Set-off of debts due bank against deposit.<sup>65</sup>—Where a deposit is made by mistake in the name of one who does not own the money, the bank may not apply it to his debt to the bank.<sup>66</sup> The contract right of a bank to declare due notes of a corporation held by it in case such corporation became insolvent and to apply thereon any deposit of the corporation cannot be exercised after the appointment of a receiver for such corporation.<sup>67</sup>

Set-off of deposit against debts due bank.<sup>68</sup>—A debtor of a bank may not set off the deposit of another against the debt.<sup>69</sup>

Deposits received after insolvency.<sup>70</sup>—A deposit made when a bank is insolvent may be recovered from the receiver in preference to the claims of general creditors.<sup>71</sup> if it can be shown that his money passed into the receiver's hands.<sup>72</sup> It is presumed that the money on hand when the bank failed is the last money deposited,<sup>73</sup> but this presumption is rebuttable.<sup>74</sup> Part of the depositors of an insolvent bank may sue the directors for deceit in inducing them to make deposits when the bank was insolvent.<sup>75</sup>

Bank, 131 Iowa, 528, 109 N. W. 9. Where a note is deposited with a bank for safe keeping and collection of interest, the bank must exercise ordinary care though the bailment is gratuitous. Id. Whether directors of a bank had exercised ordinary care in guarding securities deposited with it for safe keeping held for the jury where a year prior to the cashier's discharge they had notice that he was gambling, incurring expenses beyond his salary, etc. Id. In an action to recover the value of a special deposit where the court required a finding that it was the custom of the bank to accept special deposits, it was not material that local custom of banks to do so was not proven. Id.

82. An action against a bank for the value of a note and mortgage deposited with it for safe keeping, in which the bank pleaded that the cashier had misappropriated the papers and that they had been lost without negligence on its part, is for breach of contract and not for tort, and the plaintiff did not need to allege negligence, the bank being required to prove that the loss occurred, notwithstanding due care on its part. Sherwood v. Home Sav. Bk., 131 Iowa, 528, 109 N. W. 9.

86. Where the cashier of a bank was also deputy county treasurer and for three months prior to the bank becoming insolvent had collected taxes and mingled the moneys with funds of the bank and credited the same to the county treasurer, who had no authority to so deposit or part with title to the money, held a trust fund which could be followed by the county. Board of Com'rs of Crawford County v. Patterson, 149 F. 229.

87. Moneys received by a bank to be applied on the payment of a particular debt are regarded as trust funds and entitled to preference over general creditors in the distribution of the assets of an insolvent bank. Whitcomb v. Carpenter [Iowa] 111 N. W. 825. Where a banker sold a draft on a correspondent knowing that he had no funds there and mingled the money received with funds of the bank and the draft was dishonored, held the buyer was entitled to a preference over general creditors on insolvency of the bank. Id. The fact that the assets of a bank turned over to an assignee are less than was on hand when the bank wrongfully obtained money and mingled it with funds of the bank does not overcome the presumption that such moneys passed into the hands of the assignee. Id. Where several banks entered into a combination to suppress bidding for county funds under an agreement that the successful bidder should apportion the funds between them, held, where the successful bidder became bankrupt, the county could rescind and recover from the conspiring banks the funds in their possession as against the general creditors of the bankrupt. Action to recover deposits.<sup>93</sup>—A cause of action for recovery of a demand deposit does not arise until demand therefor and refusal to pay.<sup>94</sup> In an action to recover a deposit, proof of deposit and demand therefor establishes a prima facie case,<sup>95</sup> and the burden is on the bank to prove payment.<sup>96</sup> In Pennsylvania the holder of a check cannot sue the bank thereon unless it has been accepted.<sup>97</sup>

Certification.<sup>98</sup>—The certification of a check at the request of an endorsee discharges the drawee and indorsers.<sup>99</sup> This is so though made in the absence of funds of the drawee,<sup>1</sup> and a bank which certifies a check or gives assurance that it is good is not relieved by a subsequent stoppage of payment by depositor.<sup>2</sup> One who takes a check fraudulently certified by the cashier of an insolvent bank has the burden to prove that he is a bona fide holder.<sup>3</sup>

21. A certificate of the comptroller of currency reciting that a national bank had complied with all the provisions of Act Congress July 12, 1882, authorizing extension or corporate existence of such banks, and declaring that the bank was authorized to have succession until November 25, 1908, is conclusive evidence of compliance by the bank with all conditions precedent to the extension of its charter, in a prosecution of its president for violation of the national bank act. Clement v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 305. A national bank which continues its existence and performs the functions of such an institution after the expiration of its original corporate existence is presumed to have accepted the benefit of a certificate executed by the comptroller of currency extending its corporate existence. Id.

22. The discounting by a president of a national bank of worthless paper known by him to be worthless, for the benefit of a corporation of which he is an officer is a willful misapplication of the funds within Rev. St. § 5209. Flickinger v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 150 F. 1. Instructions given and refused in a prosecution of an officer of a national bank under Rev. St. § 5209, held correct and requests refused were covered by instructions given. Goll v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 151 F. 412. In a prosecution of a president of a national bank for violation of National Bank Act (13 Stat. 101), evidence held sufficient to go to the jury on the question as to whether he willfully abstracted and misapplied to his own use funds to the extent of $10,000 without authority of the board of directors. Lear v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 147 F. 349. Evidence that the cashier overdrew his account by means of checks which were not charged to him but were carried as cash and afterwards taken up by his note, all without consent of the directors, warrants a conviction of misapplication of funds in violation of Rev. St. § 5209. Brock v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 173. Evidence sufficient to justify conviction of the president of a national bank for willfully misapplying funds and converting them to his own use in violation of Rev. St. § 5209. Clement v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 305.

23. Where the president of a national bank makes a false report to the comptroller of currency with intent to deceive an examiner who might be appointed to make an examination of the bank as provided by U. S. Comp. St. 1901, § 5240, such act constituted an offense under § 5209, regardless of the existence of other incidents mentioned in such statute. Clement v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 305. A paper exhibited to a person authorized to examine the condition of a trust company, as the unrecorded minutes of a meeting of the directors and containing a resolution for the purchase of shares of stock which the examiner had discovered among the assets of the company and inquired about, is a "paper" within Laws 1899, p. 461, and if false and exhibited with intent to deceive him the officer exhibiting it was guilty of an offense under that statute. State v. Twining [N. J. Err. & App.] 64 A. 1072.

24. In the prosecution of an officer of a national bank under Rev. St. § 5209, for making false entries on its books showing the indebtedness to it of other banks, statements taken from the bank's files purporting to have been rendered by such other banks and shown to have been under defendant's charge are admissible and may be identified by employees of such other banks and their correctness verified by the books which are in evidence. Goll v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 151 F. 412. An allegation in an indictment under U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3497, against the president of a national bank for making a false entry on the books or reports, that the president made a false entry in a report to the comptroller of currency as to the amount or reserve, held not objectionable for want of an allegation that the lawful reserve exceeded the amount on hand, the gist of the offense being the making of false entries. Clement v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 305. Count in an indictment for violating national bank act alleging that the president of the bank made a false entry showing certain real estate to be an asset held not defective as failing to charge that such land was known or described in accordance with the description recited or as not charging that such real estate was not an asset to the bank. Id.

25. Mere drawing of a draft or entering a credit to a depositor is no offense within Rev. St. § 5209. United States v. Martindale, 146 F. 280.

26. United States v. Smith, 152 F. 542.

27. An indictment under Rev. St. § 5209, charging an officer of a national bank with willful misapplication of its funds, need not aver that the acts were done without authority from the directors. Flickinger v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 150 F. 1. An indictment for how the misapplication was made and that it was an unlawful one.<sup>29</sup> It must describe the moneys, funds, and credits misapplied,<sup>30</sup> and allege that they were misapplied to the defendants use, benefit, or gain.<sup>31</sup> The offense charged must be specifically alleged.<sup>32</sup> Several offenses cannot be charged in one count.<sup>33</sup> A verdict must not be inconsistent.<sup>34</sup>

Receipt of deposits when bank is insolvent.<sup>35</sup>—Fraudulent intent is not an essential element of the crime of accepting a deposit after a bank is insolvent under the Minnesota statute and need not be alleged in the indictment.<sup>36</sup> An indictment under such statute must describe the moneys received.<sup>37</sup> In a prosecution under the statute, the presumption is that defendant knows of such insolvency.<sup>38</sup> Such presumption is one of fact and may be rebutted.<sup>39</sup>

misapplication of the funds of a national bank must directly aver that the same was without the knowledge and approval of the board of directors or the discount committee of the bank or aver some fraudulent imposition practiced in procuring their approval. Rev. St. § 5209, construed. United States v. Martindale, 146 F. 280. An averment in an indictment for misapplication of the funds of a national bank that the same was "without the knowledge and consent thereof" is insufficient to show that it was without the knowledge and approval of the board of directors or the discount committee of the bank. Id.

28. An indictment which shows that what was done was apparently by authority of the board of directors is insufficient. United States v. Smith, 152 F. 542.

29. Rev. St. § 5209, construed. United States v. Martindale, 146 F. 289. Under an indictment for misapplication of the funds of a national bank, charging merely the giving of checks and drawing of money out of the bank, when defendant had overdrawn his account and had nothing to his credit in the bank, evidence of a fraudulent procurement of credit by a false deposit slip was inadmissible. Id.

30. An indictment under Rev. St. § 5209, charging misapplication of "money, funds, and credits," must describe the funds and credits and show how much of money, or funds, and of credits there was misapplied separately. United States v. Smith, 152 F. 542. In Rev. St. § 5209, making it a criminal offense for an officer of a national bank to embezzle, abstract, or willfully misapply any "money, funds or credits," "moneys" means currency; "funds" means bonds and other securities in which investments may be made, and "credits" means notes and bills payable to the bank and other direct promises to pay. Id. An indictment under Rev. St. § 5209, is bad both for duplicity and insufficient description of the offense where it charges embezzlement as well as misapplication of "funds and credits" without describing either nor setting forth the amount either of "funds" or "credits" embezzled or misapplied. Id. An indictment under Rev. St. § 5209, charging misapplication of a certain sum of "funds and credits" by discounting the note of a person known to be insolvent, is insufficient where the word "moneys" is not used or the funds and credits alleged to have been misapplied are not described. Id.

31. United States v. Smith, 152 F. 542.

32. An indictment alleging the misapplication of a specified sum of money of a national bank during a period of over two years is too general. United States v. Martindale, 146 F. 280.

33. An indictment for misapplication of funds of a national bank cannot joint in one count the misapplication of funds in the payment of separate notes with the alleged misapplied funds. Each payment constitutes a separate misapplication and must be charged in a separate count. United States v. Martindale, 146 F. 280.

34. Where an indictment under Rev. St. § 5209, charged an officer of a national bank with willful misapplication of funds in one count charging discounting of a separate instrument, and another count charging discounting all of such instruments, a verdict of guilty on the last count and not on the first is not inconsistent. Flickinger v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 150 F. 1.

36. State v. Quackenbush, 98 Minn. 515, 108 N. W. 953.

37. An indictment charging a banker with receiving a deposit after insolvency of his bank in violation of Rev. Laws 1905, § 5118, certain money, to wit, one hundred dollars, good and lawful money and current as such under the laws of Minnesota, and of the value of $100, a better description of which is to the grand jury unknown, held the description of the money taken in connection with the statement that a better description was unknown is sufficient. State v. Quackenbush, 98 Minn. 515, 108 N. W. 953. Good and lawful money and current as such under the laws of the state means good and lawful money such as is in current circulation, the words "under the laws of the state of Minnesota" are surplusage. Id.

§ 1. The bankruptcy act, amendments, and general orders.<sup>40</sup>—The amendatory act of 1903 did not apply to pending cases.<sup>41</sup>

§ 2. Supersession of state laws.<sup>42</sup>—Under the constitution, congress has the supreme power, untrammelled by state laws, to pass such laws for the division of a bankrupt's property between the bankrupt, his family, and his creditors as it deems proper.<sup>43</sup> While the bankruptcy act supersedes all state insolvency laws<sup>44</sup> except as to cases and persons not within its purview,<sup>45</sup> still it does not take away the jurisdiction of state courts to appoint receivers of the assets of an insolvent corporation, though the latter be within the purview of the bankruptcy act,<sup>46</sup> and this is especially true where bankruptcy proceedings have not been commenced against such corporation.<sup>47</sup> A state statute which authorizes the court to appoint an officer, whatever his title, to take charge of the estate with full power to bring suits in law or in equity, discharge the liabilities, and distribute the assets either in full or upon a percentage of the claims proved, and which also has all claims not proven, within the time specified by the statute, or by the order of the court, is in effect and practical operation an insolvency law.<sup>48</sup>

§ 3. Occasion for proceeding and acts of bankruptcy. A. In general. Insolvency.<sup>49</sup>—A debtor is not insolvent, under the present bankruptcy law, unless the aggregate of his property, whether legally exempt from execution or not,<sup>50</sup> at a fair valuation and exclusive of any property which he may have conveyed, transferred, concealed or removed, or permitted to be removed, with intent to defraud, hinder, or delay his creditors,<sup>51</sup> but including property preferentially transferred,<sup>52</sup> is sufficient to pay his debts. A fair valuation of notes and accounts is the net sum that, with reasonable diligence, can be realized from their collection within a reasonable time after the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>53</sup> A condition of insolvency is presumed to continue as long as such conditions usually continue under similar circumstances.<sup>54</sup>

(§ 3) B. Disposition of property with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors.<sup>55</sup>—In order to constitute an act of bankruptcy under this section the bankrupt must have transferred<sup>56</sup> the property with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors.<sup>57</sup> Solvency when the petition is filed is important only as a defense to an act of bankruptcy under this subdivision,<sup>58</sup> and the burden of showing this is on the defendant.<sup>59</sup>

56. An insolvent voluntarily confessing judgment in favor of certain creditors and permitting them to levy executions on and sell his property thereunder without having vacated such sale "transfers" his property within the meaning of the bankruptcy act. In re Nusbaum, 152 F. 835.

Execution of chattel mortgage for part of purchase price of certain goods, mortgage ultimately covering said goods, and goods on hand held not to constitute an act of bankruptcy, there being no intent to prefer. Martin v. Hulén & Co. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 982.

tion of his property to them commits an act of bankruptcy.<sup>63</sup> This preferential transfer should be distinguished from the preferential transfer made voidable by the trustee, in that the creditor in this case need not have reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended.<sup>64</sup> It is essential that the property transferred be that of the bankrupt.<sup>65</sup>

(§ 3) D. Suffering or permitting while insolvent, the obtaining of a preference through legal proceedings.<sup>66</sup>—In order to constitute an act of bankruptcy under this subdivision a preference must have actually been obtained,<sup>67</sup> and the debtor must have been insolvent at the time.<sup>68</sup> While the failure to discharge a levy five days before sale is an act of bankruptcy,<sup>69</sup> an independent act of bankruptcy is also committed by a failure to discharge the levy on each succeeding day, including the day of the sale;<sup>70</sup> and hence limitations against the creditor's right to file the petition runs from the date of sale.<sup>71</sup>

(§ 3) E. General assignment and the appointment of a receiver or trustee.<sup>72</sup>—The receiver must have been appointed because of the debtor's insolvency,<sup>73</sup> but, insolvency being in fact the basis for the receivership, it is immaterial that it was not so in name<sup>74</sup> or that it was not the sole reason.<sup>75</sup>

(§ 3) F. Admitting insolvency in writing and willingness to be adjudged a bankrupt.<sup>76</sup>—The judicial sale of the franchise and property of a corporation does not necessarily disenable its directors from admitting its insolvency and willingness to be adjudged a bankrupt.<sup>77</sup>

§ 4. Persons who may be adjudged bankrupts and who may petition.<sup>78</sup>—A natural person engaged chiefly in farming or tilling of the soil cannot be adjudged an involuntary bankrupt.<sup>79</sup> A natural person may be adjudged an involuntary bank-

The giving of a mortgage by an insolvent corporation in order to constitute an act of bankruptcy must have been to secure an antecedent debt, or for a grossly inadequate consideration and with intent either to hinder, delay or defraud its creditors, or to prefer the mortgagee over other creditors. In re Flint Hill Stone & Const. Co., 149 F. 1007. To give a mortgage, while insolvent, to secure an honest debt incurred in his business at the time the mortgage is given to carry on the business, or to secure an indorsement made at the time of giving a note which is for a present fair consideration in carrying on the business, the mortgage being given at the same time, even if the acts are within the four months' period, is not an act of bankruptcy. Id. Renewal in good faith of chattel mortgage not a preferential transfer. In re Cutting, 145 F. 388.

64. Hussey v. Richardson-Roberts Dry Goods Co. [C. C. A.] 148 F. 598.

66. See 7 C. L. 389.

67. An insolvent corporation occupying leased premises does not commit an act of bankruptcy by permitting its property on such premises, which is subject to a mortgage given to secure its bonds, to be sold under a distress warrant lawfully issued for past due rent, which by the state statute is given a lien on such property. *Richmond Standard Steel, Spike & Iron Co. v. 74. The appointment of a receiver for a corporation under Pub. Acts Conn. 1903, p. 158, c. 194, § 26, which authorizes proceedings for the dissolution of a corporation and the appointment of a receiver therein on various stated grounds, which do not include insolvency by name, or for other "good and sufficient reason," may constitute an act of bankruptcy where the records of the state court show that the appointment was in fact, though not in name, made "because of insolvency." In re Belfast Mesh Underwear Co. 153 F. 224.

75. If insolvency, either as a distinct ground of proceeding or as coupled with others, was one of the substantial reasons for the appointment of the receiver, an act of bankruptcy is committed. Beatty v. Anderson Coal Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 150 F. 293. 79. Where a farm was conveyed to a marrupt, although he is not "engaged principally in manufacturing, trading, printing, publishing or mercantile pursuits."<sup>80</sup> A corporation engaged chiefly in manufacturing<sup>81</sup> or in trading and mercantile business<sup>82</sup> may be adjudged an involuntary bankrupt, but the act does not apply to a corporation authorized to deal in notes, loans, and bonds.<sup>83</sup> A corporation may be subjected to bankruptcy after a judicial sale of its franchise and property.<sup>84</sup> Under the bankruptcy law a partnership is treated as an entity.<sup>85</sup> One may by conduct become estopped to deny that he is the real party in interest and subject to the proceedings.<sup>86</sup>

Who may petition. Voluntary proceedings.<sup>87</sup>—While an insolvent debtor, not a corporation, may become a voluntary bankrupt, there is no legal obligation upon him to do so.<sup>88</sup>

Involuntary proceedings.<sup>89</sup>—A creditor who has a voidable preference may present or may join in an involuntary petition, but he cannot be counted for<sup>90</sup> or against<sup>91</sup> the petition unless he surrenders his preference before adjudication.<sup>92</sup> A petitioner becoming bankrupt, his trustee may be substituted in his place.<sup>93</sup> Where the alleged act of bankruptcy is the making of an assignment under the state law, a petitioner does not become disqualified by proving a different claim against the debtor in the assignment proceedings after the filing of the petition and pending a hearing thereon.<sup>94</sup>

§ 5. Procedure for adjudication. A. In general.<sup>95</sup>—A proceeding in bankruptcy is a proceeding in equity, and the rules and practice in equity prevail in its conduct so far as they are consonant with the speedy administration of justice which it prescribes.<sup>96</sup> Notice to creditors is not required, and filing of the petition operates as notice to the world.<sup>97</sup>

Jurisdiction.<sup>98</sup>—The court in which a petition is filed has the sole jurisdiction to decide whether the debtor is or is not subject to the bankruptcy law.<sup>99</sup>

(§ 5) C. Involuntary proceedings.<sup>3</sup>—Where the bankrupt is temporarily absent from the district, but has his dwelling house or usual place of abode therein, valid service may be made by leaving a copy of the petition and subpoena at such dwelling with some adult person who is a member or resident in the family.<sup>4</sup> Creditors who have joined in the petition cannot withdraw without the consent of all when the effect would be to discontinue the proceeding.<sup>5</sup> The debtor contests in his own behalf and so may withdraw his opposition at any time.<sup>6</sup>

While the petitioners are entitled to allege and prove any number of acts of bankruptcy,<sup>7</sup> still it is essential that the petition set forth facts showing the commission of at least one act of bankruptcy.<sup>8</sup> Jurisdictional facts are those which condition the power of the court to decide some of the issues in the case like the nature of the subject-matter and the service of process.<sup>9</sup> Other facts, which condition the character of the decree or the nature of the relief that should be granted or denied, are not jurisdictional.<sup>10</sup> An involuntary petition against a natural person must allege that the debtor is not a wage earner or a person engaged chiefly in tilling the soil.<sup>11</sup> Failing so to do it is demurrable<sup>12</sup> and insufficient to sustain an adjudication if timely objection is made thereto.<sup>13</sup> Defects in form in the petition may be supplied by the proof.<sup>14</sup> The petitioners may be allowed to amend their petition, nunc pro tunc, for the purpose of setting up additional acts of bankruptcy<sup>15</sup> and to overcome a variance between the act of bankruptcy alleged and the act proved,<sup>16</sup> and, under its general power to allow amendments, the court may permit a correction of the petition as to the nature of the bankrupt.<sup>17</sup> An application to amend the petition so as to state facts within the knowledge of the petitioners at the time the petition was filed must allege the reason for the omission,<sup>18</sup> but failing so to do the applicant will generally be granted time to supply the omission.<sup>19</sup> A creditor failing to appear and answer the petition is deemed to have waived all objections to subsequent amendments which do not change the substance of the cause of action there stated nor the extent of the relief sought,<sup>20</sup> and to renounce his right to contest the cause of action of which the original petition gives fair notice.<sup>21</sup>

Fraud being an element of the act charged, great latitude in the admission of evidence should be allowed on the trial, and all the circumstances fairly connected with the transaction may be shown.<sup>22</sup> afforded the bankrupt extends to civil process issued from a Federal circuit court,<sup>24</sup> but does not prevent his commitment by a state court for a contempt where such commitment is intended as a punishment and not for the collection of a debt,<sup>25</sup> or if for the latter purpose if the debt was one unaffected by the discharge.<sup>26</sup> State statutes exempting witnesses from arrest are generally held applicable to bankruptcy proceedings<sup>27</sup> and apply to the bankrupt when attending proceedings following an involuntary petition,<sup>28</sup> and in such cases, the bankrupt being a nonresident, he is entitled to a reasonable time within which to return home.<sup>29</sup>

(§ 5) E. Adjudication.<sup>30</sup>—The judgment of adjudication possesses every attribute of finality and estoppel appertaining to those of courts of general jurisdiction,<sup>31</sup> and, except for want of jurisdiction, are not subject to collateral attack.<sup>32</sup> Final adjudications of issues relating to nonjurisdictional facts conclusively estop the parties to the proceeding from again litigating them.<sup>33</sup> The judgment of adjudication is not binding on persons not parties nor in privity with parties.<sup>34</sup>

§ 6. Procedure after adjudication. In general.<sup>35</sup>—A person listed as a creditor and whose identity is proven is entitled to an opportunity for an examination of the bankrupt to ascertain the exact condition of the bankrupt's estate before he determines whether he will become a party to the proceeding or not.<sup>36</sup> The duty imposed upon the bankrupt to submit to examinations involves the duty of answering truthfully and as intelligently and connectedly and fully as his mental equipment will permit, and his failure so to do is a contempt of court,<sup>37</sup> as is also false swearing,<sup>38</sup> and the latter is punishable as such in summary proceedings.<sup>39</sup> The bankrupt is also guilty of contempt if he fails to file his schedule<sup>40</sup> or refuses to surrender his books of account or excuse such failure.<sup>41</sup> In a proceeding for contempt the answer of the respondent, though under oath, is not conclusive, and his denial of the contempt does not entitle him to a discharge.<sup>42</sup> The provision that the bankrupt's testimony shall not be used against him in any criminal proceeding applies only to the testimony given by the bankrupt in his own bankruptcy case,<sup>43</sup> but bars a conviction of perjury for false testimony given by him in support of a claim filed against his estate in bankruptcy.<sup>44</sup> The court of bankruptcy is without power to

§ 7. Protection and possession of the property pending the appointment of trustees; receivers.<sup>47</sup>—Where an involuntary proceeding is dismissed after seizure of the bankrupt's property, the bankrupt is entitled to be allowed "all costs, counsel fees, expenses and damages occasioned by such seizure;" but he is only entitled to a single allowance which must include all of such items claimed by him.<sup>48</sup> The only liability for costs, damages, etc., resulting from the seizure is upon the bond given,<sup>49</sup> and such bond is deemed to run only in favor of those who were respondents at the time it was given;<sup>50</sup> any person subsequently becoming a respondent, if he desires to be protected, being required to move for an additional bond.<sup>51</sup> Prior to the adjudication, any Federal district court other than the one in which the proceedings are pending is authorized to take charge of the alleged bankrupt's property within its own territorial jurisdiction and to appoint an ancillary receiver therefor,<sup>52</sup> and a court of bankruptcy, after the filing of a petition and before adjudication, has like power<sup>53</sup> and may vacate alleged fraudulent conveyances of the bankrupt's property made within four months prior to the filing of the petition.<sup>54</sup>

The creditors failing to show any assets not covered by valid liens, if they want a receiver they will be obliged to furnish a bond conditioned, amongst other things, to pay the expenses of the receivership if sufficient assets applicable to that purpose are not discovered.<sup>55</sup> The effect of the appointment of a receiver is not to oust any person of his right to the possession of the property but merely to retain it for the benefit of the party who may ultimately appear to be entitled thereto.<sup>56</sup> and, aside from the power of the district court with regard to assets of bankrupts, which is especially given it by the statutes, it has all the authority which any court exercising equitable jurisdiction has to protect its receivers and the contracts made by them.<sup>57</sup> When necessary for the protection of the estate, it clearly appearing that certain transfers by the bankrupt are fraudulent, the court may, without the institution of a plenary suit by the creditors, direct its receiver to take possession of and hold the property pending suit.<sup>58</sup> An intervening petition by an adverse claimant to goods in the hands of a receiver is essentially one in equity relating to property in the custody of the court and triable by the court without a jury.<sup>59</sup> The receiver being an officer of the court, money in his hands is in custodia legis against which no attachment lies,<sup>60</sup> but attachments served on him are deemed notices of claim addressed to the court.<sup>61</sup> The power to continue business of a bankrupt corporation through a receiver or trustee implies the power to make debts, to provide for their payment, and to borrow money for urgent necessities,<sup>62</sup> and all persons dealing with the receiver are bound by the terms of the order authorizing him to continue the business.<sup>63</sup> The receiver should not sell the property of the bankrupt unless necessary for the preservation of the estate,<sup>64</sup> and hence a sale of a chattel real by a receiver without the express direction of the court conveys no title, and such defect cannot be cured by a motion to confirm the sale and to quiet adverse claims to the property sold.<sup>65</sup> The general employment of an attorney at law as counsel and attorney by the receiver does not authorize the attorney to make a sale of the bankrupt's assets nor take the proceeds thereof.<sup>66</sup> Wherever a receiver, by direction of the court appointing him, makes a sale of assets in his possession, the parties concerned in the sale are bound to recognize him as an officer of the court; and consequently such court not only has the power to enforce in a summary manner the completion of the contract of sale<sup>67</sup> but the parties involved are deemed to have consented to such a proceeding.<sup>68</sup>

§ 8. Creditors' meetings; appointment of trustee; removals.<sup>69</sup>—There can be no question of the right of a referee, under ordinary circumstances, to postpone a meeting of creditors for the purpose of allowing a restatement or perfecting of a proof of debt.<sup>70</sup> However inadvisable, as a rule, this may be, it is a matter of discretion, and will not be interfered with except for abuse.<sup>71</sup> Where it appears, however, that such postponement would avail nothing, the court may go ahead and appoint a trustee without awaiting further action by the creditors.<sup>72</sup> The giving out of a list of creditors by a bankrupt before the filing of his schedule is a practice to be severely condemned, and no attorney should be permitted to vote any claim in the election of a trustee which has come to him through the instrumentality of the bankrupt;<sup>73</sup> but the fact that he so receives claims is not sufficient ground for excluding his vote on claims which came to him unsolicited.<sup>74</sup> When possible a court in appointing a trustee will select someone from the locality where the property is situated.<sup>75</sup> An alien may act as trustee, he having the proper residential qualifications.<sup>76</sup> The bankruptcy act contemplates that the trustee elected for a partnership shall also be the trustee of the individual partners.<sup>77</sup> A trustee may be removed upon charges preferred by a creditor, and, in this connection, one who has filed a formal proof of claim against a bankrupt's estate has a prima facie status as a creditor which cannot be collaterally attacked, but continues, unless his claim is objected to and disallowed either when first presented or on reconsideration.<sup>78</sup>

creditors will generally be confirmed.<sup>80</sup> A composition procured by fraud will be rejected,<sup>81</sup> and the burden is on the opposing creditor to prove the fraud by clear and positive proof.<sup>82</sup> That the testimony of the bankrupt was evasive and perhaps false in some particulars is insufficient to justify the rejection of a composition on the objection of an unsecured creditor.<sup>83</sup> A contract by which one creditor agrees to advance the money to pay a composition made by the bankrupt in consideration of his receiving payment of his debts in full is illegal.<sup>84</sup> The court has no power to set aside a composition after the lapse of six months from the date of its confirmation,<sup>85</sup> and hence a petition to set aside a composition must be filed within such time.<sup>86</sup> So long as an order confirming a composition stands, it is effective to discharge the bankrupt from his debts other than those agreed to be paid by the terms of the composition and those not affected by a discharge.<sup>87</sup> It would seem, however, that an unfulfilled composition will not operate as a discharge.<sup>88</sup> Where a composition offered by a bankrupt, which includes the payment of all costs, is confirmed after opposition, the bankrupt's attorney will not be allowed fees from the estate for his services in securing the confirmation.<sup>89</sup>

§ 10. Property and rights passing to the trustee. A. Particular kinds of property.<sup>90</sup>—The plain purpose of the bankruptcy act is that the title and right to all things and rights which do not fall within the vesting words of section seventy shall remain in the bankrupt.<sup>91</sup> The studied enumeration of the particular rights and things which the bankrupt is required to surrender takes all other rights and things, not named, without the definition thus fixed, of the "property" which the statute intends to take from the bankrupt or to pass to his creditors.<sup>92</sup> The trustee takes title to all property of the bankrupt which prior to the filing of the petition the latter could by any means have transferred or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against him,<sup>93</sup> and also to any right of action arising upon contract,<sup>94</sup> but an unliquidated claim for personal injuries, on which a claimant had brought suit prior to the institution of bankruptcy proceedings against him, does not pass to his trustee.<sup>95</sup> The right of the debtor to work and contract for future services is not mentioned, directly or inferentially, in the rights or things required to be sold, appraised or scheduled, or which pass to the trustee.<sup>96</sup> The

Held, where the owner of land conveyed it by deed absolute and at the same time executed a separate instrument whereby the grantee was to hold the land in trust for the grantor's children, and such separate instrument was not recorded, the land did not pass to the grantee's trustee in bankruptcy as a bona fide purchaser. App.] 88 P. 812); and this is not affected by the fact that the bankrupt included the chattels in his schedule in bankruptcy, or by his omitting to name the obligation of the buyer to him to pay the value of the chattels as to part of his assets (Id.).

95. Sibley v. Nason [Mass.] 81 N. E. 887.

96. In re Home Discount Co., 147 F. 538. Wages earned by a bankrupt after his adjubankrupt's right to earn wages in the future and to dispose of the fruits of his labor is not "property" in any sense in which the bankruptcy act uses the term, but constitutes rather rights and privileges which go to make up a man's liberty and freedom.<sup>97</sup> Trust funds belonging to the bankrupt,<sup>98</sup> life interests vested in him,<sup>99</sup> his membership in a stock exchange,<sup>1</sup> and future commissions of a bankrupt life insurance agent on renewal premiums,<sup>2</sup> are all deemed property passing to the bankrupt's trustee. The trustee also takes title to property pledged by the bankrupt and which has not been used for the purposes of the pledge.<sup>3</sup> While the right to enforce full payment for stock passes to trustee of corporation,<sup>4</sup> yet it has been held that the double liability of a stockholder of a bankrupt corporation is not an asset of the estate passing to the trustee,<sup>5</sup> and that the bankrupt corporation's creditors may enforce such liability independent of the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>6</sup> Property held by the bankrupt under a conditional sale void as to general creditors for want of record passes to the trustee.<sup>7</sup> An endowment policy of insurance on the life of a bankrupt, payable to him at the end of the term if living, or in case of his prior death to his wife, is one in which he has an interest which passes to his trustee.<sup>8</sup> The words "cash surrender value" embrace policies which, by their terms, or by the practice or concession of the company issuing them, have such value,<sup>9</sup> and the investment feature of so-called tontine policies of life insurance does not exclude them from the meaning of such terms.<sup>10</sup> Life insurance policies which have not lapsed either at the time of the filing of the petition or of the adjudication have a cash surrender value, although it may be the practice of the company not to accept a surrender until the policy has lapsed.<sup>11</sup> Where a commercial firm goes into bankruptcy, it is a proceeding against each and every member, and both the firm and individual assets must be administered in the bankruptcy proceedings,<sup>12</sup> but, though the equity of a copartner in partnership property passes to his trustee,<sup>13</sup> partnership property is not to be administered by the trustee of an individual partner.<sup>14</sup> Trustee takes title to property of the bankrupt, though not scheduled.<sup>15</sup>

authorized by the bankruptcy act to avoid any transfer by the bankrupt of his property which any creditor might have avoided, and recover the property so transferred, or its value, from the one to whom it was transferred, unless such person was a bona fide holder for value prior to the date of the adjudication.<sup>17</sup> The purpose of this portion of the bankruptcy act was to vest the trustee with the same rights which a creditor of the bankrupt would have had under the state laws in the event the debtor had not been adjudicated a bankrupt.<sup>18</sup> That portion of the bankruptcy act which authorizes the avoidance of transfers of a certain character made by the bankrupt within four months prior to the adjudication relates to transfers which are in violation of the bankruptcy act,<sup>19</sup> and does not apply to such transfers as would have been fraudulent at common law, by statute, or by any other recognized rule of law, other than the special provisions of the bankruptcy act.<sup>20</sup> The four months limitation is not applicable to such transfers made by the bankrupt prior to the adjudication which were in fraud of creditors, and which they could have avoided even if no bankruptcy proceedings had been instituted.<sup>21</sup> Only such transfers by a bankrupt are fraudulent under the bankruptcy act as were fraudulent at common law or are made acts of bankruptcy,<sup>22</sup> and hence the creditor must participate in the fraud.<sup>23</sup> One acquiring payment of his debt otherwise than by descent is a "purchaser."<sup>24</sup> To be protected the purchaser must have acted in good faith<sup>25</sup> and, as has been stated, for a present fair consideration.<sup>26</sup> Still a transfer made in good faith to pay or to secure an honest antecedent debt by an insolvent within four months of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by or against him constitutes no evidence of an intent on his part to hinder, delay or defraud other creditors, notwithstanding the fact that its necessary effect is to hinder and delay them and to deprive them of the opportunity they might otherwise have had to collect their claims in full.<sup>27</sup> One is not a purchaser in good faith if he purchases with knowledge of the fraudulent intent of the seller, or under such circumstances as should put him on inquiry as to the object for which the vendor sells.<sup>28</sup> A bankrupt's trustee may maintain an action to set aside a transfer fraudulent as against creditors, existing at the time it was made, independent of whether subsequent creditors are entitled to participate in the assets recovered by such proceeding.<sup>29</sup> The salary of a city official is not exempt so as to prevent its recovery by the trustee of the bankrupt's official from the persons to whom he assigned it in fraud of his creditors.<sup>30</sup> In the absence of a statutory provision in the bankruptcy act that a sale not made in the ordinary course of business of the debtor shall be prima facie evidence of fraud, the fact that a sale or bankrupt. There are, however, several exceptions to this statement, as clearly appear from the other provisions of the act. Under certain circumstances the trustee is a representative of the creditors, rather than the bankrupt, in relation to the property of the estate, and he may unquestionably exercise rights and enforce a title that the bankrupt himself could neither enforce nor exercise.<sup>41</sup> As has been stated, in respect to an adverse claimant to property, a trustee in bankruptcy stands in the place of the bankrupt and with the same rights and no more,<sup>42</sup> but, in a contest with a creditor who claims a lien or right of priority, the trustee represents the body of unsecured creditors.<sup>43</sup> It should, however, be borne in mind that the property of the bankrupt after the filing of the petition is in custodia legis.<sup>44</sup> That it is subject to the prehensory power of the courts, and bankrupt cannot make any legal disposition of it.<sup>45</sup> In other words, persons dealing with the bankrupt's property after the filing of the petition do so at their peril.<sup>46</sup> However, after the adjudication and before the appointment of a trustee or receiver, the bankrupt still retains title to his property so that he may maintain an action on a chose in action,<sup>47</sup> and in such a case, a recovery being awarded against the defendant, the latter may protect himself against liability to another suit by the trustee by application to the bankruptcy court.<sup>48</sup> Property acquired by a bankrupt between the date of the filing of the petition and the date of the adjudication in bankruptcy does not pass to his trustee.<sup>49</sup> The administration and distribution of the property of bankrupts is a proceeding in equity and should be conducted on broad, equitable lines, with a view of recognizing and enforcing the rights of all parties claiming an interest in the estate, whether they be legal or equitable, or both.<sup>50</sup> The trustee takes subject to valid notice to quit served on a bankrupt lessee.<sup>51</sup> Enforcement of the forfeiture of a lease will be decreed where the lessee has failed to live up to the terms of the lease and has become bankrupt, and the forfeiture is the only effective remedy of the rights of the lessor.<sup>52</sup> It is well settled that trustees in bankruptcy are not bound to accept property or take over contracts which are onerous and unprofitable, and which would burden, rather than benefit, the estate,<sup>53</sup> but in such case they are required to elect whether to assume an existing executory contract, continue its performance, and ultimately dispose of it for the benefit of the estate, or to renounce it and leave the injured party to such legal remedies for the breach as the case affords.<sup>54</sup> If they elect to assume such a contract, they are required to take it cum onere as the bankrupt enjoyed it, subject to all its provisions, conditions, and modifications, in the same plight and condition that the bankrupt held it.<sup>55</sup> The adjudication and appointment of a trustee divests the bankrupt of all title to his property, and the trustee's discharge does not restore title to him or his heirs.<sup>56</sup>

in this connection the adjudication in bankruptcy is not equivalent to a judgment, attachment, or other specific lien upon the property.<sup>62</sup> The taking possession of the property of a bankrupt by the bankruptcy court does not operate as a caveat or sequestration of property owned by the bankrupt subject to valid liens so as to make the lien holder a party to the proceedings.<sup>63</sup> Before a creditor can claim a lien given by a state statute on property of a bankrupt, he must perfect the same as required by such statute.<sup>64</sup> The taking of a preference does not destroy a creditor's right to his lien.<sup>65</sup> The validity and extent of a pledge depends upon local law.<sup>66</sup> A pledge of property invalid for want of a change of possession creates no lien enforceable against the trustee.<sup>67</sup> Where the bankrupt is the principal debtor on a secured liability, the trustee cannot apply the property of the bankrupt covered by such security to his general creditors and compel the sureties to pay such secured indebtedness.<sup>68</sup> Where all the property is consumed in payment of preferred liens, it is immaterial that such disposition deprives the trustee of all compensation for his service.<sup>69</sup> Estoppel may bar the questioning of the validity of the lien.<sup>70</sup> A parol lien may be established by the testimony of the parties alone where such testimony is uncontradicted and credible, the witnesses are not impeached, and the circumstances cast no doubt upon their truthfulness.<sup>71</sup>

rupt to prefer is essential.<sup>85</sup> The words "such person" refer either to the person receiving the preference or the person who is benefited thereby.<sup>86</sup> If the party receiving the preference is without the jurisdiction of the court, and person benefited thereby is within the jurisdiction of the court, the trustee may proceed against the latter.<sup>87</sup> It is only where new sales succeed payments, and the net result is to increase the value of the estate, that payments made by an insolvent debtor on a running account are not to be considered as preferences.<sup>88</sup> Where transferee pays a present, fair consideration for the property, there is no preference.<sup>89</sup> The restoration of stolen money to one who is in entire ignorance of the theft and restoration is not a preference.<sup>90</sup> Where a preference consists in a transfer, the period of four months does not expire until four months after the date of recording, if by law such recording is required.<sup>91</sup> "Required" as here used has reference to the character of the in-

v. Richardson-Roberts Dry Goods Co. [C. C. A.] 148 F. 598. When one engaged principally in farming made statements showing that he was solvent and gave a mortgage upon a large part of his lands for $98,503.32 to secure a pre-existing debt within four months before filing a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and the creditor then advanced him several thousand dollars without security, held creditor did not have reasonable cause to believe a preference was intended. *Coder v. Mortgage on practically all of debtor's unincumbered property held, under the circumstances, to give creditor reasonable cause to believe a preference was intended. Id. As to reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended where mortgagor of chattels retains possession until within the four month period, see Mower v. McCarthy, 79 Vt. 142, 64 A. 578. Cummings v. Kansas City Wholesale Grocery Co., 123 Mo. App. 9, 99 S. W. 470. Mere fact of transfer will not warrant an assumption that the creditor had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended. Knowledge that debtor is not meeting obligations promptly is not sufficient to give one reasonable cause to believe a preference was intended. Arkansas Nat. Bk., Sparks [Ark.] 103 S. W. 626. Evidence held insufficient to show that creditor had knowledge of debtor's insolvency or reasonable cause to believe a preference was intended. Id. It is not enough that a creditor has some cause to suspect the insolvency of his debtor, but he must have such a knowledge of facts as to induce a reasonable belief of his debtor's insolvency in order to invalidate the security. Id. Where young woman of no business experience had money on deposit with uncle in his business and he sent her check stating that he could no longer use the money, held she did not have reasonable cause to believe a preference was intended. Wright v. Sampter, 152 F. 196. Creditor at the time of receiving the preference must have had knowledge of such facts as afforded him reasonable ground to believe that a preference was intended. Arkansas Nat. Bk. v. Sparks [Ark.] 103 S. W. 626. In an action to set aside a preference, the burden is on the trustee to show that the creditor accepted the preference with knowledge of the insolvency of bankrupt or had reasonable ground to believe that a preference was being intended. Id. Where a new creditor of bankrupt sent attorney to investigate the condition of his debtor and on investigation was assured by the bankrupt that he was solvent, held the taking by the attorney of a chattel mortgage to secure his client's claim was not a preference. Hussey v. Richardson-Roberts Dry Goods Co. [C. C. A.] 148 F. 598. Finding that creditor had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended held sustained by the evidence. Parker v. Black [C. C. Chattel mortgage covering all bankrupt's personal property and given nine days before the adjudication and while he was insolvent held voidable, the creditor having ceased selling him goods some time before, pressed payment, had checks dishonored, etc. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Edwards [C. C. A.] 148 F. 377. In order that knowledge of insolvency by the debtor may give rise to an intent, on his part, to prefer it is essential that he have such knowledge at the time of the transfer. *Galveston Dry Goods Co. v. (§ 11) B. Compelling surrender by bankrupt.<sup>3</sup>—Bankruptcy courts have summary jurisdiction to compel the surrender of concealed assets,<sup>4</sup> and may refer a petition for an order requiring a bankrupt to turn over money or property to a special master for hearing and an examination of the bankrupt.<sup>5</sup> Order will issue as to property in his possession or under his control.<sup>6</sup> A seller of goods rescinding for fraud is not entitled to the benefit of a summary order obtained by the trustee compelling the bankrupt to surrender the property,<sup>7</sup> but his only right cognizable in bankruptcy is to liquidate, as the court may direct, his claim against the estate for the goods not recovered.<sup>8</sup> A proceeding to enforce obedience to an order requiring the bankrupt to surrender property to the trustee is criminal in character, and a finding that the bankrupt is in contempt should be reached only on evidence which induces belief beyond a reasonable doubt.<sup>9</sup> In such connection the denial of the bankrupt is not conclusive, but is entitled to due weight in connection with the other evidence and circumstances shown.<sup>10</sup> The evidence showing beyond a reasonable doubt that the bankrupt is in contempt, the court should exercise the power of commitment and not compel the trustee to resort to a plenary suit.<sup>11</sup> But if a criminal prosecution is pending against him for the same acts, he will not be committed until such prosecution is disposed of.<sup>12</sup>

(§ 11) C. Property in the possession of officer appointed by state courts.<sup>13</sup> Where firm property is held by a receiver appointed in a suit, in a state court, by a creditor of a partner, and it becomes evident that the firm property is insufficient to pay firm debts, the receiver should turn over the property to a trustee in bankruptcy of the firm subsequently appointed;<sup>14</sup> but, if a balance will remain after the payment of the firm's debts, the receiver should wind up the business so far as to determine the value of defendant's interest and pay the amount of such interest to plaintiff so far as is necessary to satisfy his demand, and turn the balance over to the trustee.<sup>15</sup> If it cannot be determined whether a balance will remain after payment of firm debts, the trustee may become a party to the original suit, and the receiver should wind up the business, and then final action can be taken in the manner stated.<sup>16</sup> In any event the receiver's proper fee for his services, and his disbursements, should be ascertained and he should not be ordered to turn over the property in his hands to the trustee until these have been paid either out of the fund or otherwise.<sup>17</sup>

(§ 11) D. Summary proceedings against third persons.<sup>18</sup>—A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction by a summary order to compel the return of property forcibly taken from the possession of its receiver or a trustee,<sup>19</sup> and may interfere summarily to compel an intermeddler with its possession to desist and restore the status quo.<sup>20</sup> And the court may thus interfere either of its own motion or upon the complaint of the bankrupt or some other interested person,<sup>21</sup> but it has no jurisdiction to thus counsel an adverse claimant to surrender the property<sup>22</sup> unless such person holds it as a mere cover or receptacle,<sup>23</sup> but it may summarily determine conflicting claims to all that bankrupt has in possession,<sup>24</sup> and unauthorized surrender of possession by the trustee does not impair such right.<sup>25</sup> The trustee may apply to the court for an order directing the attorney of the bankrupt to pay over funds in his hands belonging to the bankrupt, subject to the attorney's right to have the amount due him and claimed as a lien deducted therefrom.<sup>26</sup> There is no provision for summary proceedings or for auxiliary or ancillary proceedings in another court of bankruptcy in aid of the bankruptcy court that made the adjudication and has charge of the bankrupt's estate.<sup>27</sup>

(§ 11) E. Actions to collect or reduce the property to the trustee's possession.<sup>28</sup>—The right to sue for and subject to the payment of the bankrupt's debts such property is vested alone in the trustee, and failure of the trustee to bring such suit within the time prescribed by law does not transfer the right to do so to the creditor,<sup>29</sup> and creditors cannot sue<sup>30</sup> except by his consent.<sup>31</sup> Subject to the exceptions made by the amendment of 1903, the trustee is vested with all the rights and title of the bankrupt, as well as with the rights of the bankrupt's creditors, and, when he seeks to enforce rights or to recover property in another district outside of the territorial jurisdiction of the court which appointed him, he stands in the position of those whose rights he has acquired, and can resort only to the same courts, state or federal, and is confined to the same remedies.<sup>32</sup> He may recover any interest in the bankrupt's estate as it existed at the time of the filing of the petition.<sup>33</sup> Thus he may sue in trover for a conversion of goods occurring before or after bankruptcy, and in a declaration may join a count upon the bankrupt's title and a count upon the trustee's title,<sup>34</sup> but where he declares solely upon his own title, a variance in that the evidence shows title to have been in the bankrupt at the time of the conversion may be waived.<sup>35</sup> He may properly be directed to institute a suit to recover assets on petition of a creditor and the giving of a bond by the latter to protect the estate from liability for costs and expenses.<sup>36</sup> The trustee may, without an order of court or other direction, institute suits for the purpose of collecting and reducing to money property of the estate,<sup>37</sup> and this includes the right to enforce payment of unpaid subscriptions of the stockholders of a bankrupt corporation,<sup>38</sup> but not the right to enforce the stockholder's double liability.<sup>39</sup> Where the trustee desires to enforce unpaid stock liabilities, it is proper for him to file a petition in the bankruptcy court for an order directing him to make an assessment and call upon the unpaid stock of the corporation for the purpose of paying its debts.<sup>40</sup> In order to determine whether such an order should be made it is necessary for the court to decide whether any particular share has been fully paid for or not, and whether the corporate indebtedness exceeds its assets, and what is the amount of its indebtedness.<sup>41</sup> In such case the corporation's indebtedness may properly be proved by presentation of the proofs of claim.<sup>42</sup> The assessments are collectable by plenary suits,<sup>43</sup> and hence the order authorizing the trustee to levy an assessment should not provide for execution against the stockholders for the respective amounts found due on such assessment.<sup>44</sup> The judgment of the bankruptcy suit on such questions is res judicata, in an action by the trustee to recover the assessment levied.<sup>45</sup> As to whether demand is prerequisite to suit for a preference, the cases are in conflict,<sup>46</sup> but failure to make it is in any event waived by answer asserting right in defendant.<sup>47</sup> An order in summary proceedings refusing to compel third person to turn over property alleged to be in his possession or under his control is no bar to an action by the trustee against such third person on the ground that the property was fraudulently transferred to him.<sup>48</sup> The discharge of the bankrupt in no way precludes a trustee from recovering property which the bankrupt has fraudulently transferred.<sup>49</sup> ruptcy cannot maintain a suit to set aside an alleged fraudulent transfer of the property of the bankrupt, although such transfer may have been made more than four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. Ruhl-Koblegard Co. v. Gillespie, 61 W. Va. 584, 56 S. E. 898.

Jurisdiction.<sup>50</sup>—The trustee's action to recover preferential transfers will lie in any court of equity<sup>51</sup> if the trustee has exhausted his legal remedy.<sup>52</sup> Courts of bankruptcy are created by statute, and they have no jurisdiction except that conferred by statute, either expressly or by implication.<sup>53</sup> Except on consent<sup>54</sup> or to maintain the trustee's possession and title,<sup>55</sup> they have no jurisdiction except in suits to recover a preference or set aside a transfer as fraudulent,<sup>56</sup> of a controversy at law or in equity between the trustee and an adverse claimant of the bankrupt's property,<sup>57</sup> unless the transfer is such as any creditor of the bankrupt might have avoided it.<sup>58</sup> Such equity jurisdiction as they have is concurrent with the state courts,<sup>59</sup> though the validity of all other claims against the bankrupt, and the question whether others have received voidable preferences and have not been required to surrender them, cannot be litigated in a suit in a state court to avoid an alleged unlawful preference.<sup>60</sup> An action by the trustee, where the complaint asks a money judgment only, to recover a preferential payment, is an action at law,<sup>61</sup> to recover on an implied contract,<sup>62</sup> and this is true regardless of the method in which the preferential payment was made.<sup>63</sup>

In a complaint to set aside a preferential transfer, allegations of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, of the adjudication that the grantor was a bankrupt, of the demand of the trustee for possession of the property and the grantee's refusal to deliver it, sufficiently shows plaintiff's interest. Lesser v. Bradford Realty Co., 116 App. Div. 212, 101 N. Y. S. 571.

72. Where a bill by a bankrupt's trustee to recover an alleged fraudulent preference averred that a mortgage was fraudulently given, and showed that the mortgage had been fully paid and filed before the bill was filed, and was therefore functus officio, the bill was not maintainable under Code 1896, §818, as a bill to set aside a fraudulent conveyance or transfer. Brock v. Oliver [Ala.] 43 So. 357. A complaint in a suit to set aside a preferential transfer alleging that the latter was "intended to and did create a preference in favor of defendant * * * and thereby secured to it a greater percentage of its debt," etc., held a sufficient allegation that the "enforcement" of the transfer would enable defendant to obtain a greater percentage of its debt. *Lesser v. Trial and judgment.<sup>81</sup>—In a suit in equity to recover a preference, the facts not being disputed, defendant is not entitled to a jury trial.<sup>82</sup> As in other cases, instructions are construed as a whole.<sup>83</sup> Where a bill to recover an alleged preference contains a prayer for general relief, the court is not limited to the entry of a money judgment against the preferred creditor but is authorized to issue an order commanding him to turn the property or money over to the trustee and to commit him for contempt until he does so.<sup>84</sup>

1. Where a landlord has seized movables of his tenant in bringing suit for rent, and before judgment the tenant is adjudicated a bankrupt and his trustee makes himself a party, he cannot insist that the suit should be dismissed and the property turned over to him. Schall v. Kinsella, 117 La. 687, 42 So. 221. Where a lessor sues for rent and seizes movables, and the defendant before judgment is adjudicated a bankrupt, the adjudication does not abate the suit and release the seizure. Id. A state court is not ousted of jurisdiction of an action pending to recover specific property from the bankrupt by the filing of the petition, nor by the adjudication. Property had been seized under a writ of sequestration. Linstroth Wagon Co. v. Ballew [C. C. A.] 149 F. 960.

2. A stipulation by a receiver to enter the appearance of the bankrupt in a suit brought against the latter does not bind him to enter his own appearance as receiver or trustee. In re Muncie Pulp Co. Where demurrer to defense set up by the defendant in a suit by the bankrupt to compel specific performance of a contract to exchange land was overruled, held trustees properly refused to prosecute suit further. In re Throckmorton [C. C. A.] 149 F. 145.

3. The mere statement by defendant's counsel at the trial that defendant is in bankruptcy will not operate as a stay of proceedings. McGowan v. Bowman, 79 Vt. 295, 64 A. 1121. A stay of the proceedings in the state court must be granted on motion, even though the bankrupt is in default and all papers necessary to make up the judgment are filed. American Woodworking Mach. Co. v. Furbush, 193 Mass. 455, 79 N. E. 770. The trustee has the right to intervene in a pending revocatory action in a state court and prosecute the same to final judgment for the benefit of the bankrupt estate. New Orleans Acid & Fertilizer Co. v. Guillory & Co., 11 La. 821, 42 So. 329. Where defendant showed that he had been adjudged a bankrupt, and moved that the trustee in bankruptcy be substituted in his place, but it did not appear that the court in bankruptcy had directed the trustee to intervene, and the trustee himself made no motion, the application would be denied. Oscar Bonner Oil Co. v. Pennsylvania Oil Co. [Cal.] 89 P. 613. It is discretionary with the state court to order a suspension of proceedings in actions pending against the bankrupt or to order the trustee to enter his appearance therein and defend the same. Reynolds v. Pennsylvania Oil Co. [Cal.] 89 P. 610. It follows that a mere showing of the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings is insufficient to stay the proceedings in the action against the bankrupt. So held where bankrupt filed a certified copy of the order adjudging him a bankrupt and gave notice that he would move to dismiss by reason thereof. Id. On an application to the bankruptcy court to stay an action against the bankrupt, or to vacate such a stay, the court is not required to enter into an investigation debors the pleadings in such action to ascertain its nature. In re Adler [C. C. A.] 152 F. 422. tion of the bankrupt's lease and after a notice to vacate is given becomes a trespasser, and is personally liable for the damages sustained,<sup>9</sup> though if he acts in good faith and for the benefit of the estate he is entitled to reimbursement from the estate;<sup>10</sup> but in such a case the landlord is entitled to prove such damages against the estate, in a proceeding to which the trustee is a party, before establishing his claim against the trustee in a separate suit.<sup>11</sup> The bankrupt's estate is taxable while in the hands of the trustee,<sup>12</sup> and it is the duty of the court to require such payment even though no claim for the same is presented in the manner or within the time prescribed by the bankruptcy act for the filing of claims.<sup>13</sup> It follows that it is the duty of the trustee to pay the taxes assessed or becoming due on the property of the bankrupt while in his hands for administration;<sup>14</sup> but there is no provision of the law requiring or authorizing him to pay interest thereon.<sup>15</sup> This duty can only be discharged by actual payments or by a legal agreement whereby payment is assumed by some third person.<sup>16</sup>

Sale of property.<sup>17</sup>—While the bankruptcy court may sell the property free and clear from liens,<sup>18</sup> yet the power to do so is extraordinary, and an order merely directing the sale of the property, without mentioning liens, will be taken as a sale subject to existing liens,<sup>19</sup> and notice to the lien creditors of the application for the sale must not only be given but the record must disclose affirmatively that every creditor whose lien will be discharged by the sale has received due notice of the application.<sup>20</sup> Where a trustee sells mortgaged property of the bankrupt's estate free of the mortgage, and the proceeds of the sale are sufficient for that purpose, the mortgagee is entitled to payment of the interest upon his mortgage debt, as well as the principal, out of the proceeds in accordance with the terms of the note and mortgage.<sup>21</sup> Where the sale was not to the highest bidder,<sup>22</sup> or the price was inadequate,<sup>23</sup> or it appears that a better price can be obtained,<sup>24</sup> resale will be ordered. 22. Where certain of the bankrupt's real estate was offered for sale, and the bankrupt offered to bid $10,500, but could not deposit any earnest money or pay the amount of her bid, and the auctioneer did not receive or cry her bid, but finally sold the property to another for $10,354, held that such sale was properly confirmed nearly a month thereafter, the bankrupt having taken no steps in the meantime to make her bid good. 24. Where a private sale of real estate was set aside by the court on an offer of a better price and after the purchaser had made improvements thereon, the order providing that the first purchaser should be repaid the amount expended in making such improvements, the costs of the proceedings for ascertaining such amount should be borne by the estate in bankruptcy (In re William Fisher & Co., 148 F. 907), except perhaps as to specific items of costs incurred by the other parties for their own benefit (Id.). 29. Where, under a decree in a bankruptcy proceeding in the United States court, land is sold and a deed is ordered to be made to the purchaser, a state court is without jurisdiction to enjoin the execution of such deed upon a bill filed therein by one claiming to be jointly interested with the purchaser of said property, nor can the purchaser be enjoined from acquiring title to such land. *Henderson v. Where the principal on a bond given to dissolve an attachment went into bankruptcy and was discharged between the time of bringing suit on the bond and the recovery of a judgment thereon, which was afterward paid by the surety, the claim of the surety was not provable in the bankruptcy proceedings. Smith v. McQuillin, 193 Mass. 289, 79 N. E. 401. The liability of a bankrupt indorser on commercial paper which did not become absolute until after the filing of the petition is a debt founded upon a contract within § 63a (4) and provable in bankruptcy thereunder after such liability has become fixed and within the time limited for proving claims. In re Smith, 146 F. 923.

34. A judgment of a state court of California on which an execution has been awarded under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 685, more than five years after its entry, which execution was levied prior to the bankruptcy proceedings, is provable as a claim against the debtor's estate though an action thereon is barred by limitations under another section of the statute. In re Rebman [C. C. A.] 150 F. 759. A judgment debt is provable though the creditor have collateral security. Joslyn* [Wash.] 88 P. 324.

35. Section 63, subd. "b" does not add anything to the class of debts which may be proved under the preceding subsection, but has merely to do with a matter of procedure, injury to the property of another, not connected with or growing out of any contractual relation, is not provable.<sup>36</sup> The several subdivisions of section 63a are not to be regarded as an enumeration of a group of characteristics all of which are essential to a provable claim, but as a classification, each specifying a separate class of provable claims,<sup>37</sup> and hence the provision of the first subdivision limiting the claims provable thereunder to those which were a fixed liability absolutely owing at the time of the petition does not impose the same limitation upon claims within other classes.<sup>38</sup> Unfulfilled voluntary composition made prior to the proceedings does not bar the creditors from proving their claims in full, less amounts paid under composition.<sup>39</sup> Instituting an action against a guarantor does not bar proof against the debtor's estate, though the debtor was given the conditional privilege that if part of the indebtedness was paid promptly the creditor would release the balance.<sup>40</sup> An individual partner going into bankruptcy the firm debts are provable against him: the firm creditors sharing only in the individual estate after the individual creditors have been paid in full.<sup>41</sup> prima facie evidence of the validity of the claim itself, on which it may be allowed as a general claim.<sup>49</sup> A court of bankruptcy being a court of equity may allow the proof of a claim unenforceable under the laws of the state, but the power is to be exercised with great caution.<sup>50</sup>

(§ 14) C. Contest of claims.<sup>51</sup>—The “parties in interest” who may contest are those who have an interest in the res which is to be administered and distributed in the proceeding, and does not include those who are merely debtors or alleged debtors of the bankrupt.<sup>52</sup> While the bankrupt cannot object to the proof of claims, he has an equitable right to insist that the trustee shall object to illegal claims.<sup>53</sup> The right to have a re-examination of allowed claims should not be denied to creditors who clearly have an interest therein because they seek such re-examination chiefly or solely in the interest of third party.<sup>54</sup> Proceedings to expunge an allowed claim should properly be based on petition and answer,<sup>55</sup> and the claimant allowing the time to answer to expire he is not entitled to file an answer after the trustee has finished taking testimony under his petition.<sup>56</sup>

(§ 14) D. Surrender of preferences and effect thereof.<sup>57</sup>—That the net result of the transaction was a gain to the bankrupt does not relieve the creditor from the necessity of surrendering a preference.<sup>58</sup>

(§ 14) E. Secured creditors.<sup>59</sup>—It is only when collateral held by a creditor has not been disposed of in accordance with the contract of pledge that a court of bankruptcy can exercise the power to determine the value of such securities and direct their disposition.<sup>60</sup> On rejecting claim because creditor has security, the court cannot in the same proceeding enter a decree against him for the excess of security over debt.<sup>61</sup>

(§ 14) F. Set-off.<sup>62</sup>—The right of set-off is not affected by the fact that the creditor holds collateral security exceeding in value the amount of the bankrupt's indebtedness to him.<sup>63</sup> A creditor may use his claim as a set-off against the trustee though he has not proved it and the year has expired.<sup>64</sup>

68. A mortgagee who had no notice of the bankruptcy proceedings in which at the request of the other parties interested, the business is continued at a loss and the property sold, is entitled to priority of payment from the proceeds after they have contributed ratably to the payments of labor claims and the costs of administration. In re Erie Lumber Co., 150 F. 817. The priority accorded wages due to workmen, clerks, or servants, is not applicable to one advancing the employer money, before his bankruptcy, with which to pay his employees and took assignments of their claims as security. In re St. Louis Ice Mfg. & Storage Co., 147 F. 752. An assignee of the wages of employees of the bankrupt is entitled to the preference given by the act (In re Fuller, 152 F. 538; Shropshire, Woodliff & Co. v. Bush, 204 U. S. 186, 51 Law. Ed. 436), unless he exchanges such claims for the employer's note and due bill thus working a novation (In re Fuller, 152 F. 538). In re Bennett

[C. C. A.] 153 F. 673. The principle controlling the construction and effect of the provision giving priority to debts owing any person who by the laws of the state is entitled to priority is that the creditor shall be allowed the same priority under the bankruptcy act which he would have had if such act had not superseded the state laws governing the distribution of the estates of insolvent debtors. In re Jones, 151 F. 108. Comp. Laws Mich. § 9675, which provides that the assignee of an insolvent debtor "under this title" shall pay in full all debts owing by the debtor as guardian, etc., is not a law of the state of such general character as gives priority a debt due from a bankrupt as guardian, it being applicable only in special proceedings under that title. Id. Priority of claim as given to claims preferred by state laws is only a priority over those claims which are not specified in the bankruptcy act as being higher in right. In re Consumers' Coffee Co., 151 F. 933. As to whether claim for trust fund is entitled to priority must be governed by the bankruptcy act and not by state insolvency law. Smith v. Mottley [C. C. A.] 150 F. 266, rvg. In re Potter's Sons, 143 F. 407. There would seem to be a valid distinction in the application of the rule that a misappropriated trust fund must be found in the assets between the settlement of an estate in bankruptcy proceedings and proceedings upon a bill filed by the marshaling and appropriation of assets according to the principles of equity. In the latter case there is a seizure of the res for the direct purpose of fostering the inchoate rights of creditors; in the former the trustee takes the estate as he finds it. Id. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 496, a mortgage withheld from record for several months and until shortly before the bankruptcy proceedings is not a lien as against the mortgagor's creditors in bankruptcy whose claims originated while it was so withheld. A finding denying a claim of the wife of the bankrupt for repayment of money brought into the community by her at the time of her marriage, priority over other creditors of the community will not be disturbed on appeal, where the record failed to show that the marriage was solemnized in a state, by the laws of which, at the time of the marriage, she was entitled to priority. 72. Euclid Nat. Bk. v. Union Trust & Deposit Co. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 975.

Where a partnership goes into bankruptcy, the right of an individual creditor to be paid by preference out of individual assets must be enforced in the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>73</sup> Such a right is no defense to a suit by "partnership creditors" to annul sale as operating an undue preference.<sup>74</sup> Those liens which are not affected by the act of course give priority against the property charged,<sup>75</sup> while as to others, the lien holders come in as general creditors.<sup>76</sup> It has been doubted whether a lien existing only by operation of law falls within the class of "liens given or accepted, etc."<sup>77</sup> An unliquidated claim for damages for breach of a contract by receivers of a bankrupt is not entitled to priority as against antecedent liens against the estate.<sup>78</sup> Allegations, in a verified petition for the allowance of a claim, of facts to establish the right of such claim to priority, are not to be taken as prima facie true, but must be proved by evidence.<sup>79</sup> is a continuance of the business within the meaning of the rule allowing the trustee additional compensation in such cases.<sup>84</sup> In such case he may also be properly allowed in his account for unavoidable losses of small sums to the estate through inability to collect from purchasers.<sup>85</sup> A mortgagee who submits his claim to the bankruptcy court for allowance and payment from the proceeds of the mortgaged property is chargeable with his pro rata share of the costs of the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>86</sup>

(§ 14) I. Expenses of receivers and assignees appointed prior to bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>87</sup>—The compensation to be allowed receivers and their attorneys is a matter entirely within the discretion of the court,<sup>88</sup> to be determined in view of the services rendered and the net results to the estate,<sup>89</sup> and it is not essential to the validity of such allowance that notice should have been given the trustee or creditors, or that a hearing be had either before the court or a commissioner.<sup>90</sup> A receiver is entitled to the assistance of counsel, and a reasonable allowance, keeping in view the economy enjoined by the general policy of the bankruptcy act, and taking into consideration the value of the estate, will be made to him in the settlement of his accounts.<sup>91</sup> But he is not entitled to an allowance for services rendered by the attorney for the petitioning creditors in instituting the proceedings and obtaining the receiver's appointment, or for other services rendered primarily in the interests of his clients,<sup>92</sup> the former services being a matter for consideration if at all on the settlement of the estate by the trustee.<sup>93</sup>

In determining a bankrupt's right to exemption, the construction placed by the highest court of the state on its exemption statutes is controlling on the court of bankruptcy, but such court is not obliged to follow an obiter dictum.<sup>1</sup> The right of the bankrupt to his exemptions should be determined at least as of the date of the adjudication, and probably as of the date of filing the petition.<sup>2</sup> A bankrupt who makes seasonable claim to his exemptions is not deprived of his right by a sale of the property by a receiver with his consent;<sup>3</sup> but, since in such case the proceeds come into the bankruptcy court for distribution, such court may consider and determine any claims to the fund by others.<sup>4</sup> The bankrupt or his assignees who claims property as exempt must prove it to be so.<sup>5</sup> Where the exemption is in property as distinguished from

A suit by the trustee to cancel a conveyance of real estate by the bankrupt and quiet the trustee's title to the property is a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings. McCarthy v. Coffin [C. C. A.] 150 F. 307. A proceeding on a petition filed by an adverse claimant to recover property from the trustee is a "controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings," and is reviewable by appeal. Smith v. Means [C. C. A.] 149 F. 720. Appeal is the proper remedy to review a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the debtor a bankrupt. (Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell [C. C. A.] 147 F. 475), a judgment granting or denying a discharge (Id.), and a judgment allowing or rejecting a claim or debt for $500 or over (Id.).

33. An interlocutory order granting an injunction is reviewable by appeal, though the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court is involved, where the nature of the cause or proceeding is such that the final decree therein would be reviewable by appeal. (O'Dell v. Boyden [C. C. A.] 150 F. 731); but is not so appealable where such final decree or order would be one in a "proceeding in bankruptcy" reviewable only on a petition to revise in matter of law (Id.). Where controversy was between trustee and prior assignee of stock exchange, membership of bankrupt held reviewable only on petition to revise. Id.

34. All parties aggrieved by a final decision, whereby the petition is dismissed, may join in appeal, though some complain of one alleged error and some of another, for on such an appeal all prior rulings are reviewable. Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co. [C. C. A.] 150 F. 71.

35. An order dismissing an involuntary petition on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy is appealable under § 25a, and also reviewable by petition to revise under § 24b. Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co. [C. C. A.] 150 F. 71. A claim is rejected so as to afford the right of appeal where creditor insisted that his claims were for a definite amount, viz., the amount stated in the proof of debt, less the sum derived from the sale of collateral, and the referee declined to allow the claims as established as the proof stood, and the bankruptcy court approved and affirmed the ruling of the referee as a disallowance of the claims, and entered an order accordingly. Hiscock v. Varick Bk., 206 U. S. 28, 51 Law. Ed. 945. An order of a court of bankruptcy passing upon the claim of a creditor for the allowance of counsel fees and expenses incurred in contesting claims and prosecuting suits on behalf of the estate, is not one allowing or rejecting a "debt or claim" against the estate and appealable, but is an administrative order reviewable only on petition to revise in matter of law. Ohio Valley Bk. Co. v. Switzer [C. C. A.] 153 F. 362.

supervisory jurisdiction on petition to review is also given by section 24.<sup>37</sup> Decisions of state courts are reviewable in the Federal supreme court on the same grounds as in other cases.<sup>38</sup> The supreme court of a territory has no jurisdiction to review on appeal an order refusing to vacate an adjudication in bankruptcy and permit the petitioners to intervene.<sup>39</sup> The circuit court of appeals has no jurisdiction to review orders by territorial courts outside its circuit.<sup>40</sup> Appeals are to be taken in like manner as appeals in equity,<sup>41</sup> within the time limited by the general orders.<sup>42</sup> Neither citation nor bond are jurisdictional<sup>43</sup> and defects therein may be cured after the time limited for appeal.<sup>44</sup> Rules applicable to other appeals obtain as to scope and necessity of record,<sup>45</sup> presumptions in favor of the ruling below,<sup>46</sup> scope of review generally,<sup>47</sup> and restriction of review to objections urged and passed on below.<sup>48</sup>

Order denying partnership creditor right to participate in the individual assets of the bankrupt until the individual creditors have first been paid, and no order was entered rejecting petitioner's claim, the order is reviewable on petition to review. Euclid Nat. Bk. v. Union Trust & Deposit Co. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 975. An order of a court of bankruptcy confirming an order of a referee denying a claim of certain exemptions asserted by the bankrupt's wife, not being an order specially appealable under Act 1898, § 25a, is reviewable on a petition to revise, presented within six months generally limited for invoking the appellate jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals. First Nat. Bk., 203 U. S. 141, 51 Law. Ed. 128. The allowance of an appeal from a circuit court of appeals on certificate of a justice of the supreme court cannot operate as an adjudication that such appeal is taken within thirty days allowed by the general orders. Caldwell [C. C. A.] 147 F. 475. No case will be heard on appeal until a complete record has been prepared by the clerk after he has been directed by counsel to do so, and unless the record contains in itself, and not by reference, all papers, exhibits, deposits, and other proceedings necessary to the hearing in the appellate court. Id. On appeal the record required to be certified and filed is the record of the case in the bankruptcy court. Id. In re Forth, 151 F. 951. In order to have a discharge for failure to keep books of account, it must be shown that the bankrupt not only failed to keep such books but that his omission to do so was with intent to conceal his financial condition. In re Garrison [C. C. A.] 149 F. 178. Failure of firm to keep books held not to bar discharge of nonresident member (Id.), and the burden is upon the opposing creditor to prove both propositions by convincing proof (Id.).

70. The provisions of the bankruptcy act barring a discharge, where the bankrupt has obtained property upon a materially false written statement, are not to receive the strict construction given to criminal statutes, but should receive a reasonable one to effectuate the intention of congress. In re Dresser [C. C. A.] 146 F. 332. Such intention is to deprive any bankrupt of the benefit of a discharge who has obtained property from any person by means of a written statement false in material matters; and within the fair meaning of the clause the statement is made to such person, if it was given to an agent for the purpose of using it in obtaining property for the bankrupt and if its contents were communicated by the agent to such person. Id. The words "such person" refer to the previous words "any person," and the statement is "made to such person" whenever it is made by the bankrupt himself or his duly authorized agent; and it is none the less "made," although the statement itself is not delivered, when its contents are correctly communicated by the agent. Id. The language of the clause does not necessarily import that the statement shall have been made for the purpose of inducing any particular person to rely on it. Id. It is the act of making the false statement to obtain credit and the fraudulent intent which constitute the ground for refusing the discharge, and the right to make the objection is not confined to the person defrauded, but may be made by any party in interest. In re A. B. Carton Co., 148 F. 63. A written financial statement made to a commercial agency, reciting that it is made as a basis of credit with associate members of such agency, and which is communicated to members, who extend credit on the faith of it, is equivalent to one made to them, and if materially false will bar a discharge. cated upon acts committed after the adjudication (In re Jacobs, 147 F. 797), but, if a concealment is initiated, with intent to defraud creditors, prior to the adjudication is continued thereafter, it is a "concealment" within the statute (Id.). Unaccounted for discrepancy of $15,000 in value of goods on hand before and after bankruptcy held to justify the inference that the bankrupts converted the goods into money and fraudulently and knowingly continued to conceal the same. Id. Evidence held not to sustain specification of objection on the ground of a fraudulent concealment of property, by causing stock in a corporation, in fact paid for by him, to be bought by his wife and held in trust for his benefit, but show that the stock was bought with the separate money of his wife. In re Tillyer, 147 F. 860. Where, acting under advice of counsel that policy of life insurance belonged to his wife, bankrupt failed to schedule same, but in his examinations disclosed its existence, and upon being ordered to do so delivered it to the trustee and paid its cash surrender value, held no fraudulent concealment barring discharge. In re Schofield, 147 F. 862. Evidence held insufficient to sustain objection that bankrupt had concealed assets. Troeder v. Lorsch [C. C. A.] 150 F. 710.

72. No more formal approval is required from the referee than the overruling of objections, if any are made, and the allowance of the questions. In re Weinreb [C. C. A.] 153 F. 363. And this is true though after the objection to the discharge is made he offers to answer the question. Id. The fact that the refusal of a bankrupt to answer material questions in the course of the proceedings which were approved by the referee was based on the claim of his constitutional privilege not to incriminate himself does not deprive the court of the right to deny him a discharge. In re Dresser [C. C. A.] 146 F. 383. That the testimony of the bankrupt was evasive and perhaps false in some particulars is insufficient to warrant the denial of a discharge. In re Cohen, 149 F. 908.

The discharge releases the bankrupt from all debts and claims which are made provable against his estate and which existed on the date the petition was filed, excepting only such debts as are exempted from the operation of the discharge by the bankruptcy act. Ruhl-Koblegard Co. v. Gillespie, 61 W. Va. 584, 56 S. E. 898. A duly scheduled claim is included in the discharge, whether proved or not. In re Kuffler, 153 F. 667.

75. A judgment in an action for breach of marriage promise in which there is no allegation of seduction or other wrong is a judgment in an action for breach of contract, and hence is not a judgment "for willful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another." Bond v. Milliken [Iowa] 109 N. W. 774. The exception of judgments in actions "for willful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another" extends to all actions in which the facts of intent and malice are judicially ascertained (Flanders v. Mullin [Vt.] 66 A. 789), but it would seem that something more than the ordinary finding of a willful and malicious act is required (Id.). A close jail certificate on an action for injuries sustained while undergoing a surgical operation, that the cause of action "arose from the willful and malicious act of the defendant and for willful injuries to the person of the plaintiff;" held sufficient to exempt judgment from the operation of the discharge. Id. As to whether there is such a finding is to be determined from the record as a whole. Id. A close jail certificate may be included in the consideration of the question. Id.

76. That a void claim was created by false pretenses does not create a debt which is not affected by the discharge. Loan of money contrary to statutory provisions. In re Home Discount Co., 147 F. 538. Claims for damages arising out of false and fraudulent representations inducing sales of merchandise may be proved as debts "founded upon an open account or upon a contract, expressed or implied," if the sellers had chosen to waive the law and take their places with the other creditors of the bankrupt estate, and are therefore barred by a discharge. Joslyn [Wash.] 88 P. 324. Judgment for obtaining property by false representations is not released. Lee v. Tarplin [Mass.] 79 N. E. 786. An action at law to recover a money judgment for a sum which the complaint alleges the defendant received as factor and agent of the plaintiff for the sale of goods, under a contract by which he was to bill the goods in his own name, collect the proceeds, and forthwith pay over the identical money so received to plaintiff, and which it is further alleged he misappropriated to his own use, is not one to recover a debt created by the defendant's fraud or misappropriation while acting in a fiduciary capacity. In re Adler [C. C. A.] 152 F. 422. Where one obtained sheep upon fraudulent representation that he would that day receive a check for more than the price of the sheep and would turn it over to the seller, held not discharged from debt. Rowell v. Ricker, 79 Vt. 552, 66 A. 569.

77. Contractual obligations in the nature of alimony are not released. The obligation incurred by a husband under a contract between himself and wife, made in contemas officer or fiduciary,<sup>78</sup> and debts not duly scheduled by the bankrupt.<sup>79</sup> Whatever the bankrupt is not required to surrender is his absolutely, freed from the enforcement of the obligation of his prior contracts, unless at the time of the filing of the petition it has taken the form of property, upon which a lien has fastened.<sup>80</sup> The adjudication of a debtor, followed by a discharge, takes away all remedy for the enforcement of the obligation of the contract concerning wages earned after his bankruptcy.<sup>81</sup> Security which was not affected by the bankruptcy proceeding may be enforced after the discharge.<sup>82</sup> A creditor's suit is an action in rem and not against plation of her obtaining a divorce, which she subsequently did, whereby he agreed to pay her a specified sum per month until her remarriage, is not discharged by his subsequent discharge in bankruptcy. Schlessinger v. Schlessinger [Colo.] 88 P. 970.

78. Forbes v. Keyes, 193 Mass. 38, 78 N. E. 733. The words "while acting as an officer or in any fiduciary capacity" extend to "fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation" as well as to "defalcation." Tindle v. Birkett, 205 U. S. 183, 51 Law. Ed. 762, afg. 183 N. Y. 267, 76 N. E. 25. A judgment obtained by a railroad company against a ticket agent for money collected by him for tickets sold and misappropriated will be released by a discharge. In re Wenhan, 153 F. 910. Money received from copartner as partnership capital pursuant to formation of a contemplated copartnership between the parties held received in a fiduciary capacity, the other partner dying immediately after making such payments. Haggerty v. Badkin [N. J. Eq.] 66 A. 420. 79. If the creditor has no notice or actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy, and the debt has not been duly scheduled, the discharge is not operative as against such creditor (Marshall v. English-American Loan & Trust Co., 127 Ga. 376, 56 S. E. 449), but mere want of notice or actual knowledge of the proceedings will not prevent the discharge if the debt has been duly scheduled (Id.). The debt and the name of the creditor being duly scheduled, the debt is released regardless of notice to the creditor (Beck & Gregg Hardware Co. v. Crum, 127 Ga. 94, 56 S. E. 242), and the burden would seem to be on the creditor that his name and the debt were not duly scheduled (Id.). Where the bankrupt fails to endeavor to learn the street address of a creditor, but simply states that his address is "Mulberry Street, New York City," and the creditor has no knowledge of the proceedings and receives no notice thereof, the debt is not discharged. Cagliostro v. Indelli, 53 Misc. 44, 102 N. Y. S. 918. The bankrupt having neither knowledge nor notice of an assignment of the indebtedness, a schedule of the same in the original creditor's name is sufficient (Mueller v. Goerlitz, 53 Misc. 53, 103 N. Y. S. 1037), and in this connection the recordation of the assignment is not generally deemed notice to the bankrupt (Id.). So held recordation of assignment of mortgage. Id. Where a creditor whose debt was not scheduled had such actual knowledge of the bankruptcy proceedings as to permit him to participate in all of the proceedings taken, with the exception of the choice of trustee, and the relative value of the creditor's claim as against the claims scheduled, the representatives of which chose the trustee, was such that the deprivation of that right could not be deemed the deprivation of a material right, the creditor's debt was discharged by the discharge in bankruptcy. Morrison v. Vaughn, 104 N. Y. S. 169. A debt is not duly scheduled when the creditor's office address, instead of his residence, is set forth in the schedule under the designation "residence." Weidenfeld v. Tillinghast, 104 N. Y. S. 902, afg. 104 N. Y. S. 712. Unless a debt is duly scheduled in time for proof and allowance, it is not affected by the discharge unless the creditor had actual notice or knowledge of the proceedings. Custard v. Wigderson, 130 Wis. 412, 110 N. W. 263. Where a creditor's name was scheduled as "Custard" instead of "Custard," his true name held not sufficiently scheduled as to be barred. Id. A discharge in bankruptcy is not effectual to discharge a claim for stockholders' statutory liability or unpaid stock subscription, was not properly scheduled, and no notice of the bankruptcy proceedings was served on a corporation, and there is no showing that the claim was ever liquidated. Roebeling Sons Co. v. Shawnee Valley Coal & Iron Co., 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 113. Giving name of creditor as to the English-American Trust Co., New York City, is not a sufficient scheduling of the claim of the English-American Loan & Trust Company of Atlanta, Ga. Marshall v. English-American Loan & Trust Co., 127 Ga. 376, 56 S. E. 449. The sureties on an appeal bond conditioned on the payment of the judgment appealed from, in the event of its affirmance, are not discharged from liability by appellant pending the appeal filing a petition in bankruptcy and obtaining a discharge subsequent to the affirmance of the judgment. Slusher v. Hopkins, 30 Ky. L. R. 257, 97 S. W. 1158. Under a state statute providing that the giving of a claimant's bond shall not release the levy of an execution, the debtor's discharge in proceedings instituted more than four months after the levy does not affect the right of the judgment creditor to recover on the claimant's bond. Bishop v. Hibben Dry Goods Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 725, 99 S. W. 644. Under Code 1896, § 493, authorizing a judgment against sureties on an appeal bond only in case the judgment appealed from is affirmed, the sureties on the appeal bond cannot be proceeded against where the judgment was barred by the discharge in bankruptcy of the principal debtor. Young & Co. v. Howe [Ala.] 43 So. 488. Discharge is a good defense to a suit brought by a surety on the defendant's bond as a trustee in bankruptcy in another bankruptcy estate, plaintiff having further become his surety upon notes at bank discounted to raise the money wherewith the defendant paid off a misappropriation of the funds of the bankrupt estate in his hands, and as such surety on the notes has had to pay them. Leinkauf v. Wellhouse [Ga. App.] 57 S. E. 961. Rule would have been otherwise but for note transaction. Id. A surety on an injunction bond, given in a suit brought to restrain the enforcement of a judgment, is not released from liability thereon by the discharge of his principal in bankruptcy. Stull v. Crockett, 117 App. Div. 269, 102 N. Y. S. 412. Partnership debts are discharged by the discharge in bankruptcy of an individual member of the firm, when the debts of the copartnership were listed in the schedules of the bankrupt and there are no assets of the firm. Berry Bros. v. Sheehan, 115 App. Div. 488, 101 N. Y. S. 371.

87. The effect of the discharge is to extinguish the debt (Moore v. Trounstone, 126 Ga. 116, 54 S. E. 810), and a promise by the debtor to revive the discharged debt must be clear, express, distinct, unequivocal, and without qualification or condition before it will be enforceable against him (Id.). 90. Farmers' & Merchants' Bk. v. Richards, 119 Mo. App. 18, 95 S. W. 290. Evidence that debtor repeatedly said "I will pay it," that is the debt, held sufficient. Id. It cannot be inferred from the mere fact that defendant paid interest on a note which he had previously scheduled in bankruptcy that the payment was made to protect real estate which was mortgaged to secure the note and which had been scheduled in the bankruptcy, and the title to which had consequently been divested from defendant. Stern v. Bradner, Smith & Co., 225 Ill. 430, 80 N. E. 307. The evidence of the subsequent promise to pay must be strong, positive, and unequivocal, both as to the identiditional, compliance with the condition must be plainly shown.<sup>91</sup> The new promise may be made after the adjudication, and before or after the discharge.<sup>92</sup> In some states such promises are required to be in writing.<sup>93</sup> The creditor may sue directly on the new promise, or, at his election, on the original debt, and reply the new promise to a plea of discharge.<sup>94</sup> Where a discharged bankrupt agreed to pay a discharged debt in monthly installments, the creditor, on default in such payments, could only recover the installments due to the date of the writ in his action.<sup>95</sup> The bankruptcy court being a court of record, proof of an order discharging the bankrupt raises the presumption that the court acquired jurisdiction, and that its proceedings were had in conformity to law,<sup>96</sup> and that a creditor had notice of the proceedings and of the scheduling of his debt;<sup>97</sup> and lapse of time strengthens the presumption.<sup>98</sup> Discharge cannot be collaterally attacked.<sup>99</sup>

Tabour*, 98 Minn. 248, 108 N. W. 808. In instructions on this subject the word "promised" implies a distinct, express, and unconditional promise. Stern v. Bradner, Smith & Co., 225 Ill. 430, 80 N. Where the bankrupt promises that as soon as he is able he will pay a debt barred by his discharge, it is necessary for plaintiff, in an action on the promise, to allege and prove that defendant is able to pay, and proof of ability to borrow money is not sufficient. Id. Where there is no showing that defendant has any means apart from his salary, and it is undisputed that that is required for the support of himself and family, held defendant was entitled to the affirmative charge if he requested it. Id. Held not error to exclude evidence of his ability to borrow money. Id. Held not error to ask defendant how much of his income was necessary for the support of himself and family. Id. Held not error to exclude testimony of defendant's earnings two years subsequent to the commencement of the suit. Id. Under such a promise the debtor is not required to gauge his family expenditures so as to obtain the means to meet the obligation. Id.

Leland*, 193 Mass. 576, 79 N. E. 793. Rev. St. 1899, § 3706, providing that parties may agree in writing for the payment of interest, not exceeding eight per cent per annum, on money due or to become due upon a contract, does not render an oral promise to pay a note bearing eight per cent interest per annum, made after the maker's discharge in bankruptcy, unenforceable. *Farmers' & Merchants' Bk. v. Evidence held insufficient to sustain finding of illegitimacy of child of married woman born 241 days after death of husband, notwithstanding evidence of nonaccess for three months prior to his death where there was possibility of access within period of gestation, and witnesses to contrary were biased and hostile. 5. Lynch v. Knoop, 118 La. 611, 43 So. 252. Where there was no proof of marriage of decedent and claimant's mother, the mere fact that in his will decedent spoke of him as "my son" is not sufficient proof of legitimacy. In re Wharton's Estate [Pa.] 67 A. 414.

tending to prove the adultery of the mother is not competent to prove that a child born within the usual period of gestation thereafter is illegitimate;<sup>9</sup> hence in an action for divorce a finding against the libelee's contention of condonation by subsequent intercourse does not bastardize a child born after the entry of a decree nisi.<sup>10</sup> The offspring of void marriage are illegitimate.<sup>11</sup>

§ 2. Rights and duties of and in respect to bastards.<sup>12</sup>—Under the Louisiana Code providing for action for wrongful death, the natural mother of a bastard cannot maintain an action for its wrongful death,<sup>13</sup> even though the child were acknowledged,<sup>14</sup> but an action for the wrongful death of a legitimate bastard may be maintained.<sup>15</sup> The right of the natural mother of an illegitimate child to its custody and control is superior to that of any one other than the putative father,<sup>16</sup> unless surrendered or forfeited,<sup>17</sup> and in Arkansas it is held that her right is even superior to that of the father<sup>18</sup> provided she is not incompetent and is capable of supporting it.<sup>19</sup> The pendency of bastardy proceedings against the defendant is not ground for the abatement of a criminal proceeding for refusal to support the child.<sup>20</sup>

The inheritable rights of the mother<sup>21</sup> or the surviving spouse<sup>22</sup> of a bastard, in its estate, and the inheritable rights of a bastard in the estate of his putative father,<sup>23</sup> or collateral legitimates<sup>24</sup> or illegitimates by the same mother,<sup>25</sup> is largely a matter of statutory regulation.

16. Hesselman v. Haas [N. J. Eq.] 64 A. 165.

17. Where a mother maintained a child for over three years after its birth when from stress of circumstances she was compelled to abandon it, offering to consent to its adoption by a fit person, the fact that the child's custodian turned it over to a third person who maintained it for seven years did not entitle such third person to the custody of the child as against the mother where such action on the part of the custodian was without the mother's consent and where the latter had no knowledge of the child's whereabouts for over six years, though she made constant efforts to find it. Hesselman v. Haas [N. J. Eq.] 64 A. 165. The fact that when a bastard child was nine months old the mother surrendered it to the care of another who maintained it for over ten years does not deprive the mother of the right to its custody where at the expiration of that period the custodian surrendered the child to the mother on the latter's promise to pay for past support, which promise she did not keep. Lipsey v. Battle, 80 Ark. 287, 97 S. W. 49. Where a bastard child was committed to the State Board of Charity, evidence that the mother made only a few cursory inquiries, the last about two years prior to the filing of a petition for its adoption, and that she made no objection to the adjudication, of commitment, though notified of the proceeding, is sufficient to sustain a finding that she suffered her child to be supported as a pauper for more than two years prior to the filing of the petition. Purinton v. Jamrock [Mass.] 80 N. E. 892.

20. State v. Veres, 75 Ohio St. 138, 78 N. E. 1005.

21. Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 46, § 30, mother of illegitimate child dying without descendants or brothers or sisters may inherit both his real and personal estate. The fact that the law was codified under the article dealing with "Inheritance," instead of under that treating of "Distribution" and that the word "inherit" as used, does not limit her right of inheritance to the realty only. Reese v. Starner [Md.] 66 A. 443.

22. Art. 93, § 119, Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, providing that where the decedent leaves no issue, parent, grandchild, brother, or sister, etc., the surviving husband or wife shall be entitled to the whole of his estate, must be construed with art. 46, § 30, allowing the mother to inherit the estate of her bastard child, hence in such case the widow and the mother of a bastard are entitled to an equal share of his estate. Reese v. Starner [Md.] 66 A. 443. Under a statute providing that upon the death of an unacknowledged bastard without issue the estate shall pass to the mother, or on her demise to her heirs, the separate estate of an illegitimate daughter, who has not been acknowledged, and who dies without issue, passes to the heirs of her deceased mother and not to a surviving husband, notwithstanding the fact that another section provides that where the decedent leaves a surviving husband, but neither issue nor parents, the entire estate shall pass to the husband. Civ. Code, § 1388, provides a rule of succession for a special case, and hence is not controlled by §§ 1386 and 1387. In re De Cigaran's Estate [Cal.] 89 P. 833.

23. A bastard cannot inherit from his putative father. Moore v. Moore, 30 Ky. L. R. 383, 98 S. W. 1027.

Contracts for support.<sup>26</sup>—The father of illegitimate children is under a natural obligation to support them,<sup>27</sup> and an agreement by him to support the mother and illegitimate children in consideration of her promise not to institute bastardy proceedings is not void as against public policy,<sup>28</sup> nor is it void because founded upon past illicit relations,<sup>29</sup> but the burden is upon the claimant to establish such a contract.<sup>30</sup>

§ 3. Procedure to ascertain paternity and compel support.<sup>31</sup>—Proceedings under the bastardy act are in some states in the nature of civil proceedings,<sup>32</sup> hence a verdict of "not guilty" may be set aside as a verdict in a civil proceeding,<sup>33</sup> and a statute providing that the verdict shall be final has been construed as not preventing its being set aside.<sup>34</sup> The fact that the child was born dead does not deprive the mother of the right to institute proceedings.<sup>35</sup> An action for damages for breach of a contract to support the mother and illegitimate children is not a bastardy proceeding.<sup>36</sup>

Jurisdiction.<sup>37</sup>—In Massachusetts the superior court has jurisdiction and proceedings may be brought to a hearing in a county or judicial district in which either the complainant or the defendant resides.<sup>38</sup> A bond conditioned upon the appearance of the defendant after the birth of the child is void, no date being named,<sup>39</sup> and, where the defendant was released on such a bond, such release does not deprive the magistrate of jurisdiction to issue a second warrant for his arrest.<sup>40</sup> Statutory provisions requiring the examination of the complainant on the preliminary examination are not jurisdictional and may be waived.<sup>41</sup>

Abatement.<sup>42</sup>—A statutory provision that the mother shall be examined in the presence of the defendant is for the sole protection of the latter, and the intervening death of the mother does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to proceed.<sup>43</sup> bastard shall be capable of inheriting and transmitting any inheritance on the part of, or to the mother, and bastards of the same mother shall be capable of inheriting and transmitting an inheritance on the part of, or to each other, as if such bastards were born in lawful wedlock. Overton v. Overton, 29 Ky. L. R. 736, 96 S. W. 469.

43. Bennett v. Briggs [N. J. Law] 65 A. 717.

Trial procedure; pleading; indictment.<sup>45</sup>—The affidavit need not specifically allege that prosecutrix is pregnant with a bastard child,<sup>46</sup> but must allege that defendant is the father of the child.<sup>47</sup> Under the New Jersey statute it is duty of the magistrate to proceed to determine the matter without unnecessary delay, although the child is not yet born,<sup>48</sup> but he has power to adjourn the proceedings for a period of not exceeding six weeks.<sup>49</sup> Evidence essential to the complainant's case must be introduced in chief.<sup>50</sup> Instructions must be consistent<sup>51</sup> and must not be of such a character as to allow a verdict of guilty on mere conjecture.<sup>52</sup> It is improper to instruct the jury as to the effect of conviction upon the defendant<sup>53</sup> or the relative importance of the rights of the state and the defendant.<sup>54</sup> Under the Nebraska statute, when requested by the defendant, it is the duty of the court to give an instruction as to the credibility of the testimony of the prosecutrix so far as applicable to the evidence.<sup>55</sup>

Evidence; presumptions; sufficiency of proof.<sup>56</sup>—Where from complainant's testimony as to the date of intercourse it appears that the child must have been of premature birth, the burden is upon the complainant to prove that it was prematurely born.<sup>57</sup> Evidence of sexual intercourse with another within the period of gestation is admissible,<sup>58</sup> but evidence of intercourse without such period is inadmissible to contradict the evidence of the prosecutrix that she had never had intercourse with any one other than the defendant<sup>59</sup> or to show intercourse with the defendant at such time.<sup>60</sup> Evidence that another was going with the prosecutrix at a time not within the period of gestation is not admissible.<sup>61</sup> Ordinarily a preponderance of the evidence suffices,<sup>62</sup> but some courts require proof beyond a reasonable doubt.<sup>63</sup> The defendant must be acquitted unless it is shown that he had intercourse with the prosecutrix within the period of gestation,<sup>64</sup> though the evidence need not always establish the exact time or the exact circumstances,<sup>65</sup> and if upon

46. Affidavit alleging that prosecutrix is a single woman and is in a pregnant condition, and that defendant, a man, "is the cause of said pregnancy," and that he did impregnate her, sufficiently alleges the illegitimacy of the child. Allred v. State [Ala.] 44 So. 60.

47. Affidavit that prosecutrix is a single woman and is pregnant, and that defendant, a man, is the cause of said pregnancy, and that he did impregnate her, sufficiently charges the defendant with being the father of the child. Allred v. State [Ala.] 44 So. 60.

48. It is improper to release the defendant upon a bond conditioned upon his appearance after birth of child. Bennett v. Briggs [N. J. Law] 65 A. 717.

49. On such adjournment, defendant may be released upon bond for appearance on adjourned day. Bennett v. Briggs [N. J. Law] 65 A. 717.

50. Where burden was upon complainant to establish premature birth of child, it was improper to allow evidence tending to show such fact upon rebuttal. Soucek v. Karr [Neb.] 111 N. W. 150.

51. Instructions as to right to acquittal, if the jury did not find that the sexual act took place on day alleged, held inconsistent. Menn v. State [Wis.] 112 N. W. 38.

52. Where evidence tended to show intercourse on a certain day only, an instruction authorizing a verdict of guilty if the jury found that the sexual act took place on some other day is erroneous. Menn v. State [Wis.] 112 N. W. 38.

53, 54. Menn v. State [Wis.] 112 N. W. 38.

55. Sec. 5, c. 37, Comp. St. 1903 (6254 Cobbe's Ann St. 1903). Stoltenberg v. State [Neb.] 106 N. W. 975. Where there is variance between complainant's testimony on preliminary examination and that given on trial, it is error to refuse such instruction. Quinn v. Eggleston [Neb.] 106 N. W. 976.

56. See 7 C. L. 422.

57. Child born less than 252 days after intercourse. Soucek v. Karr [Neb.] 111 N. W. 150.

58, 59. Allred v. State [Ala.] 44 So. 60.

60. Letters written by prosecutrix to defendant indicating fondness for him are inadmissible where defendant denies intercourse within period of gestation and the letters were written before commencement of that period. Allred v. State [Ala.] 44 So. 60.

61. Allred v. State [Ala.] 44 So. 60.

62. Soucek v. Karr [Neb.] 111 N. W. 150.

63. Evidence held sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty. Menn v. State [Wis.] 112 N. W. 38.

64. Held reversible error to refuse such an instruction. Allred v. State [Ala.] 44 So. 60.

65. But if the evidence conclusively shows that the intercourse, if it took place at all, took place on a certain day, that fact the whole evidence the defendant's guilt is doubtful or he cannot reasonably be said to be guilty he must be acquitted.<sup>66</sup>

Judgment and bond.<sup>67</sup>—The purpose of the bastardy law is to protect the county from the expense of maintaining the mother during the lying in period and child after its birth,<sup>68</sup> hence, where the proceeding is commenced before the birth of the child, the bond must cover the mother's lying in expenses,<sup>69</sup> but if commenced after the birth of the child, and the mother has recovered, the bond need only indemnify the county against a charge for the education and maintenance of the child until it arrives at the statutory age.<sup>70</sup>

Commitment and discharge.<sup>71</sup>—Under a statute directing commitment on default in the payment of a fine imposed, the court is without authority to require the defendant to do work on the public roads.<sup>72</sup> The word "fine" as used in the North Carolina bastardy act is used in the sense of a criminal punishment,<sup>73</sup> and consequently it cannot be imposed where the issue submitted is tried like the issues in other civil actions.<sup>74</sup>

Bonds for support.<sup>75</sup>—An indemnity bond cannot be required where the child is still-born.<sup>76</sup>

Review.—An order refusing a petition to frame an issue in proceedings to determine the paternity of a child is merely interlocutory and no appeal will lie therefrom.<sup>77</sup>

must be established. Menn v. State [Wis.] 112 N. W. 38.

84. It is sufficient if the acknowledgment be made in any written instrument, collateral or otherwise, signed by the party, in the presence of a competent witness, in which he clearly and specifically acknowledges that he is the father of the child. So held where the acknowledgment was made in a lease to a bastard daughter. In re Pederson's Estate [Minn.] 106 N. W. 958.

85. Frequent acknowledgment of paternity of a child "back in Illinois" with occasional references to its place of residence and the name of one of the mother's relatives, and declarations of the settlement of ment of paternity by the putative father shall legitimize the child, the children of an acknowledged bastard dying before his father may inherit from the latter.<sup>86</sup>

bastardy proceedings against him coinciding with the settlement in the particular case, held sufficient. Morgan v. Strand [Iowa] 110 N. W. 596.

86. Evidence held sufficient to show an acknowledgment of paternity of a bastard by an unmarried man by publicly acknowledging it as his own, receiving it into his family, and otherwise treating it as if it were a legitimate child. In re Garr's Estate [Utah] 86 P. 757.

3. Playing craps with dice within ten feet of the front door of a private residence is not an offense. Young v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 93, 97 S. W. 90.

4. The back room of a shop in which the owner who had been separated from his wife lived alone is not a "private residence occupied by a family" within Acts 1901, p. 26, c. 22, arts. 379, 381, and the fact that an adult son occasionally stayed with him does not make it such. Beard v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 101 S. W. 796.

5. It is an offense to play cards, even without betting, at any place except a private residence occupied by a family. Art.

to dice games<sup>6</sup> where a private residence is commonly resorted to for the purpose of gambling, games of chance played therein come within the statutory inhibition.<sup>7</sup> A crap table is a gambling device within the Missouri statute.<sup>8</sup>

Racing and race tracks.<sup>9</sup>—In some states horse racing is considered a sport and, therefore, not within a statute prohibiting betting on games of skill or hazard.<sup>10</sup> The selling of pools on horse races does not come within the inhibition of a statute relating to the playing of games for money by gambling devices.<sup>11</sup> A statute prohibiting racing for bets, except for premiums offered by authorized corporations, does not authorize betting on the result of trials of speed of horses for premiums given by such a corporation.<sup>12</sup>

Slot machines.<sup>13</sup>—A slot machine is a banking game<sup>14</sup> and is a gambling device within Texas statute, though so constructed that the operator cannot lose,<sup>15</sup> but under the California statute is not a prohibited gambling device unless played for "money, checks, credits, or other representatives of value."<sup>16</sup>

Gaming at public place.<sup>19</sup>—Gambling in public constitutes an indictable public nuisance at common law and under statutes relating to such nuisances,<sup>20</sup> but the burden is upon the state to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the place was a public one.<sup>21</sup> The place must be of an inhibited character at the time of the act complained of.<sup>22</sup>

Keeping a gaming place.<sup>23</sup>—Irrespective of statute, the keeping of a common gaming house is indictable as a public nuisance,<sup>24</sup> but in most states it is a statutory crime to keep a gaming house, or knowingly<sup>25</sup> to permit of the use of premises

20. Selling pools at a horse race attended by the public constitutes a public nuisance punishable at common law and under a statute relating to public nuisances tending to grossly injure or openly outrage public decency. State v. Ayers [Or.] 88 P. 653.

21. Evidence that the game was played by two persons in the woods at night, about 150 yards from a church in which religious services were being held and from which the place of the game could not be seen, held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Bradford v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 1024.

22. Under Cr. Code 1896, § 4792, prohibiting gaming with dice in a storehouse for the selling or giving away of intoxicating liquors, gaming in a bar room which had been closed for the transaction of business and used exclusively as a private storehouse does not come within the inhibition. Brogden v. State [Ala.] 44 So. 403.

23. See 7 C. L. 437.

24. State v. Vaughan [Ark.] 98 S. W. 685.

25. Under a statute making it a crime to knowingly rent premises for gambling purposes, the state must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the lessor had such knowledge at the time of the execution of the lease. Actual as distinguished from

in the possession or under the control of the defendant for gambling purposes,<sup>26</sup> but in such case defendant must have some right or power over or in the premises for the time being.<sup>27</sup> A single offense is sufficient to sustain a conviction.<sup>28</sup> There must be some act of proprietorship in connection with the keeping of a gaming house,<sup>29</sup> hence merely taking part as a player in a gaming house does not render the player guilty of the offense of keeping such a house;<sup>30</sup> but one doing any act connected with keeping or maintaining it and in aid thereof, may be convicted as the proprietor of the enterprise.<sup>31</sup> It must be shown that the place is in fact a common gaming house.<sup>32</sup> Under a statute making it a crime to keep or permit of the occupation of a room with devices for registering bets on races, the offense is complete when the room is so occupied by any person whether any bets are recorded within the state,<sup>33</sup> but occupation with books, instruments, or other devices for registering bets is essential.<sup>34</sup>

(§ 1) B. Indictment or information and trial procedure.<sup>35</sup>—An indictment in the language of the statute is sufficient.<sup>36</sup> and, where separate offenses were committed at the same time and are part of the same transaction, an indictment setting them up is not bad on the ground of duplicity.<sup>37</sup> An indictment in the alternative is bad.<sup>38</sup> An indictment for maintaining a gaming table need not describe the character of the table.<sup>39</sup> Under the Missouri statute an indictment for permitting the use of a room for the purpose of selling pools and registering bets should name the person permitted to use same, or if his name is unknown that fact should be alleged,<sup>40</sup> and must allege that such person occupied such room with a book, in-constructive knowledge must be shown. Flynn v. People, 123 Ill. App. 591.

26. The occupation of a booth underneath the grandstand at a race track constitutes a "room" within the meaning of Laws 1905, p. 131, making it a felony to permit such occupation for the purpose of selling pools on races. State v. Oldham, 200 Mo. 538, 98 S. W. 497.

27. A conviction for permitting a gaming table to be set up in premises in possession or control of defendant cannot be sustained where evidence shows that at the time the premises were in control of the owner through his representative, though defendant was present and operated a gaming table. Nelson v. U. S., 28 App. D. C. 32.

28. Nelson v. U. S., 28 App. D. C. 32.

30, 31. White v. State, 127 Ga. 273, 56 S. E. 425.

32. Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction for keeping a gaming house. Hicks v. State [Ga. App.] 57 S. E. 958. Showing that on several occasions sounds indicating a game of some sort on defendant's premises were heard, that several men were playing cards in a room therein with money on the table which they tried to hide, held sufficient to sustain a conviction of keeping a common gaming house. Commonwealth v. Charlie Joe, 193 Mass. 383, 79 N. E. 737.

33. Laws 1905, p. 131. State v. Oldham, 200 Mo. 538, 98 S. W. 497.

34. A blackboard on which the names of horses and odds given were written, and numbered tickets issued on admission to the track, do not constitute a book, and a private telephone by which bets were transmitted to a bookmaker in another state does not constitute a device for the registration of bets within the statute: State v. Oldham, 200 Mo. 538, 98 S. W. 497.

35. See 7 C. L. 438.

36. An indictment charging defendant with keeping a gaming house need not negative games not only not forbidden but expressly allowed by statute. State v. Yoe [S. C.] 56 S. E. 542. An indictment in the words of the statute for permitting gambling on premises controlled by defendant need not allege that gaming was permitted with the knowledge of defendant. Bunnell v. Com., 30 Ky. L. R. 491, 99 S. W. 237.

37. An indictment charging defendant with keeping a gaming table and gambling devices, cards and poker chips, is not bad on the ground of duplicity, though each is a distinct offense. Irvin v. State [Fla.] 41 So. 785.

38. An indictment charging that defendant bet at a certain "gaming table or bank, to wit, a pool table," is bad. Taylor v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 580, 95 S. W. 119; Moore v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 100 S. W. 1161.

39. The use to which the table is put and not its character or construction determines its illegality. Irvin v. State [Fla.] 41 So. 785.

40. Laws 1905, p. 131, provides (1) that any person who keeps any room, etc., within the state and occupies the same with any book or device to register bets on speed contests to take place within or without the state, or (3), being the owner, lessee, occupant, or person in charge thereof, knowingly permits the same to be used or occupied for any such purpose, etc., shall be guilty of a felony. Held the third subdivision must be construed with reference to the strument, or device for the purpose of recording or registering bets.<sup>41</sup> An indictment for betting at a card game played at a private residence need not allege the name of the owner of the residence,<sup>42</sup> nor that any particular thing was bet.<sup>43</sup> Defendant cannot be convicted of a violation of the statute different from that set up in the indictment.<sup>44</sup> In a prosecution for permitting and suffering gaming on premises under the control of the defendant, the court should instruct the jury as to the meaning of the words "suffer" and "permit" where defendant is not shown to have had actual knowledge of the gambling.<sup>45</sup>

§ 2. Penalties and seizure of implements.<sup>46</sup>—An act authorizing the summary seizure and destruction of gambling instruments and devices is valid,<sup>47</sup> and is not unconstitutional as depriving a person of his property without due process of law.<sup>48</sup> No cause of action can be predicated upon the taking, damaging, or destroying of gambling instrumentalities,<sup>49</sup> and replevin will not lie to recover gambling instruments and devices seized by the sheriff which can be used for no lawful purpose.<sup>50</sup> The keeping of a common gaming house being an indictable public nuisance, equity will not enjoin it.<sup>51</sup>

§ 3. Recovery back of money lost.<sup>52</sup>—The parties being in pari delicto at common law, no action could be maintained to recover back money lost in gambling, but this rule does not apply where there was in fact no bet but merely a fraud in the guise of a bet,<sup>53</sup> and in such case all participants in the fraud are liable.<sup>54</sup> nor does the rule apply where the money or property lost did not belong to the loser,<sup>55</sup> and as an action to recover same is not based upon an account the defendant is not entitled to an itemized bill of particulars.<sup>56</sup> Ordinarily, in the absence of contrary understanding, the stakeholder has implied power to decide which party has won upon the happening of the contingency.<sup>57</sup> In the absence of statute, money paid by a stakeholder without notice of disaffirmance from the loser cannot be re-first, and the indictment must name the person permitted to use such room or allege that his name is unknown. State v. Oldham, 200 Mo. 538, 98 S. W. 497.

53. Several conspirators induced plaintiff to bet on a race by advising him that the race was "fixed" and that the man upon whom plaintiff bet would win; the outcome of the race was in fact "fixed" but in such a way that plaintiff's man would lose. Held that, defendants having perpetrated numerous frauds of a similar character as a matter of public policy, plaintiff could recover. Hobbs v. Boatright, 195 Mo. 693, 93 S. W. 934. Evidence held sufficient to sustain a verdict that plaintiff was deprived of his money in a bogus poker game. Bynum v. Brady [Ark.] 100 S. W. 66.

A bank which, knowing of the fraudulent scheme, lent its financial influence to defendants and added them in the exchange and transfer of money and checks was held liable, though it was not shown that it received any portion of the gains. Hobbs v. Boatright, 195 Mo. 693, 93 S. W. 934. All participants in fraudulent scheme to deprive a person of his money by means of fake poker game are liable in an action by the loser for the money lost, although some of them did not win. Bynum v. Brady [Ark.] 100 S. W. 66.

covered,<sup>58</sup> and a general claim by the loser that he has won does not constitute notice of disaffirmance.<sup>59</sup> Statutes in many states authorize the recovery of money lost in gambling, but such an action must be brought by the owner.<sup>60</sup> The principal to whom the money was lost, the assignee of the principal, and the owner of the property, may be properly joined in such an action.<sup>61</sup> The property lost must be sufficiently described in the complaint,<sup>62</sup> and the plaintiff must establish that defendant was the winner<sup>63</sup> and the amount of money lost.<sup>64</sup>

BIGAMY.

The offense.<sup>65</sup>—A statute punishing bigamy irrespective of the state in which the prior marriage was consummated is constitutional.<sup>66</sup> Congress having defined and provided for the punishment of bigamy in the territories, conviction therefor cannot be had under a territorial act.<sup>67</sup> The offense is complete where a man whose wife is living enters into a second marriage with another woman.<sup>68</sup> A common-law marriage will sustain a conviction in states where such marriages are regarded as valid.<sup>69</sup> Where a prior marriage was a nullity, a subsequent marriage is not bigamous.<sup>70</sup> Intent is immaterial.<sup>71</sup> Duress is not a defense unless personal and existing at the time of the second marriage.<sup>72</sup>

The indictment<sup>73</sup> need not allege matters of defense<sup>74</sup> and is sufficient if in the words of the statute.<sup>75</sup> Under a statute punishing bigamy, though the marriage was entered into in another state, the indictment need not allege where the second marriage took place,<sup>76</sup> nor need it allege in what county the offense was committed.<sup>77</sup>

Main* [Ariz.] 89 P. 508.

Evidence that the "dealer" and "banker" were employees of the proprietor, that money taken in on a crap table was placed in a drawer until taken charge of by the proprietor, held sufficient to show that the money was lost to the latter. Clark v. Slaughter, 129 Wis. 642, 109 N. W. 556. Evidence held sufficient to sustain a verdict for plaintiff, the only issue being as to which of two defendants won the money, one being solvent and the other insolvent. Lacey v. Bentley [Colo.] 89 P. 789.

71. An honest belief in the death of the first wife is not a defense where the second marriage takes place prior to the expiration of the statutory period. Parnell v. State, 126 Ga. 103, 54 S. E. 804. Vt. St. 5059 provides that a husband marrying a second time shall not be guilty of bigamy where his first wife was continuously beyond the seas or without the state for a period of seven years, and the second marriage was entered into in ignorance of the fact that she was still alive. Held a belief that the first wife was dead is not a defense where the second marriage occurred prior to the expiration of seven years. State v. Ackerly, 79 Vt. 69, 64 A. 450.

Evidence and instructions.<sup>78</sup>—The state must establish the validity of a prior marriage,<sup>79</sup> as it will not be presumed,<sup>80</sup> the identity of the defendant as one of the parties thereto,<sup>81</sup> that the former wife was living at the time of the bigamous marriage,<sup>82</sup> and the existence of a second marriage.<sup>83</sup> The burden is upon the defendant to establish all matters of confession and avoidance.<sup>84</sup> In Texas a certified copy of a marriage license is inadmissible unless the original is filed and notice thereof is given to the accused three days before the trial.<sup>85</sup>

Bigamy being a crime against the marriage relation and not a crime committed by one spouse against the other the wife is incompetent to testify against the husband,<sup>86</sup> but there is a variety of views as to the principles which ought to determine this question. Letters from defendant to an alleged former wife are inadmissible,<sup>87</sup> but it is not error for the state to call as a witness the former wife of defendant where she was not questioned and did not testify.<sup>88</sup>

BLACKMAIL.<sup>89</sup>

Extortion under color of office<sup>90</sup> and the offense of making threats without intent to extort<sup>91</sup> are elsewhere treated.

To constitute the statutory offense three things are essential, a threat to do one or more of the things specified in the statute, the existence of fear induced by such threats, and the obtaining of money or property of another with his consent induced by such fear or threat.<sup>92</sup> Extortion under threats of physical injury or death,<sup>93</sup> or criminal prosecution,<sup>94</sup> or any public accusation,<sup>95</sup> is blackmail and a threat to file a formal complaint is unnecessary.<sup>96</sup> A threat to expose criminal relations existing between a married man and a single woman is sufficient to constitute the offense,<sup>97</sup> and where defendant brought about the compromising situation and accepted money for his promised silence, he is guilty though he did not expressly threaten exposure.<sup>98</sup> In such case the illicit relations between the parties involved by the threatened exposure is immaterial.<sup>99</sup> Extorting money under threat to call a strike is a crime under the New York statute,<sup>1</sup> and evidence that the calling of a strike would have resulted in injury to the person threatened is sufficient though the extent is not shown.<sup>2</sup> The state must not only establish threats<sup>3</sup> placing the person threatened in fear,<sup>4</sup> but it must show that defendant intended that they should have that result,<sup>5</sup> except in Minnesota, where obtaining money by means of a threat is the gist of the offense and intent need not be proved as an independent fact.<sup>6</sup> The essential facts constituting the crime being established, intent will be presumed.<sup>7</sup> Evidence of similar threats is admissible as showing intent<sup>8</sup> and the existence of a preconceived plan.<sup>9</sup> The ownership of money turned over pursuant to threats is immaterial.<sup>10</sup> The question of whether the threat was calculated to unsettle and overcome the mind of the person threatened is properly left to the jury.<sup>11</sup> The court need not instruct the jury as to the meaning of the word "extort."<sup>12</sup>

Consideration.<sup>22</sup>—A consideration is necessary,<sup>23</sup> and in jurisdictions where the seal is only presumptive evidence of consideration, want of consideration may be shown,<sup>24</sup> in which case the bond is unenforceable,<sup>25</sup> but at common law a bond, because of its seal, conclusively imports a consideration.<sup>26</sup>

Execution.<sup>27</sup>—The order of the different steps in the execution of a bond is immaterial if they are all parts of one transaction.<sup>28</sup> A bond purporting to be the obligation of one as principal and others as sureties but which has been executed only by the sureties does not upon its face show any obligation on the part of the sureties,<sup>29</sup> but failure of the obligee to sign his acceptance as provided in the bond does not invalidate if acceptance is otherwise shown.<sup>30</sup> The absence of witnesses is not fatal though the bond may be signed by mark only,<sup>31</sup> and the contract may still stand as a promise to pay though a clause waiving exemptions may be void for want of execution of the agreement according to statute.<sup>32</sup>

Delivery.<sup>33</sup>—While upon proof that a bond was delivered after its date it is presumed that it was intended to take effect from delivery only, such presumption is inapplicable where it satisfactorily appears from its terms that it was intended to take effect from its date or some other time.<sup>34</sup> If a bond complete upon its face is delivered to an obligee who is without knowledge of any equities, a surety may not defend on the ground that it was given by him to his cosurety on an express condition,<sup>35</sup> but if the bond is irregular on its face,<sup>36</sup> as where it is not acknowledged as required by law,<sup>37</sup> the obligee is put upon inquiry as to whether it was signed upon condition.<sup>38</sup>

§ 2. Rights of parties and transferees.<sup>39</sup>

§ 3. Terms and conditions in general; interpretation and legal effect.<sup>40</sup>—The extent of the obligation assumed must be determined from a fair consideration of the terms of the bond and the instrument which it secures.<sup>41</sup> A contract which by the terms of a bond is made a part thereof is as much a part of the bond as if copied therein at length.<sup>42</sup> When a statutory bond is given, that which is not expressed but should have been will be deemed included, and unnecessary matters will be excluded if it is sufficiently clear from the bond itself that the parties intended to comply with the law in its execution.<sup>43</sup> Coupons draw interest after maturity without demand of payment where a provision for payment at a certain bank is rendered unimportant by failure to place funds there to meet a demand.<sup>44</sup>

§ 4. Remedies and procedure.<sup>45</sup>—Persons for whose benefit a bond was made may sue thereon in the name of the obligee,<sup>46</sup> and where there has been a mistake in the name of the obligee, the true obligee may sue by alleging and proving such fact, even as against the sureties,<sup>47</sup> but one to whom a bond is given merely as an officer of a society has no right of action thereon as an individual.<sup>48</sup> A statute authorizing the bringing of a new action after the running of limitations where a plaintiff fails otherwise than on the merits and his action was brought in time applies to an action on a bond authorized and required to be given by a subsequent statute providing that an action thereon must be brought within a specified time.<sup>49</sup>

51. Allegation that defendant executed the instrument by having his name signed thereto and making his mark held not necessary to show that there was no witness to the instrument so as to render it demurrable. Penton v. Williams [Ala.] 43 So. 211.

52. That every condition was fulfilled all things happened, and all times elapsed necessary to recovery, held not to show due the part of defendant.<sup>53</sup> Where a second bond is given which is merely a renewal of the first and cumulative in its effect, it is proper to set them both forth in the pleading.<sup>54</sup> A declaration setting out the bond, the contract it was given to secure, a breach thereof, and also a former decree against the principals, is not bad for duplicity.<sup>55</sup> Where the bond is the gist of the action, a plea of nil debet is improper,<sup>56</sup> and a plea of non est factum must be verified.<sup>57</sup> The bond must be regarded as the act of defendant, its execution not having been put in issue by a plea of non est factum.<sup>58</sup>

The burden is on plaintiff to prove a breach.<sup>59</sup> Sureties may testify that in signing and leaving the bond with the obligees they did not intend to deliver it as binding on them without the principal's signature.<sup>60</sup> In an action on an injunction bond, it is proper to introduce the proceedings and decree in the injunction suit.<sup>61</sup> A decree against the principal is prima facie evidence of the amount due in an action against the sureties who had notice of the proceeding against the principal.<sup>62</sup>

Where defendant sets up that seals were affixed to the instrument sued on without authority, an instruction that the bond is presumed correct being regular on its face, and that the burden is on defendant to show that it was not properly sealed, should not be construed as relieving plaintiff of proving the due execution of the bond.<sup>63</sup>

Judgment and damages.<sup>64</sup>—Where a bond is executed subject to the terms and conditions of a statute providing that in case of breach the full amount thereof shall be recovered as liquidated damages, such provision cannot be defeated because of hardship or because public officials may have given such bonds a different construction.<sup>65</sup>

§ 1. Rules for locating and identifying.<sup>66</sup>—In determining the location of a boundary all calls must be given some effect if possible,<sup>67</sup> but a call may be rejected if necessary to reconcile a description,<sup>68</sup> or a discordant call may be ignored,<sup>69</sup> or two calls may be read as one.<sup>70</sup> A course omitted in a deed to a lot may be supplied from the description in the deed to an adjoining lot.<sup>71</sup> In determining the location of a boundary from a description in a deed, the general rules as to the construction of deeds apply,<sup>72</sup> and a particular description will be held to modify a general one.<sup>73</sup> Calls may be reversed where all monuments called for, except the final one, have disappeared,<sup>74</sup> or where to do so will reconcile or make clear the calls,<sup>75</sup> or harmonize the area of land embraced with that called for.<sup>76</sup> The primary rules for locating city plats upon the ground are: First. Find the lines actually run and the corners and monuments actually established by the original survey.<sup>77</sup> Second. Run lines from known, established or acknowledged corners and monuments of the original survey.<sup>78</sup> Third. Run lines according to courses and distances marked on the plat.<sup>79</sup>

If the original corner of a quarter section has been preserved, it marks one of the points from which the dividing line between quarter sections must be run.<sup>80</sup> But if it is lost it must be established according to the rules laid down by the Department of the Interior for the establishment of lost corners, or some other rule producing an equitable result.<sup>81</sup> The lost corners of a boundary may not be fixed by adhering to the description without regard to topography.<sup>82</sup> It is presumed that a county surveyor placed corner stakes as required by statute.<sup>83</sup> Where a subdivision of land containing an excess in area is divided, each grantee is entitled to a proportionate part of the excess.<sup>84</sup> The rule that the excess is to be added to or the deficiency sub-

66. See 7 C. L. 446.

67. Where three corners are lost, the distances of the three lines will be altered proportionately to make them conform to the known parts of the boundary rather than radically alter the course of one line. Morgan v. Renfro, 30 Ky. 533, 99 S. W. 311.

68. Upton v. Santa Rita Min. Co. [N. M.] 89 P. 275.

69. Where a single call of description fixes the tract by course and distance from a common section corner as in range 14, when several other description calls fix it by reference to known monuments as in range 12, the discordant element first named will be ignored. Upton v. Santa Rita Min. Co. [N. M.] 89 P. 275.

70. Descriptive matter in a patent which if literally construed would constitute two calls and leave the courses and corners undefined, but if construed as one call the survey closed and embraced the amount of land called for, may be construed so as to more nearly effectuate the apparent intention of the parties. Mineral Development Co. v. Tuggle Land & Timber Co. [C. C. A.] 151 F. 450.

74. Where all monuments along the line had disappeared except the final one, it was permissible to begin at such monument and reverse the lines. Cahill v. Mullins, 30 Ky. L. R. 73, 97 S. W. 370.

75. Newbold v. Condon, 104 Md. 100, 64 A. 256.

76. In cases of conflicting boundary where it appears that part of the survey was made on the ground, the calls may be reversed and lines traced the other way where by so doing the land embraced will more nearly harmonize all the calls and objects of the grant. Carter v. Kirby Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 152 F. 622.

81. King v. Carmichael [Wash.] 87 P. 1120. If a government corner can be established with reasonable certainty from known and existing monuments, it is sufficient. Thompson v. Fuhrmann, 130 Wis. 375, 110 N. W. 236. In Iowa surveys are to be made according to the rules established by congress. Hootman v. Hootman [Iowa] 111 N. W. 60.

82. An instruction that, in locating the last line or last corner of a boundary, to adhere to course and fix the corner without regard to the topography of the ground at the place described in the title papers is erroneous. Green v. Pennington, 105 Va. 801, 54 S. E. 877.

83. Morgan v. Renfro, 30 Ky. L. R. 533, 99 S. W. 311. Where a point in a line of a known survey is called for, a corner of which is the nearest point in the line to the last call of the survey in question, the corner should be accepted as the point intended. Id.

84. Quarter section of land was conveyed, one-half to each of two parties on the theory that it contained but 160 acres when it in fact contained 164. Hootman v. Hootman [Iowa] 111 N. W. 60.

tracted from the sections or half sections on the northern or western boundaries of a township does not apply to smaller subdivisions of a section.<sup>85</sup>

The rule that a survey of land intended to be conveyed will control the description is not contrary to the public policy of the registration laws,<sup>86</sup> nor is it a violation of the statute of frauds.<sup>87</sup> Field notes which can probably be located on the ground do not necessarily establish the location of a boundary.<sup>88</sup> Where field notes of a survey are consistent and can be identified, the field notes of another survey may not be looked to to create inconsistency.<sup>89</sup> In determining the location of a survey, the jury should be left to apply the rule which indicates with most certainty the location of the land.<sup>90</sup>

The actual location of a boundary is often a question of fact<sup>91</sup> to be determined by the application of established rules.<sup>92</sup> The evidence to be considered and which

86. This rule may be applied in ejectment, though the same result might be obtained in a bill to reform the deed. Staub v. Hampton [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 776. When a deed called for a point on the boundary of another survey and it appeared that such survey was erroneous, held that the survey of the land intended to be conveyed controlled the description, though the land was not included within the calls. Id.

87. Staub v. Hampton [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 776.

88. Field notes shown to be delineated on an official map, and which may perhaps be found on the ground while calling for certain boundaries, do not necessarily establish the location of such survey upon the ground. McDonald v. Downs [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 892.

89. Upshur County v. Lewright [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 1013.

90. In an issue as to the location of certain surveys, an instruction as to the rule to be followed in determining the location on the ground held erroneous. Upshur County v. Lewright [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 441. Where it appeared that lines were originally run at an angle of nine degrees forty-five minutes, and it appeared that during the fifty years that had elapsed since the survey the variation had decreased from two to three minutes a year, it was proper to instruct the jury to find at what variation the lines should be run to follow the original survey. Battles v. Barnett [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 817. Where a part only of the lines of a survey were run, the jury must determine the lines not run as well as those that may be found by following the footsteps of the surveyor. Upshur County v. Lewright [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 1013.

91. Evidence as to the location of a boundary held for the jury. Turner v. Angus, 145 Mich. 679, 13 Det. Leg. N. 646, 108 N. W. 1100; Williamson v. Bryan, 142 N. C. 81, 55 S. E. 77.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a finding that the south boundary of a tract as located on the ground in partitioning the same was located on the true boundary. Brodbeck v. Carper [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 183. A boundary to camp grounds reserved to Indians by treaty fixed by government survey of adjoining land, and shown by the plat returned, is sufficient for the purpose of a subsequent conveyance of the land after the reservation has been relinquished. United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co. [C. C. A.] 152 F. 25. Where the only issue raised to the return of processions was whether a line run and marked by them was the true line, and the evidence was sufficient to sustain a finding that it was a new trial was properly refused. Whitehurst v. Hathorn [Ga.] 57 S. E. 682. Where trees called for have disappeared, it is presumed that they had been at the distance apart called for. Keystone Mills Co. v. Peach River Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 958, 96 S. W. 64. One who asserts otherwise has the burden to prove it. Id. Evidence held insufficient. Id. Evidence sufficient to sustain the finding of the jury as to the location of a boundary. Beckham v. Thompson [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 131; Manuel v. Flynn [Cal. App.] 90 P. 463; Davidson v. Equitable Securities Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 95, 96 S. W. 787. Evidence sufficient to show that a poplar tree called for as a corner formerly stood at a certain point. Eastham v. Smith [Ky.] 103 S. W. 315. Evidence sufficient to show that a corner formerly represented by a gate post was at a point fixed by aged residents. Phillips v. Stewart, 29 Ky. L. R. 1199, 97 S. W. 6. Evidence sufficient to show that a certain survey had been made, that a rock had been adopted as a corner, and that the calls were intended to be therefrom. Fincannon v. Sudderth [N. C.] 57 S. E. 337. A finding of fact as to the location of a boundary based on a plain mistake may be vacated. Twombly v. Lord [N. H.] 66 A. 486.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a finding as to location of a boundary. Martin v. Hill, 30 Ky. L. R. 1110, 100 S. W. 343.

92. Where a devisee helped to survey land devised to him, the presumption that such survey contained all the land he was entitled to is not overcome by a statement in a deed made by him that other land conveyed by such deed was also contained in the devise to him. Shive v. Garman's Guardian, 30 Ky. L. R. 1368, 101 S. W. 300. Where certain township boundaries were in dispute and twenty years previously a survey had been made and roads laid, and other improvements made with respect thereto, and about two years later another survey was made by a surveyor who claimed to have located some of the government corners, but in making it he relied on other information, held the survey first made should control. Foskuhl v. Herzer [Kan.] 91 P. 56 is admissible on the question is determined by the general rules of evidence.<sup>93</sup> Evidence of general repute is admissible.<sup>94</sup>

Monuments, courses, distances, and quantity.<sup>95</sup>—In case of conflict in the calls, such elements of description will be preferred as are the least liable to mistake.<sup>96</sup> Inconsistent calls are to be given prevailing effect in the following order: Natural or artificial monuments<sup>97</sup> or the places where they were located if destroyed;<sup>98</sup>

Instructions in action to determine boundary held not erroneous where evidence was conflicting and two theories as to location of line were involved. Fincannon v. Sudderth [N. C.] 57 S. E. 337.

93. See Evidence, 7 C. L. 1511. Where corner was pointed out by several aged residents, since deceased, surveyor to whom it was pointed out could testify concerning the facts. Phillips v. Stewart, 29 Ky. L. R. 1199, 97 S. W. 6.

General statement of district surveyor that certain survey is free from conflict is not competent on issue as to boundaries of another survey. Keystone Mills Co. v. Peach River Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 958, 96 S. W. 64.

Declarations of surveyor, since deceased, as to fact of which he is presumed to have had knowledge is admissible. Keystone Mills Co. v. Peach River Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 958, 96 S. W. 64. Such declarations in order to be given effect must possess the element of certainty. Id. In action to determine boundaries of lots, old plat obtained from volume of state papers is admissible if its authenticity is not questioned. Twombly v. Lord [N. H.] 66 A. 486. Where trees called for in senior survey had disappeared, one claiming under junior survey could show their location. Keystone Mills Co. v. Peach River Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 958, 96 S. W. 64. Where a tract of land is described as having so many arpents front by so many deep, side lines are presumed to run parallel out from right angles with front lines, unless there are controlling circumstances to the contrary. This presumption is strengthened by the fact that one of the side lines is perpendicular to the front line. Ramos Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Sanders, 117 La. 615, 42 So. 158.

Declarations of deceased person through deed from whom title is claimed, made at time of survey, are admissible. Fincannon v. Sudderth [N. C.] 57 S. E. 337. On issue as to location of boundary, it cannot be assumed that surveyor who surveyed township did not run a line on the ground. Brown v. Yarraham Gold Min. Co., 3 Cal. App. 474, 86 P. 744.

Declaration of grantor in making a deed for purpose of settling street boundary, admissible. Rix v. Smith, 145 Mich. 203, 13 Det. Leg. N. 508, 108 N. W. 691. On issue as to location of boundary, map is not admissible where person who made it testified that he made no measurements on the ground but used as his data boundaries mentioned in deed, certain city plats and field notes. Seabrook v. Coos Bay Ice Co. [Or.] 89 P. 417.

Parol evidence, except to correct a mistake is not admissible to correct a call. Hamilton v. Blackburn [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 721, 95 S. W. 1094. Parol evidence admissible to show what lines were intended in a deed where there is ambiguity. Haskell v. Friend [Mass.] 81 N. E. 962.

Field notes of surveyor not shown to be dead, admitted without objection, must be given effect as evidence. Keystone Mills Co. v. Peach River Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 958, 96 S. W. 64. Field notes of a junior survey cannot be resorted to to create an ambiguity in calls of a senior survey. Id. Where the field notes of different surveyors were in conflict as to the distance of one corner from another, such field notes were held not to be evidence as to the location of the corner. Id. Nor are such field notes evidence of location of bearing trees which had disappeared. Id. Field notes of subsequent government survey duly filed for record supersede those of prior survey. Kimball v. McKee, 149 Cal. 435, 86 P. 1089. Prior to Acts 1901, p. 39, it was necessary for processioners and the surveyor to trace and mark anew the lines around the entire tract of an applicant for prosecuting before the plat certified by the surveyor and the lines so marked should be prima facie correct and admissible without further proof. Gillis v. Taylor, 127 Ga. 676, 56 S. E. 992. On a trial of issues formed by a protest of adjoining owners to a return of processioners made before the act of 1901, where it appeared that the lines around the entire tract of the applicant were not surveyed and marked anew, it was proper to dismiss the entire proceeding. Id.

94. Phillips v. Stewart, 29 Ky. L. R. 1199, 97 S. W. 6. Where land was described as "beginning at a pine on the east side of" a swamp. A witness testified that he had known the beginning corner for fifty years. That there was nothing to show that corner but a stub on the ground. That disinterested persons had pointed out the stub. Surveyors starting at that point had found blazed lines. Held sufficient to locate the corner. Broadwell v. Morgan, 142 N. C. 475, 55 S. E. 340. The fact that boundaries of fields and highways as established by early settlers are in harmony with disputed monuments is relevant as tending to show that such monuments are true corners. Bridenbaugh v. Bryant [Neb.] 112 N. W. 571.

95. See 7 C. L. 449.

96. Upton v. Santa Rita Min. Co. [N. M.] 89 P. 275. Original monument having disappeared, old boundary fences are better evidence of where the lot lines actually are, than a resurvey based on no original monument. Boundary, if a straight line, is established by wall of permanent building standing for the statutory period, though the building does not extend entire length of boundary. Wilson v. Sidle, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 465.

97. Marks on the ground prevail over course and distance. Lewis v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 684, 99 S. W. 658. Ancient monuments prevail over courses and distances. Thompson v. Fuhrmann, 130 Wis.

course and distance;<sup>99</sup> quantity. This, however, is only their relative force as evidence, and the weakest may, by the aid of other facts, overcome a call of the highest dignity,<sup>1</sup> or where it gives effect to the intention of the parties,<sup>2</sup> or where it is evident that there is error in the call for the monument,<sup>3</sup> or where the call for the monument is uncertain and the calls for metes and bounds are certain.<sup>4</sup> Monuments are of no effect if not called for.<sup>5</sup> The calls in a senior survey prevail over those in a junior survey.<sup>6</sup>

Highways, streets, or ways as boundaries.<sup>7</sup>—As a general rule where streets,<sup>8</sup> alleys,<sup>9</sup> or ways<sup>10</sup> are designated as a boundary, the grantee will take the fee to the center thereof, and, if the grantors own the fee of the entire street, it will pass,<sup>11</sup> unless the terms of the grant indicate a contrary intention.<sup>12</sup> This rule is a presumption of fact and may be rebutted.<sup>13</sup>

Conflicting evidence as to location of monument held for jury. Propper v. Wohlwend [N. D.] 112 N. W. 967.

99. Where land is described by courses and distances and not by monuments, courses and distances prevail. Nevin v. Disharoon [Del.] 66 A. 362. Course and distance prevail if no marks or monuments are found. Lewis v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 684, 99 S. W. 658.

1. Where a boundary was disputed, and where plaintiff's right rests on a deed describing the land as beginning at a certain rock, being a corner of a certain tract, and running with the line of that tract, though a call for fixed line will control course and distance if the corner and line cannot be established, a line running from the rock must be adopted. Fincannon v. Sudderth [N. C.] 57 S. E. 337. Unless course and distance are corroborated by other sufficient circumstances. Kimball v. McKee, 149 Cal. 435, 86 P. 1089.

2. Distance does not necessarily yield to course where one or the other must be disregarded. One is to be preferred over the other according to the manifest intention of the parties and circumstances of the case. Green v. Pennington, 105 Va. 801, 54 S. E. 877. Call for course and distance will control a call for a state where the giving of effect to the latter would cause the survey to embrace several hundred acres in excess. Mathews v. Pursifull, 29 Ky. L. R. 1001, 96 S. W. 803.

3. Where there is sufficient evidence to induce a belief that there is a mistake in a call for natural or artificial objects, and not in a call for course and distance, the latter will prevail. Hamilton v. Blackburn [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 721, 95 S. W. 1094.

4. When a notice of condemnation of a strip of land described it by metes and bounds, and stated that it was off the southern boundary of an owner's land which was in dispute, held the description by metes and bounds was controlling, and the abutting owner was entitled to a tract between the condemned strip and the street. *Pinney v. 6. Keystone Mills Co. v. Peach River Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 958, 96 S. W. 64. When a survey of a tract called for old surveys on every side thereof and for courses and distances without any distances being measured on the ground, held the calls for the older surveys controlled. *Isaacs v. 8. Grantee of lot in a recorded plat takes title to center of street on which it abuts subject to public easement. Wegge v. Madler, 129 Wis. 412, 109 N. W. 223. Though the lot is described by metes and bounds extending to the line of the street, although without express mention of such street. (Id.), or though the land described is bounded by a street (Id.). Fact that street is never opened is immaterial. Trowbridge v. Ehrich, 116 App. Div. 457, 101 N. Y. S. 995.

11. Where a street was laid out along a navigable river, conveyance of lots abutting on it passed title to the entire roadbed and carried riparian rights following the grant of upland. Johnson v. Grenell [N. Y.] 81 N. E. 161. A deed to land on each side of a street passes title to the street. Cocke v. Texas, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 407.

12. The general designation of a road as a boundary will not control a particular description by metes and bounds which shows the line to be the side of the road. Hamilton v. Attorney General [Mass.] 81 N. E. 275. Conveyance of lot held not to pass title to the street. Wegge v. Madler, 129 Wis. 412, 109 N. W. 223. A description "beginning in the east line of the road" running around the lot to the east, "thence southerly by the sea to a road or passway," and "thence northerly in the east line of said road," excludes the road. Hamlin v. Attorney General [Mass.] 81 N. E. 275. A description "beginning at the southeast corner of M. & G. streets, running thence southerly along G. street * * *, thence * * * to M. street, thence westerly along M. street," did not pass title to any part of M. street. Tietjen v. Palmer, 105 N. Y. S. 790. Where the side of a private way is designated, such side is the boundary. Gray v. Kelley [Mass.] 80 N. E. 651.

§ 2. Riparian or littoral boundaries.<sup>14</sup>—The meander line of a government survey is not a boundary.<sup>15</sup> As a general rule, where land is described as bounding on a non-navigable stream, the boundary is the thread of the stream.<sup>16</sup> Where a "shore" is designated the meaning to be given the word must be determined from the entire instrument in which it is used.<sup>17</sup> A description of land as founded upon or a running to or along the sea or bank of a stream carries with it the entire estate of the grantor whether to high water mark or to the thread of the stream,<sup>18</sup> but this rule does not apply where lots are particularly described on a plat and the plat makes no reference to the sea or stream.<sup>19</sup> The question whether the title to the suit under waters of a lake or stream passes to a grantee of the upland is to be determined by the law of the state where the land lays.<sup>20</sup> In Washington, in grants made prior to the adoption of the constitution, the line of ordinary high water marks the boundary only where the navigable water has been meandered or the meander line runs above the line of ordinary high water. Where it runs below that line the meander line marks the boundary.<sup>21</sup>

13. Tietjen v. Palmer, 105 N. Y. S. 790. A license to the probate court to sell certain land described it as land on the side of a street containing a certain area with right in an adjoining private way. The deed was of a certain described area, with the private way as a boundary, with right to use the way. Held not to convey to the center of the way. Gray v. Kelley [Mass.] 80 N. E. 651.

15. Berry v. Hoogendoorn [Iowa] 108 N. W. 923. Under Laws 1872, p. 129, providing for the sale of tide lands and that the applicant to purchase shall have the same surveyed and that the surveyor shall conform to and connect the survey with the survey of the United States so far as practicable, held where a deed described land as running along the meander line a certain course and distance, the calls were not governed by the meander line of the public survey. Seabrook v. Coos Bay Ice Co. [Or.] 89 P. 417. Where on an issue as to the location of the boundaries of a tract of tide land the description called for a place a certain distance from a post located a certain distance from a certain corner, the proper method was to find the post from some known corner and not to fix a starting point according to the distance mentioned from the corner. Id.

16. Foster v. Bussey [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1105; Wall v. Wall, 142 N. C. 387, 55 S. E. 283.

A description beginning on a river, and the last two calls were "to" the river "thence up said river with its meanders to point of beginning," conveys to the main channel and includes an island though the distance called for falls short of such channel. Huffman v. Charles, 30 Ky. L. R. 197, 97 S. W. 775.

17. A description "beginning at a point on the shore" thence "to the shore" "along the shore," etc., and "bounded westerly by Squam River," did not restrict the boundary to high water mark but included the flats. Haskell v. Friend [Mass.] 81 N. E. 962. A line "thence southwesterly on a line parallel with the shore 300 feet" to a point is a straight line though the shore is curved where the line would be 328 feet if run parallel with the shore. Id.

18. Polson v. Aberdeen [Wash.] 87 P. 73.

19. Where an owner platted land but did not extend the boundaries of lots along the river to the bank, held the lines as shown by the plat were the boundaries. Polson v. Aberdeen [Wash.] 87 P. 73.

20. In Arkansas his title extends to the thread of a non-navigable stream and to high water mark of a navigable one. Harrison v. Fite [C. C. A.] 148 F. 781. This is the rule when the United States has disposed of lands bordering on non-navigable lakes by patent containing no reservations. Id. Riparian rights of persons who acquired land bordering on a navigable stream are not affected by Repeal of Act Congress 1846, declaring Des Moines River to be a navigable stream. Berry v. Hoogendoorn [Iowa] 108 N. W. 923.

22. See 7 C. L. 453.

23. A parol agreement between adjacent owners to employ a surveyor to establish their boundary followed by actual survey and building of a fence on the line constitutes such a boundary agreement as gives the right to recover possession up to the line in ejectment, though a different line had been recognized for many years. Roberts v. Birks, 223 Ill. 291, 79 N. E. 103. Where adjacent owners whose boundary line is in dispute establish a line by parol and improve established is not the true one,<sup>24</sup> especially after a long lapse of time.<sup>25</sup> Such an agreement is not contrary to law nor against public policy,<sup>26</sup> and need not be acknowledged nor recorded.<sup>27</sup> It is binding on all persons claiming under or through the parties making it,<sup>28</sup> irrespective of whether the limitation period has expired;<sup>29</sup> but it is not valid for any other purpose than that of settling a boundary dispute, and where adjoining owners agree on a line knowing that it is not the true one for the purpose of transferring title, the agreement will not be given effect.<sup>30</sup> Where in an endeavor merely to ascertain the true boundary an erroneous line is agreed upon by mistake, the agreement is not binding and the line will not be established.<sup>31</sup> Such an agreement must be made by the owner<sup>32</sup> and must be entered into for the purpose of establishing the boundary.<sup>33</sup> Whether such an agreement has been entered into is sometimes a question of fact,<sup>34</sup> but it may be established by such conduct of the parties as will justify the inference of a prior agreement.<sup>35</sup>

their respective properties with respect to such line they are estopped to deny that it is the true boundary. Adams v. Betz [Ind.] 78 N. E. 649. An oral agreement settling a disputed line acquiesced in for several years will not be disturbed. Ball v. Loughridge, 30 Ky. L. R. 1123, 100 S. W. 275. A conditional line is one made by agreement without the aid of surveyors. Martin v. Hill, 30 Ky. L. R. 1110, 100 S. W. 343. A disputed or unascertained boundary between adjacent owners may be fixed by parol agreement. Purtle v. Bell, 225 Ill. 523, 80 N. E. 350.

24. A boundary agreement is binding though the line fixed is not the original one. Breakey v. Woolsey [Mich.] 14 Det. Leg. N. 364, 112 N. W. 719.

25. Where adjoining owners fixed their boundary by a wall used for buildings on the lots and used the portion of the lots in the rear of the wall for many years in accordance with the line so fixed, held such line was the boundary. Yunker v. White [Iowa] 111 N. W. 824. Where coterminous proprietors have established a division line and have acquiesced in it for a period equal to that prescribed by the statute of limitations, they are thereafter precluded from claiming that it is not the true line. Adams v. Child, 28 Nev. 169, 88 P. 1087. Where each of two coterminous proprietors recognizes the ownership of the other and that the tract of each is bound by that of the other the ascertainment of the true line between them fixes the extent of their respective tracts. Richardson v. Pitts, 127 Ga. 107, 56 S. E. 105.

28, 29. Adams v. Betz [Ind.] 78 N. E. 649.

30. Lewis v. Ogram, 149 Cal. 505, 87 P. 60. Where there is no dispute as to the location of a boundary, it cannot be established by a parol agreement. The fact that a wrong line was pointed out by a vendor does not affect its location in the absence of adverse possession. Turner v. Angus, 145 Mich. 679, 13 Det. Leg. N. 646, 108 N. W. 1100.

31. Purtle v. Bell, 225 Ill. 523, 80 N. E. 350.

32. An agreement between the husband of an owner and an adjacent owner is not binding on her. Hornet v. Dumbeck [Ind. App.] 78 N. E. 691.

33. Where adjacent owners after partly constructing buildings with a party wall doubted the accuracy of the boundary but agreed to complete the buildings and save expense of tearing them down, held that such agreement did not fix the boundary and was not binding as to land in the rear of the wall. Thoman v. Gross [Mich.] 14 Det. Leg. N. 210, 112 N. W. 111.

34. Whether a disputed boundary line had been fixed by mutual agreement and acquiescence held a question of fact. Scott v. Baird, 145 Mich. 116, 13 Det. Leg. N. 513, 108 N. W. 737. Evidence sufficient to show a boundary established by agreement between the predecessors in title. Morgan v. Lewis, 30 Ky. L. R. 747, 99 S. W. 676. Evidence insufficient to show that a boundary line had been agreed upon. Cottrell v. Pickering [Utah] 88 P. 696. When adjoining owners give deeds to each other to establish a line, and the location of objects called in the description is necessary to an intelligent understanding of the case, testimony of a person who was present when the line was run is admissible. Ball v. Loughridge, 30 Ky. L. R. 1123, 100 S. W. 275. When adjacent owners agreed to a survey and thereafter one of them acquiesced in the location of a fence on the line found, it is immaterial to the establishment of a boundary whether he agreed to abide the result of the survey. McBride v. Bair [Iowa] 112 N. W. 169.

35. Stumpe v. Kopp, 201 Mo. 412, 99 S. W. 1073.

36. See 7 C. L. 454.

37. Where parties believed when certain deeds were executed that a boundary was in a certain place, and surveyed and sold the land with reference thereto, such supposed line will control. Asher v. Johnson, 30 Ky. L. R. 652, 99 S. W. 282. Where a township is segregated under the Carey act and a water company has it surveyed by a private surveyor and persons purchase tracts with reference to such survey and with knowledge that the lines were established by a private survey, they will be bound thereby. Taylor v. Reising [Idaho] 89 P. 943. Where a tract of land is subdivided and sold to several persons with reference to the private period of years may be established by acquiescence.<sup>35</sup> In order to establish a line by estoppel, the elements of estoppel must exist,<sup>39</sup> and whether they do exist may be a question of fact.<sup>40</sup> The doctrine of acquiescence does not apply where adjacent owners do not regard a certain line as a boundary nor intend to treat it as such,<sup>41</sup> nor where a boundary has existed for only a comparatively short time.<sup>42</sup>

Occupancy under a claim of ownership up to a certain time for a period necessary to give title by limitations establishes a line by adverse possession,<sup>43</sup> but he must claim it as such line regardless of where the true line may be.<sup>44</sup> survey made and they take, relying on such survey, and make improvements, the line so established will be held to be the correct one. Id. Where evidence shows that purpose of original grantor was to give equal portions of the disputed strip, and line midway of the strip was acquiesced in as the dividing line, a decree will be granted making such line the established boundary between subsequent grantees and heirs, notwithstanding an ambiguity in original deeds. Challen v. Martin, 3 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 473.

38. Where a township of land has been segregated under the Carey act and a water company has contracted to furnish water and reclaim such tract and the government corners and lines have become obliterated, and the company has the tract surveyed by a private surveyor and thereafter the land is taken by persons in accordance with such private survey and improvements made with reference thereto, it is presumed to conform to the government survey. Taylor v. Reising [Idaho] 89 P. 943. Where improvements calculated to mark a boundary were erected by adjacent owners and existed for thirty years, and a fence conforming to such line was also erected, held such line was the true one and not one shown by a survey determined from street monuments placed long after the improvements were made. Holmes v. Judge [Utah] 87 P. 1009. Where a road has been for twenty-five years recognized as a boundary between lots and they have been transferred with reference thereto, it will prevail over the location of the road on a plat. Quade v. Pillard [Iowa] 112 N. W. 646. Where one lot owner erected a building on his lot intending to cover all of it and thereafter the adjoining owner built on his lot and used the wall and afterwards purchased one-half of it, and such wall was recognized as the line for twenty years, held the center of the wall was the line. Yunker v. White [Iowa] 111 N. W. 824. A fence recognized by adjoining owners as the true line for eleven years establishes as the true line between the parties and those claiming under them. Amber v. Cain [Iowa] 110 N. W. 1053. Where owners of land adjacent to a highway have acquiesced for many years in a change of highway lines and have located building with reference to such change, and the last grantor of a lot has conveyed to another with oral declaration recognizing the new line, the description in the conveyance as against subsequent grantees must be construed with regard to such boundary. Rix v. Smith, 145 Mich. 203, 13 Det. Leg. N. 508, 108 N. W. 691. Where streets have, by parties interested or by public authorities, been opened, used and acquiesced in, they become permanent boundaries. Id. Where adjoining owners have for twenty years recognized a fence as their boundary, and after a survey one expressed his dissatisfaction and the other was fully advised before going to any expense in constructing a fence on the line shown by the survey, the former was not estopped to assert that the original fence was the true line. Andrews v. Meredith, 131 Iowa, 716, 109 N. W. 287.

39. Where a fence did not constitute an agreed boundary and one of the owners did not construct his buildings so that the eaves projected over the true line, and it did not appear that any representations were made as to the location of the line, held owners were not estopped because one had filled in his lot over the true line. Cottrell v. Pickering [Utah] 88 P. 696. Where one adjacent owner had no notice or knowledge that the building of the other extended over the line until just prior to action commenced, the line was held not established by acquiescence. Connell v. Clifford [Colo.] 88 P. 850.

40. Evidence held for the jury as to whether one of two co-tenants who voluntarily partitioned property was estopped to deny that the walls of buildings or adjoining lots were the boundaries of the lot partitioned. Scott v. Baird, 145 Mich. 116, 13 Det. Leg. N. 513, 108 N. W. 737. Statements made by one in the presence of an adjacent owner held admissible on an issue as to whether he was estopped to deny the location of a boundary. Id. Evidence as to the making of a survey and building a fence on the line shown thereby and recognizing it as the line for twenty years raises a question of fact as to the establishment of such line. Coleman v. Robens, 146 Mich. 333, 13 Det. Leg. N. 740, 109 N. W. 420. Where owners of land adjacent to a highway acquiesced in a change of highway lines for over a generation and a plat referred to in a deed showed the boundaries of the highway but there was nothing to show that highway authorities ever accepted the change in lines, held the question of true boundary was for the jury. Rix v. Smith, 145 Mich. 203, 13 Det. Leg. N. 508, 108 N. W. 691.

41. Where adjacent owners do not regard a fence as their boundary nor intend nor treat it as such, the doctrine of acquiescence does not apply. Boltz v. Colsch [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1106.

42. A fence which had existed only a comparatively short time when it was discovered that it was not on the line cannot be taken as establishing a line by acquiescence. Cottrell v. Pickering [Utah] 88 P. 696. Where neither of two adjacent owners had occupied to a particular line long enough to establish it by adverse possession or to raise an inference that it had been settled by acquiescence, one could assume that the other was claiming only the land described in his deed. Hootman v. Hootman [Iowa] 111 N. W. 60.

§ 5. Establishment by arbitration, action, or statutory mode.<sup>45</sup>—Equity has no inherent jurisdiction to settle boundary disputes,<sup>46</sup> and will do so only as incidental to a remedy which it properly grants.<sup>47</sup> A controversy over the location of a boundary does not of itself afford sufficient ground for the appointment of commissioners to determine such boundary,<sup>48</sup> nor does mere confusion of boundaries.<sup>49</sup> There must exist some equity superinduced by the act of the party defendant,<sup>50</sup> or a danger of multiplicity of suits.<sup>51</sup> The established foundations of jurisdiction to appoint commissioners are (1) fraud or misconduct on the part of the defendant resulting in confusion,<sup>52</sup> (2) a relation between the parties which makes it the duty of one to preserve the boundary together with neglect of such duty, which results in confusion,<sup>53</sup> (3) the necessity of a resort to equity to prevent a multiplicity of suits.<sup>54</sup> The scope of equity in this proceeding is not alone to ascertain the boundary; if the original location cannot be found it will compel the defendant to make good to plaintiff his proper quantity of land.<sup>55</sup> Before equity will act in such proceeding, all persons interested whether their estates be present or future, must be made parties.<sup>56</sup> It is necessary for plaintiff to show that some of his land is in the possession of defendant.<sup>57</sup> Where more than one line is in dispute, a demurrer to the petition will be overruled where all parties interest as to one line are joined.<sup>58</sup> Statutory methods for establishing boundaries are prescribed in many states.<sup>59</sup> In North Carolina the plaintiff has the burden to establish the line as-

as a boundary line for twenty years, it will be regarded as the true line. Andrews v. Meredith, 131 Iowa, 716, 109 N. W. 297. Where a certain line has been acquiesced in by adjoining owners for twenty years, the fact that they agree to survey is insufficient to overthrow such line where it does not appear that either agreed to accept the survey. Id. Where a fence between adjacent owners has been maintained for twenty-five years it will be accepted as marking the true boundary, McBride v. Bair [Iowa] 112 N. W. 169. An adjacent owner who holds and claims title up to a certain line under belief that he owns the land holds adversely. Where one had held possession and improved up to a certain line until within a few months of the expiration of the statute of limitations, held such boundary was established by lapse of time. *Goodwin v. 59. In an action to establish a lost boundary under Ball. Ann. Code and St. § 5667, 5669, which provides for the appointment of a commission in the discretion of the court, neither the court, nor commissioners can correct government surveys nor establish government corners at points other than those fixed by the surveyors. Strunz v. Hood [Wash.] 87 P. 45. Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, p. 1894, that where adjacent owners cannot amicably settle a boundary, commissioners may be appointed by the court, that their report may be objected to by persons interested and the court shall determine the boundary from such report and objections is not a taking of property without due process because denying the right to jury trial. Hood v. Tharp [Ill.] 81 N. E. 861. Special proceedings brought under Revisal 1905, §§ 325, 326, to establish a boundary, are properly transferred to the civil issues docket under § 717 for trial of all issues where issue is raised as to title, and the clerk need not determine the question of boundary before making such transfer. Woody v. Mountain, 143 N. C. 66, 55 S. E. 425. In such case the burden of proving title rests on the plaintiff. Id. Where defendant in a processioning proceeding did not raise an issue of title in an action for location of a boundary, he was estopped by the judgment from denying the boundary thus determined. Davis v. Wall, 142 N. C. 450, 55 S. E. 350. Under Revisal 1905, §§ 325, 326, where a boundary is in dispute, either owner may have the land processioned without the consent of the other, even though title may become involved. Gren v. Williams [N. C.] 56 S. E. 549. Under the express provisions of Revisal 1905, §§ 325, 326, a petition alleging ownership of a lot lying between two of defendant's lots and that the boundary was in dispute is sufficient to sustain the proceedings. Id. Costs should be divided equally among the parties in an action under Ball. Ann. Codes and St. § 5667, 5669, to establish a lost boundary. Stunz v. Hood [Wash.] 87 P. 45.

served by him to be the correct one.<sup>60</sup> The rule providing for a new trial as of right does not apply to such proceeding.<sup>61</sup> One who has sold land under deed of general warranty after pointing out boundaries may sue to settle a boundary dispute subsequently arising.<sup>62</sup> The police power can be resorted to for the settlement of a boundary dispute between counties only in case of overwhelming necessity and exigency.<sup>63</sup> The fixing of parish boundary lines is a legislative function, but where a dispute arises between two parishes as to which of two lines a statute has intended to adopt, the courts have jurisdiction of the controversy,<sup>64</sup> but the legislature having prescribed a mode of procedure for the fixing of uncertain parish lines, that mode must be followed and exhausted before recourse can be had to the courts.<sup>65</sup> The report of a surveyor appointed by the court to determine a boundary is prima facie correct if not excepted to,<sup>66</sup> and a judgment based thereon is conclusive.<sup>67</sup>

False claims.<sup>71</sup>—In a prosecution for forging bounty claim certificates under the Montana statute, it is not a defense that accused while bounty inspector had merely purchased outstanding claims and included them in a certificate together with the claims of another, and had procured the latter to swear that he had presented all the skins.<sup>72</sup>

In proceedings to establish a boundary under Revisal 1905, §§ 325, 326, brought before the clerk and transferred to the civil issues docket for trial on account of issue to title the complainant has the burden to establish the boundary. Woody v. Fountain, 143 N. C. 66, 55 S. E. 425. The plaintiff in a proceeding to establish a disputed boundary has the burden of proof. Green v. Williams [N. C.] 56 S. E. 549. In a proceeding to establish a boundary, whether surveyors started from the right corner and correctly measured the intervening street lines and lots and in other respects proceeded correctly were questions of fact. Id.

BREACH OF MARRIAGE PROMISE.

Right of action.—That the promise was void when made<sup>73</sup> does not preclude a valid new promise after removal of the disability.<sup>74</sup> A man is not liable for breach of an agreement to marry a consumptive woman, though he knew of her condition at the time he made the promise.<sup>75</sup>

A suit for breach of promise is abated by the death of defendant before being put in default,<sup>76</sup> but if he dies after being put in default his obligation may be enforced against his heirs.<sup>77</sup> When the validity of a prior marriage of plaintiff is drawn in question, plaintiff in seeking to show by her reply that such marriage was void because her alleged husband had another spouse living at the time need not negative the exceptions of the New York statute, declaring void a marriage contracted by one who at the time already has a living husband or wife.<sup>78</sup> An agreement of accord and satisfaction is without force so long as it remains unexecuted unless there has been loss of any right by reason of entering into the agreement.<sup>79</sup>

Form of action.<sup>80</sup>—Though seduction is alleged as ground for damages, the action is not one for personal injury within the meaning of a statute authorizing an order for the physical examination of plaintiff.<sup>81</sup>

Evidence and instructions.<sup>82</sup>—Testimony as to what occurred between plaintiff and defendant more than a year before suit is admissible where it is alleged that the agreement was constantly renewed, and the question of limitations is properly submitted to the jury.<sup>83</sup> The sending of letters and papers may be shown.<sup>84</sup> An allegation that defendant promised to marry plaintiff at any time at her request is not sustained by proof of a promise to marry after the happening of a contingency.<sup>85</sup>

Nature and Elements of Offense (408).
Indictment (408).

Evidence (408).
Trial and Instructions (408).

Nature and elements of offense.<sup>92</sup>—Members of a city council are induced by the words "or other officer," as used in the Ohio statute relating to the giving of bribes.<sup>93</sup>

Indictment.<sup>94</sup>

Evidence<sup>95</sup> is admissible to trace the act of accused to its origin and show it to have been a part of a general combination or scheme.<sup>96</sup> A receipt given by accused may be explained by parol evidence where on its face it is so ambiguous as to require explanation.<sup>97</sup> The proof must be beyond reasonable doubt,<sup>98</sup> and if circumstantial it must exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of guilt.<sup>99</sup>

Trial and instructions.<sup>1</sup>—The court need not define terms not necessary to the charge.<sup>2</sup> Defendant's theory of the case should be submitted to the jury where the evidence authorized it.<sup>3</sup>

River and harbor act of 1899, empowering secretary of war to require changes or alterations in bridges found by him to unreasonably obstruct navigation, is not a delegation of legislative or judicial powers to an executive officer. Act March 3, 1899, § 18. Union Bridge Co. v. U. S., 204 U. S. 364, 51 Law. Ed. 523, and alterations ordered pursuant thereto do not constitute the taking of private property for public use so as to require compensation (Id.).

§ 2. Establishment and location by public agencies.<sup>8</sup>—A bridge used for general travel is a public highway and authorized as a public municipal improvement, though a portion of it extends beyond the corporate limits of the city,<sup>9</sup> and, where a city has full authority to construct an interstate bridge so far as its charter and the general laws of its own state are concerned, congress has power to authorize it to construct that portion which will extend into the other state.<sup>10</sup> Where a town is authorized to build a bridge across a stream, it is its duty to build one more permanent and substantial than a pontoon bridge,<sup>11</sup> but the action of a town council in refusing to rebuild a bridge which was washed away cannot be reviewed by mandamus in the absence of arbitrary action,<sup>12</sup> and refusal to rebuild for lack of funds will be sustained, though some inhabitants are greatly inconvenienced.<sup>13</sup> On petition for the building of a bridge partly in one township and partly in another, a majority vote of the board of county supervisors is sufficient in Michigan.<sup>14</sup>

§ 3. Contracts and construction.<sup>15</sup>—In New York the commissioners of highways have power, if they are in funds, to enter into a joint contract for making or repairing a bridge between two towns without action of the town board or vote of the electors.<sup>16</sup> If not in funds, authority to act rests with the board of supervisors as provided by the county law.<sup>17</sup> The highway commissioners may not, however, contract for the building of a bridge not abutting on highways,<sup>18</sup> or on a site not selected or authorized by the towns joined.<sup>19</sup> Before a contract for a county bridge may be legally entered into in Ohio, the county auditor must certify that the money required is in the bridge fund or levied or in the process of collection,<sup>20</sup> and it was not the intention of the legislature to dispense with plans and specifications.<sup>21</sup>

§ 4. Public liability for costs and maintenance.<sup>22</sup>—A city may be legally empowered to issue bonds to pay for a bridge.<sup>23</sup> When a bridge is constructed over a stream running between adjoining towns, an audit of the expense by joint action of the town boards is not necessary in New York<sup>24</sup> and when towns apply to a board

21. An averment in an action by the county that a contract was entered into without proposals being solicited for a structure in accordance with any plans whatever, and that no plans were kept on file with the county auditor, is therefore good against a motion to strike out. State v. Huston, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 423. Averment concerning failure of county commissioners to comply with Rev. St. § 795, relating to the substructure of bridges, will be stricken where the action is against the bridge company for recovery of money paid for the superstructure only. Id.

23. Ordinances for issuance of bonds to pay for a bridge which city of St. Louis was authorized to construct over the Mississippi River held not to violate art. 4, § 46, or art. 9, § 6, of the constitution of 1875. Haeussler v. St. Louis [Mo.] 103 S. W. 1034. See, also, Municipal Bonds, 8 C. L. 1046.

24. On acceptance by highway commissioners and approval by state engineer, the towns become liable to pay the cost as per contract. Colby v. Mt. Morris, 100 N. Y. S. 362. Rule that action ex contractu is not of supervisors for leave to construct a bridge and borrow money therefor, they will be concluded by the apportionment of the expense made by the supervisors under authority of a statute in such case provided.<sup>25</sup> A bridge should be maintained by the county though lying partly within a city where not necessary for urban travel, but used principally by the county.<sup>26</sup> Where more than one municipality derive benefit from the construction or maintenance of a bridge, provision is generally made for an equitable apportionment of the expense.<sup>27</sup> A statute providing for the apportionment of an undeterminable part of the cost of a bridge, but being silent as to the manner of such apportionment, implies the application of the same principles as those governing the apportionment of the part determined.<sup>28</sup> On the question of the joint liability of adjoining counties for repair, a public bridge is generally regarded as a part of a common highway extending across a stream.<sup>29</sup> and the fact that a bridge was built by private subscription aided by a township in one of the counties, does not render it less a part of the public highway where adapted and used by the public as such.<sup>30</sup> A county which refuses to join with an adjoining county in having a bridge between them repaired is liable to the latter county for such part of the cost as it ought to pay.<sup>31</sup> If an issue is made as to the necessity for repairs or the reasonableness of the cost, the question of the amount to be contributed by a defaulting county is generally one for the jury.<sup>32</sup> Where notice to a county is required, a county cannot be made to contribute toward the cost of an improvement not reasonably contemplated therein.<sup>33</sup>

maintainable against a town on a claim which the town board has jurisdiction to audit not applicable. Id. The audit or rejection of the claim by town board held no objection to recovery. Id.

27. By St. 1893, c. 368, § 6, cost of building bridge was to be apportioned among the county and certain cities and towns specially benefited. By St. 1900, c. 439, § 6, a new plan was adopted by which the city directly interested was given charge, changes made at greatly increased cost, and the cost of the unbuilt part apportioned upon the county "to be apportioned upon the cities and towns as provided in § 6" of the Act of 1893. Held, the county was not required to pay any part of the cost of the unbuilt portion. In re Bristol County Com'rs, 193 Mass. 257, 79 N. E. 339. 31. Not exceeding one-half of amount expended. Dodge County v. Saunders County [Neb.] 110 N. W. 756. Where no issue is made as to the necessity for repairs or the reasonableness of the expenditure, the defaulting county will be liable for one-half the cost. Id. That a bridge across the Platte river was not one continuous structure but consisted of separate portions, separated by an island, one of which portion was entirely within Dodge county, did not relieve Saunders county from the burden of contributing to the repair of the entire structure. Id.

32. Dodge County v. Saunders County [Neb.] 110 N. W. 756.

33. Where county was notified that a bridge was unsafe for travel and had to be rendered safe, it could not be required to pay for new ice breaks not necessary to make travel safe. Dodge County v. Saunders County [Neb.] 110 N. W. 756.

35. Cobbey's Ann. St. 1903, § 6106. Nuckolls County v. Guthrie & Co. [Neb.] 107 N. W. 779. Statute making it duty of landowner to bridge any drainage ditch constructed by him across public road has no tion,<sup>36</sup> and a county will not be estopped for long delay.<sup>37</sup> Railroads benefited by the construction or alteration of a bridge may be rendered liable for a portion of the cost,<sup>38</sup> and where a street railway company lays its tracks in a street and over a bridge connecting portions thereof, under an ordinance giving it the right to use the streets for tracks on condition that it keep them in repair, the bridge will be held to be a part of the street for purposes of repair.<sup>39</sup>

That the stockholders of a bridge company have sold the entire property of the company to a city is no ground for forfeiting its franchise.<sup>40</sup> When a state has acquiesced in the use of a bridge exclusively for railroad travel for upwards of thirty years, the court is entitled to consider this fact in determining whether in the exercise of its discretion it will grant to the state a writ of mandamus compelling the proprietors to reconstruct and open the bridge for general public travel.<sup>41</sup> After the expiration of the franchise of a bridge company, it may no longer maintain a bridge and collect toll without further authority from the county supervisors, as required by statute.<sup>42</sup>

§ 6. Injuries from defective bridges.<sup>43</sup>—"Bridge" and "culvert" are not synonymous in a statute giving a cause of action for defects in "any bridge or culvert."<sup>44</sup> A bridge includes not only the portion spanning a chasm but also all appurtenances necessary to its proper use, including abutments and approaches.<sup>45</sup> Persons or municipalities charged with the duty of keeping bridges in repair<sup>46</sup> are held liable for negligence in this regard,<sup>47</sup> including failure to provide suitable

Structure of masonry 41 feet wide and 479 feet long with perpendicular walls and arches and built across low land usually covered with water held a "bridge" within a statute rendering a town liable. Id. One is "traveling upon a bridge," within the meaning of a statute, when he is traveling over that part of the way which is above the abutments and other essential portions of the structure as well as when he is traveling over the part spanning the stream or depression. A railway company contracting with the owner of a ferry to maintain a bridge across the river suitable for persons and vehicles is liable for injuries sustained by the public because of defects in the bridge. Evidence held to sustain finding that defendant's predecessor contracted to maintain a suitable bridge. Wertz v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 57 S. E. 194.

and sufficient railings;<sup>48</sup> but a city is under no obligation to protect a person from dangers not to be anticipated and which could not have resulted from the ordinary and lawful use of a bridge,<sup>49</sup> neither is it liable for defects due to non-repair where it has been given no authority to repair.<sup>50</sup> A toll bridge company, though not a common carrier, is required to keep its bridge reasonably safe for travel.<sup>51</sup> Though a railroad company may have the right under state authority to erect and maintain piers and abutments for a bridge, it must do so in such manner as not to create hidden or dangerous obstructions to navigation.<sup>52</sup>

Proximate cause of injury.<sup>55</sup>—The general rule applies that in order to justify a recovery the negligence complained of must have been the proximate cause of the injury.<sup>56</sup>

Contributory negligence<sup>57</sup> bars recovery,<sup>58</sup> but one may travel over any portion of a public bridge and he is not negligent in so doing.<sup>59</sup>

Remedies.<sup>60</sup>

Pleading, evidence, and instructions.<sup>61</sup>—The petition must show that the defect was in the bridge.<sup>62</sup> An allegation that commissioners and overseers whose duty it was to see that roads and bridges were kept in repair had notice of a defect is a sufficient averment of notice to the county as against a general demurrer.<sup>63</sup>

When a road supervisor is a county officer whose duty it is to keep roads and bridges in repair, evidence that a bridge had previously been kept in repair by him is admissible in an action against the county without showing any order of court directing him to repair.<sup>64</sup> Where the obligation of an adjoining town is several and limited to keeping in repair the portion of a bridge which is within its line, plaintiff must prove at what particular place on the bridge the defect was located, even though he be permitted by statute to join both towns in one action because of doubt as to which one is liable.<sup>65</sup>

Instructions must be justified by the law and the evidence<sup>66</sup> and must not be misleading.<sup>67</sup> While it is for the court to construe the term "bridge" as used in a statute, the question whether the particular portion of the way in which a defect existed was on the bridge as so defined is one for the jury.<sup>68</sup>

§ 1. Employment and relation in general. Definition.<sup>70</sup>—A person employed to sell goods by procuring orders or purchasers therefor, when his contract does not contemplate any possession in him, is a commercial broker.<sup>71</sup>

License.<sup>72</sup>—One who acts as broker<sup>73</sup> without a license, where one is required,<sup>74</sup> cannot recover compensation.<sup>75</sup> In Texas a penal statute, making it an offense for a real estate broker to do business without paying the required tax, is no defense in an action by him for compensation earned.<sup>76</sup>

Creation of relation.<sup>77</sup>—Where an owner of land agreed to pay a broker a certain commission for procuring a purchaser, the contract is established, though the price and terms are left to the owner's control,<sup>78</sup> but the mere fact that a broker

Objection that instruction authorized recovery, without a finding that ice and slush were a dangerous obstruction, held not tenable where jury were required to find that defendant did not exercise ordinary care. Gibler v. Terminal R. Ass'n [Mo.] 101 S. W. 37. Instruction authorizing recovery for medical treatment held not justified by evidence. Id. Evidence held to justify an instruction on plaintiff's theory that the hub of his wagon struck the top plank of a pile of lumber lying on a bridge. Keokuk & Hamilton Bridge Co. v. Wetzel [Ill.] 81 N. E. 864.

Instruction that to justify recovery jury must find that defendant knew or by reasonable care could have known of the defect held misleading under the evidence, as ignoring knowledge on part of the road supervisor. Adams v. Somerset County Com'rs [Md.] 66 A. 695. Instruction on contributory negligence held sufficient and not misleading. Cleveland v. Washington, 79 Vt. 498, 65 A. 584. 73. Parties agreeing with a landowner that, in consideration of their finding a purchaser, he should make a sale to them at a certain price, are real estate brokers, and cannot recover compensation unless licensed as required by law. Pile v. Carpenter [Tenn.] 99 S. W. 360.

74. It is immaterial whether a broker who sues for services rendered in another state had license or not, where there is no proof that the law of such state required a license. *Richards v. inquires and obtains from the owner a certain price for land does not alone establish a contract of employment.<sup>79</sup> The contract is binding on the owner, though his wife did not sign it.<sup>80</sup> It may be signed by an agent authorized thereto or whose act is ratified.<sup>81</sup> Whether a contract is one of brokerage or an option to the alleged broker to buy depends on the intention.<sup>82</sup> A contract whereby a homestead entryman on government land agrees to pay a broker commissions for a sale thereof is not void as violating the United States land laws.<sup>83</sup> Giving a broker the exclusive right to sell for a specified period, does not create a power coupled with an interest, and is revocable by proper notice within the time, so that purchasers buying after such revocation, though within the period, cannot enforce their contract.<sup>84</sup>

Scope of broker's authority.<sup>87</sup>—The authority usually incident to a broker's employment is simply to find a purchaser, and communications from an owner to a broker regarding the sale of land should be construed as giving him only such power, unless a different intention is clearly shown,<sup>88</sup> but general authority to make a sale of land empowers the agent to sign a written contract in accordance with local custom.<sup>89</sup> An unauthorized sale by an agent is not ratified by the mere silence of the owner, who was misled by the broker and did not know all the facts, and who has neither received any benefits nor caused any loss to the vendee.<sup>90</sup> An agent having charge of property with authority to sell cannot delegate his authority to a sub-agent without the consent of his principal.<sup>91</sup> The extent of an agent's authority, if in writing, is a question of law, but if it is to be inferred from the relations and conduct of the parties to each other, or from a transaction in pais, it is

82. An agreement between an owner and broker to sell for a certain price, the broker to receive all he might get over such price, is not an option but a mere brokerage contract. Young v. Ruhwedel, 119 Mo. App. 231, 96 S. W. 228. Though in writing. Tate v. Aitken [Cal. App.] 90 P. 836. Sufficiency of evidence to require submission to jury of question whether transaction was sale of stocks to brokerage firm, on order to them to sell on New York stock exchange. Berry v. Chase [C. C. A.] 146 F. 625. But a contract by an owner to sell land to the purchaser or his assigns at a certain acreage price, the latter to plat the land and sell it, paying all the proceeds to the seller until he had received the then agreed price, is a contract for the sale of land and not a mere brokerage contract. *Whipple v. has no authority to execute a contract of sale where the owner wrote him merely stating the price and rate of commission without specifying any terms of sale. Colvin v. Blanchard [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1118. A broker whose contract only authorized him to procure a purchaser of land at a fixed price cannot impose on the owner, as a condition of the sale, the duty to furnish an abstract of title. Hunt v. Tuttle [Iowa] 110 N. W. 1026. Correspondence held insufficient to authorize agent to bind principal by written contract of sale. Brown v. Gilpin [Kan.] 90 P. 267. No power to make sale. Illinois Canning Co. v. Ft. Des Moines Canning Co. [Iowa] 112 N. W. 810.

90. Colvin v. Blanchard [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1118. Broker fraudulently obtained title to principal's land and rented it to third person with option to buy, and latter with notice of fraud exercised option and resold to innocent purchaser. Principal cannot recover land but only the rent paid to the broker after notice of the fraud. Knowledge of fraud by another agent of the principal as affecting him. Storms v. Mundy [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 258.

91. Nor does a sale by the principal to a purchaser procured by such subagent ratify his employment or make the principal liable for his compensation, unless the principal knew that he had procured the purchaser. Groscup v. Downey [Md.] 65 A. 930. Authority of subagent question for jury. Mestler v. Jeffries, 145 Mich. 598, 13 Det. Leg. N. 600, 108 N. W. 994.

§ 2. Mutual rights, duties, and liabilities.<sup>94</sup>—It is the duty of a broker to serve his principal to the latter's best advantage, without any secret profit to himself, and he cannot act in a dual capacity for both parties to a transaction without the consent of each.<sup>95</sup> A broker employed to sell land on commission for a fixed price is liable to the owner for the amount he receives in excess of such price.<sup>96</sup> Principal may recover for failure of broker to obey instructions and fraudulently obtaining the property and selling it at a profit.<sup>97</sup> Though a broker has the exclusive right to find a purchaser, the owner is not precluded from selling the land through an auctioneer acting under his immediate instructions.<sup>98</sup>

Stockbrokers.<sup>99</sup>—A stockbroker who fails to obey the orders of a customer regarding sales or purchases of stock is liable for the actual loss sustained thereby.<sup>1</sup> If a customer leave stock with his broker as collateral for a balance due on its purchase price, a qualified relation of pledgor and pledgee is created, with the legal title in the customer.<sup>2</sup> A stockbroker cannot set off payments of profits to his employer in an action by the latter for sums advanced as margins.<sup>3</sup> A customer is liable to his broker for advances,<sup>4</sup> but to entitle a broker to recover for advances

94. See 7 C. L. 470.

95. Secret agreement between a broker and a lawyer whereby the broker, for procuring the lawyer's employment by his principal, was to share the fee is unenforceable as being a breach of trust against the principal and contrary to public policy. Auerbach v. Curie, 104 N. Y. S. 233. In order to recover in such case the broker must plead and prove his principal's knowledge and consent to his agreement with the lawyer, though its invalidity is not set up as an affirmative defense, as there is no presumption that the broker disclosed such arrangement to his principal. Id. After making offer for principal agent cannot contract with seller for commission on the amount his principal might pay at public auction. Perkins v. Underhill, 103 N. Y. S. 25. Evidence showing fraud of agent in action therefor by principal. Anderson v. Wheeler [Mo. App.] 102 S. W. 628. If a broker secretly obtains an interest in a transaction hostile to his principal, the latter may recover the commissions paid such broker. Guidetti v. Tuoti, 52 Misc. 657, 102 N. Y. S. 499.

96. False representation as to amount of purchase price received. Borst v. Lynch [Iowa] 110 N. W. 1031.

97. Question one of fact for jury. Set off for expenses not allowed. Van Raalte v. Epstein, 202 Mo. 173, 99 S. W. 1077. Where it is a question for the jury whether a stockbroker acted as principal or broker, an instruction assuming that he acted as principal is improper. Picard v. Beers [Mass.] 81 N. E. 246.

98. Ingold v. Symonds [Iowa] 111 N. W. 802.

99. See 7 C. L. 470.

1. Instructions as to damage where there is no evidence of market value. King v. Zell [Md.] 66 A. 279. Brokers authorized to sell "short," under an agreement by the customor to reimburse them for any expenditures made in executing his orders, may, after his refusal to put up more margins, purchase the stock and charge the loss to his account, though he inform them of rumors that on the next day the stock may be settled for less. Armstrong v. Bickel, 217 Pa. 173, 66 A. 326. Insufficiency of evidence to support finding that broker was liable for failure to sell stock when directed. Potter v. Malcolm, 104 N. Y. S. 760. A stockbroker is liable to his customer for the damages occasioned by an unauthorized sale of a contract for future delivery. Hurt v. Miller, 105 N. Y. S. 775. Where a stockbroker, having bought a contract for future delivery for a customer, without authority applies part of money advanced as margin to an old contested indebtedness of his customer, and sells the customer's contract because the remaining sum was insufficient to maintain the margin, such sale is unauthorized. Id.

2. And though the broker need not retain the identical stock, he must keep on hand an equal amount thereof for delivery on its demand, and unless he does so it is a conversion to hypothecate it for an unauthorized loan. Strickland v. Magoun, 104 N. Y. S. 425. If a stockbroker does not require his customer to advance money for margins but makes the necessary advance himself, the relation of pleader and pledgee is created, and if the broker sells the stock without proper notice, he is liable for conversion. Sufficiency of notice. Content v. Benner, 184 N. Y. 121, 76 N. E. 913. Where a broker telephoned his customer that more margins were required and was told to sell the stock, he was authorized to do so, though the original agreement between them required written notice to put up margins, and also notice of the time and place of sale. Pierson v. Frankel, 103 N. Y. S. 49.

3. A dealer in stocks taking verbal orders from an employer for the purchase and sale of stocks, and giving the latter, after deals, unsigned tickets as evidence of the transaction, is acting in the capacity of a broker. Picard v. Beers [Mass.] 81 N. E. 246.

4. A customer who instructs his broker made for his principal, he must show an actual payment, a mere liability to pay being insufficient.<sup>5</sup> A broker cannot recover advances made for his principal in forwarding wagering contracts for fictitious futures, if he was privy to such illegal transaction.<sup>6</sup> A stock exchange member who executes orders of customers of a nonmember brokerage firm at the direction of such firm becomes the debtor of such customers as to funds of the latter in his hands from the business.<sup>7</sup>

§ 3. Rights and liabilities as to third persons.<sup>8</sup>—A broker is not liable on a contract if his principal was disclosed, but if the principal was undisclosed the broker is personally liable.<sup>9</sup> One who deals directly with a broker is not liable to an undisclosed principal.<sup>10</sup>

§ 4. Compensation and lien.<sup>11</sup>—A principal cannot defeat his broker's right to compensation for procuring a purchaser by showing that at the time of employing the broker he did not own the property, but subsequently secured full title before the sale.<sup>12</sup> The financial irresponsibility of a broker is no defense in an action to recover his commissions.<sup>13</sup>

Necessity of contract.<sup>14</sup>—A broker is ordinarily entitled to compensation only where there has been a contract of employment,<sup>15</sup> but an owner who accepts the services of a broker without making objection is usually estopped to deny that they were rendered at his request.<sup>16</sup> It is no defense to an action to recover comto buy stock for him, agreeing to pay the broker therefor on delivery, cannot rescind the contract after purchase by the broker as the latter cannot be placed in statu quo. Wiger v. Carr [Wis.] 111 N. W. 657. Liability of customer to broker for advances made in purchase of stock which, though not authorized, was duly ratified. Buck v. Houghtaling, 110 App. Div. 52, 96 N. Y. S. 1034.

6. Insufficiency of petition for recovery of such advances. Anderson & Co. v. Holbrook [Ga.] 57 S. E. 500. And see Gambling Contracts, 7 C. L. 1858. Brokers conducting a speculation for a customer, through their agent, are bound by his acts and are charged with knowledge of the character of the transaction. Ware v. Heiss [Iowa] 110 N. W. 594.

7. In such case the stock exchange member will be required to pay the customers before he pays anything to the trustees in bankruptcy of the firm, and the fact that the customers prove their claim against the firm does not bar them from recovery from him. Doucette v. Baldwin [Mass.] 80 N. E. 444.

15. Merely requesting a broker for an introduction to a prospective buyer does not create contract. Bassford v. West [Mo. App.] 101 S. W. 610. Broker representing purchaser not entitled to commissions from seller where he merely asked latter his price and introduced the purchaser to him, and said nothing about commissions. Denton v.

Abrams, 105 N. Y. S. 2. Insufficiency of evidence, in suit for commissions, to show that plaintiff was employed or that he procured the purchaser. Taylor v. Jay [La.] 43 So. 993. Where an agent employed to sell land turns over the sale to another agent, agreeing that the latter shall have the commissions, to which the owner consents, such second agent is entitled to the commissions for selling, not as the assignee of the prior agent but because he sold with the consent of the owner after the first agent waived his rights. In such case the first broker is estopped from claiming the commissions. Munson v. Mahon [Iowa] 112 N. W. 775. Correspondence not constituting contract of employment. Lotz v. Levy, 104 N. Y. S. 1058.

16. Ice v. Maxwell [W. Va.] 55 S. E. 899. An unauthorized contract made by the secretary of a corporation with a broker for the sale of its stock is ratified by knowledge of and formal acceptance by the officers and directors of sales by such broker, and he is entitled to his agreed compensation. Bauersmith v. Extreme Gold Min. & Mill. Co., 146 F. 95. Contract of agency completed by owner sending brokers power of attorney to sell, and notice of withdrawal does not preclude the brokers from recovering their commissions if they had already procured a purchaser. Luckett Land & Emigration Co. v. Brown, 118 La. 943, 43 So. 628. A broker is entitled to his compensation where the duly authorized agent of the owner of land agreed to allow him all he might get over a certain net sum, though the owner had previously contracted with him on a commission basis. Foster v. Taylor [Wash.] 87 P. 358. Though an owner agree to sell to brokers who first claimed to be acting for themselves but afterwards stated that they were merely acting as brokers, and the contract was made to a third person, proof of their employment before making the contract is not necessary to their right to commissions. Shapiro v. Shapiro, 117 App. Div. 817, 103 N. Y. S. 305.

pensation for the sale of land that the contract with the broker was within the statute of frauds.<sup>17</sup> A promise to pay after a sale made by the owner without knowledge of the broker's services is, however, without consideration.<sup>18</sup> Where there is an express contract, no contract can be implied beyond it.<sup>19</sup> Though a statute makes it an offense for a broker to offer real estate for sale without the written authority of the owner, yet if a sale secured by an orally appointed broker is ratified by the owner he is entitled to his commission where he did not intend to violate the law.<sup>20</sup> If the broker contract with the other party for commissions, he cannot recover from his principal without showing the latter's knowledge and consent to his acting in such dual capacity,<sup>21</sup> but both parties are liable for the broker's compensation where each knew of his employment by the other, and no discretion was given or trust imposed in him.<sup>22</sup> A prospective purchaser of land who agrees to buy it if the broker will look to the vendor for commissions, is liable to the broker therefor, if he refuse to buy after the broker has secured a valid agreement from the vendor to sell and pay the commissions.<sup>23</sup> A broker having no implied authority to employ assistance at the owner's expense,<sup>24</sup> one employed by him has no recourse to the owner,<sup>25</sup> in the absence of an acceptance by him of the employment,<sup>26</sup> and his rights against the broker depend on the terms of their contract.<sup>27</sup>

24. See ante, § 1, Scope of Authority.

25. A broker who assists the agent of the owner in making a sale, under an agreement to divide the agent's commission, cannot recover compensation from the owner. But an owner whose agent employs a broker to assist him in making a sale is estopped to deny the agent's authority to employ the broker, if he accepts the sale and benefits under it. Watkins Land Mortg. Co. v. Thetford [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 175, 96 S. W. 72. A broker who buys stock on margin for a customer who fraudulently induces another broker to buy it for an irresponsible party can only recover his interest as pledgee from the latter broker. Leo v. McCormack, 186 N. Y. 330, 78 N. E. 1096.

26. But if the broker, with his principal's consent, obtained the assistance of a third person and agreed to divide commissions with him, the third person is authorized to sell and may recover his compensation from either the owner or broker. Warren Com. & Inv. Co. v. Hull Real Estate Co., 120 Mo. App. 432, 96 S. W. 1038.

27. A written agreement between agents by which one agrees to compensate the other for finding a purchaser is not invalidated by a statute requiring brokerage contracts to be signed by the landowner. Provident

Trust Co. v. Darrough [Ind.] 78 N. E. 1030.

The existence of a partnership between brokers as to a particular transaction must be determined by the terms of their agreement and the nature of the transaction. Mere agreement to divide commissions, no expenses or losses being involved, does not make them partners. Sain v. Rooney [Mo. App.] 101 S. W. 1127. A contract between a broker employed to sell land and a third party, under which the broker agreed to share the commissions with such party should he find a purchaser, is unilateral and binding on neither until such party finds a purchaser. But if such contract only referred to a sale to a certain person which fell through, the party contracting with the broker is not liable to the latter for a share of commissions from a sale to different purchaser. Wefel v. Stillman [Ala.] 44 So. 203. Liability of one broker to another under an agreement to divide commissions. Knapp v. Hanley [Mo. App.] 102 S. W. 670. A broker who agrees to compensate another broker for procuring a purchaser for real estate in the hands of the first broker is liable to the second broker for procuring a purchaser, though the sale is made by the first broker at a different price. Second broker not estopped by his silence after introducing purchaser, as his contract was performed. Provident Trust Co. v. Darrough [Ind.] 78 N. E. 1030. Insufficiency of complaint in suit by one agent to recover agreed share of commission from another. Wefel v. Stillman [Ala.] 44 So. 203. In suit by one broker against another for share of commissions, evidence of defendant's authority to sell is admissible. Id. Where a person is employed by a real estate broker to give his entire time to the business, his compensation to be a per cent of commissions, the relation between them is that of master and servant and not principal and agent. Sumner v. Nevin [Cal. App.] 87 P. 1105. Where the servant of a real estate broker agreed to give all his time and attention to the business and interests of the

Substantial performance of his contract by the broker<sup>28</sup> within the life of his contract<sup>29</sup> is essential, but the principal by waiving performance within the specified time and accepting the agent's services becomes liable for the commissions.<sup>30</sup> Likewise, though a broker cannot recover his specified compensation unless he sells in accordance with the terms of his contract, yet if he sells on different terms which are satisfactory to the owner he may recover what his services are reasonably worth.<sup>31</sup> The discharge of a broker, who has procured a purchaser, and conclusion of the sale by the owner is wrongful and the broker is entitled to compensation.<sup>32</sup> Under a contract to obtain options it is not necessary that there should be an actual purchase before the agent's compensation is earned.<sup>33</sup> A broker who fails to comply with the terms of his contract but exceeds his authority in making a sale cannot recover compensation.<sup>34</sup>

Broker must be efficient producing cause of sale.<sup>35</sup>—The broker must bring the minds of the vendor and vendee together.<sup>36</sup> But a contract to sell land is executed when the sale is made through the broker's influence and he is entitled to his compensation.<sup>37</sup> The criterion in determining a real estate broker's right to compensation for the sale of land, is whether, under the peculiar conditions of the given case, he was the efficient cause of the sale.<sup>38</sup> It is no defense that he procured the cus-master, but took an exclusive agency in his own name, the contract so acquired by the servant, being of a personal character, could not be directed to be assigned to the master. Id. But commissions acquired by the servant during his employment belonged to the master, and he was entitled to an accounting as to their amount. Id.

28. See 7 C. L. 472. In order to recover commissions for a sale of real estate, the broker must prove that he made the sale on the conditions specified by the owner. An instruction failing to base the broker's right to recover on his compliance with the terms of the contract is erroneous. Hunt v. Tuttle [Iowa] 110 N. W. 1026.

29. Commissions cannot be recovered unless a purchaser is procured during the life of the contract, or if no time is specified, within a reasonable time. Hurst v. Williams [Ky.] 102 S. W. 1176; Harris v. Moore [Iowa] 112 N. W. 163; Oliver v. Katz [Wis.] 111 N. W. 509; Dekker v. Klingman [Mich.] 112 N. W. 727; Horton v. Immen, 145 Mich. 438, 13 Det. Leg. N. 486, 108 N. W. 746. Where the contract specifies no time, a subsequent understanding that the broker was to get the deed by a certain day does not make his right to commissions conditional upon the deeds' arrival by that day. Hanna v. Espalla [Ala.] 42 So. 443. Sufficiency of evidence, in action for commissions, to show that plaintiff had found purchaser within agreed time. Muir v. Moeller [Wash.] 90 P. 1042. A broker employed by a lessee to find a purchaser of his lease within a specified time, which was done, is not entitled to commissions, if the lessee in good faith tried to get the necessary consent of his lessor within the specified time but failed. McCurry v. Hawkins [Ark.] 103 S. W. 600.

32. Liability of trustee of land for compensation of agent procuring purchaser. McGovern v. Bennett, 146 Mich. 558, 13 Det. Leg. N. 853, 109 N. W. 1055.

33. Where the options are shown to be at a price satisfactory to the purchaser, the agent has fulfilled his contract. Worthington v. McGarry [Ala.] 42 So. 988.

34. Unauthorized requirement of principal furnishing abstract of title and unauthorized change in terms of deferred payment. Crosthwaite v. Lebus, 146 Ala. 525, 41 So. 853.

35. See 7 C. L. 473.

36. A broker having procured an offer which was refused by the owner as not coming up to the quoted price cannot recover, if he had no exclusive agency, though the same party subsequently made a better offer, in another's name, through a different broker, which was accepted. Cole v. Kosch, 116 App. Div. 715, 102 N. Y. S. 14. A broker employed to exchange land for personality earns his commissions when the owners agree upon the terms of exchange, and he is entitled to his commissions on the value of the land regardless of the value put on it in the exchange. Davidson v. Wills [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 774, 96 S. W. 634. The contract of a broker employed to purchase land is not performed until he procure an enforceable contract with the owners or bring the parties together so that his employer may make such contract. Logan v. McMullen [Cal. App.] 87 P. 285.

37. Hubbard v. Leiter, 145 Mich. 387, 13 Det. Leg. N. 477, 108 N. W. 735. A broker employed to procure land must prove that he either obtained an enforceable contract of sale or a valid conveyance, in order to recover his compensation. Bolton v. Coburn [Neb.] 111 N. W. 780.

38. Hudson Real Estate Co. v. Bauer [N. J. Law] 64 A. 954; Tracy v. Dean [Neb.] 109 N. W. 505; Foley v. Punchard, 103 N. Y. S. 206. The question of whether a broker has been the efficient cause of a sale entitling him to compensation is one of fact, and is only reviewable when there is no legal evitomer in an unauthorized manner.<sup>39</sup> It is usually not necessary that the purchaser enter into an enforceable contract,<sup>40</sup> particularly if it be subsequently validated by ratification,<sup>51</sup> and the buyer's failure to perform his contract does not affect the broker.<sup>42</sup> But under a statute providing that no contract for the sale of lands by an agent shall be binding on the principal unless in writing, a written contract of sale made by a broker, whose employment was by parol, does not bind the landowner.<sup>43</sup> Though an owner has placed land in a broker's hands for sale, he may sell it himself, and is only liable to the broker for his commissions,<sup>44</sup> and where the sale is negotiated by the owner, the agent must prove that he was the cause of the negotiations.<sup>45</sup> A broker procuring a customer after the owner has sold to another is not entitled to commissions,<sup>46</sup> nor is he ordinarily so entitled if the sale is made after his authority is terminated, though to a person with whom he had negotiated,<sup>47</sup> and unless the broker has the exclusive right to sell, he is not entitled to commissions dence to support the finding thereon. A broker is not entitled to recover for merely inviting a purchaser's attention to property, where the purchase was not affected thereby but had already been under negotiation. Sexton v. Goodrich [Wis.] 111 N. W. 206. Brokers in whose hands property is placed for sale cannot recover commissions if another broker, to whose attention they called the property, procures the purchaser. Burnham v. Lawson, 103 N. Y. S. 482. A broker who was called up by telephone by mistaking him for the owner of property is not entitled to commissions merely for making an appointment to bring the owner and purchaser into communication. Shapiro v. Shapiro, 117 App. Div. 817, 103 N. Y. S. 305. A broker who finds a person who takes an option on land of his principal cannot recover commissions from the latter's administrator who sells the property to the same party after the option expires, the principal having died before the option expired. Crowe v. Trickey, 204 U. S. 228, 51 Law. Ed. 454; Crowe v. Harmon, 204 U. S. 241, 51 Law. Ed. 461.

39. Though a broker, in whose hands land is placed for sale, is instructed not to advertise it, he is entitled to commissions for a sale made through advertising. Maloon v. Barrett, 192 Mass. 552, 78 N. E. 560.

40. It is no defense, in an action to recover commissions under a written agreement, that the contract with the prospective purchaser was merely verbal. Pope v. Cadell [Ky.] 102 S. W. 327.

41. Though the agent's authority gives him no right to make a contract of sale, yet if he does so and immediately advises his principal thereof and remits the money received the latter, by expressing his entire satisfaction, ratifies the contract and is bound thereby. Roberts v. Hilton Land Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 946. In such case, if the owner inform the attorney for the purchaser that the sale was authorized, such statement is a ratification of the agent's authority which estops the owner from denying it. Gregg v. Carey [Cal. App.] 88 P. 282.

42. Where a broker's right to compensation is absolute when he procures a contract, it is not affected by the nonperformance thereof. Treck v. McKenna, 115 App. Div. 701, 101 N. Y. S. 317.

43. Young v. Ruhwedel, 119 Mo. App. 231, 96 S. W. 228.

44. Woolf v. Sullivan, 224 Ill. 509, 79 N. E.

646. If a broker employed to make a sale introduces a purchaser, whom the owner informed that he could buy cheaper through another agency, and sale is made through such other agency, the broker who introduced the purchaser is entitled to his commissions. Gilmour v. Freshaur [Mo. App.] 102 S. W. 1107.

45. Cooper v. Upton [W. Va.] 56 S. E. 180 [advance sheets only]. A broker claiming compensation for securing the attendance of the purchaser at a public sale must prove that he had some effect on his attendance. Perkins v. Underhill, 103 N. Y. S. 25.

46. Ettinghoff v. Horowitz, 115 App. Div. 571, 100 N. Y. S. 1002. But if the broker procures a binding contract to purchase from a purchaser able to comply, he is not precluded from recovering his commissions by a prior verbal offer made to the owner which was not binding. Lovett v. Clench, 115 App. Div. 635, 101 N. Y. S. 174; Brooke v. Byrnes [Iowa] 110 N. W. 1028. Where an owner after negotiating with a prospective purchaser gives authority to sell to a broker, who negotiates unsuccessfully with the same party, and thereafter the owner revokes the authority and sells pursuant to his original negotiations with the purchaser, the broker is not entitled to commissions in the absence of fraud by the owner. Cords v. Ruth, 115 App. Div. 568, 100 N. Y. S. 1043.

47. Where a purchaser procured by a broker refused the owner's offer but afterwards made an offer to accept it, which the owner then declined, the broker was not entitled to commissions, as when the purchaser refused the first offer the matter was at an end. Bailey v. Moorhead, 122 Mo. App. 268, 99 S. W. 39. If a prospective lessor procured by a broker fails to agree with the owner and advises the broker that negotiations are ended, but some weeks thereafter the lessor again negotiates with the owner and effects a lease, the broker is not entitled to commissions in the absence of evidence of bad faith to defeat his rights thereto. Arnold v. Woollacott [Cal. App.] 88 P. 504. When a broker failed to negotiate a sale and the owner discharged him in good faith and sold the land through another broker for more than the first broker had succeeded in obtaining, such broker is not entitled to commissions, though the sale was for less than he had been instructed to sell for. Smith v. Kimball, 193 Mass. 582, 79 N. E. 800.

if the sale was made by some one else, even though he procure a purchaser.<sup>48</sup> But a broker's right to compensation for bringing his principal and a purchaser together is not defeated by the principal's assumption of exclusive charge of subsequent negotiations, and concluding them on different terms.<sup>49</sup> An owner who colludes with his broker's agent and the purchaser to defraud the broker out of his commissions is liable therefor.<sup>50</sup> Though a purchaser procured by a broker refuse to buy at the owner's price, yet if, during the continuance of the broker's contract, the owner sells to the purchaser, at a lower figure, he is liable for the broker's commissions.<sup>51</sup> If an owner sell to a purchaser procured by his broker the latter is entitled to compensation, whether the owner acted fraudulently or was unaware that the broker's efforts induced the sale; but the owner may sell to a stranger without being liable to his broker, provided he does not do so for the purpose of defeating the latter's right to compensation.<sup>52</sup> In case of the sale of a liquor business and of a license transferable only by order of court, an acceptance by a buyer conditioned on the court's action is good.<sup>53</sup>

Customer must be ready, willing, and able to purchase.<sup>54</sup>—A real estate broker cannot recover compensation unless he procures a purchaser ready, willing, and able to buy according to the terms of the contract<sup>55</sup> as they stood when the purchaser

48. Questions of whether broker had exclusive agency and whether purchaser was secured by him are for the jury. Rothensburger v. Schoniger, 30 Ky. L. R. 1018, 99 S. W. 1150. Where an owner in good faith sells land listed with a broker, in ignorance of the fact that the broker had influenced the sale, for less than the listed price, he is not liable for the broker's commissions unless there was an exclusive agency. Quist v. Goodfellow, 99 Minn. 509, 110 N. W. 65.

49. McMillan v. Beves [C. C. A.] 147 F. 218; Jones & Co. v. Moore, 30 Ky. L. R. 603, 99 S. W. 286; Rankin v. Cardillo [Colo.] 88 P. 170; British-American Land & Inv. Co. v. Western Land & Securities Co., 99 Minn. 429, 109 N. W. 826. Brokers whose contract was to find a purchaser at a price satisfactory to their principal must bring the seller and buyer to an agreement, but need not personally conclude the sale to entitle themselves to compensation. Reade v. Haak, 147 Mich. 42, 13 Det. Leg. N. 952, 110 N. W. 130. Agent procuring purchaser not precluded from recovering his commissions by fact that owner secretly closed deal at less than price quoted by agent, if latter was moving cause of sale. Hahl & Co. v. Wickes [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 924, 97 S. W. 838. A commercial broker cannot be deprived of his commissions by the fact that he gave the name of a prospective purchaser to his principal, who sent another agent to consummate the sale, if but for his efforts it would not have been effected, and the revocation of his agency during the negotiations does not affect his rights if he acted in good faith. Southwestern Port Huron Co. v. Wilber [Kan.] 88 P. 892. But where a broker communicates an offer to his principal without informing him who made it, and the principal declines it, the latter is not liable for the broker's commissions, though he subsequently sells to the same party at a larger price. Nance v. Smyth [Tenn.] 99 S. W. 698. Broker finding purchaser, showing him property, negotiating with him, and introducing him to owner, is entitled to commissions, though sale made by owner for a smaller price. Holland v. Vinson [Mo. App.] 101 S. W. 1131. Broker entitled to commissions where business was obtained as a result of his efforts. Goldmark v. U. S. Electro-Galvanizing Co., 104 N. Y. S. 696. Contract for "net cash" between vendor and vendee of land does not preclude vendor's agent, who procured the purchaser, from recovering his agreed compensation. Love v. Scatcherd [C. C. A.] 146 F. 1. A broker who began negotiations that resulted in a sale through a third party is entitled to compensation where the owner promised it if the sale was effected. Rigdon v. More, 226 Ill. 382, 80 N. E. 901.

App.] 89 P. 981; Morris v. Francis [Kan.] 89 P. 901; Lewis v. Briggs [Ark.] 98 S. W. 683; McGill v. Gargoula, 103 N. Y. S. 113; Tebb v. Mitchell [Del.] 63 A. 327. A broker employed to sell on stipulated terms cannot was procured,<sup>56</sup> and having done so is entitled to his commission unless the sale is prevented by his act.<sup>57</sup> If the owner contracts with the offered purchaser he cannot question his ability to perform<sup>58</sup> or the terms of the contract.<sup>59</sup> A broker employed to purchase bonds at a certain price must prove, in order to recover, that the owner was willing to sell at such price and that he could give a merchantable title.<sup>60</sup>

Broker must act in good faith towards principal.<sup>61</sup>—If a broker acting for both parties with their consent misrepresents facts to one of them, he may be discharged by such party and is not entitled to commissions, though the parties afterwards close the deal.<sup>62</sup> Though an agent cannot represent both parties to a deal, yet an agent of a seller is not precluded from recovering his agreed commissions by the fact that he was manager of other property for the buyer, if he did not represent them in the purchase.<sup>63</sup> Mere acquiescence will not waive rule that broker cannot act for both parties, but the waiver must be express.<sup>64</sup> An agent for one party to an exchange, recover for procuring a purchaser offering different terms which are not acceptable to the owner. Meador v. Brown, 116 App. Div. 734, 102 N. Y. S. 32. Though a broker, according to contract, found a person agreeing to exchange land for his principal's stock of goods, he is not entitled to commissions if the land did not belong to the party procured by him. Snyder v. Fidler [Iowa] 112 N. W. 546. A broker, in whose hands property is placed for sale on such terms as the owner and purchaser may agree upon, is not entitled to commissions for merely producing a party ready, willing, and able to take an option to purchase on terms not acceptable to the owner. Fox v. Denargo Land Co. [Colo.] 86 P. 344. While an owner of land and a prospective purchaser, procured by the owner's broker, are negotiating for a written contract, either may withdraw any oral proposition made without the owner becoming liable for the broker's commissions, where the parties finally fail to agree. Id. The fact that a purchaser procured by the broker could not make the required cash payment for seven months and only then by money expected to be realized from sales of part of the land does not show the purchaser's financial ability to buy. Id. A broker is not entitled to compensation where an exchange of property, which he negotiated for, was not effected by reason of defective title in the party secured by him. Keating v. Haley, 147 Mich. 279, 13 Det. Leg. N. 1035, 110 N. W. 943. If brokers merely request the owner of property who lived in another city to come to their office to meet a purchaser, there is no production of a purchaser entitling them to compensation, as it is their duty to produce the purchaser to him. Lotz v. Levy, 104 N. Y. S. 1058. Where the purchaser procured by a broker is unable to pay for the property and the contract is canceled, the broker is not entitled to compensation, though part of the price was paid. Riggs v. Turnbull [Md.] 66 A. 13. But an agent securing a purchaser ready, willing, and able to buy is entitled to his commissions, though the owner did not furnish him with terms, if the owner and purchaser agree upon them. Frost v. Houx [Wyo.] 89 P. 568. An owner who refuses to deliver a deed, making him responsible for a sewer tax for which he is not liable, is not bound for broker's commissions. Mercantile Trust Co. v. Wiggemen, 119 Mo. App. 56, 96 S. W. 293. Where a prospective purchaser procured by a broker insists on conditions, which the vendor did not agree to and cannot or will not comply with, the broker is not entitled to compensation. Ward v. Kennedy, 101 N. Y. S. 524. A broker is not entitled to compensation for procuring a purchaser, who does not sign a contract to buy and who refused to accept a deed. Kampf v. Dreyer, 103 N. Y. S. 962.

56. If an owner agreeing to sell for a certain price subject to change does not change until after the sale was negotiated, he is liable for his broker's commissions. Warren Com. & Inv. Co. v. Hull Real Estate Co., 120 Mo. App. 432, 96 S. W. 1038. But an owner agreeing to pay his broker "when the title is passed" is not liable for commissions if the title never passed because of defects therein. Couper v. O'Neill, 53 Misc. 319, 103 N. Y. S. 122.

57. An owner having come to terms with a purchaser procured by his agent, knowing his financial ability, cannot object, in a suit for commissions, that the purchaser was not able to buy. Lenschner v. Patrick [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 664.

58. A real estate agent who by recording his contract for commissions clouds the title to the land so as to justify the purchaser in refusing to complete the sale deprives him of his right to commissions. Woolf v. Sullivan, 224 Ill. 509, 79 N. E. 646. Where owner makes no question of purchaser's ability at the time he is offered, the burden is on him in action by the broker to show want of ability. Dotson v. Milliken, 27 App. D. C. 500.

59. If the owner voluntarily conveys the land to the purchaser procured by the agent, it is conclusive proof that the price was satisfactory. Cooper v. Upton [W. Va.] 56 S. E. 180 [advance sheets only].

63. Neither party defrauded and no dual agency. Owen v. Matthews, 123 Mo. App. 463, 100 S. W. 492. A broker contracting for all over a fixed price that he might get for land and a certain sum in addition, does not forfeit his right to compensation, does not by refusing to state what he got for the land, or by stating that he only got the minimum price. Fulton v. Walters, 216 Pa. 66, 64 A. 860.

64. Evans v. Rockett, 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 365.

having a discretion as to the valuation to be placed on his principal's property, cannot recover for commissions if he and the agent for the other party agree to pool and divide their commissions which were based on the valuations.<sup>65</sup>

Procuring loan.<sup>66</sup>—A broker employed to procure a loan cannot recover for securing an offer to lend which does not comply with the terms of the application.<sup>67</sup>

Necessity of broker's contract being in writing<sup>68</sup> is elsewhere treated.<sup>69</sup>

Amount of commissions and measure of recovery for services.<sup>70</sup>—The amount of a broker's compensation is usually dependent upon the terms of his contract,<sup>71</sup> and in the absence of an express agreement as to the compensation of a broker for making a sale he is entitled to a reasonable compensation measured by the customary charge for making such sales,<sup>72</sup> but where a usage or custom is relied on to fix a broker's compensation, it must be shown to be uniform and notorious as regulating the amount in the particular class of transactions.<sup>73</sup> The recovery of compensation by a broker from his principal for breach of contract must be confined to the actual loss thereby occasioned.<sup>74</sup> A settlement of a broker's compensation induced by fraud on the part of the principal does not preclude the broker from recovering his just commissions.<sup>75</sup> The amount of a mortgage on land must be taken into consideration as part of the purchase price, in determining a broker's commissions for making the sale, if such mortgage continues on the land.<sup>76</sup> Usually a broker is entitled to his commissions for a sale of land out of the first payment thereon.<sup>77</sup>

Under contract stipulating that owner shall receive a certain net price and any balance to belong to broker as his compensation, latter must show that former received part of balance belonging to broker. Lewis v. Briggs [Ark.] 98 S. W. 683. Under an agreement whereby one party was to have an agreed commission out of the proceeds of a sale, charge for traveling expenses and a subagent's fees would be included in the commission. Lyttle v. Goldberg [Wis.] 111 N. W. 718. A broker who, having agreed with an owner to divide all they could get for land above a fixed price, sells for the owner's executor at a price which left nothing to be divided under his agreement with the owner cannot collect commissions from the executor. In re French's Estate, 101 N. Y. S. 734. Where, with the consent of his principal, a broker secures the assistance of a third party agreeing to divide with him his compensation, which was to be all over a fixed price, and they sold part of the land for more than the fixed price, and the owner paid the broker his compensation in full, held that, though the third party was entitled to one-half of the unsold land, he could not recover from the owner any portion released to him by the broker. Ewart v. Young, 119 Mo. App. 483, 96 S. W. 420. Where a party, who contracted to pay a broker who negotiated the purchasing of land one-third of the profits to be divided from a subsequent sale thereof, dies before such subsequent sale was made, no time for which was fixed, the broker is entitled to recover one-third the value of the land after deducting the purchase price, taxes, and interest. Kauffman v. Baillie [Wash.] 89 P. 548. Where petition alleged that broker was entitled to commission if he sold for a certain price, and evidence showed that he sold for a larger price, an instruction submitting the case as stated in petition, does not prejudice defendant. Gaume v. Hargan, 122 Mo. App. 700, 99 S. W. 457.

80. A petition alleging that each of two defendants gave plaintiff the price and terms of property for sale sufficiently charges a contract on part of each authorizing recovery on proof that either made such contract. Failure of defendant to object on appeal. McDonald v. Cabiness [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 518, 98 S. W. 943. A petition for the recovery of compensation, which on its face discloses that the brokerage contract was not in writing. Real estate brokers contract in Nebraska as required by statute, is demurrable. Smith v. Aultz [Neb.] 110 N. W. 1015.

81. A complaint alleging the broker's employment, his compliance therewith by procuring a purchaser ready, willing and able to buy on the owner's terms, and refusal by the latter to consummate the sale, is sufficient. Stephens v. Bailey [Ala.] 42 So. 740; Remple v. Hopkins, 101 Minn. 3, 111 N. W. 385. Sufficiency of petition by one of two brokers against principal. Sain v. Rooney [Mo. App.] 101 S. W. 1127.

88. In a suit for commissions by one of two brokers, the answer of defendant that he had paid one of them is sufficient to put the question of their partnership in issue. Sain v. Rooney [Mo. App.] 101 S. W. 1127.

89. See 7 C. L. 478.

90. It is an incompetent question to ask a broker as to whether he "had found a purchaser ready, willing, and able to buy," as it calls for his opinion. Northwestern Packing Co. v. Whitney [Cal. App.] 89 P. 931.

91. In action against husband for sale of wife's land, evidence that a third party told defendant that plaintiff tried to sell at a profit is inadmissible, as is also conversation between the wife and the purchaser. Green v. Brady [Ala.] 44 So. 408.

92. In suit by broker seller cannot show that he notified purchaser that he would only deal with him directly, such evidence being a self-serving declaration,—nor is notification of purchaser by broker that he and seller would call and close the deal admissible to show authority but only on issue of whether broker's efforts procured sale. Ross v. Moskowitz [Tex.] 100 S. W. 768.

93. Offer of compromise inadmissible in action to recover commissions. Hurst v. Williams [Ky.] 102 S. W. 1176.

94. Admissibility of evidence to contradict defendant's denial of having put property in anybody's hands for sale. Bluestein v. Collins [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 687.

95. In action for commissions, broker may prove that land had been listed by him for two years and that the purchaser had been informed of it from that source, where the purchaser testifies that he bought on his own initiative. Ryan v. Page [Iowa] 111 N. W. 405. In suit for negotiating a purchase of land, which defendant refused to consummate, broker may prove a deed, receipt, and tender purporting to be made by the owner. *Hanna v. Admissibility of evidence, in suit for commissions, as to arrangements made by purchaser to procure funds, and as to what occurred between broker and third party as to drawing deed. Id. In suit by broker against owner for commissions for procuring a contract to purchase, evidence as to the purchaser's financial ability is inadmissible in the absence of allegation or proof that plaintiff induced defendant to execute the contract by misrepresentations. *Fleet v. broker's commission is fixed by contract, evidence is inadmissible to show what was a reasonable commission.<sup>97</sup> In an action for broker's commissions parol evidence is admissible to show whether the broker was agent of the seller or of the buyer, where the terms of the written contract are ambiguous.<sup>98</sup> The fact that a contract to pay a broker commissions for a sale of land is not signed by the broker but only by the owner does not render it inadmissible in evidence in a suit by the broker thereon.<sup>99</sup> The burden of proving his contract is on the plaintiff in a suit for commissions,<sup>100</sup> but the burden of showing a defense is on the defendant, as in other contractual actions.<sup>101</sup>

7. Where contractor refused to continue his contract as the price would not compensate him and a new contract was drawn up naming a different basis for payment, there is a consideration for the new contract. Scanlon v. Northwood, 147 Mich. 139, 13 Det. Leg. N. 1013, 110 N. W. 493. The promise by the owner to pay a subcontractor's lien is a consideration for the subcontractor's agreement not to file a lien. Harness v. McKee-Brown Lumber Co., 17 Okl. 624, 89 P. 1020.

8. Contract to build ice houses at a certain price, which price was raised by the managers of the two parties with the understanding that they divide the increase among themselves, invalid. Standard Lumber Co. v. Butler Ice Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 359. Contract to build a roof with a pitch of thirty degrees when statute prohibited a pitch of more than twenty degrees. Eastern Expanded Metal Co. v. Webb Granite & Const. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 251. Where original contract was illegal in that the price stipulated was in fraud of one of the parties, no recovery could be had for extra work done under the contract. Standard Lumber Co. v. Butler Ice Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 359. So long as a contract not involving moral turpitude illegal in part remains unexecuted in that part which the law forbids, either party may disaffirm it on account of its illegality and recover money or property advanced under it. Contractor refused to construct roof on building according to specifications which required a pitch prohibited by statute. Eastern Expanded Metal Co. v. Webb Granite & Const. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 251.

9. Where plans are changed after preliminary agreement but before execution of formal contract, and bidder makes no objection thereto, he cannot recover damages. Sanger v. U. S., 40 Ct. Cl. 47.

12. There was no specific clause in a contract that architects were constituted final judges in all matters but such a power might be construed from a consideration of the whole instrument. Andrew Lohr Bottling Co. v. Ferguson, 223 Ill. 88, 79 N. E. 35. Contract providing that none of the architect's certificates should be conclusive evidence of performance except the final one, held to make the final one conclusive. Carnegie Public Library Ass'n v. Harris [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 520.

Illustration of interpretation of particular contracts: Contract to build butter factory by subscription. Sager v. Gonnermann, 50 Misc. 500, 100 N. Y. S. 406. Two different provisions in the same contract as to how extras were to be provided for. McLaughlin v. Bayonne [N. J. Law] 66 A. 1070.

Delivery of material before working hours of day following time limit set in contract is sufficient. New Jersey Co. v. Nathaniel Wise Co., 105 N. Y. S. 231. Evidence considered in an action on a contract for excavation and held not to show that time was of the essence of the contract. Cleveland, etc. R. Co. v. Scott [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 226. "Erected" held to mean "completed" for purposes of time limit. Hartrath v. Holsman, 127 Ill. App. 560. Upon revocation of the contract it was provided that the municipality might recover damages determined by the architect and also a clause provided for a certain sum as liquidated damages. Intention held to be that only one of the remedies should be availed of. City of New Haven v. National Steam Economizer Co., 79 Conn. 482, 65 A. 959. In the absence of an express warranty that the plans are sufficient, their sufficiency should not be implied unless there is the clearest reason for it. American Surety Co. v. San Antonio Loan & Trust Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 387. The language of a contract for drilling for gas and oil will be given its commonly understood meaning where no reason for the contrary appears. Contract to drill to a certain depth in a workmanlike manner at one dollar per foot. Collier v. Munger [Kan.] 89 P. 1011. Where a contract for construction of sewers provides that the contractor shall take care of all water flowing in, the contractor cannot recover damages because of water flowing into his trenches from tributary sewers of the existence of which he knew at the time of contracting. Leahy v. New York, 116 App. Div. 442, 101 N. Y. S. 936. In excavation contract silt held foreign substance and not part of the excavated material. San Francisco Bridge Co. v. U. S., 40 Ct. Cl. 139. Where a contractor agrees to provide sprinkling system for factory, the title to all material to be in him until paid for with a right to remove if payment not made, the owner of the factory is liable for the loss by fire of so much of the system as has been installed although attached to the buildings. Schaeffer Piano Mfg. Co. v. National Fire Extinguisher Co. [C. C. A.] 148 F. 159.

13. School Dist. of South Omaha v. Davis [Neb.] 107 N. W. 842. Arbitration clause. Roberts, Johnson & Rand Shoe Co. v. Westinghouse Elec. & Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 218. Where a contract for a building is ambiguous in a certain part referring to ornamental iron work and the contractor writes to the owner his interpretation of it to which letter he receives no reply, the contractor has a right to assume that his construction has been assented to and the courts will so enforce it if possible to do so without making a new contract. Snead & Co. Iron Works v. Merchants' Loan & Trust Co., 225 Ill. 442, 80 N. E. 237. Contractors during excavations for a road bed made no measurements themselves but relied upon the measurement of the railroad engineers and received payments based on these measure-

ments. This clearly shows an intent to be bound by a stipulation that the railway engineers' estimates should be final although not expressly made a part of the original contract. Cook v. Foley [C. C. A.] 152 F. 41. Parties construed contract as making architects final judges of all matters. Andrew Lohr Bottling Co. v. Ferguson, 223 Ill. 88, 79 N. E. 35. Time of payment indefinite but construed to be upon certain dates by the parties. Failure to pay on such date was a default. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Scott [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 226.

14. Contract for excavating railroad bid. Cook v. Foley [C. C. A.] 152 F. 41; Harris v. Faris-Kesl Const. Co. [Idaho] 89 P. 760.

15. Contract to construct a sarcophagus of certain parts and dimensions of Scotch granite not performed by making base of native granite according to custom. Fish v. Correll [Cal. App.] 88 P. 489. Contract to dig foundation trench certain number of feet. By blasting rock contractor loosened it to a greater depth and was compelled to remove loose stone, etc. Could not recover for this as extra by showing a custom or necessity for blasting. Gallick v. Ebling, 52 Misc. 533, 102 N. Y. S. 803. Usage of colortype trade not to "rough" pictures. Turner v. Osgood Art Colortype Co., 223 Ill. 629, 79 N. E. 306. As to meaning of "measured in place." Bowers Hydraulic Dredging Co. v. U. S., 41 Ct. Cl. 498.

E. 655; Easthampton Lumber & Coal Co. v. Worthington, 186 N. Y. 581, 79 N. E. 325; Ramstedt v. Brooker, 113 App. Div. 45, 98 N. Y. S. 1044.

Performance held substantial: The contract price was $29,400, and extras $3,000. The work not performed was covering steam pipes with asbestos worth $100 and repair to damaged stucco work worth $100. Van Orden v. MacRae, 105 N. Y. S. 600. Contract called for delivery of bricks not later than June 20th. They were delivered June 21st at 6:25 a. m. New Jersey Co. v. Wise Co., 105 N. Y. S. 231. Where a patent vacuum system was installed upon the agreement that the owner was to have a certificate to operate, the installing of the system by the patentee was an implied license and the furnishing of the written license is largely a matter of form. Hankee v. Arundel Realty Co., 98 Minn. 219, 108 N. W. 842.

Performance held not substantial: The doctrine of substantial performance does not apply where the variation from the terms of the contract are so substantial that an allowance out of the contract price of damages for the deviations would not give the owner essentially what he contracted for. Hoglund v. Sortedahl [Minn.] 112 N. W. 498. Where there is an architect's certificate of performance by the contractor, yet there are many changes from the specifications which by themselves be trivial and compensated for by money damages, and these charges are combined with the fact that there is a crack in the wall and parts of the building are out of plumb, is sufficient to warrant a jury in finding that the contract was not substantially performed. Id. Where a tank collapsed the contract price for errors and omissions.<sup>25</sup> Performance according to contract may, however, be waived by the owner or by the conduct of the parties,<sup>26</sup> in which case the owner is estopped to reject the work,<sup>27</sup> but this estoppel will not prevent his rejection of the work for other defects of which he had no knowledge.<sup>28</sup> When the advertisement directs the bidders to examine the drawings and to make estimates for themselves, mistakes growing out of their neglect to do so will not be relieved,<sup>29</sup> but in an action against a contractor for breach, he may show that plans furnished him on which to bid were materially different from those by which work was to be done.<sup>30</sup>

Architects are also bound to a substantial performance of their contracts,<sup>31</sup> and there is an implied agreement that the plans shall be fit for the purpose intended.<sup>32</sup>

Impossibility of performance.<sup>33</sup>—Whether one can obtain damages for attempting work impossible of performance depends upon whether he was induced to enter upon the work by some act amounting to deceit.<sup>34</sup> Where the action of the building when nearly completed, the contractor could not recover on the theory of substantial performance. Logan v. Consolidated Gas Co., 107 App. Div. 384, 95 N. Y. S. 163. In building a house, contractor submitted for specified articles many which he deemed just as good. Easthampton Lumber & Coal Co. v. Worthington, 186 N. Y. 407, 79 N. E. 323. Plaintiff contracted to lay flooring on defendant's bridge but after partially performing refused to continue. Douglas v. Lowell [Mass.] 80 N. E. 510.

25. Arkansas-Missouri Zinc Co. v. Patterson, 79 Ark. 506, 96 S. W. 170; Easthampton Lumber & Coal Co. v. Worthington, 186 N. Y. 581, 79 N. E. 325. A finding that a contractor did not fully perform and that $25 should be deducted from the contract price and that the value of labor and material furnished was $175 was consistent with a finding that petitioner acted in good faith and had substantially performed. Bergfors v. Caron, 190 Mass. 168, 76 N. E. 655. The proper finding for the jury to make is not the amount of money which would be required to make the tower conform to the specifications, but the diminished value of the tower by reason of the failure to construct in accordance with the specifications. Village of Madisonville v. Rosser, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 387.

26. Logan v. Consolidated Gas Co., 107 App. Div. 384, 95 N. Y. S. 163. Where a provision that a contract for building shall not be sublet is violated to the owner's knowledge who sees the work performed without objection, such a prohibition is waived. Bader v. New York, 101 N. Y. S. 351. Where a contractor agreed to clear a road bed according to specifications by the railroad engineers but no specifications were shown him, but he worked under the engineer's supervision, the specifications are not admissible in an action for work done under the contract for the purpose of estimating amount of work done. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Bogan, 78 Ark. 173, 95 S. W. 448. Where specifications in a contract are not followed, the builder is liable for damages unless the other party knows of and acquiesces in the variance. Arkwright Mills v. Aultman & Taylor Mach. Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 783.

27. The owner of a boat specified with the builder that it should have a draft of 23 inches, but after it was started knew that its draft would exceed this but made no objection and continued to make suggestions and changes as to construction. Marine Iron Works v. Wiess [C. C. A.] 148 F. 145.

28. A guarantee that a boat could maintain speed of fourteen knots when built. Marine Iron Works v. Wiess [C. C. A.] 148 F. 145.

29. Bowers Hydraulic Dredging Co. v. U. S., 41 Ct. Cl. 214. Where bidders are informed that they must satisfy themselves as to the character of the material to be excavated and "that the government will not guarantee the accuracy of its information," a contractor cannot abandon a contract because the material proves different from that revealed by governmental borings. Lewman v. U. S., 41 Ct. Cl. 470.

30. Contract to furnish steam heat plant. Contractor refused to perform when shown construction plans on ground of variation from plans on which he bid. Beinhauer v. Baldwin Engineering Co., 104 N. Y. S. 431.

31. An architect who agrees to draw plans and specifications for a building not to cost more than $25,000 cannot recover when the lowest obtainable bid under his plans is $35,000. Graham v. Bell-Irving [Wash.] 91 P. 8.

Compensation: An architect who is to receive 5 per cent of the cost of construction is not entitled to a percentage on damages paid to contractors because of fault of owner. Boller v. New York, 117 App. Div. 458, 102 N. Y. S. 729. Evidence sufficient to warrant a finding of $500 in favor of an architect for services. Harms v. Sheppard, 30 Ky. L. R. 404, 98 S. W. 1012. In an action by an architect to recover his fees, evidence held to sustain judgment for plaintiff. There was evidence that drawings furnished by the architect were treated by the parties as those stipulated for. Evans v. Philadelphia Borse, 215 Pa. 652, 64 A. 463.

32. Where defects and omissions in an architect's plans run through the entire system so that they are useless for the guidance of builders, the architect is not entitled to recover therefor (Dunne v. Robinson, 53 Misc. 545, 103 N. Y. S. 878), and the owner is entitled to recover payments made therefor without knowledge of their uselessness (Id.).

33. See 7 C. L. 485.

34. A contracted to dig a well at a spot chosen by the city engineer, which, being in-specified is rendered impossible by the nature of the premises on which it is to be erected, the contractor is not liable for a breach if there was no occasion or opportunity for an investigation of the premises.<sup>35</sup> A contractor is excused from performance where further performance is rendered impossible by acts of the owner.<sup>36</sup>

Destruction of subject-matter.<sup>37</sup>—Where a contractor agrees to do a particular part of the work in the construction of a building or to make repairs thereon, and the building is destroyed before completion, he is excused from further performance and may recover for what he has done,<sup>38</sup> but the rule excusing nonperformance in case of the destruction of the thing assumed as the basis of the contract does not apply where the thing destroyed is the thing which one of the parties expressly agreed to construct and deliver,<sup>39</sup> and even though the fall is due to inherent defects in the plans, the contractor must bear the loss,<sup>40</sup> but if it fall on that account after completion the loss must be borne by the owner,<sup>41</sup> and if after destruction of the subject-matter without fault of the owner the contractor refuses to proceed further, he is liable to refund any money which may have been paid and also for damages for nonperformance,<sup>42</sup> and the fact that the money is to be paid by instalments, if the contract price is for an entire sum for a completed building, does not affect this principle, if the instalments are arbitrary and fixed without regard to the value or any distinctive portion of the work done.<sup>43</sup> If, however, the price is payable in instalments which are fixed with regard to the value of the work done, the builder may recover for the instalments fully earned,<sup>44</sup> but it seems that he has no claim for a proportional part of the next instalment which has been only partially earned,<sup>45</sup> but if the destruction of the subject-matter of the contract is due to the owner's fault, the contractor may recover for part performance;<sup>46</sup> and where a builder has contracted to construct buildings upon foundation walls already laid and one of the buildings collapses owing to a giving away of a foundation wall, he is entitled to recover for part performance under his contract, if there was nothing in the foundation walls to indicate to one giving them such an inspection as a builder would indicated, he attempted to dig, but was prevented from completing his work by an inrush of water which might have been due to an old well hole dug by the city and then covered up. Murland v. Atlantic City [N. J. Err. & App.] 65 A. 1049.

35. The contractor agreed to construct a booth to be set up in the agricultural pavillion at the World's Fair. When the material arrived ready to be set up it was found that the floor fell away seven inches and it was necessary to reconstruct parts of the booth. Beattie Mfg. Co. v. Heinz, 120 Mo. App. 465, 97 S. W. 188.

39. Agreement to construct and deliver gas holder and tank complete. Logan v. Consolidated Gas Co., 107 App. Div. 384, 95 N. Y. S. 163.

40. Firm of building contractors specified that a building was to be erected according to the plans of an architect and the work to be done under his direction and to his satisfaction. The building when nearing completion collapsed solely by reason of defects in the plans, etc. This did not excuse the contractors. American Surety Co. v. San Antonio Loan & Trust Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 387.

41. American Surety Co. v. San Antonio Loan & Trust Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 387.

42. Keel v. East Carolina Stone & Const. Co., 143 N. C. 429, 55 S. E. 826. Where four notes for $1,000 each were given by the owner at the time a contract was entered for the construction of a building to be paid upon the completion of the building and the building was destroyed before completion, the contractor refusing to go on with the work, these notes never having been earned and become due, the owner is entitled to have them given up and canceled. Id.

43. Keel v. East Carolina Stone & Const. Co., 143 N. C. 429, 55 S. E. 826.

44. When walls of building reached second story $950 was due the contractor and was paid. Building then destroyed by fire and contractor refused to complete. Owner could not recover back $950. Keel v. East Carolina Stone & Const. Co., 143 N. C. 429, 55 S. E. 826.

45. Keel v. East Carolina Stone & Const. Co., 143 N. C. 429, 55 S. E. 826.

give that they were defective.<sup>47</sup> And this is true although the owner was ignorant of the incompetency of the person who built the foundation.<sup>48</sup>

§ 3. Modification of contract, and changes in plans and specifications.<sup>49</sup>—Where a contract provides for changes only upon the order of the architect, it is fair to assume without direct evidence of such order that if architect was present any change made was at his order,<sup>50</sup> but if the written order of the architect is required, changes on his oral order will not bind the owner.<sup>51</sup>

§ 4. Extra work.<sup>52</sup>—An extra in a building contract is something beyond or outside its provisions.<sup>53</sup> Changes in the depth of a foundation wall from that specified in the contract is an alteration and not an extra.<sup>54</sup> The contractor cannot charge for extra work made necessary by his faulty performance.<sup>55</sup> Where a written contract provides that no extra work shall be done unless ordered in writing with price named, and the fact that the work was extra stated, yet if the owner orally orders work and receives the benefit thereof he is liable therefor.<sup>56</sup> Where extra work is necessary to be performed before the terms of the contract can be carried out, the contractor is not entitled to abandon his contract but should do it himself recovering extra compensation therefor or demand of the owner to have it done.<sup>57</sup> The contractor cannot, however, recover for extra work demanded by the owner as a matter of right.<sup>58</sup>

§ 5. Delay in performance.<sup>59</sup>—Where a contract is indefinite as to the time of its completion, then the work must be done within reasonable time,<sup>60</sup> but, if a party contracts to do a certain thing within certain time without exceptions on account of contingencies which may arise, he is liable for nonperformance within the time stipulated, though unavoidably prevented,<sup>61</sup> unless he is hindered by the

52. See 7 C. L. 485.

53. The fact that the contractor had to dig to a great depth and use a large amount of material in laying a foundation cannot be charged for as extra where the contract provided that he should go to "solid ground." Hennessey v. Fleming Bros. [Colo.] 90 P. 77. Removing rubbish from premises at owner's request is an extra. Hennessey v. Fleming Bros. [Colo.] 90 P. 77. Work, though not shown by plan, held not an extra. Langford v. Manchester [Mass.] 81 N. E. 884.

54. Contract provided no alterations to be made without the written order of the architect. The change having been made without the written order the contractor sought to recover on the ground that it was an extra. Chicago Lumber & Coal Co. v. Garmer [Iowa] 109 N. W. 780.

55. Where a contractor agrees to dig a foundation to a certain depth but in blasting out rock loosened the rock to a greater depth and is compelled to take it out by the architect so that the foundation may be on solid rock, he cannot recover for such work as extra. Gallick v. Ebling, 52 Misc. 533, 102 N. Y. S. 803.

56. Clark v. Harris, 53 Misc. 556, 103 N. Y. S. 785. Where the owner familiar with carpentering sees a contractor doing work not called for by the contract and not ordered by him, he is liable therefor as for extra work. New York Metal Ceiling Co. v. Leonard, 48 Misc. 500, 96 N. Y. S. 187. Evidence held sufficient to show an order by the owner to subcontractor to do extra work. New York Metal Ceiling Co. v. Minsky, 104 N. Y. S. 759.

57. Contractor agreed to resurface a railroad bed. In order to do this it was necessary that some old grading be done. There was dispute as to whether this was included in the contract and contractor abandoned his contract. He could recover on quantum meruit. Henderson-Boyd Lumber Co. v. Cook [Ala.] 42 So. 838.

Not excused by strike in brick factory from which contractor ordered brick. Nehlett v. McGraw [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1113. A contractor who has agreed to commence excavations for a canal whenever ordered cannot excuse his failure to commence because of the fact that the ground was frozen. Harley v. Sanitary Dist., 226 Ill. 213, 80 N. E. 771. Where a contractor agrees to begin excavation work for a canal for a city when fault of the other party,<sup>62</sup> an act of God, or the law.<sup>63</sup> In the event of delay due to such causes, the contractor's time is thus extended for a reasonable time,<sup>64</sup> and he is not required to abandon his contract but may continue and recover for any losses due to the delay.<sup>65</sup> A provision that the contractor waives all damages for delay caused by the owner, stipulating only for a proportional extension of the time to complete, is valid,<sup>66</sup> but a mere provision for proportional extension does not per se operate as a waiver of damages.<sup>67</sup> Where time is not of the essence of the contract, a failure to complete upon the agreed date will not prevent recovery,<sup>68</sup> less, however, the damage to the owner which is usually the loss of rent.<sup>69</sup> Delay due to errors in the architect's plans or specifications which could not have been detected by the contractor is excusable.<sup>70</sup> A provision that no allowance will be made for delays due to any cause whatsoever, unless claimed as soon as the cause for delay arises and the duration of the delay is certified by the architect, is binding and will be enforced by the courts.<sup>71</sup> As the damages resulting from delay are difficult of being ascertained and may be unusual and extraordinary, the parties should agree in advance as to what the damages shall be, for remote or speculative damages cannot be recovered,<sup>72</sup> and such stipulated sum will be binding in the absence of fraud or mistake.<sup>73</sup> notified, after receiving notice he cannot justify a failure to commence work on the ground that the city has no title to the right of way when there has been a condemnation and he takes and holds possession. Id. Delay caused by mistake made by a contractor in the size of the base of a sarcophagus, the dimensions of which were given in the contract. Fish v. Correll [Cal. App.] 88 P. 489.

62. Architect's specifications wrong so that building could not be completed unless plans changed. This necessitated working over many parts constructed and for this contractor might recover extra compensation. Beattie Mfg. Co. v. Heinz, 120 Mo. App. 465, 97 S. W. 188; American Surety Co. v. San Antonio Loan & Trust Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 387. Delay caused by failure of architect to furnish specifications. Snead & Co. Iron Works v. Merchants Loan & Trust Co., 225 Ill. 442, 80 N. E. 237. Where two contracts for the construction of a pipe line were entered into, the mere fact that the owner requested contract B be performed before contract A does not show any excuse for delay. First Nat. Bk. v. Carroll [Mont.] 88 P. 1012. Where under a contract to construct a certain pipe line the owner gratuitously had an inspector at the factory where the contractor purchased material pass upon the same and such inspector allowed some defective material to pass him which had to be returned causing delay, the cause of these delays cannot be charged to the owner, for without his providing an inspector much more defective material might have been furnished. Id. Where a contract of street improvement was entered into on the understanding that the city had acquired a right of way, losses due to failure of such right of way may be recovered. Sheehan v. Pittsburg, 213 Pa. 133, 62 A. 642. Where a contractor agrees with a city to construct a street, removing all obstructions in the way, within a certain number of working days, and is delayed by telegraph poles of a railroad company and the laying of water pipes, none of which obstructions he had a legal right to remove, it was the duty of the city to see that these matters did not cause delay, and if delay was caused the contractor was entitled to credit therefor. Smith Cont. Co. v. New York, 115 App. Div. 180, 100 N. Y. S. 756.

63. American Surety Co. v. San Antonio Loan & Trust Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 387.

64. The contractor was delayed far beyond the specified time by acts of the owner, and it was held that the reasonable time to be allowed him should be extended by reason of a strike occurring just as he was about to commence work. Barnum v. Williams, 115 App. Div. 694, 102 N. Y. S. 874.

65. Where, on default of a city in obtaining a right of way, a contractor for construction of a street is delayed, he does not waive losses due thereto by continuing the work. Sheehan v. Pittsburg, 213 Pa. 133, 62 A. 642. Because of a strike, wages were higher and it was necessary to employ inexperienced men, causing additional expense which contractor might recover for if due to owner's delay. Barnum v. Williams, 115 App. Div. 694, 102 N. Y. S. 874.

Where contractor failed to complete a building upon the agreed date but did so later, the owner is entitled to nominal damages at least.<sup>74</sup> Where a date is fixed for the completion of a contract, it is for the benefit of the owner and not the contractor, and he cannot refuse to continue his contract after the date set unless delay is caused by the owner.<sup>75</sup>

§ 6. Termination or cancellation of contract.<sup>76</sup>—A contractor who is prevented from completing his work by acts of the owner may abandon his contract,<sup>77</sup> and he may recover for all work and material furnished up to the time of abandonment.<sup>78</sup> A difference of opinion as to the construction of a contract does not justify the contractor in abandoning the contract altogether.<sup>79</sup> Notifying a contractor that he is going to get some one else to perform the work is a rescission of the contract by the owner.<sup>80</sup>

§ 7. Completion by owner or third person.<sup>81</sup>—Where a contractor abandons his contract and the owner completes the same, the contractor may recover the balance of the contract price after deducting the cost of completion to the owner.<sup>82</sup> Where a contract has been rightfully canceled, and it is provided that under such circumstances the owner may complete the contract and recover of the contractor the sums expended in excess of the contract price, the owner is entitled to recover for all such sums expended in good faith and the reasonableness of the amount can not be questioned.<sup>83</sup> If it appears that the owner did work which should have been done by the contractor, a reduction will be allowed from the contract price.<sup>84</sup> Where tractors large sums on this account, the seller is not liable unless he had notice of the contract between the owner and contractor at the time of the sale. Delivery of rails sold to railroad delayed several months. Gorham v. Dallas, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 365, 95 S. W. 551.

73. In a contract to decorate a building it was agreed that as damages would be difficult of computation the sum of fifty dollars a day for delay in completing the work would be considered as liquidated damages. Chapman Decorative Co. v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 189. Stipulation for five dollars a day as liquidated damages for delay in constructing house will be sustained by the court. Jenkins v. American Surety Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 1112. Where delay is caused by the contractor's fault, the owner may recover the rental value of the premises, lost by such delay, of the contractor's surety. Tally v. Ganahl [Cal.] 90 P. 1049.

75. Contractor ordered bricks of sufficient quantity to complete buildings, all to be delivered before Dec. 1st. They were not delivered at that time and brickmaker claimed the right to refuse to deliver at contract price after Dec. 1. Rosenthal v. Empire Brick & Supply Co., 104 N. Y. S. 769.

76. See 7 C. L. 488.

77. The plaintiff contracted to put iron stairs and elevators in defendant's building by a certain date but was prevented from doing so because the building was not ready to receive them. Barnum v. Williams, 115 App. Div. 694, 102 N. Y. S. 874. Contract to macadamize streets. Monthly payments to be made upon estimates by the city's engineer. These estimates were furnished but payment was not made and contractor abandoned his contract. Peet v. East Grand Forks [Minn.] 112 N. W. 1003. Evidence insufficient to show that contractor was notified by owner to discontinue drilling well. Lemaster v. Southern Missouri R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 313, 99 S. W. 500.

78. Plaintiff contracted to put in iron stairs and elevators in defendant's building by a certain date but was prevented from doing so owing to condition of the building. Part of the iron work had been set up and the remainder was manufactured and ready to be put in place. Barnum v. Williams, 115 App. Div. 694, 102 N. Y. S. 874. Payments were not made monthly as agreed. Peet v. East Grand Forks [Minn.] 112 N. W. 1003.

79. Difference of opinion between a contractor to construct sewers as to whether certain additional work made necessary by a change in the location of a sewer should be paid for at regular rates or at price for extra work. Somerset Borough v. Ott, 216 Pa. 557, 65 A. 1101.

80. Where a contractor agreed to construct buildings upon foundations already laid and, one of the foundation walls giving away, the owner wrote that not knowing who was responsible he would get a new contractor, this was a rescission of the contract. Colgan v. O'Rourke, 215 Pa. 308, 64 A. 529.

a contract provides that the architect "shall be at liberty" to complete the contract upon default by the contractor at the contractor's expense, an action may be brought against the contractor for breach, although the architect has made no attempt to complete.<sup>85</sup>

§ 8. Architect's and other certificates of performance, and arbitration of disputes.<sup>86</sup>—Where the architect's certificate is provided for in the contract as a condition precedent to recovery or for any other purpose, its production is necessary despite actual performance<sup>87</sup> in the absence of evidence that it is wrongfully withheld,<sup>88</sup> or its production waived,<sup>89</sup> or the contractor has abandoned the work<sup>90</sup> or has been ousted under another clause of the contract.<sup>91</sup> The certificate is final<sup>92</sup> in the absence of fraud or such gross mistake as implies bad faith,<sup>93</sup> although in construing provisions in a building contract for arbitration of differences by the architect the courts will adopt the construction sustaining the jurisdiction of the contractor which was of the original contract. Conroy v. Carlin, 96 N. Y. S. 141.

89. Where architect's certificate is necessary to allow for delays, yet, if all parties meet and agree upon a final settlement the architect issuing a certificate therefor, the owner cannot claim liquidated damages provided for delay on the ground that the architect has not given a certificate allowing such delay. Bloomington Hotel Co. v. Garthwait [Ill.] 81 N. E. 714.

90. Certificate of completion is waived where the owner completes the building according to the terms of the contract. Bader v. New York, 101 N. Y. S. 351. Where a building contract provided for the employment of more men by the owner at the contractor's expense if the architect certified that not enough men were employed, and the contractor abandoned the contract altogether, the owner may complete the work and recover damages without the architect's certificate, for this was provided for in the case of the displacement of the contractor against his will, but does not apply where he voluntarily abandons the contract and forces the other party to perform the entire work. Smith v. Jewell [Md.] 65 A. 6. Where a contract with a subcontractor provided that the contractor might complete the work upon a certificate from the architect that there was occasion for it, such a certificate is not necessary where the subcontractor has abandoned his work, and the contractor may complete the work and recover of the surety without any certificate. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Probst, 30 Ky. L. R. 63, 97 S. W. 405. Where a contractor has abandoned his contract, the architect's certificate of completion is not necessary in a suit by the owner against the surety. *Jenkins v. Excavations for a roadbed, payments to be based on estimates made by the railroad engineers. Cook v. Foley [C. C. A.] 152 F. 41. Where a contract provided for decision of matters in dispute by the engineer, with a right of appeal to a body of three arbitrators, the engineer's decision is final in the absence of fraud unless an appeal is taken and is a defense to an action at law. Roberts, Johnson & Rand Shoe Co. v. Westinghouse Elec. & Mfg. Co. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 218. Contract for the construction of a railroad. Carlile v. Corrigan [Ark.] 103 S. W. 620.

court rather than that ousting it.<sup>94</sup> A very high degree of proof is required to impeach the finding of an engineer whose estimates of work done are made final by the contract.<sup>95</sup> Such a provision is not binding where it is subsequently agreed between the parties that the decision shall not be relied on<sup>96</sup> or another umpire is substituted by consent of the parties.<sup>97</sup> A provision in a contract that work shall be satisfactory to a named person is also binding, and the contractor cannot recover unless it is so satisfactory,<sup>98</sup> but a mere arbitrary or capricious expression of dissatisfaction would not prevent recovery.<sup>99</sup> Where an architect in making a finding departs from the authority conferred upon him by the contract and his award is made as an entirety, it is not binding and is wholly ineffectual.<sup>1</sup> An arbitrator authorized to pass upon any question or dispute is entitled to determine whether one party is entitled to recover a liquidated sum provided for as damages for delay.<sup>2</sup> A provision for the work on a building to be performed in the best manner and the materials of the best quality, subject to the acceptance or rejection of the architect, all to be done in strict accordance with the plans and specifications, does not make the acceptance by the architect final and conclusive and will not bind the owner or relieve the contractor from the agreement to perform according to plans and specifications.<sup>3</sup> Though no provision is made as to the effect of engineers if the owner habitually pays thereon without question, estimates after the establishment of such usage will be treated as prima facie evidence.<sup>4</sup> The certificate may be by the architect acting at the time the certificate is required<sup>5</sup> and should substantially certify the facts as

94. Owner to supply more men if architect certified not enough men employed. Contractor abandoned contract and owner completed without architect's certificate, and it was held this situation was not contemplated by the contract. Smith v. Jewell [Md.] 65 A. 6. Where a contract provided for arbitration of all differences, and also for the removal of the contractor by the engineer if he saw fit, if the contractor is removed this is a waiver of a right of arbitration, and the contractor is entitled to bring an action at law to determine his damages. Clark & Sons Co. v. Pittsburgh, 146 F. 441.

95. Findings as to amount of earth excavated. Cook v. Foley [C. C. A.] 152 F. 41. The fact that the decision of an umpire differs from that of others subsequently employed is no evidence of fraud or gross mistake. Carlile v. Corrigan [Ark.] 103 S. W. 620.

96. An estimate of the amount of work done, rendered by an umpire, does not preclude an action on the contract where by agreement of the parties a more correct estimate is to be made. Edwards v. Harts-horn, 72 Kan. 19, 82 P. 520.

97. Seretto v. Rockland, etc., R. Co., 101 Me. 140, 63 A. 651.

98. Arkansas-Missouri Zinc Co. v. Patterson, 79 Ark. 506, 96 S. W. 170. Where the plaintiff contracted to install a concentrator to the satisfaction of one of the members of the defendant corporation, which member was present and watched the process of installing the machinery and expressed no dissatisfaction, he cannot recover if the member refuses to accept the work after it is finished, for the member was not estopped from refusing to accept by his previous silence. Id.

99. Contractor to install a concentrator to the satisfaction of the purchaser. Arkansas, Missouri Zinc Co. v. Patterson, 79 Ark. 506, 96 S. W. 170.

1. Architect in making an award determined that certain photographs were parts of an ambiguous contract, and that a certain letter referring to the same ambiguity was not, while the court found the reverse to be true and upset the award. Snead & Co. Iron Works v. Merchants Loan & Trust Co., 225 Ill. 442, 80 N. E. 237.

2. Director of public works appointed arbitrator by a contract found that delays caused in the work of building a reservoir were not due to the contractor and that the city was not entitled to liquidated damages of $100 per day as provided in the contract for delay. Jonathan Clark & Sons Co. v. Pittsburg [Pa.] 66 A. 154.

3. Action against contractor's surety. Defendant objected to evidence that building not up to specifications on the ground that the architect had certified that the building was properly constructed. Evidence held admissible. Mercantile Trust Co. v. Hensey, 205 U. S. 298, 51 Law. Ed. 811.

4. Freygang v. Vera Cruz & P. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 154 F. 640.

5. Where a contract provided that the architect should certify any damage to the owner caused by the contractor, and the contractor abandoned the work and the architect was discharged, the work being completed by a new contractor and a new architect, a certificate of damage signed by the new architect and the only remaining member of the firm of original architects is a sufficient certificate entitling recovery of damages from the surety. Tally v. Ganahl [Cal.] 90 P. 1049; McKenzie v. Barrett [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 641, 98 S. W. 229.

to which certificate is required.<sup>6</sup> A final certificate usually exhausts the power to certify.<sup>7</sup>

§ 9. Acceptance.<sup>8</sup>—The occupation or taking possession of buildings not in compliance with the requirements of the contract is not an acceptance,<sup>9</sup> and, where a test or certificate is provided for in the contract, acts of possession antecedent thereto will not ordinarily be considered an acceptance;<sup>10</sup> but where the owner, though protesting, takes possession of a building, pointing out defects which the contractor remedies, and the contractor requests that any further defects be pointed out to him, this is conduct on the part of the owner amounting to acceptance.<sup>11</sup>

§ 10. Payment.<sup>12</sup>

§ 11. Subcontracts.<sup>13</sup>—A time limit known to the subcontractor will be imported into the subcontract, though it contains no time limit,<sup>14</sup> but a reference by a subcontractor to the plans and specifications for a specific purpose does not of itself imply an intention to adopt the same with respect to all other provisions, and it is competent to refer to such contract for a specific purpose only,<sup>15</sup> and adoption by subcontract of so much of original contract as was applicable has been held not to adopt provision that extra work should not be allowed for unless ordered by engineer in writing.<sup>16</sup> Where a subcontractor abandons his contract and the contractor completes it, he is entitled to recover of the subcontractor only his necessary and reasonable expenses and not necessarily the actual cost,<sup>17</sup> but the subcontractor is not liable in damages for default due to the contractor.<sup>18</sup> For delay of a subcontractor, the contractor may recover wages and hire of men and machinery kept idle, but ordinarily

6. Where an architect's certificate is required before payment, a statement of a claim for a lien filed in court marked "O. K. except the last item" and signed by the architect is not sufficient. Provost v. Shirk, 223 Ill. 468, 79 N. E. 178. An itemized account of amounts expended by the owner in completing a builder's contract introduced in evidence in a suit against the surety which is signed by the architect who swears on the stand that he has approved and certified each item is a substantial compliance with a contract requirement that amounts so expended should be audited and certified by the architect. McKenzie v. Barrett [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 641, 98 S. W. 229.

9. Douglas v. Lowell [Mass.] 80 N. E. 510; Gier v. Daiber [Mich.] 14 Det. Leg. N. 183, 111 N. W. 773. Where a contractor has built an addition to a house and turned it over as completed to a third party to plaster, the act by the owner of having it plastered is not an acceptance. Schindler v. Green [Cal. App.] 82 P. 341.

10. Getting ready to use a tank in case it met a test held no acceptance. Logan v. Consolidated Gas Co., 107 App. Div. 384, 95 N. Y. S. 163. Where a contractor agreed to construct and deliver a gas holder and tank complete, and that the structure should not be accepted until tested, the mere delivery of bills of sale to the owner as the work progressed was not a modification of the contract, or an acceptance, so as to render the owner liable for the loss due to a destruction of the tank while being tested. Id. It was im-material where the title to the property was during performance. Id. Where a contractor has abandoned his work after supplying defective materials and some payments have been made on account, there is no acceptance of the material where the contract provided for an architect's certificate of completion, and also that payments on account should not be construed as acceptance of work done. Jenkins v. American Surety Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 1112.

11. Gier v. Daiber [Mich.] 14 Det. Leg. N. 183, 111 N. W. 773. Where a contractor agrees to do work satisfactory to the owner's superintendent, and after doing some work is told that it is not satisfactory, evidence that the owner and superintendent agreed to accept the work if certain changes were made which was done is sufficient to show that work was satisfactory to the superintendent. Lang v. Crescent Coal Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 261.

In an action by a subcontractor against the contractor, contractor held entitled to deduct value of digging a trench, which work had been included in the subcontractor's contract and omitted by him. Scanlon v. Miller, 98 N. Y. S. 662.

not for loss of his own time, or injury to business reputation or hypothetical damages which could not have entered into the minds of the parties at the time of contracting.<sup>19</sup> The contractor has no right to do work called for by a subcontractor at the expense of the subcontractor without notice to him.<sup>20</sup> The owner who in good faith pays the contractor in full is not liable to the subcontractor for work done.<sup>21</sup> A contract with a subcontractor providing that the contractor might take possession of all the subcontractor's tools and material upon his failure to perform is not susceptible of specific performance unless it appears that no similar property could be obtained in the market.<sup>22</sup>

§ 12. Bonds.<sup>23</sup>—In determining the liability of the parties to a surety bond, it should be construed with the original contract.<sup>24</sup> The surety's liability being measured in part by the terms of the original contract, it is important that this liability be not changed by material changes in the substance of the original contract or deviation from its provisions,<sup>25</sup> but immaterial alterations of a contract by the owner without the builders' knowledge will not discharge the surety,<sup>26</sup> nor will an immaterial departure from the provisions of the contract.<sup>27</sup> Defense by a surety

24. First Nat. Bk. v. School Dist. No. 1 [Neb.] 110 N. W. 349. Where a contract provided that monthly payments should be made, 20 per cent of the amount due to be retained by the owner and a surety bond given to the owner provided that not less than 15 per cent of the monthly installments should be retained, payments of all but 15 per cent was not such a breach of the original contract as would release the surety. American Surety Co. v. Scott & Co., 18 Okl. 264, 90 P. 7. In a suit on a surety bond which refers to the contract, plans, and specifications, the obligations of the bond must be construed according to the terms of the contract, plans, and specifications. McArthur v. McGilvray [Ga. App.] 57 S. E. 1058. Contractor's contract provided for a bond securing materialmen and laborers but the city accepted a bond which did not secure these. The bond could not be extended to cover these. Smith v. Bowman [Utah] 88 P. 687. Where a contract for putting in place a steam heating plant provided for certain payments upon the architect's certificate and it appeared, after the contractor abandoned the contract, that over payments had been made, but all on architect's certificates, which certificates were given in good faith by the architect, the owner acted according to the terms of the contract, and the surety cannot complain. City of New Haven v. National Steam Economizer Co., 79 Conn. 482, 65 A. 959. Where a surety bond provides that not more than 80 per cent of the value of work done shall be paid for, and further provides that the owner shall perform all the things set forth in the original contract, and one of its provisions is that the owner shall pay for work as certified to by the architect, the surety would not be released if in compliance with the terms of the contract all payments were made on the architect's certificates, but some payments, owing to mistake or collusion with the contractor on the part of the architect, were over 80 per cent. McKenzie v. Barrett [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 641, 98 S. W. 229. Specified sums provided for in the contract, to be used by the owner in supplying hardware and fixtures on approval by the architect, may be recovered of the surety if paid out as provided. Jenkins v. American Surety Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 1112.

25. City of New Haven v. National Steam Economizer Co., 79 Conn. 482, 65 A. 959.

26. The inserting of words specifically stating that a barn was to be painted where this fact was clearly implied from the original language. McKenzie v. Barrett [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 641, 98 S. W. 229.

27. Certificates calling for payments dated and paid upon different dates from that provided in the contract. City of New Haven v. National Steam Economizer Co., 79 Conn. 482, 65 A. 959.

Surety held not released: The fact that the contractors proceed with the work after the date upon which the contract required completion does not amount to an extension of time granted by the owner so as to relieve a surety. America Surety Co. v. Scott & Co., 18 Okl. 264, 90 P. 7. A continuance of work under a contract beyond the time specified for its completion does not constitute such a novation of the contract as will discharge the surety. Wing & Bostwick v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 150 F. 672. Where it is provided that a certain sum shall be retained out of the contract price until the building is completed, the payment of laborers out of this sum, who would otherwise have filed liens which the surety would have to satisfy, is not a breach sufficient to discharge the surety. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Trustees of Baptist Church of Columbus. [Ky.] 102 S. W. 325. Surety is not released by alterations if contract provided that owner may take changes in the plans (American Surety Co. v. San Antonio Loan & Trust Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 387), or where bond provides that changes may be made in the contract (American Surety Co. v. Scott & Co., 18 Okl. 264, 90 P. 7). Where overpayments are made to a contractor upon estimates furnished by the that owner did not reserve payments as provided for in the contract is unavailable where not pleaded.<sup>28</sup> Under United States statutes providing for the giving of a bond by the contractor to pay all claims for labor and material, etc., where a contractor's surety was compelled to pay labor and material claims to an amount exceeding that due from the government, the surety is subrogated to the funds due to such laborers and materialmen in preference to a mere debt for money lent.<sup>29</sup> Where a contractor, unable to complete his contract, obtains assistance from another who is to receive as compensation a percentage of the gross outlay, such other person is not a subcontractor but a lender of credit and as such is not entitled to recover a deficit from the contractor's surety under the United States statute providing for a bond to protect laborers and materialmen.<sup>30</sup> The surety of a defaulting contractor is preferred in his right to be subrogated to earned payments over an equitable assignee of the contract.<sup>31</sup> Rights under a general surety bond may be assigned.<sup>32</sup> A contractor's surety bond which provides that he shall pay for material and labor used in the construction of a building is not only for the benefit of the owner but for laborers and materialmen who may sue to enforce the same in their own names.<sup>33</sup> The owner after abandonment of contract by contractor may recover against the surety for amounts of liens paid by him which contractor has admitted as proper,<sup>34</sup> and attorney's fees in defending a mechanic's lien where it architect, as provided in the contract, the owner is not chargeable with the inefficiency or mistakes of his architect, provided an attempt at an estimate is really made if the deficiencies are not so great as to put him on inquiry or he has no actual notice of the incorrectness of the estimates. Architect made estimates for payment for marble based on invoices on which material was shipped from the quarry and on representations of the builder. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Agnew [C. C. A.] 152 F. 955. The failure to complete a contract on time is not such breach and abandonment of the contract as requires notice from owner to surety as provided for in bond. American Surety Co. v. Scott & Co., 18 Okl. 264, 90 P. 7. Where a subcontractor's surety had received notice of the termination of the contract both from the architect and the contractor, who was liable under his contract to complete the work the subcontractor was about to abandon, the fact that a new contract is made, not differing substantially from the conditions of the original contract, without notice to the surety, did not release the surety from liability. Wing & Bostwick Co. v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 150 F. 672. Contractor ceased work, owing to weather in January claiming that he would complete his contract at the stipulated time. In April the owner definitely learned that he had abandoned his contract and sent written notice within thirty days to the surety. This was sufficient. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Trustees of Baptist Church of Columbus [Ky.] 102 S. W. 325.

Surety held released: If a stipulation for a reservation of part of the contract price until after completion is waived by the owner without consent of the surety, it operates to discharge him. National Surety Co. v. Long, 79 Ark. 523, 96 S. W. 745. Where a contract provides for the payment of a contractor as the work progresses for labor and materials as estimated by the architect, an advance or overpayment so prejudices a surety that it operates as a discharge as a matter of law. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Agnew [C. C. A.] 152 F. 955.

Failure to notify the surety that the contractor would not be able to complete his contract on time until two weeks have elapsed since the actual failure to complete on time is a substantial breach, and action cannot be maintained against surety. Surety provided that if at any time it appeared that contractor would not be able to complete the building on time the owner would immediately notify the surety company. National Surety Co. v. Long, 79 Ark. 523, 96 S. W. 745. A provision in a surety bond that the surety shall not be liable unless notified at once of the failure of the insured contractor to carry out his contract is of the essence of the surety contract, and, unless such notice is given, no damages can be recovered of the surety. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Rice [C. C. A.] 148 F. 206.

32. A contractor assigned to the owner his rights under a subcontractor's surety bond. Wing & Bostwick v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 150 F. 672.

33. Ochs v. Carnahan Co. [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 163. Although statutes prohibit liens against public buildings, and there is no express authority for the trustees of the state college to take a bond from contractor securing payment for labor and material, yet a bond taken may be enforced by the beneficiaries. Smith v. Bowman [Utah] 88 P. 687.

34. Jenkins v. American Surety Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 1112. A contractor may recover of a subcontractor's surety the amounts paid to satisfy liens. United States is provided that the contractor shall deliver the premises free of liens.<sup>35</sup> Materialmen may sue on bond in name of obligee to their use.<sup>36</sup> A bond allowing recovery in the name of the owner by parties furnishing material to the contractor cannot be taken advantage of by one supplying material to a subcontractor where the original contract provides that the owner will recognize none but the original contractors throughout the transaction.<sup>37</sup> Where a surety bond provided that the surety should be liable until completion and acceptance of a building, the surety's liability continued until both contingencies occurred.<sup>38</sup>

§ 1. Definition and statutory regulation.<sup>41</sup>—A foreign company has no standing as a loan association in another state if from its powers and business transactions it is not such an association within the laws of that state.<sup>42</sup>

§ 2. Membership and stock.<sup>43</sup>—Though shares are illegally issued, members who accept them and receive the benefits conferred will not be permitted to assert their invalidity to the prejudice of others.<sup>44</sup> One may recover against an association for deceit in procuring stock subscriptions by false representations as to solvency and readiness to make loans.<sup>45</sup>

Charters and by-laws.<sup>46</sup>—The board of directors of an Illinois homestead and loan association have no power to enact by-laws.<sup>47</sup>

Kinds of stock.<sup>48</sup>—The issuance of a kind of stock not authorized by the act under which an association was incorporated is ultra vires the association.<sup>49</sup>

Payments of dues.<sup>50</sup>—Since the right of an association to impose fines for failure to pay dues or other charges is statutory only, the legislature may limit it even as to already existing loans.<sup>51</sup> A court will not enforce a by-law which is ambiguous as to the principle on which a fine is to be calculated.<sup>52</sup>

ing that no profit or interest shall be paid on stock after it has matured does not disable the association from borrowing from a holder of matured stock the amount he is entitled to receive therefor;<sup>54</sup> and the association will not be heard to deny the power of its executive officers to execute a note for such amount pursuant to a custom prevailing in the management of its business.<sup>55</sup> One who receives such a note in settlement is no longer a member but a creditor of the association regardless of the validity of the note.<sup>56</sup>

§ 3. Loans and mortgages. A. In general.<sup>57</sup>—In the absence of statutory restrictions the power of an association to borrow money is implied from the general nature of its business.<sup>58</sup> In any event a plea of ultra vires is unavailing in a suit to enforce a certificate issued for money borrowed for the benefit of its members where it refuses to restore the benefits received and outside creditors are not involved.<sup>59</sup>

An association may estop itself by its conduct or negligence from showing that its president had not authority under its by-laws to accept payment of a mortgage from a member and cancel the mortgage.<sup>60</sup> Notice to the secretary of an incorporated association of the fraudulent release of a mortgage is notice to the association.<sup>61</sup> Fines cannot be included in a foreclosure decree where not provided for either by the bond or the mortgage.<sup>62</sup>

The attempted fixing of interest and premium rates by the resolution of a board of directors having no power to enact by-laws is not a compliance with a statute authorizing the fixing of rates by by-law instead of by competitive bidding. *Loan held usurious. clear that a borrower also sustains to the association the relation of a bona fide stockholder, stock dues will not be credited as payments on the loan for the purpose of determining whether such loan was usurious;<sup>69</sup> and a transaction is not usurious if there is nothing to prevent the borrower from discharging the note by payment according to its terms and also paying up the stock and holding it as absolute owner.<sup>70</sup> A purchaser who assumes payment of a usurious loan as a part of the consideration cannot be relieved from the usury.<sup>71</sup>

(§ 3) C. Accounting with borrower while solvent.<sup>72</sup>—A borrower may agree to have all past and future payments of dues on the stock credited on the loan,<sup>73</sup> and it is immaterial that the election is written in the assignment of the stock as collateral rather than on the bond and mortgage where the different papers are delivered concurrently in one transaction.<sup>74</sup> But in the absence of any agreement to that effect, stock payments will not be applied on the loan.<sup>75</sup> Usurious premiums may be credited on the debt,<sup>76</sup> but will not always be credited as of the date of payment or draw interest from that date.<sup>77</sup>

(§ 3) D. Accounting after insolvency.<sup>78</sup>—Upon the appointment of a receiver in insolvency, mortgages held against members immediately become due and may be foreclosed,<sup>79</sup> and limitations will run from that time.<sup>80</sup> The prevailing doctrine seems to be that payments on stock cannot then be credited on the debt,<sup>81</sup> though in some states it is held that a member is entitled to credit on the loan not only for premiums and interest but also for stock dues.<sup>82</sup> In Pennsylvania the borrower may not after insolvency elect to receive such credit,<sup>83</sup> but insolvency does not affect the validity of an election made prior thereto.<sup>84</sup> The act of an association in depositing with an officer of another state its securities as a condition to doing business in that state and as a trust fund for members in that state only, destroys the fundamental principle upon which its organization was based;<sup>85</sup> and in a suit to enforce a bond and mortgage so deposited and given by one not residing in that state, his contract with the association will be held by such act to have been abrogated ab initio,<sup>86</sup> and he will be regarded as a simple debtor and credited with all sums paid as interest or stock dues.<sup>87</sup> Such member is not estopped to question the act of the association in thus giving a preference to other members where he is without knowledge thereof until after the insolvency.<sup>88</sup>

§ 4. Termination and insolvency.<sup>89</sup>—A receiver will not be appointed for a reorganized association on mere suggestion that the trustees were too closely connected with the former management, and criticism as to the manner of their selection.<sup>90</sup> The impounding of assets and appointment of receivers does not deprive an association of power to employ counsel to defend its interests.<sup>91</sup> When authorized by the court a receiver may maintain an action against a stockholder to recover a fund unlawfully withdrawn and which belongs to the association for distribution among all the stockholders.<sup>92</sup>

General creditors are entitled to priority from the assets against the shareholders as such.<sup>93</sup> The holders of certificates for the payment of money issued by an association for the purpose of raising funds for the benefit of its borrowing members and secured by cash or securities in the hands of a trustee are creditors and not stockholders and are entitled to be paid by the trustee in full and without deductions for cost, expenses, or premiums.<sup>94</sup> After stock has matured and the holder has been given a note for the amount found due, he also occupies the position of a creditor, and whether the note be valid or not he cannot be relegated to the position of a member where the association was solvent until after he retired, though insolvent long before it ceased to do business.<sup>95</sup> Where persons deposit money with an organization styled a saving association receiving passbooks certifying that the depositor as a member is entitled to deposit shares to the amount of the credit balance therein stated bearing a dividend payable out of the earnings, such persons become members of the association and are not saving depositors of a bank within the meaning of a statute preferring such depositors in the case of the insolvency of any bank or association formed under its provisions.<sup>96</sup>

The right to priority from the assets as between different classes of shareholders will depend on the terms of the charter and by-laws.<sup>97</sup> The different classes will be treated alike as to the principal of the stock in the absence of provisions to the contrary;<sup>98</sup> but holders of stock issued "as a guaranty to the other classes of shares" in consideration of increased dividends and to provide a permanent capital for the association will be postponed to the holders of other stock.<sup>99</sup> If the holder of matured stock receives a part of its value before the appointment of a receiver and without knowledge of the insolvent condition of the association, his subsequent transferee will be entitled to dividends on the balance equally with the other stockholders without accounting for the amount paid by the association to his transferrer.<sup>1</sup>

Cumberland Inn Co.* [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 428. Laws 1897, p. 363, requiring owners of office and manufacturing buildings to provide hose, extinguishers, and such other means of preventing fires as commissioners may direct, is complied with by a system of perforated pipes connected with valves outside for use of firemen; wooden building covered with corrugated iron held not fire-proof within fire ordinance. City of Sylvania v. Hilton, 123 Ga. 754, 51 S. E. 744.

12. Under Laws 1897, p. 468, providing that where double floors are laid "carpenter contractors" shall lay under flooring on each story to not less than two stories below where work is being performed, an instruction that the owner was liable for injuries if she had a foreman on the job to put in a certain floor is improper where there was no carpenter contractor, as it was for the jury to say whether she was negligent and whether her negligence was the proximate cause of the injury. Hashagen v. Schafer, 101 N. Y. S. 11. In such case if the owner had no carpenter contractor whose duty it was to comply with the statute, such circumstance might be admissible on the question of negligence. Id.

16. St. 1892, p. 489, forbidding under penalty the erection of building having a roof with a pitch of less than 20 degrees, makes illegal the acts which it prohibits. Eastern Expanded Metal Co. v. Webb Granite & Const. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 251. A contract for the construction of a building which violates such statute is void as to both parties. Id.

17. The fact that Building Code, § 15 provides for installing perforated pipes in buildings and confers power on the building department in reference thereto is not inconsistent with the exercise of jurisdiction over the same subject matter by fire commissioner. *Lantry v. 18. An ordinance providing that no frame building shall be erected, moved, or remodeled within the city until permission shall have been obtained from all owners of permanent brick or stone structures within a radius of 60 feet from the proposed structure is void as a delegation of governmental power to citizens. Tilford v. Belknap [Ky.] 103 S. W. 289. If a municipal ordinance undertaking to prescribe fire limits and to impose restrictions upon the erection of buildings of inflammable material be in part void because the municipal authorities are without power to enforce some of the provisions and if to enforce such of its provisions as are valid will not carry out the general scheme adopted by such authorities with a view to affording necessary protection to all property exposed to more than ordinary fire risks, the whole ordinance must be declared inoperative. Town of Flackshear v. Strickland, 126 Ga. 492, 54 S. E. 966.

19. Held reasonable: Ordinance requiring temporary floors in buildings in course of erection for protection of laborers. O'Donnell v. Riter-Conley Mfg. Co., 124 Ill. App. 544. An ordinance requiring hotels to be equipped with fire escapes. Adams v. Cumberland Inn Co. [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 428.

Held unreasonable: Ordinance prohibiting erection of a frame structure within 60 feet of a brick or stone building without the consent of owner of latter. Tilford v. Belknap [Ky.] 103 S. W. 289.

20. Ordinance providing that no frame building shall be erected, moved, or remodeled within the city until permission obtained from permanent brick or stone structures within 60 feet of the proposed structure deprives the owners of frame structures of equal protection of the law and constitutes a taking of their property without due process. *Tilford v. 24. Welch v. Swasey, 193 Mass. 364, 79 N. E. 745. A rule by commissioners that no building shall be erected in a residence district higher than 80 feet unless its width on each street on which it stands is at least one-half its height is reasonable. Id.

25. Acts 1899, p. 352, providing that every hotel over three stories high and over one hundred feet long shall be equipped with iron balconies with iron stairs running from one balcony to another, does not apply to a hotel not exceeding those dimensions. Adams v. Cumberland Inn Co. [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 428. Acts 1899, p. 352, requiring that all hotels hereafter constructed of certain dimensions shall have certain means of escape in case of fire, does not apply to a building already constructed though several changes were made after that time. Id. The erection of two tenement houses fronting on the same street by the owner of two lots fronting on different streets coming together at right angles is not within the provision of the tenement house act providing that where a tenement house is erected on a lot which runs through from one street to another a yard or space shall be left in the center of the lot. *People v. 26. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 301, the board of visitors of the school for the blind has control of the buildings and grounds. Sec. 302 provides that the institution, its property, officers, and employees shall remain subject to the control of the general assembly held that though the institution was a corporation it was not subject to control of the city where its buildings were located and required to provide fire escapes under penalty as provided by ordinance. Kentucky Institution for Education of Blind v. Louisville, 30 Ky. L. R. 136, 97 S. W. 402.

27. Acts 1899, p. 352, c. 178, § 1, requiring persons for whose protection they are intended,<sup>28</sup> and while non-compliance may not subject the person required to comply to civil liability if it was not the proximate cause of injury sustained,<sup>29</sup> one for whose protection they were enacted may not waive such noncompliance.<sup>30</sup>

the keeper or proprietor of a hotel to provide each room with a rope or rope ladder, does not impose this duty on the owner of a hotel operated by a lessee. Adams v. Cumberland Inn Co. [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 428. Landlords who have a right to enter buildings to comply with orders of fire commissioners may not escape liability for failure to do so because the premises were at the time the order was made in possession of a tenant who by the terms of his lien was required to comply with all orders and laws of state and municipal authorities. Lantry v. Hoffman, 105 N. Y. S. 353. One who has an easement under the yard in the rear of the premises of another for the purpose of maintaining an engine room and boiler may not at the suit of the owners of the servient estate be required to make the roof of his enginehouse fireproof as required by law. Bachrach v. E. Seidenberg, Stiefel & Co., 105 N. Y. S. 369. An affidavit charging contractor with proceeding to erect a building without first having obtained permit from the building inspector is insufficient where the requirement of the ordinance is that such a permit shall be taken out by either the owner of the building or the contractor. City of Toledo v. Kiebler, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 437.

28. A regular boarder is within the protection of Acts 1899, p. 352, requiring every hotel over two stories high to be equipped with means of escape in case of fire. Adams v. Cumberland Inn Co. [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 428.

29. Whether failure to equip a hotel with fire escapes was the proximate cause of an injury to a guest who jumped from a window held a question for the jury. Adams v. Cumberland Inn Co. [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 428.

30. Noncompliance with statutory regulations requiring fire escapes on hotels is not waived by a guest who continues to occupy a room therein for six months with notice of such noncompliance. Adams v. Cumberland Inn Co. [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 428.

32. Korn v. Campbell, 104 N. Y. S. 462. The fact that person so acquiring tract lost it by foreclosure of purchase-money mortgage does not eliminate him from claim of title. Id. As a general rule a covenant in a deed restricting the use of land inserted for the benefit of adjoining land will be extinguished by the subsequent vesting in one person of the title to both tracts. Miscogee Mfg. Co. v. Eagle & Phenix Mills, 126 Ga. 210, 54 S. E. 1028.

33. Where several lot owners agreed to enter into a restrictive covenant which should be of no effect until signed and acknowledged by all, and a portion of them failed to execute it for eight years during which period a part of them conveyed without mention of the restriction, held the covenant was not binding. Schefer v. Ball, 53 Misc. 448, 104 N. Y. S. 1028. Mere notice of the agreement by one of the parties from the records where recorded did not make it binding on him though it was afterwards duly executed. Id.

34. Where husband and wife owned adjoining lots and on a sale of the husband's lot the wife joined in a restrictive covenant affecting hers, her dower interest in her husband's lot constituted a sufficient consideration to make the covenant binding on her. Wahl v. Story [N. J. Eq.] 66 A. 176.

35. Where a husband and wife owning adjoining lots executed an agreement that no building should be constructed on the wife's lot nearer than five feet from a certain line, but by error of the scrivener it was made binding on the husband only and the wife's name was inserted as party of the first part only, held the contract construed according to the intent of the parties was sufficient to bind the wife. Wahl v. Story [N. J. Eq.] 66 A. 176.

37. A two family house is not a violation of a restriction against the use of premises for trade manufacture, etc. McDonald v. Spang, 105 N. Y. S. 617.

38. Covenants violated: Building an apartment house is a violation of a restriction to use of lot "for residence purposes only." Burton v. Stapely, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 65. A restriction in a deed that the front of said dwelling house or any part thereof shall not be nearer to the street than the house next east means that the front walls of both houses must be in line with each other, and to build a house so that its front wall is in a line with the front of the porch of the adjacent house is a violation of the restriction in the deed. Id. A veranda is a part of a house within a restriction that a house shall not be erected within 25 feet from the street. McDonald v. Spang, 105 N. Y. S. 617. A restriction that no building shall be erected nearer to the street than 25 feet is violated where one procured a lot after the widening of the street and built nearer to the street than such distance, though the building was 25 feet

Where one platting land and selling lots inserts in each deed a restrictive covenant for the benefit of each purchaser, the covenant inures to the benefit of each regardless of whom he purchases,<sup>39</sup> and is binding on all purchasers who take with notice of it<sup>40</sup> irrespective of whether it is expressed in their deed,<sup>41</sup> and the fact that a portion of the lots were conveyed under other restrictive covenants does not show that the restriction contained in all the deeds did not apply to all the lots.<sup>42</sup>

The violation of a restrictive covenant by the grantor<sup>43</sup> or one of several grantees<sup>44</sup> will be enjoined at the suit of one for whose benefit it was executed,<sup>45</sup> irrespective of whether there was privity of estate or of contract between the parties.<sup>46</sup> But if the original grantor did not bind himself, the grantee may not pursue any other grantee to whom he conveys the whole or a part of the remaining lands.<sup>47</sup> Equitable relief against a breach of a restrictive covenant must be promptly sought.<sup>48</sup> Mere delay, however, will not bar relief where it is due to hope that the violation could be otherwise stopped.<sup>49</sup> One will not be deemed to have waived the restriction<sup>50</sup> where he asserts his right to have it enforced as soon as his rights are from the original line of the street. Id. Any building consisting of more than one story in which there are one or more suites on each floor equipped for separate housekeeping purposes in a "flat." *Lignot v. 40. Bill alleging purchase of tract by an association, its subdivision into lots, the adoption of a general building scheme, and a restrictive covenant, and its insertion in all deeds shows a right to enforce such covenant by a purchaser. Barton v. Slifer [N. J. Eq.] 66 A. 899. One who purchases a lot affected by a building restriction of which he has notice is charged with notice of the restriction as it exists though he is told that it does not prevent certain things. Wahl v. Stoy [N. J. Eq.] 66 A. 176. One who has notice of a restrictive covenant affecting his property who procures a new deed for the purpose of curing an alleged mistake as to the restriction in the original deed, a recitation as to what the restriction was does not alter it as it really exists. Id. Both buyer and his grantor must have notice of private restrictions to make them binding. *Roak v. Where a uniform plan of improvement restricting the use to which each parcel can be put is adopted and parcels are sold in reference to such plan, mutual negative easements are created irrespective of whether the covenant is expressed in the deed. Silberman v. Uhrlaub, 116 App. Div. 869, 102 N. Y. S. 299. Owners of a tract contemplating its division into small parcels adopted a general scheme of improvement and united in mutual restrictive covenants in partitioning the property. Held subsequent purchasers with notice of the scheme had a right to rely on its observance by all purchasers, whether expressed in deeds or not. Id.

44. Where the lots of a platted tract are sold under deeds containing a restrictive covenant for the benefit of all lots, a grantee of a lot may enforce the covenant against the grantor or the purchaser of another lot. Evans v. Foss [Mass.] 80 N. E. 587.

45. At the suit of one who owns property for benefit of which restriction was established. Silberman v. Uhrlaub, 116 App. Div. 869, 102 N. Y. S. 299.

A grantor who on selling a portion of a lot restricts the use of the portion granted may enforce such restriction in equity if it is reasonable. Lignot v. Jaekle [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 221. When there are restrictions put upon the grantee in a deed as to the use of the ground, a court of equity will, in behalf of the grantor, restrain any violation of the restrictions which are threatened by the grantee. Burton v. Stapely, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 65.

48. Evidence held not to show laches in a proceeding to enforce a building restriction. Lignot v. Jaekle [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 221. One who permits a breach of a covenant to continue for several years loses the right to enforce it. Leaver v. Gorman [N. J. Eq.] 67 A. 111.

49. The right to enforce a restrictive covenant against the sale of liquor will not be deemed to have been waived where the complainant at no time gave his consent to its violation, and his delay in seeking to enforce it has been due to hope that it could be otherwise stopped. Woodbine Land & Imp. Co. v. Riener [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 1004.

50. Evidence sufficient to show that a restriction against the construction of a tenement house had not been waived. Lignot v. Jaekle [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 221.

prejudiced.<sup>51</sup> One who asserts that a breach of a covenant causes no injury has the burden to prove it beyond a reasonable doubt.<sup>52</sup> Restrictive covenants will not be enforced where changed conditions render their enforcement inequitable,<sup>53</sup> or where violations thereof have been so numerous as to indicate that the covenant has been abandoned.<sup>54</sup>

§ 3. Liability for unsafe condition of premises.<sup>55</sup>—The owner<sup>56</sup> or person in possession of premises charged with the repair thereof<sup>57</sup> must exercise ordinary care to keep them in a reasonably safe condition for persons lawfully upon them, but he is not an insurer of their safe condition and is liable only for negligence.<sup>58</sup> He owes no duty to mere licensees or trespassers,<sup>59</sup> unless a nuisance exists,<sup>60</sup> the

51. That a covenant against erecting a house nearer than 25 feet from the street has not been generally observed does not preclude its enforcement by one who will be injured by its breach. McDonald v. Spang, 105 N. Y. S. 617. One is not estopped to enforce a restriction where as soon as its violation is attempted he gives notice to the foreman of the work and procures a bill to enjoin such breach as soon as possible. Barton v. Slifer [N. J. Eq.] 66 A. 899. The right of one owner in a platted tract where all lots are affected by a restriction is not lost because there have been several violations which did not affect his rights and did not show a general intention to abandon the plea in the district. Id.

52. A grantee who asserts that his breach of a building restriction does not injure the grantor must show such fact beyond the possibility of doubt. Lignot v. Jaekle [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 221.

53. The original scheme of improvement forbade the use of the property for any but residential purposes but the locality had become a manufacturing and tenement house district. Schwarz v. Duhne, 103 N. Y. S. 14. A restriction made when the locality was a residential one that no building should be erected nearer to the street than seven feet will not be enforced after the district has become a business locality. Schefer v. Ball, 53 Misc. 448, 104 N. Y. S. 1028. Where the owner of a trust subdivided it and sold the lots under deed containing a restriction against using the lots for any purpose offensive to residences, the fact that the locality was becoming a business district, that stables were built and a railroad run through it, did not show such a change of conditions as to preclude the enforcement of the restriction. Evans v. Foss [Mass.] 80 N. E. 587.

54. Where a restriction affected 150 owners but had been broken by 100 and no action was taken to enforce it except once when a case was started but permitted to rest for seven years, held the restriction was abandoned. Chelsea Land & Imp. Co. v. Adams [N. J. Err. & App.] 66 A. 180.

56. See, also, Landlord and Tenant, 8 C. L. 656. A landlord who has control of water closets is liable where by freezing and bursting they overflow. Kecoughtan Lodge No. 29, K. P. v. Steiner [Va.] 56 S. E. 569. Owner of building is also liable though tenant was required to repair. Mitchell's Adm'r v. Brady, 30 Ky. L. R. 258, 99 S. W. 266.

One who constructs a building in proximity to a street must exercise reasonable care to construct the same with such safety and security that it will withstand any wind or storm that may reasonably be expected to occur. Uggle v. Brokaw, 117 App. Div. 586, 102 N. Y. S. 857.

57. A tenant in possession of property is liable where a pipe attached to the side of the building falls onto a pedestrian in the street. Mitchell's Adm'r v. Brady, 30 Ky. L. R. 258, 99 S. W. 266. Where the owner of a building has parted with exclusive possession of it to a tenant prior to the time a skylight therefrom is blown into the street, the negligence inferable cannot relate to the landlord's possession. Uggle v. Brokaw, 117 App. Div. 586, 102 N. Y. S. 857.

58. Complaint in an action for injuries sustained by falling into a hole which fails to allege that the owner knew or should have known of the dangerous condition of the opening and in the exercise of ordinary care failed to make it safe is fatally defective. Fearon v. Mullins [Mont.] 88 P. 794. Where a mechanic familiar with the premises, knowing the purpose of a lift and manner of its operation, stepped into the lift without ascertaining whether the roof was in place, he was held guilty of contributory negligence. Gilfillan v. German Hospital & Dispensary, 115 App. Div. 48, 100 N. Y. S. 601. Where in an action for injuries it is not shown that the defendant is owner of the building or knew of defects therein nor did the extent of injuries to the person complaining appear, a nonsuit was properly granted. Jackson v. Ross [Ga. App.] 57 S. E. 913. The owner of an office building is bound to use due care with respect to the conditions of the halls and stairway for the protection of persons having business with his tenants. Construction of steps held not negligent. Bell v. Central Nat. Bk., 28 App. D. C. 580. Failure to artificially light halls in the daytime held not negligent. Id.

59. Where one employed about hospital grounds attempted to leave them by going over a wall on which the roof of a lift was located and stepped into the roof which was not secured and was injured, held that since he was not authorized to use such means of exit the defendant owed him no duty to keep it safe and was not liable. Gilfillan v. German Hospital & Dispensary, 115 App. Div. 48, 100 N. Y. S. 601.

60. A building which has been negligently permitted to remain in a dangerous condition so that portions of it may be blown into the street is a public nuisance to persons using the street. Uggle v. Brokaw, 117 liability of the owner of a building for injuries to a traveler on the highway caused by the falling of an object from the building is to be determined on the principles of negligence,<sup>61</sup> the maxim res ipsa loquitur being ordinarily applicable.<sup>62</sup> A municipal corporation is not liable for injuries sustained in buildings used wholly for governmental purposes.<sup>63</sup> But in New York City the board of education is liable for injuries resulting because of defects in a school building.<sup>64</sup>

App. Div. 586, 102 N. Y. S. 857. A complaint by one injured by being struck by a skylight blown from the roof of a building into the street which alleges that divers structures had been erected on the roof of the building in a negligent manner and that the owner's attention had been called to the fact and he had refused to repair, etc., held to sustain a recovery on the theory of nuisance. Id. In such case a prima facie case is established by proof of nuisance that it was created by the defendant or existed under such circumstances that he was charged with notice. Id.

61. Waller v. Ross, 100 Minn. 7, 110 N. W. 252.

62. Where on driving a team in the street was struck by a part of a skylight blown from the roof of an adjacent building, a presumption of negligence under the maxim res ipsa loquitur is raised. Ugla v. Brokaw, 117 App. Div. 586, 102 N. Y. S. 857. Where one standing on a sidewalk and working within two or three feet from an awning frame was injured by the falling of a brace from such frame, there is no presumption of negligence on the part of the owner of the building where it does not appear that the plaintiff may not have caused such brace to fall. Meaney v. Horowitz, 115 App. Div. 572, 100 N. Y. S. 975. Where one in the street is injured by being struck by a skylight blown from a building in possession of a tenant sues the landlord he has the burden to prove that the skylight was not originally securely fastened, independent of the doctrine res ipsa loquitur. Ugla v. Brokaw, 117 App. Div. 586, 102 N. Y. S. 857. In an action for damages for the falling of a sign because it was negligently attached to a building, when it appeared that it was attached under the direction of the plaintiff's agent, there can be no recovery. Hyman v. Waas, 79 Conn. 251, 64 A. 354. Res ipsa loquitur applies where a part of a stone window sill falls to the pavement. Evidence held sufficient to rebut negligence. Papazian v. Baumgartner, 49 Misc. 244, 97 N. Y. S. 399.

NOTE: The rule of res ipsa loquitur has been consistently applied to damages done to one lawfully using a highway by the falling of buildings or parts of buildings. The common acceptance of this view in the two leading cases on the subject. Ryder v. Kinsey, 62 Minn. 85, 64 N. W. 94, 54 Am. St. Rep. 623, 34 L. R. A. 557 and Mullen v. St. John, 57 N. Y. 567, 15 Am. Rep. 530, is especially significant because the doctrine of Rylands v. Fletcher, L. R. 3 H. L. 330, has been accepted in Minnesota and essentially rejected in New York. See, also, Travers v. Murray, 84 N. Y. S. 558, as to the falling of a chimney, but see, Nichol v. Marshland, L. R. 10 Ex. 255, quoted in Gorham v. Gross, 125 Mass. 232, 28 Am. Rep. 224 and Isherwood v. Jenkins Co., 84 Minn. 423, 87 N. W. 931, as to the falling of a pile of lumber and, generally, see Martin v. Dufulla, 50 Ill. App. 371; Kappes v. Apel, 14 Ill. App. 170; Patterson v. Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. [S. D.] 91 N. W. 336. There is no consistency with this rule in holding the person responsible for damages done by the falling of a wall on principles of nuisance under appropriate circumstances. See Simmons v. Everson, 124 N. Y. S. 319, 21 Am. St. Rep. 676; Wilkinson v. Detroit, etc., Works, 73 Mich. 405, 41 N. W. 490; Miles v. City, 154 Mass. 511, 28 N. E. 676, 13 L. R. A. 84, 26 Am. St. Rep. 264; Murray v. McShane, 52 Md. 217, 36 Am. Rep. 367; and see Lauer v. Palms (Mich.) 89 N. W. 695; Chute v. State, 19 Minn. 270; Nordheim v. Alexander, 19 Can. Sup. Ct. 248. So also, the liability caused by the falling of a cornice has been determined under the rule res ipsa loquitur or by the principles of nuisance. Roberts v. Mitchell, 21 Ont. App. 433; Grove v. Ft. Wayne, 45 Ind. 429, 15 Am. Rep. 262. It is true that the liability for a roof constructed so that it will inevitably, certain seasons of the year and with more or less frequency, subject innocent travelers to damage or danger may be found without reference to diligence upon the principles of Rylands v. Fletcher, L. R. H. L. 330. Shipley v. 50 Associates, 101 Mass. 252, 3 Am. Rep. 346, 106 Mass. 199, 8 Am. Rep. 318; Smithurst v. Proprietors of Independent Congregational Church, 148 Mass. 261, 2 L. R. A. 695, 12 Am. St. Rep. 550; Shepard v. Creamer, 160 Mass. 496, or of nuisance, Hannem v. Pence, 40 Minn. 127, 41 N. W. 657, 12 Am. St. Rep. 717; Lowell v. Glidden, 159 Mass. 317, 34 N. E. 459. But see Garland v. Town, 55 N. H. 56, 20 Am. Rep. 164. The inherent and necessary tendency of a roof eaves overhanging a highway to do harm, however, varies materially from the tendency of an ordinary awning to fall. That natural difference is a good foundation for the distinction between the legal principles of liability applicable to the respective owners for consequent damages. The same reasoning which holds the owner of such a roof responsible for damages without reference to the culpability justifies the holding of the owner of such awning in an action for negligence responsible on the theory of res ipsa loquitur only. It is true that the owner of a building to which the awning is attached may be held responsible for damages to a passerby due to its fall, on the doctrines of nuisance. Hume v. Mayor, 74 N. Y. 264.—See Waller v. Ross [Minn.] 110 N. W. 252.

63. Persons killed by negligent operation of an elevator in a court house. Moest v. Buffalo, 116 App. Div. 657, 101 N. Y. S. 996.

64. The board of education of New York City managing the schools and having power to close them is liable for injuries to a pupil caused by a defect in the building. Wahrman v. Board of Education of New York, 187 N. Y. 331, 80 N. E. 192.

§ 4. Liability for negligent operation of elevators.<sup>65</sup>—Owners and operators of passenger elevators owe to passengers the duty to exercise the highest degree of care,<sup>66</sup> both in the construction,<sup>67</sup> maintenance,<sup>68</sup> and operation of the elevator. This rule does not apply to freight elevators<sup>69</sup> except as there is an invitation to use them.<sup>70</sup> Failure to equip an elevator with a device required by statute does not entitle a person injured to recover if such failure was not the proximate cause of the injury.<sup>71</sup> They owe to persons lawfully on the premises<sup>72</sup> the duty to exercise reasonable care to see that elevator shafts are properly guarded,<sup>73</sup> and are liable for injuries which result from failure to exercise such care.<sup>74</sup> There is no liability

65. See 7 C. L. 511.

66. Where a customer in store was injured in elevator, evidence held to show negligence in that some person started elevator after it had stopped and while injured person was leaving it. Moerman v. Clark-Rutka-Weaver Co., 145 Mich. 540, 13 Det. Leg. N. 648, 108 N. W. 988. One who goes to an office building to see a physician and is in the elevator on his way to the floor of the building on which the physician's office is located is a passenger. Ferguson v. Truax [Wis.] 110 N. W. 395. Evidence held to show that one injured in the elevator of an office building was in the building on business. Id. In an action against the owner of a building on the janitor who ran the elevator for injuries sustained because of a fall of the elevator, a verdict against the owner of the building alone is proper. Id.

67. Negligent construction of an elevator held the proximate cause of an injury to one who had his foot caught between the floor of an elevator and strips negligently nailed to floor beams. Obermeyer v. Logeman Chair Mfg. Co., 120 Mo. App. 59, 96 S. W. 673. Whether an elevator well was negligently constructed held a proper subject for expert testimony. Id. Whether an elevator was negligently constructed held a question for the jury. Id.

68. Where one was injured by the fall of an elevator it was admissible to show a similar accident just shortly prior to the one in question. Glassman v. Surpless, 53 Misc. 586, 103 N. Y. S. 789. Where the owner of a building, the elevator in which was enclosed on two sides by slats, permitted two of the slats to remain broken and one lawfully using the elevator inadvertently allowed his foot to protrude through the hole and it was crushed, held the owner was liable. Rosenberg v. Schoolherr, 116 App. Div. 289, 101 N. Y. S. 505. Evidence held to show that the owner of a building did not exercise ordinary care to keep the elevator in a safe condition. Ferguson v. Truax [Wis.] 110 N. W. 395.

69. Proper care in construction of freight elevators does not require that they be wholly enclosed. Obermeyer v. Logeman Chair Mfg. Co., 120 Mo. App. 59, 96 S. W. 673. Where a person was injured while riding on a freight elevator on which there was a sign forbidding persons to ride on it, and it appeared that it had been in good condition just prior to the accident and the injured person was riding on the invitation of one who had no authority to invite him, evidence insufficient to show negligence on the part of the owner. McQuirk v. Manhattan Life Ins. Co., 50 Misc. 590, 99 N. Y. S. 536.

70. A landlord who has control of a freight elevator owes to persons whose business requires them to use it the duty of maintaining it in a reasonably safe condition. Rosenberg v. Schoolherr, 116 App. Div. 289, 101 N. Y. S. 505.

71. The fact that an elevator was not equipped with a device giving notice that it is in motion as required by Pub. Laws, p. 43, c. 973, does not entitle one to recover where his own negligence was the proximate cause of the injury. Leahy v. U. S. Cotton Co. [R. I.] 66 A. 572.

72. Evidence sufficient to show that one injured by falling into an open elevator shaft was on the premises by invitation. Hamilton v. Taylor [Mass.] 80 N. E. 592.

73. Evidence sufficient to show negligence in leaving an elevator shaft open and unguarded. Hamilton v. Taylor [Mass.] 80 N. E. 592. Instruction that owner of building was under duty to use reasonable care to guard the injured person from injury and what constituted reasonable care dependent on the circumstances and that it was the duty of the injured person to use reasonable care for his own protection under the circumstances and that it was for the jury to say how high a degree of care should be exercised, held proper. Pascieszny v. Boydell Bros. White Lead & Color Co., 146 Mich. 223, 13 Det. Leg. N. 726, 109 N. W. 417. Persons lawfully in a building may go around it for the purpose for which they entered and may assume that reasonable precautions have been taken for their safety. Gardner v. Waterloo Cream Separator Co. [Iowa] 111 N. W. 316. Where one entered a building for the purpose of delivering goods by a side door which had been left unfastened and fell down an elevator shaft, held that the proximate cause of the injury was in not properly guarding the elevator shaft and in failing to give warning, and not the act of a third person in leaving the door unlocked. Id. Where one delivering goods fell down an open elevator shaft, had no notice that it was dangerous to enter the building, the mere fact that there were signs on the door warning him to keep out was no excuse for failure to guard the shaft, the building being under repair. Id.

74. Evidence sufficient to show negligence in failing to caution one who fell into an open elevator shaft. Wills v. Taylor, 193 Mass. 113, 78 N. E. 774. Evidence sufficient to show that one who fell into an open elevator shaft was not negligent. Id. In an action for injuries sustained by the fall of an elevator, a letter written by the agent of a nonresident owner to the owner, prior to the accident stating that the elevator was out of order and that a third person had stated that it was out of order for injuries which result from contributory negligence of the person injured.<sup>75</sup> One suing to recover for injuries sustained has the burden to prove negligence,<sup>76</sup> but he need not prove a specific defect or act.<sup>77</sup>

BULK SALES; BURDEN OF PROOF, see latest topical index.

BURGLARY.

§ 1. What Constitutes (44S).
§ 2. Indictment (449).

§ 3. Evidence (450).
§ 4. Instructions and verdict (452).

§ 1. What constitutes.<sup>78</sup>—A statute defining burglary as the breaking and entering of a building “with intent to commit larceny or any other felony” does not require as to larceny an intent to commit a felony.<sup>79</sup> Breaking with intent to enter a house in which property of any value whatever is stored constitutes an attempt to commit burglary in Texas, though entry is frustrated.<sup>80</sup>

Breaking and entry.<sup>81</sup>—Felonious entry without the consent of the occupant is essential to the commission of the offense,<sup>82</sup> hence, entrance in response to what defendant believed to be an invitation does not constitute burglary,<sup>83</sup> but one having a right to enter in the performance of his duties may be guilty where entrance is is admissible as showing the owner's notice. Ferguson v. Truax [Wis.] 110 N. W. 395.

75. Evidence insufficient to show contributory negligence as a matter of law where a boy fourteen years of age was injured in an elevator. Obermeyer v. Logeman Chair Mfg. Co., 120 Mo. App. 59, 96 S. W. 673. Question of contributory negligence held for the jury where a person fell down an elevator shaft. Gardner v. Waterloo Cream Separator Co. [Iowa] 111 N. W. 316. Question of contributory negligence held for the jury where one delivering goods fell into an open elevator shaft, which was unguarded in the path he was required to follow in making the delivery. Hamilton v. Taylor [Mass.] 80 N. E. 592. It is negligence per se for one familiar with premises to step into an open elevator shaft. Leahy v. U. S. Cotton Co. [R. I.] 66 A. 572. One who volunteered to oversee the work of a janitor and who walks through an open door into an elevator shaft at five o'clock in the morning may not recover from the owner of the building where it appears that the door was open through no fault of his and the person injured had notice that the elevator might not be there. In such case it is not permissible to show that the door had been open at other times and the other accidents had happened (Id.), nor to show that the door could be opened without a key (Id.). The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur does not apply where one was injured by falling into an open elevator shaft, the door of which had evidently been left open through no fault of the owner of the building. Hope v. Longley, 27 R. I. 579, 65 A. 300.

76. Questions of negligence and contributory negligence held for the jury where one riding on an elevator fell between the elevator and a wall. Gray v. Siegel-Cooper Co., 187 N. Y. 376, 80 N. E. 201. Whether an elevator was defective or negligently operated held a question for the jury. Glassman v. Surpluss, 53 Misc. 586, 103 N. Y. S. 789. Where one delivering goods was injured by falling into an opening between an elevator and the wall, evidence that it had for a long time been customary for persons delivering goods to use the elevator without objection held admissible on the question of negligence. Gray v. Siegel-Cooper Co., 187 N. Y. 376, 80 N. E. 201. Where one was injured by falling into an opening between an elevator and the wall, it was permissible to show the condition of the premises several hours later where it appeared that the condition was the same. Id.

77. One who is injured by the fall of an elevator need only prove facts from which the jury may infer that the car was defective or negligently operated and need not prove specific defect on misconduct. Glassman v. Surpluss, 53 Misc. 586, 103 N. Y. S. 789.

78. See 7 C. L. 512.

79. The word “larceny” in Laws 1905, c. 19, p. 16, amending Rev. St. 1898, § 4334, includes misdemeanors as well as felonies, and the words “or any other felony” mean felonies not included in the crime of larceny and is not a limitation upon the latter. State v. Hows [Utah] 87 P. 163.

80. Throwing a stone through a window behind which property is situated. Mason v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 100 S. W. 383, correcting and affg. [Tex. Cr. App.] 98 S. W. 854.

81. See 7 C. L. 512.

82. Instruction held not bad as authorizing conviction though jury found that defendant's confederate who was in fact a detective had owner's permission to enter. Dees v. State [Miss.] 42 So. 605. Evidence held to show that entry was without consent of occupant. Martinez v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 103 S. W. 930.

83. Defendant testified that codefendant knocked at door and he thought he heard some one say “Come in,” and that codefendant went in, held sufficient to require submission to jury. Stout v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 103 S. W. 391.

effected for the purpose of committing a crime.<sup>84</sup> One may be guilty of an illegal entry into part of a house though he may legally enter another portion.<sup>85</sup> Thus, a person entering a room in a house with intent to commit rape is guilty of burglary though he may have entered the house without any intention of committing a felony.<sup>86</sup> Where the statute provides the time of the day during which the crime must be committed in order to constitute the offense, felonious entrance at a different time is not within the statute.<sup>87</sup> Under the Texas statute, where the crime is committed in the day time, there must be an actual breaking,<sup>88</sup> but it is otherwise where the crime was committed at night,<sup>89</sup> and in that state where entrance is with intent to commit larceny, the value of the property is immaterial though only a portion of the body enters.<sup>90</sup>

Accomplices.<sup>91</sup>

To constitute the offense of having burglar's tools in possession,<sup>96</sup> manual possession is not essential.<sup>97</sup>

1. Under Acts 1899, p. 318 c. 178, making burglary of a private residence at night a distinct offense and describing same as any building or room actually occupied at the time as a place of residence, an allegation that the house was a private residence is insufficient. Jones v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 542, 96 S. W. 44. An indictment for entering a private residence must allege that it was actually used and occupied at the time of the offense as a private residence. Johnson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 11 Tex. Ct. 3. Indictment charging defendant with breaking into "the depot of the S. Ry. Co., said depot being the property of the S. Ry. Co., a corporation," sufficiently alleges corporate character of owner. Peck v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 759.

be proved as alleged.<sup>4</sup> An indictment in the language of the statute is sufficient.<sup>5</sup> Under a statute defining burglary as the breaking and entering of a building with intent to commit larceny or any other felony, the information need not state the value of the goods.<sup>6</sup> A general allegation that a house was broken and entered by force is ordinarily sufficient to cover night or day burglary.<sup>7</sup> In Texas an indictment for burglary of a private residence in the daytime need not allege that the building was a private residence, the statute making the felonious entry of a private residence a distinct offense only when committed at night,<sup>8</sup> and an allegation that the building entered was a private residence in an indictment for burglary committed in the daytime is merely descriptive<sup>9</sup> and is not an attempt to charge burglary of a private residence,<sup>10</sup> but though merely descriptive it must be proved as alleged.<sup>11</sup> The allegation and proof must correspond,<sup>12</sup> hence, under an indictment for burglary with intent to steal property of a designated person, such person must be shown to be the owner thereof.<sup>13</sup>

26. Evidence that one of several persons arrested escaped and when recaptured had in his possession burglar's tools is admissible. State v. Leonard [Iowa] 112 N. W. 784.

27. Herndon v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 99 S. W. 558. Evidence that a portion of the property stolen was found in defendant's possession is admissible. People v. Lowrie [Cal. App.] 87 P. 253.

28. Alleged stolen property is not admissible in evidence unless identified as such. Barnett v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 99 S. W. 556. Instruction held to require identification. Johnson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 382, 98 S. W. 266.

29. Evidence of disposition of stolen property is admissible though in the exclusive possession of a codefendant, where defendant was present at the time of the sale and is otherwise connected with the burglary. State v. Toohey [Mo.] 102 S. W. 530.

30. Evidence that wheat purchased from defendant and sample shown witness were of same grade is admissible. Stevens v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 936, 95 S. W. 505.

31, 32. Pointer v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 929.

33. Where burglar's tools were found in a coat which defendant left in his room in a hotel, evidence that a third person, a guest at the hotel, but a stranger to defendant, offered to sell a coat of similar appearance is inadmissible. State v. Hanley [Iowa] 110 N. W. 914.

34. Evidence that a search revealed no burglar's tools or implements in a room occupied by defendant is inadmissible. People v. Lowrie [Cal. App.] 87 P. 253.

35. Opinion evidence as to whether a lock on the door of the building entered could have been broken from the outside is inadmissible, being a matter for the jury to determine. Dupree v. State [Ala.] 42 So. 1004.

36. State's evidence of lime balls in wheat stolen is not controverted by testimony of witness that he did not see them. Stevens v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 936, 95 S. W. 505.

37. Evidence held insufficient, defendant's testimony that he was drunk and went to sleep in building and was locked in not being controverted, he being an employee in the store. Burrell v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 307, 97 S. W. 706. Evidence held sufficient to show felonious entry, it being shown that defendant had entered premises and asked for mail, and that he had an opportunity to remove goods which were subsequently found in his possession. People v. King [Cal. App.] 87 P. 400.

38. Evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction for breaking and entering a freight car, though defendant disposed of goods taken, the car door having been open and others having had an opportunity to enter. Ross v. State [Miss.] 42 So. 801.

39. Evidence that a chicken "coop" was broken into will not sustain conviction, a "coop" not necessarily being a building. Gunter v. State, 79 Ark. 432, 96 S. W. 181.

40. Evidence that at 5:30 a. m. it was found that a house had been burglarized during the night is sufficient to sustain conviction for burglary in the first degree, the degree depending upon the time. People v. Lowrie [Cal. App.] 87 P. 253.

41. Evidence sufficient to sustain conviction for burglary with intent to rape. Miller v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 100 S. W. 398. Under an indictment for burglary with intent to commit larceny, the state must establish beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant broke and entered the building with a felonious intent to take and convert goods therein to his own use without the consent of the owner. State v. Wright [Del.] 66 A. 364.

42. Possession of property taken from house which had been broken into coupled with evidence of defendant's proximity to place of crime and subsequent flight held sufficient to sustain conviction. Delmont v. State [Wyo.] 88 P. 623; State v. Delcore, 199 Mo. 228, 97 S. W. 894. The corpus delicti may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Dupree v. State [Ala.] 42 So. 1004. Evidence held sufficient, defendant having been seen in proximity to the place of the crime and having disposed of property taken. Reyes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 102 S. W. 421. Evidence held sufficient, it being established that building was broken into and goods taken, the latter being found in defendant's possession, and his acts and declarations subsequent to crime indicating guilt. Martinez v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 103 S. W. 930. Evidence that defendant with others was in vicinity of place where crime was committed shortly after its commission and with them

stael, it has been held that slight evidence of intent is sufficient.<sup>43</sup> The presumptions attendant upon defendant's possession of stolen property has given rise to a diversity of views, some courts holding that unexplained exclusive possession by defendant,<sup>44</sup> or a codefendant,<sup>45</sup> creates a prima facie case,<sup>46</sup> while others hold that such possession is a mere incriminating circumstance,<sup>47</sup> and though sufficient to sustain a conviction<sup>48</sup> creates no presumption of guilt.<sup>49</sup> As a rule the testimony of an accomplice must be corroborated,<sup>50</sup> and for the purpose of corroboration evidence of prior attempts to effect an entrance into the same building is admissible.<sup>51</sup>

attempted to escape, that one of the gang had a burglar's outfit in his possession, held sufficient to sustain a conviction. State v. Leonard [Iowa] 112 N. W. 784. Evidence held to sustain conviction for breaking and entering a bank, defendant having been in company of a codefendant who pleaded guilty and his actions subsequent to the crime being consistent with guilt. State v. Arthur [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1083. Evidence held sufficient to justify submission to jury, defendant having attempted to dispose of stolen property shortly after burglary. State v. Toohey [Mo.] 102 S. W. 530. Evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction, though stolen property was found in defendant's possession, but his explanation being consistent with innocence. People v. Rosenberg, 105 N. Y. S. 218.

43. Evidence held sufficient though nothing was proved to have been taken. Smith v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 102 S. W. 466.

44. Sufficient if found on premises occupied by defendant. State v. Wright. [Del.] 66 A. 364.

45. State v. Wright [Del.] 66 A. 364.

46. Unexplained possession of stolen goods is prima facie evidence that the person in whose possession they are found broke and entered the building in which they were situated for the purpose of committing larceny. State v. Wright [Del.] 66 A. 364. Possession of stolen property shortly after burglary creates a presumption of guilt. State v. Toohey [Mo.] 102 S. W. 530. Evidence sufficient, stolen goods being found in defendant's possession. State v. Howard [Mo.] 102 S. W. 504.

47. Defendant's unexplained possession of goods taken is sufficient to connect him with the burglary. Nightingale v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 422, 95 S. W. 531.

48. Unexplained possession of stolen property will sustain a conviction for burglary where the larceny is proved to have occurred at time of breaking and entry of house (Gunter v. State, 79 Ark. 432, 96 S. W. 181), and this is true though only part of property taken is found in defendant's possession (Id.).

which presumptions arising from possession most frequently arise.

50. Evidence held insufficient, conviction being based upon uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. Simmons v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 380, 97 S. W. 1052. Evidence held sufficiently corroborative of positive testimony of an accomplice to sustain conviction. Cook v. State, 80 Ark. 495, 97 S. W. 683.

51. Accomplice testified that shortly prior to burglary he had surreptitiously obtained a key to the building. Held evidence of an attempt to enter at about that time was admissible. Cook v. State, 80 Ark. 495, 97 S. W. 683.

52. See 7 C. L. 515.

53. Where at the time of his arrest defendant wore a pair of pants alleged to have been stolen, stating that he did not remember where he got them, but at the trial testified that he purchased them, it was held error not to charge as to the purchase though a charge as to the statement made when defendant was arrested was given, and though other stolen property was found in his possession unexplained. Johnson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 556, 96 S. W. 45. Where defendant testified that his codefendant knocked at the door of a house and he thought he heard some one invite him in and that his codefendant went in, it was held error not to charge that if evidence was true defendant could not be guilty of burglary. Stout v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 103 S. W. 391.

54. Where there is no evidence that defendant received goods found in his possession from another, an instruction that defendant must be acquitted unless shown that he did not receive goods from a third person is properly refused. People v. King [Cal. App.] 87 P. 400.

55. Defendant while wearing alleged stolen trousers was arrested on complaint of owner who identified same as his. Upon being taken to jail the trousers were taken from defendant and presented to complainant who denied that they were the ones worn on the day of the arrest. It was shown that after being lodged in jail certain clothing of prisoner's was burned, the state contending that trousers in question were burned at that time. Johnson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 382, 98 S. W. 266.

should present the essentials to conviction,<sup>56</sup> and the constituent elements of the crime which defendant intended to commit upon entry.<sup>57</sup> An instruction assuming certain facts as true is not erroneous where the instructions as a whole are correct.<sup>58</sup> In Texas an instruction on unexplained possession as a circumstance of guilt is improper as a charge on the weight of evidence.<sup>59</sup> A charge on principals is proper where the evidence tends to connect defendants with the crime as such.<sup>60</sup> Instructions ignoring possible guilt as to other crimes charged in the indictment are properly refused.<sup>61</sup>

Where burglary and larceny is charged in an indictment, a general verdict of guilty as charged is a verdict of guilty of burglary alone.<sup>62</sup>

CANALS.

Rights arising from traffic on canals are excluded.<sup>64</sup>

The United States has power to construct the Panama canal in the territory acquired by its treaty with the Republic of Panama.<sup>65</sup> To authorize the appropriation of private land for the improvement of a state canal in New York the state engineer must make and file a map and survey and a certificate of appropriation, and notice must be served on the owner,<sup>66</sup> otherwise the entry upon the land by the contractor may be enjoined as a trespass.<sup>67</sup> Where an owner's lands are overflowed by the negligent turning of water from a state canal and into a creek and partly by rainfall, the state will be liable for that part of the damage which would not have resulted but for its negligence.<sup>68</sup> Though a railroad company may be given authority by a state to construct a bridge over a public canal subject to the right of the Federal government to remove obstructions to navigation,<sup>69</sup> it will be held liable for maintaining hidden and dangerous obstructions in the canal causing damage to boats.<sup>70</sup> A canal company may estop itself by inaction from objecting to a discharge into its canal of refuse from a paper mill where it stands by and permits heavy expenditures.<sup>71</sup> The conveyance of the property of a canal company having

Where evidence shows occupancy in two persons and ownership of property taken in one, and the indictment alleges entry with intent to steal property of the other, the jury should be instructed that unless entry was made with intent to steal property of such other person defendant should be acquitted. Roberson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 101 S. W. 800.

57. Where defendant introduced evidence tending to show ownership of property, taken in himself, held error not to charge that if defendant effected an entry for purpose of taking property belonging to himself, he should be acquitted, such taking not constituting larceny. Harris v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 103 S. W. 390.

58. Instruction that if the tools were found in defendant's possession the jury "would be justified in finding that defendant had such burglar's tools in his possession for the purpose," etc., is not erroneous where the jury was instructed that the question as to whether the tools were burglar's tools was for them to determine. *State v. § 1. Nature of remedy.<sup>80</sup>—The cancellation of instruments is exclusively within the jurisdiction of equity.<sup>81</sup>

Adequacy of remedy at law.<sup>82</sup>—As a general rule a court of equity will not exercise its jurisdiction to cancel an instrument if the remedy at law, by way either of action or defense, is adequate and plain. It is a matter, however, which rests in the sound discretion of the court.<sup>83</sup> Mere breach of contract is not, ordinarily, ground for cancellation of a contract or deed, as for this there is an adequate remedy at law,<sup>84</sup> but cancellation may be had where the promise was made with intention at

Suit to cancel a note and mortgage on the ground that another note and mortgage have been given in lieu thereof, there being no common-law issue involved in the case. Leigh v. Citizens' Sav. Bk. [Ky.] 102 S. W. 233. A bill in an action for the cancellation of a written contract which alleges that the contract agreed upon is not the contract found in the writing, and that the substitution was without plaintiff's knowledge or consent and was procured by fraud, states a case exclusively within the jurisdiction of equity. Robertson v. Covenant Mut. Life Ins. Co., 123 Mo. App. 238, 100 S. W. 686.

83. Mosier v. Walter, 17 Okl. 305, 87 P. 877. Where by mistake the purchase price in a written contract of sale is wrongly stated, and there is no fraud involved, a suit to bar cancellation is the only remedy. Farquhar v. Farquhar [Mass.] 80 N. E. 654. Where the maker of a negotiable note obtained from him by fraud is liable to be put to a disadvantage in making a defense to it in an action at law, equity may decree its cancellation. Sipola v. Winship [N. H.] 66 A. 962. A corporation may maintain an action to cancel negotiable bonds which it has been induced to issue by fraud, against holders charged with notice, although against them the defense of fraud could be made at law, and this because such defense could not be made against innocent purchasers. Pere Marquette R. Co. v. Bradford, 149 F. 492. An assignment to defendant, induced by his fraudulent misrepresentations of a supposed claim against the corporation for goods furnished it at defendant's request and upon his promise to pay therefor, being no bar to an action against defendant for the price of the goods, an action to cancel it will not lie. Gordon v. Maas, 115 App. Div. 377, 100 N. Y. S. 891. Equity has jurisdiction to cancel an instrument of title to land at the suit of one in possession under good title, though such instrument be void on its face. Whitehouse v. Jones, 60 W. Va. 680, 55 S. E. 730.

But where the consideration in whole or in part for a deed conveying real estate is that grantee will erect certain buildings thereon, his failure to do so within a reasonable time is sufficient ground for the cancellation of the deed. Mosier v. Walter, 17 Okl. 305, 87 P. 577. Where one deeds his property to agents under a contract that they shall sell the same for him and receive part of the proceeds as compensation, if the agents abandon the contract, the contract and deed will be canceled at the suit of the grantor. Bogard v. Sweet, 17 Okl. 40, 87 P. 669.

In Kentucky and Nebraska it has been held that where one in consideration of a conveyance to him of land assumes to support grantor for life, his failure to substantially perform his contract will authorize its cancellation. Alvey v. Alvey, 30 Ky. L. R. 234, 97 S. W. 1106; Tomsik v. Tomsik [Neb.] 110 N. W. 674.

In an Iowa case involving such a contract, where there was no fraud in its procurement, and the grantee abandoned another home or other employment to assume the responsibility entailed and had for a period of years discharged the obligations of the contract with reasonable fidelity, and had improved the property granted a cancellation was refused. Lewis v. Wilcox, 131 Iowa, 268, 108 N. W. 536.

In Texas it has been held that, for a breach of a promise of a home to grantor to afford ground for cancelling his deed, the promise must have been made fraudulently without intent to keep it, and it must have been made with intent to influence and must have influenced grantor in making the deed. White v. White [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 134, 95 S. W. 733.

92. Where in suit to set aside a conveyance made in consideration of grantee's paying grantor an annuity for life, on the ground of grantee's failure to perform, if the evidence does not support the allegation of nonperformance, the court may enter judgment against defendant for the unpaid installments of annuity and adjudge the future performance of defendant's contract to be a lien on the property. Lewis v. Wilcox, 131 Iowa 268, 108 N. W. 536. Where suit is brought for cancellation of certain notes on the ground of fraud, and such relief cannot be granted because the notes have been transferred to bona fide holders for value, which fact was not known to plaintiff when suit was brought, the cause may be retained and a personal judgment for damages rendered. Luetzke v. Roberts, 130 Wis. 97, 109 N. W. 949. Such a personal judgment may be rendered in such a suit where "such other . . . relief as the court . . . may deem just and equitable" is asked for. *Roberts v. lent purpose, it will be canceled at the suit of the grantor,<sup>47</sup> but inadequacy of consideration alone is not a sufficient ground for canceling a contract or conveyance,<sup>48</sup> unless it is so gross that it shocks the conscience and furnishes decisive evidence of fraud.<sup>49</sup> Cancellation is frequently had because of want of consideration combined with other causes.<sup>50</sup> Mere breach of contract is not, ordinarily, ground for cancellation of a contract or deed, as for this there is an adequate remedy at law.<sup>51</sup> It is not sufficient ground for canceling a lease that lessee stipulates therein that at the end of a specified time he shall have the option to keep the lease in force by then doing some act which at the date of the lease he is unable to perform,<sup>52</sup> nor will a lease be canceled because the lessee does not perform the conditions therein on his part immediately, when, by the provisions of the instrument, he is permitted to delay performance for a specified time.<sup>53</sup> That an instrument is forged,<sup>54</sup> or that a contract is usurious,<sup>55</sup> is sufficient ground for cancellation. At common law a deed by a wife conveying land to her husband is void and will be set aside at her suit,<sup>56</sup> and under the West Virginia statute the fact that the husband did not join therein is sufficient ground for canceling a married woman's deed.<sup>57</sup> That deeds were not delivered to and accepted by grantee is ground for cancellation at the suit of grantor's heirs.<sup>58</sup> A sheriff's deed conveying property sold under an execution which was issued under an invalid judgment will be canceled as a cloud upon the owner's title.<sup>59</sup> A satisfaction of a deed of trust will be canceled if the person marking the deed satisfied on the record did so without authority.<sup>60</sup> Where a note and mortgage is given simply in lieu of a prior note and mortgage, the first note and mortgage should be canceled.<sup>61</sup> An instrument will not be canceled for ambiguity when the contract of the parties can be clearly and certainly ascertained therefrom.<sup>62</sup> A deed will not be set aside merely because it was made for the purpose of depriving the state of inheritance taxes.<sup>63</sup> As a general rule equity will not aid one who has knowingly entered into a contract void as against public policy by canceling a deed executed in pursuance thereof.<sup>64</sup> Where a grantor acknowledged his deed willingly, the fact that the persons procuring it may have known before its execution that he was unwilling to execute it is not ground for cancellation.<sup>65</sup> A husband's voluntary deed conveying part of his property to his wife will not be canceled at his suit merely because it is improvident or because it contains no provision for revocation or reversion.<sup>66</sup> A judgment creditor is not entitled to have canceled a mortgage alleged to be fictitious and without consideration assumed by his debtor on premises leased by him.<sup>67</sup>

§ 3. Procedure.<sup>68</sup>—An action for the cancellation of a contract for the sale of lands being in personam, a court in one state or judicial district has jurisdiction of it though part of the lands are in another state and district.<sup>69</sup> In an action to cancel a written contract, deed, or other instrument, it is essential to allege such facts as will authorize its cancellation.<sup>70</sup> If fraud is the gist of the action it must be distinctly alleged,<sup>71</sup> and facts constituting legal fraud, actual or constructive, must be pleaded,<sup>72</sup> but if fraud is alleged, but is not an essential element of the case stated, it is not essential to allege the facts constituting fraud.<sup>73</sup> The rule that the facts constituting the gist of the action must be pleaded applies, whatever the cause of the action may be, whether undue influence,<sup>74</sup> mental incapacity,<sup>75</sup> inadequacy of consideration,<sup>76</sup> failure to comply with provisions of lease,<sup>77</sup> or absence of authority to enter on the record the satisfaction of a deed of trust.<sup>78</sup> Where in an action to cancel a deed conveying real estate it appears from the facts pleaded that the vendee has so acted as to create a reasonable belief that he has abandoned the contract, it is not necessary for the vendor to plead notice of disaffirmance.<sup>79</sup> The complaint or petition should allege a repayment or tender back of the consideration reviewed by plaintiff,<sup>80</sup> but the defendant may be estopped to complain of the

In an action to set aside an assignment of a claim against a corporation on the ground of fraud, if the allegations of the complaint show that plaintiff had no claim against the corporation, and the assignment is no bar to any right of action which plaintiff may have against defendant, a demurrer to such complaint will be sustained. Gordon v. Maas, 115 App. Div. 377, 100 N. Y. S. 891.

73. Action to cancel a satisfaction of a deed of trust. Ennis v. Padgett [Mo. App.] 99 S. W. 782.

74. In suit to recover real property, the deeds for which were taken in the name of defendant, complaint held not to allege undue influence. Mullin v. Mullin, 104 N. Y. S. 323.

75. Complaint in action to set aside a transfer of personalty, which merely alleges that transferor was not in fit condition to transact any business and unable to understand his acts or the effect thereof, but which does not allege that he was insane or wholly unable to understand the nature of the transaction, is insufficient. Pritz v. Jones, 117 App. Div. 643, 102 N. Y. S. 549. In suit for the cancellation of a deed, complaint is sufficient if it show unsoundness of mind, knowledge thereof by grantee, and gross inadequacy of consideration. Studebaker v. Taylor [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 861. In such case, if the suit is by heirs of grantor, who was 85 years old when the deed was executed, it need not be averred that decedent did not rescind or disaffirm during life. Id. In suit for cancellation of a deed, an averment of facts that fairly and reasonably impute knowledge in the grantee of the grantor's mental incapacity is sufficient. Averment in complaint held sufficient in this respect. Id.

78. Petition held sufficient. Ennis v. Padgett [Mo. App.] 99 S. W. 782.

79. Mosier v. Walter, 17 Okl. 305, 87 P. 877.

80. In an action to set aside an assignment of a contract on the ground of fraud, an allegation of readiness and willingness to repay all advances with legal interest is sufficient. Norgren v. Jordan [Wash.] 90 P. 597. A deed will not be canceled on the ground of fraud where it appears from the petition that complainant had in hand money which had been paid or deposited with her by the grantee, and there is no allegation of repayment of or offer to repay such money. Bridges v. Barbree, 127 Ga. 679, 56 S. E. 1025. Where it is sought to have canceled a release executed by a beneficiary of a certificate issued by a fraternal benefit society on the ground that it was obtained by fraud, the complaint is insufficient if it fails to allege a return or tender of a sum received insufficiency of the petition on this ground.<sup>81</sup> Lack of an adequate remedy at law need not be pleaded, but the facts themselves should be pleaded from which that conclusion can be drawn.<sup>82</sup> Allegations in a bill which are immaterial to the case presented cannot be considered.<sup>83</sup> The bill must not be multifarious.<sup>84</sup> In an action to set aside a deed, a demurrer to the bill does not admit the allegation therein that the deed was never lawfully delivered.<sup>85</sup> In Oregon the demurrer must specify the grounds of objection to the complaint.<sup>86</sup> The answer must contain a sufficient denial to the allegations of the complaint or must set up a good affirmative defense.<sup>87</sup> Where the answer sets up an affirmative defense which raises no issue that has not already been raised by the pleadings, such defense may be stricken out upon motion.<sup>88</sup> The answer must not plead inconsistent defenses.<sup>89</sup> In Kansas a cross petition in an action on promissory notes asking that the notes be canceled on the ground of failure of consideration may be so amended as to conform to the facts proved.<sup>90</sup> The charge of the court must be confined to issues made by the pleadings.<sup>91</sup> The charges should not be obscure, nor should there be undue repetition by the beneficiary. Supreme Council of Knights and Ladies of Columbia v. Apman [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 640. But in New York it has been held that in an action to set aside a transfer of personal property on the ground of fraud, a complaint which contains a prayer for general relief is sufficient, though it does not specifically allege a precedent return of the consideration paid or an offer to return. Pritz v. Jones, 117 App. Div. 643, 102 N. Y. S. 549.

81. In an action to set aside a deed defendants are estopped to complain of the insufficiency of the petition in not tendering the return of a sum mentioned in the deed as the consideration paid, or surrender of land on which grantor was permitted to reside, when such sum was never paid and the land was restored to grantee. May v. May, 29 Ky. L. R. 1033, 96 S. W. 840.

82. Action to cancel deed. Mosier v. Walter, 17 Okl. 305, 87 P. 877.

83. So held where a bill to cancel a note charged fraudulent misrepresentations as to the value of certain stock and therein charged that the note was given and the stock put up to secure it as an accommodation to defendant and without any consideration, and that plaintiff was not to pay it. The allegations as to fraudulent misrepresentations are immaterial to the case presented. Bass v. Sanborn, 119 Mo. App. 103, 95 S. W. 955.

84. Bill in action to rescind lease on ground of fraud held not multifarious. Garret v. Finch [Va.] 57 S. E. 604. In an action under B. & C. Comp. § 4946, to cancel lease of county road for failure of lessee to comply with its provisions, plaintiff cannot join a claim to avoid the contract because made without authority, or because not yet fully executed. Tillamook County v. Wilson River Road Co. [Or.] 89 P. 958.

85. Blake v. Ogden, 223 Ill. 204, 79 N. E. 68.

86. Under B. & C. Comp. §§ 68, 69, 72, where an action to set aside a deed on the ground of grantor's mental incompetency is brought by grantor by his next friend, if the defendant does not demur on the ground that such suit cannot be brought by next friend, that objection will be deemed waived. Owings v. Turner [Or.] 87 P. 160.

87. In action to cancel contract for sale of land, denials in answer to complaint which alleged that defendants willfully neglected and refused to pay interest as required by contract held sufficient to preclude judgment on pleadings. Womble v. Wilbur, 3 Cal. App. 535, 86 P. 916. In action to annul contract of sale on ground of fraudulent representations, a plea in the answer which charges a ratification of the sale, but pretermits any notice or knowledge of the falsity of the representations, is bad. Graybill v. Drennen [Ala.] 43 So. 568. In action to cancel a contract for the sale of bonds and stock of a corporation on the ground of false representations as to their value, etc., a plea in the answer that complainants, before purchase, had an investigation made of the property and business of the corporation and were informed of the condition of such property is insufficient in that it does not aver that complainants did not act upon respondent's representations, or that they acted upon the result of the investigation. Id. In such an action a plea in the answer that complainants after the purchase assumed control of the corporation and managed and operated its business for twelve months before offering to rescind the contract is insufficient in that it does not aver that complainants discovered the fraud, or were negligent in not doing so during the time they were in possession of the property. Id. So a plea in such answer charging complainants with notice of all facts connected with the issuance of the bonds, but not charging notice of knowledge as to the condition of the business of the corporation, is bad. Id.

88. So held, in action by vendee to rescind contract for sale of land, of defense that vendee had negligently permitted certain improvements on the land to deteriorate, where the complaint had alleged that vendee had offered to restore vendor to his original rights in the land which offer had been refused, and this allegation was denied by the general denials in the answer. Shaw v. O'Neill [Wash.] 88 P. 111.

89. Answer held not to plead inconsistent defenses. Bluett v. Wilce [Wash.] 86 P. 853.

91. In an action by heir to cancel deed therein, nor should it assume as facts matters not established by the undisputed evidence.<sup>92</sup> The judgment must be confined to the issues raised by the pleadings<sup>93</sup> and must be supported by the findings.<sup>94</sup>

Parties.<sup>95</sup>—An administrator may bring an action to cancel a deed made by his intestate.<sup>96</sup> The heirs at law of a grantor may sue to set aside his deed on the ground of undue influence and want of consideration.<sup>97</sup> In Kentucky a husband cannot bring an action in his own name to set aside a settlement made by his wife with another person concerning her separate estate.<sup>98</sup> The United States may maintain an action for the cancellation of a patent to a tract of land issued by mistake, where such land had been selected by the state of California under the Act of March 3, 1853, c. 145, and the application for such selection approved by the secretary of the interior, but the selection itself not formally approved, the state being without remedy in her own behalf.<sup>99</sup> An action for the cancellation of a sheriff's deed conveying property sold under an execution issued under an invalid judgment is properly brought against the sheriff, the purchaser at the sheriff's sale, and a grantee of lessee of the latter.<sup>1</sup>

Evidence and proof.<sup>2</sup>—As a general rule one seeking cancellation of an instrument has the burden of proof.<sup>3</sup> If fraud is the gist of the action the burden rests upon him to prove fraud,<sup>4</sup> and he must prove it clearly.<sup>5</sup> Where false representations are alleged the burden is upon plaintiff to show that false representations were made and that he was misled and damaged thereby.<sup>6</sup> Where no confidential relation exists, no presumption arises against the validity of a deed on the ground of undue influence,<sup>7</sup> and the burden is upon the plaintiff where he seeks cancellation on that ground. This rule applies to the deed of a married woman where it appears from its face that it has been duly executed and acknowledged.<sup>8</sup> But where conveying land inherited, issue submitted as to concealment by grantee of number of acres of land belonging to decedent's estate and other material facts relating to such estate not made by pleadings. White v. White [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 134, 95 S. W. 733.

92. Charge in action to cancel deed, as to effect of duress on rights of ultimate grantee charged with knowledge, held not open to objection on any of these grounds. London v. Crow [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 177.

93. Judgment in action to set aside deed and bill of sale that conveyance was void because made in trust for purposes not permitted by Civ. Code, § 875, or that it conveyed no beneficial interest beyond the life of the grantor, held outside issues raised by pleadings. Ripperdan v. Weldy, 149 Cal. 667, 87 P. 276. Where the gravamen of the bill in a suit for the cancellation of a contract is the false and fraudulent representations of defendant, a decree for plaintiff cannot be had upon proof of a mutual mistake. Burk v. Johnson [C. C. A.] 146 F. 209. Complaint held to state sufficient facts to support decree canceling deed on the ground of fraud. Studebaker v. Taylor [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 861. Complaint held to sustain decree cancelling lease on ground of lessee's failure to comply with provisions thereof. Florence Oil & Refining Co. v. McCumber [Colo.] 88 P. 265.

94. In action to set aside deed and bill of sale on ground of grantor's mental incapacity, a finding that "grantor was in full possession of his mental faculties and fully understood the transaction" was sufficient to support a judgment for defendant under Civ. Code, § 38. Ripperdan v. Weldy, 149 Cal. 667, 87 P. 276.

3. Where a paper which is in form a deed is delivered, in a suit to have it canceled on the ground that it is a will the burden is upon plaintiff to establish that fact. Fellbush v. Fellbush, 216 Pa. 141, 65 A. 28.

4. Dorsey v. Watkins, 151 F. 340. Action to cancel sale and transfer of property. Burrows v. Fitch [W. Va.] 57 S. E. 283.

5. Smith v. Collins [Ala.] 41 So. 825. The degree of proof required is more than a mere probability of the truth of the charge or a mere preponderance of the evidence. Id. The complainant cannot, ordinarily, maintain his case by his own testimony, or by mere preponderance of proofs, but must satisfy the court that he is entitled to relief. *Marsh v. 8. Where cancellation of a married woman's deed is sought on the ground of undue an antenuptial contract provides that the wife shall not participate in the husband's estate if she survive him, the burden shifts to those seeking to uphold the contract,<sup>9</sup> and the burden will shift to defendant where a fiduciary relationship exists and it is shown that the maker of the instrument was suffering from mental impairment or other weakness.<sup>10</sup> So the relationship of mother and son, where the consideration for her deed to him was nominal, has been held to shift the burden.<sup>11</sup> When plaintiff makes out a prima facie case entitling him to relief, the defendant must take up the burden and meet the case so made by other evidence.<sup>12</sup> This rule applies where undue influence is the ground of action.<sup>13</sup> In an action to cancel a note it is not permissible for the maker to prove that though he executed the paper it was, at the time, agreed that he need not pay it.<sup>14</sup> Evidence relevant to an issue raised by the pleadings is admissible,<sup>15</sup> but evidence which is irrelevant to any such issue, or which is immaterial, is not admissible.<sup>16</sup> Evidence which is influence, or that she was not conscious of her act in executing the same, if it appears from its face that it was duly executed and acknowledged, the burden is upon the plaintiff to establish one of said grounds by clear and convincing proof, and mere preponderance of the evidence in its favor is not sufficient. In this case the evidence was insufficient. Willis v. Baker, 75 Ohio St. 291, 79 N. E. 466.

9. In such case the burden is upon them to show that the contract is fair and equitable and was understood by the wife when she signed it. Maze's Ex'rs v. Maze, 30 Ky. L. R. 679, 99 S. W. 336.

12. Boyle v. Robinson, 129 Wis. 567, 109 N. W. 623.

13. Champeau v. Champeau [Wis.] 112 N. W. 36. Where the court stated the rule, an added remark which standing alone might be interpreted as indulging in unwarranted presumption against defendant was held not to vitiate the instruction. Id. In a suit for the cancellation of a deed, if mental weakness and gross inadequacy of consideration and knowledge of such mental weakness by the grantee are shown, it will be inferred that the inadequate consideration arose from undue influence or that an undue advantage was taken of the weakness, unless such presumption is satisfactorily rebutted by evidence. Studebaker v. Faylor [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 861. Where there is evidence raising a presumption of undue influence, the burden is imposed on defendant of showing that plaintiff acted knowingly, intentionally, and deliberately, with full knowledge of the nature and effects of his acts, and that his consent to the execution of the instrument was not obtained by any advantage taken of his mental condition. Owings v. Turner [Or.] 87 P. 160. Evidence held sufficient to create an inference that defendant executed an undue influence over plaintiff in securing his deed. Id. Evidence held not to make a prima facie case for plaintiff. Boyle v. Robinson, 127 Wis. 567, 109 N. W. 623. Evidence held insufficient to overcome inference of undue influence. Owings v. Turner [Or.] 87 P. 160.

15. In a suit for the cancellation of a note, if the complaint alleges that the note was solely for accommodation and without consideration, evidence to show consideration is admissible under an answer denying the allegations of the complaint. Morris v. Wilson [Colo.] 90 P. 845. In action to cancel note and trust deed given as security therefor, on the ground that the note was barred by the statute of limitations, the note with indorsements of payments made thereon was held to have been properly admitted in evidence upon the issue of the balance due upon the note in case the finding should be in favor of defendants upon affirmative defenses, in view of the fact that the findings were in favor of defendants on those issues. Sartor v. Wells [Colo.] 89 P. 797. In action for cancellation of contract for sale of land, a deed from vendee to his assignee of the property contracted for is admissible where complaint alleges that such assignee claims some interest in the property. Womble v. Wilbur, 3 Cal. App. 525, 86 P. 916. In action to set aside deed on ground of breach of trust, evidence of expenses incurred by grantee upon land is admissible. Bluett v. Wilce [Wash.] 86 P. 853.

16. In action to cancel deed on ground of fraud and breach of trust, where it is alleged that plaintiff was induced to make deed by false representations made by defendant and another person who afterwards became her husband and from whom she was divorced, testimony of plaintiff as to her husband's treatment of her during their married life is inadmissible. Bluett v. Wilce [Wash.] 86 P. 853. In action to cancel on ground of duress a note given by a cashier to a bank for an amount claimed to have been taken by him, evidence that interest that should have been received by the bank was not credited on its books is not admissible where it was not considered when the note was executed. Lacks v. Butler County Bk. [Mo.] 162 S. W. 1007. In suit for the cancellation of contract for sale of land, letters passing between vendor and vendee, relating to non-payment of interest on deferred payments, are not admissible to affect the rights of vendee's assignee who is not obligated to pay such interest, nor the rights of the bank not part of the res gestae but is mere hearsay is not admissible.<sup>17</sup> All the evidence in the case must be considered in determining whether there is sufficient proof to warrant cancellation on the ground alleged in the pleadings.<sup>18</sup> Whether there is sufficient proof of some fact essential to the right of cancellation,<sup>19</sup> or whether defendant's evidence is sufficient to rebut plaintiff's or to establish some affirmative defense,<sup>20</sup> is to be determined from the facts adduced in each particular case.

with which the deed to the land contracted to be conveyed had been deposited in escrow, where such bank was not authorized to collect interest. Womble v. Wilbur, 3 Cal. App. 535, 86 P. 916. In action to set aside deed made by mother to son, a question asked two of the other children of plaintiff as to whether their father had left any estate to them was properly excluded, where the father did not die until some years after the execution of the deed by plaintiff and it was undisputed that he had conveyed practically all his property to defendant. Arellanes v. Arellanes [Cal.] 90 P. 1059. In such action a question asked a daughter as to her financial condition since the year of the execution of the deed was held inadmissible. Id.

17. In action for cancellation of note on ground of duress, where note was given by cashier of a bank to the bank for an amount claimed to have been taken from the bank by him, evidence of an admission made by a certain person ten days after the money was taken that he stole part of it is mere hearsay and not admissible as part of the res gestae. Lacks v. Butler County Bk. [Mo.] 102 S. W. 1007.

PART I. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

§ 1. Definition and distinctions.<sup>22</sup>—A common carrier is one who undertakes for hire<sup>23</sup> to transport<sup>24</sup> goods or persons for all who may choose to employ him,<sup>25</sup>

held insufficient to prove a payment by the assignee of $2,000 at the time of the assignment. Norgren v. Jordan [Wash.] 90 P. 597. Evidence in same suit held insufficient to prove certain other payments alleged to have been made by the assignee. Id.

21. This topic treats only of laws relating to common carriers of persons or property. Those relating to corporations engaged in such carriage (See Railroads, 8 C. L. 1590; Shipping and Water Traffic, 8 C. L. 1903; Street Railways, 8 C. L. 2004) are pertinent to specific topics. Likewise relationship between carrier and employe is treated in Master and Servant, 8 C. L. 840. Rules peculiar to water traffic are treated in Shipping and Water Traffic, 8 C. L. 1903.

as to price. Carpenter v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Del.] 64 A. 252. Express company offering to carry money for hire is a common carrier thereof under Rev. Civ. Code S. D. 1903, 1577. Platt v. Le Cocq, 150 F. 391.

24. Sleeping car company, held not common carrier. Calhoun v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 149 F. 546. Where distinct street car companies operate cars over parallel tracks in common, one does not sustain relation of carrier to a passenger on the other's cars. Foreman v. Norfolk, Portsmouth & Newport News Co. [Va.] 56 S. E. 805.

25. Under Pub. St. 1901, c. 160, §§ 21-23, it seems that a railroad company which enters into a contract to furnish special cars to a firm for transportation of milk and it is immaterial whether he owns the facilities of carriage or not.<sup>26</sup> Unless prohibited by statute,<sup>27</sup> one may be a common carrier of passengers exclusively.<sup>28</sup>

thereby becomes a common carrier of milk. Baker v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 65 A. 386.

Held private carrier only: Where charter party gives to charterer full capacity of ship. The Fri [C. C. A.] 154 F. 333. One employed to tear down house and to move brick and lumber to another place. McBurnie v. Stelsly, 29 Ky. L. R. 1191, 97 S. W. 42.

26. Ownership of car immaterial where defendant was operating same. Indianapolis St. R. Co. v. Ray, 167 Ind. 236, 78 N. E. 978. Held under facts of case that railroad holding itself out as ready to do switching which required it to use own and another's tracks was common carrier. Larabee Flour Mills Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 74 Kan. 808, 88 P. 72.

27. Under Const. art. 11, § 12, and Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 114, § 84, a railroad organized under the general act must carry both passengers and freight. Litchfield & M. R. Co. v. People, 222 Ill. 242, 78 N. E. 589.

28. Under Rev. Laws 1905, a corporation is no less a common carrier though its articles do not prescribe that one of its powers is to carry freight. In re Minneapolis & St. P. Suburban R. Co. [Minn.] 112 N. W. 13.

29. Validity of state regulations as affecting interstate commerce, see Commerce, 7 C. L. 667.

30. See 7 C. L. 523.

31. Leased property. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Haas, 127 Ga. 187, 56 S. E. 313.

32. Carleton v. Yadkin R. Co., 143 N. C. 43, 55 S. E. 429. Liability extends to injuries due to negligence of servants of lessee. Id. Lessor carrier is liable for lessee's breach of duty to passengers. Pickens v. Georgia R. & Banking Co., 216 Ga. 517, 55 S. E. 171. Carriers operating their lines jointly through common lessee may be sued jointly, especially where negligent acts were continuous over line of each. Carleton v. Yadkin R. Co., 143 N. C. 43, 55 S. E. 429.

33. Converted goods by delivery after notice of claim by true owner. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Haas, 127 Ga. 187, 56 S. E. 313.

34. Notwithstanding Rev. Pol. Code S. D. 1903, c. 7, authorizing commissioners to apply to state courts, etc. Platt v. Le Cocq, 150 F. 391.

35. See 7 C. L. 524.

36. It is no defense to order requiring carrier to receive shipments of money at reasonable hours that it will result in loss, where order does not fix the charge or compel the carrier to continue as carrier of money. Platt v. LeCocq, 150 F. 391.

37. It is no defense to order requiring carrier of money to receive shipments during reasonable hours that shipper could use postal department, and was therefore not prejudiced by its order accepting money only at unreasonable time. Platt v. Le Cocq, 150 F. 391. Rev. Pol. Code S. D. 1903, c. 7, applies to express company doing intrastate business whether incorporated in state or not, and subjects them to control of state board of railroad commissioners. Id.

38. Dulaney v. United Rys. & Elec. Co. 104 Md. 423, 65 A. 45.

39. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 Law. Ed. 933. Under police power, state may require interchange of cars and switching between lines physically connecting. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 18, 97 S. W. 778. Const. § 213, held not to deprive carrier of property without due process of law, although it deprived it temporarily of possession and use of its cars (Id.), and carrier who has complied therewith, except as to stock cars consigned to particular yard, is estopped to contest its reasonableness (Id.). Contract with one stockyard not to deliver cars to another, as required by such section, is void, and hence no defense for noncompliance. Id. Carrier cannot refuse to obey on ground of inconvenience or increased expense. Id. Railroad takes its charter and holds property and franchise subject to constitutional changes, hence charter does not constitute contract so as to excuse carrier from complying with Const. § 213. Id. Const. § 213 makes it compulsory for carriers to use terminal facilities for transferring freight with lines having physical connection, (Id.), and is not limited to requiring carrier to deliver such cars only as it receives from the connecting carrier (Id.). Under Const. § 213, stockyard company located on one line may compel carrier physically connecting with such line to deliver cars to such line for delivery at yard, where it delivers to other lines. Id. Order requiring Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company to connect with particular train of Southern Railway Company, held not so arbitrary and unreasonable as to amount to denial of due process of law or deprivation of equal protection of laws, other connections being inadequate, though it may require operation of train at loss so long as total state income affords adequate remuneration. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 Law. Ed. 933.

Duty to furnish cars.<sup>42</sup>—The common-law duty to furnish cars upon proper demand<sup>43</sup> has been supplemented in some states by penal statutes,<sup>44</sup> that of Texas being valid as to intrastate<sup>45</sup> and inapplicable to interstate shipments.<sup>46</sup> Any legitimate excuse is available under this statute.<sup>47</sup>

(§ 2) C. Charges.<sup>48</sup>—Under the interstate commerce act as amended, the rate for a through shipment is sum of local rates filed or published, if no through joint rate has been filed.<sup>49</sup> Subject to the constitutional inhibitions against class legislation,<sup>50</sup> taking property without due process of law,<sup>51</sup> and impairment of contract rights,<sup>52</sup> the states may regulate and prescribe charges on intrastate shipments.<sup>53</sup> In determining the reasonableness of a rate, consideration should be given to the

40. The East St. Louis v. Suburban R. Co., held under no legal duty to run cars to the east end of Eads Bridge. People v. East St. Louis & Suburban R. Co., 122 Ill. App. 431.

41. Carrier had no trackage rights. People v. St. Louis & Belleville Elec. R. Co., 122 Ill. App. 422.

42. See 7 C. L. 525.

43. Order to furnish cars "as soon as possible" is insufficient. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Shipman [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 152, 96 S. W. 449.

44. The penal liability prescribed by Act March 31, 1874, § 23 (Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 114, § 84), cannot be exacted for failure to "furnish, start, and run cars for the transportation of property," as required by § 22. Atchison etc., R. Co. v. People, 227 Ill. 270, 81 N. E. 342.

45. Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497-4502, as amended by Acts 1899, p. 67, c. 48, imposing penalty for failure to furnish cars within certain time after demand. Allen v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex.] 101 S. W. 792.

46. Sayles' Rev. Civ. St. §§ 4497-4499, does not require carrier to furnish cars for interstate shipment extending beyond its line, hence application stating that shipper desired to bill over defendant's line to point in state, and from that point over another road to point in another state, is insufficient. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Loving [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 159, 98 S. W. 451.

47. Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497-4502, held not to apply where carrier had any legitimate excuse, though specific excuses were mentioned in proviso clause, hence not unconstitutional as taking property without due process of law. Allen v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex.] 101 S. W. 792, rvs. 98 S. W. 450, as to availability of excuses. Answer failing to show that carrier had sufficient cars to meet ordinary demands, held demurrable. Id.

49. Interstate commerce act as amended by Act March 2, 1889, c. 382 (25 Stat. 855, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3156). United States v. Wood, 145 F. 405.

50. P. L. 1903, p. 665, § 38, fixing maximum rates, etc., is not unconstitutional in that it allows railroads organized under special charters to charge a higher rate than those organized under the general law. Shelton v. Erie R. Co., 73 N. J. Law, 588, 66 A. 403.

51. Whether rate adopted and fixed for transportation on line owning majority of stock of another could be legally applied to transportation on latter depends upon whether it is reasonable or confiscatory. Hill v. Wadley Southern R. Co. [Ga.] 57 S. E. 796.

Held void: Act March 15, 1906 (Acts 1906, p. 451, c. 256), requiring railroads operating in state to keep on sale family mileage books, etc. Commonwealth v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [Va.] 55 S. E. 572. Acts 1905, p. 238, c. 124, fixing the weight of standards on lumber cars at 1,000 pounds, requiring it to be deducted from the "net weight" of the lumber, and freight charged on the remainder. State v. Great Northern R. Co., 43 Wash 658, 86 P. 1056.

Held valid: Rate of one cent per ton per mile on phosphates held reasonable where it appeared that such rate was nearly two mills higher than average rate in state. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Florida, 203 U. S. 261, 51 Law. Ed. 175. Regulation of local freight rates for shipments to and from the Florida West Shore Railroad, and over Seaboard Air Line Railway, does not deprive latter of property without due process of law, even if total receipts from local freight rates are insufficient to meet proper charges against such business, where such regulation merely secures equality of rates throughout state. Id. Where Alabama & Vicksburg Railroad voluntarily gave rate of three and one-half cents per 100 pounds on grain between Vicksburg and Meridian to some shippers, it stopped itself from contending that similar rate fixed on by commission for all shippers was too low. Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission of Mississippi, 203 U. S. 496, 51 Law. Ed. 289.

52. Texas Act 1853, providing that the legislature should not reduce rates unless they shall have made a net profit of twelve per cent per annum during the ten previous years, held not to create a contract between the state and certain roads chartered thereafter. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Storey, 149 F. 499.

53. Circular No. 325, fixing continuous mileage rate between Wadley Southern Railway Company and Central of Georgia Railway Company, is clear and complete without reference to rule No. 1 (33 S. E. v.) or commission. Hill v. Wadley Southern R. Co. [Ga.] 57 S. E. 795. On appeal from an order of the railroad commission fixing rate, only questions are whether it has been established in due form of law under valid law, by valid commission, and is reasonable. Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 927.

value of carrier's property,<sup>54</sup> stocks, and bonds,<sup>55</sup> and current operating expenses,<sup>56</sup> but no allowance need be made for a sinking fund.<sup>57</sup> Unreasonable discriminations should not be made between commodities, quantitative shipments of same commodity,<sup>58</sup> or localities,<sup>59</sup> and the reasonableness of a single commodity rate cannot be considered apart from general schedule.<sup>60</sup> Rates fixed by commission are prima facie reasonable,<sup>61</sup> and a finding of the interstate commerce commission is prima facie evidence of the fact found in subsequent litigation.<sup>62</sup> Fact that schedule may indirectly result in discrimination in practice does not render it invalid.<sup>63</sup> An overcharge through mistake not amounting to gross negligence<sup>64</sup> creates no liability in New York. Congressional act prohibiting free transportation does not affect an existing contract.<sup>65</sup> A lessee of a land-grant aided road must carry government freight at rate prescribed for the land-grant road.<sup>66</sup>

54. Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 927.

55. In action to enjoin enforcement of rates established by commission on ground that they are unreasonable and confiscatory, allegations in bill as to value of road's stocks and bonds are pertinent. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Storey, 149 F. 499.

56. Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 927. Expenditures for permanent improvement and equipment should not be charged to current expenses of single year for purpose of testing reasonableness of a rate. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 51 Law. Ed. 1128.

57. Houston & T. G. R. Co. v. Storey, 149 F. 499.

58. Disturbance of relation between freight rates for soap in carload lots and less than carload lots, created by advancing former from class six to class five and latter from class four to class three, was not cured by classifying soap in less than carload lots at twenty per cent less than third class, but not less than fourth class, where the result of such classification is to leave less than carload lots in fourth class in some portion of territory, and in higher in other portions. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 142, 51 Law. Ed. 995.

59. Economic and natural advantages of localities may justify classification of commodity rates in respect to such localities. Southern R. Co. v. Atlanta Stove Works [Ga.] 57 S. E. 429.

60. Hence, in action to enforce particular rate, answer, attacking its reasonableness without relation to body of rates presents no defensive issue of fact. Southern R. Co. v. Atlanta Stove Works [Ga.] 57 S. E. 429.

61. Burden is on attacking party to show contrary. Southern R. Co. v. Atlanta Stove Works [Ga.] 57 S. E. 429. Intra-state rate on phosphates will not be held unreasonable where the evidence does not show cost of transportation, amount of phosphates carried, or the effect of rate on income. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Florida, 203 U. S. 256, 51 Law. Ed. 174. Where, after establishing a reasonable schedule of rates for all commodities, an exception is made in favor of one commodity between designated points, such exception cannot be said to be discriminatory as matter of law. Southern R. Co. v. Atlanta Stove Works [Ga.] 57 S. E. 429.

62. Where commission found reclassification unjustifiable, railroad in action to restrain enforcement thereof has burden of justifying. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co., 146 F. 559. Reclassification of laundry soap shipments in less than carload lots from the fourth to twenty per cent less than third class rates, held unjustifiable. Id.

63. As that roads having right to charge higher rates will reduce them only at competitive points, thereby working discrimination between localities. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Storey, 149 F. 499.

64. Where street car conductor exacts second fare under mistaken belief that none has been paid, company is not liable under Railroad Law, § 39 (Laws 1890, p. 1096, c. 565), such over-charge being due to mistake not amounting to gross negligence. Robinson v. International R. Co., 103 N. Y. S. 588.

65. Act Cong. June 29, 1906, §§ 1, 2. Mottley v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 150 F. 406.

66. Acts 2d July, 1864 (13 Stat. P. 365) and Act 27th February, 1893 (27 Stat. P. 483), concerning such rates, are applicable. Astoria & Columbia River R. R. Co. v. U. S., 41 Ct. Cl. 284.

67. Posting of notices that they may be inspected on application is not sufficient. Wabash R. Co. v. Sloop, 200 Mo. 198, 98 S. W. 607.

68. Compliance with § 6 of Interstate commerce act as amended, not condition precedent. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 Law. Ed. 562.

69. See 7 C. L. 527.

70. Granting that § 3 of interstate commerce act applies to facilities, for shipment, indictment for discrimination in denying switching facilities which fails to allege that switches desired were reasonably practicable, could be put in with safety, that business justified them, and offer to pay usual cost, held insufficient. United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 153 F. 997. Pol.

discriminate between businesses,<sup>71</sup> localities,<sup>72</sup> persons,<sup>73</sup> or between persons and other carriers,<sup>74</sup> but must serve all alike who apply under similar conditions.<sup>75</sup> Lack of cars to meet the demand does not justify discrimination, but the available cars must be proportionably distributed.<sup>76</sup> Both the interstate commerce act<sup>77</sup> and the Elkins act,<sup>78</sup> and some state statutes,<sup>79</sup> prohibit unjust discriminations. Rules and regulations of railroad commissioners to prevent discrimination are prima facie just and reasonable.<sup>80</sup> After May 1, 1908, it will be unlawful for a railroad to transport coal mined by it from state to state.<sup>81</sup>

* As a means of preventing discrimination, the interstate commerce act, as

Code 1903, c. 7 § 437, prohibiting common carrier from subjecting any particular description of traffic to any prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever, construed to mean any "unreasonable" prejudice or disadvantage. Platt v. Le Cocq, 150 F. 391. Whether conditions justify difference in rates between localities is question of fact. United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 F. 598.

71. Cannot refuse to carry consignments of liquor C. O. D. while it so carries other commodities. Crescent Liquor Co. v. Platt, 148 F. 894. Nor can it require a consignee of liquors to furnish an affidavit that he has a state license, or that he is a bona fide purchaser thereof for his own use, before delivery. Id.

72. Discrimination in demurrage charges in favor of Charlestown over South Boston is not available to one claiming discrimination against Forest Hills. Michie v. New York, etc., R. Co., 141 F. 694.

73. Cannot refuse to receive and deliver liquors from lawful dealers in one state if it receives and carries the same in other states. Crescent Liquor Co., v. Platt, 148 F. 894. Where switching service has been wrongfully discontinued as to a disfavored shipper, mandamus will lie to compel restoration. Larabee Flour Mills Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 74 Kan. 808, 88 P. 72.

74. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 18, 97 S. W. 778.

75. Undertaking to distribute employees and materials between stations for one telegraph company, it must do so for others, although such distribution is under special contract (State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [Fla.] 41 So. 705), and railroad commission may make reasonable rules and regulations to prevent such discrimination (Id.).

76. Wright v. Baltimore & O. R., 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 5. Percentage ascertained by taking actual shipments of mines when supply is ample and possible capacity of mines, counting former as two points and latter as one, held not unreasonably discriminative against new mines. United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 154 F. 108. In allotting by percentage, private cars are not to be diverted from the exclusive use of the owners, but must be credited on the allowance. Id. Reasonable extra allowance of cars may be made for prompt return of cars, such practice having been adopted instead of demurrage, charge, and open to all. Id. In making a percentage allotment of coal cars, credit need not be given for cars furnished by carrier, other carriers, or consumer, for receiving coal purchased for private use. Id. Allotment of arbitrary number of cars to develop new mines which have had no opportunity to establish a percentage is lawful within reasonable limits. Id. The fact that a shipper is not a mine owner or lessee, but has only a contract to purchase and sell coal, does not affect his right to an equal share of cars with the owners and lessees. Wright v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 5. Carriers cannot discriminate in favor of "regular shippers" and against shippers for the first time. Id.

77. Provisions of interstate commerce act requiring rates for transportation and for "receiving, delivering, storage, or handling" to be reasonable, and prohibiting discrimination, are sufficiently broad to cover demurrage charges. Michie v. New York, etc., R. Co., 151 F. 694. Demurrage charge of $1 per day after first ninety-six hours, deducting Sundays, holidays, and rainy days, for time car of hay remains unloaded, held not unreasonable. Id. Demurrage charge for loaded hay cars is not a discrimination because hay is stored at less rate in hay shed by defendant at another point, or because storage on cars is allowed at shed rates at latter point if the shed is full. Id. Excessive charge for privilege of reconsignment of hay shipped through East St. Louis is unjust discrimination within §§ 2, 33 of interstate commerce act. Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 728.

78. The Elkins act is not restricted in its provisions to departures from published rate, but prohibits any unjust discriminations, hence immaterial in a prosecution for receiving an unjust discrimination whether the rate received was published or not. United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 F. 598.

79. Acts 1901, p. 149, c. 93, Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 3312b and 2212e, providing that express companies shall grant to all consignors, including other responsible express companies as consignors, equal terms and accommodations, etc., is not violative of 14th Amend. Fed. Const. in that it deprives express companies of right to demand prepayment of charges, compels them to make "forced loans" for accrued charges, or of common-law right of contract. American Exp. Co. v. Southern Ind. Exp. Co., 167 Ind. 292, 78 N. E. 1021.

80. Hence enforcement thereof is not a taking of property without due process of law, nor does it deprive a railroad of equal protection, in the absence of a showing that they are unreasonable or unjust. State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [Fla.] 41 So. 705.

81. Hepburn act (Act. Cong. June 29, 1906, 34 Stat. 584, c. 3591). Although title thereto passes before shipment. Central Trust Co. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 52 Misc. 195, 101 N. Y. S. 837.

amended, requires certain foreign rates,<sup>82</sup> joint interstate rates,<sup>83</sup> and rates on a through interstate line under a common arrangement,<sup>84</sup> to be filed and published. Where a rate between two points has been so filed and published, there can be no deviation therefrom except as provided by law,<sup>85</sup> though shipment is over another route.<sup>86</sup> One receiving a rebate<sup>87</sup> from a rate<sup>88</sup> which has been "filed and published"<sup>89</sup> is criminally liable under the Elkins act, though he did not request the same<sup>90</sup> or receive any personal benefit therefrom.<sup>91</sup> It is not essential that some other shipper shall have paid a higher rate.<sup>92</sup> A rebate need not have been prearranged to render carrier liable for granting the same.<sup>93</sup> A contract to carry goods at the then established rate for a definite period becomes ineffective after a higher rate is filed.<sup>94</sup> The rate law of June 29th, 1906, became effective on date of approval.<sup>95</sup>

Remedies, criminal liability, prosecution, and punishment.<sup>96</sup>—Injunction<sup>97</sup> will lie at instance of person discriminated against,<sup>98</sup> but a mere technical violation of the interstate commerce act will not support a private suit.<sup>99</sup>

82. If foreign shipment is carried under aggregate through rate which is sum of ocean rate and local rate to part of transshipment, the latter rate must be filed (Armour Packing Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 1.) But, if rate is joint rate by virtue of a common control, management, or arrangement, such joint rate must be filed (Id.). Rates of transportation from places in the United States to ports of transshipment of property in foreign commerce carried under through bills must be filed and published under the interstate commerce act and its amendments. Id.

83. Express agreement for through interstate rate is not necessary, but receipt and forwarding of business under a through bill or arrangement for through shipment is sufficient. United States v. Wood, 145 F. 405. Each carrier must file, hence indictment against one need not allege that such rate was not filed by the others. United States v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 153 F. 636.

84. Carrier must file, though its line is wholly intra-state. United States v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 153 F. 630. Indictment considered and held to sufficiently allege that defendant's road, though intra-state, was a part of a joint through route over which interstate commerce was established. Id.

85. United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 F. 625. Fact that shipment was made in cars not owned by carrier, and in bulk, does not authorize departure as matter of law. United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 F. 598. Elkins law prohibits shipments at less than regular established rate, though by direct agreement. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 F. 719. Carrier filing and publishing schedule of rates for shipments beyond line must adhere thereto. Id.

86. United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 F. 625; United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 F. 598. Indictment for departure from published joint rate for shipment between same points over another route is not defective for failing to allege that latter rate is not filed. United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 F. 625.

87. Elkins Law prohibits rebates to consignee as well as consignor. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 F. 719. Stockholder is not criminally liable for rebate accepted by corporation. United States v. Wood, 145 F. 405. Where partnership receives rebate, but turns it over to corporation for which it is sales agent, receiving no benefit itself, silent member who took no part, and who had no knowledge thereof, is not liable. Id.

88. Word "rate," as used in interstate commerce act, means net amount received and retained from shipper. United States v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 148 F. 646. Hence, where carrier charges scheduled rate and remits part thereof as allowance for use of shipper's private side tracks, such act constitutes rebate. Id. Cancellation of terminal charge constitutes rebate. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 F. 719.

89. Under Elkins Act of February 19, 1903 (c. 708, 32 Stat. §47, U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1905, p. 599), it is unlawful for carrier to grant rebate from joint rate which has been "filed or published," but shipper is liable for receiving rebate only when rate has been "filed and published." United States v. Wood, 145 F. 405.

90. United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 F. 598.

91. As where he turns it over to another for whom he is acting as salesman. United States v. Wood, 145 F. 405.

92. Hence indictment need not name such a person nor allege that the published rate has ever been charged. United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 F. 598. United States v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 146 F. 298.

93. Indictment under § 1 of Elkins Act for giving rebate which alleges that defendant received legal rate, and paid shipper rebate or concession, need not allege prearrangement to that effect. United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 151 F. 84.

94. Right to change given by interstate commerce act is read into contract. Armour Packing Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 152 F. 1.

95. Joint resolution of congress on day after approval, held ineffective to postpone. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 F. 719.

97. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 18, 97 S. W. 778.

98. Where, in violation of Const. §§ 213 214, a carrier arbitrarily discriminates in refusing to deliver cars of stock to a connect-

The Hepburn act did not repeal the Elkins act as to offenses previously committed thereunder.<sup>1</sup> The only criminal intent necessary to the offense of receiving a rebate is an intent to accept a lesser rate.<sup>2</sup>

Where a rebate is given on a through rate, the offense is judicable in any district through which the shipment passes.<sup>3</sup> While the offense of discrimination may be set forth in the general language of the statute, it must be accompanied by a statement of particulars sufficient to avoid uncertainty.<sup>4</sup> Conspiracy to give and receive rebates will not lie where same facts constitute an offense under interstate commerce act.<sup>5</sup>

A carrier and its agents may be prosecuted under a single indictment for granting concessions.<sup>6</sup> The indictment must show a published rate binding upon the carrier,<sup>7</sup> though it need not especially aver that such rate was required to be filed,<sup>8</sup> and a willful<sup>9</sup> departure therefrom.<sup>10</sup>

Offense under act of February 19, 1903, of receiving rebates may be prosecuted upon information.<sup>11</sup> An indictment for giving or receiving a rebate need not expressly aver that carrier came within the statute,<sup>12</sup> nor need it negative facts which may render payment legal<sup>13</sup> or the means whereby the rebating was effected.<sup>14</sup> Indictment must not be duplicitous.<sup>15</sup>

ing line for transportation to particular stockyard, such stockyard company may sue to restrain. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 18, 97 S. W. 778.

99. Mere proof that defendant technically violated the act by filing a separate charge for icing in its schedule, without proof of an excessive charge or unlawful discrimination, is insufficient. Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 148 F. 968.

1. United States v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 153 F. 630. Hepburn act, § 10, when construed in accordance with Rev. St. § 13, held not to relieve offenders under § 1 of Elkins act from subsequent prosecution, but merely to relate to procedure to be followed in pending cases. United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 151 F. 84; United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 F. 719; United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 152 F. 269.

2. Immaterial that the shipper thought that he had a contract right to a lesser rate. Armour Packing Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 1.

3. Offense is continuing one. Armour Packing Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 1. Rebate or concession from part of single rate renders all transportation thereunder illegal. Id. Concession need not be charged or proved from part of established rate proportionate to carriage through particular district. Id.

4. United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 153 F. 997. Indictment under interstate commerce act charging discrimination generally in refusing to furnish particular coal dealer with his share of cars and motive power, and furnishing of more than their share to other coal shippers, held insufficient where did not allege facts showing the quota to which they were respectively entitled. Id.

5. Indictment for conspiracy under § 5440, Rev. St. alleging that agents of shipper and carrier gave and received rebates in pursuance of fraudulent conspiracy, will not lie, since offense charged is essentially an offense under interstate commerce act, and punishment would thereby be increased. United States v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 146 F. 298.

6. United States v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 146 F. 298.

7. Indictment considered, and held sufficient to show that carriers concurred in rate. United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 F. 625. Held to sufficiently charge common arrangement for through interstate shipment under joint tariff. United States v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 153 F. 630; United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 F. 625. Need not aver that it is reasonable, nor set out schedule in full. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 F. 719.

8. An allegation that it was filed as required by law is sufficient. United States v. Vacuum Oil Co., 153 F. 598.

9. Allegation that full rate was charged and rebate given sufficiently alleges willful deviation. United States v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 146 F. 298.

10. Allegation that total rate of connecting lines was a particular sum, and that property was transported at lower rate, is defective in not negating joint rate. United States v. Standard Oil Co., 148 F. 719.

11. Not being punishable by imprisonment in the state prison or penitentiary, it is not an infamous crime within 5th Const. Amend., requiring presentment or indictment by the grand jury. United States v. Camden Iron Works, 150 F. 214.

12. Allegation of facts bringing shipment within statute is sufficient. United States v. Camden Iron Works, 150 F. 214.

13. Matter of defense. United States v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 151 F. 84. Indictment for rebating, alleging agreement whereby shipping clerk was to direct shipments over defendant's line at regular rates, and thereafter present claims for rebates under guise of claims for lighterage, etc., held good as against objection that it did not negative that money was paid as commission for ob-

In prosecutions for departing from published schedule, the government has the burden of showing a binding rate.<sup>16</sup> In prosecutions for receiving rebates, any evidence tending to show a shipment within the statute is admissible,<sup>17</sup> as is the schedule filed to show the lawful rate.<sup>18</sup> A local rate is not admissible to show discrimination between nonlocal rates.<sup>19</sup> Point of shipment must be proven substantially as alleged.<sup>20</sup> Act of Cong. June 29, 1906, amending the Elkins act, by providing imprisonment for offenses under the act, is prospective only in operation.<sup>21</sup>

taining business. United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 152 F. 269.

14. Armour Packing Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 1.

15. An indictment under the Elkins act, declaring it unlawful to offer, grant, or give a rebate, is not duplicitous because it alleges that defendant offered, granted, and gave a rebate. United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 152 F. 269.

16. Has burden of showing common arrangement for continuous carriage between such points. United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 153 F. 625.

17. Evidence tending to show shipment under through bill of lading, or under contract for continuous shipment, is admissible to show that such carrier was used for the purpose of shipment under common control, management, or arrangement, for a continuous carriage. United States v. Camden Iron Works, 150 F. 214. As agent's abstract of through shipments, account sheets showing settlement for particular shipment in accordance with tariff rates, distribution of charges, etc. Id.

18. United States v. Camden Iron Works, 150 F. 214. Provision of Act Feb. 19, 1903, that, in prosecution of carrier for giving rebate, rate filed by it or in which it participates "shall be conclusively deemed to be the legal rate" as against such carrier, etc., merely prescribes effect of such evidence, and does not render it inadmissible in prosecution of shipper for receiving rebate. Id.

19. Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 728.

20. Where shipment was alleged to have been made from Philadelphia, it is immaterial that shipment really originated elsewhere, where it was merely lightered across to Philadelphia, such lightering being analogous to local transportation to point of shipment. United States v. Camden Iron Works, 150 F. 214.

21. United States v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 146 F. 298.

22. See 7 C. L. 529.

23. Delay caused ice supply to become exhausted in hands of terminal carriers. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. White [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 673.

24. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Greening, 20 Ky. L. R. 1180, 100 S. W. 825. Connecting carriers making separate contracts of carriage relating to transportation over their respective lines are liable only for losses on their own line. McGuire v. Great Northern R. Co. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 434.

25. Glazier v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 53 Misc 290, 103 N. Y. S. 112; Roy v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 61 W. Va. 616, 57 S. E. 39. Not liable for delay of connecting carrier in returning sick horse to initial carrier that it might be unloaded for medical treatment. Wente v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 112 N. W. 300. Actual acceptance by connecting carrier constitutes delivery by initial carrier, though not made at usual place of transfer. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Bailey [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 843, 96 S. W. 1089. Delivery of cotton to compress company, held delivery to connecting carrier, there being evidence that such was custom between the roads, and that latter made no objection to such delivery upon receiving notice, and especially in view of contract which it had with compress company to compress cotton for it. Southern R. Co. v. Hubbard Bros. & Co. [C. C. A.] 150 F. 312. Where evidence shows that car was placed on receiving track, but does not show notice to connecting carrier, or that it took charge of car, held no abuse of discretion in refusing to allow amendment of answer alleging delivery to connecting line. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Stevens, 29 Ky. L. R. 1079, 96 S. W. 888.

26. Where petition alleges that both defendants were really one and the same line and operated by same management, which is not specifically denied, it need not allege place and time of injury. Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Bennett [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1115. In action against initial carrier whose liability was limited to its own line, statements of defendant's local agent that it had acquired control of connecting line held insufficient to require submission of question to jury, although defendant had been accustomed to ship by different connecting line prior thereto, plaintiff having dealt with connecting line as independent. Goehrend v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 146 Mich. 497, 13 Det. Leg. N. 851, 109 N. W. 849.

27. Special contract extending liability beyond own line will not be inferred from doubtful or loose expressions but must clearly appear. Roy v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 61 W. Va. 616, 57 S. E. 39. Acceptance of goods consigned to point not on carrier's line implies undertaking to carry to destination. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Kilberry [Ark.] 102 S. W. 894; Wabash R. Co. v. Thomas, 222 Ill. 327, 78 N. E. 777. Contra. McLendon v. Wabash R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 128, 95 S. W. 943. Contract construed as undertaking of initial carrier to carry to acts of connecting lines,<sup>28</sup> and likewise, where a partnership exists between them.<sup>29</sup> Where a carrier wrongfully refuses to route as directed,<sup>30</sup> or thereafter changes the route,<sup>31</sup> or selects a connecting carrier without consulting the shipper<sup>32</sup> it is responsible, irrespective of where the loss occurs. Receipt of connecting carrier is prima facie evidence of delivery.<sup>33</sup> A connecting carrier receiving damaged goods need only exercise reasonable care to prevent further injury.<sup>34</sup>

As between connecting carriers, the carrier whose negligence causes the loss is primarily liable.<sup>35</sup>

Where ample and equal baggage facilities are furnished to all passengers, a carrier may grant to a transfer line the exclusive right to enter its trains to solicit, and may lease to it a portion of its baggage room for storage of baggage until checked.<sup>36</sup>

PART II. CARRIAGE OF GOODS.

destination through agency of connecting carrier, and not a joint undertaking by the carriers. Meyers v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 288, 96 S. W. 737. Where carrier agreed with consignee while cars were en route to deliver without extra charge and through connecting lines to consignee's private tracks, it was liable for delay caused by connecting line's refusal to promptly accept. Cohen v. Missouri, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 102 S. W. 1029.

28. Sabbatino v. Snow's U. S. Sample Exp. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 1004. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Marrs [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 1177. Connecting lines become its agents. Cohen v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 102 S. W. 1029. In absence of stipulation restricting liability, initial carrier and connecting carrier on whose line injury occurred are liable therefor. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Kilberry [Ark.] 102 S. W. 894.

29. Allegation that agent of initial carrier was agent of defendant, that the roads had arrangement whereby each acted as agent of other in making contracts of shipment, and that they acted together in transporting, held not to allege partnership. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Gray [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 1125. Fact that connecting carriers advertised a through line from G. to C., and had a common agent and baggageman, held to support a finding that they were partners. Hence jointly liable. Wolf v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. [Mich.] 112 N. W. 732.

30. Pecos River R. Co. v. Harrington [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 1050. Becomes insurer. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Eastin [Tex.] 102 S. W. 105.

31. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Pendleton 29 Ky. L. R. 721, 96 S. W. 434.

32. Will be deemed to have undertaken a through shipment. Wabash R. R. Co. v. Thomas, 122 Ill. App. 569.

33. Receipt acknowledging delivery of only box lost is prima facie an admission of delivery, although the immediate preceding item was marked lost which was in fact received. Meyers v. Missouri, etc., 120 Mo. App. 288, 96 S. W. 737.

34. Need not resort to unusual means or expense. Calender-Vanderhoof Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 99 Minn. 295, 109 N. W. 402. Where it was unusual to ship apples in bulk in box freight car during November, held that carrier receiving such consignment at midnight was not negligent in not having facilities to immediately transfer to refrigerator car or run it into round house, there being none closer than three miles, and no available engine. Calender-Vanderhoof Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 99 Minn. 295, 109 N. W. 402.

35. Evidence that delivering carrier had not cleared door of car containing cotton to exclude sparks; that an engine which it was operating nearby was emitting sparks, which fell upon car, held to make prima facie case. Cane Belt R. Co. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 48, 98 S. W. 1066. Where initial carrier is adjudged liable for negligence of connecting carrier, it becomes subrogated to rights of plaintiff. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Eastin [Tex.] 102 S. W. 105.

36. Hart v. Atlanta Terminal Co. [Ga.] 58 S. E. 452.

37. See 7 C. L. 533.

38. Express company's rule not to receive shipments of money after 7:45 a. m., the time of the departure of the train for the day, held unreasonable. Platt v. Le Cocq, 150 P. 391.

39. Impending flood of character to fall within definition of act of God, and which threatened to inundate tracks justifies refusal to accept cars from initial carrier. Gray v. Wabash R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 144, 95 S. W. 983.

40. Acceptance for transportation without exacting payment, held waiver. Gratiot St. Warehouse Co. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 124 Mo. App. 545, 102 S. W. 11.

Interpretation.<sup>54</sup>—A bill of lading providing that in case of loss the carrier should have the benefit of any insurance thereon does not require the shipper to negotiate insurance.<sup>55</sup>

41. Where it is customary to deliver cotton to compress company and to take receipts therefor upon which carrier issued bill of lading, such course being pursued for benefit of carrier, cotton in possession of compress company for which bill of lading has been issued is in possession of carrier. Arthur v. Texas & P. R. Co., 204 U. S. 505, 51 Law Ed. 590. In absence of mistake, recital in bill of lading that carrier received car for shipment on specific date must control. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Nelson, 30 Ky. L. R. 114, 97 S. W. 757.

42. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Friedman [Ga.] 57 S. E. 778. Where carrier is under no duty to accept cars placed on its track, it is under no obligation to push cars to platform to avoid a flood. Gray v. Wabash R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 144, 95 S. W. 983. Where it was customary for one carrier to deliver cars intended for another on transfer track where they were picked up by the latter, there was no delivery to the latter until cars were accepted by train crews, in absence of affirmative acceptance by some agent. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Friedman [Ga.] 57 S. E. 778. Placing of cars on transfer track under arrangement between carriers that cars so placed would be accepted for further shipment does not constitute acceptance. Gray v. Wabash R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 144, 95 S. W. 983. Delivery on platform with shipping instructions to a watchman who received freight and issued bills of lading without authority, with notice to agent, held to make a question for jury. Garner v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 79 Ark. 353, 96 S. W. 187. Evidence that cotton was placed on defendant's platform, marked for shipment; that no shipping directions were given or bill of lading received; that plaintiff customarily so delivered, held to make case for jury. Copeland v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 57 S. E. 535.

43. Issuance of bill of lading not necessary. Garner v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 70 Ark. 353, 96 S. W. 187. Carrier receiving goods in afternoon for shipment next morning stores as carrier, although shipper knows that there is no train until next morning. Southern R. Co. v. Smith [Ky.] 102 S. W. 232.

44. Evidence held for jury whether compress company had been made agent by contract, or custom to receive cotton from preceding connecting carriers. Southern R.

Co. v. Hubbard Bros. Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 31.

45. See 7 C. L. 533

46. Cohen Bros. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 121, 98 S. W. 437.

47. As that stock was to be delivered at certain packing house. International, etc., R. Co. v. Griffin [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 225. Fact that waybill issued by carrier for guidance of servants stipulated for delivery at particular place does not affect written contract of shipment. Id. Where written contract was silent as to place of delivery, and it was customary to deliver at stockyards, evidence that carrier agreed to so deliver is no contradiction. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Coggin [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 1052.

48. Fact that written contract contained blanks headed "consignee, destination, and route," and were all filled except as to route, held sufficient to make case for jury as to mistake in omitting to name particular connecting carrier. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Pendelton, 29 Ky. L. R. 721, 96 S. W. 434.

49. Where, in checking forty-nine cases, carrier's agent rechecks six cases, and shipper, knowing of double count, states that there are fifty-five cases, for which number bill of lading is issued, held fraud. Cohen Bros. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 121, 98 S. W. 437.

50. Hence an order of commissioners compelling equal service to others, in violation thereof will not violate valid contractual rights. State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [Fla.] 41 So. 705.

51. Where carrier accepts resignation of agent, but gives no notice thereof to public and leaves him in apparent charge of office, it is estopped to deny his authority. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mink [Ky.] 103 S. W. 294.

52. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Frazier [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 983, 97 S. W. 325.

53. Even if it violates interstate commerce act. Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Cox [Tex. Civ. App.] 95 S. W. 1124.

54. See 7 C. L. 534.

55. Hence shipper may take out policy, providing that it should not inure to benefit of carrier, and may accept conditional payment thereunder without affecting his rights against the carrier. Bradley v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 350.

58. Bank discounted draft with order attached as collateral. Seward Co. v. Miller [Va.] 55 S. E. 681. Where, after bank has discounted draft with order of delivery attached as collateral, the consignor makes a sale to another, upon refusal of original purchaser to accept, all title of bank passes to such purchaser, upon accepting payment of draft, though sale was unauthorized as title was in bank. Id.

59. Bank discounting draft with order attached need not record papers, as required by Code, § 2465, to preserve lien. Seward & Co. v. Miller [Va.] 55 S. E. 681.

60. Goods consigned to factor were re-consigned without authority by company of which he was president, and bank purchased draft with bill of lading attached drawn upon consignee, evidence examined and held not to show that bank had any knowledge of irregularity. Smith v. Jefferson Bank, 120 Mo. App. 527, 97 S. W. 247. Where company has power to reconsign goods and to draw against them, bank, purchasing in good faith draft with bill attached drawn on consignee, is not liable to principal. Id.

61. St. 1868, p. 194, No. 150. Hardie & Co. v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 118 La. 253, 42 So. 793. Where carrier's liability becomes that of warehouseman, its bill of lading is equivalent to warehouseman's receipt, and negotiable under Acts 1902, p. 329, No. 176. Id. Under local custom of merchants, bill of lading, after seven months from date of issue, held to pass without suspicion. Id.

62. Code 1896, § 4223. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Commonwealth Cotton Mfg. Co., 146 Ala. 388, 42 So. 406.

63. Cotton delivered in sealed car. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Commonwealth Cotton Mfg. Co., 146 Ala. 388, 42 So. 406.

64. Leonhardt & Co. v. Small & Co. [Tenn.] 96 S. W. 1051. Where drafts of seller were attached to bill of lading and transferred to bank, fact that bank indorsed all but three, with statement that it was not responsible for quantity, quality, etc., does not render it liable for deficiency in quality of goods covered by the three bills, indorsement being surplusage. Id.

65. See 7 C. L. 535.

66. If it can do so without jeopardizing its other business. Di Giorgio Importing & Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 104 Md. 693, 65 A. 425; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Whitehill, 104 Md. 295, 64 A. 1033. Where twenty-one cars were furnished on day of notice, and ten on following morning, but fruit had already deteriorated, carrier held not liable, there being no sufficient notice. Di Giorgio Importing & Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 104 Md. 393, 65 A. 425. Failure to furnish cars at P. from A. on day they were ordered creates no liability where it appears that none were available, though shipper informed agent at A. that he would want two cars at "A. and P.," it appearing that agent at A. had no authority to order cars from A. to P. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 381.

67. Requisition must be definite as to time when wanted. Di Giorgio Importing & Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 104 Md. 693, 65 A. 425. Requisition for large number of cars for following week, to be used as vessels arrive, is insufficient without further notice (Id.), carrier owing no duty to keep posted as to arrival of vessels. (Id.).

68. Local agent has authority to receive application. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 256, 98 S. W. 459.

69. Negligence in failing to furnish car is sufficiently shown by proof that car assigned was diverted and defendant forgot to replace it. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Whitehill, 104 Md. 295, 64 A. 1033.

70. Promised to furnish when oral demand was made. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wynne Hoop & Cooperage Co. [Ark.] 99 S. W. 375.

71. Local agent has authority to contract for his station. (San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Timon [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 418; Clark v. Ulster, etc., R. Co. [N. Y.] 81 N. E. 766), but not for another station. (Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Cox [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1122). Fact that shipper knew that he would be required to sign written contract before shipping, and that similar contracts previously signed had generally negated agent's authority to contract for cars on specific date, did not charge him with knowledge that agent lacked such authority. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Timon [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 418.

72. Undertaking to "endeavor" to secure furnished,<sup>73</sup> and, while unusual pressure of business relieves it from common-law liability,<sup>74</sup> it is no defense to action on contract.<sup>75</sup> Request for cars carries an implied promise to use the same.<sup>76</sup> Where, upon receipt of requisition, the carrier has reason to believe that it will not be able to furnish cars, it must so advise the shipper.<sup>77</sup> Breached oral contract is not superseded by a subsequent written contract for future shipment, in the absence of a consideration for accrued damages.<sup>78</sup>

cars constitutes no contract to furnish them. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 381. Answer "all right" to request for cars on specific date creates contract to so furnish. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Timon [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 418.

73. Where cattle are held for any length of time in pens after time carrier agreed to furnish cars, carrier is liable. Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Morris [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 433.

74. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wynne Hoop & Coopers Co. [Ark.] 99 S. W. 375.

75. Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Morris [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 433.

76. Hence a contract to furnish cars is not void for lack of mutuality. Clark v. Ulster, etc., R. Co. [N. Y.] 81 N. E. 766.

77. Di Giorgio Importing & Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 104 Md. 693, 65 A. 425.

79. See 7 C. L. 536.

80. Misfeasance as distinct from nonfeasance. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Eastin & Knox [Tex.] 102 S. W. 105.

81. Failed to ice fruit car. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Renfree [Ark.] 100 S. W. 889; Brennisen v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 100 Minn. 102, 110 N. W. 362. Carrier undertaking to transport perishable fruit is bound to guard against injuries thereto by elements, from effects of delay, and other sources which may be averted by exercise of reasonable care. Taft Co. v. American Exp. Co., 123 Iowa, 522, 110 N. W. 897. Rule not to reice cars unless 600 pounds of ice can be put into tank, unknown to shipper, does not relieve company for failure to re-ice at specific points as per contract. Orem Fruit & Produce Co. of Baltimore City v. Northern Cent. Co. [Md.] 66 A. 436. Under Pub. St. 1901, c. 160, § 1, providing that carriers shall furnish reasonable facilities and accommodations for transporting property, carrier of milk must furnish reasonable facilities for transportation of such commodity. Baker v. Boston, etc., R. Co. [N. H.] 65 A. 386. Whether it must furnish special iced cars is one of fact. Id. Where large quantities of milk are produced for transportation, and it is more advantageous to producers, distributors, and consumers to have special cars furnished with icing facilities, it is duty of carrier to furnish such cars. Id.

82. Proof that ice bunkers were nearly empty upon arrival of car at destination, and that berries were spoiled, held to show negligence. Taft Co. v. American Express Co., 123 Iowa, 522, 110 N. W. 897.

83. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Hayes, 74 Kan. 880, 88 P. 64.

84. See 7 C. L. 536.

85. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Thompson [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 684.

86. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Thompson [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 684. In absence of express agreement. Harby v. Southern R. Co., 75 S. C. 321, 55 S. E. 760. Instruction requiring delivery "as speedily as possible," followed by clause imposing duty of "ordinary, reasonable, care," held not erroneous. Id.

87. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Whitehill, 104 Md. 295, 64 A. 1033. Law implies contract to deliver shipment with reasonable promptness and without unnecessary delay. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Pearce [Ark.] 101 S. W. 760. Plaintiff must show length of time ordinarily required and that more time was consumed than was necessary. Cleveland, Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 103 N. W. 982.

Delays held unreasonable: Where sixty-two hours were required to make run ordinarily made in thirty-six hours. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Gunter [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 152. Where month was required to carry thirty-three miles, though yards were congested. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Saulsberry [Ky.] 103 S. W. 254.

88. Delay of stock for five and seventeen hours in feed pens will not be presumed injurious, in absence of evidence that they were not properly cared for, fed, and watered. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Warfield. 30 Ky. L. R. 352, 98 S. W. 313.

89. St. Louis Merchants Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. Tasse, 122 Ill. App. 339. Where fourteen carloads of stock were kept waiting unreasonable time, and excuse offered was that there was no regular train out, instruction that unreasonable delay for regular train without reasonable explanaaction for delay must show not only that unreasonable time was consumed but that it was result of negligence.<sup>90</sup> Hence extraordinary pressure of business excuses.<sup>91</sup> Special promptness is required of perishable goods.<sup>92</sup> By express contract,<sup>93</sup> however, a carrier may obligate itself to carry within a specified time. In some states a negligent delay subjects the carrier to a penalty,<sup>94</sup> upon notice that prompt shipment is desired.<sup>95</sup>

tion would not be justifiable, held proper. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Gunter [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 152. Instruction held not to state that as matter of law that delay in feed pens longer than required by law was negligence. Id.

90. Ecton v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. 125 Mo. App. 223, 102 S. W. 575. Where court specifically charged that delay, to authorize recovery, must be result of negligence, instruction that each carrier was liable only for damages arising from "negligence or unreasonable delays" on its line, held not to impose liability for unreasonable delay without regard to negligence. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Gillett [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 712.

Delays held not negligent: Delay in removing body of man killed without negligence from under train, and in taking it back to station. Ecton v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 223, 102 S. W. 575. Failure to send express package by first train. Goldstein v. Adams Express Co., 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 190. Delay of shipment of stock for rest, food, and water, in compliance with Rev. St. U. S. § 4386 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2995). Ecton v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 223, 102 S. W. 575. Delay caused by right of way of mail trains and switching out of cars. St. Louis Merchants Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. Tassey, 122 Ill. App. 339.

Held negligent: Evidence that initial carrier transported freight in customary time of nine hours, that connecting carrier consumed sixty-six hours, though regular time was only twenty-eight to thirty hours, and that terminal carrier transported in usual time of fourteen hours, held to authorize finding of negligence on part of connecting carrier, although there was evidence that four or five days was reasonable time for shipment. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. White [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 673.

91. Excessive crop. Shipper knowing of the carrier's inability to transport with usual dispatch. Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Blum [Miss.] 42 So. 282.

92. Carrier held liable where the cars if forwarded in the usual way would have reached destination about twenty-four hours sooner than they did, and they might have been forwarded still more rapidly if attached to fast train. Frey v. New York, etc., R. Co., 114 App. Div. 747, 100 N. Y. S. 225.

93. Conversations between shipper and defendant's general superintendent and the train dispatcher, held to constitute an express contract to carry in time for particular steamer. Frey v. New York, etc., R. Co., 114 App. Div. 747, 100 N. Y. S. 225. Such contract held not merged in shipping receipt containing printed conditions on its back that carrier would not be bound to carry in time for particular steamer, where the words "for export . . . per S. S. L., sailing Dec. 13," was written on its face. Id.

94. Revisal 1905, § 2632, providing penalty for failure to transport within reasonable time, and prescribing what time shall be prima facie reasonable, held valid exercise of police powers. Stone & Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 56 S. E. 932. Under South Carolina statute imposing penalty for failure to transport within time therein specified Sunday is excluded in computing hours. Sallen v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. [S. C.] 56 S. E. 782. Carrier issuing bill of lading marked "prompt shipment required" before receiving goods from connecting carrier, and with full knowledge of facts, is liable for penalty for delay occurring on such line. Id. Liability for unreasonable delay under Nebraska constitution and laws is the same whether contract is oral or written. Nelson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 110 N. W. 741.

95. Act 1904 (24 Stat. p. 671) does not require shipper to have "prompt shipment required" inserted in bill of lading, but actual notice is sufficient. Jamison v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 57 S. E. 768.

96. See 7 C. L. 538.

97. Must manifest purpose to reduce liability by some unequivocal act. Cohen v. Missouri, etc., R. Co. [Mo. App.] 102 S. W. 1029. Where carrier contracted to deliver cars on its "hold" track to plaintiff's private track through connecting carriers, held to sustain relation of common carrier while holding cars for acceptance of connecting line. Id. As to what constitutes delivery. see ante, § 3.

2. Fentiman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 500, 98 S. W. 939. Act of God which will relieve carrier is such inevitable accident as cannot be prevented by human foresight, and arises from natural causes. Carpenter v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Del.] 64 A. 252. Unusual flood constitutes act of God, though similar one occurred sixty years before. Fentiman transportation,<sup>4</sup> or the negligence of the shipper.<sup>5</sup> An act of God, however, is no defense if the carrier's negligence concurs therewith,<sup>6</sup> as a proximate cause.<sup>7</sup> As against the shipper, a carrier cannot shift its liability by contract with a third person,<sup>8</sup> though, if the shipper contracts with another for special service, the carrier is not liable for a default therein.<sup>9</sup> Liability is governed by laws of the place where the loss or injury occurs.<sup>10</sup> A station agent has no implied authority to bind his principal for a liability which in fact does not exist.<sup>11</sup>

§ 9. Delivery by carrier and storage at destination.<sup>12</sup>—In a few states a carrier's liability as such ceases when the goods have arrived at their destination and are ready for delivery,<sup>13</sup> or have been placed in a warehouse,<sup>14</sup> but most states give the consignee a reasonable time to remove the same,<sup>15</sup> while others continue the liability until notice has been given<sup>16</sup> and a reasonable time thereafter.<sup>17</sup> Carrier's

3. Carpenter v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Del.] 64 A. 252. Instruction held to state the correct rule of law as to liability for natural deterioration of fruit en route, although it was inaccurately designated as an act of God. Fockens v. U. S. Exp. Co., 99 Minn. 404, 109 N. W. 834. Instruction on measure of damages, held to make carrier liable for natural depreciation due to long shipment without regard to negligence. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Instruction held to ignore negligence of shipper's agent in marking package. Southern Exp. Co. v. Hill [Ark.] 98 S. W. 371. Negligence of shipper in loading relieves carrier, though latter has knowledge of fact. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Drought & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1011. The fact that consignor shipped apples in bulk in box freight car from New York to Minneapolis during November, held not to constitute contributory negligence. Calender-Vanderhoof Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 99 Minn. 295, 109 N. W. 402. One shipping stock to particular place does not assume risk of exposure to cholera in infected zone where he knew it existed, where there was no necessity for diverting car into such zone. Council v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 123 Mo. App. 432, 100 S. W. 57.

6. Southern R. Co. v. Smith [Ky.] 102 S. W. 232; Gratiot St. Warehouse Co. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 124 Mo. App. 545, 102 S. W. 11; Fentiman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 500, 98 S. W. 939. Negligence in exposing to flood after warnings of weather department, held for jury. Fentiman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 500, 98 S. W. 939. Evidence of record of previous floods, and of warnings of weather bureau, held to sustain finding of negligence in depositing goods in yard in view of approaching flood. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Madden, Sykes & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1193.

Negligence of carrier in not promptly forwarding car, and in voluntarily opening embankment before car was removed, whereby car was inundated, held for jury. Gratiot St. Warehouse Co. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 124 Mo. App. 545, 102 S. W. 11.

7. Negligent delay in moving goods does not render carrier liable for their destruction by an act of God after reaching destination. Rodgers v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. W. 11; Fentiman v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Kan.] 88 P. 885. Contra. Alabama Great So. R. Co. v. Elliott [Ala.] 43 So. 378.

8. Contracted with refrigerator company to ice cars. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Renfro [Ark.] 100 S. W. 889.

9. Carrier is not liable for failure to ice where shipper knew that contract for icing was with refrigerator company, though it issued bill of lading, and its agent received money for icing. McConnell Bros. v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 56 S. E. 559.

10. Liability for loss of goods shipped from New York to Kentucky, which loss occurred in Kentucky, is governed by law of latter state, though contract was made in New York. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Hanford, 30 Ky. L. R. 1105, 100 S. W. 251.

11. Fact that he persuaded consignee to pay freight, accept damaged goods, and present claim, does not render company liable if it was not originally liable. Southern R. Co. v. Gardner, 127 Ga. 320, 56 S. E. 454.

12. See 7 C. L. 539.

13. Though consignee has received no notice, and has had no opportunity to remove same. Hicks v. Wabash R. Co., 131 Iowa, 295, 108 N. W. 534.

14. Kight v. Wrightsville & T. R. Co., 127 Ga. 204, 56 S. E. 363.

15. United Fruit Co. v. New York & Baltimore Transp. Co., 104 Md. 567, 65 A. 415; Brunson v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [S. C.] 56 S. E. 538; Murphy v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 57 S. E. 664. Reasonable time is such as will enable one residing in vicinity, and who is informed of probable time of arrival, and of course of carrier's business, to inspect and remove goods during business hours. United Fruit Co. v. New York & Baltimore Transp. Co., 104 Md. 567, 65 A. 415. Where goods are placed in warehouse ready for delivery on Oct. 6th, and are not removed on Oct. 13th, liability is that of warehouseman. Murphy v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 57 S. E. 664.

16. In absence of custom, notice of arrival of goods need not be given. Ross v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 290, 95 S. W. 977. Carrier need not give notice where package is not addressed to consignee's usual shipping place. American Standard Jewelry Co. v. Witherington [Ark.] 98 S. W. 695. Where goods are sent by express to place where delivery is not made, prompt notice must be given. Id.

17. United Fruit Co. v. New York & Baltimore Transp. Co., 104 Md. 567, 65 A. 415.

19. Kight v. Wrightsville & F. R. Co., 127 Ga. 204, 56 S. E. 363; United Fruit Co. v. New York & Baltimore Transp. Co., 104 Md. 567, 65 A. 415. Especially if under contract that they are at consignee's risk. United Fruit Co. v. New York & Baltimore Transp. Co., 104 Md. 567, 65 A. 415.

20. Instruction omitting delivery within reasonable time, properly refused. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Thompson [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 684. Fact that delivery was delayed because of error of consignor in shipping C. O. D. is no defense where carrier undertook to correct such error and delay was caused by negligence of carrier's agent at receiving point in forwarding release. Southern Exp. Co. v. Briggs [Ga. App.] 57 S. E. 1066.

21. Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding of negligence in requiring horse to be unloaded at depot platform. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Prater [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 739.

22. Where it is customary to deliver cattle through stockyards, carrier owes duty to so deliver. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Coggin [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 1052. Evidence held to authorize instruction that it was duty of defendant to carry to certain point, and there deliver to a connecting carrier. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Felker [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 439. In an action for delay in delivering cattle at stockyards in time for particular market, instruction predicated plaintiff's recovery upon delay in delivering at "Clairmont," where delivery at stockyards is not made until cattle are placed "at the pens," is properly refused. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Whitehill, 104 Md. 295, 64 A. 1033.

23. Failure to deliver part of shipment necessary to render whole of value is failure to deliver whole, as failure to deliver shafting of steam engine consigned with engine. McKerall & Murchison v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [S. C.] 56 S. E. 965. Fact that consignee left country without giving directions as to delivery does not excuse nondelivery where no attempt by notice through mail or otherwise was made to effect delivery. Broadwood v. Southern Exp. Co.

[Ala.] 41 So. 769. Revisal 1905, § 2632, imposing penalty for failure to "transport" within reasonable time, does not include failure to deliver. Alexandre v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 56 S. E. 697.

24. Receipt held for jury where lost money must have been extracted before sealing of package and evidence is conflicting as to whether sealing was in plaintiff's presence and immediately upon delivery. Goldstein v. Adams Exp. Co., 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 190.

25. Where consignor and consignee with assent of purchaser rescind sale of goods before delivery, carrier has no right to deliver thereafter to vendee. Norris v. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 101 S. W. 159. Custom of delivering upon production of shipping receipt is no justification for wrongful delivery where custom was unknown to shipper. Adrian Knitting Co. v. Wabash R. Co., 145 Mich. 323, 13 Det. Leg. N. 550, 108 N. W. 706. Where offer of purchase is accepted by delivery of goods to carrier, latter may deliver to purchaser, though seller thereafter changes consignee. Star Union Line v. Boston Medical Inst., 126 Ill. App. 106. In action to recover amount of sight draft on ground of wrongful delivery to consignee without payment carrier may show that goods were so inferior to contract quality that in fact there was no balance due. Stearns v. Grand Trunk R. [Mich.] 14 Det. Leg. N. 108, 111 N. W. 769.

26. Wrongful delivery without payment of draft attached to bill of lading, held waived by shipper's accepting part payment and check of consignee. Callaway v. Southern R. Co., 126 Ga. 192, 55 S. E. 22.

27. No fraud, imposition, or mistake will excuse delivery to wrong party. Atlantic & B. R. Co. v. Spires, 1 Ga. App. 22, 57 S. E. 973. Fact that such person was director of consignee corporation and had possession of unindorsed bill of lading, held not to relieve carrier. Cane Belt R. Co. v. Penden Iron & Steel Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 528. Carrier cannot justify delivery to unauthorized person on ground of his apparent authority to receive growing out of former partnership, where it was ignorant of such partnership. Adrian Knitting Co. v. Wabash R. Co., 145 Mich. 323, 13 Det. Leg. N. 550, 108 N. W. 706. Wrongfully delivered electrical apparatus consigned to city to superintendent of municipal electric plant, who had no authority to receive. Southern Exp. Co. v. B. R. Elec. Co., 126 Ga. 472, 55 S. E. 254.

28. Not liable for each refusal under Revisal 1905, § 2633. Harrill Bros. v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 57 S. E. 383.

29. No liability for refusal to stop shipment in transitu on order of one claiming

Consignee cannot refuse goods unreasonably delayed and recover for nondelivery.<sup>31</sup> Where carrier expressly undertakes to deliver goods in possession of another, it assumes risk of receiving them unharmed from the bailee.<sup>32</sup>

Liability for conversion.<sup>33</sup>—A wrongful refusal to deliver,<sup>34</sup> or a delivery to wrong person,<sup>35</sup> constitutes conversion, as does an absolute refusal to deliver where a qualified refusal is proper.<sup>36</sup> Though carrier may withhold delivery to investigate discrepancy between bill of lading and way bill as to charges, it can do so only for a reasonable time.<sup>37</sup> A sale for charges without giving owner an opportunity to pay the same,<sup>38</sup> or not in accordance with the statute,<sup>39</sup> renders the carrier liable. A statute regulating sale of rejected freight supersedes the common law in respect thereto.<sup>40</sup> Upon inability to locate consignee, carrier must hold goods for a reasonable time subject to consignor's order.<sup>41</sup>

title thereto, especially where opportunity to apply to courts is given. Switzler v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [Wash.] 58 P. 137.

30. Not liable for depreciation thereafter. Carpenter v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Del.] 64 A. 252.

31. Southern R. Co. v. Moody [Ala.] 44 So. 94; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Saulsberry [Ky.] 103 S. W. 254. A carrier who deposits goods with a warehouseman for safe keeping is still responsible therefor. Wrongful delivery. Hardie & Co. v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. 118 La. 253, 42 So. 793.

32. Accepted check upon which they were deliverable, and undertook to deliver at specific address. Zambakian v. Werner, 102 N. Y. S. 533.

33. See 7 C. L. 541.

34. Withholding of freight under unlawful claim for freight charges. Beasley v. Baltimore P. R. Co., 27 App. D. C. 595. And, where carrier refuses to deliver unless excessive charges demanded are paid, tender of amount actually due is not necessary. Gates v. Bekins [Wash.] 87 P. 505. Demand, tender of lawful charges, and refusal on part of carrier to deliver, makes prima facie case of conversion. Beasley v. Baltimore P. R. Co., 27 App. D. C. 595. Carriage according to contract after demand by true owner is no defense to action for conversion where contractee had no title or right to possession. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Haas, 127 Ga. 187, 56 S. E. 313.

35. Liable for full value of goods. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Goodwin, 1 Ga. App. 351, 57 S. E. 1070.

36. As refusal without production of bill of lading. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Britton [Ala.] 43 So. 108.

37. Beasley v. Baltimore P. R. Co., 27 App. D. C. 595. Six days held not so clearly reasonable as to authorize taking case from jury. Id.

38. Sale while carrier was trying to obtain leave of car service association to remit charges pursuant to understanding with shipper. Southern R. Co. v. Born Steel Range Co., 126 Ga. 527, 55 S. E. 173. Fact that official making sale misunderstood facts of case, held no defense. Id.

39. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Saulsberry

Held unreasonable: Arbitrarily fixing amount of recovery, and relieving carrier from all risks and losses. Pecoz, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 263, 98 S. W. 410. Limitation of liability to sum of $50 on $2,000 shipment where freight paid was $330. Murphy v. Wells-Fargo & Co. Exp., 99 Minn. 230, 108 N. W. 1070.

47. Common-law liability can be limited only by express or implied contract. Carpenter v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Del.] 64 A. 252.

48. Southern Exp. Co. v. Hill [Ark.] 98 S. W. 371. Contract disclosed no consideration. Meyers v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 288, 96 S. W. 737. Stipulation for computation of loss at value at time and place of shipment need not be supported by independent consideration. Gratiot St. Warehouse Co. v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 124 Mo. App. 545, 102 S. W. 11. Fact that goods are carried at lower of two rates filed under interstate commerce act does not show consideration where no rate was agreed upon, either verbally or in writing. Phoenix Powder Mfg. Co. v. Wabash R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 566, 97 S. W. 256. Where contract for interstate shipment expresses no consideration, carrier cannot show reduced rate unless it proves that such rate was scheduled, filed and posted, as required. Meyers v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 288, 96 S. W. 737. Option to ship under common-law liability and at higher rate need not be expressly offered. Arthur v. Texas & P. R. Co., 204 U. S. 505, 51 Law. Ed. 590. Recital in bill of lading that, in consideration of reduced rate, shipper agrees, etc., without statement of regular rate, is insufficient to show shipment at reduced rate. Farmers' Bk. v. St. Louis & H. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 1, 95 S. W. 286. Evidence held to show that no verbal contract of shipment was made, and hence limitation of liability in written contract was not without consideration for lack of reduced rates. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Civ. Rep. 107, 97 S. W. 836. Regular rate may be sufficient to support limitation where such rate is fixed in view of limited liability. Arthur v. Texas P. R. Co., 204 U. S. 505, 51 Law. Ed. 590.

49. Shipping order signed by shipper and accepted by carrier is binding contract as to limitations of liability therein. Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Chicago Elec. Vehicle Co., 124 Ill. App. 158.

50. Where limitation is contained in bill of lading, it must be expressed in such manner as to be understood by man of ordinary intelligence, or be explained to shipper. Carpenter v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [Del.] 64 A. 252.

51. Where shipper signs contract of shipment without reading same and without asking for time to do so, he is bound by limitations therein. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 107, 97 S. W. 836. Passage ticket for ocean voyage is a contract, and fact that purchaser did not notice limitation therein does not relieve him. Tewes v. North German Lloyd S. S. Co., 186 N. Y. 151, 78 N. E. 864. Testimony of plaintiff that he did not read receipt "at the time of shipment," held insufficient to sustain finding that he had no notice, where receipt came from book in his possession. Fried v. Wells-Fargo & Co., 51 Misc. 669, 100 N. Y. S. 1007.

52. Where agent of shipper reads bill of lading stamped "Valuation restricted to $5 per 100 pounds," and accepts same without objection, such limitation is binding though agent testifies that he did not understand same. Lansing v. New York Cert. etc., R. Co., 52 Misc. 334, 102 N. Y. S. 1692.

53. Must expressly agree thereto under Civ. Code 1895, § 2276. Southern Exp. Co. v. Briggs [Ga. App.] 57 S. E. 1066. Mere knowledge that rates are based upon value of goods does not render restriction of recovery to declared value binding. Hayes v. Adams Exp. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 65 A. 1044. Hence, where such knowledge is made determining issue, judgment for restricted value must be set aside. Id. Whether consignor assented to restrictions of liability in bill of lading is question of fact for jury. Wabash R. Co. v. Thomas, 222 Ill. 337, 78 N. E. 777. Retention of receipt limiting liability makes case of consent for jury, where he could have reclaimed goods and secured return of money. *Coggs-well v. While a connecting carrier cannot take advantage of a limitation made for the benefit of another,<sup>65</sup> the contract may by express provision be for the benefit of all.<sup>66</sup>

The validity of limitations upon substantive rights is determined by the laws of the state where executed,<sup>67</sup> but that of remedial provisions is dependent upon the laws of the state where the action is brought.<sup>68</sup> A contract though valid where made will not be enforced if against the public policy or statutory law of the state where suit is brought.<sup>69</sup>

27. Orem Fruit & Produce Co. v. Northern Cent. R. Co. [Md.] 66 A. 436. Where shipment is accepted for delivery beyond its line, initial carrier has burden of showing that delay in transportation occurred after delivery to succeeding connecting carrier. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Wilkinson, [Va.] 56 S. E. 808.

28. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Renfro [Ark.] 100 S. W. 889. Where goods are shipped under contract for continuous carriage, prima facie right of action exists against any carrier in whose custody goods are shown to have been in damaged condition. Rule applies to wrongful delay. Harper Furniture Co. v. Southern Exp. Co. [N. C.] 57 S. E. 458.

29. Calender-Vanderhoof Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 99 Minn. 295, 109 N. W. 402.

30. While burden is on plaintiff in action against initial carrier to show that damage occurred on its line, there is no presumption as to where the damage occurred. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Pearce [Ark.] 101 S. W. 760.

31. Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Chicago Elec. Vehicle Co., 124 Ill. App. 158. Where carrier other than the terminal is sued plaintiff must prove loss on its line.<sup>33</sup> This presumptive rule is applicable to a partial loss of an entire shipment.<sup>34</sup> In Mississippi the presumption is conclusive unless the terminal carrier furnishes upon demand<sup>35</sup> copies of all records of the shipment of each carrier. The rule requiring the terminal carrier to prove the extent of injury, as well as that the goods were received in damaged state is inapplicable where the goods are not open to inspection.<sup>36</sup> When the terminal carrier overcomes the presumption, it shifts to the next preceding carrier.<sup>37</sup> Carrier has the burden of establishing special defenses,<sup>38</sup> as that liability was that of a warehouseman,<sup>39</sup> delivery to true owner,<sup>40</sup> etc. Plaintiff must show compliance with all conditions precedent to maintaining the action,<sup>41</sup> and that a lost express package was properly addressed.<sup>42</sup> A shipper alleging co-operation creating a through line has burden of proving the same.<sup>43</sup> Courts will take judicial notice of railroad connections,<sup>44</sup> of unreasonableness of time consumed in transportation where it is notoriously long,<sup>45</sup> but not of the exact quantum of delay.<sup>46</sup> In an action for penalty for an unreasonable delay, plaintiff has the burden of showing that time was unreasonable.<sup>47</sup>

In the admission of evidence the ordinary rules respecting admissibility of vents of car are sealed open on delivery to initial carrier, they will be presumed to have remained so when delivered to each succeeding carrier. Cane Hill Cold Storage & Orchard Co. v. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 362, 95 S. W. 751.

35. Note asking delivering carrier to "kindly trace shortage" is not a demand for records, memoranda, etc., as to render carrier liable under Code 1896, § 4853. Threefoot Bros. & Co. v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. [Miss.] 43 So. 303.

36. Chinaware in box. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Green [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 1, 97 S. W. 531.

37. In action for damage to fruit for failure to keep air vents open, proof that they were open when delivered to terminal carrier meets burden cast-upon next preceding carrier by proof of terminal carrier that loss was not occasioned on its line. Cane Hill Cold Storage & Orchard Co. v. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 362, 95 S. W. 751. Where action is brought against three connecting carriers, instruction that if jury were unable to determine which, if either, of connecting carriers, referring to initial and succeeding carrier, last carrier handling cattle was liable therefor, was erroneous. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Bailey [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 843, 96 S. W. 1089. Where burden rests on connecting carriers to disprove negligence, and no evidence is introduced to show on what line damage occurred, judgment should be rendered against each carrier for full amount. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Greening, 30 Ky. L. R. 1180, 100 S. W. 825.

38. Where carrier asserts ownership as defense to suit in conversion of goods accepted as carrier, it has burden of showing that it accepted goods in good faith under mistake as to plaintiff's ownership, and that it is true owner. Valentine v. Long Island R. Co. [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 849. Where, in action for wrongful delivery, carrier claims bill of lading was procured by fraud, carrier must clearly establish such fact. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Spires, 1 Ga. App. 22, 57 S. E. 973.

48. Contract of shipment made by initial carrier for itself and as agent for connecting line, especially where acted upon by latter, is admissible against it. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Dodson [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 109, 97 S. W. 523. Where partnership of carriers is admitted, bill of lading issued by one is admissible against all. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Watkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 162. Where bill of lading is not declared on in petition, execution must be proven (Id.), though it may be made by circumstantial evidence (Id.). Carrier's receipt is not admissible until authenticated. Southern Exp. Co. v. Hill [Ark.] 98 S. W. 371. Receipt given to preceding carrier, held admissible, though signed in freight agent's name by unknown person, where it was received through regular course of business and was signed by person, who usually signed such receipts. Meyers v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 258, 96, S. W. 737.

49. In an action, for conversion, evidence that defendant's claim agent offered to sell to witness some goods addressed to plaintiff, and stated that they belonged to plaintiff, is not inadmissible, not being binding on defendant. Louisville & N. E. Co., v. Britton [Ala.] 43 So. 108.

50. Unauthorized statement of brakeman is inadmissible. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Frazar [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 982, 97 S. W. 225.

51. Evidence held admissible on particular issues: Rule to transport cattle as quickly as possible on issue of delay (St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Gunter [Tex. App.] 99 S. W. 152), as is time ordinarily required (Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Whitehill, 104 Md. 295, 64 A. 1032), and time required on previous trips. (St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Gunter [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 152). Evidence that later consignment reached destination first to rebut plea that carriage was made as quickly as unprecedented pressure of business would permit. Southern R. Co. v. Cofer [Ala.] 43 So. 102. In action for wrongful detention, delivery being withheld until carrier could investigate discrepancy between bill of lading and way bill as to charges, way bill and evidence of investigation are admissible to explain delay. Beasley v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 27 App. D. C. 595. Evidence of flood fifty-nine years before, and of tradition of another one hundred years before, on issue whether flood should have been anticipated. Aitchison, etc., R. Co. v. Madden [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1193. Evidence that defendant had wrongfully refused to deliver to plaintiff's agent as showing that former's liability had not been reduced to that of warehouseman by plaintiff's failure to call within reasonable time. Louisville & N. E. Co. v. Dunlap, [Ala.] 41 So. 826. Evidence that shipper did not read receipt is admissible upon question whether he consented to vary oral contract of shipment to accord with terms of receipt. Cogswell v. Weir, 101 N. Y. S. 188. In view of Code 1896, § 4224, providing that common carrier is not relieved from liability as carrier by reason of storage unless within twenty-four hours after arrival of goods notice is given, evidence as to when notice was given is admissible as tending to show that goods did not arrive until or at about that time. Southern R. Co. v. Cofer [Ala.] 43 So. 102. On issue of acquiescence in route selected, evidence that he had consented to make previous shipments over such route, and desired this shipment to be made as the others, and that he could only have been given local rates by other route, held admissible. Pecos River R. Co. v. Harrington [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 1050. Manufacturer agreed to furnish and set up monument for specific sum. Over his objection carrier rendered special service to purchasing association, thereby diverting part of funds which were to go to manufacturer. Held, in action for damages against carrier, evidence of financial irresponsibility of association was admissible. Harrison Granite Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 145 Mich. 712, 13 Det. Leg. N. 631, 108 N. W. 1081.

Inadmissible: In action for failure to supply cars upon demand, requisition for cars for another time and for other goods. Di Giorgio Importing & Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 104 Md. 693, 65 A. 425.

52. Copy of bill of lading kept for filing in carrier's office is secondary evidence. Walker v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 56 S. E. 952.

53. Statement by agent of carrier while tracing car that it had not reached certain place is admissible as res gestae, as is statement of agent made while attempting to adjust claim and while examining shipment to ascertain the damages. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Watkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 162.

54. Statement by plaintiff that he ordered cars through R. is not hearsay. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Timon [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 418. Statement in letter that carrier not party thereto had taken up claim for damages is hearsay. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Mayes [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 818, 97 S. W. 318.

55. Inadmissible: That particular run was made as quickly as possible under the circumstances. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Gunter [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 152. Answer to question why stock remained in pens for the length of time they did that witness did not know, but presumed, etc. Dupree v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 809, 96 S. W. 647.

Not objectionable as conclusions: Testimony that certain person was in charge of train. Council v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 123 Mo. App. 432, 100 S. W. 57. One in position to observe physical surroundings may testify that car could have been moved to place of delivery without being switched into certain stockyards. Id.

56. One having special knowledge of rates under similar conditions may testify as to reasonableness of a rate though he does not know of financial condition of road or cost of transportation thereon. Halliday Milling Co. v. Louisiana, etc., R. Co., 80 Ark. 536, 98 S. W. 374. Testimony of rate clerk of commission as to reasonableness of rate is not rendered inadmissible because based in part upon report of former railroad auditor containing alleged errors. Id.

evidence to contradict<sup>57</sup> or explain<sup>58</sup> written instruments, and the like, apply. On reasonableness of rate on particular division, evidence of through rate, and division thereof, is admissible.<sup>59</sup> The evidence<sup>60</sup> and proof must correspond to the allegations,<sup>61</sup> though a variance on matters of inducement may be disregarded.<sup>62</sup> Recovery must be had on the negligence alleged.<sup>63</sup> Custom in respect to the negligence charged is admissible to show performance on particular occasion.<sup>64</sup>

57. Where partial nondelivery is attempted to be shown by fact that seals placed on package remained unbroken, plaintiff may testify that it was not sealed in his presence upon delivery, though he signed statement to that effect. Goldstein v. Adams Exp. Co., 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 190. Receipt of consignee's agent may be contradicted by parol. Strawn v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 135, 96 S. W. 488. Evidence that all cases received of carrier were delivered to consignee, and that one case was not received by consignee, held to overcome receipt given to carrier for all of goods. Id.

58. Bills of lading for cotton reading "consignee and destination: Name, G. & K., Place, West Point, Va., County, care of Press, State, Selma, Ala.," held so ambiguous as to place of delivery as to render evidence of custom to show sense in which parties intended it to be understood admissible. Southern R. Co. v. Cofer [Ala.] 43 So. 102.

59. Halliday Mill. Co. v. Louisiana, etc., R. Co., 80 Ark. 536, 98 S. W. 374.

60. Where no issue is made as to injury on another line, original petition alleging that stock was so injured is inadmissible. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Garrett [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 53. Where plaintiff bases his right to recover on negligence in delaying train at certain points, refusal to allow shipment on faster trains, and objection that that schedule was unreasonably slow, are not within issues. Ecton v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 223, 102 S. W. 575.

61. Fatal variance: Between allegation of failure to deliver and proof of delay in delivery. Southern R. Co. v. Moody [Ala.] 44 So. 94. Allegation of common-law carriage and proof of shipment under special contract. Leh v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 396. Between allegation that cars were ordered through agent at station at which they were to be furnished and proof that they were ordered through agent at another station, though company undertook to furnish them and did so tardily. Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Cox [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1122. Between allegation of actual knowledge of infected condition of stock pens and proof of negligence in failing to know thereof. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Beal [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 985, 97 S. W. 329. Where negligence charged is for permitting plaintiff to put stock in infected pens after defendant had received notice of quarantine, recovery cannot be had on duty to provide suitable shipping and feeding pens. Id.

Where plaintiff pleads an oral contract of shipment, and defendant answers by alleging shipment under a written one, recovery may be had under written one. Cornelius v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 74 Kan. 599 87 P. 751.

To warrant finding that loss occurred on initial line. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Stevens, 29 Ky. L. R. 1079, 96 S. W. 888. To show that delay was proximate cause of deterioration in value of logs for manufacture of hoops. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wynne Hoop & Cooperage Co. [Ark.] 99 S. W. 375. Positive and uncontradicted testimony of unimpeached loading clerk of delivery to connecting carrier, held to show delivery. Glazier v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 53 Misc. 290, 103 N. Y. S. 112. Evidence that all goods received were packed into defendant's wagon and carefully covered and were delivered at plaintiff's residence, held to sustain finding that goods sued for were delivered as against evidence that such goods could not be found by plaintiff next day. Freeman v. Winkler, 103 N. Y. S. 215. Evidence that car of fruit was received upon delivery siding in good condition, and that it was found moved about two lengths next morning and fruit crushed and shoved into mass, held to sustain finding that other cars had been negligently forced against it. Anderson v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 31 Pa. Super. Ct. 302. Where shipment of stock required forty-eight hours longer than usual, and was carried fifty hours without unloading for food or water, contrary to § 4386, U. S. St. (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2995), and delivered in weakened and injured condition, negligence of carrier was not rebutted by testimony that there were no unreasonable delays, and that stock was in good condition at various points, and on arrival did not bear evidence of greater hardships than usual to such trips. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Greening, 30 Ky. L. R. 1180, 100 S. W. 825. Manufacturer agreed to furnish and set up monument for specific sum. Evidence that carrier rendered unnecessary special service for purchasing association over his objection, thereby diverting part of such sum, with full knowledge of facts, held to support count for damages for wrongful interference with manufacturer's rights. Harrison Granite Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 145 Mich. 712, 13 Det. Leg. N. 631, 108 N. W. 1081. And it is no defense that defendant carried and delivered in good order. Id.

Evidence held insufficient to show that horse was dead when received by terminal carrier, and to overcome presumption against carrier. Walker v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 56 S. E. 952. To identify goods. Callaway v. Southern R. Co., 126 Ga. 195, 55 S. E. 23. To show that stock died through negligence of carrier. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Warfield, 30

Ky. L. R. 352, 98 S. W. 313. Proof that when box was unpacked week after delivery goods were missing, it being accessible to strangers in meantime, held insufficient to show nondelivery as against positive testimony that box was in good condition when delivered, and receipt to that effect. Creager v. McGowan, 104 N. Y. S. 416.

Evidence held to make question for jury whether fire was caused by lighting. Southern R. Co. v. Smith [Ky.] 102 S. W. 232. 82. Carrier receiving shipment from connecting carrier has lien only for contract price as set forth in bill of lading, and if it claims lien for larger amount it does so at own risk. Beasley v. Baltimore & P. R. Co., 27 App. D. C. 595.

83. Letter from plaintiff in replevin to third person directing him to ship goods by defendant sustains special plea of right to possession under lien for carriage. Kebabian v. Adams Exp. Co. [R. I.] 66 A. 201.

84. Special contract will not be construed to waive lien for charges unless such intent clearly appears. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hinsdell [Kan.] 90 P. 800. Recitals that all prior agreements are merged therein, and that it contained all terms agreements, and provisions in any manner relating to the transportation, held not to waive lien. Id.

85. Refusal to deliver without payment of freight constitutes conversion. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Peru-Van Zandt Imp. Co., 73 Kan. 295, 85 P. 408, 87 P. 80.

86. Wallace v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 216 Pa. 411, 65 A. 665.

87. Though bill of lading does not provide that demurrage shall be paid by consignee or his assignee, yet assignee by delivering bill to railway company and accepting goods becomes bound by implied promise to pay all specified charges. Cincinnati & Columbus Trac. Co. v. Norfolk & Western Ry. Co., 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 134. In action for demurrage based upon rule of carrier, affidavit of defense denying existence of rule is sufficient. Pennsylvania Co. v. Marquis Limestone & Clay Co., 31 Pa. Super. Ct. 198.

88. Rule requiring shipper to pay demurrage charges whether just or unjust, and to submit claim for return to manager of car service association, is not reasonable. Larabee Flour Mills Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 74 Kan. 808, 88 P. 72. Refusal to pay demurrage is not ground for discontinuing switching where delay was occasioned as much by carrier's fault as shipper's. Id.

[Ark.] 98 S. W. 374. Filing and publishing rate under interstate commerce act raises no presumption that it is reasonable. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 51 Law. Ed. 441.

90. Carrier is not entitled to switching charges paid to connecting carrier where charge exceeds prescribed rate on shipment. Timpson, etc., R. Co. v. Sanford [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 432.

91. Extra charges of two cents for hay unloaded into warehouse in East St. Louis and reloaded for shipment to southeastern points, held excessive by one cent. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. Southern R. Co., 149 F. 609. Finding by interstate commerce commission that charge of one cent per one hundred pounds for privilege of reconsignment at East St. Louis was reasonable is prima facie evidence of such fact. Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 728. In proceeding in which interstate commerce commission's findings are prima facie evidence as to facts found, it is not error to admit in evidence whole report including opinion where case is being tried before court. Id.

92. Agreed rate for interstate shipment less than schedule rate is void and unenforceable, and shipper paying schedule rate cannot recover difference. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Holmes, 18 Okl. 92, 90 P. 22.

93. In action for rebate of $3 per car on material furnished for shipment under special contract, evidence held insufficient to establish contract. Dimeling & Co. v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 215 Pa. 480, 64 A. 677.

94. Common-law remedies for recovery of excessive freight charges are not affected by remedy afforded by interstate commerce act. Halliday Mill Co. v. Louisiana & N. W. R. Co. [Ark.] 98 S. W. 374. Complaint in language of Kirby's Dig. §§ 6621, 6730, for recovery of overcharges, held to state common-law cause of action. Id.

95. Where consignor agreed upon reduced rate, which was to be paid by consignee and deducted from purchase price, and consignee pays full rate in ignorance of reduced rate, excess may be recovered. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Crossley & Co. [Ga.] 57 S. E. 97.

PART III. CARRIAGE OF LIVE STOCK.

and innocently made through mistake of facts, it is no defense to action for penalty for overcharges on local shipments that carrier transported under same contract interstate shipments at much lower rate than it could have charged. Timpson, etc., R. Co. v. Sanford [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 432. In prosecution for extortion in overcharging under Texas statute, that overcharge was unintentional is matter for defendant to plead and prove. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Rutherford [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 179, 96 S. W. 73.

98. Demand and collection of demurrage in addition to freight before giving shipper free use of car for forty-eight hours is extortion under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4573. St. Louis, S. W. R. Co. v. Rutherford [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 179, 96 S. W. 73.

99. Penalty held properly awarded where carrier demanded and received over protest rate in excess of prescribed amount and same was not innocently, or unintentionally collected. Timpson, etc., R. Co. v. Sanford [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 432. Proof that charge was greater than published charge between same points in opposite direction does not as matter of law prove overcharge within Revisal 1905, §§ 2642-2644, rendering company liable for penalty for charging more than printed tariff. Scull & Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. [N. C.] 56 S. E. 876.

1. Act 1903 (26 Stat. p. 81) entitled "Act to regulate the manner in which carriers . . . shall adjust freight rates, and claims for loss or damage of freight," is not unconstitutional as relating to two subjects. Aycock-Little Co. v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 57 S. E. 27. Revisal 1905, § 2633, providing that carriers shall settle freight charges according to rate specified in bill of lading, provided it shall not be in excess of rate filed with interstate commerce commission or corporation commission, and shall inform consignee on request of rate due, etc., held applicable where no rate has been filed. Harrill Bros. v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 57 S. E. 383.

6. Cleve v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 108 N. W. 982. Carriers of live stock held not insurers, but owe greater degree of care than mere bailees. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Greening, 30 Ky. L. R. 1180, 100 S. W. 825. Where carrier proves that mule dying en route bore no marks of injury, and that there was no delay in transportation, there being no evidence as to cause of death, defendant is entitled to peremptory instruction. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Davis [Miss.] 43 So. 674.

Delivery through stockyards company does not relieve from responsibility. Id. Liable for maintaining pens inadequate in size, though no notice in respect thereto has been served upon it. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Slator [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 156. Rev. St. 1895, art. 4519, if it applies to live stock, does not require carrier to provide covered pens for their reception. Instruction held erroneous as warranting jury so to believe. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Cage Cattle Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 52, 95 S. W. 705. Permitting pens to be in muddy condition does not show negligence as matter of law. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Glanton [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 166. Evidence that posts were rotten, and that one whole side of pen fell down, held to show actionable negligence. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Beets [Kan.] 89 P. 683. Negligence in keeping pens in such condition as to render it necessary to shut hogs in loading chute, held for jury. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Keys, 6 Ind. T. 396, 98 S. W. 138.

9. Must keep in reasonably safe condition. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Allen [Kan.] 88 P. 966. Carrier is liable for injury to caretaker of stock from defective walk about feed pens only when it has notice of defect or is charged with notice. Id. Special finding that carrier did not have actual notice is not inconsistent with general verdict for plaintiff where there was evidence of facts charging notice. Id.

10. Though the duty of caring for and watering devolves upon carrier, caretaker is not a trespasser in following and inspecting the cattle. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Allen [Kan.] 88 P. 966.

Rest, feeding, and watering<sup>18</sup> are usually required,<sup>19</sup> and to that end suitable pens must be maintained<sup>20</sup> and due opportunity given.<sup>21</sup> A contract requiring a shipper to feed and water at his own expense implies that an opportunity so to do will be given.<sup>22</sup>

§ 19. Limitation of liability.<sup>25</sup>

18. See 7 C. L. 555.

19. Fact that ninety-three fat beef cattle are loaded in five cars sufficiently shows that they had not space and opportunity to rest so as to excuse carrier from unloading as required by Rev. St. U. 27. Evidence that cattle of other shippers on same train were killed introduced to show rough handling. Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Bennett [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1115.

28. Sufficient if proof excludes idea that death was due to other causes than inherent vices, without proof of specific cause. Thomas v. Wells-Fargo Exp. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 986, 95 S. W. 723. Evidence held to show that dog died from heat and inherent vices. Id.

29. No presumption of negligence arises, and shipper has burden of showing same. Cleve v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 108 N. W. 982.

30. Hence, where there is no evidence that injuries were so caused, instructions on liability may omit such exception. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Kilberry [Ark.] 102 S. W. 894.

PART IV. CARRIAGE OF PASSENGERS.

§ 22. Who are passengers.<sup>38</sup>—The relation is said to be based upon contract expressed or implied,<sup>39</sup> but the invalidity thereof is immaterial if it is being recognized.<sup>40</sup> Except in those cases where fare is not required,<sup>41</sup> the party must have paid or intend to pay,<sup>42</sup> and have the means of so doing.<sup>43</sup> One boarding in the bona fide belief that he possesses a valid ticket temporarily becomes a passenger.<sup>44</sup> and in some states continues as such if the invalidity is due to carriers' default.<sup>45</sup> One attempting to board without an invitation, expressed or implied,<sup>46</sup> or who is

32. In action for loss due to inadequacy of pens, evidence that after loss witness told defendant's superintendent of insufficiency of pens, and superintendent told him to get up plans for additions and he would consider them, is inadmissible, since it did not show notice at time of loss, nor was it an admission of inadequacy. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Slaton [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 156.

33. Conversation between defendant's agent and plaintiff year before shipment about building new pens is inadmissible to show inadequacy of pens, being too remote. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Cage Cattle Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 52, 95 S. W. 705.

34. Held admissible: Evidence that cattle of other shippers on same train were killed, as showing rough handling. Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Bennett [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1115. Testimony of caretaker that he did not authorize delivery at stockyards, as showing delivery was made there on carrier's authority. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Felker [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 439. Though only negligence charged is delay, evidence that stock was unloaded in pens which were in such condition that they could not be fed, as explaining loss of weight. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Crowder [Ark.] 103 S. W. 172. Where in action for delay, it appears that stock was unloaded into pens so maintained that they could not be fed while awaiting through train, notice of intended shipment may be shown, as bearing on negligence in failing to arrange schedule so as to avoid such detention. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Crowder [Ark.] 103 S. W. 172.

Held irrelevant: Testimony that calves weighing from 340 to 350 pounds, transported as calves involved were, would decrease certain amount in weight, where calves shipped weighed from 303 to 306 pounds. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Leggett [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 176. Where there is no evidence that cattle did not reach destination in time to get a "fill," it is error to permit testimony that cow of certain weight will take fill of twenty-five pounds. Id.

35. Where, in action for delay due to failure of branch train to connect with through train, it appeared that stock was unloaded into pens so maintained that they could not be fed, statements of agents at other stations that company had issued orders to avoid such delay are inadmissible. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Crowder [Ark.] 103 S. W. 172.

36. Inadmissible to prove inadequacy of pens. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Slaton [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 156.

37. See 7 C. L. 557. See, also, Damages, 7 C. L. 1029.

38. See 7 C. L. 557.

39. Proof that plaintiff purchased ticket before boarding train, or that he had money to pay fare and did pay, establishes relation without proof of express contract. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Fink [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 204.

40. Policeman being carried free under a void ordinance. Bradburn v. Whatcom County R. & Light Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 1020.

41. Where street car company offered free use of three of its cars, under control of its employes, to delegates of convention and they were accepted, delegates were passengers. Indianapolis Trac. & T. Co. v. Klentschy, 167 Ind. 598, 79, N. E. 908. Child riding with knowledge of conductor and without objection as too young to require payment of fare is passenger. Southern R. Co. v. Lee, 30 Ky. L. R. 1360, 101 S. W. 307.

42. Gates v. Quincy, etc., R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 334, 102 S. W. 50.

43. Evidence of offer to borrow of a fellow passenger upon rejection of ticket, held to make question of tender for jury. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Bunn [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 721, 95 S. W. 640. Where one voluntarily left train upon rejection of his ticket, but asked to be allowed to re-enter, stating that he could get fare on train a refusal renders company liable. Id. Instruction in respect thereto, held correct. Id.

44. Relation continues until he is notified of its invalidity and refuses to pay fare. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Bunn [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 721, 95 S. W. 640. Where pass issued to prospective employee was at first accepted, but subsequently canceled because of lack of authority of party issuing, holder was passenger at time of cancellation. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Hill [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 227.

45. Transfer erroneously punched. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co. v. Goerner, 80 Ark. 158, 95 S. W. 1007.

46. Attempting to board moving car riding solely by the consent of one not authorized to give the same<sup>47</sup> or in violation of a permanent and reasonable prohibition because of prior misconduct,<sup>48</sup> is not a passenger. While one must be riding with a legitimate purpose,<sup>49</sup> the mere fact that one of the purposes is improper does not destroy the relation.<sup>50</sup> Statutes in some states fix the relation.<sup>51</sup> Postal clerks,<sup>52</sup> and, generally, employes riding under the direction of the carrier,<sup>53</sup> especially where transportation is given as compensation,<sup>54</sup> and express messengers,<sup>55</sup> are held passengers, but not Pullman car conductors.<sup>56</sup>

47. Boy boarding street car with consent of gripman. Drogmund v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 98 S. W. 1091.

48. On passenger elevator. Ferguson v. Truax [Wis.] 112 N. W. 513. And such prohibition need not be repeated each time plaintiff came about the building. Id. Instruction failing to submit question whether misconduct was such as to authorize a permanent prohibition, held erroneous. Id.

49. Boy riding on elevator to office of tenant to see if he was wanted for errand is passenger. Ferguson v. Truax [Wis.] 110 N. W. 395. Evidence held to sustain finding that he was so riding, though contrary to statements in deposition taken nearly year before. Id.

50. Where one takes car for purpose of transportation and pays fare, fact that one purpose was to continue controversy with conductor does not render him less a passenger. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co. v. Dobbins, 78 Ark. 553, 95 S. W. 788. Defendant held not prejudiced by modification of instruction that if plaintiff enter car for purpose of continuing controversy with conductor he was not a passenger, by stating that if he went on car with expectation of being put off he was not a passenger. Id.

51. One going through the station grounds and yards to take freight caboose under special permit is not a passenger "being transported over the company's road," within Cobbey's Ann. St. 1903, § 10,039, and the company owes only reasonable care. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Mann [Neb.] 111 N. W. 379. One accompanying stock under contract is not passenger being transported, within Cobbey's Ann. St. 1903, § 10,039, and hence common law and not statutory, rule of liability applies. Riley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 111 N. W. 847.

Pa. Act of April 4, 1868, making the liability of railroad to mail clerk same as that to employe, held not infringement of constitutional power of congress over postal system. Martin v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 203 U. S. 284, 51 Law. Ed. 184.

53. Held a passenger: Riding on ticket furnished by foreman according to general custom, which ticket was good on any car. Indianapolis Trac. & T. Co. v. Romans [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 1068. Petition alleging such facts, held not inconsistent with allegation that decedent was a passenger. Id. Riding under contract between his employer and defendant, whereby latter was to carry servants. Gray v. Columbia, etc., R. Co. [Or.] 88 P. 297.

Held not passengers: Workmen being transported home in special car for mutual benefit. Kilduff v. Boston Elev. R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 191. Toolhouse foreman, who also assisted in clearing away wrecks, returning from such work in caboose of freight train under direction of foreman. St. Clair v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 519, 99 S. W. 775.

The relation ceases or is interrupted<sup>70</sup> when the destination is reached and the passenger has had a reasonable time to leave the train<sup>71</sup> and to quit the premises.<sup>72</sup> One refusing to pay fare for a child in his charge,<sup>73</sup> or failing to pay his own fare within a reasonable time after demand,<sup>74</sup> ceases to be a passenger. A passenger does not lose his rights by riding in a dangerous place with the consent of the carrier,<sup>75</sup> nor does one on a freight train by temporarily leaving the same while switching to talk with a friend.<sup>76</sup>

64. One working passage, held not a passenger. Vassor v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 142 N. C. 68, 54 S. E. 849.

65. Not employee. Wilkes v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 216 Pa. 355, 65 A. 787.

66. See 7 C. L. 558.

67. Assent may be by words or conduct. Alabama City, etc., R. Co. v. Bates [Ala.] 43 So. 98. Instruction "a passenger is one who is boarding a car or who is attempting to board a car, or at the station of a company operating a car, for the purpose of being carried on the cars," held erroneous, as is statement "he becomes a passenger when, with intention of boarding a train, he attempts to board for purpose of riding." Alabama City, etc., R. Co. v. Bates [Ala.] 43 So. 98.

82. By habitually stopping. Albin v. Gulf, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 270, 95 S. W. 589.

83. Sale of ticket to particular destination creates contract to stop at such place. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Glass [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 447. And it is no defense for failure to do so that conductor had not reached passenger in collection of tickets and hence did not know of his desire to alight. Id. Fact that auditor collected fare to station at which train did not stop, did not create contract duty to stop there where opportunity was given to alight at station one mile before reaching such point, especially where auditor did not know that it was not stopping place but plaintiff did. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Townsend [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 455.

84. Accepted ticket knowing of destination. Pickens v. Georgia R. & Banking Co., 126 Ga. 517, 55 S. E. 171.

85. See 7 C. L. 561.

86. Where passenger, who has voluntarily left car before paying fare, is refused readmission but is directed to take another out regard to the good faith of its servants,<sup>87</sup> or that they exceeded their authority in so doing.<sup>88</sup> A passenger failing to tender a valid ticket for himself,<sup>89</sup> or one in his charge,<sup>90</sup> and refusing to pay fare, may be ejected,<sup>91</sup> and when he boards the train without intending to pay,<sup>92</sup> or thereafter willfully refuses so to do,<sup>93</sup> a tender after expulsion has commenced does not entitle him to remain. Tender of fare by third person with passenger's assent is equivalent to tender by passenger.<sup>94</sup> A passenger is entitled to a reasonable time within which to produce a ticket or pay fare before expulsion.<sup>95</sup> He may also be ejected for noncompliance with reasonable rules<sup>96</sup> unless waived,<sup>97</sup> or for indulging in abusive and obscene language<sup>98</sup> or wrongful conduct.<sup>99</sup> The ejection, however, must be accomplished in a proper manner<sup>1</sup> and without unnecessary force;<sup>2</sup> but whether rightful or wrongful, the passenger has no right to offer resistance,<sup>3</sup> unless about to be ejected in a dangerous manner,<sup>4</sup> and cannot recover for injuries received in so doing.<sup>5</sup> which is waiting, there is no ejection. Dobbins v. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co., 79 Ark. 85, 95 S. W. 794. Evidence held to authorize finding that plaintiff was expelled and did not voluntarily leave train. Lindsay v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Idaho] 90 P. 984.

87. Refused genuine money, believing it to be counterfeit. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. McClevey, 126 Ill. App. 21.

88. Held liable for ejection by brakeman because of the duty to protect. Lindsay v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Idaho] 90 P. 984. It is within scope of employment of conductor of trolley car to control and manage car and to eject passenger when necessary to preserve peace and order in car, and where in so doing malicious assault is committed, company is liable therefor. Scioto Valley Traction Co. v. Graybill, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 469.

89. Where passenger presents valid transfer which is dishonored, he is not obliged to pay his fare and resort to action to recover it, but may sue for wrongful ejection. Arnold v. Rhode Island Co. [R. I.] 66 A. 60. Where transfer is good under rules and practice of carrier, it is no defense that statute does not require issuance thereof. Id. One going onto train without ticket and knowing that he will be ejected cannot recover for ejection though he had paid for ticket which he did not receive. Can only recover for amount of fare. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. McCormick [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 202. One who has lost ticket and is ejected cannot recover. Id.

90. Refused to pay fare for child. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Gribble [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 157.

94. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Smith [C. C. A.] 152 F. 608. Tender of fare on behalf of passenger in his presence and unrepudiated by him constitutes tender by him. Gates v. Quincy, etc., R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 334, 102 S. W. 50.

95. Instruction held to ignore right. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Scarborough [Fla.] 42 So. 706. What is reasonable time depends upon circumstances and facts and cannot be said as matter of law that passenger has until reaching next station. Id.

96. Rule prohibiting passengers from standing on front platform is reasonable. Dobbins v. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co., 79 Ark. 85, 95 S. W. 794.

97. Rule requiring production of hat checks held waived where conductor told plaintiff that he would have to produce his credentials at each station, to which plaintiff consented. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Gwin, 125 Ill. App. 456.

98. Under Code 1896, § 2457, conductor may eject passenger without regard to whether language is offensive to other passengers. Hence evidence as to its offensiveness is immaterial. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 41 So. 984. Evidence of use of abusive language held to authorize reversal of a judgment for plaintiff. East St. Louis R. Co. v. Smith, 126 Ill. App. 624.

99. Where conductor was present and witnessed ejected passenger's conduct, evidence of requests from passengers to remove him, etc., is not admissible as right to eject depended on conduct. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 41 So. 984.

1. Liable for ejecting passenger from moving car. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Brethauer, 125 Ill. App. 204. Arrested and detained by police officers although he stated that no resistance would be made. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Gwin, 125 Ill. App. 456.

2. Peoria & P. Terminal R. Co. v. Hoerr, 120 Ill. App. 65. Where no opportunity is given passenger to alight at destination, fact that he is not entitled to ride beyond does authorize an abusive and violent ejection. Kina v. Southern R. Co. [Ga.] 57 S. E. 507. Plaintiff's evidence held to make prima facie case of such wrongful ejection. Id. Instruction as to right to eject held erroneous in omitting qualification that unnecessary force must not be used as required by Code 1896, § 2457. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 41 So. 984.

3. Must submit and resort to remedy at law for wrongful ejection. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Brethauer, 125 Ill. App. 204; Peoria & P. Terminal R. Co. v. Hoerr, 120 Ill. App. 65.

4. May resist ejection from moving car. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Brethauer, 125 Ill. App. 204.

5. Peoria & P. Terminal R. Co. v. Hoerr, 120 Ill. App. 61.

Delay and misrouting.<sup>6</sup>—It is the duty of the carrier to carry within a reasonable time,<sup>7</sup> though the passenger is riding on a freight train.<sup>8</sup>

§ 24. Rates and fares, tickets and special contracts.<sup>9</sup>—A carrier though acting as agent for another is liable for issuing vitally defective ticket.<sup>10</sup> In most states the ticket is conclusive as between the conductor and the passenger as to the rights of the latter<sup>11</sup> and cannot be varied by parol evidence unless ambiguous,<sup>12</sup> though some give effect to the actual contract.<sup>13</sup> Recognition by one carrier of a defective ticket does not make it binding on connecting lines.<sup>14</sup> A contract to carry to destination does not require that the initial car be used throughout.<sup>15</sup> The rate charged<sup>16</sup> and the time within which a ticket may be used<sup>17</sup> may be regulated by franchise or statute. In Georgia a passenger failing without fault of carrier<sup>18</sup> to procure ticket before boarding may be charged four cents per mile.<sup>19</sup> Carrier is not liable for a mistake of which the passenger has knowledge.<sup>20</sup> Where a ticket has been wrongfully dishonored, passenger does not waive his rights by demanding a return of the same.<sup>21</sup> A street railway company may fix a reasonable limit on amount of change it will undertake to furnish passengers.<sup>22</sup> The agent of a sleeping car company has no authority to make representations as to the validity of a railroad ticket.<sup>23</sup>

Conditions and limits.<sup>24</sup>—Unless prohibited by constitution, statute, or public policy,<sup>25</sup> a carrier may restrict its common-law liability by conditions knowingly<sup>26</sup>

Conclusiveness of ticket is not affected by fact that ticket agent should have given unlimited ticket, and communication of fact to conductor. Id.

12. Words "Charleston, S. C., and return" written in ink across printed matter of conditional round trip ticket does not render it ambiguous so as to make parol evidence of passenger's understanding admissible, nor does it affect conditions therein. 17. Under Rev. St. c. 52, § 2, providing that ticket shall be good on all trains for six years from date of issue, except that railroads may sell excursion tickets "to be used only, as provided on the ticket," excursion ticket containing single limitation as to continuous trip is good on regular train for six years from date of issue. Crabtree v. Washington County R. Co., 101 Me. 485, 64 A. 842.

24. See 7 C. L. 564.

25. Contracts exempting carrier from liability of injuries to employees of sleeping assented to by the passenger or party transported,<sup>27</sup> if such restriction is based on a consideration.<sup>28</sup> Conditions in free passes<sup>29</sup> are usually held valid,<sup>30</sup> as are indemnifying contracts of express companies.<sup>31</sup> Except as to performance of services not required by law,<sup>32</sup> a carrier cannot relieve itself from its own wrongful acts or negligence<sup>33</sup> and especially from a statutory liability.<sup>34</sup> One riding on a ticket requiring identification need produce only such evidence as will satisfy a reasonable man.<sup>35</sup> Where a passenger has missed the regular train through the negligence of the carrier, he may wait for the next regular through train though ticket expires in the meantime.<sup>36</sup> In Maine an excursion or special ticket at reduced rates must contain all its limitations.<sup>37</sup> A contract of indemnity between carrier and shipper,<sup>38</sup> or between a shipper and his servant,<sup>39</sup> does not relieve the carrier from liability to servant, though a contract between the latter expressly relieving the carrier may be enforced by it.<sup>40</sup> car company held not void as against public policy nor as against const. art. 15, §§ 62, 15, prohibiting discriminations in facilities of transportation and making it unlawful to require employe to discharge his employer from liability for injuries occasioned by negligence. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Whan [Colo.] 89 P. 39.

26. Knowledge of express messenger that his employer has made some contract for his transportation does not charge him with knowledge of its terms limiting his rights in case of injury. Robinson v. St. Johnsbury & L. C. R. Co. [Vt.] 66 A. 814. Employe is not bound by terms of contract between his employer and carrier relieving latter from liability, such terms being unknown to him. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Henry [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 636.

27. Express messenger entering employ of express company with knowledge of contract of indemnity between his employer and carrier assents thereto. Robinson v. St. Johnsbury & L. C. R. Co. [Vt.] 66 A. 814. Presumptively ticket is not a contract and hence it will not be presumed that ordinary duties owed by carrier have been modified thereby. McCallum v. Southern Pac. Co. [Utah] 88 P. 663.

28. Shipper's contract indemnifying carrier against claims for personal injuries to former's servants carried free is void where transportation according to common-law duty was not offered shipper as alternative. Baker v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 65 A. 386.

29. Whether pass "thrown out" with pay envelope without any remark, after employe had been permitted to ride free for many years, was gratuity or was issued as term of employment held for jury. Dugan v. Blue Hill St. R. Co., 193 Mass. 431, 79 N. E. 748. Desire to have policeman on car because presence tended to preserve peace and order held no consideration for pass. Marshall v. Nashville R. & Light Co. [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 419. Where pass is issued to employe as one of terms of his employment, condition therein that he assume all risks is not binding. *Dugan v. Provision that claim for damages resulting from any bona fide mistake of conductor in rejecting proof of identity shall be limited to cost of ticket does not limit amount of recovery where conductor acts in bad faith. Pierson v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [Mich.] 112 N. W. 923. Condition that passenger assume risks incident to boarding caboose at any place it may stop held not to amount to limitation of liability for negligence. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Mann [Neb.] 111 N. W. 379.

34. Under const. art. 17, § 12, making railroads liable for damages under such regulations as legislature may prescribe, and Kirby's Dig. § 6773, making them liable for damages to persons caused by running of trains, stipulation in free pass against injuries for negligence is void. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Pitcock [Ark.] 101 S. W. 725.

A conditional contract, though valid where made, will not be enforced in another state if against its constitution or statute.<sup>41</sup>

Transfers.<sup>42</sup>—The duty to issue transfers may be imposed by franchise<sup>43</sup> or by statute.<sup>44</sup> While Laws 1890, New York, does not entitle a passenger to a transfer from one car to another passing the initial point,<sup>45</sup> the contrary has been held under Laws 1892.<sup>46</sup> Under the latter, transfers must be issued only for a continuous trip<sup>47</sup> by the most direct route.<sup>48</sup> Wrongful refusal,<sup>49</sup> not due to inadvertence or mistake,<sup>50</sup> of a transfer renders a carrier liable to a penalty in New York.<sup>51</sup> Unless the trip was being made for the sole purpose of recovering such penalty.<sup>52</sup> Where transfers are habitually issued under a rule, they must be honored though the rule is not strictly applicable.<sup>53</sup> The carrier may require that the transfers be demanded at some reasonable point,<sup>54</sup> as at the time of paying fare,<sup>55</sup> and that the transfer

44. The fact that statute is in litigation does not affect passenger's right to transfer thereunder if it is in fact valid. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Brethauer, 125 Ill. App. 204. Street surface railroad which leases and operates connecting elevated and steam surface railroads does so under Laws 1890, art. 3, § 78, and is only subject to art. 4, §§ 101, 104, requiring surface street railroads to charge but a single 5 cent fare over all main and connecting lines. People v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 838. Railroad Law (Laws 1890, p. 1114, c. 565, § 104, amended by Laws 1892, p. 1382, c. 676), relates to companies which have entered into contracts with other companies to insure continuous passage from point on one line to point on other and does not apply to trip between points on same line. Baron v. New York City R. Co., 105 N. Y. S. 258.

45. Under Railroad Law (Laws 1890, p. 1406, c. 676), passenger is not entitled to through trip where he takes car which turns off before reaching his destination. Roach v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 219.

46. Under Railroad Law (Laws 1892, p. 1406, c. 676, § 104) street railway company operating long and short service cars must issue transfers from latter to former. Baron v. New York City R. Co., 52 Misc. 581, 102 N. Y. S. 746; Plant v. New York City R. Co., 102 N. Y. S. 749; Baron v. New York City R. Co., 105 N. Y. S. 258.

47. One who rides by point at which he should have transferred for purpose of visiting friend on car and thereafter attempts to reach destination by transferring from line to line, is not making continuous trip within Railroad Law (Laws 1892, p. 1406, c. 676, § 104). Hunt v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 115 App. Div. 673, 101 N. Y. S. 209.

48. Railroad Laws (Laws 1892, p. 1406, c. 676, § 104). Kelly v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 561, rvg. 52 Misc. 585, 102 N. Y. S. 742.

49. In action under Railroad Laws (Laws 1892, p. 2107, c. 565, § 104), it is no defense that company had provided conductor with transfers. Snee v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 907. Not liable where passenger merely asks for transfer to particular street and is given one good only in wrong direction. Thistle v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 401.

50. Abusive language used by conductor when request for transfer was made held to show that refusal was not due to inadvertence or mistake but deliberate. Wasserman v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 398. Railroad Law, § 39, exempting carrier from liability for asking or receiving more than lawful fare, where done through inadvertence or mistake not amounting to gross negligence, is inapplicable to refusal of transfer. Snee v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 907.

51. The penalties under Railroad Law (Laws 1890, p. 1082, c. 565, as amended by Laws 1892, p. 1406, c. 676, § 104), are not cumulative, and bringing of action for one penalty waives all penalties previously incurred. Harkow v. New York City R. Co., 105 N. Y. S. 689.

52. Johnston v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 812; Nicholson v. New York City R. Co., 118 App. Div. 858, 103 N. Y. S. 695. One refused transfer in violation of Railroad Laws (Laws 1890, pp. 1096, 1113, 1114, c. 565,) may recover penalty though "one" of his purposes was to enforce penalty if he was refused transfer. Hennion v. New York City R. Co., 51 Misc. 671, 101 N. Y. S. 100. Evidence that plaintiff has many cases pending, that trips were planned in his attorney's office, that upon refusal of transfers he returned immediately to office and filled out blank complaints already prepared, etc., held to show that trips were made for purpose of suit although he testified to contrary. Johnston v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 812.

53. Arnold v. Rhode Island Co. [R. I.] 66 A. 60.

54. Railroad Law, § 105, (Laws 1890, p. 1114 c. 565), requiring street railways to issue transfers for continuous rides to points be made at particular places,<sup>56</sup> if such rules are duly published.<sup>57</sup> The transfer is conclusive of the passenger's right to carriage<sup>58</sup> and hence must be presented unmutated.<sup>59</sup>

Regulation of sale of tickets; brokerage.<sup>60</sup>—In the exercise of its police power,<sup>61</sup> a state may prohibit brokerage in nontransferable reduced rate tickets,<sup>62</sup> and an act prohibiting persons other than carriers, or duly authorized agents from selling the same, does not authorize the carrier or agent to sell except to the original purchaser.<sup>63</sup> A franchise requiring a suburban street car company to sell family tickets is not satisfied by placing them on sale at a drug store.<sup>64</sup> Carrier may enjoy the sale of outstanding nontransferable reduced rate return tickets,<sup>65</sup> but not the sale of tickets to be issued in future.<sup>66</sup>

§ 25. General rules of liability for personal injuries. A. Nature and extent of liability.<sup>67</sup>—While not an insurer of the safety of its passengers,<sup>68</sup> a carrier on its lines, does not prevent adoption of rule requiring passenger to demand such transfer at particular reasonable point in the trip. Ketchum v. New York City R. Co., 118 App. Div. 248, 103 N. Y. S. 486.

55. Fischer v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 400. Especially where transfer is good at any transfer point and passenger could continue to end of line without using it. Ketchum v. New York City R. Co., 118 App. Div. 248, 103 N. Y. S. 486. Rule does not require that demand be made at same second and where conductor did not regard demand made at time of payment, second request within minute is timely. Wasserman v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 398.

56. Shortsleeves v. Capital Traction Co., 28 App. D. C. 365. Where passenger boards at wrong transfer station and refuses to pay fare, he may be ejected, though car has passed point at which transfer is good. Id.

57. Where company has posted rule conspicuously and advertised it in such manner as to bring it to notice of the public, it is immaterial that particular passenger has no knowledge thereof. Ketchum v. New York City R. Co., 118 App. Div. 248, 103 N. Y. S. 486. Rights of passenger under transfer cannot be limited by secret rule. De Board v. Camden Interstate R. Co. [W. Va.] 57 S. E. 279.

58. Passenger must resort to action for breach of contract (Little Rock R. & Elec. Co. v. Goerner, 80 Ark. 158, 95 S. W. 1007), or for negligence in issuing transfer (Montgomery Traction Co. v. Fitzpatrick [Ala.] 43 So. 136). Fact that passenger was entitled to valid transfer and had been assured by issuing conductor that it was good, is immaterial. Nicholson v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 118 App. Div. 13, 103 N. Y. S. 310.

59. Instruction as to duty to carry plaintiff, if he presented unmutated transfer, held proper. Carmony v. St. Louis Transit Co., 122 Mo. App. 338, 99 S. W. 495.

60. See 7 C. L. 566.

61. Acts 1905, p. 873, c. 410, held valid. Samuelson v. State [Tenn.] 95 S. W. 1012.

62. Acts 1905, p. 873, c. 410, prohibiting persons other than duly authorized agents to sell nontransferable reduced rate tickets, held not unconstitutional as delegating to carrier legislative authority to create penal offense, or not by issuing or refusing to issue such reduced rate tickets (Samuelson v.

State [Tenn.] 95 S. W. 1012), nor does it deprive purchaser of property without due process of law (Id.), nor is it class legislation (Id.). Acts 1905, p. 873, c. 410, prohibiting traffic in nontransferable tickets, requiring redemption of unused tickets, and providing punishment for violation, held not unconstitutional as embracing more than one subject expressed in title. Id. Acts 1905, p. 873, c. 410, prohibiting traffic in tickets issued and sold "below the standard schedule rate," etc., is not invalid for uncertainty in using expression "standard schedule," since such schedule is fixed as to interstate carriage by reference to Interstate Commerce Act and as to intrastate by Acts 1897, p. 121, c. 10, § 22. Id. Ordinance of City of San Antonio making it unlawful for any person, corporation, etc., to sell or transfer within city limits any ticket or pass unless duly authorized in writing by railroad issuing same, is not invalid as depriving any citizen of equal rights with other citizens or of right to carry on lawful business, or to transfer property as he sees fit (Ex parte Hughes [Tex. Cr. App.] 100 S. W. 160), nor does it deny equal protection of law by granting special privileges to railroads (Id.).

63. Acts 1905, p. 873, c. 410. Samuelson v. State [Tenn.] 95 S. W. 1012.

64. Must be on sale on cars. West Bloomfield Tp. v. Detroit United R. Co., 146 Mich. 198, 13 Det. Leg. N. 717, 109 N. W. 258.

Liable only for negligence. Reiss v. Wilmington City R. Co. [Del.] 67 A. 153. Carrier exercising reasonable judgment is not liable, though accident would not have happened had judgment been different. Whitt v. Public Service Corp. [N. J. Law.] 64 A. 972. Not liable to one accidentally knocked from running board by collision with fellow passenger where collision was not caused by negligence. Sanderson v. Boston Elevated R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 515. One who has assumed risks incident to boarding caboose at any place it may stop cannot recover for injuries received by falling into ash pit while on way to caboose, in absence of showing of negligence. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Mann [Neb.] 111 N. W. 379. Where evidence owes them the highest degree of care consistent with a practical operation of its business,<sup>69</sup> irrespective of how the relation is established,<sup>70</sup> and is liable for all injuries<sup>71</sup> proximately resulting<sup>72</sup> to plaintiff<sup>73</sup> from a failure to exercise such care.<sup>74</sup> While tended to show that lurch was incident to proper handling of train, instruction relieving defendant from liability unless jury found jerk to be unusual or violent, held erroneously refused. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 239.

Instructions: Holding carrier liable unless accident was "occasioned by inevitable casualty or some other cause which human foresight could not prevent," approved. Kline v. Santa Barbara Consol. R. Co. [Cal.] 90 P. 125. Held not to authorize verdict for plaintiff upon finding that cable machinery was defective without regard to negligence. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Lowenrosen, 222 Ill. 506, 78 N. E. 813.

Stibbs*, 17 Okl. 97, 87 P. 293. Passenger elevator. Belvidere Bldg. Co. v. Bryan, 103 Md. 514, 64 A. 44. Street car company. Bell v. Central Elec. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 660, 103 S. W. 144. Street car company must exercise such reasonable diligence as nature of its business demands. Egan v. Old Colony St. R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 696. Instruction requiring carrier to exercise "the highest degree of care and prudence" in crossing steam railroad tracks, held not erroneous, although reasonable care in view of the danger to be apprehended is true rule. Walsh v. Yonkers R. Co., 100 N. Y. S. 278. Rule that one crossing street car track need only use ordinary care does not apply to omnibus owner. Parmelee Co. v. Wheelock, 224 Ill. 194, 79 N. E. 652. Where carrier fails to exercise care required, it is no defense that it was operating train in customary manner. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Crusetner [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 423.

Must exercise degree of care of highly prudent person in like business and under similar circumstances. Gilmore v. Houston Elec. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 168; Schloemer v. St. Louis Transit Co., 204 Mo. 99, 102 S. W. 565; O'Gara v. St. Louis Transit Co., 204 Mo. 724, 103 S. W. 54; International, etc., R. Co. v. Huguen [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1000. Instruction that carrier must exercise highest diligence known to "very" diligent men, held not to require too high degree of care. Southern R. Co. v. Burgess, 143 Ala. 364, 42 So. 35.

Care must be consistent with practical operation of road. Pitcher v. Old Colony St. R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 876. Instruction as whole, held correct. International Mercantile Marine Co. v. Smith [C. C. A.] 145 F. 891. Chicago City R. Co. v. Shreve, 226 Ill. 530, 80 N. E. 1049. Instruction using phrase consistent with practical "prosecution" instead of practical "operation," held not erroneous. Chicago City R. Co. v. Smith, 226 Ill. 178, 80 N. E. 716. Instruction held not erroneous as not qualifying word "consistent" by word "reasonably." Id.; Chicago City R. Co. v. Pural, 127 Ill. App. 652, affd., 224 Ill. 324, 79

N. E. 686. Instruction held not erroneous in omitting words "consistent with the practical operation of its vehicle and the exercise of its business as a common carrier where it contained words "under the circumstances" and "in view of the character and mode of conveyance adopted." Parmelee Co. v. Wheelock, 224 Ill. 194, 79 N. E. 652.

Instructions: That carrier owes duty to exercise that high degree of care for the "reasonable" personal safety, etc., held erroneous in using word "reasonable." Moore v. Northern Texas Trac. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 354, 95 S. W. 652. That, if plaintiff received injury as result of some occurrence which careful men could not have reasonably anticipated, occurrence was an "accident," held misleading in use of phrase "reasonably anticipated." Hunt v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 103 S. W. 1088. Instruction in action against omnibus owner for injuries received in collision with street car that if driver "rightfully proceeded across the tracks then you are instructed that he had a right to rely on the motorman to so manage the cars as to avoid a collision," held properly refused. Parmelee Co. v. Wheelock, 224 Ill. 194, 79 N. E. 652.

70. Where contract of carriage is made with conductor, passenger is entitled to care due passengers generally. Williamson v. Central of Georgia R. Co., 127 Ga. 125, 56 S. E. 119. Fact that passenger is being carried gratuitously does not deprive him of his cause of action for injuries. Indianapolis Trac. & Terminal Co. v. Klentschy, 167 Ind. 598, 79 N. E. 908.

71. Where failure to properly warm waiting room produced condition of health rendering passenger susceptible to tuberculosis, and as natural and probable consequence thereof she became afflicted and died, carrier is liable. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Groner [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 507, 95 S. W. 1118.

72. Florida East Coast R. Co. v. Wade [Fla.] 43 So. 775; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Sheridan [Ky.] 101 S. W. 928; Smithers v. Wilmington City R. Co. [Del.] 67 A. 167. Injury must be such as should have been foreseen as the probable proximate result. Florida East Coast R. Co. v. Wade [Fla.] 43 So. 775. Where carrier knows of passenger's illness and that he is going home, he must as matter of law anticipate injury from carrying him by destination. Nelson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 130 Wis. 214, 109 N. W. 933.

Instructions: Use of word "directly" contributed instead of "proximately," held not erroneous under facts of case. Ruffin v. Atlantic & N. C. R. Co., 142 N. C. 120, 55 S. E. 86.

Held proximate cause: Announcement of wrong street, inducing passenger to alight at unfamiliar place, of injuries sustained by falling upon curbstone while trying to find way home through darkness. Georgia R. & Elec. Co. v. McAllister, 126 Ga. 447, 54 S. E. 957. Exposure of husband to smallpox, of wife contracting it from him. Missouri K. & T. R. Co. v. Raney [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 589. Delay in warm and close place, of sick-the same degree of care is due to one riding on a freight train or elevator,<sup>75</sup> the passenger assumes the inconveniences and risks incident to that mode of travel.<sup>76</sup> It has been held, however, that "due" care is owed to a caretaker of goods.<sup>77</sup> The test of negligence is not whether the carrier actually anticipated the injury, but whether a very prudent person would have anticipated<sup>78</sup> an injury to some person.<sup>79</sup> Since its liability is based upon negligence, a carrier is not liable for injuries due to an act of God<sup>80</sup> unless its negligence concurs therewith,<sup>81</sup> and, likewise, the concurrent negligence or act of a third person is no defense.<sup>82</sup> If a carrier has knowl-ness of passenger who was weak from recent operation and susceptible to heat. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Redeker [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 362. Negligence in carrying passenger beyond destination, of injuries received by falling from trestle in darkness while walking back up track under directions of conductor. Kentucky & I. Bridge & R. Co. v. Buckler, 30 Ky. L. R. 1086, 100 S. W. 328. Starting of train before shipper could tie horse, of injuries received while holding him. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Wilkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 247, 98 S. W. 202. Delay whereby freight car was left standing all night, of injuries from exposure, although warm station was nearby where passenger had reason to expect train to proceed at any minute. Green v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 121 Mo. App. 720, 97 S. W. 646. Where plaintiff was thrown forward by sudden jerk, and because of absence of guard chain fell between cars held that absence of chain was proximate cause of injury. Hooper v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 329, 102 S. W. 58.

Held not proximate cause: Mistaken information given by conductor as to point reached, of injuries received by falling through trestle in walking back to station. Jewell v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Ark.] 102 S. W. 370. Where plaintiff boarded train without ticket because of absence of ticket agent from office and thereafter got off to procure one, absence of agent from office held not proximate cause of injuries received while attempting to board (San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Trago [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 254), nor was act of leaving train to procure ticket (Id.). Negligence in not furnishing better platform or portable step, of injuries received after passenger had safely reached car steps. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Work [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 962. Negligent statement that next stop was plaintiff's destination, of her alighting at intermediate stop under facts of the case. Florida East Coast R. Co. v. Wade [Fla.] 43 So. 775.

Proximate cause for jury: Open door, of plaintiff's cold and injury. Decker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 112 N. W. 901. Alighting from high step, of rupture. Brooks v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. [Pa.] 66 A. 872. Carrying sick passenger past destination, of permanent paralysis. Nelson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 130 Wis. 214, 109 N. W. 933. Co.*, 125 Mo. App. 562, 102 S. W. 1032. Fall through trap door, of pleurisy and miscarriage. Jordan v. St. Louis & M. R. R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 330, 99 S. W. 492.

73. Instruction as to duty owed to passengers held not subject to objection that it authorized plaintiff to recover for injuries suffered by other passengers, in that it did not single out duty as owed to plaintiff. Mathis v. Southern Pac. Co. [Utah] 83 P. 668.

74. Held not negligence to permit passengers to pass from one car to another while the train is standing. Hogan v. Boston Elevated R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 198. In running down one walking on switch track, all warnings and signals having been given. Raymond v. Chicago, etc. R. Co., 126 Ill. App. 240.

Evidence held to sustain finding that defendant used too much force in attempting to prevent boarding at improper place. Ditchfield v. Philadelphia & West Chester Trac. Co., 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 531.

Negligence for jury where intruder or porter stumbled over passenger's leg while he was sitting on edge of berth. Pullman Co. v. Haight [C. C. A.] 151 F. 1009.

75. Bussell v. Quincy, etc., R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 441, 102 S. W. 613; Southern R. Co. v. Burgess, 143 Ala. 364, 42 So. 35. Instruction imposing care of person of great prudence, held correct. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Schroeder [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 808; Southern R. Co. v. Burgess, 143 Ala. 364, 42 So. 35. 77. Baker v. Boston & M. R. Co. [N. H.] 65 A. 386.

78. Error to permit conductor and motorman to testify that they had no idea that plaintiff would jump from front platform if a horse fell in front of car, and that no one had ever told them anything to make them believe that she would do so. Moore v. Northern Tex. Trac. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 354, 95 S. W. 652.

79. Instruction held erroneous as leading jury to believe that motorman must have anticipated the precise injury and person to whom it would happen. Moore v. Northern Tex. Trac. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 354, 95 S. W. 652.

80. Cyclone blowing cars from track, held act of God. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Crier [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1177.

81. Carrier held not negligent in running into path of cyclone. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Crier [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1177.

82. Forsythe v. Los Angeles R. Co., 110 Cal. 569, 87 P. 24. Fact that brick causing edge of a passenger's feeble condition,<sup>83</sup> it must exercise special care in respect thereto, and, in the absence of such knowledge, it is liable for injuries due to negligence, though it would not have injured an ordinary person.<sup>84</sup> The duty to exercise special care because of a passenger's perilous position does not arise until carrier has knowledge thereof.<sup>85</sup> The duty owed to one not a passenger<sup>86</sup> and the liability of private carriers<sup>87</sup> are less strict.

derailment was placed on track by boy is no defense where motorman negligently failed to discover same in time to stop. O'Gara v. St. Louis Transit Co., 204 Mo. 724, 103 S. W. 54. The fact that boy opened switch is no defense where carrier was negligent in leaving it unlocked or unguarded, or in not discovering that it was open. Elgin, Aurora & Southern Trac. Co. v. Wilson, 120 Ill. App. 371. Where reasonable time to alight was not afforded, carrier is liable though a boarding passenger interfered with plaintiff. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Bryant [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 237.

83. Notice to porter, acting as brakeman, of passenger's weak condition and need of special care held notice to carrier. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Redeker [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 362.

84. Injuries caused by negligent delay. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Redeker [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 362.

85. Carrier may assume that passengers will avoid perilous positions. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McNab [Ala.] 43 So. 222. And that no one will attempt to alight from car while moving at dangerous speed. Ghio v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 710, 103 S. W. 142. Evidence held to show that servants had no knowledge of plaintiff's presence on platform. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 239.

86. Pushing of one from train by porter, held failure to exercise ordinary care, as matter of law, so it was immaterial whether relation of carrier and passenger had terminated. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hugen [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1000.

87. Company operating private logging road, and whose conductors were expressly instructed not to allow passengers to ride except in caboose, owes no duty to provide for safety of one who is riding on flat car, although under direction of conductor. Boisen v. Cobbs, 147 Mich. 429, 111 N. W. 82.

Err. & App.] 67 A. 24; Reiss v. Wilmington City R. Co. [Del.] 67 A. 153. Must exercise due care to obtain food where train is detained through fault of carrier. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 653. Passenger on improperly heated car must use reasonable means at hand to prevent ill effect, and may properly allege what she did. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Powell, 127 Ga. 805, 56 S. E. 1006. Age without evidence of physical or mental condition is not circumstance to be considered in determining passenger's negligence in alighting. Hodges v. Southern Pac. Co., 3 Cal. App. 307, 86 P. 620. Instruction is not erroneous in using expression "due diligence" where in all the instructions "reasonable diligence," "ordinary care," and "reasonable care" are used synonymously. Bond v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 207, 99 S. W. 30. Instruction "'contributory negligence' means that where plaintiff does some negligent act or omits to perform some act which * * * contributes," etc., held erroneous as not requiring such omitted act to be negligence. Selman v. Gulf, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 1030.

90, 91. Negligence should not be imputed to one who, in alighting from electric car at regular stopping place, passed around rear end and was struck by car running in opposite direction, and which he could neither see nor hear by reason of obstruction caused by car upon which he had been passenger, in absence of clear proof of proper warning. Cincinnati St. R. Co. v. McBee, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 13.

Acts held not negligence as matter of law: Violation of stipulation not to be in car while switching was being done. Hardin v. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 995. Riding on tank car with consent of conductor and under contract between carrier and his employer. Gray v. Columbia River, etc., R. Co. [Or.] 88 P. 297. Failure of passenger who has not been furnished proper accommodations and protection to leave car after having made demands upon the conductor in respect thereto. McCollum v. Southern Pac. Co. [Utah] 88 P. 663. In remaining on a car improperly heated. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Powell, 127 Ga. 805, 56 S. E. 1006. Passenger negligently put off at wrong street, in seeking to find way home through storm instead of asking shelter at nearby houses. Georgia R. & Elec. Co. v. McAllister, 126 Ga. 447, 54 S. E. 957.

Acts held not negligence: Remaining in cold depot until it became clearly apparent that carrier did not intend to heat as required by Rev. St. 1895, § 4521. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Lowe [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 265, 97 S. W. 1087. One carried beyond station in walking back through rain where he was under impression that there was no return train until next day and he had pressing business engagements. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Knight [Ark.] 99 S. W. 684. In walking back up track as directed by conductor and in falling from trestle in darkness. Kentucky, etc., R. Co. v. Buckler, 30 Ky. L. R. 1036, 100 S. W. 328. To ride six miles across country to destination, there being no train until next evening, and she being dressed in winter wear. St. Louis, S. W. R. Co. v. Foster [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 194. Remaining in unheated station, train being due and boarding house 159 yards away. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 932,

95 S. W. 595. Passenger on street car, in not seeing approaching train in time to avoid injury from collision. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 124 Ill. App. 627.

Negligence held for jury: Of one thrown from steps of car while alighting. Hall v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [N. D.] 111 N. W. 609. Attempting to board car, knowing of jostling of crowds on other occasions. Kuhlén v. Boston & N. St. R. Co., 193 Mass. 341, 79 N. E. 815. Crossing tracks to leave station without looking for approaching trains. Atlantic City R. Co. v. Kiefer [N. J. Law] 66 A. 930. Intoxication is not conclusive proof of contributory negligence, but is circumstance to be considered. Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Davis [Ark.] 103 S. W. 603.

Evidence insufficient to disprove negligence: General evidence that decedent who was old and feeble fell when car started in usual way with something of jerk. Jamieson v. Boston El. R. Co., 193 Mass. 560, 79 N. E. 750.

Evidence held insufficient to raise issue: That person accompanying stock went into car with consent of defendant's employe to get a calf onto its feet and was injured by sudden jerk of car. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Lindsey [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 863. Where white female passenger did not know that sleeper was attached and it was unlawful for her to go into coach set apart for negroes and not proper for her to go into smoker, fact that those coaches were warm was insufficient to raise question of negligence in remaining in cold car. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 653. Negligence cannot be based upon fact that infirm man, injured while traveling alone, was receiving government pension for total disability. Toledo, Bowling Green & So. Trac. Co. v. McFall, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 271. Evidence of warning not to attempt to pass from one coach to another which was about to be separated therefrom, held too indefinite to predicate negligence on. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Gammage [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 805, 96 S. W. 645.

Instruction held to sufficiently charge contributory negligence in remaining in cold depot instead of seeking shelter elsewhere. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Lowe [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 265, 97 S. W. 1087. As to contributory negligence in alighting from moving car, held improperly modified so as to excuse plaintiff if defendant was negligent in certain particulars. Van Horn v. St. Louis Transit Co., 198 Mo. 481, 95 S. W. 326. Making plaintiff guilty of negligence if by exercise of ordinary care he could have discovered that front end of car was not intended for passengers and took seat therein, held too narrow as ignoring what reasonable man would have done having such knowledge. Miller v. Atlanta & Charlotte Air Line R. Co. [N. C.] 57 S. E. 345.

92. Negligence must be proximate cause to defeat recovery. Black v. New York, etc.,

R. Co., 193 Mass. 448, 79 N. E. 797. That injury was due "in part" is not sufficient. Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Byrd [Miss.] 42 So. 286. Instruction that if mother's negligence "in any way contributed" to death of child no recovery could be had, held properly refused. Coney Island Co. v. Dennon [C. C. A.] 149 F. 687. Instruction held erroneous as ignoring proximate cause. Hardin v. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 995. Instruction properly modified so as to require negligence to contribute to injury to defeat recovery. Kansas City So. R. Co. v. Davis [Ark.] 103 S. W. 603. Negligence in alighting from car moving at dangerous speed, held proximate cause of injuries. Ghio v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 710, 103 S. W. 142. Where intoxicated and helpless passenger was taken from train and placed near top steps of station platform, from which he fell, held that question whether his intoxication was proximate cause or mere condition of accident was for the jury. Black v. New York, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 448, 79 N. E. 797.

93. Though passenger is negligent in riding in vestibule, company held liable where porter carelessly jostled him off. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ferguson, 74 Kan. 253, 86 P. 471. Evidence examined and held insufficient to show willful negligence by porter in pushing plaintiff off platform. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Warren [C. C. A.] 149 F. 658. Finding that motorman was not guilty of willful negligence after discovering plaintiff's perilous position, sustained. Pendleton v. Chicago City R. Co., 120 Ill. App. 405. Although passenger was negligent in passing around rear of car from which he had just alighted and in front of another, carrier is still liable if operatives on such car could by exercise of reasonable care have discovered his peril and by exercise of reasonable care have prevented injury. Louisville City R. Co. v. Hudgins 30 Ky. L. R. 316, 98 S. W. 275. Instruction that plaintiff could not recover if she attempted to board moving car, held properly modified so as to allow recovery for failure to stop car after discovering that she was being dragged. Poland v. Southwest. Mo. Elec. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 284, 95 S. W. 958. Where evidence of plaintiff tended to show that car was started suddenly from standing position while she was alighting, and that of defendant that plaintiff attempted to alight from moving car, instruction bringing in humanitarian doctrine, held erroneous. Ghio v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 710, 103 S. W. 142.

94. Toledo, Bowling Green & So. Trac. Co. v. McFall, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 271.

96. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Wilkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 247, 98 S. W. 202.

Acts due to impulse of sudden danger<sup>1</sup> are not negligent unless devoid of the common prudence dictated by the situation.<sup>2</sup>

Going about stations, platforms, tracks, or standing cars.<sup>3</sup>—Negligence in walking about the tracks depends upon the circumstances,<sup>4</sup> and it is not per se negligence to take position near the track and in front of large crowd, knowing that they would rush to get on the cars.<sup>5</sup>

Boarding the car or vehicle of transit.<sup>6</sup>—Boarding standing car<sup>7</sup> or caboose before the train is made up,<sup>8</sup> and failure to take a seat with due diligence,<sup>9</sup> are not per se negligent acts, nor is the use of a car cradle track to reach a ferry boat.<sup>10</sup>

97. See 7 C. L. 570.

98. Evidence that porter assisted in helping passengers off supports finding that it was in scope of his duty to direct passengers to alight. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Whiteley. [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 109.

99. Acts held not negligent: Alighting at usual place. Brooks v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. [Pa.] 66 A. 872. On vestibule pursuant to rule requiring users of tobacco to so ride. Goodloe v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. 120 Mo. App. 194, 96 S. W. 482. Alighting from front platform which had passed beyond station platform, being enjoined so to do by posted notice. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 123 Ill. App. 300. On running board. And especially where injury results from operation of train. Boesen v. Omaha St. R. Co. [Neb.] 112 N. W. 614. Directed and forcibly urged by the conductor to go upon the rear platform. Druzepski v. People's St. R. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 380.

Negligence held for jury: In alighting from moving train. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Leamons [Ark.] 102 S. W. 363.

Instruction that suggestion of carrier's employees to alight did not alone justify plaintiff in alighting from moving train, but was circumstance to be considered in determining whether he exercised due care, cannot be complained of by carrier. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Whiteley [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 109.

1. See 7 C. L. 570.

2. Not negligence to jump from overturning stage. Dinnigan v. Peterson, 3 Cal. App. 764, 87 P. 218. Boy twelve years old held not negligent in jumping from car upon hearing explosion and seeing flames shooting from controller box, although other passengers remained seated. Paine v. Geneva, etc., Tract. Co., 115 App. Div. 729, 101 N. Y. S. 204. One jumping from train under mistaken belief that collision is threatened, when there is in fact no apparent danger, is negligent. Riley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 111 N. W. 847. Instruction that "one brought into sudden danger . . . is not expected to act with coolness or deliberation as moved a reasonable man under ordinary circumstances," held erroneous as predicated lack of coolness and deliberation upon "sudden danger" however slight. Alabama City, etc., R. Co. v. Bates [Ala.] 43 So. 98.

3. See 7 C. L. 571.

4. Held per se negligence: In passing around rear of car from which he had alighted without waiting for car to move so that he could see approaching cars on adjacent track. Eagen v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 67 A. 24.

Held not negligence per se: Crossing tracks after alighting without looking for approaching trains. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 123 Ill. App. 300. Not per se gross negligence to cross and recross track after hearing first signal of approaching train. Drawdy v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 75 S. C. 308, 55 S. E. 444.

Negligence for the jury: Crossing tracks ahead of approaching train after alighting from another. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 123 Ill. App. 300.

Negligence: Walking on switch track after warning, although others frequently did so. Raymond v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 126 Ill. App. 240.

14. Person boarding moving train knowing that it is dangerous and negligent so to do cannot recover and defendant is entitled to instruction so stating. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Trigo [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 254. Where there is evidence that child was so young as not to appreciate danger in boarding moving train, his age and intelligence may be considered in passing on his negligence. 1d

Riding or being in dangerous position or place.<sup>15</sup>—It is not negligence per se to ride in cupola of caboose<sup>16</sup> or on the truck of a logging train,<sup>17</sup> to leave seat in a stationary train and to go to front end of the car for a drink,<sup>18</sup> or to go out onto platform,<sup>19</sup> or to place hand on door jamb.<sup>20</sup> Negligence in standing up in train<sup>21</sup> or in going out onto the platform<sup>22</sup> depends upon the circumstances,<sup>23</sup> the test being whether an ordinarily prudent man would have so acted.<sup>24</sup> A passenger riding in a place of danger assumes only the risks incident thereto when train is operated with due care<sup>25</sup> if carrier accepts him as a passenger in such position.<sup>26</sup>

Riding on the running board or platform of a street car.<sup>27</sup>—Generally it is held not per se negligence to ride on the platform,<sup>28</sup> running board,<sup>29</sup> or steps,<sup>30</sup> and

24. Negligence held for jury: Using steamship berth without vertical protecting board. International Mercantile M. Co. v. Smith [C. C. A.] 145 F. 891. Permitting recently broken leg to extend into aisle while sitting on side of berth. Pullman Co. v. Haight [C. C. A.] 151 F. 1009.

Held negligence: Voluntarily taking standing position just inside open door, knowing of rough condition of road. Foley v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 332, 79 N. E. 765. Leaving passenger compartment of combination car and going into baggage compartment. Bromley v. New York, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 453, 79 N. E. 775.

Held not negligence: In seating seven year old boy at end of seat next to screen of summer car. Indianapolis Trac. & T. Co. v. Beckman [Ind. App.] 81 N. E. 82. Evidence that while plaintiff was still standing, facing partly forward and partly sideways, and helping her child to move over so as to make room for herself, she was thrown by a sudden starting of the car, held to warrant finding that she was using due care. Hamilton v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 324, 79 N. E. 734.

25. Went out onto platform before reaching station. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 239. Duty to exercise highest degree of care in maintenance of track and operation of train extends to passenger passing from one car to another of moving train. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Patillo [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 492. Instruction that defendant is not liable if plaintiff was thrown from train while unnecessarily standing on platform while train was passing from straight track to curve track is erroneous in not adding that train was being operated with "all due care." Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Byrd [Miss.] 42 So. 286.

26. One injured while riding on running board who does not prove that car stopped to receive him, or that he was seen by conductor and suffered to remain there, or that his fare had been collected while in such position, does not make a case. Kramer v. Brooklyn-Heights R. Co., 114 App. Div. 804, 100 N. Y. S. 276. Fact that conductor punched plaintiff's ticket while he was in baggage compartment, held not to constitute acquiescence to his riding therein. Bromley v. New York, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 453, 79 N. E. 775.

27. See 7 C. L. 573.

28. Baskett v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 123 Mo. App. 725, 101 S. W. 138. Standing on front platform preparatory to alighting, though there was room inside. Wellmeyer v. St. Louis Transit Co., 198 Mo. 527, 95 S. W. 925.

Held per se negligence to ride on front platform when there is room inside. McDade v. Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., 215 Pa. 105, 64 A. 327.

29. Egan v. Old Colony St. R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 696; Chicago Consol. Trac. Co. v. Schritter, 222 Ill. 364, 78 N. E. 820. Outside of lowered bar is negligence per se. Harding v. Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., 217 Pa. 69, 66 A. 151.

30. Riding after request to go inside. Coffey v. Omaha, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 112 N. W. 589. Where there is no room inside and no objection is made. Consolidated Trac. Co. v. Schritter, 124 Ill. App. 578. Passenger who rides on footboard outside car when it is reasonably practicable to take seat within assumes risk of his position. Chicago City R. Co. v. Schaefer, 121 Ill. App. 334. Doctrine of assumed risk is not applicable to passenger standing on steps and injured by collision with wagon. Chicago Consol. Trac. Co. v. Schritter, 222 Ill. 364, 78 N. E. 820.

hence not to board a car so crowded as to necessitate riding thereon.<sup>31</sup> Negligence in such cases is for the jury.<sup>32</sup>

Riding on platform of railroad train.<sup>33</sup>—It is not negligence, as a matter of law, to ride<sup>64</sup> on the platform where there are no available seats,<sup>35</sup> but by statutes in some states a carrier is relieved from liability if it posts proper notices.<sup>36</sup>

Going about on cars or from car to car.<sup>37</sup>—A passenger is not per se negligent in going from one car to another of a moving train,<sup>38</sup> and in so doing assumes only the risks incident thereto after the carrier has fully discharged its duty.<sup>39</sup>

Allowing body to project.<sup>40</sup>—There seems to be a conflict as to whether it is per se negligence to needlessly project arm from a car window.<sup>41</sup>

43. Passenger negligently alighting on wrong side cannot recover. Ruffin v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 142 N. C. 120, 55 S. E. 86.

Held not negligence per se: In stepping off car into gutter without examining ground. Maxwell v. Fresno City R. Co. [Cal. App.] 89 P. 367. In running into gate without observing it or brakeman closing same. McGarry v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 194. Alighting while drunk. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Deason, 29 Ky. L. R. 1259, 96 S. W. 1115.

For jury: In jumping instead of stepping off, being compelled to alight at place where there was no platform. Truesdell v. Erie R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 243. In stepping down onto step without holding onto guard while train was moving. Southern R. Co. v. Hundley [Ala.] 44 So. 195. In alighting from freight caboose at unusual place. Southern R. Co. v. Burgess, 143 Ala. 364, 42 So. 35.

Held negligence: To take position with one foot on platform and other on door sill before train came to stop. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Warren [C. C. A.] 149 F. 658. In arising while car was in motion, knowing of unevenness of tracks, and that car would sway. Cottrell v. Pawtucket St. R. Co., 27 R. I. 565, 65 A. 269. In alighting on wrong side and in attempting to pass ahead of approaching train. Fadley v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 514.

Held not negligence: To alight from train on side away from station, conditions of track being same on each side. Hodges v. Southern Pac. Co., 3 Cal. App. 307, 86 P. 620. Fact that passenger attempted to alight with child in one arm and grip in other hand does not raise issue of negligence where there was no servant present to assist. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Corse [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 522. In attempting to alight when car has stopped for such purpose, and starts while is alighting. Burke v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co., 147 Mich. 172, 13 Det. Leg. N. 974, 110 N. W. 524.

44. Evidence held to show reasonable diligence in alighting, way being blocked. Hur-

sume that the car has stopped at a safe place,<sup>45</sup> that the steps are in a reasonably safe condition,<sup>46</sup> and that the car will not be started until he has been given a reasonable opportunity to alight.<sup>47</sup> Negligence in going out onto platform before the train comes to a stop<sup>48</sup> and attempting to alight without a stepbox<sup>49</sup> is usually a question for the jury. A passenger does not assume the risk of injury in alighting in a particular way unless the danger is obvious or known.<sup>50</sup>

Leaving moving train or car<sup>51</sup> is not per se negligence<sup>52</sup> unless the danger is so great as to be obvious to one of ordinary prudence,<sup>53</sup> or warning has been given,<sup>54</sup> but it is usually a question for the jury,<sup>55</sup> especially if done under invitation.<sup>56</sup> Fact that a passenger is being carried beyond the street at which he desires to alight does not justify him in alighting from a moving car.<sup>57</sup>

levy v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 262, 96 S. W. 714.

Instruction making plaintiff guilty of negligence per se for delay in attempting to leave by locked door, if it was not customary to have it locked and defendant's servants did not know it was locked, properly refused. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Easton [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 833. Held to correctly submit question of negligence in failing to discover that rear door was locked and in attempting to alight from moving train. Id.

45. Is not conclusively negligent in alighting at place in fact unsafe. McGovern v. Interurban R. Co. [Iowa] 111 N. W. 412.

46. Unless she knows, or by exercise of reasonable care could know that they are defective. Smithers v. Wilmington City R. Co. [Del.] 67 A. 167.

47. Although conductor's arm is raised toward bell cord. Hurley v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 262, 96 S. W. 714.

48. Electric train. Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Chapman, 26 App. D. C. 472.

49. Negligence in alighting, as decedent did, knowing of absence of stepbox, held for jury. (Selman v. Gulf, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 1030), and instruction held erroneous as, in effect, telling jury that it was per se negligence (Id.)

50. Stepped straight out from car. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Bryant [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 237.

51. See 7 C. L. 576.

52. Burke v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co., 147 Mich. 172, 13 Det. Leg. N. 974, 110 N. W. 524; Newport News, etc., R. & Elec. Co. v. McCormick [Va.] 56 S. E. 281. *Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Passenger must see that car has stopped before alighting. Reiss v. Wilmington City Ry. Co. [Del.] 67 A. 153.

53. Dallas Consol. Elec. St. R. Co. v. Lasch [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 729; Turley v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., 127 Ga. 594, 56 S. E. 748. Knowingly stepped from train running sixteen miles per hour while encumbered with grip and umbrella. Hunter v. Louis- ville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 43 So. 802. Alighted in front of approaching car. Chicago City R. Co. v. Lundberg, 124 Ill. App. 144.

54. Betten v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 9 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 53.

55. Negligence held for jury: Alighting from train moving four miles per hour to avoid being carried beyond station. Turley v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., 127 Ga. 594, 56 S. E. 748.

Finding of negligence sustained. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wilson, 30 Ky. L. R. 1055, 100 S. W. 290; Hannestad v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 132 Iowa, 232, 109 N. W. 718. In stepping off into darkness, believing train had stopped, when he knew that brakeman with light was at other end of car. Bartle v. New York, etc., R. Co., 105 N. Y. S. 522. Where passenger persisted in alighting after discovering that street car had started. South Covington, etc., R. Co. v. Core, 29 Ky. L. R. 836, 96 S. W. 562. Evidence so conflicting as to whether plaintiff attempted to alight while train was moving as to make case for jury. Skean v. Schuylkill Valley Trac. Co., 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 558.

Instruction that alighting from moving train was not negligence unless the conditions and circumstances made it so, of which jury was judge, held misleading in that jury might infer that, as matter of law, general rule is that it was not negligence, and that circumstance had to make exception. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Booth [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 948, 97 S. W. 128.

56. Announcement of station is not invitation to alight until train stops. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Warren [C. C. A.] 149 F. 658. Held not guilty of negligence in alighting from slowly moving train, having been led to believe that train had stopped by opening of doors and statement of conductor that depot is "right there." Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Mullen, 120 Ill. App. 88.

57. Newport News, etc., R. & Elec. Co. v. McCormick [Va.] 56 S. E. 281.

58. See 7 C. L. 576.

59. Absence of customary depot lights, held not so suggestive that station had not been reached as to render one alighting at crossing stop negligent as matter of law. Wolf v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Wis.] 111 N. W. 514. Whether passenger properly assumed that she was expected to alight at stop before caboose reached depot from known custom for passengers so to do, held for jury. Southern R. Co. v. Burgess, 143 lieve a passenger from exercising reasonable diligence to ascertain if the next stop is in fact the station.<sup>60</sup> An agreement with the conductor to permit passenger to alight at an unusual place must be considered in passing on negligence in so alighting.<sup>61</sup>

Ala. 364, 42 So. 35. Negligence of one familiar with locality in stepping off at stop before reaching station, held for jury where station had been announced and night was very dark. Wolf v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Wis.] 111 N. W. 514. Passenger on interurban car does not assume risk in alighting at place more dangerous than usual stopping place where she does not know of added danger. McGovern v. Interurban Co. [Iowa] 111 N. W. 412.

60. Informed by conductor that next stop will be at station. Farrell v. Great Northern R. Co., 100 Minn. 361, 111 N. W. 388. And if person of ordinary faculties would know that it was not place intended for alighting he cannot recover. Id. Held negligent. Id. Negligence of woman unused to traveling in attempting to alight at stop before reaching station platform after trainman had announced station and called "all change," held for jury. Walford v. New York, etc., R. Co., 118 App. Div. 553, 102 N. Y. S. 1008.

61. Instruction ignoring agreement, held properly refused, there being evidence thereof. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Alberti [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 699.

62, 63. See 7 C. L. 577.

64. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Giboney, 30 Ky. L. R. 1005, 100 S. W. 216. Presence of piece of tobacco on stairway of station, causing injury, without proof that it was there sufficiently long to impute notice, does not render defendant liable. Kaplowitz v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 53 Misc. 646, 103 N. Y. S. 721.

65. One who, on finding all seats taken, decided to stay over and left train, leaving child to go with relatives, held not to have lost right to step to side of coach to receive her child through window upon his refusing to go without her. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Giboney, 30 Ky. L. R. 1005, 100 S. W. 216.

66. Where plaintiff testified that it was "quite a high step" from platform to steps of coach and defendant's employes stated it was 12 or 14 inches, negligence in not providing better platform was for jury. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Work [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 962. In action by one pushed by crowd under cars, question of negligence of defendant in not making adequate provision by way of railings, barriers, and policemen to protect passengers, held for the jury.

Cousineau v. Muskegon Trac. & L. Co., 145 Mich. 314, 13 Det. Leg. N. 436, 108 N. W. 720.

67. Instruction that defendant was not liable for accidents happening solely through such rush, properly refused. Beverley v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 507.

68. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Calhoun, 18 Okl. 75, 89 P. 207. Truck standing thereon. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Stevenson, 122 Ill. App. 654.

69. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Calhoun, 18 Okl. 75, 89 P. 207. Fact that there was no system of public lighting in municipality does not excuse. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Stevenson, 122 Ill. App. 654. Need only keep it sufficiently lighted to enable ordinary passenger to alight in safety, and instruction that it owed duty of so lighting that "plaintiff" could see, etc., held erroneous. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Cruise, 29 Ky. L. R. 914, 96 S. W. 821.

70. For one intending to become passenger though not yet passenger. Burke v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 683, 97 S. W. 981. Use of loose cradle track consisting of detached rails connecting with regular track for running cars onto ferry boat held not reasonably safe as matter of law. Id. Negligence held for jury in failing to guard bridge leading from vessel to wharf boat. Coney Island Co. v. Dennon [C. C. A.] 149 F. 687. Instruction that failure to have sufficient lights on wharf was "continuing negligence," held not erroneous where recovery was authorized only if injury proximately resulted. Ruffin v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 142 N. C. 120, 55 S. E. 86.

71. Question whether trains could be operated over them in usual and customary manner with reasonable safety held not test. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Boyer [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 1070. Negligently maintained heels too close to track. City Elec. R. Co. v. Salmon, 1 Ga. App. 491, 57 S. E. 926. Passing cars came into contact. Staples v. Rhode Island Suburban R. Co. [R. I.] 67 A. 431. Negligence in maintaining leaning trolley pole striking one on running board, held for jury. Pomeroy v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 507, 79 N. E. 764.

72. Held negligent in failing to guard or lock switch, it being opened by boy. Elgin, A. & So. Trac. Co. v. Wilson, 120 Ill. App. 371.

Co. v. Powell*, 127 Ga. 805, 56 S. E. 1006. Faulty construction of window resulting in sash coming down held for jury. Boice v. Ulster & D. R. Co., 105 N. Y. S. 83. Leaving vestibule door open and trap door raised held not negligence under circumstances. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Oleson [Ark.] 99 S. W. 385. Failure to equip ladies' dressing room in sleeper with handholds and seats held not negligence per se where car was constructed according to uniform pattern and had been operated for years without accident. Ozanne v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 151 F. 900. Instruction defining care owed mail clerk in providing suitable doors to car and keeping them in repair approved. Decker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 112 N. W. 901.

78. Evidence as to defective condition held to sustain finding of want of ordinary care. Ferguson v. Truax [Wis.] 110 N. W. 395. Evidence held insufficient to show defects in elevator or appliances. Belvedere Bldg. Co. v. Bryan, 103 Md. 514, 64 A. 44.

79. Negligence in fixing steamship berth without vertical protecting board held for jury. International Mercantile M. Co. v. Smith [C. C. A.] 145 F. 891.

80. Must use reasonable care and judgment in construction of steps. Traphagen v. Erie R. Co., 73 N. J. Law, 759, 64 A. 1072. Evidence held not to show negligence in construction of steps, they being of usual height. Id. Held not negligent in not discovering banana peel on car steps, it having been dropped there shortly before or after leaving preceding station, servants being otherwise engaged in meanwhile. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Rose [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 1094.

81. Sufficiency of platform gates and negligence in not closing same held for jury, brakeman being engaged momentarily in signaling following train. Boston & M. R. Co. v. Stockwell [C. C. A.] 146 F. 505. Instruction as to negligence in depositing or allowing to be deposited bag of tools on rear platform held erroneous where there was no evidence that defendant's servants deposited them or knew of their presence. Price v. St. Louis Transit Co., 125 Mo. App. 67, 102 S. W. 626.

82. Evidence of insufficiency of appliance to stop cable train on decline with cable out of grip held to render refusal of nonsuit proper. Roscoe v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 202 Mo. 576, 100 S. W. 32. Evidence of failure to provide proper means of holding grip of cable train to cable held sufficient to go to jury. Id.

83. Mere proof of inspection and that door in floor of car was found to be safe without proof as to character of inspection does not conclusively disprove negligence in maintaining defective trap door. Jordan v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 330, 99 S. W. 492. Held negligent in not discovering a cracked wheel. Lowenthal v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 117 La. 1007, 42 So. 483. Instructions as whole held correct and not open to objection that jury might infer that if defendant purchased of a reputable manufacturer, it had performed its duty in respect to new cars. Marshall v. Boston & W. St. R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 195.

84. Sleeping car company. Ozanne v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 151 F. 900.

86. Under Pen. Code 1895, §§ 526, 529, carrier must not permit them to intermingle. Hillman v. Georgia R. & Banking Co., 126 Ga. 814, 56 S. E. 68. Act April 4, 1905, (Acts 1905 p. 321, c. 150), held proper police regulation and not violative of Const. Tenn. art. 1, §§ 7, 8, and art. 11, § 8, and 4th, 5th, and 14th Amend. to Federal Const. as abridging privileges and immunities of citizens and depriving them of equal protection of laws (Morrison v. State [Tenn.] 95 S. W. 494), nor as depriving citizens of property, rights, or privileges, without due process of law in violation of Tenn. Const. art. 1, § 8, or 4th, 5th and 14th Amend. Federal Const., in that it requires one refusing to take seat assigned to leave car or be guilty of misdemeanor (Id.), nor unlawful delegation of police power to conductors in violation of Const. providing how officers shall be elected, in that they are vested with power to change line of division (Id.), and in excepting nurses tending children or helpless persons of other race from its provisions, it is not violative of Const. art. 11, § 8, as class legislation. (Id.).

87. Through passengers are interstate travelers, provided equal accommodations are furnished. Chiles v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 1232, 101 S. W. 386.

Pressure of business<sup>88</sup> or the fact that there are no negroes on the particular train<sup>89</sup> does not excuse failure to provide separate accommodations. The requirement of such statutes cannot be limited by custom,<sup>90</sup> and where a passenger is permitted to occupy the wrong compartment, the carrier becomes responsible for his presence.<sup>91</sup> Though a carrier may compel a passenger in the wrong car to leave the same, unnecessary force must not be used.<sup>92</sup>

§ 28. Operation and management of trains and other vehicles.<sup>93</sup>—The degree of care due in respect to other duties<sup>94</sup> must be observed in respect to all operations of the train, as in crossing the tracks of another carrier,<sup>95</sup> in passing places where passengers alight or disembark,<sup>96</sup> in remaining stationary while passengers are boarding or alighting,<sup>97</sup> in preventing collisions,<sup>98</sup> in discovering obstructions on the track,<sup>99</sup> in keeping its cars safe,<sup>1</sup> in managing the same,<sup>2</sup> in avoiding sudden

95. Held negligence: In attempting to cross in front of approaching train without effort to ascertain whether way was clear. Indianapolis Trac. & T. Co. v. Romans [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 1068. In following conductor who went ahead to railroad crossing so closely as not to be able to stop on warning. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Smith, 124 Ill. App. 627.

Held not negligence: In crossing ahead of switch engine approaching under control. Horton v. Houston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 467.

Instruction as to duty of street car employees before crossing railroad tracks held not to impose absolute duty to see that track was clear. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Nance [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 294.

96. Must approach with car under control where passengers are being discharged. Louisville City R. Co. v. Hudgins, 30 Ky. L. R. 316, 98 S. W. 275. Evidence held to support finding of negligence in so constructing station platform and operating engine at high speed as to injure passenger standing on edge of platform. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Adams, 127 Ga. 408, 56 S. E. 409.

97. See post, § 30.

98. As to passengers, motorman has no right to assume that one driving wagon parallel to tracks will not attempt to cross at "mid block." Strong v. Burlington Trac. Co. [Vt.] 66 A. 786. Slippery condition of rails does not meet presumption of negligence arising from collision where motorman could and should have allowed therefor. Goodloe v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 194, 96 S. W. 482.

Negligence held for jury: In attempting to pass wagon. Chicago Consol. Trac. Co. v. Schritter, 124 Ill. App. 578. In failing to discover wild car coming on cross track in time to evade it. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. McCollum, 122 Ill. App. 531. In action for injuries received in collision with wagon coming through opening in wall parallel with track held under evidence for jury whether defendant was negligent in approaching opening in manner it did and in failing to give warning to its servants of approach of team. Chicago City R. Co. v. Shreve, 226 Ill. 530, 80 N. E. 1049. Evidence that speed of car was not lessened as it approached street and that motorman was talking to another and not attentive to his duties held to make questions of negligence in colliding with team for the jury. Bamberg v. International R. Co., 53 Misc. 403, 103 N. Y. S. 297.

Evidence held to sustain finding of negligence in not timely checking speed of car upon seeing team about to cross track. Forstye v. Los Angeles R. Co., 149 Cal. 569, 87 P. 24.

Instruction held to properly submit issue of negligence in colliding with horse. Wynn v. Paducah City R. Co. [Ky.] 102 S. W. 824.

99. Negligence in not seeing boy place brick on track fifty feet in front of car and in not discovering it after it had been placed there in time to stop car held for jury. O'Gara v. St. Louis Transit Co., 204 Mo. 724, 103 S. W. 54. Instruction relieving motorman absolutely from liability in failing to discover brick placed on track ahead of car if he was putting car under control and sounding gong to warn children playing about tracks, held properly refused. 1. Not negligence per se to permit passenger's bag to be placed in aisle. Pitcher v. Old Colony St. R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 876. Right of carrier to remove luggage taken into passenger coach contrary to rules does not authorize it to do so in violent and abusive manner. Smith v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 85, 97 S. W. 1007.

2. Negligence held for jury: In operating elevator, under the evidence. Belvedere Bldg. Co. v. Bryan, 103 Md. 514, 64 A. 44. In closing door without seeing that plaintiff had cleared it. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mulder [Ala.] 42 So. 742. In failing to properly use and violent jerks,<sup>3</sup> in avoiding false appearance of danger,<sup>4</sup> in switching,<sup>5</sup> and in running at a proper and safe speed.<sup>6</sup> Where carrier has knowledge of a passenger's perilous position, he must operate the train with respect thereto.<sup>7</sup> Failure to run train on schedule time creates no liability in the absence of negligence<sup>8</sup> or contract duty.<sup>9</sup>

§ 29. The duty to protect passengers<sup>10</sup> generally renders the carrier liable absolutely for indignities<sup>11</sup> and torts to the person of a passenger by its employees,<sup>12</sup>

appliance to control cable train. Roscoe v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 202 Mo. 576, 101 S. W. 32. In failing to stop cable train before beginning descent of decline, according to instructions. Id. Negligence of porter in closing door on hand of one about to enter coach held for jury. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Neely [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 481.

The fact that rear fender of street car was down contrary to custom does not authorize inference of negligence. Whilt v. Public Service Corp. [N. J. Law] 64 A. 972.

3. Evidence that car "jumped" without description of extent or manner held insufficient to show negligence, there being evidence that power was off. Adams v. New York City R. Co., 116 App. Div. 315, 101 N. Y. S. 510. Negligence in turning on full force and causing car to give jerk while one ordered from front platform was working his way along running board held for jury. Budner v. Public Service Corp. [N. J. Law] 65 A. 893.

4. While explosion in controller box is of such nature as likely to create panic and cause passengers to jump from car, defendant is liable for injuries so received though explosion is harmless in itself. Williamson v. St. Louis Transit Co., 202 Mo. 345, 100 S. W. 1072. Evidence held to show that defendant had previous knowledge of such explosions and that they were of nature to frighten passengers riding on platform. Id. Where it is matter of common knowledge that explosion in controller box of electric car is of nature to frighten passengers on front platform, evidence that it frightened other passengers is not essential to recovery for injuries received in jumping from platform during panic. Id. Instructions relieving defendant if such explosion could not have been prevented held properly modified so as to submit negligence in allowing plaintiff to be in close proximity to controller box. Id.

5. Switching of cars into another with such force as to bump it into passenger coach though brakes were set held negligence. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Billingsley, 79 Ark. 335, 96 S. W. 557.

6. Whether given rate of speed is negligent depends upon circumstances. Elgin, A. & So. Trac. Co. v. Wilson, 120 Ill. App. 371. Negligence of given speed depends upon whether, under circumstances, it involves unnecessary dangers, and not whether servants ought to have known that car was likely to lurch more violently than incident to ordinary operation. Partelow v. Newton, etc., R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 894. Rule limiting speed while rounding curves may be considered in determining whether higher speed was negligent. Id.

Held question for jury: High speed in view of crowded condition of car. Coffey v. Omaha, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 112 N. W. 589. Evidence that car left track because of high rate of speed around curve. Ludinsky v.

New York City R. Co., 53 Misc. 569, 103 N. Y. S. 711.

Held negligent: Running street car at such speed as not to be able to stop before entering open switch and colliding with standing car. Stevens v. New Jersey, etc., R. Co., [N. J. Law] 65 A. 874. Approaching switch by street car at a speed of 30 miles per hour. Elgin, A. & So. Trac. Co. v. Wilson, 120 Ill. App. 371. Such speed around curve as to throw child from its seat. Indianapolis Trac. & T. Co. v. Beckman [Ind. App.] 81 N. E. 82. Description of the speed as "swift" and far in passing over a cross over switch as "quite violent," "terrible," "awful," "very severe," and "unexpected," held not to show negligence. Foley v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 332, 79 N. E. 765.

7. Must use care proportionate to danger. Van Horn v. St. Louis Transit Co., 198 Mo. 481, 95 S. W. 326. Riding on steps. Chicago Consolidated Traction Co. v. Schritter, 124 Ill. App. 578. Where speed was dangerous in view of passenger's known perilous position, it is immaterial that it was only ordinary speed. Van Horn v. St. Louis Transit Co., 198 Mo. 481, 95 S. W. 326. Evidence held to authorize submission of negligence in failing to timely stop car after discovering plaintiff's perilous position. Foland v. Southwestern Mo. Elec. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 284, 95 S. W. 958.

8. Gerardy v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 52 Misc. 466, 102 N. Y. S. 548. Proof of delay due to washout without proof that washout was caused by defendant's negligence does not show negligence. Id.

9. Mere sale of ticket does not create contract to have train on schedule time. Gerardy v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 52 Misc. 466, 102 N. Y. S. 548. Neither ticket agent or conductor has authority to make special contract to carry on schedule time, hence statement that train would make up lost time did not create contract so to do. Id.

10. See 7 C. L. 583.

11. Refusal to stop car upon request may constitute insulting conduct. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Lambkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 574.

12. Immaterial whether servant was acting within scope of employment. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Bean [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 721. Unprovoked assaults of brakeman. St. Louis, etc., Co. v. Dowgiallo [Ark.] 101 S. W. 412. Liable for insulting acts and language of conductor without regard to whether such acts and language were "negligently done." San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 554.

Evidence held to authorize verdict for plaintiff: For being pushed off by conductor from moving train. Atlanta, etc., R. Co. v. Potts [Ga.] 57 S. E. 686. That, before plaintiff had time to produce fare, conductor caught him by shoulder and called him a G—d—bum. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Fussell [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 861, 97 though in some states they must be acting within the scope of their authority,<sup>13</sup> unless committed in self-defense<sup>14</sup> or in discharge of duty,<sup>15</sup> mere abusive language not justifying an assault.<sup>16</sup> While a carrier must exercise a high,<sup>17</sup> if not the highest, degree of care and diligence<sup>18</sup> to anticipate and protect passengers from indignities and assaults by third persons,<sup>19</sup> and to that end must employ sufficient servants,<sup>20</sup> it

13. Assault. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Lambkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 574. Unjustifiable assault or arrest "through mistake of identity." Tolchester Beach Imp. Co. v. Scharnagl [Md.] 65 A. 916. Superior officer of conductor who has right to take charge of car at any point has authority to order arrest of passengers, hence company is liable for wrongful arrest by him. Carmody v. St. Louis Transit Co., 122 Mo. App. 338, 99 S. W. 495. Not liable for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution instituted by conductor beyond scope of employment and unauthorized. Dobbins v. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co., 79 Ark. 85, 95 S. W. 794. Question whether officer commissioned under § 403, art. 23, Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, for protection of carrier's property, and who undertakes to enforce its rules, is employe of carrier and acts within scope of his employment in making arrest, held for jury. Tolchester Beach Imp. Co. v. Scharnagl [Md.] 65 A. 916.

14. Not liable for assault committed in self-defense. Reed v. New York, etc., R. Co., 116 App. Div. 709, 102 N. Y. S. 19. Force exercised on plaintiff, held justified by actual or apparent danger of brakeman from assault by plaintiff. Friar v. Orange & N. W. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 274.

15. Where intoxicated passenger on being asked for his pistol which he was brandishing gave it to his wife who placed it under her, brakeman did not commit assault by reaching under her for it. Friar v. Orange, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 274. Refusal of passenger to remove tools from aisle of car as required by rule of carrier held not to justify profane and abuse language used by brakeman. Smith v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 85, 97 S. W. 1007.

16. Colman v. Yazoo, etc., R. Co., [Miss.] 43 So. 473. Liable for insult and assault though provoked by passenger. Danziger v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 104 N. Y. S. 845. May be shown in mitigation of damage. Mitchell v. United R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 1, 102 S. W. 661. Unless cooling period has elapsed. Instruction properly refused for failing to limit. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Lambkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 574.

18. Grimley v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 1 Ga. App. 557, 57 S. E. 943. Where carrier knows, or should know, that actions of passenger threaten safety of other passengers, it must exercise highest care to insure safety of such other passengers. McWilliams v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 Mich. 216, 13 Det. Leg. N. 722, 109 N. W. 272. Carrier must use highest degree of care, consistent with nature of its business, to maintain such reasonable regulations as will protect passengers against misconduct of fellow passengers which may be anticipated and guarded against. Kuhlen v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 341, 79 N. E. 815. Failure to protect to full extent of power when he has knowledge of facts requiring interference renders carrier liable. Hillman v. Georgia R. & Banking Co., 126 Ga. 814, 56 S. E. 68.

19. Passengers need not be threatened with "serious" danger to require protection. Hillman v. Georgia R. & Banking Co., 126 Ga. 814, 56 S. E. 68. Fact that abusive passenger desisted upon request is no defense if such request was not timely made. Id.

Held for jury: Whether carrier should have anticipated that intoxicated passenger who had been shooting pistol on train would jump off and shoot into coach. Grimley v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 1 Ga. App. 557, 57 S. E. 943. Whether conductor who knew that drunken passenger was firing revolver loaded with blank cartridges was required to disarm him or to keep him under surveillance. McWilliams v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 146 Mich. 216, 13 Det. Leg. N. 722, 109 N. W. 272. Negligence of carrier in failing to protect negro from assault in waiting room and on train. McCardell v. Gulf, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 941. Whether defendant had exercised reasonable care in protecting its passengers at its station from boisterous and disorderly crowd of students. Kennedy v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 623. Held that there was evidence for jury whether carrier should have anticipated injury for crowd rush hour. Kuhlen v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 341, 79 N. E. 815.

Evidence held to show that altercation must have been heard by conductor and was of nature to require interference. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Birchfield, 105 Va. 809, 54 S. E. 879.

Instruction as to duty to protect passengers from boisterous conduct and obscene and vulgar language, held sufficient. Williams v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 663, 96 S. W. 307. As to conductor's duty to interfere in altercation though he believed one participant to be special officer of carrier, held favorable to defendant. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Birchfield, 105 Va. 809, 54 S. E. 879. Duty of carrier to protect passengers from injury by boisterous and disorderly crowd of students, held properly submitted by instructions. Kennedy v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 623. Not error to fail to instruct that use of obscene and vulgar language in presence of ladies constitutes misconduct. Williams v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 663, 96 S. W. 307. Instruction, in action for assault by baggagemaster, that if plaintiff's brother had assaulted baggagemaster and latter was acting in self-defense, or it reasonably appeared to him that it was necessary to defend himself, etc., held to require too low degree of care. Hartley v. Pecos Valley, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1123.

is not liable for assaults which could not have thereby been anticipated.<sup>21</sup> Carrier owes no duty to protect passengers from arrest by proper police officers,<sup>22</sup> but an arrest by the conductor without probable cause<sup>23</sup> renders the carrier liable. Carrier must exercise due care to furnish opportunity<sup>24</sup> to passengers to procure food where delayed through its default,<sup>25</sup> and must not knowingly<sup>26</sup> permit a servant afflicted with a contagious disease to expose passengers.<sup>27</sup> While a carrier owes no duty to warn passengers of obvious dangers,<sup>28</sup> it may become its duty to inform them of unusual dangers.<sup>29</sup> Where carrier undertakes to give information, it must do so correctly.<sup>30</sup>

§ 30. *Taking up and setting down passengers. Mass. 341, 79 N. E. 815. Negligence in failing to provide more men to prevent such crowding as endangered passengers at certain hours, held for jury. Id.

21. Held not liable for injury from wad shot from blank cannon cartridge, such shooting having been going on all day without injury. Ormandroyd v. Fitchburg, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 130, 78 N. E. 739. Evidence that person who threw missile into car was standing between tracks near stopping place waving his hands with something in them, held insufficient to take case to jury. Woas v. St. Louis Transit Co., 198 Mo. App. 664, 96 S. W. 1017. Not liable for permitting intoxicated person to board where evidence shows no appearance of intoxication until his fare was demanded. Brehony v. Pottsville Union Trac. Co. [Pa.] 66 A. 1066.

22. Bowden v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 56 S. E. 558. Surrender to police officer upon demand of key to closet in which passenger had locked himself, nor delay of train on account of arrest, held not an abetting of his arrest. Id.

23. Fact that one was riding beyond destination and refused to pay fare, held to constitute no offense, and hence arrest therefor was without probable cause. Davis v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 61 W. Va. 246, 56 S. E. 400.

24. Fact that opportunity was sufficient to enable ordinary passengers to obtain food is no defense where passenger because of weather was unable to take infant to boarding place. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 653.

25. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 653.

26. Evidence held to show that agent had small pox and knew it when he exposed passengers by presenting himself at window to sell tickets. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Raney [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 589. His knowledge was knowledge of carrier though he was not principal agent at station. Id.

27. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Raney [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 589.

28. Of space between cars. Hogan v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 198. Assent without warning to attempt to change seats by stepping out onto running board, held not negligence where change could be made with safety by use of proper care. Tietz v. International R. Co., 186 N. Y. 347, 78 N. E. 1083.

29. Stage attempting to pass team at dangerous place on mountain road. Dinnigan v. Peterson, 3 Cal. App. 764, 87 P. 218.

30. Where carrier knows of quarantine and undertakes to give information, it is liable for failing to inform as to a quarantine which will interrupt journey. Hassel-tine v. Southern R. Co., 75 S. C. 141, 55 S. E. 142.

31. See 7 C. L. 584.

32. Instruction as to duty owed boarding passenger, held not objectionable as placing absolute duty on carrier as matter of law to stop trains reasonably sufficient time to enable passengers to enter cars. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Fink [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 204.

33. Starting of car. Speer v. West Jersey & S. R. Co. [N. J. Law] 65 A. 896. Ordinary care is such care as person of ordinary prudence would exercise under similar or same circumstances. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Hansen, 125 Ill. App. 153. Instruction requiring such care as person of ordinary "skill" would "usually" exercise, held erroneous. Id. Liable if passenger is invited to alight at place more hazardous than that at which car could have conveniently stopped. McGovern v. Interurban R. Co. [Iowa] 111 N. W. 412.

34. Must exercise degree of care of very prudent and cautious person. International, etc., R. Co. v. Tasby [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1030. Under Civil Code 1895, § 2266, carrier must exercise extraordinary care and diligence in reception of passengers. Georgia R. & Elec. Co. v. Cole, 1 Ga. App. 33, 57 S. E. 1026. Must exercise degree of care which is commensurate with circumstances and danger to be apprehended, and where aged and infirm man notifies conductor as to point at which he wishes to get off, and adds caution against starting car before he is off, more special attention is demanded. Toledo, Bowling Green & So. Trac. Co. v. McFall, § Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 271. Instruction that if car was suddenly jerked forward when plaintiff was alighting she could recover, as modified by statement that carriers are not insurers, but owe highest degree of care to deliver safely, held correct. Birmingham R. Light & Power Co. v. King [Ala.] 42 So. 612.

35. Court takes judicial notice that stopping of street car at crossing is special invitation for passengers to board though car is crowded. Baskett v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 123 Mo. App. 725, 101 S. W. 138. Instruction as to liability for suddenly stopping car, throwing alighting passenger, held not objectionable as imposing duty owed alighting passengers when defendant did not know actually or constructively that one was alighting. Savannah Elec. Co. v. Mullikin, 126 Ga. 722, 55 S. E. 945.

<sup>48</sup>. Failing to bring train to full stop, carrier is liable for resulting injuries, es-reasonably safe place<sup>50</sup> and proper means provided<sup>51</sup> to enable passengers to disembark, and must be held until by the exercise of due diligence they can alight in safety.<sup>52</sup> Conductor may contract to put passenger off at an intermediate point.<sup>53</sup> The carrier, however, has no right to assume that they are off because a reasonable time to alight has been afforded,<sup>54</sup> but must ascertain the fact,<sup>55</sup> looking to both pecially where speed is suddenly increased while passenger is alighting. Turley v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., 127 Ga. 594, 56 S. E. 748. Negligence of defendant in directing passenger to alight from moving train, held for jury under proper instructions. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Leamons [Ark.] 102 S. W. 363. Evidence held to sustain finding of negligence. Id.

49. Must anticipate that passenger may attempt to alight after car has so slackened speed as to make it safe to do so. Negligence to suddenly increase speed. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co. v. Doyle, 79 Ark. 379, 96 S. W. 353.

50. Ran by platform and compelled plaintiff to alight at unusual place. Brooks v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. [Pa.] 66 A. 872. Duty to furnish safe place is not relieved by knowledge on part of passenger that it has not been discharging such duty. McGovern v. Interurban R. Co. [Iowa] 111 N. W. 412.

Held negligence to stop street car on curve so that alighting passengers could step into gutter. Maxwell v. Fresno City R. Co. [Cal. App.] 89 P. 367. To fail to keep street repaired as required by law, and to invite plaintiff to alight at unsafe place without warning. Miller v. International R. Co., 52 Misc. 344, 102 N. Y. S. 254.

Negligence held for jury: In not providing place to alight except on filling between tracks which was about of height of ties and having number of holes. Truesdell v. Erie R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 243.

Not liable for yielding of ground causing fall, there being nothing to apprise defendant of fact that it was not all right. Rose v. Boston & N. St. R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 580. Street car company held not liable for condition of street. Stepped into gutter. Thompson v. Gardner, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 133, 78 N. E. 584.

51. Negligence held for jury where evidence showed that step of car was seventeen to twenty-one inches from platform and that no step box was furnished though it was dark. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mount [Ky.] 161 S. W. 1182.

52. Bell v. Central Elec. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 660, 103 S. W. 144; Louisville, etc., Trac. Co. v. Leaf [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 1066.

Carrier must stop reasonable time to allow passenger to alight. Reiss v. Wilmington City R. Co. [Del.] 67 A. 153; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Calhoun, 18 Okl. 75, 89 P. 207. Instruction held to relieve carrier if train was stopped a reasonable time. Louisville R. Co. v. Owens, 29 Ky. L. R. 1294, 97 S. W. 356.

Premature starting may render carrier liable without regard to manner of starting. Choctaw, etc., R. Co. v. Hickey [Ark.] 99 S. W. 839; Southern R. Co. v. Burgess, 143 Ala. 364, 42 So. 25. Starting of car with sufficient force to throw alighting passenger renders carrier liable without regard to whether starting was violent or not. Green v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 647, 99 S. W. 28. Where impetus of alighting passenger's motion and sudden starting of car carried her off without her volition, it is immaterial whether act of stepping off occurred an instant before or after jerk. Lake St. El. R. Co. v. Craig, 126 Ill. App. 361.

Evidence held to show negligence as matter of law in starting car. Pittsburgh R. Co. v. Bloomer [C. C. A.] 146 F. 720.

Held negligence to suddenly start car while passenger is alighting (Ghio v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 710, 103 S. W. 142), under express or implied invitation (Burke v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co., 147 Mich. 172, 13 Det. Leg. N. 974, 110 N. W. 524), especially where conductor saw plaintiff (Southern R. Co. v. Dean [Ga.] 57 S. E. 702). To suddenly and violently move train without warning. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Deason, 29 Ky. L. R. 1259, 96 S. W. 1115. To move train to enable engine to take water. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Kennedy [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 653.

Evidence held to make question of negligence for jury. Quincy Horse R. & Carrying Co. v. Rankin, 123 Ill. App. 472; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Downs, 122 Ill. App. 545. Evidence of plaintiff and another that car started before she had time to fully alight and while she was stepping off. Weiller v. New York City R. Co., 51 Misc. 668, 100 N. Y. S. 1011. Evidence that plaintiff who had stepped down onto steps of car as it slowed down was thrown therefrom by jerk, though there was no evidence that jerk was unusual. Louisville R. Co. v. Williams, 30 Ky. L. R. 493, 99 S. W. 245. Starting of elevated train while plaintiff was moving toward door, in view of Railroad Law, Laws 1890, p. 1126, c. 565, § 138, providing that such trains shall not start until every passenger who has manifested intention to alight has done so. Frauhuf v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 52 Misc. 135, 101 N. Y. S. 781. Evidence that conductor started car with knowledge that thirteen year old child was alighting and was burdened with heavy bundle, held to make question of gross negligence for jury. Louisville R. Co. v. Owens, 29 Ky. L. R. 1294, 97 S. W. 356. Evidence that engineer suddenly and violently backed train without warning at place where passengers might be alighting, held evidence of wantonness. Hiers v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 75 S. C. 311, 55 S. E. 457.

53. Williamson v. Central of Georgia R. Co., 127 Ga. 125, 56 S. E. 119.

54. Murphy v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 269, 102 S. W. 64; Bell v. Central Elec. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 660, 103 S. W. 144; Green v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 647, 99 S. W. 28. While not bound to see that passenger has in fact alighted, carrier is not justified in starting after having merely waited a reasonable time. Millmore v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 445.

55. Louisville R. Co. v. Pulliam, 30 Ky. L. R. 1225, 101 S. W. 295; Snipes v. Norfolk & So. R. Co. [N. C.] 56 S. E. 477. No excuse sides of the car if passengers may so alight.<sup>56</sup> On the other hand, passengers must make known their intention to alight.<sup>57</sup> Where stop is made at an unusual place to permit passengers to alight<sup>58</sup> or the carrier has knowledge that they frequently alight, or are in fact alighting,<sup>59</sup> thereat, it must exercise the same care as at regular stopping places, though such stop is in violation of a rule<sup>60</sup> or an ordinance.<sup>61</sup> While a carrier owes no general duty to assist passengers to board or to alight, such duty may arise under special circumstances,<sup>62</sup> as where the passenger is physically weak,<sup>63</sup> or the steps unusually dangerous,<sup>64</sup> and, where it unnecessarily undertakes to render assistance, it must exercise due care.<sup>65</sup> Carrier owes no duty to observe passenger's condition to ascertain whether he needs assistance.<sup>66</sup> Where a passenger is in a helpless condition, he must not only be assisted from the train but must be taken to a place of safety.<sup>67</sup> While a carrier need not warn as to dangers generally known,<sup>68</sup> in the absence of special circumstances,<sup>69</sup> its high duty as a carrier that he was engaged in car. Hurley v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 262, 96 S. W. 714. It is duty of brakeman on elevated road to know whether passengers are attempting to alight when he closes gate. McGarry v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 194. Words "not knowing" or "having no reasonable grounds to suspect" or "knew" or "know" or "had reasonable grounds to suspect," held legal equivalents when used in instructions relating to knowledge or want of knowledge on part of conductor that passenger was boarding when he started train. Choctaw, etc., R. Co. v. Hickey [Ark.] 99 S. W. 839.

56. Especially where passengers are in habit of boarding on wrong side. Costello v. St. Louis Transit Co., 119 Mo. App. 391, 96 S. W. 425.

Held negligent in not ascertaining whether people were alighting from side away from station, conditions being same on each side, and people being in habit of so alighting. Hodges v. Southern Pac. Co., 3 Cal. App. 307, 86 P. 620.

57. Plaintiff's conduct in arising from her seat, but without attempting to get down to running board or to give signal, held insufficient to charge conductor with notice of intention to alight. Keenan v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 118 App. Div. 56, 103 N. Y. S. 61.

58. Murphy v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 269, 102 S. W. 64.

59. Irrespective of reason of stop. Parks v. St. Louis Transit Co., 119 Mo. App. 445, 96 S. W. 426. Stop before crossing railroad tracks. Thomas v. Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. [Pa.] 67 A. 207. Switch stop. South Covington & C. St. R. Co. v. Core, 29 Ky. L. R. 836, 96 S. W. 562.

60. Dreyfus v. St. Louis & S. R. Co., 124 Mo. App. 585, 102 S. W. 53.

61. Habitually so stopped. Parks v. St. Louis Transit Co., 119 Mo. App. 445, 96 S. W. 426.

62. Having failed to furnish suitable platform and to properly light grounds, and having permitted steps to become icy, negligence in failing to assist passengers to board, held for jury. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Work [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 962.

Held negligence to fail to assist passenger incumbered with bundles where step was twenty-five or thirty inches from platform. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Kennedy [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 653.

63. Carrier accepting passenger known to be physically incapable of caring for himself must render such special assistance as his condition requires. Williams v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 43 So. 576. In action for wrongful treatment of plaintiff and invalid daughter, instruction that carrier owed duty of exercising such degree of care as would reasonably insure safety of passengers in view of physical condition, held proper and not objectionable as making carrier insurer. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Coppwood [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 354, 96 S. W. 102. Where conductor failed to discover one-armed man's condition through indifference as to who passenger might be, such fact may be considered in determining whether failure to observe his condition was willful. Talbert v. Charleston & W. C. R. Co., 75 S. C. 136, 55 S. E. 138. Evidence that defendant's servants saw plaintiff, an old and feeble woman, with one arm in sling and heavy telescope in other hand, held to authorize submission of negligence in failing to assist her to board. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Arnold [Ky.] 102 S. W. 322.

64. Negligence in failing to assist young robust woman to alight from slippery steps, held for jury. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Flory [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 200.

65. Liable for negligence. Williams v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 43 So. 576; Hanlon v. Central R. Co. [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 846.

66. Instruction that it was duty to assist if passenger's feebleness was "apparent," held erroneous. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Cruse, 29 Ky. L. R. 914, 96 S. W. 821.

67. Negligence in leaving intoxicated passenger near top steps of station platform, held for the jury. Black v. New York, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 448, 79 N. E. 797. Where at transfer point conductor took drunken but not helpless passenger to safe place and told him to remain there, it fully discharged duty owed him. Thixton's Ex'r v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 29 Ky. L. R. 910, 96 S. W. 548.

68. Existence of gutter similar to those generally maintained. Thompson v. Gardner, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 133, 78 N. E. 854.

69. Where passenger followed conductor out onto platform after he announced station and passed down onto steps, held that it became duty to warn her that train had not stopped, it being dark and car moving smoothly. Blue Grass Trac. Co. v. Skillman [Ky.] 102 S. W. 809.

may require it to give warnings<sup>70</sup> of special and unusual dangers.<sup>71</sup> It is not negligence to back into station where passengers are warned.<sup>72</sup>

§ 32. Remedies and procedure.<sup>82</sup>—Suit may be brought in the county where the cause of action accrues,<sup>83</sup> and must be timely instituted.<sup>84</sup> Where the carrier defaults in respect to a duty imposed by law as well as by contract, recovery may be had in an action ex delicto or ex contractu.<sup>85</sup> Trespass lies for wrongful ejection.<sup>86</sup> Attorney's fees may be recovered against carriers under the statutes of some states.<sup>87</sup>

70. Where warning was almost simultaneous with starting of car and too short to be of avail, it does not constitute notice, and instruction may assume that no notice was given. Green v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 647, 99 S. W. 28. Warning given in such manner as would naturally be heard by one paying ordinary attention to what was going on about him is sufficient. Wertheimer v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 52 Misc. 540, 102 N. Y. S. 706.

71. Negligence held for jury in failing to adopt means to prevent alighting from wrong side or to give warning. Ruffin v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 142 N. C. 120, 55 S. E. 86. Failure to warn passenger that car was on wrong track, and hence to guard against trolley poles while on running board. Indianapolis Trac. & T. Co. v. Richey [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 170. In backing into station at night, contrary to custom until shortly prior thereto, without warning against alighting on wrong side. Ruffin v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 142 N. C. 120, 55 S. E. 86. Where train has stopped reasonable time to allow passengers to alight, carrier owes no duty to give warning of starting unless it knows that passengers are alighting. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Booth [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 948, 97 S. W. 128. General instruction that it is negligence to start without warning held erroneous. Id.

72. Alighted on wrong side. Ruffin v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 142 N. C. 120, 55 S. E. 86.

74. See Master and Servant, 8 C. L. 840.

75. See Railroads, 8 C. L. 1590; Street Railways, 8 C. L. 2004.

76. Evidence that plaintiff told conductor of passenger's need of assistance and had been requested to assist her, held to show knowledge that plaintiff intended to alight. Southern R. Co. v. Patterson [Ala.] 41 So. 964.

Evidence held not to show knowledge. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wilson, 30 Ky. L. R. 1055, 100 S. W. 290. Fact that ticket agent knew that plaintiff purchased half-fare ticket for child with her, but did not purchase one for herself, and that she stated that she was sending children to their mother, held insufficient to charge him with notice that she was going aboard train to assist them. Id.

77. Southern R. Co. v. Patterson [Ala.] 41 So. 964. Must hold train until such person in exercise of reasonable care can alight in safety. Bond v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 207, 99 S. W. 30.

78. Held not negligent as matter of law in alighting from starting train. Southern R. Co. v. Patterson [Ala.] 41 So. 964. Held guilty of negligence in rushing out onto platform in such haste as not to be able to stop on discovering that train was moving too fast to alight therefrom. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Edmondson [Ga.] 57 S. E. 877.

79. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Henry [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 636. Evidence that cars were backed into private car with such force as to demolish platform of caboose, held to show negligence. Id.

80. Lindsey v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 26 App. D. C. 503. U. S. Rev. St. § 4002, 4005 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2719, 2723), imposes duty upon carriers to properly heat postal cars, and any clerk injured by failure so to do may maintain action. Id.

81. Under Act Pa. April 4, 1868, no recovery can be had for death resulting from negligence of trainmen in operation of train. Scott v. Pennsylvania Co., 151 F. 931.

82. See 7 C. L. 587.

83. Where passenger boarded train in Tennessee, but on account of crowd was unable to get into train, and after passing over line into Georgia was pushed from car by one thrown against him by sudden jerk of car, the cause of action occurred in latter state. Parris v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co. [Ga.] 57 S. E. 692. See Venue and Place of Trial, 8 C. L. 2236.

84. Action for ejection is not within Kirby's Dig. § 5065, requiring actions for assault and battery to be brought within one year but within § 5064, prescribing three years' limitation for all other actions on case. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Mynott [Ark.] 102 S. W. 380.

85. Both actions available: Negligent failure to stop for passenger. Williams v. Carolina, etc., R. Co. [N. C.] 57 S. E. 216. Negligently issued invalid transfer subsequently dishonored. Montgomery Trac. Co. v. Fitzpatrick [Ala.] 43 So. 136. Smallpox patient

Pleading.<sup>88</sup>—The general rules of pleading apply.<sup>89</sup> The petition must be definite and certain<sup>90</sup> and allege the place of accident,<sup>91</sup> the relation of carrier and passenger,<sup>92</sup> a direct averment being sufficient,<sup>93</sup> and that plaintiff was on a car used for passengers<sup>94</sup> and under the control of defendant.<sup>95</sup> The complaint must specify wherein defendant was negligent,<sup>96</sup> and, while an allegation of negligence on being transported under contract between carrier and county court may sue on such contract or in tort for breach of duty arising from relation of passenger and carrier. Jenkins v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 61 W. Va. 597, 57 S. E. 48.

Construed as ex delicto: Action for injuries resulting from negligent delay. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Redeker [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 362. Petition construed ex delicto, purchase of ticket, paying of passage, and delivery of ticket to carrier being alleged to show duty. King v. Southern R. Co. [Ga.] 57 S. E. 507.

86. Fact servants were authorized to make ejectment does not make their acts lawful as far as they are concerned so as to render case, and not trespass, proper. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Brethauer, 125 Ill. App. 204.

87. In action based on common-law negligence, attorney's fees cannot be recovered under statute authorizing such recovery for violation of any law regulating transportation of freight or passengers, such act being valid only as to violations of statutory law. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Knight [Ark.] 99 S. W. 684.

89. Complaint for premature starting of car, held not demurrable on ground that averments were not alleged as facts. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 43 So. 841. Complaint for premature starting of car, held not demurrable as joining count in trespass with one in case. Id.

90. Allegation that "in her attempts to get out of place where defendant had carelessly and negligently left her she fell into hole, badly wrenching her side and back, causing her great pain and suffering," held indefinite and uncertain. Waldrup v. Central of Georgia R. Co., 127 Ga. 359, 56 S. E. 439. Complaint that when plaintiff stepped down onto step to alight motorman negligently started car, thereby precipitating plaintiff into street, held sufficiently specific without alleging whether car had come to full stop. Louisville & S. I. Trac. Co. v. Leaf [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 1066. Complaint held not objectionable as vague and uncertain. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. King [Ala.] 42 So. 612. Premature starting of car. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 43 So. 841.

91. Allegation that plaintiff was injured while on defendant's car, which operated its cars in city of Birmingham, is sufficient, since court will take judicial notice that city is wholly within Jefferson County. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 42 So. 1024.

92. Averments held sufficient: To show acceptance as passenger. Williams v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 43 So. 576. Positive averment as well as facts alleged. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. Wise [Ala.] 42 So. 821. Allegations that, on certain day, plaintiff purchased a ticket entitling him to ride as passenger between certain points, and that he boarded train at one point to go to other, etc. Pittsburgh, etc., R. v. Halslup [Ind.] 79 N. E. 1035.

93. Need not allege evidentiary facts establishing relation, as payment of fare, etc. Indianapolis St. R. Co. v. Ray, 167 Ind. 236, 78 N. E. 978.

94. Allegations of equipment of car, and that it was known as summer or open car, held to sufficiently aver that it was one used for passengers. Indianapolis St. R. Co. v. Ray, 167 Ind. 236, 78 N. E. 978. Where petition fails to show whether plaintiff was passenger on freight or passenger train, defendant is entitled to information thereon upon special demurrer. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Powell, 127 Ga. 805, 56 S. E. 1006.

95. Allegation that road was being operated by defendant, and that car was "one of the defendant's road," held to sufficiently allege that car was under control of defendant. Indianapolis St. R. Co. v. Ray, 167 Ind. 236, 78 N. E. 978.

96. Particular averments held sufficient: That defendant while running car at rate of six miles per hour suddenly stopped it so as to cause violent and sudden shock sufficient to throw plaintiff from car. Latimer v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 103 S. W. 1102. General allegation that defendant through its servants so carelessly and improperly ran, managed and operated its car that collision occurred. Chicago City R. Co. v. Shreve, 226 Ill. 530, 80 N. E. 1049. That banana peel was left on steps of car for more than an hour, and that by exercise of ordinary care defendant might have discovered and removed same. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Rose [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 1094. Allegation of derailment of train sufficiently charges negligence without averment of cause thereof. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Gracia [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 198. That collision occurred wholly on account of negligence of defendants in construction, equipment, operation, and control of railroad and trains thereon, sufficiently charges each act of negligence. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Callahan [Ind. App.] 81 N. E. 670. That defendant so negligently conducted itself that, while plaintiff was alighting, train was jolted and plaintiff caused to fall, under Code 1896, § 3285. Southern R. Co. v. Burgess, 143 Ala. 364, 42 So. 35. In action for injuries from shock received from electric plate in floor of car, allegation that shock was caused by negligence of defendant in negligently constructing, maintaining, and operating train. McRae v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 562, 102 S. W. 1032. Under Code 1896, § 3441, requiring street cars to stop before crossing railroad tracks, and not to proceed until the way is known to be clear, allegation that operatives of car negligently ran same on railroad crossing without first knowing that track was clear is not objectionable as insufficient attempt to particularize defendant's negligence. Montgomery St. R. Co. v. Lewis the part of the carrier is sufficient to embrace negligence of servants,<sup>97</sup> yet if plaintiff attempts to aver negligence on the part of the latter, he must allege the relationship<sup>98</sup> and that they were acting within the scope of their employment.<sup>99</sup> While a designation of a servant's official capacity is sufficient without naming him,<sup>1</sup> yet, where notice to an agent is charged, he must be so designated as to show his authority to receive the same.<sup>2</sup> An accepted ticket in an action ex delicto need not be described with particularity.<sup>3</sup> In an action for forcible ejection, it must appear that the departure was not voluntary,<sup>4</sup> and in all actions that the carrier's default was the proximate cause of the injury complained of.<sup>5</sup> That the car stopped at a regular stopping place to permit plaintiff to alight,<sup>6</sup> and that others were present when the insulting language was used by the conductor toward plaintiff,<sup>7</sup> may be shown though not alleged. The sufficiency<sup>8</sup> and construction<sup>9</sup> of particular pleadings are treated in the notes.

[Ala.] 41 So. 736. In action for injuries received in collision between car and wagon driven through wall parallel with track, allegations that such opening was connected with street, and that "long prior to, and at the time and place in question, said opening and roadway was used by teams and wagons," held to sufficiently allege duty to protect plaintiff where objection is raised by motion in arrest of judgment. Chicago City R. Co. v. Shreve, 226 Ill. 530, 80 N. E. 1049.

Held insufficient: General averment that defendant was moving car negligently and carelessly, thereby throwing plaintiff, etc. Riedel v. Wilmington City R. Co., 5 Pen. [Del.] 572, 64 A. 257.

97. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 42 So. 1024.

98. Held to sufficiently allege relation of master and servant between carrier and motorman and conductor. Indianapolis St. R. Co. v. Ray, 167 Ind. 236, 78 N. E. 978.

99. Held sufficient. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. King [Ala.] 42 So. 612. Indianapolis St. R. Co. v. Ray, 167 Ind. 236, 78 N. E. 978. To show that servants were acting within scope of authority in assisting plaintiff to board. Williams v. Louisville & N. R. Co. [Ala.] 43 So. 576. Alleging that "defendant by and through its servants" in charge of the car negligently ran it on the railroad track and collided with a freight car thereon, etc., sufficiently charges that defendant's servants had charge of car and were acting within line of their duty. Indianapolis Trac. & T. Co. v. Formes [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 872. Under Rev. St. 1887, § 4168, subd. 2, allegation that wrongful acts were committed by brakeman, agent and employe of defendant without alleging that he acted within scope of his authority. Lindsay v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. [Idaho] 90 P. 984.

1. Allegation that plaintiff was ejected by conductor on certain car. Montgomery Trac. Co. v. Fitzpatrick [Ala.] 43 So. 136.

2. Allegation that agent's attention was called to improperly heated condition without specifying what agent or whether he was connected with operation of train is open to special demurrer. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Powell, 127 Ga. 805, 56 S. E. 1006.

3. As to dates, conditions, etc., printed thereon. King v. Southern R. Co. [Ga.] 57 S. E. 507.

4. Allegations that defendant by its servants wrongfully and purposely assaulted plaintiff and ejected him from car, and in so doing he was thrown from and run over by car and received injuries, set out in detail, held to sufficiently allege forcible ejection and injury. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Halslup [Ind.] 79 N. E. 1035.

5. Riedel v. Wilmington City R. Co., 5 Pen. (Del.) 572, 64 A. 257. Complaint held to sufficiently allege that negligence of servants was proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries. Indianapolis St. R. Co. v. Ray, 167 Ind. 236, 78 N. E. 978.

S. Petitions held sufficient: To state cause of action for being wantonly pushed from moving car by carrier's employe. Primus v. Macon R. & Light Co., 126 Ga. 667, 55 S. E. 924. To state cause of action for sudden starting of train while slowing down at station. Southern R. Co. v. Hundley [Ala.] 44 So. 195. Charging negligence in moving train while plaintiff was alighting and in failing to assist her. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Kennedy [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 653. Alleging relation of carrier and passenger, and injury by operation of locomotive while plaintiff was standing on edge of station platform. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Adams, 127 Ga. 408, 56 S. E. 409. Averment that defendant's servant while acting within scope of his authority wantonly or intentionally prevented plaintiff from boarding car aforesaid, it being theretofore alleged that plaintiff was not given reasonable time or opportunity to board, is good as against demurrer that it does not show that injury was wantonly or intentionally "inflicted." Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. Wise, [Ala.] 42 So. 821. Allegation of negligence "in the construction, maintenance, and operation of said line and car," held sufficient to admit evidence of excessive speed. Baskett v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 123 Mo. App. 725, 101 S. W. 138.

Petition construed to charge negligence in prematurely starting car, and negligence in failing to timely stop same after discovering plaintiff's position (Poland v. Southwest. Mo. Elec. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 284, 95 S. W. 958), and instruction submitting both questions of negligence, held correct, and other instructions properly modified so as to authorize recovery on either (Id.). Petition and amended petition, held to state but single cause of action, for execution with unnecessary force, and hence motion to compel election between actions for ejectment and assault and battery was properly overruled. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Fowler, 29 Ky. L. R. 905, 96 S. W. 568. Allegation that "before he (plaintiff) could ascend said steps and enter car the engineer was signaled to go ahead, and the train started before he could get on said car," held on demurrer not to allege that car was moving when plaintiff started to get on. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Fink [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 204. Complaint alleging that plaintiff became passenger on defendant's car, and that defendant's servants without cause assaulted him, etc., held to allege breach of contract to carry safely, and not assault, and hence municipal court of city of New York had jurisdiction. Schwartz v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 53 Misc. 289, 103 N. Y. S. 80. Declaration construed as alleging negligence in causing collision as well as in running at high rate of speed. Chicago City R. Co. v. Pural, 127 Ill. App. 652, afg. 224 Ill. 324, 79 N. E. 686. Under allegation that tapdoor was rotten, worn, loose, and unfit for use, plaintiff is not confined to proof of rottenness. Jorden v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 330, 99 S. W. 492. In action by mail clerk for personal injuries, contract between defendant and United States for carrying of mail, held admitted by pleadings. Decker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 112 N. W. 901. Where complaint alleged willful and reckless failure to furnish transportation, and that plaintiff was ejected, and that ejectment was due to willful and reckless conduct, latter words refer to conduct other than failure to transport. Bussey v. Charleston, etc., R. Co., 75 S. C. 116, 55 S. E. 163. Complaint held not to affirmatively show contributory negligence of plaintiff in being on platform preparatory to alighting. Southern R. Co. v. Hundley [Ala.] 44 So. 195.

In actions ex delicto, a plea of not guilty does not put in issue the relation of carrier and passenger.<sup>10</sup> The general issue in case for injuries does not put in issue the ownership of the track or operation of the car,<sup>11</sup> and special pleas charging negligence on the part of plaintiff may be so worded as to amount to the general issue.<sup>12</sup>

The general rules respecting amendments apply,<sup>13</sup> and in Alabama the form of the action may be changed thereby so long as the amendment relates to the same transaction.<sup>14</sup>

10. Being matter of mere inducement, special plea is necessary to put in issue. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Crosby [Fla.] 43 So. 318.

11. Hill v. Chicago City R. Co., 126 Ill. App. 152.

12. Pleas that injury was caused entirely by fault, negligence, and carelessness of plaintiff, and by no negligence of defendant simply amounts to general issue. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Crosby [Fla.] 43 So. 318.

Answer averring that plaintiff carelessly and negligently stepped from moving car and was proximately injured thereby, etc., held to be special answer to plaintiff's allegations that he was injured by starting of car while alighting, and not plea of contributory negligence. Lincoln Trac. Co. v. Brookover [Neb.] 109 N. W. 168.

13. Where complaint for wrongful ejectment alleges that plaintiff was passenger, it is not abuse of judicial discretion to deny motion under Rev. St. 1892, § 1043, for compulsory amendment stating "whether plaintiff was on such train as passenger by being holder of a ticket purchased." Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Scarborough [Fla.] 42 So. 706.

16. Not beyond reasonable doubt in personal injury action. Chicago Consol. Trac. Co. v. Schritter, 222 Ill. 364, 78 N. E. 820. Slight preponderance is sufficient. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 124 Ill. App. 627. Instruction to find for plaintiff if she has proved her case as laid in declaration by preponderance of evidence approved. Springfield Consol. R. Co. v. Farrant, 121 Ill. App. 416. Penalty under Railroad Law. Laws 1890, pp. 1096, 1113, 1114, c. 565, need not prove case beyond reasonable doubt. Kerin v. New York City R. Co., 53 Misc. 536, 103 N. Y. S. 769. Plaintiff held too uncertain as to date of refusal of transfer to authorize judgment for him. Meyers v. New York City R. Co., 103 N. Y. S. 767.

17. Held immaterial: In action for negligently carrying plaintiff beyond destination, allegation that she was stranger in city. Henderson v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 123 Mo. App. 666, 100 S. W. 1111. In action for negligence in failing to have stepbox for alighting passengers, allegation that it was customary to have such box at such station. Selman v. Gulf, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 1030. In action for negligently carrying plaintiff beyond destination, allegation that she was carried to car barn. Henderson v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 123 Mo. App. 666, 100 S. W. 1111.

18. In action for sudden starting of car while plaintiff was alighting, allegations that car had stopped or was running so slow as to be almost stopped, held mere inducements. Ghio v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 710, 103 S. W. 142.

railway under laws of state is common carrier of passengers. Indianapolis St. R. Co. v. Ray, 167 Ind. 236, 78 N. E. 978.

20. In action for injuries due to starting car before passenger had reached place of safety, proof that it was started with jerk as alleged is not essential. Morrow v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 103 N. Y. S. 998. Failure to prove wreck is not fatal where gist of negligence alleged was collision, and no injuries are attributed to wreck. Birmingham R. Light & Power Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 42 So. 1024. Allegation that "engine was running at high and dangerous rate of speed, to wit: At rate of twenty miles per hour," is supported by evidence showing negligent speed though it was not twenty miles per hour. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Adams, 127 Ga. 408, 56 S. E. 409. Allegation of negligence in starting stationary car is supported by proof of sudden increase from movement so slow as not to enhance danger of alighting. Green v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 647, 99 S. W. 28. Charge that plaintiff was induced by "conductor" to alight at wrong station is supported by proof that she was so induced by flagman assisting conductor. Ford v. Southern R. Co., 75 S. C. 286, 55 S. E. 448. In action for forcible ejection, failure to prove rate of speed alleged is not a variance. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Brethauer, 223 Ill. 521, 79 N. E. 287.

21. Jenkins v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 61 W. Va. 597, 57 S. E. 48. Petition declaring on special contract between plaintiff and defendant is not supported by proof of contract between county court and defendant or by implied contract of carriage. Id.

22. Reiss v. Wilmington City R. Co., [Del.] 67 A. 153; Hall v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [N. D.] 111 N. W. 609. Where declaration charges specific acts of negligence, they must be established. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Leonard, 126 Ill. App. 189. Instruction limiting recovery thereto, erroneously refused. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 167, 97 S. W. 1639. Instruction construed as limiting recovery to negligence alleged. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Lowenrosen, 222 Ill. 506, 78 N. E. 813. Instruction held not objectionable as authorizing recovery on negligence not charged. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Lowenrosen, 125 Ill. App. 194.

23. Where severable. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Patillo [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 492. Averments that collision occurred by reason of negligence of defendant in construction, equipment, operation, and control of railroad and trains thereon are not joint. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Flynn [Ind. App.] 81 N. E. 741; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Callahan [Ind. App.] 81 N. E. 670. Charge of negligence in keeping and maintaining unsafe and dangerous roadbed and track and in negligent operation of train is general and admits proof of any specific negligence which makes track unsafe or which shows negligent operation of train. Mefford v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., 121 Mo. App. 647, 97 S. W. 602. Where petition charges failure to stop as gravamen of action and other acts of negligence as merely subsidiary and was so treated and understood by jury, instruction that plaintiff must prove negligence in manner as charged does not require plaintiff to prove all. De Castillo v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 481, 95 S. W. 547.

24. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Easton [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 833.

25. Plea that plaintiff alighted "in an improper manner and at an improper time and place." Southern R. Co. v. Burgess, 143 Ala. 364, 42 So. 35. Where it is alleged that, having failed to provide suitable platform, and having failed to have platform properly lighted, and having permitted steps of coach to become icy it was negligence not to have some one to assist passengers to board, it was error to submit as independent negligence failure to give assistance. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Work [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 962.

26. Variance held fatal between allegation: That plaintiff was thrown by starting of train and proof that he was thrown or fell after it had moved 300 yards and attained speed of 15 miles an hour. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McNab [Ala.] 43 So. 222. That negligent jerk occurred while standing on platform and proof that it happened while she was stepping to ground. Southern R. Co. v. Hundley [Ala.] 44 So. 195. That negligent jerk occurred before train came to standstill and proof of sudden start after it had fully stopped. Id. Of refusal of transfer by conductor on Dec. 7 and proof of refusal by transfer agent on street on July 7. Stevenson v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 866. Of duty owed passenger and proof of duty owed in another capacity. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Lowenrosen, 125 Ill. App. 194. Petition alleging negligence on part of servants in charge of car on which plaintiff was passenger is not supported by proof of negligence of crews of another car in trying to get it on track. Coyne v. United R. Co., 121 Mo. App. 114, 98 S. W. 110. Where declaration charges violent and forcible ejection and directions to alight at unsafe place, negligence in failing to see that plaintiff got off at his destination cannot be shown. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Meyer, 127 Ill. App. 314. Where plaintiff pleads implied contract of carriage, provisions of actual contract are not available though admitted without objection. Seaboard Air Line R. v. Friedman [Ga.] 57 S. E. 778.

No fatal variance between allegation: That car stopped at certain street, proof that it stopped on south side thereof though north side was usual stopping place. Chicago City R. Co. v. Foster, 226 Ill. 288, 80 N. E. 762. That plaintiff fell into hole in floor while

Presumptions and burden of proof.<sup>28</sup>—The burden is on plaintiff to establish the relation of carrier and passenger<sup>29</sup> and to prove negligence on the part of the former,<sup>30</sup> while that of showing contributory negligence<sup>31</sup> and excusing a breach of the contract of carriage is usually on the carrier.<sup>32</sup> In some states, however, a presumption of negligence arises from injury while a passenger,<sup>33</sup> especially where due to the operation of the train,<sup>34</sup> and under the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur a presumption arises where the accident is one which in the ordinary course of affairs would not have happened except for negligence<sup>35</sup> and where

That floor of car was defective and proof of defective trapdoor therein. Jorden v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 330, 99 S. W. 492. That "just as soon as train came to full stop" plaintiff boarded and before she could reach seat it was started with sudden and violent jerk, etc., and proof that she boarded before train came to full stop. Feagin v. Gulf, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 346. That when plaintiff struck ground he was shocked and shaken out of his senses and proof that he spoke few words after falling and then lapsed into unconsciousness. International, etc., R. Co. v. Huguen [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1000. That "after having paid his fare the passenger demanded a transfer" and proof that such demand was made "at the time he paid his fare." Wasserman v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 398. Where negligence charged was shoving of plaintiff off train by porter, plaintiff was not limited on proof as to effects of injuries to precise language of complaint. International, etc., R. Co. v. Huguen [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1000.

27. As that brakeman left door open after announcing station, it being only one of acts alleged as inducing plaintiff to believe that station had been reached. Wolf v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. [Wis.] 111 N. W. 514.

Instruction to find for carrier unless they believe that decedent was free from negligence, held erroneous as placing burden of proof on plaintiff to disprove contributory negligence. Selman v. Gulf, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 1030. Where defendant's answer particularized contributory negligence, instruction that, if such negligence contributed so directly to accident as alleged by defendant in its answer, and but for his own negligence he would not have been injured, defendant was not liable, held not to impose too great a burden on defendant. El Paso

Electric R. Co. v. Kitt [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 587.

32. Thus, where passenger was thrown by opening of gate, question being whether it was insecurely fastened or was opened by passenger, carrier has burden. Spurlock v. Shreveport Trac. Co., 118 La. 1, 42 So. 578.

W. 993. Instruction that if plaintiff was injured by car leaving track defendant is liable unless it shows by greater weight of evidence that it could not have prevented accident by exercise of care required of carrier held proper. O'Gara v. St. Louis Transit Co., 204 Mo. 724, 103 S. W. 54.

Presumption overcome: Proof that catch holding car door open was of latest pattern and in good repair, and that train was not negligently operated, held to overcome presumption of negligence arising from closing of door. Goss v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [Or.] 87 P. 149.

Sufficiency of defendant's evidence held for jury: To rebutted presumption of negligence arising from falling of elevator. Field v. Winheim, 123 Ill. App. 227. Explanation of collision. Simone v. Rhode Island Co. [R. I.] 66 A. 202. Whether evidence that collision was caused by failure of brake to work, without further proof as to cause of such failure, overcome presumption of negligence arising from collision. Chicago City R. Co. v. Pural, 127 Ill. App. 652, affd. 224 Ill. 324, 79 N. E. 686. Evidence that fall of dock was due to sudden and unusual weight thereon, as against evidence of rotten joists, held insufficient to overcome presumption of negligence arising from fall. Bellinger v. Broadhead, 52 Misc. 57, 102 N. Y. S. 381.

40. To overcome plaintiff's prima facie case, defendant's evidence need only counterbalance it. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Leonard, 126 Ill. App. 189.

41. See 7 C. L. 593.

42. Rules and ordinances: Rules of company prescribing duties of servants are inadmissible where plaintiff had no knowledge of them at time of accident and did not rely thereon. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Downs, 122 Ill. App. 545. Evidence that car was going "very fast" and "mighty fast" held sufficient to render ordinance limiting speed to seven miles per hour admissible. Moore v. Northern Texas Trac. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 354, 95 S. W. 652. In action for forcible ejection on conductor's refusal to accept transfer, ordinance establishing its validity is admissible. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Brethauer, 223 Ill. 521, 79 N. E. 287.

Customs: Known custom to keep track clear while train was receiving passengers is admissible on negligence in crossing track to reach train. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Proctor [Ky.] 102 S. W. 826. Custom not to have racks on street cars for parcels and bags, but to allow them to be placed on floor is admissible as bearing on negligence in allowing bag to be placed in aisle. Pitcher v. Old Colony St. R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 876. Evidence of custom among passengers to ride in baggage compartment of combination car, and to have their tickets taken and punched there, held inadmissible as showing acquiescence. Bromley v. New York, etc., R. Co., 193 Mass. 453, 79 N. E. 775. Custom to merely slow down to receive passengers is inadmissible to show implied invitation to board moving car where custom was unknown to plaintiff and he thought car stationary. Greer v. Union St. R. Co., 193 Mass. 246, 79 N. E. 267. Where car stopped, but alleged negligence was premature starting, evidence of custom to merely slow down to receive passengers is inadmissible. Id.

Res gestae, admissible as: In action for negligently issuing torn transfer, one issued at same time to plaintiff's companion and paid for by plaintiff, to show how plaintiff's should have appeared and how mechanical device testified to by defendant's witnesses cut transfers. Montgomery Trac. Co. v. Fitzpatrick [Ala.] 43 So. 136. Conversation between passenger and conductor issuing transfers as to their validity, in action for subsequent ejection. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Brethauer, 125 Ill. App. 204, affd., 223 Ill. 521, 79 N. E. 287. Conversation between plaintiff and conductor as to how plaintiff fell from train, occurring after train stopped and conductor had gone back to where plaintiff was lying. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Haislup [Ind.] 79 N. E. 1035. Statement that plaintiff was "full of counterfeit money" made by conductor when ejecting him. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. McClevey, 126 Ill. App. 21. Statements made couple of minutes after accident, and while plaintiff lay as he fell, to questions as to cause of fall which were not leading. International, etc., R. Co. v. Hugen [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1000. In action for injuries received in collision between street car and train, statements of conductor on street car that he must go forward to look for trains. Northern Texas Trac. Co. v. Caldwell [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 869. Evidence that, when carrier's servants were taking invalid to baggage car, stranger protested. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Coopwood [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 351, 96 S. W. 102. Exclamation of mother of infant passenger that latter was injured through her fault made immediately after accident. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Crosby [Fla.] 43 So. 318.

Not res gestae: Statements made by plaintiff's brother few minutes after accident that car had not stopped when she attempted to alight. Kehan v. Washington R. & Elec. Co., 28 App. D. C. 108. Statement of plaintiff's daughter after car had gone about block that he had jumped off. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Lowenrosen, 125 Ill. App. 194.

Opinions and conclusions: On issue of negligence in occupying steamship berth without protecting board, direct question whether he knew it was unsafe is not objectionable as calling for opinion testimony. International Mercantile Marine Co. v. Smith [C. C. A.] 145 F. 891. Statement by conductor that car did not lurch more than single track cars is admissible as expression of his observation though it involves opinion. Partelow v. Newton & B. St. R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 894. Statement by plaintiff in action for ejection that he "was in no position to meet any such assault, for that reason I resisted as long as I could," after having testified that conductor seized him while he was sitting and proceeded to drag him out, held not objectionable as conclusion. Pierson v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. [Mich.] 112 N. W. 923. In action for injuries received by being crowded off station platform alleged negligence consisting of maintaining too small platform and in permitting too many passengers to congregate thereon, witness may testify whether certain number of passengers thereon would make fair sized crowd. Beverley v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 507. Witness who sees moving car and possesses knowledge of time and distance may express opinion as to speed. Coffey v. Omaha, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 112 N. W. 589. Question whether one standing thirty feet from crossing could hear approaching train, held to call for opinion. Northern Texas Trac. Co. v. Caldwell [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 869. In action for injuries received in collision between street car and train, question to conductor of latter "when a street car is approaching a crossing, when will it appear that it is going to stop? When would it appear that there was danger of a collision when the car was coming on M. street like this?" held to call for opinion. Id.

Primary and secondary evidence: Where through ticket is composed of coupons, each coupon is separate ticket, so that service of notice to produce the "ticket" upon one holding only coupon is compliance with Rev. St. 1898, § 3410, and secondary evidence is admissible. McCollum v. Southern Pac. Co. [Utah] 88 P. 663. Oral testimony as to class of surrendered ticket is admissible upon noncompliance with reasonable notice to produce. Id. Rule that where action is founded upon writing, contents and execution which is denied and which is in possession of one without state, secondary evidence is not admissible unless proper effort is made to obtain original, does not apply to tort action. Id. In action by one injured while riding on free pass issued by express company, parol evidence is admissible to show that by terms of written contract between defendant and express company latter could issue passes, contract being only incidentally involved. International, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 160.

Hearsay: Requisition of claim agent to division superintendent stating that he is advised that accident occurred, etc., held to show that it was hearsay. Weinstein v. Interurban St. R. Co., 52 Misc. 468, 102 N. Y. S. 512.

Expert opinions: Experienced railroad man may testify that street car can be stopped in shorter space than train. Northern Texas Trac. Co. v. Caldwell [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 869. Necessity of assisting woman not infirm or incumbered with bundles to alight is not subject of expert opinion. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Flory [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 200.

Acts and declarations of employees: Declarations of employees after accident are not admissible as admissions of defendant. Weinstein v. Interurban St. R. Co., 52 Misc. 468, 102 N. Y. S. 512. Statements of servant subsequent to accident that elevator had failed to work properly before are admissible to impeach him as witness, but not to show negligence. Belvedere Bldg. Co. v. Bryan, 103 Md. 514, 64 A. 44. In action for ejection, evidence of conduct of conductor toward other passengers thereafter is not admissible. Dobbins v. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co., 79 Ark. 85, 95 S. W. 794. In action for series of misconduct and insulting acts toward plaintiff and companions by conductor, evidence that conductor started car before plaintiff's companion had time to alight is admissible. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 554. Evidence that no report was made to accident clerk is admissible on issue whether an accident happened, and to explain why defendant did not produce employees in charge of car as witnesses. McArthur v. New York City R. Co., 53 Misc. 292, 103 N. Y. S. 102.

Prior and subsequent acts and conditions: Proof that there was no usual or customary stopping place at station two years prior to accident is no evidence that there was no such place at time of accident. De Castillo v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 481, 95 S. W. 547. Evidence that plaintiff had been seen to get on moving cars is inadmissible to show that she did so on occasion of the accident. Lexington R. Co. v. Herring, 29 Ky. L. R. 794, 96 S. W. 558. In action for injuries caused by missile thrown by bystander, evidence of prior assaults on car which was not so framed as to exclude sporadic assaults extending over period of years or to show such frequency as to indicate repetition, properly rejected. Woas v. St. Louis Transit Co., 198 Mo. 664, 96 S. W. 1017. In action for injuries caused by derailment, evidence of prior derailments at same place is not admissible to show negligence unless track is shown to have been in same condition. Overcash v. Charlotte Elec. R. Light & Power Co. [N. C.] 57 S. E. 377. In action for failure to keep street in repair, and for inviting plaintiff to alight at unsafe place without warning, evidence that other conductors had given warning is inadmissible. Miller v. International R. Co., 52 Misc. 344, 102 N. Y. S. 254. In action by one whose hand was crushed between guard rail and passing car, evidence that prior thereto cars similar to ones involved had been heard and felt to scrape together while passing is admissible. Staples v. Rhode Island Suburban R. Co. [R. I.] 67 A. 431. Evidence as to condition of cars immediately after collision is admissible to show speed. Elgin, Aurora & So. Trac. Co. v. Wilson, 120 Ill. App. 371. Enlargement of platform after accident is admissible to show that it was practical for defendant to maintain larger platform, but not to show negligence. Beverley v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 507. Evidence that same conductor had accepted transfers, although change was not made at point named therein, is not admissible to show waiver of rule requiring their rejection. Shortsleeves v. Capital Trac. Co., 28 App. D. C. 365.

Inspections and measurements: Where passenger was ejected for interfering with controller, inspection of a car and controller by jury is permissible to aid in determining whether interference was intentional, there being evidence that all cars are alike. Dobbins v. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co., 79 Ark. 85, 95 S. W. 794. Evidence of measurements of distance from car step to platform is inadmissible without proof that they were on car from which plaintiff fell or that cars are supplied with steps of uniform height. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mount [Ky.] 101 S. W. 1182. Result of experiment to ascertain how far open switch could be seen from approaching car is admissible though made after accident where conditions remain same. Elgin, Aurora & So. Trac. Co. v. Wilson, 120 Ill. App. 371.

Evidence admissible on particular issues: In action for injuries received while alighting from freight train to answer call of nature, absence of water closet may be considered in determining whether carrier should anticipate such action, and hence give warning when train stopped at dangerous place. International, etc., R. Co. v. Cruseturner [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 987, 98 S. W. 423. As may also fact that brakeman alighted for same purpose shortly before. Id. In action for insulting conduct of conductor, presence of other passengers may be shown. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Lambkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 574. Evidence that plaintiff went to front door to alight, but found it locked, is admissible to show due diligence. International, etc., R. Co. v. Hugen. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1000. In action for insult offered by conductor, evidence that plaintiff reported conduct to defendants as soon as she arrived home is admissible to show that she felt aggrieved (San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 554), and it is not necessary to plead same (Id.). Where party assaulting passenger claimed to be special agent of carrier, evidence showing that one leading him from car was detective for defendant is admissible. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Birchfield, 105 Va. 809, 54 S. E. 879. In action for wantonly starting car before plaintiff had reasonable time to board, leaving her behind after some of her children were aboard evidence that conductor thereafter stated that he did not have time to stop to let plaintiff on or to let children off, but finally did let latter off, is admissible to show wantonness. Birmingham R. Light & Power Co. v. Wise [Ala.] 42 So. 821. Length of time of stop is competent evidence on issue as to whether passenger was given reasonable time to alight. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McNab [Ala.] 43 So. 222. What passenger alighting had time to do before re-entering is admissible to show length of stop (Id.), but not details of conversation while off (Id.). In action for injuries from being crowded off station platform, evidence as to means of controlling entrance to platform is admissible. Beverley v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 507. Evidence of expenditure necessary to remedy defect is admissible as bearing upon negligence in not repairing. Haskell v. Manchester St. R. Co. 73 N. H. 587, 64 A. 186. In determining negligence of plaintiff who was riding on foot boards, inquiry should not be limited to his action at precise moment of accident. Chicago City R. Co. v. Schaefer, 121 Ill. App. 334. Where fact whether car stopped for plaintiff who attempted to board at point other than that marked, is in issue evidence that cars stopped at points other than those designated is admissible. Lexington R. Co. v. Herring, 29 Ky. L. R. 794, 96 S. W. 558. Where carrier sold ticket defective on its face, testimony that defendant's conductor told plaintiff that ticket was void is admissible to show recklessness and disregard of plaintiff's rights. Bussey v. Charleston, etc., R. Co., 75 S. C. 116, 55 S. E. 163. Letter written by agent of nonresident owner of office building that elevator was out of order, and that third person had stated that whole machine ought to be built over, is admissible to show notice. Ferguson v. Truax [Wis.] 110 N. W. 395. Where plaintiff claims that she was willfully pushed or kicked off car, while defendant contends that she voluntarily stepped off after car started, testimony that on street where injury occurred there was place where cars stopped at a crossing is admissible. Savannah Elec. Co. v. McElvey, 126 Ga. 491, 55 S. E. 192. Evidence that distance from step of car to platform at place of accident was greater than at other stations is not admissible as proving distance necessarily dangerous. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mount [Ky.] 101 S. W. 1182. Where plaintiff claims that car stopped to receive her at place other than that marked as stopping place which was disputed, evidence of propriety and necessity of stopping at regular places is inadmissible. Lexington R. Co. v. Herring, 29 Ky. L. R. 794, 96 S. W. 558. In action for insulting manner in which conductor placed sign in front of plaintiff and companion, which had been jestingly removed by latter defendant held not harmed by exclusion of question as to whether affair would have happened if companion had not moved sign. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 554. Not error to refuse to allow motorman to state whether there were other passengers on car where if answered in negative it would contradict plaintiff on immaterial matter and if in affirmative it would have corroborated her. Birmingham R. Light & Power Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 43 So. 841. Where conductor may remove passenger for using obscene language, whether offensive or not, and was present and witnessed plaintiff's conduct, evidence of requests of passengers that plaintiff be removed is inadmissible. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 41 So. 984.

Cr. Code 1896, § 4345, providing that on trial for assault, etc., defendant may give evidence of abusive language of person assaulted, has no application to action for ejectment. Id. In action for injuries received while alighting, evidence of crowded condition of platform at another point is inadmissible. Central of Georgia R. Co. v. McNab [Ala.] 43 So. 222. Where negligence charged consisted of maintaining too small station platform, propriety of considering desire of public for rapid transportation in determining plan of operation is immaterial. Beverley v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 507. In action based on negligence of carrier in failing to assist passenger in alighting from "closed car," evidence that it would be impossible to assist all passengers alighting from "open car" is inadmissible. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Flory [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 200. Held not error to exclude testimony of conductor as to words on sign usually found on coaches admonishing passengers against standing on platform where he testified that he did not know whether such sign was on car in question or whether it was on all cars. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Crosby [Fla.] 43 So. 318. Testimony of plaintiff that he had never transferred at any other point is inadmissible to prove custom to accept transfers at such point. Shortsleeves v. Capital Trac. Co., 28 App. D. C. 365.

Evidence admissible under particular allegations: Under allegation of negligence for failing to provide safe means of alighting, it being dark and steps of car at dangerous distance from platform, plaintiff may prove absence of light and of any appliance trainmen were accustomed to provide. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mount [Ky.] 101 S. W. 1182. Allegations that conductor threatened to put plaintiff's wife off unless she paid fare for child, that upon refusal he became violent and abusive, held sufficient to admit proof that conductor brought into car one purporting to be officer who advised her to pay, since his acts and statements must be treated as that of conductor. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Granger [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 987. Where petition alleged that certain conversation took place between plaintiff and conductor, proof of such conversation between conductor and another is inadmissible. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Lambkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 574. Where no foundation has been laid therefor in pleadings or evidence, it is error to admit evidence of comparative equipment of trains on branch line, where injury occurred, and on main line. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Crosby [Fla.] 43 So. 318.

Rebuttal and cross-examination: Where defendant introduces evidence of custom to announce station after stop at switch, plaintiff may introduce evidence of contrary custom prevailing five or six months prior to accident in rebuttal. Kansas City So. R. Co. v. Belknap, 80 Ark. 587, 98 S. W. 366. Where witness has testified to habit and custom of engineer in making couplings, he may be asked on cross-examination whether conductor is in habit of making couplings with unusual violence. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Crosby [Fla.] 43 So. 318. Plaintiff may be cross-examined as to delay in bringing suit as bearing upon bona fides of claim that illness was caused by defendant's negligence. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v.

The sufficiency of the evidence<sup>43</sup> to establish particular issues is treated in the notes.<sup>44</sup>

Powell, 127 Ga. 805, 56 S. E. 1006. Where evidence of statement of plaintiff that she was injured while alighting from moving car was introduced, testimony of one who was present that he did not hear such statement, but she said that she was "attempting to get off car when it started again," is admissible in rebuttal. South Covington, etc., R. Co. v. Core, 29 Ky. L. R. 836, 96 S. W. 562. Where defendant had introduced evidence that plaintiff was on car again next day, question as to how long after that occasion before she left home again is not rebuttal. Cutcliff v. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. [Ala.] 41 So. 573.

Irrespective answers: Answer "heavy trains like that always start slowly" to question "How did the car start with reference as to how it should be started," held not responsive. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. King [Ala.] 42 So. 612.

43. See 7 C. L. 595.

44. Evidence held sufficient to show: That plaintiff was negligently or intentionally pushed from car by conductor. Foley v. West End St. R. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 189. That unnecessary force was used in ejecting plaintiff. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Brethauer, 125 Ill. App. 204. That cause of collision was high rate of speed. Chicago City R. Co. v. Pural, 224 Ill. 324, 79 N. E. 686. That plaintiff was aggressor in fight with conductor. Reed v. New York, etc., R. Co., 116 App. Div. 709, 102 N. Y. S. 19. That door to mail car was so defective as to be uncloseable. Decker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Minn.] 112 N. W. 901. That plaintiff was thrown by starting of car while he was alighting, rather than that he attempted to alight from moving car. Tauger v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 681. That plaintiff was passenger though he inadvertently stated on cross-examination that he did not intend to take car. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Lowenrosen, 125 Ill. App. 194. That station was not announced. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Calhoun, 18 Okl. 75, 89 P. 207. That catch holding car door open was of latest pattern and in good repair, and that train was not running at negligent speed. Goss v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [Or.] 87 P. 149. Negligent impact while making up freight train. Oxendine v. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co. [La.] 43 So. 1003. That track was defective. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Patillo [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 492. That coupler was broken by negligent application of steam in locomotives drawing train. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Young [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 993. That plaintiff was thrown by premature starting of car. Kupke v. St. Louis Transit Co., 122 Mo. App. 355, 99 S. W. 472; Graham v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 869. That plaintiff contracted smallpox from ticket agent. Missouri, etc., R. Co. by Raney [Tex.] Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 939. That vestibule was sufficiently lighted. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Olson [Ark.] 99 S. W. 385. That fall was caused by plaintiff's heel catching on metal projecting from step. Rattan v. Central Elec. R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 270, 96 S. W. 735. Negligence in suddenly moving train while plaintiff was alighting, although evidence was conflicting as to jerk and as to whether plaintiff was injured while alighting or fell from train at another point. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Deason, 29 Ky. L. R. 1259, 96 S. W. 1115. That plaintiff's illness was due to defendant's negligence in having station closed, compelling her to remain out in cold, and in having it improperly heated after she was admitted. International, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 982, 95 S. W. 595. That car started with sudden jerk while plaintiff was alighting. Louisville R. Co. v. Worley [Ky.] 101 S. W. 926. That plaintiff left car while it was moving, authorizing nonsuit. Dockman v. North Jersey St. R. Co. [N. J. Law] 66 A. 961. That car was run at negligent rate of speed. Dupuis v. Saginaw Valley Trac. Co., 146 Mich. 151, 13 Det. Leg. N. 767, 109 N. W. 413; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Patillo [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 492. Negligent starting of car. Evansville Elec. R. Co. v. Lerch [Ind. App.] 81 N. E. 225; Zampelli v. New York City R. Co., 105 N. Y. S. 109; Klein v. Interurban St. R. Co., 105 N. Y. S. 95. That train did not stop more than minute to allow passengers to alight. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Calhoun, 18 Okl. 75, 89 P. 207. That break in airbrake was caused by collision, and was not cause of collision. Hunt v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. [Mo. App.] 103 S. W. 1088. Verdict for defendant held against weight of evidence. Id. To warrant finding of negligence in that some person started elevator while plaintiff was alighting. Moerman v. Clark-Rutka-Weaver Co., 145 Mich. 540, 108 N. W. 988.

In action for refusing transfer not brought for two years, evidence held so incredible as to plaintiff's route as to authorize directed verdict for defendant. Gruber v. New York City R. Co., 103 N. Y. S. 216. Evidence that while train was running at "extra rate of speed" it suddenly stopped within few feet, throwing plaintiff, and that coach upon which plaintiff was riding was switched out, held to authorize inference of negligence. Magee v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 689. Plaintiff's testimony held not admission that he was directed by conductor to wait until caboose pulled up before boarding, but open to construction that conductor offered as favor to pull up. Miller v. Atlanta & C. Air Line R. Co., 143 N. C. 115, 55 S. E. 439. Testimony of plaintiff and another that car had stopped and started while she was alighting, held to support verdict in her favor though several witnesses testified to contrary. Louisville R. Co. v. Bohon, 30 Ky. 862, 99 S. W. 915. Derailment, together with proof of condition of track from dripping of water thereon from tank and freezing thereof, held to sustain finding of negligence in maintaining unsafe track or in operation of train. Mefford v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., 121 Mo. App. 647, 97 S. W. 602. Testimony of plaintiff, together with circumstances of case, held to support finding that plaintiff alighted at wrong place, relying on assurances of conductor, although testimony of several tended to show voluntary alighting at own risk. Tennessee Cent. R. Co. v. Brasher's Guardian, 29 Ky. L. R. 1277, 97 S. W. 349.

Evidence held insufficient: To show that plaintiff was thrown from car by sudden jerk. Cicero & Proviso St. R. Co. v. Hughes,

125 Ill. App. 186. To show unnecessary force in ejecting decedent. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Meyer, 127 Ill. App. 314. To show that place of alighting was unsafe. Id. To sustain plaintiff's theory that car struck wagon and turned it completely around so that rear end hit plaintiff who was near rear of car. Hollingsworth v. Skelding, 142 N. C. 246, 55 S. E. 212. To show that gate, opening of which threw passenger to street, was unlatched by him. Spurlock v. Shreveport Trac. Co. 118 La. 1, 42 So. 575. To show that motorman or gripman was not at post of duty. Roscoe v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 202 Mo. 576, 101 S. W. 32. Proof of jerk in moving car sufficient to throw off one who was standing on running board and reaching for package, held insufficient to show negligence. Sanderson v. Boston El. R. Co. [Mass.] 80 N. E. 515. Fact that plaintiff's dress caught so firmly as to throw her held insufficient to show negligence. Thomas v. Boston El. R., 193 Mass. 438, 79 N. E. 749. Testimony of plaintiff as opposed to all other witnesses held insufficient to show sudden starting of car. Randall v. Providence & D. R. Co. [R. I.] 67 A. 419. Testimony of plaintiff and friend that car upon bumper of which plaintiff was riding moved backward and crushed him against express wagon held not to sustain finding to that effect as against testimony that car did not move, coupled with fact that it had come to stop on level because of lack of power. Feldstein v. New York City R. Co., 103 N. Y. S. 219. Evidence of plaintiff that car suddenly started with jerk after slowing down for him to alight as against testimony of three witnesses, held insufficient to support verdict in his favor. Sacco v. New Orleans R. & Light Co., 117 La. 651, 42 So. 198. Testimony of plaintiff that as he was in act of stepping to rear platform car suddenly started and he was "rushed" out on platform and from car by momentum held so improbable from construction of car as to require reversal of favorable verdict. Berkley St. R. Co. v. Simpson [Va.] 56 S. E. 331. Testimony of plaintiff and disinterested witness as to assault by conductor, as against no evidence on behalf of defendant except proof of no record, held to require reversal of judgment for defendant. Neidenberg v. Dry Dock, etc., R. Co., 105 N. Y. S. 105. Not negligent as matter of law in not ringing gong though such ringing would have prevented collision. Strong v. Burlington Trac. Co. [Vt.] 66 A. 786.

46. Instruction that reasonable care did not require decedent to look for trolley poles on side next to the running board held erroneous. Indianapolis Trac. & T. Co. v. Richey [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 170.

47. Under Const. Art. 1, § 20, where fact that plaintiff was passenger, that there was collision, and that plaintiff was injured therein, is not admitted nor proved by documentary evidence, entire question of liability is for jury. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Callahan [Ind. App.] 81 N. E. 670. Court should not confine jury to ascertainment of few facts, but leave question of negligence to them to be determined from all facts and circumstances. Metropolitan St. R. Co. v. Warren, 74 Kan. 244, 86 P. 131, 89 P. 656.

48. Starting of train while passenger was alighting. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Alberti [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 699. Where plaintiff's testimony does not show negligence as matter of law, it is error to instruct to ter of law, which exists only when a single inference can be drawn from the undisputed facts by reasonable minds. The reasonableness of a rule<sup>50</sup> or of the time allowed for the doing of an act,<sup>51</sup> is usually for the jury as are all questions of fact dependent upon conflicting evidence.<sup>52</sup>

find for plaintiff if jury believe his testimony. Johnston v. New York City R. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 1039.

49. Evidence held to show as matter of law that defendant's servants were not negligent in running street car onto tracks ahead of approaching train, resulting in collision. Bartholomaeus v. Milwaukee Elec. R. & Light Co., 129 Wis. 388, 109 N. W. 143.

Where there is no evidence of attempt to ascertain plaintiff's presence in car, instruction as to degree of care which should have been exercised to discover his presence is improper. Hardin v. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 995. Where passenger had no means of knowing condition of ground, instruction that if she could have learned of condition of ground by due diligence she cannot recover held properly refused. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Harrington [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 653. Where undisputed evidence showed that plaintiff did not intend to pay fare, instruction as to rights if he intended to pay fare is abstract. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co. v. Goerner, 80 Ark. 158, 95 S. W. 1007.

Evidence held to authorize instructions on: Unusual sway and jerk. Coffey v. Omaha, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 112 N. W. 589. Shipper's duty to load and tie horse. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Wilkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 247, 98 S. W. 202. Agreement of defendant's employee to aid plaintiff in holding horse. Id. Evidence that car was moving from two to four miles per hour held to authorize instruction using word "slowly" moving train. Ghio v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 710, 103 S. W. 142. Evidence that servant threatened plaintiff with controller handle, and that plaintiff was forcibly removed to back platform, held to justify instruction on liability for threatening and putting plaintiff in peril of life and compelling him to leave car. Carmody v. St. Louis Transit Co., 122 Mo. App. 338, 99 S. W. 495. Positive testimony that train suddenly jerked held to authorize instruction in respect thereto though it was flatly contradicted and manner of coupling tended to show that it was impossible. Bond v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 207, 99 S. W. 30. Where, in action based on failure to warn plaintiff against alighting at dangerous place, evidence showed that conductor and brakeman were about caboose use of word "employees" instead of "employees" in instruction held proper. International, etc., R. Co. v. Cruseturner [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 987, 98 S. W. 423.

Where, in action for negligence in failing to provide stepbox and in jerking plaintiff from car in rude manner, evidence was confined to latter negligence exclusively, instruction rendering carrier liable for failing to provide "safe means" for passengers to alight held not to submit negligence in not providing stepbox. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Beezley [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 1051.

56. Issues ignored: Contributory negligence. Savannah Elec. Co. v. Mullikin, 126 Ga. 722, 55 S. E. 945; Alabama City, G. & A. R. Co. v. Bates [Ala.] 43 So. 98. Instruction which assumes that plaintiff was in care of defendant if he was passenger held erroneous where it is contended that he assume risk by refusing to leave perilous position upon request. Chicago City R. Co. v. Schaefer, 121 Ill. App. 334. Instruction basing right of recovery upon whether plaintiff entered caboose before train was made up held erroneous, there being evidence tending to render defendant liable notwithstanding. Miller v. Atlanta & C. Air Line R. Co., 143 N. C. 115, 55 S. E. 439. Testimony of plaintiff that he was on steps when train suddenly started held to render binding instruction, based on negligence in boarding moving train, improper. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Pink [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 204.

Issues held not eliminated: Contributory negligence. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Morrison [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 143; Savannah Elec. Co. v. Mullikin, 126 Ga. 722, 55 S. E. 945. Contributory negligence by instruction on premature starting. Hurley v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 262, 96 S. W. 714. Instruction as to negligence in riding on platform held not to withdraw negligence in riding on over crowded car. Baskett v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 123 Mo. App. 725, 101 S. W. 138. Instruction to find for defendant if plaintiff was injured in any other way than according to his theory sufficiently submits defendant's theory. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Deason 29 Ky. L. R. 1259, 96 S. W. 1115. Instructions held properly refused, as withdrawing an alleged act of negligence. Lake St. Elev. R. Co. v. Craig, 126 Ill. App. 361. Where evidence shows that plaintiff was injured before she got onto the steps, instruction authorizing recovery if car started suddenly before plaintiff had reasonable time to become seated held not erroneous in not ignoring fact that there may have been no seats. Miller v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 414, 102 S. W. 592. Instruction on contributory negligence held proper where it was pleaded as defense and supported by evidence. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mount [Ky.] 101 S. W. 1182.

57. Erroneously refused instruction on contributory negligence. Ghio v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 710, 103 S. W. 142. Instruction, on attempt to board while car was in motion, improperly refused. Chicago Union Trac. Co. v. Hansen, 125 Ill. App. 153. Where defendant pleads contributory negligence, held entitled to specific instruction submitting such defense, notwithstanding general charge in respect thereto. Dallas

Consol. Elec. St. R. Co. v. Lasch [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 729.

58. Held not misleading: Using word "accident" in that jury might infer that carrier was not negligent. Rambie v. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1022. General instruction as to care owed passengers held not misleading in that it held employee to such degree in advising plaintiff to jump. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Leamons [Ark.] 102 S. W. 363. Instruction as to negligence in starting car before shipper had fastened horse held not misleading as to facts to be considered. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Wilkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 247, 98 S. W. 202. Where petition charges failure to put plaintiff off at Nineteenth and Flora streets, and all evidence showed that she was to be put off there, instruction directing verdict if she was not put off at Nineteenth and Vine streets held not misleading, especially where another instruction negated liability for failure to put off there. Henderson v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 23 Mo. App. 666, 100 S. W. 1111. In action against railroad company and street car company for injury to passenger on latter, instruction defining care owed by carrier to passenger held not misleading as applying to railroad company. Chicago City R. Co. v. Smith, 226 Ill. 178, 80 N. E. 716.

Held misleading: In that jury might infer that plaintiff could recover for injuries to wife, notwithstanding her contributory negligence. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Harrington [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 653. In action for ejectment with unnecessary force, instruction held misleading in failing to state that recovery could not be had for ejectment itself. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Fowler, 29 Ky. L. R. 905, 96 S. W. 568. Instruction as to negligence in alighting from moving car held misleading in ignoring whether carrier's negligence did not cause him so to do. Hurley v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 262, 96 S. W. 714. Instruction that passenger standing on platform whether train was moving or not assumed risks incident to regular and orderly operation of train held misleading where passenger went out onto platform while train was waiting for another train. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Crosby [Fla.] 43 So. 318. Instruction that operatives had right to assume that train would stop before crossing its tracks, as required by statute, and to act thereon unless circumstances would indicate that it was not going to stop, held misleading and as ignoring duty of operatives to stop before crossing, as required by Code 1896, § 3441. Montgomery St. R. Co. v. Lewis [Ala.] 41 So. 736.

59. Held consistent: Instruction that though it was more dangerous to ride in cupola of caboose than on floor, yet, if man of ordinary prudence would have so ridden under circumstances, plaintiff was not negligent, and instruction that if cupola was place of obvious danger plaintiff cannot recover. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Morgan [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 928, 98 S. W. 408. Instruction permitting recovery if defendant knew, and plaintiff did not, of probability of such explosion, and with instruction that defendant is not liable if explosion was from and must not invade the province of the jury,<sup>62</sup> assume facts in dispute,<sup>63</sup> or unknown cause and could not have been foreseen. Williamson v. St. Louis Transit Co., 202 Mo. 345, 100 S. W. 1072. Instruction relieving defendant from liability if explosion in controller box could not have been reasonably foreseen or prevented, unless defendant was negligent in permitting plaintiff in close proximity thereto, and instruction to find for defendant if plaintiff's negligence contributed to his injury, and instruction authorizing finding for defendant if plaintiff voluntarily removed himself from train independent of negligence. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Hugen [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1000.

60. Instructions on negligence in alighting on side away from depot and while incumbered with bundles held not argumentative. Rainble v. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1022.

61. On weight: Instruction on proximate cause. Moore v. Northern Texas Trac. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 354, 95 S. W. 652. Instruction, in action for injuries while in freight car while coupling was being made, that if plaintiff remained in car when engine was approaching when he could have left car, he cannot recover. Hardin v. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 995. Instruction that if plaintiff took no precaution to protect himself against jar incident to an approaching coupling "which he knew, or in exercise of ordinary care ought to have known, was about to occur from said coupling," he could not recover. Id.

Instruction not on weight: Premature starting before shipper had tied horse. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Wilkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 247, 98 S. W. 202. As to liability of carrier for abusive conduct of conductor. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Granger [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 987. Assumption of undisputed fact does not render instruction on weight of evidence. Shipper's duty to load and tie horse. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Wilkins [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 247, 98 S. W. 202.

62. Instruction held to invade: That one on running board of car being operated on wrong track was not bound to anticipate danger from trolley poles. Indianapolis Trac. & T. Co. v. Richey [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 170. That, if plaintiff was riding up and down in elevator as he testified in deposition, he was not a passenger. Ferguson v. Truax [Wis.] 110 N. W. 395. To find for defendant if injury happened "by reason of the usual and ordinary operation and running of the train," held erroneous as premitting consideration whether ordinary "operation and running" was reasonably safe. Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Byrd [Miss.] 42 So. 256. That defendant was not liable unless servants had notice or knowledge of his presence in car when coupling was made, is erroneous where negligence in not ascertaining presence was for jury. Hardin v. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 995.

Held not to invade: After instructing that mere fact that plaintiff charged particular matters as negligence does not warrant jury in so treating them, added instruction to bear in mind presumption of negligence is not objectionable as invading province of jury or as charging that any act which plaintiff may characterize as negligence is so presumed. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Adams, 127 Ga. 408, 56 S. E. 409. Charge construed as expression of the court's opinion, and not as withdrawing question of negligence from jury. Pittsburgh R. Co. v. Bloomer [C. C. A.] 146 F. 720.

63. Erroneous: Instruction that plaintiff continued to be passenger "up to and including the act of alighting at his proper stopping place" held erroneous where there was evidence tending to show that plaintiff jumped off before reaching his stopping place. Lincoln Trac. Co. v. Brookover [Neb.] 109 N. W. 168. Binding instruction for defendant if plaintiff alighted from moving car held properly refused as assuming that she alighted and intimating that she was not thrown as alleged. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 43 So. 841. Instruction in action for ejection respecting plaintiff's right to recover for injuries caused by his resistance held erroneous as premitting inquiry as to force used by conductor, and as assuming that injuries were caused by his resistance, and also that his acts justified ejection. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 41 So. 984. Instruction held properly refused as assuming that conductor was not bound to use care to determine whether starting car would endanger safety of persons intending to become passengers. Smith v. Detroit United R. Co., 145 Mich. 629, 13 Det. Leg. N. 540, 108 N. W. 1024. Instruction as to contributory negligence assumed that plaintiff alighted from moving train. Bond v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 207, 99 S. W. 30. Assumed shock and excitement attendant on getting on wrong train, and that it was result of mistake of gateman. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Sheridan [Ky.] 101 S. W. 928.

Correct: Where facts are undisputed and establish legal conclusion, court may so state, as that plaintiff was passenger (Georgia R. & Elec. Co. v. Cole, 1 Ga. App. 33, 57 S. E. 1026), or existence of regular and customary stopping place at station (De Castillo v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 481, 95 S. W. 547). Where conductor testified positively that he saw passenger alighting, instruction as to facts necessary to warrant recovery was not erroneous for failing to require finding that operatives knew when starting car of attempt to alight. Parks v. St. Louis Transit Co., 119 Mo. App. 445, 96 S. W. 426. Instruction assuming relation of carrier and passenger is not erroneous where specific instruction directs verdict for defendant if it does not exist Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Easton [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 833. Instruction that if defendant failed to stop at station long enough to enable plaintiff to alight promptly with safety, but suddenly started train, etc., held not objectionable as assuming negligence, for it left truth of facts to jury, which facts constituted negligence as matter of law if true. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Price [Ark.] 104 S. W. 157. Instruction as to duty owed alighting passengers and instruction specifically submitting defendant's negligence, held not to assume relation of single out and give undue prominence to particular matters.<sup>64</sup> Requested instructions<sup>65</sup> substantially covered<sup>66</sup> by instructions already given may be refused.<sup>67</sup> The court must instruct as to all matters necessary to a proper determination of the issues,<sup>68</sup> defining such terms as need to be explained,<sup>69</sup> but should not repeat.<sup>70</sup> Where an instruction directs a verdict upon a finding of particular facts, it must embrace all facts essential to such recovery.<sup>71</sup> passenger and carrier. International, etc., R. Co. v. Tasby [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1030. Instruction held not objectionable as assuming that plaintiff suffered pain. Carmody v. St. Louis Transit Co., 122 Mo. App. 338, 99 S. W. 495. Instruction stating that plaintiff "sues . . . for injuries received while attempting to board" defendant's train held not objectionable as assuming injury alleged. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Fink [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 204.

64. Objectionable: Instruction that if plaintiff was riding up and down in elevator, as he himself testified in his deposition, he was not passenger, held properly refused as directing attention to particular evidence. Ferguson v. Truax [Wis.] 110 N. W. 395.

Not objectionable: Where statement of conductor to motorman "When you stop, why in the devil don't you give people a chance to get off" is introduced as contradictory statement of witness, instruction limiting it to that purpose is not objectionable as directing attention to such contradictory evidence. Louisville & S. I. Trac. Co. v. Leaf [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 1066. Special instructions submitting negligence in alighting at side away from depot and while incumbered with bundles, though general charge on contributory negligence had been given. Rambie v. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1022. Although court has stated in general charge that plaintiff must establish allegations by preponderance of evidence, giving special charge that passenger injured while alighting cannot recover unless it is shown by preponderance of evidence that injury was caused by failure of defendant to exercise high degree of care, etc. Id. Instruction "If the conductor pushed the man off after he got upon the step of the car," etc., held not attempt to repeat testimony. Greenwood v. Union Trac. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct., 488.

65. Instruction as to liability for failing to assist passenger to alight from slippery steps held not erroneous in not requiring jury to find that steps were dangerous and that condition was known to servants, in absence of request therefor. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Flory [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 200.

66. Held covered: Where facts which would constitute assumption of risk also constitute contributory negligence, instructions as to assumption need not be given where latter is fully submitted. McGovern v. Interurban R. Co. [Iowa] 111 N. W. 412. Instruction as to defendant's liability if plaintiff failed to exercise due diligence in alighting. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Tasby [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 1030. Instruction as to voluntary exposure to danger held covered by instructions on contributory negligence. Wellmeyer v. St. Louis Transit Co., 198 Mo. 527, 95 S. W. 925.

Held not covered: Where there is evidence that ejected passenger resisted ejection and provoked assault thereafter, instruction that he cannot recover for injuries resulting from his resistance does not cover requested instruction that he could not recover for injuries contributed to by his own acts, since latter includes injuries received after ejection. Virginia, & S. W. R. Co. v. Hill, 105 Va. 729, 54 S. E. 872. Instruction limiting recovery to negligence charged, moving of footstool, held not covered by charge given. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Johnson [Tex.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 167, 97 S. W. 1039. Instruction denying recovery if passenger voluntarily alighted from moving car is not covered by one relieving carrier if she alighted "without knowledge of conductor or motorman . . . or before they could prevent her." Van Horn v. St. Louis Transit Co., 198 Mo. 481, 95 S. W. 326. Requested instruction on contributory negligence held not covered by instruction that plaintiff cannot recover if she voluntarily left train at water tank without knowledge of defendant's servants, since contributory negligence would defeat recovery though servants knew of her action. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Gribble [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 157.

67. Instruction that plaintiff must prove negligence alleged by preponderance of evidence is not objectionable in failing to state negligence alleged where it is stated fully in another instruction. Coffey v. Omaha, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 112 N. W. 589. Instruction that plaintiff's known lameness should be considered in determining whether carrier exercised reasonable care in giving opportunity to board was not erroneous for not stating what effect should be given such facts where effect was controlled by other instructions. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Hickey [Ark.] 99 S. W. 839.

68. Instruction that passenger may recover if he was not treated with courtesy, leaving it to jury to say what would be courteous treatment, is erroneous. Little Rock R. & Elec. Co. v. Goerner, 80 Ark. 158, 95 S. W. 1007. Court may properly instruct as to degree of care owed. Galveston, H. & N. R. Co. v. Morrison [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 143. Instruction properly defining care required held erroneously refused though plaintiff pleaded specific acts of negligence, thereby assuming burden of proving them, such fact not affecting care owed. Orcutt v. Century Bldg. Co., 201 Mo. 424, 99 S. W. 1062.

69. Instruction to find for plaintiff if defendant negligently or carelessly gave train sudden or violent jerk while plaintiff was alighting, sufficiently defines "negligently." Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Deason, 29 Ky. L. R. 1259, 96 S. W. 1115. Failed to define what would constitute such disorderly conduct or interference with apparatus to authorize ejection. *Dobbins v. ## PART V. CARRIERS OF BAGGAGE AND PASSENGERS' EFFECTS.

Co., 79 Ark. 85, 95 S. W. 794. Held not prejudicial error to use phrase "proper care" where requisite care has been previously stated. Randolph v. Metropolitan R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 620, 102 S. W. 1085.

70. Where several negligent acts are charged and submitted as single ground of recovery, instruction submitting them separately is not objectionable as repetition. Texas & N. D. R. Co. v. Harrington [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 653.

71. Directed verdict if collision was caused by backing of wagon into car and pretermitted consideration of negligence in attempting to pass it by so close margin. Chicago Consol. Trac. Co. v. Schritter, 222 Ill. 364, 78 N. E. 820. Where facts hypothesized in instruction as to liability for suddenly starting train as plaintiff was about to alight constitute negligence, instruction is not defective for failing to require finding of negligence. Bond v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 122 Mo. App. 207, 99 S. W. 30. Where plaintiff's evidence tended to show that she was carried ten blocks beyond destination, while that of defendant that she was carried only a block, instruction that defendant was liable if it carried her beyond destination and to another and distant part of city is not subject to rule that instruction which covers case and authorizes finding for either party must not exclude any material issue supported by substantial evidence. Henderson v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 123 Mo. App. 666, 100 S. W. 1111.

72. Refusal of court to accept offer of defendant, in action based on negligence in rounding curve at a high rate of speed, to take court and jury on car and to make curve, held within court's discretion. Dupuis v. Saginaw Valley Trac. Co., 146 Mich. 151, 13 Det. Leg. N. 767, 109 N. W. 413.

73. Where witness has testified generally to situation and conditions surrounding accident, he may be cross-examined in detail as to action of decedent. Fadley v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 514. Where conductor shows a manifest lack of recollection of incidents of accident, and has testified that if any one was hurt he did not know it, it is proper cross-examination to ask if particular person was not badly hurt and if he knew names of any one on car. Birmingham R. Light & Power Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 42 So. 1024.

74. Error for plaintiff's attorney to state, without justifying evidence that defendants "had millions of capital" and "thousands of employes" and had failed to produce passenger who saw accident, and to dwell unduly upon fact that conductor had entered defendant's service under assumed name and characterizing it as a crime. Keenan v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 118 App. Div. 56, 103 N. Y. S. 61.

75. Special finding that car was at full stop when plaintiff "stepped or got off" construed to mean that it was standing when he stepped, and not inconsistent with the verdict based upon finding that it started while he was alighting. Burke v. Bay City Trac. & Elec. Co., 147 Mich. 172, 13 Det. Leg. N. 974, 110 N. W. 524. General verdict held not in conflict with special findings, since it was not limited to negligence covered by latter. Louisville & S. I. Trac. Co. v. Leaf [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 1066. General verdict for plaintiff, based upon negligence in permitting banana peel to remain upon car steps, not inconsistent with special findings that steps were cleaned by servants on morning of accident, it not appearing whether peel was seen or not and that car was inspected before trip, time of inspection not appearing. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Rose [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 1094. Where only negligence submitted to jury was failure to discover defect in controller, and court instructs that evidence fails to show any known appliance, device, or degree of care which would have prevented accident, finding for plaintiff must be reversed. Paine v. Geneva, etc., Trac. Co., 115 App. Div. 729, 101 N. Y. S. 204.

76. See 7 C. L. 600.

77. Where passenger at junction takes another line and thereafter has baggage rechecked and forwarded by original route it is not carried as baggage. Hicks v. Wabash R. Co., 131 Iowa, 295, 108 N. W. 534.

78. Carrier is not, as matter of law, liable only as gratuitous bailee of baggage which it has regularly checked, especially if owner in good faith intends to follow it on later train. McKibbin v. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co., 100 Minn. 270, 110 N. W. 964. Evidence held to show that he did so intend to follow. Id.

79. Money reasonably necessary for journey is baggage. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Lawrence [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 471, 95 S. W. 663. Whether tools of carpenter on way to work constitute baggage held for jury. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Russell [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 607, 97 S. W. 1090. Sample case containing photographs used by traveling salesman in sale of goods held not baggage within Code, § 2077. McElroy v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 123 Iowa, 544, 110 N. W. 915.

80. Jewels, etc. Pullman Co. v. Green [Ga.] 57 S. E. 233.

81. Diamond in ring became loose. Pull- carriage of merchandise as baggage, yet if the carrier knowingly<sup>82</sup> accepts it as baggage, it becomes liable therefor as such.<sup>83</sup> A baggage master has implied authority to accept as baggage goods not strictly such.<sup>84</sup> If it is secretly checked, the carrier is liable only as a bailee.<sup>85</sup>

§ 34. Care of baggage and effects.<sup>86</sup>—A carrier is liable for the loss of baggage unless occasioned by an act of God or the public enemy,<sup>87</sup> or the negligence of the owner;<sup>88</sup> and the owner's negligence in packing is no excuse if the carrier knowingly accepts it in such condition.<sup>89</sup> Where personal effects are not placed in the custody of the carrier,<sup>90</sup> it is not an insurer thereof,<sup>91</sup> but must exercise reasonable care,<sup>92</sup> being liable for negligence only.<sup>93</sup> Contributory negligence of the passenger relieves the carrier.<sup>94</sup> Carrier is liable for wrongful delivery,<sup>95</sup> unless such delivery is ratified.<sup>96</sup> The liability does not attach until the baggage is received<sup>97</sup> and accepted as such<sup>98</sup> and ceases upon delivery.<sup>99</sup> Where the carrier undertakes to deliver through another, it is liable for the acts of the latter.<sup>1</sup> An agent of one road generally has no power to bind connecting lines by representations.<sup>2</sup> Where baggage is delivered to the carrier an un-man Co. v. Schaffner, 126 Ga. 609, 55 S. E. 933.

82. Where circumstances are such as to charge carrier with knowledge that baggage contains merchandise, it is liable as for baggage. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Green [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 1, 97 S. W. 531. Whether word "glass" in large letters upon box presented as baggage containing china, was sufficient to charge carrier with knowledge of contents held for jury. Id. Evidence that plaintiff checked as baggage four large trunks of size and pattern in use by salesmen, held sufficient to take case to jury as to notice that they contained merchandise. McKibbin v. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co., 100 Minn. 270, 110 N. W. 964.

83. Fleischman, Morris & Co. v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 56 S. E. 974.

84. Hence his acceptance binds carrier unless passenger has knowledge that he is exceeding his authority. Bergstrom v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa], 111 N. W. 818.

85. Illinois So. R. Co. v. Antoon, 122 Ill. App. 359. Is not liable for failure to promptly deliver. McElroy v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 133 Iowa, 544, 110 N. W. 915.

86. See 7 C. L. 602.

87. Wolf v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. [Mich.] 112 N. W. 732.

88. Where goods are checked to wrong station, acceptance of check does not constitute negligence on part of owner. Strange v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [S. C.] 57 S. E. 724.

89. Especially where not pleaded. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Russell [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 607, 97 S. W. 1090.

90. In absence of special agreement, street railway company does not assume control of baggage. Sperry v. Consolidated R. Co., 97 Conn. 565, 65 A. 962. Fact that conductor took baggage, carried it into car, and placed it within sight and control of passenger does not justify finding that he assumed control thereof as carrier. Id.

91. Money taken from plaintiff's trousers while asleep. Cohen v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 105 N. Y. S. 483.

92. Sleeping car company must exercise reasonable care against theft. Pullman Co. v. Schaffner, 126 Ga. 609, 55 S. E. 933. Stolen while asleep or in toilet room. Pullman Co. v. Green [Ga.] 57 S. E. 233.

93. Sperry v. Consolidated R. Co., 79 Conn. 565, 65 A. 962. To establish liability for loss of baggage, plaintiff must show that defendant accepted baggage as carrier or that loss was due to its negligence. Id. Held not negligent in permitting baggage in control of owner to be carried out by another passenger, conductor having no reason to believe latter was not owner. Id. Evidence that no porter was present when plaintiff went to his berth and that none was present when he arose held insufficient to show that loss of money in meantime was due to defendant's negligence. Cohen v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 105 N. Y. S. 483.

94. Passenger leaving articles of adornment in berth while making toilet is not negligent as a matter of law. Pullman Co. v. Green [Ga.] 57 S. E. 233.

95. Possession of baggage check is prima facie evidence of ownership or right to receive. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Stone, 78 Ark. 318, 95 S. W. 470. Genuineness of check upon which baggage was rechecked held for jury. Id.

96. Acceptance of new check ratifies act of one rechecking. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Stone, 78 Ark. 318, 95 S. W. 470.

97. Testimony of transfer agent that he delivered plaintiff's baggage to defendant held to make case for jury as to whether defendant received same. Wolf v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. [Mich.] 112 N. W. 732.

98. Fact that transfer agent violated instruction by checking baggage before passenger had purchased ticket does not relieve carrier from liability where ticket is subsequently purchased. Wolf v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. [Mich.] 112 N. W. 732.

99. Rechecking over another line is an acceptance from original line. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Stone, 78 Ark. 318, 95 S. W. 470.

1. Where carrier uses station of another carrier for discharging passengers, and agents of latter assume control of and deliver baggage of incoming passengers, such servants are agents of former while so acting. Campbell v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. [Neb.] 111 N. W. 126.

2. Where railroad company gave hotel reasonable time before owner expects to take passage,<sup>3</sup> or where it is not removed within a reasonable time after arrival at destination,<sup>4</sup> the carrier's liability becomes that of a warehouseman,<sup>5</sup> and the baggage subject to storage liens.<sup>6</sup>

9. Under Civ. Code, § 2892, making liability of carrier for loss of baggage same as that for loss of goods, carrier may contract to limit liability for baggage, provided such limitation is reasonable. Rose v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [Mont.] 88 P. 767.

10. Reduced rate is sufficient consideration for all provisions of contract and it is not necessary that there be independent consideration for each provision limiting liability. Rose v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [Mont.] 88 P. 767. Evidence that nothing was said to passenger about reduced rate or limitation of liability for baggage is inadmissible where ticket was furnished her according to telegraphic directions of another. Id.

CAUSES OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.<sup>3</sup>

This topic includes only the most general and abstract propositions,<sup>4</sup> excluding both practice<sup>5</sup> and the constituents of particular causes of action and defenses.<sup>6</sup>

A statute instituting a new remedy for an existing right does not take away a pre-existing remedy without express words or necessary implication,<sup>7</sup> but a statute conferring the right to enforce an existing cause of action does not confer a right of action.<sup>8</sup> At common law political as distinguished from civil rights were not subject to judicial determination,<sup>9</sup> but by statute in many states the strict rule of the common law has been modified or abrogated so that rights conferred by statute, whether civil or political, may be protected and enforced.<sup>10</sup> Statutory rights of action which did not exist at common law will be enforced in other forums subject to limitations and burdens imposed by the statute creating them.<sup>11</sup> Right to a recovery depends upon the accrual of the cause of action at the inception of the suit,<sup>12</sup> and the subsequent accrual of a right of action cannot be set up by amendment.<sup>13</sup> Hence, all conditions precedent to the right to maintain an action must fore purchase. Bachman v. Clyde S. S. Co. [C. C. A.] 152 F. 403. In action for loss of baggage rechecked by one traveling as husband of plaintiff, evidence that when he called he presented check therefor bearing correct number and letter purporting to be from plaintiff representing him as her husband and directing rechecking is admissible to show agency. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Stone, 78 Ark. 318, 95 S. W. 470.

22. Fact that plaintiff's agent signed release when checking baggage reciting that trunk was without lock held sufficient to establish such fact as against testimony of plaintiff and two children. Kanevsky v. New York, etc., R. Co., 53 Misc. 564, 103 N. Y. S. 727.

23. Instruction authorizing recovery on facts hypothesized therein, without limiting it by reference to contributory negligence, is not erroneous where other instructions submit such issue. Underwood v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 125 Mo. App. 490, 102 S. W. 1045. Where right of plaintiff to transport articles set out in bill of particulars as baggage is not raised by pleadings, instruction that company was not liable therefor unless it had notice of character of such articles, held properly refused. *St. Louis S. 13. Where judgment against contractor and bondsmen was reversed for failure to allege and prove that account had been audited and certified by architect as provided in contract, the action cannot be be complied with.<sup>14</sup> The motive actuating the doing of a lawful act cannot be made the basis of a right of action,<sup>15</sup> but the rule is otherwise where the act, though lawful in the proper case, is not authorized under the particular circumstances.<sup>16</sup> A right of action cannot be predicated upon the wrongdoing of the person seeking relief.<sup>17</sup> An action may be ex delicto though based upon a contract,<sup>18</sup> and may be ex contractu though the act constituting the breach is a tort.<sup>19</sup> A cause of action ex contractu may exist in favor of one not a party thereto.<sup>20</sup> Unless authorized by statute legal and equitable causes of action cannot be joined,<sup>21</sup> but equitable jurisdiction is not invoked where no affirmative relief is asked.<sup>22</sup> A single cause of action<sup>23</sup> cannot be severed, and if severed recovery thereon bars further recovery,<sup>24</sup> but a contract the performance of which is several may be made the basis of separate causes of action,<sup>25</sup> and though acts may be consecutive in time and purpose, several causes of action may arise therefrom.<sup>26</sup>

Defenses.<sup>27</sup>—Unless permitted by statute,<sup>28</sup> grounds for equitable relief cannot be sustained on an amendment showing that certificate was procured subsequent to reversal, it not being alleged that same had previously been refused. American Bonding & Trust Co. v. Gibson County [C. C. A.] 145 F. 871.

14. Under Gen. Laws 1896, c. 233, § 16, requiring a criminal prosecution to be commenced before bringing a civil action or any act constituting a crime, an action against guardian for embezzlement cannot be maintained until such prosecution has been instituted. Williams v. Smith [R. I.] 66 A. 63. Under a charter provision requiring notice to council of the accumulation of ice or snow on sidewalks as a condition to liability on part of city for injuries caused thereby, the giving of such notice is a condition precedent to the accrual of a right of action and must be alleged and proven. MacMullen v. Middletown [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 863. Provision in contract for carriage requiring notice of claim for damages before property is removed from place of destination is a prerequisite to the right to maintain an action therefor. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Phillips, 17 Okl. 264, 87 P. 470. For further cases on notice as a condition precedent see Carriers, 7 C. L. 522; Master and Servant, 8 C. L. 840; Municipal Corporations, 8 C. 28. Rev. St. c. 84, § 17, allowing defendant in an action at law to plead in defense "any matter which may be ground for relief in equity" is limited by its context to claims made by plaintiff in the action. Hence re-not be set up in an action at law,<sup>29</sup> but by statute in many states such defenses are allowed,<sup>30</sup> and where the union of legal and equitable defenses is permitted, a party must set up all defenses which he has, whether legal or equitable.<sup>31</sup> What is a legal action depends upon the nature of the relief sought.<sup>32</sup> A counterclaim cannot be split so as to use part of it as a defense in the pending action and the remainder as a cause of action in another suit.<sup>33</sup> The motive underlying the bringing of an action does not constitute a defense.<sup>34</sup>

CEMETERIES.<sup>35</sup>

Right of sepulture is elsewhere treated.<sup>36</sup>

Boroughs in Pennsylvania have power to prohibit interments within their limits or portions thereof,<sup>37</sup> and this power may be validly exercised by the passage of an ordinance prohibiting further burials except within the limits of existing cemeteries.<sup>38</sup> A cemetery is not, however, a nuisance per se,<sup>39</sup> and the legislature in authorizing towns to provide burial places did not contemplate that they should be so located and maintained as to constitute nuisances.<sup>40</sup> Where so located and maintained they may be enjoined.<sup>41</sup> One who buys land near a cemetery will not be presumed to know that the cemetery was a nuisance in fact so as to be prevented from having it abated.<sup>42</sup>

An association managed by white persons may not deny colored persons the right to bury in a lot owned by them and enclosed by the cemetery grounds.<sup>43</sup> An owner of a cemetery lot has no implied license to roam at will all over the cemetery grounds and outside the avenues or ways provided for access to lots,<sup>44</sup> and one who is injured while taking a "short cut" for his own convenience has no cause of action against the association.<sup>45</sup> Where an association has express or implied authority formation cannot be had as the equitable matter permitted must be a matter of defense. Martin v. Smith [Me.] 65 A. 257.

29. Reformation on ground of mistake. Martin v. Smith [Me.] 65 A. 257. In the Federal courts an equitable defense cannot be pleaded in an action at law. Cook v. Foley [C. C. A.] 152 F. 41.

Action to recover percentage of gold taken from mine, for an injunction restraining defendant from extracting gold therefrom, an accounting for gold already extracted and the appointment of a receiver is an action in equity and defendant may demand reformation. Kuzek v. Magaha [C. C. A.] 145 F. 618.

33. Palm's Adm'rs v. Howard [Ky.] 102 S. W. 267, 1199.

34. Fact that minority stockholders who were also creditors commenced proceedings for appointment of receiver for corporation in a case authorized by law with ulterior motives to secure control of corporation is not a defense. Catlin v. Vichachi Min. Co. [N. J. Eq.] 67 A. 194. Fact that administrator's object in bringing action to recover possession of land owned by decedent was to absolve himself of his individual contract for sale of his interest in land is immaterial. Kern v. Cooper, 97 Minn. 509, 106 N. W. 962. In an action to enjoin a liquor nuisance, fact that action was instigated by plaintiff at request of others, who agreed to pay counsel fees, that he merely lent his name for purpose of bringing action and that action was not brought in good faith, is immaterial. Rizer v. Tapper [Iowa] 110 N. W. 1038.

Evidence sufficient to sustain finding that establishment of a cemetery would pollute plaintiffs' wells. Elliott v. Ferguson [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 453. Not necessary to submit question as to which of the wells would be polluted. Id. Plaintiffs could not be required to adopt wooden cisterns though inexpensive. Id. Rule that injunction should not be granted where plaintiff's injury is trivial not applicable. Id. Demurrer and special exceptions to petition properly overruled. Id.

to issue transferrable certificates entitling persons who have sold land to it to share in the proceeds of the sale of lots,<sup>46</sup> such certificates have the attributes of stock certificates with reference to transfers,<sup>47</sup> and the association will be liable for damages suffered by innocent transferees or pledgees of new certificates fraudulently issued by its officers without the surrender of old ones.<sup>48</sup> Property owned by a cemetery company and on which there are no graves may be sold to pay a commissioner's fees in a suit for the purchase price of the property.<sup>49</sup> Joint grantees of a cemetery lot are tenants in common and not joint tenants.<sup>50</sup> Where a cemetery lot is inalienable and subject to all burial regulations, the owner has a bare right of burial and no interest which will support ejectment,<sup>51</sup> but where one has under such right buried his dead in such lot, he has a right of action against one disturbing the bodies,<sup>52</sup> and such right is transmitted to his heirs.<sup>53</sup> Consent by one heir to the removal of bodies does not bind his coheirs.<sup>54</sup>

A determination by town trustees of a dispute between lot owners as to the boundary between their lots made in the absence of one of the parties and without notice to him is void for want of jurisdiction.<sup>54a</sup>

CENSUS AND STATISTICS.<sup>55</sup>

An official census is admissible in evidence to establish facts by law required to appear therein.<sup>56</sup> Under the New Jersey statute making certificates of birth prima facie evidence of the facts recited therein, a fraudulent certificate based upon the representations of a married woman that her husband is the father of the child which is in fact a bastard may be canceled in so far as such paternity is shown and its use for the purpose of establishing such paternity enjoined.<sup>57</sup>

A judicial proceeding implies a hearing as a matter of right to the person affected thereby. People v. New York Department of Health, 51 Misc. 190, 100 N. Y. S. 788. The fact that a public board or agent exercises judgment and discretion in the performance of duties does not necessarily make the action judicial in character. Id.

Summary determination of department of health of New York City that one shall not vend milk in the city is not a judicial determination. People v. New York Department of Health, 51 Misc. 190, 100 N. Y. S. 788.

Certiorari to ministerial boards or officers is not the proper remedy to try the title to an office, or the right to exercise corporate functions. Beaumont v. Samson [Cal. App.] 90 P. 839. Certiorari is not the proper remedy to determine validity of municipal corporation created by board of supervisors of county. Id.

Governor of state: Certiorari will not issue from the supreme court of a state to review an executive act of the governor. State v. Ansel [S. C.] 57 S. E. 185. Proceedings in common-law actions are not reviewable by certiorari. Five-Mil. Beach Lumber Co. v. Friday [N. J. Law] 66 A. 901. Accordingly, writ will not issue to review order of circuit court in action to enforce mechanic's lien (Id.), or dismissal of rule requiring plaintiff to show cause why service of summons and declaration should not be set aside (Taylor Provision Co. v. Adams Exp. Co., 72 N. J. Law. 220, 65 A. 508).

Condemnation proceedings: Under Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 5645, upon appeal from final judgment awarding damages, all questions which incidentally arise during the trial before the jury for determination of such damages, or after return of verdict, can be reviewed, and, therefore, such questions cannot be reviewed by certiorari. State v. Pierce County Ct. [Wash.] 87 P. 814.

Decision of highway commissioner: Certiorari will not lie to review decision of highway commissioner where appeal lies current with appeal.<sup>72</sup> and in some jurisdictions it is expressly provided by statute that it may issue only where there is no appeal and no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy at law.<sup>73</sup> But where in a particular case the delay incident to an appeal will render it ineffective to protect the rights of a party, the writ will issue.<sup>74</sup> It will also issue where, though a writ of error has been allowed, the propriety of its allowance is doubtful and a motion to dismiss it has been filed.<sup>75</sup> After opportunity to appeal has been lost by the neglect or laches of the applicant, the writ will not lie.<sup>76</sup> Even where there is no other adequate remedy at law, certiorari will not issue, in the absence of express statutory authorization, unless the court or tribunal acted without jurisdiction, or exceeded its jurisdiction,<sup>77</sup> or has not proceeded according to from that officer to township board, and no sufficient reason appears why that remedy was not resorted to. Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Graham [Mich.] 112 N. W. 998.

Judgment of justice's court: Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1068, a writ of review will not lie from the judgment of a justice's court where an appeal may be had. Hall v. San Francisco Justices' Ct. [Cal. App.] 89 P. 870.

72. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 322, certiorari will issue to review an order settling an administrator's account without a showing of cause why an appeal was not taken. Friend v. Boren [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 54, 95 S. W. 711.

Does not lie to review judgment condemning land for municipal purposes. Id. Order in ordinary foreclosure action empowering agent of court to remove and retain petitioner's property is not appealable under Code Civ. Proc. § 963, subd. 2, and, therefore, certiorari will lie to review it. Boca & L. R. Co. v. Lassen County Super. Ct. [Cal.] 88 P. 715. Code Civ. Proc. § 937, providing that order made out of court without notice to adverse party may be vacated by judge who made it, is applicable only to such orders as judge has power to make without notice, and does not preclude certiorari upon the ground of want of jurisdiction. Id.

74. The length of time it will take to prosecute an appeal is not a test of the efficiency of the remedy. It must further appear that the delay incident to the appeal will work deprivation of some substantial right which will prevent the enjoyment of the fruits of the appeal. State v. King County Super. Ct. [Wash.] 89 P. 879. In a case involving the right to an office, where an appeal could probably not be determined before the expiration of the time for which the office is claimed, a writ of review is an available remedy. State v. Kitsap County Super. Ct. [Wash.] 91 P. 4. Appeal from injunction prohibiting use of voting machines which cannot be heard until after election is not a speedy and adequate remedy. United States Standard Voting Mach. Co. v. Hobson, 132 Iowa 38, 109 N. W. 458.

75. In this case the litigation had been protracted for many years and a large amount was involved, and the case was brought up from the circuit court of appeals to supreme court by certiorari to avoid any question of the latter court's jurisdiction of the writ of error. *Montana Min. 77. The mere fact that the court acts contrary to law in a matter within its jurisdiction is not ground for certiorari. Hoffman v. Lewis [Utah] 87 P. 167. But certiorari will always lie where the court has exceeded its jurisdiction. Vette v. Byington, 132 Iowa 487, 109 N. W. 1073; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Ray [Fla.] 42 So. 714.

Neither order granting leave to demur nor question whether right to demur has been waived can be reviewed by certiorari. Voorman v. San Francisco Super. Ct., 149 Cal. 266, 86 P. 694.

Where in entering judgment a justices' court acts within its jurisdiction, a writ of review will not lie under Code Civ. Proc. § 1068. Hall v. San Francisco Justices' Ct. [Cal. App.] 89 P. 870.

Order granting motion brought regularly before court: Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1947, the writ will not issue to review order granting motion, which came regularly before court, to strike out objections to an executor's final account and petition for distribution. State v. Second Judicial Dist. Ct., 34 Mont. 303, 87 P. 614.

Error in dismissing appeal: Under Rev. St. 1897, the writ will not lie where the district court did not exceed its jurisdiction but merely erred in dismissing an appeal from justices' court. Hoffman v. Lewis [Utah] 87 P. 167.

As a nunc pro tunc order correcting a judgment of imprisonment and costs by inserting therein a fine, entered nearly six years after the judgment, is an excess of jurisdiction, certiorari is the proper remedy. Smith v. Mahaska County Dist. Ct., 132 Iowa 603, 109 N. W. 1085.

Certiorari will lie to determine validity of order granting injunction restraining officer de facto from exercising duties of office. Vette v. Byington, 132 Iowa, 487, 109 N. W. 1073.

Order void on its face: Where order of commissioner's court establishing stock district under acts 1894-95 p. 749, is void on its face, certiorari is proper remedy. Wayfield v. Tuscaloosa County Com'rs Ct. [Ala.] 41 So. 932.

No jurisdiction over defendant: Where it appears upon face of justices' judgment that no summons was issued and served on defendant, certiorari is the proper remedy. But the writ will not issue if such defect does not appear on the face of the judgment. Knight v. Creswell [Ark.] 101 S. W. 754. Under the "act constituting courts for the trial of small causes," P. L. 1903, p. 279, § 93, where the justice of the peace lacks the essential requirements of law.<sup>78</sup> Certiorari will not lie where no trial has been had,<sup>79</sup> and as a general rule, it will not lie from an interlocutory decree,<sup>80</sup> and to warrant its issuance it must appear that it will be available to relieve some actual and substantial wrong or injury of the applicant.<sup>81</sup> It is the proper remedy where a review of the setting aside of a default judgment is sought,<sup>82</sup> and upon an appeal it is the proper process for attacking the record of the trial court,<sup>83</sup> and it lies to review an assessment for taxation,<sup>84</sup> or to review a proceeding of the civil service commission removing a police officer.<sup>85</sup>

In Connecticut the circuit court may by certiorari review proceedings before a judge of a court of record to compel a public officer to deliver books, etc., in his custody to his successor.<sup>86</sup> Certiorari will not issue to determine the validity of an election to local option,<sup>87</sup> or the title to an office and its emoluments<sup>88</sup> or to review a decision resting in the discretion of the officer or tribunal rendering it.<sup>89</sup> It will not lie to review a commitment for contempt,<sup>90</sup> or to review the action of an appellate court made final by constitutional provision,<sup>91</sup> or in order to permit a party to avail himself of a defense which he neglected to urge below.<sup>92</sup> The supreme court of the United States will not grant the writ to review a judgment of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia in a criminal case, however important it may be to the applicant if the question involved is not one of gravity and general importance, there being no conflict between decisions of state and Federal courts or between those of Federal courts of different circuits, and nothing affecting international relations.<sup>93</sup> The writ can be issued only upon evidence presented by the record itself.<sup>94</sup> jurisdiction over defendant because of illegality in service of summons upon him, and yet proceeds to render judgment against him, such judgment may be reviewed by certiorari. Richardson v. Smith [N. J. Law] 65 A. 162.

Handley*, 43 Wash. 232, 86 P. 398. Certiorari will not lie to review action of a school district and its board of directors as to a matter which the law has committed to their discretion, under Code, § 4154, which authorizes certiorari where it is alleged that an inferior tribunal or board exercising judicial functions has exceeded its proper jurisdiction or otherwise acted illegally. *Brockway v. Ancillary certiorari.<sup>95</sup>—An appellant is entitled to certiorari to bring up a transcript of the record proper.<sup>96</sup> but it is unnecessary where the full record is brought up by exceptions.<sup>97</sup> Where the transcript is insufficient to present the errors relied on, either party may have it corrected by certiorari.<sup>98</sup> But the writ will not issue to a judge who has settled a case on appeal ordering him to make changes therein.<sup>99</sup>

10. Judgment on appeal by administrator

Certiorari may be refused on the ground of laches<sup>11</sup> or because its allowance would result in an injury to public interests,<sup>12</sup> or on these grounds the matters to be reviewed by the writ may be circumscribed.<sup>13</sup> That an administrator has paid out the entire estate, and that an order finally discharging him has been entered, will not preclude the issuance of certiorari to review the order settling his account.<sup>14</sup> The writ should be directed to the person who, in legal contemplation, has the custody of the record to be certified.<sup>15</sup>

§ 3. Procedure for writ; writ, service and return. Application or petition.<sup>16</sup> The petition for certiorari must be verified by an affidavit.<sup>17</sup> Good cause must be shown in the petition for issuing the writ.<sup>18</sup> The application must state the evidence heard or facts established in the trial court,<sup>19</sup> and there must be a specific assignment of error.<sup>20</sup> Mere general statements of a good defense, or that injustice has been done, is not sufficient.<sup>21</sup> The petition is to be strictly construed against the petitioner.<sup>22</sup> All the evidence or facts must be stated, or so much thereof as is sufficient to show that a vital error was committed.<sup>23</sup> In Georgia a distinct averment that bond has been filed or affidavit made is essential to the validity of the petition.<sup>24</sup> A petition by one not a party to the proceeding sought to be reviewed must show that the enforcement of the decision rendered therein would

63. Where upon application for certiorari and return thereto it does not appear that the court usurped power, or refused to discharge any duty imposed by law, or that there has been any irregularity, operating a denial of justice in the proceedings complained of, the writ will be dismissed. In re Theriot, 117 La. 532, 42 So. 93.

there was no final judgment below,<sup>65</sup> that there was no application for rehearing,<sup>66</sup> that prosecution has been guilty of laches,<sup>67</sup> or has failed to make application or file petition for the writ within the time prescribed,<sup>68</sup> or has failed to give notice of the application,<sup>69</sup> or has failed to prosecute it with due diligence.<sup>70</sup> Where the purpose of a writ is to set aside certain proceedings, and to do so would be an abuse of sound legal discretion and a great public detriment, the writ may be quashed without requiring defendants to make return thereto.<sup>71</sup> Motion to dismiss the petition and quash the writ on the ground that the petition is insufficient must be made before making return.<sup>72</sup> Motion to quash admits all facts well pleaded.<sup>73</sup> To determine the merits of the motion to dismiss, the petition, as well as the transcript from the trial court, should be looked to.<sup>74</sup>

66. Under Supreme Court Rule 12, where no application for rehearing was filed in court of appeal, writ of review will be dismissed. But this rule does not apply to matters decided at a rehearing, as no application for second rehearing is permissible. Succession of Morere, 117 La. 543, 42 So. 132.

67. Seaside Realty & Imp. Co. v. Atlantic City [N. J. Law] 64 A. 1081. Laches should be raised before answer unless the delay is equal to that limited for suing out writ of error. City of Chicago v. Condell, 124 Ill. App. 64.

68. If the answer to writ untraversed, or with a traverse not sustained, shows that more than the prescribed period elapsed after judgment and before application for writ, the writ should be dismissed. Evans v. Forsyth, 126 Ga. 589, 55 S. E. 490. In Georgia, certiorari to review justice's judgment will be dismissed where it does not affirmatively appear from record that writ was applied for within thirty days from final determination of the case. Landrum v. Moss [Ga. App.] 57 S. E. 965. This is not sufficiently shown where the only portion of the record showing date of judgment complained of is an unverified recital of date of the trial appearing in certiorari bond. Id. Where petition duly verified and sanctioned alleges that application was made within thirty days from date of judgment, it is error to dismiss writ on ground that date of judgment was not shown. Evans v. Forsyth, 126 Ga. 589, 55 S. E. 490. When certiorari is dismissed for failure to aver in petition that bond has been filed or affidavit made, as required by Act of Dec. 10, 1902 (Acts 1902, p. 105), a second petition sued out within six months from such dismissal, but more than thirty days from the judgment complained of, should be dismissed. Yeazey v. Crawfordville, 126 Ga. 89, 54 S. E. 87.

70. State v. Pacific County Super. Ct. [Wash.] 89 P. 479. Where no return was

79. On certiorari to review the action of a justice of the peace, the office of the writ is to bring up the record for review on questions of law, and unless it shows an error of law below the judgment must be affirmed. Questions of fact cannot be retired on new affidavits or proofs in the circuit court. Appleman v. Hahn [Mich.] 112 N. W. 917. Upon certiorari's bringing up a habeas corpus proceeding to determine the custody of a child, the court will pass upon the question of law involved where the facts are undisputed. Lipsey v. Battle, 80 Ark. 287, 97 S. W. 49.

80. Under the Colorado statutes, upon petition to county court for certiorari by garnishee against whom judgment has been rendered by justice, petitioner is entitled to general rule, is the only question that can be raised and settled.<sup>81</sup> The constitutionality of the law upon which the judgment below was based<sup>82</sup> and the propriety of granting mandamus<sup>83</sup> are questions that may be determined upon certiorari. Upon certiorari to review the action of a municipal board in awarding a contract to one who it is alleged was not the lowest responsible bidder, apart from the rights of the lowest bidder, the right of the board to pass over another bidder whose bid was lower than that of the person to whom the contract was awarded should be passed upon.<sup>84</sup> The fact that the court states that it expresses no opinion on one of the questions involved, but passes judgment thereon because it will in any event be passed upon by the appellate court, will not preclude the question being reviewed on certiorari.<sup>85</sup> The rights of persons not made parties to the proceeding cannot be passed on.<sup>86</sup> Allegations in the petition as to which the answer of the magistrate is silent are not verified, and are not to be considered upon the hearing.<sup>87</sup> Matters which are not referred to in the arguments or briefs presented by counsel cannot be reviewed.<sup>88</sup> The regularity or manner of appointment, or the qualifications of the trial judge, cannot be determined.<sup>89</sup> Upon certiorari to review a judgment condemning riparian rights, the petitioner in the condemnation proceedings cannot show, by way of reduction of damages, a prior ownership in a part of the waters covered by the judgment.<sup>90</sup> The right to raise questions upon certiorari may be lost by waiver.<sup>91</sup> Upon certiorari to review judgment of justice of the peace, a trial de novo is sometimes authorized by statute.<sup>92</sup>

Ct.*, 149 Cal. 266, 86 P. 694. The only question reviewable on certiorari bringing up judgment in proceedings to recover penalty for violation of provisions of ordinance passed by a board of health pursuant to Gen. St. p. 1638, § 18, is whether the court had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter of the suit. Board of Health of Woodbury v. Cattell, 73 N. J. Law, 516, 64 A. 144.

CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE.<sup>1</sup>

Grants of Land Held Adversely (553).
Agreements as to Contingent Fees and Payment of Expenses at Trial (553).

Assignment to or Purchase by Attorney of Chose in Action (554).
Champerty as a Defense (554).
Maintenance (554).

Statutes have to a great extent displaced the common-law doctrine as to champerty, but it has been held to prevail in Missouri.<sup>2</sup>

Grants of land held adversely<sup>3</sup> are in many states void as champertous,<sup>4</sup> but the grantor must have been disseised<sup>5</sup> and the possession must be adverse.<sup>6</sup> Hence the rule does not apply to owners under statutory disability.<sup>7</sup> The invalidity of such deeds exists only as between the adverse possessor and the grantor,<sup>8</sup> and the mere fact that the grantee had notice of the alleged title of a third person does not render the conveyance ineffective, where the claim of title was in fact baseless.<sup>9</sup> The Kentucky champerty statute has been held not to apply to an easement.<sup>10</sup>

Agreements as to contingent fees and payment of expenses at trial.<sup>11</sup>—In most states a contract for a contingent interest in the subject-matter of the litigation as compensation for legal services is valid,<sup>12</sup> but an agreement by an attorney to pay the evidence, though conflicting, was sufficient to support decision of ordinary, and no error of law is complained of. Wilcher v. Nunn, 127 Ga. 7, 55 S. E. 924.

12. Petition failed to state evidence heard or facts established in trial court. McBurnett v. Lampkin [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 864.

13. When appeal is from judgment of judge awarding or denying rule nisi, appeal must be taken under § 431 of Code of 1896, and security for costs approved by judge; but, when appeal is from final judgment of court, appeal is governed by § 2827, and security must be approved by clerk of court. Mayfield v. Tuscaloosa County Com'rs Ct. [Ala.] 41 So. 932.

Deed given prior to St. 1891, p. 919, c. 354, authorizing such conveyances, and not delivered on the premises. Joyce v. Dyer, 189 Mass. 64, 75 N. E. 81.

5. Occasional entry on land for purpose of cutting hay does not amount to disseisin of owner. State Finance Co. v. Beck [N. D.] 109 N. W. 357.

6. Merely obtaining conveyance to land does render grantee adverse holder within champerty statute. Collingsworth v. Enterprise Land, Min. & Lumber Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 467, 99 S. W. 234. One in actual possession who announces that his possession is not adverse but amicable has not such possession as will defeat a deed thereto in absence of notice of renouncement of amicable holding to true owner that his possession was hostile. Madison Stockyards Co. v. Frazee, 30 Ky. L. R. 254, 98 S. W. 283. Evidence held to sustain verdict negating claim of adverse possession. Westerfield v. McDonald, 30 Ky. L. R. 1034, 100 S. W. 230.

7. One in possession as purchaser from an infant does not hold adversely to infant so as to render void a conveyance by infant to another after attaining his majority. Smith v. Cornett, 30 Ky. L. R. 302, 98 S. W. 297.

8. State Finance Co. v. Myers [N. D.] 112 N. W. 76.

9. An unconstitutional purchase of land of which no one was in possession is not void or champertous under Rev. Codes 1905, § 8733, merely because the grantee's attorney examined the records before purchase and discovered defects in defendant's title. State Finance Co. v. Meyers [N. D.] 112 N. W. 76; State Finance Co. v. Trimble [N. D.] 112 N. W. 984.

People*, 126 Ill. App. 538. Though client agreed not to settle or compromise without attorney's consent, held not champertous. In re Speranza, 186 N. Y. 280, 78 N. E. 1070. Under a contract by which an attorney was to have as his compensation a share of land in controversy, if he succeeded, he is entitled to his share of the land recovered, though only part of it was recovered. Carlisle v. Gibbs [Tex. Civ. App.] by an attorney to collect a claim for $19 if $50 was recovered, and for a proportionate the costs of litigation is void.<sup>13</sup> Such contracts, however, must be distinguished from an agreement to pay costs out of the fruits of the litigation,<sup>14</sup> the latter being valid. That fee provided by contingent fee contract is exorbitant does not avoid it.<sup>15</sup> Poverty of a litigant, while evidence tending to establish a champertous agreement with the attorney, is not sufficient, alone, to establish such an agreement.<sup>16</sup> The fact that as to one action a contract may have been champertous does not affect vested rights in separate causes of action under the same contract.<sup>17</sup> Under the New York statute prohibiting the promising of a valuable consideration as an inducement to a retainer such promises do not affect a contingent fee contract unless made before retainer.<sup>18</sup> An agreement by an attorney to pay to a third person a portion of fees earned under a champertous contract is not from that fact alone champertous.<sup>19</sup>

Champerty as a defense.<sup>23</sup>—Champerty is a defense only as between parties to the alleged champertous agreement and their privies,<sup>24</sup> and to be available must be pleaded.<sup>25</sup>

Maintenance.<sup>26</sup>—Maintenance is the aiding of a litigant with money to prosecute or defend his suit by a stranger having no interest, direct or remote, immediate or contingent, upon an agreement with the party in interest, whereby such fee if more was recovered, made in good faith, held valid. Whinery v. Brown, 36 Ind. App. 276, 75 N. E. 605.

13. Contract for contingent fee held not champertous as requiring attorney to pay costs of litigation. Calkins v. Pease, 125 Ill. App. 270. An agreement by an attorney to pay all court fees, fees of witnesses, and necessary disbursements to judgment in consideration of clients' agreement to give him percentage of amount recovered, is void under Code Civ. Proc. § 74, prohibiting an attorney from making loans to client to conduct litigation. In re Speranza, 186 N. Y. 280, 78 N. E. 1070.

14. Agreement by attorney not to call upon client for money to pay necessary disbursements required in pending litigation does not render agreement champertous under Code Civ. Proc. § 74. Ransom v. Cutting [N. Y.] 81 N. E. 324.

15. In absence of fraud or concealment that amount to which attorney is entitled under contingent fee contract is disproportionate to value of service performed does not invalidate contract. Humphries v. McLachlan, 87 Miss. 532, 40 So. 151.

16. Evidence held insufficient to establish champertous contract between plaintiff and her counsel, the claim being based upon plaintiff's poverty and her inability to pay attorney's fees for conducting litigation. Lytle v. Goldberg [Wis.] 111 N. W. 718.

17. Where three persons having separate causes of action enter into contingent fee contract, such contract is not champertous as to two actions which have been commenced merely because thereafter one of the attorneys became surety for costs as to the third plaintiff. Taylor v. St. Louis Transit Co., 198 Mo. 715, 97 S. W. 155.

18. Contingent fee contract with an attorney held not champertous under Code Civ. Proc. § 74, because induced by a promise to advance money, it not being shown that the alleged promise was made before retainer. O'Neill v. Campbell, 103 N. Y. S. 150.

Proc. §§ 73, 74, prohibiting an attorney from purchasing or being interested in a chose in action with intent to sue thereon or to make loans to client. In re Speranza, 186 N. Y. 280, 78 N. E. 1070. Evidence that plaintiff was an attorney, and the opening statement of his counsel that plaintiff was a clerk in his office and held only the legal title, and the fact that action was brought within a month after assignment, held insufficient to show a purchase of a claim by an attorney with intent to sue thereon in violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 73. Oldmixon v. Severance, 104 N. Y. S. 1042.

28. Agreement by owner of land affected by change of adjacent waterway with an owner similarly situated to pay all costs of litigation in respect to such change held valid. Elser v. Gross Point, 223 Ill. 230, 79 N. E. 27. An agreement between two persons jointly interested in certain property by which one party agreed to pay all expenses of litigation in relation thereto and to share the proceeds thereof equally with the other is not champertous. Mexican Nat. Coal, Timber & Iron Co. v. Frank, 154 F. 217.

29. An agreement by which in consideration of plaintiff's services in procuring bonds to be sued on by defendant the latter agreed to pay the former one-half fee paid, plaintiff agreeing to pay one-half of all reasonable expenses necessary to successful prosecution of the actions, does not obligate him to pay any portion of costs of litigation and is not champertous. *Kelerher v. leaving property to "Wilder charity" held not violative of statute regulating uses and trusts. Appleby v. Appleby's Estate, 100 Minn. 408, 111 N. W. 305.

41. Donation of funds to committee to be expended for benefit of sufferers from burning of excursion steamer held to create valid trust, though such purpose was expressed by oral and written declarations and by conduct. Loch v. Mayer, 50 Misc. 442, 100 N. Y. S. 837.

42. Will held to mean that all income over and above certain bequests should be used for charitable purposes so that subject-matter was sufficiently certain. Welch v. Caldwell, 226 Ill. 488, 80 N. E. 1014.

43. Bequest to corporation for general purpose of its incorporation is not indefinite in any respect. Jordan's Adm'x. v. Richmond Home for Ladies [Va.] 56 S. E. 730. Bequest to trustees of Universalist general convention of remainder in certain realty which was to be by them sold and proceeds applied to mission work in the U. S. held not void for uncertainty. Jordan v. Universalist General Convention Trustees [Va.] 57 S. E. 652. Direction to executors to distribute residue to such religious, charitable, and benevolent institutions "as in their discretion shall be best and proper" held to create valid trust. In re Dulle's Estate [Pa.] 67 A. 49. Fact that will was indefinite as to any particular institution or any particular charitable purpose held not to invalidate provision creating charitable trust. In re Shattuck's Will, 103 N. Y. S. 520. Will expressing testatrix's desire to devote greater portion of property to charitable purposes and directing executors to give income to such charitable purposes as they and their successors should judge would do most real good held to constitute valid gift to charitable uses. Selleck v. Thompson [R. I.] 67 A. 425. Will giving igned with reasonable certainty. There must also be a class of beneficiaries to whom the gift may apply.<sup>45</sup> Statutes in some states provide that such gifts shall not fail because of indefiniteness or uncertainty as to the beneficiaries.<sup>46</sup> A mere misnomer of a corporate beneficiary does not render the gift invalid,<sup>47</sup> extrinsic evidence being admissible to identify the institution intended.<sup>48</sup> Hospitals<sup>49</sup> not conducted for pecuniary profit,<sup>50</sup> churches,<sup>51</sup> and masonic associations,<sup>52</sup> have been widow life estate in all testator's property on condition that she give as she might see fit to his relations, and that balance should be given "to advance the cause of religion and promote the cause of charity" in such manner as she should think would be most conducive to the carrying out of testator's wishes, held not to create such a trust for charitable use as equity could enforce after widow's death. Hadley v. Forsee [Mo.] 101 S. W. 59.

44. Certainty of beneficiaries is secured where a power of selection or appointment is vested in some person. Welch v. Caldwell, 226 Ill. 488, 80 N. E. 1014. Where will provided that income, above certain bequests, should be devoted to a certain association and other charitable purposes selected by widow, and vested her with power of appointment of residue of estate to charitable and religious purposes after her death held that gift was not void for uncertainty of beneficiaries. Id. Question as to effect of death of widow without exercising power as to residue held not open to consideration during her lifetime. Id. Trust whereby executors were authorized to distribute residue of estate among such religious, charitable, and "benevolent" institutions as they might in their discretion deem proper, held not too indefinite to be enforced. In re Dulles's Estate [Pa.] 67 A. 49. Beneficiaries of trust fund for relief of sufferers from burning of excursion steamer held sufficiently definite, so that Laws 1893, p. 1748, c. 701, providing that charitable gifts shall not be deemed invalid because of indefiniteness of beneficiaries, was inapplicable. Loch v. Mayer, 50 Misc. 442, 100 N. Y. S. 837.

Devises to corporation for purpose of helping to educate poor Catholic children (McDonald v. Shaw [Ark.] 98 S. W. 952), and to pastor of certain church for purpose of helping to establish school in parish for education of Catholic boys, and for helping to educate young men for the priesthood, held not void for indefiniteness of beneficiaries (Id.). Bequest in trust to establish and maintain school for purpose of educating boys residing in Illinois between ages of 12 and 18, and who are unable to educate themselves, held not void for uncertainty as to individual members, such uncertainty being necessary to valid charity. Tincher v. Arnold [C. C. A.] 147 F. 665. Gift in trust for benefit of unincorporated religious association held void, under laws of West Virginia, for uncertainty, whether regarded as devise of realty or gift of personalty. Miller v. Ahrens, 150 F. 644.

45. Trust for purpose of educating boys of certain age in Illinois who are unable to educate themselves held not rendered void for want of such a class by reason of fact that in that state all children could obtain free education at public schools, there being a class of boys unable to attend them. Tincher v. Arnold [C. C. A.] 147 F. 665.

46. Laws 1893, c. 701, held not to validate gift to unincorporated association attempting to make it trustee for itself as such beneficiary. Catt v. Catt, 103 N. Y. S. 740.

47. See, also, Wills, 8 C. L. 2305. Bequest or devise will not fail because of mere inaccuracy in designation of beneficiary, where meaning of testator can be gathered with reasonable certainty from the instrument itself, or where the identity of the objects of testator's bounty can be shown by intrinsic evidence, which is always admissible for that purpose where there is ambiguity or uncertainty. McDonald v. Shaw [Ark.] 98 S. W. 952. Devise to "the convent of the Sisters of Mercy at Ft. Smith, known as St. Anne's Convent," held intended for the "Sisters of Mercy of the Female Academy of Ft. Smith," a corporation. Id. "Sisters of the Poor of St. Francis," a corporation conducting hospital known as the St. Francis Hospital, held to take bequest to the "Trustees of St. Francis Hospital," particularly as act under which it was incorporated provided that no misnomer should defeat any gift or devise to it. Johnston v. Hughes, 187 N. Y. 446, 80 N. E. 373. Extrinsic evidence as to knowledge and relations of testatrix to various societies considered and held that "Christmas Fund of the Protestant Episcopal church in the Diocese of Western New York" was entitled to bequest to "the society for Disabled Protestant Episcopal Clergymen, by whatever name said society may be known." In re North, 52 Misc. 429, 103 N. 50. Whether or not a corporation is one for pecuniary profit must be determined from its articles, and evidence alunde is inadmissible to show that it is in fact a charitable association. Gitzhoffer v. Sisters of Holy Cross Hospital Ass'n [Utah] 88 P. 691. Corporation conducting hospital held one for pecuniary profit and not charity. Gitzhoffer v. Sisters of Holy Cross Hospital Ass'n [Utah] 88 P. 691.

51. Churches are public charitable institutions and property of church is charitable trust fund. Bruce v. Central M. E. Church, 147 Mich. 230, 13 Det. Leg. N. 1099, 110 N. W. 951.

52. Evidence that masonic association was formed for certain purposes of charity and held to be charities, and gifts for educational or religious purposes, gifts to charitable uses.<sup>53</sup>

In the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary, and subject to the rights of the surviving husband or wife, one may by will give all his property to charity.<sup>54</sup> In some states the amount that can be so disposed of is limited, where the testator is survived by certain named relatives.<sup>55</sup> In others all gifts,<sup>56</sup> or all gifts in excess of a certain amount,<sup>57</sup> are void if made within a specified time before the death of the grantor or testator.

The rule against perpetuities is generally held not to apply to charitable gifts,<sup>58</sup> though a contrary rule seems to prevail in some states.<sup>59</sup>

§ 2. Capacity of donee or trustee.<sup>60</sup>—In order that gifts to corporations for charitable purposes may be valid, the corporation must be capable of taking and holding the property,<sup>61</sup> and the gift must be for a use consistent with the purposes held its funds in trust for such purposes alone, etc., held sufficient to support finding as to its charitable character. Kauffman v. Foster, 3 Cal. App. 741, 86 P. 1108.

53. Gifts for educational purposes. McDonald v. Shaw [Ark.] 93 S. W. 952. Bequest to trustees of incorporated college to use income for higher education of young men for Christian ministry on certain conditions held to create public charity. Trustees of Washburn College v. O'Harra [Kan.] 90 P. 234. Fund raised for benefit of widows and orphans of ministers of particular church, accumulations in excess of amount necessary for that purpose to be used for other objects connected with church in discretion of warden and vestry, held valid charitable trust for religious purposes which could be applied cy pres on proper showing. Sears v. Attorney General, 193 Mass. 551, 79 N. E. 772. Gift to incorporated college, both founded and conducted as a charity, held gift to charitable use, though there was nothing in will in connection with gift indicating a charitable purpose. Amole's Estate, 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 636.

54. Except as to statutory rights of surviving husband or wife. Hubbard v. Worcester Art Museum [Mass.] 80 N. E. 490.

55. Bequest in violation of Laws 1860, p. 607, c. 360, providing that no person having a husband, wife, child, or parent shall bequeath or devise more than half his estate to any charitable society, is void as to such excess, and such invalidity may be taken advantage of by others than the persons therein enumerated. St. John v. Andrews Inst. for Girls, 117 App. Div. 698, 102 N. Y. S. 808. Since will takes effect at testator's death, held that word "having" should be construed to mean "leaving him surviving," and hence validity of such bequests depends on survivorship of one of those enumerated in the act. Id. Where husband and wife perished in common disaster, held that burden was on next of kin, who were relying on the act to defeat husband's bequest to charity, to prove that wife survived him. Id. In determining whether will gives more than half of estate to charities, held that life estate given to widow should be considered as legacy, and that present value thereof should be deducted from legacies to charities and others. In re Strang, 105 N. Y. S. 566. Statute does not apply to donations by deeds of trust executed during the lifetime of the donor. Robb v. Washington and Jef- erson College, 185 N. Y. 485, 78 N. E. 359. May be insisted on by any person who derives a benefit therefrom. Id.

56. Gift to college held gift to charitable use within meaning of Act April 26, 1855, § 11, P. L. 328, and void where will was executed within one calendar month of testator's death. Amole's Estate, 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 636. Will executed less than 30 days before testator's death recited that testator was insured for certain sum in fraternal order made payable to certain person, "who is authorized to distribute the same according to directions given him by myself during my lifetime." Such directions were given more than 10 years before testator's death. Held that in so far as they directed gifts to charity they were not void as made within 30 days of testator's death. Kelley's Estate, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 106.

57. Laws 1848, p. 448, c. 319, § 6, providing that certain corporations shall not take more than one-fourth of an estate under a will made within two months of testator's death, held to apply only to corporations formed under that act. In re Shattuck's Will, 103 N. Y. S. 520.

58. Gift of residue to trustees to manage until certain sum had accumulated, when it was to be devoted to charity held not to offend rule because of perpetuity in first taker, or to be void for remoteness. Tincher v. Arnold [C. C. A.] 147 F. 665.

59. In case of bequests for charitable uses law permits suspension of ownership and power of alienation during period necessary to form corporation, not exceeding two lives in being at testator's death, to take bequest, which, in such case, is valid as an executory devise or bequest. St. John v. Andrews Inst. for Girls, 117 App. Div. 698, 102 N. Y. S. 808. Trust during lives of seven annuitants not rendered valid because ultimate gift was to charity. Robb v. Washington & Jefferson College, 185 N. Y. 485, 78 N. E. 359.

60. See 7 C. L. 628.

61. Statute held to have ipso facto created corporation so that it was capable of taking devise. McDonald v. Shaw [Ark.] 93 S. W. 952. Charter of incorporation of home for indigent women held valid. Jordan's Adm'x. v. Richmond Home for Ladies [Va.] 56 S. E. 730. Corporation founded under laws of Ohio to administer charity held at least a de facto corporation and entitled to the bequest. St. John v. Andrews Inst. for Girls, 117 App.

for which the corporation was created.<sup>62</sup> The amount of property which such corporations may hold is limited by statute in some states.<sup>63</sup> There is a conflict of authority as to the right of unincorporated religious and charitable associations to take and hold property.<sup>64</sup> The capacity of a foreign corporation to take ordinarily depends upon the law of the state where it is organized. The interpretation of the charter of a corporation for the purpose of determining its right to hold property is governed by the law of the state where it is organized,<sup>65</sup> but its right to hold realty in other states is limited by the statutes and public policy of the state where such realty is situated.<sup>66</sup> It has been held that, in the absence of express statutory authority, a state cannot take property for the purposes of a charitable trust.<sup>67</sup>

Div. 698, 102 N. Y. S. 808. Corporation held validly incorporated and hence entitled to take bequest. In re Nason's Will, 104 N. Y. S. 601. Validity of corporation cannot be attacked in action to construe will leaving property to it. Smith v. Havens Relief Fund Soc., 103 N. Y. S. 770. Devise of land in West Virginia in trust for benefit of foreign religious corporation held void as contrary to public policy, laws of that state forbidding incorporation of church organizations or holding by them, through trustees, of realty in more than specified amount or for other than specified purposes. Miller v. Ahrens, 150 F. 644.

62. Gift to charitable corporation composed of members of Catholic religious society, organized for gratuitous care of sick, aged, infirm, and poor, to be used for saying masses for souls of the dead, held for a use consistent with the purposes of the corporation, included within powers given it, and therefore valid. Johnston v. Hughes, 187 N. Y. 446, 80 N. E. 373.

63. Society incorporated under Laws 1871, c. 301, held to have power to take and hold property devised to it by persons mentioned in certificate of its incorporation to an unlimited amount, subject only to limitations on right of person leaving certain relatives to give more than certain portion of his property to charity. Smith v. Havens Relief Fund Soc., 103 N. Y. S. 770. Though Rev. Laws, c. 125, § 8, limits amount of property which charitable corporation is authorized to hold, gift to such a corporation by will to an amount in excess of such limit is valid as against everyone but the state. Hubbard v. Worcester Art Museum [Mass.] 80 N. E. 490. Hence St. 1906, p. 278, c. 312, increasing limit, operates as waiver of right of state to object to holding by corporation of sum in excess of previous limit given to it by a will probated prior to its enactment. Id.

64. See 7 C. L. 629, n. 94. Unincorporated association cannot take and hold property for purposes of administering charitable trust. Catt v. Catt, 103 N. Y. S. 740. Gift in remainder to Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts for purpose of founding scholarships, with provision that treasurer of college should be custodian of fund, held void, college not being a corporation or even a voluntary association. Id. Gift held equally void even if it could be construed as gift in trust to treasurer of such college. Id.

65. The law favors the upholding of charitable bequests whether they are to be administered at home or abroad, and if to be administered abroad right of foreign legatee to take will be determined by the courts of the forum before directing executors to turn over fund, but under law of the foreign jurisdiction, and unaffected by laws of state of forum in regard to perpetuities and accumulations. St. John v. Andrews Inst. for Girls, 117 App. Div. 698, 102 N. Y. S. 808.

66. Miller v. Ahrens, 150 F. 644.

67. Even if, under Iowa Code, § 2903, devise or bequest might vest title in that state if same were accepted, held that it did not do so where it was not accepted when will went into effect, and acceptance thereafter could not operate retroactively. Catt v. Catt, 103 N. Y. S. 740.

68. See 7 C. L. 629. See, also, Trusts, 8 C. L. 2169; Wills, 8 C. L. 2305.

69. See, also, § 4, post. Where trustees were to exercise their judgment and discretion in disposing of trust estate, held that they might avail themselves of judgment and wishes of testator as disclosed by his declarations and conversations. Rothschild v. Schiff, 188 N. Y. 327, 80 N. E. 1030.

70. Will held to give trustees power to select beneficiaries of trust for educational purposes. Tincher v. Arnold [C. C. A.] 147 F. 665. Selection of beneficiaries left to discretion of trustees as directed by will. Selleck v. Thompson [R. I.] 67 A. 425.

71. Will held to show intention to constitute pastors of certain church in succession as trustees. McDonald v. Shaw [Ark.] 98 S. W. 952. Will held to create trust for charitable purposes and to vest widow as trustee with such estate as was necessary to carrying out of trust, though she was not specifically named as trustee. Welch v. Caldwell, 226 Ill. 488, 80 N. E. 1014. Will giving residue in trust to pay income to testator's wife for life, with direction that after her death part of fund should go to charitable corporation to be formed by executors, held to show intention that corporation should take though it was not formed until after widow's death. St. John v. Andrews Inst. for Girls, 117 App. Div. 698, 102 N. Y. S. 808. Gift in remainder to Iowa State College of Agriculture held not a gift to ing the trust. So, too, whether a gift is absolute or in trust is ordinarily a question of intention.<sup>72</sup>

§ 4. Administration and enforcement.<sup>73</sup>—The trustee takes the legal title to trust property,<sup>74</sup> and he alone has power to execute the trust.<sup>75</sup> An otherwise valid trust will not, however, be allowed to fail for want of a trustee, but the court will appoint one<sup>76</sup> in a proper proceeding instituted for that purpose.<sup>77</sup> In some states the court itself is required to act where no trustee is named.<sup>78</sup>

The administration of charities is always subject to the supervision and control of courts of equity,<sup>79</sup> or of certain particular courts designated by statute.<sup>80</sup>

The purposes for which trust funds may be used are limited to those designated in the instrument creating the trust.<sup>81</sup> Gifts for charitable purposes which either originally or in the course of time cannot be literally executed will, in most states, be administered as nearly as may be according to the donor's purpose.<sup>82</sup> There is, state of Iowa for purposes designated in will. Catt v. Catt, 103 N. Y. S. 740.

72. Devise of land to executors with directions to sell same and pay certain part of proceeds to a corporation, having for its object, as stated in act incorporating it, "the gratuitous care of the sick, aged, infirm, and poor," held not to create trust but to be an absolute gift to corporation, though it was provided that it was to be for the use and benefit of the "Blessed Virgin Mary purgatorial fund of said hospital" and there was, in fact, no such fund. Johnston v. Hughes, 187 N. Y. 446, 80 N. E. 373. Gift to certain named persons with expression of wish that they use same in creating charitable or educational institution, held to indicate intention that they should take, not as tenants in common but as trustees and joint tenants, title vesting in survivors. Rothschild v. Schiff, 188 N. Y. 327, 80 N. E. 1030. Bequest held an absolute one to corporation for its general purposes, and not one in trust to be devoted to particular purpose, or limited to period during which it maintained hospital in certain city. In re Nason's Will, 104 N. Y. S. 601. Gifts in trust for charitable uses are to be deemed absolute gifts in so far as the settlor or testator is concerned. Gift to corporation to be formed held not one in trust in such sense as would invalidate it under statutes relating to perpetuities and accumulations. St. John v. Andrews Inst. for Girls, 117 App. Div. 698, 102 N. Y. S. 808.

74. Laws 1893, p. 1748, c. 701. Rothschild v. Schiff, 188 N. Y. 327, 80 N. E. 1030.

75. Title to trust property having vested in trustees, held that, so long as any of them survived, they alone had power to execute trust, and finding that majority of them had reached conclusion that fund should be devoted to particular institution did not show an execution by them or authorize court to direct that it be so used. Rothschild v. Schiff, 188 N. Y. 327, 80 N. E. 1030.

76. Even if will did not give trustees power to select beneficiaries of trust for educational purposes, held that court could appoint trustee for that purpose. Tincher v. Arnold [C. C. A.] 147 F. 665.

77. Court held to have no power to appoint trustee to take and administer charitable bequests to voluntary associations in proceeding on case made, under court and Prac. Act 1905, § 323, to determine validity of such bequests, since act prohibits administering of any relief in such cases. In re Guild [R. I.] 65 A. 605.

78. Laws 1893, c. 701, held not to authorize court to act as trustee of gift to foreign association. Catt v. Catt, 103 N. Y. S. 740.

79. Masonic association to which fund was bequeathed for charitable purposes held so far under control of court of equity that it could be compelled to execute duties of trust and be dealt with for breach thereof. Kauffman v. Foster, 3 Cal. App. 741, 86 P. 1108.

80. Direction to trustee to pay over income to religious, educational, or eleemosynary institutions, as he might deem advisable, held to show an intent that it should be used for charitable purposes which such institutions represented, so that, under Laws 1893, c. 701, § 2, supreme court had control over gift, and could be appealed to at any time to see that it took course indicated and did not go to societies incompetent to take it, and was not used by any society for a purpose not contemplated by testator or the law. In re Shattuck's Will, 103 N. Y. S. 520.

81. Complainant association held to take legacy solely for purpose of establishing home for aged Germans as provided in will, and not for any of its other more general objects. German Pioneer Verein v. Meyers [N. J. Err. & App.] 67 A. 23. Where money was donated for benefit of sufferers from burning of excursion steamer, held that payment of any part of fund to church giving the excursion would be an unjustifiable diversion from original purpose of the trust. Loch v. Mayer, 50 Misc. 442, 100 N. Y. S. 837.

82. Where a main charitable purpose is disclosed with reasonable clearness, directions of donor relating to management of trust, not intended as limitations, will be regarded as directory only, if necessary to preserve trust, and carry out its leading purpose. Tincher v. Arnold [C. C. A.] 147 F. 665. Provision that net income of balance of fund, after erection of school house, should be used to pay teachers employed in school held not mandatory so as to prevent use of part of such income for heat and other necessary expenses, thereby rendering scheme abortive. Id. If gift to charitable corporation of property in excess of amount such corporations were authorized to hold by Rev. Laws, c. 125, § 8, was void, held that, on subsequent enactment of St. 1906, p.

however, no room for the application of this doctrine if literal compliance is possible.<sup>83</sup>

The right of the trustee to sell the property of the trust estate depends on the nature of his title and the terms of the instrument creating the trust.<sup>84</sup> Provision is sometimes made that trustees may appoint their successors.<sup>85</sup>

By statute in some states trustees of charitable corporations are not entitled to receive compensation except under some special employment by the board, or authority expressed in the original deed or instrument of trust.<sup>86</sup>

This topic deals with chattel mortgages only,<sup>87</sup> excluding conditional sales,<sup>88</sup> general trust deeds upon the property of corporations,<sup>89</sup> such as railroads,<sup>90</sup> street railways,<sup>91</sup> and water companies.<sup>92</sup> The effect of the mortgage as a preference or fraudulent transfer is treated elsewhere,<sup>93</sup> as well as limitations on actions to enforce it<sup>94</sup> and questions relating to interest.<sup>95</sup> So, also, the law pertaining to filing Laws 1901, p. 751, c. 291, giving supreme court control over certain charitable gifts and providing that when it appears that circumstances have so changed since execution of "instrument" creating such a gift that literal compliance with its terms has become impractical or impossible, court shall direct administration in such manner as shall most effectively accomplish general purpose, but that no such order shall be made until expiration of 25 years from execution of instrument, or without consent of donor or grantor of property, if living, construed, and held applicable to trust for benefit of sufferers from disaster, and created by oral language, or expressions, or by conduct of various donors of the fund. Loch v. Mayer, 50 Misc. 442, 100 N. Y. S. 837. On application by trustees of such fund for directions as to disposition of balance after relieving all worthy applicants, held that court could not direct distribution of fund to others than such sufferers under cy pres doctrine until expiration of 25 years, and was trustees' duty to continue to administer it and to keep and add to fund moneys not expended until expiration of such time, when application for directions as to its disposition might be renewed. Id.

or recording of the instrument and notice of prior rights or liens is fully discussed in a separate article.<sup>96</sup>

§ 1. What constitutes a chattel mortgage.<sup>97</sup>—A common-law chattel mortgage is an absolute sale of personal property subject to redemption,<sup>98</sup> and this may be valid as between the parties though the property is not actually delivered and though the agreement is not in writing.<sup>99</sup> It must, however, appear that there was some debt due or to become due, or that the instrument was intended as security for some contingent liability.<sup>1</sup> The intention of the parties governs.<sup>2</sup> Hence the mere absence of terms of defeasance is not controlling,<sup>3</sup> and except where the question arises under some penal statute,<sup>4</sup> or in cases of conditional sales,<sup>5</sup> an instrument must be considered a mortgage if, taken alone or in connection with surrounding facts, it appears to have been given as a security.<sup>6</sup>

§ 2. Subject-matter. What may be mortgaged.<sup>7</sup>—After-acquired property may be covered by the mortgage<sup>8</sup> provided possession is taken by the mortgagee after the property is acquired by the mortgagor.<sup>9</sup> Thus, a mortgage on a stock of goods may be made to cover goods subsequently purchased to replenish the stock,<sup>10</sup> and in such case, when the mortgagee takes possession of the after-acquired goods, they are brought under the operation of the mortgage as of its date.<sup>11</sup> In like manner the mortgage may include outstanding book accounts and also accounts thereafter to become due to the mortgagor in the regular course of business.<sup>12</sup> A chattel real is not the proper subject of a chattel mortgage.<sup>13</sup>

5. Agreement to deliver goods to be sold in usual course, but title and right of possession to all goods and proceeds to remain in vendor until price was fully paid, and vendee not to remove any goods except to sell in ordinary course of business, held a conditional sale, and not a chattel mortgage void in bankruptcy proceedings. Title and interest of mortgagor.<sup>14</sup>—A mortgage on a crop not yet planted attaches only to such interest as the mortgagor has in the crop when it comes into being.<sup>15</sup>

Description of property.<sup>16</sup>—The property must be so described as to enable third persons to identify it by the aid of such inquiries as the instrument itself suggests.<sup>17</sup> A landlord who expressly waives his lien in favor of a mortgagee, and has knowledge of the property covered by the mortgage, is not such a stranger to the transaction as to enable him to take advantage of the inadequacy of a description good as between the parties.<sup>18</sup> A vendee who gives a mortgage covering the goods delivered to him may not defeat the lien by showing that such goods were not those which he actually bought.<sup>19</sup>

The question of what is covered by the description is largely one of intent.<sup>20</sup> In order that after-acquired property may be covered, the language must manifest an intention to include it.<sup>21</sup>

§ 3. Consideration.<sup>22</sup>—Like other contracts, the mortgage must be supported by a consideration.<sup>23</sup> That the mortgagee had already taken another mortgage to secure the same liability does not render the second mortgage invalid as being without consideration.<sup>24</sup>

§ 4. Fraudulent conveyances.<sup>25</sup>

§ 5. The Instrument. Form, execution, and delivery.<sup>26</sup>—The lex citus governs as to the validity of a chattel mortgage.<sup>27</sup> In the absence of statute, recordation,<sup>28</sup> acknowledgement,<sup>29</sup> or attestation,<sup>30</sup> is not essential to validity as between the parties and persons with notice, and a chattel mortgage executed by a corporation need not be under its corporate seal.<sup>31</sup> Under the Wyoming statute a valid mortgage on partnership property must be signed by every member of the firm,<sup>32</sup> regardless of whether the mortgagee knows that the chattels are firm property.<sup>33</sup> In Massachusetts a mortgage on household furniture to secure a loan for less than $1,000 on which eighteen per cent interest or more is charged is void unless it gives information as to amount, time, interest, and actual expense of making the loan.<sup>34</sup>

Alteration, reformation, and construction.<sup>35</sup>—The instrument will be reasonably construed as to amounts secured<sup>36</sup> and property subjected.<sup>37</sup>

Renewal affidavits.<sup>38</sup>—The Kansas statute extending the renewal periods to two years does not apply to mortgages filed prior to its passage.<sup>39</sup>

§ 6. Filing or recording and notice of title or rights.<sup>40</sup>

44, 45. Mere purchase of grain and mingling it with other grain, not conversion. Catlett v. Stokes [S. D.] 110 N. W. 84.

§ 8. Disposal and use of the property by the mortgagor.<sup>46</sup>—Statutes have been enacted in many states penalizing the fraudulent sale or other disposition of the mortgaged property by the mortgagor without the consent of the mortgagee.<sup>47</sup> Such statutes are considered as part of the mortgage the same as if embodied therein in so many words,<sup>48</sup> and their violation gives the mortgagee the right to sell as for breach of condition,<sup>49</sup> and the right to sell includes the right to possession.<sup>50</sup> Intention to defraud is essential to conviction,<sup>51</sup> and in Georgia it must be shown that the mortgagee sustained loss.<sup>52</sup> Where the possession of the mortgagor is lawful in the first instance, replevin will not lie until after demand or actual conversion.<sup>53</sup> A repudiation of the right of the mortgagee in the chattels, evidenced by the exercise of dominion over them inconsistent with such right, constitutes conversion.<sup>54</sup>

§ 9. Liens and priorities; waiver.<sup>55</sup>—When a recorded mortgage covers future advances, one who buys the property mortgaged, after the making of any such advance, takes subject thereto.<sup>56</sup> Most courts observe a distinction between a mortgage lien on existing property and the equitable lien created by a provision that the mortgage shall cover after-acquired property,<sup>57</sup> the latter not attaching until possession is taken by the mortgagee or an equitable proceeding is brought to establish it.<sup>58</sup> Legislation which postpones a valid recorded mortgage to liens subsequently created is unconstitutional;<sup>59</sup> but in some states a first mortgagee, in order to maintain the priority of his lien over that of a second mortgagee, must take possession of the property within a reasonable time after default, otherwise the second mortgagee acquires a prior right if he first takes possession.<sup>60</sup>

Duration of mortgage lien.<sup>61</sup>—Where the mortgagor sells the property and the mortgagee thereafter takes from the vendee another mortgage on the same and other property, the question of novation is one of intention.<sup>62</sup> Under a statute continuing a mortgage on a growing crop so long as the crop shall remain on the land of the mortgagor, removal from that land prima facie removes the incumbrance,<sup>63</sup> but mortgaged property subsequently becoming a part of the assets of a partnership remains subject to seizure and sale under the mortgage.<sup>64</sup> in the absence of estoppel against the mortgagee,<sup>65</sup> and where a dissatisfied vendee has the property exchanged for other property pursuant to the contract of sale, the substitution does not satisfy the note and mortgage given for the purchase price.<sup>66</sup>

Conflicting liens.<sup>67</sup>—A valid mortgage properly filed is superior to a subsequent attachment lien,<sup>68</sup> and at common law the mortgage takes precedence though the attaching creditor had no notice, actual or constructive, that it existed.<sup>69</sup> A seed grain lien takes priority over a chattel mortgage previously executed,<sup>70</sup> but the lien of a prior recorded mortgage is superior to that of a livery stable keeper or agister unless the animals were delivered to him to be kept and cared for with the consent of the mortgagee.<sup>71</sup> The title acquired by taking an assignment of a conditional sale note after purchasing the interest of the vendee in the property prevails as against the lien of a mortgage executed after the note was given and before the second sale, though this sale was made subject to liens of record.<sup>72</sup> Where a mortgage is construed to secure only advances made during a certain year, it will not, as against a second mortgagee, cover any advances made after the expiration of the year and the execution and recordation of his mortgage,<sup>73</sup> but the second mortgagee is not in a position to complain of the appropriation by the first mortgagee of so much of the property as is necessary to satisfy his demand for advances made after the expiration of the year but before the lien of the second mortgage attached.<sup>74</sup>

In many states a landlord has a superior lien on crops raised by his tenant for rent or other advances,<sup>75</sup> but a landlord who merely goes surety on his tenant's note for property purchased from another does not advance supplies within the meaning of a statute giving him priority as against mortgagees.<sup>76</sup> In Delaware where mortgaged property is moved by the mortgagor onto premises rented by him, and subsequently sold in distress for rent, the lien for rent is superior to that of the mortgagee.<sup>77</sup> A mortgagee who takes his mortgage from a tenant on the landlord's agreement to hold the property only "for the land rent" may not have his security impaired by an addition of rent due for previous years.<sup>78</sup>

Waiver.<sup>79</sup>—Where the mortgagee takes an assignment of a superior claim for rent, he may waive such lien as to the mortgaged property.<sup>80</sup> An agreement by the mortgagee that a third person may purchase the property and pay the price to him after making certain deductions is either a waiver or an exchange of the mortgage lien for the promise to make such payment.<sup>81</sup> A second mortgagee may waive priority as against a first mortgagee by requesting and procuring the latter to sell the property and apply the proceeds first to his own claim.<sup>82</sup> A title reserved by purchase-money notes is not lost by waiver or estoppel as against other creditors by the subsequent acceptance and foreclosure of a mortgage, such creditors having lost nothing thereby.<sup>83</sup>

§ 10. Assignment of the mortgage.<sup>84</sup>—The sale and indorsement of a note and its delivery to the purchaser, together with a mortgage securing it, operates to pass all the interest of the mortgagee.<sup>85</sup> An assignment of a chattel mortgage is supported by a sufficient consideration where the assignee agrees to surrender a lien on property sold by the assignor to the mortgagor.<sup>86</sup> A transfer of a note and an instrument expressly providing that title to certain chattels shall be in the creditor until the note is paid, and of all rights and interest in such instruments passes the legal title to the chattels, and not merely the interest of the creditors in the instruments.<sup>87</sup> Where the assignor warrants the validity of the mortgage as against judgment creditors of the mortgagor and a breach is alleged the assignee must show that he is unable to collect his claim in full.<sup>88</sup> If the mortgage proves void, he may recover the amount of the debt, but not amounts paid out to satisfy outstanding judgments.<sup>89</sup>

breach of a condition in the mortgage includes the right to possession for that purpose,<sup>99</sup> and the right to possession after a breach is not affected by the immaturity of the debt or the fact that a contingent liability secured against has not yet been incurred.<sup>1</sup> While a provision authorizing the mortgagee to take possession of and sell the property on default creates an irrevocable power coupled with an interest,<sup>2</sup> it does not authorize a taking of possession in any way involving a breach of the peace,<sup>3</sup> and the mortgagee is required to exercise good faith and diligence in disposing of the property, otherwise he will be charged with its reasonable value.<sup>4</sup>

Where a mortgage authorizes the mortgagee to declare the debt due and foreclose whenever he shall feel himself unsafe or insecure, the mortgagee may do so at any time when he has reasonable grounds for feeling unsafe,<sup>5</sup> and a vendee who had knowledge of such authorization cannot complain that the mortgagee exercises his option.<sup>6</sup> An assignor of the mortgage cannot be made defendant in an action to foreclose, no cause of action having yet accrued against him.<sup>7</sup> As in other cases, the evidence must be relevant,<sup>8</sup> and instructions must be justified thereby,<sup>9</sup> and appropriate to the case.<sup>10</sup> After-acquired property or choses of which no possession has been taken will not pass by foreclosure, in the absence of allegations showing the existence of the equitable lien or any reference thereto in the judgment of sale.<sup>11</sup> The proceeds of the sale being before the court, together with all the parties interested, and these having all prayed that the property be turned into cash, the invalidity of the mortgage will not prevent the court from doing complete equity where it is fully advised of the facts.<sup>12</sup> The mortgagee may not apply the proceeds to claims not secured by the mortgage<sup>13</sup> without the mortgagor's consent.<sup>14</sup> After foreclosure the mortgage is no longer executory within the meaning of a statute avoiding certain contracts at the option of one of the parties.<sup>15</sup> appropriate and misleading in view of fact that original plaintiff had been eliminated from the case. Williams & Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 546, 98 S. W. 916.

11. Cause of action did not pass by sale. Medina Gas & Elec. Light Co. v. Buffalo Loan, Trust & Safe Deposit Co., 104 N. Y. S. 625.

12. Could grant relief to mortgagee who also held purchase-money notes reserving title, though mortgage was invalid for lack of proper acknowledgment. Foster v. Briggs Mach. & Supply Co., 6 Ind. T. 342, 98 S. W. 120.

13. The debtor has no authority to direct that the mortgagee apply the proceeds of the sale on claims not secured by the mortgage. Citizens' Sav. Bk. v. Woods [Iowa] 111 N. W. 929. Where a tenant gave mortgages on animals kept on the farm, and the same were sold at foreclosure, mortgagees were required to apply the proceeds to the mortgage debt, and not to the landlord's claim for rent which they had acquired by assignment. Id.

§ 14. Other remedies as between the parties.<sup>17</sup>—The mortgagor may not, in an action on the note, counterclaim damages for the refusal of the mortgagee to allow him to market the property mortgaged pursuant to contract where the evidence shows that the mortgagee only advised against a sale at that particular time.<sup>18</sup> One who sues on the theory that a conveyance absolute on its face was made in trust, with the understanding that defendant satisfy a claim and account for the balance, may not introduce parol evidence to show that the conveyance was intended as a mortgage.<sup>19</sup>

§ 15. Remedies as against third persons.<sup>20</sup>—The mortgagee may maintain an action for the possession or value of the mortgaged property against third persons who wrongfully claim possession by purchase from the mortgagor,<sup>21</sup> but he cannot maintain trespass or conversion before default where he has no right to possession before that time.<sup>22</sup> Defendant may show estoppel,<sup>23</sup> or prior outstanding mortgages,<sup>24</sup> or that the mortgagee consented to the sale,<sup>25</sup> or that the chattels were included in a mortgage held by him;<sup>26</sup> and a purchaser is not liable for conversion where prior to demand upon him an agreement is entered into between the mortgagor and the mortgagee whereby the latter accepts other property in lieu of his mortgage lien.<sup>27</sup>

In Texas the statutory trial of a right of property is maintainable by a first mortgagee, in actual possession at the time of levy upon the property, under a judgment foreclosing a subsequent mortgage.<sup>28</sup> Where the title of a first mortgagee has become absolute by default and possession taken, a second mortgagee, having knowledge thereof, is guilty of conversion in obtaining possession of the chattels by an action to which the first mortgagee is not a party, and refusing to surrender them on

Citizenship and domicile are not synonymous and neither necessarily controls the other.<sup>5</sup> Residence in the United States creates a presumption of citizenship,<sup>6</sup> and once established is not affected by removal to a foreign country.<sup>7</sup> A British subject residing in the United States after the Declaration of Independence and taking no action indicating an election to adhere to the crown will be deemed a citizen of the United States.<sup>8</sup> The child of a citizen born in a foreign country is also a citizen,<sup>9</sup> but must, within a reasonable time after attaining his majority, elect as to whether to conserve to the citizenship of the country of his domicile or that of the citizenship of his father and is bound by his election.<sup>10</sup> Children of an expatriate, born in a foreign country, are not citizens.<sup>11</sup> A child born in the United States moving to a foreign country continues a citizen unless on attaining its majority it does something inconsistent therewith,<sup>12</sup> and no act of the father can deprive the child of such citizenship during its minority,<sup>13</sup> nor can the child during its minority expatriate itself.<sup>14</sup> The Act of Congress of 1802, relating to the citizenship of children of citizens from outside of the United States, does not apply to children born subsequent to its adoption.<sup>15</sup> To overcome the presumption of citizenship, evidence of an actual removal or a continued residence abroad with a fixed purpose to throw off the former allegiance is essential.<sup>16</sup> Declarations of a citizen after removing to a foreign country are admissible to show that he did not terminate his allegiance to the United States.<sup>17</sup> The Act of Congress of 1855, providing that citizenship shall not descend to children of citizens born abroad whose fathers never resided in the United States, is complied with by birth and residence of the father in the United States during a portion of his minority.<sup>18</sup>

CIVIL ARREST.

- § 1. Privilege from Arrest (570).
 § 2. Arrest on Mesne Process (570).
 § 3. Execution Against the Body (570).

- § 4. Supersedeas Bail or Discharge from Arrest (571).
 § 5. Liability for False Imprisonment (572).

Excludes admission to bail<sup>19</sup> and commitment for contempt in failing to obey decree.<sup>20</sup>

§ 1. Privilege from arrest.<sup>21</sup>—One claiming a statutory exemption must show himself to be within the provisions of the law.<sup>22</sup> Statutes in many states exempt persons attending judicial proceedings as witnesses from arrest on civil process,<sup>23</sup> and under such a statute a nonresident witness must be allowed a reasonable time within which to return to the place from which he came.<sup>24</sup> A bankrupt is exempt from arrest on a claim which is barred by discharge in bankruptcy.<sup>25</sup>

§ 2. Arrest on mesne process. When allowable.<sup>26</sup>—The right to arrest in a civil action is largely a matter of statutory regulation.<sup>27</sup>

Procedure to obtain arrest.<sup>28</sup>—The affidavit must allege facts from which the court can determine whether a cause of action exists,<sup>29</sup> upon competent and positive evidence sufficient to justify the court in making a finding upon a trial.<sup>30</sup> An affidavit designating defendant by a fictitious name is insufficient where it appears therefrom that plaintiff knew his true name.<sup>31</sup>

Writ and proceedings thereon.<sup>32</sup>—The validity of the arrest does not depend upon the validity of the cause of action,<sup>33</sup> and the existence of a good defense on the merits does not invalidate a capias ad respondendum.<sup>34</sup> Hence, in an action on a judgment, a capias is not invalidated by the fact that the judgment sued on is void,<sup>35</sup> but its invalidity may be set up in defense without resort to a writ of error.<sup>36</sup>

§ 3. Execution against the body. Occasion and propriety.<sup>37</sup>—Constitutions of many states prohibit imprisonment for debt.<sup>38</sup> Under such a provision prohibit-

Code 1896, § 4730, as amended by Acts 1903, p. 345, making person entering into contract of employment and procuring advances thereon, refusing to perform same, ing imprisonment for debt, except for fraud, fraud must be alleged and proven,<sup>39</sup> and must be submitted to the jury as a separate and distinct issue,<sup>40</sup> unless the cause of action is of such a nature that questions of debt and fraud can be tried in one issue so as to have a clear and intelligible finding as to each.<sup>41</sup> A body execution cannot issue on a claim barred<sup>42</sup> by discharge in bankruptcy.<sup>43</sup> While body executions are confined to actions at law, equity may grant such process in cases where, if the action had been at law, arrest could have been had,<sup>44</sup> except that in equity an execution will not issue where inability to pay appears.<sup>45</sup> The Federal courts may in the proper case enforce a state statute authorizing a body execution,<sup>46</sup> and though such statute is essentially a part of the state insolvent law, the right to the writ is not suspended by the passage of the national bankruptcy act.<sup>47</sup>

§ 4. Supersedeas bail or discharge from arrest.<sup>52</sup>—Petitions for discharge are regulated by statute, and a defendant seeking to avail himself thereof must comply strictly with its provisions<sup>53</sup> and must show that his application is covered by the statute under which relief is sought.<sup>54</sup> A voluntary discharge of the debtor by the creditor for a consideration does not preclude the latter from having the former arrested in a second suit upon the same obligation.<sup>55</sup> A discharge in bankruptcy from the debt for which defendant was arrested entitles him to his discharge from custody,<sup>56</sup> and though the state insolvent laws are suspended by the bankruptcy act, the defendant is nevertheless entitled to avail himself of their provisions to or to refund money, with intent to defraud, punishable as though they had stolen money advanced, held not unconstitutional as providing imprisonment for debt. State v. Vann [Ala.] 43 So. 357. procure his discharge where the statute under which arrest is authorized directs discharge upon compliance therewith.<sup>57</sup> Under the Georgia statute upon a satisfactory showing of inability to give security,<sup>58</sup> or to produce the property in an action for the recovery thereof, the court may order the defendant discharged without requiring security; but in the latter case where the property sued for is beyond the jurisdiction of the court, in the control of the defendant, and was taken there to keep it outside of the jurisdiction, the reasons for nonproduction must be clear and satisfactory.<sup>59</sup> Though the statute contemplates discharge from imprisonment, any restraint is sufficient.<sup>60</sup> and in a proceeding upon application for release thereunder, a traverse to the sheriff's return upon the bail process is too late if filed after pleading to the merits.<sup>61</sup> Where malice is conclusively established by the judgment upon which the capias issued, the defendant on a petition for discharge is not entitled to have the question of malice retried.<sup>62</sup> A motion to vacate an order of arrest may be considered if based on papers upon which the order was granted, although the defendant was not arrested.<sup>63</sup>

the term depend upon the provisions of the statute.<sup>71</sup> A mere scrivener or clerical assistant employed by a justice of the peace is not a clerk of court whose acts or representations are binding as those of the court.<sup>72</sup>

The Louisiana statute authorizing clerks of court to homologate the proceedings of family meetings is constitutional.<sup>73</sup> It is the right and duty of the clerk of an appellate court to control by reasonable regulations the inspection and handling of the records of his office.<sup>74</sup> In Iowa it is a misdemeanor for any officer required to keep a court docket or account to falsify the same, regardless of fraudulent motive,<sup>75</sup> and it is immaterial that the books falsified are not books specifically prescribed by statute to be kept by the officer where they are adopted and kept by him in his office for the purposes of settlement.<sup>76</sup> The negligent failure of a clerk to promptly enter and docket a judgment renders him liable for damages sustained by the judgment creditor or one who is substituted to his rights.<sup>77</sup> A clerk may not refuse to prepare and deliver an appeal transcript for defects which can be cured by appellant and which do not affect the jurisdiction of the appellate court.<sup>78</sup> The clerk is liable for negligence on the part of his deputy in the performance of duties pertaining to the office.<sup>79</sup>

Deputies.<sup>80</sup>—It will be presumed that one who appears to have acted as a deputy was a de jure deputy.<sup>81</sup> Ministerial duties which the clerk could have done may generally be performed by his deputy<sup>82</sup> in his own name.<sup>83</sup> The Iowa statute making it a misdemeanor to falsify court dockets or accounts applies to deputies as well as to clerks.<sup>84</sup>

Nature, establishment and public regulation.<sup>3</sup>—The Medical College of Georgia is not a state institution because the state has made appropriations to it and designated it as a branch of the state university,<sup>4</sup> and though it has been declared to be a public eleemosynary institution, it is liable for the torts of its agents in the conduct of its business and within the scope of their authority.<sup>5</sup> While a court may be authorized to allow an amendment of a college charter,<sup>6</sup> an amendment which seeks to change the permanent location of a college established under contract will not be granted against the objection of contracting parties.<sup>7</sup>

Requests and private aid.<sup>8</sup>

Public aid.<sup>9</sup>—A state has the power, through the agency of a university, to acquire and hold at the public expense forest lands for the promotion of education in scientific forestry.<sup>10</sup> A university so holding lands for the state may not contract with a corporation for the removal of timber therefrom in a manner hostile to the act under which it holds,<sup>11</sup> and a corporation contracts at its peril in relation to such lands where it has notice of the restricted powers of the university.<sup>12</sup> That part of the Nebraska statute providing for an annual state tax of one mill on the dollar for the maintenance of the state university was not repealed by the general revenue law of 1903.<sup>13</sup> The grants and appropriations made by the Congressional acts of 1862 and 1890, for the maintenance and support of state agricultural colleges, were made to the states themselves and not for the benefit of any particular institutions.<sup>14</sup> Hence a state treasurer cannot be required by one college to pay the fund to it where he is already about to pay it to another in accordance with the state and Federal statutes.<sup>15</sup> Money from the state agricultural experimental station fund created by the Federal statute of 1887 and supplemental acts may be expended by the board of regents of the Nebraska state university without any more specific legislative appropriation than that already implied by the constitution and statutes of that state.<sup>16</sup>

26. Declaration held to show a combination or contract in restraint of interstate trade or commerce in window glass. Wheeler-Stenzel Co. v. National Window sweeping scope of this statute, combining and creating a monopoly are made separate offenses.<sup>27</sup> A corporation as well as a natural person may be guilty of conspiring within the meaning of its terms;<sup>28</sup> and a number of persons as well as a single individual may be charged with attempting to monopolize.<sup>29</sup> Corporate officers may not claim immunity on the ground that the offenses were corporate acts where they personally participate in carrying out the illegal scheme,<sup>30</sup> and the act applies not only to those who originally agreed to combine but also to persons who subsequently participated in furthering the objects of the combination.<sup>31</sup> Contracts violative of the act are not merely unenforceable but per se illegal, so that one who is harmed thereby in his business or property has suffered a legal injury within the meaning of the seventh section giving a private right of action for damages.<sup>32</sup> It must, however, be shown, before a contract will be declared illegal, that it is clearly within the provisions of the statute.<sup>33</sup>

It has been held that the Federal act does not apply to a combination formed in a foreign country for the purpose of originating and maintaining steamship trade between the United States and a foreign port.<sup>34</sup> That an association is a party to an unlawful agreement in restraint of trade does not render it liable for damages resulting from the execution of a subsequent agreement by other parties to the first agreement, to which the association did not consent.<sup>35</sup>

Patented articles,<sup>36</sup> unless and until released by the owner of the patent from the dominion of his monopoly, are not articles of trade or interstate commerce within the meaning of the Sherman act;<sup>37</sup> hence the holder of a valid patent may require licensees to join other licensees in a combination or pool to control the output or prices of an innocuous article.<sup>38</sup> But the rule applicable to patented or copyrighted productions does not obtain as to articles or medicines made under secret process or formula.<sup>39</sup> A manufacturer and vendor of these articles cannot, so long as he keeps his process secret, bring himself within the principle granting a temporary monopoly in consideration of full publication.<sup>40</sup>

§ 2. Combinations violative of state anti-trust acts and of the common law.<sup>41</sup>

A monopoly includes not only an exclusive state grant of a right which was formerly common, but also any combination or contract the tendency of which is to prevent competition in its broad and general sense and control prices to the public detriment, regardless of the form assumed.<sup>42</sup> It is within the police power of a state to decide by its legislature what monopolies in trade should be forbidden as injurious to the public.<sup>43</sup> Combinations and monopolies in restraint of trade are illegal both at common law and by statute in many jurisdictions,<sup>44</sup> though with the exception of combinations obnoxious to the Federal anti-trust law,<sup>45</sup> a partial and reasonable restraint of trade is generally upheld,<sup>46</sup> especially at common law.<sup>47</sup> In determining whether a contract combination or trust is in unreasonable restraint of trade so as to be void at common law or by a statute, no hard and fast rule can be applied.<sup>48</sup> The court will consider the subject-matter, the situation of the parties, and all the attending circumstances.<sup>49</sup> It is immaterial whether or not the subject-matter of the combination is a prime necessity,<sup>50</sup> or whether prices have been raised or lowered,<sup>51</sup> or whether the monopoly is complete or not.<sup>52</sup> Not only what has been done but also what may be done pursuant to the powers attempted territorial effect,<sup>58</sup> a state statute is violated by members of a pool or trust formed without the state if their designs are executed within the state.<sup>59</sup> A corporation and its officers or agents may all be counted in making up the number necessary to constitute a conspiracy in violation of the anti-trust law.<sup>60</sup>

In the absence of statute, a contract legal in itself and made in the ordinary course of business is not rendered illegal or unenforceable merely because one of the parties is a member of a combination or has a monopoly.<sup>61</sup> But where a dealer is forced into an illegal combination and buys goods from its agency pursuant to and on terms fixed by the monopolistic agreement, the illegality of such agreement is a good defense to an action for the price.<sup>62</sup> A provision in a state act making it a defense in an action for the price of goods that the sale was made by a violation of the act does not apply where the alleged offense consisted in combining in another state.<sup>63</sup> General common-law principles applicable to contracts in restraint of trade are discussed in another article.<sup>64</sup> act of 1905 is not within the constitutional provision requiring an indictment or presentment of a grand jury.<sup>71</sup>

In a suit in a Federal court in Tennessee to recover treble damages under the Sherman law, the ten year state statute of limitations applies<sup>72</sup> and not the five year Federal statute applicable in suits for penalties and forfeitures.<sup>73</sup>

For purposes of prosecution an illegal combination among corporations in restraint of trade exists in each and every county where its constituent members exist and act, hence quo warranto proceedings based upon such illegal combination need not be brought in a county where the combination does business as a separate entity.<sup>74</sup> Members of a pool or trust formed without the state are punishable within the state and under its laws if their plans are carried out within the state.<sup>75</sup>

An association which is charged with complicity in, and as being the medium to execute, the various illegal acts going to make up the cause of action is properly made a party defendant.<sup>76</sup> Parties to one agreement in restraint of trade may not be joined in a joint tort action with parties to another and independent agreement and a joint judgment recovered against all.<sup>77</sup> A corporation offending against the Sherman act and its officers who personally participate may be jointly charged in one indictment.<sup>78</sup> In a proceeding under this law other parties may be brought in whenever the ends of justice require it,<sup>79</sup> whether residing within the limits of the district or not.<sup>80</sup> The approved practice in such case is to make all the conspirators, resident and nonresident, parties to the bill, setting forth the connection of each with the offense and, immediately upon filing the bill, present a proper petition praying that they may be summoned.<sup>81</sup>

An indictment under the Sherman act which charges in separate counts, a combination, a conspiracy in restraint of trade, and an attempt to monopolize a portion of such trade, all based on the same transactions, is not bad for duplicity as to any of the counts.<sup>82</sup> The alleged combination must be described with reasonable fullness,<sup>83</sup> but it is sufficient to state the time when the various acts complained of were done without setting out the precise time when the purpose or plan to monopolize or combine was first formed or devised.<sup>84</sup> In an action for damages under the Federal act, the declaration must set out the nature and substance of the contracts relied on and the substantial facts alleged to constitute an attempt at monopoly; the language of the statute is not sufficient.<sup>85</sup> If the declaration sufficiently charges a contract or combination in restraint of interstate trade, general allegations showing that by reason thereof plaintiff was deprived of his customers and that his business suffered injury are sufficient to sustain an action for damages.<sup>86</sup> An indictment in the language of the Kentucky statute sufficiently describes the offense.<sup>87</sup> A charge of conspiracy to lessen competition in the sale of oil "imported into the state" refers to oil already imported and not to oil to be imported.<sup>88</sup> A bill by the state to restrain a combination need not specifically allege injury to civil or property rights, injury to the public being presumed from a violation of laws affecting the public interest.<sup>89</sup>

In an action for damages against parties to an agreement in restraint of trade, a subsequent agreement entered into by only some of the defendants is not admissible to charge those who were not parties thereto.<sup>90</sup>

Only such damages may be recovered by a private person under the Sherman act as proximately and naturally flowed from the alleged combination.<sup>91</sup> In a suit to restrain a violation of the so called "Jenkins Act" of Nebraska, the court is not authorized, in the first instance, to declare a forfeiture of the charters of corporations found to have violated the act.<sup>92</sup> An indictment in separate counts, one for combining and the other for monopolizing, charges offenses legally distinct and justifies separate punishment on conviction under both counts.<sup>93</sup> Corporations may not be indicted and fined under the Tennessee statute, the only punishment for its violation by them being forfeiture of charter or deprivation of the right to do business in the state.<sup>94</sup> The imprisonment or penalty clause of the Valentine anti-trust law of Ohio does not contravene the constitutional requirement that all laws of a general nature have uniform operation throughout the state.<sup>95</sup> Where defendants are not misled into entering pleas of guilty or taking other steps prejudicial

Compulsory testimony and immunity of witnesses.<sup>98</sup>—When defendant is a corporation it may be required to produce books and papers in an action for treble damages under the Sherman act, though such action is penal in character.<sup>99</sup> A statute authorizing an order of court requiring a corporation to produce non-resident witnesses is valid,<sup>1</sup> and such statutes may provide for a reasonable order for the production of books and documents.<sup>2</sup> The position of the attorney general in applying for an order requiring the production of books and papers under the New York statute is somewhat analogous to that of one who before commencement of the action had the right to an inspection of the documents sought,<sup>3</sup> and petitioner should not be subjected to the strict rules which might obtain if a different relationship had existed between the parties.<sup>4</sup> Wide latitude must ordinarily be given in the examination of books and papers extending not only to the particular transactions attacked but to the previous history of defendant, including its organization and subsequent acts which may prove to be related to the alleged illegal scheme.<sup>5</sup> It will not be assumed that an attorney general is prompted by improper motives in seeking inspection of books and papers on mere assertions unsupported by facts.<sup>6</sup>

Original packages.<sup>16</sup>—The original package doctrine primarily concerns the right to sell within the state goods coming into it from outside,<sup>17</sup> and hence goods specifically appropriated to prior contracts of sale and shipped to fill such contracts are protected until delivery to the purchasers, though before that time they may be removed from the bundle or package in which they were shipped.<sup>18</sup> Where unidentified and unappropriated boxes or packages are shipped in a larger box or crate and subsequently removed therefrom, the interstate character of the transaction is destroyed and the business becomes subject to local laws.<sup>19</sup>

§ 2. Regulation of commerce. A. The "commerce clause" and its application to particular regulatory measures.<sup>20</sup>—This treats only of the validity of regulations. For their operation and effect see topics dealing with the subjects to which they relate.<sup>21</sup> Whether regulations infringe constitutional provisions other than the "commerce clause" is also excluded.<sup>22</sup> The power to regulate interstate commerce is the power to enact legislation which relates to, acts upon, or touches either interstate commerce or its adjuncts.<sup>23</sup> All commerce in the United States is under the control of either a state or the nation.<sup>24</sup> The Federal constitution confers upon congress plenary power to regulate interstate commerce<sup>25</sup> authorizing legislation with respect to all the subjects of foreign and interstate commerce, including the persons engaged in it and the instruments by which it is carried on.<sup>26</sup> This power to regulate imports the right and power to enact laws and not merely to make rules and regulations.<sup>27</sup> If the purpose of congress is legitimate and expressly relates to interstate commerce or its instrumentalities, it is immaterial to the validity of an act that somewhere in its operation it may have a casual or contingent effect upon the domain of state legislation.<sup>28</sup>

A quarantine regulation promulgated by the secretary of agriculture is in excess of the powers conferred upon him by the act of 1903 relative to contagious diseases of live stock, where on its face it applies as well to intrastate as to interstate commerce.<sup>29</sup>

In the absence of congressional legislation on the same subject, states may, in the exercise of their police power, pass reasonable laws local in their operation, though incidentally affecting interstate commerce.<sup>30</sup> Thus the courts have upheld state legislation prohibiting the killing and sale of nongame birds,<sup>31</sup> forbidding the abstraction of water from the lakes, ponds or streams of a state for transportation into any other state,<sup>32</sup> prescribing the parties to and the venue of suits against carriers,<sup>33</sup> or penalizing telegraph companies for failure to deliver messages.<sup>34</sup> So, also, the enforcement of a state lien for materials furnished for the construction of a vessel engaged in interstate commerce does not trench upon the Federal power.<sup>35</sup> On the other hand, states may not enact laws amounting to regulations of or a direct interference with interstate commerce,<sup>36</sup> and the implied consent of congress to state legislation which may affect such commerce arising from a failure of congress to enact similar legislation is temporary only and is withdrawn by subsequent congressional legislation.<sup>37</sup>

In aid of its validity, a general state statute will, if possible, be so construed as not to apply to interstate commerce,<sup>38</sup> and if an act is primarily intended to regulate domestic commerce and is complete and susceptible of enforcement, it will be sustained so far as it relates to such commerce though it may also contain clauses attempting to regulate interstate commerce.<sup>39</sup>

Regulation of foreign corporations.<sup>40</sup>—A state statute may lawfully impose conditions upon the right of a foreign corporation to transact intrastate, nongovernmental business within its borders,<sup>41</sup> although such corporation be also engaged in interstate, governmental business of the same class,<sup>42</sup> and a judgment of ouster from local nongovernmental business for noncompliance with such conditions is not regulation of interstate commerce, although it may incidentally affect such commerce.<sup>43</sup> The right of a corporation to engage in interstate commerce may not, however, be restricted,<sup>44</sup> and congress having jurisdiction over navigable interstate waters for the purposes of interstate commerce,<sup>45</sup> a state may not impose conditions on the right of steamship companies to engage in interstate traffic thereon.<sup>46</sup> The fact that a telegraph or telephone line when completed will be used as an instrument of interstate commerce gives the company projecting it no greater rights respecting right of way than those possessed by a purely local company.<sup>47</sup>

Regulation of traffic in intoxicating liquors.<sup>48</sup>—The Wilson act was a regulation of interstate commerce in intoxicating liquors.<sup>49</sup> Prior to the enactment of this law a shipment of liquor into a state was protected as interstate commerce until after delivery and sale in the original package.<sup>50</sup> The act did not allow the states to forbid the transportation of liquor from one state and into another,<sup>51</sup> but merely provided that such merchandise should lose its character as interstate commerce upon completion of delivery under the contract of interstate shipment and before

72. In the absence of prior congressional legislation the interstate commerce clause did not deprive states of power to legislate concerning the liability of common carriers as to persons within its jurisdiction, though interstate commerce may be indirectly affected. Pa. Act, April 4, 1868, restricting rights of persons injured in or about a railroad to those an employe of the road would have, held not repugnant to interstate commerce clause. Martin v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co., 203 U. S. 284, 51 Law. Ed. 184.

73. A state statute requiring every railroad company incorporated or doing business in the state to report once a year as to its affairs to the state railroad and warehouse commission is valid [Hurd's Rev. St. 1905, c. 114, § 6] (People v. Chicago, I. & L. R. Co., 223 Ill. 581, 79 N. E. 141), and the fact that congress has acted on the subject by the directly regulate rates for interstate shipments,<sup>74</sup> or punish for delay in furnishing cars, by a statute intended to control both state and interstate traffic,<sup>75</sup> or require a company to stop its interstate mail trains at a county seat when proper and adequate facilities are otherwise afforded at such station.<sup>76</sup> The allowance by railroad companies of elevator charges to terminal elevators on shipments of grain from points within to points without a state is also a matter which the state court cannot limit or control.<sup>77</sup>

Carriers engaged in interstate commerce are subject to regulation by congress,<sup>78</sup> whose power in this respect cannot be defeated because a carrier is also engaged in intrastate business and uses therein the same means or agencies in whole or in part.<sup>79</sup> There was a difference of opinion among the Federal courts as to the validity of the so-called "Employers' Liability Act,"<sup>80</sup> but the law has recently been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court.<sup>81</sup> A similar conflict may be noted in regard to the validity of section ten of the congressional act of June 1, 1898, regulating the relations between interstate carriers and their employees.<sup>82</sup> The fact that the amended interstate commerce act requires the filing of aggregate or joint through rates for through export shipments does not render it obnoxious to the constitutional inhibitions against the laying of taxes or duties on exports and the giving of prefer-passage of the interstate commerce act requiring reports to the interstate commerce commission is not controlling, the state and Federal reports being substantially the same (Id.).

74. Acts 1906, p. 413, c. 257, amending charter of Cumberland & Penn. R. Co. so as to prohibit connection of its tracks with tracks of Baltimore & Ohio Co. unless the latter should arrange its coal rates so that combined charges of the two roads should not exceed charge of Baltimore & Ohio Co. for hauling coal over its line to same destination and for as great a distance from Pennsylvania or West Virginia, held invalid as attempt to regulate interstate commerce. State v. Cumberland & P. R. Co. [Md.] 66 A. 458. Not valid as merely incidentally affecting interstate commerce, Id. That state reserved power to amend or repeal company's charter immaterial. Id. Code 1906, § 2482, imposing a forfeiture on any carrier or person demanding or receiving greater tolls or compensation for handling goods than provided therein, is void so far as applicable to interstate commerce. Jennings v. Big Sandy & C. R. Co. [W. Va.] 57 S. E. 272.

75. Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4497, 4499, penalizing carriers for delay in furnishing cars for shipments, held an interference with interstate commerce. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 256, 98 S. W. 450.

82. Held valid: Act Cong. June 1, 1898, c. 370, § 10, 30 St. 428, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3211, prohibiting interstate carriers from discriminating against union laborers, or from requiring employes to agree to contribute to funds for charitable, social, or beneficial purposes, or to agree to release the employer from liability for personal injuries, or from conspiring to prevent discharged employes from obtaining employment, held constitutional as directly affecting the adjuncts of interstate commerce. United States v. Adair, 152 F. 737. Not void for affecting both interstate and intrastate commerce, Id. Fifth amendment that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process, though a limitation on the commerce clause held not infringed; interstate carriers not being entitled to unrestricted liberty of contract in relations with the public or their employees, Id.

Held void: Section 10 is not a regulation of interstate commerce but a mere regulation of the right of an employer to choose his servants, whether the services relate to interstate commerce or not. United States v. Scott, 148 F. 431; Order of R. R. Telegraphers v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 148 F. 437.

ences to the ports of one state over those of another.<sup>83</sup> A carrier, though operating a line wholly within the state is within the provisions of the commerce act requiring the filing of rates, where its line is a portion of a through route engaged in interstate commerce through a common arrangement between several connecting carriers.<sup>84</sup> Where a railroad has filed and published its interstate rates as required by the Federal statute and joins in transporting an interstate shipment to a point within the state, it is engaged in interstate commerce so as to render the interstate rates applicable though the distance covered by it is wholly within the state and though it has not expressly agreed with connecting carriers to be a part of the through line;<sup>85</sup> but where the owner of an interstate shipment, after its arrival at the original terminal point, orders it forwarded to another point within the same state, whether in pursuance of an original intention or otherwise, the shipment between the last two points is not interstate so as to exempt it from state rates.<sup>86</sup>

State burdens on foreign commerce.<sup>87</sup>—A state or municipality has no power to tax or otherwise burden the right of an individual or corporation to engage in interstate commerce,<sup>88</sup> but a tax on the right to pursue an occupation or to exercise a franchise within the state may be valid though both interstate and intrastate business is considered in arriving at the amount.<sup>89</sup> Thus a tax on the right of a carrier to do local business under its franchise derived from the state has been upheld though computed on its gross receipts derived in part from interstate business.<sup>90</sup> It is not an unlawful interference with interstate commerce to attach by garnishment a railroad car used for the transportation of interstate freight, there being no attempt to interrupt any shipment,<sup>91</sup> but a car loaded with interstate freight cannot be attached while on its way to the point of unloading, there to be reloaded and returned to the state whence it came.<sup>92</sup> A tax on the transfer of corporate stock is not an interference with interstate commerce as applied to a sale of stock of a foreign corporation made by one nonresident to another within the state.<sup>93</sup> After property

Looney* [Mo.] 97 S. W. 934. (§ 2) B. Regulation of trade and commerce within a state.<sup>98</sup>—A state regulation requiring junk dealers and dealers in secondhand articles to keep certain goods on hand for thirty days is not unreasonable.<sup>99</sup> A commodity brought into a state becomes subject to the police power and commerce regulations of the state, though an article of interstate commerce before its importation.<sup>1</sup>

§ 3. The interstate commerce commission; its functions and proceedings before it.<sup>2</sup>—One is not compelled in the first instance to resort to the interstate commerce commission where an interstate carrier unlawfully refuses to receive goods tendered for shipment.<sup>3</sup> In the investigation of a complaint filed by manufacturers of a commodity as to freight rates, the commission has power, in the public interest, to consider the whole matter unembarrassed by any supposed admissions in the complaint,<sup>4</sup> and such admissions are ineffectual to deprive a Federal court of power to test the validity of the order of the commission by the scope of the interstate commerce act.<sup>5</sup> It is within the power of the commission to direct that carriers desist from further enforcing a classification of a certain commodity by percentage where such classification operates to disturb relations previously existing in the affected territory and creates discriminations and preferences among manufacturers and shippers and between localities.<sup>6</sup> The rule that an action at law to recover excessive interstate freight charges cannot be maintained in advance of action by the interstate commerce commission will not prevent a Federal court, in which proceedings are commenced pending action by the commission, from granting injunctive relief as a court of equity, under the powers conferred by the interstate commerce act, and after the commission has acted.<sup>7</sup> After a rate has been declared unreasonable by the commission a decree of restitution of overcharges may be legally stipulated for by the parties in a subsequent proceeding in a Federal court.<sup>8</sup> Findings and orders

§ 5. State railroad and corporation commissions.<sup>12</sup>—The creation of the state corporation commission of Virginia and vesting it with limited legislative, executive and judicial functions was not a violation of the bill of rights or of any provision in the Federal constitution.<sup>13</sup> A commission can make no order affecting the rights of a railroad company not properly served with notice or process and not a party to proceedings before it.<sup>14</sup> The South Dakota railroad commission has power to make reasonable orders affecting the business of express companies within the state.<sup>15</sup> That of Washington may employ an expert in ascertaining the cost of railroad construction in the state and may fix the amount of his salary.<sup>16</sup> The Texas commission has power to fix passenger rates not exceeding three cents per mile,<sup>17</sup> and within the limits prescribed by the constitution may fix different rates for different carriers.<sup>18</sup> In Mississippi the commission has power to establish reciprocal demurrage charges.<sup>18a</sup> A "joint rate" as used in the Georgia statute providing for the fixing of rates by the railroad commission is one prescribed to be charged for the transportation of goods or passengers over connecting lines of two or more roads and to be divided between them for the service rendered by each respectively.<sup>19</sup> The statute prescribes no fixed or an arbitrary rule for making such rate,<sup>20</sup> and the fact that continuous mileage is taken as a basis does not render the rate illegal as beyond the power of the commission if it is just and reasonable.<sup>21</sup> On review of an order of a railroad commission fixing rates, the questions to be determined are whether the rates were fixed in due form under a valid law by a valid commission, and whether they are reason-

COMMON LAW.<sup>24</sup>

The common-law rules relating to particular subject-matters are treated in the topics appropriate thereto,<sup>25</sup> and the enforcement by one state of the common law of another is also discussed elsewhere.<sup>26</sup> The common law of another state is assumed to be the same as that of the forum.<sup>27</sup> So much of the common law of England as is applicable to the local situation and not repugnant to the constitution or laws of the state has been adopted by statute in Vermont,<sup>28</sup> and also in Nebraska.<sup>29</sup> The adoption by the people of a state of such parts of the English common law as were in force on a certain date does not compel the adoption of principles inapplicable to their circumstances.<sup>30</sup> Though an English statute may have no force in a state as a statute unless re-enacted by the legislature, the principle which it embodies may be a part of the state law if suited to local conditions.<sup>31</sup>

COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS.

Includes only general compositions independent of bankruptcy or general assignment,<sup>32</sup> composition of a single claim being elsewhere treated.<sup>34</sup> To be binding as a composition a contract must amount to an agreement on the part of the creditors to accept the sums fixed thereby in full discharge of their claims.<sup>35</sup> While compositions are favored by the law, they are void if induced by misrepresentation or suppression of material facts on the part of the debtor, either as to the amount of his property or of his indebtedness.<sup>36</sup> In such case an innocent creditor need not rescind the composition or return any sums received thereunder but may treat such sums as payments pro tanto and sue for any balance,<sup>37</sup> or suit may be brought in equity to set aside the composition.<sup>38</sup>

COMPOUNDING OFFENSES.<sup>37</sup>

Includes only the criminal offense as distinguished from that of being accessory after the fact of crime,<sup>40</sup> the validity of contracts for the composition of crime being also elsewhere treated.<sup>41</sup>

Misprision of felony at common law is criminal neglect either to prevent a felony from being committed or to bring the offender to justice after its commission, but without such previous consent with or subsequent assistance of him as will make the concealer an accessory before or after the fact.<sup>42</sup> The common law on this subject is a part of the law of Vermont.<sup>43</sup> An information for misprision of a felony merely charging concealment and secrecy without showing failure to discover the felon to the officers of justice, is insufficient,<sup>44</sup> and so is an information failing to allege that defendant intended to hinder the course of justice and to cause the felon to escape unpunished.<sup>45</sup> An allegation that defendant "well knew" all of certain matters stated in the information sufficiently charges knowledge as to such matters.<sup>46</sup>

Compounding an offense is the act of the party aggrieved in agreeing with the offender for a consideration or return of stolen property, not to prosecute him.<sup>47</sup>

Since the commission of a previous offense is essential to the crime of compounding it, an indictment for compounding should state that such offense had been committed,<sup>48</sup> and the agreement not to prosecute being the gist of the offense, such agreement must also be clearly charged.<sup>49</sup> An indictment for compounding a crime arising from the violation of a statute must contain averments sufficient to show that such statute was in force.<sup>50</sup>

Definition and nature.<sup>55</sup>—A confession of judgment is an informal and summary entry of judgment upon admission or confession of the debtor.<sup>56</sup>

The warrant and authority conferred.<sup>57</sup>—A corporation which takes and continues possession under a lease thereby ratifies a power executed by its president.<sup>58</sup> A power to confess judgment for rent is not void because the lease provides for the payment of gas bills in addition to rent.<sup>59</sup> That a statement of confession of judgment does not state the facts out of which the debt arose does not render the judgment invalid as between the parties.<sup>60</sup> In a debtor's affidavit in support of a judgment by confession under the North Carolina statute, no statement need be made that the controversy is real and the proceedings bona fide.<sup>61</sup> After a long lapse of time a debtor may be estopped to attack his own affidavit substantially complying with the statute, especially where there is no charge of fraud or claim of payment.<sup>62</sup> A joint power of attorney does not authorize entry of judgment against one person only,<sup>63</sup> and release of errors by the cognovit pursuant to the terms of the power does not remedy the defect.<sup>64</sup>

The judgment.<sup>65</sup>—To authorize an entry of judgment on defendant's offer under the Wisconsin statute, plaintiff must give written notice of acceptance within ten days from the time the offer is made.<sup>66</sup> A statutory provision that when a judgment is confessed it shall be entered without delay is directory and not mandatory.<sup>67</sup> In Florida a judgment upon confession before a justice of the peace must show the cause of action or indebtedness.<sup>68</sup> Collection fees are allowable as per stipulation where substantial services are performed in guarding the creditor's interests at a sale by subsequent judgment creditors.<sup>69</sup> Judgments by confession valid in the state where taken are valid in other states under the full faith and credit clause of the Federal constitution.<sup>70</sup> The laws of the state where a note was made payable and by which the parties intended its validity and enforceability to be governed is controlling on the validity of the judgment entered under its provisions regardless of whether the note was in fact signed elsewhere.<sup>71</sup>

The manner of hearing a motion to vacate or open a judgment is discretionary with the court.<sup>72</sup> All presumptions favor the regularity of a judgment entered in open court, in term time and by a court of general jurisdiction,<sup>73</sup> and substantial

§ 7. Contracts Respecting Realty (598).

§ 8. Application of Remedies (598). Presumptions and Judicial Notice and Pleading of Foreign Laws (599).

§ 9. Torts (599).

§ 2. Contracts in general.<sup>83</sup>—All matters bearing upon the execution, interpretation, and validity of a contract,<sup>84</sup> and the measure of damages for breach

74. Relationship, preference, or waiver of interest, held insufficient. Weldon's Estate, 31 Pa. Super. Ct. 47. Where in an action to open a confessed judgment the petitioner alleges payment and that he accepted a deed to property purchased upon representations of the defendant and the assignee of the judgment that it had been paid, and his evidence strongly preponderates, the judgment should be opened. Ripple v. Succop, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 638.

75. Judgment for defendant sustained on evidence that the debt had been discharged by settlement of partnership business and delivery to plaintiff of his interest in the business which had been conducted in defendant's name. Lazzari v. Lazzari, 31 Pa. Super. Ct. 212.

76, 77. See 7 C. L. 677.

78. Where by statute a right of action which did not exist at common law is given such action will be enforced in other states, and the limitations and conditions attached to the right of action by the statute will control. Swisher v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Kan.] 90 P. 812. Exceptions to this rule are stated in Cannaday v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 143 N. C. 439, 55 S. E. 836. See post, § 5. Effect of public policy.

79. Ballantine v. Yung Wing, 146 F. 621.

80. Criminal prosecutions by the United States in territorial district court, governed by territorial laws as to practice and mode of procedure. Cochran v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 147 F. 206. Ann. St. of Indian Ter. 1899, §3449, providing for revival of real actions, held to govern. Wilhite v. Skelton [C. C. A.] 149 F. 67.

By statute: By Act of Congress (Rev. St. § 1014 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 716]) proceedings for admission of parties to bail are to be assimilated to those under local law, which therefore governs sufficiency of bail bond. United States v. Zarafonitis [C. C. A.] 150 F. 97.

81. By Rev. St. § 858 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 659), the competency of a witness is made a Federal question in certain cases. Miller

E. 122. Validity of agreement to assume mortgage by vendee. McCrery v. Nivin [Del.] 67 A. 452. When a contract is made in one state to be performed in another, the lex loci contractus controls as to the nature, validity, obligation, construction, and interpretation of the contract. Missouri State Life Ins. Co. v. Lovelace [Ga. App.] 58 S. E. 93. Parties are presumed to contract with reference to the place of the contract, and if it is valid there it is valid everywhere. Id. Validity of contract made by resident of New Jersey in Pennsylvania, as affected by statute of frauds, governed by law of Pennsylvania. Callaway v. Prettyman [Pa.] 67 A. 418. Laws of state in which contract of insurance was made, and where by its terms it was to be performed, and where its subject was situated, held conclusive of its obligatory force and of its meaning and effect. Grand View Bldg. Ass'n v. Northern Assur. Co. [Neb.] 102 N. W. 246. Married woman's contract valid in New York enforced in New Jersey, though invalid then. Irving Nat. Bk. v. Ellis [N. J. Law] 64 A. 1071. Virginia contract releasing common carrier from liability for injuries arising through negligence of the carrier or otherwise, void under Code Va. 1887, § 1296, and not enforceable in Kentucky where injuries were received. Davis v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 29 Ky. L. R. 53, 92 S. W. 339. Where a release of liability was signed in Utah by employes of express and railroad company doing business in Wyoming, held that it was inferable that it was contemplated that his duties would be performed in part in Wyoming, and, the injuries sued for having been received there, the contract was a Wyoming contract and void under Const. Wyo. art. 10, thereof,<sup>85</sup> are determined by the law of the place where the contract is made; though there are cases holding, in apparent contradiction to the above rule, that if it appears that it was to be executed or performed in another country, the law of the place of performance governs.<sup>86</sup> Where a contract is to be performed in two states, the law of each governs the part to be performed within it.<sup>87</sup> Matters connected with the performance and legality of the object of the contract are regulated<sup>88</sup> by the law obtaining at the place of performance, and matters respecting the remedy upon the lex fori.<sup>89</sup> These rules are not changed by the taking of foreign security.<sup>90</sup> Where a note or obligation is valid where made and does not conflict with any usury law, it is valid in any state in which it is sought to be enforced.<sup>91</sup> A contract is made where one party, either by himself or by his duly authorized agent, unqualifiedly accepts the offer of the other.<sup>92</sup> The application of these rules to contracts for carriage into other states will be found elsewhere.<sup>93</sup>

§ 5. Effect of public policy.<sup>1</sup>—The law of comity is not a law of absolute ob-

§ 4, making void such releases, and so unenforceable in Utah. Stone v. Union Pac. R. Co. [Utah] 89 P. 715.

ligation, and its principles can never be invoked in aid of the enforcement of foreign laws, if such enforcement would contravene the settled policy or positive law of the state of the forum.<sup>2</sup>

§ 6. Protection of citizens in state of forum.<sup>3</sup>—Comity will not intervene to enforce the laws of a foreign state when to do so would be prejudicial to the interests of citizens of the state of the forum.<sup>4</sup>

§ 7. Contracts respecting realty.<sup>5</sup>—The law of the situs governs in regard to all rights, interests, and titles in and to immovable property.<sup>6</sup>

§ 8. Application of remedies.<sup>7</sup>—The lex fori governs as to the enforceability of a contract,<sup>8</sup> including availability of defenses,<sup>9</sup> and as to all matters of pleading and practice,<sup>10</sup> including limitations.<sup>11</sup> Proceedings antecedent to and creative of the cause of action are governed not by the lex fori but by the lex loci.<sup>12</sup>

2. Contract limiting liability of carrier for injuries caused by its own negligence. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Moon [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 1176. The laws of one state have force in the territory of another as long as they do not come in conflict with the statute law, power, or right of the state of the forum, or violate its public policy or conscience. Missouri State Life Ins. Co. v. Lovelace [Ga. App.] 58 S. E. 93. Missouri Rev. St. § 8012, held not repugnant to Georgia Constitution. Id. Courts of Texas will not recognize statute of New Mexico which provides that actions under it may be maintained in its courts alone. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Sowers [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 190. A contract which is valid when made, no part of which is to be performed in the United States and relates to the transportation of property in a foreign vessel on a voyage which does not include any American port, does not concern the public policy of the United States. The Fri [C. C. A.] 154 F. 333. Not within the rule. Cannaday v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 143 N. C. 439, 55 S. E. 836.

W. 1041. Leave to amend to conform to New Jersey law refused after statute of limitations had become a bar. Le Bar v. New York, etc., R. Co. [Pa.] 67 A. 413. When by statute a right of action is given which did not exist at common law, and the statute giving the right also fixes the time within which the right may be enforced, time so fixed becomes a limitation or condition upon the right, and will control, no matter in what form the action is brought. Swisher v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Kan.] 90 P. 812. The exception to the rule that the statute of limitations of the forum governs, that where a right is given by statute, subject to a special limitation, such limitation inheres to the right and has extraterritorial force, cannot be extended to make the general statute of limitations of the state when the right arose operate extraterritorially, and case held not to be within the exception. Ramsden v. Knowles [C. C. A.] 151 F. 721.

12. Jurisdiction. Service of notice in Ne-

Presumptions and judicial notice and pleading of foreign laws.<sup>13</sup>—When necessary to sustain the cause of action, foreign laws must be pleaded and proved<sup>14</sup> as a matter of fact,<sup>15</sup> such laws not being judicially noticed.<sup>16</sup> The proof is ordinarily to the court, not to the jury.<sup>17</sup> Proof may ordinarily be made by expert witness, by certified copy, or by evidence of judicial recognition.<sup>18</sup> The law of a foreign state is ordinarily presumed to be the same as the lex fori,<sup>19</sup> including the constitution and statutes thereof,<sup>20</sup> though in some jurisdictions the presumption is that the common law obtains,<sup>21</sup> and to be the same as the common law of the forum,<sup>22</sup> unless the state is not of common origin, and in such case the lex fori governs in absence of proof of foreign law.<sup>23</sup> In determining what constitutes the common-law rule, the decisions of the courts of the state of the forum control.<sup>24</sup>

braska case upon defendant in Iowa, invalid. Bank of Horton v. Knox, 133 Iowa, 443, 109 N. W. 201.

The rule established by the weight of authority is that if a statute of the forum creates a right of action for damages resulting from death caused by wrongful act, neglect, or default, a foreign statute creating such right will be enforced, if the two statutes be not so dissimilar as to establish substantially different policies. It is not necessary that the statutes shall be precisely the same. Mere dissimilarities as to the persons in whose names actions may be brought, or in the amounts recoverable, will not defeat jurisdiction. Substantial similarity is all that is required. Id.

The topic excludes joint civil<sup>37</sup> and criminal<sup>38</sup> liability apart from conspiracy, measure of damages,<sup>39</sup> relief by way of injunction,<sup>40</sup> and punishment for violation of injunctions,<sup>41</sup> and also prosecutions for felony committed in pursuance of conspiracy.<sup>42</sup>

§ 1. Civil liability.<sup>43</sup>—Generally stated, a conspiracy results from any agreement of two or more persons to do an unlawful act or accomplish an unlawful purpose by any means, or to do a lawful act or accomplish a lawful purpose by unlawful means.<sup>44</sup> Either the act conspired or the manner of its doing must be unlawful.<sup>45</sup> Such a conspiracy is actionable if injury is committed pursuant to it,<sup>46</sup> and it is not essential that the means employed or that the act to be done should be criminal,<sup>47</sup> but the fact that it is criminal is immaterial.<sup>48</sup> Acts that may be innocent when done by an individual without co-operation may become unlawful when performed by agreement.<sup>49</sup> A voluntary combination for the purpose of contracting or refraining therefrom, irrespective of motive, is unlawful,<sup>50</sup> but the creation by coercion of an involuntary combination, the effect of which is to abridge the right to contract or refrain therefrom, to the detriment of another, is unlawful.<sup>51</sup> The deprivation of property rights in pursuance of an unlawful agreement made with intent to defraud constitutes an actionable conspiracy.<sup>52</sup> Agreements having for their object the breach of a contract,<sup>53</sup> to defraud creditors,<sup>54</sup> or others,<sup>55</sup> are unlawful. But organization and co-operation for legitimate and lawful purposes is not unlawful,<sup>56</sup> and combinations having as a purpose the promotion of economic means of protection and legitimate competition may be lawful,<sup>57</sup> although having the apparent effect of injuring or destroying the interests of others.<sup>58</sup> However, an agreement the object of which is to injure another in his employment, through malice<sup>59</sup> or by any other means, whether direct<sup>60</sup> or indirect,<sup>61</sup> is unlawful; and this rule embraces the maintenance of pickets for the purpose of threatening, intimidating, and using personal violence to coerce,<sup>62</sup> although the employment of pickets who use peaceable persuasion and do no acts of violence is not unlawful.<sup>63</sup> A combination formed for the purpose of driving a competitor out of business by suppressing competition by the destruction of lawful business,<sup>64</sup> restraining trade<sup>65</sup> or business,<sup>66</sup> is unlawful, [Wis.] 111 N. W. 1116. Complaint is not demurrable for insufficiency which states a criminal conspiracy under Wis. St. 1898, § 4466a, and alleging, also, consummation of purpose, damage, and stating generally means employed, although such complaint partially or in toto may be subject to motion to make more definite and certain. Id. As to conspiracy, every essential of § 4466a, St. 1898, need not be satisfied, the essentials of common-law conspiracy answering all requirements. Id.

Refusal to work, and peaceable strike by union laborers in order to secure all the labor for themselves, is not violation of Fla. Laws 1893, c. 4144, p. 69, prohibiting wrongful combinations against workmen. Jetton-Dekle Lumber Co. v. Mather [Fla.] 43 So. 590. Injunction denied. Id. The English common law, including statutes engrafted into it, as to criminal conspiracy, is not so consonant with the spirit of our government as to control the discretion exercisable in granting or refusing injunctions against laborers who refuse to work. Id.

57. Allis-Chalmers Co. v. Iron Molders' Union No. 125, 150 F. 155. Combinations between bricklayers' and masons' unions to compete for the additional work of pointing buildings they construct is lawful, though it may interfere with the business of regular pointers. Pickett v. Walsh, 192 Mass. 572, 78 N. E. 753. But organized laborers' right of coercion is limited to strikes on persons with whom the organization has a trade dispute. Id. Association of retail dealers may combine and agree among themselves not to purchase from wholesalers and jobbers selling to catalogue or mail order houses, and to inform each other what wholesalers and jobbers sell to such houses. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. South Dakota Retail Merchants' Ass'n, 150 F. 413. Interference with one's right to buy goods by persuasion or peaceable means exerted against sellers does not constitute unfair competition, intimidation, or coercion. Id.

58. Contempt proceedings against labor union for violating injunction against inducing or directing strike to injure business. Allis-Chalmers Co. v. Iron Molders' Union No. 125, 150 F. 155. Combination among retailers to compete with "mail order" houses. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. South Dakota Retail Merchants', etc., Ass'n, 150 F. 413. Injunction denied. Id.

59. Allis-Chalmers Co. v. Iron Molders' Union No. 125, 150 F. 155. The constant maintenance of pickets by strikers after repeated acts of violence, the use of abusive epithets, and the creation of an unfriendly atmosphere surrounding workmen by such pickets, constitutes a conspiracy for the purpose of willfully or maliciously injuring the business of the employer, within the meaning of Rev. St. Wis. 1898, § 4466a, which makes such a conspiracy a criminal offense, and is a violation of an injunction against such conspiracy. Id.

60. New York Cent. Iron Works Co. v. Brennan, 105 N. Y. S. 865. Where defendants participated in a plan to induce employees to leave their employment, assisted in maintaining an unlawful picketing system, etc., in violation of an injunction order, injury to the employers will be presumed. Flannery v. People, 225 Ill. 62, 80 N. E. 60. Or proceedings for contempt for violating injunction. Id.

Keegan*, 150 F. 148. Interference by threats, intimidation, or coercion to compel concessions, or, as an alternative, the destruction of business, enjoined. New York Cent. Iron Works Co. v. Brennan, 105 N. Y. S. 865.

63. Injunction denied. Pope Motor Car Co. v. Keegan, 150 F. 148. Modification of blanket injunction against striking members of labor union that permitted the union peaceably to enforce its rules against members, even to expulsion of those working for employers of nonunion labor, affirmed. Jetton-Dekle Lumber Co. v. Mather [Fla.] 43 So. 590.

64. A voluntary association comprising numerous firms and corporations doing business over extended territory, having organized a subsidiary organization for purpose of competition, the duty of whose agents was to follow salesmen of competitors, harass, regardless of its form,<sup>67</sup> and although the acts, if done by an individual without co-operation, might be legal.<sup>68</sup> Each party to the combination is liable, irrespective of the degree of his activity in effecting the unlawful purpose.<sup>69</sup> A verdict will lie against any one or more of the defendants,<sup>70</sup> without proof of a conspiracy among them all where the tort would be actionable if committed by one alone,<sup>71</sup> since in such case the allegation of conspiracy is surplusage except as to the rules of admission of evidence, making admissions and statements of one of the conspirators binding on the rest,<sup>72</sup> and the discharge of one or more defendants does not necessarily discharge all.<sup>73</sup> A complaint is not demurrable for misjoinder of causes of action unless two or more causes of action are pleading which are not joinable.<sup>74</sup> If malice is not essential to a sufficient statement of the cause of action, averment and proof of other malice than that which the law implies from the unlawful act proved is not required.<sup>75</sup> The allegation of conspiracy is not essential in an action against two or more defendants jointly for procuring plaintiff's discharge by threats and intimidation.<sup>76</sup> Presumptions and burden of proof,<sup>77</sup> admissibility<sup>78</sup> and sufficiency of evidence, is considered in the note.<sup>79</sup>

§ 2. Criminal liability.<sup>80</sup>—A conspiracy is formed when two or more persons in any manner, or through any contrivance, positively or tacitly come to a mutual intimidate, etc., enjoined. Spaulding v. Evenson, 149 F. 913. Association liable for acts of such branch association to same extent as if acts had been done by entire membership. Id. Unnecessary to make all members parties to bill for injunction where representative committee or regularly constituted officers are sued. Id.

65. Booth v. Burgess [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 226. Officers of labor union enjoined from directing or inducing by threats, etc., the employees of boss carpenters to strike against their will for purpose of creating boycott of "unfair" goods of manufacturer declaring for "open shop." Id.

66. American Freehold Land Mortg. Co. v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 856.

67. Action for conspiracy to weaken and destroy business by false and malicious statements. American Freehold Land Mortgage Co. v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 856. Omission to define malice, held not fatal to charge. Id. Instruction refused tending to lead jury to believe they could find for plaintiff whether or not statements were falsely, fraudulently and maliciously made for purpose of breaking plaintiffs' business up. Id. Officers of labor union having created by coercion an involuntary combination among employees of boss carpenters, to prevent the use by employers of "unfair" goods, in order to effect a boycott of manufacturer declaring for "open shop," were enjoined from directing or inducing employees to effect a boycott of manufacturer declaring for "open shop," were enjoined from directing or inducing employees to strike. Booth v. Burgess [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 226. Officers of the unions were not justified in interfering with market of manufacturer by coercing employees of boss carpenters. Id. The persons in the combination are not conspirators. Id.

75. Wyeman v. Deady, 79 Conn. 414, 65 A. 129. In action for damages for procuring plaintiff's discharge by threats and intimidation, it is not necessary to aver or prove malice. Id. Though it may be pleaded and proved as an allegation of fact in aggravation of the injury complained of. Id.

76. Wyeman v. Deady, 79 Conn. 414, 65 A. 129.

77. Plaintiff has the burden of proof (Murray v. Joseph, 146 F. 260), and must establish his claim by a preponderance of evidence (Id.).

78. Evidence of similar acts and declarations made under similar circumstances admitted to show guilty intent and motive, in action to recover money obtained by conspiracy to swindle. Exchange Bk. v. Moss [C. C. A.] 149 F. 340.

79. Evidence insufficient to show that the vendor and the agent negotiating sale of land to corporation were parties to a conspiracy to defraud the corporation by selling the land to it at a price in excess of that at which it was purchased. South Missouri Pine Lumber Co. v. Crommer, 202 Mo. 504, 101 S. W. 22. Proof that defendants were joint tortfeasors in performing the acts charged is sufficient proof of the conspiracy. Wyeman v. Deady, 79 Conn. 414, 65 A. 129. understanding to accomplish by their united action a crime or unlawful purpose,<sup>81</sup> or a lawful purpose by criminal means.<sup>82</sup> In the absence of statute, an overt act is not necessary to constitute the offense.<sup>83</sup> Conspiracies to embezzle funds,<sup>84</sup> to obtain money by false pretenses,<sup>85</sup> to burn a building,<sup>86</sup> to produce abortion,<sup>87</sup> and, in some states, to break and enter a jail for purpose of lynching,<sup>88</sup> or to commit election frauds,<sup>89</sup> are indictable offenses. Section 5440 of the Revised Federal Statutes covers all conspiracies to commit any offense against the United States.<sup>90</sup> Under it convictions for conspiracy may be had if in addition to the agreement any of the parties do any act to effect its object,<sup>91</sup> such act, though done by one of the conspirators, 82. United States v. Greene, 146 F. 803. The essence of the offense is the unlawful combination. Id.

83. At common law the conspiracy was ripe when the secret agreement had been reached by and among the conspirators. Ex parte Black, 147 F. 832. As agreement by several to a common design embraced the probability of success, and consequent injury to society, the mere unlawful agreement was indictable at common law, and is indictable in many, if not all, of the states. United States v. Greene, 146 F. 803.

84. Imboden v. People [Colo.] 90 P. 608. Instruction not objectionable as misleading jury to believe prosecution to be for substantive offense, and not conspiracy to commit same. Id. The jury being specifically charged that defendants were being tried for the offense as charged, an instruction was not prejudicial that contained the conspiracy statute providing that if two or more persons conspire to do or "to aid" in the doing of a wrongful act each shall be guilty, etc., on the ground that defendants were not charged with "aiding" but with "doing" the unlawful act. Id. Where the offense is defined in the instruction, and the jury charged if defendant did unlawfully and feloniously agree and co-operate to do the act alleged, etc., and are told that the design and purpose formed must have been the commission of the offense mentioned in the indictment, an instruction that the common design and unlawful purpose by two or more persons is the essence of the charge of conspiracy is not prejudicial which fails to define with certainty the meaning of "common design." Id.

But the lynching of a citizen of the United States, in pursuance of a conspiracy between other citizens, to which a state is not a party, is not a violation of any right, privilege or immunity secured under the Federal constitution or laws, or a violation of any Federal law prescribing punishment for same. United States v. Powell, 151 F. 648. Rev. Fed. St. §§ 5508 and 5509, held not applicable. Id. Demurrers to indictment sustained. Id.

89. Fraudulently assessing and placing voters on assessor's list. Commonwealth v. Valverdi [Pa.] 66 A. 877. That an election clerk with full knowledge of election frauds signed the returns without objection, sufficiently shows participation in the conspiracy. Commonwealth v. Williams, 31 Pa. Super. Ct. 372.

An indictment merely alleging a violation of the interstate commerce act, as amended by the Elkins Act, abolishing imprisonment as a punishment for offenses committed against the interstate commerce act, in giving and receiving rebates, is not sustainable under § 5440 as alleging a conspiracy, etc., punishable by imprisonment. United States v. New York, etc., C. R. Co., 146 F. 298. Demurrer sustained. Id. The offense defined by § 5440 is a continuing one so long as it is in process of execution, as shown by overt acts in pursuance thereof. United States v. Brace, 149 F. 874. Prosecutions being limited to one conspiracy, irrespective of the number of overt acts committed in pursuance of it. Id. But under Rev. Fed. St. § 5480 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901), relating to use of mails for fraudulent purposes, each overt act of mailing a letter or withdrawing a letter warrants a charge of conspiracy to commit such offense, and an indictment therefor will not bar a subsequent indictment for another conspiracy of the same person to commit another and additional offense, though of the same kind. Francis v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 152 F. 155.

91. United States v. MacAndrews & Forbes Co., 149 F. 823; Van Gesner v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 46; United States v. Greene, 146 F. 803; United States v. Cole, 153 F. 801; United State v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 146 F. 298. The act must be a subsequent independent act following a complete agreement of conspiracy, and done prior to consummation, to carry into effect the object of the original combination. United States v. Richards, 149 F. 443. The policy of the statute is not to introduce a new element into the crime, but to allow a period of grace, an opportunity for repentance, after the plot has been perfected, and before any decisive act has been done in furtherance of it. Ex parte Black, 147 F. 832. But when anything is completing the offense as to all, and making each amenable to the law,<sup>92</sup> but only to the extent that they are the natural and probable outcome of the unlawful agreement.<sup>93</sup> Conspiracies to use the mail for fraudulent purposes,<sup>94</sup> to hold in condition of peonage,<sup>95</sup> to injure one in his trade or occupation,<sup>96</sup> and to create a monopoly, in restraint of interstate commerce,<sup>97</sup> whether partial or total,<sup>98</sup> are indictable. Agreements by which the title acquired by an entryman under the Stone and Timber Act inures to the benefit of another in whole or in part is in violation of that act, and an indictable offense,<sup>99</sup> as are agreements to defraud the United States in respect to homestead<sup>1</sup> and timber culture entries,<sup>2</sup> or other public lands.<sup>3</sup> A conspiracy once established, each conspirator becomes responsible for means used and acts done by any conspirator in accomplishing the purpose of the conspiracy,<sup>4</sup> though absent at the time,<sup>5</sup> but only to the extent that they are within the contemplation of the conspiracy, or are the natural and probable outcome thereof.<sup>6</sup> When the concurrent action of two or more persons is necessary to perpetrate a crime, liability for its commission can not be increased by charging a conspiracy to commit, the conspiracy and substantive offense being identical.<sup>7</sup> A corporation is amenable to punishment done by one of the conspirators to effect its object it is regarded by law as such an aggravation of the conspiracy that there is no longer a place for repentance, and in the penalties of the statutes attach. United States v. Greene, 146 F. 803.

92. United States v. Richards, 149 F. 443. In contemplation of law the act of one is the act of all, and each is responsible for any act of his associate, or associates, done to effect the object of the crime. United States v. Greene, 146 F. 803. The overt act need not be that of an alleged conspirator actually on trial, but, the conspiracy being established, the acts of either one or more or all the persons indicted may be considered to ascertain if any act was done to effect the object of the conspiracy. Id.

94. Violation of Rev. St. §§ 5480 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901). Francis v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 152 F. 155. Each overt act of mailing a letter pursuant to a scheme to defraud, or withdrawing a letter from the postoffice, warrants a charge of conspiracy to commit such offense, and an indictment therefor will not bar a subsequent indictment for another conspiracy to the same person to commit another and additional offense, though of the same kind. Id.

Evidence held insufficient to show conspiracy of members of executive committee of trade union to injure persons not members of such union. Id.

98. Monopoly of larger portion of licorice paste consumed in the United States. United States v. MacAndrews & Forbes Co., 149 F. 823. Combinations to be violative of this law, as in restraint of interstate commerce, need not totally suppress trade, nor completely monopolize, but is sufficient if its necessary operation tends to restrain and to deprive the public of the advantage flowing from free competition. United States v. MacAndrews & Forbes Co., 149 F. 823.

One joining a conspiracy after its inception and before its consummation, adopts and thereby becomes liable for the acts of his associates. State v. Crofford, 133 Iowa, 478, 110 N. W. 921. Trial for murder due to abortion performed in pursuance of alleged conspiracy. Id. Where there is a conspiracy to commit robbery, the knowledge of one conspirator that the person robbed had the money on his person would be imputed to the other conspirators. *People v. 6. State v. Keleher, 74 Kan. 631, 87 P. 738. Conspiracy to steal money from barn where it was supposed to be hidden is not such a conspiracy as would naturally and probably result in the murder of the owner of the money at a place remote from barn, and under circumstances in no way connected with obtaining money from barn. Id. In the absence of evidence showing any connection between the conspiracy and the murder, except that the murder was for the purpose, on the part of the slayer, to obtain the money, it was error to instruct jury that they might find the absent conspirator, on trial for the murder, guilty as charged, if they found that the murder was the natural and probable outcome of the conspiracy. Id.

for complicity in a criminal conspiracy,<sup>8</sup> and a corporation and its officer or agent are not one person in law and may conspire together.<sup>9</sup>

Limitations run from the last overt act.<sup>10</sup> Where a conspiracy is formed and an overt act committed at a time outside the period of limitations, to sustain a conviction on a subsequent act within such period the existence of the conspiracy and the conscious participation of accused therein within such period must appear.<sup>11</sup>

Indictment.<sup>12</sup>—In North Carolina an indictment charging a conspiracy may be found in a county adjoining the one where the crime was committed.<sup>13</sup> Certainty to a common intent, sufficient to identify the offense charged, is all that is required.<sup>14</sup> When the charge is of a conspiracy to commit an offense, it is not required that the offense be described with the same precision as would be required on indictment for the substantive offense.<sup>15</sup> A description of the offense conspired to be committed, in the language of the creative statute, is sufficient,<sup>16</sup> yet an omission to name the offense makes imperative the allegation of facts constituting every element necessary to establish the offense as fully as if the indictment was for its perpetration.<sup>17</sup> The indictment may charge intent to injure persons of a specified class without naming any of them.<sup>18</sup> The offense may be charged in different forms to meet the testimony, and it is not objectionable that acts constituting parts of the same offense are contained in several counts.<sup>19</sup> An averment restricted to one transaction is not supported by proof of a general conspiracy.<sup>20</sup> The charge being against several persons, a finding will be supported if the guilt of at least two is shown, as it is not essential to establish the guilt of all charged.<sup>21</sup> Acquittal of one jointly charged with a crime, committable by one person, does not bar proceedings against furtherance is competent, although it involves a declaration of such conspirator implicating accused.<sup>44</sup> After the formation of conspiracy the acts and declarations of each conspirator, during its progress in carrying out the common design, are admissible in evidence against any or all of the others,<sup>45</sup> though not transpiring in their presence.<sup>46</sup> Generally, the fact of the conspiracy must be first established by a prima facie case<sup>47</sup> to set the preceding rule in operation,<sup>48</sup> but it lies within the discretion of the court to admit the acts and declarations of a conspirator in evidence before sufficient proof is given of the conspiracy.<sup>49</sup> Under an indictment for a conspiracy to commit a specific offense, proof of a general conspiracy is inadmissible, especially where the evidence does not connect accused with the particular offense charged.<sup>50</sup> Proof of concerted action in carrying out the criminal purpose establishes prima facie case.<sup>51</sup> Admissibility<sup>52</sup> and sufficiency<sup>53</sup> of evidence appears in the notes.

St. Supp. 1905, p. 599), abolishing imprisonment for violations of acts against the interstate commerce act, that merely alleges a violation of the interstate commerce act, by the giving and receiving of rebates, as amended by the Elkins Act, is demurrable. Id. Demurrer sustained. Id.

43. United States v. Greene, 146 F. 784. A letterpress copy of a letter purporting to have been written by alleged coconspirator, found in his possession and proved to be in his handwriting, was admitted as original evidence to show state of mind at the time the letter was written, there being material evidence in proof of the conspiracy, although there was no proof that the original letter was sent to the addressee. Id.

Crofford*, 133 Iowa 478, 110 N. W. 921. Testimony of person, hired by a coconspirator of accused to burn a building in pursuance of the object of the conspiracy, as to what the hirer said, was competent, although it involved a statement implicating accused. Hutchinson v. State, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 313. Where, on a trial for murder by abortion, the evidence showed that a third person visited the sanitarium of accused, a physician, on a certain day, and was there again about the time the deceased female arrived there, and was also there shortly before her death, and that the female reached the sanitarium a few days before her death in a normal state of health, it was sufficient to show prima facie a collusion between the accused and the third person, justifying the admission in evidence of declarations of the third person made in promotion of their common design at any time subsequent to its inception and before its accomplishment. State v. Crofford, 133 Iowa, 478, 110 N. W. 921. Evidence that defendants advanced money to entryman to pay entry fee and for improvements on lands acquired under homestead entries is limited to consideration in determining existence of conspiracy or lawful agreement, of which the advancement formed a part. United States v. Richards, 149 F. 443. In prosecutions for robbery, evidence of the acts of a conspirator with defendant to the effect that after the commission of the offense he procured a towel and washed the blood from the face of the person robbed, and showing where such coconspirator came from, and his movements immediately preceeding such act, were admissible as tending to corroborate claim of prosecuting witness that he had been robbed, but immaterial in connecting accused with crime, and admission, as to him, was harmless error. People v. Stokes, [Cal. App.] 89 P. 997. On trial for subornation of perjury in inducing others to file false entries under Timber and Stone Act, evidence that defendants induced others to file on or purchase state lands in vicinity, which were subsequently conveyed to defendants, was admitted under proper instruction on the question of motive. Van Gesner v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 46. It was also competent for the government to show, by those making such application to purchase land, that it was their intention and understanding at the time that the land should be conveyed by them to defendants, contrary to their sworn statements and testimony. Id. Letters and telegrams between coconspirators, admissible in evidence, to show character of relation existing between parties charged with conspiracy to defraud in connection with public work contracts. *United States v. 53. On a charge of conspiring to defraud the government by subornation of perjury in procuring persons to make application for the purchase of lands under the Timber and Stone Act, under agreements to convey to defendants, and to falsely swear, among other things, that such lands were chiefly valuable for timber, evidence was admissible to prove that the lands were not valuable for the timber upon them, but were chiefly valuable for grazing purposes, although such evidence tended to show that the lands were not subject to entry under the act. Van Gesner v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 46. A timber culture entry, voidable at instance of government, is sufficient to sustain prosecution for conspiracy in combining to secure title to public land by false and fraudulent proof. United States v. Burkett, 150 F. 208. An exception to the overruling of a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal at the close of the government's case on the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence is waived by the defendant introducing evidence in his own behalf. Stearns v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 152 F. 900.

This topic treats of the organic law of the nation and the states and the distribution of power between them. Constitutional provisions germane to specific subjects are treated in appropriate topics.<sup>58</sup>

54. See 7 C. L. 690.

55. United States v. Cole, 153 F. 801.

56. Special instruction given. United States v. Cole, 153 F. 801.

57. The fact that the parties charged with a conspiracy to embezzle and obtain money by false pretenses met on a given date being undisputed, an instruction assuming that they came together does not constitute reversible error. Imboden v. People [Colo.] 90 P. 608. Instruction that either or both defendants may be convicted, proved that the one or both to be convicted conspired together or with some other person or persons jointly indicted, or that either or both may be found not guilty, is not objectionable as assuming that one or both defendants were to be convicted. Id. An instruction that the material allegations of the third and fourth counts of the indictment were that on the 10th of September, A. D. 1904, "or within three years prior to the finding of the indictment," the defendants did, etc., was not objectionable because the phrase quoted was not in the indictment. Id.

60. Constitutional convention has plenary powers subject only to the restriction that the constitution adopted shall provide for republican form of government and must not contravene any of the provisions of the Federal constitution, and that all provisions of the enabling act be irrevocably accepted. Frantz v. Autry [Okla.] 91 P. 193.

61. Officers included under enabling act the manner and time of its submission to the people,<sup>62</sup> is delegated to the constitutional convention by the enabling act, and the exercise by it of its delegated powers cannot be restrained<sup>63</sup> though it proceeds in excess of its authority.<sup>64</sup> The term "ordinance" as used in an enabling act means a law essential to carrying into effect the objects for which the convention was created,<sup>65</sup> and when adopted has the force and effect of a law.<sup>66</sup> A constitutional convention does not possess absolute sovereignty or inherent powers of legislation and its powers may be limited by the act authorizing its creation, its acts outside such limitations being void.<sup>66a</sup> The constitution proposed and subsequent amendments must provide for a republican form of government; but it is held that this does not mean that the functions of the three departments of government must be preserved intact in each.<sup>67</sup> The question as to whether the instrument fulfills this requirement is a legislative one, and not subject to judicial cognizance.<sup>68</sup> The power of the state to amend its constitution is absolute,<sup>69</sup> and the method to be employed in doing so is usually provided for by the instrument itself and must be substantially complied with.<sup>70</sup> Legislative adoption of a certain method of submission does not restrict subsequent legislatures from employing a different method if the one adopted is in accord with the constitution.<sup>71</sup> Usually different amendments are required to be separated on the ballot,<sup>72</sup> which must be sufficiently precise to show their nature and character.<sup>73</sup> The manner of counting the votes is subject to legislative control.<sup>74</sup> constitute not only those whose powers and duties are coextensive with state boundaries but all officers provided for in the constitution whose duties are in any manner connected with the administration of the government. Frantz v. Autry [Okl.] 91 P. 193.

62. Under Oklahoma enabling act, convention may submit proposed constitution to people for ratification or rejection by appropriate ordinance at an election to be held at a time fixed therein. Frantz v. Autry [Okl.] 91 P. 193.

63. Frantz v. Autry [Okl.] 91 P. 193; Walck v. Murray [Okl.] 91 P. 238.

64. Submission of proposed constitution, or any part thereof, to vote of people, cannot be enjoined in advance of its adoption by the people and its approval by the president on the ground that it is unconstitutional, or that the convention exceeded its authority. Frantz v. Autry [Okl.] 91 P. 193; Walck v. Murray [Okl.] 91 P. 238.

65, 66. Frantz v. Autry [Okl.] 91 P. 193.

66a. Ex parte Birmingham & A. R. Co., 145 Ala. 514, 42 So. 118. Convention assembled pursuant to Acts 1900-1901, p. 224, entitled "An Act to provide for the holding of a convention to revise and amend the constitution" was without power to provide for additional courthouses in certain counties. Id. Where an ultra vires ordinance was not submitted to the people with the proposed constitution, there was no ratification by the latter. Id.

67. Constitutional amendment conferring on corporation commission limited executive, legislative, and judicial functions held valid. Winchester & S. R. Co. v. Com. [Va.] 55 S. E. 692. A state constitution may be amended so as to take away from or add to the powers of the various departments of government. People v. Cook, 147 Mich. 127, 13 Det. Leg. N. 971, 110 N. W. 514.

68. Whether proposed constitution guarantees a republican form of government, having been delegated by congress to the president of the United States, will not be judicially reviewed. Frantz v. Autry [Okl.] 91 P. 193.

69. May be amended in any particular not in conflict with the Federal constitution. Amendment providing indeterminate sentences for crime held valid. In re Manaca, 146 Mich. 697, 13 Det. Leg. N. 919, 110 N. W. 75.

70. Literal compliance not required. Where constitution required publication of amendment once each week in every county in state for three months, omission to publish notice in one county for one week held not to invalidate amendment. State v. Winnett [Neb.] 110 N. W. 1113.

71. Submission by joint resolution. Murphy Chair Co. v. Attorney General [Mich.] 112 N. W. 127.

72. Amendment increasing term of certain officers and the tenure of the then incumbents, and giving judges of district court power to fill vacancies, relates to one general scheme, and does not violate a constitutional provision requiring amendments to be distinguished by numbers, or otherwise, to permit of their being separately voted. State v. Silver Bow County Com'rs, 34 Mont. 426, 87 P. 450.

73. Ballot on amendment as follows "Amendment of the constitution relative to the teaching of a mechanical trade to convicts in the state prisons of this state," held sufficient to call attention to the subject. Murphy Chair Co. v. Attorney General [Mich.] 112 N. W. 127. Ballot must be sufficient to identify amendment and show its character, but entire proposed amendment need not be printed thereon. State v. Winnett [Neb.] 110 N. W. 1113.

74. Act providing for counting straight party votes for constitutional amendment when such party has endorsed same held valid. State v. Winnett [Neb.] 110 N. W. 1113.

Amendments are presumed to have been regularly submitted and adopted,<sup>75</sup> and, when submitted at a general election, provisions of the general election law will be presumed to have been adopted with reference to the matter of voting thereon.<sup>76</sup> An amendment inconsistent with general provisions in the instrument governs though such provisions are not expressly negated.<sup>77</sup>

Self-executing provisions.<sup>80</sup>—A section of the fundamental law is self-executing when it prescribes a rule, the application of which puts into operation the constitutional provision.<sup>81</sup> An amendment creating certain offices operates to establish such offices immediately upon its adoption.<sup>82</sup>

§ 3. Interpretation and exposition. A. When called for.<sup>83</sup>—Courts will not pass upon the constitutionality of a statute unless absolutely necessary to a decision of the case,<sup>84</sup> hence the validity of a statute cannot be questioned by one as to whom it has no application,<sup>85</sup> or who is not injured by it,<sup>86</sup> or who has voluntarily

75. Failure to comply with constitutional provisions may be pleaded. State v. Silver Bow County Com'rs, 34 Mont. 426, 87 P. 450.

76. State v. Winnett [Neb.] 110 N. W. 1113.

77. Amendment providing for an inheritance tax governs a general provision requiring equality of taxation. Thompson v. Kidder [N. H.] 65 A. 392.

78. See 7 C. L. 692.

79. Amendment relieving municipal charters from control of general laws does not validate an ordinance adopted prior thereto conflicting with general laws. Ex parte Sweetman [Cal. App.] 90 P. 1069.

80. See 7 C. L. 692.

81. Manner of exercising initiative and referendum powers by municipal corporations held self-executing. Acme Dairy Co. v. Astoria [Or.] 90 P. 153.

82. May be filled by vote of electors at same election at which amendment is adopted. State v. Winnett [Neb.] 110 N. W. 1113.

83. See 7 C. L. 692.

84. Native Lumber Co. v. Harrison County sup'rs [Miss.] 42 So. 665; City of Toledo v. Kiebler, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 437. Will not be passed upon if the case can be disposed of on another ground. Thompson v. Mitchell, 133 Iowa, 527, 110 N. W. 901.

85. One who is not on his own account entitled to question the constitutionality of a statute cannot object that it is unconstitutional as to others. Thompson v. Mitchell, 133 Iowa 527, 110 N. W. 901. A citizen cannot object to the constitutionality of an act on the ground that it confers upon citizens of the state rights denied citizens of other states. State v. McIntosh [Mo.] 103 S. W. 1078; Schmidt v. Indianapolis [Ind.] 80 N. E. 632. Whether an act authorizing farmers to unite and pool their crops, etc., renders previous anti-trust laws unconstitutional will not be considered where statutes provide that no new law shall be construed to repeal a former law as to any offense committed thereunder, the indictment being found before the passage of such act. International Harvester Co. v. Com., 30 Ky. L. R. 716, 99 S. W. 637. Where plaintiff was injured while employed on a train engaged in interstate commerce, the court is not bound to determine the constitutionality of the Federal employer's liability act on the ground that it applies equally to intra-state and interstate commerce. Spain v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 151 F. 522. Resident of the city, not accused under an act of failure to report to mayor, cannot complain that the provision of the act requiring such report is unconstitutional for lack of uniform operation, inasmuch as a dealer outside of the city limits could not be required to comply with its provisions. Phillips v. State, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 398. One charged with employing children more than ten hours per day in violation of statute cannot object to constitutionality of another portion thereof prohibiting such employment before seven in the morning or after six at night. State v. Shorey [Or.] 86 P. 881.

86. Where judgment is awarded for an amount for which defendant would be liable in the absence of a statute questioned, the constitutionality of such statute will not be determined. Southern R. Co. v. Schlittler, 1 Ga. App. 20, 58 S. E. 59. One upon whom a penalty provided by law was not imposed cannot object that law is unconstitutional on ground of excessiveness of penalty. Texas Co. v. Stephens [Tex.] 103 S. W. 481. One who has been afforded full opportunity to be heard cannot attack the constitutionality of an act as denying due process, though no provision for notice was contained therein. Security Trust & Safety Vault Co. v. Lexington, 203 U. S. 323, 51 Law. Ed. 204. Under act providing imprisonment in state prison for wife abandonment or a bread and water diet for ten days in county jail, one sentenced to state prison cannot object that latter clause imposes a cruel and unusual punishment. Spencer v. State [Wis.] 112 N. W. 462. Unconstitutionality of state statute giving lien on vessel as an infringement of exclusive jurisdiction of Federal courts cannot be asserted in a case where no maritime lien is claimed. Iroquois Transp. Co. v. De Laney Forge & Iron Co., 205 U. S. 354, 51 Law. Ed. 836. The validity of an act requiring accused to waive certiorari as a condition to right of appeal to city council on conviction of violation of liquor laws by mayor will not be determined where no appeal to council was had. Sawyer v. Blakely [Ga. App.] 58 S. E. 399.

complied with it,<sup>87</sup> or who has invoked its provisions,<sup>88</sup> or as to one who is estopped to assert its invalidity;<sup>89</sup> but he is not estopped from questioning its constitutionality as to acts which remain to be done or expenses to be incurred thereunder.<sup>90</sup> It follows that the objecting party must possess a direct and substantial interest in the statute sought to be invalidated<sup>91</sup> though, as in the case of public officers affected by a statute in their capacity as such, it need not be personal,<sup>92</sup> accordingly one not a party to a contract cannot question the validity of legislation as impairing it.<sup>93</sup> In order that an appellate court may pass upon a constitutional question, it must ordinarily have been properly raised below,<sup>94</sup> decided adversely to appellant, and fully argued on appeal.<sup>95</sup>

(§ 3) B. General rules of interpretation. Constitutions.<sup>96</sup>—Established rules of construction applicable to statutes govern in construing constitutions.<sup>97</sup> The position of a clause in the constitution is not decisive of its meaning.<sup>98</sup> Proceedings of the convention at which the constitution was framed,<sup>99</sup> and contemporaneous construction by co-ordinate branches of government,<sup>1</sup> may be resorted to for the purpose of removing ambiguities; and in such case a long continued legislative and administrative construction will prevail.<sup>2</sup> Conditions existing at the time of the adoption of a constitution<sup>3</sup> or amendments<sup>4</sup> may be considered, and though the constitution

87. Compliance by railroad with rate fixed by state raises only a moot question, and reasonableness of rate will not be determined. Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 927.

88. On mandamus to compel dental board to grant relator an examination, the latter cannot object to the constitutionality of the act creating the board, as if the law is invalid, no examination can be granted. State v. MacIntosh [Mo.] 103 S. W. 1078. The constitutionality of an act cannot be raised on an appeal authorized solely by its provisions. Murphy v. Police Jury, St. Mary Parish, 118 La. 401, 42 So. 979.

89. A person seeking relief under a statute is estopped to assert its invalidity. American Unitarian Ass'n v. Com. 193 Mass. 470, 79 N. E. 878. One giving a liquor dealer's bond, conditioned not to commit certain acts under penalties provided by law, cannot, in an action on the bond, object that law is unconstitutional as imposing excessive penalties. White v. Manning [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 1160. One active in procuring the passage of a law and accepting benefits thereunder may be estopped to assert its invalidity. Facts held insufficient to establish an estoppel. Sellers v. Cox, 127 Ga. 246, 56 S. E. 284.

90. Injunction to restrain incurring indebtedness or levying taxes for future support of school district on ground of invalidity of law creating it. Sellers v. Cox, 127 Ga. 246, 56 S. E. 284.

91. Where a right of action is predicated upon an alleged invalid statute, the person against whom such right of action is thereby created may raise the question of its unconstitutionality. Bedford Quarries Co. v. Bough [Ind.] 80 N. E. 529.

92. A public officer required to pay out trust funds may attack the constitutionality of the law under which payment is sought, though he is a mere ministerial officer. State v. Blumberg [Wash.] 89 P. 708.

93. Prospective purchaser of property entering into a contract for purchase of land with agent acting under parol authority after the passage of an act requiring authority to be in writing cannot question constitutionality of statute as impairing contract between principal and agent. Brown v. Gilpin [Kan.] 90 P. 267. The county court cannot object to the constitutionality of an act limiting its power to levy taxes on the ground that the levy authorized was insufficient to pay county indebtedness and thus impaired the obligation of contracts. State v. Braxton County Ct., 60 W. Va. 339, 55 S. E. 382.

98. Thompson v. Kidder [N. H.] 65 A. 392.

99. Sanipoli v. Pleasant Valley Coal Co. [Utah] 86 P. 865.

1. Where meaning is doubtful, court may consider practical and contemporaneous construction given by legislature and executive officers. Passage of act year following adoption of constitution allowing state's attorney fees apparently in excess of those allowed by constitution. Cook County v. Healy, 222 Ill. 310, 78 N. E. 623; Uzzell v. Anderson [Colo.] 89 P. 785. Where constitution is subject to two equally reasonable interpretations, a legislative adoption of one of them will be followed by courts. Providing governor with residence rent free held not a "perquisite of office or other compensation" within inhibition of constitution. State v. Sheldon [Neb.] 111 N. W. 372. Exercise by different branches of government of powers of others. Henrico County v. Richmond [Va.] 55 S. E. 682.

2. Cook County v. Healy, 222 Ill. 310, 78 N. E. 623.

3. Exemption laws having been recognized in Ohio ever since the adoption of the present constitution, and long before, it has manifestly been the policy of the state to allow certain property to be exempted from as it stands will be regarded as a whole as if enacted at one time,<sup>5</sup> the readoption of a constitutional provision after its construction by the courts amounts to a legislative adoption of such construction.<sup>6</sup> Constitutional provisions may be enlarged by construction to meet changed conditions of society,<sup>7</sup> but cannot be limited by inserting a qualifying word therein.<sup>8</sup> Federal courts are bound to follow the construction placed on state constitutions by the state courts of last resort, and the construction placed on the Federal constitution by the supreme court of the United States is binding upon the state courts.<sup>9</sup>

Statutes violative of the constitution<sup>10</sup> are unenforceable, courts being found to give effect to the organic law;<sup>11</sup> but unless clearly invalid an inferior court may leave the determination of the validity of an act to an appellate tribunal.<sup>12</sup> In determining the validity of an act, courts are not at liberty to review its policy<sup>13</sup> or wisdom,<sup>14</sup> and the fact that it is oppressive is no ground for setting it aside.<sup>15</sup> A stipulation as to facts which if true renders the law unconstitutional merely denies its efficacy to the party admitting such facts, and does not render the law ineffective.<sup>16</sup>

Every presumption favors the validity of a statute,<sup>17</sup> a reasonable doubt as to its constitutionality being sufficient to sustain it.<sup>18</sup> Doubtful statutes will be so construed, if possible, as to harmonize them with the constitution.<sup>19</sup> The validity of an taxation; and section 1038a, Rev. St., relating to deductions from the duplicate for destroyed or injured property, must therefore be upheld as valid and reasonable notwithstanding the constitutional provision as to the taxing of all property by a uniform rule according to its true value in money. State v. Wright, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 366.

4. History of taxation to reconcile provision requiring equality and an amendment authorizing inheritance tax. Thompson v. Kidder [N. H.] 65 A. 392.

5. Thompson v. Kidder [N. H.] 65 A. 392.

6. Prohibition against putting person twice in jeopardy. Gillespie v. State [Ind.] 80 N. E. 829. Judicial construction placed on provision of former constitution will be followed where same is readopted. Alabama Girls' Industrial School v. Reynolds, 143 Ala. 579, 42 So. 114.

7. Requiring that elections be by ballot, held to permit use of voting machines. Ellwell v. Comstock, 99 Minn. 261, 109 N. W. 113, 698.

8. Power "to regulate" interstate commerce cannot be limited by construing provision as power "to regulate directly." United States v. Adair, 152 F. 737.

9. See State Decis., 8 C. L. 1965.

10. See 7 C. L. 696.

11. A constitutional provision declaring that all laws should be made for the good of the whole and ought to be evenly distributed among all citizens is advisory merely. Is not violated, act requiring abutting owners and occupants to remove snow from sidewalks. State v. McCrillis [R. I.] 66 A. 301.

12. Michie v. New York, etc., R. Co., 151 F. 694.

13. That act limiting hours of labor in certain occupations makes no exception for emergencies where life and property is in danger does not render it invalid. State v. Livingston Concrete Bldg. & Mfg. Co., 34 Mont. 570, 87 P. 980. An act will not be declared void merely because the court differs from the legislature as to expediency of its provisions. Limitations on height of building. Welch v. Swasey, 193 Mass. 364, 79 N. E. 745.

14. Miller v. Louisville, 30 Ky. L. R. 664, 99 S. W. 284.

15. State v. Pullman Co. [Kan.] 90 P. 319. Federal employer's liability act. Kelley v. Great Northern R. Co., 152 F. 211.

17. See 7 C. L. 696.

18. Statute will be supported by every reasonable intendment. Cain v. Allen [Ind.] 79 N. E. 201. Button v. State Corp. Commission, 105 Va. 634, 54 S. E. 769; Snead v. Central of Georgia R. Co., 151 F. 608. Whether act relating to consolidation of cities is special legislation. Pittsburg's Petition, 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 210. Must be clearly obnoxious to the constitution. Board of Escambia County v. Pensacola Port Pilot Com'rs [Fla.] 42 So. 697; Gralinger v. Douglas Park Jockey Club [C. C. A.] 148 F. 513, rev. 146 F. 414; Snead v. Central of Georgia R. Co., 151 F. 608; Ex parte Owens [Ala.] 42 So. 676; In re Spencer, 149 Cal. 396, 86 p. 896. An act will not be held unconstitutional unless its invalidity is manifest beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Nassau County Sup'rs, 104 N. Y. S. 353; Campbell v. Skinner Mfg. Co. [Fla.] 43 So. 874; State v. Anson [Wis.] 112 N. W. 475.

19. Statute will not be overthrown on constitutional grounds when it may be so construed as to avoid that result. State v. Braxton County Ct., 60 W. Va. 339, 55 S. E. 382. If there is any theory or purpose which would bring questioned legislation within the power of the legislature, the court will assume such a basis for it. State v. Anson [Wis.] 112 N. W. 475. Federal employer's liability construed a proper regulation of interstate commerce. Spain v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 151 F. 522, overruled Howard v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 28 S. Ct. 141. act must be tested by its terms and what it authorizes,<sup>20</sup> and not by what may be attempted to be done under it.<sup>21</sup>

A statute containing invalid provisions yields only to the extent of its repugnancy to the constitution,<sup>22</sup> and a part may be unconstitutional without rendering the whole statute bad, if the invalid part is so independent of the remainder that it may be eliminated without rendering the whole ineffective, unless the invalid portion was manifestly an inducement for the passage of the remainder.<sup>23</sup>

The court cannot consider evidence aliunde.<sup>28</sup>

Where the words of a statute are plain,<sup>29</sup> no construction is permissible.

§ 4. Executive, legislative, and judicial functions.<sup>30</sup>—State constitutions usually provide for the division of government into three distinct branches, each supreme in its own sphere;<sup>31</sup> but it has been held that such a division does not prevent the exercise by one branch of the powers of the other to a limited extent,<sup>32</sup> nor does the exercise of such powers contravene any provision of the Federal constitution.<sup>33</sup>

years' experience in anthracite mines, rendering it unobjectionable as infringing privileges and immunities. Commonwealth v. Shaleen, 215 Pa. 595, 64 A. 797. While subject of taxation is general in its nature, requiring uniformity of operation throughout state, Rev. St. § 1365-25, giving to county commissioners power to extend the time for payment of taxes, although limited to "counties containing a city of the second grade of the first class," must be regarded as a provision suited to certain localities and merely regulative of the mode of receiving taxes in such localities, and is therefore constitutional. State v. Madigan, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 553.

(§ 4) B. Legislative functions.<sup>37</sup>—State legislatures have all the powers not expressly or by necessary implication withheld by the state or Federal constitution,<sup>38</sup> and their actions thereunder cannot be reviewed by other departments of the government.<sup>39</sup> Legislative powers cannot be delegated<sup>40</sup> even to the people,<sup>41</sup> except that municipalities may be given power over matters of purely local concern,<sup>42, 43</sup> but the delegation must be made to the governing body of the municipality,<sup>44</sup> and the fact mination being a mere classification of state lands. Griffin v. Kennedy [Mich.] 112 N. W. 756. Act April 17, 1905, p. 351, c. 146, making secretary of state and comptroller members of state tax board with power to determine value of intangible assets of certain corporations and to distribute values for local taxation, held not unconstitutional as conferring judicial powers on executive officers. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Shannon [Tex.] 100 S. W. 138, afg. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 866, 97 S. W. 527. Act Mar. 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1121, 1153, c. 425, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3545), empowering secretary of war to require such alterations in bridge over navigable waters as will render it safe for navigation when after hearing parties interested he is satisfied that same obstructs navigation, held not unconstitutional as conferring judicial powers on an executive officer. *Union Bridge Co. v. 44. Act authorizing change of ward lines in city held to require action by fifty per cent of members of city council in their ca-that the act delegating such powers fixes a penalty for a violation of the municipal regulation does not affect its validity.<sup>45</sup> Limited powers may be granted to municipalities to make police regulations beyond their corporate limits, but no greater power can be delegated than the bare necessity requires.<sup>46</sup> Delegation of purely administrative<sup>47</sup> or ministerial duties,<sup>48</sup> or power to make regulations for the enforcement of laws,<sup>49</sup> is not within the inhibition. Making the operation of an act depend upon a contingency<sup>50</sup> or upon a determination by the person or body upon whom the power is conferred of the existence of facts upon which its action depends<sup>51</sup> does not constitute a delegation of legislative functions. In dealing with the Philippine Islands, congress may delegate legislative authority to such agencies as it may select.<sup>52</sup>

(§ 4) C. Judicial functions.<sup>53</sup>—The powers of the judiciary are as exclusive as those of the other departments of government, and cannot be invaded by executive or legislative action,<sup>54</sup> hence judicial functions cannot be conferred upon nonjudicial officers,<sup>55</sup> nor can nonjudicial duties be imposed on the judiciary,<sup>56</sup> though as to the capacity as such, and not as citizens. Rutten v. Paterson, 73 N. J. Law, 467, 64 A. 573.

46. Act March 27, 1907, giving city of Memphis all governmental and police power within its limits and for two miles beyond, held unconstitutional. Malone v. Williams [Tenn.] 103 S. W. 798.

47. Act empowering voting machine commission to determine whether secret vote is practicable with machine submitted held to confer mere administrative duties. Elwell v. Comstock, 99 Minn. 261, 109 N. W. 113, 698.

48. Act authorizing city council to establish city court where city has a population of 3,000 is not a delegation of legislative power because requiring council to ascertain when city has a population of 3,000. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Greer, 223 Ill. 104, 79 N. E. 46.

49. United States v. Matthews, 146 F. 306. Act regulating licensing of architects held not unconstitutional because delegating to commission power to make rules for examination and qualification of applicants. Ex parte McManus [Cal.] 90 P. 702.

50. Intangible assets law (Act April 17, 1905, p. 351, c. 146), providing that, upon compliance with its terms by the corporations affected and payment of tax imposed, acts imposing gross earnings taxes on such corporations should be repealed, held not unconstitutional as an invalid delegation of power to suspend operation of law. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Shannon [Tex.] 100 S. W. 138, afg. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 866, 97 S. W. 527. Act making it unlawful for miner to enter unsafe mine until same is examined and reported safe held not a delegation of legislative power, the act being continuously in force, but the circumstances under which a mine may be safe varying. Koppala v. State [Wyo.] 89 P. 576. Act authorizing creation of city courts in cities having a certain population whenever council shall submit question to voters and same shall be adopted by them held not a delegation of power. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Greer, 223 Ill. 104, 79 N. E. 46. Act designating place for holding terms of court, providing council or citizens thereof furnish suitable accommodations; held not a delegation of legislative power. McCall v. Calhoun

Circuit Judge, 146 Mich. 319, 13 Det. Leg. N. 757, 109 N. W. 601.

51. Elwell v. Comstock, 99 Minn. 261, 109 N. W. 113, 698. Act Mar. 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1121, 1153, c. 425, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3545), empowering secretary of war when satisfied after hearing parties interested that a bridge over navigable waters obstructs navigation to require such alterations as will render navigation reasonably safe, held constitutional. Union Bridge Co. v. U. S., 204 U. S. 364, 51 Law. Ed. 523. Act authorizing city council to determine whether city should avail itself of its provisions held not a delegation of legislative power to council. Valley v. Grand Forks Park Dist. Com'rs [N. D.] 111 N. W. 615.

52. Act of congress ratifying imposition of illegal duties on imports from Philippines held valid. United States v. Heinszen, 206 U. S. 370, 51 Law Ed. 1098.

53. See 7 C. L. 704.

54. A statute which merely regulates the manner of introducing relevant evidence is not an unlawful invasion of judicial power. Act placing burden on plaintiff in action on negotiable instrument to show good faith where maker alleges that it was procured by fraud held valid. Johnson County Sav. Bk. v. Walker, 79 Conn. 348, 65 A. 132. Act providing for a feigned issue in action to quiet title in chancery, and making a decision thereon conclusive upon the chancellor, held not invalid as an infringement of judicial power. Brady v. Carteret Realty Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 67 A. 606. Act prescribing qualifications for admission to bar held not an infringement of judicial functions, though precluding examination into the moral character of the applicant. In re Applicants for License. 143 N. C. 1, 55 S. E. 635. Indeterminate sentence act, empowering board of pardons to parole prisoners, held not an interference with judicial functions. People v. Cook, 147 Mich. 127, 13 Det. Leg. N. 971, 110 N. W. 514. Act authorizing sentence to state reformatory without a fixed term, such term to be determined by the managers of the reformatory, held not an infringement by executive of judicial functions. People v. City Prison Warden, 105 N. Y. S. 551; People v. Madden, 105 N. Y. S. 554.

55. Greater New York Charter conferring on commissioners power to examine accounts latter a contrary rule as to certain ministerial duties has been adopted in some states.<sup>57</sup> Administrative powers in aid of judicial functions may properly be conferred on the courts.<sup>58</sup> The term "judicial functions" means the power to hear and determine causes between parties affecting the rights of persons as to life, liberty, or property,<sup>59</sup> and is distinguishable from quasi judicial functions, so called, or the act of an executive officer in passing upon facts and determining his action from the facts found.<sup>60</sup> Judicial power extends to review of all legislative action for the purpose of determining its validity as tested by the constitution,<sup>61</sup> but courts are without power to control the exercise of functions vested exclusively in other departments of government.<sup>62</sup> of municipal officers, and to compel attendance of witnesses for that purpose, the result of the examination to be reported to the mayor, held not delegation of judicial power, as the report determines nothing. In re Hertle, 105 N. Y. S. 765. That registrar under Torrens law is required to determine legal effect of instruments relating to registered title held not to confer judicial functions upon him. Robinson v. Kerrigan [Cal.] 90 P. 129.

56. Functions held judicial: Acts conferring upon court power to hear and determine election contests confined to such questions of law and fact as arise from an inspection of ballots, and to be decided on evidence furnished by ballots alone held not to confer a mere ministerial duty. Metz v. Maddox, 105 N. Y. S. 702. Act providing for extension of corporate limits of cities, conferring on court power to carry out its provisions. Henrico County v. Richmond [Va.] 55 S. E. 683. Act conferring on courts jurisdiction over extension of boundaries of municipal corporations with power to determine reasonableness of same. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Vidalia, 117 La. 561, 42 So. 129. Act June 1906, providing for establishing and quieting title to realty where public records are destroyed by fire, flood, or earthquake, held to provide for a judicial proceeding, though at the outset of the proceedings no person is named as opposing relief. Title & Document Restoration Co. v. Kerrigan [Cal.] 88 P. 356. Proceedings for registration of titles under Torrens system. Robinson v. Kerrigan [Cal.] 90 P. 129.

Non judicial: Whether a proposed drainage ditch will be conducive to the public health, convenience, or welfare, or whether the route therefor is practicable, are questions of administrative or governmental policy, and jurisdiction over them cannot be conferred upon courts by statute. Tyson v. Washington County [Neb.] 110 N. W. 634. Requiring judges of district court to appoint members of board of control of county almshouse and hospital. State v. Brill, 100 Minn. 499, 111 N. W. 294, 639.

57. Act directing a court upon petition alleging corrupt expenditure of public money to summarily investigate same, either in person or by commission, held valid, though court is not required to reach any conclusion thereon. City of Hoboken v. O'Neill [N. J. Law] 64 A. 981. Act designating certain place for holding terms of court, providing council or citizens thereof furnish suitable accommodation, to be approved by circuit judge upon inspection, held a delegation of a ministerial duty which might properly be exercised by him. McCall v. Calhoun Circuit Judge, 146 Mich. 319, 13 Det. Leg. N. 757, 109 N. W. 601.

58. Appointment of jury commissioners for selection of person may be conferred on circuit judges. State v. Anson [Wis.] 112 N. W. 475. Act conferring on court power to fix date of special terms held constitutional. Ex parte Boyd [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 64, 96 S. W. 1079.

59. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Shannon [Tex.] 100 S. W. 138, afg. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 866, 97 S. W. 527.

60. Act April 17, 1905, p. 351, c. 146, making secretary of state and comptroller members of state tax board with power to determine value of intangible assets of railroads and to distribute same for local taxation, held not unconstitutional as conferring judicial powers on executive officers. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Shannon [Tex.] 100 S. W. 138, afg. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 866, 97 S. W. 527.

Whether an expenditure demanded to be made from county taxes is for county purposes within the constitution is a judicial question. Board of Escambia County Com'rs, v. Pensacola Port Pilot Com'rs [Fla.] 42 So. 697. But, where an expenditure is authorized by the legislature as being a county purpose, courts will not interfere except in cases free from reasonable doubt. Id. Whether constitutional provisions relative thereto are complied with by a statute redistricting state into representative districts presents judicial and not political questions. Ragland v. Anderson, 30 Ky. L. R. 1199, 100 S. W. 865.

62. Creating counties and civil districts is a political power and, though the districts created may not comply with constitutional requirements as to area, wealth, population, etc., the legislative discretion is absolute and cannot be reviewed by the courts. Maxey v. Powers [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 181. Authority to provide adequate court house and manner of making expenditures therefor being conferred on police jury, courts will not interfere with their judgment except to prevent

Original jurisdiction in matters other than those enumerated in the constitution cannot be conferred upon a constitutional appellate court.<sup>63</sup>

§ 5. Relative powers of Federal and state or other subordinate governments.<sup>64</sup> Within its granted powers the Federal government is supreme, and, in such matters, state regulation must give way to Federal legislation. This rule as applied to Federal bankruptcy acts,<sup>65</sup> patents,<sup>66</sup> regulation of interstate commerce,<sup>67</sup> recognition of foreign judgments,<sup>68</sup> extradition,<sup>69</sup> treaties,<sup>70</sup> import duties,<sup>71</sup> and other matters of Federal administration and regulation, is discussed in appropriate topics.

State legislation directed toward protecting the national flag does not infringe upon the exclusive powers of the Federal government.<sup>72</sup>

There being no evidence of an express contract of employment other than services performed during a period of many years, it was held that no contract was impaired by a state employer's liability act. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Lighthouse [Ind.] 78 N. E. 1033. Act incorporating local society with same name as that of a previously existing voluntary state association whose charter from a foreign corporation had been withdrawn, and conferring upon it exclusive right to grant subcharters in state, held not to impair obligation of contract with foreign corporation. National Council v. State Council, 203 U. S. 151, 51 Law. Ed. 132. Act amending Indian law in relation to erection of poles and wires on the Tonawanda reservation held not to impair obligation of contracts. Jemison v. Bell Tel. Co., 186 N. Y. 493, 79 N. E. 728. Parties to contract are charged with knowledge of rights which may accrue to third persons in subject-matter of contract under existing laws, and hence an act making certain liens subsequent in time paramount does not impair the obligation of a contract. Act making thresher's lien on grain superior to all other liens except seed liens. Phelan v. Terry [Minn.] 112 N. W. 872. Gen. Laws 1905, p. 386, c. 163, restricting defense of assumed risk, held not unconstitutional as impairing obligation of contract with one entering service before its passage. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Foth [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 171. Act making subsequent agister's lien prior to an existing valid mortgage lien held to impair obligation of contract. National Bk. of Commerce v. Jones [Okla.] 91 P. 191. Act prohibiting offering for sale of real estate without written authority from owner or attorney in fact held to impair the obligation of a contract. Fischer Co. v. Woods [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 836. Under a law providing that upon dissolution of an agricultural association citizens contributing to same should be entitled to such proportion of the proceeds of the sale as the amount paid in by them bore to amount paid by state and a municipal corporation, a subsequent act making claims of creditors preferred and making an amount subsequently paid in by the state a preferred lien on such proceeds impairs obligation of a vested right. Maryland Jockey Club of Baltimore City v. State [Md.] 67 A. 239.

What is a contract: Right of the holder of a negotiable bond to transfer same to an innocent purchaser for value free from defenses is a vested right which cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation. Gamble v. Rural Independent School Dist. of Alli- son [C. C. A.] 146 F. 113. Under a reservation of power to amend corporate charters, a special act exempting members of a fire department thereby created held not to constitute a contract incapable of subsequent abrogation. State v. Cantwell, 142 N. C. 604, 55 S. E. 820. Grant of authority by city to erect a slaughter house on specific property, in reliance on which large sums of money were expended on improvements, held not to constitute a contract which city could not impair by declaring maintenance thereof a nuisance. City of Portland v. Cook [Or.] 87 P. 772. Mere consent by city council to construction of subways in streets, no action being taken thereunder, does not constitute a contract which the legislature cannot subsequently revoke. People v. Ellison, 51 Misc. 413, 101 N. Y. S. 55. A judgment lien does not become a vested right or interest in land until levy and sale, and an act increasing a wife's right of dower in lands of her husband, adopted after entry of judgment against husband, is not void as impairing the obligation of a contract. Davidson v. Richardson [Or.] 89 P. 742. That judgment was entered by confession does not render it such a contract as to prevent enactment of laws affecting right of parties thereunder. Id. Contract by attorney general with an attorney to collect war claims for state upon agreed compensation held beyond scope of former's authority and void. Hord v. State, 167 Ind. 622, 79 N. E. 916.

42. Compliance by foreign corporation with state law, entitling it to do business in state on same basis as domestic corporations, constitutes a contract which is impaired by a subsequent law imposing upon it greater burdens than are imposed on domestic corporations. American Smelting & Ref. Co. v. People of Colorado, 204 U. S. 103, 51 Law. Ed. 393; British American Mortg. Co. v. Jones [S. C.] 56 S. E. 983. Under a constitutional reservation of power to alter or amend corporate charters, the legislature cannot amend a contract between the corporation and a third person (Boswell v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 130), but the rule has no application where the parties in making the contract must have contemplated the possibility of a legislative change. (Id.). Act limiting amount which insurance companies may expend to procure business held not to impair obligation of contract between company and its general agent, especially in view of a proviso therein that company should continue to be legally authorized to do business. Id. While under its reserved power the legislature may amend a corporate charter in so far as it constitutes a contract between the state and the corporation and its stockholders, it cannot amend same in so far as it constitutes a contract between the corporation and its stockholders. Garay v. St. Joe Min. Co. [Utah] 91 P. 369. Act authorizing two-thirds of holders of outstanding stock to amend charter against wishes of minority so as to make full paid nonassessable stock assessable and subject to sale therefor held void as impairing obligation between corporation and stockholders. Id. A constitutional reservation of power to amend corporate charter does not confer power to amend laws which would impair the obligation of a contract. General law conferring power on a city to enter into contracts for erection and maintenance of waterworks for a definite period cannot be amended so as to modify a contract entered into thereunder. Omaha Water Co. v. Omaha [C. C. A.] 147 F. 1. Act prohibiting construction of lateral railroad in certain territory, notwithstanding irrevocable charter granting right to construct laterals, held void. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Waters [Md.] 66 A. 685. Conn. Gen. St. §§ 3694, 3695, authorizing condemnation of outstanding stock of railway company by railway owning three-fourths of its capital stock where purchase by latter will be for public interest, held not unconstitutional as impairing obligation of contracts. Offield v. New York, etc., R. Co., 203 U. S. 372, 51 Law. Ed. 231. Act authorizing railway and warehouse commission to allow increase of capital stock of railway for such purposes and upon such terms and conditions as it may deem advisable, or in its discretion to refuse it, held not to impair charter of company. State v. Great Northern R. Co., 100 Minn. 445, 111 N. W. 289. Where at the time of granting of charter of a railroad company a general law provided that no reduction in rates for carriage should be made until net earnings exceeded a certain percentage, a subsequent act amendatory thereof does not impair the obligation of a contract. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Storey, 149 F. 499. Conn. Act July 1, 1895, imposing on street railways cost of paving part of streets occupied by tracks, held valid exercise of reserved power to alter or amend charters. Fair Haven & W. R. Co. v. New Haven, 203 U. S. 379, 51 Law. Ed. 237.

43. Franchise to operate street railway construed and held to constitute a perpetual franchise which could not be impaired. Des Moines City R. Co. v. Des Moines, 151 F. 854. Contract between city and waterworks company fixing minimum rates for certain period cannot be modified by city by reducing rates within that period. Omaha Water Co. v. Omaha [C. C. A.] 147 F. 1. As a railroad company holds its franchise and operates subject to constitutional and statutory conditions and limitations, a constitutional provision requiring interchange of cars at points of physical connection with other roads does not impair the obligation of a contract. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stockyards Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 18, 97 S. W. 778.

44. Where public utility was purchased from state under contract that it should not be subject to taxes except for state purposes, act authorizing levy of county tax thereon held to impair obligation of contract. Columbia Water Power Co. v. Campbell, 75 S. C. 34, 54 S. E. 833. A valid lien of a purchaser at a tax sale cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation. Beggs v. Paine [N. D.] 109 N. W. 322. Tax on exercise by will of power of appointment conferred by deed executed prior to passage of statute authorizing tax held not unconstitutional as impairing obligation of contract. Chanler v. Kelsey, 205 U. S. 466, 51 Law. Ed. 882.

45. See 7 C. L. 721.

An enlargement of the period of limitations does not impair the obligation of a contract as to one in whose favor the full period of limitation had not run. Cole v. Van Ostrand [Wis.] 110 N. W. 884. Act extending period of limitations as to revival of judgments held not to impair the obligation of a contract as to a judgment not barred. Doehla v. Phillips [Cal.] 91 P. 330. Minn. Gen. Laws 1899, c. 272, rendering personal service of process on nonresident stockholders, in action to enforce stockholder's liability, held not to impair obligation of contract because under old law such stockholders could not be reached, or because expenses necessary to enforce liability against nonresident stockholders are taken into consideration in estimating amount of assessment. Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 Law. Ed. 1163. Act ratifying ultra vires loan by school commissioners held not to impair obligation of contract as to one to whom money was loaned. Courtner v. Etheredge [Ala.] 43 So. 368. Act providing for voluntary dissolution of corporations held not to impair obligation of contracts, as dissolution does not affect rights of creditors. Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co. [Cal.] 89 P. 335.

46. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Waters [Md.] 66 A. 685. Act limiting amount of commissions paid by insurance company for new business held within police power and therefore not to impair contract between company and agent. Boswell v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co., 104 N. Y. S. 130.

47. Where, under law, creditor upon return of execution against corporation nulla bona might have execution issued against a stockholder, an act passed subsequent to entry of judgment against corporation providing for appointment of receiver upon such return who should sue stockholders for benefit of creditors impairs the obligation of a contract as to such judgment. Pusey & Jones Co. v. Love [Del.] 66 A. 1013.

48. See 7 C. L. 721; Interpretation of Statutes to determine whether they are retroactive, see Statutes, 8 C. L. 1976.

49. Act imposing tax on gross amount of premiums constituting new business of an insurance company during preceding year, payable the year following held a tax on a franchise and not on property and therefore not retroactive. People v. Kelsey, 116 App. Div. 97, 101 N. Y. S. 902. Employer's liability act (Act Cong. June 11, 1906), regulating liability of carriers for injuries to employees, is not retrospective, and therefore does not deprive one of the right to enforce causes of action existing prior to its adoption. Hall v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 149 F. 564.

50. A retroactive statute is not unconstitutional unless it deprives a person of

Vested rights<sup>51</sup> cannot be impaired, nor can a cause of action be created out of past transactions.<sup>52</sup>

Taxes, licenses, and public rights.<sup>53</sup>—Taxes cannot be levied retrospectively,<sup>54</sup> but a curative act confined to matters which the legislature might previously have authorized or omitted is valid.<sup>55</sup>

Regulations of procedure.<sup>56</sup>—A vested right in rules of procedure does not exist.<sup>57</sup>

Retroactive statutes assailed as authorizing a deprivation of property without due process of law are treated elsewhere in this topic.<sup>59</sup> property without due process of law. Plummer v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 152 F. 206. The power to pass curative statutes is limited only by the necessity of protecting vested rights. Act legalizing issue of bonds voted under act impliedly repealed. City of Redlands v. Brook [Cal.] 91 P. 150. As a general rule the legislature may validate retrospectively any proceeding which might have been authorized in advance. Act binding all persons not in esse possessing an expectant or contingent interest under limitations in deeds or wills by all prior proceedings for the sale of the property to which all persons in being, who would have taken same had the contingency then happened, were made parties, held constitutional. Anderson v. Wilkins, 142 N. C. 154, 55 S. E. 272. Where no vested rights are impaired, the legislature may ratify what has already been done where it could have authorized same in the first instance. Courtner v. Etheredge [Ala.] 43 So. 368. Rev. St. 1899, § 2938 (Ann. St. 1906, p. 1694), giving surviving husband one-half real and personal estate of deceased wife leaving no descendants, held not retrospective as to a woman who was married and owned property prior to adoption of statute and who died subsequent to its adoption. Ferguson v. Gentry [Mo.] 104 S. W. 104.

51. See 7 C. L. 722.

If a judgment on the trial and on appeal was correct, it cannot be invalidated by a statute subsequently passed. Powell v. Nevada, C. & O. R. Co., 28 Nev. 305, 82 P. 96. Act imposing more onerous conditions on right to redeem from tax sale than existed when property was sold held unconstitutional in so far as it was retrospective. Johnson v. Taylor [Cal.] 88 P. 903.

52. Act providing that, in action for damages "heretofore or hereafter" sustained by either party to marriage relation caused by negligence of another, the fact that a legal impediment to the marriage existed shall be immaterial where the marriage was entered into in good faith, held retroactive and void. Philip v. Heraty, 147 Mich. 473, 111 N. W. 93.

53. See 7 C. L. 722.

54. Railroad gross earnings tax in force July 15, 1905, held not to embrace entire year 1905, and therefore not unconstitutional as retrospective. State v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 909, 97 S. W. 71, rvg. [Tex. Civ. App.] 93 S. W. 464.

55. Curative act validating tax deeds irregularly executed held constitutional. Spokane Terminal Co. v. Stanford [Wash.] 87 P. 37. Curative statute validating assessments defective because insufficiently described in tax rolls, or because not listed by assessor and presented to commissioners for approval, held valid as relating to mere formal defects. Haynes v. State [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 405. Act Cong. June 30, 1906, ratifying illegal imposition of duties by president on imports from Philippines between ratification of treaty with Spain and passage of Philippine tariff act, held constitutional, though action to recover duties so collected had been commenced prior to passage of act. United States v. Heinszen, 206 U. S. 370, 51 Law. Ed. 1098. Curative act legalizing tax deeds, ineffective because of formal defects, where period of redemption has expired, held constitutional. Baird v. Monroe [Cal.] 89 P. 352.

56. See 7 C. L. 723. See, also, Limitation of Actions, 8 C. L. 768.

57. The legislature may alter, enlarge, modify, or confer a remedy for existing legal rights, and may establish new rules of evidence to be applied in the trial of existing causes of action. Philip v. Heraty, 147 Mich. 473, 111 N. W. 93. Act regulating procedure on change of point of diversion by owner of water held remedial in its character, and therefore not unconstitutional as depriving of vested rights owners who had already changed the point of diversion. Ashenfelter v. Carpenter, 37 Colo. 534, 87 P. 800.

58. Held not to apply to state employer's liability act. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Lighthouse [Ind.] 78 N. E. 1033. An act authorizing revocation of physician's license, in a civil action, and pursuant to rules of pleading and evidence in civil cases, for fraud in its procurement, occurring prior to passage of act, held not an ex post facto act within the constitutional inhibition. State v. Schaeffer, 129 Wis. 459, 109 N. W. 522.

63. Act requiring owner of impounded animals to pay all expenses of impounding, on notice and providing for sale upon failure to do so, held not unconstitutional as a deprivation of property without due process of law, although no judicial process is required. Hendricks v. Block, 80 Ark. 333, 97 S. W. 63.

64. A constitutional prohibition against depriving a person of life, liberty, or property except by the law of the land does not limit the power of the legislature to pass laws, but forbids such deprivation except in accordance with law. Sumpter v. State [Ark.] 98 S. W. 719.

65. Act imposing penalty on railroads for failure to maintain waterclosets held not to authorize taking of property without due process of law. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. State [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 21, 97 S. W. 720. Act placing peddlers of one kind of goods in one class for license purposes, while peddlers of other articles are classified together, held to secure due process of law. Miller v. Birmingham [Ala.] 44 So. 388. Ordinance prohibiting erection, removal, or remodeling of a frame building within sixty feet of a brick or stone structure without written consent of owner of latter held unconstitutional as depriving owners of frame structures of property without due process of law. Tilford v. Belknap [Ky.] 103 S. W. 289. Act March 27, 1907, authorizing treasurer of city of Memphis to collect personal tax by distress sale in certain cases, though same is not delinquent, held unconstitutional as depriving owner of property without due process of law, under general laws, distress being authorized only where tax is delinquent. Malone v. Williams [Tenn.] 103 S. W. 798. Act March 27, 1907, relieving city of Memphis of burdens imposed on other communities by general law in manner of conducting elections, and depriving its inhabitants of safeguards granted such communities thereby, held unconstitutional as depriving persons of property without due process of law. Id. Act March 27, 1907, providing that person successfully attacking a tax title to property in city of Memphis shall pay to defeated holder of tax deed the amount paid at tax sale with interest, and any tax which purchaser may have paid with interest, together with costs of litigation, held unconstitutional as a deprivation of property without due process of law. Id.

66. Act June, 1906, providing for establishing and quieting title to real estate in case of destruction of public records by fire, flood, or earthquake, held not unconstitutional as not affording due process because of the insufficiency of the service provided for therein. Title & Document Restoration Co. v. Kerrigan [Cal.] 88 P. 356. Act providing that on commitment of child to benevolent institution for causes enumerated parent shall be notified and given ten days within which to show that circumstances resulting in commitment were not due to his neglect held constitutional. Kennedy v.

Meara, 127 Ga. 68, 56 S. E. 243. Act authorizing voluntary dissolution of corporations upon notice by publication held constitutional, dissolution not affecting creditors. Crossman v. Vivienda Water Co. [Cal.] 89 P. 335. Act giving applicant for liquor license right to contest in court validity of a blanket remonstrance does not deprive him of his property without due process of law. Cain v. Allen [Ind.] 79 N. E. 201. Statute authorizing constructive service upon resident defendant who is within the state and the entry of a personal judgment thereon held not violative of due process clause, it being reasonably probable that defendant would receive notice thereof. Nelson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 225 Ill. 197, 80 N. E. 109. As rights of heirs not appearing are not concluded by decree admitting will to probate, that Code Civ. Proc. § 1303 does not give nonresident heirs sufficient notice of proceedings does not invalidate it. Tracy v. Muir [Cal.] 90 P. 832. A public act may constitute constructive notice of contingencies which may arise thereunder. Act providing that after lapse of four years water rights adjudicated in one water district should be conclusive on claimants in other districts held not to deprive such claimants of property without due process of law, the statute itself furnishing constructive notice that such adjudications might be had. Ft. Lyon Canal Co. v. Arkansas Valley Sugar Beet & Irrigated Land Co. [Colo.] 90 P. 1023. Constitutional amendment clothing corporation commission with limited executive, legislative, and judicial powers, subjecting carriers to its jurisdiction in the matter of their public duties and charges, and providing for hearing, representation by counsel, and the right to cross-examine witnesses to introduce evidence and to appeal, held not to authorize deprivation of property without due process of law. Winchester, etc., R. Co. v. Com. [Va.] 55 S. E. 692. Act imposing tax on gross earnings of carriers, and providing for its enforcement in judicial proceedings, held not a deprivation of property without due process. State v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 909, 97 S. W. 71, rvq. [Tex. Civ. App.] 93 S. W. 464. Act June 1906, providing for establishing and quieting title to realty where public records are destroyed by fire, flood, or earthquake, held not unconstitutional as not affording due process on ground that proceedings provided for therein are not judicial, because no controversy is required to be asserted in its inception. Title & Document Restoration Co. v. Kerrigan [Cal.] 88 P. 356. Ark. Act Feb. 15, 1893, providing constructive notice on nonresidents of pendency of suit for collection of unpaid levy taxes by publication for four weeks, held sufficient to afford due process. Ballard v. Hunter, 204 U. S. 241, 51 Law. Ed. 461. Minn. Gen. Laws 1893, c. 272, providing for more efficient enforcement of stockholder's liability, is not unconstitutional as depriving them of property without due process of law because not requiring service of process on stockholders in action in which assess-

§ 1. Nature of contempt and what constitutes. A. Elements of contempt and nature of proceedings; civil or criminal.<sup>47</sup>—Contempt proceedings are criminal when brought for the purpose of vindicating the power and authority of the court and maintaining its dignity.<sup>48</sup> When instituted mainly or solely for the purpose of protecting or enforcing private rights in which the public have no special interest, they are civil.<sup>49</sup> A district attorney or acting district attorney,<sup>50</sup> a municipal corporation,<sup>51</sup> or the individual members of an unincorporated labor organization,<sup>52</sup> may be guilty of, and punished for, contempt.

(§ 1) B. Disrespect to the court in general.<sup>53</sup>—Improper charges addressed to the court constitute contempt,<sup>54</sup> but an attorney cannot be adjudged in contempt for making charges in good faith and for justifiable ends in the course of his professional duties unless he had reason to believe that they were unfounded.<sup>55</sup>

(§ 1) C. Acts in disobedience of court.<sup>56</sup>—Failure to comply with an order of the court constitutes contempt,<sup>57</sup> if the order is valid and within the court's juris-

It excludes contempt of legislative bodies (Municipal Corporations, 8 C. L. 1056; States, 8 C. L. 1970; United States, 8 C. L. 2210), criminal prosecution for acts obstructing justice (Obstructing Justice, 8 C. L. 1191), the striking of disrespectful pleadings (Pleading, 8 C. L. 1355), briefs and motions for rehearing (Appeal and Review, 9 C. L. 108), and the suspension and disbarment of attorneys for contempt (Attorneys and Counselors, 9 C. L. 300).

47. See 7 C. L. 746.

48. Patterson v. Wyoming Valley District Council, 31 Pa. Super. Ct. 112. Willful disobedience of injunction against interference with nonunion labor held criminal contempt. Enterprise Foundry Co. v. Iron Moulders' Union of North America [Mich.] 112 N. W. 685.

49. Violation of injunction against boycotting. Patterson v. Wyoming Valley District Council, 31 Pa. Super. Ct. 112.

50. There is no law or rule of public policy exempting a district attorney or acting district attorney from the penalty of contempt of court. State v. Reid, 118 La. 827, 43 So. 455.

51. Marson v. Rochester, 185 N. Y. 602, 78 N. E. 1106.

52. The individual members of an unincorporated labor organization who have been active in its management may be punished for contempt committed by the organization. Patterson v. Wyoming Valley District Council, 31 Pa. Super. Ct. 112.

53. See 7 C. L. 746.

54. The presentation of an affidavit in support of an application for a change of judge, which affidavit without supporting facts charges the judge with corrupt and improper motives, constitutes contempt notwithstanding a statute authorizing the filing of affidavits for changes of judge when a party cannot have fair trial. Lamberson

v. Tulare County Super. Ct. [Cal.] 91 P. 100. Attorney who knowingly presented the affidavit held guilty equally with client. Id. Under Code 1904, § 3768, subd. 3, authorizing courts to punish summarily contempts consisting in the use of obscene, contemptuous, or insulting language addressed to the court, the language whether spoken or written must be specifically addressed to the court. Yoder v. Com. [Va.] 57 S. E. 581.

55. There is not only justification in such a course, but counsel would be recreant to their sworn duty as officers of the court if they did not urge, in proper language and spirit, the vacation of a sentence which in their honest belief is excessive, and was based on a plea of guilty improperly obtained, and pronounced by a judge actuated by improper motives. Tracy v. State, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 357. Counsel so acting in good faith cannot be subjected to proceedings in contempt, notwithstanding the charges they put forth proved ill-founded and were false to the personal knowledge of the judge at the time of the filing. Id.

56. See 7 C. L. 746.

57. Order of court requiring one to return a portion of assets received from a receiver held enforceable by contempt proceeding. Orchard v. National Exchange Bk., 121 Mo. App. 338, 98 S. W. 824. R. Co. v. Com.* [Ky.] 103 S. W. 269.

Failure to pay alimony: Contempt proceeding for enforcement of decree for alimony is specifically authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 1773. Sec. 1241 does not apply. Stanley v. Stanley, 116 App. Div. 544, 101 N. Y. S. 725. Certified copy of decree for alimony held properly served on defendant and personal demand made for alimony so as to sustain contempt proceeding. Id. Proceedings and service on defendant without the state and on his attorney within the state in divorce and contempt proceedings held sufficient to give court jurisdiction to punish by fine or imprisonment for failure to pay alimony and attorney's fees. Woolworth v. Woolworth, 115 App. Div. 405, 100 N. Y. S. 865.

Refusal to testify or produce documents: Husband held guilty of contempt in refusing to answer questions concerning the nature and whereabouts of property belonging to succession of his wife. Succession of Desina, 118 La. 278, 42 So. 936. Failure to obey order for examination before referee held contempt. Grant v. Greene, 105 N. Y. S. 641. A party is guilty of contempt for refusal to answer questions before a master in chancery after overruling of objections thereto unless he himself makes some valid claim of personal privilege. Bowker v. Haight & Freese Co., 146 F. 256. Immateriality of evidence or insufficiency of pleadings no justification for disobedience of subpoena to testify. Fairfield v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 508. Where court had made no order relative to the taking of a deposition before a notary, failure of a witness to obey the subpoena of the notary was not contempt. McIntyre v. People, 227 Ill. 26, 81 N. E. 33. Held not contempt to refuse to answer questions before grand jury where answers might have incriminated accused. Ex parte Andrews [Tex. Cr. App.] 100 S. W. 376. Acts 1903, p. 122, c. 94, §§ 15, grants immunity only in proceedings before a justice of the peace investigating violation of anti-trust law, and not in proceedings before a grand jury. Id. Bankrupts guilty of contempt for refusing to surrender books or give reasonable excuse for their disappearance and for swearing falsely and giving evasive and unsatisfactory answers. In re Fellerman, 149 F. 244. Order to produce documents cannot be disobeyed on claim that they are incriminating, such objection being properly raised only after the witness is sworn. United States v. Collins, 146 F. 553. Witness in bankruptcy not tendered fees and not served with subpoena duces tecum not in contempt for failure to produce a document. In re Johnson & Knox Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 151 F. 207. Corporate officers who answered that demanded books and papers had been destroyed held not guilty of contempt because the answer was based on information received from subordinate custodians, and not on their own knowledge. Despeaux v.

Pennsylvania R. Co., 149 F. 798. An officer of a corporation cannot be punished for contempt for failure to produce papers which he cannot obtain except surreptitiously or by breach of the peace. United States v. American Tobacco Co., 146 F. 557. Order adjudging an attorney guilty of contempt for returning a document to his client after he had been ordered to produce it in bankruptcy held not warranted by the facts. In re Johnson & Knox Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 151 F. 207.

58. It is not a contempt to disobey an injunction void for want of jurisdiction in the court to grant it. Powhatan Coal & Coke Co. v. Ritz, 60 W. Va. 395, 56 S. E. 257. An assistant prosecuting attorney is not amenable to a charge of contempt for refusing to obey an order of court to prepare and present a nole prosequi in a specified case. Such an order should be directed to the prosecuting attorney. Ex Parte Froome Morris, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 212. An injunctive provision of order of confirmation of foreclosure sale held not within power reserved by court to enforce conditions of foreclosure decree, and no basis for contempt proceedings against individual bondholders not parties who instituted proceedings in state court. Lewis v. Peck [C. C. A.] 154 F. 273. Order of bankruptcy requiring production of a document by one not served and not appearing held void. In re Johnson & Knox Lumber Co. [C. C. A.] 151 F. 207. Pending appeal court below could not punish for contempt for disobeying order for temporary alimony. Anderson v. Anderson, 124 Ill. App. 613. A state court has no power to adjudge one guilty of contempt for failure to respond to a summons served on him outside the territorial limits of the state. Failure to appear on service of summons of receiver of a corporation. Fidelity & Casualty Co. v. MacAfee Co. [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 379. Federal supreme court has power to decide whether it has jurisdiction of an appeal, hence lack of such jurisdiction will not enable one to violate its order that proceedings below be stayed and that appellant be retained pending the appeal. United States v. Shipp, 203 U. S. 563, 51 Law. Ed. 319. Order requiring defendant's attendance at proceedings supplementary to execution of judgment recovered in municipal court, and reciting that execution was issued "out of the supreme court," held valid. Jaques v. Willett, 104 N. Y. S. 500. Laws 1906, p. 79, No. 75, requiring corporations to produce books and papers, held constitutional, and order of court requiring a corporation to produce documents before grand jury in investigation of breach of a criminal statute by citizens of the state held valid, so as to confer upon court power to punish corporation for contempt by fine. In re Consolidated Rendering Co. [Vt.] 66 A. 790.

59. If a court has jurisdiction of the party and subject-matter, its order must be obeyed regardless of whether it was improvidently or erroneously made. Butler v. Champlin, 124 Ill. App. 29; Meeks v. State, 80 Ark. 579, 98 S. W. 378. Where a court has power to issue an injunction, one may not disobey it because erroneously granted without notice or because the bill was insufficient. Christian Held contempt for ticket broker to sell tickets in violation of injunction. Ex parte Cash [Tex. Cr. App.] 99 S. W. 1118. Where one is enjoined from collecting or attempting to collect a judgment or enforcing the execution under the judgment, it is a violation of the spirit and interest of that order to bring suit against the surety on a bond given in an effort to appeal from that judgment. Strong v. Wesley Hospital, 125 Ill. App. 201. Stockholder held not to violate injunction against transfer of stock, pending action by corporation to rescind contract by which he held it, by instituting suit in another state to compel directors to transfer to corporation certain real estate. Maine Products Co. v. Alexander, 115 App. Div. 475, 101 N. Y. S. 464. Where defendant violated a temporary injunction granted on a bill to restrain him from engaging in business contrary to his contract, resultant contempt proceedings were not void as being independent of the action. My Laundry Co. v. Schmeling, 129 Wis. 597, 109 N. W. 540. A contempt proceeding for violation of an injunction will not be quashed because petition shows that certain facts therein stated were obtained from defendant's testimony in another case, it not appearing that such facts may not be proven by other evidence. Hammond Lumber Co. v. Keegan, 150 F. 148.

63. Where defendant in injunction proceeding was informed by plaintiff's attorney that a temporary restraining order had been issued and was also shown a copy, he was bound to obey whether served with the writ or not. Anderson v. Hall [Ga.] 58 S. E. 43. Service of certified copy of restraining order held sufficient to justify contempt proceeding for its willful violation. Hammond Lumber Co. v. Sailors' Union of the Pacific, 149 F. 577.

65. False swearing in bankruptcy though a criminal offense is also contempt of court and punishable summarily. In re Fellerman, 149 F. 244.

66. Evidence insufficient to justify order of contempt for attempt to influence a witness. United States v. Carroll, 147 F. 947. A circuit court of Michigan has no statutory or inherent power to punish for contempt one who induced a witness to absent himself from the jurisdiction of the justice court at a preliminary examination of one charged with an offense triable in the circuit court. Emery v. Law [Mich.] 112 N. W. 951. Comp. Laws, c. 301 § 10891, subd. 4. does not apply to contempts in criminal proceedings. Id.

67. All willful attempts of whatever nature to improperly influence jurors, whether by conversation or attempts to bribe, and whether successful or not, constitute contempt. Emery v. State [Neb.] 111 N. W. 374. Evidence sufficient. Id. An attempt without success to induce a third person to influence jurors in a pending Federal case was not a contempt under the rule that the act done must naturally and directly tend to obstruct the administration of justice. United States v. Carroll, 147 F. 947.

68. Removal from state of property attached in an action against a nonresident is an act hindering and impairing plaintiff's rights and constitutes contempt. Lowenthal v. Hodge, 105 N. Y. S. 527, afg. 105 N. Y. S. 120. That an attorney was not a party upon whom an attachment was served does not affect his liability for contempt for removing the attached property from the court's jurisdiction, it being sufficient that knowing the facts he participated in its removal. Id. An attempt to evade the order of a court with reference to a res within its jurisdiction by the institution of another, and similar proceeding in a court of concurrent jurisdiction, constitutes contempt (Terry v. State [Neb.] 110 N. W. 733), but one not in any way participating in the institution of ney from court,<sup>69</sup> or similar acts tending to obstruct justice,<sup>70</sup> constitute contempt. A Federal court is without power to adjudge in contempt one not an officer of the court or a suitor therein on a charge of using its process to obstruct the administration of justice in a state court.<sup>71</sup>

§ 2. Defense, excuse, or purgation.<sup>72</sup>—A bona fide attempt to comply with an order may be shown,<sup>73</sup> but advice of counsel,<sup>74</sup> or a disclaimer of intention, disrespect, or design to embarrass the administration of justice, is not a defense;<sup>75</sup> nor will the truth of alleged defamatory matter addressed to a court or judge be inquired into.<sup>76</sup> That a decree has been appealed from does not excuse disobedience until the same has been superseded in the manner provided by law.<sup>77</sup> Whether breach of an injunction was invited depends upon the facts.<sup>78</sup>

§ 3. Power to punish or redress; contempt or other remedy.<sup>79</sup>—Common-law courts of record have inherent power to punish for contempt,<sup>80</sup> which power cannot be denied or unreasonably restricted by legislative enactment.<sup>81</sup> The incapacity of a court of equity to punish for crimes does not deprive it of power to punish for acts done pursuant to a conspiracy in violation of its writ of injunction.<sup>82</sup> Under a statute authorizing "courts and judges" to punish contempts, a judge in vacation may punish the violation of an injunction.<sup>83</sup> A legislative committee appointed to investigate the affairs of a state institution may be lawfully empowered by the legislature to punish a contumacious witness for contempt.<sup>84</sup> The Federal such action cannot be convicted (Id.). Contemners could not defend on ground that they could not dismiss the unauthorized action as to one whom they had made plaintiff without her consent. Id.

A court of record has complete jurisdiction and inherent power to punish for contempt in the case of an employer who complains of interference with his business and irreparable injury thereto by strikers and members of a labor union. Iron Molders' Union v. Greenwald Co., 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 161.

81. Court could punish attorney for absence from court though such conduct is not enumerated as a contempt in Rev. St. 1899, § 1616. In re Clark [Mo. App.] 103 S. W. 1105. Code 1904, § 3768, limiting the classes of contempts which may be punished summarily, is not an unreasonable restriction of the power of the courts to punish for contempt. Yoder v. Com. [Va.] 57 S. 89. Presentation of affidavit for change of judge attacking judge's integrity held contempt in presence of court authorizing either summary procedure or order to show cause and dispensing with any supporting affidavit. Lamberson v. Tulare County Super. Ct. [Cal.] 91 P. 100. Code Civ. Proc. § 1209, subd. 12, defining contempt not controlling. Id. "Summary proceeding" within Code 1904, § 3768, is one in which trial by jury is not allowed. Yoder v. Com. [Va.] 57 S. E. 581. To constitute contempt punishable summarily under subd. 3, § 3768, Code 1904, the insulting language therein referred to whether spoken or written must be specifically addressed to the judge. Id. Statute not unconstitutional as an unreasonable restriction of court's power to punish for contempt. Id. A grand jury is not such a part of the court as to authorize the court to summarily punish a person for any act done before the grand jury without proceeding on affidavit and citing the offender to show cause. Ex parte Hedden [Nev.] 90 P. 737. It is only when the offense is committed in the presence of the court in actual session and within its view and hearing that proceedings by rule can be lawfully dispensed with. State v. Reid, 118 La. 327, 43 So. 455. The sending of a motion containing defamatory matter to the judge in chambers does not constitute a contempt faciem curiae punishable summarily. Id.

90. Contempt proceedings being quasi criminal in character, the charge against accused is strictly construed in his favor. Iron Molders' Union v. Greenwald Co., 4 Ohio (N. P. (N. S.)) 150. But since the proceeding is summary in character, technical pleadings are not required; it is sufficient that it appears from the petition, affidavit, or other showing that the court's order has been willfully violated. Contempt for violation of injunction. Hammond Lumber Co. v. Sailors' Union of the Pacific 149 F. 577. It is sufficient if a rule to show cause specifically states the facts constituting the contempt charged; it need not have the formalities of an indictment. French v. Com., 30 Ky. L. R. 98, 97 S. W. 427. Petition and affidavits held to sufficiently apprise court of violation of an injunction. Flannery v. People, 225 Ill. 62, 80 N. E. 60. Rule charging defendants with unlawfully procuring witnesses to leave the state held sufficiently specific. French v. Com., 30 Ky. L. R. 98, 97 S. W. 427. Affidavit charging erection of two dams held not to charge more than one offense. State v. Sieber [Or.] 88 P. 313. Rule charging three persons with inducing three witnesses to leave the state held not to charge three separate offenses. French v. Com., 30 Ky. L. R. 98, 97 S. W. 427. Mere clerical error showing violation of injunction before it had been issued held no defense. McBride v. People, 127 Ill. App. 344. If an affidavit initiating a proceeding is not sufficiently specific as to the charge, it may be amended, with the court's consent, by a reverification. State v. Sieber [Or.] 88 P. 313.

91. An affidavit on information and belief is not sufficient in a constructive contempt proceeding. State v. Newton [N. D.] 112 N. W. 52. Where a charge of contempt is stated positively and directly in the body of an information, a defect in the verification in this respect does not render it void. Verification of prosecutor that charges were true "as he verily believes." Emery v. State [Neb.] 111. N. W. 374. That petition and affidavit in contempt proceeding were sworn to before a notary who was petitioner's solicitor, though improper, held not ground for reversing contempt order. McBride v. People, 127 Ill. App. 344. Insufficient verification of petition which was unnecessary because of existence of numerous affidavits in support of rule to show cause held immaterial. Flannery v. People, 127 Ill. App. 526.

92. Under B. & C. Comp. § 665, it is discretionary with the court to either make an order to show cause why accused should not be arrested to answer or issue a warrant of arrest to bring such person in in the first instance. State v. Sieber [Or.] 88 p. 313. Failure of warrant of arrest to contain directions as to bail held waived by failure to make objection. Id. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2269, a proceeding to punish for contempt must be commenced either by order to show cause or by warrant of attachment; a notice of motion for order punishing for contempt is unauthorized. West Hudson County Trust Co. v. Waldron, 104 N. Y. S. 513.

93. In constructive criminal contempt proceedings a formal accusation of some kind is essential. State v. Newton [N. D.] 112 N. W. 52. Resistance to a command of court to enter a nolle prosequi in a certain case is not punishable summarily but only under the procedure provided in Rev. St. § 5641, and, unless that procedure as to the filing of written charges, etc., is conformed with, a court is without jurisdiction to punish for a contempt thus committed. Ex parte Froome Morris, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 212.

must be sufficient to constitute due process of law.<sup>94</sup> In contempt for nonobservance of an injunction, an affidavit otherwise sufficient need not allege a demand of performance.<sup>95</sup> Defendant does not waive want of jurisdiction by pleading guilty to a charge insufficiently alleged.<sup>96</sup> The rule entitling accused to a discharge upon his sworn denial of the charges against him does not obtain in equity,<sup>97</sup> and the courts seem to be gradually departing from it even at common law.<sup>98</sup> An affidavit in commencement of a constructive contempt proceeding is not sustained by proof of contemptuous acts not charged therein.<sup>99</sup>

§ 5. Hearing; evidence; trial.<sup>1</sup>—A judge is not disqualified from presiding at a hearing because the contempt itself consists in imputations upon his motives and attacks upon his integrity.<sup>2</sup> A motion in a Federal court to commit for contempt for failure to pay over money will not be considered pending prosecution of accused in the state courts for embezzlement.<sup>3</sup> In the absence of statute, accused is not entitled to trial by jury,<sup>4</sup> and a hearing may be had at chambers at defendant's request.<sup>5</sup> The evidence need not be taken by the court itself.<sup>6</sup> Where the contempt

Failure to deliver to accused a copy of the affidavit initiating a contempt proceeding for the violation of an injunction is not error where accused did not demand it. State v. Sieber [Or.] 88 P. 313.

94. While courts do not derive their power to punish for contempt from any statute, it is their duty to conform to a statute which does not abridge this power, but simply points out the manner in which it shall be exercised. Ex parte Froome Morris, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 212. In a proceeding for contempt committed without the presence of the court, accused must be served with a formal statement of the charge against him and given an opportunity to plead and answer. Reymert v. Smith [Cal. App.] 90 P. 470. Contempt proceeding held due process of law where instituted in conformity with usual practice in only court having power to punish for the injunction decree. Flannery v. People, 225 Ill. 62, 80 N. E. 60. Where proceedings were commenced by order to show cause based on affidavits setting forth the acts charged, and order and affidavits were served on accused, and proofs taken pro and con, held accused were informed of the charge against them and afforded opportunity to meet them. Seastream v. New Jersey Exhibition Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 65 A. 982. Where court enjoined against interference with nonunion labor, it could in the same proceeding determine whether the injunction had been violated, and such practice was proper where accused were notified and given an opportunity to be heard. *Enterprise Foundry Co. v. 111 N. W. 374. In an indirect contempt proceeding the showing made by the party charged imports verity. McSwane v. Foreman, 167 Ind. 171, 78 N. E. 630. In Federal practice a mere sworn denial of the charge by the accused is not an exoneration where the contempt is direct and tends to obstruct the administration of justice. Attempt to persuade witness to testify contrary to truth in pending case, or to influence jury, held direct contempt where made in immediate vicinity of court. United States v. Carroll 147 F. 947. In such case the matter should be heard and determined on testimony pro and con. Id. Sworn denial that accused murdered a prisoner after he had been allowed an appeal held insufficient to purge of contempt. United States v. Shipp, 203 U. S. 563, 51 Law. Ed. 319. Denial of bankrupt that he had money in his possession or control held not conclusive in contempt proceeding to enforce order requiring him to turn it over to trustee. Moody v. Cole, 148 F. 295.

Civil Code 1895, § 4046, providing for trial by jury in certain contempt proceedings, held not applicable to rule for contempt issued in progress of an alimony case requiring respondent to show cause why he should not comply with court's order requiring payment of alimony and counsel fees. Stokes v. Stokes, 126 Ga. 804, 55 S. E. 1023.

5. The request of the accused that the hearing be had at chambers confers jurisdiction the same as if the hearing had been had in open court. Smith v. Smith [S. C.] 57 S. E. 666.

6. A vice-chancellor has authority as mas-is civil in nature, the inhibition against compelling one to give evidence against himself does not apply.<sup>7</sup> Criminal contempt must be established by proof beyond a reasonable doubt.<sup>8</sup> Other rulings on evidence<sup>9</sup> and instructions<sup>10</sup> will be found in the notes.

ter of the court of chancery to take the testimony of witnesses produced before him in a proceeding to punish one for contempt of the court of chancery and to submit the same to the chancellor for adjudication. Seastream v. New Jersey Exhibition Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 65 A. 982.

7. Court could require a labor organization to produce books and records in investigation as to violation of injunction against boycotting. Patterson v. Wyoming Valley District Council, 31 Pa. Super. Ct. 112. A contempt proceeding for the violation of an injunction is not a criminal prosecution within the inhibition against compelling a party accused to testify against himself. State v. Sieber [Or.] 88 P. 313. Contemnors who voluntarily offered themselves as witnesses on hearing and were examined and cross-examined without objection could not urge that court subjected them to examination without authority. Seastream v. New Jersey Exhibition Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 65 A. 982. Court held to properly require defendant to be examined concerning the amount and value of a crop one-third of which he was required by the court to turn over and to authorize the master to examine other witnesses also before disposing of rule for contempt. Smith v. Smith [S. C.] 57 S. E. 666.

8. A proceeding in bankruptcy to compel the bankrupt to obey an order requiring him to surrender property to the trustee is criminal in its character, and a finding of contempt should be based on evidence inducing a belief beyond a reasonable doubt. Moody v. Cole, 148 F. 295. Accusations of contempt, especially where of criminal import, must be supported by evidence sufficient to convince the trier beyond a reasonable doubt of the actual guilt of the accused and to establish every element of the offense, including the criminal intent. United States v. Carroll, 147 F. 947. In contempt for violation of an order or process of court, the proof of guilt should be clear and conclusive. Evidence insufficient in proceeding for violating a stay order pending appeal from decree enjoining interference with irrigation water. State v. Small [Or.] 90 P. 1110. Proceeding for violation of injunction by conspiring held neither criminal nor quasi criminal and hence proof of guilt beyond reasonable doubt was not necessary. Flannery v. People, 225 Ill. 62, 80 N. E. 60.

9. A witness could testify that money had been furnished to induce him to leave the state where accused had participated in the arrangement. French v. Com., 30 Ky. L. R. 98, 97 S. W. 427. Where an affidavit charged a violation of an injunction by a sale of intoxicants, held not prejudicial for court to inquire into other violations where they were clearly established and hearing was continued so as to fully inform defendant of nature of charge. State v. McCarley, 74 Kan. 874, 87 P. 743. Where conspiracy in violation of injunction was prima facie established, evidence introduced on former hearings for contempt held properly admitted. Flannery v. People, 127 Ill. App. 526.

10. Not error not to charge that accused could not be convicted on the uncorroborated evidence of accomplices there being no accomplices in the case, all the offenders being principals. French v. Com., 30 Ky. L. R. 98, 97 S. W. 427.

§ 7. Punishment, fine and commitment; further proceedings.<sup>19</sup>—Contempts are properly punished by fine or imprisonment,<sup>20</sup> but judgment of imprisonment may not be imposed in the absence of the accused.<sup>21</sup> In New York, when proceedings are instituted by affidavit and attachment, a warrant of commitment must issue, and when begun by affidavit and order to show cause, the offender may be committed by certified copy of the contempt order.<sup>22</sup> The extent of the punishment is largely regulated by statute.<sup>23</sup> A defendant's answer may not be stricken for his contempt of an order directing him to appear before a referee for examination.<sup>24</sup> If an order committing for contempt is intended as punishment, it should fix a definite time of imprisonment;<sup>25</sup> if intended as a means to compel compliance with an order, it may properly provide for confinement until the order is complied with,<sup>26</sup> but should provide for a release on such compliance.<sup>27</sup> A judgment of confinement until costs and fines are paid is sufficient without an alternative provision that the confinement continue until the accused is discharged according to law.<sup>28</sup> While impossibility of performance terminates a confinement under an order of imprisonment until a certain thing be done,<sup>29</sup> it does not purge of the contempt,<sup>30</sup> but contemnor having remained recalcitrant until the intervention of that which made performance impossible is still subject to another sentence of imprisonment for a specified term.<sup>31</sup>

imprisoned not only for debt but also for contempt,<sup>33</sup> hence the district court has no jurisdiction to permit him to obtain his discharge by taking the poor debtors' oath.<sup>34</sup>

§ 9. Review of proceedings.<sup>35</sup>—A statute granting the writ of habeas corpus to one confined for contempt does not apply where the punishment is by fine only.<sup>36</sup> In Indiana, where a contempt is indirect, the only question for review is whether accused has fully answered the charge made against him, and hence a motion for a new trial is not necessary to authorize an appeal.<sup>37</sup> A judgment or decree of criminal contempt is not reviewable except for lack of jurisdiction,<sup>38</sup> but this does not preclude revision or correction of illegal sentences or excessive or cruel punishments.<sup>39</sup> Contempt being a specific criminal offense, the charge, findings, and judgment will be construed in favor of the accused,<sup>40</sup> but defendant may not contradict the facts set forth in the order of commitment.<sup>41</sup> of terms<sup>45</sup> or modification of an order for a continuance<sup>46</sup> is also discretionary, and in a proper case the order may be revoked.<sup>47</sup> After a cause has been continued for the term, the court may not proceed in the absence of defendant and without notice.<sup>48</sup> Failure to pay costs imposed as a condition to adjournment on the ground of the absence of counsel does not justify the preclusion of a party from participation in the trial on the adjourned day.<sup>49</sup>

(§ 2) B. Absence or disability of party or counsel.<sup>58</sup>—To justify a postponement on account of the absence of a party, a meritorious reason existing at the time of trial, which prevents his presence, must be shown.<sup>59</sup> The illness or infirmity of a party,<sup>60</sup> or his necessary absence on business,<sup>61</sup> is ground for continuance,

Discretionary with court to tax costs to plaintiff and continue cause on defendant's motion where plaintiff had failed to comply with conditions of a continuance granted him. Ourand v. Johnson, 6 Ind. T. 361, 98 S. W. 127.

46. Held discretionary to modify judgment allowing continuance so as not to require payment of expenses of attendance of witnesses as condition to going to trial. American Soda Fountain Co. v. Dean Drug Co. [Iowa] 111 N. W. 534.

47. Where a court orders a continuance in order for a party to obtain rebuttal evidence, and the other party withdraws the evidence sought to be rebutted, the continuance order may be revoked upon an oral instruction to disregard such evidence, and in the absence of a request for a written instruction such oral instruction is sufficient. *Guilliford v. 52. Where a controversy involves the interpretation of a contract governed by the laws of another state and a similar suit between the same parties is pending in that state, it is discretionary with the supreme court, though the pendency of the other suit is not pleadable in abatement, to direct a continuance until the disposition of the suit in the other state. Moore v. Maryland Casualty Co. [N. H.] 64 A. 1099.

53. A motion to continue on the ground that the original pleadings were lost is properly denied where the court orders that the record of such papers may be used on the trial the same as the original, as expressly provided by Code 1896, §§ 2644, 2645. Birmingham R., Light & Power Co. v. Moore [Ala.] 42 So. 1024.

54. Permitting discussion of a motion for an increase of the ad damnum in the presence of the jury where the damages are unliquidated is ground for continuance. Eastbrook v. Rhode Island Suburban R. Co. [R. I.] 66 A. 298.

55. Not error to refuse to continue cause on ground that a juror was permitted to testify where he was discharged by consent and trial proceeded without him. Walker v. Dickey [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 934, 98 S. W. 658.

56. Affidavit held not to set out a defense to an action by the state on a liquor dealer's bond so as to authorize a continuance within a court rule entitling defendant to a continuance at the first term on his satisfying the court that he has probable ground of defense, etc. *State v. 59. No abuse of discretion to refuse continuance for absence of a party on account of illness where it was not shown what his condition was at time of trial. Cavender v. Atkins [Ga. App.] 58 S. E. 332.

60. Held error to refuse continuance where defendant was old and unable to attend trial or give a deposition, but would probably be able to attend within a month. Deacon v. Rasch [Ind. App.] 81 N. E. 84.

61. Error to refuse postponement where defendant, a necessary witness, was absent in Porto Rico on important business, and there had been previous adjournments not rendered necessary by him. Hoffman v. Gunst, 104 N. Y. S. 926.

but the fact that a party is sick,<sup>62</sup> or the absence of one of several defendants,<sup>63</sup> does not necessarily authorize delay. It is not an abuse of discretion to deny a continuance in habeas corpus to recover minor children until the father can be notified and heard, the writ having issued against his brother.<sup>64</sup>

A continuance may be allowed for the illness of counsel<sup>65</sup> or his actual engagement in other causes,<sup>66</sup> but not where no reasonable excuse for his absence is shown,<sup>67</sup> or where the party is represented by other counsel,<sup>68</sup> or where a previous postponement was granted on the promise of counsel to be present on a subsequent day.<sup>69</sup>

(§ 2) C. Absence of witness or inability to procure evidence.<sup>70</sup>—In a proper case the court should grant a continuance on account of the absence of a material witness,<sup>71</sup> but the motion is properly denied where it is not shown that due diligence was exercised in procuring his attendance,<sup>72</sup> or that his expected testimony is material<sup>73</sup> or cannot be procured from other witnesses,<sup>74</sup> or where such testimony would not have changed the result of the trial<sup>75</sup> or is at variance with that given

62. That a party is sick does not ipso facto entitle him to a continuance. It is for court to exercise its discretion in view of all the circumstances. Lynch v. San Francisco Super. Ct. [Cal.] 88 P. 708.

63. No abuse to refuse to continue condemnation proceeding for absence of owner of an interest in the premises, it not appearing that he was relied on as a material witness, and the other owners being present. Portland & Seattle R. Co. v. Ladd [Wash.] 91 P. 573.

The right of a litigant to have a case passed because of the sickness or disability of counsel is not affected by the fact that such litigant is a corporation or has not on trial a certain number of cases, notwithstanding a rule limiting to six the number of cases to be placed on the trial call for one day where the same litigant is plaintiff or defendant. Chicago City R. Co. v. Gregory, 123 Ill. App. 259.

66. Where an attorney presents to municipal court an affidavit showing his actual engagement in supreme court, he is entitled to an adjournment as of legal right. Dorfman v. Hirschfield, 53 Misc. 538, 103 N. Y. S. 698. Continuance proper where one of defendant's attorneys was engaged in a murder trial, another attending his mother's funeral, and the remaining one was not familiar with the case. American Soda Fountain Co. v. Dean Drug Co. [Iowa] 111 N. W. 534.

67. That counsel was out of town, no ground, no reason for his absence being given. Jones v. Morrison Shirt Waist Co., 52 Misc. 561, 102 N. Y. S. 769. The action of a court in proceeding to trial in the absence of counsel will not be interfered with where no reasonable excuse is shown for the absence. McArthur v. Kansas City El. R. Co., 123 Mo. App. 503, 100 S. W. 62.

68. No abuse to refuse continuance for absence of defendant's leading counsel in attendance on other trials, other counsel having been procured. Rice v. Lockhart Mills, 75 S. C. 150, 55 S. E. 160.

69. Where postponement was granted on promise of defendant's counsel to proceed the next day, held not error to refuse further postponement the next day on ground that counsel could not leave another case. Riesgo v. Glengariffe Realty Co., 116 App. Div. 414, 101 N. Y. S. 832.

Co. v. Frazier*, 30 Ky. L. R. 186, 97 S. W. 776. No abuse to refuse continuance for absence of three witnesses where cause had long been pending, and testimony of two could have been obtained, affidavit not showing what particular facts the witnesses would testify to, or what particular steps had been taken to procure their testimony, and it being merely alleged on information and belief that witnesses had evaded service at request of opposite party. Leamon's Adm'x v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 443, 98 S. W. 1016.

72. Smith v. Chicago Junction R. Co., 127 Ill. App. 89. Not error to refuse continuance or allow reading of affidavit as to what he would testify where witness had testified on previous trial and movant knew he was absent from state, but relied on his promise to be present. Nicola Bros. Co. v. Hurst, 30 Ky. L. R. 851, 99 S. W. 917. Carrier's application properly denied for failure to show reasonable diligence in procuring attendance of employees as witnesses in suit for injury to live stock. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Huff [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 177. Diligence not shown where, though witness had written he would not be at place of trial until after time set, there was no allegation he had not returned, and no subpoena was issued until two days before trial. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 554.

by the witness at a previous trial.<sup>76</sup> or where it is in fact given at the trial.<sup>77</sup> An adjournment or stay is properly allowed upon the granting of a commission to take testimony,<sup>78</sup> but newly discovered evidence which is merely cumulative, or tends only to contradict or discredit a party or opposing witness, is no ground for a continuance,<sup>79</sup> and the court should deny an oral motion to postpone to enable a party to procure documents where no excuse is offered for not procuring them before trial.<sup>80</sup>

Admission of testimony to avoid continuance.<sup>81</sup>—A continuance is properly denied where the affidavit is admitted by the opposite party and read to the jury.<sup>82</sup> but a statute providing that a cause shall not be postponed if the adverse party admits that an absent witness would testify as stated in the affidavit should not be construed so as to deprive a party to the cause of his privilege of being present at the trial,<sup>83</sup> though there may be circumstances where an admission of the expected testimony of one or two or more defendants is sufficient to prevent a continuance.<sup>84</sup> Where a continuance is denied with the understanding that the affidavit therefor may be read as the deposition of the desired witness, an objection that statements therein contained are too indefinite is untenable.<sup>85</sup>

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co.*, 75 S. C. 311, 55 S. E. 457. No abuse of discretion to refuse continuance on ground of absent witness, opposing party having before trial offered to allow his deposition to be taken waiving formalities, and the facts being testified to by others. Creech v. Aberdeen [Wash.] 87 P. 44.

78. Held error to deny a stay on granting a commission to take testimony where defendants acted with reasonable promptness. Roth v. Mautner, 115 App. Div. 148, 100 N. Y. S. 707. Calling of case for trial and introduction and objection to a commission on ground of defective execution held not such commencement of trial as to deprive municipal court of Buffalo of power to order an adjournment to permit correction of the commission. Winquist v. Preston, 117 App. Div. 796, 102 N. Y. S. 1023.

85. Holcomb-Lobb Co. v. Kaufman, 29 Ky. L. R. 1006, 96 S. W. 813.

87. Gurr v. Carter [Ga. App.] 58 S. E. 488. In suit for injuries, amendment alleging death of plaintiff's wife since commencement of action held ground for continuance. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Groner [Tex.] 100 S. W. 137. That original petition alleged that death would probably result, immaterial. Id. That some evidence of the kind defendant sought by continuance to obtain had been introduced by defendant at trial held not to affect his right. Id. Where plaintiff, after resting, filed amendment alleging fraud in a proof of loss and agreement set up in defense, held error to refuse continuance on showing of surprise and lack of preparation to meet the new issue, defendants only witness on such issue being out of the state. Flint v. Atlas Mut. Ins. Co. [Iowa] 112 N. W. 1. No surprise shown by amendment of answer authorizing postponement to enable plaintiff to send for certain books. Berry v. Joiner [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 283. Not error to refuse continuance on ground of amendment of complaint after notice of trial it not appearing that defendant was surprised. Kennedy v. Agricultural Ins. Co. [S. D.] 110 N. W. 116. No abuse of discretion to refuse continuance for amendment of complaint in personal injury suit, defendant making no showing that he could not safely proceed. Lampe v. Jacobsen [Wash.] 90 P. 654.

anticipated,<sup>89</sup> or where a denial of the testimony claimed to have surprised would not have availed.<sup>90</sup> A short adjournment may be allowed to enable one to obtain written evidence where oral proof is objected to.<sup>91</sup> So, also, where a nonsuit is granted as against one of two defendants the other may have a continuance on the ground that he had prepared the case as one primarily against the other,<sup>92</sup> but unpreparedness due to a misapprehension as to what the ruling of the court would be is no ground for continuance, the ruling being correct.<sup>93</sup> One who fails to move for a continuance on account of the unexpected evidence of the adverse party is not entitled to a new trial on that ground after verdict.<sup>94</sup>

§ 3. Proceedings to procure continuance or postponement.<sup>95</sup>—The motion must be timely made.<sup>96</sup> In Georgia all grounds for a continuance must be insisted upon at once and after a decision upon one or more grounds no others afterwards urged will be considered.<sup>97</sup> A motion for leave to withdraw a juror is in effect a motion for a continuance.<sup>98</sup>

A motion for a continuance made in the midst of the trial and dictated into the record must be considered as being in writing, especially where treated by the court and parties as a motion in the case.<sup>99</sup> Facts, not mere conclusions, must be set out in the affidavit.<sup>1</sup> Where the absence of a witness is relied upon, his residence should be given,<sup>2</sup> and facts must be alleged showing diligence in attempting to procure his attendance.<sup>3</sup> It should also be stated that the application is not made for delay.<sup>4</sup> An affidavit based on the inability of a defendant to attend and testify on a day set for trial is insufficient where it does not state that defendant if present would

89. Where petition alleged injury to plaintiff's arm, and evidence showed dislocation of shoulder causing pain in arm, held the variance was not ground for continuance. City of Covington v. Whitney, 30 Ky. L. R. 659, 99 S. W. 337. In suit on fire policy, held no abuse of discretion to deny defendant a continuance on ground of surprise by testimony as to destruction of a carpet where under terms of policy such testimony could have been obtained by defendant before trial and contradictory evidence obtained. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Wintersmith, 30 Ky. L. R. 369, 98 S. W. 987. Unexpected production of deposition to prove material issue alleged in complaint where deposition had been filed, but thereafter withheld from files, until trial. El Paso S. W. R. Co. v. Barrett [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 1025.

90. Where, under evidence and pleadings, verdict should have been for plaintiff even had testimony claimed to have surprised defendant been denied. Buffalo Coal Creek Min. Co. v. Troendle, 30 Ky. L. R. 740, 99 S. W. 622.

91. Short adjournment should have been granted where plaintiff was surprised by defendant's objection to oral proof of existence and probate of a will so as to allow production of records. Heiss v. Pfeiffer, 117 App. Div. 880, 103 N. Y. S. 478.

92. Where, in an injury action against a railroad and city, a nonsuit was granted as against the railroad, held discretionary with court to grant the city a continuance on ground that it had prepared case as one primarily against the railroad. Crotty v. Danbury, 79 Conn. 379, 65 A. 147.

93. On plea in abatement. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Smith [Ark.] 100 S. W. 884.

94. Patton v. Sanborn, 133 Iowa, 650, 110 N. W. 1022.

95. See 7 C. L. 761.

96. After a cause has passed from the reserve to the ready section of the day calendar, it is too late to present grounds for postponement, except such as arise after the ready section is reached; hence it was error to postpone the case against defendant's objection after it had been placed on ready calendar and both parties had repeatedly answered "ready." Loehr v. Brooklyn Ferry Co., 115 App. Div. 666, 101 N. Y. S. 209.

97. Illness of counsel could not be urged after overruling of motion on ground of absence of witness. Civ. Code, 1895, § 5675. Aiken v. Carmichael, 127 Ga. 407, 56 S. E. 440.

98. Smith v. Chicago Junction R. Co., 127 Ill. App. 89.

99. Flint v. Atlas Mut. Ins. Co. [Iowa] 112 N. W. 1.

1. To justify a continuance on the ground of the illness of a party, facts, not merely conclusions, must be set out in the affidavit showing the necessity of his presence at the trial, or that his testimony is material. Mayo v. Frye Mfg. Co., 126 Ill. App. 577.

2. San Antonio Trac. Co. v. Davis [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 554.

3. No abuse of discretion to refuse continuance where motion stated that witnesses had been summoned during a former term, but did not show that they had been in attendance, though case had been postponed from time to time. Summit Lumber Co. v. McGoogan [Ark.] 102 S. W. 389.

4. Not error to refuse continuance on account of absent witness where movant failed to show that application was not made for delay, though showing in other respects was complete. Aiken v. Carmichael, 127 Ga. 407, 56 S. E. 440.

testify as to the facts relied upon in defense,<sup>5</sup> and where it is sought to continue a cause over term the affidavit must show the inability of such defendant to attend on any subsequent day of the same term.<sup>6</sup>

The scope of this topic is noted below.<sup>13</sup>

§ 1. Nature and formal requisites. A. Definition and kinds of contracts.<sup>14</sup>—A contract is an agreement between two or more persons, upon sufficient consideration, to do or not to do a particular thing.<sup>15</sup> Contracts are either express or implied. An express contract is one all the terms of which are settled by agreement.<sup>16</sup>

8. See Saving Questions for Review, 8 C. L. 1822.

9. See Appeal and Review, § 4B, 9 C. L. 115.

10. See Appeal and Review, § 9D, 9 C. L. 161.

11. See Appeal and Review, § 13F 1, 9 C. L. 206.

12. See Harmless and Prejudicial Error, 8 C. L. 1.

13. This topic treats only of the general principles applicable to all contracts, such as the making of the contract, consideration and the question of public policy. Realty of consent (see Fraud and Undue Influence, 7 C. L. 1812; Incompetency, 8 C. L. 169; Mistake and Accident, 8 C. L. 1020; Infants, 8 C. L. 267; Husband and Wife, 8 C. L. 122, etc.) and matters relating to contracts implied in law (see Implied Contracts, 8 C. L. 155) are treated in separate topics. For matters relating to the construction and operation of Public Contracts (see 8 C. L. 1473), Building and Construction Contracts (see 9 C. L. 424), Deeds of Conveyance (see 7 C. L. 1103), sales of personalty (see Sales, 8 C. L. 1751), sales of realty (see Vendors and purchasers, 8 C. L. 2216), etc., reference should be had to the topics dealing particularly with those subjects.

16. Pleading alleging agreement by defendant that if plaintiff would furnish ma-

A contract implied in fact arises where the intention to contract is inferred from the acts or conduct of either or both of the parties.<sup>17</sup> A quasi contract, or contract implied in law, exists independently of intention, and is founded on the doctrine of unjust enrichment.<sup>18</sup> Proof of an express contract necessarily excludes a contemporaneous implied one in relation to the same matter.<sup>19</sup>

A written contract is one all the terms of which have been reduced to writing.<sup>20</sup>

An executed contract is one in which all of the parties thereto have performed all the obligations assumed by them, and an executory contract one in which something remains to be done by one or more of the parties.<sup>21</sup>

Parties.<sup>22</sup>—The same person cannot be both obligor and obligee.<sup>23</sup> As a general rule one not a party to a contract cannot be included in the rights or liabilities which life engagement creates.<sup>24</sup> In most jurisdictions, however, one may enforce a terial, lay piping from water main past his house, etc., defendant would pay his proportional share of cost, held to declare on express contract. Ferris v. Edmonston, 124 Mo. App. 94, 100 S. W. 1119. Mutual meeting of minds upon matter of contract constitutes an express contract whether evidenced by formal offer and acceptance or otherwise. Instructions approved. Griffith v. Robertson, 73 Kan. 666, 85 P. 748. Contract by decedent to pay daughter for services may be shown by any competent testimony. Id.

17. Request to remove rubbish not required to be removed by terms of contract held to imply promise to pay reasonable cost of so doing. Hennessey v. Fleming Bros. [Colo.] 90 P. 77. Employee rendering services to joint stock company, with knowledge and consent of its representative, after termination of his contract of employment, held entitled to recover their reasonable value. Taber v. Breck, 192 Mass. 355, 78 N. E. 472. Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that even if family relationship existed decedent intended to pay plaintiff for her services and plaintiff expected compensation. McMorrow v. Dowell, 116 Mo. App. 289, 90 S. W. 728. Defendant corporation held liable under implied contract to pay attorney's value of services rendered in its behalf with knowledge of its officers and under circumstances justifying inference that they approved and encouraged what was being done. Trimble v. Texarkana, & Ft. S. R. Co., 199 Mo. 44, 97 S. W. 164. Where defendants received and retained goods with knowledge of price plaintiff expected to receive and without any express or implied agreement for different price held that they were bound to pay invoice price, which was regular selling price and reasonable. Estey Organ Co. v. Lehman [Wis.] 111 N. W. 1097.

18. See Implied Contracts, § C. L. 155, for full treatment of this subject.

19. See § 9B, post, for right to sue on common counts for services rendered or goods furnished under an express contract. Bassford v. West [Mo. App.] 101 S. W. 610. Express warranty as to quality of cans sold held to exclude implied warranty on same subject. Wasatch Orchard Co. v. Morgan Canning Co. [Utah] 89 P. 1009. One suing on express contract cannot recover on quantum meruit. See § 9F, post, variance.

20. Two letters held to constitute written contract though one was addressed to firm and other to one of its members. Bauer v. Jerolman, 124 Ill. App. 151. Contract entered into by means of letters containing propositions, terms of which were subsequently accepted, held written contract. Bauer v. Hindley, 222 Ill. 319, 78 N. E. 626. Papers or tickets given to customer by stock broker after purchases or sales had been made orally and which were not signed by either party held not written agreements within parol evidence rule as matter of law. Picard v. Beers [Mass.] 81 N. E. 246. Writing held mere bill of parcels, and not written contract of sale within parol evidence rule. North Packing & Provision Co. v. Lynch [Mass.] 81 N. E. 891.

21. Contract of sale held executory. Mebius & Drescher Co. v. Mills [Cal.] 88 P. 917. Agreement entered into at time of contract of sale whereby note against seller held by purchaser was to be surrendered as part of payment to be made at that time may be treated by the court as fully executed, though note was not as a matter of fact surrendered until deed was delivered. Warns v. Jennie Reeck, § Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 401.

22. See 7 C. L. 763.

23. Agreement by children to pay certain sum monthly for support of mother held not void as having only one party. North v. Daniel, 1 Ga. App. 15, 57 S. E. 898.

24. Stranger to contract and its consideration and obligations cannot enforce it. Webb's Academy & Home for Shipbuilders v. Hidden, 118 App. Div. 711, 103 N. Y. S. 659. Mere stranger cannot claim by action the benefit of a contract between other parties, but there must be either a new consideration or some prior right or claim against one of the contracting parties by which he has a legal interest in the performance of the agreement. Jarmulowsky v. Susskind, 53 Misc. 603, 103 N. Y. S. 763. Partnership contract provided that if defendant elected to terminate partnership within three months, he might return money contributed by his copartner to plaintiff who had loaned it to latter. Held not to give plaintiff right to sue defendant for such sum on defendant's election to terminate partnership. Id. Seller of threshing machine warranted it and agreed to send expert to set it up and operate it. Buyer desired to thresh for plaintiff and latter told seller's agent that he was unwilling to have him do so unless seller sent expert, which agent agreed to do and did do. Held that, threshing being unsatisfactory, plaintiff could not sue seller for breach of contract, agent not having contracted with him, but what he did being pursuant to contract with buyer. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Sanford, 30 Ky. L. R. 188, 97 S. W. 805. Assignment of lease without landlord's consent being void, held that there was no privity of contract between landlord and assignee, and neither was liable to other under terms of lease nor under any contract that lessee could lawfully have made with assignee under power to sublet. Morrow v. Camp [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 819. Defendant held not liable on contracts signed by third person in absence of showing that he was in any way connected with or authorized to act for it, or that it ratified his acts, or even that signature was his. Bender-Martin Co. v. Apollo Co., 101 N. Y. S. 75. Evidence held insufficient to support finding that one of the defendants was party to contract sued on. Martin v. Trainer, 125 Ill. App. 474; Dick v. Biddle Bros. [Md.] 66 A. 21.

contract made for his benefit even if he is not a party thereto.<sup>25</sup> His right of

25. Bethlehem Iron Co. v. Hoadley, 152 F. 735; Ballard v. American Hemp Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 1080, 100 S. W. 271. Is not necessary that any consideration should move to him from promisor. Dilcher v. Nellany, 52 Misc. 364, 102 N. Y. S. 264. Need not be privy to the consideration, nor need he be specifically named. Northern Cent. R. Co. v. United Rys. Elec. Co. [Md.] 66 A. 444. May sue in own name though contract was made without his knowledge and without any consideration moving to him. Smith v. Bowman [Utah] 88 P. 687. Federal courts follow state decisions on this question. Bethlehem Iron Co. v. Hoadley, 152 F. 735.

Third person held entitled to sue: Where, as part of consideration of transfer to it of business of certain syndicate, defendant corporation agreed to pay latter's debts including note given by it to plaintiff, held that plaintiff was entitled to sue corporation on such agreement. Civ. Code, § 1559. Northup v. Altadena Min. & Investment Syndicate [Cal. App.] 91 P. 422. Contract to pay taxes on certain land held for direct benefit of plaintiffs. Abbott v. Scotten, 127 Ill. App. 58. Bond to secure performance of building contract held for benefit of materialmen and laborers so that they could sue thereon in their own names. Ochs v. Carnahan Co. [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 163. Former opinion, Id., 76 N. E. 788. Street railway company was under legal obligation to city to keep in repair portions of bridges occupied by tracks and two feet on either side. Subsequently a railroad company became obligated to city to keep whole of said bridges in repair. Held that railroad company having made needed repairs was entitled to recover from street railway company that part of cost for which latter would have been liable had repairs been made by city. Northern Cent. R. Co. v. United Rys. & Elec. Co. [Md.] 66 A. 444. Insured assigned five-sixths interest in life insurance policy to bank in payment of certain notes, latter agreeing to pay full amount of all subsequent premiums. New policy was issued in which bank was designated as beneficiary for five-sixths of amount of policy and plaintiff as beneficiary of one-sixth. Held that bank's agreement to pay premiums was for plaintiff's benefit, so that she could recover for breach thereof. Scheele v. Lafayette Bk., 120 Mo. App. 611, 97 S. W. 621. Where land was conveyed to defendant's children in consideration of his promise to pay grantor's daughter certain sum, held that she could sue defendant therefor in her own name. Faust v. Faust [N. C.] 57 S. E. 22. Sealed agreement whereby one of two co-obligors in bond secured by mortgage executed by him alone agreed to release of other by obligee, in consideration of promise by other to pay half of any deficiency judgment that might be rendered on foreclosure of mortgage, held one made for benefit of obligee, and that he had a legal or equitable interest in its enforcement, and hence could sue thereon in name of promisor. Dilcher v. Nellany, 52 Misc. 364, 102 N. Y. S. 264. Where receiver turned over to company owning it plant and assets in his hands upon condition that all contracts and liabilities incurred by or incumbent upon him as receiver shall be assumed by it, held that suit against him as receiver for damages for personal injuries was included therein, and obligation thus assumed for benefit of others was enforceable by third person coming within its provisions. Kauffman Brewing Co. v. Betz, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 64. Direct promise to creditor is not necessary to create relationship of creditor and principal debtor, but it is sufficient that, if based on valuable and executed consideration, such promise is made to surety for direct benefit of creditor, and if, with knowledge thereof, creditor thereafter deals with promisor in relation to debt. Hoffman v. Habighorst [Or.] 89 P. 552. Contract between county court and railroad company whereby former agreed to provide pesthouse for persons suffering with smallpox and latter to transport such persons to pesthouse and to furnish and properly equip car for that purpose held made for benefit of persons suffering from that disease, so, that one of such persons could maintain suit in his own name against carrier either in assumpsit upon such contract or in tort for damages resulting from breach of its duty to him under such contract, or arising out of relation of carrier and passenger after he has been accepted as a passenger. Jenkins v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 61 W. Va. 597, 57 S. E. 48. Promise made by purchaser of property to seller to pay as part of consideration therefor, specified debt due from seller to third person is promise made for sole benefit of latter and one upon which he may maintain an action, he being privy in fact to promise and consideration. Fish v. First Nat. Bk. [C. C. A.] 150 F. 524. Promise of defendant to pay debt due third person held also enforceable by latter on theory that as between defendant and original debtor former became principal and latter surety. Id. Creditor suing third person who has agreed with original debtor to assume debt is subject to all equities growing out of contract. Id. Fact that one of owners of land, not a party to contract, was infant, and hence incapable of contracting, held not to preclude him from sharing benefit of agreement between certain other owners that one of them should purchase land at judicial sale for benefit of all owners. Griffin v. Schlenk [Ky.] 102 S. W. 837.

action is, however, entirely subordinate to the contract as made, and he cannot acquire a better standing to enforce the agreement than that occupied by the parties themselves.<sup>26</sup>

A third person may be liable in tort for inducing the breach of a contract to which he is not a party.<sup>27</sup>

Execution.<sup>28</sup>—Whether a contract was signed by the person by whom it purports to have been signed is a question of fact.<sup>29</sup> A signature by a party's duly authorized agent is valid.<sup>30</sup> One may ratify a forged signature.<sup>31</sup> Failure of one party to notify the other that he has signed is immaterial where he in fact does sign and both parties act on the assumption that the contract has been executed.<sup>32</sup>

entitle third person to recover contract must have been made for his benefit, and he cannot do so if it appears from terms used that it was solely for benefit of parties thereto. Searles v. Flora, 225 Ill. 167, 80 N. E. 98. quest which according to its terms could not become contract until accepted by defendant at its home office. Huber Mfg. Co. v. Wagner, 167 Ind. 98, 78 N. E. 329. Evidence in action on contract in which acceptance of offer and performance was denied held insufficient to support burden of proof resting on plaintiff. Lennon v. Charig, 102 N. Y. S. 465.

39. Offer deemed to continue in force until it is answered unless previously withdrawn. McCleskey v. Howell Cotton Co., 147 Ala. 573, 42 So. 67. Withdrawal before acceptance held matter of defense, so that it was not necessary for complainant to show that it was pending at time of acceptance. Id.

40. Acceptance must conform exactly to offer, and if it contains new conditions there is no contract. Scott v. Fowler [Ill.] 81 N. E. 34. Words "ship promptly" in telegram of acceptance held not to add new term to offer. McCleskey v. Howell Cotton Co., 147 Ala. 573, 42 So. 67. Where plaintiff offered to sell ties to be delivered "this year and the next," and defendant in reply agreed to take all ties delivered at certain place within next twelve months, to which plaintiff assented by his conduct, held that there was completed contract. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Coyle, 30 Ky. L. R. 567, 99 S. W. 237, 30 Ky. L. R. 201, 97 S. W. 772. Letter of acceptance held not departure from terms of offer. *Metropolitan Coal Co. v. Law, 602, 65 A. 450. Letter accepting offer of employment held not to reserve question of ownership of improvements made by employee for future consideration. Portland Iron Works v. Willett [Or.] 89 P. 421. Offer to accept in terms varying from those proposed amounts to a rejection of the offer and the substitution of a counter proposition which cannot become a contract until assented to by first proposer. Plaintiff's answer to defendant's letter held not unconditional acceptance, and hence not to constitute contract of sale. Sharp v. West, 150 F. 458. Resolution of town board directing secretary to notify bidder that his bid was accepted on condition that issue of bonds was authorized held not to make binding contract, and hence bidder was entitled to withdraw bid before steps were taken to notify him without sacrificing his deposit, particularly where he submitted two bids and notice did not state which was accepted. Northeastern Const. Co. v. North Hempstead, 105 N. Y. S. 581. Acceptance not in terms of offer held not to make binding contract. Cherokee Tanning Extract Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 143 N. C. 376, 55 S. E. 777. Letters held not to constitute contract. Smith v. Perry, 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 421. Letters and telegrams held not to show contract of sale. Scaife & Sons Co. v. Standard Ice Co. [Wash.] 89 P. 882.

41. Offer when accepted becomes binding contract. Bailey v. Leishman [Utah] 89 P. 78. Offer need not be supported by consideration in order to make binding contract when it is accepted, question of consideration being important only in determining maker's right to revoke offer. Ellis's Adm'r v. Durkee, 79 Vt. 341, 65 A. 94. Proposal to purchase stock held to have become valid and enforceable contract by its acceptance. Hollis v. Libby, 101 Me. 302, 64 A. 621. Acceptance held sufficiently proven. Sawyer v. Walker, 204 Mo. 133, 102 S. W. 544. Contract to make loan held complete and binding. Holt v. United Security Life Ins. & Trust Co. [N. J. Law] 67 A. 118. Where defendant signed written acceptance of written proposal, held that he was bound thereby, and that if acceptance, prepared by plaintiff's agent, omitted any portion of agreement between parties he should have refused to sign until it was inserted. Happel v. Rosenthal, 103 N. Y. S. 715. Correspondence held to show contract for services. Portland Iron Works v. Willett [Or.] 89 P. 421. Contract held completed by telegrams of acceptance and confirmation, so that subsequent letter could not be considered in determining terms of contract, there being nothing in telegram of confirmation indicating that letter explaining terms of contract would follow. Greenwood Grocery Co. v. Canadian County Mill El. Co. [S. C.] 57 S. E. 867. Plaintiff's agent held, on averments of complaint, defendants' agent to communicate their offer and to receive plaintiff's acceptance thereof, without defendants actually receiving notice of it. McCleskey v. Howell Cotton Co., 147 Ala. 573, 42 So. 67. Letter containing proposition being merely a reduction to writing of previous oral agreement under which plaintiff had been acting, held that it was not necessary that he should make written acceptance of said proposition. Sawyer v. Walker, 204 Mo. 133, 102 S. W. 544. If proposal includes any qualifying conditions, its acceptance is an assent to such conditions and gives proposer right to understand that acceptance was in all things according to terms of offer. Bailey Co. v. West Lumber Co., 1 Ga. App. 398, 58 S. E. 120. When one attempts to accept in writing a written offer, there is no mutual agreement that certain specific written words shall stand as statement of trade ultimately struck between them, but only question is did person to whom offer was made accept it. Metropolitan Coal Co. v. Boutell Transportation & Towing Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 645. There being nothing inconsistent in accepting written offer both orally and in writing, held that, in such case, where writing because of unguarded expression therein was not, though intended to be, an acceptance, oral acceptance not open to that objection was good. Id.

42. Offer must be distinct as such and not merely an invitation to enter into negotiations upon a certain basis. Cherokee Tanning Extract Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 143 N. C. 376, 55 S. E. 777.

43. Offer held to contemplate immediate sale on acceptance, though possession was not to be delivered until later, and not to be so conditional that its acceptance would not make valid contract from loss of which damages would flow. Purdum Naval Stores

Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 153 F. 327. Offer must specify quantity to be furnished, as a mere acceptance of an indefinite offer will not create binding contract. Cherokee Tanning Extract Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 143 N. C. 376, 55 S. E. 777. Must be one which is intended of itself to create legal relations on acceptance, and not merely offer to open negotiations which will ultimately result in contract. Id. Letter held mere inquiry. Id.

44. Memorandum of sale held to constitute offer merely, which could be orally accepted. Bailey v. Leishman [Utah] 89 P. 78.

45. Offer requiring acceptance "at once" means within reasonable time under circumstances, what is reasonable time being question of fact. Lucas v. Western Union Tel. Co., 131 Iowa, 669, 109 N. W. 191. Letter held continuing offer to purchase stock good for six months, unless previously withdrawn, and for reasonable time thereafter. Ellis's Adm'r v. Durkee, 79 Vt. 241, 65 A. 94. What was reasonable time held question of fact. Id.

46. In order that proposition may be binding on party making it, opposite party must accept it before time fixed for performance of contract. Traylor, Spencer & Co. v. Brimbery [Ga. App.] 58 S. E. 371. Offer to pay fifty per cent of claims against third person in full settlement thereof held not binding on party making it as to creditor who did not accept offer until after date therein fixed for payment, there not being an acceptance within reasonable time. Id.

47. In action to recover commissions alleged to be due plaintiff as selling agent of defendant's plantation, held that sending of power of attorney by defendant to plaintiff was acceptance of plaintiff's offer to take agency and not mere offer requiring acceptance by plaintiff. Luckett Land & Emigration Co. v. Brown, 118 La. 943, 43 So. 628. Even if acceptance was necessary, held that it was accepted by letter and by action nature of contract showed it was intention without any consideration, held invalid of defendant to allow. Id. Notice of withdrawal of land from market held recognition of pre-existing agency of plaintiff. Id. Understanding on part of both parties that binding contract has been made and steps taken by them thereunder with view to performance, are to be considered material evidence of great weight on question whether is in fact a completed contract. Stannard v. Robert H. Reid Co., 118 App. Div. 304, 103 N. Y. S. 521. Defendant signed and delivered printed application for surety bonds to plaintiff, and plaintiff executed and delivered bonds to defendant, who accepted them and received benefits arising therefrom. Held that execution of bonds constituted acceptance of application by plaintiff, and application thereby became completed contract, though it recited that defendant signed in consideration of mutual covenants of plaintiff, and plaintiff did not sign it. Aetna Indemnity Co. v. Ryan, 53 Misc. 614, 103 N. Y. S. 756. Acts of plaintiff in compliance with terms of offer held to show acceptance thereof in accordance with terms of offer, there being no evidence showing contrary purpose or understanding. Ott v. Boring [Wis.] 110 N. W. 824. Receipt and retention of written contracts held not to alone imply assent to terms thereof, but actual contract could be shown. Hallowell v. McLaughlin Bros. [Iowa] 111 N. W. 428. Both parties are bound by a written contract executed and delivered by one of them only, but accepted, retained, and acted upon by the other. Reed v. Coughran [S. D.] 111 N. W. 559. Party accepting papers as contract held bound by their terms and conditions as completely as though he had in form signed them. Bauer v. Jerolman, 124 Ill. App. 151. Extension agreement signed by maker of note and accepted and acted upon by holder held valid though not signed by latter. Abraham Lincoln B. & H. Ass'n v. Zuelk, 124 Ill. App. 109.

48. Telegram to defendant's agent delivered to telegraph company before plaintiff was notified of withdrawal of offer, held sufficient manifestation of acceptance. McCleskey v. Howell Cotton Co., 147 Ala. 573, 42 So. 67.

49. Acceptance by telegraph. Lucas v. Western Union Tel. Co., 131 Iowa, 669, 109 N. W. 191.

50. May show by parol that it was not to take effect until certain conditions precedent had been fulfilled. Barr Cash & Package Carrier Co. v. Brooks-Ozan Mercantile Co. [Ark.] 101 S. W. 408. Evidence held to show that only promise made by owner to laborers employed by contractor was that he would see them paid if contractor, who was temporarily absent, did not return, and that contractor did return, so that he was not liable on said promise. Mulliken v. Harrison [Fla.] 44 So. 426. Instruction based on theory of liability under contract with laborers held error. Id. Where order provided that sale by agent should be subject to acceptance by principal, held that it was not binding on latter where he rejected it as soon as received by him. Suffolk Peanut Co. v. Lunden, 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 603. Letter containing all terms of proposed employment, and acceptance of proposal therein by plaintiff by going to work, held to constitute contract, fact that letter referred to authority of writer to act for company being immaterial.

contract to writing and its signature by them a condition precedent to its completion, it will not be a binding contract until reduced to writing and signed,<sup>51</sup> but where they orally assent to all its terms a mere reference to a future contract in writing will not negative the existence of a present completed one.<sup>52</sup>

An option<sup>53</sup> is a mere continuing offer not binding until accepted<sup>54</sup> within the time, if any, therein specified,<sup>55</sup> and which may be withdrawn at any time before acceptance, unless it is based on a valuable consideration.<sup>56</sup> An election to exercise it converts it into an executory contract.<sup>57</sup>

terial. Kennedy v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, 124 Ill. App. 55. Contract held one between plaintiff and one of the defendants only, which did not contemplate that it should not become complete until signed by certain other persons. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co. v. Ellsworth, 129 Wis. 349, 109 N. W. 125.

51. Jenkins & Reynolds Co. v. Alpena Portland Cement Co. [C. C. A.] 147 F. 641; McCrimmon v. Brundage [Fla.] 43 So. 431. Held that correspondence did not of itself constitute contract, but that it was intention that neither party should be bound until formal written contract was executed and money paid. Scott v. Fowler [Ill.] 81 N. E. 34.

52. Though parties to verbal agreement contemplate that it is to be reduced to writing and signed, yet, if understanding is that this is to be done simply as a memorial of the agreement, it is binding though it is never put in writing. Jenkins & Reynolds Co. v. Alpena Portland Cement Co. [C. C. A.] 147 F. 641. Intention to reduce agreement to writing held not to prevent it from being in force from date when it was made. Hudson v. Rodgers, 121 Mo. App. 168, 98 S. W. 778. Evidence held to sustain finding that parties understood that letters constituted valid, binding contract, and so intended. Peirce v. Cornell, 117 App. Div. 66, 102 N. Y. S. 102.

Contract to transfer interest in patent to corporation to be formed held not an agreement for an option, but executed agreement on part of one party and executory one on part of other. Howe v. Howe & Owen Ball Bearing Co. [C. C. A.] 154 F. 820.

55. Must be exercised within time limit or right will be lost. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate v. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. [La.] 44 So. 481. Is continuing offer to sell, and, when limited to certain time, must be accepted within such time by compliance with its terms upon part of optionee. Fulton v. Messenger, 61 W. Va. 477, 56 S. E. 830.

56. Where made for a consideration, it cannot be withdrawn during time fixed in contract within which party has right to exercise option. Baker v. Davis, 127 Ga.

649, 57 S. E. 62; Pittsburgh Vitrified Pav. & Bldg. Brick Co. v. Bailey [Kan.] 90 P. 803.

57. Option of purchase holds good until withdrawn and becomes binding on acceptance. Mebius & Drescher Co. v. Mills [Cal.] 88 P. 917. When optionee fully complies with terms of option within time limited, it becomes enforceable executory contract. Fulton v. Messenger, 61 W. Va. 477, 56 S. E. 830. What is necessary to be done in order to convert option into contract depends upon terms of option. Trogden v. Williams [N. C.] 56 S. E. 865. Payment or tender of half purchase price and securing balance within time stipulated held necessary to convert option into contract. Id. Must accept unconditionally the offer as made and cannot impose new conditions. Fulton v. Messenger, 61 W. Va. 477, 56 S. E. 830. Compliance with terms of option may be waived by optionor, and, where optionee within time limited for acceptance gives notice that he will accept it and comply with its terms, such compliance is waived if, in written acceptance of such notice, it is stipulated that optionor agrees to convey property and gives additional time in which to make survey and abstract of title. Id. Waiver of tender within time prescribed by option held not to give optionor right to demand that optionee purchase land, but it remained unaccepted offer to sell whenever latter paid purchase price. Trogden v. Williams [N. C.] 56 S. E. 865.

66. Provision in receipt limiting liability

Except where the rule has been changed by statute,<sup>67</sup> a seal imports a consideration.<sup>68</sup> Promissory notes,<sup>69</sup> and, in some states, certain other written contracts,<sup>70</sup> import a consideration whether under seal or not.

What constitutes in general.<sup>71</sup>—Any benefit accruing to one party or any loss, trouble, or disadvantage undergone by, or any charge imposed upon, the other, is a sufficient consideration to support a contract.<sup>72</sup> Thus, the extension of time for of express company to certain sum held unenforceable because not based on any consideration. Southern Express Co. v. Hill [Ark.] 98 S. W. 371. Release of carrier from liability for damages already accrued held unenforceable. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Pearce [Ark.] 101 S. W. 760. Agreement to pay claim which court had previously determined decedent was not legally bound to pay held unenforceable without new consideration. Hargarten v. Berz, 126 Ill. App. 368. Mere naked parol promise to extend time of payment under contract for sale of land, without any consideration, held invalid. Bartlett v. Smith, 146 Mich. 188, 109 N. W. 260. Where original agreement provided that plaintiff's salary should begin at certain date, subsequent agreement providing for payment only when it could be made from operating expenses, being an attempted alteration without consideration, held not to deprive plaintiff of right to recover according to original terms. Grath v. Mound City Roofing Tile Co., 121 Mo. App. 245, 98 S. W. 812. Subsequent arrangement deviating from original in no material particular, held not to require new consideration. Id. Express promise to pay sum of money which promisor at time is under no legal, equitable, or moral obligation to pay is a mere nudum pactum. McKone v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 110 N. W. 472. Promise by insurance company's agent to pay it amounts embezzled by subagent, for whose acts agent was not responsible though he believed he was, held without consideration. Id.

67. Comp. Laws, § 10, 185, providing that seal shall only be presumptive evidence of sufficient consideration, which may be rebutted, etc., held to place simple executory and sealed executory contracts on same footing so far as consideration is concerned. Danby Tp. v. Beebe, 147 Mich. 312, 110 N. W. 1066.

68. Obligation under seal for payment of money imports valid consideration until contrary appears from the evidence. Rogers v. Rogers [Del.] 66 A. 374. Person of sound mind and lawful age may give away his property or bind himself by an instrument under seal to pay money to another without any valuable consideration whatever. Id.

W. 563. Any damage, suspension, or forbearance of a right will be sufficient to sustain a promise. Id. May consist of benefit moving to promisor or detriment agreed to be suffered by promise. Kinkad v. Peet [Iowa] 111 N. W. 48. May consist of benefit to third person or detriment to promisee. Hayes v. Shirk, 167 Ind. 569, 78 N. E. 653. Agreement by executor to pay assessment for street improvements on lands held by him in official capacity held binding on him personally, though void as to estate, where third person purchased improvement bonds on faith of such promise. Id. Detriment to promisee is as valid a consideration as a benefit to the promisor. Release by plaintiff of his claim against third person held sufficient consideration for promise by defendant to pay same. Milby v. Mowry, 125 Ill. App. 417. In order to constitute release of judgment record valuable consideration for conveyance by judgment debtor held that it was necessary to show that latter owned land to which lien of judgment had attached. Brown Hardware Co. v. Catrett [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 559.

Contracts held to be supported by a sufficient consideration: Restrictive covenant, by sale of business. Harris v. Theus [Ala.] 43 So. 131. Though option given lessee under mining lease to purchase property was originally nudum pactum because not signed by lessee, held that it became enforceable contract of sale on payment of part of purchase price. Williams v. Eldora-Enterprise Gold Min. Co., 35 Colo. 127, 83 P. 780. Expressed consideration held to furnish basis both for present right to cut timber and for option or privilege of extension which contract provided might be had on making certain payment, so that latter was not nudum pactum. Baker v. Davis, 127 Ga. 649, 57 S. E. 62. Is sufficient consideration to support written contract or agreement to pay debt of another, if acting on faith thereof, party with whom it was made parted with his property. Small Co. v. Claxton, 1 Ga. App. 83, 57 S. E. 977. Deed from father to son, by services rendered and to be rendered by son and his wife, and care and trouble which grantor had caused them. Finch v. Green, 225 Ill. 304, 80 N. E. 318. Loaning of money by plaintiff to third person held to support trust deed given by defendant to secure it. Thackaberry v. Johnson [Ill.] 81 N. E. 828. Subsisting liability of surety held sufficient consideration for execution of mortgages by principal to indemnify surety from loss. Griffis v. First Nat. Bk. [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 230. Agreement not to re-engage in business on sale of business. Jayne & Keve Bros. Lumber Co. v. Turner 132 Iowa, 7, 109 N. W. 307. Agreement by mortgagee under first mortgage who also held second mortgage as security for debt of second mortgagee to relieve latter or adjust such indebtedness, and release by wife of her dower interest in realty and her attachment of personalty, and her joinder in bill of sale of latter, held to support promise by second mortgagee to pay wife of mortgagor certain sum. Kin-kead v. Peet [Iowa] 111 N. W. 48. Second contract superseding original, where it contained provisions as to payment more favorable to plaintiff than those of original contract, and plaintiff thereby waived certain rights secured to him by original contract. Proctor Coal Co. v. Strunk, 29 Ky. L. R. 995, 96 S. W. 603. Since board of examiners had no authority to adopt books for use in schools until publisher had filed bond pursuant to St. 1903, § 4423, conditioned that it would sell books at price as low as that fixed for any other locality or state, held that contention that there was no consideration for execution of such bond was untenable. Graziani v. Burton, 30 Ky. L. R. 180, 97 S. W. 800. Promise of devisee who had received assets from estate of his testator to pay debt of estate, he being liable for debts to extent of assets received. Withers' Adm'r v. Withers' Heirs, 30 Ky. L. R. 1099, 100 S. W. 253. Agreement to indemnify plaintiff against loss, on his paying for stock in corporation to be formed in future by defendants, so that defendants could use money to prevent expiration of options held by them on certain land which was to be conveyed to such corporation, plaintiff being under no legal obligation to pay for stock until corporation was in fact organized. Harvey v. Bonta, 30 Ky. L. R. 1226, 100 S. W. 846. Modified contract, where it required plaintiffs to have logs ready for delivery at earlier date than that specified in original, and plaintiffs incurred extra expense and trouble in so doing. Asher v. Garrard [Ky.] 101 S. W. 889. Lease to city for year held to support option to city to renew it from year to year or to purchase premises at fixed price. Overall v. Madisonville [Ky.] 102 S. W. 278. Assumption of obligation by plaintiff to third person that it would not have otherwise assumed held to support undertaking to plaintiff by defendant. Ford v. Ingels Coal Co. [Ky.] 102 S. W. 332. Purchase of and pay for stock according to terms of contract held to support agreement by defendant to protect plaintiff and his partner from liability as indorsers or otherwise upon paper which it was agreed should be turned over by them in full payment of such stock. Patrick v. Barker [Neb.] 112 N. W. 358. Agreement to sell complainant's beer exclusively which was part of transaction whereby defendant obtained large loan from complainant in which latter incurred both trouble and risk. Christian Feigenspan v. Nizolek [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 703. Agreement by wife restricting her right to build on lot owned by her, where it tended to enhance purchase price of, and hence value of her dower interest in, an adjoining lot sold by her and her husband. Wahl v. Stoy [N. J. Eq.] 66 A. 176. Agreement to loan money, to be advanced to plaintiff when certain building was completed, and to be secured by mortgages and insurance policy on life of borrower and another, where, in performance of his part of agreement, borrower incurred expense for medical examiner's fees incurred in perfecting application for insurance, made contracts with materialmen on faith of agreement, and executed bond and mortgage. Holt v. United Security Life Ins. & Trust Co. [N. J. Eq.] 67 A. 118. Formal marriage articles whereby father of prospective bridegroom agreed to make no distinction between his children in distribution of his estate held supported by sufficient consideration to enable son, after his marriage and his father's death, to enforce same by suit for specific performance. Phalen v. United States Trust Co., 186 N. Y. 178, 78 N. E. 943, revg. 100 App. Div. 264, 91 N. Y. S. 537. Forbearance of brokers to assert claim for commissions against vendor of realty, whereby vendee secured it at reduced price, held to support promise by vendee to pay them certain sum, regardless of whether they had valid claim against vendor. Cole v. Mendenhall, 117 App. Div. 786, 102 N. Y. S. 1030. Contract for sale of land, where vendor paid certain sum on making and delivery of contract and subsequently paid additional sum to secure extension of time of performance. Wadick v. Mace, 118 App. Div. 777, 103 N. Y. S. 889. Agreement made at time of sale of certain lot, and as an inducement thereto, and in part consideration therefor, that if vendee resold same vendor was to have profits realised on such resale. Bourne v. Sherrill, 143 N. C. 381, 55 S. E. 799. Promise by defendant to pay certain sum to child of grantor, by conveyance of land to defendant's children. Faust v. Faust [N. C.] 57 S. E. 22. Promise by owner to pay subcontractor's claim, by agreement of subcontractor not to file lien. Harness v. McKee-Brown Lumber Co., 17 Okl. 624, 89 P. 1020. Grantor and grantee owned undivided interests in land, and former conveyed his interest to latter for an expressed consideration, and grantee executed contemporaneous contract to reconvey. Purpose of transaction was to enable grantee to litigate title. Held that agreement to reconvey was supported by sufficient consideration. McAllen v. Raphael [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 760. Contract to divide profits resulting from purchase and sale of coal lands. Williams v. Kendrick, 105 Va. 791, 54 S. E. 865. Postnuptial settlement by husband, and covenant on part of wife's grantee to support her, by release of her inchoate right of dower. Beverlin v. Casto [W. Va.] 57 S. E. 411. Purchase by an individual of a stockholder's interest in a corporation affords sufficient consideration for contemporaneous agreement by seller not to engage in business carried on by such corporation. Kradwell v. Thiesen [Wis.] 111 N. W. 233. Agreement not to engage in similar business held part of equivalent for consideration for sale of business, plant, and good will. My Laundry Co. v. Schmeling, 127 Wis. 597, 109 N. W. 540. Release of defendant from liability on note, by services previously rendered. Rockefeller v. Wedge [C. C. A.] 149 F. 130. Held that there was implied agreement on part of creditor of corporation not to sue it or a new corporation to which it turned over most of its assets, which was sufficient consideration to support notes of new corporation for amount of his claim. Beebe v. Wells [C. C. A.] 153 F. 123. Modified contract whereby government paid over money it might otherwise have retained until completion of vessel in consideration of execution of release of claims for damages for delay or other breach, though but for delay vessel would have been completed. Cramp v. U. S., 41 Ct. Cl. 164.

Contracts held to be without consideration: Promise to pay broker's commission for negotiating exchange of property, where they payment of a debt,<sup>73</sup> and the discontinuance of a suit,<sup>74</sup> have been held sufficient. In equity the termination of family controversies affords a sufficient consideration to support a promise made for that purpose.<sup>75</sup>

Mutual promises<sup>76</sup> operate as a consideration each for the other, provided both parties are bound thereby,<sup>77</sup> but mutual promises not for a common object or pur-performed no services in effecting such exchange. Shanks v. Michael [Cal. App.] 88 P. 596. Agreement to pay lessee certain sum for surrendering his rights under void lease. Conqueror Gold Min. & Mill. Co. v. Ashton [Colo.] 90 P. 1124. Certain work held to have been done under license to use tunnel in mine, and not under lease to which one of licensees was not party, and hence that it did not accrue to benefit of owner by virtue of lease, and was no consideration for agreement to pay lessees for work. Id. Use of drift cut by licensees held no consideration for agreement to pay lessees for work done if they would abandon rights under void lease in which one of licensees had no interest. Id. Agreement of mortgagor to relinquish his right of redemption if mortgaggee would release certain property covered by chattel mortgage, where mortgagor was entitled to credits sufficient to discharge chattel mortgage and part of that on realty. Ferguson v. Boyd [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 549. Note executed by widow in satisfaction of note executed by her deceased husband, where she received no property subject to execution from his estate. Gilbert v. Brown, 29 Ky. L. R. 1248, 97 S. W. 40. Note given for legal services to be rendered, where litigation was useless as well as expensive, and client would have obtained her rights at proper time without it. Buckler v. Robinson, 29 Ky. L. R. 1174, 96 S. W. 1110. Bond whereby residents near stream agreed to pay certain sum into bridge fund if construction of bridge was ordered. Danby Tp. v. Beebe, 147 Mich. 312, 110 N. W. 1066. Promise to pay debt of another, if not appearing that creditor discharged original debtor and accepted defendant in lieu thereof. Davis v. Dunn, 121 Mo. App. 490, 97 S. W. 226. Agreement by stockholders to pay deficiency, if creditor would first exhaust his remedy against corporation. In re Lehnhoff's Estate [Neb.] 112 N. W. 563, 109 N. W. 164. Condition in deed by executors and trustees limiting use of premises, where estate which they represented owned no adjacent property, but they themselves owned adjacent property as individuals and condition was inserted for their individual benefit. Richter v. Distelhurst, 116 App. Div. 269, 101 N. Y. S. 634. Where plaintiff contracted to render services to corporation for specified time, contract made simultaneously by him with officer of such corporation whereby latter agreed to give him certain stock if he complied with contract with corporation. Petze v. Leary, 117 App. Div. 829, 102 N. Y. S. 960. Pass given to policeman held not based on valuable consideration because such passes were given to encourage and induce policemen to ride on cars on theory that their presence tended to preserve order and to protect interests of road, expected benefits being too remote. Marshall v. Nashville R. & Light Co. [Tenn.] 101 S. W. 419. Agreement by firm creditor with one partner, who on dissolution of firm agreed to pay firm debts, to extend time of payment. Barlow v. Frederick Stearns & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 43, 98 S. W. 455. Mere incidental benefit to plaintiff holding position as superintendent at will of insurance company resulting from payment of company's debts, or discharge of its obligations to third persons, held not consideration for his promise to pay amounts embezzled by subagent for which he was not responsible. McKone v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 110 N. W. 472. Sureties on postmaster's bond were called upon to pay sum in excess of their liability, and inspector, without authority, granted them extension on condition that they execute note to government for full amount claimed, which they did. Held that note, having been obtained upon unwarranted assumption of authority and upon wrongful demand, was without consideration, and void. United States v. Kauhoe [C. C. A.] 147 F. 185.

73. Contract held not to provide for extension of time of payment of debt of corporation. In re Lehnhoff's Estate [Neb.] 109 N. W. 164, 112 N. W. 563. Extension of time in which to pay tax certificates at reduced rate of interest held sufficient consideration for note. Armijo v. Henry [N. M.] 89 P. 305. Agreement by creditor, at request of debtor's wife, to extend time for payment of debt, held to support mortgage by wife to secure its payment, though not put in form of enforceable contract for definite term, where it was in fact followed by long forbearance. Muir v. Greene, 115 App. Div. 173, 100 N. Y. S. 722.

74. Dismissal of suit for damages, brought by injured employe of railroad company, held to support contract for his future employment so long as his services were satisfactory. Lake Shore & Western R. Co. v. Tierney, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 521. Agreement by one having apparent title to land to abandon his claim thereto and to permit judgment to be taken against him by default, in suit against him in which it was sought to recover said land, held to support contract for sale of judgment to him even though he had no actual title. Moody & Co. v. Rowland [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 911.

75. Belt v. Lazenby, 126 Ga. 767, 56 S. E. 81.

76. See 7 C. L. 774.

77. San Antonio Light & Pub. Co. v. Moore [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 867. Mutual agreement by children for support of aged mother. Code 1895, § 3661. Worth v. Daniel, 1 Ga. App. 15, 57 S. E. 898. Mutual agreements of parties to form new corporation, and subsequent agreement to use charter of old corporation and investment of moneys of new stockholders in enterprise, held to support agreement by defendant that stock in old corporation which he controlled should be issued to new stockholders.

pose and not mutually advantageous or detrimental are without consideration and unenforceable.<sup>78</sup>

Forbearance to sue<sup>79</sup> when one has a legal right to do so will support a contract.<sup>80</sup>

The compromise of a doubtful right<sup>81</sup> made in good faith is a sufficient consideration to support a promise, though the claim could not, in fact, have been supported in whole or in part;<sup>82</sup> but this rule has been held not to apply where the claim has no foundation whatever in fact.<sup>83</sup>

Love and affection.<sup>84</sup>—An equitable consideration founded on mere love or affection or gratuity will not ordinarily support an action to enforce an executory contract,<sup>85</sup> but an equitable obligation which would also be a legal one except for Hladovec v. Paul, 222 Ill. 254, 78 N. E. 619. Mutual agreement of parties held sufficient to support agreement for extension of time in which to perform contract for sale of realty. Kissack v. Bourke, 224 Ill. 352, 79 N. E. 619. Agreement by one party to annul contract is sufficient consideration for agreement by other party to annul it. Proctor Coal Co. v. Strunk, 29 Ky. L. R. 995, 96 S. W. 603. Implied promise arising, on acceptance of offer to sell seed, to accept and pay for same, held to support promise to sell. Bailey v. Leishman [Utah] 89 P. 78. Consideration for defendant's agreement to take certain stock held decedent's agreement to turn it over on terms named. Ellis's Adm'r Durkee, 79 Vt. 341, 65 A. 94. Claimant's agreement to remain on farm and render services, which she was under no obligation to do, held to support agreement to pay her certain sum for services. Pond v. Pond's Estate, 79 Vt. 352, 65 A. 97.

78. Agreement by stockholders to pay deficiency if creditor would first exhaust remedy against corporation held not sustainable as expressing mutual promises by subscribers to attain common object, object being to make provision for discharge of supposed legal obligations against them severally, which in fact did not exist. In re Lehnhoff's Estate [Neb.] 112 N. W. 563, 109 N. W. 164.

79. See 7 C. L. 775.

80. Forbearance of plaintiff to sue original debtor in response to request of third person held sufficient to support promise by latter to pay debt. Niles-Bement-Pond Co. v. Ury, 53 Misc. 305, 103 N. Y. S. 226. Abandonment by mortgagee of right to sue city for certain interest, or of her right to sue on bond therefor, and signing and delivery of satisfaction of mortgage and delivery of bond thereby, held to support check, given by mortgagor for said interest, though title to premises had previously vested in city under condemnation proceedings, and mortgagor was not indebted to mortgagee. Scanlon v. Wallach, 53 Misc. 104, 102 N. Y. S. 1090. Letter, written by defendant held request for forbearance and an assumption of his predecessor's indebtedness to plaintiff upon acquiescence in its terms and forbearance of plaintiff to sue for reasonable time. Niles-Bement-Pond Co. v. Ury, 53 Misc. 305, 103 N. Y. S. 226. Forbearance to sue held no consideration where it did not appear that party forbearing lost anything thereby. Bunnell v. Rosenberg, 126 Ill. App. 196.

81. See 7 C. L. 775.

82. Compromise of contention as to property rights, final outcome of which, if settled by litigation, parties consider to be doubtful, furnishes consideration sufficient to support compromise contract, regardless of whether matter is really in doubt. Belt v. Lazenby, 126 Ga. 757, 56 S. E. 81. Maker of note given in settlement of suit pending against him is bound thereby whether said suit was instituted upon a just and valid claim or not. Glenn v. Zenovitch [Ga.] 58 S. E. 26. Contract not to make a will but to permit property to descend under interstate laws, by reconveyance of property previously conveyed to trustees, and compromise of pending suit to procure such reconveyance. Jones v. Abbott [Ill.] 81 N. E. 791. Compromise of suit to recover possession of land whereby boundary line between plaintiff's land and that of defendants' grantor was agreed upon, and plaintiffs released claim to land on one side of such line and defendants' grantor to that on other, and it was agreed that suit was to be dismissed held valid, even if plaintiffs' possessory right was insufficient to defeat title of defendants' grantor. Martin v. Conley, 30 Ky. L. R. 728, 99 S. W. 613. Where opposition to probate of will is made in good faith, its withdrawal is valid consideration for promise by one interested in sustaining will. Grochowski v. Grochowski [Neb.] 109 N. W. 742, 112 N. W. 335. Note given in compromise of claim on tax certificates held enforceable though latter were void. Armijo v. Henry [N. M.] 89 P. 305. Evidence held to show that promise to pay employe bonus at expiration of term of service was not based on settlement of dispute as to terms of contract, nor to prevent him from quitting the service. Price v. Press Pub. Co., 117 App. Div. 854, 103 N. Y. S. 296. Compromise of claim for labor performed, for which lien had been filed, and which both parties believed to be valid, held to support notes, though lien might have been invalid in part. Baines v. Coos Bay, etc., Co. [Or.] 89 P. 371.

83. Compromise of pending action on notes given for money lost at gambling held no consideration for new notes. Union Collection Co. v. Buckman [Cal.] 88 P. 708. Where plaintiff was not entitled to any compensation for his services by reason of his failure to perform his contract, subsequent promise to pay him lump sum therefor held without consideration. McCrary v. Thompson, 122 Mo. App. 596, 100 S. W. 535.

84. See 5 C. L. 682.

85. Evidence held to show that contract to pay annuity was mere voluntary provision based on gratitude and affection, and hence some legal disability, such as infancy or coverture, will support a new promise after such disability has ceased.<sup>86</sup> Natural love and affection will support a contract between parent and child.<sup>87</sup>

Marriage<sup>88</sup> or a promise to marry<sup>89</sup> is a valuable consideration.

Legal duty.<sup>90</sup>—An agreement to do, or the doing of what one is already legally bound to do,<sup>91</sup> or less than he is bound to do,<sup>92</sup> will not support a promise. Thus unenforceable. Parsons v. Teller, 188 N. Y. 318, 80 N. E. 930, revg. 111 App. Div. 637, 97 N. Y. S. 808.

86. If there is no valuable consideration for promise of infant, which would have supported same had he been of age, subsequent ratification after he becomes of age will not render it enforceable. Parsons v. Teller, 188 N. Y. 318, 80 N. E. 930.

87. Affection and sense of duty which should naturally exist on part of child toward aged and dependent parent is good consideration, and will support contract providing for her support. Worth v. Daniel, 1 Ga. App. 15, 57 S. E. 898. Will support assignment of insurance policy. Doty v. Dickey, 29 Ky. L. R. 900, 96 S. W. 544.

88. See 7 C. L. 776.

89. Legal contract and promise, made in good faith to marry another, is valuable consideration for conveyance of an estate, and will entitle grantee to hold it against subsequent purchasers or creditors of grantor. Huntress v. Hanley [Mass.] 80 N. E. 946. Promise to marry at once held to support assignment by man to woman of his interest in estate of deceased father though she had previously promised to marry him when he was able to support her. Id. Promise by woman to marry man, acting upon belief and assumption that he was capable of making valid contract of marriage, held sufficient consideration to support agreement by him to make marriage settlement, even though he was incapable. Hosmer v. Tiffany, 115 App. Div. 303, 100 N. Y. S. 797. Hence validity of his prior divorce held not open to attack in suit by his trustee in bankruptcy to set aside transfer of property pursuant to such settlement. Id. In suit by husband's trustee in bankruptcy to set aside transfers of property to wife, made pursuant to marriage settlement, held that plaintiff was entitled to show that wife had husband living when she agreed to marry and hence could not make valid contract to marry, so that contract based on her promise to marry was without consideration. Id. Agreement to marry is sufficient consideration to support antenuptial contract disposing of and definitely fixing property rights of parties. In re Appleby's Estate, 100 Minn. 408, 111 N. W. 305. Even though original engagement to marry is absolute, and is entered into some months preceding making and signing of contract, it remains consideration for such contract and is sufficient to support it, written agreement merging previous one. Id.

91. Snyder v. Stribling, 18 Okl. 168, 89 P. 222; Walker v. Tomlinson [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 157, 98 S. W. 906. Promise to marry at once held to support assignment by man to woman of his interest in his deceased father's estate, though she had previously promised to marry him when he was able to support her, where death of his father did not necessarily bring about that result. Huntress v. Hanley [Mass.] 80 N. E. 946. Contract whereby defendant agreed to pay plaintiffs who had contracted to construct sewer for city, certain sum in consideration of their doing work so as not to affect certain of defendant's pipes in an alley and to pay all losses sustained in consequence of damage to said pipes, held to put them under broader obligation with respect to said pipes than was imposed upon them by their contract with city, and hence to be supported by consideration, particularly where it appeared that plaintiffs were compelled to divert sewer at increased expense in order to comply therewith. Hoffman v. St. Louis Refrigerator & Cold Storage Co., 120 Mo. App. 661, 97 S. W. 619. Neither party being bound by oral contract void under statute of frauds, held that it could not be said that new contract was not a contract because it involved performance of things parties were already bound to perform. San Antonio Light Pub. Co. v. Moore [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 867. Contention that cattle were shipped under verbal contract with carrier, and that therefore there was no consideration for subsequent written contract signed after they were loaded held not supported by evidence. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Smith [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 107, 97 S. W. 836.

Contracts held to be without consideration:

Agreement to pay witness subpoenaed to testify to question of fact. Hargarten v. Beiz, 126 Ill. App. 368. Contract to pay witness testifying as to matters of fact greater amount than statutory fees, he being bound to attend and submit to examination when subpoenaed. Wright v. Somers, 125 Ill. App. 256. Agreement to pay physician extra compensation for expert testimony, it being his duty to give such testimony under subpoena. Burnett v. Freeman, 125 Mo. App. 683, 102 S. W. 121. Agreement by seller of goods to wait until future date for part payment, and then to accept buyer's note for balance, where contract of sale provided for payment on delivery of goods, and seller fully performed, there being no dispute as to indebtedness. Zerr v. Klug, 121 Mo. App. 286, 98 S. W. 822. Promise by one party to subsisting contract to opposite party to prevent breach of such contract by latter. Linz v. Schuck [Md.] 67 A. 286. Where constitution required creditor of corporation to exhaust remedy against corporation before proceeding against stockholders, held that agreement to do so would not support promise by stockholders to procure and pay any deficiency. In re Lehnhoff's Estate [Neb.] 109 N. W. 164, 112 N. W. 563. Agreement to pay employee bonus at end of term of service where contract bound employee to serve for certain time at fixed yearly salaries. Price v. Press Pub. Co., 117 App. Div. 854, 103 N. Y. S. 296. Agreement by solvent corporation to distribute proceeds resulting from disposition of its assets equitan executed oral agreement to accept part performance of a written contract, or an unexecuted oral agreement to accept less than full payment in discharge of a present existing written contract, without further consideration, is unenforceable.<sup>93</sup> But where a party refuses to complete his contract because of some unforeseen and substantial difficulties of performance, not known or anticipated when it was made, and which cast upon him an additional burden not contemplated by the parties, a promise by the opposite party of additional pay or benefits for completion of the contract is enforceable.<sup>94</sup> So, too, it has been held that, where a party refuses to be longer bound by his contract, a new contract whereby the other party agrees to pay him increased compensation is supported by a sufficient consideration.<sup>95</sup> An acceptance of a part of a debt when due in satisfaction of the whole does not bar the recovery of the residue.<sup>96</sup> This rule does not, however, apply when the payment is made before the debt matures, or at a different place from that where it is payable.<sup>97</sup> An agreement by a debtor not to avail himself of the bankruptcy law will not support a compromise agreement by his creditor to accept less than the amount due in full settlement of a claim which would not be barred by a discharge.<sup>98</sup>

ably among its creditors held not to support agreement by creditor to forbear forcing collection of his claim. Mount Vernon Rattan Co. v. Joachimson, 103 N. Y. S. 1045. Agreement to pay amount admittedly due under insurance policy, there being no dispute. Manley v. Vermont Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 78 Vt. 331, 62 A. 1020. Payment of loss by insurance company to third person held no consideration for agent's promise to pay to company amounts embezzled by subagent, for which agent was not liable. McKone v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Wis.] 110 N. W. 472.

92. Since excavation operations on adjoining premises did not relieve tenant from obligation to pay rent reserved in lease, held that her agreement to pay less amount while such operations continued furnished no consideration for alleged agreement of landlord to accept reduced rent, and to waive provision giving him right to terminate lease on notice. Seymour v. Hughes, 105 N. Y. S. 249.

93. Defendant agreed to convey to plaintiff, for specified sum, ninety acres of land, five of which belonged to her and balance to her insane son. She was not guardian of son, and later refused to convey. It was then verbally agreed that she should have herself appointed son's guardian, obtain order authorizing sale of his land, and would convey to plaintiff part of son's land for amount originally agreed to be paid for whole tract, and part of her own land for an additional amount. Held different terms and conditions, whereby plaintiff was to get less land and pay more money, furnished consideration for new contract. Benton v. Magee [Kan.] 89 P. 302.

94. Is presumption in such case that rights and obligations of original contract are waived and those of new or modified contract substituted therefor. Linz v. Schuck [Md.] 67 A. 286. Agreement to pay additional cost of digging cellar held supported by sufficient consideration. Id. Actual rescission of original contract held not necessary. Id.

95. Where plaintiff informed defendant that he would no longer work under contract to do certain work for specified sum, held that new contract whereby defendant agreed to pay him such sum, after contract price was exhausted, as would insure him usual day wages for such work after paying all help employed by him, was based on sufficient consideration. Scanlon v. Northwood, 147 Mich. 139, 13 Det. Leg. N. 1013, 110 N. W. 493.

96. Flener v. Flener, 30 Ky. L. R. 543, 99 S. W. 258. Payment of part of liquidated sum due is not to be taken as satisfaction of full debt regardless of form of receipt given. Schlessinger v. Schlessinger [Colo.] 88 P. 970. Fact that defendant borrowed sum with which to make payment held immaterial, particularly where it was not alleged that plaintiff was informed of that fact. Id.

97. Flener v. Flener, 30 Ky. L. R. 543, 99 S. W. 258.

98. Neither executed agreement not to avail himself of law, nor threat to do so. Schlessinger v. Schlessinger [Colo.] 88 P. 970.

Adequacy.<sup>6</sup>—At common law mere inadequacy of consideration is not alone ground for avoiding a contract<sup>7</sup> unless so gross as to shock the conscience and amount to proof of fraud.<sup>8</sup> The civil law, however, requires that the consideration be serious, and not out of all proportion with the value of the contract.<sup>9</sup>

A failure of consideration<sup>10</sup> in whole or in part precludes a recovery on the contract pro tanto,<sup>11</sup> and may be ground for a rescission of the contract<sup>12</sup> and the ly rendered without employment or request. Complaint held insufficient. Fulton v. Varney, 117 App. Div. 572, 102 N. Y. S. 608.

5. Carter v. Ware Commission Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 524.

6. See 7 C. L. 777.

7. In absence of satisfactory proof of fraud, smallness of consideration, so long as it is large enough to be measurable, is immaterial except in case of a contract to pay a definite sum of money at definite time. Rust v. Fitzhugh [Wis.] 112 N. W. 508. Consideration of $1 held sufficient to sustain contract for division of net proceeds of sale of land where prospective profits and time when they might be realized were uncertain. Id. Valid patent or right to sell patented article is sufficient consideration for note, though value of patent or right is greatly overestimated. Twentieth Century Co. v. Quilling 120 Wis. 318, 110 N. W. 174. Held immaterial whether consideration for release of wholly unliquidated demand was large or small. Allen v. Ruland, 79 Conn. 465, 65 A. 138. One dollar paid at execution of oil and gas lease and annual rental thereafter paid held sufficient to support contract. Pittsburg Vitrified Pav. & Bldg. Brick Co. v. Bailey [Kan.] 90 P. 303. Where consideration for sale of land was adequate when contract was made, fact that it had since increased in value held not to prevent specific performance. East Jellico Coal Co. v. Carter, 30 Ky. L. R. 174, 97 S. W. 768. Promise that claimant should be paid $5,000 out of promisor's estate at his death in return for services, etc., held valid and enforceable against his estate though such sum was much beyond actual value of such services. In re Todd's Estate, 47 Misc. 35, 95 N. Y. S. 211. Contract to pay attorney contingent fee having been fairly entered into between parties of full contracting age, with full knowledge without any element of fraud, undue influence, oppression or concealment, held that it could not be annulled merely because it had proven advantageous and profitable to attorney and fee was exorbitant. Humphries v. McLachlan, 87 Miss. 532, 40 So. 151.

8. Inadequacy coupled with such degree of mental weakness as would justify inference that advantage had been taken of that weakness justifies interference of court of equity. Allen's Adm'r's v. Allen's Adm'r's, 79 Vt. 173, 64 A. 1110.

9. Consideration of $1 recited as having been paid, held insufficient to support oil and gas lease, and same held true of $2 to be paid for privilege of retiring therefrom at any time. Murray v. Barnhart, 117 La. 1023, 42 So. 489. Fifty dollars to be paid quarterly by lessee under oil and gas lease in case he failed to develop property and $100 to be paid by him in case he elected to retire from contract, held insignificant and lacking in seriousness. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate v. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. [La.] 44 So. 481. No lesion where contract is aleatory. Rudolf v. Costa [La.] 44 So. 477. Where there is no lesion because contract is aleatory, contract is not void if there is a price, however small. Id. Contract of sale held supported by sufficient consideration where was an actual cash payment. Id. There being absolute sale, in consideration of annuity for term of years or for life, contention that there was no price because rental of property exceeded annuity held untenable. Id. Conveyance of property where grantor reserves enough for his support the consideration for which is obligation of grantee to provide grantor with home during his life and to bury him when dead, is an aleatory contract, which, save under exceptional circumstances, is not open to attack for lesion. Thielman v. Gahman [La.] 44 So. 123. Evidence held not to warrant rescission of sale of realty on ground of lesion beyond moiety. Cain v. Bauman 118 La. 82, 42 So. 654.

10. See 7 C. L. 777.

11. Where consideration moving to maker of contract is promise by other party of something to be fulfilled in future, latter must furnish consideration contemplated or defense of total or partial failure of consideration will be available to maker as defense to action on contract. Reynolds v. Nevin, 1 Ga. App. 269, 57 S. E. 918. Where uncontradicted evidence showed failure of consideration for notes sued on held proper to direct verdict for defendant. Id. Evidence held to sustain finding that notes and mortgage were given in payment for goods to be delivered in future, which were in fact never delivered. Alexander County Nat. Bk. v. Foster [Mo. App.] 101 S. W. 685. Acts of defendant in procuring payment of certain notes and undertakings held not induced by oral agreement whereby note sued on was to be canceled in consideration of his making or procuring such payment, but to have been wholly independent thereof, and hence was failure of consideration for agreement to cancel. Utah Sav. & Trust Co. v. Bamberger [Utah] 86 P. 961. Deed made freely, voluntarily and without fraud passes title though consideration may fail in whole or in part. Ripperdan v. Weldy, 149 Cal. 667, 87 P. 276. Mere fact that part of consideration for transfer consisted of covenant against alienation which could not be legally enforced held not to make deed absolutely void, even if it could be held to be failure of consideration authorizing rescission. Id. Evidence held insufficient to support defense of want or failure of consideration for notes alleged to have been given for money loaned. Glenn v. Zenovitch [Ga.] 58 S. E. 26. Release of defendant from liability on stock subscription held not the consideration for release of his rights under such subscription, and hence contention that consideration for his contract had failed because release of his liability was void was untenable. Hladovec recovery of the value of any property parted with pursuant thereto.<sup>13</sup> Equity will not interfere and declare a failure of consideration in whole or in part except in cases where the money could have been recovered back if paid.<sup>14</sup>

Matters relating to the contracts of domestic<sup>19</sup> and foreign corporations,<sup>20</sup> aliens,<sup>21</sup> infants,<sup>22</sup> and married women,<sup>23</sup> and to usurious<sup>24</sup> and gambling contracts,<sup>25</sup> contracts made on Sunday,<sup>26</sup> and to the effect of the interstate commerce law on contracts of transportation,<sup>27</sup> are treated elsewhere.

(§ 3) B. Subject-matter or consideration.<sup>28</sup>—There is a conflict of authority as to the validity of a sale by an heir of his expectancy.<sup>29</sup>

v. Paul, 222 Ill. 254, 78 N. E. 619. Allegations of answer that plaintiff undertook to turn over certain property to defendant held not supported by evidence or findings so that defense that only part of property was delivered and that value of property not delivered was greater than plaintiff's claim, and hence there was failure of consideration, was not established. Drovers' Live Stock Commission Co. v. Wolff Packing Co., 74 Kan. 330, 89 P. 465, 86 P. 128. Where plaintiff advanced money to insurance company to pay premium on policy in which defendant was named as beneficiary at defendant's instance and request, held fact that policies were void because application was not set out in or attached to policy was no defense to action on due bill given by defendant for money so advanced. Locker v. Kuechenmeister, 120 Mo. App. 701, 98 S. W. 92. In absence of fraud, note given in settlement of claim on certain tax certificates held not void for failure of consideration though certificates were in fact void. Armijo v. Henry [N. M.] 89 P. 305. Evidence held insufficient to show total failure of consideration for note sued on. Steven v. Henderson [Neb.] 110 N. W. 646. Where it was admitted that defendant executed and delivered his note to third person to be used by latter as part payment of purchase price of threshing machine purchased from plaintiff, held that defendant could not escape liability on note which had been turned over to plaintiff on ground of failure of consideration because third person failed to carry out his agreement, made at time note was given, to thresh defendant's grain, at customary price, in amount equal to face of note. Page v. Geiser Mfg. Co., 17 Okl. 110, 87 P. 851. Where county orders were adjudged fraudulent and void, held that there was total failure of consideration for their sale. Giblin v. North Wisconsin Lumber Co. [Wis.] 111 N. W. 499.

12. See, also, § 8B, post. Where party in consideration of conveyance to him of land assumes maintenance and care of grantor, his failure to substantially perform authorizes rescission for failure of consideration. Alvey v. Alvey, 30 Ky. L. R. 234, 97 S. W. 1106.

13. One conveying land or other property to another pursuant to an oral agreement which latter refuses to perform and cannot be compelled to perform because within statute of frauds may recover value thereof on theory of failure of consideration. Cromwell v. Norton, 193 Mass. 291, 79 N. E. 433.

Louisiana: Sale of realty held not void as an attempt to dispose of an interest in the succession of living persons. Rudolf v. Costa [La.] 44 So. 477. Executed contract of sale of realty by husband and wife held not subject to be set aside on ground that it

Contracts which involve the doing of a thing prohibited by statute under penalty are generally held to be void, even though the statute does not expressly so provide,<sup>30</sup> particularly where the object sought is the protection of the public.<sup>31</sup> Some courts, however, hold that the penalty imposed excludes all others, and that such contracts are valid unless it clearly appears that the legislature intended otherwise.<sup>32</sup>

Definiteness and certainty of terms.<sup>33</sup>—In order to be enforceable, a contract must be reasonably definite and certain in its terms,<sup>34</sup> or capable of being made so.<sup>35</sup> Both contracting parties must be named or otherwise described.<sup>36</sup>

34. Written instrument is not void for ambiguity where contract of the parties can be clearly and certainly ascertained therefrom. Ringle v. Quigg, 74 Kan. 581, 87 P. 724. Law leans against destruction of contracts on ground of uncertainty and contract will not be declared void on that ground unless after reading and interpreting it in light of circumstances under which it was made, and supplying or rejecting words necessary to carry into effect reasonable intention of parties, their intention cannot be fairly collected and effectuated. Leffler Co. v. Dickerson, 1 Ga. App. 63, 57 S. E. 911. To warrant specific performance of contract for conveyance of realty it must contain such a description of property, either in terms or by reference, that it can be ascertained without parol evidence. Willmon v. Peck [Cal. App.] 91 P. 164.

Contracts held sufficiently definite and certain: Oil and gas lease. Ringle v. Quigg, 74 Kan. 581, 87 P. 724. To pay broker commission for selling land. Kepner v. Ford [N. D.] 111 N. W. 619. Contract to erect or cause to be erected store building on certain tract of land at some convenient place to be thereafter agreed on, but not more than specified distance from railroad, and to keep stock of merchandise therein and conduct general merchandise business, held sufficiently definite to support action for damages for its breach. Iowa-Minnesota Land Co. v. Conner [Iowa] 112 N. W. 820. Contract held not too indefinite and uncertain to warrant recovery of substantial damages. Crichfield v. Julia [C. C. A.] 147 F. 65. Contract by children to pay certain sum monthly for support of mother, payment to be made to child with whom she should elect to stay, held not void on ground that it did not sufficiently appear to whom money was to be paid. Worth v. Daniel, 1 Ga. App. 15, 57 S. E. 898. Building contract held not so uncertain as to be impossible of performance as matter of law. American Surety Co. v. San Antonio Loan & Trust Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 387. Note dated March 25, 1904, and payable on "the first day of November," without specifying a year, held, in absence of anything requiring contrary construction to be construed as maturing on first day of November, 1904. Leffler Co. v. Dickerson, 1 Ga. App. 63, 57 S. E. 911. Contract for transfer of patent to corporation to be formed, etc., held sufficiently definite and certain to be enforceable in equity. Howe v. Howe & Owen Ball Bearing Co. [C. C. A.] 154 F. 820. Description of land held sufficiently definite to sustain bill for specific performance of oral contract to convey it. White v. Poole [N. H.] 65 A. 255.

Contract held void for uncertainty: Bunnell v. Rosenberg, 126 Ill. App. 196. Promise by decedent to plaintiff's mother to take plaintiff and do a good part by her. McMorrow v. Dowell, 116 Mo. 37. See 7 C. L. 779.

38. Contracts held mutual: Agreement to allow defendant to build substructure of bridges for building of which plaintiff might receive contracts from government, since plaintiff could have compelled defendant to do substructure work, though at a loss. Virginia Bridge & Iron Co. v. Crafts [Ga. App.] 58 S. E. 322. Oral agreement whereby plaintiff was to store and finance certain cotton for defendant, and containing mutual promises. Pope v. Graniteville Mfg. Co., 1 Ga. App. 176, 57 S. E. 949. Contract not being within statute of frauds held that it was not rendered unilateral because only one of the parties signed subsequent letter stating its terms. Id. Defeasance agreement giving right to redeem from deed absolute in form intended as mortgage. Linkemann v. Knepper, 226 Ill. 473, 80 N. E. 1009. Gas and oil lease. Ringle v. Quigg, 74 Kan. 581, 87 P. 724. Contract for sale of land. Wadick v. Mace, 118 App. Div. 777, 103 N. Y. S. 889. Contract for sale of land signed by vendor alone. East Jellico Coal Co. v. Carter, 30 Ky. L. R. 174, 97 S. W. 768. Contract to pay broker commission for procuring purchaser for land, though not signed by broker. Kepner v. Ford [N. D.] 111 N. W. 619. Contract for sale of salt. Mebius & Drescher Co. v. Mills [Cal.] 88 P. 917. Agreement to transfer patents to corporation to be formed in consideration of cash payments made and to be made, and certain portion of stock of said corporation. Wills v. Pennell, 116 App. Div. 493, 101 N. Y. S. 1017. Upon acceptance of offer contained in memorandum of sale, held that law would imply promise to accept and pay for goods on part of accepting party, so that promises thereupon became mutual and enforceable. Bailey v. Leishman [Utah] 89 P. 78. Contract held to bind seller to deliver as many ties as he could get by ordinary care and diligence in time fixed. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Coyle, 30 Ky. L. R. 567, 99 S. W. 237; Id., 30 Ky. L. R. 201, 97 S. W. 772. Lease binding lessor as long as lessee paid rent and lessee until he gave month's written notice of termination at end of year. Morris v. Healy Lumber Co. [Wash.] 91 P. 186. Contract of employment held to bind both parties for five years. Butterick Pub. Co. v. Whitcomb, 225 Ill. 605, 80 N. E. 247. Contract held not so lacking in mutuality as to preclude its enforcement in equity. General Elec. Co. v. Westinghouse Elec. Co., 151 F. 664. Contract under seal and reciting receipt of valuable consideration whereby plaintiff was to take charge of lands of testator, giving as much time to management thereof as might seem necessary to him, and to use his best judgment in disposing of same, and to receive half net proceeds of all sales. Mills v. Smith, 193 Mass. 11, 78 N. E. 765. Pledge of ring held not unilateral as failing to fix time within which pledgor might redeem after expiration of year when tender of amount necessary to redeem was made within reasonable time after expiration of year and kept good. Andrews v. Uncle Joe Diamond Broker [Wash.] 87 P. 947. Contract founded on consideration is not invalid for want of mutuality because it is obligatory on one party and optional on other. Pittsburg Vitrified Pav. & Bldg. Brick Co. v. Bailey [Kan.] 90 P. 803. Lease as whole being supported by sufficient consideration held that fact that it did not bind lessor to furnish beer of its own manufacture did not preclude enforcement of covenant by lessee not to sell any other kind of beer, such covenant being mere restriction on use of premises. Schlitz Brewing Co. v. Nielsen [Neb.] 110 N. W. 746. Signing of mutual undertaking to perform a specific common object does not necessarily render contract unilateral. Worth v. Daniel, 1 Ga. App. 15, 57 S. E. 898. Agreement by children to pay certain sum monthly for support of mother held not unilateral. Id.

Contracts held lacking in mutuality: Contract for sale of ties since it did not bind plaintiffs to deliver any ties. Lowe v. Ayer-Lord Tie Co., 29 Ky. L. R. 1302, 97 S. W. 383. Covenant in mortgage binding mortgagor to erect saloon on mortgaged premises and to sell mortgagee's beer exclusively for period of ten years. Huebner-Toledo Breweries Co. v. Zevnik, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 193. Contract for sale of certain proportion of nut and slack produced from operation of coal mine, where it was left entirely optional with sellers whether or not they would separate any or all of nut and slack from run of mine. Artemus-Jellico Coal Co. v. Ulland, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 605. Contract to furnish ice for certain year at specified price, there being no obligation to sell any specified amount and no obligation on part of other party to buy. Tyler Ice Co. v. Coupland [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 123. Agreement to fur-rule does not, however, apply to contracts which have been executed in whole or in part.<sup>39</sup> Similarly, under the civil law, a protestative contract is void,<sup>40</sup> and a protestative obligation retains that character only so long as it has not been fulfilled in whole or in part.<sup>41</sup>

(§ 3) D. Public policy in general.<sup>42</sup>—A contract valid where made will not be enforced if contrary to the law or the public policy of the state where enforcement is sought.<sup>43</sup>

Contracts waiving exemptions provided by law,<sup>44</sup> or against the policy and spirit of particular statutes,<sup>45</sup> or to compensate an attorney for collecting gambling debts by paying him a percentage of the amount collected,<sup>46</sup> or to pay a witness extra com-

Hartman* [C. C. A.] 153 F. 24. Covenants protecting seller of property against competition of buyer are upheld only where main purpose is to protect seller against competition directed against his retained business, and where they are no wider than is necessary for that purpose, and not where main purpose is to protect buyers against competition of each other. Id. System of contracts with wholesale and retail dealers whereby manufacturer of proprietary medicine under secret process not patented attempted to retain control of all sales and resales of such medicine held prima facie invalid, so that he was not entitled to preliminary injunction restraining person not party thereto from purchasing medicine from one who was, and reselling same at any price he might see fit, in absence of showing that system was necessary for protection of manufacturer's retained business. Id. Prime purpose of covenants restricting sales and resales held suppression of competition between those buying to sell again, any benefit resulting to retained business of manufacturer being merely incidental thereto. Id. Result held not changed by fact that covenants only operated to prevent injurious competition between dealers and resulted in maintenance of reasonable prices, actual proof of public prejudice or injury not being necessary. Id.

97. Contract whereby combination in restraint of trade purchased all the machinery of one of its constituent members, a corporation, and stipulated that such corporation should not compete in business with any of its members, and provided employment for its president, it appearing further that such machinery was purchased without any plan for its location and use and had remained unused by purchaser for eight months after its purchase, held void. Fisher v. Flickinger Wheel Co., 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 523. Contract whereby railroad agreed to deliver all stock shipped over its lines to certain city to certain stockyards, and not to establish any other stockyards in said city, held void because promotive of monopoly and hurtful to public, and as in violation of Const. § 214, prohibiting preferential contracts for delivery, etc., of freight. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stockyards Co., 30 Ky. L. R. 18, 97 S. W. 778. Contract, combination, or trust among various producers and sellers of a commodity, direct and necessary or natural effect of which is to restrain competition and control prices, is void at common law. Pocahontas Coke Co. v. Powhatan Coal & Coke Co., 60 W. Va. 508, 56 S. E. 264. Is immaterial whether commodity is of prime necessity if it is article of legitimate trade or commerce. Id. In order for combination or trust to be in unreasonable restraint of trade, it is not necessary that complete monopoly be formed, but is sufficient if it tends to monopoly and is to injury of the public. Id. In determining whether contract is in unreasonable restraint of trade, all its powers should be considered, and its character determined not alone by what has been done under it, but by what may be done under it when all its powers have been fully exercised. Id. Is no defense to show that prices have not been changed, or even that they have been lowered. Id. Contract whereby defendant appointed complainant sole sales agent for its coke, etc., held void. Id. If combination or trust is illegal because in unreasonable restraint of trade, contract whereby it is effectuated and established is void for same reason. Id. Contract held void because made for purpose of forming illegal trust or combination in violation of Federal anti-trust act. McConnell v. Camors-McConnell Co. [C. C. A.] 152 F. 321. Fact that trust corporation was not party to proceeding to enforce contract of constituent company held not a bar to defense that contract was void as part of arrangement for creation of monopoly. Id. Contract whereby defendant was to have exclusive right to sell plaintiff's machines in certain territory held valid. Wood Mowing & Reaping Co. v. Greenwood Hardware Co., 75 S. C. 378, 55 S. E. 973. Contract with railroad company whereby plaintiff was to build up its milk business for term of years held not void as in restraint of trade or as tending to create monopoly. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Kutter [C. C. A.] 147 F. 51.

99. Injurious to public at large. Central New York Tel. & T. Co. v. Averill, 105 N. Y. S. 378.

1. It not being open to construction of giving grantee right to remove any desired quantity of rock and restricting use after removal. Pavkovich v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Cal.] 87 P. 1097.

whether products manufactured under a secret formula not patented or copyrighted are within the common-law rules in regard to restraint of trade and monopolies.<sup>2</sup>

(§ 3) L. Effect of invalidity.<sup>3</sup>—Neither a court of law nor a court of equity will lend its aid to the enforcement of contracts which are illegal, immoral, or contrary to public policy.<sup>4</sup> If the parties are in pari delicto, neither can maintain an action to enforce such a contract, or recover damages for its breach,<sup>5</sup> nor, if the contract has been executed, will the court interfere to disturb the acquired rights of either at the instance of the other.<sup>6</sup> This rule is, however, generally held not to apply to cases where to withhold relief would to a greater extent offend public morals than to grant it,<sup>7</sup> or where one party has been placed at a disadvantage through fraud, duress, or undue influence.<sup>8</sup> Where a contract valid in its inception becomes illegal

2. Manufactured product of a trade secret or private formula not protected by patent or copyright is not immune from common-law rules forbidding monopolies of unreasonable restraints of trade. Park & Sons Co. v. Hartman [C. C. A.] 153 F. 24.

Contract: Agency contracts whereby manufacturer of medicine under secret formula sold to jobbers, retailers, and consumers at fixed and uniform prices, and jobbers agreed to sell only to retailers who had executed contracts, and retailers only to purchasers for consumption, held outside rule of restraint of trade, and valid. Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. Jaynes Drug Co., 149 F. 838.

4. Contract by foreign corporation. Pittsburgh Const. Co. v. West Side Belt R. Co., 151 F. 125. No action in affirmance of illegal contract can be maintained. Union Collection Co. v. Buckman [Cal.] 88 P. 708. Contract calling for construction of building in manner prohibited by St. 1892, c. 419, § 64, held not enforceable in favor of owner, either as foundation of cross-action or as defense to action for labor and services. Eastern Expanded Metal Co. v. Webb Granite & Const. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 251. Where one attempts to enforce illegal or unjust agreement courts will not interfere to give it validity. Fried v. Danziger, 105 N. Y. S. 44. Pleadings held to show on face that transactions on which suit and counterclaim were based were gambling transactions, so that neither party was entitled to any relief. Norris v. Logan [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 41, 526, 94 S. W. 123. Courts will not enforce contract void as in restraint of trade because establishing unlawful combination. Pocahontas Coke Co. v. Powhatan Coal & Coke Co., 60 W. Va. 508, 56 S. E. 264.

5. One employed by year to manage gambling house cannot, on his discharge without cause before expiration of term, recover share of profits which he was to have received in lieu of salary, contract being void since its object was unlawful. Britt v. Davis Bros., 118 La. 597, 43 So. 248. Where contract for sale of land was rescinded because one of purchasers, without knowledge of purchasers, but with that of vendor, acted as agent of both parties and received commission from vendor, held that said agent was not entitled to recover amount paid by him to vendor, nor vendor commissions paid by him to agent. Houts v. Scharbauer [Tex. Civ. App.] 103 S. W. 679. No recovery can be had on quantum meruit for damages for nonperformance by government of an execu-tory contract which is void because not in writing as required by statute. Johnston v. U. S., 41 Ct. Cl. 76.

6. Parties will be left where they placed themselves. Rudolf v. Costa [La.] 44 So. 477. Civ. Code, § 1608, held to apply only to contracts which are in part at least executory, and not to permit grantor of property who has received and retained consideration for his conveyance to recover property conveyed upon sole ground that consideration was unlawful in part. Ripperdan v. Weldy, 149 Cal. Sup. 667, 87 P. 276. Mere fact that part of consideration for transfer of realty consisted of covenant against alienation which could not be enforced held not to make deed void, even if it was ground for rescission. Id. Where life insurance policy, void for want of insurable interest, was issued on insured's fraudulent statement in application that beneficiary was his creditor to full amount of policy, and insurance was paid to such beneficiary, held that insured's administrator could not recover same from him, insured and beneficiary being in pari delicto. Howe's Ex'r v. Morris Griffin's Adm'r [Ky.] 103 S. W. 714. Courts will not enforce payment for sale of liquors made by one possessing no license therefor. Moise v. Weymuller [Neb.] 110 N. W. 554. Where station agent and shipper agreed upon rate for interstate shipment which was less than published rate, in violation of interstate commerce law, but published rate was demanded and collected at destination, held that shipper could not recover difference. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Holmes, 18 Okl. 92, 90 P. 22. Plaintiffs conveyed land to defendant pursuant to agreement by latter not to contest or protest plaintiff's application for patent therefor. Held that agreement not to protest being void plaintiff was not entitled to cancellation of deed on defendant's subsequent violation thereof, there being no allegation of fraud. Roy v. Harney Peak Tin Min., Mill & Mfg. Co. [S. D.] 110 N. W. 106.

7. One induced to bet money upon false foot race under belief that race was fixed so that he would win, when in fact there was conspiracy that he should lose, and thus be swindled and cheated out of his money, held entitled to recover back his money from stakeholder where he demanded its return before race was run or stakeholder had parted with it. Falkenberg v. Allen, 18 Okl. 210, 90 P. 415. Evidence held to sustain finding that there was such a demand. Id.

8. Mere fact that party was unable to write his name held insufficient to show that by subsequent statutory enactment, no recovery can be had thereon for nonperformance after such statute goes into effect, though the legality of acts done before that time is not affected.<sup>9</sup>

Money advanced to enable one to carry on an illegal business cannot be recovered,<sup>10</sup> nor can one recover the purchase price of goods sold with the knowledge and intention of both parties that they are to be used for an illegal purpose;<sup>11</sup> but a contrary rule prevails where such use is not in the contemplation of the parties when the sale is made, though there is a subsequent unlawful use.<sup>12</sup> It has been held that one furnishing labor and materials of benefit to real property, pursuant to a contract containing an element illegal under a prohibitory statute, may recover on a quantum meruit for their value, where the contract remains entirely executory in that part which is illegal, and is disaffirmed because of such illegality.<sup>13</sup>

The illegality of a contract vitiates all agreements or transactions entered into in furtherance thereof or based thereon,<sup>14</sup> but does not ordinarily affect collateral agreements in no way dependent thereon,<sup>15</sup> nor preclude a recovery on grounds of action existing independently thereof,<sup>16</sup> the test being whether the party seeking to recover can establish his case without relying on the illegal transaction.<sup>17</sup> Where a he was deceived or imposed upon. Howe's Ex'r v. Morris Griffin's Adm'r [Ky.] 103 S. W. 714.

9. American Mercantile Exchange v. Blunt [Me.] 66 A. 212.

10. Note and mortgage given for money advanced for purpose of enabling defendant to continue in business of operating house of prostitution held void where payee knew that it was to be so used, and that defendant expected to obtain money to pay it from continuation of such business. Anderson v. Freeman [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 350. Where it was not shown that money was loaned to firm for purpose and with intent of enabling it to violate laws of state, but on contrary to enable it to pay debts, held that lender was not precluded from recovering amount of loan even if firm was engaged in unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, which was not shown. Grey v. Callan, 133 Iowa, 500, 110 N. W. 309.

11. One furnishing goods to enable another to conduct saloon under license issued to third person. Moise v. Weymuller [Neb.] 110 N. W. 554. Sale of saloon fixtures and stock with understanding that they should be used in violation of liquor laws. Johns v. Reed [Neb.] 109 N. W. 738.

12. Johns v. Reed [Neb.] 109 N. W. 738.

13. Construction of lower portion of building which was entirely in conformity to St. 1892, c. 419, § 64, held not to have deprived plaintiff of right to repudiate contract before constructing roof in manner forbidden by such statute, particularly where it was ignorant of illegality when it executed contract. Eastern Expanded Metal Co. v. Webb Granite & Const. Co. [Mass.] 81 N. E. 251. Fact that some work was done on plans for roof by plaintiff's engineer as part of negotiations for new arrangement between parties, and which did not form part of building and for which no claim was made, held immaterial. Id.

14. Notes given in consideration of compromise of action on notes given for gambling debt held unenforceable. Union Collection Co. v. Buckman [Cal.] 88 P. 708. Award of arbitrator based on illegal contract will not be enforced. Pittsburgh Const. Co. v. West Side Belt R. Co., 151 P. 125.

15. Land was conveyed to defendant in consideration of suppression of criminal prosecutions. Plaintiff had previously acquired title and possession under valid deed. Held that fact that plaintiff participated in negotiations leading to execution of deed to defendant, and led latter to believe that grantor still had title, did not authorize defendant either to evict plaintiff, or, after eviction, sustain defense against assertion of plaintiff's title under principle in pari delicto, etc. Deen v. Williams [Ga.] 57 S. E. 427. H, a minor, who had been convicted of misdemeanor, agreed through his brother to work for plaintiff for ten months if latter would pay his fine and clothe and feed him. Plaintiff paid fine and $10 for clothing. Subsequently with consent of H, defendant gave plaintiff his note for $50 and took over contract with H, and latter worked for defendant for eight months. Held that note was valid regardless of validity of original contract. Dorsey v. Redwine, 1 Ga. App. 626, 57 S. E. 1073. Where plaintiff advanced money to pay premium on policy of insurance in which defendant was beneficiary at latter's instance and request, held no defense to action on due bill given by defendant therefor that policy was void for lack of insurable interest. Locher v. Kuechenmeister, 120 Mo. App. 701, 98 S. W. 92. Where lease was itself lawful and not contrary to public policy, and was supported by independent consideration, fact that lessor was member of unlawful combination held no bar to enforcement of provision therein that lessee should sell only particular kind of beer on premises. Schlitz Brewing Co. v. Nielsen [Neb.] 110 N. W. 746. Invalidity of collateral contract held not to affect validity of main contract. Kidd v. New Hampshire Trac. Co. [N. H.] 66 A. 127.

16. Brennan v. United Hatters of North America, 73 N. J. Law, 729, 65 A. 165.

17. Where evidence was such that court could not judicially determine that any portion of lease would have been entered into regardless of two unlawful provisions, held contract not unlawful in itself has been fully performed and the parties have enjoyed the benefits, the fact that one of them has violated a penal statute in the approach to it will not prevent a court from enforcing payment by the other party.<sup>18</sup>

If the contract is an entire one, the illegality of a part of it renders the whole void.<sup>19</sup> If severable, the illegal portion may be rejected, and the legal portion retained and enforced.<sup>20</sup>

No action of the parties or their assignees can so validate an illegal contract as to justify a court in enforcing it where its illegality appears.<sup>21</sup> The illegality cannot be waived,<sup>22</sup> nor can validly be injected into the contract by way of estoppel.<sup>23</sup> The that entire contract must fail. Anderson v. Shawnee Compress Co., 17 Okl. 231, 87 P. 315. Where plaintiff and defendant induced agent of owner of land to procure them option thereon, in violation of his duty to his employer, by agreeing to give him half of profits resulting from sale, held that plaintiff could not recover on agreement between himself and defendant to divide balance of such profits. Williams v. Kendrick, 105 Va. 791, 54 S. E. 865. Guaranty of performance of illegal contract held unenforceable. Pittsburgh Const. Co. v. West Side Belt R. Co. [C. C. A.] 154 F. 929.

18. Beilin v. Wein, 51 Misc. 595, 101 N. Y. S. 38. Where goods sold were accepted and used by defendant, held that fact that plaintiff, in violation of Pen. Code, § 384r, as amended by Laws 1904, c. 136, making such conduct a misdemeanor, paid commission to defendant's agent through whom sale was made, was no defense to action for purchase price. Sirkin v. Fourteenth St. Store, 105 N. Y. S. 179, affg. 105 N. Y. S. 638.

19. For distinction between entire and severable contracts, see § 4C, post. Illegality and prohibition held to go to whole substance of contract of pledge by pawnbroker and to affect whole transaction from its inception, prohibition being one of law against entering into contract at all. Levison v. Boas [Cal.] 88 P. 825. Covenant whereby husband and wife renounced their marital rights and obligations held to invalidate entire contract. Hill v. Hill [N. H.] 67 A. 406. Contract to do work for city held void where statutory steps had not been taken with reference to letting contract to do part of it. Rodgers v. New York, 51 Misc. 119, 100 N. Y. S. 745. Cannot rely on valid portion and disregard illegal portion, though former is written and latter oral. McConnell v. Camors-McConnell Co. [C. C. A.] 152 F. 321. One cannot show only such part of an entire agreement as is legal and sue on it alone. Continental Wall Paper Co. v. Lewis Voight & Sons Co. [C. C. A.] 148 F. 939. Contract to pay for goods included in account sued on held part of an entire agreement which included provisions invalid under anti-trust act, so that plaintiff was not entitled to recover. 11. If any part of entire consideration of a contract be vicious, whole contract is void. McLane's Adm'r v. Dixon, 30 Ky. L. R. 682, 99 S. W. 601. Contract part of consideration for which was agreement to live in adultery. Id. Where guaranty was in fact made to secure suppression of criminal prosecution, held that it was not made enforceable because legal consideration also entered into it. Beal & Doyle Dry Goods Co. v. Barton, 80 Ark. 326, 97 S. W. 58. Where part of a single consideration for one or more promises is illegal or one or more of several considerations for a single promise is illegal, whole contract is void. Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, § 769. Arnett v. Wright, 18 Okl. 337, 89 P. 1116. Where sale and transfer of city liquor license which is prohibited by statute entered into and became part of consideration for promissory note, held that note and mortgage given to secure it were wholly void, both under statute and regardless of it. Id. Remedy on entire note held to fail because of taint of consideration in part. Anderson v. Freeman [Tex. Civ. App.] 100 S. W. 350. Where any material part of entire contract valid at its inception becomes invalid by subsequent statutory enactment, no recovery can be had thereon for nonperformance after statute goes into effect. American Mercantile Exchange v. Blunt [Me.] 66 A. 212.

20. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 695; Glucose Sugar Refining Co. v. Marshalltown, 153 F. 620. Where legal portion of consideration for mortgage could be separated from illegal portion and ascertained with certainty, held that it was valid to extent that consideration was legal. Lepper v. Conrad [Wyo.] 89 P. 575.

21. Notes given in consideration of compromise of action on notes given for gambling debt held unenforceable. Union Collection Co. v. Buckman [Cal.] 88 P. 708. Contract for school supplies executed by majority of members of board acting independently, though not binding on district, held not void as contrary to public policy so as to preclude subsequent ratification. Richards v. School Tp., 132 Iowa, 612, 109 N. W. 1093.

22. Boyett v. Standard Chem. & Oil Co., 146 Ala. 554, 41 So. 756; Pittsburgh Const. Co. v. West Side Belt R. Co., 151 F. 125. Where pleadings show on their face that transactions on which suit is based are gambling transactions, appellate court will direct dismissal of suit though neither party raised question of illegality. Norris v. Logan [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 41, 526, 94 S. W. 123.

23. Fact that defendant interposed pleas to common counts, setting up payment of demands sued on by execution of notes, held not to estop him from setting up by way of defense to counts based on such notes that they were given in payment for fertilizer sold without complying with penal statute. Boyett v. Standard Chem. & Oil Co., 146 Ala. 554, 41 So. 756. Where deed was executed to prosecutor only for purpose of suppressing criminal prosecution, held that prosecutor, being himself in fault, could not, on strength defense of want of notice of illegality is available only where the contract is a negotiable instrument in the hands of one who has acquired it for value before maturity and in the ordinary course of business.<sup>24</sup>

§ 4. Interpretation. A. General rules.<sup>25</sup>—This section includes only the general rules of construction applicable to all contracts with a few concrete applications thereof by way of illustration. In so far as possible the construction of particular contracts has been excluded to the topics dealing with the subjects to which they relate.<sup>26</sup>

If the contract is in writing, the expressed<sup>27</sup> intention of the parties,<sup>28</sup> to be de-

of deed alone, invoke aid of equitable estoppel against one not party to deed, in whom legal title was vested at time of its execution, in order to prevent true owner from asserting title. Deen v. Williams [Ga.] 57 S. E. 427.

24. Defense that original non-negotiable notes were given for gambling debt held available against assignee of new notes given in consideration of compromise of action thereon. Union Collection Co. v. Buckman [Cal.] 88 P. 708.

27. Intention must be determined from terms. Ochs v. Carnahan Co. [Ind. App.] 80 N. E. 163. Intention expressed by words used controls. Union Water Power Co. v. Lewiston, 101 Me. 564, 65 A. 67. Where unequivocal meaning is to be determined from instrument itself. Cranes Nest Coal & Coke Co. v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 105 Va. 785, 54 S. E. 884. Contract itself should be referred to to determine its character. Adkins & Co. v. Campbell [Del.] 64 A. 628. Is duty of court to enforce contract as made. Bennett v. Burkhalter [Ga.] 57 S. E. 231. Parties held to contract as made by them. Ringle v. Quigg, 74 Kan. 581, 87 P. 724. Contract to be enforced as written, duty of court being to ascertain terms of contract on which parties have in fact agreed and to give effect to it. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Com., 105 Va. 297, 54 S. E. 331. Though court, in construing contract, may consider circumstances under which it was made, when breach is averred its language must determine to what parties have bound themselves. Stonega Coke & Coal Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 106 Va. 223, 55 S. E. 551. Court cannot substitute new contract. Baraboo Land, Mining & Leasing Co. v. Winter, 130 Wis. 457, 110 N. W. 413; Wisconsin Sulphite Fibre Co. v. Jeffris Lumber Co. [Wis.] 111 N. W. 237; Old Colony Trust Co. v. Standard Beet Sugar Co., 150 F. 677. Where plaintiffs failed to procure release of chattel mortgage on personality and permitted another mortgage thereon to be foreclosed and property to be sold, thus rendering performance on their part of agreement whereby such personality was to be exchanged for realty impossible, held that court could not direct defendant to make conveyance of realty on payment by plaintiff of sum of money in lieu of personality. Constantine v. Caswell [Wash.] 91 P. 7. In action on written promise to pay money, complete in itself and not ambiguous or uncertain in meaning, intention of maker and legal effect of terms used should be determined by court from inspection of terms used, and plea that intention of promisor differs from legal effect of terms used is demurrable. Langley v. Owens [Fla.] 42 So. 457. Plea that it was not intended that notes which were in law sealed instruments should be executed as sealed instruments held demurrable. 1d. Contract being void under statute, held that it was not competent for plaintiff by averment and oral proof to change its character and legal effect. Woods v. Bates, 126 Ill. App. 180. Allegations as to what parties contemplated and intended cannot vary terms of contract as stated. Milligan v. Keyser [Fla.] 42 So. 367. Construction placed upon contract by one of the parties is not permissible to prove its meaning. Dakan v. Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 125 Mo. App. 451, 102 S. W. 634. In controversy as to making of agreement, one of the parties to it may not testify as to what he had in mind in preliminary negotiations, nor state his unexpressed intent in such negotiations. *Cornelius v. Construction of Particular Contracts.

Agency contracts (See, also, Agency, 9 C. L. 58). Contract held to provide for weekly loans to agent, to contemplate repayment, and to pledge agent's contemplated commissions as collateral security therefor. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Wolfson [Mo. App.] 101 S. W. 162. Liability of agent on mortgage given to secure advances and which it was agreed should be paid out of renewal commissions held terminated where he lawfully exercised right to resign. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co. v. Ellsworth, 129 Wis. 349, 109 N. W. 125.

Contracts relating to corporate stock (See, also, Corporations, 7 C. L. 862). Where contract gave defendant option to purchase stock in corporation in case certain firm gave unfavorable opinion as to patentability of certain invention, and provided that he should determine whether he would or would not take it as soon as opinion was received, if it was unfavorable, held that he was not required to give formal notice of his determination not to take it, but his communication of his determination to treasurer of corporation and assignment to it of certificate of stock which had been placed in his name was sufficient. Randall v. Claflin [Mass.] 80 N. E. 594. Agreement to purchase stock at end of first year held to mean at end of year from date of its issue to plaintiff. Edmonds v. Evarts, 146 Mich. 485, 13 Det. Leg. N. 867, 109 N. W. 844. Agreement to deliver certificates for ninety per cent. of capital stock of corporation held complied with by delivery of ninety per cent of that outstanding, though articles of incorporation provided for a larger amount of stock than was actually issued. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. v. Blanton [C. C. A.] 149 F. 31.

Loans: Plaintiff and her husband gave sum of money to defendant under agreement that he might use it until they needed it, it to become defendant's property if not demanded in their lifetime. Held that death of plaintiff's husband did not convert transaction into gift or discharge defendant's obligation to repay money to plaintiff on demand, and that she could claim it and maintain action therefor on demand being refused. Weltsch v. Straub, 74 Kan. 292, 86 P. 148. Held nothing in contract to loan money to be advanced when building was completed on certain lot which prevented plaintiff from having it completed in any way he saw fit, either personally or by contract, and with or without outside assistance. Holt v. United Security Life Ins. & Trust Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 67 A. 118. Provision in application for loan that charges for examining title to property offered as security, etc., should be paid whether loan was made or not held not to entitle plaintiff to recover such charges in case it refused to make loan capriciously, in bad faith, and without substantial reason. Title Guarantee & Trust Co. v. Wesolick, 115 App. Div. 608, 101 N. Y. S. 7. Uncanceled lis pendens filed against property in action for violation of tenement house act held sufficient reason for declining loan, in absence of evidence of bad faith, statute making fine imposed for such violation lien on property. Id. Plaintiff held to have made prima facie case by proving performance of services. Id.

Contracts of employment (See, also, Master and Servant, § C. L. 840). Agreement held only to preclude employee from disclosing processes of manufacturing steel covered by certain patents, and not from disclosing discoveries by complainant. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 695. Contract whereby defendant hired plaintiff for theatrical engagement of one week held not to require it to give her two weeks' notice before discharging her. Parker v. Hyde & Behman Amusement Co., 53 Misc. 549, 103 N. Y. S. 731. Co. v. Kansas City North Western R. Co.* [Kan.] 88 P. 1085.

35. To prevent incongruities and absurdities. Manson v. Dayton [C. C. A.] 153 F. 258. Word "and" read as "or" in agreement not to engage in business of selling "hardware, furniture, implements, buggies and wagons." Geiger v. Cawley, 146 Mich. 550, 13 Det. Leg. N. 848, 109 N. W. 1064.

36. Contract and chattel mortgage executed contemporaneously with deed held to be considered in determining whether it was intended as mortgage. Ferguson v. Boyd [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 519. Held that first contract, though void, could be looked to for terms of any new arrangement made with express reference to its subject-matter. San Antonio Light & Pub. Co. v. Moore [Tex. Civ. App.] 101 S. W. 867.

Words of broad signification will be interpreted with reference to the subject-matter of the contract, unless there is a clear intention to the contrary.<sup>37</sup> General words following an enumeration of particular things may include other things not ejusdem generis, if such appears to have been the intention of the parties.<sup>38</sup> The doctrine of expressio unius est exclusio alterius is not of universal application, but is always subject to the intention of the parties as evidenced by the contract.<sup>39</sup>

Words of doubtful meaning should be construed most strongly against the party using them.<sup>40</sup> and one will be bound by the meaning which he knew the other party supposed them to bear.<sup>41</sup> By statute in some states when different constructions of a provision are otherwise equally proper, that is to be adopted which is most favorable to the party in whose favor such provision was made.<sup>42</sup>

Of two conflicting clauses the one appearing to be the most important,<sup>43</sup> or which is the most in harmony with other parts of the contract,<sup>44</sup> should be given effect. Written and printed parts must if possible, be construed together,<sup>45</sup> but if in conflict, the written will prevail.<sup>46</sup> So too, where the contract is partly in writing and partly oral, the written and oral parts must be construed together.<sup>47</sup> A bilateral written contract purporting to set out the mutual undertakings of the parties will, however, be presumed to contain the whole contract between them.<sup>48</sup>

If possible the contract should be given a reasonable construction,<sup>49</sup> and one

37. Unless intention is clear that they should be taken in broad meaning. Van Zandt v. Hanover Nat. Bank [C. C. A.] 149 F. 127.

38. Shaw v. Pope [Conn.] 67 A. 495. Construed in light of attendant circumstances. Lindeke v. Associates Realty Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 630. Forfeiture clause held to apply to all covenants of lease. Id.

39. Provision of contract for extension of time for completion of work in case of delay caused by government held not to preclude recovery of damages resulting from such a delay. William Cramp & Sons v. United States, 41 Ct. Cl. 164.

40. In favor of him who has been misled and advanced his money upon it. Contract of guaranty. Loomis v. MacFarlane [Or.] 91 P. 466. Ambiguous contract, construed most strongly against person who prepared it. Small Co. v. Claxton, 1 Ga. App. 83, 57 S. E. 977. Contract prepared by one party by filling out printed blank used by him in his business. People v. Gluck, 138 N. Y. 167, 80 N. E. 1022. Contracts prepared for general use. Van Zandt v. Hanover Nat. Bk. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 127. Language by which a party binds himself must be taken most strongly against him. Linton v. Brownsville Land & Irrigation Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 433. Rule that written instrument is to be construed most strongly against writer is last rule to be resorted to, and never to be relied on except where other canons of construction fail. Empire Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Morris, 73 N. J. Law, 602, 65 A. 450.

41. Where contract is in fact understood by one party in certain sense, and other party knows that he so understands it, then it is to be taken in that sense provided this can be done without making new contract. Snead & Co. Iron Works v. Merchants' Loan & Trust Co., 225 Ill. 442, 80 N. E. 237. Letter held to be taken as part of contract in so far as it gave meaning to part of original draft of building contract. Id. Where terms of agreement have been intended in different sense by parties, that sense is to prevail against either party in which he had reason to suppose other understood it. Code Civ. Proc. § 341. Patterson v. First Nat. Bk. [Neb.] 110 N. W. 721. Held that, if plaintiff understood, and bank officials had reason to suppose she understood, president of bank was acting in its behalf in executing and delivering to her document, in return for her check, by which he directed bank to pay her specified sum at certain time, bank was bound by that understanding, though no active fraud was alleged or proven. Id. If admits of two inferences, should be interpreted in sense in which promisor had reason to suppose it was understood by promisee. Wahl v. Stoy [N. J. Eq.] 66 A. 176. When terms have been intended in different sense by parties, that sense is to prevail against either in which he supposed other understood it. B. & C. Comp. § 712. Portland Iron Works v. Willett [Or.] 89 P. 421.

42. B. & C. Comp. § 712. Portland Iron Works v. Willett [Or.] 89 P. 421.

43. Grant of water for power. Union Water Power Co. v. Lewiston, 101 Me. 564, 65 A. 67.

47. American Mercantile Exchange v. Blunt [Me.] 66 A. 212.

48. Presumed that if minds of parties met upon any other conditions, elements, or propositions, they were abandoned except as embodied in writing. Foster v. Lowe [Wis.] 110 N. W. 829. Such presumption can be overcome, if at all, only by very clearest proof. Id. Finding in action on land contracts that it had not been overcome, held not contrary to preponderance of evidence. Id.

49. Cool v. McDill, 38 Ind. App. 621, 73 N. E. 679; Empire Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Morris, 73 N. J. Law, 602, 65 A. 450; New Jersey Co.

upholding it should be preferred to one rendering it inoperative.<sup>50</sup> Provisions for forfeitures will be strictly construed and never helped out by implication.<sup>51</sup> Whether a given stipulation is to be deemed a condition precedent, a condition subsequent, or an independent agreement, is purely a question of intent.<sup>52</sup>

Provisions necessary to effectuate the evident intention may be supplied by implication,<sup>53</sup> and when so implied are as much a part of the contract as though expressed.<sup>54</sup> The law enters into and becomes a part of every contract.<sup>55</sup>

v. Nathaniel Wise Co., 105 N. Y. S. 231. Construction making contract reasonable, fair, and just, preferred to one making it unreasonable, unfair, or unusual and extraordinary, where susceptible with two constructions equally consistent with language used. Stein v. Archibald [Cal.] 90 P. 536. Should not be given unreasonable meaning, or one that would result in imposing hard or inequitable conditions, if reasonably susceptible of different meaning, doubt being resolved in favor of milder meaning in such case. Linton v. Brownsville Land & Irrigation Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 102 S. W. 433. Meaning should not be adopted which will make agreement absurd or so unreasonable that one could not fairly be thought to have so intended if different meaning can be found in the words which will avoid that result. Rust v. Fitzhugh [Wis.] 112 N. W. 508.

50. Cranes Nest Coal & Coke Co. v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 105 Va. 785, 54 S. E. 884. Contract held only to bind employee not to disclose process of which he obtained knowledge while in complainant's service, and hence not to be void as restraining him from following his chosen profession. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v. Nichols [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 695. Between two permissible constructions, that which establishes valid contract should be preferred to that which does not. Mebius & Drescher Co. v. Mills [Cal.] 88 P. 917. Deed will not be so construed as to render it nullity as to any of the parties thereto, if, by any reasonable construction, such result can be avoided. Beverlin v. Casto [W. Va.] 57 S. E. 411. If possible, construed as being made for legal rather than illegal purpose. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Kutter [C. C. A.] 147 F. 51. Particularly when attacked by party thereto who has been benefited thereby. Virginia Bridge & Iron Co. v. Crafts [Ga. App.] 58 S. E. 322. Written correspondence manifesting bona fide intention on both sides to come to definite agreement should, if possible, be so construed as to effectuate the general purpose, and so as to constitute rather than defeat an agreement. Empire Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Morris, 73 N. J. Law, 602, 65 A. 450.

54. Contract whereby plaintiff sold leasehold to defendant held not to entitle plaintiff to forfeiture because defendant had not paid certain lumber bill, ground rent, or insurance, or because he failed to pay interest on purchase price monthly. Tetley v. McElmurry, 201 Mo. 382, 100 S. W. 37. Where contract contains enforceable provision for forfeiture upon certain default after specified notice, in order for forfeiture to take place, must appear that notice was given in compliance with contract both as to time and contents, and that default therein specified occurred. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Haas, 127 Ga. 187, 56 S. E. 313.

52. To be derived from consideration of whole contract, nature of act required, and subject-matter to which it relates. Skowhegan Water Co. v. Skowhegan Village Corp. [Me.] 66 A. 714. Stipulation for supply of potable water and hydrant service held condition precedent which was to be strictly performed each six months before defendant city could be held liable to pay installment. Id. Making payment in advance held suspensive condition or condition precedent, so that obligation of lessor under oil and gas lease did not come into existence unless such payment was made. Jennings-Heywood Oil Syndicate v. Houssiere-Latreille Oil Co. [La.] 44 So. 481. Rendition of services in promotion of corporation held not condition precedent, but condition subsequent to conveyance of stock to it. Howe v. Howe & Owen Ball Bearing Co. [C. C. A.] 154 F. 820. Agreement not to protest application for patent for public land held condition subsequent. Roy v. Harney Peak Tin Min., Mill. & Mfg. Co. [S. D.] 110 N. W. 106.

53. Law will imply agreement to do what the contracting parties understood was to be done in order that other party may have benefits of contract, where equity and justice require it, even though there was no express agreement to that effect. Creamer v. Metropolitan Securities Co., 105 N. Y. S. 28.

Provisions implied: Court may supply words "per annum" after words "with interest at eight per cent" in note in exercise of its duty of construing contract. Brooks v. Boyd, 1 Ga. App. 678, 57 S. E. 1093. Contract whereby plaintiff was to construct machine for defendant held to contain implied provision that plaintiff would use reasonably suitable material and do reasonably skillful work, and, if machine was a failure because of plaintiff's failure to do so, defendant was not bound to pay cost of its construction, though contract provided that defendant should pay all expenses incurred in getting up said machine whether it finally met with its approval or not. Foote & Davies Co. v. Houchin Mfg. Co. [Ga. App.] 58 S. E. 368. Sale of defendant's interest in good will of dental business held to imply agreement that defendant would so practice his profession as not to destroy or injure business he had sold, so that he would be enjoined from practicing in city though was no express agreement not to do so. Foss v. Roby [Mass.] 81 N. E. 199. Where state contracted with defendant to print and manufacture certain volumes of the supreme court reports, and contract provided that plates should be delivered to and become property of state, held that law would imply agreement on part of defendant not to use manuscripts and plates for any purpose other than that contemplated in contract, and violation of such implied agreement would render defendant liable for value of such unauthorized use, and for any injury done to such property

If the contract is ambiguous, the court should put itself as nearly as possible in the position of the parties when it was made, and to that end may take into consideration the subject-matter, the purpose, situation, and conduct of the parties, and all the surrounding circumstances.<sup>56</sup> In such case the practical construction adopted by the parties themselves, while engaged in its execution, and before any controversy thereby. State v. State Journal Co. [Neb.] 110 N. W. 763. Contracts for sale of certain street car properties held to contain implied covenant requiring defendant to take action to exercise certain franchise in order that right to construct and operate railway under it might be tested in courts, and plaintiff was entitled to damages where defendants failed to comply with it until too late to secure action of court of appeals within time provided in contract, and franchise was forfeited. Creamer v. Metropolitan Securities Co., 105 N. Y. S. 28. Though contract for manufacture and sale of patented machines contained no special provision to that effect, held that it was implied duty of selling agent to exercise reasonable diligence and care in endeavoring to market same. Instructions approved. Wildman Mfg. Co. v. Adams Top Cutting Mach. Co. [C. C. A.] 149 F. 201.

Provisions not implied: Where literary matter intrusted to defendant to enable it to perform contract was not copyrighted and had been given to public and any citizen, therefore, had right to print and sell same on his own account, held that law would not imply agreement on defendant's part not to manufacture and sell volumes containing it on its own account, there being no such limitation in contract. State v. State Journal Co. [Neb.] 110 N. W. 763. Agreement by defendant to transfer certain lease to plaintiff on condition that assignee obtained new lease from trustees of lessor estate held not to contain implied covenant that lease and all renewals provided for therein were valid, nor could plaintiff hold defendant in case trustees were unwilling or unable to execute new lease. Pratt v. Clark, 118 App. Div. 633, 103 N. Y. S. 612. Contract whereby defendant employed plaintiff held not to carry with it any implication that plaintiff would serve defendants lessee, and attempted disposal of his services to latter did not prevent recovery for breach consequent upon lease. White v. Lumiere North American Co., 79 Vt. 206, 64 A. 1121. Covenants are implied only where it is clear that if attention had been called to them they would have been expressly agreed upon. Contract of agency held not to contain implied covenant that agent would not resign, or to preclude him from doing so after he had given business fair trial. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co. v. Ellsworth, 129 Wis. 349, 109 N. W. 125. Rule that law will imply that parties intended reasonable price when no price for goods is agreed upon held not to apply where was clear misunderstanding as to price, one party understanding it to be one sum and other party a different one. Estey Organ Co. v. Lehman [Wis.] 111 N. W. 1097.

54. Contract must be read and construed as if same were written therein. Howard v. Adkins, 167 Ind. 184, 78 N. E. 665. Breach of an implied agreement gives rise to cause of action same as though it had been expressed. Jones & Co. v. Gammel Statesman Pub. Co. [Tex.] 99 S. W. 701, 94 S. W. 191.

55. Where contract was unambiguous, held that it would be conclusively presumed that parties contracted with reference to Pol. Code, §§ 3209, 3222, prescribing standard of weights and measures and providing that contracts must be construed by such standard, and, contract providing for certain price per pound, extrinsic evidence of usage as to manner of computing weight of structural steel was inadmissible. Hale Bros v. Milliken [Cal. App.] 90 P. 365. Where there is agreement to pay interest, but no rate is stated, legal rate is implied. Patrick v. Kirkland [Fla.] 43 So. 969. Ordinance making it unlawful to use scales without having them inspected by inspector of weights and measures held part of contract whereby scale was sold under guaranty that it would weigh correctly, so that it was purchaser's duty to have same inspected. Wright v. Computing Scale Co. [Wash.] 91 P. 571. Interstate commerce act held part of contract between carrier and shipper to transport goods at then established rates for definite time, so that such contract is ineffective after higher rate has been filed and published as required by law. Armour Packing Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 153 F. 1.

arose, may be looked to to determine their intention.<sup>57</sup> Each party will be held to the construction that his own actions have put upon it when such acts operate as an admission against his interests.<sup>58</sup>

The foregoing rules are equally applicable to the interpretation of oral contracts, but in such case the question is usually what the terms of the contract were, rather than what was meant by the language used,<sup>59</sup> which is a question of fact.<sup>60</sup>

(§ 4) B. What is part of contract.<sup>61</sup>—Several writings constituting one contract are to be construed together.<sup>62</sup> Several agreements between the same parties executed at the time and as parts of the same transaction will ordinarily be construed together as though constituting a single instrument.<sup>63</sup> Provisions in other contracts between different parties may be regarded as part of the one in suit when evidently so intended.<sup>64</sup> Several contracts with different persons, all of which are parts of a single system, will be taken as a whole in determining whether they are illegal as in restraint of trade.<sup>65</sup> The question, however, is largely one of intention.<sup>66</sup>

Printed notices indorsed on the contract by one of the parties, but not referred to therein, are generally held to be no part thereof unless called to the attention of, and accepted by, the other party.<sup>67</sup> So, too, a notice restricting the title of the pur-

Court held to have properly reserved construction of power of attorney, on which validity of contract depended, until such time as situation of parties and surrounding circumstances should be revealed by evidence. Shaw v. Pope [Conn.] 67 A. 493. Held that negotiations leading up to making of contracts could be considered in determining whether they constituted sale of machinery or lease thereof. Lambert Hoisting Engine Co. v. Carmody, 79 Conn. 419, 65 A. 141.

plain ambiguities or technical terms, but not to vary or contradict the plain meaning of the language used.<sup>74</sup>

(§ 4) E. As to place, time, and compensation. Place.<sup>75</sup>—The place of performance is to be determined from the terms of the contract.<sup>76</sup>

Time.<sup>77</sup>—The time of performance<sup>78</sup> and the duration of the contract<sup>79</sup> are questions of intention, to be gathered from the language used. Where no time is fixed for performance, the law will imply that a reasonable time is to be allowed for that purpose.<sup>80</sup> As a general rule, if a contract calling for the rendition of services is so far incomplete that the period of its duration cannot be determined by a fair inference from its provisions, either party may terminate it at will on giving reasonable notice.<sup>81</sup> One having the right to perform on a specified day has the whole of that day in which to do so.<sup>82</sup>

Whether or not time is of the essence of a contract is largely a question of intention.<sup>83</sup> It is generally held not to be in equity unless made so by express provision

§ 5. Modification and merger.<sup>93</sup>—The parties to an executory contract may at pleasure and by mutual assent,<sup>94</sup> alter or modify it,<sup>95</sup> or substitute a new one therefor.<sup>96</sup> As a general rule no further consideration is necessary than the mutual assent of the parties,<sup>97</sup> though there seems to be some conflict of authority in this regard.<sup>98</sup> On breach of a contract to give a new note to supersede the original one on performance of certain acts by the payee, the remedy of the latter is by an action on the contract and not by an action on the original note.<sup>99</sup>

Written contracts, not under seal and not required by law to be in writing, may ordinarily be modified by parol.<sup>1</sup> A contract under seal can only be altered by one of equal dignity<sup>2</sup> or by an executed oral agreement.<sup>3</sup> The matter is regulated by statute in some states.<sup>4</sup>

92. For a full discussion of this question see Conflict of Laws 9 C. L. 596.

93. See 7 C. L. 806.

94. Neither party can alter or change contract without consent of other. Staunton v. Smith [Del.] 65 A. 593. Change for benefit of contractor with his consent cannot be pleaded as defense to his failure to complete contract. Adams v. Haigler [Ga. App.] 58 S. E. 330. Where contract employing school teacher did not provide that it should be void if she did not begin school on certain date, statement by school trustee to that effect after contract had been made held no part of contract. Turner v. Hampton, 30 Ky. L. R. 179, 97 S. W. 761. Where defendant failed to make cash payment requested, held that it could not be contended that it consented to modification of any alleged existing contract. Scaife & Sons Co. v. Standard Ice Co. [Wash.] 89 P. 882.

95. Executed oral agreement held to modify provisions of note as to interest. Righetti v. Righetti [Cal. App.] 90 P. 50. Evidence held to sustain finding that original agreement for sale of mining claims was modified by purchaser agreeing unconditionally to pay sum sued for in consideration of waiver of right of forfeiture by vendor. Hatch v. Gorlinski [Utah] 88 P. 406. Evidence held insufficient to show modification or abandonment of written contract by any oral agreement. Smith v. Miller, 17 Conn. 624, 66 A. 172.

96. Agreement to pay for extra work in digging cellar made necessary by substantial and unforeseen difficulties held to operate as waiver of rights and obligations of original contract, and substitution of those of new or modified contract therefor. Linz v. Schuck [Md.] 67 A. 286. Where plaintiff signed second contract and operated under it for nearly a year held that he could not thereafter claim that it did not take place of and supersede first. Proctor Coal Co. v. Strunk, 29 Ky. L. R. 995, 96 S. W. 603. Contract having been made when parties entered into oral agreement, held that paper afterwards given customer by broker did not, as matter of law, show rescission of that agreement and substitution of written contract. Picard v. Beers [Mass.] 81 N. E. 246. Written agreement by plaintiff to give defendant option on certain stock for four months held not to necessarily as matter of law show that former verbal agreement by plaintiff to purchase such stock on happening of certain contingency, which had happened, was thereby rescinded or merged in new agreement. Corey v. Woodin [Mass.] 81 N. E. 269. Offer, after tender of notes in accordance with contract had been refused, to pay additional sum in cash, and to substitute other securities for deferred payments, held not to amount to new contract or an abandonment of original one. Viker v. Lien, 99 Minn. 524, 109 N. W. 1135. Evidence held to require finding that written contract prohibiting physician from practicing in certain county was not set aside, canceled, and superseded by subsequent parol agreement. Baker v. Montgomery [Neb.] 110 N. W. 695. Evidence held insufficient to show waiver or substitution of new contract. Hesser v. Chicago & Welleston Coal Co. [C. C. A.] 151 F. 211.

97. Original consideration is imported into modification. Wisconsin Sulphite Fibre Co. v. Jeffris Lumber Co. [Wis.] 111 N. W. 237.

A subsequent contract which does not by express terms abrogate an earlier one will nevertheless operate as a discharge thereof if inconsistent therewith,<sup>5</sup> but, in so far as the two are consistent, they should be construed together.<sup>6</sup>

Merger<sup>7</sup> is generally a question of intention.<sup>8</sup> All prior and contemporaneous parol negotiations are presumed to have been merged in the written contract growing out of them.<sup>9</sup>

§ 6. Discharge by performance or breach. A. General rules.<sup>10</sup>—A breach arises on the unexcused<sup>11</sup> failure or refusal of one party to carry out his part<sup>12</sup> of an entire right to repudiate it at any time and demand performance in future in accordance with original contract. Napier v. Spielmann, 103 N. Y. S. 982.

4. Oral agreement altering agreement in writing is not valid unless executed. Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, § 781. Page v. Geiser Mfg. Co., 17 Okl. 110, 87 P. 851.

5. To do so must be clearly inconsistent with continued existence of original contract. Myers v. Carnahan, 61 W. Va. 414, 57 S. E. 134.

6. See, also, § 4 B, ante. Where new contract is made with reference to subject-matter of former one and contains provisions clearly inconsistent with certain of its provisions, obligations of original in so far as they are inconsistent with those of later contract will be abrogated and discharged, and two will be construed together, disregarding provisions of original which are inconsistent with those of the later. Myers v. Carnahan, 61 W. Va. 414, 57 S. E. 134. Written contracts executed and delivered at same time must, if possible, be so construed that they may stand together. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co. v. Ellsworth, 129 Wis. 349, 109 N. W. 125. Contracts dated on succeeding days held not so repugnant as to show intention that one should supersede other. Id.

12. Evidence held to sustain finding of breach of contract to furnish steel for building within specified time. Hale Bros. v. Milliken [Cal. App.] 90 P. 365. Evidence held to show that defendant did not substantially perform contract to care for parents in consideration of conveyance of land to him. Alvey v. Alvey, 30 Ky. L. R. 234, 97 S. W. 1106. Defendant agreed to purchase land from parties introduced to him by plaintiff if he found any that suited him, it being agreed that he was not to pay any commissions, but that plaintiff was to look to owners therefor. Defendant entered into contract to purchase land from company to whom plaintiff introduced him, but subsequently failed to perform. Held that defendant was liable to plaintiff for amount of commissions latter would have earned from company had defendant performed. Ellis v.
