conduct in that respect is ladylike and does not interfere with her duties,[93] nor for failure to keep order, where the disorder is due to the fact that she is a young lady and many of the pupils are young men or large boys who could not be restrained by her.[94]

Discipline.—A student may be expelled for bearing false witness against a fellow student.[95] In California the local board of trustees of a normal school may not dismiss a student passing all classes except that of practice teaching, without giving him an opportunity to complete his study of that subject,[96] and the joint board of normal school trustees, though made a board of arbitration in matters concerning the management of normal schools, is without appellate jurisdiction to pass on the complaint of a student dismissed from school.[97]

Issuance of diplomas.—An action solely against the trustees of a university, to compel the issuance of a diploma, is improper where diplomas may not be issued except on request of the faculty.[98]

COMBINATIONS AND MONOPOLIES.[99]

§ 1. Combinations violative of the federal anti-trust act.—Under the federal anti-trust act July 2, 1890, if the effect of a combination or contract is to restrain interstate commerce, it will be dissolved,[1] no matter what its form may be,[2] and

87. Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 6109—Fisher v. Brower, 159 Ind. 139.

88. Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 6100—Fisher v. Brower, 159 Ind. 139.

89, 90. McElwain-Richards Co. v. Gifford (Ind.) 65 N. E. 576.

91. Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 7651—Fisher v. Brower, 159 Ind. 139.

92. State v. Toledo, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 327.

93. Hall-Moody Inst. v. Copass, 108 Tenn. 582.

94. Hall-Moody Inst. v. Copass, 108 Tenn. 582. An instruction that the board could dismiss a teacher if she was keeping late hours with young men or going with them to questionable places so as to cause her reputation as a lady to be called in question does not tend to lead the jury to think that her character for morality or chastity was in question, where there was evidence tending to show that she was indiscreet in visiting a minstrel show, going to a cafe and receiving gentlemen callers at a late hour in the evening and in other respects—Id.

95. Goldstein v. New York University, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 80.

96. Miller v. Dailey, 136 Cal. 212, 68 Pac. 1029.

97. There was a sufficient finding on the question of mental capacity, where the court in mandamus proceedings found that there had been no failure in the subject of practice teaching, which was the only subject in which he was claimed to have been deficient, and that it was not true that he could not attain a degree of proficiency sufficient to warrant a recommendation for a diploma—Miller v. Dailey, 136 Cal. 212, 68 Pac. 1029. On the question whether there had been an attendance for the time allowed by law, a finding is sufficient that the dismissed student was not permitted to complete the practice teaching course and there was no showing that any definite time had been fixed by law for attendance at the normal school—Id.

98. Steinhauer v. Arkins (Colo. App.) 69 Pac. 1075.

99. Illegality of contracts as violating public policy, etc., see Contracts.

1. A contract between coal producers of a district controlling and limiting the output and fixing a uniform price therefor, etc., the contract being for "Western shipment" and to "enlarge the Western market," is invalid as restraining interstate commerce—Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v United States (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 610. An agreement between dealers in a certain community and producers generally in the United States binding the former not to buy from producers not members and not to sell to others than members at less than list price, the latter though it has not operated injuriously on the public, but has been beneficial.[3] The act applies to interstate carriers of passengers or freight.[4]

Property rights and the right to protect same by action are not lost because the holder is a member of a combination in violation of the act.[5] That a contract is violative of the act is a matter of defense,[6] but unlawful combination cannot be made a defense in collateral way.[7] The treble damages given for a violation of the act can be recovered only in a direct action.[8]

§ 2. Combinations violative of state anti-trust acts and of the common law. —Acts regulating combinations, known generally as anti-trust laws, to be valid, must not discriminate in favor of any particular class of persons or products,[9] but they are not invalid in that they abridge the right to acquire property by connot to sell at all to dealers not members, etc., is within the act and void—Montague v. Lowry (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 27. A combination between dealers to compel other dealers to sell at a fixed price and on failure to conform to prevent sale of goods to him is within the act—Brown v. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., 115 Ga. 429, 57 L. R. A. 547. A contract between a board of trade and telegraph company not to furnish market quotations to bucket shops is not within the act—Board of Trade v. Christie Grain Co., 121 Fed. 608. A contract by a patentee giving an exclusive license to manufacture and sell the patent at a fixed price is not within the act though it also provides that the licensee shall not manufacture or sell other like goods without the improvement—Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U. S. 70, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 1058; but a contract between the licensee and dealers not to sell the article below a fixed price will not be enforced—National Phonograph Co. v. Schlegel, 117 Fed. 624.

2. The formation of a corporation to obtain control of the majority of the stock of competing interstate railroad companies, to hold and vote the same; to receive the dividends and divide same between the stockholders of the companies pro rata, though the railroads conducted their business through their own officers destroys competition between the railroads within the Sherman Act—United States v. Northern Securities Co., 120 Fed. 721. Combination to control production and price of shingles made only in the state but sold principally without the state is violative of the act—Gibbs v. McNeeley (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 120, 60 L. R. A. 152.

3. Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 610.

4. A contract or combination which deprives a carrier of the right to fix its own rates independent of a competing carrier no matter whether the combination rates are reasonable or unreasonable is void—United States v. Northern Securities Co., 120 Fed. 721.

5. The fact does not give third persons the right to infringe patents held by him—General Elec. Co. v. Wise, 119 Fed. 922. A combination in violation of the act is not precluded from recovering on collateral contracts for goods sold—Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 540, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 679.

6. Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U. S. 70, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 1058.

7. Harrison v. Glucose Sugar Ref. Co. (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 304; Kinner v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 23 Ohio Circ. R. 294. That complainant in equity is a member of an unlawful railroad transportation company is not ground for refusing it relief against dealing in its tickets by third persons—Id.

8. They cannot be set off in an action by the trust or combination particularly in a state where unliquidated damages cannot be set off in an action on a contract—Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 540, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 679.

9. The Ill. Act June 20, 1893, exempting from its operation agricultural products and live stock is repugnant to U. S. Const. amend. art. 14, and is invalid in its entirety—Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 540, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 679. So also the Georgia Act, Dec. 23, 1896 (Brown v. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., 115 Ga. 429, 57 L. R. A. 547); and Texas Act, March 30, 1899 (State v. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 67 S. W. 1057); but the Texas Act 1895 (Rev. St. 1895, arts. 5313, 5314) is not repugnant to such constitutional provision because it provides for a forfeiture of the charter of domestic corporations and a revocation of licenses to foreign companies for violation of its provisions—State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co. (Tex.) 69 S. W. 58; National Cotton Oil Co. v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 615. Neb. Com. St. 1901, c. 91a, excepting labor unions from its operation is not invalid as a grant of a special privilege—Cleland v. Anderson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 306. Ill. Act June 10, 1897, excepting combinations for the purpose of maintaining wages from the act renders it invalid, but it did not invalidate the act of 1891—People v. Butler St. Foundry Co., 201 Ill. 236. Excepting building and loan associations from the operation of the act does not render it invalid. Such corporations are not for pecuniary profit—People v. Butler St. Foundry Co., 201 Ill. 236. Ill. Act 1891, amend. 1893, §§ 7a, 7b, providing that corporations under penalty answer under oath inquiries from the secretary of the state as to whether they are violating the act is valid, though this is only required of corporations; nor is it an assumption of judicial power by the legislature—Id. Tex. Anti-trust Act 1899, c. 146, by section fourteen does not incorporate as a part of it the unconstitutional part of act 1895, c. 83, exempting certain parties from its operation—State v. Laredo Ice Co. (Tex.) 73 S. W. 951.

tract.[10] Statutes designed to prevent combinations have been construed as shown below.[11] Contracts or combinations controlling the price of and tending to stifle competition in commodities are generally void,[12] as against public policy.[13] If the effect of the combination is to restrain trade, it is invalid,[14] though there is not a complete monopoly of the article, and though the public is not injuriously affected,[15] but a monopoly is not created merely because a certain business is placed at some disadvantage.[16]

A combination, though illegal at common law, is not precluded from recovering on contracts made in the course of business.[17] Forfeiture of a corporate charter does not necessarily follow because it entered into a combine, but it will be fined after abandonment of the combine.[18] Any individual injuriously affected by the combination has a cause of action therefor,[19] or he may obtain an injunction to dissolve it,[20] against the individuals composing the combination.[21] Where it is an incorporation for monopolistic purposes, the remedy would be by quo warranto.[22] If the statute permits a recovery back of money paid to a company unlawfully transacting business as a trust, such provision is in the nature of a penalty.[23]

10. Kan. Laws 1897, c. 265—State v. Smiley, 65 Kan. 240, 69 Pac. 199.

11. Miss. Code 1892, c. 140, § 4437. The words "and is inimical to public welfare, unlawful, and a criminal conspiracy" were not intended as an element—Barataria Canning Co. v. Joulian, 80 Miss. 555. Illinois Act June 11, 1891, preventing trusts was not expressly or by implication repealed by Act June 20, 1893, defining trusts—People v. Butler St. Foundry Co., 201 Ill. 236.

12. An agreement to sell all oysters dug to one party excepting a portion which the producer was not to sell at less than a fixed price is void under Miss. Code 1892, c. 140, §§ 4437, 4438—Barataria Canning Co. v. Joulian, 80 Miss. 555. Agreement between plumbers' association and dealers and manufacturers of supplies not to sell to others than members is within Mo. Rev. St. 1899, c. 143, art. 2, § 8978 and void—Walsh v. Master Plumbers' Ass'n, 97 Mo. App. 280. A combination of retail lumber dealers, prescribing a qualification for membership, to prevent sales direct to consumers or retailers not eligible to membership by wholesale dealers is void under Neb. Comp. St. c. 91a, § 1—Cleland v. Anderson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 306. Agreement between brewers not to sell beer to one indebted to one of the parties for beer sold is in violation of Mo. Rev. St. 1899—Ferd Heim Brew. Co. v. Belinder, 97 Mo. App. 64. The proportion of retail dealers, in a combine to prevent sales to non-members, that the number bears to the whole number of dealers is not material—Cleland v. Anderson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 306. The mere incorporation for the purpose of purchasing and maintaining cotton compresses does not show of itself an intention to create a monopoly. The price of compressing being uniform and fixed by the railroad commission—State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co. (Tex.) 69 S. W. 58.

Manufacturers and dealers do not create a monopoly by fixing a uniform jobbing price and agreeing to sell only to retailers who would exact the regular retail list price, provided any dealer is allowed to buy on such terms—John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Druggists' Ass'n, 175 N. Y. 1.

Evidence held insufficient to show a contract to stifle competition under Iowa Code, § 5060—Willson v. Morse, 117 Iowa, 581.

13. An agreement limiting the amount of purchase of grain is within Kan. Laws 1897—State v. Smiley, 65 Kan. 240, 69 Pac. 199.

14. If the effect of the association of a certain branch of labor is to control it to the exclusion from employment persons not members, courts will not recognize it by compelling its continuance or by reinstating expelled members—O'Brien v. Musical Mut. Protective Union (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 150; Froelich v. Musicians Mut. Benefit Ass'n, 93 Mo. App. 383.

15. Evidence held sufficient to show combination to fix prices—State v. Armour Packing Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 645.

16. State v. New Orleans Warehouse Co., 109 La. 64.

17. Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 540, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 679. Under Mo. Rev. St. 1899, §§ 8966, 8970, that plaintiff was a member of a combine may be set up as a defense to an action on a contract made with it—Ferd Heim Brew. Co. v. Belinder, 97 Mo. App. 64.

18. Mo. Rev. St. 1899, § 8971—State v. Armour Packing Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 645.

19. Laws N. Y. 1899, c. 690—Rourke v. Elk Drug Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 145. Under Neb. Comp. St. 1901, c. 91a, § 11 the action may be brought against a member or members of the association personally—Cleland v. Anderson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 306.

Allegations of a conspiracy to control prices held to be conclusions of law not admitted by demurrer—John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Druggists' Ass'n, 175 N. Y. 1.

20. Rev. St. 1899, c. 143, art. 2, §§ 8978, 8979, do not affect remedies previously existing—Walsh v. Master Plumbers' Ass'n, 97 Mo. App. 280.

21. Brown v. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., 115 Ga. 429, 57 L. R. A. 547.

22. Where the monopoly was created by an exercise of the charter powers, as where it was allowed to purchase stock in other corporations, a contract of purchase will not be enjoined—Dittman v. Distilling Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 570.

23. And on termination of the company the right of action dies—Mason v. Adoue (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 347.

All parties to the conspiracy should be named in the information, though they need not be jointly charged.[24] That the cause of the breach of a contract was the entering into an unlawful combination is not ground for enhancing the damages.[25]

§ 3. Grants of privileges by statute, ordinance and contracts with municipalities tending to create monopolies.—The power of a municipality to create a monopoly cannot be implied from its charter.[26] Ordinances or statutes which in effect grant privileges to some and refuse them to others on equal terms tend to create a monopoly and are invalid.[27]

COMMERCE.

§ 1. Public Regulation.—Federal and State Powers; Peddlers; Foreign Corporations; Telegraphs and Telephones; Railroads; Offenses; Intoxicants; Adulterations; Quarantine; State Taxation of Foreign Commerce.

§ 2. Domestic and Interstate or Foreign.—Original Packages; Sales on Agents' Orders; Lottery Tickets; Domestic Terminals Connected by Foreign Lines.

§ 1. Public regulation in general. Meaning of term and general limitations of federal and state powers.—The term commerce as used in law books includes all the initiatory and intervening acts that directly bring about the sale or exchange of goods.[28]

The purpose of the commerce clause of the constitution is to prevent discrimination in favor of local products.[29] A state cannot give a corporation organized under its laws power to do acts which would operate to restrain interstate commerce,[30] and the government may not interfere with commerce strictly within the state.[31] A state cannot regulate except for public health, the bringing into the state from another of an article of commerce, but may regulate its sale after the article is brought into the state.[32]

A license imposed on nonresidents carrying on a local business is not regulation of commerce.[33]

Hawkers' and peddlers' licenses.—Laws taxing peddlers are not on their face objectionable as authorizing a tax on interstate commerce.[34] The fact that a peddler deals with a foreign merchant, who requires payment for goods as a condition to delivery, will not make the license a burden on commerce.[35]

24. State v. Dreany, 65 Kan. 292, 69 Pac. 182.

25. Crystal Ice Co. v. Wylie, 65 Kan. 104, 68 Pac. 1086.

26. Town of Kirkwood v. Meramec Highlands Co., 94 Mo. App. 637.

27. Ordinance construed and held not to authorize the city marshal to discriminate and give exclusive rights to stand cabs at railroad depots—City of Danville v. Noone, 103 Ill. App. 290. A statute authorizing a residence park association to maintain stores, etc., to furnish visitors and lessees with necessaries held not tending to create a monopoly—Thousand Island Park Ass'n v. Tucker, 173 N. Y. 203. Authorizing the use of certain text books in schools for a term of years does not tend to create a monopoly—Rand, McNally & Co. v. Hartranft, 29 Wash. 591, 70 Pac. 77. A contract with an individual giving him the exclusive right to collect ashes and other harmless substances is invalid (Iler v. Ross [Neb.] 90 N. W. 869, 57 L. R. A. 985) but a contract to furnish lights for streets and for individual use for a definite period does not tend to create a monopoly—Denver v. Hubbard (Colo. App.) 68 Pac. 993. A grant to an individual an exclusive right to use city streets to erect and maintain a system of telephone poles is a grant of an exclusive privilege—Chicago Tel. Co. v. Northwestern Tel. Co., 100 Ill. App. 57.

In Alabama an exclusive water franchise may be revoked (Const. art. 1, § 23) though loss may befall the franchise holders. Const. art. 14, § 10, restricting revocation of charters to such as that no injustice befalls the corporators does not apply—Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 186 U. S. 212, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 1132.

28. United States v. Swift & Co., 122 Fed. 529.

29. Kehrer v. Stewart (Ga.) 44 S. E. 854.

30. United States v. Northern Securities Co., 120 Fed. 721.

31. State v. Hammond Packing Co. (La.) 34 So. 368.

32. Commonwealth v. Phosphate Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 2284, 67 S. W. 45.

33. State v. Hammond Packing Co. (La.) 34 So. 368.

34. In re Lipschitz (N. D.) 95 N. W. 157. Ga. Pen. Code, § 600—Stone v. State (Ga.) 43 S. E. 740.

35. In re Pringle (Kan.) 72 Pac. 864.

Regulation of foreign corporations in general.—A foreign corporation engaged in interstate business may be required to comply with reasonable regulations as a condition to doing business within a state.[36] A state law requiring foreign corporations to file a copy of their charter may not be avoided on the ground that the contemplated traffic might extend beyond the state limits.[37] A foreign corporation sending goods to retail dealers on orders obtained from traveling men is not within local laws requiring foreign corporations engaged in business in the state to designate places of business within the state and the name of one on whom process may be served.[38]

Regulation of telegraph and telephone companies.—A telegraph company, though engaged in interstate commerce, may be required to pay a reasonable license fee by a municipality;[39] and it is not material that a larger amount is realized than is actually necessary to reimburse the city for the costs of supervision and inspection.[40] An occupation tax cannot be levied on the interstate business or business of the government transacted by telegraph.[41] The fact that telegrams are sent beyond the state will not work an exemption from taxation where valuation is determined by regarding the part within the state as part of a system operated in other states,[42] nor will acceptance of the benefits of Act of Congress, allowing operation over military and post roads and organization under the laws of another state be conclusive on the question.[43] A state may compel payment of a license fee on each telephone in use, though the companies do interstate business, where the act applies only to instruments used solely in business within the state.[44] Neither a state nor an Indian nation may grant to telephone companies the exclusive right to maintain lines in the territory.[45]

Regulation of railroads and other carriers.—The state may not fix the rates to be received by carriers engaged in interstate commerce,[46] nor compel railroad companies to transfer cars containing live stock to connecting roads within the state, where the shipment comes from another state,[47] nor impose a penalty for shipping freight from another state by a road different from that designated by the shipper.[48]

A city may not require a license fee from an express company doing both a local and interstate business.[49] Laws requiring payment of an occupation tax must distinguish between the local and the interstate business.[50] The state may regulate the local business of carriers, where interstate commerce is not interfered with.[51] The commerce clause is not violated by state laws imposing a penalty on

36. State v. American Book Co., 65 Kan. 847, 69 Pac. 563; Commonwealth v. Phosphate Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 2284, 67 S. W. 45. The franchise tax laws of Michigan, requiring foreign corporations to pay a franchise fee, and providing that contracts made by non-complying companies shall be wholly void, are within the power of the state. The real purpose of the statute is to impose a tax as a condition to carrying on business in this state—Oakland Sugar Mill Co. v. Fred W. Wolf Co. (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 239.

37. Diamond Glue Co. v. United States Glue Co., 187 U. S. 611.

38. Commonwealth v. Hogan, McMorrow & Tieke Co., 25 Ky. L. R. 41, 74 S. W. 737.

39. Borough of Taylor v. Cable Co., 202 Pa. 583; Atlantic & P. Telegraph Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160. It may be based on the poles and length of conduits in city—Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Norfolk (Va.) 43 S. E. 207.

40. Western Union Tel. Co. v. New Hope, 187 U. S. 419.

41. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Wakefield (Neb.) 95 N. W. 659.

42, 43. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Missouri, 190 U. S. 412.

44. State v. Rocky Mountain Bell Tel. Co., 27 Mont. 394, 71 Pac. 311.

45. Muskogee Nat. Tel. Co. v. Hall (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 382. The act of congress governing the matter of franchises for telephone lines in Indian Territory annulled grants previously made by Indian nations conflicting therewith—Muskogee Nat. Tel. Co. v. Hall (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 382.

46. Southern Exp. Co. v. Goldberg (Va.) 44 S. E. 893.

47. Central Stock Yards Co. v. Railroad Co. (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 113.

48. Lowe v. Railway Co., 63 S. C. 248.

49. Southern Exp. Co. v. Ensley, 116 Fed. 756.

50. Pol. Code, § 4074—State v. Express Co., 27 Mont. 419, 71 Pac. 404.

51. A privilege tax—Nashville, C. & St. L.

carriers for failure to pay damages on freight in a specified time,[52] nor by laws making weights in bills of lading conclusive,[53] nor by a requirement that the delivering carrier trace and locate the carrier causing injury to goods in transit,[54] nor by laws prohibiting unjust discrimination by an express company against another company engaged in the same business.[55]

Railroads engaged in interstate commerce are subject to local laws governing signals at crossings,[56] and speed of trains.[57] The state may require incorporation of foreign railway corporations under its laws.[58]

Discrimination in rates under interstate commerce act.—There must be a shipment to constitute a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act; mere making of offer of a discriminating rate is not sufficient.[59] A carrier cannot adopt unreasonable rates for the purpose of building up a seaport on its own line at the expense of one on a rival road.[60] The charging of unjust and unreasonable rates or the making of undue discrimination on a portion of a railroad system is not justified by the fact that such portion fails to pay expenses.[61] A lesser rate to a more distant and competitive point is not an unjust discrimination or an undue preference with regard to the nearer noncompetitive point.[62] In determining the reasonableness of rates, a city which, by reason of competition, has received unusually low rates, should not be made the sole basis of comparison.[63] Weight should be given the opinions of expert witnesses as to the effect of the rates charged on the growth and prosperity of the city, the cost of transportation as compared with the rates charged, and the rates in force at numerous other cities where the circumstances are as nearly as possible similar.[64] The fact that a point becomes noncompetitive, by reason of the purchase by one road of the competing road, does not affect the justice of discrimination in favor of a competing point, where it is affirmatively shown that the rates to the noncompetitive point have not been increased.[65] Where a through rate is made by two roads jointly, each may be liable for a violation of the interstate commerce act without regard to the proportion it receives for its own services.[66] On appeal from a decree of the interstate commerce commission, the supreme court will not independently investigate the facts to make new findings to sustain the order of the commission, even though the record is such as to allow such investigation.[67] There is a presumption that conclusions of an interstate commerce commission are well founded, and in a suit to enforce the order, the burden rests upon the company to show any errors.[68] Copies of confidential telegrams sent or received by the commission need not be filed with the claims for telegraph tolls.[69]

Ry. Co. v. Alabama City, 134 Ala. 414; Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420.

52. Porter v. Railway Co., 63 S. C. 169.

53. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Simonson, 64 Kan. 802.

54. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Murphey (Ga.) 43 S. E. 265.

55. Acts 1901, p. 149 (Burns' Rev. Sts. 1901, § 3312)—Adams Exp. Co. v. State (Ind.) 67 N. E. 1033.

56. Willfong v. Railroad Co., 116 Iowa, 548.

57. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Carlinville, 200 Ill. 314.

58. Davis' Adm'r v. Railroad Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1125, 70 S. W. 857.

59. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Rainey, 112 Fed. 487. Proceedings for damages for discrimination in freight rates, under the inter-state commerce act, are governed as to limitations by the statutes of the state where brought—Ratican v. Terminal R. Ass'n, 114 Fed. 666; Kinnavey v. Same, Id.

60. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Railroad Co., 118 Fed. 613.

61. Separate road operated as a part of a large railway system—Interstate Commerce Commission v. Railroad Co., 118 Fed. 613. Evidence of shipments on a certain division of a road held to be unjust, unreasonable and discriminating—Id.

62, 63, 64, 65. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Railway Co., 117 Fed. 741.

66. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Railroad Co., 118 Fed. 613.

67. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Railroad Co., 186 U. S. 320, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 1182.

68. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Railroad Co., 118 Fed. 613.

69. United States v. Moseley, 187 U. S. 322.

Offenses against regulatory acts.—The officers are individually liable to indictment along with the carrier for violation of the interstate commerce act.[70] An indictment under the Federal act, making it unlawful for a common carrier to transport game killed in violation of the laws of the state where the game was killed, must aver the fact that it was so killed and delivered to the carrier.[71] A motion to quash information, charging violation of interstate commerce act, should show that the business of defendant was interstate commerce,[72] and the interstate commerce commission may properly examine into an increased rate made pending the hearing.[73]

Regulation of traffic in intoxicating liquors.—The Wilson act, making liquors on their arrival in the state subject to the operation of the police powers of the state, gives the state jurisdiction only after the liquors have been delivered[74] or stored within the state to await the consignee's orders.[75] The act did not give the state power to interfere with interstate commerce by laws only effectual without the state.[76] Since the Wilson act, the question whether a local statute imposing a tax on liquor imported into the state violates the constitution of the United States, prohibiting the laying of imposts or the commerce clause can no longer arise.[77]

Beer sent by a foreign brewery into a state for storage and sale by an agent is subject to taxation under the state laws.[78] State inspection laws are inoperative as to liquors passing through a state or stored therein for distribution to points without the state.[79] There is not a discrimination against foreign brewers by a provision releasing local brewers from payment of inspection fees on export beers.[80] The fact that inspection fees exceed the cost of inspection will not invalidate a law valid under the Wilson act.[81] A state law providing a certain tax for wholesale liquor dealers and a less tax on manufacturers does not discriminate where manufacturers establishing warehouses or places of sale elsewhere than at the brewery must pay the tax.[82] The commerce clause is violated by the state law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license and excepting sales of domestic wines or ciders.[83]

Adulteration of articles of food and drink.—The states have power to enact laws to prevent adulteration of food stuffs, and such laws are not regarded as a violation of the commerce clause of the constitution, though the articles or ingredients are brought from other states or intended for sale in such states.[84]

Quarantine laws.—A state health law against healthy persons entering infected districts does not interfere with commerce, though the persons come from another state.[85] The state has power to impose as a condition to the admission of cattle from an infected district that they remain in a district free from such conditions for a certain time or submit to inspection by the state authorities,[86] and such a 70. In re Pooling Freights, 115 Fed. 588.

71. United States v. Smith, 115 Fed. 423. The term "evasion" in an act imposing a fine for an evasion of its provisions means acts done, and not those in mere contemplation of the party—Id.

72. State ex rel. Pettigrew v. Hall, 109 La. 290.

73. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Railroad Co., 118 Fed. 613.

74. In re Bergen, 115 Fed. 339.

75. State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 96 Me. 415.

76. And therefore did not have the effect of re-enacting a prior law having that effect—Corbin v. McConnell, 71 N. H. 350.

77. State v. Bengsch, 170 Mo. 81.

78. People v. Voorhis (Mich.) 91 N. W. 624.

79, 80, 81. Act Mo. May 4, 1899 (Sess. Laws 1899, p. 228)—Pabst Brew. Co. v. Crenshaw, 120 Fed. 144.

82. People v. Voorhis (Mich.) 91 N. W. 624.

83. Rev. Laws, c. 100, § 1—Commonwealth v. Petranich (Mass.) 66 N. E. 807.

84. Arbuckle v. Blackburn (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 616; Crossman v. Lurman, 171 N. Y. 329. Vinegar (Laws 1893, c. 338, §§ 50-53)—People v. Fruit Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 11. Butter—Hathaway v. McDonald, 27 Wash. 659, 68 Pac. 376.

85. It was not the intention of the Federal laws to overthrow the existing quarantine system—Compagnie Francaise De Navigation A Vapeur v. Board of Health, 186 U. S. 380, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 1209.

86. Reid v. People, 187 U. S. 137.

law is not objectionable as the regulation of interstate commerce,[87] nor as laying an impost or a duty on imports or exports.[88] The quarantine laws may not be used to give a monopoly of public grazing grounds to inhabitants of the state.[89]

State burdens on foreign commerce.—The state may not tax imported goods in original unbroken packages on which United States duties have been paid.[90] A license tax on the business of buying products for export is in fact a duty on exports.[91] A state law giving a lien on vessels for repairs or supplies furnished on credit is not objectionable as imposing a burden on foreign commerce, though applicable to vessels engaged in foreign commerce; its effect is to facilitate commerce by enabling vessel owners to obtain the things necessary to complete a voyage.[92]

§ 2. Domestic and interstate or foreign commerce.—A car in a train made up in one state and destined to a point in another state is engaged in interstate commerce.[93] Where a shipment is to a point without the state, the shipment is interstate commerce without regard to the form of the bill of lading.[94] The interstate commerce act is not concerned with the question of contracts limiting liability for negligence on shipments passing through different states.[95] A shipment is not made domestic by the fact that title was acquired from the shipper by a resident of the state.[96]

Original packages.—Packages of cigarettes containing ten cigarettes each and given loose to an express company for transportation to another state are not original packages so as to prevent the operation of the state laws.[97]

A law requiring emigrant agents to obtain a license does not violate the commerce clause of the constitution, as that business is not an article of commerce.[98]

The assembling of articles within a state at a distributing point will make such articles generally amenable to state laws, though a portion is shipped beyond the state.[99]

A corporation owning elevators and trackage thereto but no rolling stock is not engaged in interstate commerce, though its entire business consists in handling grain in course of interstate transportation.[1]

Laws requiring certification of engineers do not impose burdens on commerce when applied to engineers on scows engaged in blasting in a navigable river.[2]

A flock of sheep driven across the state by a direct route is exempt from local taxation, though the sheep while in transit are permitted to support themselves by grazing on the land traversed.[3]

87, 88. Reid v. People, 29 Colo. 333, 68 Pac. 228.

89. Equitable relief by injunction may be invoked by a cattle owner prevented from bringing his stock into a state by a proclamation of the governor against the importation of such stock on the ground of an existence of an infectious disease in an adjoining state, where it is shown that the cattle in question were free from such disease and that there was no such disease on the ranges where they were or had been, and it was shown that the purpose of the proclamation was to secure for the inhabitants of the state a monopoly on the grazing grounds, and the effect of the proclamation would work irreparable injury to the complaining parties—Smith v. Lowe (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 753.

90. Appeal of Doane & Co., 197 Ill. 376.

91. State v. Allgeyer & Co. (La.) 34 So. 798.

92. The Robert Dollar, 115 Fed. 218.

93. Within Act of March 2, 1893, § 4 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3174) requiring interstate carriers to furnish cars with grab irons and hand holds—Malott v. Hood, 201 Ill. 202; and may not be attached—Wall v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. (W. Va.) 44 S. E. 294.

94. State v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 994; Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Ft. Grain Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 419.

95. Hughes v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 202 Pa. 222.

96. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Ft. Grain Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 419.

97. Cook v. Marshall County (Iowa) 93 N. W. 372.

98. State v. Napier, 63 S. C. 60.

99. Logs—Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82. Coal—Pioneer Fuel Co. v. Molloy (Mich.) 91 N. W. 750. Hardware products—American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1037.

1. People v. Miller, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 582.

2. People v. Prillen, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 207.

3. Kelley v. Rhoads, 188 U. S. 1, rev. 9. Wyo. 352, 63 Pac. 935; L. Wyo. 1895, c. 61, authorizing taxation of stock brought into the state for grazing purposes.

Whether business is interstate business within the constitution is a question of fact.[4]

Sales by orders taken by agent of nonresident.—An agent taking orders for the sale of goods for a nonresident principal, the orders to be subject to approval or rejection by his principal and the goods to be shipped directly to the purchasers, is engaged in interstate commerce,[5] and its character as interstate commerce is not affected by fact of shipment direct to the agent for distribution.[6] The term does not apply to orders from samples filled from goods not in the original packages but sent to the agent in bulk from the other state,[7] nor to shipments from another state to the owner's place of business to be stored and offered for sale by his agent.[8]

The business of transporting lottery tickets from one state to another is interstate commerce and may be made an offense under the United States laws.[9] Policy slips delivered to an agent to be forwarded to headquarters in another state are not within the act making it an offense to transport lottery tickets.[10]

Effect of use of lines without the state to connect points within the state.—There may be interstate commerce between two points in the same state where a large portion of the connecting railroad is outside the state.[11] In Virginia the rule is differently applied to telegraph messages and a telegraphic message is there considered a domestic message, where the initial and terminal points are both in the same state, though the line passes in part through another state and the company has a relay office in such other state.[12]

COMMON LAW.

In general.[13]—Constitutional provisions control where there is a conflict between the constitution and the common law.[14]

Statutes in derogation of the common law are to be strictly construed.[15]

Construction of statutes enacting common law.—Statutes making the common law of England the rule of decision in cases not governed by the constitution or statutes so far applicable do not require adherence to the decisions of English common law courts before the Revolution, in cases where subsequent decisions either English or American contain better expositions of its principles.[16] Courts should hesitate to declare established common law doctrines inapplicable to a state, unless the inapplicability is general, extending to the whole or a greater part of the state or to a portion incapable of exact ascertainment.[17] The common law adopted by Illinois does not prohibit ordinary labor on Sunday.[18]

4. Commonwealth v. Read Phosphate Co., 23 Ky. L. R. 2284, 67 S. W. 45.

5. State v. Hanaphy, 117 Iowa, 15; In re Bergen, 115 Fed. 339; State v. Hickox, 64 Kan. 650, 68 Pac. 35; Ex parte Green, 114 Fed. 959; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 785.

6. Stone v. State (Ga.) 43 S. E. 740; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622; Kehrer v. Stewart (Ga.) 44 S. E. 854. Likewise one selling stoves shipped from another state in different parcels to be set up by an employe of the manufacturer—Harkins v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 75 S. W. 26. A license can be required from one receiving goods from a nonresident shipper in the original packages and delivered to the purchasers by such solicitor—Collier v. Burgin, 130 N. C. 632.

7. In re Pringle (Kan.) 72 Pac. 864.

8. Kehrer v. Stewart (Ga.) 44 S. E. 854.

9. Champion v. Ames, 188 U. S. 321.

10. Francis v. United States, 188 U. S. 375.

11. Hanley v. Arkansas City So. Ry. Co., 187 U. S. 617.

12. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Reynolds (Va.) 41 S. E. 856.

13. Common law marriage. See "Marriage." Forms of action at common law. See "Forms of Action."

14. Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Keith, 67 Ohio St. 279.

15. The rule has no application to a revision of the Kentucky statutes which are to be liberally construed with the purpose of promoting the object in view—Dillehay v. Hickey, 24 Ky. L. R. 1220, 71 S. W. 1.

16. Williams v. Miles (Neb.) 94 N. W. 705.

17. Meng v. Coffey (Neb.) 93 N. W. 713.

18. McCurdy v. Commercial Co., 102 Ill. App. 120.

Presumption of prevalence of common law in a sister state.—In the absence of evidence, there is a presumption that the common law prevails in a sister state,[19] and that it is the same in all the states.[20] Statutory modifications must be proved.[21]

Reference to common law for purposes of definition.—Though common law crimes do not exist, yet in seeking a definition of an act forbidden by statute but not defined, reference may be had to the common law.[22]

COMMON AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.[23]

§ 1. Right, privilege and duty of attendance.—A regulation as to admission to public schools can be questioned only by parents whose children are affected thereby.[24] Where there is a clear right to admission, there is no loss of the right by failure of a parent to make affidavit of the facts showing the right.[25] Admission of a pupil denied school privileges under illegal requirements may be compelled by mandamus.[26]

Compulsory school laws.—Compulsory education laws are within constitutional provisions allowing the enactment of wholesome and reasonable laws for the welfare of the state,[27] and do not interfere with the right of parental control of children.[28] Such laws do not require attendance where injurious to health,[29] and do not prevent occasional absence.[30]

Separate schools for races.—Where the advantages are equal, the states may provide separate schools for children of different races.[31] The Kansas law does not violate the provision of the constitution of the United States guaranteeing equal protection of the laws, nor does it invalidate the statutory rule against plurality of subjects.[32]

Vaccination of pupils.—In some states municipalities through their health departments may require vaccination as a condition to admission to public schools.[33]

19. Gaylord v. Duryea, 95 Mo. App. 574; Rush v. Landers, 107 La. 549, 57 L. R. A. 353. 32 Hen. VIII, entitling the assignee of a reversion to the rents, is a part of the common law of Illinois, and in the absence of evidence will be presumed to be the law of Iowa—David Bradley & Co. v. Coal Co., 99 Ill. App. 427.

20. Engstrand v. Kleffman, 86 Minn. 403.

21. Rush v. Landers, 107 La. 549, 57 L. R. A. 353.

22. State v. DeWolfe (Neb.) 93 N. W. 746.

23. See Colleges and Academies, for institutions of higher learning.

24. Board of Public Education v. Felder, 116 Ga. 788.

25. State ex rel. Biggs v. Penter, 96 Mo. App. 416.

26. Board of Education v. Felder, 116 Ga. 788; State ex rel. Biggs v. Penter, 96 Mo. App. 416.

27, 28, 29. State v. Jackson, 71 N. H. 552. On the question of excuse from attendance, under a compulsory attendance law, evidence that a child was in feeble health and was kept from school on the belief that attendance would affect her health, and that the board was so informed, is admissible—Id.

30. State v. Jackson, 71 N. H. 552.

31. White and colored children.—Reynolds v. Board of Education (Kan.) 72 Pac. 274; Hooker v. Greenville, 130 N. C. 472. Mongolians.—Wong Him v. Callahan, 119 Fed. 381.

32. Laws 1879, p. 163, c. 81—Reynolds v. Board of Education (Kan.) 72 Pac. 274.

33. State ex rel. Freeman v. Zimmerman, 86 Minn. 353.

In other states boards of education have this power only when smallpox is prevalent,[34] and in such states boards of health have no greater powers.[35]

Duty to furnish school facilities.—A town having provided sufficient school facilities on the mainland is not compelled to build a school house on an island adjacent thereto for the accommodation of a few children, where the authority to do so is questionable.[36]

Public conveyances for children attending school.—An appropriation for transporting scholars from an island off the coast to a district on the mainland will not be compelled, where the access is difficult and at times impossible.[37]

§ 2. School districts and sites.—Laws requiring a certain number of children of school age as a condition of newly formed cities or incorporated towns becoming school districts are constitutional.[38] Such laws will not affect a borough at its formation a part of the school district and not situated in the township, so as to cause it to become a part of the township school district.[39]

Formation, alteration, consolidation and dissolution of districts.—A legislature may create a school district from lands comprising other districts and give the new district the school property within its limits.[40] In the formation of districts, care must be taken that the boundary lines do not encroach on other districts.[41] Laws making a town liable for school property taken in by annexation do not apply to the original incorporation of a town, as this act does not amount to annexation,[42] and the property becomes the property of the town, notwithstanding an indebtedness thereon.[43] A school board is without power to alter a district under an act authorizing alteration, but providing no method of procedure.[44] A failure to comply with the statute as to the mode of procedure of changing school districts amounts to a jurisdictional defect invalidating action.[45] Where the officers acting on the petition for consolidation have proceeded, after being satisfied that the petition was regularly signed and the district has erected buildings, chosen school officers and maintained the school, objections on the ground of irregularity in obtaining consent of taxpayers will not be considered.[46] Jurisdiction to establish a school district on petition of a majority of the resident freeholders of the district is not lost by the fact that at the time of the hearing the number of freeholders had increased so that there was no longer a majority signed to the peti-

34, 35. Osborn v. Russell, 64 Kan. 507, 68 Pac. 60.

36, 37. Newcomb v. Inhabitants of Rockport, 183 Mass. 74.

38. State v. Board of Education (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 398. Supplemental School Law N. J. March 22, 1895.

39. State v. Board of Education (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 398.

40. Attorney General ex rel. Kies v. Lowrey (Mich.) 92 N. W. 289.

41. Rev. St. 1899, § 9742—State ex rel. School Dist. No. 1 v. Denny, 94 Mo. App. 559. In determining the location of a line separating districts and laid out by the officers of the two districts, the rules applicable to ordinary surveys will not be followed and a line acquiesced in for twenty years will be held the true boundary line—Castleman v. Trustees, 24 Ky. L. R. 88, 68 S. W. 17. Sufficiency of evidence as to the location of disputed boundary in mandamus proceedings to compel the extension of a levy—State v. Beale, 90 Mo. App. 341.

42. Maumee School Tp. v. School Town, 159 Ind. 423.

43. Maumee School Tp. v. School Town, 159 Ind. 423.

44. School Dist. No. 110 v. Palmer, 41 Or. 485, 69 Pac. 453.

45. Huyser v. Township Boards (Mich.) 91 N. W. 1020. In determining whether the action of Louisiana school directors in dividing parishes into districts is sufficiently formal, regard must be had as to whether the question is raised in connection with the distribution of the school fund or with reference to the exercise of the taxing power, as a greater degree of formality is required in the latter case—Burnham v. Police Jury, 107 La. 513. A statutory requirement that arbitrators, to pass upon the disputed boundary, shall be disinterested resident taxpayers of the county, is not complied with by a certificate reciting the appointment of certain voters of the county—State ex rel. Smart v. Wilson (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 404. The alteration of a petition for the establishment of a graded school district, after its approval by the trustee of one of the districts interested as to the location of the site, entirely invalidates subsequent proceedings—Waring v. Bertram (Ky.) 75 S. W. 222.

46. Howell v. Shannon (Mich.) 90 N. W. 410.

tion.[47] Proof of posting of notices for an election to change school districts is insufficient, unless it shows that the place of posting was actually a public place.[48] The notice should describe the territory to be affected.[49] The directors may not open the polls at the hour fixed by the statute for closing.[50] There may be no action by voters on a petition presented more than a year before, where, in the meantime, adverse action has been had by voters on a petition for consolidation of a larger area.[51] A majority of the members of a joint convention to establish a district from other territory constitutes a quorum, and their vote is sufficient for the provisional establishment of the district.[52] Under the Missouri law, it is a prerequisite to the appointment of arbitrators to pass upon the necessity for a division of a school district that voters of the district to be affected authorize the action.[53] The board of arbitrators need not keep a record of their proceedings.[54] Their proceedings are void where it does not appear that they ever met and considered the matter or found a necessity for the change.[55] After several years' acquiescence in the result of an election creating a graded school district, the action of the electors will not be invalidated by the fact that a slight excess of territory was included.[56] School districts are not parties having real interest allowing them to attack an act detaching territory, on the ground that taxes will be increased in the district and thus impair the security in the district's creditors.[57] An act attaching territory to a district by number is not invalid on the ground that the territory had never been legally designated by that number, where, as a matter of fact, it has long been known by that number and had been so designated in the tax list.[58] Holdings as to validity of statutes relating to the subject will be found in the notes.[59]

Independent school districts.—An independent school district has no vested right preventing detachment of territory to establish another independent school district.[60] In Iowa an independent school district will not lose its corporate existence, though reduced by detachment of territory to less than four sections, not-

47. Gerber v. Board of Com'rs (Minn.) 94 N. W. 886.

48. Notices were posted near certain residences without indicating that these were public places—Huyser v. Township Board (Mich.) 91 N. W. 1020.

49. School Dist. No. 4 v. Smith, 90 Mo. App. 215.

50. 1 Ball. Ann. Codes & Sts. § 2420—Peth v. Martin (Wash.) 71 Pac. 549.

51. Peth v. Martin (Wash.) 71 Pac. 549.

52. Board of Education of Van Buren Tp. v. Board of Education, 67 Ohio St. 326.

53. Rev. St. 1899, § 9742—School Dist. No. 4 v. Smith, 90 Mo. App. 215.

54. Rev. St. 1899, § 9742—State ex rel. School Dist. No. 1 v. Denny, 94 Mo. App. 559.

55. State ex rel. School Dist. No. 1 v. Denny, 94 Mo. App. 559.

56. Collins v. Masden, 25 Ky. L. R. 81, 74 S. W. 720. The election is not invalidated by the failure of the judge to sign the returns, where they are signed by the clerk—Id. Where the clerk of a school election board fails to act, the judge in Kentucky, with the consent of the voters present, may appoint another to act as clerk—Id.

57. Board of Education of Union Free School Dist. No. 6 v. Board of Education, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 355.

58. School Dist. No. 76 v. Ryker, 64 Kan. 612, 68 Pac. 34.

59. There is no plurality of subjects in the Kansas act allowing dissolution of districts and attachment of the same territory to another district for the purpose of forming a graded school—Ash v. Thorp, 65 Kan. 60, 68 Pac. 1067. School districts are municipal corporations within a constitution exempting municipal corporations from a provision against creating corporations by special act—Board of Education of Union Free School Dist. No. 6 v. Board of Education, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 355. Sufficiency of titles of acts incorporating school districts—Attorney General ex rel. Kies v. Lowrey (Mich.) 92 N. W. 289. Laws creating special school districts in certain townships violate the constitutional provision that laws of general nature shall have uniform operation—State v. Spellmire, 67 Ohio St. 77. Laws allowing a school district co-terminous with the city to elect as to the laws governing it are not objectionable as special or local legislation—Commonwealth ex rel. Martin v. Guthrie, 203 Pa. 209. In Michigan a school district may be created by a local act from a portion of the territory embraced in other districts, and authorizes the inspectors to attach lands not disposed of to other districts. Such laws are not generally open to the objection of impairing the obligation of contracts, or as depriving the people of local self-government, and the law otherwise valid is not entirely invalidated by the fact that it fixes the site of a school building—Attorney General ex rel. Kies v. Lowrey (Mich.) 92 N. W. 289.

60. Rural Independent School Dist. No. 10 v. New Independent School Dist. (Iowa) 94 N. W. 284.

withstanding a statutory provision requiring such districts to contain four sections.[61] The creation of an adjunct school district in Nebraska requires the concerted action of all the common school districts embraced therein, and the question must be submitted to a vote in all of such districts.[62]

Establishment of high schools.—In Louisiana parish boards of school directors may, with the approval of the state board, establish necessary high schools when suitable buildings and sites have been furnished, and draw for their support upon the general school fund before apportionment to the school districts.[63] The board of education can only perform the official acts, where there is a quorum thereof assembled after due notice.[64] A meeting of two members of a board of education at a time and place of which no notice had been given to other members is an illegal meeting.[65]

Use of building for other purposes.—In Louisiana public school buildings may not be used for theatrical performances.[66]

§ 3. Officers and school meetings. Municipal boards of education.—A city board of education is generally a municipal agency and not a body corporate,[67] and hence may not call an election to vote on a tax proposition without authorization of the city council,[68] nor is it a necessary party to an action to enjoin action on a text book contract.[69] The New York city board of education is made a distinct corporation by the charter, and may be sued as such for a teacher's salary.[70]

Selection of officers.—In Texas the trustees of a district comprising a town or village seeking incorporation are to be elected at the same time that the question of incorporation is voted on.[71] Laws making incorporated cities municipal school districts, with power to elect trustees at a meeting in a specified month, do not destroy the old board of trustees in cities afterwards incorporated, as such laws refer to existing cities, and it is the policy of the law to retain experienced school officers if possible,[72] and a city council acting under such laws in attempting to fill a vacancy must designate the vacancy intended to be filled.[73] In Kentucky the members of the board of education of cities of the fourth class must be elected by viva voce vote.[74] Under the laws of Wisconsin the office of county superintendent is a legislative one, and the legislature may fix the qualifications and prohibit the placing of the name of an ineligible candidate on the ballot.[75]

Qualification of officers.—Laws requiring a director to be a resident taxpayer and qualified voter do not intend that he must be a resident taxpayer of the district in which he is elected.[76]

Duties and liabilities of officers.—It is a duty to furnish certified copies of school records where the statute imposes a penalty on the district officer for failure to furnish the same,[77] and a school officer may not excuse his refusal to furnish same on the ground that the statute declares the copy admissible

61. Rural Independent School Dist. No. 10 v. New Independent School Dist. (Iowa) 94 N. W. 284.

62. State ex rel. Davis v. Board of Com'rs (Neb.) 95 N. W. 6.

63. Andrus v Parish Board, 108 La. 386.

64, 65. Cunningham v. Board of Education (W. Va.) 44 S. E. 129.

66. Sugar v. Monroe, 108 La. 677, 59 L. R. A. 723.

67, 68. Ocorr & Rugg Co. v. Little Falls, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 592.

69. Madden v. Kinney (Wis.) 93 N. W. 535.

70. Gunnison v. Board of Education, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 480.

71. Hillebrandt v. Devine (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 266.

72. Burns' Rev. St. 1901, §§ 3467, 5914, 5915—State v. Ogan, 159 Ind. 119. The course of constitutional and statutory enactment indicates a purpose to make the school system a centralized and not a localized one—Id. The entire obliteration of the existing district school organization, is not shown by the fact that the succeeding corporation is called a school city—Id.

73. State v. Ogan, 159 Ind. 119.

74. Elliott v. Burke, 24 Ky. L. R. 292, 68 S. W. 445.

75. Fordyce v. State, 115 Wis. 608.

76. State v. Fasse (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 745.

77, 78. Musback v. Schaefer, 115 Wis. 357.

as evidence.[78] School directors are personally liable for the funds lost to the school district through their misconduct,[79] and suit therefor may be brought by a resident patron for the use of himself and other patrons, and for the school district.[80] In Nebraska, in counties of less than two thousand school population, the number of days which a superintendent may be employed in the discharge of his official duties is left to his own sound discretion.[81] A county superintendent with power to order a census to be retaken, where he believes the census officer has not reported a correct list of school children, may not correct the list himself.[82] A New Hampshire moderator refusing to poll the voters in accordance with law is liable to a penalty.[83] Action of boards in matters within their jurisdiction may not be controlled by injunction.[84] A board of trustees may not use funds to erect a building at a particular site after the county board has decided on a different site.[85]

The treasurer may deposit funds in a solvent bank to his credit as treasurer.[86]

Tenure of office.—In Kentucky a city of the fourth class is without power to fill vacancies in the board of education, and the members hold over until their successors have been validly elected.[87] An act creating a school district, otherwise valid, is not invalidated by the fact that it appoints the first trustees and fixes their terms.[88] The constitutional requirement of uniformity in the public school system is violated by an act appointing designated persons as trustees of public schools in a certain town for a term of 20 years with power not given trustees of other common schools.[89] The action of a superintendent in changing boundaries will not oust trustees living in the districts so formed.[90] A statute allowing a trustee to hold office until the appointment of his successor does not apply to one removed from office.[91]

Quo warranto to test right to hold office.—Trustees of public schools are officers within the statutes allowing quo warranto against persons unlawfully holding an office.[92]

School meetings.—Laws requiring notice of the annual school meeting to specify the propositions to be submitted to the voters, and requiring the posting of the notice by the secretary, are mandatory and not directory, and require notice as to any special propositions.[93] In Arkansas the electors at a school district meeting may vote to dispense with the school for the year, and apply the proceeds to the building of a school house.[94] In Nebraska the site of a school house can only be changed at the annual school meeting.[95] A divorced woman denied the custody of children cannot vote under a law conferring school suffrage on widows and spinsters having custody of children.[96] In Arkansas the county judge sitting alone and not the quorum court opens the returns on a text book election.[97] A committee of a 79. Shannon's Code, § 1426—Finney v. Garner (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 592.

80. Finney v. Garner (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 592.

81. Chase County v. Kelley (Neb.) 95 N. W. 865.

82. State v. Wedge (Nev.) 72 Pac. 817.

83. Of $30—State v. Waterhouse, 71 N. H. 488.

84. Board of Education v. Holt, 51 W. Va. 435.

85. Sligh v. Bowers, 62 S. C. 409.

86. And is not guilty of embezzlement by depositing school funds in a bank within an act making it embezzlement for a school officer to loan school funds without authority, as the deposit is not a loan—Hunt v. Hopley (Iowa) 95 N. W. 205.

87. Elliott v. Burke, 24 Ky. L. R. 292, 68 S. W. 445. An appointment to a vacancy in a school board cannot be made prior to the time the office is vacated—Shepherd v. Gambill (Ky.) 75 S. W. 223.

88. Attorney General v. Lowrey (Mich.) 92 N. W. 289.

89. Ellis v. Greaves (Miss.) 34 So. 81.

90. Farley v. Gilbert, 24 Ky. L. R. 2109, 72 S. W. 1098.

91. Shepherd v. Gambill (Ky.) 75 S. W. 223.

92. Ellis v. Greaves (Miss.) 34 So. 81.

93. Code 1897, § 2746—Goerdt v. Trumm (Iowa) 91 N. W. 1067.

94. Hale v. Brown, 70 Ark. 471.

95. School Dist. No. 34 v. Stairs (Neb.) 95 N. W. 492.

96. Ball v. Cawood, 23 Ky. L. R. 2315, 67 S. W. 37.

97. Acts 1899, p. 147, § 3—Firestone v. White (Ark.) 71 S. W. 250.

school district, meeting to investigate the financial affairs, are not school officers within the laws allowing school officers their expenses in suits against them growing out of the performance of their official duties.[98]

§ 4. Property and contracts.[99] School lands.—Portions of the public domain held for school or educational endowment are treated as public lands.[1] Boards charged with the investment of a permanent school fund have power to assign mortgages to secure loans of such funds, though the power to assign is not expressly given by the laws.[2] In Texas school trustees may not convey lands belonging to school districts, unless authorized by an order of the commissioners' court.[3] A statute granting a right of way to railroads over lands belonging to the state does not embrace public school lands of the state.[4] In Washington school lands are liable to assessment for drainage purposes;[5] otherwise in North Dakota.[6] Under laws requiring trustees to take a fee simple title to lands in use for school sites, a tax may not be levied to pay for repairs on a building owned jointly by the district and other parties with a reversionary interest in favor of their grantor.[7]

Validity of contracts in general.—In some states school townships may contract for school supplies, though there is no contingent fund on hand at the time.[8] Where all the members of a school board are present, a contract by the school township may not be attacked on the ground that no notice of a special meeting was given.[9] The Nebraska laws allow a director with the consent of a moderator to contract for repairs during vacation,[10] and it is not necessary that the contract be entered into at the regular meeting of the school board.[11]

Under laws invalidating contracts in which school officers are pecuniarily interested, a district is not liable on a warrant in favor of trustees for repairs.[12]

Laws allowing districts to extend temporary aid to impoverished school children do not authorize a school corporation to contract a debt on behalf of the county with a third person for furnishing supplies to destitute scholars.[13]

The acceptance of a void warrant by the assignee of one furnishing school supplies will not deprive him of his right to insist on the original contract.[14]

A text book bond, conditioned that they should be sold at the lowest retail price fixed by the publishers anywhere in the United States, is not violated by sales at a less price in another state, where the publishers had not sold them at a price below that made to the complaining state.[15]

Proposals.—Unless the statutes require school boards to advertise for proposals and award the contract to the lowest bidder, the board is not restricted to that method.[16] A school board may delegate to a committee the duty of preparing specifications for contracts, and authorize it to conduct the negotiations.[17]

98. Consol. School Laws, § 264—People v. Skinner, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 58.

99. Teachers' Contracts, see post, § 6. Exemption of school property from taxation, see "Taxes."

1. See "Public Lands."

2. Lawrey v. Sterling, 41 Or. 518, 69 Pac. 460.

3. Crouch v. Posey (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 1001.

4. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Bowman (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 556.

5. State v. Henry, 28 Wash. 38, 68 Pac. 368.

6. Erickson v. Cass County, 11 N. D. 494.

7. Ky. St. 1899, § 4437—Dawson v. Trustees Common School Dist. No. 40, 24 Ky. L. R. 2027, 72 S. W. 806.

8. Johnson v. School Corp. of Cedar, 117 Iowa, 319.

9. Hanna v. Wright, 116 Iowa, 275. In Missouri an action of the school board at a meeting thereof whether in obedience to notice or by accident is valid, though there is a failure to preserve the minutes of the proceedings—Decker v. School Dist. No. 2 (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 390.

10, 11. Leonard v. State (Neb.) 93 N. W. 988.

12. Miller v. Sullivan (Wash.) 72 Pac. 1022.

13. Acts 1899, p. 550, § 6—Board of County Com'rs v. Falk, 29 Ind. App. 683.

14. Johnson v. School Corp. of Cedar, 117 Iowa, 319.

15. Mills v. Myers, 24 Ky. L. R. 971, 70 S. W. 412.

16. Kraft v. Board of Education, 67 N. J. Law, 512. They may not be required to let

Employment of attorneys.—School districts may employ attorneys to prosecute suits for the district, and an allowance for such service is proper.[18] Under a charter provision requiring a city attorney to defend suits against the board of education, such board may not employ a private attorney.[19] Nor is the board authorized to employ, under a provision giving them power to hire teachers, janitors and other employes.[20]

Contracts for text books.—A law authorizing a state board to contract for text books for a term of years is not objectionable as creating a monopoly.[21] In Wisconsin a city board of education may select text books without regard to the city council,[22] and there is a sufficient adoption within a law prohibiting a change within five years, by the passage of a resolution for the purchase and use of certain text books.[23] Laws requiring uniformity of text books refer only to the same grade and do not require that all text books on the same subject used in the different grades should be prepared by the same author.[24] The laws governing the reception of bids for furnishing school books in Utah are directory only, and a failure to literally comply with its terms is not important.[25] Laws providing that a school township may purchase books and shall levy a contingent fund therefor do not require contingent funds on hand as a condition to the purchase of such books.[26]

Ratification of action of officers.—There may be no recovery of moneys expended on a contract irregularly entered into where it has been fully performed by both parties and there is no claim of corrupt or fraudulent action by the officers, and the amount paid was not excessive.[27] The defeat of a motion not to accept the articles bought amounts to an approval.[28]

Whether contract that of the district or the members of board.—A district will not be liable on contracts made by the trustees in their individual capacity with reference to repairs on the school house.[29] A contract for supplies is valid, where signed by a majority of the board, the contract providing that a majority should sign, and is not an individual contract of the signers.[30] There is a con-the contract to union labor though advertisement so specifies—Id.

17. Kraft v. Board of Education, 67 N. J. Law, 512.

18. State v. Aven, 70 Ark. 291.

19. Denman v. Webster (Cal.) 70 Pac. 1063. A refusal of the attorney to defend will not authorize the employment of a private attorney where the charter authorizes the mayor to suspend an official refusing to discharge the duties of his office—Id.

20. Denman v. Webster (Cal.) 70 Pac 1063.

21. Rand, McNally & Co. v. Hartranft, 29 Wash. 591, 70 Pac. 77. The laws of Washington authorize the state board to contract for furnishing text books for a term of years; a later law organizing a county board, authorized such board to enter into a text book contract for a term of five years. Held not an impairment of the contract by the state board within the constitution against the laws impairing the obligation of contracts—Id.

22. Madden v. Kinney (Wis.) 93 N. W. 535.

23. Attorney General v. Board of Education (Mich.) 95 N. W. 746. The time is computed from the date of the resolution of adoption, and not from the time the text books are in use by the school—Id.

24. Attorney General v. Board of Education (Mich.) 95 N. W. 746.

25. Rev. St. § 1856—Tanner v. Nelson, 25 Utah, 226, 70 Pac. 984. There is a substantial compliance with laws requiring a convention to meet and publicly open proposals for furnishing text books by a public opening and the reading of introductory portions of the bids and accompanying communications, and their reference to committees, where the bids are voluminous and containing large catalogues and price lists—Id. Where a convention for the adoption of uniform text books bases a bond on the amount required for furnishing a certain class of text books, it is no objection that they fail to fix the amount of bonds for furnishing other books; the same method will apply—Id.

26. Code, § 2783—Hanna v. Wright, 116 Iowa, 275.

27. Kagy v. Independent Dist. of West Des Moines, 117 Iowa, 694; Johnson v. School Corp. of Cedar, 117 Iowa, 319.

28. Johnson v. School Corp. of Cedar, 117 Iowa, 319. There is a ratification of an unauthorized contract for school supplies, where the goods were accepted and used without objection and payment made thereon, and no objection was made to the contract when brought before a subsequent annual meeting—Haney School Furniture Co. v. School Dist. No. 1 (Mich.) 94 N. W. 726.

29. Moore v. Leonard Independent School Dist. (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 324.

30. Johnson v. School Corp. of Cedar, 117 Iowa, 319.

tract with the school district by its directors and not with directors as individuals, where the contract recites that the directors were parties of the second part and the parties in an action on the contract stipulated that the directors had made the contract, and the building on its completion was accepted by such board.[31]

Contractor's bonds.—Sureties on a contractor's bond payable to the directors, and not to the school district are not relieved from liability by that fact, as the school directors acted in their representative capacity,[32] nor by an unauthorized attempt to cancel the bond so that the contractor might receive the insurance on a building destroyed while in course of construction.[33] Subcontractors are not included in a statute requiring contractors for the erection of public buildings to give bonds to secure amounts due mechanics and laborers.[34]

Actions on contracts.—There is no joint liability authorizing a joinder as defendants of a town and a school district, on the ground that the town is the successor of the school district on its dissolution.[35] A board of education sued for breach of a contract may not defend on the ground that public funds could not be used to pay damages,[36] and has the burden of establishing a defense of ultra vires in an action for breach of contract.[37]

§ 5. Fiscal affairs of district. Investment of school funds.—Under the constitution of Nebraska authorizing the investment of the school fund in bonds or state securities, bonds of other states running not less than thirty nor more than forty years with three per cent. interest may be purchased.[38]

Tuition and incidental fees.—In South Carolina the trustees of graded schools may not charge incidental fees.[39] New Hampshire towns not being authorized to maintain high schools and having no school boards are not liable under a law requiring towns not maintaining high schools to pay the tuition of children therein attending schools in another town or city.[40] Laws allowing children living within one-half mile of the city limits to attend the nearest city school free of tuition do not violate the constitutional provision against depriving one of property without due process of law.[41] In an action on a tuition note given by a parent, it is proper to submit the question whether the note was given as a compromise of a doubtful claim.[42]

Debt limit.—A contract in excess of the debt limit is valid to the extent of the limit.[43] For the purpose of determining whether a debt limit has been exceeded, a contract is considered to have been created on the day the contract was made.[44] Prior to action by the state board of equalization, an assessment is not complete, so that the question whether the debt limit has been exceeded must be determined by the tax roll of the preceding year.[45] An unexpended balance on hand will not sustain a debt in excess of the limit unless such balance to the extent of the excess is appropriated for payment of the debt.[46] Where the district indebtedness exceeds the constitutional limit the levy to pay the debt

31. Wabash R. Co. v. People, 202 Ill. 9.

32, 33. Finney v. Garner (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 592.

34. Comp. St. 1901, c. 54, art. 2, § 1—Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Parkinson (Neb.) 94 N. W. 120.

35. Cunningham v. Town of Orange, 74 Vt. 115.

36, 37. Morgan v. Board of Education, 136 Cal. 245, 68 Pac. 703.

38. State v. Stuefer (Neb.) 92 N. W. 646.

39. Young v. Trustees of Fountain Inn Graded School, 64 S. C. 131.

40. Union School Dist. v. Dist. No. 20, 71 N. H. 269. The term "town" is held to include school districts—Id.

41. Edmondson v. Board of Education, 108 Tenn. 557.

42. School Dist. of Barnard v. Matherly, 90 Mo. App. 403.

43. Wabash R. Co. v. People, 202 Ill. 9.

44. Wabash R. Co. v. People, 202 Ill. 9. The acceptance of a bid to construct school buildings will not amount to an increase of the district's indebtedness, it being understood at the time that a formal contract should be afterwards signed and the contractor furnish a bond—Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. People, 195 Ill. 423.

45, 46. Wabash R. Co. v. People, 202 Ill. 9.

may be defeated.[47] A tax for payment of the valid portion of a building contract is not rendered invalid by the subsequent issue of bonds to pay the invalid portion of such contract.[48]

Levy and collection of taxes.—A tax refused at an annual meeting may be levied at a later special meeting called for that purpose.[49] A levy is not invalid because of the failure of the school board to submit the proposed rate to the meeting.[50] A levy will be defeated for unwarranted interference in the election by the school officers.[51] Councilmen approving school tax levies made by a board of education act as ex officio members of the board and not as municipal officers.[52] A school board may levy an annual tax for the interest of bonds and sinking fund without the consent of a school meeting.[53] On division of a school district, a county board in Nebraska may levy the whole amount necessary for both districts within the statutory limit, but having failed to do so by levying on the basis of a district certificate, each district is entitled only to the amount levied in its favor and no more.[54]

An election as to a levy to establish a graded school is not rendered invalid by a variance in the order as to the term at which the petition was filed, where the record is correct and the recital in the order a mistake,[55] and the certificate of commissioners comparing the vote at such election need not show that notice was given, as it is a part of the record.[56] An objection on this score will be disregarded, where the school has been carried on for several years without any objection.[57]

A school tax may be levied on a statement reciting that the purpose of the tax is to meet current and running expenses.[58] Where the levy designates the amount necessary for building and educational purposes, a separation of the amount for building and for sites and a specification of items under the amount intended for educational purposes is not necessary.[59] The failure of the district clerk to deliver to selectmen an attested copy of the vote of the district to raise money will not invalidate the levy, as the statutory provision is directory and not mandatory as to the time.[60]

A general act limiting a levy for school purposes does not apply to an independent school district.[61] The Nebraska Act limiting a levy and requiring certification of the tax to the county clerk has reference to taxes levied by the electors and does not apply to taxes certified to county authorities by the county superintendent on the creation of a new school district.[62] Levies to pay interest and principal of bonds are not within laws limiting levies for educational and building purposes.[63]

In New York the school tax list and warrant and renewal thereof requires the joint action of the entire board of trustees.[64]

47. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. People, 195 Ill. 423.

48. Wabash R. Co. v. People, 202 Ill. 9.

49. Stanton v. Board of Education (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 236.

50. Benton v. Scott, 168 Mo. 378.

51. Officers suggested amount to be voted —Bennett v. Staples (La.) 34 So. 801.

52. School Dist. No. 76 v. Ryker, 64 Kan. 612, 68 Pac. 34.

53. Rev. St. 1899, §§ 9757, 9758—Benton v. Scott, 168 Mo. 378. The laws of Missouri authorizing a levy to pay interest on school bonds and to create a sinking fund are not limited to bonds issued prior to the constitution of 1875 or issued to refund an indebtedness existing at that time.

54. School Dist. No. 1 v. McCormick (Neb.) 93 N. W. 956.

55, 56, 57. Trustees of Fordsville Graded School Dist. No. 96 v. McCarty, 24 Ky. L. R. 164, 68 S. W. 147.

58. Stanton v. Board of Education (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 236.

59. Koelling v. People, 196 Ill. 353.

60. Pub. St. c. 90, § 18—Smith v. Swain, 71 N. H. 277.

61. State v. Babcock, 87 Minn. 234.

62. School Dist. No. 1 v. McCormick (Neb.) 93 N. W. 956.

63. Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, c. 122, § 202—Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. People, 195 Ill. 423.

64. Beck v. Kerr, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 173.

On proceedings to enforce a school district tax, the certificate may be amended by changing the date in a certificate to conform to that of the board meeting,[65] and an omitted signature may be supplied.[66] An objection that the levy is to pay an unconstitutional debt may be raised in such proceedings.[67] Taxes having once been paid, the court may not disallow them in a proceeding for a judgment on the levy of other taxes.[68] Residents of a school district objecting to a tax, on the ground that the boundaries are so fixed as to make an attendance of the school children difficult, must show that their own children are incommoded or their taxes are increased by the manner in which the boundaries have been fixed.[69] Under the laws authorizing the acceptance of school warrants for taxes, the warrant must conform to the law governing the issuance of such warrants, and does not authorize the acceptance of a warrant payable in the future.[70] In mandamus proceedings to compel the payment of taxes on disputed territory to the district, the court is without power to compel payment by a collector, unless the taxes were levied by such district.[71]

School bonds.—In South Carolina a town may issue bonds for the erection of a school house within the municipality, though the school be controlled by school authorities.[72] Bonds will not be invalidated for confusion between a number and a name applied to the district issuing the bonds, where both terms have been indiscriminately applied.[73] A school district in Wisconsin is authorized to borrow money to pay school orders issued in compromise of suit against it only where there is an unusual exigency.[74] Under laws requiring the notice of the sale of bonds to give the amount of the bonds to be sold, time to run, where payable, the nature of the option to redeem, etc., a notice naming the rate of interest the bonds were to draw is not void, though it does not ask the bidders to name the rate at which they would accept such bonds.[75] Bonds issued for the payment of orders, void for want of power in the directors to settle claims or issue the orders, are not refunding bonds within an act providing that no tax is required to be levied as a condition to issuance of refunding bonds.[76] Where it is made a condition to the issuance of bonds that a levy of a tax for the payment of bonds and interest be first made, it will not be presumed that the levy of the tax was voted at a previous special meeting, where there was merely a levy for the payment of the annual interest, at the meeting called to ratify acts of directors in issuing the bonds.[77]

Where school district bonds are issued in excess of the debt limit, a court may not reduce them to an amount within the limit, as the bonds are entirely invalid,[78] and it is not important that the money obtained from the sale of the bonds has been used in the construction of school buildings.[79] The laws of Texas do not require that bonds for the erection of school buildings should be paid out of the levy for the maintenance of schools.[80]

65, 66. Indiana, D. & W. Ry. Co. v. People, 201 Ill. 351.

67, 68. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. People, 195 Ill. 423.

69. Burnham v. Police Jury, 107 La. 513.

70. Coler v. Sterling, 15 S. D. 415.

71. State v. Beale, 90 Mo. App. 341.

72. Allen v. Adams, 66 S. C. 344. A constitutional provision against the enactment of special laws, where general laws could be made to apply, will not invalidate an act authorizing the issuance of bonds to erect a school building in a specified school district—State v. Brock, 66 S. C. 357.

73. State v. Brock, 66 S. C. 357.

74. Sanb. & B. Ann. St. §§ 474, 475, 476A—Montpelier Sav. Bank & Trust Co. v. School Dist. No. 5, 115 Wis. 622.

75. Parkinson v. Seattle School Dist. No. 1, 28 Wash. 335, 68 Pac. 875.

76, 77. Montpelier Sav. Bank & Trust Co. v. School Dist. No. 5, 115 Wis. 622.

78. Thornburgh v. School Dist. No. 3 (Mo.) 75 S. W. 81. And there is no estoppel in favor of bona fide purchasers before maturity—Id.

79. Thornburgh v. School Dist. No. 3 (Mo.) 75 S. W. 81.

80. Kennedy v. Birch (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 593.

Orders and warrants for payment of claims.—Warrants should be countersigned by the secretary of the board and drawn by the president[81] on the authorization of the rest of the school board.[82] There is a presumption, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that an order against the contingent fund of a school district was within the amount allowed by law to be drawn.[83] Mandamus lies to compel the issuance of an order for payment of a bill where the bill has been audited and taxes therefor collected,[84] and to compel a school district treasurer to register and pay properly drawn orders.[85] The fact that a claim against a school district has been reduced to judgment does not have the effect of changing the character of the claim as to the fund from which it should be paid.[86] Generally an anticipation of revenue is not allowed.[87] In Iowa it is no longer a condition to appropriations against the contingent fund that there should be unappropriated money on hand.[88]

Apportionment of funds.[89]—A school district receiving less than its proportion of the school fund may be reimbursed at the next division of the fund.[90] A new district in which no teacher had been employed is not entitled to a share of the primary school fund, where participation in apportionment depends on whether school had been taught for a certain period.[91] Under an act directing an equal division of property between districts due up to a certain period, a new district is not entitled to funds afterwards apportioned.[92] The term independent school districts in the apportionment laws of Texas refers to schools in incorporated towns and cities and not districts created by the commissioners' court.[93] In Texas commissioners' courts have no power to apportion the county school fund.[94] A railroad school tax collected for a graded school must be apportioned between the graded school and colored school district within the territory occupied by the graded school,[95] and the right thereto is not defeated by the fact that no tax was levied on the property of the colored people in the district.[96] Where the colored district is larger than the boundaries of the white district, the apportionment of a railroad school tax must be made on the basis

81. Andrus v. Parish Board of Directors, 108 La. 386.

82. Johnson v. School Corp. of Cedar, 117 Iowa, 319.

83. Farmers' & M. State Bank v. School Tp. of Rock Creek (Iowa) 92 N. W. 676.

84. People v. Anderson, 109 N. Y. St. Rep. 240.

85. Leonard v. State (Neb.) 93 N. W. 988.

86. State v. Cusenberry (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 701.

87. Andrus v. Parish Board of Directors, 108 La. 386.

88. Farmers' & M. State Bank v. School Tp. of Rock Creek (Iowa) 92 N. W. 676.

89. Right of orphan asylum schools to share in the school fund see, "Charitable and Correctional Institutions."

90. Andrus v. Parish Board of Directors, 108 La. 386.

91. Deckerville High School Dist. v. School Dist. No. 3 (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1064.

92. Deckerville High School Dist. v. School Dist. No. 3 (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1064. Under the California law requiring the apportionment of school moneys on hand after apportioning to the districts in proportion to the average attendance in each district during the preceding year will not permit the distribution of the surplus to a new district formed during the school year. Pol. Code. § 1858, subds. 3 and 4. The rule is not changed by the fact that section 1859 provides that no school district except one newly formed is entitled to receive any apportionment of state or county school moneys which has not maintained a public school for at least six months during the next preceding year—Sunol School Dist. v. Chipman, 138 Cal. 251, 71 Pac. 340. A tax voted before, but collected after, the formation of a new district from another district, but going to the treasurer of the old district, is a credit within an act governing the apportionment of credits. A tax voted by a school district before, but warrants for the collection of which need not go to the treasurer until after, the formation of a new district from the old territory, is not property within an act for the apportionment of property—School Dist. No. 9 v. School Dist. No. 5 (Wis.) 95 N. W. 148.

93. Wester v. Oge (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 1005. Law of Texas authorizing the apportionment of school funds by the county superintendent to the districts including independent school districts, is constitutional—Id.

94. Wester v. Oge (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 1005.

95. Sp. Act March 29, 1878, Ky. St. §§ 4423, 4101—Board of Trustees v. Morris, 24 Ky. L. R. 1420, 71 S. W. 654.

96. Ky. St. § 4101—Board of Trustees v. Morris, 24 Ky. L. R. 1420, 71 S. W. 654.

of the white and colored children of school age living in the territory of the white district.[97]

Support of public libraries from school funds.—Taxes collected for school purposes may not be used to maintain a public library not under control of the board of education.[98]

§ 6. Teachers and instruction. Issuance of certificates.—A county superintendent may not refuse to issue a certificate where a majority of the examiners certify that the teacher has passed the required examination.[99] In New York it is the duty of the superintendent to enter names of teachers passing examination on lists to be kept in his office.[1] A school certificate issued after examination on request of the board of education is valid until revoked, though the section of the law under which the request for the examination was made had been repealed prior to the issuance of the certificate.[2]

A teacher's license is the subject of forgery within the criminal code.[3]

Contracts of employment.—The employment of a teacher for a year intends a school year.[4] Under laws requiring a contract of employment to specify the amount of his compensation, there may not be an enforcement of a contract providing that teachers should teach for the public money to be apportioned according to an agreement yet to be made.[5] There is a presumption that school authorities employ legally qualified teachers.[6] A law requiring the possession of a certificate as a condition to employment intends that the teacher should have the certificate at the time of commencing to teach and not at the time of employment,[7] and contract is not forfeited by failure to receive certificate until the day after the opening of the school, where the teacher was entitled thereto on the opening day.[8] A condition in a contract requiring an examination before a district superintendent may not be enforced where there is no such officer.[9] A teacher not allowed to teach under her contract is not required to file her teacher's certificate with the clerk as a condition to recovery for breach of the contract.[10] The contract of employment of a teacher is void where entered into by a portion of the trustees without notice to other trustees.[11] In some states a vote or resolution at a board meeting is required.[12] In an action for breach of a teacher's

97. Board of Trustees v. Morris, 24 Ky. L. R. 1420, 71 S. W. 654. In Maryland, the comptroller having apportioned the school funds for colored schools according to the colored population will not be compelled to make a distribution according to the white population under another section of the statute governing the matter—Shriver v. Hering (Md.) 54 Atl. 651.

98. Board of Education v. Board of Trustees, 24 Ky. L. R. 98, 68 S. W. 10.

99. Northington v. Sublette, 24 Ky. L. R. 835, 69 S. W. 1076. Mandamus to compel issuance will lie—Id.

1. People v. Maxwell, 114 N. Y. St. Rep. 726. The board having power to make a rule requiring separate lists for each grade the holder of license may not compel the making of a single list for both male and female licensed teachers of such grade—Id; Brooklyn Teachers' Ass'n v. Board of Education, 83 N. Y. Supp. 1.

2. Snell v. Glasgow (Minn.) 95 N. W. 881.

3. Arnold v. State (Ark.) 74 S. W. 513; Brooks v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 507.

4. Williams v. Bagnelle, 138 Cal. 699, 72 Pac. 408; Crabb v. School Dist. No. 1, 93 Mo. App. 254.

5. Mingo v. Trustees of Colored Common School Dist., 24 Ky. L. R. 288, 68 S. W. 483.

6. Hughes v. School Dist. No. 37, 66 S. C. 259.

7. Crabb v. School Dist. No. 1, 93 Mo. App. 254; Hughes v. School Dist. No. 37, 66 S. C. 259.

8. Crabb v. School Dist. No. 1, 93 Mo. App. 254. Question may not be raised where board employed a teacher in place of the plaintiff several days before the commencement of the school term—Id.

9, 10. Crabb v. School Dist. No. 1, 93 Mo. App. 254.

11. Scott v. Pendley, 24 Ky. L. R. 1431, 71 S. W. 647. Failure to notify one is not excused on the ground that the trustee had expressed his opinion adverse to the employment of such teacher—Id.

12. Comp. Laws, § 4671—Cowley v. School Dist. No. 3 (Mich.) 90 N. W. 680. Under laws allowing teachers' contracts to be made by a district board and reserving to the school district meeting power to decide as to sex of the teacher to be employed the district at its next meeting after the contract with the teacher may terminate the same by deciding to employ a teacher of a different sex. (Rev. St. Wis. 1898, § 428)—Hemingway v. Joint School Dist. No. 1 (Wis.) 95 N. W. 116.

contract, evidence as to the conduct of the teacher at a previous term is irrelevant.[13]

Employment of relatives.—Under laws invalidating contracts entered into with relatives of school officers, a contract with the wife of a school director to teach the school is void.[14] A second cousin of a school director or his wife may not be employed without petition under a law prohibiting employment of relatives within the fourth degree of consanguinity.[15]

Dismissal, suspension and reassignment.—In Pennsylvania teachers may be suspended for a refusal to comply with the regulation requiring vaccination.[16] In New York City competent teachers as well as superintendents and other officials are protected from removal during good behavior,[17] and cannot be reassigned to a lower grade at a reduced salary except after trial on charges.[18] Assignment to a lower grade with a reduction of salary amounts to a removal and not an assignment, and can only be brought about for cause.[19] The evening schools in New York City are a part of the common school system,[20] and a principal of an evening high school will not lose his grade by accepting employment as principal of an evening elementary school.[21] A principal of an evening school discharged because his services are unnecessary, may not have mandamus to compel reinstatement where the laws authorize the abolition of unnecessary positions.[22] The New York charter allows preference to be extended to teachers displaced by consolidation or discontinuance of schools.[23] The charter allows removal only on charges preferred and after trial, and supersedes the law making marriage of a teacher a vacation of her position.[24] A board of education having the power for good and sufficient reasons to reduce the number of classes in the public schools may determine the teachers to be retired.[25] Where directors have no power to dismiss a teacher employed under contract, an attempt to dismiss is without effect, hence the effect of a teacher leaving school under such dismissal is an abandonment of her contract.[26]

Persons liable for breach of contract.—The district and not the trustees is liable for the violation of a teacher's contract where the laws make the trustees a body politic and corporate.[27]

Payment of salary.—A teacher is an employe and not a city official and may not recover for deduction of salary for absence where the board refuses to excuse her for such absence.[28] A teacher may contract for a salary for the entire term of her employment, and it is not necessary that the contract should provide for monthly payments of salary thereunder, and it is not necessary that the payments should be made monthly.[29] The fact that a school teacher has no control over the action of the trustees will not cause a strict enforcement of a requirement that orders specify the amount of the salary due and the month for which due, as a 13. Hughes v. School Dist. No. 37, 66 S. C. 259.

14. Nuckols v. Lyle (Idaho) 70 Pac. 401.

15. Holt v. Watson (Ark.) 71 S. W. 262.

16. Lyndall v. High School Committee, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 232.

17, 18, 19. Greater N. Y. Charter, § 1117, as amended and re-enacted by Laws 1901, p. 479, c. 466, § 1101—People v. Board of Education, 174 N. Y. 169.

20. Cusack v. Board of Education, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 470.

21. O'Leary v. Board of Education, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 475.

22. Cusack v. Board of Education, 174 N. Y. 136.

23. Cusack v. Board of Education, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 470.

24. In re Murphy, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 166.

25. The school board is amply justified in reducing the number of teachers in a high school, where another high school in the same city employs the same number of teachers to instruct double the number of pupils—Bates v. Board of Education (Cal.) 72 Pac. 907.

26. Oakes v. Simrell (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1060.

27. Ky. St. § 4437—Mingo v. Trustees of Colored Common School Dist., 24 Ky. L. R. 288, 68 S. W. 483.

28. Murphy v. Board of Education, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 706.

29, 30. Williams v. Bagnelle, 138 Cal. 699, 72 Pac. 408.

condition to the issuance of the requisition for their payment.[30] In a controversy between rival teachers as to which is entitled to an allowance for teaching the school, neither will be paid, where the one who taught did so without a valid contract, and the one legally entitled to teach had not taught.[31]

Teachers' pensions.—Pension funds for teachers may not be created by retention of a percentage from teachers' salaries.[32] The Ohio act is a taking of private property for the use of another without the consent of the owner and violates the constitutional requirements of uniformity of taxation and is not uniform in its operation when applied to only one city.[33]

Liability of teacher.—A principal of a public school is not liable to a merchant for damages by loss of business sustained by reason of a rule requiring pupils to go to their homes immediately at the close of school.[34]

Religious instruction.—Pupils in a public school cannot be required either to attend religious services or to take part in them.[35] The laws do not forbid the use of the Bible in the public schools, and courts have no power to declare its use unlawful, because it is possible or probable that there will be an abuse of the privilege in the interest of particular theological sects.[36] The point where courts may rightfully interfere to prevent its use is where legitimate use has degenerated into abuse.[37]

§ 7. Control and discipline of scholars and regulation of attendance.—During school hours the teacher's requests to his pupils amount practically to demands.[38]

There may be no recovery for an expulsion after hearing on account of a refusal to require other pupils to testify as to difficulty with the teacher, for which the pupil was expelled, unless it is shown that the refusal was based on bad faith.[39] In such an action there may be no recovery for board or tuition at a private school, unless payment for such board or tuition is shown.[40] There may be no recovery for an injury to a pupil's feelings or his loss of standing in the community caused by expulsion.[41]

The board may delegate to a committee the investigation of charges against the pupil.[42]

Corporal punishment.—Reasonable punishment of pupils is excepted from the penal code of Texas defining and punishing assault and battery.[43] Severe punishment of a pupil will not justify an assault by the parent on the teacher the following day.[44]

§ 8. Decisions, rulings and orders of school officers and review of same.—Findings of a superintendent in forming a school district embraced in other districts do not require the formality of legal judgments.[45] A change of the time of hearing is not material where it involves merely the change of one day and is made on the day the order is issued.[46] There is a presumption that officers in changing school boundaries have sufficient reason for their acts.[47] Certiorari is a proper remedy to review the action of officers in establishing

31. Shepherd v. Gambill (Ky.) 75 S. W. 223.
32. State v. Rogers, 87 Minn. 130.
33. Hibbard v. State, 65 Ohio St. 574.
34. Jones v. Cody (Mich.) 92 N. W. 495.
35. State v. Scheve (Neb.) 93 N. W. 169, 59 L. R. A. 927.
36. State v. Scheve (Neb.) 93 N. W. 169, 59 L. R. A. 927. The school authorities have the right to pass upon the question whether it is prudent or politic to permit Bible reading in the public schools; whether the practice takes the form of sectarian instruction is a question for the courts.—Id.
37. State v. Scheve (Neb.) 93 N. W. 169, 59 L. R. A. 927.
38. Judgment (1902) 91 N. W. 846, affirmed on rehearing—State v. Scheve (Neb.) 93 N. W. 169, 59 L. R. A. 927.
39, 40, 41. Rev. Laws, c. 44, § 7—Morrison v. City of Lawrence, 181 Mass. 127.
42. Miller v. Clement (Pa.) 55 Atl. 32.
43. Pen. Code, art. 593—Stephens v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 68 S. W. 281.
44. Walkley v. State, 133 Ala. 183.
45, 46. Blart v. Myers (Neb.) 91 N. W. 573.
47. Farley v. Gilbert, 24 Ky. L. R. 2109, 72 S. W. 1098.

a school district.[48] In New York the superintendent of public instruction has jurisdiction of an appeal by an aggrieved person against an allowance for the expense of defending a libel suit defended by one of the committees of the school meeting.[49]

COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS.

A composition operates as an accord and satisfaction.[50] The giving of a fraudulent preference, though it avoid the composition as to other creditors, does not as to the preferred creditor, and the sums received by him cannot be recovered back, but in bankruptcy proceedings against the debtor, they must be surrendered before the creditor can prove another claim.[51] A debtor is not released by a composition by his co-debtor in which he did not join.[52] A binding new promise to pay in full may be made by one member of the debtor firm.[53]

CONCEALING BIRTH OR DEATH.

Indictment.—An averment as to the manner of concealment may be rejected as surplusage.[1-38]

CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT.

§ 1. The warrant or cognovit.—A warrant or cognovit is always necessary to entry of the judgment; it must be exact as to the parties confessing,[39] and must be strictly construed.[40] A warrant in a note though it will not support a judgment under the New Jersey law will give validity to a judgment in a foreign state.[41] The warrant in a note does not require a War Revenue stamp.[42]

§ 2. The confession of judgment; requisites and validity.—A confession of judgment compelled by a creditor, without notice of a scheme of the debtor to defraud his creditors and before it is completed, is valid.[43] Purchasers from a defendant against whom judgment by confession has been entered, cannot object that the debt on which suit was brought was not due.[44] The original authority to accept a confession of judgment by one of two joint debtors is immaterial if the creditors with full knowledge attempt to enforce it.[45] The judgment will be presumed regular as to term of rendition, process, time of appearance, trial and rendition, where its recitals as to the cause are full in all particulars; it will be valid though there is no affidavit by plaintiff if it recites waiver of service.[46]

§ 3. Opening or vacating the judgment.—Motions to vacate judgments by confession may be entertained by courts of law,[47] but a judgment will not be vacated except on a clear showing that defendant does not owe its amount.[48] An

48. Huyser v. Township Boards of School Inspectors (Mich.) 91 N. W. 1020.

49. People v. Skinner, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 58. The law giving an aggrieved person a right to appeal from a decision of the school district meeting, intends only persons attending such meeting—Id.

50. See "Accord and Satisfaction," ante, pp. 8, 10, note 60.

51. In re Chaplin, 115 Fed. 162.

52. N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1942—Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank v. Hawn, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 640.

53. The compromise expressed that the firm desired to resume business—Taylor v. Hotchkiss, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 470.

1-38. Wright v. United States (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 819.

39. Cognovit or warrant by A. Bernstein & Co. will justify confession against A. Bernstein—Bernstein v. Curran, 99 Ill. App. 179.

40. A warrant to confess judgment in favor of the holder of a note is a special authority and cannot be extended to one not a holder—National Exch. Bank v. Wiley (Neb.) 92 N. W. 582.

41. Construing 1 Gen. St. p. 172—Shelmerdine v. Lippincott (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 237.

42. War Revenue Act, June 13, 1898—Treat v. Tolman (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 892.

43. That the same attorneys who aided in the scheme were employed by the creditor will not affect the judgment if he had no notice of it—Barker v. Franklin, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 292.

44. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1274, subd. 2, and § 1277—St. John Wood-Working Co. v. Smith, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 348.

45. Tootle, Hosea & Co. v. Otis (Neb.) 95 N. W. 681.

46. Smith v. Ridley (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 235.

47. Baragwanath v. Lasher, 203 Ill. 247.

48. In vacating such judgments a court application to open a judgment by confession is addressed to the equitable as well as the legal powers of the court, and they will be exercised on application of any defendant without regard to joinder or non-joinder of co-defendants.[49] A judgment confessed under a power in a note will not be set aside because the face of the note shows a change in the place of contract where the alteration could not affect the right to enter judgment within the state.[50] Failure to comply with the terms of a warrant in a lease as an agreement for an amicable action of ejectment will justify opening the judgment.[51] That a note on which judgment was entered was secured by undue influence and duress may be cause, in the discretion of the court, for opening the judgment.[52]

Procedure and evidence.—Delay of one year before application to open a judgment on a note alleged to be forged will not be fatal if the note was, in fact, forged; such delay may be excused where it results from advice of counsel. Terms on the opening requiring that the note shall stand as a prima facie case for plaintiff on trial may be stricken out on due notice after trial and new trial granted. The question of forgery of a note containing a warrant cannot be determined merely from comparison of the signature with another shown to be genuine; and plaintiff has the burden of establishing the validity of the instrument. If the judgment is opened generally, plaintiff must prove his case as though no judgment had been entered.[53]

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

§ 1. Contracts in general.—The validity of a contract[54] as to form and the solemnities to be followed therein,[55] as, for instance, application of the statute of frauds,[56] or of the statutes governing the sale of intoxicating liquors,[57] of law acts with purely equitable jurisdiction—Pearce v. Miller, 99 Ill. App. 424; Whalen v. Billings, 104 Ill. App. 281. Judgment against a surety on a bond will be vacated where it appears that he did not sign, unless it also appears that some one duly authorized signed for him—Charles D. Kaier Co. v. O'Brien, 202 Pa. 153. Where a member of a building association had made considerable payments for which she received no credit and excessive fines had been imposed upon her, a judgment entered against her on warrant will be opened—Provident Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Cresswell, 204 Pa. 105. Sufficiency of evidence to warrant opening of judgment—Shannon v. Castner, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 294.

49. Custer v. Harmon, 105 Ill. App. 76.

50. Krantz v. Kazenstein, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 275.

51. Weaver v. McDevitt, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 597.

52. Note secured by son from parents through fear and a mingled desire to give him a preferred claim and provide for him—McMahon v. McMahon, 203 Pa. 16.

53. Shannon v. Castner, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 294.

54. Emerson Co. v. Proctor, 97 Me. 360. The legality of stock sales made by broker's correspondents in New York depends on the laws of that state—Gaylord v. Duryea, 95 Mo. App. 574. A contract of shipment made in Missouri between a resident corporation and a carrier having an office and doing business there is governed by the laws of that state—Herf & Frerichs Chemical Co. v. Lackawanna Line (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 346. A contract made in New York, relating to construction of a railroad for a company afterward consolidated with one organized under the laws of Pennsylvania, will be enforced in the latter state though void there, where it is valid as between the parties in New York—Rumsey v. New York & P. R. Co., 203 Pa. 579. Matters concerning the validity of a contract of insurance issued to an applicant resident in Mexico on an application there executed will be settled by the laws of Mexico—DeSonora v. Banker's Mut. Casualty Co. (Iowa) 95 N. W. 232.

55. Roubicek v. Haddad, 67 N. J. Law, 522.

56. Contract of agency to sell lands—Goldstein v. Scott, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 78.

57. The validity of a sale of intoxicating liquor depends upon the law where sold—P. Schoenhofen Brewing Co. v. Whipple (Neb.) 89 N. W. 751. Sufficiency of sale of liquors in New York to persons without license to sell in Connecticut to prevent violation of liquor laws of the latter state; Gen. Laws Conn. § 3078—J. & J. Eager Co. v. Burke, 74 Conn. 534. A sale of liquor by or as to usury,[58] will be controlled by the laws of the state where made. Insurance policies will be governed by the laws of the state where the policy is delivered and the premiums paid,[59] unless the policy stipulates otherwise and as to the rule in such contingency the authorities differ.[60] Contracts are generally construed according to the law of the state where made,[61] unless, however, by their terms they are to be performed elsewhere, in which case they are governed a Georgia dealer on orders obtained by a traveling salesman in Alabama is governed by the laws of Alabama; Act of Congress, "Wilson Act" construed—Bluthenthal v. McWhorter, 131 Ala. 642.

58. Contracts in general. The rule applies to usury—Clarke v. Taylor, 69 Ark. 612. Interest to be paid by guarantor of mortgage not secured on property in another state—Taylor v. Simpkins, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 246. The contract may be enforced in another state though usurious there and though secured by mortgage on lands in another state—Crebbin v. Delony, 70 Ark. 493. A contract to pay interest on advances on property in Nevada, made by a Colorado corporation with one of its directors, will be enforced in Pennsylvania, though the rate was not legal under the laws of Pennsylvania, where it was legal under the laws of both Nevada and Colorado—Kroegher v. Calivada Colonization Co. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 641; Calivada Colonization Co. v. Kroegher, Id.

Building and loan contracts. American Bldg., Loan & Tontine Ass'n v. McClellan (Ark.) 70 S. W. 463. Loans made in Mississippi by building and loan association—National Mut. Bldg. & L. Ass'n v. Hulet (Miss.) 33 So. 3; Same v. Hart, Id.; Same v. Hoskins, Id. Subscription and loan contract governed by laws of state where dated and made payable—Alexander v. Building & Loan Ass'n, 120 Fed. 963. A loan to a stockholder by a building and loan association organized under the laws of Alabama and payable in that state at the home office is governed by its usury laws—Gale v. Building & Loan Ass'n, 117 Fed. 732. Loan by borrowing stockholder in building and loan association depends as to legal rate of interest on the laws of the state where made and payable, though the security may be situated elsewhere—Interstate Bldg. & L. Ass'n v. Edgefield Hotel Co., 120 Fed. 422. Loans made by resident agents of a foreign association and secured on property in the state where made, and on which payments are there made, depend as to usury on the laws of that state though in terms payable at the home office—Hicinbothem v. Savings & Loan Ass'n, 40 Or. 511, 69 Pac. 1018; Georgia State Bldg. & L. Ass'n v. Shannon, 80 Miss. 642. Such loans by a foreign association are usurious if the rate is above the legal rate in the state where made, though the contracts for loans, being separate from those for subscription, were similar to those used in the state of organization and the place of performance was there fixed by the by-laws—Georgia State Bldg. & L. Ass'n v. Brown (Miss.) 31 So. 911.

59. Thompson v. Insurance Co., 169 Mo. 12. Property in Kentucky insured by New York company—Carrollton Furniture Mfg. Co. v. Indemnity Co. (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 77. A life insurance policy executed in Missouri, the premiums and losses on which are payable in that state, is governed by its laws—Franklin Life Ins. Co. v. Galligan (Ark.) 73 S. W. 102. A life insurance policy issued by a company authorized to do business in Massachusetts, on an application made in writing to its agent in that state where the applicant resided, and there delivered by its agent, who there received the first premium, will be governed by the laws of that state—Albro v. Insurance Co., 119 Fed. 629.

60. An insurance policy will be construed under the laws of Missouri where delivered in that state at the residence of the insured though it stipulates that it is to be construed according to the laws of New York—Pietri v. Seguenot, 96 Mo. App. 258. A life insurance policy written in Washington by a New York company, on an application providing that the contract should be governed by the New York laws and made a part of the policy, is governed by such laws as to forfeiture for nonpayment of premiums, though the contract was delivered and the premiums paid in Washington. Laws N. Y. 1877, c. 321, § 1—Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Hill (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 708.

61. See Building & Loan Associations, p. 394, note 78, concerning loans. Where the writings for a loan stipulate no place of payment by a borrowing stockholder of a foreign building and loan association, but the application for membership designates the local treasurer as the officer to whom payment is to be made and payments are actually made to him, the rights of the member under an assignment of the debt to a stranger without recourse will be determined by the law of the member's domicile—Spinney v. Chapman (Iowa) 95 N. W. 230.

An action in one state on a policy of insurance on property in another state given by a company of a third state is governed as to the contract by the law of the state where the property was situated and the contract was made—Thompson v. Insurance Co., 169 Mo. 12. Policy of insurance by United States company on property in Mexico—De Sonora v. Banker's Mut. Casualty Co. (Iowa) 95 N. W. 222.

Negotiable Instruments. Note indorsed in blank in Vermont construed under the laws of that state in the New Hampshire courts—Limerick Nat. Bank v. Howard, 71 N. H. 13. An indorsement in New York of a note executed in another state is governed by the New York laws—Spies v. Bank, 174 N. Y. 222. A note and mortgage on Maryland realty, dated and executed in that state, will be presumed payable at place of date in absence of other evidence, and will be construed under the laws of that state—New York Security & Trust Co. v. Davis, 96 Md. 81. The Indiana law will govern a note dated in Wisconsin but actually negotiated, executed, and made payable in Indiana, as to days of grace and notice to indorsers, though the nature and sufficiency of evidence to show notice will be governed by the laws of Wisconsin—Second Nat. Bank v. Smith (Wis.) 94 N. W. 664.

Contracts of married women. Robison v. Pease, 28 Ind. App. 610; Baer Bros. v. Terry, 108 La. 597. Note of married woman living with her husband in Tennessee, executed, de-by the laws of the place of performance;[62] citizens of the United States shipping as horsemen on English vessels carrying live stock from New Orleans to South Africa under contract requiring free return passage to an American port were subject to English law on the voyage over but on the return trip their rights were governed by United States laws.[63] Where certificates of stock in a foreign building association, having no office or general agent in a certain state but merely special agents who solicit subscriptions, provide that payments shall be made at the principal office, unless proper notice is given of another place of payment which was given fixing a place within the state for payment, the contract as to usury was governed by the laws of that state.[64] A loan secured by a mortgage on land in Alabama by a citizen of that state from a Minnesota building and loan association declared in the note and mortgage to be payable in Minnesota and to be made with reference to its laws, is governed by the usury laws of Minnesota.[65]

§ 2. Effect of status or domicile.[66]—The validity of a will covering personal property depends on the law of the testator's domicile though the property is situate elsewhere,[67] likewise the rights of an heir in a distributable surplus.[68] While the effect and validity of a will are determined by the laws of the testator's domicile, a beneficiary given power of "entire disposal" of certain personal property may do so by an instrument conforming to the laws of his own domicile.[69] The estate of an infant deceased will be administered according to the law of the state of its domicile.[70] The eligibility of beneficiaries of a benefit association will be determined by the laws of the state where the association was organized.[71] The liability of a stockholder will be determined by the laws of the domicile of the corporation regardless of his domicile or the law of the forum.[72] livered, and payable in Ohio, is governed by the laws of Ohio—First Nat. Bank v. Shaw (Tenn.) 70 S. W. 807.

62. Negotiable Instruments. Notes executed in Indian Territory, where the laws of Arkansas govern, and made payable in the latter state, are governed by its laws as to negotiability—Clark v. Porter, 90 Mo. App. 143. A note sent by the maker in Nebraska to the payee in Oklahoma is not governed by the Nebraska laws—Hewitt v. Bank (Neb.) 90 N. W. 250; see, also, Id. (Neb.) 92 N. W. 741. The negotiability of a note payable in another state depends upon its laws—Barger v. Farnham (Mich.) 90 N. W. 281.

63. The European, 120 Fed. 776.

64. National Mut. Bldg. & L. Ass'n v. Farnham (Miss.) 33 So. 2.

65. United States Sav. & L. Co. v. Beckley (Ala.) 33 So. 934.

Rule against perpetuities.—If a disposition of personalty, by will or otherwise, is not against the rule in the state or country of the owner's domicile, it will be upheld, though the personalty is in another state and the disposition could not there be sustained under its laws—Knox v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 389, Cross v. United States Trust Co., 131 N. Y. 330, Whitney v. Dodge, 105 Cal. 196. But though a will or other transfer of realty is not in violation of the rule in force in the state or country where made or of the maker's domicile, it must be declared void, if against the rule in the place where the realty is situated, since the disposition of realty must always be determined by the law of the state or country of which it is a part—White v. Howard, 46 N. Y. 144, Ford v. Ford, 70 Wis. 19, Hobson v. Hale, 95 N. Y. 588, Knox v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 389. And sometimes it has been held that when funds are directed to be invested in another state in trusts allowable by its laws, but in violation of the law of the testator's domicile, that such directions must be disregarded as against the rule in force at his domicile—Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 596. But since the property to be acquired is to be held in another state, the courts or authorities of the state whence the funds came are not generally concerned with the question whether the direction violates the rule against perpetuities or not—Vansant v. Roberts, 3 Md. 119, Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 43 N. Y. 424. Where a testator orders his estate to be invested in lands in another state or country, he must be presumed to have intended to submit to the jurisdiction and laws of that state. Whether the trusts created by his will are in violation of the statutes of that state or country, is a question for the jurisdiction of its courts and not for the courts of the testator's domicile—Ford v. Ford, 80 Mich. 55, Ford v. Ford, 72 Wis. 621. See more fully 49 Am. St. Rep. 124.

66. Sufficiency of acquisition of domicile in Texas by husband who removed so that property acquired elsewhere will be governed as to marital rights by the laws of Texas—Blethen v. Bonner (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 290.

67. Garvey v. Horgan, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 164.

68. Champallion v. Corbin, 71 N. H. 78.

69. Ward v. Stanard, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 906.

70. In re Kiernan, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 394.

71. Grimme v. Grimme, 198 Ill. 265.

72. McClure v. Iron Co., 90 Mo. App. 567;

The nature of a debt contracted, as to liability of husband and wife, depends on the law of the place where the transaction took place.[73] Lands purchased in Texas by a husband after moving there with money earned while a citizen in another state under the laws of which it was separate property, is not community property.[74] The laws of the state will apply to determine whether land on which a husband made a homestead entry during the life of his wife was community property when he did not get a patent or make final proof before her death.[75] Laws regulating privileges and disabilities of married women in Louisiana do not operate for benefit of such persons domiciled elsewhere.[76] The contract of a married woman is valid everywhere if valid where it is made and to be performed unless she is domiciled where she cannot legally make a contract.[77]

Liability for negligence resulting in personal injuries is determined by the laws of the state where the injuries were received.[78] The laws of the state where an injury to a passenger occurred govern as to the degree of care required of the carrier.[79]

§ 3. Matters relating to personal property.—The validity of a pledge must be determined by the laws of the state where the property is situated.[80] The validity of trusts in personalty will generally be settled by the law of the state where they are to be administered.[81] A contract to deliver goods then in warehouse or to pay commissions from their sale must be governed by the law of the place where it is to be performed.[82]

§ 4. Effect of public policy.—A contract made in one state will not be enforced in another state wherein it is against public policy or morals,[83] nor will Love v. Pusey & Jones Co. (Del. Super.) 52 Atl. 542. Statute regulating proceedings by creditors to enforce statutory liability of stockholders—Pfaff v. Gruen (Mo. App.) 69 S. W. 405.

73. In Washington a debt for a building for husband and wife in another state will be held a community debt—Clark v. Eltinge, 29 Wash. 215.

74. Blethen v. Bonner (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 290.

75. It will be determined community property under the state laws—Ahern v. Ahern (Wash.) 71 Pac. 1023.

76. Marks v. Germania Sav. Bank (La.) 34 So. 725.

77. Young v. Hart (Va.) 44 S. E. 703.

78. The laws of Texas will determine liability of a railroad company for injuries there received because of negligent loading of a car, though the car was loaded in New Mexico—El Paso & N. W. Ry. Co. v. McComas (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 629.

79. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Harmon, 23 Ky. L. R. 871, 64 S. W. 640.

Laws Determining Age of Majority.—The capacity, state and condition of persons according to law of their domicile, will generally be regarded, as to acts done, rights acquired and contracts made in place of their domicile, touching property situated therein, and if these acts, rights or contracts are valid there, they will be held equally valid everywhere; if they are invalid there, they will be invalid everywhere. As to acts done, rights acquired and contracts made in other countries, touching property therein, the law of the country where the acts are done, rights are acquired or contracts are made, will generally govern in respect to capacity, state and condition of persons. Hence, it may be deduced as a corollary, that, in regard to the question of minority or majority and other personal qualities and disabilities, the law of the domicile of birth, or the law of any other acquired and fixed domicile, is not generally to govern, but the law of the place where the contract is made or the act done, and a person who is a minor until he is of the age of 25 by the law of his domicile and incapable of making a valid contract there, may nevertheless in another country where he would be of age at 21 generally make a valid contract, even a contract of marriage—Story on Conflict of Laws, §§ 101, 102, 103. approved in Pearl v. Hansborough, 9 Humph. 426, and generally in the courts of all the states—Saul v. His Creditors, 16 Am. Dec. 212; Andrews v. His Creditors, 11 La. 464; Baldwin v. Gray, 16 Am. Dec. 169; Pickering v. Fisk, 6 Vt. 102; Hiestand v. Kuns (Ind.) 8 Blackf. 345. The rule is applied in Louisiana that the law of the domicile of origin governs the state and condition of the minor into whatever country he removes—Barrera v. Alpuente (La.) 6 Martin (N. S.) 69, 17 Am. Dec. 179. See also more fully on this point 17 Am. Dec. 179, and note.

80. In re St. Paul & K. C. Grain Co. (Minn.) 94 N. W. 218.

81. Trust in personalty in foreign state given by will of domestic testatrix—Mount v. Tuttle, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 655. The liability of income from a trust founded in Rhode Island, of bonds and securities in New York, to be subjected to a judgment rendered against the beneficiary in New York, will be settled, in comity, by the laws of the latter state—Keeney v. Morse, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 104.

82. Farmer v. Etheridge, 24 Ky. L. R. 649, 69 S. W. 761.

83. Parker v. Moore (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 799. The principle of state comity will not apply—Palmer v. Palmer (Utah) 72 Pac. 3. The laws of a state where a gambling device is to be delivered will determine the the parties be allowed to abrogate the public policy of a state by conditions in a contract adopting the laws of another state.[84]

§ 5. Protection of citizens in state of forum.—Exemption laws of another state have no extraterritorial force.[85] Foreign voluntary assignments for benefit of creditors cannot be enforced if they conflict with the statutes or public policy of the state where they are sought to be enforced,[86] but they will be held valid if the controversy is wholly between nonresident creditors.[87]

§ 6. Matters affecting morality.—The court will not necessarily refuse to recognize divorces granted in another state for causes arising before the marital domicile was established merely because it will not grant a divorce on such grounds.[88] A statutory prohibition as to remarriage within a certain period after divorce has no force beyond the state.[89]

validity of a contract for its sale—Price v. Burns, 101 Ill. App. 418. An assignment of a negotiable certificate of deposit in payment of a loss at gambling, valid at the common law in hands of a purchaser in the state where made, will not be declared void in Colorado as against statute, where the law of the state of execution is not so offensive as to shock the moral sense—Sullivan v. Bank (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 162.

84. Insurance policy—Albro v. Insurance Co., 119 Fed. 629. A condition in a contract made without the state for carriage of stock to a point within the state, limiting liability for injury due to negligence, will not be enforced where the injury occurs within the state, it being against the policy of the state—Hughes v. Railroad Co., 202 Pa. 222. A provision in a steamship ticket issued in England that the English law shall govern the contract will not validate a limitation of liability for negligent injury to baggage which is against the public policy of the United States—The New England, 110 Fed. 415.

Limitation of liability of carrier by contract.—Generally, contracts with regard to limitation of liability of carriers are determined as to conflict of laws by the rules applicable to other contracts and if the contract is allowed to be performed within one state, its laws will govern, though the contract is brought into question in the courts of other states—Knowlton v. Erie Ry. Co., 19 Ohio St. 260. If a contract is made in one country or state between citizens and residents thereof and its performance begins there, it will be governed by the laws of that country or state, unless the parties on entering the contract clearly manifest a mutual intention that it shall be governed by the law of some other country—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Boyd, 91 Ill. 268, Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, Merchants' Dispatch Transportation Co. v. Furthman, 149 Ill. 66, Brockway v. American Ex. Co., 168 Mass. 257, Pacific Exp. Co. v. Foley, 46 Kan. 457, 26 Pac. 665, Hudson v. N. P. R. Co., 92 Iowa, 231, Davis v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 93 Wis. 470, Eckles v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., 72 Mo. App. 296, The Henry B. Hyde, 82 Fed. 682. The courts are in conflict on the question as to whether a contract exempting a carrier from liability for negligence, if valid where made, will be enforced in a jurisdiction where it is void. In Pennsylvania, such contracts will be enforced where valid in another state though void there—Forepaugh v. Delaware & Lackawanna R. Co., 128 Pa. St. 217, and in Iowa, limitations of liability valid elsewhere have been upheld though forbidden by statute within the state to limit the common law liability—Hazel v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 82 Iowa, 477, and in Kentucky, contracts of this sort valid elsewhere have been upheld though forbidden by the constitution of the state—Tecumseh Mills v. Louisville & Nashville R. Co., 22 Ky. L. Rep. 264, 57 S. W. 9. In Nebraska, no such limitation will be enforced, no matter what the law of the place of contract may be—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Gardiner, 51 Neb. 70, and the federal courts will not seek to enforce such contracts in the jurisdiction where they have been declared illegal as against the public policy of the state—Schulz-Berge v. The Guild Hall, 58 Fed. 796. Stipulations in a contract exempting a carrier from liability for negligence will generally be held void in another state, since the policy of the law will not allow a party to accomplish indirectly what it will not allow him to do directly—Lewisohn v. National Steamship Co., 56 Fed. 602, Compagnie De Navigacion v. Brauer, 168 U. S. 104. See more fully 88 Am. St. Rep. 125.

85. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Rogers, 52 W. Va. 450. A personal property exemption cannot be set up by a resident of North Carolina, in an action against him in New York, in which a debt due from an insurance company of New York for a loss in North Carolina was attached. The exemption laws have no extra-territorial effect—Sexton v. Insurance Co., 132 N. C. 1.

86. Bloomingdale v. Weil, 29 Wash. 611; Same v. Trust Co., Id.

87. Memphis Sav. Bank v. Houchens (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 96.

88. Succession of Benton, 106 La. 494.

89. Civ. Code, Cal. §§ 61, 91—In re Wood's Estate, 137 Cal. 129; Appeal of Wood. Id.

Laws Governing Validity of Marriage.—It is almost universally recognized that statutes prohibiting the guilty party after divorce from marrying again either for a certain period or during the life of the other party to the former marriage, are in no sense extraterritorial and are without effect outside the limits of the state which pass them, even though they may be in terms special.—Moore v. Hegeman, 92 N. Y. 521; Van Voorhis v. Brintnall, 86 N. Y. 18; Wilson v. Holt, 83 Ala. 528; Succession v. Hernandez, 46 La. Ann. 962; Phillips v. Madrid, 83 Me. 205. But a state, however, may provide by statute that marriages entered into by persons domiciled within the state and who leave it to marry elsewhere in evasion of its laws, with the intention to return and live within the state, are invalid. The general rule is, as established by the great weight of authority, that a marriage valid by the laws of the state or country where it is entered into is valid in every other state or country, though it appears that the party went into such other state or country to contract the marriage with the express view to evade the laws of their own country; however, this does not extend to incestuous or polygamous marriages or to any marriage prohibited by the terms of the general and universal law of the nations, the contract being governed, even as regards the competency of the contracting parties, by the law of the place of contract.—Van Storch v. Griffin, 71 Pa. St. 240; Hutman v. Hutman, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 433; Ross v. Ross, 129 Mass. 243. A marriage in Tennessee between a nephew and his uncle's widow must be held valid in Kentucky, if not prohibited by the laws of Tennessee, though void if celebrated in Kentucky and though the parties left the state to evade its laws and returned to live there after the marriage.—Stevenson v. Gray (Ky.) 17 B. Mon. 193. However, it was held in Tennessee under the statute that a marriage between a guilty husband or wife after divorce for adultery and the person with whom the crime was committed, is prohibited during the life of the innocent party under the former marriage, and that, if such contracting parties, being citizens and residents of the state, withdraw temporarily to another state for the purpose of evading its laws by marriage and then return to live within the state, in the interest of public morals, peace and good order of society, the marriage will be declared void in Tennessee, though valid in the state where celebrated.—Pennegar v. State, 87 Tenn. 244. The rule has also been applied often in Southern states with the result that marriages between white persons and negroes, entered into in states where they are not so prohibited, have been held void in states where they were against the statute and to which the parties returned to live after marriage—State v. Ross, 76 N. Car. 242; State v. Kennedy, 76 N. C. 251; Kinney v. Commonwealth, 30 Grat. 858; State v. Tutty, 41 Fed. Rep. 753; Dupree v. Boulad, 10 La. Ann. 411. It seems that a marriage celebrated on the high seas for the purpose of evading the laws of the state and then to return to that state to live, is a fraudulent evasion of the laws of the state to which the citizen owes obedience and will not be held valid—Holmes v. Holmes, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 546. In such a case there is no local law which can be applicable to the contract of marriage, and the same rule applies to a marriage celebrated on land, not within the jurisdiction of any particular sovereignty; hence the law of the domicile of the parties will probably control the marriage and it cannot be regarded as valid if not sustained by such law—Davis v. Davis, 1 Abb. N. C. 140. See further on validity of marriages, 60 Am. St. Rep. 941; 79 Am. St. Rep. 364.

§ 7. Contracts relating to realty.—Conveyances and contracts concerning lands are an exception to the general rule in that they must conform to the law of the state where the land lies.[90] A loan made by a building and loan association and secured by a mortgage on lands in another state will be governed by the laws of the latter state with respect to usury though by the contract payment was to be made at the domicile of the association.[91] A loan by a Maryland building and loan association secured by a mortgage on land in the District of Columbia under a stipulation that the law of Maryland should govern may be so governed where it appears that the rule in Maryland produces the same result on accounting as that of the District.[92]

§ 8. Application of remedies.—Remedies are applied according to the law of the forum.[93] The penalty provided for usury by the laws of the state where a contract was made will not be applied on an attempt to enforce the contract elsewhere.[94] An action for breach of a contract for sale of goods will not lie in Texas though the contract is valid there, where not enforceable under the laws of Arkansas, the state of performance, on account of non-compliance with the statute of frauds.[95] Delay in transmission of a telegram in another state wherein such action will not lie, will not prevent an action for mental anguish for failure

90. Jurisdiction over the land is local; construction of deed with regard to covenants—Dalton v. Taliaferro, 101 Ill. App. 592. Deed of married woman executed in South Carolina conveying land in North Carolina must conform in its execution to Code N. C., § 1256—Smith v. Ingram, 130 N. C. 100. A conveyance of immovables in Louisiana as between husband and wife is governed by the laws of that state—Rush v. Landers, 107 La. 549, 57 L. R. A. 353. Loan by building and loan association secured on property in another state from the domicile of the association—Hoskins v. Savings & Loan Ass'n (Mich.) 95 N. W. 566.

91. Georgia State Bldg. & L. Ass'n v. Shannon, 80 Miss. 642; Hicinbothem v. Savings & Loan Ass'n, 40 Or. 511, 69 Pac. 1018. However, see Interstate Bldg. & L. Ass'n v. Edgefield Hotel Co., 120 Fed. 422.

92. Middle States Loan, Bldg. & Const. Co. v. Baker, 19 App. D. C. 1.

93. Contract—Young v. Hart (Va.) 44 S. E. 703. Action on insurance policy—Thompson v. Traders' Ins. Co., 169 Mo. 12. Whether there was equity in a complaint to foreclose a mortgage by a building and loan association will be determined by the law of the forum though the association was organized elsewhere—Interstate Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Badgley, 115 Fed. 390.

94. Crebbin v. Deloney, 70 Ark. 493.

95. Jones v. National Cotton Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 248.

of delivery in a state where such action will lie.[96] That mental anguish is not recognized as an element of damages for failure to deliver a telegram in the state where it was received will not prevent recovery in the state of delivery where an action will lie for such cause.[97]

Recovery for wrongful death.—The right of action for wrongful death, if existing in another state, may be enforced by any appropriate remedy; it is the remedy which must follow the law of the forum.[98] The right of recovery for wrongful death, especially as pertaining to the wife and daughters of deceased, under the laws of Mexico is so unlike that given by the laws of Texas, and so hard to enforce properly under the statutory or common law procedure in Texas, so as to protect the rights of defendant, that the United States circuit court will refuse to take jurisdiction. That negligent acts render defendant liable because under the laws of Mexico they constitute crimes however will not prevent maintenance of the action in Texas; the Mexican law not being contrary to the public policy of Texas, to natural justice or good morals.[99]

Statutes of limitation.—Statutory limitations of the forum will generally be applied to actions brought on causes arising elsewhere,[1] especially if the remedy is statutory and is governed by the general statute of limitations only;[2] if the statute of another state is applied the action must be maintainable in that state,[3] and must have accrued there.[4] In an action for personal injuries the limitation laws of the state where the injury occurred have been held to apply.[5] The Illinois statute of limitation providing that a cause of action arising in a foreign state cannot be sued on in Illinois if barred in the state of its origin does not apply to a cause not barred in the state of its origin because defendant was a nonresident and could not be sued because without the state.[6]

96. The tort was done in the latter state —Western Union Tel. Co. v. Cooper (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 427.

97. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Blake (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 526.

Control of ward's estate as to investment of funds by guardian.—Where the law of the place of his appointment and of the domicile of his ward is different, the law of the ward's domicile will control, especially when he actually resides there, but the form of accounting, so far as concerns the remedy only, will be according to the law of the court in which relief is sought; the application of general rules by which the guardian is to be held responsible for the investment of the property will be governed by the law of the ward's domicile—Lamar v. Micon, 112 U. S. 452. See 89 Am. St. Rep. 297.

98. It is not contrary to public policy to enforce in Arkansas a cause of action for wrongful death which accrued in Louisiana (Civ. Code La. art. 2315 & Sand. & H. Dig. Ark. §§ 5908, 5911, 5912 construed)—St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Haist (Ark.) 72 S. W. 893. In an action brought in Michigan for death of a servant occurring in Canada from the employer's negligence, a Canadian statute which prevents application of the rule as to immunity from liability for negligence of fellow servants will be applied though contrary to the law of Michigan—Rick v. Saginaw Bay Towing Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 632. The English common law does not obtain in Hawaii as to right to sue for wrongful death, but by the action of the supreme court a widow may sue for the death of her husband—Schooner Robert Lewers Co. v. Kekauoha (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 849. The question as to who may sue is of right and not of remedy (Rev. St. Wyo. §§ 3448, 3449) and must be followed—Thorpe v. Union Pac. Coal Co., 24 Utah, 475, 68 Pac. 145. An action for wrongful death brought in Indiana, when the death occurred in Ohio, will be governed as to parties by the laws of Ohio where the right of action arose and the father of deceased cannot sue—Fabel v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. (Ind. App.) 65 N. E. 929. An action by next of kin for wrongful death given by statute in one state where the death occurred may be enforced in another state where a like statute exists differing only in that no recovery is allowed for pain and suffering of decedent—Boyle v. Southern Ry. Co., 36 Misc. (N. Y.) 289.

99. Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Slater (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 593.

1. Limitation of an action by a nonresident creditor of a New York firm on a note made and payable in that state will be governed by the laws of New York where the creditor brings his action in that state—Hixson v. Rodbourn, 67 App. Div. (N. Y.) 424. The statute of limitations of the state of a bankrupt's residence governs as to bar of claims of creditors against his estate—Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Hudson (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 232. As to limitations, actions for recovery of damages for discrimination in freight rates will be governed by the laws of the state where brought, since the interstate commerce act contains no provisions as to the time of bringing action—Ratican v. Terminal R. Ass'n, 114 Fed. 666.

2. Enforcing statutory liability of stockholder without the state of organization of the corporation—Pulsifer v. Greene, 96 Me. 438.

3. O'Donnell v. Lewis, 104 Ill. App. 198.

4. Janeway v. Burton, 201 Ill. 78.

5. Southern Ry. Co. v. Mayes (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 84.

6. Martin v Wilson (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 202.

Construction of statutes adopted from other states.—A statute adopted or copied verbatim from statutes of another state will generally be construed as already construed by the highest court of the state of its origin;[7] in any jurisdiction the construction given in the state of origin is always of persuasive aid.[8]

Presumptions and judicial notice regarding foreign laws.—The contrary not being shown, the common law is presumed to be the same in the different states,[9] and the law on any particular subject though statutory will be presumed to be the same elsewhere as in the state of the forum,[10] and the rule applies to laws of foreign countries,[11] but it has been held that the presumption as to the common law will not apply to countries where English institutions have not been established.[12] In absence of other evidence it will be presumed that the statutes of another state are the same as those in the state of the forum; if it is claimed that they are different such fact must be alleged and proved.[13] Courts of one state will take judicial notice of the prevalence of the common law in another state but statutory modifications thereof must be proved.[14] The United States courts will not take judicial notice of the Cherokee statutes,[15] nor of the laws of an Indian nation.[16]

§ 9. Torts.—No action will lie in one state for a tort committed in another state, in which no such right of action exists, even though an action would lie if the tort had been committed in the state where the action is brought.[17]

§ 10. Crimes and misdemeanors.—Bringing into the state property stolen elsewhere is not larceny.[18] The question of larceny as to goods stolen elsewhere and brought into Oklahoma is to be determined by the laws of Oklahoma and not the laws of the place where the property was stolen.[19]

CONSPIRACY.

§ 1. Civil liability.—No express agreement is necessary.[20]

Particular conspiracies.—Refusal of manufacturers to sell to dealers who will not maintain a uniform price is not an actionable boycott.[21] The legality of various acts of labor unions is treated in the note.[22]

7. Goldman v. Sotelo (Ariz.) 68 Pac. 558. Construction of Comp. Laws, § 5803—Yankton Sav. Bank v. Gutterson, 15 S. D. 486.

8. Stephan v. Metzger, 95 Mo. App. 609.

9. Engstrand v. Kleffman, 86 Minn. 403; Gaylord v. Duryea, 95 Mo. App. 574. Common law as to presumptions—Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Adams, 159 Ind. 688.

10. Right of assignee of reversion to rents (David Bradley & Co. v. Peabody Coal Co., 99 Ill. App. 427); assumption of risk by employe (Haworth v. Kansas City Southern R. Co., 94 Mo. App. 215); limitations (Keagy v. Wellington Nat. Bank [Okl.] 69 Pac. 811); lien for logging supplies (Hyde v. German Nat. Bank, 115 Wis. 170; Angle v. Manchester [Neb.] 91 N. W. 501). It will be presumed that the rate of interest on a note was lawful where it was executed if lawful where it is sought to be enforced, no evidence appearing to the contrary—Clark v. Eltinge, 29 Wash. 215, 69 Pac. 736.

11. Laws authorizing sale of corporate stock under execution—Daniel v. Gold Hill Min. Co., 28 Wash. 411, 68 Pac. 884. The law of Italy governing a stipulation in a contract for exclusive jurisdiction of the courts of Italy will be presumed the same as that of Massachusetts—Mittenthal v. Mascagni (Mass.) 66 N. E. 425.

12. Mexico—De Sonora v. Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. (Iowa) 95 N. W. 232.

13. Barringer v. Ryder (Iowa) 93 N. W. 56.

14. Rush v. Landers, 107 La. 549; Cameron v. Orleans & J. Ry. Co., 108 La. 83; Bank v. Carr, 130 N. C. 479.

15. Kelly v. Churchill (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 817.

16. Sass v. Thomas (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 893.

17. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Reed, 158 Ind. 25. The liability for negligence resulting in personal injury depends on the law of the state where the injury occurred —El Paso & N. W. Ry. Co. v. McComas (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 629; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Harmon, 23 Ky. L. R. 871, 64 S. W. 640.

18. Van Buren v. State (Neb.) 91 N. W. 201.

19. The act is held larceny in Oklahoma—Barclay v. United States, 11 Okl. 503, 69 Pac. 798.

20. Patnode v. Westenhaver, 114 Wis. 460.

21. John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists Ass'n, 175 N. Y. 1.

22. Employes may combine to quit their employment—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Ruef, 120 Fed. 102; Wabash R. Co. v. Hannahan, 121 Fed. 563. Though their grievance is the refusal to discharge nonunion employes—National Protective Ass'n v. Cumming, 170 N. Y. 315. But a resort to intimidation to secure the co-operation of other employes is unlawful—United States v. Haggerty, 116 Fed. 510; Frank v. Herold, 63 N. J. Eq. 443; Wabash R. Co. v. Hannahan, 121 Fed. 563; Beaton v. Tarrant, 102 Ill. App. 124; Jersey Actions.—All conspirators need not be joined.[23] The declarations of conspirators in pursuance of the conspiracy are admissible against each other.[24] Holdings as to sufficiency of pleadings[25] and evidence[26] are found in the note.

§ 2. Criminal liability. Indictable conspiracies.—The fact that the details of the overt act alleged in indictment were not known at the time of the conspiracy is immaterial.[27] A conspiracy to depreciate the value of a corporate stock,[28] to defraud one of money, though the conspirators might have recovered it from him by action,[29] and though neither the object nor the means are criminal,[30] or to fraudulently obtain a patent to government lands,[31] is indictable. Conspiracy to defraud an individual by use of the mails is not an "offense against the United States," within U. S. Rev. St. § 5440.[32]

Defenses.[33]—The statute of limitations runs from the last overt act.[34] It is City Printing Co. v. Cassidy, 63 N. J. Eq. 759.

An organization of the employes of a receiver with intent to call a sympathetic strike is illegal in its object—United States v. Weber, 114 Fed. 950. Boycotts are generally considered illegal—Beattie v. Callanan, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 7; Rourke v. Elk Drug Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 145. See, however, Marx & H. Jeans Clothing Co. v. Watson, 168 Mo. 133, in which an injunction against a boycott was said to impair the right of free speech.

BOYCOTT. (NOTE.) A boycott is a combination of many to cause loss to one person by coercing others against their will to withhold from him their beneficial business intercourse through threats, that unless those others do so, the many will cause similar loss to them. Unlawful boycotts include those that are threatening in their nature and intended and naturally calculated to overcome by fear of loss, the will of others—Beck v. Railway Teamsters' Union, 118 Mich. 497, 74 Am. St. Rep. 421. Injunction may issue against circulation of boycotting notices—Id. Cases collected in note to Marx & H. Jeans Clothing Co. v. Watson, 168 Mo. 133, 90 Am. St. Rep. 440, 451.

Picketing is not unlawful unless accompanied by violence—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Ruef, 120 Fed. 102; Foster v. Retail Clerks' Protective Ass'n, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 48. But in case of intimidation of employes an injunction will lie—Jersey City Printing Co. v. Cassidy, 63 N. J. Eq. 759; Beaton v. Tarrant, 102 Ill. App. 124; Herzog v. Fitzgerald, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 110. And union officers are not relieved from liability by instructions to the pickets to refrain from violence—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Ruef, 120 Fed. 102.

23. Rourke v. Elk Drug Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 145.

24. Boyer v. Weimer, 204 Pa. 295; Cohn v. Saidel, 71 N. H. 558; Cleland v. Anderson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 306; Mosby v. McKee, Z. & W. Commission Co., 91 Mo. App. 500; Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Hillmon, 188 U. S. 208; Avard v. Carpenter, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 258; Thompson v. Rosenstein (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 439.

25. Complaint alleging various overt acts states but one cause of action—Rourke v. Elk Drug Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 145. Complaint for conspiracy to boycott held to state cause of action—Id. Where the action is for the overt act, failure of proof of allegations of conspiracy is not fatal—Young v. Gormley (Iowa) 93 N. W. 565. And e converso it is held that in an action for deceit conspiracy may be shown though not alleged—Butler v. Duke, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 235.

26. Evidence of conspiracy to obtain property by fraudulent promise of marriage held sufficient—Patnode v. Westenhaver, 114 Wis. 460.

27. Conspiracy to procure the casting of certain illegal votes. The names of the voters to be procured as charged in the indictment were unknown when the conspiracy was formed—Commonwealth v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 184.

28. People v. Goslin, 171 N. Y. 627.

29, 30. State v. Gannon (Conn.) 52 Atl. 727.

31. United States v. Peuschel, 116 Fed. 642.

32. United States v. Clark, 121 Fed. 190.

[NOTE.]—Indictable Conspiracies. A leading case in Maryland, exhaustively reviewed the early English cases, and concluded that an indictment would lie in the following cases:

1. For a conspiracy to do any act that is criminal per se.

2. For a conspiracy to do an act not illegal, nor punishable, if done by an individual, but immoral only.

3. For a conspiracy to do an act neither illegal nor immoral in an individual, but to effect a purpose which has a tendency to prejudice the public.

4. For a conspiracy to extort money from another, or to injure his reputation, by means not indictable if practiced by an individual.

5. For a conspiracy to cheat and defraud a third person, accomplished by means of an act which would not in law amount to an indictable cheat, if effected by an individual.

6. For a malicious conspiracy to impoverish or ruin a third person in his trade or profession.

7. For a conspiracy to defraud a third person by means of an act not per se unlawful, and though no person be injured thereby.

8. For a bare conspiracy to cheat and defraud a third person, though the means of effecting it may not be determined on at the time. State v. Buchanan, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 317, 9 Am. Dec. 534.

33. It is no defense to an indictment for conspiracy to cast illegal votes at a primary no defense that defendant's co-conspirator is immune from prosecution by reason of having testified.[35]

Under Ky. Cr. Code, § 262, conspiracy to commit a felony does not merge in the completed felony.[36]

Who liable.—Each conspirator is liable for the acts of all within the purview of the conspiracy.[37]

Indictments passed on are collected in the note.[38] An indictment for conspiracy to "commit a crime against the United States" need not fully describe the proposed crime.[39]

Evidence.—Conspiracy may be shown by circumstantial evidence,[40] and evidence of individual acts tending to a common purpose is sufficient.[41] Knowledge and participation by defendant must be shown.[42] Overt acts in another county may be shown.[43] Acts and declarations of a conspirator in furtherance of the common object are admissible against his co-conspirators,[44] but not acts and declarations after such object has been accomplished,[45] nor narration of past occurrences.[46] There must be preliminary proof of the fact of conspiracy,[47] though the order of proof is discretionary.[48] that the arrangements at the polling place did not conform to law or that the warden was illegally elected—Commonwealth v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 184.

34. United States v. Greene, 115 Fed. 343.

35. Weber v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 1726, 72 S. W. 30.

36. Wait v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 604, 69 S. W. 697.

37. Handley v. State, 115 Ga. 584.

38. Indictment to procure casting of illegal votes need not state the particular disqualification of the voters, and may without duplicity allege conspiracy to procure votes illegal under several statutes—Commonwealth v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 184. Sufficiency of indictment to defraud United States by making false entries on public lands (United States v. Peuschel, 116 Fed. 642); by overcharges on public contract—United States v. Greene, 115 Fed. 343. An indictment for "contriving propagating and spreading" rumors tending to depress stocks is sufficient though the statutory term is "circulates"—People v. Goslin, 171 N. Y. 627. A count for conspiracy to commit an offense may be joined with one for aiding and abetting in the commission thereof without an averment that the offenses were the same—Commonwealth v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 184. Indictment for conspiracy to procure violation of Rev. St. § 5425, relating to issue of false certificates of naturalization—United States v. Melfi, 118 Fed. 899. An indictment may without duplicity allege the commission of the offense which was the object of the conspiracy—State v. Gannon (Conn.) 52 Atl. 727.

[NOTE].—The indictment must be clear and specific, and the English practice which sustains indictments for conspiracy in general terms is disapproved (United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542). The overt act need not be alleged (People v. Arnold, 46 Mich. 268), nor need the means agreed on be stated if the act which is the object of the conspiracy, be unlawful (State v. Crowley, 41 Wis. 271; State v. Ripley, 31 Me. 386), and where the conspiracy is to commit a crime having a specific name, it may be described by that name in the indictment (Hazen v. Commonwealth, 23 Pa. St. 353). Where the object of the conspiracy has been accomplished, greater particularity is required in the indictment (State v. Noyes, 25 Vt. 415; Commonwealth v. Hunt, 4 Metc. 111). It has been held in a leading case that an indictment for conspiracy may be found against one conspirator separately (People v. Richards, 67 Cal. 412). Cases collected in note, 3 Am. St. Rep. 413.

39. Ching v. United States (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 538.

40. Dixon v. State, 116 Ga. 186.

41. State v. Gannon (Conn.) 52 Atl. 727.

42. State v. Dreany, 65 Kan. 292, 69 Pac. 182. Evidence held sufficient to show participation in conspiracy to procure illegal voting—Commonwealth v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 184. To show participation in conspiracy to depress stocks by circulating false reports—People v. Goslin, 171 N. Y. 627.

43. State v. Soper, 118 Iowa, 1.

44. Crittenden v. State, 134 Ala. 145; State v. Dunn, 116 Iowa, 219; Commonwealth v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 184; Nelson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 67 S. W. 320; Barber v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 69 S. W. 515.

45. State v. Soper, 118 Iowa, 1; Commonwealth v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 184; State v. Aiken, 41 Or. 294, 69 Pac. 683; Steed v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 67 S. W. 328. Where the act though subsequent to the crime was pursuant to the conspiracy it is admissible—Powers v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 1007, 70 S. W. 644.

46. People v. Gonzales, 136 Cal. 666, 69 Pac. 487.

47. Young v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 69 S. W. 153. Admissibility and sufficiency of such proof—State v. Dunn, 116 Iowa, 219; Commonwealth v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 184; Young v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 69 S. W. 153; Freese v. State, 159 Ind. 597; Chadwell v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 818, 69 S. W. 1082; Powers v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 1007, 1186, 70 S. W. 644, 1050; State v. Prater, 52 W. Va. 132.

48. State v. Bolden, 109 La. 484; State v. Prater, 52 W. Va. 132.

CURRENT LAW.

(Copyrighted 1904 by John B. West Company.)

VOLUME I. DECEMBER, 1903. NUMBER 5.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

§ 1. Adoption and amendment of constitutions.—A constitution acknowledged by the officers administering government, accepted by the people of the state, and enforced throughout the state, there being no government in existence under a former constitution denying its validity, will be regarded as the existing constitution, without regard to whether the convention had power to promulgate the same without submission to the people.[49]

It is not generally necessary that a proposed amendment should have a title, though there is no reason why a title should not be given for purposes of identification and verification.[50] The word "read" in a constitutional provision, requiring a proposed amendment to be read in full three times on three separate days in both legislative houses, is interpreted according to its received meaning by legislative bodies, and not in its popular sense.[51] In voting on a constitutional amendment, the voters exercise a legislative function and are for that purpose a part of the legislative branch in the state government.[52] The amendment and not the section as amended should be submitted to the voters.[53] Where one object is sought by an amendment, separate submission is not required by the fact that several changes are proposed to accomplish it.[54] A petition for the submission of the constitutional amendment not being required in Louisiana, the validity of an amendment when

49. Taylor v. Commonwealth (Va.) 44 S. E. 754.

50, 51. Saunders v. Board of Liquidation (La.) 34 So. 457.

52. And courts are without power to interfere with submission on the ground that the amendment will be invalid if adopted—People v. Mills, 30 Colo. 262, 70 Pac. 322.

53. Where submitted in the latter form the matter will be regarded as surplusage not affecting the result—Gabbert v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 171 Mo. 84.

54. An amendment allowing rendition of a verdict by two-thirds of a jury in courts not of record and by three-fourths of a jury in courts of record, does not require separate submissions, the one purpose of the amendment being to abolish unanimity of verdicts—Gabbert v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 171 Mo. 84; Hubbard v. St. Louis R. Co. (Mo.) 72 S. W. 1073.

adopted will not be made to depend upon the petition asking for its submission.[55] The ratification of a statute by a constitutional amendment does not necessarily make the statute a part of the constitution; its effect is merely to validate the act, and where the amendment as ratified and approved allows the legislature to amend in certain particulars, the statute becomes a part of the constitution with this reservation.[56]

§ 2. Operative force and effect.—Constitutional restrictions based on public policy are as valid as other provisions, and the legislature is without power to enact laws in opposition thereto.[57]

Constitutions operate prospectively,[58] and are generally without effect on suits pending at the time of their adoption.[59] An amendment is not operative before a canvass of the vote on its adoption.[60]

Acts in force at the time of the adoption of the constitution and not inconsistent therewith continue in force until repealed by the legislature.[61] Inconsistent provisions are impliedly repealed.[62]

Congress having complete authority over Indians, an act of congress will supersede a provision in the constitution of an Indian nation.[63]

Self-executing provisions.—A provision in the constitution giving the supreme court power to issue writs of mandamus is self-executing;[64] likewise a provision making directors and trustees of corporations joint and severally liable to creditors of stockholders for misappropriated funds.[65] A provision fixing the rate of interest on trust funds held by the state, and requiring semi-annual distribution of such interest, is not self-executing so as to authorize a state auditor to pay interest to state institutions without an appropriation.[66] A constitutional provision of self-executing character becomes a part of laws enacted thereunder, and controls wherein there is a difference, so that the statute will not be rendered invalid, but will be construed as though the constitutional language had been inserted in the act.[67]

§ 3. Interpretation and exposition. A. When called for.[68]—Courts will generally refuse to pass upon the constitutionality of a statute, unless absolutely necessary to a decision of the case.[69] The constitutionality of an act may not be tested

55. Brennan v. Sewerage & Water Board, 108 La. 569. A tax adopted into a constitution in accordance with a vote on a petition authorizing the tax which requested a constitutional amendment to carry out the tax scheme is subject to the conditions of the petition for the election—State v. Kohnke, 109 La. 838.

56. State v. Kohnke, 109 La. 838.

57. Hannah v. People, 198 Ill. 77.

58. Adams v. Dendy (Miss.) 33 So. 843. Where at the time of an execution of a mortgage, the constitution required record, a subsequent change in the constitution dispensing with this requirement, would not affect a mortgage previously executed—Blouin v. Ledet, 109 La. 709. A constitutional provision prescribing the method of waiving a homestead has application only to homesteads set off after the adoption of the constitution—Ex parte Jeter, 64 S. C. 405.

59. Conyers v. Commissioners of Roads, 116 Ga. 101. Amendment as to qualifications of jurors (Nov., 1902) is not retroactive—Cubine v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 396.

60. Girdner v. Bryan, 94 Mo. App. 27.

61. State v. O'Neil Lumber Co., 170 Mo. 7.

62. Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Keith, 67 Ohio St. 279, 60 L. R. A. 525.

63. Ansley v. Ainsworth (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 884.

64. Keady v. Owers (Colo.) 69 Pac. 509.

65. Rice v. Howard (Cal.) 69 Pac. 77.

66. State v. Cole (Miss.) 32 So. 314.

67. Shively v. Lankford (Mo.) 74 S. W. 835.

68. Enactment and validity of statutes as dependent upon constitutional provisions governing their consideration and enactment by the legislature, see the topic "Statutes."

69. State v. King (Mont.) 72 Pac. 657; Joralman v. McPhee (Colo.) 71 Pac. 419; Gladwin Tp. v. Bourret Tp. (Mich.) 91 N. W. 618; State v. Hardelein, 169 Mo. 579; State v. Courtney, 27 Mont. 378, 71 Pac. 308; State v. Curler, 26 Nev. 347, 67 Pac. 1075; Hart v. Smith, 159 Ind. 182; Summerson v. Schilling, 94 Md. 582; Morse v. Omaha (Neb.) 93 N. W. 734. The constitutionality of an act creating a court will not be decided where it is not necessary to the disposition of the case, and the members of the court are not parties—Platte Land Co. v. Hubbard (Colo.) 69 Pac. 514. Under the rule that courts will refuse to consider constitutional questions unless necessary to a determination of the case, the court will not determine the constitutionality of an act allowing suits against the United States government where the only purpose of such actions is to furnish Congress with information, and such judgments are merely reported to Congress without a showing that the party was injured by its application.[70] The particular defect must be pointed out, and objection to the statute as a whole is not sufficient.[71]

Generally, a constitutional question cannot be raised for the first time on appeal.[72] It may be determined in an application for writ of habeas corpus.[73]

A constitutional objection is not waived by the fact that the objecting party had acted under the presumption that it was valid,[74] but where he institutes proceedings under an act, he may not question its constitutionality.[75] Under a law authorizing the revocation of a liquor license on failure of licensee to file a verified answer denying violations of the law, licensee is not estopped to question the constitutionality of the act by reason of the court accepting an unverified answer from him.[76]

B. General rules of interpretation.—Words will be given their ordinary meaning unless the context makes it plain that they have been used in a technical sense.[77] Where a word or term is used in the constitution in a plain and manifest sense, it will be accorded the same interpretation when used in other parts, unless the context indicates a different meaning.[78] A proviso should be confined to the antecedent next preceding it, unless the contrary intention clearly appears.[79] The rule that where a statute is re-enacted in the same words, the interpretation placed upon it must be considered as adopted along with it, applies to the construction of the constitution.[80]

The proceedings of the convention may be consulted in determining the meaning of doubtful provisions.[81] Due effect will be given to long continued and unquestioned interpretation by the legislature, and officers whose duty it is to carry the provisions into effect.[82] to take action on as it should deem fit and are in no sense operative against the government prior to the Congressional consideration—United States v. McCrory (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 861.

Enactments against the spirit of the constitution may be declared void, though not expressly prohibited by the instrument.[83]

70. Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51; Turnquist v. Cass County Drain Com'rs, 11 N. D. 514; Ely v. Rosholt, 11 N. D. 559; State v. Smiley, 65 Kan. 240, 69 Pac. 199; Donaldson v. State (Ind.) 67 N. E. 1029; Lufkin v. Lufkin, 182 Mass. 476. Where the constitution fixes the time for action, the party may not object that the statute conflicts therewith where the constitutional time had expired—Globe Lumber Co. v. Griffeth, 107 La. 621. A dram shop keeper prosecuted for selling liquor on which the tax had not been paid, may assail the constitutionality of the act imposing the tax on the manufacturer—State v. Bengsch, 170 Mo. 81. A non-resident property owner who does not appear after notice to protest cannot obtain a review of the constitutionality of the laws limiting the right to protest to resident owners—Field v. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co., 117 Fed. 925.

71. Dawson v. Waldheim, 91 Mo. App. 117.

72. Cauble v. Craig, 94 Mo. App. 675; Keller v. Home Life Ins. Co., 95 Mo. App. 627; In re Klpp. 70 App. Div. 567, 10 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 456; State v. Smith (Mo.) 75 S. W. 468. Constitutionality of an ordinance is not raised in the lower court by an objection to its introduction in evidence as null and void—Id. The fact that a contestant in an election contest did not specify his ground of demurrer to jurisdiction of contest board, that the act creating the board was not constitutional, will not prevent him from relying on that ground on appeal—Davison v. Johnson, 24 Ky. L. R. 27, 67 S. W. 996.

73. In re Jarvis (Kan.) 71 Pac. 576.

74. O'Brien v. Wheelock, 184 U. S. 450, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 636.

75. Comesky v. Village of Suffern, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 1049; Moore v. Napier, 64 S. C. 564. One who has appeared and contested, cannot question the constitutionality of an act on the ground that it fails to provide for notice—Quin v. State (Miss.) 33 So. 839.

76. In re Cullinan, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 567.

77. Hamilton Nat. Bank v. American Loan & Trust Co. (Neb.) 92 N. W. 189; Epping v. Columbus (Ga.) 43 S. E. 803. A village is included in the term "town" under the constitutional provision giving legislature power to provide for the organization of cities and towns—Brown v. Village of Grangeville (Idaho) 71 Pac. 151. The word "business" in the Utah constitution providing that all civil and criminal business arising in such county must be tried in such county, means "actions"—White v. Rio Grande Western Ry. Co., 25 Utah, 346, 71 Pac. 593.

78. Epping v. Columbus (Ga.) 43 S. E. 803.

79. State v. Quayle (Utah) 71 Pac. 1060.

80. Globe Lumber Co. v. Clement (La.) 34 So. 595.

81, 82. Epping v. Columbus (Ga.) 43 S. E. 803.

83. Cain v. Smith (Ga.) 44 S. E. 5; Lex-

Presumptions favor the constitutionality of statutes,[84] but not where a portion of the act has been held unconstitutional and the validity of the remainder is challenged.[85] Where one of two interpretations of a statute will bring the act within the constitution, and the other will conflict therewith, the former will be adopted.[86] The conflict must be shown beyond all reasonable doubt,[87] and must be manifest.[88]

Courts will not inquire into the motives of the legislature,[89] nor the wisdom of their enactments.[90] A statute satisfying the requirements of the constitution will not be declared unconstitutional on the ground that it is opposed to public policy.[91]

An act is not rendered entirely invalid by the fact that it contains an unconstitutional provision, if what remains is complete and enforceable,[92] but though an act be valid under one provision, it may be declared void where expressly prohibited by another provision.[93] A penal act cannot be sustained as within the constitutional power, where it is broader than the constitutional provision, and the language covers acts without as well as within the constitutional limitation.[94]

§ 4. Executive, legislative and judicial functions. Executive functions.—A governor may act administratively as a member of a levee board without transcending his functions.[95]

Following the majority,[96] Missouri holds that the legislature may not take from the executive the appointment of administrative officers;[97] Maryland holds that this is also a nonjudicial function;[98] New Jersey, on the contrary, holds that their appointment is not solely for the executive, but may, under legislative sanction, be exercised by a court, since the appointive power is not strictly referable to either

ington v. Thompson, 24 Ky. L. R. 384, 68 S. W. 477, 57 L. R. A. 775; State v. Kohnke, 109 La. 838.

84. Ross v. Board of Chosen Free Holders (N. J. Law) 55 Atl. 310; Commonwealth v. Mintz, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 283.

85. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Austin (Kan.) 72 Pac. 850.

86. Grinage v. Times Democrat Pub. Co., 107 La. 121; Cass County v. Sarpy County (Neb.) 92 N. W. 635; Sugden v. Partridge, 174 N. Y. 87; State v. Lewis (Utah) 72 Pac. 388; People v. Rose (Ill.) 67 N. E. 746. The constitutionality of a statute will be sustained if possible, and in cases of doubtful terms or meaning that construction will be applied which upholds the act if it can be done without doing violence to the manifest legislative purpose—Commonwealth v. Barney, 24 Ky. L. R. 2352, 74 S. W. 181; Beasley v. Ridout, 94 Md. 641. Where there is doubt as to whether the constitution confers power on municipality to regulate street railway charges, that doubt will be resolved in favor of the power—Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Chicago, 199 Ill. 484, 59 L. R. A. 631.

87. Bon Homme County v. Berndt, 15 S. D. 494; State v. Sonier, 107 La. 794.

88. Rosenbloom v. State (Neb.) 89 N. W. 1053, 57 L. R. A. 922; People v. Warden of Sing Sing Prison, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 113; Grinage v. Times Democrat Pub. Co., 107 La. 121.

89. Dobbins v. Los Angeles (Cal.) 72 Pac. 970. Whether duress and coercion caused the adoption of a congressional law by Indian tribes will not be considered—Ansley v. Ainsworth (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 884.

90. State v. Lewis (Utah) 72 Pac. 388; Point Roberts Fishing Co. v. George & Barker Co., 28 Wash. 200, 68 Pac. 438.

91. Julien v. Model Bldg., Loan & Inv. Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 561.

92. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Lewis & C. County (Mont.) 72 Pac. 982; White v. Gove (Mass.) 67 N. E. 359; In re Philadelphia, M. & S. St. Ry. Co., 203 Pa. 354; Logan County v. Carnahan (Neb.) 95 N. W. 812. If the valid and invalid parts of a statute are severable and it is apparent that the latter was not an inducement to the adoption of the former, the law will be enforced to the extent that it is in harmony with the constitution—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Sprague (Neb.) 95 N. W. 46.

93. State v. Froehlich, 115 Wis. 32.

94. Karem v. United States (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 250.

95. Dehon v. Lafourche Basin Levee Board (La.) 34 So. 770.

96. 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1010.

97. There is a legislative encroachment on the executive by the creation of a bipartisan board of election commissioners to be chosen from persons named by political committees. The power of the legislature as to the appointment of officers "not otherwise" provided for is confined to the "manner" of making such appointments. The fact that the committees "name" and the executive "appoints" is unsubstantial because the executive has no choice—State v. Washburn, 167 Mo. 680, reviewing many cases.

98. Appointment of jail visitors and custodians—Beasley v. Ridout, 94 Md. 641.

department.[99] The courts may by mandamus compel action, but cannot direct it,[1] and may hear appeals from the actions of official boards.[2]

The pardoning power of the governor is not invaded by a provision in a game law giving the informer one-half the fines imposed, as this power does not extend to the remission of vested interests of private persons in fines and penalties,[3] nor by a law allowing the imposition of an indeterminate sentence on one convicted of a crime for the first time,[4] nor by an act allowing the resubmission of the question of the sale of intoxicating liquors, as the second submission, though in favor of the sale, will not absolve from offenses previously committed.[5]

Legislative functions.—A legislature is without power to limit the powers of a subsequent legislature in matters strictly governmental,[6] and cannot give a municipality the power to vacate, suspend or repeal a general law of the state.[7] A legislature having power to delegate to local authorities the control of public rights in streets may at any time resume such authority.[8] The legislature alone has power to suspend the laws.[9]

Legislative power is delegated by an act giving the people of the state the power to declare in favor of a salary law, and making the same void if rejected by the voters,[10] by an act allowing the county courts of certain counties to appropriate such amounts as they shall deem just and equitable within a certain sum as judges' salaries,[11] and by an act requiring a license from steam engineers and making the examiner the sole judge of the competency of the applicant.[12]

There is no delegation of legislative power within the constitution by laws authorizing the subdivision of cities and townships by committees,[13] or permitting appointments without concurrence of the senate,[14] or by the creation of a park board with a power of initiative over a city council,[15] or by the creation of a board of fish commissioners, with power to appoint a fish warden,[16] or by acts allowing munici-

99. Ross v. Board of Chosen Free Holders (N. J. Law) 55 Atl. 310, upholding act giving power to name park commissioners and overruling Schwarz v. Dover, 68 N. J. Law, 576, which denied validity of Laws N. J. 1901, c. 107, p. 239 authorizing the court to appoint excise officers.

1. State v. Savage (Neb.) 90 N. W. 898. Executive discretion in acting can not be so controlled. See Mandamus.

2. Though in determining the illegality of a refusal by the commissioners of the license or their abuse of discretion, the court must decide question of suitability and in a limited sense have a trial de novo, yet it is not required to decide whether it would have rejected the license itself and in that sense exercise administrative powers—Appeal of Moynihan, 75 Conn. 358.

3. Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, p. 925—Meul v. People, 198 Ill. 258.

4. Penal Code, § 687A—People v. Warden of Sing Sing Prison, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 113. Indeterminate sentence law is valid though clemency is in a sense to be exercised by the court—Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71.

Reduction of sentence at a subsequent term of court infringes on the pardoning power—State v. Dalton (Tenn.) 72 S. W. 456.

5. Lloyd v. Dollisin, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 571.

6. Laws N. Y. 1897, c. 378, §§ 351-357, creating a police pension fund, could not prevent a subsequent legislature from abolishing the office of one about to become a pensioner—People v. Coler, 173 N. Y. 103.

7. Arroyo v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 69 S. W. 503.

8. New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Boston Terminal Co., 182 Mass. 397.

9. This principle is not violated by the act allowing resubmission of the question of local option in cities after two years from the former determination—Lloyd v. Dollisin, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 571. An act allowing removal of a county seat and appointing commissioners therefor with power to solicit subscriptions and ascertain the amount likely to be realized from old county buildings, providing the act should not take effect until such commissioners had ascertained that the removal would not require increase of tax rate, does not violate constitutional provision limiting power of suspending laws to the general assembly—Hand v. Stapleton, 135 Ala. 156.

10. State v. Garver, 66 Ohio St. 555.

11. The judges are state, not county officers and their salaries shall be "ascertained by law"—Colbert v. Bond (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1061.

12. The legislature should fix a standard of proficiency—Harmon v. State, 66 Ohio St. 249.

13. Kennedy v. Mayor of Pawtucket, 24 R. I. 461; Allison v. Corker, 67 N. J. Law, 596.

14. Sess. Laws 1899, p. 345 (The Medical Law)—In re Inman (Idaho) 69 Pac. 121.

15. Kansas City v. Mastin, 169 Mo. 80.

16. Sess. Laws 1901, p. 328—Reed v. Dunbar, 41 Or. 509, 69 Pac. 451.

pal corporations to amend their charters,[17] or by an act authorizing voters of street lighting districts to appropriate funds raised by taxation and expended within the district.[18] The state may delegate to a municipal corporation its powers to regulate the rates of local common carriers.[19]

There is not an unwarranted delegation of legislative power by laws giving departmental officers the power to make rules and regulations.[20] But the violation of such rules cannot be declared a crime,[21] subject to the proviso that a subdivision of government or a branch of such subdivision may be authorized to legislate upon matters of local concern.[22]

There is not a delegation of congressional legislative power by a recognition in the bankruptcy act of local laws giving exemptions, dower, etc.,[23] nor by an act ratifying an agreement with an Indian tribe.[24]

There is not an invasion of legislative power by a court's authorizing a statutory action against the railroad commission to determine the reasonableness of rates made by the commission,[25] nor by an act authorizing a township to pass an ordinance directing application to a court to compel railroad companies to erect gates at crossings.[26] Modes of procedure are for legislative regulation.[27] Courts cannot be given the initiative in the acquisition or construction of permanent accommodations for themselves.[28] It is proper for the judiciary to be authorized to call a court into session when the judge who shall sit is otherwise designated.[29]

Matters within the legislative discretion are not the subject of judicial review, unless there has been an abuse of power.[30] The passage and approval of ordinances may not be controlled by injunction.[31]

Judicial functions.—The protection of existing tribunals and of their jurisdictions and procedure is the subject of later portions of this article.[32] Courts are given the power to determine all judicial questions whenever or however they may arise.[33]

17. Yazoo City v. Lightcap (Miss.) 33 So. 949.

18. Allison v. Corker, 67 N. J. Law, 596.

19. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Chicago, 199 Ill. 484, 59 L. R. A. 631.

20. Act of Congress approved, June 4th, 1897 (30 Stat. 35)—United States v. Dastervignes, 118 Fed. 199.

21. Federal act making it an offense to violate rules made by a cabinet officer delegates legislative powers to an administrative officer—United States v. Blasingame, 116 Fed. 654; Dastervignes v. United States (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 30; Dent v. United States (Ariz.) 71 Pac. 920.

22. Act making violation of rules and regulations of a board of park commissioners, breaches of the peace, does not amount to a delegation of legislative power—Brodbine v. Inhabitants of Revere, 182 Mass. 598.

23. Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 1113.

24. Ansley v. Ainsworth (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 884.

25. Railroad Commission v. Weld & Neville (Tex.) 73 S. W. 529.

26. Palmyra Tp. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 63 N. J. Eq. 799.

27. In re Probate Blanks, 71 N. H. 621.

28. Moreau v. Board of Chosen Freeholders, 68 N. J. Law, 480.

29. Commonwealth Roofing Co. v. Palmer Leather Co., 67 N. J. Law, 566.

30. May not review the discretion of the legislature in redistricting a state—People v. Rose (Ill.) 67 N. E. 746; People v. Carlock, 198 Ill. 150. Nor whether property is benefited by the construction of a sewer—Prior v. Buehler & C. Const. Co., 170 Mo. 439. Nor the reasonableness of a license tax—Woodall v. City of Lynchburg, 4 Va. Sup. Ct. R. 166, 40 S. E. 915.

31. Wright v. People (Colo.) 73 Pac. 869.

32. Establishment and abolition of constitutional courts or of their jurisdiction is subject to restriction by various provisions not dependent on the distribution of powers. See post, § 22; "Organization and Frame of Government; Officers." See also sections treating of "Jury Trials" and the like.

33. State v. Savage (Neb.) 90 N. W. 898. The question whether an act violates a constitutional provision prohibiting special legislation, is for the judiciary—State v. Hammond (S. C.) 44 S. E. 797; Rambo v. Larrabee (Kan.) 73 Pac. 915.

The provision against the passage of a special act where a general law can be made applicable, is addressed to the legislature alone; it is a legislative question whether a general law can meet the occasion—Sanitary Dist. of Chicago v. Ray, 199 Ill. 63.

In passing on the constitutionality of a statute, courts must bear in mind that except in the particular wherein it is restrained by the constitution of the United States, the legislative department may exercise all legislative power which is not forbidden expressly or by implication by provision of the statute of the state, and if there be doubt as to the validity of the law, it is due to the co-ordinate branch of the government that its action should be upheld and

The legislature cannot declare the meaning and intent of the pre-existing law,[34] but in legislating may define its own meaning.[35]

The legislature is without power to abridge the court's power to punish for contempt.[36] An act making specifications of weights in bills of lading conclusive evidence of the fact deprives courts of the power to determine the weight and sufficiency of evidence.[37] An attempt by the legislature to exercise control over court records and extend the time for filing bills of exceptions in cases pending on appeal in appellate courts violates the rule requiring separation of the three departments of the government.[38]

Judicial functions are not conferred on nonjudicial officers by the provision of the anti-trust law, imposing a penalty on a corporation for failure to answer under oath inquiries from a secretary of state as to violation of provisions of the act,[39] nor by a law giving a state board of irrigation power to determine the priority in amount of past appropriations and allowing further appropriations, when there is unappropriated water in the stream,[40] nor by an act allowing the board of managers of a reformatory to transfer convicts to the penitentiary, where the convicts are shown to be more than twenty-one years of age.[41] Congress may invest officers with power to determine fact of citizenship as means of excluding aliens, such being an inquiry of a political rather than a judicial fact.[42] There is an invasion of judicial power by an act creating a board of auditors with the power to determine the validity of claims against a county which has been divided, and to apportion the amount on the property of the taxpayers of two counties.[43]

Nonjudicial functions are not imposed on a court under a highway law allowing the supreme court, on the presentation of a petition, to determine the necessity and line of construction of a road between different points and direct a notice of a hearing before commissioners,[44] nor by an act making it the duty of a court to count names on a petition for submission of the question of sale of intoxicating liquors, and determining whether the names are the names of persons voting at a preceding election.[45] An act giving control of a jail to a board of visitors appointed by judges of the circuit court confers the nonjudicial power of appointment on the judges.[46] Local legislative bodies and not the judiciary must determine the necessity for, and initiate the action of, the public, in providing permanent accommodations for the courts.[47]

Courts are without power to regulate the procedure.[48] For a court to request pursuant to statute the holding of a constitutional court is not a judicial appointment of a judge of that court, when viewed in the light of a statute which designates which judge shall sit.[49] The constitution of New Jersey does not prevent legisaccepted by judicial powers—Brown v. Galveston (Tex.) 75 S. W. 488.

34. Kern v. Supreme Council, A. L. of H., 167 Mo. 471.

35. The provision in a franchise tax act that the act shall not be considered to apply to any corporation which has not or may not exercise a municipal franchise, is not an invasion of judicial functions by the legislature, but limits the scope of the act itself —State Board of Assessors v. Plainfield Water Supply Co., 67 N. J. Law, 357.

36. State v. Shepherd (Mo.) 76 S. W. 79.

37. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Simonson, 64 Kan. 802, 68 Pac. 653, 57 L. R. A. 765.

38. Johnson v. Gebhauer, 159 Ind. 271.

39. Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, pp. 616, 617—People v. Butler St. Foundry & Iron Co., 201 Ill. 236.

40. Laws 1895, c. 69—Crawford Co. v. Hathaway (Neb.) 93 N. W. 781.

41. People v. Mallary, 195 Ill. 582.

42. United States v. Lee Huen, 118 Fed. 442.

43. Fitch v. Board of Auditors of Claims (Mich.) 94 N. W. 952.

44. Laws 1892, c. 493—Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Town of Greenburgh, 173 N. Y. 215.

45. Board of Sup'rs of Election v. Todd (Md.) 54 Atl. 963.

46. Beasley v. Ridout, 94 Md. 641.

47. Moreau v. Board of Chosen Freeholders, 68 N. J. Law, 480.

48. The supreme court of New Hampshire is without power to approve or disapprove forms and rules of practice and procedure in probate courts (Laws 1901, c. 45)—In re Probate Blanks, 71 N. H. 621.

49. New Jersey Act 1900 provides that a judge of the Court of Common Pleas on request of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall hold the Circuit Court, Act of 1901 prolation affecting powers lodged in several justices of the supreme court, as distinguished from the court itself, and the legislature may abolish such powers without invading jurisdiction of the supreme court.[50]

§ 5. Relative powers of federal and state or other subordinate governments.—Under the provisions conferring exclusive powers over certain subjects, the questions which arise are such as require a construction of the act averred to be obnoxious. For this reason titles like "Bankruptcy" and "Commerce" should be consulted. The state may not invest a state corporation with power to restrain interstate commerce.[51] In a preceding article, "Commerce," is treated the question what are regulations of commerce and what commerce is interstate or foreign as distinguished from domestic. The federal inhibition against the passage of laws impairing the obligation of contracts is a limitation on the powers of states and not of congress.[52] A patent is the property right granted by the constitution and laws of the United States, and a state may not enact laws that notes in the ordinary form shall not be given or accepted for an assignment thereof,[53] but it may adopt police regulations respecting such articles.[54] A state is without power to tax the compensation allowed federal officers.[55]

Where there is a conflict between the national bankruptcy and the state insolvency laws, the state laws must yield.[56] A federal bankruptcy act excepting a corporation seeking benefit of the act as voluntary bankrupt does not suspend state insolvency laws in that respect.[57] The constitutional provision giving congress the power to establish uniform bankruptcy laws does not affect proceedings commenced under state insolvency laws enacted before the passage of the national act.[58] Tribal constitutions of Indian nations yield to acts of congress.[59]

§ 6. Police power in general.—This section is designed to treat of the general doctrine of police power. Police regulations considered as offending some one or more of the constitutional guaranties will be considered in succeeding sections.

The legislature may not, under its police powers, arbitrarily invade private property or personal rights.[60] The power may be delegated to municipalities.[61] There can be no estoppel of the public from making and enforcing proper police regulations.[62] The fact that an article is protected by the federal patent laws does not prevent its coming within the operation of the police powers of the state.[63] The state may not, within its police power, confine the use of artesian wells by its owner to the amount reasonably necessary for his own use,[64] nor prevent a riparian owner from bathing in the waters of a lake because a city draws its viding that the law judge of the court of Common Pleas should ipso facto be appointed to hold the Circuit Court. Held, that the judge of the court of common pleas derives his authority to hold the Circuit Court, from his appointment as judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and not from request of the Justices of the Supreme Court—Commonwealth Roofing Co. v. Palmer Leather Co., 67 N. J. Law, 566.

50. State v. Taylor, 68 N. J. Law, 276.

51. United States v. Northern Securities Co., 120 Fed. 721.

52. Ansley v. Ainsworth (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 884.

53. Pegram v. American Alkali Co., 122 Fed. 1000.

54. Arbuckle v. Blackburn (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 616.

55. Purnell v. Page (N. C.) 45 S. E. 534.

56. Rosenfeld v. Siegfried, 91 Mo. App. 169.

57. Keystone Driller Co. v. San Francisco Superior Ct., 138 Cal. 738, 72 Pac. 398.

58. Old Town Bank v. McCormick, 96 Md. 341; Hood v. Blair State Bank (Neb.) 91 N. W. 701, 706; Osborn v. Fender (Minn.) 92 N. W. 1114.

59. Ansley v. Ainsworth (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 884.

60. Iler v. Ross (Neb.) 90 N. W. 869, 57 L. R. A. 895.

61. City of Danville v. Hatcher (Va.) 44 S. E. 723; Ward v. County Ct., 51 W. Va. 102.

62. Dobbins v. Los Angeles (Cal.) 72 Pac. 970.

63. Arbuckle v. Blackburn (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 616.

64. Laws 1901, p. 502, c. 354, provides that where there are two or more artesian wells in a neighborhood, one or more of which are operated, the owner of such well shall use due care to prevent waste, and see that the well discharges no more than is reasonably necessary for his own use—Huber v. Merkel (Wis.) 94 N. W. 354.

water supply from a lower point on the lake,[65] nor compel free transportation of policemen on street cars,[66] nor limit the hours of labor on public works unless against the public welfare or public policy.[67] The state may, within its police powers, allow the erection of a fence by a landowner along a railroad, where the company refuses to build the fence, and authorize the recovery of an attorney's fees in an action for reimbursement.[68] Other instances of valid exercise of police powers are grouped in the notes.[69]

§ 7. Liberty of contract and right of property.—Legislation is not invalid because it may result in deprivation of property, or liberty of contract if public welfare is sought.[70] Liberty of contract is also a property right,[71] which is not offended by laws against dealing in options and futures.[72] Laws against combination to raise the price of articles of commerce and fix prices are valid,[73] but it is unreasonable to require persons contracting for erection of buildings to secure their contracts by bonds, which shall inure to the benefit of persons furnishing materials.[74]

Laws limiting the hours of employment have been sustained,[75] though the Ohio courts decide that such are invalid as applied to public works, unless it appears that longer hours are unlawful or impolitic.[76] A law compelling weekly payments of wages by corporations violates the right of private contract,[77] but agreements relieving employer from the payment of wages each week may be forbidden, as well as assignments of wages[78] or payment of seamen in advance.[79] The 65. People v. Hulburt (Mich.) 91 N. W. 211.

66. Laws 1895, c. 417—Wilson v. United Traction Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 233.

67. Cleveland v. Clements Bros. Const. Co., 67 Ohio St. 197, 59 L. R. A. 775.

68. Terre Haute & L. Ry. Co. v. Salmon (Ind.) 67 N. E. 918.

69. Hours of employment of females (Act March 31, 1899)—Wenham v. State (Neb.) 91 N. W. 421. Sunday laws—State v. Nichols, 28 Wash. 628, 69 Pac. 372. Forbidding sale of oleomargarine and imitation butter—People v. Rotter (Mich.) 91 N. W. 167. License acts for physicians excepting nonresidents, opticians—Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211. Licensing of barbers (Laws 1901, p. 349, c. 172)—State v. Sharpless (Wash.) 71 Pac. 737. Police powers of cities, see Municipal Corporations. Compulsory vaccination (Rev. Laws, c. 75, § 137)—Commonwealth v. Pear (Mass.) 66 N. E. 719. License of dentists—State v. Chapman (N. J. Law) 55 Atl. 94. Law making specification of weights in bills of lading conclusive on railroad companies (Kan. Laws 1893, c. 100)—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Simonson, 64 Kan. 802, 68 Pac. 653, 57 L. R. A. 765. It is proper to compel abutters to make sewer connections when a sewer is laid—Van Wagoner v. City of Paterson, 67 N. J. Law, 455.

70. A law is reasonable which requires gas flow from a well to be controlled within two days—Given v. State (Ind.) 66 N. E. 750. Restrictions on the hours of stated kinds of labor if for the public good do not invade liberty of occupation—People v. Lochner, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 120; State v. Buchanan, 29 Wash. 602, 70 Pac. 52, 59 L. R. A. 342. Laws against the use of trading stamps are not reasonable—People v. Dycker, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 308.

The subjects of this section are also protected against deprivation without due process of law, which see, post.

Property: Alimony decree—Gundry v. Gundry, 11 Okl. 423, 68 Pac. 509; Livingston v. Livingston, 173 N. Y. 377. Liquor license—In re Cullinan, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 567.

Not property: Labor—Mathews v. People, 202 Ill. 389; Street v. Varney Elect. Co. (Ind.) 66 N. E. 895. Existing proportion between classes of stock issues and bond issues may be changed by majority under enabling acts of incorporation—Dickinson v. Consolidated Traction Co., 114 Fed. 232; Venner Co. v. United States Steel Corp., 116 Fed. 1012. Expectancy of a pension—People v. Coler, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 584. Levy which attached no lien—McFaddin v. Evans-Snyder-Buel Co., 185 U. S. 505, 46 Law. Ed. 1012. Objections to land entry—Emblen v. Lincoln Land Co., 184 U. S. 660, 46 Law. Ed. 736. Immature franchise—Underground R. of N. Y. v. City of New York, 116 Fed. 952. Gambling devices—Garland Novelty Co. v. State (Ark.) 71 S. W. 257.

71. Mathews v. People, 202 Ill. 389.

72. Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 623. Though legitimate contracts may be affected—Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606.

73. State v. Smiley, 65 Kan. 240, 69 Pac. 199.

74. San Francisco Lumber Co. v. Bibb (Cal.) 72 Pac. 964. Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 1203—Shaughnessy v. American Surety Co., 138 Cal. 543, 69 Pac. 250, 71 Pac. 701.

75. In re Ten Hour Law for St. Ry. Corp. (R. I.) 54 Atl. 602. Pen. Code, § 384h—People v. Orange County Road Const. Co., 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 580.

76. Act April 16, 1900—Cleveland v. Clements Bros. Const. Co., 67 Ohio St. 197, 59 L. R. A. 775.

77. Ind. Laws 1899, p. 193, c. 124—Republic Iron & Steel Co. v. State (Ind.) 66 N. E. 1005.

78. Acts 1899, p. 193, § 4—International right to discharge an employe for membership in a labor union[80] and to employ laborers to take the place of strikers is protected.[81]

The liberty of contract is limited by the commerce clause in the federal constitution, and congress may prohibit private contracts in restraint of interstate commerce.[82]

Right of property is not infringed by a requirement that persons offering real property for sale shall have written authority,[83] nor by laws allowing the prosecution of one in possession of premises on which liquor is sold in violation of the law, though it allows such person to be punished each time liquor is sold, without regard to whether he makes the sale,[84] nor by laws making it an offense to buy or sell certain species of game,[85] nor by laws making spite fences a nuisance,[86] nor by laws allowing the public destruction of liquors illegally offered for sale.[87]

Private property may not be taken for private purposes.[88]

§ 8. Freedom of speech and the press.—Speeches and writings in aid of a boycott of a business may not be enjoined,[89] nor may a judge in a murder trial prohibit the publication of the evidence, where there is no question of obscenity in testimony,[90] but publications of articles scandalizing courts have no protection,[91] nor articles inciting to revolution and murder and suggesting the murder of certain persons.[92]

§ 9. Personal and religious liberty.—Public school pupils cannot be required to attend religious services or join in them,[93] but may be compelled to attend school.[94] Applications of the guaranty of personal liberty are shown below.[95]

"Imprisonment for debt" does not include imprisonment to enforce payment of a license tax, or a fine,[96] or alimony, as a money decree for alimony, is not a debt;[97] nor is it such imprisonment when made in punishment of the offense of selling property on which a lien exists without consent of lienee.[98]

Text-Book Co. v. Weissinger (Ind.) 65 N. E. 521.

79. Patterson v. Bark Eudora, 190 U. S. 169.

80. State v. Kreutzberg, 114 Wis. 530.

81. Mathews v. People, 202 Ill. 389.

82. United States v. Northern Securities Co., 120 Fed. 721.

83. In certain cities only—Whiteley v. Terry, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 197.

84. City of Campbellsville v. Odewalt, 24 Ky. L. R. 1717, 72 S. W. 314.

85. Pen. Code, § 626k—Ex parte Kenneke, 136 Cal. 527, 69 Pac. 261.

86. Horan v. Byrnes (N. H.) 54 Atl. 945.

87. Gen. St. Kan. 1901, § 2493—State v. McManus, 65 Kan. 720, 70 Pac. 700.

88. An act requiring the railroad company to keep its right of way clear of inflammable material and imposing a penalty for violation of the act, does not amount to a taking of private property for private use—McFarland v. Mississippi River & B. T. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 152. An act authorizing the condemnation of land for "so-called" private roads, does not authorize the taking of private property for private use, as a private road is open to the public—Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co. (Cal.) 72 Pac. 915. An act for the establishment of drainage districts and the election by the residents of the districts of a board to manage the business, does not create a private corporation for the improvement of private property and force individuals to become members of the corporation against their will against the constitutional inhibition (Rev. St. 1899, § 8251)—Mound City Land & Stock Co. v. Miller, 170 Mo. 240, 60 L. R. A. 190.

89. Marx & H. Jeans Clothing Co. v. Watson, 168 Mo. 133, 56 L. R. A. 951.

90. Ex parte Foster (Tex. Cr. App.) 71 S. W. 593.

91. State v. Shepherd (Mo.) 76 S. W. 79.

92. People v. Most, 171 N. Y. 423.

93. The point where courts may interfere with the use of the bible in public schools, is where the use amounts to an abuse and the teacher employed to give secular instruction inculcates sectarian views—State v. Scheve (Neb.) 93 N. W. 169, 59 L. R. A. 927.

94. Laws requiring compulsory attendance of children at school are not unconstitutional as authorizing an interference with parental dominion or personal liberty—State v. Jackson, 71 N. H. 552.

95. Law against loitering in bar rooms is valid—In re Stegenga (Mich.) 94 N. W. 385. To require license from transcient merchants is valid—Levy v. State (Ind.) 68 N. E. 172.

Missouri bill of rights does not allow an injunction to restrain boycotting unless the privilege is abused, as this would amount to a deprivation of personal liberty—Marx & H. J. Clothing Co. v. Watson, 168 Mo. 133, 56 L. R. A. 951.

96. Rosenbloom v. State (Neb.) 89 N. W. 1053, 57 L. R. A. 922; Sothman v. State (Neb.) 92 N. W. 303.

97. State v. Cook, 66 Ohio St. 566.

98. Cr. Code, § 277—State v. Barden, 64 S. C. 206.

Right to choose employment.—Laws requiring registration and examination as a condition to following a profession are not unconstitutional, as operating to prevent persons from following these occupations.[99] An ordinance requiring public printing to bear a union label deprives those not using the label of the right to pursue their vocations as far as public printing is concerned.[1] There is not an unconstitutional restraint to personal liberty in an act prohibiting the operation of a barber shop on Sunday.[2] An act making it unlawful to exhibit games of chance in rooms made difficult of access to the police is not invalid as unreasonable or oppressive interference with ordinary personal rights.[3] Business of operating street railways is not an ordinary avocation, within the constitutional provision securing individuals the right to choose their occupation and to pursue any ordinary calling or trade so as to prevent legislative regulation.[4]

§ 10. Equal protection of laws.—The discrimination contemplated by the clause guaranteeing equal protection of the law is a discrimination between persons coming within the same class,[5] and must be in some measure unjust and oppressive.[6] An act allowing the city to contract for the construction of an underground street railroad does not deprive companies desiring to construct a road on the same line of the equal protection of the laws.[7]

Discrimination against races is not wrought by separating them in schools.[8] A negro on trial for crime is denied equal protection if his own race is excluded from the jury because of race.[9]

There is not a violation of the clause guaranteeing equal protection of the laws by an act exempting a portion of a county from the operation of the general stock law,[10] nor by a law requiring the licensing and regulation of barbers, and exempting from its provisions barbers in cities of a specified class, as the barbers in the different towns and cities are treated alike.[11] The proclamation of the governor of a state against the importation of cattle for dairy and breeding purposes from a certain district, but allowing the importation of cattle for slaughter from the same district creates an illegal discrimination within the constitutional provision.[12] An act giving commissioners under the general stock law the power to exclude all undesirable persons from the exempt territory gives such commissioners arbitrary powers and is unconstitutional.[13]

99. State v. Wilcox, 64 Kan. 789, 68 Pac. 634.

1. Marshall & Bruce Co. v. Nashville (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 815.

2. State v. Sopher, 25 Utah, 318, 71 Pac. 482, 60 L. R. A. 468.

3. In re Ah Cheung, 136 Cal. 678, 69 Pac. 492.

4. Goddard v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 202 Ill. 362.

5. City of Carthage v. Carlton, 99 Ill. App. 338. Violated by laws treating some persons within the state differently from others in respect to the enjoyment of public waters—Rossmiller v. State, 114 Wis. 169.

6. Does not apply to requirement that one consumer pay for his gas by meter rate while others pay by the flat rate—Indiana Natural & Illuminating Gas Co. v. State, 158 Ind. 516, 57 L. R. A. 761. The allowance of exemptions according to state laws, in force at the time of filing of petition in bankruptcy, does not render the national bankruptcy act open to the objection that it is ithout uniform application throughout the United States—Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 1113.

7. Underground R. of New York v. New York, 116 Fed. 952.

8. Reynolds v. Board of Education (Kan.) 72 Pac. 274. Mongolians (Pol. Code, Cal. § 1662)—Wong Him v. Callahan, 119 Fed. 381. Apportionment of school funds—Hooker v. Town of Greenville, 130 N. C. 472.

9. There is not sufficient evidence to show a discrimination against the colored race in formation of a jury for the trial of a member of the race, where it is shown that only a small percentage of the negroes in the county could read or write, and there were but few negroes in the county and the jury commissioners stated that they were instructed not to discriminate, and that they did not in fact discriminate against the race —Hubbard v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 67 S. W. 413.

10. Goodale v. Sowell, 62 S. C. 516.

11. State v. Sharpless (Wash.) 71 Pac. 737.

12. Pierce v. Dillingham, 203 Ill. 148.

13. Goodale v. Sowell, 62 S. C. 516.

Laws prohibiting the sale of liquors are not open to the objection that they violate the constitutional guaranty of equal protection of the laws.[14] A local option law allowing the use of liquors on prescription, and limiting the right to write prescriptions only to physicians who follow the profession of medicine as their principal and usual calling, denies the equal protection of the laws to a physician engaged in the practice but whose principal business is that of a postmaster.[15] A charter provision against saloons keeping wine-rooms into which women are permitted to enter and be supplied with liquor is not a discrimination against women on account of sex.[16]

Inspection fees and licenses.—An act exacting an inspection fee from manufacturers of beer for sale in the state, which brewers for export need not pay, denies a brewer for domestic use the equal protection of the laws.[17]

Laws requiring a license as a condition to the transaction of business are not generally objectionable as denying equal protection,[18] unless they discriminate, as where a law requiring peddler's licenses exempts business men of the town,[19] and honorably discharged soldiers of the civil war,[20] or deny right thereto to nonresidents.[21] An act exempting from examination steam engineers who have operated engines for three years or held a license under a city ordinance violates the equality clause, in that it confers a license on engineers without reference to their competency.[22]

Taxation.—The constitutional guaranty of equal protection of the laws does not require the levy of taxes by a uniform method upon every class of property, but leaves to the legislative discretion the manner with respect to each class.[23] The clause is not violated by the inheritance tax laws of New York and Illinois.[24] There is a denial by the Wisconsin inheritance tax law, exempting inheritances of less than $10,000 in value, and taxing those exceeding that amount without regard to the size of the bequests.[25] There is not a denial of the equal protection of the laws by an act taxing railroad stock and exempting the stock in domestic railroads and others that list substantially all their property for taxation.[26]

14. An act allowing an election on the question of prohibition in a lesser area in the county, after a defeat of the proposition by the county as a whole and prohibiting an election in such lesser area, where prohibition has been carried by the county as a whole previous to a defeat of the question by the entire county—Rippy v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 68 S. W. 687. Sales to students—Peacock v. Limburger (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 518. Laws forbidding sales within a certain distance of an institution of learning and excepting from its operation manufacturers selling wholesale packages or quantities—Webster v. State (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1020.

15. Busch v. Webb, 122 Fed. 655. A legislature is not given power to prohibit the giving of prescription for intoxicants in local option territory by a constitutional provision requiring the legislature to enact local option laws—Stephens v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 1056.

16. Denver City Charter, § 20, subd. 12—Adams v. Cronin, 29 Colo. 488, 69 Pac. 590.

17. Rev. St. 1899, c. 117, art. 4, §§ 7691, 7696—State v. Eby, 170 Mo. 497.

18. Transient merchants—Levy v. State (Ind.) 68 N. E. 172. Dairy permits—St. Louis v. Fischer, 167 Mo. 654. Evidence held sufficient to show discrimination against colored race in formation of jury for trial of defendant—Smith v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 69 S. W. 151. Agents of banking houses doing business within the state—Stewart v. Kehrer, 115 Ga. 184. Stage drivers—Borough of Belmar v. Barkalow, 67 N. J. Law, 504. Merchants according to a division into classes on the basis of sales made by such merchants—Clark v. Titusville, 184 U. S. 329, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 569. Foreign corporations—State v. Hammond Packing Co. (La.) 34 So. 368. Acts of Ark. 1901, p. 113—Ft. Smith v. Scruggs, 70 Ark. 549. Physicians (Burns' Rev. St. 1901, §§ 7318-7323[a])—Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211. There is not an arbitrary and unjust discrimination in an act exempting from the physician's registration act a physician called from another state to treat a particular case (Act 1895, c. 170)—State v. Bohemier, 96 Me. 257.

19. Pub. Laws 1901, c. 277—State v. Mitchell, 97 Me. 66.

20. State v. Shedroi (Vt.) 54 Atl. 1081.

21. Michigan barber law—Templar v. Michigan State Board of Examiners (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1058.

22. Harmon v. State, 66 Ohio St. 249.

23. Peacock v. Pratt (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 772.

24. Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189; Billings v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97.

25. Laws 1899, c. 355—Black v. State, 113 Wis. 205.

26. Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730.

nor by provisions assessing the stock of nonresident stockholders in a domestic corporation at its market value, without deduction of amount of realty held by the corporation, though such deduction is allowed to resident stockholders.[27] Savings banks are not charitable corporations within a tax exemption, so as to be subjected to an inequality by reason of being subjected to a franchise tax.[28] There is a denial of equal protection of laws to the citizens of the United States and of the particular states, by a law imposing taxes on articles manufactured for sale within the state, but exempting therefrom taxes on articles manufactured for export.[29]

Local improvements.—Equal protection is not denied by an act making the abutting property, in proportion to its frontage, pay three-fourths of the cost of paving a street,[30] nor by a water district allowing condemnation of the property of a water company by commissioners, though the value of other property is determined by a jury.[31]

Regulation of business trades and professions.—There is not a denial of equal protection by a provision avoiding margin contracts because it strikes at some and not all objects of possible speculation.[32] Laws requiring affidavits as to the ingredients used by a foreign brewer do not discriminate against the foreign brewer, though exempting the local brewer, as the state cannot inspect manufactories without the state.[33] There is no denial of the equal protection of laws by an act making the directors of a corporation liable for the misappropriation of funds,[34] nor by an act allowing building and loan associations to exact a rate of interest in excess of that allowed to be demanded by other persons,[35] nor is the clause infringed by laws requiring foreign corporations to file certificates as a condition to doing business in the state and using the state courts.[36] An act relating to foreign insurance companies and defining the term agent to include acknowledged agents, brokers or persons aiding in a transaction of the business of the company, does not deny the insurance companies the equal protection of the laws.[37] Acts requiring the Sunday closing of stores and excepting therefrom drug stores, livery stables and hotels, except as to sale of liquor,[38] prohibiting wine-rooms in connection with saloons,[39] and forbidding the manufacture and sale of imitation butter and oleomargarine, do not violate the guaranty.[40] The equality clause is violated by provisions in anti-trust acts exempting agricultural products or live stock in the possession of the producer or raiser,[41] and combinations for the purpose of raising or maintaining wages formed by those doing business in the production of articles, the cost of which is mainly made up of wages.[42] It is not violated by a provision in an anti-trust act requiring a corporation to answer under oath inquiries from secretary of state, as to violation of the act, as corporations do business by virtue of their charters from the state and may be required to answer inquiries, though individuals are not subjected to like provisions.[43] The Texas anti-

27. Pub. Acts, Conn. 1897, c. 153, § 2—Travellers' Ins. Co. v. Connecticut, 185 U. S. 364, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 949.
28. People v. Miller, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 621.
29. State v. Bengsch, 170 Mo. 81.
30. Chadwick v. Kelley, 187 U. S. 540.
31. Kennebec Water Dist. v. City of Waterville, 96 Me. 234.
32. Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606.
33. Act of Mo. March 4, 1899, § 5—Pabst Brew. Co. v. Crenshaw, 120 Fed. 144.
34. Rice v. Howard (Cal.) 69 Pac. 77.
35. Brandon v. Miller, 118 Fed. 361.
36. Keystone Driller Co. v. San Francisco Superior Ct., 138 Cal. 738, 72 Pac. 398.
37. Pollock v. German Fire Ins. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 436.
38. State v. Nichols, 28 Wash. 628, 69 Pac. 372.
39. Adams v. Cronin, 29 Colo. 488, 69 Pac. 590.
40. People v. Rotter (Mich.) 91 N. W. 167.
41. Brown v. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., 115 Ga. 429, 57 L. R. A. 547; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co., 184 U. S. 540, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 679.
42. People v. Butler St. Foundry & Iron Co., 201 Ill. 236.
43. Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, pp. 616, 617—People v. Butler St. Foundry & Iron Co., 201 Ill. 236. The exemption of building and trust act, authorizing a forfeiture of a corporation's charter, does not deny the equal protection of the law as authorizing the state to forfeit the charter of a domestic corporation and revoke the license of a foreign corporation.[44]

There is no violation of the equal protection of the laws clause, by an act limiting the hours of employment in a specified occupation,[45] though exempting cases of existing written contracts.[46] A law governing hours of labor on state and municipal contracts creates a distinction between persons contracting with the state and other employers within the equality clause.[47] There is a denial of the equal protection by an act creating free employment officers, but prohibiting the officers thereof to furnish lists to employers whose employes are on a strike.[48] There is not a denial of equality by the acts against the employment of women in the sale of intoxicating liquors.[49] The Kansas Medical Examiners' law is not open to the objection of an unlawful discrimination, by providing that nothing in the act shall interfere with religious beliefs in the treatment of diseases.[50]

Operation of railroads.—There is a denial of equal protection by regulations establishing rates unjustly and unreasonably low.[51] There is not a denial of equal protection by a provision that no right of way shall be appropriated by any private corporation until full compensation is first made and paid into court,[52] nor by an act authorizing condemnation of right of way of railroad company for telephone purposes, in that it allows the proceeding for numerous counties to take place in one county, nor because it fails to provide for jury inspection,[53] nor by an act allowing the assignment of claims against railroad companies for injuries to property, where the claim is assignable irrespective of the statute,[54] nor by an order of railroad commissioners requiring a street railroad to pay one-half the expense of constructing and maintaining safety appliances at a grade crossing of a railroad built after the construction of the street railroad.[55] There is no unconstitutional discrimination against a railroad company in a levee act, making the costs as to lands in general a charge against realty, while in the case of railroad companies the charge is against the owner.[56] An act making railroad corporations liable for injuries to employes engaged in the operation of the road by the negligence of any other agent or servant does not deny equality, where construed as including all servants necessary to the running of trains.[57]

Creation and discharge of liabilities.—The abrogation of the fellow-servant doctrine in its application to corporations but not to individuals denies to corporations the equal protection of the laws.[58] There is not a denial of the equal loan associations from the operation of the act does not render it invalid—People v. Butler St. Foundry & Iron Co., 201 Ill. 236.

44. State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co., 95 Tex. 603.

45. People v. Lochner, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 120.

46. Pub. Laws, c. 1004—In re Ten Hour Law for St. Ry. Corp. (R. I.) 54 Atl. 602.

47. People v. Orange County Road Const. Co., 175 N. Y. 84.

48. Laws 1899, p. 268—Mathews v. People, 202 Ill. 389.

49. City of Hoboken v. Goodman (N. J. Law) 51 Atl. 1092.

50. State v. Wilcox, 64 Kan. 789, 68 Pac. 634.

51. Wallace v. Arkansas Cent. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 422.

52. Steinhart v. Superior Ct., 137 Cal. 575, 70 Pac. 629, 59 L. R. A. 404; Beveridge v. Lewis, 137 Cal. 619, 67 Pac. 1040, 70 Pac. 1083, 59 L. R. A. 581. The constitutional provision is a mere limitation on the power of the legislature, negative in its character, and does not authorize any taking by any one else on more favorable terms, on which corporations, other than municipal, may take—Beveridge v. Lewis, 137 Cal. 619, 67 Pac. 1040, 70 Pac. 1083, 59 L. R. A. 581.

53. South Carolina & G. R. Co. v. American Telephone & Telegraph Co., 65 S. C. 459.

54. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Landers, 135 Ala. 504.

55. Detroit, Ft. W. & B. I. Ry. Co. v. Osborn, 189 U. S. 383.

56. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Cambern (Kan.) 71 Pac. 809.

57. Rev. St. 1899, § 2873—Callahan v. St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co., 170 Mo. 473, 60 L. R. A. 249.

58. Ballard v. Mississippi Cotton Oil Co. (Miss.) 34 So. 533. But see Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Thiebaud (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 918, decided on the strength of Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co., 175 U. S. 348.

protection of the laws by an act making the expenses for caring for an insane patient a charge against his estate, though the property had been taxed to help support the insane asylum,[59] nor by laws giving mortgages of building and loan associations priority over other liens on the premises filed subsequent to the recording thereof.[60] An act providing that persons furnishing material or labor to a contractor on a public improvement shall have a lien on the money due the contractor, providing notice of the claim is given to the officer whose duty it is to pay the contractor, does not discriminate, as the contractor and the subcontractor are not in the same position.[61]

Imposing penalties.—There is not a denial of equal protection by laws authorizing the recovery of damages and attorney's fees for failure of insurance companies to pay losses,[62] nor by an act allowing the recovery of attorney's fees from railroad companies for failure to keep the right of way clear from inflammable material,[63] nor by an act imposing a penalty on carriers for failure or refusal to pay damages within a certain time,[64] nor by a compulsory vaccination law excepting minors and persons under guardianship from the payment of the penalty for its violation,[65] nor by laws authorizing the recovery of ten times the amount of damages caused by a sheep-killing dog.[66] The clause is violated by an act authorizing the recovery of costs including an attorney's fee, from the mortgagee failing to release a mortgage after its satisfaction.[67]

Criminal laws and procedure.—Equal protection is not denied by acts prohibiting the sale of certain species of game,[68] or allowing the confiscation and sale of game illegally killed,[69] or making it a misdemeanor to work as barber on Sunday,[70] or by local option laws prescribing a penalty for sales in prohibition districts,[71] or by limitations on the allowance by the county to justices for services on criminal cases,[72] or by laws specially punishing officers for embezzlement of bank funds.[73] There is no denial of equal protection of the laws by an act authorizing the secretary of the interior to prescribe rules and regulations for the preservation of forests, and making the violation of such rules a misdemeanor, as the rules operate alike on all persons and property similarly situated.[74] There is not a discrimination within the equal protection clause, by a law providing that one who records a wager and does not transfer a memorandum thereof shall not be punished criminally if he makes the record on a certain racecourse authorized by the act.[75] An act prohibit-

59. Bon Homme County v. Berndt, 15 S. D. 494.

60. Rev. St. 1898, §§ 2014, 2015—Julien v. Model Bldg., Loan & Inv. Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 561.

61. 2 Starr & C. Ann. St. 1896, p. 2572, § 24—West Chicago Park Com'rs v. Western Granite Co., 200 Ill. 527.

62. Iowa Life Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 187 U. S. 335. Rev. St. Tex. art. 3071—Sun Life Ins. Co. v. Phillips (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 603. There is not a denial of the protection by a law authorizing the allowance of a reasonable attorney's fee to plaintiff in case of the unsuccessful defense by an insurance company of a suit on a policy covering property totally destroyed by clause insured against—Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 189 U. S. 301. But see contra, Civ. Code Ga. § 2140—Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Schwartz, 115 Ga. 113, 57 L. R. A. 752.

63. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Hamilton, 200 Ill. 633.

64. Porter v. Charleston & S. Ry. Co., 63 S. C. 169.

65. Rev. Laws, c. 75, § 137—Commonwealth v. Pear (Mass.) 66 N. E. 719.

66. Act 1886, No. 111, § 6—Rausch v. Barrere, 109 La. 563.

67. Rev. St. § 2006—Openshaw v. Halfin, 24 Utah, 426, 68 Pac. 138.

68. Ex parte Kenneke, 136 Cal. 527, 69 Pac. 261.

69. Title of game is in the state—Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, p. 928—Meul v. People, 198 Ill. 258.

70. Ex parte Northrup, 41 Or. 489, 69 Pac. 445.

71. Rev. St. 1895, tit. 69, arts. 3384-3399; Pen. Code, art. 402—Rippey v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 15.

72. Herbert v. Baltimore County Com'rs (Md.) 55 Atl. 376. The act being general in its operation on all the justices within the class fixed by the act—Id.

73. Ky. St. § 1202—Commonwealth v. Porter, 24 Ky. L. R. 364, 68 S. W. 621.

74. Dastervignes v. United States (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 30.

75. People v. Bennett, 113 Fed. 515.

ing unjust discrimination by express companies against each other and imposing a penalty therefor is not an act punishing a crime by a special act, as the recovery is by means of a civil action.[76] An action for a penalty is not a criminal proceeding, within a constitutional provision denying the state the right to appeal in criminal cases.[77]

Civil remedies and proceedings.—There is not a denial of equal protection of laws by a law authorizing special juries in cities of a specified population, and requiring the deposit of a jury fee,[78] nor by laws requiring joinder in challenges to jurors by joint parties,[79] nor by laws authorizing recovery against telegraph companies for mental anguish,[80] nor by acts exempting plaintiff in a personal injury case from the burden of proving want of contributory negligence,[81] nor by the practice of state courts allowing proof of waiver of the terms of an insurance policy, without alleging waiver in the complaint.[82]

§ 11. Privileges and immunities of citizens.—The right to deal in alcoholic stimulants is not an immunity or privilege secured to citizens by the 14th amendment.[83] Acts are valid which punish the selling of liquor to an Indian having allotment or patent of lands, which the United States holds in trust for him.[84] A nonresident has a right to engage in business in another state, and by so doing, does not waive his right to object to the constitutionality of a statute of that state subjecting nonresidents engaged in business therein to judgments without personal service of process.[85] No privileges or immunities of citizens of New York are denied beneficiaries under a foreign will by the tax imposed under the New York Inheritance Tax Law on the transfer under the will of debts due decedent by the citizens of that state.[86]

The states may, under this clause, exact licenses if nonresidents be not discriminated against,[87] and may require possession of license as condition to pursuing an occupation.[88] It may compel foreign insurance companies to file statements with the secretary of state, and obtain a license as a condition for the transaction of business in the state.[89] Permits may be required for dairy stables within city limits,[90] or cattle quarantine laws enforced,[91] as well as those forbidding nonresidents to permit stock to run at large.[92] The hours of employment of bakers may be limited.[93] Landowners killing game on their own land may be punished for having it in possession.[94] A practice act allowing service on the manager or agent or per-

76. Adams Exp. Co. v. State (Ind.) 67 N. E. 1033.

77. State v. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 1057.

78. Eckrich v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 755.

79. Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 601—Muller v. Hale, 138 Cal. 163, 71 Pac. 81.

80. Simmons v. Western Union Tel. Co., 63 S. C. 425, 57 L. R. A. 607.

81. Acts 1899, p. 58—Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Jolly (Ind.) 67 N. E. 935.

82. Andrus v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Ass'n, 168 Mo. 151.

83. Busch v. Webb, 122 Fed. 655; City of Danville v. Hatcher (Va.) 44 S. E. 723; Rippey v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 15; City of Hoboken v. Goodman, 68 N. J. Law, 217.

84. No privilege of the Indian as a citizen is destroyed—Mulligan v. United States (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 98.

85. Moredock v. Kirby, 118 Fed. 180.

86. Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189.

87. Transient merchants—Levy v. State (Ind.) 68 N. E. 172. Immigrant agents (22 Stat. p. 812)—State v. Napier, 63 S. C. 60. A vehicle tax ordinance dividing vehicles and teams into different classes, and imposing occupation tax on the different classes, is not void as exacting a tax for the privilege of using vehicles and thereby abridges the right of citizens to use the streets (Kansas City Charter, 1889, art. 3, § 1)—Kansas City v. Richardson, 90 Mo. App. 450. The clause is violated by license acts operative only on non-residents of the state—In re Jarvis (Kan.) 71 Pac. 576.

88. Medicine—Parks v. State, 159 Ind. 211.

89. Vt. St. § 4181—Cook v. Howland, 74 Vt. 393.

90. St. Louis v. Fischer, 167 Mo. 654.

91. Sess. Laws Colo. 1885, p. 335—Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137.

92. State v. Smith (Ark.) 75 S. W. 1081.

93. Laws 1897, c. 415, art. 8, § 110—People v. Lochner, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 120.

94. People v. Van Pelt (Mich.) 90 N. W. 424.

son having charge of the business of a nonresident is offensive to this clause,[95] but laws requiring the appointment of a resident assignee for the benefit of creditors are not.[96] One who has a right to protect must make objection; hence an ordinance confining labor on public works to citizens is not available as a defense to a suit to enforce the payment of a lien on abutting property for its proportion of the costs of improvement.[97]

§ 12. Grants of special privileges and immunities; class legislation.—The rules for interpretation of statutes to determine if they do or do not tend to the violation of this provision are treated in a later article.[98] The constitutional provision against grants of special privileges and immunities is violated by an act creating an election commission to be appointed from persons named by political committees,[99] and by an act prohibiting the sale of nontransferable passes, and impliedly giving the railroad power to make the sale lawful by not expressing a nontransferable condition.[1] The clause is not violated by medical registration acts,[2] by exception of labor unions from the operation of trust acts,[3] by acts allowing members of the bar to nominate jury commissioners,[4] or acts allowing the appointment of civil service commissioners by the president of a county board without consent and advice of the board.[5] Laws allowing liquor manufacturers to sell at wholesale to outside dealers within a municipality which has prohibited sale of liquor, are valid.[6] The objection on this ground is not tenable if the act has uniform application.[7] A "corporation" within this clause does not embrace a municipality.[8] In the note are collected decisions passing on numerous acts objected to as class legislation.[9]

95. Civ. Code Pr. Ky. § 51, subs. 6—Moredock v. Kirby, 118 Fed. 180.

96. Duryea v. Guthrie (Wis.) 94 N. W. 365.

97. Suit to enforce lien on abutting property—Chadwick v. Kelley, 187 U. S. 540.

98. Statutes.

99. State v. Washburn, 167 Mo. 680.

1. Ill. Act, June 10, 1897—Allardt v. People, 197 Ill. 501.

2. Act Idaho, March 3, 1899—In re Inman (Idaho) 69 Pac. 120.

3. Comp. St. Neb. 1901, c. 91 A—Cleland v. Anderson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 306.

4. Sess. Laws 1901, p. 204—State v. Vance, 29 Wash. 435, 70 Pac. 34.

5. 1 Starr & C. Ann. St. (2nd Ed. p. 1102) —Morrison v. People, 196 Ill. 454.

6. Lloyd v. Dollisin, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 571.

7. An Act authorizing the construction of side walks by a city on refusal of the property owner and exempting the city from liability for injuries on such sidewalks does not grant an immunity not allowed to other municipal corporations, where the provision exists in the charter of the municipality—Dallas v. Lentz (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 166. 2 Burns' Rev. St. Ind. 1901, §§ 54, 58c, authorizes cities of over 100,000 to grant to existing street railway corporations a franchise not exceeding 34 years, the company to surrender all franchises or right to use the street. The act further provides that if no extension is granted between the enactment of the statute and nine months of the expiration of the franchise the company may remove its tracks, and the board of public works shall open the right to occupy the streets to free competition and authorizes the successful bidder to condemn the property of the former occupant of the street. Another section provides that the contractual rights of the board of public works with reference to the use of streets are not taken away by statute except by a contract under it. Another section requires the companies operating under the statute, to charge fixed rates which are in excess of those fixed by an earlier statute. No provision of the statute gives the board of public works of the city of Indianapolis power to grant franchise to street railroads for such terms and on such conditions as it sees fit. Held, that the act did not grant a right to an existing Indianapolis street railway company, denied to others, by which it could charge a higher fare than other companies, in violation of the constitutional provision against the granting of special privileges or immunities, since the benefits are not confined to existing corporations—Smith v. Indianapolis St. Ry. Co., 158 Ind. 425.

8. Pub. Laws N. J. p. 73—State Board of Health v. Diamond Mills Paper Co., 63 N. J. Eq. 111.

9. Laws infringing rule: The minimum wage law affecting only employment of unskilled laborers on public works (Burns' Rev. St. 1901, §§ 7055a, b)—Street v. Varney Electrical Supply Co. (Ind.) 66 N. E. 895. An order of a city council singling out particular switch tracks and ordering their removal "as the same are a nuisance," as the city council could only have this power by the enactment of a general ordinance applicable to all switch tracks—People v. Blocki (Ill.) 67 N. E. 809. Prohibiting merchants from taking the assignment of miners' wages in consideration of checks or devices redeemable in merchandise, as it is limited to merchants on one hand and coal operators on the other (Burns' Rev. St. 1901. § 7448 A)—Dixon v. Poe, 169 Ind. 492, 60 L. R. A. 308.

Laws not objectionable as class legislation:

§ 13. Laws impairing the obligations of contracts.—This inhibition does not lie upon the United States.[10] It binds a state constitution, hence it cannot so retroact on a prior mortgagee as to impair his rights of priority.[11]

What is a contract.—There must be an enforceable obligation.[12] It must have been complete before the offensive law passed.[13] Hence an act may be valid if it only operates upon unformed obligations arising on an existing contract.[14] A lessee holding over under an executed lease will not have his rights cut down by a law passed after the law implied the new obligation.[15]

Judgments[16] and laws governing the alienation of the public domains are not contracts within the limitations.[17] If a mortgage be foreclosed, the obligation passes into decree, and in this view is noncontractual.[18] Ordinances having reference to contracts for water supply[19] are laws of the state. The purchaser of invalid railroad bonds has no contract right protected by the constitution against impairment, because the purchase was made on the faith of the former decision tending to show validity of the bond.[20] An act making it unlawful to sell adulterated goods will not act obnoxiously on contracts for sale of such goods.[21]

Extending time for filing petition for damages caused by change of railroad grade and excepting terminal companies—Dunbar v. Boston & P. R. Corp., 181 Mass. 383. Medical registration laws (Act Idaho, March 3, 1899) —In re Inman (Idaho) 69 Pac. 120. Allowing recovery of attorney's fees in actions against railroad companies for taking land without compensation (Gen. St. 1894, § 2661)—Pfaender v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 86 Minn. 218. Against gambling, punishing the proprietors of the game and excepting from punishment the patrons—State v. Woodman, 26 Mont. 348, 67 Pac. 1118. Limiting hours of labor of women employees is not, where it has uniform application to all women employment in the establishments described (Act March 31, 1899) —Wenham v. State (Neb.) 91 N. W. 421. Making it a misdemeanor to work as a barber on Sunday (Sess. Laws 1901, p. 17)—Ex parte Northrup, 41 Or. 489, 69 Pac. 495. Allowing recovery against telegraph companies for mental anguish [Act Feb. 20, 1901 (23 Stat. p. 748)]—Simmons v. Western Union Tel. Co., 63 S. C. 425, 57 L. R. A. 607. Allowing children within a certain distance of the city limits to attend the nearest city school free of tuition (Acts 1899, c. 59)—Edmondson v. Board of Education, 108 Tenn. 557. Prohibiting sale of liquors in local option district—State v. Johnson, 86 Minn. 121; Rippey v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 15. Forbidding liquor sales within a certain distance of an institution of learning, though it excepts wholesalers—Webster v. State (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1020. Making it a misdemeanor to purchase material on credit under representations that it is to be used in a certain building whereas it is used in another building without the consent of the seller (Rev. St. 1899, § 4226)—State v. Gregory, 170 Mo. 598. Making a jury law apply only to counties of a certain population (Acts 1901, c. 124)—Turner v. State (Tenn.) 69 S. W. 774. Making a sale of goods in bulk fraudulent unless the parties take an inventory five days before the sale, and the purchaser makes inquiries as to the creditors of the seller and gives five days notice of the sale stating cost price and the price to be paid (Acts 1901, c. 133)—Neas v. Borches (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 50. Making fraudulent a sale of a stock of goods in bulk without demanding and receiving from the vendor verified list of all credits with the amount of his indebtedness (Pierce's Code, § 5346)—McDaniels v. J. J. Connelly Shoe Co., 30 Wash. 549, 71 Pac. 37. Authorizing the making of a proper assessment on failure of a prior assessment for defects therein (Rev. St. Wis. 1898, § 1210, as amended by laws 1901, 1902, c. 9)—Schintgen v. La Crosse (Wis.) 94 N. W. 84. Allowing the secretary of the interior to prescribe rules for the preservation of forests and making the violation of such rules a misdemeanor—Dastervignes v. United States (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 30. Making it a misdemeanor to buy or sell species of game—Ex parte Kenneke, 136 Cal. 527, 69 Pac. 261. An act giving the county superintendent a specified mileage allowance in one class of counties, and a greater allowance in another class of counties—Henry v. Thurston County (Wash.) 72 Pac. 488.

10. Ansley v. Ainsworth (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 884.

11. Later one dispensed with registration of a homestead—Blouin v. Ledet, 109 La. 709.

12. Void contracts not protected—Cameron's Ex'rs v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 348.

13. Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189. Law need only have been enacted but not operative when contract is made (Rev. St. Wis. 1898, § 1770)—Diamond Glue Co. v. United States Glue Co., 187 U. S. 611.

14. Act providing that notes and mortgages by associations shall be negotiable only on the order of court or judge (Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 4463e)—Bowlby v. Kline, 28 Ind. App. 659.

15. Caley v. Thornquist (Minn.) 94 N. W. 1084.

16. Changing rate of interest on judgments—Stanford v. Coram (Mont.) 72 Pac. 655.

17. Waggoner v. Flack, 188 U. S. 595; Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 399, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 612.

18. Limitation law upon certificate of purchase—Bradley v. Lightcap, 201 Ill. 511.

19. American Waterworks & Guarantee Co. v. Home Water Co., 115 Fed. 171.

The legislature, being empowered to alter school districts by taking territory from one and adding it to another, impairs no obligation of contract in so doing, of which one of the districts may complain.[22] On consolidation of districts into one which assumes their debts, it does not matter that a part of one is not taken in.[23] The state may abolish an office, though the incumbent will in consequence not share in a pension fund to which he has contributed.[24]

State or municipal contracts are as much protected as one made between individual citizens.[25] A city warrant drawn on an appropriation is protected against repeal of the appropriation ordinance.[26] An act organizing a county board of education, with power to determine the course of study and enter into contracts for text books for a term of years, is not objectionable as authorizing an impairment of contracts of the state board with like powers as to the state.[27] There is no violation of the obligation of a contract by a change in the municipal charter requiring the presentation of claims to the city council for allowance as a condition to suit thereon.[28]

Corporate charters and franchises.—The power of a state reserved in its constitution to change general laws governing corporations is to be construed in connection with federal constitution against laws impairing the obligation of contracts, and rights honestly acquired by corporations and lawfully exercised cannot be arbitrarily destroyed by state legislature.[29]

Where the general incorporation law reserves such power, this right becomes part of the contract of every stockholder, and amendatory acts do not impair the obligation,[30] except as to charters already granted.[31] The legislature may not authorize a municipality to so bind it as not to exercise its retained powers of supervision over corporations.[32] But the charter or the constitution must reserve this power of alteration.[33] Where the validity of a corporation is questionable, there is no impairment by legislation authorizing the corporation to become a corporation de jure.[34]

Under this power of amendment the legislature may legislate as to rates charged by public service corporations.[35] An ordinance giving a street railroad the right to 20. Zane v. Hamilton County, 189 U. S. 370.

21. Hecht v. Wright (Colo.) 72 Pac. 48.

22. Laws 1898, c. 576—Board of Education of Union Free School Dist. No. 6 v. Board of Education of Union Free School Dist. No. 7, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 355.

23. Local Acts 1901, No. 315—Attorney General v. Lowrey (Mich.) 92 N. W. 289.

24. Vested rights if any in the fund are protected—People v. Coler, 173 N. Y. 103.

25. Shinn v. Cunningham (Iowa) 94 N. W. 941. Contract by county—Id.

26. Moores v. State (Neb.) 93 N. W. 733.

27. Rand, McNally & Co. v. Hartranft, 29 Wash. 591, 70 Pac. 77.

28. Oshkosh Waterworks Co. v. Oshkosh, 187 U. S. 437.

29. San Joaquin & K. R. Canal & Irr. Co. v. Stanislaus County, 113 Fed. 930.

30. C. H. Venner Co. v. United States Steel Corp., 116 Fed. 1012. An act fixing the rate of taxation on the gross receipts of the railroad company, will not violate the obligation of the charter under such a law, exempting from taxation—Northern Cent. Ry. Co. v. Maryland, 187 U. S. 258.

31. Making railroad insurer against fires communicated from engines—MacDonald v. New York, N. H. & H. R. R. Co., 23 R. I. 558.

32. City of Tampa v. Tampa Water Works Co. (Fla.) 34 So. 631.

33. Changing tax exemption—State v. Alabama Bible Soc. 134 Ala. 632.

34. Deitch v. Staub (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 309.

35. Water rates—City of Tampa v. Tampa Water Works Co. (Fla.) 34 So. 631. A water company cannot complain of an impairment of its contract rights by an ordinance reducing rates, where the company was incorporated under an act giving the company the right to charge such rates as might be agreed upon with consumers, as this proviso expressly recognized the power in the municipality to regulate—Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 189 U. S. 434. Gas—People's Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Chicago, 114 Fed. 384. The Canal Act of 1862, makes it the duty of county boards in fixing water rates to base same on the amount of capital actually invested. Act of 1885, allowed the board to estimate the value on the property actually used. Held, that a fixing of the rates on a basis other than the capital actually invested, when applied to corporations organized under Act 1862, would amount to an impairment of the obligation of their charter contracts—San Joaquin & K. R. Canal & Irr. Co. v. Stanislaus County, 113 Fed. 930.

charge a maximum fare gives the company a contract right to charge that rate, which cannot be reduced under pretense of regulation without the company's consent;[36] but such a contract rate may be lost by leasing to an operating company which is subject to regulation.[37]

A charter authorizing the issuance of common stock, preferred stock and bonds, and giving the corporation the right to increase the bond issue for necessary objects and to decrease its capital stock by purchasing shares for retirement, does not create a contract entitling the stockholder to insist that the relative proportions of the different classes remain the same.[38] An act relating to the rights of withdrawing shareholders of a building association, if retroactive, is, to the extent that it impairs the obligation of contract implied in a pre-existing membership in the association, unconstitutional.[39] An act making it a felony for building association officers to accept dues after knowledge of insolvency does not impair the contract to pay dues.[40]

Public service franchises are contracts within this clause.[41] Where a street railroad company, incorporated under general statutes, has not obtained the consent of the city authorities, it may not object that there is an impairment of obligation of contract by the construction by the city of a railroad on streets selected for its lines.[42] There is no impairment by acts requiring railroads to construct[43] and maintain grade crossings.[44] A street railway grant to use streets may not be arbitrarily impaired or rejected, though it is subject to conditions imposed by statute and to the proper exercise of the police power of the municipality.[45] It may be compelled to clean between its tracks,[46] or to pave them.[47]

Tax and assessment laws.—An act imposing a specific tax on certain business occupations, not to become operative until a certain time after its passage, does not

36. Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' St. Ry. Co., 184 U. S. 368, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 592.

37. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Chicago, 199 Ill. 484, 59 L. R. A. 631.

38. C. H. Venner Co. v. United States Steel Corp., 116 Fed. 1012.

39. Intiso v. Metropolitan Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 68 N. J. Law, 588.

40. Act May 17, 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 121)—State v. Missouri Guarantee Sav. & Bldg. Ass'n, 167 Mo. 489.

41. There is an impairment of a contract by an ordinance for the erection of electric or water works in competition with a company operating under a prior ordinance granting a franchise for a term of years (Southwest Missouri Light Co. v. City of Joplin, 113 Fed. 817; Potter County Water Co. v. Borough of Austin (Pa.) 55 Atl. 991; if the franchise be accepted and used—Capital City Light & Fuel Co. v. Tallahassee, 168 U. S. 401, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 1219; Underground R. of New York v. City of New York, 116 Fed. 952. An unexercised option to buy such works is not impaired by constructing new works—Newburyport Water Co. v. City of Newburyport, 113 Fed. 677. Where a telephone company uses a street under permission of the city under a grant and has established a plant, it may not be required thereafter to pay for the use of the street as an additional condition—Sunset Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. City of Medford, 115 Fed. 202. An electric franchise accepted by a corporation on which large sums of money had been expended in making improvements amounts to a contract which cannot be changed without the consent of the company and will prevent a demand for compensation for use of ground occupied by poles—Hot Springs Elec. Light Co. v. Hot Springs, 70 Ark. 300.

42. Underground R. of New York v. City of New York, 116 Fed. 952.

43. Code 1892, § 3555—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Copiah County (Miss.) 33 So. 502. Pub. Laws 1898, p. 110—Palmyra Tp. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 63 N. J. Eq. 799. An act allowing the making of contracts with railroads for the relief of city from obstruction of railroad crossings and grade, under a plan adopted or to be adopted by commissioners to be appointed, giving commissioners power to adopt a general plan and change the same as to any detail, but denying them a right to adopt a general plan extending beyond the one heretofore adopted, or from extending the general plan adopted by them, does not amount to an impairment of the obligation of the contract—Lehigh Valley Ry. Co. v. Adam, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 427.

44. Vt. St. §§ 3844-3846—Town of Clarendon v. Rutland R. Co. (Vt.) 52 Atl. 1057.

45. Town of Mason v. Railroad Co., 51 W. Va. 183; City of Springfield v. Springfield St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 41; City of Worcester v. Worcester Consol. St. Ry. Co., 182 Mass. 49.

46. Chicago v. Chicago Union Traction Co., 199 Ill. 259, 59 L. R. A. 666.

47. Asphalt instead of stone as prescribed by charter—Binninger v. City of New York, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 438.

impair the obligation of a contract.[48] The New York franchise tax act, authorizing valuation for general taxes of all special franchises by state boards appointed by the governor, does not impair the obligation of a contract, as it does not change any part of the corporate grants and exacts nothing from the owners that is not exacted from property owners of the state.[49]

Regulation of remedies.—Remedial rights may be abridged if a reasonable time be allowed to pursue remedies existing.[50] The remedy to enforce a contract is not a part of the contract so as to prevent control thereof by the legislature.[51] There is no impairment of the obligation of a contract by an act allowing a surety to set up any defense of which his principal might have availed himself,[52] nor by the provision of the bankruptcy act dissolving an attachment, where the attachment was secured long after the act took effect,[53] nor by an act relating to the enforcement of mortgages after notes secured are barred by limitation, and declaring that no suit shall be had to foreclose any mortgage previously executed to secure any such obligation after two years from the passage of the act.[54] A carrier's contract, limiting liability, is not impaired by a law requiring it to locate the connecting carrier to which loss is attributable.[55] Recording acts making period of lien depend upon the time of recording are valid.[56] A lien for labor may be made prior to a mortgage later in time but earlier recorded.[57] A statutory attorney's fee cannot be impressed on a contract by subsequent law.[58]

§ 14. Retroactive legislation; vested rights.[59]—Many state constitutions put the ban on all retrospective laws.[60] Otherwise the state may pass retrospective laws,[61] so long as other limitations of its power are not transgressed.[62] A citizen can have 48. Kehrer v. Stewart (Ga.) 44 S. E. 854. Exemption from taxes is a contract—Bancroft v. Wicomico County Com'rs, 121 Fed. 874; State v. Alabama Bible Soc., 134 Ala. 632. And see Northern Cent. Ry. Co. v. Maryland, 187 U. S. 258.

49. People v. State Board of Tax Com'rs, 174 N. Y. 417.

50. Act providing that ground rents should be presumed released after 21 years, is valid if postponed for reasonable time in taking effect—Wilson v. Iseminger, 185 U. S. 55, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 804. Laws impairing priorities are not merely remedial—Blouin v. Ledet, 109 La. 709.

51. Kendall v. Fader, 99 Ill. App. 104; Devalinger v. Maxwell (Del.) 54 Atl. 684. Where the obligations of a railroad corporation to the state have been fixed by statute, a later act is unconstitutional which attempts to increase these obligations but not where the effect is merely to provide a remedy for enforcement of liabilities created by the earlier statute—Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. State, 159 Ind. 438. An act raising the amount of exemption from forced execution, applies to the remedy and does not effect contractual relation of the parties contracted before the passage of the act, and hence does not impair the obligation of contracts—Folsom v. Asper, 25 Utah, 299, 71 Pac. 315. Objection untenable where urged against a repealing act reinstating parties in their former rights (Rev. St. 1879)—Knights Templars', etc., Indem. Co. v. Jarman, 187 U. S. 197. Rev. St. c. 77, § 30, p. 625 limiting life of a certificate of purchase upheld—Bradley v. Lightcap, 201 Ill. 511.

52. Flagg v. Locke, 74 Vt. 320.

53. Wood v. Carr, 24 Ky. L. R. 2144, 73 S. W. 762.

54. Rev. St. Mo. 1899, § 4277—Kreyling v. O'Reilly, 97 Mo. App. 384.

55. Civ. Code, Ga. §§ 2317, 2318—Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Murphey, 116 Ga. 863.

56. Knights of Maccabees v. Nitsch (Neb.) 95 N. W. 626.

57. Sutton v. Consolidated Apex Min. Co., 15 S. D. 410.

58. Kendall v. Fader, 99 Ill. App. 104.

59. The forthcoming article on Statutes should be consulted as to the rules for interpreting statutes with respect to their operation.

60. An Act making findings, maps and surveys of a canal commission evidence held invalid—State v. Cincinnati Tin & Japan Co., 66 Ohio St. 182. An act open to the construction that it will allow the court to annul or vary final judgments entered before its passage, is objectionable as retrospective legislation within the constitutional inhibition. Laws N. Y. 1900, c. 742, allow a court on application of either party to an action of divorce at any time after final judgment whether heretofore or hereafter rendered to annul, vary or modify a direction in the judgment requiring defendant to provide for the support of plaintiff and for the education and maintenance of the children of the parties—Livingston v. Livingston, 173 N. Y. 377.

61. Kiskaddon v. Dodds, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 351; League v. Texas, 184 U. S. 156, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 478.

62. In Montana the only limitation as to retrospective legislation, is that prohibiting ex post facto laws and laws impairing the obligation of contracts—Bullard v. Smith (Mont.) 72 Pac. 761.

no vested right in general law which can preclude its amendment or repeal, and there is no implied promise on the part of the state to protect its citizens from incidental injury occasioned by changes in law.[63] There is no disturbance of vested rights by an act amounting only to a declaration of rights of the state under a grant to a city.[64] A public corporation cannot acquire vested contract rights as to the time of maturity of bonds held by it against another public corporation.[65] There is no impairment of a vested right by a law regulating the practice of dentistry and requiring a license as a condition to practice, though applied to one engaged in the practice before the enactment of the law.[66]

Offices may be abolished or incumbency changed,[67] but accrued salaries may not be.[68]

Interests in realty.—Homestead laws are prospective in their operation and do not affect vested rights.[69] The right of a husband in his wife's realty is a vested right.[70]

Taxes and public rights.—A taxpayer has no vested rights in an existing mode of collecting taxes.[71] The New York Transfer Tax Act of 1899 is unconstitutional, as diminishing value of vested assets wherein it taxes remainders and reversions which had vested before 1885, on their coming into actual possession or enjoyment.[72] An act retrospectively making delinquents pay interest from the time of the delinquency is not objectionable to the federal constitution.[73] A law is retrospective which imposes an additional liability for accrued taxes.[74]

Laws affecting corporations.—A statutory right given in the charter of a corporation is not vested until taken possession of.[75] By reorganizing, a corporation becomes subject to existing laws which were junior to its original existence.[76] Permission given a foreign corporation to do business on its complying with the con-

63. Stanford v. Coram (Mont.) 72 Pac. 655. An act made marriages valid between parties against one of whom an impediment existed of which such person was ignorant from the time of the removal of the impediment. A later act made this statute applicable to impediments removed before its passage. Held, that where the marriage was performed before the passage of the act and the impediment was removed after its passage, the statute was not retrospective as no vested rights had attached (St. 1895, c. 4960, amended by act of 1896)—Lufkin v. Lufkin, 182 Mass. 476.

64. Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile, 187 U. S. 479.

65. Held in an action construing the laws 1887, c. 77, § 1, providing that all bonds issued by municipalities shall be redeemable at pleasure of municipal officers at any time after ten years—Little River Tp. v. Board of Com'rs. 65 Kan. 9, 68 Pac. 1105.

66. State v. Chapman (N. J. Law) 55 Atl. 94.

67. There is no vested right in an office created by the legislature, such as will prevent an act abolishing the office—Dallis v. Griffin (Ga.) 43 S. E. 758. An act appointing members to succeed an existing board does not deprive incumbents of vested rights—Sinclair v. Young (Va.) 40 S. E. 907. The power of the legislature to abolish the office of chief of police, does not affect the right of such officer to a pension and he may thereafter assert any vested rights which he may have in the pension in a proper proceeding therefor—People v. Coler, 173 N. Y. 103.

68. Term had expired—Young v. Rochester, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 81.

69. Brown v. Hughes (Minn.) 94 N. W. 438; Bell v. Whitehead, 115 Ga. 589. A husband under laws giving him the right to alienate the homestead without his wife's consent under certain conditions, acquires a vested right of which he may not be deprived by subsequent legislation and the fact that the husband had not exercised his right will not authorize an invasion of the right by the legislature—Gladney v. Sydnor, 172 Mo. 318.

70. Rev. St. 1899, § 4340, enabled her to sue for possession—Vanata v. Johnson, 170 Mo. 269.

71. League v. Texas, 184 U. S. 156, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 478.

72. In re Pell's Estate, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L. R. A. 540.

73. League v. Texas, 184 U. S. 156, 46 U. S. Lawy. Ed. 478.

74. An Act making railroads personally liable for special assessments for which they were not so liable originally (Local Acts. Mich. 1895, Act No. 443)—Grand Rapids v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 89 N. W. 932.

75. San Joaquin & K. R. Canal & Irr. Co. v. Stanislaus County, 113 Fed. 930.

76. The New York Mileage Book Act applied to a corporation thereafter reorganized, which succeeds a previous corporation, is constitutional notwithstanding the previous corporation had a right to charge a specified fare—Minor v. Erie R. Co., 171 N. Y. 566.

ditions does not become vested against other conditions in later laws.[77] A street railway company acquires no vested rights in a street preventing an alteration of the grade of such street, so as to justify disobedience of an order requiring tracks to be lowered to conform to the grade.[78] A preferred stockholder has no vested right to insist that the proportion of stock and bonds shall remain unchanged and thus prevent retirement of stock for bonds.[79]

Regulation of procedure.—No one can gain a vested right to any remedy which would preclude legislation taking away the right thus created.[80] This includes rules of evidence,[81] but by the operation of remedies or failure to avail of them, rights may become fixed; hence an act must not deprive one of rights acquired under a judgment obtained before its passage,[82] nor extend time for filing a bill of exceptions after it became too late to do so.[83] Liens and securities cannot be destroyed by repeal of a law giving them.[84] Reorganization not being essential to operation of a railroad by a purchaser at foreclosure, its limitation does not impair vested rights of the bondholders.[85] Curative acts may validate mere irregularities.[86]

Statutes of limitation may be amended if time be given to enforce existing causes of action.[87] An act removing the bar of limitation has been upheld where the original time was unnecessarily short.[88]

§ 15. Deprivation without due process of law or contrary to law of the land.—Due process of law requires notice and the right to be heard.[89] It need not take the form of a judicial determination by a court.[90] A law prescribing statutory arbitration and sale to enforce its award is sufficient;[91] otherwise where sale is had without judicial proceedings.[92] Proceedings of societies for the discipline of members may be due process, though its effect may be to forfeit property rights.[93]

Actual notice may supply the failure of a statute to provide for notice.[94]

Use and enjoyment of property.—There must be a valid subject of property rights,[95] and not a mere privilege.[96] The right must have matured to receive pro-

77. Adams Exp. Co. v. State (Ind.) 67 N. E. 1033.

78. Snouffer v. Cedar Rapids & M. City Ry. Co. (Iowa) 92 N. W. 79.

79. Act March 28, 1902—Berger v. United States Steel Corp., 63 N. J. Eq. 809.

80. Bullard v. Smith (Mont.) 72 Pac. 761. Gen. Laws Tex. 1901, p. 122, c. 54, authorizes dismissal of a cause from the docket of the trial court for reversal when the mandate is not taken out, and that in any cause which has been reversed or remanded the mandate shall be taken out within twelve months after the passage of the act. Before the act took effect judgment against plaintiff was on his appeal reversed and remanded with costs and a year after the act took effect plaintiff paid the costs and procured a remand whereupon the action was dismissed. Held that the statute deprived him of no vested right—Watson v. Boswell (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 985. There is no constitutional obstacle to the enactment of a law allowing negotiable instruments to contain the provision for a reasonable attorney's fee, the act affecting remedy only—Bullard v. Smith (Mont.) 72 Pac. 761.

81. A statute making church and parish records of birth prima facie evidence in proceedings to determine the question of heirship does not impair vested rights (Rev. St. 1898, § 4160)—Sandberg v. State, 113 Wis. 578.

82. Village of New Holland v. Holland, 99 Ill. App. 251. Alimony decree—Goodsell v. Goodsell, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 65.

83. Johnson v. Gebhauer, 159 Ind. 271.

84. Preferred lien on the road bed of a railroad—State Trust Co. v. Kansas City, P. & G. R. Co., 115 Fed. 367.

85. Commissioner of Railroads v. Grand Rapids & I. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 89 N. W. 967.

86. Private sales of decedent's real property for payment of debts—Kiskaddon v. Dodds, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 351.

87. On foreclosure of mortgages after notes barred—Rev. St. Mo. 1899, § 4277—Kreyling v. O'Reilly, 97 Mo. App. 384.

88. Dunbar v. Boston & P. R. Corp., 181 Mass. 383.

89. Stone v. Little Yellow Drainage Dist. (Wis.) 95 N. W. 405. Notice not prescribed in proceeding to construct ditch at expense of delinquent railroad (Rev. St. §§ 3343-3346) —Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Keith, 67 Ohio St. 279.

90. Action of medical board—Meffert v. State Board of Medical Registration & Examination (Kan.) 72 Pac. 247.

91. To fix damage by live stock—Randall v. Gross (Neb.) 93 N. W. 223.

92. Sale by pound-master (Laws of Ariz. 1893, p. 32)—Greer v. Downey (Ariz.) 71 Pac. 900.

93. Moore v. National Council of Knights & Ladies of Security, 65 Kan. 452, 70 Pac. 352.

94. Detroit, Ft. W. & B. I. Ry. v. Osborn, 189 U. S. 383.

95. Destruction of gambling devices under Sand. & H. Dig. § 1618 valid—Garland Novelty Co. v. State (Ark.) 71 S. W. 257.

tection,[97] a mere proceeding on a claim being insufficient.[98] An alimony decree is property,[99] and there is a deprivation by the law authorizing variance or modification of a decree which had already become absolute.[1] An incumbent public servant's expectation of a pension is not such a property right.[2] The regular action of a majority does not impair any property rights of dissenting minority stockholders.[3] Laws forbidding the collection of tolls, unless a turnpike road is kept up, do not take, but merely limit, a right.[4] Laws compelling the free transportation of policemen,[5] allowing killing of animals found to be unfit for use,[6] or giving materialmen and laborers a right to enforce payment in money from the owner, irrespective of the contract price,[7] must satisfy this clause. Laws requiring forfeiture of unclaimed witness fees to the school fund are held to simply impose the duty of claiming fees promptly.[8] Laws against fraud or adulteration in commodities,[9] or fraudulent conveyances, are upheld.[10] Railroad companies are not deprived of their property by laws for the opening of highways across their rights of way,[11] or compelling them to keep their rights of way clear.[12] Laws restricting the height of buildings to be erected on certain streets of a city and fixing liability on the municipality are valid, though the latter was not heard.[13] A city cannot, in the exercise of its governmental functions, refuse to perform a contract made in a quasi private or business capacity.[14] An act allowing children living without the suburbs of a city to attend its schools free of tuition is not objectionable as depriving the school organization of property without due process of the law.[15]

Regulations of business and occupations.—Labor is property in this sense.[16] The right to contract respecting labor is also protected,[17] and the right to choose an

96. Liquor tax certificate in New York under present law is property—In re Cullinan, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 567.

97. Franchise for street railroad lacked confirmation by city—Underground Ry. of New York v. City of New York, 116 Fed. 952. Contestant of an entry of government lands has no property interest therein to be affected, by an act confirming the title of the original entryman enacted during the pendency of the contest—Emblen v. Lincoln Land Co., 184 U. S. 660, 46 Law. Ed. 736.

98. Attaching creditors with knowledge of prior mortgage, acquire no property rights —McFaddin v. Evans-Snider-Buel Co., 185 U. S. 505, 46 Law. Ed. 1012.

99. Gundry v. Gundry, 11 Okl. 423, 68 Pac. 509; Livingston v. Livingston, 173 N. Y. 377.

1. Livingston v. Livingston, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 261.

2. Office was abolished—People v. Coler, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 584.

3. Dickinson v. Consolidated Traction Co., 114 Fed. 232. To same affect C. H. Venner Co. v. United States Steel Corp., 116 Fed. 1012.

4. Back River Neck Turnpike Co. v. Homberg, 96 Md. 430.

5. Laws 1895, c. 417—Wilson v. United Traction Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 233.

6. Carter v. Colby, 71 N. H. 230.

7. Stimson Mill Co. v. Braun, 136 Cal. 122, 68 Pac. 481, 57 L. R. A. 726.

8. Douglas County v. Moores (Neb.) 92 N. W. 199.

9. "Imitation" butter, and "colored" oleomargarine (Public Acts 1901, No. 22)—People v. Rotter (Mich.) 91 N. W. 167.

10. Laws making sales of merchandise stocks in bulk otherwise than in the ordinary course of trade, fraudulent unless the parties make an inventory and the purchaser makes inquiry as to creditors—Neas v. Borches (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 50. The Washington act requires a purchaser to require a verified list of creditors and making the sale without it fraudulent, unless the purchaser applies the purchase money to the payment of bona fide debts—McDaniels v. J. J. Connelly Shoe Co., 30 Wash. 549, 71 Pac. 37.

11. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. State, 159 Ind. 510. Code 1892, § 3555—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Copiah County (Miss.) 33 So. 502. Act authorizing the construction by a town or person entitled at the company's expense held valid (Vt. St. §§ 3844. 3846)—Town of Clarendon v. Rutland R. Co., 75 Vt. 6.

12. McFarland v. Mississippi River & B. T. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 152.

13. State has power to make city liable—Williams v. Parker, 188 U. S. 491.

14. Riverside & A. Ry. Co. v. City of Riverside, 118 Fed. 736.

15. Edmondson v. Board of Education, 108 Tenn. 557.

16. Mathews v. People, 202 Ill. 389; Street v. Varney Electrical Supply Co. (Ind.) 66 N. E. 895.

17. Burns' Rev. St. 1901, §§ 7055a, 7055b fixing a minimum wage law on public works held invalid—Street v. Varney Electrical Supply Co. (Ind.) 66 N. E. 895. Weekly payment law held invalid (Republic Iron & Steel Co. v. State [Ind.] 66 N. E. 1005); but not laws declaring agreements relieving an employer from the operation of the weekly payment law—International Text Book Co. v. Weissinger (Ind.) 65 N. E. 521. Act creating a free employment bureau which was not to give names to employers whose men occupation is a liberty subject to the police power.[18] There is a deprivation by laws and ordinances making rates chargeable by public corporations unreasonably low.[19] Laws against meter rents by gas companies are valid.[20] Inspection,[21] quarantine,[22] medical registration laws,[23] and license laws,[24] are valid; but the contrary was held of a law requiring a fee for sending a commodity out of the state.[25] Foreign corporations may be denied resort to courts for noncompliance with the laws.[26]

Sunday laws do not operate to deprive persons of life, liberty or property, without due process.[27]

Statutes creating a liability may be valid,[28] unless unreasonable or unconscionable.[29] Requiring a carrier to locate a connecting carrier, which is responsible for loss, does not take its property unduly.[30]

Eminent domain proceedings.[31]—A taking without giving compensation is a taking of property without due process of law.[32] Conferring on a telegraph company the right to condemn a way on a railroad right of way may be upheld.[33] A special tribunal to pass on necessity of the taking is not required.[34]

Local improvements.—Due process is satisfied by allowing assessment of lands benefited by a public improvement[35] on notice, giving the property owner an opportunity to be heard on the question of the amount apportioned to his property.[36] It were striking is void—Mathews v. People, 202 Ill. 389.

18. Acts limiting hours of employment of workingmen sustained—People v. Lochner, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 120; State v. Buchanan, 29 Wash. 602, 70 Pac. 52, 59 L. R. A. 342.

Void acts: forbidding pensioners to hold office—People v. Woodbury, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 189. Act regulating the appointment of branch pilots (Rev. St. 1895, art. 3796)—Olsen v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 320. Laws making it a misdemeanor to offer for sale without written authority—Grossman v. Caminez, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 15.

19. Water rates—Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 117 Iowa, 250. Carriers—Wallace v. Arkansas Cent. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 422. Water company subject to reasonable regulation of rates—Tampa v. Tampa Water Works Co. (Fla.) 34 So. 631. A fixing of rates for carrying hard coal held not void—Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 Law. Ed. 1151.

20. Buffalo v. Buffalo Gas Co., 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 505.

21. Elevators—New Orleans v. Kee, 107 La. 762. Laundries—Id.

22. Compagnie Francaise De Navigation A Vapeur v. Louisiana State Board of Health, 186 U. S. 380, 46 Law. Ed. 1209.

23. Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505. The due process provision is not violated by a failure of the medical registration act to provide in terms for review of proceedings on the question whether the applicant had been legally registered under a prior statute—Id.

24. Requiring sellers of meats in public markets to take license—Buffalo v. Hill, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 402.

25. Exacting a license and requiring payment of a certain amount a ton for ice taken from lakes owned by the state for shipment without the state—Rossmiller v. State, 114 Wis. 169.

26. Filing of certificates—Keystone Driller Co. v. Superior Ct., 138 Cal. 738, 72 Pac. 398.

27. Barbers—State v. Sopher, 25 Utah, 318, 71 Pac. 482, 60 L. R. A. 468. (Sess. Laws 1901, p. 17)—Ex parte Northrup, 41 Or. 489, 69 Pac. 445. Closing stores except drug stores and livery stables and hotels—State v. Nichols, 28 Wash. 628, 69 Pac. 372.

28. Penalty for failure to pay an insurance loss within a specified time—New York Life Ins. Co. v. English (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 440. Making a married woman's property liable for family necessaries, after execution against husband (Comp. St. c. 53, § 1)—Noreen v. Hansen (Neb.) 90 N. W. 937. Acts making directors of corporations liable—Winchester v. Howard, 136 Cal. 432, 64 Pac. 692, 69 Pac. 77. Making a railroad company liable for injuries to a passenger, unless the injury arise from the criminal negligence of the injured party or by his violation of the carrier's rules brought to his notice—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hambel (Neb.) 89 N. W. 643. Requiring street railways to pay one-half the expense of safety appliances at grade crossings of railroad which was built after street railway (Pub. Act Mich. 1893, No. 171, § 15)—Detroit, Ft. W. & B. I. Ry. v. Osborn, 189 U. S. 383.

29. Making purchaser liable to lien claimant for more than value of property (Rev. St. 1898, § 3336))—Rogers-Ruger Co. v. Murray, 115 Wis. 267, 59 L. R. A. 737.

30. Civ. Code, §§ 2317, 2318—Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Murphey, 116 Ga. 863.

31. See the following section as to the clause against taking without compensation.

32. Telegraph right of way—Phillips v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 130 N. C. 513.

33. Savannah, F. & W. Ry. Co. v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 115 Ga. 554; South Carolina & G. R. Co. v. American Telephone & Telegraph Co., 65 S. C. 459.

34. Savannah, F. & W. Ry. Co. v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 115 Ga. 554.

35. Voigt v. Detroit City, 184 U. S. 115, 46 Law. Ed. 459.

36. Voigt v. Detroit City, 184 U. S. 115, 46 Law. Ed. 459; Kansas City v. Mastin, 169 Mo. 80. Irrigation laws are sufficient which is not necessary to give opportunity also to be heard against issuance of bonds.[37] The exaction of an excessive assessment[38] or the requirement of written objections which shall be final[39] are offensive to this clause. The front foot rule of assessment does not deny due process.[40]

Drainage acts satisfy the requirement of due process, where the property owner is given a day in court before his property is taken into the district,[41] or the assessment for benefits become final,[42] nor is there a denial of due process by an act allowing a deficiency assessment without notice, where landowner had notice of the original assessment.[43] They are sufficient where omission as to procedure for confirmation is provided under another provision of the code.[44] Such laws do not deprive landowners of property without due process by the fact that they authorize the issuance of interest-bearing bonds to defray costs of the improvement and divide the same into as many parts as the bonds have years to run.[45]

Taxation.—Proceedings to levy and assess taxes do not require a notice and hearing like litigated proceedings.[46] Due process in sales of land for unpaid taxes does not require that the same should be matter of record.[47] In the note are various acts which have been upheld as affording due process in proceedings to sell for taxes.[48] It is lacking where foreign property is assessed.[49] provide the means by which benefits received may be adjudicated—Pioneer Irr. Dist. v. Bradbury (Idaho) 68 Pac. 295. Objection of want of notice can only be made by parties whose property has been taken —Goodrich v. Detroit, 184 U. S. 432, 46 Law. Ed. 627.

37. German Sav. & Loan Soc. v. Ramish, 138 Cal. 120, 69 Pac. 89, 70 Pac. 1067.

38. Klein v. Nugent Gravel Co. (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 486.

39. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. Ridge, 169 Mo. 376.

40. Franklin v. Hancock, 204 Pa. 110; Schaefer v. Werling, 188 U. S. 516. There is a deprivation without due process by an act empowering a city to collect sums assessed against lots abutting on streets through which water pipes pass, and which makes no provision for fixing the amount of the assessment either as to cost or benefits to property owners, or for just apportionment of the cost among the interested land owners, or for notice to them giving them an opportunity to be heard on the question of the reasonableness or justness of the assessment—City Council of Augusta v. King, 115 Ga. 454.

41. Rev. St. 1899, § 8251—Mound City Land & Stock Co. v. Miller, 170 Mo. 240, 60 L. R. A. 190. There is due process where, before the rendition of a decree creating a drainage district, property owners all receive notice of the proceeding and have a trial of the question whether a public purpose would be subserved by the drainage and whether the property owner's land would be benefited thereby, and whether the benefits to the district in its entirety would exceed the cost and the proportion of cost which ought to fall on the landowner's property considered relatively to all other lands in the district, and an opportunity is given for appeal to the highest courts of the state—Stone v. Little Yellow Drainage Dist. (Wis.) 95 N. W. 405. A drainage law does not authorize taking without due process of law, by failure to provide for giving of notice of the assessment, where it provides for notice on the hearing determining the boundaries of the district—Oliver v. Monona County, 117 Iowa. 43.

42. Erickson v. Cass County, 11 N. D. 494.

43. Stone v. Little Yellow Drainage Dist. (Wis.) 95 N. W. 405.

44. State v. Henry, 28 Wash. 38, 68 Pac. 368.

45. Rev. Codes, § 1474—Erickson v. Cass County, 11 N. D. 494.

46. The due process provision of the federal constitution does not apply to tax proceeding cases—German Sav. & Loan Soc. v. Ramish, 138 Cal. 120, 69 Pac. 89, 70 Pac. 1067. Law requiring the assessment to the trustee, of personal property held in trust, and requiring the assessors to give public notice to taxpayers to return personal property lists, and on failure to make such return, giving the assessor power to estimate the value—Glidden v. Harrington, 189 U. S. 255. Special franchise act authorizing the assessment or valuation for general taxes of all special franchises by a state board of tax commissioners appointed by the governor—People v. State Board of Tax Com'rs, 174 N. Y. 417. Law making the valuation of corporate stock by a tax commissioner final, unless appealed from within a given time but failing to provide for the giving of notice to the owner, does not deprive the corporation of property without due process as the corporation represents the stockholders and has a right to appeal, if the valuation is unsatisfactory—Corry v. City Council of Baltimore, 96 Md. 310.

47. Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51.

48. Provision against setting aside sales of property for taxes except in case of double assessments or previous payment of taxes, unless the proceeding is commenced within a limited time (Const. La. art. 233)—Ashley Co. v. Bradford, 109 La. 641. Act authorizing foreclosure of tax liens by proceedings in rem to which the land alone is a party, the owner being unknown, and providing that the sale shall cut off pre-existing rights or liens—Leigh v. Green (Neb.) 90 N. W. 255. A claimant of land sold for non-

Civil remedies and proceedings.—There is a deprivation by service on agents of nonresidents in actions in personam,[50] but debts may be attached against a nonresident where the garnishee debtor resides,[51] and service by publication on a nonresident defendant is sufficient in a suit to quiet title to personal property situated within the state.[52] Notice to insane persons cannot be dispensed with.[53] Short notice is sufficient if a right to open the decree is reserved.[54]

Statutes of limitation are not open to the objection that they deprive the owner of his property without due process of law.[55]

Amendments may be allowed by consent of counsel,[56] in proceedings changed during pendency of an action to make them conform to an amended statute.[57]

The clause may be violated by laws affixing conclusiveness to certain documents.[58] It is not permissible to make a license certificate revocable summarily unless the holder shall, in a revocation proceeding, deny all violations of the liquor law under oath.[59]

An act authorizing contribution, where one of two judgment debtors pays more than his share may be upheld though it does not provide for an adjudication of relative equities.[60] Attorney's fees may be allowed in an action for reimbursement for building fences required by law.[61]

The omission to provide in the bankruptcy act for personal service on creditors of notice of application for discharge in voluntary proceedings is not objectionable;[62] nor is the failure to provide for notice of the filing of petition in voluntary proceedings, as the act provides for ten days' notice of the first meeting of creditors and of each of the later steps of the administration, and for revocation of a discharge where procured by fraud.[63]

Due process is preserved in contempt proceedings where accused appears and trial is had.[64] The clause is violated by orders denying defenses and evidence for contempt of party.[65] An order to show cause cannot be served on attorney.[66] Laws payment of taxes is not deprived of his property without due process by judicial proceedings to collect the delinquent taxes, under a statute subsequently enacted, though the expenses attending the proceeding are chargeable as costs contrary to the earlier statute—League v. Texas, 184 U. S. 156, 46 Law. Ed. 478. Washington irrigation laws making irrigation bonds a lien, and providing that lands may be taxed therefor and sold for non-payment, and authorizing the special proceeding to pass upon the validity of the bonds on publication of notice of the hearing of the petition, does not amount to taking of property without due process because authorizing taxation and sale without personal notice—Kinkade v. Witherop, 29 Wash. 10, 69 Pac. 399.

49. Assessment of an interstate bridge including franchises derived from a sister state —Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385.

50. Moredock v. Kirby, 118 Fed. 180. Laws Minn. 1901, c. 278—Cabanne v. Graf, 87 Minn. 510; Kemper-Thomas Paper Co. v. Shyer, 108 Tenn. 444.

51. Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 46 Law. Ed. 573.

52. People's Nat. Bank v. Cleveland (Ga.) 44 S. E. 20.

53. Hunt v. Searcy, 167 Mo. 158.

54. Ten days notice of probate is enough where a party interested is given a year in which to attack it—In re Davis' Estate, 136 Cal. 590, 69 Pac. 412.

55. Linton v. Heye (Neb.) 95 N. W. 1040; St. Mary's Power Co. v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co. (Mich.) 95 N. W. 554. An act making probate in common form conclusive after seven years except in case of minors who are given four years after reaching majority valid—Sutton v. Hancock (Ga.) 45 S. E. 504.

56. Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 46 Law. Ed. 573.

57. O'Brien v. Flint, 74 Conn. 502.

58. Specification of weights in bills of lading (Laws 1893, c. 100)—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Simonson, 64 Kan. 802, 68 Pac. 653, 57 L. R. A. 765. Surveys and findings of canal commissioners evidence of ownership of state or canal lands—State v. Cincinnati Tin & Japan Co., 66 Ohio St. 182. Comp. Laws, § 10203, prescribing what shall be a prima facie case in creditors' suits, merely creates a rule of evidence and is not a taking of property without due process of law—Crane v. Waldron (Mich.) 94 N. W. 593.

59. In re Cullinan, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 567.

60. Code Civ. Proc. § 480—City of Ft. Scott v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. (Kan.) 72 Pac. 238.

61. Terre Haute & L. Ry. Co. v. Salmon (Ind.) 67 N. E. 918.

62, 63. Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 46 Law. Ed. 1113.

64. State v. Shepherd (Mo.) 76 S. W. 79.

65. Harley v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co., 27 Mont. 388, 71 Pac. 407; Sibley v. Sibley, 76 App. Div. 132, 12 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 135.

allowing a probate judge to let a contract for opening a ditch on failure of a railroad company to do the work, after notice by the landowner, amount to the taking of private property for private purposes without due course of law.[67]

Criminal offenses and procedure.—Penal laws which have been held valid are shown below.[68]

A commitment by an inferior court on evidence of probable guilt is not a deprivation of liberty without due process,[69] and a like construction applies to laws allowing a trial by a jury of five.[70] That a juror on the trial of one convicted of murder had himself been found guilty of a felony, though ground for a challenge is not a denial of due process.[71] The compulsory physical examination of one accused of a crime, to determine whether he is affected with a disease as testified to, violates the provision.[72] Representation of a prosecutor by other counsel on the trial with court's consent does not amount to a denial of due process.[73] There is no infringement of the due process clause by the refusal of the state court on motion for a new trial to review the question whether the officers in charge of the jury on a trial for felony have taken the statutory oath.[74]

The good faith of prosecuting witnesses cannot be determined in the trial of defendant for the purpose of fixing costs, unless there is an appeal given.[75]

The indeterminate sentence law is not open to the objection by the fact that it in a degree confers judicial powers on nonjudicial officers and invests them with some of the pardoning power belonging to the executive.[76]

§ 16. Compensation for taking of property.—The power of eminent domain may be delegated to municipalities[77] and private corporations.[78] The constitutional provision does not prevent a railroad from acquiring an easement in right of way by adverse possession.[79] The use must be public.[80] Particular laws are passed on by the cases shown below.[81]

Liability to make just compensation is not prevented by the fact that the land was taken by the United States in exercise of the power to improve navigation.[82]

66. Alimony proceeding—Goldie v. Goldie, 77 App. Div. 12, 12 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 175.

67. Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Keith, 67 Ohio St. 279, 60 L. R. A. 525.

68. An act making it a felony for building and loan associations to accept dues after knowledge of insolvency does not destroy the rights of others to insist that borrowers shall pay their loans—State v. Missouri Guarantee Sav. & Bldg. Ass'n, 167 Mo. 489. Act establishing a park and prohibiting hunting therein—Commonwealth v. Hazen, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 487. Nor by laws making it an offense to sell intoxicating liquor in a prohibition district (Rev. St. 1895, tit. 69, arts. 3384, 3399; Pen. Code, art. 402)—Rippey v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 15.

69. Parks v. Nelms, 115 Ga. 242.

70. Welborne v. Donaldson, 115 Ga. 563.

71. Queenan v. Territory, 11 Okl. 261, 71 Pac. 218.

72. State v. Height, 117 Iowa, 650, 59 L. R. A. 437.

73. State v. Conly, 130 N. C. 683.

74. Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71.

75. Rickley v. State (Neb.) 91 N. W. 867.

76. Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71.

77. State v. District Ct., 87 Minn. 146.

78. Street railway companies—Adee v. Nassau Elec. R. Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 404. Under a constitution allowing the exercise of eminent domain only by domestic corporation, a foreign corporation complying with laws requiring the filing of copies of articles of incorporation, becomes a domestic corporation notwithstanding a provision in this act that process shall be served on such corporations in the same manner as process is served on agents of domestic corporations—Russell v. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. (Ark.) 75 S. W. 725.

79. Boyce v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 168 Mo. 583.

80. Opening a private ditch is a private purpose—Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Keith, 67 Ohio St. 279, 60 L. R. A. 525.

81. Void acts: Act requiring residents of a portion of a county exempt from the general stock law, to build a fence along lines therein described—Goodale v. Sowell, 62 S. C. 516. Act pensioning school teachers—Hibbard v. State, 65 Ohio St. 574. Law requiring license to cut ice for shipment without the state and requiring a payment to the state for each ton so shipped—Rossmiller v. State, 114 Wis. 169.

Valid acts: Acts compelling the extension of street railway lines, the legislature having power to amend charters—Metropolitan R. Co. v. Macfarland, 20 App. D. C. 421. Act allowing the destruction of glandered animals is not a taking—Livingston v. Ellis County (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 723. Requiring license from transients—Levy v. State (Ind.) 68 N. E. 172.

82. United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445.

A city cannot escape liability for damages caused to property by the destruction of a public improvement, because it was built by the city in the exercise of its police power,[83] and this rule extends to a taking of a street by a railroad company in obedience to a statute enacted within the police power of the state.[84]

The provision making payment a condition to possession is violated by an act authorizing possession by a railroad company, pending condemnation on a court order.[85] The necessity of payment before taking applies to acquisition of right of way over the track of another railroad company.[86] Payment into court suffices.[87] This requirement as a rule has no application to appropriation for a purely public purpose.[88]

§ 17. Right to justice and guaranty of remedies.—The making of conditions precedent to suit does not deny a remedy[89] if reasonable,[90] nor do laws regulating costs.[91] The act allowing the court to refuse continuance, though facts expected to be proved be admitted, is constitutional.[92] A jury law allowing a jury commissioner to select a jury in cities of a specified population is not opposed to principles of justice, in that it gives an opportunity to a dishonest commissioner to "fix" the jury.[93]

The right to be heard in courts of last resort is satisfied where the right may be had by error or otherwise, though no remedy by appeal is provided.[94] Under a grant of power to regulate and limit appellate procedure, the right of review cannot be destroyed.[95] An act allowing removal of causes in cases in which it appears that plaintiff is entitled to some relief, but not in the court in which it is brought, is not unconstitutional, because no right of appeal is secured from the order of removal.[96]

§ 18. Jury trials preserved.—The right of trial by jury is that which existed at common law,[97] or prior to the adoption of the constitution.[98] It is not a matter of right in an equity case,[99] but where a cause is divested of its purely equitable features, a party is then entitled to a trial by jury, unless he waives the privilege.[1] Not-

83. Chicago v. LeMoyne (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 662.

84. McKeon v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 75 Conn. 343.

85. Code Civ. Proc. § 1254—Steinhart v. Superior Ct., 137 Cal. 575, 70 Pac. 629, 59 L. R. A. 404.

86. Civ. Code, Ga. 2167—Atlantic & B. R. Co. v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 116 Ga. 412.

87. Code, Va. 1079—Southern Ry. Co. v. Gregg (Va.) 43 S. E. 570.

88. For school-site—Buckwalter v. School Dist. No. 42, 65 Kan. 603, 70 Pac. 605.

89. Law requiring the deposit of a jury fee—Eckrich v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 755. Postponing actions for malicious prosecutions which are still pending—Bonney v. King, 201 Ill. 47.

90. And acts requiring presentation of claims against municipalities where the injured person was unable to present his claim within the time (Laws 1894, c. 623)—Williams v. Village of Port Chester, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 505.

91. Grinage v. Times-Democratic Pub. Co., 107 La. 121.

92. Howard v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 950, 70 S. W. 295.

93. Eckrich v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 755.

94. Sothman v. State (Neb.) 92 N. W. 303. Gen. Laws 1901, c. 258—State v. Board of County Com'rs, 87 Minn. 325, 60 L. R. A. 161.

95. Finlen v. Heinze, 27 Mont. 107, 69 Pac. 829, 70 Pac. 517.

96. Acts Maryland, 1896, c. 229—Insurance Co. of North America v. Schall, 96 Md. 225.

97. Eckrich v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 755; Mound City Land & Stock Co. v. Miller, 170 Mo. 240, 60 L. R. A. 190; State v. Hamey, 168 Mo. 167, 57 L. R. A. 846. Not allowed in summary proceedings—Mahoney v. People, 98 Ill. App. 241; McLeod v. Lloyd (Or.) 71 Pac. 795.

98. State v. Shepherd (Mo.) 76 S. W. 79; Terry v. State, 24 Ohio Circ. R. 111; Hathorne v. Panama Park Co. (Fla.) 32 So. 812. Where at the time of the adoption of a constitution guaranteeing the right to a jury trial, there is no statutory provision for a trial by jury in certain species of actions, a later re-enactment of such statutes does not carry with it the right to a jury trial—Montana Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 27 Mont. 288, 70 Pac. 1114.

99. Maggs v. Morgan, 30 Wash. 604, 71 Pac. 188; Porter v. International Bridge Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 358; Jones v. Wood, 24 Ky. L. R. 840, 70 S. W. 45; Culp v. Mulvane (Kan.) 71 Pac. 273. Provision for the enforcement of a mechanic's lien by bill in equity—Hathorne v. Panama Park Co. (Fla.) 32 So. 812. Action to quiet title to mining property is an equitable action—Montana Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 27 Mont. 536, 71 Pac. 1005.

1. McNulty v. Mount Morris Elec. Light Co., 172 N. Y. 410; Kentucky Land & Immi-

withstanding the constitutional guaranty, the court may, in a case where authorized by statute, refer the case generally or specially.[2] Where an action at law is referred in part to state an account, either party is entitled to a jury trial as to the remaining issues joined.[3] The right is not denied by rule authorizing entry of judgment for plaintiff for want of an affidavit of defense.[4] Unanimity is a part of the system until constitutionally changed.[5]

There is no impairment of the right by the instruction of a verdict where there is no material conflict in the evidence,[6] or by the action of a court in setting aside an unjustifiable verdict.[7]

The right to a jury trial may be made to depend on the amount involved.[8]

Statutes denying an appeal in certain cases may operate as a deprivation of the right.[9]

An action on several of a series of notes, some due and some not matured except as they were matured by stipulation that all should become due on default of any one, is not a suit on an unconditional contract in writing, within a constitutional provision requiring verdict of a jury on such a contract.[10]

One against whom the case is dismissed on the ground of falsity of an affidavit of poverty may not raise the question that he is thereby deprived of the right of trial by jury; having invoked the provisions of a statute allowing this procedure, he is bound thereby.[11]

The provision of the constitution of the United States, guaranteeing the right of jury trial for crimes, applies to the territories.[12] Misdemeanors,[13] prosecutions for violation of municipal police regulations,[14] and the like, are not crimes of which jury trial is of right.

The jury contemplated by the federal constitution is the common-law jury of twelve persons.[15] A constitutional provision requiring an impartial jury from the county where the offense is committed does not make it necessary that the jury be selected from the particular municipality in the county,[16] and is not violated by a law requiring jury commissioners to place on the list, names of persons whom they believe to be qualified, nor by an act providing that if the panel for the term becomes exhausted, it may be completed from those on the list living within five miles of the court house.[17] gration Co. v. Crabtree, 24 Ky. L. R. 743, 70 S. W. 31. Defendant in a purchase money mortgage foreclosure interposing as a counterclaim a claim of damages arising from a breach of covenant against incumbrancers is entitled to a jury trial on the issue so raised—Herb v. Metropolitan Hospital & Dispensary, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 145. In proceedings to review a judgment where defendant pleads facts amounting to payment and satisfaction of a judgment and plaintiff joins the issues a jury trial is a matter of right—Farak v. First Nat. Bank (Neb.) 93 N. W. 682.

2. Const. art. 2, § 28—Tinsley v. Kemery, 170 Mo. 310.

3. Tinsley v. Kemery, 170 Mo. 310.

4. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. United States, 187 U. S. 315.

5. Girdner v. Bryan, 94 Mo. App. 27.

6. Henry v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 599; Hintz v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 634.

7. Serwer v. Serwer, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 415.

8. Items may be cumulated to make the amount—Lee v. Dow, 71 N. H. 326.

9. An act denying an appeal from a commissioner's court in civil cases, where the amount of the judgment, exclusive of costs, does not exceed $20.00, violates the constitutional provision guaranteeing right of trial by jury in suits at common law, where the amount in controversy exceeds $20.00 (Act Congress, March 1, 1895)—Archard v. Farris (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 821. There is a deprivation of the right of trial by jury by an act allowing cemetery associations to secure land, the value to be determined by specified commissioners and giving no right of appeal—King v. Greenwood Cemetery Ass'n, 67 Ohio St. 240.

10. Howard v. Wellham, 114 Ga. 934.

11. Woods v. Bailey, 122 Fed. 967.

12. Queenan v. Territory, 11 Okl. 261, 71 Pac. 218.

13. People v. Stein, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 357.

14. Delaney v. Police Court, 167 Mo. 667.

15. Queenan v. Territory, 11 Okl. 261, 71 Pac. 218.

16. Lloyd v. Dollisin, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 571; United States v. Peuschel, 116 Fed. 642.

17. State v. Bolln (Wyo.) 70 Pac. 1.

Special juries in cities of a specific population may be authorized and deposit a jury fee required,[18] and unless the manner of obtaining a jury is prescribed, an act creating city court is not unconstitutional, because it provides for summoning a panel of sixteen jurors from which twelve should be taken.[19]

§ 19. Crimes, prosecutions, punishments and penalties.—A provision against passing of local or special acts to regulate the punishment of crimes repeals a special act wherein it provides for the punishment for embezzlement by officers of a certain bank.[20] Under a constitutional provision declaring gambling a vice and giving the legislature power to pass laws for its suppression, the legislature have power to declare betting on races at a distance, in the turf exchange, gambling.[21]

Ex post facto laws include only those punishing crime.[22] One charged with a crime is entitled to the benefits of a law applicable thereto, enacted after his commitment and before his conviction and sentence, though the situation cannot be altered to his disadvantage by later legislation.[23] The place of executing a sentence may be changed ex post facto.[24] The statute against the practice of medicine by unregistered persons and creating boards of registration does not render the act ex post facto as to one licensed under a prior act, where the later act provides for registration of persons legally registered under the earlier act.[25]

The federal provision that no person shall be held to answer for an infamous crime, except on presentment or indictment of the grand jury, is a limitation on the congressional power and does not apply to the states.[26]

The nature and extent of the accusation may be known without averring the name of the purchaser in an indictment for selling liquors without a license.[27]

The right to speedy trial does not clash with a law declaring that no bar shall arise to further prosecution of one who is discharged for delay in coming to trial.[28] Accused cannot be discharged and the indictment afterwards reinstated.[29]

The right to compulsory process to compel attendance of witnesses in criminal prosecutions is not a guaranty of their attendance, nor of more than ordinary diligence in serving the subpoena.[30]

The confrontation of witnesses is given if accused has opportunity to be present when witnesses give evidence which is introduced in writing.[31]

One is compelled to be a witness against himself by a prosecution under an indictment founded on his own involuntary testimony.[32] The privilege against self-incriminating testimony precludes cross-examination of accused as to matters which

18. Eckrich v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 755.

19. Mattox v. State, 115 Ga. 212.

20. Commonwealth v. Porter, 24 Ky. L. R. 364, 68 S. W. 621.

21. City of Shreveport v. Maloney, 107 La. 193.

22. The revocation of a physician's certificate for gross immorality is not a criminal punishment within the ex post facto clause, though applied to one whose habits were grossly immoral before the passage of the law—Meffert v. State Board of Medical Registration & Examination (Kan.) 72 Pac. 247. Ex post facto law see State v. Callahan, 109 La. 946.

23. State v. Edwards, 109 La. 236.

24. Capital punishment at state prison instead of jail—State v. Rooney (N. D.) 95 N. W. 513.

25. Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505.

26. State v. Jones, 168 Mo. 398; People v. Scannell, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 345. An act establishing a criminal court for a city is not unconstitutional for failure to provide that one accused of a penal offense shall have right to demand trial by indictment—Welborne v. Donaldson, 115 Ga. 563.

27. Jones v. State, 136 Ala. 118.

28. In re Begerow, 136 Cal. 293, 68 Pac. 773, 56 L. R. A. 528.

29. Prosecuting attorney announced his unreadiness to proceed with trial, discharged witnesses and accused from his bond—Jones v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 1434, 71 S. W. 643.

30. Smith v. State (Ga.) 44 S. E. 817.

31. Written testimony before examining magistrate (Rev. St. Utah, 1898, § 4513, subd. 4)—State v. King, 24 Utah, 482, 68 Pac. 418. Depositions—State v. Kline, 109 La. 603. Right to confront witnesses not impaired by reading testimony of deceased witness—People v. Elliott, 172 N. Y. 146. Right to confront witnesses may be waived—Odell v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 90 S. W. 964.

32. State v. Gardiner, 88 Minn. 130.

he did not develop in evidence.[33] Merely requiring one to be sworn before the grand jury does not abridge this privilege.[34] There must be compulsion.[35] The fourteenth federal amendment did not extend the fifth so as to make guaranty therein apply to states.[36] The presumption of guilt from silence of witnesses other than accused is not forbidden.[37]

In felony cases a jury cannot be waived by accused.[38]

An act allowing sentence to depend on the fact of a prior conviction does not provide for sentence uncertain or disproportionate to the offense.[39] Fines in cases made to abide the event of a like case are not "assessed by a jury," hence are void if they, with the fine in the test case, exceed what may be imposed by the court.[40] The inhibition of disproportionate penalties refers only to criminal ones.[41] A fine of twice the amount embezzled from the state is not double punishment.[42] It is not double punishment to penalize an act in addition to giving a civil recovery.[43] Excessive fines[44] and cruel and unusual punishment[45] are not imposed because separate fines will in the aggregate take many years to work out.[46]

There is no jeopardy to preclude a second trial if the case was brought to an end before the jury was sworn,[47] or even afterwards, if the proceedings were insufficient to support a conviction,[48] or the jury became disqualified or disagreed.[49] A trial of a special issue is not jeopardy,[50] nor is a former trial for an offense which, though perhaps arising out of the same acts, was not identical with the one charged at bar,[51] and accused cannot complain that a former trial jeopardized him, when at his own instance it has been set aside or reversed.[52]

An act allowing a person under an indeterminate sentence to be released by prison officers does not invade the governor's pardoning power,[53] or provide an uncertain sentence.[54]

A constitutional provision declaring that fines shall be for the benefit of the school fund will not prohibit the legislature from authorizing a judgment in a criminal action which will operate in favor of the party whose moneys have been embezzled.[55]

33. Rogers v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 71 S. W. 18.

34. He cannot assert it till questioned—United States v. Kimball, 117 Fed. 156. But unless he then asserts it it is lost—Id.

35. United States v. Kimball, 117 Fed. 156.

36. People v. Wyatt, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 456.

37. United States v. Kimball, 117 Fed. 156.

38. Starr & C. Ann. St. c. 38, § 168—Paulsen v. People, 195 Ill. 507.

39. People v. Fox, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 245.

40. Madden v. State (Tenn.) 67 S. W. 74.

41. Penalty for discrimination by one express company against another—Adams Exp. Co. v. State (Ind.) 67 N. E. 1033.

42. Crim. Code, Neb. § 124—Everson v. State (Neb.) 92 N. W. 137.

43. Penal statute making pool selling or book making a felony, except where another penalty is provided by law, of amounts lost in a civil action (Pen. Code of New York, § 351)—People v. Stedeker, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 449.

44. Fine of one thousand dollars for assault and battery on a young woman, not excessive—Doyle v. Commonwealth (Va.) 40 S. E. 925. Anti-trust law not invalid as laying excessive fines—State v. Laredo Ice Co. (Tex.) 73 S. W. 951.

45. Fine of $100 or imprisonment for ninety days for operating stage without license not a cruel and unusual punishment—Borough of Belmar v. Barkalow, 67 N. J. Law, 504.

46. Twenty convictions of selling liquor, twelve years to work out the fines—Ex parte Brady, 70 Ark. 376.

47. State v. Taylor, 171 Mo. 465; State v. Lewis (Wash.) 71 Pac. 778.

48. Defective indictment—State v. Holton, 88 Minn. 171; State v. Sherman (Ark.) 74 S. W. 293. Verdict on fatally defective indictment is no jeopardy—State v. Brown (La.) 34 So. 698.

49. Illness of juror and discharge of jury—People v. Smith, 172 N. Y. 210. Discharge on disagreement—Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71. Discharge on holiday legal—State v. Lewis (Wash.) 72 Pac. 121.

50. Issue of former conviction—State v. Ellsworth, 131 N. C. 773.

51. See Criminal Law where the cases are collected showing what are identical.

52. People v. McFarlane, 138 Cal. 481, 71 Pac. 568, 72 Pac. 48; State v. Morrison (Kan.) 72 Pac. 554.

53. People v. Warden of Sing Sing, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 113.

54. Indeterminate sentence act not bad for uncertainty—People v. Warden of Sing Sing, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 113. Indeterminate

§ 20. Searches and seizures.—The taking of incriminating property from a defendant under arrest, without his consent, for use in evidence, does not amount to an unreasonable search and seizure.[56]

§ 21. Suffrage and elections.—The right to vote at a purely state election is governed by the laws of the state. The fifteenth amendment does not confer an affirmative right to vote. Its office is to inhibit abridgment of the right on grounds of race, color or condition. It is not directed against individuals who may intimidate voters.[57] Under the constitutional provision that male citizens shall be eligible to vote for all elective offices to be elected by the people, the legislature may not create a board of five members with bi-partisan representation on such board, and limiting the right of a voter to vote for more than three of such officers.[58] A requirement that voters shall vote in the wards of their residence does not impose an additional qualification within a prohibition of additional qualifications.[59] Where the constitution of a state makes residence in a municipality for one year a condition to right to vote at the election, a city is without power to require a residence of one year prior to registration.[60] An act imposing a property qualification on persons voting on the question of the establishment of a water-work system does not conflict with the constitutional provision prohibiting property qualification, the legislature having elsewhere in the constitution been given the power to restrict the taxing power of municipalities so as to prevent abuse of assessment.[61]

A ballot law prohibiting the placing of the name of the candidate nominated by different parties under the different party emblems interferes with the right of parties to make nominations, and with the right of a candidate to demand that his name shall be placed on the ballot so as to inform voters that he is the nominee of the political parties.[62] The fact that the constitution makes all persons entitled to vote eligible to office does not prevent the legislature from enacting laws governing the form of a ballot and limiting the right of a candidate to have his name placed on such ballot.[63]

The Nebraska primary election law, being complete in itself, does not contravene a constitutional provision relating to amendments of laws, though one of the sections operates indirectly as an amendment of a section of the general election law.[64]

Under a constitutional provision authorizing a city to form a charter to be submitted at the "next election" thereafter, it is not necessary that it be submitted at a general election.[65] A drainage act is not unconstitutional by reason of the fact that it gives each owner of land one vote for each acre owned by him.[66]

§ 22. Frame and organization of government; courts; officers.—The right of local self government is not a guaranty to a city, against appointment of its governing body by the governor of the state; but it has reference solely to the people of the state and not to the people of any portion of it.[67] sentence law valid—Shular v. State (Ind.) 66 N. E. 746.

55. Everson v. State (Neb.) 92 N. W. 137.

56. Russell v. State (Neb.) 92 N. W. 751.

57. Prosecution for conspiracy to intimidate voters under Rev. St. § 5508—Karem v. United States (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 250.

58. Bowden v. Bedell, 68 N. J. Law, 451.

59, 60. State v. Kelly (Miss.) 32 So. 909.

61. Spitzer v. Village of Fulton, 172 N. Y. 285.

62. Pol. Code, § 797—Murphy v. Curry, 137 Cal. 479, 70 Pac. 461, 59 L. R. A. 97.

63. State v. Moore, 87 Minn. 308, 59 L. R. A. 447. There is no infringement of the constitutional provision making voters eligible to office by a provision prohibiting a candidate who has sought nomination from a political party and been successful from having his name printed on the official ballot as an independent candidate for the same office; the right of such a person is amply protected by the provision for a blank space for the writing of names of candidates—Id.

64. Laws 1899, c. 27—De France v. Harmer (Neb.) 92 N. W. 159.

65. State v. Kiewel, 86 Minn. 136.

66. Mound City Land & Stock Co. v. Miller, 170 Mo. 240, 60 L. R. A. 190.

No offices may be created except as specially authorized by the constitution.[67] A constitutional provision against creation of executive offices is not violated by an act imposing duties of commissioner of department on governor of the state, and providing for appointment of special deputy to assist in discharging such duties.[69]

Where the courts have been classified or the jurisdiction fixed by the constitution, the legislature is without power to alter either.[70] Grants of power to erect courts[71] or define jurisdiction[72] are limited to terms of the grant. Under a provision conferring appellate jurisdiction on the supreme court in all cases at law and in equity, under such limitations and regulations as the legislature may prescribe, the legislature cannot enlarge or diminish the jurisdiction or the right of appeal.[73] Where jurisdiction is fixed at a certain amount, a court has no jurisdiction of an offense where the maximum fine would exceed the jurisdictional amount.[74] The giving of a right which is litigable in chancery does not extend chancery powers.[75] Judges as distinguished from the courts may be deprived of powers.[76]

An act temporarily increasing the number of judges of the supreme court does not violate the constitutional provision that the supreme court shall consist of a stated number of judges, and that the legislature may increase the number thereof from time to time.[77] Provision may be made for a judge to serve during a vacancy in a constitutional court.[78]

67. Brown v. Galveston (Tex.) 75 S. W. 488. The appointment of the majority of a board of commissioners, to constitute the governing body of a city, is not prevented by the constitutional provision allowing the voters the right to vote for "mayor" and all other elective offices—Id. Local self government is not impaired by state officers assessing franchise taxes—People v. State Board of Tax Com'rs, 174 N. Y. 417.

68. Superintendent of sewers—Lowery v. Lexington, 25 Ky. L. R. 392, 75 S. W. 202. Legislature of Kentucky is without power under the constitution to create a board with judicial powers to try county election contests, as this in effect creates a new court—Davison v. Johnson, 24 Ky. L. R. 27, 67 S. W. 996. Laws authorizing the incorporation of a private police and detective agency with power to arrest and imprison on the officers giving bond and taking of an oath and requiring no public service when qualified except ability to read and write and putting no limit on the time the officers may discharge their powers, violates a constitutional provision against the creation of offices, appointment to which shall be for more than a term of years, and that no grant of exclusive privileges shall be made to any man except on consideration of public service, and requiring civil officers of the state at large to reside in the state, and all officers of the districts, counties and municipalities to reside therein—(Kentucky Act, March 3, 1884)—Swincher v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 1897, 72 S. W. 306. Under a constitution enumerating the legislative employes, there can be no payment from a contingent fund of a claim for services by an officer not included in the enumeration and this particularly where an act in force at the time provided that no other employes than those enumerated should be elected without joint action by the two houses—Walker v. Coulter, 24 Ky. L. R. 530, 68 S. W. 1108. Electoral boards are not constitutional officers—Sinclair v. Young (Va.) 40 S. E. 907.

69. State v. Eskew (Neb.) 90 N. W. 869; Merrill v. State (Neb.) 91 N. W. 418.

70. Jurisdiction of federal courts under the constitution of the United States, see Appeal, Jurisdiction—Love v. Liddle (Utah) 72 Pac. 185.

An act allowing a township to pass an ordinance directing application to courts to compel railroad companies to erect gates at crossings, does not confer on the court the power inherently belonging to the supreme court and exercisable by mandamus—Palmyra Tp. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 63 N. J. Eq. 799.

71. Under a constitutional provision authorizing the establishment of inferior courts in territory constituting territorial division of the state, the legislature may not authorize election of magistrate in territory corresponding to a congressional district, as such districts are federal and not state subdivisions (Laws 1901, c. 466, § 1392)—People v. Dooley, 69 App. Div. (N. Y.) 512.

72. Power to confer additional jurisdiction on certain courts does not give the legislature power to confer jurisdiction beyond this limitation—Ex parte Cox (Fla.) 33 So. 509.

73. Finlen v. Heinze, 27 Mont. 107, 69 Pac. 829.

74. State v. Wiseman, 131 N. C. 795.

75. Fixing a penalty for violation of an act against discharging sewerage in streams from which municipalities receive water, and authorizing state board of health to enjoin the act by suit in a chancery court—State Board of Health v. Diamond Paper Mills Co. (N. J. Law) 53 Atl. 1125.

76. State v. Taylor, 68 N. J. Law, 276.

77. Laws of Wash. 1901, p. 345—State v. McBride, 29 Wash. 335, 70 Pac. 25.

78. Town of Grayson v. Bagby, 25 Ky. L. R. 44, 74 S. W. 659.

Under a constitutional provision authorizing the legislature to change supreme court districts at the session next preceding the election of the judges, the legislature, in changing the boundaries of one district at such time, may make such changes in other districts as are necessary.[79] A constitutional provision for requiring redistricting of a state for legislative purposes the year following a national census, and each ten years thereafter, does not require that the successive re-apportionment acts should be taken the year following the taking of the national census. It is sufficient if a census has been taken before the enactment of the act.[80]

Appointments, election, and removal of officers.—A provision that the senate shall advise and confirm all appointments to constitutional or legislative offices is limited by a following provision contemplating modes of appointment "otherwise provided," and the senatorial confirmation may be dispensed with by law.[81] Where the constitution makes it the duty of the legislature to provide for the election of county officers, the appointment of such officers may not be delegated to other county officers.[82] An act allowing the president of a county board to appoint a civil service commission, without consent and advice of the members of the board of commissioners, does not violate a constitutional provision for the management of affairs of such county by a board of such commissioners.[83]

A constitutional provision vesting electors and county or municipal authorities with the selection of officers whose appointments are not provided for by the constitution is violated by an act for the consolidation of numerous boards of commissioners into one board, and naming the commissioners for the first year,[84] and by an act allowing the appointment of city magistrates by the mayor for a term of years and authorizing the election of city magistrates in congressional districts included in such city, as the act does not require the election of magistrates by the entire city,[85] and by acts transferring the duties and privileges belonging to local officers to state officers.[86] It is not violated by an act allowing the appointment of commissioners of juries by justices of the supreme court, in counties having a certain population,[87] nor by an act terminating the office of commissioners in New York city and vesting their powers in a single commissioner who could be removed by the mayor or governor whenever the public interest requires, as the vesting of the power of removal in the governor was a particular qualification of the mayor's power of appointment.[88] The right to vote for all elective officers is impaired by an act allowing a vote for but three of a bi-partisan board of five.[89]

An act forfeiting an office, for failure of the elected candidate to file a verified statement of his election expenses, violates a constitutional provision by requiring an oath of office different from the one required therein, and the further provision that no other oaths, declarations or tests shall be required as a qualification for any office of public trust.[90]

Tenure of office.—Under a constitutional provision that county officers shall be elected at such times, in such numbers and for such periods not exceeding six years, as may be prescribed by law, the legislature may shorten the term of office of in-

79. People v. Rose (Ill.) 67 N. E. 746.
80. People v. Carlock, 198 Ill. 150.
81. Idaho Act, March 3, 1889—In re Inman (Idaho) 69 Pac. 120.
82. Appointment of county hospital physician by supervisors—People v. Wheeler, 136 Cal. 652, 69 Pac. 435.
83. 1 Starr & C. Ann. St. (2nd Ed.) p. 1102—Morrison v. People, 196 Ill. 454.
84. Village of Saratoga Springs v. Van Norder, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 204.
85. Laws 1901, c. 466, § 1392—People v. Dooley, 171 N. Y. 74.
86. People v. State Board of Tax Com'rs, 174 N. Y. 417.
87. In re Allison, 172 N. Y. 421. But compare In re Brenner, 170 N. Y. 185.
88. Laws 1901, c. 33—People v. Coler, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 584.
89. Bowden v. Bedell, 68 N. J. Law, 451.
90. Stryker v. Churchill, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 573.

cumbents elected for a fixed term.[91] In some states the constitution prohibits enactment of laws extending the terms of public officers.[92] The constitutional provision that officers shall continue to perform the duties of their offices until the qualification of their successors is mandatory, and an officer continues in office until the appointment of his successor, notwithstanding the acceptance of his resignation.[93]

The office of state assessor in Mississippi is one held under the authority of the state, within a constitutional provision forbidding a person to hold office under authority of the state while holding an office of honor or profit under the United States.[94]

Under the constitution fixing the number of members of the legislature, officials receiving certificates of nomination are without power to refuse a certificate or prevent the name of the party certifying from appearing on the ballot, on the ground that the nomination calls for excess in membership, as the legislature is the proper body to pass upon the election and qualification of its members.[95]

Compensation.[96]—Additional compensation for services in the line of duty may not usually be made during incumbency, or when the compensation is fixed by the constitution, to an officer whose compensation is fixed by law.[97] A provision allowing the increase of salaries of judges does not authorize acts excepting judges presiding in circuits of a certain area and population.[98] Under a constitution providing that justices shall have such compensation "as have been heretofore or may hereafter be prescribed by law," the legislature has power to fix the amount to be paid by specified counties to justices, for services in criminal cases.[99] A constitutional provision requiring uniformity of system of town and county government is not violated by an act for salary of officer in counties containing a specified population, though such officers in other counties are paid by fees, where there is no change in the method of electing the officer, and a requirement for the execution of a bond is to protect the county in its title to fees which had formerly belonged to the officer.[1]

§ 23. Taxation and fiscal affairs.—The fact that the constitution does not expressly authorize the imposition of an inheritance tax will not defeat the right of the legislature to provide for such tax, where the constitution declares that the enumeration of certain rights therein shall not be construed to deny others retained by the people.[2] A county empowered to tax for county purposes may not be authorized to levy a tax to pay a state officer's salary.[3] Under a provision requiring that every person in the state or holding property therein should contribute to the

91. Brown v. Brooke, 95 Md. 738.

92. Violated by act postponing date of election of judges—People v. Knopf, 198 Ill. 340.

93. Keen v. Featherston (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 983.

94. This constitutional provision does not prevent one in holding a state office, but who has pending a contest therefor, from accepting during the pendency of the contest, an office under the United States, and the contest will not be dismissed on motion showing the acceptance—State v. Kelly, 80 Miss. 803.

95. Mills v. Newell (Colo.) 70 Pac. 405.

96. A salary fixed by constitution is not taxable—In re Taxation of Judge's Salaries, 131 N. C. 692. An act limiting the amount to be paid justices in a specified county for attendance on criminal cases, being local but not special, does not violate the constitutional provision against the enactment of a special law respecting that for which provision has been made by a general law. The act is local but not special—Herbert v. Baltimore County Com'rs (Md.) 55 Atl. 376.

97. Applied: To officers acting ex officio in a second capacity—Warner v. Board of State Auditors, 128 Mich. 500. To officer performing unusual service—Humboldt County v. Stern, 136 Cal. 63, 68 Pac. 324. To officer claiming allowance for expenses—Coles County v. Messer, 195 Ill. 540.

98. Bennett v. State (S. D.) 93 N. W. 643.

99. Herbert v. Baltimore County Com'rs (Md.) 55 Atl. 376.

1. Laws 1895, c. 169—Verges v. Milwaukee County (Wis.) 93 N. W. 44.

2. State v. Clark, 30 Wash. 439, 71 Pac. 20.

3. Judges held state officers—Colbert v. Bond (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1061.

public taxes, the taxes may be imposed on a domestic corporation owned by a nonresident.[4] A license fee is not necessarily an "occupation tax" within a limiting clause.[5]

Equality and uniformity.—The requirement of uniformity is satisfied where the taxes are uniform upon the same class within the territorial limits of the levying authority.[6] It is necessary that the tax should be for a public purpose and subserve the interests of the people.[7] The rule applies to municipal corporations.[8] It does not apply to licenses imposed under the police power,[9] nor to inheritance taxes which are not upon property.[10] Acts exempting property of charitable institutions from taxation are valid;[11] but the rule is violated by a town charter relieving property within the town from payment of county taxes.[12] A license tax on dealers in a commodity, but exempting those handling such of it as had already passed through a licensed dealer, is unreasonable in its exemption.[13] In determining whether the rule has been violated, property escaping taxation altogether cannot be taken into account.[14] A good will is not property within the constitutional requirement of equality and uniformity.[15] A constitutional amendment providing for assessment of property under general laws and by uniform rules, according to its true value, abrogates special laws exempting certain property, but not yet accepted so as to constitute a contract.[16] There is no unconstitutional discrimination in an income tax law, exempting from its operation insurance companies taxed under other laws on their premiums.[17] In the note are collected laws passed on in this connection.[18]

4. Corry v. City Council of Baltimore, 96 Md. 310.

5. Limit on occupation tax—Brown v. Galveston (Tex.) 75 S. W. 488.

6. Elting v. Hickman, 172 Mo. 237; Day v. Roberts (Va.) 43 S. E. 362; State v. Bengsch, 170 Mo. 81.

Inequality as taking property without due process, see ante, § 15; as denying equal protection of law, ante, § 10.

7. State v. Froehlich (Wis.) 94 N. W. 50.

8. Mayo v. Dover & Foxcroft Village Fire Co., 96 Me. 539; State v. Savage (Neb.) 91 N. W. 716. A constitutional provision requiring uniformity in equality of taxation and giving municipalities the power to levy taxes in such a manner as shall be prescribed by law, does not impliedly prohibit the legislature from granting a municipality the right to levy taxes to pay particular debts on the theory that the manner of levying could not thereby be prescribed, as the manner of levying taxes is fixed by general laws—State v. City of Bristol (Tenn.) 70 S. W. 1031.

9. State v. Hammond Packing Co. (La.) 34 So. 368. Vehicle taxes—Terre Haute v. Kersey, 159 Ind. 300; Ft. Smith v. Scruggs. 70 Ark. 549. Licenses must not be so high as to amount to a tax on the business—Seattle v. Bartol (Wash.) 71 Pac. 735.

10. Sess. Laws 1901, p. 68, § 2—State v. Clark, 30 Wash. 439, 71 Pac. 20. The Minnesota inheritance tax law making transfers as between collaterals taxable at their value when they exceed $5,000.00, and that as to lineal descendants the tax shall be imposed only on the excess over and above the fixed valuation of $5,000.00, violates the constitutional provision authorizing an inheritance tax, but requiring the tax above any exempted sum to be uniform (Laws Minn. 1901, c. 215)—State v. Bazille, 87 Minn. 500.

11. People v. Miller, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 621; W. C. Peacock & Co. v. Pratt (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 772.

12. Day v. Roberts (Va.) 43 S. E. 362.

13. No reasonable ground for classification—Standard Oil Co. v. City of Spartanburg (S. C.) 44 S. E. 377.

14. State v. Savage (Neb.) 91 N. W. 716.

15. Hart v. Smith, 159 Ind. 182.

16. Cooper Hospital v. City of Camden, 68 N. J. Law, 691.

17. W. C. Peacock & Co. v. Pratt (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 772.

18. Unequal and not uniform: County tax to reimburse general fund for moneys paid to benefit township—Harper v. New Hanover County Com'rs (N. C.) 45 S. E. 526. The creation of a pension fund for school teachers out of teachers' salaries—Hibbard v. State, 65 Ohio St. 574. General tax of certain amount and in addition to the water rates on each lot having a building on it and abutting on a street having service mains—Village of Lemont v. Jenks, 197 Ill. 363.

Rule not violated: Act for licensing transient merchants and excepting therefrom sheriffs, assignees and other public officers—Levy v. State (Ind.) 68 N. E. 172. A local option law imposing a penalty different from that imposed by general dram shop act—Ex parte Handler (Mo.) 75 S. W. 920. Laws taxing gross premiums of insurance companies where imposed on foreign and domestic companies alike—Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Lewis & Clarke County (Mont.) 72 Pac. 982. An act exempting the owner of mortgaged property from taxation on the mortgage (Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 8417A; Horner's Rev. St. 1901, § 6272A)—

The constitutional provision authorizing taxation of persons engaged in specific occupations, by the general law of uniform application as to classes taxed, does not prevent a classification of persons for that purpose.[19] The federal requirement of uniformity of duties and imposts does not apply to taxation by states or territories.[20]

Double taxation.—The prohibition of double taxation has no reference to taxation by the state and again by its governmental division,[21] or to taxation in another state,[22] but the same property cannot be taxed in two places for the same purpose.[23] A tax may be levied to restore and reimburse a fund raised by taxation.[24] An intent to impose it will not be presumed.[25] Corporate stocks are not taxable in addition to its property,[26] but taxation of shares to the holders and landed property to the corporation has been upheld.[27] A license tax on an insurance company and also its agents is valid,[28] as well as a license for street use by vehicles otherwise taxed.[29]

Complaint of violation of the rule may only be made by persons affected.[30]

Exemption clauses are strictly construed.[31] Under a constitutional provision reserving the right to exemption to the legislature, there is a valid exemption of an

State v. Smith, 158 Ind. 543. An act imposing a license tax on agents of packing houses doing business in the state—Stewart v. Kehrer, 115 Ga. 184. An act taxing sellers of cigarettes at a specified amount per annum, and inapplicable to jobbers doing an interstate business with customers outside the state—Cook v. Marshall County (Iowa) 93 N. W. 372. Occupation taxes levied under a charter allowing municipalities to divide the various occupations into different classes and imposing taxes on all such classes—Kansas City v. Richardson, 90 Mo. App. 450. Laws placing an officer on a salary instead of under fees as formerly, objected to on the theory that under the fee system such officer could waive his fees, but under the statute every citizen must pay the fee and consequently it was a tax—Verges v. Milwaukee County (Wis.) 93 N. W. 44. A road tax law exempting from its provision, property within municipalities where work on streets is done under laws relating to municipalities, on the ground that the said property was not equally taxed for road purposes in proportion to its value (Act, Cal. 1883, § 2)—Miller v. Kern County, 137 Cal. 516, 70 Pac. 549. An act providing that all personal property except certain classes shall be listed for taxation in the township in which the taxpayer resides, the residence of the corporation or partnership would be deemed to be in a township in which the particular office or place of business is situated, it not being the purpose of the constitution to restrict the legislature from prescribing regulations as to situs of personalty (Laws 1899, c. 15, § 14)—City of Winston v. City of Salem, 131 N. C. 404. A valuation of realty on which mine is situated, at the price that the mine would sell for at a fair, voluntary sale for cash, and other property at value at which it would be taken in payment of a just debt from a solvent debtor (1 Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 1698—Eureka Dist. Gold Min. Co. v. Ferry County, 28 Wash. 250, 68 Pac. 727.

19. Rosenbloom v. State (Neb.) 89 N. W. 1053, 57 L. R. A. 922.

20. W. C. Peacock & Co. v. Pratt (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 772.

21. The fact that a city charter allows the levy of a license tax on insurance companies, and a legislative act requires companies to pay a tax does not authorize double taxation, but merely different methods of taxation—City of Lamar v. Adams, 90 Mo. App. 35.

22. Griggs Ry. Const. Co. v. Freeman, 108 La. 435.

23. Township where the taxpayer resides, and also by another township—Stephens v. Smith, 30 Ind. App. 120.

24. County tax to pay expenses of patients in state insane hospital supported by state tax—Bon Homme County v. Berndt, 15 S. D. 494.

25. Wright v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 1007.

26. Shares of stock held by resident in foreign corporation taxed, and property of the corporation is taxed in the state where located—Stroh v. Detroit (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1029.

27. Illinois Nat. Bank v. Kinsella, 201 Ill. 31.

28. City of Farmington v. Rutherford, 94 Mo. App. 328.

29. Ft. Smith v. Scruggs, 70 Ark. 549.

30. Corliss v. Village of Highland Park (Mich.) 93 N. W. 254.

31. Louisiana & N. W. R. Co. v. State Board of Appraisers, 108 La. 14. Exemption from taxation of property used exclusively for charitable purposes, a part of a building not used will not be exempt, though the rent therefrom is used for charitable purposes—State v. Board of Equalization (S. D.) 92 N. W. 16. Within the constitutional provision enumerating property exempt from taxation and declaring invalid all laws exempting other property, an inspection law, in effect a revenue law exempting certain kinds of liquors is unconstitutional—State v. Bengsch, 170 Mo. 81. An exemption is a contract within the constitution which may not be impaired by taxation—Bancroft v. Wicomico County Com'rs, 121 Fed. 874. A sugar refinery is regarded as a "manufacturer"—State v. American Sugar Refining Co., 108 La. 603. The term "produce of the state" in a constitutional provision, exempting articles manufactured from produce of the state, from taxation, includes logs grown on soil of the state lying at a mill to be cut up into lumber—Benedict v. Davidson County (Tenn.) 67 S. W. 806.

asylum from taxation in a charter granted thereto under such statute.[32] An exemption of property leased for revenue by a charitable institution and not embraced in its charter is repealed by a provision in the constitution afterwards adopted, exempting only property of charitable institutions not used or leased for purposes of private or corporate income.[33] Exemptions cannot be made by way of commuting taxes,[34] but an act exempting railroad company from payment of taxes for a term of years, in compromise of a claim of the railroad against the state, was sustained.[35] Under the constitutional provision that the salaries of judges shall not be diminished during their continuance in office, the salaries of the judges of the supreme court are exempt from taxation either direct or otherwise.[36]

Levy, assessment, collection, and equalization.[37]—The constitutional provision that the legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to defray the estimated expenses of the state for each year limits the annual tax to an amount sufficient to defray such expenses.[38] A constitutional provision that the treasurer shall be the collector of taxes is violated by an act authorizing the assessor to collect taxes on personal property.[39] Taxes must ordinarily be based on valuation.[40] Ordinances imposing occupation taxes[41] and assessments for public improvements are not within the constitutional provision requiring taxation in proportion to value.[42] Laws providing for water frontage assessment do not violate either state or federal constitution.[43] Alfalfa will not be regarded as an "improvement" so as to require separate assessment.[44]

Public improvements.—Under a constitutional provision prohibiting the state from contracting any debt for works of internal improvement, the state is without power to appropriate money for the construction and strengthening of a levee system on navigable river, though the construction of a levee might incidentally avert possible peril to life.[45] The constitution of Ohio prohibits the raising of money directly or indirectly by assessment, to pay compensation, damages or costs for land appropriated by the public for public use.[46] An act amending an act incorporating a city is not rendered unconstitutional by reason of it requiring reimbursement of property owners for paving assessments by rebates from the road tax.[47] Constitutional prin-

32. St. Anna's Asylum v. Parker, 109 La. 592.

33. Female Orphan Soc. v. Board of Assessors, 109 La. 537.

34. An act levying a tax on gross premiums to be in full of state and local taxes —Raymond v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 196 Ill. 329.

35. State v. Colorado Bridge Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 818.

36. In re Taxation of Judge's Salaries, 131 N. C. 692.

37. There is no violation of a home rule constitutional provision in a law requiring franchise assessment by state officers—People v. State Board of Tax Com'rs, 174 N. Y. 417.

38. State v. Froehlich (Wis.) 94 N. W. 50.

39. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Martien, 27 Mont. 437, 71 Pac. 470.

An act authorizing a collector to assess personal property he finds unassessed by the assessor is constitutional—Powell v. McKee (Miss.) 32 Mo. 919, following State Revenue Agent v. Tonella, 70 Miss. 701 and line of decisions.

40. The beer inspection fees provided by the laws of Missouri are a tax and unconstitutional as not being levied on a cash valuation (Rev. St. Mo. 1899, c. 117, art. 4, § 7691)—State v. Eby, 170 Mo. 497. An inspection law providing for a state license tax on distilled liquors and exempting from its provisions, liquors intended for export and domestic wines, violates the constitutional provision that all property subject to taxation shall be taxed in proportion to its value—State v. Bengsch, 170 Mo. 81.

41. Kansas City v. Richardson, 90 Mo. App. 450.

42. Jones v. Holzapfel, 11 Okl. 405, 68 Pac. 511.

43. State v. Trustees of Macalester College, 87 Minn. 165; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Lindquist (Iowa) 93 N. W. 103; Heman v. Gilliam, 171 Mo. 258. Benefits must be equal and uniform—Morse v. Omaha (Neb.) 93 N. W. 734.

44. Miller v. Kern County, 137 Cal. 516, 70 Pac. 549.

45. State v. Froehlich, 115 Wis. 32.

46. The constitution does not, however, affect or prohibit the raising of money by assessment to pay for the improvement of streets, etc., so long as the assessment does not exceed the special benefits—Dayton v. Bauman, 66 Ohio St. 379.

47. Pennsylvania Act, May 18, 1871—Franklin v. Hancock, 204 Pa. 110.

ciples applicable to taxation for public improvements are applicable to assessments for the construction of sewers.[48]

Debt limit.—The words "debt" or "indebtedness" refer to indebtedness created by contract,[49] and are used in their ordinary sense.[50] Current expenses for the year are not to be counted as an existing debt.[51] There is no increase by issue of bonds to be exchanged at par for a greater or equal amount of pre-existing legal bonds bearing a greater interest,[52] nor by exchange of bonds for warrants, where the change will diminish rather than increase indebtedness.[53] City bonds bearing interest and secured by mortgage on a water works erected with the proceeds are a debt of the city, though they are to be payable out of a special tax for that purpose in instalments.[54] A contract requiring the city to pay for a plant in the form of rental constitutes an indebtedness[55] from the day of the execution of the contract,[56] though payment of rentals at specified future times is not a "current expenditure,"[57] nor is a contract to pay annual rentals an indebtedness for the aggregate amount of the rentals.[58] Amount of debt is determined by adding to the principal of all outstanding debts the amount of accrued and overdue interest.[59] A percentage of "value" is the assessed value and not the actual value of taxed property.[60] Funds included among the cash resources of the city and set apart pursuant to statutory authority to meet a specific indebtedness should be deducted from the city's liabilities, and funds not so set apart should not be deducted.[61] Under a charter provision limiting indebtedness to a fixed sum and providing that for the purpose of acquiring and establishing a water works and sewerage system a further indebtedness may be incurred, indebtedness already incurred or to be incurred for such water works or sewerage system is not to be considered in the fixed limitation.[62]

Debts of superior or co-extensive but distinct public corporations are not reckoned.[63] The indebtedness of a water district, an integral part of a municipality, is not an indebtedness of the municipality.[64]

A city may not exceed the limit, though it has in its treasury a part of the 48. White v. Gove (Mass.) 67 N. E. 359. Statutes 1867, c. 106—Smith v. Worcester, 182 Mass. 232, 59 L. R. A. 728. An act allowing cities to build sewers is not made unconstitutional by a provision allowing a city when constructing a sewer to lay the necessary pipes for hose connections to the curb line of abutting lots and charge the cost thereof to the abutting premises—Van Wagoner v. City of Paterson, 67 N. J. Law, 455.

49. O'Bryan v. Owensboro, 24 Ky. L. R. 469, 68 S. W. 858.

50. Does not include unearned interest—Epping v. Columbus (Ga.) 43 S. E. 803. The term "indebtedness" in Montana constitution means what a city owes irrespective of demands which it might hold against others—Jordan v. Andrus, 27 Mont. 22, 69 Pac. 118.

51. O'Bryan v. Owensboro, 24 Ky. L. R. 469, 68 S. W. 858.

52. Hyde v. Ewert (S. D.) 91 N. W. 474.

53. Walling v. Lummis (S. D.) 92 N. W. 1063.

54. Swanson v. City of Ottumwa (Iowa) 91 N. W. 1048, 59 L. R. A. 620. But see contra, City of Ottumwa v. City Water Supply Co. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 315, 59 L. R. A. 604.

55, 56. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 541.

57. City of Centerville v. Fidelity Trust & Guaranty Co. (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 332.

58. Fidelity Trust & Guaranty Co. v. Fowler Water Co., 113 Fed. 560; Denver v. Hubbard (Colo. App.) 68 Pac. 993.

59. Epping v. Columbus (Ga.) 43 S. E. 803.

60. City Water Supply Co. v. City of Ottumwa, 120 Fed. 309.

61. Kronsbein v. Rochester, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 494.

62. Los Angeles v. Hance, 137 Cal. 490, 70 Pac. 475.

63. A constitutional limitation of the amount of indebtedness of municipality, does not require the inclusion of the state debt—Lancaster School Dist. v. Robinson-Humphrey Co., 64 S. C. 545.

School corporation having the same boundaries as the city—Hyde v. Ewert (S. D.) 91 N. W. 474. Interest bearing notes given by school trustees of a school city, to raise money for school purposes, are not to be included—Heinl v. Terre Haute (Ind.) 66 N. E. 450.

A library board is not included in a limitation enumerating counties, cities, towns, townships, boards of education and school districts—Robertson v. Board of Library Trustees, 136 Cal. 403, 69 Pac. 88.

64. Holroyd v. Town of Indian Lake, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 75; Kennebec Water Dist. v. City of Waterville, 96 Me. 234.

funds necessary to discharge the obligation and may be able to collect the remainder by the time the obligation matures.[65]

An act allowing a court to direct the levy of a tax on a showing of its necessity does not authorize a levy in excess of the constitutional limit.[66]

Necessary expenditures are sometimes allowed for maintenance, though limit has been exceeded;[67] also to provide specified public improvements.[68] Where bonds have been issued in excess of the constitutional authority and all were created by the same ordinance and sold at the same time, each bond is valid to the extent of its proportionate share of the debt lawfully contracted.[69]

Submission of question of indebtedness.—The legislature may enact necessary legislation to make effective a constitutional provision allowing public assent to an increase.[70] It is not necessary to the validity of a special election to obtain consent of the taxpayers of a town to incur a debt, that the debt for each particular purpose should be specifically set out.[71] The majority intended by a constitution is a majority of the votes cast on that question at a general election, though the majority is not a majority of all electors voting at the election.[72] In Georgia the question may not be submitted to the voters in connection with other issues.[73] The order of a governmental body as to amount to be raised must be substantially followed.[74] A vote to exceed a limit is not required when the people have already voted for expenditures which with existing debts exceed the limit.[75]

A state is not prevented from establishing a dispensary and making the city liable for its maintenance, by a constitutional provision forbidding municipalities from incurring a new debt without the consent of two-thirds of the qualified voters of such municipality.[76]

Provision for payment of debts.—In many states it is required that provision for payment must precede creation of a debt.[77] A bonded debt is not "created" until the bonds are "issued," i. e., until they are sold.[78]

65. City Water Supply Co. v. City of Ottumwa, 120 Fed. 309. A city is not exempt from a constitutional debt limitation by the fact that it has sufficient property to pay for a public building, and it was the intent of the city to sell the property for that purpose, where there was no action on the part of the city council in accordance with the intent—Fourth Nat. Bank v. Dallas (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 841.

66. State v. Wabash R. Co., 169 Mo. 563.

67. Expenses for guards to prevent destruction of property (Ky. St. § 1241A)—Hopkins County v. St. Bernard Coal Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 942, 70 S. W. 289. Labor, election expenses, guarding quarantine patients—Gladwin v. Ames, 30 Wash. 608, 71 Pac. 189. Light and water—Cain v. City of Wyoming, 104 Ill. App. 538. Salaries—Laws of New York, 1901, cc. 704-706—McGrath v. Grout, 171 N. Y. 7.

68. Under a constitution allowing citizens to increase debt to a certain per cent for providing water for irrigation and domestic purposes, the power to incur an additional per cent of indebtedness for water purposes is conferred regardless of existing indebtedness for other purposes—Wells v. Sioux Falls (S. D.) 94 N. W. 425.

69. Columbus v. Woonsocket Inst. of Savings (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 162. Bonds issued by the municipality are valid only to the amount that a tax contemporaneously levied would pay the interest and create a sinking fund of the per cent prescribed, the same to be determined by the next preceding assessment—Id.

70. State v. Quayle (Utah) 71 Pac. 1060.

71. Gray v. Bourgeois, 107 La. 671.

72. Ballots reading "for the loan" and "against the loan," are sufficient without specifying the purpose and nature of a proposed loan—Tinkel v. Griffin, 26 Mont. 426, 68 Pac. 859.

73. Cain v. Smith (Ga.) 44 S. E. 5.

74. A resolution for reciting an indebtedness of about "$100,000," will not authorize the collection of a tax amounting to "$132,000"—Peoria & P. U. Ry. Co. v. People, 198 Ill. 318.

75. Under a constitutional provision that the debt of a city shall not exceed seven per cent of the assessed value of the taxable property, nor shall it incur any debt or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per cent of such assessed value without the consent of the electors construed—Keller v. Scranton, 202 Pa. 586.

76. Jacoby v. Dallis, 115 Ga. 272.

77. A contract by a municipality to purchase a water and electric light plant creates a debt under the provision that no debt shall be created without provision being made for a sinking fund, though the contract is a compromise of claims against the city in favor of another which may accrue in the future—City of Austin v. McCall, 95 Tex. 565. An act providing for the establishment of a dispensary and making the city liable for its maintenance, is not op-

Public aid donations and loans of credit.[79]—There is not an unconstitutional donation by an ordinance reimbursing an officer for expenses incurred in removing nuisance in highway,[80] nor by an ordinance appropriating money to reimburse property owners for the construction of a water pipe to connect with the city water supply.[81] An act allowing a school board to place on the retired list teachers retired prior to the passage of the act, on a pension, violates the constitutional provision forbidding a city to give money in aid of any individuals, it being on account of its retroactive operation a mere gratuity.[82] Laws making it the duty of school districts to transport scholars from remote parts of the district to attend school do not authorize diversion of public funds to private use.[83]

Diversion of taxes from other funds to a special road district newly created is not a grant in aid of individual associations or corporations.[84] There is no pledging of credit by a stipulation in a contract for local improvement, that the city shall not be liable to make certain payments before funds applicable thereto shall have been collected,[85] nor by insuring public property in a mutual insurance company.[86]

§ 24. Schools and education; school funds.—A constitutional provision making it the duty of the legislature to establish a uniform system of schools is violated by appointing certain persons as trustees of a specified district for twenty years.[87] Separate schools for white and colored children may be maintained under a constitutional provision requiring establishment of permanent system of public schools.[88]

Under a constitutional provision securing to the school fund lands under water belonging to the state, such lands may not be transferred to municipalities for a nominal consideration.[89] Under constitutional provision making right to participate in school funds dependent on the fact of maintenance of a school for three months in a year, a school district organized eight months before the time of distribution and six months after the apportionment is not entitled to share.[90]

The legislature is often denied power to divert any portion of the tax raised for school purposes,[91] but a drainage law is valid, though it makes public school lands, benefited, liable in apportioning cost of the improvement.[92]

§ 25. Commerce.—By the commerce clause the federal, to the exclusion of the state governments, is given the power to regulate commerce which passes the borders of a state. This clause does not deprive the states of their sovereign powers respecting persons and instrumentalities engaged in interstate and for-posed to a constitutional provision declaring that municipal corporations shall not incur any debt until a provision therefor shall be made—Jacoby v. Dallis, 115 Ga. 272.

In Georgia the constitution does not require that provision for payment should be made before its creation—Epping v. Columbus (Ga.) 43 S. E. 803.

78. City of Austin v. Valle (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 414.

79. Constitutional provision held not restrictive of the power of counties to subscribe for stock in any railroad company which had been duly incorporated and in which the citizens of the county as a body have a general interest because of supposed benefits to be derived therefrom—Board of Com'rs v. Coler (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 705.

80. State v. St. Louis (Mo.) 73 S. W. 623.

81. State v. St. Louis, 169 Mo. 31.

82. Laws 1900, c. 725—Mahon v. Board of Education, 171 N. Y. 263.

83. School Dist. No. 3 v. Atzenweiler (Kan.) 73 Pac. 927.

84. Elting v. Hickman, 172 Mo. 237.

85. Kronsbein v. Rochester, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 494.

86. Nor by giving its premium notes for payment of assessments to meet losses incurred by the company—French v. City of Millville, 67 N. J. Law, 349.

87. Ellis v. Greaves (Miss.) 34 So. 81.

88. Laws 1879, p. 163, c. 81—Reynolds v. Board of Education (Kan.) 72 Pac. 274.

89. Henderson v. Atlantic City (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 533.

90. Deckerville High School Dist. v. School Dist. No. 3 (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1064.

91. To support library—Board of Education v. Board of Trustees, 24 Ky. L. R. 98, 68 S. W. 10.

92. The money goes to benefit school property—State v. Henry, 28 Wash. 38, 68 Pac. 368.

eign commerce, but forbids regulation of the commerce itself, and it leaves to the states power over purely domestic commerce. In a preceding article[93] is discussed the question, what is a proper exercise of these powers. When a federal act regulating commerce is attacked as offending a provision of the bill of rights, it will be found treated under the appropriate section of this article.

§ 26. Enactment of statutes is in most of the states subject to restrictions against local or special laws, against repealing or amendatory acts which do not set out the law to be changed, against laws embracing more than one subject or not clearly expressing that subject in the title or enacting clause. Such provisions will be embraced in the article "Statutes," to be published in a future number.

§ 27. Miscellaneous provisions other than foregoing. Right to bear arms.—The constitutional privilege of keeping and bearing arms is not infringed by an act prohibiting private persons from carrying deadly weapons within the limits of municipalities within the state.[94]

Religious corporations.—The constitutional provision that no religious corporation can ever be established in the state is not violated by the granting of a charter to an institution of learning, the trustees of which are appointed by a religious organization.[95]

Right to require information by compulsion.—An act making it the duty of a carrier delivering damaged freight to a consignee to locate the connecting carrier liable for the injury, and furnish such information to the consignee, is not unconstitutional, in that it requires information by a statutory compulsion and inflicts a penalty for refusal to furnish the information which the company is entitled to withhold if it so desires.[96]

Usury laws.—A constitutional provision that all contracts for a greater than a specified rate of interest per annum should be deemed usurious has reference only to contracts, and does not limit the power of the legislature with regard to claims or rights that may be created otherwise than by contract.[97]

CONTEMPT.

§ 1. Nature of a contempt and what constitutes one. A. Elements of contempt and nature of proceeding.—Contempt must be willful and the failure to obey the direction of the court must not arise from mere inability,[98] or from the acts of others without one's knowledge and control,[99] and where the circumstances are such that it can fairly be inferred that a party acted with good intention and not in violation of his obligations to the court and other parties, he cannot be held

93. Commerce.
94. Legislature has undoubted power in the exercise of its police power to prohibit the carrying of concealed deadly weapons (Idaho Act, Feb. 4, 1889)—In re Brickey (Idaho) 70 Pac. 609.
95. State v. Board of Trustees (Mo.) 74 S. W. 990.
96. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Murphey, 116 Ga. 863.
97. Galveston & W. Ry. Co. v. Galveston (Tex.) 74 S. W. 537.
98. The intent to defy the court must clearly appear—Kahlbon v. People, 101 Ill. App. 567. A mere failure to comply with a decree subjecting a party to a fine, cannot be declared contempt—Moseley v. People, 101 Ill. App. 564.
99. One restrained from diverting waters of a lake is not guilty of contempt because dams constructed for purpose of retaining the waters were removed by others without his knowledge—Stock v. Jefferson Tp. (Mich.) 92 N. W. 769.

guilty of contempt;[1] nor can there be contempt of an order not only not recorded but actually not made till a date following that of the alleged contempt; hence orders previously made cannot be modified by nunc pro tunc orders, nor can such orders take the place of orders intended to be made but which were not made, so as to justify proceedings for contempt.[2] The contemnor must have had notice or been served when the act was done.[3] It is not "willful" to withhold obedience of an order which is immediately appealed and superseded,[4] nor to hold property as against a receiver under a claim of right.[5] Where a stay of proceedings on a motion is granted until hearing and determination thereof, a party is not liable for contempt in proceeding after the motion was denied, because he did not await entry of a formal order on the decision.[6] It must appear that a right or remedy of a party in the cause has been destroyed or prejudiced.[7] One with actual knowledge of an injunction may be punished for contempt in violation, though not a party to the suit, or in privity with any party therein, or served with process in it;[8] but where an order for payment of money was modified and affirmed, but the modified order was not served on the party and no demand was made of him, he could not be held guilty of contempt for failure to pay.[9] The order must be in certain terms, else only a technical contempt is committed.[10] Invalidity of an order will not prevent punishment for a criminal contempt.[11] Disobedience of a void order ejecting plaintiff from land and forbidding his re-entry is not contempt.[12]

Civil or criminal.—Proceedings for contempt are criminal when conducted to preserve the dignity of the courts and punish disobedience of their order, and civil when instituted to enforce the rights of parties by compelling obedience to orders, judgments or decrees, and a proceeding against judges of a county court to compel compliance with mandamus directing them to levy a tax to pay a judgment against the county is a civil contempt.[13] A contempt is not criminal where defendant is required to pay a fine and costs to plaintiff, since in criminal contempt the fine belongs to the public and costs are not allowed.[14]

§ 1. B. Acts in disobedience of court.—A defendant in supplementary proceedings who violates an injunctive order by using money to his credit on deposit in a bank is in contempt.[15] Forcible prevention of use of a dock by other parties in violation of an injunction against obstruction of their use is contempt.[16] Entry on the mining claim of another, merely to post notices of a discovery of quartz lodes with an

1. Proceedings for contempt for failure to pay rent to a receiver on order of the the court—Moore v. Smith, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 629.

2. Gardner v. People, 100 Ill. App. 254.

3. Fletcher v. McKeon, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 231; Schultz v. Luft, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 628.

4. Failure to reinstate dismissed officer during two hours elapsing between service order appeal therefrom (Code Civ. Proc. § 8, subd. 2)—Croker v. Sturgis, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 596.

5. State v. Denham, 30 Wash. 643, 71 Pac. 196.

6. Dady v. O'Rourke, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 557.

7. Application to punish purchaser in foreclosure for failure to complete his purchase—Dunlop v. Mulry, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 131.

8. Ex parte Stone (Tex. Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 1000; Chisolm v. Caines, 121 Fed. 397. Rev. St. 1899, § 3643—In re Coggshall (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 183. He may be required to restore the status at issuance of writ—Murphey v. Harker, 115 Ga. 77; Ex parte Richards, 117 Fed. 658. Injunction to stay prosecution of a divorce suit in another state—Kempson v. Kempson (N. J. Law) 52 Atl. 360, 625.

9. Code Civ. Proc. § 2268, requires both a service of the order requiring payment and a demand for the money—Flor v. Flor, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 262.

10. Rumney v. Donovan (Mont.) 72 Pac. 305.

11. Elmstedt v. People, 102 Ill. App. 231.

12. The rights of a party cannot be prejudiced in advance of the trial of the main issue—Forman v. Healey, 11 N. D. 563.

13. In re Nevitt (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 448.

14. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 8, 9—Mutual Milk & Cream Co. v. Tietjen, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 532.

15. Harvey v. Arnold, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 155.

16. Stolts v. Jackson, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 81.

intention to locate them, is not a violation of an order restraining the continuance and trespass by sinking shafts and other mining devices.[17] A corporation will be liable to a fine for contempt where through carelessness of its officers its employes violate an injunction against making or selling a patented article.[18] Contempt proceedings will not lie against the secretary and treasurer of a labor organization for refusing a transfer card to another division of the order not previously sought by the applicant, though, in mandamus proceedings, the particular division of the labor organization had been commanded to restore the relator to rights possessed before his expulsion.[19] Holding a meeting near mines in order to influence miners to strike by arguments and threats of violence in violation of an injunction restraining the assembling of defendants at or near the mines is a disobedience.[20] One restrained from selling liquor under a void license is not thereby placed in contempt by procuring a license under the law and selling under it.[21] Failure to pay alimony may be punishable as a contempt.[22] Ceasing to pay alimony after a reconciliation is not contempt.[23]

§ 1. C. Official misconduct, and obstruction or perversion of justice.—An attorney or officer of justice is guilty who advises or directs acts resulting in contempt,[24] or who imposes on or deceives the court,[25] unless it appears that he was acting in good faith and not with an intention to defy the court.[26] The trial judge does not contemn a mandate by allowing amendments to raise points not decided.[27] A police officer in attendance on the municipal court is guilty of contempt in informing the keeper of a gambling house of a warrant for his arrest so as to enable him to escape.[28]

Obstructing or embarrassing the administration of justice, as by abusively denouncing the official action of a federal judge,[29] constitutes contempt. A newspaper article published during progress of a trial, commenting upon the political complexion of the officers and others engaged in the trial, is not necessarily calcu-

17. Harley v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co., 27 Mont. 388, 71 Pac. 407.

18. Westinghouse Air Brake Co. v. Christensen Engineering Co., 121 Fed. 562.

19. People v. Millard Div. No. 104, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 581.

20. United States v. Haggerty, 116 Fed. 510.

21. Wray v. Harrison (Ga.) 42 S. E. 351.

22. Non-payment of notes sanctioned by decree is so—Bonney v. Bonney, 98 Ill. App. 129. It is not imprisonment for debt—State v. Cook, 66 Ohio St. 566; In re Cave, 26 Wash. 213, 66 Pac. 425; Baker v. Baker (Ga.) 43 S. E. 46; Welty v. Welty, 195 Ill. 335. See discussion in title Alimony, ante, p. 74.

23. Dillon v. Shiawassee Circuit Judge (Mich.) 91 N. W. 1029.

24. People v. District Ct., 29 Colo. 182, 68 Pac. 242. Leading client to violate an injunction against interference with property —Stolts v. Jackson, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 81. Attorney general advising state board of assessors to disregard an injunction restraining assessment cannot claim in defense that he was discharging official duties—People v. District Ct., 29 Colo. 182, 68 Pac. 242.

A judge of a territorial district court, who had appointed a receiver in a suit respecting mining claims, was guilty of contempt of the Circuit Court of Appeals in writing letters and giving instructions to the receiver which interfered with the execution of writs of supersedeas granted on appeal to the latter court. A district attorney, who refused to give up keys to safety deposit boxes in which gold dust was stored, which had been given him by the receiver, and an attorney who was a special examiner for the department of justice and who advised the marshal to obstruct execution of the writ and prevent the parties from securing the property from the receiver, commanded to surrender it, were also guilty of contempt of the same court; but otherwise as to the attorney for the receiver who advised the latter that the writ was void because not appealable, and that it did not require him to restore certain property in his hands, but who did not advise him as to his particular acts or that he should disobey the writ—In re Noyes (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 209.

25. An attorney secured approval of a worthless bond (Code Civ. Proc. § 4, subds. 2, 8)—Nuccio v. Porto, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 88.

26. Advising a state court to compel surrender by receiver in bankruptcy, of property which was turned over to him by a state court's receiver without his consent—In re Watts, 190 U. S. 1.

27. May v. Ball, 24 Ky. L. R. 241, 67 S. W. 257, 68 S. W. 398.

28. State v. O'Brien, 87 Minn. 161.

29. During labor troubles—United States v. Gehr, 116 Fed. 520.

lated to embarrass or obstruct the court in administration of justice so as to constitute contempt.[30]

The federal courts have statutory power to punish as for contempt an assault on a court official still in office, returning from performance of duty in a past case, and such assault on a United States commissioner is contempt of the court to which he belongs, though no proceeding against the official was pending, and he was not at the time in performance of duty.[31]

Merely evasive and contemptuous conduct of a witness does not constitute contempt under the New York laws,[32] nor can an order be made finding him guilty of contempt for refusing to answer or answering falsely when it does not appear that the judge directed him to answer any specific question,[33] nor can a warrant in contempt issue on the mere statement that he was subpoenaed and failed to appear.[34] Tampering with evidence, such as the taking and concealment of an exhibit admitted to the jury, is contemptuous,[35] but it is not an interference with a witness to solicit the plaintiff to settlement for money in a divorce action.[36]

Suing or procuring process of the court to abuse it,[37] or fraudulently procuring process,[38] or acts in frustration of,[39] or interference with the legal custody of property,[40] or the retaining of property when such custody has ceased and surrender ordered,[41] is contemptuous. A bankrupt who fails to turn over to a receiver appointed all his books, papers and securities, and who leaves the state after a rule to show cause why he should not be held in contempt,[42] or who fails to turn over goods and abandons them so that they are stolen,[43] is guilty of contempt. Withholding property which one claims as his own does not contemn a receivership order.[44]

An executor who files the customary printed blank on being ordered to account, with "nothing" written in each of the schedules, and claiming to no longer

30. State v. Edwards, 15 S. D. 383.

31. Rev. St. § 725—Ex parte McLeod, 120 Fed. 130.

32. Code Civ. Proc. § 14, subd. 5, § 228, construed—Ryan v. Ryan, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 137.

33. East River Bank v. De Lacy, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 765.

34. In re Haines, 67 N. J. Law, 442.

35. After it was laid on the table by the attorney (Code Civ. Proc. § 8, subd. 1)—In re Teitelbaum, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 887.

36. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 14, subd. 4, making "unlawfully" preventing a witness, etc., a contempt—Herrmann v. Herrmann, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 811.

37. Using writ of prohibition to cover disobedience of injunction—People v. District Ct., 29 Colo. 182, 68 Pac. 242.

38. Falsely justifying surety for order of arrest (Code Civ. Proc. § 14, subd. 4)—Nuccio v. Porto, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 88.

39. Suitors in a state court, on advice of attorney, to prevent a federal receiver from carrying out an order of the federal court to cease operation and sell the track materials and equipment of a mortgaged railroad, are guilty; the attorney is flagrantly guilty—Royal Trust Co. v. Washburn, B. & I. R. Ry. Co., 113 Fed. 531.

40. A purchaser at a tax sale with deed does not so interfere in taking possession after renting contracts made by the receiver's agent have expired and tenants have left, no one being in possession—Metcalfe v. Commonwealth Land & Lumber Co.'s Receiver, 24 Ky. L. R. 527, 68 S. W. 1100.

Suing to oust tenants of land in receiver's hands—Fletcher v. McKeon, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 231. A defendant lessee in mortgage foreclosure, after receiving service of an order appointing a receiver and enjoining the owner's interference with the property, is in contempt for collecting rent of a subtenant but not for suing to oust the subtenant after passage but before service of the order—Schultz v. Luft, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 628. But a tenant who has paid rent in advance is not guilty of contempt in refusing to pay rent for the same time to a receiver of the premises subsequently appointed—Krakower v. Lavelle, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 423.

41. Order to return money after appointment of receiver was set aside (Code Civ. Proc. § 14, subd. 3, §§ 729, 2268, construed—Newell v. Hall, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 278. Receiver under advice refusing to surrender on appeal order of his appointment and stay is only technically guilty—Rumney v. Donovan (Mont.) 72 Pac. 305.

42. In re Wilson, 116 Fed. 419.

43. In re Levin, 113 Fed. 498.

44. He was not a party but had in his possession certain property, which he at first admitted belonged to the insolvent, but was informed by his attorney that the property did not belong to the insolvent and that he ought not to turn it over until ordered further to do so by the court—State v. Denham, 30 Wash. 643, 71 Pac. 196.

act as executor,[45] or who, being ruled to produce a certain chattel in court, fails to comply and responds merely that it has been lost without showing that he was blameless or the manner in which it was lost,[46] or who refuses to answer questions as to the taxable property of the estate at an appraisal to fix the transfer tax thereon,[47] is guilty of contempt. Disobedience by an executor of a surrogate's decree directing payment of legacies may be punished as a criminal contempt.[48]

§ 2. Defense, excuse or purgation.—Inability to perform the requirements of an order may be a defense.[49] Advice of counsel is not justification, but merely goes in mitigation,[50] where the party is a layman and not an officer charged with enforcement of the law,[51] and especially where the violation is willful and the effect of the order cannot be misunderstood.[52] That the order disobeyed is erroneous is no defense.[53] The improper issuance of an injunction is not a defense to contempt in its violation,[54] if the court has jurisdiction of the parties and the cause.[55] An assertion that money withheld by one cited for contempt for failure in its payment does not belong to the judgment debtor in supplementary proceedings constitutes no excuse for disobedience of the order.[56] It is criminal contempt to willfully disobey an injunction pendente lite against disturbing a tenant's possession, even though afterward the contemnor recovered possession of the premises in a lower court.[57] Error pertaining merely to description of lands in an opinion affirming a decree enjoining defendant from diverting a water course, cannot avail him in proceedings for contempt in violating the injunction.[58] Punishment for contempt in assaulting an officer of the court will not be meted out where no public good will result therefrom and the trouble between the parties has been amply adjusted.[59] Technical defenses will not be considered in contempt for decoying a witness from the state to prevent his appearance before a grand jury, where it appears that the witness and the defendants in the contempt believed the subpoena legal and the acts constituting the contempt were committed under that belief; but where no subpoena has been issued for appearance of the witness, one influencing him to leave the state to prevent testifying is not guilty of contempt.[60]

§ 3. Power to punish or redress; contempt or other remedy.—Constitutional definitions of jurisdiction do not limit the inherent powers of courts of original general jurisdiction to punish for contempt.[61] The federal courts have the consti-

45. In re People's Trust Co., 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 239.

46. Reed v. Reed, 24 Ky. L. R. 2438, 74 S. W. 207.

47. In re Bishop, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 474. See, also, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 252, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 64.

48. Code Civ. Proc. § 2555—In re Holmes' Estate, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 267.

49. Alimony—Welty v. Welty, 195 Ill. 335; Wester v. Martin, 115 Ga. 776.

50. Violation of injunction—Stolts v. Jackson, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 81; Coffey v. Gamble, 117 Iowa, 545. Suing for property in custody of law—Fletcher v. McKeon, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 231.

51. Royal Trust Co. v. Washburn, B. & I. R. Ry. Co., 113 Fed. 531.

52. In re Granz, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 399, 38 Misc. 666.

53. Elmstedt v. People, 102 Ill. App. 231. Mandamus to treasurer to pay over fines, etc., is conclusive—Ball v. Wright, 115 Ga. 729.

54. People v. District Ct., 29 Colo. 182, 68 Pac. 242.

55. St. Louis, B. & S. Ry. Co. v. Gray, 100 Ill. App. 538.

56. In re Lewis (Kan.) 72 Pac. 788.

57. Code Civ. Proc. § 8, subd. 3—In re Granz, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 666.

58. Defendant was sufficiently informed of the identity of the stream affected by the injunction and was not misled by the error—State v. Gray, 42 Or. 261, 70 Pac. 904, 71 Pac. 978.

59. Ex parte McLeod, 120 Fed. 130.

60. Shannon's Code, § 5918, subds. 3, 6—Scott v. State (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 824.

61. Circuit courts of Michigan are clothed with "exclusive" power over contempt whether specified by statute or not and the municipal court of Grand Rapids has the same power as a circuit court to punish for contempt in subornation of perjury in a criminal cause before it (Const. art. 6, § 8 construed; Const. 1835, art. 6, § 1, and the present Const. art. 6, §§ 1, 13, 18, and art. 3, § 2, construed in connection with Comp. L. §§ 630, 631, 1098)—Nichols v. Judge of Superior Ct. (Mich.) 89 N. W. 691.

tutional power to punish for contempt,[62] and upon contempt of a federal court the United States commissioner is authorized to arrest, imprison or admit to bail.[63] The offended court has exclusive jurisdiction wherefrom it alone has power to modify, mitigate or revoke its sentence, and no other court may bail or discharge the contemnor.[64] A bankruptcy court has no greater powers to punish for contempt than other federal courts and must proceed according to the established practice of those courts.[65] It may enforce an order requiring a debtor to turn over money to a trustee appointed by committing for contempt.[66] In Ohio a proceeding to enforce a decree for alimony rendered in the circuit court by attachment for contempt may be brought in the common pleas.[67]

The power of a court of record to punish neglect or violation of duty or misconduct, by which rights or remedies of parties may be defeated or prejudiced, may be applied to enforce any civil remedy.[68] One is not relieved from punishment for contempt for disobedience of an order in a case in which a statutory remedy of execution exists, if the remedy of enforcement by contempt proceedings exists also.[69] That an attempt to bribe a juror constitutes a crime does not prevent its punishment by the court as a contempt.[70]

§ 4. Pleadings and other procedure before hearing.[71]—A decree for alimony may be enforced by attachment for contempt after the term at which the decree was entered, on a hearing showing willful refusal to pay.[72] An application for attachment for contempt brought more than four years after knowledge of the facts is properly denied.[73] A contempt proceeding for violation of a previous injunction is not criminal so as to abate on defendant's death.[74] The application to punish for contempt must be made by an order to show cause,[75] on affidavit or proof in open court, and compulsory process should never be used unless it appears that ordinary methods would fail.[76] An oral motion and affidavit which make out a prima facie case are sufficient.[77] An affidavit which does not show that accused is one of the defendants in the suit, or an employe or agent of one of the defendants, will not authorize contempt proceedings against him for disobedience of an order restraining the defendants, their agents and employes.[78] The affidavit of arrest for disobedience of an injunctive order may be made by any one with knowledge of the facts, whether a party or not.[79] An affidavit in proceedings against a trial judge for refusing to obey a mandate of the court of appeals will be stricken from the files where it reflects upon the respondent and contains irrelevant and impertinent matter.[80] In a proceeding to compel payment of alimony, the order to show cause

62. Const. art. 3, § 1—In re Nevitt (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 448.

63. Rev. St. § 1014, construed in connection with Act, May 28, 1896—Castner v. Pocahontas Collieries Co., 117 Fed. 184.

64. In re Nevitt (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 448.

65. Bankr. Act, 1898, § 41—Boyd v. Glucklich (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 131.

66. In re Wilson, 116 Fed. 419.

67. State v. Cook, 66 Ohio St. 566.

68. Code Civ. Proc. § 14—Rowley v. Feldman, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 679.

69. Code Civ. Proc. § 779, contempt proceedings to enforce an order directing residue of money paid out of court on a judgment subsequently reversed on appeal—Rowley v. Feldman, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 679.

70. Nichols v. Judge of Superior Ct. (Mich.) 89 N. W. 691.

71. Sufficiency of affidavit in proceedings for contempt against grand jurors for misconduct—State v. Rockwood, 159 Ind. 94.

72. 2 Starr & C. Ann. St. c. 40, § 18, c. 22, §§ 42, 47—Welty v. Welty, 195 Ill. 335.

73. Though the contempt may constitute an offense against the order of the court it is not bound to act after needless delay—Matheson v. Hanna-Schoellkopf Co., 122 Fed. 836.

74. Hannah v. People, 198 Ill. 77.

75. Notice of motion is insufficient—Dunlop v. Mulry, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 131. Violation of order of court against publication of testimony in a criminal case—Ex parte Foster (Tex. Cr. App.) 71 S. W. 593.

76. In re Haines, 67 N. J. Law, 442; Ex parte Foster (Tex. Cr. App.) 71 S. W. 593.

77. Scott v. State (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 824.

78. Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 5798, subd. 5, § 5801—State v. Peterson, 29 Wash. 571, 70 Pac. 71.

79. Castner v. Pocahontas Collieries Co., 117 Fed. 184.

80. May v. Ball, 24 Ky. L. R. 241, 67 S. W. 257, 68 S. W. 398.

must be served on the party and not his attorney, under the New York Code.[81] The complaint in attachment for contempt for failure to pay alimony need not allege ability to pay as it is imported by the decree.[82] One arrested in contempt proceedings, and who is in court with time to plead and to go on his own recognizance, may be ordered to be brought before the court without bail and without designating a return day in the warrant.[83]

§ 5. Hearing; evidence; trial.[84]—A bankrupt should not be punished for contempt in failing to comply with order of the court before giving him a hearing to show his inability to respond.[85] A husband prosecuted for contempt for failure to pay alimony cannot be attached without hearing after answer alleging poverty.[86] Summary punishment may follow a criminal contempt in the immediate presence of the court,[87] but failure to obey a subpoena to attend court as a witness is an indirect contempt and cannot be summarily punished.[88] Doubtful questions will not be decided against one charged with contempt in violating an injunction.[89] That the subpoena of a witness as shown by the record contains an error inserted by the clerk by mistake will not require dismissal of contempt proceedings on appeal for decoying a witness subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury to prevent his testimony, but a new trial will be ordered where the guilt of the parties otherwise seems clear.[90] The burden of proof is on plaintiff, in contempt to punish another for false qualification on a bond to release property from a lien, to show that defendant swore falsely as to his financial condition, and he must show falsehood beyond a reasonable doubt.[91] The relation of the persons charged with contempt to the suit, or the parties, and acts of misconduct beside those charged, may be proved in the contempt proceedings to show their motives.[92] Circumstantial evidence merely creating a strong impression that defendant has infringed a patent will not warrant a finding that he is guilty of contempt involving imprisonment, when he makes denial under oath.[93] Evidence that the court stated that the injunction order was dissolved, that no formal decree was necessary, and that defendant might proceed, may be admitted in mitigation in proceedings for contempt, as may also evidence that defendant acted on advice of counsel.[94] In proceedings against a police officer for informing a party accused of crime, so as to enable his escape, the failure of the officer to explain suspicious circumstances will raise an inference against him which the court may consider in drawing conclusions from his silence, and he cannot claim benefit of the absolute presumption of innocence given to persons accused of crime who decline to testify.[95] Defendant in a hearing for contempt cannot be compelled to testify as to his own guilt.[96]

81. Goldie v. Goldie, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 12.

82. State v. Cook, 66 Ohio St. 566.

83. State v. Peterson, 29 Wash. 571, 70 Pac. 71.

84. Sufficiency of evidence in proceedings for violation of a decree restraining obstruction of a water course—State v. Gray, 42 Or. 261, 70 Pac. 904, 71 Pac. 978. Of evidence in proceedings for false qualification on a bond to release property from a mechanic's lien—Johnson v. Austin, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 312. Of evidence of violation of injunction—Ex parte Richards, 117 Fed. 658. Of showing of disobedience of order restraining interference of complainant's business or employes during strike—George Jonas Glass Co. v. Glass Bottle Blowers' Ass'n (N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 138.

85. In re Hausman (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 984.

86. Evidence to establish his plea of poverty must be heard—Wester v. Martin, 115 Ga. 776.

87. Code Civ. Proc. § 10—In re Teitelbaum, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 887.

88. Laws 1901, c. 123—State v. Anders, 64 Kan. 742, 68 Pac. 668.

89. Against infringement of patent—Schlicht Heat, Light & Power Co. v. Aeolipyle Co., 121 Fed. 137.

90. Scott v. State (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 824.

91. Johnson v. Austin, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 312.

92. Interference with execution of writs of supersedeas—In re Noyes (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 209.

93. Cimiotti Unhairing Co. v. Frolloehr, 121 Fed. 561.

94. Coffey v. Gamble, 117 Iowa, 545.

95. State v. O'Brien, 87 Minn. 161.

96. In re Haines, 67 N. J. Law, 442.

§ 6. Findings and judgment.—An adjudication of civil contempt for violation of an injunction should state definitely the facts constituting the violation and recite the acts of defendant calculated to defeat or prejudice plaintiff's rights.[97] A recital in an order adjudging one guilty of contempt for failure to pay a sum ordered by the court, that the court was satisfied that a demand for the amount had been made on the party, is insufficient where the code requires proof by affidavit.[98] Though formal accusation is not necessary for contempt in the presence of the court, the record must show that a contempt has been committed, and the record should contain the language alleged to be contemptuous and not merely a recital that such language was addressed by accused to the court. It must appear also that the contempt was committed in the presence of the court.[99] A written accusation of a direct contempt being unnecessary, a journal entry showing the proceedings may constitute the full record.[1] The order of the court on a motion for attachment in contempt should contain the action of the court on the motion and affidavit, in awarding or denying the attachment, together with the substance of the motion and of the charge, though not necessarily the evidence, and the substance of such order should appear in the writ if awarded.[2]

§ 7. Punishment; fine and commitment; further proceedings.—One guilty of contempt in violating an injunction may be sent to jail,[3] but violation of a preliminary injunction cannot be punished by instructing that testimony in behalf of defendant shall not be considered, any more than it would be proper to reward obedience to the injunction by instructing that he was entitled to a verdict.[4] The striking of defendant's answer in a suit for separation and support is an unconstitutional punishment for contempt if he is thereby prevented from presenting a defense.[5] Contempt in filing a scurrilous motion cannot be punished by forbidding the party to appear or file any other pleading or paper, and an order punishing a party for contempt by forbidding him to appear or file any pleadings until he first purges himself will not forbid filing of a motion to purge himself.[6] Disobedience of an order directing a son to support his mother is a civil, not a criminal contempt, so as to bring his punishment within the statutory limit of six months.[7] Statutes fixing the limit of a fine at a sum "and costs" have been held to mean only costs of the contempt proceeding.[8] The fine assessed against one guilty of a technical contempt only, because he acted in good faith under advice of counsel, should be nominal.[9] One who violates an injunction by preventing other parties from enjoyment of property rights may not only be fined but ruled to pay damages covering provable loss and expenses and imprisoned until he is ready to obey the writ.[10] In Michigan imprisonment of defendant found guilty of contempt in violating an injunction not exceeding 80 days in default of payment of a fine of $225 and $50 costs is not excessive, the proceeding being to enforce a civil remedy.[11] A defend-

97. Mutual Milk & Cream Co. v. Tietjen, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 532.

98. Code Civ. Proc. § 2268—Flor v. Flor, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 262.

99. Ogden v. State (Neb.) 93 N. W. 203.

1. Laws 1901, c. 123, § 1—State v. Anders, 64 Kan. 742, 68 Pac. 668.

2. Scott v. State (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 824.

3. 1 Gen. St. p. 392—Frank v. Harold (N. J. Law) 51 Atl. 774.

4. Lake v. Copeland (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 99.

5. Fed. Const. Amend. 14—Sibley v. Sibley, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 132.

6. Kruegel v. Nash (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 983.

7. Code Crim. Proc. § 915, construed in connection with Code Civ. Proc. § 2285—People v. O'Brien, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 110.

8. Code Civ. Proc. § 2284—In re Husted's Estate, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 237.

9. Rumney v. Donovan (Mont.) 72 Pac. 305. A witness should not be fined the limit for refusing under advice of counsel, to answer before a referee—In re Husted's Estate, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 237.

10. Stolts v. Tuska, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 81.

11. Violation of an injunction to enforce a judgment of ouster against a foreign corporation—In re Osborn (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1029.

ant in alimony proceedings cannot be committed until the whole amount of alimony be paid, where the finding of the court does not show that he was able to pay the whole amount ordered.[12] An executor who became guilty of contempt by failing to obey an order of the court after he had paid into court money belonging to himself may be refused his motion for leave to withdraw the money.[13] An order adjudging defendant in contempt for failure to pay alimony, and committing him until it shall be paid, must name a definite term of imprisonment, if imprisonment is inflicted as punishment.[14] A justice may in Connecticut sentence to imprisonment for contempt without imposing a fine.[15]

§ 8. Discharge or pardon.—If the record shows that a trial for indirect contempt was summary, defendant must be discharged until formal proceedings are instituted.[16] A judge may discharge a receiver imprisoned for contempt in failing to pay over money on order of the court, on the ground that poverty prevents his payment, without determining the question whether by his imprisonment he has been sufficiently punished for the contempt.[17] An administrator imprisoned for failure to restore a wasted estate will not be discharged because adjudged a bankrupt, especially where his inability to pay is not clearly shown and he is guilty of fraud and perjury, and fled before entry of the decree requiring payment.[18]

The president of the United States cannot pardon one under imprisonment for a civil contempt of the United States courts.[19]

§ 9. Review of proceedings.—The state may take an appeal in proceedings for indirect contempt.[20] Certiorari is the proper method to review a proceeding adjudging a party guilty of criminal contempt.[21] An order punishing for contempt in violating an injunction is not appealable, though in addition to a fine, it directs restoration of the conditions when the injunction issued, and commits to imprisonment. If the order merely imposes a fine it is not appealable.[22] One adjudged guilty of contempt by a circuit court in Oregon may appeal as from a judgment in an action, though at common law such judgments were not reviewable.[23] The court of ultimate appeal cannot review a judgment imposing a penalty for a purely civil contempt unless an element is involved required by the statute to carry the case past a court of intermediate appeal.[24] One found in contempt may have a stay pending appeal.[25] Facts found by the judge in contempt may be reviewed on appeal only to determine their sufficiency to warrant the judgment.[26] If affidavits in contempt for failure to obey an order of court do not enable a court to determine with accuracy the existence of contempt, an order denying the motion will be reversed and a referee appointed to hear evidence as to defendant's guilt.[27] Subsequent modification on appeal of an order determining the liability of a purchaser at a judicial sale for failure to comply with the terms of his bid, and pay

12. Green v. Green, 130 N. C. 578.
13. Reed v. Reed, 24 Ky. L. R. 2438, 74 S. W. 207.
14. Kahlbon v. People, 101 Ill. App. 567.
15. Gen. St. 1902, § 506—Church v. Pearne, 75 Conn. 350.
16. State v. Anders, 64 Kan. 742, 68 Pac. 668.
17. Nisbet v. Tindall, 115 Ga. 374.
18. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2286, providing for discharge—In re Collins, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 753.
19. In re Nevitt (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 448, as to power in criminal contempt see 7 Wheat. 38, 43.
20. Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 1915—State v. Rockwood, 159 Ind. 94.
21. In re Teitelbaum, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 351.
22. Florida Cent. & P. R. Co. v. Williams (Fla.) 33 So. 991.
23. Under Del. & C. Ann. Codes & St. § 676—State v. Gray, 42 Or. 261, 70 Pac. 904, 71 Pac. 978.
24. Court of Appeals Act, 1891—Naturita Canal & Reservoir Co. v. People (Colo.) 70 Pac. 691.
25. 2 Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 5811—State v. Superior Ct., 28 Wash. 590, 68 Pac. 1051.
26. Green v. Green, 130 N. C. 578.
27. Hogan v. Clarke, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 615.

a deficiency resulting after resale, cannot affect contempt proceedings against him.[28] An affidavit on which a motion is based on appeal from a conviction for contempt, if insufficient, may be amended on remand.[29] Where proceedings for contempt were reversed in the supreme court on certiorari and supplementary evidence was produced on rehearing in the district court, that court must consider the evidence received on both hearings.[30] Where, on habeas corpus proceedings and certiorari in aid to review an order committing in contempt, the evidence is certified on request of relator, defendant is entitled to expenses for transcribing the evidence into long hand on dismissal at costs of relator.[31] On dismissal at cost of relator of a writ of review to review an order in contempt, defendant is entitled to the fee paid by him for judgment and minute entries in his return and for the expense of making the transcript except such pages as consist merely of recitals by defendant.[32]

CONTINUANCE AND POSTPONEMENT.

§ 1. Definitions and distinctions; powers and duty of courts.—In exact phraseology "continuance" means the revival of an abated cause, "adjournment" the putting over from day to day in the term, and "postponement" the putting over to another term.[33] But these uses have been confused and much relaxed and it is believed that except as the terms have been locally given a statutory meaning they cannot be distinguished.[34]

The grant of a continuance lies in the discretion of the court,[35] especially so if it is a second application.[36] The court may properly go to the residence of a party and take her testimony in his presence, without officers and attorneys, instead of granting an application for a continuance because of her physical inability to attend and testify.[37] An unwritten agreement by counsel to postpone hearing of a motion for new trial, or their acquiescence in an oral statement of postponement by the judge, will not keep the court open for hearing on the motion.[38] A justice cannot grant a continuance unless given authority by statute but he may postpone a trial after commencement on sufficient proof of the discovery of new evidence by the applicant.[39]

§ 2. Grounds for continuance or postponement. A. In General.—A continuance will not be granted defendant because of the short time granted him in which

28. Rowley v. Feldman, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 400.
29. Scott v. State (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 824.
30. McConkie v. District Ct., 117 Iowa, 334.
31. Code Civ. Proc. § 1860—In re Boyle, 26 Mont. 365, 68 Pac. 409, 471.
32. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1860, 1866, 3472—State v. District Ct., 26 Mont. 224, 67 Pac. 114, 68 Pac. 470.
33. Cyc. Law Dict., "Postponement."
34. 4 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 824.
35. It is therefore not reviewable—Scott v. Boyd (Va.) 42 S. E. 918; Saastad v. Okeson (S. D.) 92 N. W. 1072; McMahan v. Norick (Okl.) 69 Pac. 1047 [on ground of rejection of evidence offered by defendant]—Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias v. Robbins, 70 Ark. 364. For absence of material witness—Doll v. Stewart (Colo.) 70 Pac. 326. On application to be restored to mental capacity—In re Lovern's Estate, 137 Cal. 680, 70 Pac. 783.

A final decree will not be reversed for denial of a motion for continuance (United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irr. Co., 184 U. S. 416); and the same is true of a judgment unless the action is clearly erroneous—Empire Coal & Coke Co. v. Hull Coal & Coke Co., 51 W. Va. 474.
36. Not properly verified—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 807.
37. Action to set aside a decree for a divorce—Humphrey v. Humphrey (Neb.) 91 N. W. 856.
38. Atlanta, K. & N. Ry. Co. v. Strickland, 114 Ga. 998.
39. Rev. Codes, 1899, § 6650—Lyman-Ellel Drug Co. v. Cooke (N. D.) 94 N. W. 1041.

to produce papers under an order of court, where it clearly appears that ample time was given for that purpose and no defense is shown to the suit.[40] Death of co-defendants and want of administration is not necessarily sufficient where the statutes and the nature of the case permit judgment to be taken without affecting their estates.[41] A statute providing that unless the declaration is filed ten days before the term of court, defendant may have a continuance, is not designed to allow plaintiff to keep defendant attending court from term to term, without giving him knowledge of the nature of the case against him.[42] A further continuance is properly denied where the former continuance was on a plea on which the parties introduced no evidence, and which constitutes the only plea which they were enabled to file.[43] A continuance will not be granted because of improper remarks by counsel in hearing of persons summoned as jurors, but the case will only be postponed until panels may be drawn from which to select the jury.[44]

(§ 2) B. Absence or disability of party or counsel.—A continuance should be granted for absence of a party, where it appears by affidavit that he was seriously sick and that he was a material witness and that his presence was necessary,[45] and that he was out of the state temporarily on business when taken sick did not require the other co-parties to take his deposition in order to show due diligence.[46] It should not be granted to a party who voluntarily leaves the district without asking a continuance or preparing his testimony,[47] nor on an affidavit merely showing that he was sick and unable to attend the trial but not showing that he was expected to testify or that his presence was otherwise necessary,[48] nor where it appears that his presence was not necessary and that he could not appear for some time, and that his deposition could have been taken, and it is admitted that if he were present he would testify as alleged in an affidavit for a continuance.[49] If no former continuance has been granted and the application on the ground of the absence of the defendant is perfectly regular, and it does not appear that the case should proceed against the other defendants without him, the continuance should be granted.[50]

A further continuance should be granted where it appears after a continuance granted because of an accident to defendant, that he was not physically able to be present or have his deposition taken and that his presence at the trial was necessary.[51]

A continuance because of absence of counsel will not be granted where the party is ably represented by other counsel,[52] nor because of absence of counsel on leave, where it appears from a motion for new trial that the leave was intended to apply to another case.[53] Unavoidable exhaustion of the attorneys of a party will not be cause for continuance if it appears that they can attend and properly conduct his defense.[54]

40. Sisk v. American Cent. Fire Ins. Co., 95 Mo. App. 695.

41. Action to set aside fraudulent release of legatee's share [Comp. Laws 1887, § 4884]—Ward v. Du Pree (S. D.) 94 N. W. 397.

42. Hurd's Rev. St. c. 110, § 18—Collier v. Grey, 105 Ill. App. 485.

43. Kinzie v. Riely's Ex'r (Va.) 42 S. E. 872.

44. Thompson v. O'Connor, 115 Ga. 120.

45. Affidavit of physician as to sickness and of attorney as to materiality of evidence—McMahan v. Norick (Okl.) 69 Pac. 1047. A personal affidavit was made by the party—Low, Hudson & Gray Water Co. v. Hickson (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 781.

46. Low, Hudson & Gray Water Co. v. Hickson (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 781.

47. Engelstad v. Dufresne (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 582.

48. Hibbets v. Hibbets, 117 Iowa, 177.

49. Saastad v. Okeson (S. D.) 92 N. W. 1072.

50. Scott v. Whipple (Ga.) 42 S. E. 519.

51. Especially where it appears that he would probably soon be in a condition to attend—Morehouse v. Morehouse, 136 Cal. 332, 68 Pac. 976.

52. Douglass v. Douglass, 24 Ky. L. R. 2398, 74 S. W. 233.

53. Southern Ry. Co. v. Beach (Ga.) 43 S. E. 413.

54. Crabtree Coal Min. Co. v. Sample's Adm'r, 24 Ky. L. R. 1703, 72 S. W. 24.

(§ 2) C. Inability to procure evidence or to examine witnesses.[55]—A continuance because of absence of a witness should be allowed if it appears that a deposition could not be procured within a reasonable time granted on denial of the continuance;[56] and in an action against a corporation for injuries, because of the absence of the president, where it appears that he was in possession of peculiar material facts, and had been suddenly called to the bedside of his dying mother;[57] and trial in divorce should be postponed because of the absence of several witnesses without the county whose testimony was material, and whose attendance plaintiff could not procure though defendant had produced one of the witnesses.[58] A continuance should be granted in an action regarding the boundary line of lands where it appears that a survey will be necessary to determine the line and that one of the parties owing to inclement weather was unable to be present and cross-examine the other on the taking of their depositions;[59] or to allow plaintiff to procure testimony of great importance, discovered after the term opened, especially where his attorney who was preparing the case became disabled just before the term;[60] but not to allow plaintiff in damages for trespass, to produce evidence to complete its chain of title, where the evidence showed title only to land as to which the title was not undisputed;[61] nor for failure of defendant to produce a deposition after permission was properly denied plaintiff to take the deposition and after a continuance to the latter to supply the evidence, there being no proof that such evidence had ever been taken by defendant.[62] A continuance will not be granted because of absence of a witness whose evidence is purely cumulative;[63] nor where the evidence sought to be proved by him could not be admitted;[64] nor unless diligence of the party in securing material evidence is shown;[65] nor, as a matter of right, where the party relied upon the witness' promise to attend and did not subpoena him;[66] nor where it was not reasonably probable that his presence could be obtained, and where his deposition had been taken before the trial;[67] nor where the testimony of the witness is not shown to be material and it does not appear that it could not have been supplied by other witnesses;[68] nor where no order of court has been obtained authorizing service of a subpoena on a witness outside of the county of trial;[69] nor where it appears that part of the witnesses afterward testified to facts which were not disputed and the affidavit did not state what evidence was expected of other absent witnesses;[70] nor where it appears that a commission was taken for his deposition which was never placed in the hands of the officer for execution, and the witness had removed from the county and could not be located;[71] nor where the affidavit

55. Sufficiency of showing of diligence by party for whom a deposition was taken, but which was withheld by the commissioner because of nonpayment of fees, in order to entitle him to a continuance to secure testimony—Hurd's Rev. St. c. 110, § 42—Hall v. Hale's Estate, 202 Ill. 326.

56. Gatzmeyer v. Peterson (Neb.) 94 N. W. 974.

57. Langdon-Creasy Co. v. Rouse, 24 Ky. L. R. 2095, 72 S. W. 1113.

58. Church v. Church, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 349.

59. Chenault v. Spencer, 24 Ky. L. R. 141, 68 S. W. 128.

60. Kentucky Union Co. v. Patton, 24 Ky. L. R. 701, 69 S. W. 791.

61. Kentucky Land & Immigration Co. v. Crabtree, 24 Ky. L. R. 743, 70 S. W. 31.

62. Wetta v. New Orleans & C. R. Co., 107 La. 383.

63. Scott v. Boyd (Va.) 42 S. E. 918.

64. Wood v. Farmer's Life Ass'n (Iowa) 95 N. W. 226.

65. McDermott v. Manley (Neb.) 90 N. W. 1119; American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Heath (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 235. Sufficiency of circumstances showing diligence under Code, § 3664—Hibbets v. Hibbets, 117 Iowa, 177.

66. Hughes v. Humphreys, 102 Ill. App. 194.

67. Board of Internal Imp. v. Moore's Adm'r, 25 Ky. L. R. 15, 74 S. W. 683.

68. Taylor v. Nevada-California-Oregon Ry., 26 Nev. 415, 69 Pac. 858; John S. Metcalf Co. v. Nystedt, 102 Ill. App. 71. The affidavit must show the materiality—Lomax v. Holbine (Neb.) 90 N. W. 1122.

69. Abby v. Dexter (Colo. App.) 72 Pac. 892.

70. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Taylor, 24 Ky. L. R. 1169, 70 S. W. 825.

71. Action for personal injuries—St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Skaggs (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 783.

does not show that he was the only witness who could testify to such facts, or that the facts were true, or that his attendance and deposition could be obtained at a later term, or why his deposition had not been taken during the preceding year in which the case was pending;[72] nor where the witness did not testify on a former trial and no effort was made to secure his testimony while he was within reach of process, and it does not appear from the affidavit that if the motion were granted his presence could be secured.[73] A continuance because of the absence of two witnesses is properly denied where the deposition of one of them, residing in another county, had not been taken, and the testimony of the other had not appeared material.[74] A continuance is properly refused near the close of a trial of an action to cancel a deed for fraud, for the purpose of taking a supplemental deposition of a party who was sick, where the court states that the proposed testimony would be valueless;[75] and for the absence of evidence, where it appears that the party asking the continuance refused to pay the charges for the taking of the deposition of the absent witnesses, and it is not shown that the amount was unreasonable or that she was unable to pay;[76] but a party for whom a deposition is taken is not bound to pay an illegal amount demanded by the commissioner in addition to the statutory fees, in order to secure the deposition and rely on a restitution of the excess by the court, in order to make a showing of diligence on applying for a continuance to procure testimony.[77] Where it appears from the application that an adjournment for 90 days cannot be allowed to enable a party to produce witnesses because 28 days have already elapsed since service of summons, and the materiality of the evidence and the diligence of the party in attempting to secure attendance of witnesses does not clearly appear, the granting of an adjournment is wholly within the discretion of the court.[78]

(§ 2) D. Surprise in pleadings or evidence or change in theory of action.—A continuance will not be granted as a matter of right because the issues are made up sooner than expected if they are made up regularly;[79] nor because an issue in the case had not been made up until the term for final submission of the cause, where that issue was expressly reserved by the court and continued until the succeeding term.[80] Where plaintiff in an action for personal injuries changed the theory of his proof as to negligence of defendant's servant, defendant should have been granted a continuance.[81] A continuance will not be granted because of the filing of an amended answer, substantially the same as the original, on the day of trial, where no affidavit was filed showing a reason for continuance;[82] nor because of amendment of the complaint, notice of which was properly served, where the trial was not held until the 8th day of the term and it did not appear that witnesses were absent;[83] nor because of amendment of a complaint at the close of the evidence to conform to the proof, where the amendment presented no new issue, and it does not appear from affidavits filed in support of a motion for new trial, that defendant could have produced other evidence.[84] Where it appears in a suit, which

72. John S. Metcalf Co. v. Nystedt, 203 Ill. 333.
73. Doll v. Stewart (Colo.) 70 Pac. 326.
74. Chicago, R. I. & T. Ry. Co. v. Long (Tex.) 75 S. W. 483.
75. Haynes v. Harriman (Wis.) 92 N. W. 1100.
76. Hall v. Muggeridge, 103 Ill. App. 593.
77. Hall v. Hale's Estate, 202 Ill. 326.
78. Consol. Laws 1882, c. 410, § 1364—Weston v. Proctor, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 800.
79. Palmer v. Caywood (Neb.) 89 N. W. 1034.
80. Douglass v. Douglass, 24 Ky. L. R. 2398, 74 S. W. 233.
81. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Donavan (Ark.) 72 S. W. 48.
82. Roach v. T. J. Moss Tie Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1222, 71 S. W. 2.
83. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Eichinger (S. D.) 91 N. W. 82.
84. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 27 Mont. 288, 70 Pac. 1114.

is the consolidation of two suits, that a party was surprised by collusion between the parties to the other suit and the abandonment by defendant therein of his defense, he should be granted a continuance.[85] Defendant in replevin need not be granted a continuance to procure testimony to meet the increase in values of the property, in the amendment by plaintiff of her petition, making their value greater than that alleged in her affidavit.[86] A continuance is properly refused on the ground of surprise, by reason of admission of papers in a suit on a book account, none of which were referred to in the statement of account;[87] or on the ground that defendant in trespass to try title was surprised in the testimony of the original trustee, who held property which was sold under the trust deed by a substitute trustee, that he was not disqualified and had not been requested to sell, since the evidence of the appointment of the substitute trustee would be made to sufficiently appear.[88] Defendant in a suit for personal injuries is not entitled to a continuance on the ground of surprise because of evidence of injury developed by a physical examination of plaintiff made at defendant's request;[89] nor can defendant in quo warranto ask for a continuance because of surprise in the execution of certain deeds of corporations, in that they were admitted in evidence in a similar proceeding against him, if the record does not show such fact and if the deeds were admitted their execution was not denied in the former suit.[90] A motion to discharge a jury and postpone the trial because of the misleading effect of the admission of testimony as to damages afterwards excluded is properly denied where no witnesses have been discharged nor documentary evidence in possession of counsel removed during the trial, and no offer was made to present further testimony.[91] Where, after two continuances by consent, a deed was filed by defendant in the cause and was finally temporarily withdrawn on notice for record, and refiled, and an affidavit of forgery was filed against the deed by one of the plaintiffs the day before trial, a continuance sought by such plaintiff is properly refused because of lack of diligence, where based on the ground that he discovered for the first time when he filed his affidavit, that defendants would rely upon the deed for title and wish to obtain evidence to prove its forgery.[92]

§ 3. Admission or stipulation to avoid continuance or postponement.—The application for a continuance because of absence of a witness may be denied where the other party admits that the facts recited in the application and desired to be proved by such witness are true,[93] but he must admit the truth of facts to which it is claimed the absent witness would testify and not merely that the witness would so testify.[94] The admission will not deprive plaintiff of the right to object to the relevancy, competency and materiality of the facts sought to be proved,[95] nor from objecting to conclusions of the witness as they appear in the affidavit in order to keep them from being read to the jury,[96] nor will the admission authorize the exclusion of other evidence to the same facts,[97] but it will operate as a waiver of his right to cross-examine the witness as to his knowledge of the facts on which he based his opinion.[98]

85. Vaught v. Murray, 24 Ky. L. R. 1587, 71 S. W. 924.
86. Chandler v. Parker, 65 Kan. 860, 70 Pac. 368.
87. E. Frank Coe Co. v. Eichenberg, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 287.
88. Bemis v. Williams (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 332.
89. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Richmond, 23 Ky. L. R. 2394, 67 S. W. 25.
90. Lyons & E. P. Toll Road Co. v. People, 29 Colo. 434, 68 Pac. 275.
91. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. L. Bucki & Son Lumber Co., 189 U. S. 135.
92. Collins v. Weiss (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 46.
93. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Campbell (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 564.
94. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Voss (Tenn.) 72 S. W. 983.
95. Code Civ. Proc. § 1039—Tague v. John Caplice Co. (Mont.) 72 Pac. 297.
96. Indiana Ry. Co. v. Maurer (Ind.) 66 N. E. 156.

§ 4. The application.—The continuance may be granted at any stage of the case and on such terms as may seem just.[99] Postponement is properly denied where defendant fails to object to the bill of particulars for three weeks after it is filed without giving reason for the delay.[1] An application verified by an attorney on information and belief is insufficient.[2] The application is properly denied where a rule of the court requires that it must be filed on or before the first day of the term and it appears that it was not filed until the trial was called, and it does not appear that the party had used reasonable diligence to procure counsel and the presence of witnesses.[3]

§ 5. Affidavits or showing.—An affidavit for a continuance because of absence of a witness is insufficient which simply avers that there is no other witness whose testimony can be so readily procured;[4] or where it does not set out facts as to which he will testify, or does not show that there are other witnesses available who will testify to the same facts.[5] Where the statements of an absent witness made in writing are admitted as his evidence on motion for a continuance because of his absence, they may be contradicted by an affidavit by the witness at another time and place, where it had been agreed between counsel that such contradiction might be made.[6] A continuance is properly granted in an action by a bank on the ground of the illness of the president and the necessity of his presence at the trial, though all the testimony which he is expected to give is not set out in the affidavit, if sufficient appears to show its materiality.[7]

§ 6. Hearing and order.—The affidavits of counsel, their admissions and their unsworn statements in open court, may be considered by the judge on a motion for a continuance.[8] A defendant in divorce, directed by the court to pay plaintiff a certain amount for counsel fees in order that she might prepare for trial and subpoena witnesses, is estopped by his failure to do so until time of the trial from opposing plaintiff's motion for a postponement.[9] Improper grant of a continuance by a justice, as against plaintiff, on the ground that defendant's attorney will be engaged in another court on the day of trial, will not affect a judgment for plaintiff.[10]

§ 7. Continuance by operation of law.—The general rule, usually enacted into the statutes, is that all undisposed of cases are continued to the next term without order.[11] If a motion for a new trial, set for a particular day by an order entered in term, is not heard or dismissed, it must be continued to a later day by express written order or it will go over to the next term, unless disposed of as provided by statute on notice in vacation.[12]

97. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Campbell (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 564.

98. American Hardwood Lumber Co. v. Nickey (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 331.

99. Civ. Code, § 328—McMahan v. Norick (Okl.) 69 Pac. 1047.

1. Schram v. Rudnick, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 821.

2. Rev. St. 1895, art. 1276—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 807.

3. Miles v. Ballantine (Neb.) 93 N. W. 708.

4. Abby v. Dexter (Colo. App.) 72 Pac. 892.

5. Diedrich v. Diedrich (Neb.) 94 N. W. 536.

6. Hutmacher v. Charleston Consol. Ry., Gas & Elec. Co., 63 S. C. 123.

7. Ida County Sav. Bank v. Seidensticker (Iowa) 92 N. W. 862.

8. Heyward v. Middleton, 65 S. C. 493.

9. Church v. Church, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 349.

10. Disque v. Herrington (Cal.) 72 Pac. 336.

11. 4 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 830 and cases cited. Motion to set aside a default was filed at the same term of entry of judgment, and was pending at the end of that term [1 Starr & C. Ann. St. 1896, p. 1160]—Donaldson v. Copeland, 201 Ill. 540.

12. Construction of Civ. Codes, §§ 4323, 4324—Atlanta, K. & N. Ry. Co. v. Strickland, 114 Ga. 998. See, also, Napier v. Heilker, 115 Ga. 168.

EDWIN C. CRAMPTON.

§ 1. Nature and formation of the contract.—It is intended here to treat only of the general principles of contracts, leaving more extended and particular treatment of the various kinds of contracts to the particular articles devoted to them.[1]

(§ 1) A. Formal requisites of contract.[2]—Where negotiations have proceeded by correspondence, one party may object that the contract is not complete on refusal of the other to sign the written agreement;[3] but a contract may be final, if complete in terms, though the parties intend that it should be reduced to formal writing,[4] or if all substantial terms have been settled, unless it has been clearly understood that formal execution was necessary.[5] It is not always necessary that both parties should sign the contract,[6] but it must be executed as to both.[7] The contract may be formed by correspondence.[8] Parol contracts for life insurance are valid and enforceable.[9]

1. Bonds, Negotiable Instruments, Deeds, Mortgages, Gambling Contracts, Building and Construction Contracts, Public Contracts, and many other titles.

The reader who desires to consult a general treatise will find in Hammon on Contracts an analysis identical with this in many particulars.

2. Execution of contracts by particular kinds of parties, see Husband and Wife, Corporations, States, United States, Counties, Municipal Corporations.

Sufficiency of execution of written contract for employment of school teacher under St. § 4445—Mingo v. Trustees of Colored Common-School Dist. No. A, 24 Ky. L. R. 288, 68 S. W. 483. A written contract for the hiring of convict labor in Nebraska must be executed by the warden of the penitentiary and approved by the governor and the board of public lands and buildings. (Comp. St. c. 86, § 16)—State v. Mortensen (Neb.) 95 N. W. 831. A formal vote or written entry of assent by directors of a corporation is not necessary to validity of a contract if all are present and actually assent—Indiana Bermudez Asphalt Co. v. Robinson, 29 Ind. App. 59.

3. Harbor Point Club-House Ass'n v. Young, 99 Ill. App. 292.

4. Lowrey v. Danforth, 95 Mo. App. 441.

5. Disken v. Herter, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 453.

6. A written agreement whereby a man agreed with a pregnant woman to make certain payments and support the child, in consideration of which she agreed to make no further claim on him was binding on her after she accepted the payments though she failed to sign it—Schnurr v. Quinn, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 70.

7. Arnold v. Scharbauer, 116 Fed. 492. The intention may be clearly shown by statements in negotiations—Hinote v. Brigman (Fla.) 33 So. 303. Where negotiations for a contract were carried on by correspondents, the offer was accepted, the acceptance acknowledged, and a final message calling for the contract transmitted, but both parties understood that the written contract was to be executed, the terms of which were not all settled, there was a failure of the contract and not a completed agreement, subject only to be reduced to writing—Brauer v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 407.

8. An agreement in a letter written by one party and accepted by the other reciting as between them that one was entitled to receive certain property in return for services rendered under a former contract, is a contract disposing of all the liability of the other party under the former contract—Spier

A signature to a church subscription by surname followed by the word "family" will bind the signer as his full name.[10]

(§ 1) B. Offer and acceptance.[11]—An offer may be withdrawn at any time before notice or knowledge of acceptance without liability to the party making the offer.[12] It is revocable until the opposite party has changed his condition and may be withdrawn without breach before that time.[13] A mere offer not assented to does not amount to a contract,[14] and the rule extends to an offer to modify a contract already made.[15] Acceptance of an offer completes a contract.[16] It must be unconditional and identical with the terms of the offer.[17] It may be shown by acts amounting to acquiescence in the offer.[18] If unconditional, it binds both parties though the offer contains a mistake as to terms.[19] Where one party makes a definite statement of terms which the other accepts in so many words, the contract is not unilateral.[20] An acceptance of "the within" contract which consists of two propositions in alternative form, one to sell, the other to buy land, will not apply to both so that part performance of one applies to the other.[21] Where, after certain negotiations during which an offer of two alternatives as to terms was made, one party accepted one of the alternatives and the other replied by asking for immediate performance, the offer and acceptance was complete.[22]

(§ 1) C. Reality of consent.—There can be no contract without the assent of the parties.[23] The minds of the parties must meet as to the terms of the contract.[24] One who has signed a contract, no fraud being practiced upon him, is conclusively

v. Hyde, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 151. Sufficiency of evidence of implied contract to pay for board of a relative—Danes v. Slitor, 118 Iowa, 81.

9. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co. v. Shaffer (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 566; Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. Urbansky, 24 Ky. L. R. 462, 68 S. W. 653; Fire Ins. Co. v. Sinsabaugh, 101 Ill. App. 55; Continental Ins. Co. v. Roller, 101 Ill. App. 77; Vining v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co., 89 Mo. App. 311.

10. Hodges v. Nalty, 113 Wis. 567.

11. Sufficiency of offer and acceptance in contract of sale—China & J. Trading Co. v. Davis (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 688; Johnson v. Corbett, 95 Md. 746.

12. Huber Mfg. Co. v. Smithgall, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 641.

13. Groomer v. McCully, 93 Mo. App. 544.

14. Van Vlissingen v. Manning, 105 Ill. App. 255.

15. J. K. Armsby Co. v. Blum, 137 Cal. 552, 70 Pac. 669.

16. Jones v. Wattles (Neb.) 92 N. W. 765.

17. Monk v. McDaniel, 116 Ga. 108. An offer by a mortgagee to receive less than the amount due in payment before maturity, is not accepted by an answer of the mortgagor that he would like to accept and he expected to have the means to pay in about two weeks, and was withdrawn, where before actual acceptance the mortgagee notified the mortgagor that he had sold the mortgage for its face—Thurber v. Smith, 25 R. I. 60.

18. Where after expiration of a contract, an option was given for continuation, defendant's retention and continued use of the property held under it thereafter changed the option to an executed contract in the absence of a different agreement—Bruckman v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 91 Mo. App. 454. Where one party to a verbal contract being requested by the other, prepared and signed a written document and sent it to the other who retained it without objection and acted in compliance with its terms, the latter is estopped from claiming that the writing did not properly express the contract between them—Grafeman Dairy Co. v. St. Louis Dairy Co., 96 Mo. App. 495. Where a creditor promptly notifies a third party of his acceptance of the third party's agreement to pay his debtor's debts in certain amounts, and thereafter brings a suit to enforce the terms of such agreement, he has accepted the contract—Taylor v. Ingersoll (Colo. App.) 71 Pac. 398.

19. This should be subject to the condition that the promisor must fail to show that the acceptor could not reasonably have supposed that the offer was the true intention of the promisor (See Hammon on Contracts, § 95)—Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Akron Cereal Co., 23 Ohio Circ. R. 516.

20. Warden Coal Washing Co. v. Meyer, 98 Ill. App. 640.

21. Bolton v. Huling, 195 Ill. 384.

22. Hartwig v. American Malting Co., 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 140.

23. Supplies furnished plaintiff's employes cannot be set up as a defense in an action for a balance due on contract if plaintiff's order for the supplies is not shown—Izzo v. Ludington, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 272.

24. As to the amount of goods covered by a contract of sale—Singer v. Grand Rapids Match Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 755. Where it is shown by the circumstances at the time of making a contract for the delivery of ice, that the party furnishing the ice, did not understand that deliveries were to be made to several dealers who had formed a corporation with the other party to the contract subsequent to its execution, but the other party insisted upon such compliance, there was no meeting of the minds between the parties—Consumers' Ice Co. v. E. Webster, Son & Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 350.

presumed to know and assent to its terms, though he failed to read it,[25] and cannot defend on the ground that he did not read it and was ignorant as to its contents;[26] mere ordinary business duties will not excuse negligence in failing to read a written contract at the time of signing so as to prevent the inference of negligence.[27] A settlement of an uncertain boundary line by an executed agreement between the parties is binding on them and their purchasers though it does not determine the true line.[28]

Capacity of parties.—An administrator or executor cannot bind the estate by contracts in his representative capacity.[29] The burden is on one seeking to avoid a contract for mental incapacity to prove it.[30] Old age or physical infirmity will not raise a presumption of want of capacity to make a contract.[31] Contracts between husband and wife may be enforced as other contracts.[32] That a man and his wife are aged illiterates not acquainted with the English language and the meaning of technical terms used in conveyances, and that for this reason they were the more easily imposed upon by their attorney in procuring a mortgage, does not show them to have been incapable of making a contract.[33] A contract made by one while drunk is not void but merely voidable at his election, though his intoxication be caused by the other party, and it may be ratified by him or by conduct inconsistent with rescission.[34]

Mistake.[35]—Where parties to a contract are mutually mistaken as to its terms and the mistake will work a manifest hardship on one to the advantage of the other, damages will not be allowed for breach of the contract,[36] though one of the parties was negligent in ascertaining its contents at execution.[37] One signing a contract under a mistake as to its terms, but giving no attention to the part of the contract concerning the matters as to which he was mistaken, there being no relation of trust or confidence between the parties excusing his lack of care, is bound by the contract as made.[38] If a patent mistake appears and the opposite party knew or should have known of it, the contract is incapable of enforcement.[39] A mistake accepted in good faith by the other party cannot prevent enforcement of the contract.[40] Where the scrivener has made a mistake in reducing a contract to writing, and it has been inadvertently signed by a party, it must be shown in what way the written differs from the oral contract.[41] Where a contract by mistake of both parties was executed on a blank form containing provisions different from those agreed upon, and was performed as intended for over a year, the attempt of one party to insist on the contract as executed was fraudulent.[42] Mere inability to read English will not enable a man of ordinary intelligence to urge that he did not understand a contract he had signed where he does not claim that unfair means were used.[43]

25. Johnston v. Covenant Mut. Life Ins. Co., 93 Mo. App. 580; Bostwick v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 246.

26. Catterlin v. Lusk (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1109. Mere ignorance of its contents will not amount to mistake—Bostwick v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 246.

27. Wilcox v. Tetherington, 103 Ill. App. 404.

28. Egan v. Light (Neb.) 93 N. W. 859.

29. Craig v. Anderson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 640; Hughes v. Treadaway, 116 Ga. 663. Sufficiency of evidence of mental capacity to contract—Lodge v. Hulings, 63 N. J. Eq. 159; Tuite v. Hart, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 619.

30. Tuite v. Hart, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 619.

31. Chadd v. Moser, 25 Utah, 369, 71 Pac. 870.

32. Bea v. People, 101 Ill. App. 132.

33. Hoffman v. Colgan, 25 Ky. L. R. 98, 74 S. W. 724.

34. Strickland v. Parlin & Orendorf Co. (Ga.) 44 S. E. 997.

35. In execution of note—Bailey v. Wood, 24 Ky. L. R. 801, 69 S. W. 1103.

36. Singer v. Grand Rapids Match Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 755.

37. Story v. Gammell (Neb.) 94 N. W. 982.

38. Wood v. Wack (Ind. App.) 67 N. E. 562; Bostwick v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 246.

39. Singer v. Grand Rapids Match Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 755.

40. In estimates on an offer to construct a building—Brown v. Levy (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 255.

41. Story v. Gammell (Neb.) 94 N. W. 982.

42. Home Sav. Ass'n v. Noblesville Monthly Meeting (Ind. App.) 64 N. E. 478.

Fraud and misrepresentation and undue influence.[44]—An innocent party will always be relieved from obligation resulting from fraud;[45] but, if the fraud consists in false representations, he must be actually deceived;[46] the misrepresentations must pertain to matters not open to inspection of both parties alike,[47] and must relate to present facts and not merely future possibilities or opinions,[48] and must have been relied upon by the party to whom they were made,[49] and it is insufficient that he was misled as to the meaning of the contract where nothing was concealed from him,[50] and if he executed the contract freely, with full understanding of his acts, the fraud is harmless.[51] To avail him, the deceit must be practiced at time of signing.[52] A contract will not be set aside because of a false representation that it embodies the verbal understanding of the parties;[53] it is only when knowledge is in possession of one party, and the other, by reason of absence or other sufficient cause, is entitled to, and does, rely upon false representations, that they avoid the contract.[54] Insolvency preventing fulfillment of a contract is insufficient to constitute fraud which will vitiate it.[55] If notes given in compliance with a previous valid contract amount to no more than a satisfaction thereof, fraud in procuring the maker to sign the notes, or drunkenness at the time of execution makes no defense.[56] Renewals of a contract induced by fraud are open to the same defense.[57]

In the absence of undue influence, transactions between attorney and client are held valid,[58] if a full and valid consideration appears.[59] In regard to a contract of employment they stand on an equal footing.[60]

43. Muller v. Kelly, 116 Fed. 545.

44. What constitutes fraudulent concealment or misrepresentation vitiating a contract—Vodrey Pottery Co. v. H. E. Horne Co. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 823; Burnett v. Hensley (Iowa) 92 N. W. 678. Fraud must always be proven; it will never be presumed—Edwards v. Story, 105 Ill. App. 433; Fivey v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 67 N. J. Law, 627.

45. Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Waring (Ga.) 44 S. E. 320; Indiana, D. & W. R. Co. v. Fowler, 201 Ill. 152; Bostwick v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 246.

46. Eccardt v. Eisenhauer, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 35.

47. Contract for dredging a channel where both parties could ascertain locality and depth of water—Rowland Lumber Co. v. Ross (Va.) 40 S. E. 922.

48. Representations as to future cost of manufacture of an article of merchandise, made to secure organization of a corporation and investment of capital, are as to future possibilities not present facts and though wrong will not avoid the contract—Macklem v. Fales (Mich.) 89 N. W. 581. Representations made by one party to a dredging contract after soundings in the harbor though not specific as to actual measurements, are of matters of fact not opinions so as to relieve the other party from performance where the statements are false and intentional and the other party being absent was entitled to rely upon them—Hingston v. L. P. & J. A. Smith Co. (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 294. False representations as to the quality of land, made by one of the parties to an exchange at the time of the exchange, are expressions of opinion rather than statements of fact which will not entitle the other party to avoid the contract—Tryce v. Dittus, 199 Ill. 189. A mere expression of opinion as representation on the making of a contract does not amount to a fraud, in the absence of any showing of fiduciary relations between the parties—Consumers' Brew. Co. v. Tobin, 19 App. D. C. 353.

49. Hale Elevator Co. v. Hale, 201 Ill. 131.

50. Nesbit v. Jencks, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 140.

51. Metcalf v. Draper, 98 Ill. App. 399. It is otherwise if he has been actually deceived—Story v. Gammell (Neb.) 94 N. W. 982.

52. Bostwick v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 246.

53. The other party must examine for himself—Johnston v. Covenant Mut. Life Ins. Co., 93 Mo. App. 580. One who has signed a written contract without investigating its contents, is estopped by negligence from asking relief from its obligation, though his signature is procured by fraud—Ferrell v. Ferrell (W. Va.) 44 S. E. 187.

54. There is no fraud invalidating a contract, where one of the parties on the false representation of the other that it embodies their verbal agreement, does not himself read it but takes it to a business man of experience and at his advice signs it—Magee v. Verity, 97 Mo. App. 486. One party who is at a distance from the subject matter of a contract is entitled to rely on representations of the other party as to its condition and is not bound by a contract resulting from intentional false representations on which he relied—Hingston v. L. P. & J. A. Smith Co. (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 294.

55. Stein v. Hill (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1107.

56. Strickland v. Parlin & Orendorf Co. (Ga.) 44 S. E. 997.

57. Adams v. Ashman, 203 Pa. 536.

58. A conveyance whereby an attorney received settlement for certain fees and loans made to his client is not to be presumed

Duress.[61]—A note given by the father to the mother of a bastard while he is under arrest on the charge is not void for duress.[62] A mere threat to give information in aid of a pending prosecution against another is not such duress as to avoid a note secured from him in settlement of claims.[63]

Ratification.—A nonenforceable contract may be ratified as well after as before suit;[64] but as to one under disability after removal thereof, the act must be voluntary and a duty which the party recognizes and acknowledges.[65] Though a contract might have been disaffirmed for good cause, failure to repudiate after knowledge of all facts and an attempt to carry out the provisions and enforce the contract, constitute a ratification thereof.[66] The negotiation of a bill of lading by shipper after receipt is a ratification or adoption of its terms as between him and the carriers operating to avoid a prior valid contract under which the goods were shipped and under which rights had vested and obligations accrued.[67]

§ 2. Consideration.[68] Necessity of consideration.—On a sale of lands the consideration must be fixed.[69] Permission given by the county commissioners' court to connect with the county sewer not founded upon consideration is only a revocable license and not an act of court nor a contract.[70] An agreement to yield a claim to lands in event of winning a pending action is void where the other party neither incurs expense nor forbears suit.[71]

Validity of consideration.—There must be a valuable consideration for modification or extinguishment of an existing contract.[72] There must be a valid consideration.[73] An agreement to marry is a valid consideration for a transfer of property.[74] A note based on a contract void as against public policy is without consideration.[75] A bond to perform a contract under a void ordinance granting an exclusive franchise is invalid as to consideration.[76] A contract containing a recital of one dollar as consideration is valid, though the amount is not actually paid, since it creates an obligation which may be enforced by the other party.[77]

What constitutes a consideration in general.—A contract whereby a railroad superintendent agreed to employ a workman for life as flagman at a certain salary, in consideration of a release of damages for injuries resulting from the neglifraudulent because of the relation of the parties—Lindt v. Linder, 117 Iowa, 110.

59. Tippett v. Brooks (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 512.

60. Clifford v. Braun, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 432.

61. Definition of duress—Batavian Bank v. North, 114 Wis. 637.

62. Jones v. Peterson, 117 Ga. 58.

63. Barger v. Farnham (Mich.) 90 N. W. 281.

64, 65. Snyder v. Gericke (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 377.

66. University of Virginia v. Snyder (Va.) 42 S. E. 337. Where one of two judgment creditors having a lien on the interest of one of three joint tenants, knows that the other has been paid the amount of his judgment by the purchaser at a partition sale, and allows a settlement to be made by her husband with the purchaser, such settlement amounts to a ratification by her of the retention of the land by the purchaser—Turner v. Baldwin, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 639.

67. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 873.

68. As to consideration, see Brown v. Ohio Nat. Bank, 18 App. D. C. 598.

69. Pulford v. Dimmick, 107 La. 403.

70. Fayette County v. Krause (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 51.

71. East Omaha Land Co. v. Hanson, 117 Iowa, 96.

72. Gunby v. Drew (Fla.) 34 So. 305. Logging contract—Kerslake v. McInnis, 113 Wis. 659. Modification due to failure of consideration of original contract—Jackson v. Helmer, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 134. An agreement to cancel notes without consideration is unenforceable—Templeton v. Butler (Wis.) 94 N. W. 306. See, also, Accord and Satisfaction, ante, p. 9.

73. Contract for carriage of express limiting liability of company—Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 606. A condition in a shipping contract limiting the carrier's liability, in certain respects, may be valid where supported by reduced freight rate—Mears v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 75 Conn. 171. A surrender by a widow of all claim to the personal effects of her husband is a valid consideration for a release of her liability for claims of creditors—Gunther v. Gunther, 181 Mass. 217.

74. In re Miller's Estate, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 473.

75. Hubbard v. Freiburger (Mich.) 94 N. W. 727.

76. Town of Kirkwood v. Meramec Highlands Co., 94 Mo. App. 637.

77. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Harris (Ga.) 44 S. E. 885.

gence of the railroad company, is not invalid as unreasonable.[78] Several considerations may exist for one promise and several promises may be supported by one consideration.[79] Mere motives cannot, of themselves, constitute a sufficient consideration for a promise.[80] It may consist in the relation of the parties.[81] Payment for corporate stock is a consideration for a promise to pay a certain annual dividend, if the corporation failed to pay it.[82] A promise to pay an employer a certain amount for release of another from a contract of service is founded on a consideration.[83]

Mutual promises.—An attempted assignment of a statutory right to redeem from a foreclosure sale constitutes no consideration for the contract, the right being personal to the owner.[84] Mutual and concurrent promises constitute a valuable consideration for each other,[85] though one is executory,[86] but not unless there is mutuality of engagement or obligation, or the party not bound has fully performed.[87]

Forbearance or compromise.—A consideration may consist in a forbearance to enforce rights or a relinquishment of rights or advantages gained by one or both of the parties,[88] or a surrender of conditions whereby one party would be preju-

78. Usher v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 422.

79. Hammon on Contracts, p. 635.

80. Hammon on Contracts, p. 635; Philpot v. Gruninger, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 570.

81. The relation of husband and wife is a consideration for a conveyance of land—La Fleure v. Seivert, 98 Ill. App. 234; Hammon on Contracts, § 329.

82. Crook v. Scott, 174 N. Y. 520.

83. Person wishing to marry woman employe pays for her release—Holz v. Hanson, 115 Wis. 236.

84. Terry v. Allen, 132 Ala. 657.

85. Steele v. Johnson, 96 Mo. App. 147; Cold Blast Transp. Co. v. Kansas City Bolt & Nut Co. (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 77. A mutual promise between co-sureties on a note, who have contributed equally to its payment, to divide equally amounts collected thereon from the maker is sufficient—Cramer v. Redman (Wyo.) 68 Pac. 1003. A contract whereby a manufacturer agreed to buy all his raw material of a certain sort for a certain period from another at a certain price which the other agreed to furnish as ordered, it being agreed that the quantity used was understood to be about a certain amount, but that the buyer should have the right to demand twice as much is founded upon a good consideration, since it imposes on both parties an obligation to perform—Loudenback Fertilizer Co. v. Tennessee Phosphate Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 298.

86. Chenoweth v. Pacific Exp. Co., 93 Mo. App. 185.

87. A promise that a salesman should have the exclusive right to sell goods for a certain company in a certain territory and that the company would fill all his orders, is without consideration, where he did not agree to sell their goods or purchase or order any of the goods or render any counter services—Hirschhorn v. Nelden-Judson Drug Co. (Utah) 72 Pac. 386. A contract by the county commissioners to make a public improvement in consideration of a promise made by certain persons to contribute to the cost, cannot be enforced against the promisors because it cannot be enforced against the commissioners, but if fully performed on the part of the latter, it is binding against the promisors and may be so enforced—Hassenzahl v. Bevins, 24 Ohio Circ. R. 173.

88. Forbearance to bring or continue suit against the other party—Pollak v. Billing, 131 Ala. 519; Weilage v. Abbott (Neb.) 90 N. W. 1128; Waters v. White, 75 Conn. 88; McMicken v. Safford, 197 Ill. 540. Agreement to pay a certain sum to another for forbearance in contesting a will—Clark v. Lyons, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 516. A forbearance to sue on a claim constitutes a sufficient consideration for a contract—Chenoweth v. Pacific Exp. Co., 93 Mo. App. 185. Forbearance on an overdue claim for a reasonable time, is a sufficient consideration for a promise by a third person to pay it—German Sav. Bank v. Brodsky, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 100. An agreement not to sue on a debt presently is sufficient consideration for waiver of limitations by the debtor—Pollak v. Billing, 131 Ala. 519. An agreement by a mortgagee to receive less than the amount due in full payment, if the mortgagor will satisfy the mortgage before maturity is based on sufficient consideration—Thurber v. Smith, 25 R. I. 60. A note given by the father to the mother of a bastard in settlement of prosecution is sufficient as to consideration both legal and moral—Jones v. Peterson, 117 Ga. 58. Release of a stock certificate already cancelled in effect, for a credit on a debt already paid—Western Loan & Sav. Co. v. Desky, 24 Utah. 347, 68 Pac. 141. If notes are given in consideration of the cancellation of certain other notes and the discontinuance of actions thereon, the payment of such notes cannot be resisted because formal discontinuance of the actions is not entered before they had been abandoned—West v. Banigan, 172 N. Y. 622. An agreement by certain defendants to assist plaintiff in securing judgment as against the remaining defendants, is sufficient consideration for an agreement by plaintiff not to levy execution against their property—Crook v. Lipscomb (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 993. An agreement to forbear from enforcement of a claim for taxes paid in consideration of their payment by another cannot be construed to be indefinite as to time so as to amount to insufficiency of consideration—diced if obligations of the other were not performed.[89] Refraining from securing a divorce, and resumption of relations with the husband, is sufficient consideration for his agreement to convey property to the children.[90] The settlement or compromise of a dispute or controversy is sufficient as a consideration.[91] A mutual submission to arbitration is a sufficient consideration for a note for the award of arbitrators.[92] The right of other creditors to an equitable enforcement of a scheme to compromise the entire indebtedness of a county is sufficient to make it binding.[93]

Duty already imposed by law or contract.—A promise to do that which the promisor is already legally bound to do does not amount to legal consideration for promise of another.[94] An agreement with a servant on his wrongful discharge that wages due will be accepted as satisfaction of all damages is without consideration.[95]

Consideration for subscriptions.—A note payable at the maker's death to a

Blumenthal v. Tibbits (Ind.) 66 N. E. 159. The relinquishment of advantages and the risks of future costs and litigation is a sufficient consideration given by a county court in condemnation proceedings to open a highway for the promise of the landowner to pay the costs on dismissal—County Court v. Hall, 51 W. Va. 269. A surrender of claims under a contract of agency, amounts to a sufficient consideration for a note given to an agent by his principal in settlement, though the agreement under which it was given provided that the agent might terminate it after a certain period—Barger v. Farnham (Mich.) 90 N. W. 281. Where rights of a party under a contract for the sale of land had expired, but he still held certain equities in land, a later agreement between the parties that his rights as vendee should cease at the end of a year, unless he made certain payment and a promise by him to surrender all right to damages arising from the original contracts and to pay the expense of appraisal by trustees, constituted a sufficient consideration for the new agreement—Lamprey v. St. Paul & C. Ry. Co. (Minn.) 94 N. W. 555. A party to a contract may be held to his promise not only because of a consideration passing to him therefor but by the fact that the other party, in reliance on such promise, has so done or omitted to do things that he would suffer and be injured if the promise was withdrawn. Agreement for settlement of debt by delivery of deeds and transfers of property placed in escrow of which part consideration was forbearance from hostile proceedings to enforce collection of the debt thereby losing advantage to the creditors and resulting in expense to them—Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Jones, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 534. Refraining from securing a divorce by a wife and resumption of relations with her husband is sufficient consideration for his agreement to convey property to their children—Moayon v. Moayon, 24 Ky. L. R. 1641, 72 S. W. 33, 60 L. R. A. 415. Consult the title Accord and Satisfaction, ante, p. 9.

89. Where by a verbal promise one person induced another to convey land to a townsite in alternate blocks so as to accommodate his interest, thereby placing themselves in a position where they would be greatly prejudiced if the contract requiring him to convey property to them was not in force, there was a valid and sufficient consideration for his promise—McCarty v. May (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 804. Where prior to his death a decedent induced parties to part with their title to land on a promise to become liable for full value of the land, the debt became a valid claim against his estate and constituted sufficient consideration for an agreement with the administratrix to dismiss a suit to enforce such claim if she would apply for an order of sale of the property and pay the debt from the proceeds—McCarty v. May (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 804. Abandonment by one of a valid enforceable lien on property, and of possession of the property under such lien, in order to allow another to attach the property, is a sufficient consideration to support the bonds executed by the agent of the latter as surety, binding him to pay the amount of the lien—Davis, Belau & Co. v. National Surety Co. (Cal.) 72 Pac. 1001.

90. Moayon v. Moayon, 24 Ky. L. R. 1641, 72 S. W. 33, 60 L. R. A. 415.

91. Settlement of dispute as to liability for stolen property suffices to support a promise to pay for work done—Innes v. Ryan, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 806. Of a dispute concerning liability for support of a pauper—Town of Brandon v. Jackson, 74 Vt. 78.

92. Downing v. Lee (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 721.

93. Compromise with bond holders—Dyer v. Muhlenberg Company (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 586.

94. Reeves Pulley Co. v. Jewell Belting Co., 102 Ill. App. 375; Allen v. Plasmeyere (Neb.) 90 N. W. 1125; Wendling v. Snyder, 30 Ind. App. 330; Sommers v. Myers (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 812. Agreement to pay additional compensation for services which the promisor was already legally bound to give under an old contract—Alaska Packers' Ass'n v. Domenico (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 99. An agreement by a surety to substitute his individual note for one on which he was surety, is insufficient as consideration, it being no more than his legal duty—Barringer v. Ryder (Iowa) 93 N. W. 56. A promise by an owner to pay a contractor for work as extra which was already included in his contract is without consideration—Wear Bros. v. Schmelzer, 92 Mo. App. 314.

95. Walston v. F. D. Calkins Co. (Iowa) 93 N. W. 49.

preacher to aid the spread of a religious doctrine in which the maker believed is founded on sufficient consideration, where the preacher continues the work.[96] A subscription in writing to a church, made by deceased person in her lifetime, is without sufficient consideration to be made enforceable, though it appears by the oral evidence that she promised to pay the instalments, where no other subscriptions were made on the faith of it, nor was the construction of the church begun.[97] A note given by a decedent in his lifetime to an incorporated charitable institution payable at a future date for the purpose of forming, with other contributions, a permanent endowment fund, which was accepted by the directors of the institution who with the maker's knowledge began work in reliance on the subscriptions, is founded on a sufficient consideration.[98]

Effect of change, modification, or substitution of new contract.—Surrender of a note is a good consideration for a new note,[99] and will bind a third person as surety on the new note.[1] A subsequent oral agreement without new consideration can have no effect on a written lease.[2] No consideration other than release from their respective obligations is necessary to abrogation of a mutually executory contract by agreement of the parties.[3] A mutual release from an old contract after partial completion owing to a change in plans is sufficiently supported by an agreement by one party to work without delay and by the other party to pay for the work under both contracts.[4] Where one party to a contract interfered with its performance in certain particulars, a modification to obviate difficulty is founded on a sufficient consideration;[5] and likewise modification of a contract made necessary by partial failure of consideration.[6] A new consideration is not necessary to a change in the terms of a written contract by parol if it is executory and there has been no breach; if however the agreement is within the statute of frauds the modification must be executed or follow on a new consideration.[7] The want of a new consideration for a parol modification of a contract is obviated by performance.[8] Where extra work was already covered by his contract, a contractor cannot enforce a subsequent promise by the owner for additional compensation for such work.[9] Where a written contract failed because of refusal of one of the parties to execute, a subsequent parol agreement by the remainder of the parties that the contract should stand without him is not binding unless founded upon a new and independent consideration.[10] A second contract, identical with the first except that it provides for additional compensation for the same services, is in so far without consideration and void, especially where the employer is compelled by stress of circumstances to yield to the demand for its execution.[11] A subsequent express promise by a debtor to reimburse another for payment of his debt owing to a third person without his request or obligation is without consideration;[12] likewise, a guaranty by a vendor of land after the contract of sale was completed, that a railroad would be built to a neighboring town in two years or he would re-

96. Woodworth v. Veitch, 29 Ind. App. 589.
97. Lippincott's Estate, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 214.
98. Albert Lea College v. Brown's Estate (Minn.) 93 N. W. 672.
99. Siemans & H. Elec. Co. v. Ten Broek, 97 Mo. App. 173.
1. Stroud v. Thomas (Cal.) 72 Pac. 1008.
2. Spota v. Hayes, 36 Misc. (N. Y.) 532.
3. Barrie v. King, 105 Ill. App. 426.
4. Anderson v. McDonald (Wash.) 71 Pac. 1037.
5. Logging contract—Kerslake v. McInnis, 113 Wis. 659.
6. Jackson v. Helmer, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 134.
7. Bowman v. Wright (Neb.) 91 N. W. 580.
8. Jackson v. Helmer, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 134.
9. Wear Bros. v. Schmelzer, 92 Mo. App. 314.
10. Arnold v. Scharbauer, 118 Fed. 1008.
11. Contract for navigation of vessel demanded by seaman in the midst of the voyage—Alaska Packers' Ass'n v. Domenico (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 99.
12. Thomson v. Thomson, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 178.

pay the purchase money and receive a reconveyance;[13] and a contract made subsequent to a contract of sale of a certain business for execution of another instrument embodying a promise not to re-engage in the same business.[14]

Adequacy of consideration.[15]—There must be a sufficient consideration.[16]

13. Pence v. Adams, 116 Iowa, 462.

14. Zanturjian v. Boornazian (R. I.) 55 Atl. 199.

15. See, also, 39 Am. St. Rep. 743; 81 Am. St. Rep. 664.

16. Sufficiency of consideration in particular contracts.—Contract for sale of barley—Hartwig v. American Malting Co., 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 140. Written contract for assistance in formation of corporation—Mendel v. Pickrell, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 813. Agreement for destruction of notes as between holder and heirs of maker—Lodge v. Hulings, 63 N. J. Eq. 159. For agreement of father to support bastard—Beach v. Voegtlen, 68 N. J. Law, 472; Sponable v. Owens, 92 Mo. App. 174. Agreement between co-sureties for collection on a note paid by them for the maker—Cramer v. Redman (Wyo.) 68 Pac. 1003. Conveyance of lands—Perkins v. Perkins, 181 Mass. 401. Agreement of husband not to change or revoke his will leaving his property to his wife—Kine v. Farrell, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 219. A written contract to convey lands is invalid where it contains no terms whereby the owners could enforce payment for their lands—Arnold v. Scharbauer, 116 Fed. 492. Agreement to yield claim to lands—East Omaha Land Co. v. Hanson, 117 Iowa, 96. A promise to supply materials to a contractor is sufficiently supported by the owner's promise to withhold payment from contractor to cover such materials—Roussel v. Mathews, 171 N. Y. 634. A sale of an interest in an estate by a woman of full age and competency for less than half its value will not be set aside at suit of her legatee for inadequacy of consideration—Hagan v. Ward, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 367. An agreement by commissioners of a county in Ohio with landowners in Michigan regarding a subscription for improvement of a road extending into both states where the land is contiguous and specially benefited, is founded on a valuable consideration—Hassenzahl v. Bevins, 24 Ohio Circ. R. 173. Contract by a builder to repair a heating system in a public building because of injuries resulting from his use of the system in doing work on the building—McClure v. Lorain County Com'rs, 24 Ohio Circ. R. 72. A promise by a railroad company to provide a depot within a mile and a half of plaintiff's land, was sufficient consideration for his donation of a right of way—Cadiz R. Co. v. Roach, 24 Ky. L. R. 1761, 72 S. W. 280. Contract by members of a corporation providing for payment of profits accruing from the lease of a building constructed by the corporation on a loan to two of the stockholders—Maginn v. Lancaster (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 368. An accepted offer to furnish such goods as another may need during a limited time in an established business is mutual and sufficient as to consideration—Cold Blast Transp. Co. v. Kansas City Bolt & Nut Co. (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 77. A contract for payment of a certain amount to a railroad company after the road is built to a certain point is completed as to consideration when the road is so built—Los Angeles Traction Co. v. Wilshire, 135 Cal. 654, 67 Pac. 1086. Improvement of land by a daughter in reliance on a promise by her father to convey it to her is a sufficient consideration therefor—Horner v. McConnell, 158 Ind. 280. Since a wife is presumed to suffer damages by a recovery against her husband, a contract with her for conveyance of dower right in order to prevent a recovery of penalty against her husband for failure to convey land sold because of wife's refusal to join is not without consideration —Goldstein v. Curtis, 63 N. J. Eq. 454. Where one party conveyed to another as trustee certain real estate, and part of the consideration was to be paid in stock of a corporation to be afterward organized, the second party agreeing to furnish the first a purchaser for the stock at par within a certain time from date if he desired to sell, a subsequent agreement for conveyance of other realty alleged to have been purchased by first party with money furnished by the second in consideration of certain amount in cash, in place of the stock included in the first contract and of an exclusive right in the land conveyed, is based on sufficient consideration—Hazen v. Colossal Cavern Co. (Ky.) 76 S. W. 116. Where stockholders of two corporations agree to a consolidation, one to receive all the property of the other, to issue stocks and bonds for its payment, to assume all debts of the other, and to issue and set aside a certain amount of bonds to retire bonds of the absorbed corporation, the surplus of such issue of bonds to be divided between existing stockholders of the two corporations, there was a valuable consideration for the disposition of the surplus incorporated in a resolution of the absorbing corporation in conformity of the agreement—Read v. Citizens' St. R. Co. (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1056. A recognition of the right of the payee of a note to certain rents, and an agreement to pay them according to its terms, amount to a sufficient consideration for the note—Smith v. McLennan, 101 Ill. App. 196. A change in his plans by a client as to litigation to be carried on by his attorney for a fee contingent on success is sufficient consideration to support a contract with the attorney for reasonable compensation regardless of results—Jones v. Haines, 117 Iowa, 80. Aid in securing a contract for work to a firm of architects, is sufficient consideration for payment by the firm of part of their commissions—Lord v. Hull, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 194. A provision in a contract for the sale of lands for a reconveyance to the vendor for a certain sum, whenever the purchaser concludes to re-sell is sufficiently supported by the consideration in the original conveyance—Peterson v. Chase, 115 Wis. 239. Where a note is given by a trustee to a creditor of the trust in settlement of a judgment remaining unsatisfied of record, which did not exceed the amount due the creditor for the purpose of preventing further proceedings, an acceptance is founded on a sufficient consideration—Stitzer v. Whittaker (Neb.) 91 N. W. 713. Accepted orders for goods under contracts void for failure of

Where children take property of their parents subject to the debts of the father and give orders to the executors to pay claims of their father's creditors, such orders were not without consideration.[17] An insolvent's agreement with one of his creditors, consenting to the appointment of a receiver in consideration of the creditor's agreement, if appointed, to perform his duties without compensation is founded upon a sufficient consideration.[18] Permission by a city to a company to use land for a cemetery under the supervision of the city sexton in the presence of reasonable and valid ordinances prohibiting interment within certain limits of the city is sufficient consideration for an agreement of the company to limit the prices of burial lots.[19] An assumption of payment of a debt of a life tenant by a remainderman on condition that the life tenant pay interest as long as the remainderman lives is supported by a sufficient consideration.[20] A change in his plans by a client as to litigation to be carried on by his attorney for a fee contingent on success is sufficient consideration to support a contract with the attorney for reasonable compensation regardless of results.[21] The payment to an employe leaving service to engage in a competing business of a sum in excess of that to which he would have been entitled is sufficient consideration for an agreement by him not to enter into a competing business or disclose the secret processes of his employer.[22] The agreement of a third person to pay a judgment creditor a certain amount is sufficient consideration for his agreement to satisfy the judgment and convey lands purchased by him at execution thereunder for more than sufficient to satisfy it.[23] Where a husband and wife sold certain property in a mercantile corporation owned by the wife and certain realty owned by both under a contract providing that neither would engage in that business in the same village while the corporation continued in business is sufficient as to consideration with regard to the husband, since it included land in which he was interested.[24] Where nothing appears to be due the state from the surety on a bond of a deputy officer consideration, amount to sales of the goods on the terms of the contracts; but they do not validate the agreement as to articles which the one refuses to purchase or the other refuses to sell or deliver under the contract since neither party is bound to take or deliver any amount or quantity of these articles thereunder—Cold Blast Transp. Co. v. Kansas City Bolt & Nut Co. (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 77.

Consideration for promissory note.—Negotiable instruments are presumed to be based on a consideration and the holder need not prove that one exists—Hammon on Contracts, p. 631. Surrender of a note is a good consideration for making another—Siemans & H. Elec. Co. v. Ten Broek, 97 Mo. App. 173. Note for assignment of interest in mining lease—C. H. Brown Banking Co. v. Fink, 95 Mo. App. 257. A note given to an owner of standing trees by a trespasser who had removed them is supported by a sufficient consideration—Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Holmes (Minn.) 93 N. W. 606. The signature of a surety on a note after signature by the principal debtors which was procured under an agreement by the latter with the payee to obtain the surety's signature if the note would be accepted in satisfaction of a pre-existing debt did not require any additional consideration, since his execution took effect as if coincident with the execution by the makers—Stroud v. Thomas (Cal.) 72 Pac. 1008. Cancellation of an old note on delivery of a new one for the same debt is sufficient consideration to bind a third person as surety on the latter note—Stroud v. Thomas (Cal.) 72 Pac. 1008. A note executed by two persons jointly in renewal of a former note made by both, but as to which, one of them had been released, is without consideration as to him—Farmers' & M. Bank v. Hawn, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 640. Payment of overdue interest on a note past due is not a sufficient consideration for an agreement to extend time of payment on the note—Stroud v. Thomas (Cal.) 72 Pac. 1008. A note executed by two persons jointly in renewal of a former note is without consideration as to one who had been released from the former note—Farmers' & M. Bank v. Hawn, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 640.

Sufficiency of consideration to enable specific performance.—$32 per acre for land worth $35 is not such inadequate consideration as will prevent specific performance—Townsend v. Blanchard, 117 Iowa, 36.

17. Drye v. Cunningham, Medley & Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 2500, 74 S. W. 272.

18. Polk v. Johnson (Ind.) 66 N. E. 752.

19. City of Austin v. Austin City Cemetery Ass'n (Tex.) 73 S. W. 525.

20. Roberts v. Lamberton (Wis.) 94 N. W. 650.

21. Jones v. Haines, 117 Iowa, 80.

22. S. Jarvis Adams Co. v. Knapp (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 34.

23. Farmer v. Sellers (Ala.) 33 So. 829.

24. Kronschnabel-Smith Co. v. Kronschnabel, 87 Minn. 230.

except from representations of his superior officer, a contract by the latter for release of the surety in consideration of a note is nevertheless not without consideration.[25] An agreement entered into at the time of a sale of goods between the purchaser, the seller and the agent making the sale for the seller, that the purchaser and the seller would pay commission to him, is not supported by a consideration binding on the purchaser, though the services be regarded as rendered to the parties jointly.[26] Where there was a novation by giving of a note from one party to another as substitution for a debt due from a third person, an executory agreement by the party receiving the note to take another from the party giving it for the correct amount under a provision that it was never to become due unless the original debtor completed a contract with the maker was unenforceable as being without consideration to the holder of the note.[27] A contract by a woman of full years and mentally competent to procure money to support an extravagant life, whereby she transferred her interest in the estate which was in dispute for less than half of what the purchaser realized under the contract, will not be set aside for inadequacy of consideration at the suit of the legatee in a small amount under her will.[28] An agreement to convey land to a child, in consideration of being allowed to name it, cannot be held without consideration because the promisor owned no land at the time, where after the child was named he bought a particular tract of land, and, by his declarations and actions, showed that he intended to apply it to fulfillment of his contract.[29]

Past consideration.—A contract cannot depend upon a past consideration,[30] though a promise for future payment is not without consideration because for past services.[31] Acts voluntarily done cannot operate as consideration in a subsequently executed contract,[32] nor obligations already owing under a previous contract;[33] however, voluntary payment of a judgment recovered against another by a third person is sufficient consideration for a subsequent promise of the judgment debtor for repayment.[34] The consideration of a former contract which has been discharged is insufficient.[35] The consideration may consist in a pre-existing debt,[36] but pay-

25. Culver v. Caldwell (Ala.) 34 So. 13.

26. Wulff v. Lindsay (Ariz.) 71 Pac. 963.

27. Dillard v. Dillard (Ga.) 44 S. E. 885.

28. Hagan v. Ward, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 1128.

29. Daily v. Minnick, 117 Iowa, 563.

30. Promise of landlord during lease to make repairs—Roehrs v. Timmons, 28 Ind. App. 578. A subsequent oral agreement without new consideration can have no effect on a written lease—Spota v. Hayes, 36 Misc. (N. Y.) 532. A second contract for navigation of a vessel demanded in the midst of the voyage, identical with the first except that it provides for additional compensation, is in so far without consideration and void especially where the party is compelled by stress of circumstances to execute it—Alaska Packers' Ass'n v. Domenico (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 99. Where a contract failed because of refusal of one party to execute, a subsequent parol agreement by the remainder of the parties that the contract should stand without him is not binding unless founded on a new and independent consideration—Arnold v. Scharbauer, 118 Fed. 1008.

31. Dupignac v. Bernstrom, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 677.

32. Nesbit v. Jencks, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 140. Sufficiency of consideration for contract by broker to sell lands for commissions made after transaction had been completed—Perkins v. Smith, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 630. A promise by contractors after a sub-contractor had performed extra work without his contract, to pay him for such work, is without consideration—Majory v. Schubert, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 633.

33. Wendling v. Snyder, 30 Ind. App. 330; Sommers v. Myers (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 812. Where work for which a contractor claimed extra pay, was clearly provided for in the contract between the parties, the owner's promise for such pay was without consideration and contractor could not recover—Wear Bros. v. Schmelzer, 92 Mo. App. 314.

34. Wright v. Farmers' Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 103.

35. New contract for navigation of vessel demanded by seamen in midst of voyage—Alaska Packers' Ass'n v. Domenico (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 99. Consideration of former contract after failure in execution as consideration for new contract—Arnold v. Scharbauer, 118 Fed. 1008. Additional guaranty after completion of contract for sale of land—Pence v. Adams, 116 Iowa, 462. Contract in restraint of trade subsequent to contract for sale of business—Zanturjian v. Boornazian (R. I.) 55 Atl. 199. A note executed by two persons jointly in renewal of a former note made by both, but as to which, one of them had been released, is without consideration ment of overdue interest on a note past due will not suffice for an agreement to extend the time of payment.[37] If the exact amount due between parties was not determined, a subsequent agreement for full satisfaction is founded upon a sufficient consideration.[38] A new consideration is not necessary to a change in the terms of a written contract by parol if it is executory and there has been no breach; if however the agreement is within the statute of frauds the modification must be executed or follow on a new consideration.[39]

Sufficiency of expression of consideration; terms as to consideration construed.—The value of consideration must not be left wholly in the will of the party from whom it comes.[40] A contract reciting that it was made for value received will be held to be founded on a good consideration unless the contrary is proven.[41] Where a mercantile company agreed to use electric service in its store for a year "in consideration of which, and of payment by the 10th of the month," a certain discount was to be allowed, the consideration for the discount was the agreement to use the service for a year.[42] A written agreement to convey certain realty at the option of the other party failing to show that he gives anything in return for the option is without consideration and is a mere offer which may be withdrawn at choice of the maker.[43]

Want or failure of consideration.[44]—Conditions existing when a contract is made must determine whether or not it rests upon a valuable consideration and it cannot be avoided because it subsequently transpires that the thing sought to be obtained is of no value, unless fraud or imposition appears.[45] Where the consideration for a contract was dependent upon the re-organization of a corporation and existence of a surplus thereafter, the contract was nudum pactum and unenforceable.[46] A mortgage given between husband and wife after marriage to secure a loan made before marriage is void as for want of consideration, the debt being extinguished by marriage.[47] The sale of a future crop is void for want of consideration if the crop fails, though if only the hope of the crop is sold it is otherwise.[48] If the maker of a note is misled as to the identity of a bond to which his name is attached and in liquidation of his liability upon which the note was given, it is without consideration.[49] A note given on conveyance of land under an agreement that the maker should sell the land for the payee, failing in which, the land was to be reconveyed, was invalid for want of consideration on a failure to sell the land.[50] Where the consideration for a discount to be allowed on a contract was the promise of the other party to continue the contract for a year, a failure in such regard will warrant a recovery of all discounts allowed though payments have been promptly made.[51] Under a law making it a misdemeanor for an

as to him—Farmers' & M. Bank v. Hawn, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 640.

36. Hibernia Nat. Bank v. Sarah Planting & Refining Co., 107 La. 650.

37. Stroud v. Thomas (Cal.) 72 Pac. 1008.

38. Spier v. Hyde, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 151.

39. Bowman v. Wright (Neb.) 91 N. W. 580.

40. Contract for future delivery of personalty leaving quantity entirely in choice of seller—Cold Blast Transp. Co. v. Kansas City Bolt & Nut Co. (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 77. Contract for sale of goods leaving quantity dependent on want or will of one party—City of Ft. Scott v. W. G. Eads Brokerage Co. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 51.

41. McDonough v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 625.

42. Missouri Edison Elec. Co. v. M. J. Steinberg Hat & Fur Co., 94 Mo. App. 543.

43. Tidball v. Challburg (Neb.) 93 N. W. 679.

44. Zanturgian v. Boornazian (R. I.) 55 Atl. 199; Thomson v. Thomson, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 178; Pence v. Adams, 116 Iowa, 462. Failure of consideration for bond to perform a contract under an ordinance because of invalidity of the ordinance as granting an exclusive franchise—Town of Kirkwood v. Meramec Highlands Co., 94 Mo. App. 637.

45. Casserleigh v. Wood (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 308.

46. Patton v. Wells (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 337.

47. Dillon v. Dillon, 24 Ky. L. R. 781, 69 S. W. 1099.

48. The price must be restored under the first conditions—Losecco v. Gregory, 108 La. 648.

49. Terrill v. Tillison (Vt.) 54 Atl. 187.

50. Holmes v. Farris, 97 Mo. App. 305.

51. Missouri Edison Elec. Co. v. M. J. Steinberg Hat & Fur Co., 94 Mo. App. 543.

insurance agent to offer a rebate of premium for special favor to secure an insurance, it is a defense of want of consideration to an action by such an agent on a premium note which he had paid to the company that he had induced the insured to take the insurance by giving him the benefit of the commission of one-half of the premium belonging to the agent and taking his note for the remainder.[52] Lesion is the injury resulting to one who has not received a full equivalent for what he has given in a commutative contract.[53] Irresponsibility of the maker of a note will not cause failure of consideration as to a bona fide purchaser thereof.[54] Where land is sold for cash on condition that a draft for the price is paid, failure to meet the draft is a failure of consideration.[55] A failure of consideration through neglect or refusal of plaintiff to deliver goods defeats liability to the payee on notes given for the goods.[56] Where a contract is one of bargain and sale of property and securities, binding the seller to convey as good a title as he then had, and he loses title to the property and part of the securities, such loss constitutes a partial failure of consideration.[57] Where a petition to set aside an instrument as without consideration shows that plaintiff received stock in a corporation organized under the conditions of the contract and was employed as superintendent of the business at a salary, no failure of consideration is shown.[58] One who was drilling a well under a contract for a certain price is not bound by consent to perform part of the work at his own risk or to take a less amount without a consideration for the promise.[59] Where a contract was made to pay a royalty for the exclusive privilege of running an observation wheel at a pleasure resort, a subsequent agreement that further royalties should be paid unless the persons running the wheel were able to stop the operation of other wheels which interfered with their business was without consideration and constituted no defense to an action for royalties accrued.[60]

Right to urge want or failure of consideration.—One who has repudiated his contract after partial performance by the other is estopped from denying his obligation for want of consideration.[61] Giving a note for building materials will not estop the owner from pleading failure of consideration in that materials were defective, unless he had full knowledge of the defects which were patent.[62]

§ 3. Validity of contract.[63] A. General principles determining validity.[64]—A contract is to be held invalid only when it will admit of no other construction.[65] If a clause is rendered ambiguous by an invalid proviso, such a construction will be given the whole contract as will render it legal and operative.[66] The existence of fiduciary relations will render the contract subject to closer scrutiny.[67] It is not ipso

52. Comp. Laws, § 7219—Heffron v. Daly (Mich.) 95 N. W. 714.
53. Smart v. Bibbins, 109 La. 986.
54. Crampton v. Newton's Estate (Mich.) 93 N. W. 250.
55. Time is of the essence of the contract—Coppage v. Murphy, 24 Ky. L. R. 257, 68 S. W. 416.
56. Block v. Stevens, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 246.
57. American Nat. Bank v. Watkins (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 545.
58. Parker v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 76 S. W. 74.
59. Wendling v. Snyder, 30 Ind. App. 330.
60. Sommers v. Myers (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 812.
61. Cadiz R. Co. v. Roach, 24 Ky. L. R. 1761, 72 S. W. 280.
62. Means v. Subers, 115 Ga. 371.
63. Gambling contracts. A forthcoming article will treat specifically of champertous contracts, see Champerty and Maintenance.
64. Validity of contract respecting corporate stock—Stokes v. Foote, 172 N. Y. 327. Validity of contract by city to levy tax to pay rentals for water hydrants to trustee named in mortgage given by water company to secure an issue of bonds—City of Centerville v. Fidelity Trust & Guaranty Co. (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 332.
65. Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Waring (Ga.) 44 S. E. 320.
66. An assignment is not invalid because of a provision calling for illegal action by the assignee where such provision is followed by another which enables him to follow the provisions of the statute—Validity under Mansfield Dig. Ark. c. 8, § 307—Rainwater-Bradford Hat Co. v. McBride (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 597.
67. The purchase of a judgment from a client by her attorney while in his hands for collection is presumed invalid and the burden is on him to show otherwise—Stubinger v. Frey, 116 Ga. 396.

facto void because it is not enforceable in the courts of a state and contravenes its statutes.[68] The illegal intent of one party will not avoid a contract unless the other knew or should have known of it.[69] If it is not illegal in its provisions or object, it cannot be declared illegal because performance may enable a party to assist third persons in the violation of law.[70] A contract which does not provide for labor on Sunday, nor tend to disturb peace and good order, nor constitute a violation of the criminal laws, is valid and enforceable.[71] A contract is not void because of failure to affix internal revenue stamps, unless it is shown that failure resulted from intent to defraud the government.[72] The name or character given to a contract by the parties has no weight in determining whether it is void as a gaming contract.[73]

(§ 3) B. Validity as to subject-matter or consideration. Character of subject-matter or object.[74]—Contracts for a fraudulent or unlawful purpose will not be enforced nor will damages be awarded for their breach,[75] nor can the contract be specifically enforced;[76] but transactions in the ordinary course of business will not be disturbed because of a secret intention of the purchaser to apply the subject-matter to an illegal purpose.[77] One who makes and sells an article which he knows to be designed exclusively for gambling purposes cannot recover for the price.[78] A loan to pay gambling losses may be recovered though the sender knew the character of the transaction.[79] A judgment on a note in settlement of a gambling transaction is sometimes made unenforceable.[80] A contract for services as housekeeper on a money

68. Alleghany Co. v. Allen, 68 N. J. Law, 68.

69. Gambling contracts—McCarthy v. Weare Commission Co., 87 Minn. 11. This was true at the common law—Gaylord v. Duryea, 95 Mo. App. 574.

70. Damages for breach of a contract to deliver ice cannot be lessened by a claim that part of the damages claimed were profits to be derived from a sale of ice to persons violating the laws regulating the sale of liquors—Crystal Ice Co. v. Wylie, 65 Kan. 104, 68 Pac. 1086.

71. McCurdy v. Alaska & C. Commercial Co., 102 Ill. App. 120.

72. First Nat. Bank v. Stone (Iowa) 91 N. W. 1076.

73. Sharp v. Stalker, 63 N. J. Eq. 596.

74. Where a life policy was assigned under agreement with beneficiaries that the assignee should receive certain amount of the insurance in consideration of his paying the premiums, the contract was invalid and the insurer refusing to recognize the validity of the assignment, in a suit by the assignee to recover premiums paid by him, his right was founded necessarily on the illegal contract with the insured and not on the contract of insurance, and he could not recover on the ground that the latter was executory and that he could retire from such contract at any time—Bruer v. Kansas Mut. Life Ins. Co. (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 380.

75. A nonsuit will be directed—Wyckoff v. Weaver, 66 N. J. Law, 648. Sale of liquor—P. Schoenhofen Brew. Co. v. Whipple (Neb.) 89 N. W. 751. Where the liquor is bought with intent to violate the law in selling whether the seller knew of such intent is immaterial (Rev. St. c. 27, § 56)—Pollard v. Allen, 96 Me. 455. A contract whereby an individual was to carry on the sale of liquors in his own name for the benefit of a brewing company which was to lease a building to him for such purpose, provide the money for the bond and secure a license in its own name, is void as against public policy, since such person has no right to carry on business under a license issued to the company—Koppitz-Melchers Brew. Co. v. Behm (Mich.) 90 N. W. 676. Judgment on a note given in settlement of a gambling transaction is unenforceable (Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, p. 590)—Butler v. Nohe, 98 Ill. App. 624. A contract for greater fees to the sheriff for service of writs and process than the law allows cannot be enforced, though a custom allowing such increase existed among officers and attorneys—Edgerly v. Hale, 71 N. H. 138. An agreement by a prospective dealer in stocks with brokers, to indemnify them for any loss resulting from the illegality of his dealings is void as an attempt to nullify the statute against dealings on margins with no intent to receive or deliver. The agreement will furnish no ground for enjoining an action under the statute—Corey v. Griffin, 181 Mass. 229.

76. Buettgenbach v. Gerbig (Neb.) 90 N. W. 654. Contract for division of property in violation of testamentary trust—Rochevot v. Rochevot, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 585. Excessive use of right of eminent domain contemplated by contract—Driscoll v. New Haven, 75 Conn. 92.

77. A verdict cannot be directed for defendant in an action to recover for liquor sold because defendant claims that plaintiff knew that the liquor was bought for an illegal purpose where it appeared from the evidence that plaintiff sold in the ordinary course of business, was altogether indifferent as to their sale by defendant and did not co-operate in such sale—Fuller v. Hunt, 182 Mass. 299.

78. Ohlson v. Wilson (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 768.

79. Charleston State Bank v. Edman, 99 Ill. App. 235.

80. Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, p. 590—Butler v. Nohe, 98 Ill. App. 624.

consideration is valid though the parties illegally cohabited during performance, where the contract was not made in contemplation of concubinage.[81] An assignment of future earnings in an existing employment is a valid and enforceable contract,[82] but it is otherwise if no present employment exists.[83] A contract requiring a teacher in a public school to take an examination before a certain officer binds neither party, where no such officer exists.[84] A contract of indemnity, made by one who receives certain property from another, for protection against the latter's unlawful act in seizing the property, is void.[85] That one to whom money was loaned was doing business under another name in order to deceive his creditors with knowledge of the lender will not prevent recovery by the latter since the loan could in no way hinder the creditors.[86]

Certainty as to subject-matter.—A contract must be definite as to subject-matter,[87] so that the jury may understand its provisions,[88] and so that the measure of damages for breach may be ascertained.[89] A contract authorizing plaintiff to cut timber from lands belonging to a certain person on certain rivers in a certain county of the state describes the lands with sufficient definiteness to show the subject of contract.[90] That a person since deceased did not own land at the time that he agreed to convey land to a child in consideration of the right to name it will not render such contract void for uncertainty, where he subsequently purchased land, which he stated he intended to convey in fullfilment of the contract.[91]

Consideration.—If the contract is separable and the remaining consideration is sufficient, partial invalidity of consideration is harmless.[92] A note given for a gambling debt is uncollectible.[93] A bond given by a husband for the payment of a certain amount to his abandoned wife and child on provision that an indictment

81. Lytle v. Newell, 24 Ky. L. R. 188, 68 S. W. 118.

82. Rydson v. Larson (Neb.) 93 N. W. 195; Wenham v. Mallin, 103 Ill. App. 609; Brewer v. Griesheimer, 104 Ill. App. 323; Tolman v. Union Casualty & Surety Co., 90 Mo. App. 274; Bell v. Mulholland, 90 Mo. App. 612.

83. Bell v. Mulholland, 90 Mo. App. 612.

84. Crabb v. School Dist. No. 1, 93 Mo. App. 254.

85. Rice Bros. & Nixon v. National Bank of Commerce (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 930.

86. Kingsbury v. Waco State Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 551.

87. Sufficiency of description in contract for sale of standing timber to pass title—Hays v. McLin, 24 Ky. L. R. 1827, 72 S. W. 339. One by which defendant agrees to furnish plaintiff three hundred men on demand, and plaintiff agrees to work not less than one hundred men is sufficiently certain to be valid—McConnell v. Arkansas Brick & Mfg. Co., 70 Ark. 568. Contract for manufacture of goods executed as too indefinite and uncertain to be enforced—Howie v. Kasnowitz, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 295. Contract for services as sufficiently definite and certain in the work to be performed so as to be enforceable—Banta v. Banta, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 138. A contract by which plaintiff was employed to manage sales of a certain department for a certain percentage of the profits without regard to time, is unenforceable for uncertainty as to time of employment—Faulkner v. Des Moines Drug Co., 117 Iowa, 120. Where a contract for delivery of bonds was uncertain, in that it did not specify the particular bond to be delivered, the transferee has no forceable interest in bonds delivered to others, but can only recover the value of those to be delivered to him as on an implied contract—Cushing v. Chapman, 115 Fed. 237. A contract by an actress for the season of a play to commence at a certain date, was not indefinite so as to be unenforceable, where a provision for performance during Christmas week of the same year showed that the contract did not apply to the summer season of that year alone—Shubert v. Angeles, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 625. A contract containing a provision that one party should assume payment of a third person's note to a bank in consideration of its securing to such person the assignment of a share of stock to be held as collateral for the benefit of the bank and the note, is not void for uncertainty as to what kind of assignment was intended—First Nat. Bank v. Park, 117 Iowa, 552.

88. Truitt v. Fahey, 3 Pen. (Del.) 573.

89. Faulkner v. Des Moines Drug Co., 117 Iowa, 120. A written contract between stockholders by which one agreed to provide by loan to the corporation, whatever additional capital is needed to provide a working fund, is too uncertain and vague to enable enforcement by an action to recover damages for breach—Jones v. Vance Shoe Co. (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 707.

90. Strubbe v. Lewis (Ky.) 76 S. W. 150.

91. Daily v. Minnick, 117 Iowa, 563.

92. Contract valid and enforceable in its terms, but the consideration of which consists in part of the consideration of a previous contract between the same parties, which was illegal.—Washington Irr. Co. v. Krutz (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 279.

93. Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, p. 590—Butler v. Nohe, 98 Ill. App. 624.

pending against him for abandonment should be suspended is not invalid because of such consideration, since it is for performance of a duty which he owed independently of his written obligation.[94] Under a statutory provision to the effect that if part of the consideration for a contract is unlawful the entire contract is void, a contract with a county clerk for the collection of data from his records and other sources, part of which is void because of his official duty to collect data without extra compensation, is void as to the whole.[95]

(§ 3) C. Mutuality of obligation.—The contract must mutually bind the parties,[96] and if written should be signed by both.[97] Each party to the negotiations must define his position and create an obligation upon himself in order to bind the other.[98] A clause attached to a contract, and signed by one of the parties only, which concerns matters distinct from the subject-matter of the contract, will not bind either party.[99] If the quantity of personalty to be taken under a contract of sale depends on the want or will of one party, the contract lacks mutuality.[1] A condition allowing one party the right of rejection will not confer upon him the authority arbitrarily to decide so as to render the contract void for want of mutuality.[2] A unilateral con-

94. Bea v. People, 101 Ill. App. 132.

95. Civ. Code, § 1608—Humboldt County v. Stern, 136 Cal. 63, 68 Pac. 324.

96. Contracts held valid. A contract whereby defendant agreed to sell and plaintiff to buy a certain amount of oil for a certain period is sufficient as to mutuality—Manhattan Oil Co. v. Richardson Lubricating Co. (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 923. And a contract by which coal is to be furnished for a certain period, to be used in a certain building, its quality to be passed upon by a third person—Hercules Coal & Min. Co. v. Central Inv. Co., 98 Ill. App. 427. And a contract to allow another to name a child in consideration of conveyance of land to the child—Daily v. Minnick, 117 Iowa, 563. And a contract to sell land to a corporation to be formed in consideration of a sum part in cash and the balance in stock—Burke v. Mead, 159 Ind. 252. A condition in a contract for the sale of land to re-convey for a certain price when the purchaser concludes to re-sell, is mutual in its terms—Peterson v. Chase, 115 Wis. 239. A contract to furnish a party with as much goods of a certain kind as he might need in his business in a year, is not lacking in mutuality as requiring the purchaser only to take such goods as he chose, where the character and amount of his business was known to the other party—Excelsior Wrapper Co. v. Messinger (Wis.) 93 N. W. 459. A lease of a coal mine is not void for want of mutuality where the lessee is required to pay a certain price for the coal he mines, to furnish the lessor a certain amount free each year, and not to stop work longer than a year at a time—Ingle v. Bottoms (Ind.) 66 N. E. 160. A contract providing that plaintiffs will buy all their mirror plates from defendant, if defendant will sell on certain terms, implies a covenant on the part of plaintiffs to buy in return for defendant's covenant to sell and is not void for want of mutuality—Fuller v. Schrenk, 171 N. Y. 671. Nor a contract whereby a manufacturer agreed to buy all his raw material of a certain sort for a certain period from another at a certain price which the other agreed to furnish as ordered, it being agreed that the quantity used was understood to be about a certain amount, but that the buyer should have the right to demand twice as much—Loudenback Fertilizer Co. v. Tennessee Phosphate Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 298. A contract for the construction of a switch track giving the right to one to maintain and operate it while business is carried on at a certain mill thereon, is not void for lack of mutuality, because such party was given the right to remove the track whenever in its opinion its maintenance was not justified—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Chicago, K. & S. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 882.

Contracts held invalid. A contract concerning burial lots in a cemetery which does not designate the lots with sufficient certainty so that they may be identified is invalid—Buckley v. Wood, 67 N. J. Law, 583. And a contract by a husband for his wife with another made without her knowledge or authority—Davis v. Walker, 131 Ala. 204. And a contract reciting that certain parties desired to ship certain loads of lumber and that the other party agreed to carry any and all of this lumber as may be desired by the former—Dennis v. Slyfield (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 474.

97. A contract for sale of goods during a certain time, at a certain price, binding in its terms only as to so much goods as the purchaser shall use in connection with that particular portion of his construction during that time is sufficiently mutual—Laclede Const. Co. v. Tudor Iron Works, 169 Mo. 137. A contract between a brewing company and an individual signed by the latter alone, delegating him to buy beer and to pay rent to the company for its premises in return for money paid by it for his license, is unilateral and unenforceable, where it appears that the consideration was never paid—Koppitz-Melchers Brew. Co. v. Behm (Mich.) 90 N. W. 676.

98. Arnold v. Cason, 95 Mo. App. 426.

99. Baylies v. Automatic Fire Alarm Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 557.

1. City of Ft. Scott v. W. G. Eads Brokerage Co. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 51.

2. Lilienthal Bros. v. Stearns, 121 Fed. 197.

tract may become binding by performance,[3] and if a contract not mutual be accepted and performed by one, equity will compel performance by the other.[4]

(§ 3) D. Unreasonable or oppressive contracts; provisions as to lapse or forfeiture.—The terms of a contract must be reasonable,[5] but if it appears fair at time of execution in view of facts and information on which the parties acted at that time, that it proves unreasonable and inequitable by later developments after acceptance and enjoyment of benefits, cannot prevent its enforcement.[6] The benefits to be received from a contract by one of the parties do not necessarily show it to be unconscionable in the absence of fraud or proof that such benefits were excessive.[7] Lapses or forfeitures are not favored,[8] but reasonable provisions will not be disturbed;[9] and to render a contract unlawful because dependent for success on foreitures or lapses, it must appear that it is not only largely so dependent but that it is so beyond the range of reasonable probability that the number of forfeitures or lapses necessary to render it effectual will not occur in the time required.[10] All ambiguities in a contract will be resolved against the existence of forfeitures, but if a forfeiture is provided for in unmistakable terms, it will not be relieved against either at law or in equity.[11]

(§ 3) E. Effect of public policy in general.[12]—The power of the courts to declare a contract void as against public policy should never be exercised unless the case is one clear from doubt.[13] They will be much less inclined to declare void as against public policy, contracts made by persons of full age, sound mind, and without disa-

3. Allen v. New Domain Oil & Gas Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 2169, 73 S. W. 747; Friend v. Mallory, 52 W. Va. 53; Hoffman v. Colgan, 25 Ky. L. R. 98, 74 S. W. 724; Los Angeles Traction Co. v. Wilshire, 135 Cal. 654, 67 Pac. 1086. Construction of contract as unilateral—Automatic Vending Co. v. Heins, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 301. A building contract providing that one of the parties and the architect shall determine conclusively disputes as to the construction or what constitutes extra work, will not bind the other party since one party to the contract cannot stipulate that he shall arbitrate differences—Fulton County Com'rs v. Gibson, 158 Ind. 471. An agreement by a land owner to pay a broker a certain commission in case he himself sold the land is invalid on its face as a unilateral contract but the broker by taking steps to secure a sale may perform sufficiently to be entitled to its enforcement—Lapham v. Flint, 86 Minn. 376.

4. Corbet v. Oil City Fuel Supply Co., 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 80.

5. A contract whereby an individual agrees with the county board of supervisors to discover taxable property in the county which had escaped taxation through fraud or otherwise, and pay all costs and attorney's fees incurred in collecting such taxes for a compensation of one-half the amount so collected, is not necessarily unreasonable or unjust or excessive as to compensation—Shinn v. Cunningham (Iowa) 94 N. W. 941. A contract of sale containing a condition that the sellers would not engage or become interested in catching or manufacturing products from certain fish along the Atlantic coast in competition with the purchaser for the period of 20 years is not oppressive and unreasonable so as to be void as against public policy—Fisheries Co. v. Lennen, 116 Fed. 217. A contract whereby a corporation promises to assist holders of it and other contracts in purchasing homes for themselves in consideration of stated payments, is against public policy where some of the contributors can receive no benefit for more than seventy years—State v. Nebraska Home Co. (Neb.) 92 N. W. 763.

6. Wood v. Casserleigh, 30 Colo. 287, 71 Pac. 360.

7. Sufficiency of showing that attorney's fees exacted were unreasonable—In re Fitzsimons, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 345, 12 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 250.

8. If it appears that a material benefit has been secured by a contract to one of the parties who is asking to enforce a forfeiture thereunder, or that he has suffered no damages by a defect in performance by the other, the forfeiture will not be enforced—Knight v. Orchard, 92 Mo. App. 466.

9. A provision in a contract for sale of goods which gives the purchaser the right to reduce or cancel the order at any time before shipment of the goods without liability for damage is valid—Hypse v. Avery Mfg. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 812.

10. Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Waring (Ga.) 44 S. E. 320. Contract for sale of coupons redeemable in merchandise is against public policy where it will certainly leave purchasers of coupons finally of no value—Hubbard v. Freiburger (Mich.) 94 N. W. 727.

11. Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Waring (Ga.) 44 S. E. 320.

12. Contract to recover for services in brokerage business—Cullison v. Downing, 42 Or. 377, 71 Pac. 70. An agreement for the exclusive privilege of running an observation wheel at a pleasure resort during the life of a patent thereon, is not against public policy—Sommers v. Myers (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 812.

13, 14, 15. Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Waring (Ga.) 44 S. E. 320.

bilities, than those made by persons under disability or of unsound mind.[14] That a contract is merely unwise or foolish is insufficient to render it void as against public policy.[15] There must appear elements of bad faith or intentions inimical to public interests.[16]

(§ 3) F. Contracts limiting liability for negligence or releasing damages.[17]—Contracts limiting the liability of carriers for loss resulting from negligence of the carriers or their agents are generally void,[18] except perhaps in certain particulars allowed by statute,[19] though in Maine they will be held valid as to injuries to one riding on a pass,[20] but in Washington even such contract cannot extend to the death of the passenger.[21] A carrier may limit his liability for loss of goods where such contract is made as a basis merely for carrier's charges and responsibility,[22] as where it is entered into in consideration of a reduced rate of shipment;[23] and likewise a carrier may, for a valuable consideration, make a contract fixing the value of property to be transported as a limitation of liability.[24] The giving of insurance on goods in favor of a carrier by a consignor, fully protecting the carrier from loss, is valuable consideration for a promise by the carrier not to insist on an exemption from liability for loss by fire.[25] He may contract against the assumption of liability accruing to him merely as bailee.[26] A contract by a railroad company relieving it from liability is not against public policy where it is not made with a passenger for hire or shipper regarding a contract of carriage.[27] A contract by a railroad company to build a sidetrack for convenience of a saw-mill in consideration of a release of all damages from killing of stock thereon is not invalid as violating a statute against

16. The action of the attorney for a mortgagee in foreclosure in procuring an assignment of the judgment was not contrary to public policy though the interest of the mortgagor was sold later under execution on a junior judgment—Miller v. Cousins (Iowa) 90 N. W. 814. Money recovered by plaintiff in the court of claims because of Indian depredations on property jointly owned by himself and his sister under an agreement to pay her an equal share of the money, may be recovered by her, there being no intent nor conspiracy between them to defraud the government—Padilla v. Padilla (N. M.) 70 Pac. 563. A contract between stockholders in a bank and another, to elect him cashier for five years unless he resigns sooner, providing that he should purchase certain shares of the stock to be repurchased by them when he left their employ, is not void as against public policy where it does not appear that it was not made in good faith and to promote the interest of the bank—Bonta v. Gridley, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 33. A contract of a corporation made through its general manager providing for a lease to another company of a manufacturing plant, and that such manager shall superintend the plant and represent the other company, is not against public policy, where the first corporation approved the contract through its director or permitted him to act with full knowledge of the fact—Pungs v. American Brake-Beam Co., 200 Ill. 306. A contract whereby one creditor of an embarrassed debtor outwardly agrees to a reduction equal to that of other creditors while secretly exacting full payment in order to induce other creditors to settle their claims at such reduction, is void as against public policy and notes in pursuance thereof cannot be enforced—John T. Hardie's Sons & Co. v. Scheen (La.) 34 So. 707.

17. Contract by railroad company for carrying passengers construed as not void as against public policy because of exemption from liability for negligence—Seaboard Air Line Ry. Co. v. Main, 132 N. C. 445.

18. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Tanner (Va.) 41 S. E. 721; Morse v. Canadian Pac. Ry. Co., 97 Me. 77; Fasy v. International Nav. Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 469.

19. Comp. St. c. 72, art. 1, § 3—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hambel (Neb.) 89 N. W. 643.

20. Duncan v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 113 Fed. 508.

21. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Adams (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 324.

22. O'Malley v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 86 Minn. 380.

23. Mears v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 75 Conn. 171; Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 606.

24. Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 606. A limitation in a bill of lading of the carrier's liability to damages resulting only from negligence of itself or its agents, is binding—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Landers, 135 Ala. 504.

25. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Cau (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 15, 645.

26. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Schuldt (Neb.) 92 N. W. 162.

27. Liability for fire communicated to a building—Ordelheide v. Wabash R. Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 149. A contract by an express messenger which relieves a railroad company from liability for personal injuries to him while performing his duties upon its train, resulting from ordinary negligence of railroad employes, is not invalid as against public policy—Peterson v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. (Wis.) 96 N. W. 532.

limitation of liability.[28] A city cannot escape liability for damages resulting from its negligence in permitting a sewer to remain in a defective condition by means of an ordinance permitting sewer connections to be made on condition that the person for whose benefit they are made shall not recover for any damages resulting from the connection.[29] Contracts between a master and his servant, or instructions and rules for service which are attempted to be made a part of such contracts, by reason of which the liability of the master for injuries to his servants resulting from his negligence is limited, are against public policy and void,[30] unless the employe is left free to decide between the benefits under the contract and his right of action.[31]

(§ 3) G. Contracts affecting marriage or divorce.—A bequest by a son to his mother on condition that she should not remarry is not void as against public policy,[32] or a contract by one who is desirous of marrying a woman to pay for a release of her contract for employment is not void as in restraint of marriage.[33] An agreement between a husband and wife calculated to facilitate the securing of a divorce of a vinculo matrimonii,[34] or a conveyance from a husband to his wife, the consideration of which is calculated to bring about a separation, is against public policy;[35] but an agreement between a husband and wife whose relations were unsatisfactory is not necessarily collusive so as to be invalid, though one of them was contemplating divorce, and the other relying on the agreement did not appear in the divorce proceedings, since there is nothing in the act committed or appearing to have been committed, which constituted grounds for divorce.[36] An assignment of part of her alimony by a divorced wife for services contravenes public policy.[37]

(§ 3) H. Contracts made or to be performed on Sunday.—A note signed on Sunday is valid if delivered on another day.[38] In Minnesota, contracts casually executed or delivered on Sunday are not void under the statute.[39] A church subscription signed on Sunday is valid in Wisconsin.[40] A contract for a theatrical performance on Sunday is not contrary to public policy because of a statute forbidding sporting on Sunday or employment at common labor.[41]

(§ 3) I. Contracts regarding control or disposition of property.—An agreement in consideration of relinquishing a right to administration,[42] or a contract whereby one of two legatees agrees to pay a bequest to the other, is void;[43] but a contract by an administrator with his surety, after administration has proceeded for

28. Rev. St. art. 320—Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Carter, 95 Tex. 461.

29. Murphy v. Indianapolis, 158 Ind. 238.

30. Contract between express company and messenger by which the latter agreed to assume risk of accidents and injuries resulting from the negligence of carriers (Violation of Code, Iowa, §§ 2071, 2074, and Acts 27 Gen. Assembly, c. 49)—O'Brien v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 116 Fed. 502. Stipulation in application for employment on a railroad whereby the company attempts to compel the employe to assume the risk of obstructions near a track—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Darby (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 446. Rules posted by mining company which it attempts to make a part of its contract with its employes whereby notice is given that the employes assume the risk of falling roofs—Consolidated Coal Co. v. Lundak, 196 Ill. 594; Himrod Coal Co. v. Clark, 197 Ill. 514.

31. A contract between a corporation and employes becoming members of its "Relief Department," providing for release of damages for injuries in consideration of benefits so received is not invalid as against public policy. The employe is given the right to elect to receive benefits from the "Department" or sue for injuries and need not decide without opportunity for counsel and advice (Rev. St. 1899, § 2876)—Hamilton v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co., 118 Fed. 92.

32. Overton v. Lea, 108 Tenn. 505.

33. Holz v. Hanson, 115 Wis. 236.

34. Palmer v. Palmer (Utah) 72 Pac. 3.

35. Brun v. Brun (Neb.) 90 N. W. 860.

36. Comp. Laws 1887, § 2568—Burgess v. Burgess (S. D.) 95 N. W. 279.

37. Lynde v. Lynde (N. J. Law) 52 Atl. 694.

38. Hofer v. McClung & Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 355, 68 S. W. 438; Barger v. Farnham (Mich.) 90 N. W. 281.

39. Gen. St. 1894, §§ 6510-6513—Holden v. O'Brien, 86 Minn. 297.

40. Rev. St. 1878, § 4595—Hodges v. Nalty, 113 Wis. 567.

41. Contract for music and dancing each day of the week including Sunday construed in connection with Criminal Code, § 241—Wirth v. Calhoun (Neb.) 89 N. W. 785.

42. Lewis' Estate, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 393.

43. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 132 N. C. 350.

nearly two years, that in consideration of signing his new bond, the administrator will pay half of the commission due him as soon as received,[44] or whereby the promisor agrees to include in his will a legacy compensating the other for services performed,[45] or one by which a decedent grants all of his property at his death to another if she will continue to live with him until that time, and care for him as a daughter, is not void as against public policy.[46] A secret agreement between prospective heirs whereby one agrees to induce the ancestor not to change his will is against public policy unless the ancestor knows of and assents to the agreement.[47] A contract whereby defendant promises to pay plaintiff a certain amount of money, if a testator, in whose property each was to share, would not change his will so as to give plaintiff more property as he intended to do, does not relate exclusively to an expectancy where it appears that the testator stated definitely that he had decided to so change his will, and may be enforced in a court of law.[48] An agreement whereby stockholders of a private trading corporation arranged that on the death of one or more of them, the remainder should have an option to purchase the stock of such deceased person or persons at its value,[49] or a gift causa mortis to one who is to care for the donor during life, pay his debts after death, and after applying the remainder to his gift, deliver any surplus to the donor's sister, is not against public policy.[50] An oral agreement that a son shall become vested with the family homestead on death of his parents in consideration of their support during life, fairly made and substantially performed, is valid under the law as to homesteads.[51]

(§ 3) J. Contracts controlling or promoting litigation.[52]—Any contract with an attorney for the conduct of a suit on a contingent fee which limits the client's control over the litigation is void as against public policy,[53] unless it appears that the attorney already had an interest which entitled him to be considered in the settlement.[54] An assignment of one-third of "whatever may be recovered" in a suit about to be instituted "or by way of compromise" as attorney's fees is not against public policy as preventing compromise.[55] A contract whereby an attorney agrees to prosecute claims at his own expense is invalid as being champertous.[56] A contract between the state and an agent for prosecution of a claim is not against public policy because of a provision for a contingent fee.[57] Contracts to secure litigation for an attorney,[58] or to furnish evidence, will not be upheld.[59] A provision in a contract for arbitra-

44. May v. Moore (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 476.
45. Banks v. Howard, 117 Ga. 94.
46. Hall v. Gilman, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 458.
47, 48. De Boer v. Harmsen (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1036.
49. Fitzsimmons v. Lindsay, 205 Pa. 79.
50. Deneff v. Helms, 42 Or. 161, 70 Pac. 390.
51. Teske v. Dittberner (Neb.) 91 N. W. 181.
52. Contracts interfering with powers of courts. A contract whereby an insolvent for whose property a receiver was about to be appointed agreed with one of his creditors to ask the court to appoint the latter receiver in consideration of his agreement to act without pay, if appointed, was not against public policy as an unwarrantable interference with the power of the court in the appointment—Polk v. Johnson (Ind.) 66 N. E. 752. A condition in a contract between citizens of a foreign country, partly to be performed in the United States and partly abroad, that the courts of such foreign country should have exclusive jurisdiction of actions thereon, is not against public policy so that the courts of Massachussetts will refuse to give it the validity which it has under the foreign law according to the treaty with the foreign country giving the citizens of each full rights in the courts of the other—Mittenthal v. Mascagni, 183 Mass. 19.
53. Contract providing that no settlement should be made unless the attorney was present and directed it—Davis v. Chase, 159 Ind. 242. Contract with an attorney providing for a contingent fee on recovery or settlement and that no settlement can be made without the attorney's presence and direction limits the client's direction of the case—Id.
54. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Carlock (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 931.
55. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Ginther (Tex.) 72 S. W. 166.
56. 3 Rev. St. (5th Ed.) p. 478, § 72; Code Civ. Proc. § 74—Stedwell v. Hartmann, 173 N. Y. 624.
57. Opinion of the Justices (N. H.) 54 Atl. 950.
58. A contract between a layman and an attorney by which the former agrees to secure business for the latter in the prosecution of suits for a third person and to look up

tion will not prevent an action thereon,[60] but an agreement whereby parties stipulate in advance that they will not enforce substantial rights in the courts, which may subsequently arise in dispute between them, but will submit such rights to a private tribunal,[61] and a condition in an insurance policy that an award by arbitration fixing the loss shall precede any action against the insurer is void.[62] A contract providing that the payment of fees to a disclosure commissioner should be dependent on collection from the judgment debtors is void as against public policy,[63] but otherwise as to an agreement that hearsay evidence of a witness' testimony may be offered in consideration of abandonment of a proceeding to perpetuate it.[64]

(§ 3) K. Contracts compounding offenses or interfering with prosecution.—Contracts by which the commission of offenses is condoned,[65] concealed,[66] or the prosecution therefor suppressed or dismissed,[67] are void.

(§ 3) L. Contracts interfering with public service, office, or trust.—Contracts which tend to injure public service by public or quasi-public servants,[68] as, witnesses, whose testimony is to be used in such case for a share of the fees received by the attorney, is void as against public policy—Langdon v. Conlin (Neb.) 93 N. W. 389.

59. Contract whereby a patentee promises to furnish evidence to a third person in actions which he agrees to bring against assignees of the patentee to set aside a transfer of patents to them—Cowles v. Rochester Folding Box Co., 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 414. One who contracted with another to furnish evidence to establish the latter's interest as an heir in certain property and to commence suit to recover such interest of which he should have full direction and control, and all the expenses of which he was to pay, in consideration of two-thirds of the interest recovered, is a contract for the purpose of gambling in litigation and is void because of public policy though not voidable under the local statute against maintenance—Casserleigh v. Wood (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 308.

60. Turner v. Stewart, 51 W. Va. 493. A provision in a building contract that the amount of the work to be paid for shall be determined by the engineers whose finding should be conclusive is not a general arbitration clause attempting to limit the jurisdiction of courts, but within the rule authorizing a provision that no suit shall be brought until certain acts shall be performed by a third person—National Contracting Co. v. Hudson River Water Power Co., 170 N. Y. 439.

61. Provision for arbitration in insurance policy as condition precedent to action upon the policy—Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Hon (Neb.) 92 N. W. 746.

62. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Zlotky (Neb.) 92 N. W. 736; Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Hon (Neb.) 92 N. W. 746.

63. Watson v. Fales, 97 Me. 366.

64. Thompson v. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 29.

65. Notes given by an employe by a surety company which had issued his employment bond for the amount of his defalcation from his employer whom the company had reimbursed in consideration of a promise of the company not to prosecute for embezzlement —United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Charles, 131 Ala. 658.

66. Contract, the consideration of which is concealment of a crime already committed —Folmar v. Siler, 132 Ala. 297. That a contract void because based on a promise to conceal a crime already committed contains an additional consideration which is legal will not make the contract valid—Id.

67. Contract by the president of a corporation while under arrest founded on a promise that he will not be prosecuted—Metropolitan Land Co. v. Manning (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 696. Note, the consideration of which is the suppression of a criminal prosecution or the dismissal of a prosecution already instituted—Smith Premier Typewriter Co. v. Mayhew (Neb.) 90 N. W. 939. Agreement between the attorney of a railroad company and the attorney of the commonwealth that an appeal shall be taken from a successful prosecution of two indictments against the company, and if the judgment is affirmative, the company will consent to a fine in three of the twelve remaining indictments, and that the other nine shall be dismissed—Spalding v. Hill, 24 Ky. L. R. 1802, 72 S. W. 307. An agreement whereby one promised to repay for property stolen from another by the former's relative, if the latter would not prosecute for the theft, is illegal, though acted upon by the promisee so that the thief was permitted to escape with his property—Giles v. De Cow (Colo.) 70 Pac. 681.

68. Contracts held valid. Agreement by a railroad company to build and maintain a switch for a private property owner which did not affect the performance of the duties of the company to the public—Scholten v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 915. Agreement that a public officer should look to clients and not to their attorney for fees if suits were unsuccessful—Edgerly v. Hale, 71 N. H. 138. A sale of school apparatus to a school board where no deceit was used in obtaining signatures of members of the board to the contract, though each signed without consulting the others, and the supplies were accepted and used by the district—Johnson v. School Corp., 117 Iowa, 319. Mortgage given by an officer when he was suspected of having embezzled public funds, to indemnify his sureties in case of defalcation—Harlan County v. Whitney (Neb.) 90 N. W. 993. A contract made by a public officer whereby he releases a surety on the bond of his deputy in consideration of a note made to him by the surety which he promises to repay from his

where they affect election or appointment to office,[69] or which have for their object unfair dealing in public property or rights,[70] or which contravene the spirit of laws salary—Culver v. Caldwell (Ala.) 34 So. 13. An agreement by a mill owner to release a railroad for all damages to his property resulting by fire from the operation of the road, in consideration of which the company establishes a switch where none existed, merely for the individual use of the mill owner, is not void where it does not relieve the company from its public duty in the operation of its road—Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Carter, 95 Tex. 461.

Contracts held invalid.—Agreement whereby the majority in interest of the owners of a vessel surrender the control permanently or indefinitely—Smith-Green Co. v. Bird, 96 Me. 425. Agreement between a town and a town collector of taxes who had guaranteed the town against loss for unpaid taxes, whereby the collector is to have warrants continued in force after he has paid the town, to enable him to compel tax payers to reimburse him—Page v. Claggett, 71 N. H. 85. Contract with the wife of a member of the board of trustees, employing her to teach in a school over which the board has supervision. Under Sess. Laws 1899, p. 96, providing that no trustee shall be pecuniarily interested in any contract made by the board of which he is a member—Nuckols v. Lyle (Idaho) 70 Pac. 401. Agreement between an officer and an attorney that the officer should receive nothing for the service of writs unless the actions were successful—(Const. pt. II, art. 70; Pub. St. c. 25, § 1, c. 212, §§ 3, 4, 6, 7)—Edgerly v. Hale, 71 N. H. 138. Special contract between a town and its tax collector whereby he guarantees the collection of all the taxes for a certain consideration—Page v. Claggett, 71 N. H. 85. A contract for the purchase by the county from the register of deeds of a set of abstract books amounting to a numerical index is invalid under the statute providing that officers are prohibited from taking any contract for performing work for their own profit in and about the office which they control. Gen. St. 1901, § 2364 construed in connection with section 1736 authorizing commissioners to order the register to furnish a numerical index—Sedgwick County Com'rs v. State (Kan.) 72 Pac. 284. Assignment of a future salary of a public officer—First Nat. Bank v. State (Neb.) 94 N. W. 633. A contract by a corporation with a public officer, in respect to matters with which he had to deal as a public officer, which was formed shortly after expiration of his term, though he had rejected an offer for the same contract during his term of office, is so blended with his former rejection of the offer as to constitute a single transaction void and unenforceable as against public policy—Washington Irr. Co. v. Krutz (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 279. A contract by a bank clerk by which he was to receive $50 a month for his services including notarial fees, is not against public policy on the ground that a contract by a public officer to accept less than his legal fees, is void where it appears that the amount of salary accepted was greater than his notarial fees—Second Nat. Bank v. Ferguson, 24 Ky. L. R. 1298, 71 S. W. 429. An agreement with a landowner whereby a railroad company agrees to establish and maintain a station at a particular point and no other, within a certain distance thereof, is against public policy, and will not be enforced in equity though a remedy at law may be given one who has conveyed valuable property to the company on the faith of such agreement without wrongful intent—Beasley v. Texas & P. Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 952.

69. Agreement between a majority of the members of a public board of officers by which the appointments in their hands are to be divided between them, each binding himself to vote for the other's candidate—Sallade v. Schuylkill County, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 191. Contract whereby the owner of a newspaper agrees to use its influence to secure nomination of a certain person for a political office—Livingston v. Page, 74 Vt. 356. Contract by a candidate for clerk of court to appoint another as his deputy if elected and to retain him as such during the full term of office at a stated salary—Horstman v. Adamson (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 398. Contract contained in the bond of a deputy sheriff which provides for the farming out of a part of the office (Code, c. 7, § 5)—White v. Cook, 51 W. Va. 201. A contract for sale of a deputyship by a sheriff for a sum payable at all events is void and unenforceable, but if it is sold for part of commissions or for an allowance made the jailer by the county for his services, it is valid (Code 1899, § 5, c. 7)—Stephenson v. Salisbury (W. Va.) 44 S. E. 217.

70. Contracts held valid.—An agreement of city to build cross-walks in consideration of consent of abutting owners to building street railway is not invalid as a purchase of frontage consent for a consideration accruing to the exclusive benefit of any owner—Farson v. Fogg, 105 Ill. App. 572. Agreement between a county board of supervisors and an individual for services of the latter in investigating and discovering taxable property which has been omitted through fraud or otherwise from taxation, and to report such property to public officers—Shinn v. Cunningham (Iowa) 94 N. W. 941. Contract to pay commissions to an agent for orders for applies for government vessels to the extent of one-half the net profits—Swift v. Aspell & Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 453. Contract between county officers and another, giving the latter a certain proportion of taxes recovered for discovering omitted taxes—Disbrow v. Board of Sup'rs of Cass County (Iowa) 93 N. W. 585. Written subscription in aid of a public improvement by persons having a peculiar and local interest therein or whose property will be specially benefited thereby—Hassenzahl v. Bevins, 24 Ohio Circ. R. 173.

Contracts held invalid.—Contract to procure legislative action to depreciate market value of securities of a certain corporation, providing that profits arising from speculation in such securities should be divided between the parties—Veazey v. Allen, 173 N. Y. 359. Contract to use personal influence to secure the consent of property holders to enable a council to authorize construction of an elevated railroad—Union El. R. Co. v. Nixon, 199 Ill. 235.

regulating public morals,[71] or of the laws regulating the sale and occupation of public lands,[72] or which tend to defeat the purpose of a public judicial sale of property,[73] are void as against public policy. A contract by public officials is not necessarily invalid because its period extends beyond the terms of such officers.[74] An agreement by a disclosure commissioner to wait for his fees until the defendant has collected them is invalid as a defense.[75] One who contracts with a city for printing need not comply with a provision inserted in the advertisement requiring the work to bear a union label, it being void.[76] A contract for transfer of a patent switch operator containing a covenant that in case patentee made further improvements, he would disclose the same to the other party and grant a like license was not void as against public policy if construed to mean improvements in switch operating mechanisms generally.[77] The fees allowed by law to a sheriff may be recovered by him though he has made a void contract with an attorney for the payment of fees greater than those allowed by law, but only as to services to which the agreement did not apply.[78] An attorney who, under a contract in violation of statute, pays a sheriff larger fees than are allowed by law may recover the excess in assumpsit or by set off though paid under a mistake of law.[79] Illegality of a contract between a sheriff and his deputy for farming out the office will not prevent the sheriff from recovering money collected by the deputy on process since he received them in his capacity as a de facto officer as well as by virtue of the contract.[80]

(§ 3) M. Contracts in restraint of trade; combinations and monopolies.[81]—

71. Note given in return for execution of written consent for the establishing of a saloon as required by statute. Written consent of adjoining property owners required by Acts 25th Gen. Assem. c. 62, § 17—Greer v. Severson (Iowa) 93 N. W. 72.

72. Agreement by a wife, deserted by her husband, that her son should contest an entry by the husband of a timber claim to prevent its contest by a stranger, obtain title in his own name and convey to his mother—Fleischer v. Fleischer, 11 N. D. 221.

Contracts held valid.—Contract between an entryman of public lands and another to sell the land to the latter made between final proof and receipt of patent is not invalid as an entry by one person for benefit of another—Doll v. Stewart, 30 Colo. 320, 70 Pac. 326. One who enters public land under an agreement with a third person that in consideration of advancements of money to get the patent, he will sell him timber on the land, may properly so sell the timber. Under Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2290, 2291, 2296—Butterfield Lumber Co. v. Hartman (Miss.) 34 So. 328. An agreement whereby a bidder at a lease of public lands was to bid on two tracts, one of them for another who was present and who would take the lease if the bid was successful, was not necessarily against public policy where the bidding was not chilled and the agreement was known to the officers taking the lease—State v. Follmer (Neb.) 94 N. W. 103.

73. Contract, the intent of which is to lessen competition at a foreclosure sale—Nitro-Phosphate Syndicate v. Johnson (Va.) 42 S. E. 995. Agreement whereby one party contracts not to bid at a public auction so as to enable the other to acquire the property—Coverly v. Terminal Warehouse Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 82.

74. Contract for convict labor—McConnell v. Arkansas Brick & Mfg. Co., 70 Ark. 568.

75. Watson v. Fales, 97 Me. 366.

76. Marshall & Bruce Co. v. Nashville (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 815.

77. Squires v. Wason Mfg. Co., 182 Mass. 137.

78. Pub. St. c. 287, § 32—Edgerly v. Hale, 71 N. H. 138.

79. Pub. St. c. 287, § 32, prohibiting such fees imposes a penalty on the officer only—Edgerly v. Hale, 71 N. H. 138.

80. White v. Cook, 51 W. Va. 201.

81. See further Combinations and Monopolies.

Definition of trust or combination in restraint of trade—Barataria Canning Co. v. Joulian, 80 Miss. 555; Herpolsheimer v. Funke (Neb.) 95 N. W. 687. Validity of contract for sale of coal and coke exclusively to one company—Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 610. Construction of act of June 20, 1893, Illinois, relating to control of trusts and combinations, as repealing act of 1891—People v. Butler St. Foundry & Iron Co., 201 Ill. 236. An agreement between dealers that each will not sell to any one in debt for purchases from any of the others until such debt is paid, is against public policy as lessening free competition (Rev. St. 1899, § 8966)—Ferd Heim Brew. Co. v. Belinder, 97 Mo. App. 64.

[Note.]—Agreements in restraint of trade. An agreement restraining trade limited as to time, place or persons, is not necessarily void—Hammon on Contr. p. 449. The courts of a few states have held that a contract not to engage in a particular business at any place within the state is illegal per se, but the weight of modern authority holds that such an agreement is valid if the public interests are not specially injured, and the restriction does not extend, as to space or otherwise, beyond what the court considers reasonably necessary for protection of the promisee, regard being had to the nature of the trade or business—Hammon on Contr. Id. Where the contract restricts the industry of a party so as to deprive the public of it, or where he is prevented from pursuing his occupation so as to support himself or family, the contract is void, and these occur where the contract is general not to pursue his trade at all, or not to pursue it in the entire country—Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 64; Hammon, on Contr. § 244a. The question of the reasonableness of a contract in restraint of trade is to be determined by the court and depends upon the circumstances of each case, such as the nature of the agreement, the business affected by it, the situation and population of the place where the business is located, the extent of territory covered by the business, and other circumstances—Hammon on Contr. p. 455, and cases there cited.

Contracts in restraint of trade which apply to a particular business and its territory have been upheld,[82] but the validity of such contracts is dependent upon the peculiar circumstances of each case.[83] The provisions of such contracts must be reasonable in the judgment of the court.[84] Combination by contract is unlawful if its purpose

82. A provision in a contract by which a firm agreed to bind themselves not to engage in the business in a certain territory, will bind partners—Raymond v. Yarrington (Tex.) 73 S. W. 800.

83. Agreements in restraint of trade.—An agreement by a former employe that for six years after severing his relations with his master he will not engage in the manufacture or sale of any of the articles so handled by his employer within the United States is in restraint of trade—Mallinckrodt Chemical Works v. Nemnich, 169 Mo. 388.

Agreements not in restraint of trade.—Agreement by one dealing in building materials on a sale of his business, to buy from the other parties and no one else, certain materials during five years—Trentman v. Wahrenburg, 30 Ind. App. 304. Where the owners of a building, who were conducting a department store, leased a portion to a firm engaged in a certain kind of business and covenanted not to sell articles of the same character as the latter firm during the lease, the agreement was not in general restraint of trade but merely prohibited the lessors from competing with the lessees in the same building and was valid—Herpolsheimer v. Funke (Neb.) 95 N. W. 687.

84. Hoops Tea Co. v. Dorsey, 99 Ill. App. 181.

Reasonableness as shown in particular cases.—An agreement by contractors selling their business and good will in building public buildings, not to bid on public works in a certain county for five years, is not in restraint of trade—Trentman v. Wahrenburg, 30 Ind. App. 304. An agreement providing that one party shall not engage in a competitive business for a time of reasonable length and within a limited area no larger than is reasonably necessary for the protection of the other, is not invalid as in restraint of trade—Herpolsheimer v. Funke (Neb.) 95 N. W. 687. A provision in a contract of sale of a business that the seller will not engage in a like business in any territory from which he secures his patronage, so as to compete with the buyer, is void as indefinite with regard to territory—Shute v. Heath, 131 N. C. 281. An agreement by one dealing in building materials, on a sale of his business, not to engage in that business for five years in a certain county, is not so unreasonable as to time and place of restriction as to be void—Trentman v. Wahrenburg, 30 Ind. App. 304. A covenant by an employe in consideration of his employment for a stated term that he will not during such time engage in business in competition with his employer any where within 1,500 miles of the latter's place of business is not void as against public policy and in restraint of trade, where the employer's business is the manufacture and sale of goods within the greater part of the territory covered by the covenant and where such manufacture involves secreting processes which must of necessity be communicated to the employe—Harrison v. Glucose Sugar Refining Co. (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 304. Where a husband and wife sold certain shares owned by her in a corporation, and certain land owned by both of them which was then used by the corporation in business, and agreed as to part of the contract that they would not engage in the same business in that village as long as the corporation continued in such business there, the contract was not void as in restraint of trade by interference with the interests of the public—Kronschnabel-Smith Co. v. Kronschnabel, 87 Minn. 230. Where a contract with the employe of a corporation on leaving its service provided that in consideration of a certain amount of money he surrendered his interest in stock of a corporation and his right to purchase stock under his contract of employment, and agreed that for a certain period, he would not engage in a competing business nor disclose the secret process used by the corporation in its business, it was not valid as in restraint of competition, since it was for the protection of the value of stock, his equitable title to which he had transferred to the corporation—S. Jarvis Adams Co. v. Knapp (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 34. The restrictive covenant in a contract made by a party not under disability, unlimited in time and covering the whole United States is subsidiary to the main contract, being consideration of payment for the sale of good will and is reasonable, where it is no broader than is necessary to save the rights and privileges to the purchaser for which he has paid—National Enameling & Stamping Co. v. Haberman, 120 Fed. 415. A contract of sale containing a condition that the sellers would not engage or become interested in catching or manufacturing products from certain fish along the Atlantic coast in competition with the purchaser for the period of 20 years is not oppressive and unreasonable so as to be void in restraint of trade—Fisheries Co. v. Lennen, 116 Fed. 217. A written contract for dissolution of a partnership of physicians by which one agrees not to practice medicine in a certain vicinity is void under the statute. Under Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, § 820, because not limited as to time during which the party must refrain from carrying on business—Hulen v. Earel (Okl.) 73 Pac. 927.

and effect necessarily restrain interstate trade,[85] or if intended to restrict production and prevent competition in trade, the invalidity depending on the peculiar circumstances of each case;[86] however, contracts relating to prices or exclusive sale of patented articles do not come within the rule.[87] The validity of a combination between retail dealers to prevent sales by wholesalers to person not belonging to the combination does not depend upon the number of members in proportion in the combination, or their number in proportion to the whole number of dealers in the trade.[88] Mere disadvantage of others not amounting to discrimination will not warrant interference with business on the ground of monopoly.[89] A contract or the grant of a franchise, made by a municipality, which tends to restrain trade and create a monopoly, is void.[90] A dealer injured by unlawful combination between retail lumber dealers to prevent sale of lumber by wholesalers to retailers not members of the association may bring an action under the statute against a member or members of the association personally, for damages.[91]

85. Under the anti-trust Act of 1890—Gibbs v. McNeeley (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 120; United States v. Northern Securities Co., 120 Fed. 721. An agreement between manufacturers of a certain commodity in one state which is an article of commerce in other states to reduce production and raise the price by destroying competition is in restraint of interstate commerce. (Anti-trust law of 1890)—Gibbs v. McNeeley (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 120. 60 L. R. A. 152. A combination to restrict competition between the members as individuals and outside competitors cannot be defended merely because no injury has resulted to the public or because the combination is thereby enabled to extend its field of operation; the effect of the contract under the anti-trust law as restraining interstate commerce is the only criterion—Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 610.

86. Particular contracts.—A sale of a patent by a corporation to another stipulating that the machinery for its manufacture should remain in the seller's building and that it should furnish power for the manufacture, is not void as in restraint of trade, no element of combination appearing—Pungs v. American Brake-Beam Co., 200 Ill. 306. An agreement between firms, sometimes competing with each other in buying grain, that all purchases at a certain place shall be on joint account is not illegal as in restraint of trade (Code. § 5060)—Willson v. Morse, 117 Iowa, 581. Where the price of compressing cotton in the state is regulated by the railroad commission and the cotton is required to be compressed at the nearest point, the purchase of six compresses by one company on the same day cannot be held invalid as a combination to restrict competition—State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co., 95 Tex. 603. Cove oysters are a "commodity" within the Mississippi statute against a combination to limit, increase or reduce the price of a commodity—Barataria Canning Co. v. Joulian, 80 Miss. 555. An agreement between the manufacturers of patent medicines and the wholesale dealers for the maintenance of prices established by the manufacturers, is not void as in restraint of trade though it destroyed competition as to prices, where it places no restriction as to the quantity to be sold or the territory for the transaction of business—Park v. National Wholesale Druggists' Ass'n, 175 N. Y. 1. An agreement whereby dealers and manufacturers agreed with a plumbers' association to sell supplies to none but members, the latter to boycott dealers found selling to plumbers without the association, is unlawful—Walsh v. Association of Master Plumbers, 97 Mo. App. 280.

87. Conditions to keep up a monopoly or fix prices imposed in a license by a patentee are not a violation of the Federal law against monopolies or restraint of trade—Bement v. National Harrow Co., 186 U. S. 70. A contract by which the owner of certain patents gives to another an exclusive right to lease instruments at certain rates within a certain territory, property in the instrument to remain in the owner, is not a violation of public policy as restraining freedom of sale and transfer of patented article—Whitson v. Columbia Phonograph Co., 18 App. D. C. 565. An agreement whereby a druggist purchased goods from a proprietor of a patent medicine providing that he will maintain the prices fixed by the manufacturer, is valid so that damages may be recovered for its breach—Park v. National Wholesale Druggists' Ass'n, 175 N. Y. 1.

88. Comp. St. 1901, c. 91 a, § 1—Cleland v. Anderson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 306. Compare, Park v. National Wholesale Druggists' Ass'n, 175 N. Y. 1.

89. State v. New Orleans Warehouse Co., 109 La. 64.

90. Validity of particular grants or contracts.—A contract with a company for lighting a town and furnishing light to inhabitants for a period of ten years is not void as creating a monopoly—Denver v. Hubbard (Colo. App.) 68 Pac. 993. A grant of the sole right to collect ashes and other harmless substances from private premises in a city invades the personal rights of citizens and is in restraint of trade as creating a monopoly. The articles are not in themselves nuisances though they would become such if allowed to accumulate—Iler v. Ross (Neb.) 90 N. W. 869. The power of the Alabama legislature to revoke a franchise containing exclusive features as to water supply for a city is not limited by the constitution to revocations that will work no harm to the corporators (Const. art. 1, § 23, and art. 14, § 10, construed together)—Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 186 U. S. 212.

91. Comp. St. 1901, c. 91a, § 11—Cleland v. Anderson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 306.

(§ 3) N. Effect of invalidity of contract.—The rights of parties in the subject matter of a contract void as against public policy may, nevertheless, be enforced when they do not depend on the contract itself.[92] The law will not interfere to aid either of the parties to an unlawful contract,[93] nor will equity intervene,[94] but equity will not refuse aid to a party to an illegal transaction if he does not require the aid of the illegal transaction to establish his right.[95] The breach of a contract will not be ground for recovery of damages for loss, where the contract is invalid under the statute.[96] An illegal contract will not prevent enforcement of taxes.[97] An officer may collect salary for his services though appointed under an illegal contract if he was in no way connected therewith.[98] In a suit on notes given in pursuance of a contract, the maker may plead that the contract was void as against public policy.[99] That a contract for a lease of realty was in violation of law, will not prevent the landlord from recovering possession after expiration of the term.[1] A wife cannot recover money paid by her husband in an attempt to conceal his fraud in regard to lands while acting as attorney for the owners.[2] That one is a member of a combination which violates anti-trust law of 1890, will not prevent his obtaining an injunction against third persons who attempt infringement of a patent which he owns.[3]

Separable and inseparable contracts.—The presence of harsh provisions in a contract, unenforceable in equity is no defense in a suit to enforce valid provisions thereof.[4] A contract partly invalid and separable so as to be enforceable as to the valid portion, must be enforced as to both parties in so far as it is valid.[5] A contract is void in toto if it is void in part and not severable;[6] hence a valid contract

92. Card v. Moore, 173 N. Y. 598.

93. Bass v. Smith (Okl.) 71 Pac. 628. Especially where both parties had knowledge of the illegality—Wheeler v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n, 102 Ill. App. 48. Recovery of money invested in a bet on a foot race—Snyder v. Nelson, 101 Ill. App. 619. Recovery by sheriff under contract with attorney for higher fees than allowed by law cannot be had, nor can the attorney recover back fees paid—Edgerly v. Hale, 71 N. H. 138. Where one of several parties engaged in maintaining an illegal lottery received money to further its purpose by bribing officers, and converted it to his own use, no recovery can be had by the other parties—Smith v. Richmond, 24 Ky. L. R. 1117, 70 S. W. 846.

94. Contract by one procuring settlers for public lands in violation of Organic Act, § 24—Bass v. Smith (Okl.) 71 Pac. 628.

95. A wife who had conveyed lands to another to enable her husband to leave the state to escape prosecution for a felony may have a conveyance of the land by her grantee to a third person set aside in order to subject the land to her judgment recovered on notes given for the purchase price—Robson v. Hamilton, 41 Or. 239, 69 Pac. 651.

96. Contract for sale of family homestead invalid because not signed by wife (Comp. St. c. 36, § 4)—Meek v. Lange (Neb.) 91 N. W. 695.

97. Contract between a town and collector of taxes extending the life of warrants in consideration of his guaranty of all taxes to be collected so as to enable him to compel taxpayers to reimburse him, will not avail a property owner who has not paid his taxes so as to prevent his arrest by the collector for delinquency—Page v. Claggett, 71 N. H. 85.

98. Sallade v. Schuylkill Company, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 191.

99. John T. Hardie's Sons & Co. v. Scheen (La.) 34 So. 707.

1. Sittel v. Wright (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 434.

2. Hamblet v. Harrison, 80 Miss. 118.

3. General Elec. Co. v. Wise, 119 Fed. 922.

4. Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Chicago, K. & S. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 882.

5. Edwards v. Michigan Tontine Inv. Co. (Mich.) 92 N. W. 491. Contract for management of a ranch and for its sale in violation of the insolvency laws—McVicker v. McKenzie, 136 Cal. 656, 69 Pac. 495. Tontine provisions in a life insurance policy because contravening statute, will not avoid the whole policy—Wheeler v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n, 102 Ill. App. 48. An illegal contract between a sheriff and his deputy for farming out the office, being separable as to the authority to manage the office and to receive public funds, will not prevent the sheriff from recovering money collected by the deputy on process—White v. Cook, 51 W. Va. 201. Contract for sale and management of ranch invalid as to the sale but enforceable as to the management; the agent must be allowed to recover for his services in management as well as required to account to the owner for money received—McVicker v. McKenzie, 136 Cal. 656, 69 Pac. 495. Stipulations that purchasers of a business of selling building materials will refrain from bidding on public works in a certain county for five years, and that the sellers will buy materials from the buyers for buildings during that period alone, may be separated so that the invalidity of one will not affect the other—Trentman v. Wahrenburg, 30 Ind. App. 304.

6. Pardridge v. Cutler, 104 Ill. App. 89. Conveyance of interest in firm together with a homestead entry which was void because final proof had never been made—Horseman v. Horseman (Or.) 72 Pac. 698.

joined with one void because of public policy is unenforceable where it is not separable therefrom.[7]

§ 4. Interpretation of contracts.[8] A. General rules of interpretation.[9]—The intention of the parties is to be determined in construing a contract, not from the facts as they existed, but as the parties supposed them to be.[10] The court will attempt to place itself in the position of the contracting parties so that it may view the subject-matter as they viewed it.[11] Previous understandings or agreements between the parties must not be considered to determine their intention, but it must be obtained from the instrument itself,[12] but circumstances attending the execution of the contract may be considered,[13] and the interpretation given by the acts of parties is entitled to great weight in determining their intention,[14] especially where the instrument itself is lost.[15] Where there are several stipulations, the intention of the parties must be determined from the entire agreement.[16] Conditions not expressed in a written contract cannot be introduced by inference.[17] A contract will be construed and enforced according to the law in force when it was made.[18] A debt created by a contract must be deemed to have been created on the day when the contract was made.[19] A contract will be so construed, if possible, as to promote benefits and prevent delay and idleness of property.[20] A contract uncertain in terms will be construed, if at all, most strongly against the party who caused the uncertainty to exist.[21] The law does not favor forfeitures and a provision in a

7. Sedgwick County Com'rs v. State (Kan.) 72 Pac. 284.

8. Construction of particular contracts.—Contract between prospective lessees of property, requiring one party to pay to the other annual payments during its occupation of the property—Stitt v. Rector, 70 Ark. 613, 69 S. W. 552. Agreement by debtor to waive limitations on debt—Pollak v. Billing, 131 Ala. 519. Contract for conveyance of mining rights—Sharp v. Behr, 117 Fed. 864. Installment contract for erection of building as to rights of owner to plead defects as defense in action to recover the last payment though certificates had been given by the architects—Blanchard v. Sonnefield (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 257. Contract for railroad right of way—Pontiac, O. & N. R. Co. v. Reed (Mich.) 90 N. W. 658. Contract as to irrigation rights—Mabee v. Platte Land Co. (Colo. App.) 68 Pac. 1058; Paterson v. Numberg (Colo. App.) 68 Pac. 134. For lease of water rights to particular lands—Bible v. Centre Hall Borough, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 136. Contracts with cities for public improvements—Gartner v. Detroit (Mich.) 90 N. W. 690; Piedmont Pav. Co. v. Allman, 136 Cal. 88, 68 Pac. 493. See, also, Public Works and Improvements; Public Contracts; Municipal Corporations. Contracts with the United States—Venable Const. Co. v. United States, 114 Fed. 763; United States v. Barlow, 184 U. S. 123; Monroe v. United States, 184 U. S. 524. Contract whereby land should be deeded to persons who hold it in trust, and divide in city lots and sell it for not less than a certain price, as to rights to reimbursement and lien on the share of the other party in the land for its enforcement—Griggs v. Gower, 29 Wash. 86, 69 Pac. 745. Contract for surrender of mortgage to third persons on payment of a certain debt to the holder owing from the mortgagee—Von Arnim v. Moore, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 271. Contract between railroad companies for use of bridge belonging to independent corporation—Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Dodd, 24 Ky. L. R. 2057, 72 S. W. 822. Contract by one to build house on land of another at cost after which the premises were to be sold and net profits divided equally between the parties—Davis v. Kellar, 25 Ky. L. R. 279, 74 S. W. 1100. Contract between a brewing company and an individual for the sale of a saloon with provisions requiring exclusive purchase of beer manufactured by the brewing company—Maloney v. Iroquois Brew. Co., 173 N. Y. 303. Contract for consolidation of corporation—Parks v. Gates, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 534.

9. Construction of mining lease as giving by implication the right to build a switch track to mines—Ingle v. Bottoms (Ind.) 66 N. E. 160.

10. Parrish v. Rosebud Min. & Mill. Co. (Cal.) 71 Pac. 694.

11. O. H. Jewell Filter Co. v. Kirk, 200 Ill. 382.

12. Pierpont v. Lanphere, 104 Ill. App. 232.

13. Pietri v. Seguenot, 96 Mo. App. 258.

14. Lewiston & A. R. Co. v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 97 Me. 261.

15. Humphreys v. Ft. Smith Traction, Light & Power Co. (Ark.) 71 S. W. 662.

16. Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Eastern Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 609.

17. Forfeitures not included in oil lease—Core v. New York Petroleum Co., 52 W. Va. 276.

18. Kendall v. Fader, 199 Ill. 294.

19. Wabash R. Co. v. People, 202 Ill. 9.

20. Oil lease—Parish Fork Oil Co. v. Bridgewater Gas Co., 51 W. Va. 583.

21. Keith v. Electrical Engineering Co., 136 Cal. 178, 68 Pac. 598; Kohlsaat v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 102 Ill. App. 110. Deeds are construed most favorably to the grantee—Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Hogan, 105 Ill. App. 136. Contracts limiting the liability of carriers, though construed strictly against the carriers, are construed generally contract to prevent forfeiture will be upheld if possible,[22] but the court cannot exceed a fair construction of the language used.[23]

(§ 4) B. What constitutes part of the contract.—If a statute requires that certain conditions must be inserted in a contract made by a city they are by force thereof inserted in the contract, but if such statute proves to be unconstitutional, such conditions do not bind the parties.[24] The presence of internal revenue stamps on a written contract will not prevent the printing beneath them from being treated as a part of the writing.[25] Marginal figures on a negotiable note are generally held not a part thereof.[26] Acceptance of an offer to contract under certain written terms will constitute them a part of the contract.[27] Where one of the parties had a copy of a written contract with a writing attached concerning portions thereof and knew of the construction of certain improvements under such writing, his possession and acceptance of the whole, when completed, amounted to a recognition that the writing constituted part of the contract.[28] Appended writings explaining the contract,[29] or terms of a contract on which a subcontract depends,[30] constitute a part of the contract, but otherwise as to an indorsement on a written contract in terms different from those in the body of the instrument.[31] Representations made by one of the parties to a contract, but not embodied therein, cannot be considered a part thereof.[32] Only such unexpressed conditions as are necessarily implied will be treated as a part of the contract.[33]

(§ 4) C. Character of contract; joint or several; promise or receipt.[34]—A con-

by the same rules as other contracts—Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 612.

22. Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Waring (Ga.) 44 S. E. 320. Forfeiture for delay—King v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 428. Where a prospective passenger on a steamboat failed to notice a condition on the back of his ticket reserving the right to the carrier to re-sell rooms not called for within 30 minutes after departure, thereby failing to secure his room, he was entitled either to the use of the room or to have his money refunded—Clark v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 691. A provision in a building contract that the owner may, in case of default by the contractor, proceed to finish the building on his own account, using materials brought to the place by the contractor for that purpose, is not a forfeiture of the contract, but is to be fairly construed as in the interest of both parties—Duplan Silk Co. v. Spencer (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 689. And the contractor is entitled to any balance of the contract price remaining after deduction of the costs of such completion—White v. Livingston, 69 App. Div. (N. Y.) 361.

23. Behling v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 800.

24. Cleveland v. Clements Bros. Const. Co., 67 Ohio St. 197, 59 L. R. A. 775.

25. Sloman v. National Exp. Co. (Mich.) 95 N. W. 999.

26. Sexton v. Barrie, 102 Ill. App. 586.

27. Utah Lumber Co. v. James, 25 Utah, 434, 71 Pac. 986.

28. General Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Mooresville Cotton Mills (N. C.) 43 S. E. 942.

29. Where the last clause of a contract which set a particular price for work, proposed that any extra work not included in the specifications should be supplied by the owner, or if by the contractor, at certain prices, a writing appended to the contract specifying what constituted such extra work and the prices for its construction was a part of the contract, and when such extra work was completed by the contractor, he was entitled to recover the extra compensation at the rates therein prescribed—General Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Mooresville Cotton Mills (N. C.) 43 S. E. 942.

30. Woarms v. Becker, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 491.

31. Insurance contract—Bushnell v. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co., 91 Mo. App. 523.

32. Representations as to the cost of manufacture of a machine for which a contract was made to organize a corporation—Macklem v. Fales (Mich.) 89 N. W. 581.

33. Where a contract does not in express terms require that one of the parties should perform certain conditions without value, an agreement for such performance will not be implied—Arthur v. Baron De Hirsch Fund (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 791. In a contract to construct a ditch for a drainage district it is an implied condition that the district will furnish the right of way—Rood v. Claypool Drainage & Levee Dist. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 207. A contract of suretyship will not be extended by implication but will be subject to the same rules of construction as other contracts—Ewen v. Wilbor, 99 Ill. App. 132. Where a contract for building an annex to an old schoolhouse contained provisions showing that the construction of the annex was dependent on the continued existence of the old building, there was an implied condition that destruction of the old building before completion of the contract should terminate it—Krause v. Board of School Trustees (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 1010.

34. Whether a contract is of sale or bailment will be discussed in Sales; Bailments; and like titles.

tract requiring a dealer to furnish material according to the builder's plans and specifications did not amount to a mere sale on inspection, but was a building contract requiring the material to conform to such plans and specifications.[35] An instrument acknowledging receipt of certain moneys to be repaid to a certain person or order within a certain time, whenever business will permit, at a certain rate of interest, is not a mere receipt, but a promise under seal for payment of money according to its terms.[36] A contract for drilling a well simply requires that the work be done with ordinary skill and in a workmanlike manner, and there is no implied warranty that water will be obtained or that the well will be a success either as to quantity or quality of water.[37] A contract cannot be so construed as to give the parties the right to sue thereon both jointly and separately without express authority, nor can it be treated as joint or several at the choice of the promisees.[38] If two or more persons undertake an obligation, the undertaking is presumptively joint at common law, and the presumption must be overcome by words of severance.[39] If a promise is implied by law and the consideration therefor comes from several persons jointly, the promise will be joint as to them.[40] A note given by two persons to obtain money for one of them is joint as well as several.[41] A contract for the purchase of property by several persons, each to pay so much for a share therein, in cash or in deferred payments, "secured by joint and several notes with interest," is a several and not a joint contract, binding each to pay the separate payments and not the entire price.[42] Where a number of corporations engaged in business separately, signed a contract to furnish contractors with materials, which contained nothing by which an action could be maintained against any one for breach thereof, there was a joint contract of the corporations.[43] The character of a contract as entire or divisible depends on the intention of the parties as shown by the language used, rather than the character of the subject-matter or of the consideration, though this may be considered, and if the duties of one party consist of several distinct things, and the price to be paid by the other is apportioned to each or left to be implied by law, the contract is severable.[44] A contract made partly by correspondence and partly orally will be treated as oral.[45]

35. Utah Lumber Co. v. James, 25 Utah, 434, 71 Pac. 986.

36. Jacobs v. German Workingmen's Ass'n, 183 Mass. 3.

37. Butler v. Davis (Wis.) 96 N. W. 561.

38. A contract requiring certain expenses to be apportioned in certain parts between three parties, will not bind one of them beyond his share, though another is insolvent and in default as to his portion—Harris v. Mercur, 202 Pa. 313.

39. Hill v. Combs, 92 Mo. App. 242.

40. Eveleth v. Sawyer, 96 Me. 227.

41. Under Civ. Code, §§ 1431, 1659—Leonard v. Leonard, 138 Cal. xix, 70 Pac. 1071.

42. McArthur v. Board (Iowa) 93 N. W. 580.

43. Booth Bros. & H. I. Granite Co. v. Baird, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 495.

44. Nolt v. Crow, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 113.

Entire contracts.—A compromise of judgments in consideration of compromises by other creditors, and one with the same creditor in consideration of the first recited—Dyer v. Muhlenberg County (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 586. Contract for different sorts of work in improvement of a house but for a lump sum—Pitcairn v. Philip Hiss Co. (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 492. Contract for purchase of all of a certain material to be used in a factory for five years, at a certain price per ton, to be shipped on orders as required—Loudenback Fertilizer Co. v. Tennessee Phosphate Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 298. Where a contract for cutting timber provided that cedar timber should not be removed so as to endanger pine by fire, and a subsequent contract by which the purchaser sold the cedar provided that it should not be cut until after the pine but should be cut before a certain time, or all timber then standing should revert to the seller, the provision for forfeiture in the later contract was entire and not severable—Small v. Robarge (Mich.) 93 N. W. 874. A contract to construct four buildings for a certain sum payable semi-monthly to the extent of 75% of the cost, and the remainder payable within certain time after completion of the buildings, is entire and not a severable contract, though it provides for a division of payment by specifying sums for each building—Wehrung v. Denham, 42 Or. 386, 71 Pac. 133.

Severable contracts.—Contract to train horses for a certain amount per month and ten per cent of purses won—Brien v. Stone, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 450. Contract to receive three specified cars of goods each representing a particular class of cars—Oliver

(§ 4) D. Interpretation of language used.[46]—Words in a contract free from

v. Oregon Sugar Co., 42 Or. 276, 70 Pac. 902. A contract for cutting and getting out timber from a certain tract to be paid for by installments as the work progressed is severable in that full performance is not necessary to recovery of compensation. The contractor may recover for part performance less damages for failure to perform remainder—Kerslake v. McInnis, 113 Wis. 659. A contract for the construction of a sample machine at a certain price and for thirty others at a certain price for each machine when delivered complete, is severable and the price for the sample machine may be recovered on its completion—Flather v. Economy Slugging Mach. Co., 71 N. H. 398. A contract for a certain number of cars of lumber to be taken as they could be produced during a certain period of time, complied with as to a part thereof is severable so that having been partly performed payment could be recovered for the lumber already shipped without the completion of the contract, where it provided for the reception of each car individually—Henderson Lumber Co. v. Stilwell (Mich.) 89 N. W. 718. Where a building contract included 86 houses, but the price of work on each was separately fixed and payments were to be made in amounts and at time enumerated in the estimate, the liens to be released on the houses on which the contract price has been paid and in default of payment and liens to be filed only on the houses as to which payment was in arrears, the contract was divisible, the consideration and remedy as to the subject matter being separate as to each building—Nolt v. Crow, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 113.

45. Stauffer v. Linenthal, 29 Ind. App. 305.

46. Words and phrases in particular contracts.—Particular words and trade terms in contract for sale of coal—Withers v. Moore (Cal.) 71 Pac. 697. Words "held in trust," used in an insurance policy—Southern Cold Storage & Produce Co. v. Dechman (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 545. Phrase "use and occupancy" in a contract for insurance —Tanenbaum v. Simon, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 174. Phrase, "terms cash, less 1½%," in a contract—Lawder v. Albert Mackie Grocer Co. (Md.) 54 Atl. 634. "By" and "through" —Wishon v. Great Western Min. Co., 29 Wash. 355, 69 Pac. 1105. Words "so as to be successfully operative" in contract for construction of railroad—Flanagan Bank v. Graham, 42 Or. 403, 71 Pac. 137, 790. Words "delivered Galveston" without explanatory note in a contract for purchase of wheat; evidence to be introduced on the question of construction before the jury—Cameron Mill & Elevator Co. v. Orthwein (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 463. "Settlement or recovery" in a contract giving an attorney a certain fee in case of such result—Randel v. Vanderbilt, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 313. Word "equipment" in contract for construction of street railway—McDonald v. Grout, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 18; In re McDonald, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 210. Where the word "required" in a contract for the sale of coal is construed by the parties as "needed," that construction will be adopted in a suit on the contract—Purcell v. Sage, 200 Ill. 342. The word "proceeds" in a contract whereby defendant agreed to hold certain notes and contracts in trust, and out of the proceeds of their collection to pay certain debts, the collection to be without expense to one of the beneficiaries, meant as to such beneficiary the gross amount of the collection to an extent sufficient to pay him and the collection expenses cannot be taken out of the fund applied to his benefit—Wheeler & W. Mfg. Co. v. Winnett (Neb.) 91 N. W. 514. "Profits" in salary contract—Mayer v. Nethersole, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 383. A contract of partnership providing that one of two brothers was to furnish services to the firm and "to board himself," was not a contract requiring him to pay board to his brother while living with him—Hancock v. Hancock's Adm'r, 24 Ky. L. R. 664, 69 S. W. 757. Testimony is admissible to show in construction of a lease that the lessee told the lessor that he was about to build a smelter, and that the premises were desired for dumping purposes, and that the word "tailings" used in the lease was used in its broader sense and intended to cover slag (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 3136, 3137)—Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 524. Soapstone is "rock" within a contract to drill a well—Okey v. Moyers, 117 Iowa, 514. The word "claim" in a contract for purchase of a mechanic's lien, provided it was a first claim on the property included taxes and the existence of a prior lien for unpaid taxes and will release the purchaser from taxation—Dodson v. Crocker (S. D.) 94 N. W. 391. The word "may" in a contract for construction of a sewer providing that if emergency demands the engineer may make alterations will be construed according to its usual meaning and not as "shall." The clause is for benefit of the commonwealth alone—National Contracting Co. v. Commonwealth (Mass.) 66 N. E. 639. Where a contract contained the words "nominal horse-power" which had no technical meaning in the trade, they must be construed as referring to the rated or professed horsepower and distinguished from the capacity above or below the nominal horse-power actually developed in use—Heine Safety Boiler Co. v. Francis Bros. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 235. A contract with a boom company to carry on its business as it "is now required" to carry it on does not require the party assuming control to keep the booms and piers in repair though the boom company was under obligations to its predecessor to maintain the booms and piers—Rumford Falls Boom Co. v. Rumford Falls Paper Co., 96 Me. 96. Because a contract to cut and deliver dead and down timber uses the word "about" or "more or less." in designating the quantity, the party executing it is not authorized to cut a large excess over the quantity mentioned—Pine River Logging Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279. Construction of a contract for a dam in certain contingencies as between a mill company and a water company using water from its mill pond, as to what constituted a part of the dam—Paris Mill. Co. v. Paris Water Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1372, 71 S. W. 513.

ambiguity will be given their plain and ordinary meaning,[47] and nothing can be added to it or taken from it by the court in construing it.[48] The purpose of the contract therefore will be given effect, if possible, by any reasonable construction of the language used,[49] and if the meaning is doubtful, that construction will be given which will give effect to all parts of the instrument,[50] and the more reasonable and probable of two constructions of which an ambiguous contract is susceptible will be adopted.[51] Clauses in general terms which would be conflicting if taken literally must be construed according to the most probable intention of the parties under all the circumstances.[52] Where a contract is subject to two constructions, one of which will make it valid and the other invalid, that construction will be adopted which will make it valid.[53] A plain and unambiguous contract cannot be misconstrued by reason of the voluntary payments made by one party through mistake which were not required by its terms nor demanded by the other party.[54] If two clauses of a contract are repugnant, the earlier prevails unless the inconsistency is such as to destroy the instrument as uncertain.[55] In construing a particular clause in a contract, the court must consider the entire contract, the relation of the parties, their connection with the subject-matter, and the circumstances of its execution.[56] The interpretation of the parties themselves in their dealings together will be adopted in an action on a contract,[57] especially where the contract is doubtful

47. The purpose of construing a contract is to learn the intentions of the parties and these when discovered will prevail over inapt expressions and verbal inaccuracies—Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Eastern Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 609; Williams v. South Penn Oil Co., 52 W. Va. 181. The rule applies to contracts of insurance—Hoover v. Mercantile Town Mut. Ins. Co., 93 Mo. App. 111; Fitzgerald v. First Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 474. Construction of contract between owners of related patents as to division of license fees and amounts received for damages for infringement—Wooster v. Trowbridge (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 667. A contract for the purchase of a mechanic's lien providing it proved to be a first claim on the property, does not show an intention on the part of the purchaser to exclude the lien of taxes under his contract—Dodson v. Crocker (S. D.) 94 N. W. 391. A contract requiring one to refrain from making claim against an estate for a debt in consideration of a share in any surplus remaining in winding up of a firm of which the decedent was a member if such surplus did not exceed his claim against the estate, does not mean that he would make no claim against the partnership assets but merely against the individual—Whitman v. Taylor, 182 Mass. 37.

48. Hart v. Hart (Wis.) 94 N. W. 890.

49. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Cannon, 201 Ill. 260. That construction of a contract which does not comport with the interest of other party, will not be adopted unless expressed in clear terms—Lewiston & A. R. Co. v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 97 Me. 261.

50. McGavock v. Omaha Nat. Bank (Neb.) 90 N. W. 230. The construction of a contract with regard to certain words which appeared to be ambiguous must be determined by the court as a question of law, and if under its determination, the words are not ambiguous, parol evidence cannot be admitted to show the construction of either party so as to vary or contradict such meaning, though the court may properly hear parol evidence of the collateral facts and circumstances to determine the true meaning of the words; but on the other hand, when testimony of a contradictory character is admitted to show the meaning of such words, the question is for the jury, and plaintiff must establish the meaning he asserts by the weight of his evidence—Cameron Mill & Elevator Co. v. Orthwein (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 463.

51. Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Eastern Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 609.

52. Losecco v. Gregory, 108 La. 648.

53. Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Waring (Ga.) 44 S. E. 320; Culver v. Caldwell (Ala.) 34 So. 13; Horton v. Rohlff (Neb.) 95 N. W. 36. The same is true of a single clause—State v. Mortensen (Neb.) 95 N. W. 831. Possible invalidity as suspending power of alienation in agreement for distribution of an estate—Union Trust Co. v. Owen, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 60. Where a contract is capable of construction either as legal or illegal, and either party, especially the party upon whom the main obligation rests, has uniformly construed it in the manner which would render it legal, that fact will be considered in determining its validity—Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Waring (Ga.) 44 S. E. 320.

54. Sharp v. Behr, 117 Fed. 864.

55. Covenant to buy goods followed by stipulation releasing liability to purchaser—Vickers v. Electrozone Commercial Co., 67 N. J. Law, 665.

56. Mayer v. Goldberg (Wis.) 92 N. W. 556; Losecco v. Gregory, 108 La. 648. Contract for purchase of iron containing provisions against loss by fire or strikes and for transference of the contract—Western Hardware & Mfg. Co. v. Bancroft-Charnley Steel Co. (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 176.

57. Clark v. University of Illinois, 103 Ill. App. 261; Williams v. Auten (Neb.) 93 N. W. 943; Linehan Ry. Transfer Co. v. New Orleans & N. W. R. Co., 107 La. 645; Porter v. Allen (Idaho) 69 Pac. 105, 236; City of Baxter Springs v. Baxter Springs Light & as to its meaning.[58] Where there is an obvious mistake on the face of a written contract, which is corrected by other expressions, it will be construed according to the evident intent of the parties as shown by the entire contract.[59] A statute will not be construed to avoid a contract unless it so specifically declares.[60] Where one who is ignorant and entirely unable to read or write English is induced to enter into a written contract by representations of the other party's agent altogether inconsistent with the contents of the instrument, which fact was known to the agent at the time of making the representations, the court will give such contract the construction understood and agreed to by the party so signing.[61]

(§ 4) E. Custom or usage as aids to interpretation.[62]—Contracts are always presumed to be made with reference to the existing customs, unless they are excluded by the contractual terms,[63] but usage cannot create a contract, where none existed without it,[64] and a custom to violate the law cannot be shown,[65] nor can usage be shown beyond what is sufficient to make clear the meaning of the contract.[66] Usage may be proven in order to give the intended effect to an ambiguous contract.[67] The parties must have knowledge of the custom or usage,[68] but it need not be coextensive with the state.[69]

Power Co., 64 Kan. 591, 68 Pac. 63; Fitzgerald v. First Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 474. Construction of constitution of New York Exchange—In re Hayes, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 264. Rejection of words from contract—Ricketts v. Buckstaff (Neb.) 90 N. W. 915. Contract for royalty in manufacture of dynamo by inventor of improved armature—Keith v. Electrical Engineering Co., 136 Cal. 178, 68 Pac. 598. A contract for additional compensation is a practical construction of the original contract between the parties for construction of a building—Board of Com'rs v. Gibson, 158 Ind. 471. In construing contracts in restraint of trade, reference should be had to the object sought to be attained and they will not be given a construction which, though warranted by the language, cannot be reasonably supposed to have been contemplated by the parties in view of their circumstances and context of the writing—Herpolsheimer v. Funke (Neb.) 95 N. W. 687.

58. Laing v. Holmes, 93 Mo. App. 231.

59. Noe v. Witbeck, 105 Ill. App. 502.

60. Citizens' State Bank v. Nore (Neb.) 93 N. W. 160.

61. People's Bldg., Loan & Sav. Ass'n v. Klauber (Neb.) 95 N. W. 1072.

62. Custom as fixing rate of compensation—People v. Clarke, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 78. See, also, 174 N. Y. 259.

63. Lupton v. Nichols, 28 Ind. App. 539; McCurdy v. Alaska & C. Commercial Co., 102 Ill. App. 120. The practice of years may establish a custom—Hayes v. Union Mercantile Co., 27 Mont. 264, 70 Pac. 975. Custom as to place of weighing goods sold—Gehl v. Milwaukee Produce Co. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 26. Custom as to "season" for traveling salesman—Johnston-Woodbury Hat Co. v. Lightbody (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 957. Custom to sustain implied contract—Bryan v. Brown, 3 Pen. (Del.) 504. If there is a certain definite, uniform and reasonable custom in regard to certain transactions, that custom is binding in dealings of that sort between parties. Dealings by cablegram, in which custom requires an answer to be sent within twenty-four hours—Robeson v. Pels, 202 Pa. 399. Where a custom is shown to have been as extensive and general as the business itself in which a contract was made, and defendant is shown to have been familiar with the customs of the business, he will be bound by such custom—Heyworth v. Miller Grain & Elevator Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 498. Where a contract for manufacture of a patent provided that the cost of labor should be calculated at the "average shop cost per man," it was proper in determining such cost to employ a custom of the manufacturer in adding 60% to the actual cost of labor for operating expenses—Bates Mach. Co. v. Cookson, 202 Ill. 248. Where parties to a contract have agreed on a particular point, but there is a controversy as to the terms, usages respecting them cannot be shown, since they are excluded by special agreement—Currie v. Syndicate Des Cultivators Des Oignons a' Fleur, 104 Ill. App. 165; McIntosh v. Pendleton, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 621; Thompson v. Exum, 131 N. C. 111. Custom in a certain trade cannot be shown in an action on a contract specifying the manner in which work was to be done—Independent School Dist. v. Swearingin (Iowa) 94 N. W. 206. A custom of land agents to get benefits from both parties to a sale while representing one cannot be shown in an action on a contract for securing an exchange of property on consideration of receiving certain personalty—Distad v. Shanklin, 15 S. D. 507.

64. Currie v. Syndicate Des Cultivators Des Oignons a' Fleur, 104 Ill. App. 165.

65. Action by brewing company to recover for money loaned a saloon keeper, in which plaintiff attempted to show that brewing companies were accustomed to take out licenses in their own names to be used by third persons—Koppitz-Melchers Brew. Co. v. Behm (Mich.) 90 N. W. 676.

66. Currie v. Syndicate Des Cultivators Des Oignons a' Fleur, 104 Ill. App. 165.

67. Baer v. Glaser, 90 Mo. App. 289. Construction of Constitution of New York Stock Exchange as to disposition of proceeds to membership of insolvent member—In re Hayes, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 264.

68. Hendricks v. W. G. Middlebrooks Co.

(§ 4) F. Terms as to subject-matter.[70]—An agreement as to the application of credits in an account which was afterward closed would not cover an account subsequently opened unless expressly so provided.[71] Bringing together materials for performance of a building contract gives the owner no right therein and he cannot restrain their removal by the contractor.[72] Where a subcontract for a building required work to cease, or extra work to be done on direction of the owner or architects, and a deduction or extra pay as a result, whatever the case might be, the contractor was not precluded from doing extra work.[73] Where, at the time a building contract was made, it was intended that part of an old building should be used in the construction of the new, and as the work progressed it became apparent that such portion could not be so used, extra work in making the new construction to take its place was not covered by the contract.[74] Where specifications require that the foundations of a building should go down to actual undisturbed earth and deeper than the drawings necessary for that purpose, the sinking of the foundation below the point shown in the drawings was not beyond or outside the contract and the contractor cannot charge therefor as extra work.[75] A contract for the sale of logs cannot be held to include logs sold and delivered to another under a previous contract.[76] A contract whereby a theatrical firm was to produce a play, restrictions being given against publication or transfer of rights and the author having control of the production, will not allow the firm to license production by other companies.[77] Where a new permit was necessary to reopen streets for repaving, after gas mains were laid and trenches filled, such permit must be secured by the commissioner of highways under a contract between him and the gas company providing for gas mains to be laid in the streets and requiring the commissioner to secure the necessary permits.[78] A contract whereby a doctor agreed to sell his practice and give (Ga.) 44 S. E. 835; Consumers' Ice Co. v. Jennings (Va.) 42 S. E. 879; Great Western Elevator Co. v. White (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 406.

69. Rastetter v. Reynolds (Ind.) 66 N. E. 612.

70. Construction as to subject matter.—Whether sale of a crop was of the crop itself or the mere hope of a crop—Losecco v. Gregory, 108 La. 648. Whether sale of a crop included damaged tobacco—Jacobson v. Tallard (Wis.) 93 N. W. 841. On a sale of goods failure to deliver the particular goods is immaterial if other goods equally good are delivered—Walker v. Taylor (Del.) 53 Atl. 357. As to quantity—Scully v. Detroit Iron Furnace Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 885; Excelsior Wrapper Co. v. Messinger (Wis.) 93 N. W. 459. What was included in sale of a machine for dipping chocolate—Weeks v. Robert A. Johnston Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 794. Compliance of grain with sample—Butterfield v. Butterfield (Colo. App.) 71 Pac. 639. Definiteness of shipping articles as to voyage—The Falls of Keltie, 114 Fed. 357; The Mermaid (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 13. Construction of oil, gas and mineral lease as to amount of product to which lessor is entitled—Dickson v. Fertig, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 283. Discharge from "any and all liability on judgments" for sum specified includes liability for costs and interest—Dyer v. Muhlenberg County (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 586. A contract to sell land confers an interest on the vendee who is to pay a certain debt and continue to occupy and pay rent for the lands though he has paid none of the debt and has performed only in respect to the other promises—Cone v. Cone (Iowa) 92 N. W. 665. A condition in a sub-contract for erection of a building, that final payment should be due when the work was completed and the sub-contractor had furnished the original contractor releases of all liens and claims, referred only to such as might arise under the mechanic's lien law of the state—Turner v. Wells, 67 N. J. Law, 572. Where co-sureties on a note paid it in equal portions under an agreement to hold it and share collections from the principal, and afterward one of them obtained assignment of a contract from the principal, under which he was to advance the principal money to carry out such contract, and was to receive payment on his debt out of the proceeds, such money was subject to the division under the agreement between him and his co-surety—Cramer v. Redman (Wyo.) 68 Pac. 1003.

71. Boody v. Pratt, 68 N. J. Law, 295.

72. Cameron v. Orleans & J. Ry. Co., 108 La. 83; Orleans & J. Ry. Co. v. International Const. Co., 108 La. 82.

73. Isaacs v. Dawson, 174 N. Y. 537.

74. Langley v. Rouss, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 1082.

75. Wear Bros. v. Schmelzer, 92 Mo. App. 314.

76. Yellow Poplar Lumber Co. v. Stephens, 24 Ky. L. R. 621, 69 S. W. 715.

77. Herne v. Liebler, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 194.

78. Under City Charter of New York, §§ 524, 525—Norton v. New Amsterdam Gas Co., 174 N. Y. 538.

up his office to the other party did not require that he should make arrangements with his landlord, of whom he rented the office, for its use by the purchaser, or with the other physician with whom he shared such office, but merely required that he vacate so that the purchaser might occupy it if he so chose.[79] Where one owning an interest in lands contracted for improvements to be paid for at certain stages of the work, and subsequently agreed to hold money due the contractor for benefit of the material man, no liability existed under the latter agreement where the work was not completed so as to entitle the contractor to the first payment.[80] A contract between husband and wife, declaring that irreconcilable differences existed and that a permanent separation was desired and a divorce was contemplated, which settled on the wife a small portion of the property in lieu of alimony and contained an agreement of dissolution of the marriage relations, was not one for mere separation, but was for the purpose of securing a divorce.[81]

(§ 4) G. Terms as to parties; privity of contract.—The construction of the terms of contracts as to who is privy thereto, or entitled to benefits, depends so much upon the circumstances of the particular case that no definite analysis is attempted, but the cases will be found represented in the footnotes. Some few instances have been thought worthy of attention in the text.[82] A party to a contract who is injured

79. Wallingford v. Aitkins, 24 Ky. L. R. 1995, 72 S. W. 794.

80. Young v. Smith, 202 Pa. 329.

81. Palmer v. Palmer (Utah) 72 Pac. 3.

82. Parties to license for use of patented machine—Warth v. Mertens, 173 N. Y. 626. Parties to railroad lease—Southern Ry. Co. v. Ensign Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 417. An agreement to pay taxes on trees growing on lands of another will not bind the state to look to the promisor though it is binding as between the parties—Williams v. Triche, 107 La. 92. Sufficiency of recitals to show that contract was made for benefit of a firm—Williams v. Magee, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 512. An assignment of a contract under an agreement that the assignee shall assume all obligations thereunder does not render him a party so that he may be sued by the other party—Goodyear Shoe Machinery Co. v. Dancel (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 692. An agreement by an insolvent husband to deed property to his wife if she will discontinue a divorce proceeding brought may be set aside by creditors of the husband—Oppenheimer v. Collins (Wis.) 91 N. W. 690. A creditor who claims the benefit of a contract by a third person with the debtor to pay the debt, is bound by equities arising between the parties out of the agreement—Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 65 Kan. 572, 70 Pac. 582. A written contract signed by the "building committee" of a certain church following the names of the committee, and containing an express promise on the part of the members, without a statement that they promised for or on behalf of each other, was a personal obligation of the committee, where no authority to bind each other was shown—Copeland v. Hewett, 96 Me. 525. An employee injured by an explosion of oil purchased by his employer cannot sue the seller to recover for injuries because the oil was inferior in quality, that being a foundation of an action for breach of contract, as to which he was not a party or privy—Standard Oil Co. v. Murray (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 572. Where at the time of sale of a paper mill to another corporation a side track had been constructed to the mill by the railroad company and used by the prior owner for nearly a year, the purchaser, charged with notice of its existence, was bound by the terms of the contract as to its construction and maintenance made by the vendor with the railroad company—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Chicago, K. & S. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 882. Where a contract was made whereby a person since deceased was allowed to name a child in consideration of his agreement to convey land to the child, and the latter continued to bear the name down to the time of bringing suit to obtain the land, he thereby ratified the contract made by his parents, and there was sufficient privity between him and the promisor to entitle him to sue—Daily v. Minnick, 117 Iowa, 563. If the purchaser of premises agrees to pay claims for materials used in buildings thereon, for which the vendor is liable, he becomes the principal debtor and the vendor a surety, but his undertaking will not inure to the benefit of a claimant if the vendor was not liable therefor—Hurd v. Wing, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 506. Where an agreement for the conveyance of land was on the consideration that the grantee should pay third persons a certain sum, though such sums were really gifts, the promise as to such third persons was supported by the consideration between the immediate parties as though the beneficiaries were actual parties, regardless of acts of the parties without consent of the beneficiaries—Tweeddale v. Tweeddale (Wis.) 93 N. W. 440. Mere consent on the part of a chattel mortgagee of cattle, that the owner might employ another to care for them, raises no liability on his part to pay for such care—Boston & K. C. Cattle Loan Co. v. Dickson, 11 Okl. 680, 69 Pac. 889. A sale of stock in a railroad company by a stockholder with covenants to erect a sawmill on lands adjacent to the road and ship lumber at a certain rate followed by subsequent transfers of the timber rights with the covenants attached confers no cannot recover damages from a third person whose negligence rendered performance by the other party impossible,[83] or from one not a party and without interest therein, though he made fraudulent representations which induced the contract.[84] A third person, for whose benefit a contract is made, may enforce it whether he had knowledge of it at the time of making or whether he formally assented thereto before action,[85] but one for whose benefit a bond on appeal was not made has no privity of contract therein which will allow him to compel the sureties to pay.[86] If a party assumes the fulfillment of a contract for another, the one to whom the latter is bound, if informed of and assenting to the agreement, is in privity of contract with the party assuming such fulfillment.[87] A debtor may sue another on a contract whereby the latter agrees to assume payment of his debt, but in a suit by the creditor, the third person may urge any set off in defense he might have had against the debtor in a suit on the agreement.[88] One who has an indirect interest in an undertaking by another to pay the debts of a third person is not in sufficient privity as to be enabled to maintain an action at law thereon.[89] A deed providing that a surety of the grantee shall have a lien on the land as indemnity gives a lien in his favor which may be enforced though he is not a party to the deed,[90] but it must appear that there was an intent by the promisee or person with whom the contract was made, to secure the benefit to the third party and that some privity existed between such persons.[91] The promise of individuals that a certain corporation which they intend to organize shall make certain payments will not bind the corporation, it not being in existence nor does it render them personally liable.[92] An agreement by the life tenant to buy improvements made by his lessee will not rights on the railroad company there being no privity between the company and the covenantors. The railroad corporation cannot contract in the name of an individual stockholder; it cannot enjoin carriage of the timber over another road—Waycross Air Line R. Co. v. Southern Pine Co., 115 Ga. 7. One who contracted for a contingent fee with defendants in an action to secure evidence to show that the ancestor of one of them who located a mining claim was a citizen, was entitled to recover from defendants his part of a judgment rendered in favor of defendants and third persons made parties to the action. The contract amounted to an assignment of so much of the judgment rendered in favor of defendants—Wood v. Casselleigh, 30 Colo. 287, 71 Pac. 360. Where a street railway company purchased all the equipment of a previously existing railway under a stipulation that the sale did not include the franchise, leases, contracts or power house machinery of the seller, the street railway company did not thereby become the successor of the railway company within a contract which obligated such company and its successors to pay for maintenance of a flagman at a steam railroad crossing—Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Fox River Elec. Ry. & Power Co. (Wis.) 96 N. W. 541. A verbal agreement to sell a certain privilege to land without conveyance of title, cannot be set up to defeat the right to recover the balance of the purchase price under a subsequent written conveyance, whereby with consent of both parties, such privilege is sold to a third person at an advanced price—Upchurch v. Bunn, 117 Ga. 54.

83. Byrd v. English, 117 Ga. 191.

84. Lemon v. Wheeler, 96 Mo. App. 651.

85. Erdman v. Upham, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 315. The law creates the relation of privity between the promisor and the beneficiary—Tweeddale v. Tweeddale (Wis.) 93 N. W. 440. If a fund is placed by a debtor in the hands of a third person to be applied to the payment of a certain debt, the creditor may sue the holder of the fund, though he was not present when the transaction was made—Howes v. McCrea, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 592. A promise by a son to his father on receipt of property from the latter that on the father's death a certain amount should be paid to a daughter, created a right in favor of the father, which, being assigned to the daughter, could be enforced by her —Ebel v. Piehl (Mich.) 95 N. W. 1004.

86. Partner has no interest in an appeal bond given by another who alone appealed from a judgment against the firm—Rowe v. Moon, 115 Wis. 566.

87. Contract to maintain another for life —Moore v. Hooker, 101 Ill. App. 177.

88. The creditor cannot sue at law but may be subrogated to the debtor's rights in equity—Greene v. McDonald, 75 Vt. 93.

89. Central Elec. Co. v. Sprague Elec. Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 925.

90. Blakeley v. Adams, 24 Ky. L. R. 263, 324, 68 S. W. 393, 473.

91. Frerking v. Thomas (Neb.) 89 N. W. 1005. Such a rule enunciated by statute in New Jersey does not extend the right of enforcement to third parties who would be benefited incidentally by performance. Pub. Laws 1898, p. 481, providing that third persons for whose benefit contracts were made, may sue thereon in their own name—Styles v. F. R. Long Co., 67 N. J. Law, 413.

92. Durgin v. Smith (Mich.) 94 N. W. 1044.

bind the remainderman.[93] Executors who sign a contract agreeing to do certain acts as executors and others in an individual capacity are only bound to the acts which they agree to do as executors.[94] Connecting carriers are not liable on an interstate contract of shipment, which in terms limits each carrier to its own line, there being no agency or partnership between them.[95]

(§ 4) H. Terms as to place and time.[96]—Where no time is given for performance of a contract it will be construed to require performance within a reasonable time.[97] A contract requiring work thereunder to commence "immediately" will be held to mean such time as is reasonably required to fulfill such terms.[98] A promise to pay when able cannot be sued upon without proof of ability to pay,[99] and the same is true of promise to pay money "as soon as he could."[1] A condition in a contract by a state officer that he would meet an obligation as fast as he could spare funds

93. Chilvers v. Race, 196 Ill. 71.

94. Myers v. Metzger (N. J. Law) 52 Atl. 274.

95. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Byers Bros. (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 427.

96. Time as of the essence of the contract—Thacker Wood & Mfg. Co. v. Mallory, 27 Wash. 670, 68 Pac. 199. Construction of electric power service contract as to the time when power should be taken by the purchaser—Laclede Power Co. v. Stillwell, 97 Mo. App. 258. Contracts as to time and voyage of vessels under charter—The Donald, 115 Fed. 744; The Helios (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 705. Where a contract with the manager of a corporation, requires him to place it on a paying basis and gives him a substantial interest in future earnings without regard to services rendered "thereafter," it will be construed to mean after payment of debts of the corporation and not after the execution of the contract—Dupignac v. Bernstrom, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 677. A contract for the raising of money and the organization of a corporation for the purchase of land, providing for payment of a certain sum by one of the parties when such money should be raised and title to the lands secured, only required the payment of such sum after the raising of the money for the purchase of the land and the securing of the title—Oliver v. Morse, 104 Ill. App. 129. A clause in a construction contract for work during five years and providing that the consideration is to be paid for services and materials and "the complete execution of said contract," is not a necessary condition to payment but merely an independent covenant giving a right to recoupment or to an action for breach thereof—Chapman v. Salfisberg, 104 Ill. App. 445. Where a contract between a railroad company and a ferry company, for transportation of cars across a river, provided that it should remain in force for ten years, that if at the end of five years the railroad should wish to buy the property of the ferry company, the basis should be founded on the fifth year's business for the remaining five years of the contract, and that if the parties desired to terminate the contract at the end of ten years, then the railroad company should have the right to purchase the boats and incline for a fair compensation, the contract terminated at the end of ten years with the right in the railroad company, if it did not wish to renew, to purchase the property at a fair price—Linehan Ry. Transfer Co. v. New Orleans & N. W. R. Co., 107 La. 645. Where land was conveyed to another in consideration of a contract for certain services to be performed by him conditioned on his retaining title during performance, and in case of sale to pay certain other persons specified sums of money, on a sale of the property the debt to such third persons became absolute immediately—Tweeddale v. Tweeddale (Wis.) 93 N. W. 440. Where a contract for bidding in land under foreclosure and holding the title for benefit of the owner until redeemed, fails because the purchaser did not pay the price and the land was resold and purchased by the purchaser for the benefit of another, the contract extended to the second sale and its binding effect was not destroyed by the subsequent contract made to purchase for another—Williams v. Avery, 131 N. C. 188. A contract for maintenance of a side track to a mill, during the time that business was carried on at the mill, referred to the particular business for which the mill was constructed and did not terminate by the sale of the mill, where it was operated for the same purpose thereafter—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Chicago, K. & S. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 882.

97. Walker v. Taylor (Del.) 53 Atl. 357; Murphy v. Dernberg, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 101; Krause v. Board of School Trustees (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 1010. Building contract—Andrae v. Watson (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 991. Contract to procure a loan—Collier v. Weyman, 114 Ga, 944. An agreement to work a farm in consideration of a half interest to be conveyed at some future time implies that a deed therefor will be given in a reasonable time—Reynolds v. Reynolds, 74 Vt. 463. Oil lease—Parish Fork Oil Co. v. Bridgewater Gas Co., 51 W. Va. 583. A contract providing that work should be done as to a certain particular within 30 days, the remainder as soon as practicable thereafter, did not require that it should have been done as soon as possible, with the best appliances, utmost facilities and extraordinary diligence, but as soon as could be by exercise of due diligence and without unreasonable delay—Williams v. Rittenhouse, 198 Ill. 602.

98. Ephrata Water Co. v. Ephrata Borough. 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 149.

99. In re Knab. 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 717.

1. Wright v. Farmers' Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 103.

from his salary does not render payment subject to such contingency but merely fixes time for payment.[2] A second contract made after performance under the first, providing that payment was to be made thereunder when the finances of the party permitted, means that payment is to be made when the party is able.[3] Unavoidable delay,[4] or delay caused by the other party,[5] or accepted by him,[6] will not affect the contract. Where one alternative of a contract expires by default the party obligated is immediately liable on the other.[7] Under a building contract prescribing a penalty for each day after a certain date until the building is completed, the contractor is not entitled to a deduction for Sundays.[8] Where a material man agreed to furnish materials to a contractor, if the owner with the consent of the contractor would retain control of sufficient funds due the latter, to protect him, he was not obliged to wait until the building was complete before recovering on the contract.[9] A contract continued through five years without an accounting as to receipts and disbursements, though legally due and not because of a failure in this regard, must continue in operation until a settlement is had between the parties.[10] Where a contract provided that plaintiff should receive one-half the profits above a certain price on a sale of property made by him for defendant, recovery cannot be had until the proceeds are reduced to money or defendant has so appropriated them as to constitute a complete equivalent to him of their money value.[11] Where a contract was partly written and partly oral, and the owner had made representations on which the other relied but which were misleading as to the amount of work to be done, and the work required more time than was contemplated, but was accepted, the time for completion was impliedly and necessarily extended.[12] If anything remains to render a contract binding, it is deemed executed at the place where the last act necessary was done.[13] The contract only remains in force until superseded by a later and inconsistent one, whether written or parol.[14]

(§ 4) I. Terms as to compensation.[15]—If a contract does not fix the compen-

2. Culver v. Caldwell (Ala.) 34 So. 13.

3. Flather v. Economy Slugging Mach. Co., 71 N. H. 398.

4. Where a contract for the manufacturing and delivery of railroad cars stated a certain time for delivery, with a forfeit for over time, subject however, to delay for unavoidable contingencies, the maker was not liable for delay for such unavoidable contingency, since the time specified in the earlier part of the contract was modified by the provision regarding delay—Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Eastern Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 609.

5. Where a building contract required the owner to furnish materials and shop drawings, and inspectors for the work were appointed on approval of the shop drawings, the owner could not complain of delay in notifying him of the appointment of such inspectors in an action by the building contractors for delay in the furnishing of the materials—Christopher & S. Architectural Iron & Foundry Co. v. Yeager, 202 Ill. 486.

6. Where an architect was also the owner's superintendent and on complaint of the contractor because of delay by other contractors, he assured the contractor that he should have had additional time and agreed to the amount of time demanded, a demand for such time in writing was unnecessary—Vanderhoof v. Shell, 42 Or. 578, 72 Pac. 126.

7. Where a contract provided for the conduct of litigation in consideration of conveyance of certain land within a certain time and in default thereof of payment of a certain amount of money, when the time had expired for conveyance, the party obligating himself to convey could no longer perform in that manner, but became absolutely liable for the payment of the amount of money specified—Ehrich v. Durkee (Colo. App.) 72 Pac. 814.

8. Vanderhoof v. Shell, 42 Or. 578, 72 Pac. 126.

9. Roussel v. Mathews, 171 N. Y. 634.

10. Derouen v. Romero (La.) 34 So. 415.

11. Rogers-Ruger Co. v. McCord, 115 Wis. 261.

12. Malloy v. Lincoln Cotton Mills, 132 N. C. 432.

13. Emerson Co. v. Proctor, 97 Me. 360.

14. Copeland v. Hewett, 96 Me. 525.

15. News carrier's contract—Stewart Law & Collection Co. v. Krambs (Cal.) 73 Pac. 854. Contract allowing one railway company to cross tracks of the other as to alternative conditions for payment of a certain sum or interest on such sum annually—Stockton v. Railway Co. (Fla.) 33 So. 401. Contract as to rate of wages and reimbursement for board of employes—Hilbrand v. Dininny, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 511. Contract for electric lights as to discounts—Missouri-Edison Electric Co. v. Hat & Fur Co., 94 Mo. App. 543. Mode of payment under terms of instalment contract—Caryl v. Kellogg (Colo. App.) 68 Pac. 114. Particular clauses in contract for furnishing gas sation definitely,[16] or if the benefits received are without its terms or are due to alterations, the measure of compensation is the value of benefits received,[17] but if the con-

as to prices—Muncie Natural Gas Co. v. City of Muncie (Ind.) 66 N. E. 436. The word "profits" in a contract with an actress for two seasons for a weekly salary, and a commission on "profits" in excess of a certain sum, means the difference between receipts and running expenses without regard to the production account—Mayer v. Nethersole, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 383. Under an agreement to board plaintiff and an assistant while they were drilling a well for defendant, defendant was not entitled to recover for board furnished after the time stated within the contract, where it appears that such statement was uncertain and amounted to a mere matter of opinion on the part of the other party as to the time required for the drilling of the well —Butler v. Davis (Wis.) 96 N. W. 561.

Conditions precedent to payment.—Necessity of final certificate of approval of construction given by New York Board of Underwriters to contractor equipping a factory with fire sprinklers, as to final payment—New York & N. H. Automatic Sprinkler Co. v. Andrews, 173 N. Y. 25. Where a building contract required a certificate to be issued to the contractor by the architect as an order on the owner to pay part of the value of the labor and material to a certain time, the making of such certificate and sending it to the owner who objected to the allowance therein and returned it to the architect did not amount to an issuance, there being no delivery to the contractor—Wear Bros v. Schmelzer, 92 Mo. App. 314. A provision in a building contract requiring that contractors shall make no claim for extra work unless pursuant to architect's order, and that notice of claim shall be made to him in writing within ten days of the beginning, the order and not the notice is necessary to recovery—Teakle v. Moore (Mich.) 91 N. W. 636. Where specifications in a building contract required the contractor to allow a certain amount for one item, and the materials used on that item amounted to a much larger amount, on which the owner was credited with the first amount, that the seller of the materials filed a lien on the building for the balance, will constitute no defense against the contractor's claim for final payment, on the ground that under the contract plaintiff was not entitled to final payment until the owner was satisfied that no liens existed against the property—Vanderhoof v. Shell, 42 Or. 578, 72 Pac. 126.

Particular building or material contracts.—See "Building and Construction Contracts." Instalment contract for construction of a building as to payments during progress of the work—Mullin v. Langley, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 789. Where a contract for material set out an itemized statement thereof and the price, one party was bound to furnish only the amount specifically mentioned and the other was bound to pay only a reasonable compensation for additional material furnished with his consent—Libby v. Deake, 97 Me. 377. Where a contract for an entire piece of work is made with one who has authority under his contract with the owner only to incur expenses sufficient to satisfy a mortgage which he holds on the property, the contractor may nevertheless recover his full amount from such person where he did not know of the limits as to expenditures—Hill Bros. v. Bank (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 307. Where a building contract provided specifications as to the manner in which the work should be done, as to extra work required by conditions arising after the work had begun, the contractor was entitled to rely upon such specifications, and if they work incorrectly and render extra work necessary, he was entitled to recover—Langley v. Rouss, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 1082. Where a construction contract with specifications provides that extras shall not be paid for unless the price was agreed upon in writing before the work was done, recovery may be had for extra work though there was no writing, where the specifications for that particular work contained no such provision—Teakle v. Moore (Mich.) 91 N. W. 636. Where a building contract provides that if any evidence of a lien appeared against the contractor, the owner should retain sufficient to indemnify him against it, the owner was entitled to credit for a subcontractor's judgment in enforcing a lien against the property in an action against him by the contractor—Wear Bros. v. Schmelzer, 92 Mo. App. 314. Where a contractor receives and disposes of all the materials for a certain work, under a contract to pay one-half in cash and the rest in bonds secured by mortgage at market value, and fails to complete the contract, the materialmen may demand the full compensation—Cameron v. Railroad Co., 108 La. 83. Where a contract for an excavation provides that it will be necessary to pile the earth removed because of the presence of quick sand, the contractor is entitled to compensation for all earth necessarily removed at the agreed price, though part of it consisted of earth which flowed into the excavation from the sides during the process of the work—Carroll Contracting Co. v. Roofing & Paving Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1119.

16. Where a contract for yearly rental of hydrants to a city provides that the price shall not be more than $50, the value of the use is the criterion of compensation in the absence of any further agreement—City of Valparaiso v. Water Co., 30 Ind. App. 316. Where there was no agreement as to the compensation an engineer should receive in superintending the work of placing electric wires under ground for several electric companies, and the contractor was to receive monthly payments on estimates furnished by engineer, it will be presumed as benefits accrued with progress of the work that the compensation of the engineer was apportionable and he was entitled to recover for services rendered during progress of the work and before its completion—Wagner v. Illuminating Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 966.

17. Reichert v. Brown, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 782; Barnes v. District of Columbia, 37 Ct. Cl. 342; Isaacs v. Dawson, 70 App. Div. (N.

tract stipulates a certain compensation, such compensation may be recovered though greater than the real value,[18] and a claim for extra work on a contract cannot be made where it does not appear whether there was an express or implied consent of the other party thereto.[19] Where a party contracting to perform certain work is required to meet extra expenditures not contemplated by the contract through the action of the other party, he is entitled for reimbursement therefor,[20] but unforeseen expenses occurring which were not contemplated by the conditions of the contract need not be met by the other party in the absence of an express agreement so to do.[21] Work and material made necessary because of the defective manner in which a contract was performed will not entitle the contractor to extra compensation.[22] Where by reason of the acts of one of the parties to a contract, the other is prevented from performance, he may still recover at the contract price for the portion of the contract completed.[23] To recover for work anticipated under the terms of the contract as necessary in a certain contingency, it must appear that the contingency occurred.[24] An express promise to pay for services must be shown.[25] Where the rate for publication of legal notices in a city was fixed, that the customary rate, during a long course of dealing before passage of the charter, was greater, will not justify its allowance.[26] One who solicits work for another for a portion of the net profits thereon is entitled to no compensation where the latter settles an action for services at a loss unless it is shown that recovery might have

Y.) 232. If a contractor is required to furnish material and do work outside his contract, he may recover a reasonable sum as provided in addition to the actual cost of such extra materials and work—Venable Const. Co. v. United States, 114 Fed. 763. Where a contract is for an aggregate price merely, the measure of value for extra work and materials is the cash market value and not the price paid for similar materials and labor under the main contract—Board of Commissioners of Fulton County v. Gibson, 158 Ind. 471. A manufacturer may recover the increase in cost of manufacture of a sample machine due to changes in plans, following an oral agreement subsequent to the original written one, since the law implies a promise therefor—Flather v. Economy Slugging Mach. Co., 71 N. H. 398. Where a contract provided for the setting of terra cotta blocks in the floors of a building except as to the ground floor, where there was a basement and a cellar also, the basement being referred to as the basement or ground floor, the setting of blocks on the ground floor by the contractor under the express direction of his superior was extra work for which he was entitled to recover in addition to compensation named in his contract—Isaacs v. Dawson, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 232.

Compare.—Where it appears that part of the work done under a certain contract was not contemplated in the original contract but was accepted by the other party, the builder was entitled to recover for such work at the rate he was paid for work originally contemplated—Malloy & Boggs v. Cotton Mill Co., 132 N. C. 432.

18. Niemoller v. Duncombe, 50 App. Div. (N. Y.) 614.

19. Niemeyer v. Woods, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 630.

20. Illinois Cent. Ry. Co. v. Manion, 23 Ky. L. R. 2267, 67 S. W. 40. Though a contract for grading a city street provides that the engineer was the contractor's agent in fixing grades, where the contractor called attention of the city to an error therein, and was directed to proceed according to the engineer's directions regardless of his objection, he was entitled to recover for work made necessary by the error—Becker v. City of New York, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 635.

21. Expenses of injunction suit to prevent the raising of a sunken vessel by a third person, incurred by one who had contracted with the owner for that work—Murphy v. Northern S. S. Co. (Mich.) 91 N. W. 142. Where specifications submitted by one of the parties, to a contract for sinking piers, to the other, show the character of the different strata through which the work was to be done, and such party bid on the work relying on such specifications, it could not recover damages for extra work because of a necessity of removing logs in excavation, since the plans only warranted substantial accuracy and did not guarantee the conditions to be as represented—Groton Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. Railway Co., 80 Miss. 162.

22. Vanderhoof v. Shell, 42 Or. 578, 72 Pac. 126.

23. Pitts v. Davey, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 96. One who has contracted to do work on a building may recover for the portion of the work done which was to be paid for in instalments, where the building fell while in course of construction through the negligence of the owner's agents—Teakle v. Moore (Mich.) 91 N. W. 636.

24. National Contracting Co. v. Com. (Mass.) 66 N. E. 639.

25. Patton v. Wells (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 337.

26. People ex rel. Smith v. Clarke, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 78.

been had by prosecution.[27] Where by a contract for prosecution of a claim to a Mexican grant, an attorney was to receive as compensation one-tenth of the land less 640 acres, it was intended that that amount should be taken from his tenth after division.[28]

(§ 4) J. Terms for compromise or arbitration.[29]—An arbitration clause in a building contract on which a bond is given to a corporation without reference to its successors or assigns does not apply to a dispute as to whether such bond could be assigned.[30] A provision in a building subcontract, that disputes regarding the meaning of drawings or specifications shall be decided by the architect, does not cover a dispute as to whether certain work required by them is included in the subcontract.[31] Where a clause of a building contract provides for reference of disputes to certain architects, a member of the firm of architects named, who was in charge of the work and recognized by the parties, though his name did not appear in the firm name, is a proper arbitrator and his acts are binding on the parties.[32] A condition in a contract to furnish coal to a city for a certain period provided that the water engineer should interpret its conditions and that his decision in case of dispute was to be final did not apply to the question whether the city was in default because of nonpayment of instalments on the contract.[33]

(§ 4) K. Terms as to performance.[34]—To constitute performance or completion of the contract it must reasonably appear that benefits received by one party re-

27. Comer v. Illinois Car & Equipment Co., 108 La. 179.

28. Adams v. Hopkins (Cal.) 69 Pac. 228.

29. What constituted proper subject for arbitration under terms of building contract —McClellan v. McLemore (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 224. A contract providing for liquidated damages for delay in completion of a building, and that alterations must be made by written order of the architect, the value of the work to be computed by him and added to or taken from the contract price and damages for delay to be determined by the architect or by arbitration, does not require that the damages caused by the failure to complete within the limit should be submitted to the architect or the arbitrator—Drumheller v. American Surety Co., 30 Wash. 530, 71 Pac. 25. Where a contract for the furnishing of materials provides for arbitration by the architects whose decision should be final, a dispute as to whether the subcontractor should recover for all materials specified, though he had not delivered the whole amount because such amount was rendered unnecessary by reason of rock foundation being found sooner than was anticipated, is a matter of dispute within the arbitration clause—Wymard v. Deeds, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 332.

30. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. v. Howell, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 255.

31. Isaacs v. Dawson, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 232.

32. Wymard v. Deeds, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 332.

33. City of Baltimore v. Schaub Bros., 96 Md. 534.

34. Contract by second mortgagees with lienors for foreclosure and settlement—Jones v. Garrigues, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 539. Contract by general manager of railroad company for construction of a road within a stated time "so as to be successfully operative," in consideration of all donations and bonuses given to the company—Flanagan Bank v. Graham, 42 Or. 403, 71 Pac. 137. Where a city engineer in charge of a contract for construction of a sewer had reason to believe that part of the sewer had been laid on the wrong grade, and possessed power to change the construction if imperfect, he has authority to require work to be done by other parties if the contractor refuses to correct the defect and such action does not amount to an ousting of the contractor from the work—Brown v. City of Baton Rouge, 109 La. 967. A contract for aid to secure consent of adjacent property owners to the erection of an elevated railroad loop, giving a bonus for successful effort in locating road, could not be construed to make the right to receive such bonus conditional on passage of an ordinance giving the right to build the entire loop, where part of it was already constructed when the contract was made and various ordinances were given for construction of remainder, though no one ordinance provided for construction of the entire loop —Union Elevated R. Co. v. Nixon, 199 Ill. 235.

Extent of obligation; terms as to liability for breach.—A contract to furnish beef to the men working for a contractor in building a railroad does not apply to the men employed by subcontractor under it, where he is also building part of the road on his own account—Fitzgerald v. First Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 474. A contract whereby one person agrees to disclose the whereabouts of another so as to enable a third person to capture him requires the first party to give information of facts actually in existence which will lead to the capture or enable the other party to accomplish it—Cash v. Southern Exp. Co., 133 Ala. 272. An agreement between a manufacturer and a patentee for the manufacture of certain articles, by which the patentee agreed to protect the manufacturer from infringesulted from the efforts of the other under its terms.[35] Where parties for whom certain work is to be performed have as good means of knowing of the completion of the ment suits, will not require a bond of indemnity on the bringing of a suit, and a failure therein will not amount to a breach of the contract—National Machine & Tool Co. v. Machinery Co., 181 Mass. 275. Insurance by railroad employe in accident company, the premium of which was paid partly by the employe and partly by the company, and acceptance by him of benefits thereunder will not discharge the company from liability for his injuries where there is no contract by which he agrees to accept the insurance benefits in settlement of his claim against the company—Dover v. Railway (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 298. It is no defense to an action to recover unpaid instalments of royalty on a contract for the exclusive privilege of running an observation wheel at a pleasure resort, that during a part of the time for which royalty was demanded, defendants did not own or run the wheel—Sommers v. Myers (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 812. Where a mortgagee agrees with a contractor who has arranged to build houses for the owner, that if the contractor will complete the buildings he will retain sufficient money coming to his hands for the owner and instead of paying it to the contractor when he receives it, pays it to the owner, the contractor may collect the amount from the mortgagee under the contract—Prata v. Green, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 224. A contract whereby one agreed with the guardian of a minor to recover the minor's inheritance from a certain estate and to pay all fees for attorneys employed from his own share of the fund to be recovered will require that the claim of an attorney employed should be enforced against the one undertaking the recovery and not against the estate of the minor—Kersey v. O'Day (Mo.) 73 S. W. 481. A contract providing for erection of an ice plant and for acceptance or rejection by the other party, and that if rejected such party should permit the builder to enter and remove machinery without charge, does not limit the latter's liability for failure to fully perform, to a return of the money received for construction of the plant, though it provides for such return in the contract —Harrison Bros. v. Murray Iron Works Co., 96 Mo. App. 348. A requirement in an advertisement for bids on a building, that the successful bidder shall give a bond, contemplates security to the owner for performance of the contract and not that he must perform acts which he is not otherwise required to perform so as to protect the surety, and he is not required to accept the bond stipulating that he give immediate notice in writing of default to the surety and that he institute any suit on the bond within six months after completion of the work—Brown v. Levy (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 255. A contract between a mill company and a water company, allowing the latter to take a certain amount of water from the stream and providing that the former should not lower water in a pond below a certain level unless to make repairs, whereupon notice should be given to the water company which should without delay at its cost, construct a suitable cofferdam, the provision for such dam was not merely for the benefit of the water company and the dam must be sufficient to allow the mill company to make repairs—Paris Milling Co. v. Paris Water Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1372, 71 S. W. 513.

Waiver of terms.—Either party may waive a provision in a building contract so far as intended for his benefit which requires that a claim for alterations or extra work shall be first described in writing and the valuation agreed upon in writing—Copeland v. Hewett, 96 Me. 525. Where a provision in a building contract required that the materials furnished and the work done should satisfy a certain architect as agent of the owner, he had authority to waive a provision declaring that no extra work should be paid for without an itemized estimate by the contractor and the architect's written order for payment—Langley v. Rouss, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 1082. Oral direction and sanction of an architect to the performance of extra work under a contract requiring work and materials to conform to his satisfaction acting as the owner's agent, will entitle the contractor to recover for such extra work without the architect's certificate, as required by the contract, if he unreasonably refused to provide it—Langley v. Rouss, 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 1082. Failure of the architect to reject promptly defective building materials or construction, as work proceeds, amounts to a waiver of such defects under a condition providing that materials used and work done shall be subject to his judgment—Siebert v. Roth (Wis.) 95 N. W. 118. Where a building contract requires payments to be made only on architect's certificate, and provides that he should have power to reject any work not in accordance with the specifications, and should be the arbiter of disputes, and it appears that during the work he inspected materials and work and approved them and made directions for the correction of errors, which were complied with, and afterward he agreed with the parties to accept the contract excepting certain alterations, there was a waiver of the requirement of his final certificate as a condition precedent to a suit for final payment—Vanderhoof v. Shell, 42 Or. 578, 72 Pac. 126.

35. Where several reports concerning a mine were furnished to a prospective buyer, evidence merely that he became the purchaser, will not entitle one who made one of the reports under a contract for certain compensation, if a sale is effected "by" and "through" his report, to compensation—Wishon v. Great Western Min. Co., 29 Wash. 355, 69 Pac. 1105. Where a prospective purchaser of mineral lands saw the report of a geologist whom the owner had engaged to examine it as to its value under a contract for compensation in case his report should lead to a sale of the lands, such report will be deemed to have indirectly aided the sale if it was in the purchaser's mind at the time of sale and was regarded by him as a means for future sale—Wheeler v. Chestnut, 95 Mo. App. 546.

contract as the party who is to perform, they are not entitled to notice of such completion in the absence of special agreement.[36] Where the sale of a business includes good will, the sellers may re-engage in the same business in the same vicinity in absence of an agreement not so to do, but they cannot appeal to their old customers to deal with them or not to deal with the purchasers.[37] A contract to rent land to a good, reliable tenant, who can provide himself during its tilling and can plant a certain amount of grain, does not necessarily bind the party making it, that the land shall in any event be put into crops, but only to furnish a tenant able and willing to put in the crops.[38] Where a contract for work on a boiler house and engine room provided that it should be performed in a thorough and mechanical manner and water tight, subject to the approval of the architect, the construction was to be water tight only so far as the flowing of the plant would produce such result.[39] A provision in a subcontract for a building, requiring the subcontractor to omit work called for in his contract or to do extra work when directed by the owners or architects, for a deduction from the contract price or extra pay as the case might be, will not prevent him from doing extra work.[40] Under a contract for the construction of a sewer providing that the engineer should make weekly allowances for work done reasonable in his judgment according to the relative difficulty of the work, the contractor could not stop work in difficult ground and excavate in other places in order to recover payment.[41] Where a contract for the sale of a stage line called for payment of a certain amount per month unless an opposition line was operated, the purchaser was justified in refusing payments where it appeared that other vehicles were used for carrying passengers and were advertised as a stage line, and succeeded in drawing considerable business away from him.[42] Where a contract with the United States for construction provides that articles will be loaned the contractor for performing the contract, to be returned in good condition, or replaced if lost or damaged, he cannot be required to replace articles because of ordinary wear, but only because of damage in excess of wear.[43] Where specifications in a building contract for the United States, recited, as to an alternative bid, that the work must be performed in compliance with drawings furnished, "including all necessary changes on account of said proposed construction," they were for the benefit of the government and it had the right to require use of iron beams, though they were not usually required in such buildings without liability for extra compensation.[44]

(§ 4) L. Terms for acceptance or rejection of performance.—A provision in a contract that one party shall determine all questions of performance will not entitle him to reject performance without reason and the other party may raise the question of substantial performance;[45] but if performance is to be subject to the acceptance of a certain person, his right of rejection in good faith is absolute.[46] Where

36. Drew v. Goodhue, 74 Vt. 436.

37. Zanturjian v. Boornazian (R. I.) 55 Atl. 199.

38. Barr v. Cardiff (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 341.

39. Dwyer v. New York, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 224.

40. Isaacs v. Dawson, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 232.

41. National Contracting Co. v. Commonwealth (Mass.) 66 N. E. 639.

42. Monroe v. Wilson, 29 Wash. 121, 69 Pac. 633.

43. United States v. McIntosh, 117 Fed. 963.

44. Miles v. United States, 113 Fed. 1011.

45. Schliess v. Grand Rapids (Mich.) 90 N. W. 700.

46. Barrett v. Coal Co., 51 W. Va. 416. Engineer as arbiter of railroad construction contract—North American Ry. Const. Co. v. R. E. McMath Surveying Co. (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 169. Conclusiveness of architect's certificate—Heberlein v. Wendt, 99 Ill. App. 506; Perry v. Levenson, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 94. Where a contract for street paving is subject to the approval of the board of public works, their decision is binding as to its rejection, unless it appears that they acted unreasonably, arbitrarily or fraudulently—Brownell Imp. Co. v. Critchfield, 197 Ill. 61.

a construction contract provides that the right of final acceptance or rejection could not be waived at any time during progress of the work, the failure of the contractor to object while on the ground during progress of the work did not amount to an acceptance.[47]

(§ 4) M. Terms for election under the contract and its exercise.—Where two joint tenants after judgment in partition agreed with the judgment creditors holding a lien on the interest of the other tenant that he would purchase and hold as trustee for them and that if at the end of a year the property had not been sold, they might elect to buy, giving him a certain amount or that he might buy from them at a certain amount, the judgment creditors were required to elect whether they would buy the entire property at the expiration of the year or within a reasonable time.[48] Where a contract for work provided that it should be done in a workmanlike manner, but provided two alternative methods, the contractor was not required to use one of such methods, but was allowed to choose whichever of the two would be most likely to insure the desired result.[49] After election under conditions in a contract giving that right, and performance in accordance with such election, a party cannot rescind his action and choose the other alternative.[50]

§ 5. Conflict of laws.[51]—A contract will depend for its validity and construction upon the law of the place where it is made,[52] unless contrary to the public policy or morals of the state where it is sought to be enforced,[53] or, unless by its terms, it is to be performed elsewhere,[54] or unless it refers to real property when

47. Brownell Imp. Co. v. Critchfield, 197 Ill. 61.

48. Turner v. Baldwin, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 639.

49. Independent School Dist. v. Swearingin (Iowa) 94 N. W. 206.

50. Gloe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. (Neb.) 91 N. W. 547. Where creditors, after judgment for partition sale, acquiesced in a purchaser's retaining property for fifteen months after expiration of the year, they could not elect to take the property so as to bind the purchaser—Turner v. Baldwin, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 639.

51. See further the title Conflict of Laws.

52. In re St. Paul & K. C. Grain Co. (Minn.) 94 N. W. 218; Bath Gaslight Co. v. Rowland, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 563; Emerson Co. v. Proctor, 97 Me. 360. Validity of terms of a contract as to interest—Kroegher v. Calivada Colonization Co. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 641. Form and solemnity in execution—Roubicek v. Haddad, 67 N. J. Law, 522. Contract to sell lands as governed by statute of frauds—Goldstein v. Scott, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 78. Life insurance policy—Franklin Life Ins. Co. v. Galligan (Ark.) 73 S. W. 102. Statutory provisions of the state cannot be avoided in an insurance policy by a provision adopting the laws of another state—Albro v. Manhattan Life Ins. Co., 119 Fed. 629; Born v. Home Ins. Co. (Iowa) 94 N. W. 849; Pietri v. Seguenot, 96 Mo. App. 258. However, it has been held that an application for life insurance in a New York company made in the state of Washington providing that it shall be construed according to the laws of New York, and a policy issued thereon reciting the same condition, will render the contract of insurance a new York contract governed by its laws—Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Hill (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 708. Contract of shipment—Herf & F. Chemical Co. v. Lackawanna Line (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 346. Where a contract between the officers of a New York corporation and other parties, to share in profits from construction and equipment of a railroad, was made without making the railroad company a party, and afterward the company was consolidated with another organized under the laws of Pennsylvania, the contract though void in the latter state may be enforced there as between the parties, where it is valid in New York—Rumsey v. New York & P. R. Co., 203 Pa. 579. Sale of liquors—P. Schoenhofen Brew. Co. v. Whipple (Neb.) 89 N. W. 751; J. J. Eager Co. v. Burke, 74 Conn. 534; Bluthenthal v. McWhorter, 131 Ala. 642. Purchase of stock—Gaylord v. Duryea, 95 Mo. App. 574 See ante, p. 560, note 61.

53. Parker v. Moore (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 799; Palmer v. Palmer (Utah) 72 Pac. 3. Marriage settlement void in one state because of marriage within a year after divorce will not be enforced there though valid in state where made—Wood v. Wood's Estate, 137 Cal. 148, 69 Pac. 981. An indorsement and assignment in another state of a certificate of deposit in payment of losses at gambling, will not be void even against innocent purchaser in the state, where it is attempted to be enforced, where the law of the other state is not so offensive or shocking to the morality of the state of suit as to make it necessary to apply the law of the forum—Sullivan v. German Nat. Bank (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 162.

54. Born v. Home Ins. Co. (Iowa) 94 N. W. 849; Farmer v. Etheridge, 24 Ky. L. R. 649, 69 S. W. 761. Effect of statute of frauds—Jones v. National Cotton Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 248. Contract for sale of gambling device—Price v. Burns, 101 Ill. App. 418. Promissory note—Hewitt v. Bank of Indian Territory (Neb.) 92 N. W. 741.

the law of the situs of the property will control.[55] If a contract of a married woman is valid, where made and to be performed, it is valid everywhere, unless she is domiciled in a state where the law imposes a total incapacity on the part of married women to a contract.[56] Where a contract was sent from Maryland to a corporation in Maine, signed by the party sending, and was there signed by the corporation on assenting to the proposition and returned by mail, an acceptance was complete when the contract was deposited and it became a Maine contract.[57] Notes executed in Indian Territory and payable in Arkansas will be regulated by the laws of the latter state, since such laws prevail in Indian Territory.[58] A statute making members, agents, and employes of a corporation liable for its debts where it does business within the state without complying with its laws does not apply to contracts made without the state giving the corporation title to lands in the state.[59] The law of the forum governs as to the remedy on foreign contracts.[60]

§ 6. Modification and merger of contracts.—A change or merger may take place when there is an accord and satisfaction of a pre-existing contract liability,[61] or a novation,[62] or release,[63] may work a similar result.

Modification.[64]—Stipulations in a building contract limiting weekly payments may be waived as between contractor and subcontractor.[65] Modification of a contract cannot be made without the actual consent of both parties to the change.[66] The compensation of a continuing contract cannot be changed without notice.[67] That alterations of a building contract were made without the written order of the architect as required will not prevent recovery, where the owner was present and consented to the alterations.[68] Acceptance of a modified proposition is legally a rejection of the original and where a new proposition is substituted for a contract acceptance by the other party must be shown.[69] A valid oral contract is not affected by an attempt to execute a void written contract in its stead.[70] An agree-

53. Where a contract concerned immovable property in another state and was made between two corporations of that state, and that it had been declared illegal by the highest court of that state, it will not be enforced in New York—Bath Gaslight Co. v. Rowland, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 563. The capacity of husband and wife to deal with each other with regard to immovable property in Louisiana, must be determined by the laws of that state—Rush v. Landers, 107 La. 549, 57 L. R. A. 353. See ante, p. 564, § 7.

56. Young v. Hart (Va.) 44 S. E. 703.

57. Emerson Co. v. Proctor, 97 Me. 360.

58. Clark v. Porter, 90 Mo. App. 143.

59. Goldberry v. Carter (Va.) 41 S. E. 858.

60. Young v. Hart (Va.) 44 S. E. 703; Thompson v. Traders' Ins. Co., 169 Mo. 12; Interstate Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Badgley, 115 Fed. 390; Crebbin v. Deloney, 70 Ark. 493. See, further, Conflict of Laws, p. 564, § 8.

61. See Accord and Satisfaction.

62. See Novation.

63. See Releases.

64. Modification of contract without his consent as discharging surety, see Suretyship.

What constituted a modification of the original contract for the drilling of a well—Wendling v. Snyder, 30 Ind. App. 330. Modification of agreement for purchase of mining claim—Sherman v. Sweeny, 29 Wash. 321, 69 Pac. 1117. Alterations within terms of a contract with the commonwealth for a sewer providing that in certain contingencies the engineer in charge might order certain alterations in work or materials—National Contracting Co. v. Commonwealth (Mass.) 66 N. E. 639. Modification of a contract between a manufacturer and owner for introduction of the former's goods into the territory covered by their business—L. N. Brunswig & Co. v. Wm. S. Merrell Chemical Co. (La.) 34 So. 417. A construction contract providing that further details to fully explain the general drawings will be furnished the contractor at the proper time during performance of the work, and that such drawings and specifications are intended to cover a complete and first class construction, anything omitted to be done by the contractor without extra charge, will not authorize a change in the plans by the architect—Dwyer v. New York, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 224.

65. O'Dwyer v. Smith, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 136.

66. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 873; J. K. Armsby Co. v. Blum, 137 Cal. 552, 70 Pac. 669. Evidence of a proposal for a change in terms for delivery of goods under a contract without an acceptance will not show a modification—J. K. Armsby Co. v. Blum, 137 Cal. 552, 70 Pac. 669.

67. Contract for board—Rule v. McGregor, 115 Iowa, 323.

68. Perry v. Levenson, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 94.

69. Kimbark v. Illinois Car & Equipment Co., 103 Ill. App. 632.

70. Word v. Kennon (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 365.

ment concerning the use of a note and mortgage executed by one of the parties to the other may be changed by mutual consent, where there was no attempt to substitute a different debt for the one secured or a new consideration for one that had failed.[71] Where a contract provides against alterations in the work unless on written order of the architect, no such order is necessary for a change in the parties doing the work.[72] There must be a valuable and sufficient consideration for the change.[73] A change in a contract due to partial failure of consideration is founded on a good consideration, and the contract as modified may be enforced.[74] The authorities differ as to modification of a written contract by a subsequent oral agreement, the differences being generally due to statute.[75] That a party agreed to contract only in writing will not prevent a parol modification.[76] Performance will render such parol modification binding.[77] Where a contract with a corporation provides for payment of a certain sum in a certain time and that it shall not be modified except by resolution of the directors, proof that the officers of the company informed the other party of a modification is inadmissible in an action on the contract to show that it would mature earlier.[78] Where a valid contract is made in substitution of a previous one, the obligations of the latter are annulled,[79] but a 71. Sheats v. Scott, 133 Ala. 642.

72. Drumheller v. American Surety Co., 30 Wash. 530, 71 Pac. 25.

73. Modification of unsealed written contract by subsequent parol agreement—Gunby v. Drew (Fla.) 34 So. 305. Where one of the parties to a contract was to direct its performance in certain particulars and he refused to allow it to be performed as the other party intended, a modification changing the duties of the latter was supported by a sufficient consideration. Logging contract—Kerslake v. McInnis, 113 Wis. 659.

74. A colt was given for a lease and proved afflicted with disease; the former owner then agreed to buy the colt at a certain price in the fall, or if it died to reimburse the other party—Jackson v. Helmer, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 134.

75. In Florida an unsealed written contract may be modified by subsequent parol agreement—Gunby v. Drew (Fla.) 34 So. 305. A written contract of guaranty not within the statute of frauds may be modified by parol in Oregon. Agreement by assignee of check and certificates of deposit to pay them if not paid by the bank—Kiernan v. Kratz, 42 Or. 474, 69 Pac. 1027, 70 Pac. 506. In Washington a verbal modification will not be allowed to alter a written contract; the statute requires acceptance in writing—Nelson v. Nelson Bennett Co. (Wash.) 71 Pac. 749. In Kentucky it is allowable, unless forbidden by the statute of frauds—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Manion, 23 Ky. L. R. 2267, 67 S. W. 40. In Montana the oral modification must be executed (Civ. Code, § 2281)—Armington v. Stelle, 27 Mont. 13, 69 Pac. 115. It may be shown in Texas to avoid the defense of the statute of limitations—Liner v. J. B. Watkins Land Mortg. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 311. A passenger ticket cannot be thus modified by an agreement with the train crew—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Harris (Miss.) 32 So. 309. If the subsequent oral agreement is an independent and consistent agreement it will not be construed as a modification—Cerrusite Min. Co. v. Steele (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 1091. A sealed instrument cannot be modified in Illinois by a subsequent unexecuted oral agreement—Jones v. Chamberlain, 97 Ill. App. 328, but otherwise as to a contract not under seal—Palmer v. Bennett, 96 Ill. App. 281. A written lease cannot be modified in New York by a new oral agreement without further consideration—Spota v. Hayes, 36 Misc. (N. Y.) 532. In North Carolina a subsequent agreement relating to the manner in which the contract is to be performed may be shown—Hardwood Log Co. v. Coffin, 130 N. C. 432. Agreement by trustees and mortgagee for benefit of preferred creditors that another creditor will be included in the preference will be allowed to vary the preference in Michigan—Wolff v. Alpena Nat. Bank (Mich.) 92 N. W. 287. In New York a parol agreement extending the time of payment and increasing the rate of interest on a mortgage under seal which was not paid at maturity, is a valid modification of the mortgage—New York Life Ins. Co. v. Casey, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 92. And a subsequent oral agreement between the parties may work a modification of a written contract not under seal before breach—Eagle Iron Works v. Farley, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 82.

76. Copeland v. Hewett, 96 Me. 525.

77. An oral agreement reducing rent on a written lease is binding in Nebraska after payment and acceptance—Bowman v. Wright (Neb.) 91 N. W. 580. Parol modification of written contract binding in New York after performance though within the statute of frauds and no new consideration passed—Jackson v. Helmer, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 134.

78. Cleckley v. Mutual Fidelity Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 725.

79. Howard v. Scott (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 709. A written contract between the same parties and embodying the same subject matter supersedes a previous oral contract—Curtis Bros. Lumber Co. v. McLoughlin, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 636. Where a contract for construction of an electric light plant under a certain statement for a certain price, was changed by substitution of another statement, the contractor could only recover for a reasonable value of the work done and not modification which renders useless work already done under the original contract will not prevent liability therefor.[80] Alterations made orally by the owner in plans for buildings under construction accepted by the builder amount to a waiver of a contract requiring written evidence to render the owner liable.[81] A steamship company purchasing the property of another company thereby assumes a contract for shipment made by the latter company providing for substitution, on notifying the other party of such change.[82] Acceptance of a note from a debtor in security of a claim will not bind the creditor to extend the time of maturity of the debt to the maturity of the note except on clear proof that the parties so understood the arrangement.[83] Where railroad companies comply with contract for use of a bridge at a certain price for some time and then threaten to withdraw if a reduction was not made, a payment of a less amount by the companies for 19 years, which was accepted by the bridge owners amounted to a modification of the contract.[84] Where an engineer employed by a city to supervise and inspect the construction of a sewer system was directed by city council to take charge of the completion of the system after its abandonment by the contractor, he may bring an action to recover for services on a quantum meruit though he may have failed to perform some of the duties required by his prior contract.[85]

Merger.—Promises or agreements concerning terms of a contract made prior to or at the same time with the execution of the contract in writing are merged therein.[86] An agreement between parties for services which does not exactly settle the compensation therefor is merged into and extinguished by a subsequent agreement specifying full amount for satisfaction, and cannot be enforced merely because one party failed to perform the subsequent agreement.[87] Contracts made for the purchase of a certain business, the seller agreeing not to engage in such business while the purchaser remains therein, are not merged in a contract made several years later whereby the purchaser agreed on the seller's purchase of certain land and re-purchase of the business, not to engage in such business in a certain territory for a certain period.[88] Where water rents for irrigation purposes under a contract were not collected during the first year owing to a loss of crops for insufficiency of water, and the next year a new contract was made without demand for such previous rents, it will be presumed in an action to set aside for nonperformance that the debt of the first year was merged in the consideration for the later contract.[89]

§ 7. Discharge of contract by performance or breach.[90] A. General rules.—Either party to a contract may perform and charge the other with liability, without the latter's consent or acquiescence.[91] The question as to which of two parties first broke a contract depends not upon the demands of either beyond his rights thereunder but upon which failed first to do what he was required by its terms to do.[92] If a contract requires performance on demand, the demand is absolutely necessary to place the other party in default,[93] but if one party agreed to perform on demand the price agreed upon in the original contract—Davis v. Bingham, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 299.

80. Construction of modified contract—Flather v. Economy Slugging Mach. Co., 71 N. H. 398.

81. Crowley v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 29 Wash. 268, 69 Pac. 784.

82. Morris v. Wilson (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 74.

83. Philadelphia v. Howell, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 76.

84. Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Dodd, 24 Ky. L. R. 2057, 72 S. W. 822.

85. City of Newport News v. Potter (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 321.

86. Cannon v. Michigan Mut. Life Ins. Co., 103 Ill. App. 414.

87. Spier v. Hyde, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 151.

88. Adams v. Adams (Ind.) 66 N. E. 153.

89. Perkins v. Frazer, 107 La. 390.

90. Interpretation of terms fixing obligation, undertaking or acts to be done, see ante, § 4-K.

91. Central Coal & Coke Co. v. Geo. S. Good & Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 793.

92. Emack v. Hughes, 74 Vt. 382.

and notice and refused so to perform, a further demand is unnecessary.[94] The breach must relate to the identical contract,[95] but a breach of a second contract, entered into in contemplation of the first, and which constituted an inducement to one of the parties to enter into the first contract, is a good defense to an action for enforcement of the first contract as against his assignee.[96]

(§ 7) B. Acceptance of performance; waiver of breach or insufficient performance.—Acquiescence in a contract as performed, by payment or otherwise, amounts to acceptance,[97] unless the right of objection is expressly reserved as to subsequently discovered breach,[98] and persons claiming under the parties will be bound by their acceptance.[99] Acts which might otherwise amount to acceptance will not excuse latent defects.[1] A demand for performance after expiration of the contractual period amounts to an extension of time.[2] A specific rejection of performance and the pointing out of defects therein will prevent acceptance though such party himself directed performance.[3] Mere occupancy of a building by the owner or his tenant after completion will not excuse defective construction,[4] nor will his taking possession after expiration of the contractual period,[5] with the contractor's consent, to complete the construction.[6] Alterations of the plans by the owner in completing a building after default by the contractor will not affect the rights of the former.[7] Performance by one party may be waived by acts of the other,[8] and likewise lia-

93. Rodger v. Tollettes Co., 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 779. Where a party agreed to pay the consideration of a contract by raising crops on a farm during the current year, if possible, a demand by the other is necessary to put him in default, otherwise he will be given more time for performance—Thompson v. Easton, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 114.

94. Loeb v. Stern, 198 Ill. 371.

95. Macklem v. Fales (Mich.) 89 N. W. 581. The failure of an electric light company to bury its wires and paint its poles as required by an ordinance constitutes no breach of a contract with the city to furnish lights —Kaukauna Electric Light Co. v. City of Kaukauna, 114 Wis. 327.

96. Falvey v. Woolner, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 331.

97. Weekly action by a city on reports concerning progress of a building contract made by its agents after inspection and payments on their estimates amount to acceptance and prevent a claim of breach of the contract—Schliess v. City of Grand Rapids (Mich.) 90 N. W. 700. A delivery of a building to the owner who went into possession under an agreement that he accepted, except with regard to certain alterations then agreed upon, constituted an unequivocal acceptance of the work, where the alterations were subsequently performed to the satisfaction of the architect—Vanderhoof v. Shell, 42 Or. 578, 72 Pac. 126. A contractor who failed to put his men and the teams at work so as to complete the contract in the time fixed, by afterward permitting the other party, without objection, to complete the work, and by assisting him in so doing waived his right to insist on a fulfillment by a date fixed in the contract—McArthur Bros. Co. v. Whitney, 202 Ill. 527. Where a father contracted with his daughter for the occupancy of his house, to be hers on his death on certain conditions, one of which was that she must pay the taxes, a payment of taxes by the father after the daughter's failure to pay while she was in possession amounted to a waiver of forfeiture where he made no complaint at the time, and a devisee of the house 11 years after his death who had known of her payment of taxes during that time could not raise any ground of forfeiture and avoid the contract—Sheldon v. Dunbar, 200 Ill. 490.

98. Temporary settlement on a contract for work with provision that the contractor shall be liable for any defects subsequently discovered will expressly bind him for any breach in performance—Brownell Imp. Co. v. Critchfield, 197 Ill. 61.

99. A failure to comply with the terms of a contract cannot be raised by persons claiming under another party where the latter has excused the nonperformance or default. Contract for location of lands at expense of locator—Lane v. De Bode (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 437.

1. Payment or part payment on the contract—Charley v. Potthoff (Wis.) 95 N. W. 124. An owner is not precluded from showing defects in material used in a building which were latent, merely because he used finishing material provided without discovering such defects—Utah Lumber Co. v. James, 25 Utah, 434, 71 Pac. 986.

2. Building contract—Krause v. Board of School Trustees (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 1010.

3. Building contract—Mitchell v. Williams, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 527.

4. Mitchell v. Williams, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 527.

5. Cannon v. Hunt, 116 Ga. 452.

6. The act of the owner is a privilege and raises no duty to the contractor—Mitchell v. Williams, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 527.

7. Changes in detail which might reasonably be made—Delray Lumber Co. v. Keohane (Mich.) 92 N. W. 489.

8. A life insurance company cannot refuse to fulfill its contract to make a loan on a policy for failure of deposit of the original policy, where it was lost and on notification the company furnished a certified copy and received premiums thereon—Reid v. N. Y.

bility for defective performance.[9] The acts of unauthorized agents or representatives will not, however, amount to such waiver of defects.[10] A delay of a few days by one party before refusing a demand by the other for performance will not prevent the reliance of the former on a prior breach of the demanding party, where it appears that he had no intention of waiving his rights and was not fully informed as to the acts of the other.[11] The rule that acceptance without objection or failure to object within a reasonable time after knowledge of facts or opportunity of knowledge will waive defects in performance does not apply to acceptance of an exhibit by a theatrical company by one who has engaged it to perform in his theater where he has already rented the theater, sold the tickets, and invested the proceeds in advertising.[12] Acceptance by the owner will not bind the surety as to compensation if his liability is thereby changed.[13]

(§ 7) C. Excuses for nonperformance.[14]—Where failure in performance of a contract was entirely due to acts of one party over which the other had no control, it constitutes no defense to the claim of the latter for compensation.[15] The existence of undisclosed conditions cannot be assigned by the party as an excuse for failure,[16] or delay in performance of a contract.[17] Inability of a party to perform his contract can never be made a defense to an action for breach, unless that inability amounts to an impossibility,[18] but impossibility of performance will relieve him of performance of provisions of a contract which entitle him to enforcement of other provisions as against the other party.[19] That subsequent circumstances, which might have been in contemplation of the parties at time of making a contract, render its completion impossible will not relieve the party in default from liability to the other in accordance with its terms.[20] Where a party diligently attempted to Life Ins. Co., 65 S. C. 295, 43 S. E. 654. A condition in a contract that each of the parties should deposit in a certain bank his certified check for a certain amount payable to the other as security for the faithful performance of the contract is waived by the acceptance by each party of the other's uncertified check, but such waiver does not affect the remaining portions of the contract and its provisions as to venue of actions brought thereon are still in force—Millar v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 429.

9. Breach of a contract for the carriage of goods by a vessel because of the insufficient capacity of the vessel cannot be claimed where it appears that no complaint was made on that account at the time of loading nor until after two voyages for which it was chartered had been completed—Gow v. William W. Brauer S. S. Co., 113 Fed. 672.

10. An acceptance of work under a contract by the United States and payment of compensation after a test by officers designated for that purpose will not prevent the United States from holding the contractors liable for subsequently discovered defects, where made in ignorance of the defects which could not be discovered in the test though its engineers had knowledge of them but were without authority to waive objections or bind the government by estoppel—United States v. Walsh (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 697.

11. Loudenback Fertilizer Co. v. Tennessee Phosphate Co., (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 298.

12, 13. Charley v. Potthoff (Wis.) 95 N. W. 124.

14. Where the whole consideration for a promise not to charge interest on money lue was a promise by the other party to furnish goods at a certain price, and the whole consideration of the promise to furnish such goods was the promise of the other not to charge such interest, the promises were not independent and the failure of one to perform excuses the other from liability—Schmidt v. Mitchell, 117 Ga. 6.

15. Walsh v. Hyatt, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 20.

16. Where a contract bound a party to erect a building upon such site as might be selected by the other parties, that difficulties were encountered in laying of the foundation by reason of the weakening of the soil by its previous use as a cemetery, did not relieve him from performing the contract in a good and workmanlike manner according to its terms, and such conditions must be held to have been considered by him in making his terms for the contract—Zimmerman v. Conrad (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 139.

17. First Nat. Bank v. Park, 117 Iowa, 552.

18. Bates Mach. Co. v. Norton Iron Works (Ky.) 68 S. W. 423.

19. Sale of mining lease under a provision calling for its operation by the purchaser and sale of its ore and for a repurchase by the seller at the expiration of one year in consideration thereof—Buchanan v. Layne, 95 Mo. App. 148.

20. A contract for transportation of contract labor from one country to another, legal in both countries when made, is not abrogated by passage of a regulation in the midst of performance which prevents securing the laborers so as to absolve the importer for liability for the hire of the ship for the remaining voyages—Tweedie Trad-perform, but on account of unavoidable circumstances was prevented, he will have performed sufficiently by tendering performance at the earliest possible moment, if no demand has previously been made upon him.[21] That work under a contract costs more than any one anticipated, will not excuse breach of the contract.[22] Where one party notifies the other that he will not complete a contract partly performed, the other is not required to perform further.[23] Failure to perform does not amount to a breach where it was to follow performance by the other party who failed.[24] A breach,[25] or forfeiture cannot be asserted on a contract where the party to perform has been improperly interfered with by the other party,[26] or caused delay in performance by the other.[27] If there is no time limit in a building contract, a delay of three weeks because of a strike will not prevent recovery.[28] Where an engineer in charge of a construction contract has full authority to order necessary changes, his unreasonable action in ordering them will not excuse performance by the contractor.[29] Where a party performs his contract as required by its terms, which do not contain a guaranty as to its permanence, he is not responsible for loss arising from the natural conditions as to which risks would be assumed by the other party.[30] Where a party to a contract for the harvest of grain fails to commence until ten days after the time agreed upon for beginning, whereby much of the grain was ing Co. v. James P. McDonald Co., 114 Fed. 985; James P. McDonald Co. v. Tweedie Trading Co., Id.

21. Contract for the delivery of small fruit vines to be raised which it was impossible to raise during the following year because of a drought—Thompson v. Easton, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 114.

22. Hanthorn v. Quinn, 42 Or. 1, 69 Pac. 817.

23. Miller v. Sigler (Mo. App.) 69 S. W. 479; Wallingford v. Aitkins, 24 Ky. L. R. 1995, 72 S. W. 794. Where work already done under a partial performance of a contract is rejected by the other party, the contractor is excused from further performance, if the work has been performed in compliance with the contract—Davis v. Bowers Granite Co. (Vt.) 54 Atl. 1084.

24. Griffin v. Bass Foundry & Machine Co., 135 Ala. 490; La Vallette v. Booth, 131 N. C. 36.

25. Where the merging of the business of a firm into a corporation rendered it impossible for a party to a contract with the firm to determine how much ice was necessary for its use, the firm could not recover for breach of a contract by refusal of such party to comply with the contract requiring the furnishing of ice for the retail trade of the firm—Consumers' Ice Co. v. E. Webster, Son & Co. 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 350.

26. Building contract—King v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 428. One who prevents exercise of an option he has granted within the time specified must give a reasonable time thereafter for exercise—Blodgett v. Canyon Zinc Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 893.

27. Failure in completion by appointed time—Ocorr & Rugg Co. v. City of Little Falls, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 592. Where a contract is made for the furnishing of certain materials in weekly quantities, and the purchaser notifies the seller not to deliver, but subsequently requests him to resume delivery, which he does, the seller is not liable on failure to complete the contract, for the extra cost of materials which the purchaser had to buy elsewhere—Pitts v. Davey, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 96. Failure to complete a building within the time specified because of failure of the owner to comply with requirements of building department, and because further of an alteration of the work, and neglect of the owner's architect to furnish sufficiently detailed plans, will not bar recovery on the contract, especially where the season during which the work was done was unusually wet and the owner made no complaint as to delay—Perry v. Levenson, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 94. Where delay in a building contract was caused by the owner's decision to change from the use of mortar to adamant whereby other contractors were secured to do part of the work, which was not done promptly nor in workmanlike manner, and by reason of which the contractor was delayed in completing the building, he could recover a reasonable allowance of extra time in computing the number of days of delay for which the owner was entitled to damages under the contract—Vanderhoof v. Shell, 42 Or. 578, 72 Pac. 126.

28. Happel v. Marasco, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 314.

29. National Contracting Co. v. Com. (Mass.) 66 N. E. 639.

30. Construction of a wall which was ruined by freezing of mortar—Schliess v. City of Grand Rapids (Mich.) 90 N. W. 700. Where lumber which had been sawed by one of the parties to a contract under its terms was burned in the yards before delivery through fault of neither party, compensation could still be recovered for its manufacture—Rhodes v. Hinds, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 379. The owner of an iron mill is not liable for nonperformance under a contract to furnish its output, providing that he should not be liable for loss or damage arising from failure to perform, because of fire or strikes and giving the other party the right to transfer the contract to other manufacturers, if they so desire, where the mill was destroyed by fire before full performance—Western Hardware & Mfg. Co. v. Bancroft-Charmley Steel Co. (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 176.

lost by shelling, the fact that such shelling was caused by the high winds did not make the loss an act of God, so as to relieve him from liability.[31] Though a contract will not be discharged by the intervention of an act of God rendering performance impracticable, yet if it is apparent from the nature of the contract that the parties intended that it should rest on the continued existence of a given person or thing, there is an implied condition that if performance becomes impossible from the death of the person or the destruction of the thing, performance is excused, and this in spite of unqualified promissory words.[32]

(§ 7) D. Sufficiency of performance; acts amounting to breach.[33]—Performance of an entire contract must be complete and not partial to require acceptance by the other party.[34] Proper performance of a contract is required though the contract

31. Holt Mfg. Co. v. Thornton, 136 Cal. 232, 68 Pac. 708.

32. Dow v. State Bank of Sleepy Eye (Minn.) 93 N. W. 121.

33. Pungs v. American Brake Beam Co., 200 Ill. 306; Wallace v. Williams (Tenn.) 69 S. W. 267. Sufficiency of performance of service in examination of a subway by an electrical expert to entitle him to compensation—Rosewater v. Glen Telephone Co., 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 275. Contract for exclusive lease of building for sale of liquors as to performance or breach—Wallace v. Williams (Tenn.) 69 S. W. 267. Payment of moneys coming to the hands of a mortgagee of premises for the owner to the latter amounts to a breach of an agreement between the mortgagee and a sub-contractor furnishing supplies to erect a house that the former would withhold such money as security if the latter would continue to furnish the materials—Prata v. Green, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 224. An agreement to discontinue a pending action without further costs is broken by the entry by plaintiff's attorney of a judgment to protect his lien, thereby imposing more costs—Rosenthal v. Rudnick, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 624. Unskillful performance of a contract by construction of defective machinery under a contract for first class appliances is an active violation of a contract—Payne v. Amos Kent Brick & Lumber Co. (La.) 34 So. 763. Failure to follow plans and specifications of a building and use of poor material so that the floors were so unlevel that furniture leaned forward or to the side, the roof leaked and the doors and windows could not be closed, was an open violation of the contract—Sarrazin v. Alfred A. Adams & Co. (La.) 34 So. 301. An attempt to disinherit one with whom a contract was made for services in consideration of a legacy at death of the promisor is a breach thereof entitling the other to recover the reasonable value of her services—Clark v. West (Tex.) 73 S. W. 797. Where sufficient money was advanced, under a contract with attorneys to carry on litigation, to preserve the proceedings from default, a failure of the attorneys to proceed because of refusal of the other party to advance more moneys amounted to a breach relieving the other party from performance; likewise a failure of a member of the firm to give his personal attention to the case according to the contract amounts to a breach—Nelson v. Hatch, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 206. A contract for the purchase of fishing plants on the Atlantic Coast and for the good will of the sellers, stipulating that they were not to engage in fishing or the manufacture of certain fishing products for 20 years on the Atlantic seaboard, included all waters on the eastern coast of the United States and was violated by the sellers going into Chesapeake Bay and conducting fishing operations both within and outside the bay, nor are these consequences of the contract relieved by the fact that the purchasers, being a non-resident corporation, were prevented by law from fishing within such waters—American Fisheries Co. v. Lennen, 118 Fed. 869.

34. Price v. Engelke (N. J. Sup.) 53 Atl. 698. There was a breach of a building contract to be completed within a stipulated time, where the work had not followed the stipulations though completed at the time for delivery—Hay v. Bush (La.) 34 So. 692. Where boilers to be furnished for a heating plant under a contract, were to be subjected to three particular tests, each was an essential element of the contract and a failure in any one regard constituted a breach thereof—Heine Safety Boiler Co. v. Francis Bros. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 235. If a contract fixes no time for payment, substantial performance of the entire contract is necessary to render the other party liable for the whole or any part of the consideration, though prices may be fixed on different portions of the work and materials. Contract for placing heating plant in building under schedule giving price for materials and labor—Riddell v. Peck-Williamson Heating & Ventilating Co., 27 Mont. 44, 69 Pac. 241. Where one of the joint owners of a large plantation failed to account to his co-owners for five years as required under a contract for the exclusive charge and management of such plantation, though repeatedly requested so to do, there is a breach of the contract rendering it null—DeRouen v. Romero (La.) 34 So. 415. An arrangement concerning debts merely good between the parties thereto will not amount to performance of a contract to secure an assignment of stock to be held as security for notes to be valid as against attaching creditors—First Nat. Bank v. Park, 117 Iowa, 552. Where a building contract required work to be done in a thorough workmanlike manner to the owner's satisfaction before he will become liable for the price, a finding that the contractor had failed to finish the work to the extent of one seventh the value of the price, but that there was a substantial performance and that the owner should pay six-sevenths of the agreed price, was not in ac-is silent in that regard,[35] but a party who has fully performed is not liable for unsatisfactory results from performance.[36] Substantial performance will entitle the party to recovery,[37] but substantial performance cannot be shown, where such party has departed willfully and intentionally from the contract,[38] nor can custom or usage be employed in defiance of positive terms of a contract.[39] Acts not called for by the contract cannot be required.[40] A breach of the contract occurs when one of the parties refuses to be bound by its terms.[41] Where part performance was to be made at stated periods, failure at expiration of one period is a breach of the whole contract.[42] Delay in performance may amount to a breach,[43] as may also acts preventing performance by the other party.[44] The making of a similar contract for cordance with the terms of the contract—Mitchell v. Williams, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 527.

35. Though a building contract does not describe the materials to be furnished or the manner in which the work is to be done, the contractor must select the proper materials and perform the work properly—Cannon v. Hunt, 116 Ga. 452.

36. Building contract carried out as to work and quality of materials—Cannon v. Hunt, 116 Ga. 452. Where a contract to erect a passenger elevator called for a motor of a certain strength, the purchaser could not complain if such motor was furnished, though the conditions required one of larger power—Morse v. Puffer, 182 Mass. 423. Where a contractor had followed the specifications given him carefully but had failed to complete the work to the satisfaction of the commissioners and the architect who were to be the final arbiters, he was entitled to recover without re-construction—Dwyer v. New York, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 224.

37. City of Elizabeth v. Fitzgerald (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 547; Perry v. Levenson, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 94; Anderson v. Harper, 30 Wash. 378, 70 Pac. 965. Where a building contract provides for extra compensation for changes in the original plans, the contractor may recover therefor, though he did not make the changes at the time they were ordered—Essex v. Murray (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 736. A contract to build the road of a street railroad company to a certain place, does not fail of fulfillment because the builder provided for the use of part of a track constructed by another company, since it will be presumed that both parties entered the contract with knowledge that such use was permitted by law, nor did the construction of a single track, where the railway turned a corner, amount to a violation of the contract, though it stipulated for a double track railway—Los Angeles Traction Co. v. Wilshire, 135 Cal. 654, 67 Pac. 1086.

38. Harris v. Sharples, 202 Pa. 243, 58 L. R. A. 214. Failure to follow plans—Sarrazin v. Alfred A. Adams & Co. (La.) 34 So. 301. Substitution of inferior materials and workmanship—D'Amato v. Gentile, 173 N. Y. 596; Loudenback Fertilizer Co. v. Tennessee Phosphate Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 298. If a contractor used different materials from those specified in the contract, the owner may recover damages though materials used are nearly as good as those required—Cannon v. Hunt, 116 Ga. 452. Where a contract called for the delivery of bonds on a certain day named or payment of their amount in cash, a delivery or tender of an accepted order on the treasurer of the corporation having them in charge for delivery of the bonds when they should be issued, was not a fulfillment of the contract and entitled the other party to claim the cash payment—Barrett v. Twin City Power Co., 118 Fed. 861. Where a contractor was prohibited by his contract from subletting work without the consent of the architect and was compelled to submit all the material to the latter, he was liable for a breach of a sub-contract which was made without following these requirements, though they might have constituted a good defense to the owners as against the sub-contractor—Herry v. Benoit (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 359.

39. A contract to furnish catalogue covers based upon a proof in which the firm name of the printers did not appear at the bottom of the last page, is not fulfilled by the printing of such covers with such name so represented, without permission of the other party, though it is customary for printers to submit proofs without such imprint and to place it on the copy afterwards unless otherwise ordered, and though the artistic effect was not thereby diminished—Harris v. Sharples, 202 Pa. 243, 58 L. R. A. 214.

40. Dudley v. Sanders Mfg. Co., 114 Fed. 981. Failure to prosecute appeal from a decision of land commissioners is not a breach of a contract to apply to the proper authorities for the establishment of a right of preferment to the purchase of certain tide lands—Schwede v. Hemrich, 29 Wash. 124, 69 Pac. 643.

41. Northrop v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co., 119 Fed. 969.

42. National Mach. & Tool Co. v. Standard Shoe Machinery Co., 181 Mass. 275; Anderson v. McDonald (Wash.) 71 Pac. 1037.

43. Failure to operate a mine under a contract impliedly requiring operation with reasonable diligence amounts to a breach of the contract—Sharp v. Behr, 117 Fed. 864.

44. Refusal of an employer to make payments on a contract for work and labor providing for cash payments or to allow laborers to proceed—Anderson v. McDonald (Wash.) 71 Pac. 1037. Failure of a sugar manufacturer to receive cane from a grower under a contract due to the defective condition of a tram road built under his supervision—Robichaux v. Segura Sugar Co. (La.) 34 So. 744. Where a contract was made for delivery of materials in weekly installments for a certain period, but the seller was notified not to deliver after the first delivery, until further notice, there was a breach preventing performance of the contract if it services with another party is not a breach of the first unless damage results to the other party on the first contract, especially where made with knowledge and consent of the latter.[45] The beginning of bastardy proceedings is a breach of a settlement by the mother with the father in consideration of which she agrees not to make further claim upon him.[46]

(§ 7) E. Rights after default or nonperformance.[47]—Where one party to an executory contract elects to treat it as in full force after breach by the other who has partially performed, the latter is entitled to receive the benefits resulting from partial performance and is liable for any damages resulting from the breach.[48] That part of payments made by one party to another, under an agreement that the latter should purchase property to be conveyed by him to the former, were made to a third person for such party does not affect the right to recover them back on a default in conveyance where all payments were made on the promises for conveyance.[49] Where by the provisions of the contract, the owner, on default of the contractor, may proceed to complete construction, using materials placed on the ground by the contractor, the owner has such a qualified right to the property in such materials as to make them a security for advances on the contract and to give him the right to their use for its fulfillment.[50] Where a contract provided that proceeds of certain claims should be equally divided among three parties after deducting expenses, one who received his proportionate share after deduction of expenses cannot complain because payment of the balance of a certain item of expense was not equally divided between the others.[51] Where a contract binding an advertiser to provide the publisher with copy was broken immediately by countermanding of the order, the publisher was not entitled to insert matter prepared by himself in the space covered by the contract which tended to advertise the business of the other party and then sue for the contract price.[52] A contract for digging a well, requiring that the landowner should furnish board for the employes and feed for the teams, required the contractors to use all reasonable diligence and care in completing the work, and if the first attempt failed through negligence, they were not entitled to a second trial.[53]

§ 8. Damages for breach.[54]—Where a contract is actively or visibly violated, default is not necessary to recovery of damages,[55] but a loss or detriment must have could have been fulfilled without such interference—Pitts v. Davey, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 96.

45. Contract to secure shipment of produce over a certain railroad in consideration of a freight commission made by one already having such a contract with another railroad made with knowledge and assent of president of first railroad company—Paul v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 449.

46. Schnurr v. Quinn, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 70.

47. Where one who has failed to collect a judgment on a certain trust deed and notes sues for damages for breach of a contract for repurchase of the securities by the person from whom he bought, the latter cannot contend that in event of payment he would be entitled to the deficiency judgment—Loeb v. Stern, 198 Ill. 371.

48. Orr v. Cooledge, 117 Ga. 195.

49. Hayes v. Stortz (Mich.) 90 N. W. 678.

50. Duplan Silk Co. v. Spencer (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 689.

51. Adams v. Crown Coal & Tow Co., 198 Ill. 445.

52. Wm. E. Peck & Co. v. Kansas City Metal Roofing, etc., Co., 96 Mo. App. 212.

53. Peacock v. Gleesen, 117 Iowa, 291.

54. The question of damages is treated fully in the title "Damages."

55. Payne & Joubert v. Amos Kent Brick & Lumber Co. (La.) 34 So. 763. Particular cases showing application of rules and estimating damages for breach of contract—Jeffery v. Babcock, 98 Ill. App. 15; Knowlson v. Piehl (Mich.) 90 N. W. 415; Miller v. Sigler (Mo. App.) 69 S. W. 479; Deering v. Johnson, 86 Minn. 172; Rule v. McGregor, 115 Iowa, 323; Boughton v. Petigny, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 76; Meyer v. Haven, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 529; Bates Mach. Co. v. Norton Iron Works (Ky.) 68 S. W. 423; Griffen v. Sprague Electric Co., 115 Fed. 749. Damages for breach of a contract to deliver stock on demand, which had been bought by a broker on a margin, is the highest intermediate value of stocks between the default and the time reasonably following such default, before which the customer, with notice, has reasonable opportunity to replace the stocks—In re Swift, 114 Fed. 947; Ex parte Harrigan, Id. Damages for breach of a contract to make a loan is the difference between the rate of interest under the contract, and the rate, not exceeding the local rate, which the borrower was required to pay elsewhere, unless it appears that the befallen.[56] Reasonable diligence to prevent damages by reason of breach is required.[57]

The general rule for estimating damages for breach of a contract is the difference between what plaintiff would have received had the contract been performed and what he actually received thereunder if anything.[58] It must be such amount as will compensate the injured party for the breach.[59] The evidence of damages for breach of a contract must be reasonably certain and not given to speculation and conjecture,[60] else a verdict may be directed.[61] Such damages as are the natural and probable consequence of the breach of a contract are not too remote or speculative to be awarded in an action thereon,[62] and damages naturally arising from circumstances which may reasonably be considered to have been in contemplation of money was to be used for a special purpose and could not be procured elsewhere—New York Life Ins. Co. v. Pope, 24 Ky. L. R. 485, 68 S. W. 851. Damages for breach of contract for services as manager for a few days, as excessive—Hoover v. Haynes (Neb.) 91 N. W. 392. Amount of damages for breach of contract for services of an actress—Evesson v. Ziegfeld, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 79. Damages for failure to construct a building according to contract are measured by the difference between the value of the building as constructed and its value as it should have been constructed, and not the cost of alteration to make it conform to the contract—Walter v. Hangen, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 40.

56. Damages cannot be recovered for refusal to make a loan unless it is shown that plaintiff could not secure the money elsewhere at the same rate of interest agreed upon—New York Life Ins. Co. v. Pope, 24 Ky. L. R. 485, 68 S. W. 851.

57. Error of judgment is not want of diligence—The Thomas P. Sheldon, 113 Fed. 779; The S. L. Watson, Id. The damnified party is not required to take steps which would result in a further loss to himself—Tradewater Coal Co. v. Lee, 24 Ky. L. R. 215, 68 S. W. 400.

Where the other parties to a contract could not reasonably do otherwise than to accept its performance, though unskillful, and to make the best possible use of appliances furnished in their defective condition, he did not thereby waive his right to damages—Payne & Joubert v. Amos Kent Brick & Lumber Co. (La.) 34 So. 763. By going into possession while the contractor was at work, the owner of a building estopped herself from recovery for delay in delivery of the building—Sarrazin v. Alfred A. Adams & Co. (La.) 34 So. 301.

58. Truitt v. Fahey (Del. Super.) 52 Atl. 339.

59. Standard Oil Co. v. Denton, 24 Ky. L. R. 906, 70 S. W. 282. For breach of a contract to install a plant it is the difference between the contract price and the amount which it would have cost plaintiff—Wood v. Wack (Ind. App.) 67 N. E. 562. On a contract to provide for plaintiff during life it is the cost of such care during life of plaintiff less the costs of the care already received—Poston v. Eno, 91 Mo. App. 304. The measure of damages to a party who is prevented from performing his contract by repudiation of the other is the profits which would have accrued from full performance, with interest from time of refusal, including commissions paid by the party to his agent for obtaining the contract—Peck-Hammond Co. v. Heifner, 136 Ala. 473. The measure of damages for breach of a contract of service before performance is begun is the contract price less the amount that might be obtained by the exercise of reasonable diligence for the same services from other parties—Wm. E. Peck & Co. v. Kansas City Metal Roofing & Corrugation Co., 96 Mo. App. 212. Where a building contract was performed in an unworkmanlike manner and out of poor material, a balance remaining in payment on the contract was allowed to the owner in order to put the building in a proper condition of construction—Sarrazin v. Alfred A. Adams & Co. (La.) 34 So. 301. Contract for service dependent on peculiar ability of plaintiff—United Press v. A. S. Abell Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 550.

On breach of contract for sale the measure of damages is the difference between the price to be paid and money value at time of breach, not exceeding the amount demanded in the suit—Wallingford v. Aitkins, 24 Ky. L. R. 1995, 72 S. W. 794; but in Michigan the measure of damages for refusal to accept personal property on a sale, after tender, is fixed by law at the contract price. Express provisions of Comp. Laws § 4590, as to property, the title to which is vested by reason of tender under § 3258—Dowagiac Mfg. Co. v. Higinbotham, 15 S. D. 547.

60. Truitt v. Fahey (Del. Super.) 52 Atl. 339.

Evidence of sales of similar goods between the time of the breach of the contract and the time of trial may be shown as bearing upon the damages resulting to plaintiff, by loss of profits—Hichhorn v. Bradley, 117 Iowa, 130. Where the price of the sale of cane for sugar was to be regulated by the market price of sugar, evidence of what defendant paid during the season for cane received under a contract with plaintiff and under similar contracts with other cane growers is properly admitted and the average of such price may be accepted as the price which cane lost by reason of defendant's negligence would have brought, if he had accepted delivery according to contract—Robichaux v. Segura Sugar Co. (La.) 34 So. 744.

61. Raymond v. Yarrington (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 436.

62. Herring v. Armwood, 130 N. C. 177; Holt Mfg. Co. v. Thornton, 136 Cal. 232, 68 Pac. 708.

the parties at time of contract may also be awarded.[63] Interest may be allowed as an element of damages from the time of the commencement of the action,[64] but if the damages be unliquidated they must be certain and definite in their possibility of estimation.[65] The damages may also include any moneys plaintiff may have advanced on the contract or expense which he may have incurred.[66]

Prospective profits may be recovered where they are not so uncertain as to be incapable of proof,[67] but mere speculative and conjectural estimates of profits which might possibly have been made cannot be allowed.[68] The deprivation of intellectual enjoyment and mental suffering may be elements of damages resulting from breach of a contract in Louisiana.[69]

A party who without fault fails to completely perform may recover for what he has done.[70] His measure of damages is such proportion of the entire price as the fair cost of the work done bears to the fair cost of the whole work, together with special profits in respect to the work not done as he would have realized by performing it.[71]

The contract may itself specify and fix what shall be the recovery for a breach,[72] but an unreasonable penalty will not be enforced.[73] General damages may be recovered in addition to a stipulated right to deduct from the price enough to complete an abandoned contract.[74]

§ 9. Rescission and abandonment of contract.[75] A. Contracts which may be

63. Meyer v. Haven, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 529. Where a passenger rented a stateroom on a steamer for the night, but failed to notice a condition on the back of his ticket reserving the right to the carrier to resell rooms not called for within 30 minutes after departure, and did not call for his room within that time so that it was resold, and was refused the return of his money or another room, so that he was compelled to sit up all night, he was not entitled to exemplary but might recover actual damages—Clark v. Railroad Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 691.

64. Roussel v. Mathews, 62 App. Div. (N. Y.) 1; Peck-Hammond Co. v. Heifner, 136 Ala. 473. In an action on a breach of warranty of chattels, interest may be allowed on the difference between the actual worth of the chattels and their value had they been as represented—Ash v. Beck (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 53. Damages for delay in the carriage of live stock—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Smissen (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 42.

65. Dady v. Condit, 104 Ill. App. 507; Brownell Improvement Co. v. Critchfield, 197 Ill. 61.

66. Nelson v. Hatch, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 206.

67. Profits from increase of a flock of sheep—Schrandt v. Young (Neb.) 89 N. W. 607. Profits from cattle to be kept by plaintiff and sold for profits to be divided between parties—Rule v. McGregor, 115 Iowa, 323. The amount to be recovered is not limited to the actual expenses to be incurred by the plaintiff, but may include whatever chance of profits he may have derived from contracts, the performance of which was prevented by the breach—Pender Lumber Co. v. Wilmington Iron Works, 130 N. C. 584. On breach of a contract to deliver lumber within a certain time, the injured party may recover to the amount of the loss sustained on profits of his business of which he has been deprived—E. B. Williams & Co. v. Bienvenue, 109 La. 1023.

68. Douglass v. Railroad Co., 51 W. Va. 523.

69. Lewis v. Holmes, 109 La. 1030.

70. Tichenor v. Bruckheimer, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 194. Where a party to a contract is prevented in its completion by the other after part performance, the measure of damages is the contract price for the work already done and not its market price—Hoyle v. Stellwagen, 28 Ind. App. 681.

71. Wilson v. Borden (N. J. Err. & App.) 54 Atl. 815.

72. Where a contract was made for the conduct of certain litigation in consideration of conveyance of certain lands at a specified time, or in default thereof of payment of a certain amount of money after failure in the conveyance, the other party was entitled to recover the full amount specified by the contract and was not limited to actual damages—Ehrich v. Durkee (Colo. App.) 72 Pac. 814. Though the essential features of a scheme for securing and publishing classified advertisements were not originated by the seller, if certain forms by which it was to be effected were devised by him, to that extent the use of the scheme by a purchaser was such a use of the plan as entitled the seller to recover the amount of stipulated damages provided for in a contract of purchase and sale—Taylor v. Times Newspaper Co. (Minn.) 93 N. W. 659.

73. No evidence was offered as to actual damage sustained—Zimmerman v. Conrad (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 139.

74. McGrath v. Hogan, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 152.

75. See Cancellation of Instruments, ante, p. 413, which treats of the procedure to annul written instruments. Rescission or abandonment of contracts with United States, see "United States."

rescinded; manner of rescission.[76]—A marriage contract cannot be rescinded or modified except as provided by laws of the land even though one or both of these parties may have violated its terms or obligations.[77] Negligence of a party will not prevent his right to rescind the contract, if the other party has not been injured by such negligence.[78] If a contract is made for the benefit of a third person, neither of the immediate parties can rescind it or prejudice the rights without his consent.[79] If the parties to a contract deal with the subject matter in a manner which shows no intention to demand a strict compliance with the terms as to time, neither will be permitted to rescind without giving the other a reasonable opportunity to perform.[80] Though according to its terms a contract may be terminated at will of either party on reasonable notice, it does not follow that it is binding upon them as long as they continue to act thereunder before revocation or termination.[81] A mere claim by one party that the other had broken the contract and that he had acted in accordance with such breach is insufficient to show a rescission.[82] A contract in writing for sale of realty may be rescinded by parol.[83] A building contract providing that if the contractor is not proceeding with sufficient dispatch or is departing from the plans, the contract may be canceled after due notice, cannot be canceled by the other party solely on his own decision as to the state of the work and its performance by the contractor.[84]

(§ 9) B. Causes for rescission. Mistake; default or defective performance.[85]—That a mistake may be ground of setting aside a contract, it must have been mutual and rescission must be made without delay after discovery;[86] then the party, who relied on the representations of the other who knew he was so relying, may rescind.[87] A willful failure of one party to a contract to perform will entitle the other to a rescission without alleging or proving fraud,[88] unless the latter knew of and sanctioned the default.[89] Violation of a contract will warrant cancellation,[90] but not unless the party is injured by it,[91] or where the violation was due to unauthorized acts of

76. Expense incurred by lessee as precluding termination of lease by lessor under its terms—American Window Glass Co. v. Williams, 30 Ind. App. 685. A suit in equity by the grantor in an absolute deed for a reconveyance under an oral agreement made when the deed was executed, was not an election to treat such oral agreement as rescinded, so as to prevent him from suing for the damages for its breach, where it did not appear that the suit sought a remedy without the oral contract or specific performance of it, and defendant's answer did not plead the statute of frauds and relied on the oral agreement—Hurley v. Donovan, 182 Mass. 65.

77. Palmer v. Palmer (Utah) 72 Pac. 3.

78. Failure to docket mortgage—Jones v. Glathart, 100 Ill. App. 630.

79. Tweeddale v. Tweeddale (Wis.) 93 N. W. 440.

80. Price v. Beach, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 291.

81. Kenny v. Knight, 119 Fed. 475.

82. Walsh v. Hyatt, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 20.

83. Mahon v. Leech, 11 N. D. 181.

84. Hoyle v. Stellwagen, 28 Ind. App. 681.

85. Mistake as ground of rescission—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Manion, 23 Ky. L. R. 2267, 67 S. W. 40.

86. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 978.

87. Garrett Co. v. Halsey, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 438.

88. Agreement to deed farm at death in consideration of support during life—Howlin v. Castro, 136 Cal. 605, 69 Pac. 432. Abandonment of the contract will justify rescission—Vickers v. Electrozone Commercial Co., 67 N. J. Law, 665. Where in violation of the terms of a contract one of the parties failed to make payments notwithstanding the demands of the other, the latter was justified in rescinding the contract—Eastern Forge Co. v. Corbin, 182 Mass. 590. Where goods delivered under a contract are defective in quality, the buyer is justified in rescinding—Grafeman Dairy Co. v. St. Louis Dairy Co., 96 Mo. App. 495. Under a contract to furnish coal to a city for a certain period on monthly payments, such monthly payments were of the essence of the contract and on failure thereof, the seller was authorized to terminate the contract though the city had failed to perform its contract in analyzing the coal through no lack of diligence—Baltimore v. Schaub Bros., 96 Md. 534.

89. Peuchen v. Behrend, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 619.

90. Privilege granted for a show—Mackay v. Minnesota State Agricultural Soc. (Minn.) 92 N. W. 539.

91. Where the terms of a contract required one of the parties to perform work for no other persons than the other party, the performance of such other work will not justify a rescission of the contract where it did not interfere with the work performed for the parties to this particular contract—Reindl v. Heath, 115 Wis. 219.

third persons.[92] Demands made by one of the parties inconsistent with the terms of the contract will release the other party from performance.[93] If the contract is severable, default in one part will not justify rescission of the whole contract,[94] nor will default in a subsequent parol subsidiary agreement justify rescission of the prior written contract;[95] but default in part of an inseparable contract will enable rescission of the whole.[96] Where one, because of insolvency, is compelled to pay for property bought on delivery and refused so to do, he has no right to rescind a contract for purchase merely because of the manner adopted by the vendor in enforcing his remedy.[97]

Incompetency; fraud and misrepresentation.—The contract of a person of weak mental powers will be rescinded in equity, when it appears that he has not exercised a deliberate judgment or has been misled by undue influence.[98] Fraud is cause for rescission,[99] though the contract itself may have been illegal,[1] unless the fraud was regarding trivial matters which could not have influenced the other party.[2] The fraud must consist in representations of existing facts, not mere expressions of opinion regarding future probabilities,[3] but such expressions as to the future may suffice if false and the party making them knew they could not be fulfilled.[4] The

92. An agreement for settlement of claims by creditors provided they would not seek to enforce their claims by hostile procedure, cannot be rescinded merely because of acts of a deputy sheriff in going upon the premises of the debtors and levying on execution, where he did not take actual possession of the property and where he went contrary to the instructions of the creditors —Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Jones, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 534.

93. Cooney v. McKinney, 25 Utah, 329, 71 Pac. 485. Where after a contract was partly performed, one of the parties demanded conditions not required by its terms or by the customs of the trade with which it was concerned, the other was entitled to rescind the contract, refuse further performance and recover compensation due for the part already performed—Minaker v. California Canneries Co., 138 Cal. 239, 71 Pac. 110.

94. Where a contract provides for the performance of an entire work in a certain time and of each particular part of the work within a proportionate part of the time and for rescission by the other party for failure to perform, a failure to perform the first part of the work within its proportion of time will not justify a rescission of the entire contract—Cody v. New York, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 54. A contract calling for several acts within a reasonable time for which consideration has been paid in full, cannot be rescinded for failure to perform one of the subsidiary acts within a reasonable time, the remedy for such failure being a suit for damages—Luce v. New Orange Industrial Ass'n, 68 N. J. Law, 31.

95. Under a building contract, giving the contractor the right to cancel if the subcontractor gets behind in his work, and providing for weekly payments to the latter in a certain amount, failure of the subcontractor to carry out a subsequent parol agreement to put on more men if the weekly payments be increased, because of a strike for one day of such extra men due to the payments being insufficient to meet their wages, will not warrant the contractor in cancelling the contract—O'Dwyer v. Smith, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 136.

96. A failure to pay as agreed for part of goods delivered will entitle the seller to rescind and sue for those delivered at the contract price—Purcell Co. v. Sage, 200 Ill. 342.

97. Pratt v. Freeman & Sons Mfg. Co., 115 Wis. 648.

98. Meyer v. Fishburn (Neb.) 91 N. W. 534.

99. Where a contract for building a railroad provides that the amount of work shall be determined by the calculations of the engineer in charge, any fraud by him is a ground for relief from the contract—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Manion, 23 Ky. L. R. 2267, 67 S. W. 40.

1. Recovery of money paid to a national bank on a contract of which rescission is sought for fraud, is not prevented because the transaction was forbidden by law, since to prevent rescission is to compel reliance on the contract with its attendant burden of fraud—Petrie v. National Bank & Loan Co., 167 N. Y. 589; National Bank & Loan Co. v. Petrie, 189 U. S. 423; National Bank & Loan Co. v. Carr, 189 U. S. 426.

2. Garrison v. Technic Electrical Works, 63 N. J. Eq. 806.

3. False representations in regard to the capacity of certain cotton presses and the merchantable quality of the cotton produced by them, together with representations as to savings in freight and the successful operations of the machines, which induced the making of a contract, were not merely expressions of opinion as to future transactions but representations of existing facts within the knowledge of defendants, entitling plaintiffs to rescind the contract and secure cancellation of deeds thereunder—American Cotton Co. v. Collier (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 1021.

4. Though representations which secured the execution of a contract, were mere expressions of opinion as to the future, they are sufficient for cancellation of such contract if they were false and the parties making them knew that they could not be performed—American Cotton Co. v. Collier (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 1021.

misrepresentation must relate to material facts and must be made with intent to deceive.[5] An accord and satisfaction may be rescinded for fraud and the original liability enforced.[6]

Insolvency; accident or natural causes.—Mere danger of insolvency of the other party will not warrant a rescission of the contract by a failure to perform; insolvency must exist.[7] Insolvency of a purchaser at time of a contract of sale is not ground for rescission by the seller.[8] Where a contract is made for the construction of a building on a foundation and out of materials to be furnished by the owner, and after partial completion it is destroyed by a storm, performance has not been rendered so impossible as to cause a termination of the contract and enable the builder to recover both for the labor lost and the erection of a new building; nor is the contract terminated on the theory that the materials on which the contractor agreed to work have been destroyed.[9]

(§ 9) C. Waiver of right to rescind.—Though a party has decided to rescind his contract, he may, while the conditions are still unchanged, decide to go on with the contract, though he has been notified by the other party that he will consider the contract at an end;[10] but if he actually intends to rescind he must do no act inconsistent with such intention.[11] He may receive part payment after part performance without waiving his right to rescind.[12] If two compromises be of the same contract, acceptance of delayed performance in payment of one waives a delay in payment of the other.[13]

(§ 9) D. Time for rescission.—The injured party must rescind within a reasonable time after discovery of the fraud or after a reasonable opportunity for its discovery.[14] Delay is fatal,[15] unless the party is fraudulently prevented from learning the facts.[16]

(§ 9) E. Conditions precedent to rescission; return of benefits or consideration.[17]—One desiring to rescind a contract for fraud,[18] or want of consideration,[19] as, for defects in subject-matter,[20] must return or offer to return the benefits or consideration received within a reasonable time after discovery;[21] but one refusing to perform

5. Scott v. Boyd (Va.) 42 S. E. 918.
6. See ante, pp. 10, 11.
7. F. W. Kavanaugh Mfg. Co. v. Rosen (Mich.) 92 N. W. 788.
8. Johnson v. Groff, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 85.
9. Vogt v. Hecker (Wis.) 95 N. W. 90.
10. Perkins v. Frazer, 107 La. 390.
11. The filling of a portion of an order without objection will waive the right to rescind a contract because the agent through whom it was sent for acceptance was interested in the firm for which the order was given, where such fact was known before performance—Columbia Mfg. Co. v. Hastings (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 328. Where a party knew when he filed an original bill for rescission, that a fraud had been practiced upon him, and then obtained an injunction against the other parties, restraining them from breaking his contract, he has waived his right to a rescission—Tolman v. Coleman, 104 Ill. App. 70.
12. It is sufficient that he still refuses to complete performance—Eastern Forge Co. v. Corbin, 182 Mass. 590.
13. Compromises of county bonds—Dyer v. Muhlenberg County (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 586. It was held immaterial that acceptance was in part the act of another if he was privy to the contract.
14. Dickey v. Winston Cigarette Mach. Co., 117 Ga. 131; Bostwick v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 246; Pekin Plow Co. v. Wilson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 176. Rescission for fraud, undue influence or duress—Mortimer v. McMullen, 202 Ill. 413.
15. A transfer by heirs of a succession to the usufructuary of the property will not be disturbed after ten years—Sallier v. Rosteet, 108 La. 378.
16. Four and a half months delay in discovering a fraud in the substitution of another insurance policy for the one which the applicant expected to receive, will not, as a matter of law, forfeit his right to rescission, where he was fraudulently prevented from examining the policy at the time of delivery—Bostwick v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 246.
17. Sufficiency of placing in statu quo to authorize rescission of a contract for exchange of stocks and bonds of an old corporation for those of a new corporation—Jewell v. McIntyre, 172 N. Y. 638.
18. Mortimer v. McMullen, 202 Ill. 413.
19. Sale of machine which proved defective—Massillon Engine & Thresher Co. v. Schirmer (Iowa) 93 N. W. 599.
20. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Lyons, 24 Ky. L. R. 1862, 72 S. W. 356; Massillon Engine & Thresher Co. v. Schirmer (Iowa) 93 N. W. 599.
21. One who is prevented in fulfillment of his contract after part performance, by acts of the other, cannot recover consideration paid during the time of performance, a contract because of fraud in its inception need not restore that which in any event he would recover,[22] and on rescission of a contract because of undue influence, it is not necessary that the property received should be returned, but a mere tender of the value is sufficient.[23]

(§ 9) F. Rescission or termination under terms of contract.—Contracts may be rescinded under terms providing for rescission,[24] but the rescission must faithfully follow such terms.[25] Where a contract authorizes termination by one party if the other suspends work for 10 days, Sundays should not be counted in computing the suspension.[26] If a buyer attempts to return goods, where under the contract he has no right to return them, and the seller refuses to accept, there can be no recovery on the price paid.[27]

Contracts for service of a continuing nature not specifying any time or duration may usually be revoked at will by either party upon reasonable notice and in good faith.[28] because of a breach committed by the other giving him a right to rescind where he cannot place the other party in statu quo. Rent of premises for restraurant privileges—De Montague v. Bacarach, 181 Mass. 256. Though a contract is unilateral, it becomes binding after the party who is to perform acts thereunder has proceeded with the performance, and cannot be rescinded by the other party without a restoration of his expenses incurred. Contract to pay railroad company a certain sum on completion of road—Los Angeles Traction Co. v. Wilshire, 135 Cal. 654, 67 Pac. 1086.

22. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 65 Kan. 572, 70 Pac. 582. It need not be done where for instance an accord and satisfaction is treated as void for fraud and an action brought on the original liability so that the money paid may be proved as partial satisfaction. See Accord and Satisfaction, ante, p. 11 et seq. and cases there cited.

23. Meyer v. Fishburn (Neb.) 91 N. W. 534.

24. Where it appears that work under a building contract was defectively done, the owner has cause to terminate the contract and take charge of the building, where there is a stipulation that in case of default he would have such right—Hay v. Bush (La.) 34 So. 692.

25. Contract for macadamizing a driveway and authorizing the city to rescind on failure of the contractor to complete any part of the work to the satisfaction of the park commissioners—Cody v. New York, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 54. Where a contract requires that a machine sold, should be returned if it fails to work, a mere notice that it is held subject to the seller's order is not a compliance therewith—Dickey v. Winston Cigarette Mach. Co., 117 Ga. 131. A notice by the purchaser of a machine that it was held subject to the seller's order, was in compliance with the terms of the contract for rescission which provided that he should return it at once to the agent if it failed to work, and he was not relieved from liability where the seller never took possession—McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Allison, 116 Ga. 445. Where a contract provided that if one of the parties should suspend operations thereunder for 10 days, the other would be entitled to rescind, the condition was not broken by suspension of work for 9 days and an offer of continuance on the 10th, from performance of which the party was prevented by default of the other who was entitled to rescission—Brown v. Rasin Monumental Co. (Md.) 55 Atl. 391.

Building contracts.—A condition that the certificate of the architect to the effect that the contractor is not fulfilling his contract as precedent to a termination of the contract by the owner is absolute—White v. Mitchell, 30 Ind. App. 342. Where a contract for a building provided that the owner might terminate the employment and complete the work on a certificate of the architect to the effect that the contractor is not properly performing his contract, a certificate that the work is not being properly performed and that the owner may, if he deems best, take such action, is insufficient—Id. Where a building contract provided that the owner may terminate the contract if the architect shall certify that the contractor is not complying with the contract, the architect occupies a judicial position thereunder and a private letter expressing his opinion to the owner, of which no communication is made to the contractor, is insufficient to justify a rescission—Wilson v. Borden, 68 N. J. Law, 627. Where a contract provided that a certificate by the architect to the owner that the contractor has refused or neglected to supply workmen or materials to complete the contract will entitle the owner to terminate the employment on three days' written notice to the contractor, the owner was not entitled under such condition to give notice merely of an intention to furnish labor and materials and not to terminate the contract—McClellan v. McLemore (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 224.

26. Brown v. Rasin Monumental Co. (Md.) 55 Atl. 391.

27. Loader v. Brooklyn Chair Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 621.

28. Taylor v. Martin, 109 La. 137. Compare titles Agency, ante, p. 47 and cases cited, also Master and Servant to be published in a later issue.

29. Kelly v. Short (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 877. Compare Accord and Satisfaction, ante, p. 8.

(§ 9) G. Rescission by mutual agreement.—A contract is entirely abrogated by repudiation by both of the parties where each recognized and accepted the repudiation of the other and acted thereon,[29] but a subsequent agreement or acquiescence of both is necessary,[30] though this may be shown by implication from circumstances and the conduct of the parties.[31] No consideration other than the release from their respective obligations is necessary to abrogation of a mutually executory contract by agreement of the parties.[32] Where one party claimed his right to rescind in proper time, and asked for a return of the consideration which defendant promised, the latter acquiesced in the rescission.[33] Where one of the parties withdrew before the contract was complete, the other accepted his withdrawal by securing another person to take his place, thereby relieving him from obligation.[34]

(§ 9) H. Rights on rescission.—One party may sue to recover money paid on a contract from the other, where the latter acts in a manner assenting to the rescission of the contract by the other after such rescission,[35] but on disaffirmance and suit to recover consideration, profits cannot be recovered but merely the amount paid with interest.[36] If the owner of a partially completed building wrongfully prevents the builder from completing it and the latter elects to treat his act as a rescission of the contract, recovery may be had for reasonable value of the work done prior to the decision where no apportionment of compensation is provided by the contract.[37] Where under a contract to build a railroad, the decision of the engineer is final as to any dispute and any right to sue at law or otherwise is waived, the latter provision does not apply on rescission of the contract where the contractor sues to recover for loss thereon but makes no claim for work done.[38] Under a contract to furnish iron by a certain time, after default by the materialman, the contractors were justified in going into the market and paying for materials at a higher price than that provided by the contract, and were also justified in securing "substantially" the same kind of material as was required by the contract.[39]

(§ 9) I. Actions for rescission.[40]—Even though a party could combine with a suit on a contract an action for rescission of the same contract for fraud, the latter action should be nonsuited where it appears that he had received from the other party sums he had himself paid on the contract and that no restoration or offer to restore had been made.[41] In rescission for misrepresentation, the misrepresentation must be set out in the pleading.[42] On termination of a contract for construction of a building. the owner must show failure of the contractor to perform his contract as a condition precedent to a rescission thereof.[43] The party seeking rescission must show the making of fraudulent representations and their falsity, but when he has done so the burden shifts and the other party must prove that such representations did not influence the contract.[44] Evidence of the circumstances and facts under which a contract was executed may be shown in action for rescission as bearing on the question of good faith.[45] Where the consideration of a contract fails without the

30. Central Coal & Coke Co. v. George S. Good & Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 793.
31. Retaking possession of land and collecting and retaining rents therefrom without attempting to enforce payment of remaining installments of purchase price amounts to a rescission of its sale—Evans v. Jacobitz (Kan.) 72 Pac. 848.
32. Barrie v. King, 105 Ill. App. 426.
33. Luce v. New Orange Industrial Ass'n, 68 N. J. Law, 31.
34. Sutton v. Griebel, 118 Iowa, 78.
35. Luce v. New Orange Industrial Ass'n, 68 N. J. Law, 31.
36. Hayes v. Stortz (Mich.) 90 N. W. 678.
37. Geo. M. Newhall Engineering Co. v. Daly (Wis.) 93 N. W. 12.
38. Dobbling v. York Springs Ry. Co., 203 Pa. 628.
39. Christopher, etc., Foundry Co. v. Yeager, 202 Ill. 486.
40. Consult the title Cancellation of Instruments, ante, p. 413.
41. Cleckley v. Mutual Fidelity Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 725.
42. Scott v. Boyd (Va.) 42 S. E. 918.
43. White v. Mitchell, 30 Ind. App. 342.
44. Garrison v. Technic Electrical Works 63 N. J. Eq. 806.
45. Jewell v. McIntyre, 172 N. Y. 638.

avail of other party as in the sale of a patent, which under the terms was to be successful but which proved to be unsuccessful, both parties will be restored to their original situations in equity.[46]

(§ 9) J. Abandonment of contract.—Formal release or cancellation is not necessary to abandonment of a written contract but it may be shown by the conduct of the parties and the circumstances;[47] the act of one party in rendering performance impossible is an abandonment.[48] After abandonment there can be no enforcement according to the terms of the contract,[49] though recovery may be had for partial performance on a quantum meruit, where it appears that the abandonment was by mutual consent without any provision as to compensation.[50] Where a building contract is abandoned by the contractor and completed by another under conditions therein, the work of completion is done under the contract and on account of the contractor, and he is entitled to any balance remaining after the cost of completion.[51] On failure of contractors to substantially complete a building and their abandonment on refusal of the owner to pay an instalment of the price, he may complete the building and hold them responsible for the expense.[52] Where in a contract for the construction of sewers, errors in grade and cavings of banks were anticipated by agreement that on occurrence of such events the parties shall allow their obligations to be adjusted by the chief engineer of the city, and the expenditures and losses shall be charged as provided by the contract remaining in force, the contractor cannot abandon the work and refuse to accept the adjustment fixed by the contract.[53] On abandonment of a contract by a subcontractor, he should not be allowed, though entitled to remove his plant, to remove any part which is necessary to preserve the work until a reasonable time during which another plant may be substituted.[54]

§ 10. Remedies for breach of contract.[55] A. Rights of action in general.—Illegality of a contract will not prevent relief if the rights of plaintiff do not require aid of the illegal transaction.[56] If a contract has been modified by subsequent agreement, suit must be brought on it as modified.[57] That a party in default may have incurred a criminal liability by nonperformance of his contract will not prevent its enforcement or action thereon.[58] After a party to an unexecuted contract has stopped performance, an action will lie only for the breach and not for the price of the goods purchased.[59] Harsh provisions in a contract, unenforceable

46. Hoffman v. Duryea, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 553.

47. Creamery Package Mfg. Co. v. Sharples Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1068. A letter between the parties to a contract stating that the writer declined to have anything further to do with it amounted to a renunciation giving the other party the right to the recovery of any damages sustained—Wallingford v. Aitkins, 24 Ky. L. R. 1995, 72 S. W. 794. Where one party to a contract notifies the other after partial performance that he will not proceed, it amounts to a breach and the other is released from further performance—Miller v. Sigler (Mo. App.) 69 S. W. 479.

48. Where parties agree to act together in consolidation of a corporation, but before the contract was performed one of the parties affected another consolidation which rendered it impossible for him to perform, such act constituted an abandonment of the agreement and authorized any arrangement by the other party for consolidation without responsibility to the first for a division of accruing profits—Parks v. Gates, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 534.

49. Tribune Ass'n v. Eisner & M. Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 172. Rebates on the price according to terms of the contract cannot be enforced—Id.

50. Tribune Ass'n v. Eisner & M. Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 172.

51. White v. Livingston, 174 N. Y. 538.

52. Hansen v. Hackman, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 290.

53. Brown v. Baton Rouge, 109 La. 967.

54. Building city underground railway—McCabe v. Hunt, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 466.

55. Cancellation in equity of written contracts. See ante, p. 413.

56. Robson v. Hamilton, 41 Or. 239, 69 Pac. 651.

57. Iroquois Furnace Co. v. Bignall Hardware Co., 201 Ill. 297.

58. Baum v. Union Surety & Guaranty Co., 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 23.

59. Contract of sale of goods—Herring-Hall-Marvin Co. v. Smith (Or.) 72 Pac. 704.

in equity, will not prevent enforcement of valid provisions therein.[60] Where there was an implied contract to pay for litigation necessary to performance of a contract, an accounting could be had to determine such expenses though charges could not be made for expenses within control of the party, or for his services, or for losses resulting from the litigation.[61] To be effective, a waiver of the right to sue on the contract must be under a valid condition and must concern the identical contract.[62] An unaccepted offer of payment will not waive an action for breach,[63] nor will an act calculated merely to protect plaintiff's rights made necessary by defendant's default,[64] nor mere assertion of a right under the contract.[65]

(§ 10) B. Form of action.—In a suit brought on a contract for purchase of certain goods and on notes given for the price, plaintiff cannot be required to elect whether he will sue on the contract or the notes.[66] If the default of defendant is as much a wrong as a breach of contract, plaintiff may sue for either.[67] Assumpsit will lie for failure to fulfill an offer which was to remain open until a particular date and to be accepted in a certain manner, but which plaintiff was prevented from accepting by the fault of defendant,[68] or on a special contract terminated by its terms by agreement of the parties or by improper conduct of defendants,[69] or to enforce a simple contract debt growing out of a conveyance.[70] If a contract has been fully executed except for payment of an agreed price, plaintiff may sue on the common counts,[71] a special declaration being unnecessary,[72] but after declaration on a special contract and proof thereof, plaintiff cannot abandon his position and recover on the common counts.[73] Where the owner, at his own cost, completes construction under a building contract, which had been renounced by the contractor, he cannot recover for such cost on the common counts but must sue for breach of contract.[74] In an action on a special building contract to which common counts were added, if there was an express contract for construction, recovery could not be had under the common counts for money due on account and for work, unless there was compliance with the contract or an acceptance of the construction as done.[75] Recovery cannot

60. Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Chicago, K. & S. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 882.

61. Murphy v. Northern S. S. Co. (Mich.) 91 N. W. 142.

62. A condition in a contract that courts of another country shall have exclusive jurisdiction of actions on a contract made therein except certain suits, is not waived by suit against parties, not identical, on a later contract, nor by a suit to preserve the rights of one of the parties provided such condition should be held to be invalid—Mittenthal v. Mascagni, 183 Mass. 19.

63. An offer by the owner of a building to pay the contractor and his surety a small amount due on the contract for erection before bringing action for breach of contract, will not bar recovery where they refused to accept—Ramlose v. Dollman (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 917.

64. Foreclosure by a purchaser of a trust deed and notes on refusal of the seller to repurchase under the contract of sale, and failure to realize the full amount, will not estop him from suing for breach of the contract—Loeb v. Stern, 198 Ill. 371.

65. Holding out by the owner of a building of an amount agreed upon between him and the contractor as demurrage stipulated for delay in completion by a certain time, will not prevent an action by him against the contractor for breach of the contract—Ramlose v. Dollman (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 917.

66. Strickland v. Parlin & Orendorf Co. (Ga.) 44 S. E. 997.

67. Where a building near an excavation by a railroad company suffered damage through faulty design of a wall built by the company under an agreement to make the building safe, the owner could sue for breach of contract or in tort—Paterson Extension R. Co. v. Church of Holy Communion (N. J. Sup.) 53 Atl. 449; Church of Holy Communion v. Paterson Extension R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 53 Atl. 1079.

68. Acceptance was to be signified by payment of a certain amount of money—Guilford v. Mason, 24 R. I. 386.

69. Zapel v. Ennis, 104 Ill. App. 175.

70. Where a debtor conveys his land to his creditor under an arrangement that it should discharge his debt and that both should use their efforts to sell the property, any surplus above the debt to be paid to the debtor, he was entitled to recover such surplus—Moran v. Munhall, 204 Pa. 242.

71. McDermott v. St. Wilhelmina Benev. Aid Soc. (R. I.) 54 Atl. 58.

72. Union El. R. Co. v. Nixon, 199 Ill. 235.

73. Burton v. Rosemary Mfg. Co. (N. C.) 43 S. E. 480.

74. Wygent v. Marrs (Mich.) 90 N. W. 423.

75. Aarnes v. Windham (Ala.) 34 So. 816.

be had on a quantum meruit for goods delivered under a contract invalid for noncompliance with the statute as to execution,[76] nor for breach of a contract to leave a legacy to plaintiff in return for services.[77] A cause of action as on a quantum meruit may be joined with the declaration on a special contract.[78] Equity will not construe a written contract and give damages for its breach, if a reformation is not asked and neither fraud nor mistake is alleged.[79] If the party in default has received no benefits, he cannot be called to account in equity but the other must sue for the breach.[80]

(§ 10) C. Accrual of right of action.—The action for breach accrues to one party on refusal of the other to perform or to be bound,[81] and the right of action thus accruing to one party on the other's breach is not affected by a subsequent offer to perform.[82] Instalments due may be sued for though performance is not complete.[83] An action begun five years after the beginning of a contract which was to continue four years was not premature, though the cost of work done or the amount of rent chargeable as provided by its terms had not been determined by the parties.[84] Damages may be recovered presently for breach of a contract to give a note payable in the future.[85]

(§ 10) D. Conditions precedent to bringing action.[86]—One attempting to enforce performance of a contract must show performance on his own part,[87] or readiness and willingness to perform if permitted so to do,[88] and if he has himself broken the contract he cannot recover consideration paid,[89] regardless of the validity or inva-

76. Contract with a township—Peck-Williamson Heating & Ventilating Co. v. Steen School Tp. (Ind.) 66 N. E. 909.

77. Banks v. Howard, 117 Ga. 94.

78. Burton v. Rosemary Mfg. Co. (N. C.) 43 S. E. 480.

79. Clarke v. Shirk (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 340; Bank v. Belington Coal & Coke Co., 51 W. Va. 60.

80. Where parties entered into a contract to form a consolidated corporation, providing that profits arising therefrom should be divided among promoters, but the contract was abandoned and the parties agreed to act together in further efforts for the consolidation, but before one of them had prosecuted his efforts to a successful issue, the other formed a different consolidation, from which it did not appear that any profits were derived except such as were derived by party as underwriter of bonds for the consolidated corporation, the first party was not entitled to recover in equity for an accounting of profits but only for a breach of contract against the other if at all—Parks v. Gates, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 534.

81. Shields v. Carson, 102 Ill. App. 38. Though time for performance of some conditions has not yet arrived—Northrop v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co., 119 Fed. 969. The action for breach of a contract to leave plaintiff a legacy in return for services performed accrues at death of defendant—Banks v. Howard, 117 Ga. 94.

82. Emack v. Hughes, 74 Vt. 382.

83. Cramer v. Redman (Wyo.) 68 Pac. 1003.

84. Rumford Falls Boom Co. v. Rumford Falls Paper Co., 96 Me. 96.

85. Deering v. Johnson, 86 Minn. 172.

86. An agreement by the owner to accept a certain sum for failure of the contractor to complete minor details, and as to the balance due, will complete the contract so as to entitle the materialmen to recover the amount due from the contract—Roussel v. Mathews, 62 App. Div. (N. Y.) 1.

87. Stern v. McKee, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 142. Execution and tender of deed must be shown in an action on a contract for sale of land—Evans v. Jacobitz (Kan.) 72 Pac. 848. One who is guilty of a breach of a contract cannot sue the other for subsequent failure or refusal to perform—Loudenback Fertilizer Co. v. Tennessee Phosphate Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 298. Substantial performance will entitle plaintiff to recovery—City of Elizabeth v. Fitzgerald (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 547; as to what constitutes such performance—Harris v. Sharpless, 202 Pa. 243, 58 L. R. A. 214. Because of the disproportionate amount of work left undone and greater expenses incurred by plaintiffs in completing the contract, there was a substantial performance before bringing action—Drew v. Goodhue, 74 Vt. 436. Impossibility of performance of certain conditions by plaintiff will obviate necessity of performance to recover on other provisions—Buchanan v. Layne, 95 Mo. App. 148; as will also abandonment of the contract after part performance—Tribune Ass'n v. Eisner & Mendelson Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 172. Failure to perform in a small particular will not render the action premature where, after the action was begun, plaintiff completed performance with due care—Drew v. Goodhue, 74 Vt. 436. Failure of contract to make alterations ordered at time of order will not prevent his recovery—Essex v. Murray (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 736. Failure of a contractor to complete a building within a certain period will not give the other the right to complain of the breach, where he failed to make payments as prescribed—Harris' Assignee v. Gardiner, 24 Ky. L. R. 103, 68 S. W. 8; Brooks v. Greer's Adm'r, Id.

88. Stern v. McKee, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 142; Leek Milling Co. v. Langford (Miss.) 33 So. 492.

89. Consideration paid on a contract of lidity of the contract;[90] but subsequent promises not a part of the contract need not be fulfilled.[91] However, acceptance by defendant of part performance may waive full performance as a condition precedent to recovery.[92] Plaintiff need not give notice of performance where defendant has equally as good an opportunity to know of the completion of the contract.[93] A tender of performance by plaintiff is not necessary if performance is rendered impossible by default of the other party,[94] and a notice by defendant that he has put it beyond plaintiff's power to perform is a waiver of such tender;[95] the offer to perform is sufficient as to an assigned contract if made to the original party on breach by the assignee.[96] Generally, a demand of performance is necessary before bringing an action for breach of a contract,[97] but no demand is necessary if the other party has renounced the contract,[98] or it is apparent from the conduct of the other party that it will be unavailing,[99] or the other party has voluntarily put it out of his power to perform.[1] Where a building contract provides that final payment should be due when the work was completed and accepted by the architect, his certificate was a condition precedent to such payment.[2] Though the architect's certificate was necessary to payments on a building contract, it was not necessary to an action on such contract, where the owner had declared it forfeited and taken possession to complete the building himself,[3] if the contractors have substantially performed and no reason privilege to conduct an exhibition on the state fair grounds where the contract is canceled by the fair association for violation by the licensee—Mackay v. Minnesota State Agricultural Soc. (Minn.) 92 N. W. 539. As to a contract without time, substantial performance of the entire contract by plaintiff is necessary to liability of the other party though the liability may be separate as to different items—Riddell v. Peck-Williamson Heating & Ventilating Co., 27 Mont. 44, 69 Pac. 241.

90. Contract for building permit for street railroad by which company forfeited deposit for failure to build a certain distance in a given time—West Springfield & A. St. Ry. Co. v. Bodurtha, 181 Mass. 583.

91. Failure to give a bond for faithful performance of a contract which plaintiff promised after the contract was fully made will not prevent recovery where the referee concluded that the promise was not a part of the contract—Disken v. Herter, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 453.

92. Where one of the parties to a contract insisted that the other had not complied therewith, whereupon the latter agreed to complete the contract according to its conditions, and on the strength of this promise was paid the greater part of the price, and the work was accepted, it cannot be claimed that complete performance is a condition precedent to the recovery of the balance of the price, but the amount of the claim for work may be reduced by the amount of damages the other party has sustained because of lack of complete performance—Gray v. Village of New Paynesville (Minn.) 94 N. W. 721.

93. Drew v. Goodhue, 74 Vt. 436.

94. Where the co-owners of a plantation are out of possession so that it is impossible for them to know what balance is due, if any, on an account by another owner under a contract for exclusive management and control, they are relieved from an antecedent tender in bringing an action for breach of the contract wherein they so alleged—Derouen v. Romero (La.) 34 So. 415.

95. Notice by mortgagee to mortgagor that he has sold the mortgage will excuse tender of performance of contract to purchase the mortgage at a discount before maturity—Thurber v. Smith, 25 R. I. 60.

96. Bowen v. Young, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 547.

97. Sufficiency of demand and failure to comply constituting a breach of contract giving the demanding party immediate right of action—In re Swift, 114 Fed. 947; Ex parte Harrigan, Id. Sufficiency of description of town lot in demand made for conveyance of such lot under contract calling for such conveyance within a certain period of time in consideration of services rendered the owner—Ehrich v. Durkee (Colo. App.) 72 Pac. 814. In action to recover the value of property which under the contract defendant was to furnish plaintiff—Ingram v. Bussey, 133 Ala. 539. Sufficiency of legal demand and refusal to pay to prevent objection that plaintiff was not entitled to payment when demand was made, in action for recovery for services performed before rescission by defendant—South End Imp. Co. v. Harden (N. J. Eq.) 52 Atl. 1127.

98. Contract to convey lands in consideration of support of grantor for life, renounced by prospective grantee—Van Horn v. Mercer, 29 Ind. App. 277. Where sellers of certain securities agree to repurchase on certain notice, and such notice was given, further demand after their refusal is unnecessary—Loeb v. Stern, 198 Ill. 371.

99. And this, though the terms of the contract expressly require a demand—Loeb v. Stern, 198 Ill. 371.

1. Murphy v. Dernberg, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 101.

2. McGlauflin v. Wormser (Mont.) 72 Pac. 428.

3. Ocorr & Rugg Co. v. City of Little Falls, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 592.

for its refusal appears,[4] nor to an action of assumpsit to recover for work done.[5] There must be an award or settlement of disputes before action on a contract providing for an arbiter whose decision shall be final,[6] but if plaintiff's demands are not questioned arbitration is unnecessary.[7] Defendant cannot urge a provision for arbitration as to value of work done where he neither took steps to select arbitrators and neither demanded nor offered arbitration.[8]

(§ 10) E. Defenses and recoupment.—That a debt sued for has been attached in defendant's hands in a foreign jurisdiction by plaintiff's creditors is no defense to an action on the contract.[9] In an action on a contract for the furnishing of evidence to establish a right to a mining claim, an objection that plaintiff did not own the evidence which he agreed to furnish but obtained it under a contract with a third person is no defense; nor a failure by plaintiff to advance money necessary to perform the contract, where the defendants did not terminate the contract for that reason but continued the litigation and accepted the benefits.[10] In an action for a balance of compensation on a building contract, if there has been an acceptance there cannot be a recoupment, but only if the recovery is on a quantum meruit alone, especially where it appears that the work was performed in accordance with a guaranty which was made a part of the contract.[11]

(§ 10) F. Place of trial.—The place where a contract is dated will not necessarily control the place of trial of an action thereon.[12] The right to sue on a written contract in a certain county is not dependent upon any express provision in the contract that it is to be performed there, but it is sufficient if the contract must necessarily be performed where suit is brought.[13]

(§ 10) G. Parties.—In an action for breach of a contract to deliver goods to two persons, both are necessary parties.[14] The surviving co-party on one side of a contract may sue thereon in his own name as though a surviving partner.[15] One who does not sustain such relation to a contract that he could sue upon it for breach thereof cannot sue in tort for such breach.[16] Under the common law, where it appears from the declaration in an action ex contractu that there are too many defendants, any of them may demur for misjoinder.[17] Where a building contract required the contractor to give a bond for faithful performance, and for materials and labor, his laborers and materialmen were beneficiaries and proper parties to sue for its enforcement.[18] In a several action brought on a joint contract, nonjoinder of parties plaintiff need not be raised by plea in abatement nor by special plea of the joint contract, since the defense is not affirmative and plaintiff must establish his cause of action.[19] Where one partner dies pending an action against the firm on a contract, as his administrators appear to defend, plaintiff may be permitted to amend by discontinuance as to the living partner and proceeding against the administrators.[20]

4. Happel v. Marasco, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 314.
5. Board of Com'rs of Fulton County v. Gibson, 158 Ind. 471.
6. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. v. Howell, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 255.
7. Charges for extras under a building contract providing for arbitration—Essex v. Murray (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 736.
8. Van Note v. Cook, 55 App. Div. (N. Y.) 55.
9. Bailey v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 248.
10. Wood v. Casserleigh, 30 Colo. 287, 71 Pac. 360.
11. Mosaic Tile Co. v. Chiera (Mich.) 95 N. W. 537.
12. Contract of guaranty; Code, § 27—Smith v. Post Printing & Publishing Co. (Colo. App.) 68 Pac. 119.
13. Rev. Sts. 1895, art. 1194, subd. 5—Darragh v. O'Connor (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 644.
14. Lemon v. Wheeler, 96 Mo. App. 651.
15. Northness v. Hillestad, 87 Minn. 304.
16. Styles v. F. R. Long Co., 67 N. J. Law, 413.
17. Cunningham v. Town of Orange, 74 Vt. 115.
18. Town of Gastonia v. McEntee-Peterson Engineering Co., 131 N. C. 363.
19. Blackburn v. Blackburn (Mich.) 94 N. W. 24.
20. Under Public Sts. c. 136, § 8, providing

(§ 10) H. Pleading and proof. The complaint or petition[21] must allege a performance by plaintiff as far as possible and that he was ready and willing to perform,[22] unless a sufficient excuse for nonperformance is given;[23] as, where there are no precedent conditions to be performed by plaintiff to entitle him to demand performance, or the right of defendant to demand performance by plaintiff must be preceded by performance, wholly or in part, by defendant;[24] a breach in that there was default by defendant;[25] that the time for performance is due;[26] the obligations of defendant;[27] the things he has failed to do;[28] a waiver of conditions by defendant;[29] a demand for performance by defendant or facts showing a demand to have been useless;[30] the value of the property concerned so as to furnish a basis for deter-that when one of several persons indebted on a joint contract dies, his estate shall be liable as though the contract were joint and several—Philadelphia & R. Coal & Iron Co. v. Butler, 181 Mass. 468.

21. Sufficiency of petition for breach of building contract as showing that a discontinuance of the work by plaintiff contractors did not amount to a breach on their part—McClellan v. McLemore (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 224. Of petition in action for recovery of loan to insolvent on strength of promise by a county judge to retain money to repay it from a debt owing from the county to the insolvent—Huffman v. Ahl, 24 Ky. L. R. 1877, 72 S. W. 343. Of declaration in connection with bill of particulars in action for breach of contract for sale of lands—Culver v. Smith (Mich.) 91 N. W. 608. Petition as counting on contract or in tort—Lambert v. Jones, 91 Mo. App. 288; Wallrath v. Bohnenkamp, 97 Mo. App. 242. Sufficiency of allegation of breach of a contract for manufacture and sale of goods to show that any performance was ever made by the plaintiff—Howie v. Kasnowitz, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 295. Of complaint in action for breach of a contract of employment to purchase cotton seed—Stokes-Evans Co. v. Clay County Cotton Oil Co. (Miss.) 33 So. 283. In action for breach of agreement to deliver a note on sale of machinery—Deering v. Johnson, 86 Minn. 172. Of complaint as to validity of contract—De Boer v. Harmsen (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1036. Of complaint in action on a sale of lumber to show that it was used in construction of buildings on premises of defendant—Hurd v. Wing, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 506. Sufficiency of allegations as to happening of emergency necessitating change in construction contract anticipated by its terms—National Contracting Co. v. Commonwealth (Mass.) 66 N. E. 639. Sufficiency of bill to show contractual relations between parties—Moore v. Hammond (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 759. Of petition to show a contract between the parties under its averments—Standard Oil Co. v. Goodman Drug Co. (Neb.) 95 N. W. 667.

22. Crafton v. Carmichael (Ind. App.) 64 N. E. 627. Under Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 373—Magic Packing Co. v. Stone-Ordean-Wells Co., 158 Ind. 538. A general allegation that plaintiffs had at all times performed their part of a contract without enumerating several acts done, is sufficient—Dennis v. Slyfield (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 474. A petition to recover damages for breach of a construction contract requiring the work to satisfy the plans, specifications and orders of the engineer in charge, must allege that the petitioner has performed his part according to contract—National Contracting Co. v. Commonwealth (Mass.) 66 N. E. 639. An allegation that plaintiff had done all required to be done by him under the terms of his contract, was insufficient as to performance of conditions precedent to a right to terminate the contract—White v. Mitchell, 30 Ind. App. 342. A complaint on a construction contract, alleging that the contractor has fulfilled and performed all conditions on his part to be performed, is sufficient without a specific allegation of acceptance of the work by the engineer of the other party as required by the contract. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 533, providing that it is not necessary to state facts constituting performance if a general statement is made that due performance has been done—Vandegrift v. Bertron, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 548. If the contract provides expressly that estimates of the value of the work done by the engineer in charge should be made as basis of weekly payments when the work was progressing in accordance with the contract, it is necessary to allege that the express agreement had been complied with—National Contracting Co. v. Commonwealth (Mass.) 66 N. E. 639.

23. Buchanan v. Layne, 95 Mo. App. 148.

24. Where a building contract stipulated that payments should depend on the progress of the work and on certificates of the architect as to its performance, the owner in an action for breach of the contract need not plead performance of the conditions of the contract—Ramlose v. Dollman (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 917.

25. Crafton v. Carmichael (Ind. App.) 64 N. E. 627.

26. Borough of Bradley Beach v. Atlantic Coast Elec. R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 52 Atl. 231.

27. A complaint on a contract for settlement of partnership matters and collection of debts by one partner to be shared by both, merely setting out the contract without showing any personal indebtedness or promise to pay is insufficient—Brewer v. Swartz, 94 Mo. App. 392.

28. In order to take advantage of a passive violation of a contract in Louisiana—City of Alexandria v. Morgan's Louisiana & T. R. & S. S. Co., 109 La. 50.

29. Condition in a building contract requiring a written order of an architect for alterations—Essex v. Murray (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 736.

30. Contract to deliver property—Ingram v. Bussey, 133 Ala. 539. In the absence of a demurrer and in presence of an answer showing that a demand would have been unavailing, a demand for payment under a written contract is sufficiently shown by an mining damages claimed;[31] and, if the contract is ambiguous in its application to the subject-matter, must point out in what particular the contract is uncertain, and construe definitely its meaning.[32] Where money is to be paid, the time for payment must be alleged.[33] In any court outside of the justice court where formal pleadings are not required, ratification of a contract must be pleaded to become the theory of recovery.[34] A statute allowing the representative of a deceased party to a joint contract to be joined does not dispense with pleading insolvency or inability of the joint debtors when the representative is joined.[35] One who sued for breach of a warranty in a contract could not recover the amount of notes executed by him in part payment without alleging that such notes had been negotiated and that he was liable thereon.[36] If the contract is written, the complaint may either set out the language thereof or merely its legal effect.[37] In Louisiana, the petition need only set forth the contract and the breach.[38] A condition in the contract merely fixing time for payment and not determining liability need not be alleged.[39] That part of a complaint on a written contract which sets it forth in haec verba cannot be disregarded on the theory that the contract pleaded must be treated as an exhibit merely.[40] An allegation that the contract was entered into by defendant will not cover negotiations made through an agent.[41] On proof of part performance of a contract requiring plaintiff to do three distinct things, there must be an allegation seeking to recover on a quantum meruit.[42] A complaint not as complete as it might have been but which showed the nature of the demand and the amount of damages claimed is sufficient as against a motion to take the case from the jury because of failure to state a cause of action.[43] Where stock was purchased in consideration of an agreement by another that he would pay a dividend thereon if the corporation failed to pay, a complaint for recovery against such promisor need not allege that plaintiff was the owner of the stock at time of bringing action.[44] A complaint in an action brought by a certain company on a contract, addressed to that company under a title including another name, and embodying an instrument in which the company was referred to under the latter name as the contracting party, is sufficient, after answer, as to its allegations that both names referred to the same organization as plaintiff.[45] A complaint in an action by a contractor for failure of the owner to allow completion of the work according to the contract must show the character and amount of the work done in preparation for the construction, that a profit would have resulted and the amount thereof.[46] A complaint on a contract for dealing in lands, alleging that the contract was partly oral and partly written, and to be executed in a foreign state, and showing that it was valid and allegation in the complaint that defendant was bound under the contract to pay a certain sum out of certain moneys received by him but failed and refused so to do—Abby v. Dexter (Colo. App.) 72 Pac. 892.

31. Crafton v. Carmichael (Ind. App.) 64 N. E. 627.

32. Johnson v. Kindred State Bank (N. D.) 96 N. W. 588.

33. Crafton v. Carmichael (Ind. App.) 64 N. E. 627.

34. Snyder v. Gericke (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 377.

35. Code Civ. Proc. § 758—Potts v. Dounce, 173 N. Y. 335.

36. Low, Hudson & Gray Water Co. v. Hickson (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 781.

37. Abby v. Dexter (Colo. App.) 72 Pac. 892.

38. Miller v. Kline, 108 La. 31.

39. Agreement by state officer to pay obligation as rapidly as he could spare the money from his salary—Culver v. Caldwell (Ala.) 34 So. 13.

40. Abby v. Dexter (Colo. App.) 72 Pac. 892.

41. Blotcky v. Miller (Neb.) 91 N. W. 523.

42. Felton v. Tally (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 614.

43. Johnson v. San Juan Fish & Packing Co. (Wash.) 71 Pac. 787.

44. Having been alleged the owner he is presumed to continue the owner—Crook v. Scott (N. Y.) 66 N. E. 1106.

45. Herring-Hall Marvin Co. v. Smith (Or.) 72 Pac. 704.

46. Andrae v. Watson (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 991.

binding in that state, is sufficient as against a demurrer alleging that under the law of the forum such a contract must be in writing.[47] A complaint alleging that defendant agreed to pay plaintiff a certain amount for release from a contract of employment of a woman whom defendant wished to marry, on the faith of which promise she was released, sufficiently shows a consideration for her obligation to remain in the service of plaintiff.[48]

Answer or plea and affidavit of defense.[49]—If defendant relies on the illegality of the contract, he must plead it,[50] unless it is the duty of the court to notice the illegality of its own motion.[51] Allegations of false representations as inducement to the contract must also declare that defendant was deceived or that the contract was procured by fraud.[52] A partial defense pleaded as a complete defense is demurrable; but, though insufficient as a complete defense, it may be good as a counterclaim.[53] If a defense of failure of warranty is sufficient, the pleading of bad intent is not material.[54] An allegation in an answer in an action for services that plaintiff was to receive a certain amount under a special contract which had been paid amounts to a plea of payment.[55] An answer setting forth a contemporaneous agreement which varies the terms of a written contract sued upon but fails to show that such agreement was oral is not liable to a general demurrer.[56] An answer alleging that the purpose of the sale of a distillery was to endeavor to establish a monopoly throughout the United States, sufficiently shows that the contract was against the public policy of the forum, without regard to the lex loci contractus, and incapable of enforcement.[57]

In an action based on a promise to pay in event of the sale of certain realty, an affidavit of defense averring that such realty was not sold but exchanged for other realty which was not yet sold, and that consequently time of payment had not arrived, is sufficient.[58] Where defendant alleges that the contract was entered into because of false representations of the agent of plaintiff, the denial of liability because of the untruth must be as broad in the affidavit of defense as the allegation of the representations.[59]

47. Gates v. Paul (Wis.) 94 N. W. 55.

48. Holz v. Hanson, 115 Wis. 236.

49. Sufficiency of an answer in action for breach of contract containing several separate defenses—Falvey v. Woolner, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 331. Answer in suit for breach of contract as setting up defense of voluntary acceptance by plaintiff's assignor, with full knowledge of facts, of defendant's vendee as bound to carry out defendant's contract—Falvey v. Woolner, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 331. An answer, in an action to recover money paid on purchase of a mining claim, denying that payment was made after making the contract, sufficiently controverts a statement in the complaint that payments were made in accordance with its terms—Sherman v. Sweeny, 29 Wash. 321, 69 Pac. 1117. An answer in an action on a building contract that the contractor has failed to obtain a decision of the engineers in charge as to the fulfillment of the contract, in accordance with a clause therein, must be construed liberally to plead noncompliance with a condition precedent, and is not demurrable as stating an insufficient defense—National Contracting Co. v. Hudson River Water Power Co., 170 N. Y. 439.

50. Horton v. Rohlff (Neb.) 95 N. W. 36.

51. Illegality of an insurance contract, under a law making it a misdemeanor for an agent to give any inducement by rebate for special favors for the securing of insurance, need not be pleaded in defense in an action on a premium note, since it is the duty of the court on its own motion to take notice of the illegality—Heffron v. Daly (Mich.) 95 N. W. 714. A motion to dismiss an action for breach of an oral contract, because it was unenforceable by reason of statutes, cannot be granted defendant where he pleads general denial only and does not set up the statute either as affirmative defense by objection of introductory evidence or as ground for dismissal—Banta v. Banta, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 138.

52. Eccardt v. Eisenhauer, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 35.

53. Sufficiency of answer pleading a partial defense which it sought to make a complete defense—Ivy Courts Realty Co. v. Morton, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 335.

54. Code, § 3639—Perpetual Building & Loan Ass'n v. United States Fidelity & Guarantee Co. (Iowa) 92 N. W. 686.

55. Burton v. Rosemary Mfg. Co., 132 N. C. 17.

56. Tablet & Ticket Co. v. La Feber (Neb.) 93 N. W. 414.

57. Falvey v. Woolner, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 331.

58. Schoenbaechler v. Land Title & Trust Co., 21 Pa. (Super. Ct.) 415.

A plea of whole or partial failure of consideration must state facts showing such failure, though a general plea of no consideration may allege the fact in general terms.[60] In New Jersey a plea of want of consideration in an action on a sealed instrument reciting mutual covenants of the parties as respective considerations is insufficient to raise the question of sufficiency of the consideration, the proper pleading being demurrer or plea of non est factum.[61]

Reply.[62]—Where defendant pleaded the making of a subsequent contract as superseding the one on which action was brought, plaintiff need not reply but may interpose in defense showing that such subsequent contract never existed or was rendered void.[63]

Issues and proof; evidence admissible under pleadings; variance.[64]—A contract sued on must be substantially proven as alleged.[65] A party declaring on one contract cannot recover on proof of another,[66] nor can he declare on an express contract and recover on a quantum meruit.[67] Plaintiff may be required to show whether he sues on a written or verbal contract.[68] Where the complaint averred full performance within the limited time, no recovery can be had unless a full performance is established.[69] A nonsuit for failure to prove performance of a condition in a contract cannot be granted where the pleadings thereon did not raise any issue as to performance thereof.[70] Proof of the things in which the other party has defaulted is necessary to take advantage of passive violation of a contract.[71] In an action by a contractor for additional work, the original contract must be introduced to show whether the work was beyond such contract, and the rate of payment.[72] Before one party can recover for failure of the other to allow him to perform, he must show the contract valid and certain in its terms, a breach thereof, and damages.[73] Recovery cannot be had in an action on a contract to collect notes for plaintiff, unless proof is shown that defendant has collected sums on such notes, or by particular diligence could have so done, and that loss resulted to plaintiff.[74] In a suit on a contract for construction of a 59. Manufacturers' Record Pub. Co. v. Holton, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 120.

60. Osborne & Co. v. Hanlin, 158 Ind. 325; Raritan R. Co. v. Middlesex & S. Traction Co. (N. J. Sup.) 51 Atl. 623.

61. Pub. Laws 1900, p. 362—Raritan R. Co. v. Traction Co. (N. J. Sup.) 51 Atl. 623.

62. Sufficiency of reply in action for breach of contract as setting up the same contract as the one set out in the complaint—McCorkle v. Mallory, 30 Wash. 632, 71 Pac. 186. Necessity of reply in order for plaintiff to prove fraud in avoidance of a new agreement set up in an answer in action for breach of a contract; construction of Code Civ. Proc. § 522—Nesbit v. Jencks, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 140.

63. Spier v. Hyde, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 151.

64. Issues in pleading in action on contract for sale of mining property—Sherman v. Sweeny, 29 Wash. 321, 69 Pac. 1117. Sufficiency of complaint for failure to properly construct a tramway to admit evidence of defects—Lipscomb v. Railroad Co., 65 S. C. 148. Admissibility of proof of renting of building by owner and of acts of tenant after entry under pleadings in action by contractor to recover for construction—Mitchell v. Williams, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 527. Variance in action on contract leaving time for performance to be settled by subsequent agreement—Iroquois Furnace Co. v. Elphicke, 200 Ill. 411. What constitutes a variance in action for breach of contract where the complaint did not allege a condition which was to be performed by plaintiff nor its performance—Griffin v. Bass Foundry & Machine Co., 135 Ala. 490.

65. Mooneyham v. Cella, 91 Mo. App. 260. No recovery can be had for breach of an implied warranty arising out of a written contract—Taussig v. Wind (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1095.

66. Brigger v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 149; Iroquois Furnace Co. v. Bignall Hardware Co., 201 Ill. 297. Proof that one was authorized to collect rents is not evidence of authority to make contracts for leases—Dieckman v. Weirich, 24 Ky. L. R. 2340, 73 S. W. 1119.

67. Hayes v. Bunch, 91 Mo. App. 467.

68. Lombard v. Citizens' Bank of La., 107 La. 183.

69. Stern v. McKee, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 142.

70. Walterboro & W. Ry. Co. v. Hampton & B. R. & Lumber Co., 64 S. C. 383.

71. City of Alexandria v. Morgan's La. & T. R. & S. S. Co., 109 La. 50; Morgan's La. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. City of Alexandria, Id.

72. Board of Com'rs of Fulton County v. Gibson, 158 Ind. 471.

73. Truitt v. Fahey (Del. Super.) 52 Atl. 339.

74. Wight v. Commercial Bank of Albany, 115 Ga. 787.

city pavement to be subject to approval of the city commissioner of public works, the contractor must prove that in rejecting the work, the commissioner acted unreasonably, arbitrarily or fraudulently.[75] Fraud cannot be shown as a ground of damages where the pleadings show merely failure of performance,[76] nor can false representations be shown under an answer failing to allege that plaintiff knew them to be false.[77] Where the answer is a general denial, evidence only tending to prove a rescission is not primarily admissible.[78] Proof of facts excusing or waiving full performance cannot be admitted under a complaint to recover for full performance, nor can recovery be had on that theory;[79] the complaint must allege facts constituting the excuse and that plaintiff, though ready and willing to perform, was prevented by the other parties.[80] Plaintiff's evidence cannot be excluded on the ground of illegality of the contract, where such illegality does not clearly appear on the face of the petition;[81] nor can the illegality be shown under a general denial unless it appears on the face of the complaint or necessarily from the evidence given by plaintiff.[82] Under a plea of total failure of consideration it may be shown that the instrument was executed under misrepresentations as to the value of the consideration.[83] A defense of total failure of consideration for a note should be admitted under a general denial and an offer to show that the holders purchased with knowledge of the want of consideration.[84] Evidence of another contract relating to an entirely distinct transaction cannot be admitted where there is no connection with the alleged broken contract.[85] Letters between parties to a contract written to obviate a defect therein may be considered in an action thereon though based on the original contract unless an objection of variance is made.[86] Evidence offered in proof of passive violation of a contract, without an allegation of violation in the particulars sought to be proven, and without an allegation as to putting in default, cannot be admitted.[87] Evidence tending to show that an architect's certificate was unreasonably withheld cannot be allowed under a complaint merely alleging complete performance.[88] Evidence regarding the specifications under a building contract may be excluded in an action to recover for work as extra, though called for by the specifications, where expressly excepted from the contract.[89] Where two counts appear in the complaint and plaintiff elects to stand on the first, evidence on the second cannot be introduced by defendant.[90] Where a complaint in an action for final payment on a building contract alleged facts showing the contractor entitled to the architect's final certificate, which on his demand had

75. Brownell Improvement Co. v. Critchfield, 197 Ill. 61.

76. Poston v. Eno, 91 Mo. App. 304.

77. Walsh v. Hyatt, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 20.

78. William E. Peck & Co. v. Kansas City Metal Roofing & Corrugating Co., 96 Mo. App. 212.

79. Tribune Ass'n v. Eisner & Mendelson Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 172.

80. Stern v. McKee, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 142.

81. Horton v. Rohlff (Neb.) 95 N. W. 36.

82. Lee v. Lee, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 251.

83. Negotiable Instrument act, §§ 9, 10—Taft v. Myerscough, 197 Ill. 600.

84. Comp. Laws, §§ 767, 769—Hibbard v. Freiburger (Mich.) 94 N. W. 727.

85. Inman v. Crawford, 116 Ga. 63. A separate mortgage executed by a former mortgagor to agents of defendant is properly excluded in an action to recover balance due for threshing grain mortgaged to the defendant—Hill Bros. v. Bank of Seneca (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 307. Where a contract was executed for the formation of a corporation by defendant, and subsequently on receiving payment of the consideration he executed a contract to return such sum if the corporation failed, testimony as to a breach of the first contract cannot be admitted except on a question of the consideration for the second, where in an action to recover such consideration, plaintiff's witnesses testified that the action was on the second contract—Mendel v. Pickrell, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 813.

86. Laclede Construction Co. v. Tudor Iron Works, 169 Mo. 137.

87. City of Alexandria v. Morgan's La. & T. R. & S. S. Co., 109 La. 50.

88. Dwyer v. City of New York, 77 App Div. (N. Y.) 224.

89. Isaacs v. Dawson, 70 App. Div. (N Y.) 232.

90. Doyle v. Edwards, 15 S. D. 648.

been refused, evidence is admissible showing that the certificate had been refused at the instance of the owner.[91] Evidence of the value of land to be exchanged for other property by plaintiff for defendant may be properly excluded in an action on the contract, where the consideration was certain personalty which plaintiff was to receive from defendant.[92] Evidence of the value of work performed under a contract to defendant will not affect the right of recovery where the work was performed at a stipulated price and the action was not brought on a quantum meruit.[93] Letters constituting part of correspondence by which a contract was made are properly admitted, though they may constitute a modification of the contract, where the defendant pleaded such modification as an affirmative defense, and if properly introduced as part of the correspondence they may be considered as showing the modification.[94] An excuse for nonperformance cannot be shown under a plea of performance of a condition precedent.[95] Where a contract provided that in consideration of the conduct of a certain suit defendant would convey to plaintiff at a certain time certain lands in default of which he would pay a certain amount of money, the fact that time was or was not of the essence of the contract was not material in an action to enforce the payment thereunder, since when defendant failed to procure the conveyance he became absolutely liable for the payment of the money.[96] No recovery can be had on an implied contract under paragraphs of a complaint counting on a special contract.[97] Proof as to a subsequent oral agreement modifying a written contract pleaded constitutes a variance.[98] Plaintiff cannot disregard an invalid portion of his contract in an action for breach thereon and recover on the remainder, on the theory that the contract is severable where his petition is not drawn on that theory.[99] Allegations of a petition in an action for breach of a construction contract that materials furnished were not good and that the work was not properly performed will not entitle plaintiff to recovery because of failure to protect the construction after it was made, where it was properly done.[1] Proof of performance of a contract for a year's service during ten months and of a waiver of the continued performance is a fatal variance from a counterclaim founded on the entire period of service and alleging performance.[2] A nonsuit was properly granted because of a failure of proof rather than a departure in the evidence where defendant showed the contract to have been greatly modified by a subsequently written agreement, and there was no proof of any breach of the modified contract.[3] Where a note is only collaterally involved in a suit for breach of a contract to reimburse the maker, a variance in describing the note in the complaint as signed by plaintiff only, whereas it was signed by another also, is immaterial.[4] Where a complaint in an action for breach of a contract to advance a law firm certain money for prosecution of litigation did not allege that the payments advanced were not used for the purpose of litigation, but evidence on that point had been received without objection, it

91. Vanderhoof v. Shell, 42 Or. 578, 72 Pac. 126.
92. Distad v. Shanklin, 15 S. D. 507.
93. Craig v. French, 181 Mass. 282.
94. Lost Lake Lumber Co. v. Smith, 29 Wash. 713, 70 Pac. 134.
95. White v. Mitchell, 30 Ind. App. 342.
96. Ehrich v. Durkee (Colo. App.) 72 Pac. 814.
97. Davis v. Chase, 159 Ind. 242.
98. Duval v. American Telephone & Telegraph Co., 113 Wis. 504.
99. Laclede Construction Co. v. Tudor Iron Works, 169 Mo. 137.
1. Taussig v. Wind (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1095.
2. Nelson v. Hatch, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 206.
3. Lost Lake Lumber Co. v. Smith, 29 Wash. 713, 70 Pac. 134.
4. Culver v. Caldwell (Ala.) 34 So. 13.

may be considered that the complaint was amended in order to give effect to such evidence.[5]

(§ 10) I. Evidence. Presumptions and burden of proof.[6]—A consideration will be persumed as to a contract under seal,[7] or a contract in writing.[8] One signing a contract without being influenced by fraud is presumed to know its contents.[9] It will not be presumed that the parties intended to provide for an illegal act or one which would avoid their contract.[10] A contract undertaken by two or more persons is presumed, at the common law, to be joint until the presumption is overcome by words of severance.[11] A conveyance from a client to an attorney in payment of fees and loans is not presumed fraudulent,[12] however, in Georgia, the purchase of a judgment from a client by his attorney is presumed invalid.[13] Mere testimony that one party knew of certain facts at the time of the making of the contract is too indefinite to warrant a presumption that they contracted with reference to such facts, where nothing was said between the parties at the time regarding them.[14] Plaintiff must prove the obligation of defendant under the contract,[15] and performance of the contract.[16] He who asserts a waiver of a provision in a contract,[17] or the absence,[18] or partial illegality of consideration,[19] or mental incapacity to contract,[20] must prove it. Defendant must show fraud in the execution of a written contract,[21] or illegality of the contract,[22] unless it is the duty of the court to notice the illegality of its own motion;[23] but if a written statement in evidence is set up as a false representation, and its falsity is sought to be proved by other evidence, complainant nevertheless has the burden of proving its falsity.[24] In an action on an account for intoxicating liquor, defendant has the burden of proving illegal sales.[25] The owner sued on a

5. Scheurer v. Monash, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 803.

6. Presumption of invalidity of contract for purchase of client's judgment by attorney—Stubbinger v. Frey, 116 Ga. 396. That plaintiff, his wife and several children resided for a year at a hotel belonging to his mother and operated by another son as her agent, and that plaintiff and his children did not live in the family of the mother or render her any services, and that an allowance was made for the services of his wife to the mother, will raise no presumption that board was furnished them gratuitously, but a contract to pay will be implied—Weitnauer v. Weitnauer, 117 Iowa, 578.

7. Howie v. Kasnowitz, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 295.

8. Ash v. Beck (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 53; Kiesewetter v. Kress, 24 Ky. L. R. 1239, 70 S. W. 1065; Rev. St. 1899, § 894—Holmes v. Farris, 97 Mo. App. 305; Tapley v. Herman, 95 Mo. App. 537; Lowrey v. Danforth, Id. 441; Brown v. Johnson Bros., 135 Ala. 608; Woodworth v. Veitch, 29 Ind. App. 589; Pritchett v. Sheridan (Ind. App.) 63 N. E. 865; Gallagher v. Kiley, 115 Ga. 420; McMicken v. Safford, 197 Ill. 540.

9. Fivey v. Railroad Co., 67 N. J. Law, 627.

10. Horton v. Rohlff (Neb.) 95 N. W. 36; Bostwick v. Insurance Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 246; Johnston v. Insurance Co., 93 Mo. App. 580.

11. Hill v. Combs, 92 Mo. App. 232.

12. Lindt v. Linder, 117 Iowa, 110.

13. Stubbinger v. Frey, 116 Ga. 396.

14. Murphy v. Dernberg, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 101.

15. Plaintiff suing for balance of compensation under a contract for performance of a theatrical exhibition must prove an alleged agreement by defendant to pay at some future time an unsatisfied balance of the contract price made during the last performance—Charley v. Potthoff (Wis.) 95 N. W. 124.

16. Special contract—Aarnes v. Windham (Ala.) 34 So. 816; Froelich v. Christie, 115 Wis. 549. In an action by one for services under a contract making it optional with the other party as to whether such services should be continued, plaintiff must show that he performed the services—Shedrick v. Young, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 278.

17. Sessa v. Arthur (Mass.) 66 N. E. 804.

18. Howie v. Kasnowitz, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 295.

19. A party alleging in an action on a contract that a certain promise was based on an illegal consideration, as a reason for his failure in its fulfillment, must prove such allegations—Anderson v. Carlson, 99 Ill. App. 514.

20. Tuite v. Hart, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 619.

21. Fivey v. Railroad Co., 67 N. J. Law, 627; Edwards v. Story, 105 Ill. App. 433; Harrington v. Mining Co., 27 Mont. 1, 69 Pac. 102.

22. Horton v. Rohlff (Neb.) 95 N. W. 36.

23. Heffron v. Daly (Mich.) 95 N. W. 714.

24. Garrison v. Technic Electrical Works, 63 N. J. Eq. 806.

25. Overstreet v. Brubaker (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1090.

building contract must show that an architect's certificate presented by the contractor was secured by fraud;[26] and if he counterclaims liquidated damages for failure to complete the work in the agreed time, he must show such failure.[27] Where plaintiff declared on an open account but defendant pleaded a verbal contract, which plaintiff admitted while testifying that it was restricted to a time stated, he must prove the restriction.[28] The burden is on an attorney to show that his purchase of a judgment from his client was fair and for a sufficient consideration.[29] In an action for wages, the employer must show that other and more profitable employment had been offered to plaintiff and declined by him, or might have been found, in order to reduce the damages.[30] In an action for services, an allegation in the answer that plaintiff was to receive a certain amount under a special contract, which had been paid, amounted to a plea of payment and the burden was on defendant to prove the contract he alleged.[31] Where water rents for irrigation purposes under a contract were not collected during the first year owing to a loss of crops for insufficiency of water, and the next year a new contract was made without demand for such previous rents, it will be presumed in an action to set aside for nonperformance that the debt of the first year was merged in the consideration for the later contract.[32]

Admissibility of evidence.[33]—Parol evidence is inadmissible to vary, contradict, or modify a written contract unambiguous in its terms,[34] especially where

26. Schultze v. Goodstein, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 316.

27. Dunn v. Morgenthau, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 147.

28. Austin v. Schwing (La.) 34 So. 700.

29. Stubbinger v. Frey, 116 Ga. 396.

30. Griffin v. Brooklyn Ball Club, 68 App. Div. (N. Y.) 566.

31. Burton v. Manufacturing Co., 132 N. C. 17.

32. Perkins v. Frazer, 107 La. 390.

33. Evidence admissible in action by subcontractor to recover for work as extra which was called for by specifications—Isaacs v. Dawson, 174 N. Y. 537. Evidence in action by a surety against a state officer for breach of a contract to reimburse the surety for money paid on the bond of the deputy of the officer, as to examination by the public examiner of the accounts of the department—Culver v. Caldwell (Ala.) 34 So. 13. Evidence of what persons in the audience said on leaving a theater during exhibitions may be admitted on the question of compliance of the opera company with its contract for the exhibition in an action by it to recover compensation—Charley v. Potthoff (Wis.) 95 N. W. 124. Expert evidence as to whether there were cases in which earthen sewer pipe was preferable to iron, where the contractor was seeking to excuse its substitution for iron pipe required by the contract, on the ground that the condition of the soil made it necessary; and as to the size of pipe which is preferable under laundry tubs, may be admitted on the issue in a building contract, where it appeared that the smaller size conformed to the regulations of the building department—Schultze v. Goodstein, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 316.

34. Koffman v. Southwest Missouri Elec. Ry. Co., 95 Mo. App. 459; Sexton v. Barrie, 102 Ill. App. 586; Heard v. Tappan, 116 Ga. 930; Consumers' Ice Co. v. Jennings (Va.) 42 S. E. 879; Foote & Davies Co. v. Malony, 115 Ga. 985; Rolfs v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Kan.) 71 Pac. 526; Wear Bros. v. Schmelzer, 92 Mo. App. 314; Walther v. Stampfli, 91 Mo. App. 398; Dady v. O'Rourke, 172 N. Y. 447; Brewer v. Grogan, 116 Ga. 60; New Idea Pattern Co. v. Whelan, 75 Conn. 455; National Computing Scale Co. v. Eaves, 116 Ga. 511; Wilson v. Hinnant, 117 Ga. 46; Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., v. Bunkers, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 487; De Sola v. Pomares, 119 Fed. 373; Over v. Walzer, 103 Ill. App. 104. Contract to pay debt of another—Fritch v. Citizens' Bank, 202 Pa. 287. Evidence of what the parties to a written contract construed it to mean, cannot be shown to change or alter its terms—Hart v. Hart (Wis.) 94 N. W. 890. An oral promise by one of the parties to a written contract cannot be admitted to add to the contract on the ground that it is collateral unless it relates to a subject distinct from that to which the instrument relates—Johnson v. Kindred State Bank (N. D.) 96 N. W. 588. Contract for construction of a telephone and telegraph line over property different from that mentioned in the subsequent parol contract sought to be shown—Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Harris (Ga.) 44 S. E. 885. Where a shipping receipt was filled out by the shipper and signed by the carrier's agent, the conditions therein stated became the contract of shipment between the parties so that oral evidence was inadmissible to show that the goods were shipped under a special agreement as to time of delivery—Sloman v. National Exp. Co. (Mich.) 95 N. W. 999. Executed writings express on their face the complete contract between the parties and neither express nor implied warranties may be injected into the contract by proof of prior oral conversation—Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Crane Co., 103 Ill. App. 647. Oral evidence that the sellers of a certain business agreed never to re-engage in the business in the same vicinity cannot be admitted to vary neither fraud nor misrepresentation is shown;[35] but consideration for a written contract may be shown by parol,[36] or a mistake in consideration,[37] or in the name of a party,[38] or the place of performance, if the contract is silent in that particular,[39] or the subject-matter may be identified.[40] If a written contract purports on its face to contain the whole agreement of the parties, oral evidence cannot be received to add to or vary its terms, but it if appears from the face of the instrument that the whole agreement was not reduced to writing, and that the instrument does not express the entire agreement, the oral part of the contract may be shown under proper allegations.[41] A conversation by the parties with reference to a written instrument may be admitted.[42] Evidence of circumstances surrounding the making of a contract is admissible on the issue as to its terms.[43] A misunderstanding between the parties to a contract as to its construction cannot be shown from testimony of one party that he understood it differently from the claim of the other, but only from the language used.[44] Negotiations in regard to a second contract, on a different basis, after expiration of the first, will not constitute evidence of renewal of the first contract.[45] Where a contract with a corporation provides for payment of a certain sum in a certain time and that it shall not be modified except by resolution of the directors, proof that the officers of the company informed the other party of a modification is inadmissible in an action on the contract to show that it would mature earlier.[46] Corrections and interlineations clearly shown to have been made before a contract was signed will not render it inadmissible as evidence.[47] A written instrument constituting part of the contract, made and delivered to defendant by the other party at the time of execution, is admissible in a suit on the contract.[48] Under the statutes of 1851, Illinois, deeds not recorded prior to that time were admissible in ejectment, though not accompanied by certificate of magistracy.[49] Full opportunity to a purchaser for examination of the subject-matter constia written agreement for the sale of the business specifying merely that good-will is included—Zanturjian v. Boornazian (R. I.) 55 Atl. 199.

35. Mefford v. Sell (Neb.) 92 N. W. 148. Admissibility of parol evidence to show fraud in execution of written contract (Le Bleu v. Savoie, 109 La. 680); it must be pleaded to be admitted (New Idea Pattern Co. v. Whelan, 75 Conn. 455; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Crane Co., 103 Ill. App. 647); character of evidence as parol (American Cotton Co. v. Collier [Tex. Civ. App.] 69 S. W. 1021; Hurlbert v. Kellogg Lumber & Mfg. Co., 115 Wis. 225; Leicher v. Keeney [Mo. App.] 72 S. W. 145). It cannot be introduced to enable recovery on a contract not expressed by the writing—Koffman v. Southwest Missouri Elec. Ry. Co., 95 Mo. App. 459.

36. Deeds—Martin v. White, 115 Ga. 866; Poor's Ex'r v. Scott, 24 Ky. L. R. 239, 68 S. W. 397; Columbia Nat. Bank v. Baldwin (Neb.) 90 N. W. 890; Harkless v. Smith, 115 Ga. 350; Lenhardt v. Ponder, 64 S. C. 354. Notes—Vradenburg v. Johnson (Neb.) 91 N. W. 496; Folmar v. Siler, 132 Ala. 297. Mortgages—Boren v. Boren (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 184. Bill of sale—Wolf v. Haslach (Neb.) 91 N. W. 283. Contract for sale of standing timber; under express provisions of statutes 1889, § 470—Strubbe v. Lewis (Ky.) 76 S. W. 150. The writing imports a consideration—Ash v. Beck (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 53.

37. An allegation of fraud, accident or mistake is unnecessary—Boren v. Boren (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 184.

38. Stokes v. Riley (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 703.

39. Cook v. Todd, 24 Ky. L. R. 1909, 72 S. W. 779; Gehl v. Milwaukee Produce Co. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 26.

40. Where a contract for the sale of standing timber sufficiently describes the land to show the subject of contract, parol evidence may be admitted to identify the land intended—Strubbe v. Lewis (Ky.) 76 S. W. 150.

41. Johnson v. Kindred State Bank (N. D.) 96 N. W. 588.

42. Copeland v. Copeland, 64 S. C. 251. Evidence of negotiations between the parties before the contract is reduced to writing cannot be admitted in an action on the contract except to aid the court to construe the instrument—Arthur v. Baron De Hirsch Fund (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 791.

43. Anderson v. Harper, 30 Wash. 378, 70 Pac. 965.

44. Durgin v. Smith (Mich.) 94 N. W. 1044.

45. O'Connor v. Briggs, 182 Mass. 387.

46. Cleckley v. Mutual Fidelity Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 725.

47. Crowley v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 29 Wash. 268, 69 Pac. 784.

48. Sivell v. Hogan, 115 Ga. 667.

49. Laws 1851, p. 122—Stalford v. Goldring, 197 Ill. 156.

tutes evidence of good faith of the vendor.[50] The good reputation of a contractor for fair and honorable dealing cannot be shown on issue as to whether he had complied with terms of a building contract.[51] On the question of damages for breach of a contract to sell goods in certain territory, evidence of sales of similar goods between the time of the breach and of the trial may be shown where the damages are confined to loss of profits.[52] Evidence of cost of extra work to plaintiff is not admissible to establish the liability under a building contract, where no evidence of the amount of the work or its value as fixed by the terms of the contract is shown.[53] As tending to show the history of a transaction in which a contract was made for the purchase of timber lands on commission, evidence is properly admitted of the hiring of men and teams to aid in inspecting the lands though it was not claimed that the prospective purchaser was liable therefor.[54] In an action on a contract between co-sureties for payment of a note and division of all collections made thereon, evidence of their joint demand on the principal to pay the balance due may be admitted as showing that defendant had recognized their joint interest in the debt.[55] Where it appears that a great number of changes were made in the original plans for a building by the architect, and that much extra work was required, evidence was admissible to show what work was done under direction of the architect as well as under the original plans, which had therefore become inadequate.[56]

Sufficiency of evidence.[57]—To render one liable for breach of a contract, he must be shown to have obligated himself to perform the conditions which it

50. Garrison v. Technic Electrical Works, 63 N. J. Eq. 806.

51. Cannon v. Hunt, 116 Ga. 452.

52. Hichhorn v. Bradley, 117 Iowa, 130.

53. North American Ry. Const. Co. v. R. E. McMath Surveying Co. (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 169.

54. Culver v. Smith (Mich.) 91 N. W. 608.

55. Cramer v. Redman (Wyo.) 68 Pac. 1003.

56. McClellan v. McLemore (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 224.

57. Sufficiency of evidence of mistake in execution of note—Bailey v. Wood, 24 Ky. L. R. 801, 69 S. W. 1103. Of undue influence—Lodge v. Hulings, 63 N. J. Eq. 159. Of abandonment of a contract—Eagle Iron Works v. Farley, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 82; Kelly v. Short (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 877. Of breach of wrecking contract by masters of a vessel—The Helios (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 705. Of rescission of contract—Walsh v. Hyatt, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 20. Of intention to evade tax on mortgage by contract for second mortgage—Brown v. Newell, 64 S. C. 27. Of contract to pay for services by making will in favor of servant—Leahy v. Campbell, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 127. Of contract for cancellation of notes—Templeton v. Butler (Wis.) 94 N. W. 306. Of the offer and acceptance of a contract for plastering houses—Disken v. Herter, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 453. In an action for breach of a contract to purchase a mechanic's lien provided it was a first claim on the property—Dodson v. Crocker (S. D.) 94 N. W. 391. In action between co-sureties on a contract to pay the notes secured and divide collections made thereon as against the principal—Cramer v. Redman (Wyo.) 68 Pac. 1003. In action for breach of a contract for sawing lumber—Harris v. Gano (Ga.) 44 S. E. 8. In action to recover freight under a contract—Hunter v. Helsley (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 719. In an action to recover for property lost in sleeping car where it was left under a promise of care by an employe of the company operating the car—Noble v. Great Northern Ry. Co. (Minn.) 94 N. W. 434. In an action by a building contractor for the value of extra work, to show that a demand by the owner for arbitration to settle the compensation for such extra work was fully justified—Van Note v. Cook, 171 N. Y. 659. To show that one attempting to recover a portion of the gross commissions received by a brokerage firm as an employe knew that the commissions were earned in a manner contrary to public policy—Cullison v. Downing, 42 Or. 377, 71 Pac. 70. To show ratification of contracts and deeds in a suit for their cancellation—American Cotton Co. v. Collier (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 1021. To show that a party to a contract was mentally capable of ratifying it—Denny v. Stokes (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 209. To show the insolvency of a party at the time a contract was made, entitling the other party to disaffirming on account of fraud—University of Virginia v. Snyder (Va.) 42 S. E. 337. To show breach of a contract for delivery of goods—J. E. Dunn & Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 576. To show that a failure to deliver building materials within a certain time had been waived by the other party—Boyle v. Fox, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 617. To show substitution of verbal for original written contract—Rowland Lumber Co. v. Ross (Va.) 40 S. E. 922. To show a contract between the parties—Standard Oil Co. v. Goodman Drug Co. (Neb.) 95 N. W. 667. To show contract to make an heir of one who rendered service to deceased—McElvain v. McElvain, 171 Mo. 244. To show failure to is alleged he failed to perform.[58] Evidence of damages for breach of a contract must be reasonably certain and not founded in speculation and conjecture.[59] That plaintiff misunderstood the terms of a contract will not suffice to show fraud.[60] Mere presence of old age or physical infirmity will not raise a presumption of incapacity to contract.[61] In an action on a contract for services, it must be proven by reasonable preponderance that there was an express promise to pay for the services in case they were rendered.[62] Evidence of compensation for services received under a contract is insufficient to show the validity of its execution.[63] In an action for services, it must be proven by reasonable preponderance that there was an express promise to pay for the services in case they were rendered.[64] In an action on a promise made in a letter written by a deceased, the testimony of his wife that the letter was in the handwriting of her husband without corroborative evidence in the record to show the fact was insufficient to prevent a nonsuit.[65] The certificate of an architect showing compliance by the contractor and his right to payment is conclusive, unless impeached for fraud.[66] Recital of a debt owing to the mortgagee in a mortgage, given to secure him in an agreement to pay the debt of the mortgagor owing to a third person, is prima facie evidence thereof under a plea of set off in a suit in equity by the third person to enforce the agreement.[67] In an action by a bank president against the cashier to recover the share of profits alleged to have been made by the latter in the sale of stock, held as collateral security for the debt of a corporation after it had been re-organized by the cashier and the debt paid, evidence of mere gen-perform contract according to its terms—International Soc. v. Dennis, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 327. To show that court's allowance for extras and alterations on a building contract was excessive—California Iron Const. Co. v. Bradbury, 138 Cal. 328, 71 Pac. 346, 617. To show that a license under a patent was granted to a partnership and not to a corporation subsequently organized under the same name so as to entitle the latter to sue thereon—Toppan v. McLaughlin, 120 Fed. 705. To show right to enforcement of a contract to convey a fourth interest in a mining claim—Jordan v. Coulter, 30 Wash. 116, 70 Pac. 257. To establish right to extra compensation under a contract for services in securing consent of property holders to the erection of an elevated railroad—Union El. R. Co. v. Nixon, 199 Ill. 235. Showing a right in a purchaser of certain lots in a plat to compel the vendor to open a street by a deflected course over a lot originally conveyed by him to another but afterwards re-purchased—Miller v. Mackey, 204 Pa. 345. To establish a writing by defendant in an action on a contract as binding him for the amount sued for under an agreement for services—Davison v. McWhorter, 115 Ga. 844. To show that a transaction carried on by plaintiff's husband, whereby stock belonging to her was delivered to a corporation, constituted a loan from her and not a donation from her husband—Fanny Rawlings Min. Co. v. Tribe, 29 Colo. 302, 68 Pac. 284. Of reconventional demand for damages resulting from breach in action on contract—Payne v. Amos Kent Brick & Lumber Co. (La.) 34 So. 763. Transgression of public policy must clearly appear by the evidence—Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Waring (Ga.) 44 S. E. 320. Where a change in the plans of work under a contract between an individual and a partnership resulted in the withdrawal of several members of the firm from the contract, and the individual consented to its continuance by the remainder in an action for wages by the latter, it was sufficient to show as against a motion for non-suit on the ground that the first contract had not been abrogated by the parties, that there had been an abandonment of the first contract by those who refused to continue so that the remainder were not prevented from making a new contract—Anderson v. McDonald, 31 Wash. 274, 71 Pac. 1037.

58. Defendant cannot be held to pay a specified compensation for services where no promise is shown to any other party to pay such compensation—Dudley v. Sanders Mfg. Co., 114 Fed. 981.

59. Truitt v. Fahey, 3 Pen. (Del.) 573; Raymond v. Yarrington (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 436.

60. Nesbit v. Jencks, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 140.

61. Chadd v. Moser, 25 Utah, 369, 71 Pac. 870.

62. Patton v. Wells (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 337.

63. Smith v. Bank of New England (N. H.) 54 Atl. 385.

64. Patton v. Wells (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 337.

65. The evidence of the wife was introduced in violation of Code Civ. Proc. subd. 1, § 1881, and her testimony was afterward stricken out by the court leaving the letter unsupported by any evidence—Metz v. Bell, 137 Cal. xix, 70 Pac. 618.

66. Schultze v. Goodstein, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 316.

67. Greene v. McDonald, 75 Vt. 93.

eral conversations between the parties about the affairs of the bank and not tending to show that the cashier intended to bind himself to divide any surplus arising is insufficient to show contract for division of the profits.[68]

(§ 10) J. Questions of law and fact.[69]—If the explanation of a contract requires extrinsic evidence, its construction in view of such evidence is for the jury.[70] The existence of a contract from conflicting evidence, partly parol and partly documentary,[71] the intention of the parties as to the terms of a contract,[72] the acceptance of an order for sale of machinery,[73] the question of consideration,[74] the compromise of a doubtful claim where one of the parties has given his note for such claim,[75] whether the parties were justified in terminating a contract for failure in performance,[76] whether a written contract was procured by fraud and misrepresentation,[77] whether writings purporting to contain a contract were signed by the parties and if signed whether they were delivered,[78] whether a contract expressly providing remuneration to plaintiff for time and services, while acting as director and officer of a bank, was made,[79] whether a contract under which illegal acts were done was entered into in contemplation of the performance of such illegal acts,[80] the character of a contract as a loan or a sale where the pleadings raise the issue,[81] the character of an agreement, whether conditional or uncondi-

68. Patton v. Wells (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 337.

69. Sufficiency of evidence to warrant direction of verdict for plaintiff—Knowlson v. Piehl (Mich.) 90 N. W. 415. In an action on a contract for resale of property to carry to the jury the question whether defendant elected to take the notes of the purchaser as assets of his own, so as to render him liable to the seller—Rogers-Ruger Co. v. McCord, 115 Wis. 261. Right of plaintiff suing on written contract to have question of liability of defendant on an implied contract submitted to the jury after voluntary nonsuit—Koffman v. Southwest Missouri Elec. Ry. Co., 95 Mo. App. 459. Where correspondence between certain persons introduced in evidence clearly shows a contract for services by plaintiff for certain compensation, such issue could not be submitted to the jury to be settled in connection with a subsequent agreement regarding the same services made after breach of the first contract by the defendants as shown by their own evidence—Roberts v. Pacific & A. Ry. & Nav. Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 785. The question whether an architect had ordered a change in plans for a building involving extra expense, is for the jury, where there was evidence that he made such change for his own benefit and made no extra charge therefor, that he denied having ordered the change, and testimony was contradicted though there was no evidence of an agreement between the parties as to price of such work—Essex v. Murray (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 736. The determination of an expert as to whether he could be of service to one who wished him to furnish an affidavit, was not conclusive upon the other party, and whether his affidavit so furnished was serviceable was a question of fact—Rosewater v. Glen Tel. Co., 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 275.

70. Haskell v. Read (Neb.) 93 N. W. 997; Dillon v. Watson (Neb.) 92 N. W. 156.

71. If a contract is to be made out partly by correspondence and partly by evidence of conversations, as to the exact statements of which and as to the circumstances under which the conversation was uttered, there is conflicting evidence, the question as to whether a contract existed as well as what it was, is for the jury—Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Crane Co., 103 Ill. App. 647.

72. Clark v. Shannon, 117 Iowa, 645. In an action on a contract for the harvesting of grain to recover for loss of grain resulting from high winds during a delay in the performance of the contract, the question whether the high winds were contemplated by the parties when the contract was made, is for the jury—Holt Mfg. Co. v. Thornton, 136 Cal. 232, 68 Pac. 708. Whether a word used in a written contract is so used in a technical sense more comprehensive than its ordinary meaning, is for the jury—Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 524.

73. Elfring v. New Birdsall Co. (S. D.) 92 N. W. 29.

74. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Carter, 95 Tex. 461.

75. School Dist. of Barnard v. Matherly, 90 Mo. App. 403.

76. Lincoln v. Orthwein (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 880. Contract between building contractors and manufacturer of materials limiting performance to a certain date and providing that if materials were not furnished by that time, the contractors after giving five days' notice might purchase elsewhere, when there was a delay in providing materials and proper notice was given—Christopher, etc., Foundry Co. v. Yeager, 202 Ill. 486.

77. Guilford v. Mason, 24 R. I. 386.

78. Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Crane Co., 103 Ill. App. 647.

79. Patton v. Wells (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 337.

80. Lytle v. Newell, 24 Ky. L. R. 188, 68 S. W. 118.

81. Martin v. Dowd (Idaho) 69 Pac. 276.

tional, and the waiver or fulfillment of conditions,[82] the existence of an indebtedness under a contract,[83] performance[84] or repudiation,[85] the reasonable time for performance of a contract,[86] or for acceptance of goods under the terms of the contract,[87] or for termination of a contract by one of the parties under its terms;[88] all these are questions for the jury. Words in a contract relating to tools to be used in a particular class of work are to be construed by the jury in the view of competent expert testimony.[89]

The court must settle the sufficiency of writings to constitute a contract whether made by commercial correspondence or formal documents.[90] The court and not the jury should construe a contract,[91] with a view to finding the intention of the parties,[92] as to the real object of the parties in its execution,[93] or as to its legal effect, there being no fraud or mistake.[94] The amount of compensation due cannot be left to the jury when the evidence shows it to be a sum certain.[95] Where a contract gave no time in which rights thereunder must be exercised, the reasonableness of the time within which a demand was made was for the court.[96] Whether an offer of rescission is made within a reasonable time is a mixed question of law and fact.[97]

The construction of a contract with regard to certain words which appeared to be ambiguous must be determined by the court as a question of law, and if under its determination the words are not ambiguous, parol evidence cannot be

82. Jewell v. Posey (Iowa) 93 N. W. 379. The question whether there had been a waiver of a requirement in the specifications of a building contract as shown by conversation between the parties, is for the jury—Woarms v. Becker, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 491. Whether a provision in a building contract requiring alterations or additions to be expressed in writing has been waived by one of the parties, is for the jury—Copeland v. Hewett, 96 Me. 525.

83. Greene v. McDonald, 75 Vt. 93.

84. Patton v. Wells (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 337; Gunther v. Gunther, 181 Mass. 217. In an action on a contract to recover the balance of compensation agreed to be paid for theatrical exhibitions where the defense is that the performances failed to comply with the contract, the question of proper performance is for the jury—Charley v. Potthoff (Wis.) 95 N. W. 124. In an action to recover for the performance of a surgical operation, the question as to whether the plaintiffs gave proper and reasonable care to the patient, is for the jury—Seabrook v. Orto, 70 Ark. 503. The question as to which of two parties had refused to perform a contract for personal services, where both parties alleged readiness to perform, is for the jury—Kochmann v. Baumeister, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 309. The question of reasonable performance of a contract within its fair intent, where it has not been performed exactly to the letter, is for the jury—Drew v. Goodhue, 74 Vt. 436. The question of substantial performance of a contract is for the jury—Pitcairn v. Philip Hiss Co. (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 492.

85. Gunther v. Gunther, 181 Mass. 217.

86. Los Angeles Traction Co. v. Wilshire, 135 Cal. 654, 67 Pac. 1086.

87. In an action on a contract for manufacture of certain goods to be accepted within a reasonable time—Bowen v. Young, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 547.

88. E. H. Taylor, Jr., & Sons v. Louisville Public Warehouse Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1656, 72 S. W. 20.

89. Glenn v. Strickland, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 88.

90. Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Crane Co., 103 Ill. App. 647. The effect of letters containing the proposal and acceptance of a contract—Lost Lake Lumber Co. v. Smith, 29 Wash. 713, 70 Pac. 134.

91. Hinman v. F. C. Austin Mfg. Co. (Neb.) 90 N. W. 934; Grasmier v. Wolf (Iowa) 90 N. W. 813; Foster v. Chicago, 197 Ill. 264; Bullock-McCall-McDonnell Elec. Co. v. Coleman, 136 Ala. 610. Building contract inconsistent and contradictory in its provisions—Keefer v. Sunbury School Dist., 203 Pa. 334. A written contract subsequently signed governing a shipping contract previously agreed upon by the parties—Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Wright (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 335. This is true of a written contract though the language is so plain as not to require explanation of the extrinsic evidence—Davis v. Bowers Granite Co. (Vt.) 54 Atl. 1084.

92. Sexton v. Barrie, 102 Ill. App. 586.

93. Pease v. Rand & L. Desk Co., 100 Ill. App. 244.

94. Hughes v. Rudy, 15 S. D. 460.

95. Where the testimony of plaintiff in an action for services, showed that he was to be paid separate amounts for each of two particular kinds of services if required to perform both, and that he never performed but one of them, the liability on which was admitted by defendant, the question as to the amount he is entitled to recover, cannot be left to the jury—Plass v. Weil, 81 N. Y. Supp. 299.

96. Loeb v. Stern, 198 Ill. 371.

97. Meyer v. Fishburn (Neb.) 91 N. W. 534.

admitted to show the construction of either party so as to vary or contradict such meaning, though the court may properly hear parol evidence of the collateral facts and circumstances to determine the true meaning of the words; but on the other hand, when testimony of a contradictory character is admitted to show the meaning of such words, the question is for the jury, and plaintiff must establish the meaning he asserts by the weight of his evidence.[98]

(§ 10) K. Instructions.[99]—The jury may be charged on the legal effect of a contract in an action thereon.[1] Where a joint liability of parties, sued jointly on a contract, is shown by the evidence, the jury cannot be instructed that finding may be had against one or all.[2] A general charge cannot be given for plaintiff where the evidence as to performance in accordance with the contract is conflicting.[3] Where a contract was made in consideration of certain acts of plaintiff, and it appears that such acts constituting the consideration had been performed before the making of the contract, it was proper to instruct that there was no consideration.[4] An instruction, in an action on a written contract for payment of one-half of certain claims when collected, that plaintiff must recover on any claims collected less expense, is incorrect as ignoring the terms of the contract.[5] Where, in an action for damages because of a breach of a contract, defendant's only request was that the jury allow nominal damages only, the court was not required to instruct more fully than that the jury should award such damages as would compensate the plaintiff for the loss resulting from the failure of the plaintiff to perform.[6] An instruction in an action on an entire contract for

98. Cameron Milling & Elevator Co. v. Orthwein (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 468.

99. An instruction in an action to recover the balance due for threshing grain, mortgaged to the defendant, limiting defendant's creditors to a certain amount when his mortgagor had paid the plaintiffs' an additional amount to be applied on the threshing, was correct where plaintiffs' evidence showed clearly that the latter amount was applied to payment of an account for threshing other grain—Hill Bros. v. Bank of Seneca (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 307. Where certain whiskey was deposited in a warehouse under a contract whereby it was to be held for a certain charge per barrel, per month, and loans to be secured thereon and renewed at a certain amount so long as it remained in the warehouse, but the warehousemen failed to renew the loans and forced the sale of the whiskey at a loss, an instruction in an action for the breach, that if the warehousemen gave the owner reasonable notice that the loan would not be renewed, then the jury should find only the amount the owner would have been compelled to pay to carry the loan without the warehousemen's assistance, was incorrect in its application to the facts—E. H. Taylor, Jr., & Sons v. Louisville Public Warehouse Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1656, 72 S. W. 20.

Building and construction contracts. Sufficiency of instructions in an action by contractors for breach of building contract—McClellan v. McLemore (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 224. Where in an action for breach of a building contract, the court instructed that if the jury would find that plaintiff believed contract to be on certain basis, and defendant believed it to be on a certain other basis, their minds did not meet so as to make a contract, and plaintiff could recover what his services were reasonably worth, was proper as in effect instructing the jury that if the parties did not come to an agreement there was no special contract—Burton v. Rosemary Mfg. Co., 132 N. C. 17. Where a contract for furnishing building materials provided that if there were delays in the furnishing, materials might be procured elsewhere and charged to the seller, an instruction on the question whether the purchasers could bind the seller by contract for heavier materials in case of delay, was properly refused where the court had instructed that they would have no right to charge the seller with additional cost owing to change in the size and weights of materials—Christopher, etc., Foundry Co. v. Yeager, 202 Ill. 486. Where a contract for labor was rescinded after partial performance and a new one made providing that work should be paid for at a certain rate under both contracts, evidence that the employer told the laborers after commencing work under the new contract, that he was in charge of the work and that there was nothing more for them to do, is sufficient on which to found an instruction in an action against him for wages that if he refused to permit the laborers to proceed, a verdict should be found against him for work under both contracts—Anderson v. McDonald, 31 Wash. 274, 71 Pac. 1037.

1. Ash v. Beck (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 53.

2. Sutherland v. Holliday (Neb.) 90 N. W. 937.

3. Special building contract—Aarnes v. Windham (Ala.) 34 So. 816.

4. Nesbit v. Jencks, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 140.

5. Brewer v. Swartz, 94 Mo. App. 392.

6. Anderson Carriage Co. v. Pungs (Mich.) 96 N. W. 563.

construction that the presence of defective material will not prevent recovery if the contract is "otherwise" substantially performed takes from the jury the question whether the entire contract has been substantially performed.[7]

(§ 10) L. Verdict and findings; judgment.—A finding against one of several defendants will not be supported by evidence of joint liability on a contract.[8] A finding that a subsequent agreement for notice of completion of a written contract had no effect on the contract and that the rights of the parties were deducible from the latter means that no legal liability under the requirement of notice was intended in making the contract.[9] A finding that before plaintiff accepted a proposition for settlement pursuant thereto, defendant stated to the plaintiff how much was due, which representations were not true though relied upon by plaintiff who was ignorant of the facts, did not amount to a finding that defendant's representations were made with knowledge that they were untrue and with intent that they should be acted on by plaintiff and that he did so act thereon.[10] After verdict for plaintiff in a suit for specific performance of a contract for reconveyance of realty on termination of insanity proceedings, the plaintiff cannot move to set aside the verdict because the contract was illegal as entered into by the parties to annul the court's action in lunacy proceedings.[11] Where a contract is substantially but not fully performed at the time of bringing suit thereon but plaintiffs thereto complete it to the letter, the judgment cannot include the value of work done after the action was brought.[12] Where, in an action on a contract, the complaint was allowed to be amended to conform to the proof of substantial instead of full performance, and plaintiff was aided in his defect of proof by defendant's evidence, the court could properly make up the judgment.[13] Where it is alleged in a complaint that a third person was indebted by a note to plaintiff and that defendant indorsed on the note an agreement to pay it when a mortgage by the maker was fully paid, and that such mortgage was foreclosed and proved insufficient to pay all the debts of the mortgagee, a judgment for plaintiff for his pro rata share of the sum realized on the mortgage was proper.[14]

CONTRIBUTION.

§ 1. General principles.—Infants as well as adults are liable to contribution.[1] One liable only for his share cannot pay more and enforce contribution unless common property is thereby protected.[2]

§ 2. As between persons in particular relations.—A tenant in common is entitled to contribution from his co-tenants if he pay more than his share for the benefit of the common property.[3]

7. Pitcairn v. Philip Hiss Co. (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 492.
8. Sutherland v. Holliday (Neb.) 90 N. W. 937.
9. Drew v. Goodhue, 74 Vt. 436.
10. Spier v. Hyde, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 151.
11. Lee v. Lee, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 251.
12. Drew v. Goodhue, 74 Vt. 436.
13. Niemeyer v. Woods, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 630.
14. Gorman v. Lamb (Minn.) 94 N. W. 435.
1. Tenants in common—discharge of incumbrance—Case v. Case, 103 Ill. App. 177.
2. McArthur v. Board (Iowa) 93 N. W. 580.
3. Taxes—McClintock v. Fontaine, 119 Fed. 448; Arthur v. Arthur, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 330. But one of several remaindermen who has leased the property from the life tenant cannot recover from his fellows on account of taxes paid—Downey v. Strouse (Va.) 43 S. E. 348. Discharge of incumbrance—Grove v. Grove (Va.) 42 S. E. 312. Extinguishment of adverse claim—McClintock v. Fontaine, 119 Fed. 448; Case v. Case, 103 Ill. App. 177. The right to contribution for excess payment on purchase price does not accrue until partition—Grove v. Grove (Va.) 42 S. E. 312. For expenditure after the co-tenant's death, the claim is against the heirs, not against the estate—De Grange v. De Grange, 96 Md. 609.

As between co-sureties indemnity given by the principal to one accrues to all.[4] Between joint tort feasors there is no contribution except by statute.[5]

§ 3. Proceedings to enforce.—Statutory remedies are usually regarded as cumulative.[6] Contribution may be granted in connection with other relief.[7] All persons from whom contribution is sought should be joined.[8] Indemnity should be first exhausted.[9]

CONVERSION AS TORT.

§ 1. What constitutes.[10]—Wrongful assumption of dominion, such as refusal of landlord to allow tenant to remove his chattels,[11] wrongful removal of soil from plaintiff's land,[12] refusal by an owner to allow unused materials to be removed on rescission of an agreement between contractor and materialman for their purchase,[13] a wrongful levy though without removal or sale,[14] refusal by a corporation to transfer stock to a purchaser on its books,[15] constitutes a conversion, and guilty intent is essential only when the taking is otherwise rightful,[16] but a mere assertion of title by defendant, a bailee, in his answer,[17] abatement of a nuisance erected on defendant's land,[18] failure to pay for goods bought on credit, is not conversion,[19] or refusal to surrender property to the owner without production of a receipt which defendant had given therefor to the owner's bailee is not,[20] and a rescission of a trade for fraud and taking back of the goods given in trade two days before putting the other party in statu quo is at most a technical conversion.[21]

Consent of the owner is a defense.[22] Wrongful dealing with goods rightfully in possession may constitute a conversion.[23]

4. Barker v. Boyd, 24 Ky. L. R. 1389, 71 S. W. 528. But see McDowell County Com'rs v. Nichols, 131 N. C. 501.

5. Code Civ. Proc. § 480 as to joint judgment debtors allows contribution in case of judgment for tort and the statute has been held constitutional—City of Ft. Scott v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. (Kan.) 72 Pac. 238.

6. The legal remedy given by Rev. St. 1899, § 4504 does not exclude a suit in equity—Dysart v. Crow, 170 Mo. 275. The requirements of a statutory proceeding need not be observed if plaintiff elects to sue in equity—City of Ft. Scott v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. (Kan.) 72 Pac. 238.

7. A claim by a tenant in common for contribution may be adjudicated in a partition suit—McClintock v. Fontaine, 119 Fed. 448.

8. A surety who has paid his contributive share need not be joined.—Dysart v. Crow, 170 Mo. 275.

9. The administrator of a deceased surety need not first resort to a mortgage defective in having been made to the surety after his death—Norwood v. Washington, 136 Ala. 657.

10. The elements of conversion are (1) property and right of possession in plaintiff (2) conversion of the property by defendant to his own use—Boulden v. Gough (Del.) 54 Atl. 693. Agents who take goods in transit to a third party in payment of a claim of their principal against the shipper are not liable for a conversion of the proceeds by the consignee, they never having had possession of the goods or been in privity with one who had—Williams v. Fethers, 115 Wis. 314.

11. Smith v. Boyle (Neb.) 92 N. W. 1018.

12. Radway v. Duffy, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 116.

13. Bartley v. Rogers, 104 Ill. App. 164.

14. Zion v. De Jonge, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 491.

15. London, Paris & American Bank v. Aronstein (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 601.

16. State v. Omaha Nat. Bank (Neb.) 93 N. W. 319.

17. Stoneman v. Lyons (R. I.) 54 Atl. 46.

18. McCarthy v. Murphy (Wis.) 96 N. W. 531.

19. Carlson v. Jordan (Neb.) 93 N. W. 1130.

20. Arsene v. La Fermina, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 776.

21. Wilcox v. Morten (Mich.) 92 N. W. 777.

22. Carlson v. Jordan (Neb.) 93 N. W. 1130. Where the owner consents that an injured animal be killed, he has no right of action if it is sold to a third person instead—Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Wagand, 134 Ala. 388. A remark by plaintiff that he "might as well swallow" his loss does not waive a conversion accomplished by obtaining property under false pretences—Rogers v. Dutton, 182 Mass. 187.

23. Bailee: Allowing third person to take goods under pretended lien—Dixon v. Owens, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 376. Selling property to pay bailee's claim against bailor—Keiner v. Folsom, 113 N. Y. St. Rep. 1099. Trover will not lie for conversion of money entrusted to defendant to expend for plaintiff's use—Larson v. Dawson, 24 R. I. 317. Factor: A factor selling in good faith goods to which his principal has no title is liable in conversion—Johnson v. Martin,

Demand is necessary where defendant's possession was originally lawful,[24] but not where there has been actual wrongful conversion,[25] or where delivery is impossible.[26]

§ 2. Remedies and procedure.—The action is barred in three years in California.[27]

The action is transitory.[28]

A special property in plaintiff is sufficient.[29] Where plaintiff sells the property pending suit he may continue the action for the benefit of his vendee.[30] A statutory seller's lien on chattels gives no right to sue assignees of the buyer for conversion.[31]

The sufficiency of the complaint or declaration,[32] the admissibility of evidence,[33] and the sufficiency thereof are treated in the notes.[34]

The measure of damages is the value of the property at the time of conversion, with interest.[35] Punitive damages are allowed where plaintiff's rights were willfully disregarded.[36]

87 Minn. 370; Flannery v. Harley (Ga.) 43 S. E. 765. Carrier: Misdelivery of goods is a conversion—Security Trust Co. v. Wells, Fargo & Co. Exp., 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 426. But mere delay in forwarding is not —Spalding v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 274. Pledgee: Any dealing with a pledge inconsistent with the pledgor's rights renders the pledgee liable in conversion—Schaaf v. Fries, 90 Mo. App. 111. Purchase of property by the pledgee at an unauthorized sale is not a conversion—Winchester v. Joslyn (Colo.) 72 Pac. 1079. Warehouseman: Misdelivery by warehouseman is a conversion—Brink's Chicago City Exp. Co. v. Hendricks, 104 Ill. App. 154; Wheeler & W. Mfg. Co. v. Brookfield, 68 N. J. Law, 478. Trustee: Conversion by trustee—Canfield v. Canfield (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 1; Loetscher v. Dillon (Iowa) 93 N. W. 98; Hart's Estate, 203 Pa. 488.

24. Sehnert v. Koenig, 99 Ill. App. 513; J. L. Mott Iron Works v. Reilly, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 323; Temple Co. v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 295.

25. Gross v. Scheel (Neb.) 93 N. W. 418.

26. Freehill v. Hueni, 103 Ill. App. 118.

27. Lowe v. Ozmun, 137 Cal. 257, 70 Pac. 87.

28. Kryn v. Kahn (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 870.

29. Sheriff holding under attachment—Rochester Lumber Co. v. Locke (N. H.) 54 Atl. 705.

30. McElmurray v. Harris (Ga.) 43 S. E. 987.

31. Thornton v. Dwight Mfg. Co. (Ala.) 34 So. 187.

32. Complaint held to sufficiently describe property (mine tailings)—Stanley v. Sierra Nevada Silver Min. Co., 118 Fed. 931; (logs) Eastern Mfg. Co. v. Camden Lumber Co., 96 Me. 537. Averment that defendant converted the property to his own use is not a mere conclusion of law—Lowe v. Ozmun, 137 Cal. 257, 70 Pac. 87. Averment of plaintiff's title held sufficient—Lowe v. Ozmun, 137 Cal. 257, 70 Pac. 87; Stanley v. Sierra Nevada Silver Min. Co., 118 Fed. 931; Northness v. Hillestad, 87 Minn. 304. Variance: If defendant's answer justifies under an instrument as a chattel mortgage he cannot later assert it to be a conditional sale—Bower v. Bower, 97 Mo. App. 674.

33. Evidence that defendant was indebted to plaintiff improper—Barrett v. Bruffee, 182 Mass. 229. Lavish expenditure by alleged embezzler and decrease of employer's profits may be shown—Adams v. Elseffer (Mich.) 92 N. W. 772. Admissibility of evidence: Tax deeds to land from which timber was cut admissible for plaintiff—Anderson v. Besser (Mich.) 91 N. W. 737.

34. Where plaintiff has once sold the property to defendant the burden is on him to show title—Gam v. Cordrey (Del.) 53 Atl. 334. Evidence insufficient. Two witnesses against one as to demand—Blumenthal v. Lewy, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 535. Evidence sufficient—Flour City Nat. Bank v. Boyer (Minn.) 94 N. W. 557. As to plaintiff's ownership—Guernsey v. Fulmer (Kan.) 71 Pac. 578; Arsene v. La Fermina, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 776; Jordan v. Coulter (Wash.) 70 Pac. 257. As to value of property—Liebman v. Abramson, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 807. As to the propriety of directing a verdict—Wallace v. Mallory, 117 Ga. 161; Rogers v. Dutton, 182 Mass. 187. Testimony that property was "sold" to defendant sufficiently shows assumption of ownership by him—Woods v. Rose, 135 Ala. 297.

35. Janeway v. Burton, 201 Ill. 78; Daugherty v. Lady (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 837; Midville, S. & R. B. R. Co. v. Bruhl (Ga.) 43 S. E. 717; Washburn v. Dannenber (Ga.) 44 S. E. 97. In case of conversion of coal by a carrier the value at destination is the measure of damages—Blackmer v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 913. In case of conversion of a house, the value of the materials—Lynch v. White (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 834; Anderson v. Besser (Mich.) 91 N. W. 737. If other remedies are waived by bringing trover the measure of damages in trover applies though greater damages might be recovered in another action—Id. The price a third person agreed to pay is no evidence of value—J. L. Mott Iron Works v. Reilly, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 323. Attorney's fees are not recoverable—Lee v. McDonnell (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 612.

36. Blackmer v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 913.

CONVERSION IN EQUITY.

§ 1. Definition and nature of doctrine.—The doctrine of equitable conversion by a direction to sell in a will is applied mainly for the purpose of determining succession,[37] and for the purposes of the will only.[38]

§ 2. How effected. By will.—A devise to executors to sell,[39] or to sell or lease,[40] or invest the proceeds of the sale for distributive purposes operates as an equitable conversion of the realty into personalty,[41] from the time of the testator's death,[42] except where the sale is postponed till after termination of a life estate devised when it will operate from the time of the sale,[43] but to so operate, the direction to sell must be imperative,[44] but after actual conversion by a sale under a discretionary power the proceeds descend as personalty.[45] A direction to sell remainder after termination of a life estate, if the beneficiaries refuse to take the realty, is an equitable conversion thereof as to the beneficiaries.[46] That a conversion was intended may be implied from the terms of the will.[47] There is no conversion where the purpose of the conversion failed.[48]

By conveyance or contract.—Vendor's interest after contract of sale will be considered as personalty for the purpose of administering his estate.[49]

By operation of law; judicial sales of property of those not sui juris.—A conversion is not effected by the sale of realty by the representatives of insane persons[50] or infants.[51]

§ 3. Reconversion.—A reconversion of lands ordered sold by testator may be effected by the beneficiaries electing to take the realty,[52] but to so operate all must join in the election.[53] The election may be shown by acts in pais.[54] The discharge of the executor without the exercise of the power of sale will constitute an election to take the realty,[55] but his mere delay will not operate as a reconversion.[56]

37. It cannot authorize an administrator with will annexed to exercise the power of sale under the will without leave of court—McElroy v. McElroy (Tenn.) 73 S. W. 105. By directing the conversion of realty into personalty the property will descend according to law, and the widow excluded by the terms of the will will take her distributive share under the statute—Hutchings v. Davis, 68 Ohio St. 160.

38. A direction of sale for the purpose of paying gifts to legatees and the proceeds of the sale cannot be considered personalty for the benefit of the husband as heir of the testatrix—James v. Hanks, 202 Ill. 114.

39. Scott v. Douglas, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 555; Weeter's Estate, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 241; Schlereth v. Schlereth, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 283; Wyeth v. Sorchan, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 173; Garvey v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 391; Lee v. Baird, 132 N. C. 755; Hutchings v. Davis, 68 Ohio St. 160.

40. Russell v. Hilton, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 642.

41. Boland v. Tiernay, 118 Iowa, 59; Rauch's Estate, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 60; Bates v. Spooner, 75 Conn. 501.

42. Chick v. Ives (Neb.) 90 N. W. 751; Walker v. Killian, 62 S. C. 482; Becker v. Chester, 115 Wis. 90. Though the will directed a sale at such time that the trustees should determine the estate could be sold to the best advantage—Bates v. Spooner, 75 Conn. 501.

43. In re Hammond's Estate, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 547.

44. Bedford v. Bedford (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1017. Will construed and direction to sell held imperative—Russell v. Hilton, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 178. A direction to sell "all or any part" of the realty devised is a discretionary power—Condit v. Bigalow (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 160. Power to sell or mortgage if in their [the executors'] judgment it was necessary will not operate as a conversion—Carberry v. Ennis, 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 489; Sauerbier's Estate, 202 Pa. 187.

45. In re McKay, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 78.

46. Weeter's Estate, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 241.

47. Becker v. Chester, 115 Wis. 90; Lynch v. Spicer (W. Va.) 44 S. E. 255. As a direction to invest the property and pay over when the heir shall have reached a certain age—Mendel v. Levis, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 271; Chick v. Ives (Neb.) 90 N. W. 751. Will construed and held not to work an implied conversion—Sauerbier's Estate, 202 Pa. 187.

48. As where testator devised more than half of the proceeds of the estate to a charitable use since under Laws 1860 the devise of one-half is valid and the remaining half descends as though no will had been made—Jones v. Kelly, 170 N. Y. 401.

49. Clapp v. Tower, 11 N. D. 556.

50. In re Reeve, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 409.

51. Major v. Hunt, 64 S. C. 97.

52. Rauch's Estate, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 60; Condit v. Bigalow (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 160; Trask v. Sturges, 170 N. Y. 482.

53. Rauch's Estate, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 60; Scott v. Douglas, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 555; McWilliams v. Gough (Wis.) 93 N. W. 550.

54. Rauch's Estate, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 60.

55. Boland v. Tiernay, 118 Iowa, 59.

56. Rauch's Estate, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 60.

There is no reconversion of a share of the proceeds from partition sale because payment is postponed until after death of the life tenant which happened after the death of the co-tenant.[57]

§ 4. Effect of conversion.—Where the will works an equitable conversion, the heirs take no interest in the realty as such.[58] The beneficiary takes free from any lien acquired against the property after the conversion.[59]

CONVICTS.

This article treats only of the status and rights of convicts.[60] A convict has such a status that he may recover for a tort,[61] is competent to testify as a witness,[62] may be tried for crime,[63] but an officer having charge of one sentenced to a term of imprisonment may not deliver him to an officer of another jurisdiction to be tried for another offense.[64]

COPYRIGHTS.

§ 1. By whom, for what and how obtainable.[65]—Only citizens or residents are entitled to the protection of the copyright laws.[66]

What subject of copyright.—Pictorial illustrations in colors though not for a mechanical end and though drawn from life,[67] and though made from a series of metal plates,[68] or a series of photographs arranged for a machine to produce a panoramic effect,[69] or a colored photograph of natural scenery may be copyrighted.[70]

Telegraphic market quotations or results of races or games cannot be copyrighted as literary property.[71] To be the subject of copyright a dramatic production must tend to promote the arts and sciences.[72]

§ 2. Character and extent of protection; infringements; licenses.—The statute requiring that the copyrighted book must be printed from type set in the United States or from plates made therefrom does not apply to a book copyrighted before the passage of the act.[73] Only the original matter in a new edition of a book is protected by the copyright thereon.[74]

57. In re Reeve, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 409.

58. Chick v. Ives (Neb.) 90 N. W. 751. And the fee does not vest in the persons entitled to the proceeds of the sale—Walker v. Killian, 62 S. C. 482.

59. As a lien of judgment acquired after the direction for sale by will—Weeter's Estate, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 241.

60. Place of imprisonment see "Criminal Procedure."

Effect of conviction for crime on credibility of witness see "Witnesses."

Penal institutions see "Charitable and Correctional Institutions."

Pardon of convicts see "Pardon and Parol."

61. Injuries inflicted by a lessee of convict labor—San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Gonzales (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 213.

(Note.) In New York a convict for life is civilly dead (Graham v. Adams, 2 Johns. Cas. 408; Freeman v. Frank, 10 Abb. Pr. 370; Platner v. Sherwood, 6 Johns. Ch. 118; overruling Troup v. Wood, 4 Johns. Ch. 228), but not for purpose of descent and administration —Avery v. Everett, 110 N. Y. 317; Matter of Zeph, 50 Hun 523; Matter of Stephani, 75 Hun, 188.

62. Dixon v. State (Ga.) 42 S. E. 357.

63. If convicted his term will commence on completion of that then being served—Clifford v. Dryden (Wash.) 72 Pac. 96.

64. In re Jennings, 118 Fed. 479.

65. Uncorroborated testimony of the author held sufficient to show mailing two copies to librarian—Patterson v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 119 Fed. 451.

66. Evidence held sufficient to show author's residence—Patterson v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 119 Fed. 451.

67. As chromolithographic advertisements of a circus. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4952 as amended 18 Stat. at Large 78, 79, c. 301—Bierstein v. Donaldson Lithographing Co., 188 U. S. 239, 47 Law. Ed. 460; reversing 104 Fed. (C. C. A.) 993.

68. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4956—Hills & Co. v. Austrich, 120 Fed. 862.

69. Rev. St. § 4952—Edison v. Lubin (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 240; reversing 119 Fed. 993.

70. Cleland v. Thayer (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 71.

71. National Tel. News Co. v. W. U. Tel. Co., 119 Fed. 294.

72. Dramatic production held immoral in its tendencies and not copyrightable, and not infringed even if copyrightable—Barnes v. Miner, 122 Fed. 480.

73. U. S. Rev. St. § 4956 as amended March 3, 1891—Patterson v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 119 Fed. 451.

74. Kipling v. G. P. Putnam's Sons (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 631.

The publication of a work without the notice of copyright is an abandonment of the copyright,[75] but a publication by the licensee without the notice through inadvertence is not an abandonment by the author,[76] nor is a sale of the plates of a copyrighted book under execution against the author.[77] A loss of copyright is not effected by the publication of the book under a short title.[78]

Ignorance of copyright is not an excuse for publishing a copyrighted work.[79] The use of authorities cited in a copyrighted book for reference purposes in the preparation of another book is not an infringement of the copyright,[80] nor is the reproduction of pictures made from a copyrighted photograph of a painting an infringement of the latter.[81] There is nothing in the statute prohibitive of selling unbound volumes of a copyrighted book by the licensee and of the purchaser binding and selling the same.[82] An author who has pirated a large part of his copyrighted work has no standing in a court of equity to protect his work against piracy.[83]

§ 3. Remedies and procedure.—The forfeiture of plates, etc., because of unlawful sale of a copyrighted article, cannot be enforced by replevin.[84] The statute limiting the time in which to sue for penalty or forfeiture under the copyright laws does not apply to a bill for injunction against infringement.[85] In a bill for infringement of a copyrighted book by a corporation claiming ownership, it is unnecessary to allege the names of the persons engaged in the preparation of the work,[86] but it must allege that the titles of the copyrighted books were recorded by the librarian of congress.[87] A preliminary injunction restraining further publication of the infringement may be granted.[88]

CORONERS.

Fees of coroners are regulated by statute.[89] The inquest is not admissible in a civil action to show cause of death.[90] The coroner is liable in damages to the relatives of a decedent for needless mutilation of the body.[91]

75. As the exhibition of a painting by the artist in a foreign country for several months—Werckmeister v. American Lithographic Co., 117 Fed. 360. "Copyright, 1902, published by Hills & Co., Ltd., London, England," is a sufficient notice of copyright—Hills & Co. v. Austrich, 120 Fed. 862. A series of photographs to be used in a machine to produce panoramic effect is sufficiently marked by attaching a plate bearing the copyright notice at one end—Edison v. Lubin (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 240.

76. American Press Ass'n v. Daily Story Pub. Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 766.

77, 78. Patterson v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 119 Fed. 451.

79. American Press Ass'n v. Daily Story Pub. Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 766.

80. Edward Thompson Co. v. American Law Book Co. (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 922.

81. Champney v. Haag, 121 Fed. 944.

82. The contract between the owner of a copyright and his licensee is not binding between the latter and his vendee—Kipling v. G. P. Putnam's Sons (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 631.

83. Edward Thompson Co. v. American Law Book Co. (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 922.

84. U. S. Rev. St. § 4965—Rinehart v. Smith, 121 Fed. 148.

85. Patterson v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 119 Fed. 451.

86. Bill held to sufficiently allege proprietorship and unfair use—Edward Thompson Co. v. American Law Book Co., 119 Fed. 217.

87. Edward Thompson Co. v. American Law Book Co., 119 Fed. 217.

88. Sufficiency of showing to warrant issuance—Chicago Directory Co. v. United States Directory Co., 122 Fed. 189. If on motion for the injunction defendant fails to overcome plaintiff's prima facie showing of an infringement the injunction will issue—Trow Directory Printing & Bookbinding Co. v. United States Directory Co., 122 Fed. 191.

89. In Georgia, he is entitled to $10 for every inquest unless his fees exceed $1,500 per year. If he summons the jury for an inquest himself he is not entitled to fees therefor—Davis v. Bibb County, 116 Ga. 23.

90. Cox v. Royal Tribe, 42 Or. 365, 71 Pac. 73. But it is admissible in a prosecution for murder—State v. Baptiste, 108 La. 234.

91. Palenzke v. Bruning, 98 Ill. App. 644.

CORPORATIONS.[1]

DONALD J. KISER.

C. Rights of Corporate Mortgagees and Bondholders.—Validity of Mortgages and Bonds; Lien; Transfer; Enforcement; Receivership.

D. Officers and Stockholders as Creditors.

E. Liability of Stockholders on Unpaid Subscriptions.—Who are Liable; Holders of Paid Up Stock; Estoppel of Stockholders; Defenses; Limitations; Who may Enforce; Procedure; Remedies in Case of Receivership.

F. Personal Liability of Stockholders for Debts of Corporation and Remedies.—What Law Governs; Statutory Provisions; For What Debts Liable; Who Liable; Exhaustion of Remedy Against Corporation; Procedure.

G. Rights and Remedies of Creditors Against Directors and Other Officers.—Debts Contracted before Organization; Special Charter Liabilities; Misappropriation of Funds; Excessive Debts; Loans to Stockholders; Wrongfully Paid Dividends; Failure to File Reports.

§ 1. Definition and nature of a corporation.[2]—A corporation has an existence as a distinct legal entity apart from its stockholders,[3] but where it is seeking equitable relief its rights depend upon the equities of the stockholders.[4]

A private corporation is a person within the meaning of a statute authorizing quo warranto proceedings by the attorney general in the name of the state, in case any person unlawfully holds or exercises a franchise.[5]

A charter is a legislative grant, and in case of doubt, is to be construed most strongly against the grantee, and not against the state.[6]

§ 2. Classification of corporations.—The nature and character of a corporation is to be determined solely from its articles,[7] as when the question is whether a corporation is a manufacturing one whose stockholders are subject to a constitutional liability for its debts.[8]

Public corporations.—A cemetery association is a public and not a private corporation.[9] Water companies execute services of a public nature, and as such are subject to regulation as to rates.[10] The owner of a steamboat is not a quasi public corporation where it has received no special privileges or benefits from the state.[11] Where a corporation has received the right of eminent domain it becomes subject to public regulations as to the use of its property or products.[12]

1. This article treats generally of domestic private corporations. "Foreign Corporations" is made the subject of a later article. Taxation of corporate property will be discussed in the article "Taxes." Consult for questions peculiar to the nature of corporations for particular purposes, "Banking and Finance," "Building and Loan Associations," "Charities," "Fraternal and Mutual Benefit Associations," "Insurance Companies," "Mines and Minerals," "Railroads," "Street Railways," "Telegraphs and Telephones," "Warehousing and Deposits," "Waters and Watercourses."

2. A corporation is a body, or artificial person, consisting of one or more individuals, or sometimes of individuals and other corporations, created by law, and invested by the law with certain legal capacities, as the capacity of succession, and the capacity to sue and be sued, to make contracts, to take, hold and convey property, to commit crimes and do other acts, however numerous its members may be, like a single individual.

A corporation, therefore, when it consists of more than one member, as is now almost universally the case, may be regarded according as the one view or the other may be necessary, either as a legal body or entity, in which the existence of the natural persons who compose it is merged, or as a collection or association of natural persons, vested with the capacity of existing and acting as a body —Clark & Marshall, Corporations, Vol. I, § 1.

3. Taylor v. Com. (Ky.) 75 S. W. 244, so regarded when proceeding at law or asserting a title to property—Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber (Neb.) 93 N. W. 1024.

4. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber (Neb.) 93 N. W. 1024.

5. Rev. Sts. 1898, § 3466—State ex rel. Vilter Mfg. Co. v. Railroad Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 546. Ballinger's Ann. Codes and St. § 5780—State v. Seattle Gas and Electric Co., 28 Wash. 488, 68 Pac. 946.

6. Starkweather & Shepley v. Brown (R. I.) 55 Atl. 201.

7. A corporation which from its articles appears to be an ordinary business association, and is incorporated under a statute authorizing the formation of corporations for pecuniary profits (Gen. St. 1894, c. 34, § 2), cannot be shown to be a charitable institution—Craig v. Benedictine Sisters Hospital Ass'n (Minn.) 93 N. W. 669.

8. Articles held to show that a corporation organized for the purchase of capital stock, evidences of indebtedness and assets of an existing corporation and for the purpose of the manufacture and sale of certain articles, is not a corporation organized for the sole purpose of carrying on an exclusive manufacturing business, but is in the class authorized by Gen. Sts. 1894, p. 766, c. 34, tit. 2—In re Receivership of Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. (Minn.) 95 N. W. 767; Converse v. Morgan, Id.

9. Davis v. Coventry, 65 Kan. 557, 70 Pac. 583.

10. City of Tampa v. Tampa Waterworks (Fla.) 34 So. 631.

11. Phelps v. Windsor Steamboat Co., 131 N. C. 12.

A charter of a corporation not for purposes within the intendment of a particular statute may, by express reference to such statute, render the corporation subject to the duties and liabilities imposed on corporations of that class.[13] Where a corporation not a manufacturing corporation is by its charter made subject to certain duties with relation to the filing of statements as to its capital stock and property imposed on manufacturing corporations, it may be compelled to file such statements in the office of the city clerk of the city where it was required to have an accounting room or place of business, the provision of the statute requiring the filing in the office of the town clerk in the town where the manufactory is established, or if it has no manufactory, where an office of the corporation is located.[14]

§ 3. Creation, name, and existence of corporations, and the amendment, extension, and revival of charters. Place of incorporation.—In Georgia the superior court of the county may grant a charter to a corporation whose principal office is to be located within the county, though it own no property therein and its business is to be carried on elsewhere.[15]

Articles.—The president and directors of a corporation need not affix their official title to their signatures to articles of incorporation.[16]

Filing and record of articles.—Corporate existence begins with compliance with statute as to the filing of the articles of incorporation.[17] By statute, filing articles with the secretary of state as well as record in the county where the corporation is to transact business may be required.[18] Where the statute provides that the certificate of incorporation shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state and a duplicate shall be recorded in the town clerk's office, compliance with the latter provision does not dispense with the necessity of the first.[19]

Stock subscriptions.—There must be valid and binding subscriptions for stock before articles of incorporation are filed.[20]

Purposes.—Where statutes authorize the organization of corporations for particular purposes, the objects of a corporation must be within the intendment of the statute.[21] Where the purposes for which corporations may be organized are specified in separate subdivisions of a chapter of a statute, purposes sepa-

12. Fallsburg Power & Mfg. Co. v. Alexander (Va.) 43 S. E. 194.

13. A charter of a corporation for the purposes of acquiring realty for the maintenance and establishment of a place of recreation, conferring full power to sell and convey "with all the powers and privileges, and subject to all the duties and liabilities set forth in cc. 152, 155 of the Public Statutes and in any acts and amendments thereof in addition thereto" plainly intends that the corporation, though not a manufacturing company, shall be subject to all the provisions which manufacturing companies are made subject to by c. 155, and may be required to file a statement as to the amount of its capital stock, the assessed value of its realty, the value of its personalty and the amount of its debts or liabilities as required by Gen. Laws 1896, c. 180, p. 558, § 11, being the amended form of section 11 of such chapter 155, and on the failure to file such a statement the liability prescribed by the statute may arise, though the section imposing such penalty is penal in character—Starkweather & Shepley v. Brown (R. I.) 55 Atl. 201.

14. Starkweather & Shepley v. Brown (R. I.) 55 Atl. 201.

15. McCandless v. Inland Acid Co., 115 Ga. 968.

16. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. S. W. Telephone & Telegraph Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 276.

17. Rev. Sts. Mo. § 2492—Ryland v. Hollinger (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 216. Sand. & Hill. Dig. § 1334 is complied with by filing a copy of the articles of incorporation with the clerk of the county which it has selected as its place of business; filing in every county in which its business extends is not required—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. S. W. Telephone & Telegraph Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 276.

18. Ky. Sts. §§ 880, 779—Sims v. Com., 71 S. W. 929, 24 Ky. L. R. 1591.

19. Gen. Sts. (Conn.) §§ 1944, 1948—Card v. Moore, 68 App. Div. (N. Y.) 327.

20. Reid v. Paint Co. (Mich.) 94 N. W. 3.

21. A corporation to grow, sell and purchase rice, and other agricultural products is not authorized by Rev. St. art. 642, subd. 27, providing for corporations for the growing, selling and purchasing of seeds, plants, trees and the like, for agricultural and ornamental purposes—Miller v. Tod, 95 Tex. 404.

rately specified cannot be combined.[22] The acts of a secretary of state in filing articles of incorporation will not overcome the obvious intention of the statute,[23] nor does the amendment in other respects, of a statute stipulating the purposes of corporations, after executive officers of the state have sanctioned the organization of corporations combining purposes specified in separate subdivisions, indicate a legislative sanction of the executive construction.[24]

Where a portion of an act, providing for the organization of corporations, is carried forward without change into a subsequent statute, the intention of the legislature as indicated in the original act will control on a question of interpretation of the portion so carried forward.[25]

Corporations organized under the New Jersey Corporation act, L. 1899, p. 473, are limited by the provisions therein, which permit organization of corporations, "for any lawful purpose."[26] A corporation may be organized for the purpose of holding stock in and controlling the operation of other corporations.[27] Statutory authorization of corporations not for pecuniary profit, among which are included cemetery associations, does not authorize the incorporation of a cemetery association from which private profit is to be derived.[28] A corporation cannot, under the Indiana statute, be organized for the generation and sale of electricity together with the manufacture and sale of electrical appliances, apparatus, and supplies.[29] By charter a corporation cannot be allowed to obstruct a public street.[30]

Creation by special statute.[31]—Where a corporation is organized under a special law, it is not relieved from the obligations imposed thereby by the acceptance of a general law.[32] The general corporation act becomes a part of the charter of a corporation by the act of incorporation and a corporation which is organized under an act rendering it subject to regulations of the legislature cannot take advantage of provisions in the charters of corporations whose property it leases rendering the use of such property free from legislative interference.[33]

Acts to be done after incorporation.—Failure to perform acts required to be

22. Construing Act 1871, Gen. Laws 1871, second session, c. 80—Ramsey v. Tod, 95 Tex. 614.

23. Acts of secretaries of state in filing articles including several purposes indicated by the separate subdivisions of Gen. Laws 1871, second session, c. 80, § 5—Ramsey v. Tod, 95 Tex. 614.

24. An amendment to a statute authorizing organization of corporations limiting amendments to corporate charters to purposes germane to the original object of incorporation does not permit an incorporation for purposes enumerated in separate subdivisions of the list of authorized purposes, nor empower corporations to hold such property, as the "purposes" of the corporation shall require. Act 1874, Gen. Laws 1874, c. 97, amending Act 1871, as re-enacted in Rev. St. 1879, Rev. St. 1895, art. 649—Ramsey v. Tod, 95 Tex. 614.

25. Construing Rev. St. 1895, arts. 641-643, originally a portion of Act 1871, Gen. Laws 1871, second session, c. 80, §§ 4-6—Ramsey v. Tod, 95 Tex. 614.

26. United States v. Northern Securities Co., 120 Fed. 721.

27. Rev. Laws 1875, p. 6, § 10, Corporation Act 1896, p. 294, § 51—Dittman v. Distilling Co. of America (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 570.

28. Gen. St. 1894, §§ 2913-2929—Brown v. Maplewood Cemetery Ass'n, 85 Minn. 498.

29. Burns' Rev. Sts. 1901, § 5051—Burke v. Mead, 159 Ind. 252.

30. Circuit court has no power to grant such a charter—City of Richmond v. Smith (Va.) 43 S. E. 345.

31. The title of a special act "To incorporate the Blooming Grove Park Association" is sufficient to authorize the inclusion of a provision that the corporation shall have the right to prevent hunting on its lands—Commonwealth v. Hazen, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 487.

32. Railroad corporation—Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. State, 159 Ind. 438.

33. A corporation organized for the purpose of operating, owning and leasing street railroads in Chicago, under 1 Starr & C. Ann. St. (3d. Ed.) p. 1006, Incorporation Act, § 9, cannot, by the leasing of railroad lines from corporations whose charters confer a right to charge a certain fare which the city cannot reduce without their consent, insist on such charter rights. Chicago City Charter, art. 5, § 1; 1 Starr & C. Ann. St. (2d Ed.) pp. 689-715, giving the city power to regulate the amount of fare exacted by street railroads—Chicago Union Traction Co. v. City of Chicago, 199 Ill. 484, 59 L. R. A. 631.

done after the formation of the corporation does not affect its existence if the failure continue for but a short time.[34]

Organization as a fraudulent conveyance.—The organization of a corporation from a partnership, the partnership property having been previously conveyed in part to the wives of the partners, and then the entire property turned over to the corporation in return for stock, evidences a fraudulent conveyance,[35] as does the organization of a new corporation to which the assets of an old corporation are transferred to defeat existing creditors,[36] or the fact that a firm in connection with a heavy creditor, organizes a corporation to which it transfers its assets, the creditor securing one-half interest in the new corporation in return for his debt.[37]

Corporate name.—The fact that a single person becomes the owner of all the stock does not cause the termination of the corporation, unless the purposes for which it is organized have ceased, hence the corporate name may still be used.[38]

Where a corporate name is taken to secure the trade of another by deception and fraud, the use may be restrained.[39]

Amendment, extension, and revival of charters.—Where a statute provides that articles of incorporation may be amended, altered or repealed unless they contain a limitation to the contrary, charters without such limitation are subject to such provision.[40] The existence of a corporation may be extended by amendment of the articles without readopting and refiling the articles as in the case of an original incorporation.[41]

The fact that an act creating a corporation is amended so as to relieve the corporation from the necessity of performing a certain portion of its purposes, and to create a new corporation to perform such portion, does not annul the original corporation.[42] A slight change in the name under which an extension of a corporate charter is granted does not cause a new corporation to result.[43] Where the first certificate of incorporation is void because a sufficient per cent of the capital stock has not been paid in cash, an additional certificate containing the material statements of an original certificate which is filed after proper payment, will operate as an original certificate, though entitled an amended certificate.[44]

Fees imposed for the original organization of corporations cannot be exacted on renewal by amendment of the original articles of a corporation which has terminated by lapse of time,[45] and statutory provisions for renewal fees, though retrospective, do not apply to corporations which have been promptly renewed prior to their passage but there has been a wrongful refusal by the secretary of state to file the amendment.[46]

34. Construing Rev. Sts. Mo. §§ 961, 1283, 1024—Ryland v. Hollinger (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 216.

35. Metcalf v. Arnold, 132 Ala. 74.

36. Buckwalter v. Whipple, 115 Ga. 484.

37. Colorado Trading & Transfer Co. v. Acres Commission Co. (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 954.

38. Distilling corporation, which having sold its distilleries continues to own property and keep up its organization, may authorize the use of the corporate name, though it consists merely of the name of a stockholder who has withdrawn and the addition of the word "company"—Geo. T. Stagg Co. v. E. H. Taylor, Jr., & Sons, 68 S. W. 862, 24 Ky. L. R. 495.

39. Imperial Mfg. Co. v. Schwartz, 105 Ill. App. 525.

40. Act 1868, c. 597, incorporating Maine Eclectic Medical Society, Rev. Sts. c. 46, § 23—State v. Bohemier, 96 Me. 257.

41. Code 1897, §§ 1618, 1615—C. Lamb & Sons v. Dobson, 117 Iowa, 124.

42. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. State, 159 Ind. 438.

43. On change of name from Orphans' Home to Protestant Orphans' Home, the corporation acting under the new name may transfer land purchased under the old—Palfrey v. Association (La.) 34 So. 600.

44. People ex rel. N. Y., N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Board of Railroad Com'rs, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 242.

45. Code, § 1610—C. Lamb & Sons v. Dobson, 117 Iowa, 124.

46. Acts 28th Gen. Assem. c. 56, amending Code 1897, § 1618—C. Lamb & Sons v. Dobson, 117 Iowa, 124.

Proof of incorporation.[47]—The corporate existence of a plaintiff corporation is, in the absence of contrary evidence, sufficiently established by certified copies of the articles of incorporation.[48] A certified copy of a private act of incorporation cannot be introduced in evidence to show the existence and powers of a corporation, but a certified copy of the recorded act must be introduced, the law requiring the charter to be recorded in one of the counties of the state.[49] The mere fact that there is evidence that a writing, purporting to be articles of incorporation, was executed, is insufficient to establish a corporation where there is no evidence that the articles were filed, one-half of the stock subscribed or a board of directors elected.[50]

Evidence, unobjected to, that plaintiff was a corporation, may be sufficient proof of its existence in an action of unlawful detainer, though there was a general denial of all the allegations of the complaint among which was that of corporate existence, but an affirmative defense recognizing such existence was conjunctively set up.[51]

The fact that the statute provides that certified copies of certain instruments shall be considered prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated does not render inadmissible evidence of the de facto existence of the corporation under the name alleged in an information, there being no provision excluding other proof of the corporate existence.[52]

In order to show that a person is one of the incorporators of a corporation, the record of the proceeding to incorporate, together with the issuance of the final certificate, is admissible, as it also is to show dealings, estopping the person from denying the corporate existence.[53]

The minutes or a certified copy of a corporation must be procured as the best evidence of its corporate actions, though they are in a foreign state.[54]

Burden of proof.—The burden of proving nonissuance of a license to transact business is on the person asserting it.[55] A prima facie showing of corporate existence of plaintiff is sufficient, unless such existence is placed in issue.[56] After a corporation sued as such, makes a general appearance, files a demurrer, and answers in its corporate name, plaintiff cannot be charged with the burden of proving its corporate existence though such existence is denied in the answer.[57]

Variance.—The fact that a corporation in its petition wrongfully states the date of its incorporation does not render inadmissible a copy of its charter.[58]

47. Pleading corporate existence, see post, § 10.

48. From secretary of state and register of deeds—Dowagiac Mfg. Co. v. Higginbotham, 15 S. D. 547. Where a denial of a corporation's existence is made in equity on information and belief, it is overcome by a duly certified copy of the charter accompanied by parol evidence—Samuel Bros. & Co. v. Hostetter Co. (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 257. Corporate existence is sufficiently proven by a certified copy of an amended charter, signed by the state auditor, and evidence of the corporation cashier that the corporation was duly organized and acting thereunder, and that it had been doing business under a previous charter, and had never been dissolved, together with the minutes of the corporation showing a reorganization under the second charter—State Bank of Chicago v. Carr, 130 N. C. 479.

49. Star Loan Ass'n v. Moore (Del. Super.) 55 Atl. 946.

50. Construing Hill's Ann. Laws, §§ 3217-3219, 3221, 3222-3225—Goodale Lumber Co. v. Shaw, 41 Or. 544, 69 Pac. 546.

51. Stanford Land Co. v. Steidle, 28 Wash. 72, 68 Pac. 178.

52. State v. Pittam (Wash.) 72 Pac. 1042.

53. Curtis v. Parker & Co., 136 Ala. 217.

54. Central Elec. Co. v. Sprague Elec. Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 925.

55. Being a matter of record in a public office—Northrup v. Wills Lumber Co., 65 Kan. 769, 70 Pac. 879.

56. MacMillan Co. v. Stewart (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 240.

57. Perris Irr. Dist. v. Thompson (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 832.

58. In a petition by the T. & N. O. R. Co. of 1874, a charter incorporating the T. & N. O. R. Co. in 1859 is admissible—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Barber (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 393.

Proof of corporate seal.—The authenticity of a seal of a private corporation must be established by evidence.[59]

§ 4. Effect of irregularities in organization, and of failure to incorporate. Stockholder as partner or agent.—Where the constituent companies from which a consolidated corporation is formed had no legal existence as a corporation, and hence the consolidated company had no such legal existence, one of the stockholders of the illegally formed corporation cannot hold a corporation, which is a majority stockholder therein, liable to him as an agent, in the absence of evidence of any intention to assume such liability, nor can such corporation be held to the liability of a partner inter sese, there being no evidence that a partnership was intended and the rights of the parties must be determined as if both corporations had a legal corporate existence.[60]

De facto corporations—Collateral attack.—A bona fide attempt to organize, accompanied by actual user of the corporate franchise, creates a de facto corporation,[61] and where a corporation is by its articles apparently duly organized and existing under the laws of the state, its charter cannot be collaterally attacked,[62] nor can grounds for forfeiture be so urged.[63] Where the entire business transacted is outside the grant contained in the act under which incorporation is sought to be effected, there is no de facto corporation.[64]

In order to establish a de facto existence of a banking corporation on a prosecution of the cashier for the receipt of a deposit after insolvency, the statute existing at the time of the indictment may be shown though it did not exist at the time when the attempt to organize was made.[65]

Where by statute it has been provided that corporations for certain purposes may be formed and that companies previously incorporated for such purposes may by acceptance of the provisions of the later statute, and filing a certificate with the secretary of state, obtain its privileges, a corporation which continues to carry on the business, but which fails to file the certificate, may be regarded as a de facto corporation.[66] Defects and irregularities in articles of incorporation do not prevent the corporation from being a corporation de facto,[67] as where they are filed by error

59. Reed v. Fleming, 102 Ill. App. 668.

60. Cannon v. Brush Elec. Co., 96 Md. 446.

61. Attempt to organize an irrigation district under the California Irrigation Act, March 7, 1887—Tulare Irr. Dist. v. Shepherd, 185 U. S. 1, 46 Law. Ed. 773. Under the General Incorporation act allowing formation of corporations for any lawful purpose except banking, insurance and real estate brokerage, the operation of railroads and the business of loaning money, a corporation organized for the purpose of promoting the principles of Masonry and erection of a building, providing conveniences therefor, is sufficiently within the statute to have a de facto existence—Lincoln Park Chapter R. A. M. v. Swatek, 105 Ill. App. 604. Evidence held sufficient to show a grant of corporate powers and user—United States Mortg. Co. v. McClure, 42 Or. 190, 70 Pac. 543.

62. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Colorado Postal Tel. Cable Co. (Colo.) 69 Pac. 564; Lincoln Park Chapter R. A. M. v. Swatek, 105 Ill. App. 604; Otoe County Fair & Driving Park Ass'n v. Doman (Mich.) 95 N. W. 327.

63. Nicolai v. Maryland Agricultural & Mechanical Ass'n, 96 Md. 323. Where a corporation asserts a franchise in its defense, the question of whether such franchise is rightfully held and acquired can be raised only in a direct proceeding—Bronson v. Albion Tel. Co. (Neb.) 93 N. W. 201, 60 L. R. A. 426.

64. A grange conducting a mercantile business does not become a de facto corporation by an attempt to incorporate under an act declaring that the trustees of the grange shall be a body corporate with only ordinary powers incidental to all corporations, the enumerated powers being to have a common seal, to sue and be sued, to acquire, hold, improve and lease or sell land and to have a capital stock and to make by-laws—Henry v. Simanton (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 153.

65. State v. Stephens (S. D.) 92 N. W. 420.

66. Bank organized under acts permitting formation of private corporations, there being no authority to create banking corporations, becomes a de facto corporation on receiving deposits. Construing Act Congress July 30, 1886 (24 St. c. 18, § 5); Laws 1887, c. 35, [Comp. Laws, § 2900] c. 172, [Comp. Laws, §§ 3185, 3186]—Mason v. Stevens (S. D.) 92 N. W. 424.

67. Authority and law to incorporate, and attempt in good faith to incorporate with the wrong officer,[68] but where the articles of incorporation are on their face void, they may be so declared in a collateral proceeding.[69] The existence of a corporation cannot be collaterally attacked because it has failed to do business,[70] or because it is incorporated for purposes not specified by the statute or for more than the number of purposes permitted.[71] Under statutes allowing private parties to inquire into the extent and existence of franchises created by corporate charters, the validity of the charters cannot be disputed.[72]

Where legal formalities regarding incorporation have been complied with, the alleged corporation must be party to a bill seeking the division of its property, though it is asserted that it has no corporate existence and that its stockholders are liable as co-partners.[73]

Estoppel of corporation to deny incorporation.—A de facto corporation cannot assert the fact that it is not legally incorporated as against a purchaser of its bonds for value and without notice,[74] or as against the trust deed securing the bonds.[75] A writing reciting the existence of a corporation made by partners without intent to create a corporation does not prevent one partner from asserting that there was no corporate existence as against those who claim under the other partner.[76]

Estoppel of third persons to deny incorporation.—One who deals with a corporation in its corporate capacity cannot avail himself of its want of legal organization,[77] and a body dealt with as a de facto corporation may recover on contracts entered into with it.[78]

Creditors who become such after an attempted incorporation though the debts are not contracted in the course of corporate business may file a bill to wind up their debtor as a voluntary association.[79]

If an action is begun against a defendant as a corporation, plaintiff cannot thereunder, issuance of articles of incorporation, certification of record by secretary of state, holding of meetings for election of directors and performance of other corporate acts—Shawnee Commercial & Sav. Bank Co. v. Miller, 24 Ohio Circ. R. 198.

68. Articles were filed with county recorder. St. 1862, p. 110, § 6, provides that the validity of incorporation of a company doing business as a corporation and claiming to so act in good faith, shall not be collaterally attacked—San Diego Gas Co. v. Frame, 137 Cal. 441, 70 Pac. 295.

69. Proceeding by railroad to condemn land—Kinston & C. R. Co. v. Stroud, 132 N. C. 413.

70. De facto corporation (St. 1862, p. 110, § 6)—San Diego Gas Co. v. Frame, 137 Cal. 441, 70 Pac. 295.

71. Question cannot be raised by plea in abatement to an action by the corporation—Marian Bond Co. v. Mexican Coffee & Rubber Co. (Ind.) 65 N. E. 748.

72. Under Act June 19, 1871, P. L. 1360, a bill is not sufficient which alleges that a railroad is in fact a private road on the property of a manufacturing company, which did not furnish accommodations to the public—Windsor Glass Co. v. Carnegie Co., 204 Pa. 459.

73. Lincoln Park Chapter R. A. M. v. Swatek, 105 Ill. App. 604.

74. In defense to an action to recover interest due—Tulare Irr. Dist. v. Shepherd, 185 U. S. 1, 46 Law. Ed. 773.

75. Cannot be asserted that the capital stock of the corporation was not in good faith subscribed for at the time the report of the commissioner was made on which the charter was issued—Gunderson v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 100 Ill. App. 461.

76. Card v. Moore, 173 N. Y. 598.

77. Otoe County Fair & Driving Park Ass'n v. Doman (Neb.) 95 N. W. 327; Crete Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Patz (Neb.) 95 N. W. 793. A borrowing member of a building and loan association is estopped to assert the irregularity of its organization or its lack of power to make loans and carry on the business of the association—Deitch v. Staub (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 309. Where a corporation begins business before its full required amount of capital stock is paid up, one to whom it sells goods after the amount is properly paid in, cannot question the legal existence of the corporation to defeat an action to recover the price. Attempt to defeat the right to maintain action in the federal court as a citizen of Mississippi—W. L. Wells Co. v. Avon Mills, 118 Fed. 190. Those who have executed a mortgage to a corporation whose term of corporate existence has expired cannot set up such fact as a defense to the mortgage in the hands of a new corporation to which it has been transferred (Rev. St. 1898, §§ 1764, 2024, subsec. 21)—Citizens' Bank v. Jones (Wis.) 94 N. W. 329.

78. Riemann v. Tyroler & V. Verein, 104 Ill. App. 413.

79. Henry v. Simanton (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 153.

deny its corporate existence,[80] and where a judgment is obtained against a defendant as a corporation, a bill in equity will not lie for the purpose of imposing an individual liability on the defendant's members, it appearing that it was not a corporation but a partnership,[81] and the fact that the firm defended against the action as a corporation without showing that they were a partnership is not such a fraud as to charge them individually with a judgment.[82]

Quo warranto proceedings by the state.—A corporation is within the meaning of the term, "person," in a statute allowing an information, in the nature of quo warranto, if any person unlawfully exercise any public office or franchise.[83] Where the powers of a corporation are exercised, the state may determine the existence of such corporation and its right to exercise the powers asserted under the laws for the establishment of corporations.[84] Only the state may object to failure to observe provisions for the filing of certified copies of the articles of incorporation, election of officers, opening of an office, and payment of stock.[85]

Equity jurisdiction.—Whether a company which claims to be incorporated has been legally organized may be ascertained by scire facias or an information in the nature of a quo warranto at law, but where there is a corporation de facto, there is no ground for chancery interposition.[86]

§ 5. Promotion of corporations; acts prior to incorporation; incorporation of partnerships, etc.[87] Acting as corporation before incorporation.—In the absence of statute where persons assume to act as a corporation before such organization is created, they are liable on their contracts as co-partners.[88]

In an action in a foreign state to enforce a statutory liability of officers and directors for transaction of business as a corporation without having filed a certificate of complete organization as required by statute in the state of organization, it is not necessary to aver the time the statute was enacted, but it is sufficient to show that it was in force at the time when the liability was created.[89]

Effect of contracts before incorporation.—Before incorporation, the corporation cannot be a party to a contract,[90] and contracts of promoters are not binding on the corporation, unless it receives the benefits thereof or the contract is adopted by it,[91]

80. The terms of the charter as to its principal office become binding—Etowah Milling Co. v. Crenshaw, 116 Ga. 406.

81, 82. Pittsburg Sheet Mfg. Co. v. Beale, 204 Pa. 85.

83. Ballinger's Ann. Codes & Sts. § 5780, subd. 1—State v. Seattle Gas & Elec. Co., 28 Wash. 488, 68 Pac. 946. Rev. Sts. 1898, § 3466 State ex rel. Vilter Mfg. Co. v. Railroad Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 546.

84. State v. New Orleans Debenture Redemption Co., 107 La. 562.

85. Rev. St. Mo. §§ 961, 1084, 1283—Ryland v. Hollinger (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 216.

86. Lincoln Park Chapter R. A. M. v. Swatek, 105 Ill. App. 604. Where a bill seeks to have an attempted corporation declared void or its property taken away from it, and its stockholders treated as partners, it cannot deprive the bill of its character as a collateral attack on a de facto corporation by designating the efforts to acquire corporate existence as pretended—Terry v. Chicago Packing & Provision Co., 105 Ill. App. 663.

87. Those who represent the prospective members of a corporation in the purchase of real estate, secure most of the subscriptions to the capital stock of the corporation, get up the prospectus and hire others to assist in procuring subscriptions, and participate in the doing of everything that is done in the creation and building up of the business enterprise, are promoters of the corporation, bound to the exercise of good faith toward investors—Goodwin v. Wilbur, 104 Ill. App. 45.

88, 89. Worthington v. Griesser, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 203.

90. Where a recovery is sought on an offer made to a corporation before the completion of its organization, it must be pleaded either that the corporation accepted such offer after its organization or entered into another contract according to its terms—Holyoke Envelope Co. v. United States Envelope Co. (Mass.) 65 N. E. 54. Evidence held sufficient to go to the jury on the question of whether a contract was entered into before the completion of the proceedings for incorporation—Consumers Ice Co. v. E. Webster Son Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 350.

91. Contract by promoter of a bank for the purchase of a burglar proof safe and vault door—Bank of Forest v. Orgill Bros. & Co. (Miss.) 34 So. 325. It is not a defense to an action on a note that it was entered into as a liability of a corporation to be organized and that plaintiff had neglected to carry out an agreement by which he after ratification the promoters are no longer personally liable.[92] A corporation cannot recover on a subscription for expenses to be incurred prior to its organization, unless it has become entitled thereto by assignment, succession, or otherwise.[93] If a corporation act on the negotiations of promoters, evidence of their acts may be shown as against the corporation in so far as they would be competent against the promoters.[94] Promoters of a corporation are not personally liable on a contract which they make for the corporation, though they fail to bind it.[95] Though it has never chosen officers, the corporation is not prevented from having possession of property relieving its corporators from liability for a personal judgment, in an action for possession.[96] After the corporation has come into existence, the stockholders or promoters are not liable on its contracts either individually or as partners.[97] In an action on such a contract if it is alleged that the articles were signed on or about a certain day, the allegation will be construed to mean on or before.[98]

Where one organizing a corporation conveys to it property subject to a vendor's lien and receives in return a mere interest in the land as a stockholder, it will be inferred that it was the intention that primary liability for the debts against the property should follow the property, especially where the promoter as president of the corporation in making a statement of its assets and liabilities includes such debts therein.[99]

Fraud of promoters.—Those who become stockholders may rely on the good faith of the promoters and may assume that they have not dealt with the organization in such manner as to derive personal gain.[1] Promoters are liable to subscribers to corporate stock for their fraudulent acts in procuring subscriptions.[2] The remedy is not restricted to the corporation.[3] They are bound not to conceal, from those whom they seek to interest in the proposed corporation, any fact which materially affects the value of the property.[4] Statutory provisions against the issue of any stock or certificate of stock except in return for money, labor, or property to its par value actually delivered does not prevent equitable relief against promoters defrauding the corporation, though sought by persons who have sub-was to secure payment from the corporation unless it is alleged that the assumption of the note by the corporation was on consideration and plaintiff had knowledge thereof —Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Reif (Wis.) 93 N. W. 466.

92. Esper v. Miller (Mich.) 91 N. W. 613.

93. Subscription to a fund to be used in taking out certain patents—Arnold Monophase Electric Co. v. Chew, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 407.

94. Raegener v. Brockway, 58 App. Div. (N. Y.) 166.

95. Durgin v. Smith (Mich.) 94 N. W. 1044.

96. Grand Rapids School Furniture Co. v. Grand Hotel & Opera House Co. (Wyo.) 70 Pac. 838.

97. In an action to hold incorporators liable as partners on a note which the corporation had indorsed, it must be alleged that the indorsement was before the issue of a certificate by the secretary of state—Ryland v. Hollinger (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 216.

98. See for construction of pleading as to the allegation of indorsement, prior to the issuance of a certificate—Ryland v. Hollinger (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 216.

99. Fox v. Robbins (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 597.

1. Shawnee Commercial & Savings Bank Co. v. Miller, 24 Ohio Cir. R. 198.

2. Hayden v. Green (Kan.) 71 Pac. 236. Subscribers may rescind a stock subscription and recover their subscriptions, sue in equity for a rescission or for an accounting, and charge the promoter as trustee of the profits fraudulently obtained by him—Second Nat. Bank v. Greenville Screw-Point Steel Fence Post Co., 23 Ohio Cir. R. 274. Evidence held to show misrepresentations by the promoters of a corporation as to stock subscriptions by other parties and as to the value of certain abstract books which were to form the entire capital of the new corporation—Hess v. Draffen (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 440.

3. Where the promoters of a corporation make misrepresentations as to the value of certain property, which is to be the capital of the corporation, for the purpose of inducing the making of stock subscriptions, the subscribers to the stock have a cause of action for deceit, and the fraud is not one on the corporation of which it alone may take advantage—Hess v. Draffen (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 440.

4. Goodwin v. Wilbur, 104 Ill. App. 45.

scribed for stock for less than par.[5] Where a false subscription list enables the perpetration of fraud, the loss which naturally results therefrom is the measure of damages. If the stock has no market value, there having been no sales, the assets and liabilities of the corporation may be resorted to in determining the damages.[6]

Dealings with corporation.—The corporation may pay its promoters for services in procuring sales of stock.[7] Promoters who own the entire stock of a corporation may subscribe for an additional issue of stock and pay for it by the transfer to the corporation of property which they have previously purchased.[8] The promoters are not liable to subsequent purchasers of stock as standing in a fiduciary relation if at the time they purchased the property all the stock was owned by them though some was in the name of their agents or employes.[9] If stock is illegally voted to promoters, its value when it is sought to be recovered by the corporation should be regarded as of the time it acquired a recognized market value and not as of the time the first sale was made. The promoters may be charged with interest from the time such value is acquired though an action by the receiver to enforce the liability was temporarily suspended, if defendants not being parties were not prevented from surrendering stock or paying in its value.[10] Actions by a receiver against the promoters of a corporation to recover sums due on stock which it is alleged they obtained wrongfully at the time it was organized are not affected by a sale of the realty of the corporation under a mortgage and its purchase by a new company which gave its stock for the stock and bonds of the old.[11]

Secret profits.—Promoters stand in a trust relation toward the stockholders of a corporation from the time at which they begin to act in its organization, and must make as full a disclosure to the managers of the company and the subscribers to its stock as required of other agents for the purchase of property.[12] A person may form a corporation to which he may sell his property though he thereby makes a profit, there being no false representation,[13] but in case of misrepresentation, the promoter is liable to other stockholders as a trustee,[14] though a stockholder who takes an active interest in securing other stockholders is not liable jointly with the promoter on a mere showing of facts causing a suspicion of his implication to arise.[15] Promoters of a corporation cannot be allowed a secret profit on property purchased by them, which they turn over to the corporation in payment of their stock subscriptions.[16] The organizers of a corporation to consolidate other corporations who own its entire stock do not stand in a trust relation

5. Rev. St. 1898, §§ 1751, 1753, 1773, and 4436—Pietsch v. Krause (Wis.) 93 N. W. 9.

6. Goodwin v. Wilbur, 104 Ill. App. 45.

7. Ross v. Sayler, 104 Ill. App. 19.

8. Transfer by promoters of a corporation organized for the purpose of consolidating breweries or brewing properties which they have previously purchased, valid—Tompkins v. Sperry, Jones & Co. (Md.) 54 Atl. 254.

9. Tompkins v. Sperry, Jones & Co. (Md.) 54 Atl. 254.

10. East Tenn. Land Co. v. Leeson, 183 Mass. 37; Same v. Hopewell, Id.

11. Central Trust Co. v. Land Co., 116 Fed. 743; Schumacher v. Same, Id.

12. Promoters held accountable to a corporation for profits obtained in the sale of furniture and fixtures to it at an exorbitant price—Shawnee Commercial & Savings Bank Co. v. Miller, 24 Ohio Cir. R. 198.

13. Second Nat. Bank v. Greenville Screw-Point Steel Fence Post Co., 23 Ohio Cir. R. 274.

14. Purchase of a patent right for $3,000, sale thereof to the corporation for $15,000, on representations that that was the lowest for which it could be obtained from the inventor, and that the promoter was making no profit other than such as should accrue to the stockholder—Second Nat. Bank v. Greenville Screw-Point Steel Fence Post Co., 23 Ohio Cir. R. 274.

15. Second Nat. Bank v. Greenville Screw-Point Steel Fence Post Co., 23 Ohio Cir. R. 274.

16. They may be compelled to account to creditors of the corporation or the corporation for the difference between the purchase price of the property and the sum for which they turned it in—Central Trust Co. v. Land Co., 116 Fed. 743; Schumacher v. Same, Id.

toward it in their purchase of the corporate properties which are to be consolrdated, and if they exchange such properties for stock and bonds of the new corporation in excess of the amount fixed by the original consolidation agreement, they cannot be compelled by the corporation's receiver to account for such excess.[17]

Creditors who seek to hold the organizers of a corporation liable for the difference between the value of property which they transferred to it and the stated value of the shares which they received in exchange must show a fraudulent intent as to them, and an action on the faith of a belief that the stock so issued was fully paid.[18]

Incorporation of partnership.—On incorporation of a partnership for the purpose of carrying on business, it will be presumed that the rights held by the partnership have been assigned to the corporation, if the corporation is so treated.[19]

§ 6. Citizenship and residence or domicile of corporations.[20]—The charter and not the actual management of the company will determine the location of its principal office.[21] A corporation does not become a nonresident by reason of the fact that its active place of business is outside the state for certain seasons of the year, nor does such fact cause it to violate a statutory requirement that articles of incorporation state the city, town, or locality in which is the corporation's particular place of business.[22]

A corporation created and organized under federal laws is a domestic corporation in the state in which it transacts business.[23]

§ 7. Powers of corporations. A. In general.—Whatever may be fairly and reasonably regarded as incidental to or consequential on those things which the legislature has authorized ought not, unless expressly prohibited, be held by judicial construction to be ultra vires.[24] Enumeration of powers does not prevent a corporation from exercising powers incidental to its substantial purposes.[25] Persons dealing with the corporation are bound to take notice of its charter powers.[26] Irregular acts of a corporation which are within its general powers, if not illegal, immoral or against public policy, are merely voidable and subject to ratification by the stockholders.[27]

17. On an arrangement by the promoter of a corporation to purchase another corporation, the object being to consolidate it with other corporate properties into a new corporation, the contract to be inoperative in case certain specified properties were not secured to go into the combination, if on failure of the combination the promoter purchases the property individually, he does not hold it in a trust relation for the consolidated corporation if there is no agreement that the purchase was on its behalf—Tompkins v. Sperry, Jones & Co. (Md.) 54 Atl. 254.

18. Taylor v. Walker, 117 Fed. 737.

19. Assignment of lease held by partnership will be presumed in suit by corporation thereon—B. Roth Tool Co. v. Champ Spring Co., 93 Mo. App. 530.

20. Venue of actions, see post, § 10; see also article "Foreign Corporations." Citizenship for purpose of federal jurisdiction, see "Jurisdiction;" "Removal of Causes."

The settled doctrine is that a corporation, for the purposes for which it may be considered a citizen, resident, or inhabitant, is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the country or state by or under whose laws it was created or organized, and that it cannot be a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of any other country or state; and that it can make no difference whatever, in the application of this doctrine, that the members or stockholders of the corporation are citizens and residents of some other country or state than that to whose laws it owes its existence, or that the corporation is engaged in business in some other country or state with its express or implied consent—Clark & Marshall, Corporations, Vol. I, p. 352.

21. For the purpose of establishing the place of bringing a suit in Georgia against a railroad company for injuries occasioned in a foreign state—Atlanta, K. & N. R. Co. v. Wilson (Ga.) 42 S. E. 356.

22. Hastings v. Anacortes Packing Co., 29 Wash. 224, 69 Pac. 776.

23. So held in a proceeding to enforce a transfer tax against national bank stock—In re Cushing's Estate, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 505.

24. Dittman v. Distilling Co. of America (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 570.

25. A church society may take a legacy charged with payment of an annuity—Sherman v. American Congregational Ass'n (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 609.

26. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. City of Chicago, 199 Ill. 484, 59 L. R. A. 631.

27. Hatch v. Mining Co., 25 Utah, 405, 71 Pac. 865.

Quasi public corporations can exercise no powers not expressly conferred by statute, or necessarily implied, for the purpose of carrying out powers expressly granted.[28] Rights to use or interfere with a highway are to be regarded as a special franchise and are not to be derived from a general franchise to exercise corporate powers.[29] A company incorporated to transport natural gas is not entitled to maintain a telegraph or telephone line along its right of way as a necessity in carrying on the purposes of its corporation.[30] The fact that the corporation is authorized to make public exhibitions does not allow it to obstruct city streets.[31] The conduct of a relief society is not ultra vires a railroad corporation.[32]

(§ 7) B. Power to take and hold property.—A deed to a corporation which has power to hold real estate for any purpose passes the title of the grantor.[33] Statutes which define the powers of a corporation within the limits of its title to realty do not confer a title on it.[34] An authority to hold property free from taxation to a certain amount limits not only the amount of property taxable but the amount which may be held.[35] Under a power to construct, keep, and operate railroad lines, roads already constructed may be purchased.[36]

A statutory limitation on the period of holding real property, except such as necessary to the corporate business, does not apply to a building but partially occupied by the corporation.[37] A corporation with power to purchase realty may take a lease for a term in excess of its corporate life and though the aggregate rental exceeds its authorized indebtedness.[38]

(§ 7) C. Power to transfer or incumber property and franchises.—A corporation while solvent and a going concern holds its property like an individual free from the touch of its general creditors, and may dispose of the same as it deems best subject to the provisions of its charter and those other restraints on the conveyance of property which the law imposes alike on corporations and individuals.[39] Persons not creditors cannot complain of the sale by the corporation of its property to another corporation.[40] Where a corporation has power to use the streets for poles and wires for the operation of a street railroad, it cannot transfer such right to one desiring to use it for electric lighting.[41] Where a corporation is prevented from using certain property by the fact that it has no right to carry on the business to which it is adapted, it may transfer such property free from its disability.[42]

Power to lease.—Where the corporation has power to sell its property, it may lease for the purpose of use in an incidental business.[43] A railroad may lease superfluous property to a public warehouse company.[44] The lease may be for such a long term of years as to virtually effect a transfer of the fee.[45]

28. A corporation organized under general statutes to supply water to a municipality and its inhabitants cannot make a sale of its property and franchise to another corporation or execute a lease covering the term of its existence, notwithstanding the city consents—New Albany Waterworks v. Louisville Banking Co. (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 776.

29. Right to operate a street railway—People ex rel. Metropolitan St. R. Co. v. State Board of Tax Com'rs, 174 N. Y. 417.

30. Woods v. Greensboro Natural Gas Co., 204 Pa. 606.

31. City of Richmond v. Smith (Va.) 43 S. E. 345.

32. State ex rel. Sheets v. Railway Co. (Ohio) 67 N. E. 93.

33. Springer v. Chicago Real Estate L. & T. Co., 102 Ill. App. 294.

34. Construing Sts. 1870, c. 110, § 2 and Sts. 1896, c. 299 in proceedings to secure the removal of buildings on public lands—Attorney General v. Vineyard Grove Co., 181 Mass. 507.

35. Appeal of Eliot, 74 Conn. 586.

36. Recital of such a power in a corporate mortgage does not invalidate it—City of Lincoln v. Lincoln St. Ry. Co. (Neb.) 93 N. W. 766.

37. Const. art. 265—State v. Warehouse Co., 109 La. 64.

38. Brown v. Schleier (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 981.

39. New Hampshire Sav. Bank v. Richey (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 956.

40. Goodwin v. Lumber Co., 109 La. 1050.

41. City of Carthage v. Carthage Light Co., 97 Mo. App. 20.

42-44. State v. Warehouse Co., 109 La. 64.

A power existing in a corporation under its charter or the general act governing corporations to lease the property may be exercised as other general powers.[46]

Pledge of credit.—A corporation may pledge its credit for the purpose of enabling one to whom it has sold goods to continue business and thereby make payment.[47] Where a company has power to raise money by its notes when authorized by the board of directors as required by a by-law, the transaction is not rendered ultra vires by the fact that, to the holder of its paper for money loaned, the company appeared to be an accommodation indorser.[48]

(§ 7) D. Powers with respect to contracts.—The contracts of a corporation incident to its existence are subject to the dissolution of the corporate existence or the determination of the special franchises by limitation, by judicial decree or by repeal.[49] An implied contract may be binding on a corporation.[50] A note may be given for an existing debt, though, at the time the note is given, the indebtedness of the corporation exceeds that permitted it by its articles of incorporation.[51]

Restraint of trade and violation of public policy.[52]—A contract by stockholders to maintain a person for a stated length of time as cashier of the bank is not against public policy where not shown to have been entered into in bad faith and against the interests of the bank.[53] Where a corporation's employe transferred an equitable interest in certain of his stock to the corporation, he may, without entering into a contract in restraint of trade, agree not to engage in a competing business for ten years or disclose the secret processes used by the corporation in its business.[54]

Particular contracts.[55]—A corporation cannot become a partner,[56] though it may contract to share the profits of contracts.[57] A corporation may contract to pay an employe a percentage of the profits.[58] A manufacturing and trading corporation cannot become an accommodation indorser.[59] A lumber company may by its salesmen enter into a bond securing the performance of a contract by one to whom it sells lumber.[60] A mercantile corporation may purchase a claim against a third person secured by a lien if in good faith and for its own protection.[61] The 45. Dickinson v. Traction Co. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 871.

46. Vote of majority of the stockholders or board of directors—Dickinson v. Traction Co., 114 Fed. 232.

47. See post, § 16-C for validity of corporate bonds and mortgages and rights incident thereto.

Hess v. Sloane, 66 App. Div. (N. Y.) 522.

48. Beacon Trust Co. v. Souther (Mass.) 67 N. E. 345.

49. Contracts relating to loans, supplies, royalties and services—Manning v. Telephone Co., 18 App. D. C. 191.

50. Lowe v. Ring, 115 Wis. 575.

51. Marshall Field Co. v. Oren Ruffcorn Co., 117 Iowa, 157.

52. See generally articles "Contracts;" "Combinations and Monopolies."

53. Bonta v. Gridley, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 33.

54. S. Jarvis Adams Co. v. Knapp (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 34.

55. A contract by a trust company to issue certificates of deposit transferring to another trust company as trustee, real estate mortgages, stocks, bonds and tax certificates as security, which the receiving company agreed to rate and hold at their actual worth according to its best judgment, certify on each certificate of deposit that it was so secured and discharge all the duties imposed on it, is not a contract of guaranty by the receiving company of the actual worth of the security and on that account ultra vires a loan, trust and guaranty company—Smith v. Bank of New England (N. H.) 54 Atl. 385.

56. Geurinck v. Alcott, 66 Ohio St. 94.

57. L. J. Mestier & Co. v. A. Chevalier Pavement Co., 108 La. 562. Contract between a corporation leasing an opera house and one who agrees to manage the same is not a partnership contract and ultra vires, though the manager receives a percentage of the profits in addition to a fixed salary and in the event of his removal by the corporation is to receive only his interest in the profits—Markowitz v. Greenwall Theatrical Circuit Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 74.

58. Not a division of cumulated profits belonging to the stockholders. Corp. Act, § 47—Bennett v. Millville Imp. Co., 67 N. J. Law, 320.

59. Preston v. Northwestern Cereal Co. (Neb.) 93 N. W. 136.

60. Where there is a custom to do so, a plea of ultra vires to an action on the bond cannot be sustained—Central Lumber Co. v. Kelter, 201 Ill. 503.

61. Mahoney v. Butte Hardware Co., 27 Mont. 463, 71 Pac. 674.

fact that goods purchased may not be applicable to use in the articles manufactured by the corporation does not of necessity render the purchase ultra vires.[62] A corporation having power to manufacture fertilizers cannot engage in the purchase and sale of a fertilizer manufactured by other persons, and, a contract for the purchase thereof being ultra vires, the corporation's notes given in connection therewith are void.[63] The fact that the corporation leases a building to be used as a hotel for a rental established in part by a percentage of the income does not cause it to engage in the hotel business.[64] The issuance of a certificate of deposit for borrowed money does not show that the corporation is engaged in the banking business.[65]

Mode of execution of contract.[66]—The stockholders cannot convey or encumber the corporate property in their own name.[67] An action will not lie against the corporation on a contract under seal executed by an individual.[68] The unintentional omission of the officer's official designation is not material where the officer having authority signs his name with that of the corporation.[69] A letter signed by a person as secretary of corporation is prima facie evidence of a contract expressed therein.[70] The fact that a corporation's manager mentions the corporation's name and then his own in beginning a telephone conversation justifies a belief that dealings are with the corporation.[71] Consent of a corporation to an infringement on its franchise cannot be established by a paper signed by the vice-president alone and without the corporate seal.[72] Where the question as to whether letters were written by the president on behalf of the corporation is controverted, it may be shown that the company's name was signed to some of them without the president's knowledge.[73]

Necessity of seal.—Where not required by statute, the corporate seal is not essential to the validity of a contract.[74] The affixing of the seal is prima facie showing that the act is of the corporation.[75] It does not supply want of the corporate signature.[76]

Commercial paper.[77]—Where a note is signed in the corporation's name "by" certain persons who are its officers, the corporation and officers as individuals are

62. Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co. v. H. W. Johns Mfg. Co., 101 Ill. App. 349.

63. Richmond Guano Co. v. Farmers' Cotton Seed Oil Mill & Ginnery, 119 Fed. 709.

64. Nantasket Beach Steamboat Co. v. Shea, 182 Mass. 147; Same v. Hinckel Brewing Co., Id.; Same v. Preston, Id.

65. Rendering directors liable to the holder of the certificate as having exceeded their powers—Dietrich v. Rothenberger (Ky.) 75 S. W. 271.

66. See post, § 15 K-M, for representation of corporation by officers and agents in general.—An assignment of a note and mortgage executed by the fourth vice-president of a corporation, attested by the corporate seal, is prima facie the assignment of the corporation, and the burden of proof of the contrary is on the person attacking it—Wilson v. Neu (Neb.) 95 N. W. 502. Evidence held sufficient to go to the jury as to the sufficiency of a transfer of a chattel mortgage by a corporation to plaintiff—Clem v. Wise, 133 Ala. 403. A letter ratifying its agent's signature to a bond for the completion of the contract is admissible to show execution of the contract by the corporation—Central Lumber Co. v. Kelter, 201 Ill. 503.

67. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber (Neb.) 93 N. W. 1024.

68. Congress Construction Co. v. Brewing Co., 182 Mass. 355.

69. St. Clair v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583.

70. Employment of attorneys—Union Surety & Guaranty Co. v. Tenney, 102 Ill. App. 95.

71. Sutter v. Moore Inv. Co., 30 Wash. 333, 70 Pac. 746.

72. Agreement to allow a railroad company to cross a street railroad's tracks—Ballston Terminal R. Co. v. Railway Co., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 184.

73. Sigel-Campion Live Stock Commission Co. v. McMurphy (Kan.) 71 Pac. 256.

74. St. Clair v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583.

75. Assignment executed by the president and attested by the secretary—Roth v. Continental Wire Co., 94 Mo. App. 236.

76. Execution of a deed—Hutchins v. Barre Water Co., 74 Vt. 36.

77. A telegram in response to a request of the president of a corporation for authority to draw a draft which authorizes the recipient to draw for feed bills due "on all cattle in which we placed you in charge" shows that the agency is for the corporation and not for the president individually—White City State Bank v. Bank, 90 Mo. App. 395.

bound, the promise being that "we the undersigned promise to pay."[78] Where the officer signs and follows his name with the word "president" and the style of the corporation, it must be shown that he acted for the corporation in order that the note be not regarded as his individually,[79] but the signature of a note by the corporation "per" certain persons as general manager and as secretary does not render the officers personally liable, notwithstanding in the body of the note are the words "I or we promise" and the word "per" applies to both officers.[80] The execution of a note by a corporation is not sufficiently proved by evidence that the corporate signature was affixed by a person who was president, and that the president and secretary's name followed that of the corporation, but there was no showing of authority to execute the note in question or of a holding out of the president and secretary as possessing such authority, nor was it shown that any consideration passed to the corporation.[81] Where with authority, a draft is drawn on the treasurer of a corporation in favor of a third person for a debt due him from the corporation, it operates as a note of the corporation.[82]

In an action against a corporation on its indorsement of a note executed by its president, evidence of the genuineness of the maker's signature is competent, and after a showing of the genuineness of the maker's signature and of the authority of the officer to indorse and of the giving of value by plaintiff, he is to be regarded as holder in the due course of business.[83]

Conveyances.—Though the statutes require that a corporate conveyance must be by an agent appointed for such purpose, the conveyance must run in the name of the corporation.[84] Proof of authority of individuals who have made acknowledgments representing themselves as officers, may be required in proceedings in which the conveyances are involved.[85] A waiver of a right to forfeit interests in real property need not be under the corporate seal and signed by the president and secretary.[86] A contract to convey land of a corporation conditioned for the execution of a deed by the corporation on payment of the purchase price does not transfer the title relieving the corporation from taxation.[87]

(§ 7) E. Power to take and hold stock.—Where there is no statutory enablement, a corporation cannot subscribe to the capital stock of another.[88]

In Washington a corporation, foreign or domestic, cannot own and vote stock in another corporation.[89] In New Jersey, a corporation organized for the purpose of holding stock and controlling the management of other corporations is to be regarded as for a lawful purpose.[90]

Under the New Jersey corporation act, a corporation may purchase and hold its own shares,[91] unless it thereby prevents itself from paying its debts in full.[92]

78. Nunnemacher v. Poss (Wis.) 92 N. W. 375.

79. Reed v. Fleming, 102 Ill. App. 668.

80. Williams v. Harris, 198 Ill. 501.

81. Gould v. W. J. Gould & Co. (Mich.) 96 N. W. 576.

82. National Fire Ins. Co. v. Eastern Bldg. & Loan Ass'n (Neb.) 91 N. W. 482.

83. Under the common law and Negotiable Instrument Law, §§ 50, 91, 98, L. 1897, c. 612, pp. 727, 732, 733—Karsch v. Pottier & Stymus Mfg. & Imp. Co., 81 N. Y. Supp. 782.

84. Vt. Sts., § 2212—Hutchins v. Barre Water Co., 74 Vt. 36.

85. Conveyance of toll road franchise—Lyons & E. P. Toll Road Co. v. People, 29 Colo. 434, 68 Pac. 275.

86. Not being a conveyance—St. Clair v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583.

87. Hutchins v. Barre Water Co., 74 Vt. 36.

88. Nebraska Shirt Co. v. Horton (Neb.) 93 N. W. 225.

89. Corp. Act 1896, § 51; 1 Hill's Ann. St. & Codes, Wash. § 1506—Coler v. Tacoma Ry. & Power Co. (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 413. The lower court held in this case [(N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 680] that the power of a New Jersey corporation to hold and vote stock in a Washington corporation would be presumed.

90. Rev. Laws 1875, p. 6, § 10, Corp. Act 1896, p. 294, § 51—Dittman v. Distilling Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 570.

91. Corp. Act 1896, § 20, subd. 4, § 1—Berger v. United States Steel Corp., 63 N. J. Eq. 809.

92. Oliver v. Rahway Ice Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 460.

Where a corporation obtains, by its charter, the right to dispose of its property and to dissolve its corporate existence, it has power to accept stock in another corporation in payment of the purchase price provided the transaction is bona fide,[93] and though the statute under which a corporation is formed prohibits the purchase of stocks, bonds, and securities, unless specially authorized, since the implied power to wind up the affairs of the corporation and dispose of its property authorizes a sale for stock in another corporation.[94]

If the corporation has power to deal in the stock and bonds of other corporations, it may promote a new corporation of which it is to hold a large proportion of the stock for the purpose of increasing its business and profits,[95] and it is not material that the stock held be issued as full paid.[96] Under a power to purchase stock of other corporations dealing in the same commodities, a corporation may organize and hold the stock of corporations in other states for the purpose of selling its products to them.[97]

A solvent corporation may purchase stock from its retiring president for the purpose of reissuing it to the president who shall be elected.[98]

§ 8. Effect of ultra vires and illegal transactions.—An abuse of corporate power cannot be asserted by the corporation or its assignee for creditors.[99] The right to acquire realty cannot be collaterally attacked.[1] The question of whether the powers conferred on a corporation by its charter or certificate of organization are being exercised in such a manner as to create a monopoly can be determined only on quo warranto by the attorney general.[2] Creditors cannot assert ultra vires, unless it operates to fraudulently divert corporate assets from their benefit.[3] One not a party cannot assert that a contract is ultra vires.[4] Though a partnership between a corporation and an individual may be illegal, the corporation must, on the death of the individual, be allowed to maintain such action as might be maintained by a surviving partner.[5] A corporation may make a valid lease of property which may have been acquired by it in excess of its powers.[6] Where recovery is sought on a corporation's contract, shareholders who intervene asserting its invalidity cannot show that the compensation received thereunder was insufficient.[7]

Estoppel to assert ultra vires.—If money or property has been received by the corporation, it cannot assert that the contract under which it took was ultra vires,[8]

93, 94. Construing Code West Virginia, 1899, c. 52, §§ 3, 4 and holding that the prohibition therein contained against the purchase of stocks did not apply in case of a bona fide sale terminating the existence of a corporation—Metcalf v. American School Furniture Co., 122 Fed. 115.

95. The directors being given authority to exercise the powers of the corporation cannot be enjoined from so doing on the ground of ultra vires or possible loss—Rubino v. Pressed Steel Car Co. (N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 1050.

96. Corporation, for $550,000, may take stock to the value of $800,000—Rubino v. Pressed Steel Car Co. (N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 1050.

97. Dittman v. Distilling Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 570.

98. Joseph v. Raff, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 47.

99. Ross v. Sayler, 104 Ill. App. 19.

1. In a proceeding to enforce a debt—Advance Thresher Co. v. Rockafellow (S. D.) 93 N. W. 652. The question of whether a corporation authorized to hold real estate for certain purposes has exceeded its powers, can be raised only in a proceeding instituted by the state—Springer v. Chicago Real Estate Loan & Trust Co., 202 Ill. 17.

2. Dittman v. Distilling Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 570.

3. Force v. Age-Herald Co., 136 Ala. 271.

4. State Ins. Co. v. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co. (Neb.) 90 N. W. 997.

5. Willey v. Crocker-Woolworth Nat. Bank (Cal.) 72 Pac. 832.

6. May recover on a contract of guaranty of the rent—Nantasket Beach Steamboat Co. v. Shea, 182 Mass. 147.

7. Smith v. Bank of New England (N. H.) 54 Atl. 385.

8. Rehberg v. Tontine Surety Co. (Mich.) 91 N. W. 132. Though the purchase of goods is ultra vires, if they are retained, the money paid cannot be recovered—Graton & K. Mfg. Co. v. Redelsheimer, 28 Wash. 370, 68 Pac. 879. Where a corporation has actually enjoyed the use of money, it cannot contend that the note given for it, and the transactions leading up to its borrowing, were not pursuant to the by-laws—St. Joseph's Polish Catholic Ben. Soc. v. St. Hedwig's Church (Del.) 53 Atl. 353. In an action on a note a corporation cannot contend that it had no power to purchase tobacco, where it is deor where third persons have acquired rights without notice,[9] or the party has lost valuable rights,[10] and in general, where a contract has been fully performed by the other party, it cannot defend on the ground of ultra vires in the fact that the contract is merely in excess of its powers.[11] Stockholders may be estopped with the corporation.[12] If a corporation which has entered into an ultra vires contract has received no benefit therefrom, it is not estopped from repudiating it by mere neglect.[13]

Conversely.—Those who have received the benefit of a contract with a corporation cannot assert that it was ultra vires.[14] A mortgagor to a corporation cannot contend that the act of the corporation in taking the mortgage was ultra vires.[15] Where a judgment creditor of a corporation's officers sells property held by him in trust on execution and purchases the same, he cannot assert the corporation's inability to hold property as against its claim to such property.[16] Where the assignors of a claim and the corporation's assignee sue jointly, the defendant cannot object that the taking of the assignment was ultra vires the corporation.[17]

Pleading and procedure.—Ultra vires is a matter of defense and the complaint need not show power to enter into a contract,[18] the defense is in the nature of a confession and avoidance,[19] and must be specially pleaded.[20] It may be raised by a demurrer in an action against the corporation on a contract.[21] Where ultra vires fended that the note had been discharged by the purchase of tobacco for the corporation, and that such tobacco was received by the corporation—Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Stewart, 24 Ky. L. R. 934, 70 S. W. 285. A corporation which has assumed to act as trustee cannot assert as against claims of those entitled to the trust funds that it had no power to so act—Central R. & Banking Co. v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 263.

9. Bear Valley Land Co. v. Savings & Trust Co., 117 Fed. 941.

10. Agreement for settlement of a claim for personal injuries, in consideration of the life employment as a railroad flagman, which was not objected to until after the claim was barred by limitations—Usher v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 422.

11. Owyhee Land & Irr. Co. v. Tautphas (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 343; Chenoweth v. Pacific Exp. Co., 93 Mo. App. 185. A building and loan association cannot avoid payment of shares which it has agreed to mature on the ground that its contract was ultra vires, if the subscriber to the shares has paid in full the sum stipulated—Field v. Eastern Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 117 Iowa, 185; Eastern Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Williamson, 189 U. S. 122.

12. Where title to corporate property and the possession thereof is passed to the grantee on a contract of sale, the corporation is estopped from seeking a rescission and a stockholder standing in its shoes is likewise estopped, the ground for rescission being asserted ultra vires—Metcalf v. American School Furniture Co., 122 Fed. 115. Stockholders who have authorized the issuance of bonds and stock at a discount in payment of cost of construction to a contractor cannot afterward assert that the contract was unjust—Wells v. Northern Trust Co., 195 Ill. 288.

13. Subscription to the stock of another corporation—Nebraska Shirt Co. v. Horton (Neb.) 93 N. W. 225.

14. Joint contract of corporation to furnish paving blocks—Booth Bros. & H. I. Granite Co. v. Baird, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 495. One who has made a note cannot defend an action by a corporation thereon on the ground of ultra vires in its purchase—Black v. First Nat. Bank, 96 Md. 399. If a national bank has completed a sub-contract which was assigned to it, the original contractor or owner cannot assert that such completion was ultra vires—Security Nat. Bank v. St. Croix Power Co. (Wis.) 94 N. W. 74. Where a corporation has made valuable business improvements on property transferred to it, a party to the agreement for the transfer cannot state that the corporation did not need the property in its business—Coleridge Creamery Co. v. Jenkins (Neb.) 92 N. W. 123.

15. Building association—Bay City Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Broad, 136 Cal. 525, 69 Pac. 225.

16. Scott v. Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank (Tex.) 75 S. W. 7.

17. The county cannot raise such objection in an action against it under Ky. St. § 1241a, providing compensation for the protection of property against a mob, since it would not be prejudiced by the judgment in favor of the corporation—Hopkins County v. St. Bernard Coal Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 942, 70 S. W. 289.

18. United States Mortg. Co. v. McClure, 42 Or. 190, 70 Pac. 543.

19. Lewis v. Clyde Steamship Co., 131 N. C. 652.

20. Salvage contract—Lewis v. Clyde S. S. Co., 132 N. C. 904. Contract of suretyship—Hess v. W. & J. Sloane, 173 N. Y. 616. Indorsement of a note—Karsch v. Pottier & S. Mfg. & Imp. Co., 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 230.

21. Markowitz v. Greenwall Theatrical Circuit Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 74.

is pleaded as against an original plaintiff, it need not be repleaded against an intervenor unless he is harmed by the omission so to do.[22]

Equity may have jurisdiction of a bill for discovery and to recover the sum paid on a contract with a corporation alleged to be fraudulent and ultra vires.[23]

§ 9. Torts, penalties, and crimes.—A corporation is liable for malice of its servants in the performance of acts within the scope of their duties and authority, though not when they are engaged about their own business.[24] There is no distinction between the liability of a corporation and of an individual for negligence causing death.[25] Where the servants or agents of a corporation are engaged in work authorized solely by the charter of the corporation, the corporation is liable for their negligence.[26] A corporation organized for the purpose of giving a fair may be liable for the negligent construction of seats by an exhibitor.[27]

A relief department organized by a railroad company and supported by contributions from the employes cannot be regarded as charitable, exempting the corporation from liability for maltreatment by physicians and surgeons in case it has exercised due care in their selection,[28] but the doctrine of respondeat superior cannot nevertheless be applied unless evidence shows want of care in selection of the surgeon, and the servant injured by malpractice has no recourse against his employer.[29] Where the secretary of a corporation wrongfully places money to its credit and then applies such deposit to his individual indebtedness, the corporation, if it has no knowledge of the fact of the deposit and receives no benefit therefrom, is not liable to the owner except for such sum as remains deposited to its credit when it receives notice,[30] and the fact that the corporation allowed the deposit to remain to its credit does not show a ratification of the secretary's act so as to render it liable for the entire sum.[31]

22. Laidlaw v. Pacific Bank, 137 Cal. 392, 70 Pac. 277.

23. Sufficient to allege that stockholders have conspired to transact an unlawful business in violation of its charter and that by fraudulent representations, complainant had been induced to pay money to it, that on discovery of fraud, he had ceased to pay under the contract and that defendant was insolvent—Bale v. Michigan Tontine Inv. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 1071.

(Note) After examination of the authorities, Clark & Marshall in their work on Private Corporations, Vol. I, p. 620, lay down the following general rules:

Though there is some conflict in the decisions as to the liability of a corporation for the torts of its officers and agents, the following propositions are supported by the weight of authority: (1) As a general rule a corporation is liable, like a natural person, for torts of its officers or agents within the scope, or apparent scope of their authority.

(2) It is liable for a tort so committed, although it involves a specific intent or malice, for the intent or malice of its officers or agents may be imputed to it.

(3) It is liable for exemplary damages, in a proper case, for the torts of its managing officers or officer, or for torts of subordinate agents authorized or ratified by them.

(4) It is liable, according to the weight of authority, although the tort may have been committed in the course of an ultra vires business or transaction, if such business or transaction was authorized by its stockholders or managing officers.

(5) It is not liable for torts of an agent not within the scope, or apparent scope, of his authority, unless it has ratified the same.

(6) Most courts hold that it is not liable as for a tort for acts clearly authorized by its charter, if the grant of authority was constitutional, and the act was done without negligence and in good faith.

(7) According to the weight of authority, a corporation organized exclusively for the purpose of a public charity is not liable to a patient or other person receiving the benefit of the charity for the torts of its agents, unless it has been negligent in selecting or retaining them.

24. Liability of corporation for trespass—Waters v. West Chicago St. R. Co., 101 Ill. App. 265. Railroad corporation is liable for the act of an employe in locking a person into an empty car and causing his arrest, such act being done at the direction of a station agent having charge of the property in the cars of the company—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Parker (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 831. May be liable in a statutory action for insulting words uttered or published by an agent acting within the scope of his employment and in the course of its business—Sun Life Assur. Co. v. Bailey (Va.) 44 S. E. 692.

25. Himrod Coal Co. v. Clark, 197 Ill. 514.

26. Chicago & G. T. Ry. Co. v. Hart, 104 Ill. App. 57.

27. Texas State Fair v. Marti (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 432.

28, 29. Haggerty v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 456.

30, 31. Glendale Inv. Ass'n v. Harvey Land Co., 114 Wis. 408.

Personal liability of officers or receiver for torts.—The receiver of a corporation is not liable for a death caused by his negligence, though by statute an action for wrongful death is authorized.[32] Employment by the directors of persons for a specific purpose does not render them personally liable for his negligent acts.[33] The general manager of a corporation which publishes a paper who is authorized to control its policy may be individually responsible for a libel, though not one who is merely an officer without control.[34]

Priority of judgment for negligence.—A judgment against a water company based on its negligence in failing to supply water for fire purposes, which recites that it is for the tortious injury and damage done plaintiff by the negligence of defendant, is prior to a mortgage.[35]

Penalties.—A statutory limitation as to the time within which action for a penalty or forfeiture based on the statute shall be brought does not affect actions against directors or stockholders of a corporation to recover a penalty or forfeiture imposed or to enforce a liability created by law.[36]

If a corporation desires to object that a statutory proceeding to recover a penalty for failure to file an annual report is on the relation of the circuit attorney instead of the city within which the corporation is located, it must raise such objection by demurrer or answer;[37] and the proceeding should be by the state on relation of the city.[38] It is not a defense that a secretary of state has notified the prosecuting officers of the corporation's default in the filing of the report,[39] and it need not be alleged that blanks for the annual report have been mailed to the corporation.[40]

Crimes.—A corporation may be indicted for obstructing a highway.[41] Statutory provisions punishing the assumption of a corporate name by an unincorporated person, or the assumption of a false name by a corporation for the purpose of soliciting business are not violated by the mere assumption of a corporate name.[42]

Where conspiracy to commit an act injurious to trade or commerce is made an offense, a combination to depreciate the value of the capital stock of a corporation which is listed on the stock exchange is such a conspiracy.[43]

Embezzlement by officers.—The president of a corporation is not relieved from liability as for embezzlement on use of its assets in an unlawful payment of dividends to himself and others, though the payment of such dividends was concurred in by all the stockholders.[44] It must be shown that all the directors, or at least a majority of them, together with the defendant, if he voted, acted with knowledge that the act was illegal, and that they each acted with a fraudulent purpose of converting to their own use and to the use of each other respectively, the money of the corporation, since mere guilty knowledge in the defendant in receiving the dividends, if it was honestly voted would not render him guilty.[45]

32. Rev. St. § 3017—Parker v. Dupree (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 185.

33. Employment to give a fireworks exhibition on grounds of a corporation—Bianki v. Greater American Exposition Co. (Neb.) 92 N. W. 615.

34. Danville Press Co. v. Harrison, 99 Ill. App. 244.

35. Being within the terms of Code North Carolina, § 1255 which gives such priority to judgment for torts—Guardian Trust & Deposit Co. v. Greensboro Water Supply Co., 115 Fed. 184.

36. Code Civ. Proc. Mont. tit. 2, §§ 554, 515—Davis v. Mills (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 703.

37, 38. Rev. St. 1899, §§ 1013, 1017, 1021—State v. Missouri Exploration & Land Co., 97 Mo. App. 226.

39, 40. Rev. St. 1899, § 1015, provides that failure to receive blanks shall not be regarded as an excuse—State v. Missouri Exploration & Land Co., 97 Mo. App. 226.

41. State v. White, 96 Mo. App. 34.

42. Imperial Mfg. Co. v. Schwartz, 105 Ill. App. 525.

43. People v. Goslin, 171 N. Y. 627.

44. The corporation having a separate legal existence from that of the stockholders, it cannot be urged that it was impossible for the stockholders to steal their own property—Taylor v. Commonwealth, 25 Ky. L. R. 374, 75 S. W. 244.

An indictment for embezzlement under the Kentucky statute does not charge two offenses, though it alleges that while defendant was acting in the capacity of president and director, he did, with "intent to willfully injure and defraud the company and said persons, embezzle said money."[46] A civil liability imposed on directors for the wrongful declaration of dividends does not prevent the prosecution of the corporate officers for embezzlement in the wrongful payment of such dividends to themselves from the assets of the corporation.[47] The same is true of a penalty by way of fine on directors violating provisions of the statute relating to corporations.[48] On a prosecution of the president of a corporation for embezzlement in the sanction and receipt of dividends at a time when the corporation was insolvent, it must be shown that at the time such dividends were declared and paid there were no funds legally applicable to their payment, and the acts were with the fraudulent purpose of converting the money of the corporation to the use of the officers.[49] To determine the question of insolvency, proof of the corporation's resources and assets at the time laid in the indictment, together with the course and nature of its business and the extent of its liabilities, is admissible,[50] and the payment of dividends and sums at about the same time to the directors and stockholders, and the actual condition of the company at such times may be shown, also corporate transactions in which the stockholders bought coupons in the name of various syndicates, on the security of which they borrowed money from the corporation, but the jury should be instructed to regard such evidence as going solely to the question of motive.[51] The belief of defendant and the board of directors as to the propriety of voting the dividends is admissible, together with evidence that it was based on the advice of counsel.[52] It cannot be shown that similar other companies divided the funds mentioned among their stockholders.[53] The fraudulent acts of defendant's co-directors must be submitted to the jury.[54] The court in its instructions should define the fraudulent appropriation of funds.[55]

Procedure in prosecutions.—On a prosecution of a corporation the state need not show legal incorporation, though the allegation of corporate existence is a mere naming of defendant if defendant appear and plead.[56] An instruction in a proceeding for the mutilation and falsification of corporation books may set out an entire statute if the charge against defendant is in other portions of the instructions precisely stated.[57] On an indictment for mutilation of corporate records, the fact that defendant is charged to have altered and caused to have altered does not render the indictment bad as stating two offenses or failing to state who it was that defendant caused to perpetrate the alteration.[58]

§ 10. Actions by and against corporations.[59] Right to sue in corporate name.

45. Taylor v. Commonwealth, 25 Ky. L. R. 374, 75 S. W. 244.

46. Ky. St. 1899, § 1202—Taylor v. Commonwealth, 25 Ky. L. R. 374, 75 S. W. 244. The ownership is not material further than it must be charged and shown to have belonged either to the corporation of which defendant was an officer or agent, or to some person who had entrusted its possession to that corporation—Id.

47. Ky. St. 1899, § 548, not exclusive—Taylor v. Commonwealth, 25 Ky. L. R. 374, 75 S. W. 244.

48. Ky. St. 1899, § 550, not exclusive—Taylor v. Commonwealth, 25 Ky. L. R. 374, 75 S. W. 244.

49-54. Taylor v. Commonwealth, 25 Ky. L. R. 374, 75 S. W. 244

55. The jury should have been told that by fraudulent conversion was meant the deceitful intent of appropriation of the property of the corporation without the right and without a belief of right, and a fraudulent intent is the intent to effect such appropriation—Taylor v. Commonwealth, 25 Ky. L. R. 374, 75 S. W. 244.

56. State v. Glucose Sugar Refining Co., 117 Iowa, 524.

57. Pen. Code, par. 881—Qualey v. Territory (Ariz.) 68 Pac. 546.

58. Indictment held good which charged that defendant did "alter, mutilate and falsify and cause to be altered, mutilated and falsified, a book in writing"—Qualey v. Territory (Ariz.) 68 Pac. 546.

59. Actions against foreign corporations are treated in article "Foreign Corporations." In this section it has been attempted to —A corporation cannot as such file and sign a bill in chancery but must act through the intervention of agents.[60] After cessation of business and death of a portion of the stockholders, an attorney representing a majority of the stock may sue in the corporate name.[61] Though the president of a corporation owns all but two shares of its capital stock, the corporation may, after his death, sue to vacate a decree of foreclosure obtained against it, without joining his administrator and heirs or its directors and trustees.[62] The corporation may sue in a name slightly variant from that under which it enters into a contract,[63] but if the question as to variance is raised, the identity of the suing and the contracting party is in issue.[64]

Jurisdiction.—An action seeking a discovery and the repayment of money obtained by fraud may be maintained in equity.[65] Actions to compel an accounting by a former treasurer of a corporation may be brought in equity as may an action to charge a bank as trustee of corporate funds which with knowledge of their ownership it has permitted to be wrongfully withdrawn and converted.[66]

Venue.[67]—Statutes relating to service of process do not affect the jurisdiction authorized at common law of actions against corporations.[68] Where the principal relief sought is equitable, the venue is governed by the rules with regard to equity cases, though there is also a claim for damages which is subject to a different rule.[69] Where the statute provides that action may be begun in any county where the corporation has an agency or representative, action may be brought in the county of the residence of the president, he performing his official acts therein,[70] though the president's official acts are few,[71] or though by private understanding, the other officers were to do all the work.[72] Where it is provided that a person may sue in the county in which he carries on his regular business, though other than the county of his residence, a corporation's president may be regarded as engaged in business in the county of its general office, though he receives no salary for his attention to such business.[73] The fact that a charter provides where the principal place of business shall be does not prevent an action being brought in the county where the president and assistant auditor have offices, unless there is evidence that the principal place of business is established elsewhere.[74] If the corporation agree to discharge an obligation in a county other than that of its principal place of business, it waives the right to have a suit for the appointment of a receiver brought in the latter county.[75]

Where it is sought to enjoin the directors of a corporation from disposing of group merely questions of procedure of general nature and where the procedure was apparently dependent on the peculiar relief sought it has been treated in connection with the substantive law governing such relief.

60. Jockish v. Deutscher Krieger Verein, 98 Ill. App. 9.

61. San Diego Gas Co. v. Frame, 137 Cal. 441, 70 Pac. 295.

62. Fox v. Robbins (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 597.

63, 64. Riemann v. Tyroler & V. Verein, 104 Ill. App. 413.

65. Bill against the corporation, its directors and stockholders, alleged a conspiracy by the stockholders to transact an unlawful business and fraudulent representations inducing complainant to pay money to it—Edwards v. Michigan Tontine Inv. Co. (Mich.) 92 N. W. 491.

66. Hunter v. Robbins, 117 Fed. 920.

67. Domicile of corporation. See ante, § 6.

68. A common law rule requiring suit against a corporation to be in the county where its property is located or where it transacts a substantial part of its business, is not affected by act July 9, 1901, P. L. 614—Park Bros. & Co. v. Oil City Boiler Works, 204 Pa. 453.

69. Petition for an injunction must be brought in the county of the corporation's principal office. Construing Civ. Code, § 1900—Etowah Milling Co. v. Crenshaw, 116 Ga. 406.

70-72. Rev. St. 1895, art. 1194, § 23—Sharp v. Damon Mound Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 1043.

73. Code, art. 75, § 135—Cromwell v. Willis, 96 Md. 260.

74. It does not matter that a railroad has no track in such county—Boyd v. Blue Ridge Ry. Co., 65 S. C. 326.

75. Rev. St. art. 1488—Wills Point Mercantile Co. v. Southern Rock Island Plow Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 292.

76. Moneuse v. Riley, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 110.

its property or carrying on its business, the proceedings should be brought in a court of general jurisdiction at its domicile.[76] An action against a railroad corporation for an injury resulting from a defective track is based on an act of commission and is not based on a passive act or act of omission, for which the corporation should be sued at its domicile, and may be brought in the county in which the accident occurred.[77]

Parties.—If the holder of land subject to a vendor's lien conveys it to a corporation of which he holds all the stock except two shares, and of which he is president, his executors and heirs need not be joined in an action to foreclose the lien.[78]

Process.—Jurisdiction of a corporation cannot be obtained by service on its secretary and president as individuals.[79] If the suit is on a claim in favor of the agent which he has assigned to plaintiff, service on the agent is not good.[80] In Kansas, service may be had on an assistant secretary whose duties in fact make him a local secretary.[81] In New York, service is not good on a president, after his resignation, though there is no successor.[82] A notice of garnishment delivered to the state superintendent of insurance together with a summons to the company to appear as garnishee is sufficient service.[83] The official capacity of a person as secretary and general manager of a corporation cannot be inferred for the purpose of supporting a service of process by the fact that he did not state that he did not possess such capacity at or after the time process was served.[84] Where after a transfer of railroad property, a former ticket agent of the old is retained by the new owner, service on him is not good as against the old corporation if he no longer represent it in any way,[85] and provisions that the consolidation of railroad companies shall leave all the rights of creditors unimpaired do not make the new corporation agent of the old for the purpose of receiving service.[86]

Where a statute provides various classes on whom service of process against a corporation may be made, absence of the first mentioned class is necessary to the validity of service on the second class.[87] Alternative service may be made in case of absence from the county though not from the state.[88]

Under other statutes service on an officer of lesser rank is authorized by a statement in the return that the president or other chief officer was not found. Where a successor has not been elected, service may be had on an officer after his resignation, if by the by-laws his term of office continues until the election and qualification of a successor.[89]

Return.[90]—The return of service should show affirmatively facts establishing service within some of the modes prescribed by statute.[91] The return of a sum-

77. Culpepper v. Arkansas Southern R. Co. (La.) 34 So. 761.

78. Fox v. Robbins (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 597.

79. Kirkpatrick Const. Co. v. Central Elec. Co., 159 Ind. 639. A citation of a certain person as president of a certain corporation is not a citation service of which confers jurisdiction on the corporation itself—Butler v. Holmes (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 52.

80. White House Mountain Gold Min. Co. v. Powell (Colo.) 70 Pac. 679.

81. Civ. Code, § 68—Colorado Debenture Corp. v. Lombard Inv. Co. (Kan.) 71 Pac. 584.

82. Code Civ. Proc. § 431, requires service on a general officer, director or managing agent—Yorkville Bank v. Zeltner Brew. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 578.

83. Reid v. Mercurio, 91 Mo. App. 673.

84. Scott v. Stockholders' Oil Co., 120 Fed. 698.

85, 86. Thomson v. McMorran Milling Co. (Mich.) 94 N. W. 188.

87. The officer's return must show such absence affirmatively (Rev. St. § 1019)—Drew Lumber Co. v. Walter (Fla.) 34 So. 244.

88. Rev. St. § 1019—Florida Cent. & P. R. Co. v. Luffman (Fla.) 33 So. 710.

89. Civ. Code, § 68—Colorado Debenture Corp. v. Lombard Inv. Co. (Kan.) 71 Pac. 584.

90. See for approval of a return of service as in conformity with Rev. St. § 5044—Parker v. Van Dorn Iron Works, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 444.

91. Park Bros. & Co. v. Oil City Boiler Works, 204 Pa. 453. Where the statutes provide that service may be had by leaving a copy with the person in charge of any business office of the corporation in case the mons as served on a corporation's agent must show information other than the mere statement of the person on whom it was served that he was the corporation's agent.[92]

Defective service of process may be waived by voluntary appearance.[93] A defective service of process may be set aside on rule without a plea in abatement.[94]

Appearance.—A corporation sued under a name by which it is no longer doing business may on its special appearance file an affidavit of defense though such affidavit must show the use by the corporation of a different name and the necessary facts.[95]

The rule that a corporation represents its stockholders in the defense of all suits which involve corporate rights or functions applies only where the matter litigated is a corporate matter as distinct from a right which pertains only to one as the owner and holder of particular shares.[96]

Pleading corporate existence.[97]—Under statutory provisions in certain states, corporate existence need not be proven unless there is a verified answer which contains an affirmative allegation that the plaintiff or defendant as the case may be is not a corporation.[98] Failure to allege that a statutory certificate has been procured by the corporation before commencing business does not render its petition demurrable.[99] An allegation that plaintiff is a corporation is sufficient.[1] A showing that plaintiff was a corporation may be by amendment to the petition.[2]

A complaint need not allege that defendant is a corporation in order to bind it, if it is made a party by its proper name.[3] The fact that a complaint does not allege defendant's incorporation cannot be reached by a general demurrer.[4]

To take advantage of special statutes of incorporation, they must be pleaded.[5]

A slight variance between the name of a corporation as alleged in a pleading and as set out in an exhibit, on which the action is based, is immaterial.[6] president or chief officer cannot be found, but that the absence of such officer must be expressed in the return, such statement in the return is jurisdictional in case service is not on the chief officers (Rev. St. §§ 995, 996)—Rixke v. Western Union Tel Co., 96 Mo. App. 406.

92. White House Mountain Gold Min. Co. v. Powell (Colo.) 70 Pac. 679.

93. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Burch (Colo. App.) 69 Pac. 6. After service of a citation on the traveling passenger agent of a railroad company, any defect will be regarded as waived, where the attorney for a co-defendant, having possession of the citation, secures a continuance, stating that he would either appear for the railroad or have someone else do so at the next term—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. McCarty (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 229. Though service is on a corporate officer as individual if such individual's attorney acknowledge service of a notice to take depositions which specifies the action to be against the corporation, as "attorney for defendant" and subsequently consents to a continuance of the case, the corporation is bound by his assent to such continuance—Kirkpatrick Const. Co. v. Central Elec. Co., 159 Ind. 639.

94. Park Bros. & Co. v. Oil City Boiler Works, 204 Pa. 453.

95. Montello Brick Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. (Del.) 54 Atl. 687.

96. A stockholder is not made a party by representation by the fact that the corporation is made a defendant to a suit to enjoin the voting of his shares for directors—Taylor & Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Fed. 147.

97. Evidence of corporate existence. See ante, § 3.

98. Crocker v. Muller, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 685. Proof of the de facto existence of a corporation is unnecessary, where in the pleadings the corporation is admitted to be such—Grand Rapids School Furniture Co. v. Grand Hotel & Opera House Co. (Wyo.) 72 Pac. 687.

99. Laws Spec. Sess. 1898, c. 10—Northrup v. A. G. Wills Lumber Co., 65 Kan. 769, 70 Pac. 879.

1. Boston Base Ball Ass'n v. Brooklyn Base Ball Club, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 521. An allegation that a plaintiff is a private corporation is sufficient to bring it within a statutory provision dispensing with proof of corporate existence, and the omission of the word "duly" if desired to be taken advantage of must be raised by special exception or a special plea of nul tiel corporation (Rev. St. 1895, art. 1186)—Bury v. Mitchell (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 341.

2. Petition filed in the name of Adas Yeshurun Society—Adas Yeshurun Soc. v. Fish (Ga.) 43 S. E. 715.

3. Butterfield v. Graves, 138 Cal. 155, 71 Pac. 510.

4. Sly v. Palo Alto Gold Min. Co., 28 Wash. 485, 68 Pac. 871.

5. Norris v. Lake Drummond Canal & Water Co., 132 N. C. 182.

6. Action for breach of a covenant in a deed alleging a conveyance to have been made to the Owensboro Falls of Rough and Green River R. Co., and a deed showing that the grantee was the Owensboro Falls of Rough & Green River Branch Railroad Co.—

Denial of existence.—The corporate existence or capacity of a plaintiff to sue is not put in issue by a general denial.[7] The corporate existence of a plaintiff is sufficiently denied by an answer denying that plaintiff was a corporation incorporated under the laws of the state, and that if it were so incorporated it would be governed by the laws of the state.[8] Where defendant's answer in abatement attacking the power of plaintiff to act as a corporation is not sustained, leave to answer further may be refused in the discretion of the court.[9]

Verification of pleadings.—Where a corporation seeks to have an injunction dissolved on denial of the grounds contained in an answer, such answer must be sworn to.[10]

Pleading corporate liability.[11]—In pleading liability of a corporation for the acts of a surgeon employed in a relief department, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to set out all the regulations of the relief department in order to show an obligation on the part of defendant to furnish skillful surgical attendance to injured members; it is sufficient to aver that such obligation existed.[12] Where a count in a declaration alleges that a corporation is indebted to plaintiff, a recovery may be had under such count based on an estoppel of the corporation to assert that the contract on which the indebtedness arose was executed by the corporation's agent as an individual.[13]

An allegation that defendant made and executed an instrument to plaintiff, which by reason of the manner in which such instrument is addressed amounts inferentially to an allegation that a concern named therein is the same as plaintiff, is sufficient after answer.[14]

Variance.—On an issue as to defendant's right to receive certain money from a corporation, evidence as to amount of salaries paid the officers is immaterial.[15] Where a pleading bases a right to recovery on a loan of money, there is a fatal variance between it and proof that the money was paid on a stock assessment.[16]

Defenses.—In an action by a corporation to recover money loaned, the defendant cannot show that the money alleged to have been loaned was really the individual property of plaintiff's treasurer and another.[17]

Arrest of officers.—Officers of a corporation made defendant in trover, who are not parties, cannot be committed to jail.[18]

Mandamus.—Where a duty is especially imposed by law on a corporation, mandamus will lie to enforce it.[19] So a railroad company may be compelled by such remedy to restore a highway, which it has crossed, to a safe condition or to such a Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Wilson (Ky.) 76 S. W. 138.

7. Chamberlain Banking House v. Kemper, etc., Dry Goods Co. (Neb.) 92 N. W. 175. After a filing of a plea of general issue and payment, verified by the president, the existence of defendant as a corporation is admitted—Bennett v. Millville Imp. Co., 67 N. J. Law, 320.

8. State Ins. Co. v. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co. (Neb.) 90 N. W. 997.

9. United States Mortg. Co. v. McClure, 42 Or. 190, 70 Pac. 543.

10. Chancery Practice Rule 32, Code, p. 1209, requires the verification of an answer in such cases generally—Niehaus v. Cooke, 134 Ala. 223.

11. It must be averred that agency for the corporation existed at the time of the transaction complained of. It is not sufficient to aver agency generally—Pratt Land & Imp. Co. v. McClain, 135 Ala. 452.

12. Haggerty v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 456.

13. Congress Const. Co. v. Worcester Brew. Co., 182 Mass. 355.

14. An order for a safe on which the complaint was based directed "Herring-Hall-Marvin Co., La Grande, Ore. April 1, 1901, Hall Safe and Lock Works, San Francisco." sufficiently indicates that the two concerns named were identical—Herring-Hall-Marvin Co. v. Smith (Or.) 72 Pac. 704.

15. Groh v. Groh, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 85.

16. Stanton v. Baird Lumber Co., 132 Ala. 635.

17. St. James Co. v. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co., 81 N. Y. Supp. 739.

18. Hall & B. Woodworking Mach. Co. v. Barnes, 115 Ga. 945.

19. State v. New Orleans Gas Light Co., 108 La. 67.

state as to permit its free use,[20] or to compel a telephone company to supply a customer with service.[21] Mandamus will not lie to compel the restoration of a train service where the discretion of determining accommodations is placed by the statute in the directors of the railroad, but a board of railroad commissioners may determine the reasonableness of their action and enforce its determination by mandamus.[22] Mandamus will not issue to compel the treasurer to apply a certain fund in his possession to the payment of a judgment.[23]

§ 11. Legislative control over corporations.—Where the charter gives the corporation the right to increase its bond issue for purposes incidental to the business, and to purchase its capital stock for retirement, preferred stockholders do not occupy a contract relation guaranteeing that the issues of different classes of stock and of stock and bonds shall remain of fixed proportions, and therefore legislative authorization of the issuance of bonds to retire stock applicable generally to corporations does not impair the obligation of contracts,[24] especially where the general incorporation statute reserves the power in the legislature to alter, suspend, or repeal all charters.[25] Such a statute does not impair the vested rights of stockholders if its only effect is to alter the manner in which an existing right may be effectuated.[26] Where it is provided that, after the dividends declared on stock of a private corporation shall amount to the full sum invested, the legislature may regulate the charges of the corporation so that no more than a certain sum shall be divided on the capital employed, the earnings of the corporation cannot be held as capital and though the charges are not regulated, surplus profits may, notwithstanding, be exacted by the state.[27]

§ 12. How corporations may be dissolved; forfeiture of charter; effect of dissolution; winding up under statutory provisions.—A corporation is not dissolved by the fact that one person becomes the owner of all the stock,[28] and the fact that one is a sole creditor and stockholder of a corporation does not allow him to deal with its property without consideration of its existence.[29]

Nonuser.—Where a corporation is chartered for the purpose of holding exhibitions and for the general promotion of agricultural interests, it is not dissolved by the mere fact that it fails to hold exhibitions.[30]

Failure to pay bonus tax.—A provision that after two years' default in the payment of a bonus tax such default shall constitute a forfeiture of the charter deprives the corporation of a legal existence on default in payment though during the two years such existence may be regained by payment of the tax.[31]

Dissolution by consent of stockholders or directors.—The stockholders cannot dissolve the corporation, where it is created by special act and no method of dissolution provided, so as to exempt it from existing liabilities.[32] Where the advisa-

20. Chicago, I. & L. Ry. Co. v. State, 158 Ind. 189. So where a railroad has been using a street for its track—Town of Mason v. Railroad Co., 51 W. Va. 183.

21. State v. Kinloch Tel. Co., 93 Mo. App. 349; Mahan v. Michigan Tel. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 629.

22. Laws 1890, c. 565—People v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 172 N. Y. 90.

23. The only allegation of possession was that the treasurer was in possession, unless the fund had been expended in an unauthorized way—Minchener v. Carroll, 135 Ala. 409.

24, 25. C. H. Venner Co. v. United States Steel Corp., 116 Fed. 1012.

26. Act March 28, 1902—Berger v. United States Steel Corp., 63 N. J. Eq. 809.

27. Local Laws 1847, p. 82, §§ 23, 24, 35—Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. State, 159 Ind. 438.

28. Geo. T. Stagg Co. v. E. H. Taylor, Jr. & Sons, 24 Ky. L. R. 495, 68 S. W. 862.

29. Watson v. Bonfils (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 157.

30. Acts 1867, c. 128; Acts 1870, c. 89; Acts 1890, c. 73—Nicolai v. Maryland Agricultural & Mechanical Ass'n. 96 Md. 323.

31. Acts Assem. 1898, p. 1173, c. 504; Poe's Supp. Code, Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 81, §§ 88f, 88i—Cleaveland v. Mullin (Md.) 54 Atl. 665.

32. It is said to be doubtful whether the corporation may be terminated for any purpose before the day fixed by the charter on resolution of a mere majority of the stockholders—Economy Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Paris Ice Mfg. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 107, 68 S. W. 21.

bility of dissolution is by statute left to the determination of the board of directors, their discretion cannot be interfered with by equity and dissolution enjoined by a minority stockholder.[33] Where dissolution is permitted on consent in writing of the owners of a majority of the stock, dissolution is not permitted on the mere vote of a majority of the stockholders in favor thereof and action of the directors pursuant thereto; there must also be a publication of notice of dissolution if required by statute and the mere fact that the stockholder was present at the meeting at which it was voted to dissolve, does not release the corporation from liability to him.[34] Where it is alleged that a surrender of a corporate franchise was effected by the action or nonaction of stockholders, it may be shown what was the intention of another corporation which held a majority of the stock.[35]

Insolvency.—A corporation is not dissolved by the mere fact of insolvency incapacitating it to continue its business,[36] nor can minority stockholders have a dissolution of a corporation in the absence of a statute on the mere ground that it is insolvent and that its business is being carried on at a loss.[37] The officers of a corporation may ask for its dissolution and the appointment of a receiver, where its stock and assets are insufficient to pay its debts or where the interests of the stockholders require it.[38] A federal bankruptcy law does not supersede state insolvency laws as to a corporation engaged principally in mining.[39]

Forfeiture of charter and franchises in judicial proceedings by the state.—In New York, the attorney general may institute proceedings for the dissolution of an insolvent savings loan and building association on the report of the superintendent of banking without a relator.[40] The corporate existence of a banking institution or a savings, loan, and building association, cannot be determined by an action in the name of the people, unless for some reason, distinctly stated, it has forfeited the right to exist conferred on it by its incorporation.[41] If the attorney general is not authorized to bring quo warranto proceedings but the right is vested in the county attorney, a waiver of objection on the part of the respondent cannot be taken advantage of by the attorney general, and the bill is properly dismissed on the merits where there is no showing that it was brought by the prosecuting attorney, or authorized by him, or any court, or the governor of the state.[42] An act for the prevention of the formation of monopolies which is unconstitutional does not become a part of the charter contract causing its violation to effect a forfeiture, if the charter itself did not require the company not to do the acts inhibited by the statute.[43]

Receivership.—If creditors and other parties in interest are satisfied, the state cannot have a receiver though the corporation's affairs have been prematurely or irregularly settled.[44] The fact that a corporation violates its corporate powers does 33. General Corp. Act of New Jersey—Windmuller v. Standard Distilling & Distributing Co., 114 Fed. 491.

34. Economy Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Paris Ice Mfg. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 107, 68 S. W. 21.

35. Manchester St. R. Co. v. Williams, 71 N. H. 312.

36. Ready v. Smith, 170 Mo. 163.

37. Worth Mfg. Co. v. Bingham (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 785.

38. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2419, 2423—Zeltner v. Henry Zeltner Brew. Co., 174 N. Y. 247.

39. R. H. Herron Co. v. Superior Ct., 136 Cal. 279, 68 Pac. 814.

40. New York Banking Law, § 18; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1785, 1786, 1808—People v. Manhattan Real Estate & Loan Co., 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 535.

41. A complaint which states that the expenses of defendant during the past year have exceeded its income, that it has made contracts which are claimed to be improvident, that if a particular claim is valid, then the corporation is insolvent, and that a superintendent of the banking department has certified to the attorney general that it is unsafe and inexpedient for defendant to continue business, is insufficient—People v. Manhattan Real Estate & Loan Co., 175 N. Y. 133.

42. Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 5781—State v. Seattle Gas & Elec. Co., 28 Wash. 488, 70 Pac. 114.

43. Rev. St. 1895, art. 5313; Anti-Trust Law 1895—State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 1049.

not authorize the appointment of a receiver.[45] Where a statute authorizes a receiver for a corporation having no official empowered to hold its assets, resignation of the officers of an insolvent corporation for the express purpose of placing it within the intention of such statute will be ineffective.[46] Where by statute appointment of a corporate receiver is authorized in case of dissolution, insolvency or danger thereof, or forfeiture of the corporate rights and in other cases where receivers have theretofore been appointed by the usages of courts of equity, a receiver may be appointed, where the corporate property has been destroyed by fire, to take charge of such as is left and receive the insurance money, the corporation not being in active operation, and its capital stock being equally divided between contending factions.[47]

Where the receiver is vested with corporate assets, he has power to take steps to vacate an invalid judgment against the corporation.[48] An order allowing receivers to be made parties to a stockholder's action against corporate directors, but denying the right to seek to impose any individual liability or representative liability, does not prevent the setting up of a cause of action against the directors for negligent management and the seeking of annulment of a release made by the receivers to the directors and their compulsion to account to the receivers, also that the receivers collect the same for the plaintiff or that plaintiff be authorized to collect it individually.[49]

Creditors cannot assert, as against a former receiver of a corporation, mismanagement and conversion of the corporate assets, such right existing in the subsequent receiver alone.[50]

An attorney employed to resist the appointment of a receiver may be paid from funds realized on sale by the receiver, though he is also counsel for the general manager of the corporation.[51]

Procedure and jurisdiction.—Charter provisions as to notice of meetings tending toward dissolution are mandatory.[52] Where efforts of minority stockholders to secure a sale of the corporate property and the distribution of its assets would be unavailing for the reason that a vote of the majority stockholders cannot be obtained, not on account of their unwillingness, but on account of their lack of interest in the affairs of the corporation, the minority stockholders may maintain a bill in equity to secure a distribution of its assets.[53] The grounds for dissolution must be specifically alleged.[54] An order to show cause in a proceeding for voluntary dissolution of a corporation may be amended nunc pro tunc by insertion of the

44. State v. New Orleans Debenture Redemption Co., 107 La. 562.

45. In a proceeding to enjoin a lease of water works property, a receiver cannot be appointed, no fraud or mismanagement being shown—New Albany Waterworks v. Louisville Banking Co. (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 776.

46. Code Civ. Proc. § 1810, subd. 3—Zeltner v. Henry Zeltner Brew. Co., 174 N. Y. 247.

47. Rev. St., subds. 5, 6, § 4329—Gibbs v. Morgan (Idaho) 72 Pac. 733.

48. Yorkville Bank v. Henry Zeltner Brew. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 578.

49. Craig v. James, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 16.

50. Boyd v. Mutual Fire Ass'n (Wis.) 90 N. W. 1086.

51. Commonwealth v. Penn. Germania Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 204 Pa. 29.

52. Davies v. Monroe Water Works & Light Co., 107 La. 145.

53. Bill to secure the sale of land of a town-site company organized during boom times, the purposes of which had become impossible, whose stockholders had abandoned it, and whose property was being sold yearly to pay taxes—Noble v. Gadsden Land & Imp. Co., 133 Ala. 250.

54. A bill which seeks the termination of a corporation on the ground that the original corporators are all deceased except complainant, should specifically show that no additional members have been admitted who have kept up the organization and it is not sufficient to aver that no successors have been named and no vacancies filled—Nicolai v. Maryland Agricultural & Mechanical Ass'n, 96 Md. 323. Where the members seek the dissolution of a corporation, complainant's interest and the facts of insolvency must be specifically alleged—Polk v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n, 119 Fed. 491.

return day named in the copy of the order served on a creditor, the creditor having entered a general appearance on such day and then on discovering that the return day was omitted from the original order moved to dismiss.[55]

Where an order of distribution is reversed on appeal, and certain unpreferred creditors are allowed to share in a particular fund, the order of distribution will be stayed below in order to allow another creditor of the same class opportunity to appeal, leave having been previously denied him though he had excepted to the receiver's report.[56]

Effect of dissolution.—Though the corporate existence has expired by the termination of its charter and of the time for settling its affairs, the assets may be collected by the stockholders or their representatives.[57] Under the Kentucky statute, a corporation continues to exist for the purpose of being sued until its debts are paid.[58]

Notwithstanding a decree in a state court declaring a corporation dissolved and appointing receivers, a federal court may have jurisdiction of a creditor's petition to have the corporation adjudged a bankrupt.[59] After a corporation has been dissolved on insolvency and it has no corporate existence, one recovering a judgment against it cannot examine a third party under supplementary proceedings.[60]

An execution obtained pending voluntary dissolution of a corporation will not be dissolved, but where corporate property has been placed in the hands of a permanent receiver, it cannot be sold on an execution issued without leave of court.[61] A corporation pending such dissolution may move to vacate the execution and restrain a sale though its receiver is not a party to the motion.[62]

Where a person is served with process as president of a corporation, he may show that the corporation has been dissolved and is not liable to suit.[63]

Continuance and winding up under statutory provisions.[64]—Where by statute, after the termination of a corporation by limitation, the directors become trustees to wind up its affairs, one director may maintain an action in equity to remove the rest and for the appointment of a receiver, if his bill disclose that the trustees have denied liability on notes which they have given to the company and which are a part of their assets and are making no effort to collect them.[65] Statutes providing that trustees on dissolution shall be trustees for the creditors and stockholders with power to collect the assets and make settlement with the creditors, and division among the stockholders apply only to dissolution proceedings under the same statute.[66] After the expiration of a period for the filing of objections to claims filed, those who have filed claims are to be regarded as creditors who are entitled to object to illegal claims.[67]

55. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 723, 724—In re Quo Vadis Amusement Co., 81 N. Y. Supp. 394.

56. People v. American Loan & Trust Co., 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 647.

57. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Dunscomb, 108 Tenn. 724.

58. Economy Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Paris Ice Mfg. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 107, 68 S. W. 21.

59. Proceeding under Code of Maryland, art. 23, does not prevent a proceeding under the national bankruptcy act—In re Storck Lumber Co., 114 Fed. 360.

60. Assessment life insurance companies incorporated and dissolved under laws of Illinois—In re Stewart, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 32.

61, 62. Fox v. Union Turnpike Co., 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 308.

63. Economy Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Paris Ice Mfg. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 107, 68 S. W. 21.

64. Facts held not to show grounds for winding up a land and improvement corporation under Acts Extra Sess. 1901, p. 326, c. 298, permitting the winding up in chancery of a corporation, the purpose of which has failed, the management of which has been abandoned or which has become insolvent or the assets of which are being consumed without benefit or probable benefit to the stockholders—Radford West End Land Co. v. Cowan (Va.) 44 S. E. 753.

65. Buckley v. Anderson (Ala.) 34 So. 238.

66. 1 Ball. Ann. Codes & St. §§ 4274, 4275—New York Nat. Exch. Bank v. Metropolitan Sav. Bank, 28 Wash. 553, 68 Pac. 905.

67. Proceedings to wind up—Olmstead v. Vance & Jones Co., 196 Ill. 236.

§ 13. Succession of corporations; reorganization; consolidation.[68]—There must be legal authority before corporations can consolidate.[69] Where the charter any by-laws of a corporation and the statute under which it was created vest in the stockholders a right of sale of the corporate properties, and discontinuance of the corporate existence, such power may be exercised by them pursuant to laws of the state to which the corporation owes life.[70] A transfer of the property of a domestic corporation to a foreign corporation except the franchises of its being a corporation, the foreign corporation to issue paid up stock to stockholders of the domestic corporation or to make a cash payment of less than the face value thereof to stockholders refusing to accept such paid up stock operates as a dissolution and may be carried out only by proceedings under the statute governing dissolution.[71]

Organization of new corporation.—Persons are not prevented from organizing a corporation by the fact that they are stockholders in another and the latter corporation may sell its property to the new corporation or the promoter thereof before the corporation is completed,[72] so, the stockholders and officers of a corporation may make an agreement with others whereby a new corporation is formed which takes all the assets of the old and makes payment by issuing its stock to the stockholders of the old.[73] In such case, a new corporation will be regarded as holding the assets of the old in trust for the creditors of the old.[74]

Where a corporation surrenders its property to another corporation and its stockholders surrender its stocks and bonds, which are canceled and replaced by stock and bonds of the new corporation, the transaction is to be regarded as a consolidation.[75]

Rights of stockholders.—Minority stockholders cannot have an agreement, by which a consolidation has been effected, set aside or enjoined unless wrong and injury is clearly shown to have been done them or the corporation.[76]

If a consolidation is effected without authority, wrongfully, or without the consent of the stockholders or under a right acquired after the stockholder has subscribed to his stock, a dissenting stockholder may recover the value of his shares, but if the corporation is organized under a statute authorizing the consolidation of corporations it receives the statute as part of the subscription contract, and the nonassenting stockholder is not entitled to cash payment for his shares.[77] The stockholder cannot object to a properly effected consolidation though he cannot be forced into the new corporation without his consent,[78] and the mere fact of consolidation does not give him the right to have the corporate assets converted into

68. See article "Combinations and Monopolies" for illegality of consolidation and other agreements between corporations as creating monopolies or violating "anti-trust" statutes.

69. Overstreet v. Citizens' Bank (Okl.) 72 Pac. 379.

70. Majority stockholders held to have power to transfer corporate property to another corporation under Code W. Va. 1899, c. 53, §§ 56, 59—Metcalf v. American School Furniture Co., 122 Fed. 115.

71. Coler v. Tacoma Ry. & Power Co. (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 413.

72. Goodwin v. Bodcaw Lumber Co., 109 La. 1050.

73, 74. Such an arrangement may be disturbed by the creditors of the old corporation, only as far as necessary to secure their claims—Wilson v. Aeolian Co., 64 App. Div. (N. Y.) 337.

75. Rendering the new corporation liable for the debts of the old—Shadford v. Detroit Y. & A. A. Ry. (Mich.) 89 N. W. 960.

76. Evidence held insufficient to show fraud and conspiracy on the part of the directors authorizing an annulment of the consolidation—Dickinson v. Consolidated Traction Co., 114 Fed. 232. A showing that a new company has been organized which has set apart a portion of its stock to be exchanged for the stock of an old company, and that a large majority of the shareholders of the old corporation consent to the exchange, does not show a fraudulent intent on the part of the old company to dispose of all its property which justifies an injunction—Odlin v. Bingham Copper & Gold Min. Co. (N. J. Law) 51 Atl. 925.

77. Mayfield v. Alton Ry. Gas & Electric Co., 198 Ill. 528.

78, 79. Mayfield v. Alton Ry., Gas & Electric Co., 100 Ill. App. 614.

money, but such right is not acquired by the stockholder until the corporation reaches the winding up stage.[79] Delivery of stock to a committee to be exchanged for stock in the new corporation transfers it such a title as will permit a subsequent purchaser in good faith from the committee to hold it free from equities in favor of the original holder.[80] A mere pledgee who has not become a registered stockholder, though the shares were assigned in blank by the registered owner, is not entitled to participation in, or notification of, proceedings to effect a consolidation of the corporation with another.[81] An agreement between the directors of constituent corporations in proceedings towards a consolidation that matters left unadjusted should be adjusted pursuant to a memorandum of agreement which had been entered into by the holders of more than a majority of the stock of the constituent corporations is binding on stockholders who signed the consolidation agreement as directors.[82]

Where there is an arrangement by which capital stock of an old corporation is taken in return for a similar number of shares of the capital of a new corporation with double the amount of the capital stock, there is no confiscation of the value of the shares so turned in, unless the remainder of the new company's stock is not subscribed in good faith and does not equal the par value of that stock which is taken over.[83] An agreement to exchange stock for stock in a consolidated company may be valid, though the number of corporations consolidated have not a capacity equal to that originally contemplated.[84]

Where on consolidation of corporations into a holding company the holding company issues collateral trust bonds under a plan for securing working capital for all constituent companies, the stockholders of one of the constituent companies cannot object to a pledge of the constituent company's bonds as collateral for the collateral trust bonds of the holding company part of the proceeds of which the constituent company has received as working capital. The constituent company is properly charged with a portion of the expense of securing the loan by the holding company and the question of usury cannot be raised before the repayment of the debt.[85]

Where a corporation which has acquired the property of other corporations is in its turn merged into a holding corporation its stockholders cannot, in a suit against the holding corporation, assert that there was a misappropriation or diversion in the amount paid for one of its constituent properties, it not being shown that there was any fraud or breach of trust on the part of its directors for the benefit of the holding company or its directors.[86]

Where a street railroad leases its property at a specified rental based on a percentage of its value, such lease is not a fraud on minority stockholders as a limitation of annual dividends. It will be presumed that the directors acted in good

80. Jewell v. McIntyre, 62 App. Div. (N. Y.) 396.

81. Where, on consolidation of corporations it is agreed that the portion of the stock assigned to one of the constituent companies should be applied, first to the payment of its floating indebtedness, and then apportioned among the stockholders, and the stock is delivered to an agent of the constituent company for such purpose, the new corporation is not liable to a pledgee of the stock of the old company who is not a stockholder of record, for a conversion of the stock to which his pledgor would be entitled under the consolidation agreement, and such distribution of the shares of the consolidated company is not a violation of the provision in stock certificates of the constituent company that they were transferable on the books only on surrender of the certificates—Cleveland City Ry. Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Ohio) 67 N. E. 1075.

82. Cleveland City Ry. Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Ohio) 67 N. E. 1075.

83. Mayfield v. Alton Ry., Gas & Electric Co., 198 Ill. 528.

84. Jewell v. McIntyre, 62 App. Div. (N. Y.) 396.

85, 86. Dittman v. Distilling Co. of America (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 570.

faith.[87] Where a lessee is operating the franchise of two street railroad corporations, a stockholder in a lessor company has no right of action against the city arising from an ordinance requiring the giving of transfers and such ordinance cannot be set up in connection with a bill alleging an infringement of the contract rights of the lessor under its franchise.[88]

On the consolidation of corporations the directors of a constitutent corporation may agree that the company shall come in free from debt, and that enough of the stock apportioned to one of the companies shall be sold to pay its indebtedness and the remainder distributed among the preferred and common stockholders in proportion to the relative value of such stock.[89]

If a corporation absorb another, its stockholders cannot avail themselves of the relief existing in favor of the members of the corporation which is illegally absorbed.[90]

Rights of bondholders.—A bondholder who has joined other bondholders in a plan of reorganization pursuant to which the property was sold in foreclosure and the bonds and matured coupons were used in payment of the sale price is not entitled to the benefits of the agreement until he has placed himself on the same footing as other parties thereto, if before depositing his bonds he detached the matured coupons and secured their payment from the proceeds of the sale, and until he has restored such payment cannot have the bonds of the company formed on reorganization which under the agreement were to be delivered to those joining therein.[91]

Subsequent bond issues.—Where there is an agreement by the stockholders of two corporations to dispose of the surplus of a bond issue on consolidation, the validity of the transaction cannot be questioned save by dissenting stockholders or creditors of the estate.[92] On consolidation, an agreement that there should be a bond issue to take up the debts of one of the corporations, and that any surplus should be divided among the stockholders of the two corporations, is based on a good consideration, the distribution of the surplus being regarded as a portion of the purchase money. The right to the surplus does not pass to a transferee of the stock, being an individual right of the stockholder. It is not affected by the fact that the mortgage makes no mention thereof. The surplus contemplated is the excess of the amount of the issue over the bonds outstanding, and it will not be held to include the market appreciation of the collateral bonds.[93]

Effect on existing rights.—Though a new corporation succeeds to the rights of an old corporation, it may be subject to statutes which are retroactive in effect as to the old corporation.[94] On consolidation of street railroad corporations, the new corporation succeeds to all the rights of the constituent corporation as to consents of abutting owners to the construction of the road.[95] Where the corporation acquires the property and franchises of another, a transfer of land to the latter will pass title to the former.[96]

The fact that one has been enjoined from manufacturing an article, patent to which was owned by the corporation, will not excuse his failure to furnish such

87. Ninety-nine year lease at 7 per cent. rental—Wormsor v. St. Ry. Co., 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 626.

88. Elkins v. City of Chicago, 119 Fed. 957.

89. Cleveland City Ry. Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Ohio) 67 N. E. 1075.

90. Continental Nat. Building & Loan Ass'n v. Miller (Fla.) 33 So. 404.

91. Fuller v. Venable (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 543.

92. Read v. Citizens' St. R. Co. (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1056.

93. Read v. Citizens' St. R. Co. (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 1056.

94. Mileage book act, Laws 1895, c. 1027—Minor v. Railroad Co., 171 N. Y. 566.

95. Adee v. Nassau Electric R. Co., 65 App. Div. (N. Y.) 529.

96. Railroad companies—Smith v. Railroad Co., 72 S. W. 1088, 24 Ky. L. R. 2040.

articles under an agreement of sale, if prior to the entry of the decree, he has acquired control of the complainant corporation by purchase of its stock.[97]

Where after an action is begun on a policy within a year as provided by the contract with an insurance company, the company effects a consolidation with another company, the action does not abate as not having been brought within the year, though the consolidation is after such time has expired.[98] An amendment making the consolidated company defendant, and dismissing as to the original defendant, is proper.[99]

Assumption of liabilities.—A corporation on being merged in another corporation which assumes its obligations has no further liability for future transactions and can create no new obligations.[1] The relation of corporations having such mutual interests that one is in reality a branch of the other is a sufficient consideration for an assumption by one of the liabilities of the other.[2]

Where the transfer of the property of one corporation to another is on consideration of the assumption of the transferror's contracts, the transferee becomes liable thereon.[3] If certain debts are enumerated, the liability is only to the extent thereof.[4] If the facts warrant a finding that a new corporation is a mere continuation of an old it is liable for the debts thereof.[5] The insolvency of one of the former corporations affords no defense as against a proceeding to recover a debt due from it against the new corporation.[6]

A street railroad corporation which purchases the franchise of another takes subject to the duties of such a corporation and may be compelled to discharge them by mandamus, but the transferring corporation is thereafter not subject to such remedy.[7]

A railroad company is not chargeable on the contracts or for the torts of a corporation to which it succeeds in title unless it has assumed such liability or is chargeable therewith by law, though statutes provide that corporations using the franchise of another corporation shall be subject to the burdens that are imposed by such franchise.[8] Where the property of a railroad company has been transferred to another after an injury, a complaint against the two companies is not demurrable

97. McElroy v. American Rubber Tire Co. (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 441.

98. Franklin Life Ins. Co. v. Hickson, 197 Ill. 117.

99. Construing Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, p. 444 c. 32, pp. 56, 65; Practice Act, par. 24—Franklin Life Ins. Co. v. Hickson, 197 Ill. 117.

1. City of New York v. Railroad Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 367.

2. Kendall v. Klapperthal Co., 202 Pa. 396.

3. Rehberg v. Tontine Surety Co. (Mich.) 91 N. W. 132. Evidence held insufficient to show an agreement by a corporation which received the assets to pay its debts—Central Electric Co. v. Sprague Electric Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 925.

4. Not liable for a bank check issued eight months prior to the sale and not enumerated in the list, no fraud being alleged or shown—Anderson v. Mining Co. (Idaho) 72 Pac. 671.

5. Evidence held sufficient to establish such a finding—Douglas Printing Co. v. Over (Neb.) 95 N. W. 656. The fact that one who is the general manager and owner of a large part of the stock becomes the general manager of another corporation with which the first is consolidated does not render the new corporation liable for the debts of the old, though it purchases nearly all the stock and property of the former—Crissey v. Cook (Kan.) 72 Pac. 541. Where a corporation which has procured the property of other corporations by purchase, transfers all such property together with its own to a new company, such company will not be regarded as a reorganization or consolidation of the old authorizing its substitution as defendant in a suit originally brought against the old corporation—Sartison v. Railroad Co., 103 Ill. App. 507.

6. It cannot be contended that since the original debtor was insolvent, the creditor was not injured by the consolidation—Shadford v. Railway (Mich.) 89 N. W. 960.

7. Comp. Laws 1897, § 6448—Township of Grosse Pointe v. Railway (Mich.) 90 N. W. 42.

8. Under Civ. Code, § 1863, a railroad company operating a line of another company is not liable for damages resulting from a breach of a contract entered into by such company—Seaboard Air-Line Ry. v. Leader, 115 Ga. 702.

on the ground that the judgment could be enforced as against the transferee only to the extent of the transferror's property.[9]

On a merger of street car companies into a new corporation, which assumes the obligations of the corporations merged, municipal assessments which were distinct against the property of several corporations become a single lien attaching to the new corporation's property as a whole, but such lien does not become a prior lien as against a mortgage on the property of one of the constituent railroad companies and as to property covered by the mortgage; the original priorities must be observed.[10] On a lease subject to all debts and liabilities, the lessee is not liable for previously accruing license fees.[11]

A creditor may bring an action at law against a purchasing corporation which on taking the assets of another has agreed to pay its debts.[12]

Estoppel to assert defenses.—One holding a judgment for accrued dividends, who enters into a reorganization of the corporation, cannot assert his judgment against the assets of the new corporation to the prejudice of other creditors.[13] After consolidation, the resulting corporation cannot contend that the act was illegal as against a creditor of one of the former corporations so long as it receives and retains all the property of the constituent corporations.[14]

Rights of creditors to follow assets of old corporation.—A corporation which takes the assets of and continues the business of another corporation, as its successor, is liable to a plaintiff in an action pending against the second corporation to the extent of the property which it receives.[15] A creditor of the former corporation may follow the assets, though some of the stockholders in the new corporation were not aware of his claim.[16] The right to follow such assets is not removed by a statute which furnishes a remedy in favor of creditors against corporate officers who have transferred its property to themselves or others.[17]

Agreements to pay dividends.—An agreement by a corporation which purchased another corporation to pay fixed sums to those stockholders of the latter corporation who exchanged their stock for its stock, such sum to be paid in a fixed amount semi-annually, is invalid as an agreement to pay the dividends whether the profits were earned or not, and a purchaser of certificates of indebtedness issued under such agreement which contain a reference thereto acquires no greater rights than the original holders, though the certificates are negotiable in form and acquires no greater rights on the ground of estoppel by the fact that the issuing corporation takes the originals from him and issues new ones directly to him.[18]

Determination of legality of consolidation.—The legality of merger of corporations cannot be determined in an injunction proceeding,[19] and the exercise of powers conferred by the corporate charter will not be enjoined on the ground that their effect will be to create a monopoly.[20] A dissenting stockholder cannot object

9. Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Shepherd, 29 Ind. App. 412.

10. City of Lincoln v. Lincoln St. Railway Co. (Neb.) 93 N. W. 766.

11. Lease of a street railroad—City of New York v. Railroad Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 379.

12. Central Electric Co. v. Sprague Electric Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 925.

13. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Central R. & Banking Co., 120 Fed. 1006; Central Trust Co. v. Same, Id.

14. Shadford v. Detroit Y. & A. A. Ry. (Mich.) 89 N. W. 960.

15. Berthold v. Holladay-Klotz Land & Lumber Co., 91 Mo. App. 233.

16. Wilson v. Aeolian Co., 64 App. Div. (N. Y.) 337.

17. Rev. Sts. 1899, § 1338—Berthold v. Holladay-Klotz Land & Lumber Co., 91 Mo. App. 233.

18. National Salt Co. v. Ingraham (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 40.

19. Injunction to restrain street railway company from constructing a road on the ground of lack of consent of the property owners—Adee v. Nassau St. Elect. R. Co., 65 App. Div. (N. Y.) 529.

20. Power to hold stock of and control other corporations—Dittman v. Distilling Co. (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 570.

to a transfer of property of the corporation on the ground that it is a violation of the Federal Anti-Trust Act of 1890, since the only party entitled to maintain a bill in equity for injunctive relief for violating its provisions is the United States attorney at the instance of the attorney general,[21] and a state court of equity will not take jurisdiction of suit by a stockholder for relief on the ground that the purpose of a corporation was unlawful as being for the creation of a monopoly if the corporation is merely exercising powers conferred by its charter to hold stock of other corporations, since such question must be raised in quo warranto proceedings by the state.[22]

In a proceeding to dissolve a holding company and to obtain relief against a constituent company, a ground of relief solely against the constituent company cannot be set up without making the bill multifarious.[23] Where a bill is based on supposed illegality of management of the company and there is a prayer for its dissolution and the repayment to complainants of the amounts paid for their stock, an amended bill seeking specific performance of a contract to pay dividends, based on the valid continuous existence and management of the corporation as a going corporation, is inconsistent with the relief originally sought.[24]

§ 14. Stock and membership. A. Membership in corporations in general.—The relation of the stockholder is personal, analogous otherwise than technically to that of a partner.[25] Corporations organized for gain have no power of expulsion or forfeiture, unless granted by their charter or by general municipal laws.[26] The stockholder is not entitled to surrender his stock and withdraw its value prior to winding up of the corporation, unless the corporation consent.[27] The fact that a city becomes a member of a mutual insurance company does not amount to an extension of a municipality's credit to the corporation within the constitutional provision.[28] One who holds a large share of the stock of a corporation has an insurable interest in the corporation's property.[29]

Where the original stockholders have transferred all their stock to a holding company, they cannot deal with the property of the corporation and their acts as stockholders are void.[30]

(§ 14) B. Capital stock and shares of stock. Nature of capital stock and shares of stock.[31]—The fact that the property of a corporation is almost entirely realty does not alter the character of its stock as personalty.[32]

The situs of shares of corporate stock for the purpose of determining their liability to execution is the state of incorporation, and they are not subject to execution in a state where the corporation is doing business unless such corporations are made domestic for the purpose of suit.[33] The property of a corporation is not con-

21. Metcalf v. American School Furniture Co., 122 Fed. 115.

22. Dittman v. Distilling Co. of America (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 570.

23. Amendment seeking to add a claim that complainants as preferred stockholders of the constituent company under the certificate of incorporation are entitled to receive a stated dividend payable quarterly from the net profits arising from the business of the company, that any profits applicable to such dividends have been accumulated but have not been paid and praying for payment—Dittman v. Distilling Co. of America (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 570.

24. Such amendment cannot be permitted at the hearing—Dittman v. Distilling Co. of America (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 570.

25. Barrett v. King, 181 Mass. 476.

26. Purdy v. Bankers' Life Ass'n of Des Moines (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 486.

27. Mayfield v. Alton Ry., Gas & Electric Co., 100 Ill. App. 614.

28. Const. art. 1, par. 19—French v. City of Millville, 67 N. J. Law, 349.

29. Crawford v. Aachen & M. Fire Ins. Co., 100 Ill. App. 454. (See generally article "Insurance.")

30. Bauernschmidt v. Bauernschmidt (Md.) 54 Atl. 637; Baltimore Trust & Guaranty Co. v. Same, Id.

31. See articles Creditor's Suit, Attachment, Execution, Garnishment for rights of creditors of stockholders as against corporate stock, the corporation not being involved in contractual relation.

32. Champollion v. Corbin, 71 N. H. 78.

33. Caffery v. Choctaw Coal & Min. Co., 95 Mo. App. 174; Daniel v. Gold Hill Min. Co., 28 Wash. 411, 68 Pac. 884.

veyed by a transfer of its stock no matter in what form the certificates are sold and assigned.[34]

Issue of stock, and payment therefor.—A corporation may, by its acts, be estopped to deny that a person is a stockholder though the issue of the stock is not entirely in compliance with statute.[35] The fact of an omission of a subscriber's name from a certificate of incorporation as evidencing an intention not to accept him as a stockholder is overcome by a demand for payment after incorporation.[36]

Holders of stock as collateral, who surrender the stock certificate on default in payment of the debt, are not to be regarded, until the issue of a new certificate in their names, as stockholders, entitled as such to demand under a statute, a statement of the assets and liabilities of the corporation.[37]

Where creditors or stockholders are not injured, the corporation may fix its own price for the sale of its stock.[38]

Where stock is exchanged for municipal aid bonds which are void, a contractor to whom the bonds are conveyed in lieu of stock due him under a construction contract is entitled to such stock, and this right may be asserted by his assignees, and in an action against the corporation by the assignees to compel the issue of stock to them, the corporation is not entitled to have interest payments made by the municipality on the void bonds brought into court. Complainants' right to relief is not affected by any notice which they may have had of the void character of the bonds, there being no bad faith.[39] The municipality, the original holders of the bonds, and stockholders of the corporation, are not necessary parties.[40]

A corporate creditor is bound by an agreement to apply a certain portion of a new issue of stock on his debt if a third person takes the remainder of such stock.[41]

Where stock is issued to a creditor to secure a debt, it cannot be set off as against the debt though the mere fact that the creditor in taking stock did not regard it as of value or intend to take it as stock does not prevent its being set off.[42]

Watered or fictitiously paid-up stock.—As against creditors, payment of stock subscriptions must be in money or its equivalent.[43] Under the statutes of certain states, paid-up corporate stock cannot be issued for less than its par value.[44] Payment by an uncertified check on a bank is not a payment in cash.[45] Though a stat-

34. Albany Mill Co. v. Huff Bros., 24 Ky. L. R. 2037, 72 S. W. 820.

35. By vote of two thirds of the members it was agreed to issue the additional share to the buyer, who signed the articles of incorporation as a stockholder at request of the president and thereafter met with the other members as a stockholder, with full knowledge and consent of the officers, though nothing was paid and the company did not issue or offer to deliver the shares sold—Gowdy Gas Well, Oil & Mineral Water Co. v. Pattison (Ind. App.) 64 N. E. 485.

36. Woods Motor Vehicle Co. v. Brady, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 79.

37. Not regarded as stockholders of record under stock corporation law § 52, imposing a penalty for failure to make such statement—Pray v. Todd, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 391.

38. Ross v. Sayler, 104 Ill. App. 19.

39, 40. Citienzs' Sav. & Loan Ass'n v Belleville & S. I. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 109.

41, 42. Reid v. Detroit Ideal Paint Co. (Mich.) 94 N. W. 3.

43. Fraudulent as to the corporation and stockholders who have paid up in full to receive the chemical formula of purported value in full payment of stock shares transferred to a third person—Dean v. Baldwin, 99 Ill. App. 582.

(Note) Where there is no charter, statutory, or constitutional provision requiring that stock shall be paid for at its par value, and where no rights of other stockholders are violated, and there is no fraud as against creditors, there is nothing whatever to render it either illegal or ultra vires for a corporation to issue its stock as full-paid upon payment of less than its par value. Such a transaction is perfectly valid as between the parties if all the stockholders consent, and the corporation cannot afterwards repudiate the agreement and compel payment of the difference between the par value of the stock and what it has agreed upon as payment in full—Clark & Marshall, Corporations, Vol. II, p. 1198; citing Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143.

44. Coler v. Tacoma Ry. & Power Co. (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 413.

45. Laws 1890, p. 1082, c. 565, § 2—People v. Board of Railroad Com'rs, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 242.

ute provides that stock subscriptions must be paid in money or labor, a note secured by a paid-up insurance policy may be accepted.[46] Actual payment of a portion of the capital stock as a condition precedent to doing business may be in property or labor, where by statute stock is authorized to be issued in consideration of money, labor, or property estimated at its true money value.[47] There must be a parity between the value of property conveyed in exchange for stock and the value of the stock.[48] A mining corporation has power to purchase property for its use, by the issuance of shares equal in their par valuation to the price at which it is agreed the purchase is to be made if not in excess of the authorized capital,[49] and a conveyance of mining property to a mining corporation in exchange for its capital stock is on a valuable consideration.[50] Where the statute prohibits the issue of stock in exchange for anything but money or property purchased for the benefit of the corporation, an issue of stock to be used as a bonus on a sale of the corporation's bonds at par may be enjoined though even with the bonus the bonds are not worth more than par.[51]

As between the parties, the value placed by the corporation on stock with which it purchases property is conclusive though not as against creditors.[52]

An intent to defraud need not exist to render the acceptance of merchandise in payment of stock subscriptions at an over estimated value fraudulent as to creditors.[53] A general allegation that certain defendants entered into conspiracy with the directors to acquire the entire capital stock of a corporation for a sum much less than its actual value is insufficient to support an action to set aside an issuance of capital stock to them.[54]

Assessments upon stockholders after payment in full.—Statutes providing that assessments may be made on stock not to exceed the amount at which the shares were originally limited does not prohibit the making of a contract by the stockholders for additional assessments.[55]

Amount of capital stock, and increase or reduction thereof.—Where there is no statutory or charter provision, the corporation may deal as it pleases with its own stock,[56] but a contract between a corporation and a portion of its stockholders to buy back stock at a specified advance at the end of a specified period is void as to creditors.[57] An issuance of stock to pay for property purchased by a corporation is not a fictitious increase.[58]

A statutory right of a stockholder to purchase at par a pro rata share of an additional issue cannot be restricted by the other stockholders.[59] A right to purchase a new issue of stock must be exercised within a reasonable time.[60]

46. Ky. St. § 568—Clarke v. Lexington Stove Works, 24 Ky. L. R. 1755, 72 S. W. 286; Clark v. Lexington Stove Works, 24 Ky. L. R. 2247, 73 S. W. 788.

47. The 20% required by Rev. St. 1898, § 1773, may be so paid under § 1753 as amended by laws 1899, c. 193—La Crosse Brown Harvester Co. v. Goddard, 114 Wis. 610.

48. Code, 1876, § 1805—Montgomery Iron Works v. Capital City Ins. Co. (Ala.) 34 So. 210.

49. Code, c. 53, § 24—Bank v. Belington Coal & Coke Co., 51 W. Va. 60.

50. Mill's Ann. St. §§ 490, 582—Homestead Min. Co. v. Reynolds, 30 Colo. 330, 70 Pac. 422.

51. Kraft v. Griffon Co., 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 29.

52. Coler v. Tacoma Ry. & Power Co., 64 N. J. Eq. 117.

53. L. M. Rumsey Mfg. Co. v. Kaime (Mo.) 73 S. W. 470.

54. Insurance Press v. Montauk Fire Detecting Wire Co., 82 N. Y. Supp. 104.

55. Blue Mountain Forest Ass'n v. Borrowe, 71 N. H. 69.

56. It may make a contract to re-purchase its shares on a certain contingency—Fremont Carriage Mfg. Co. v. Thomsen (Neb.) 91 N. W. 376.

57. On winding up, the stockholders cannot assert such a contract—Olmstead v. Vance & Jones Co., 196 Ill. 236.

58. Not rendered void by Const. Wash. art. 12, § 6—Coler v. Tacoma Ry. & Power Co., 64 N. J. Eq. 117.

59. A vote of holders of two-thirds of the stock at a regular meeting, requiring payment of a premium for additional stock issued under Comp. Laws, § 7038, subd. 4—

If stockholders have transferred a portion of their stock to the corporation to be used as assets, or their stock has in other ways been taken back into the treasury, they have no rights based thereon to share in an issue of additional stock, though such stock has been reported by the corporate officers as unissued stock. One stockholder entitled to a proportion of additional stock issued cannot maintain an action against another stockholder on the ground that he has received more than his share, without showing a demand for the proportion due plaintiff, especially where it appears that more than sufficient remained to satisfy his claim after the allotment to defendant, and it must be shown that the right to the excess had not been purchased from other shareholders or otherwise obtained.[61]

Where new stock to the amount of accumulated surplus earnings is distributed among the original stockholders if certain of the shares are held subject to a life estate, the new shares are to be regarded as capital and not income, as between the life tenant and remaindermen.[62]

Preferred or guarantied stock; interest-bearing stock; special stock.—A subsequent statute authorizing the retirement of preferred stock on certain conditions is a repeal of a prior statute allowing capital stock to be reduced by purchase without limitation as to the financial condition of the company.[63]

Where preferred stock has been issued in violation of the charter powers though with the consent of all persons in interest, its redemption cannot be compelled by mandamus.[64] One who accepts preferred stock cannot contend that the extent of its issue was based on an overvaluation of the corporate assets or of the paid up capital stock, but is limited to a showing of a shrinkage in the assets after its issuance.[65]

A plan for the retirement of preferred stock in the absence of fraud or bad faith is not a subject of judicial control, and the court cannot say that a less expensive plan might be successfully adopted.[66] An act allowing preferred stock to be retired from the proceeds of a bond issue authorized at a regularly called meeting with the consent of two-thirds of each class of stockholders must be strictly followed.[67] In proceedings under such act, the directors must state how many shares they propose to retire though failure to acquire such number will not render the scheme ineffectual.[68] Where holders of preferred stock are given an option to accept bonds in lieu thereof, they are not deprived of any vested right by the purchase and retirement of other preferred shares, but the offer to purchase preferred stock for retirement must be made to all stockholders.[69] The power to issue bonds for such purpose is expressly given by statute in certain states.[70] Where a corporation has paid four quarterly dividends amounting to more than the minimum fixed in the statute, it may take advantage of a statute allowing a corporation which has issued preferred stock entitling the holder to dividends in excess of the specified amount per annum to retire such stock by the issue of Hammond v. Edison Illuminating Co. (Mich.) 90 N. W. 1040.

60, 61. Crosby v. Stratton (Colo. App.) 68 Pac. 130.

62. Chester v. Buffalo Car Mfg. Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 443.

63. N. J. Corp. Acts March 28, 1902 and 1896—Hodge v. United States Steel Corp., 64 N. J. Eq. 90.

64. State v. Ferracute Mach. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 52 Atl. 231.

65. As against a scheme to retire the preferred stock under a statute giving such power to a corporation provided its assets are of sufficient value (N. J. Corp. Act March 28, 1902)—Hodge v. United States Steel Corp., 64 N. J. Eq. 90.

66. Berger v. United States Steel Corp., 63 N. J. Eq. 809.

67. Act March 28, 1902 supplementing Corp. Act 1896, §§ 27-29—Berger v. United States Steel Corp., 63 N. J. Eq. 809.

68, 69. Berger v. United States Steel Corp., 63 N. J. Eq. 809.

70. N. J. Corp. Act 1896, §§ 27, 29—Berger v. United States Steel Corp., 63 N. J. Eq. 809.

bonds if it shall have paid dividends continuously at such rate for at least one year previous.[71] One who may seek an injunction against a retirement of preferred stock by a bond issue must be the owner of shares standing in his name on the corporate books at the time of filing the bill.[72] His motive in asking an injunction is not material if the relief is alleged to be based on injury to his property rights.[73]

A purchaser of preferred stock is bound by his transferror's assent to a plan for the retirement of a portion of such stock issue.[74]

A corporation may substitute noncumulative for cumulative dividend preferred stock if the amendment by which it is effected is expressly provided to operate only on those preferred stockholders who assent. An amendment to the by-laws and certificate of incorporation which provides that, as to preferred stockholders who consent to the arrangement, dividends shall thereafter be noncumulative, and which provides that funding certificates to the amount of the dividends in arrears shall be issued to those stockholders who consent to the arrangement, such certificates to bear interest payable out of the net profits in priority to any dividends on the capital stock, is not unlawful as to the nonassenting stockholders, as providing for an unequal distribution of the surplus earnings among the preferred stockholders, since the directors will be bound when they set aside a sum equal to the interest due on the certificate to set aside a proportionate sum for the nonassenting stockholders. Common stockholders cannot object since they are benefited by the scheme by the fact that it accelerates their chances of participation in dividends. The substitution cannot be enjoined by a nonassenting preferred stockholder, since, if after the confirmation of the agreement an attempt is made to pay dividends in violation of his right, he can by an appropriate proceeding assert his legal right to a proportionate share.[75]

Issue and cancellation of certificates of stock; lost certificates.—It is sufficient to establish the loss on mandamus for the issuance of a duplicate stock certificate after ten years. After the lapse of such time claim by third persons cannot be made to lost certificates.[76] To support a statutory proceeding to compel the issue of a new certificate of stock, there must be a refusal on the part of the corporation shown. On return of the order to show cause why a certificate should not be issued, proof should be taken by the court. On granting an order to issue a new certificate, either the order to show cause or a notice should be published after the order is granted but before the certificate is delivered.[77] Where a stockholder seeks the cancellation of stock which was alleged to have been fraudulently issued, he must allege the facts showing fraud.[78] An action cannot be brought in equity after the expiration of ten years from the time of

71. United States Steel Corporation by the payment of quarterly dividends at the rate of 1¾ per cent. for four successive quarters is entitled to take advantage of New Jersey Corporation Act March 28, 1902—Hodge v. United States Steel Corp. (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 1. (Court below held that five such dividends must have been paid—53 Atl. 601).

72. Hodge v. United States Steel Corp., 64 N. J. Eq. 90.

73. Hodge v. United States Steel Corp., 64 N. J. Eq. 111.

74. The transferee cannot from his ownership have a preliminary injunction—Hodge v. United States Steel Corp., 64 N. J. Eq. 90.

75. Wilcox v. Trenton Potteries Co. (N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 474.

76. The particulars of the loss need not be shown—State v. Southern Mineral & Land Imp. Co., 108 La. 24.

77. Laws 1892, c. 688, §§ 50, 51—In re Coats, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 469.

78. On a bill for the cancellation of stock seeking also the recovery of dividends paid thereon, and an injunction against the voting thereof on the ground that the stock was issued in consideration of fictitious patent rights, it must be alleged that the right to operate under the patent was known to defendants to be of no value when the stock was issued, and that the corporation did not operate under the patents or exercise the exclusive rights which it acquired—Kimbell v. Chicago Hydraulic Press Brick Co. (C. C. A) 119 Fed. 102.

issue, there being no concealment of the circumstances attending the transaction which fully appeared of record on the minutes of the corporation,[79] nor after six years,[80] nor after three years where the stock has been transferred and the real owners are not made parties until five years.[81]

Rights and liabilities arising out of the issue of fictitious certificates of stock.—One who takes stock of a corporation issued for the purpose of enabling certain directors to secure a majority of the capital stock and control the corporation acquires no rights, he having knowledge. On determination of the invalidity of such stock, a court of equity should require the issue to be returned and canceled, and the consideration paid restored to the purchaser.[82] Where it is sought to set aside such a stock issue, the fact that evidence is received concerning an alleged taking of a patent by one of the directors in his own name does not amount to a voluntary submission of an issue with regard thereto, supporting a decree requiring the directors to assign the patent to the corporation, the issue not being raised by the pleadings or such relief being sought.[83] One who by his false representations has secured an overissue of stock cannot assert an estoppel on the part of another stockholder who in reliance on such representations has voted for the issue.[84]

(§ 14) C. Subscriptions to capital stock, and other agreements to take stock. Nature and formation of contracts of subscription.—Stock subscriptions may be by parol.[85] Recognition by the corporation of the subscriber's rights is not essential where there is an agreement before incorporation, to take stock.[86] As between the corporation and stockholders, a formal contract of subscription is not necessary but a contract may be implied by the acceptance of stock issued to a person.[87] If there is an intention to subscribe, a subscription is sufficiently indicated by a signature to the articles of association to which is affixed the words "250 shares."[88] Where a subscriber takes newly issued stock, his liability does not depend on his knowledge of the filing of the provisions for the increase of stock.[89]

Subscription rights in a proposed corporation may be sold, title passing at the completion of the sale and not by operation of law.[90]

Where subscriptions and offers to subscribe to stock are not made in contemplation of a grant of a charter or in contemplation of incorporation under a general law, but are based on a theory that there is in existence a created subsisting body corporate capable of entering into contract with subscribers to its stock, such contracts do not become binding when the corporation actually comes into legal existence.[91]

Withdrawal, release, and discharge of subscribers.—The validity and binding effect of a stock subscription is not affected by failure of the subscriber to pay the 79. Kimbell v. Chicago Hydraulic Press Brick Co. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 102.

80. Action by the corporation or stockholders—Calivada Colonization Co. v. Hays, 119 Fed. 202.

81. Commonwealth v. Reading Traction Co., 204 Pa. 151.

82. Issuance by two of the directors authorized at a board meeting at which they were a majority—Luther v. C. J. Luther Co. (Wis.) 94 N. W. 69.

83. Luther v. C. J. Luther Co. (Wis.) 94 N. W. 69.

84. Haskell v. Read (Neb.) 93 N. W. 997.

85. Somerset Nat. Banking Co.'s Receiver v. Adams, 24 Ky. L. R. 2083, 72 S. W. 1125; Manchester St. Ry. v. Williams, 71 N. H. 312.

86. Manchester St. Ry. v. Williams, 71 N. H. 312.

87. Parkhurst v. Mexican S. E. R. Co., 102 Ill. App. 507.

88. Dupee v. Chicago Horse Shoe Co. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 40.

89. Reid v. Detroit Ideal Paint Co. (Mich.) 94 N. W. 3.

90. Manchester St. Ry. v. Williams, 71 N. H. 312.

91. Subscriptions to the capital stock of a corporation before it has paid the bonus tax required by Poe's Supp., Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 81, § 88—Cleaveland v. Mullin, 96 Md. 598.

whole or part thereof, unless payment is expressly required by the charter.[92] After the corporation has become insolvent, there cannot be a rescission of a subscription to its stock.[93] A stock subscription cannot be canceled by mere direction on the part of the corporation to its agent to return the stock, and a subsequent indorsement of the certificate as canceled at a meeting of the directors of which the subscriber had no notice, and such action constitutes a conversion for which the measure of damages is the difference between the par and market value less the amount due thereon.[94]

Where the purposes of the organization are materially changed without the knowledge of the subscribers or without their ratification or consent, the subscriptions are not binding.[95]

Subscription of full or specified amount of the capital stock.—If a certain amount of capital stock is to be subscribed before a contract of subscription shall become binding, valid and enforceable subscriptions are intended. It is not sufficient that persons known to be insolvent be accepted as subscribers.[96] Where after a small portion of the stock originally contemplated is subscribed for, the number of shares is very largely increased and the par value largely reduced, the charter being subsequently changed in accordance, the additional issue will be regarded as original and not increased stock, and a subscriber for a number of the increased issue is not liable to creditors unless the entire amount is subscribed for.[97] An assessment may be made on the shares issued though less than the nominal capital, if in excess of the stipulated first issue.[98]

Though payment of a per cent of the capital stock may be a condition precedent to the transaction of business, it is not to the organization of the corporation and the collection of subscriptions to the capital stock, the charter having been granted.[99]

Subscriptions upon conditions precedent.—The rights of subscribers become fixed by the completion of subscriptions and the grant of a charter.[1]

If a bonus tax is by statute made a condition precedent to the exercise of corporate powers, an offer to subscribe to stock though accepted is not binding on the corporation where the tax has not been paid and a subsequent payment of the tax does not render the subscription binding.[2]

Subscribers to the stock of a corporation who enter into their contracts with the understanding that the president is to take a certain number of shares are

92. Nicholson-Watson Shoe & Clothing Co. v. Urquhart (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 45.

93. Deppen v. German-American Title Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1110, 70 S. W. 868.

94. Rev. St. 1895, art. 668, requires that thirty days' notice in writing must be served on the stockholder before stock can be forfeited for neglect to pay an installment—Nicholson-Watson Shoe & Clothing Co. v. Urquhart (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 45.

95. West End Real Estate Co. v. Nash, 51 W. Va. 341. Prospectus stating object to acquire patents and rights to certain specified metal turning machines, certificate stating object to be to "make, contract for the manufacture or purchase of, buy, use, sell, lease, rent, or mortgage, of mechanical or other apparatus, machinery and implements for metal turning machines, and in general to do a manufacturing business"—Stern v. McKee, 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 142.

96. Chicago Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Browning, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 355.

97. Original provision for 200 $5 shares and after issue of 11 shares an increase to 250,000 of $1 each—Gettysburg Nat. Bank v. Brown, 95 Md. 367. (See note to this case in 93 Am. St. Rep. 339; for an exhaustive treatment of the liability to corporations of subscribers to their capital stock.)

98. Nominal capital 50,000 shares, first issue 25,000 shares with power to increase capital, and actual issue of 37,000 shares—Anglo-American Land, Mortg. & Agency Co. v. Dyer, 181 Mass. 593.

99. Corporation chartered by the superior court—McCandless v. Inland Acid Co., 115 Ga. 968.

1. Stock need not have been issued in order to render the subscription rights property rights, assignable and carrying with them the right to participate in the management of the corporation—Manchester St. Ry. v. Williams, 71 N. H. 312.

2. Acts Assem. 1898, p. 1173, c. 504, § 11—Poe's Supp. Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 81, § 88f—Cleaveland v. Mullin, 96 Md. 598.

not bound in case he fails to do so and has never had an intention to do so but has the stock issued to another.[3] Though subscribers are to select a committeeman to investigate the workings of similar corporations, and are not to be bound until his favorable report, they do not become jointly liable. A time limited for the payment of subscriptions does not begin to run until the final report of the committeeman. The measure of damages for failure to appoint such committeeman to a plaintiff who was to erect certain buildings and machinery for the intended corporation, is the value of the opportunity to present its arguments.[4]

Fraud in procuring subscriptions.—Where stock is sold by means of false representations, the subscription may be rescinded and the amount paid recovered,[5] though the stock was worth the amount paid.[6] The representations need not be made with intent to deceive but are sufficient if materially false and rightfully relied on by the subscriber. They need not have been relied on absolutely but they must have been of influence.[7] Where there has been fraud on the part of promoters, confirmation of stock subscriptions must be by deliberate act with full knowledge of the fraud and of the rights intended to be waived.[8]

A purchaser of stock who has relied on an official statutory statement of the secretary may bring an action for deceit if damaged by false statements therein, though the statement which had been filed was not yet published and distributed.[9]

A proceeding may be brought in equity against the directors of a corporation for damages for misrepresentations leading to the purchase of stock, where it appears that an action at law would necessitate a delay by reason whereof the amount and time when plaintiff would realize anything is problematical and uncertain. In such an action the receivers of the corporation need not be joined as defendants, and the cause of action does not abate on the death of the purchaser of the stock.[10] Directors guilty of false representations in the sale of stock are not necessary parties to an action against the corporation to secure the rescission of the stock subscriptions and recover the money paid.[11]

3. Byers Bros. v. Maxwell (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 437.

4. Certain land was to be furnished within ten days from the date of the subscription contract—Chicago Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Browning, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 355.

5. Evidence held sufficient to show false representations inducing the sale of mining stock—Morrison v. Snow (Utah) 72 Pac. 924. Evidence held sufficient to show fraud authorizing the avoidance of a contract to subscribe for capital stock—Queen City Printing & Paper Co. v. McAden, 131 N. C. 178. Evidence held sufficient to show that a purchase of corporate stock was induced by fraud, there being a representation that it was worth above par when in fact the corporation was insolvent—Deppen v. German-American Title Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1110, 70 S. W. 868. Evidence held to show misrepresentations of facts as to the stage of completion of negotiations for the consolidation of corporations inducing plaintiff to subscribe to stock of the new corporation to be formed—Mack v. Latta, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 242. Where a conveyance of property is secured in consideration of the issue of stock falsely represented to be full paid and nonassessable, the contract may be rescinded—Coolidge v. Rhodes, 199 Ill. 24. Where promoters have an option on land which the corporation is being organized to purchase a stock subscriber is not bound if such fact is concealed from him—West End Real Estate Co. v. Nash, 51 W. Va. 341.

6. Mack v. Latta, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 242.

7. Byers Bros. v. Maxwell (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 437.

8. West End Real Estate Co. v. Nash, 51 W. Va. 341.

9. Statement to the state auditor of the assets and liabilities of a fire insurance company—Warfield v. Clark, 118 Iowa, 69.

10. Action in equity may be brought against the directors of a savings and loan association whose articles of incorporation provide that funds should be invested in first mortgages, who invest in second mortgages, and by false statements secure plaintiff's testatrix to become a purchaser of prepaid stock—Squiers v. Thompson, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 552.

11. They are improper parties if it is not sought to recover against them, where it is not charged that they received any individual benefit, and it is not alleged that the stock was worthless or of less value than it would have been, had the representations been true, and where they are joined with the corporation a demurrer by them as individual defendants should be sustained—Mack v. Latta, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 242.

An action for damages should not also seek relief in favor of the corporation.[12]

Where notes are sued on which were given in payment of a stock issue, made for the purpose of enabling a corporation to pay its debts, and the defense is on the ground that the assets of the corporation were misrepresented, the question of whether the corporation's affairs were involved should not be submitted to the jury if it is conceded.[13]

Payments on subscriptions.—Liability on a subscription to stock is not affected by the market value of the stock.[14]

A record kept by a corporation showing the date of delivery of bonds in payment of stock is the best evidence as to the date when stock subscriptions were paid.[15] Where the records are destroyed, other evidence is admissible.[16]

If in payment of a stock subscription, the subscriber turns over securities to the corporate agent, and the agent by mismanagement of such securities allows them to be lost, the stockholder will be entitled to credit.[17]

Where notes secured by mortgage are given in payment of subscriptions to capital stock, defenses justifying a rescission of the subscription contract may be urged as against a proceeding to enforce the notes and mortgage, though the corporation has assigned for benefits of creditors, if the purchaser is not shown to have had knowledge of the fraud inducing a purchase before the time of the assignment.[18] An answer alleging that the consideration of a note was corporate stock of no value which defendant had by fraud been induced to buy may be regarded as a plea of total failure of consideration.[19]

(§ 14) D. Calls or assessments on unpaid subscriptions.—The necessity or advisability of a call on stockholders for the amount of their subscription lies entirely in the control of the directors.[20] The necessity of an assessment is not a subject of an inquiry in an action thereon where the power of assessment as to the unpaid portions of shares is vested in the directors.[21] If the power to make calls is vested in the directors under the terms of the subscription, the directors may be divested of their discretion by the legislature if the period of time within which payment is to be made is not shortened.[22]

Who liable.—Stock bearing on its face a provision that the holder shall be liable to assessment for expenditures is liable though in the hands of a member taking the shares as a gift.[23] Where it appears from the stock certificate that it is subject to future calls, and after becoming a stockholder a transferee

12. In an action by subscribers to stock against a corporation and its promoters, causes of action are improperly joined where it is sought to recover damages from false representations; that the corporation have judgment for money which the promoters subscribed, but did not pay in for their stock; and that there be an injunction against the sale of plaintiff's stock for the payment of an assessment—Pietsch v. Krause (Wis.) 93 N. W. 9.

13. Byers Bros. v. Maxwell (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 437.

14. Measure, as between the subscriber and the corporation, is the amount of the subscription of the stock at its par value less the amount paid thereon—Dean v. Baldwin, 99 Ill. App. 582.

15. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hart County (Ky.) 75 S. W. 288.

16. If the corporate books have been destroyed, parol evidence is admissible to show circumstances attending a surrender of stock as bearing on the question of whether certain notes in issue were given in payment for stock or as part of a collateral transaction—Thistlethwaite v. Pierce, 30 Ind. App. 642.

17. A note secured by a paid up policy, was turned over and lost in the hands of an irresponsible person—Clarke v. Lexington Stove Works, 24 Ky. L. R. 1755, 72 S. W. 286; Clark v. Lexington Stove Works, 24 Ky. L. R. 2247, 73 S. W. 788.

18. Deppen v. German-American Title Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1110, 70 S. W. 868.

19. Taft v. Myerscough, 197 Ill. 600.

20. Fitzgerald's Estate v. Union Sav. Bank (Neb.) 90 N. W. 994.

21. Anglo-American Land, Mortg. & Agency Co. v. Dyer, 181 Mass. 593.

22. West v. Topeka Sav. Bank (Kan.) 72 Pac. 252.

23. Blue Mountain Forest Ass'n v. Borrowe, 71 N. H. 69.

pays several calls, there is an implied promise on his part to pay future calls.[24] Under the English statute, a subscriber's authorization of the signature of his name on the memorandum of the association may render him liable for calls or assessments by the directors on the unpaid portion of his shares.[25]

Validity.—Statutory provisions must be strictly followed in order to render an assessment valid.[26] A stock assessment may be good, though the directors of a mining corporation have not filed their oath as provided by statute, where they have taken and subscribed to it.[27] Stock assessments cannot be made at a meeting of the directors, at which only a portion were present and the remainder had not been notified.[28]

Estoppel to object.—A stockholder who by reason of his official position is charged with the duty to see that stock assessments are properly made and collected cannot object to the irregularity of an assessment after his stock is sold thereunder.[29] Payment of increased assessments without objection, and the acceptance of a stock certificate in consideration thereof may operate as an estoppel to assert that such assessments were illegal.[30]

Forfeiture.—Stock may be forfeited for nonpayment of assessments, though there is no by-law making such provision, and though the resolution declaring forfeiture is general in its terms and applies to all defaulted stock. Where the statute prescribes the method in which stock shall be forfeited, such method must be pursued with some strictness, but in the absence of such provision as to details, it is only required that the method adopted shall be reasonable and just.[31]

Defenses.—An agreement to pay an assessment at a pro rata share of the existing indebtedness is not a bar to the collection of further assessments where the money paid thereon is returned to the subscriber by the directors on being informed that the compromise is ultra vires, nor is a retiring allowance by the directors.[32] The stockholder's answer may assert that the call is unnecessary.[33]

Though corporations are prohibited from issuing stock for less than its par value, the stockholder is not liable for more than the price he agreed to pay, if stock is issued to him as fully paid at an agreed price less than par.[34]

Limitations[35] begin to run from the time the calls are due and payable.[36] If the law fixes the time at which the subscription was to become due, limitations begin to run after default at such times.[37] Limitations as to the right to make calls on unpaid subscriptions begin at the time of suspension of business of the 24. Sigua Iron Co. v. Brown, 171 N. Y. 188.

25. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, § 7, provides that memorandum shall bind the member of the company to the same extent as it would if each member had signed his name thereto, and that all money payable by any member under the regulations of the company should be deemed to be a debt due from him to the company—Anglo-American Land, Mortg. & Agency Co. v. Dyer, 181 Mass. 593.

26. Corcoran v. Sonora Min. & Mill. Co. (Idaho) 71 Pac. 127.

27. Rev. St. 1898, § 317—Hatch v. Lucky Bill Min. Co., 25 Utah, 405, 71 Pac. 865.

28. Invalid where made by but four of the seven directors—Hatch v. Lucky Bill Min. Co., 25 Utah, 405, 71 Pac. 865.

29. The president, director and business manager of a mining corporation, cannot object to such a sale, where he knows that it was the custom to levy assessments, though a majority of the stock was not present at the meetings and though a portion of previous assessments had not been collected—Hatch v. Lucky Bill Min. Co., 25 Utah, 405, 71 Pac. 865.

30. Boll v. Camp (Iowa) 92 N. W. 703.

31. Crissey v. Cook (Kan.) 72 Pac. 541.

32. Anglo-American Land, Mortg. & Agency Co. v. Dyer, 181 Mass. 593.

33. West v. Topeka Sav. Bank (Kan.) 72 Pac. 252.

34. Construing laws 1892, c. 688, § 42—Thompson v. Knight, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 316.

35. Suit may be brought on a call within six years from the date of a subscription within six years after the date of the call—Athens Car & Coach Co. v. Elsbree, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 618. Where a contract is not in writing, actions are barred in three years under Code, 1897, § 2920—Gold v. Paynter (Va.) 44 S. E. 920.

36. Gold v. Paynter (Va.) 44 S. E. 920.

37, 38. West v. Topeka Sav. Bank (Kan.) 72 Pac. 252.

corporation leaving debts unpaid, but do not run as against a subscription so long as the corporation is a going concern until a call has been made.[38]

Pleading.—Where a foreign corporation seeks to recover an assessment on its shares, it need not show the terms of a statute and plan of arrangement referred to in its articles.[39] A complaint in an action to recover an assessment need not state when the stock was subscribed and the statutory proportion paid in; it is sufficient to allege that the capital had been subscribed and the per cent paid.[40] It need not allege that the assessments were equal and uniform; it is sufficient that it state that a per cent named was assessed on each and every share.[41] It is sufficient to allege that defendant had due personal service and notice of the calls of assessments and that they were made pursuant to the by-laws of the company, and such allegation sufficiently alleges that the assessment was made and notice given pursuant to the by-laws.[42]

(§ 14) E. Transfer of shares. The right to transfer shares.—It may be, by by-law, provided that stock shall not be sold without first offering it for sale to the corporation directors, and such a by-law if not prohibited by statute is not contrary to public policy,[43] and it applies to a purchase by an agent in his own name on behalf of an undisclosed principal.[44] The corporation cannot assert that a transfer without the consent of its board of directors is invalid, where the transferee has been recognized as a stockholder by election as a director.[45]

Effect of transfers.—A stock certificate is not a negotiable instrument and the holder must show as against the true owner that he took without notice and for value.[46] The fact that it is transferred in blank on its back does not render it such if on its face it is transferable only on the books of the company on surrender of the certificate.[47] The rule that a purchaser of stock for value will be protected as against the latent equities of one who indorses in blank does not protect one purchasing at a sale in bankruptcy stock which has been listed as the bankrupt's, though in fact held by him only to deliver to another as collateral, of which facts the purchaser has notice.[48] The assignee of stock, who has knowledge of defenses against the original holders, takes subject thereto.[49] He is not chargeable with knowledge possessed by his assignor estopping him from asserting negligence of the directors causing depreciation in the stock's value.[50] One who

39. Anglo-American Land, Mortg. & Agency Co. v. Dyer, 181 Mass. 593.

40. Under Rev. St. 1898, § 1773, making a condition precedent to the doing of business the subscription of one half of the capital stock and payment in of 20%—La Crosse Brown Harvester Co. v. Goddard, 114 Wis. 610.

41, 42. La Crosse Brown Harvester Co. v. Goddard, 114 Wis. 610.

43. Such a by-law authorizes a refusal of the corporation to transfer stock sold in violation thereof—Barrett v. King, 181 Mass. 476.

44. Barrett v. King, 181 Mass. 476.

45. None of the parties can assert that a transfer of the stock of a saving bank is void where a stockholder, being offered an office as bank commissioner, was compelled to part with his stock in order that he might be eligible and hence caused it to be transferred to his wife who consented to receive it and become a director and the bank also consented, recognized her as a director and accepted her note indorsed by her husband in reduction of his indebtedness. The wife could not thereafter repudiate her note nor could the husband's administrators claim the stock nor the bank deny its transfer and claim a lien based on such denial—Just v. State Sav. Bank (Mich.) 94 N. W. 200.

46. Where a transferee of stock was a witness at a proceeding in which it was sought to recover the shares from her assignor, and has knowledge of the issues involved, the judgment roll may be introduced on interpleader by the corporation as bearing on the question of good faith, the judgment having been entered after the transfer, though the decision was rendered before—Printing Tel. News Co. v. Brantingham, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 280.

47. Farmers' Bank v. Diebold Safe & Lock Co., 66 Ohio St. 367.

48. Goodwin v. Hampton Transp. Co. (Mich.) 94 N. W. 729.

49. He may be estopped to assert that sale of mining stock to pay assessments was void—Hatch v. Lucky Bill Min. Co., 25 Utah, 405, 71 Pac. 865.

50. Bank stock—Warren v. Robison, 25 Utah, 205, 70 Pac. 989.

executes a power of attorney to transfer a stock certificate, though the name of the transferee and date is left blank, cannot assert ownership against one purchasing from an apparent owner in good faith.[51]

Lien of corporation on shares.—A subsequent agreement for a lien cannot be asserted against a pledgee without notice.[52] Where after an arrangement that salary advances should be made to superintendent to be reimbursed from dividends on his stock, it was agreed that notes should be given by superintendent for further advances, the further payments create a lien on the superintendent's stock superior to the lien of a pledgee of the stock.[53]

Mode of transferring shares; registration.—Where a certificate is indorsed in blank as to date and name of transferee, the holder may sell by a delivery and transfer,[54] and the rights of third parties need not be inquired into.[55] The transferee has a right to conveyance on the stock books as against the transferror and to have new certificates issued to him.[56] As between the parties or those claiming under them, a formal transfer of the stock on the stock book, or the issuance of certificates to the transferee is not necessary though it may be provided by statute that corporate stock shall be transferred on the books as prescribed in the by-laws.[57] Statutory provisions that transfers of stock by indorsement and delivery are good only as between the parties until entry on the corporation books are not for the purpose of protecting creditors of stockholders, and an unentered written transfer of a stock certificate accompanied by transfer of the certificate for security takes precedence of a subsequent attachment by a creditor of the transferror.[58] Assent of the beneficiaries of an assignment to the transfer of corporate stock will be presumed in order to support an unentered assignment as against a creditor of the transferror who garnishees the corporation.[59]

Under the Kentucky statute, a sale of stock is not completed until transferred on the corporate books, though it is the intention of the sellers to have the transfer made on payment.[60]

Forged and unauthorized transfers, and transfers in breach of trust.—Where stock certificates have been placed in the power of the corporation's cashier to issue, the corporation is liable for their value to one to whom the cashier fraudulently conveys them in payment of his personal debt, though the stock recited that it was transferable only on the books of the corporation.[61] Where the assignor of a certificate of stock in blank recovers it by fraud and pledges it for his own debt to one who does not make inquiry or attempt to secure a transfer on the stock books, the first assignee, if not culpably negligent, will be regarded as the owner against the second.[62]

Refusal of corporation to recognize and register transfers.—Transfer of corporate stock cannot be compelled by mandamus except in case of a judicial sale.[63]

51. Shattuck v. American Cement Co., 205 Pa. 197.

52. Just v. State Sav. Bank (Mich.) 94 N. W. 200.

53. Comp. Laws, § 7052 provides that the corporation shall have a lien on the stock of its members for debts due it from them—Russell Wheel & Foundry Co. v. Hammond (Mich.) 89 N. W. 590.

54. Shattuck v. American Cement Co., 205 Pa. 197.

55. Clews v. Friedman, 182 Mass. 555.

56. Though the transferror has died—Culp v Mulvane (Kan.) 71 Pac. 273.

57. Culp v. Mulvane (Kan.) 71 Pac. 273.

58. Rev. St. § 2611—Mapleton Bank v. Standrod (Idaho) 71 Pac. 119.

59. South Texas Nat. Bank v. Texas & L. Lumber Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 768.

60. Ky. St. 1899, § 545—Albany Mill Co. v. Huff Bros., 24 Ky. L. R. 2037, 72 S. W. 820.

61. A bank's president signed blank certificates of the bank's stock which were left in the charge of the cashier, who fraudulently filled out one of such certificates to himself, countersigned it and pledged it as security for a loan to one without knowledge—Havens v. Bank of Tarboro, 132 N. C. 214.

62. Farmers' Bank v. Diebold Safe & Lock Co., 66 Ohio St. 367.

63. Where an order has been granted to a trustee to sell corporate stock, mandamus will not lie to compel the corporation to

On a refusal of the seller and the corporation's agents to recognize a sale and permit a transfer on the company's books, an action in equity may be brought for the joint object of preventing a disposition of the shares by the seller and to compel the corporation to make a transfer on its books, and to receive the buyer as a shareholder. In such action the seller and the corporation may be joined as defendants.[64] If the seller was a pledgee, and the action is against the pledgor and the corporation, proof of execution of the written transfer made by the pledgee must be made before it is admissible in evidence, though the validity of the transfer is controverted without either admission or denial of its existence.[65]

A purchaser of stock from a subscriber who has not received a certificate may have a mandatory injunction to secure the delivery of a certificate of the stock purchased by him from the original holder, though by statute it is provided that the transfer of corporate stock shall be by delivery of the certificate and registry of transfer.[66]

An executor may have shares of stock owned by his decedent transferred by the corporation to him as executor, and he cannot be denied by reason of by-laws giving the corporation an option to refuse transfer if the owner is indebted to the corporation, and requiring the transfer to be by instrument executed by the transferror and transferee. A refusal to transfer in such case may be regarded as a conversion and the value recovered by an action at law.[67] Before the transferee of a stock subscription can compel the issuance of certificates, he must, in case the statute provides that transfers to be valid must be entered on the company's books, show either an entry of the transfer in such manner or a duty on the part of the corporation to make such an entry.[68]

Contracts for the sale of shares.[69]—The corporation is not liable for the return of a portion of the purchase price of shares of its stock, which have been sold by their holders on rescission of the sale by the seller, though the corporate name has been signed to the contract by its secretary and vice-president who were sellers. Nor is the corporation liable for fraudulent representations by the sellers.[70]

A contract for the sale of stock in a corporation to be formed with a capital of a certain sum is not complied with by a tender of stock in a corporation organized with less capital.[71] A contract to deliver three-fifths of the capital stock of a corporation is not complied with by delivery of a less amount though it was all which the seller owned, and the contract also called for a sale of the seller's entire stock.[72] A definite contract to transfer to plaintiff's intestate a designated number of shares of stock cannot be defended against by the fact that plaintiff's intestate was connected with a stock pool as a member or trustee, or that he was an officer of the company, or that there was an over-issue of the stock.[73] Where stock transfer stock to the trustee—Terrell v. Georgia R. & Banking Co., 115 Ga. 104.

64, 65. Thornton v. Martin, 116 Ga. 115.

66. Where before full payment and receipt of stock certificate, a subscriber transfers his interest and then pays up the amount remaining due, the purchaser is entitled to mandamus to compel issuance of stock certificate to him though contrary to the direction of the seller (Code, § 844)—Scherk v. Montgomery (Miss.) 33 So. 507.

67. London, Paris & American Bank v. Aronstein (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 601.

68. Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 4261—Lacaff v. Dutch Miller Min. Co., 31 Wash. 566, 72 Pac. 112.

69. Evidence held sufficient to show a sale of stock held in trust for the seller—Merrill v. Beat (Wis.) 92 N. W. 555. See for sufficiency of complaint in an action to rescind a contract for the sale of stock on the ground of fraud—Gutheil v. Goodrich (Ind.) 66 N. E. 446.

70. Home Elec. Light & Power Co. v. Collins (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 780.

71. Faulkner v. Robinson (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 990.

72. Dady v. O'Rourke, 172 N. Y. 447.

73. Cary v. Leszynsky (Mass.) 67 N. E. 637.

is transferred in consideration of payment of an assessment and of future assessments, the seller cannot assert the illegality of the assessment as against the buyer's rights to dividends.[74] On a refusal to take shares bargained for, the seller is entitled to the purchase price, and his measure of damages is not the difference in the market value.[75]

Where an owner of stock allows it to be sold as the property of another, the proceeds may be applied to the personal debt of the seller to the purchaser, there being no evidence that the seller was under a legal or moral obligation to use the money for any specified purpose, though there was a plan that by the sale the interests of the corporation should be benefited.[76]

Where more than enough shares of corporate stock remains unsold to satisfy one claiming to be the owner of a certain number of shares, such person cannot have an injunction against the sale of other shares.[77]

The transferee of stock may have the benefit of a guarantee made by another corporation that such stock should realize a certain amount, on the affairs of the corporation by which it was issued being wound up, but where payment is made on the guarantee to the seller in good faith, action cannot be maintained against the guarantor but only against the seller.[78]

Where with other relief injunction is sought against a sale of stock, a jury trial cannot be had.[79]

Pledge or mortgage of shares.—A pledgee for value without notice is not affected by a bank's by-law prohibiting the transfer of its stock without consent of its directors in case the holder is in the bank's debt, nor is he affected by an agreement that the bank should have a lien on the stock for the holder's indebtedness. If the corporation has notice of the pledge, it cannot assert claims subsequently arising as against the pledgee, and notice is sufficient without a demand for transfer of the stock on the books.[80] The purchaser from a pledgee, of stock which has been given to the pledgor as a broker, indorsed with blank assignments and power of transfer, may hold such stock as against the original owner.[81]

Gift of shares.—Where a stockholder is in fact the owner of the entire property of the corporation and apparently issues and cancels stock certificates as he pleases, he does not by the mere fact that he places his wife's name in his stock certificates as joint tenant vest her with title as having made a valid gift, where by his subsequent dealings, it appears that he never surrendered dominion over the shares.[82]

(§ 14) F. Miscellaneous rights of stockholders. The right to dividends.—Dividends belong to the owners of stock at the time of declaration, but declared dividends do not go with the stock unless there is an understanding to such effect.[83] Where interest on stock is payable in stock, an assignee of the stock is entitled to the stock due.[84] Where the owners of the entire stock of the corporation agree that

74. Boll v. Camp (Iowa) 92 N. W. 703.

75. Reynolds v. Callender, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 610.

76. Loetscher v. Dillon (Iowa) 93 N. W. 98.

77. Quin v. Havenor (Wis.) 94 N. W. 642.

78. Bacon v. Grossmann, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 574.

79. A proceeding to set aside a contract for the sale of stock alleged to have been procured on false representations for an injunction to prevent the purchaser from disposing of such stock, and for a decree that the certificates be delivered up for cancellation, and that the corporation be directed to re-issue the stock to plaintiff, is purely equitable in nature, so that a jury trial cannot be awarded—Morrison v. Snow (Utah) 72 Pac. 924.

80. Just v. State Sav. Bank (Mich.) 94 N. W. 200.

81. Shattuck v. American Cement Co., 205 Pa. 197.

82. Bauernschmidt v. Bauernschmidt (Md.) 54 Atl. 637.

83. Groh v. Groh, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 85; Houser v. Richardson, 90 Mo. App. 134.

84. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hart County (Ky.) 75 S. W. 288.

certain dividends shall be paid, one to whom a portion of the stock is sold before distribution of the dividends cannot object to the informal manner of declaration.[85]

Where a county is a stockholder it may be estopped by the action of its sinking fund commissioners from contending that stock dividends did not stop the running of interest which the corporation was required to allow to stockholders from the time of paying for stock to the time of making the first cash dividends.[86]

Cash dividends go to the life tenant and stock dividends to the remainderman, but a cash dividend is not made a stock dividend within this rule by the fact that on the same day that it was declared, an issue of stock was authorized and the amount of the cash dividend equaled the subscription price of the additional stock to which the shareholder was entitled to subscribe.[87]

Right to inspect the books and papers of the corporation.[88]—An act conferring a limited right of inspection incident to corporate elections does not by its re-enactment in a general corporation act extend an unqualified right of inspection to stockholders.[89] A stockholder may be granted the right to inspect by-laws and resolutions, having similar effect, of a corporation, no ulterior purpose being shown or prospect of abuse of the corporation's rights.[90] The right of stockholders to examine corporate books extends to fire insurance companies, but an application by one seeking to gain control of a corporation for the purpose of wrecking it, or by a third person secretly acting for him, is properly denied.[91] The stockholder should not be granted a mandamus for the purpose of securing inspection of the books and papers except in emergency and for necessary pur-

85. Evidence held to show an agreement between the members of a family owning the entire stock of a corporation that a certain sum should be distributed as dividends —Groh v. Groh, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 85.

86. The county acquiesced in several cash payments based on the theory that interest had stopped—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hart County (Ky.) 75 S. W. 288.

87. Lyman v. Pratt, 183 Mass. 58.

(Note) When a person is entitled to the income and profits of shares of stock for life or for a term of years, under a will or gift, there is a conflict of opinion as to his right to dividends. The following summary may be given:

(1) He is not entitled to share in the profits of the corporation before a dividend is declared.

(2) He is not entitled to dividends declared before the testator's death.

(3) He is entitled to dividends declared after the testator's death, if declared out of profits earned since his death.

(4) Some courts hold that he is entitled to dividends declared after the testator's death, though declared out of profits earned and accumulated by the corporation before his death; but the rule is otherwise in several states.

(5) He is not entitled to dividends declared out of the capital, or funds representing capital.

(6) He is entitled to dividends out of profits payable in bonds or certificates of indebtedness.

(7) He is not entitled to the right to subscribe for new shares on an increase of the capital stock, nor to the proceeds of a sale of such privilege.

(8) In some states it is held that he is entitled to a stock dividend if he would be entitled to the same dividend if payable in cash, but the rule in other states is to the contrary.

(9) On his death, his personal representative is entitled to a dividend declared during his lifetime, and it has been held that he is entitled to a dividend declared after his death out of profits earned during his lifetime.

Clark & Marshall, Corporations, Vol. II, p. 1614.

88. See Discovery for proceedings against corporations and officers for the purpose of obtaining information as to corporate affairs before action is begun or for the purpose of preparing for trial.

89. A statute under the title "An act to prevent fraudulent elections in incorporated companies and to facilitate proceedings against them" remains subject to the limitation imposed by the title, though re-enacted in a revision under the title "An act concerning corporations" and though general in language, does not entitle the stockholder to an absolute right to mandamus or confer on him a greater than his common law right—State v. National Biscuit Co. (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 241.

90. In re Coats, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 567.

91. Application by a stenographer for an inspection of the books of an insurance company, alleging that he owned a fourth of the entire corporate stock, and that because of reports showing a decrease in surplus and an increase in losses, he had become alarmed as to the safety of his investments —In re Coats, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 178.

poses.[92] It should not be granted to compel the exhibition of corporate books to the executors of a stockholder where it is sought with the evident purpose of injuring the corporate business.[93] Since by examination of the officers under a subpoena the value of corporate stock may be determined for the purposes of estimating a transfer tax, mandamus will not lie to compel an exhibition of the corporate books to the executors.[94] Under the New Jersey corporation act, one seeking mandamus for the examination of stock and transfer books must show that his right grows out of his position as a stockholder.[95]

An order granting an inspection should be limited as to the place and duration of the investigation.[96] An order to produce books and papers of a corporation before a referee does not authorize an inspection if it is granted in connection with an order to the secretary to appear for examination, but authorizes simply the production for the purposes of examination to enable the secretary to refresh his memory, and such order need not comply with statutory provisions for the inspection of corporate books.[97]

Remote and speculative damages cannot be recovered for a refusal of the president to permit an inspection of the corporate books by a stockholder, if the president has not acted in bad faith.[98]

Penalties for refusal of inspection.—A corporation does not incur three penalties for three refusals to permit inspection of the books, where the party seeking to recover desired to use the books for one occasion but repeated his request for two or three consecutive days, and made the demand three times, twice of the secretary and once of the president.[99]

Contracts and conveyances between a corporation and its stockholders.—If the stock of a corporation has been deposited with one of its officers to be used for the interests of the corporation, he may transfer part of it to a stockholder as a reimbursement for services and loss in the interest of the corporation.[1] Where it is desired to rescind a sale of stock purchased by the corporation, the corporation cannot tender back the stock after it has incumbered its property but must pay the value of the stock at the time of transfer.[2] After a transfer of stock to the corporation for use as general assets, the transferring stockholders cannot maintain action for conversion of the stock by other stockholders since they no longer have an individual right to any specific shares.[3]

Stockholders are not estopped as against a subsequent mortgagee with notice to assert claims on property which they have sold the corporation, in the absence of a showing of actual consent to the mortgage or of presence at the meeting when it was authorized.[4]

92. Not granted in favor of a stockholder owning 6% of the capital stock, for the purpose of finding out if the corporation had been properly managed, where considerable loss would result from the examination, and transactions questioned by the stockholder were explained by the directors—In re Colwell, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 615. A stockholder is not entitled to mandamus compelling it to submit its books and papers to his inspection, merely that he may ascertain the names and residence of the stockholders to consult with them regarding the management of the company—In re Latimer, 75 App. Div. 522, 12 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 9.

93. In re Kennedy, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 188.

94. Subpoena would issue from the public treasurer—In re Kennedy, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 188.

95. Gen. Corp. Act, § 33—State v. National Biscuit Co. (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 241.

96. In re Coats, 73 App. Div. (N. Y.) 178.

97. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 803-809, 872, subd. 7—Mauthey v. Wyoming County Co-Op. Fire Ins. Co., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 579.

98. Bourdette v. Sieward, 107 La. 258.

99. Action to recover penalty under Stock Corporation Law, laws 1892, p. 1840, c. 688, § 53—Cox v. Paul, 175 N. Y. 328.

1. Playa de Oro Min. Co. v. Gage, 172 N. Y. 630.

2. Oliver v. Rahway Ice Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 460.

3. Crosby v. Stratton (Colo. App.) 68 Pac. 130.

Actions by stockholders to enforce individual rights.—The mere fact that persons are stockholders will not permit them to intervene in a suit against the corporation unless on a well defined ground to defend their own interests.[5] A plaintiff may establish his rights as a stockholder under a complaint which shows that he is a member of the corporation defendant, and a stockholder, and that his membership is denied, though the main purpose of the complaint is for an injunction. It is sufficient to allege that plaintiff owns a share of the stock without saying the manner in which it was received or acquired.[6]

Remedies of stockholders for injuries to the corporation.—Equity has power to award an injunction in favor of a stockholder and at the same time compel an accounting from the directors on the theory of gross negligence, wrong doing, or waste,[7] though a minority stockholder cannot object to an exercise by the majority of their legal powers in the absence of fraud or attempt to exceed legal authority,[8] but may have equitable relief against management of the corporation sacrificing his interest;[9] hence, minority stockholders cannot object to an act of the majority, which is within their powers ratifying a resolution directing the president and secretary to make a sale of the good will and property of the corporation, providing that such acts were clear of fraud and with the intention in good faith to wind up the affairs of the corporation. A general charge of conspiracy to stifle competition in trade will not warrant relief, the sale itself being valid, a subsequent intention to act in restraint of trade being collateral, and a dissenting stockholder cannot have a reconveyance decreed and a further decree that the directors and the grantee company pay all damages sustained, there being no actual fraud.[10] They cannot secure the annulment of a lease of corporate property approved by the majority stockholders, without showing of fraud or injury to the welfare of the corporation,[11] or have the intervention of equity to restrain the managing directors in expenditures unless not shown to be ultra vires or in the pursuance of a fraudulent scheme.[12]

A majority stockholder does not occupy a trust relation toward minority stockholders if he does not actually control the affairs of the corporation to their prejudice, and may purchase the corporate property at a judicial sale, in the absence of actual fraud,[13] but where a controlling interest in a corporation is acquired by a promise to pay stockholders a certain sum per annum on each share, a proposition by a succeeding corporation which acquires such controlling inter-

4. Martin v. Eagle Develop. Co., 41 Or. 448, 69 Pac. 216.

5. Gunderson v. Illinois T. & S. Bank, 100 Ill. App. 461.

6. Gowdy Gas Well, Oil & Mineral Water Co. v. Patterson, 29 Ind. App. 261.

7. Moneuse v. Riley, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 110.

8. Metcalf v. American School Furniture Co., 122 Fed. 115; Coss v. Herring, 24 Ohio Circ. R. 36.

9. As where the corporation occupies the same offices with the competing corporation and employs the same agents, the two corporations being controlled by the same parties—Jacobus v. American Mineral Water Mach. Co., 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 371. Showing held sufficient to oust control of directors where a portion of the assets of the corporation were sold at a loss of over two million dollars and there was no action to set the sale aside, though there were unquestionable grounds therefor under the laws of the state where it was made—Watkins v. North American Land & Timber Co., 107 La. 107. The mere fact that a director acts for two corporations in a transaction, does not of itself allow a stockholder an injunction, though it may cast the burden of showing good faith on the directors—Robotham v. Prudential Ins. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 842. Evidence held insufficient to show a misappropriation of capital stock of a corporation by other corporations—Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Dodd, 24 Ky. L. R. 2057, 72 S. W. 822.

10. Metcalf v. American School Furniture Co., 122 Fed. 115.

11. Dickinson v. Consolidated Traction Co. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 871. Facts held not to show that the price charged by a corporation for the use of its plant by another corporation which held the majority of its stock was unfair or unreasonable—Cannon v. Brush Elec. Co., 96 Md. 446.

12. Taylor v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Fed. 147.

13. Rothchild v. Memphis & C. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 476.

est, to vote it to rescind the agreement, may be restrained on the suit of a minority stockholder.[14] The stockholder who joins with other stockholders in the sale of the entire stock and property of the corporation may be required to account to other stockholders for an additional sum which he obtained through a secret arrangement with the purchaser, or if the sum may be definitely determined without an accounting, a stockholder may sue in assumpsit to recover his share as money had and received to his use.[15] An action for damages from a conspiracy of majority holders to depreciate the value of the stock and sacrifice the property may be maintained for the injury by the corporation, its receiver or any stockholder, after proper demand, in behalf of the corporation and for its benefit. The damages recoverable are the full value of the property and franchises prior to the acts producing insolvency less the sum which the property brought on foreclosure sale.[16]

Laches.—The stockholder must act promptly on discovery of the fraud.[17]

Who may assert rights.—In order that a stockholder may intervene as such in foreclosure proceedings, he must clearly show his status as a stockholder.[18]

Unless such mismanagement has affected his interests, one who becomes a stockholder has no right of action for prior mismanagement, and has no right of action if he acquire his interest through the wrongdoer's mismanagement.[19]

One whose stock has been sold under an assessment is not entitled to bring an action as a stockholder based on the negligence of the directors in necessitating such an assessment, since the cause of action exists in favor of the corporation for the misconduct of the directors and may be prosecuted only by the stockholder in case of the refusal of the corporation or where the wrongdoers are in control.[20]

Where right of action is solely in corporation.—A secret profit derived from the directors upon a sale of the property of the corporation does not allow a dissenting stockholder to rescind the sale in equity, the remedy being an accounting between the directors and the corporation. The same is true of an objection to the transfer on the ground of want of consideration.[21] A minority stockholder is not entitled to bring an action for damages for a conspiracy to depreciate the value of the stock and sacrifice the property of the corporation, since the cause of action therefor accrues to the corporation.[22]

14. On the ground of fraud against a minority stockholder and as showing that the majority stockholders were opposed to the interests of the corporation—McLeary v. Erie Telegraph & Telephone Co., 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 3.

15. Synnott v. Cummings, 116 Fed. 40.

16. Niles v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. (N. Y.) 68 N. E. 142.

17. Delay for 11 years before seeking to enforce a stockholder's rights is fatal—Atlantic Trust Co. v. New York City Suburban Water Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 354.

18. Proof that stock had been issued petitioner but that it had been transferred as collateral security and in subsequent transactions one of the certificates had passed into the hands of a third person who claimed to be the lawful holder and the whereabouts of the other was undisclosed, is insufficient, though it is asserted that the certificates had been unlawfully diverted by the assignee—Atlantic Trust Co. v. New York City Suburban Water Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 354.

19. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber (Neb.) 93 N. W. 1024. An allegation that before any of the alleged or pretended sales or transfers of property referred to, plaintiff owned a large amount of the stock of a corporation, is a sufficient allegation that plaintiff's interest was acquired before the fraudulent transaction—Tevis v. Hammersmith (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 912.

20. Hanna v. People's Nat. Bank, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 224.

21. An averment in a bill charging receipt of secret profits which appears to be merely an act of the directors in furtherance of an unlawful conspiracy and not the basis for an accounting between the directors and the corporation, will not sustain a bill primarily brought for a rescission as entitling complainant to an accounting—Metcalf v. American School Furniture Co., 122 Fed. 115.

22. Conspiracy was alleged to divert and reduce the earnings of a railroad so that it should be unable to pay the interest on its bonds and a foreclosure sale justified—Niles v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. (N. Y.) 68 N. E. 142.

Procedure.—Proceedings to enjoin directors from a breach of trust may be brought by a nonresident stockholder in a federal court, though the stockholders who are residents of the state of incorporation defray part of the expenses, and he is acting in harmony with them.[23] Where it is sought to set aside a sale by the directors because of lesion against moiety, it need not be alleged that there was a purchaser ready at the greater value, but it is merely necessary to set out the difference between the price and the value.[24] Where a stockholder seeks to compel an accounting by the president of a corporation as to funds obtained by him, the decree should not direct that payment should be made to the stockholder in proportion to his holdings of the amount of capital stock.[25]

Necessity of seeking corporate action.—An action by a stockholder for the benefit of the corporation cannot be maintained without a demand on and refusal of the board of directors to bring the suit, unless it is shown that such demand would have been useless.[26] The mere fact that a corporation has been enjoined to take an action does not authorize a proceeding by a stockholder.[27] A shareholder cannot bring an action against the directors for mismanagement after the company is in the hands of a receiver without showing an application to the receiver or to the board of directors for the institution of such a proceeding.[28]

Equity rule 94 of the Federal courts, requiring the effort of a stockholder suing in his own right, to obtain action by the directors or stockholders of the corporation, to be set out with particularity in the petition, makes such efforts jurisdictional unless there is an allegation and proof that they would have been futile, and if the question comes up on final hearing, the truth of the allegations must be determined from the evidence.[29] A mere allegation of a friendly applica-

23. Collusion is shown in the sense of equity rule 94, it appearing that the controlling majority in the corporation is opposed to the object sought by the bill, and demand on the directors for action to that end would be useless—New Albany Waterworks v. Louisville Banking Co. (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 776.

24. Watkins v. North American Land & Timber Co., 107 La. 107.

25. Chicago Macaroni Mfg. Co. v. Boggiano, 202 Ill. 312.

26. Suit by stockholders to set aside a judgment on a note given by the directors to a director—Ide v. Bascomb (Colo. App.) 72 Pac. 62. Complaint held to show sufficient facts excusing an attempt to obtain action through the corporation in a proceeding to enjoin a disposition of corporate property—Tevis v. Hammersmith (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 79. A complaint in an action against the officers and directors of a corporation to secure an accounting held to show that a demand on the corporation to bring the action would have been useless—Miller v. Barlow, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 331. Equity Rule 94—Dickinson v. Consolidated Traction Co., 114 Fed. 232. Complaint by minority stockholders seeking the appointment of a receiver and winding up of the corporation, held to sufficiently charge gross negligence in the management of the business on the part of the corporate directors and a majority of the stockholders and also that a request of the directors to remedy the wrongs would be futile—Klugh v. Coronaca Mill Co. (S. C.) 44 S. E. 566. In order that a stockholder may enjoin the corporation from paying taxes, it must be shown that he has applied to the president and treasurer of the corporation to take steps to render unnecessary such payment—Stewart v. Washington & A. S. S. Co., 187 U. S. 466. An averment that a stockholder addressed a letter to the directors of the corporation requesting them to call a meeting of the directors and stockholders for the purpose of redeeming corporate property which had been on foreclosure, in the absence of a showing that such letter ever reached the directors, or that it contained anything calling the directors' attention to the facts on which relief was sought, does not show a sufficient demand for corporate action to allow a bill by minority stockholders to have a foreclosure sale set aside—Johns v. McLester (Ala.) 34 So. 174.

27. A stockholder cannot enjoin a sale under a mortgage, though the corporation has been enjoined from preventing such sale on the mere ground that the mortgage is ultra vires, where there is no showing of collusion between the directors and the plaintiff in the injunction suit against the corporation or refusal of the directors to dissolve the injunction—Smith v. Bulkley (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 958.

28. Coble v. Beall, 130 N. C. 533.

29. A bill by minority stockholders attacking the validity of a purchase by the managing officers of a corporation of the property owned by them, and making the former owners of the property defendants, is within the operation of Equity Rule 94—Worth Mfg. Co. v. Bingham (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 785. As is an action by a minority stockholder in the federal court to set aside a lease executed by the directors and ap-tion to the directors not to proceed with an act, together with an unsubstantiated allegation that the directors own the majority of the stock, is not sufficient to excuse the allegations required by the rule or to support them if made.[30] A demand on the resident managing agent is not sufficient to comply with the rule, mere distance of the directors' residence from that of the plaintiff being relied on as an excuse for failure to attempt to secure action by the corporation or directors.[31]

Where the directors have refused to protect the interests of the corporation in litigation, intervention of the shareholders for such purpose may be allowed in the discretion of the trial court.[32]

Where a majority of the directors are defendants, they need not be asked to sue in the name of the corporation.[33] There is a sufficient showing to entitle minority stockholders to sue to enforce a contract with another corporation, where it is alleged that the majority stockholders, who are the same in both corporations, as were also the officers and directors, would not sue although requested, and if a third corporation is involved under the same contract and would be liable on the same conditions, the minority stockholders may maintain suit against it, also, though the officers and directors mentioned are not implicated.[34] The fact that one of the directors was a business associate of defendant and that another was an employe of another defendant, there being twelve directors, does not do away with the necessity of a demand for action by them.[35]

Appointment of receiver.—A majority of the stockholders may secure a receiver.[36] A minority may have a receiver only in an extreme case.[37] The right to appointment is a question for the court. It should not be denied because it will entail great cost and expense.[38] A receiver will be appointed only in case of actual wrong, injustice, and injury in the management of the business.[39] The proved by the majority of the stockholders at a duly called meeting, whether the invalidity of the lease is alleged to be on the ground of fraud or ultra vires—Dickinson v. Consolidated Traction Co., 114 Fed. 232.

30. Suit to set aside a lease by the directors of a corporation as ultra vires, detrimental to the stockholder's interests and the result of fraud and conspiracy of the directors—Dickinson v. Consolidated Traction Co., 114 Fed. 232.

31. Stewart v. Washington & A. S. S. Co., 187 U. S. 466.

32. Gunderson v. Illinois T. & S. Bank, 100 Ill. App. 461.

33. Appleton v. American Malting Co. (N. J. Sup.) 54 Atl. 454.

34. Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Dodd, 24 Ky. L. R. 2057, 72 S. W. 822.

35. Siegman v. Maloney (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 405.

36. Posner v. Southern Exhaust & Blow Pipe Co., 109 La. 658.

37. Continental Nat. Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Miller (Fla.) 33 So. 404. On a mere question of mismanagement, a receiver will not be appointed at the instance of the holders of a small minority of the stock—Callaway v. Powhatan Imp. Co., 95 Md. 177.

38. Davies v. Monroe Water Works & Light Co., 107 La. 145.

39. Gross mismanagement of officers and directors is ground—Posner v. Southern Exhaust & Blow Pipe Co., 109 La. 658. Rights of stockholders and creditors being injured by mismanagement or waste of the corporate property by the directors is ground—Davies v. Monroe Water Works & Light Co., 107 La. 145. A receiver and an injunction should not be granted at the suit of a minority stockholder on the ground of mismanagement and insolvency where it appears that the losses were due to general business conditions, that under the same management it had previously been prosperous, its property was worth double its liabilities, and the creditors and majority stockholders oppose the appointment and also that an action which was alleged to have been fraudulent was pursuant to an unanimous vote of the stockholders present at a called meeting—Worth Mfg. Co. v. Bingham (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 785. Complaint seeking a receiver of a telephone company on the ground of mismanagement held sufficient—Fernald v. Spokane & British Columbia Telephone & Telegraph Co., 31 Wash. 672, 72 Pac. 462. Receivers of an insurance company may be appointed without request of the managers at the instance of a stockholder, where it has fraudulently ceased doing business, has no income, and is paying large salaries—Treat v. Pennsylvania Mut. Life Ins. Co., 203 Pa. 21. Violation of the charter rights of minority share-holders by the majority is ground—Davies v. Monroe Water Works & Light Co., 107 La. 145. A receiver should not be appointed on a bill by a minority stockholder alleging that he has been by fraudulent misrepresentations induced to vote in favor of a contract greatly in favor of the majority stockholders and detrimental to the corporation—Devine v. Frankford Steel & Forging Co., 205 Pa. 114.

creation and investment of a surplus fund is not ground for the appointment of a receiver, if applicant has not made an objection and effort to secure the distribution of the funds before suit, or if he has acquiesced in the investment.[40]

Insolvency alone without fraud or gross mismanagement will not authorize the appointment of a receiver at the instance of a minority stockholder.[41] A receiver cannot be appointed where it appears that the corporation is transacting a successful business, and plaintiff's rights as a stockholder are in dispute.[42] Resignation of the directors pending an action does not authorize the appointment of a receiver under a statutory provision allowing such appointment in an action by a stockholder to preserve the corporate assets, there being no officer with power to hold such assets.[43]

If a complaint by a stockholder, after alleging a fraudulent disposition of the corporate property, prays judgment for possession of the property or for its value and for an accounting, a demurrer presents no question as to the right to appoint a receiver.[44]

§ 15. Management of corporations. A. Control of a corporation by the stockholders or members; power of the majority.—The stockholders may agree in the by-laws that a majority action of the shareholders shall be binding on the corporation and on them.[45] The majority stockholders have no power to directly overrule or control the action of a majority of the board of directors acting within the discretionary powers entrusted to them as agents of the corporation; such control must be exercised by the methods pointed out by the by-laws or charter of the statute under which it is organized.[46]

(§ 15) B. Dealings between a corporation and its stockholders.—The corporate officers must not show partiality in conferring benefits on certain shareholders to the prejudice of the shareholders in general or of the corporation.[47] An agreement between the corporation and a large stockholder to compensate him for certain services in placing the corporation on a paying basis is valid, as is a vote in fulfillment thereof to confer on him five per cent of such earnings as in the future should become applicable to the payment of dividends.[48]

(§ 15) C. By-laws.—The members in their constitutent character at a general meeting of the corporation should enact the by-laws in the absence of charter provisions to the contrary.[49] Directors cannot by by-law be given the exclusive power to alter or amend the by-laws though it may be provided that alterations and amendments shall be proposed to and sanctioned by two-thirds' vote of the board.[50] The by-laws of a corporation duly enacted and containing no provisions contrary to the charter or the laws of the land are binding on its members and presumed to be known to them,[51] but are not binding on third persons who have no notice thereof.[52]

40. Posner v. Southern Exhaust & Blow Pipe Co., 109 La. 658.

41. Worth Mfg. Co. v. Bingham (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 785.

42. Comp. Laws, § 5015, making the grounds for an appointment of a receiver insolvency, or immediate danger thereof, dissolution, or forfeiture of corporate rights—Kelly v. Fargo Mercantile Co. (S. D.) 91 N. W. 350.

43. Code Civ. Proc. § 1810, subd. 3—Zeltner v. Henry Zeltner Brew. Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 136.

44. Tevis v. Hammersmith (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 912.

45. Hodge v. United States Steel Corp. (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 1.

46. Gold Bluff Mining & Lumber Corp. v. Whitlock (Conn.) 55 Atl. 174.

47. Davies v. Monroe Waterworks & Light Co., 107 La. 145.

48. Dupignac v. Burnstrom, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 105.

49, 50. Alters v. Journeymen Bricklayers Protective Ass'n, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 272.

51. Purdy v. Bankers' Life Ass'n (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 486.

52. A lender is not affected by a by-law requiring corporate notes to be countersigned by the treasurer and approved by two members of the executive committee—Lyn-

A book containing printed by-laws which the president of a corporation testifies is the only evidence of the by-laws thereof, there being no set of by-laws copied into the minutes of the corporation, which he has ever discovered on examination, may be admitted in evidence as showing the by-laws, where such books have been used and recognized generally by the members.[53]

Resolutions of a corporation, not incorporated in the by-laws, may be revocable at any time.[54]

(§ 15) D. Corporate meetings and elections. Notice.—Defects in notices of meetings are waived by presence or representation of stockholders thereat,[55] such as insufficient particularity as to the business to be transacted.[56] The same rule applies to directors' meetings.[57]

Evidence as to meetings.—The proceedings of a stockholders' meeting may be shown by the evidence of a witness who was present.[58]

Elections.—A majority of the corporation's stock is necessary to an election in the absence of other provision.[59] A meeting for the election of officers cannot be adjourned by a declaration of one of the officers.[60] Failure to file a report of election as required by statute justifies the conclusion that no election has been made.[61] Production of the list of stockholders may be essential to a valid election.[62]

Where such inquiry is essential to a proceeding before it, the court may inquire into the validity of an election of corporate officers and directors.[63] On a bill for an accounting and to enjoin one acting as president and director from exercising powers as such, the right of defendant to the office may be determined by a court of equity, bill being brought by the stockholder on behalf of the corporation.[64]

(§ 15) E. The right to vote.—Unless otherwise provided by the organic law of the corporation, the right of a stockholder to vote on his stock at all meetings of the shareholders is a right inherent to the ownership of shares and as such is a property right.[65] The holder of stock may vote it before he has paid it in full.[66]

don Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 54 Atl. 191.

53. Star Loan Ass'n v. Moore (Del. Super.) 55 Atl. 946.

54. Resolution that only citizens may be trustees—Sorrentino v. Ciletti, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 507.

55. Tompkins v. Sperry, Jones & Co., 96 Md. 560.

56. Synnott v. Cumberland Bldg. Loan Ass'n (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 379. Insufficient particularity in a call for a special meeting, in stating the purpose to be to amend the by-laws by changing the date of the annual meeting, is not a sufficient ground for an injunction against stockholders voting to elect additional directors before the next annual meeting or making any change in the by-laws without having given legal notice to the stockholders, since an insufficiency of notice would not prevent the making of the proposed change, all the stockholders being present and voting, and since a proper notice of another meeting may be given after the hearing on injunction proceedings. Gen. St. 1902, § 3366—Gold Bluff Mining & Lumber Corp. v. Whitlock (Conn.) 55 Atl. 174.

57. Where the directors are all present at a meeting at which a mortgage is authorized, such presence obviates the necessity of a previous notice, though the president is absent but the mortgage is executed by him—Wolf & Bro. v. Erwin & Wood Co. (Ark.) 75 S. W. 722.

58. Especially where the minute book is lost—Blanton v. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co., 120 Fed. 318.

59. Haskell v. Read (Neb.) 93 N. W. 997.

60. The validity of an election cannot be affected in such manner—Chicago Macaroni Mfg. Co. v. Boggiano, 202 Ill. 312.

61. Provision for report annually within 30 days after election. P. L. 1896, c. 185, §§ 43, 12—Appleton v. American Malting Co. (N. J. L.) 54 Atl. 454.

62. A new election of directors will be ordered, where the production of the books showing the names of stockholders was required by petitioners, but defendant directors who were re-elected did not understand that their production was insisted on until after the election was held. (Proceedings under Corporation Act, § 42. P. L. 1896, p. 291) —In re Jersey City Paper Co. (N. J. L.) 55 Atl. 280.

63. Haskell v. Read (Neb.) 93 N. W. 997.

64. Chicago Macaroni Mfg. Co. v. Boggiano, 202 Ill. 312.

65. Talbot J. Taylor & Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Fed. 147.

66. Haskell v. Read (Neb.) 93 N. W. 997.

Directors who own stock may vote at stockholders' meetings.[67] A corporation cannot make arrangements for elections of officers in such manner as to deprive stockholders of votes for each share of stock held by them.[68] A stockholder may vote on measures in which he has personal interests adverse to other stockholders, since he is not to be regarded as a trustee for the other stockholders, so a corporation holding the common stock of another corporation may vote it in favor of dissolution of such corporation though it has guaranteed payment of dividends on the preferred stock of such corporation so long as it should exist.[69]

Injunction against voting of stock.—In order that the right of shareholders to vote be denied, it must be on the ground that shares have been illegally issued or that the holder is incapacitated by law, public policy will be offended or that property rights of minority holders will be thereby so seriously placed in jeopardy as to justify a court of equity in allowing the minority to be placed in control.[70] Where there is an attempt to vote shares issued in excess of the authorized capital stock, it may be enjoined by a stockholder, and the shares, if issued without consideration, canceled.[71] A corporation which owns the stock of another corporation is a necessary party to a proceeding for an injunction to prevent the voting of the shares of stock held by it at an election for directors.[72]

Where the stock stands in the name of an individual, though beneficially owned by a corporation, the fact that such individual files an affidavit in the case does not amount to an appearance in behalf of the beneficial owner, the affidavit being filed apparently and presumably at the instance of defendant.[73] A stockholder is not made a party by representation by the fact that the corporation is a party to a suit to enjoin the voting of the stock held by him for the election of directors, though such stockholder is a corporation whose directors and officers constitute a majority of the directors and officers of both companies.[74] The proceeding will not be restrained in order to allow the owner of the stock to be impleaded in a forum having jurisdiction over it, since to continue the stay order for such purpose would be in effect to dispose of the litigation.[75]

Cumulative voting.—Where by statute cumulative voting of stock is authorized, the court cannot control the manner in which the stockholder causes his shares to be voted or examine his motives.[76] Where a corporation organized before a statute preventing cumulative voting has acquired benefits thereunder by obtaining new franchises, its members may vote cumulatively for directors.[77]

Pledged stock.—Where stock has been pledged, the pledgor retains the right to vote until foreclosure, as a general rule, and a voting of pledged shares by the pledgee against the rights of the pledgor may be enjoined, though in conducting the election, the officers of the corporation may rely on the corporate books.[78]

Stock held by trustee.—Where stock of a railroad has been deposited with a trustee and the depositor reserves the right to vote it, the depositor may secure a proxy from the trustee to vote the stock for a merger, though in case the merger

67. Hodge v. United States Steel Corp. (N. J. L.) 54 Atl. 1.

68. Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 3425—State ex rel. Ross v. Anderson (Ind. App.) 67 N. E. 207.

69. Windmuller v. Standard Distilling & Distributing Co., 114 Fed. 491.

70. Talbot J. Taylor & Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Fed. 147.

71. Haskell v. Read (Neb.) 93 N. W. 997.

72, 73. Talbot J. Taylor & Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Fed. 147.

74. Talbot J. Taylor & Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Fed. 147.

75. Talbot J. Taylor & Co. v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Fed. 147.

76. 1 Starr & C. Ann. Sts. 1896, p. 990, c. 32, § 3—Chicago Macaroni Mfg. Co. v. Boggiano, 202 Ill. 312.

77. Literary institute incorporated before the right conferred by constitution 1874, art. 16, § 4—Commonwealth v. Flannery, 203 Pa. 28.

78. Haskell v. Read (Neb.) 93 N. W. 997.

is effected, the trustee will receive back not the original stock, but stock in the consolidated company.[79]

Proxies.—Where before attempting to repudiate the action of a proxy a stockholder allows a year to elapse, his laches prevents him from relief.[80]

Voting trusts.—The establishment of a voting trust is analogous to the giving of proxies. It is, under the law of New Jersey, prima facie unlawful but may be rendered lawful by the circumstances. An arrangement, however, by which majority stockholders exclude themselves irrevocably from the management of the corporation for a fixed period is against public policy and may be abrogated by the other stockholders, who are entitled to the right to have the individual judgment of all the stockholders exercised.[81] If consent to a trust agreement is procured in such a manner as to deprive those entering into it of an opportunity for deliberation and by means of a threatened forfeiture of all rights, it is to be construed strongly against the donees of the power and such donees cannot assert that a deed poll evidencing the terms of the trust has become binding on the stockholders through acquiescence, where such donees have made no expenditures or entered into obligations entailing a loss on them should the trust be abrogated, nor can such acquiescence be asserted as against transferees of the stockholders.[82] In case the trust power makes no provision for the conduct of the trustee, he will be bound to vote in accordance with the expressed wishes of the cestui que trust.[83]

(§ 15) F. Appointment and election of officers.—Though the law provides that trustees of a corporation must be stockholders, three incorporators who are the only stockholders cannot be presumed to be the trustees.[84]

Until judicial determination of a dispute as to the right to occupy an office, the incumbent will not be dispossessed, if he is in possession and performing the duties under a bona fide claim of right.[85]

Tenure of officers.—Directors hold over until the election and qualification of successors,[86] but where, for the sake of perpetuating themselves in office, the directors and officers of a corporation refuse to give notice of a stockholders' meeting and secure an injunction against the holding of a meeting by the stockholders, the stockholders may on a cross bill secure an order for an election to be had at a stockholders' meeting held under the control of a master in chancery appointed for such purpose.[87] Where annual elections are required by statute, the articles of incorporation cannot provide for indeterminate terms of office.[88] Where the stock-

79. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. for Ins. on Lives & Granting Annuities, 205 Pa. 219.

80. A stockholder must exercise the most active diligence in repudiating the act of his proxy—Synnott v. Cumberland Bldg. Loan Ass'n (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 379.

81. In the case of a corporation composed of American and English stockholders, the American stockholders of which have been pledged that they shall stand on an equal footing with the foreign stockholders and whose directors are Americans, the American stockholders may object to a voting trust formed by the foreign stockholders which confers on the trustees the power of voting the stock for fifty years, such power being irrevocable save by vote of three-fourths of the foreign stock, thus allowing the trustees by the control of one-seventh of the entire stock to vote three-fifths thereof and depriving the American directors and stockholders of the benefit of the judgment of about one-half of the stockholders of the corporation—Warren v. Pim (N. J. Eq.) 55 Atl. 66.

82. Warren v. Pim (N. J. Eq.) 55 Atl. 66.

83. The donees are not authorized to make an arrangement whereby their powers will become irrevocable and not subject to control for a term of fifty years—Warren v. Pim (N. J. Eq.) 55 Atl. 66.

84. Grand Rapids School Furniture Co. v. Grand Hotel & Opera House Co. (Wyo.) 72 Pac. 687.

85. Standard Gold Min. Co. v. Byers, 31 Wash. 100, 71 Pac. 766.

86. Hatch v. Mining Co., 25 Utah, 405, 71 Pac. 865.

87. Bartlett v. Gates, 118 Fed. 66; Gates v. Bartlett, Id.

88. Under Burns Rev. St. §§ 3425, 5051, 5054, 5055, a corporation cannot by its articles provide that certain persons shall act as directors, until they are incapacitated, resign or die, and that a certain person shall holders may by by-laws fix the time when directors shall be annually chosen, may alter or repeal by-laws previously adopted, and may appoint more than three directors, the stockholders may, at a special meeting, amend the by-laws so as to increase the number of directors from three to five, and on the adoption of such amendment have the additional directors immediately appointed, and such an action does not infringe the statutory requirement that directors shall be chosen annually, nor is the choice the filling of a vacancy resting in the power of the directors.[89]

Resignation and removal.—Acceptance of an officer's resignation is not essential to give it effect.[90] One who after his election as trustee resigns cannot be declared a trustee.[91] When the resignation of a corporation's president is demanded, he is entitled to insist that his stock be purchased.[92] There is a presumption that a member and officer has knowledge that under the by-laws of the corporation the board of directors may discharge an officer for cause, and in an action by a vice-president for his salary, he cannot secure a review of the action of the board of directors in discharging him for cause.[93]

(§ 15) G. Salary or other compensation of officers.—A contract to pay a director or officer of a corporation will not be implied as against the corporation.[94] For ordinary services an officer is not entitled to compensation unless so provided by the board of directors, though he may recover for services not incidental to the office,[95] as where performed at the request of other officers,[96] so on an action on a contract of employment as vice-president, plaintiff may show that he was intended to perform additional services.[97] An officer cannot have compensation for extra services after he has been notified not to render them.[98] It is not in the power of directors to fix their own salaries, and in case of an attempt to do so they can be allowed only the true value of their services, which they must establish.[99] A resolution increasing an officer's salary carried only with the aid of his vote is invalid, so if the president takes part in the proceedings and his vote is essential, a larger salary or bonus in addition to salary cannot be voted to him.[1] A salary illegally paid a director or officer, is to be treated as a fund from which a dividend may be declared.[2] If the officer waive a salary, he cannot afterward claim it on the ground that another officer has violated a similar agreement.[3] Voluntary acceptance of a sum as salary for several years may prevent the claim of a greater sum as due for such period.[4] One incorporator may recover for his services, though the incor-be vice-president and bookkeeper until the happening of the same contingencies or until she ceases to be a stockholder—State ex rel. Ross v. Anderson (Ind. App.) 67 N. E. 207.

89. Gen. St. 1902, § 3366—Gold Bluff Mining & Lumber Corp. v. Whitlock (Conn.) 55 Atl. 174.

90. Zeltner v. Henry Zeltner Brewing Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 136.

91. Sorrentino v. Ciletti, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 507.

92. Joseph v. Raff, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 47.

93. Discharge on account of having disposed of all his stock—Selley v. American Lubricator Co. (Iowa) 93 N. W. 590.

94. Alston Mfg. Co. v. Squair, 105 Ill. App. 238.

95. Chicago Macaroni Mfg. Co. v. Boggiano, 202 Ill. 312. President not entitled. Code 1899, c. 53, § 53—Maxon's Adm'x v. Maxon-Miller Co. (W. Va.) 44 S. E. 131. Evidence held insufficient to show an implied promise to pay vice-president of an insurance company for services outside of his regular duties—Stout v. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co., 81 N. Y. Supp. 708.

96. Baines v. Coos Bay Nav. Co., 41 Or. 135, 68 Pac. 397.

97. The by-laws provided that the board of directors might fix the compensation for its officers and employes' services—Selley v. American Lubricator Co. (Iowa) 93 N. W. 590.

98. Chicago Macaroni Mfg. Co. v. Boggiano, 202 Ill. 312.

99. Facts held insufficient to warrant a salary of $96 a week in addition to a salary of $5,000 a year to the manager of a wall paper concern and $5,000 a year to the president, vice-president and secretary of the same—Davis v. Thomas A. Davis Co., 63 N. J. Eq. 572.

1, 2. Adams v. Burke, 102 Ill. App. 148.

3. Ryan v. Pacific Axle Co., 136 Cal. xx., 68 Pac. 498.

4. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber (Neb.) 93 N. W. 1024.

porators have entered into a mutual agreement whereby an unissued portion of the company's stock should be divided among them, in consideration of their respective services to each other;[5] but where two persons equally interested in the stock of a corporation, and holding its entire stock, devote their entire time to business, neither is entitled to compensation, each withdrawing equal sums.[6]

Where an officer is to give his individual attention to the business of the company, he cannot recover salary during a time when, by illness, he is prevented from performing his duties.[7] A business man who undertakes to make the affairs of a corporation his business and to give it his full time does not absolutely exclude himself from everything else.[8]

Officers who do not live at the principal office of the corporation are not entitled to traveling expenses.[9]

Where an officer is acting as officer of a corporation and also as a trustee for its creditors and the funds of the corporation and of the trust are mingled with consent of those interested, he may apply the common fund to the payment of his salaries in both capacities.[10]

(§ 15) H. How directors must act; directors' meetings.—Directors cannot act by proxy.[11] A directors' meeting at which but one director is present who votes the proxy of another director and his own vote will not warrant the authorization of the executor of a trust deed where such authorization must be at a regular meeting and by a majority of the directors.[12]

Where the entire board of directors act, though informally, it cannot be contended that they acted merely as individuals,[13] so if there is assent of all the directors, the corporation may execute a written contract without a formal vote or written entry.[14]

A directors' meeting is not regularly called where there is no notice to or effort to notify one of the directors.[15]

An action by a board of directors cannot be shown by a declaration of the president nor will such a declaration made at a meeting of the corporate trustees show an estoppel as against the corporation.[16]

(§ 15) I. Power of corporations to act through stockholders.—Two stockholders who have actual management of affairs of corporation may, with the ratification of the corporation, make a valid compromise of a claim.[17]

(§ 15) J. Powers of the directors or trustees.—In the absence of express authority and such a course of dealing as clearly implies authority to do the controverted act, the corporation can be bound only by its board of directors. The power of making or refusing to make contracts on behalf of the corporation rests prima facie in the board of directors.[18] The resignation of a corporation's president

5. Wiltbank v. Automatic Amusement Mach. Co. (N. J. L.) 54 Atl. 558.

6. Chicago Macaroni Mfg. Co. v. Boggiano, 202 Ill. 312.

7. Raley v. Victor Co., 86 Minn. 438.

8. Acts of a corporate president in regard to private investments in acting as administrator of a relative's estate and on the board of directors of a bank held not to support a counterclaim against his action for salary—Johnson v. Stoughton Wagon Co. (Wis.) 95 N. W. 394.

9. Davies v. Monroe Waterworks & Light Co., 107 La. 145.

10. Rocky Mountain Oil Co. v. Phillips, 29 Colo. 268, 68 Pac. 269.

11. Director's wife has no power to represent him—State v. Perkins, 90 Mo. App. 603.

12. First Nat. Bank v. East Omaha Box Co. (Neb.) 90 N. W. 223.

13. Three or four trustees purchased land, the fourth having knowledge of the purchase—Anderson v. Wallace Mfg. Co., 30 Wash. 147, 70 Pac. 247.

14. Indiana Bermudez Asphalt Co. v. Robinson, 29 Ind. App. 59.

15. State v. Perkins, 90 Mo. App. 603.

16. Childs v. Ponder (Ga.) 43 S. E. 986.

17. W. F. Taylor Co. v. Baines Grocery Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 260.

18. Rev. St. § 3248, requires the corporate power, business and control of a corporation to be exercised primarily by its board of di-may be secured by the directors and they have the power, if the corporation is not insolvent, to pay him his back salary, purchase his stock, and give him an additional sum as liquidated damages in consideration of the resignation. Neither the corporation nor those who become creditors may rescind such a transaction on its insolvency.[19]

(§ 15) K. Powers of other officers and agents than the directors or trustees. —The presumption is that acts done by a corporate officer in the scope of his duties are binding.[20] Where there is no express or implied power to its officers to contract, the corporation can contract only by authority of its directors.[21] An agreement by a corporation to pay the debts of another corporation which it had absorbed cannot be shown by the statements of its officers,[22] unless the corporation has knowledge thereof.[23] Without special authority, corporate officers cannot execute accommodation paper in the name of the corporation.[24] Authority to perform a specific act carries with it authority to do those things necessary to effect it.[25]

The president does not ex officio have authority to contract, though to confer such power positive act of the directors is not indispensable, and the fact that he generally acts as a general agent is of weight in determining his authority.[26] Where acting within the authority conferred by the by-laws, the action of a corporation's president is conclusive until revoked by the directors.[27] Where the management of corporate affairs is placed in his hands, he may execute a release of a contract which he has entered into.[28] He may employ experts in connection with litigation,[29] or a physician to attend on employe, hurt in the course of his work through the negligence of the corporation.[30] The power to mortgage the corporate property is not incidental to his office,[31] and a deed of trust executed without authority may be avoided by creditors.[32] Authority to execute a mortgage does not confer authority to create liens in addition thereto.[33] There is a presumption that the president and secretary of a corporation have authority to execute a chattel mortgage.[34] rectors—Bradford Belting Co. v. Gibson, 68 Ohio St. 442.

19. Joseph v. Raff, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 47.

20. Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co. v. H. W. Johns Mfg. Co., 101 Ill. App. 349.

21. St. Clair v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583.

22. Central Elec. Co. v. Sprague Elec. Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 925.

23. Where by foreclosure a corporation becomes the owner of the property of another corporation, it may be bound by a promise of its president to pay advances made by the old corporation to one of its selling agents if it has knowledge that the liability for advances was assumed, derived from persons other than the president—Curtis v. Natalie Anthracite Coal Co., 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 586.

24. Pelton v. Spider Lake Saw Mill & Lumber Co. (Wis.) 94 N. W. 293. The question of the purpose of the indorsement by a corporation's officer after maturity of a note is for the jury—Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 54 Atl. 191. Evidence held to show that a signature was as accommodation indorser not rendering the corporation liable—Preston v. North Western Cereal Co. (Neb.) 93 N. W. 136. Evidence held to show that the proceeds of a note on which a corporation was an accommodation indorser, were used for its benefit, rendering it liable —Orvis v. H. H. Warner & Co., 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 463.

25. Authority to sell property carries right to employ broker—Henderson v. Raymond Syndicate (Mass.) 67 N. E. 427; Hartford & N. Y. Transp. Co. v. Plymer (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 624.

26. St. Clair v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583.

27. Act of the president of a mercantile corporation in joining in a petition for involuntary bankruptcy is conclusive under a bill conferring the management of the business on the president and authorizing him to fix the time of credit and to adjust and settle all claims—In re Winston, 122 Fed. 187.

28. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Dickey, 24 Ky. L. R. 1710, 72 S. W. 332.

29. A sub-way company may employ an expert in a litigation whereby a telephone company seeks to restrain an action under an ordinance requiring it to place its wires in the sub-way—Rosewater v. Glen Telephone Co., 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 275.

30. President and general manager of mining corporation—Evans v. Marion Min. Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 178.

31, 32. State v. Perkins, 90 Mo. App. 603.

33. Bangor & P. Ry. Co. v. American Bangor Slate Co., 203 Pa. 6.

34. Burkamp v. Healey, 24 Ky. L. R. 1926, 72 S. W. 759.

If sale of mining property by a mining corporation is prohibited by statute, unless authorized by a vote of two-thirds of the entire body of stockholders, an offer to sell made by the president and a promise to obtain consent of stockholders, which is accepted by the purchaser, confers no equitable title to the right to extract ore from the mine.[35]

The grantor of a deed cannot, as against an assignment for creditors, make a sufficient delivery to himself as president of a corporation, in the absence of any knowledge of other officers of the corporation, or of any persons except himself and his wife.[36]

The vice-president cannot without authorization of the directors execute a valid assignment for the benefit of creditors.[37] He may, in good faith, waive a citation of the corporation, unless an interested party, such as agent for plaintiff.[38] He may rent a building for storage of property belonging to the department of which he is the manager,[39] or may employ a physician to render services to an employe,[40] or an attorney for the corporation where he is acting as president after resignation of that officer.[41]

The secretary of a corporation cannot release, sell, or convey its property in the absence of authority, express or implied, and with no authorization or ratification by its board of directors.[42] He has no implied authority to satisfy a judgment on real estate for anything but a money payment.[43] His act in certifying that a resolution has been passed by the directors may be binding on the corporation if he has been allowed to manage the corporation business.[44] Before a note indorsed by the corporation's secretary may be admitted in an action against it, authority of the secretary to execute the indorsement must be established,[45] but on a showing of such authority the burden of showing the contrary is on the corporation.[46] Where there is a custom to such effect, indorsement by the secretary and treasurer may be regarded as the corporation's indorsement.[47]

The treasurer who has been entrusted with the actual management of financial affairs, and has attended to all the business of the corporation after it ceased active operation, may bind it by the extension of a note.[48] A vote to issue bonds for the improvement of corporate property to a specified sum may authorize the execution of a receipt and promise to repay a sum received and used by the treasurer for that purpose.[49] The mere fact that a person is treasurer of a corporation does not give him authority to bind it for debts which it has not contracted.[50]

The cashier of a bank cannot take an acknowledgment of a mortgage to se-

35. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. v. Heinze. 27 Mont. 161, 69 Pac. 909.

36. Taylor v. Seiter, 199 Ill. 555.

37. Such an assignment will not cut off the lien of an execution on a judgment entered on the same day—Lesher v. Friedman, 99 Ill. App. 42.

38. As where a vendor's lien is sought to be enforced against land not worth more than the lien—Fox v. Robbins (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 597.

39. Drew v. Billings-Drew Co. (Mich.) 92 N. W. 774.

40. Hasler v. Ozark Land & Lumber Co. (Mo.) 74 S. W. 465.

41. Appearance by an attorney so employed is binding on the corporation—Fernald v. Spokane & British Telephone & Telegraph Co., 31 Wash. 672, 72 Pac. 462.

42. California Wine Makers Corp. v. Sciaroni (Cal.) 72 Pac. 990.

43. Good Hope Bldg. Ass'n v. Amweg, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 145.

44. Certification of resolution for the execution of a bond and assignment of assets as security—Hutchison v. Rock Hill Real Estate & Loan Co., 65 S. C. 45.

45. Karsch v. Pottiere & Stymus Mfg. & Imp. Co., 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 230. Evidence held sufficient to show authority of the secretary of a coal corporation to endorse commercial paper—People's Sav. Bank v. Hine (Mich.) 91 N. W. 130.

46. Karsch v. Pottiere & Stymus Mfg. & Imp. Co., 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 230.

47. Black v. First Nat. Bank, 96 Md. 399.

48. Franklin Sav. Bank v. Cochrane, 182 Mass. 586.

49. Jacobs v. German Workingman's Ass'n, 183 Mass. 3.

50. Rider & Driver Pub. Co. v. Roughrider Horseshoe Co., 82 N. Y. Supp. 765.

cure the bank in which he was a stockholder,[51] nor can a stockholder in a building and loan association take an acknowledgment of a mortgage to it, though the mere fact that the notary is an officer or director without being a stockholder in the corporation does not disqualify him.[52]

Business managers, salesmen, etc.—An officer who is a general manager may make the ordinary or incident contracts without there having been a formal vote of the directors.[53] His contracts may, by the by-laws, be made subject to the approval of the executive committee and not binding without such approval.[54] A custom to allow officers and managing agents to act with regard to certain matters may render their acts binding if such as are within the limits of the corporation's powers.[55] Where the treasurer and manager has control of the corporation, he may without special authority employ a person to assist in securing new capital for the business.[56] Where a corporation is not organized for such purpose, its managing officer cannot bind it by subscription for the stock of another corporation, and one who desires to take advantage of such subscription must show authorization or ratification.[57] The manager of a corporation organized for the purpose of raising cattle and acquiring property necessary therefor has no authority to execute a note in the name of the corporation unless specially authorized.[58] nor does the fact that he has been authorized to purchase property authorize him to execute an agreement that payment should be deferred and the debt should bear interest greater than the legal rate.[59] The manager of a beet sugar corporation has power to indemnify a grower against loss on condition of his taking care of the crop.[60] An officer of a corporation authorized to make a sale to a customer on credit may pledge the corporation's credit to enable him to continue business and borrow money for such purpose, it being the only way in which he had to pay for the goods.[61] A corporation is not bound by the promise of its traveling salesman to pay commissions to a third person.[62] Authority of a corporation superintendent to indorse a check cannot be inferred from his actions as general manager, and the fact that he has countersigned checks drawn in payment for material, nor from the mere fact of possession.[63] The superintendent of an express company has no authority to make a contract in settlement of a messenger's claim for injury against a railroad company.[64] The general manager of a corporation may bind it by employment of a surgeon to attend an injured employe to whom it is liable,[65] but authority of a superintendent to hire and discharge employes does not give him such right.[66]

Evidence of authority.[67]—Where in an action to recover money borrowed by the corporation's vice-president he claimed to have borrowed only under an implied

51. First Nat. Bank v. Citizens State Bank (Wyo.) 70 Pac. 726; Wilson v. Griess (Neb.) 90 N. W. 866.

52. Ogden Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Mensch, 196 Ill. 554.

53. Lowe v. Ring, 115 Wis. 575.

54. Skene v. Union Casualty & Surety Co., 91 Mo. App. 120.

55. Woodward v. Nelligan, 19 App. D. C. 550.

56. Whitman v. Koted Silk Underwear Co., 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 796.

57. W. L. Wells Co. v. Avon Mills, 118 Fed. 190.

58, 59. Sanford Cattle Co. v. Williams (Colo. App.) 71 Pac. 889.

60. Constantine v. Kalamazoo Beet Sugar Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 1088.

61. Hess v. W. & J. Sloane, 173 N. Y. 616.

62. Jones v. Keeler, 41 Misc. (N. Y.) 221.

63. Jackson Paper Mfg. Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 199 Ill. 151, 59 L. R. A. 657.

64. In order that the messenger should not sue the railroad company, the superintendent agreed that he should be paid a certain sum monthly during his life, but though the payments were continued for several years, the messenger could not maintain an action, the agreement by the company having been regarded as gratuitous and the superintendent having made no other similar agreement—Chenoweth v. Pacific Exp. Co., 93 Mo. App. 185.

65. Lithgow Mfg. Co. v. Samuel, 24 Ky. L. R. 1590, 71 S. W. 906.

66. King v. Forbes Lithograph Mfg. Co. (Mass.) 67 N. E. 330.

67. On an issue as to the assignment of a chattel mortgage by a corporation, the minutes of the directors' meeting authorizing authority, evidence that there was only special authority was properly excluded, the only question being whether under a resolution conferring general power to manage the corporation's property he had authority to borrow money to pay taxes.[68]

(§ 15) L. Apparent authority of officers and agents, and estoppel, of the corporation and of others.—Where innocent third persons are concerned, authority may be inferred at times from the custom of dealing.[69] The fact of execution of a contract may be considered as bearing on the question of implied authority.[70] To show implied authority, parol evidence of occurrences at meetings of the board of directors not shown in the minutes may be introduced.[71] The fact that a person is acting as an officer de facto of a corporation will not validate a mortgage, where he has acted fraudulently as against the creditors of the corporation and the corporation itself and the mortgagee participates in such fraud.[72] The signing of certificates to the resolutions of the board of directors of a corporation, being within the scope of the secretary's employment, is binding on the corporation though they were unauthorized and fraudulent.[73]

Statements of representatives as to authority.—A statement by the secretary of a corporation that the corporation would not perform a contract, and that he was authorized by the directors and stockholders to so state, will not bind the corporation without other showing as to his authority. The rule as to the agency of a corporate officer for the corporation is the same as in the case of natural persons, and the mere fact that the officer represented himself to be empowered to act for the corporation does not place the burden of disproving authority upon the corporation.[74]

Implied permission to act.—Where there is a neglect of corporate meetings, and the president is apparently permitted to carry on the business, authority from the directors to do so may be presumed.[75] If the secretary and treasurer of a corporation is allowed complete control over its assets, his fraud cannot be asserted as against bona fide holders.[76] If the corporation alleges that a note sued on was executed by its officer as a part of a fraudulent conspiracy with plaintiff, it is an admission of the officer's authority to execute a note and prevents the assertion of the defense, also set up, of want of authority.[77] Wrongful acts in other matters do not relieve the corporation from liability for acts of an agent in the scope of his authority.[78]

the president to make a transfer, the corporate by-laws and parol evidence of the president as to the transfer are admissible—Clem v. Wise, 133 Ala. 403. The evidence of a former president of a corporation may be admissible to show what a person's duties were as general manager, he having testified that they had not been fixed by resolution—Clarke v. Lexington Stove Works, 24 Ky. L. R. 1755, 72 S. W. 286; Clark v. Lexington Stove Works, 24 Ky. L. R. 2247, 73 S. W. 788. Evidence consisting of letters of a general manager and reference to him as such in the records and articles of the corporation, may be sufficient to take his authority as agent to the jury—Clarke v. Lexington Stove Works, 24 Ky. L. R. 1755, 72 S. W. 286; Clark v. Lexington Stove Works, 24 Ky. L. R. 2247, 73 S. W. 788. Facts held to show an employment by the president individually in the purchase of stock—Butcher v. Harvie Drug Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 631. Evidence held sufficient to show an apparent authority to extend time granted to remove timber from the corporate lands—St. Clair v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583. Evidence held to show authority on the part of president and secretary to enter into a contract retaining an attorney—Union Surety & Guaranty Co. v. Tenney, 200 Ill. 349. Evidence held sufficient for the submission to the jury on the question of the authority of a corporation's superintendent to contract with a broker for the sale of a vessel owned by the corporation—Hartford & New York Transp. Co. v. Plymer (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 624.

68. St. James Co. v. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co., 81 N. Y. Supp. 739.

69, 70, 71. Smith v. Bank of New England (N. H.) 54 Atl. 385.

72. Lamb v. McIntire (Mass.) 67 N. E. 320.

73. Hutchison v. Rock Hill Real Estate & Loan Co., 65 S. C. 45.

74. Bradford Belting Co. v. Gibson, 68 Ohio St. 442.

75. St. Clair v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583.

76. Hutchison v. Rock Hill Real Estate & Loan Co., 65 S. C. 45.

77. Baines v. Coos Bay Nav. Co, 41 Or. 135, 68 Pac. 397.

Acceptance of benefits.—Where a corporation accepts the benefits of a bond, it is bound by the representations of its president leading up to the execution thereof.[79] Where money is received by the officers and stockholders of the corporation with the knowledge and consent of all members, a formal authorization of the loan is not necessary.[80] Though a contract may be fraudulent as to the corporation, if it has been fully executed by the parties and the corporation has acted by its directors with full knowledge of what they were doing, it is bound thereby.[81]

Estoppel by individual acts.—The fact that a corporation's secretary and treasurer agrees to act as assignee of a bankrupt does not estop the corporation from joining in proceedings to have the bankrupt declared an involuntary bankrupt, the secretary having acted as an individual, and it not being within the scope of his ordinary duties.[82] A corporation cannot be made liable for services rendered another corporation by the fact that the bill is rendered to its treasurer, and he states that the persons who held stock in defendant company would not allow such bill to remain unpaid.[83] Money passing through the hands of a corporation on ultra vires transactions from which the corporation acquired no benefit cannot be recovered from it on the ground that such transactions are gambling ones or are personal to the corporation's officer and with the knowledge of the corporation.[84]

Duty of third persons to take notice of powers.—A person dealing with a corporation through its officers is bound to take notice of the limitations of power prescribed by the charter.[85] Where a check to a corporation is indorsed by the corporation's superintendent as such, the bank is bound to ascertain the extent of the agent's authority.[86] One who contracts with a corporate president who assumes to act for the corporation must take notice of the extent of his powers.[87] By-laws limiting the powers of officers are not conclusive as against persons dealing with them unless there is proof of knowledge or notice.[88] Where a person deals with a corporate officer in regard to business within the scope of the corporation's business, and of which he is in usual charge, such person is warranted in assuming authority.[89] Where an officer of a corporation has been put in control of its affairs and permitted to manage and conduct its business, his authority to bind the corporation will be inferred from the authority thus conferred on him, and the corporation is held for his acts to a person acting without notice that he has exceeded his authority.[90]

Allowing other party to act.—A beet sugar corporation may be estopped to assert want of authority of its manager to guaranty beet growers against loss, where a beet grower hearing that such indemnity has been promised others refuses to proceed with his crop unless he is indemnified.[91] Where a corporation has executed a

78. A corporation is liable to bona fide holders of checks drawn by its agent, though such agent has been an embezzler, where it is not shown that the proceeds of the checks have been lost to the corporation, or that the holder had knowledge that the money was being unlawfully converted to the use of the agent—Stotts City Bank v. T. A. Miller Lumber Co. (Mo.) 74 S. W. 472.

79. Representations of a president as to the habits of a cashier referring to his application for indemnity bonds are binding on the bank—Warren Deposit Bank v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. (Ky.) 74 S. W. 1111.

80. Burke v. Sidra Bay Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 568.

81. Ross v. Sayler, 104 Ill. App. 19.

82. In re Winston, 122 Fed. 187.

83. Rider & Driver Pub. Co. v. Rough Rider Horseshoe Co., 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 283.

84. Money passing into the hands of a corporation as the result of an agreement of its manager to make option contracts in lard in the name of the member of another corporation whose money was used in the transaction—Clark v. Parker (Mich.) 91 N. W. 134.

85. Sturdevant Bros. & Co. v. Farmers' & M. Bank (Neb.) 95 N. W. 819.

86. Jackson Paper Mfg. Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 199 Ill. 151, 59 L. R. A. 657.

87. St. Clair v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583.

88. Rosenbaum v. Gilliam (Mo.) 74 S. W. 507.

89. St. Clair v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583.

90. Corporation held bound by the acts of managing officer in employing a patent solicitor to file applications for patents—Rosenbaum v. Gilliam (Mo.) 74 S. W. 507.

91. Constantine v. Kalamazoo Beet Sugar Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 1088.

quitclaim deed to land and its officers and stockholders know of the execution and do not question the authority, it is estopped on acquiring a superior title from asserting such title as against the grantor who has made valuable improvements as a consideration for the transfer.[92] After an agreement whereby the general manager of a corporation is to pay all its expenses, those who deal with him under the agreement are not entitled to share on a sale by a receiver of the assets of the corporation.[93] Where, after execution of a deed, the grantee makes improvements called for in the contract, the stockholders and officers of the corporation having knowledge of the transaction cannot repudiate the deed several years later.[94]

Acquiescence in similar acts.—Where the president is allowed to exercise particular powers, the corporation may be estopped from denying his possession thereof.[95] The fact that an officer has previously performed similar acts without objection may be evidence of his authority therefor, though such authority cannot be specifically gathered from the records of the corporation.[96] Authorization of a contract within the powers of the corporation may be shown by the general manner in which the directors permitted the president and treasurer to act for it.[97]

(§ 15) M. Ratification of unauthorized acts.—If the acts of a representative are accepted by the corporation or acquiesced in by it, they become binding.[98] An assignee for creditors stands in no better position than the corporation.[99] Subsequent knowledge and assent may take the place of prior authority.[1] There can be no implied ratification in the absence of knowledge.[2] Where with knowledge of a contract, the corporation accepts and retains benefits thereunder, it amounts to a ratification.[3] Nonobjection to a contract may tend to show ratification.[4] A ratification of a sale by the directors of a corporation amounts to a ratification of the em-

92. West Seattle Land & Imp. Co. v. Novelty Mill Co., 31 Wash. 435, 72 Pac. 69.

93. Commonwealth v. Pennsylvania Germania Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 204 Pa. 29.

94. Conclusive presumption of authority of officer arises—West Seattle Land & Imp. Co. v. Novelty Mill Co., 31 Wash. 435, 72 Pac. 69.

95. St. Clair v. Rutledge, 115 Wis. 583.

96. Act of the general manager of a townsite company in signing a petition for municipal improvements as required by Gen. St. 1901, § 730—Kansas City v. Cullinan, 65 Kan. 68, 68 Pac. 1099.

97. Smith v. Bank of New England (N. H.) 54 Atl. 385.

98. Acts of president—Bennett v. Millville Imp. Co., 67 N. J. Law, 320. Majority stockholder—Dupignac v. Bernstrom, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 677. The ratification by the directors of the modification of a contract by the president, may be implied from their subsequent actions—Taylor Gas Producer Co. v. Wood, 119 Fed. 966.

99. Ross v. Sayler, 104 Ill. App. 19.

1. Smith v. Bank of New England (N. H.) 54 Atl. 385. Sale of stock of goods by a director owning half of the stock, and acting as general manager, and secretary made with knowledge of his wife who was a stockholder, the bill of sale being signed by the sole other director, who owned one-fifth of the stock—Magowan v. Groneweg (S. D.) 91 N. W. 335. Evidence held to show consent to the delivery of a deed on immediate payment of less than the sum of future payment agreed on—Ruble Combination Gold Min. Co. v. Princess Alice Gold Min. Co. (Colo.) 71 Pac. 1121. A corporation may by proper action of its directors or stockholders ratify a void trust deed or ratification may result from acquiescence by the stockholders with complete knowledge—First Nat. Bank v. East Omaha Box Co. (Neb.) 90 N. W. 223.

2. Mortgage of corporate property—First Nat. Bank v. Kirkby (Fla.) 32 So. 881. Evidence held sufficient to show actual or constructive knowledge of the directors of the execution by the president and treasurer of a contract for the issuance of certificates of deposit—Smith v. Bank of New England (N. H.) 54 Atl. 385.

3. Sale of water rights—Washington Irr. Co. v. Krutz (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 279. Contract by a president for the furnishing of a switch track—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Chicago, K. & S. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 882. After a toll road company has complied with the contract to free an adjoining owner from payment of tolls in consideration of his closing a certain road, the authority of the person entering into the contract for the toll road cannot be questioned—Great Western Turnpike Co. v. Shafer, 172 N. Y. 662. Guaranty of notes by president of a corporation having power to own, transfer and guarantee notes and mortgages—Hunt v. Northwestern Mortg. Trust Co. (S. D.) 92 N. W. 23. Agreement of president to a general lien for advances—Mathews v. Hardt, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 570. Where all the stockholders but the holders of two shares agree to the conveyance of land by the corporation, and the purchase price is received by the stockholders, the deed cannot be thereafter disaffirmed—Wentworth v. Braun, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 634.

4. Salem Iron Co. v. Commonwealth Iron Co. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 593.

ployment of a broker incidental thereto.[5] If the corporation desires to repudiate contracts made by its president, it must reject them entirely.[6] A vote of the corporate directors that all notes representing advances and not exceeding a certain amount be thereby ratified and approved is a ratification of a note executed by its president and indorsed by him with the corporate name, the money received having gone into the business and being fully disclosed by the books of the corporation, three members of the directorate and officers of the corporation knowing of the transaction, and it not being contended that the acts of the officers were fraudulent.[7] The vote acted as a ratification also on the ground that the directors must be held, as between the parties, to have acted with full knowledge as to the special matter as to which they were voting.[8]

(§ 15) N. Notice to or knowledge of officers or agents as notice to or knowledge of corporation.—Information to an officer or agent of a corporation is notice to the corporation,[9] but notice must be to the officers or agents who have power to act thereon or to persons whose duty it is to impart the information to such officers or agents.[10] Where two corporations in their dealings with each other are both represented by the same person, who is president of both, knowledge obtained as president of one will be notice to the other.[11]

Where the officer acquired knowledge in his individual affairs, the corporation is not chargeable with notice thereby, nor is it chargeable with knowledge when it is dealing with its officer as a stranger,[12] or where the officer is acting adversely to it,[13] or in his own interest.[14] The knowledge of a director of his own unauthorized act is not binding on the corporation as notice.[15]

Knowledge gained in transactions not connected with the one under consideration is not imputable to the corporation.[16]

(§ 15) O. Admissions, declarations, and representations of officers and agents.—As against a corporation, the admissions of its agents are not admissible unless in

5. Henderson v. Raymond Syndicate (Mass.) 67 N. E. 427.

6. Contract for sale and re-purchase of stock—Fremont Carriage Mfg. Co. v. Thomsen (Neb.) 91 N. W. 376.

7. Beacon Trust Co. v. Souther (Mass.) 67 N. E. 345.

8. Beacon Trust Co. v. Souther (Mass.) 67 N. E. 345.

9. Waters v. West Chicago St. R. Co., 101 Ill. App. 265. Allegation that an accident was caused by the fact that defendant's president removed a part of a machine, and that such fact was known to the company through its president, is a sufficient averment of notice—Houston Biscuit Co. v. Dial, 135 Ala. 168. Bank is chargeable with notice of pledge of its stock by the fact that the pledgee shows the certificate to the president in order to find out whether it had been regularly issued, and the bank's lien for a loan subsequently made to the pledgor of the stock, is subordinate to the lien of the pledgee—Curtice v. Crawford County Bank (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 390.

10. Nehawka Bank v. Ingersoll (Neb.) 89 N. W. 618. Notice to a traveling salesman of a corporation of the dissolution of a partnership is not notice to the corporation, where the salesman is not allowed to extend credit or required to report the membership of firms with which the corporation deals—Neal v. Smith (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 20. Where an indemnity bond for the president as an employe of a bank stipulates that the employer will not continue the employe in employment after he has committed a default, a surety is not released by the knowledge of a minority of board of directors or of the vice-president—Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Courtney, 186 U. S. 342, 46 Law. Ed. 1193.

11. Knowledge that the capital stock of one corporation which borrows from another has been paid in property at an exaggerated value prevents the lending corporation from insisting later that the par value of such stock be paid in—Berry v. Rood, 168 Mo. 316.

12. People's Bank v. Exchange Bank, 116 Ga. 820.

13. As where the president indorses drafts payable to himself to the corporation in order that the drawers may realize upon it—Levy & C. Mule Co. v. Kauffman (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 170.

14. Metcalf v. Draper, 98 Ill. App. 399.

15. Act of director and manager in giving a note in the corporate name—Sanford Cattle Co. v. Williams (Colo. App.) 71 Pac. 889.

16. Knowledge of an agreement executed by the president without authority while acting with regard to distinct transactions—Bangor & P. R. Co. v. American Bangor Slate Co., 203 Pa. 6. A corporation is not charged with knowledge acquired by its president while acting as attorney for other parties in regard to the execution of a mortgage afterwards assigned to the corporation—Tate v. Security Trust Co., 63 N. J. Eq. 559.

the line of their duty.[17] Declarations and admissions by stockholders and officers are not binding on the corporation unless made while acting for the corporation in connection with the transactions.[18] If the acceptance of official bonds is entirely entrusted to the board of directors, the president's statements do not affect the liability of sureties on a cashier's bond.[19] The corporation is not bound by statements of its agent with regard to the sale of stock owned by himself.[20] Admissions of a president or superintendent of a corporation made after an answer has been filed in an action against it are not admissible as against the corporation.[21] A letter is properly admitted in evidence as shown to have been authorized by a corporation, where it appears that it was dictated by the general manager to the stenographer of the corporation who was also its secretary, and she wrote and signed it as she did other letters sent by the manager.[22]

(§ 15) P. Delegation of authority by directors.—Where under an incomplete sale of the entire corporate stock to one person, such person is given the entire management of the corporate affairs by the board of directors, the corporation is bound by his acts within the corporate powers.[23]

(§ 15) Q. Personal liability of officers and agents.—Where a transaction is within the corporate powers, directors are not personally liable thereon, though at other times and with other persons they may have done business not authorized by the charter.[24] They may be personally liable for their ultra vires acts, if a waste of the corporate property results.[25] Mere payment of a valid demand in an unauthorized way does not render the directors liable for a depreciation of funds unless there is special damage.[26]

The president of a corporation does not become personally liable by defending an action against it, and is not liable on a judgment against the corporation for negligence, if no personal negligence is charged and he was not a party.[27]

Where a corporation's president executes a note in its name by himself as presi-

17. Admissible: Reports of persons superintending work performed by a corporation, made to the corporation, are admissible to show the condition of the work—Lipscomb v. South Bound R. Co., 65 S. C. 148. Declarations of a fire insurance agent concerning commissions from the company itself may be binding on it—Ulysses Elgin Butter Co. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 384. The admissions of an adjuster are binding on an insurance company if made while he is examining the extent of the loss—Sisk v. American Cent. Fire Ins. Co., 95 Mo. App. 695. A letter of a manager of a corporation concerning a compromise of a claim for a broker's commission where from the evidence it appeared that the corporation had left the entire charge of its business to the manager dictating the letter—Henderson v. Raymond Syndicate (Mass.) 67 N. E. 427.

Not admissible: Statement by railroad official that appliances used were bad, the official not having control over the equipment or management of such appliances—Hayzel v. Columbia R. Co., 19 App. D. C. 359. Statement by the officers and stockholders of a corporation, which had sold a machine, as to its working, such persons having nothing to do with the operation of the machine—Haynie-Campbell Co. v. Preston Creamery Ass'n (Iowa) 93 N. W. 297. Statement after the transaction in issue—Harper v. Western Union Tel. Co., 92 Mo. App. 304. A letter from the vice-president of a bank to the indorser of a note, where not written in his official capacity or on bank stationery—Utica City Nat. Bank v. Tallman, 172 N. Y. 642.

18. Statements in regard to the existence of a debt—Stanton v. Baird Lumber Co., 132 Ala. 635. Declarations with corporation's general manager as to the cause of an action made shortly after its occurrence—Momence Stone Co. v. Groves, 197 Ill. 88.

19. Ida County Sav. Bank v. Seidensticker (Iowa) 92 N. W. 862.

20. Though the person dealing with the agent thought that he should have accurate information from his capacity—Western Realty & Inv. Co. v. Haase, 75 Conn. 436.

21. Such admissions are only admissible as part of the res gestae—McEntyre v. Levi Cotton Mills, 132 N. C. 598.

22. Henderson v. Raymond Syndicate (Mass.) 67 N. E. 427.

23. Where the directors of a mill company turn its management over to an individual pending the completion of a transfer of the corporate stock, the corporation and not the individual is liable for contracts incident to his management—Albany Mill Co. v. Huff, 24 Ky. L. R. 2037, 72 S. W. 820.

24. Dietrich v. Rothenberger (Ky.) 75 S. W. 271.

25. Dietrich v. Rothenberger (Ky.) 75 S. W. 271. Use of corporate assets of an insurance company to purchase a mutual insurance company which is without assets or good will—Gilbert v. Finch, 173 N. Y. 455.

26. Manhattan Fire Ins. Co. v. Fox, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 271.

dent in order to conceal the fact that he is purchasing stock in his own name, he becomes personally liable on such note and the corporation signing is not bound.[28]

(§ 15) R. Liability of officers for mismanagement.[29]—Where a corporation is a majority stockholder in another corporation, the directors of the controlling corporation are answerable only for fraud or for such gross negligence in the management as amounts to fraud.[30] Asquiescence by the board of directors in the acts of a secretary in a transfer of the corporate assets is not fraudulent as to the rights of stockholders unless the directors have notice of such facts as may be reasonably expected to furnish the basis for a successful attack on the transfers.[31]

Where a corporation sells certificates of membership providing that a certain portion of the collections made thereon shall be used for current expenses, and for such other expenses as the directors might direct, the directors are not entitled to use such receipts in the payment of dividends, the corporation being insolvent.[32]

By statute, a director may sue the officers and other directors of a corporation for an accounting, and the corporation need not be made a plaintiff though properly joined as defendant. Other persons given the right to sue by the section and general creditors need not be joined.[33] Where the corporation treasurer sues one who preceded him in office for an accounting as to the corporate funds, the corporation is not such an indispensable party that it must be joined, though its joinder would oust the jurisdiction of a federal court.[34]

Statutes making directors jointly and severally liable for money wrongfully appropriated by them do not impose a penal liability.[35]

The directors of a corporation are not trustees of a trust, so as to be estopped from pleading limitations when sued for acts of administration, for which they have been subject at all times to an action at law, and where the action is originally brought to wind up the corporation, an officer who is plaintiff may set up the statute of limitations in case of an amendment which charges him with misfeasance in office.[36]

Where the receivers of an insolvent corporation have, with the approval of the court, released its officers from all claims, a stockholder cannot maintain an action against them for negligence and breach of trust.[37]

(§ 15) S. Dealings between a corporation and the directors or other officers, and personal interest in transactions.—Transactions between corporate directors and the corporation are subject to judicial scrutiny.[38] A director or officer of a corporation is not precluded from entering into contracts with it for his personal benefit, where the rights of the corporation are fully protected.[39] The trustees

27. Tilley v. Coykendall, 172 N. Y. 587.

28. Wheeler v. Mineral Farm Consol. Min. Co. (Colo.) 71 Pac. 1101.

29. Evidence held not to show mismanagement on the part of a corporate president as to the collection of debts, and allowance of overdrafts—Johnson v. Stoughton Wagon Co. (Wis.) 95 N. W. 394. Evidence held insufficient to charge the president of a corporation with negligence in regard to the diversion of corporate funds by the secretary—Id.

30. Evidence held insufficient to show fraudulent mismanagement of a controlling corporation in the conduct of electric lighting companies—Cannon v. Brush Elec. Co., 96 Md. 446.

31. Hutchison v. Rock Hill Real Estate & Loan Co., 65 S. C. 45.

32. Taylor v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 75 S. W. 244.

33. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 447, 488, 1782—Miller v. Barlow, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 331.

34. Equity rule 47—Hunter v. Robbins, 117 Fed. 920.

35. Const. art. 12, § 3—Winchester v. Howard, 136 Cal. 432, 69 Pac. 77.

36. Boyd v. Mutual Fire Ass'n (Wis.) 94 N. W. 171.

37. Craig v. James, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 238.

38. Davis v. Thomas A. Davis Co., 63 N. J. Eq. 572.

39. A director is bound by an agreement to execute to the corporation a lease of property in which he has an interest under a contract with the owner for a conveyance—Veeder v. Horstmann, 85 App. Div. (N. Y.) 154.

of a corporation may contract with the president for the use and manufacture of inventions made by him, he not voting upon the resolution.[40] The manager of a mining company may by an offer to use certain of its shares which he owns for the benefit of the corporation, which offer is accepted by corporate resolution, make a valid gift to the company rendering the manager liable for the misuse of funds derived from the sale of new certificates of stock issued to him representing the subject matter of the gift.[41]

An issuance of stock by a corporation to its president is valid in the absence of a fraudulent intent or concealment of facts from subsequent stockholders, though it is made in consideration of services performed by the president in securing options and contracts on property turned over to the corporation.[42] A loan may be made by a director to his corporation.[43] A corporation may transfer its assets to its directors who are indorsers of notes of another corporation to reimburse them for payments made thereon, which have been beneficial to the first corporation.[44] Notes of a corporation cannot be pledged by its officers or directors to secure personal debts of the president.[45]

Secret profits.—Officers of corporations cannot accept secret profits.[46] Where the directors of a corporation negotiate a transfer of the corporate stock from the stockholders through themselves to another corporation, the fact that after the agreement is completed they enter into an arrangement with the new corporation whereby they are to continue as directors therein in consideration of certain of its stock and funds gives the stockholders of the former corporation no rights in such consideration, there being no evidence that it was secretly contemplated at the time of the first arrangement. Since there was no fiduciary relation there must have been actual misrepresentation, and the burden of proof of fraud is on those asserting it.[47] The stockholders of a corporation are not entitled to share in commissions earned by a manager of a department on individual sales, though he has given drafts on the corporation in settlement where he has paid such drafts by his personal checks.[48]

Where directors act adversely to the stockholders in the contract, the contract is illegal, and openness of actions by directors adverse to the stockholders' interests does not validate them.[49] If a director sell its property, it being insolvent, he cannot apply the proceeds to a corporate debt for which he is a surety, but he may apply them to the payment of a creditor for whose indemnification he has signed a bond and protected the corporate property.[50]

Where a director has sold stock to the corporation he acting at the meeting

40. The royalty fixed being fair, the stockholders cannot attack the contract as fraudulent—Burden v. Burden Iron Co., 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 559.

41. Wheeler v. Mineral Farm Consol. Min. Co. (Colo.) 71 Pac. 1101.

42. The president used a portion of the stock to interest other persons than the company, and retained a small portion for himself—Calivada Colonization Co. v. Hays, 119 Fed. 202.

43. Off v. Jack, 104 Ill. App. 655.

44. Kendall v. Klapperthal Co., 202 Pa. 596.

45. El Capitan Land & Cattle Co. v. Boston-Kansas City Cattle Loan Co., 65 Kan. 359, 69 Pac. 332.

46. Where a corporation's manager sells its entire capital stock he cannot be allowed to retain a secret compensation from the buyer—Barbar v. Martin (Neb.) 93 N. W. 722.

47. Walsh v. Goulden (Mich.) 90 N. W. 406.

48. Adams v. Burke, 201 Ill. 395.

49. Contract by the directors of an irrigation company to furnish water to the members of an association to which the directors belong—Goodell v. Verdugo Canon Water Co., 138 Cal. 308, 71 Pac. 354. An agreement on a sale of street railroad properties by which the purchasing company agrees to operate its line for a specified space of time to land owned by the directors of the selling company is void, it being for the benefit of the directors, nor does such agreement confer a vendor's lien—Scott v. Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank (Tex.) 75 S. W. 7.

50. Graham v. Carr, 130 N. C. 271.

at which it was authorized, the sale, though not binding as to price, may be enforced on the basis of the actual value of stock.[51]

Purchase of corporate property.—Where an officer of a corporation buys its property and pays for it in part with the corporate stock at an exaggerated value, the conveyance may be set aside.[52] Though a corporate president is not formally authorized to purchase subscription rights to stock of another corporation, he is, if he purchased at the direction of the corporation, estopped from denying that he purchased as the corporation's agent, and the title passes to the corporation, and the fact that he advances the purchase money from his own funds and takes receipts in his own name does not show conclusively that he purchased individually.[53] A subsequent vote of the directors authorizing the corporation to acquire a controlling interest in the new corporation does not affect the title previously acquired.[54] A purchaser from the officer acquires no rights against the corporation, though the contract to acquire the subscription rights was ultra vires, against public policy and unlawful, and if the purchase was void as to the corporation, title vested in the officer individually.[55] Where a trustee has been appointed by the stockholders and directors of an insolvent corporation, it may, if it act in good faith, sell the bonds and capital stock belonging to the corporation, to a director.[56]

Where the president of a corporation secures title to land in consideration of acts to be performed by the corporation, he will be regarded to hold such land as a trustee, unless there is a showing of a valid authorization in him to take title.[57]

Compromise of claims.—Where a director compromises claims against a corporation, he is entitled to credit for the sums paid and not for their face,[58] and though he uses his own funds in the purchase of claims he cannot take advantage of reductions which he secures.[59]

Mortgages by corporate officers to one of their number to secure a fictitious indebtedness will be set aside though also executed ostensibly to secure other creditors who are not shown to have ever relied on them or demanded their execution.[60] A director may take a mortgage from the corporation as security, the corporation not being insolvent.[61]

Purchases of property at judicial sales or after title passes from corporation.[62] —A purchase, by a director in good faith, of property which has passed from the corporation, does not inure to the benefit of the corporation.[63] The fact that a director holding land of the corporation in trust for his security makes a sale out of which he is subsequently to realize a profit does not of itself make the sale voidable if it is approved by the directors after a complete disclosure of the facts and is for full value, and he may, after a bona fide sale, control the land for the 51. Oliver v. Rahway Ice Co. (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 460.

52. Purchase by secretary and treasurer—Miller v. Brown (Neb.) 95 N. W. 797.

53-55. Manchester St. Ry. Co. v. Williams, 71 N. H. 312.

56. Graham v. Carr, 130 N. C. 271.

57. Property conveyed to the president and promoter of a street railroad in consideration of the extension of the line to the land of the grantor—Scott v. Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank (Tex.) 75 S. W. 7.

58. Fishel v. Goddard (Colo.) 69 Pac. 607.

59. Kroegher v. Calivada Colonization Co. 119 Fed. 641; Calivada Colonizaton Co. v. Kroegher, Id.

60. Macklem v. Fales (Mich.) 89 N. W. 581.

61. Mechanics' Bldg. & Sav. Ass'n, No. 2, 202 Pa. 589.

62. Evidence held sufficient to show that a director purchased the property of a corporation on mortgage sale, at less than its actual value, rendering him chargeable with subsequent profits—Fishel v. Goddard (Colo.) 69 Pac. 607.

63. Purchase of a forfeited mining claim from a relocator—McDermott Min. Co. v. McDermott, 27 Mont. 143, 69 Pac. 715.

purchaser and take part of the profits of ensuing sales.[64] Where a director has acquired title to corporate land in a fair and legitimate manner, the fact that the land is greater in extent than is known by all the parties at the time of transfer does not render the sale fraudulent.[65]

The mere fact that one who joins with others in the purchase of a corporation's note which is secured by mortgage is a director of the corporation does not render his subsequent purchase of the property at a fair foreclosure sale fraudulent.[66]

It is held that a director who purchases property of the corporation at a mortgage sale may be responsible to judgment creditors for any difference between the value of the property and the amount paid,[67] and the fact that he acquires title to mortgaged property through foreclosure entitles him only to repayment of his actual outlay with interest.[68] A corporation is not estopped from denying the validity of the director's claim to the excess by actions showing an intent to recognize it.[69]

Where two corporations have entered into a contract to acquire the title to the property of one, the president of one corporation cannot acquire title to the property of the other at a trustee's sale, it being a mere scheme in pursuance of the contract.[70] An action at law in favor of a corporation will lie to recover a large salary which the president, as majority stockholder, has induced the directors to vote to him.[71] Where there are but two stockholders of actual interest in the corporation, though there are three nominal stockholders who are also directors, the actual stockholder holding a minority of the stock may share in a sum voted to the majority stockholder as salary, the votes being taken at meetings in the absence of the minority stockholder.[72]

Compensation secured for services not rendered for corporation.—Where a trustee, being a corporation, names its president as receiver, he need not account to it for fees received, if the by-laws of the company in fixing the president's duties do not state that he shall act as a receiver. He is not prevented from acting by a by-law providing that no trusteeship or receivership shall be accepted by the president without the approval of the executive committee, since such by-law is to be regarded merely as a precaution against the binding of the corporation.[73]

The mere nomination of the president as receiver does not furnish a consideration for an agreement by him to pay the trust company the compensation received by him in such capacity, and a resolution of the trust company directing its counsel to ask that a certain person named be appointed as a receiver seeks the appointment of such person as an individual, though he is also president of the trust company.[74] If it is sought to recover such compensation on the ground of an alleged agreement that the corporation would foreclose the deed

64. The director implicated did not vote at the meeting at which the offer of sale was accepted and the price obtained was a fair valuation—Tenison v. Patton, 95 Tex. 284.

65. Tenison v. Patton, 95 Tex. 284.

66. Ready v. Smith, 170 Mo. 163.

67. The amount realized on subsequent sale of the property may be shown as tending to fix its value, and for this purpose, the director may be questioned as to what was the amount realized on the resale as shown by his books—Fishel v. Goddard (Colo.) 69 Pac. 607.

68. Kroegher v. Calivada Colonization Co., 119 Fed. 641; Calivada Colonization Co. v. Kroegher, Id.

69. Kroegher v. Calivada Colonization Co., 119 Fed. 641; Calivada Colonization Co. v. Kroegher, Id.

70. Scott v. Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank (Tex.) 75 S. W. 7.

71. Adams v. Burke, 102 Ill. App. 148.

72. Adams v. Burke, 201 Ill. 395.

73. Citizens' Trust & Deposit Co. v. Tompkins (Md.) 54 Atl. 617.

74. Citizens' Trust & Deposit Co. v. Tompkins (Md.) 54 Atl. 617.

of trust without charge provided the president was appointed receiver, he agreeing to pay the corporation such compensation as he was allowed for so acting, it must be alleged that at the time the corporation relinquished its right it had the right to make a foreclosure sale, and also that the corporation had made such sale and had not made any charge or received any compensation therefor.[75]

After a corporation has sold property of which it is in charge, the fact that one of its officers agrees to superintend the use thereof does not show a contract to act against the best interests of the corporation, and the officer cannot afterward question such a contract, if the corporation does not object.[76]

Use of patents.—The corporation may be entitled to profits made by its president and general manager on an invention made by him and manufactured by the corporation.[77] Where a corporation has been infringing a patent, its executive officers by a transfer of their stock and purchase of the patent acquire no rights allowing their assignee to compel the corporation to pay the profits resulting from the infringement.[78]

Ratification of dealings.—Stockholders may, at a regularly called meeting, ratify a contract in which a director is interested and which is voidable at the option of the corporation, and in case they have notice of the directors' interests they are chargeable with proper inquiry as to the extent thereof.[79]

Mere silence for two years with knowledge of an illegal contract by the directors is not a ratification, nor can such a contract be ratified by a subsequent board of directors, the majority of which is the same as that which first authorized it.[80] Where the directors have entered into a contract illegal as for their own benefit, the fact that the corporation has taken other steps against other parties in recognition of the contract does not estop it and its stockholders from setting up the illegality, nor does estoppel result from the fact that the wrongdoing directors allow expenditures to be made on the faith of the contract.[81] Where mortgages are invalid, a subsequent reference to them as being due in a new mortgage does not show an intention to validate them.[82] Where directors have sold the corporation's stock under such circumstances that they cannot enforce the full price, a payment on account to the corporation may be applied to an implied promise to pay what the stock was in reality worth.[83]

Repudiation.—Where the contract is illegal, the motive of subsequent directors in repudiating it is immaterial as far as the other party is concerned.[84]

Remedies in case of wrongful transactions.—Creditors are not entitled in the first instance to reach profits gained by a director in fraud of the corporation, the right of action being in the corporation. Mere contract creditors cannot reach equitable assets in the hands of a director. A creditor cannot recover a profit

75. Citizens' Trust & Deposit Co. v. Tompkins (Md.) 54 Atl. 617.

76. Sale of a patent for the manufacture of a brake beam and contract to superintend the manufacture of brake beams and purchase supplies on the best terms possible, the machinery used in the manufacture remaining in the building of the corporation and the business being distinct—Pungs v. American Brake Beam Co., 200 Ill. 306.

77. Corporation was held entitled to an accounting where, without knowledge of the directors, the president secured the manufacture of an article patented by him by the corporation, and after adding a certain percentage to the actual cost of production as profit sold them to himself under an assumed name and placed them on the market at a higher figure—D. M. Steward Mfg. Co. v. Steward (Tenn.) 70 S. W. 808; Montague v. Same, Id.

78. New York Grape Sugar Co. v. Buffalo Grape Sugar Co., 24 Fed. 604.

79. Hodge v. Steel Corp. (N. J. L.) 54 Atl. 1.

80. Oliver v. Ice Co. (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 460.

81. Goodell v. Water Co., 138 Cal. 308, 71 Pac. 354.

82, 83. Oliver v. Ice Co. (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 460.

84. Goodell v. Water Co., 138 Cal. 308, 71 Pac. 354.

made by the director in the purchase of property in which the corporation was equitably interested, in the absence of a showing that the corporation ratified the act so as to render it valid as to him or that there was fraud and collusion.[85] The cause of action is barred if not brought within twelve years from the happening of the facts on which it accrued, there being no concealment or nonresidence.[86]

Where it is sought to reach the profits gained by a director from a purchase of the corporation's property in foreclosure proceedings, the corporation is a necessary party.[87]

Where the directors are sued jointly for a conversion of the goods of a corporation, and one director is admitted, by the answer in which he joins, to be solely interested in the goods, judgment may be rendered against him alone. In such an action, it is not necessary that the judgment show a finding as to what the goods were worth at the time of sale, if there is no showing that the value found was as of any other day.[88]

In a proceeding to charge a director with profits gained by him from a purchase of the corporation property at a mortgage sale, a supplemental complaint and an original complaint will be read together in determining whether it was alleged that, at the time the director purchased, the debt was in existence.[89] Evidence must conform to the pleadings.[90]

§ 16. Rights and remedies of creditors of corporations. A. The relation of creditors—Assets as a trust fund.—Though by statute in New Jersey an equal and pro rata distribution of the assets in an insolvent corporation among its creditors is secured, such equality between the creditors is not based on a trust theory such as is adopted in the federal jurisdictions.[91] In New Jersey apart from the direct effect of statutes, an insolvent corporation has the same dominion over its assets, and its creditors have the same power to reach those assets, as in case of an insolvent natural person.[92] In Washington, the assets of an insolvent corporation being regarded as a trust fund, an attachment levied the day before the appointment of a receiver may be set aside.[93]

(§ 16) B. Rights and remedies of creditors against the corporation.[94]—One holding a cause of action for tort arising before the corporation was declared insolvent, but reduced to judgment thereafter, may share on an equality with other creditors.[95] Under an agreement to advance money to a corporation so long as a certain branch of the business should be continued, the advances may be declared due at a reasonable time after the cessation of the business.[96]

85-87. Ready v. Smith, 170 Mo. 163.

88, 89. Fishel v. Goddard (Colo.) 69 Pac. 607.

90. Where it is pleaded that the contract was illegal on account of adverse interest, evidence as to whether the irrigation company had less water than required by its needs and could not make further development is immaterial—Goodell v. Water Co., 138 Cal. 308, 71 Pac. 354.

91, 92. Gallagher v. Asphalt Co. of America (N. J. Eq.) 55 Atl. 259.

(Note) According to the great weight of authority, the relation between a corporation and its creditors is simply that of debtor and creditor. A corporation, although insolvent, holds its property as an insolvent natural person does, and its assets are not a trust fund for the benefit of creditors in any proper sense. If they can be said to be a trust fund in any sense, it is only in the sense that they cannot be distributed among or withdrawn by the stockholders, or conveyed or given away without consideration, leaving creditors unpaid, and in the sense that, when the corporation has been dissolved or gone into the hands of a receiver, its assets will be distributed, subject to valid liens thereon, for the equal benefit of all the creditors—Clark & Marshall, Corporations, Vol. III, p. 2319.

93. Washington Liquor Co. v. Cafe Co., 28 Wash. 176, 68 Pac. 444.

94. Priority of judgment for tort, see ante, § 9.

95. Corp. Act, §§ 75-77, 86; Pub. Laws 1896—Lehigh & W. Coal Co. v. Transportation Co., 63 N. J. Eq. 107.

96. Five years is a reasonable time; the election is sufficiently shown by the begin-

Compromise of claims.—Where it is asserted that a creditor had agreed to accept a new issue of stock in lieu of a portion of his claim, it cannot be shown that, subsequent to such agreement, the corporation was in bad financial condition, nor can the creditor be allowed to testify that if he had thought the stock was issued as a witness testified, he would not have kept it.[97]

Preferences.—The wages of a superintendent are not within the intendment of a statute giving preference to the wage claims of employes or operatives of insolvent corporations.[98] A formal assignment made after insolvency effectuating a previous oral assignment made during insolvency does not create a preference.[99] Payments made to a corporation under mistake as to indebtedness, which are not kept separately, do not become entitled to preference over other corporate debts.[1] One who advances money to a corporation for a specific use and deposits it with a trust company, he to be repaid by the receipt of a certain rebate on each specific piece of certain property purchased under the agreement, is in the position of a general creditor.[2]

Where a corporation is in the habit of drawing against shipments of goods and disposing of the drafts, the purchaser being given credit for the amount of the invoice, it does not create the relation of creditor of the corporation in the purchaser of a draft, making the delivery of such draft after insolvency a preference.[3] Where the transfer of assets of an insolvent corporation to a creditor is an invalid preference, the preferred creditor may participate in such assets with other creditors on the transfer being held invalid.[4] A creditor having a lien on a specific portion of the corporate property who brings an action to secure the application of the general property to its debts is not entitled to preference in the funds obtained if the specific property on which he has a lien has not been or is to be segregated, and such suit brought in behalf of all the creditors does not entitle the one bringing it to a preference.[5]

Right to reach dividends wrongfully paid.—Under statutory provisions making stockholders liable for stock refunded to them before payment of debts for which it is liable, stockholders of insolvent corporations are liable to creditors for the amount that dividends have reduced the capital stock.[6] Where rents of corporate property are distributed in the form of a dividend among stockholders, they are not impressed with a trust or lien in favor of general creditors, neither insolvency nor a fraudulent purpose being shown.[7] In a proceeding to compel payment of a certain sum from the net earnings of a corporation before distribution among the stockholders, the stockholders who claim the right to an immediate distribution are necessary parties.[8] The cause of action to reach dividends improperly paid stockholders given by statute in some states does not accrue, until executions against the corporation have been returned nulla bona.[9] ning of an action and the lender is entitled to interest from the date of the election only —Burke v. Sidra Bay Co. (Wis.) 92 N. W. 568.

97. Reid v. Paint Co. (Mich.) 94 N. W. 3.

98. Rev. Sts. 1899, § 1006—Pullis Bros. Iron Co. v. Boemler, 91 Mo. App. 85.

99. Corp. Laws, § 48, Laws 1892, c. 688—In re Rogers Const. Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 419.

1. Lacy v. Association, 132 N. C. 131.

2. Miller v. Barlow, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 331.

3. Hodson v. Karr, 96 Md. 475.

4. National Wall Paper Co. v. Bank (Neb.) 93 N. W. 1004.

5. Moore v. Drug Co., 135 Ala. 287.

6. Comp. Laws 1897, § 7057—American Steel & Wire Co. v. Eddy (Mich.) 89 N. W. 952.

7. New Hampshire Sav. Bank v. Richey (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 956.

8. Dupignac v. Bernstrom, 37 Misc. (N. Y.) 677.

9. Limitations against a bill in equity under Rev. St. Me. 1857, c. 46, § 34, do not begin to run until such time—Bowker v. Hill, 115 Fed. 528.

Fraudulent conveyances.[10]—On a bill to set aside a deed as fraudulent to corporate creditors, objection cannot be made that the deed was not duly authorized by the directors or executed by the proper officers.[11]

Mortgage as fraudulent conveyance.—The fact that a corporation is insolvent or financially embarrassed does not prevent it from mortgaging its property in good faith to secure extension of a prior debt, and for further money to be used in its business if it is yet a going concern.[12] A mortgage which operates to secure two stockholders the repayment of the purchase price of their stock is invalid to creditors and other stockholders,[13] but the corporation may execute a mortgage to secure the payment for land conveyed to it or of money expended for its benefit.[14] The statutory prohibition of the transfer of property in contemplation of insolvency does not affect a mortgage for an actual presently passing consideration, though possible insolvency may have been in the minds of the parties, but such a mortgage is void in so far as it attempts to secure pre-existing debts.[15]

Liens on corporate property.—Under a statutory provision giving a lien to laborers and materialmen on the realty and personalty of a corporation, treasury bonds secured by mortgage on its property are not to be regarded as personalty.[16] Such a lien does not extend to the property of a corporation deposited in a warehouse, the warehouse receipts for which have been transferred as collateral security for money borrowed by the corporation.[17] A lien may be had under a statute in favor of corporate employes, though the petition and notice is insufficient to sustain a mechanic's lien.[18] Where a statute conferring a lien for labor on corporate property does not require the notice to describe the corporate property, the corporate earnings may be applied to the payment of the lien.[19] A laborer may have priority of lien for wages accruing after levy of an execution against the corporation, where it appears that it was for the judgment creditors' interest as well as that of the corporation that the corporate business be continued.[20] Attorney's fees may be allowed in such a proceeding where they are allowed in mechanic's liens and the mechanic's lien statute is made applicable to proceedings under the statute conferring the lien on the corporate property.[21] A laborer's lien may be valid against an insolvent corporation though sworn to and filed after proceedings to wind up the corporation have been begun, and may be protected by filing a petition in such proceedings within the statutory period.[22] Where it is sought to enforce a lien on corporate property, the stockholders and non-lien-holding creditors are not necessary parties.[23] If the debt is adjudged no lien, the decree is appealable.[24]

Attachment and execution.—By statute, corporate property may be made subject to attachment on mesne process and execution.[25] Where the corporation is

10. On an issue of the overvaluation of a partnership property transferred to a corporation, evidence of the amount of sales of the partnership during its existence is admissible to determine the value of the good will—White Corbin & Co. v. Jones, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 373, 12 N. Y. Ann Cas. 277.

11. Swentzel v. Investment Co., 168 Mo. 272.

12. Coler v. Allen (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 609.

13, 14. Reed v. Specialty Co., 64 N. J. Eq. 231.

15. Laws 1896, p. 298, § 64—Reed v. Specialty Co., 64 N. J. Eq. 231.

16. Code 1887, § 2485—Millhiser Mfg. Co. v. Mills Co. (Va.) 44 S. E. 760.

17. Millhiser Mfg. Co. v. Mills Co. (Va.) 44 S. E. 760.

18. A notice is sufficient if it set forth the date of the employment, the name of the corporation and the amount of the lien. Burns' Rev. Sts. 1901, §§ 7248, 7249—Forrest v. Corey, 29 Ind. App. 159.

19, 20. Forrest v. Corey, 29 Ind. App. 159.

21. Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 7253—Forrest v. Corey, 29 Ind. App. 159.

22. Kahle v. Oil Co., 51 W. Va. 313.

23. Godchaux v. Morris (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 482.

24. Kahle v. Oil Co., 51 W. Va. 313.

insolvent, an attachment by one creditor may be set aside on a subsequent proceeding to wind up the corporation.[26] Where a corporation is engaged in public or quasi public service, its property incident to such service is not subject to sale on execution unless it is so provided by statute.[27]

Suits to wind up and dissolve.—Under the New Jersey statute defining the persons authorized to maintain a proceeding under the insolvent corporation act, the word "creditor" will be regarded as including all persons so related to the corporation and its assets as to be entitled to a share of what is divided among creditors.[28] The fact that a federal court has taken jurisdiction of an action by a creditor against the corporation, and placed the assets in the hands of a receiver, will not prevent the maintenance in a court of New Jersey of a proceeding, under a New Jersey statute, to enjoin the corporation from the exercise of its franchise, since the proceeding is not pecuniary in its nature so as to include any of the matters of which the federal court has taken jurisdiction on the ground of the diversity of citizenship.[29] Under certain statutes, proceedings provided for the benefit of creditors for the enforcement as against the directors, trustees, officers, or stockholders on account of any liability created by law, the action when once begun by a creditor is no longer subject to his control, and cannot be dismissed without the consent of all creditors who appear and prosecute.[30]

Assignment for benefit of creditors.—The lien of a judgment entered on a judgment note is not displaced by a voluntary assignment executed for such a purpose by the vice-president, who was a majority stockholder, without authority from the directors.[31] An assignee for creditors of a corporation may acquire a good title, though the deed of assignment was not authorized by a vote of the majority of the stock as provided by the articles of incorporation prior to its execution under authority of the board of directors, especially where for four years the stockholders have not questioned the validity of the assignment.[32]

The assignment may be avoided by an action by the creditors to enforce their claims against the corporation where by statute it is provided that any conveyance of the corporation's property shall be void as against prior creditors in case they commence proceedings to enforce their claims within a stated time after the registration of the conveyance. Such action in case the corporate assets are not thereby increased does not confer any lien in behalf of the creditors as against the corporation's receiver.[33]

Insolvency proceedings.—The corporation is not insolvent by reason of the mere fact that it cannot pay its obligations in cash as they become due, where it is not yet a fully going concern and the returns of its business have not yet matured, though their amount is greatly in excess of its liabilities.[34] Holders of 25. Rev. St. 1883, c. 46, § 20—Poor v. Chapin, 97 Me. 295.

26. Washington Liquor Co. v. Cafe Co., 28 Wash. 176, 68 Pac. 444.

27. Sherman County Irr. & Water Power & Imp. Co. v. Drake (Neb.) 91 N. W. 512.

28. A trust company which has entered into a contract with a corporation to issue certificates secured by stocks and bonds of the corporation, the corporation to pay a certain amount of money annually to the trust company for distribution among the certificate holders, is a creditor entitled to maintain an action under the Insolvent Corporation act (Act 1829, Pub. Laws, p. 58)—Gallagher v. Asphalt Co. (N. J. Ch.) 55 Atl. 259.

29. Bill under Insolvent Corporation act 1829, Pub. Laws, p. 58—Gallagher v. Asphalt Co. (N. J. Ch.) 55 Atl. 259.

30. Action brought under Rev. St. 1898, § 3223, cannot be otherwise dismissed before final judgment—Williams v. Brewster (Wis.) 93 N. W. 479.

31. A judgment note was reduced to a judgment before ratification of the assignment—Friedman v. Lesher, 198 Ill. 21.

32. Blanton v. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co., 120 Fed. 318.

33. Code, 1883, § 685—Fisher v. Western Carolina Bank (N. C.) 44 S. E. 601.

34. Joseph v. Raff, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 47.

a claim against an insolvent corporation may come in at any time before final distribution.[35] Stockholders cannot intervene in insolvency proceedings to set up a defense not available to the corporation.[36] Creditors are entitled to share in the assets of an insolvent corporation in proportion to their respective claims without being parties to a suit against the trustee holding such assets.[37] If provisions for the allowance of attorney's fees on the collection of notes are valid under the law of the state, they may be allowed in a federal court where on insolvency of the corporation, the creditors employ attorneys to prove their claims in a creditors' suit in which actions at law on claims are enjoined.[38]

Receivership on insolvency.—The appointment of a receiver for an insolvent corporation sought by creditors on the ground of misapplication of the assets is within the discretion of the court.[39] If the statute provides that a receiver may be appointed on insolvency, there need be no other prerequisites.[40] The appointment of a receiver is justified by the payment of certain creditors in full after knowledge of the inability to pay all claims of similar rank.[41]

The receiver of a corporation possesses no power or authority beyond the jurisdiction of the court appointing him.[42]

After a receiver has taken control of the assets of an insolvent corporation, no creditor by an action subsequently commenced, or a judgment subsequently obtained, can acquire a superior lien upon such assets.[43] After the appointment of a receiver, the creditor is not entitled to interest on his claim,[44] nor can interest be allowed as between preferred and unpreferred creditors.[45] Though a creditor hold a lien, if such lien is not enforced, but the claim is paid from the general funds on a receivership, he cannot have interest after the appointment.[46] The fact that a charter gives a preference on dissolution to debts which the corporation owes as a trustee does not create a preference for interest thereon.[47]

Where a receiver is defending an action against a corporation, intervention by a stockholder and creditor will not be allowed unless the receiver is acting fraudulently or to the prejudice of interests which he should protect. A mere interest as a stockholder in the corporation will not confer the right.[48] Where a trustee has brought a bill to secure the sale of certificates pledged by the corporation, the receivers will not be required to answer setting up certain facts at the request of a stockholder in case they allege that they have inquired into such facts and found them without foundation.[49]

Creditors who have not appeared before the referee appointed to state a receiver's account are not entitled to notice of filing of his report.[50]

35. People v. American Loan & Trust Co., 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 647.

36. Cumberland Lumber Co. v. Clinton Hill Lumber Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 452.

37. National Wall Paper Co. v. Columbia Nat. Bank (Neb.) 93 N. W. 1004.

38. South Carolina contract—Richmond Guano Co. v. Farmers' Cotton Seed Oil Mill & Ginnery, 119 Fed. 709.

39. The Anvil v. Savery, 116 Ga. 321.

40. 2 Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 5456—New York Nat. Exch. Bank v. Metropolitan Sav. Bank, 28 Wash. 553, 68 Pac. 905.

41. The Anvil v. Savery, 116 Ga. 321.

42. A New York receiver cannot secure control of assets in Pennsylvania as against creditors in such state, though the domestic creditors issue no process, acquire no lien and make no demand for payment out of assets in the hands of the ancillary receiver within the state until after the fund was demanded by the foreign receiver—Frowert v. Blank, 205 Pa. 299.

43. Clark v. Bacorn (C. C. A.) 116 Fed. 617.

44. Though he may have had a lien on the property giving him a priority, but there was no attempt to enforce such lien—Solomons v. American Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 116 Fed. 676.

45. People v. American Loan & Trust Co., 172 N. Y. 371.

46. Bates v. American Bldg. & Loan Ass'n (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 1018.

47. People v. American Loan & Trust Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 579.

48. Hosmer v. Standard Shoe Mach. Co., 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 204.

49. Land Title & Trust Co. v. Asphalt Co., 121 Fed. 192.

50. People v. American Loan & Trust Co., 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 647.

Where the court in an action against the corporation has appointed a receiver for the protection of the property pending litigation, its power over the subject-matter is not exhausted until the objects of the suit have been attained.[51]

Distribution of assets.—A judgment in an action by a receiver showing how much of the debtor's claim should be discharged does not create a preference over other corporate debts.[52] Fees of an attorney acting for a corporation cannot be preferred, where his services did not create any additional assets or were rendered in resisting the appointment of a receiver or matters not in judicial proceedings or not brought to judgment.[53] Costs of an action brought by an insolvent corporation while winding up its affairs are preferred claims.[54] Where a claim is based on a contract void as to all creditors and the objections of certain creditors are sustained, such ruling inures to the benefit of all,[55] though it is held also that where, on objection by unpreferred creditors, certain funds are diverted from the preferred creditors, they may be shared in only by those creditors who have excepted.[56]

The lien of a judgment is not divested by final decree dissolving a corporation, appointing a permanent receiver, and ordering a sale of the realty though the judgment is not referred to in the decree, and the judgment creditor may sell on his judgment, the sale being subject to order of court.[57]

Sales by receiver.—The code provisions authorizing a sale in partition free from lien do not apply to sales on dissolution of the corporation for insolvency.[58] Purchasers at a receiver's sale of corporate property take free from all claims except such as are declared in the decree not to be prejudiced.[59] One purchasing at a receiver's sale with notice of a judgment takes subject to the lien of such judgment on its being declared valid on appeal from a stockholder's action taking it.[60] The receiver must either redeem existing liens or satisfy them or sell subject thereto.[61]

Restraining orders.—No authority to grant a general restraining order exists where there is no authority to appoint a receiver.[62]

Remedies on mismanagement by receiver.—Where a receiver has been removed and a new one appointed, a complaint by the new receiver and certain creditors is bad for a misjoinder, if it state an independent cause of action in favor of the new receiver against the old and also in favor of the creditors against the directors and certain shareholders. Such a proceeding is to be regarded as a creditor's suit authorized for the purpose of winding up an insolvent corporation.[63]

51. Under this principle it was held that where an action had been begun by former owners of water rights controlled by a corporation to enforce specific performance of a contract, whereby on the happening of certain contingencies the title to a canal and appurtenances owned by the corporation should pass to them and vest in a new corporation for their benefit, and in such action such contract had been ordered enforced, a receiver, appointed pending litigation, may be directed to re-take possession of the property after it has been delivered pursuant to the decree to the new corporation if such new corporation has refused to borrow money to discharge indebtedness incurred during the receivership, and has acted adversely to the interests of the owners of the water rights—La Junta & Lamar Canal Co. v. Hess (Colo.) 71 Pac. 415.

52. Lacey v. Clinton Loan Ass'n (N. C.) 43 S. E. 586.

53. People v. American Loan & Trust Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 579.

54. Ephraim v. Pacific Bank, 136 Cal. 646, 69 Pac. 436.

55. Olmstead v. Vance & Jones Co., 196 Ill. 236.

56. People v. American Loan & Trust Co., 70 App. Div. (N. Y.) 579.

57, 58. In re Coleman, 174 N. Y. 373.

59. Scott v. Farmers & M. Nat. Bank (Tex.) 75 S. W. 7.

60, 61. In re Coleman, 174 N. Y. 373.

62. Zeltner v. Henry Zeltner Brew. Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 136.

63. Rev. St. 1898, §§ 2316-3228—Boyd v. Mut. Fire Ass'n (Wis.) 90 N. W. 1086.

(§ 16) C. Rights of corporate mortgagees and bondholders. Generally.—A mortgage may be of only partial validity.[64] Where a mortgage of corporate property has been executed in part to accomplish a fraudulent purpose, it cannot be enforced for the security of any part of the consideration, if it is impossible to separate the good from the bad.[65] It will be presumed that it is for an amount authorized by the corporate charter.[66] The holders of corporate bonds secured by mortgage may enforce the same though they are issued before its entire capital stock is subscribed for in good faith, and the officers were by statute therefore personally liable for its debts.[67] Assignees of corporate property to secure the corporate bonds are bona fide holders, no bad faith being shown or fraud on the part of the directors of the corporation.[68]

A mortgagee of corporate property should, on a mortgage being declared void on account of fraud, be refunded taxes which he has paid during the time he held record title.[69]

Execution of mortgages and bonds.[70]—The board of directors of a company authorized to loan and borrow money, and to mortgage and otherwise dispose of its property, may execute a bond and assign the assets of the corporation as security.[71] Authority to execute a mortgage may be shown by the corporate records showing an approval of the mortgage at a meeting at which all the stockholders were present,[72] and a mortgage otherwise properly executed is not invalidated by the fact that a resolution authorizing its execution is not shown,[73] nor by the fact of omission of a portion of the corporate name from the signature.[74] Where a corporation has issued bonds secured by mortgage and accepted the benefits, it cannot assert that the mortgage is invalid because the statutory assent of the stockholders was not given,[75] or because the corporate meeting at which it was authorized was held in a foreign state.[76]

Pledge of bonds.—Corporate bonds are not invalidated by the fact that they are pledged instead of being sold to raise money in good faith for corporate purposes, though when authorized it was understood that they were to be sold; and though by statute the issuance of bonds or stock is prohibited except for labor done or money or property actually received, corporate bonds may be pledged to secure an amount less than their face, which has been used in the discharge of the purchase price on machinery which the corporation had taken over to be used in its business, and the bonds are not to be regarded as pledged for antecedent

64. As where only part of the debts secured are enforceable—Reed v. Helois Carbide Specialty Co., 64 N. J. Eq. 231.

65. Lamb v. McIntire (Mass.) 67 N. E. 320.

66. Lincoln v. Lincoln St. Ry. Co. (Neb.) 93 N. W. 766.

67. All the statutory steps had apparently been taken, and Hurd's Rev. St. 1899, p. 438, Corp. Act § 27, makes the article of incorporation prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated—Gunderson v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 199 Ill. 422.

68. Hutchison v. Rock Hill Real Estate & Loan Co., 65 S. C. 45.

69. Lamb v. McIntire (Mass.) 67 N. E. 320.

70. A corporate mortgage was signed and sealed in the presence of two witnesses and carried to the trustee, who, on its receipt, executed its acceptance in the presence of two witnesses, held, a sufficient delivery—William Firth Co. v. South Carolina Loan & Trust Co. (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 569. Evidence held sufficient to show that bonds were issued for a consideration which the corporation actually received and were valid—Schultze v. Van Doren (N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 815. Mortgage to the amount of $600,000 for money spent in construction is not for a fictitious debt where it is shown that $900,000 was expended—Lincoln v. Lincoln St. Ry. Co. (Neb.) 93 N. W. 766.

71. Act Dec. 1888, pp. 248-250. General incorporation Act Dec. 23, 1886—Hutchison v. Rock Hill Real Estate & Loan Co., 65 S. C. 45.

72. Crossette v. Jordan (Mich.) 92 N. W. 782.

73. Reed v. Helois Carbide Specialty Co., 64 N. J. Eq. 231.

74. It was clearly shown that there was an intention to bind the corporation and the instruments were duly authorized—In re Goldville Mfg. Co., 118 Fed. 892.

75. Atlantic Trust Co. v. Crystal Water Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 539.

76. Schultze v. Van Doren (N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 815.

debts, there being a present consideration.[77] Bonds cannot be pledged for the security of directors.[78]

Lien.—Corporate bonds secured by trust deed are of equal priority, their lien being dated from the time of record of the mortgage.[79] The lien of a mortgage on a corporation's property may be superior to paving assessments except such as were already in existence or in contemplation at the time it was recorded.[80] Those who hold bonds issued on cancellation of stock have a preference to the claims of ordinary stockholders on an assignment for creditors.[81] Where by statute it is provided that, on purchase of a corporation's property under a mortgage sale, the purchaser shall become a new corporation succeeding to the rights and duties of the old corporation which is by the fact, dissolved; after sale under a second mortgage at which the purchaser assumes payment of the first mortgage, the first mortgage bondholders possess a lien inferior to that of a judgment for a subsequent tort of the new company, which judgment by statute is superior to mortgage liens.[82]

Transfer.—Mortgage bonds are negotiable.[83] Bona fide holders are in the position of bona fide holders of notes with regard to defenses available on foreclosure of the mortgages securing them.[84] Where bonds and a mortgage are given to a contractor in payment for construction, the bonds in the hands of a subsequent transferee are not liable to defenses against the contractor arising out of invalid performance.[85]

Bond coupons are negotiable where they contain an absolute promise to pay, and the purchaser before maturity is entitled to payment as therein provided without regard to limitations or conditions in the bonds and mortgage, the mortgage providing that the coupons shall be transferable by delivery.[86]

Exchange of bonds for new issue.—On the issue by a successor corporation of bonds secured by mortgage on the same property which secured a mortgage for the bonds of a preceding corporation, a provision that trustees of the second mortgage should retain a portion of the second bonds to exchange for the first mortgage bonds does not create a trust in favor of the first mortgage bondholders, and their right to an exchange may be lost by laches.[87]

Enforcement.—Where a mortgage securing corporate bonds provides that it shall mature on default in payment of interest, the option to declare the mortgage due need not be exercised by all the bondholders.[88] If the trustee wrongfully

77. Contruing Const. S. C. art. 9, § 10—William Firth Co. v. South Carolina Loan & Trust Co. (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 569. Construing South Carolina Constitution—In re Goldville Mfg. Co., 118 Fed. 892.

78. Where the bonds secured by a mortgage on corporate property are not sold, but are directed by the board of directors to be held by the secretary to secure the directors against certain obligations incurred by them on behalf of the corporation, a sale under a power in the mortgage is void, the pledge being void, since there was no one to act for the company, and the resolution was not concurred in by all the stockholders—Scott v. Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank (Tex.) 75 S. W. 7.

See ante, § 15-S. for effect of personal dealings between directors and corporation.

79, 80. Lincoln v. Lincoln St. Ry. Co. (Neb.) 93 N. W. 766.

81. Mechanics' Bldg. & Sav. Ass'n No. 2's Assigned Estate, 202 Pa. 589.

82. Code North Carolina, §§ 697, 698—Guardian Trust & Deposit Co. v. Greensboro Water Supply Co., 115 Fed. 184.

83. Lincoln v. Lincoln St. Ry. Co. (Neb.) 93 N. W. 766.

84. Atlantic Trust Co. v. Crystal Water Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 539.

85. Wells v. Northern Trust Co., 195 Ill. 288.

86. Haskins v. Albany & H. Ry. & Power Co., 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 31.

87. The exchange cannot be enforced some eighteen years after the issuance of the second mortgage bonds and after the second mortgage bonds have become of greater value than the first, and the corporation has refused to make further exchange unless paid the difference in the price—Morse v. Chicago & E. I. R. Co., 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 406.

88. A request by a chairman of a committee representing a majority of the bonds and similar requests by other bondholders is sufficient to show the exercise of an option that decline to sue to foreclose, one or more of the bondholders may sue individually though it is provided in the mortgage that the trustee shall sue.[89]

If a trustee suing to foreclose a corporate mortgage desires to show that he is entitled to the equities of a bona fide transferee for value of the bonds, he must show that the persons for whom he is trustee were not the original holders, but the burden of proving want of consideration in the holders is on the corporation, since where the bonds are payable to a trustee or bearer, it will be presumed that the holders acquired them in good faith and for value. The same presumptions as to good faith and payment apply against the trustee as against individual bondholders.[90] The trustee should not be allowed compensation for sale where it is made by a receiver.[91] On foreclosure sale, error in granting too short a time for redemption before sale is cured by the fact that sale is not actually made until the lapse of a sufficient time.[92]

Receivership.—Unless mismanagement is clearly shown, a minority of the bondholders of a corporation should not be allowed a receiver on a suit to foreclose where they had delayed a long time before bringing such action, though there had been a default in interest, and during recent years large sums have been expended by the corporation in development.[93] A receiver of a corporation nominated under a power in a trust deed is nevertheless an officer of the court and need not account to the trustee for his fees.[94]

Intervention by the stockholders in proceedings to foreclose a mortgage given to secure corporate bonds is not warranted by general charges that the bonds were received at a large discount.[95] A holder of the bonds and stock of a corporation cannot intervene in insolvency proceedings against a corporation in which receivers have been appointed, for the reason that the answer of the corporation is collusive and void, in order to permit him to set up matters of defense and methods of collecting the assets of the corporation, which he insists will not be adopted by the present receivers though for the interest of the shareholders.[96] The fact that a majority of the certificate holders have united to secure a settlement of their claims will not authorize a minority holder to intervene in insolvency proceedings in which receivers have been appointed on the ground that a committee representing the majority holders is the real party complainant, since his rights would be unaffected by any compromise which they might make. The assets of the corporation are sufficiently protected by the receivership, and as to him any liability of the subscribers to the capital stock would be unaffected by a settlement the trustee should foreclose on default in interest—Atlantic Trust Co. v. Crystal Water Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 539.

89. Schultze v. Van Doren (N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 815.

90. Evidence held sufficient to show consideration paid by the original transferees—Atlantic Trust Co. v. Crystal Water Co., 72 App. Div. (N. Y.) 539.

91. Where before instituting foreclosure proceedings, the bondholders are required to deposit the amount required for costs, compensation to the trustee and counsel fees, it being understood that such sum should cover the expenses of sale; if the sale is directed to be made by a receiver, a reasonable deduction should be made from the sum deposited before turning it over to the trustee as compensation, but if but one of the bond holders objects the decree will be disturbed only so far as necessary to protect his interest—Girard Life Ins., Annuity & Trust Co. v. Bedford Coal & Iron Co., 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 304.

92. Not prejudicial to allow only ten days before an absolute sale where nearly six months elapse before the sale is confirmed—Wells v. Northern Trust Co., 195 Ill. 288.

93. Evidence held insufficient to warrant the appointment of a receiver against the will of majority of the bondholders—Romare v. Broken Arrow Coal & Min. Co., 114 Fed. 194.

94. Citizens' Trust & Deposit Co. v. Tompkins (Md.) 54 Atl. 617.

95. No names were stated, but merely that the directors agreed with certain capitalists that supplies should be furnished at high rates, and alleging on information and belief that such capitalists were still the owners of the bonds—Gunderson v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 199 Ill. 422.

96. Land Title & Trust Co. v. Asphalt Co., 114 Fed. 484.

with the majority holders. Neither is the certificate holder entitled to an order instructing the receivers to bring suits to ascertain the liability of the promoters, directors, officers, trustees, etc., of the defendant corporation before the deficiency of the corporate assets is determined.[97]

(§ 16) D. Officers and stockholders as creditors, etc.—Stockholders or directors who make advances in good faith stand on the footing of other creditors.[98] An agreement by a corporation with its directors, for the conveyance to them of property to the amount of its notes, which they assumed and on which they are guarantors, is on good consideration and is valid as against other creditors, the corporation being solvent.[99] On conveyance by the directors of an insolvent corporation to a director, in payment of a corporate debt, the director must show the good faith of the transaction and that he did not vote therefor or improperly influence his associates.[1] The directors may execute a mortgage to secure another corporation in which they are stockholders,[2] and they will be protected as to advances made to enable a bona fide purchase from a corporation in which they are also directors.[3] A sale of property of an insolvent corporation made without consideration, by its treasurer to an insolvent firm of which he was a member, is invalid,[4] as is also a collusive judgment creating a preference.[5] Fraud in a mortgage to stockholders is not conclusively shown by the fact that stockholders meet before its execution and pay up their stock subscriptions by giving the corporation credit on accounts against it.[6]

Preferences.—A solvent corporation may prefer a director and an officer as a creditor and such action may be questioned only when the corporation is insolvent,[7] but an insolvent corporation cannot prefer claims of its officers as against other creditors,[8] nor can it dispose of its property to its directors,[9] though in Kansas a transfer on full consideration is valid in the absence of actual fraud.[10] In Indiana a contrary rule is held as to the directors of a private manufacturing corporation, and a preference to them is allowed.[11] Where a director after insolvency of the corporation furnishes it money to continue its opera-

97. Land Title & Trust Co. v. Asphalt Co., 121 Fed. 587.

98. Standard Cotton Seed Oil Co. v. Excelsior Refining Co., 108 La. 74.

99. Swentzel v. Franklin Inv. Co., 168 Mo. 272.

1. Pitman v. Chicago Lead Co., 93 Mo. App. 592.

2. Evidence held to show good faith in the giving of a mortgage to secure indebtedness to corporations in which the mortgagor's directors and stockholders were also stockholders, though at the time the mortgagor corporation was insolvent—Chick v. Fuller (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 22.

3. Where a corporation's directors advance it money to make a purchase of property, their claims cannot be set aside in favor of other creditors though they were also directors in the corporation of which the purchase was made, if the purchase has been ratified by the sale of the property by the assignee of the corporation for creditors and an incumbrance thereon has been settled—Mechanics' Bldg. & Sav. Ass'n No. 2's Assigned Estate, 202 Pa. 589.

4. Fraudulent as to corporation's creditors and also as transfer in contemplation of insolvency forbidden by Gen. St. p. 919; Corp. Act, § 64—Richardson v. Gerli (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 438.

5. Where certain directors assign a cause of action to a third person to be placed in judgment, and the directors being served as vice-president and secretary allow a default judgment to be taken and the entire corporate property sold to satisfy judgment of less than one-half its value, judgment is fraudulent and void as to other creditors—Portland Consol. Min. Co. v. Rossiter (S. D.) 94 N. W. 702. A judgment on notes executed for the use of a corporate board of directors, at a time when the corporation was insolvent, may be set aside by the receiver of the corporation—Taylor v. Fanning, 87 Minn. 52.

6. Crossette v. Jordan (Mich.) 92 N. W. 782.

7. Wolf v. Erwin & Wood Co. (Ark.) 75 S. W. 722.

8. Shields v. Hobart, 172 Mo. 491; Lamb v. Russell (Miss.) 32 So. 916. Where directors have advanced money to take up the corporation's obligation without agreement for priority, they cannot take a judgment note for their advances—Pangburn v. American Vault, Safe & Lock Co., 205 Pa. 93.

9. Off v. Jack, 104 Ill. App. 655.

10. Webb v. Rockefeller (Kan.) 71 Pac 283.

11. Mortgage to directors sustained—Nappanee Canning Co. v. Reid, 159 Ind. 614, 59 L. R. A. 199.

tion, under an agreement with the directors that he should be protected by a first judgment, such a judgment if confessed is good as to creditors.[12]

Where a statute which authorizes the issuance of preferred cumulative dividend stock provides that it shall be subordinate to the corporate debts, and other liabilities on insolvency, the holders of such stock cannot enforce a mortgage given to secure it to the prejudice of general creditors, especially where the mortgage provides that in case of the dissolution of the corporation, it should be paid after the payment of the debts and liabilities and the corporation was in fact dissolved, even though the promoters might by the postponement be enabled to perpetrate a fraud on the preferred stockholders or though the mortgage was recorded before the claims of the general creditors.[13]

(§ 16) E. Liability of stockholders on account of unpaid subscriptions, and remedies. Statutory provisions.[14]—Statutes exempting shareholders from further liability after they have paid up a stated per cent of the par value do not affect creditors whose claims exist prior to the passage of the statute.[15] Where the liability of stockholders is reduced by a subsequent statute, the limitation of a creditor's claim which arose before the passage of the statute begins to run at the time the stockholders default in the payment of their subscriptions under the original contract.[16]

Who are liable.—Under the statutes of Missouri it is not a necessary requisite to title that stocks be transferred on the stock book, and after a recognized transfer by indorsement and delivery, the corporation's creditors cannot recover on an unpaid subscription from the original holder.[17] A stockholder's liability for unpaid subscriptions may be enforced by a creditor without a showing of fraud.[18] The fact that a portion of stock has been taken up from the subscriber and made treasury stock does not relieve him from personal liability as to subsequent creditors to the amount of the subscription unpaid.[19] One who receives stock as a bonus is not within the meaning of a statute imposing liability in favor of creditors on the original subscribers to corporate stock, to the extent of their unpaid subscriptions.[20] One need not be a stockholder at the date of a call in order to render him liable for unpaid stock subscriptions, where with knowledge of the insolvency of the corporation he has transferred the stock to an insolvent person knowing him to be insolvent for the purpose of relieving himself from liability.[21] The stockholder's liability does not cease in case of a forfeiture of stock which is actually void, though it may where there is a merely informal forfeiture which has been acquiesced in by both parties.[22]

Preferred stockholders though by statute exempted from personal liability for corporate debts are not relieved from a statutory liability on receipt of withdrawals from the capital stock.[23]

Fictitiously paid up stock.—One who purchases stock from the corporation at less than its par value without knowledge that it was not originally sold at par

12. Hogsett v. Columbia Iron & Steel Co., 203 Pa. 148.

13. Pub. Laws 1896, p. 283, § 18 as amended by Pub. Laws 1901, p. 245—Black v. Hobart Trust Co. (N. J. Ch.) 53 Atl. 826.

14. Act Feb. 18, 1895, Code, §§ 823, 1282, authorizing a bill in equity to reach unpaid stock subscriptions, does not apply to suits pending at the time of its passage—Henderson v. Hall, 134 Ala. 455.

15, 16. Williams v. Watters (Md.) 54 Atl. 767.

17. Dain Mfg. Co. v. Trumbull Seed Co., 95 Mo. App. 144.

18. Shields v. Hobart (Mo.) 72 S. W. 669.

19. Chrisman-Sawyer Banking Co. v. Independence Wool Mfg. Co. (Mo.) 68 S. W. 1026.

20. Const. Neb. art. 11b, § 4—Seaboard Nat. Bank v. Slater, 117 Fed. 1002.

21. People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rickard (Cal.) 73 Pac. 858.

22. Crissey v. Cook (Kan.) 72 Pac. 541.

23. Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 7073, 7057—American Steel & Wire Co. v. Eddy (Mich.) 89 N. W. 952.

is not liable to creditors for the difference between the amount paid and the par value,[24] and a recital in stock certificates that stock is full paid and nonassessable throws on the creditor the burden of showing that the stock was taken with knowledge that the recital was fraudulent, there being no liability in the case of a bona fide purchaser, such a purchaser having the right to rely on the recital in the certificate.[25]

Where stock has been accepted in payment of stock subscriptions at an excessive valuation, creditors are entitled to relief against the subscriber.[26] Under statutory provisions that stock is not to be issued except for money paid, labor done, or property actually received, a stock subscription cannot be paid in the stock of another corporation unless such stock is disposed of or a direct pecuniary advantage has been received.[27] The burden of showing good faith in payment is on the stockholder.[28] Where stockholders jointly turn over property at a sum in excess of its real value in payment of their subscriptions, they are liable individually for the discrepancy in proportion to the number of shares held by them.[29] On payment in property, the stockholder is liable though both the corporation and the stockholder at the time supposed the value of the stock and the property was equal,[30] but it is held that the transaction must be first impeached for fraud on the corporation.[31]

In determining whether the property of a firm has been overvalued where it is transferred in consideration of an issue of stock, the good will of the firm should be considered, the firm having been merged in the corporation.[32]

Persons to whom a mining corporation transfers its stock in consideration of the transfer of mining locations are not protected under a statute authorizing the issuance of full paid stock for such purposes, if there has been no mineral discovered in such locations.[33] The creditor may be estopped to assert a fictitious valuation.[34]

Estoppel of stockholder.—If a stockholder makes representations that the capital stock has been entirely paid in, he may be liable to persons becoming creditors after the transfer of his stock for unpaid subscriptions.[35] As against an action to recover an assessment on stock, defendant who does not seek to rescind the contract by which he acquired ownership cannot assert that the contract under which he held was void.[36]

24. Stock standing in the name of a trustee—Berry v. Rood, 168 Mo. 316.

25. Garden City Sand Co. v. American Refuse Crematory Co., 105 Ill. App. 342.

26. Evidence held to show that stock in another corporation turned in on a stock subscription was of small value, authorizing creditors to relief—Lester-Haltom v. Bemis Lumber Co. (Ark.) 74 S. W. 518.

27. Construing Texas Const. art. 12, § 6—Lester-Haltom v. Bemis Lumber Co. (Ark.) 74 S. W. 518.

28. Property conveyed in payment at an over valuation—Taylor v. Walker, 117 Fed. 737.

29. McClure v. Paducah Iron Co., 90 Mo. App. 567.

30. Const. art. 12, § 8; Rev. St. 1899, § 962—Berry v. Rood, 168 Mo. 316.

31. To render the holder liable as for unpaid subscriptions—Bank v. Belington Coal & Coke Co., 51 W. Va. 60. Evidence held sufficient to show good faith in the transfer of partnership property to a corporation at an amount in excess of its value—Taylor v. Walker, 117 Fed. 737.

32. White v. Jones, 79 App. Div. 373, 12 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 277.

33. A petition in an action by a creditor to reach the amount unpaid on such stock which asserts that no mineral had been discovered is therefore not demurrable. Construing Mills' Ann. St. §§ 486, 582, 3152; Rev. St. U. S. § 2322—Buck v. Jones (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 951.

34. One joining in an agreement whereby at the organization of a corporation certain incorporators received fully paid stock in exchange for property which they transferred to the corporation, cannot, on becoming a creditor of the corporation, assert that the property was not equal to the par value of the stock as a ground for holding the incorporators liable for their unpaid subscriptions—Cunningham v. Holley, Mason (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 720.

35. McBryan v. Universal Elevator Co. (Mich.) 89 N. W. 683.

36. Mt. Forest Ass'n v. Borrowe, 71 N H. 69.

Defenses.—As against an application for an order for an assessment for unpaid subscriptions, stockholders cannot assert that the corporation never became such de jure or de facto, nor that the agreement to incorporate was abandoned and subscription canceled by subscribers, nor can they plead the statute of limitations, nor that the claim against one of the subscribers is barred by a decree of the orphan's court.[37] An agreement by the original creditor to waive the right to enforce liability on subscriptions may constitute a defense.[38]

The fact that creditors have accepted dividends derived from the sale at a fictitious value, of the assets of an insolvent corporation, on stock subscriptions, does not prevent an action by them or in their behalf to recover the actual unpaid balance.[39]

Where stock subscribers, relying on an unauthorized agreement by the president to purchase their stock, pay their subscription notes, a judgment creditor cannot enforce a repayment of the notes, but may only recover the corporate assets, applied to the purchase of the stock.[40]

A statute providing that where it is necessary to resort to a court of chancery to settle and wind up the affairs of the insolvent corporation, the court may, in case it is necessary, direct the trustee, assignee, or receiver to sue at law to recover assessments on stock subscriptions, and which further provides that in such suit at law any defenses which would have been admissible, were the corporation solvent, shall be permitted, confers the right to assert defenses on a stockholder sued in a foreign state by a receiver to enforce an assessment.[41]

Stockholders who have not answered may be entitled to a successful defense by other stockholders.[42]

In actions brought to collect assessments, the stockholders may make a defense based on their status as stockholders, though in insolvency proceedings they cannot interpose any defense that the corporation itself could not set up, and the determination of the debts of the corporation in insolvency proceedings cannot be questioned in proceedings by the receiver to secure an authorization of an assessment on stockholders.[43]

Set-off.—Demands of stockholders against the corporation may be set off in a proceeding in equity by a judgment creditor to reach unpaid stock subscriptions,[44] but the demands must be valid,[45] and if a portion is invalid, the stockholder has the burden of showing the validity of the portion relied on.[46]

37. Cumberland Lumber Co. v. Clinton Hill Lumber & Mfg. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 450.

38. Where one of the purposes of a corporation is to purchase certain land, and stock subscriptions are made under an agreement with the owner of the land that there should be no personal liability to the stock subscribers for the purchase, such agreement prevents the enforcement by the receiver of the corporation against the subscribers personally of their unpaid stock subscriptions to satisfy the purchase price; though it does not provide for the amount of the capital stock or specify the amount each subscriber would take and though the notes contained an unqualified promise on the part of the corporation to pay, had been assigned to a third person, and not having been made payable at a bank were subject to defenses by the maker (Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 7517; Horner's Rev. St. 1901, § 5503)—Carnahan v. Campbell, 158 Ind. 226.

39. Berry v. Rood, 168 Mo. 316.

40. Henderson v. Hall, 134 Ala. 455.

41. Act Va. Dec. 22, 1897; Acts 1897, 1898, p. 16, c. 20, may be taken advantage of by stockholders, resident in Maryland, sued by a receiver appointed in Virginia—Williams v. Watters (Md.) 54 Atl. 767.

42. Denial of insolvency in an action to reach unpaid stock subscriptions—Fletcher v. Bank of Lonoke (Ark.) 69 S. W. 580.

43. Cumberland Lumber Co. v. Clinton Hill Lumber & Mfg. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 450.

44. Shields v. Hobart (Mo.) 72 S. W. 669.

45. Where a corporation having sold its property constituting its actual capital, distributed the purchase money notes as dividends and then renewed them with its own notes indorsed by stockholders, stockholders who have paid in discharge of their liabilities as such indorsers, cannot set off such payments as against their unpaid subscriptions to the capital stock, when a judgment creditor seeks to collect them. Rev. Stat. 1889, § 2773, provides that directors shall

Limitations.[47]—Equity will apply the statute of limitations by analogy to a proceeding to enforce a stockholder's liability.[48] Limitations against the right to recover on stock subscriptions run from the time of assessment.[49] The right of action to enforce unpaid stock on the insolvency of a corporation accrues at the time the corporation is declared insolvent.[50] A statutory limitation applicable to the enforcement of the stockholder's personal liability does not apply to an action for unpaid subscriptions.[51] Under statutes which do away with the necessity of the issuance of an execution against a corporation and its return unsatisfied before an action may be maintained to enforce the liability of stockholders on their subscriptions, the limitation of such an action will begin at the time the creditor has notice that the corporation is insolvent, and such notice will be presumed when the insolvency becomes a matter of general notoriety.[52] Where the members are policy holders, the right to enforce their liability on the policies accrues for the purposes of limitations at the time of appointment of a receiver for a mutual insurance company.[53] Under a statute allowing suits in equity to reach unpaid subscriptions, limitation will run against such an action, though the right to proceed under the general chancery act has not accrued, since the remedies being similar, the rule is that the limitation runs when the right to pursue the earlier remedy accrues.[54] Where the jurisdiction of chancery of proceedings to recover assessments on stock subscriptions after insolvency is removed by statute, a proviso that as to chancery suits pending at the time of passage seeking to recover unpaid stock subscriptions, the limitation shall not run during the time elapsing between the institution of such suit and one month after the order authorizing a common-law action, does not apply in the case of a chancery suit against a corporation by a creditor, where recovery against stockholders was not sought until by an amendment after the passage of the act.[55]

Who may enforce.—Under the Illinois statute allowing suits in equity against stockholders to compel them to pay their pro rata share of the corporate debts to the extent of the unpaid portion of their stock, a simple contract creditor may bring the proceeding.[56] An action to recover unpaid stock subscriptions cannot be maintained by a creditor for his own benefit, but the right is in the receiver for the benefit of all creditors,[57] and neither can the action be brought by an assignee for creditors.[58] be personally liable to creditors in case they pay dividends diminishing the capital stock —Shields v. Hobart (Mo.) 72 S. W. 669.

46. If there is a showing that a portion of notes on which a stockholder was indorser was unlawfully issued, the stockholder, if he attempts to set off a payment on such liability as indorser as against a judgment creditor's attempt to reach unpaid stock subscriptions, has the burden of showing the portion of the notes given for a legitimate purpose—Shields v. Hobart (Mo.) 72 S. W. 669.

47. Evidence held not to show notice of insolvency causing the statute of limitation to begin to run against an action to enforce liability on stock subscriptions—Lester-Haltom v. Bemis Lumber Co. (Ark.) 74 S. W. 518.

48. Hale v. Coffin (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 470.

49. Otter View Land Co.'s Receiver v. Bolling's Ex'x, 24 Ky. L. R. 1157, 70 S. W. 834.

50. Boyd v. Mutual Fire Ass'n (Wis.) 90 N. W. 1086.

51. Rev. St. 1899, § 1330, not applicable to the collection of unpaid subscriptions, under section 985—Chrisman-Sawyer Banking Co. v. Independence Wool Mfg. Co., 168 Mo. 634.

52. In Arkansas, action is barred in five years—Lester-Haltom v. Bemis Lumber Co. (Ark.) 74 S. W. 518.

53. Boyd v. Mut. Fire Ass'n (Wis.) 90 N. W. 1086.

54. Limitation of action under Corporation Act, § 25, is not tolled by chancery act, § 49—Parmelee v. Price, 105 Ill. App. 271.

55. Act Va. Dec. 22, 1897, acts 1897, 1898, p. 16, c. 20—Williams v. Watters (Md.) 54 Atl. 767.

56. Corporations act, § 25—Parmelee v. Price, 105 Ill. App. 271.

57. Stock Corp. Law, § 54 as amended by Laws 1901, c. 354, held merely declaratory of the common law—Lang v. Lutz, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 3.

58. Laws 1892, c. 688, § 54. Case in which stock was issued for less than par as fully paid—Thompson v. Knight, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 316.

Exhaustion of remedies against corporation.—Unpaid subscriptions cannot be enforced for the payment of corporate debts until the corporation is insolvent or the remedies against it have been exhausted by the creditors.[59] The liability to the amount of unpaid stock arises only after the return of an execution against the corporation unsatisfied, and limitations do not run in favor of the stockholders until such time.[60] Under some statutes the exhaustion of the corporate assets is not a condition precedent.[61]

Procedure.—Equity cannot take jurisdiction to subject debts due on stock subscriptions to the payment of a judgment on the ground that the capital stock and debts due thereon constitute a trust fund, and an action cannot be brought in equity, though with intent to defraud the corporation, the subscribers have transferred their stock to an irresponsible nonresident.[62]

In a creditor's suit to recover unpaid stock subscriptions on insolvency of a corporation, separate stockholders may be joined as defendants, and the stockholders may be brought in by amendment to a proceeding originally begun against the corporation.[63] An order allowing creditors to come in and give security for costs in order that they may receive the benefit of actions prosecuted by the receiver to enforce the liability of stockholders on subscription may be taken advantage of by creditors who receive their claims by assignment after the order is entered.[64]

Pleading.[65]—A bill against a corporation and certain of its stockholders brought by a judgment creditor to compel the payment of unpaid subscriptions may be changed by an amendment to a common creditor's bill, though the amendment contain allegations of actual fraud in addition to the facts showing constructive fraud originally alleged, the nature of defendant's liability not being changed.[66]

A complaint in an action by a creditor to recover an amount unpaid on the stock of a member of an insolvent corporation is sufficient if it merely allege the ownership of the stock, and the fact of failure of payment.[67] A stock subscription contract should be pleaded in a suit by the receiver to recover the amount unpaid on insolvency of the corporation where it relates to matter other than the times and proportions of the stock subscriptions.[68] Where it is desired to assert a contract making liability contingent, the answer must plead facts showing notice to purchasers of the corporation's obligations of such limitation on the liability.[69] Where it is sought to subject unpaid stock subscriptions of certain stockholders to a judgment, a cross bill does not state a cause of action which asserts as against a co-defendant that he had agreed to hold cross complainant harmless from any liability on the subscription price of stock which he transferred to cross complainant, but does not allege that the cross complainant

59. Fletcher v. Bank of Lonoke (Ark.) 69 S. W. 580.

60. Comp. St. 1887, div. 5, § 457—King v. Pony Gold Min. Co. (Mont.) 72 Pac. 309.

61. Corporations Act, § 25—Parmelee v. Price, 105 Ill. App. 271.

62. The judgment creditor's remedy is by garnishment—Henderson v. Hall, 134 Ala. 455.

63. Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 9760, 9769, 9773—Schaub v. Welded Barrel Co. (Mich.) 90 N. W. 335.

64. Central Trust Co. v. East Tennessee Land Co., 116 Fed. 743.

65. See for construction of a bill as alleging that a corporation was bound by an agreement by the president to cancel stock subscription notes in consideration of payment of their subscriptions, and also to transfer them assets of the corporation—Henderson v. Hall, 134 Ala. 455.

66. Montgomery Iron Works v. Capital City Ins. Co. (Ala.) 34 So. 210.

67. Atlantic Trust Co. v. Osgood, 116 Fed. 1019.

68. Agreement making the times of payment dependent on a contract of land purchase on the fulfillment of which the subscriptions were conditional—Carnahan v. Campbell, 158 Ind. 226.

69. Carnahan v. Campbell, 158 Ind. 226.

was liable for the stock, or that the cross respondent had not paid therefor.[70] An amendment to a petition, seeking to subject unpaid subscriptions to the satisfaction of a judgment, which states that certain of the subscribers have been allowed credits on their notes for services rendered to their corporation, is immaterial.[71]

The burden of proof of insolvency or exhaustion of other remedies is on the creditors.[72] Where it is sought to recover an amount unpaid on a stock subscription, the agreement under which the stock was issued may be shown by parol, and the certificate of stock is admissible to show that it was fully paid.[73]

Remedies in case of receivership.—The receiver may, by direction of the court, sue for the recovery of unpaid subscriptions for the benefit of creditors,[74] and his administration is not complete until he has done so.[75]

A court of equity may compel the payment of unpaid subscriptions, notwithstanding a statutory provision that the directors shall determine the time for payment of deferred instalments.[76] The appointment of a receiver removes the right of the creditor to sue.[77] The receiver cannot sue for the purpose of meeting future corporate obligations, if there is no existing unsatisfied creditor.[78] The receiver cannot be compelled to sue on a disputed claim before he can have an assessment on the stockholders authorized, if there are no assets for such purpose and the stockholders had not asserted the validity of the claim and indemnified him against the expense of the suit.[79]

Injunction against a receiver's proceeding to enforce assessments against particular stockholders will not prevent his instituting actions against other stockholders as directed by the decree appointing him.[80]

Procedure by receiver.—A receiver may bring an action to recover an unpaid stock subscription in a county in which one defendant only resides and which is foreign to the home office of the company.[81] Mere failure to show notice to the stockholders to pay subscriptions before suit will not warrant a judgment for defendant, though if the failure had been raised by answer and an offer to pay made, the liability for costs would have been discharged.[82] Where from the application for an order to authorize an assessment against subscribers to corporate stock, it is shown that certain persons are supposed to be stockholders but that they allege that they are not, the assessment should be directed and the liability of individual subscribers left to be determined by suit if necessary.[83] Where in a branch of insolvency proceedings, a reference has been had and the amount due a director from the corporation determined, the court may, on entry of a decree in the general proceedings granting an assessment on stockholders of the amount of their unpaid subscriptions, have a further reference deducting the amount of the unpaid subscription from the decree in favor of the director.[84]

Scope of assessment.—An allowance for receiver's fees and his counsel fees may be included, together with interest on the corporation's debt, and expenses in actions

70, 71. Henderson v. Hall, 134 Ala. 455.

72. Action to reach unpaid stock subscriptions—Fletcher v. Bank of Lonoke (Ark.) 69 S. W. 580.

73. Cunningham v. Holley (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 720.

74. Berry v. Rood, 168 Mo. 316.

75. Limited corporation—City Item Co-Op. Printing Co. v. Phoenix Furniture Concern, 108 La. 258.

76. Kroegher v. Calivada Colonization Co. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 641.

77. Morgan v. Gibian. 115 Ga. 145.

78. Tichenor v. Williams Block Pavement Co., 116 Ga. 303.

79. Cumberland Lumber Co. v. Clinton Hill Lumber & Mfg. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 450.

80. Gold v. Paynter (Va.) 44 S. E. 920.

81. Such facts are not ground for plea in abatement—Carnahan v. Campbell, 158 Ind. 226.

82. Berry v. Rood, 168 Mo. 316.

83. Cumberland Lumber Co. v. Clinton Hill Lumber & Mfg. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 450.

84. Kroegher v. Calivada Colonization Co (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 641.

brought at the order of court, though costs went to persons whom it is sought to charge as stockholders.[85]

Interest.—Assessments may draw interest, the claim being liquidated by the fact thereof.[86]

The trustee in bankruptcy of a corporation has the sole right to sue to recover unpaid stock subscriptions.[87]

(§ 16) F. Personal liability of stockholders for debts of the corporation and remedies. What law governs.[88]—Stockholders' liabilities are governed by the law of the state of incorporation,[89] and where the courts of a corporation's domicile have determined the amount owing by stockholders under the local laws rendering them liable to creditors in excess of their stock, the liabilities will be enforced by the courts of a foreign state as to stockholders in their jurisdiction.[90] The statute of limitations of New York is applicable to an action against a resident stockholder of a Kansas corporation to enforce his liability as created by the laws of Kansas.[91] In Maine it is held that if the same statute of a foreign state which fixes the liability also fixes a limitation, such limitation controls, otherwise where the limitation is only in a general statute of a foreign state.[92] Where the action is in a federal court, it may be sustained on a showing of the existence of the jurisdictional facts requisite under the statutes of the state.[93] The right of a receiver to maintain an action extra-territorially to enforce stockholders' liability in the federal courts on the principles of comity will not be denied for the reason that the stockholders who were also creditors have not been served with process, and have not intervened for the purpose of setting off their debts, where the statute governing the action in the state of incorporation provides that notice may be by publication.[94]

Common-law liability.—There is no common-law liability of stockholders to creditors.[95]

Statutory provisions.[96]—A full liability corporation organized under the business corporation law is controlled by a provision of the stock corporation law which provides that no stockholder shall be personally liable for a debt not payable within a certain time or unless action is brought against the corporation within such time and that no action shall be brought against a stockholder more than two years after he ceases to be one,[97] though see contra.[98] The statutory liability of stockholders for more than the amount of their stock is not intended as a penalty

85. Cumberland Lumber Co. v. Clinton Hill Lumber & Mfg. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 450.

86. Assessment on stockholders of an insolvent savings bank—May v. Ullrich (Mich.) 92 N. W. 493.

87. 30 Stat. U. S. 565, § 70—Falco v. Kaupisch Creamery Co., 42 Or. 422, 70 Pac. 286.

88. What law governs enforcement of stockholder's liability, see also "Foreign Corporations."

89. McClure v. Paducah Iron Co., 90 Mo. App. 567; Pulsifer v. Greene, 96 Me. 438.

90. Pfaff v. Gruen (Mo. App.) 69 S. W. 405.

91. Code Civ. Proc. N. Y. § 394—Platt v. Hungerford, 116 Fed. 771.

92. Pulsifer v. Greene, 96 Me. 438.

93. Action at law by a creditor against the stockholder of an insolvent corporation—Atlantic Trust Co. v. Osgood, 116 Fed. 1019.

94. Hale v. Calder, 113 Fed. 670.

95. Parkhurst v. Mexican S. E. R. Co., 102 Ill. App. 507.

96. The power to enforce stockholder's liabilities given to assignees and receivers by Laws 1897, c. 341, is not repealed by Laws 1899, c. 272—Somers v. Dawson, 86 Minn. 42. A right of action under Laws 1892, c. 688, § 54, is expressly saved under Laws 1901, c. 354, § 5, and if it be assumed that the effect of such chapter was to repeal section 54, the right of action was preserved by Laws 1892, c. 677, § 31, which provides that the repeal of a law shall not affect existing rights and liabilities—Lancaster v. Knight, 74 App. Div. (N. Y.) 255.

97. Heydecker's Gen. Laws, p. 3502, c. 41, § 6, p. 2920, c. 36, §§ 54, 55, p. 2864, c. 35, § 33—Adams v. Wallace, 81 N. Y. Supp. 848.

98. Action against a stockholder of a full liability corporation organized under Laws 1900, c. 567, § 6, does not fall within the limitation of two years prescribed by the stock corporation law, Laws 1900, c. 564, § 55—Adams v. Slingerland, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 638.

nor as an asset of the corporation.[99] An amendment of a statute relating to the enforcement of stockholders' liability so as to allow the enforcement of such liability in an additional action if there are parties against whom recovery cannot be had in the first action is applicable to actions pending at the time of its enactment.[1] Where laws relating to the personal liability of stockholders are amended but existing rights are saved, claims due before the enactment of the amendment are enforceable under the statute as it stood prior thereto.[2]

For what debts liable.—A stockholder who has transferred his stock is liable for a sum becoming due under a lease existing at the time of his transfer, though the instalment of rent had not then matured.[3] The liability of a stockholder continues, though notes are renewed after the stockholder sells his stock, or accounts are thereafter closed by note.[4] The contingent liability arising from a corporation's guaranty of payment of a debt does not in itself create a debt rendering the holder a creditor, entitling him to impose individual liability on stockholders.[5] Under statutes rendering a stockholder, who has been unfaithful in the transaction of corporate business, liable for corporate debts, there must be a failure of care which may be attributed to incompetency or lack of business qualifications.[6] The shareholders become liable to the creditors of a corporation when they acquiesce in any arrangement by which property is taken at a fictitious value in payment for corporate stock. Actual fraud is not necessary.[7]

Ultra vires acts.—Where it is provided by statute that an individual liability of stockholders shall secure dues from corporations, ultra vires obligations incurred by the corporation are not included though the corporation itself cannot deny their validity.[8] Where a corporation incurs debts and acts outside of its statutory powers, the members are liable as a partnership.[9]

Liability on failure to file certificates or returns.[10]—A corporate charter is a grant not to a corporate body but to individuals who are named in the act and their successors who are the corporate body which they constitute, and such stockholders may shield themselves under the corporate character and name so long as the corporation observes conditions which are imposed by reference to general statutes, but when they in their corporate character fail to fulfill this duty they may be pursued again as individuals.[11] Though a creditor may have knowledge that the corporation is insolvent, the stockholders may nevertheless be liable individually in case of failure to file a statutory certificate of financial condition, and though the statute provides that notices shall not be necessary after an assignment for

99. Pfaff v. Gruen (Mo. App.) 69 S. W. 405.

1. McNaughton v. Ticknor, 113 Wis. 555.

2. Action at law for his individual benefit, under Laws 1892, p. 1841, c. 688, § 54, may be brought by a creditor whose claim was due before the enactment of laws 1901, p. 971, c. 354, making the creditor's remedy one in equity to enforce contribution—Lang v. Lutz, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 534.

3, 4. Hyatt v. Anderson's Trustee, 25 Ky. L. R. 132, 74 S. W. 1094.

5. McHale v. Moore (Kan.) 71 Pac. 522.

6. Evidence held insufficient to show unfaithfulness on the part of stockholders in a warehouse company under Gen. St. 1894, § 2600, subd. 3—Rice v. Madelia Farmers' Warehouse Co., 87 Minn. 398.

7. The measure of damages is the difference between the par value of the shares and the actual value of the property—McClure v. Paducah Iron Co., 90 Mo. App. 567.

8. Const. Kan. art. 12, § 2—Ward v. Joslin, 186 U. S. 142, 46 Law. Ed. 1093.

9. Debts contracted by a grange incorporated under act 1876, 2 Gen. St. p. 1644, in the transaction of a mercantile business—Henry v. Simanton (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 153.

10. Gen. Laws 1896, c. 180, § 17, does not exclude from the operation of chapter 180, a corporation which by the terms of its charter is made subject to the provisions of chapter 155 and any amendment thereto, though chapter 155 has been repealed and 180 substituted for it—Starkweather v. Brown (R. I.) 55 Atl. 324.

11. Where it was intended to incorporate the provisions of Pub. St. 1882, tit. 19, cc. 152, 155, into the charter of a corporation, and such provisions imposed the duty of making returns as to the condition of the corporation on the corporation, the stockholders become liable on default of the corporation in such regard—Starkweather v. Brown (R. I.) 55 Atl. 201.

creditors and the corporation subsequently makes such an assignment.[12] On a proceeding by judgment creditors to enforce a penalty prescribed by statute on stockholders for failure to make returns, the residuary legatee of a stockholder cannot be made a party.[13] Where a contract by the corporation with an individual stockholder has been merged into a subsequent contract with a company of which the stockholder is the manager, the corporation stockholders cannot as against an action to enforce their individual liability for the amount due under the new contract urge as a defense that the individual stockholder had failed to pay for his stock so that no return could be made as required by a statute to relieve stockholders from liability for corporate indebtedness.[14]

Persons liable as stockholders.—Persons who allow stock to be issued to them and make no objection for many years may be regarded as stockholders and liable as such, though the regularity of the issue is subject to contest and they have paid no consideration.[15]

The transfer of stock in good faith to a responsible person releases liability.[16] The burden of proving that the transferee is responsible is on the stockholder,[17] and if to avoid liability he transfers to an insolvent who subsequently transfers to another who is also insolvent, the primary stockholder is not relieved from liability by the fact that he did not know of the insolvency of the last.[18] It may be shown that an assignment of their shares by stockholders was fraudulent and for the purpose of avoiding liability.[19] In case of a fraudulent transfer of stock in an insolvent corporation to an insolvent, for the purpose of escaping liability, a recognition of the transfer by the corporation will not relieve the original holder.[20]

Recognition of a subsequent transferee as a stockholder by the issuance of a new stock certificate and payment of dividends may operate as a waiver of by-laws requiring the transfer to be approved by the board of directors and that the transferee shall sign the by-laws.[21]

Creditors who do not file their claims within the statutory period after stock is assigned, are not aided by the fact that a creditor beginning his proceeding within the statutory limit asked leave to sue for himself and all other creditors, if there was no order allowing such a suit.[22]

Conclusiveness of judgment against corporation.—The fact that a judgment has been obtained against the corporation does not prevent the stockholder, when it is sought to enforce his individual liability, from showing that the obligation of the corporation was ultra vires.[23] In the United States courts it is held that the judgment is conclusive unless impeached for want of jurisdiction or for fraud.[24]

12. Gen. Laws, c. 180, §§ 11, 12—Elsbree v. Burt, 24 R. I. 322.

13. Bill to enforce a penalty imposed by chapter 155 of the Public Statutes of 1882, corresponding to Gen. Laws 1896, c. 180, p. 556—Starkweather v. Brown (R. I.) 55 Atl. 201.

14. Flather v. Economy Slugging Mach. Co., 71 N. H. 398.

15. Hecht v. Phenix Woolen Co., 121 Fed. 188.

16. Parkhurst v. Mexican S. E. R. Co., 102 Ill. App. 507.

17, 18. People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rickard (Cal.) 73 Pac. 858.

19. Lamson v. Hutchings (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 321.

20, 21. People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rickard (Cal.) 73 Pac. 858.

22. No question of common interest was raised by the first suing creditor and the creditors were not so numerous that they could not have been brought in—Hyatt v. Anderson's Trustee, 25 Ky. L. R. 132, 74 S. W. 1094.

23. Under the Kansas Const. and Laws—Ward v. Joslin, 186 U. S. 142, 46 Law. Ed. 1093.

24. American Nat. Bank v. Supplee (C. C. A.) 115 Fed. 657. A judgment against a corporation fixing its liability as a stockholder in a bank is conclusive on its stockholders, and the power of the corporation to become a subscriber cannot be questioned by one of its stockholders when sued in another jurisdiction to enforce its statutory liability—Martin v. Wilson (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 202.

In Michigan it is held that a judgment on a note is not conclusive but that the stockholders may show failure of consideration, and the judgment cannot be sustained because another judgment on a different claim for a greater sum might have been obtained.[25]

Exhaustion of remedy against corporation.—Under the Nebraska statute before a stockholder can be proceeded against, the creditor must reduce his demand to a judgment and exhaust the corporate property,[26] and the rule in the federal courts as to general creditors is the same.[27] Before the receiver may enforce the stockholder's liability in Kansas, he must first fix the amount needed to pay the corporate debts, by an action against the corporation and all resident stockholders.[28]

Necessity for a judgment and the return of an execution thereon unsatisfied may be removed if, in a proceeding for the dissolution of the corporation, all creditors are enjoined and restrained by final judgment from instituting and prosecuting any action against the corporation to enforce their claims.[29]

When liability accrues.—Under some statutes the liability on insolvency of the corporation does not become fixed until the enforcement of such liabilty is determined to be necessary and authority given therefor.[30]

Where the statute permits an action to be brought by creditors on dissolution. debts being left unpaid, maturity of the debts is not essential to an action.[31]

Where the liability becomes enforceable on suspension of business, the corporation is regarded as suspended where the business of the corporation has been stopped for a year, winding up has begun and directors' meetings are no longer held.[32] Suspension of business alone is sufficient.[33]

Limitations do not run in favor of stockholders until the deficiency of the corporate assets is determined and proceedings begun to collect such deficiency,[34] though under the Pennsylvania statute, the limitation against an action to enforce the stockholder's liability commences at the time the debt is due from the corporation.[35] The necessary administration of the corporate property while it is winding up its affairs is not a doing business suspending the statute of limitations.[36] The fact that proceedings are pending to administer the property of a corporation under an insolvency law of the state does not prevent the running of limitation against the right of action of creditors in another state to sue to enforce the statutory liabilities of stockholders.[37]

Who may sue.—Statutory provisions that on dissolution of a corporation the trustees shall be trustees for the creditors and stockholders, and shall collect and pay the outstanding debts do not prevent the appointment of a receiver of an existing insolvent corporation, and his authorization to enforce stockholder's liability.[38] The right of a receiver to sue in his own name to enforce a stockholder's liability given by an appointment and leave to sue under the statute of another

25. McBryan v. Universal Elevator Co. (Mich.) 89 N. W. 683.

26, 27. New Hampshire Sav. Bank v. Richey (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 956.

28. Evans v. Nellis, 187 U. S. 271, 47 Law. Ed. 173.

29. Lang v. Lutz, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 534.

30. Hale v. Cushman, 96 Me. 148.

31. McHale v. Moore (Kan.) 71 Pac. 522.

32. Gen. St. 1899, § 1268—Jones v. Slonecker (Kan.) 71 Pac. 573.

33. Platt v. Hungerford, 116 Fed. 771.

34. Hale v. Cushman, 96 Me. 148.

35. Act April 29, 1874, §§ 14, 15; P. L. 73 amended Act April 17, 1876; P. L. 30—Bower v. Cyano Chemical Co., 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 33.

36. Gen. St. 1899, § 1268 provides that the right of action by corporate creditors accrues on suspension of business for a year —Jones v. Slonecker (Kan.) 71 Pac. 573.

37. Federal court applying the Minnesota decisions with regard to local corporations to a New York action and declaring a claim barred which was not brought within six years after insolvency—Hilliker v. Hale (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 220.

38. 1 Ball. Codes & St. § 4274; 2 Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 5456—New York Nat. Exch. Bank v. Metropolitan Sav. Bank, 28 Wash. 553, 68 Pac. 905.

state may be recognized in a federal court.[39] Leave of court is not necessary to allow a receiver appointed at the suit of a judgment creditor to enforce a stockholder's liability.[40] The receiver is not authorized to enforce a stockholder's liability, where such liability is, by the statute which creates it, made not a general asset of the corporation, but one recoverable only for the individual benefit of the creditor.[41]

Defenses.[42]—A discharge under the national bankrupt act does not release stockholder's individual liability.[43] The stockholder's liability may be discharged by a payment to the receiver, though the receiver has no power to enforce the same.[44] As against an attempt to enforce a stockholder's individual liability to creditors, an indebtedness due from the corporation cannot be set off,[45] but payment of a note of the corporation may be set up as an equitable defense though the note has not been formally assigned to the stockholder,[46] or an assignment of a judgment against the corporation in favor of a third party for more than the amount due on the stockholder's share.[47]

Pleading.—If in an action by judgment creditor only the judgment and the fact of nonsatisfaction is averred, nil debit is a proper plea.[48] The fact that a similar action is pending must be taken advantage of in an action to enforce stockholder's liability by answer or special demurrer.[49] Though payment has been pleaded as an equitable set-off, an amendment alleging equitable ownership of the debt alleged to be paid is permissible.[50] Where a stockholder desires to controvert the amount of the debts or the time at which they were created in a proceeding to enforce his additional liability, he must answer the creditor's petition and he cannot raise the objections by mere exception to the commissioner's report.[51]

Procedure.—The statutory method of enforcing the liability of stockholders must be followed.[52] On reversal of a proceeding to enforce a stockholder's liability under one section of the statute, the creditor may pursue the remedy offered by another section.[53] In Illinois, the liability of resident stockholders of a foreign corporation which is insolvent cannot be determined on a creditor's bill.[54] Under certain statutes, all stockholders must be made parties though they cannot be

39. Burr v. Smith, 113 Fed. 858.

40. The other creditors need not be brought in nor an allegation made that the suit is for their benefit together with such other creditors as may choose to come in—McBryan v. Universal Elevator Co. (Mich.) 89 N. W. 683.

41. Gen. St. Kan. 1868, §§ 32, 44—Evans v. Nellis, 187 U. S. 271, 47 Law. Ed. 173.

42. Compromise of proceedings to enforce stockholder's liability held not to include liability on stock transferred by him to an insolvent—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rickard (Cal.) 73 Pac. 858.

43. Liability under Gen. Laws, c. 180—Elsbree v. Burt, 24 R. I. 322.

44. Strauss v. Denny, 95 Md. 690.

45. Minnesota corporation—Burget v. Robinson (C. C. A.) 113 Fed. 669; Hale v. Calder, 113 Fed. 670.

46. Kansas corporation (St. 1883, c. 223, § 14; Rev. Laws, c. 173, § 28)—Sargent v. Stetson, 181 Mass. 371.

47. Evidence held sufficient to show that the assignment was prior to the action—American Freehold Mortg. Co. v. Brower (Miss.) 32 So. 906.

48. Elsbree v. Burt, 24 R. I. 322.

49. Laws 1897, c. 341—Somers v. Dawson, 86 Minn. 42.

50. Action to enforce stockholder's liability in foreign corporation—Rev. Laws, c. 173, § 34—Sargent v. Stetson, 181 Mass. 371.

51. Hyatt v. Anderson's Trustee, 25 Ky. L. R. 132, 74 S. W. 1094.

52. The remedy by motion for an order awarding execution against stockholders and corporations for the collection of corporate judgments cannot be invoked where the record does not show that the liability existed prior to the taking effect of Laws 1898, c. 10, § 14, p. 54, repealing such remedy and providing for a receivership proceedings—Henley v. Stevenson (Kan.) 72 Pac. 518.

53. After reversal of an action under Gen. St. 1889, par. 1192, to charge a stockholder with the amount of the judgment on which an execution has been returned unsatisfied, a creditor may proceed under Gen. St. 1899, par. 1204, allowing a stockholder to be sued on a corporate indebtedness when the corporation has suspended business for more than one year, and the fact that the notes on which the claim is based are placed in judgment against the corporation pending such action, does not prevent a recovery—Thomas v. Remington Paper Co. (Kan.) 73 Pac. 909.

54. Parkhurst v. Mexican S. E. R. Co., 102 Ill. App. 507.

served,[55] but if by statute a stockholder is severally and individually liable he cannot insist that his co-stockholders be joined.[56] In Kansas all stockholders in the jurisdiction of the court must be made parties.[57] In an action in Missouri under the Ohio statutes all stockholders resident in Missouri should be joined.[58]

(§ 16) G. Rights and remedies of creditors against directors and other officers.—Receivers of an insolvent corporation will not be directed to enforce liabilities of promoters, officers, and directors until the amount of deficiency has been ascertained on administration of visible assets.[59] Directors are not personally liable for the expenses of a receiver appointed in an action by an insolvent corporation for the purpose of reaching particular property.[60] The trustees in bankruptcy can enforce such remedies against officers and stockholders as accrue to all creditors, or distinct classes, not such as are applicable to particular creditors only.[61]

Liability for debts contracted before record of certificate of organization.—Liabilities imposed on directors and officers for debts contracted in the name of the corporation, before record of certificate of complete organization, extend to debts contracted with them as officers of the corporation de facto. Under such statutes a debt is regarded as made by the officers, if they are in any way connected with it or approve or direct it.[62]

Special charter liabilities.—Where the charter of a corporation makes the directors liable for debts incurred during their tenure of office, an action to enforce such liability may be maintained by one creditor in behalf of all, all directors who are liable must be joined, directors who cannot be personally served must be served by publication, and if the corporation has been dissolved, a receiver who has taken possession of the assets must be made a party defendant.[63]

Liability for misappropriation of funds.—A constitutional provision fixing a liability on directors of corporations for misappropriation of funds is not a denial of equal protection of laws in the meaning of the 14th amendment of the United States constitution.[64] Such a statute is self executing.[65] Where directors by engaging in a business outside the legitimate powers of the corporation waste or lose the corporate assets, they are liable to creditors to the extent of the assets thus lost by them.[66] Where a managing officer of a corporation and its president are shown to have received assets of the corporation, they are liable to account to judgment creditors of the corporation on a creditors' bill.[67] The directors of a corporation cannot be held personally liable by a creditor for the transfer of its assets, unless by his bill it is shown that they have received the proceeds of such assets.[68] The directors of a corporation cannot be held individually liable for mere participation in an ultra vires act without any averment or charge that they individually in any way profited by the act or without a showing of fraud.[69] Damages for waste of corporate property may be recovered by the receiver in an equitable proceeding for an accounting against the directors.[70] A proceeding in equity

55. Rev. St. Ohio, § 3260 amended 1894—Middletown Nat. Bank v. Toledo, A. A. & N. M. Ry. Co., 113 Fed. 587.

56. Pulsifer v. Greene, 96 Me. 438.

57. Action under Laws 1898, c. 10, to collect a judgment against the corporation from the stockholders—Waller v. Hamer, 65 Kan. 168, 69 Pac. 185.

58. Pfaff v. Gruen (Mo. App.) 69 S. W. 405.

59. Land Title & Trust Co. v. Asphalt Co., 121 Fed. 587.

60. Ephraim v. Pacific Bank, 136 Cal. 646, 69 Pac. 436.

61. Bowker v. Hill, 115 Fed. 528.

62. Rev. St. c. 32, § 18—Seymour v. Richardson Fueling Co., 103 Ill. App. 625.

63. Bauer v. Parker, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 289.

64. Winchester v. Howard, 136 Cal. 432, 64 Pac. 692, 69 Pac. 77.

65. Const. art. 12, § 3—Winchester v. Howard, 136 Cal. 432, 64 Pac. 692, 69 Pac. 77.

66. Dietrich v. Rothenberger, 25 Ky. L. R. 338, 75 S. W. 271.

67. Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co. (Neb.) 92 N. W. 210.

68, 69. Force v. Age-Herald Co., 136 Ala. 271.

lies at the instance of the receiver for a discovery and accounting, where the directors have acted wrongfully in wasting and misappropriating the corporate property causing it to become apparently insolvent.[71] Causes of action against directors for their fraudulent use of corporate property may be joined by the receiver though their participation and liability is not equal.[72] A money judgment for the amount of debts improperly paid may be rendered on a complaint which seeks the recovery of corporate bonds and stock sold a director or their value.[73]

Where from the articles of incorporation of a mutual insurance company a trust appears in the directors and officers, it will be regarded as an express trust preventing the running of the statute of limitations as against creditors and the personal representatives of the officers and directors are in no more favorable position.[74] An action for wrong-doing of directors is not necessarily begun against them while they are in office.[75]

Where the directors of a corporation have wrongfully made payments to the directors of the second corporation in purchase of such directors' rights in the second corporation, they cannot plead, as against an action against them to recover a balance remaining unsatisfied, a release which the receiver had executed to the directors of such second corporation in compromise of a proceeding which he brought against such directors originally to recover the amount paid by the first directors to them.[76]

Liability for creation of excessive debt.—In order to hold directors personally liable for an excessive debt created, all the conditions under the statute must be established.[77] If the statute make the officers personally liable for debts in excess of capital stock, there is no liability unless such excess exists at the time suit is brought.[78]

Liability for loans to stockholders.[79]—In a proceeding to enforce the personal liability of a director under the Massachusetts statute for debts incurred between the time of a loan to the stockholder and the repayment thereof, a release executed by plaintiff's creditor in assignment proceedings cannot be pleaded as against a default judgment obtained by the creditor against the corporation, and a director is not aided by the fact that he was absent from the state during the action at law, since that is not enough to show that he was prevented from defending by fraud or accident, nor is he aided by the corporation's failure to plead the release. He has no superior equity than the creditor and he cannot collaterally attack the judgment.[80] The liability imposed by such statute is not a debt within the meaning 70, 71, 72. Mabon v. Miller, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 10.

73. Payment was from the proceeds of the sale—Graham v. Carr, 130 N. C. 271.

74. Construing Rev. St. 1898, § 2081, subd. 5, defining express trusts—Boyd v. Mutual Fire Ass'n (Wis.) 90 N. W. 1086.

75. Boyd v. Mutual Fire Ass'n (Wis.) 90 N. W. 1086.

76. The release ran to such directors and contained a provision that its execution should not affect any organization of the receiver against any person not named therein—Gilbert v. Finch, 173 N. Y. 455.

77. In a proceeding under Stock Corporation Law, § 24, Laws 1890, p. 1070, c. 564, as amended by Laws 1892, p. 1830, c. 688, which makes directors of a corporation consenting to the creation of an indebtedness not secured by mortgage in excess of its paid up capital stock personally liable, there must be evidence offered at the trial to establish that the indebtedness in excess of the paid up capital stock was not secured by mortgage—Irving Nat. Bank v. Moynihan, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 301.

78. No liability arises where, before action is brought, assignees for creditors of the corporation have, by the payment of dividends, reduced the debts to an amount less than the capital stock—Flint v. Boston Woven Hose & Rubber Co., 183 Mass. 114.

79. Evidence held to show assent to a loan to a stockholder within the meaning of Pub. St. 1882, c. 106, § 60, rendering a director personally liable for debts contracted between the time of such loan and its re-payment—Old Colony Boot & Shoe Co. v. Parker-Sampson-Adams Co. (Mass.) 67 N. E. 870.

80. Old Colony Boot & Shoe Co. v. Parker-Sampson-Adams Co. (Mass.) 67 N. E. 870.

of the laws relating to insolvency or bankruptcy, and a discharge in bankruptcy is not a bar to an action to enforce such liability.[81]

Unlawful payment of dividends.—Where by statute the directors are liable to the corporation and its creditors in case they pay dividends from the capital, such liability exists though the corporation does not dissolve or become insolvent;[82] such a statute is not regarded as penal and may be enforced in equity.[83] The fact that such dividends induced complainants to purchase their stock may be considered.[84] Under such statute, however, the action being for the benefit of the corporation, stockholders may maintain it though they retain the dividends or though the stock has been transferred to holders who have not received any of the dividends.[85]

Unless it is shown that in the exercise of ordinary diligence directors should have known that at the time a dividend was voted and paid the company was insolvent or that they might have known that an indebtedness greater than the capital stock was being created, they cannot be held liable.[86] Where the statute imposes a liability on directors in behalf of creditors for wrongful payment of dividends when the capital stock has not been fully paid in, when they are paid other than from the net profits, or when the corporation is insolvent or in danger thereof, there being no reason to believe that the capital will not thereby be diminished, the liability of the directors is not affected by the fact that the unpaid capital is subsequently collected and liability is incurred by payment under either of the provisions, and a director need not have taken an actual part in the payment, but need only have consented thereto and accepted the benefits. The giving of a note does not constitute actual payment under such statute.[87] The directors who have wrongfully authorized dividends are jointly and severally liable to the creditors as a class, but not as individuals. Individual common-law liabilities of directors are not included.[88]

In an action against a director, there need not be a specific allegation that the company is a stock corporation, if facts are set forth so that such fact appears.[89] Defendants who are not served must be brought in though the action may be maintained against the defendant who was served or the defendants not served have a good defense.[90]

Liability as to certificate of payment of stock.—A president who under the advice of counsel makes a certificate that the capital stock has been paid in does not become personally liable for the debts of the corporation, his act being in good faith.[91] Where a false certificate has been given, a creditor may be entitled 81. Pub. St. 1882, c. 106, § 60; Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 17—Old Colony Boot & Shoe Co. v. Parker-Sampson-Adams Co. (Mass.) 67 N. E. 870.

82. Pub. Laws 1896, c. 185, § 30—Appleton v. American Malting Co. (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 454. The lower court held that the stockholders could not compel the directors to repay the amount of such dividends to the corporation unless the assets were insufficient to pay the corporation creditors (Sess. Laws 1896, c. 185, § 30)—Siegman v. Maloney, 63 N. J. Eq. 422.

83. Appleton v. American Malting Co. (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 454. See contra decision of lower court—Siegman v. Maloney, 63 N. J. Eq. 422.

84. Appleton v. American Malting Co. (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 454.

85. Siegman v. Maloney, 63 N. J. Eq. 422; Appleton v. American Malting Co. (N. J. Law) 54 Atl. 454.

86. Evidence held insufficient to show such knowledge—Chick v. Fuller (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 22.

87. Rev. St. 1898, § 1765—Williams v. Brewster (Wis.) 93 N. W. 479.

88. Williams v. Brewster (Wis.) 93 N. W. 479.

89. Allegations that company was organized under the General Manufacture act of 1848 and statement of the object is sufficient—Ginsburg v. Von Seggern, 172 N. Y. 662.

90. Action to enforce statutory liability of directors—Geoghegan v. Luchow, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 581.

91. Pub. St. c. 106, § 46 provides for such certificate, section 60 makes an officer knowingly signing a false certificate liable for corporate debts—International Paper Co. v. Gazette Co., 182 Mass. 578.

to a remedy, though he was not deceived thereby.[92] If a statute impose liability to creditors on failure of the directors to make and file a certificate of the fully paid capital stock within a specified time, no extension of time can be granted.[93]

Liability for failure to file reports.[94]—Statutes making a notice essential to the enforcement of the liability of a director to creditors on account of failure to make annual reports do not apply to pending actions.[95] The liability of an officer for a false report under the New York law is not penal and subject to the restrictions provided by statute as to the place of trial of actions to recover a penalty or forfeiture imposed by statute.[96] The duty to make an annual report as to financial condition is not removed by an assignment for the benefit of creditors,[97] or a mere discontinuance of business.[98] A co-director who is a creditor may nevertheless sue another director.[99] The debt need not be one which was to have been paid within a year.[1] A judgment need not first be obtained and execution levied against the corporation.[2] Where it is shown that plaintiff did not pay the debts declared on except as agent for a third person, he cannot enforce personal liability of directors for failure to file an annual report.[3] Renewal of a note given for a corporate debt by the corporation does not toll a cause of action provided by statute against the corporate president for failure to make a certificate to specified facts, and the limitation runs from the maturity thereof.[4]

A director's personal liability resulting from failure to file the required annual report is not affected by an interlocutory judgment against a person seeking to enforce such liability granting an accounting against such person as trustee in the results of which the director was to share proportionately.[5]

Where it is sought to hold a director personally liable for failure to file an annual report, the director must prove a waiver and the absence of a waiver need not be specifically found.[6] It is not sufficient that a statement be filed which is verified by the president and vice-president.[7] It is not sufficient to state that the assets do not exceed a certain sum.[8] Defendant may complain of plaintiff's failure to bring in other defendants, though he has agreed to stipulations extending his time to answer.[9]

CORPSES AND BURIAL.

Property in bodies.—There may be a recovery for injuries to a corpse.[10]

92. Heard v. Pictorial Press, 182 Mass. 530.

93. Gen. St. § 252—Cannon v. Breckenridge Mercantile Co. (Colo. App.) 69 Pac. 269.

94. The filing of articles in the office of the secretary of state and the calling of a meeting at which officers were elected and a contract authorized which was not completed prior to Jan. 1, 1900, does not render the directors personally liable on failure to file an annual report in January, 1900, the corporation articles not having been filed in the office of the county clerk and a de facto existence not having been established—Emery v. De Peyster, 77 App. Div. 65, 12 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 218.

95. Laws 1899, c. 354, § 34—Shepard v. Fulton, 171 N. Y. 184; Staten Island Midland R. Co. v. Hinchliffe, 170 N. Y. 473.

96. Construing Stock Corporation Law, § 31 and Code Civ. Proc. § 983—Hutchinson v. Young, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 246.

97. Stock Corporation Law, § 30—Horrocks Desk Co. v. Fangel, 71 App. Div. (N. Y.) 313.

98. Liability on account of a failure to make an annual report of financial condition as required by statute is not removed by the fact that a water company discontinues business, but nevertheless maintains an action to establish an exclusive right to supply water to a village which has been infringed by the erection of a public plant—Stevenson v. Cowan, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 135.

99, 1, 2. Ginsburg v. Von Seggern, 172 N. Y. 662.

3. Staten Island Midland R. Co. v. Hinchliffe, 170 N. Y. 473.

4. Sanders & Hill Dig. Ark. § 1347—Continental Nat. Bank v. Buford (C. C. A.) 114 Fed. 290.

5. Ginsburg v. Von Seggern, 172 N. Y. 662.

6. Laws 1899, c. 354—Shepard v. Fulton, 171 N. Y. 184.

7. Rhodes v. Hinds, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 379.

8. Lilienthal v. Betz, 172 N. Y. 643.

9. Geoghegan v. Luchow, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 581.

10. Relatives not allowed to recover for mental anguish caused by witnessing body

Burials.—The next of kin of a deceased unmarried person has the right to the custody of the body and to decide upon its place of burial,[11] and a waiver of this right can only be established by most satisfactory evidence of free and voluntary intent to that end.[12]

An undertaker may be liable in exemplary damages for imposition in substituting a coffin where the circumstances indicate willfulness and disregard of rights and feelings of relatives paying therefor.[13]

Removal of bodies.—The court will consent to the removal of a body only where reasons given therefor are substantial and meritorious.[14] The New York act, allowing removal of the body of the widow of the lotowner by consent of the heirs, is limited to lots set apart to particular families, and does not authorize removal of such body from an individual grave in an undivided portion of the cemetery, without the consent of the corporation.[15] The membership corporation law of New York allowing the removal of bodies from a cemetery owned by a cemetery corporation as defined in the act confers no authority on a court to grant permission to remove a body from a cemetery controlled by a corporation, created by a special law and not repealed by the corporation law.[16]

Graves.—The fact that a widow may not remove the remains of her husband will not operate to deny her access to the plot for purposes of adornment and care.[17]

Crimes against sepulture.—An indictment for disturbing a grave and removing a dead body should state the name of the body,[18] or the reason for not stating that fact should be averred.[19]

COSTS.

§ 1. Scope, nature, and definition.—By the term costs as here used is meant all statutory allowances made in actions to parties or their attorneys, guardians ad litem, or other officers of the court, allowances for disbursements in the action, and allowances of statutory sums as "costs" as well as the taxation of fees in the cause.[1]

§ 2. Power to award costs.—Costs are not recoverable at common law.[2] Courts of equity have power to award costs.[3] In proceedings in personam, the court is without power to award costs against the defendant where jurisdiction of thrown out of wagon by collision with train where body was not injured—Hockenhammer v. Lexington & E. R. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 2383, 74 S. W. 222.

11, 12. McEntee v. Bonacum (Neb.) 92 N. W. 633, 60 L. R. A. 440.

13. Substitution of cheap pine box too small to decently contain remains, for suitable coffin paid for by relatives of one dying of smallpox—J. E. Dunn & Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 576.

14. Want of sufficient burial space might have been foreseen—Smith v. Shepherd (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 806.

15. In re Cohen, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 401.

16. In re Owens, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 236.

17. Smith v. Shepherd (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 806.

18. Williamson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 600.

19. Leach v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 600.

1. Costs paid as an element of damages, see Damages.

Assessment of expenses of eminent domain proceedings as an element of damage, see Eminent Domain.

Commissions, etc., paid as compensation to Executors and the like, see Estates of Decedents; Trusts; Receivers, etc.

2. Price v. Clevenger (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 894.

3. And in an action on a foreign decree it is not necessary to plead the statute allowing costs. Davis v. Cohn, 96 Mo. App. 587.

the person had not been obtained.[4] A general prayer for relief is broad enough to authorize the allowance of costs.[5]

§ 3. Security for costs and proceeding in forma pauperis.—Questions concerning the giving of and the right to demand security for costs being governed by various statutory regulations will be shown in the footnotes,[6] nonresidence of the party being generally ground for requiring security.[7] If the required security is not given,[8] or if the bond given is not in conformity with the statute, the complaint will be dismissed,[9] or the court may compel the filing of security where it was not filed before the commencement of the action.[10]

It cannot be conclusively presumed that the clerk approved the security.[11]

A party may sue or defend,[12] or appeal in forma pauperis,[13] whether residents or nonresidents.[14] The order permitting plaintiff infant to sue in forma pauperis must provide that the attorney prosecute without compensation.[15]

§ 4. To whom and against whom award should be made. A. On termination of actions.—The general rule is that the prevailing party is entitled to costs of course,[16] but they can be charged only against parties to the record.[17] The de-

4. On dismissal of a petition in bankruptcy for want of jurisdiction the court cannot award costs against the debtor—In re Williams, 120 Fed. 34.

5. Saunders v. King, 93 N. W. (Iowa) 272.

6. A school district is within Code Civ. Pro. § 1058 exempting counties and cities from giving security—Mitchell v. Board of Education, 137 Cal. 372, 70 Pac. 180. Code Civ. Pro. § 3268 requiring assignees in bankruptcy to give security is mandatory—Joseph v. Raff, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 447. An action to recover preferences within four months of the proceedings in bankruptcy is not within the section—Kronfeld v. Liebman, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 437. Code Civ. Pro. § 3271 does not include trustees in bankruptcy—Kronfeld v. Liebman, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 437. Security should have been required where the administrator's complaint in an action under Laws 1902, c. 600, fails to state a cause of action.—Gmaehle v. Rosenberg, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 541. In chancery security may be ordered after answer or even after vacation of a decree entered (Code, art. 16, § 152) —Watson v. Glassie, 95 Md. 658. Liability of attorneys as indorsers of writ by nonresident plaintiffs—Johnson v. Sprague, 183 Mass. 102. Security for costs cannot be required of contestant of a will—In re Scott's Will, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 369. Merely because the defendant is the committee of an insane person is not ground for requiring plaintiff to give security for costs. Code Civ. Pro. § 3271 provides that when the plaintiff is the committee the defendant may require security—Kelly v. Kelly, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 519. On appeal from a justice's court appellant may be required to give security for costs—State v. Edwards, 109 La. 210.

7. Under Wis. Rev. St. 1898, § 2942 it is discretionary to order security. Discretion held properly exercised though the application was based on §§ 2943 et seq. under which it could not have been ordered—Colbeth v. Colbeth (Wis.) 93 N. W. 829.

8. Colbeth v. Colbeth (Wis.) 93 N. W. 829.

9. Meade County Bank v. Bailey, 137 Cal. 447, 70 Pac. 297.

10. The statute requires a filing of security before commencement of the suit—Carrier v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 74 S. W. 1002.

11. Therefore parol evidence is admissible to show that it was not in fact approved—Little v. State (Ala.) 34 So. 620.

12. Leave to sue in forma pauperis will not be granted where the action is prosecuted under a valid contract for a contingent fee—Feil v. Wabash R. Co., 119 Fed. 490. Security may be required from one suing in forma pauperis on his subsequent removal from the state (Shan. Code, § 4928, Am'd Oct. 1901, c. 126)—Southern Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 820. That the guardian ad litem, not the parent of the infant plaintiff, is responsible is not ground for refusing leave—Muller v. Bammann, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 212. Otherwise if he is the parent—Sumkow v. Sheinker, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 463. Contra, Gallagher v. Geneva, W., S. F. & C. L. Traction Co., 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 637. A false showing of poverty may result in a dismissal if properly brought to the court—Woods v. Bailey, 122 Fed. 967.

13. Alexander v. Morris (Tenn.) 71 S. W. 751. The required affidavit must be filed in the lower court before the record is transmitted—Smith v. State, 117 Ga. 16.

14. Carrier v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 74 S. W. 1002.

15. Code Civ. Pro. § 460—Sumkow v. Sheinker, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 463.

16. Spencer v. Mungus (Mont.) 72 Pac. 663; Decker & St. Louis & S. Ry. Co., 92 Mo. App. 50. Trespass on realty. Finding of jury not guilty and on issue of title in plaintiff's favor; plaintiff held not entitled to costs—Hill v. McMahon, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 324. An administrator who is unsuccessful in a personal action against the estate, is within the rule—Holburn v. Pfanmiller's Adm'r, 24 Ky. L. R. 1613, 71 S. W. 940. Where the claim for damages under the civil damage act brought the action within the jurisdiction of a court of record on recovery plaintiff is entitled to costs—Purvis v. Segar (Mich.) 93 N. W. 261. Applied to drainage proceedings—In re Bradley, 117 Iowa, 472. Applied to proceedings to establish highway—Wilhite v. Wolfe, 90 Mo. App. 18. Applied to an action to recover a reward offered, several claimants intervening and the reward being deposited in court—Kinn v. First Nat. Bank (Wis.) 95 N. W. 969. Applied to a proceeding by a person fendant is the prevailing party on counts dismissed or abandoned,[18] and the court may award costs against a successful plaintiff where he unnecessarily multiplied the actions,[19] or they may be allowed defendant's attorney on settlement of the action between the parties.[20] Costs cannot be allowed against the United States as a party,[21] and in actions relating to official duties they should not be charged against the officer where it is not shown that he acted with gross negligence, in bad faith, or with malice.[22]

(§ 4) B. In interlocutory or special proceedings, as on motions[23] relating to the amendment of pleadings,[24] or to strike the cause from the short-cause calendar, costs are discretionary.[25] Generally they will be charged against the party whose fault occasioned the motion.[26] In special proceedings costs are generally statutory.[27]

(§ 4) C. Several co-parties.—Each defendant who answered separately is entitled to the statutory costs on judgment going against plaintiff,[28] and on a joint judgment against several defendants, the costs should be divided,[29] but a defendant should not be charged with the costs of parties unnecessarily made defendant.[30]

(§ 4) D. Parties in special capacity or qualified interest.—Whether an executor shall be personally charged with costs rests within the court's discretion,[31] and it is proper to so charge him if his misconduct occasioned the action,[32] as where he unmeritoriously contests a claim against the estate,[33] or where he made his acadjudged a lunatic to be discharged from the committee allowing the latter costs on adverse decision—In re Larner, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 509.

Applied to proceeding by a remonstrant wherein he obtained a revocation of a liquor license—Bachman v. Inhabitants of Phillipsburg, 68 N. J. Law, 552.

17. Where executors abandoned petition for probate and filed a subsequent petition, contestants on the first proceedings and not parties to the second cannot be charged with costs on the admission of the will to probate—Woodall v. McLendon (Ala.) 34 So. 406.

18. Edwards v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., 97 Mo. App. 103.

19. Kreiger v. Gosnell, 24 Ky. L. R. 1095, 70 S. W. 683.

20. Plaintiff's attorney refused to discontinue and defendants' attorney being compelled to answer and place cause on calendar—Himberg v. Rogers, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 190. Costs belong to the attorney—Adams v. Niagara Cycle Fittings Co., 108 N. Y. St. Rep. 485.

21. United States v. Warren (Okl.) 71 Pac. 685.

22. O'Connor v. Walsh, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 179.

23. It is error to charge opponent on an appeal to the favor of the court as where a city asked to have a judgment in condemnation vacated because prematurely entered —Fargo v. Keeney, 11 N. D. 484. Amount as condition of opening default judgment—Randall v. Shields, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 625. On denial of a motion for an injunction $10 costs only can be allowed—Cotusa Parrot Min. Co. v. Barnard (Mont.) 72 Pac. 45.

24. All costs and disbursements should be allowed where the original complaint did not state a cause of action—Lindblad v. Lynde, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 603. Allowance on amendment of complaint held reasonable—Perry v. Levenson, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 94.

25. Costs to defendant are discretionary where the cause has proceeded less than one hour before being stricken from the short cause calendar (Hurds' Rev. St. 1899, c. 110, § 97)—Jeffery v. Babcock, 98 Ill. App. 17.

26. Coffey v. Gamble (Iowa) 94 N. W. 936.

27. Compensation of assessors to assess damages in eminent domain cannot be taxed as costs, nor can fees of stenographer—Boston Belting Co. v. Boston (Mass.) 67 N. E. 428. In taxing costs of commissioners in condemnation proceedings commissioners' clerk fees should be allowed only on proof of the nature and value of the services—In re Collis, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 495.

28. Koyukuk Min. Co. v. Van De Vanter, 30 Wash. 385, 70 Pac. 966. An intervener after judgment against plaintiff at his cost, is entitled to recover his costs—Johnson v. New Orleans, 109 La. 696.

29. Albers v. Dillavou (Neb.) 93 N. W. 937.

30. Baughn v. Allen (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 1063.

31. Costs of accounting—In re Holmes, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 264.

32. Steinway v. Von Bernuth, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 596; Roberts v. Lamberton (Wis.) 94 N. W. 650.

33. The extra allowance under Code Civ. Pro. § 3253 may be given though costs had been granted against the executor for unreasonably resisting a claim under § 1836—Weeks v. Coe, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 310. Costs under Code Civ. Pro. § 1836 should not be allowed against an executor where the claim was materially reduced on the trial, though with claimant's consent—Healy v. Malcolm, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 422. Where no material benefit resulted from the contest of the account the contestants will not be allowed costs—In re Eadie, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 117.

counts so intricate that an audit was necessary.[34] If the costs are not in the terms of the judgment charged against the estate the executor is personally liable.[35]

The person for whose benefit an action is brought may be charged with all the costs.[36]

(§ 4) E. Waiver of right and effect of tender or offer of judgment.—The successful party may waive his right to judgment and execution for costs.[37]

On recovery of a less favorable judgment than offered by defendant,[38] or for less than the amount tendered,[39] or if only for the amount of the offer or tender, the defendant is entitled to costs.[40]

§ 5. Right dependent on minimum amount of demand or recovery.—In some jurisdictions the right of a successful plaintiff to recover costs depends on the amount of recovery,[41] but the statute has been held not to apply to a defendant who recovers on a counterclaim though in a sum less than the statutory limit,[42] or to a suit in equity.[43]

§ 6. Right affected by character of litigation or proceeding. A. In equity and equitable code actions.—While in equity costs are discretionary,[44] the rule at law that the successful party is entitled to costs has been generally followed,[45]

34. Executor held not liable for cost of audit of his accounts—Young's Estate, 204 Pa. 32.

35. McCarthy v. Speed (S. D.) 94 N. W. 411.

36. As the person who requested the receiver to sue. Code Civ. Pro. § 3247—Droege v. Baxter, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 78.

37. Decker v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co., 92 Mo. App. 50. A stipulation to submit the controversy, the judgment to be without costs should be followed by the court—Real Estate Corp. v. Harper, 174 N. Y. 123.

38. Mills' Ann. Code, Colo. § 281—Florence Oil & Ref. Co. v. Farrar (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 150.

39. Saunders v. King (Iowa) 93 N. W. 272. Acceptance of tender held not to include costs—McEldon v. Patton (Neb.) 93 N. W. 938.

40. Maxwell v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., 91 Mo. App. 582; Edward Hines Lumber Co. v. Chamberlain (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 716.

41. Action for rent or use and occupation; plaintiff recovered less than fifty dollars; defendant entitled to costs of course—United States Mortg. Co. v. Willis, 41 Or. 481, 69 Pac. 266. On recovery in the supreme court of less than $200 for unlawful distress the plaintiff is not entitled to costs—Brown v. Howell, 68 N. J. Law, 292. On recovery in foreclosure of a mechanic's lien in the supreme court for a claim less than fifty dollars and reduced to but $2.65 the plaintiff is not entitled to costs—Majory v. Schubert, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 633. In tort actions the costs should not exceed the recovery—Guttery v. Boshell, 132 Ala. 596. In the city court of Baxley it is error to enter judgment for defendant for the difference between the justice's court costs and the usual city court costs. Act 1897, p. 420, § 2, allowing only justice's court costs on recovery of $100 or less—Graham v. City of Baxley, 117 Ga. 42. On recovery of less than $100 in a municipal court only $10 costs can be allowed. Laws 1902, p. 1585, c. 580—Brendon v. Traders' & T. Acc. Co., 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 530.

42. Spencer v. Mungus (Mont.) 72 Pac. 663.

43. On foreclosure of a mechanic's lien and for equitable relief the plaintiff is entitled to costs, though he recovers less than $50—Faville v. Hadcock, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 397.

44. Jennings v. Parr, 66 S. C. 385. Applied to suit for dissolution of partnership—Hart v. Hart (Wis.) 94 N. W. 890. Applied in action to enforce contract lien—Roussel v. Mathews, 171 N. Y. 634. Applied in foreclosure of mechanic's lien and costs held properly allowed—Harvey v. Brewer, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 589. The chancery rule governing costs does not apply to proceedings to foreclose mechanics' liens—Kalina v. Steinmeyer, 103 Ill. App. 502. Discretion held properly exercised in dismissing bill to foreclose mortgage—Williams v. Williams (Wis.) 94 N. W. 25. Held error to award plaintiff costs on mandamus requiring approval of official bond—State v. Holm (Neb.) 92 N. W. 1006. In proceedings to recover damages resulting from change of grade of highway, costs before appointment of commissioners are discretionary and under Code Civ. Pro. § 3240—Bley v. Village of Hamburg, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 23. Simply because the court sustained but one of the defenses the defendant should not be charged with costs—Oliver v. Wilhite, 201 Ill. 552. Where there was reasonable cause to contest the will the costs will be charged against the estate; but where the contestant had no reasonable cause to appeal the costs of the appeal will not be so charged—In re Claus' Will (N. J. Prerog.) 54 Atl. 824.

45. Trespass to try title. Issue only as to boundary, on which defendant was successful and entitled to costs — Rountree v. Haynes (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 435. Action held equitable and plaintiff entitled to costs though recovery was less than $300—Bemmerly v. Smith, 136 Cal. 5, 68 Pac. 97. Plaintiff in injunction may be required to pay costs of mandamus directing dissolution of the injunction—Johnson v. New Orleans, 109 La. 696. The partner whose acts in refusing to account caused the other partner to sue for dissolution, which was granted, will be charged with the costs—Richard v. Mouton, 109 La. 465. Applied to a bill to interplead though where both parties are successful the costs may be divided,[46] apportioned,[47] or each party may be compelled to pay his own costs.[48] Costs follow the defendant on dismissal of the bill on demurrer sustained,[49] or because complainant failed to do equity,[50] but a failure to offer to do equity will not affect complainant's right to costs where the offer would have been unavailing.[51] If complainant is successful the intervenor may be charged with the costs after the intervention.[52] As between co-defendants, the complainant will be charged with the costs of those dismissed from the bill,[53] and a defendant on disclaimer is not entitled to costs against the other defaulting defendants.[54] Costs should be allowed only on the final determination of the suit.[55]

(§ 6) B. On appeal, error, etc.—Ordinarily the successful party on appeal is entitled to the costs,[56] though the allowance is discretionary,[57] and where both parties are successful each may be required to pay his own costs.[58] If the appeal could have been avoided, the appellant though successful will be charged with the costs,[59] or if he appealed merely for the purpose of delay.[60] Costs will be charged to one whose laches caused a dismissal;[61] they will be charged against appellant where the dismissal was because of a defective record,[62] or where he fails to pro-claimants to a fund, the whole costs being charged against the claimant whose invalid claim caused the proceeding to be instituted —Sovereign Camp Woodmen v. Wood (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 377. Where in interpleader the issue as to the amount due from complainant went against the complainant he will not be allowed costs out of the fund—English v. Warren (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 860.

46. Mo. Rev. St. 1899, §§ 1549, 1550—Schumacher v. Mehlberg, 96 Mo. App. 598. As where the defendant was successful in reducing the amount of recovery—Fielder v. Beekman (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 156; Sternbach v. Friedman, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 418. Both partners should be charged with the cost of taking account when both contributed to delay after dissolution—Dyer v. Ballinger, 24 Ky. L. R. 1918, 72 S. W. 738.

47. Fees of master—Hall v. Bridgeport Trust Co., 122 Fed. 163.

48. Jones v. Garrigues, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 539; Barger v. Gery, 64 N. J. Eq. 263.

49. Chan. Act, § 24; Rev. 1902—Brown v. Tallman (N. J. Ch.) 54 Atl. 457.

50. Insufficient tender before suing to avoid deeds—Glos v. Woodard, 202 Ill. 480.

51. Tender of consideration of contract before suit for rescission—Hansen v. Allen (Wis.) 93 N. W. 805.

52. So held in quo warranto to try title to office—People v. Campbell, 138 Cal. 11, 70 Pac. 918.

53. Hurd's St. 1899, c. 33, § 18—McDavid v. McLean, 202 Ill. 354.

54. Halpin v. Donovan (Mich.) 92 N. W. 782.

55. They should not be given on interlocutory judgments directing an accounting—McWhirter v. Bowen, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 144.

56. Coffey v. Gamble (Iowa) 94 N. W. 936; State v. Miller, 109 La. 240. The appellant is the successful party if he sustains his appeal on any of the grounds—McQueeney v. Norcross Bros., 75 Conn. 381. Or where he procured a modification of the judgment against him—Fanning v. Supreme Council, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 205; McInnis v. Greaves, 80 Miss. 632. By the filing by appellee of a remittitur—First Nat. Bank v. Calkins (S. D.) 93 N. W. 646; White v. Glover (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 319. But merely because appellant obtained a modification of the judgment will not entitle him to the costs of the trial court—Vogt v. Hecker (Wis.) 95 N. W. 90. If appellant obtains a less favorable judgment he will be charged with the costs of the appeal—Barrall v. Quick, 24 Ky. L. R. 2393, 74 S. W. 214. Where the plaintiff appealed from the judgment against him and the appellate court reversed the judgment sua sponte because of want of jurisdiction in the lower court the defendant is the prevailing party—Freer v. Davis, 52 W. Va. 1. Costs of appeal charged against fund in receivers' hands and of the court below to abide the event—Alfred Richards Brick Co. v. Rothwell, 19 App. D. C. 178.

57. On vacation of order of contempt plaintiffs in certiorari were charged with the costs, it appearing that they were committing an illegal act and the order was vacated because the original proceeding was not the proper remedy—Coffey v. Gamble (Iowa) 94 N. W. 936.

58. Clerks' Inv. Co. v. Sydnor, 19 App. D. C. 89. So held in admiralty—Donnell v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 10. Where a decree had been reversed with costs and execution therefor returned unsatisfied appellant may be taxed with costs incurred at his instance—Wooten v. Hecker, 136 Ala. 230.

59. As by filing a demurrer to the petition for foreclosure he could have avoided the personal judgment against him (Bush v. Louisville Trust Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 2182, 23 S. S. 775); or where the only result of the appeal was to decrease the amount of the judgment, which was too large, owing to a clerical error—Poerschke v. Horowitz, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 443. If the question on which appellant was successful should first have been raised in the lower court, he will be charged with the costs—Herry v. Benoit (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 359.

60. Gammage v. Smith, 116 Ga. 779.

61. Rush v. Connor (Fla.) 32 So. 796.

62. Defect of parties in printed record on cure a mandate to the lower court after procuring a reversal of the judgment,[63] or if he dismisses on his own motion.[64] If the plaintiff dismisses the action after favorable judgment and after proceedings for review have been instituted, the costs of the latter will be charged against him.[65] No costs being allowed by the intermediate appellate court, a reversal by the final court with costs will include the costs of the appeal to the lower court.[66] The rules as to taxation of costs on appeal will be applied on certiorari.[67]

(§ 6) C. Justices' courts and municipal courts.—Costs in an action brought in the municipal court of New York city will be allowed as though commenced in the court to which the action is removed.[68]

§ 7. Amount and items; after trial.—The lex fori governs as to the amount of the costs,[69] and only such costs as are allowed by statute can be taxed.[70] Costs certiorari, the original record being proper—Fitch v. Board of Auditors (Mich.) 94 N. W. 952.

63. Laws 1901, p. 122, c. 54—Watson v. Boswell (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 985; Watson v. Mirike (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 986.

64. Post v. Spokane, 28 Wash. 701, 69 Pac. 371, 1104.

65. So held on dismissal after certiorari brought—State v. Third Judicial Dist. Ct. (Nev.) 71 Pac. 664.

66. Where a judgment was affirmed on respondent filing a remittitur and without costs to either party in the appellate division a reversal by the court of appeals with costs to abide the event will include costs of appeal to appellate division; plaintiff being successful on new trial—Smith v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 116 N. Y. St. Rep. 674.

67. Coffey v. Gamble (Iowa) 94 N. W. 93.

68. Kochman v. Hefter, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 691. Cf. article "Justices of the Peace."

69. Items of cost accruing without the state will be allowed under the fee bill provided by the laws of this state—Dignan v. Nelson (Utah) 72 Pac. 936.

70. Douglas County v. Moores (Neb.) 92 N. W. 199. Laws 1893, p. 421, § 2, subds. 3, 4, govern the fees to be collected by clerks in jury cases—Nelson v. Nelson Bennett Co. (Wash.) 71 Pac. 749.

Preparation of exhibits. Without order or evidence that the originals could have been used cost for printing exhibits cannot be taxed—Edison v. American Mutoscope Co., 117 Fed. 192. Expenses for models, surveys and for development of work done in preparation for trial cannot be taxed—Montana Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 27 Mont. 288, 70 Pac. 1114.

Stenographer and clerk fees. Fees of stenographer on hearing before a master in chancery cannot be allowed—Smyth v. Stoddard, 203 Ill. 424. Fees paid a private stenographer acting in the place of the official stenographer by consent cannot be taxed—Montana Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 27 Mont. 288, 70 Pac. 1114.

Docket and trial fees. Order remanding cause to state court is a final judgment on which $10 docket fees may be allowed plaintiff's attorney (U. S. Rev. St. § 824)—Riser v. Southern Ry. Co., 116 Fed. 1014. A hearing had after service of an infant's answer is a trial for the purpose of taxation of trial fees as costs, though counsel for infants did not cross-examine plaintiff's witnesses—Wandell v. Hirschfeld, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 527. Costs after notice of trial may be taxed on sustaining a demurrer to the answer with costs—Veriscope Co. v. Brady, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 498.

Mileage and fees of officers and witnesses. There must be proof of the distance traveled before the sheriff can be allowed mileage—Hakonson v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 182. So, also, as to witnesses—Duree v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 92 N. W. 890. Where the witness was not sworn or summoned by ordinary subpoena, living beyond the reach thereof, it must appear that an oral examination was important and desirable. That the objection to the bill was on that ground will not admit evidence thereof—Luckey v. Lincoln County, 42 Or. 231, 70 Pac. 509. The bill should show the name, residence of, place of subpoena, miles actually traveled and days attended by witnesses—Garr v. Cranney, 25 Utah, 193, 70 Pac. 853. Bill held insufficient to show days attendance or miles traveled by witnesses—Garr v. Cranney, 25 Utah, 193, 70 Pac. 853. Mileage for witnesses appearing and testifying will be allowed whether they were legally subpoenaed or not—McGlauflin v. Wormser (Mont.) 72 Pac. 428. Witness fees can be taxed only for such witnesses as were summoned at the request of one of the parties—Manuel v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 74 S. W. 30. Sheriffs' costs of sending messages to witnesses to attend cannot be taxed—Egan v. Finney, 42 Or. 599, 72 Pac. 133.

Attorney's fees and extra allowances. Allowances for counsel fees are not costs (Acts 1898, c. 123, § 315)—Singer v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 96 Md. 221; Kaufmann v. Kirker, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 201; Rowland v. Maddock (Mass.) 67 N. E. 347; Wormely v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. (Iowa) 95 N. W. 203. Colorado. Attorney's fees cannot be allowed on foreclosure of mechanics' liens—Sickman v. Wollett (Colo.) 71 Pac. 1107. Georgia. Attorney's fees cannot be allowed merely because defendants had refused to pay without suit (Civ. Code 1895, § 3796)—Pferdmenges Preyer & Co. v. Butler (Ga.) 43 S. E. 695. Illinois. Attorney's fees cannot be taxed as costs where no evidence of their value had been given—Mehan v. Mehan, 203 Ill. 180. Iowa. The corporation in condemnation proceedings should not be charged with attorney's fees on appeal where it procured a reduction in the amount of the award (Code, § 2007)—Wormely v. Mason City & Ft. D. R.

allowable by the laws of the state wherein the action was brought are recoverable in the federal court to which the action was removed.[71]

On appeal.—The expense for printing all assignments of error on appeal may be taxed though appellant was not successful on all of them.[72] If the abstract or brief is defective,[73] or if unnecessary parts of the record are sent up, the cost of printing will not be allowed,[74] though in the latter case the clerk's fees for making up the transcript will be taxed against the party requesting the same,[75] but the clerk will be allowed only for that part of the record which the parties stipulated should be sent up,[76] and he will be charged with the expense of a proceeding to compel him to deliver transcript where he delivers it after proceeding brought but before action thereon is taken.[77] The cost of procuring an appeal and stay bond cannot be taxed.[78] If the appeal was frivolous, double costs,[79] or a per centum allowance on the recovery, will be given.[80]

In criminal proceedings, the costs chargeable against a person after conviction,[81] or to the county for services of counsel assigned by the court to defend, will

Co. (Iowa) 95 N. W. 203. It is only where the injunction was dissolved that attorney's fees may be taxed. That the action went against plaintiff and permanent injunction was refused, there having been no motion to dissolve the preliminary injunction, attorney's fees cannot be taxed—Hocking Valley Coal Co. v. Climie (Iowa) 92 N. W. 77. Missouri. Receiver's attorney fees are not costs—Pullis v. Pullis Bros. Iron Co., 90 Mo. App. 244. New Jersey. Under chancery act 1902 (P. L. p. 504, § 91) in partition attorney's fees may be allowed—Keeney v. Henning (N. J. Ch.) 55 Atl. 88. Practice stated to obtain allowance for attorney's fees under Chan. Act 1902 (P. L. p. 540, § 91)—McMullen v. Doughty (N. J. Ch.) 55 Atl. 115. New York. In proceedings like mandamus to compel reinstatement of expelled members of an association, attorney's fees can be recovered only on proof of malice—Lurman v. Jarvie (N. Y.) 82 App. Div. 37. The right to an extra allowance is limited to actions and does not include special proceedings. As summary proceedings by landlord against tenant—Lauria v. Capobianco, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 441. The extra allowance should not be granted in an action to recover for injuries resulting from a collision at a railroad crossing. Such an action is not "extraordinary" within the Code—Smith v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 47. Where the issue was solely one of title to land and there was no evidence as to its value, it is error to award an extra allowance (Code Civ. Pro. § 3253, subd. 2)—Deuterman v. Pollock, 172 N. Y. 595. Attorney's fees can be allowed a party only where he had recovered the costs of the action—Frost v. Reinach, 115 N. Y. St. Rep. 246. Oklahoma. A school teacher is not within the statute allowing attorney's fees in actions for personal services (Sess. Laws 1895, p. 268, c. 51, § 1)—School Dist. No. 94 v. Gautier (Okl.) 73 Pac. 954.

New trial. After disagreement of the jury and recovery on the second trial only one item after notice of trial can be taxed. In N. Y. City Court—Hakonson v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 182. Costs of new trial should not be allowed on an order restoring the case on calendar after withdrawal of a juror by the plaintiff. The second trial is not a new trial within Code Civ. Pro. § 3251—Bloch v. Linsley, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 184.

71. Attorney's fees on dissolution of attachment allowed—Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. L. Bucki & Son Lumber Co., 189 U. S. 135.

72. Curry v. Sandusky Fish Co. (Minn.) 93 N. W. 896.

73. Brinkley Car Co. v. Cooper, 70 Ark. 331. If respondent's abstract supplied a deficiency in appellant's, the latter is chargeable only with the cost of curing the defect—Berkshire v. Hoover, 92 Mo. App. 349.

74. Greene v. Montana Brewing Co. (Mont.) 72 Pac. 751; Liver v. Thielke, 115 Wis. 389. The appellant will be charged with costs of bill of exceptions containing testimony in extenso—Sup. Ct. Rule 33; Gaynor v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 136 Ala. 244. There being reasonable grounds for the necessity of printing the whole evidence, costs will be taxed in favor of the prevailing appellant to the full extent allowable by law—McQueeney v. Norcross Bros., 75 Conn. 381.

75. Harris v. Davenport, 132 N. C. 697. The party causing a needless amended abstract to be filed will be taxed with the costs thereof—Martin v. Martin (Iowa) 94 N. W. 493. The cost of an additional abstract filed too late will be charged against the party filing it—Ridgeway v. Jewell (Iowa) 95 N. W. 410.

76. Lamb Knit Goods Co. v. Lamb Glove & Mitten Co. (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 257.

77. State v. Estorge (La.) 34 So. 643.

78. The cost of procuring an appeal and stay bond cannot be taxed as a disbursement—Edison v. American Mutoscope Co., 117 Fed. 192; In re Hoyt, 119 Fed. 987.

79. Under Mass. Rev. Laws, c. 156, § 13, the appellant is chargeable with double costs if his appeal was frivolous—Connell v. Morse, 182 Mass. 439.

80. Under Missouri Rev. Stat. 1899, § 867, in case of a frivolous appeal recovery of 10 per cent. damages may be had—Mooneyham v. Cella, 91 Mo. App. 260. So also in Illinois—Potter v. Leviton, 199 Ill. 93. In the Indian Territory following Arkansas, damages of 10 per cent. will be allowed on affirming a money judgment which has been superseded—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Truskett, 186 U. S. 480, 46 Law. Ed. 1259.

81. Iowa. The county may recover the costs though the record entry of judgment contained no reference to the matter of costs—Hayes v. Clinton County (Iowa) 92 N. W.

be treated in the footnotes, the right thereto and the amounts and items varying according to the statute under which they are allowed.[82]

§ 8. Procedure to tax costs.—The right to costs is lost if the bill is not served within the statutory time,[83] though the court may on application extend the time for filing and service.[84]

While the right to a retaxation may be barred by laches,[85] or by payment of the judgment and costs,[86] it may be had after the term of judgment or appeal.[87] On permitting corroborative affidavits to be filed, the opposing party should be given leave to reply thereto,[88] and on retaxation by the court, all intendments are in favor of a proper taxation by the clerk,[89] and the allowance by the court is conclusive.[90]

A motion for the allowance of attorneys' fees made three years after entry of the judgment comes too late.[91]

A party taxed with costs on appeal can only object to the aggregate allowance and not to the manner of dividing between adverse parties.[92]

§ 9. Enforcement and payment of cost judgment.—A judgment for the costs must be entered before execution for their collection can be issued.[93] A fee bill is the proper process for the collection of witnesses' and officers' costs.[94]

Costs must first be paid from the funds arising from a sale of the debtor's property.[95] If money be deposited as security for appeal costs only, the reviewing court cannot order its application to payment of the judgment and costs below.[96] Accrued costs deposited in court as a tender should be offset against the costs allowed on final recovery by plaintiff.[97]

Generally nonpayment of costs stays further proceedings in the action,[98] though the stay may be waived.[99]

860. Kansas. The clerk in taxing costs allowed against a county in a criminal prosecution must specify the services for which the amount is due—Lockard v. Board of Com'rs (Kan.) 71 Pac. 856. Missouri. Jury costs in criminal proceedings cannot be taxed against defendant when he pleads guilty. Accrued costs of preliminary examination before a justice of the peace are chargeable against defendant after conviction on trial on information filed in the circuit court on the same charge—State v. Williams, 92 Mo. App. 443. Washington. The county cannot be charged with the expense of printing the brief on appeal in forma pauperis from a conviction—State v. Superior Ct. (Wash.) 72 Pac. 1027.

82. New York. Allowance to assigned counsel in capital cases can be made only to those assigned at the time of the pleading to the indictment. If defendant appeared by counsel at the arraignment, counsel assigned at later term is not entitled to the allowance. (Crim. Code, § 308)—People v. De Medicis, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 438. And when so assigned he may be allowed the full statutory allowance together with his expenses—In re Monfort, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 567. Including expense of preparing exhibits—In re Monfort 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 567. If he appeals merely for delay he will not be allowed compensation therefor—People v. Triola, 175 N. Y. 407. Indiana. Attorneys assigned to defend can only recover fees against the county to the amount apportioned for such purpose—Miami County Com'rs v. Mowbray (Ind.) 66 N. E. 46.

83. Code Civ. Pro. § 1867—Reins v. King, 27 Mont. 511, 71 Pac. 763.

84. Beilby v Superior Ct., 138 Cal. 51, 70 Pac. 1024.

85. A motion to retax made a year after the decree had been entered, and from which no appeal had been taken, comes too late—Palsley v. Jones (Miss.) 34 So. 557.

86. Iowa Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Chase, 118 Iowa, 51; Patton v. Cox (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 871.

87. Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Burke, 102 Ill. App. 661.

88. In re Spafford Ave., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 90.

89. Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Burke, 102 Ill. App. 661.

90. They cannot be reviewed by mandamus—Murray v. Gillespie (Tex.) 72 S. W. 160. The remedy of a surety is by appeal from the original judgment, it going against them for costs, and not by motion for retaxation and appeal from the order—Staples v. Barclay (Colo.) 71 Pac. 374.

91. Attorneys' fees in suits to collect taxes—State v. Keokuk & W. R. Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 636.

92. Johnson v. New Orleans, 109 La. 696.

93. Hendon v. Delvichio (Ala.) 34 So. 830.

94. Execution cannot issue—Decker v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co., 92 Mo. App. 50.

95. Applied to tax sale—State v. Wilson (Mo.) 74 S. W. 636.

96. Mitchell v. Evans, 18 App. D. C. 254.

97. Grafeman Dairy Co. v. St. Louis Dairy Co., 96 Mo. App. 495.

98. Where the plaintiff had been allowed to sue as a poor person in the federal court it was proper not to stay the action in the state court after a non-suit had been taken

COUNTERFEITING.

The prosecution should not be required to elect, before introducing evidence, between a count for making and one for uttering.[100]

COUNTIES.

§ 1. Creation and Organization.
§ 2. Officers, Personal Rights and Liabilities.
§ 3. Public Powers, Duties and Liabilities. Contracts; Bonds; Torts; Claims and Warrants.

§ 1. Creation and organization.—Generally a new county can be created only on consent of the qualified voters; the proceedings to establish being purely statutory will be shown in the footnotes.[1] The question of legality of organization cannot be raised collaterally.[2] On the dissolution of a county and the formation of a new division including the entire county territory, the former succeeds to the property and liabilities of the old county.[3] The newly organized county is liable for the expenses of organization.[4]

§ 2. Officers, personal rights, and liabilities.—A county officer cannot at the

in the former court—Fox v. Jacob Dold Packing Co., 96 Mo. App. 173. The action may be stayed until costs of the former action should be paid—Plumley v. Simpson (Wash.) 71 Pac. 710. Dismissal with costs and without prejudice will only stay the new suit in case of non-payment from the time the costs must be paid under the statute. N. Y. Code Civ. Pro. § 779 provides that such costs shall be paid within 10 days—Kellogg Switchboard & Supply Co. v. Glen Tel. Co., 121 Fed. 174. A second application for the same relief cannot be had without payment of the costs on denial of first application—Hunt v. Sullivan, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 119. It is error to order dismissal of complaint on failure to pay costs as a condition of granting a continuance—Hewett v. Cook, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 239. Where the motion to amend title was denied with costs an order permitting supplementary summons to issue is void—Hochman v. Hauptman, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 72. Costs on affirmance of an order granting new trial must be paid before the cause can be restored to the calendar—Cohen v. Krulewitch, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 147.

99. As by noticing the cause for trial (Mattice v. Shelland, 76 App. Div. [N. Y.] 236); or by proceeding to trial after default judgment had been vacated with costs plaintiff waived the stay—Dout v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 618.

100. Burgess v. State (Miss.) 33 So. 499.

1. Minnesota. The petition first filed for organization of a new county is entitled to priority of consideration by the state officials—State v. Larson (Minn.) 94 N. W. 226. Laws 1895, p. 270, c. 124, § 2 amending Laws 1893, p. 262, c. 143, § 4 is not in violation of constitution, § 2, art. 1, since it does not operate to disfranchise electors having the right to vote on the organization of a new county—State v. Falk (Minn.) 94 N. W. 879. But one proposition involving the same territory can be submitted at the same election to create a new county and to warrant a submission of more than one there must be a material and substantial difference in the territory to be included within their respective boundaries—State v. Larson (Minn.) 94 N. W. 226. In case several competing propositions are submitted at the same election, the electors are authorized to vote only upon one, which must be carried by an affirmative vote of the majority on that issue and a plurality over its competitors—State v. Falk (Minn.) 94 N. W. 879.

South Carolina. A petition to the governor for the establishment of a new county should be made by the qualified voters within the area of each section of the old county proposed to be cut off to form a new county, irrespective of township or school district lines—Fraser v. James, 65 S. C. 78. The result of an election governs the legislative right to create a new county—Id. Whether the constitutional requirements in the creation of a new county from the old have been followed is a question for the determination of the legislature—Id.

Wyoming. The county organization commissioner may incur obligations for supplies for the conduct of the election—Taylor v. Board of Com'rs (Wyo.) 70 Pac. 835. The commissioners and their clerk are not entitled to compensation as county officers—Id.

2. A newly organized county is a de facto county from the time of the governor's proclamation to that effect, and the legality of its organization cannot be collaterally attacked—State v. District Ct. (Minn.) 95 N. W. 591.

3. Garfield Tp. v. Herman (Kan.) 71 Pac. 517. Green County of Texas transferred to Green County Oklahoma by act of Congress, May 4, 1896, the latter county on such transfer being liable for debts of the former—Board of Com'rs v. Clarke (Okl.) 70 Pac. 206. A legislative resolution providing for a commission to audit accounts and claims against a disorganized county, creating a board of auditors for that purpose with power to determine the validity and amount of the claims and to apportion them against property of the disorganized county, is invalid as conferring judicial powers on such board—Fitch v. Board of Auditors of Claims (Mich.) 94 N. W. 952.

4. Taylor v. Board of Com'rs (Wyo.) 70 Pac. 835.

same time hold more than one office,[5] nor can they while holding office enter into contractual relations with the county.[6] Statutes giving a remedy to compel officers to perform their duties must be strictly followed.[7]

The county treasurer is entitled to all the county funds,[8] and may, by mandamus, compel county commissioners to pay over funds in their possession.[9]

An officer's powers are co-extensive with his term of office,[10] but an action instituted in behalf of a county by an officer does not abate on the expiration of his term of office.[11] The issuance and service of a summons in error in an action against the county may be waived by the county commissioners.[12]

For a tort which results from a mere neglect of duty, the officer cannot be held personally liable,[13] but he may be held liable for the costs of proceedings to compel him to perform his duties,[14] and for official misconduct he may be prosecuted criminally.[15]

The right and amount of compensation that officers are entitled to being purely statutory will be shown in the footnotes.[16] Generally the salaries of county

5. That the trustee of county bonds was a county commissioner at the time of his appointment is not ground for removal, he having thereafter and before entering upon his duties as trustee resigned from the office of commissioner—Potter v. Lainhart (Fla.) 33 So. 251. Rev. St. 1898, §§ 541, 542, vests in the county commissioners discretionary power to consolidate the duties of the county officers and in the absence of such consolidation one person cannot hold and discharge the duties of two or more county offices simultaneously—State v. Woolfenden (Utah) 72 Pac. 690. Where at a county election, one candidate was nominated by both parties to two offices and his name alone appeared on the ballots which were voted and canvassed without objection, a presumption of consolidation arises—State v. Woolfenden (Utah) 72 Pac. 690. Evidence that an attempted consolidation was ineffectual, because publication thereof was not properly made, is insufficient to overcome a presumption of consolidation of offices—Id.

6. County officers including a county surveyor cannot purchase public lands (Tex. Pen. Code, art. 123)—Keen v. Featherston (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 983.

7. The fiscal court has no power to enforce the attendance of justices of the peace by attachment as is allowed in case of a court of claims—Stephens v. Wilson, 24 Ky. L. R. 1832, 72 S. W. 336.

8. He is entitled to the public road fund under Political Code 1895, §§ 458, 575—Board of Roads & Revenue v. Clark (Ga.) 43 S. E. 722.

9. Board of Roads & Revenue v. Clark (Ga.) 43 S. E. 722.

10. County commissioners having appointive powers can only appoint for the term of office for which they were elected—Hancock v. Craven County Com'rs, 132 N. C. 209. An act changing the time for commencement of term of office of a particular officer of a particular county, is valid—Hunt v. Buhrer (Mich.) 94 N. W. 589. A county treasurer elected at a general election in 1902 will not begin his term of office until the first Monday in October 1903—Finley v. Combs (Okl.) 71 Pac. 625.

11. Sebree v. Commonwealth, 25 Ky. L. R. 121, 74 S. W. 716.

12. Dakota County v. Bartlett (Neb.) 93 N. W. 192.

13. County commissioners cannot be held under Gen. St. § 1829 for death caused by fire which resulted from defective electric wiring of the county jail and which they neglected to repair—Miller v. Ouray Elec. Light & Power Co. (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 447.

14. Where the holder by mandamus compels payment of a warrant, he may recover as damages against the county treasurer individual attorney's fees and other expenses incurred in the prosecution of the mandamus suit with interest on the amount of the warrant; but to recover double damages under Rev. St. 1899, art. 4, §§ 6772, 6808, it is essential that the plaintiff must plead and show that the treasurer had been convicted of a misdemeanor for refusing to pay the warrant on presentation and demand—State v. Adams (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 497. To recover double damages under Rev. St. 1899, art. 4, §§ 6772, 6808, it is essential that the treasurer willfully and knowingly in disregard of his official duty refused to pay the warrant and acting under legal advice that it was not his duty to pay, is not a willful refusal—Id.

15. The letting of contracts without the presence of other members of the board of commissioners by a county supervisor, is such misconduct as will call for criminal prosecution, but that he did not let contracts to the lowest bidder will not subject him to criminal prosecution (Act Feb. 19, 1900, p. 280)—State v. Jaques, 65 S. C. 178. If the supervisor knowingly approves a false claim he may be prosecuted criminally—Id.

16. County officers are entitled to a per diem allowance for services as members of the board of review in addition to their regular compensation (Acts 1891, p. 197, § 114, amended 1895 is not repealed by act 1895, p. 319)—Seiler v. State (Ind.) 65 N. E. 922, 66 N. E. 946, 67 N. E. 448. In a proceeding calling in treasury warrants for cancellation, and re-issuance, the county clerk should be allowed commission for indexing and allowance for all claims presented—Duncan v. Scott County, 70 Ark. 607. A county bond trustee acting as a substitute is entitled to compensation—Mercer officials cannot be increased during their term of office,[17] nor will the imposition of additional duties within the scope of the office warrant an allowance in addition to the regular salary.[18]

For any breach of official duty, the officer and his sureties are, generally speaking, liable.[19]

§ 3. Public powers, duties, and liabilities.[20]—Courts cannot compel the exercise of county officer's discretionary powers,[21] but they can compel the performance of duties.[22]

County v. Pearson, 24 Ky. L. R. 1368, 71 S. W. 639. The county trustee of realty bonds under the statute is entitled to be reimbursed for counsel fees expended in collecting from the county—Mercer County v. Pearson, 24 Ky. L. R. 1368, 71 S. W. 639. Mississippi Code 1892 did not repeal Act 1890, p. 386, c. 250, § 8, authorizing salary to members of the board of supervisors of Madison County—Adams v. Dendy (Miss.) 33 So. 843. A county clerk is entitled only to the statutory per diem compensation and to none other for acting as a member of the board of equalization—State v. Adams (Mo.) 72 S. W. 655. County treasurers are entitled to a limited commission on funds belonging to the state collected and paid over by them in addition to the statutory compensation. Laws 1871, p. 227, c. 110, § 1, limiting the commission to 1% and not to exceed $500, except in certain counties, is not affected by Laws 1892, p. 1775, c. 686, § 141, subd. 5, fixing compensation of county treasurers—Upham v. State, 174 N. Y. 336. The complaint in an action by a county surveyor to recover compensation must state the time actually occupied as such surveyor—Sayles v. Walla Walla County, 30 Wash. 194, 70 Pac. 256. After fixing the salary of the register in probate and collecting the taxes to meet the same, a county board cannot prohibit payment—Roberts v. Erickson (Wis.) 94 N. W. 29.

17. Etsell v. Knight (Wis.) 94 N. W. 290.

18. Jefferson County v. Waters, 24 Ky. L. R. 816, 70 S. W. 40.

19. The articles on "Officers" and "Suretyship" will treat more specifically of these matters. A county officer's bond should run to a state or territory. It may be joint and several in form—Brady v. Pinal County (Ariz.) 71 Pac. 910. An action on the county bond of a county officer should be brought in the name of the state on relation of the county commissioner—Nowlin v. State, 30 Ind. App. 277. The town and its supervisors cannot maintain an action on the county treasurer's bond for failure to pay over school funds apportioned to the town—Town of Ulysses v. Ingersoll, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 304. The sureties on a county treasurer's bond are not liable for losses occurring by reason of payment of forged school district warrants—State v. Weeks, 92 Mo. App. 359. The neglectful performance of duties as a county treasurer is a breach of a condition of his bond to faithfully discharge his duties, as where he received a check from a bank for county bonds, gave the revenue board a receipt as for money received, deposited the check in the bank to his credit as treasurer as a special fund, the bank having failed after a small part had been paid on warrants—Montgomery County v. Cochran (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 17. Sureties on an official bond are liable only for such sums of money as the principal may lawfully receive in the discharge of his official duties—Wilson v. State (Kan.) 72 Pac. 517. An action may be maintained on the bond of a county officer for failure to pay over to a successor, though the auditors had not yet settled and adjusted his accounts—Lancaster County v. Hershey, 205 Pa. 343. The county attorney's sureties are not liable for his failure to pay over money collected on promissory notes given by needy farmers under a provision of Laws 1895, p. 394, § 242—Wilson v. State (Kan.) 72 Pac. 517. The sureties on the county auditor's bond are liable for the acts of the auditor's deputy, the latter having power to remove him from office—Board of Com'rs v. Sullivan (Minn.) 93 N. W. 1056. The county treasurer and his sureties are liable for the redemption by him of fraudulent orders drawn by the deputy county auditor—Board of Com'rs v. Sullivan (Minn.) 93 N. W. 1056. The sureties on the bond of an official are liable for fees unlawfully received—State v. Adams (Mo.) 72 S. W. 655. The sale of county warrants is not a part of the duty of the county clerk, and the purchaser of a warrant from such clerk cannot maintain an action on the official bond of the clerk—State v. Harrison (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 469. Actions against the bond of county officers may be properly brought in the name of the county commissioners—Board of Com'rs v. Sullivan (Minn.) 93 N. W. 1056.

20. Contruction and maintenance of highways and bridges see "Highways," "Bridges."

21. The county commissioners having exclusive power to determine the necessity for erection of a new court house cannot, in the absence of fraud, be compelled to act. Matkin v. Marengo County (Ala.) 34 So. 171. That proceedings by the court of county commissioners for the erection of a new court house was adjourned over to the second succeeding term, the intervening term being limited by the Code to the transaction of business relating solely to taxation, will not affect the validity of proceedings—Matkin v. Marengo County (Ala.) 34 So. 171.

22. Mandamus is the proper remedy for enforcement of the duty of a county fiscal court to restore a destroyed bridge on the county road—Leslie County v. Wooton (Ky.) 75 S. W. 208.

County officers cannot by virtue of their office alone donate county funds,[23] or release county claims,[24] or sell county property.[25]

Removal of the court house within the same town is not a removal of the "county seat" on which a vote must be taken.[26] Proceedings to enlarge or establish a new court house instituted under an invalid act cannot be supported as a proceeding under a previously existing valid statute.[27]

A county cannot be estopped to dispute the validity of an unauthorized and void act by officers merely because it received the benefit of such act,[28] though the approval of a report of the act will operate as a ratification.[29]

On refusal of officers to act, a taxpayer may sue to recover county funds in the possession of an officer, to which action the state is not a necessary party.[30] The prosecuting attorney is the proper person to restrain misuse of county property by the commissioners.[31]

Contracts.—Generally, counties are without authority to contract or incur indebtedness beyond certain fixed limits,[32] but such a limitation refers only to that class of debts which it is optional with the county to incur and not to necessary expenses of the governmental functions.[33] If a fund has reached the legal limit, it cannot be increased by the transfer of another fund to it.[34] The issuance of refunding bonds is not an incurring of new debt.[35]

A county is liable only on contracts made as authorized,[36] and it can contract

23. Awarding by resolution a sum of money "as a charity rather than as a settlement of a legal liability" to one whose claim for personal injuries was disallowed, is without authority—Kircher v. Pederson (Wis.) 93 N. W. 813.

24. The board of county commissioners has no power to release surety on an official's bond—Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Fleming, 132 N. C. 332.

25. An order directing a sale of lands purchased by the county under execution in favor of the county, held to authorize a sale by the commissioners—Cardwell v. Hargis, 24 Ky. L. R. 1406, 71 S. W. 488. Rev. St. 1895, art. 845, authorizing a county which holds a judgment which cannot at the time be collected, to sell and dispose of the same, is not in conflict with Const. art. 3, § 55, providing that the legislature shall have no power to release or extinguish any liability of any county or other municipal corporation—Lindsey v. State (Tex.) 74 S. W. 750.

26. Constitution, § 41, in case of removal of a county seat—Matkin v. Marengo County (Ala.) 34 So. 171.

A county resident may institute proceedings to review proceedings for the removal of the county seat—Board of Sup'rs v. Buckley (Miss.) 33 So. 650. Act Feb. 5, 1901, providing for the removal of a county seat held valid—Hand v. Stapleton, 135 Ala. 156.

27. Proceedings under Act March 5, 1902 cannot be sustained as a proceeding under Act April 16, 1846—Moreau v. Board of Chosen Freeholders, 68 N. J. Law, 480.

28. Missouri & S. W. Land Co. v. Quinn (Mo.) 73 S. W. 184.

29. Cardwell v. Hargis, 24 Ky. L. R. 1406, 71 S. W. 488. Unauthorized acts by the representative of the county commissioners' court are not ratified by the latter by accepting the report of such representatives making no reference to particular acts—Fayette County v. Krause (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 51.

30. State v. Casper (Ind.) 67 N. E. 185.

A resident may obtain review of county seat removal—Board of Sup'rs v. Buckley (Miss.) 33 So. 650.

31. First German Reformed Church v. Summit County Com'rs, 23 Ohio Cir. R. 553.

32. F. C. Austin Mfg. Co. v. Colfax County (Neb.) 93 N. W. 145. A county cannot levy a special assessment to meet valid outstanding warrants which represent indebtedness in excess of the constitutional limit (Rev. St. Mo. 1899, § 9274)—State v. Wabash R. Co., 169 Mo. 563. A statute authorizing the employment and payment of guards to protect property threatened with mob violence does not contravene Const. § 157, providing that no county shall become indebted for any purpose exceeding in any year the income provided for in such year without the assent of a third of the voters—Hopkins County v. St. Bernard Coal Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 942, 70 S. W. 289.

33. Hopkins County v. St. Bernard Coal Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 942, 70 S. W. 289.

34. In such case the levy for the fund transferred is void—Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lincoln County (Neb.) 92 N. W. 208. Comp. St. Neb. 1901, c. 18, art. 3, § 4—Bacon v. Dawes County (Neb.) 92 N. W. 313.

35. Walling v. Lummis (S. D.) 92 N. W. 1063.

36. It is not liable for services rendered in securing evidence to assist the prosecution for violations of the liquor laws on request of the prosecutor of pleas; but such party should submit his claim to the judge of sessions or oyer and terminer—Gibboney v. Board of Chosen Freeholders (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 46.

only through its authorized officials,[37] who can act only within the scope of their authority.[38]

Since the board of commissioners can act only as an entity, contracts made by individual members are not binding on the county.[39] If given authority to appropriate money for a specific purpose, it has authority to enter into contracts involving the expenditure of moneys appropriated.[40] It has power to enter into a contract to erect a fireproof vault for public records without previous legislative authorization,[41] to make a contract with one to investigate and discover taxable property which through fraud or otherwise had been omitted from taxation,[42] to employ counsel to defend civil suits, though the county had at the time a regular attorney,[43] but only to prosecute and defend actions wherein the county is a party.[44]

Bonds.[45]—It is within the power of the legislature to authorize counties to issue bonds for the construction of public improvements without a submission of the question to the people.[46] It is essential to the validity of county bonds that all the statutory requirements as to their issuance be followed; the mode of issuance being dependent on various statutes is shown in the footnotes.[47] An issue of bonds

37. The county court having authority to subscribe for railroad stock may properly order the clerk of court to make the subscription, such being a mere ministerial act and not a delegation of power—Green County v. Shortell (Ky.) 75 S. W. 251.

38. County officers cannot contract for the publication of a sheriff's election proclamation or other public notice in excess of the number directed by statute and the fact that there is on the same paper a charge for a publication which is authorized will not render it valid (Vindicator Printing Co. v. State, 68 Ohio St. 362); and the members of the board do not become individually liable on contracts beyond the scope of their power—Warren County v. Dabney (Miss.) 32 So. 908.

39. Williams v. Board of Com'rs (Mont.) 72 Pac. 755. An oral commission given by members to person to connect with a county sewer is not the act of a commissioners' court—Fayette County v. Krause (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 51. A resolution signed and attested by commissioners individually offering a reward is not a personal obligation—Schieber v. Von Arx, 87 Minn. 298.

40. Bayne v. Board of Com'rs (Minn.) 95 N. W. 456.

41. B. F. Smith Fireproof Const. Co. v. Munroe (Md.) 55 Atl. 315.

42. It is not the duty of the county treasurer to investigate and discover property omitted from the assessment list. The court will not on appeal presume that a contract for fifty per cent as a compensation for such services, is unreasonable—Shinn v. Cunningham (Iowa) 94 N. W. 941. Act 28th Gen. Assem. p. 333, c. 50, limiting payment for discovery of property omitted from taxation to 15 per cent, does not apply to a contract for a greater rate made with the county supervisors prior to its passage—Shinn v Cunningham (Iowa) 94 N. W. 941.

43. Act 1892, § 293—Board of Sup'rs v. Booth (Miss.) 32 So. 1000. Contract with one not a county officer to pay for services in preparing evidence is valid, though such person employed a county officer to do work for him—Contra Costa County v. Soto, 138 Cal. 57, 70 Pac. 1019.

44. Williams v. Board of Com'rs (Mont.) 72 Pac. 755.

45. Under N. Car. Ordinance March 8, 1868, Wilkes County had authority to issue bonds to aid construction of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad—Wilkes County v. Coler, 190 U. S. 107.

46. But Gen. Laws 1893, c. 133 authorizing county commissioners of certain counties to issue bonds for the construction of a court house, limiting its operation to such counties as had, at the time of its passage, expended at least $7,000 for the court house purpose, is invalid as special legislation—Hetland v. Board of Com'rs (Minn.) 95 N. W. 305.

47. Hillsborough County v. Henderson (Fla.) 33 So. 997.

Election to obtain consent of taxpayers. The county commissioners have authority to submit the question whether bonds shall be issued for the erection of public buildings and the construction of highways to the voters as an entirety. (Rev. St. Fla. § 591, amended acts 1899, c. 4711, Rev. St. § 593)—Potter v. Lainhart (Fla.) 33 So. 251. It is essential that the notice of an election for the purpose of determining the question of issuance of bonds must be published during the statutory time prior to the election; that is thirty days next preceding the day of the election (Pol. Code, Ga. § 377, not being repealed by Civil Code, § 5458)—Davis v. Dougherty Co. (Ga.) 42 S. E. 764. A notice of an election in every respect in compliance with the statute, is sufficient, though it fails to state the date that the bonds were to bear, or the price at which the bonds are to be sold, or that the notice does not bear any date, it being properly published prior to the election—Wimberly v. Twiggs Co., 116 Ga. 50. The form of the ballot for an election to determine the issuance of bonds for county improvements will be governed by Rev. St. Fla. §§ 592, 595—Potter v. Lainhart (Fla.) 33 So. 251. A majority vote at an election to determine the issuance of bonds for pub-is not invalid in toto because of excess issue,[48] nor will the making of illegal special assessments to pay them affect their validity.[49] That the bidder was permitted to take the bonds on payment of the first instalment without giving security will not invalidate the bonds.[50]

It is within the power of the legislature to validate county bonds,[51] and such an act will affect bonds issued and those to be issued.[52]

A county may be estopped to question the validity of bonds issued by the recitals therein,[53] but it cannot be estopped, even as against a bona fide purchaser, to question the validity of bonds issued which contained no recital as to the authority of officers issuing them or as to the performance of the requisite preliminaries,[54] since a purchaser of such bonds is put upon inquiry as to the authority of the officers,[55] particularly where the issuance was made a matter of court record,[56] and this though the county had paid interest on the bonds for a few years.[57] A county which had received a valuable consideration,—which is presumed—for bonds issued, cannot repudiate bonds issued in lieu of the original issue.[58] A taxpayer may lic improvements determines the result—Potter v. Lainhart (Fla.) 33 So. 251.

Issuance by officers. A resolution of the board of commissioners to issue bonds duly recorded and signed by each is valid, though the minutes of the board did not recite that it was seconded and formally voted upon by the board—Potter v. Lainhart (Fla.) 33 So. 251. The commissioners have authority to issue bonds only for the purpose specified in the resolution authorizing the issuance—Id. It is essential that the county board of commissioners provide a sinking fund by resolution for the redemption of bonds before their issuance (Fla. Rev. St. § 602, Act 1893, c. 4286)—Potter v. Lainhart (Fla.) 33 So. 251. The resolution of county commissioners for the issuance of bonds must fix the rate of interest that they will bear. Rev. St. Fla. 1892, §§ 591-593. A provision that they shall not bear more than 4 per cent. interest per annum is insufficient—Hillsborough County v. Henderson (Fla.) 33 So. 997. The county commissioners' resolution for the issuance of bonds should state the amount of bonds required for each purpose where more than one purpose is designated. Providing for gross amount, one of the purposes being the funding of the county debt, is sufficient—Hillsborough County v. Henderson (Fla.) 33 So. 997. County bonds issued in form prescribed by resolution of the commissioners, signed by the chairman, attested by the county clerk and countersigned by the county treasurer under seal of the board are valid county bonds—Potter v. Lainhart (Fla.) 33 So. 251. Counties having authority to issue bonds may make them payable in gold coin of the United States of the present standard weight and fineness—Hillsborough County v. Henderson (Fla.) 33 So. 997. The presentment of county bonds to the attorney general for approval as required by statute is a mere ministerial act—Martin Co. v. Gillespie Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 421. The issuance of bonds and the levying of a tax required for their payment and delivery to a purchaser, authorizes such purchaser to submit them to the attorney general for approval—Id. It is not a fraud on the part of the purchaser of bonds from a county to fail to disclose to the attorney general at the time of submitting them to him for approval as required by the statute an attempted repudiation of the bonds by the county—Id.

48. Martin Co. v. Gillespie Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 421.

49. Com'rs of Franklin County v. Gardiner Sav. Inst. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 36.

50. If the action is not discretionary with the commissioners it is an irregularity at most that may be cured by legislative action—Potter v. Lainhart (Fla.) 33 So. 251. If a bid is stated in the amount of dollars and is accepted, it must be paid in current money—Id. A county treasurer may receive checks or certificates of deposit in exchange for county bonds which will be considered "funds and money" in his hands within the statute authorizing the issue of the bonds—Montgomery County v. Cochran (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 17.

51. Where bonds were issued before a sinking fund was provided for their redemption an act validating them is not in violation of Const. art. 9, § 5, authorizing the legislature to empower counties and towns to assess taxes for county and municipal purposes and for no other purpose—Potter v. Lainhart (Fla.) 33 So. 251. A statute validating bonds issued for the construction of highways and county buildings, validates bonds issued for roads and a courthouse, and a resolution of the board of commissioners authorizing a submission to the electors for the latter issuance—Id.

52. Potter v. Lainhart (Fla.) 33 So. 251.

53. Bonds issued by Stanley County, North Carolina, to aid the construction of the Yatkin Valley Railroad are valid obligations of the county—Stanley County v. Coler, 190 U. S. 437. A statement in the certificate of approval of county bonds by the attorney general that they were submitted in accordance with the requirement of the statute for approval by him, estops the county from denying the truth thereof—Martin Co. v. Gillespie Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 421.

54, 55, 56, 57. Green County v. Shortell (Ky.) 75 S W. 251.

58. Martin County v. Gillespie County (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 421.

maintain an action and declare bonds void as being in excess of the statutory limit.[59]

The statutory mode of redemption of county bonds has been held not the exclusive mode.[60]

Torts.—In the absence of statutory provisions, counties cannot be held liable for torts,[61] particularly the torts of its officers acting without the scope of their authority.[62]

Presentation, allowance, enforcement, and payment of claims. Issuance of warrants.—In presenting claims against a county, the statutory requisites must be complied with.[63] The decision must specify the items allowed or disallowed.[64] An appeal lies from the refusal of the proper officers to inspect and accept a work done under a contract,[65] only after they have refused to allow a claim for the work done.[66] The appeal from the decision of the board on a claim presented must be from the entire decision,[67] and it vacates the entire decision of the board.[68] In the absence of a specific agreement, a county is not liable for interest on claims.[69]

It is essential that a claim against the county be first audited before action can be brought thereon,[70] and a decision may be presumed by reason of lapse of 59. Comr's of Owen County v. Spangler, 159 Ind. 575.

60. A provision in an act authorizing the issuance of county bonds for road improvements that they be paid for by assessment upon the property abutting the improvements is not exclusive of any other mode of payment for the same, the obligation to pay being unconditional—Com'rs of Franklin County v. Gardiner Sav. Inst. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 36. Act Gen. Assem. Ala. 1900, 1901, pp. 1722-1728, providing for the issuance of bonds for the construction of sewers, held not to intend by section 11 providing for a special tax levy, that the principal of such bonds should be paid exclusively from such fund but that it was payable out of any funds—Birmingham Trust & Sav. Co. v. Jefferson County (Ala.) 34 So. 398.

61. Trespass in taking land for construction of highway cannot be maintained—Hitch v. Edgecombe County Com'rs (N. C.) 44 S. E. 30. A county cannot be held liable for false arrest (Const. art. 5, § 15, Rev. St. §§ 1104, 5181, provides that all prosecutions shall be carried on in the name of the state by the prosecuting attorney)—Houtz v. Com'rs of Uinta County (Wyo.) 70 Pac. 840. General discussion in 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 947 et seq. A county may be liable for depreciation of adjoining realty by the erection of a pest-house. Evidence held sufficient to support a verdict for defendant —Banks v. Henderson Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 1560, 71 S. W. 902.

62. It is not a part of the official duties of a county treasurer to examine the account of a tax collector and report the same to one intending to become a surety for such collector and a false statement made therein to such surety is not binding on the county—Commonwealth v. American Bonding & Trust Co. (Pa.) 54 Atl. 1034.

63. The county is liable only for the recorder's assistant's salary when a bill for such services had been filed by the recorder as required by the statute, that is at the next regular meeting after the rendition of the services (Code, § 496)—Allen v. Adams County (Iowa) 94 N. W. 261. The claim of an attorney for services under appointment of the court to assist in the prosecution of an action need not be verified as required by statute on a claim against the county—Com'rs of Hinsdale County v. Crump (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 159. A certified copy of the order of appointment would be sufficient—Com'rs of Hinsdale County v. Crump (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 159. Claim presented held sufficiently verified under the statute—Bayne v. Board of Com'rs (Minn.) 95 N. W. 456. A mere letter from the attorney for the claimant demanding payment is not a presentment of the claim in such form as would authorize commissioners to act upon it—Houtz v. Comr's of Uinta County (Wyo.) 70 Pac. 84. A mere declination to allow a claim is not a waiver of an objection that it had not been presented in due statutory form—Id.

64. People v. Board of Sup'rs, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 51.

65. Young v. Leflore County (Miss.) 33 So. 410. Claimant is not confined to an appeal from the fiscal court's judgment; he may bring action against the county—Hudgins v. Carter County, 24 Ky. L. R. 1980, 72 S. W. 730.

66. Young v. Leflore County (Miss.) 33 So. 410.

67. Claimant cannot accept payment under the favorable part of a decision and at the same time appeal from the remainder—Dakota County v. Borowsky (Neb.) 93 N. W. 686.

68. Dakota County v. Borowsky (Neb.) 93 N. W. 866.

69. Chambers v. Custer County (Idaho) 71 Pac. 113.

70. Chambers v. Custer County (Idaho) 71 Pac. 113; Houtz v. Com'rs of Uinta County (Wyo.) 70 Pac. 84. The trustee who holds the county bonds pursuant to the statute may recover his compensation in an action on the bond, where it is but an incident to the suit, without first presenting his claim—Mercer County v. Pearson, 24 Ky. L. R. 1368, 71 S. W. 639. It is not an essential prerequisite to a suit by a city against the county to recover taxes, interest and penal-time and failure of the commissioners to act;[71] this, however, does not apply to county bonds.[72] Payment of county warrants cannot be enforced until there is money in the fund against which they are drawn or on neglect of the authorities to provide such fund.[73] Garnishment will not lie against a county.[74] The action should be brought against the county and not against the officers,[75] and recovery is limited to the amount as submitted for audit.[76]

In the adjustment of claims, county commissioners act ministerially and their allowances are not conclusive,[77] and if the allowance and payment of the claim was illegal or unauthorized, the county may recover back the payment,[78] in an action by a taxpayer when the proper officers refuse to act,[79] and in such case the judgments should be in favor of the county with costs to the taxpayer;[80] the fund so collected may be charged with counsel fees and expenses of the suit,[81] but only such fees as are reasonable and necessary.[82] A taxpayer may sue to restrain payment of alleged illegal claims.[83]

In the issuance of warrants, it is essential that all the statutory requirements as to form be followed,[84] but an admission of the issuance of county warrants is a waiver of an objection to their sufficiency in form.[85]

County warrants are valid, though a sufficient amount of taxes had not been collected to pay them,[86] but if drawn in excess of the statutory limitation of indebtedness are void.[87]

Void warrants cannot be ratified by the county,[88] nor will false statements in ties received by the county treasurer that it file an itemized claim with the county commissioner—City of Fergus Falls v. Com'rs of Otter Tail County (Minn.) 93 N. W. 126.

71. Com'rs of Hinsdale v. Crump (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 159.

72. Martin County v. Gillespie County (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 421.

73. Bacon v. Dawes County (Neb.) 92 N. W. 313.

74. Duval County v. Charleston Lumber & Mfg. Co. (Fla.) 33 So. 531; Michigan Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Duval County (Fla.) 34 So. 245.

75. The complaint in an action against the county commissioners may be amended so as to be against the county—Conyers v. Com'rs of Roads & Revenues, 116 Ga. 101. The failure to amend the complaint in action pending when Const. 1877 took effect, by changing name of county commissioners to that of the county as defendant will not abate the suit. Actions pending when Const. 1877 took effect—Conyers v. Com'rs of Roads & Revenues, 116 Ga. 101. Evidence in an action to recover for services as an attorney for the county, held sufficient to warrant its submission to the jury. Sufficiency of evidence to sustain validity of warrant—Dakota County v. Bartlett (Neb.) 93 N. W. 192; Hancock v. Board of Com'rs, 132 N. C. 209.

76. Hudgins v. Carter County, 24 Ky. L. R. 1980, 72 S. W. 730.

47. Chase County v. Kelley (Neb.) 95 N. W. 865; Honey v. Com'rs of Jewell County, 65 Kan. 428, 70 Pac. 333; Vindicator Printing Co. v. State, 68 Ohio St. 362; Saline County v. Gage County (Neb.) 92 N. W. 1050. The decision of a county commissioner allowing a claim is not in the nature of a judgment precluding the auditor from questioning the validity of a claim—State v. Perry, 159 Ind. 508.

78. Etsell v. Knight (Wis.) 94 N. W. 290; Honey v. Com'rs of Jewell County, 65 Kan. 428, 70 Pac. 333. In Ohio prior to April 25, 1898, a prosecuting attorney could not maintain an action in the absence of fraud, but since that act he has power—Vindicator Printing Co. v. State, 68 Ohio St. 362. Complaint in action by a tax payer to recover back allowances illegally made to a member of the board of supervisors, held insufficient—Wallace v. Jones, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 152.

79. A tax payer may sue to compel a county auditor to restore money allowed him in excess of his fees which action is not barred by a lapse of 60 days after the allowance and payment of such claims, under Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 7848c—Kimble v. Board of Com'rs (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 1023. Burns' Rev. St. 1901, § 5594, providing for the recovery in addition to moneys misappropriated by county officers, of attorney's fees and necessary expenses, does not apply to a tax payer's action against county commissioners to recover funds misappropriated on illegal claims allowed—Id.

80. Etsell v. Knight (Wis.) 94 N. W. 290.

81, 82. Kimble v. Board of Com'rs (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 1023.

83. Rogers v. Board of Sup'rs, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 501.

84. County warrants which do not state on their face the purpose for which they were drawn and when the claim accrued are void—Bingham County v. First Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 16.

85. As an objection that they did not bear the seal—Dakota County v. Bartlett (Neb.) 93 N. W. 192.

86. Walling v. Lummis (S. D.) 92 N. W. 1063.

87. Neb. Comp. St. 1901, c. 18, art. 1—Bacon v. Dawes County (Neb.) 92 N. W. 313.

88. Bingham County v. First Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 16.

warrants estop the county from questioning their validity.[89] The acceptance of a county warrant which contains a statement that it was in full settlement precludes claimant from recovering on the disallowed balance of his claim.[90] To render transfer of a county warrant valid, the assignment must be in the form prescribed by statute.[91]

The fund particularly charged with the payment of a warrant alone is liable, and it cannot be charged against any other fund.[92] Payment of warrants by check drawn on an insolvent bank does not discharge the county's liability.[93]

COURTS.[1]

§ 1. Creation, change, and alteration.—The legislature unless restricted has power to establish courts other than those provided in the constitution,[2] especially those of inferior jurisdiction,[3] or to increase the number of judicial districts;[4] but in the absence of constitutional warrant, the legislature cannot change the constitutional classification of the state courts.[5]

In the absence of such an intent it will not be presumed that an act conferring upon a new tribunal the greater part of the jurisdiction of an inferior court abolished the latter.[6]

§ 2. Officers and instrumentalities of courts.[7]—Bailiffs and criers are officers of the court.[8]

§ 3. Places, terms, and sessions of courts.—Courts of equity in absence of a contrary statute are always open.[9]

Generally, the time of the commencement of the term is fixed by statute,[10] and a statute fixing the term of court and limiting it to a court of a particular district is valid.[11] A term continues until the succeeding term as to a pending motion,[12]

89. False indorsement by the county board of the amount of the levy and expenditures on a warrant against a particular fund will not estop the county from asserting invalidity of the warrant because beyond the statutory limit. The purpose of the statute is to guard against overdrawing of warrants against the fund—National Life Ins. Co. v. Dawes County (Neb.) 93 N. W. 187.

90. Com'rs of Garfield County v. Beardsley (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 155.

91. Mere assignment by indorsement is insufficient—State v. Harrison (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 469.

92. There being no stenographers' fund, the court stenographer's salary cannot be paid out of any other fund. Arkansas act March 16, 1897—Dunn v. Ouachita Valley Bank (Ark.) 71 S. W. 265. A warrant against the "advertising fund" will be considered as drawn against the general fund—Dakota County v. Bartlett (Neb.) 93 N. W. 192.

93. Green v. Custer Co. (Idaho) 71 Pac. 115.

1. The establishment, organization, constituency, and the general procedure of courts only will be treated herein; for questions of jurisdiction see "Jurisdiction," rules of decision by precedent see "Stare Decisis" and for practice governing in particular actions see the specific heads.

2. P. L. 1898, p. 866, empowering quarter sessions to transmit indictments to oyer and terminer which it has no jurisdiction to try is valid—State v. Gruff, 68 N. J. Law, 287. It is within the power of the legislature to confer on the judge of the common pleas court the power to hold a term of oyer and terminer. Pub. Laws 1898, p. 867, § 3, is valid—State v. Taylor, 68 N. J. Law, 276.

3. Act 1901, creating municipal courts is valid—State v. Howell (Utah) 72 Pac. 187.

4. Act March 12, 1903, increasing the number of judges in the third judicial district—State v. Lewis (Utah) 72 Pac. 388.

5. Love v. Liddle (Utah) 72 Pac. 185.

6. Laws 1899, c. 127, p. 250, creating the city court in Ft. Scott did not abolish the office of police judge—City of Ft. Scott v. Slater (Kan.) 72 Pac. 550.

7. Rights, duties and liabilities of particular officers, see Attorney and Client, Clerks of Court, Judges, Justices of the Peace, Stenographers.

8. And are entitled to per diem compensation on days when it was adjourned by written order of the federal circuit court—United States v. McCabe, 122 Fed. 653.

9. To order sale of infants' estates within equity jurisdiction—Webb v. Hicks (Ga.) 43 S. E. 738; Mitchell v. Turner (Ga.) 44 S. E. 17.

10. Indiana Act March 9, 1903, did not change the time for holding court in Fountain county circuit until the beginning of the court year that is on the last Monday of August—Rabb v. McAdams (Ind.) 67 N. E. 182. Sufficiency of evidence to show that court did not convene entitling a defendant in a criminal proceeding to discharge—Farr v. State, 135 Ala. 71.

11. Ill. Act May 15, 1903—City of Mt. Ver-or for the correction of the court's minutes,[13] or for the purpose of entry of a judgment on verdict rendered at the preceding term.[14] Appellate courts will take judicial notice of the terms of the trial courts,[15] but not of adjournments;[16] but any court may take judicial notice of its own terms, adjournments, and vacations.[17]

In the absence of statute, a court has no power to call a special term thereof,[18] and a term beginning on the day to which the regular term had been adjourned is not a special term.[19] An additional session may be held by calling on another judge of the same court.[20]

Except in a few instances usually statutory, the functions of a court can be exercised only when it is in session.[21]

§ 4. Conduct and regulation of business.[22]—Courts have power to make reasonable rules governing the procedure before them,[23] and if not in violation of law and made of record are binding,[24] on both court and suitors.[25] In federal courts, the rules of procedure adopted by state courts must be pleaded and proved.[26] The existence of rules must be proved by the record and nonexistence by the clerk's testimony.[27] A court may, to prevent disturbance of the court's business, prevent traffic on a street running by the room dedicated to court purposes.[28]

COVENANTS FOR TITLE.

§ 1. Persons and estates benefitted or bound.—Covenants running with the land cannot be held separately from the title.[29] A covenant against incumbrances does not run with the land.[30] Only those who could have vouched in an action real can sue on a covenant.[31]

non v. Evans & H. Fire Brick Co. (Ill.) 68 N. E. 208.

12. Walker v. Moser (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 230. If not ordered to be heard in vacation —Wood v. Wiley Mfg. Co. (Ga.) 43 S. E. 983.

13. Baum v. Corsicana Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 863.

14. Walker v. Moser (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 230; Jones v. Miller (Neb.) 92 N. W. 201.

15. Lanckton v. United States, 18 App. D. C. 348; Hadley v. Bernero, 97 Mo. App. 314; Emery v. League (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 603.

16, 17. Hadley v. Bernero, 97 Mo. App. 314.

18. Under Laws 1891, p. 142, c. 83 the circuit court of Shawnee county has power—Durand v. Higgins (Kan.) 72 Pac. 567.

19. First Nat. Bank v. Abe Block & Co. (Miss.) 33 So. 849.

20. Without regard to the disability of the requesting judge—Bigcraft v. People, 30 Colo. 298, 70 Pac. 417.

21. A motion to set aside a verdict in a criminal case cannot be entertained in a city court during vacation—Chapman v. State, 116 Ga. 596. It is within the civil district court's power to make its terms continuous for the trial of particular actions—Succession of Hoyle, 109 La. 623. After adjournment for the day the court in which the prosecution is pending may take a bail bond —State v. Eyermann, 172 Mo. 294. Expropriation proceedings cannot be entertained in vacation by the district court—State v. St. Paul, 109 La. 8. A decree dismissing a bill can only be entered in term time though the motion to dismiss may be heard out of term —Cain v. City of Wyoming, 104 Ill. App. 538. Certiorari may be issued at chambers in the first department of the supreme court—People v. Stillings, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 143.

22. See Records for judge's minutes.

23. Hopper v. Mather, 104 Ill. App. 309. A rule limiting the number of requests to charge each party is entitled to present to 12 is unreasonable—Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Sandusky, 198 Ill. 400. Special term supreme court rule 14 requiring notice of sale under execution to contain diagram of the property is valid—Francis v. Watkins, 171 N. Y. 682. A rule that matter not denied by pleading shall stand as admitted is valid—Easton Power Co. v. Sterlingworth Ry. Supply Co., 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 538.

24. Hopper v. Mather, 104 Ill. App. 309; State v. St. Paul, 109 La. 8.

25. District of Columbia v. Roth, 18 App. D. C. 547; Klinesmith v. Van Bramer, 104 Ill. App. 384; Talty v. District of Columbia, 20 App. D. C. 489.

26. Randall v. New England Order of Protection, 118 Fed. 782.

27. Affidavit of counsel of non-existence of rule is not evidence of that fact—Hughes v. Humphreys, 102 Ill. App. 194.

28. Ex parte City of Birmingham, 134 Ala. 609, 59 L. R. A. 572.

29. Dalton v. Taliaferro, 101 Ill. App. 592.

30. Sears v. Broady (Neb.) 92 N. W. 214; Water's Estate v. Bagley (Neb.) 92 N. W. 637.

31. Smith v. Ingram, 130 N. C. 100. Subsequent grantees without warranty may sue on a warranty—Ravenal v. Ingram, 131 N. C. 549. The holder of a contract for deed cannot sue on a warranty to his vendor—Ravenal v. Ingram, 131 N. C. 549.

§ 2. Performance or breach. Seisin and right to convey.—The covenantor may be disseised by a tax deed.[32]

Against incumbrances.—An easement of light is an "incumbrance."[33] Whether an incumbrance exists is to be determined according to the lex rei sitae.[34] An unconfirmed assessment for local improvements is not.[35]

Warranty and quiet enjoyment.—There is no right of action until eviction,[36] or the acquisition of paramount title to avoid it.[37] Actual eviction without judicial action is sufficient,[38] and judicial without actual eviction is not sufficient.[39]

§ 3. Enforcement of covenants.—The declaration must allege the covenant,[40] if of warranty, and eviction,[41] and if of special warranty that the evictor claimed under the covenantor.[42]

Reconveyance in suit on covenant of seisin need not be offered.[43]

Peculiar value of property from which plaintiff was evicted may be shown.[44] The measure of damage for breach of covenant of seisin is the consideration with interest;[45] for breach of the covenant against incumbrances, it is the difference in the value of the premises;[46] for breach of the covenant of warranty, it is the purchase price in case of eviction,[47] the amount paid to extinguish the paramount title,[48] or the damage to the premises where the warranty is broken by the existence of an easement.[49]

CREDITORS' SUIT.[50]

§ 1. Nature and grounds of remedy and property which may be reached.—The purpose of a creditor's bill is to reach assets which are either not subject to levy or have been fraudulently conveyed.[51] A judgment at law for the debt is prerequisite,[52] as is the insolvency of defendant.[53] The property to be subjected must be

32. Koepke v. Winterfield (Wis.) 92 N. W. 437.

33. Denman v. Mentz, 63 N. J. Eq. 613. Facts held not to create an easement which would be a breach of the covenant—Farley v. Howard, 172 N. Y. 628.

34. Dalton v. Taliaferro, 101 Ill. App. 592. And see Smith v. Ingram, 132 N. C. 959.

35. Real Estate Corp. v. Harper, 174 N. Y. 123.

36. Boulden v. Wood, 96 Md. 332; Merrill v. Suing (Neb.) 92 N. W. 618.

37. Leet v. Gratz, 92 Mo. App. 422.

38. Covenantee quit possession after sale under paramount mortgage—Harr v. Shaffer, 52 W. Va. 207.

39. Ravenal v. Ingram, 131 N. C. 549; Pharr v. Gall, 108 La. 307. Even an adverse judgment in ejectment is not an eviction—Lundgren v. Kerkow (Neb.) 95 N. W. 501. But it has been held that an injunction preventing beneficial use is a constructive eviction—Ensign v. Colt, 75 Conn. 111.

40. Gano v. Green, 116 Ga. 22.

41. Sears v. Broady (Neb.) 92 N. W. 214.

42. Revenal v. Ingram, 131 N. C. 549.

43. Koepke v. Winterfield (Wis.) 92 N. W. 437.

44. Louisville Public Warehouse Co. v. James, 24 Ky. L. R. 1266, 70 S. W. 1046.

45. Rules for computation when covenant is broken as to part of land stated—Conklin v. Hancock, 67 Ohio St. 455. Where the tracts are severable the measure of damages is the consideration paid for that as to which the covenant is broken—Lloyd v. Sandusky (Ill.) 68 N. E. 154.

46. Herb v. Metropolitan Hospital & Dispensary, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 145. Where the incumbrance is an outstanding lease, the measure of damages is the rental value of the premises for its term—J. Wragg & Sons Co. v. Mead (Iowa) 94 N. W. 856.

47. Leet v. Gratz, 92 Mo. App. 422; West Coast Mfg. & Inv. Co. v. West Coast Imp. Co. (Wash.) 72 Pac. 455.

48. Leet v. Gratz, 92 Mo. App. 422. Expenses in defending title cannot be recovered unless covenantor was notified to defend—Wiggins v. Pender, 132 N. C. 628.

49. Louisville Public Warehouse Co. v. James, 24 Ky. L. R. 1266, 70 S. W. 1046.

50. For statutory proceedings in aid of execution see "Execution." For bills by creditors merely to set aside fraudulent conveyances, see "Fraudulent Conveyances."

51. State Bank v. Belk (Neb.) 94 N. W. 617. The bill does not lie in the absence of statute to reach known assets subject to levy and the remedy provided by Code 1886, § 3540 is by way of a discovery only and does not authorize a bill to subject known assets—Henderson v. Hall, 134 Ala. 455. One purpose of the remedy is to prevent multiplicity of suits and accordingly the existence of a legal remedy by garnishment is no bar—Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co. (Neb.) 92 N. W. 210.

52. Ready v. Smith, 170 Mo. 163. An award of arbitrators has been deemed a substitute—Sanborn v. Maxwell, 18 App. D. C. 245. Where the judgment is reversed on appeal the creditors' suit must fail—Kudrna v. Ainsworth (Neb.) 91 N. W. 711. A trustee in bankruptcy may sue without reduction of creditors' claims to judgment—Hood v. Blair beyond the reach of execution,[54] and must not be speculative in its character,[55] or in custodia legis.[56]

§ 2. Procedure.—Holdings as to limitations are found in the note.[57]

Jurisdiction of the court rendering complainant's judgment need not be alleged.[58]

Return of nulla bona is prima facie evidence that legal remedy is exhausted,[59] and statutes sometimes prescribe what shall be a prima facie case on the entire bill.[60]

A receiver may be appointed.[61]

The bill should be dismissed as to parties not shown to be liable.[62] A personal judgment against the debtor's grantees is unauthorized.[63]

Complainant is not entitled to a preference in the assets discovered.[64]

CRIMINAL LAW.

This article is intended to embrace only the general substantive law of crimes. Matters of general criminal procedure are treated in an article, "Arrest and Binding Over," covering the procedure to the time of indictment, and one on "Indictment and Prosecution" embracing the procedure from indictment to final judgment. Matters of law and procedure peculiar to particular crimes are treated under titles expressive of the names of such crimes where they have well recognized names or, where they are violations of mere statutory regulations, under titles dealing with the subject-matter involved.

§ 1. Elements of crime. Sources of the criminal law.—In most of the states, the common law of crimes is now abolished.[65] The statute creating an offense must have been in effect before the criminal act in question or it will be ex post facto.[66]

State Bank (Neb.) 91 N. W. 701. The indebtedness of a defendant to the judgment debtor cannot be litigated as he has a right to a jury trial thereon—Hudson v. Wood, 119 Fed. 764.

53. Oppenheimer v. Collins, 115 Wis. 283. Trust property may be subjected by creditors of the beneficiary though he was not insolvent when the trust was created—Burke v. Tewksbury (Neb.) 92 N. W. 726. Where there has been an assignment for the benefit of creditors, creditors can sue only when the assignee fails to do so—Cornell v. Sulter, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 384.

54. Henderson v. Hall, 134 Ala. 455. But see Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co. (Neb.) 92 N. W. 210 where it is held that a remedy by garnishment will not bar the suit.

55. Contingent remainder cannot be—Howbert v. Cawthorn (Va.) 42 S. E. 683. A widow's interest in the rents and profits of dower lands unassigned may be reached—Muir v. Hodges, 116 Fed. 912. The interest of the beneficiary in a trust may be—Kilham v. Western Bank & Safe Deposit Co. (Colo.) 70 Pac. 409; Burke v. Tewksbury (Neb.) 92 N. W. 726.

56. Property in hands of executor—Williams v. Smith (Wis.) 93 N. W. 464.

57. For general doctrine of laches see forthcoming article on "Equity." Limitations do not begin to run until the recovery of judgment against defendant—Montgomery Iron Works v. Capital City Ins. Co. (Ala.) 34 So. 210. Effect to suspend running of limitations on claims embraced in suit—Gunnell's Adm'rs v. Dixon's Adm'r (Va.) 43 S. E. 340; Woods v. Douglass, 52 W. Va. 517. Two years' delay held fatal—Ready v. Smith, 170 Mo. 163.

58. Kilham v. Western Bank & Safe Deposit Co. (Colo.) 70 Pac. 409.

59. Evidence held not to overcome prima facie case so made—Oppenheimer v. Collins, 115 Wis. 283. There must be evidence of the judgment and execution—Hagek v. Pracheil (Neb.) 95 N. W. 35.

60. Comp. Laws, § 10203 makes proof of judgment, execution and return thereof, and a conveyance by judgment debtor a prima facie case, and this statute is held due process of law—Crane v. Waldron (Mich.) 94 N. W. 593.

61. The fact that complainant appeals because part of the relief demanded is denied will not prevent the appointment of a receiver to protect that which is granted—Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co. (Neb.) 94 N. W. 962.

62. As to purchasers in good faith, but not as to parties shown to have received property who fail to answer—Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co. (Neb.) 92 N. W. 210.

63. Oppenheimer v. Collins, 115 Wis. 283.

64. Moore v. Parker Drug Co., 135 Ala. 287.

65. But the common law may be resorted to for the definition of a crime forbidden by name—State v. De Wolfe (Neb.) 93 N. W. 746. The common law as to capacity to commit crime obtains in the absence of statute—

Criminal intent.—Guilty intent is essential only when made so by the statute.[67] Attempts.—Some act, other than mere preparation, is essential to an attempt.[68] Felonies and misdemeanors.—Attempt to obtain money under false pretenses is a felony.[69] Malicious mischief is a misdemeanor,[70] as is petit larceny.[71]

§ 2. Defenses.[72]—One may, in general, defend his person or property with all needful force.[73] Mistake of fact is a defense only where the facts as believed would make the act wholly lawful.[74] Personal convictions against policy of the law are no defense,[75] nor is command of a superior.[76] Consent of party aggrieved is, with few exceptions, a defense only to crimes involving taking of property.[77] Testimony against co-defendant gives no immunity.[78] Pendency of an injunction to restrain enforcement of the statute is no defense.[79]

§ 3. Capacity to commit crime.—The admissibility and sufficiency of evidence of insanity is treated elsewhere.[80] Ability to distinguish between right and wrong as to the act in question is the test,[81] and "irresistible impulse" is not recognized,[82] but the insanity need not be permanent.[83] Voluntary intoxication is no defense,[84] though delirium tremens or insanity induced by alcoholism is,[85] and intoxication

Davis v. State (Fla.) 32 So. 822. Statute held to abolish common law offense of obstructing highway—Eaton v. People, 30 Colo. 345, 70 Pac. 426.

66. See Constitutional Law.

67. State v. Keller (Idaho) 70 Pac. 1051. Criminal intent is essential to arson—State v. Jones (Del.) 53 Atl. 858. Escape—State v. Daly, 41 Or. 515, 70 Pac. 706. Larceny—Long v. State (Fla.) 32 So. 870; People v. Hoagland, 138 Cal. 338, 71 Pac. 359; State v. Kavanaugh (Del.) 53 Atl. 335; State v. Palmer (Del.) 53 Atl. 359; State v. Riggs (Idaho) 70 Pac. 947; People v. Walburn (Mich.) 92 N. W. 494. Receiving stolen goods—Goldsberry v. State (Neb.) 92 N. W. 906. And to forgery—State v. Bjornaas (Minn.) 92 N. W. 980. But belief in right to make alterations must be based on reasonable grounds—Towles v. United States, 19 App. D. C. 471. And a belief that the person whose name was forged would ratify the act is immaterial—People v. Weaver, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 567. But not to embezzlement—People v. Jackson, 138 Cal. 462, 71 Pac. 566. Nor to negligent permitting of escape by jailor—Lynch v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 2180, 73 S. W. 745. Abandonment of intent after breaking no defense to burglary—Ragland v. State (Ark.) 70 S. W. 1039; Walker v. State (Fla.) 32 So. 954. Intent to properly criticise public officer as defense to prosecution for libel—Commonwealth v. Scouton, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 503. Intent may be inferred from circumstances—State v. Jones (Del.) 53 Atl. 858. The motive is immaterial—State v. Crabtree, 170 Mo. 642. Malice is essential to arson—Boone v. State (Miss.) 33 So. 172.

68. Groves v. State, 116 Ga. 516. Discharging a pistol into a room where a person was believed to be is an attempt to kill though he was not in the room—State v. Mitchell, 170 Mo. 633. Going to a building with intent to break and enter is an attempt to commit burglary—People v. Sullivan, 173 N. Y. 122.

69. A penalty not to exceed five years in the penitentiary is provided by statute for the completed offense and by Rev. St. § 2360 the penalty for an attempt is not to exceed one-half of that for the completed offense—State v. Scroggs, 170 Mo. 153.

70. State v. McLain, 92 Mo. App. 456.

71. People v. Stein, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 357.

72. Effect of general amnesty law—State v. Eby, 170 Mo. 497.

73. See "Assault and Battery"; "Homicide." Preventing entry without search warrant not obstruction of justice—Neifeld v. State, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 246. Driving trespassing cattle from premises—Alexander v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 70 S. W. 425.

74. Belief that a child was over the age of consent no defense to prosecution for carnal knowledge—Smith v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 401. Request of abducted female no defense—Griffin v. State (Tenn.) 70 S. W. 61. Misinformation as to title excuses trespass—Kimmons v. State (Tex. Cr App.) 71 S. W. 283. Belief in right to alter instrument or sign another's name must be based on reasonable grounds—Towles v. United States, 19 App. D. C. 471; People v. Weaver, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 567.

75. Individual belief against vaccination no justification for failure to obey health regulation—Commonwealth v. Pear (Mass.) 66 N. E. 719.

76. Robbery—Thomas v. State, 134 Ala. 126.

77. Consent of owner is a defense to larceny—Lowe v. State (Fla.) 32 So. 956; Tyler v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 70 S. W. 750. But see State v. Meldrum, 41 Or. 380, 70 Pac. 526. Purchase of the property after the larceny is not—Landreth v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 70 S. W. 758.

78. Martin v. State, 136 Ala. 32.

79. State v. Keller (Idaho) 70 Pac. 1051.

80. See Indictment and Prosecution.

81. State v. Kavanaugh (Del.) 53 Atl. 335; Davis v. State (Fla.) 32 So. 822; Lee v. State, 116 Ga. 563.

82. Davis v. State (Fla.) 32 So. 822; McCarty v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 1427, 71 S. W. 656. Kleptomania—Lowe v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 70 S. W. 206.

83. People v. Ford, 138 Cal. 140, 70 Pac. 1075.

84. Fielding v. State, 135 Ala. 56; Lanckton v. United States, 18 App. D. C. 348; State v. Ford (S. D.) 92 N. W. 18; Wright v. Commonwealth, 24 Ky. L. R. 1838, 72 S. W. 340.

85. State v. Kavanaugh (Del.) 53 Atl. 335.

incapacitating one from forming a specific intent prevents a conviction if an offense to which that intent is essential.[86]

§ 4. Parties in crimes.—All the parties to a misdemeanor are principals.[87] Presence at the commission of a crime is essential to constitute one a principal.[88] One present aiding and abetting is a principal.[89] An accessory after the fact must have acted with knowledge of the crime.[90] There may be an accessory before the fact to manslaughter.[91] The common-law distinctions as to principals and accessories are abolished in many states.[92]

§ 5. Former adjudication and second jeopardy.—There is no jeopardy where the indictment is dismissed without a trial,[93] or where the trial is abortive,[94] or where the court had no jurisdiction.[95] A finding on a plea in bar which was subsequently set aside,[96] or a conviction of an included offense, reversed on appeal, does not preclude a retrial.[97] The offenses must have been so far identical that a conviction of one might have been had on an indictment for the other.[98]

§ 6. Punishment of crime.—Validity of various statutes relating to punishment is considered in the note.[99]

Extent of imprisonment.—Punishment imposed must not exceed the statutory limit.[1] If execution of sentence is legally suspended, the term is computed from

86. State v. Kavanaugh (Del.) 53 Atl. 335; State v. Davis, 52 W. Va. 224. But see Commonwealth v. Dudash, 204 Pa. 124; State v. Pasnau (Iowa) 92 N. W. 682.

87. State v. McLain, 92 Mo. App. 456.

88. Mitchell v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 70 S. W. 208; McCulloh v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 71 S. W. 278. But one who instigated the offense and was near the scene of the crime may be convicted as principal—Martin v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 70 S. W. 973.

89. Jahnke v. State (Neb.) 94 N. W. 158; Greene v. State (Ark.) 70 S. W. 1038. One present and abetting is a principal though he did not assist—State v. Palmer (Del.) 53 Atl. 359. One who stands outside and receives the goods from his confederate who broke and entered a house to steal them is guilty of burglary—State v. Boysen, 30 Wash. 338, 70 Pac. 740. One who assisted in a crime need not have previously instigated it—Bynum v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 844.

90. Whorley v. State (Fla.) 33 So. 849.

91. Mathis v. State (Fla.) 34 So. 287.

92. Jahnke v. State (Neb.) 94 N. W. 158. One who procured and advised the commission of a crime is guilty as principal where the distinction between principals and accessories is abolished—Pearce v. Territory (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 425.

93. Before trial—State v. Taylor, 171 Mo. 465; State v. Lewis (Wash.) 71 Pac. 778. After impannelling jury but before evidence is introduced—State v. Holton, 88 Minn. 171. Two informations for the same offense may be filed—State v. Vinso, 171 Mo. 576.

94. Jury discharged for illness of a juror—People v. Smith, 172 N. Y. 210. Disagreement—Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71. Discharge on holiday for failure to agree—State v. Lewis (Wash.) 72 Pac. 121.

95. Wrong venue—State v. Bacon, 170 Mo. 161.

96. State v. Ellsworth, 131 N. C. 773.

97. People v. McFarlane, 138 Cal. 481, 71 Pac. 568, 72 Pac. 48; People v. Wheeler, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 396; State v. Balsley, 159 Ind. 395.

98. Commonwealth v. Campbell, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 98. The following have been held identical: Bigamous marriage with "Gussie S" and "Bessie S"—Gully v. State, 116 Ga. 527. Affray and assault with intent to kill—Jackson v. State, 136 Ala. 96. Failure to reconstruct parts of a public road and failure to reconstruct the whole road—Commonwealth v. Allegheny Valley Ry. Co., 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 188. Arson of building within curtilage and of same building without mention of curtilage—State v. Switzer, 65 S. C. 187. Abandoning wife and failure to provide for her—State v. Miller, 90 Mo. App. 131. The following have been held not identical: Burglary and receiving stolen goods—Pat v. State, 116 Ga. 92. Using vulgar language in presence of female and using abusive language—McIntosh v. State, 116 Ga. 543. Sales of different uninspected packages of beer—State v. Broeder, 90 Mo. App. 169. Gaming at different times on the same day—Miller v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 856.

99. Indeterminate sentence act not bad for uncertainty nor does it encroach on executive function—People v. Warden of Sing Sing, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 113. Indeterminate sentence law is due process of law—Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71; Shular v. State (Ind.) 66 N. E. 746. A fine based on amount of embezzlement in addition to imprisonment is not double punishment—Everson v. State (Neb.) 92 N. W. 137. The fine for the benefit of the victim of an embezzlement is not within Const. Art. 8 § 5, providing that fines shall become part of the school fund—Everson v. State (Neb.) 92 N. W. 137. Fines:. The legislature may provide for the disposition of money realized from fines—Lloyd v. Dollisin, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 571. The act authorizing workhouse sentences is not repealed by Act June 26, 1895, providing for work about premises by county jail convicts—Commonwealth v. Barton, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 447.

1. Stark v. State (Miss.) 33 So. 175. Where a completed offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than a specified number of years, with no limit as to the maximum, and an attempt is punishable by one-half such penalty one guilty of an at date of incarceration.[2] Imprisonment until fine and costs are paid is not justified on conviction of felony.[3] Particular punishments held proper are found in the note.[4]

Place of imprisonment.—Under Act Congress, June 16, 1880, one convicted in a territory may by contract of the authorities be imprisoned in the penitentiary of another state or territory.[5] In the note are cases as to place of imprisonment of females and infants.[6]

Second offenses.—One who pleads guilty to the first offense cannot attack the information therefor.[7]

§ 7. Rights in property the subject of crime.—One who in good faith received stolen money in payment of a debt cannot be compelled to repay it.[8]

CURTESY.[9]

A husband has curtesy only in lands of which the wife was seized during her life.[10] Initiate curtesy rights are not devested by statutory abolition.[11] A tenant by the curtesy has no right to dispose of emblements.[12] Inchoate curtesy in lands acquired during coverture is not subject to execution.[13] Curtesy vests on the death of the wife.[14]

CUSTOMS AND USAGES.

§ 1. General requisites.—The words "custom" and "usage" are not synonymous.[15] Usage must be uniform and reasonable,[16] general,[17] and consonant with the law.[18] As to duration, there is a distinction between custom and usage.[19]

§ 2. Application to contracts and other dealings.—Usage becomes a part of contracts on the theory that it is known to the parties and enters into their intentions,[20] and knowledge of the usage is accordingly essential.[21] Usage cannot contempt may be sentenced for a definite number of years though one-half of the possible life imprisonment cannot be calculated—People v. Burns, 138 Cal. 159, 69 Pac. 16, 70 Pac. 1087. The court has no power at a subsequent term of court to reduce the sentence—State v. Dalton (Tenn.) 72 S. W. 456.

2. In re Morse, 117 Fed. 763. If it is delayed by wrongful act of a ministerial officer the computation is from date of sentence—In re Jennings, 118 Fed. 479.

3. Smith v. State, 24 Ohio Circ. R. 140. Discharge on affidavit in forma pauperis—Ex parte Rodriquez (Tex. Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 1050.

4. Death penalty held proper in homicide case—Johnson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 71 S. W. 25. Ten years imprisonment for larceny held not excessive—State v. Williams (Iowa) 92 N. W. 652; State v. Connor (Iowa) 92 N. W. 654.

5. In re Terrill (Kan.) 71 Pac. 589.

6. A woman cannot be committed to the state reformatory for loitering on the streets—People v. Davis, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 448. St. 1895, p. 122 did not give the superior judge all the powers theretofore possessed by a magistrate to commit infants to the school of industry—In re Peterson (Cal.) 71 Pac. 690. An infant convicted of crime must be committed to a reformatory institution and not to any institution willing to receive him—People v. New York Catholic Protectory, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 660.

7. Latney v. United States, 18 App. D. C. 265.

8. Rankin v. Chase Nat. Bank, 188 U. S. 557.

9. Husband's dower under statutes abolishing curtesy is treated in "Dower."

10. Not in a remainder vesting after the wife's death—Appeal of Ward, 75 Conn. 598.

11. Dillon v. Dillon, 24 Ky. L. R. 781, 69 S. W. 1099. But see Hallyburton v. Slagle, 132 N. C. 947, in which the Constitution of 1868 was held to apply to a marriage before its ratification.

12. Lease giving right to extract oil held void—Barnsdall v. Boley, 119 Fed. 191.

13. Rev. St. § 4339 so provides—Ball v. Woolfolk (Mo.) 75 S. W. 410.

14. McNeeley v. South Penn. Oil Co., 52 W. Va. 616.

15, 16. "Custom" relates to places, and "usage" to vocations—Currie v. Syndicate Des Cultivators Des Oignons a' Fleur, 104 Ill. App. 165.

17. Currie v. Syndicate Des Cultivators Des Oignons a' Fleur, 104 Ill. App. 165; Johnston v. Parrott, 92 Mo. App. 199.

18. McCurdy v. Alaska & C. Commercial Co., 102 Ill. App. 120; De Sola v. Pomares, 119 Fed. 373.

19. Custom is established by immemorial practice; usage need only be well known and generally observed in the business to which it relates—Currie v. Syndicate Des Cultivators Des Oignons a' Fleur, 104 Ill. App. 165. It is not necessary that a usage should have been in existence any particular length of time—Rastetter v. Reynolds (Ind.) 66 N. E. 612.

20. Currie v. Syndicate Des Cultivators Des Oignons a' Fleur, 104 Ill. App. 165; McCurdy v. Alaska & C. Commercial Co., 102 Ill. App. 120. Usage to pay assignee of labor travene the contract,[22] but may explain it.[23] Usage may also be considered in determining the question of negligence.[24]

§ 3. Pleading and proof.—Usage, as an affirmative defense, must be specially pleaded.[25] Judicial notice will be taken of some customs.[26] Testimony that a certain usage exists is not a mere opinion.[27] Existence of a usage is for the jury; its sufficiency and effect for the court.[28]

CUSTOMS LAW.

§ 1. Interpretation and operation of customs laws in general.—The act in force at the time of entry of importations governs,[29] and if the importation is in bond, it is subject to duties existing at the time of the deposit, though the country of export subsequently became United States territory.[30] In determining the question of classification, the customs laws must be strictly construed,[31] and if the statute is open to construction which would place the goods as well on the free list, the course most favorable to the importer must be adopted.[32]

§ 2. Dutiable articles and classification of the same.—The particular importations and the cases in which they are discussed for purposes of classification only are collected in the footnotes.[33]

checks held to create implied contract—Bryan v. Brown, 3 Pen. (Del.) 504. Usage as to number of ounces in pound held binding—Baer v. Glaser, 90 Mo. App. 289. Evidence as to what constituted a "season" of employment held competent—Johnston-Woodbury Hat Co. v. Lightbody (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 957. The usage of the port is to be considered in determining what is reasonable dispatch—Donnell v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 10.

21. Currie v. Syndicate Des Cultivators Des Oignons a' Fleur, 104 Ill. App. 165; Consumers' Ice Co. v. Jennings (Va.) 42 S. E. 879; Bixby v. Bruce (Neb.) 95 N. W. 34. One is not presumed to have knowledge of the usages of a business in which he is not engaged—Great Western Elevator Co. v. White (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 406. Circumstances held to show knowledge of usage—Rastetter v. Reynolds (Ind.) 66 N. E. 612; Heyworth v. Miller Grain Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 498. Evidence insufficient to establish notoriety of usage of seaport—Bonanno v. Tweedie Trading Co., 117 Fed. 991. A party who contracted in ignorance of a usage cannot take advantage of it—Hendricks v. Middlebrooks Co. (Ga.) 44 S. E. 835.

22. Currie v. Syndicate Des Cultivators Des Oignons a' Fleur, 104 Ill. App. 165; Withers v. Moore (Cal.) 71 Pac. 697; McIntosh v. Pendleton, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 621.

23. Gehl v. Milwaukee Produce Co. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 26; Hayes v. Union Mercantile Co., 27 Mont. 264, 70 Pac. 975; Richardson v. Cornforth (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 325.

24. Employe assumes risk of customary methods—Olsen v. North Pac. Lumber Co. (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 77; Carr v. St. Clair Tunnel Co. (Mich.) 92 N. W. 110. Exceeding customary speed is not necessarily negligence—Martin v. Chicago. R. I. & P. R. Co. (Iowa) 91 N. W. 1034. Customary violation of rules of employment as abrogating them—Clark v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 284; Wright's Adm'r v. Southern Ry. Co. (Va.) 42 S. E. 913. Duty of railroad company to take precautions at place not crossing customarily traveled by public—Bullard v. Southern Ry. Co., 116 Ga. 644; Ringstaff v. Lancaster & C. Ry. Co., 64 S. C. 546.

25. McCurdy v. Alaska & C. Commercial Co., 102 Ill. App. 120.

26. Of custom to irrigate from natural streams—Crawford Co. v. Hathaway (Neb.) 93 N. W. 781.

27. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Collins (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 560. A statement that two persons were married according to the Indian custom is a mere opinion—Henry v. Taylor (S. D.) 93 N. W. 641.

28. Currie v. Syndicate Des Cultivators Des Oignons a' Fleur, 104 Ill. App. 165.

29. Goods are not dutiable under Act 1897, but under Act 1894, where tendered for consumption entry before four o'clock July 24, 1897, and a warehouse entry made after refusal of the former and on July 26—United States v. Perkins, 119 Fed. 384. Ginger ale in bottles imported when tariff act 1894 was in effect, is not subject to duty for corking, wiring, labeling or capping as fixed by Act 1890—West v. United States, 119 Fed. 495.

30. As goods shipped from Porto Rico—Mosle v. Bidwell, 119 Fed. 480.

31. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. Thomas (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 538.

32. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. Thomas (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 538.

33. Books: Books printed in foreign language—F. H. Petry & Co. v. United States, 121 Fed. 207. Scientific books—Macmillan Co. v. United States, 116 Fed. 1018. Books consigned to a social club, not entitled to free entry—United States v. Vandiver, 122 Fed. 740.

Chemicals and medicines. Subacitate of copper—United States v. Petry, 116 Fed. 929. Sheep dip—Wyman v. United States, 118 Fed. 202. Commercial carbonate of baryta—Gabriel v. United States, 121 Fed. 208. Albumen—Merchants' Despatch Transp. Co. v. United States, 121 Fed. 443. Whiting (Act 1894, par. 46)—United States v. Tiffany, 117 Fed. 367. Salol—Schering v. United States, 119 Fed. 472. Hyoscin hydrobromate—

§ 3. Administration of customs laws; liquidation and reliquidation of duties, remedies and procedure; liability of importer or owner.[34] It is within the discretion of the secretary of the treasury to employ inspectors for less than three dollars per day.[35]

Duties on goods in bond may be liquidated at any time after entry or withdrawal for consumption.[36] Drawback on goods imported and entering into articles manufactured in this country are allowed only on exportation to a foreign destination.[37] In the exportation of metals or ores imported under bond for smelting or refining purposes, there must be a deduction for wastage from the amount imported in calculating the product of the refined metal required to be exported.[38]

In appraising the goods, the general rule is to reduce standard foreign coins to the value of the pure metal and not to take the exchange value,[39] and the general

Schering v. United States, 119 Fed. 472. Chloral hydrate—United States v. Schering, 119 Fed. 473. Precipitated chalk—I. W. Lyon & Son v. United States, 121 Fed. 204.

Textiles and manufactures thereof. Bands of cotton cloth woven in widths 1 to 2½ inches and imported in pieces—Walter H. Graef & Co. v. United States, 120 Fed. 1015. Trimmings cut out of cotton velvet cloth in different designs and colors—Horstmann v. United States, 121 Fed. 147. Garnitures and hussar sets in designs of silk cord and braid to be used on dresses sold by the piece—Garrison, Wright & Co. v. United States, 121 Fed. 149. Silk goods four to twelve inches wide used in trimming women's hats—Robinson v. United States, 121 Fed. 204. Narrow cotton tape used for covering seams of underwear and waists—A. Steinhardt & Bro. v. United States, 121 Fed. 442. Cotton corsets trimmed around the upper border with cotton lace edging—Wanamaker v. United States (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 16. Braids composed of india rubber and cotton—Calhoun v. United States, 122 Fed. 894. All silk mourning crepes of 4-4 widths in lengths not marked for cutting—Robinson v. United States, 122 Fed. 970. Linoleum in colors—Hunter v. United States, 121 Fed. 207.

Agricultural products and provisions. Grass piquets consisting of stalks of oats or wheat and grasses dyed to imitate their natural color, mixed with leaves, natural and artificial, bound together to be used for millinery purposes—Herman & Guinzeberg v. United States, 121 Fed. 201. Canary seed—United States v. Nordlinger, 119 Fed. 478. Sago flour—Littlejohn v. United States, 119 Fed. 483. Tobacco unsuitable for either wrapper or filler purposes—Dominguez Bros. v. United States, 122 Fed. 556. Bleached wheat stems or wheat heads—Bayersdorfer & Co. v. United States, 122 Fed. 968. Leghorn citron—United States v. Nordlinger (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 690. Currants are dutiable in the condition imported—United States v. Reid (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 242. Decayed fruit—Lawder v. Stone, 187 U. S. 281. The duty on fruits in spirits is to be computed on all the excess alcohol whether absorbed or supernatant—Rheinstrom v. United States, 118 Fed. 303.

Minerals and manufactures thereof. Ferrochrome—Dana v. United States, 116 Fed. 933. Tungsten ore—O. G. Hempstead & Son v. Thomas (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 538. Crude hematite ore—Francklyn v. United States, 119 Fed. 470. Thin steel strips from one to six inches wide and in lengths of one hundred feet or more—Boker v. United States, 116 Fed. 1015. Boiler plate trimmings of various dimensions to be manufactured into tacks, trunk irons, etc.—United States v. Milne, 117 Fed. 352. Old brass cannons—Downing v. United States (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 445. Surgical scissors—O. G. Hempstead & Son v. United States, 122 Fed. 752. Electric carbon sticks—R. F. Downing & Co. v. United States, 120 Fed. 1014. Asphaltum mastic—Saacke v. United States, 122 Fed. 895; Gabriel v. United States, 122 Fed. 896. Fire brick—Wing v. United States, 119 Fed. 479.

Glassware. Gauge glass—Rogers v. United States (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 546. Museum or preparation jars and reagent bottles—O. G. Hempstead & Son v. United States, 122 Fed. 752.

Precious stones, jewelry, ornaments, etc. Articles as paper cutters, etc., made wholly or chiefly of agate or onyx—Hahn v. United States, 121 Fed. 152. Pearl imitations in glass or paste—Lorsch v. United States, 119 Fed. 476. Shells cleansed from animal or vegetable matter—Schoenemann v. United States (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 584. Decorated and ornamented statuettes made from plaster of paris—T. Bing & Co.'s Successors v. United States, 121 Fed. 194. Horsehair braids carrying spangles—Veit Son & Co. v. United States, 121 Fed. 205.

Spirits, wines and other beverages. Chinese spirituous beverages—Kwong Chin Chong v. United States, 119 Fed. 383. Chartreuse—Nicholas v. United States, 122 Fed. 892.

Packages and coverings. Glass bottles—United States v. Austin (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 729; Kwong Chin Chong v. United States, 119 Fed. 383. Boxes containing tobacco—Laverge v. United States, 119 Fed. 481.

34. Complaint in an action to recover duties held sufficient to show defendant chargeable with the duties—Abner Doble Co. v. United States (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 152.

35. The statute allowing certain inspectors not exceeding $3 per day does not apply to persons guarding the goods at night to prevent their removal, not having inspectors' powers—Johnston v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 309.

36. Act 1874, § 21, limiting time for reliquidation to one year, etc., does not apply to bonded goods—Abner Doble Co. v. United States (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 152.

37. The shipment of the goods by a foreign vessel to be consumed in transitu is not an exportation—Swan & Finch Co. v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 101.

38. In re Guggenheim Smelting Co., 121 Fed. 153.

39. United States v. Beebe (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 762.

internal revenue tax of the foreign state may be added to the invoice but not local taxes.[40]

Where a part of an entry, though not specified in the original protest, was in fact the subject of consideration on reliquidation by the collector, the time for protest will begin to run from such reliquidation.[41] If good grounds are set forth in the protest against the collector's classification, it will be sustained though the wrong paragraph of the statute in support is cited or if the paragraph is not cited at all.[42] The collector may reconsider his classification after the goods have passed into consumption.[43]

The board of general appraisers has jurisdiction to review a decision of the collector on reliquidation ordered by the secretary of the treasury.[44] Only so much of the importation can be examined by the board as the statute directs.[45] The burden of showing that particular goods should be classified under particular paragraphs is on the government.[46]

In the absence of evidence, the court on appeal will sustain the classification of the board of general appraisers.[47]

If goods not ordered were consigned and the consignee does not exercise or perform any act of ownership, the entry for consumption being made by one without authority from the consignee, he cannot be charged with the duties.[48]

§ 4. Violations of customs laws and consequences thereof.—The importer is liable for the additional duty on account of undervaluation though no actual loss by reason thereof occurred to the government,[49] which is recoverable though the collector of the port did not levy such duty on the importation.[50]

Goods fraudulently imported are subject to forfeiture though the importer was a fraudulent purchaser of the same and the seller entitled to rescind the sale.[51]

DAMAGES.

§ 1. Kinds of damages and their characteristics.—Special damages are such as do not ordinarily or generally result from a given cause. They are extraordinary

40. In France the general internal revenue being remitted on exportation. The special local taxes as "droit de ville" and "octroi" are to be excluded—Rheinstrom v. United States, 118 Fed. 303.

41. In re Brown, Durrell & Co., 121 Fed. 605.

42. Knowles v. United States, 122 Fed. 971. Act 1890, c. 407, § 14 (26 Stat. 137). Protest held sufficient though it claimed under a paragraph of an act different from the one applied where both acts contained the same paragraph—Shaw v. United States (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 443. Protest held sufficient which claimed a right of free entry though the paragraph of the statute under which the goods were in fact entitled to free entry was not cited in the protest—Bayersdorfer & Co. v. United States, 122 Fed. 968.

43. Knowles v. United States, 122 Fed. 971.

44. United States v. Beebe (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 762. The appraiser is presumed to have acted fairly in exercising his discretion as to the production of packages for examination—Renvy v. United States, 121 Fed. 441.

45. U. S. Rev. St. § 2939—Renvy v. United States, 121 Fed. 441.

46. O. G. Hempstead & Son v. Thomas (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 538.

47. Knowles v. United States, 122 Fed. 971; E. H. Bailey & Co. v. United States, 122 Fed. 751.

48. United States v. O'Neill Bros., 122 Fed. 547.

49. Act 1897, § 32—United States v. Nuckolls (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 1005.

50. United States v. Nuckolls (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 1005.

51. 581 Diamonds v. United States (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 556.

in character in the sense that they follow as the natural result of the intervention of some condition or circumstance out of the ordinary, and therefore not generally to be expected.[1] There can be no recovery of such damages in the absence of special averment.[2]

Nominal damages are a trifling sum allowed where an infraction of a right is shown but no resultant damage is proved.[3] The rule does not apply to a defendant who seeks, under plea of recoupment, to reduce the claim of plaintiff, arising under a contract, by nominal damages, in consequence of some breach of the same contract by the plaintiff.[4] A verdict for nominal damages is improper where actual damage is shown with certainty as to amount.[5] Where plaintiff is entitled to at least nominal damages a nonsuit is improperly granted.[6]

Liquidated damages are those whose amount has been determined by anticipatory agreement between the parties.[7] They are enforceable without regard to the actual damages suffered where the actual damages cannot be measured with approximate certainty.[8] Where the damages are of easy ascertainment and the amount agreed upon is disproportionate to the actual damages, such sum will be regarded as a penalty to secure the performance of the contract and actual damages only are recoverable.[9] The use of the term "liquidated damages" or "penalty" in the agreement is not conclusive on the question,[10] and the case is the same where the contract contains a provision making time of its essence.[11] The question is one largely of intent of the parties to be deduced from the circumstances.[12] Amounts agreed

1. Kircher v. Incorporated Town of Larchwood (Iowa) 95 N. W. 184.

2. Rules relating to necessity of averment of special damages, see post, § 8.

3. Raymond v. Yarrington (Tex.) 73 S. W. 800; Yoder v. Reynolds (Mont.) 72 Pac. 417; Wilcox v. Morten (Mich.) 92 N. W. 777; Armstrong v. Rhoades (Del. Super.) 53 Atl. 435; Armstrong v. Little (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 742; Gruell v. Clark (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 955; Williamson County v. Farson, Leach & Co., 199 Ill. 71. Nominal damages only are recoverable for infringement of a patent, where the owners sold the article without marking it "patented"—B. B. Hill Mfg. Co. v. Stewart, 116 Fed. 927. More than nominal damages are recoverable against a sheriff for oppressive acts in the service of a civil process—Foley v. Martin (Cal.) 71 Pac. 165. Nominal damages at least are recoverable for an unlawful levy on property for the debt of another—State ex rel. Lilly v. Carter, 92 Mo. App. 6.

4. Foote & Davies Co. v. Malony, 115 Ga. 985.

5. Paxson v. Dean (Ind. App.) 67 N. E. 112.

6. Bloom v. Grocery Co., 116 Ga. 784.

7. Cyc. Law Dict.

8. Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Railway Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 609; Eastern Ry. Co. v. Car Co., Id.; St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Stone Co., 90 Mo. App. 171; Drumheller v. Surety Co., 30 Wash. 530, 71 Pac. 25; Leavitt v. Bolton, 102 Ill. App. 582; American Copper, Brass & Iron Works v. Galland-Burke Brewing & Malting Co., 30 Wash. 178, 70 Pac. 236; Hipp v. City of Houston (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 39; Wood v. Paper Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 818; Menges v. Piano Co., 96 Mo. App. 283; Dobbs v. Turner (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 458; Champlain Const. Co. v. O'Brien, 117 Fed. 271, 788; O'Brien v. Construction Co., Ia., Womack v. Coleman (Minn.) 93 N. W. 663; Lamson v. City of Marshall (Mich.) 95 N. W. 78; Wood v. Paper Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 818. An amount fixed upon as the damages for breach of a water contract is in the nature of liquidated damages and not a penalty—Pogue v. Kaweah Power & Water Co. (Cal.) 72 Pac. 144. A stipulation in a contract for $10 a day as liquidated damages for delay in completing a structure is not unreasonable, and will be upheld where the building rents for $300 per month—Ramlose v. Dollman (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 917. Under Civ. Code of Mont. § 2243, which provides that every contract by which the amount of damage to be paid for breach is determined in advance, is to that extent void except as expressly provided by the following section, which declares that the parties to a contract may agree upon an amount presumed to be the amount of damage sustained by breach thereof, when from the nature of the acts it would be impracticable to fix the actual damage. It is the duty of defendant to plead and prove that a contract is one wherein it is impracticable or extremely difficult to fix the actual damages—Deuninck v. Irrigation Co. (Mont.) 72 Pac. 618.

9. Mansur & Tebbetts Implement Co. v. Tissier Arms & Hardware Co., 136 Ala. 597; Schreiber v. Cohen, 38 Misc. (N. Y.) 546; Foote & Davies Co. v. Malony (Ga.) 42 S. E. 413; Hicks v. Cycle Mfg. Co. (N. Y.) 68 N. E. 127; Zimmerman v. Conrad (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 139.

Where in an action on a contract, the stipulated damages are so disproportionate as to amount to a penalty, and there is no evidence of the actual damages sustained by the delay, all damages are properly disallowed—Zimmerman v. Conrad (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 139.

10. Use of word "penalty"—Lamson v. City of Marshall (Mich.) 95 N. W. 78. Deposit of $1,000 designated as "liquidated damages" for breach of lease providing for monthly rent at $45—Caesar v. Rubinson, 174 N. Y. 492.

11. Sherburne v. Hirst, 121 Fed. 938.

12. Hicks v. Cycle Mfg. Co. (N. Y.) 68 N. E. 127.

upon as the damages for breach of a contract not to engage in a similar business within a specified territory are generally regarded as liquidated damages.[13]

Exemplary damages.—Damages variously termed "exemplary," "punitive" and "vindictive" are recoverable in addition to actual damages where the act causing the injury is maliciously or willfully done.[14] Their recovery is confined to cases of private tort and even then damages must be only compensatory as a general rule.[15] They are limited to the aggravation of the injury and are not given for purposes of punishment,[16] nor as a penalty for a public wrong.[17] They are not recoverable in the absence of proof of actual damages, and must bear a reasonable proportion to the actual damages suffered.[18] Damages for mental pain and suffering are actual and not punitive damages.[19] Exemplary damages are not recoverable against a principal,[20] or master[21] for acts of their agents or servants unless there has been a ratification of the misconduct.

Where willfulness or malice is shown exemplary damages may be recovered for false imprisonment,[22] malicious prosecution,[23] libel,[24] slander,[25] aggravated trespass,[26] ejection of passengers,[27] and abuse of process by sheriffs.[28]

13. Newpaper—Robinson v. Centenary Fund & Preacher's Aid Soc. (N. J. L.) 54 Atl. 416. Barbershop—Liotta v. Abruzzo, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 429.

14. Harmon v. Western Union Tel. Co. (S. C.) 43 S. E. 959; Boyd v. Blue Ridge Ry. Co., 65 S. C. 326; Gildersleeve v. Overstolz, 90 Mo. App. 518; Petit v. Colmary (Del.) 55 Atl. 344; Oliver v. Columbia N. & L. R. Co., 65 S. C. 1.

Exemplary damages are recoverable for an assault committed under aggravating circumstances—Berkner v. Dannenberg, 116 Ga. 954. For gross negligence in failing to deliver a telegram announcing a death—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lawson (Kan.) 72 Pac. 283. Failure to deliver a telegram announcing the death of a husband, where the evidence shows a willful disregard of rights—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Watson (Miss.) 33 So. 76. Injuries to a passenger, where speed indicates a reckless disregard of rights of passengers—Griffin v. Southern Ry. Co., 65 S. C. 122. From an undertaker who receiving pay for a good coffin in which to bury a person infected with the small pox substitutes a plain pine box too small to contain the remains—Dunn v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 576. Where the party with full knowledge of an easement for a sewer across his lot destroys such sewer and refuses to permit its re-construction although it could be done without injury to property—Jones v. Sanders, 138 Cal. 405, 71 Pac. 506.

In the absence of proof of actual malice, oppression or bad motive, there can be no recovery of exemplary damages for wrongful refusal to honor a check—American Nat. Bank v. Morey, 24 Ky. L. R. 658, 69 S. W. 759. Nor for the protest of a note fully satisfied—State Mut. Life & Annunity Ass'n v. Baldwin, 116 Ga. 855.

15. Hurxthal v. St. Lawrence Boom & Lumber Co. (W. Va.) 44 S. E. 520. Exemplary damages are not recoverable against a steamship company for reselling a state room and refusing to return money paid therefor by a passenger; the rules printed on the back of the ticket allowing such resale where the room was not demanded at a certain time after boat had left the wharf—Clark v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 691.

16. McChesney v. Wilson (Mich.) 93 N. W. 627.

17. Oliver v. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co., 65 S. C. 1. For a wrong, the commission of which subjects the wrong-doer to both a criminal prosecution and a civil action, punitive damages cannot be assessed—Borkenstein v. Schrack (Ind. App.) 67 N. E. 547.

18. Flanary v. Wood (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 1072; Hoagland v. Forest Park Highlands Amusement Co., 170 Mo. 335; Cumberland Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. Hendon, 24 Ky. L. R. 1271, 71 S. W. 435. A recovery of $2,344 exemplary damages is excessive where the actual damages amount to $56—Flanary v. Wood (Tex.) 73 S. W. 1072.

19. Young v. Gormley (Iowa) 94 N. W. 922.

20. Rueping v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 843.

21. Kastner v. Long Island R. Co., 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 323, 12 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 77; Kentucky Distillery & Warehouse Co. v. Schreiber, 24 Ky. L. R. 2236, 73 S. W. 769. Not awarded where the act of wilfulness was not ratified and the servant had been prosecuted criminally therefor—Patterson v. New Orleans & C. R. Light & Power Co. (La.) 34 So. 782.

22. Harness v. Steele, 159 Ind. 286. Evidence of good faith of those making arrest is admissible on the question of exemplary damages in action for false imprisonment—Pincham v. Dick (Tex.) 70 S. W. 333.

23. Kelly v. Durham Traction Co. (N. C.) 43 S. E. 923.

24. Turner v. Hearst, 137 Cal. 232, 70 Pac. 18; Crane v. Bennett, 77 App. Div. (N. Y.) 102; Clark v. North American Co., 203 Pa. 346; St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. McArthur (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 76; Palmer v. Mahin (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 737; Minter v. Bradstreet Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 668; Brandt v. Morning Journal Ass'n, 81 App. Div. (N. Y.) 183; Donahoe v. Star Pub. Co. (Del.) 55 Atl. 337. Where some of the defendants publishing the libellous article were inspired by malice and the others were not, the verdict should be so framed as to include exemplary damages against the parties guilty of express malice and compensatory damages against the other parties—Mauk v. Brundage, 68 Ohio St. 89.

25. Schofield v. Baldwin, 102 Ill. App. 560.

A statute requiring a verdict to separately state the amount allowed as exemplary damages has no application to actions pending at the time of its enactment.[29] Under a constitutional provision allowing recovery of exemplary damages for willful homicide, a court may instruct the jury as a matter of law to award exemplary as well as actual damages, where the evidence justifies the direction of a verdict for plaintiff.[30]

Under the civil damage act of South Dakota, there may be no recovery of exemplary damages by a married woman.[31]

Statutory double and treble damages.—In Missouri, a judgment for twice the the value of monthly rents and profits of the premises is given in an unlawful detainer case for wrongful detainer after notice to vacate.[32] In California, the code of civil procedure allows a judgment for three times the amount of rent due at the time of the trial, if the unlawful detainer is after default in rent.[33] To authorize the recovery of treble damages for forcible ejectment from real property under the North Dakota laws, it is necessary that the entry should be forcible, but it is not necessary that force should be actually applied; it is enough if it is present and threatened and is justly to be feared.[34] Where an entry has been peaceably made, a tenant in New York cannot recover the treble damages allowed for a disseizin in a forcible manner under a code provision authorizing such recovery under these circumstances.[35] One buying from a trespasser, timber cut on land of another with guilty knowledge of trespass before completing the purchase, is liable to the owner for treble damages under the Missouri laws.[36]

A statute giving tenfold damages for the killing of sheep by dogs has been upheld.[37]

§ 2. General principles for ascertaining. Rule of strictness as between contracts and torts.—In an action for breach of contract the measure of damages is more strictly confined than in cases of tort, the primary and immediate results are alone to be looked to.[38]

Limitation to natural and proximate consequences.—There may be no recovery of remote and speculative damages or those depending on mere contingencies.[39] The recovery is limited to damages which are the natural and proximate

26. Avera v. Williams (Miss.) 33 So. 501; Hickey v. Welsh, 91 Mo. App. 4.

27. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Little (Kan.) 71 Pac. 820; Norman v. Southern Ry. Co., 65 S. C. 517. Compelling payment of fare under threat of ejection—Myers v. Southern R. Co., 64 S. C. 514. Not deprived of damages for humiliation and disgrace because no one was present beside the conductor and brakeman—Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Little (Kan.) 71 Pac. 820.

28. Foley v. Martin (Cal.) 71 Pac. 165. Against sheriff for breaking into a mill and carrying away the belt by which the machinery was propelled instead of securing a lien of record under the laws—Friedly v. Giddings, 119 Fed. 438.

29. Rev. St. 1899, § 595—Minter v. Bradstreet Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 668.

30. Morgan v. Barnhill (C. C. A.) 118 Fed. 24.

31. Garrigan v. Thompson (S. D.) 95 N. W. 294.

32. Hadley v. Bernero, 97 Mo. App. 314.

33. Nolan v. Hentig, 138 Cal. 281, 71 Pac. 440.

34. Rev. Code, N. D. § 5007—Wegner v. Lubenow (N. D.) 95 N. W. 442.

35. Code Civ. Proc. § 1669—Yeamans v. Nichols, 81 N. Y. Supp. 500.

36. Caris v. Nimmons, 92 Mo. App. 66.

37. Does not deny equal protection of laws—Rausch v. Barrere, 109 La. 563.

38. Hurxthal v. St. Lawrence Boom & Lumber Co. (W. Va.) 44 S. E. 520.

39. Puget Sound Iron & Steel Works v. Clemmons (Wash.) 72 Pac. 465. A nervous chill is too remote to be considered as an item of damages in an action for the dishonor of a check by a bank in which plaintiff has a deposit—American Nat. Bank v. Morey, 24 Ky. L. R. 658, 69 S. W. 759.

Mental distress: There may be no recovery for fright which results in an injury unless fright is the proximate cause of a legal wrong against plaintiff by defendant—Sanderson v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 88 Minn., 162, 60 L. R. A. 403. For a wrongful refusal to honor a check, there may be no recovery for humiliation or mortification of feelings—American Nat. Bank v. Morey, 24 Ky. L. R. 658, 69 S. W. 759. There can be no recovery for mental anguish caused by the dead body of a relative being thrown from a wagon by the negligent operation of a train, where it is not shown that any injury resulted to the body—Hockenhammer v. Lexington & E. Ry. Co., 24 Ky. L. R. 2383, 74 S. W. 222. Nor for mental distress caused by the seizure and sale of exempt property—Morris v. Willford (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 228. Nor consequence of a breach of a contract or are such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time they made the contract as the probable consequence of the breach of it.[40] Damages traceable in some measure to a tortious act but resulting chiefly from other and contingent circumstances, not the legal or natural consequences of the act, are too remote to be the basis of recovery against the wrong doer.[41] The question whether a breach of warranty is the proximate cause of the damages claimed is a matter relating to the proof and not to the pleadings, so as to authorize striking items of that character from the answer.[42]

Speculative and prospective damages.—There may be no recovery of speculative or conjectural,[43] or uncertain prospective damages.[44]

Loss of profits.—It is generally held that probable future profits are not recoverable as damages either for breach of contract or for tort. Their recovery is refused not because there may be no profits but because of difficulty if not impossibility, in estimating them with any sort of certainty.[45] Where there is nothing to show that special circumstances existed which would affect the subject-matter of the contract, so that gains would be lost as a result of the breach, such loss will be disregarded and the damages will be such only as may fairly be supposed to have been in contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was entered into.[46] for shame and degradation where the only basis for such a recovery is a defense urged in good faith to the action—Loomis v. Hollister, 75 Conn. 275. Annoyance and disturbance of mind caused by an invasion of an exclusive privilege at a fair is too remote to warrant a recovery as an element of damages—Mason v. Davis, 24 Ky. L. R. 1312, 71 S. W. 434.

In Louisiana there may be a recovery for disappointment and humiliation suffered by a bride on account of defects in wedding garments provided for her wedding, and in this recovery may be included damages for mortification at being deprived from attending receptions in her honor after marriage by reason of her not having suitable dresses to wear at these functions—Lewis v. Holmes, 109 La. 1030.

Mental distress as an element of damages for errors and delays in transmission of telegrams, see post, § 4. As an element of damages for personal injuries, see post, § 5.

40. J. Wragg & Sons Co. v. Mead (Iowa) 94 N. W. 856; Leek Mill. Co. v. Langford (Miss.) 33 So. 492; Colvin v. McCormick Cotton Oil Co., 66 S. C. 61. Recovery for an existing disease is not lost by reason of the length of time which has elapsed between its discovery and the infliction of original injuries, nor upon the character of the disease if an unbroken connection is shown—Wood v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co., 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 604.

41. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Dorsey, 116 Ga. 719. Evidence as to damages fifteen months after the negligent act complained of is too remote and conjectural to warrant a recovery therefor—Simonson v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 88 Minn. 89.

42. Mallory Commission Co. v. Elwood (Iowa) 95 N. W. 176.

43. Expert testimony that injury sustained in a street car accident might be the cause of headache suffered by plaintiff after the accident is too speculative to be adopted in estimating damages—Huba v. Schenectady Ry. Co., 85 App. Div. (N. Y.) 199. There can be no recovery of damages under a stipulation for a renewal of a lease where tenants may never avail themselves of the stipulation—Jackson v. Doll, 109 La. 230.

44. Where damages resulting ex contractu are continuing, but as to the future too uncertain to support an action for their recovery, and suit is brought for such as have been actually sustained at the day of its filing, evidence as to the damages subsequently sustained whilst the suit is pending and before judgment, should be excluded —Jamison v. Cullom (La.) 34 So. 775.

45. Raywood Rice, Canal & Mill. Co. v. Langford (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 926. Loss of profits to a street railway company in the transportation of passengers to and from a summer resort are too speculative and uncertain to furnish the basis for damages for failure of an engine to furnish sufficient power to operate the line—People's Sav. Bank v. Rapid Transit Co. (Iowa) 92 N. W. 691. Damages for loss of profits in a business may be recovered only where they are susceptible of definite ascertainment and direct results of the injury—Paul E. Wolff Shirt Co. v. Frankenthal, 96 Mo. App. 307. Where tenant of a leased building partially destroyed, moved out, an allowance of profits on the lease for the unexpired term would be remote and speculative—Jackson v. Doll, 109 La. 230. The profits that a purchaser of logs could have made had the logs been delivered, is too remote to be considered in an action for damages for breach of the contract—Wilson v. Russler, 91 Mo. App. 275. Loss of profits on breach of contract of sale of goods and machinery, see post, § 4.

46. South Gardiner Lumber Co. v. Bradstreet, 97 Me. 165; Paguin v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co., 90 Mo. App. 118. In an action for breach of a contract to furnish a retail dealer with fertilizer, there may be a recovery of loss of profits on sales which the purchaser would have made if defendant had not broken his contract, and this particularly where he had spent much time and labor in advertising the brands and the refusal to fill the orders came at the time when a demand for fertilizer was the greatest—Currie Fertilizer Co. v. Krish, 24 Ky. L. R. 2471, 74 S. W. 268.

Loss of profits are recoverable for damages sustained by reason of an obstruction of adjoining landowner preventing the construction of a factory for the manufacture of patented articles.[47] Where the damages allowed for loss of a vessel sunk in a collision are based on a total loss including interest on the value of the vessel and the pending freight, there may be no recovery for loss of future earnings under an unexpired charter.[48]

Difficulty of proof of amount as bar.—Recovery of damages will not be defeated because of difficulty of proving their exact amount, it will be sufficient to approximate damages by the best evidence obtainable.[49]

Avoidable consequences.—A party suing for breach of contract is required to do what he reasonably can and embrace all reasonable opportunity to lessen the injury and reduce the damages caused by the breach.[50] Whether any act of plaintiff would have lessened the amount of damages for breach of a contract is a question for the jury.[51]

Where obstruction of highways or ditches could be removed at a slight expense, that will be the measure of the recovery.[52] There may be no recovery for aggravation of an injury by the negligent conduct of the injured person.[53] He is not prevented from recovering because he considered the injury unconsequential and did not seek the services of a physician until home remedies had failed.[54] Though it is the duty of one injured to render the loss as light as possible, yet he is not required to anticipate a loss.[55] A recovery of damages for personal injury will not be defeated by the fact that his susceptibility to a delirium resulted in a measure from his own acts.[56] Where plaintiff knew of the dangers of his employment, he may not recover exemplary damages for an injury received which he could have guarded against.[57]

Mitigation and aggravation of damages.—Abusive and insulting language and misconduct of one suffering at the hands of a carrier's servants may be considered in mitigation of damages.[58] The damages for loss of animals are properly reduced

47. Barnes v. Berendes (Cal.) 72 Pac. 406.

48. The Fontana (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 853.

49. Lincoln v. Orthwein (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 880; Banta v. Banta, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 138.

50. Hurxthal v. St. Lawrence Boom & Lumber Co. (W. Va.) 44 S. E. 520; Colvin v. McCormick Cotton Oil Co., 66 S. C. 61. On the failure of an advertiser to comply with his contract, it is the duty of the publisher to use reasonable efforts to fill the space contracted for in order to reduce the damages—Peck v. Metal Roofing & Corrugating Co., 96 Mo. App. 212. On the failure of the seller of goods to deliver according to contract, it is the duty of the purchaser to purchase the goods as cheaply as possible and thus render the damages as light as possible, and in an action for such damages his failure to do so will be considered—Creve Coeur Lake Ice Co. v. Tamm. 90 Mo. App. 189. A chartered vessel loading at a river port during a low stage of water cannot recover dead freight from the charterer because of inability to cross a bar with the maximum cargo, which the charterer was willing to furnish, where the vessel did not wait a reasonable time for the river to rise—Tweedie Trading Co. v. New York & B. Dyewood Co., 118 Fed. 492.

51. Peck v. Kansas City Metal Roofing, etc., Co., 96 Mo. App. 212.

52. Highway—Mellick v. Pennsylvania R., 203 Pa. 457. Ditch—Raleigh v. Clark, 24 Ky. L. R. 1554, 71 S. W. 857.

53. Campbell v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 137 Cal. 565. If the injured party fails to use ordinary care to treat and have treated his injury and by reason of such failure the same is aggravated or increased, he cannot recover damages for increased injury resulting from his failure to use ordinary care under all the circumstances to have the same treated—Texas Portland Cement Co. v. Poe (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 563; Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Hubbard (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 112. The law as to damages for the aggravation of existing injury is correctly stated by an instruction that plaintiff could not hold defendant liable for the effects due to the former condition of the injury and he was only entitled to damages on account of decreased earning power, as in accordance with his former condition the jury should consider just—Leslie v. Jackson & S. Traction Co. (Mich.) 96 N. W. 580. Violation of a physician's instructions by using an injured limb negligently thereby retarding or preventing recovery—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Denson (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 70.

54. Toledo v. Radbone, 23 Ohio Circ. R. 268.

55. Taylor v. Norfolk & C. R. Co., 131 N. C. 50.

56. Maguire v. Sheehan (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 819. 59 L. R. A. 496.

57. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hall, 24 Ky. L. R. 2487, 74 S. W. 280.

58. Assault by conductor—Houston & T.

by the amount realized from sales of hides and pelts.[59] There may not be a recovery of the entire value of a broken article of art where it is shown that it has some value after restoration.[60] One impaired in his earning capacity by an accident is required to labor to his capacity in order to mitigate the damages as much as possible,[61] and it may be shown that the use of artificial limbs will enable one to pursue ordinary occupations.[62] The jury may take into consideration the fact that defendant, guilty of a trespass, acted on the advice of capable counsel.[63] It may not be shown in mitigation of damages for the wrongful occupancy of land with a tramway that defendant hauled freight free of charge for plaintiff's tenants, as this does not show any benefits derived by the landowner.[64] Where plaintiff was prevented from completing work by fault of the owner, the defendant may show that the contractor had not done his work in accordance with the contract.[65]

In an action for illegal arrest it may be shown as a matter of aggravation that plaintiff was arrested in the presence of his family.[66]

§ 3. Recovery as affected by status of plaintiff or limited interest in property affected.—Under laws providing for the survival of actions for negligent injuries to persons, the administrator may recover the same damages his intestate would have recovered if living.[67]

The owner of a freehold may recover for an injury which permanently depreciates his property while a tenant, or one having only a possessory right may recover for an injury to the use and enjoyment of that right.[68] Under the laws of North Carolina providing for the assessment of the entire amount of damages suffered by a trespass, a tenant may sue for injury to his leasehold estate caused by the trespass without joining the landlord.[69] Where the acts complained of were commenced before a lease of the land, an action therefor can be maintained only by the landlord.[70] A landlord of property on leased ground may recover for loss of rents during the remainder of a lease for the destruction of the building.[71]

In an action by a child, the damages for lessened earning capacity are limited to the period to which the child would be entitled to his own earnings.[72] The measure of damages for the loss of a child's services is their pecuniary value during minority less care, support, and maintenance.[73] In Nebraska, a parent may recover for loss of the expected services of a child, not only during minority but afterwards, on evidence justifying the reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit therefrom.[74]

In an action for personal injuries plaintiff may show that she is a widow, as being a feme sole she may recover for her own services.[75] In an action for injuries to a married woman living apart from her husband, and supporting herself by her

C. R. Co. v. Batchler (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 981. Ejection of passenger—Bough v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 215.

59. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Lee (Kan.) 72 Pac. 266. A verdict for damages on the killing of sheep will not be considered excessive by reason of the failure of the jury to deduct the value of the pelts where there was no evidence before them on this question—Peeler v. McMillan, 91 Mo. App. 310.

60. Comerford v. Smith, 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 638.

61. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Flood (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 331.

62. Hamilton v. Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 104 Ill. App. 207.

63. United States v. Homestake Min. Co. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 481.

64. Leigh v. Garysburgh Mfg. Co., 132 N. C. 167.

65. Wilson v. Borden, 68 N. J. Law, 627.

66. Young v. Gormley (Iowa) 94 N. W. 922.

67. Kyes v. Valley Tel. Co. (Mich.) 93 N. W. 623.

68. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Hall (Ark.) 74 S. W. 293.

69. Dale v. Southern Ry. Co., 132 N. C. 705.

70. Sposato v. New York, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 304.

71. McPhillips v. Fitzgerald, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 15.

72. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Krayenbuhl (Neb.) 91 N. W. 880, 59 L. R. A. 920.

73. Schnable v. Providence Public Market, 24 R. I. 477; McGarr v. National & P. Worsted Mills, 24 R. I. 447, 60 L. R. A. 122. No recovery allowed for loss of child's society—Id.

74. Draper v. Tucker (Neb.) 95 N. W. 1026.

75. Bradley v. City of Spickardsville, 90 Mo. App. 416.

own labor, the jury may take into consideration her age and condition in life in assessing the damages.[76] Under the Married Women's act of Colorado, a married woman in an action for personal injuries cannot recover for her inability to perform household duties.[77]

§ 4. Measure and elements of damages for breach of contract. A. Miscellaneous contracts. Interest as an element.—There may be no recovery of interest for breach of a contract where the damages are uncertain and indefinite.[78] Where the recovery is for a breach of an obligation not arising from contract, the allowance of interest is a question for the jury under the laws of South Dakota.[79]

For breach of a contract for sale of a medical practice, the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price to be paid and the market value of the property at the time of the breach, not exceeding the amount demanded.[80] In an action by one person against another for a wrongful dissolution of partnership, the measure of damages is the value of the partnership to the plaintiff and not his share of the profits which defendant made thereafter on carrying on the business.[81] On breach of a contract to maintain a person for the remainder of his life in consideration of the conveyance of certain property, the measure of damages would be the cost of boarding and clothing the person during his life less what care he had already received from the defendant.[82]

Newspaper contracts.—For breach of a contract with a news association for furnishing news, the association may recover the difference between what it would have received after the breach up to the time of its insolvency, which occurred some months later, and what it would have cost the association to have performed the contract during that time.[83]

The measure of damages for breach of an advertising contract before the purchaser had done anything thereunder is the contract price less the sum the publisher might have obtained by the exercise of reasonable diligence for advertising in the space.[84] On rejection of an advertising scheme providing for the payment of a certain per cent based on an increase of advertising business shown by its use, there may be a recovery of the percentage on the amount of the increase of business shown by the surreptitious adoption of part of the scheme, though the seller was not the sole originator of the scheme or its forms.[85]

Insurance contracts.—An act allowing the recovery of a percentage of the loss as attorney's fees from an insurance company for failure to pay a loss within the time specified in its policy does not apply to accident insurance.[86] The measure of damages for breach of a contract to insure property against loss by fire is the value thereof up to the amount for which it was agreed that insurance should be procured.[87]

Contracts referring to negotiable instruments.—In an action for damages for 76. Brake v. Kansas City (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 191.

77. Mills' Ann. St. Colo. §§ 3009, 3012, 3020—Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Young (Colo.) 70 Pac. 688.

78. Dady v. Condit, 104 Ill. App. 507.

79. For possession on refusal of sheriff to issue deed on ground that period of redemption had expired (Comp. Laws S. D. § 4578)—Hollister v. Donahoe (S. D.) 92 N. W. 12.

80. Wallingford v. Aitkins, 24 Ky. L. R. 1995, 72 S. W. 794.

81. McCollum v. Carlucci (Pa.) 55 Atl. 979.

82. Poston v. Eno, 91 Mo. App. 304.

83. United Press v. Abell, 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 550.

84. Peck v. Kansas City Metal Roofing, etc., Co., 96 Mo. App. 212. The amount is a question for the jury under all the circumstances disclosed by the evidence—Id.

85. Taylor v. Times Newspaper Co. (Minn.) 93 N. W. 659.

86. Rev. St. 1895, art. 3071—Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Parker (Tex.) 72 S. W. 168, 580. Where the policy was payable in annual installments, the penalty prescribed and the attorney's fees should be computed only on installments due when suit was commenced—New York Life Ins. Co. v. English (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 440.

87. Everett v. O'Leary (Minn.) 95 N. W. 901. Loss under policy, see title Insurance.

refusal to repurchase a trust deed according to agreement, evidence of the value of the premises sold under foreclosure is inadmissible, as there is a presumption in the absence of fraud or irregularity, that the price obtained at the sale was all that they would bring,[88] nor will a deficiency judgment afford a just estimate of the damages suffered by reason of the refusal to repurchase.[89]

Oil contracts.—For breach of a contract to furnish oil on certain terms for a certain period, the plaintiff may recover all damages for the breach and not merely those accruing prior to the filing of his petition.[90] Where pending an appeal by defendant from a judgment for specific performance of an agreement to transfer oil property, the defendant removes material and produces oil therefrom, the damage on affirmance is based on the value of the material and oil on the day plaintiffs are put in possession of the property, though this value exceeds that at the time when the material and oil were taken.[91]

Contracts with railroad companies.—On breach of a contract to operate a railroad across land under which the railroad company had received a bonus, the measure of damages is the actual loss suffered by the landowner to be determined by ascertaining the value of the land to its owner with the railroad on it and in operation and the value of the same land with the railroad abandoned.[92] On the removal of a switch built under an agreement with the landowner that he should construct the grade and furnish the ties, the contract stipulating no time for the existence of a switch, the landowner may recover for the ties and his expenditures in making the grade.[93] Where the owner of a brickyard was deprived of its use by failure to build a tramway as agreed upon between the parties, the rental value of the works is competent to go to the jury as showing the damages sustained.[94]

(§ 4) B. Contracts for sale or purchase of land.—In an action by the vendee of realty for breach of a contract to convey, the measure of damages is not the purchase price paid with legal interest but the actual value of land at the time it should have been conveyed.[95] In Virginia, the measure of damages for a breach of contract of sale of realty by the vendor is the contract price and not the difference between the contract price and the market value of the property at the time of the breach.[96] For breach of a parol contract for the sale of land, the damages are limited to the purchase money paid and expenses incurred, and there can be no recovery for loss of profits.[97]

A vendor suing on a contract of sale of realty is not limited to the difference between the agreed price and the market value when the vendee agreed to take and pay for the realty, but he may recover on the basis of the agreed price.[98] The measure of damages in an action against an abstracter for failure to discover a defect is the difference between what the purchaser paid and the present worth of what he actually received,[99] and where plaintiff has not been ejected but has received

88, 89. Loeb v. Stern, 198 Ill. 371.

90. Standard Oil Co. v. Denton, 24 Ky. L. R. 906, 70 S. W. 282.

91. Southern Oil Co. v. Scales (Tex. Civ. App.) 69 S. W. 1033.

92. Eckington & S. H. Ry. Co. v. McDevitt, 18 App. D. C. 497.

93. Scholten v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 915.

94. Lipscomb v. South Bound R. Co., 65 S. C. 148.

95. Krepp v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 479. Where the conditions are such at the time when the deed is to be delivered that a higher price could be obtained in the market than that agreed upon, then the jury may take into consideration this increased value without regard to whether the conditions are permanent or temporary—Dady v. Condit, 104 Ill. App. 507. In an action for specific performance, the measure of damages, where performance cannot be enforced, is the amount paid by vendee with interest, expense in searching title, and the difference between the contract price and the market value of the property together with costs—Schorr v. Gewirz, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 186.

96. Stuart v. Pennis (Va.) 42 S. E. 667.

97. Gray v. Howell, 205 Pa. 211.

98. Gray v. Meek, 199 Ill. 136.

99. Kenthan v. St. Louis Trust Co. (Mo App.) 73 S. W. 334.

rents and profits of the property, he is not entitled to interest in addition to the damages.[1]

(§ 4) C. Breach of covenant as to title.—For breach of covenant of seizin, the measure of damages is the consideration with interest from the time of the conveyance.[2] Where the title has partially failed and the consideration was paid as a whole, then the measure of damages is the proportion in value that the land to which title failed bore to the whole land, or if the consideration was severable as to the various tracts, and title failed as to one of these tracts, then the measure of damages is the price paid for the particular tract with interest.[3] Where there is a partial failure of title, the value of the property at the time of the conveyance forms the basis.[4]

On a covenant against incumbrances where the breach alleged is an outstanding lease of the premises, the measure of damages is the rental value for the unexpired term.[5]

For breach of a covenant of warranty of title, the measure of damages is the consideration money lost to the buyer and not the value of the property less any unpaid consideration,[6] nor damages for loss of the bargain.[7] Where the title fails to a portion sold for a gross sum, the measure of damages is such a proportion of the consideration paid as the value of that part of the land to which the title has failed bears to the value of the whole land and interest on such proportion.[8]

(§ 4) D. Contracts to give lease and liabilities as between lessor and lessee.—Where a tenant is wrongfully evicted during the term for which he has paid rent, he can recover from the landlord the entire amount paid for the period.[9] Loss of profits to a business are recoverable where such loss can be proved with reasonable certainty to have resulted from the landlord's act.[10] A tenant unlawfully removed under judgment in forcible entry may recover the difference between the rental value of the premises and the rent reserved from the day of the eviction to the end of the term or the termination of the lease otherwise.[11] For failure of a landlord to deliver possession at the commencement of the term, lessee may recover the difference between rent agreed to be paid and the value of the term, together with such special damages as may be shown.[12] The special damages recoverable are limited to damages the direct and natural result of the breach of contract, as these damages are

1. Kenthan v. St. Louis Trust Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 334.

2. Conklin v. Hancock, 67 Ohio St. 455.

3. Lloyd v. Sandusky (Ill.) 68 N. E. 154. Where the parties have agreed on a fixed and uniform price per acre or per front foot or any other standard or quantity, the measure of damages is such price multiplied by the quantity of land as to which the convenant fails with interest—Conklin v. Hancock, 67 Ohio St. 455.

4. Lloyd v. Sandusky (Ill.) 68 N. E. 154.

5. J. Wragg & Sons Co. v. Mead (Iowa) 94 N. W. 856. The fact that the grantor knew that plaintiff intended to use the land for storage purposes will not make defendant liable for the amount expended by plaintiff during the continuance of the incumbrance in hauling stock to and from a more distant place of storage, as such damages are too remote to have been within the contemplation of the parties—Id.

6. West Coast Mfg. & Inv. Co. v. West Coast Imp. Co., 31 Wash. 610, 72 Pac. 455; Roberts v. McFaddin (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 105.

7. Roberts v. McFaddin (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 105.

8. West Coast Mfg. & Inv. Co. v. West Coast Imp. Co., 31 Wash. 610, 72 Pac. 455.

9. Mallette v. Hillyard (Ga.) 43 S. E. 779.

10. Murphy v. Century Bldg. Co., 90 Mo. App. 621. Where a landlord breaks into a tenant's place of business and tears down partitions and bars doors and puts the room in possession of private detectives for a few days, the plaintiff may prove the net income of his business before the wrongful dispossession to show what he lost by dispossession—Gildersleeve v. Overstolz, 90 Mo. App. 518.

11. Small v. Clark, 97 Me. 304.

12. Bernhard v. Curtis, 75 Conn. 476; Williamson v. Stevens, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 518. Will include expenses incurred in renting and fitting up another store if necessary to protect him from loss but not expenditures made toward the occupancy of the store after knowledge of the situation as to a tenant in possession of the leased premises, nor loss sustained by depreciation in value of goods which he had on hand before he had obtained the lease, but may be allowed loss sustained by reserving goods for use in the store—Bernhard v. Curtis, 75 Conn. 476. For breach of a lease of an exclusive privilege in a railway station caused by failure to eject a former tenant and designate place for work, loss of profits may not be recovered, the recovery being limited to the rent paid in advance and the costs of the action—Deluise v. Long Island R. Co., 174 N. Y. 516.

presumed to have been in contemplation of the landlord.[13] The measure of damages for the breach of a farm rental contract is the difference between the contract price and the market rental value of the land.[14] For breach of a crop-sharing rental contract, the measure of damages is the reasonable market value of the tenant's share of the crops he would be reasonably expected to have raised during the term, less his earnings for the period, or what he would have earned by the exercise of reasonable diligence, and such damages are not regarded as speculative.[15] Where a landlord lawfully distrains for rent justly due but in later proceedings acts irregularly or unlawfully, the tenant cannot maintain a suit for these irregular acts without a showing of special damage.[16] On breach of a contract to make repairs on leased premises, the party making the repairs may recover their value from the party in default.[17] A tenant is not deprived of his right of recovery for forcible entry by the fact that his lease has expired before the trial of the action making it impossible to grant a writ of restitution.[18]

(§ 4) E. Contracts for sale or purchase of goods and chattels.—The seller of goods for refusal of purchaser to accept same may recover the difference between the market value at the time of the breach and the contract price.[19] As to articles not manufactured but included in the contract, the measure is the difference between the cost of manufacture and the contract price.[20] The market value may be determined by a prompt resale at the best obtainable price.[21] There is a presumption in the absence of evidence that the value of bonds is that expressed on their face,[22] and where there is a breach of a contract to receive ores deliverable in monthly instalments throughout the year, insufficient deliveries to be made good by the last day of the year, it is the market value on the last day of the year that governs.[23]

The purchaser on a breach of a contract to sell and deliver may recover the market value of the article at the time and place of the breach.[24] Loss of profits may be considered,[25] unless they are so uncertain as to rest in conjecture.[26] Where

13. Bernhard v. Curtis, 75 Conn. 476.

14. Scottish-American Mortg. Co. v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 564.

15. Rogers v. McGuffey (Tex.) 74 S. W. 753; Rogers v. McGuffey (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 817.

16. Brown v. Howell, 68 N. J. Law, 292.

17. Barnhart v. Boyce, 102 Ill. App. 172; Thompson v. Clemens, 96 Md. 196, 60 L. R. A. 580. For failure of a tenant to make repairs in accordance with the contract, and by reason of this breach the landlord is compelled by the authorities to make the repairs, he may recover from the tenant the cost of repairs and the rental value of the building during the time occupied in making the repairs—Loughlin v. Carey, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 477.

18. Cutler v. Co-operative Brotherhood, 31 Wash. 680, 72 Pac. 464.

19. Gehl v. Produce Co. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 26; First Nat. Bank v. Ragsdale, 171 Mo. 168; Pratt v. S. Freeman & Son's Mfg. Co., 115 Wis. 648; Saveland v. Railroad Co. (Wis.) 95 N. W. 530; Kincaid v. Price (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 153; Hamilton v. Finnegan, 117 Iowa, 623; Gruell v. Clark (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 955. Where the seller of goods is ready to deliver them in accordance with the contract, the measure of damages on refusal of the purchaser to receive them is the difference between the contract price and the cost of manufacture and delivery—Puritan Coke Co. v. Clark, 204 Pa. 556. For breach of a contract to receive piles, the measure of damages is the difference between the actual cost to the contractor of delivering the piles and the contract price therefor—Reed v. Railroad Co. (Ky.) 75 S. W. 200.

20. Puritan Coke Co. v. Clark, 204 Pa 556.

21. Gehl v. Produce Co. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 26; American Hide & Leather Co. v. Chalkley & Co. (Va.) 44 S. E. 705.

22. Weigley v. Kneeland, 60 App. Div. (N. Y.) 614.

23. Duluth Furnace Co. v. Mining Co (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 138.

24. O'Gara v. Ellsworth, 85 App. Div. (N. Y.) 216.

25. E. B. Williams & Co. v. Bienvenue, 109 La. 1023. For breach of a contract to furnish goods purchased by a merchant to fulfill contracts made for their sale, there may be a recovery of the expected profit on the sale—Lapp v. Illinois Watch Co., 104 Ill. App. 255. For breach of a contract to deliver goods to a purchaser for resale, there may be a recovery of the profits lost through the seller's breach of the contract, where the purchaser was unable to obtain other like good in the open market—F. W. Kavanaugh Mfg. Co. v. Rosen (Mich.) 92 N. W. 788. For delay in the delivery of machinery the seller is responsible for the loss of the use or possibly for interest on the investment where there is no rental value, but not for loss of profits in the business in which such machinery is to be used—Creamery Pkg. Mfg. Co. v. Creamery Co. (Iowa) 95

the article is machinery, there may be recovered all damages within the contemplation of the parties at the time of entering into the contract.[27] Where property should have been delivered at any time within a certain period, the law in regulating the measure of damages contemplates a range of the entire market, and the average price as thus found running through the period of time, and not sudden or transient inflation of prices or depression of prices.[28] For breach of a contract to deliver during the month, the market price at the place of delivery on the last day of the month controls.[29]

For breach of a warranty on return of goods, the vendee may recover such damages as may reasonably be supposed to have been in contemplation of the parties when the contract was made.[30] This does not allow recovery of expense of making an examination of the articles bought.[31] In case of live stock bought with warranty of soundness, purchaser may recover reasonable compensation for attempts to cure diseases manifesting themselves in the stock.[32] Where the warranted article is worthless for any purpose, purchaser can recover the entire price paid.[33] For breach of a contract to furnish suitable machinery, which has been accepted and put in use in ignorance of its failure to comply with the contract, the buyer may recover the difference between its value, if it had complied with the contract, and its value in its defective condition.[34] For breach of a warranty of an engine to furnish motive power to a street railway line, there may be a recovery of losses due to passengers being compelled to leave the cars before reaching their destination, the excessive use of coal, injury to boilers and the generator, and extra labor.[35] For breach of a

N. W. 188. Mere delay in furnishing machinery which does not interrupt an established business will not allow the award of prospective profits by way of damages—Creamery Pkg. Mfg. Co. v. Benton County Creamery Co. (Iowa) 95 N. W. 188.

26. Lapp v. Illinois Watch Co., 104 Ill. App. 255. The general rule of damages for nondelivery of goods excludes the elements of profit and loss—South Gardiner Lumber Co. v. Bradstreet, 97 Me. 165.

27. Colvin v. Cotton Oil Co., 66 S. C. 61. For the breach of a contract in failing to deliver machine for a cotton mill, there may be recovered damages to the seed by the firm manufacturing, arising from expenses incurred in cooling it after heating, as these expenses are within the reasonable contemplation of the parties—Id. For breach of a contract to furnish an essential part of a disabled machine within a specified time, the measure of damages is the value of use of machine in the business for the time which intervenes between day for delivery fixed by contract and day of actual delivery, if the circumstances are known to both parties at the time of making the contract—Champion Ice Mfg. & Cold Storage Co. v. Iron Works Co., 68 Ohio St. 229. In an action for damages for delay in furnishing machinery for creamery, there may be no recovery for damages arising out of the fact that the patrons delivered their milk to others, as being too remote and speculative—Creamery Pkg. Mfg. Co. v. Creamery Co. (Iowa) 95 N. W. 188. Where the warranty of a logging engine is merely that defective parts will be replaced and the seller of the engine knew nothing of the extent of the buyer's operations, there can be no recovery of loss of profits caused by the breaking of defective parts of the machine, as they will not be deemed to have been within the contemplation of the parties at the time of entering into the contract—Puget Sound Iron & Steel Works v. Clemmons (Wash.) 72 Pac. 465.

28. O'Gara v. Ellsworth, 85 App. Div. (N. Y.) 216.

29. J. P. Gentry Co. v. Margolius & Co. (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 959.

30. Punteney-Mitchell Mfg. Co. v. T. G. Northwall Co. (Neb.) 91 N. W. 863. In an action for breach of warranty of powder for use in flash lamps sold on a warranty that it contained no explosive compound, damages for injuries received by the buyer from an explosion of powder are recoverable in an action for breach—Wood v. E. & H. T. Anthony & Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 111. In an action for the purchase price of goods, where breach of warranty is pleaded as to the quality of the goods and it is shown that the goods were bought for resale and the vendor knew that fact, and the vendee before discovering the defects sells them to customers who reject them because of defects, the reasonable expenses incurred in making such abortive sales and in returning the goods are proper elements of damages—Punteney-Mitchell Mfg. Co. v. T. G. Northwall Co. (Neb.) 91 N. W. 863.

31. Lifshitz v. McConnell, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 289.

32. Galbreath v. Carnes, 91 Mo. App. 512.

33. Small v. Bartlett, 96 Mo. App. 550; Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Troell (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 324.

34. Florence Oil & Refining Co. v. Farrar (C. C. A.) 119 Fed. 150. For breach of a warranty of a filtering plant, the purchaser may recover all the money paid for the plant and all losses otherwise suffered in consequence of failure to do the work as warranted—O. H. Jewell Filter Co. v. Kirk, 200 Ill. 382.

35. People's Sav. Bank v. Rapid Transit contract for the manufacture and delivery of a vessel to have a specified speed, the measure of damages is the difference between the market value of the vessel as she is and as she was warranted to be.[36] The measure of damages for selling unsound cattle feed which caused a lessening in the weight of the cattle and their deterioration in market value is the diminished market value at the time and place they are injured.[37] For sale of goods on which a partial payment had been made, the measure of damages to the persons making the payments is the value of the goods at the time they were sold.[38]

(§ 4) F. Liability of bailees, carriers, and telegraph companies.—Where no special damages are asked for breach of a contract of carriage, the recovery is limited to what it would cost the passenger to get from the point of departure to his destination in the most feasible and reasonable way, allowing nothing for humiliation or indignity.[39] For delays in transportation, a passenger may recover the reasonable value of the time lost.[40] For wrongful ejection of a passenger, there may be a recovery for loss of time, physical and mental suffering, and humiliation.[41] Where the ejection is rightfully made, no unnecessary force being used, damages are not recoverable.[42] There can be no recovery for mental suffering unaccompanied by physical injury for carrying a passenger beyond his destination.[43] In the absence of malice only actual damages can be recovered for refusal to stop a train at a flag station.[44] A steamship company, landing a party at a point short of the destination, is liable for expenses and loss of time occasioned thereby within reasonable limitations.[45] There may be no recovery for fright caused by collision where no physical or bodily injury resulted.[46]

Co. (Iowa) 92 N. W. 691; Fischer Foundry & Mach. Co. v. Same, Id.

36. Bull v. Bath Iron Works, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 380.

37. Houston Cotton Oil Co. v. Trammell (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 244.

38. Trotter v. Tousey (Mich.) 92 N. W. 544.

39. Rose v. King, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 308.

40. For detention by a railroad wreck, an attorney can recover from the carrier only the value of his time during the delay based on the average of what he had earned for at least a year preceding, where he had not notified the carrier of special circumstances making it necessary for him to arrive on scheduled time—Cooley v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 239. In an action for damages for delay in furnishing transportation, the employment of one of the party in a menial capacity by the person in charge thereof during the delay will not warrant the allowance for such services the wages the person was to have been paid for work in the line of his employment at point of destination—Johnson v. San Juan Fish & Packing Co. (Wash.) 71 Pac. 787. For a refusal to issue to a passenger an exchange ticket for mileage as required by the condition of the mileage book which entitled the holder to transportation in exchange tickets over certain lines the measure of damages is the time lost by the passenger and any expense incurred or loss thereby directly sustained—Schmidt v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 25 Ky. L. R. 11, 74 S. W. 674.

41. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Hill (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 963; Rawlings v. Wabash R. Co., 97 Mo. App. 515. Liable for injuries to the feelings though no physical injuries were inflicted—Mabry v. City Elec. Ry. Co., 116 Ga. 624, 59 L. R. A. 590. Increased pain to a lame hand caused by a wrongful ejection—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 65. For a wrongful expulsion a lawyer cannot recover for the loss of time where there is no proof as to the value of the time lost—Pennsylvania Co. v. Scofield (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 814. Under a law allowing the ejection of a passenger for failure to pay his fare, on the conductor's stopping the train, there may be recovery of at least nominal damages for ejection while the train is in motion—Holt v. Hannibal & St. J. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 74 S. W. 631.

42. England v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 24.

43. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Dalton, 65 Kan. 661, 70 Pac. 645. A female passenger carried beyond her destination and required to walk a long distance without an escort to the house of a friend, cannot recover for fright at hearing loud voices of negro men walking behind her, unless it is shown that the railroad company knew that the locality was one in which such occasion for fright was likely to occur—Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Dorsey, 116 Ga. 719. One put off a train 250 yards beyond his station without any injury and no malice or inhumanity on the carrier's part may not recover for sickness caused by his falling into a stream while returning to the station—Rawlings v. Wabash R. Co., 97 Mo. App. 511.

44. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. White (Miss.) 33 So. 970.

45. In an action against a steamship company for landing plaintiff and his employes at a point short of their destination, where they were compelled to remain for some time and to furnish an outfit and supplies to take them to their destination,

The owner of goods may recover for deterioration caused by the unreasonable delay of the carrier in delivering same,[47] and the value is not to be determined by the value of similar goods at nearby second-hand stores.[48] For the loss of a valuable package, recovery is limited to the liability fixed by the company on shipments, unless their true value is stated.[49] Stipulations fixing the value of the property in case of injury or loss are valid.[50] The limitation only applies to the carrier relation, and not to that as a bailee for hire.[51]

The measure of damages for a carrier's delay in the delivery of stock is the difference between their market value in the condition in which they were delivered and their market price if seasonably delivered, deducting therefrom any depreciation necessarily resulting from the transportation.[52] The measure of damages for injuries to stock is the difference between the market value of the stock in the condition in which they would have arrived but for the negligence and the market value in the condition in which they did arrive.[53] The value of stock may be proved by opinion, but whether or not there is a market for stock as injured is not provable by opinion evidence.[54] The measure of damages for cattle dying from injuries received in transit is the market value of the cattle at the point of destination,[55] less the amount received by the owner on a sale of carcasses.[56] A shipper may recover the amount of a feed bill where the cattle were not actually fed and he had to pay the bill to get possession.[57]

Compensatory damages are recoverable for damages caused by delays and errors in the transmission of telegrams where they may be determined with certainty and are not objectionable as being remote,[58] and the company is advised of the im-plaintiff may recover his own and the parties' living expenses at the point where they were landed and the cost of the supplies and outfit—Bullock v. White Star S. S. Co., 30 Wash. 448, 70 Pac. 1106.

46. Ohliger v. Toledo Traction Co., 23 Ohio Circ. R. 265.

47. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Josey (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 606.

48. Wells-Fargo Exp. Co. v. Williams (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 314.

49. Rowan v. Wells-Fargo & Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 31.

50. Nelson v. Great Northern Ry. Co. (Mont.) 72 Pac. 642; 101 Live Stock Co. v. Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 782; Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Glascock (Ga.) 43 S. E. 981.

51. Bermel v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 172 N. Y. 639.

52. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Botts (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 113; Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Storey (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 847. Interest may be included—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Smissen (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 42.

53. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Patton, 203 Ill. 376; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Young (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 68; Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Meeks (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 329.

54. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Meeks (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 329.

55, 56. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Butler (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 84.

57. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Botts (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 113.

58. The damages caused by failure to deliver a telegram to come and contract for building a house, are too uncertain—Harmon v. Western Union Tel. Co. (S. C.) 43 S. E. 959. Compensatory damages cannot be recovered of a telegraph company for failure to send or deliver a mere proposal to sell lumber, as they are contingent upon its acceptance—Beatty Lumber Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co. (W. Va.) 44 S. E. 309. In an action for failure to deliver a message correctly which caused a loss of a position to a student in a normal school, a failure of the student to receive benefit from his course in the school because of worry over loss of position, is too remote to be considered—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Partlow (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 584. For failure of a telegraph company to deliver a message which resulted in the failure of the addressee to sell property to a person who had agreed to purchase it at a certain price, the measure of damages is the difference between the amount which he would have received for the property and the amount which he did receive on disposing of it after due diligence to obtain the highest price which he could under the circumstances. In this case it was held that the evidence failed to show that the price received was the highest price that with reasonable diligence could have been obtained under the circumstances—Brooks v. Western Union Tel. Co. (Utah) 72 Pac. 499. In an action for failure to deliver a message announcing a death, there can be no recovery of the cost of exhuming and reburying the deceased, unless it is shown that the plaintiff incurred the expense—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Watson (Miss.) 33 So. 76. Damages are not recoverable in an action for failure to promptly deliver a telegram, where it is not shown that plaintiff suffered any physical injury—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Cross' Adm'r (Ky.) 74 S. W. 1098.

portance of the message.[59] For nondelivery of a telegram, there may be recovered, as actual damages, money paid for the transmission and delivery of the telegram.[60] Mental suffering is an element of recovery in some states for delay in transmission and delivery of telegrams announcing fatal illness or death of near relatives.[61] There is a sufficient disclosure of the importance of a telegram to warrant recovery for mental anguish for failure to deliver it, where it recites the death of a person.[62] Mental anguish at delay in the delivery of a telegram asking for information as to the health of a child is not recoverable.[63] Where a message is delivered to the telegraph company at a point for transmission to a point in another state, damages for mental anguish suffered by delay in the delivery may be recovered in the state from which the message was sent, though such damages are not recoverable in the state of the delivery of the message.[64] There may be no recovery for mental anguish caused by the failure to deliver a telegram to a clergyman requesting his attendance at a funeral.[65] Plaintiff may be asked as to the nature and duration of his grief on hearing of the death of his brother, and whether it was increased by his inability to attend the funeral.[66] The intentional failure of a messenger boy to deliver a telegram authorizes the awarding of punitive damages against the company.[67]

For disconnecting a telephone by mistake, the subscriber, in the absence of proof of pecuniary injury, can recover only the amount paid for the service for the time the telephone was disconnected on the basis of the monthly rental.[68]

Penalties for failure to transmit telegrams promptly are recoverable only by the sender of the dispatch and not by the addressee.[69]

For loss of cotton delivered to a cotton compress company, the value is that at

59. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Pearce (Miss.) 34 So. 152. In an action against a telegraph company for failure to deliver a telegram to a sheriff to postpone an execution sale of land belonging to plaintiff, the plaintiff may recover to the full extent of his actual interest in the property where the message disclosed his interest—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Wofford (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 943.

60. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lawson (Kan.) 72 Pac. 283.

61. Graham v. Western Union Tel. Co., 109 La. 1069; Marsh v. Western Union Tel. Co. (S. C.) 43 S. E. 953; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Seffel (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 616; Meadows v. Western Union Tel. Co. (N. C.) 43 S. E. 512; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Cavin (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 229. Grandparents—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Crocker, 135 Ala. 492. Recovery of uncle standing in relation of parent to deceased —Bright v. Western Union Tel. Co. (N. C.) 43 S. E. 481. Mental anguish and inability to attend the funeral of a niece is not an element of damage in an action by the uncle for damages against a telegraph company for delay in delivery of the message announcing her death—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Wilson (Tex.) 75 S. W. 482. The complaint sufficiently states a cause of action for damages for delay in the delivery of a telegram, where it recites delivery for transmission within a reasonable time so that had it been promptly delivered plaintiff could have attended his sister's funeral, who was dying at the time of the sending of the message, and plaintiff did not know of her condition until the evening of the second day thereafter, at which time his sister had been buried, and by reason of wilful negligence the plaintiff was subject to great pain and anguish in consequence of being deprived of the privilege of attending his sister's funeral—Hartzog v. Western Union Tel. Co. (Miss.) 34 So. 361. In an action for delay in the delivery of a telegram, there may be no recovery for plaintiff's inability to reach her daughter's bed-side and for mental anguish in not being able to accompany her home, where the message was sent by a friend, announcing the sickness of the daughter and requesting the mother to telephone, as these damages could not have been in contemplation of the parties as a probable result of a breach of duty of the telegraph company—Western Union Tel. Co. v. McFadden (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 352.

62. Bright v. Western Union Tel. Co. (N. C.) 43 S. E. 841.

63. Western Union Tel. Co. v. O'Callaghan (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 798.

64. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Waller (Tex.) 74 S. W. 751.

65. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Arnold (Tex.) 73 S. W. 1043.

66. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Simmons (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 822.

67. Butler v. Western Union Tel. Co. (S. C.) 44 S. E. 91.

68. Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Hendon, 24 Ky. L. R. 1271, 71 S. W. 435.

69. Thompson v. Western Union Tel. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 443.

the time of the discovery of the loss with interest and not its value at the time of suit.[70]

(§ 4) G. Contracts for services.—Where a contract for personal services is entire and breach of it is total, the measure of damages is what the plaintiff would have earned less what it would have cost him to perform services according to the terms of the contract.[71]

A contractor prevented from completing his work by the fault of the owner of the property may recover such a proportion of the entire price as the fair cost of the work done bears to the fair cost of the whole work, and in respect to work not done, the profits he would have realized by doing it.[72] On failure of a contractor to comply with his contract he may recover on a quantum meruit for the value of the services performed, less the damages occasioned by his breach of the contract.[73]

For breach of a contract of employment, the measure of damages is the salary for the contract time less what plaintiff earned or could have earned at other employment during the term.[74] What the servant earned or could have earned in the meantime is a matter of defense and should be pleaded in mitigation of damages,[75] and the employer has the burden of showing that other and more profitable employment than that in which plaintiff, in fact, engaged, in order to reduce the damages, had been offered and declined or might have been found.[76] Where the complaint in the action for breach of contract of employment averred inability to obtain employment, evidence as to earnings may be shown by defendant under a general denial.[77] The doctrine allowing deduction of earnings on breach of contract of employment has no application to earnings after the expiration of the contract time.[78]

One employed to perform services covering a number of years and prevented by his employer from working under the contract may recover his monthly salary as it accrues though he does no work whatever under the contract, where he is ready and willing to work and no work is offered.[79] On breach of a contract of permanent employment, where a part of the consideration was the rendition of services for a less rate than formerly received for the work, the plaintiff may recover the reasonable value of the services rendered up to the time of the breach of the contract and is not restricted to the lower rate.[80]

Where a person performs services under a void contract, or one that cannot for any reason be enforced, his recovery therefor should be measured by the value of the services performed.[81]

(§ 4) H. Promise of marriage.—For breach of a marriage promise, there may be recovered such a sum as will fairly compensate plaintiff for defendant's failure to

70. Hattiesburg Compress Co. v. Johnson (Miss.) 33 So. 654.

71. School Dist. v. McDonald (Neb.) 94 N. W. 829; Wood v. Wack (Ind. App.) 67 N. E. 562.

72. Wilson v. Borden, 68 N. J. Law, 627. In an action by a sub-contractor against a contractor for damages caused by preventing the performance of the contract to put in a heating apparatus, the damages may include the profits that would have accrued to the sub-contractor from a full performance of his contract, with interest from the time of the contractor's refusal not deducting therefrom the commissions paid by the subcontractor to the agent to obtain the contract—Peck-Hammond Co. v. Heifner, 136 Ala. 473.

73. McKnight v. Bertram Heating & Plumbing Co., 65 Kan. 859, 70 Pac. 345.

74, 75. Latimer v. New York Cotton Mills, 66 S. C. 135.

76. Griffin v. Brooklyn Ball Club, 174 N. Y. 535.

77. Latimer v. New York Cotton Mills, 66 S. C. 135.

78. Hughes v. School Dist. No. 37, 66 S. C. 259.

79. Stone v. Bancroft (Cal.) 72 Pac. 717.

80. Davidson v. Laughlin, 138 Cal. 320, 71 Pac. 345.

81. Banta v. Banta, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 138. In an action on a quantum meruit for services as a clerk where evidence has been received as to salary paid plaintiff's predecessor, it is proper to charge that the jury would not be bound by such salary, but could award what the services were fairly and reasonably worth—Meislahn v. Irving Nat. Bank, 172 N. Y. 631.

marry her and for any mortification of feelings suffered on account thereof.[82] The pecuniary status of defendant may be shown to establish the injury sustained by the breach,[83] and this intends the actual pecuniary circumstances and not general reputation for wealth.[84]

§ 5. Measure and elements of damages for torts. A. Miscellaneous torts. Injuries to animals.—The market value of an animal killed by a railroad train is that of the place and time of the accident.[85] That the animal was well broken may be shown as bearing on the extent of the loss.[86]

Alienation of affections.—In an action for the alienation of the affections of a husband, the financial condition of defendant may be shown.[87]

Obstruction of highways.—For obstruction of a right of way appurtenant to a farm, the measure of damages is the difference in the rental value with and without the way and this though the farm is not rented.[88]

False imprisonment.—Plaintiff may recover the expenses reasonably incurred in procuring his discharge, for his loss of time, for his physical and mental suffering, and for humiliation which the arrest and incarceration may have occasioned him.[89] Exemplary damages are not recoverable unless the arrest was accompanied with malice, gross negligence, or other circumstances of legal aggravation.[90] Where exemplary damages are claimed, defendant may, in mitigation of such damages, show resistance by plaintiff and any relative circumstances showing reasonable provocation for resorting to force in making the arrest.[91] Where an arrest is illegal only because the officer having the warrant is not present, but the arrest is made by his direction, damages may be recovered only to the time when the lawful officer takes the prisoner into his custody.[92] For assault and false imprisonment, there may be a recovery for physical and mental pain including humiliation.[93]

Malicious prosecution.—For malicious prosecution there may be a recovery for loss of time, attorney's fees paid to obtain acquittal or release, and injuries to feelings and reputation.[94] There may be no recovery for peril to plaintiff's life by his imprisonment in jail, as life is not necessarily imperiled by incarceration in a jail.[95]

Infringements of patents and trade marks and unfair competition.—For infringement of a patent, recovery is limited to damages clearly and strictly proved.[96] The profits recoverable for unfair competition are governed by the same rule as in 82. Grubbs v. Pence, 24 Ky. L. R. 2183, 73 S. W. 785.

83. Birum v. Johnson, 87 Minn. 362.

84. Johansen v. Modahl (Neb.) 94 N. W. 532.

85. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Main, 135 Ala. 451.

86. Southern Kansas Ry. Co. v. Cooper (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 328.

87. Love v. Love (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 255.

88. Hey v. Collman, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 584.

89. Petit v. Colmary (Del.) 55 Atl. 344. Loss of time is sufficiently pleaded by an allegation that the plaintiff was deprived of his liberty—Young v. Gormley (Iowa) 94 N. W. 922. In actions for false imprisonment against officer and one causing arrest, there may be a recovery for wounded pride, humiliation and mortification from a public arrest—Harness v. Steele, 159 Ind. 286.

90. Kelly v. Durham Traction Co., 132 N. C. 368.

91. Petit v. Colmary (Del.) 55 Atl. 344.

92. McCullough v. Greenfield (Mich.) 95 N. W. 532.

93. Golibart v. Sullivan, 30 Ind. App. 428.

94. Ruth v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1055. Injury to reputation—Lord v. Guyot, 30 Colo. 222, 70 Pac. 683. Mental suffering—Cohn v. Saidel, 71 N. H. 558. For malicious prosecution of an attachment suit, evidence is admissible to show damages sustained by reason of being unable to dispose of attached property—Lord v. Guyot, 30 Colo. 222, 70 Pac. 683.

95. Kansas & T. Coal Co. v. Galloway (Ark.) 74 S. W. 521.

96. Jennings v. Rogers Silver Plate Co., 118 Fed. 339. Where a patent is for a particular part of a machine it is not necessary to ascertain profits of the whole machine but it must be shown what portion of the profits is due to the particular invention secured by the patent in suit—Lattimore v. Hardsocg Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 121 Fed. 986. Profits from the manufacture, sale and leasing of patented machines, are too conjectural to form a basis for the recovery of damages where there were no averments that the machines were in use or that there was any demand for them or that their manufacture, sale or leasing was profitable or otherwise—Doane v. Preston (Mass.) 67 N. E. 867.

ases of infringement of trade marks and are not limited to those accruing from sales in which it is shown that the customer was actually deceived, but include all profits made on goods sold in a simulated package.[97] Under the Iowa label law, there can be no recovery of profits, unless it is shown that defendants acted in bad faith,[98] and clear proof of the damages or profits is required.[99]

Liability of corporate officers for conspiracy.—In an action for damages for conspiracy by the officers of a corporation to wreck the same, the measure of damages is the value of the property and franchise of the corporation as it existed before the overt acts complained of producing insolvency, less the amount which the property actually brought on foreclosure sale.[1]

(§ 5) B. Loss of, or injuries to, property.—For injury to a vehicle injured by collision, there may be a recovery of the expenses for repairs,[2] together with cost of removing the wreck and storage while arrangements for repairs were being made and the reasonable value of its use for such time.[3] For injuries to machinery, there may be a recovery of the difference in value before and after the injury or if it can be restored, the reasonable cash value of making repairs and the reasonable cash value of its use during the time of making the repairs.[4] The recovery for repairs is limited to necessary repairs and the reasonable amount therefor.[5] The measure of damages for injuries to stock caused by feeding impure meal furnished by defendant is the difference between the market value of the stock at the place where the injury occurred just before and just after they were made sick by eating the meal.[6]

For injuries to a yacht there may be recovered the amount paid for wages and provisions for the crew during the period of repairs, where the presence of the crew was necessary to care for the vessel,[7] but not demurrage unless actual pecuniary loss is shown.[8] Where both vessels were in fault in the collision and the damages are divided, interest is not recoverable as an element of damages.[9] Where the libelant of a vessel is entitled to damages for its detention for repairs, he may recover interest.[10] For injury to a dredge in a collision there may be no recovery of the salary of the superintendent in charge of the dredge work during the time of repairing the dredge, where he attended to his regular duties in addition to overseeing the repairs.[11]

The measure of damages for change of grade is the difference between the market value of the lots immediately before the grading of the street and the value after the injury was complete,[12] taking into consideration the value of the improvements to the property itself.[13] The damage to abutting property by the construction of a street railway above the street grade is the difference between the fair market value of the property immediately before the tracks of the railway were so raised and its fair market value after its tracks were changed,[14] excluding benefits from the railroad to the property involved of a general benefit to all other property in

97. N. K. Fairbank Co. v. Windsor, 118 Fed. 96.

98. Code, Iowa, § 5050—Beebe v. Tolerton & Stetson Co., 117 Iowa, 593.

99. Beebe v. Tolerton & Stetson Co., 117 Iowa, 593.

1. Niles v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. (N. Y.) 68 N. E. 142.

2. San Antonio Traction Co. v. Upson (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 565.

3. Moore v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 82 N. Y. Supp. 778.

4. Davidson v. Chicago & A. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1069.

5. Rock v. Interurban St. Ry. Co., 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 664.

6. Houston Cotton Oil Co. v. Trammell (Tex.) 74 S. W. 899.

7, 8. Fisk v. New York, 119 Fed. 256.

9. The Itasca, 117 Fed. 885.

10. Harrison v. Hughes, 119 Fed. 997.

11. The Itasca, 117 Fed. 885.

12. Robinson v. St. Joseph, 97 Mo. App. 503.

13. Chicago v. McShane, 102 Ill. App. 239; Village of Barrington v. Meyer, 103 Ill. App. 124; Chicago v. Anglum, 104 Ill. App. 188.

14, 15. Farrar v. Midland Elec. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 500.

the vicinity.[15] The measure of damages for opening a street along private property is the difference in the market value of the property with the improvement and without it, and the city may not offset any future increase in the value of part of the property in common with the public because of the improvement,[16] and the jury may take into consideration the fact that the market value of the land may be injuriously affected by reason of the cost of other street improvements that may be charged on the land.[17] One whose access from a public street has been cut off for several months while it was being located anew and improved may recover for loss of rent from the tenements and a decrease of their rental value for such time.[18] The question of damages to property caused by the construction of street improvements is for the jury.[19]

The recovery for damages to a building is the cost of placing the building in as good condition as it was before the damage,[20] and where destroyed, the owner may recover the cost of removing the debris under orders of the authorities.[21] For injuries to a building by failure of a contractor of an adjoining excavation to protect the foundation of the building, the measure is the actual damage to the property with interest for delay in paying same.[22] Where the erection of a building was prevented by encroachment of adjoining landowner and the price of lumber rose in the meantime, the owner may recover the difference between the contract price of the lumber and the price he was later required to pay for the same,[23] and the amount paid a watchman to guard and protect a temporary structure during the delay.[24]

It is the face value of treasury notes destroyed by fire while the notes were in custody of an officer, and not the cost to the United States government of issuing new notes, that is the measure of damages for their loss.[25]

For injury to pasture lands by a fire, the measure of damages is the difference in the value of the land immediately before and after the fire.[26] For destruction of a fence by fire there may be recovered the amount necessary to construct a fence equal to the one destroyed.[27] Fruit trees and hedges are to be regarded as part of the realty in determining damages for their destruction.[28]

The measure of damages for injury to a crop is the difference between the value of the crop just before and just after the damage. In speaking of the value of the growing crop at the time of the injury, what is meant is its value for the purpose of continuing its cultivation to maturity, for, in most, if not in all cases, it will be valueless for any other purpose.[29]

For injuries caused by the wrongful discharge of surface water on the owner's premises, there may be a recovery of the actual damages sustained up to the be-

16. City of Meridian v. Higgins (Miss.) 33 So. 1.

17. De Benneville v. Philadelphia, 204 Pa. 51.

18. Munn v. Boston (Mass.) 67 N. E. 312.

19. Board of Councilmen v. Howard, 25 Ky. L. R. 111, 74 S. W. 703.

20. Fitz Simons & Connell Co. v. Braun, 199 Ill. 390.

21. McPhillips v. Fitzgerald, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 15.

22. Irvine v. Smith, 204 Pa. 58.

23, 24. Barnes v. Berendes (Cal.) 72 Pac. 406.

25. Smythe v. United States, 188 U. S. 156, 47 Law. Ed. 425.

26. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Chittim (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 294; St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Hall (Ark.) 74 S. W. 293. For destruction of grass the recovery is limited to the reasonable market value of grass at the time of its destruction, and if it had no market value, then its value in view of the use to which it was put—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Chittim (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 294.

27. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Chittim (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 294.

28. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Perry, 65 Kan. 792, 70 Pac. 876.

29. Raywood Rice Canal & Mill. Co. v. Langford (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 926. In ascertaining the value of growing crops, proof must be heard either as to the market price or its intrinsic worth and it follows that any witness who undertakes to speak intelligently as to its value must base his figures on a sound estimate of what the crops would probably produce if well cultivated and uninjured and to deduct from that result, the cost of cultivating and marketing—Id.

ginning of the action and the injured party is not limited to the difference between the value of the property just before and just after the injury.[30] It is not necessary to a recovery for damages to land from an overflow caused by an embankment built with inadequate provision for carrying off water, that the particular damage caused should be within the anticipation of reasonably intelligent and prudent persons.[31] For overflows, the damage is the difference between the market value of the land before and immediately after the overflow, and this rule applies to successive overflows if there were more than one.[32] For withdrawal of waters from land, the measure of damages is the diminution in the rental value caused thereby and not the loss of profits on crops and expenses incidental to the loss of water,[33] and in an action for injuries to land caused by the diversion of water, the difference in the value of land before and after the injury may be shown.[34] For injuries to a farm caused by the discharge of sewage over the land, the damages cannot exceed the rental value of the land.[35]

(§ 5) C. Maintaining nuisance.—In an action for damages for maintaining a nuisance, the recovery may include damages for discomfort in the occupancy of the home.[36] In an action to abate a nuisance, the reasonable cost of its removal may be recovered.[37] A tenant suing for damages for a nuisance may recover the depreciation in the rental value of the premises occasioned thereby.[38]

Where a nuisance is permanent and continuing, there may be a recovery in one action of all the damages past and future which the maintenance of the nuisance will occasion.[39] In the case of a permanent injury to a freehold caused by the maintenance of a nuisance, the measure of damages is the difference in market value before and after the construction of the works constituting the nuisance.[40] There can be no recovery on the theory that a city will continue to maintain the nuisance.[41] Where the market value of property is increased by the wrongful act of a city, it will still be liable for actual damages resulting from injuries therefrom to the property.[42] For injuries occasioned by a public nuisance, the damages are not the value of the use of the property when not devoted to any use whatever, but the value of the use when occupied for the purpose for which the property was suitable in its then condition.[43]

A petition for damages resulting from the location of a pesthouse in the neighborhood of plaintiff's farm, averring the fears of persons dealing with the plaintiff, must show that the fears of such persons are well grounded.[44]

30. Ready v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 142.

31. Schmeckpepper v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. (Wis.) 93 N. W. 533. In an action for damages for alteration of a water level so as to make lands less fit for crops, there can be no recovery for loss of crops planted with the knowledge that they would fail —Westphal v. New York, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 252.

32. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Lensing (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 826; Ready v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 142.

33. Kinsey v. New York, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 262.

34. Briscoe v. Young, 131 N. C. 386; Coleman v. Bennett (Tenn.) 69 S. W. 734.

35. $30,000 is not an excessive recovery for damages to land caused by a continuing nuisance, it being stipulated that plaintiff entitled to damages should recover permanent damages, where defendant's own evidence was that the property damaged was worth at least $100,000—Hentz v. City of Mt. Vernon, 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 515.

36. Daniel v. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. (Tex.) 72 S. W. 578; Louisville & N. Terminal Co. v. Jacobs (Tenn.) 72 S. W. 954; Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Charwaine (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 401.

37. City of Mineral Wells v. Russell (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 453.

38. Bly v. Edison Elec. Illuminating Co., 172 N. Y. 1, 58 L. R. A. 500.

39. Langley v. City Council of Augusta (Ga.) 45 S. E. 486. Where a nuisance caused by the faulty construction of a sewer is a continuing nuisance, plaintiff is entitled to all damages within the statutory limits not previously covered by him, though the original cause for establishing the nuisance is barred—Bennett v. City of Marion (Iowa) 93 N. W. 558.

40. Langley v. City Council of Augusta (Ga.) 45 S. E. 486; Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. McGehee (Tex. Civ. App.) 75 S. W. 841.

41, 42. Langley v. City Council of Augusta (Ga.) 45 S. E. 486.

43. Pettit v. Incorporated Town of Grand Junction (Iowa) 93 N. W. 381.

44. McKay v. Henderson, 24 Ky. L. R. 1484, 71 S. W. 625.

(§ 5) D. Trespass on lands.—For the unlawful occupancy of land with a tramway, the measure of damages is the rental value of land actually occupied together with the decrease in the rental value of the remainder of the land caused by its existence.[45] Defendant's abusive and violent conduct in an illegal trespass may be considered on the question of mental suffering of plaintiff.[46] In some states, the statutes allow a recovery of all damages down to the time of the trial.[47] The measure of damages for waste by removing timber from land is the diminished value of the land by such removal and not the value of the timber in its manufactured state.[48]

In an action for an illegal entry into plaintiff's place of business and injury to the contents, plaintiff may recover for injuries directly caused to his business by the entry.[49] Where property is taken by its true owners, the value of the property is not to be regarded as element of the damages.[50]

(§ 5) E. Conversion.—In an action for conversion, the measure of damages is the value of the article at the time of the conversion, with interest.[51] Attorney's fees are not recoverable as actual damages in action for conversion.[52] For conversion of coal by a carrier, the measure of damages is the value of the coal at its destination and not at the mines.[53] The measure of damages for the taking of ore or timber from another's land without right is the enhanced value of the property when finally converted to the trespasser's use; where the property is taken through mistake or honest belief that the trespasser is acting within his rights, the measure is the value of the property at the time of severance.[54] The measure of damages for the conversion of property by an innocent purchaser from an intentional trespasser is the value of the property at the time of the purchase.[55] A pledgor may recover damages sustained by wrongful sale of a pledge, taking into account the injury done to the property and expenses in getting it back.[56] In an action for conversion of goods sold under contract of conditional sale, proof of the price the vendee agreed to pay is not proof of the value of the goods.[57] Evidence of the

45. Leigh v. Garysburg Mfg. Co., 132 N. C. 167.

46. Hickey v. Welch, 91 Mo. App. 4.

47. Pub. Acts 1895, p. 297, c. 224—Dale v. Southern Ry. Co., 132 N. C. 705. Under an act allowing recovery of damages for a continuing trespass down to the day of the trial instead of obliging party to bring second action, this method cannot be used to bring in a subsequent cause of action arising between issue of writ and trial, though the trespass is of the same character as that alleged in the first action—Pantall v. Rochester & P. Coal & Iron Co., 204 Pa. 158.

48. Nelson v. Churchill (Wis.) 93 N. W. 799.

49. Gildersleeve v. Overstolz, 90 Mo. App. 518.

50. Pabst Brew. Co. v. Greenberg (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 135.

51. Janeway v. Burton, 201 Ill. 78; Daugherty v. Lady (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 837; Midville, S. & R. B. R. Co. v. Bruhl (Ga.) 43 S. E. 717; Hunt v. Boston (Mass.) 67 N. E. 244; State v. Sullivan (Mo. App.) 74 S. W. 417; Lynch v. White (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 834. In assessing damages for conversion it is proper for the jury to consider not only the value of the property at the time of cenversion but also the time which has elapsed since the conversion to determine the fair compensation to plaintiff for his injury—Davis v. Bowers Granite Co. (Vt.) 54 Atl. 1084; Geo. D. Mashburn & Co. v. Dannenberg Co. (Ga.) 44 S. E. 97.

52. Lee v. McDonnell (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 612.

53. Blackmer v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 913. Punitive damages may be recovered where the consignee had contracted for its delivery to customers and there was no evidence that the carrier was compelled to use the coal or stop running its trains, evidence showing a willful taking without regard to plaintiff's rights and the carrier may not deduct the freight charges from the value of the coal at point of destination—Id.

54. United States v. Homestake Min. Co. (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 481. Where defendant purchased timber of trespassers, who cut the same on plaintiff's land, some being purchased before and some after notice of the trespass, the measure of damages is for the timber purchased before notice, its value as it stood on the land, and for that purchased after notice, the value in its manufactured form without deduction for the expense of cutting and preparing for market in the absence of facts showing special injury to the land by the removal of the timber—Holt v. Hayes (Tenn.) 73 S. W. 111. In trover for timber cut in good faith by a trespasser the measure of damages is the value of the timber at the time of the conversion less the amount he added to its value—Anderson v. Besser (Mich.) 91 N. W. 737.

55. Potter v. United States (C. C. A.) 122 Fed. 49.

56. Schaaf v. Fries, 90 Mo. App. 111.

57. Mott Iron Works v. Reilly, 39 Misc. (N. Y.) 833.

par value of converted stock is insufficient on the question of its value at the time of conversion.[58]

(§ 5) F. Wrongful taking or detention of property.—The measure of damages for an unlawful seizure of goods under an execution subsequently quashed is the market value of the goods at the time and place of the seizure, less the market value at the time of their return.[59] Attorneys' fees necessarily expended may be recovered.[60] Where defendant in execution was not allowed to point out the property, the measure is the value of the goods seized at time of levy less amount of judgment.[61] For the sale of exempt property, where no special damages are alleged, the measure is the value of the property with interest thereon from the date of the levy.[62]

In an action for wrongful attachment of a stock of goods, the rent of the building is recoverable for the time the goods are in custody.[63] Lost profits are not recoverable, the allowance of legal interest on the value of the goods taking the place of such profits.[64] The measure of a debtor's damages for loss of time is what his time would have been worth in his particular business and not what he would have been able to earn in other employments.[65] Injury to credit or reputation in business must be shown in order to justify allowance therefor.[66] In the absence of any evidence on the question, the valuation of the officers will be conclusive.[67] Where goods attached are sold by order of the court as perishable and the money deposited in court, a judgment for the value of the goods instead of the amount in court is erroneous.[68]

In replevin of domestic animals, the amount of damages is determined by adding to the value of the use of the usable property its usable value from the time of taking to the date of judgment and interest on the value of the rest of the property for the same time.[69] The cost of caring for and feeding other animals during the time of detention may not be recovered on the ground that plaintiff intended to ship all the stock to market in one car and that all were necessary to make a carload; such damages are too remote and speculative.[70] Interest is recoverable from the time of demand, though the property is in the possession of the sheriff under order of court.[71] Where grain is wrongfully taken in replevin and consumed before trial, the value rising in the meantime, the measure of damages is the market value of the same quantity of grain of a similar grade and quality at the time of the trial.[72] Where plaintiff dismissed his suit after return of the property, attorney's fees and expenses incurred in preparing a defense to the replevin suit are not recoverable in an action on the bond.[73]

Damage for unlawful detainer of premises are recoverable from the date of the demand and not from the date of possession,[74] and the person entitled to possession may recover the value of use of the premises for any legitimate and proper purpose while he is deprived thereof.[75] Under a code provision that damages for withholding dower shall be computed, where the action is against the heirs from 58. Warren v. Stikeman, 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 610.

59. Palmer v. Augenstein, 18 App. D. C. 511.
60. Deleshaw v. Edelen (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 413.
61. Avindino's Heirs v. Beck (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 539.
62. Morris v. Williford (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 228.
63. Lord v. Wood (Iowa) 94 N. W. 842.
64. Moravec v. Grell, 78 App. Div. 146, 12 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 294.
65. Lord v. Wood (Iowa) 94 N. W. 842.
66. Hume v. Netter (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 865; Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Bucki & Son Lumber Co., 189 U. S. 135, 47 Law. Ed. 744.
67. Geiger v. Henry (Fla.) 32 So. 874.
68. Hughes Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Reagan (Ind. T.) 69 S. W. 940.
69. State Bank v. Showers, 65 Kan. 431, 70 Pac. 332.
70. Haas v. Tough (Kan.) 72 Pac. 856.
71. Follett Wool Co. v. Utica Trust & Deposit Co., 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 151.
72. Schnabel v. Thomas (Mo. App.) 71 S. W. 1076.
73. Edwards v. Bricker (Kan.) 71 Pac. 587.
74. Moston v. Stow, 91 Mo. App. 554.
75. Curry v. Sandusky Fish Co. (Minn.) 93 N. W. 896.

the husband's death, but where against any one else from the time when the widow demanded her dower, the latter rule governs, though some defendants are heirs, where the action is against them as beneficiaries under a trust.[76]

(§ 5) G. Fraud or deceit.—The measure of damages for deceit inducing a transfer of property is the difference between the market value of the property and its value as represented.[77]

(§ 5) H. Libel and slander.—Where the article was libellous per se, plaintiff is entitled to recover compensatory damages attributable to the publication,[78] and is not required to show actual damages.[79] On the question of actual or compensatory damages, evidence of the standing of defendant suing for libel is not important.[80]

(§ 5) I. Personal injuries.—Only compensatory damages can be recovered for personal injuries resulting from negligence,[81] and these independent of punitive damages should be limited to compensation which consists in remuneration for loss of time, necessary expenditures, mental and physical suffering and permanent disability, where that is shown as a result.[82] There may be a recovery for aug-

76. Code Civ. Proc. N. Y. § 1600—Gorden v. Gorden, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 258.

77. Deceit inducing the sale of corporate stock—Warfield v. Clark, 118 Iowa, 69. False representations as to the condition of property on which plaintiff had accepted a mortgage for part payment of her own property—Lee v. Tarplin, 183 Mass. 52. A person induced to lease a building by false representations as to the amount to be derived from letting rooms therein, may recover the difference between the rental of the premises as represented and as in fact existing less what was due on the lease—Prince v. Jacobs, 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 243.

78. Mauk v. Brundage, 68 Ohio St. 89.

79. Williams v. Fuller (Neb.) 94 N. W. 118.

80. Sun Life Assur. Co. v. Bailey (Va.) 44 S. E. 692.

81. City of Pueblo v. Timbers (Colo.) 72 Pac. 1059.

82. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mason, 24 Ky. L. R. 1623, 72 S. W. 27; Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Gruss, 200 Ill. 195; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Logsdon, 24 Ky. L. R. 1566, 71 S. W. 905; Wilman v. People's Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 55 Atl. 332; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hall, 74 S. W. 280, 24 Ky. L. R. 2487. In an action for assault, plaintiff, being entitled to damages, is entitled to such a sum as will reasonably compensate him for the injuries and outlays made, including therein pain and suffering, loss of bodily and mental power, capacity for work and loss of time—Armstrong v. Rhoades (Del. Super.) 53 Atl. 435. A servant may recover for injuries in an amount necessary to compensate him for loss of time and wages, pain and suffering in the past and such as may come in the future, resulting from the accident, and also for pecuniary losses caused by his diminished capacity to earn a living in the future—Winkler v. Philadelphia & R. Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 53 Atl. 90.

Loss of time and wages may be recovered—Karczewski v. Wilmington City Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 746; McAllister v. People's Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) Id. 743; Sachra v. Town of Manilla (Iowa) 95 N. W. 198. Amount of earnings—[Metz v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 82 App. Div. (N. Y.) 168,] and value of lost time must be shown—Stoetzle v. Sweringen, 96 Mo. App. 592. It is proper to prove earnings in service of a previous employer, as furnishing data—Southern Ry. Co. v. Howell (Ala.) 34 So. 6. Where permanent injuries are shown to result, instructions are not objectionable which tell the jury that it would not be proper to multiply the amount of plaintiff's earnings by his expectancy, but it was the province of the jury to ascertain, by the exercise of their own judgment, what would be the present cash value of his earnings, considering the expectancy of life—Chicago House Wrecking Co. v. Birney (C. C. A.) 117 Fed. 72.

Impairment of earning power. In an action for personal injuries there may be a recovery for impairment of earning capacity—Karczewski v. Wilmington City Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 746; McAllister v. People's Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) Id. 743; Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Jordan (Ky.) 76 S. W. 145; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Clark (Tex.) 72 S. W. 584; Chicago & M. Elect. Ry. Co. v. Krempel, 103 Ill. App. 1; Reliance Textile & Dye Works v. Mitchell, 24 Ky. L. R. 1286, 71 S. W. 425; Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Fennimore, 199 Ill. 9. On the question of loss of earning power, plaintiff may testify that he was discharged from the position he obtained after the injury on the ground that he was too slow—Southern Car & Foundry Co. v. Bartlett (Ala.) 34 So. 20. In an action for injuries to a member of a pilot association, it may be shown that the pilot's fees were turned into an association from which the pilot received a certain amount monthly, as showing the earning capacity of the injured person—Waldie v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 557.

Past and future damages. Past and future pain and suffering may be recovered for—Karczewski v. Wilmington City Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 54 Atl. 746; McAllister v. People's Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) Id. 743; Stanley v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 93 N. W. 489; Heer v. Warren-Scharf Asphalt Pav. Co. (Wis.) 94 N. W. 789. The recovery for future damages is limited to those shown with reasonable certainty to be a consequence of the injury—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McDowell (Neb.) 92 N. W. 121; Allen B. Wrisley Co. v. Burke, 203 Ill. 250; McLain v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 909. Where it is shown that a person was permanently injured and as a result has hernia curable only by an mented injuries to one suffering from a disease at the time of the accident.[83] Injuries to the sexual organs preventing performance of their functions may be considered in estimating damages.[84] An injured person may testify as to his own estimate of the amount of his damages.[85]

§ 6. Measure and elements of damages for death by wrongful act.—The jury may consider the number, age, and sex of dependent children,[86] the value of services of the deceased in the care, superintendence, and education of his minor children,[87] the amount he would have expended for their education,[88] his age, operation and is partially paralyzed and has frequent attacks of vomiting blood, the jury may consider future pain and suffering, though no witness states that plaintiff will suffer in the future—Smith v. City of Sioux City (Iowa) 93 N. W. 81. An instruction allowing the jury to return a verdict for damages that plaintiff would be reasonably certain to suffer in future from the injury is not objectionable as allowing a recovery for loss of time in the future—Curtis v. McNair (Mo.) 73 S. W. 167.

Medical attendance and nursing. The reasonable value of medical services may be recovered—Sachra v. Town of Manilla (Iowa) 95 N. W. 198; Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Ball (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 420. The amount of the medical charges must be proved—Halley v. Tichenor (Iowa) 94 N. W. 472; Central Tex. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 537; and also their necessity and reasonableness—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Highnote (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 920; Houston. E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Charwaine (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 401; City of Dallas v. Moore (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 95; San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Moore (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 226; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Boykin (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 93; Powers v. City of St. Joseph, 91 Mo. App. 55; Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Robinson (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 70. There may be a recovery, though bills have not been paid—San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Moore (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 226; Hickey v. Welch, 91 Mo. App. 4; Curtis v. McNair (Mo.) 73 S. W. 167. The question of the reasonableness of a physician's charge in a bill rendered but not paid is one for the jury—Lampman v. Bruning (Iowa) 94 N. W. 562. The services of a nurse may be recovered, though she has rendered no bill—Styles v. Village of Decatur (Mich.) 91 N. W. 622. There may be a recovery of probable future medical expenses—Chicago & M. Elect. Ry. Co. v. Krempel, 103 Ill. App. 1; but not where there is no evidence as to their probable cost—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Flood (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 331. A husband can recover only the value of his services in nursing his wife and not the amount of his salary lost thereby—Southern Ry. Co. v. Crowder, 135 Ala. 417. A recovery may be had for services of a daughter as nurse, though the daughter stated that she performed the services as she would for a mother without thought of being recompensed—Beringer v. Dubuque St. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 91 N. W. 931. A motorman injured in a collision may recover for money paid for treatment at another hospital than the one he was taken to by his employer—McLain v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 909. Liability of a city for personal injury is a statutory one and in Massachusetts there may be no recovery in such an action of the amount expended for doctor's bills—Nestor v. City of Fall River (Mass.) 67 N. E. 248.

Mental suffering: Mental suffering may be taken in consideration in estimating damages in a case of physical injury—Reed v. Maley (Ky.) 74 S. W. 1079; Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Jordan (Ky.) 76 S. W. 145; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Gordon, 24 Ky. L. R. 1819, 72 S. W. 311. Reasonable apprehension of blood poisoning—Butts v. National Exch. Bank (Mo. App.) 72 S. W. 1083. Direct proof thereof is not required where the injury is serious or permanent or continues for a long time—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Hubbard (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 112. Where there is an ample allowance for the injury, including physical and mental suffering, there may be no recovery for regret and humiliation that party may feel because of inability to perform household duties—Linn v. Duquesne Borough, 204 Pa. 551. There may be a recovery for physical injury resulting from fright or nervous shock caused by blasting in the neighborhood of a residence, where defendant had been requested to conduct the blasting so as not to cause rocks to be thrown into the residence—Watkins v. Kaolin Mfg. Co., 131 N. C. 536, 60 L. R. A. 617.

Disfigurement: There may be a recovery for mental suffering and distress caused by disfigurement—Gray v. Washington Water Power Co., 30 Wash. 665, 71 Pac. 206; Chicago & M. Elec. Ry. Co. v. Krempel, 103 Ill. App. 1.

Permanency of injury: Where plaintiff has not recovered from an injury at the time of trial or has been to any extent permanently disabled, the jury may take into consideration such facts in estimating the damages—Palmquist v. Mine & Smelter Supply Co., 25 Utah, 257, 70 Pac. 994. Where evidence as to the extent of injuries is conflicting, it is proper to leave the question to the jury notwithstanding a physician testifies that the injuries are of a trivial character—Styles v. Village of Decatur (Mich.) 91 N. W. 622.

83. Jordan v. Coulter, 30 Wash. 116; Jordan v. Seattle, 30 Wash. 298, 70 Pac. 743.

84. Male organs—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Collins (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 560. Female organs—Brake v. Kansas City (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 191.

85. Oliver v. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co., 65 S. C. 1.

86. Coffeyville Min. & Gas Co. v. Carter, 65 Kan. 565, 70 Pac. 635.

87. Anthony Ittner Brick Co. v. Ashby, 198 Ill. 562; Sternfels v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (N. Y.) 66 N. E. 1117.

88. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Puente (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 362.

habits of industry, capacity for labor, and probable earnings,[89] the pecuniary condition of plaintiff,[90] the condition of health of deceased as bearing on the pecuniary value of his life,[91] and may not be required to consider the possibility of deceased becoming poor and his children being compelled to support him in old age,[92] nor may they consider prospective advancements in salary, dependent upon problematic conditions.[93] In some states the recovery may include grief or mental suffering.[94] In an action by parents for the death of a child, the measure of damages is the reasonable value of the child's services,[95] and the loss of its society and comfort excluding any recovery for sorrow, grief, or anguish of parents, or pain and suffering of the child,[96] and the jury are not limited to the consideration of the deceased's ability to earn wages during his minority but may take into consideration the expectation of benefits from the continuance of his life as shown by the evidence.[97] It may not be shown in mitigation of damages that a parent would receive a death benefit from a relief department maintained in connection with the railroad by whom deceased was employed.[98] Under the Texas statute the recovery by a child for the death of a parent is not limited to damages accruing during minority.[99]

The recovery is properly termed a "capital fund" which represents the future value of all the pecuniary loss to the widow and next of kin.[1] In Delaware the rule allows the recovery of such sum as deceased would probably have earned and left as his estate, considering his age and his ability and disposition to labor, and his habits of living and expenditures.[2]

For death caused by alleged malpractice, the recovery is limited to the damages sustained by the deceased in his lifetime,[3] and are limited to loss, expense, and suffering due to the physician's negligence in excess of what they would have been had the case been properly treated.[4]

§ 7. Excessive and inadequate damages.—The rule against the allowance of excessive damages is plainly violated by a verdict for double damages for an injury for which only compensatory damages are recoverable,[5] and by a verdict

89. Knight v. Sadtler Lead & Zinc Co., 91 Mo. App. 574; Snyder v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co. (Mich.) 91 N. W. 643.

90. St. Louis S. W. Ry. Co. v. Bowles (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 451.

91. Coffeyville Min. & Gas Co. v. Carter, 65 Kan. 565, 70 Pac. 635.

92. Sternfels v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co. (N. Y.) 66 N. E. 1117.

93. Fajardo v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 354.

94. Brown v. Southern Ry. (S. C.) 43 S. E. 794; Davidson Benedict Co. v. Severson (Tenn.) 72 S. W. 967. A verdict is excessive, where the jury makes the allowance for the loss of society and comfort of the husband greater than the substantial pecuniary value of his life, the case not being one where punitive damages could be recovered—Florida Cent. & P. R. Co. v. Foxworth (Fla.) 34 So. 270.

95. Stumbo v. Duluth Zinc Co. (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 185. The mother in indigent circumstances entitled to recover at all for the death of her son, is entitled to more than nominal damages under a law giving a right of action to a person dependent for support on a miner killed by reason of the violation of mining laws (Rev. St. c. 133, art. 2, § 8820)—Bowerman v. Lackawanna Min. Co. (Mo.) 71 S. W. 1062.

96. Corbett v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 25 Utah, 449, 71 Pac. 1065.

97. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Beaver, 199 Ill. 34.

98. Boulden v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 54 Atl. 906.

99. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Puente (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 362.

1. Hackney v. Delaware & A. Telegraph & Telephone Co. (N. J. Law) 55 Atl. 252; Cox v. Wilmington City Ry. Co. (Del.) 53 Atl. 569; Florida Cent. & P. R. Co. v. Sullivan (C. C. A.) 120 Fed. 799. Under laws allowing a recovery for such sum as the jury deems just compensation for wrongful death, a sum which at current rate of interest for trust investment would bring an amount equal to the earning powers of decedent, does not constitute a just measure of damages—Fajardo v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co., 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 354.

2. Neal v. Wilmington & N. C. Elec. Ry. Co., 3 Pen. (Del.) 467.

3, 4. Ramsdell v. Grady, 97 Me. 319.

5. An instruction allowing recovery of shrinkage in weight of stock caused by delay of carrier to promptly deliver said stock determined by weight of stock at destination before the feeding and allowing a recovery for feed purchased for the stock thereafter, amounts to an authorization of a recovery of double damages—Nelson v. Great Northern Ry. Co. (Mont.) 72 Pac. 642. An instruction allowing recovery of damages "for any future impairment in excess of the demand in the complaint.[6] A recovery is not to be regarded as excessive merely because larger than the court, sitting as a juror, would have found.[7] The courts of New York may reduce a verdict for excessiveness though punitive damages are recoverable.[8] In Illinois there will be no review of the question of excessiveness by the supreme court where that point has been passed upon by the appellate court.[9] An excessive verdict may be cured by a remittitur,[10] unless so grossly excessive as to indicate passion, partiality, or misconception of the evidence.[11] The question of the excessiveness or adequacy of recoveries is so peculiarly one for the jury under the facts of each individual case that it is impracticable to attempt to deduce general rules governing the matter. These holdings, briefly stated, are collected and classified in a footnote.[12] of health and mind" and "for impairment of capacity to labor and earn a livelihood for himself and family" is not objectionable as authorizing double damages for the same loss—Central Tex. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Luther (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 589. Where plaintiff was authorized to remove buildings and equipments erected by him in order to carry out a contract for cutting and delivering logs to defendant, the allowance of damages for breach of the contract by refusing plaintiff permission to carry out the contract and for damages for conversion of the building and equipments, does not amount to a double assessment of damages —McCorkle v. Mallory, 30 Wash. 632, 71 Pac. 186. Double damages are not called for by an instruction allowing recovery for loss of time, medical expenses, physical pain or mental anguish which plaintiff had endured and would endure in the future and also for the probable effect of injuries in impairing his ability to earn a livelihood in the future—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Robinson (Tex. Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 70.

6. Branower v. Independent Match Co., 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 370.

7. Dickerson v. Payne (N. J. L.) 53 Atl. 699.

8. Riker v. Clopton, 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 310.

9. Lasher v. Littell, 202 Ill. 551.

10. Davis v. Bowers Granite Co. (Vt.) 54 Atl. 1084; Bull v. Bath Iron Works, 75 App. Div. (N. Y.) 380; Vanderbeck v. City of Paterson (N. J. L.) 53 Atl. 216; Rose v. King, 76 App. Div. (N. Y.) 308; as condition to refusal of new trial—Creve Coeur Lake Ice Co. v. Tamm, 90 Mo. App. 189. Where the verdict exceeds the damages proved under either count of a petition and there is a general verdict on two counts and no exceptions are taken the mistake is cured by a remittitur—Rosenfeld v. Siegfried, 91 Mo. App. 169. Affirmance on appeal may be made to depend on acceptance of remission—Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Carroll, 102 Ill. App. 202; Skelton v. St. Paul City Ry. Co., 88 Minn. 192; Live Stock Remedy Co. v. White, 90 Mo. App. 498; United Press v. A. S. Abell Co., 79 App. Div. (N. Y.) 550; First Nat. Bank v. Calkins (S. D.) 93 N. W. 646; Hawes v. Warren, 119 Fed. 978.

11. Close v. Hinsley, 104 Ill. App. 65; Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Story, Id. 132; F. M. Davis Ironworks v. White (Colo.) 71 Pac. 384.

12. Largely question for jury—Economy Light & Power Co. v. Sheridan, 103 Ill. App. 145; True & True Co. v. Woda, 104 Ill. App. 15.

Recoveries held not excessive.

Breach of contract. $525.50 (against undertaker for substitution of coffin)—J. E. Dunn & Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 576. $695 (breach of warranty of note)—Stanley v. Core (Iowa) 93 N. W. 343.

Delivery of telegrams. $225 (failure to deliver a telegram announcing death of child)—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Crocker, 135 Ala. 492. $1,995.25 (failure to deliver message announcing the sickness of a son until after his death and burial)—Western Union Tel. Co. v. James (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 79.

Carrying passenger past destination. $125 —Rawlings v. Wabash R. Co., 97 Mo. App. 511. $1,875—Guthier v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 87 Minn. 355. $100—San Antonio Traction Co. v. Crawford (Tex. Civ. App.) 71 S. W. 306.

Torts in general. Injuries to crops. $400 (destruction of a crop)—Corwin v. Erie R. Co., 84 App. Div. (N. Y.) 555.

Wrongful levy. $996—Friedly v. Giddings, 119 Fed. 438. $500 (breaking into a house to serve summons in a civil action on paralytic)—Foley v. Martin (Cal.) 71 Pac. 165.

Wrongful ejection of passenger. $250—Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Hill (Tenn.) 75 S. W. 963. $1,500—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 65. $1,500 —Foley v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 80 App. Div. (N. Y.) 262.

Libel and slander. $30,000 (malicious libel affecting credit and mercantile standing)—Minter v. Bradstreet Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 668. $1,500 (libel reflecting on financial standing causing loss of trade)—Brown v. Providence Telegram Pub. Co. (R. I.) 54 Atl. 1061. $2,500 (libel attacking a prosecuting attorney)—Bee Pub. Co. v. Shields (Neb.) 94 N. W. 1029. $500 (slanderous charge of theft) —McMinemee v. Smith (Iowa) 93 N. W. 75; Fatjo v. Seidel, 109 La. 699.

Seduction. $5,000 (seduction of a seventeen year old girl by a man worth $125,000) —Willeford v. Bailey, 132 N. C. 402.

Assaults. $4,100—Houston & T. Cent. R. Co. v. Bell (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 56. $500 (assault on woman)—Bruske v. Neugent (Wis.) 93 N. W. 454.

Alienation of affections. $2,250 (alienation of a husband's affections)—Love v. Love (Mo. App.) 73 S. W. 255.

Personal injuries. Injuries to head. $200 (injuries to head and other parts of body) —Ezell v. Outland, 24 Ky. L. R. 1970, 72 S. W. 784. $3,500 (fracture of nasal bones) —Bell v. Incorporated Town of Clarion

§ 8. Pleading, evidence, and procedure. A. Pleading.—It is not generally necessary to allege the separate items of damages resulting from a single act of (Iowa) 94 N. W. 907. $4,100 (fracture of skull, injuring eyes and brain)—Revolinsky v. Adams Coal Co. (Wis.) 95 N. W. 122. $12,000 (crushed skull, causing paralysis)—Pouppirt v. Elder Dempster Shipping, 122 Fed. 983.

Sight and hearing. $20,000 (loss of one eye and impairment of the other)—Missouri K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Flood (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 331. $12,500 (loss of one eye and impairment of other)—Cummings v. National & Providence Worsted Mills, 24 R. I. 390. $6,000 (loss of both eyes)—Bane v. Irwin, 172 Mo. 306. $6,000 (permanent injuries to hearing and sight)—Hunt v. St. Paul City Ry. Co. (Minn.) 95 N. W. 312.

Spinal and nervous injuries. $15,000 (spine)—Copeland v. Wabash R. Co. (Mo.) 75 S. W. 106. $5,000 (spine)—Sweeney v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 83 App. Div. (N. Y.) 565. $2,000 (spine)—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Harris (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 335. $3,800 (spine and head)—Central Tex. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Luther (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 589. $4,208.33 (neck, back and head producing mental impairment)—Baumann v. C. Reiss Coal Co. (Wis.) 95 N. W. 139. $10,000 (injuries indicating chronic sclerosis of the spinal cord and brain)—Clark v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 78 App. Div. (N. Y.) 478, 12 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 333.

Internal injuries. $6,000 (internal injuries to a married woman)—Chicago, R. I. & T. Ry. Co. v. Armes (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 77. $6,166.79 (diabetes)—Eichholz v. Niagara Falls Hydraulic Power & Mfg. Co., 68 App. Div. (N. Y.) 441. $4,000 (rupture)—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Lee (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 345. $800 (rupture)—Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Jordan (Ky.) 76 S. W. 145. $7,000 (rupture)—Malloy v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 159. $3,900 (hernia)—Hennessy v. St. Louis & S. Ry. Co. (Mo.) 73 S. W. 162.

Paralysis: $5,000 (total paralysis of one arm)—Stauning v. Great Northern Ry. Co. (Minn.) 93 N. W. 518. $15,000 (paralysis below the waist)—City of Elgin v. Nofs, 103 Ill. App. 11.

Injuries peculiar to women: $1,500 (permanent organic injury)—Brake v. Kansas City (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 191. $7,000 (displacement)—Louisville v. Bailey, 25 Ky. L. R. 6, 74 S. W. 688.

Burns and scalds: $4,650 (burns, destroying arteries)—Curtis v. McNair (Mo.) 73 S. W. 167. $10,000 (burns destroyings a large area of skin causing loss of fingers, and injury to sexual organs)—Quincy Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bauman, 104 Ill. App. 600. $4,000 (scalding)—Zellars v. Missouri Water & Light Co., 92 Mo. App. 107.

