c. Statutory Establishment.³⁰ By provisions of the charter or other statutes, it is provided in many jurisdictions that streets may be established by municipal proceedings based generally upon the consent of the property-owners or a majority thereof manifested by petition or election, or by other proceedings initiated by the municipality.³¹ Substantial compliance with the statutes is required to make the establishment valid.³² The proceeding is void where it does not definitely locate the street,³³ and orders for improvement along a new street are applicable only to such parts thereof as are really opened.³⁴ In the absence of any statute fixing the time within which a street shall be constructed after it is laid out and has been begun, the most that an abutter can claim is that it shall be built within a reasonable time or abandoned.³⁵

A street located on the campus of a university and on ground owned and controlled by the university, the use of which by the public has not been inconsistent with the university's private ownership thereof, is not a public street. *Bolster v. The mere use of a way for public travel, however extensive that use may be, is not sufficient to constitute such way a street, so as to impose upon the municipality the duty to repair it, where there is no evidence of some act of the municipality recognizing it as a street. *Tower v. Under Mass. Rev. Laws, c. 48, § 92, providing that the laying out of a street shall be void as against the owner of any land taken, unless possession is taken to construct the same within two years after the right to take possession accrues, it is only necessary that an entry to construct the street be made within the prescribed time, and it is not necessary

d. Municipal Recognition. While direct ordinance is the usual and proper form for establishing a street,³⁶ it may be effected indirectly by ordinance or resolution recognizing the dedication or existence of the street,³⁷ or by making repairs or improvements thereon.³⁸ But where such evidence is relied on it must be clear and unmistakable.³⁹

e. General Plan, Maps, Etc. Maps, plans, and plats, adopted, filed, or recorded, showing the location of streets, generally fix the existence and location thereof.⁴⁰ In some jurisdictions the plat must be recorded in the proper records.⁴¹

f. Existence Before Incorporation or Annexation of Territory. A public highway in rure, upon its inclusion by incorporation or annexation, within municipal boundaries, becomes ipso facto a street, and subject to municipal control.⁴² The municipality, however, takes the land and corporate responsibility that it be completed within that time, but the most that an abutting property-owner can claim is that it shall be built within a reasonable time or abandoned. McCarthy v. Boston St. Com'rs, 188 Mass. 338, 74 N. E. 659.

Effect of payment of taxes and assessments.—In a suit against a city to recover possession of real estate which was claimed by the city as part of its streets, the mere payment, without objection or protest, of taxes and assessments levied by the city thereon, is no proof of an adoption or ratification of the plat of the city with reference to which the levies and assessments were made. Sheridan v. Empire City, 45 Oreg. 296, 77 Pac. 393.

Approval.—A municipal ordinance directing that no plat of any addition to the city shall be approved when any part of the land is subject to a lien for city taxes or assessment is not an unreasonable regulation. Hillman v. Seattle, 33 Wash. 14, 73 Pac. 791.

Construction of reservations in plat.—The reservation in a plat of an addition to a city of the right to occupy streets for railroad purposes is only a reservation as against the city and cannot be used for purposes inconsistent with the dedication or which would modify it so far as purchasers of lands are concerned. Ward v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 62 Mich. 46, 28 N. W. 785; Riedinger v. Marquette, etc., R. Co., 62 Mich. 29, 28 N. W. 775.

g. Location and Extent—(1) IN GENERAL. The original survey and plan made or adopted by competent authority fixes the location and extent of the street,⁴⁴ and not the actual public use,⁴⁵ nor the arbitrary relocation by the municipality.⁴⁶ In some jurisdictions statutory proceedings are provided for to determine the courses and lines of streets.⁴⁷ Low water mark of navigable water is the usual terminus of a street on the water,⁴⁸ although a street bounded by a navigable stream is in some jurisdictions held to extend to the middle of the stream.⁴⁹ The right of the public to an easement for a highway cannot be divested by the municipality by submitting the extent of the easement to arbitration.⁵⁰ A statute providing that in all streets of a certain width sidewalks shall be constructed of a certain width not only prescribes the width of the sidewalk but by mere arithmetical computation prescribes the width of the roadway of such streets.⁵¹

(1) EXTENSION BEYOND SHORE LINE. When streets run to navigable water, the extension of the shore front by accretions or otherwise generally extends the street to the new water line;⁵² and this is so even when the street terminates in a bulkhead.⁵³

Effect of stipulations in contract for annexation.—A stipulation in the contract by which a village is annexed to a city, to the effect that all street grades previously established by the village authorities shall be respected, but may be altered, with the consent of the property-owners, upon payment of damages, only puts such street grades upon the same legal basis as those established by city authorities; and such grades are subject to change in the same manner, and upon the same conditions, as if they had been established in the first place by the city authorities. 54. Power of municipality to alter course course or width of a street is dependent upon the charter or general statutes.⁵⁵ Under many charters such changes may be made only by consent of the adjacent property-owners, or a certain majority thereof.⁵⁶ Straightening a curb line and setting back a pavement is not a change of location.⁵⁷ An ordinance is void which merely reduces the width of a street without designating what part shall remain.⁵⁸

h. Establishment and Change of Grade.⁵⁹ The grade of streets is fixed by the act of the council or other governing body authorized by charter.⁶⁰ In some states it may be fixed by mere resolution,⁶¹ while in others only by ordinance.⁶² In still other jurisdictions a street grade may be established by use alone without formal adoption by resolution or ordinance.⁶³ The grade of the traveled portion of a street controls for its entire width;⁶⁴ and when necessary all parts may be reduced to that grade without liability for injury to abutters.⁶⁵ Whether the municipality is liable for damage resulting to abutting owners from change of grade depends largely upon the charter and general statutes and the purpose of such change.⁶⁶ The manner in which changes of grade may be made is generally fixed by the provisions of the charter or other statutory provisions.⁶⁷ An ordinance establishing grades is not void for uncertainty if the grade so established can be ascertained without difficulty,⁶⁸ but an ordinance altering grades which does or width of street see infra, XIII, A, 2, c, (III).

What constitutes.—A mere resolution of a borough council, adopting a plan of a borough upon which the streets are represented, will not have the effect of widening or narrowing a street, where the existing lines do not conform to those laid down on the plot. Washington Borough v. Steiner, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 392. Where a borough ordinance widening a street is so vague in its language as to leave it uncertain whether the center line of the street was changed or not, but the evidence shows that the borough and its officials, and viewers appointed in damage proceedings, considered the line as unchanged and acted on that supposition, a finding by the court below that the line was in fact unchanged will not be reversed by the appellate court. Bieber v. Kutztown Borough, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 436. A municipal ordinance establishing building lines, on both sides of a public street, ten feet outside of the lines of the street as opened, is in effect a widening of the street by twenty feet. *Chester v. i. Vacation and Abandonment⁷⁰—(1) VACATION.⁷¹ Generally a municipality has the power to vacate existing streets and avenues.⁷² Whether such power will be exercised is generally discretionary with the municipality,⁷³ and such discretion will not be interfered with by the courts except where abused,⁷⁴ or the act is fraudulent,⁷⁵ or the proceedings are without jurisdiction.⁷⁶ The procedure to vacate must be in strict compliance with the statutory provisions relating thereto.⁷⁷ In some jurisdictions the procedure is by petition or consent of all or

* Motives.—Where the legislature has vested in a village board discretionary power to vacate streets and alleys of the village, the court will not ordinarily look into the motives influencing such board in doing a discretionary act. Bellevue v. Bellevue Imp. Co., 65 Nebr. 52, 90 N. W. 1002.

For benefit of abutting owners.—That vacation proceedings are had by a village board at the instance and request and primarily for the benefit of abutting owners, whose property would be benefited by such vacation, is not ground for declaring such vacation void. Bellevue v. Bellevue Imp. Co., 65 Nebr. 52, 90 N. W. 1002.

For depot purposes.—Where a city vacates certain streets and alleys for the purpose of conveying the land to a railroad company for depot purposes, in consideration of the company's abolishing certain grade crossings, the action of the city will not be disturbed where the vacation is ostensibly for the public good and no fraud is charged. Spitzer v. Runyan, 113 Iowa 619, 85 N. W. 782.

More inconvenience to a property-owner from the vacation of a street, which will also result to the general public, does not warrant injunctive relief. Hall v. Lebanon, 31 Ind. App. 265, 67 N. E. 703.

When complete.—The legal vacation of a street is complete when, in pursuance of an ordinance of councils properly authorizing the same, a new plan from which the street is omitted is duly confirmed. In re Butler St., 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 357.

Estoppel to rely on irregularity.—Although proceedings by a city to vacate an alley are not strictly regular, the city is thereafter estopped to claim title to the alley against one improving it in reliance on such vacation. Blennerhasset v. Forest City, 117 Iowa 680, 91 N. W. 1044.

Notice to abutters.—Lincoln v. Warren, 150 Mass. 309, 23 N. E. 45; People v. Shaw, 34 N. Y. App. Div. 61, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 218. That certain abutting property-owners affected by the vacation of a street, who have acquiesced in such vacation, were not given notice of the proposed vacation, is not ground for holding the ordinance vacating the street void. Bellevue v. Bellevue Imp. Co., 65 Nebr. 52, 90 N. W. 1002.

Second petition.—Where the common council of a city has, on a petition to vacate a street, vacated it on certain conditions, there is no ground for another petition to the circuit court, in the absence of any change in the condition of affairs subsequent to the making of the order by the common council. Detroit Real Estate Inv. Co. v. Wayne Cir. Judge, 137 Mich. 108, 100 N. W. 271.

Appeal.—Under the act of May 16, 1891 (Pamphl. Laws 75), relating to the laying out, opening, widening, straightening, etc., of the streets in the several municipalities of the commonwealth, an appeal will not lie to the common pleas from a petition for an ordinance for the vacation of a street or from the decision of the council that the petition is insufficient. Ebe's Appeal, 10 Pa. a majority of the abutting owners along the line of the street or alley.⁷⁸ Generally the vacation is properly effected by statute or ordinance,⁷⁹ although a resolution has been held a sufficient exercise of the legislative power.⁸⁰ But a street or alley is not vacated merely because of an ordinance declaring it vacated,⁸¹ since the abutting owners have property rights therein which cannot be taken from them by the mere passage of such an ordinance.⁸² Striking a street off the city plan and confirming a new plan on which the street is omitted has been held to constitute a legal vacation of the street.⁸³ The vacation of a county road, making a street a cul-de-sac, does not destroy the street as a highway.⁸⁴ A statute vacating certain streets with a proviso that certain streets in the addition named should not be affected does not have the effect of vacating the entire addition or detaching it from the city.⁸⁵

(ii) ABANDONMENT. The public rights in a street used as a public highway may be lost by abandonment.⁸⁶ But, except where it is otherwise provided by statute,⁸⁷

Constitutionality of statutes.—Inasmuch as a city has no proprietary interest in land embraced in a street, *Howell Annot. The rule that levying and enforcing the payment of taxes estops the municipality to claim the property applies when the absolute ownership of the property is involved when it is a contest between two conflicting titles, but does not apply when the rights of a third person, such as the public in its right to an easement, is involved, and hence a city cannot create an estoppel which will defeat the easement in a street belonging to the public by the levy and collection of a sewer tax upon the land as private property. *Busse v. destroy it as a highway.⁹⁶ In some states adverse possession by an individual or private corporation will bar the public rights in the street, the same as in the case of private ownership of private property;⁹⁷ but in a majority of jurisdictions the maxim nullum tempus occurrit regi exempts a municipality as a governmental trustee of public rights from the operation of the statute of limitations.⁹⁸ In some cases the possession of all or a part of a street by private persons has been protected on the theory of an estoppel of the municipality by acquiescence,⁹⁹ although in many other cases the doctrine of estoppel has been held not applicable.¹

j. Pleading.² The existence of a street may be pleaded without referring to the mode of its establishment;³ but, if pleaded as established in one way, proof is not admissible to show its establishment in another.⁴ The pleading must be definite and certain,⁵ but reasonable certainty is sufficient.⁶ The proof must correspond with the allegations and be confined to the point in issue.⁷

k. Evidence as to Existence or Location.⁸ Generally the burden of proof as to the existence or location of a street or alley rests upon the party having the affirmative of the issue as determined by the pleadings or the nature of the investigation.⁹ It is presumed that officers performed their sworn duty and that a street dedicated and used has been accepted,¹⁰ that a street was not widened before

The consent of the municipality will justify the opening the surface of the street as against the public, but not as against the owners of the soil, when done for matter's unconnected with the repair or improvement process of construction or repair of the street.⁴⁴ While the abutting owner has title to the soil and minerals in a street, where the streets are not owned by the municipality, subject only to the right of way possessed by the public,⁴⁵ he has no right, notwithstanding such ownership, to remove the soil or minerals for his own use,⁴⁶ except where excavated by the municipality for the purpose of improving the street and not used in improving the street or other streets.⁴⁷ A third person has no right to take minerals from beneath a street, where the title to the street is in the municipality, without the consent of the municipality; but where the municipality owns the street it may permit entry under its streets, provided such contracts do not impair their usefulness or render them dangerous, and in point of time do not exceed the legal existence of any street or alley.⁴⁸ But where the title to the street is in the abutting owner, the municipal authorities have no power to confer on a third person the right to take soil from the street for his use against the objections of the abutting owners.⁴⁹ Whether the materials used in paving a sidewalk belong to the municipality or to the abutting owners has been held to be dependent upon the facts or circumstances of the particular case.⁵⁰

d. Trees.⁵¹ Trees in the street belong to the abutting owner where he is the owner of the fee,⁵² who may remove them at his pleasure,⁵³ and is liable for injuries resulting from the existence thereof.⁵⁴ Where the municipality owns the fee in the streets it is the owner of trees therein.⁵⁵

public streets within its limits to the municipality⁶⁸ or to a particular city board,⁶⁹ and in such case the extent of the power depends upon charter or other statutory provisions.⁶⁰ When opened,⁶¹ streets are usually subject to the control and regulation of the municipality,⁶² subject to the paramount authority of the state.⁶³ But this does not preclude the paramount authority of the state to resume its power at will.⁶⁴ This municipal power, however, is liberally construed so as to effect the object of the grant,⁶⁵ and authorizes control of the entire length and breadth of the street;⁶⁶ also above and below the surface as far as any proper

Rep. 10; State v. Jersey City, 37 N. J. L. 348; Jersey City v. Central R. Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 417, 2 Atl. 262.

Exclusive right to control.—In some jurisdictions, under particular charters or statutes, the city is given the exclusive right to control and regulate the use of the streets therein. Kerney v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., 86 Mo. App. 573; Milhau v. Sharp, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 435; Cincinnati Inclined-Plane R. Co. v. Cincinnati, 5 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 562, 7 Ohio N. P. 541. A municipal corporation which is empowered by its charter to regulate its streets, and to prescribe the manner of their use by any person or corporation, has exclusive power to determine in the first instance how the space within the bounds of the highway shall be appropriated to the varied uses of the highway. Butt v. Camden Horse R. Co., 61 N. J. L. 543, 48 Atl. 1028 [affirmed in 63 N. J. Eq. 804, 52 Atl. 1130]. But the fact that a city is charged with the duty of keeping its streets in repair, and that the cost of maintaining them is raised by public taxation within the city, does not give it jurisdiction over them exclusive of that of the legislative assembly. State v. Red Lodge, 30 Mont. 338, 76 Pac. 758.

New uses.—The general power to regulate the use of streets is not confined to public uses common and known at the time of the dedication but extends to new uses as they spring into existence. St. Louis v. Bell Tel. Co., 96 Mo. 623, 10 S. W. 197, 9 Am. St. Rep. 370, 2 L. R. A. 278.

Injunction as dispossessing city of its streets.—A temporary order of injunction, restraining a city and its officers from interfering with a telephone company or from obstructing or prohibiting the sending of messages over its wires until the further order of the court, is not void on the ground that it dispossesses the city of its streets or takes from it the authority to regulate and control the use thereof. State v. Baker, 62 Nebr. 840, 88 N. W. 124.

66. Frankfort v. Coleman, 19 Ind. App. 368, 49 N. E. 474, 65 Am. St. Rep. 412.

Sidewalks.—The authority of a city over the streets extends over the sidewalks as a part thereof. Frankfort v. Coleman, 19 Ind. App. 368, 49 N. E. 474, 65 Am. St. Rep. 412. The council of a city may prescribe by resolution that portion of the street which shall be used as a sidewalk. Cox v. Lancaster, street use may require,⁶⁷ but not beyond the street line.⁶⁸ And this is not limited by the habendum clause of a deed conveying land for street purposes,⁶⁹ nor the omission to enact proper by-laws.⁷⁰ The power is preventive and punitive as well as permissive,⁷¹ but must be retained and used for the public good.⁷²

b. Municipal Boards and Officers.⁷³ Control and regulation of streets may be conferred upon particular municipal boards or officers either by direct legislative action,⁷⁴ or municipal ordinance under charter power.⁷⁵ The authority thus conferred may be plenary or partial;⁷⁶ but it is not delegable and must be exercised personally by the board or officer;⁷⁷ and assumption by another is invalid.⁷⁸ Over some spaces, such as the crossing of streets and boulevards, there may be double jurisdiction by separate boards or officers.⁷⁹ Where control of a street is relinquished by a city to certain officers, who are not thereafter disturbed in their possession and the making of improvements for many years, their right is not subject to attack on the ground that the transfer by the city was informal.⁸⁰

c. Particular Regulations—(1) *PROHIBITING OBSTRUCTIONS IN GENERAL.*⁸¹ A municipality ordinarily has the power to prohibit the obstruction of streets,⁸²

82. Terre Haute v. Turner, 36 Ind. 522; Duluth v. Mallett, 43 Minn. 204, 45 N. W. 154 (holding that a charter authorizing ordinances to prevent the encumbering of streets with carriages authorized an ordinance to prevent the obstruction by railroad cars); Burger v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 112 Mo. 238, 20 S. W. 439, 34 Am. St. Rep. 379 (holding that under charter power to control streets and to pass any ordinance usual or necessary for the well being of the inhabitants, the municipality had power to limit the time trains might block a street crossing).

Awnings.—Municipal power to prevent the encumbrance of streets includes power to and to fix a penalty for violation thereof;⁸³ and ordinarily the determination of the common council that certain things are obstructions cannot be reviewed.⁸⁴ The municipal power to prevent the obstruction of streets and alleys does not extend, however, to settling the title to lands or fixing the proper location of the street lines.⁸⁵

(II) *TREES.*⁸⁶ The municipality has control over trees in the streets,⁸⁷ which is not divested by a license to abutters to set out and care for shade trees,⁸⁸ nor by permission given a street car company to operate its cars through the streets.⁸⁹ And abutters are not bound to care for the trees planted on the sidewalk by the municipality, in the absence of any statute or municipal regulation imposing that duty upon them.⁹⁰ Injuries to trees may be prohibited by the municipality,⁹¹ but power to regulate the planting and protection of shade trees does not include the power to compel an abutter to cut down and remove them.⁹²

(III) *REGULATION OF USE BY FRANCHISE-HOLDING CORPORATION.*⁹³ The measure of municipal power to regulate the use of streets by quasi-public corporations, chartered by the state to supply the public with water, light, conveyance, heat, information, and other conveniences, depends largely upon the construction of charters and statutes, by which the state confers such franchises on the companies and delegates its own power of regulation thereof to the municipalities.⁹⁴ Three fundamental principles are recognized as the basis of settlement of the frequent contentions arising over such regulation, viz.: (1) The state has plenary power to regulate all quasi-public corporations, after as well as before their organization, in the exercise of their public functions;⁹⁵ (2) this power may be delegated to municipalities either by charter or general law;⁹⁶ and (3) the power to regulate does not authorize prohibition,⁹⁷ although a license-fee may be charged to compensate for regulation.⁹⁸ Under these rules a municipality may enact and enforce all reasonable regulations for the protection of the public as to the manner in which the streets shall be used.⁹⁹ For instance it has been held that a municipiprohibit as well as remove awnings over a sidewalk or posts to support them. Fox v. Winona, 23 Minn. 10.

Excavations.—The municipality may forbid excavations in any street without a permit from the municipality. Edgewood Borough v. Scott, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 156. See also French v. Jones, 191 Mass. 522, 78 N. E. 118, 7 L. R. A. N. S. 525.

Placing articles on sidewalk.—The placing of any articles or material upon a sidewalk, and suffering them to remain there, which interferes with the right to use it, or any part of it, constitutes a violation of an ordinance prohibiting the placing of any articles or materials on any sidewalk so as to incommode or obstruct the free passage or use thereof, and proof that any person had been actually interfered with or obstructed in his use of the sidewalk is unnecessary. *People v. pality may prohibit a company from laying pipes in the street without the consent of the municipality,¹ or during the winter months;² may regulate the limits in a street where the track of a railroad company shall be laid,³ make any reasonable and necessary regulation as to the manner in which the tracks of the railroad company shall be constructed and the condition in which they shall be maintained,⁴ or prohibit the use of steam power for railroads along the streets;⁵ or may prohibit the erection of poles in the street without obtaining authority from the council,⁶ or require all work of construction and repair to be done under municipal direction and supervision.⁷ On the other hand, municipal regulations must not unreasonably interfere with the exercise of the company's franchise;⁸ and it has been held that prohibiting the digging up of the surface of any street except by permission of the council, as applied to a railroad company laying its track across a street within its located right of way;⁹ or prohibiting a gas company from laying its pipes along the city street,¹⁰ or from opening a paved street to lay pipes from the main to the opposite side of the street;¹¹ or limiting the time within which such work shall be done,¹² is unreasonable and invalid.

person having charge of any hackney carriage shall stand with it to solicit passengers in any place other than the place assigned to it;¹⁹ and the use of streets by hucksters and other vendors may be limited to certain streets.²⁰ An ordinance is not unreasonable which prohibits any person from making excavations in a highway until he has obtained a permit from the authorities, where it imposes no unreasonable conditions as to the manner in which the excavations shall be made and the street repaired, and imposes no charge for such permit not grossly disproportionate to the expense of issuing it and the probable expense of proper inspection and police surveillance.²¹ Reasonableness is for the judge and not the jury to decide.²²

e. Conflicting Jurisdiction of Counties.²³ Except where otherwise provided by statute,²⁴ county authorities have no jurisdiction over streets in a city.²⁵

f. Names of Streets. In some jurisdictions it has been held that a city council cannot change the name of a street where no good cause exists therefor except upon the petition of abutting property-owners.²⁶

5. USE BY MUNICIPALITY FOR PURPOSE OTHER THAN HIGHWAY.²⁷ A municipality may use a street for any purpose not inconsistent with its use as a highway.²⁸ For instance it may lawfully use the streets for the construction of sewers,²⁹ or for drainage,³⁰ or to lay gas or water pipes,³¹ or to erect poles and string wires for electric lights,³² or construct a wharf at the terminus of a street,³³ or convert a promenade into wharves,³⁴ or set apart for a boulevard a portion of a street not devoted to business purposes.³⁵ But it cannot appropriate the street for any use entirely inconsistent with street purposes;³⁶ and hence it cannot construct buildings in a street which materially interfere with its use as a highway,³⁷ such as a public market,³⁸ nor rent out a space along the curb to the obstruction of travel or of access to abutting property,³⁹ nor erect a stand-pipe or water-tank.⁴⁰ So a municipality has no right to erect on a street a permanent structure not aiding public travel and which injuriously affects the beneficial enjoyment of his premises by an abutter.⁴¹ Injunction is the proper remedy to prevent an improper use of the streets by the municipality.⁴²

6. CARE OF STREETS — a. In General.⁴³ Notwithstanding the irreconcilable difference of opinion as to municipal liability to private action for negligence in performance of its function as keeper of highways, all courts agree that the common law requires every municipal corporation to exercise reasonable care to make and keep its streets safe for all ordinary uses for which they are open to the public.⁴⁴ What is reasonable care is a question of fact dependent upon the character and situation of the street or alley, and the standard of repair for it and for the vicinity,⁴⁵ and must necessarily depend, within proper limits, largely upon the municipal discretion.⁴⁶ Being taken for streets, they must be made and kept suitable for their primary use as public highways,⁴⁷ even though subject to a superior servitude,⁴⁸ to the end that the public may enjoy its rights.⁴⁹

b. Street Work by Inhabitants.⁵⁰ Generally a municipality may compel road work by its inhabitants or the payment of money in lieu thereof;⁵¹ and may provide for the imposition of a fine or imprisonment in case of default on the part of able-bodied male inhabitants.⁵² Statutes or ordinances, in some jurisdictions, exempt certain persons because of age, bodily infirmity, or other reasons, from the duty to perform such labor.⁵³ And the propriety of requiring persons not able-bodied to perform street labor or pay money in lieu thereof in common with other citizens is a question of policy to be settled by the legislative department.⁵⁴ One who claims an exemption must prove his immunity.⁵⁵

c. Cleaning Streets. Statutes are in force in some states regulating municipal contracts for street cleaning.⁵⁶ Generally, by statute or ordinance, the contract must be let to the lowest bidder after advertising for proposals.⁵⁷ The expense may be assessed on the abutting owners as a special benefit;⁵⁸ but the city is liable for the labor done by employees of its street inspector.⁵⁹

d. Street Sprinkling. The sprinkling of streets, materially conducing to health and comfort, is an appropriate municipal function; but there is a considerable conflict of opinion as to whether the sprinkling is a "local improvement" so as to be chargeable upon the property by special assessment.⁶⁰ An ordinance requiring Tavares, 37 Fla. 58, 19 So. 170, holding that a provision that a city shall regulate the construction and repair of streets does not grant authority for the passage of an ordinance requiring citizens to labor on streets.

Involuntary servitude.—Such statutes and ordinances are not unconstitutional as being involuntary servitude imposed upon persons not convicted of crime. State v. Topeka, 36 Kan. 76, 12 Pac. 310, 59 Am. Rep. 529.

Validity of ordinance.—Where the charter authorized the council to require the citizens to work on the streets not exceeding ten days in each year, an ordinance is not void as delegating legislative power in not failing to fix the number of days that each man should work, but leaving that matter to the overseer of streets. So an ordinance imposing the duty only upon citizens between the ages of twenty-one and forty-five years is valid, although the charter gave the municipality authority to require all male citizens between the ages of twenty-one and fifty to work on the streets. Tipton v. Norman, 72 Mo. 380.

Municipalities to which statute applicable.—The act of Illinois of May 31, 1879, providing for labor in the streets and alleys of "all cities and villages" in the state, applies to those organized under special charters, and repeals the provisions of special charters inconsistent therewith. Wahl v. Nanvoo, 64 Ill. App. 17.

Defenses.—In a proceeding by a town against a resident for failure to work on the streets of the town when summoned, or to pay the commutation tax, that defendant paid the tax to his employer, who had a contract with the town whereby the town was to allow him the tax from a certain number of his employees in consideration of his keeping a certain street in repair, defendant being aware that the town had refused to be bound by the contract, is no defense. Morris v. Greenwood, 73 Miss. 430, 19 So. 105.

Conditions precedent.—Where the charter provided that any person required to work may relieve himself therefrom by paying not more than one dollar for each day of work required and imposes a penalty for failure to work and pay, the municipality must prescribe the sum which the citizen should pay not to exceed one dollar a day before any penalty could be imposed for default. *Baader v. Statute as mandatory.—The statute providing that "the Board of Supervisors are hereby authorized and empowered to have the streets of said city and county [of San Francisco] kept clean in the following manner," is not mandatory, as making it the absolute duty of the board to adopt the system which they are therein authorized to inaugurate. *Weed v. Where the vote of a town appropriating money for watering streets contains an express reference to St. (1895) c. 186, authorizing such an appropriation, and states that the money is appropriated under that act, street car companies to sprinkle so that no dust will be raised by a passing car is invalid where it requires sprinkling in all seasons and fixes an oppressive penalty for failure so to do.⁶¹

e. Removal of Ice and Snow. Ordinances requiring abutters under penalty to remove ice and snow from their sidewalks are held invalid in some jurisdictions,⁶² while in others they are sustained.⁶³ Such provisions, where proper, may be confined to sidewalks of a certain class, although but a small part of the sidewalks in the municipality.⁶⁴ Where the statute authorizes a municipality to establish such rules and regulations as to the removal of snow and ice from the tracks of street railways as in their judgment the convenience of the public may require, the municipality may prohibit the removal of snow and ice from any part or the whole of the road, although such prohibition compels the temporary disuse of the tracks.⁶⁵

7. ABUTTING OWNERS ⁶⁶ — a. In General. An abutting owner has two distinct kinds of rights in the street — the public one which he enjoys in common with all citizens,⁶⁷ and private rights which arise from his ownership of contiguous property.⁶⁸ Among the private rights are the right of free and unimpeded ingress

the plain meaning of the vote is that the provisions of the act are to be applied in regard to the expenditure that is authorized, and, in the absence of anything limiting the amount of the assessment, the fair inference is that the whole cost is to be assessed on the estates which abut upon the streets that are watered. Phillips Academy v. Andover, 175 Mass. 118, 55 N. E. 841, 48 L. R. A. 550.

A. 178; Vandyke v. Cincinnati, 1 Disn. (Ohio) 532, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 778, holding that where a penalty is prescribed for non-performance of the duty, it does not subject the party to a civil action at the suit of a private owner. See also People v. Mattimore, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 448.

The duty may be imposed upon tenants as well as owners. Easthampton v. Hill, 162 Mass. 302, 38 N. E. 502; Com. v. Watson, 97 Mass. 562. Where the tenants of two tenement buildings agree with the owner to clear snow from the sidewalk, and no limits are fixed as to how much each shall attend to, the removal of one tenant does not impose upon the remaining one the duty of attending to the sidewalk in front of the tenement so vacated; the town by-law providing that if there be no tenant of premises it shall be the duty of the owner to clear the sidewalk. Easthampton v. Hill, supra.

Applicability to cross walks.—The walk in front of an alley way is a cross walk, and hence a city ordinance requiring persons to remove snow and ice from a sidewalk in front of premises owned or occupied by them within four hours after the fall thereon has no application thereto. Moran v. New York, 98 N. Y. App. Div. 301, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 596.

Real estate agents whose agency is restricted to the collection of rents of property or the soliciting and submission of offers to purchase are not within a statute requiring the owner, agent, or tenant of real estate to remove snow and ice from paved sidewalks in front of their property, and are therefore not liable to the penalties of that statute. *Holtzman v. The proprietors of town lots bounded on a dedicated street have a private right in the street distinct from the claim of the public, which even the legislature cannot take away, unless to appropriate to a public use and with compensation, and for an obstruction or injury of which such proprietors may have an action. Tate v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 7 Ind. 479; Haynes v. Thomas, 7 Ind. 38; Indianapolis v. Croas, 7 Ind. 9.

Effect of transfer.—A conveyance of lots to a railway company "for railway purposes" is not to be construed as covenanting that the street on which the lots abut, to the center line thereof, may be used for such purposes, while it remains a street, so as to interfere with any easement constituting a private right of property which the grantor may have therein, appurtenant to other property abutting on the same street. Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 71, 47 N. W. 455, 10 L. R. A. 268.

The city of New York, although occupied by the Dutch, was always English territory; and hence the "Bowery," a street alleged to have been dedicated during the Dutch occupancy, is governed by the rules of the common law, and not by the civil law, as to the rights of abutting owners. Hine v. New York El. R. Co., 54 Hun 425, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 464; Mortimer v. New York El. R. Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 244, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 898; Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 8 N. Y. Extent of right of view.—An owner of property abutting on a street has a right of view, not only in front of his property, but as to the entire length of the street. Montgomery First Nat. Bank v. Tyson, 144 Ala. 457, 39 So. 560.

A structure connecting two buildings on opposite sides of a street, built so far above the street as not to interfere with traffic thereon, is a nuisance as to adjacent property-owners, whose light it obstructs. Townsend v. Epstein, 93 Md. 537, 49 Atl. 629, 86 Am. St. Rep. 441, 52 L. R. A. 409.

Extent of right.—Purchasers of lots with reference to a plat showing certain streets are not limited to the portion in front of the lots purchased by them with reference to their right to have such streets kept open. In-ting owner has no title to the land in the street, he has an easement therein.⁷² An abutter's particular proprietary rights begin with those of the public when the street is opened to use.⁷³ On the other hand, to protect the public easement in streets and alleys, certain restrictions are necessarily imposed upon abutters. The general rule is that while they may use the street in any manner not inconsistent with the right of the public,⁷⁴ they cannot so use it as to interfere with the public easement,⁷⁵ or unreasonably interfere with the rights of an adjacent property-owner.⁷⁶ The right of the public to use the streets for purposes of travel

The proprietor of a hotel who owns the fee to the middle of the street has no right to the exclusive use of the street next to the sidewalk for his private hacks and those of his guests. Montgomery v. Parker, 114 Ala. 118, 21 So. 452, 62 Am. St. Rep. 95.

Grant by abutters.—Property-owners abutting on a public street cannot by consent or lease grant to private individuals the right to occupy any portion of such street in such manner as substantially and permanently to obstruct travel thereon. Pagames v. Chicago, 111 Ill. App. 590.

Who may question.—Whether an abutter's use of a street in which he owns the fee impairs the right of the public is primarily a question for the corporate authorities granting him the privilege; and their discretion, if not abused, will not be controlled by injunction at suit of a citizen not owning property abutting on the street. Hanbury v. Woodward Lumber Co., 98 Ga. 54, 26 S. E. 477. The appropriation, by custom or ordinance, of a street near a railroad freight house to the use of teams in loading and unloading merchandise is a proper public use of the street of which a mere trespasser cannot complain. General Electric R. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 107 Fed. 771, 46 C. C. A. 629.

An abutter cannot close the street.—Griffiths v. Galindo, 86 Cal. 192, 24 Pac. 1025.

Collecting crowd.—An abutting owner is liable as for a nuisance, where he gives away refuse causing the street to be obstructed by teams remaining there for an unreasonable time to obtain a load, although the abutter is not the owner and has no control over such teams. People v. Cunningham, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 524, 43 Am. Dec. 709.

and transportation is the paramount one and that of the abutter to occupy them for other purposes is a permissive and subordinate one.⁷⁷ Appropriation by a municipality of an easement in land abutting on the street does not divest the owner of his dominion over the property subject to the easement.⁷⁸

b. Use of Sidewalk.⁷⁹ The sidewalk is a part of the street,⁸⁰ and an abutter has no more rights therein than in the roadway.⁸¹ His right to use the sidewalk is limited to such use as will not obstruct its use by the public as a thoroughfare,⁸² and must not only be reasonable and consistent with the rights of the public,⁸³ but must also not injure the property of an adjoining owner.⁸⁴ The use may be specifically regulated by reasonable ordinances.⁸⁵ And a by-law forbidding the use of more than a specified number of feet of sidewalk in any way is a license to the abutter for that width.⁸⁶

c. Building Lines and Character of Buildings.⁸⁷ Building lines fixed by lawful authority must be observed by an abutting owner;⁸⁸ and, unless authorized by statute or ordinance, he cannot build beyond the street line.⁸⁹ The right to build up to the line is subject to the police power of the municipality,⁹⁰ under which a building line back from the street may for sufficient cause be established by reasonable ordinance on due notice.⁹¹ The maximum height of buildings may also be fixed by statute or ordinance.⁹² An ordinance prohibiting the use of barbed-wire fences on any street or alley has been held unreasonable as to an abutter whose fence was built back of the street line a considerable time before the passage of the ordinance.⁹³

Adoption and alteration of line.—The street commissioner cannot merely by virtue of his office adopt by agreement with an owner the conventional line as the boundary of a street; but where a line has been recognized on the faith of former surveys as the true boundary by persons building on the street, it will not be altered upon the authority of a subsequent survey in an individual case. Vicksburg v. Marshall, 59 Miss. 563.

Establishment.—Where a building line on a certain street was established by a common council under authority of the charter, and no appeal was taken therefrom by any of the property-owners, but the same was recognized by the inhabitants as valid for ten years, a presumption arises that the line was properly established. *State v. the municipality or in the abutters, extends as far above the surface as the public use demands;⁹⁴ and the municipality, as trustee for the public, must protect that use,⁹⁵ and cannot surrender or grant to any private person the right to obstruct it,⁹⁶ although temporary and small encroachments are held to be properly permitted under certain restrictions, where authorized by, and not in conflict with, statutory or charter provisions.⁹⁷ It follows that an abutting owner cannot ordinarily erect and maintain permanent structures encroaching on the street, such as awnings, bay windows, stairways, porches, etc.⁹⁸ A by-law restricting such encroachments is in effect a license pro tanto.⁹⁹ But a license from the city, being a declaration of merely public right, is no protection to a licensee encroaching upon private rights of abutting or adjacent owners.¹ Nor does mere acquiescence, or lapse of time, confer a license.² Summary removal or demolition of mere encroachments cannot ordinarily be effected by ordinance.³ Under these general rules ordinances authorizing,⁴ or regulating,⁵ awnings, or prohibiting the erection of signs or awning sheds across the whole or any portion of sidewalks;⁶ or permitting,⁷ prohibiting,⁸ or regulating,⁹ bay, bulk, and oriel windows; or permitting projecting stoops or verandas,¹⁰ have been held valid. An ordinance forbidding the hanging out of goods, wares, and merchandise has been held not to apply to a temporary scaffold a considerable distance back from the street.¹¹

e. Excavations, Vaults, and Other Substructures. Ordinarily excavations, vaults, cellar ways, areas, and the like are an obstruction and a nuisance,¹² and the municipality has no authority to license such use.¹³ The authority to construct vaults under sidewalks, or to make openings therein for a cellar way, or to include an area within the line of a street, is not an incident of ownership of the adjacent premises, or implied from such ownership, however convenient or even necessary the exercise of such an authority may be to their full enjoyment.¹⁴ An abutting owner has no special rights below the surface in streets the fee of which is held by the municipality.¹⁵ But there are cases where such a use of the street by an abutter is held proper where he owns the fee of the street and the use does not interfere in any way with travel upon the roadway or sidewalk.¹⁶ Where,

But an ordinance revoking a license authorizing awnings over a sidewalk, where they have existed for many years, is prima facie valid. Augusta v. Burum, 93 Ga. 68, 19 S. E. 820, 26 L. R. A. 340.

Projection of bay windows.—The board of aldermen of the city of New York had no power to pass General Ordinance 1303, authorizing the projection of bay windows attached to buildings beyond the "set-back" line, in violation of an agreement of property-owners establishing such line for the purpose of widening the sidewalk and street. *Williams v. A. 398], holding, where an excavation under a sidewalk in a city is made by the owner of the abutting premises, and the excavation is covered with flagstones, with the consent of the municipal authorities, the owner is not guilty of maintaining a nuisance so long as the space is securely covered. See also Fisher v. Thirkell, 21 Mich. 1, 4 Am. Rep. 422, holding that excavations properly constructed under the public streets in cities for the convenience of the owners of adjoining premises are not nuisances, if kept in repair, where the use of the street is not interrupted for an unreasonable time.

Liability for injury to city.—One who, by excavating beneath the sidewalk opposite to his lot, injures a cistern under the public highway, cannot be held liable in an action by the city to recover damages. Dubuque v. Maloney, 9 Iowa 450, 74 Am. Dec. 358.

by legislative authority, such use may be granted by the municipality,¹⁷ the municipality may impose reasonable conditions and forbid such excavations or occupation until such conditions are fully complied with.¹⁸ An abutting owner cannot, by mere user, acquire a vested right therein against the public;¹⁹ but the lapse of time may raise a presumption of a license,²⁰ which, however, may be rebutted by proof.²¹ Where a company holding a franchise injures the authorized underground construction of an abutting owner, the company is ordinarily liable in damages.²² Of course prohibiting construction and excavation except under certain conditions impliedly authorizes the construction where not in violation of such ordinance.²³

Exclusive use.—One who, on being required to drain his lot, lays a sewer along the street with the permission of the municipality, has a right to the exclusive use of the sewer, and other property-owners have no right to make connections therewith. Carroll v. Connor, 93 N. Y. Suppl. 1077.

Repairs.—Where an abutter has obtained a permit to construct a vault under a sidewalk, he has the right to repair it without an additional permit or further compensation, provided its continuance will not affect the use of the street by the public. Deshong v. New York, 176 N. Y. 475, 68 N. E. 880 [affirming 74 N. Y. App. Div. 234, 77 N. Y. Suppl. 563].

Assessments.—An ordinance directing that applicants should be assessed a certain amount for the privilege of building vaults in front of their dwellings is not within police powers of a municipality nor within the charter provisions authorizing the regulation of the building of vaults. Benson v. Hoboken, 33 N. J. L. 280.

License.—A coal hole in a sidewalk, unless licensed, is a nuisance. Clifford v. Dam, 44 N. Y. Super. Ct. 391 [affirmed in 81 N. Y. 52].

Construction of ordinance.—Ordinances requiring depressions and excavations within a city which are below the natural or artificial grades of the surrounding or adjacent streets to be filled or fenced, and prescribing penalties for failure to comply with other requirements, apply only to places that are in such close proximity to the highway as to endanger the safety of travelers thereon. A municipal ordinance requiring persons making, or causing to be made, excavations in or adjoining any street, alley, or public place to fence them does not apply to one who purchases property with excavations already upon it. Moran v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 134 Mo. 641, 36 S. W. 659, 56 Am. St. Rep. 543, 33 L. R. A. 755.

Duty of abutter.—A person constructing and maintaining an area in front of a building in accordance with an ordinance authorizing the construction of areas under certain prescribed conditions is under an obligation to use reasonable care to provide against accidents to persons using the street, and this duty requires not only that the area be properly constructed in the first instance, but that it be inspected and repaired. Devine v. National Wall Paper Co., 95 N. Y. App. Div. 194, 88 N. Y. Suppl. 704 [affirmed in 182 N. Y. 565, 75 N. E. 1127].

19. Patten v. New York El. R. Co., 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 306.

Revocable license.—One, by constructing a vault into a street, and maintaining it without a permit, when ordinances require one, acquires, against the public, only a revocable license. Deshong v. New York, 74 N. Y. App. Div. 234, 77 N. Y. Suppl. 563 [affirmed in 176 N. Y. 475, 68 N. E. 880].

Suppl. 563], holding that the presumption that a vault under a sidewalk was constructed with the assent of the public authorities arises where the vault has existed for more than twenty years without objection, both as between the owner and a third person, and also as between the owner and the municipality, if there is no proof to overcome it.

Length of time.—The consent of a city to the construction of a vault under the sidewalk in front of a business block may be inferred from the acquiescence for nine years of the public officers in charge of the streets. Babbage v. Powers, 130 N. Y. 281, 29 N. E. 132, 14 L. R. A. 398.

f. Access to Roadway. Abutting owners have an indefeasible right of access to and from their property to the street.²⁴ This right is held subject only to the power of eminent domain.²⁵ But this right extends no further than until the street upon which the property abuts reaches some other connecting street or

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1445.

The closing of an unimproved street, which is impassable for vehicles, so as to compel an abutting landowner to take a circuitous route to reach his premises, is actionable. Sheedy v. Union Press Brick Works, 25 Mo. App. 527.

Dumping slag causing circuitous travel.—The owner of property abutting on a street, who is compelled by reason of the dumping of slag in the street to take a circuitous route along other streets in traveling between his property, is entitled to injunctive relief as suffering special damages from a public nuisance. Sloss-Sheffield Steel, etc., Co. v. Johnson, 147 Ala. 384, 41 So. 907, 8 L. R. A. N. S. 226.

To entitle a lessee of property bounded on a street to recover for obstruction of the street, his lease need not extend to the middle of the street. All that is required is his right to have the street kept open and unobstructed to afford means of access to his building and the enjoyment of light and air from the unobstructed street. Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 10 N. Y. St. 12.

Streets included.—Where one purchased a plotted parcel of land bounded by laid out and dedicated streets, such streets as he obtains the right to the use of are those which bound the block in which the land is situated, or such as furnish access to the same from either direction. Highbarger v. Milford, 71 Kan. 331, 80 Pac. 633.

Closing street.—Purchasers of lots sold with reference to a plat showing certain streets are not entitled to enjoin the closing of streets by the owner of the land, in the absence of a showing that they would be specially injured by such action. Thorpe v. Clanton, (Ariz. 1906) 85 Pac. 1061. So a property-owner on a street or alley, a portion of which, other than the part on which he abuts, is vacated by the city council, has no right to enjoin the obstruction of the vacated portion by the owners to whom it reverted, where he has reasonable access to his property by other streets and alleys, although the distance he may have to travel in some directions may be greater than before the vacation. Kinnear Mfg. Co. v. Beatty, 65 Ohio St. 264, 62 N. E. 341, 87 Am. St. Rep. 600.

Grants to railroad company.—As against an objecting abutter, a city cannot grant to a railroad company the right to lay its tracks in an alley twenty feet wide, and stand cars thereon for twelve hours at a time, for the convenience of the other abutters, since it would unreasonably interfere with the use of the alley by the public in general, and with the right of access of the objecting abutter. Corby v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 150 Mo. 457, 52 S. W. 282.

Duty of municipality to construct approaches.—This right of access does not, however, require municipalities to construct approaches from the houses or lots of the abutters to the traveled part of the street or to grade the street up to the lines of the abutting property. Atty.-Gen. v. Boston, 186 Mass. 209, 71 N. E. 574; Metcalf v. Boston, 158 Mass. 284, 33 N. E. 586.

An abutter has no right to use the sidewalk to show or store his goods so as to deprive an adjoining owner of light, air, and access. Lavery v. Hannigan, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 463.

The use of a sidewalk by the owner of a lot for purposes of communicating with the street is equally legitimate, and equally an ordinary use, as that of passing longitudinally along it. Schindler v. Schroth, 146 Cal. 433, 80 Pac. 624.

The municipality has no right to obstruct such right of access.—Stack v. East St. Louis, 85 Ill. 377, 28 Am. Rep. 619.

A city is liable for injury to abutting property caused by making an excavation in a street, and leaving the street in that condition for an unreasonable time, whereby water is caused to accumulate so as to deprive the owner of access to his premises. Louisville v. Seibert, 51 S. W. 310, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 328.

25. Highbarger v. Milford, 71 Kan. 331, 80

way.²⁶ And the special right to use the street does not ordinarily include a right to obstruct the highway.²⁷ For instance, an abutter has no right to store property that is likely to frighten horses between the sidewalk and the gutter.²⁸ So the abutting owner has no right, as against a street car company, to interfere with the use of the street, by allowing teams to stand transversely on the street while discharging goods.²⁹ And the proprietor of a hotel has no more right to use the street fronting his house as a carriage stand for hire than a hackman.³⁰

g. Temporary Use of Roadway and Sidewalk From Necessity. The courts have repeatedly recognized the rights of the owners of land abutting on a street to encroach upon the primary right of the public to a limited extent and for a temporary purpose.³¹ In order to justify the encroachment by one in possession of land abutting upon the street, such encroachment must be reasonably necessary and it must not unreasonably interfere with the rights of the public.³² For example, the right to temporarily use a part of the street for building operations is sustained on the ground of reasonable necessity, irrespective of ownership of the fee in the street;³³ and the extent of the necessity³⁴ and what is a reasonable time³⁵ is to be determined by the circumstances of each case, in the absence of municipal regulations.³⁶ So he may temporarily use the sidewalk, even to the

An excavation for an area extending to a reasonable distance into the street in front of a lot upon which the owner is about to erect a house, if properly guarded and not continued for an unreasonable length of time, is not a nuisance and no license from the city authorities is requisite to legalize it. Clark v. Fry, 8 Ohio St. 358, 72 Am. Dec. 590.

Municipal permission.—Especially is such a use proper where with the consent of the proper public authorities. Malkan v. Carlin, 93 N. Y. Suppl. 378. In order to justify the placing of business materials in a public street under an ordinance permitting a party to use part of a street adjacent and opposite to his premises for the purpose of placing building materials thereon, whenever such use should be necessary during the continuous construction of a building on his premises, it must appear that the material occupied no greater part of the street than allowed by the ordinance, and that such materials were so placed when such use of the street was necessary during the continuous construction of the building. Martin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 87 Ill. App. 208.

Negligence and unreasonable delay.—Where earth excavated from the building site and deposited in an adjoining street to be subsequently removed is dangerously extended or insufficiently guarded or allowed to remain in the street for an unreasonable time, it becomes as much a nuisance as if originally placed there without color of right. Hundhausen v. Bond, 36 Wis. 29.

36. McCarthy v. Chicago, 53 Ill. 38 (holding that inasmuch as the obstruction of streets with building material and the sinking of deep pits in the sidewalk for the purpose of erecting houses are always attended with inconvenience to the public and are usually not free from danger, the municipality has the power to regulate and control the use for such purposes); Raymond v. Keseberg, 84 Wis. 302, 54 N. W. 612, 19 L. R. A. 643; Hundhausen v. Bond, 36 Wis. 29 (holding that a charter provision prohibiting the placing in the street, without permission, materials for buildings, does not apply to earth excavated for the pur-inconvenience of pedestrians, in the necessary transporting of goods from curbing to warehouse or store;⁸⁷ but he cannot so obstruct the sidewalk several hours each day.⁸⁸ So it has been held that an abutter cannot continuously obstruct the walk by teams and wagons in loading and unloading goods, notwithstanding trucks cannot be backed at right angles to the walk because of the street cars.⁸⁹ An innkeeper has a right to keep his carriages for the use of his guests only, in the adjoining street, in reasonable number and in a reasonable manner subject to immediate call, when so to keep them is a necessity of his business.⁴⁰

h. Remedies. An abutting owner may sue in his own name for any unlawful obstruction or abuse of the street which injures his property by reducing its value or obstructing access thereto.⁴¹ This includes the right to sue to abate or enjoin the obstruction where he is specially injured thereby,⁴² as well as an action to recover damages.⁴³ So an abutter may sue for damages for injury to his sidewalk.⁴⁴ And the owner of the soil in a street may maintain ejectment against any person wrongfully taking or claiming exclusive possession of the same.⁴⁵ If the owner of the fee of the street, he may sue for an injury to or pose of preparing a lot for the erection of a building thereon and placed in an adjoining street for removal elsewhere).

Remedy against municipality.—Where a municipal corporation having exclusive control of its streets constructs a sewer in front of an individual's lot, which renders access thereto difficult and dangerous, he cannot fill up the sewer, although it is improperly constructed, as his remedy is by action against the city for damages. *McGregor v. removal of the soil, vegetation, minerals, and rock.⁴⁶ So trees on a public street become a part of the land on which they are planted and the abutter may recover damages for injuries thereto,⁴⁷ even though his title does not include any part of the street.⁴⁸ No action can be maintained where the way obstructed has not been actually opened for use by the public as a street.⁴⁹

8. GRANTS OF RIGHTS TO USE STREETS⁵⁰—a. Power—(1) IN GENERAL. The legislature has power to authorize structures in the street for business conveniences that, in the absence of such authority, would be considered obstructions,⁵¹ and may directly exercise the power,⁵² or may delegate such power to the municipality,⁵³ or to a particular municipal board or officer.⁵⁴ A municipality, however, has no inherent power to grant privileges in its streets, but any power which it exercises must be derived from the legislature either expressly or by fair or necessary implication.⁵⁵ A grant by a municipality without legislative authority

Erie, etc., R. Co., 27 Pa. St. 339, 67 Am. Dec. 471. Power of a municipality to lay out, establish, alter, and open streets, etc., does not include converting a street or part of it into a railway. Davis v. New York, 14 N. Y. 506, 67 Am. Dec. 186. An ordinance granting a railroad company the right to use a street for switch or sidewalk purposes or depot stations is void. Stevenson v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (Mo. 1895) 31 S. W. 793.

Poles and wires.—Domestic Tel. Co. v. Newark, 49 N. J. L. 344, 8 Atl. 128 (telegraph poles); Brush Electric Light Co. v. Jones Bros. Electric Co., 5 Ohio Cir. Ct. 340, 3 Ohio Cir. Dec. 168 [affirmed in 29 Cinc. L. Bul. 72]; McLean v. Brush Electric Light Co., 8 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 619, 9 Cinc. L. Bul. 65.

A charter of a street railway granting to it certain powers and privileges and "such other privileges as may be granted by the municipal authorities" gives the city no new power but merely authorizes it to exercise such power as it has under its charter for the furtherance of the objects of the railway. Asheville St. R. Co. v. West Asheville, etc., R. Co., 114 N. C. 725, 19 S. E. 697.

Use for street fair.—Municipal authority to remove obstructions from the street and prevent them from being encumbered or obstructed does not confer power to permit a corporation organized for the purpose of giving a street fair to erect a structure obstructing travel in a public street. Richmond v. Smith, 101 Va. 161, 43 S. E. 345. See also Augusta v. Reynolds, 122 Ga. 754, 50 S. E. 998, 106 Am. St. Rep. 147, 69 L. R. A. 564.

The power to vacate streets does not include power to lease a portion of a street for a term of years (Glasgow v. St. Louis, 15 Mo. App. 112 [affirmed in 87 Mo. 678]), nor power to authorize permission to a street railroad company to build a short elevated railroad from its terminus at the foot of one of the city streets along a public landing, it being a joint occupation with the public. Mc-Aboy's Appeal, 107 Pa. St. 548.

Steam motors.—In the absence of express statutory authority, a municipality has no power to authorize the use of steam motors upon its streets either upon ordinary railroads or street railways. Stanley v. Davenport, 54 Iowa 463, 2 N. W. 1064, 6 N. W. 706, 37 Am. Rep. 216.

Power to control and govern streets by implication includes the power to grant a franchise for the use of the streets except where a different legislative intent is apparent. Stillwater v. Lowry, 83 Minn. 275, 86 N. W. 103; Atchison St. R. Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 31 Kan. 660, 3 Pac. 284.

Under the power to "regulate" the use of streets, municipal authorities may permit their use for railroad tracks, poles, wires, pipes, etc., of a public nature not inconsistent with the public uses to which the streets were dedicated. State v. St. Louis, 161 Mo. 371, 61 S. W. 658; State v. Murphy, 134 Mo. 548, 31 S. W. 784, 34 S. W. 51, 35 S. W. 1132, 56 Am. St. Rep. 515, 34 L. R. A. 369; Schopp v. St. Louis, 117 Mo. 131, 22 S. W. 898, 20 L. R. A. 783; Pikes Peak Power Co. v. Colorado Springs, 105 Fed. 1, 44 C. C. A. 333.

Pneumatic tubes.—A statute authorizing cities to grant the use of streets for light, heat, and electric power does not authorize a municipality to grant to a company the right to use streets for laying pneumatic tubes therein for the purpose of carrying packages by means of compressed air and for supplying compressed air. Ampt v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 300, 11 Ohio Cir. Dec. 805; Ampt v. Cincinnati, 9 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 394, 6 Ohio N. P. 401.

The fact that a street has been paved with asphalt whose cost was authorized against the abutting owners does not affect the right of the municipal authorities to consent to the laying of street-car tracks in such street. Lockhart v. Craig St. R. Co., 139 Pa. St. 419, 21 Atl. 26.

Incidental power.—Where the charter or as by granting the right to use the streets to a steam railroad company,⁵⁸ or to a street railroad company,⁵⁹ or to a telegraph or telephone company or electric light and power company or the like to use the streets for the purpose of poles and other statute in terms gives a municipality the power to supply some article, such as gas, electric light, or water, the municipality may, as an incidental power, permit the use of the streets for such purposes by a public service corporation furnishing such articles. Quincy v. Bull, 106 Ill. 337; Levis v. Newton, 75 Fed. 884.

Power does not extend to streets not yet open.—Wichita, etc., R. Co. v. Fehheimer, 36 Kan. 45, 12 Pac. 362.

In making a grant, the municipal officers act as the servants and agents of the municipality. People v. Dwyer, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 548, 63 How. Pr. 115 [affirmed in 90 N. Y. 402].

But see Stillwater v. Lowry, 83 Minn. 275, 86 N. W. 103, holding that villages having less population than three thousand, incorporated under Gen. St. (1894) tit. 3, c. 10, have no authority to authorize the construction and operation, for a definite term of years, of street railways in the streets of such villages.

The usual powers conferred by its charter on a municipal corporation over its streets are sufficient to authorize it to permit their use for horse railways. New Orleans v. Steinhart, 52 La. Ann. 1043, 27 So. 586; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Lindell R. Co., 190 Mo. 246, 83 S. W. 634 (holding that a city may permit a street railway company to construct and operate a line on a public highway, although it crosses the right of way and tracks of another railway company, Const. art. 12, § 20, reserving to a city the right to permit the operation of street railroads on its streets); State v. Corrigan Consol. St. R. Co., 85 Mo. 263, 55 Am. Rep. 361; Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 26 S. Ct. 427, 50 L. ed. 801 [reversing 132 Fed. 848]; Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Detroit, 64 Fed. 628, 12 C. C. A. 365, 26 L. R. A. 667. See also STREET RAILROADS.

Extension of franchise.—Under a statute giving a city power to grant the use of its streets to street railway companies on such terms as the proper authorities shall determine, a city may extend existing franchises before the expiration thereof. And where a street railway company owns numerous franchises, some of which expire in 1924, and some in succeeding years, an ordinance extending such franchises until 1934 is not so unreasonable as to invalidate it. Linden Land Co. v. Milwaukee Electric R., etc., Co., 107 Wis. 493, 83 N. W. 851.

Delegation of power to grant franchises to certain corporations and individuals referred to in the statute excludes the power of granting them to any one else. Allen v. Clausen, 114 Wis. 244, 90 N. W. 181.

The authority of a general nature to regulate and control the streets of a municipality usually granted to such bodies is generally deemed sufficient to clothe the municipality wires,⁶⁰ or to a gas or water company or the like to use the street for pipes or other underground conduits.⁶¹ However, a municipality cannot license the use of a street for a purely private purpose whether or not the resulting disturbance of the public right therein is serious.⁶²

(II) PARTICULAR BOARDS OR OFFICERS. The power to authorize privileges in the use of streets may be delegated by the legislature to particular boards or officers of the municipality.⁶³ Where the grant or license must come from a particular board or officer, a grant or license by others does not constitute legal authority,⁶⁴ and it is immaterial that such unauthorized licenses may have been with the power to grant or refuse, or otherwise to regulate the use of the streets for the street railways operated by a horse power. State v. Jacksonville, etc., R. Co., 29 Fla. 590, 10 So. 590.

given customarily and acted upon.⁶⁵ A board on whom is conferred merely supervisory functions has no power to grant a right to use the streets.⁶⁶

(III) POWER TO REFUSE WHERE RIGHT TO USE GRANTED BY LEGISLATURE.

Where a company is given a charter by the legislature with the proviso that, where its right of way is within the corporate limits of a city, consent of the city shall be obtained before its streets can be used, it has been held that a municipality has not only authority to establish reasonable and proper regulations as to the use of its streets, but may absolutely refuse to permit the use of its streets by the company.⁶⁷ However, there are decisions holding the contrary on the theory that if the municipality had the power to absolutely forbid the use of its streets by the company it would practically have the power to nullify what the legislature has expressly authorized.⁶⁸ In any event a municipality cannot lie by and see a public service company expend large sums in preparation and then refuse the company the right to use the streets.⁶⁹

(IV) *DELEGATION OF POWER BY MUNICIPALITY.*⁷⁰ A municipality which is given power to regulate the use of streets and grant privileges therein cannot delegate that power.⁷¹

(V) PRIVATE USE. Except where the use is temporary or the power has been delegated by the legislature,⁷² a municipality has no power to authorize the Revocation of prohibition.—Where an act of the legislature incorporating a public service corporation provided that the consent of the city councils should be first obtained before the company should construet their tracks, the privilege is annulled by an ordinance declining to allow the streets to be so used so that no subsequent ordinance of the city council's consent to the use of the streets upon certain conditions can ratify the privilege. What constitutes delegation.—The granting by a city council to a railroad company of permission to construct its road across streets at any point to be selected by the company within a given district is not a delegation of the powers of the city council. use of streets for a private purpose,⁷³ that is, one from which neither the municipality nor its citizens derive any consideration or benefit.⁷⁴ For instance, it is 71 N. Y. Suppl. 449. Mere necessity for the purpose of conducting business does not justify the obstruction of the public streets except for temporary purposes (Callanan v. Gilman, 107 N. Y. 360, 14 N. E. 264, 1 Am. St. Rep. 831), but the owner of property has the right to its benefit, use, and enjoyment, and in order that such result may be obtained the municipality has authority to allow a temporary occupation of the streets where the privilege granted is reasonable and does not unnecessarily interfere with the use of the streets by the public. Odell v. Bretney, 62 N. Y. App. Div. 595, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 449.

Presumptions.—If an ordinance granting the use of city streets for gas or electric lighting does not disclose whether the use is for public or private purposes, the court will presume, in favor of the validity of the ordinance, that the use is for public, and not private, purposes. Levis v. Newton, 75 Fed. 884.

No portion of a street can be granted to any person for private use to the exclusion of the public. Hibbard v. Chicago, 173 Ill. 91, 50 N. E. 256, 40 L. R. A. 621 [affirming 59 Ill. App. 470].

Effect of like privileges granted to others.—It is immaterial with respect to a person seeking the right to use a portion of a public street for a private purpose that a like privilege has been granted to others. Chicago v. Verdon, 119 Ill. App. 494.

Advertising on streets.—An ordinance requiring the board of public improvements to erect boxes on the streets as receptacles for litter, and to contract with a contractor to erect such boxes in consideration of the exclusive privilege of posting advertisements thereon, is invalid as an attempt to subject the public streets to a purely private use. State v. St. Louis, 161 Mo. 371, 61 S. W. 658.

74. Pikes Peak Power Co. v. Colorado Springs, 105 Fed. 1, 44 C. C. A. 333.

While the general rule is that it is no objection to a public franchise that its owner generally held that a municipality cannot authorize the construction of a purely private railroad upon the public streets.⁷⁵ So a municipality has no power to authorize a private person to bridge over a portion of a street, leaving merely a tunnel for the passage of vehicles and pedestrians,⁷⁶ nor to construct and maintain a bridge or other structure over a street so as to connect buildings on both sides.⁷⁷ And a municipality has no power to grant to an abutting owner the right to so construct his building as to encroach on the street,⁷⁸ nor to use the streets for stands or booths for business purposes,⁷⁹ nor to use a street for the erection of private scales;⁸⁰ nor has the municipality the power to grant the right to use a may derive a private gain therefrom, such rule is to be confined to where the use is public and the gain arises out of that use, as in the case of use by street cars, telegraph and telephone lines, etc.; but where the pecuniary profits arise from a source wholly distinct from any public use, the rule does not apply. State v. St. Louis, 161 Mo. 371, 61 S. W. 658.

Under a charter vesting a city with power "to regulate" the use of streets, an ordinance which grants a private corporation the right to occupy the street by subways and paraphernalia therein necessary to conduct electricity, without imposing on the company any obligation to maintain them, or requiring it to allow all the public to use them, and which reserves to the city no control over the works or business of the company, is for private purposes, and therefore ultra vires. State v. Murphy, 134 Mo. 548, 31 S. W. 784, 34 S. W. 51, 35 S. W. 1132, 56 Am. St. Rep. 515, 34 L. R. A. 369.

A city has authority, under its general powers, to grant to private parties for public purposes reasonable rights and privileges in its water system, its streets, its public grounds, and its other public utilities, provided that such grant and its exercise do not materially impair the usefulness of these utilities for the public purposes for which they were acquired or dedicated. Pikes Peak Power Co. v. Colorado Springs, 105 Fed. 1, 44 C. C. A. 333.

Tanks erected on the streets to supply water for street sprinkling are for a public purpose and it is within the power of the council to license the erection thereof. Savage v. Salem, 23 Oreg. 381, 31 Pac. 832, 37 Am. St. Rep. 688, 24 L. R. A. 787.

License as void.—Permission by a city to a private individual to occupy a public street with a railroad switch to be used for his private business is void, and a provision for notice by the city before its removal cannot be enforced. Swift v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 66 N. J. Eq. 34, 57 Atl. 456.

But permitting abutters owning the fee in a street to lay a railroad track across the street to connect their premises is not an abuse of discretion of the corporate authorities, where such use of the street is not inconsistent with the right of way of the public. Hanbury v. Woodward Lumber Co., 98 Ga. 54, 26 S. E. 477.

When not for private use.—Railroad tracks laid with private means and for the express purpose of directly benefiting the builder, but with no design to exclude the public from the equal right to the use of them, are not within the private control of the builder nor for private use in a legal sense. Chicago Dock, etc., Co. v. Garrity, 115 Ill. 155, 3 N. E. 448. See also People v. Blocki, 203 Ill. 363, 67 N. E. 809. So an ordinance granting permission for a switch on a street for the use of a stock-yards company, created for "the convenience of drovers, dealers and the public at large," is not invalid as for private purposes. Knapp v. St. Louis Transfer R. Co., 126 Mo. 26, 28 S. W. 627. And it has been held that a municipality may consent to the laying of a branch track along a street occupied by a manufacturing concern, and branches therefrom to the private property of such manufacturers, on the ground that such track is not for traveling on the company's general lines but rather in the nature of the use thereof for street purposes in order to make transfers by cars instead of by drays or wagons. *Pittsburg, etc., R. Secondary use.—The use of streets for water mains, gas pipes, telephone and telegraph lines, etc., is secondary and subordinate to the primary use for travel, and such secondary use is permissible only when not inconsistent with the primary object of the establishment of the street, that is, the convenience of public travel. State v. Spokane, 24 Wash. 53, 63 Pac. 1116.

What constitutes unreasonable obstructions.—The fact that, while cars are passing along a railroad laid in a public alley four hundred feet long and sixteen feet wide, the passage of vehicles drawn by horses is totally obstructed, although only for a few minutes at a time, renders the use of the alley by the company an "unreasonable" obstruction. *Com. v. applies to grants to abutting owners.⁸⁶ A grant is invalid where it restricts the municipality in the future exercise of its legislative powers.⁸⁷

(vii) *EXCLUSIVE PRIVILEGES.*⁸⁸ Except where authorized by the legislature, either expressly or by necessary implication,⁸⁹ the power conferred upon a municipality to grant certain rights in streets does not authorize it to grant an exclusive privilege or franchise in the streets.⁹⁰ So a municipality cannot grant an exclusive right in its streets in the sense that every other company is excluded from the use of its pipes, etc., to whom similar rights might be granted by the municipi-

Hacks.—Neither the legislature nor municipal authorities can license the standing of hacks in a public street in front of the premises of the owner of the fee without his consent. McCaffrey v. Smith, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 117. A municipal ordinance authorizing the owners and drivers of coaches to use a street adjacent to the store of an abutting owner as a stand is an unlawful interference with the use and occupation of such adjacent owner's premises, where it is constantly used so as to render access to such adjacent property impossible. Branahan v. Cincinnati Hotel Co., 39 Ohio St. 333, 48 Am. Rep. 457 [affirming 8 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 305, 7 Cinc. L. Bul. 57, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 22, 10 Cinc. L. Bul. 69].

But the right of an abutter as conferred by an ordinance to build steps, cellar doors, etc., on the sidewalk, is subject to a prior right of a service franchise company to lay its pipes under the sidewalk, and no cause of action accrues on behalf of the abutter against the company where the laying of pipes interferes with such use of the sidewalk. Provost v. New Chester Water Co., 162 Pa. St. 275, 29 Atl. 914.

Erection of monument.—However, the trustees of a village may authorize the erection of a soldiers' monument in one of the public streets without the consent of the owner of the fee. Tompkins v. Hodgson, 4 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 435.

Effect of want of power.—Where a municipal corporation had no power to grant a franchise involving the vesting of an exclusive interest in its streets in the grantees, the fact that such grantees discharged the obligations imposed on them by the ordinance and paid taxes on their possessions, and that the granting of the franchise would be beneficial, was no ground for requiring the city to comply with such franchise. Rhinehart v. Redfield, 93 N. Y. App. Div. 410, 87 N. Y. Suppl. 789 [affirmed in 179 N. Y. 569, 72 N. E. 1150].

Construction of contract.—A contract between a city and an electrical subway company, by which the city grants to the company the right to construct subways in the streets, and to lease space therein to persons operating the electrical conductors, and providing that the contract is to be without prejudice to the rights of the city to enter into such other, further, and different contracts as shall be necessary to carry out the intent of the laws relating to electrical conductors, and that nothing in the contract shall be construed as granting any exclusive privileges, does not give any company an exclusive right to maintain subways in the streets. Empire City Subway Co. v. Broadway, etc., R. Co., 87 Hun (N. Y.) 279, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 1055 [affirmed in 159 N. Y. 555, 54 N. E. 1092].

A statute providing that any corporation organized and put into successful operation under a certain chapter of the statutes should have exclusive privileges for the purposes of its creation for twenty years does not confer on the municipality power to grant exclusive privileges for the use of their streets to such companies. Capital City Light, etc., Co. v. Tallahassee, 42 Fla. 462, 28 So. 810.

Likewise a common council cannot invade the legislative power of their successors by conferring perpetual privileges upon the company as by a resolution declaring that no regulations shall be made as to fares to be charged by a street railway company. Milhau

lature.⁹⁵ The power to fix the terms and conditions upon which a public service company with a fixed corporate life shall occupy streets includes the power to fix the term of such occupation.⁹⁶ So it is competent for a city, in granting a franchise, to make the grant terminable after a specified term or whenever, after a stated number of years, it shall elect to purchase the company's plant at an appraised valuation.⁹⁷ However, a perpetual grant is not invalid even though the provision that such grant shall be perpetual is itself invalid.⁹⁸ And another reason suggested why such a franchise is not void is that there is always recourse to the power of eminent domain.⁹⁹ The duration of the grant, so long as it does not create a perpetuity, is a matter for the exclusive determination of the municipality,¹ except where it is otherwise provided by statute or charter;² and grants for thirty years have been upheld where the charter did not expire until thereafter.³ So the easement of way in the streets need not necessarily be limited to the duration of the franchise of the grantee.⁴

(IX) *IMPOSING CONDITIONS.*⁵ On granting the privilege to use a street, the municipality ordinarily has the power, in its legislative discretion, to impose conditions.⁶ The law contemplates that the privilege will not be unreasonably

Joint use of tracks.—There is no objection to a city ordinance, granting the right to a railroad company to construct its road within the city limits, stipulating that two other companies, not then having the right to enter refused or unreasonably burdened, although it regards the municipality as competent to determine the proper conditions for itself.⁷

b. Proceedings to Obtain, Contents, and Validity of Grant—(1) IN GENERAL.⁸ The legislature may prescribe the manner in which a municipal license to use streets shall be granted,⁹ and such a statute is usually mandatory and exclusive;¹⁰ and a license otherwise granted is invalid.¹¹ Generally a grant or license to use the streets is properly conferred by ordinance.¹² Where the charter or statute gives power to grant franchises in its streets by ordinance, the right cannot be conferred by resolution;¹³ but where the statute authorizes action by the municipal legislative body without referring to ordinances the grant or license may be conferred by a vote upon motion or by the passage of a resolution as well as by an ordinance.¹⁴ If the charter or statute specially provides as to how the ordinance must be introduced, advertised, passed, rejected, or the like, such provisions the city, shall jointly use the main track of the first company. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 100 Ill. 110.

License-fee for excavation.—A township may properly, in the exercise of its power to repair streets and highways, require persons desiring to excavate the streets to obtain a permit from the township committee and deposit ten dollars for security for the restoration of the street to its natural condition. *Cook v. Provision for arbitration.—A provision in an ordinance establishing a street route, under advertising for bids, although this rule has not been enforced where it would entail the doing of a useless thing.²⁴

(II) SUBMISSION TO VOTE. In some jurisdictions ordinances authorizing certain uses of streets by specified public service corporations are required to be submitted to a vote of the people.²⁵

(III) *FORM, CONTENTS, AND VALIDITY.*²⁶ A grant by ordinance is the act of the state.²⁷ The grant or license must be in strict conformity with the provisions of the statute or charter authorizing it,²⁸ and where based upon the petition of property-owners it must not exceed the privilege sought by the petition.²⁹ Generally the privilege may be given to individuals as well as to a corporation.³⁰ An ordinance granting the right to use certain tracks may provide for the appointment of arbitrators to determine any questions arising with other roads in regard to rules and regulations relative to the movement of trains on such tracks.³¹ So it is sometimes provided by charter that the franchise shall incorporate therein efficient provisions for the compulsory arbitration of all disputes arising between the grantees of the franchise and its employees, as to any matter of employment or wages.³² A grant to an intended corporation of a street franchise for public use is valid notwithstanding at its date the corporation is not chartered, where it is later chartered and accepts the grant.³³ A franchise to use the streets to Ohio Rev. St. § 2501, which determines the method in which differences between any street railway company constructing a road over such route and the employees thereof shall be settled is contrary to the spirit of the section, as tending to keep persons from bidding and to increase the rate of fare bid. Raynolds v. Cleveland, 24 Ohio Cir. Ct. 215.

24. See Capdevielle v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 110 La. 904, 34 So. 868, holding that a city, under certain conditions and restrictions, may grant the use of certain tracks to a railroad, without first advertising it for sale to the highest bidder. See also supra, IX, F.

Effect of failure to advertise.—Where a franchise was granted to a telegraph company without limit as to term, for the purpose of avoiding Ky. Const. § 164, requiring municipalities before granting a franchise for a term of years to first advertise for public bids, such franchise was void. Merchants' Police, etc., Tel. Co. v. Citizens' Tel. Co., 93 S. W. 642, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 512.

Resubmission.—The fact that after the voters of a city have sanctioned the grant of a franchise the city council makes certain modifications in the specifications as to matters of detail, which do not fatally change the nature and object of the franchise, and accept a bid without resubmitting the amendment to the voters, does not invalidate the franchise. Johnson v. Rock Hill, 57 S. C. 371, 35 S. E. 568.

required the execution of a bond for the completion of the railway within a year, a bond executed by individuals and not by the railroad company is not such a bond as is required); Pacific Electric Co. v. Los Angeles, 118 Fed. 746 [affirmed in 194 U. S. 112, 24 S. Ct. 586, 48 L. ed. 896].

Failure to designate streets.—An ordinance authorizing a gas company to lay pipes in "the streets" is not void for failure to designate streets. Kalamazoo v. Kalamazoo Heat, etc., Co., 124 Mich. 74, 82 N. W. 811. A designation of all the streets in a city, contained in the ordinance conferring the license, is equivalent to a designation of each and every street by name and satisfies a statutory requirement that the streets be named. Meyers v. Hudson County Electric Co., 63 N. J. L. 573, 44 Atl. 713.

Execution of conveyance.—Where a statute authorizes a city council to grant a certain right in a highway, such a right is obtained by a conveyance executed by the mayor and two of four aldermen of a city whose charter makes the mayor and aldermen the common council. People v. Green, 116 Mich. 505, 74 N. W. 714.

A. 369, holding that a provision in an ordinance granting a street railway franchise that, if any dispute shall arise between the grantees and their employees as to any matter of employment or wages, such dispute shall be submitted to arbitration, is an "efficient provision" for compulsory arbitration.

furnish gas and other illuminating light is void as to the latter where the charter of the company only authorizes it to furnish gas.³⁴ The grant of privileges has been held invalid where the ordinance failed to reserve to the municipality the privilege of regulating charges from time to time and to fix a limit for charges.³⁵ The invalidity of an ordinance carries with it a provision requiring the municipality to take and pay for certain things to be furnished it.³⁶ The validity of an ordinance granting the use of streets is not affected by the fact that the exercise of such right may impose an additional burden on the fee of the streets, since if such burden is imposed the person exercising the franchise may be required to pay damages therefor.³⁷ Where the ordinance granting a franchise requires the permission of certain officials to be first obtained such requirement may be waived by the municipality.³⁸

(iv) ACCEPTANCE BY LICENSEE. If a license with conditions is accepted the conditions are binding upon the licensee,³⁹ unless they are unlawful,⁴⁰ notwithstanding a declaration in the instrument of acceptance that the licensee waives none of its vested rights under its charter.⁴¹ The company cannot modify the terms and conditions except with the consent of the municipality.⁴² If a permit amounts to no more than a municipal license, it becomes binding upon the municipality when acted upon by the licensee by constructing its structures in the streets.⁴³ The breach by the municipality of terms for the benefit of both parties releases a licensee from the duty to comply with such conditions.⁴⁴

(v) RIGHT TO QUESTION VALIDITY—(A) In General. The vacating of a franchise granted by the state can be accomplished only by a proceeding in the nature of quo warranto in the name of the state.⁴⁵ And a court of equity, at the suit of a private individual, cannot question the regularity of the proceedings by which a municipality has, under duly delegated authority, granted a franchise of which the grantee is in de facto exercise and enjoyment.⁴⁶ Nor can he question the expediency of the grant.⁴⁷ So the question of consideration for the franchise and the injuries and expenses which it will impose upon the city are discretionary questions not reviewable by the courts at the instance of a taxpayer.⁴⁸ But equity may, at the suit of a private individual, enjoin the operation of a public service corporation in the streets where the municipality had no power whatever to confer the grant or license.⁴⁹ The validity of, and the authority to, grant an exclusive right cannot be attacked by a suit brought by a private individual unless he claims the right to something contrary to such exclusive feature.⁵⁰ Taxpayers may sue for an injunction to prevent the occupation of the street by a public service company where the municipal grant was to a company offering less advantageous terms than those offered by other companies;⁵¹ but they cannot sue to prevent the city from granting a franchise unless it constitutes such a wrongful squandering or surrendering of the money or property of the city that taxation will be increased thereby.⁵² So the act of a municipality in making a grant or license cannot be attacked collaterally.⁵³ A municipality or an officer representing it is the proper party to sue to test the right to maintain an obstruction in the nature of a public improvement placed in the streets by permission of the city.⁵⁴ A municipality cannot enjoin the construction of a railroad in a street because of irregularities in the grant where no wrong or injury to the city is shown to have resulted therefrom.⁵⁵

(B) Estoppel.⁵⁶ A municipality may be estopped to question the validity of a grant or license.⁵⁷ But where the grant is void, the municipality is not estopped by its acquiescence.⁵⁸ So where the municipality has no power to authorize the

No one who does not infringe or threaten to infringe the exclusiveness of a grant by a city of the exclusive right to use its streets can be heard to allege the invalidity of the grant by reason of the exclusiveness after works have been constructed thereunder, and the contract has been substantially performed by the grantee. *Illinois Trust, etc., Bank v. Extension of franchise.—A city which extends the duration of a street railway franchise in order to enable the railway company to refund its bonded indebtedness is estopped, after negotiation of the new bonds, from attacking the validity of the extension for want of consideration. City R. Co. v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 166 U. S. 557, 17 S. Ct. 653, 41 L. ed. 1114.

Extension of franchise.—A municipality is not estopped from denying a valid grant in use of its streets for a certain purpose, the doctrine of estoppel cannot be applied to validate a grant for such purposes.⁵⁹ Likewise where a railroad company occupied a street without either a parol or written license from the municipality, the fact that the municipality sit by in silence while the company expends money in constructing the road in the street does not estop the municipality,⁶⁰ although it has been held that acquiescence for more than forty years barred, by the statute of limitations, the right of the city to object.⁶¹ A property-owner may be estopped by his acquiescence during the expenditure of large sums of money.⁶² And an abutter who petitions for the allowance of the use of a street by a public service company is estopped from asserting that the petition was not sufficiently signed where the company has incurred large expense in consequence of the passage of the ordinance allowing such use of the streets.⁶³ Likewise the beneficiary of a grant or license who has acquiesced therein and received valuable property under it cannot deny its validity as against the municipal authorities and another beneficiary.⁶⁴

(vi) CURATIVE STATUTES. Licenses invalid either from want of power in the licensor or from irregularity may be validated by subsequent curative statutes.⁶⁵

(vii) JUDICIAL CONTROL AND REVIEW. Where a municipality is given control of its streets, the courts will not ordinarily interfere with the exercise of its discretion in granting privileges in the use of the streets, unless the exercise of such power is abused or is fraudulent or grossly wrong or unjust.⁶⁶ For instance, a grant is not ordinarily subject to review by the courts as to expediency,⁶⁷ or favoritism,⁶⁸ nor to determine if the compensation was fair and reasonable.⁶⁹ But when abused, or an attempt is made to abuse or illegally exercise such discretion, and especially when the municipality claims the right to exercise powers which it does not possess, the courts may interfere at the suit of proper parties.⁷⁰

c. Construction and Operation — (i) IN GENERAL. Grants of rights in streets the streets where the extension of a franchise is void because it exceeds the normal life of the company on the ground that the company has performed new obligations at great expense. Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co., 56 Fed. 867, 60 Fed. 161.

Effect of good faith of grantee.—A town is not estopped to take advantage of the incapacity of its council to make a contract granting the exclusive right to lay pipes in the streets, because the grantee acted in good faith, and fulfilled all its obligations. *Smith v. are not to be extended by construction beyond the reasonable meaning of the language in which they are expressed.⁷¹ Where in derogation of the right to the public to free and unobstructed use of the streets they will be construed strictly against the grantee and liberally in favor of the public.⁷² Where an ordinance gives the right to use the streets to a public service company, subject to certain restrictions and limitations, the acceptance by the company makes the ordinance as binding upon the company as a statute,⁷³ and constitutes a contract.⁷⁴ So if the company petitions for the right to use a street on certain terms and the terms are accepted by the city, it constitutes a contract.⁷⁵ Acts in regard to the same subject-matter, although of different dates and by different general assemblies, are pari materia and must be construed together.⁷⁶

do acts outside of the rights conferred; ⁷⁹ but the express grant of a distinct right or privilege implies license to do whatever is reasonably necessary to its enjoyment. ⁸⁰ An ordinance granting the use of streets to a company only gives such rights as the common council has power to grant, and does not affect the rights of the abutting lot owners where they own the fee to the center of the street. ⁸¹ A grant of a privilege to two separate railroad companies to connect their tracks with a street track is a joint license. ⁸² The grantee of a franchise from a municipality, where the laying of pipes in the street is necessary, takes the franchise subject to delay or refusal on the part of the common council in which is vested control of the streets to grant a permit to lay such pipes. ⁸³ The grade of a street is not altered by authorizing a railroad company to lay its tracks in a street on condition that it pay all damages occasioned by any change of grade. ⁸⁴ A valid license granted by a village is not lost by its annexation to a city. ⁸⁵

79. New Orleans Gas-Light Co. v. Hart, 40 La. Ann. 474, 4 So. 215, 8 Am. St. Rep. 544 (holding that license to lay a gas main in certain streets does not imply the necessity of erecting lamp posts at the corners of such streets and of maintaining them there indefinitely, although the right so to do would exist if the licensee was furnishing, or under contract to furnish, street lighting); Glasby v. Morris, 18 N. J. Eq. 72 (holding that permission from a city to open a street for the purpose of laying a private drain is a mere grant of permission to open a street, and does not confer power to build a sewer); Galveston Wharf Co. v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 81 Tex. 494, 17 S. W. 57.

A license to alter or change the grade of a public street confers no power to appropriate a portion to exclusive and permanent private use. Wilmette Iron Works v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 26 Oreg. 224, 37 Pac. 1016, 46 Am. St. Rep. 620, 29 L. R. A. 88.

Drain.—Where a city gives a private person permission merely to open a street for the purpose of laying a drain, and such person lays a drain in another's land, he is a trespasser. Glasby v. Morris, 18 N. J. Eq. 72.

Pipes.—A provision in an ordinance granting a company the right to lay pipes that they shall be at least a certain number of feet below the street grade is not a permission to lay the pipes at that depth if they thereby pass through open sewers and obstruct the flow of water. Montgomery v. Capital City Water Works, 92 Ala. 361, 9 So. 339.

Change in mode of lighting.—Granting the right to use streets for gas apparatus and fixtures does not include the right, on changing the mode of lighting to electricity as authorized by the original ordinance, to erect poles, etc., without the consent of the municipality. Newport v. Newport Light Co., 89 Ky. 454, 12 S. W. 1040, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 840.

Territorial extent.—Where a company is authorized to furnish electricity within the limits of the village in which it is located, the subsequent annexation of such village to the city does not extend the field of its operations. Chicago v. Mutual Electric Light, etc., Co., 55 Ill. App. 429.

Time when privilege may be exercised.—Permission to erect poles in a street cannot be first exercised twelve years thereafter. McWethy v. Aurora Electric Light, etc., Co., 202 Ill. 218, 67 N. E. 9 [affirming 104 Ill. App. 479].

Retroactive effect.—An ordinance granting the right to use a street does not operate to justify wrongful acts of such company as trespassers prior to the passage of such ordinance. Southern California R. Co. v. Southern R. Co., (Cal. 1896) 43 Pac. 1123.

80. Dodd v. Consolidated Traction Co., 57 N. J. L. 482, 31 Atl. 980, holding that a company authorized by a municipality to erect trolley wires has the right to top branches of trees when it is reasonably necessary for the passage of its wires. R. A. 956.

Where gas mains in a street are authorized to be laid in a prudent and lawful manner with the right from time to time to take them up and repair them, the fact that macadam pavement was afterward laid does not restrict the right of the licensee in so far as making repairs is concerned. Indianapolis v. Consumers' Gas Trust Co., 140 Ind. 107, 39 N. E. 433, 49 Am. St. Rep. 183, 27 L. R. A. 514.

Where municipal permission is given to a railroad company to construct its track or tracks on a certain street, and the ordinance contains no limitation as to the number of tracks which may be laid, the construction of one track in the street does not preclude the right to thereafter construct another track. Workman v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 129 Cal. 536, 62 Pac. 185, 316.

(III) *EXCLUSIVENESS OF RIGHT*⁸⁶—(A) In General. A grant or license to use streets will be construed as exclusive only where an exclusive right is granted by clear and explicit terms or by necessary implication.⁸⁷ But a void grant of an exclusive privilege does not give another company a right to use the streets without the consent of the municipality.⁸⁸ Conferring an exclusive privilege does not deprive the municipality of the right to subscribe to the stock of a new company whose object is to compete with the company granted an exclusive privilege.⁸⁹ A valid exclusive license will be protected by the courts.⁹⁰

(B) Conditions and Reservations as to Use by Others. Grants to a public service corporation of the right to use the streets are often made conditional on the allowing other like companies to use the grantee's track, conduits, poles, etc., as the case may be.⁹¹ Such a condition is not a contract with the latter companies, but only between the first company and the municipality,⁹² which the municipality may release the first company from;⁹³ and the right of the other companies to use such tracks, etc., is dependent upon the consent of the municipality.⁹⁴ A subsequent grant by the municipality to a new company of the right to use the poles of another company is unreasonable and void where the limits of such use are not fixed.⁹⁵

Exclusive user.—A gas company's use of the streets of a city for twenty years for the purpose of laying down pipes for conveying gas to be used in lighting the city does not bar an inquiry into the right of the company to their exclusive use. It is not inconsistent with the use of unoccupied portions of the same streets by others for a like purpose; and the fact that others have not made such use of the streets does not make its user the exercise of a right to exclude others. State v. Cincinnati Gas Light, etc., Co., 18 Ohio St. 262.

Construction of conditions.—An ordinance giving a railroad a right of way on condition that it allow other roads the use of its tracks within the city limits does not bind it to allow another road the use of tracks laid, since the ordinance went into effect beyond the right of way granted thereby, but is binding in respect to tracks on such right of way. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 52 Fed. 178.

Objections which first company may urge.—The grantee of a franchise conditioned that the poles should be used by other companies to whom permits to occupy portions of the same territory had been granted cannot be heard to complain that such other companies were not authorized by their charter to furnish electric light and use the poles. *Brush Electric Light Co. v. (o) *Conflicting Grants or Licenses.*⁹⁶ A municipality cannot impair the vested rights given a public service corporation in its streets by permitting a use of the streets inconsistent with such rights.⁹⁷ A license to use a street must not conflict with a grant of the use of the street to another company engaged in the same line of business.⁹⁸ For instance, where a city authorizes a railroad to lay a track in a street, it cannot thereafter, without the consent of such railroad, authorize another railroad to use the tracks.⁹⁹ But where the grant to one company of a right to use the streets does not necessarily interfere with or impair a prior grant to another company, it cannot be objected to by the first company.¹ Thus the granting a right of way over one side of a street does not ordinarily preclude the right to subsequently grant a right of way over the other side.² So legislative power conferred upon a municipality to authorize street railroads to be laid down in streets does not prohibit it, where there is one track in the street, from granting the right to construct another in the same street.³ And licenses are not invalid for slight incidental interferences with a prior privilege granted another.⁴ As between two corporations exercising similar franchises upon the same street, priority, although it does not create monopoly, carries superiority of rights, and equity will adjust conflicting interests, as far as possible, so that each company may exercise its own franchise as fully as is compatible with the necessary rights of another; but, where interference is unavoidable, the later occupant must give way.⁵ Where a grant is invalid for want of authority, the grantee cannot complain of an ordinance authorizing the occupation of its property by another company upon payment of a fair proportion of the original cost and a monthly rental.⁶ Where an exclusive right is granted, injunction lies as against a subsequent competing company to preserve the franchise granted to the first company.⁷

(iv) *EFFECT ON SUBSEQUENT EXERCISE OF MUNICIPAL POWER.*⁸ All grants or licenses to use streets to carry on business are made upon the implied condition

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1486.

For instance, where an elevated road has acquired a franchise for the use of certain streets, the city still retains the right to make use of the street for proper purposes, and is not compelled to consult the convenience of the railroad company in such use, but can only be required not to unreasonably interfere with the structure of the elevated road. *Interborough Rapid Transit Co. v. ing out of a valid contract.¹⁴ For instance, the municipality may require a change of the location of gas pipes¹⁵ or tracks;¹⁶ may compel a railroad company to relay its tracks flush with the street;¹⁷ may compel a change of location or total removal of a side-track materially impairing the use of the street by rendering the part assigned for public passage too narrow;¹⁸ may prohibit or prescribe the kind of propelling power which may be used;¹⁹ or may suspend operations for important municipal improvements, although such powers were not expressly allowed in the grant.²⁰ Where the original franchise was granted by ordinance but was not required by statute to be so granted, it may be modified by resolution.²¹

(v) *ASSIGNMENT OF RIGHT.*²² A license to a particular person or company is ordinarily not assignable,²³ especially when the ordinance expressly so provides,²⁴ but may pass to the successor of a corporation.²⁵ When granted to the licensee or its assigns, then either or both may use the license.²⁶

(vi) *RENTAL OR FEE FOR USE OF STREETS.*²⁷ It has been held that a municipality has the right to impose a reasonable charge as compensation for the space occupied in its streets by a public service corporation,²⁸ but that the reason-

Fixing charges.—Where an ordinance granting a franchise allowed the company to charge a certain price and there was no provision in the charter or other statutes giving the council power to repeal or alter the grant, a subsequent ordinance reducing the price one half and making it unlawful for the company to exact an amount in excess of such reduced price is void. *Ashland v. ableness of such charge is reviewable by the courts.²⁹ But where a grant is made to use the streets, by an ordinance containing no reservations respecting tolls or other charges, the municipality cannot by a subsequent ordinance impose such charges.³⁰ Where the charter of a public service corporation subjected the use of its track to the assent of the common council upon such terms and conditions as it might impose the municipality could exact a money payment for the use of the streets.³¹

d. Termination—(i) IN GENERAL. A license for a limited period terminates with the expiration of the time fixed by the ordinance granting the use of the streets,³² and the failure of the municipality to fulfil its contract to take and pay for the plant of the company at the expiration of such time does not prolong the franchise.³³ But where the municipality had no power to authorize the use of any street for a railroad, the mere use by a railroad under an ordinance for the period limited thereby does not estop the railroad company from thereafter using the streets under its general powers.³⁴ Where an exclusive privilege in the streets for a term of years is granted on condition that the municipality shall have the right to purchase the plant at a certain time, the municipality may treat the contract as annulled so far as the grant of exclusive privileges is concerned upon the refusal by the company to sell at the specified time.³⁵ A grant of privileges in streets does not become extinguished through the failure of the grantees to exercise privileges which they are not required to exercise by the terms of the grant.³⁶

(ii) REVOCAION—(A) License.³⁷ A mere license to use a street is revocable by the municipality in the exercise of its legislative discretion.³⁸ Pursuant to

In Pennsylvania boroughs have equal powers with cities to impose a license-tax for the poles of electric light companies erected in the borough streets, and an ordinance requiring an electric light company to pay a fixed sum for each of its poles comes within the police powers over the streets. *Lansdowne v. this rule it is proper to revoke licenses to use sidewalks,³⁹ to maintain awnings,⁴⁰ drain pipes,⁴¹ walls,⁴² bay windows,⁴³ or house steps;⁴⁴ or to deposit material in the street;⁴⁵ or a right given to an abutter to lay pipes.⁴⁶ In some jurisdictions, however, the doctrine of equitable estoppel has been held to preclude the right to order the removal of structures in a street.⁴⁷

(b) *Grants and Franchises.*⁴⁸ While, consistently with the rules which have been referred to herein, a municipality may reasonably regulate the exercise of a franchise to use the streets,⁴⁹ yet a grant of a right to use the streets is generally considered a grant of a vested right which the municipality cannot revoke,⁵⁰

Where the licensee is not engaged in a business devoted to a public purpose but it is merely personal, and no property rights in the street are conferred, the city may revoke the license. So held where a wall was erected in the street. South Highland Land, etc., Co. v. Kansas City, 100 Mo. App. 518, 75 S. W. 383. So a resolution of a city council authorizing a private person to erect a permanent structure on a street, amounting to an encroachment, confers no vested right, when the construction is made under such consent. Hibbard v. Chicago, 173 Ill. 91, 50 N. E. 256, 40 L. R. A. 621 [affirming 59 Ill. App. 470].

Right of licensee to compensation on revocation.—Ordinarily the licensee has no right to compensation where his license is revoked. South Highland Land, etc., Co. v. Kansas City, 100 Mo. App. 518, 75 S. W. 383. Especially is this so where the work in the streets was done after notice that the mayor would recommend the passage of a repealing ordinance as soon as possible. Lake Roland El. R. Co. v. Baltimore, 77 Md. 352, 26 Atl. 510, 20 L. R. A. 126. But when a city has granted a license or franchise to a private person for a public purpose, it cannot, after he has expended money on the faith thereof, revoke his license without compensating him, unless such obstruction become by subsequent use an actual nuisance. Savage v. Salem, 23 Ore. 381, 31 Pac. 832, 37 Am. St. Rep. 688, 24 L. R. A. 787.

Effect.—Revocation of a license to appropriate part of a street to private use does not immediately make the licensee a wrong-doer. Everett v. Marquette, 53 Mich. 450, 19 N. W. 140.

39. Winter v. Montgomery, 83 Ala. 539, 3 So. 235; Denver v. Girard, 21 Colo. 447, 42 Pac. 662, holding that an ordinance declaring that no person shall place merchandise on a sidewalk beyond three feet from the front line of the lot does not vacate the three feet of the sidewalk, but merely grants a revocable license.

When compensation is required for a permit to use the streets for a private purpose and it is accepted and acted upon by the holder by making costly improvements required, and the municipality acts in its private corporate capacity as distinguished from its political or governmental capacity, it is irrevocable. Gregsten v. Chicago, 145 Ill. 451, 34 N. E. 426, 36 Am. St. Rep. 496 [reversing 40 Ill. App. 607].

But where the municipality had no power to grant a permanent use, there can be no estoppel against it from requiring the street to be open in its entirety, because no estoppel can arise from an act of the municipal authorities done without authority of law. A. 115, holding that the privilege granted to but one member of a firm as an individual will not be revoked because it is being used by the firm of which he is a member in its business, where it was granted with the knowledge and expectation that it would be so used.

Grounds.—After the company has erected poles and strung wires in the streets pursuant to permission granted by an ordinance, the grant cannot be revoked on the ground that the corporation is violating its charter or the laws of the state. So the fact that the officers, managers, and stock-holders of the company are different individuals from those who were stock-holders when the permission was granted by a city council to an electric light company to use the city's streets gives no ground for the repeal of the ordinance after the streets have been so occupied. *Phillipsburg Electric Lighting, etc., Co. v. may estop the municipality to revoke a franchise on the ground that the municipality had no authority to grant the franchise.⁶⁰ Of course the privilege may be revoked where the right to so do is specially reserved by the municipality,⁶¹ and such reservation may be enforced, although the licensee will sustain a considerable loss without fault on his part.⁶²

(11) FORFEITURE. Failure of the grantee to perform the conditions upon which the grant is based operates as a forfeiture of the privilege or franchise.⁶³ But where the breach is of a condition subsequent, after the privilege becomes vested, the privilege or franchise cannot be revoked by ordinance but only by a resort to the courts.⁶⁴ So a breach of a condition subsequent does not ipso facto terminate the right of way so as to entitle one other than the municipality to sue the company as for an unlawful occupation of the street.⁶⁵ The forfeiture may be waived by the municipality;⁶⁶ and the municipality is estopped to claim that a change in the location of the company's plant operated as a forfeiture of the company's rights in certain streets where the municipality has acquiesced in such change for many years.⁶⁷ Where, after municipal revocation for breach of condition, the company proceeds with the use of the streets, the municipality may enjoin further operations.⁶⁸

Construction of ordinance.—In an ordinance granting certain privileges to a corporation, a proviso that the acts of the company under the ordinance shall be subject to any ordinances thereafter passed does not convert the grant into a mere revocable permit, but only subjects the company to future regulations, not inconsistent with the ordinance itself. *New Orleans v. What constitutes breach.—Chicago Municipal Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Lake, 27 Ill. App. 346 [affirmed in 130 Ill. 42, 22 N. E. 616], failure to furnish gas within one year.

Excuses.—Where the licensee has been prevented by the injunction of a third person from performing his agreement within the time limited, however, there is no forfeiture. State v. Cockrem, 25 La. Ann. 356.

Removal as obstruction.—Where a street railway company has been granted by a borough the right to use a street on the condition that such right shall be forfeited if it does not within a year build a certain extension, the borough can remove the track from the street if the extension is not constructed within a year. *Minersville Borough v. For instance, where a company is authorized to lay a cable railway, the mere fact that it lays a track adapted only for use as a horse railway does not give to the city the right to abate it as a nuisance, but it must take action to compel the company to operate a cable line. *Spokane St. R. What constitutes laches.—Where a street railroad has failed to build an extension, which was the condition of its obtaining the use of the streets, indulgence by the borough in commencing proceedings to compel removal of the tracks, where the delay leads to no change in the situation, is not laches on the part of the borough. *Minersville Borough v. its use for travel is a public nuisance,⁷⁰ except where duly authorized by the state or municipality,⁷¹ regardless of the question of the comparative benefit to the public of the obstruction and the street.⁷² And an obstruction of the use of a sidewalk is as much a nuisance as the obstruction of any other part of the street.⁷³ But acts which would constitute a nuisance in connection with public highways are not necessarily a nuisance in a street of a municipality.⁷⁴

b. Exceptions to Rule. The rule that any obstruction of or encroachment on a street is a nuisance is subject to certain exceptions resulting from necessity and justified by public convenience.⁷⁵ In addition to the rights of abutting owners to encroach upon the street to a limited extent and for a temporary purpose, as in the course of erecting a building or removing goods from a store,⁷⁶ other persons may also temporarily obstruct the street in the course of their business where such obstruction is not unreasonable.⁷⁷ For instance, a reasonable use of the street for the purpose of delivering guests at and taking them from a hotel by means of cabs, carriages, and other vehicles is permissible.⁷⁸ And a coach or omnibus may stop in the street to take up or set down passengers,⁷⁹ and the use of a street for public travel may be temporarily interfered with in a variety of ways without the creation of a nuisance.⁸⁰

in an alley at the rear of a store;⁷ signs suspended over the sidewalk not interfering with the use of the walk by the general public;⁸ stepping stone on the sidewalk near the curb;⁹ temporary deposit of goods in their transit to a storehouse or for wharfage;¹⁰ and water-pipes already laid under the soil.¹¹ So the use of a steam traction engine and trailers in the streets of a city is not a public nuisance per se,¹² nor is the moving of a building through the streets.¹³

d. Defenses—(1) IN GENERAL. Ordinarily it is a good defense to a claim that an encroachment or obstruction is unlawful, and that it is a nuisance that the municipality has licensed such use of the street;¹⁴ but an unauthorized or invalid license is no defense.¹⁵ It is no defense that the obstructor is a common carrier,¹⁶ or an officer removing goods from a house in obedience to an execution;¹⁷ that permission was given by the abutting owner;¹⁸ that other persons are violating the ordinance;¹⁹ that the act was upon the advice of third persons;²⁰ or that the municipality had refused to fulfil another agreement.²¹ So where an ordinance is violated and the encroachment is a prepreture, it is no defense that the encroachment does no injury.²² An unauthorized agreement between the municipality and the obstructor is no defense.²³ A trespasser on a street as dedicated cannot defend on the ground that the city had not opened the street to its full width.²⁴ So an obstruction cannot be justified upon the ground of necessity where there are other methods, although more expensive.²⁵ Mere lapse of time and payment of personal taxes on the structure constituting the obstruction, where there is no element of estoppel except mere lapse of time, is no defense.²⁶ It is a defense that the municipality has neither a fee nor an easement in the alleged street claimed to be obstructed.²⁷ Where the title to the property is in a married woman, her husband is not liable, although he acted as the agent of his wife.²⁸

(2) PRESCRIPTION AND LIMITATION. The right to maintain a nuisance in a street cannot be acquired by prescription.²⁹ But authority to use the street may be presumed from municipal acquiescence therein for many years,³⁰ and the municipality may be estopped by its acquiescence or conduct from compelling the removal of the obstruction.³¹

e. Ejectment.³² A municipality may maintain ejectment to recover possession of a street,³³ without having previously passed an ordinance relating to the removal of the obstructions therein.³⁴

f. Removal—(r) IN GENERAL.³⁵ As trustee of streets for the use of the public a municipality is in duty bound to remove all obstructions and encroachments which materially disturb the public user;³⁶ and the prevailing doctrine holds it liable in damages to any person sustaining injury from its refusal or neglect to perform this function.³⁷ Any ordinary method of exercising this power, prescribed by the statute conferring it, is exclusive and must be followed;³⁸ but if not specially prescribed, then the municipality should under its general powers pursue such course consistent with fundamental law as is adequate and best adapted, with respect to the rights of persons interested, to effect the desired result, and protect the rights of the public in the street.³⁹ All methods may be classified under two heads—ordinary and summary; the former being those invoking judicial power on due notice and hearing,⁴⁰ the latter being by rapid and forcible means without hearing and judgment.⁴¹ A suit to compel specific performance of a contract to open a street is not the proper proceeding to remove an obstruction thereon.⁴²

Trees may be removed by a street commissioner where reasonably necessary to the proper construction of a sidewalk which the council has directed him to build. Wilson v. Simmons, 89 Me. 242, 36 Atl. 380. Where an obstruction, they may be removed without a hearing or notice to the abutting owner. Chase v. Oshkosh, 81 Wis. 313, 51 N. W. 560, 29 Am. St. Rep. 898, 15 L. R. A. 553.

Awnings.—Summary removal of awnings is proper where erected in contravention of, or without conformity to, an ordinance, or under a void license. Hibbard v. Chicago, 173 Ill. 91, 50 N. E. 256, 40 L. R. A. 621 [affirming 59 Ill. App. 470]; Simis v. Brookfield, 13 Misc. (N. Y.) 569, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 695; Hoey v. Gilroy, 14 N. Y. Suppl. 159 [reversed on other grounds in 129 N. Y. 132, 29 N. E. 85]. See also Bitzer v. Leverton, 9 Kan. App. 76, 57 Pac. 1045. But it has been held that power to regulate does not authorize removal of a safe structure which does not materially interfere with the free use and enjoyment of the sidewalk by the public; that an awning cannot be removed merely because it is an encroachment on the street, and that a municipality cannot direct the removal of all awnings on streets without regard to whether they are a nuisance in fact. Ilisey v. Mexico, 61 Mo. App. 248.

A railway track in a street cannot be forcibly torn up, where it does not obstruct passage on the street, until declared by the council to be a nuisance because laid without municipal permission. Cincinnati Northern R. Co. v. Cincinnati, 8 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 554, 8 Cinc. L. Bul. 334. It has been held that, although a city under a general ordinance might abate an unauthorized street railway without proceedings in court, it cannot do it under a mere resolution aimed at the particular railway. Spokane St. R. Co. v. Spokane Falls, 6 Wash. 521, 33 Pac. 1072.

Buildings and fences.—Hatton v. Chatham, 24 Ill. App. 622; Daublin v. New Orleans, 1 Mart. (La.) 184; Mussey v. Cahoon, 34 Me. 74; Concord v. Burleigh, 67 N. H. 106, 36 Atl. 606; Walker v. Caywood, 31 N. Y. 51; Yost v. South Bethlehem, 4 Lanc. L. Rev. (Pa.) 62; Childs v. Nelson, 69 Wis. 125, 33 N. W. 587. But see Frostburg v. Hitchins, 99 Md. 617, 59 Atl. 49; Sheldon v. Kalamazoo, 24 Mich. 383; Manko v. Chambersburgh, 25 N. J. Eq. 168. A building will not ordinarily be summarily removed on the mere ground that it encroaches on the street. Dawes v. Hightstown, 45 N. J. L. 127; Teass v. St. Albans, 38 W. Va. 1, 17 S. E. 400, 19 L. R. A. 802.

Telegraph poles see East Tennessee Tel. Co. v. Russellville, 106 Ky. 667, 51 S. W. 308, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 305; Com. v. Boston, 97 Mass. 555; Delaware, etc., Tel. Co. v. Pensauchen Tp., 67 N. J. L. 91, 50 Atl. 452. Where poles are erected under lawful authority but afterward the authority is legally revoked the municipality may summarily remove the poles on the failure or refusal of the company so to do after notice given. Coverdale v. Edwards, 155 Ind. 374, 58 N. E. 495. But a municipality cannot compel removal of poles upon a street, when erected under a lawful authority from the state, where the poles do not interfere with travel. Abbott v. Duluth, 104 Fed. 833 [affirmed in 117 Fed. 137, 55 C. C. A. 153].

Extent of power.—Power to remove from streets all obstructions and encroachments implies power to employ any appropriate means to ascertain and locate the street lines and boundaries and the existence and extent of such encroachments and obstructions. Lathrop v. Morristown, 65 N. J. L. 467, 47 Atl. 450.

a nuisance;⁴⁴ and ordinarily the power to summarily remove an obstruction can be legally exercised only where the right so to do is clear and from the nature of the obstruction it need not first be determined by resort to the courts.⁴⁵ Summary removal is not proper where the legal existence of the street is in dispute.⁴⁶ Encroachments are to be distinguished from obstructions;⁴⁷ and a mere encroachment not actually interfering with travel cannot be summarily removed except where there is charter or statutory authority therefor,⁴⁸ or where the city owns the fee of the street.⁴⁹ The particular municipal officer who may remove or order the removal of an obstruction depends upon charter or other statutory provisions.⁵⁰ Notice to remove should usually be first given,⁵¹ and also an opportunity to be heard in defense of the right to maintain the alleged obstruction.⁵² However, obstructions, as distinguished from mere encroachments, may generally be removed without notice to the owner thereof.⁵³ In some jurisdictions a resolution directing a removal of obstructions is insufficient, the power being exercisable only by ordinance.⁵⁴ Whether a thing is an obstruction is generally a question for the proper city authorities, and their determination cannot be reviewed except where an abuse of discretion is shown.⁵⁵ An ordinance for the removal of obstructions from the sidewalks must be of general application.⁵⁶ Equity will not ordinarily restrain the removal of an obstruction.⁵⁷

(B) *By Private Person.*⁵⁸ One who is specially injured by an obstruction on a street or alley may himself remove it,⁵⁹ but not before the street or alley is of the common council directing a street railway company to remove a cross-over from a street was made on the recommendation of the board of street commissioners after a hearing by such board, at which defendant was represented, such order was not passed without a reasonable notice to defendant, or an opportunity on its part to be heard. Hartford v. Hartford St. R. Co., 73 Conn. 327, 47 Atl. 330.

Mode of giving notice.—Where the statutes do not provide the manner in which an order of the common council directing a street railway company to remove obstructions from the street shall be brought to the company's notice, the mailing of a copy of the order to the company by the city clerk, and oral notice of its passage by the person on whose complaint the order was made, is sufficient. *Hartford v. opened for public use.⁶⁰ If not specially injured a private person cannot remove the obstruction.⁶¹

(c) Damages or Compensation to Owner. The owner of property removed is entitled to recover compensation, if taken under the power of eminent domain;⁶² but nothing if properly removed under the police power.⁶³ However, if a municipality assumes to exercise the summary power of removal it does so at its own risk and is liable in damages if the removal was unauthorized.⁶⁴ So a municipality is liable to the owner for a wanton or unnecessary injury in removing a nuisance, taking into consideration the kind of property removed and the attending circumstances.⁶⁵

(d) Expense of Removal. The lawful expense incurred by a municipality in removing obstructions is chargeable to the obstructor or encroacher.⁶⁶

(11) ACTION FOR ABATEMENT OR INJUNCTION—(A) *In General.*⁶⁷ An obstruction constituting a nuisance may be abated and enjoined by action,⁶⁸ but it must clearly appear to be a nuisance.⁶⁹ An attorney-general may sue in the name of the state,⁷⁰ or an action may be brought in the name of the people of the state.⁷¹ So the municipality may itself sue to restrain the continuance of an obstruction of a street,⁷² notwithstanding it has power to summarily remove the Particular officers.—But the mayor and the common council, where charged with the duty of keeping the streets of the city in a condition fit for safe and convenient use, are the proper persons to file a bill to prevent either the obstruction or destruction of a street. Newark v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 42 N. J. Eq. 196, 7 Atl. 123. The fact that the wharves of a city were, by an act of the legislature, authorized to be placed in the hands of a trustee for the benefit of certain holders of its bonds does not preclude a city charged with the duty of removing all nuisances from its streets from filing a bill to remove obstructions from such streets down to the wharf line. Mobile v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 124 Ala. 132, 26 So. 902.

Conditions precedent.—A municipal corporation may maintain an action in equity to obtain a mandatory injunction compelling the removal of an encroachment on one of its public streets, and need not first give to the wrong-doer an opportunity to remove it without suit, pursuant to an order made and served on him in accordance with Wis. Rev. St. (1898) § 1330, which provides that in every case where any highway shall be encroached on the supervisors of the town shall make an order requiring its removal, etc. Wauwatosa v. Dreutzer, 116 Wis. 117, 92 N. W. 551.

But see Garnett v. Jacksonville, etc., R. Co., 20 Fla. 889, holding that the maintenance of a public nuisance, such as a railroad built along a street without authority, will not be enjoined at the instance of an abutter.

Statutory provisions.—McWethy v. Aurora Electric Light, etc., Co., 202 Ill. 218, 67 N. E. 9 [affirming 104 Ill. App. 479].

Against adjoining owner.—The occupant of a store is entitled to have the occupant of an adjoining store enjoined from obstructing light and view by a show case, sign, and fence on the sidewalk. Hallock v. Scheyer, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 111. Compare Wormser v. Brown, 72 Hun (N. Y.) 93, 25 N. Y. Suppl. 553 [affirmed in 149 N. Y. 163, 43 N. E. 524]. though the abutter is not the owner of the fee in the street.⁹⁶ But the act complained of must be clearly shown to be an obstruction.⁹⁷ On the other hand an abutter is not entitled to an injunction where he is merely injured in common with the rest of the community even though in a greater degree.⁹⁸ Remote danger will not suffice, but it must be threatened and probable.⁹⁹ The injury must be material,¹ and the remedy at law must be inadequate.² Equity will not interfere to prevent slight injuries to technical rights but only serious damage to substantial rights.³ The easements of an abutter in the street are appurtenant to the land and cannot be reserved to him on a sale of the property so as to enable

Presumptions.—Where it is attempted to vacate a portion of a street on which a parcel of land is situated, but not abutting so as to prevent access all around the block in which such parcel lies, the court will assume as a matter of law that the owner of such parcel sustains damages by such vacation of a different kind from that sustained by the general public, and he may maintain injunction to prevent such vacation and obstruction. *Highbarger v. him to enjoin the commission of trespass thereon or to recover damages which accrued after the sale.⁴

(c) *Parties.*⁵ Adjoining owners may join as plaintiffs,⁶ but property-owners on one street cannot join the property-owners on another street to enjoin a use of the street by a public service corporation.⁷ Where the action is brought by the municipality the state need not be joined as a party,⁸ but any property holders injuriously affected may be joined as plaintiffs.⁹ Where an abutting owner sues he need not join the municipality as a plaintiff,¹⁰ and no one need be joined as defendants other than the alleged trespassers.¹¹

(d) Procedure and Relief. The complaint must set forth the facts showing the obstruction,¹² but need not state whether the dedication of the street was effected in the manner prescribed by statute or as at common law.¹³ If the complaint is not sufficiently definite in its statements as to special damages, objections thereto must be raised before trial.¹⁴ The prayer for relief may be general or special.¹⁵ The answer must meet the allegation of the complaint.¹⁶ Generally the question whether a certain thing is an obstruction is a question of fact for the jury.¹⁷ Findings as to the existence of a nuisance must be consistent.¹⁸ The judgment is governed by the rules applicable to judgments in civil actions in general,¹⁹ such as that the judgment must conform to the verdict.²⁰ Where, after the decree is rendered, a state of facts arises which renders the maintenance of the obstruction lawful, the decree may be declared to be no longer binding.²¹

Amount of recovery.—The damages recoverable by a property-owner for the unlawful obstruction of a street in front of it are such as will compensate for the loss which, in the judgment of the jury, directly and naturally resulted from the injury, and are the same without regard to the form of action. Hetzel v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 169 U. S. 26, 18 S. Ct. 255, 42 L. ed. 648 [reversing 7 App. Cas. (D. C.) 524]. The measure of damages recoverable by an abutter from one unlawfully using or obstructing a street is the special damage suffered by the abutter before bringing the suit (Hopkins v. Western Pac. R. Co., 50 Cal. 190; Florida Southern R. Co. v. Brown, 23 Fla. 104, 1 So. 512; Advance Elevator, etc., Co. v. Eddy, 23 Ill. App. 352; Uline v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 101 N. Y. 98, 4 N. brought against the municipality in a proper case for the damages thereby caused and for the abatement of the nuisance.⁵⁰

h. Penalties and Actions Therefor.³¹ In many jurisdictions statutes and ordinances fix a penalty for obstructing a street.³² Municipal power to impose penalties for encroachments and obstructions is not inherent;³³ but municipalities, in connection with their general delegated power to control streets and prohibit obstructions therein, ordinarily have power to prescribe punishment by fine or imprisonment for the violation of ordinances relating to obstructions.³⁴ Statutes and ordinances imposing a penalty afford no right of action to a private individual where the act does not amount to a nuisance.³⁵ Such penal ordinances are strictly construed,³⁶ although ordinances subjecting "any person" to a penalty are held to include a corporation.³⁷ A licensee is not liable for such penalties where the work is being done by an independent contractor,³⁸ nor where he has been granted a temporary private use of a street, although it amounts to a temporary obstruction, at least until a demand by the municipality to relinquish the use.³⁹ So a municipal servant acting under charter power is not liable to the statutory penalty for obstructing streets.⁴⁰ Proof of all the elements of the offense must be made to warrant a recovery,⁴¹ and the burden of showing the encroachment is on the municipality.⁴² A judgment against defendant without stating on which charge judgment was given is void for uncertainty where there are two distinct charges.⁴³

i. Criminal Responsibility.⁴⁴ Any encroachment or obstruction amounting to a nuisance is indictable at common law,⁴⁵ and in many jurisdictions by express

Wentworth*, Brightly (Pa.) 318.

Persons affected.—To make an obstruction an indictable offense, it must injuriously affect some public right—some right in statute.⁴⁶ An indictment lies, although the street obstructed has not been entirely opened and made fit for all uses,⁴⁷ but not where it has never been opened or is not used by the public.⁴⁸ Obstructions which are misdemeanors are punishable, under indictment, information, or complaint, brought in the name of the state;⁴⁹ and it must include all the elements of the offense.⁵⁰ Proof must be introduced to show that the way obstructed was a public street or alley,⁵¹ and the findings must include every essential ingredient of the offense.⁵² Questions of boundary or servitude are not involved so as to deprive inferior courts of jurisdiction.⁵³ Where the structure is shown to be on defendant's private property no costs are taxable against him.⁵⁴

10. USE OF HIGHWAY — a. In General.⁵⁵ The primary and paramount use of the street is public travel for man and beast, and carriage for goods;⁵⁶ and this use everyone enjoys upon terms of equality with others.⁵⁷ The right to travel on and along the streets of a municipality applies to the general public and does not apply to its citizens alone.⁵⁸ A municipality, however, may enact such ordinances relating to the use of a street as a highway by the public as are reasonable and within the power conferred upon it by its charter or other statutory provisions.⁵⁹ But the power conferred on a municipality to regulate the use of its

which the public, in their aggregate capacity, have a common interest, as distinguished from a mere individual or private right. If it affect only the rights of an individual, or of a definite number of persons less than the whole in their individual capacity, the several persons actually injured have their remedy by private action, but no indictment lies. People v. Jackson, 7 Mich. 432, 74 Am. Dec. 729.

Persons liable.—Where an officer, in executing a writ of restitution, places on the sidewalk goods removed from the premises, allowing them to remain there is the offense of the owner of the goods and not of the officer. Williams v. District of Columbia, 22 App. Cas. (D. C.) 471.

The existence of other like obstructions is no defense. Com. v. Kembel, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 199.

Evidence.—Upon the trial of an indictment for a nuisance in maintaining a building dangerous to the public, resolutions of the common council of the city, passed when defendant, who was a member, was present, declaring the building unsafe and a nuisance, are not competent evidence. *Chute v. Distribution of hand bills.—It has been held that a municipality, in the exercise of its police power, may forbid the distribution of hand bills which will naturally be thrown by the receiver into the streets and tend to frighten horses. Wettengel v. Denver, 20 Colo. 552, 39 Pac. 343. On the other hand, it has been held that a municipal charter streets and alleys does not include authority to deprive the public of the right to use the streets for travel by any ordinary or reasonable method of locomotion.⁶⁰ All ordinances as to the use of streets are to be construed with reference to changing methods of locomotion,⁶¹ and environment,⁶² and the constraint of overpowering necessity.⁶³

b. Processions, and Unusual Noises and Performances. The ordinary obstruction of a street by a parade does not of itself constitute a nuisance.⁶⁴ But a municipality has power to prohibit public meetings or gatherings in its streets without a permit from a specified municipal officer,⁶⁵ although prohibiting all per-giving power to clean the streets and prevent their encumbrance or obstruction, and regulating the manner of use, and to prevent all amusements and practices having a tendency to frighten horses or which are dangerous to life or property, did not authorize an ordinance prohibiting the distribution of hand bills or advertising cards upon any of the public streets or alleys of the city. People v. Armstrong, 73 Mich. 288, 41 N. W. 275, 16 Am. St. Rep. 578, 2 L. R. A. 721.

Driving cattle.—An ordinance prohibiting any person from permitting cattle under his care to go upon the sidewalk is not void for unreasonableness because a driver is thereby bound at all hazards to prevent their going on the sidewalk and is not excused by the exercise of reasonable care. Com. v. Curtis, 9 Allen (Mass.) 266. Charter power to "regulate and control" the driving of cattle through the streets will not sustain an ordinance effectually prohibiting such driving. McConvill v. Jersey City, 39 N. J. L. 38.

Carrying placard or sign.—An ordinance providing that no person should place or carry on any sidewalk any show board, placard, or sign for the purpose of display is violated by a person walking on a sidewalk having over his shoulder a piece of oilcloth worn like a vest or coat on which was printed a strikers' notice. Com. v. McCafferty, 145 Mass. 384, 14 N. E. 451.

Exhibition of stud horses.—Under power to prevent and remove nuisances, a municipality is authorized to prohibit as a nuisance the showing or exhibiting of stud horses on the streets. Nolin v. Franklin, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 163.

Peddlers.—An ordinance providing that "no person shall place or suffer to be placed upon or over any sidewalk . . . goods, wares or merchandise . . . beyond the front line of the lot where such goods may be placed" applies to peddlers exposing their goods for sale on the sidewalk for an unreasonable time. And twenty minutes is an unreasonable time for a peddler to expose his goods for sale at one place on the sidewalk. State v. Messolongitis, 74 Minn. 165, 77 N. W. 29.

Lamps on bicycles.—Power to provide for the safety of its inhabitants gives authority to pass an ordinance requiring bicycles on the street after dark to carry lights. Des Moines v. Keller, 116 Iowa 648, 88 N. W. 827, 93 Am. St. Rep. 268. See also Massinger v. Millville, 63 N. J. L. 123, 43 Atl. 443.

Ringing bicycle bell on approaching crossing.—An ordinance requiring every person using a bicycle to ring an alarm bell upon approaching any and all crossings or cross walks is not, as a matter of law, unreasonable. Emporia v. Wagoner, 6 Kan. App. 659, 49 Pac. 701.

Right of way to fire patrol.—An ordinance giving the fire insurance patrol right of way in the streets over all vehicles except those carrying mail, and making it a misdemeanor to refuse to accord such right of way, is a valid police regulation, not in conflict with the constitution. Duffghe v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 109 N. Y. App. Div. 603, 96 N. Y. Suppl. 324 [affirmed in 187 N. Y. 522, 79 N. E. 1104].

Imposing conditions.—Where discretionary power is vested in a certain municipal officer to grant permits to drive or back vehicles across sidewalks for certain purposes, the officer has no implied authority to impose conditions as to sprinkling streets by the person given the permit. Whalen v. Willis, 18 N. Y. App. Div. 350, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 52.

60. Chicago v. Collins, 175 Ill. 445, 51 N. E. 907, 67 Am. St. Rep. 224, 49 L. R. A. 408.

The right of the public to use the streets for purposes of travel is not limited to any particular method of travel but includes the right to travel by any ordinary method of locomotion or even an extraordinary method if it is not of itself calculated to prevent a reasonably safe use of the streets by others. Chicago v. Collins, 175 Ill. 445, 51 N. E. 907, 67 Am. St. Rep. 224, 49 L. R. A. 408.

Traction engines.—Exclusive power over streets conferred on a municipality does not include power to prohibit the running of a traction engine on the streets. Bogue v. Bennett, 156 Ind. 478, 60 N. E. 143, 83 Am. St. Rep. 212.

A singing salvation army procession, marching on Sunday through city streets, is not a nuisance. People v. Rochester, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 166.

65. Bloomington v. Richardson, 38 Ill. App. 60.

Construction of ordinance.—An ordinance prohibiting "public meetings" on the streets sons or associations from parading the streets with flags or music unless a permit has been secured is invalid because unreasonable,⁶⁶ and also because its enforcement is left merely to unregulated discretion.⁶⁷ A cornet player in a salvation army parade is an "itinerant musician" within an ordinance prohibiting itinerant musicians from playing on the streets.⁶⁸ A statute providing that any person using a traction or road engine on a street shall send a person in advance to warn approaching teams does not apply to a steam roller used in making or repairing city streets.⁶⁹

c. Moving Buildings on Streets. A citizen has a common-law right to the reasonable use of streets for the purpose of moving buildings,⁷⁰ subject to reasonable restrictions which the municipality may impose.⁷¹ Generally a permit must first be obtained from the municipal authorities.⁷² The owner of a building who seeks and obtains permission of the municipality to move it through the city streets is under an obligation to complete the removal within a reasonable time,⁷³ and if he fails to do so and the building is allowed to obstruct travel and become a public nuisance, the municipality may, after notice to the owner, destroy or without a permit applies only to meetings held pursuant to some notice intended and adapted to reach the general public for the purpose of considering some object of interest to the public, and does not apply to a salvation army which stops to sing, pray, and testify. Bloomington v. Richardson, 38 Ill. App. 60.

Making a speech in a street is not per se a nuisance. Fairbanks v. Kerr, 70 Pa. St. 86, 10 Am. Rep. 664.

66. Rich v. Naperville, 42 Ill. App. 222; Anderson v. Wellington, 40 Kan. 173, 19 Pac. 719, 10 Am. St. Rep. 175, 2 L. R. A. 110; In re Frazee, 63 Mich. 396, 30 N. W. 72, 6 Am. St. Rep. 310. In New York, however, it is held that the legislature may delegate to municipalities the power to make a by-law declaring it unlawful to go upon the streets beating a drum or tambourine or making any noise with any instrument without the written permission of a specified municipal officer; and that such an ordinance is authorized by statutes giving power to make ordinances for the preservation of the public peace and to regulate and prevent on the streets any act endangering person or property. Roderick v. Whitson, 51 Hun 620, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 112.

Unreasonable discriminations.—A fortiori the forbidding marching on streets accompanied by shouting, singing, or music without the consent of a specified officer, but exempting therefrom fire companies and state militia, and providing that political organizations need not obtain a permit, is void as making unreasonable discrimination and conferring arbitrary power upon municipal officers. State v. Dering, 84 Wis. 585, 54 N. W. 1104, 36 Am. St. Rep. 948, 19 L. R. A. 858.

Salvation army.—An ordinance forbidding noise in any street, or any assemblage of persons in the streets to the annoyance or disturbance of others, is not violated by a salvation army parade. People v. Rochester, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 166, 8 N. Y. St. 291.

On the other hand, it has been held that ordinances conferring on an officer the right in his discretion to permit the beating of drums in the traveled streets of the city, although forbidding it when such permission is not granted, are not invalid as a derogation of the legislative power of control. In re Flaherty, 105 Cal. 558, 38 Pac. 981, 27 L. Cutting wires.—The moving of a building along a highway when permission is obtained from the proper authorities is a use of the highway within Pub. St. (1882) c. 109, § 17, providing for the necessary cutting, disconnecting, or removing of electric wires in the necessary use of streets. *A. M. Richards Bldg. Moving Co. v. remove the building without liability therefor, unless its action is so unreasonable or unjust as to be inconsistent with legal principles.⁷⁴

d. Stopping or Standing in Streets.⁷⁵ Regulations as to stopping or standing in streets are in force in many municipalities.⁷⁶ An ordinance prohibiting vehicles from stopping in the streets for more than twenty minutes has been held valid,⁷⁷ and applicable to licensed peddlers as well as to others;⁷⁸ and to a voluntary as distinguished from an involuntary stoppage.⁷⁹ So an ordinance prohibiting persons "idly standing, loafing or congregating" on streets is within the municipal police power.⁸⁰

e. Regulation of Speed. Ordinances restraining fast riding and driving in the streets have been uniformly sustained as valid; and limitations of speed to from six to eight miles an hour,⁸¹ to "an ordinary trot,"⁸² or "a moderate foot pace"⁸³ have been held reasonable. So a municipality has the power to regulate the speed of automobiles and to require the use of reasonable safety appliances.⁸⁴ Such speed limit ordinances have been held applicable to ambulances,⁸⁵ but not to the vehicles of the fire department,⁸⁶ nor salvage corps.⁸⁷ An ordinance regulating the speed of vehicles is not invalid because different rates of speed are allowed in different portions of the prescribed territory.⁸⁸

f. Prohibiting or Limiting Kinds of Vehicles—(1) IN GENERAL. The power of a municipal corporation "to regulate traffic" on its streets does not include the power to prohibit the use of vehicles on parts of certain streets,⁸⁹ except perhaps in a case of emergency, such as a conflagration or abnormal congestion of traffic.⁹⁰ But the power to authorize a municipality to vacate one of its streets includes the power to authorize it to limit the use of a street to a particular purpose benefiting the public,⁹¹ and, under authority conferred upon it by a general

Reasonableness.—A statute authorizing a municipality to designate not to exceed two streets as public driveways for pleasure driving only is not unreasonable in providing for the exclusion of traffic teams from such highways. Cicero Lumber Co. v. Cicero, 176 Ill. 9, 51 N. E. 758, 68 Am. St. Rep. 155, 42 L. R. A. 696.

act of the legislature, a municipality has the power to limit the use of a street to a pleasure driveway.⁹²

(11) WEIGHT OF LOADS. A municipality authorized to regulate the use of its streets may prohibit the hauling of heavy loads weighing more than a certain number of pounds on wagons having tires less than a certain width.⁹³ So it has been held that the weight of the load may be limited to three tons where the load consists of an article which can be divided,⁹⁴ and that the municipality may prohibit drawing a load weighing over a certain amount over any paved street of the city.⁹⁵ Whether a by-law restricting heavy loads to a certain portion of the street is reasonable and valid with reference to the way and locality in dispute depends on whether the portion of the street which may be used by heavily loaded vehicles is reasonably suitable for the purpose.⁹⁶

g. Use of Sidewalk—(1) IN GENERAL. An ordinance forbidding driving "along" a sidewalk does not apply to passing "across,"⁹⁷ and even if it did it would be unreasonable so far as applicable to an abutting owner's rights of ingress or egress.⁹⁸ An ordinance prohibiting the driving, backing, or leaving of any horse or vehicle on a sidewalk does not prohibit the carting of dirt from excavations across the sidewalk.⁹⁹ Ordinances have been enacted allowing an abutting owner to drive on the sidewalk to a limited extent where railroad tracks in the street prevent him from keeping a vehicle in front of his store without interference with the passage of cars.¹

Wilful act.—Intentionally riding a bicycle on a sidewalk is doing it wilfully and wrongfully, within N. Y. Pen. Code, § 652, providing that any person who wilfully and without authority drives any bicycle on a sidewalk is punishable by a fine, etc. People v. Meyer, 26 Misc. (N. Y.) 117, 56 N. Y. Construction of ordinances.—An ordinance making it unlawful to drive or propel any wagon or other vehicle on a sidewalk, amended by the provision, "but nothing herein contained shall be construed to include the conveyance of children on sidewalks in small carriages . . . or the riding of bicycles on any street . . . within the following described district," neither affirmatively permits nor prohibits the riding of bicycles on sidewalks. *Rogers v. h. Liabilities of Persons Using Streets—(1) IN GENERAL.⁶ Without considering the liability of the municipality,⁷ or of an abutting owner,⁸ for injuries to persons using the street, the rule is that a person is liable for his negligence or other wrongful act in using a street where it results in an injury to another person using the street,⁹ subject of course to the rule that there can be no recovery if plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence.¹⁰ Foot passengers and drivers of vehicles have equal rights on the streets and both are bound to exercise commen-

Defenses.—Where a horse was negligently left untied in the street, and he ran away and injured plaintiff, it was no defense that the horse was ordinarily gentle, and that the possible cause of his running away was his being stung by bees in the street. Healy v. Johnson, 127 Iowa 221, 103 N. W. 92.

Admissibility of evidence.—In an action for injuries to plaintiff by defendant's runaway horse negligently left unsecured in a city street, evidence that the street where plaintiff was injured was much frequented by children, and that defendant's employee had knowledge thereof was admissible. *Healy v. Unbroken horses.—A purchaser of unbroken horses is bound to apprehend the exhibition of want of restraint during process of training, whatever assurances of docility may have accompanied the sale; and, when it is made apparent on a trial that a horse is not kind and gentle, he must exercise caution commensurate with the danger, while driving it through the streets. *Conway v. Persons on street cars.—It is negligence per se for a motorman to run his car at such a high rate of speed that he cannot stop it within the distance at which he can see an obstruction ahead of him on the track. Regan v. McCarthy, 119 Ill. App. 578. But it is not negligence per se for a passenger to stand on the running board of an electric car. Frank Bird Transfer Co. v. Morrow, 36 Ind. App. 305, 72 N. E. 189. So where a person driving a team alongside a street car did not attempt to check them when the car was being stopped, a passenger getting off was not guilty of contributory negligence in not looking back before stepping off the car. Sandifer v. Lynn, 52 Mo. App. 553. A street car conductor, whose duties require him to go from the forward end of the car to the rear, and who chooses the street as a means of so doing, has a right to rely upon the exercise of reasonable care by drivers of vehicles to avoid causing injury to persons in the street, and is not guilty of contributory negligence in failing to anticipate the omission of such care. Caesar v. Fifth Ave. Coach Co., 45 Misc. (N. Y.) 331, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 359.

Driving between van and curb.—A person driving a light wagon at a moderate gait, with his horse under full control, was guilty of contributory negligence in endeavoring to drive between a large van driven by a fellow servant and the curb, toward which the van was backing, when he could and should have driven out and passed in front of the van. Roe v. Standard Furniture Co., 41 Wash. 546, 83 Pac. 1109.

Running into danger.—A pedestrian who, in the effort to escape a collision with a galloping horse, first observed when but fourteen or fifteen feet away, really runs into the danger, is not guilty of contributory negligence, as a matter of law. *Rush v. Injury to street cleaner.—Where a street cleaner was injured by being run into by a team attached to an ice wagon permitted to pass along the street without being guided, the fact that the street cleaner did not keep constantly on the alert to keep out of the way of teams, and while at his work stepped aside from a direct course to go to the side of the street to empty his shovel without looking behind him, by reason of which he was injured, did not constitute contributory negligence as a matter of law. *Turtenwald v. Right to assume that driver will lessen his speed.—A pedestrian about to cross a street in front of an approaching vehicle is not negligent in assuming that the driver would lessen his speed as an alternative to a collision. Schwartz v. London, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 449. But the existence of an ordinance against fast driving will not authorize a person crossing a street to presume that it will be obeyed if he knows that a team is being driven at a forbidden rate of speed. Baker v. Pendergast, 32 Ohio St. 494, 30 Am. Rep. 620.

A person seventy-two years old, who, when crossing an icy street, sees a sleigh approaching at a distance, is not guilty of negligence in failing to watch the sleigh and keep out of its way, the street being otherwise occupied. McCrohan v. Davison, 187 Mass. 466, 73 N. E. 553.

street ordinance is admissible to show negligence,²⁵ and as bearing upon the contributory negligence of plaintiff,²⁶ and generally makes out a prima facie case of negligence per se,²⁷ which may be defeated by the contributory negligence of plaintiff.²⁸

(B) By Plaintiff. The fact that one is injured while violating an ordinance regulating the use of streets, through the negligence of another, does not defeat his right to recovery unless his unlawful act was a contributing cause to the injury; ²⁹ but where the violation of an ordinance contributes directly and proximately to cause the injury no recovery can be had.³⁰

Persons liable.—Where a day hack-driver, without the authority of the owner, used the hack in the night-time without observing an ordinance directing him to keep two lighted lamps on his carriage, the owner was not liable to the penalty. Campbell v. Providence, 9 R. I. 262.

(ii) DEFENSES. It is no defense to a prosecution for unlawful riding on a sidewalk that others did likewise without complaint,³² nor that the informer contributed nothing to the original construction of the sidewalk or did not aid in keeping it in repair,³³ nor that the abutting owner consented to such use of the sidewalk,³⁴ nor that the street was muddy where with full notice of the state of the street the driver loads his wagon and drives along to the dangerous point.³⁵ It is no defense to a complaint for fast driving that the mayor and city marshal had given oral permission,³⁶ nor that no person was endangered by such driving,³⁷ nor that defendant had a reputation as a careful driver;³⁸ but defendant may prove his motive where a discretion is allowed to the jury in fixing the imprisonment.³⁹ It is no defense that there was no actual disturbance or breach of the peace on the particular occasion.⁴⁰ So it is generally no defense that the intention was good,⁴¹ nor that efforts were made by defendant to prevent a breach of the ordinance,⁴² nor that obedience to the ordinance would raise the price of necessities.⁴³ Where an ordinance imposed a penalty on the owner of a vehicle kept for hire for neglect to light the lamps of his vehicle at night, it is no defense that such owner was not present and had no knowledge of such violation.⁴⁴ A driver of a cab left standing on the street is to be deemed personally with the cab, although actually out of sight in a railroad station soliciting passengers, so as to preclude him from denying that he was standing in a place different from that assigned him by the municipal officers.⁴⁵ Where an ordinance vacating the street obstructed is relied upon, it must be presumed that defendant knew of the invalidity of the ordinance where it was not passed as required by the statute.⁴⁶

(iii) COMPLAINT, INFORMATION, INDICTMENT, OR WARRANT.⁴⁷ A complaint for violating an ordinance which uses substantially the words of the by-law or regulation is sufficient.⁴⁸ Where wilfulness⁴⁹ or unreasonableness⁵⁰ is a necessary element to constitute the offense, such words must be used in the complaint. A conviction for a common-law nuisance cannot be had under a complaint for violating a by-law.⁵¹ Where a given act is made by ordinance an offense in itself without reference to actual obstruction of public travel or expressed intent to obstruct, the complaint need not allege that the public travel was obstructed and that defendant intended to so do.⁵²

(iv) EVIDENCE AND PROOF. The admissibility of evidence is governed by the rules relating to the admissibility of evidence in civil actions and criminal prosecutions in general.⁵³ In an action or prosecution for fast driving, it is not necessary to prove that any person was endangered by such driving, where this is not required by the ordinance or by-law.⁵⁴

(v) QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT. Whether a nuisance at common law was committed by using a street as a stand for hourly coaches is a question of fact for the jury;⁵⁵ but whether an ordinance prohibiting driving on streets faster than a rapid walk is reasonable is a question of law.⁵⁶

B. Sewers, Drains, and Watercourses — 1. IN GENERAL. A municipality, in the exercise of its discretionary powers as to the necessity or propriety of establishing a drainage or sewerage system, and deciding upon the plan and character of the work, acts in a legislative or quasi-judicial capacity,⁵⁷ and in the actual work of construction or repairing the system in a ministerial capacity;⁵⁸ but the construction and maintenance of municipal drains and sewers is a corporate or municipal as distinguished from a governmental function,⁵⁹ and the system when constructed is the property of the municipality,⁶⁰ and the general public of the state at large have no interest therein.⁶¹ Unless the duty is positively imposed by the state, the municipality has discretion to determine whether it will construct a system of drains or sewers,⁶² and also as to the nature, extent, capacity, and cost of the system,⁶³ and a mere statutory authority to construct does not impose any duty to exercise such authority.⁶⁴ While the general rule is that municipal corporations may exercise their powers only within their corporate limits,⁶⁵ they are sometimes expressly authorized to go beyond such limits for drainage or sewerage purposes;⁶⁶ and if authorized to construct such a system they have implied authority when necessary to go beyond their limits and acquire property or make suitable contracts to obtain an outlet for the system so as to make it effective.⁶⁷ The municipality may of course use the streets for the construction of a sewerage system,⁶⁸ and may be authorized by the legislature to condemn other property for this purpose.⁶⁹ Authority to construct and maintain sewers gives no right to create a nuisance,⁷⁰ or to construct sewers or discharge sewage upon private lands or into private watercourses without permission or acquiring the right to do so by lawful means and making due compensation to the landowner for the injuries sustained,⁷¹ and a municipal corporation having constructed a sewer must see that it is kept in a proper state of repair.⁷² Soil taken from one part of a sewerage system may be removed to another,⁷³ and the surface of lands acquired for sewerage purposes may be also used for school purposes.⁷⁴ A sewer is an interest in land, subject to registration laws;⁷⁵ and when constructed or adopted by the municipality is a public sewer, although the proceedings were irregular;⁷⁶ but occupation by permission does not give title by prescription,⁷⁷ or a license for branch connections.⁷⁸

2. PRIVATE SEWERS AND DRAINS. The municipality has control of the space below the surface of the street, whenever and so far as public user requires,⁷⁹ and may regulate or prevent its use for private drains or sewers,⁸⁰ or it may permit an individual to construct under proper circumstances and restrictions a private drain or sewer in its streets,⁸¹ without the consent of the abutting owner,⁸² to the use of which when constructed he will have the exclusive right.⁸³ A license for this purpose is usually revocable,⁸⁴ but the right to construct a private sewer may be so granted as to give the owner a vested right therein which the city cannot revoke.⁸⁵ A drain neither constructed nor controlled by the municipality is not a public sewer,⁸⁶ but one constructed by private persons may pass to the public by dedication and acceptance.⁸⁷ Private sewers cannot be taken or destroyed by a municipality in its construction of public sewers without making compensation to the owner for their value, as in the case of other private property taken for public use.⁸⁸

3. POWER TO CONTROL AND REGULATE. The right of a municipality to regulate and control the use of its drains and sewers is a necessary incident of their ownership,⁸⁹ and such right may be protected and enforced by injunction,⁹⁰ or the imposition of proper penalties;⁹¹ The municipality may also, in so far as the public necessities require, regulate the use of private drains and sewers;⁹² but it cannot under its police power invade or impair private rights, unless the public welfare and safety demands it;⁹³ and where regulation is necessary, as to prevent a nuisance, the power should be reasonably exercised and private rights not be impaired further than the circumstances require.⁹⁴

4. CONNECTIONS. Property-owners have no right to make connections with a municipal sewer without the consent of the municipality;⁹⁵ but the municipality may in the interest of the public health and welfare require them to do so,⁹⁶ at their own expense,⁹⁷ although the sewer runs through private property.⁹⁸ The municipality may also impose any reasonable conditions and regulations in regard to making such connections,⁹⁹ and fix and determine the fees and charges therefor,¹ and it is not prevented from so doing by the fact that it has for a number of years permitted connections to be made without charge;² but the regulations must be reasonable,³ and the charges uniform and without discrimination against particular property-owners.⁴ The municipality may require as conditions for permitting the connection a written application with description of the property,⁵ the prepayment

5. MANNER OF USE. Unless restrained by statute a municipal corporation may permit any appropriate use to be made of its sewers,²³ or drains and gutters.²⁴ A license to a landowner to connect with a sewer authorizes him to use it only for such purposes as are legitimate and proper,²⁵ and an open drain or gutter designed for carrying off surface waters must not be used for purposes which will create a nuisance.²⁶

6. NATURAL WATERCOURSES. Natural watercourses running through a municipal corporation, if not navigable waters, belong to the riparian owners,²⁷ who may use them for any legitimate purpose which will not affect the rights of other riparian owners or create a nuisance.²⁸ Where a natural watercourse is not a sewer the city has no control over it except the power to keep it cleaned out as a health measure,²⁹ and prevent its being obstructed so as to overflow or injure the public streets,³⁰ unless the power of control is conferred by statute.³¹ It has no right to divert water from such a stream to the detriment of lower proprietors,³² nor to so exercise a power of control conferred by its charter as to deprive persons who have acquired a vested water right in the stream of their property without due process of law,³³ nor to authorize a person to construct a private sewer discharging into an open watercourse which is not a public sewer so as to create a nuisance,³⁴ nor can it compel one landowner to remove an obstruction from the stream merely on the ground of protecting the property of another landowner; ³⁵ but it may prevent an obstruction which will cause a stream to flood or injure the public streets,³⁶ or require

A drain or sewer constructed to protect streets and property from damage by overflow from a stream is not necessarily limited in its use to the conducting of water from the property which it is constructed to protect, but the city may permit the owners of other property through which it passes to connect their private drains therewith on paying a reasonable compensation, and this source of revenue should be considered in determining the apportionment of the cost of construction between the municipality and the property-owners who are assessed. *Patton v. 1. PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND PROPERTY—*a. In General.*⁴⁰ Municipal corporations may ordinarily, under their charter provisions, regulate and control the use of their public buildings.⁴¹ Property held under grant for a specific municipal use may not be perverted to any other use;⁴² but a municipal building such as a town house may be used for any municipal purposes for which it is suited and for which the municipality might provide buildings,⁴³ and although a building was erected or acquired primarily for a special purpose it may be used incidentally for other municipal purposes not exclusive of the primary use.⁴⁴ A municipality may also either gratuitously or for compensation⁴⁵ permit buildings erected for a municipal purpose to be used incidentally for private purposes, which will not interfere with public use,⁴⁶ such as the use of a city hall for lectures, entertainments, or theatrical performances;⁴⁷ and where in constructing such a building provision is made for future necessities, the municipality may rent temporarily such portions of the building as are not needed for the time being.⁴⁸ Personal property owned absolutely by a municipality may be used by the municipal authorities in their discretion in any manner which is not fraudulent or unlawful.⁴⁹ Unless expressly empowered towns or cities have no control over or right in

Removal of buildings.—Under a city charter which imposes upon the common council the duty to manage, regulate, and control the property of the city, an order made by the council for the destruction and removal of a city building is not invalidated by the fact that a majority of the voters of the city have expressed themselves against the destruction under an order of a prior council submitting the question to them, since the executive power to determine such questions is in the council itself. *Whitney v. A private citizen cannot maintain an action to enjoin city officers from allowing the use of the city auditorium for entertainments for private profit, even if such use be wrongful, there being no damage peculiar to him in kind but only in degree from that sustained by the general public, notwithstanding he is the owner of an opera-house the profits of which may be lessened thereby. *Amusement Syndicate Co. v. b. Means of Public Transportation. The city of New Orleans has under its charter and the general statutes the right to control, manage, and administer the use of the river banks within the corporate limits for the public use and convenience (Watson v. Turnbull, 34 La. Ann. 856); and the municipal authorities may demolish structures which tend to obstruct their use (Henderson v. New Orleans, 3 La. 563).

Under the Washington constitution providing for the appointment of commissioners to establish harbor lines in navigable waters in front of cities, the term "cities" is construed as also including towns. State v. Harbor Line Com'rs, 4 Wash. 6, 29 Pac. 938.

Location of deep water line.—Under the North Carolina statute of 1893, it is the duty of the authorities of incorporated towns situated on navigable waters, upon the application of riparian owners, to regulate the line on deep water to which wharves may be built. Wool v. Edenton, 117 N. C. 1, 23 S. E. 40.

A court of equity cannot interfere with discretionary powers vested in a municipal corporation by statute in regard to the control of public landings, and will not enjoin a municipality from removing a building constituting an obstruction upon a public landing, although it was erected in good faith by a person who believed himself to be the owner of the land on which it was erected. Sayers v. Lyons, 10 Iowa 249.

Particular ordinances construed.—A sale of a cargo of flour by the barrel and of hams by the single ham is a sale by retail, within the meaning of an ordinance to prevent a levee from being obstructed by boats tarrying to effect a sale of cargo by retail. Griffin v. New Orleans, 5 Mart. N. S. (La.) 279. By extending the privilege of breaking up flat-vessels to land at its wharves and landings and pay wharfage.⁶³ But the statute is the measure of its authority,⁶⁴ and any provisions as to how the rights conferred shall be exercised must be complied with.⁶⁵ The municipality must also exercise its powers with due regard to the private rights of littoral or riparian proprietors,⁶⁶ and of the proprietors of private wharves⁶⁷ and ferries;⁶⁸ and power to establish dock and wharf lines and to restrain encroachments and prevent obstructions to navigation does not authorize a municipality to declare a structure a nuisance which in fact is not a nuisance,⁶⁹ or to prohibit the erection of warehouses or other appropriate structures upon private wharves above high water level.⁷⁰ A legislative grant of power to a municipality to make improvements in its water fronts or harbor is not obligatory but optional,⁷¹ and the probability that the municipality may at some future time condemn certain property for public purposes is no ground for enjoining the owner from constructing a permanent improvement thereon.⁷² The municipality may enact such ordinances as are necessary to carry into effect the powers granted, provided they do not conflict with any existing constitutional or statutory provisions;⁷³ and the fact that some provisions of an ordinance are invalid will not necessarily prevent the enforcement of other provisions which are not in conflict with paramount law.⁷⁴

b. Powers of Particular Officers. The powers of particular officers, boards, or commissioners invested with the regulation and control of the public water front, docks, wharves, and piers are ordinarily regulated by statutory or charter provisions,⁷⁵ and such officers cannot exceed the powers which are conferred upon boats in a certain part of a levee, it does not follow that the prohibition to do so in any other part of the city has been withdrawn. An extension of a privilege in one place does not yield it in another. Ursuline Nuns v. Fresch, 16 La. Ann. 359. An ordinance prohibiting a boat from lying within a certain basin for more than twenty-four hours during any one week is not violated unless the boat continues in the basin for twenty-four hours in succession, the ordinance not being intended to prohibit a bona fide withdrawal and return of the same boat at a different time within the same week. *Larned v. Use of pier by street cleaning department.—A statute authorizing the department having control of public piers to set apart suitable piers for the use of the street cleaning department contemplates merely the shipment of the refuse by water and the use of piers for this purpose, and does not authorize the selection of half a pier owned by the city, which will expose the owner of the other half to inevitable injury or authorize the erection of a permanent structure thereon which interferes with its use by the public or the use of the pier as a storehouse for refuse. *Hill v. e. Power to Exact or Regulate Wharfage. The right to collect wharfage may exist either as a franchise granted by the state or as a property right incident to the ownership of riparian property and subject to reasonable legislative regulation.⁷⁹ Municipalities may by ordinance under express statutory or charter authority establish wharves and docks, regulate landing places, and fix the rate of wharfage, dockage, and landing;⁸⁰ but unless expressly authorized by statute a municipal corporation has no right to exact and collect wharfage for the use of a public wharf,⁸¹ and where such authority is granted and the manner of its exercise prescribed, the provisions of the statute must be followed.⁸² Although a municipality is authorized to collect wharfage it will be presumed that a public wharf is to be used free of charge in the absence of any ordinance to the con-

Approval of plans and specifications.—The statutory right of a dock department to regulate and control dock property, wharves and piers, and structures thereon does not give it the exclusive power to determine and approve the plans and specifications for such structures to the exclusion of the rights of the building and fire departments. *New York Fire Dept. v. trary,⁸³ and ordinances regulating wharfage are strictly construed.⁸⁴ A municipality cannot, under the guise of its authority to collect wharfage, levy any tax or duty of tonnage,⁸⁵ or charge for entering or leaving the port or remaining therein without regard to the place of mooring or landing,⁸⁶ or collect wharfage where no wharfage facilities are in fact furnished or where, if provided, they are not used;⁸⁷ but it may, where it owns and maintains the wharves, charge such reasonable fees as will fairly remunerate it for the use of its property,⁸⁸ and the fact that the charges for what are properly wharfage facilities actually furnished are fixed upon a tonnage basis will not constitute them a tonnage tax within the prohibition of the federal constitution,⁸⁹ and the persons paying such reasonable charges have no legal concern as to how they are expended by the municipality.⁹⁰ Wharf owners have the exclusive power to impose and collect wharfage at private wharves,⁹¹ and they do not forfeit their right to wharfage by dedicating a part of the wharf space to street purposes.⁹²

d. Leases and Grants of Franchises and Privileges. The powers of a municipality with regard to the making of leases or grants of franchises and privileges depends upon whether it is invested with the whole power of disposing of water fronts, docks, and wharves or merely a limited right of regulation and control.⁹³ The state may delegate its powers with regard to such property to a municipal corporation,⁹⁴ and municipalities are frequently authorized by charter or statutory provisions to make leases or grants of certain franchises or privileges pertaining

Under Maryland statutes of 1783 and 1796, the municipal authorities of the city of Baltimore might refuse their assent to the erection of a wharf or might grant it with such conditions, limitations, and restrictions as they should deem most beneficial to the navigation and use of the port of that city. Baltimore v. White, 2 Gill 444.

Where a city is expressly authorized to lease a water front granted to it by the state and on such terms as it may deem advantageous, it may lease a portion thereof to a steamboat company to construct a private wharf for its own use, and a provision in the lease limiting the charges which it may exact from others does not obligate it to permit others to use the wharf upon tendering the amount specified. Y. 567 [affirming 5 Sandf. 16]); and the municipality is not estopped to claim title to such land by having for a number of years designated it on its maps as the property of an individual and assessed it for taxation as his property (McFarlane v. Kerr, 10 Bosw. 249).

34. Ravenswood v. Flemings, 22 W. Va. 52, 46 Am. Rep. 485, holding that since as against the state a riparian owner has no rights below high water level, such a statute is not unconstitutional.

A municipality is also a riparian owner of waters within the limits of an abutting street where it owns the fee in the street and may use the same in its discretion so long as it does not obstruct navigation or injure the rights of others.³⁵

g. Accretion and Batture. Alluvion or land formed by accretion, although within municipal limits, belongs to the riparian proprietors,³⁶ and if the municipality is a riparian proprietor, as where it owns the fee in a street bounded by a stream, accretions thereto belong to the municipality.³⁷ In Louisiana municipal corporations have control over the batture within their limits, subject to the servitude for public use,³⁸ and prior to the act of 1853 they had the exclusive right to determine when and to what extent it might be occupied by the riparian owners,³⁹ and, under that statute which permits such owners to recover so much as is not necessary for public use,⁴⁰ they must leave open without charge whatever is necessary for navigation and public uses, such as streets and highways,⁴¹ and cannot recover from the city revenues received by it for privileges of occupation for a use of a public character.⁴² Where the municipality is itself the riparian proprietor it may withdraw from public use what is not needed therefor and lease it for private purposes.⁴³

3. MARKETS AND MARKET PLACES — a. In General. The authority to establish and regulate markets falls within the police power of the states,⁴⁴ which may be delegated to municipal corporations,⁴⁵ and is a particularly appropriate subject for municipal regulation.⁴⁶ This power may be exercised either under statutory or charter provisions relating expressly to the establishment and regulation of markets,⁴⁷ or the vending of meat and other commodities usually sold at such places,⁴⁸ or under the general police powers ordinarily possessed by municipal corporations;⁴⁹ and they may adopt and enforce any reasonable and proper rules

pality in fee certain lands on which it is constructed, but which are more than are necessary for such purpose, the remainder may, in the absence of any restriction in the grant, be used for other purposes;⁶⁴ and where a city purchases land in fee the fact that it was intended and subsequently used for market purposes will not constitute a dedication of the property for market purposes so as to prevent the municipality from removing the market to another locality and appropriating the old location to a different municipal use.⁶⁵

b. Powers of Particular Officers or Boards. Where the statute authorizing the establishment and regulation of markets expressly provides how and by whom these powers shall be exercised, they cannot be exercised in any other manner or delegated to any other officers than those specified;⁶⁶ but a municipal corporation authorized to establish and regulate markets and market houses may permit an individual to construct a market house on private property and declare it a public market, and permit the owner to rent stalls therein and protect him against competition, the municipality retaining the right to regulate the manner of conducting the market and the rates charged.⁶⁷ The fact that a board of health is authorized to regulate markets in regard to their "cleanliness, ventilation and drainage," and is the supreme authority in regard to matters affecting the public health, does not prevent the department having the general control of markets from making regulations in furtherance of the same objects;⁶⁸ but a board of health invested only with powers necessary to the preservation of the public health and life cannot, irrespective of these considerations, order the removal of stands or stalls attached to the public market on the ground that they are obstructions upon the public street.⁶⁹

c. Leases, Licenses, and Sales of Stalls or Privileges. Municipalities ordinarily have power to lease⁷⁰ or sell stalls in public markets,⁷¹ or to prohibit the occupancy of a stall without procuring a lease;⁷² and they may require the payment of a reasonable amount as a license-fee from those occupying stands or stalls in a public market,⁷³ even under the general power of regulation and control,⁷⁴ unless restricted by statute.⁷⁵ Charges for licenses or market privileges must, however, be reasonable,⁷⁶ and without discrimination,⁷⁷ and cannot be imposed as a means of raising revenue;⁷⁸ but the requirement of a reasonable license-fee use as an abattoir or slaughter-house is not a market purpose but an unauthorized use which a taxpayer may prevent by injunction.

An ordinance is invalid as attempting to raise revenue under the guise of an exercise of the police power which requires the payment of one hundred dollars per year for a

is not objectionable as a tax for revenue,⁷⁹ or as tending to create a monopoly.⁸⁰ The statutes and ordinances in force at the time of the lease or license become a part of the contract and are binding upon the lessee or licensee,⁸¹ and all occupants must be considered as holding subject to the market regulations of the municipality and not adversely to its authority.⁸² The lessee of a market or its revenues also takes subject to the provisions of existing ordinances,⁸³ and the rights of the municipality to make necessary public improvements.⁸⁴ The licensed occupant of a stall or stand in a market has no such interest in the stall as the lessee of a store or dwelling;⁸⁵ and the purchaser of a stall under a statute authorizing a municipality to sell stalls in a market does not acquire an absolute property but only a qualified right to the occupancy of the stall for market purposes.⁸⁶ The lease of a market stall does not imply a contract on the part of the municipality to protect the lessee against competition by unlicensed vendors,⁸⁷ nor does a lease of the revenues of an established market prevent the municipality from establishing another market and leasing it to a different person,⁸⁸ or require it to protect the lessee against competition by unauthorized private markets, unless the contract so provides,⁸⁹ or give such lessee any right of action against a person maintaining a competing and unauthorized private market.⁹⁰ Payment of the required license-fee gives the payee a right of occupancy, although his license has not been issued,⁹¹ and a person in possession of the stall under a verbal lease from the market master, although the latter had no authority to make it, is not a trespasser so as to authorize a forcible seizure and removal of his property,⁹² nor can the lessee and collector of market revenues summarily eject the occupant of a stall admitted by his predecessor in office who has tendered the required dues and conformed to the market regulations;⁹³ but the municipality may provide by ordinance that a lease or license for occupying a market stall shall be revocable in the discretion of the authorities in charge of the market,⁹⁴ in which case a licensee who refuses to vacate after the expiration or revocation of his license is a trespasser and may be ejected, no greater force than necessary being used.⁹⁵ The occupant of a market stall who sells his rights to another is not bound in warranty to his vendee in case of an eviction or disturbance of the latter by the municipality itself, but would be liable only for his own acts which interfere with the enjoyment of what he sells.⁹⁶

d. Change of Location or Discontinuance. In the absence of any restriction as to place,⁹⁷ the power to establish and regulate a market includes the right to change its location as the convenience and necessities of the public demand,⁹⁸ and to abolish a previously existing market and establish another in a different part of the municipality,⁹⁹ but not to abolish a duly authorized and existing public market which is the only one in the municipality.¹

e. Prohibition or Regulation of Sales Outside of Market. The legislature may authorize municipal corporations to prohibit the sale of meats and other commodities requiring police inspection and regulation outside of the public markets,² at least during the market hours,³ and to regulate private markets,⁴ or to prohibit the maintenance of private markets within certain distances of a public market.⁵ So municipalities may, when duly authorized, prohibit the selling of meats, poultry, and the like outside of public markets,⁶ or outside of markets during market hours,⁷ or the maintenance of private markets within a certain distance from a public market,³ or prescribe such regulations as to the time and Computation of distance by blocks or squares.—A "radius of six squares," within the application of an ordinance prohibiting private markets within a radius of six squares from a public market, includes both the length of the squares and the width of the streets, and not merely the distance which would be occupied by six squares exclusive of streets (State v. Berard, 40 La. Ann. 172, 3 So. 463); the squares to be estimated not by an air line distance but by the route which a person walking could take in going six squares from the public market in all directions in the nearest way (Vidalat v. New Orleans, 43 La. Ann. 1121, 10 So. 175; State v. Barthe, 41 La. Ann. 46, 6 So. 531; State v. Schmidt, 41 La. The sale of fruits as well as the sale of meats, fish, and vegetables may be prohibited within the prescribed distance of a public market. Gossiggi v. New Orleans, 41 La. Ann. 522, 6 So. 534.

A public market may include one constructed by an individual upon land conveyed by him to the municipality in con-

place of selling outside of the market limits as the general welfare of the municipality may demand.⁹ While there is some conflict as to what grant of authority will justify particular regulations,¹⁰ it seems to be uniformly held that under a power to regulate the vending of meats, etc., a municipality may prevent their being retailed outside of the public markets.¹¹ It is also ordinarily held that such restrictive regulations as to selling outside of market limits may be made under a general power to establish and regulate markets,¹² and that where adequate market facilities are furnished such regulations are not unreasonable or in restraint of trade but a proper regulation of it,¹³ although the rule is otherwise where market facilities are not furnished.¹⁴ There are decisions, however, which deny the right of a municipality to prohibit selling outside of the public markets, under a general power to regulate and control markets.¹⁵ A municipality may also, under a power to prevent the obstruction of streets, prohibit the standing of wagons for the sale of market produce within certain limits,¹⁶ or prevent any street vending without a permit.¹⁷

Application of rule.—Where land is dedicated as an open park, square, or pleasure ground, the municipal authorities have no right to erect a public building thereon (Princeville v. Auten, 77 Ill. 325; Fessler v. Union, 67 N. J. Eq. 14, 56 Atl. 272), or permit its use as a highway (Seward v. Orange, 59 N. J. It is to be presumed, it would not file a bill to declare void an act which, by solemn ordinance, it had itself just done. Individuals damaged by such action, therefore, were driven to private action for the maintenance of any rights they had in the premises . . . we find no difficulty in holding, that the complainant in this case is in reason, and for the purposes of this case, an adjacent proprietor to the said park, and occupies such a position as entitles him to maintain this bill. He can look out from the front of one of his houses, with an unobstructed view, on to the park, a distance of only 110 feet from him. This gives him the attitude of an adjacent proprietor. From his other lot, the view is obstructed, though it is only 250 feet from the park. For the purposes of air and recreation, he has shown he has a direct and special interest against its proposed destruction."

But where property is taken, and paid for from the general fund, with the intention of using it for a certain purpose specified in the ordinance authorizing the taking, as was done in this case, the city, doubtless, has the authority to change said contemplated use to another and entirely different use, whensoever the needs and requirements of the city suggest."

XIII. PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

A. Power to Make Improvements — 1. IN GENERAL — a. Nature of Power.

A municipal corporation usually receives from its charter, either expressly or by necessary implication, ample powers to make public improvements. Hence the power of a particular corporation, in the matter of improvements, depends, in most cases, upon a proper construction of its charter.¹ In the absence of such express or implied power, a municipal corporation is held to possess inherent power to make such improvements as are necessary or proper to carry out the objects of its incorporation.² This not only includes the power to provide suitable public buildings,³ but since the amelioration of urban conditions is the paramount object of municipal incorporation, it includes also the power to grade and pave streets,⁴ lay sidewalks, keep the same in repair,⁵ furnish an adequate water-supply,⁶ and provide for the lighting of streets and public places.⁷ It has been held that an improvement may be limited to one piece of property.⁸ The power to make improvements is held in trust for the public and cannot be relinquished without legislative authority,⁹ and the exercise of the power to any extent deemed proper is a governmental act to be exercised under legislative discretion; but when the work is determined upon, the construction thereof is merely ministerial.¹⁰

b. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions. The right to decide upon the making of improvements, in pursuance of power given, belongs absolutely to municipal corporations in those states whose constitutions expressly secure to them the right of local self-government.¹¹ The legislature may leave to the council the determination of the question whether a proposed local improvement shall be made, without violating the constitutional right of the property-owner to protection from taxation by assessment for such improvement exceeding the special benefit therefrom; ¹² and an act authorizing the municipality to take land for the purpose of widening a street and to assess the cost, including damages, upon the abutting owners, saving to any person aggrieved the right to be heard, is a valid exercise of legislative power.¹³ Nor is the fact that the charter of a city provides that the improvement shall not be made if two thirds of the persons assessed dissent open to the objection that the power so conferred is judicial, and one with which the legislature cannot invest interested persons.¹⁴ In general, unless restricted by constitutional provisions, a state may exercise absolute and direct control over the streets or public highways within as well as beyond municipal boundaries, determining when and in what manner streets shall be opened, graded, and improved.¹⁵ The power to make local improvements is usually delegated to the municipality by charter or by general statute,¹⁶ or it may be implied either from some express power given,¹⁷ or from the very fact of the creation of the corporation, in which last event it is sometimes designated inherent.¹⁸ A city may by special statute be authorized,¹⁹ or, in those jurisdictions in which the legislature may exercise control over the municipality, compelled²⁰ to make improvements. Statutes providing for the making of improvements are in effect amendments of municipal charters and the corporations must act in accordance with them.²¹ Acts of this sort are to be strictly construed,²² and a statute providing for the construction of trunk sewers was held not to apply to lateral or branch sewers,²³ and an act authorizing the extension of a street under certain restrictions, and providing that the city authorities at their discretion might extend other streets was held to confer power to extend such other streets only in the same way and subject to the same restrictions.²⁴

e. Power of Particular Officers or Boards. The power to determine upon improvements may be vested by charter or statute in the city council,²⁵ in boards of public works,²⁶ or in distinct quasi-corporations such as boards of park commissioners;²⁷ or the council may provide by by-laws for the creation of an officer or board²⁸ to act in its behalf, but only with its sanction and approval.²⁹ A provision in the charter vesting the council with power to make improvements will be repealed by a subsequently passed statute giving this power exclusively to a board of commissioners, even though its members are to be appointed by the council;³⁰ and in like manner power vested by an early act in a board or com-

Pennsylvania.—See Sewickley Waterworks Com'rs v. Sewickley Borough, 159 Pa. St. 194, 28 Atl. 169, holding, however, that the creation by statute of a board of commissioners to superintend the construction and operation of waterworks will give the commissioners no right to control the council in making a moderate use of water to carry out its charter duty of furnishing a sufficient water-sup-mission may by subsequent legislation be transferred to the council,³¹ or from one board or commission to another.³² The extent of such transfer of power, whether it be partial or complete, depends of course upon the wording and construction of the statute.³³ Where the authority is vested in the mayor and one branch of the council, it has been held that their action upon an improvement is not invalidated by the superfluous assent of the other branch of the council.³⁴

d. Power as Between Municipal and Other Officers and Courts. The power to make improvements is in its nature legislative, not judicial; hence an action to change the location of a street, as fixed by the authorities of a city, cannot be sustained, for the courts do not possess such jurisdiction.³⁵ Powers relative to improvements may be conferred upon a court;³⁶ but in such case the proceedings are "special," and the court possesses jurisdiction only by virtue of the authority conferred by the legislature.³⁷ General statutes frequently give to some county board or corresponding body power to control all highways within its jurisdiction, without excepting streets.³⁸ It is well settled, however, that if a city be given power to control streets, its exercise of that power is exclusive, and a county board acting under a general road law will have no jurisdiction within its borders.³⁹ But in the absence of charter or statutory provision which expressly ply for extinguishing fires, cleansing the streets, and for other public purposes.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 713.

Before election of board.—An act providing that cities acting under special charters may provide for the election of park commissioners, who shall have exclusive power over public parks, and authorizing the councils of such cities to submit to a vote the question whether there shall be levied a tax for the purpose of purchasing real estate for parks and their improvement, merely vests in such cities discretion to elect such commissioners and levy such tax, and does not divest their common councils of power, when no such commissioners have been elected, to "purchase or condemn, and pay for out of the general fund, lands . . . for the use of public squares, streets, parks," etc. In re Cedar Rapids, 85 Iowa 39, 51 N. W. 1142.

Effect of transfer of power on unfinished proceedings.—An act which organizes boards of public works in certain cities, and transfers to such boards all the power which before had been in the common council to open and lay out streets, includes in the power thus transferred the right to continue all unfinished proceedings which had been commenced by the common council at the date of the approval of the act. *Wilson v. Discontinuance of proceedings.—Where a resolution declaring the necessity of the improvement of an alley is made by the proper board of a city, a subsequent amendment of the law, conferring on another board the power to make such improvements to alleys generally, does not work a discontinuance of the pending proceeding, and the improvement should be prosecuted to completion by the board that adopted the resolution. Cincinnati v. Davis, 58 Ohio St. 225, 50 N. E. 918.

express grant of such powers as are essential to the declared objects of incorporated towns,⁵² although protection of lands subject to overflow is a proper object of local improvement that may be effected under proper authority from the legislature.⁵³ A municipality may require a railway company to bridge tracks and bind itself to pay a share of the cost.⁵⁴

b. Public Buildings. The right to erect and maintain buildings for the transaction of city business is a necessary incident to the administration of municipal affairs,⁵⁵ and although its charter gives it no express power to do so a municipality may erect and maintain buildings for such purpose,⁵⁶ such as a city hall,⁵⁷ or fire-engine house,⁵⁸ or city jail,⁵⁹ or a city school building.⁶⁰

c. Streets and Other Ways—(1) OPENING OF STREETS. A city is usually given power by its charter or general statutes to open streets;⁶¹ but this power standing alone does not include power to condemn land for this purpose,⁶² although it does include the right to construct streets;⁶³ and a city in the exercise of a right to take land for street purposes is not limited to the amount actually needed for travel.⁶⁴ A city has no power to condemn land for a street for the purpose of giving a railway the sole use of it,⁶⁵ or to give such use to a private individual,⁶⁶ nor has it power to vacate a street for such purpose.⁶⁷ An act authorizing cities to extend their streets authorizes merely the extension of existing streets in the same direction and with the same width;⁶⁸ but in extending a street a set-off at an intersecting avenue may be made without its constituting the opening of a new street.⁶⁹ An act authorizing the laying out of driveways along the "beach or ocean front" was held to include the beach of an inlet.⁷⁰ Under a power to acquire land to protect the view oceanward from a walk upon the beach a city may acquire land under water.⁷¹ And under a power to open a street upon the ocean front for the erection of an elevated walk more than one street may be opened.⁷² But an act extending the limits of a borough and authorizing commissioners to lay out within said limits such streets as they shall deem proper does not suspend a general law forbidding the opening of a street through any burial ground.⁷³

(ii) CONSTRUCTION, IMPROVEMENT, OR REPAIR. Power to improve streets is usually delegated to municipalities.⁷⁴ It is a legislative function, and, except for gross abuse, is not subject to judicial review.⁷⁵ It is a continuing power,⁷⁶ not exhausted by a single exercise,⁷⁷ nor limited as to time.⁷⁸ A street must have been lawfully established before it can become subject to municipal improvement.⁷⁹ The extent of the power depends of course upon the construction of charter or statutory provisions.⁸⁰ Under a power to build highways a city may build a highway that will support street-car traffic, although a heavier pavement is needed than ordinary traffic requires.⁸¹ Under authority to improve streets and to make by-laws for the regulation of the city, a municipality is without power to erect a toll bridge;⁸² and a charter provision authorizing the construction of streets and bridges does not empower the city to construct a bridge over a mill race, which under the general statutes it is the duty of the mill owner to maintain.⁸³ The power to repair streets does not include power to make original improvements or repairs of a character essentially different from the work originally done.⁸⁴ Nor does the power to regulate and grade, standing alone,

Discontinuance of railroad crossing.—An act which authorizes the common council to discontinue and close a portion of Liberty street, in the city of Schenectady, for the purposes of a railroad depot, "to the passage of vehicles, horses, and cattle," is sufficient authority for an ordinance of such council authorizing the railroad company to construct and maintain an iron foot-bridge for pedestrians over the railroad track on the discontinued portion of the street, and to close the surface of the street to pedestrians by the erection of a fence. Weinckie v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 15 N. Y. Suppl. 689 [affirmed in 133 N. Y. 656, 31 N. E. 625].

Conditional vacation.—In the absence of express authority it has been held that an ordinance vacating a street, but to become effective only upon the performance of certain conditions, is invalid. Hammer v. Elizabeth, 67 N. J. L. 129, 50 Atl. 451.

discretion⁶ but not solely for private benefit.⁷ The vacation of a street being in the nature of the exercise of a political function will not be reviewed by the court, except on a clear showing of collusion or fraud.⁸ A power to vacate streets may be exercised whether the public acquired the street to be vacated by condemnation or by dedication.⁹ The rescission of a resolution vacating a street is equivalent to an opening of such street and must be accompanied by the same formalities necessary to the opening of a street in the first instance.¹⁰

d. Sidewalks, Footways, or Cross Walks—(i) CONSTRUCTION. The word street is generic and includes sidewalks¹¹ and cross walks;¹² and the power to improve streets includes the power to lay sidewalks.¹³ The municipality may require abutting owners to build sidewalks in accordance with prescribed specifications,¹⁴ and within its discretion may order a repavement.¹⁵ In ordering reconstruction of sidewalks in a block, lots in front of which sidewalks already exist may be excepted.¹⁶ Under the general police power of a city it may repair sidewalks.¹⁷ Under a general power to grade and pave sidewalks the city may alter the width of the space so graded and paved.¹⁸

(ii) REMOVAL. General power over streets and sidewalks authorizes the removal of a sidewalk when the public good requires it.¹⁹

e. Sewers, Drains, and Watercourses. The power to construct sewers is usually held to depend on express grant,²⁰ although some cases hold that it is Raising sidewalk.—Under charter power to widen or narrow, lay out, graduate, curb, and pave, and otherwise improve streets and sidewalks, a city may raise a sidewalk along its streets, although such work may damage the owner of an adjacent lot. *Harrisonburg v. Entry on private property.—A city cannot inherent in the municipality,²¹ or that it may be implied from the power to control streets²² or to protect the public health.²³ The power is usually expressly given by charter or statute;²⁴ the latter frequently superseding charter provisions,²⁵ and it may be exercised within legislative discretion.²⁶ In the absence of statutory authority a city cannot contract for the erection and maintenance of a sewerage system in the manner of waterworks.²⁷ Under an authority to construct a sewerage system a municipal corporation is not bound to construct sewers in all parts of its territory at the same time.²⁸ A municipality may utilize for drainage a creek running through its borders,²⁹ and under a power to repair may widen a drain.³⁰ An ordinance ordering the construction of a sewer is not invalid because the outlet of the sewer passes through private land.³¹

f. Water-Supply. A municipal corporation is usually regarded as having implied power to provide a water-supply,³² and such power may be derived from the power to make contracts necessary to the welfare of the city,³³ although the charge of the costs to the abutting premises, is not for such reason unconstitutional. Van Wagoner v. Paterson, 67 N. J. L. 455, 51 Atl. 922.

Between city and park commissioners.—The power to place a sewer in a boulevard belongs to the city council, and not to the park commissioners authorized by Ill. Act, June 24, 1895, to have control of boulevards for the purpose of improving the same by adding to their utility as driveways or streets. Lingle v. Chicago, 172 Ill. 170, 50 N. E. 192.

But see White v. Meadville, 177 Pa. St. 643, 35 Atl. 695, 34 L. R. But see Greenville Water-Works Co. v. Greenville, (Miss. 1890) 7 So. 409, where it was held that the municipal authorities had no power to enter into a contract by power is ordinarily expressly conferred by statute or by charter.³⁴ Under a power to provide a water-supply, a city may build and operate a plant for such purpose,³⁵ and this, although a private water company has been permitted to construct its works and lay pipes;³⁶ and the plant may be used for the purpose of supplying water to the inhabitants of the city, as well as for public purposes.³⁷ But in the absence of express authority a municipal corporation cannot become a stock-holder in a private water-supply corporation,³⁸ or enter into a contract for the purchase of water from a private corporation, which amounts in effect to a pledge of the municipal credit for the support of a private enterprise.³⁹ Under a power to construct waterworks⁴⁰ or to purchase waterworks with their privileges,⁴¹ a city may contract for the purchase of a supply of water. But where a city has purchased a supply of water for its own use, it has no power to contract to furnish water to another municipality.⁴² In connection with a power to establish waterworks the legislature may authorize a city to construct and maintain a dam;⁴³ and the city may lease any surplus water-power.⁴⁴ But a municipal corporation cannot maintain a dam for the purpose of leasing water to private persons for private uses.⁴⁵ In case a city has acquired the use of water for its public water-supply, it is entitled to restrain the diversion of such water by individuals.⁴⁶ A city which is the owner of a water right may lease such right to a corporation which undertakes a public water-supply.⁴⁷

g. Lighting. A municipality has implied power to light its streets,⁴⁸ and there are cases holding that this includes power to erect a plant for that purpose.⁴⁹ On the other hand it has been held that even under an express power to light its streets, a city has no right, by implication, to erect a lighting plant.⁵⁰ The better rule would seem to be that if a city is expressly authorized to light its streets, it which a monopoly for a long series of years was conferred upon a water company.

Delegation of governmental function.—The letting of a contract for the construction and operation of waterworks for the supply of water for public and private use within the city has been held to be an incidental power of the city and not a delegation of the governmental function. Gadsden v. Mitchell, 145 Ala. 137, 40 So. 557, 6 L. R. A. N. S. 781.

h. Conduits and Subways. The power to construct conduits and subways must be granted expressly or by necessary implication.⁵⁸

i. Water Frontage, Landings, Wharves, and Docks. A municipality may not erect wharves and docks or engage in wharfing unless expressly authorized by charter or statute,⁵⁹ although a town will not be restrained from grading a street to a river, merely because a wharf may be incidentally formed thereby.⁶⁰ The power to erect wharves and docks does not include power to create or improve harbors.⁶¹ But in the exercise of its general powers a city may build a breakwater to protect its streets.⁶² An express authority to erect, repair, and regulate public wharves and docks implies a power to extend or diminish,⁶³ and under a power to make additions and alterations a city may construct new docks.⁶⁴ It has been held, however, that an authority to enlarge public slips does not authorize the making of a slip in the first instance.⁶⁵ It has been held that a city has a general power to fill up a slip in the extension of a street,⁶⁶ although on the contrary, it has been held that such power is not possessed under an authority to construct and keep in repair canals and slips for the accommodation of commerce.⁶⁷ A city is not authorized to discontinue a public landing place under authority to discontinue a way.⁶⁸

j. Markets. The establishment of markets is within the general powers of a municipality.⁶⁹ The power is frequently expressly given and implies authority to build market houses.⁷⁰

k. Parks and Other Public Places. Unless expressly authorized, a municipality may not acquire land for the establishment of a park.⁷¹ This power is conferred sometimes upon the city⁷² and sometimes upon special boards of park commissioners.⁷³ A city has power to set aside portions of its streets or sidewalks for the construction of boulevards, grass plots, or other purposes, useful or ornamental only, and to protect the same from the encroachments of travel.⁷⁴ Under a power to improve public parks, buildings for public purposes may be erected in a park.⁷⁵ Under a power vested in park commissioners to take a street for the purpose of connecting a public boulevard or driveway with any park of the city or town within its jurisdiction, the board is not limited to the taking of a street connecting two parks.⁷⁶

l. Improvements Beyond Boundaries of Municipalities. Although a municipality has usually no authority outside its own limits,⁷⁷ yet authority to act beyond its boundaries is sometimes implied on grounds of special necessity.⁷⁸ A city may acquire land beyond its limits for obtaining an outlet for its sewerage system,⁷⁹ or contract for the disposition of its discharge,⁸⁰ or agree to maintain a ditch.⁸¹ It may improve a road leading to a gravel bank which belongs to the corporation.⁸² It is competent for the legislature, in the absence of constitutional restraint,⁸³ to grant a municipality extraterritorial jurisdiction, such as the right to maintain a park⁸⁴ or a pest-house,⁸⁵ or to construct an outlet for its sewage system in the limits of adjoining municipalities,⁸⁶ or to improve roads⁸⁷ beyond its boundaries.⁸⁸

municipality over its streets cannot be alienated, and all franchises are subject to its exercise.⁸⁹ Hence a franchise to lay railway tracks,⁹⁰ water,⁹¹ or gas⁹² mains in a street, or to erect poles and string wires,⁹³ does not prevent a municipality from changing the grade, improving, laying sewers in, or otherwise controlling the streets, provided it does so in a reasonable manner.⁹⁴

3. EXERCISE OF POWER — a. In General — (i) VALIDITY. An ordinance for the improvement of a street is not void because of possible injury to vested rights under a grant from the city,⁹⁵ nor because it provides that the outlet of a sewer shall pass over private property;⁹⁶ and in opening a street it is not necessary to condemn a public alley that crosses it.⁹⁷

(ii) PUBLIC CONVENIENCE OR NECESSITY, OR OTHER CONSIDERATIONS. The power to make improvements is usually vested in the council and its decision as to the necessity of an improvement, except in extreme cases, is final.⁹⁸ Under this general rule it is held that a question cannot be raised as to the need of paving,⁹⁹ repairing,¹ widening,² opening,³ or vacating,⁴ streets; laying sewers,⁵

(B) Establishment of Grade Before Permanent Improvements. Unless otherwise provided by charter or statute,¹⁷ a municipality need not establish the permanent grade of a street before improving it.¹⁸

b. Vote, Petition, or Recommendation—(1) SUBMISSION OF QUESTION TO POPULAR VOTE. A municipality is frequently required by charter or statute to submit to popular vote the question of making improvements of a particular character,¹⁹ and unless such provision is strictly complied with the improvement cannot be made.²⁰ Only those matters may be lawfully submitted which are

Necessity of actual grading.—Where the board of supervisors order the whole or any part of a street macadamized, and may order the work to be done after notice of their intention has been published as therein required, they can authorize a contract for macadamizing a street after a contract for grading has been entered into, but before grading has been done. *Dyer v. What constitutes establishment of grade.—The fixing of a definite height of a street at two points does not establish the official grade between such points on an arbitrary straight line drawn between them. *Dorland v. Constitutionality of provision.—A provision that the question of the erection of public improvements shall be submitted to popular vote is not rendered unconstitutional by the fact that the general assembly of the state is not allowed to submit to the people the question of whether an act shall become a law. Taylor v. McFadden, 84 Iowa 262, 50 N. W. 1070, sustaining a statute conferring upon cities the power to erect waterworks, when a majority of the voters of the city should approve the same.

New project.—The building of a city hall upon a site which has already been purchased is a new project within the meaning of a charter forbidding the city council to make an appropriation for any new project without approval of a majority of the electors. Ecroyd v. Coggeshall, 21 R. I. 1, 41 Atl. 260, 79 Am. St. Rep. 741.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 739.

Registration of voters.—Where a statute providing for the establishment of public schools in a city, provided for an election under a constitutional requirement that the proposition be approved by a two-thirds vote of the persons qualified to vote, but made directed to be submitted by the legislature,²¹ and where the improvement is one which does not fall within the statutory or charter requirements of a popular vote, a vote is not necessary.²² The question submitted must be the one which is involved in the making of the improvement,²³ although it has been held that a modification by the council of a detail of the specifications relating to a public improvement will not demand resubmission.²⁴ It is not necessary to pass an ordinance providing for the improvement before submitting the question to vote.²⁵ A vote in favor of the improvement binds the city.²⁶

(II) NECESSITY FOR APPLICATION OR CONSENT OF OWNERS OF PROPERTY AFFECTED—(A) In General. Petition or consent of the property-owners to be assessed is frequently required by charter or statute as a condition precedent to the making of improvements by the municipality.²⁷ The provisions of such charters or statutes must be complied with,²⁸ or it will result that an order to make the improvement,²⁹ or an assessment to pay for the same is no provision for ascertaining the persons qualified to vote, it was held that an election was void where there was no previous registration of voters. Decatur v. Wilson, 96 Ga. 251, 23 S. E. 240.

Invalidity of election.—Where the vote for the erection of an improvement is illegally taken in certain precincts containing a majority of all the legal voters of the district, a provision that the proposition shall be submitted to a vote of the legal voters of the district and approved by a majority of the votes cast is not complied with. People v. Salomon, 46 Ill. 415.

Suppl. 611 [affirmed in 35 N. Y. App. Div. 177, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 149] (in which it was held that the proceedings for establishing an electric lighting system were void).

Missouri.—St. Louis v. Gleason, 93 Mo. 33, 8 S. W. 348, holding that when in a proceeding to establish a street it becomes necessary to appropriate private property and the void.³⁰ Such requirements are to be strictly construed,³¹ and since the right of petition or consent depends solely upon legislative grant it will not be extended beyond the clear implication of the charter or statute.³² And a grant of power to "pave" or otherwise "improve" streets on petition does not include the construction of sidewalks or sewers³³ or the repair of streets.³⁴ A petition for an improvement is sufficient evidence of consent to its being made as required by statute.³⁵

(B) Streets and Other Ways. The petition or consent of property-owners is not a condition precedent to the opening or improvement of streets³⁶ unless city counselor applies to the circuit court, by petition therefor, if it does not appear from such petition, or from the ordinance therein recited, that such ordinance was passed "either on the unanimous recommendation of the board of public improvements, or on the petition of the owners of a major portion of the ground fronting on the proposed street," the court has no jurisdiction to condemn the land.

New Jersey.—App v. Stockton, 61 N. J. L. 520, 30 Atl. 921.

Presumption as to proper origin of proceeding.—Since the board of local improvements of the city of Chicago has exclusive jurisdiction to originate a scheme for local improvements without petition, and the recommendation of an ordinance to the city council for an improvement creates a conclusive presumption that the board acted on its own motion, the fact that the city council ordered the board to submit an ordinance for the paving of a street between certain limits with asphalt, after which the board submitted such a resolution with the recommendation that the improvement be made, did not show that the improvement originated with the city council instead of the board of local improvements. Gage v. Chicago, 207 Ill. 56, 69 N. E. 588.

Repair of street.—Where a contemplated improvement of a street already paved is essentially a repaving instead of a repairing, it can be engaged in by the city, only on a petition of the abutting property-owners, when it is proposed to tax back to them the costs of such improvement. McCaffrey v. Omaha, 72 Nebr. 583, 101 N. W. 251.

Suppl. 657; Philadelphia v. Tryon, 35 Pa. St. 401, holding that an act by which a general sewerage system was provided for, and the enlarged city of Philadelphia, and the administration thereof, committed wholly to the consolidated city, necessarily took away the control of local majorities of lot owners as it before existed in an annexed municipal district; and hence a petition for the construction of a culvert is no longer necessary in such a part of the consolidation, such a restriction not being contained in that act.

Repeal.—A provision in a city charter authorizing the city council to ordain a street improvement only on petition of a majority of the property-owners on the street to be improved was not repealed by an amended charter empowering the council to ordain improvements by a vote of two thirds of the council without petition; but a repeal would have been implied if the two modes had been repugnant, or if the latter act had contained the words, "and not otherwise," as did an act supplementary thereto. *Erie v. expressly made so by charter or statute.³⁷ Such provisions are frequently found in acts providing for improvements by special assessment, and a failure to comply with them is a good defense against the collection of an assessment.³⁸ Provisions of this nature, unless so stated,³⁹ do not apply to the laying of sidewalks⁴⁰ or to the repairing of streets.⁴¹ And a statute requiring the consent of abutting owners to the grant of a franchise for the laying of water or gas mains does not require such consent before the city can compel the laying of service pipes as a preliminary to paving.⁴² The council's finding of the assent of the necessary number of property-owners is not conclusive.⁴³ The improvement must conform to the petition.⁴⁴ It has been held that an ordinance may be operative against abutting owners who have consented, although other owners have withheld their consent.⁴⁵

Extension of street.—Where a provision of a charter required the trustees to lay out and establish a street, on the application of a majority of the lot owners, "such applicants being also the owners of more than one-half of the land to be taken," and the words so quoted were omitted in a provision with relation to the discontinuance or maintenance of the street, they will not be construed to be applicable in the case of an extension as well as of a laying out. *People v. is sometimes made to depend on petition or consent of the persons affected.⁴⁷ Where the consent of abutting owners is required to change a grade, a further consent is not necessary to render valid slight changes and modifications in the grade during the course of paving, where one consent has been obtained.⁴⁸ Where the owners of land abutting upon a proposed improvement are required to consent to the vacation of a street, the consent of owners further along the street is not necessary.⁴⁹ When powers have been conferred upon park commissioners, by statute, it has been held that such powers are not limited by the limitations imposed by another statute upon the council in changing the grade of a street, without the consent of abutting owners.⁵⁰

Private drain.—Under a charter which empowers the council of a borough to authorize the construction of sewers in the streets, it may authorize a citizen to construct a private underdrain along a public street, without the consent of the abutting landowners. *Wood v. held under them that a landowner cannot be required to cut down an embankment.⁶⁴ The power to require the building of sidewalks includes the power to compel their repair or rebuilding,⁶⁵ but such power cannot be exercised in the absence of necessity.⁶⁶ A requirement that property-owners shall lay a water pipe under a public street, at their own expense, is not a valid exercise of the police power.⁶⁷ But a requirement that persons desiring to use city water shall construct the necessary service pipes at their own expense is just and reasonable.⁶⁸ The owner of a private drain may by statute be made liable for its repairs.⁶⁹ A private individual engaged in improving streets for the benefit and convenience of his own property cannot cut down the grade of an existing street, to the detriment of an abutting owner.⁷⁰ Where work has been done under authority of the proper municipal officers, the act of the property-owner is regarded as the act of the city and is subject to such changes as the city may require.⁷¹

(11) OPPORTUNITY AS PREREQUISITE TO AWARD OF CONTRACT OR ASSESSMENT. If it is provided by statute that the abutting owner be given an opportunity to make an improvement before the same be made by the city and the cost assessed to him, failure by the city to give the property-owner an opportunity to make a proposed improvement will defeat an assessment levied against him⁷² or may invalidate the contract for the improvement;⁷³ but if being notified the

(II) NOTICE TO IMPROVE. Notice to property-owners to make the proposed improvement is usually required, and is a condition precedent to letting a contract by the city.⁷⁵ And where an improvement has been ordered without notice to the property-owner, it has been held that he may recover the difference between the amount charged by the city and the amount which it would have cost him to construct it.⁷⁶ And it has also been held that he is not estopped to object to paying the cost of the improvement by the fact that he sees it being constructed and makes no objection.⁷⁷ The character of the notice depends largely upon the wording of the statute or ordinance,⁷⁸ as does the manner of service.⁷⁹ The notice must contain specifications of the improvement,⁸⁰ and must identify the Period of notice.—Where an ordinance fixes sixty days as the period of notice to lay sidewalks, a subsequent ordinance fixing thirty days is bad, although the first ordinance applied to certain streets only. Angle v. Stroudsburg Borough, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 601.

Ordinance as notice.—Under a city ordinance providing that the city council might cause the construction of certain sidewalks along the street line of lots belonging to non-residents and assess the costs thereof to the property, if the same were not constructed by the owner within fifteen days after the publication of a notice to him, the city council obtained the right to construct such improvements and assess the costs thereof, even though the notice named a date for the construction thereof by the owner less than fifteen days subsequent to the last publication. The provisions of the city charter and ordinances become a part of the notice, and the property-owner is bound thereby. State v. Several Parcels of Land, (Nebr. 1906) 107 N. W. 566.

79. See the cases cited infra, this note.

Sufficiency of service.—A provision in the charter that notice shall be served upon the owner or his agent requires personal service, not notice through the mail. Rathhun v. Acker, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 393. An advertisement for bids will not be construed as notice. Leach v. Cargill, 60 Mo. 316. It is not sufficient to serve one having charge of realty under a power of attorney, whereby he is empowered to sell the same and generally "to do, exercise, execute, proceed and finish in all things in as ample manner as we might do if personally present." Hanover v. Ebert, 17 York Leg. Rec. (Pa.) 146. Nor is a notice directed to the heirs of George Ebert, without naming them, sufficient. Hanover v. Ebert, supra. A notice to pave a sidewalk by the municipal authorities, given to "Patrick Fay's estate, per Mrs. B. Fay," is sufficient, even though "Patrick Fay" had been long dead, and never owned the property in question, but it was actually, and had been, the property of "Mrs. B. Fay." Pittsburg v. Fay, 8 Pa. Super. Ct. 269, 43 Wkly. Notes Cas. 78. A notice to a non-resident owner by means of a letter sent through the post-office, without any service on the occupant, is sufficient. Black v. Roebuck, 8 Del. Co. (Pa.) 57. Where personal service is required, it is not sufficient to leave a notice at the owner's boarding-house in his absence. Simmons v. Gardiner, 6 R. I. 255. A requirement that notice be left or placed upon the premises is not satisfied by placing a notice on the premises, but under a stone which covers it entirely. Philadelphia v. Edwards, 78 Pa. St. 62.

Proof of notice.—The fact that a city ordinance requires proof by affidavit of the publication of a notice to non-resident property-owners, to construct sidewalks, does not prevent the fact of publication being proved by other evidence. State v. Several Parcels of Land, (Nebr. 1906) 107 N. W. 566.

property.⁸¹ In the absence of legislative requirement, the municipality need not give actual notice.⁸²

(iv) COMPLIANCE WITH ORDER. When an improvement or repair is made by a property-owner, the sufficiency of the work is a question for the city authorities.⁸³

(v) TIME ALLOWED FOR MAKING IMPROVEMENTS. The time allowed for making an improvement is usually fixed by ordinance,⁸⁴ and it is no defense that it was insufficient;⁸⁵ but an ordinance requiring a lot owner to build a sidewalk within five days and on his default ordering the same to be built at his expense is void for unreasonableness,⁸⁶ and if a city be required by charter to establish the permanent grade of a street before directing abutting owners to lay sidewalks, such owners need not comply with an order to construct sidewalks until after the grade has been so established by the city.⁸⁷

d. Basis or Plan of Improvement, and Mode and Time of Doing Work—

(i) GENERAL BASIS OR PLAN OF IMPROVEMENT—(A) In General. Under a general power to construct an improvement it is usually held that the plan of the improvement is to some extent discretionary.⁸⁸ So under power to improve streets, a municipality may exercise reasonable discretion as to the plan of improvement,⁸⁹ unless the same be specified by charter or statute,⁹⁰ and a property-

But see Moore v. Fairport, 11 Misc. (N. Y.) 146, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 633, holding that where the village trustees established a line for a new sidewalk and directed plaintiff to construct a sidewalk on such line, and he, notwithstanding, located it on a different line, a notice to him to remove it to the established line need not give a specific description of the sidewalk.

Infirmities which avoid an ordinance to compel the construction of sidewalks will not warrant an abutting owner in constructing them in a way and of material different from that prescribed. Drew v. Geneva, 150 Ind. 662, 50 N. E. 871, 42 L. R. A. 814. But where the proceedings of a town council with reference to requiring the construction of a sidewalk were irregular and insufficient, and the walk actually constructed by a lot owner was not in accordance with such requirements, he could not be compelled to construct another walk until there was a further resolution, and a further notice thereunder, as required by the ordinance. *Burget v. Improvement of one side of street.—Under a power to order an improvement of a street, or part of a street, an order for the construction of a sidewalk upon one side only of the street is good. State v. Portage, 12 Wis. 562.

Parking center of street.—Under the general power to improve streets, the city council have a discretionary power to sod and park the center of a street, where it is not needed for travel. Murphy v. Peoria, 119 Ill. 509, 9 N. E. 895.

Drainage.—Where an act of the legislature contemplates a plan of draining the territory embraced within the map therein referred to, by a main sewer running through certain streets in said act designated, with such lateral sewers as the commissioners of sewers may deem necessary for the proper drainage of the said territory, the said commissioners have no right to abandon the single sewer and adopt a plan substituting therefor two main sewers. Hoboken v. Chamberlain, 37 N. J. L. 51.

Retroactive effect of statute.—An act prohibiting the construction of a sewer in the city of New York unless in accordance with owner by voluntarily making an improvement in the street cannot preclude the city from carrying out a general improvement in the same street.⁹¹

(B) Width and Grade of Streets. Unless restricted by charter or statute,⁹² a municipality, in the exercise of general power over its streets, may, at its discretion, change the width or grade.⁹³

(1) *MATERIAL FOR CONSTRUCTION.*⁹⁴ The right to determine upon the material to be used in an improvement is usually vested in the council and its decision, except in extreme cases,⁹⁵ is final.⁹⁶ Although the power to open, grade, and pave streets is legislative, it is held that selection of the kind of a pavement to be laid is ministerial and may be intrusted to an officer under whose direction the opening, grading, and paving of the street is placed by law.⁹⁷ A statute or charter providing that the property-owners shall have the right to select the material for an improvement from not less than two kinds designated does not contemplate that there shall be a right of selection between kinds, qualities, or makes of the material specified.⁹⁸ Where property-owners are given the right to choose the material with which a street shall be paved, but no mode is prescribed for ascertaining their wishes, the city authorities may assume that they have waived their rights in case they do not move in the matter.⁹⁹

a general plan applies to cases where proposals have been advertised for and bids opened before the passage of such act. In re New York Protestant Episcopal Public School, 46 N. Y. 178 [reversing 58 Barb. 161, 40 How. Pr. 139].

Fixing different grades for opposite sides of street.—A city council having general authority to establish the grades of streets may, under peculiar circumstances, fix the grade for one side of a street on a materially different level or plane from that of the other side, and, if necessary, construct a retaining wall along the center of the street, to support the earth on the higher grade; such an exercise of public rights not being an infringement of the rights of an adjacent proprietor, whose property may be injured thereby. *Yanish v. 99. Moale v. Baltimore, 61 Md. 224.

(III) MODE OF DOING WORK—(A) In General. Unless expressly provided for by statute or charter,¹ the manner of making improvements lies within the discretion of the municipality,² and when the mode of doing the work is designated by ordinance, it must be followed, except in minor details, by the ministerial officers who are charged with carrying it out.³ In case it is necessary that there be an attempt made to agree with the owners of property as to how the work shall be done, the making of such attempt is sufficiently shown by the fact that notice is given to the persons interested, of a time and place at which they may be heard.⁴

(B) Contract or Work Under Direct Supervision of City. It is usually provided by charter or statute that work of any magnitude be let by competitive contract;⁵ and unless such provision is followed an assessment to pay for the work is invalid;⁶ but in the absence of such requirement, a city need not let public work to contractors.⁷

(IV) TIME FOR DOING WORK. Selection of time for doing the work is within the discretion of the municipality, and this discretion will not be interfered with merely because in the season selected the cost of making an improvement is greater than it would be at another time.⁸

e. Delegation of Power and Grant of Franchise—(i) DELEGATION OF POWER BY MUNICIPALITY. The power to make improvements is usually vested in the council and may not be delegated.⁹ So a council committee or other board or officer may not be empowered by ordinance to exercise discretion as to the opening,¹⁰

1. See Thomson v. Boonville, 61 Mo. 282, holding that where a city charter gave the mayor and city council authority to regulate, pave, and improve its streets, the mode prescribed by the charter for the performance of such work must be strictly pursued.

for public improvements to be let to the lowest responsible bidder does not prohibit the city from constructing approaches to a bridge under direction of its own engineers and officers.

Repairs.—Substantial repair of a pavement falls within a city ordinance requiring repairs to be done by the supervisors of the highways, by means of labor, and not by contract when it is not a renewal or second construction. Lea v. Philadelphia, 32 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 292.

And see Baltimore v. Clunet, 23 Md. 449, holding that under a provision in an ordinance for opening a street the ordinance shall not take effect until certain things therein specified shall be done, and parties have given their written assent to the provision of the fourth section, it is not a valid objection to these provisions that they "delegate this legislative power over the subject, and make the Ordinance depend for its force and efficacy upon the will of others." grading,¹¹ improving,¹² or lighting¹³ of streets, laying of sewers,¹⁴ or determining upon costs,¹⁵ or material,¹⁶ or manner,¹⁷ or place of doing the work,¹⁸ nor may the council empower a ministerial officer to extend the time fixed by ordinance for the completion of an improvement.¹⁹ The ministerial function may be validly imposed by the council upon a committee or subordinate officer or board,²⁰ and an ordinance ordering an improvement is not void because it leaves certain minor details to the discretion of ministerial officers.²¹ Hence an ordimony with the constitution and laws of the state, and subject thereto, it has been held that a city might by its charter confer upon a court special jurisdiction in street opening proceedings. St. Louis v. Gleason, 15 Mo. App. 25 [reversed on other grounds in 89 Mo. 67, 14 S. W. 768].

Chicago*, 60 Ill. 441 (holding that an ordinance for the curbing of a street "with curb walls where curb walls are not already built" did not confer any discretion on the board of public works and was valid); Burchell v. New York, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 196 (holding that an ordinance for the paving of an avenue, which provided for the relaying of cross walks which, in the opinion of the commissioner of public works, should be found not to be in good repair or not on a grade adapted to the new pavement, was not such an unlawful delegation of authority as to vitiate an assessment made under it).

Making of contract.—Where a city council is vested with power to cause sidewalks in the city to be constructed, it may authorize the mayor and the chairman of the committee on streets and alleys to make in its behalf and pursuant to its directions a contract for doing the work. Hitchcock v. Galveston, 96 U. S. 341, 24 L. ed. 659.

Change in specifications.—The fact that there are filed with the specifications for a proposed sewer provisions that all work shall be done as directed by the commissioner of public works, and that he reserves the right to change the specifications, does not render the ordinance invalid as delegating to the commissioner power to change the specifications, since the provisions form no part of the ordinance or of the specifications. *Rich v. nance providing for the improvement of a street may direct the city engineer to fix the grade,²² or intrust to a commissioner the execution of the work,²³ and the estimate and apportionment of the cost,²⁴ or within specified limitations, the amount of work to be done.²⁵

(ii) POWER TO GRANT FRANCHISE OR PRIVILEGE IN GENERAL. It is usually held that a city council has no power to confer an exclusive franchise, unless such power is delegated in clear and unmistakable terms;²⁶ but where a city, in addition to a grant of general powers, was expressly given the right to erect waterworks, it was held to possess power to grant a corporation a franchise to supply the inhabitants with water.²⁷ Under charter power to grant a franchise, a municipality may give a corporation the exclusive privilege of maintaining waterworks for a period of years, as against any other company;²⁸ but the grant of a waterworks franchise will not be construed by implication to divest the municipality of its power to construct an independent waterworks system of its own,²⁹ although by its contract the city may exclude itself from constructing and operating waterworks of its own for the term covered by the contract.³⁰ Although a contract with a water company may be void in so far as it attempts to create an exclusive privilege, it will bind the city to pay the price stipulated in the contract as long as it accepts the service offered in pursuance of the contract.³¹ A city owning a ferry franchise may convert it into a bridge privilege by permitting the erection of a bridge and agreeing not to exercise the ferry privilege in consideration of annual payments.³²

f. Mode and Means of Defraying Expenses³³—(i) IN GENERAL. A municipality, subject to the ordinary legislative limitations as to expenditures and indebtedness, may improve its streets and pay for the same out of its general funds;³⁴ and a charter or statutory provision allowing special assessments does not

E. 334 (holding that an ordinance providing that a street to be laid out should be graded according to stakes to be set by the engineer who was required to make the necessary profiles and see that the work was executed according to the specifications in the ordinance gave no discretion to the engineer to determine on the nature of the improvement); Bradley v. Van Wyck, 65 N. Y. App. Div. 293, 72 N. Y. Suppl. 1034 (holding that a provision in a specification to the effect that quarries from which the contractor proposed to take stone would be inspected by the architect, and that if the deposit and facilities for quarrying the same were satisfactory to the architect and commissioners of parks they would issue an approval of the same, was in no way illegal or beyond the power of the officers of the city to prescribe).

Diversion of funds.—The trustees of the village of Lowville, incorporated under the general act for the incorporation of villages, necessarily deprive the city of this power;³⁵ but in the absence of express direction,³⁶ it leaves to the discretion of the municipal authorities the choice of modes for defraying expenses.³⁷ This right of choice is sometimes expressly given, but under such grant the city may not combine general taxation and special assessment in making a single improvement;³⁸ and if the city be limited by express provision to the assessment plan, it cannot of course pay for the improvement out of its general fund.³⁹ In order to make improvements, a municipality may exercise its ordinary power to incur indebtedness;⁴⁰ but when following the special assessment method it cannot pledge the general credit of the city,⁴¹ unless expressly authorized.⁴²

(ii) REQUIREMENT OF MEANS OF PAYMENT. Constitutional or legislative requirements as to the means of paying for an improvement must be observed, before the same may be lawfully made;⁴³ and it has been held that a city is not liable on a contract for improvements when there is no provision at the date of execution for its payment as required by law,⁴⁴ or no appropriation for the purpose

St. 360, 5 Atl. 231, holding that the limitation imposed by the constitution on the authority of municipalities, requiring them to provide means in advance for the payment of their indebtedness, applies only to interest-bearing and other express contract obligations, and not to the ordinary expenses incurred for road repairs.

What constitutes provision.—Where the commissioner of city works has made the requisition on which the mayor, controller, and city clerk are required to borrow money on bonds of the city to pay for certain public improvements, the "means" to pay for such made.⁴⁵ General restrictions of this nature, however, are not applicable when the city is acting under a special improvement law.⁴⁶

(II) CERTIFICATE OF OFFICERS AS TO SUFFICIENCY OF FUNDS. It is sometimes provided by charter or statute that no obligation for the expenditure of money shall be entered into unless certification be made that the necessary funds are available;⁴⁷ but such a provision is not applicable to proceedings in eminent domain for the purpose of street improvements;⁴⁸ nor to a contract under a special assessment act for the paving of sidewalks.⁴⁹

(IV) ASSESSMENT PREREQUISITE TO PERFORMANCE OF WORK OR LETTING CONTRACT. Unless expressly required by constitutional⁵⁰ or statutory⁵¹ provision, assessment need not be made before a contract is let or the work performed.⁵²

B. Preliminary Proceedings and Ordinances or Resolutions — 1. IN GENERAL — a. Necessity and Nature of Proceedings in General. Special proceedings for laying out a street or making improvements therein are usually provided for by charter or statute;⁵³ and unless followed the action of the municipality is void.⁵⁴

b. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions — (1) IN GENERAL. Proceedings to improve streets must be in strict compliance with the legislative provision under which the city acts;⁵⁵ and such provision in turn must of course conform improvements are provided in the meaning of a city charter which says that no contract shall be binding against the city unless the controller shall certify "that the means required to make the payments under such contract are provided and applicable thereto"; and it is immaterial that the bonds have not been sold and the proceeds paid into the treasury. *People v. When cost exceeds appropriation.—Under an act limiting the liability of the city to contracts for which sufficient appropriations shall have been previously made by ordinance, the city of Philadelphia is not liable on a contract for the construction of a bridge, not made by any express authority from the councils, for a greater sum than has been appropriated by councils for such work. *Continental Bridge Co. v. to the constitution; ⁵⁶ but a constitutional provision that municipal officers shall be elected by the people does not prevent the legislature from appointing commissioners to widen a street in a city by special proceedings. ⁵⁷ Different acts unless repugnant will be construed together in pari materia as providing two methods of improvement. ⁵⁸

(II) STATUTES APPLICABLE. Determination of the applicability of statutes is a matter of construction, the tendency being, in the absence of a clear intent to the contrary, to construe separate acts together, ⁵⁹ and not to extend the application of a statute beyond necessary limits. ⁶⁰ Hence the provisions of an act relating to paving streets do not apply to the construction of sewers; ⁶¹ nor of an act providing for the method of erecting public buildings "and making public improvements," to the establishment of streets. ⁶²

e. Improvements That May Be Included in One Proceeding. The municipality is usually prohibited from providing for more than one improvement in a single proceeding; ⁶³ and unless empowered by the terms of its charter to do so ⁶⁴

Proceedings under inoperative statute.—When a municipal corporation proceeds to construct a sewer under the provisions of a law which has ceased to exist, its doings are valid if in accordance with the provisions of existing laws. Van Vorst v. Jersey City, 27 N. J. L. 493.

Work incidental to improvement.—The power to build bridges, granted in general terms to a municipality, includes of necessity the power to make such approaches to them as are necessary to their convenient use; and therefore, if it entails the grading of streets, it is not necessary that such grading is done in compliance with the general requirements of the charter or statute relating thereto. *Gray v. Continuation of proceedings under new law.—Under an act providing that "the proceedings in any work or improvement . . . already commenced and now progressing under any other act . . . may from any stage of such proceedings . . . be continued under this act, by resolution" declaring "an election or intention to have said work or improvement cease under such other act . . . and continue under this," it is not necessary immediately on the passage of the act to declare the intention of proceeding thereunder, but discretion may be used in determining the stage at which the change should be made. *Heffernan v. a city may not provide in one ordinance for separate and distinct improvements;⁶⁵ but in determining what constitutes a single improvement the tendency of the courts is toward liberality.⁶⁶ It has been held that where the original resolution is sufficiently broad, and but a single improvement is made, there may be more than one contract and assessment.⁶⁷ Provision may be made in one ordinance for paving different streets in the same manner,⁶⁸ for grading, draining, and sodding,⁶⁹ for running sewers along different streets,⁷⁰ and for building a bridge and constructing a sewer when the latter is necessary for the proper drainage of the bridge.⁷¹ An ordinance will not be regarded as invalid as providing for two independent improvements, by the fact that in providing for the construction of a sewer it requires it to be laid so as to discharge from either way into a sewer in an intersecting street.⁷² But where the power to widen and to grade was given in different sections of an act, it was held that the widening and grading of a street could not be ordered in a single proceeding.⁷³

d. Division of Improvement. Separate ordinances authorizing parts of a continuous improvement cannot be sustained, where the only apparent purpose of the division of the improvement is to evade the provisions of a statute which require particular formalities to be observed in the case of improvements exceeding in cost a certain sum.⁷⁴ And where two ordinances are passed which are dependent upon each other, as providing for parts of a single or entire scheme, they are to be treated as one ordinance and as providing for a single improvement.⁷⁵ So where different streets are to be paved, if they are similarly situated with respect to the improvement and each to be paved with like material and in the same way, the paving of each may be regarded as part of a common enterprise and the whole constitutes a single improvement.⁷⁶ But the fact that a single ordinance might be upheld on the ground that all improvements contemplated by several ordinances constitute a single system will not demand that separate ordinances be declared void.⁷⁷ Under some statutes a separate order for construction

And that the land was mortgaged was not material as ground of objection, it not being suggested that the security was or could be impaired by the improvement.

e. Parties to Proceedings. Property-owners affected are not necessary parties to a proceeding to determine merely the necessity of opening a street.⁷⁹

f. Proceedings by County Officers or Courts. In addition to the right of a municipality to open streets, the power is occasionally conferred upon some county officer or court; but when either the city or county has acted, the jurisdiction of the other is excluded.⁸⁰

2. PETITION OR OTHER APPLICATION — a. Form and Requisites. The petition or other application for an improvement, when required by statute,⁸¹ must be sufficiently definite to be notice to parties interested,⁸² and to give the municipal authorities jurisdiction;⁸³ and it must be in writing,⁸⁴ and signed unconditionally,⁸⁵ and in such a way as to fully and legally bind the petitioners.⁸⁶ All statutory requirements as to form must be complied with, and a petition lacking in essential averments is tantamount to no petition,⁸⁷ and an ordinance void because of an insufficient petition is not validated by a subsequent ratification by the signers.⁸⁸ Where the proceedings upon a petition have been invalid, a new petition must be filed in order to validate a new ordinance, and a refiled of the original petition is not sufficient.⁸⁹ Where the petition embodies several improvements, it would seem that a portion of the petition may be granted and the remaining portion refused.⁹⁰ Under the provisions of some statutes a petition for a street improve-council as to the time when improvements should be made, or deprive it of the power of exercising such discretion.

Jersey City*, 30 N. J. ment must describe the materials specifically.⁹¹ But unless especially provided, the petitioners cannot determine the material to be used,⁹² nor the time within which the improvement shall be made.⁹³ Where the statute requires that the petition shall so describe the material as to permit a general competition between contractors, it has been held that a petition for asphalt from a particular locality may be upheld.⁹⁴ Action upon the petition of the property-owners for a particular kind of pavement is not invalid, although taken before the expiration of the time for filing such petitions, where no other petition is in fact filed.⁹⁵

b. Number and Qualification of Petitioners—(1) NUMBER. The number of petitioners necessary to authorize an improvement is fixed by the charter or statute under which the proceedings are had, and a failure of the required number to sign invalidates the proceeding.⁹⁶ Although the right of petition is usually limited to abutting owners,⁹⁷ it is sometimes extended to owners of property adjoining the proposed improvement, provided it be near enough to be affected physically or commercially to a degree in excess of the effect on property in the city generally.⁹⁸ Owners of a majority of frontage along the street or part thereof to be improved are usually required to sign,⁹⁹ but sometimes a majority Petition by adjacent owners alone—Under a statute authorizing a petition by land-owners for opening a street through their property and other property adjacent thereto, setting forth the description of the adjacent property and the owners thereof, some of the signers must possess a portion of the land through which the street is to be opened. In re New Orleans, 16 La. Computation of total frontage—In computing the total frontage included in a proposed street improvement, the width of intersecting streets should not be counted. People v. Syracuse, 30 Misc. (N. Y.) 409, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 878; Wright v. Tacoma, 3 Wash. Terr. 410, 19 Pac. 42. And where the property-owners upon the north side only of a proposed street petitioned for its opening, and it appeared that by reason of the angle between the streets intended to be connected that the frontage on the north side was twelve feet less than on the other side, the deficiency could not be supplied by making the north boundary irregular so as to increase the frontage of the petitioning owners and thereby validate the petition. Taylor v. Bloomington, 186 Ill. 497, 58 N. E. 216.

Duration of ownership—The signers of the petition must be abutting owners at the time of passage of the ordinance. Tone v. Columbus, 1 Ohio Cir. Ct. 305, 1 Ohio Cir. Dec. 168. But see Laird v. Cincinnati, 6 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 1006, 9 Am. L. Rec. 479, of individual owners as well as owners of a major portion of the property must join;¹ sometimes a majority in each block² or on each side of the street³ is necessary; and occasionally value of property is made the test.⁴ Property belonging to the city is usually not reckoned;⁵ but if reckoned, the city may signify its consent by signing the petition.⁶ Two petitions asking for different sorts of pavement will be taken as one when the council has power to determine finally the character of the improvement;⁷ but a petition cannot be made the basis for an improvement essentially different from the one asked for;⁸ nor may the names of original petitioners be added to those subscribed to a subsequent petition for the same improvement.⁹ In case an improvement is not properly authorized because of a failure to obtain the proper number of signatures, a contract in the petition by which the signers agreed to indemnify the city from losses on account of non-signers does not impose liability upon the abutting and signing property-owners.¹⁰

(II) QUALIFICATION. In determining the qualification of petitioners a strict rule obtains, and it has accordingly been held that a tenant in common cannot sign in behalf of his cotenants,¹¹ nor one partner in behalf of another,¹² nor an administrator in behalf of the estate,¹³ nor a life-tenant;¹⁴ but a lessee in possession

5 Cinc. L. Bul. 903, holding that the fact that an abutting owner who signed a petition for a street improvement afterward conveyed the property did not take away the jurisdiction of the city to act on the petition.

Majority abutting on improvement.—Under a statute authorizing public improvements on petition of a majority in interest and number of abutting owners on the line of improvement, a majority in interest and number of owners of property abutting on the part to be opened, and not on the entire street, is necessary to authorize the extension of an existing street. *Speer v. Non-residents.—Where the statute requires the signatures of the resident owners of more than half the property fronting upon the proposed improvements, it will be regarded as requiring merely a majority of the property represented by resident owners. *Wright v. Unintentional signature as administratrix.—Where the owner in fee signs as administratrix, the words other than her name may be treated as descriptio personæ. Allen v. Portland, 35 Oreg. 420, 58 Pac. 509.

14. Baltimore v. Boyd, 64 Md. 10, 20 Atl. 1028. But compare Allen v. Portland, 35 Oreg. 420, 58 Pac. 509, holding that one who has a life-estate in one-half of a tract of land, and who is intrusted with the sole and unrestricted management of it during the under a ninety-nine-year lease renewable forever was held to be the owner,¹⁵ as was a mortgagor after foreclosure, since he had the right to redeem.¹⁶ A board of education may sign if they have power to hold and dispose of property.¹⁷ A widow may, with the assent of the heirs, sign for property belonging to her deceased husband.¹⁸ The owner need not yet have received the deed in order to validate his signature.¹⁹ The wife of an owner in fee need not join in signing the petition.²⁰ Where a conveyance has been merely nominal for the purpose of throwing protesting property-owners into the minority, it has been held that it is not proper to count the signatures of such nominal grantees.²¹ The signature of a corporation must be by its duly authorized officers;²² but an unauthorized signing may be ratified by the board of directors.²³

(iii) PRESUMPTION OF SUFFICIENCY. An order or ordinance based on a petition will raise a presumption that the petition is sufficient;²⁴ and unless so provided,²⁵ the petition need not show on its face that the required number have signed it.²⁶

c. Signature by Attorney or Agent. Signature to the petition may be by agent, and the authority of such agent will be presumed or may be proved by evidence dehors the record.²⁷ But an unauthorized signature by one assuming to act as agent cannot be counted.²⁸

d. Withdrawal of Consent. Unless otherwise provided by charter or statute,²⁹ signers of a petition are free to withdraw their names up until the time that the municipality has acted upon the same.³⁰ It has been held that a petition for a minority of a child then thirteen years of age, is the owner within the meaning of a statute requiring the petition of owners of the property affected.

Conditional action.—A petition for a street improvement, remaining in the hands of the board of administration at the time the ordinance to improve is passed, binds the signers thereof, although it is not indorsed or "filed until signers agree to pay deficiency." Bush v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio Cir. Ct. 605, 10 Ohio Cir. Dec. 816.

street improvement is a continuing one, and the signers under an existing law are liable under the law as it may be amended.⁸¹

3. PRELIMINARY RESOLUTION OR OTHER ACTION ON APPLICATION — a. In General.

It is a frequent statutory requirement that the municipality pass a preliminary resolution of intention to make an improvement, which shall describe the work to be done. Failure to pass such resolution⁸² or to describe therein the character of the work will invalidate the proceedings;⁸³ nor may the city combine with such preliminary resolution an order to make the improvement.⁸⁴ But an ordinance is not invalid for the reason that it recites that it is in accordance with a resolution of intention, although it includes for assessment property not included in the resolution, where no resolution of intention is required by charter or general ordinance.⁸⁵

b. As to Necessity of Improvement. A preliminary resolution declaring the necessity of an improvement is often required by charter or statute;⁸⁶ and where so required such resolution is regarded as a condition precedent.⁸⁷ The declara-

Approval of mayor.—A resolution appointing a time for the hearing of objections to an improvement petition need not be presented to the mayor for his approval, under a provision of the charter that every resolution shall be so presented, as such provision includes only final resolutions such as one authorizing an improvement to be made. Howeth v. Jersey City, 30 N. J. L. 93 [reversed on other grounds in 30 N. J. L. 521].

Signature.—Where the statute requires the signature of the clerk to a resolution of intention to make improvements, a printed signature upon a blank is sufficient. Williams v. McDonald, 58 Cal. 527.

33. Dowling v. Hibernia Sav., etc., Soc., 143 Cal. 425, 77 Pac. 141; Williamson v. Joyce, 137 Cal. 107, 69 Pac. 854; Piedmont Paving Co. v. Allman, 136 Cal. 88, 68 Pac. 493; Fay v. Utica Bd. of Assessors, 50 N. Y. App. Div. 54, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 445.

Sufficiency of description.—A resolution which describes the improvement in a general way with such certainty, when considering the estimate, as to reasonably advise the property-owners as to the nature of the improvement, is sufficient without containing all the details required in an ordinance. McLennan v. Chicago, 218 Ill. 62, 75 N. E. 762. But where the estimate of the cost of the proposed improvement is required to be made a part of the record of the first resolution, it is not sufficiently incorporated by reference where it is not transcribed upon any record of the board having jurisdiction of the matter. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Chicago, 209 Ill. 444, 70 N. E. 659. Plans and specifications may be incorporated in a resolution of intention by reference, although not physically annexed to it. Haughwout v. Raymond, 148 Cal. 311, 83 Pac. 53. It has been held that a description of an improvement as "a brick sewer, with man-holes and catch-basins" is sufficient. Walker v. Chicago, 202 Ill. 531, 67 N. E. 369. But that a resolution of intention merely declaring that gutters shall be concrete gutters four feet wide is defective. Lambert v. Cummings, 2 Cal. App. 642, 84 Pac. 266. A direction that a sidewalk be constructed "upon the northeast side of Fourth street from Locust street to Main street" is a sufficient description of the property along which the sidewalk is to be built. Dyer v. Woods, 166 Ind. 44, 76 N. E. 624.

Variance.—A resolution describing a sewer improvement as a system of "brick and vitrified tile-pipe sewer" does not substantially vary from an ordinance describing the improvement as a "system of brick and vitrified tile-pipe sewers." Washington Park Club v. Chicago, 219 Ill. 323, 76 N. E. 383. A first resolution for a public improvement, stating that the right of way of a street railway in a street to be improved was excepted from the improvement, does not materially vary from a notice of public hearing which fails so to state. McLennan v. Chicago, 218 Ill. 62, 75 N. E. 762.

Aider by reference.—A resolution of intention for a public improvement may be aided by reference to the plans and specifications. Haughwout v. Bonyne, (Cal. 1905) 83 Pac. 54; Haughwout v. Raymond, 148 Cal. 311, 83 Pac. 53.

tion upon the records of the council that a proposed improvement is necessary has, however, been held not to be jurisdictional, where upon the filing of proper petitions the making of the improvement is mandatory.³⁸

4. NOTICE OF PROPOSED IMPROVEMENT OR RESOLUTION³⁹ — a. In General. For the purpose of giving property-owners affected a chance to be heard, provision is frequently made by charter or statute for notice of intention to make an improvement, and unless complied with the improvement may not be made.⁴⁰

b. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions. Although there are cases to the contrary,⁴¹ the better rule is that a city cannot be empowered to make improvements by special assessment without giving due notice to the property-owners to be assessed.⁴²

c. Necessity of Notice — (1) IN GENERAL. Failure to give notice as provided by charter or statute will invalidate proceedings for improvements and assessments to pay for the same;⁴³ but it has been held that notice, as required by statute, of

was not required to enter upon such records an adjudication that the widening of a way was of common convenience and necessity, before the subject was submitted to the consideration and action of the board of street engineers.

As condition precedent to issue of bonds.— A city charter making a resolution declaring the necessity of a public improvement, cost of any portion of which is to be assessed against the locality of the improvement, a prerequisite to a valid assessment does not render such a resolution a condition precedent to the issue of bonds by a city to pay its proportion of the cost of the improvement. Naegely v. Saginaw, 101 Mich. 532, 60 N. W. 46.

Delegation of authority.— The determination of whether the convenience and necessity of individuals and the public good demand a contemplated improvement is judicial and the council cannot delegate the authority to determine such question with regard to pavement, to a board of street commissioners. Blanchard v. Barre, 77 Vt. 420, 60 Atl. 970.

The kind of pavement should be stated in the resolution. Kirksville v. Coleman, 103 Mo. App. 215, 77 S. W. 120.

Qualifications of freeholders.— A statute conferring upon the trustees of a village the powers of highway commissioners does not require that the freeholders certifying to the necessity of an improvement shall be drawn and assembled in the manner required by the highway laws of the state. Matter of Main St., 30 Hun (N. Y.) 424 [affirmed in 98 N. Y. 454].

Formalities of passage.— Under an Ohio statute a preliminary resolution declaring a proposed street improvement necessary is not a resolution of either a general or permanent nature within the meaning of a statute requiring such resolution to be read three different days, unless three fourths of all the members shall dispense with the rule. Uppington v. Oviatt, 24 Ohio St. 232.

In Indiana the resolution has been held not to be jurisdictional. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hays, 17 Ind. App. 261, 44 N. E. 375, 45 N. E. 675, 46 N. E. 597; Pennsylvania Co. v. Cole, 132 Fed. 668.

In Ohio a provision requiring a preliminary resolution of necessity has been held not to apply to an appropriation of land for widening a street. Caldwell v. Carthage, 49 Ohio St. 334, 31 N. E. 602; Krumberg v. Cincinnati, 29 Ohio St. 69; Longworth v. Cincinnati, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 683, 23 Cinc. L. Bul. 100. Nor does it apply to a contract for the enlargement of a water-works system. Fergus v. Columbus, 8 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 290, 6 Ohio N. P. 82.

Where there has been a refusal.— An act providing for sidewalk assessments is not unconstitutional for failure to prescribe notice to the owner, where the assessment is imposed before the owner's refusal to have the work done, since the refusal implies a notice. Richter v. New York, 24 Misc. (N. Y.) 613, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 150.

43. Indiana.— Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Edgerton, 125 Ind. 455, 25 N. E. 436;

a preliminary resolution declaring the necessity of an improvement is not essential to give the council jurisdiction.⁴⁴ Where a board does not adopt a final resolution at the first meeting for the public hearing, but adjourns from time to time to regular fixed dates, no further notices need be given.⁴⁵ And notice to parties to appear and be heard before a committee of the council has been held sufficient without notice to the parties to appear and be heard before the city council, in its action with regard thereto.⁴⁶ A notice of a hearing before commissioners to assess benefits after the completion of a municipal improvement does not take the place of notice to be given property-owners liable to be affected by such improvement, before it is made.⁴⁷

(11) NOTICE OF STREET IMPROVEMENT. Notice of intention to improve a street is usually required by charter or statute.⁴⁸ Such requirement is mandatory, and unless followed, proceedings and assessments are void.⁴⁹ So an ordinance which directs that a street shall be paved and the cost assessed upon the property benefited has been held to be a judicial act requiring that notice be given and an opportunity for hearing afforded the property-owners liable to be affected, although the city charter does not expressly require such notice.⁵⁰ Under statutes author-

A change in the curb of a sidewalk, by which at the corner of two streets it was altered from a square to a curve with a radius of the same length as the uniform width of the sidewalk, has been held not such a proceeding as requires notice to the property-owners. Condon v. Wilkinsburg, etc., St. R. Co., 30 Pittsb. Leg. J. N. S. (Pa.) 289.

50. Sears v. Atlantic City, 72 N. J. L. 435, 60 Atl. 1093. But see Bolton v. Cleveland, 35 Ohio St. 319, holding that where no damages resulted to abutting lots from a street

izing improvements upon petition of the property-owners interested, it is usually held that notice to the property-owners in addition to the petition is not required.⁵¹

(III) ALTERATION OR VACATION. Property-owners affected are usually held to be entitled to notice of intention to widen or vacate a street or to change the grade thereof,⁵² although it is sometimes held that in the absence of legislative requirement such notice need not be given.⁵³

(IV) SEWERS. Unless required by charter or statute,⁵⁴ notice of intention to build a sewer and assess the cost to abutting owners need not be given.⁵⁵

d. Form, Requisite, and Validity in General. Statutory requirements as to the form of notice must be complied with to render proceedings for improvements valid.⁵⁶ Publication of an ordinance or resolution declaring intention to make an improvement may of itself constitute sufficient notice, if the statute so provides.⁵⁷ In the absence of express requirements as to form, a liberal test of sufficiency is applied;⁵⁸ but the notice must reasonably inform the property-owners that they are to be assessed,⁵⁹ must describe generally the nature of the improvement,⁶⁰ and must set a time when they may be heard.⁶¹ Where the power to compel sewer, gas, and water connections has been delegated to a board of improvement, publication of notice by the city of its determination to improve the street was not a condition precedent to the authority of the city to make an assessment to defray the costs.

public works, notice by such board is sufficient to sustain a special assessment to cover the cost of such connections.⁶²

e. Description of Improvement. Property-owners to be assessed should be apprised by notice of the character and extent of the improvement;⁶³ hence the notice must specify the street or portions thereof to be improved,⁶⁴ the material to be used,⁶⁵ and in case of sewers, the diameter.⁶⁶ But notice of intention to pave a street need not include notice that water, gas, and sewer connections with abutting property will be made;⁶⁷ or that gutters will be constructed.⁶⁸ And although the charter provides that the notice must specify the character of the improvement, it is sufficient to refer therein to plans and specifications that are on file.⁶⁹ A notice is not invalidated as to property which has been properly described by the fact that in a second publication it includes an additional improvement which does not affect such property.⁷⁰

f. Persons Served or Entitled to Notice. Notice of intention to open a street need not be given to owners of land which does not adjoin or lie near the proposed street,⁷¹ but it must be given to persons liable to pay for the improvement as well as to those whose land will be taken.⁷² Notice to an administrator of a proposed improvement is not notice to the heirs;⁷³ but notice to a life-tenant is sufficient,⁷⁴ as is also a notice through the mail to a non-resident owner, although the occupant of the premises has not been served;⁷⁵ and the owner of a fractional interest in property is liable for his proportion, although notice was served on him alone.⁷⁶ Under some statutes it is provided that notice shall be sent to the persons who paid the general taxes upon the property for the last ensuing year.⁷⁷

and be heard is usually provided for by charter or statute, and the provision is mandatory;⁷⁸ but it has been held that an ordinance ordering an improvement was valid, although passed before the expiration of the time, when the work was not begun until after the period allowed in the notice had elapsed without protest being made.⁷⁹ Where the statute merely requires that notice be given, but does not require that it be given by the council, the clerk may fix the time and place.⁸⁰ If no time is fixed, the length of notice is discretionary with the municipality,⁸¹ and five days' notice has been held to be reasonable.⁸² It has been held that a publication of notice for the prescribed period is sufficient, although not for the period named in the order of publication,⁸³ and that a provision that fifteen days must elapse after the posting of a notice before the improvement could be ordered meant fifteen days after the first posting.⁸⁴

h. Service. The manner of service is usually provided for by charter or statute, but under a provision that the council shall give notice, it may delegate the duty to a ministerial officer to be exercised under its direction;⁸⁵ and when the charter does not in terms make notice by publication the exclusive mode, notice personally served upon the property-owner is sufficient.⁸⁶

i. Publication and Posting. Personal notice is not always required,⁸⁷ it being frequently provided by charter or statute that notice by publication or posting will be sufficient; but the terms of such provision must be complied with.⁸⁸ It has been held that the notice may be printed, in English, in a German paper;⁸⁹ in only one edition⁹⁰ of a daily paper, or in the supplement thereof;⁹¹ in a paper that has no Sunday edition⁹² or is not issued on Monday;⁹³ and a publication on Saturday and Sunday will be a publication for two consecutive days,⁹⁴ as required by statute; nor is the validity of the notice affected by a change in the name of a paper during its publication therein.⁹⁵ An act requiring a stated number of days' notice has been held to require in terms but one publication.⁹⁶ The designation of a newspaper in which the resolution shall be published may be embodied in the resolution itself.⁹⁷ Where the charter requires publication in but one newspaper, a proper publication in one official newspaper will not be invalidated by a defective publication in another paper.⁹⁸ A statutory provision for notice by publication "and" posting was held to require the latter mode only when publication could not be had.⁹⁹ When the resolution of intention included improvements in different parts of the city it was held not necessary to post in one street notice of improvements in another;¹ and a provision that the council's resolution to make an improvement must be published does not require a verbatim copy of the resolution in the notice.² If specifications are referred to they must be on file at the day of publication.³ Where it is required that a resolution of intention shall be posted, it is not necessary to post the names of those voting for and against the resolution.⁴ Where an act requiring notice of an application to the court for the appointment of assessors fixes no time for the publication of such notice, an appointment made by the court after a publication amounts to an implied approval of such publication equivalent to a previous order.⁵

j. Return or Proof of Service or Publication. Where service is actually made it has been held that it will be sufficient regardless of defects in its return, or in the absence of return;⁶ and where proof of publication is defective, parol evidence is admissible to supply the defect.⁷ A deputy engineer posting notices of a street improvement may make the required affidavit of such posting, where the deputies are clothed with the powers of the engineer.⁸

provision does not violate a constitutional requirement that the corporate authorities be vested with power to make local improvements; ¹¹ and an ordinance giving the board of public works authority to investigate and report as to the material to be used in a street improvement is not invalid as delegating legislative power belonging to the general council. ¹²

b. Appointment of Commissioners, Viewers, or Jury. If the charter does not provide for the manner of appointment, the council may exercise its discretion in the choice of commissioners; ¹³ but under the power to appoint a jury to decide on the necessity of taking land for a street, it may not select persons directly interested. ¹⁴ When the charter directs the appointment of a special committee to lay out a street reference to a standing committee is not authorized, ¹⁵ nor may the council itself act in the stead of such committee. ¹⁶ Where the authority of a committee to estimate the cost of a proposed improvement is derived from statute and not from the resolution of the council, it is not necessary that the mayor shall have signed the ordinance providing for the improvement before the committee is appointed and makes its report. ¹⁷

c. Notice of Proceedings. A board or commissioners acting in the matter of improvements are usually required by charter or statute to give notice of their proceedings, and a failure to comply substantially with such requirement invalidates their acts. ¹⁸ The rules governing the sufficiency of notice already stated ¹⁹ apply generally to notice by such board or commissioners, and a requirement that notice be published for six days in a daily paper is complied with, although there be an intervening Sunday on which no paper is issued. ²⁰

d. Preliminary Investigation and Report—(1) IN GENERAL. It is frequently provided by charter or statute that the council refer to a special committee or board the question of the necessity and cost of a proposed improvement and the determination of the probable benefit to the property to be assessed. Such provisions are mandatory, and failure to comply with them will invalidate proceedings. ²¹ The time within which such committee must make report of its

Number of commissioners.—Where a statute directed streets to be extended in a city in a manner directed by a road law requiring six viewers, and a subsequent statute authorized the court of quarter sessions within the county to appoint three viewers for the road, it was proper that the appointment of viewers for streets within the city should conform to the later statute and that they should be three in number. In re Lancaster County, 68 Pa. Change of grade.—Laying a pavement on an alley, although making the alley somewhat investigation is sometimes expressly stated and has likewise been held mandatory; ²² but the failure of commissioners to complete proceedings for the extension of a street within the time fixed by law does not, in the absence of express provision, invalidate the proceedings. ²³ A report signed by only two of the three commissioners appointed is nugatory. ²⁴ It has, however, been held that an ordinance authorizing an improvement is not void because of the absence of the street commissioner when final action is taken by the board of improvement of which the commissioner is a member; ²⁵ and that since the commissioners act in an official capacity a change in the personnel of the board, pending proceedings, will not affect the validity thereof. ²⁶ A certificate may properly be made by a person who is out of office at the time of making it, where he was an officer at the time the proceedings were had. ²⁷ Where commissioners are required to decide upon the land to be taken, they cannot leave the determination thereof to the jury summoned to assess damages. ²⁸

(11) ESTIMATE OF COST AND REPORTS OF PROPERTY LIABLE TO ASSESSMENT. An estimate of the costs of improvements and of assessments to pay for the same is frequently required by charter or statute; and such estimate becomes a condition precedent to the making of improvements by the municipality. ²⁹ In higher, is not a change of grade within the meaning of an ordinance requiring the same reports, etc., in case of a change of grade, as in case of the original establishment. Bogard v. O'Brien, 20 S. W. 1097, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 648.

Determination of benefit.—An allegation in the petition for improvement that the proposed improvements will benefit the whole corporation relieves the commissioners from the duty of inquiry into such fact, and binds the municipality ordering them, toward the petitioners, in the same manner as if the commissioners had expressly so declared. In re Barrack St., 2 Rob. (La.) 491.

The certificate of a city engineer, as to a proposed pavement, is not necessary unless required by statute. San Francisco Paving Co. v. Egan, 146 Cal. 635, 80 Pac. 1076, holding, however, that if such a certificate were required, his certificate that he has examined the work described in a resolution of intention and has found it practically the same to an official line and grade, and stating the area of the pavement made and the length of the curb constructed, is sufficient.

In Pennsylvania under the act of May 1, 1876, Pamphl. Laws 94, it is not necessary to the validity of an ordinance authorizing a street improvement that the report be made before the hearing of the property-owners. Beaumont v. Wilkes-Barre, 142 Pa. St. 198, 21 Atl. 888.

Report as to part of improvement.—Where a jury appointed to view and report as to the necessity of opening a street between two points, reports in favor of opening it only from one of such points to any intermediate point, and assesses the damages, the report should be set aside. In re Twenty-eighth St., 11 Phila. (Pa.) 436.

Change of grade.—Where an officer is entitled to establish a change of grade upon giving notice to those interested, it is not necessary that he announce his determination of such change or establishment at the time of the meeting. Kelly v. Baltimore, 65 Md. 171, 3 Atl. 594, holding further that no other announcement of his determination was required than the recording of the grade as finally calculated and determined upon, in the record book in his office, to which all parties interested could have access.

the absence of legislative requirement, such estimate need not be made.³⁰ A statute requiring an estimate by the city engineer as a prerequisite to any contract for public improvements is not applicable to a contract for street lighting;³¹ nor does a provision calling for an estimate of the cost of street improvements include an alteration of grade,³² or construction of a sewer;³³ and statutes applicable to improvements by construction have been held inapplicable to those relating to proceedings for the appropriation of land.³⁴ The character of the estimate and report is usually prescribed by charter or statute, and such provision must be substantially complied with.³⁵ Hence an estimate of gross cost is not sufficient when the statute calls for a detailed estimate,³⁶ but an itemized estimate of the cost of Appointment of committee.—Where a charter provides that the city council shall appoint a committee of three disinterested, judicious freeholders to estimate the cost of any projected improvement, and to assess the expense upon the lands benefited, such committee need not be appointed by the ordinance for making the improvement. Scovill v. Cleveland, 1 Ohio St. 126.

A second estimate may be made without invalidating the proceedings, upon discovery that the original estimate of the expense is not sufficient to complete the work, if the formalities attendant upon the original proceedings are observed. Denver v. Kennedy, 33 Colo. 80, 80 Pac. 122, 467, so holding where a new estimate of the cost of a viaduct was made by the city engineer, and such proceedings had that notice was again given the owners of property in the district, of the estimated cost, the boundaries of the district, and other details as required by the charter provisions on the subject of notice. In case, after the introduction of an ordinance for a street improvement, it is submitted to the board of public improvements and amended, it is not necessary that the indorsement of the estimated cost as made on the original draft be amended. Bambrick v. Campbell, 37 Mo. App. 460.

In case of dismissal of proceedings by reason of the invalidity of an ordinance, a new ordinance cannot be adopted until the board of public works makes a new estimate of cost and holds another public hearing. Bass v. Chicago, 195 Ill. 109, 62 N. E. 913.

Where the improvement forms a part of a general system it has been held that the estimate of cost may have been made as preliminary to the adoption of the system. Cheney v. Beverly, 188 Mass. 81, 74 N. E. 306, holding that where an estimate of the cost of a sewer system made by an eminent engineer was submitted to the town and was in the custody of the town-clerk for the town's use when the system was adopted, and plans referred to in the town committee's reports constituted the system of sewers mentioned in the vote of the town, and the requisites, levels, distances, directions, and locations were shown with sufficient fullness on such plans, an assessment founded on such estimate of cost was not objectionable because the system was adopted without an estimate of the cost of the sewers to be included in it.

component elements of an improvement is sufficient.³⁷ The estimate should be based upon cost for cash,³⁸ and may include items which are not specifically enumerated in the ordinance for the improvement, if they are properly incident to the improvement;³⁹ hence the report may take into consideration all such items as reasonably enter into consideration in determining the amount of the estimate and the cost of levy and collection of a special tax.⁴⁰ It is not necessary that the plans and specifications be as full as it is possible to make them, in case they are sufficiently definite for practical purposes.⁴¹

(III) CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION. Where an estimate has been furnished and the council acts upon such estimate without calling for further plans, it has been held that it must be assumed that the information was sufficiently specific to enable the council to act intelligently.⁴² Errors in a report that do not affect it essentially will not invalidate it;⁴³ hence the report of an estimate is not void for uncertainty by reason of an omission which may be clearly supplied from the context;⁴⁴ and where a specific portion only of an improvement is such as may be paid for by general taxation, a report which divides the cost of improvement between that payable by general taxation and that payable by specific taxation is equivalent to a report finding separate costs of the two portions of the improvement.⁴⁵ When a board recommends the improvement of a street to the full width of sixty feet, such recommendation will embrace a part of the street less than sixty feet in width.⁴⁶ A report of an estimate of cost when adopted by the city council becomes as much the act of the council as if it had itself made the estimate.⁴⁷

(IV) PROCEEDINGS ON REPORT. A report of commissioners relative to the laying out or improvement of streets has no force until accepted and acted on by the council.⁴⁸ A report cannot be accepted in part if such partial report would provide for an improvement essentially different from that originally ordered ;⁴⁹ but on recommitment of a report for errors the filing of an amended report relates back to the filing of the original.⁵⁰ Where the notice of the public hearing upon an improvement is required to contain an estimate of the cost thereof, an increased estimate cannot be arbitrarily adopted after such hearing and an ordinance based upon such estimate.⁵¹ Provision is sometimes made by charter or statute for the modification of a report at the instance of property-owners affected ;⁵² but a statute which provides that the report of a commission of estimate and assessment shall not be confirmed in case of objection by a majority of the abutting owners does not apply to proceedings to open streets which are needed for the convenience of the general public.⁵³ The report of a referee who has been directed, in street opening proceedings, to take proof as to the title of persons objecting to the opening and to report his opinion thereon, may be objected to, although no exception to the report has been filed.⁵⁴

e. Compensation or Fees, and Expenditures. Although there is a case to the contrary,⁵⁵ the rule would seem to be that a municipality is not liable for expenses incurred by commissioners in having maps and surveys prepared for their use ;⁵⁶ but provision for such expense is usually made by statute.⁵⁷

6. REMONSTRANCE OR OBJECTIONS — a. In General. It is frequently provided by charter or statute that an improvement by special assessment shall not be made if a certain portion of the property-owners to be assessed file remonstrances or objections. Exemption of particular improvements from the rule.—A charter providing that the construction of storm-sewers, in contradistinction to certain other improvements, shall not be subject to petition or remonstrance by the property-owner, is not subject to any constitutional objection. *Spalding v. In New York an act allowing abutting owners to file objections to the opening of streets was construed to apply only to proceedings based on petition and not to the opening of a street by a municipal board sua sponte when in its opinion the public interest required it. In re Board of Street Opening, etc., 133 N. Y. 436, 31 N. E. 316; Matter of Board of Street Opening, etc., 82 Hun 580, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 732 [affirmed in 148 N. Y. 764, 43 N. E. 985]. A statute providing for remonstrance, in case the construction is based upon an assessment of benefits, is inapplicable where there is no such assessment. In re Board of Street Opening, 1 N. Y. 60. McMillan v. Butte, 30 Mont. 220, 76 Pac. 203, holding that an alleged protest to must be presented within the time⁶¹ and signed,⁶² as required by the charter or statute. The signatures must be made by the persons whose names are used,⁶³ or by an authorized agent.⁶⁴ The remonstrance must purport to be signed by the requisite number,⁶⁵ and although not so in fact it will be effective until disallowed by the council.⁶⁶ If the requisite number fail to remonstrate all will be bound by the assessment.⁶⁷ In estimating whether owners of a required amount of frontage have remonstrated, city property should not be considered.⁶⁸ Where persons representing a majority in amount of assessments may prevent the making of an improvement, mortgaged property to the extent of the mortgage should be omitted;⁶⁹ and in estimating such majority an award to a person who has sold his property before the hearing of the application for confirmation of the report of the commissioner must be rejected.⁷⁰ A protest against an improvement is sufficient for the work objected to, although it does not include all the work enumerated in the resolution of the council.⁷¹ The council may set aside proceedings pending on a remonstrance and order the improvement de novo, and make the same unless a new remonstrance is filed.⁷² An order of the council directing a street paving, filed by abutting owners, stating the reasons why they did not desire the paving done during the year 1898, and stating that they were willing to have the street paved during the year 1900, and that payment therefor should be required in three annual instalments, was not an unqualified protest.

Premature filing.—Where it is provided that objection shall be filed within ten days from the expiration of the time of publication of notice of intention, the protest is not invalid as prematurely filed, because it is filed before the last day of the publication. Thomason v. Carroll, 132 Cal. 148, 64 Pac. 262.

Indorsement.—Where it is provided that a clerk of the council shall indorse the protest with the date of its reception, the failure of the clerk to sign the indorsement of filing will not render the objection insufficient. City Street Imp. Co. v. Babcock, 139 Cal. 600, 73 Pac. 666.

Further proceedings.—Under a statute providing that a written objection by a majority of the owners shall be a bar for six months to any further proceedings, the objection not only suspends the right to make improvements, but precludes subsequent construction after the expiration of six months, without a repetition and notice of intention. Thomason v. Carroll, 132 Cal. 148, 64 Pac. 262. And the board is divested of jurisdiction to proceed further without a new resolution of board to proceed with an improvement notwithstanding a remonstrance may be in the form of a resolution; but not of viva voce vote to adopt report.⁷³ When the report of a committee to which has been referred a remonstrance is received by the council and ordered filed, such action amounts to an adoption of the report and the same becomes a part of the record.⁷⁴ So when a remonstrance is referred to a committee, and the council or board in disregard of the remonstrance authorizes the improvement, such action amounts to a decision against the remonstrance and it is not necessary that a formal order be entered for that purpose.⁷⁵ The adoption of a report that a certain remonstrance is effective, when in fact it is not, does not deprive the council of authority.⁷⁶

b. Withdrawal of Protest. After jurisdiction to proceed with an improvement has been ousted by the filing of a remonstrance, it cannot be restored by a withdrawal of the remonstrance, or of signatures therefrom.⁷⁷

7. HEARING AND DETERMINATION — a. Hearing of Persons Interested. It is usually provided by charter or statute that before an improvement be made, an opportunity to be heard shall be given to objecting property-owners; such provisions are mandatory,⁷⁸ but in their absence a hearing is not necessary.⁷⁹ In the absence of express legislative authority,⁸⁰ an ordinance changing the character of an improvement and increasing its cost, passed after a hearing, is void as to such increase unless a rehearing be had.⁸¹ But final action need not be taken on the day named for a hearing,⁸² and the fact that the council confirmed a report of the engineer on a proposed improvement the same evening set for a hearing has been held not necessarily to have deprived the property-owners of their right to be heard.⁸³ Where at the hearing of property-owners the improvement is not altered or modified, and it is determined to construe the improvement in accordance with the original resolution, it is sufficient that the board of local improvements to whom the matter is intrusted pass a resolution adhering to the prior resolution.⁸⁴ It has been held that by the passage of an ordinance for an improvement, after the report of a committee upon the sufficiency of remonstrance against the improvement, the council in effect adopts the report as if it had taken formal intention. Pacific Paving Co. v. Sullivan Estate Co., 137 Cal. 261, 70 Pac. 86.

Hearing upon final order.—Where objectors to the laying out of a street were afforded several opportunities to be heard in the action thereon.⁸⁵ Publication of notice of a hearing may be made by the clerk under the council's instructions;⁸⁶ and under a statutory requirement that the council give notice of a proposed improvement, stating a time and place for hearing objections, it need not appoint a committee to hear such objections, but may order them filed with the clerk.⁸⁷ An express finding that the cost is such as to justify the issuance of bonds is unnecessary, where the cost is set out and the issuance of bonds ordered.⁸⁸

b. Determination as to Necessity and Utility of Improvement. The right to determine upon the necessity of an improvement is usually vested in the council, and its decision, except in extreme cases,⁸⁹ is final.⁹⁰ In determining such necessity the council may act on the report of a committee;⁹¹ and the acceptance of an offer by an individual to open a street is sufficient declaration of its necessity as a public improvement;⁹² nor is it necessary to find that the cost of opening and grading a street will exceed the value of the benefit to the public.⁹³

8. ORDINANCE, RESOLUTION, OR ORDER FOR IMPROVEMENT — a. Necessity — (1) IN GENERAL. When the power to make improvements is conferred in general terms, the municipality may exercise the same only by formal legislative action on the part of the city council,⁹⁴ it being frequently provided by charter or statute that an ordinance shall be necessary,⁹⁵ in which case it becomes a condition precedent to the making of improvements,⁹⁶ or levying a tax to pay for the same.⁹⁷ But where the entire procedure for the construction of an improvement is regulated by statute, and nothing is left to be determined by a general ordinance, the adoption of a general ordinance is unnecessary and an assessment may be made in the mode prescribed by the statute.⁹⁸ The rule requiring improvements to be ordered by either ordinance or resolution will not operate to prevent temporary or ordinary work upon the streets being done without specific authority.⁹⁹ And where injury might result from the delay attendant upon the procedure by ordinance, municipal authorities are sometimes given the power to act without ordinance or resolution.¹ In case repairs, as distinguished from reconstruction, may be made without ordinance, the real character of the work cannot be controlled by a rule adopted by the street commissioner.²

such in all but name.⁵ And where by statute it is provided that action shall be by general or special ordinance, the council cannot by ordinance confer upon itself the right to proceed by resolution.⁶ If the charter permits a resolution, an ordinance will be a compliance.⁷ A resolution is sometimes expressly authorized in lieu of an ordinance.⁸ It has been held that, where a city has power under its charter to build and maintain a system of waterworks and contract for that purpose, the power may be exercised by resolution, and that an ordinance need not be passed;⁹ and a provision requiring formal ordinance in making contracts for gas or electric works does not require an ordinance in making a contract with a private company for lighting the city, but the same may be made by resolution.¹⁰ Although an ordinance may be necessary to establish a grade, it is not necessary, where no change of grade is entailed by an improvement, that the grade be reestablished by ordinance, although originally fixed by resolution.¹¹

b. Enactment—(i) IN GENERAL. In the absence of special provision, ordinances for the authorization of improvements are subject to the general provisions relating to the passage of other ordinances.¹² Special provisions prescribing the mode of passing such ordinances are, however, frequently found in charters or statutes and must be complied with.¹³ But the provisions of a statute relating to street improvements have been held inapplicable to an ordinance for the reconstruction of an improvement.¹⁴ Proceedings which are begun before one council may be continued before succeeding councils, and finally completed by a council composed of different members from that before which the proceedings were instituted and by which the parties have been heard.¹⁵

(ii) AT SPECIAL MEETING.¹⁶ Unless otherwise provided by a charter or statute the action of the council, with regard to an improvement, may be taken at a special, as well as at a general, meeting.¹⁷ And charter provisions relating to the passage of ordinances at special meetings apply generally to ordinances for

(11) NOTICE OF MEETING.¹⁹ Where all members of the council or board have been present at a meeting at which the improvement is considered, and an adjournment is taken to a fixed date, further notice is unnecessary.²⁰

(14) NUMBER OF MEETINGS AND TIME FOR VOTE.²¹ Where no time is provided within which the council must act upon an ordinance presented by the board of local improvements, accompanied by a recommendation and an estimate of cost, such a limitation cannot be imposed by the courts.²² Under some charters and statutory provisions, however, it is provided that resolutions for the purpose of authorizing improvements cannot be voted on within a prescribed period after their presentation.²³ So resolutions of a permanent nature may be required to be read on three different days unless three fourths of the members elected dispense with the rule.²⁴ In the absence of statutory regulation the council may suspend its rules and pass an ordinance on the same day that it is presented.²⁵ An ordinance is not affected by an objection that it was voted on before the hearing of the report of a committee to which a remonstrance against its passage was referred, where the ordinance was presented by one member of the committee and voted for by all the other members.²⁶ Where a council is required to determine, before ordering the construction of an improvement, both that the public convenience will be promoted by the construction thereof, and that the expense will not be disproportionate to the benefits, they need not take action separately upon each of such questions.²⁷ In the absence of the adoption of any special rule, proceedings for the construction of an improvement are not terminated by the fact that they are laid upon the table until the next meeting of the board and are not taken up for consideration at such next meeting.²⁸ An ordinance is not invalidated because passed before the expiration of the time for filing claims for damages which the council must consider before it may determine upon the improvement, if no claims for damages have been presented.²⁹

(v) VOTING ON MORE THAN ONE IMPROVEMENT AT A TIME. In case no formalities are prescribed with regard to the passage of ordinances, the fact that several ordinances for different sewers are voted on and passed together does not invalidate them.³⁰ The fact that a resolution to improve a street was voted on at the same time that a vote was had on other resolutions reported by the same committee will not invalidate it.³¹

(vi) NUMBER OF VOTES REQUIRED. The authorization of a public improvement is frequently made to depend upon the vote of two thirds,³² three fourths,³³ or even a greater proportion³⁴ of the municipal legislative body, this requirement in some cases furnishing a distinction between improvement ordinances and ordinances of a general nature. In the absence of statute or charter provisions the usual rules apply.³⁵ A statute requiring the calling of the ayes and noes has been held to be merely directory.³⁶ But where a fixed proportion of the members must vote to sustain an ordinance, an order adopted by a viva voce vote is void.³⁷ The fact that the requisite majority by which an improvement was authorized is based upon the votes of councilmen who are members de facto

W. 577 (holding that a resolution authorizing the mayor and clerk to contract for the purchase of a tract of land for the purpose of widening a street could not be passed by the council by a bare majority).

In the absence of petition.—It is frequently provided by charter that in the absence of petition the council may order an improvement only by a two-thirds vote; such provision is mandatory (Covington v. Casey, 3 Bush (Ky.) 698; Bradford v. Fox, 171 Pa. St. 343, 33 Atl. 85; Lowry v. Scranton, 4 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 317; Dieckmann v. Sheboygan County, 89 Wis. 571, 62 N. W. 410), and is held to mean two-thirds of the entire council, not merely of the members present at the meeting (Matter of Mt. Vernon, 34 Misc. (N. Y.) 225, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 823 [affirmed in 64 N. Y. App. Div. 619, 72 N. Y. Suppl. 1097]). If the council acts on an insufficient petition but orders the improvement by a two-thirds vote the provision is complied with. *McEneney v. Repeal.—A statute providing that a majority vote of each board of a council shall be necessary to pass any ordinance in which the expenditure of money is involved does not repeal an earlier act which requires a three-fourths vote in case of street improvements. Covington v. Sullivan, 44 S. W. 630, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1884.

34. See the statutes of the several states.

Unanimous vote.—Where an act provides that a common council may by unanimous vote of all the members of the council determine that it is to the interest of the town to lay a sidewalk, the unanimous vote of a quorum merely, or of all the members present, if less than the whole council, is not sufficient. Crickenberger v. Westfield, 71 N. J. L. 467, 58 Atl. 1097.

35. Marion Water Co. v. Marion, 121 Iowa 306, 96 N. W. 883 (holding that where a majority of all the trustees is required, an ordinance adopted unanimously at a meeting of a council at which eight out of nine members were present was valid); Reed v. Woodcliff, (N. J. Sup. 1905) 60 Atl. 1128 (holding that where it is provided that no ordinance shall be finally passed, except by vote of the majority of the whole council, an ordinance was void where it was passed by a vote of three to two in a council composed of six members, the sixth member being absent).

Number of votes required in general see supra, V, B, 4, d.

Where benefits are assessed.—Where the damages paid to owner's land, upon a change of grade, are required to be assessed upon the lands benefited, it has been held that an ordinance for a change of grade is not subject to the restrictions, as to the vote required, applicable to ordinances for the expenditure of the public moneys. Clark v. Elizabeth, 61 N. J. L. 565, 40 Atl. 616, 737.

only, and not de jure, will not invalidate the ordinance.³⁸ The mere fact that a member of the council has signed a petition for an improvement will not prevent him from voting upon the ordinance, where he has no personal or private interest.³⁹

(VII) *APPROVAL OF MAYOR OR PRESIDING OFFICER.*⁴⁰ Whether the mayor's signature is essential to the validity of an ordinance depends upon the charter or the act authorizing the organization of the corporation, but unless it is made essential a requirement of such signature has generally been held merely directory.⁴¹ Where, under the statute, the power to decide upon an improvement is vested in the council, it has been held that the approval of the mayor is not necessary.⁴² A statute requiring the approval of the mayor to a resolution authorizing a public improvement, or in case his approval is withheld the repassage of the resolution, is inapplicable to a resolution authorizing a local improvement.⁴³ Where it is provided that the action of the board of aldermen with relation to street improvements shall be subject to the approval of the mayor, the mayor has not an absolute veto power.⁴⁴

e. Form and Contents — (i) IN GENERAL. Special provisions relating to form and validity of improvement ordinances as usually found must be complied with;⁴⁵ but an ordinance will not be set aside for uncertainty if it is a compliance, although a loose one, with the requirements of the law.⁴⁶ The rules requiring conformity between the subject-matter of an ordinance and the title thereof⁴⁷ are applicable

41. Martindale v. Palmer, 52 Ind. 411, holding that the fact that an ordinance under which a street improvement was made was not signed at the time the contract was made did not invalidate an assessment against property for such improvement.

42. Clarke v. Jennings, (Cal. 1893) 32 Pac. 1049; McDonald v. Dodge, 97 Cal. 112, 31 Pac. 909 (so holding where, under the law authorizing the improvement, a distinction was made between the city council and the mayor, and independent duties and powers were assigned and given to each); State v. Armstrong, 54 Minn. 457, 56 N. W. 97. See Becker v. Henderson, 100 Ky. 450, 38 S. W. 857, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 881.

A report of a committee in favor of laying out a street, when accepted by the council, need not be approved by the mayor. Beaudry v. Valdez, 32 Cal. 269; Taylor v. Palmer, 31 Cal. 240; Wilson v. Simmons, 89 Me. 242, 36 Atl. 380.

43. Kinsella v. Auburn, 4 Silv. Sup. (N. Y.) 101, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 317, holding that the distinction between public and local improvements might be so construed as to embrace within the former those which are charged upon all the taxable property within the municipality, while the fund to pay the expense of the latter is raised by means of local assessments upon the property supposed to be benefited by them.

44. Doty v. Lyman. 166 Mass. 318, 44 N. E. 337, holding that where the mayor retained an order longer than the time prescribed by the general provision of the charter within which he might veto it, such order became effective.

An ordinance authorizing construction of waterworks, which does not direct the giving of notice of an election as required by statute, is void, although the city clerk gave notice and the election was actually held. Thompson v. Sumner, 9 Wash. 310, 37 Pac. 450.

Order.—Under a statute providing that upon compliance with certain prescribed formalities, the council may order the making of an improvement, no particular form of expression is required in the order. Stutsman v. Burlington, 127 Iowa 563, 103 N. W. 800, holding that an order in the language of the resolution of a necessity, saving that it omitted the recitals in regard to the time when the resolution would be considered for passage, etc., was sufficient.

W. 145, holding that where the council accepted a report of the probable cost of a proposed improvement and referred the same to a committee, with instructions to advertise for bids, and authorized the committee to accept one of the bids and enter into a contract, the action was equivalent to an ordinance ordering the improvement.

47. See supra, VI, H, 2.

to ordinances authorizing local improvements.⁴⁸ In determining whether an ordinance is valid on its face, the question of whether or not it has been followed in making the improvement is immaterial.⁴⁹ An ordinance is not invalidated by an unnecessary statement in the preamble.⁵⁰ An ordinance need not indicate the act in the execution of which it was passed;⁵¹ and a special ordinance ordering a particular improvement may incorporate by reference the terms of a general improvement ordinance.⁵² To rescind a resolution closing a street is virtually to adopt a resolution opening it; and to make the rescission effective the same formalities must be observed as would be necessary to open a street in the same locality in the first instance.⁵³

(II) DESCRIPTION OF IMPROVEMENT—(A) In General. A requirement that an ordinance shall specify the nature, character, locality, and description of an improvement is mandatory.⁵⁴ Particularity in this regard may be furnished by reference to plans and specifications upon file,⁵⁵ or reference may be made to some

48. See the cases cited infra, this note.

Variance between title and subject-matter.—There is no inconsistency where the title of an ordinance is for the improvement, curbing and paving of a street, and the section of the ordinance ordering the same relates to the same matter. Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Chicago, 178 Ill. 429, 53 N. E. 361. An ordinance for the grading, macadamizing, and curbing of a street authorizes the laying of sidewalks. In re Beechwood Ave., 194 Pa. St. 86, 45 Atl. 127. There is no variance between the caption of an ordinance "for the improvement, plastering curb walls, resetting curb-stones, constructing a granite concrete combined curb and gutter, grading and paving of the roadway," and an ordinance providing that the curb walls then in place should be plastered on their face for a certain space, and providing also how they should be reset and for the construction of concrete gutter flags of certain dimensions. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Chicago, 207 Ill. 544, 69 N. E. 849.

Statement that improvement is within city.—An ordinance providing for a local improvement need not state that the proposed improvement is within the city limits, since it will be presumed that the city council did not exceed its powers. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Chicago, 169 Ill. 329, 48 N. E. 492; Chytraus v. Chicago, 160 Ill. 18, 43 N. E. 335; Delamater v. Garr, 115 Ky. 334, 73 S. W. 1106, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 2227; Becker v. Washington, 94 Mo. 375, 7 S. W. 291; Reading v. O'Reilly, 169 Pa. St. 366, 32 Atl. 420. See also Galbreath v. Newton, 30 Mo. App. 380.

Further reference.—An ordinance which refers to plans and specifications on file with the city clerk is not invalidated by the fact that one section of such specifications refers to plans and specifications on file in the office of the city engineer. Bradford v. Pontiac, 165 Ill. 612, 46 N. E. 794.

Datum established by ordinance.—If a datum for a city or village has been established by an ordinance, subsequent ordinances providing for public improvements may adopt and refer to such datum as a standard of measurement, without setting forth or reciting the ordinance by which the datum was established. Kunst v. People, 173 Ill. 79, 50 N. E. 168.

Where the ordinance is complete in itself.—Where the ordinance by its own terms fully specifies the nature, character, and locality of the proposed improvement, the fact that it also refers to documents on file in the department of public works does not render it invalid. Cunningham v. Peoria, 157 Ill. 499, 41 N. E. 1014.

specific object or thing.⁵⁶ A substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute is sufficient,⁵⁷ and a minor error of description will not invalidate an ordinance.⁵⁸ The description must be consistent with the improvement named in the title and with the provisions of the ordinance.⁵⁹

(B) Streets and Other Ways—(1) IN GENERAL. The character and amount of work to be done must be specified in an improvement ordinance,⁶⁰ and may not be left to the discretion of a ministerial officer.⁶¹

(2) LOCATION. The description of a street improvement must include first of all specifications of its location;⁶² but the ordinance need not state in terms that the improvement is within the corporation limits.⁶³ A provision for improving a

In case plans and specifications are not filed.—An ordinance is not void by reason of the fact that it directs works to be done in accordance with plans and specifications on file, and there are in fact no such plans and specifications on file, in case the ordinance is sufficient without reference to them. Richardson v. Mehler, 111 Ky. 408, 63 S. W. 957, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 917; Horne v. Mehler, 64 S. W. 918, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1176.

56. Gage v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 107, 74 N. E. 726 (holding that the description of catch-basins as "of the same size and pattern as those used in new work by the city of Chicago during the year 1902" was sufficient); Lanphere v. Chicago, 212 Ill. 440, 72 N. E. 426; Ewart v. Western Springs, 180 Ill. 318, 54 N. E. 478 (holding that a provision that an electric power plant should be located at the "water-works pump house" was sufficiently definite).

57. Wells v. Wood, 114 Cal. 255, 46 Pac. 96 (holding that the description of a street improvement in a resolution of intention in subsequent proceedings as "grading and macadamizing" was sufficient to authorize a regrading and remacadamizing where the street for a part of its width had been graded and macadamized some fifteen years previously); Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Chicago, 215 Ill. 410, 74 N. E. 449.

A resolution of intention to improve a street by a board of supervisors need not describe the work with any more exactness than the law itself does. Harney v. Heller, 47 Cal. 15.

A provision that certain portions of an improvement shall be of "not less than" certain dimensions does not invalidate the ordinance. Latham v. Wilmette, 168 Ill. 153, 48 N. E. 311.

Surplusage.—A faulty description may be rejected as surplusage, if without it the ordinance in itself and by reference to the annexed plan contains a sufficiently definite description. Chytraus v. Chicago, 160 Ill. 18, 43 N. E. 335.

59. Smith v. Chicago, 169 Ill. 257, 48

N. E. 445, holding that where the improvement directed in an ordinance and referred to in the title was "lamp posts" only, the fact that the description included conduits, cables, and switches would not authorize an assessment for such appliances.

60. California.—King v. Lamb, 117 Cal. 401, 49 Pac. 561; Deady v. Townsend, 57 Cal. 298.

Illinois.—Wells v. Chicago, 202 Ill. 448, 66 N. E. 1056; Gage v. Chicago, 196 Ill. 512, 63 N. E. 1031; Ronan v. People, 193 Ill. 631, 61 N. E. 1042; Trimble v. Chicago, 168 Ill. 567, 48 N. E. 416; Kimble v. Peoria, 140 Ill. 157, 29 N. E. 723.

Indiana.—Smith v. Duncan, 77 Ind. 92. But see Taber v. Grafmiller, 109 Ind. 206, 9 N. E. 721, holding that it is not necessary for an ordinance directing the improvement of a street to describe the improvement in detail, but that it is sufficient if it gives a general direction as to the plan of the work.

Texas.—Waco v. Chamberlain, (Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 191.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 812.

Construction of description.—A municipal ordinance authorizing a "widening to be made twenty feet eastwardly from the eastern side of" a street refers to the state of things existing at the date of the ordinance, and not at the date of a prior statute providing for a highway. Hazlehurst v. Baltimore, 37 Md. 199.

Sidewalk crossings.—An ordinance for the construction of sidewalks which requires property crossings for the use of property-owners is not void for failure to designate the location, number, or method of construction of such crossings. People v. Burke, 206 Ill. 358, 69 N. E. 45.

certain street between two streets that intersect it,⁶⁴ or from its terminus to a point named,⁶⁵ is sufficiently definite; and reference may be made to a plat that is on file.⁶⁶ The description may properly make exceptions,⁶⁷ and a resolution may provide for curbing such parts of the streets as are not already curbed;⁶⁸ but if certain portions of a street are to be excepted from the improvement they must be definite.⁶⁹

(3) GRADE. An ordinance to improve a street must provide a grade to which it shall be brought;⁷⁰ this may be done by specification⁷¹ or by reference to an established grade.⁷² And if the reference is so made that the determination of

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 812.

65. Ewart v. Western Springs, 180 Ill. 318, 54 N. E. 478 (holding that where the evidence showed that a continuous street through a village was known as a certain boulevard part of the distance, and also by its street name through the whole distance, an improvement ordinance was not indefinite where it described certain other streets as running to such street instead of to the boulevard); Danville v. McAdams, 153 Ill. 216, 38 N. E. 632; People v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 11 N. Y. App. Div. 280, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 1011 (holding that a resolution laying out a street from a certain point "south to the track of the D., L. & W. Railroad Company, and thence to the south line" of the city meant that the street should extend from the point of beginning across the track to the south line of the city).

66. Stone v. Cambridge, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 270; Boehme v. Monroe, 106 Mich. 401, 64 N. W. 204. See, generally, supra, XIII, B, 8, c, (II), (A).

Uncertainty as to reference.—A resolution directing the opening of a street is fatally defective where it fails to specify according to which of two plans then on file a street is to be laid out, and the defect is not cured by the action of the city clerk in afterward attaching to the resolution a map not before the council at the time, nor by parol evidence of the aldermen as to what map they had in mind. Copcutt v. Yonkers, 83 Hun (N. Y.) 178, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 659.

Variance.—An ordinance to condemn land and open a street may refer to a plat, and if there is a variance between the courses and distances set forth in the ordinance and those in the plat, the latter will govern. Burk v. Baltimore, 77 Md. 469, 26 Atl. 868; Woodruff v. Orange, 32 N. J. L. 49.

67. Cohen v. Alameda, 124 Cal. 504, 57 Pac. 377, holding that in a resolution of intention to open a street, a description clearly defining the boundaries of the land necessary to be taken was sufficient, although excepting therefrom all land held by the city and state as open ways.

68. Edwards v. Berlin, 123 Cal. 544, 56 Pac. 432.

69. Andrews v. Chicago, 57 Ill. 239, holding that where it was not intended to repave such portions of a street as were regarded as already suitably paved such portions must be described.

E. 233; Joyes v. Shadburn, 13 S. W. 361, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 892. See also Job v. People, 193 Ill. 609, 61 N. E. 1079, holding that a street ordinance ordering the construction of a sidewalk to be laid on an even grade, and containing no other specification as to the grade, was sufficient, the words "even grade" having no special and well-established meaning. But see Parker v. New Brunswick, 30 N. J. L. 395 [affirmed in 32 N. J. L. 548], holding that an ordinance providing for the grading and paving of a street was not uncertain because it did not prescribe the grade of such street when it provided in accordance with the charter that the work should be done under the superintendence of the city paver or other person appointed by the common council.

the grade involved is a mere matter of mathematical calculation it is sufficient.⁷³ If the ordinance contains no reference to a prior general ordinance establishing the grade, the same will not be read into it;⁷⁴ but the fact that the ordinance to which reference is made was passed the same day as the improvement ordinance and had not been actually recorded at the time of the latter's passage will not invalidate it.⁷⁵ A provision that the street shall be filled to the "highest grade" is not sufficient.⁷⁶ In reconstructing a sidewalk the grade need not be prescribed, as by necessary inference it is left the same as before.⁷⁷ An ordinance establishing the grade of a street will include the grade of a sidewalk;⁷⁸ and such ordinance must contain a description of the work of bringing the street to grade.⁷⁹ Words of well defined local meaning, such as "filling," may be used in such descriptions;⁸⁰ and where no filling is called for, it will be presumed that none is required to graduate the street.⁸¹

(4) WIDTH. The width of an improvement must be sufficiently defined to be easily ascertained;⁸² but unless expressly required,⁸³ it need not be specified in terms;⁸⁴ nor need the width of the street be stated.⁸⁵ An ordinance providing for paving a street together with the wings of all intersecting streets is not defective in failing to state the width of such wings;⁸⁶ and a provision that curb-

Iowa 50, 75 N. W. 662, holding that an ordinance establishing the grade of two streets intersecting a third cannot be extended to include by implication the intersected street between two intersections.

A line to be drawn between established grades at street intersections is a sufficient designation of a grade. Connecticut Mut L. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, 217 Ill. 352, 75 N. E. 365.

Where no grade has been established, an ordinance requiring an improvement to conform to the established grade is insufficient. Craig v. People, 193 Ill. 199, 61 N. E. 1072.

E. 10, holding that a sidewalk ordinance calling for a fourteen-foot sidewalk was not invalid by reason of the fact that owing to a building being somewhat over the lot line it was not quite fourteen feet from the building to the curb.

An ordinance sufficiently specifies the width of roadways to be paved which declares that such roadways comprise a specified number of feet upon each side of the center line of the streets which are named. McChesney v. Chicago, 201 Ill. 344, 66 N. E. 217.

A requirement that the sidewalk shall be not less than a certain width has been held sufficient. Ramsey v. Field, 115 Mo. App. 620, 92 S. W. 350.

Exclusion.—Where a street railway company is required to keep a portion of the street occupied by its tracks in repair, the council may exclude from the resolution of intention to pave the roadway where not already paved, "that portion required by law to be kept in order by the railroad company having tracks thereon." ing shall be laid along the roadway a stated distance from its center sufficiently defines the width of such roadway.⁸⁷ A provision for improving an alley of a certain width directs the improvement for the whole width of the alley.⁸⁸

(5) CURBING. Description of an improvement, required by charter or statute, includes specifications of the curbing,⁸⁹ as, for example, of its height.⁹⁰ But an ordinance providing for improving existing curbing need not describe the same;⁹¹ and a provision that the top of the curbing shall be on a line with the center of the street sufficiently specifies its height.⁹² If an ordinance provides that curbing be bedded upon flat stones, failure to specify the kind of flat stones will render the description insufficient;⁹³ but the number of flat stones to be used need not be stated,⁹⁴ nor need their quality and dimensions be specified.⁹⁵

(6) LAMP POSTS. An ordinance which requires the erection of lamp-posts should specify the nature of the light for which they are to be adapted,⁹⁶ and should also prescribe the manner in which they are to be located.⁹⁷

(7) MATERIAL. It has been held that, in the absence of express provision, an ordinance determining upon a municipal improvement need not specify the material of which the improvement shall be constructed.⁹⁸ But it is usually required by charter or statute that such specifications be made, and such a provision is mandatory.⁹⁹ It is sufficient to designate the material in general terms,¹ and it is not necessary to state the proportion and quantity of each article that shall be used in the construction of the work.² It has also been held that the description of the material may be in the alternative.³ Reference may be made to specifications that are on file⁴ or to a general ordinance.⁵

(c) Sewers, Drains, and Watercourses. A sewer is of course an improvement within the meaning of an act requiring description of improvements, and an ordinance for the construction of a sewer must adequately describe the same.⁶ Such Missouri.—Verdin v. St. Louis, (1894) 27 S. W. 447; Rich Hill v. Donnan, 82 Mo. App. 386, holding that an ordinance which provided that there should be wooden, stone, or brick sidewalks, and that those constructed of wood should be of two-inch lumber, hard wood, or pine, number one quality, was void for insufficiency, since it did not designate of what kind of material any particular walk was to be constructed.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 812.

Repairs.—Under a charter providing that in constructing or repairing public works the material to be used must be specified with an estimate of the cost, an ordinance specifying the material to be used in paving a street, but not providing for the character of the material to be used in repairing it, was not invalid. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Hezel, 155 Mo. 391, 56 S. W. 449, 48 L. R. A. 285.

Contradictory description.—An ordinance for a sidewalk which in one part directs the sidewalk to be constructed of plank, and in another part directs it to be built of stone with specifications in detail is too uncertain and contradictory to support a special assessment. convenience requires it, this question is it seems jurisdictional and its decision by the council must appear.¹⁶ But where the method of proceeding for the establishment of a parkway is discretionary with the council, the ordinance need not recite that the council deems it best to acquire the land by condemnation.¹⁷

(IV) PROVISIONS AS TO TIME AND MODE OF DOING WORK. The ordinance must contain directions as to the manner of doing the work,¹⁸ but the time within which it shall be done need not be specified;¹⁹ and reference may be made to another ordinance for the manner of doing the work.²⁰

(V) PROVISIONS AS TO CONTRACTS FOR WORK. Any charter or statutory requirements as to the character of the contract must be complied with to render the same valid;²¹ such requirements may not be dispensed with because the expense of the improvement is to be borne by the contractor in consideration of a privilege granted him;²² and under a charter provision requiring the date for receiving bids to be fixed, the date left blank in an ordinance may not be filled in by a ministerial officer.²³ The ordinance may require that samples of paving be submitted,²⁴ and that the same be guaranteed for a period of years.²⁵ If the ordinance does not specify the time for completion of the work, such specification may not be written into the contract by a ministerial officer;²⁶ and a general ordinance restricting the hiring of labor to members of labor unions will not invalidate an improvement ordinance into which it is not incorporated.²⁷ It has been held that an ordinance is not void because it provides for a single contract to improve upon both sides of the street, although it was urged that there could be no proper apportionment of the cost.²⁸

(VI) APPOINTMENT OF COMMISSIONERS OR COMMITTEE. A provision that a committee shall be appointed to execute an improvement is mandatory;²⁹ but the council may appoint one of its standing committees a special committee for this purpose,³⁰ unless the manner of appointment be otherwise provided for.³¹ The committee acts in an executive capacity and must be governed by the ordinance,³² but may exercise discretion as to minor details.³³ The action of a committee need not be in session as an organized body.³⁴

gives an opportunity to abutting owners to make the improvement themselves before it is let by contract.³⁵

(viii) PROVISIONS FOR DEFRAYING EXPENSES AND FOR LEVYING ASSESSMENT. Although it has been held that in the absence of a requirement in the statute the ordinance or resolution need not state how the improvement shall be paid for,³⁶ it would seem that property-owners affected must be advised of the manner in which the expense of an improvement will be defrayed and what portion of it is to be paid for by special assessment;³⁷ hence an ordinance for an improvement must prescribe whether it is to be paid for by general or special tax;³⁸ but reference to an act under which the city is proceeding and in which the manner of defraying expenses is provided is sufficient;³⁹ and when the manner of paying for an improvement is specified in an ordinance, it need not be repeated in a resolution passed in pursuance thereof.⁴⁰ If the franchise of a street railway requires it to keep the space between its tracks paved, provision need not be made for an assessment for paving such part of the street;⁴¹ and where an ordinance for improving "streets and alleys" provided only for an assessment on property abutting on said "streets," an assessment for paving the streets alone could be levied.⁴² A provision that the cost shall be paid by special assessment is sufficiently definite;⁴³ and where the territory is not divided into squares, the ordinance may prescribe the depth on either side of the improvement to be assessed.⁴⁴ The ordinance need not show on its face that the improvement will benefit the property to be assessed,⁴⁵ or that the benefit of an improvement will equal the

Commingleing of systems.—Ordinances for the construction of a sidewalk on a street for a number of blocks, which specifies that the walk for the length of one block may be built by special assessment, while the rest is to be done by taxation, are not void as requiring the construction of the walk partly by each system of payment, as there is no commingleing of systems as to any part of the walk. *Ronan v. cost.⁴⁶ Mere irregularities that do not essentially affect the proceedings will not invalidate the same.⁴⁷ When the act provides the manner in which assessments shall be made, it is not necessary that a resolution of intention to make an improvement should state the manner of assessment.⁴⁸ Reference to a plat on file complies with a requirement that the council designate the lots to be assessed.⁴⁹ If the statute requires the estimate of cost to be made a part of the record, reference to such estimate is not sufficient.⁵⁰

(ix) PROVISIONS FOR DAMAGES. Unless required by charter or statute,⁵¹ an ordinance for improving a street need not provide for assessment of damages.⁵²

d. Records and Minutes. Proceedings of the council in making improvements are usually required to be entered upon its records,⁵³ and all jurisdictional requirements must appear therein.⁵⁴ But when a resolution to make an improvement is not required by charter or statute to be recorded, failure to record it will not invalidate proceedings.⁵⁵ An ordinance need not be spread in full upon the journal;⁵⁶ and a defective record may be amended.⁵⁷

e. Publication. A charter or statutory provision that an ordinance, declaring the necessity of an improvement or ordering the same made, shall be published is mandatory.⁵⁸ It has been held, however, that the failure to give a required notice

Engineer's estimate.—A requirement that the estimate of the city engineer as to the cost of the improvement shall be incorporated in the record of the first resolution for the improvement is sufficiently complied with, although the preamble to the estimate and the engineer's signature are omitted therefrom (Lanphere v. Chicago, 212 Ill. 440, 72 N. E. 426), and although two motions are previously adopted by the board of public works resolving to make the improvement and calling upon the engineer to make and report an estimate (*Heiple v. of the passage of an ordinance does not invalidate an assessment for the cost of the improvement, but simply renders the assessment non-conclusive.⁵⁹ An ordinance duly passed and published is constructive notice of a proposed improvement;⁶⁰ and to constitute such notice the ordinance need not be published verbatim.⁶¹ In case the parties interested have already been brought before the board of public works, an order to construct a sidewalk need not be served on the owner, but it is sufficient if such order be entered upon the record.⁶² A certificate by the city clerk, under the corporate seal of the city, stating that ordinances were passed and approved on a certain date and published in a specified paper in a specified city on a certain date, is sufficient proof of publication.⁶³

f. Construction as to Improvements Authorized. The question of what improvements are authorized under an ordinance frequently becomes one of construction⁶⁴ to which the rules governing the construction of ordinances in general may be applied.⁶⁵ An ordinance providing for a street improvement prevails over a previous ordinance in conflict therewith.⁶⁶ An improvement must conform to the description in the ordinance,⁶⁷ and a part only of the improvement ordered alter streets at its own expense for the relocation of its tracks.

Oregon.—Grafton v. Sellwood, 24 Oreg. 118, 32 Pac. 1026, holding that where an ordinance could not take effect until five days after its publication a contract executed before the expiration of the five days was void.

Pennsylvania.—Allegheny's Petition, 8 Pa. Super. Ct. 104, 43 Wkly. Notes Cas. 223.

A resolution or order relating to an improvement need not be published when the requirements of publication relate only to ordinances. Napa City v. Easterby, 76 Cal. 222, 18 Pac. 253.

If the council be required to designate the papers in which publication shall be had, their failure to do so invalidates proceedings. In re Burmeister, 76 N. Y. 174, 56 How. Pr. 416 [reversing 9 Hun 613]; In re Phillips, 60 N. Y. 16; In re Smith, 52 N. Y. 526 [reversing 65 Barb. 283].

Sufficiency of publication.—The publication of a resolution of intention or ordinance is sufficient if made under the statute providing for the improvement, without regard to the provision of the city charter as to the publication of other ordinances. Hellman v. Shoulters, 114 Cal. 136, 44 Pac. 915, 45 Pac. 1057. Where the statute does not require that an ordinance shall be published in full, it is sufficient that a resolution distinctly specifying the improvement and stating that an ordinance therefor was adopted be published. Haven v. New York, 67 N. Y. App. Div. 90, 73 N. Y. Suppl. 678 [affirmed in 173 N. Y. 611, 66 N. E. 1110]. The publication of a resolution is not invalidated by the fact that from a clerical error it fails to contain the estimated cost of the improvement, where such cost could be ascertained by persons interested by an examination of the estimates on file. North Yakima v. Scudder, 41 Wash. 15, 82 Pac. 1022. A provision that publication be made for five days exclusive of Sundays is not complied with by five publications if the last is had on Sunday. People v. McCain, 50 Cal. 210. A single publication of a resolution two days before its adoption complies with a provision which prohibits the passage of such resolutions until they have been published at least two days. In re Bassford, 50 N. Y. 509.

Time of posting.—Under a statute providing that a resolution of intention shall be posted and published for a period of two days, and that thereupon the street superintendent shall post a more particular notice along the line of the contemplated improvement, it is sufficient if the latter notice be posted within a reasonable time, "thereupon" not being used in the sense of "immediately thereafter." *Porphyry Paving Co. v. 64. See Somerville v. Middlesex, 122 Mass. 292, holding that an order of the city council directing a committee to remove all fences and structures encroaching upon the limits of a certain street, as shown by a certain plan, was not an order for laying out or widening a street.

may not be lawfully made.⁶⁸ In the construction of particular ordinances and orders it has been held that an order to improve a street does not include sidewalks,⁶⁹ but does authorize the laying of gutters,⁷⁰ and setting of curbs,⁷¹ or curbing and guttering⁷² and the adjustment of sewers;⁷³ and that placing of catch-basins may be considered a necessary part of a street improvement;⁷⁴ but that authority to pave a street that approaches a public square does not authorize paving the square,⁷⁵ although it will apply to short semicircular arms extending out from the street.⁷⁶ An ordinance providing for paving a street from one intersecting street to another does not necessarily mean from the nearest lines of such intersecting streets.⁷⁷

g. Variance Between Notice or Petition and Ordinance or Order. When a street is opened or improved on petition and notice, the extent of the opening or the character of the improvement must substantially comply with the terms of such petition or notice;⁷⁸ nor may substantial variance from the resolution of intention be made in the final ordinance.⁷⁹ A slight variance from the petition or notice will not invalidate the ordinance;⁸⁰ thus, where the notice calls for the covering of crushed rock, the ordinance may substitute gravel.⁸¹ The terms "grading and paving" as used in the petition include the incidental details of the work which may be provided for in the ordinance.⁸²

36 Pac. 585. That a recommendation and estimate describe only a "cement sidewalk" does not render invalid an ordinance based thereon, providing for a cinder, cement, concrete, torpedo sand, and limestone walk. Storrs v. Chicago, 208 Ill. 364, 70 N. E. 347.

Reduction of improvement.—Where the ordinance which constitutes the contract between the city and the contractor reduces the extent of the improvement and the work to be done materially, as compared with the preliminary resolution and the notice, the contract is vitiated and the tax bills issued thereon are void. Trenton v. Collier, 68 Mo. App. 483.

State*, 30 N. J. L. 521, holding that a notice of intention to pave a street refers to the street as it is de jure, and it is no objection that the ordinance ordering the improvement differs from such notice by giving the legal width of the street.

Where petitioner is benefited.—An abutter who joins in a petition to change the grade of the street is not injuriously affected, or in any way aggrieved, or deprived of any constitutional right, because the order for the change of grade included a larger district than that contemplated by the petition, it appearing that his burdens were lightened, in that the order as changed compelled others to share in the expense, if any, incident to the change. *O'Dea v. h. Illegality of Part of Ordinance.⁸³ The fact that an improvement ordinance is void in part does not necessarily invalidate the whole ordinance.⁸⁴ Hence in particular cases it has been held that an erroneous assessment;⁸⁵ a mandatory clause;⁸⁶ or a commingling of two improvements, one of which cannot be ordered,⁸⁷ will not vitiate the ordinance; but where an ordinance provides for paving two streets as one improvement, failure of abutting owners on one of the streets to petition for the improvement as required by statute will invalidate the whole ordinance.⁸⁸

9. RECONSIDERATION, AMENDMENT, OR REPEAL OF ORDINANCE, AND DISCONTINUANCE OF PROCEEDINGS⁸⁹ — a. Reconsideration. A negative vote upon an improvement ordinance may be reconsidered,⁹⁰ and upon such reconsideration it may be passed without a rehearing of interested property-owners.⁹¹ The action of a board of public works in recommending that action upon an improvement be deferred does not amount to an abrogation of its prior action, in fixing a grade upon which the improvement shall be based.⁹²

b. Amendment of Ordinance, Resolution, or Order.⁹³ A defective ordinance may be validated by amendment.⁹⁴ Where an estimate of cost is required, an ordinance cannot be amended so as to increase the extent of an improvement unless a further estimate is had;⁹⁵ and after the completion of an improvement the method of assessment cannot be changed.⁹⁶ Several special ordinances, based on petitions, for grading parts of a street may be superseded by one general ordinance;⁹⁷ and the passage of an amendment decreasing the extent of an improvement will not of itself abrogate a contract for the improvement as originally ordered.⁹⁸ An amendment extending the length of a street to be paved is not to be regarded as changing the original purpose of the ordinance as within a statutory prohibition.⁹⁹ Where the council has amended an ordinance as submitted by a board of local improvements, such board may adopt it as amended and recommend its passage without the preparation of a new ordinance.¹

c. Repeal of Ordinance, Resolution, or Order.² An ordinance providing for the construction of an improvement may be repealed expressly³ or by necessary implication,⁴ regard being had to vested rights acquired under it.⁵ If an ordinance to abandon proceedings for opening a street provides that it shall not apply to any part of the proposed street of which possession has been taken, the original ordinance will remain in full force so far as such parts of the street are concerned;⁶ and an ordinance for paving a street and its intersections may be repealed so far as it relates to intersections, without affecting the rest of the ordinance.⁷

d. Additional Notice or Publication. Under an act requiring notice of intention to make an improvement, a substantial change in the character of the work may not be ordered except upon due notice.⁸

e. Discontinuance of Proceedings or Abandonment of Improvement. Proceedings to make improvements may be abandoned by the municipality;⁹ but proceedings before a court to open a street may not be discontinued after confirmation of the estimate and assessment.¹⁰ An ordinance directing abutting owners to make improvements is not abrogated by declarations of individual members of a committee that the improvement need not be made.¹¹ Where the council ordered a pavement to be laid by lot owners within a specified time, or the same to be let by contract, its failure to proceed upon the expiration of the time did not waive the right to do so thereafter.¹² Upon a motion for leave to discontinue street opening proceedings, affidavits showing the impolicy and injustice of granting the motion have been held inadmissible.¹³ Where the city council has directed an attorney to ask leave for the city to withdraw from the condemnation proceedings, the city is not bound by such direction until the application has been granted by the court.¹⁴ directing the preparation of such plans and specifications is mandatory;¹⁵ but where a statute merely provides that an estimate shall be furnished if required, the failure to furnish such an estimate does not invalidate such an assessment unless it is shown that it has been required.¹⁶ A provision in an ordinance that plans shall be prepared has been held to be directory;¹⁷ and if the ordinance itself contains detailed descriptions, failure to prepare and file plans will not invalidate an assessment.¹⁸ Under the provisions of some charters the council may accept plans upon which the board of public works has failed to report for a specified time after the reference of such plans to them.¹⁹ The plans must be sufficiently specific to permit intelligent bidding.²⁰ If deposited at the proper office they need not be marked "filed."²¹ An adoption of plans on file has been held equivalent to a prior direction to the proper officer to prepare such plans.²² And a resolution to make an improvement according to plans to be prepared by the Immediate preparation.—A requirement of an ordinance that the city engineer shall file immediately full specifications is substantially complied with, where the preparation and filing of the specifications is done as soon as practicable. Galveston v. Heard, 54 Tex. 420.

Definiteness.—Specifications are sufficiently definite where the officer in charge of the work, although empowered to decide whether the contract has been performed, and decide as to minor details, cannot require more or accept less than the specifications require. Banaz v. Smith, 133 Cal. 102, 65 Pac. 309.

Sufficiency of description of material.—A clause requiring bids to be accompanied by special blocks of granite from a certain quarry is not inconsistent with another clause stating that the blocks required must be equal in quality to a certain granite named. Cincinnati v. Folz, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 665, 16 Cinc. L. Bul. 211.

Plans in alternative.—The fact that plans for an improvement are in the alternative has been held immaterial in the absence of proof that any one was misled or prevented from bidding, or that the cost of the work done was enhanced thereby. Gilmore v. Utica, 131 N. Y. 26, 29 N. E. 841 [affirming 15 N. Y. Suppl. 274].

Requirement of bond.—A clause attached to plans and specifications, requiring a bond from the contractor, is not regarded as a part of the plan or specification. Cole v. People, 161 Ill. 16, 43 N. E. 607.

Evidence of authenticity.—Where the statute does not specify the mode in which plans and specifications shall be prepared, the fact that they are prepared by the engineer and are on file and approved by the city council is sufficient evidence of their authenticity. *Gill v. Must require competition.—Plans and specifications must be of sufficient definiteness to require competition on other material items, and must state the quantity of work required as definitely as practicable. Gage v. New York, 110 N. Y. App. Div. 403, 97 N. Y. Suppl. 157.

engineer is not invalid because passed before the plans are prepared and filed.²³ Specifications appended to a contract are controlled by specifications upon file, where such specifications are referred to in the advertisement for bids.²⁴

b. Change of Plans. At any time prior to its execution, a plan for improvement may be changed by the council.²⁵ But it has been held that where an ordinance states that the right is reserved in the commissioner of public works to change plans and specifications, the ordinance does not sufficiently describe the proposed improvement.²⁶

c. Estimates of Cost of Work. A charter or statutory provision that an estimate of the cost of an improvement shall be made is mandatory,²⁷ and such estimate becomes a condition precedent to the letting of a contract²⁸ or a levy of assessment;²⁹ but not necessarily to the passage of an ordinance.³⁰ The character of such estimate must be in compliance with the legislative enactment;³¹ and must be made by the designated officer.³²

11. DEFECTS AND OBJECTIONS — a. In General. A general objection to the sufficiency of an ordinance ordering an improvement is sufficient where the city fails to require the objections to be definitely stated.³³ Upon objection to the award of a contract under an ordinance, upon the ground that the ordinance was irregularly passed, it will, in the absence of proof, be presumed that the proceedings were regular and valid.³⁴

b. Persons Who May Question Validity of Proceedings. Objection to irregularities in proceedings may be made only by persons whose property will be affected directly by the improvement.³⁵ Hence a person whose property is not damaged or assessed may not enter objection.³⁶ Irregularity of notice to one person may not be complained of by another.³⁷

c. Waiver of Objections. Objections must be made at the time and in the manner required by law.³⁸ After the completion of an improvement it is usually regarded as too late to raise objection to irregularities in the proceedings.³⁹ If a person acts upon an insufficient notice he waives objection to its insufficiency.⁴⁰ A defect in a notice, however, cannot be waived as to the others by a portion of the persons affected.⁴¹ Property-owners by appearing and filing objections to an improvement do not waive the question of jurisdiction;⁴² nor do they prejudice their rights by neglecting to have an illegal ordinance set aside until after an assessment has been made under it;⁴³ and acquiescence in an illegal ordinance does not render it valid.⁴⁴ Where the proceedings must be in pursuance of the requirements of a statutory enactment, the act of the city, even to the extent of accepting payments of special assessments, will not cure substantial defects.⁴⁵

d. Estoppel to Attack Proceedings. The doctrine of estoppel is frequently invoked to save invalid improvement proceedings,⁴⁶ and a property-owner who stands by and permits an improvement to be made is usually held to be estopped from attacking the proceedings,⁴⁷ although it has been held that an estoppel will not arise when the proceedings are without jurisdiction ab initio.⁴⁸ So also one who aids in the passage of an improvement ordinance is estopped from objecting to technical irregularities,⁴⁹ but a person does not waive his right to object to irregularities by joining in a petition for an improvement.⁵⁰ The appearance of a person to protest against the improvement of a certain street will not estop him to dispute the validity of the improvement of another street which was not embraced in the proceedings remonstrated against, although attempted to be embraced therein.⁵¹

12. CURING DEFECTS OR IRREGULARITIES — a. In General. A jurisdictional defect in the proceedings cannot be cured by subsequent action with relation to matters in which such defect is not necessarily a question involved.⁵² An improvement which has been authorized by a valid ordinance, but not yet constructed, cannot be regarded as an existing improvement for the purpose of validating an ordinance, the right to enact which is dependent upon such an existence.⁵³

b. Curative Statutes. The legislature by subsequent enactment may legalize defective improvement proceedings;⁵⁴ but the defect or want of compliance with the law must relate to a requirement that might have been dispensed with in the first instance;⁵⁵ hence a failure to give notice to property-owners is a defect that cannot be cured.⁵⁶ An amendment to a charter providing that all ordinances theretofore made should remain in force will not invalidate an ordinance which is void because unauthorized.⁵⁷

c. Ordinances and Resolutions. An improvement proceeding, invalid because of failure to comply with legislative requirements, cannot be validated by the passage of a subsequent ordinance;⁵⁸ but unauthorized acts of ministerial officers abused as to render the order or ordinance for an improvement void for unreasonableness.⁶⁵

b. Appeal. Appeal from an ordinance ordering an improvement may not be had unless expressly allowed by charter or statute;⁶⁶ and if the right be given in general terms, the only question that can be raised is the jurisdiction of the council and the regularity of its proceedings.⁶⁷ The appeal may be taken only from a final order,⁶⁸ by the parties designated in the statute;⁶⁹ and when decision by a particular court is made final and conclusive, further appeal under general statute may not be had.⁷⁰ The procedure is, unless otherwise provided by statute, governed by the usual rules of appellate practice.⁷¹

71. See, generally, APPEAL AND ERROR.

Presumptions.—Where a property owner on appeal from establishment of a highway waived all objections except as to damages, and the city refused to accept appellant's admission that the highway was necessary, the city could not disaffirm its record and it will be presumed that the highway was necessary. Bosworth v. Providence, 17 R. I. 58, 20 Atl. 97. Although an ordinance for a sidewalk cannot be passed by a city in the absence of an estimate of cost, it will be presumed that such estimate was furnished where it appeared that it was filed with the clerk of the board of aldermen. Marshall v. Rainey, 78 Mo. App. 416.

Demurrer.—Under a statute providing that on appeal from proceedings of the city council the transcript shall be considered as the complaint to which appellant must in the form of answer or demurrer state the grounds of his objection, a demurrer on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction to try the cause did not sufficiently indicate wherein the council acted without jurisdiction. Powell v. Greensburg, 150 Ind. 148, 49 N. E. 955. See also Hays v. Vincennes, 82 Ind. 178.

Notice of appeal.—In proceedings for opening streets a city which seeks to acquire title to land and make assessments thereon is the adverse party in respect of all persons affected by the proceedings, and the several persons whose property is taken or assessed are not in a legal sense adverse parties to each other; hence service of notice of appeal on the clerk of court and the corporation counsel is sufficient. In re Kingsbridge Road, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 599.

Saving questions for review.—The qualifications of petitioners will not be considered, in the absence of a specific exception to such qualifications, in the trial court. In re Swanson St., 163 Pa. St. 323, 30 Atl. 207. An objection to the confirmation of a report to a jury of view in a proceeding to open streets which, if it had been presented in the original court, would have avoided the entire proceedings, will not be considered as an assignment of error by the appellate court. In re Troubat Ave., 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 27, 44 Wkly. Notes Cas. 53.

Records.—If the statute does not make it the duty of the common council to furnish a return of the papers on the appeal, the general rule requires the appellant to fur-

c. Certiorari. Certiorari may be employed to determine questions of jurisdiction⁷³ and validity of improvement proceedings.⁷³ If a petition or notice be required by charter or statute and the same is not had, proceedings may be set aside on certiorari;⁷⁴ but if authority to pass upon the sufficiency of a petition be vested in the council, its decision will be held conclusive.⁷⁵ The writ must be sued out within a reasonable time;⁷⁶ and it has been held that it cannot be brought after the completion of an improvement.⁷⁷ An act requiring certiorari to be brought before the letting of a contract is valid;⁷⁸ but under such an act certiorari will be allowed after the letting of a contract when the application shows prima facie that a sufficient remonstrance has been filed, since, if such remonstrance was in fact made, the city was without power to enter into a contract.⁷⁹ Certiorari may be sued out against a municipal board or official exercising judicial functions where no appeal will lie;⁸⁰ but the proceedings of an improvement commission may not be reviewed by certiorari before the assessment of a tax.⁸¹ A defect in the record, which is amendable, has been held no ground for certiorari.⁸² A county board which has graded a road entering into a city, in conformity with the established grade of a street of the city, has such an interest as will entitle it to maintain certiorari to test the validity of an ordinance of the city changing the grade of the street.⁸³ Where, under the statute, the judges of the supreme court act as commissioners in highway proceedings, certiorari should issue to them and not to the municipal corporation.⁸⁴

14. COMPELLING IMPROVEMENTS. Where the duty to construet a public improvement or to perform any specific act with relation to such construction is clear and mandatory, it may be enforced by mandamus; but the remedy by mandamus is not available to control a discretion vested in municipal officers except so far as to compel its exercise.⁸⁵

15. RESTRAINING MAKING OF IMPROVEMENTS, AND ALTERATION OR VACATION OF STREETS — a. In General.⁸⁶ Injunction may be invoked to prevent abuse of municipal power or the exercise of it in an unreasonable manner to the irreparable injury of property.⁸⁷ Property-owners may restrain an improvement if the proceedings for making the same are invalid;⁸⁸ so it has been held in particular cases that a municipality may be enjoined from discharging a sewer on private land;⁸⁹ from laying out a toll bridge as a highway;⁹⁰ from permanently obstructing access to a lot;⁹¹ and, in the absence of express statutory authority, from extending a street through railway yards if it will render them useless.⁹² But the city may not be enjoined from properly exercising its functions because of incidental inconvenience to property-owners;⁹³ or because of damage to property where there is adequate remedy at law.⁹⁴ Hence a property-owner may not

But compare Sperry v. Albina, 17 Oreg. 481, 21 Pac. 453, holding that proceedings for the improvement of a street upon which a lot abuts cannot be enjoined upon apprehension that there will be an attempt to charge a part of the expense of the improvement on the lot, but that such suit can be maintained only where there has been an attempt under the proceedings to sell the lot, or the proceedings are of such character that they will necessarily cast a cloud upon the title of the lot owner.

Mere possession in the absence of proof of ownership is insufficient. Gleason v. Jefferson, 78 Ill. 399.

Interest in old material.—The fact that owners of property bordering upon a street which is about to be repaved have paid an assessment to defray the cost of an original pavement does not give them such an interest in the material of the old pavement as will entitle them to restrain the city from removing such material. *Burkhardt v. enjoin the city from placing a grating at the opening of a drain, on the ground that the accumulation of leaves at such grating causes an overflow on his land;⁹⁵ an improvement may not be restrained on the ground of inexpediency or inutilty;⁹⁶ or because the contract varies in minor details from the specifications originally adopted;⁹⁷ or because of unreasonable delay in completing it;⁹⁸ or because the work is being defectively done.⁹⁹ Where work has been practically completed, an improvement will not be enjoined on the ground of invalidity of the contract unless the city has acted ultra vires.¹ A municipality may invoke injunction to restrain a property-owner from constructing a sidewalk according to specifications different from those provided in an ordinance.²

b. Defects in, and Objection to, Preliminary Proceedings. Injunction will not lie to prevent the making of an improvement on the ground of mere irregularity of proceedings;³ especially if the rights of the party can be otherwise protected,⁴ or in the advance of the levy of a tax or assessment.⁵ If the proceedings are fatally defective, the improvement may be restrained;⁶ and injunction is the proper remedy to restrain a municipality from opening a street through private land without first condemning it pursuant to law.⁷

c. Restraining Vacation. The power to vacate streets may be exercised at the discretion of a municipality, and will not be restrained in the absence of a manifest abuse of discretion;⁸ and a wrongful vacation may be restrained only at the instance of a property-owner who will suffer an injury distinct from that which results to the public.⁹ The fact that the vacation of a street, under a pending ordinance, will damage a property-owner does not entitle him to an injunction restraining the passage of the ordinance.¹⁰

d. Restraining Alteration of Width or Grade of Streets. In the absence of gross abuse of discretion, a municipality may not be restrained from exercising its power to alter the width or grade of streets;¹¹ but a property-owner injured is usually left to his remedy at law;¹² and when injunction does lie, it will be issued only at the instance of one who will suffer irreparable damage.¹³ In any event a property-owner cannot maintain an injunction against the invasion of a right which he holds in common with other residents of the street and the public.¹⁴

specifically alleged.¹⁹ It has been held that where the allegations of the complaint are denied by a verified answer which shows compliance with the statute authorizing the proceedings, a temporary injunction should be dissolved.²⁰ The rules as to admissibility of evidence, applicable to injunction proceedings generally, apply to proceedings for an injunction against a public improvement.²¹

16. CONCLUSIVENESS AND COLLATERAL ATTACK—a. In General. If the municipality in making improvements fails to follow the provisions of its charter or the statute under which it acts, the defect is jurisdictional, and the proceedings are void and subject to collateral attack;²² but mere irregularities cannot be questioned collaterally,²³ especially if the record shows compliance with legislative requirements;²⁴ and in the absence of proof to the contrary municipal authorities will be presumed to have complied with the law;²⁵ nor is the question of the necessity of an improvement open to review for attack collaterally except for fraud.²⁶ In a proceeding to levy a special tax, a property-owner may question the validity of the ordinance upon which it is based only when application is made for judgment of sale against his property.²⁷ A judgment of condemnation in street opening proceedings is conclusive as to the previous dedication of the property as a highway.²⁸

b. Sufficiency of Petition or Assent of Property-Owners. If the municipal authorities are empowered, either expressly or by fair implication, to determine whether the requisite number of property-owners have assented to an improvement, their action in ordering the improvement is a conclusive determination of that question;²⁹ but where this power is not conferred, the courts may inquire whether the requisite number have so assented.³⁰

c. Notice of Proceedings. Regularity of notice will be presumed in the absence of proof to the contrary;³¹ and irregularity of notice does not open proceedings to collateral attack.³² A provision in a city charter that the finding of the council by ordinance that any improvement provided for was ordered after notice duly given shall be conclusive is not invalid as infringing upon the rights of property-owners.³³

C. Contracts — 1. IN GENERAL — a. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions. The method in which the municipality shall enter into a contract for a public improvement, and the elements essential to the validity of such contract, are usually expressly defined by statute or charter provisions.³⁴ Different statutes relating to this subject-matter will be construed together unless repugnant.³⁵

in general terms, carries with it implied authority to make contracts therefor.³⁶ The authority to make such contracts is usually regarded as vested in the council;³⁷ and to be exercised either by ordinance or resolution.³⁸ Authority to make improvements and to bind the city by contract therefor is sometimes vested by charter or statute in a particular municipal board;³⁹ and unless so provided, such contracts do not require the approval of the council.⁴⁰ The power of such a board to bind the city depends on express grant;⁴¹ and a person dealing with it is bound to take notice of the limits of its authority.⁴² The council unless restricted by statute may empower a board or committee to make a contract, and within the scope of its authority, the action of such board or committee will bind the city.⁴³ Any charter or statutory limitation upon the power to contract is mandatory;⁴⁴ but if a department of a city forms an independent governmental agency it is not subject to provisions of the charter.⁴⁵ Any direction in an improvement ordinance as to the execution of a contract must be complied with.⁴⁶

c. Necessity For Special Contract. It is sometimes provided by ordinance or statute that all public work shall be done by contract.⁴⁷ And where an exception to such a provision is extended in those cases where work is necessary to be done to complete or perfect the particular job, it cannot be construed to include work of a general character not necessary to the completion of work which is partly finished.⁴⁸

d. Implied Contracts. It is usually regarded as necessary that a contract for a local improvement be express.⁴⁹ And a municipality will not be bound by implied contract to pay for an improvement voluntarily made.⁵⁰

e. Necessity For Submission to Competition in General. A provision in a charter, statute, or ordinance requiring a contract to be let by competitive bidding is mandatory,⁵¹ and unless complied with, the contract is void.⁵² In the

But see Fitzgerald v. Walker, 55 Ark. 148, 17 S. W. 702, holding that under a statute providing that boards of improvement might advertise for proposals for doing any work by contract, and might accept or reject any proposals, it was not mandatory that proposals be advertised for.

Where nature of improvement is fixed by petition.—Under a statute giving the property-owners the right to petition for a particular kind of pavement, and prohibiting the board from using any other kind of material unless specifically directed by ordinance, the effect of another statute requiring the board to let the contract to the lowest bidder is not nullified. Monaghan v. Indianapolis, 37 Ind. App. 280, 76 N. E. 424.

Exceptions.—A requirement that public work shall be let to the lowest bidder does not apply to a contract for supervision of the construction of a public improvement (Houston v. Potter, (Tex. Civ. App. 1906) 91 S. W. 389), nor to the employment of an architect to prepare plans for a public building (Houston v. Glover, (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 89 S. W. 425).

Fixing a minimum price to be paid for labor, and awarding a contract on the basis of such specification, is a violation of a provision requiring the letting of the work to the lowest responsible bidder. Frame v. Felix, 167 Pa. St. 47, 31 Atl. 375, 27 L. R. A. 802.

A reservation of the general power to change materials and work in a contract has been held to render it violative of a requirement that work be let by contract to the lowest bidder. Gage v. New York, 110 N. Y. App. Div. 403, 97 N. Y. Suppl. 157.

absence of such provision bids need not be called for;⁵³ and the requirement is to be strictly construed and not extended beyond its clear implication;⁵⁴ hence a provision that "street work" be done by competitive contract has been held not to apply to a contract for lighting streets⁵⁵ or improving parks;⁵⁶ but it will apply to unfinished work abandoned by a contractor.⁵⁷ The term "work" used in this connection includes buildings and bridges,⁵⁸ and repairs or cleaning of streets.⁵⁹ Where bidding may be dispensed with by approval of the mayor, such approval comes too late if given after the contract is let.⁶⁰

f. Provisions For Monopolized or Patented Articles or Materials. Under a provision that the contract be let to the lowest responsible bidder, it has frequently been held that the city, in its specifications, may not prevent competition by restricting the use of material to that manufactured by a particular firm.⁶¹

Other cases, however, modify the doctrine, and hold that the city may, in good faith, avail itself of superior material notwithstanding such material is the product of exclusive manufacture.⁶² It has been held also that the city may restrict the kind of material to be used to a patented article "or material of equal quality";⁶³ and that the specification of a patented article is not objectionable unless it results in stifling competition.⁶⁴

2. PROPOSALS OR BIDS—a. Request or Advertisement For Proposals or Bids—

(1) IN GENERAL. A provision requiring notice of an improvement and advertisement for bids is mandatory;⁶⁵ and unless bids be called for in substantial compliance with the terms of such provision, the contract is void.⁶⁶ Any requirement as to the time and manner of publication must be complied with;⁶⁷ and in the absence of such requirement reasonable notice and publication must be had.⁶⁸ A

Effect of petition.—The council may be enjoined from making a contract for paving streets with a specified material which is the subject of a monopoly, although two thirds of the abutting property-owners petition for the use of such material, and the city charter in such case provides that the council has no power to contract for a different kind of pavement. Boon v. Utica, 5 Misc. (N. Y.) 391, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 932.

Provision for payment of royalty.—A provision in a charter that a contract may be made with the patentee to use a patent or patented article, process, combination, or work for the city at a stipulated sum or royalty for the use thereof, contemplates the acquisition of a right to operate under a patent for a royalty and then letting the actual work to the lowest bidder, and is not complied with by a contract with the patentee of a street pavement that an amount nearly equal to two thirds of the whole cost of the paving shall go to the patentee, and for which price the patentee agrees to supply other material and do part of the work in making the improvement. *Allen v. Number of newspapers.—Although the ordinance provides that publication shall be made in two newspapers, publication in one newspaper, in conformity with the statutory provision on the subject, is sufficient. Connersville v. Merrill, 14 Ind. App. 303, 42 N. E. 1112. But where the ordinance contains the entire provision for publication, a publication in two newspapers, instead of three as required by the ordinance, is insufficient. Baltimore v. Johnson, 62 Md. 225.

Bulletin boards in the court-house and city hall, and at the corner of two public streets, are public places within the meaning of a charter requiring notices to be posted in public places. Roach v. Eugene, 23 Oreg. 376, 31 Pac. 825.

Proof of publication.—In the absence of evidence that a notice was not published the requisite number of days, the sufficiency of publication will be presumed. Arnold v. Ft. Dodge, 111 Iowa 152, 82 N. W. 495. The introduction of a copy of a newspaper purporting to have been published on one of the days specified in the publisher's affidavit is insufficient to overcome the prima facie proof of the publication, where it is not shown whence the paper was procured or that it was a copy of the regular edition. Ross v. Gates, 117 Mo. App. 237, 93 S. W. 856; Ross v. Oglebay, 117 Mo. App. 236, 93 S. W. 859.

Weakley, 86 Mo. 451; Tift v. Buffalo, 25 N. Y. App. Div. 376, 49 N. Y. Suppl. 489 [affirmed in 164 N. Y. 605, 58 N. E. 1093]; Bigler v. New York, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 51; Kneeland v. Furlong, 20 Wis. 437.

Trifling omission.—The omission of a specification of the number and size of manholes from an advertisement for proposals for a sewer contract is not fatal where the expense is so trifling, as compared with that of the whole work, that the omission will not affect the bids. Houghton v. Burnham, 22 Wis. 301.

Where it is impossible to determine accurately the exact amount of work or materials which will be required, the bids may be required to be either for the entire work at a lump sum or for a specified price based upon estimated quantities, by which the contractor agrees to do all the work for separate prices bid by him per unit of measurement. Walter v. McClellan, 113 N. Y. App. Div. 295, 99 N. Y. Suppl. 78.

Alternative bids.—The advertisement may call for bids on different kinds of pavement. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Garr, 115 Ky. 334, 73 S. W. 1106, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 2227; Detroit v. Wayne County Cir. Judge, 79 Mich. 384, 44 N. W. 622; Atty.-Gen. v. Detroit, 26 Mich. 263.

Necessity and sufficiency of specifications see supra, XIII, B, 10, a.

Specifications must be filed a reasonable time before the bids are to be received so as to secure free competition among bidders. Smith v. Syracuse, 17 N. Y. App. Div. 63, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 852.

75. Case v. Fowler, 65 Ind. 29; Cass Farm Co. v. Detroit, 124 Mich. 433, 83 N. W. 108.

Authority to fix time.—A notice is not invalid because the clerk, not the council, fixed the time for presenting proposals. Belser v. Allman, 134 Cal. 399, 66 Pac. 492.

Conformity with resolution or ordinance.—Where the resolution provided that bids for work would be received up to six o'clock October 30, and ordered the clerk to give

ment of the time within which the work must be completed is sometimes expressly required,⁷⁶ as is also the estimate of cost.⁷⁷ But the price to be paid for specified kinds of work may not be fixed,⁷⁸ although the city authorities may advise contractors that bids in excess of a valid amount will not be considered.⁷⁹ A municipal officer in a notice calling for proposals cannot dispense, in favor of any contractor, with requirements which the ordinances have made imperative.⁸⁰ The fact that an officer makes a mistake in his attempt to publish a notice does not deprive him of further power.⁸¹

b. Form and Requisites of Bids. Any provision of statute or ordinance as to the form of bids must be complied with to render the same a valid basis of contract.⁸² Hence a bid may not be accepted if it fails to comply with a requirement that all bids shall be signed and certified;⁸³ that the names of persons interested in a bid shall appear therein;⁸⁴ or that bids shall be accompanied by specifications,⁸⁵ or samples of material.⁸⁶ Bids must be in compliance with the specifications upon which proposals were invited;⁸⁷ and may not be modified after expiration of the time fixed for receiving them.⁸⁸ Acceptance of a bid which contains no agreement to perform the work according to specifications does not constitute a valid contract.⁸⁹ If the record is silent as to when bids were presented, the presumption is that they were received at the proper time;⁹⁰ and a bid is not defective because it makes no separation of the part of the work that is to be paid for by the city and that to be paid for by abutting owners.⁹¹ A bidder is under no obligation to give the city the benefit of his knowledge as to the cost of constructing the proposed work, although the means of such knowledge may not be within the city's reach.⁹²

notice of the letting of the contract for three weeks before October 6, a notice by publication, the first of which was on October 1, and the last on October 22, and which stated that bids would be received up to five o'clock October 30, was sufficient. Shirk v. Hupp, (Ind. 1906) 78 N. E. 242.

Final day on Sunday.—It has been held that an advertisement for bids stating that they would be received up to "Saturday, September 19th" was sufficient, although the nineteenth was Sunday. Case v. Johnson, 70 Ind. 31.

c. Deposit or Other Security on Making Bids.⁹³ A requirement that bids be accompanied by a deposit or bond is mandatory;⁹⁴ and if such requirement be made in general terms, regulations as to the amount of security and the manner of its filing or deposit may be made by the officers who receive the bid;⁹⁵ ordinarily the purpose of such a provision is to guarantee the making of a contract by the successful bidder;⁹⁶ but it has been construed to call for a bond securing the proper performance of the work should the contract be let.⁹⁷ The awarding of a contract is sufficient approval of a bond filed with a bid.⁹⁸ The fact that a bidder who was unable to furnish security when bids were asked for is afterward able to do so is not ground for reopening the bids.⁹⁹ Failure of a bidder to advance incidental costs as required by statute is not ground for enjoining the work, if the persons to whom such costs would accrue waived them in writing.¹

d. Time For Opening Bids and Making Award. Bids must be opened on the day named in the notice or on a subsequent day to which adjournment is taken.²

e. Acceptance or Rejection of Bids. Any charter or statutory requirement as to the manner of accepting bids must be complied with;³ hence a failure to call the roll as required by statute on a resolution to accept a bid will invalidate the acceptance.⁴ The right to reject all bids is often expressly secured to the municipality by charter;⁵ but even in the absence of such express grant, it is very generally held that the proper municipal authorities may, at their discretion, reject all bids, especially if the right to do so has been reserved in the advertisement;⁶ and no right of action will lie against the city for anticipated profits of the contract.⁷ The discretion of the council in rejecting any or all bids will not be controlled by the courts when exercised with prudence in the public interest;⁸ and the fact that the lowest bid was largely in excess of the estimated cost of the work does not warrant the inference that its acceptance was fraudulent.⁹ A charter provision that no contract for improvements shall be let at a price higher than the estimate thereof means that the work included in an estimate shall not be let at a higher price than is specified therein.¹⁰ The work may be divided into different parts and let to different bidders.¹¹ A condition imposed upon the acceptance of bids will not invalidate an actually executed contract, where it does not appear that the bids were influenced by such condition.¹²

f. Award as Between Competitive Bids. A requirement of charter or statute that the contract be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder is mandatory;¹³ hence a provision in an improvement ordinance reserving to the city the right to arbitrarily reject any bid is nugatory;¹⁴ and a division of work between the highest and lowest bidder is illegal.¹⁵ In determining, however, who is the lowest responsible bidder, the proper municipal authorities have a wide discretion,¹⁶ which will not be controlled by the courts except for arbitrary exercise,¹⁷ collusion, or fraud;¹⁸ and they need not be guided in this determination solely by the question of the pecuniary responsibility of a bidder,¹⁹ but may consider his ability to respond to the requirements of the contract,²⁰ and his general qualifications to properly execute the work;²¹ and no right of action lies against the municipality or officers in control of the bidding for an honest mistake in the exercise of this discretion.²² And it is held that such irregularity will not defeat the contract, although it will prevent the contractor from recovering more than a fair value for his work.²³

Unbalanced bid.—It is within the discretion of a board of public works to accept a bid based upon nominal prices for some work and enhanced prices for other work, where it is shown to have been no material enhancement of the gross price and the items are fairly identified. Mere technical informalities or irregularities in the form of a bid will not defeat the right of the lowest bidder to have the contract awarded to him, and authorize a municipal body to award the contract to a higher bidder. Faist v. Hoboken, 72 N. J. L. 361, 60 Atl. 1120.

g. Reconsideration After Acceptance or Rejection. When the lowest bid has been accepted, the city is under legal obligation to execute a contract with the bidder,²⁴ unless the ordinance upon which proceedings were based is invalid;²⁵ and, after acceptance of a bid, conditions may not be inserted in the contract which were not contained in the advertisement for proposal.²⁶ Although the council has rejected all bids, it may reconsider its action and accept one of them without a new advertisement;²⁷ but not if it has also repealed the ordinance.²⁸

h. Failure of Bidder to Enter Into Contract—(1) IN GENERAL. A bid for public work may be withdrawn at any time before acceptance,²⁹ and upon failure of a successful bidder to enter into a contract, the city may readvertise for bids without repeating the steps necessary to acquire jurisdiction;³⁰ but authority may not be conferred on the clerk by general resolution to readvertise in all cases where a bidder fails to make a contract.³¹ If the council releases the lowest bidder from his offer it should advertise again;³² but it is held that upon the failure of the lowest bidder, the contract may be awarded to the next lowest without readvertisement,³³ although the second bidder is not entitled, as a matter of right, to the contract.³⁴

of the successful bidder to enter into a contract will forfeit the security,³⁵ such a provision is penal in nature and is to be strictly construed, hence a forfeiture may not be enforced if proceedings are invalid,³⁶ or if the award has not been made and notice of it given in strict compliance with law or ordinance;³⁷ but a contractor who put in separate bids for different sewers, as called for in the advertisement, one of which was accepted, cannot defend against a forfeiture on the ground that he was told that all or none would be accepted.³⁸ Failure to sign a contract will not forfeit the bond if the conditions therein are more burdensome than were the specifications in the advertisement;³⁹ but a charter provision empowering the mayor to remit fines and forfeitures does not authorize him to return to a bidder a deposit forfeited for failure to make a contract.⁴⁰

3. FORM, REQUISITES, AND VALIDITY — a. Formal Requisites of Contracts.⁴¹ Any charter or statutory requirement as to the form of contract must be complied with to render the same valid.⁴² Writing is usually regarded as necessary,⁴³ hence it has been held that a contract reciting that the work shall be done according to specifications annexed thereto, but to which such specifications were not annexed, was not sufficient.⁴⁴ But if a contract has been duly fulfilled, the fact that it was not in writing, as required by charter, will not preclude the contractor's right of recovery.⁴⁵ When the council awards a contract and directs a ministerial officer to execute the written evidence of it, the same is complete, although such officer fails to execute the written agreement.⁴⁶ So when the work to be done is fully described in specifications referred to in the advertisement, acceptance of a bid in writing entered of record has been held to constitute a contract.⁴⁷ Where it is provided that work shall be done by contract, a board of public works has no authority to make a contract which is of such nature that it affords no measure of the expense to be incurred.⁴⁸

Itemization.—It is held, under some statutes, that the contract must be so itemized that the preparation of an itemized bill of cost, as required by statute, may be made directly from the contract itself. People v. McDermott, 214 Ill. 562, 73 N. E. 770; People v. Borman, 214 Ill. 416, 73 N. E. 770; People v. Peyton, 214 Ill. 376, 73 N. 48. Walter v. McClellan, 48 Misc. (N. Y.) 215, 96 N. Y. Suppl. 479, holding that a contract providing for the payment of certain sums for certain work to be done in the form of excavating, construction, or otherwise, making the compensation of the contractor depend upon the amount of work done at the specified rates, but stating that the quantities set forth were not the actual quantities within the scope of the work, but were employed as a matter of comparison, and reserving to the commissioners the right to increase or execution must be complied with.⁴⁹ But in determining the sufficiency of the execution of an improvement contract liberal rules prevail,⁵⁰ hence it has been held that a contract is valid, although the corporate seal is not affixed,⁵¹ or it is not signed by the mayor,⁵² or is signed and sealed by the mayor, but the name of the city is not subscribed.⁵³ But the signature of individual members of the council is not sufficient,⁵⁴ and a committee empowered to make a contract cannot authorize its chairman to do so.⁵⁵ If the council employs an agent to contract in its behalf, property-owners will not be bound, unless the authority of such agent appears of record.⁵⁶ Where an officer was empowered by the council to make a contract for certain repairs such contract was binding, although not made in the name of the city.⁵⁷ A contract is not invalidated by the fact that the name of one commissioner was signed by another, if the signature is ratified.⁵⁸ Unless expressly required,⁵⁹ a contract made by a municipal board in pursuance of power given by law need not be presented to the council for approval.⁶⁰ A contract made at a special meeting of the council of which some members had no notice is invalid.⁶¹ The fact that a contract in pursuance of ordinance was made before the expiration of time allowed the mayor to veto the ordinance will not render it invalid.⁶² Contracts for improvements need not be spread in full upon the journal of the council.⁶³ If the statute provides for commissioners to certify that a contract is free from fraud, their certification is conclusive for purposes of an assessment.⁶⁴ A provision for reference of matters of public improvements to a board of public works, before final approval by the council, does not require reference of a subsidiary contract for the supervision of the construction of an improvement.⁶⁵

c. Validity and Sufficiency in General. A municipality may not by contract diminish the quantities as they might see fit in the course of the work, was invalid.

Trout*, 146 Cal. 350, 80 Pac. 81, holding that where a session is adjourned until the following day at ten o'clock, but the adjourned session is called to order and begins its session at nine o'clock and the contract is awarded on the same day, the contract is not invalid unless it affirmatively appears that it was awarded before ten o'clock.

Signature.—Under a statute directing city contracts to be signed by the officer authorized to make them, and when not otherwise directed by the mayor, a contract for a public improvement is not invalid because signed by the mayor, although an ordinance authorized the director of the department of public works to contract for public improvements, where it did not direct such officer to sign contracts. *Philadelphia v. divest itself of governmental authority,⁶⁶ nor may it delegate discretionary power to a ministerial officer;⁶⁷ but a provision of the charter that improvements must be made by or under the direction of a particular officer is not violated by a contract for improvements which expressly provides that the work shall be done under the supervision of such officer.⁶⁸ A contract is not binding where, in consequence of a misunderstanding between the parties, their minds did not agree on the work which was to be performed.⁶⁹ It is not necessarily a fraud on a city to obtain public work in the name of another,⁷⁰ or by employment of a lobbyist.⁷¹ A contract is not unreasonable because a large portion of the city's revenue will be devoted to its payment.⁷² The contract is not invalidated by the fact that the municipality intended to refuse to carry out a previous contract for the same purpose, which was still in force.⁷³ A temporary injunction restraining a city from entering into any contract whereby any pecuniary liability will be incurred by or in behalf of said city did not render invalid a contract for an improvement which expressly provided that it should be paid for out of money lawfully raised by special assessment.⁷⁴

d. Conditions and Restrictions. Reasonable provisions, limiting the rights and duties of the contractor, may be incorporated in a contract for improvements when not violative of law, prejudicial to property-owners, or so onerous as to deter competition in bidding;⁷⁵ hence it has been held that a provision requiring the contractor to take certain material from the city is not objectionable,⁷⁶ so likewise of a requirement that the contractor shall meet all losses arising from the nature of the work,⁷⁷ shall restrict the hours of labor to eight per day,⁷⁸ shall have adequate facilities for performing the work,⁷⁹ and shall conform the grade to that of adjoining streets should the latter be changed during the progress of the work,⁸⁰ or that in constructing sidewalks he shall receive a uniform price per yard irrespective of locality.⁸¹ The city may stipulate that it will not be liable for payment until the proper funds are in the treasury,⁸² or until all claims against the contractor for material or labor have been settled.⁸³ But on the other hand the city may not require a contractor to furnish a patented article;⁸⁴ to employ union labor exclusively;⁸⁵ or to assume liability for all damages arising from the improvement.⁸⁶ Where illegal or unauthorized conditions or obligations upon the contract are incorporated into the advertisement for bids or the specifications upon which the bids are based, compliance with which will necessarily and illegally increase the cost of the work, it has been held that the contract is not let to the lowest responsible bidder.⁸⁷

e. Conformity to Provisions of Charter, Act, or Ordinance Authorizing Improvement. The contract must conform to the terms of the act, charter, or ordinance authorizing the improvement;⁸⁸ hence a failure to set a time for completion or commencement of the work as required by charter will invalidate a contract;⁸⁹ and a contract is invalid if it changes the assessment district contemplated by the ordinance,⁹⁰ or provides for an improvement different in character from that ordered therein.⁹¹ Hence an ordinance for macadamizing a street will not authorize a contract for setting curbs,⁹² or improving sidewalks;⁹³ and where the ordinance provides that a contract shall be let after the expiration of the time allowed property-owners to make the improvement, a contract which includes portions of the work which have been contracted for by property-owners is void.⁹⁴ It has been held, however, that unless property-owners are prejudiced, it is immaterial that all work specified in an ordinance is not let,⁹⁵ that the contract contains restrictions as to the employment of labor not found in the ordinance or advertisement,⁹⁶ or that the specifications in the contract differ in minor details from those of the ordinance.⁹⁷ So the contract may provide for minor modifications of the original plan of improvement;⁹⁸ and if such variance is material, but the contract is divisible, it will be valid to the extent that it is authorized.⁹⁹ The fact that an order of the council contains an estimate of cost does not preclude the making of a contract for the construction of the improvement at a cost slightly in excess of such estimate.¹ If specifications are not sufficiently definite to enable the contractor to proceed with the work, it is the duty of the city to furnish additional plans, although the contract may not so provide.² When the statute states the proportion of cost to be borne by abutting owners and the city, the same need not be specified in the contract.³

f. Conformity to Request For Bids. The contract must conform to the terms of the advertisement for bids;⁴ both as to the time for completion of the work⁵ and the plans and specifications thereof;⁶ but if a contract which includes more work than was specified in the advertisement is divisible it will be sustained to the extent of the advertised specifications,⁷ and a minor variance in the contract not prejudicial to the rights of interested parties will not necessarily invalidate it.⁸

g. Stipulations Requiring Contractor to Keep Streets in Repair. Power to make improvements by special assessment does not imply authority to levy such assessments for repairs;⁹ hence a stipulation in a contract that the contractor shall keep the street in repair imposes an additional burden on the property-owners and is usually held to invalidate the assessment.¹⁰ Such a stipulation, how-statute directs that work be let by one contract¹⁷ the council may provide for separate contracts for different parts of an improvement.¹⁸ Where the character of an improvement on the crossing of a street is different from that on the rest of the street, separate contracts may be let, although both improvements were included in the same resolution of intention.¹⁹

i. Single Contract Including Different Improvements. Unless required by charter or statute to include different improvements in a single contract,²⁰ the municipality should make separate contracts for separate and distinct improvements;²¹ but failure to do so has been held to be an irregularity that will not invalidate an assessment.²² Where the improvement of a street is interrupted by a section between two cross streets, it is not improper to let both portions of the improvement in the same contract, where their character is the same.²³ Where similar materials will be required for several improvements authorized by distinct ordinances, it has been held that proposals to furnish the entire amount of materials may be advertised for.²⁴

j. Effect of Defects in Preliminary Proceedings. Failure to comply with requirements of charter or statute in proceedings for improvements renders the same invalid, and contracts made in pursuance thereof are void,²⁵ and a person entering into a contract for performance of work is bound to see that the preliminary steps required by law have been taken;²⁶ and if he proceeds without doing so, he is not entitled to recover upon quantum meruit for work performed.²⁷ A technical irregularity in the notice required by charter, however, will not defeat a contract.²⁸ And the right of one who has furnished material to the city to recover therefor is not prejudiced by the fact that the council kept no minutes.²⁹

W. 163, holding that it is immaterial that no security was given by the contractor where the proper board required none, and the charter merely provided for "sufficient security as required by said board."

a bond is given its insufficiency will not invalidate an assessment.³² A charter or statutory provision that the city shall require the successful bidder to execute a bond is mandatory, however, and no lien is acquired on abutting property if such bond is not given.³³ Where a bond contains all the provisions of a statute, its efficiency as a statutory bond is not lost by a recital that it was taken as a common-law bond.³⁴ An erroneous statement in the advertisement of the amount of security required by the ordinance does not preclude the city from demanding a bond of proper amount.³⁵ When an ordinance does not specify when bonds are to be given, and the first of the instalments of payment upon the work is not due until completion of the work, it has been held sufficient to give a bond on the completion of the work conditioned according to the terms of the contract.³⁶ And the fact that the ordinance fixed ten days as the time for filing a bond will not preclude the council from accepting a bond after the expiration of that time.³⁷ If a bond recites that it is of even date with a contract the fact that it is dated a day earlier is not sufficient to prove that it was in fact executed before the contract.³⁸ Commissioners are not obliged to accept a substitute for the sureties offered in the original proposal;³⁹ nor need the proper officer approve sureties offered by the successful bidder when the bids have been irregularly opened.⁴⁰ A bond conditioned to secure performance of the contract is equivalent to a bond conditioned to secure performance of the work contracted for.⁴¹ A provision that the superintendent of streets shall not be liable for delinquency on his part, although against public policy, will not vitiate the entire contract.⁴² A deposit made by the contractor to secure performance of the contract has been held to be an additional and cumulative security in addition to the bond for the performance of the contract.⁴³ Where a cash bond is required and the money is deposited by the treasurer in a bank that fails, the city is liable for its return to the contractor upon proper completion of the work.⁴⁴

b. Securing Payment For Labor and Materials. Although ordinarily the purpose of a bond is to secure the proper performance of work, it is sometimes expressly required by charter or statute to be conditioned for payment of labor and material,⁴⁵ and such a requirement is a proper exercise of legislative power.⁴⁶ It has been held that in the absence of express authorization a bond so conditioned cannot be required;⁴⁷ but the weight of authority supports the proposition that a city in the exercise of its general powers may require contractors to furnish a bond to pay materialmen and laborers.⁴⁸ Although a bond exceeds the requirement of the ordinance it may be enforced according to its terms if voluntarily given.⁴⁹ Tools and appliances with which to construct an improvement are not "materials" within the meaning of a bond requiring a contractor to pay for all materials used in the execution of a contract.⁵⁰ Although the charter directs the taking of a bond for the security of laborers and materialmen, the city is not liable if the officers neglect to take such a bond.⁵¹

c. Liability of Sureties. The fact that a bond is more comprehensive than is required by the ordinance will not relieve the surety.⁵² If the contract provides for changes in specifications the same may be made without exempting sureties from liability.⁵³ Where a city pays a balance due a contractor upon the execution of a bond securing it against judgments, and a judgment foreclosing a mechanic's lien under a statute is entered against the city, the sureties on the bond will be liable for such judgment;⁵⁴ but if a bond contains no reference to liquidated damages provided for in a contract the same may not be recovered against the sureties;⁵⁵ and under a bond for faithful performance of a contract in which the contractor undertakes to furnish all materials, the sureties are not liable to third parties for material used in the performance of the contract,⁵⁶ nor are they liable to the city for counsel fees in defending a garnishment proceeding when the bond merely indemnifies it against suits arising from injuries or damages.⁵⁷ Where the contract is void because opportunity for free competition in the purchase of materials was not given, persons furnishing labor or materials with knowledge of the facts cannot recover as against the surety of the contractor upon a bond furnished by him.⁵⁸ Settlement by the city with the contractor does not bar action by it for the benefit of materialmen.⁵⁹ Nor unless so provided by the contract is a certificate of the engineer as to fitness of the work conclusive.⁶⁰

d. Persons Secured. A bond for faithful performance of an improvement contract is for the benefit of property-owners, and on non-fulfilment of the contract the city may be compelled to collect the bond and apply the funds to diminish the assessment.⁶¹ A subcontractor has been held not to be a laborer or materialman within the meaning of a bond conditioned to secure payment of the claims of such persons;⁶² nor is a manufacturer who furnishes material by

Where a common-law bond is taken a creditor of a city contractor cannot sue the aldermen for failure to take a statutory contractor's bond for the protection of material and labor claims, where the city took a valid common-law bond in its own name, and it does not appear that it refused plaintiff the right to sue thereon in its name. *Stephenson v. contract.⁶³ But a person who supplies brick to a contractor is a materialman,⁶⁴ although the same is to be paid for in a gross sum.⁶⁵ A bond to secure payment to laborers and materialmen includes those employed by a subcontractor,⁶⁶ or an assignee of the original contractor.⁶⁷

e. Actions. The time and manner of enforcing a bond conditioned for the payment of laborers and materialmen is sometimes prescribed by charter or statute and such requirements must be followed.⁶⁸ If the city be authorized to sue on such a bond, the parties for whose benefit it was made may not bring actions in their own name,⁶⁹ but, it has been held, may bring suit in the name of the city without its consent.⁷⁰ In the absence of legislative direction as to the proper party, a laborer or materialman for whose benefit a bond is given may maintain an action thereon in his own name;⁷¹ and the recovery of one judgment does not prevent the maintenance of actions by other parties.⁷² If, however, the bond be for the benefit of the city, such as a bond indemnifying it against damages, action thereon may not be maintained by a third party.⁷³ Where the contract is with a committee representing the city and has stipulated for liquidated damages on failure of timely completion, and the bond stipulates for the payment of damages of any Defenses.—In an action to recover for materials furnished in paving, an answer setting up facts which render the contract between the city and the contractor illegal, and stating that any material furnished by plaintiff was with full knowledge of such facts, constitutes a good defense. National Surety Co. v. Kansas City Hydraulic Press Brick Co., 73 Kan. 196, 84 Pac. 1034.

A plea averring a waiver of a breach must allege knowledge. Newark v. New Jersey

Asphalt Co., 68 N. J. L. 458, 53 Atl. 294, holding a plea which simply alleged that the city had paid for the work insufficient.

Evidence.—Where sureties are present at the settlement between the city and their principal, their assenting to such settlement may be implied, but a recitation of their presence in the resolution of settlement passed by the council is ex parte and is not evidence of their presence. Devers v. Howard, 88 Mo. App. 253. Evidence of how many hours each laborer works in the quarry of the materialman, how much material was taken out and prepared during the entire time, what proportion of it was used on the contract, and the wages of each laborer is a sufficient basis for determination of how much each laborer is entitled to recover on the bond. *Coombs v. kind resulting from failure, the city is the real party in interest and entitled to recover damages, if any, caused by delay.⁷⁴ The fact that the municipality has withheld sufficient funds to pay a materialman's claim is no defense to an action by it on the bond of the contractor for a sum due from him to one furnishing material.⁷⁵

5. UNAUTHORIZED OR ILLEGAL CONTRACTS — a. In General. The power of a municipality to contract for improvements is limited by the terms of the legislative enactment under which it proceeds, and failure to comply with the same in material matters will render a contract void;⁷⁶ those dealing with a city must see to it that its agents have power to act, and no liability will be incurred for work performed under a void contract.⁷⁷ If a contract is divisible, the part of it that is valid may be enforced;⁷⁸ hence where the statute limits the cost of an improvement to a stated percentage of the value of the property assessed a contract that provides for the payment of a sum exceeding such limit is void only as to the illegal excess.⁷⁹ An ultra vires contract is not saved on the theory of part performance by the issuance of tax bills to pay the cost of the improvement.⁸⁰ Where, owing to an error in the assessor's map, it appears that the required number of property-owners have signed a petition, and a contract in pursuance thereof is made, the contractor may recover for his services, although the required number in fact have not signed;⁸¹ and under a charter provision that improvements shall be made either on petition or on recommendation of a particular board, the passage of an ordinance at the recommendation of such board relieves the contractor from any obligation to inquire as to the ground upon which the work was ordered.⁸²

Quantum meruit.—One who performs labor and furnishes materials to a city under a void contract cannot recover on a quantum meruit. Keating v. Kansas City, 84 Mo. 415; Cowen v. West Troy, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 48; Brady v. New York, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 173, 16 How. Pr. 432 [affirmed in 20 N. Y. 312]; Bigler v. New York, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 51. W. 664, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 1015. As to recovery upon quantum meruit in case of invalid assessment see infra, XIII, F, 5, a.

Lien.—As an ultra vires contract for the erection of waterworks creates no debt against a city, no lien, equitable or otherwise, can attach to said waterworks for the construction thereof as against the city or its vendee. Ellis v. Cleburne, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 35 S. W. 495.

Unauthorized provision for payment in bonds.—Where a contract provides that the work done shall be paid for in bonds of the corporation when such bonds are not authorized by law, the contract so far as it is valid in other respects remains in full force and the corporation is liable for a breach thereof. Hitchcock v. Galveston, 96 U. S. 341, 24 L. ed. 659.

b. Right to Deny Validity.⁸³ An ultra vires contract is incapable of ratification, and a municipality is never estopped from setting up its invalidity;⁸⁴ but if a city has received the benefits of a contract it will be estopped from asserting its invalidity on the ground of a defect or irregularity in its execution.⁸⁵ It has been held that a single property-owner cannot object to informalities of a contract;⁸⁶ and that a contract secured through corrupt means is voidable only at the election of the city.⁸⁷ The city cannot avoid a contract for street improvements because it imposes more rigid conditions on the contractor than are authorized by the ordinance under which it was made.⁸⁸

c. Ratification.⁸⁹ An ultra vires contract cannot be validated by ratification;⁹⁰ but a municipality may ratify the unauthorized contracts made by its officers, provided it could have legally authorized such contracts.⁹¹ The ratification must be by the municipal agency authorized to contract in the first instance;⁹² and must be in accordance with the mode prescribed by law.⁹³ Ratification extends to such contract as an entirety and will validate a collateral bond for the benefit of laborers and materialmen.⁹⁴ Where a contract may be dispensed with by a two-thirds vote of the council, such vote comes too late if not had until after the performance of the work.⁹⁵ So where the question must be submitted to popular vote it has been held that a previous contract is not validated, as of its date, by a subsequent vote, but is merely rendered operative from the time thereof.⁹⁶

d. Curative Statutes and Ordinances.⁹⁷ An invalid contract may be rendered enforceable against a municipality by curative statutes;⁹⁸ but where the city has no power to make improvements at the expense of property-owners, the latter cannot be made liable for such improvements by subsequent legislation validating a contract which imposes a lien on their property;⁹⁹ and a contract void because of contravention of the constitution is not validated by a subsequent constitutional amendment under the terms of which the contract could have been made.¹ Where a contract is void because made before the adoption of a sufficient ordinance, the passage of an ordinance confirming the contract does not validate it.²

6. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.³ The general rules governing construction of contracts apply to municipal contracts for improvements;⁴ such contracts are to be construed with reference to acts in force at the date of their execution,⁵ and with regard to plans and specifications incorporated by reference.⁶ Where the contract provides that losses arising from the nature of the work shall be borne by the contractor the city is not liable;⁷ but a provision that the contractor shall have no claim against the city for delay in delivering material will not apply to delays caused by defective material furnished by the city.⁸ In case of uncertainty or ambiguity a contract is to be reasonably construed;⁹ hence a contract for paving a street does not require the contractor to pave the part thereof used by a street railway when no liability for cost would arise against the company.¹⁰ If no time is fixed for completion of an improvement, the same must be finished within a reasonable time.¹¹ When the time for commencing work is to be fixed by a municipal officer, and the same is to be finished within a stated time, the time does not begin to run under the contract until the date of commencement has been designated by such officer, even though the contractor has voluntarily proceeded with the work.¹² A provision that a municipal board shall adjudicate damages arising from non-performance of a contract does not necessitate such adjudication of the contractor's damages arising from the city's breach of the contract.¹³ A provision that the contractor should make no claim for extra work will not apply to work arising from changes in the plans and specifications;¹⁴ and in order to save the contract a provision for extra work will be construed to mean such necessary work as might be promptly required without opportunity for a formal letting as required by law.¹⁵ The term "street," unqualified, means the whole area from lot line to lot line.¹⁶

Drawing as warranty.—Where it is stipulated that the contractors shall satisfy themselves, by personal examination, of the accuracy of an engineer's estimate, the city is not bound by a drawing showing the probable location of rock along the line of a sewer, and the contractor cannot rely on the drawing as a warranty as to the depth at which rock will be found. 7. ASSIGNMENT, MODIFICATION, AND RESCISSION — a. Assignment. A contract awarded by municipal authorities in the exercise of a discretion as to what is for the best interest of the city cannot be assigned by the contractor without the sanction of the city;¹⁷ but where such assignment has been made, the city has been held liable to the assignee for the reasonable value of work actually done.¹⁸ A clause in a contract prohibiting assignment is for the benefit of the city and is available only when pleaded by the city.¹⁹ The fact that a contract has been assigned is no defense to an action by the contractor against the city for actual damage for wrongfully compelling him to cease work.²⁰ A provision restricting the subletting of work will not be construed to forbid a contractor for the erection of a building from subcontracting the carpenter work.²¹ In the absence of a statute providing to whom notice of the assignment of a contract shall be given, it has been held that notice may be given to any agent of the city whose duty it is to act upon it or communicate it to his principal in the proper discharge of his duty as agent.²² And where the right to assign a contract is made by statute to depend on the consent of a particular officer, such consent may be implied.²³

b. Modification.²⁴ A contract for improvements may be modified by the municipal officers authorized to make the same, provided such modification does not substantially change the character of the work;²⁵ but ministerial officers, empowered by the council to contract in its behalf or to direct the performance of the work, may not make a material modification in the terms of the contract.²⁶

A charter or statutory provision authorizing a modification must be strictly complied with to render the same valid;²⁷ and where a contract is modified in violation of legislative restrictions, the fact that work under it has been performed will not estop the city from defending against a claim for an excess above the original contract price.²⁸

c. Rescission or Cancellation.²⁹ The city may reserve the right to cancel a contract arbitrarily,³⁰ or for failure to properly perform the work,³¹ or to finish the same within a stipulated time;³² and in the absence of such reservation, a city may renounce a contract without liability, if proceedings for making the improvements were defective.³³ A stipulation for rescission is to be strictly construed;³⁴ action thereon may be taken only by the city,³⁵ and the power to annul may not be delegated to a ministerial officer.³⁶

8. PERFORMANCE OF WORK³⁷ — a. In General. The contractor, or one to whom he sublets a part of the work,³⁸ is bound by all the conditions of the contract,³⁹ and a failure to perform the work in compliance with the terms thereof will constitute a breach of contract,⁴⁰ and injunction will lie on behalf of abutting

40. McGovern v. Loder, (N. J. Ch. 1890) 20 Atl. 209; Schumm v. Seymour, 24 N. J. Eq. 143, holding that where a departure from a contract made by street commissioners under charter authority, and requiring that paving should be done in accordance with specifications, resulted in a large saving to the contractor, payment of the stipulated price would be restrained, although the substituted work was equally as good as that which the contract required.

A condition in a contract for the construction of waterworks, and the hiring thereof by a city, that "the payment of this sum of ten thousand dollars per annum to be dependent upon the said second party supplying wholesome water during all the term aforesaid, to wit, thirty years; . . . water to be taken from wells and springs sufficient to supply all the inhabitants of said city"; and further requiring that the contract shall be complied with and perfected in every respect before being accepted, or before liability for rent or water used shall attach, does not make the taking of water from springs and wells sufficient to supply the city for thirty years a condition precedent to the acceptance of the works, or the attaching of liability for rent; and a declaration in an action for breach of contract for refusal on the part of the city to accept the works is not demurrable for failure to allege a supply sufficient for all the inhabitants of the city for owners to restrain the city from accepting the work,⁴¹ or on behalf of a taxpayer to enjoin an assessment.⁴² Where the city agrees to pay for work upon its completion and approval, it cannot avoid liability by delaying to approve the same when completed according to contract,⁴³ and it will be estopped from setting up a variance from the contract if such variance is due to the fact that the contractor was furnished with wrong plans and tracings,⁴⁴ or to other municipal act.⁴⁵ Where part of the material furnished the city does not meet the requirement of the specifications, the city is not justified in rejecting the whole lot, when the contractor stands ready to furnish proper material in the place of that rejected.⁴⁶ Where the contractor is stopped in his work by the city, his right to recover for the part that he has done is not precluded by the fact that the charter provides for the issuance of tax bills in payment for work only upon the completion thereof.⁴⁷

b. Control and Inspection of Work. If a contract provides that work shall be done under charge of a particular officer, the contractor in the performance of work is obliged to follow the directions of such officer,⁴⁸ even as to details omitted in the contract,⁴⁹ and the city will also be bound by his decision.⁵⁰ If, however, such directions conflict with the plans and specifications according to which the work is being done, the contractor need not follow them;⁵¹ but a decision by an inspector that material does not conform to specifications, if made in good faith, is conclusive against the contractor.⁵² Failure of an engineer to give specific instructions does not impose liability on the village for damages suffered by the contractor because of such failure, unless specific instructions have been clearly demanded.⁵³

c. Approval or Certification of Engineer or Other Officer. Certification by a designated officer that the work has been properly completed is frequently required by contract as a prerequisite to payment for an improvement. The certification must be made by the officer designated,⁵⁴ although he need not personally inspect the work,⁵⁵ and his decision is binding on the contractor⁵⁶ and on the city⁵⁷ unless arbitrary⁵⁸ or fraudulent,⁵⁹ when evidence may be introduced to determine whether the work has been properly performed in accordance with the terms of the contract.⁶⁰ If such certification be required by charter or statute, the same may not be dispensed with by the city.⁶¹ Refusal by the proper officer to examine and approve the work will not preclude the contractor's right to recover the reasonable value of the same.⁶²

Extra work occasioned by negligence of the city engineer should be borne by the city and not by the contractor. Chicago v. Duffy, 218 Ill. 242, 75 N. E. 912. And where a contractor is compelled by the city engineer to relay a pavement, on the ground that it has been improperly constructed, he does not by compliance with the order, after making an oral protest against tearing up his work but without demand for extra compensation, waive his claim therefor. Gearty v. New York, 171 N. Y. 61, 63 N. E. 804. But where, without objection, the contractor in grading uses grades furnished by the city engineer, he accepts him as his agent in establishing the grade and cannot recover for losses suf-officer;⁶⁵ nor will the city be liable for additional work done at the direction of one of its officials without its consent.⁶⁶ Recovery may not be had for work not called for in the contract but which the contractor voluntarily performs;⁶⁷ and if the contract provides that in case any work is required to properly carry out the agreement which is not called for in the specifications, the same shall be done without extra compensation, the contractor cannot recover for extra work which reasonably comes within the terms of such provision.⁶⁸ Even in the absence of such a provision, extra compensation cannot be recovered for work which is a necessary incident to the performance of a contract.⁶⁹ The fact that work proves more expensive than was anticipated, owing to unforeseen obstacles, does not entitle a contractor to extra compensation.⁷⁰ And the municipality will not be bound ferred by reason of the surveyor's mistakes. Becker v. New York, 170 N. Y. 219, 63 N. E. 298. An allowance for delay to a contractor for the construction of a sewer, occasioned by the necessity of removing extra filling placed on the line of work by preceding grading contractors, does not constitute a defense to the contractor's right to recover for the extra work in removing the same. *Thilemann v. Under a constitutional provision prohibiting a city from giving extra compensation to a contractor, one who contracts to construct a sewer for a city is precluded from obtaining any compensation over the contract price for overcoming unexpected difficulties

by representations made by its engineer to a prospective bidder as to the nature of material to be excavated in the work.⁷¹ So where the contractor is required to do certain excavating according to specifications, the fact that an erroneous drawing referred to in the specifications did not show as many cubic yards as were required to be taken out to complete the work does not render the city liable over the contract price for the value of the excavating other than shown by the plans.⁷² But if measurements fixed in a contract are intended merely to approximate and not to affect the final estimate of the work, compensation for work in excess of the estimate in the contract may be recovered.⁷³

(ii) ACCEPTANCE AND APPROVAL, OR CERTIFICATE AS TO EXTRA WORK. If extra work is ordered by an unauthorized official, acceptance of the improvement by the city does not imply an agreement to pay for the extra work;⁷⁴ but a departure by a ministerial board from the order of the council in awarding a contract is ratified by the approval of such award.⁷⁵ If the contract provides that compensation for extra work shall be estimated by a particular officer, his estimate, in the absence of fraud, is binding on the parties.⁷⁶ But if the statute under which the city proceeds expressly directs that any estimate for additional work must be made beforehand in the contract, a provision therein which leaves the payment for extra work to be agreed on after it is done is void and the contractor cannot recover.⁷⁷ A requirement in the contract that a written statement of extra work done shall be furnished to the board of public works is not complied with by the contractor's appearing before such board with his books of account.⁷⁸

f. Partial Performance. Entire performance of a contract is as a rule a condition precedent to a right of recovery thereunder;⁷⁹ and where an improvement ordered constitutes a continuous system, the council has no power to accept a part performance;⁸⁰ but although the entire work is not completed, a contractor may recover the reasonable value of the part performed if the benefit of the same has been accepted by the city,⁸¹ and where complete performance becomes physically impossible, the contractor may recover reasonable compensation for the work actually done.⁸²

g. Delay. Under a contract invalid at the date of execution but subsequently ratified, the time for completion of the work should be computed from date of ratification.⁸³ If the contract provides that a particular officer shall fix the date for commencing the work, the contractor must be given actual notice of the date selected;⁸⁴ and if the term of such officer expires before the designation of a date the same may be fixed by his successor.⁸⁵ Where the contract contains a penalty clause for failure to complete the work within the time designated, it is sufficient that the work be done within a reasonable time, unless there is an ordinance or statute requiring the work to be completed within a definite time.⁸⁶ Where time is made the essence of a contract, failure to complete the work within the period specified in the contract will forfeit compensation,⁸⁷ unless the delay is caused by the city,⁸⁸ or the work is restrained by injunction.⁸⁹ If the delay was caused through no fault of the contractor, but was due to unusual weather, the contractor may recover for work performed.⁹⁰ A provision for stipulated damages in case of delay in the completion of the improvement is binding upon the contractor.⁹¹ But a city cannot enforce a per diem penalty for delay caused by the suspension of work during litigation concerning the proper construction of the contract which terminates in favor of the contractor.⁹² Where the city has contracted to have an improvement made upon default of the abutting owner to make it, the owner cannot set up the contractor's failure to complete the work within the time specified in the contract as against an attempt to collect the cost from him, without showing an injury from the delay.⁹³

Provision for liquidated damages.—A stipulation for the payment of a fixed sum per day for delay in the completion of the work, as liquidated damages, is not inconsistent with and does not abrogate a further provision in the contract giving the city the power to declare it terminated for delay in the progress of the work before the time fixed for its completion, and in such case the city has its election. *Boyce v. extend the time for performance is expressly given by statute, the terms of such grant must be complied with,⁹⁶ hence where the statute is construed to mean that an extension must be granted before the time for performance has expired, an extension not granted until after the expiration of such time is void;⁹⁷ but failure to record a resolution of extension, as required by law, will not invalidate the same,⁹⁸ nor will an error in the description of the contract.⁹⁹ An act restricting the right of a city to extend the time for performance will not apply to an extension granted in pursuance of the terms of a contract entered into before the passage of such act.¹

i. Defects. If the work is done in a defective manner or not in accordance with specifications, the city may refuse to accept the same and it will not be liable on quantum meruit;² and a person liable to assessment may restrain the city by injunction from paying for such improvement.³ But the misfeasance or malfeasance of a public contractor will not release a party properly assessed for work done by such contractor from payment of the assessment.⁴

j. Excuses For Non-Performance or Defect. Where the contractor is prevented by the act of the city from completing the work, he may recover for the part thereof that he has performed;⁵ and a delay caused by failure of the city to furnish materials as required by the contract will not constitute an abandonment thereof by the contractor.⁶ The fact that an assessment was declared invalid is no excuse for abandoning a contract where the city has power to make a new assessment and stands ready to do so.⁷

k. Acceptance of Performance and Waiver of Defects. The city has power to waive strict compliance with the terms of a contract,⁸ and such waiver may be implied from acceptance and payment for the work;⁹ but waiver may not be made by ministerial officers,¹⁰ nor will it be implied from usage by the public,¹¹ and property-owners to be assessed are entitled to have the work done in substantial compliance with the terms of the contract.¹² Acceptance of an improvement by the proper municipal authorities is usually held, in the absence of fraud, to be conclusive evidence that the work was performed in accordance with the requirements of the contract;¹³ but some cases hold that such acceptance is merely prima facie evidence of proper performance,¹⁴ and although the municipal authorities were not guilty of fraud in accepting an improvement, the acceptance will be invalid if the work performed is greatly inferior to that called for by the contract.¹⁵ The city will be estopped by using an improvement to set up its non-acceptance of the same.¹⁶ Where a contract provides for referring disputes to a designated person for final decision, in the absence of fraud, the decision of such arbitrator will bar further action against the city;¹⁷ but such a stipulation applies only to work included in the original estimate and not to extra work which the contractor is required to perform.¹⁸

l. Completion of Work by Municipality. When a contract is forfeited, the right of the municipality to complete the improvement is not limited to the ground upon which it was declared forfeited, but extends to all matters necessary to properly complete the work, including the perfecting of parts already done;¹⁹ and the contractor, when the cost is to be charged to him, cannot object to the methods adopted by the city in carrying on the work,²⁰ or, if such right be secured to him by the contract, his failure to object to the methods followed, when informed of each step taken, will be a waiver of his right.²¹ If the city in completing the work uses the contractor's tools and materials he may recover in assumption for the same.²²

nance,²³ and without a new advertisement for bids;²⁴ but if a new contract is not let until a number of years after abandonment of the old one, it will not be considered a reletting or continuance of the original contract.²⁵ But a board by incurring an estoppel cannot create a greater obligation against the city than it could create by contract.²⁶

n. Guarantees of Work and Stipulations For Repairs. If the contract provides that repairs may be made at the expense of the contractor should the improvement become defective from improper material or construction, no liability arises, unless it be shown that such defects were the result of improper material or construction;²⁷ nor will the contractor be liable, if the city in repairing the street substitutes a different kind of improvement.²⁸ If the city has permitted the street to fall into an abnormal condition of disorder, it must restore it to normal condition before calling upon the contractor to repair it.²⁹ Where a pavement has been constructed under contract with the abutting owners, and not with the city, it becomes their property and the city is not liable to the contractor for its negligent destruction of such pavement, notwithstanding he has assumed an obligation toward the property-owners to keep it in repair.³⁰

9. COMPENSATION — a. Payment of Compensation — (1) IN GENERAL. When the conditions of the contract have been fulfilled, payment of compensation as provided for therein must be made by the municipality;³¹ and an amendment of Damage caused by bursting water mains is not included in a provision of a paving contract obligating the contractor to maintain the pavement and keep it in repair. Green River Asphalt Co. v. St. Louis, 188 Mo. 576, 87 S. W. 985.

Agreement for paying in city orders.—The city may agree to pay in city orders, at par, that part of the cost of any improvement which is charged against the city. Allen County v. Silvers, 22 Ind. 491.

Excess payment.—One who is paid partly the charter relating to payment of compensation will not affect the provisions of a contract which was executed prior to the adoption thereof.³³ The council cannot by mere resolution impose upon the city liability for work which has been done under a contract imposing no such liability, an attempt to do so being an attempt to make a contract without consideration.³³

(ii) FROM GENERAL FUND. In the absence of legislative provisions governing the making of improvements and the manner of paying for the same, the city in the exercise of its general powers may improve its streets and defray the cost from its general funds; ³⁴ but ordinarily in making improvements a city proceeds under express legislative authority, in pursuance of which a special fund for the payment of improvements is provided.³⁵ Where an improvement ordinance provides for payment out of funds to be raised by general taxation, the contractor can enforce payment out of a general fund created by the sale of bonds, since the bonds are payable from funds derived from taxation.³⁶

(iii) FROM SPECIAL FUND. If the contract for an improvement provides that payment shall be made from a special fund raised by assessments, the city is held liable only to the extent of such special fund,³⁷ unless the right to raise the same has been lost by the negligence of the city,³⁸ or the assessment itself was in money and partly in special tax bills, who has been improvidently paid more money than was due him, is not entitled to have issued to him special tax bills in excess of the residue, unless he first returns the money improvidently paid him. State v. Flad, 26 Mo. App. 500.

Failure to use work.—Where a city finally decided not to use plans of an architect, which had been accepted, it is nevertheless bound to pay him for them. Houston v. Glover, (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 89 S. W. 425.

Payment of commissioners and other officers.—A statute requiring a city to advance from its treasury money to pay for services of commissioners and others employed on the proposed extension of certain streets is not an unconstitutional diversion of general funds to a local purpose. *Sinton v. See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 904.

Where the remedy to collect from the specific fund is lost, street grade warrants issued in payment of work done on a street by a contractor, payable out of the street grade fund, cannot be collected against the city generally. Rhode Island Mortg., etc., Co. v. Spokane, 19 Wash. 616, 53 Pac. 1104.

What constitutes fund.—Where by statute it is provided that the expense of street intersections and crossings in the street improvement shall be paid by the city, the cost of an improvement, the expense of which is to be met by special assessment, which is apportioned to a city, becomes part of a special fund which is chargeable with payment of warrants for the improvement. Hemen v. Ballard, 40 Wash. 81, 82 Pac. 277.

Reimbursement.—Where a city has advanced money to pay for a special improvement, it may reimburse itself from the special improvement fund, although the statute authorizing the special assessment requires the fund raised thereby to be used for no other purpose than for the payment of the improvement. Pine Tree Lumber Co. v. Fargo, 12 N. D. 360, 96 N. W. 357.

illegal,³⁹ or the fund has been wrongfully diverted.⁴⁰ If a contractor accepts assessment certificates in payment for his work, his failure to collect the same will not always render the city liable.⁴¹

b. Rights and Remedies of Contractor Against the Municipality. Although a city is not liable for an improvement made in violation of the constitution, yet it must pay to the contractor money paid to it under an agreement to bear part of the cost of such improvement.⁴² A charter or statutory provision that a city shall not be liable for the cost of street improvements, without having the right to enforce it against the property receiving the benefit thereof, applies only to cases in which the city has authority to make the improvement at the cost of those owning the property benefited, and it is liable to the contractor where it has authority to contract for a street improvement, but has no authority to make it a charge on abutting property.⁴³ The city is liable in damages to a contractor for preventing him from completing an improvement,⁴⁴ or for losses caused to him by its fault or neglect,⁴⁵ and, in case the contractor is delayed by the default of the city, he may abandon the work or claim damages caused by the city's fault.⁴⁶ Where the city has denied its liability under a contract and has refused to pay instalments there is a breach of the contract on its part.⁴⁷ If a contractor pays a license-fee in compliance with an invalid ordinance he may recover the same on demand.⁴⁸

c. Failure or Neglect to Levy or Collect Assessments or Issue Tax Bills. If warrants are issued in payment for an improvement the city is primarily liable on such warrants,⁴⁹ but ordinarily a city does not become liable for the cost of improvements until the assessments levied to pay for the same have been collected.⁵⁰ If, however, the city neglects to levy and collect an assessment to pay for an improvement it renders itself liable to the contractor for the cost thereof,⁵¹ unless the contractor's rights with regard to an assessment may be enforced by mandamus⁵² or the city has power and stands ready to levy a reassessment,⁵³ or is exempt from liability by express provision of charter or by contract.⁵⁴ If the contractor is prevented by the city from completing an improvement, and as a consequence the assessment cannot be collected, he may recover from the municipality the value of the work actually performed.⁵⁵ A failure to provide for collecting from a street railway its share of the cost of an improvement will not render the city liable for the same.⁵⁶

d. Invalidity or Insufficiency of Special Assessment or Tax Bill. If an assessment proves invalid the city is liable to the contractor for the cost of the improve-

Damages for delay.—A city which has agreed with a contractor for a public work to levy and collect an assessment without delay, and which through a mistake in the law fails to collect the assessment made, and has to resort to a reassessment, is liable to the contractor for damages caused by the delay as for loss of claims for benefits which have become outlawed. *Denny v. ment⁵⁷ or the amount of the void assessment certificates⁵⁸ unless it is expressly exempt from such liability by charter or contract.⁵⁹ If the assessment exceeds the limit on the value of property fixed by law, the city will be liable for the illegal excess,⁶⁰ but it will not be liable for a deficiency arising from the fact that the value of property assessed does not equal the amount of the assessment.⁶¹

e. Amount of Recovery—(i) IN GENERAL. If work is performed in compliance with the contract, the contractor is entitled to the amount of compensation agreed on therein notwithstanding he decreased the cost by adopting a more economical mode of performance than was stipulated in the contract;⁶² and where the city accepts a less quantity of work than is required by the specifications of the contract as performance, the contractors may recover the contract price without deduction;⁶³ but if by collusion and fraud the contract is obtained at excessive rates, the city may defeat recovery for more than the value of the improvement.⁶⁴ In the absence of express stipulation, the city will not be liable beyond the contract price, although the unforeseen nature of the work increased the cost of the improvement.⁶⁵ A provision in the city charter which makes the board of public works the arbiter to adjust and determine all questions as to amounts earned under contracts with the city is valid,⁶⁶ and a valid award made under a contract subject to such provision is binding.⁶⁷ If the contract provides that compensation for material shall not be allowed in excess of the engineer's certificate as to the quantity furnished, such certification, in the absence of fraud, Arbitration.—Where the board of public works is appointed, under a contract with the city for the construction of a sewer, to arbitrate the contractor's claim for extras, their finding on the matter submitted to them is final. Burnham v. Milwaukee, 100 Wis. 55, 75 N. W. 1014.

will be binding on the contractor.⁶⁸ An incorrect estimate may be corrected by a subsequent one.⁶⁹ If an assessment given a contractor is invalid, he may recover from the city the amount of the assessment,⁷⁰ but not the attorney's fees paid by him in attempting to collect the same against the property assessed.⁷¹ Certificates for payment issued by an engineer are presumed to be valid.⁷²

(11) INTEREST. Where money is withheld after it is payable under the terms of the contract, it will bear interest from the time when it is due.⁷³ In the absence of an express provision to the contrary the city becomes liable for an improvement upon its acceptance of the work, and the debt will bear interest from the date thereof;⁷⁴ but if in accordance with the terms of the contract, the city retains funds due the contractor until claims for material are paid, and the same becomes the subject of litigation, interest will be chargeable merely from the date of the judgment determining to whom the money should be paid.⁷⁵ If the city becomes liable to the contractor by reason of invalidity of the assessment, interest on the obligation accrues only from the date of the adjudication of invalidity,⁷⁶ nor is the city liable for interest for the time elapsing between the date of an illegal assessment and the date of a valid reassessment.⁷⁷ If under the contract the city is allowed a stated time within which to collect assessments, interest will not accrue until after the expiration of such time.⁷⁸ It has, however, been held that the city is not liable for interest upon money collected upon a special assessment because it is withheld from the contractor who does the work,⁷⁹ and that where the contractor is to be paid from special assessment when it is collected, he cannot recover interest as such on the contract price because of the delay of the city in collecting the assessment.⁸⁰

Bar of action.—Where a contractor is to be paid by assessment and the supreme court decides that no legal assessment can be made, the personal liability of the city becomes fixed and the statute of limitations begins to run not later than the date of such decisions. Connolly v. San Francisco, (Cal. 1893) 33 Pac. 1109. An action on warrants drawn on a special street improvement fund, brought within three years after notice that the city had diverted the fund by paying subsequent warrants drawn thereon, is not barred by limitations. Hemen v. Ballard, 40 Wash. 81, 82 Pac. 277. See, generally, LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

Necessary allegations.—The allegations must show a valid contract (Tipton v. Jones, 77 Ind. 307; Nash v. St. Paul, 11 Minn. 174; Knapp v. Hoboken, 38 N. J. L. 371; Galveston v. Devlin, 84 Tex. 319, 19 S. W. 395), and the facts fixing the liability of the city (McBean v. San Bernardino, 96 Cal. 183, 31 Pac. 49; Louisville v. Muldoon, 94 Ky. 462, 22 S. W. 847, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 233), such as the illegality of the assessment (Kearney v. Covington, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 339) or the default evidence,⁸³ instructions,⁸⁴ questions for jury,⁸⁵ etc., are applicable. If both the city and property-owners are liable, they may be joined in one action for the cost of an improvement.⁸⁶ If the ministerial officers of a city neglect to take the proper steps to lay and collect an assessment, the remedy of the contractor is as a rule mandamus to compel them to do so.⁸⁷

10. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF THIRD PERSONS—a. In General. Property-owners liable to assessment cannot sue to enforce a contract for improvements;⁸⁸ nor of the city in collecting the same (Raisch v. San Francisco, 80 Cal. 1, 22 Pac. 22; Kearney v. Covington, supra). A complaint on a contract for labor and materials furnished in grading a street and constructing a gutter need not allege that the grading and construction had been authorized by law. Roehring v. Hnebschmann, 34 Wis. 185. Nor is it necessary to allege that payment of plaintiff's compensation had been provided for as required by statute, where the contract is set out in full and shows the means by which plaintiff is to be paid. Houston v. Potter, (Tex. Civ. App. 1906) 91 S. W. 389. But it is necessary to show that a statutory notice has been given. Morgan v. Guttenburg, 40 N. J. L. 394. An allegation that certain work was performed with the "knowledge, consent and direction" of the city sufficiently states a cause of action. Nagle v. McMurray, 84 Cal. 539, 24 Pac. 107; Ryan v. Coldwater, 46 Kan. 242, 26 Pac. 675.

Common counts.—Where a public improvement has been completed and accepted and is in use, and nothing remains to be done under the contract except for the city to pay the amount due, a recovery of such amount may be had under the common counts, although special counts filed with the common counts are insufficient. Chicago v. Duffy, 218 Ill. 242, 75 N. E. 912.

Fraud.—Where the question of the amount due a contractor has been submitted for arbitration to a municipal board, it is proper to allege bad faith on the part of such board and to show facts substantiating such allegation. Burnham v. Milwaukee, 69 Wis. 379, 34 N. W. 389.

Admissions.—In an action to recover sums of money due the contractor, as incident to the construction of a sewer, an allegation in the answer of a village that the contractor had been paid in full the amount due under his contract was not an admission that the necessary assessment had been levied and paid. Harrison v. New Brighton, 110 N. Y. App. Div. 267, 97 N. Y. Suppl. 246.

83. See, generally, EVIDENCE. And see West Chicago Park Com'rs v. Barber, 62 Ill. App. 103 (holding the certificate of the engineer of a board of park commissioners admissible); Maier v. Evansville Bd. of Public Works, 151 Ind. 197, 51 N. E. 233; Detroit v. Robinson, 38 Mich. 108 (holding the advertisement, bid, contract, and previous correspondence, showing what the parties understood the amount to be withheld on the contract would be, were admissible); Goodrich v. Detroit, 12 Mich. 279 (holding evidence insufficient to show negligence in collecting an assessment); Mulholland v. New York, 113 N. Y. 631, 20 N. E. 856 (holding evidence sufficient to support verdict for partial compensation of an inspector); Weston v. Syracuse, 82 Hun (N. Y.) 67, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 186 (holding evidence as to bribery in securing the contract properly rejected where an investigation of the complaint of bribery had previously been made).

Burden of proof.—Plaintiff is bound to show performance. Hartupee v. Pittsburgh, 97 Pa. St. 107.

Excuse for non-production.—The obstinate refusal of an inspector to furnish certification of the completion of the work will excuse its non-production in an action against the city. Guidet v. New York, 36 N. Y. Super. Ct. 557.

Fraud.—In support of a defense that the letting of a contract was fraudulent, evidence may be admitted to show that the contract price was grossly in excess of the real value of the work. Nelson v. New York, 131 N. Y. 4, 29 N. E. 814. On an issue whether a contract for a municipal improvement was obtained through fraud, the opinion of a witness that the contract was not honest is inadmissible. Maier v. Evansville Bd. of Public Works, 151 Ind. 197, 51 N. E. 233.

84. See, generally, TRIAL. And see Elgin v. Joslyn, 136 Ill. 525, 26 N. E. 1090 [affirming 36 Ill. App. 301] (holding that an instruction that a contractor who bids for work is bound only by the specifications shown him at the time he makes his bid upon which his estimates are based is not contradictory but is properly qualified by another instruction that if any general specifications were shown and he executed the contract and agreed thereto, they became part of his contract and he is bound thereby); Dady v. New York, 57 Hun (N. Y.) 456, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 819.

St. 133, 62 Atl. 642. holding that where there is a dispute between a city and a municipal contractor as to the amount due for grading a street, and the city agreed to settle the same by measuring and certifying the work, but did not do so, the question of the amount was for the jury.

may they enjoin a contractor from proceeding in violation of the terms of his contract.⁸⁹ A person injured through the negligence of a contractor is not entitled to a lien on funds retained by the city to indemnify it against possible suits for damages.⁹⁰ A contractor who conforms to the official grade in paving a street is not liable to abutting owners for damages caused thereby.⁹¹ If a city releases an accepted bidder, and on readvertisement accepts a bid higher than that of the released contractor, property-owners assessed may recover from the city the difference between the first and subsequent bid.⁹²

b. Sureties of Contractor. Where a contract is abandoned and the work is completed by sureties of the contractor, such sureties will be entitled, as against creditors of the contractor to be first paid, out of available funds, for the reasonable cost of the work.⁹³

c. Subcontractors, Materialmen, and Laborers. A provision in a contract that the city may retain money due the contractor until claims for material and labor have been paid does not create a right of action in their favor against the city in case the contractor is paid in full;⁹⁴ but where funds are so retained by the city, the right of materialmen or laborers to claim the same is superior to that of the contractor or of other creditors.⁹⁵ If under the provision of the contract claims must be filed with a designated officer within a specified time, the city has no right to deduct from the contract price the amount of a claim filed after the expiration of such time,⁹⁶ or with other than the designated officer;⁹⁷ and unless the contract expressly provides for the application of such funds to the payment of claims, the same may not be made by the municipality.⁹⁸ Modern improvement statutes frequently provide that municipalities shall retain a stated percentage of the contract price until claims for labor and material are paid, such claims being made a lien on the funds so retained.⁹⁹ The vesting of a lien depends on

Persons entitled to liens.—A manufacturer of iron who furnishes iron pipes to a contractor for the construction of city water-works may be regarded as a "mechanic, merchant, or trader," who is employed on or furnishes material. Camden Iron Works v. Camden, 60 N. J. Eq. 211, 47 Atl. 220. In Ohio it is held that one who in another state sells and delivers to a contractor materials to be used by him in constructing a public improvement in Ohio is entitled to the same rights under the mechanic's lien laws of the state as one who sells and delivers materials within the state. Mack v. Degraff, etc., Quarries, 57 Ohio St. 463, 49 N. E. 697, 63 Am. St. Rep. 729. If the claim is assignable, the lien may be enforced by an assignee. *James P. Hall Incorporated Co. v. compliance with the terms of the statute,¹ more particularly with regard to the manner of filing claims,² and the giving of notice thereof.³ Where liens are filed at the same time they are entitled to share pro rata.⁴ A lien attaches from the filing of notice whether the work be completed by the contractor or not.⁵ The assignee of the contractor may give a statutory undertaking to discharge liens.⁶ Where a lien has expired it cannot be extended by any act of the municipality.⁷ Although the statute provides that failure to retain money against which claims have been filed will render the responsible officer liable on his official bond, the statutory remedy is not exclusive, but the lien may be enforced in equity.⁸

Fund to which lien attaches.—In case nothing remains due a subcontractor at the time a lien for material furnished to him is filed, the lien attaches to no part of the contract price. Garrison v. Borio, 61 N. J. Eq. 236, 47 Atl. 1060. Where it is provided that final payment shall be made only on completion of the work, there is no indebtedness to which a lien of the contractor's creditors may attach until completion. Jones v. Savage, 24 Misc. (N. Y.) 158, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 308. A mechanic's lien for materials for walks laid or repaired under a general contract to lay all the sidewalks within a certain district only attaches to the fund which the lienor's material aided to create. Coney v. Dorsey, 8 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 642, 3 Ohio N. P. 162.

Nature of work.—A statute affording a lien to any person furnishing material or labor to any contractor for a public improvement has been held to apply to work done on a public school building. Spalding Lumber Co. v. Brown, 171 Ill. 487, 49 N. E. 725.

Where a municipal lien has not been discharged when an action is brought by a subcontractor to foreclose the same, the court in such action, after the lien has been discharged, has jurisdiction to render a personal judgment in favor of plaintiffs against the contractor,⁹ and where an action for the foreclosure of a mechanic's lien is dismissed on the ground that there was no lien to be foreclosed, for the reason that a bond had been given, the judgment of dismissal is not a bar to an action in equity by the lienor against the debtor and surety to enforce a money judgment against them for the amount of the claim.¹⁰ Under a charter provision actions for the benefit of materialmen must be commenced within a certain time after acceptance of the work by the city. An action by a subcontractor is not prematurely brought, although the work has not been accepted, where the contractor has completed the contract and received his money.¹¹

D. Damages — 1. EXISTENCE OF LIABILITY IN GENERAL — a. General Rules.¹² In the absence of constitutional or legislative provisions a municipality is not liable for consequential injuries to property, resulting from the construction of duly authorized public improvements, where there has been no negligence or want of care or skill.¹³ But in case the municipality fails to execute the work in a careful and skilful manner it is liable for negligence or unskilfulness resulting in damage to property, where no fault of the owner contributes thereto.¹⁴ And the rule as to liability is the same as if the work were being constructed by an individual in a similar case.¹⁵ The rule that a municipal corporation is not impliedly liable for the incidental injuries to property resulting from the erection and maintenance of improvements where the premises are in no manner invaded does not, however, prevent liability for the direct injuries to private property caused by a corporate act in the nature of a trespass or nuisance.¹⁶

b. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions — (1) IN GENERAL.¹⁷ Where there has been an actual invasion of private property by a municipality, in the construction of a public improvement, damages therefor may be recovered under the provisions of the constitution of the United States, and of the several states, against the taking of property for public use without compensation.¹⁸ And in some jurisdictions, under constitutional provisions providing for compensation where private property is injured or damaged, recovery may be had even for consequential injuries, although there is no taking.¹⁹ Independent of these constitutional provisions with relation to the power of eminent domain, provision is frequently made by statute for the payment of damages to persons injured by the construction of public improvements, and a complete scheme provided both for the determination of the amount of such damages and for the raising of a fund from which they shall be paid, either by assessment upon the property benefited or otherwise.²⁰ Such statutes will be applied to improvements made under other acts, where both acts may be given full effect without conflicting with each other.²¹ So in case the plans are not inconsistent it has been held that a special act for the improvement of specific streets, which provides a plan for making assessments and awards of damages, is not repealed by a general law providing a general plan for the improvement of streets generally.²² A city charter conferring on the inhabitants the special franchise of making their own laws with regard to the opening and laying out of streets is, so far as it extends, a grant of sovereignty; and such laws, when in accordance with it, must prevail within the territorial limits of such city, to the exclusion of the general laws of the state, where they are repugnant.²³ Where a city has been incorporated by legislative act, and there is nothing to show that it has availed itself of the general laws regulating municipal corporations and their classifications, it must be presumed that the city is governed by its special charter, and proceedings by it to condemn private property for public use must conform to that charter.²⁴ A statute authorizing a public improvement,

In Pennsylvania all former acts relating to the opening of streets, widening or straightening the same, in all the cities of the state, were repealed by the act of May 16, 1891, Pub. Laws 75, providing that where private property is taken for street purposes the damages should be assessed by a jury of three freeholders. In re Market St., 2 Pa. Dist. 385; Whittaker v. which constitutes an exercise of the police power of the state, is not unconstitutional as depriving individuals of property without due process of law, for the reason that it does not provide compensation to individuals who may be inconvenienced.²⁵ Statutes which have reference to the recovery of damages for a lawful taking or injury of property and provide a method for the ascertainment of damages do not apply where the proceedings for the making of the improvement are unlawful.²⁶

(11) *RETROACTIVE OPERATION.*²⁷ A constitutional provision affording compensation for damages resulting from improvements may be made retroactive,²⁸ as may a statute for the same purpose, where the intent of the legislators is so expressed.²⁹ Where a city has not proceeded regularly as prescribed by law, and for that reason becomes liable for consequential damages caused by an improvement, the right to such damages cannot be taken away by a subsequent statute.³⁰ While the right to damages accruing from the failure of a city to proceed regularly in the construction of an improvement cannot be taken away by a subsequent statute, such a statute may provide for a reassessment of the amount of benefits secured to the lot owner and which he should pay to the city.³¹

c. Illegal or Unauthorized Improvements. Where the making of an improvement is not authorized either by statute or charter or as incident to the exercise of the corporate rights or performance of the corporate duties of the municipality the municipality is not liable in damages.³² But where a municipal corporation acts unlawfully in the exercise of a power which it possesses it is liable for the resulting damages.³³ But a municipal corporation is not to be deemed a trespasser and liable as such when the improvement of a street is ordered pursuant to an accepted plan and by a duly enacted ordinance, because there is some defect in the manner of awarding and evidencing the contract.³⁴ A city cannot be liable for damages created by a street improvement, unless it is shown that it in some manner counseled or authorized the work or ratified it after it was done.³⁵ But where an act is simply an exercise of the authority of municipal officers, mere approval of the wrong is usually held sufficient.³⁶ Where there is power to pass an ordinance or undertake an improvement, an irregular or defective exercise of the power is not a protection to the city.³⁷

d. Estoppel of Municipality to Deny Authority or Allege Irregularity. Where the authorities of a city construct an improvement and a right of action accrues to property-owners, the city may not defeat recovery by setting up defects and irregularities in its proceedings.³⁸

e. Negligence as to Plans.³⁹ A municipal corporation is not liable for mere errors of judgment as to the plan of a public improvement,⁴⁰ but in some jurisdictions it may be liable for negligence in devising a plan as well as for negligence in executing it.⁴¹

f. Agreements Between Officers and Owners. A municipality will not be bound by an unauthorized promise of its agents to compensate property-owners for damages arising from the construction of an improvement;⁴² and where, to facilitate the extension of a street, repairs are made on a building by a municipal agent in pursuance of an unauthorized agreement, the municipality will not be liable in damages for the fall of the building through the unskillfulness of such agent;⁴³ but acting within its powers, the council may make binding agreements for compensating property-owners for injuries resulting from public works.⁴⁴

g. Discontinuance or Abandonment of Improvement. If the city abandons an improvement, after all acts required for the taking of property have been performed, it will be liable to owners for the damages assessed; ⁴⁵ but until final confirmation, the city may discontinue proceedings without liability; ⁴⁶ except for loss caused by its wrongful acts or unreasonable delay.⁴⁷

2. KIND OF IMPROVEMENT — a. Construction of Improvement or Repair of Streets and Ways in General. In the absence of constitutional or legislative provision, an action will not lie for consequential damages resulting to property from the improvement of streets, in a careful manner, pursuant to legal authority,⁴⁸ unless property be actually invaded or taken.⁴⁹

b. Alteration of Course or Width of Street. By statute in some states provision is made for the compensation of any person damaged by the closing or alteration of streets,⁵⁰ but an act providing damages for laying out or vacating does not apply to widening streets.⁵¹ A charter provision for payment of damages on the alteration of a street, to one through whose premises the street runs, does not give a right of action to owners of property which does not abut on the street.⁵²

c. Change of Grade of Streets — (1) IN GENERAL. to damages for injury to property, although there be no actual taking, is to be found in a number of states, and may be invoked by one whose property is injured by a change of grade.⁵⁷ Such statutes will be construed with reference to other statutes upon the subject of public improvements,⁵⁸ and will not be given a retrospective operation in the absence of clear expression,⁵⁹ although damages may be claimed under the provisions of an act which went into effect after the adoption of an ordinance establishing a changed grade but before such change was actually made.⁶⁰ One asserting a right to damages from a change of grade must bring himself clearly within the terms of the statute affording such right.⁶¹ A

Suppl. 683, holding that a statute providing that whenever the grade of any street in an incorporated village shall be changed so as to injure or damage property situated thereon, the owner may apply to the supreme court for the appointment of commissioners, is applicable to a village, although inconsistent with the local village charter previously enacted.

Amendments of charter.—Although the charter of a city contains no provision for the payment of damages to those injured by the grading of streets, an amendment which provides for such damages and for their assessment is germane to the general purpose of the charter. Sligh v. Grand Rapids, 84 Mich. 497, 47 N. W. 1093.

General operation of law.—Where the charter of a city provides that the owner of any lot injured by the alteration of a grade shall be entitled to compensation, the city cannot be authorized by a special act to change the grade of streets within a limit of district, without compensation for consequential injuries. Anderton v. Milwaukee, 82 Wis. 279, 52 N. W. 95, 15 L. R. A. 830, holding that such a statute was violative of the constitution of the United States in denying the lot owners in the specific district the equal protection of the laws.

Repeal.—A special act providing for damages is not repealed by a subsequent improvement statute in which no provision for damages is made. People v. Green, 64 N. Y. 606; In re Smiddy, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 949; Seaman v. Washington, 172 Pa. St. 467, 33 Atl. 756; Haubner v. Milwaukee, 124 Wis. 153, 101 N. W. 930, 102 N. W. 578.

Abolition of grade crossing.—A statute providing for the determination of damages upon the separation of the grade of a street and a railroad, at a crossing, applies as well to a case where a highway is for the first time being extended across a railroad as to a case where the grades at an existing crossing are being altered. Harper v. Detroit, 110 Mich. 427, 68 N. W. 265. Where a statute providing damages upon a separation of grades, where a street crosses a railroad, contemplates an award of damages in gross and not merely those that have already accrued to the abutting owners, the same rule will be applied in an action against the city to recover damages for its failure to proceed in accordance with the statute. Harper v. Detroit, supra.

57. See EMINENT DOMAIN, 15 Cyc. 664.

58. Where there is no difficulty in the harmonious and concurrent working of both statutes, a general statute providing for the determination of damages to abutting owners, resulting from a change of the grade of a street, is not repealed or superseded by a law providing the procedure in such cases, when the grade of a street is changed by the authorities of a village. Torge v. Salamanca, 176 N. Y. 324, 68 N. E. 626, holding that Laws (1897), c. 414, §§ 159, 342, subd. 4, do not supersede or repeal Laws (1883), c. 113, as amended by Laws (1884), c. 281, and Laws (1894), c. 172.

Grade crossing acts.—A statute providing the procedure in case of a change of the grade or widening of a street incident to the abolition of a railroad grade crossing has been held not to interfere with the right of a property-owner, where part of a lot is taken to widen a street, to compensation for the damage to the residue of the lot, but the entire amount of compensation should be awarded in the proceedings by the grade crossing commissioners. Matter of Baltimore Grade Crossing Com'rs, 6 N. Y. App. Div. 327, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 520. See also Torge v. Salamanca, 176 N. Y. 324, 68 N. E. 626.

61. In re Allen's Lane, 143 Pa. St. 414, 22 Atl. 673 (holding that a statute providing for damages in case of any alteration that may be made of the street grades of any portion of a city does not apply to alterations of grades which are established after its adoption); Walish v. Milwaukee, 95 Wis. 16, 69 N. W. 818 (holding that under a statute providing that where the grade of a street should thereafter be established and the street should have been actually graded, the owner of any lot damaged by a subsequent municipality may so act in conjunction with a street railroad company as to render itself liable for an alteration in the grade made by the company.⁶² But the act of a municipality in granting a street railroad company the right to build its railroad along certain streets is not an order for specific repairs or for a change of grade, within the meaning of a statute providing a right to damages in favor of a person injured in such cases.⁶³

(ii) NATURE AND EXTENT OF CHANGE. To render the city liable there must have been an actual physical change of grade;⁶⁴ and where a street has fallen away the city is not liable for raising it to the established grade;⁶⁵ or for subsequently bringing a street to the grade that had been established at the time of dedication.⁶⁶ It is no defense that a change brought the grade to a line with the natural surface of the street,⁶⁷ or that it enabled the city to construct a system of sewers calculated to abate a nuisance.⁶⁸ An act providing for compensation for injury resulting from a change of street grade will include a change in the grade of a sidewalk;⁶⁹ and liability will attach under such an act whether the entire width of the street or only a part thereof is graded.⁷⁰

(iii) ESTABLISHMENT AND LEGALITY OF STREET OR GRADE. It is sometimes held that if a street has never been legally laid or a grade thereof lawfully established, there can be no change of grade within the meaning of an act providing for damages;⁷¹ but authority can be found for the doctrine that a grade may be sufficiently established by user to warrant award of damages for a formal alteration of grade should be entitled to compensation, it was necessary that the street be actually graded to the established grade to entitle the owner to compensation). See also Bellis v. Flemington, 69 N. J. L. 349, 55 Atl. 300.

The erection of a building is under some statutes a condition to the right to damages resulting from a change in grade. Manufacturers' Land, etc., Co. v. Camden, 73 N. J. L. 263, 63 Atl. 5.

A change of grade by implication has been held sufficient to justify an award of damages. Conklin v. Keokuk, 73 Iowa 343, 35 N. W. 444, holding that where one of two parallel streets was lowered in grade, damages could be recovered for injuries to property fronting upon a cross street, since the lowering of one of the parallel streets had the effect of changing the grade of connecting streets between them.

62. Clark v. Elizabeth, 61 N. J. L. 565, 40 Atl. 616, 737; Lewis v. Homestead, 194 Pa. St. 199, 45 Atl. 123 (holding that an ordinance, although entitled as authorizing a railroad company to change the grade of its tracks across a street, was also an ordinance for a change in the grade of the street necessarily required by the change in the grade of the railroad); Denison, etc., Suburban R. Co. v. James, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 358, 49 S. W. 660 (holding that where a railroad company raises the grade of a street, through a contractor, pursuant to authority granted to it or to the contractor by a city, acting under the power conferred by charter to alter the grade of streets, the city alone is liable to an abutter for damages resulting from the change). But see Bancroft v. San Diego, 120 Cal. 432, 52 Pac. 712, holding that in an action expressly based on an alteration in the grade of a street made by the city, a recovery could not be had for damages resulting from the construction of a street railroad, although the railroad had constructed its road-bed in reference to a changed grade in compliance with a requirement that its track should be constructed on the official grade.

change of the same by the city.⁷² Under the provisions of some statutes, in order that an abutting owner may recover damages from a change in grade, he must have made improvements with reference to an established grade thereafter changed.⁷³

(IV) ESTABLISHMENT, OR CHANGE FROM NATURAL SURFACE. In the absence of constitutional or legislative provision a municipality will not be liable for establishing the grade of a street above or below the natural surface;⁷⁴ but an act providing damages for injury caused by a change of grade will usually apply to an original establishment of grade above or below the natural surface;⁷⁵ and in Ohio, where damages are allowed in the absence of statute, it is held that the city will be liable for injury caused by an original establishment of grade unless the grade is so reasonable that a property-owner might have anticipated its establishment and improved his property accordingly.⁷⁶

d. Vacation of Streets. Property-owners injured by the vacation of a public street are usually regarded as having a remedy under the constitutional provisions relating to the exercise of the power of eminent domain.⁷⁷ But particular provision as to damages in such cases is sometimes made by statute.⁷⁸ Such a statute has been held inapplicable to streets which have never been laid out,⁷⁹ and will afford a remedy only from an injury which is a direct result of the vacation and which differs from that sustained by the general public.⁸⁰ The opening of a street so as to include an alley cannot be regarded as damaging property-owners by depriving them of the use of the alley, where they have the free and uninterrupted use of the ground for the same purposes after the opening of the street as before.⁸¹

e. Structures or Other Works in Streets.⁸² While the erection of structures and other works in public streets is in some jurisdictions regarded as imposing an additional servitude for which an adjoining property-owner may be compensated,⁸³ structures in the street which are such as a municipality has authority to make cannot be regarded as nuisances so as to afford a common-law right of action;⁸⁴ and in any event the property-owner cannot recover damages for an injury which he sustains in common with the public generally.⁸⁵ A city has been held not to be liable for damages resulting from the construction of approaches to an overhead railroad crossing,⁸⁶ or for obstructions of a street or river in constructing a tunnel to afford passage for the street.⁸⁷ But on the other hand the occupation of a street for its entire width by a viaduct approach on a higher grade than the street has been held equivalent to a change of grade.⁸⁸

f. Sewers, Drains, and Watercourses.⁸⁹ Unless negligent in the prosecution of the work,⁹⁰ a municipality will not be liable for injury to property resulting from the construction of a sewer;⁹¹ even though the same is constructed along a public way lying beyond the municipal borders.⁹²

g. Levees and Dams. A city may protect its territory from overflow by construction of a levee, and in the absence of negligence will not be liable to one who owns a lot between the levee and the river.⁹³ So, where in the erection of an improvement the construction of a coffer-dam becomes necessary, the city is not liable for consequential damages, where the work is properly and expeditiously done.⁹⁴ receive the full value thereof.¹ On the opening of a street the jury may consider that the market value of land will be affected by reason of the cost of other street improvements likely to be charged upon it.² Where the rule is adopted that the measure of damages is the change in market value, specific items of injury can be considered only in determining the difference in market value, not as the basis of specific awards of damages.³ An abutting owner has no right to damages for a change of grade where the property is left as convenient of access as before and there is no depreciation in its market value,⁴ or in case the market value of the property, including the use to which it may be devoted, will be enhanced.⁵

b. Time of Estimation. The right to damages from the vacation of a street is fixed at the time of the vacation, and a person is not deprived of his rights by the fact that he afterward makes a subdivision of his property.⁶ Damages to buildings occasioned by street-opening proceedings are to be determined as far as possible as to the time when the street is actually opened.⁷ Under a statute permitting an owner to elect whether he will pay the expenses of an improvement and retain his property, or surrender his property to the city for a fair compensation, the owner is entitled only to the value of the land at the time of the taking, making due allowance for the improvement, and he cannot recover for previous loss or inconvenience.⁸

c. Speculative Damages. A person injured by a change of grade is not entitled to recover speculative damages,⁹ and conjectural future profits may not be set up as an item of damage.¹⁰ In assessing damages for the opening of streets, uncertainty concerning the city's future policy as to the opening of future streets and their grade cannot be considered.¹¹

d. Remote Damages. The injuries which may be recovered must be the direct and proximate consequences of the improvement.¹² So in assessing the damages for an improvement, damages which result from the maintenance of such

Grade crossing removal.—Where by agreement of a railroad company and a city a grade crossing is abolished, through the raising of the railroad tracks and lowering of the street, one whose property does not abut upon the street cannot recover as damages occasioned by the change of grade the increased cost of moving freight to and from his building and cars upon the railroad track, since such injury is effected wholly by the elevation of the tracks. In re Tucker, etc., Sts., 166 Pa. St. 336, 31 Atl. 117.

improvement in an improper manner cannot be recovered.¹³ Upon a change of grade a lot owner cannot recover the depreciation by the effect upon the appearance of his building of changes wholly external to his premises.¹⁴

e. Particular Elements of Damage—(i) INJURIES TO BUILDINGS AND IMPROVEMENTS. Under the statutes of some jurisdictions damages will be awarded only with reference to the realty, without regard to the improvements erected thereon.¹⁵ In other jurisdictions the improvements alone will be considered,¹⁶ buildings only being regarded as improvements in some cases.¹⁷ While in still other jurisdictions the depreciation of the entire value of the property including the improvements is held to be the measure of damages.¹⁸ If a building or a part thereof projects into the street either wrongfully or under a revocable license it may be injured or ordered removed by the city without liability for compensation.¹⁹ Damages to improvements are not necessarily proportionate to the damage to the land itself.²⁰

(ii) COST OF GRADING OR OTHERWISE ADJUSTING ABUTTING PREMISES. The fact that an abutting owner will be put to expense in cutting down or filling his lot to conform to a change of grade does not in itself create a right of action against the city;²¹ but where damages are secured by statute, the cost of adjusting premises to the changed grade may be considered.²²

(iii) DESTRUCTION OF SIDEWALKS AND SHADE TREES. The destruction of a sidewalk and of shade trees set out between the sidewalk and roadway should be considered in determining the decrease in value of property caused by a change of the grade of a street;²³ and in the construction of any improvement, the city will be liable for unnecessarily removing or negligently injuring an adjoining owner's shade trees.²⁴ A statute awarding a right to damage for change of grade in a highway includes such as may result from a change of grade in sidewalks.²⁵

(iv) INTERFERENCE WITH ACCESS. The fact that a change of grade renders access to abutting property difficult will not, in the absence of statute, create a right of action against the city;²⁶ but some cases hold that if the means of access are practically cut off the city will be liable.²⁷

(v) REMOVAL OF LATERAL SUPPORT. Although there are cases to the contrary,²⁸ the general rule seems to be that in constructing public improvements a municipality will not be liable for injury to adjoining property caused by the removal of lateral support,²⁹ unless such injury is due to negligence in the construction of the work;³⁰ but a city has been held liable for damages to adjoining land resulting from the withdrawal of quicksand from beneath its surface in the course of construction of a sewer.³¹

(vi) INJURY TO BUSINESS OR TEMPORARY LOSS OF USE OF PROPERTY. Under some statutes recovery may be had for the loss of the rental value of buildings during the work of changing the grade or during the time taken to adjust buildings to a new grade.³² But as a rule damages may not be recovered for injury to business or for the temporary loss of the use of property during the construction of a public improvement if the work is prosecuted with reasonable diligence;³³

and in assessing damages for the appropriation of property the business good-will of the owner is not such property as may be included in the assessment.³⁴ Where there has been a wrongful delay in the execution of the work, an abutting owner may recover the loss of his rents during delay.³⁵ Diversion of traffic from a street is not an element of damage,³⁶ nor can loss of business be considered unless it affects the market value of the property;³⁷ but it is sometimes held that damages may be recovered for a permanent loss of business due directly to an obstruction in the street.³⁸

(vii) INTEREST. As analogous to the rule in eminent domain proceedings³⁹ the owner of property injured by a street improvement is, in some jurisdictions, held to be entitled to interest from the time at which damage accrues.⁴⁰ But in other jurisdictions this rule is not followed and interest cannot be recovered where the damages remain unliquidated either by agreement or action.⁴¹ By express provision in some statutes, in a suit upon an award of damages, plaintiff is entitled to recover interest from the date of the award.⁴² In case the owner has remained in full possession of the rents and profits, it has been held that he is not entitled to interest upon damages in street opening proceedings, where there has been a delay in their payment.⁴³

(viii) IN CASE OF NEGLIGENCE IN MAKING IMPROVEMENT. Where grading and paving have been done in a negligent way, recovery may be had for injury to the use and occupation of abutting premises.⁴⁴ Where recovery is sought for the negligent way in which an improvement is constructed by a municipality, the person injured may recover the amounts paid by him for repairs in case such repairs are necessitated by the act of the city and are reasonable.⁴⁵ Where there has been negligence in the making of a permanent grade the measure of the owner's damages is the depreciation in the value of the property caused by the construction and permanent maintenance of the grade;⁴⁶ but where the injury is in the nature of a continuous trespass, such as piling dirt upon the land, the measure of damage is not the difference in value before and after the trespass, but only such damages may be recovered as have accrued at the commencement of the suit.⁴⁷

accruing to property by reason of an improvement may be set off against damages,⁴⁹ if such benefits are special and not in common with those resulting to property in general;⁵⁰ but where an abutting owner is assessed for the cost of the improvement, the only benefit that can be set off is that which is in excess of the assessment levied against him;⁵¹ and the city is liable for damages caused by an improvement, even though subsequent improvements more than offset such damages;⁵² and if in the construction of an improvement, abutting land is negligently injured, it is no defense that the property was benefited by the improvement.⁵³ Where the city is liable for interest on unpaid damages, it may set off interest due from property-owners on unpaid assessments for benefits.⁵⁴

(II) NATURE OF BENEFIT. The benefit which may be made a matter of set-off or deduction from the damage must result directly from the improvement,⁵⁵

Increase in market value.—The measure of damages which may be recovered by a property-owner from a city for opening a street along her property is the difference in the market value of the property with the improvement and without it; and the city is not entitled to offset any future increase in the value of part of the property, in common with the public, because of the improvement. Improvements by lot owners.—In an action for damages for change of grade, evidence of benefit accruing from improvements made and must differ from that received by property generally;⁵⁶ hence the city cannot set off a subsequent increase in value common to the entire neighborhood because of the abatement of a nuisance by the construction of an improvement;⁵⁷ but the fact that other lots are benefited in the same way does not prevent the benefit from being special;⁵⁸ and if the value of a lot is increased, although in common with other property, such increased value may be set off.⁵⁹ If property injured is the residence of the owner, benefits arising from its increased value for business purposes may not be considered;⁶⁰ nor may benefits accruing to one lot be offset against damages caused to another and separate lot of the same owner;⁶¹ but a continuous tract of land belonging to one person, although on different sides of the street, is sometimes treated as one parcel in estimating damages and benefits.⁶²

(iii) INVALIDITY OF PROCEEDINGS FOR IMPROVEMENT. Where an improvement is made under void proceedings, actual damage to property may be recovered without regard to appreciation in value.⁶³

g. Mitigation of Damages. In a suit for damages resulting from public improvements, the city may show facts in mitigation;⁶⁴ thus, where property is rendered inaccessible by a change of grade, the city may show that it has contracted for steps which will give access thereto;⁶⁵ but in an action for damages caused by construction of a bridge in the street, evidence of the pendency of a suit to widen the street was held inadmissible.⁶⁶

h. Inadequate or Excessive Damages. Unless the damages assessed are palpably inadequate or excessive they will not be set aside on these grounds.⁶⁷ injury to land, no part of which is taken.⁶⁸ A statute, the peculiar nature of which awards damages which may be remote and consequential and which are produced by a cause operating only indirectly upon the property, will not justify an award of damages to property outside of the boundaries which it defines.⁶⁹ But it has been held that a statute providing that the grade of a street shall not be changed without assessment and tender of the damages occasioned refers to damages to property outside the city limits as well as to that inside.⁷⁰

b. Non-Abutting Property. Under some statutes the right to damages is not confined to abutting owners but may be availed of by any person who sustains damage in his property.⁷¹ So recovery may be had for a change of grade, although the grade of the street upon which the property abuts is not changed,⁷² or where there has been a vacation of a street on which the property does not abut.⁷³ In other jurisdictions it is held that before a lot owner can recover damages for an obstruction or alteration in a street he must show that such obstruction or alteration is in that part of the street on which his lot abuts.⁷⁴ So where a lot owner

E. 312 (holding that under a statute which provides that upon the laying out or construction of a street regard shall be had to all damages done to persons injured, whether by taking their property or injuring it in any manner, the fact that the property does not abut upon the public way will not bar a recovery); Dana v. Boston, 170 Mass. 593, 49 N. E. 1013; Burr v. Leicester, 121 Mass. 241 (holding under a statute affording compensation to an owner of land adjoining a highway, for damages sustained by reason of raising, lowering, or other act done for the purpose of repairing such way, that the injury to be compensated is an injury to the particular estate by the repairing of the way generally; and that the making of an excavation in front of plaintiff's estate for the purpose of using the materials upon another portion of the way not adjacent to the estate may be an injury to the estate for which compensation may be had); Matter of Buffalo Grade Crossing Com'rs, 46 N. Removal of lateral support.—A person whose land does not abut upon the street, but which is so near to it that an excavation, by depriving it of lateral support, causes a portion of it to fall into the street, it has been held, may recover damages for the invasion of his property. Damkoehler v. Milwaukee, 124 Wis. 144, 101 N. W. 706. Where by the construction of a street a slide of land was occasioned which injured plaintiff, he may recover the damages occasioned, although his property does not abut immediately upon the street. *Keating v. In street-opening proceedings, one whose land is affected by grade changes of an intersecting street upon which his land abuts, and not by the grade of the new street, is not entitled to an award of damages. Matter of West Farms Road, 47 Misc. (N. Y.) 216, 95 N. Y. Suppl. 894.

A person owning contiguous lots abutting on different streets may, in the case of change of grade of one of such streets, recover only the damages to the lots abutting on the street the grade of which is changed. Lawrence v. Philadelphia, 154 Pa. St. 20, 25 Atl. 1079.

Illegal improvement.—The rule that a failure upon the part of a city to follow the prescribed course of procedure in the exercise of a power to grade will not authorize one whose property does not abut upon the street to recover damages. Damkoehler v. Milwaukee, 124 Wis. 144, 101 N. W. 706, holding that since no liability for the expense of grading could attach to premises separated from the street by a strip some five feet in width, which was destroyed by the grading, the owner could not rely upon any defect or irregularity in the proceeding as a ground for the recovery of damages.

claims that his lot has been rendered inaccessible by reason of an excavation in the street he must show that his lot abuts on the part of the street excavated.⁷⁵ It should be noted, however, that a non-abutting owner cannot recover for injuries which he sustains in common with the public at large, and which are not of the nature which may be termed special.⁷⁶ As a general rule an interference with a non-abutting owner's right of access to the public streets is a general damage for which there can be no recovery.⁷⁷ So where the street vacated is not necessary for the purpose of access to plaintiff's property he cannot recover, although his inconvenience may be greater in degree than that occasioned to the general public.⁷⁸ But it has been held that owners of property abutting on a street, although not upon the part thereof which has been vacated, may recover for the damages sustained by them in being cut off from the general system of streets in one direction.⁷⁹

e. Property of Persons Holding Licenses and Franchises to Use the Streets.⁸⁰

A company which has been authorized to lay its pipes in the streets of a city acquires no right to maintain them there, superior to the right of the city to construct public improvements, and the city is not liable in damages for interference with such pipes, where its rights are not unnecessarily, negligently, or unreasonably exercised.⁸¹ And a mere permission granted by a municipality to a private corporation to use its streets for certain purposes does not constitute a contract so as to make the municipality liable for damages in case a loss should result to the private corporation by reason of the installation of a rival system.⁸²

d. Buildings or Improvements Erected With Notice of Change of Grade. A city is not liable for injury caused to buildings by an establishment or change of grade if such buildings were erected after the decision to so establish or change the grade had become a matter of record.⁸³ Where the city is regarded as having a right to discontinue the proceedings at any time prior to the confirmation of the report of commissioners appointed to carry it out, the mere adoption of a plan for an improvement will not prevent a property-owner from erecting a building upon his land without regard to such plan, and afterward insisting that the damage to his improvements be estimated as they stand at the time when proceedings are had to estimate the damages generally.⁸⁴ But where the lines or corners of a street are fixed by statute, a person erecting improvements without regard to such established lines cannot recover for damages incurred by improvements being subsequently made in conformity therewith.⁸⁵

5. PERSONS ENTITLED TO DAMAGES—a. In General. In order to recover damages plaintiff must have either a legal or an equitable estate in the property injured.⁸⁶ The term "owner" in some statutes providing for damages is construed in a comprehensive sense to designate all parties interested.⁸⁷ Where land is taken for a street, the fact that the city pays part of the expense of the improvement does not deprive lot owners having an easement in the land from recovering compensation;⁸⁸ nor is it necessary to recovery that the lot owners' share of the cost has been fixed.⁸⁹

b. Mortgagors. If an injury to mortgaged property is sustained before the date of foreclosing sale, damages accrue to the owner and not the foreclosure purchaser.⁹⁰

Defective map.—The rule that persons who erect buildings upon the line of a street after the filing of a map establishing the grade thereof are not entitled to recover any damage done to their buildings in consequence of the subsequent gradation of the street in accordance with the grade thus established does not apply, unless the map filed clearly and unmistakably indicates the grade of the street, and, where it only indicates such grade by way of possible inference to be drawn from the grade fixed at the intersection of the street with other streets, the recovery of damages is not precluded. Matter

ordered will not preclude a purchaser's right to recover for injury sustained from the construction of the improvement after title passed to him.⁹² Where, however, a city engineer gave a property-owner an erroneous grade, and he built his house accordingly, it was held that the city was liable for damages caused by subsequently bringing the street to proper grade, only in favor of the owner to whom the erroneous information was given and not to a purchaser, even though he acquired title before the street was graded.⁹³

d. Lessees. A lessee of property injured by an improvement may under the statute be entitled to damages for injury to his occupancy,⁹⁴ or to his buildings annexed to the soil.⁹⁵ So where part of a lot, under lease, is taken for opening a street both the lessor and lessee may be entitled to compensation for the damage sustained by each of them.⁹⁶

e. Municipalities. A city cannot claim damages for injury caused by an improvement to property held by it for municipal purposes;⁹⁷ but it is proper to assess damages for land held by the city for school purposes,⁹⁸ and where streets were altered on petition of a county for the erection of a county building, the city was held entitled to damages for resulting injuries.⁹⁹

6. MUNICIPALITIES AND PERSONS LIABLE FOR DAMAGES — a. In General. Liability for damages resulting from a public improvement may be imposed upon the city by statute, although the improvement be ordered directly by the legislature.¹ It has been held that where a borough and a town have joined in making an improvement they may be liable for damages, either jointly or severally.² Under a statute providing that the cost of an improvement should be assessed on property benefited, damages may not be collected out of general municipal funds, but persons injured should compel collection of assessments to meet their claims.³ It is competent for the legislature to direct payment for an improvement from a general fund, and, where a special assessment has been levied, direct that the amounts paid thereon be refunded.⁴ If a change of grade is made by a railway company authorized to lay its tracks in a street, the city is sometimes held liable.⁵ A private person may be relieved from liability for his acts in grading a street, by the subsequent ratification of such act by the city.⁶ Where a city lowers a street to construct a subway under railroad tracks, it cannot defeat recovery on the theory that it was acting within its police powers where the result would be to defeat an express constitutional provision.⁷

b. Liability Between City and County. Where the county has power over streets within an incorporated town it will be liable under the constitution or statute for damages resulting from the exercise of its powers.⁸ In a few states the county is authorized by statute to lay out streets within municipal borders and to reimburse itself from the city for damages paid to property-owners,⁹ and under such a statute it is held that in a suit by a county against a city the latter cannot set up that the damages paid were excessive.¹⁰ But the fact that under a statute a county may be liable to the city for a portion of the cost of a street opening will not relieve the city from primary liability.¹¹ Nor will the fact that a county and not a borough was liable for the damages originally entailed in laying out a street prevent the borough from being liable in case it subsequently changes the grade thereof.¹²

c. Liability of Contractors. If the contractor keeps within the terms of his contract and performs the work with proper care and skill, he is not liable for damages resulting to contiguous property.¹³

7. ESTOPPEL, WAIVER, OR LOSS OF RIGHT—a. In General. A property-owner may by his acts be estopped to claim damages from a street improvement¹⁴ or he may waive such right.¹⁵ The mere fact that a plaintiff suffers work to proceed will not work an estoppel,¹⁶ and where a city without authority changes the grade of a street, abutting owners will not be estopped from claiming damages by the fact that they stood by and saw the work done;¹⁷ nor does the fact that an owner

Request to finish work.—Where a city establishes the grade of a street and fills only a part of it to the grade line, a request by an abutting owner that the grading be finished does not estop him to recover damages caused by establishing the grade. Hickman v. Kansas City, 120 Mo. 110, 25 S. W. 225. 41 Am. St. Rep. 684, 23 L. R. A. 658; Herzel v. Milwaukee, 39 Wis. 360.

Defective work.—Where a contract under which plaintiff allowed a city to build a sewer through plaintiff's land provided that the city should condemn all unsuitable work or material, plaintiff is not estopped, by acquiescing in the judgment of the city engineer in such matters until after the completion of the work, from claiming damages caused by defects subsequently revealed by actual test. Nashville v. Sutherland, 94 Tenn. 356, 29 S. W. 228.

E. 933, holding that where a property-owner waives damages on the laying out of a rural road, such waiver is effectual, even though the highway is not actually opened until after the territory embracing it has passed within the limits of an incorporated town.

Dedication of land for a street does not give the city the right to so construct it as to materially injure property. Louisville v. Harbin, 61 S. W. 1011, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1865.

Failure to appear before viewers and except will be deemed a waiver of objections to an assessment. In re Frederick St., 155 Pa. St. 623, 26 Atl. 773.

Qualified waiver.—Where a lot owner is induced to waive objection to the progress of the work of grading a street on the condition that the work should be done in a certain manner, and the work is not done as promised, the measure of the lot owner's damages is the loss sustained by him on account of the work not being done as promised. *Jeffersonville v. might have foreseen the necessity of a change of grade and improved his property accordingly estop him to recover damages.¹⁸ If an owner institutes suit against a lessee to recover an award paid the latter by the city, he thereby ratifies the action of the city in paying the award and is estopped from suing it for the same.¹⁹

b. Consent to Improvement. A property-owner who joins in a petition for an improvement is usually regarded as estopped from claiming damages resulting therefrom,²⁰ unless the injury is caused by negligence in the prosecution of the work,²¹ or the improvement made differs materially from that to which he consented.²² But the fact that an owner solicited the council to adopt certain methods in carrying on the work will not estop him from claiming damages for a wrongful grading,²³ and although an abutting owner secured such a modification of a grade as would cause less injury to his property, he will not be estopped to claim damages for the change actually made.²⁴

c. Conveyances, Agreements, and Release of Damages. On the opening of a street, damages cannot be claimed for land which has been dedicated to the public as a street;²⁵ but a person who conveys land to a city for the purpose of opening a street is not estopped from claiming damages for injury to his property from the grading of such street.²⁶ A property-owner is not estopped to claim damages resulting from the erection of a viaduct by the fact that he sold part of his lot to a railroad company which raised an embankment upon the same, thus rendering the viaduct necessary,²⁷ and an agreement by a grantee of land that he will grade in front of his lot when the grantor shall direct does not bar his claim for damage from grading done by the city.²⁸ Where an owner formally releases the city from illegality, he has assisted in their performance.

liability,²⁹ or impliedly does so by entering into an agreement with the contractor, he is usually held to have waived his claim against the city for damages.³⁰ A release of damages secured by misrepresentations on the part of city officials is not binding.³¹

d. Negligence of Owner in Protecting His Premises. If buildings on the line of an improvement are threatened with injury greatly in excess of the cost of protecting them, the owner is bound to make reasonable effort to protect them, and his damages should be measured by his expense in so doing.³²

e. Omission to File Claim Within Time Prescribed.³³ In the absence of statutory requirement a landowner is not bound to give notice of a claim for damages when notified of a proposed change in grade.³⁴ But an omission to file a claim for damages when prescribed by statute will constitute a waiver of the claim,³⁵ unless the city has neglected to give notice of the improvement as required by statute.³⁶ In the absence of statutory requirement, failure to appear before commissioners of assessment will not estop a property-owner from objecting to the confirmation of their report;³⁷ but delay for nearly a year after commencement of work to appear before the proper board and demand assessment of damages was held to constitute waiver of right to damages under the statute.³⁸

8. NECESSITY FOR PAYMENT BEFORE MAKING IMPROVEMENT OR ASSESSING BENEFITS — a. In General. It is sometimes held that payment of damages must precede the taking of property,³⁹ and that an owner is entitled to compensation as soon as the appropriation is decided on without waiting for the actual taking.⁴⁰ But where land is not taken,⁴¹ damages resulting to property from the construction of public improvements need not be assessed until completion of the work,⁴² unless the statute, as frequently is the case, provides for prepayment of damages.⁴³ Such a provision is not impliedly repealed by a subsequent act relating to specific improvements in which no such requirement is found,⁴⁴ but it will apply to a change of grade only when the change is made from a grade previously established by the city;⁴⁵ and it was held that the requirement of prepayment need not be followed where a town having fixed the grade of a street afterward became a city and changed the grade.⁴⁶

b. Effect of Appeal From Assessment of Damages. The effect of an appeal from an assessment of damages depends largely upon the provisions of the statute; where land is taken for an improvement an appeal sometimes vacates a decision to the extent that the owner is entitled to possession during his appeal;⁴⁷ but under other statutes the city may take possession upon giving bond;⁴⁸ and it has been held that no final assessment for benefits can be made while an appeal involving the question of damages is pending.⁴⁹

c. Restraining Improvement Until Payment of Damages. Unless prepayment of damages for injury to property is required by statute,⁵⁰ the city may not be restrained from making an improvement until damages have been assessed and paid;⁵¹ nor will injunction lie to restrain the use of land condemned for public purposes until compensation is paid if an adequate remedy exists at law;⁵² but where municipal power of taxation was so limited as not to be adequate to pay within a reasonable time damages caused by the opening of a street, such opening was enjoined until security for payment was given.⁵³

9. PROCEEDINGS FOR ASSESSMENT— a. In General. Where a specific mode of assessing damages for land taken or injured is prescribed by legislative enactment, the same must be pursued by the municipality;⁵⁴ but if the city and property-owners agree on the amount of damages there is no need to submit the matter to the tribunal provided by statute;⁵⁵ and if the council be empowered to fix damages summarily, a right of appeal being reserved, failure of a property-owner to appeal within the time fixed by statute will limit him to the amount assessed by the council.⁵⁶ All persons who sustain damages may usually be joined in one assessment,⁵⁷ but the damages and benefits resulting from separate works which do not form part of a continuous improvement cannot be assessed in the same proceeding;⁵⁸ and where the paving and grading of a street are separate acts the damages for each may be assessed at different times and the damages for grading may be assessed before the paving is done.⁵⁹ An assessment of damages and benefits should usually be made in the same proceeding.⁶⁰

Attempt to agree.—Where the city charter required that the highway committee should, if they were able, agree on the damages with the party whose land should be taken before applying to the commissioners for compensation, and it appeared that the chairman applied for that purpose to the president and treasurer of a college whose land was taken, both of whom replied that they were not authorized to act in the matter, the requirement was sufficiently complied with. Trinity College v. Hartford, 32 Conn. 452.

b. Authority of Officers. Authority to assess damages must be expressly conferred by legislative enactment,⁶¹ and will not be implied from power to make improvements;⁶² but where authority to make assessments is conferred on municipal officials, they act, in their proceedings, as the agents of the municipality,⁶³ and their decision is not reviewable by certiorari⁶⁴ except upon a question of jurisdiction.⁶⁵

c. Jurisdiction. As a general rule it may be stated that a court, in appointing commissioners or otherwise proceeding for the assessment of damages, is acting under a special and limited jurisdiction,⁶⁶ which may be exercised only by a court which is authorized by statute to proceed,⁶⁷ and where the facts essential to jurisdiction under the statute are shown.⁶⁸

d. Notice of Proceedings. Notice of proceedings to assess damages must be given to all parties interested or the assessment will be invalid.⁶⁹ Where the character of the notice is prescribed by statute the provision must be complied with,⁷⁰ and a notice which fails to state the place of meeting is insufficient.⁷¹ Failure to give notice merely affects the assessment of damages and does not invalidate the action of the city in making the improvement.⁷² A property-owner who has received notice is in no position to complain that other owners were not notified.⁷³ Where notice is not given, interested parties may petition for viewers to assess damages and need not open up the proceedings to present their claims.⁷⁴

e. Time For Proceedings. The time within which proceedings for assessment of damages may be begun is usually fixed by statute and a petition must be filed within that time;⁷⁵ but if no time is fixed by the statute, proceedings for damages will be barred only by force of the general statute of limitations.⁷⁶

f. Application. An application for assessment of damages must state with reasonable certainty the jurisdiction of the city in making the improvement,⁷⁷ the nature of the same,⁷⁸ the fact that injury has been sustained,⁷⁹ and the ownership of property injured.⁸⁰ Such an application, it has been held, may be signed for the owner by an agent.⁸¹

g. Evidence. The general rules of evidence will be applicable in proceedings to ascertain damages from public improvements;⁸² the burden is on the petitioner to prove his case,⁸³ and he may not do so by showing the damages allowed the same property for a prior improvement on a different street.⁸⁴ In estimating the difference in value before and after an improvement, witnesses may testify as to special items of damages, such as the cost of filling the lot,⁸⁵ or the expense of a retaining wall.⁸⁶ Evidence that buildings were erected with reference to a street as it was constructed is sufficient to show that they were erected to correspond to the established grade.⁸⁷

appointed, depends entirely upon legislative enactment.⁸⁹ Disinterested persons must be selected.⁹⁰ Failure to comply with the terms of the statute will invalidate assessment proceedings,⁹¹ hence where the statute directs the appointment of commissioners by ordinance, their appointment by resolution is void;⁹² but a requirement that the precept shall contain the names of all owners will be waived if the parties appear before the jury and make no objection to the irregularity.⁹³

1. Report or Award. The essentials of the report or award of a jury or commission to assess damages are frequently prescribed by statute,⁹⁴ and the award must be in substantial compliance with them.⁹⁵ It must be limited to the amount

Implied provision.—An act is not inoperative because there is no express provision for the appointment of a jury in the case of vacating a street, as the express command of the act that "it shall be the duty of juries selected to assess damages for the opening, widening, or vacating roads or streets," by assimilating the duties of juries for the opening and vacation of streets, necessarily implies the appointment in the latter cases under the system established in the former cases. In re Howard St., 142 Pa. St. 601, 21 Atl. 974.

Upon failure of agreement.—Where the statute provides for the appointment of appraisers only upon failure of the city and landowners to agree on damages, appraisers should not be appointed except upon failure of the city and landowners to so agree. Nichols v. Bridgeport, 23 Conn. 189, 60 Am. Dec. 636.

Constitutionality of provisions.—An act requiring the common council, in proceedings to take realty for the opening of streets, to nominate twelve freeholders, and to apply to the court for the appointment of three commissioners from the persons so nominated, and directing that the judge or recorder shall proceed to draw from the box containing, on separate ballots the names of the persons so nominated, the names of three persons, who shall be the commissioners, is violative of the constitutional provision that when private property is to be taken for public use compensation must be made by a jury or by not less than three commissioners appointed by a court of record. Menges v. Albany, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 244.

Continuance.—A nunc pro tunc continuance of a jury to assess damages for the opening of a street, made more than three months after their appointment or a previous continuance, is of no effect. In re Hansberry St., 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 590, 43 Wkly. Notes Cas. 13.

Qualification.—The members of the board of assessors of New York city are not required to be sworn in a proceeding to assess damage caused by a change of street grade, but their general oath of office is sufficient. People v. Gilon, 76 Hun (N. Y.) 346, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 704 [affirmed in 148 N. Y. 763, 43 N. E. 989].

Reappointment.—Where an act authorizing the appointment of commissioners for awarding damages for changes in grade is amended by a subsequent act, merely increasing the amount of damages which may be allowed, commissioners duly appointed under the former need not be reappointed under the latter. People v. Fitch, 147 N. Y. 355, 41 N. E. 695.

95. Rensselaer v. Leopold, 106 Ind. 29, 5 N. E. 761; State v. Keokuk, 9 Iowa 438, holding that a return of commissioners reporting a portion of the property of owners unknown is not defective.

Sufficiency in general.—Where a committee is required to report the names of abutting owners, together with the amount of damages allowed to each, a report of the names of all those owning land abutting on the improvement, without mention of damages, is a sufficient award that no one is en-

claimed in the petition⁹⁶ and to persons who join in the petition as required by statute.⁹⁷ Under some statutes separate findings of damages and benefits are required.⁹⁸ But it has been held that a bill of particulars of the items composing the aggregate award need not be furnished,⁹⁹ nor need the board state the methods by which they have arrived at their conclusion.¹ When a jury is appointed the amount of damages is a question for them rather than for the court;² their award must be based upon their own judgment, regard being had to the evidence and to the facts;³ and it will not be disturbed unless some error of law is manifest or it is apparent that they adopted erroneous principles in reaching their conclusion.⁴ It will not be set aside as contrary to the evidence, where there is a substantial conflict in the evidence.⁵ In any event the power of the city to set aside an award is not to be drawn from a doubtful implication, but may arise only from an express grant or necessary inference,⁶ and although there may be power to set aside a report, such power does not authorize the commission to be discharged and a new one appointed.⁷ Where commissioners have viewed the property and damages have been established by competent evidence, the fact that some improper evidence had been admitted will not be ground for reversal of their award.⁸ Nor where the assessors have considered all the evidence presented by a claimant before making their award will they be required to reopen the matter to hear further evidence.⁹ The fact that borough officials have been negligent in not regarding a proper service of notice of the proceedings will not authorize them to have a report set aside.¹⁰ The fact that one of several persons joined in an assessment of damages secures the assessment to be set aside as to him will not inure to the benefit of other persons joined in the assessment.¹¹

j. Effect of Approval of Report. The acceptance of the report of the commissioners by the council¹² or other authorized body¹³ has the effect of a judgment.

k. Defects and Objections and Waiver Thereof. Defects and irregularities in the proceedings are usually regarded as waived by failure to make timely objection thereto.¹⁴ So where the city authorities act upon the assessment of damages

Damages recoverable.—Under a statute providing for an appeal in proceedings to assess damages occasioned by the location of an improvement, damages resulting from the construction of the improvement cannot be recovered. Jackson v. Portland, 63 Me. 55.

22. People v. Muh, 101 N. Y. App. Div. 423, 92 N. Y. Suppl. 22 [affirmed in 183 N. Y. 540, 76 N. E. 1105] (holding that decisions of the board of revision of assessments on appeal from board of assessors under the Greater New York charter could not be reviewed by certiorari); Bowers v. Braddock Borough, 172 Pa. St. 596, 33 Atl. 759.

Attack on allowance of appeal.—An order allowing appeal must be challenged by certiorari or other direct proceedings. Murray v. Newark, (N. J. Sup. 1905) 60 Atl. 38.

23. St. Louis v. Lang, 131 Mo. 412, 33 S. W. 54, holding that exceptions filed after the time specified in the statute were properly stricken out.

Time for appeal.—An appeal must be taken within the time specified by statute. Sondley v. Asheville, 110 N. C. 84, 14 S. E. 514 (holding that under a statute providing that the appeal should lie to the next term of court after the date of the report, a postponement of the consideration of the report for one week did not prevent an appeal, although by reason of such postponement the appeal could not be taken to the next term of court); Bowers v. Braddock County, 172 Pa. St. 596, 33 Atl. 759 (holding that the appeal must be filed within thirty days from the filing of the report of damages).

Parties who may appeal.—Under a statute providing that either the parties to whom awards are given or those by whom the payments are to be made may appeal, it has been held that a city in its corporate capacity could not appeal. Matter of Nepperhan St., 71 N. Y. App. Div. 534, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 923.

Pleadings.—It has been held that on an appeal from an award of commissioners in street-opening proceedings, under the charter of the city of Newark, no answer was required to the petition of appeal; but that an issue should be framed in the words of the charter without any answer being filed and notwithstanding the allegations of the answer if one was filed. Miller v. Newark, 35 N. J. L. 460.

Amendments.—Where an appeal recited that it was taken from a decision assessing benefits to property in street opening, it was held that it might be amended by substituting the word "damages" for "benefits," where it appeared that no benefits had been assessed, but that damages had been awarded for taking the property. Farrall v. Baltimore, 75 Md. 493, 23 Atl. 1096.

Admissions.—Where the city has approved provides only for a confirmation of a report or its reference back to the commissioners, the report cannot be modified on appeal.²⁴ But under the provisions of some statutes it is proper to readjust the assessment, and either increase or reduce it upon appeal.²⁵ An objection to the validity of the proceedings cannot be first raised on appeal.²⁶ A claim for damages which has not been presented to the lower tribunal cannot be considered.²⁷ An act providing for particular improvements and allowing an appeal from an assessment of damages does not deprive a person of an alternative remedy under the terms of a general statute;²⁸ but an act allowing appeal to a designated court vests such court with final jurisdiction.²⁹

10. PAYMENT OR RECOVERY OF AWARD—a. In General. The time for payment of awards is usually fixed by statute;³⁰ but where damages are not payable until benefits have been assessed, such assessment must be made within a reasonable time.³¹ Deduction may be made by the city of sums due it for taxes which are liens on the land.³² Where land is taken to open a street the title of all parties interested is divested, and the award is substituted in place thereof; hence whoever has an interest in the land is entitled to his proportionate share of its value.³³ If money has been paid into court for unknown owners, an applicant is not entitled to it until he has complied with the requirements of the statute.³⁴ Where land has been taken for a street and the owner has permitted the city to occupy it and place improvements thereon, he will be enjoined from closing up or obstructing the street, but the city will at the same time be compelled to give him just compensation for the payment of the award and interest thereon.³⁵

b. Effect of Payment and Acceptance. Acceptance of payment of an award estops a property-owner from subsequently setting up its inadequacy³⁶ or objecting to a mere irregularity in the assessment of damages;³⁷ and where the part of a report assessing damages to a certain person as owner of property, it cannot deny such ownership upon appeal. Wright v. Butler, 64 Mo. 165.

Presumptions.—An appellant will be presumed to have had notice of the hearing upon exceptions, where it is shown that an attorney appeared who had previously represented appellant as agent and who now represents him as trustee, in which capacity he appealed. In re Tioga St., 213 Pa. Effect of appeal.—The provision of the statute that damages awarded for property taken shall be paid within six months from the confirmation by the board of park commissioners requires payment of each award within the time specified, although appeals from other awards for land taken for the same improvement are pending, and the act provides for an abandonment by the commissioners of any proposed improvement. *State v. In case of void proceedings.—Where an assessment of damages for private property taken for public use was not made in conformity with the constitution, the fact that the owners of the land taken received the

the cost of an improvement to be borne by the city has been estimated by commissioners and their estimate accepted and paid, the city cannot subsequently assess part of its share upon the property-owners.³⁸

c. Conflicting Claims. If the city has no notice of an adverse claim, it will not be liable for the amount of an award paid to a person holding the apparent title;³⁹ but if the funds are still held by the city, one claiming in opposition to the person named in the assessment list is entitled to the same upon establishing his right by a suit against such person,⁴⁰ and the city will be liable to the adverse claimant if it pays the award to the unsuccessful litigant after notice.⁴¹

d. Actions on Award. An action at law will usually lie against a municipality for the payment of an award of damages.⁴² In such an action the city may not set up irregularities in its own proceedings,⁴³ and if the award was made to unknown owners, recovery may be had by one who can prove his right and title to the same.⁴⁴ The fact that some of the owners have appealed from the award does not bar an action by one who has not joined in the appeal;⁴⁵ and a person who has a lien upon the amount of an award made to another may maintain a joint suit against the city and the parties interested to obtain the sum to which he is entitled.⁴⁶ Any legislative provision as to the time of bringing suit must be complied with.⁴⁷ If damages are made payable out of a fund raised by assessment of benefits, and such assessments are not levied or collected, the city is sometimes held liable out of its general funds;⁴⁸ but where the statute provides that certificates of indebtedness for the award shall be paid from an assessment upon the property specially benefited, it has been held that an action will not lie, but that the proceeding must be by mandamus.⁴⁹ Where the award is to be paid from a special assessment it has been held that in order to support an action it must be alleged that the assessment has been paid.⁵⁰

11. REMEDIES OF OWNERS OF PROPERTY — a. In General. The right to damages for consequential injuries to property, resulting from public improvements lawfully made, depends solely on constitutional or legislative provision,⁵¹ and where a right to damages is created by statute the statutory mode of recovery must be pursued.⁵² The fact that private property may be incidentally damaged in the amounts so assessed and gave conveyances of the land cannot have a retroactive operation, so as to cure the defect and make valid a proceeding which was void. House v. Rochester, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 517.

making of an improvement will not afford the owner a right to injunctive relief,⁵³ unless possibly in an extreme case.⁵⁴ Where damages are secured by the constitution, the provision is self-executing, and an action at law may be maintained, where no mode of recovery is prescribed,⁵⁵ and if damages result from an improvement unlawfully or negligently made, the remedy is by action of tort, not under the statute.⁵⁶ Where the right of the city to perform the act complained of is conceded, a property-owner has no remedy by certiorari.⁵⁷

Owners of bounding and abutting property.—Where a viaduct is built in front of property forty-five feet above the surface of the street, the owner is not obliged to file a claim for damages under the statute because property forty-five feet below the viaduct is not "bounding" or "abutting" thereon, but property-owner is not confined to the statutory remedy.⁶² In case no special remedy is given by a statute imposing a liability to make compensation it is held that a common-law action of trespass will lie.⁶³

(i) WHEN CAUSE OF ACTION ACCRUES. Where the statute imposing a liability provides how its amount shall be ascertained a cause of action for damages does not arise until the city has failed to perform its duty in ascertaining the damages.⁶⁴ While in some cases it has been held that the right to damages arising from an alteration of the grade accrues as soon as the grade becomes legally fixed and operative,⁶⁵ the more general rule in respect to damages from a change of grade is that a cause of action does not arise until there has been an actual physical change in the grade.⁶⁶ But it is not necessary that the grading be completed in order that the property-owner may recover for such injury as has been occasioned by the work already done.⁶⁷ As a general rule the right of action of a landowner for an injury resulting from the opening of a street is held to accrue so as to start the running of the statute of limitations at the time some act is done which disturbs the actual possession of the owner, and not merely at the completion of the proceedings through which the city obtains the right to appropriate the property.⁶⁸

(ii) FILING CLAIM AS CONDITION PRECEDENT. If the statute provides that claims for damages must be filed with the city, the filing of claims in the manner and time prescribed in the statute becomes a condition precedent to action;⁶⁹ but in the absence of such provision, or in cases to which it does not apply, claims need not be filed before bringing suit.⁷⁰ Where the statute requires the filing of

Authorization of improvement.—In an action against a city for injury to real estate, a complaint which alleges that a city wrongfully and unlawfully constructed, and caused to be constructed, the embankment that injured plaintiff's property, is not demurrable for want of an allegation that the alleged wrongful action of the city was authorized by its common council. Jeffersonville v. Myers, 2 Ind. App. 532, 28 N. E. 999. But see Dallas v. Ross, 2 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 279. It will be presumed as against plaintiff that an improvement was made in the exercise of the municipality's legitimate governmental powers, the contrary not being alleged. Huntsville v. Ewing, 116 Ala. 576, 22 So. 984. But see Hill v. St. Louis, 59

Mo. 412. An averment that in pursuance of the powers conferred by charter the warden and burgesses of a borough voted to change the grade of a street and did cause the grade to be changed is a sufficient allegation that the change in grade as made was the change voted to be made. Cook v. Ansonia, 66 Conn. 413, 34 Atl. 183.

Change of grade.—The complaint must show a prior established grade and that damage resulted by reason of a change. Anderson v. Bain, 120 Ind. 254, 22 N. E. 323. A complaint for damages occasioned by raising a street "above the established grade" is defective in not showing that the grade had been legally established. Valparaiso v. Adams, 123 Ind. 250, 24 N. E. 107.

Description of grade.—In an action for damages for change of grade the petition alleging an establishment of a grade, representations of the town in regard thereto, plaintiff's improvements relying thereon, but not describing the grade, or setting out the ordinances so establishing it, is sufficient on demurrer. Noyes v. Mason City, 53 Iowa 418, 5 N. W. 593. A complaint in an action for damages for wrongful change of grade under an ordinance is sufficient, even though it appears from a copy of the ordinance set out in the complaint that it fixed the grade at street crossings only, it being alleged that the street was graded in accordance with the ordinance. Keehn v. McGillicuddy, 15 Ind. App. 580, 44 N. E. 554.

Aider by verdict.—In an action against a town and a borough for changing the grade of a street, the failure of the complaint to aver that defendants did not give plaintiff notice or pay her damages, or to state any sum as damages, is cured by verdict. Holley v. Torrington, 63 Conn. 426, 28 Atl. 613.

Illustrations of sufficient complaints.—Wrongful excavation. Durango v. Luttrell, 18 Colo. 123, 31 Pac. 853. Negligent grading causing flooding. Dallas v. Cooper, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 34 S. W. 321. A complaint, in an action for damages assessed to land in laying out a street, which alleges that all the acts required of the commissioners, under statute, were performed, setting them out in detail, and alleges further that the land was gence in the prosecution of the work, or recovery is sought on the ground of illegality of the improvement, such negligence⁷⁷ or illegality⁷⁸ should be specially pleaded; and any special damages sustained cannot be recovered unless alleged.⁷⁹

(B) Amendments. The general rules governing the amendment of pleadings apply in an action for damages resulting from public improvements.⁸⁰

(VI) ISSUES. In an action for damages from public improvements, the authority of the city to make the improvement,⁸¹ the ownership of property injured,⁸² the time at which the injury was sustained,⁸³ and the nature of the injury⁸⁴ usually constitute the material issues.

(VII) EVIDENCE. The general rules governing the admissibility and competency of evidence⁸⁵ and the sufficiency of the same to sustain a verdict will apply in actions for damages from public improvement.⁸⁶ It will be presumed that the municipal authorities have acted in accordance with law.⁸⁷ Plaintiff is confined in his proof to the allegations of the complaint,⁸⁸ but it seems that evidence of taken, is prima facie sufficient, and if the improvement has been abandoned and the land not in fact taken it should be set up in the answer. Daley v. St. Paul, 7 Minn. 390.

benefits which offset damages may be introduced by the city, although they have not been pleaded in a special defense.⁸⁹ Witnesses must state the facts upon which they base their estimate of damages.⁹⁰ A verdict upon conflicting evidence will not be disturbed.⁹¹ If no evidence of injury to property has been produced, a judgment for damages will be set aside.⁹²

(viii) QUESTIONS FOR JURY. Whether an injury complained of comes within the provisions of a statute allowing damages is a mixed question of law and fact to be determined usually by the jury under proper instructions,⁹³ and it is for the jury to determine the extent of the injury sustained and to estimate damages for the same.⁹⁴ Where the jury have all the facts before them they are not bound to accept the estimate of witnesses as to the amount of damages.⁹⁵

(ix) INSTRUCTIONS. The rules governing civil actions generally with regard to the necessity and sufficiency of instructions⁹⁶ are applicable to proceedings for the determination of damages for the construction of improvements. Instructions should be given as to the proper measure of damages,⁹⁷ as to the special items which may be considered,⁹⁸ and as to the applicability of special benefits as a set-off;⁹⁹ but immaterial matters need not be submitted.¹ If the jury have viewed the premises, it is proper to instruct that the testimony may be considered in the light of knowledge gained by their inspection.²

Curing error.—A charge which directs the jury in estimating the damage caused to property by lowering the grade of a street to consider with other evidence the cost of adjusting the premises to the new grade is not error, where the measure of damages is fixed by other instructions as the difference between the market value before and after the change. *Smith v. that the judgment may be against either the city or the contractors in accordance with the proof of responsibility for the injury.⁵ Where a municipality incorporated under an act which is subsequently declared unconstitutional has taken property for public use a judgment for damages is a nullity.⁶

E. Assessment For Benefits and Special Taxes — 1. IN GENERAL — a. Nature of Assessment. It is a fundamental doctrine of American jurisprudence that those receiving special benefits from the public should make compensation for them; upon this principle rests the theory of county, township, and municipal taxation;⁷ and the levy upon property specially benefited of the cost of a local improvement is but a further application of this same doctrine.⁸ Assessments, as distinguished from other kinds of taxation, are those special and local impositions on property in the immediate vicinity of a municipal improvement, laid for the purpose of paying for the same and with reference to the special benefit which the property derives from it.⁹ An assessment for a public improvement is not a tax in the ordinary sense of the term,¹⁰ but a charge for improvements, for the making of which for his benefit the property-owner should pay compensation.¹¹

b. Power to Levy in General. In the exercise of its general powers the legislature may direct that the cost of local improvements be assessed upon property benefited,¹² and this power may be delegated to municipalities;¹³ but the power of a municipality to levy assessments depends on express provision of charter or statute,¹⁴ and the extent to which the power may be exercised is to be determined by the proper construction of such provision.¹⁵ The fact that land specially assessed is also liable for its portion of a general tax levied in aid of the improvement does not render the assessment invalid;¹⁶ nor will an assessment be invalidated by the fact that the city had exceeded its debt limit and did not have money on hand to pay its part of the cost of an improvement.¹⁷

c. Delegation or Grant of Power by Legislature. The legislature may confer on municipalities power to levy special assessments upon property benefited to pay the cost of local improvements,¹⁸ and may leave to municipal officers the determination of what property is benefited and hence liable to assessment;¹⁹ but such delegation must be expressly made.²⁰ It is not to be implied from a grant of power to make improvements or to levy taxes,²¹ nor will a grant of power to open streets imply authority to pay for the same by special assessment.²²

d. Constitutional Limitations — (1) IN GENERAL. While there has been much variance and apparent inconsistency in the opinions of various courts, it seems well settled that a state legislature may create special taxing districts and charge the cost of a local improvement, in whole or in part, upon the property in such districts, either according to valuation or superficial area or frontage,²³ and that such a method of assessment is not prohibited by the fifth or fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States;²⁴ or, as the rule may be more broadly stated, an assessment of the cost of local improvements upon the property benefited is not a denial of the equal protection of the law.²⁵ Further, assessments for public improvements are not as a rule regarded as taxation within the meaning of the provisions common to state constitutions governing the manner of taxation,²⁶ or limiting the amount thereof.²⁷ It has been broadly stated that the assessment upon property benefited of the cost of an improvement does not constitute taking property without compensation.²⁸ This is of course true if the benefits equal the assessment; ²⁹ but the rule supported by the weight of authority is that if the assessment exceeds the benefit there is pro tanto a taking of property without compensation;³⁰ and that, while the legislature or a municipality

Double taxation.—Where the maintenance of the sewage system of a city is paid for by special taxation, an assessment on land within the city of special benefits derived from the construction of a particular sewer does not constitute double taxation. McChesney v. Hyde Park, (Ill. 1891) 28 N. E. 1102. A charter which provides that a percentage of the contract price of the public work may be levied to cover the expenses of service, plans, specifications, and superintendence is not invalid as imposing double taxation because the amount collected is placed in a special fund used for convenience in making local improvements, and largely supported by local assessments, while the actual expenses of the items were defrayed from another fund supported exclusively by general taxation. Burns v. Duluth, 96 Minn. 104, 104 N. W. 714. That property is assessed for special benefits of an improvement, and also subject to general taxation for the excess of cost of the improvement above the special assessments, is not illegal. In re Beechwood Ave., 194 Pa. statute, the extent of such power and the manner of its exercise is to be determined by the construction of the charter or statute.³⁸ The grant of power is to be strictly construed as against the city.³⁹ As a general rule a general law providing a complete system for the levy of assessments will repeal the provisions of a city charter or special acts upon the subject,⁴⁰ although it will not have such effect unless they are repugnant.⁴¹ A charter provision that planking shall be paid for out of general funds does not preclude a city from including the cost of planking in an assessment for a general street improvement.⁴²

(II) ENACTMENT, AMENDMENT, OR REPEAL AFTER IMPROVEMENT. The validity of an assessment must be determined by the law in force at the time the same was made;⁴³ and if, at the time an improvement is completed, property is not liable to assessment for its cost, such liability cannot be imposed by subsequent enactment.⁴⁴ But since the right to levy and collect betterment assessments is statutory, the legislature may repeal the law authorizing such assessments except so far as contractual obligations are involved.⁴⁵ The repeal or amendment of an assessment law will not affect proceedings already begun under it;⁴⁶ and the same should be continued pursuant to the terms of the original enactment.⁴⁷

ments by special assessment possesses implied power to declare what are local improvements; ⁴⁸ but such declaration is not necessarily conclusive, ⁴⁹ and an assessment will not be upheld if its purpose is clearly improper; ⁵⁰ hence an assessment to acquire land ⁵¹ or to improve a chartered toll road, ⁵² being unauthorized by statute, will be set aside.

b. Improvements Previously Constructed and Paid For. The fact that an improvement has been constructed and paid for does not preclude the city from reimbursing itself by assessing the cost upon property benefited, provided the improvement was made in contemplation of such assessment; ⁵³ but where the assessment of cost upon adjoining property formed no part of the original plan, it is questionable whether the city, after constructing and paying for an improvement, can, on second thought, reimburse itself by assessment. ⁵⁴ An ordinance for such purpose cannot operate as a ratification of illegal improvements previously made without ordinance. ⁵⁵ It has been held, however, that where the city has purchased a private sewer and made it a part of the general system an assessment may be levied on abutting property to pay for it under a statute providing for assessments based not on the cost of the particular sewer but upon the cost of the entire system. ⁵⁶ The fact that an abutter on a river has dredged a channel sufficient for his own use does not preclude the city from widening the channel and making an assessment therefor on his land. ⁵⁷

3. AUTHORITY TO MAKE IMPROVEMENTS — a. In General. cers acted without authority of the council duly empowered to lay special assessments, it was held that the levy by the council of an assessment to pay for such unauthorized improvement ratified the same, and the assessment was valid.⁶⁰

b. Existence or Legality of Way Improved. A street must have been actually established as such before it can become subject to improvement by special assessment;⁶¹ but in those states in which statutory dedication is not exclusive the establishment of a street by use or prescription is sometimes held sufficient to warrant improvements.⁶² Where a street is to be opened and improved, an assessment will not be void because levied before title to the soil over which it runs has been acquired.⁶³ And so it would seem an assessment may be made for the cost of a sewer that is to be laid through private land before right or title thereto has been obtained,⁶⁴ or an assessment may be made for a bridge before title to the land necessary has been acquired.⁶⁵

c. Improvement Encroaching on Abutting Land. A municipality may not enforce an assessment for cost of that portion of an improvement which encroaches upon private land,⁶⁶ but such encroachment will not invalidate the entire assessment.⁶⁷ Nor can an owner of property assessed for a street improvement object to the confirmation of the assessment on the ground that part of the land occupied by the street belongs to him,⁶⁸ and if the appropriation was necessary and was made with the consent of the owner of the land, it will in no way affect an assessment.⁶⁹

4. NATURE OF IMPROVEMENT — a. In General. The power of a municipality to levy a special assessment is limited to those purposes which are expressly provided for in its charter or by statute.⁷⁰ But the question of what is an improvement within the meaning of charter or statutory provisions,⁷¹ as also the question of whether a particular improvement is local or general,⁷² is one of fact for the decision of the municipal authorities, such decision, however, being subject to review. The term "local improvements" as employed in provisions relating to the power of municipalities to make such improvements by special assessment is by common usage employed to signify improvements made in a particular locality by which real property adjoining such locality is specially benefited.⁷³ An improvement is not deprived of its local character by the fact that it affects the most public street in the city,⁷⁴ or that the improvement district embraces the entire city.⁷⁵ But an improvement which is not intended to benefit a locality specially, but is for the benefit of the public at large, cannot be regarded as a local improvement.⁷⁶

b. Construction or Improvement of Streets or Other Ways — (i) IN GENERAL.

The power to construct or improve streets by special assessment depending on express legislative grant, the extent to which a municipality may exercise the same is to be determined by the charter or statutory provision under which it proceeds.⁷⁷ Authority to pave the roadway⁷⁸ or to construct gutters⁷⁹ is not to be implied from power to improve sidewalks. Planting shade trees⁸⁰ and boulevarding a street may be deemed an improvement thereof within the meaning of the statute.⁸¹ The term "pave" has been held to include macadamizing a street⁸² or flagging it,⁸³ and constructing gutters.⁸⁴ A provision for the building of streets includes paving.⁸⁵ By some statutes provision is made for the payment of consequential damages resulting from the change of grade, by the property holders benefited;⁸⁶ but under a power to pave, a city may not levy an assessment for a change of grade,⁸⁷ unless such change is a mere incident of the

As applied to streets.—"Local improvements," as applied to a street, mean the improvement of a street, as such, within the design of its creation, by reason of which the real property abutting or adjacent is especially benefited in its market value. *New York L. paving.⁸⁸ It has been held also, under particular statutes, that the cost of purchasing part of a toll road lying within the borders of a city might be assessed upon abutting property;⁸⁹ and that funds might be raised by assessment to compensate a railroad company for relinquishing its rights in a street.⁹⁰

(ii) LIGHTING. It has been held that the lights, poles, and wires of an electric lighting system constitute a local improvement for which the property benefited may be assessed.⁹¹

(iii) STREET SPRINKLING AND SWEEPING. In some jurisdictions it has been held that street sprinkling is a local improvement which may be paid for from special assessments,⁹² while other cases announce a contrary rule.⁹³ And likewise in some states a special assessment for street sweeping and cleaning may be imposed.⁹⁴

(iv) SIDEWALKS, CROSS WALKS, AND INTERSECTIONS. The term "street" is generic, and power to improve streets implies authority to lay sidewalks as part of such improvement,⁹⁵ and in the exercise of power to improve streets by special assessment improvement of sidewalks may be included;⁹⁶ but power to levy a special assessment solely for the construction of sidewalks depends on express legislative grant,⁹⁷ and it has been held that in the exercise of such power a city may not include in an assessment the cost of constructing a grass plot between the sidewalk and roadway.⁹⁸ Cross walks form part of the improvement of a street and the cost of their construction may be included in an assessment.⁹⁹ The cost of paving an intersection cannot be assessed against a street that intersects the one that is being paved¹ on the theory of special benefit to adjoining property;

but the cost of paving such intersections may be included in the assessment of property abutting the street that is being improved,² unless by express provision the city is made liable for such cost.³ The validity of an ordinance ordering the construction of sidewalks as an entirety is not affected by the question whether the city or landowners must pay for intersections.⁴

(v) STREETS OCCUPIED BY RAILWAYS. The fact that a steam railway company has a franchise in the street does not relieve an abutting owner from the obligation of an assessment for the improvement of such street,⁵ even though under the terms of the franchise the city might levy part of the cost upon the railway but does not do so,⁶ and although, by statute, a street railway company is required to pave between its tracks, the city may pave the rest of the street at the cost of abutters, whether the improvement required of the company has been made or not.⁷ Where, under the terms of its franchise, the cost of paving the center of the street has been levied against a railway company, the same cannot, on default of the company, be collected from abutters;⁸ but a voluntary paving by a railway company was held not to be such original paving as imposed upon the company the burden of thereafter repairing and repaving so as to relieve abutters of an assessment.⁹

(vi) RECONSTRUCTION OR REPAIR. Acting under general power to improve its streets by special assessment, a city may, unless restrained by the provisions of its charter or by statute, order the reimprovement or repavement of a street;¹⁰ and, except for gross abuse,¹¹ its discretion in so doing will not be reviewed by

One who owns the fee of a street where it intersects a paved street is not a lot owner, within an act which provides that the expense of paving in front of a lot may be recovered by a suit against the owner. Schenectady v. Union College, 144 N. Y. 241, 39 N. E. 67, 26 L. R. A. 614.

Repavement of macadamized street.—Where city councils appropriate a certain sum for the repairs of a street, and the highway department uses the money in macadamizing the street, there is no such original paving as will prevent a city contractor from subsequently recovering from a property-owner the contract price for laying a pavement of vitrified brick in accordance with an ordinance authorizing such pavement. *Philadelphia v. Improved highway adopted as street.—Abutting property, being liable for the expense of the first paving only on a street, is not liable for further paving where a highway, having been macadamized, is assimilated with the rest of a city's streets, and for many years recognized and treated by it as a paved street. Leake v. Philadelphia, 171 Pa. St. 125, 32 Atl. 1110. But where municipal authorities do nothing more than keep a highway in ordinary repair, there is no change of it from an ordinary road to a city street, so as to relieve abutting property from liability for the cost of a subsequent paving as an original paving. Harrisburg v. Funk, 200 Pa. St. 348, 49 Atl. 992. See also In re East St., 34 Pittsb. Leg. J. N. S. (Pa.) 371. Although a road was improved by putting down macadam a foot deep for the width of eighteen feet, without curbing or guttering, the original dirt road remaining on each side of the macadam, the improvement being made by the abutting owners under a statute providing that after the improvement it should be a public road, and should be kept in repair as such by the county, the work done on it after it was taken into a city and the city built up along it, so that it became a street, of grading, curbing, and paving it from curb to curb, a width of forty feet, was original construction, and not reconstruction of the street, so that the abutting owners were liable therefor. Heim v. Figg, 89 S. W. 301, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 396.

Turnpike.—The paving by a turnpike company of a road that subsequently becomes a city street is not such an original pavement as to relieve an abutting owner from assessment for a second paving by the city. Dick v. Philadelphia, 197 Pa. St. 467, 47 Atl. 750; In re Lincoln Ave., 193 Pa. St. 435, 44 Atl. 498. But a city, by maintaining a condemned turnpike as a paved street, recognizes it as paved, so that it cannot afterward

“repairs” raises a mixed question of law and fact.¹⁷ Generally the relaying of an entire pavement or a substantial part thereof will constitute a repavement,¹⁸ while relaying small portions to an extent not amounting to a rebuilding will be repairs.¹⁹

c. Alteration or Vacation of Streets. In the absence of legislative enactment the cost of an alteration or vacation of a street cannot be assessed upon adjoining property,²⁰ but an act authorizing such an assessment is valid.²¹

d. Railings and Retaining Walls. Under power to grade and improve streets by special assessment, a city may not assess upon adjoining property the cost of railings²² or retaining walls.²³

e. Improvement of Toll Roads. The power to assess the cost of street improvements upon abutting property is confined to streets belonging to the city and will not extend to private toll roads;²⁴ but the fact that a toll-road company was authorized to use the street will not preclude the city from improving it by special assessment;²⁵ and the city may lay sidewalks on such road at the cost of abutting owners.²⁶

f. Sewers and Drains—(1) IN GENERAL. Power to construct sewers by special assessment is usually expressly given by charter or statute,²⁷ the terms and conditions of which must be complied with to render an assessment valid.²⁸ It has charge abutting owners for new pavement. Philadelphia v. Gowen, 202 Pa. St. 453, 52 Atl. 3.

Where original cost was borne by public.—Abutting owners are not liable for the cost of repaving a street, merely because the expense of the original paving, nearly sixty years before, had not been paid by the then owners, but by the public. an assessment for benefits for the construction of a sewer under the tracks of a railroad company was sustained.

Corner lots.—It may be provided that corner lots shall have two house slants for the connection of the sewers, one on each street. Duane v. Chicago, 198 Ill. 471, 64 N. E. 1033.

Where tracts vary in size.—An ordinance cannot be objected to on the ground that only one house slant is provided for each lot or parcel of land so that a large tract will have no more connection than a small lot. Gage v. Chicago, 195 Ill. 490, 63 N. E. 184.

Arbitrary subdivision.—A requirement that house slants shall be placed every twenty-five feet does not constitute an unreasonable or arbitrary subdivision of the property-owner's land. Washington Park Club v. Chicago, 219 Ill. 323, 76 N. E. 383.

Where lots connect with other sewers.—A lot is properly omitted from a benefited district if it already has access to a sewer and will not be benefited, although provision has been made for house slants in front of it on the supposition that the sewer will be a benefit. Sheedy v. Chicago, 221 Ill. 111, 77 N. E. 539.

ment is usually held to imply authority to assess the cost of rebuilding or repairing the same upon adjoining property,³⁸ although in some jurisdictions it is held that the maintenance of a sewer, if it becomes a part of the general system of the city, is a subject for general taxation rather than for special assessment.³⁹

g. Waterworks and Mains. Waterworks designed for the benefit of all the inhabitants of a municipality are not a local improvement for the cost of which special assessments may be levied;⁴⁰ but on the theory of special benefits, abutting property may be assessed for the cost of water mains along a street,⁴¹ and it is competent for the legislature to direct that abutters be assessed for the cost of water connections with their lots.⁴²

h. Parks and Other Public Places. It is within the power of the legislature to authorize assessments upon property benefited in aid of a public park.⁴³ But in the absence of statutory authorization a municipality cannot levy an assessment for the paving of a market place upon adjoining lots.⁴⁴ And where persons granting land for park purposes have also conveyed a strip surrounding such land, to be used for a highway upon condition that the city shall keep such highway in good order and repair at its expense, the lots abutting upon such strip cannot be assessed with the cost of sidewalks or any other work properly classed as a street improvement.⁴⁵

5. PROPERTY LIABLE — a. Nature — (1) IN GENERAL. The property which is subject to special assessments for public improvements is as a general rule confined to that which is specified in the particular charter or statutory provision under which the proceedings are had.⁴⁶ It is of course necessary that the property to be assessed shall be of such a nature that it is capable of actual enhancement in value in consequence of the improvement, and that it is possible to measure the extent of such enhancement with reasonable accuracy.⁴⁷

(ii) UNOCCUPIED OR UNIMPROVED PROPERTY. The right to assess land for a local improvement does not depend upon the use to which the owner may choose to put it or whether he may see fit to put it to any use.⁴⁸ Hence unless exempt by express provision of charter or statute,⁴⁹ unoccupied or unimproved property is subject to assessment for local improvements,⁵⁰ although if total lack of benefit can be shown, the assessment should on that ground be set aside.⁵¹ So water rates arbitrarily fixed on vacant lots have been held invalid as not made with regard to special benefits.⁵²

(iii) AGRICULTURAL LAND. The mere fact that land lying within the city limits is used for agricultural purposes does not exempt it from assessment for local improvements,⁵³ even though as farming land it receives no betterment from the improvement,⁵⁴ and the statutory provision found in some states, limiting the liability of agricultural land to municipal taxation, is held not to apply to special assessment for local improvements.⁵⁵

(iv) IMPROVEMENTS. Under some statutes improvements upon land are not to be assessed.⁵⁶

(v) PROPERTY NOT INCLUDED IN PRELIMINARY ASSESSMENT. Where a preliminary assessment is required, land not included therein is not liable to assessment;⁵⁷ but where under the statute the council may alter or amend an estimate of assessments, it may add property omitted from the original estimate.⁵⁸

b. Ownership — (i) IN GENERAL. The liability of property to assessment will not be affected by changes in the title after the work has been ordered.⁵⁹

Coverture of the owner is no reason why land should not be assessed for the cost of street improvement.⁶⁰ An assessment may properly be made for a sum in gross, although the property is subject to an undetermined life-estate.⁶¹ Where premises are leased the benefits assessed cannot be apportioned against the leasehold and the remainder in fee as separate estates, and separate judgments entered.⁶² official capacity for the benefit of individuals is not regarded as exempt from assessment as state property.⁶⁹

(c) City Property. City property contiguous to a local improvement may be assessed for its share of the cost of such improvement,⁷⁰ notwithstanding a portion of the total cost is to be paid out of the general municipal fund.⁷¹ The intention to make such property assessable must be shown by the statute under which the assessment is made.⁷² But public streets cannot be assessed as property benefited by improvements,⁷³ and a boulevard under control of park commissioners is not liable to assessment by the municipality.⁷⁴ Under a provision making lots and parcels of land assessable for local improvements, water mains and service pipes owned by the city cannot be assessed.⁷⁵ Under a statute providing that when the city is owner or occupant of any property fronting upon the street it should be chargeable with the expense of an improvement, a city cannot be charged as occupant of property fronting upon the street by reason of the fact that it has set aside a portion of the street as a stand for market wagons.⁷⁶ One who possesses a mere right of way over municipal lands cannot be assessed as owner.⁷⁷

(11) PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATIONS—(A) In General. The proper general rule is, it seems, that equipment and fixtures in the soil of a street within the area of assessment for an improvement, owned and used by public service corporations under their rights and franchises, cannot be assessed for benefits unless it can be shown that such property is appreciably enhanced in value by a definite sum.⁷⁸

(B) Railway Property—(1) IN GENERAL. In the absence of legislative exemption, railway property that is benefited by an improvement may be included in an assessment for the cost thereof;⁷⁹ but if an improvement does not benefit or

(2) STEAM OR GENERAL TRAFFIC ROADS. Whether the track and right of way of a railroad company is subject to assessment for local improvements, on the ground of special benefits, under the language of statutes couched in general terms, providing for such assessments, is a question upon which the courts have not been agreed. The system and policy of each state enter largely into the question and give to it a local character.⁸¹ And perhaps in the greater number of the states the right of way and tracks of a railroad company may be assessed for an improvement relatively situated,⁸² such property being regarded as real estate and land⁸³ or contiguous property⁸⁴ within the meaning of such terms as used in statutes relating to local improvements. In several of the jurisdictions, however, the right to assess such tracks and right of way is denied,⁸⁵ either upon the ground that where a street railroad company held title to a strip of land in the middle of a public street, the grading of the street afforded no benefit to such land which may be made a basis of assessment.⁹⁸ The fact that the track of a street railroad company may be required to be assessed as personal property for general taxation will not prevent its being assessed for a local improvement in those jurisdictions where such an assessment is sustained.⁹⁹ The right of way, franchise, and interest of an elevated railroad may be specially assessed for an improvement on the street above which it runs.¹

(4) DEPOTS, YARDS, AND LANDS. Although its right of way be expressly exempt by statute, property of a railway used for depots,² yards,³ or freight terminals⁴ will be liable to assessment for local improvements, and this has been held notwithstanding its right of way traverses such land.⁵ A general exemption from municipal assessment of lands used for railway purposes will not extend to such property of the company as is not in direct and immediate use for railway purposes.⁶

Property intended for future use.—City lots owned by a railroad outside its right of way, and not necessary for the enjoyment of its franchises, are liable to assessment for street improvement, although such lots were purchased for an enlargement of the yards, as might become necessary at some future time. *Morris, etc., R. Water-pipes.—A requirement that the street railroad pave and keep in repair a certain width of all streets in which its tracks shall be laid does not impose liability to an assessment for the laying of a water-supply pipe on one side of the street. *McChesney v. Sewers.—An ordinance requiring a street railroad company to pave, macadamize, plank, and repair a certain width in the streets occupied by it, and providing for an equivalent to special assessments for certain surface improvements, does not include sewers, and the railroad is liable for its proportionate cost of the same. *Bickerdike v. of the street between its tracks is not liable to an assessment for paving the rest of the street.⁹

c. Location—(i) IN GENERAL. The municipality in determining the location of property liable to assessment must comply with the provisions of the enactment under which it proceeds;¹⁰ but within such limitation, the city may exercise discretion in determining what property is likely to receive special benefit from an improvement.¹¹

(ii) ASSESSMENT OR TAXING DISTRICTS. In the absence of express authorization the city, in the exercise of general power to make improvements by assessments, has implied power to provide for assessment districts;¹² and the legislature may create or authorize the municipality to create a local taxing district for local improvement purposes which includes part only of the property within the municipality.¹³ Where it is provided by charter or statute that the city form into an assessment district the property benefited by an improvement and limit the assessment to the property within such district,¹⁴ such provision must be complied with to render an assessment valid;¹⁵ but the boundaries of districts may be left to ministerial officers, subject to approval by the council,¹⁶ and the proper municipal authorities have large discretion in determining what property is benefited,¹⁷ subject, however, to review for fraud or demonstrable mistake.¹⁸ An entire city may

Arbitrary determination.—Whether particular property is benefited, and to what extent it is benefited, must be left to the judgment of those whose duty it is to make the assessment, and when they have exercised their judgment, their determination, in the absence of fraud or demonstrable mistake of fact, is conclusive. But they must exercise their judgment, and, if it appears that they have not done so, but have substituted an arbitrary, inflexible rule instead of their judgment, their work cannot stand. *State v. be formed into an assessment district for the purpose of constructing an improvement of general benefit.¹⁹ A resolution fixing the boundaries of a district may be amended and the area of the district enlarged²⁰ or reduced.²¹ A district may be formed within a district,²² and it is not objectionable to include in a district only such property as abuts the improvement,²³ or to divide the improvement into sections for the sake of uniformity in assessments.²⁴ In the absence of express authority several streets cannot be joined in a single improvement district, and owners whose property abuts upon one street charged with the expense of improving the other.²⁵ An assessment may be collected only from land that is included in the boundaries of the district as defined in the order creating it;²⁶ and it is improper to omit from an assessment land within the area of a district,²⁷ the description of which must be sufficiently definite to determine its boundaries with certainty.²⁸

It is competent, however, for the legislature to direct that adjacent property, although not abutting the improvement, be made liable for part of the cost thereof,³³ provided some benefit is received;³⁴ and if the city is authorized to assess the property benefited by an improvement, it may extend an assessment to property not contiguous,³⁵ or confine it to contiguous property.³⁶ Under some statutes a different rule is adopted as to the assessment of platted and unplatted property, the latter not being assessable unless it is abutting.³⁷ The fact that an unplatted or subdivided tract of ground is surrounded by streets will not render it assessable in the manner of platted property.³⁸ The entire cost of a sidewalk may usually, under the statutes, be assessed on the property abutting on it.³⁹ The cost of paving intersections may be included in an assessment of abutting property.⁴⁰ streets upon which the lots front or of the streets to which they lie parallel.⁴² Under other statutes internal improvements must be borne by all the property within the square.⁴³ Under a statute providing that the cost of improvements shall be assessed to the property-owners in each square, property to constitute a square must be bounded by regularly laid out streets.⁴⁴ Although the cross streets upon one side of an improved street have not been extended to intersect the streets upon the other side, they may be treated as extended for the purpose of assessment.⁴⁵

(v) WHAT CONSTITUTES, ABUTTING, CONTIGUOUS, OR FRONTING PROPERTY.

In determining what property abuts a street, the municipal officials must be guided by the plats and records rather than by actual frontage.⁴⁶ Where only one of a tract of several lots owned by the same person abuts upon the street, an assessment can only be levied against the abutting lot, unless the whole tract is used by the owner in disregard of the lot lines.⁴⁷ In the construction of different statutes it has been held that property facing a public square does not abut on an avenue the lines of which, if extended, would intersect such square;⁴⁸ that property fronting on a street at the point where it forms the approach of a viaduct, which a railway company is bound to keep in repair, cannot be included in an assessment for the paving of such street;⁴⁹ that the fact that a parkway intervenes between a lot and the sidewalk does not prevent the lot from being classed as abutting;⁵⁰ nor the fact that a small strip of land is not included in the surface of the street,⁵¹ that land may be regarded as contiguous to a street paved, where it is separated therefrom only by the sidewalk,⁵² that property cannot be assessed as "fronting upon a street" where it is separated therefrom by a strip of ground no matter how narrow,⁵³ and that property which merely corners upon the improvement may be assessed as fronting.⁵⁴ The fact that a property-owner had dedicated one half the width of a street will not prevent his property from being regarded as fronting on the street when the residue is opened.⁵⁵ A strip lying outside of an abutting lot which is subject to a fence easement in favor of the other lot owners in the block cannot be separately sold for a special assessment.⁵⁶

(vi) CORNER LOTS. A corner lot may be assessed for improvements made on either street upon which it abuts.⁵⁷ The fact that a corner lot has no opening on the side street does not exempt the owner from an assessment for a sidewalk upon such street.⁵⁸ But the owner of a corner lot, who has paid for a water-pipe upon one front of his property, has been held not liable for the cost of a pipe laid without his consent along the other front.⁵⁹

(VII) PROPERTY ABUTTING ON STREET BUT NOT ON IMPROVEMENT. As a general rule it is held that where the statute provides that property abutting on the street shall be assessed for the improvement, that property which abuts on the improvement only may be assessed.⁶⁰ But when the assessment may be made on each block touching the improvement the improvement need not extend along the entire face of the block.⁶¹ Where only one side of the street is improved, property on both sides may be assessed,⁶² unless the unimproved side be beyond the municipal limits.⁶³ Where the city has power to assess the entire cost of the improvement upon the property abutting thereon, property which has already been assessed for an improvement upon which it abuts cannot be assessed for the improvement of another portion of the street, in the absence of an express provision in the charter or statute.⁶⁴ So where one side of a street has been improved at the expense of the property-owners upon the side improved the entire cost of improving the opposite side may be assessed upon the property on that side.⁶⁵ Under some statutes, where no buildings are taken for which compensation must be made, the assessment district for an improvement cannot extend beyond the center line of the block adjacent thereto, or beyond the end of the street or avenue or portions thereof sought to be opened.⁶⁶ Under other statutes the expense of opening a street may be assessed upon the property fronting the entire street and not merely the part opened.⁶⁷ Where the continuity of a street is broken so that it is separated into distinct parts it would seem that property abutting upon one part cannot be assessed for the expense of extending the other part.⁶⁸ In case the statute provides that upon the opening of an alley benefits shall be paid by the owners of the property in the block abutting on the pro-

(viii) PROPERTY LIABLE TO ASSESSMENT FOR SEWERS AND DRAINS. By statute it is frequently provided that contiguous⁷⁰ or approximate⁷¹ property may be assessed for the expense of constructing a sewer. And as a general rule the statutes permit the assessment of property which is not contiguous or adjacent to the sewer,⁷² provided there is not a total lack of benefit⁷³ present or future.⁷⁴ And where a local sewer has been constructed along a particular route, and the city afterward establishes a general system of sewerage, the property-owners along the route of the original sewer may be assessed for their share of the cost of the entire system.⁷⁵ But where a trunk sewer not only serves as an outlet for tributary sewers but is built primarily for the benefit of abutting property, no part of its cost need be assessed upon land along the line of the tributary sewers,⁷⁶ although show that the continuity of the street had not been broken.

70. See English v. Wilmington, 2 Marv. (Del.) 63, 37 Atl. 158 (holding that a statute providing that the cost of constructing a complete sewer system shall be assessed on all property adjoining a sewer, or with access thereto, at a fixed and uniform rate per foot of frontage and per square foot of area to a certain depth, is a valid exercise of legislative discretion in assessing benefits); Byram v. Foley, 17 Ind. App. 629, 47 N. E. 351.

Where a sewer has already been laid in the street it has been held that abutting property cannot be assessed for the cost of another sewer laid upon the other side of the street, although the first sewer was paid for by assessments against the abutters on the side on which it was laid, since the second sewer conferred no additional advantages of a different kind from that which the property already enjoyed. Philadelphia v. Meighan, 13 Pa. Dist. 407. But where a statute provides that the whole cost of a sewer shall be paid by the holders of property abutting on the street or alley in which it is constructed, an assessment for a sewer in an alley on which property abuts is not void, as being a double assessment, because of a previous assessment for a sewer constructed in a street on which the same property abuts. Byram v. Foley, 17 Ind. App. 629, 47 N. E. 351.

Ballard*, 42 Wash. 35, 84 Pac. 397, holding that under such a statute land was approximate to a sewer only where the property was so situated as to be capable of using the sewer or of deriving from its construction a special advantage different in character from that enjoyed by the public generally.

such an assessment, if levied, will be sustained.⁷⁷ And if, under the statute, the city is divided into sewer districts, property in one district cannot be assessed for construction of sewers in another.⁷⁸

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1051.

The municipal authorities have, however, large discretion in determining what property is benefited by an improvement.⁸⁵

(ii) GENERAL OR SPECIAL. In determining whether property is benefited by an improvement only such benefit as differs from that received by the community at large is considered,⁸⁶ but the fact that other property along the line of the improvement is benefited does not prevent the benefit from being held special.⁸⁷ Ordinarily the question of special benefit is one of fact.⁸⁸

(iii) NATURE, EXTENT, AND AMOUNT. The inclusion of property in an assessment district is prima facie evidence that it will be benefited by the improvement;⁸⁹ but the usual test of benefit is the increase of value,⁹⁰ for any use to which the land might be adapted.⁹¹ The determination of benefit need not be based alone on an estimate of increase of value for the particular use to which the property is being put,⁹² although such use may be considered.⁹³ Speculative benefits will not support an assessment,⁹⁴ although property has been held liable for benefits not immediate, but sure to be realized within a reasonable time.⁹⁵ Future and indirect benefits from the improvement of the surrounding premises may be considered,⁹⁶

Elements of benefits.—It has been held that a dominant estate receives a special benefit where, by the construction of a sewer, an injury to a servient estate through the wrongful casting of sewage upon such estate is obviated (Prior v. Buehler, etc., Constr. Co., 170 Mo. 439, 71 S. Cleveland*, 34 Ohio St. 551 (holding that the fact that the opening of one street rendered practicable that of another contemplated street, which could not have been opened before, thus benefiting lots adjacent to the new street, might be considered in estimating the special benefits).

W. 243, 562, holding that a refusal to instruct the jury that, if the street when opened would be impassable for travel and use, then no benefits to adjoining land should be assessed, is not error where, although the street passes over a rough and broken country, there is

and the benefit of fire protection will support an assessment in the form of water rates against property upon which no water is taken or used.⁹⁷ The fact that water mains have not yet been laid in a street will not prevent a sewer from being of some benefit.⁹⁸ In case there has been a general and serious depression in the market value of real estate, the mere fact that property could not be sold for more after the improvement than before will not in itself show that there has been no benefit.⁹⁹ In case the city by its own wrongful act has depreciated the value of property, it cannot take advantage of such fact for the purpose of showing that there has been a benefit from the construction of an improvement.¹

(IV) PREVIOUS EXISTENCE OF SIMILAR IMPROVEMENT—(A) In General. An assessment for a public improvement upon an entire tract of land when part of it is separated from the improvement and adjoins a similar improvement by which only it is benefited is invalid as to that part.²

(B) Existing Sewer. The fact that property is sufficiently drained by an existing sewer, of either private or public construction, is no defense against an assessment for the construction of a new sewer,³ if there is additional benefit,⁴ unless such property be exempt by express provision of charter or statute.⁵ So a corner lot already assessed for a sewer on one street may again be assessed for the construction of a sewer on the other,⁶ but not for a parallel sewer on the same street.⁷ The mere fact that a lot may have local drainage will not prevent its being liable for assessment for sewerage.⁸ Under a charter provision that only those persons whose drains enter the common sewer shall be assessed therefor, a property-owner who had been assessed for the construction of a sewer was held not liable to an assessment for lowering the same in order to connect it with another sewer constructed to drain a different territory.⁹

e. Where Property Has Been Damaged by Improvement. Where there has been an award of damages based upon a consideration, both of the damages and the benefits accruing from the improvement, the general rule is that the property with reference to which the award has been made cannot be assessed for benefits.¹⁰

Effect of laches.—The right to set off an award for property taken by the city for an improvement, against assessments for benefits derived therefrom, is not barred before six years, and laches within that period will not destroy the right. Van Buskirk v. Bayonne, (N. J. Ch. 1897) 38 Atl. 458.

But where the property-owner received no award by reason of a finding that his benefits exceeded his damages, it has been held that he may still be assessed for benefits, but only to the extent that such benefits exceed the amount already set off against the damages sustained.¹¹ So where a portion of a plot of ground has been taken for a street, the remainder of the ground may be assessed for the benefits.¹²

f. Exemptions — (i) IN GENERAL. It is competent for the legislature to grant exemption from special assessment;¹³ but the grant must be by clear expression.¹⁴ A constitutional or statutory provision exempting property from taxation will not apply to assessments for local improvements.¹⁵ But an exemption from taxes or assessments includes local assessments.¹⁶ An exemption in the charter of a corporation will not be repealed by a general statute providing that assessments shall be levied on all land and property benefited.¹⁷

(ii) EFFECT OF DEDICATION OF LAND FOR STREET. A property-owner who has dedicated land for a street cannot on that ground escape liability for his share of the cost of paving or improving such street.¹⁸

Exemption from public assessment.—A statute exempting certain associations from "all public taxes, rates, and assessments" does not extend to municipal assessments to defray the expenses of a local improvement. Such an assessment is not "public." Buffalo City Cemetery v. Buffalo, 46 N. Y. 506. Contra, State v. St. Paul, 36 Minn. 529, 32 N. W. 781.

Street-opening proceedings.—Under N. Y. Laws (1901), c. 466, the owner of land within the lines of a street laid out on the city map may without compensation convey his title to the city, and if the title is good and the conveyance is accepted the land fronting on the portion of the street so conveyed is not chargeable with any of the expense of opening the residue of the street, except a fair proportion of the award that may be made for buildings. It has been held that this conveyance may be made after application of the city to open a street. Matter of Westminster Heights Co., 107 N. Y. App. Div. 577, 95 N. Y. Suppl. 247 [affirmed in 185 N. Y. 539, 77 N. E. 1198]. But the person who has made such a voluntary conveyance is not entitled to have the land entirely excluded from proceedings for appointment of commissioners of estimate and assessment, since the land is still liable for its proportion of the awards that may be made for buildings. Matter of Avenue L, 107 N. Y. App. Div. 581, 95 N. Y. Suppl. 245.

(iii) PROPERTY OF RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS. Under some statutes the property of religious societies and churches is exempt from assessment.¹⁹ But the exemption of the property of religious and charitable institutions from all state and municipal taxes will not, by implication, include special assessments for local improvements,²⁰ and although exemption from special assessment be granted it has been held that it will not apply to sidewalks, since their construction may be ordered in the exercise of municipal police power.²¹

(iv) SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES. In the absence of clear expression,²² an exemption of schools and colleges from all taxation will not imply exemption from liability for special assessments.²³

(v) CEMETERIES. Cemeteries, although exempt from taxes, are liable to assessment for local improvements²⁴ unless total lack of benefit can be shown²⁵ or express exemption be granted.²⁶

(vi) HOMESTEADS. The fact that property assessed for the cost of a local improvement is a homestead does not defeat the assessment lien nor prevent a sale in satisfaction thereof.²⁷

6. PARTICULAR ACTS OR OMISSIONS AFFECTING ASSESSMENTS AND LIABILITIES — a. In General. The city in making an improvement must comply with the provisions of the legislative enactment under which it proceeds,³⁰ but mere irregularities which do not essentially affect the proceedings will not invalidate an assessment.³¹

b. Conveyances to Evade Assessments. Liability of land for an assessment attaches from the passage of an ordinance ordering an improvement, and will not be affected by a subsequent conveyance;³² and a colorable sale of the portion of a lot abutting an improvement, with intent to avoid an assessment, will not operate to exempt the part retained.³³

c. Agreement Between Municipality and Owner. Unless expressly authorized by its charter or statute,³⁴ a city may not, by contract, exempt property from liability for assessment.³⁵ So in the absence of statute the city in accepting a deed of land for part of a street has no power to agree in consideration thereof that other land of the grantor in the addition in which the land is deeded shall be exempt from any further assessment for opening or extending the street.³⁶ But under express statutory authority it has been held that a board of park commissioners may contract for the conveyance of land to the city for park purposes in consideration of the exemption of other contiguous land of the owner from assessments for park purposes to the amount agreed upon.³⁷ An ordinance allowing a railway company to lay its tracks along a street, provided it restores the pavement thereof, does not constitute a contract exempting the property of the company from assessment for paving such street;³⁸ and, where the liability of a railway company for the cost of street improvements is fixed by statute, such liability cannot be lessened by contract between the company and the municipality.³⁹

d. Violation of Charter, Statute, or Ordinance Authorizing Improvement. assessment.⁴⁵ So where an ordinance is necessary, an improvement made in the absence of an ordinance will not support an assessment.⁴⁶ Or if a resolution of intention to make improvements,⁴⁷ or a resolution declaring the necessity thereof,⁴⁸ be required by charter or statute, such resolution is a condition precedent to a valid improvement. If an ordinance ordering an improvement is required to be passed by a stated majority,⁴⁹ or to be based upon the petition of property-owners,⁵⁰ such requirement must be complied with to render an assessment valid. assail an assessment on the ground that the published notice did not exactly conform to the specifications, unless he was prejudiced thereby;⁵⁴ nor can a misdescription of lands taken for a public improvement be urged as a defense against assessments for benefits by a person whose land was not taken.⁵⁵ So it has been held that it is not fatal that there has been a failure of the engineer to sign his estimate of cost,⁵⁶ or that there have been errors or mistakes in the estimate of cost, in the absence of fraud, collusion, or bad faith;⁵⁷ or errors in the ordinance in the statement of persons liable for the cost of the improvement and the manner of enforcing such liability, where the persons chargeable are not misled;⁵⁸ or that the time when interest should begin was fixed at a period later than provided by law.⁵⁹ An assessment is not invalid because the by-law ordering the improvement was passed before the expiration of the time allowed for filing a remonstrance, when no objection was made by property-owners until after the completion of the improvement.⁶⁰ It is sometimes provided by statute that an assessment shall not be set aside because of defect or irregularity in proceedings;⁶¹ but such a provision will not save an assessment void because of failure to comply with a requirement essential to jurisdiction,⁶² such as giving notice of an improvement.⁶³

f. Invalidity of, or Irregularity in, Contract. A valid assessment cannot be made for work done under a void contract,⁶⁴ and failure by the city to comply with the substantial legislative provisions governing the letting of contracts will defeat an assessment to pay for the improvement.⁶⁵ Thus failure to advertise for bids,⁶⁶ to let the contract to the lowest bidder,⁶⁷ to open and award bids in accordance with the method prescribed by law,⁶⁸ or to annex specifications to the contract as required by charter or statute⁶⁹ will constitute a fatal irregularity and invalidate the assessment. Mere irregularities, however, that do not affect the jurisdiction,⁷⁰ or the insertion in the contract of improper conditions which in no way prejudice the rights of property-owners,⁷¹ may not, after the completion of the work, be urged to defeat the assessment. And after the completion of the work a property-owner cannot question the sufficiency of a power of attorney under which the contract was entered into.⁷²

g. Non-Performance of Contract. Failure to perform the work in substantial compliance with the terms of the contract will usually defeat an assessment;⁷³ but in the absence of fraud or collusion,⁷⁴ acceptance of the work by the city is conclusive.⁷⁵ Slight variation from the contract that does not affect the character of the work may not be urged as a defense against the assessment.⁷⁶ If the ordinance, ordering an improvement, fixes the time within which it shall be completed, failure to complete it within such time will defeat the assessment;⁷⁷ and a like result is usually held to follow from failure to complete the work within the period specified where time is of the essence of the contract,⁷⁸ although other cases hold that completion within a reasonable time will be sufficient performance to prevent forfeiture of an assessment.⁷⁹

h. Departure From Ordinance or Resolution. The improvement must conform substantially to the ordinance or resolution authorizing it,⁸⁰ and a departure from such ordinance or resolution materially affecting the location,⁸¹ nature,⁸² or extent⁸³ of the improvement will invalidate the assessment. A minor variance, however, not prejudicial to property-owners, will be disregarded,⁸⁴ and, if more work is performed than was authorized, the cost of the authorized portion, if separable, may usually be assessed.⁸⁵ In case the work is intrusted to commissioners with power to make a change in the plan as it proceeds, it has been held that the fact that the work as completed is different from that described in the plan adopted by the council will not invalidate an assessment.⁸⁶

i. Necessity of Completion Before Assessment. The time for making an assessment is usually fixed by the legislative enactment under which the city proceeds;⁸⁷ and while it seems that the assessment may be levied before the completion of the improvement,⁸⁸ it cannot be made until there has been an ascertainment

Variance caused by unlawful act of owner.—An assessment for paving is not affected by the fact that it is not as wide at one point as the notice to the lot owner required, where the difference has been caused by the unlawful act of the owner in placing his fence in the street. *Hood v. of the cost,⁸⁹ and it is generally held that payment cannot be enforced until the improvement is completed,⁹⁰ or at least the part thereof for which the particular property is assessed.⁹¹

j. Invalidity of Assessment of Damages. The invalidity of an assessment of damages renders invalid an assessment of benefits for the payment of such damages.⁹² So an assessment for benefits caused by raising the water of a lake was held invalid because no provision was made in the statute for compensating riparian owners for injuries to their land.⁹³

k. Non-Payment of Damages. An assessment for benefits cannot be set aside on the ground that compensation for injuries has not been assessed or paid.⁹⁴

l. Making of Part of Improvement by Property-Owners. In the absence of legislative provision to the contrary,⁹⁵ the fact that a property-owner has improved the street in front of his lot does not exempt him from liability to assessment for the cost of an improvement ordered by the city,⁹⁶ although it has been held that levied until after completion where the statute so provided.

Ohio.—Cincinnati v. Cincinnati, etc., Co., 26 Ohio St. 345, holding that where a street improvement was ordered to be paid by the abutting owners, and after it had been in part completed the work was abandoned, an assessment for that already done was unauthorized.

Compare Astoria Heights Land Co. v. New York, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 512, 86 N. Y. Suppl. 651, holding that the city of New York was, under Laws (1897), c. 378, liable for any damages resulting from the failure of the general improvement commission, created by the act of 1893, or from its own failure to complete the Grand avenue improvement; that this failure and consequent liability for damages did not entitle owners of property on Grand avenue, who did not claim that their assessments were unreasonable, to maintain an action in which the city of New York was the sole party defendant, to have the assessments canceled and annulled and to restrain defendant from taking any proceedings to collect the same.

A special tax in distinction from a special assessment for the construction of a sidewalk may, it has been held under the Illinois statute, be levied before the sidewalk is built. Mix v. People, 106 Ill. 425.

Effect of misconstruction of ordinance.—Where an ordinance imposed the duty of regulating and grading a street to a certain point, the omission of the commissioner of public works to complete the work for the whole distance, by reason of misconstruction of the ordinance, will not invalidate an assessment for the cost of the improvements. In re Pinckney, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 474 [affirmed in 84 N. Y. 645].

Where improvement is divided into sections.—The rule that assessments against adjoining property-owners for street improvements cannot be made, nor special tax bills therefor be enforced, till the contract for the improvement is fully completed, does not apply where the contract is for one kind of work, as curbing, guttering, etc., on one section of the street, and for another kind of work, as macadamizing, on another portion. Galbreath v. Newton, 45 Mo. App. 312.

Where work has been accepted.—Where work is accepted by the superintendent of streets before it is completed, the remedy of the property-owner liable to assessment is by applying to the city council. Smith v. Hazard, 110 Cal. 145, 42 Pac. 465.

Delay in making.—Great delay in completing work and improvements on a street, authorized by statute, is not good ground for vacating an assessment made to pay the expenses. The remedy of the property-owners against delay is by mandamus, compelling the authorities to expedite the work. Whiting v. Boston, 106 Mass. 89.

if the city accepts an improvement made by a property-owner, his land should be excluded from an assessment for improving the rest of the street.⁹⁷

7. LEVY AND ASSESSMENT IN GENERAL — a. What Constitutes Levy. Under an act allowing special assessment, the mere ordering of an improvement does not constitute a levy of assessment;⁹⁸ but where, by ordinance, the cost of an improvement is levied upon abutting property, to be assessed according to frontage, the mere computation of individual assessments may be left to ministerial officers,⁹⁹ the adoption of their report by the council constituting the assessment.¹

b. Ordinance, Resolution, or Order For Levy. If the city be authorized to levy assessments by ordinance, a levy by resolution or order of the council will not be valid,² and all charter provisions as to the manner of passing ordinances must be complied with.³ It is not, however, necessary that the ordinance be couched in the precise language of the charter⁴ or that it set out its statutory authority.⁵ Substantial compliance with charter or statute is usually held sufficient.⁶ And an ordinance for the levy of an assessment is not invalid for failure

Tacoma, 41 Wash. 51, 82 Pac. 1092, holding that where the method of improvement of a street required the construction of retaining walls to support the lower side of the street, property-owners who had before the improvement of the street constructed retaining devices, or filled their lots so that no structure to retain the street was necessary, were entitled to be credited with the value which the structures added to the improvement district, and to have the assessments on other lots proportionately increased.

Port Huron*, 63 Mich. 528, 30 N. W. 177.

Effect of fraud.—An ordinance providing for an assessment for a local street improvement is not invalid because three members of the council were influenced in its favor by fraud, where the number uncorrupted voting for it was more than sufficient to pass it under the city charter. *Mansfield v. to describe the improvement, if it refers to the ordinance ordering the same⁷ or to a plat⁸ wherein there is a sufficient description. The assessing ordinance need not state the exact amount with which each lot is charged.⁹ Where a portion of the ordinance is invalid it is void as a whole where the invalid portion is not distinct and severable.¹⁰

c. Notice of Establishment of Assessment District. Where notice of the establishment of an assessment district is required by charter or statute, the giving of such notice is a condition precedent to the legal establishment of such district;¹¹ but where due notice and a right to be heard has been given, failure of a property-owner to object amounts to a waiver and he is concluded by the decision of the council.¹²

d. Officers and Commissioners to Make Assessment—(1) AUTHORITY OF COUNCIL OR OTHER BOARD OR OFFICER TO MAKE ASSESSMENT. A municipality in making an assessment must follow the statute authorizing it.¹³ Under some statutes the assessment is made by the city council,¹⁴ and where the charter provides that an assessment shall be made by the council the power cannot be delegated to ministerial officers,¹⁵ although the adoption by the council of the assessor's report has been held a sufficient compliance with such requirement,¹⁶ and the mere calculation of the apportionment of an assessment may usually be made by subordinate officials.¹⁷ It is competent for the legislature to impose upon municipal boards or officers, other than the council, the duty of making assessments,¹⁸ and a constitutional provision that power to levy assessments shall be vested in municipal corporations does not preclude the legislature from delegating such power to a board of park commissioners.¹⁹

(ii) COMMISSIONERS OR OTHERS SPECIALLY APPOINTED TO MAKE ASSESSMENT. Provision is frequently made by charter or by statute for the appointment of commissioners to make assessment of benefits,²⁰ and such commissioners when appointed by a court are not agents of the city but officers of the court;²¹ they must personally examine the work and property to be assessed,²² and this function is not performed by signing an estimate and report made out by a third person;²³ nor should they be governed by directions of the council in making their assessment.²⁴ In the absence of fraud or mistake the action of such commissioners is conclusive,²⁵ although the council is usually given power to reject their report.²⁶ The appointment of commissioners must be made in compliance with the legislative enactment providing for the same;²⁷ and the passage of an ordinance ordering Appointment by court.—Under an act which gives county courts jurisdiction of proceedings to levy and collect assessments, commissioners to assess benefits caused by improvements may be appointed at the probate term of the county court. Murphy v. Peoria, 119 Ill. 509, 9 N. E. 895. One appointed by the president of the board of local improvements of a city to make an assessment for a local improvement has authority to make an assessment, and the court need not make the appointment nor direct the making of the assessment. Harrigan v. Jacksonville, 220 Ill. 134, 77 N. E. 85.

Removal and reappointment.—After the common council has, by the ordinance for the construction of a sewer, appointed three persons to make the assessment, it has implied power afterward to remove them and appoint others in their places. People v. New York, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 43; Laimbeer v. New York, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 109. When a common council, with power to remove one commissioner, improperly removes three and reappoints the two improperly removed, with an additional one, and the three proceed and make an assessment, it will not be affected by such improper removal of the two. Simmons v. Passaic, 42 N. J. L. 524.

De facto board.—On a proceeding to restrain the collection of an assessment for paving, the court will not consider whether an improvement is usually a prerequisite to appointment.²⁸ Unless the statute so provides the city may not establish a general board to act in all cases, but must appoint for each separate case.²⁹

(III) QUALIFICATIONS. The commissioners must possess the qualifications prescribed by the statute under which they are appointed.³⁰ They must be impartial and without pecuniary interest.³¹ An owner of property affected is not a disinterested freeholder,³² although a taxpayer may be eligible,³³ or residents of the city at large.³⁴ One who testified as an expert on a hearing of objections to an assessment is not incompetent to act as commissioner in making a second assessment as to persons who did not object to the first.³⁵ An employee of a firm who are merely agents for property, although assessed in their name, is not disqualified to act as commissioner for an assessment of benefits;³⁶ nor is an assessment for an improvement invalid because a person interested in the contract acted as commissioner in making the assessment.³⁷

(IV) OATH. Failure of commissioners to take the oath, in substantial compliance with the terms of the statute,³⁸ will render their assessment void.³⁹ But where commissioners are ordered to recast the assessment they need not be resworn.⁴⁰ It is no valid objection that the oath was not taken until after the assessment, if taken before the report of the same to the council.⁴¹ Commissioners may not assessors who were certainly officers de facto were officers de jure. Boehme v. Monroe, 106 Mich. 401, 64 N. W. 204.

impeach their own report by testifying that the oath signed by them and duly certified was not in fact taken.⁴²

(v) COMPENSATION. The compensation of commissioners is usually made by statute a part of the expense to be assessed upon property benefited by an improvement,⁴³ but a promise by the city to pay commissioners their fees upon confirmation of their report is enforceable, although the assessments have not been collected.⁴⁴ If, however, their compensation is to be paid out of the assessment when collected, and the proceedings are dismissed and the improvement abandoned, no action will lie to the commissioners against the city for dismissing the proceedings.⁴⁵

e. Proceedings For Assessment in General — (i) STATUTORY PROVISIONS. A legislative enactment granting power to a municipality to levy an assessment and prescribing the mode of its exercise must be strictly complied with in all substantial particulars,⁴⁶ and the report of commissioners authorized to levy an assessment must show compliance with the law;⁴⁷ but such commissioners may not pass upon the regularity of proceedings or the constitutionality of an act under which proceedings are instituted.⁴⁸

(ii) PARTIES. The lessee of property assessed is not a necessary party to assessment proceedings.⁴⁹

(iii) PETITION. If the statute requires a petition of property-owners for an assessment, the filing of the same is a condition precedent to a valid assessment.⁵⁰ The petition must comply with the requirements of the statute,⁵¹ but a recital of the proper municipal authorities that the petition complies with the statute is prima facie evidence of its sufficiency,⁵² and, although the statute requires a petition for an assessment to contain the ordinance for the proposed improvement, the ordinance need not be certified,⁵³ nor need the regularity of the council's proceedings be recited.⁵⁴ assessment must be levied is fixed by law,⁵⁵ the city is usually allowed to make the levy at any time it may select.⁵⁶ A statutory provision that the city must pay for land for improvements within two years may be waived by the landowner and also by the city,⁵⁷ and a provision that assessments shall be payable in instalments does not require separate assessments for each instalment.⁵⁸

f. Notice of Assessment and Hearing Thereon—(1) NECESSITY. Compare Law v. Johnston, 118 Ind. 261, 20 N. E. 745, holding that provisions of a charter and ordinance in reference to assessments for street improvements are not unconstitutional for failure to provide for notice, where the assessment can only be enforced in a legal proceeding in court, in which notice is required, and in which the validity of the proceedings may be questioned.

Where notice is in fact given.—While a statute allowing sewer assessments on abutting owners, without due notice to them, is unconstitutional, it does not follow that a valid assessment may not be made in pursuance of it, if due notice and due opportunity to be heard are provided by local ordinances. Griswold College v. Davenport, (Iowa 1884) 18 N. W. 314; Gatch v. Des Moines, 63 Iowa 718, 18 N. W. 310. Where a statute provides for an assessment to be made as provided in the city charter for assessing the expenses of street grading, and the charter provides for notice in such a case, the statute will not be held defective, as not providing for notice. Grand Rapids School Furniture Co. v. Grand Rapids, 92 Mich. 564, 52 N. W. 1028.

upheld on the theory that a requirement of notice is necessarily implied,⁶¹ and the federal supreme court has decided that a municipality may be authorized to apportion the cost of a street improvement upon abutting lots, according to frontage, without a hearing as to benefits.⁶²

(11) FORM, REQUISITES, AND VALIDITY. Where no particular form is prescribed by statute, a notice that apprises interested parties of the location and nature of the improvement and the property to be assessed is sufficient,⁶³ and it is no objection that the notice fails to state that the street to be improved lies within the city,⁶⁴ or that in stating the names of commissioners appointed to make the assessment an immaterial error occurs.⁶⁵ Where the legislative enactment, under which the city proceeds, or the ordinance providing for assessments directs what notice shall be given, such provision must be complied with,⁶⁶ and no restrictions or limitations may be added thereto by the city.⁶⁷ The publication of a request for bids on a contract for an improvement is not a compliance with the statutory requirement of notice of hearing on an assessment,⁶⁸ but a general ordinance providing that the cost of street improvements shall be assessed upon abutting property has been held to constitute sufficient notice of such assessment.⁶⁹ Irregularities that in no way affect the rights of parties are not fatal;⁷⁰ and if a property-owner appears and is heard, he waives objection to irregularities in the notice.⁷¹ There is no reason why different improvements may not be specified in one notice of assessment.⁷²

(III) TIME OF NOTICE. Notice of an assessment may be given after the same has been levied without violating the constitutional rights of property-owners.⁷³ A statutory requirement as to the length of notice must be complied with to render the same valid,⁷⁴ and in the absence of such requirement reasonable notice must be given.⁷⁵

(IV) SERVICE. Any legislative requirement as to service of notice must be complied with to render the same valid,⁷⁶ hence where the charter requires personal service upon property-owners, leaving a copy of the notice at their residence is not sufficient;⁷⁷ and a posted notice to "owners of abutting lots" will not, it seems, constitute notice to the owner of a lot that does not abut the street, although it is assessed as abutting thereon.⁷⁸ Notice to a life-tenant is not notice notice directed to all the owners of land fronting, abutting, and adjacent to the street.

Conflict of laws.—Where an assessment for street improvements was made in pursuance of proceedings taken under the act of 1893 (Laws (1893), p. 103, c. 57) requiring a separate ordinance for each improvement, and a notice sufficient to constitute due process of law was given the property-owners, the fact that the notice given did not conform to the requirement of an ordinance passed under the act of 1890 (Laws (1889-1890), p. 131, c. 7), which contemplated a general ordinance under which all street improvements were to be made, did not deprive the city council of jurisdiction to confirm the assessment. *Aberdeen v. Iowa.—See Owens v. Marion, 127 Iowa 469, 103 N. W. 381, holding that under an act requiring notice to be given by the posting of hand-bills, a recital in the record of a special assessment resolution that the bills were posted as required by law is sufficient evidence of that fact.

Missouri.—State v. St. Louis, 67 Mo. 113.

New Jersey.—Semon v. Trenton, 47 N. J. L. 489, 4 Atl. 312; Van Solingen v. Harrison, 39 N. J. L. 51.

Pennsylvania.—Under an act requiring the city to notify property-owners benefited by owners does not require the affidavit to state the contents of the notice,⁹⁰ hence an incorrect recital of the notice in such an affidavit is mere surplusage,⁹¹ and if the affidavit shows in general terms that the statute was complied with it will be sufficient.⁹²

g. Hearing and Determination—(i) IN GENERAL. It is competent for the legislature to provide that the hearing on assessments shall be before a court to which commissioners make report instead of before the commissioners themselves.⁹³ An assessment of benefits is void if made arbitrarily and without view of the premises,⁹⁴ although the estimate of benefits need not be based solely on personal investigation,⁹⁵ and the commissioners may adopt such means as they deem necessary to obtain the necessary facts.⁹⁶

(ii) TIME AND PLACE OF MEETING SPECIFIED IN NOTICE. Failure of commissioners to hold a meeting at the time and place specified in their notice will invalidate the assessment.⁹⁷

(iii) NOTICE OF POSTPONEMENT OR ADJOURNMENT. An additional notice is not necessary where an assessment is postponed from one meeting to another.⁹⁸

8. MODE OF ASSESSMENT—a. In General. Where the mode of making an assessment is provided by charter or statute, such provision must be complied with to render the assessment valid;⁹⁹ and a statute providing that errors in the levy of an assessment shall not invalidate the same refers to irregularities and not to a total failure to act under the law.¹ If no specific mode of assessment is prescribed, it is immaterial what system commissioners may adopt, provided property is not assessed more than it is benefited, and is not made to bear more than its just proportion of the cost of the improvements.² The assessment must the opening of a street of the amount assessed against their property before the claim shall be a lien thereon, the actual owner must be notified; and a return showing that the owner, "or reputed owner," was notified is insufficient. White's Estate, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 308.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1090.

Certificate of publication.—A certificate of publication of the notice of making a special assessment by the board of public works is fatally defective if it fails to show the dates of the first and last publication. Andrews v. Chicago, 57 Ill. 239. A publisher's certificate that a notice of a special assessment was published five successive days, giving the days of the first and last publications, is sufficient to show five successive days' publication, although the dates of the first and last publications are seven days apart. Perry v. People, 155 Ill. 307, 40 N. E. 468. Under an act providing that proceedings of the common council shall be matters of record, and shall not fail on account of any technical error unless the party complaining shall show affirmatively that he has been injured thereby, failure to record proof of publication of notice of hearing on assessments is immaterial, where it is shown that such publication was had. Shimmons v. Saginaw, 104 Mich. 511, 62 N. W. 725.

Aider from presumption of official duty performed.—Under a statute requiring the mailing of a notice to each person paying taxes on the respective parcels during the last preceding year in which taxes were paid, the person to whom notice was given will be presumed to have been the last party to pay taxes. *Roberts v. Assessment of part of cost on city.—Under be confined to the property located within the assessment district.³ Whether a railway shall pay for paving between its tracks, as is sometimes done, or less or more, or whether the levy will be of a share or portion of the whole cost, and if so how much has been held to rest in the discretion of the municipal authorities to be reasonably exercised.⁴

b. Entire Tracts, or Parcels or Subdivisions Thereof. Where it is provided by charter that each tract of land or lot benefited by an improvement shall be separately assessed, the city may not assess in gross several lots, although they belong to the same owner;⁵ nor may a single tract be subdivided into parcels and a separate assessment levied upon each.⁶ What constitutes a single tract or lot is usually to be determined solely by official plats or records,⁷ but a single tract actually divided by the opening of a street through it may be assessed as two separate tracts,⁸ and where the owner of adjoining lots used them as one by erecting his house on the dividing line, a single assessment was held sufficient.⁹ In the absence of legislative restriction, an assessment may be levied in gross upon several lots of the same owner.¹⁰ The fact that the owner has different estates does not render separate assessments necessary.¹¹

c. Assessment on Part of Tract. Where part only of a large tract of land is benefited by an improvement, the benefit may be assessed on that part instead of the entire tract;¹² but in the absence of legislative restriction,¹³ the assessment will be valid, although levied upon the whole tract.¹⁴

the provision of a charter, requiring the commissioners to assess such part of the expenses of a street improvement "upon the city, and such part locally as they shall deem just," the commissioners are not imperatively required to assess any portion of the expense upon the city, but only in case it is, in their judgment, just to do so. An assessment therefore imposing the whole burden upon the property benefited is not for that reason invalid. People v. Syracuse, 63 N. Y. 291 [reversing 2 Hun 433, 5 Thomps. & C. 61].

d. Division of Improvement Into Sections or Blocks. Unless restricted by express legislative provisions,¹⁵ it is within municipal discretion to divide an improvement into sections and to assess the cost of each section upon the property benefited thereby.¹⁶

e. Inclusion of Different Improvements in One Assessment. Separate and distinct improvements may not be included in one assessment.¹⁷ The question of what constitutes such improvements is largely one of fact.¹⁸ Paving separate streets cannot be considered a single improvement,¹⁹ nor the building of different sewers,²⁰ unless one is merely lateral to the other;²¹ but where a sewer is a single one without branches a single assessment may be made therefor, although it extends along different streets.²² Sidewalks built on different sides of a street may constitute a single improvement;²³ and where pumping works are a necessary part of a sewerage system, the cost of the same may be included in an assessment for the construction of such system.²⁴ never levy an assessment against a property-owner personally;²⁵ and it is a moot question whether it is within the power of the legislature to provide that a special assessment shall constitute a personal liability.²⁶

9. AMOUNT OF ASSESSMENT — a. In General. In the absence of fraud or gross extravagance, the liability of property for the cost of municipal improvements is generally measured by the expense actually incurred rather than by the real value of the work;²⁷ and so where bonds were issued to meet the expense of an improvement, the fact that the bonds sold at a discount could not affect the amount of an assessment upon property benefited.²⁸ An assessment in excess of the benefits received is invalid as to such excess,²⁹ as is an assessment for an amount in excess of that provided for in the ordinance for improvement;³⁰ and a statutory provision that no general city tax shall be void because the amount levied exceeds the amount required has no application to a special assessment for local improvements.³¹ Where it is provided that the expense of paving one half of the streets opposite the public grounds of the city shall be paid from the general funds of the city, an abutting owner can be charged only with the expense of paving the half of the roadway upon his side of the street, where a strip through the center of the street is maintained by the city as a park.³² It would seem that the property-owners are not entitled to an allowance for the value of an old pavement which is replaced.³³

b. Statutory Limitations. An assessment is not a tax within the meaning of a constitutional or statutory provision limiting the amount of taxation;³⁴ but the amount of an assessment for local improvements is frequently limited by statute to a certain percentage of the value of property assessed.³⁵ Where such limitation applies in terms only to street improvements, an assessment for sewers will not be affected by it.³⁶ A corner lot may be assessed, for the improvement of each street, up to the statutory limit;³⁷ and the term "assessed value" refers to the value of the property as assessed for municipal taxation at the time the improvement is ordered.³⁸ If separate and distinct improvements are ordered, an assessment may be levied for each for any amount within the statutory limitations;³⁹ but the limitation may not be evaded by letting separate contracts for different parts of one improvement and basing a separate assessment on each,⁴⁰ and the corporation is always subject to the general principle that an assessment may not be made for an amount in excess of benefits.⁴¹

All expenses necessarily incident to the making of improvements may be included in the assessment;⁴² thus, the cost of surveys,⁴³ and of preliminary proceedings,⁴⁴ the expense of levying the assessment,⁴⁵ and the amount of damages paid for consequential injury to property, are proper items to be included.⁴⁶ On the other hand it has

e. Final Estimate or Determination of Amount. Where the statute provides for a final estimate of the cost of an improvement, such provision must be complied with to render an assessment valid;⁵⁷ but a minor irregularity in the making of such estimate, if it in no way prejudices the rights of property-owners, will be disregarded.⁵⁸

f. Variance From Preliminary Estimate. In the absence of express restriction, a variance in the final cost of an improvement from the preliminary estimate will not invalidate an assessment.⁵⁹

g. Excessive Amount. Where the final estimate of the cost of an improvement has been made and approved, an assessment in excess of such estimate is invalid.⁶⁰ If the cost of the work proves to be less than such final estimate and assessment, the assessment should be reduced accordingly,⁶¹ and if it can be shown that a contract was let at an unreasonably high price, collection of the entire amount of an assessment will sometimes be restrained.⁶² An assessment in excess of benefits is non-enforceable to the extent of the excess,⁶³ and under guise of paying the cost of construction a city cannot collect a fund for repair or maintenance of an improvement;⁶⁴ but the fact that the city, without right, canceled a contract for an improvement and made a new contract at an increased price does not entitle a property-owner, as against the contractor, to an abatement of the amount assessed.⁶⁵

assessment should be collected under the old law, although levied after the passage of the amendatory act.⁶⁸ Under some statutes the city council is given sole authority to apportion the cost of an improvement between the property-owners benefited and the general public.⁶⁹ A statute providing for assessments for work done upon the crossings of streets is inapplicable where a street, instead of crossing, terminates in another.⁷⁰

b. Benefit to Property. The legislature may exercise large discretion in determining the extent to which property may be assessed for local improvements,⁷¹ subject, however, to the restriction that an assessment in excess of benefits cannot be enforced.⁷² In some states, by statute, the benefit received by property becomes the sole measure of the amount of assessment levied thereon,⁷³ and this method of apportionment has been uniformly upheld by the courts.⁷⁴ The determination of benefits is largely a matter of legislative discretion;⁷⁵ but if it can be established that the cost of an improvement exceeds benefits, the excess must be borne by the city out of its general funds.⁷⁶

c. Value of Property—(i) IN GENERAL. It is competent for the legislature to provide that assessments shall be apportioned according to the value of the lots assessed,⁷⁷ and in the absence of a statutory mode this method of apportionment may be adopted by the municipality;⁷⁸ but a constitutional provision requiring taxes to be assessed on a cash valuation does not apply to special assessments.⁷⁹ Where the statute provides that the cost of an improvement shall be levied on the property to the center of the block upon each side of the street improved, the cost should not be levied one half upon the property on each side, but the property on both sides of the street should be assessed in proportion to its value for the entire cost of the work.⁸⁰

(II) IMPROVEMENTS ON PROPERTY. In estimating the value of property for the purpose of levying a special assessment, the value of improvements thereon should not be reckoned.⁸¹ It has been held, however, that where a tax, as distinguished from special assessment, was levied upon a particular district for sewer purposes, improvements could not be excluded from the assessment without violating the requirement of equality and uniformity of taxation.⁸²

d. Area. Although cases can be found to the contrary,⁸³ it is generally held that an apportionment of benefits according to the area of property is valid,⁸⁴ and it is frequently provided that the city may fix the depth of lots liable to assessment for an improvement.⁸⁵

e. Frontage of Lots—(1) IN GENERAL. The method of apportionment commonly in use is to assess the cost of an improvement upon abutting lots according to their respective frontage.⁸⁶ The validity of this mode of apportionment has been repeatedly attacked, but is sustained by the great weight of authority,⁸⁷

Time as of which value is estimated.—An assessment on a lot for the opening of a street is properly based on its value as estimated by the tax commissioners for the year when the assessment was made up, and should not be altered because of later valuations. In re Department of Public Works, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 612.

Unplatted property.—The charter of a city, providing that the cost of street improvements shall be assessed upon the lots and parcels of land having a frontage upon the improved street, ratable according to the valuation of each, allows assessments only in such parts of the city as have been platted into lots and parcels extending back a uniform distance from the street. Griggs v. Atlanta, 70 Ga. 817, holding that an act giving the city of Atlanta power to grade, pave, and improve its streets, and to assess the improvements to the abutting real estate in proportion to its frontage, is not in violation of a constitutional provision requiring that all taxation shall be od valorem, as such assessments are not taxes.

The circumstances and situation of the lands on the different sides of a city street may be such as to make the adoption of the foot frontage rule in the particular instance inconsistent with the observance of the proportionate benefit principle. People v. Des-

If it is clearly established that an assessment is in substantial excess of benefits, the collection of such excess would amount to confiscation and should be restrained,⁹² but the fact that one lot receives more benefit proportionately than another does not invalidate an assessment.⁹³ Where the city is directed by charter or statute to levy assessments according to benefits, an assessment by frontage, without a view of the premises or consideration of benefits, will be invalid,⁹⁴ although it has been held that the adoption of the frontage rule will not necessarily raise a presumption that the assessment was laid without regard to benefits.⁹⁵

(II) LOTS VARYING IN DEPTH OR VALUE. An assessment according to frontage is not of necessity void because abutting lots differ in depth,⁹⁶ or in value.⁹⁷

(III) MODE OF DETERMINING FRONTAGE. The term "front foot" is synonymous with abutting foot,⁹⁸ and for the purpose of determining the frontage of

Where lots are not at right angle to street.—Where land adjoining a street was so situated that some of the building lots were laid a lot, reference must be had to its situation at the time the improvement is made.⁹⁹

f. Assessment of Each Lot For Work Done Adjoining. Although cases may be found to the contrary,¹ the rule sustained by the weight of authority is that each lot may not be assessed separately for the work done in front of it.²

g. Corner Lots. The assessment of a corner lot may usually be determined by the number of actual abutting feet,³ although it has been held in at least one jurisdiction that where the statute requires assessment according to frontage regard must be had to what is the real front of the property, and if a lot abuts lengthwise on the improvement but fronts on another street, it may be assessed only for a number of feet equal to its real frontage.⁴

h. Deduction of Damages. In assessing benefits for opening a street damages out at right angles to the street while others were necessarily at an acute angle with the street, making the street front longer on some lots than on others, although all were of the same width on the square, it was held that an assessment for sewers should be made on each lot according to its actual width, and not according to the length of front. In re Assessment for Sewers, 10 N. Holzapfel*, 11 Okla. 405, 68 Pac. 511 (holding that under an act providing that assessments for building of sewers shall be made according to the actual cost of labor or material, in constructing the sewer along the lots assessed there is no inference that the city council must apportion the assessment equally among such lots); *Dallas v. A barn built on the rear of a corner lot as an incident to a house on the lot does not make a foot frontage on the side street, for the purpose of street assessments, although it has an entrance on such side street. Daiber v. Toledo, 5 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 164, 7 Ohio N. P. 389.

resulting therefrom may usually be deducted,⁵ but a sum awarded for the value of land taken for an improvement cannot be credited against an assessment;⁶ and the fact that an abutter has a remedy against the city for damages from change of grade does not affect his liability for a paving assessment.⁷

i. Unequal Assessment. It is a general rule that assessments should be equal and uniform;⁸ but where the same are apportioned according to benefits, the assessment of different lots may vary⁹ according to their situation¹⁰ and the nature of the work performed.¹¹ And where the cost of an improvement is apportioned according to frontage, the rate of assessment must be uniform, notwithstanding a variance in the cost of different parts of the work¹² or a difference in the depth of lots.¹³ A special assessment upon the right of way of a railroad company in a street is not lacking in uniformity by reason of the fact that a gross sum is levied as the fair proportion of the tax to be borne by the railway, while other property is assessed by computation of frontage.¹⁴

j. Excessive Assessments. Although cases may be found to the contrary,¹⁵ it is the general rule that the collection of an assessment will be enjoined if it is in clear excess of benefits,¹⁶ or exceeds so grossly the value of the work to the property as to amount to spoliation.¹⁷ Where consent of property-owners is a condition to the ordering of an improvement, and such consent limits the cost thereof to a certain sum per running foot, an assessment cannot be laid in excess of such sum;¹⁸ and a property-owner who has paid an assessment is entitled to a rebâte when the actual cost of an improvement does not equal the estimate thereof.¹⁹

k. Omission to Assess Property Liable. Omission to assess property clearly liable for a portion of the cost of an improvement will usually invalidate an assessment;²⁰ but the city may exercise large discretion in determining what property is benefited and hence liable to assessment;²¹ and it is sometimes held generally that omission to assess property liable cannot be urged against the validity of an assessment by one whose assessment is not increased by reason of such omission.²² Where the road-bed of a railroad is not benefited by the improvement, a failure to assess it is no ground for an objection to confirmation of the assessment.²³

Londoner*, 33 Colo. 104, 80 Pac. 117, holding that property-owners cannot escape assessment because the assessment against their lands is excessive, but are bound to pay what is equitable.

What amounts to spoliation.—Where the salable value of property if subdivided into building lots running back a depth of one hundred and ninety-two feet is not less than ten dollars per front foot, a charge for a paving improvement slightly in excess of five dollars per front foot does not amount to spoliation. Duker v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., 74 S. W. 744, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 135. Where a lot abutting on one street three feet, on another seven feet, and on yet another four hundred and seven feet, valued at the highest estimate at two hundred and sixty dollars, was assessed for the paving of the street on which it had the greatest frontage, with seven hundred and twenty-one dollars, the assessment was prima facie illegal, as amounting to a virtual confiscation of the lot. Atlanta v. Hamlein, 96 Ga. 381, 23 S. E. 408.

Attorney's fees for collection.—The attorney's fees allowed by section 9 of the Barrett Law in foreclosing a street assessment lien do not become a part of the assessment, but pertain to the remedy, and their allowance cannot make the assessment excessive. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Fish, 158 Ind. 525, 63 N. E. 454.

New York.—Hassan v. Rochester, 67 N. Y. 528, holding that where lots are unlawfully omitted, and the whole burden imposed upon other lots, it will not be presumed, in the absence of proof, that the taxes upon the owners of such other lands will not be increased above an amount so trifling as not to justify the interference by the court in their favor.

But see Masters v. Portland, 24 Oreg. 161, 33 Pac. 540, holding that a special assessment for a local improvement is void where a portion of the property benefited is arbitrarily and intentionally omitted from the assessment, and that too, although the property assessed is benefited the amount it is assessed.

enforce such obligation will usually constitute a valid objection to an assessment of the entire cost of improving such street upon abutting owners.²⁴ But in the absence of such obligation, failure to assess the tracks of a railway company will not as a rule invalidate an assessment,²⁵ especially in the absence of evidence that the railway will be benefited by the improvement,²⁶ and some cases hold that a property-owner will not be heard to complain of the city's failure to enforce against a railway company a contract obligation to bear the cost of paving the part of a street occupied by its tracks.²⁷

m. Apportionment as Affected by Exemptions. Omission to assess property legally exempt does not of course invalidate an assessment.²⁸ It has been held, however, that where property exempt from assessment lies upon one side of the street improved the property opposite cannot be assessed with the entire cost.²⁹

11. DETERMINING MODE AND TIME OF PAYMENT — a. In General. Provision as to the time and manner of payment of assessments, if not made by statute, may be prescribed in the ordinance ordering an improvement.³⁰ Where by statute taxes and public dues are collectable in coin, a levy of assessment on a gold basis is authorized.¹

b. Instalments. It is competent for the legislature to provide for collection of assessments in instalments;³² but in the absence of such provision a city may not prescribe that an assessment be divided into instalments,³³ and it has been held that the city may disregard a statutory provision, requiring assessment instalments to be equal, without invalidating the assessment when injury is not shown.³⁴

12. FORM AND CONTENTS OF ASSESSMENT — a. In General. Where the mode of making an assessment is prescribed by legislative enactment the assessment must show on its face that it was made in substantial compliance with the prescribed rule;³⁵

bly relating to grading and paving in the city of Allegheny, a lot owner on an avenue opposite a public common is liable for the costs of grading and paving the whole of the street in front of his lot, and not the half of its width only.

but a defect in an order appointing commissioners or in the report of such commissioners is sometimes cured by reference therein to the ordinance directing the improvement.³⁶

b. Description of Property, and Maps or Diagrams. Any legislative requirement as to the description of property must be complied with to render an assessment valid.³⁷ In the absence of express requirement as to description, the same will be sufficient if it identifies the property assessed with reasonable certainty,³⁸ and it has been held that in making an assessment real estate may be described as in a recorded deed,³⁹ and where the assessment is by frontage, if the frontage of a lot is correctly described, errors in interior lines are immaterial.⁴⁰ Slight errors or omissions in the recorded map or diagram of the property assessed, provided the property can be identified, are not fatal;⁴¹ and a mistake in a published ordinance as to the number of a township will not invalidate an assessment, if it is Curing defect.—An insufficient description of property in an assessment by a city for street improvements against a railway company's right of way was not cured by a sufficient description of such property in the complaint to enforce the lien sought to be created thereby. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. O'Brien, 24 Ind. App. 547, 57 N. E. 47.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1128.

Illustrations.—An assessment of lots 41 and 42 of square 69 as lots 41 and 42, without designating the square, is unintelligible and void. McClellan v. District of Columbia, 7 Mackey (D. C.) 94. Where lands assessed were described as parts of lots in an assessor's plat, and it was shown that the surveyor who made such plat was not the county surveyor, as required by law, such description was insufficient. Upton v. People, 176 Ill. 632, 52 N. E. 358. The report of commissioners for the alteration of a street, which, after describing the value of part of a lot taken for street purposes, assesses benefits to "the remainder" of the lot, is sufficient. Hays v. Vincennes, 82 Ind. 178.

Street railroad.—Where property assessed to a railroad company was described as right of way, right of occupancy, franchise, and interest of the railway in and upon a certain avenue from a certain street to another street the description was sufficient. South Chicago City R. Co. v. Chicago, 196 Ill. 490, 63 N. E. 1046. But it was insufficient in the absence of limitation as to the extent of the right of way. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. O'Brien, 24 Ind. App. 547, 57 N. apparent from a consideration of the whole ordinance that the error was a clerical one.⁴²

c. Recitals as to Basis of Assessment or Apportionment. It is sometimes held that an assessment must show affirmatively full compliance with the terms of the legislative enactment under which the city proceeds; ⁴³ and hence, that where the cost of an improvement is to be assessed according to benefits it must affirmatively appear both that this mode was followed,⁴⁴ and that the assessment does not exceed the benefits conferred.⁴⁵ Other cases, however, maintain that in the absence of evidence to the contrary it will be presumed that the proper mode of apportionment was adopted by the city and duly followed.⁴⁶

d. Designation of Owners of Property. An assessment is usually required to be made in the name of the owner of property assessed,⁴⁷ and an assessment in the name of a person who does not hold the legal title is void,⁴⁸ unless by statute

Construction of report.—Where the report of the commissioners making assessments for benefits is in regular and proper form, the fact that the schedule annexed thereto shows the assessment for pavement and curb in separate columns, with the total carried out opposite, will not invalidate the assessment. *Dean v. Joint owners.—An assessment for street improvements cannot be made against one only of several joint owners of abutting property, for the benefits accruing to the whole property, but must be either separately against each owner or jointly against all. New London v. Miller, 60 Conn. 112, 22 Atl. 499.

Where the owner is deceased the assessment may be made to his estate. New Orleans v. Ferguson, 28 La. Ann. 240; Moale v. Baltimore, 61 Md. 224, so holding where the property was particularly described. Contra, Hawthorne v. East Portland, 13 Ore. 271, 10 Pac. 342, holding that where a city charter requires an entry in the lien docket of the name of the owner of property assessed for a street improvement, it is not enough to describe the owner as the estate of a deceased person named.

Oregon.—Hawthorne v. East Portland, 13 Ore. 271, 10 Pac. 342.

Assessment to the owner or occupant is proper under some statutes. Newell v. Wheeler, 48 N. Y. 486; Platt v. Stewart, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 493. If the names of the owners and occupants of property assessed are the same in an assessment as upon the tax lists of previous years, this is all the law requires in respect to the mode of stating the names of owners and occupants. In re Tappan, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 225, 36 How. Pr. 390. An unpaid assessment for street improvements against one who was the owner at the time the proceedings were commenced is prima facie valid, and a lien, although such assessments are required to be made "to the owner and occupant," and a change of ownership occurred, but of which the assessors had no notice prior to confirmation of the assessment. Morange v. Mix, 44 N. Y. 315.

Unknown owner.—The superintendent of streets, unless he is satisfied beyond all doubt as to the ownership of a lot, may assess it to "unknown owners"; and, when thus made, payment of an assessment on it for improving the street may be demanded publicly on the premises. Himmelmann v. Hoadley, 44 Cal. 213.

Non-residents.—Where the charter of a city provides that, when sewerage assessments are made upon any unoccupied lot of a non-resident owner, it shall be made in his name, entered in a list of non-resident owners, etc., an assessment made and entered on the resident owners' list is void as against such an assessment is declared to be valid notwithstanding defects and irregularities in proceedings,⁴⁹ or, under the statute, the assessment may be levied and becomes a lien on the land itself.⁵⁰

e. Designation of Amounts Assessed. The amount assessed upon each lot or parcel of land should appear in the assessment,⁵¹ but failure to prefix the dollar sign to figures is not fatal if their meaning is clear.⁵²

13. ASSESSMENT ROLLS, REPORTS, AND RECORD— a. In General. The statute usually requires a complete record of assessment proceedings, and any substantial omission or defect in such record invalidates an assessment.⁵³ But matters which are not essential to the record under the statutes governing the proceedings need not appear.⁵⁴ The record is not affected by matter which is mere surplusage.⁵⁵

b. Qualification of Assessors or Commissioners. Where the legislative enactment under which the city proceeds requires that commissioners of assessment shall possess certain qualifications, it must appear on the face of the record that they possessed or were deemed to possess such qualifications.⁵⁶

c. Making and Attestation. In the absence of statute no oath to a local assessment is required of the assessors who make it,⁵⁷ but a failure to verify an assessment as required by statute is fatal.⁵⁸ non-resident. Hill v. Warrell, 87 Mich. 135, 49 N. W. 479.

Community property.—Street grade assessments made to the husband alone, on community property of himself and wife, are sufficient when the wife is made a party to the action to foreclose the liens. Elma v. Carney, 4 Wash. 418, 30 Pac. 732.

Carney*, 127 Mass. 179; Auditor-Gen. v. Maier, 95 Mich. 127, 54 N. W. 640.

Statement of proportion to value.—A city charter which provides that the commissioners of estimate and assessment shall in no case assess any real estate more than one half of the value of such property as valued by them does not require the commissioners in a proceeding to acquire title to lands for street purposes to state in their report the specific valuation of the different properties assessed. In re New York, 178 N. d. Return, Filing, and Recording. Where the statute provides for filing the record of assessment proceedings within a specified time, failure to comply therewith will usually invalidate the assessment;⁵⁹ but it has been held that the council may make reasonable extension of the time for filing such report.⁶⁰

14. PRESUMPTIONS AS TO VALIDITY OF ASSESSMENT, AND EFFECT AS EVIDENCE —

a. In General. An assessment is presumed to be valid until the contrary is shown.⁶¹ But it has been stated that in order that an assessment roll be prima facie evidence of the regularity of the proceedings it must have on its face such authentication and certification as constitutes it a warrant for the collection of taxes.⁶² And a certificate improperly signed is not sufficient under a statute making such certificate prima facie evidence of the regularity of an assessment.⁶³ Where an assessment roll shows that the commissioners were appointed to assess the cost of paving an entire street, it will not be presumed that they excluded —Where the board of public works authorized its president to sign, and the clerk to attest, an assessment roll, and the roll was afterward confirmed by the council, and thereby, under a provision of the city charter, made final and conclusive, it was sufficient, although the individual members of the board did not sign it. Duffy v. Saginaw, 106 Mich. 335, 64 N. W. 581.

Signature by individual member of board.

Affidavit required only where property is taken or damaged.—Local Improvement Act, June 14, 1897, § 19 (4 Starr & C. Annot. St. Suppl. (1902) p. 164), requiring an affidavit of the superintendent of assessments as to the making and filing of an assessment roll, stating that affiant examined the records for the names of owners of property against which benefits were assessed, that the names of such owners were correctly shown, and the residence correctly stated, etc., applies only to assessments for improvements which are such as to involve the taking or damaging of property. Roberts v. Evanston, 218 Ill. 296, 75 N. E. 923.

E. 749 (holding that the report when ascertained to be correct should be entered on the minutes of the council or some other record designated by them); Morrison v. Chicago, 142 Ill. 660, 32 N. E. 172; People v. Springer, 106 Ill. 542; Sanderson v. La Salle, 57 Ill. 441 (holding that a provision of a city ordinance requiring the return of an assessment to the city clerk's office by a certain day is mandatory, and compliance is indispensable to the validity of the assessment); Central R. Co. v. Bayonne, 35 N. J. L. 332. But compare Bridgeport v. Giddings, 43 Conn. 304.

Filing of a special tax list is mandatory under some statutes. See People v. Record, 212 Ill. 62, 72 N. E. 7; Craig v. People, 193 Ill. 199, 61 N. E. 1072.

Illinois.—Sheedy v. Chicago, 221 Ill. 111, 77 N. E. 539 (holding that the presumption arising from the report that omitted property was not benefited is not overcome by the fact that such property abuts on the proposed improvement); Philadelphia, etc., Coal, etc., Co. v. Chicago, 158 Ill. 9, 41 N. E. 1102 (holding that the fact that a second assessment makes the cost of collection much higher than the first one did, which was abandoned, does not render the second assessment roll incompetent as evidence under the statute); Waggeman v. North Peoria, 155 Ill. 545, 40 N. from their estimate the cost of paving that part of the street occupied by car tracks and which it was the duty of the car company to pave.⁶⁴

b. Conclusiveness. Where a city is vested with power to determine what property is benefited by a local improvement and to assess the cost upon such property, its decision is conclusive,⁶⁵ except in case of fraud or mistake,⁶⁶ or where it appears that an illegal method or erroneous rule of law has been followed.⁶⁷ But an assessment in a proceeding not authorized by statute is not conclusive;⁶⁸ nor is a recital of ownership, in an assessment of property, a judicial determination that title is in the person named.⁶⁹

c. Evidence Impeaching Assessment. The official certificates of commissioners of assessment are entitled to great weight as evidence and are held erroneous only upon convincing proof,⁷⁰ and such commissioners are not competent witnesses to impeach their own estimate,⁷¹ nor are their declarations competent evidence for this purpose.⁷²

15. CERTIFICATE OR SPECIAL TAX BILL AGAINST SPECIFIC PROPERTY — a. In General. A special tax bill is not invalidated by failure to literally comply with all the requirements of the ordinance ordering the improvement, when such non-compliance does not affect substantial rights of property-owners.⁷³

b. Form and Contents. All statutory provisions as to form and contents of certificates of assessment or special tax bills must be substantially complied with to render the same valid;⁷⁴ but as a rule it is not necessary that special tax bills shall show that every step necessary to their validity has been taken,⁷⁵ nor need they expressly show the computation upon which the tax was apportioned;⁷⁶ and it has been held that failure to state the name of the owner of the property, as required by statute, does not render the same invalid.⁷⁷

c. Execution and Issuance. All legislative requirements as to the execution of special tax bills must be complied with.⁷⁸

d. Amendment and Issue of New Bills. A special tax bill may usually be amended within the period of limitations whether it be void, voidable, or merely imperfect as originally issued.⁷⁹

e. Conclusiveness and Effect as Evidence. A special tax bill, regular on its face, is prima facie evidence that the work charged for was performed,⁸⁰ and that tionate cost which the lot ought to bear is not void, because the work was not let in one entire contract. Compare Heman Constr. Co. v. Loevy, 179 Mo. 455, 78 S. W. 613.

Barber Asphalt Paving Co.*, 117 Fed. 925, holding that the failure of the city clerk of a city to register tax bills for special assessments, as required by the Missouri statutes, is not a sufficient defense against the bills, the statute being directory merely.

Computation of amount.—Where, on the completion of a contract for street improvement, the clerk of the president of the board of public improvements figured the tax bill to be levied against each lot, and after making out the bill handed the same to the president, who signed it, such signing made the bill the act of the president, within an ordinance requiring the latter to compute the cost of the improvement, and levy and assess the same as a special tax. Heman Constr. Co. v. Loevy, 179 Mo. 455, 78 S. W. 613.

Issuance of new bills.—Where special tax bills to pay for a street improvement made under a valid ordinance have been issued, but are not enforceable because the assessment district was not defined and established according to the charter, the holder is entitled to new special tax bills, although the ordinance providing for the improvement undertook to define the assessment district, and in this respect only violated the charter. State v. St. Louis, 183 Mo. 230, 81 S. W. 1104. Where a city charter provided that a tax bill for a public improvement should be issued within twenty days from the completion and acceptance of the work, and provided that a failure to issue within such time should not affect the validity thereof, and the charter also required the board of public works to compute the cost of a public improvement, and apportion the same, and a tax bill was issued in due time after the completion of an improvement, and protracted litigation followed, in which it was decided that the tax bill was void because the board had not apportioned the cost, and the board subsequently apportioned the cost and issued a second tax bill, the fact that it was not issued until nearly five years after the completion of the improvement was no defense. Dollar Sav. Bank v. Ridge, 183 Mo. 506, 82 S. W. 56.

Amendment after expiration of term of office.—The officer who issued a tax bill may correct it even after the expiration of his term of office. Morley v. Weakley, 86 Mo. 451; Stadler v. Roth, 59 Mo. 400; Kiley v. Oppenheimer, 55 Mo. 374.

80. Nevada v. Morris, 43 Mo. App. 586; Adkins v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 36 Mo. App. 652.

Sufficiency of bill.—The tax bill, which the statute makes prima facie evidence in an action to recover a special tax, must be definite, and show on its face that it was issued under some competent authority and for some specific purpose. Linneus v. Locke, 25 Mo. App. 407. A special tax bill under the charter of a city purporting to be for the repair of a sidewalk is not prima facie

the property charged was benefited,⁸¹ and is liable for the tax;⁸² and the court will presume in the absence of evidence to the contrary that all prerequisites to the issuance of such tax bill have been complied with,⁸³ although defendants, while having the burden of proof, may show the absence of material steps.⁸⁴ But a tax bill will not establish a prima facie case against owners whose names do not appear therein,⁸⁵ and where it purports on its face to have been issued for repairs on a street it will not establish a prima facie liability for reconstruction of the street.⁸⁶

16. DEFECTS AND IRREGULARITIES, AND INVALID ASSESSMENTS — a. In General. An assessment will not as a rule be set aside for minor irregularities that in no way affect substantial rights of property-owners;⁸⁷ but on the other hand a statutory provision that assessments shall not be set aside for irregularities in their levy does not prevent property owners from asserting against an assessment any objection fatal to the proceedings.⁸⁸

b. Who May Question Validity of Assessment. The validity of an assessment may be questioned only by persons whose rights are prejudiced thereby.⁸⁹ Hence evidence of the validity of the charge, when the work for which it was issued was the reconstruction of the sidewalk. Farrell v. Rammelkamp, 64 Mo. App. 425.

Kentucky.—Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Gaar, 115 Ky. 334, 73 S. W. 1106, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 2227, holding that, unless it appears that under a different method of apportioning the cost of a street improvement the party complaining will be required to pay less, the apportionment made will not be disturbed.

Montana.—Beck v. Holland, 29 Mont. 234, 74 Pac. 410, holding that one cannot set aside an assessment against him to pay for opening an alley on the ground that the land does not belong to the city, when he claims no right or interest in it.

New Jersey.—Hunt v. Rahway, 39 N. J. L. 646 [affirmed in 40 N. J. New Brunswick*, 30 N. J. L. 395 [affirmed in 32 N. J. L. 548]; Vanderbeck v. Jersey City, 29 N. J. L. 441.

New York.—In re Pennie, 108 N. Y. 364, 15 N. E. 611 (holding that where a person had purchased property assessed for public improvements, covenanting as part the fact that part of the property assessed for an improvement is not benefited thereby cannot be urged against an assessment upon property benefited; ⁹⁰ a landowner assessed for an improvement cannot object that other property was insufficiently assessed, ⁹¹ unless such irregularity increased his assessment, ⁹² nor may a lot owner object to any error in assessment which inures to his benefit. ⁹³ But where an excessive assessment has been made, private abutting owners are not precluded from objecting to the same by the fact that only the fair cost of the work was assessed against their property and the remainder assessed on abutting public property. ⁹⁴ A taxpayer cannot object to a local assessment in favor of a contractor on the ground of fraud on the part of municipal officers letting the contract, where the contract was not let in violation of the city charter and the contractor did not participate in the fraud. ⁹⁵

e. Estoppel to Object to Assessment—(1) IN GENERAL. If the city acts within its powers, ⁹⁶ and the assessment is not absolutely void, ⁹⁷ property-owners will be estopped to object to an assessment if by their acts or omissions they have of the consideration, to pay the assessment, which had not then been made, he is presumptively injured by an illegal assessment, his covenant imposing on him no liability beyond the payment of legal assessments, and can sue to vacate such assessment); *In re Mutual L. Party aggrieved.—One who at the time of laying an assessment was legally liable to pay it, and has so continued, is the "party aggrieved" within the meaning of the statute of 1856 (Laws (1856), § 1, c. 338), and as such authorized to institute proceedings to vacate the assessment. In re Burke, 62 N. Y. 224. A former owner of premises assessed, who is bound to indemnify his grantee against the assessment or to remove it as a cloud on title is a party legally aggrieved, and is entitled to apply for relief as prescribed by the act. In re Phillips, 60 N. Y. 16.

Failure to enforce assessment against others.—A property-owner's obligation to pay a tax for street improvements is not affected by the tax-collector's omission to enforce collection against other property. Phelan v. San Francisco, 120 Cal. 1, 52 Pac. 38.

Recital in deed.—Where property was purchased before the assessing ordinance was passed, a provision in a deed assuming all assessments, without specifying any particular assessment for the improvement or any particular street, did not estop the grantee from challenging a particular assessment. Waldschmidt v. Bowland, 27 Ohio Cir. Ct. 782. The purchaser of abutting property, on which an assessment is imposed while the work is in progress, by a deed reciting that it was subject to whatever assessments should be made, is not estopped from disputing the validity of the assessment by such clause in his deed, as he did not assume to pay an illegal assessment. In re Pennie, 45 Hun (N. Acts of predecessor in title.—The owner of a lot is estopped, in an action to enjoin the sale thereof for the amount due on a bond for street improvements, by the conduct of her predecessor in title, which, if allowed to be questioned, would work a fraud upon the owner of the bond. Cummings v. Kearney, 141 Cal. 156, 74 Pac. 759. The right of one claiming under a tax deed to object to prior special assessments on the property is not affected by the fact that owners prior to the tax-sale paid part of the assessments without objection. *Fitzgerald v. to deny the validity of an assessment on the ground that the statute was not substantially complied with.³ And it has been held that one who petitions a council to pave a street and assess the cost according to the foot front rule is estopped from denying the power he induced the council to exercise.⁴

(iii) AQUIESCENCE IN WORK. Unless the city has so exceeded its power as to render its action absolutely void,⁵ a property-owner who stands by and permits an improvement to be made cannot object to an assessment to pay for the same on the ground of irregularity in the proceedings.⁶ And in some cases it is stated more broadly that he cannot deny the authority of such city to make the improvement.⁷ Where the person is ignorant of the objection he is not estopped,⁸ as where he does not know that it is intended to assess the cost of the work on his property.⁹ So when notice is a statutory prerequisite to the creation of a lien for an assessment it is held that where notice is not given as required by statute

Formal waiver.—A landowner who executed a written waiver of objections to the legality or regularity of an assessment for street improvements, in order to secure the right to pay the assessment in instalments, cannot assert that the council had no authority to order the improvements. Richcreek v. Moorman, 14 Ind. App. 370, 42 N. E. 943.

Effect of notice not required by statute.—A notice published by a city requiring all persons to appear and make any objections they may have to a proposed assessment for a sewer, not being required by statute, has no binding effect, so that one not then appearing may afterward object to the assessment when made. Monk v. Ballard, 42 Wash. 35, 84 Pac. 397.

Waiver by contractor.—The contractor is not a party to the assessment proceeding in the sense that not having made objection to it while in progress he may not urge its invalidity when tendered the bonds. State v. Seattle, 42 Wash. 370, 85 Pac. 11.

such hearing.¹⁵ But appearance for the purpose of objecting to the defect in question is not a waiver.¹⁶ An act relied upon as a waiver must, however, be done with knowledge of the facts and with intent to forego insisting on the right waived.¹⁷ Property-owners who acquiesce in a partial assessment cannot contest the final assessment on grounds available when the first assessment was made.¹⁸

(ii) ERRONEOUS ITEMS OF EXPENSE. Where an assessment shows on its face the inclusion of items of expense not authorized by statute, a property-owner may, without first appealing to the council, resist enforcement of the same;¹⁹ but if the item of expense is such as might have been included in the contract without vitiating it, then failure to make objection to the council will be a waiver of the right to contest enforcement of the assessment.²⁰

17. OBJECTIONS AND EXCEPTIONS TO ASSESSMENT AND HEARING THEREON. By statute provision is usually made for the hearing of objections and exceptions to the assessment.²¹ Under the particular statute, however, this remedy may be by appeal rather than by exception.²² Failure to afford an opportunity to object as required by statute will invalidate the assessment,²³ and conditions, not found in the statute, as to the mode of presenting objections may not be imposed by the city.²⁴ If the statutes prescribe the form in which objections shall be filed, such provision must be complied with,²⁵ and objections should always be sufficiently specific to apprise the city of the ground upon which they are made.²⁶

18. AMENDMENT OR CORRECTION—a. Amendments. Errors or irregularities in an estimate or assessment for an improvement may usually be corrected by amendment.²⁷

b.* Interlineations. An interlineation made in an assessment roll long after the same was completed and filed will not be counted a valid amendment.²⁸

Variance.—Where an objection to an assessment for a local improvement is that it was made under a mistake of fact, and it is not charged that there was any fraud or application of an illegal principle of assessment, the objector, to prevail, must show a mistake of fact, and is limited to that specification. *State v. c. Notice of Alterations. Notice of alteration of an assessment has been held unnecessary to render the same effective.²⁹

19. REVISION BY JURY. If the statute requires revision, by a jury, of assessments for public improvements, failure to provide for such revision will invalidate an assessment.³⁰

20. CONFIRMATION, REVISION, OR VACATION OF ASSESSMENT — a. Confirmation or Revision. Where provision is made by statute for the revision of assessments the power of the council or commission to which the matter is intrusted is limited to that conferred by the statute,³¹ and the proceedings must be in substantial compliance therewith.³² Where the board has power to substantially alter an assessment it must investigate and adjudicate that the alteration is proper,³³ and where a special board of revision is created by statute, the assessment must be acted upon by a full board.³⁴ A provision requiring a majority of the council to assent to the ordering of a tax does not require a majority for the confirmation of the assessment roll prepared by an officer in accordance with a previous instruction of the council ordering the tax.³⁵ Ownership of property in the assessment district will not disqualify a member of the council from voting upon the confirmation of the assess-

29. Patterson v. New York, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 114. But see State v. Seattle, 42 Wash. 370, 85 Pac. 11, holding that notice that the assessment roll for the improvement of certain streets is on file and open to inspection, and that persons interested shall appear and make objections, after hearing which, and making such corrections as it deems just, the council shall approve the roll and assess the amounts thereof against each parcel shown in the roll, is not notice that the council may amend the roll, include other property therein, and assess it.

30. Culbertson v. Cincinnati, 16 Ohio 574. Compare In re Thayer St., 9 R. I. 50.

Powers of jury.—A jury, in revising an assessment for widening a street, cannot alter the "proportional share" of the benefit assessed on the estate in common with the other estates benefited, unless they find the whole cost of the widening to be less than the amount of the assessment. Bancroft v. Boston, 115 Mass. 377.

Evidence.—On a betterment petition the petitioner cannot introduce evidence as to the proportion of the benefit to the land of himself and other abutters on the way as compared with the benefit to real estate generally in the city. Alden v. Springfield, 121 Mass. 27. Whether an assessment upon an estate for the construction of a sewer by a city is void, because the scheme adopted is not in accordance with the provisions of the St. (1878) c. 232, § 3, and whether the statute itself is constitutional, are not open upon the trial of a petition to the superior court for a jury to revise the assessment, and can properly be raised only on certiorari; and the rejection of evidence relating only to these questions is immaterial. Snow v. Fitchburg, 136 Mass. 179.

31. Jersey City v. Green, 42 N. J. L. 627; Ward v. Briant, 42 N. J. L. 625; Edwards v. Jersey City, 40 N. J. L. 176.

Co. v. Moran, 128 Cal. 373, 60 Pac. 969; Martin v. Oskaloosa, (Iowa 1904) 99 N. W. 557.

Time within which action must be taken.—An act which provides that assessments for local improvements shall be finally passed upon by the board for the revision and correction of assessments within six months is not mandatory, but merely directory, and a delay for longer than the period mentioned in the statute will not invalidate an assessment. Smith v. Buffalo, 90 Hun (N. Y.) 118, 35 N. Y. Suppl. 635; Matter of Deering, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 89, 3 N. Y. St. 593 [affirmed in 105 N. Y. 667].

32. John v. Connell, 71 Nebr. 10, 98 N. W. 457, holding that a levy of a special assessment of taxes for benefits received by reason of a public improvement is not invalidated because the city council sitting as a board of equalization under the provisions of Comp. St. (1893) § 132, c. 12a, after meeting in pursuance of a regularly published notice and organizing for the purpose of equalizing such special assessment, correcting errors, etc., takes a recess before the expiration of the time mentioned in the notice and prescribed by statute, provided the city clerk or some other member of such board shall be present to receive complaints, applications, etc., and give information, and providing no final action is taken except by a majority of the members of such board in open session.

Hearing before committee.—Where a committee appointed by the council investigated the assessment roll of benefits for a public improvement, before which the property-owners assessed were given a hearing, on the confirmation of the roll by the council on report of the committee, the action of the committee is the action of the council. Brown v. Saginaw, 107 Mich. 643, 65 N. W. 601.

ment.³⁶ Where an assessment is approved but by clerical omission no order is entered on the minute book of the council the entry may be made nunc pro tunc.³⁷

b. Notice. Where the statute requires notice of the confirmation of an assessment such notice is jurisdictional,³⁸ and unless given in substantial compliance with the provisions of the statute the assessment will be invalid.³⁹ But under some statutes the necessity of notice is confined to those who have objected to the assessment.⁴⁰

c. Vacation or Disapproval and New Assessment. Under express provisions of the statute the council is sometimes authorized to vacate an assessment and order a new assessment.⁴¹ Where, under the charter, the assessment of benefits must be made by the commission which assesses damages, the city in the absence of express authority cannot reject the report of such commission and refer the matter of benefits to a new commission.⁴² Where the council has power to return the report to the commissioners, the commissioners on their report being returned must act in making a second report in the manner required of them in making a final report.⁴³ Where a new commission has been appointed further proceedings must be through it and action cannot be based upon a further report of the first commission.⁴⁴

d. Amending, Vacating, or Setting Aside Order. Unless authorized by charter or statute,⁴⁵ a final order of the council, on appeal from an assessment, setting the same aside cannot be vacated at a subsequent meeting.⁴⁶ And after a lawful order of assessment has been passed and taken effect it cannot be rescinded or reconsidered at a subsequent meeting of the council.⁴⁷ Where a special assess-

Length of notice.—Where the statute provides that notice be given for at least six days prior to the meeting of a city council as a board of equalization, notice must be given during the six days immediately prior to the date of the meeting. Shannon v. Omaha, 72 Nebr. 281, 100 N. W. 298.

Waiver of defects.—Where a person files a protest against a special assessment with the board of equalization before the time fixed in the published notice for the meeting of the board, he thereby waives any defect in the notice. Shannon v. Omaha, 73 Nebr. 507, 103 N. W. 53, 106 N. W. 592.

Stay of proceedings.—Under Acts 1871-1872, p. 257, § 49 (Rev. St. p. 239, c. 24, par. 163), providing that all persons taking any contract with a city, who agree to be paid from special assessments, shall have no claim or lien on the city or village except from the collection of the special assessments made for the work contracted for, the passage of an order by the council staying all proceedings on a certain municipal improvement, where a contract therefor has been duly let under an ordinance, and all the steps regularly taken to make an assessment in pursuance thereof, which has been confirmed by the county court does not operate to set aside

ment has been levied, the subsequent passage of an amendatory ordinance, providing that the assessment shall be paid in instalments does not vacate the original assessment.⁴⁸

e. Conclusiveness and Effect of Order. Unless the assessment is void⁴⁹ an order of the council confirming the same is usually held to be conclusive.⁵⁰

21. JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO ASSESSMENT— a. Jurisdiction of Courts. E. 444, holding that an objection that a special "assessment, and all proceedings therein, are void" is not sufficient to raise the point that the commissioners did not properly divide the assessment into instalments. See Ayer v. Chicago, 149 Ill. 262, 37 N. E. 57, holding that an objection that a judgment of condemnation was void because of an amendment of the verdict is sufficiently raised by allegations that there is no authority of law for making the assessment and that it is wholly unconstitutional, inequitable, and void.

allow amendments to be filed⁶⁰ and such discretion will not be interfered with unless it has been abused.

(v) EVIDENCE. The burden of establishing the grounds of their objections to the confirmation of an assessment is upon the property-owners urging such objections,⁶¹ but the burden is on the city to establish the ordinance under which the improvement is made.⁶² The general rules of evidence applicable to civil proceedings govern the introduction and sufficiency of the evidence.⁶³

(vi) HEARING OR TRIAL. The hearing of objections to the confirmation of an assessment should be conducted in general according to the rules governing the trial of ordinary cases at law;⁶⁴ and, where a jury is provided for, questions of fact, such as the determination of benefits, should be left to the jury,⁶⁵ under proper instructions from the court.⁶⁶

(vii) SCOPE OF INQUIRY AND POWERS OF COURT. The scope of the inquiry on motion to confirm an assessment is determined by the terms of the statute under which the proceeding is brought,⁶⁷ and unless expressly authorized the court has no authority to pass upon the expediency of the improvement,⁶⁸ or the qualification of a city engineer,⁶⁹ nor has it power to review the determination of the

62. Springer v. Chicago, 159 Ill. 515, 42 N. E. 868, holding that where a special assessment was confirmed, without evidence of the passage or legal existence of the ordinance alleged to authorize it, after issue had been made thereon, the error could not be cured by a nunc pro tunc order, made at a subsequent term, authorizing the filing of a certificate of the city clerk as to the due passage of the ordinance.

Weight and sufficiency.—On the hearing of objections to the confirmation of an assessment, the fact that a larger number of witnesses have testified in favor of the objector does not necessarily determine the weight of evidence, especially where there is added to the testimony of the city the probative force of the commissioners' report and of the actual view of the premises taken by the court. Chytraus v. Chicago, 160 Ill. 18, 43 N. E. 335.

In special assessment proceedings, the fact that an equal number of witnesses testify on each side on the question of benefits does not preclude the court from finding that there is a preponderance of evidence on the question in favor of the petitioner for the confirmation of the assessment. Conway v. Chicago, 219 Ill. 295, 76 N. E. 384.

Argument.—On the hearing of objections to the confirmation of a special tax to pay for street improvements the city is entitled to open and close the argument. Peru v. Bartels, 214 Ill. 515, 73 N. E. 755.

municipal authorities as to what proportion of the cost of an improvement shall be borne by the public.⁷⁰

(viii) THE NATURE AND EXTENT OF RELIEF. The nature and extent of relief that may be granted by the court depends upon the provision of the statute under which proceedings are brought.⁷¹ Under some statutes the court must approve or reject an assessment in toto,⁷² while by the terms of other acts the assessment may be modified or recast,⁷³ upon evidence that the same was improperly made,⁷⁴ or it may be referred to the same or new commissioners for revision or correction.⁷⁵

(ix) JUDGMENT OR ORDER—(A) In General. Where separate objections to the confirmation of an assessment are filed it is proper to enter separate judgments of confirmation.⁷⁶ The judgment need not direct the clerk of the court to certify the assessment roll and judgment to the city clerk.⁷⁷

(B) Operation and Effect. Where the record of assessment proceedings shows substantial compliance with the legislative enactment under which the city proceeded, a judgment of confirmation cannot be collaterally attacked,⁷⁸ except on the ground that it was without jurisdiction⁷⁹ or was based on a void ordinance.⁸⁰ A former judgment of confirmation under a former valid ordinance is

People*, 188 Ill. 538, 59 N. E. 241 (holding that failure of an improvement ordinance to state the height of the curb to be constructed on each side of the street is not a jurisdictional defect, making the judgment confirming a special assessment therefor subject to collateral attack, and hence is no defense to an application for judgment of sale for delinquent instalments); Culver v. People, 161 Ill. 89, 43 N. E. 812 (holding that confirmation of a special assessment may be attacked, on application for judgment and order of sale, on the ground that the ordinance authorizing the assessment provided, without authority, for payment of the assessment in instalments); Doremus v. People, 161 Ill. 26, 43 N. E. 701. See also People v. Colegrove, 218 Ill. 545, 75 N. E. 991; People v. Brown, 218 Ill. 375, 75 N. E. 989, both holding that failure of a special assessment ordinance to fix the grade of the street to be improved does not deprive the court of jurisdiction of the subject-matter, so as to render a judgment confirming the assessment

a complete defense to an application for confirmation of a special assessment,⁸¹ but it cannot be pleaded in bar to an application for a judgment of sale on the second ordinance.⁸² And if the former judgment was based on a void ordinance and has been set aside it is no defense to an application for confirmation under a valid ordinance.⁸³ A judgment or order confirming an assessment in a court of record is prima facie evidence of the existence of all jurisdictional facts.⁸⁴ A property-owner who appears in proceedings to confirm an assessment cannot, in the absence of fraud, afterward object to the collection of the same on the ground that the improvement was not made in accordance with the ordinance ordering it.⁸⁵ Where the court orders an assessment recast, as authorized by statute, it will be presumed that it acted upon sufficient cause and within its powers.⁸⁶

(c) Vacation of Judgment or Order. The court may set aside an order of confirmation on the ground of irregularity, mistake, or fraud.⁸⁷ But it would seem that a court has no power to set aside a final judgment of confirmation at a subsequent term.⁸⁸

(x) APPEAL. The right to appeal from a judgment confirming or refusing to confirm an assessment depends on express statutory provision.⁸⁹ Objections not made in the lower court will not be considered on appeal,⁹⁰ and where the evidence is conflicting, a judgment of confirmation will not as a rule be reversed.⁹¹ The existence of evidence supporting the judgment will be presumed where the entire evidence is not incorporated in the bill of exceptions;⁹² and in such case

Persons who may allege error.—Where, in proceedings for confirmation of a special tax, the owner of one lot files objections, which are sustained, the owners of other lots cannot assign such ruling as error, since the diminution of the tax on that lot does not increase the tax on theirs. *Davis v. them to appeal jointly is a matter of discretion with the trial court. Philadelphia, etc., Coal, etc., Co. v. Chicago, 158 Ill. 9, 41 N. E. 1102.

What law governs.—A writ of error to review a levy under a supplemental assessment, under Hurd Rev. St. (1903) c. 24, §§ 57, 58, will be dismissed, where the affidavit required by section 96 has not been filed, although the original assessment proceeding was begun before the provisions of chapter 24 went into effect. *Stone v. E. 479, holding that an objection to an ordinance authorizing a special improvement that it does not specify the nature, character, locality, and description of the proposed improvement is not sufficiently specific; but where no objection is made the question raised thereby will be reviewed on appeal.

On second appeal objections to the sufficiency of the description of an improvement in an ordinance, which existed at the time the original judgment of confirmation of an assessment was appealed from and which were not then raised, cannot be considered. Beckett v. Chicago, 218 Ill. 97, 75 N. E. 747.

also it will be presumed that the proposed improvement conformed substantially to the requirements of the ordinance.⁹³ Where the statute provides that an appeal shall not invalidate the judgment of confirmation except as to the property concerning which the appeal is taken, property-owners who fail to appeal cannot share in the benefits of a successful appeal by other owners.⁹⁴

(xi) CERTIORARI. The confirmation of an assessment will not necessarily preclude a review of proceedings by certiorari.⁹⁵ Upon certiorari to review an order of confirmation the lot owner cannot be heard on any question of fact where he has not appeared and urged his objections below.⁹⁶

c. Appeal From Assessment — (i) RIGHT TO APPEAL AND QUESTIONS REVIEWABLE. Unless expressly authorized by statute,⁹⁷ an appeal may not be taken from the action of proper municipal authorities in levying an assessment.⁹⁸

(ii) PROCEEDINGS AND RELIEF.⁹⁹ On appeal, the right to make the assessment complained of may be considered as well as the manner in which it is apportioned.¹ The appellant must assign the grounds upon which he seeks relief,² and the burden is upon him to sustain the assignment.³ But where on an appeal from commissioners the trial is to a jury, the burden is on the city to show the benefits resulting from the improvement.⁴ An appeal from an assessment by one of several parties assessed does not bring up the whole apportionment for revision.⁵ In case a reassessment is ordered the court should specify the defects in the original assessment.⁶

d. Certiorari to Review Assessments — (i) IN GENERAL. The proceedings of a municipal corporation in making special assessments may be reviewed by certiorari;⁷ but the writ as a rule will not be issued if the property-owners have other adequate remedy,⁸ and its office is limited to a review of errors of law in the

(ii) TIME FOR PROCEEDINGS. Where the statute specifies the time within which certiorari proceedings may be brought, the writ will not be issued if proceedings are instituted after expiration of such time,¹⁰ and even in the absence of such statutory limitation the right to certiorari may be lost by laches.¹¹ A statutory requirement that certiorari proceedings be begun within a prescribed time after confirmation of assessment does not apply to a void confirmation.¹²

(iii) PROCEEDINGS AND RELIEF. A writ of certiorari to correct an assessment should be directed to the council or the board having the matter in charge.¹³ Ordinarily only errors of law apparent upon the record will be reviewed.¹⁴ Errors which have not been presented at the proper time cannot be urged on certiorari.¹⁵ Where the action taken by the board of assessors is not clear a rule may be granted before final determination to compel them to make a certificate to the court of matters omitted from their report to the council.¹⁶ The determination of the court must be such as is prescribed by statute,¹⁷ and ordinarily, where illegal only in part, the entire assessment need not be vacated.¹⁸ Where the assess-

Where no reassessment is provided for, a landowner should not be allowed a certiorari, if he has delayed his application therefor until the city has expended large sums of money on the improvement after the assessment was made. Wilkinson v. Trenton, 36 N. J. L. 499.

Errors prior to the assessment cannot be urged by a property-owner who has had notice but has failed to apply for a writ until the improvement was completed and the assessment levied. Tusting v. Asbury Park, 73 N. J. L. 102, 62 Atl. 183.

Proc. § 2140, providing that the questions to be determined by the court on the hearing shall be whether there was any competent proof authorizing the determination, or, if there was, whether there was a preponderance against it.

15. People v. Kingston, 114 N. Y. App. Div. 326, 99 N. Y. Suppl. 657, holding that objections to a special assessment for street improvements not made before the assessor on grievance day cannot be reviewed on certiorari.

ment of the relator's property is unjust the court under some statutes may correct such assessment, although the rule or general principle upon which the assessment was made is not illegal or erroneous.¹⁹ An order setting aside an assessment and directing a new assessment to be made does not determine that the amount of assessment on the property of any individual should be set aside or reduced.²⁰

e. Actions For Relief Against Assessment—(1) RESTRAINING ENFORCEMENT. An injunction will lie to prevent the collection of a void assessment,²¹ in case the complainant has no other adequate remedy;²² but an injunction will be denied where the city has rightfully exercised its powers.²³ An injunction cannot be had on the ground that the contract was not properly performed where the work has been accepted by the city without fraud,²⁴ nor will an injunction issue where

Amendment or correction.—When, on a proceeding by certiorari, under section 101 of the charter of the city of Buffalo, to review an assessment for a local improvement, it appears that through inadvertence or an error of judgment on the part of the assessor's property of the relator not benefited by the proposed improvement, and therefore not assessable, had been included in the assessment with benefited property belonging to him which was properly assessable, and no illegality is found going to the jurisdiction of the assessors to assess the benefited property, such inclusion is to be deemed a defect which will warrant the court in sending the assessment roll back to the common council "to amend or correct it according to law," as provided by subdivision 5 of said section, instead of ordering it to be canceled as illegal. *People v. So where the statute allows appeal from an assessment it is the proper remedy of landowners dissatisfied with the same.³⁰

(iv) PAYMENT OF AMOUNT DUE. Where only part of an assessment is invalid, a bill to enjoin collection of the assessment cannot as a rule be maintained without prior tender of payment of the valid part.³¹ And the same is true of an action in equity to cancel and set aside the assessment.³² But where the assessment is void in its entirety there need be no tender.³³ An injunction will issue against the collection of a partly valid assessment without prior payment of the valid portion where the assessment was made upon a basis so false and unwarranted as to furnish no data for determining such valid portion.³⁴

(v) TIME TO SUE AND LIMITATIONS. Injunction proceedings to restrain the collection of special assessments may be begun after the amount has been ascertained and notice given the property-owners.³⁵ Injunction will not issue where the parties have unreasonably delayed to ask relief.³⁶ Where the municipal authorities have jurisdiction to improve a street, a property-owner, who, with knowledge

E. 614 (holding that where the alleged fraudulent proceedings on which complainant bases his right to have a sale of his property under a judgment for special assessments enjoined were matters of record before the judgment was obtained, his allegation that he did not know of such alleged grounds of defense until after the judgment is insufficient to en-

of such improvement, makes no objection until after the work has been completed, cannot enjoin the collection of the assessment on the ground that the proceedings have not been regular.³⁷ A statutory provision that suit to set aside or enjoin the making of an assessment shall be brought within a specified time is constitutional,³⁸ and an action brought after the expiration of such designated period will not be entertained;³⁹ but such statutory limitation will not apply where the assessment is based upon absolutely void proceedings,⁴⁰ nor will it apply to an action to set aside an assessment as a cloud on title because of illegal acts of officers in levying the same.⁴¹

(vi) PARTIES. One seeking to enjoin an assessment must show that he has sustained substantial injury.⁴² By the weight of authority several property-owners whose land has been assessed may join in an action to restrain enforcement of a void assessment,⁴³ although it has been held that owners of several parcels of property wrongfully assessed because not benefited cannot join because several in interest.⁴⁴ Where the action is by the owner to enjoin collection of the assessment on the ground that it is unlawful as to him the contractors for the improvement need not be joined.⁴⁵ In an action to restrain the issuance of deeds upon certificates of sale the several holders of the certificates may be joined as defendants.⁴⁶ Where the city is not liable for damages in any event it has been held that it is not a necessary party to an injunction to restrain a tax-collector from the enforcement of assessments in street widening proceedings.⁴⁷

49. See INJUNCTIONS, 22 Cyc. 924 et seq. Presumptions.—From an allegation in the complaint, in an action to enjoin the sale of plaintiff's lots for special assessments, that the lots were sold "for the amount of said assessments," it will be presumed that all other taxes thereon had been paid, and there-proceedings,⁵⁰ and especially that he has been injured.⁵¹ When the owners of several parcels of property join, the complaint should show that the cause of action is the same to all plaintiffs,⁵² or that the action is properly brought to avoid a multiplicity of suits.⁵³ A complaint which alleges two grounds for relief, one of which is good, is not demurrable because of the insufficiency of the other.⁵⁴ The answer must deny the material allegations of the complaint.⁵⁵

(VIII) EVIDENCE.⁵⁶ The burden is on complainant to establish the defects on which he relies.⁵⁷ The court will not set aside an assessment because there are fore it is not necessary to allege such payment. Gilman v. Milwaukee, 61 Wis. 588, 21 N. W. 640. Where a bill to restrain the collection of a special sewer assessment alleged that the sewer subdistrict was established in June, 1899, that the ordinance authorizing the improvement was passed Jan. 15, 1900, and that the assessing ordinance was passed Dec. 3, 1900, it was held that it would be assumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary on demurrer to the bill, that in the course of such proceedings the various steps required by Ohio Rev. St. (1892) §§ 2304, 2374-2376, and 2378, then in force, were duly complied with. Cleney v. Norwood, 137 Fed. 962.

Inconsistency.—A complaint to cancel a special assessment and to restrain its perfection and enforcement is not demurrable because it shows that the assessment is void. Beaser v. Ashland, 89 Wis. 28, 61 N. W. 77. Where a complaint to obtain relief from a sidewalk assessment specifically alleged certain defects in the proceedings which it was conceived went to the right of the municipal authorities to make any assessment, a general averment that a certain assessment, made prior to the final assessment questioned by the complaint, "appears to be and remained a lien upon the plaintiff's said real estate," would not be considered as ground for canceling that particular assessment, or as asserting an obstacle to the making of the final assessment against which injunctive relief was specifically asked. Lyer v. Woods, 166 Ind. 44, 76 N. E. 624.

Division into paragraphs.—In a petition to enjoin the collection of an assessment it is improper to make allegations of regularity and irregularity in the proceedings in separate paragraphs styled different causes of action. Tyler v. Columbus, 6 Ohio Cir. Ct. 224, 3 Ohio Cir. Dec. 427.

Plea of tender.—A complaint in a suit to restrain a city from collecting a special assessment in excess of what plaintiff admits to be due is not bad for plaintiff's failure to keep good the tender of the amount admitted to be due in the absence of a demand to make the tender good at the time of entry of judgment. *Coleman v. Matter in estoppel.—On an issue whether a sewer was lawfully established, evidence offered by the city showing the ratification by the city of the unauthorized construction of the sewer was not matter in "estoppel" that should have been pleaded. Akers v. Kolkmeier, 97 Mo. App. 520, 71 S. W. 536.

Waiver.—Where the charter and the ordinances of a city require notice to be given to property-owners for thirty days to designate material for paving, and notice is not duly given, and the city relies on a waiver of the failure to give notice, it should plead such waiver in a suit to enjoin the assessment, and where no waiver is pleaded the facts are outside the issues. *Eddy v. (IX) JUDGMENT AND RELIEF. The rights of a person not a party to the suit cannot be adjudicated,⁵⁹ and if an assessment is declared invalid, its enforcement will not be restrained as against the property of persons not parties to the action.⁶⁰ Under some statutes the court in which proceedings are brought to enjoin the collection of an assessment may make such order in the premises as is just and equitable when error has been committed in the proceedings.⁶¹ Where an assessment is illegal only in part, and the illegal part can be segregated, the whole assessment will not be vacated.⁶² Where the collection of an assessment is enjoined the city should not be enjoined from collecting a further amount on account of the improvement, when it is entitled to make a reassessment.⁶³ And where an assessment is not entirely void, a general decree quieting title will not be granted, since a lien may be established on the land, although no title passes under the sale for the assessment.⁶⁴ In an action to restrain the sale of land to pay a special assessment, the city may set off the amount of the assessment, and if valid have judgment therefor;⁶⁵ but in case defendant does not ask affirmative relief the court cannot determine what amount of the expense of an improvement is properly chargeable to plaintiff.⁶⁶ In any event relief not sought or germane to that sought cannot be granted.⁶⁷ An injunction against the execution of a deed to a tax purchaser may be awarded as incidental to an action to annul an invalid assessment and cancel a certificate of sale.⁶⁸ Where the cost of work has fallen below the estimate upon a reduction of the assessment to conform to the actual cost, frontage actually assessable when the improvement was ordered should not be decreased by any part subsequently appropriated by the municipal corporation for streets.⁶⁹ Where an injunction restraining an assessment is dissolved a sale of the land on non-payment of the assessment cannot be ordered.⁷⁰

(x) APPEAL.⁷¹ It has been held that an action to set aside an assessment for a highway improvement is not appealable as one affecting title to land.⁷² Errors which are not specifically assigned will not be considered on appeal.⁷³ The decision of a trial court upon a question of fact cannot be reviewed where the evidence is not preserved in the record.⁷⁴ A judgment sustaining an assessment will not be reversed because of the admission of immaterial evidence where it appears that the assessment is valid.⁷⁵ In case a decree has been rendered upon incomplete evidence it will be reversed.⁷⁶ Where the relief sought has become unavailing the appeal should be dismissed.⁷⁷

a. Reassessment — (i) IN GENERAL. It would seem that in the absence of an express authorization by statute a reassessment may be made in place of an assessment void because of irregularity.⁷⁸ But the statutes generally provide for a reassessment where the prior assessment is void,⁷⁹ or is open to attack because of 74. Parker v. Atchison, 48 Kan. 574, 30 Pac. 20.

Questions of fact.—The question of whether an improvement is temporary and such as may be done at the direction of the city engineer is one of fact (Russell v. Adkins, 24 Mo. But compare In re Mauger, 23 Hun (N. Y.) 658, holding that a statute validating a void contract for an improvement did not authorize a reassessment.

What constitutes reassessment.—An order that payment of part of the sum assessed within a specified time should be a discharge accompanied by a direction that the collector irregularities in proceedings,⁸⁰ or because of an insufficiency or excess in amount realized as compared with the cost of the improvement.⁸¹ Such statutes are not unconstitutional,⁸² and may be given a retroactive operation as to defective assessments originating prior to their passage.⁸³ So after an improvement has been made under a void ordinance which assessed the expense upon property benefited, the legislature may authorize the city to levy an assessment against such property to the extent to which it has benefited.⁸⁴ But statutes which authorize the reassessment and relevy of special taxes upon irregularities in the original proceedings are to be strictly construed as in derogation of individual rights.⁸⁵ Such statutes have been held to apply only when the assessment is void because of irregularity and not because of lack of power.⁸⁶ And where an assessment is set aside because made under an invalid ordinance the defect cannot be cured by making a new assessment under the same ordinance.⁸⁷

Pendency a question of fact.—Upon application for the confirmation of a reassessment the question whether the original confirmation proceeding is still pending is one of fact to be shown by the evidence. Cratty v. Chicago, 217 Ill. 453, 75 N. E. 343.

Estoppel.—Where an objection to the confirmation of a new assessment is based on the ground that the original proceedings were not pending in court when the improvement act of 1897 took effect, the objector is estopped to urge that the original proceedings were pending at such time. Cratty v. Chicago, 217 Ill. 453, 75 N. E. 343.

Dismissal of original petition as res adjudicata.—Under Laws (1871-1872), p. 256, ceeding to confirm a new assessment is urged too late as a defense to an application for judgment of sale for the new assessment.⁸⁹

(II) EFFECT OF PAYMENT OR ENFORCEMENT OF FIRST ASSESSMENT. The general rule is that payment of a first assessment does not prevent the city from enforcing collection of a reassessment upon refunding the amount so paid.⁹⁰ But such amount must be refunded⁹¹ or credited on the new assessment.⁹²

(IV) *OPERATION AND EFFECT.*⁹³ A reassessment under a new grant of authority is not a reopening of the judgment by which a former assessment was declared invalid and proceedings thereunder restrained.⁹⁴ In some jurisdictions the reassessment being merely supplementary to the regular proceedings is effective not only to secure a valid assessment of benefits but to validate improvement warrants issued under the original proceeding so far at least as the reassessed benefits are sufficient.⁹⁵ Where the power to make a reassessment is not impugned, objections to the prior assessment are irrelevant.⁹⁶

b. Adjustment of Arrearages. By statute in some instances in order to obviate the difficulty which has arisen from the fact that taxes, assessments, and water rates in certain municipalities have fallen into arrears, and that the validity of some of such assessments is subject to question by reason of irregularities in procedure, or because of the unconstitutionality of the laws under which the proceedings have been had, provision has been made for the determination by a specified board of the amount of such arrearages as should in justice be charged against specific parcels of land, and for the making of such amount when so fixed as a charge upon the land in lieu of all arrearages of taxes, assessments, and rates,⁹⁷ and the validity of such statutes has been upheld.⁹⁸

c. Additional Assessments—(i) IN GENERAL. When an assessment proves insufficient, it may be provided by statute that an additional assessment may be levied.⁹⁹ Under some statutes on proceedings for a supplemental assessment, the art. 9, § 46, authorizing a city to levy a new assessment for a municipal improvement where the original assessment has been set aside, the dismissal of the original petition by the county court because the city failed to make the proof required by the supreme court on remand is not res judicata as to the new assessment. *Goodrich v. Evidence of deficiency.—The commissioners' estimate of the amount which it is necessary to collect by supplemental assessment to pay the deficiency in an original improvement assessment, when approved by the town board of trustees, is prima facie proof of the amount of the deficiency. Cicero v. Skinner, 220 Ill. 82, 77 N. E. 137.

Matters included.—The expense of collecting and disbursing an original improvement assessment may be included in the estimate sufficiency of the ordinance for the original assessment cannot be attacked.¹ An ordinance erroneously providing for interest on a supplemental assessment is not for that reason void in toto where the amount levied for the main deficit may be ascertained and the provision for interest rejected.²

(ii) EFFECT OF INVALIDITY OF FORMER ASSESSMENT. Where an original assessment is void an additional assessment to make up its deficiency is likewise void.³

d. Notice of Relevy or New Assessment. Unless required by statute,⁴ a city need not give notice of intention to levy reassessment or grant a hearing thereon.⁵

e. Time For Making New Assessment. Where an assessment for an improvement is invalid and is so declared, another assessment may be made after the work is completed.⁶ The time within which a municipal corporation may be permitted or required to make a reassessment is limited by a statute barring an action to enforce the original assessment.⁷ A statute providing that in certain contingencies a new assessment may be made within a stated time after confirmation of an original assessment does not impose a limitation where the original assessment has never been confirmed.⁸

f. Levy, Amount, and Apportionment of New Assessment. The rules governing the levy and apportionment of an original assessment apply generally to the levy of a reassessment.⁹ But where in the making of a reassessment an arbitrary for the supplemental assessment. Cicero v. Skinner, 220 Ill. 82, 77 N. E. 137.

Where original assessment was reduced.—A judgment confirming a special assessment after reducing the amount thereof is not conclusive against the right of the municipality to levy a supplemental assessment, in the absence of a finding that the property was assessed its full proportionate share of the actual cost of the improvement. Cicero v. Skinner, 220 Ill. 82, 77 N. E. 137. Where, on objections to a special assessment, the court reduces the assessment on certain property, without increasing the other assessments, and the sum raised is therefore too small, the municipality cannot, upon a supplemental assessment to meet the deficiency, have any part of such deficiency assessed upon the said property. *Greeley v. Sufficiency of notice.—Where the board of public works of the city of St. Paul proceeded to make a reassessment, the giving of separate notices for two separate meetings for the purpose of determining at one meeting the new assessment district, and at the other adjusting the assessment on the property benefited, was a substantial compliance with the city charter. *State v. St. 136, 25 Atl. 530 (holding that viewers must ascertain what improvements were really worth and rely on a statement made by city officials); In re Westlake Ave., 40 Wash. 144, 82 Pac. 279 (holding that where the court, on appeal by some property-owners from an order confirming an assessment for the cost of a local improvement, reversed the order, the trial court must appoint new commissioners for the purpose of ascertaining how much real estate is benefited and preparing an assessment roll comprising the property of the owners who appealed, together with all property benefited and lying outside of the district formerly assessed, and the expenses of the former proceedings and the new assessment must, except what is assessed on the property of owners who did not appeal, be assessed upon land described in the new assessment roll, in rule is adopted, the reassessment is void.¹⁰ And an objection upon that ground may be made by a property-owner who has paid the original assessment and who seasonably interposes objection in the reassessment proceedings.¹¹ Under some statutes the boundaries of the assessment district may be changed upon the reassessment.¹²

23. VALIDATING VOID ASSESSMENTS — a. Power of State. It has been broadly stated that the legislature cannot legalize a void assessment¹³ apparently on the theory that the legislature cannot by direct act make an assessment within an incorporated city,¹⁴ or, when the rights of the parties have been judicially determined, that it is an assumption of judicial power by the legislature;¹⁵ but by the weight of authority it is regarded as within the power of the legislature to provide for validating an assessment void because of irregularities in proceedings,¹⁶ provided such irregularities occurred in the exercise of a power conferred,¹⁷ the general rule relative to curative statutes being that if the omission or irregularity is as to something the legislature might have dispensed with or authorized to

What law governs.—Where a judgment of confirmation in a special assessment proceeding was entered in 1896, and reversed by the supreme court in 1898, and was pending when the local improvement act of 1897 (Laws (1897), p. 101) took effect, a new assessment is governed by the act of 1872 (Acts (1871-1872), p. 218), under which the original assessment was made, and not by the act of 1897. Goodrich v. Chicago, 218 Ill. 18, 75 N. E. 805. Where a special assessment to pay for a public improvement is invalid by reason of failure of defendant to give the notice required by statute, a new assessment should be made, as provided by law, at the time the contract was made, although meantime defendant's charter is amended according to frontage instead of valuation, and for payment by the city for street intersections. Soule v. Seattle, 6 Wash. 315, 33 Pac. 384, 1080.

Evidence of value of work.—Where the act contemplates that a reassessment shall be made on the basis of a quantum meruit, the contracts under which the work was done are competent evidence of the cost and may be considered in making the assessment. Bingaman v. Pittsburgh, 147 Pa. St. 353, 23 Atl. 395. An act providing for the completion of unauthorized street improvements, and assessment for their cost, contemplates that assessments be made on the basis of a quantum meruit; and an assessment based on the contract price of the work, as shown by the city books, without even a finding that the contract price was a fair one, is erroneous. In re Morewood Ave., 159 Pa. Acts of de facto officer.—Where a person acting as an officer is not a usurper but holds under color of right his acts in making an assessment may be validated by the legisla-

be done in the way in which it was by a prior statute it may exercise the power by a later statute.¹⁸ Statutes confirming assessments may be given retroactive operation.¹⁹ Jurisdictional matters are frequently held not to be within the scope of curative statutes,²⁰ nor can the legislature validate an assessment void or voidable for fraud,²¹ or which it could not have authorized in the first instance,²² such as an assessment levied in violation of a constitutional rule of uniformity,²³ or laid without regard to benefits.²⁴ It is within the power of the legislature to impose liability upon property-owners for an improvement already completed.²⁵ A statute validating void assessments will not be construed to give effect to sales made under such assessments.²⁶

b. Power of Municipal Corporation. Jurisdictional defects in assessment proceedings can be cured by subsequent action of the city only by express legislative authority.²⁷ Where an assessment is invalid through the failure of the municipal officers to have filed their certificates of election it may be validated by a subseture. Adams v. Lindell, 5 Mo. App. 197 [affirmed in 72 Mo. 198].

27. California.—Meuser v. Moran, 128 Cal. 373, 60 Pac. 969, holding that a council cannot validate a street assessment of a previous council, which is void for want of jurisdiction to make it, because of the clerk's failure to publish the notice awarding the contract for the work in the newspaper designated by the council.

Iowa.—See Hubbell v. Bennett, 130 Iowa 66, 106 N. W. 375, holding that, where a city had no power to levy an assessment for the improvement of an alley above the established grade, the subsequent passage of an ordinance changing the grade of the alley to conform to the improvement was ineffective to validate the assessment.

quent filing of the certificates.²⁸ When an ordinance prescribing the mode of making an assessment has not been substantially complied with the council cannot cure the defect by resolution.²⁹ Where an assessment is absolutely void it cannot be validated by a mere request by the property-owner for revision.³⁰

24. INTEREST — a. In General. Assessments for public improvements do not bear interest³¹ unless so provided by statute.³²

b. Reassessments or Reduction of Amount. Where a reassessment is levied or a reduction in assessment is made, interest should be computed upon such reassessment or reduction, not on the original assessment.³³ Where a property-owner pays the amount of an assessment and does not resist proceedings to increase the assessment, interest should be allowed only from the date of judgment in such proceedings.³⁴

Where payable in instalments.—The fact that an original assessment was made payable in instalments drawing interest as authorized by Local Improvement Act, § 42 (Hurd Rev. St. (1903) c. 24, § 548), does not empower the city, in levying a supplemental assessment payable in one payment, to provide that such assessment shall draw interest. Conway v. Tuttle, 67 Conn. 162, 34 Atl. 1028, 32 L. R. A. 822.

Where interest authorized on ordinary taxes.—A provision for collection of interest on overdue ordinary taxes does not authorize the collection of interest on an assessment for a public improvement. Sargent v. Tuttle, 67 Conn. 162, 34 Atl. 1028, 32 L. R. A. 822.

Assessment against municipality.—Assessments against a municipality for the benefit of the public, arising by reason of a special assessment, draw interest in like manner as do the assessments made against the private owners of property directly benefited by such assessment. Chicago v. People, 116 Ill. App. 564 [affirmed in 215 Ill. 235, 74 N. E. 137].

Where assessment is divided into instalments.—Under Laws (1893), p. 1447, c. 644, directing the assessors to divide the assessment imposed upon any lot for street improvements into twenty annual instalments, and each year thereafter for twenty years to assess an amount equal to one of said annual instalments with interest upon the lot, the interest to be added to the instalment is only the interest upon the instalment to be paid in the year during which the assessment is imposed, and not interest upon all the instalments remaining unpaid. Hagemeyer v. New York, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 587 [affirmed in 101 N. Y. 284, 4 N. 25. LIENS AND PRIORITY — a. In General. Special assessments do not become liens save as made so by statutory authority,³⁵ and a legislative provision that municipal taxes shall constitute a lien upon property does not apply to local taxes for public improvement.³⁶ Statutes generally, however, make assessments for improvements a lien upon the property assessed.³⁷ Such statutes are not retroactive.³⁸ But a statute may provide a remedy to enforce existing liens as well as those afterward created.³⁹ A statute providing that special assessments shall be made a lien upon the land is not invalidated by the mere fact that as the improvement may never be completed the benefits may never accrue.⁴⁰ In order that a lien may be imposed the statute conferring it must be strictly followed.⁴¹ Where the statute provides that assessments for public improvements shall be liens upon the property assessed, it is not necessary that the ordinance ordering an improvement declare that the assessment levied to pay for the same shall constitute a lien.⁴² Where the city has a right to a lien for an improvement it has been held that a contractor may have a like lien for work which he has done under a contract with the property-owners and upon which the city is not liable.⁴³ A contractor may be entitled to a lien on completion of his contract, although his contract is not for all the work necessary for the completion of the improvement of the street.⁴⁴ Each lot or parcel of property is subject to a lien for the work done opposite to it, although several contiguous parcels may be owned by the same person.⁴⁵ An assessment upon public property does not create a lien upon such property.⁴⁶

In Pennsylvania owing to the numerous and varying statutes relative to the enforcement of municipal claims for improvements no general rules can be deduced from the decisions. It has, however, been held that the claim must be filed within the time prescribed by statute (Pittsburgh v. Knowlson, 92 Pa. St. 116; Schenley v. Com., 36 Pa. St. 29, 78 Am. Dec. 359; Manheim v. Cogley, 4 Lanc. L. Rev. 297); that it must be sufficiently specific to identify the property and to indicate the nature and amount of the work (Scranton v. Arnt, 148 Pa. St. 210, 23 Atl. 1121; Scranton v. Jones, 133 Pa. St. 219, 19 Atl. 347; Philadelphia v. Richards, 124 Pa. St. 303, 16 Atl. 802; Allentown v. Hower, 93 Pa. St. 332; Pittsburg v. Cluley, 66 Pa. Meighan*, 15 Pa. Dist. 10), or conform to the requisites of a mechanic's lien or give a bill of particulars (Pittsburg v. Cluley, supra; Schenley v. Com., supra; Greensburg v. Laird, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 608. But see Philadelphia v. Sutter, 30 Pa. St. 53; Wilvurt v. Sunbury, 28 Leg. Int. 357); that it should state the date at which the work was done (City v. Wood, 4 Phila. 156. But see Philadelphia v. Gratz Land Co., 38 Pa. St. 359); that it must describe the property assessed (Scranton v. Jones, supra; Schenley v. Com., 36 Pa. St. 64), and state the name of the owner (Northern Liberties v. Coates, 15 Pa. St. 245; Northern Liberties v. Myers, 2 Pars. Eq. Cas. 239), or registered owner (Gans v. Philadelphia, 102 Pa. St. 97; McClurg's Estate, 4 Pa. Dist. 655; White's Estate, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 308. See Pottsville v. Safe Deposit Bank, 2 Leg. Chron. 379); that it must aver prior notice to the property-owners to do the work where such notice is essential (Philadelphia v. Stevenson, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 287. See also Allentown v. Light, 15 Pa. Dist.

619); that it need not specifically state when the assessment is due (Scranton v. Arnt, supra); that it need not set out the specific statutes or ordinances under which they are filed (Philadelphia v. Stevenson, 132 Pa. St. 103, 19 Atl. 70; Philadelphia v. Richards, supra); nor contain a copy of the ordinance authorizing the improvements (Allentown v. Light, supra); that it need not be signed by the party or his attorney (Rodney v. Philadelphia, 3 Walk. 505), but may be signed by attorney (Allentown v. Light, supra; Philadelphia v. Meighan, supra); that a separate lien may be filed against each parcel of property (Beltzhoover Borough v. Maple, 130 Pa. St. 335, 18 Atl. 650); and that a claim defective in form or allegation may usually be amended in the discretion of the court (McKeesport Borough v. Busch, 166 Pa. St. 46, 31 Atl. 49; Mt. Pleasant Borough v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 138 Pa. St. 365, 20 Atl. 1052, 11 L. R. A. 520; Philadelphia v. Stevenson, supra; Philadelphia v. Richards, supra; Allentown v. Hower, supra; Philadelphia v. Kelly, 2 Pa. Dist. 143, holding that where a street assessment is by mistake filed against a lot adjoining the lot intended, and the lot intended still remains in the hands of the same party, the lien may be amended so as to transfer it to the proper lot; Oxford Borough v. Alexander, 2 Chest. Co. Rep. 265, holding that error in naming a municipality in a municipal lien is amendable under the act of April 21, 1858, permitting amendments of such claims).

What law governs.—Where a petition for a street improvement, the ordinance passed in pursuance thereof, and the claim of lien expressly purport to conform to the special act of 1867, the fact that the lien was filed in accordance with the general act of May 16, 1891 (Pamphl. Laws 69), does not vitiate the proceedings, since the act of 1891 does not repeal or change the provisions of the act of 1867, but provides somewhat more specifically for the practice in cases where final assessments have been made. McKeesport Borough v. Busch, 166 Pa. St. 46, 31 Atl. 49. The general act of May 16, 1891, did not repeal the act of May 23, 1889, relating to cities of the third class. Scranton v. Clark, 7 Lack. Jur. (Pa.) 84. But such claims should be filed under the act of May 16, 1891, and not under the act of May 23, 1889. Carbondale v. Gillis, 7 Lack. Jur. (Pa.) 97.

49. Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa. St. 69.

50. See Rauer v. Lowe, 107 Cal. 229, 40 Pac. 337 (holding that a certificate as to the completion of street work, signed by a mere clerk, under a general direction of the city engineer to make out such certificates, is not sufficient, under St. (1891) p. 205, requiring continue a lien for assessment there must be filed a certificate certified by the clerk of the board of street commissioners, no formal vote by such board authorizing the filing of such certificate is necessary.⁵¹ The city need not pay the cost of filing a lien as long as the lien remains in force and the property is not sold.⁵²

c. When Lien Attaches. The lien of an assessment must exist and attach according to the terms and conditions of the statute creating it,⁵³ such statutes usually fixing the time at which it shall attach.⁵⁴ As a general rule when no time is expressly fixed by the statute for the lien to take effect, it accrues upon the assessment of the tax.⁵⁵ Under particular statutes it has been held that the assessment must have been approved and recorded,⁵⁶ or confirmed after due notice,⁵⁷ or that the tax bills must have been delivered to the person entitled to receive them.⁵⁸ Under some statutes, however, the lien dates from the commencement of the work done.⁵⁹ An act validating an assessment makes it a lien only from the date of the act and does not relate back to the date of the assessment.⁶⁰ But on the contrary where a statute authorizing a reassessment contemplates that it shall be regarded as an original assessment the lien of the new assessment has been held to relate back to the date of the original assessment.⁶¹

d. Duration of Lien. The duration of a lien of an assessment is not limited in the absence of statute,⁶² although it is of course discharged by payment.⁶³ By such a certificate by the city engineer in order to make the amounts assessed a lien on the lands); Buckman v. Cuneo, 103 Cal. 62, 36 Pac. 1025 (holding that failure to record a diagram drawn on the back of such certificate, referred to therein, and a necessary part thereof, is fatal to the lien).

Sufficiency.—Under St. (1891) p. 205, requiring the assessment, warrant, diagram, and engineer's certificate to be recorded in the office of the superintendent of streets in order to render an assessment for street improvements a lien on the land, the engineer's certificate must be recorded as a part of the assessment record, and not in a separate book. *Rauer v. Limitations of personal actions.—The lien created by the Pennsylvania acts of 1819–1820 on adjacent property, for curbing and paving, is not limited by the statute of limitations relating to personal actions, there being no personal liability therefor. Council v. Moyamensing, 2 Pa. St. 224.

63. See Williamson v. Baltimore, 19 Md. 413; Philadelphia v. Merz, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 227; Philadelphia v. Dobbins, 5 Pa. Dist. 217, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 63, holding that under the act of Feb. 21, 1862, providing, in regard to municipal liens, that property-owners shall have the right, "at any time" after the lien is filed, to make payment into court of the amount of lien, with interest and costs to abide the event of any proceeding thereon, in which event the claim shall cease to be a lien upon the land, the owner is entitled to make such payment into court even after scire facias has issued for the enforcement of the lien.

Partial payment.—Where tax assessments are levied on an alley, and the owner of a portion of the abutting property pays one-third of the whole amount of the assessments, which payment the controller credits generally, without apportionment, as so much paid on the whole assessments, the lien of the tax for the unpaid balance may still be enforced as to the whole alley-way. Rosenberg v. Freeman, 2 Silv. Sup. (N. Y.) 189, 5 N. Y. Suppl. 891. Where an assessment for street improvement was to "unknown owners," the payment by one of several co-owners of his proportion does not release any part of a lot from the lien of the assessment. Williams v. Bergin, 127 Cal. 578, 60 Pac. 164, (1899) 57 Pac. 1072.

express statutory provision the lien is often made to continue until payment.⁶⁴ By other statutes the duration of the lien is limited to a definite period.⁶⁵ Such statutes do not have a retroactive effect.⁶⁶ A statute limiting the time within which a reassessment may be made does not limit the duration of the lien of the original assessment.⁶⁷ It has been held that where the statute provides for the payment of the assessment in instalments and that the lien shall continue for a specified time after the last instalment is due, the lien exists for such period after the last instalment is due on its face and the period is not shortened by the fact that the last instalment becomes due earlier by reason of default in the other instalments.⁶⁸ Where there is a specific limitation of the time within which the lien may be enforced a defective scire facias issued upon the lien will not have the effect of continuing it.⁶⁹ A sale of the land charged for the satisfaction of the lien extinguishes it,⁷⁰ as does a judicial sale for enough to pay the claim.⁷¹ The Effect of payment by mistake.—A valid special assessment levied on a village lot was erroneously assessed to an adjoining owner, who paid the assessment. On learning of the mistake, the amount of the assessment paid was refunded to the adjoining owner, and the indorsement on the tax warrant, showing the payment of the assessment, canceled, by resolution of the village authorities. It was held in an action against the lot for the assessment that, since a special assessment is a charge on land, and not against the owner, the payment of the assessment, although by mistake, discharged the land from further liability. *Hudson v. lien of one of several tax bills against separate tracts of land may be released without affecting the others.⁷²

e. Priorities. A lien upon land for special assessment levied against it may by statute be made paramount to all other claims or liens against the property.⁷³ For example, the lien of an assessment may be superior to a prior mortgage⁷⁴ or judgment⁷⁵ or mechanic's lien.⁷⁶ It is not, however, superior to a mortgage to an officer of a court of equity by which the property has been brought within the custody of the law⁷⁷ or to a judgment,⁷⁸ or a mortgage lien⁷⁹ created before the enactment of the statute conferring the assessment lien. Where the assessment lien is entitled to precedence over all other liens save taxes, it has precedence over prior similar assessment liens.⁸⁰

26. PAYMENT OR SURRENDER OF PROPERTY — a. In General. The time and manner of payment of assessments is usually prescribed by legislative enactment,⁸¹ and the discretion of the legislature in making such provisions will not be reviewed

Encumbrance created before incorporation.—By virtue of the act of Feb. 3, 1824, applicable originally to Philadelphia, and extended by the act of 1843 to Delaware county, a borough claim for the cost of abating a nuisance takes priority over an encumbrance reserved by a deed executed before the incorporation of the borough. Subsequent acts do not affect the case. Harvey v. South Chester, 99 Pa. St. 565.

Property of the state.—Property of the state is not subject to the provisions of the charter of the city of Rahway (Pub. Laws (1865), p. 499, § 57), making assessments for city improvements a lien prior to any mortgage or encumbrance on the land; and it is immaterial that the complainants, assignees of such a mortgage, have never recorded the assignment, as the only penalties for failure to record an assignment are prescribed in the recording act (Rev. p. 708, pl. 32), which provides that the assignee shall be bound by proceedings and sale on foreclosure against any previous holder, and that payment made in good faith to the assignor, and without actual notice of the assignment, shall be good as against the assignee. Public School Trustees v. Shotwell, 45 N. J. Eq. 106, 16 Atl. 308.

An act to authorize an extension of the time of payment which provides that the city council "may" grant relief by so doing is permissive and not mandatory. State v. Minneapolis, 65 Minn. 298, 68 N. W. 31.

Estoppel to deny validity of payment.—Where a property-owner, by direction of the proper authorities, pays the amount of a claim for the construction of a sewer to the contractor who did the work, the city, and all parties claiming in right of the city, are estopped from asserting that such payment was invalid, although regular assessment bills had not been issued to the person so paid. Philadelphia v. Gabell, 10 Pa. Dist. 526.

by the courts except upon showing of manifest abuse.⁸² The validity of a payment is not affected by the failure of the receiving officer to make the proper entries and give the property-owner a voucher as required by statute.⁸³ Payment of a special assessment by check which is accepted by the proper officer and paid when presented is a valid payment as of the date the check was given;⁸⁴ but a note given in payment of the amount of an assessment erroneously computed does not constitute an accord and satisfaction of the entire amount assessed.⁸⁵ A receipt given for an assessment is not conclusive as to the property with reference to which payment is made.⁸⁶ If an assessment is erroneously discharged of record its lien cannot be restored as against persons who have acquired rights in reliance upon the truth of the record in good faith and in ignorance of the mistake.⁸⁷

b. Instalments. It is competent for the legislature to provide for the payment of assessments in instalments,⁸⁸ and such a provision, although requiring interest on deferred payments, does not infringe the personal rights of property-owners by compelling them to pay interest, provided, under the statute, any instalment or the whole assessment may be paid at any time.⁸⁹ Where there is no statutory authority for the extension of an assessment over a period of years, such extension may not be made,⁹⁰ and the number of instalments and the time for their collection depend upon statutory provision;⁹¹ but it has been held that where proceedings were had under an act making assessments payable in five instalments they would not be affected by a subsequent amendatory act providing for ten instalments.⁹² Where instalments have been paid upon a special assessment which is afterward adjudged excessive, the excess over that properly assessable should be credited on the subsequent instalments in the order in which they fall due.⁹³ Where an instalment of an assessment exceeds the amount which may be levied

c. Presumption of Payment. By statute in some jurisdictions the lien of an assessment is discharged under a presumption of payment arising after the lapse of a specified time,⁹⁵ but this presumption may be rebutted.⁹⁶

d. Cancellation of Receipt or Satisfaction. Where a claim for improvements has been satisfied of record, the city is estopped as against a purchaser of the property to cancel the receipt or evidence of satisfaction.⁹⁷

Defect in record.—Where a street has been properly laid out by competent authority and

Form of action is not material.—The rule that a special improvement tax paid without protest as to certain irregularities in the assessment cannot be recovered back applies whether the action for the recovery is direct or the form of the relief sought will accomplish that result in effect. Pabst Brewing Co. v. Milwaukee, 126 Wis. 110, 105 N. W. 563.

The fact that others have failed to pay, or that the municipal authorities have aban-assessment being set aside the money paid under it may be recovered, although the payment was in a legal sense voluntary.² The money must have come into the treasury of the corporation for its use or it must have had or been able to have the benefit thereof.³ In case a reassessment is made the amount of which is less than the original assessment, one who has paid the original may recover the difference.⁴ And it has been held that where an action is brought to recover an assessment on the ground that it is illegally apportioned, the property-owner can recover only the difference between the amount paid and that which he lawfully should have paid.⁵ A payment may be recovered after the assessment has been vacated, although the payment would have been a ground for a refusal to vacate the assessment.⁶ A person cannot recover back an assessment on the ground that the officers applied the payment by him to assessments on other property not owned by him, but his remedy is to enforce his payment as an exoneration of his land from the assessment.⁷ A statute providing a specific remedy for vacating, correcting, or reducing assessments does not apply to an action to recover back the amount of an illegal assessment paid under coercion of law.⁸

(B) Distinction Between Voluntary and Involuntary Payment. In determining what is a voluntary payment the rule applicable to payments in general, that a payment to be involuntary must be under coercion of fact or law, to prevent an immediate seizure of goods or restraint of person or under such other circumstances as virtually destroy the free agency of the person making the payment,⁹ is applicable to payments of local assessments.¹⁰ A payment made without coercion in fact or law is voluntary.¹¹ So it has been held voluntary where made before process issues for collection,¹² before distraint under a warrant for collection,¹³ before any threats or proceedings by the city,¹⁴ or before sale is threatened.¹⁵ Nor is a payment involuntary where made in order to effect a sale of the land,¹⁶ or to secure a loan on the property.¹⁷ Where payment of an apparently regular assessment is made with knowledge of facts rendering the assessment illegal and before any attempt has been made to enforce it, it cannot be regarded as an involuntary payment under coercion of law.¹⁸ On the other hand a payment under coercion of a levy has been held involuntary,¹⁹ as has payment after a threatened levy,²⁰ or after advertisement of sale,²¹ or to prevent cloud upon title.²² And a payment under direction of a judgment of foreclosure is under coercion.²³ When payment is made pending proceedings to vacate the assessment it has been held that it may be recovered after the assessment is set aside,²⁴ although it would seem that such recovery could not be had were payment made before institution of proceedings to vacate the assessment.²⁵

done the collection of, other special assessments in respect to the same improvement, will not aid one who has voluntarily paid in recovering back his money. Falls v. Cairo, 58 Ill. 403.

L. 555 (holding that section 5 of the supplement to the Elizabeth city charter of March 17, 1875, barring an action to recover back money paid on an old assessment for a public improvement, which has been set aside, until the making of a new assessment, applies only to assessments made after its passage); Trimmer v. Rochester, 134 N. Y. 76, 31 N. E. 255 [affirming 9 N. Y. Suppl. 695, and following Diefenthaler v. New York, 111 N. Y. 331, 19 N. E. 48]; Clowes v. New York, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 539 (holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 410, providing that when money is received in a fiduciary capacity the statute of limitations shall not begin to run until the person having the right to make the demand has actual knowledge of the facts giving that right, does not apply to an action to recover from a city an illegal excess collected on an assessment); Parsons v. Rochester, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 258; Groesbeck v. Cincinnati, 51 Ohio St. 365, 37 N. E. 707 [reversing 11 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 819, 30 Cinc. L. Bul. 75] (holding that the fact that an excessive assessment for a public improvement, made by mistake in the calculation of the costs, was paid in ignorance of the mistake, does not affect the operation thereon of Rev. St. § 5848, barring an action to recover illegal taxes paid in one year from the date of payment).

37. See State v. Milwaukee, 15 Wis. 250, holding that where a resolution of the common council of the city of Milwaukee authorized the issue of city orders to the "owners" of certain lots for the amount of a special tax which had been paid on them for a purpose afterward abandoned by the city and at the time the tax was levied A actions.³⁸ The burden is upon plaintiff to establish the illegality of the assessment,³⁹ as also ignorance of such illegality where essential to recovery.⁴⁰ An error in the instructions is not prejudicial where no ground of recovery has been established.⁴¹ It has been held that in the same action a plaintiff may seek to have an assessment roll annulled and to recover the amount paid.⁴² A property-owner entitled to a rebate on the amount of his assessment may recover it in an action of assumpsit.⁴³

f. Penalties For Non-Payment. A penalty for non-payment of assessments cannot be imposed by the city unless the same is expressly authorized by statute,⁴⁴ and a statutory provision allowing imposition of penalties for non-payment of general taxes does not apply to special assessments.⁴⁵ But by statute a penalty is frequently provided in event of failure to make payment within a time specified.⁴⁶

owned one of these lots, but soon sold it to B; requesting B to deduct the tax from the purchase-money, and to pay it to the city, which was done, the tax was paid by A, and B was not entitled to the city order for the amount under the resolution.

Where payment has been made to person not entitled.—Where a special city assessment tax, after being partly collected, was declared illegal, and an ordinance directed the mayor to take up all receipts for payments of such tax, and to issue certificates of the city's indebtedness for the amounts, it was held that the city was bound to issue such a certificate to B, although the mayor had already taken up B's receipt and issued a certificate to A, who had wrongfully obtained possession of the receipt, which bore no evidence of having been lawfully assigned to A, who transferred the certificate thus fraudulently obtained to an innocent third party for value. State v. Butler, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 418.

38. See PLEADING. And see Covington v. Powell, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 226 (holding answers equivocal, evasive, and insufficient on demurrer); Louisville v. Zanone, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 151 (holding that a party paying money for betterments under a void ordinance by mistake of law or fact, in order to recover, must aver that the betterment was made without his consent or approval, and was not beneficial, or was injurious, to his property); Higgins v. Pelton, 4 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 521, 2 Clev. L. Rep. 306 (holding that an averment that the assessment was illegal and void is not demurrable as a legal conclusion; but it is a fact to be objected to by motion for indefiniteness).

An answer to a complaint to recover part of an assessment setting up the six-year limitation, and denying all plaintiff's allegations of facts dehors the record which render the assessment void, is good. Diefenthaler v. New York, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 627, 1 N. Y. Suppl. 912 [affirmed in 111 N. Y. 331, 19 N. E. 48]; Zborowski v. New York, 1 N. Y. Suppl. 913.

Presumptions.—Where it was not alleged by the complainant that he had not due notice of the proceedings in laying the assessment, or that they were irregular, the presumption was that he had notice and that the proceedings were regular. Sanford v.

Conclusiveness of former judgment.—An assessment for a street improvement will not necessarily be declared void by the court of appeals, in a suit to recover back money collected under it, because the special term has declared it void in proceedings instituted by a stranger to the suit. Moore v. Albany, 98 N. Y. 396.

g. Disposition of Funds. The proceeds of a special assessment must be applied as directed by law,⁴⁷ and where there are several improvements, a deficit in the fund for one cannot be made up from a surplus in the others,⁴⁸ although it may be provided that where improvements have been first paid for under a general tax the money raised from assessments for such improvements may be used in making other improvements.⁴⁹

h. Surrender of Property Assessed. Under some statutes it is provided that in lieu of paying the assessment the property-owner may surrender the property to the city which shall pay him the value thereof determined in the manner provided by the statute.⁵⁰

F. Enforcement of Assessments and Special Taxes—1. IN GENERAL. As a general rule a statute providing a specific method for the enforcement of assessments is held to supersede all other methods,⁵¹ but under some statutes a of the charter of the city of St. Louis, allowing the holder of a tax bill fifteen per cent per annum if payment of the bill be not made within the time payment is demanded or refused, is not interest, but of the nature of a penalty, and is valid); *St. Joseph v. App. 460 (holding that an action brought on a special tax bill dates from the time the petition is filed and summons issued; the right to penal interest under said tax bill dates from said filing thereon, even as against a non-resident, not served with process upon that summons, but subsequently brought in by publication); Baker v. French, 18 Ohio Cir. Ct. 420, 10 Ohio Cir. Dec. 222; Evans v. Cincinnati, 7 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 540, 3 Cinc. L. Bul. 856; Toledo v. Platt, 4 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 28, 2 Ohio N. P. 304 (holding that under Rev. St. §§ 2285, 2286, providing that special assessments shall be payable at the time stipulated in the ordinance, and, if not paid when due, the amount thereof, with interest and penalty, may be recovered by suit, the penalty attaches on failure to pay when due, and not when suit is brought).

In case of excessive instalments.—Where assessments for street improvements payable in instalments are in excess of the rate limited by law, no penalty can be attached to unpaid instalments. Pike v. Cummings, 36 Ohio St. 213.

47. See the statutes of the several states. And see People v. Chicago, 152 Ill. 546, 38 N. E. 744, where it was held, under a statute permitting the division of special assessments into annual instalments bearing interest till paid, directing that out of the first instalments should be paid all costs, and the balance paid to the contractor, to whom should then be issued interest-bearing vouchers for the rest of the contract price, and providing that if, upon issuance of such vouchers, there remain any surplus, it should at once be credited on the unpaid instalments, that such credit need not be made until it was ascertained how much of the apparent surplus would be used to defray the cost of collecting the unpaid instalments and the loss of interest for the time the money paid remained in the hands of the tax-collectors before their settlement with the city.

Property which may be surrendered.—Under Mass. St. (1874) c. 97, giving the right to the city of Somerville to take land for a public park, and to assess a proportionate share of the cost and expense upon real estate benefited thereby, and giving the same rights to owners to surrender their estates as is provided by St. (1871) c. 382, no surrender can be made of an estate not abutting on the park; and an estate separated from the park by a county road is not an abutting estate. *Holt v. Missouri.—Moberly v. Wight, 19 Mo. App. 269, holding that a charter, in declaring how recovery for the expense of street improvements named therein may be enforced by action against the owners and occupants of adjacent lots who fail to do the work, is exclusive, and cannot be enforced in any other manner, or by any other punishment, as by making such failure a misdemeanor.

choice of remedies is permitted.⁵² The proceedings for the enforcement of assessments are usually regarded as in rem,⁵³ although in some jurisdictions a personal action is permitted.⁵⁴ It has been held that a remedy provided by statute for the recovery by the city for improvements notwithstanding irregularities may be adopted even after suit brought to recover taxes paid under protest.⁵⁵

2. CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS. Constitutional or statutory provisions governing the collection of general taxes are not in the absence of express provision applicable to special assessments.⁵⁶ An act changing the manner of enforcing assessments will not, in the absence of clear expression,⁵⁷ apply to assessments levied before its passage.⁵⁸ The legislature has no power to provide that assessments may be collected as against different citizens by different processes.⁵⁹

3. AUTHORITY OF COLLECTORS AND OTHER OFFICERS. Power to collect special assessments rests solely in the officer authorized by statute.⁶⁰ It has been held

St. (1894) § 4294 (Horner Rev. St. (1897) § 6777), as well as by precept issued by order of the city council, as provided in Burns Rev. St. (1894) § 4298); Talcott v. Noel, 107 Iowa 470, 78 N. W. 39 (holding that under Code (1873), § 481, authorizing a city to certify assessments to the county auditor for collection, such action is discretionary, since, under section 478, the city may proceed at law or in equity in its own name, or that of any person to whom payment is directed to be made, to enforce collection); Pittsburg v. Fay, 8 Pa. Super. Ct. 269, 43 Wkly. (Pa.) 147 (holding that a special municipal assessment against school property may be enforced by a mandamus execution or other remedy, since the levari facias is not the only writ which may be sued to collect a municipal assessment).

Remedies of contractor.—A contractor constructing a street improvement may choose between the remedies given by Ind. Acts (1901), p. 537, c. 231, § 6, providing that delinquent assessments for benefits shall be collected in the same manner that delinquent taxes are collected, or by a foreclosure of the lien, although the council in its order of assessment has provided that it should be collected as taxes are collected. *Shirk v. that the legislature may confer the power of appointing a collector upon a corporation exclusively interested in the assessment.⁶¹

4. PROPERTY WHICH MAY BE SUBJECTED — a. In General.⁶² A city can enforce a local assessment only as against such property as it is authorized by statute to pursue.⁶³ Where the proceeding is regarded as strictly in rem, only the specific property against which the assessment is levied may be sold.⁶⁴ But where an assessment is regarded as a debt due from the owner it may be satisfied from the proceeds of the sale of his lands generally.⁶⁵ Where property subject to an assessment lien is taken for public use the lien may be satisfied from the award of damages.⁶⁶ But the amount of the assessment cannot be deducted from an award for the taking of other property of the owner where there is no personal liability.⁶⁷ Where the lien of an assessment is not removed by a judicial sale of the realty charged, the assessment is not entitled to participate in the distribution of the proceeds of such a sale.⁶⁸ Where lands encumbered by a tax lien are sold in separate parcels to different purchasers at different times, each paying full value without regard to the encumbrance, the separate parcels should be sold to satisfy the lien in the inverse order of alienation.⁶⁹

b. Public Property. County property cannot be sold to enforce a special assessment,⁷⁰ but it has been held that land belonging to a school-district but not used for school purposes may be subjected.⁷¹ Where a tax bill issues against the city for its proportionate part of the cost of improvements it is provided by statute, in some states, that the judgment thereon shall be the same as an ordinary judgment on contract.⁷² Under such a statute a general judgment may be rendered.⁷³

e. Railroad Property.⁷⁴ The rule generally recognized is that the road-bed or

E. 230 (holding that where land on opposite sides of a street is assessed as two lots, and the assessments thus made are certified to the county auditor for collection, it is error to charge such assessments made on both sides of the street upon the land on one side of the street).

65. Gould v. Baltimore, 59 Md. 378, holding that where property assessed for a local improvement was sold by trustees under a will, and, the proceedings being in court, demand was made upon the trustees for the payment of the assessment before distribution, the fact that the trustees made a partial distribution among the parties entitled was no reason why a fund arising from the sale of other land of the estate, and which the same parties were entitled to, should not be subjected to the payment of the assessment. But see Hutchinson v. Rochester, 92 Hun (N. Y.) 393, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 766, holding that Rochester City Charter (Laws (1880), c. 14, § 209), providing for carrying forward into the assessment roll of the ensuing year unpaid special assessments, and creating a personal obligation therefor against the owner of the property, does not make such assessments a lien on other lands of such owner.

right of way or other property so connected with the operation of a railroad that its loss by conveyance or sale would dismember the road as a line of travel cannot be sold to satisfy a local assessment,⁷⁵ but that other property of a railroad may be subjected in the same manner as property of individuals.⁷⁶

5. PARTICULAR METHODS OF PROCEDURE — a. Recovery on Quantum Meruit. An assessment for a local improvement must be enforced by means of valid proceedings authorizing the assessment, and as a general rule neither the contractor for the work⁷⁷ nor the city⁷⁸ can recover against the owner of the property upon a quantum meruit where the assessment is invalid.

b. Issuance of Certificates and Warrants For Collection. Provision is made in some jurisdictions for the issuance to the contractor of certificates or warrants, by virtue of which he enforces collection of assessments directly, in an action in for constructing a sidewalk in front of defendant's premises, and tried the case on the theory that he had done the work called for in the bill, and in the manner and with the materials required, plaintiff could not after trial on this theory recover pro tanto for the value of work done; but recovery, if at all, must be for the full tax bill); Sedalia v. Abell, 103 Mo. App. 431, 76 S. W. 497 (holding that where an ordinance declared it necessary that a certain street be brought to the established grade and paved, and a contract was let under the provisions of such ordinance, but there was no ordinance declaring that in the opinion of the council the general revenue fund of the city was not in condition to pay the cost of bringing the street to the established grade, the contractor was not entitled to show, in a suit to recover a special assessment against the owners of the lots abutting on the street, that in fact the street was not brought to the established grade, and recover from the owner as for paving alone, in express contradiction of the ordinance and contract). But compare O'Connor v. Stewart, 19 La. Ann. 127, holding that where the lien of a contractor upon private land for the cost of public improvements placed thereon under a contract awarded him by an inspector at public sale is lost through failure of the inspector to comply with the requirements of law in making the award, the owner of the land will be liable to the contractor for the cost in an action of quantum meruit, if the work is necessary and beneficial to him.

Lang, 1 Alaska 593 (holding that where resident property-owners of a town petitioned the common council to improve the street in front of their property, specifying the kind and character of improvement, and saw the work and labor done and the materials furnished in compliance with their request, the town might recover the reasonable value of such work and materials in an action of assumpsit under their implied contract to pay); Jaeger v. the nature of a foreclosure.⁷⁹ The form of such warrants and the time and manner of their issuance must conform substantially to the requirements of the statute,⁸⁰ but mere irregularities will not invalidate the same.⁸¹

e. Issuance of Precept to Contractor. Under the statutes in some jurisdictions where the property-owners refuse for a specified length of time to pay assessments the contractor may upon affidavit of such fact secure the issuance to him of a precept for the amount of the assessment, and upon this precept after due notice and default a levy and sale of the land against which the assessment is made may be had.⁸² Any person who is aggrieved by the issuance of such a precept may appeal by filing a sufficient bond with the city clerk, and the city clerk must thereupon certify the papers connected with the improvement to a designated court wherein they serve the purpose of a complaint to which the appellants shall answer upon rule, and in case it is found that the proceedings subsequent to the order directing the work to be done are regular, that the work has been performed in accordance with the contract, and that the estimate has been properly made thereon a sale is directed.⁸³ It is forbidden the property-owners upon such

Duty of officer to issue.—In Cal. Laws (1871-1872), p. 813, § 10, providing that the auditor must be satisfied, before countersigning a street assessment warrant, that the proceedings have been "legal and fair," as it could not have been intended to give the auditor power to refuse to sign on his own notion of fairness, although the proceedings may have been legal, the word "fair" is surplusage. Wood v. Strother, 76 Cal. 545, 18 Pac. 766, 9 Am. St. Rep. 249.

Who may issue.—The general council of a city, under Ky. St. § 2834, has authority to direct apportionment warrants, liens for which are given on the property improved, to be issued by the clerk of the board of councilmen (who had authority to issue them when the contract for the improvement was made) instead of the board of public works, who are required by Ky. St. § 2839, to issue them. Isenberg v. Selvage, 103 Ky. 260, 44 S. W. 974, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1963.

Amendment.—An error in the christian name of the owner of property sought to be charged by an apportionment warrant for a municipal improvement, not shown to have prejudiced such owner, was an amendable defect within Ky. for improvements after the work has been done, but that the council or court may make all corrections to do justice to the parties concerned. Langan v. Bitzer, 82 S. W. 280, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 579. (II) APPLICATIONS FOR JUDGMENT—(A) In General. By statute in some jurisdictions it is provided that upon special assessments remaining unpaid for a specified length of time the collector after publication of notice may apply for a judgment for the amount of the assessment and for an order of sale to satisfy such judgment.⁹⁵ To sustain such proceedings the statute must be substantially followed.⁹⁶ So, where such is the statutory method of procedure, the assessment roll must have been certified to the city collector⁹⁷ and a warrant issued to him⁹⁸

ing the methods of levying special assessments, and repealing certain provisions of the Cities and Village Act, art. 9, regulating such methods, did not deprive county courts of jurisdiction to enter judgment of sale of delinquent lots for special assessments levied prior to its passage, under the old law. Noonan v. People, 183 Ill. 52, 55 N. E. 679. The county court has jurisdiction under Local Improvement Act, § 51 (Hurd Rev. St. (1903) c. 24, § 557), and County Court Act, § 5 (Hurd Rev. St. (1903) c. 37, § 93), to confirm a special assessment or render judgment of sale thereunder at a probate term. People v. Colegrove, 218 Ill. 545, 75 N. E. 991; *People v. Making of certified statement of delinquents.—Where, in proceedings under the charter of the city of Duluth pertaining to local improvements and assessments, the controller has failed to fully comply with the provision which requires him to "make up" and file a "certified statement" as to delinquents, such failure is a mere irregularity, and does not invalidate the judgment against delinquent property entered therein. Duluth v. Miles, 73 Minn. 509, 76 N. W. 259.

97. Doremus v. People, 173 Ill. 63, 50 N. E. 686; McChesney v. People, 171 Ill. 267, 49 N. E. 491.

Alteration.—A warrant issued by the county clerk to a city collector for the collection of special assessments was not void because the collector placed upon it in red ink a memorandum showing that the property had been sold for taxes after the assessment was confirmed, together with the name of the purchaser. Noonan v. People, 221 Ill. 567, 77 N. E. 930.

Recall of warrant.—Under Hurd Rev. St. Ill. (1903) c. 24, § 61, in relation to warrants for the collection of special assessments for local improvements, providing that the court shall have power to recall such warrants as to all or any of the property affected at any time before payment or sale, if the proceedings be abandoned by the petitioner or the

After reversal of confirmation.—The county court has no power to order a sale of property for a failure to pay an instalment of a special assessment, after the judgment of confirmation has been reversed. Such act is without the jurisdiction of the court. Glos v. Collins, 110 Ill. App. 121.

3. Hawes v. Fliegler, 87 Minn. 319, 92 N. W. 223; Alexandria v. Hunter, 2 Munf. (Va.) 228.

Sufficiency of notice.—The delinquent list on an application for judgment of sale for special assessment stands as a declaration, and the notice of process must conform thereto. Smythe v. People, 219 Ill. 76, 76

N. E. 82. The notice must describe the property (Gage v. People, 188 Ill. 92, 58 N. E. 947; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. People, 170 Ill. 224, 48 N. E. 215; Nicholes v. People, 165 Ill. 502, 46 N. E. 237; Dickey v. People, 160 Ill. 587, 43 N. E. 701), must state the name of the owner (Gage v. People, 205 Ill. 547, 69 N. E. 80), and must state the year or years for which the special assessments are due (Gage v. People, 205 Ill. 547, 69 N. E. 80; Gage v. People, 188 Ill. 92, 58 N. E. 947). The notice need not include unpaid taxes. McCauley v. People, 87 Ill. 123. A notice that the collector will apply for a judgment against property assessed for private drains does not authorize a judgment against the same lands for an assessment to grade, pave, and curb a street. Waller v. Chicago, 53 Ill. 88.

Filing of copy of newspaper.—The filing of a copy of a newspaper in which a list of delinquent lots and lands on which a lien for special assessments existed, with the certificate of the publisher, in the office of the county clerk of the county, as a part of the records of his office, did not constitute a compliance with Ill. Revenue Act, § 186 (Hurd Rev. St. (1903) c. 120), requiring that a copy of such newspaper, etc., "be filed as a part of the records of the county court." Nowlin v. People, 216 Ill. 543, 75 N. E. 209.

Certificate of publication.—The certificate of publication must be in conformity with the statute. Gage v. People, 213 Ill. 410, 72 N. E. 1084; Kimball v. People, 160 Ill. 653, 43 N. E. 710 [following Hertig v. People, 159 Ill. 237, 42 N. E. 879, 50 Am. St. Rep. 162]; Young v. People, 155 Ill. 247, 40 N. E. 604. It must be made by the person who is the publisher of the paper when the notice is published. Armstrong v. Chicago, 61 Ill. 352. A certificate of publication is sufficient where from the language used the court can ascertain the dates of the first and last papers containing the notice. Smith v. Chicago, 57 Ill. 497; Griffin v. Chicago, 57 Ill. 317. In the absence of any showing to the contrary, the "consecutive days" mentioned in a printer's certificate of publication of notice given by the collector on receipt of a warrant for collecting an assessment, over six, will be presumed to be secular days. Jenks v. Chicago, 48 Ill. 296.

As to non-resident.—Where, in proceedings for judgment for a local assessment, it appears that the court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and that the published notice provided by statute had been given, by which it acquired jurisdiction of the person, its judgment is valid as against a non-resident, who had no actual notice of the proceedings. Dousman v. St. Paul, 23 Minn. 394.

Waiver of defect.—A defect in the notice of application for a sale for an assessment is waived, and the court is given jurisdiction, by the property-owner filing objections to the

(c) Parties. A provision that the owner may appear and defend against the entry of judgment allows all persons interested in the land to appear.⁴

(d) Petition or Other Application. The form and contents of the petition or other application for judgment and order of sale must conform to the requirements of the statute under which proceedings are had.⁵ And it must be at the time specified in the statute.⁶

(E) Objections and Defenses. The objections must state facts which if supported by sufficient evidence would be a bar to the judgment.⁷ Objections arising anterior to the confirmation of the assessment cannot be considered⁸ except application which call for exercise of jurisdiction and a decision on the merits. Ottis v. Sullivan, 219 Ill. 365, 76 N. E. 487; Marshall v. People, 219 Ill. 99, 76 N. E. 70; Dickey v. People, 213 Ill. 51, 72 N. E. 791; McManus v. People, 183 Ill. 391, 55 N. E. 886. A general appearance may waive defects in description. Nicholes v. People, 165 Ill. 502, 46 N. E. 237.

4. Morey v. Duluth, 75 Minn. 221, 77 N. W. 829, holding that mortgagees were included.

5. People v. Colegrove, 218 Ill. 545, 75 N. E. 991 (holding a description too indefinite); Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 83 Ill. 467; Bristol v. Chicago, 22 Ill. 587; Fralich v. Barlow, 25 Ind. App. 383, 58 N. E. 271; Rogers v. Heyderstaedt, 65 Minn. 229, 68 N. W. 8.

Amendment.—Where, in a proceeding to procure a judgment against real estate for special taxes, the report of the city clerk is not accompanied by a copy of the ordinance authorizing the improvement (1 Starr & C. Annot. St. c. 24, par. 432) it is proper for the court, under Rev. St. c. 120, § 193, to allow the copy to be filed before the hearing as an amendment to the clerk's report. Hoover v. People, 171 Ill. 182, 49 N. E. 367.

6. Leindecker v. People, 98 Ill. 21; Hamilton v. Chicago, 22 Ill. 580.

Laches.—A municipality is not deprived of its right to collect a local assessment by laches of the county collector. Mecartney v. People, 202 Ill. 51, 66 N. E. 873.

Limitations.—An application for judgment of sale against realty for a delinquent street improvement special assessment is not a "civil action not otherwise provided for," so as to be barred after five years from the date of the judgment confirming the assessment. Shepard v. People, 200 Ill. 508, 65 N. E. 1063.

Continuance.—Under Ill. Gen. Rev. Law, § 185, requiring application for sale of property for special assessment to be made at June term, but providing, "if for any cause the collector is prevented from advertising and obtaining judgment at said term it shall be . . . legal to obtain judgment at any subsequent term," application being made at June term, but a wrong name therein being given the owner, and the owner not appearing, and the mistake being corrected by leave, and nothing further being done till the October term, to which proper notice is given, and application for judgment made, and continuance being had from time to time till the following April term, judgment for sale may then be rendered. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. People, 189 Ill. 119, 59 N. E. 609.

7. Montgomery v. Birdsong, 126 Ala. 632, 28 So. 522 (holding that the objection that a paving assessment was not based on the benefit to the property assessed, and therefore violated the fourteenth amendment of the United States constitution and section 24 of the Alabama Declaration of Rights, was not open to demurrer for generality); Glover v. People, 201 Ill. 545, 66 N. E. 820 (holding that objections were sufficiently specific to show that bidding was upon the basis of specifications as to an eight-hour day and alien labor); Vennum v. People, 188 Ill. 158, 58 N. E. 979. See also Thompson v. People, 207 Ill. 334, 69 N. E. 842; Harris v. Chicago, 162 Ill. 288, 44 N. E. 437 (holding that where, in condemnation proceedings for local improvements, it was provided by stipulation that upon the payment of the amount awarded for damages the city might take possession at any time after the expiration of six years, such provision could be taken advantage of on the application of the collector for judgment of sale for non-payment of the assessment to pay for the improvement, on the ground that the money so collected would lie idle for the time stipulated); Mix v. People, 106 Ill. 425; Smith v. Chicago, 57 Ill. 497; Southeim v. Chicago, 56 Ill. 429 (holding that on an application for judgment on a special assessment for a public improvement, the property-owner may show as a defense that the commissioners in making the assessments knowingly assessed his property at more than its proportion of the benefits to be conferred by the improvement, and assessed certain property benefited for an amount less than it was benefited, and in so doing increased the benefits assessed against defendant's realty); Alexandria v. Mandeville, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 184, 2 Cranch C. C. 224 (holding that the court will not receive evidence that the pavement was badly done).

Payment.—The enforcement of an installment of an assessment for a public improvement may be resisted on the ground that the prior instalments were sufficient to pay the cost of the improvement, although Ill. Rev. St. c. 24, art. 9, § 47, provides that, if too large a sum shall at any time be collected, the excess shall be refunded ratably to those by whom it was paid. People v. McWethy, 165 Ill. 222, 46 N. E. 187.

8. Noonan v. People, 221 Ill. 567, 77 N. E. 930; Gage v. People, 207 Ill. 377, 69 N. E. 840; Thompson v. People, 207 Ill. 334, 69 N. E.

where the court rendering the judgment of confirmation is shown to have been wanting in jurisdiction to do so.⁹ It may be urged as an objection that the improvement was different from that provided for in the ordinance.¹⁰ It cannot be urged that the improvement has not been completed.¹¹ Since the proceedings are *in rem*¹² lot owners cannot raise objections which affect the property of others only.¹³

(F) Evidence. On application for judgment, the record of proceedings is prima facie evidence of the validity of the assessment;¹⁴ and the burden is on

E. 784; Prout v. People, 83 Ill. 154. But see Montgomery v. Birdsong, 126 Ala. 632, 28 So. 522.

Waiver.—Where, on an application for judgment of sale to enforce an instalment of an assessment for local improvements, the landowner files objections, such act is a tacit admission that there are no other objections. Gross v. People, 193 Ill. 260, 61 N. E. 1012, 86 Am. St. Rep. 322. Under Ill. Local Impr. Act (1897), § 66, as amended by Laws (1901), providing that the voluntary payment of any instalment of any assessment by the owner shall be deemed an assent to the confirmation of the assessment roll, and shall be held a waiver of all objections to the application for judgment of sale, etc., where owners voluntarily paid one or more instalments of assessments for local improvements they thereby waived their right to object to a judgment and order for sale for non-payment of subsequent instalments. 11. Lawrence v. People, 188 Ill. 407, 58 N. E. 991. Compare Phillips v. People, 218 Ill. 450, 75 N. E. 1016, holding that the fact that objectors to an application for judgment of sale in special assessment proceedings were overcharged in the assessment, for the reason that the number of square yards or lineal feet of pavement alleged to have been laid were not actually laid is not a valid objection to the application.

12. See supra, XIII, F, 1.

13. People v. Green, 158 Ill. 594, 42 N. E. 163. And see Gage v. People, 207 Ill. 377, 69 N. E. 840, holding that evidence that the assessment of other property-owners, amounting to one third of the whole assessment, had been reduced twenty per cent by agreement, after their appeal from the judgment of confirmation, is not admissible to defeat an application for judgment and order of sale.

14. Harrigan v. Jacksonville, 220 Ill. 134, 77 N. E. 85; People v. Smith, 201 Ill. 454, 66 N. E. 298; Sweet v. West Chicago Park Com'rs, 177 Ill. 492, 53 N. E. 74 (holding that in proceedings to collect a special assessment for the improvement of a street the commissioners need not introduce any proof except on the questions whether the benefit derived equaled the assessment, and whether the property was assessed more than its proportionate share); McChesney v. People, 171 Ill. 267, 49 N. E. 491; Walker v. People, 166 Ill. 96, 46 N. E. 761; Gage v. People, 163 Ill. 39, 44 N. E. 819 (holding that on application for judgment for a delinquent special assessment, presentation by the treasurer of his delinquent list, sworn to, with proof of publication and notice, makes out a prima facie case on his part); Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. People, 161 Ill. 244, 43 N. E. 1107; Wright v. Chicago, 48 Ill. 285. But see Jeffris v. Cash, 207 Ill. 405, 69 N. E. 904; Hoover v. People, 171 Ill. 182, 49 N. E. 367, both holding that it is essential to the right of a city to recover a judgment for a special tax for building a sidewalk that it should prove objectors to show irregularities.¹⁵ The proceedings are controlled by the general rules as to the admissibility¹⁶ and sufficiency¹⁷ of evidence.

(g) Judgment or Order. A judgment upon the application is a special judgment and must conform substantially to the provisions of the statute under which the proceedings are brought.¹⁸ Such a judgment is not subject to collateral affirmatively that the ordinance was complied with.

The collector's report is prima facie evidence of the amount due, if the owner of the lands is in default, and upon this judgment may be rendered. The report does not prejudice any party by any statement in it beyond what the law requires shall be stated. Nothing beyond is evidence. Ogden v. Chicago, 22 Ill. 592. The return of a city collector of no goods found to satisfy an assessment for a local improvement is conclusive on that question on the collector's application for judgment against the lot assessed. Ottawa v. Macy, 20 Ill. 413.

16. See EVIDENCE. And see Sheedy v. Chicago, 221 Ill. 111, 77 N. E. 539; Gage v. People, 205 Ill. 547, 69 N. E. 80 (holding that where a special tax assessment collector omitted the name of the owner of property sought to be charged from the published notice of the assessment, such owner was entitled to introduce in evidence the delinquent list of the previous year on the same warrant for the collection of the same assessment, giving his name as the owner of the lots, to show that the collector had notice that he was the owner); People v. Smith, 201 Ill. 454, 66 N. E. 298; People v. McWethy, 177 Ill. 334, 52 N. E. 479; Goodrich v. Minonk, 62 Ill. 121.

17. Gage v. People, 213 Ill. 347, 72 N. E. 1062 (holding that the fact that the steps for letting the contract for a street improvement were not taken within fifteen days after the final determination of the appeal from the judgment of confirmation of the special assessment for the work, or the determination of any stay thereof by a supersedeas or other order of a court having jurisdiction, as provided by the Local Impr. Act (Laws (1897), p. 127), as amended by Laws (1901), p. 113, § 75, is not shown by evidence merely that six months after the affirmance of such judgment an order for an advertisement for bids was entered by the board of local improvements; there being no evidence that no previous step had been taken by it toward letting the contract, or that there had been no stay of proceedings after affirmance of the judgment of confirmation); Gage v. People, 200 Ill. 432, 65 N. E. 1084 (holding admissible the evidence to show that the improvement was of a different character than that ordered by the ordinance, in that a dirt road, instead of a macadam road, was made, so that an assessment therefor could not be enforced).

Apportionment of tax.—A lot owner, by appearing and defending an action for special taxes against two separate parcels of land, does not thereby subject himself to a judgment which charges on one of his lots the tax assessed or levied upon another lot or tract. Hoover v. People, 171 Ill. 182, 49 N. E. 367.

Fraction of instalment.—On application for judgment for a delinquent instalment on a local assessment, judgment may be rendered for a fractional part of the instalment, to meet remaining unpaid expenses, where the work has been completed, and the last payment made on the contract. People v. McWethy, 177 Ill. 334, 52 N. E. 479.

Default judgment.—Where the published notice of application for judgment against lands delinquent in the payment of a special assessment was defective, the fact that the judgment by default recited that due notice had been given, was not sufficient to sustain it, when attacked by writ of error, since the record in default cases must affirmatively show compliance with the statute. Gage v. People, 188 Ill. 92, 58 N. E. 947.

Vacation of judgment.—Under St. Paul City Charter, p. 42, c. 6, tit. 3, § 48, the purchaser or holder of the certificate of sale under assessment proceedings for the improvement of a street cannot appear in the original proceeding and have the judgment vacated, on the ground that it is void, as such judgment and sale are deemed valid between such purchaser and the city, and the purchase-price can be refunded only when the proceedings are adjudged void in an action between the purchaser and the owner of the land. National Bond, etc., Co. v. St. Paul, 91 Minn. 223, 97 N. W. 878. It is no ground for vacating a judgment in a proceeding to collect a city tax, where the motion was made fifteen months after the rendition of the judgment, that defendant was a non-resident, and did not know of the assessment till three months before moving to vacate; that his agents in the city, through whom he paid taxes, did not inform him of it; that he was advised that all assessments were payable at the county treasurer's office; and that he made inquiries there, and was not aware of the change in the law making assessments payable at the city controller's office. Duluth v. Dibblee, 62 Minn. 18, 63 N. W. 1117.

attack¹⁹ unless void.²⁰ A judgment against the city on the ground that the action was prematurely brought is not a bar to a second suit.²¹ A substantial defect in the proceedings cannot be cured by judgment.²²

(H) Review. The right of appeal rests entirely upon statute.²³ Only such objections will be considered as were made on the hearing,²⁴ and the judgment the court as to entering judgment against the same lots for the same assessment is exhausted, except as to amending or correcting the judgment during the term, by entry of a judgment for sale thereof for such assessment, although such judgment is erroneous because not signed by the judge; so that entry of a subsequent judgment against such lots for such assessment is error. Dickey v. People, 213 Ill. 51, 72 N. E. 791. Where a valid judgment for a street assessment was entered in 1890, and a second judgment for the same assessment in 1894 was entered by the clerk of the court without any order of the court so to do, and a tax-sale was made pursuant to the supposed second judgment, the second judgment was void; the court having exhausted its jurisdiction when it entered the first judgment, and a sale thereunder conveyed no title. Otis v. Weide, 98 Minn. 227, 107 N. W. 540.

Form and sufficiency.—For cases in which the form and sufficiency of tax judgments have been considered see Gage v. People, 219 Ill. 369, 76 N. E. 498; Cummings v. People, 213 Ill. 443, 72 N. E. 1094; Gage v. People, 213 Ill. 347, 72 N. E. 1062; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. People, 189 Ill. 119, 59 N. E. 609; People v. McWethy, 177 Ill. 334, 52 N. E. 479; *Steidl v. W. 219.

Fees and costs.—The fees and costs allowed by law subsequent to the date of the advertisement may be properly added to the total amount due on a special assessment, and included in the judgment against the property on the delinquent list. Gage v. People, 205 Ill. 547, 69 N. E. 80. Judgment for delinquent special assessments may include in the costs the fee of two cents for entering judgment against each lot. McChesney v. People, 171 Ill. 267, 49 N. E. 491.

W. 1041 (holding that a judgment on a special assessment cannot be collaterally attacked because of an omission to establish, as required by the city charter, the grade of a street for the improvement of which the assessment was levied); Hennessy v. St. Paul, 54 Minn. 219, 55 N. W. 1123; Dousman v. St. Paul, 23 Minn. 394.

20. Glos v. Collins, 110 Ill. App. 121, holding that where premises are not liable for an assessment for municipal improvements as levied, the owner is not barred by the judgment for sale from setting up the illegality of the assessment in a suit to set aside the tax-sale certificates.

Judgment for instalment.—On application for judgment of sale for the fourth instalment of an assessment, the validity of the judgment for the earlier instalments may not be questioned; the proceedings being independent. Gage v. People, 213 Ill. 410, 72 N. E. 1084. And see Treat v. Chicago, 125 Fed. 644.

21. Brackett v. People, 115 Ill. 29, 3 N. E. 723; Schertz v. People, 105 Ill. 27.

22. Holland v. People, 189 Ill. 348, 59 N. E. 753, holding that a final judgment ordering that any irregularity in an assessment roll or tax list, or omission or defective act of any officer connected with the assessment or levy of a special tax, "be, and the same are hereby, corrected, supplied, and made to conform with the law" cannot cure the defect in failing to certify the bill of costs as required by statute.

23. See St. Paul v. Rogers, 22 Minn. 492, holding that under St. Paul Charter, c. 7, § 70 (Spec. Laws (1874), c. 1), which prohibits the court, after ordering judgment upon a local assessment, from opening such judgment and granting a new trial, an order denying a motion for a new trial in such case after entry of judgment is not appealable.

24. Bass v. People, 203 Ill. 206, 67 N. E. 806; Fiske v. People, 188 Ill. 206, 58 N. E. 985, 52 L. R. A. 291; Lingle v. People, 173 Ill. 121, 50 N. E. 205; Goudy v. People, 173 Ill. 107, 50 N. E. 193.

Saving question for review.—Where the record on appeal from a judgment for a delinquent special assessment shows that the appellant filed an objection in the county court on the ground that the assessment had never been confirmed on his land, that the court overruled such objection, and that the appellant assigned that ruling as error, the question of the confirmation of the assessment is properly raised in the supreme court. Dempster v. People, 158 Ill. 36, 41 N. E. 1022. In a case where judgment is sought on a new special assessment to make up the amounts which the city failed to collect, but the papers and proceedings on the original assessment are not introduced in evidence, the reviewing court cannot determine the validity of the proceeding so far as it depends on the character of such original proceedings, owing to the absence from the record of all evidence relating thereto. Beygeh v. Chicago, 65 Ill. 189.

Estoppel to allege error.—Where parties appealing from confirmation of a judgment against their property for delinquent special taxes agreed in open court to entry of an order setting aside a former confirmation, and to a submission of the controversy to the court, whereupon the assessment was reduced, will not be reversed for errors which did not prejudice appellant.²⁵ When the contrary does not appear from the record the validity of the proceedings will be presumed on appeal.²⁶ Where the error is merely in the entry of judgment a new trial will not be ordered, but a correction of the judgment will be directed.²⁷ An appeal-bond may properly run to the city, when it alone is interested.²⁸ The reversal of a judgment as to one of several property-owners will have no effect as to the others.²⁹

e. Scire Facias Upon Claims — (i) IN GENERAL. When the filing of a municipal claim for an assessment creates a lien upon the property assessed,³⁰ such lien under some statutes may be enforced by scire facias.³¹ In the absence of specific directions as to the enforcement of liens created by a special act, they may be enforced as liens under a general act.³² Under a statute providing that liens shall be filed as mechanics' liens are filed, and writs of scire facias and levari facias issued, as in the case of mechanics' liens, the mechanics' lien law furnishes only a general, and not a specific, rule of procedure.³³

(ii) DEFENSES. Upon scire facias the confirmation of the viewers' report has the operation and effect of a judgment, and unless the acts of the municipality were void it cannot be questioned collaterally except for fraud or collusion.³⁴ The value of the work it seems is not in issue,³⁵ but defendant may show a mistake in and judgment of confirmation entered, they cannot assign as error that their property was not bound because of defects in procedure, whereby the assessment was made void. Sheridan v. Chicago, 175 Ill. 421, 51 N. E. 898.

25. Gage v. People, 219 Ill. 634, 76 N. E. 834, holding that the failure of a city to comply with Local Impr. Act, § 42 (Hurd Rev. St. (1903) c. 24, § 548), requiring the board of local improvements to file in the office of the clerk of the court confirming the assessment a certificate of the date of the first voucher and the amount thereof within thirty days after the date of issue, and providing that all interest shall run from the date of the first voucher, was not prejudicial to the property-owner, in the absence of anything to show that he was charged with interest or from what date interest began to run.

26. Ottis v. Sullivan, 219 Ill. 365, 76 N. E. 487; People v. Lyon, 218 Ill. 577, 75 N. E. 1017 (holding that where the county court has certified that the bill of exceptions contains all the evidence at the time objections to the confirmation of a special assessment were disposed of, and the defense to the confirmation was that the improvement was not in accordance with the ordinance, and the ordinance is not in the record, the judgment for defendant will be reversed, as it could not be shown without such evidence that the improvement was not in accordance therewith); *Gage v. But see Phillips v. People, 218 Ill. 450, 75 N. St. 113 (holding that it was error for the court to allow evidence to be given that a sewer was of no benefit to the property, and to charge the jury that, if they should so believe, plaintiffs were not entitled to recover).

35. Schenley v. Com., 36 Pa. St. 62; Philadelphia v. Pemberton, 12 Pa. Dist. 743. See also Philadelphia v. Coates, 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 418, holding that in an action to recover sewer assessments, an affidavit of defense that the contractor had been paid by defendant the sum which he agreed to accept for the work done by him is insufficient, inasmuch as the actual cost of the improvement may include items besides the amount paid the contractor. Compare Philadelphia v. Jewell, 135 Pa. St. 329, 19 Atl. 947, holding that a property-owner in a city, although not a party to a paving contract, may defend an action for the price of the pavement, brought the computation of the claim.³⁶ Defendant cannot inquire into equities between the contractor and the city,³⁷ and where the contract for an improvement has become valid as against the city by ratification, a property-owner has no greater right than the city to assert its invalidity.³⁸ One who has no notice of the proceeding for assessment may urge any objection he might then have urged as against a scire facias.³⁹ A statute limiting the defenses which may be urged to scire facias upon a municipal claim has been held not to apply to municipalities incorporated after its passage.⁴⁰ A defendant who has paid the money into court and had the property released from the lien may nevertheless urge as a defense the loss of a lien.⁴¹

(iii) PARTIES. On scire facias the real owner may be made a party and his title will be bound without regard to who may be the registered owner, or whether the registered owner has been made a party.⁴²

(iv) PROCESS. Service of a scire facias must be made in strict accordance with the statute.⁴³

(v) AFFIDAVIT OF DEFENSE. Under the court rules an affidavit of defense against him by the city to the use of the contractor, on the ground that the price agreed to be paid by the city is excessive, as the act of April 19, 1843 (Pamphl. Laws 342), expressly gives him that right.

Amendment.—At the trial of a scire facias sur municipal lien for paving, it is not error for the court to amend the record of the judgment, so as to add as defendants the names of the actual owner of the land liened and a person who became a registered owner of a part of the land after the lien was filed. Philadelphia v. Kehoe, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 320.

43. Philadelphia v. Merz, 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 332 (holding that a defective service of a scire facias sur municipal lien by posting and advertisement and nihil habet as to the registered owner, when the registered owner actually occupied the premises at the time the writ was returned, is not cured by the appearance of the registered owner entered over a year after he had been deprived of title by sheriff's sale; and, if judgment has been entered against him after such appearance, the purchaser of the premises at sheriff's sale has a standing to have such judgment stricken off); Philadelphia v. Merz, 9 Pa. Dist. 369, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. 269.

Service by advertisement see Ferguson v. Quinn, 123 Pa. St. 337, 16 Atl. 844; O'Byrne v. Philadelphia, 93 Pa. St. 225; Simons v. Kern, 92 Pa. St. 455; Wistar v. Philadelphia, 86 Pa. St. 215; Philadelphia v. Merz, 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 332.

Transfer or devolution of title pending proceedings.—Where, after a scire facias has been issued, the owner of the land dies, having devised it to another, judgment may be taken on the scire facias, without notice to the devisee, if the latter has failed to register his title as required by the act of March 14, 1865, and March 29, 1867. Philadelphia v. Smith, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 450. See also Funk v. Harkness, 3 Pa. Dist. 423, 14 Pa. Co. Ct. 609, holding that the heir of a deceased owner, as well as his devisee or vendee, must register his title. Where a scire facias is issued by the city of Philadelphia on a claim for curbing and grading, and personal service of the writ is had on the registered owner, and judgment is entered for want of an affidavit of defense, the city, on a subsequent scire facias to revive, is not obliged to give notice to the owner who has succeeded to the title of the original defendant, although such owner may have registered his title. The Registry Acts of March 14, 1865, and March 29, 1867, and the act of June 1, 1887, relating to the duration of liens of judgment on realty, do not require such notice. Philadelphia v. Nell, 31 Pa. Super. Ct. 78.

Waiver.—The provision of the act of March 23, 1866, regulating the filing and collecting of municipal claims in Philadelphia, that, before scire facias shall issue on any such claim, written notice shall be given to the owner of the property liened, is not mandatory, in the sense that it cannot be waived by the owner; and an agreement by him with the city for an amicable scire facias on the claim is a waiver or admission of the service of the notice. Philadelphia v. Schofield, 166 Pa. St. 389, 31 Atl. 119.

may be required and judgment entered against defendant for want thereof.⁴⁴ The sufficiency of such an affidavit is determined by the rules usually applicable to such pleadings.⁴⁵

(vi) EVIDENCE. Proceedings by scire facias are in general governed by the rules of evidence applicable to civil actions generally.⁴⁶ Under an act providing that municipal claims for improvements may in a suit on such claim be read in evidence of the facts therein pleaded, material statements contained in the claim are prima facie evidence of the facts set forth therein.⁴⁷

44. Wilkes-Barre v. Felts, 134 Pa. St. 529, 19 Atl. 676, holding that a rule of court which requires an affidavit of defense "in all actions of scire facias" applies to scire facias on municipal lien. See also Yates v. Meadville, 56 Pa. St. 21, holding that a scire facias founded upon a municipal claim for the cost of paving, and a certain per cent advance, filed against the property under the borough law of 1851, did not fall within the rule of the court which required the filing of an affidavit of defense in all cases of scire facias upon mechanics' claims.

Where there is no rule of court providing that material averments of fact in the statement of claim for a municipal lien for a sewer not directly and specifically denied in the affidavit of defense shall be taken as admitted on the trial, the issue is made by the pleadings proper. Philadelphia v. Armstrong, 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 55.

A plea of nunquam indebitatus puts in issue whatever the city has to prove in order to support the assessment, including the jurisdictional prerequisite that the application for the grading was made by the number of lot holders required by law. Pittsburg v. Walter, 69 Pa. St. 365.

St. 168, 24 Atl. 1094; Philadelphia v. Baker, 140 Pa. St. 11, 21 Atl. 238 (holding that where it is conceded that the city has the right to determine the mode and style of paving primarily, an affidavit which alleges that the street had been previously paved at the expense of the abutting property-owners, and that such paving was in good repair when the city had the street repaved, without alleging that the city had in any way recognized the previous paving, is bad); Greensburg v. Laird, 138 Pa. St. 533, 21 Atl. 96; Pittsburgh v. MacConnell, 130 Pa. St. 463, 18 Atl. 645 (holding that an affidavit which alleges that the contract was fraudulently let and the work badly done, without alleging any specific defect in the work, or any special injury which defendant suffered therefrom, is bad); Erie City v. Butler, 120 Pa. St. 374, 14 Atl. 153 (holding that an affidavit which gives defendant's opinion of the work at the time it was done, several months before, and states that it is not worth the price charged, but fails to say anything as to its present condition, or to deny that it is reasonably satisfactory, or to state what it is worth, is insufficient); *Rodney v. (Pa.) 57.

Sufficiency of affidavit of defense in general see PLEADING.

Inconsistent defenses.—Where, in an action against a property-owner to recover a municipal claim for improvements, the affidavit of defense alleges that plaintiff city had no interest in the action, as it had limited its liability with the contractor to the amount of claims recovered, an objection that the contract was void, in that it was awarded by resolution, instead of by ordinance, will not be sustained. Scranton v. Jermyn, 156 Pa. St. 107, 27 Atl. 66.

46. See, generally, EVIDENCE.

Conformity with issues.—Where the pleas are non assumpsit and payment, but with no notice of special matter, it is error to require plaintiff to prove a direct contract between the city commissioner and the contractor for the execution of the work, especially after the work has been adopted, and also to reject evidence that the contractor was employed by one of the commissioners, and that defendant had waived his right to the notice required by ordinance. Philadelphia v. Burgin, 50 Pa. St. 539 [reversing 5 Phila. 84]. Where, on scire facias to revive a municipal lien, the claim of lien filed with the statement or claim alleged that all the requirements of law in regard to such liens had been complied with, and one of the rules of the court provided that "all items and material averments of fact in the affidavit of claim, which are not directly and specifically denied by the affidavit of defense, shall be taken as admitted," it was held that if the affidavit of defense did not traverse the averment of the claim of lien that notice was given to defendant of the work for which the lien is claimed, he could not introduce evidence for the purpose of showing that no such notice was given. South Bethlehem Borough v. Laufer, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. 65.

47. Scranton v. Jermyn, 156 Pa. St. 107, 27 Atl. 66; Thomas v. Northern Liberties, 13 Pa. St. 117.

(vii) TRIAL. On scire facias disputed questions of fact are for the jury,⁴⁸ under proper instructions,⁴⁹ while questions of law are for the court.⁵⁰ Where several liens are filed upon separate lots of defendant, the court may order the trial of one of the liens as the test of all.⁵¹

(viii) REVIEW. Matters which should have been urged upon the trial cannot be first urged as a ground for review.⁵²

f. Summary Execution. Provision is made under some statutes for the issuance of execution upon assessments without suit,⁵³ in defense to which an affidavit of illegality in the form provided by statute will put in issue all questions of law and open questions of fact involved.⁵⁴

g. Actions For Sale of Land—(i) NATURE OF PROCEEDINGS IN GENERAL. Under some statutes special assessments are collected as other taxes by suit⁵⁵ or enforced in the same manner as a mortgage to the corporation.⁵⁶ Actions to enforce the payment of assessments are, in the absence of express statutory provisions, governed by the same rules as other actions.⁵⁷ Under some statutes the city is permitted to join proceedings against several property-owners subject to the right of the court in its discretion to compel a severance.⁵⁸ Where a valid and an invalid assessment are joined in the same action, the action may be sustained as to the valid assessment.⁵⁹

(1) RIGHT TO SUE—(A) Municipality. The right of a municipality to maintain an action to enforce assessment liens depends on express statutory authority,⁶⁰ although it may provide for collection by suit under a power to levy assessments and direct the mode of collection.⁶¹ In the absence of express authority the city cannot assign the right to collect a special assessment.⁶² Where the president and trustees of a village are made a board of highway commissioners, they should sue in the name of such board, and not in the corporate name of the village, if their acts in their legislative capacity are distinct.⁶³

(B) Contractor or Assignee. By statute the contractor is sometimes given the right to sue to enforce assessments,⁶⁴ and this right may be extended to an

See also Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Edward C. Jones Co., 20 Ind. App. 37, 50 N. E. 319, holding that where it is provided by the statute that the lots bordering on a street shall be primarily liable for its improvement, and, if they are insufficient in value, that lots in the rear of those to the distance of one hundred and fifty feet shall be liable, the owners of both classes of lots may be joined in one suit to collect payment for the improvement; but a waiver of all defenses by the owners of lots primarily liable will not affect the rights of their co-defendants. assignee.⁶⁵ Where the contractor is given the right to enforce the assessment it is held under some statutes that the action must be in his name, and not that of the city,⁶⁶ while under other statutes the action may be in the name of the city to the use of the contractor.⁶⁷ The failure of an officer to cause the contract to be recorded will not affect the right of the contractor to enforce an assessment.⁶⁸ The neglect of the city to enforce the obligation of a street railroad to pave the portion of the street occupied by its tracks cannot be urged against a contractor seeking to recover for paving the sides of the street.⁶⁹ A charter conferring power on the courts to determine the rights of a contractor against a property-owner, under a city contract, when his claim is resisted on the ground of proceedings of the city council which are defective, although not necessarily invalid, does not authorize an assumption by the courts of legislative or executive functions.⁷⁰

When city has paid contractor.—Ind. Rev. St. (1894) § 4292, in providing that a city may pay the contractor on estimates made for construction of street improvements, and assess and collect "the expenses as hereinafter provided when petition is made," authorizes the city to advance the money both for improvements made on petition and those ordered by the council under section 4289; and, when improvements have been paid for by a city, it may foreclose the lien of assessments therefor, as provided in section 4288, for its own benefit. Connersville v. Trust Co. v. Donnell, 1 Mo. App. Rep. 571 (holding that a failure to file notice of suit conditions imposed with regard to proceedings under other statutes need not be complied with.⁷² As to whether a demand is necessary before an action may be maintained seems to depend entirely upon the statute, it being regarded as necessary in some jurisdictions⁷³ and unnecessary in others.⁷⁴ The owner of improvement bonds who has a right to enforce an assessment for their payment need not first make a demand upon the city,⁷⁵ nor is a resolution of the council necessary to authorize suit.⁷⁶ Where demand is required by statute it must be made in strict compliance with such requirement.⁷⁷

(iii) DEFENSES—(A) In General. The general rule is that, in an action to enforce an assessment for a municipal improvement, where the proceedings are not void for want of authority on the part of the municipality or because of fraud or collusion, the property-owner cannot assert any defense which he might have urged prior to the confirmation of the assessment or upon the proceedings to confirm the assessment.⁷⁸ Under this rule it has been held that the property-owner cannot assert that his property has not been benefited,⁷⁹ that the improvement constructed was not necessary,⁸⁰ that the assessment has not been properly appor-on a special tax bill with the city treasurer, as was required by charter at the time the suit was brought, instead of with the board of public works, as was required at the time the tax bill was issued, is fatal to plaintiff's case).

72. Bozarth v. McGillicuddy, 19 Ind. App. 26, 47 N. E. 397, 48 N. E. 1042, holding that Rev. St. (1894) § 4294, providing that assessments for street improvements may be collected according to the provisions of section 4298, or by foreclosure as a mortgage is foreclosed, does not require a contractor who has elected to proceed by foreclosure to file an affidavit for a precept to collect such assessments; nor does it require the issue of any bonds or certificates for or on account of such improvement.

Payment of taxes.—The word "tax," as used in Wash. Amend. Rev. L. (1899) p. 302, § 20, declaring that the holder of a general tax certificate, before bringing an action to foreclose the lien, shall "pay the taxes that have accrued on the property," does not include assessments for street improvements. *McMillan v. Estoppel to assert defects and objections in general see supra, XIII, E, 16, c.

Matters which should have been urged by appeal from the assessment cannot be relied upon as a defense. Petaluma Paving Co. v. Singley, 136 Cal. 616, 69 Pac. 426; Buckman v. Joy Borough v. Harrisburg, etc., R. Co., 11 Pa. Dist. 765, 19 Lanc. L. Rev. 217. But compare Corrigan v. Gage, 68 Mo. 541, holding that in an action on a special tax bill for the construction of a sidewalk, it may be shown that the ordinance authorizing the improvement was unreasonable, in that the walk was located in an uninhabited part of the city, and disconnected with any other street or sidewalk.

In Indiana, under Burns Rev. St. (1897) § 3846, providing that a property-owner who has not signed a waiver, or exercised or claimed the option to pay in instalments, may contest his assessment in an action to foreclose the lien, in an action to foreclose the tioned,⁸¹ or other irregularities which are not jurisdictional.⁸² Nor can defendant urge objections by which he has not been prejudiced.⁸³ But on the contrary the general rule is that the property-owner is not at any time debarred from asserting jurisdictional defects,⁸⁴ such as want of power in the city,⁸⁵ or from asserting fraud and collusion either in the passage of the ordinance,⁸⁶ or in the making of the contract for the improvement,⁸⁷ or other matters rendering the assessment wholly void.⁸⁸ Where the work has been accepted by the city, defective performance of the contract is not a defense in the absence of fraud or mistake.⁸⁹ A denial that an assessment lien of an assessment on realty for street improvements, the owner can contest the amount of his assessment upon the question of special benefits. Marion Bond Co. v. Johnson, 29 Ind. App. 294, 64 N. E. 626.

was made is a good defense,⁹⁰ as is also a showing of payment.⁹¹ A mistake or error in the amount of the bill may under some statutes be urged as a defense.⁹² Want of title to the premises is not a defense where defendant claims an interest therein, and under the statute a claim of title is sufficient to authorize making a person a defendant.⁹³ In defense of a contractor's action to foreclose an assessment lien the legality of the incorporation of the city cannot be attacked.⁹⁴

(B) Set-Off or Counter-Claim in General. In an action to enforce a special assessment, defendant may not set up a counter-claim against the city or the contractor.⁹⁵

(C) Damages Caused by Construction of Improvements. Damages for injury to property against which an assessment is levied may not be set up as a counter-claim in an action to enforce the assessment.⁹⁶

(IV) JURISDICTION. Jurisdiction to entertain proceedings for the enforcement of an assessment is usually expressly conferred upon some designated court by statute.⁹⁷

Failure to complete work in time.—Where the contract required the work to be completed within one month after the approval of the contract, "or within such time thereafter as shall be directed or allowed," it constitutes no defense to the assessment that the work was not completed within one month, the city authorities having waived the failure to complete the work within that time. Levi v. Coyne, 57 S. W. 790, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 493.

Improvement other than that authorized.—Ky. St. § 3453 (part of charter of cities of the third class), providing that, in an action to enforce a lien for the cost of a street improvement, "the defendant shall not be allowed to make the defense that the work was not done according to contract," does not preclude the defense that the improvement was made on a part of the street other than that provided by the ordinance. *Petter v. Application of general statutes of limitation.—An action to enforce an assessment lien is not barred by a general limitation of actions of debt. Dickinson v. Trenton, 35 N. J. Eq. 416; New York v. Colgate, 12 N. Y. 140; Magee v. Com., 46 Pa. St. 358. But compare Galveston v. New York Guaranty Trust Co., 107 Fed. 325, 46 C. C. A. 319. A statute providing that an action upon a liability created by statute when no other time is fixed by the statute creating the liability shall be commenced within five years next after the cause of action accrued applies to an action to enforce a lien for the cost of a street improvement made when the statute was in force; and, more than five years having elapsed between the time the lien was perfected by the acceptance of the work by the council and the time the action was instituted, the action was barred, although no warrant was issued against the proper person until within five years. Kirwin v. Nevin, 111 Ky. 682, 64 S. W. 647, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 947. A local assessment for paving is not a tax within a statute limiting the time of bringing an action for the collection of taxes in a certain city to four years. Gould v. Baltimore, 59 Md. 378. A statute providing that liens for an assessment for benefits for a public work shall be foreclosed as provided by law for the foreclosure of tax liens does not impose on such actions the limitations fixed for the bringing of an action to foreclose a tax lien. Hartford v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank, 79 Conn. 38, 63 Atl. 658.

A provision denying any right of limitation against taxes does not apply to a special assessment against a street railroad company for improving the portion of the street occupied by its track. Galveston v. New York Guaranty Trust Co., 107 Fed. 325, 46 C. C. A. 319.

Tolling statute by promise to pay.—A promise to pay a tax bill, if the holder would carry it over the period of limitation, is an assumption of personal liability on the debt, and not an extension of time, preventing limitations running against the lien of the bill. Adkins v. Case, 81 Mo. App. 104.

Effect of change of boundaries and powers of municipality.—The running of the statute of limitations against certificates of assessments issued by a municipality, and collectable by foreclosure against the lots, is not suspended by subsequent legislation changing the boundaries and powers of the municipality. Barden v. Duluth, 28 Fed. 14.

Assessment payable in instalments.—Where a statute relative to street improvements provided that the cost of such an improvement was to be borne, two thirds by the owner of abutting property, and one third by the city, unless on request of the property-owner the "ten-year plan" was adopted, and in the latter event the property-owner paid the whole of the cost in ten equal instalments, for which the city issued its bonds and paid interest thereon, and another statute barred in five years a liability to pay for street improvements, it was held that, in the absence of a request by the abutting owner therefor, the adoption of such ten-year plan by the city did not operate to extend the period of limitations beyond five years from the completion and acceptance of the work. Lexington v. Crosthwait, 78 S. W. 1130, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1898. But a property-owner who, knowing that the city is acting on the idea that he has requested such ten-year plan, fails to object, and who, after the city has issued its bonds and paid the entire cost of the improvement, pays without objection two annual instalments assessed on that basis, is estopped to deny that he made such request, and, after five years, rely on statute does not begin to run until the cause of action accrues,⁹⁹ or, it is generally held, from the time the assessment becomes delinquent.¹ If suit is brought within the period of limitation judgment may be entered after its expiration.² Where a statute extending the period of limitations becomes effective before the claim is barred the period of limitations is extended for the term prescribed by the new statute.³ Where the proceeding is to enforce a lien, the lien must exist when the action is begun.⁴

(vi) PARTIES. Where a particular person is required by statute to collect assessments, actions must be brought in his name.⁵ As a general rule under the statutes an action to enforce an assessment must be brought against the owner of the property which it is sought to charge,⁶ although under some statutes it is pro-limitations as a bar to the enforcement of the lien for the balance of instalments. Lexington v. Bowman, 119 Ky. 840, 84 S. W. 1161, 85 S. W. 1191, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 286, 651.

Where money is set apart from the proceeds of a trustees' sale for the payment of assessments, should they be judicially held valid, the trustees cannot assert the bar of a statute of limitations as against a proceeding to collect the assessment. Gould v. Baltimore, 58 Md. 46.

99. State v. Ballard, 16 Wash. 418, 47 Pac. 970 (holding that no right of action existed in a city or town to enforce local assessments levied under the invalid act of March 27, 1890, until the taking effect, on June 7, 1893, of the legalizing act of March 9, 1893; hence the statutory period of limitation of two years had not expired at the time of the taking effect of the act of March 20, 1895, extending such period to ten years, which was passed with an emergency clause, and the extension applied to all such actions); Galveston v. New York Guaranty Trust Co., 107 Fed. 325, 46 C. C. A. 319 (holding that a cause of action against a city street railroad company on a special assessment for a street improvement accrued, within the meaning of the statute of limitations, when the improvement was completed and accepted by the city council, as the city charter expressly provided that assessment for such improvements should become due at that time). And compare Ballard v. West Coast Imp. Co., 15 Wash. 572, 46 Pac. 1055.

Necessity of valid assessment.—It has been held that a valid and enforceable assessment must have been made. Bowman v. Colfax, 17 Wash. 344, 49 Pac. 551, holding that if the statute commences to run against the city's right to compel property benefited by an improvement to pay the cost thereof from the time a cause of action could have been perfected by the exercise of reasonable diligence, the time during which the city was in good faith proceeding with an invalid assessment should be excluded, and the statute would not commence to run until the expiration of that time.

—The provision in 64 Ohio Laws, p. 75, limiting the lien of an assessment for certain improvements to two years, unless "a proper action" to enforce the lien be brought within that period, should be construed not to imply an action wherein the owner of the premises was not made a party or served with process until the two years had expired. Bonte v. Taylor, 24 Ohio St. 628. Where a person other than the record owner is the real owner of the property to be charged, suit to enforce a special tax bill should be brought against such real owner, and it will not avail to bring the real owner in after the period of limitation for bringing suit has expired, although the action was originally instituted against the record owner within such period. St. Joseph v. Baker, 86 Mo. App. 310. Under an act providing that the lien of a street improvement assessment shall continue two years, the commencement of an action to foreclose within two years does not continue the lien after the expiration of two years as against a purchaser of the property not a party to the foreclosure action. Page v. W. W. Chase Co., 145 Cal. 578, 79 Pac. 278.

3. Young v. Tacoma, 31 Wash. 153, 71 Pac. 742 (holding that where an original assessment for a street improvement was confirmed at a time when the statute of limitations against an action to enforce the assessment was two years, and before the expiration thereof an act was passed providing a ten-year limitation, the latter statute applied to proceedings to enforce a reassessment for the cost of the improvement for which such original assessment was made); Bowman v. Colfax, 17 Wash. 344, 49 Pac. 551.

4. Reis v. Graff, 51 Cal. 86.

5. Bowyer v. Camden, 50 N. J. L. 87, 11 Atl. 137, holding that under the provisions of a charter, the city treasurer was the officer in whose name suit must be brought.

6. See the statutes of the several states. And see Phelan v. Dunne, 72 Cal. 229, 13 Pac. 662 (holding that under the act of April 1, 1872, as to proper parties in action to enforce street assessments, such an action may be brought against a devisee of the fee of a lot fronting on the street improved, to enforce an assessment made after his testator's death under a contract made before his death, without joining his executors, although his estate has not been finally settled, where

vided that all persons interested in the property shall be made parties.⁷ Where the enforcement is sought against community property the wife is a necessary party,⁸ and the wife of a defendant property-owner is in any event a proper party.⁹ Where the action is by the contractor the city is not a necessary party.¹⁰

(vii) PROCESS. Process must be served in the manner prescribed by statute.¹¹ Under the provisions of some statutes where the owner is a non-resident he may be brought in by attachment.¹²

(viii) PLEADING—(A) Petition or Complaint—(1) IN GENERAL. The pleadings in actions to recover special assessments are governed by the rules applicable to civil actions in general.¹³ It is as a general rule regarded as necesis shown that there is sufficient personalty to pay all debts and claims); Louisville v. Hexagon Tile Walk Co., 103 Ky. 552, 45 S. W. 667, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 236; Kelly v. Mendelsohn, 105 La. 490, 29 So. 894 (holding that it is sufficient to make the person in possession of the premises under an apparent title defendant); Vance v. Corrigan, 78 Mo. 94 (holding that a requirement that a suit to enforce a special tax bill be brought against "the owner" of the land to be charged refers to the owner of record); Keating v. Craig, 73 Mo. 507 (holding that the trustee named in a deed of trust under which the land taxed has been conveyed is not a necessary party when the beneficiary is a party); Excelsior Springs v. Henry, 99 Mo. App. 450, 73 S. W. 944 (holding that a suit was properly brought against a purchaser of the land who acquired title under a tax deed after the city tax lien accrued); St. Joseph v. Baker, 86 Mo. App. 310; Heman v. McNamara, 77 Mo. App. 1; Schneider Granite Co. v. Taylor, 64 Mo. App. 37 (holding that a valid judgment may be rendered without making all the persons interested therein parties); Smith v. Barrett, 41 Mo. App. 460 (holding that the owner of the land contemplated by a statute was the owner at the time of the institution of the suit, and not at the time the tax bill was issued); Miller v. Anheuser, 4 Mo. App. 436 (holding that to an action on a special tax bill, if defendant owns only an undivided half of the property, the other half owner should be made a party).

Holder of legal title.—When the title to real estate stands in the name of a wife, she may properly intervene in an action to enforce a special assessment tax bill against the land, and move to have the judgment granting such relief set aside, although the consideration for the land was paid by the husband. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Young, 94 Mo. App. 204, 68 S. W. 107, 1115.

Purchaser under foreclosure of prior assessment.—One who, without notice, takes title under foreclosure of a street assessment pending a suit to foreclose junior assessment liens, is a necessary party to the latter suit, since he holds the legal title, and, if not so made, he is not bound by the decree. Brady v. Burke, 90 Cal. 1, 27 Pac. 52.

7. See the cases cited infra, this note.

Mortgagee.—Where a mortgagee of property assessed is not joined, such mortgagee's rights are in no way affected by the foreclosure. Krutz v. Gardner, 25 Wash. 396, 65 Pac. 771. But he is not a necessary party. Krutz v. Gardner, 18 Wash. 332, 51 Pac. 397.

Admission of new defendants.—Before defendants having or claiming an interest in property assessed for street improvements can defend the action for the assessment, they must allege their interest. Himmelman v. Spanagel, 39 Cal. 389.

Under an early California statute it was necessary in an action to foreclose a lien to make all the persons having an interest in the property parties. Wood v. Brady, 68 Cal. 78, 5 Pac. 623, 8 Pac. 599 (holding that the foreclosure of a junior street assessment lien does not extinguish prior liens of the same kind, if the holders of such prior liens are not made parties to the foreclosure suit); Driscoll v. Howard, 63 Cal. 438; Diggins v. Reay, 54 Cal. 525 [followed in Milliken v. Houghton, (1884) 4 Pac. 914]; Hancock v. Bowman, 49 Cal. 413; San Francisco v. Doe, 48 Cal. 560.

10. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Bowker, 9 Ind. App. 428, 36 N. E. 864, holding that the property-owner cannot ask that the city be made a party, since the joinder of the city could have no effect on any right of defense he might have.

11. Greenstreet v. Thornton, 60 Ark. 369, 30 S. W. 347, 27 L. R. A. 735, holding that Sandels & H. Dig. § 5344 et seq., in proceedings to foreclose an assessment lien, only authorizes general notice to all parties interested in the lot assessed, where the owner is unknown, and such fact is stated in the complaint.

Statement of cause of action.—That the citation in an action on a street improvement certificate, in giving a brief statement of the cause of action, misstated the corporate name of the city, did not render the judgment void. Moore v. Perry, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 204, 35 S. W. 838.

12. Syenite Granite Co. v. Bobb, 37 Mo. App. 483, holding that a general writ of attachment may issue.

Alternative allegations.—Where in an action against a front proprietor for his share of the expense of laying a pavement in front

sary that a petition or complaint in an action to enforce an assessment for a public improvement specifically aver the existence of all the facts and the taking of all the steps which under the statute are necessary to impose liability upon the property-owner,¹⁴ although the taking of such steps need not be minutely pleaded.¹⁵ Under some statutes dispensing with the necessity of pleading facts conferring of his premises, plaintiff alleged that the contract was made and said paving done in accordance with and in pursuance of Act No. 20 of 1882, and Act No. 73 of 1876, and defendant excepted that plaintiff's reference to said acts, without specifying on which it relied as authority for its contract, made its petition vague, and that, as the provisions of those acts were inconsistent, it should be ordered to elect between them, and before trial plaintiff's counsel stated of record that plaintiff relied on Act No. 20 of 1882 as far as the validity of its contract in matter of form was concerned, and as for the proportion of payments and the remedies it relied on Act No. 73 of 1876, it was held that, as plaintiff believed the acts were not inconsistent, it had a right to urge them alternatively in pleading; and the right to do so could not be tested by dilatory exception, but was a matter for the merits. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Gogreve, 41 La. Ann. 251, 5 So. 848.

Negating defenses.—In a suit on a special tax bill, the petition need not anticipate and avoid defenses that the answer may set up. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Lampton, 79 Mo. App. 286 [following Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Sandford, 76 Mo. App. 355]; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Young, 68 Mo. App. 175; Seaboard Nat. Bank v. Wright, 68 Mo. App. 144. Acts (1891), c. 97, § 75, providing that if, before an improvement is ordered, any lots have already an improvement conforming to the general plan, the board shall allow the owner for it, and deduct from the contract price, does not require a complaint to enforce an improvement lien to negative the preëxistence of a conformable improvement. Spades v. Phillips, 9 Ind. App. 487, 37 N. E. 297.

Curing defects.—In an action by a contractor to foreclose an assessment lien, error in a reply, in alleging that plaintiff did not make the contract for the improvement, is corrected by allegations that he began the improvement on a certain day according to his said contract. Willard v. Albertson, 23 Ind. App. 162, 53 N. E. 1076, 54 N. E. 446. Where there was no sufficient denial of the allegations of the petition, the proof of the facts required by statute entitled plaintiff to judgment thereunder. Gaertner v. Louisville Artificial Stone Co., 114 Ky. 160, 70 S. W. 293, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 940. See also Cabell v. Henderson, 88 S. W. 1095, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 89.

Amendments.—In an action on a street assessment, where the judgment recited that defendants sued by fictitious names were dismissed from the action, and the court found that defendant was at all times the owner of the land described in the complaint, the failure to amend the complaint by striking therefrom the names of the fictitious persons is not prejudicial. Belser v. Allman, 134 Cal. 399, 66 Pac. 492.

Action upon void assessment.—Where in an action against an abutting owner for the amount of a void street assessment, the complaint alleged that the work was done with defendant's knowledge and consent; that it directly benefited his property, and that he received the benefit thereof; that the sum assessed and sued for was the reasonable value of the work, and was also the "value of the said benefit to defendant's said property," a sufficient consideration for defendant's promise to pay the sum assessed was alleged. *Bernstein v. Sufficiency of particular averments.—For cases in which the sufficiency of averments as to particular facts has been considered jurisdiction it has been held sufficient to plead that work was duly ordered¹⁶ or a contract duly awarded.¹⁷ Under the general rule it has been held in specific cases that there must be an averment of the character of the improvement,¹⁸ notice to property-owners of the improvement,¹⁹ establishment of a grade,²⁰ notice of award of contract,²¹ the making and apportionment of the assessment,²² facts rendering the assessment due,²³ demand of payment,²⁴ facts showing the liability of the property sought to be charged,²⁵ ownership of the property which it is sought to

Reference to contract.—In an action to collect a special assessment for street improvements it is not necessary for the complaint to show the depth and width of the improvement and the kind of material used, where the resolutions and ordinances and the contract and specifications fixing these particulars are referred to in the complaint. Deane v. Indiana Macadam, etc., Co., 161 Ind. 371, 68 N. E. 686.

Assessment roll.—A complaint in an action to enforce an assessment for street improvements is demurrable, unless a copy of so much of the assessment roll as affects defendant's property is attached as an exhibit. Sloan v. Faurot, 11 Ind. App. 689, 39 N. E. 539.

Sufficiency of averment.—For cases in which the sufficiency of the averment of an assessment has been considered see Ede v. Cuneo, (Cal. 1898) 55 Pac. 388; Treanor v. Houghton, 103 Cal. 53, 36 Pac. 1081; Wray v. Fry, 158 Ind. 92, 62 N. E. 1004; *Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. 23. Lewis v. Albertson, 23 Ind. App. 147, 53 N. E. 1071 (holding that a complaint which shows that the assessment was made, and that the time fixed by the statute for payment has passed, is sufficient); Dugger v. Hicks, 11 Ind. App. 374, 36 N. E. 1085 (holding that in an action by a contractor it is sufficient to aver that the assessments are due and unpaid, without alleging that the town has not paid plaintiff).

Assessment payable in instalments.—A complaint for the enforcement of a lien, which shows that the assessment is due, need not show that defendants were given time within which to elect whether they would pay the assessment in instalments or at once; but defendants, if they took the steps necessary to secure the right to pay the same by instalments, should allege the necessary facts by way of answer. Highlands v. Dallas, 165 Ind. 710, 75 N. E. 824; Harmon v. Dallas, 165 Ind. 710, 75 N. E. 824; Slocum v. Dallas, 165 Ind. 710, 75 N. E. 823; Low v. Dallas, 165 Ind. 392, 75 N. E. 822.

Sufficiency of averment.—For cases in which the sufficiency of an averment of demand has been considered see Williams v. Bergin, 127 Cal. 578, 60 Pac. 164, (1899) 57 Pac. 1072; *McBean v. Effect of including land not liable.—A petition in a suit to enforce a lien against real estate for a local improvement is good, although its prayer seeks to subject to the payment of the claim sued on more land than is within the taxing district. Holt v. Figg, 94 S. W. 34, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 613.

charge,²⁶ and facts showing the right to sue as assignee of the contract.²⁷ A petition which shows on its face that the cause of action is barred is insufficient.²⁸

(2) AVERMENTS AS TO ORDINANCE OR RESOLUTION. The existence of an ordinance or resolution for the improvement must be averred;²⁹ but a general allegation that the council passed the ordinance³⁰ or resolution is usually regarded as sufficient;³¹ nor need the ordinance be set out in full,³² but it is sufficient to refer to it by title and date.³³

(3) AVERMENTS AS TO CONTRACT AND PERFORMANCE. The making of a contract must be averred,³⁴ but as a general rule it is not regarded as necessary to set the contract out in full,³⁵ although in some cases of action by the contractor it is held necessary.³⁶ Under some statutes it must be alleged that the contract was in writing,³⁷ under others that it fixed the time for beginning and completing the work.³⁸ It is usually held necessary to aver completion of the work³⁹ and compliance with the contract,⁴⁰ although the specific time of completion need not

Publication.—It is sufficient to allege, as to the publication of an ordinance, that after its approval by the mayor it was printed and published in two newspapers published in the city, one in the English and one in the German language, proper allegations being made as to the circulation of such newspapers, and as to their choice by the general council as official newspapers. Bitzer v. Dinwiddie, 45 S. W. 1049, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 298.

Civ. App. 1898) 46 S. W. 903, holding an allegation that the contract for making the improvement was executed sufficient without alleging that it was signed by the mayor and clerk.

Sufficiency of allegations see Palmer v. Burnham, 120 Cal. 364, 52 Pac. 664; Spaulding v. Baxter, 25 Ind. App. 485, 53 N. E. 551; Lewis v. Albertson, 23 Ind. App. 147, 53 N. E. 1071.

Specifications.—A complaint in an action to foreclose a street assessment lien is sufficient, although it fails to set forth the specifications attached to and forming a part of the contract for the work. Greenwood v. Hassett, (Cal. 1900) 61 Pac. 173. But see Girvin v. Simon, 116 Cal. 604, 48 Pac. 720.

Lewis*, 128 Cal. 236, 60 Pac. 422, 772, holding that where the complaint in an action for a street assessment alleged that the assessment was made under a resolution of the board of supervisors that certain street improvements be made where not already so done, and the lot described in the complaint was assessed to pay a portion of the expense of such work, it was not necessary that the complaint allege that the work authorized had not already been done in front of the lot in question.

be alleged especially where the petition otherwise contains full and specific averments.⁴¹

(B) Answer. The form and sufficiency of the answer is governed by the rules of pleading usually applicable to civil actions.⁴² The facts constituting an affirmative defense must be pleaded,⁴³ and facts, not conclusions, must be alleged.⁴⁴ Hence an answer must aver the facts relied on to establish fraud,⁴⁵ or lack of due process

42. See PLEADING. And see City St. Imp. Co. v. Rontet, 140 Cal. 55, 73 Pac. 729 (holding that there was no denial of plaintiff's bid being signed); Shepard v. McNeil, 38 Cal. 72 (holding that an answer to a complaint seeking to enforce a lien for an assessment for street improvements, which denies that the superintendent of streets "originally" made the assessment in his official capacity, is evasive, and tenders an immaterial issue).
