Inconsistent defense.—Where, after the reversal of a judgment in an action on a street assessment, a new assessment is made, and action brought thereon before the dismissal of the former action, defendant is not precluded from a defense that the subsequent assessment was not made within the time required, by setting up other inconsistent defenses, denying the making of such assessment, and that the former suit was still pending, no final judgment having been entered therein. Westall v. Atlschul, 126 Cal. 164, 58 Pac. 458.

Amendments.—Where a complaint was amended, on plaintiff's motion, by striking from its caption the names of some of the defendants, as to whom the action was dismissed, and the action was to enforce a street assessment against a lot, and the complaint averred that all the defendants were joint owners of the lot, and, as such, necessary parties to the suit, it was held that if the effect of the amendment was to show that defendants whose names were struck out had no interest in the lot, it was the right of those remaining to amend their answer and aver that the others did have an interest in the lot. Harney v. Applegate, 57 Cal. 205.

Presumptions.—Where an answer asserts the invalidity of a contract as providing for repairs but does not set out the contract it will be presumed as against the answer that the contract is one of guaranty. Shank v. Smith, 157 Ind. 401, 61 N. E. 932, 55 L. R. A. 564.

43. Brown v. Pomona Bd. of Education, 103 Cal. 531, 37 Pac. 503 (holding that as the authority of a municipal corporation to make a contract not void on its face will be presumed, the defense of ultra vires, in an action thereon, must be raised by answer); Shrum v. Salem, 13 Ind. App. 115, 39 N. E. 1050 (holding that an answer alleging that defendant was engaged in the construction of a sidewalk in front of his premises; that the town, without notice to him, took the work in charge, and prevented him from completing it, is insufficient as a bar to an action by the town to enforce its lien for the cost of the walk, as it does not show that defendant was constructing the walk according to the requirements of the ordinance); Horne v. Mehler, 64 S. W. 918, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1176 (holding that if defendant wishes to rely upon a failure to comply with a city ordinance requiring the apportionment to be approved by the council before the warrants are issued by the board, both the ordinance and the failure to comply with it must be alleged); Menefee v. Bell, 62 Mo. App. 659 (holding that failure to file notice of suit in the office of the board of public works, as required by the city charter, is new matter, and must be pleaded and proved); Guinotte v. Ridge, 46 Mo. App. 254.

An answer setting up a right to a reduction in an assessment because of a previous improvement made by the owner must set out all the facts necessary under the statute to entitle the owner to the reduction. Lux, etc., Stone Co. v. Donaldson, 162 Ind. 481, 68 N. E. 1014.

44. Highlands v. Dallas, 165 Ind. 710, 75 N. E. 824; Harmon v. Dallas, 165 Ind. 710, 75 N. E. 824; Slocum v. Dallas, 165 Ind. 710, 75 N. E. 823; Low v. Dallas, 165 Ind. 392, 75 N. E. 822 (all holding that, in an action to enforce a street assessment lien, an answer attacking the proceedings looking to the improvement on the ground that the town trustees who acted in the proceedings had not filed the certificate required by Burns' Annot. St. § 4331 (which applies only to the first election of trustees held upon the incorporation of a town), was insufficient, where it did not disclose when the town was incorporated, or when the trustees were elected or appointed, or by what authority they claimed to act); Shank v. Smith, 157 Ind. 401, 61 N. E. 932, 55 L. R. A. 564 (holding that an answer was insufficient, as failing to show by its averments whether a hearing was denied the property-owners).

45. Willard v. Albertson, 23 Ind. App. 164, 53 N. E. 1077, 54 N. E. 403. See also Lux, etc., Stone Co. v. Donaldson, 162 Ind. 481, 68 N. E. 1014, holding averments insufficient.

Sufficiency of allegation.—In an action to recover an assessment for a street improvement, an answer alleging that defendants called the attention of the city engineer and the street committee in charge of the improvement to certain defects in the work, and, on a hearing, made proof of the same, but that the committee disregarded the evidence, and concealed the facts from the common council, and assured such council that the work had been done according to the contract, and that the civil engineer and the

of law,⁴⁶ or imperfect execution of the work,⁴⁷ or improper authorization of the work.⁴⁸

(c) Demurrer. Where the facts alleged show that the law has not been complied with the petition is demurrable.⁴⁹ Objection to the form of allegations should be presented by special demurrer.⁵⁰

(IX) EVIDENCE—(A) Presumptions and Burden of Proof. Proceedings for the collection of assessments are in the absence of special statutory provisions governed by the rules of evidence usually applicable to civil actions.⁵¹ Thus the regularity of official acts will be presumed,⁵² and in general presumptions will be indulged in favor of the validity of the assessment.⁵³ In some jurisdictions, however, it has been held that he who seeks the foreclosure or enforcement of the lien of a special assessment has the burden of proving its validity.⁵⁴ The burden street committee combined and colluded with the contractor to do inferior work and to furnish inferior material and to deceive the common council, etc., was insufficient as an allegation of fraud in the acceptance of the work by the common council. Lux, etc., Stone Co. v. Donaldson, 162 Ind. 481, 68 N. E. 1014.

46. Willard v. Albertson, 23 Ind. App. 164, 53 N. E. 1077, 54 N. E. 403.

W. 318, holding that where the petition in an action on a special tax bill alleged that the work was completed "in the manner" prescribed by the contract, a general denial was not sufficient to raise an issue that the work was not completed within the time required.

48. Carthage v. Badgley, 73 Mo. App. 123; Vieths v. Planet Property, etc., Co., 64 Mo. App. 207.

49. Perine Contracting, etc., Co. v. Quackbush, 104 Cal. 684, 38 Pac. 533 (holding that a complaint, in an action to foreclose an assessment lien, which alleges that bids to do the work for which the lien is claimed were to have been received until a certain day; that the bids were in fact opened, examined, and declared on the day before, and, in pursuance thereof, that plaintiff was awarded the contract is demurrable); Perine v. Forbush, 97 Cal. 305, 32 Pac. 226 (holding that where, in an action to enforce a street assessment, it appears from the complaint that the contract on which the assessment was based was not entered into within fifteen days after the posting of the notice of its award, as provided by St. (1885) p. 147, and there is no averment that this delay was not caused by the fault of plaintiff, the complaint is demurrable as failing to state a cause of action); Carthage v. Badgley, 73 Mo. App. 123 (holding that where plaintiff, in an action on a special tax bill, makes additional allegations to those required, stating facts which show an improper authorization of the work, such petition becomes demurrable). And see Bernard v. Green, 60 S. W. 631, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1448, holding that in an action to enforce a lien for the cost of a street improvement, a demurrer to the petition does not lie on the ground that a certain part of the apportionment warrant sued on was for keeping the street in repair, where neither the petition nor the ordinance or contract shows that anything was included for repairs.

50. Williams v. Bergin, 127 Cal. 578, 60 Pac. 164, (1899) 57 Pac. 1072, holding that an objection to a complaint that it does not allege that the notice of an award of a contract was "conspicuously" posted, as required by Street Improvement Act, § 5, cannot be presented on general demurrer.

W. 683 (taking of receipt before delivery of tax bills).

53. Doane v. Houghton, 75 Cal. 360, 17 Pac. 426 (holding that it would not be presumed that work was erroneously included in the assessment); Grey v. People, 194 Ill. 486, 62 N. E. 894 (holding that where, in an action for a delinquent special assessment, it is not shown that an ordinance, invalid because restricting the hiring of labor to members of labor unions, was applied or enforced in any manner in the contract for the work or the proceeding for making of the improvement, it will be presumed that the invalid ordinance was not applied to the improvement and assessment); Bernet v. Shanks, 55 S. W. 690, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1558 (establishment of grade); Risley v. St. Louis, 34 Mo. 404; Perkinson v. Schnaake, 108 Mo. App. 255, 83 S. W. 301 (holding that it could not be assumed, in the absence of evidence, that an item contained in the bills for "removing old pavement and repaving roadway" included the making or repairing of a concrete foundation for the pavement, which was paid for by the city).

is upon plaintiff to prove the material allegations of the complaint where such allegations have been placed in issue.⁵⁵ Under some statutes it is provided that the production of certain documentary evidence of the assessment shall establish a prima facie case;⁵⁶ and when a prima facie case is established by a proper complaint and the production of these documents, the burden is upon defendant to prove any defects or irregularities in the proceedings.⁵⁷ Plaintiff is not bound 534 (holding that, where a contractor agrees to take his pay out of the proceeds of special assessments, and the city levies an assessment on a street-railway property, and sells the same, but neglects to take out a deed therefor, the contractor cannot maintain a bill against the street railway to pay the amount of such assessment without showing that it was just and equitable, as well as properly and validly made); Lufkin v. Galveston, 56 Tex. 522.

55. Robinson v. Merrill, 87 Cal. 11, 25 Pac. 162 (holding that in an action to foreclose a street assessment lien upon a lot under St. (1871-1872) p. 816, it being required by the statute that the owners of the lot be sued, the burden of proof that defendants were the owners is upon plaintiff, although the answer alleges that the title was in certain persons, one of whom was not a party defendant); *Santa Barbara v. The warrant, assessment, certificate, and diagram, together with an affidavit of demand and non-payment, establishes a prima facie case, under the California Street Improvement Act, St. (1891) p. 204; St. (1889) p. 168, § 12. See also St. (1889) p. 157, § 8; St. (1885) p. 157, c. 153, § 12; Act, April 1, 1872. Raisch v. Hildebrandt, 146 Cal. 721, 81 Pac. 21; *Dowling v. But see Witter v. Bachman, 117 Cal. 318, 49 Pac. 202 (holding that, it being made a prerequisite to a right of action for assessment for street improvement that the superintendent of streets record the return of the warrant and sign the record (Act, March 18, 1885, § 10), the return of the warrant, showing on its face that this was not done, will prevent recovery, notwithstanding section 12 makes the assessment, warrant, diagram, certificate, and affidavit of demand and non-payment "prima facie evidence of the regularity and correctness of the assessment and of the prior proceedings and acts of the superintendent . . . and city council, and like evidence of the right of the plaintiff to recover"); Dougherty v. Harrison, 54 Cal. 428 (holding that written objections to the making of the improvement displaced the prima facie case).

The ordinance, contract, and apportionment establish a prima facie case under the Kentucky statute (St. § 2838). Barfield v. Gleason, 111 Ky. 491, 63 S. W. 964, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 128, 64 S. The tax bill is, under Mo. Rev. St. (1899) p. 2513, § 25, prima facie evidence of the liability of defendant. Heman v. Larkin. (Mo. App. 1902) 70 S. W. 907; Heman v. Ring, 85 Mo. App. 231; Adkins v. Quest, 79 Mo. App. 36 (holding that plaintiff is not required to prove the date of delivery to make a prima facie case); Stifel v. Dougherty, 6 Mo. App. 441 (holding that the ordinance authorizing such work need not be introduced in evidence, although it is pleaded). See also St. Joseph v. Anthony, 30 Mo. 537; Gibson v. Zimmerman, 27 Mo. App. 90. But although any person having an interest in property sought to be charged with a special tax bill may be sued to enforce the same, such bill is not prima facie evidence of liability against a person so sued who is not stated in the bill to be the owner of the property. *St. Joseph v. (B) Admissibility and Sufficiency. The rules governing the admissibility⁶¹ and Falls City Artificial Stone Co., 52 S. W. 947, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 669; Haag v. Ward, 186 Mo. 325, 85 S. W. 391; Dollar Sav. Bank v. Ridge, 183 Mo. 506, 82 S. W. 56, that ordinance was not legally enacted.

58. Scott v. Hayes, 162 Ind. 548, 70 N. E. 879, holding that no proof of an averment in a complaint by owners of street improvement bonds issued under the Barrett Law (Burns Annot. St. (1894) § 4296) that the city issuing the bonds failed and refused to pay the amount of assessments is necessary, in an action to enforce the lien of the assessments.

60. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Siloam Springs Waterworks Imp. Dist. No. 1, 68 Ark. 376, 59 S. W. 248 (that ordinance was not duly passed and published); McVerry v. Boyd, 89 Cal. 304, 26 Pac. 885 (that the expense of improving a portion of the street occupied by a railroad was included in the assessment against defendant); Dashiell v. Baltimore, 45 Md. 615 (invalidity of ordinance depending on matter dehors record); Yost v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 24 Ohio Cir. Ct. 169 (that the assessment exceeded the special benefit accruing to its property).

61. See EVIDENCE. And see cases cited infra, this note.

Assignment of assessment.—In an action by an assignee to enforce an assessment for a public improvement, which was against a certain lot, but to an unknown owner, the fact that the assignment, which describes the lot, also states that the assessment was to a certain person as owner, does not render it inadmissible, as the name of the alleged owner may be rejected as surplusage. Gill v. Dunham, (Cal. 1893) 34 Pac. 68. In an action against an abutting owner for the amount of a void street assessment which he promised to pay the contractor, it was proper to admit in evidence the written assignment to plaintiff by the contractor of the assessment, as tending to show an assignment of the obligation sued on. Bernstein v. Downs, 112 Cal. 197, 44 Pac. 557.

Value of property.—Evidence of the value of the abutting property assessed, in an action to recover an assessment thereon for paving, is admissible only where a personal judgment is sought, and then only to show the assessment to be so flagrant an abuse of legislative power as to authorize the courts to declare it void. Hutcheson v. Storrie, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 48 S. W. 785. Compare Burnham v. Chicago, 24 Ill. 496; Chicago v. Burtice, 24 Ill. 489.

Preliminary proof of plan.—To make a plan of a street legal evidence in a proceeding to enforce a lien for improvements, it must be supported by proof of the passage of the ordinance of councils whereby the plan was adopted. Oakdale v. Sterling, 8 Pa. Super. Ct. 428, 43 Wkly. Notes Cas. 123.

Publication of notice.—The publication of the notice required by an ordinance providing that within three days after filing the roll the clerk shall give notice by publication of such filing may be shown by any competent proof, where the clerk is not required to preserve the proof in any particular way. Seattle v. Doran, 5 Wash. 482, 32 Pac. 105, 1002.

Conformity with allegations.—In a city's action to recover a tax an allegation that the tax was "duly levied" authorizes the reception in evidence of the ordinance under which it was levied. Kansas City v. Johnson, 78 Mo. 661.

Evidence held admissible.—Written assignment of contract (Reid v. Clay, 134 Cal. 207, 66 Pac. 262); the "certificate of the city engineer," "assessment, diagram, and warrant," and the "return" (Reid v. Clay, supra; Williams v. Bergin, 129 Cal. 461, 62 Pac. 59); a certificate of the city engineer (O'Connor v. Hooper, 102 Cal. 528, 36 Pac. 939); copies of contract (Manning v. Den, 90 Cal. 610, 27 Pac. 435); the affidavit of demand (Deady v. Townsend, 57 Cal. 298); Dyer v. Brogan, 57 Cal. 234); plans and specifications for street improvements, prepared by the civil engineer of a city in obedience to the duty imposed on him by statute (Taber v. Ferguson, 109 Ind. 227, 9 N. E. 723); record of the proceedings of a city council containing the notice for bids and providing for assessment, and the affidavits for a precept to collect, and the precept itself (Fralich v. Barlow, 25 Ind. App. 383, 58 N. E. 271); extracts from books of the controller relating to street improvements, in which claims for such improvements were recorded (O'Leary v. Sloo, 7 La. Ann. 25); the original record of the ordinance authorizing the improvement (Rutherford v. Hamilton, 97 Mo. 543, 11 S. W. 249); evidence controverting the ownership and authority of the signers of a protest (Sedalia v. Montgomery, 109 Mo. App. 197, 88 S. W. 1014); evidence concerning the condition of the pavement during the first year after it was laid (Hill-O'Meara Constr. Co. v. Hutchinson, 100 Mo. App. 294, 73 S. W. 318); an assessment certificate notwithstanding defect in description (Hutcheson v. Storrie, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 48 S. W. 785).

Evidence held inadmissible.—A certificate of an engineer not such as required by the statute (Obermeyer v. Patterson, 130 Cal. 531, 62 Pac. 926); private contracts between plaintiff and defendants, which included additional work never performed (San Fran-sufficiency⁶² of evidence in civil actions apply generally to proceedings to enforce assessments.

(x) TRIAL OR HEARING. The trial of an action to enforce special assessments is in the absence of statutory provisions governed by the rules relating to civil actions generally.⁶³ Controverted questions of fact are for the jury, where a jury trial is had,⁶⁴ under proper instructions.⁶⁵ In case findings of facts are made by the court they should be of the ultimate and not the probative facts.⁶⁶

App. 42, 83 Pac. 72; and the recitals in an ordinance declaring a new street open to public travel to establish the jurisdiction of the city council to levy a special tax (Merrill v. Shields, 57 Nebr. 78, 77 N. W. 368); evidence in an action to enforce an assessment for sidewalks that the city had not built all the walks ordered by the ordinance (Pierson v. People, 204 Ill. 456, 68 N. E. 383); statements made in connection with negotiations for a compromise and settlement of the contractor's claim (Fralich v. Barlow, 25 Ind. App. 383, 58 N. E. 271); parol testimony that notices of award of contracts for public improvements were not published by order of the board of supervisors (Dorland v. McGlynn, 47 Cal. 47); ordinance providing for different improvements than that estimated (Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Chicago, 184 Ill. 154, 56 N. E. 410). The county tax list is incompetent to prove a special assessment. Muscatine v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 88 Iowa 291, 55 N. W. 100. Where the defense is alleged, in an action to recover a special assessment for a district sewer, that the sewer constructed was a public sewer, to be paid for by the municipality, and not by special assessments, evidence of the dimensions and material of the sewer, and evidence showing that it is larger than certain public sewers constructed by the city is not material. Hill v. Swingley, 159 Mo. 45, 60 S. W. 114.

62. See cases cited infra, this note.

Variance.—Proof of a joint assessment will not support an allegation of a several one. New London v. Miller, 60 Conn. 112, 22 Atl. 499.

Evidence held sufficient.—For cases in which the evidence has been held sufficient to establish particular facts see Greenwood v. Chandon, 130 Cal. 467, 62 Pac. 736 (that all the documents were duly recorded, and the record signed); Moffitt v. Jordan, 127 Cal. 622, 60 Pac. 173 (a compliance with a statute requiring the warrant, assessment, diagram, and certificate to be delivered to the contractor before making demand for payment of the assessment); Buckman v. Landers, 111 Cal. 347, 43 Pac. 1125 (demand publicly made on the lot); Baldrick v. Gast, 79 S. W. 212, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1977 (that the proper authorities of a city accepted a public improvement); Button v. Gast, 73 S. W. 1014, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 2284 (that plans and specifications were on file before the contract was let); De Soto v. Showman, 100 Mo. App. 323, 73 S. W. 257 (that no estimate was ever submitted to the council).

Evidence held insufficient.—For cases illustrative of the insufficiency of evidence to establish particular facts see Witter v. Bachman, 117 Cal. 318, 49 Pac. 202 (holding that admission in evidence, without objection, of a warrant does not prove what is not shown thereby, but is alleged in the complaint, and is necessary to recovery, that the superintendent of streets recorded the return of the warrant and signed the record); Dorland v. Bergson, 78 Cal. 637, 21 Pac. 537 (establishment of grade); Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Fish, 158 Ind. 525, 63 N. E. 454 (valid assessment which plaintiff had a right to enforce); Cincinnati v. Longworth, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 598, 22 Cinc. L. Bul. 153 (insufficiency of repairs).

63. See TRIAL. And see Gibson v. Chicago, 22 Ill. 566 (holding that a court had authority to continue an action to recover assessments for public improvements in the same manner as any other case within its general jurisdiction); Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Bellaire, 60 Ohio St. 301, 54 N. E. 263.

W. 120 (holding that the question whether a contract for grading a street has been performed within a reasonable time is one of fact, and holding also that where, under an ordinance and contract for grading a city street, the contractor is in effect given a reasonable time to complete the work, although a certain period is named, the question whether an extension of time, granted by ordinance after the named period had expired, was valid as against an abutting owner, is one of fact).

65. St. Louis v. Excelsior Brewing Co., 96 Mo. 677, 10 S. W. 477, holding that in a suit on a tax bill for an assessment for a local improvement, instructions given at the request of the city, based on the erroneous supposition that the jury can fix and assess the benefits, do not, as against the city, cure the error in an instruction to disregard the report of the commissioners, which is conclusive thereof.

66. City St. Imp. Co. v. Babcock, (Cal. 1902) 68 Pac. 584, holding that it was sufficient where in an action on a street assessment the court found that the board of supervisors did not duly pass a resolution ordering the work to be done, instead of finding the facts from which it might appear that the resolution was not duly passed. See also Dugger v. Hicks, 11 Ind. App. 374, 36 N. E. 1085, holding findings in respect to notice sufficient.

(XI) JUDGMENT—(A) In General.⁶⁷ The judgment in proceedings to enforce a special assessment must conform to the pleadings,⁶⁸ proof,⁶⁹ and findings,⁷⁰ and must be entered only against persons properly made parties.⁷¹ Where the city cannot be made liable for an improvement unless the property-owners are not liable,⁷² a judgment cannot be rendered against the city in advance of a judgment against the lot owner; ⁷³ but on a finding that the property is not liable judgment may be rendered against the city in a proper state of the pleadings.⁷⁴ A judgment for the sale of land must describe the property.⁷⁵ And where separate assessments are enforced against several lots the judgment should state the amount with which each is chargeable.⁷⁶ Under some statutes the court may in proceedings to enforce a lien correct any mistake of the council so as to do complete justice to all.⁷⁷ A ings, any fact or facts going to show that no valid assessment was ever levied are within the issues, and properly included in the findings. Doane v. Barber, (Cal. 1885) 9 Pac. 89.

67. Personal judgment see infra, XIII, F, 8.

68. See Dorland v. Bergson, 78 Cal. 637, 21 Pac. 537 (holding that the amount due for curbing cannot be segregated from the total amount assessed in gross against a lot for street improvements, so as to recover for that item alone); Mayo v. Ah Loy, 32 Cal. 477, 91 Am. Dec. 595 (holding that where, in an action to recover taxes assessed for improvement of I street, the complaint alleged that the tax was levied for the improvement of J street, and service of process was obtained, and judgment rendered as required by law, such judgment was not void, but, if erroneous, was only liable to be reversed on appeal); Daly v. Gubbins, 35 Ind. App. 86, 73 N. E. 833 (holding that a judgment for the collection of a municipal assessment cannot be sustained where two paragraphs of the complaint are fatally defective, and the record does not affirmatively show that the judgment rests solely on the third paragraph).

69. Heman Constr. Co. v. Loevy, 179 Mo. 455, 78 S. W. 613; Yost v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 24 Ohio Cir. Ct. 169. See also Harrisburg v. Mish, 14 Pa. Super. Ct. 496, holding that when a judgment rendered on a special assessment is invalid because the contract has not been certified, as required by the act of May 23, 1899, the defect is not cured by the contract being certified after verdict.

70. Seattle v. Whitworth, 18 Wash. 126, 51 Pac. 345, holding that a finding of fact that the cost of a municipal improvement, an assessment lien for which was sought to be foreclosed, was greater than necessary, owing to errors of the city engineer, but that the amount of the excess over the necessary cost thereof was not determinable, and that plaintiff was not entitled to recover any penalties, interest, or costs, would be construed in support of the decree for the amount of the assessment only, as a statement that the amount of the increased expense due to the errors could not be determined exactly, but was fairly equal to the amount of penalty, interest, and costs.

W. 310, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 1237, 5 L. R. A. N. S. 289 (holding that where a city contracts for the improvement of a thoroughfare between high and low water mark on a navigable river, providing that the owners of the abutting property shall be liable for the cost, and the contract for the liability of the adjoining owners is invalid because the right in the land forming the bank of the river between high and low water mark is in the public, the court can enter judgment against the city for the contract price of the improvement); Specht v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., 80 S. W. 1106, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 193; Louisville v. Clark, 49 S. W. 18, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1265 (holding that where the contract price embraced the cost of repairs for five years the chancellor should have corrected the apportionment warrants, by deducting the amount intended to cover such repairs, and rendered a judgment against the lot owners for the actual cost of construction). Compare Barfield v. Gleason, 111 Ky. 491, 63 S. W. 964, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 128, 64 S. W. 959, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1102 (holding that, although the change in the grade was unnecessary, and might have been prevented by injunction, and although the excavations necessary to conform to the grade might have been prevented until compensation had been provided for the injury to be occasioned thereby, yet, as neither of these things was done, defendants in an action by the contractor to enforce his lien cannot have the cost of the excavation, which has been included in the assessment, apportioned among them, and recover against the city the clerical error in the record of a judgment which does not render it misleading is not fatal.⁷⁸

(B) Conclusiveness and Effect. Judgments enforcing assessments are open to collateral attack only on the grounds which may be urged against judgments in general.⁷⁹ The judgment is conclusive as to all defenses which might have been urged in opposition thereto.⁸⁰ The judgment is not binding upon the interests of persons not made parties.⁸¹ An election to foreclose a lien upon property abutting on the improvement will, it seems, not estop the holder from a subsequent foreclosure for a balance unpaid upon back lying property.⁸²

(C) Lien and Satisfaction. The lien of the judgment has been held limited by a provision applicable to judgments generally.⁸³ An assignment of a judgment to the holder of a void tax deed upon the premises does not amount to a satisfaction in the absence of evidence showing such intention.⁸⁴

(D) Setting Aside. Where an assessment warrant has been issued by mistake against the wrong person the real party in interest may have a judgment thereon set aside.⁸⁵ The burden is on the person seeking to set aside the judgment to establish his right to equitable relief.⁸⁶ A judgment for want of an affidavit of defense may be stricken off when leave is granted to strangers to intervene and amounts apportioned, the remedy being an action at law to recover the damages which have actually accrued from the change of grade); Walsh v. Sims, 65 Ohio St. 211, 62 N. E. 120; Jaeger v. Burr, 36 Ohio St. 164; Ridenour v. Saffin, 1 Handy (Ohio) 464, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 238.

In the absence of statute.—Where property is assessed for a street improvement which should not have been placed on the assessment roll, the court has no power, in a proceeding to enforce the collection of the assessments, to disregard it and let the assessment for the amount justly chargeable stand, as that would be equivalent to making a new roll and a new assessment, which is clearly beyond the province of the court. Spokane Falls v. Browne, 3 Wash. 84, 27 Pac. 1077. Although Laws (1889-1890), c. 7, § 124, as amended by Laws (1893), p. 159, permits recovery of street assessments notwithstanding irregularities and defects in the assessment proceedings, it has no application to cases where there has been no assessment. Vancouver v. Wintler, 8 Wash. 378, 36 Pac. 278, 685. Compare St. Joseph v. Dillon, 61 Mo. App. 317 (holding that if the proceedings leading up to the issue of tax bills are valid, it is proper to deduct that portion for which no legal claim can be made, and enforce the balance); Creamer v. McCune, 7 Mo. App. 91 (holding that in an action on a special tax bill, where there has been an overassessment from a failure to include certain property in the apportionment, the court may apply the proper correction in a reduction of the amount to be recovered).

78. Diggins v. Hartshorne, 108 Cal. 154, 41 Pac. 283 (holding that the judgment must be limited to the description of the lot as found in the assessment); Bird v. McClelland, etc., Brick Mfg. Co., 45 Fed. 458 (holding that where four separate suits on four separate tax bills under the same grading contract were simultaneously brought against defendant, a clerical error by the clerk of the court in transposing the court numbers in two of the cases on entering judgment, so that they do not correspond with the numbers given in the orders, and proofs of publication, does not invalidate the judgment).

85. Voris v. Gallaher, 87 S. W. 775, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 1001, holding that where a city apportionment warrant was issued by mistake against the grantor of the record owner, and an action was brought thereon, the court had jurisdiction, at the instance of such owner, to set aside a judgment thereon against his grantor.

86. Philadelphia v. Unknown Owner, 149 Pa. St. 22, 24 Atl. 65 (holding that the granting of a rule to open a judgment, made by the actual owner of the premises more than ten years after the judgment was obdefend.⁸⁷ Where no notice has been served on the terre-tenant he may intervene and show a discharge of the lien on a rule to open the judgment.⁸⁸

Ct. 298 (holding that if the right is not clearly established, the chancellor, in the exercise of his equitable discretion, may refuse the application). See Philadelphia v. Adams, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 483, holding that where a municipal claim has been filed in Philadelphia, and judgment obtained thereon and revived, the action of the court of common pleas in refusing to strike off the judgment, because it is alleged that there was a registered owner not served, will not be reversed on appeal.

Rep. 1743 (holding that the failure to give time to redeem from a sale of property to satisfy a lien for street improvements renders the judgment erroneous, and not void, and therefore an appeal lies therefrom); Plaquemines Police Jury v. Mitchell, 37 La. Ann. 44; Skrainka v. Allen, 2 Mo. App. 387; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Bellaire, 60 Ohio St. 301, 54 N. E. 263; Corry v. Gaynor, 21 Ohio St. 277; *Toledo v. Costs.—A city of the first class is not liable for briefs, abstracts, printing, etc., used in prosecuting an appeal to the supreme court, in an action brought by contractors in the city's name against abutting property holders to enforce a claim for grading the streets of such city. *Harkness v. See Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Ridge, 169 Mo. 376, 68 S. W. 1043, holding a constitutional question properly urged on motion for new trial. But see Bonte v. Taylor, 24 Ohio St. 628, holding that a judgment to enforce the lien of an assessment for a street improvement, rendered on a petition which shows on its face that the statutory period for the continuance of such lien had expired before the commencement of the suit, should be reversed; and the error is not waived by a failure to demur or answer.

Waiver of objections.—In an action to foreclose a street assessment lien, where no issue was made as to the validity of the contract, and defendant treated it as valid, and introduced it in evidence, he could not thereafter claim that it and the assessment were invalid. Ede v. Knight, 93 Cal. 159, 28 Pac. 860.

E. 10; Snyder v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., 73 S. W. 1118, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 2348 (holding that where defendants failed to prove that if the assessment had been on a different basis the assessment against their property would have been smaller than the assessment levied, judgment in favor of plaintiff would not be reversed, although it was doubtful whether the theory of the assessment was correct); Button v. Gast, 73 S. W. 1014, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 2284; Breath v. Galveston, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 46 S. W. 903.

Where city does not appeal.—Where, in an action by a contractor to enforce a lien for costs of a street improvement, a large part of the cost being for transforming the street into a subway under a railroad bridge, the court erred by adjudging the portion of the cost of the subway a charge against the abutting property-owners, charging ninety per cent of the entire cost against them, the fact that the court also erred in charging the remaining ten per cent against the city as for repairs, of which it did not complain, is no reason for not reversing the judgment against the property-owners, it appearing that the apportionment against them would have been

(XIII) COSTS AND ATTORNEY'S FEES. Under some statutes an attorney's fee may be allowed in actions to enforce assessments,⁹⁴ under others a collection fee may be recovered.⁹⁵

h. Remedies Upon Assessment Bonds. Under some statutes bonds representing the amount of the assessment against the property benefited are issued to the contractor,⁹⁶ and provision is made for the sale of such property in the case of delinquency.⁹⁷ Under some statutes the contractor may enforce either the bonds or the assessment lien.⁹⁸

6. SALE OF LAND—a. In General. Proceedings for the sale of land for the payment of special assessments must be conducted in strict accordance with the statute.⁹⁹ The sale must be made by the officer designated by statute, if such a

97. See Ramish v. Hartwell, 126 Cal. 443, 58 Pac. 920, holding that the remedy under a statute providing that sale should be in the manner provided for the collection of delinquent taxes generally was not affected by a later statute changing the method of sale for taxes.

98. Shirk v. Hupp, 167 Ind. 509, 78 N. E. 242, 79 N. E. 490, holding that under Acts (1901), p. 537, c. 231, § 6, declaring that assessments for a street improvement shall be a lien, authorizing an action to foreclose the lien on the non-payment of the assessments, and providing for the issuance of improvement bonds which may be delivered to the contractor in payment for the work, etc., a contractor constructing a street improvement may sue on the bonds issued by the city in anticipation of the assessments or on the lien created by the assessments for benefits. See Jessen v. Pierce, 25 Ind. App. 222, 57 N. E. 941, holding that where defendants, who had undertaken to pay their assessments by instalments, had paid the instalments due to the county treasurer, the holders of unpaid coupons were not entitled to foreclose the lien of the assessments, but must resort to the special fund in the hands of the treasurer, set apart for the payment of the cost of the improvement.

Y.) 275, holding that a municipal corporation empowered by its charter to order lands directed to be sold for assessments to be sold for a term of years has no authority to direct the "undivided half" of a lot to be sold in that manner. But see Lexington v. Woolfolk, 117 Ky. 708, 78 S. W. 910, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1817.

Demand.—Before a sale of the premises, the assessment should be demanded twice of the actual owner, and without evidence of such demand the corporation should be held to have no jurisdiction to sell the property for the non-payment of the assessment. Paillet v. Youngs, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 50; Bennett v. New York, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 485.

Conformity with execution.—A levy and sale of an entire forty-seven-foot lot, where the city tax fieri facias, issued on a local assessment for paving, directed a levy on only twenty feet, was illegal. Brumby v. Harris, 107 Ga. 257, 33 S. E. 49.

Applicability of general statute for sale of realty.—A statute providing that no sale of indivisible property shall be made until all debts that are a lien thereon are due does not apply to a proceeding to sell property to satisfy one of several instalments of an assessment for street improvements. Campbell County v. Schneider, 106 Ky. 605, 51 S. W. 13, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 212.

Property subject to remainder.—A statutory lien for a street improvement being designation is made,¹ at the place designated,² and upon such notice as is prescribed.³ In the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary a sale may be made before the improvement is completed.⁴

b. Report or Return. A statutory provision requiring a return of the amount for which each lot assessed was sold is mandatory, and a failure to make such return will invalidate the sale.⁵

c. Certificate of Sale. The giving and recording of a certificate of sale are, under some statutes, essential to the validity of the sale.⁶ Unless the property be sufficiently described in the certificate of sale, as required by statute, the sale is void.⁷ But unless expressly so provided, the certificate need not be under seal.⁸

d. Confirmation or Setting Aside of Sale. Under a power to confirm or set aside a sale the court cannot modify the sale or its terms.⁹ A sale for an illegal charge will be set aside.¹⁰ An order of confirmation may be set aside, where it erroneously fails to allow for redemption.¹¹

e. Injunction Against Tax Deed or Lease. In a proper case the issuance of a tax deed may be restrained.¹² So the execution of a tax lease may be restrained, where it will be a cloud on title.¹³ But as a general rule an injunction will not be granted for mere irregularities.¹⁴ against the land itself, and not against the owners, if the land is subjected to sale thereunder, the lien-holder is entitled to have his lien enforced against the entire lot, irrespective of the various interests of life-tenants and remainder-men therein. *Duker v. E. 791 (holding that where a judgment for sale for delinquent assessment is appealed from and affirmed, and the time has passed for which the original notice of sale was given, without any sale, the county court cannot order sale without a new notice); London, etc., Mortg. Co. v. Gibson, 77 Minn. 394, 80 N. Smith*, 34 Wis. 381 (holding that in an action to restrain the issuance of a tax deed upon a tax certificate on the sale of plaintiff's lots for an improvement tax, it is no defense that the owner of the tax certificate was a stranger to the proceedings under which the improvement was made, and was ignorant of the defects in such proceedings at the time of his purchase); *Foote v. f. Actions to Set Aside Sales. By statute provision is sometimes made for the vacation of illegal assessment sales upon petition to the court¹⁵ or upon certiorari;¹⁶ and, in the absence of statute, relief against a void sale may be had in equity,¹⁷ in the absence of laches¹⁸ or other remedy.¹⁹ A provision for an appeal in the assessment proceedings is not, unless made so by statute, exclusive of a remedy by action to vacate a sale upon the assessment.²⁰ An action to set aside an assessment sale must be brought within the time prescribed by the statute,²¹ it being sometimes held to be governed by a limitation referring to general tax certificates;²² but it is not controlled by a limitation of proceedings to set aside assessments.²³ A sale will not be annulled for irregularity without payment of the sum due;²⁴ but such a condition is not imposed where the assessment is wholly void.²⁵ Where the deed is under a sale for an illegal and void tax, the tax purchaser will not be compelled to reconvey, but will be perpetually enjoined from asserting title.²⁶ The costs may be imposed on the holder of the tax deed, where he has owner whose lot had been sold for non-payment of the special assessment for such sidewalks was not on that account entitled, under Gen. St. p. 389, § 4, to have the sale set aside and a tax deed enjoined.

16. McCarthy v. Jersey City, 44 N. J. L. 136 (holding that a declaration of sale should be set aside when the assessment upon which it is founded is illegal, as when the commissioners did not make a written report as required by the city charter); State v. Perth Amboy, 38 N. J. L. 425 (holding that the act of April 2, 1869, providing that the proceedings upon which municipal declarations of sale are founded shall not be liable to be questioned collaterally, but may be at any time reviewed by certiorari, does not entitle a person whose land has been sold to take advantage by certiorari of objections to the preliminary proceedings, which previously he would have been estopped from setting up, as against the assessment).

19. Guest v. Brooklyn, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 198 [reversed on other grounds in 73 N. Y. 611], holding that the conveyance made on a sale for an assessment for a street improvement is only evidence of the regularity of the proceedings had before the sale, and not of the assessment and other proceedings had before the right to sue for the land attached; and hence equity will not interpose in behalf of the owner of the property to annul the sale for irregularities in the proceedings leading up to the assessment, which may be used to defeat a recovery under the conveyance.

Where lease is conclusive.—A lease executed by the corporation of New York to the purchaser on a sale of lands for assessments is conclusive evidence that the sale was regularly made, according to the provisions of the statute; and therefore a court of equity has jurisdiction to relieve the owner on the ground that the assessment was illegal, that no demand was made upon him, that no warrant was issued for the collection of the assessment, and that the recitals in the lease are untrue. Masterson v. Hoyt, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 520.

St. Rep. 926, 31 L. R. A. 213, holding that where, in a case of assessments for public improvements, the only relief authorized on an appeal from the assessment of benefits is that the difference between the benefits assessed and the benefits actually secured shall be paid by the city, a provision that the appeal shall be the only remedy of the owner of any parcel of land for the redress of any grievance he may have by reason of the making of such improvements does not prevent a property-owner from attacking a sale based on such assessment, on the ground that the assessment was unequal and void, as the appeal is no adequate remedy in such case.

made an unsuccessful defense,²⁷ especially where he refused to surrender his certificate of purchase before suit was brought.

g. Title and Rights of Purchaser—(1) IN GENERAL. Where provision for redemption is made by statute, the purchaser acquires merely a defeasible title, and the legal title does not pass until the period of redemption expires.²⁸ Upon the execution of a sheriff's deed the title of the grantee relates back to the time at which the property is struck off to him.²⁹ The title of the purchaser is not affected by the inadequacy of the price for which the sale was made.³⁰ Where a purchaser of premises in good faith relies on the controller's certificate, which the city charter empowered him to give, that the taxes and assessments have been paid, the city cannot bind such purchaser by new assessments for work prior to the certificate.³¹

(11) IRREGULAR AND INVALID SALES. Where the statute under which the sale is had has not been followed with regard to the steps necessary to a valid sale, the purchaser takes no title as against the owner.³² But on the other hand the title of a purchaser at a sale under a judgment enforcing an assessment will not be affected by irregularities not invalidating the judgment.³³ Where the proper parties have not been brought into the proceedings their title will not be divested,³⁴ although under some statutes any irregularity or error in regard to the name of the owner is cured by sale.³⁵ One in whose favor a charge for ground-rent exists may by neglect be estopped to assert such claim against a purchaser on a claim filed against the occupant.³⁶ A void sale in proceedings to enforce an assessment is not a bar to a second proceeding to recover the assessment.³⁷

Pennsylvania.—Ferguson v. Quinn, 123 Pa. St. 337, 16 Atl. 844; Simons v. Kern, 92 Pa. St. 455, holding that where an examination of the records would have informed a purchaser that a lot sold had a registered owner, and the record of the proceeding admonished him that there was no such service of the writ as the law required, and without which the sale was expressly forbidden, he took nothing by his purchase.

Perry*, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 204, 35 S. W. 838 (holding that the fact that the purchaser at a sale under a judgment in an action on a street-improvement certificate, the citation in which case misstated the corporate name of the city, knew of the irregularity of the citation after the sale, but before he paid the purchase-money, did not affect the validity of the sale or of the deed to him).

(iii) EFFECT UPON OTHER LIENS AND ENCUMBRANCES. Where an assessment for improvements is a prior lien upon the property charged³⁸ a sale for the enforcement thereof passes title free from all encumbrances.³⁹ Sale on execution against the record owner passes title as against the grantee of an unrecorded deed of which the purchaser has no notice.⁴⁰ Under a tax lease the lessee of the city takes a perfect title for the term contained in the lease discharged of all claims of the owner during the term.⁴¹

(iv) REFUNDING OR RECOVERY OF MONEY PAID BY PURCHASER AT ILLEGAL SALE. In the absence of statutory provision to the contrary,⁴² the doctrine of caveat emptor applies to sales upon assessments,⁴³ and the purchaser at an illegal sale cannot recover the money paid by him for the land either from the city⁴⁴ or

Under power to correct errors.—A statute giving the council of metropolitan cities the power to correct an error in the assessment or listing of property for the purposes of taxation does not include the power to refund money received by the treasurer from the purchaser at a sale under an illegal assessment. McCague v. Omaha, 58 Nebr. 37, 78 N. W. 463.

Applicability of provision with reference to general taxes.—A statute providing that all general statutes shall apply to cities when not inconsistent with their charters does not render another statute providing that money paid on a void sale for general taxes shall be returned applicable to sales under special assessments. Heller v. Milwaukee, 96 Wis. 134, 70 N. W. 1111. Comp. St. (1889) c. 12a, § 94, giving the mayor and council of metropolitan cities the power to compromise or settle any action or litigation concerning the validity, legality, or regularity of any tax levied for city purposes, has no application to suits by a purchaser at a tax-sale under an illegal assessment to recover the amount paid to the city. McCague v. Omaha, 58 Nebr. 37, 78 N. W. 463.

Statutes relating to recovery of illegal assessments by the person paying them have no application to a purchaser at a tax-sale under an illegal assessment. McCague v. Omaha, 58 Nebr. 37, 78 N. W. 463.

Power to make retroactive provision.—Under power given a city by its charter to regulate the assessment and collection of taxes, it may legally enact by ordinance that, where certificates of purchase are issued on sales of property for municipal taxes which are illegal, the amount paid shall be refunded, with interest; but such power does not extend to cases of sales made prior to the passage of such ordinance, in which the purchasers bought at their own risk as to legality, and a provision authorizing the refunding of money paid on such sales is void. Phelps v. Tacoma, 15 Wash. 367, 46 Pac. 400.

Interest.—Under Laws (1884), c. 388, authorizing the controller of the city of Brooklyn to make a repayment on certificates of sales of real property for unpaid taxes which had been declared void, together with the amounts paid for taxes and assessments, he could not pay interest thereon. *Macfarlane v. from the owner.⁴⁵ Recovery from the city was permitted, however, where there was a mere declaration of sale but no formal conveyance.⁴⁶ Where a sale made upon an assessment bond is held invalid the holder of the certificate of sale becomes the equitable owner of the bond entitled to insist on full payment in the absence of any facts rendering it inequitable.⁴⁷

h. Purchase by Municipality. Under the provision of some statutes the city may purchase the property at an assessment sale where there is no sufficient bid.⁴⁸ In case the city becomes the purchaser under such a provision it does not thereby become liable to pay the assessment.⁴⁹ Where the city bids in the property and assigns the certificates it is not bound to preserve the lien as against a subsequent tax lien.⁵⁰

i. Redemption. The right to redeem from an assessment sale depends upon statute,⁵¹ but is usually conferred.⁵² Redemption must be in the manner⁵³ and

By express agreement.—Where it was published as conditions of the sale that, should any mistake or irregularities in the proceedings for the assessments, collections, or sales, on the part of the corporation be discovered so as to prevent the sale from being effectual, the sale was to be void, and the purchase-money, with interest, was to be returned, and after the execution of a lease to the purchaser on the owner's omission to redeem, a defect in the collection and another in the notice for redemption were discovered, it was held that the condition constituted a valid agreement between the corporation and the purchaser, and that it was operative after the completion of the purchase by the execution of the lease to him. *Bennett v. Tender.—Where one seeks to redeem land for a certain sum from a sale under an order in an action by a city, he should tender the amount in order to reserve the right. Metz v. Dayton, 91 S. W. 745, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 1053. The owner of property sold for municipal claims may tender the redemption money to the purchaser at the sale. Hess v. Potts, 32 Pa. St. 407.

Persons entitled to redemption money.—Under the act of Jan. 23, 1849, giving the owner of property sold for municipal claims the right of redemption within one year, the right to the redemption money does not pass within the time⁵⁴ prescribed by the statute, although in some cases in order to prevent injustice redemption has been allowed after expiration of the statutory period.⁵⁵ The equity of redemption may be transferred and a grantee may redeem,⁵⁶ and the right of redemption extends to a mortgagee.⁵⁷

to the vendee of the purchaser by a deed for the premises. Hess v. Potts, 32 Pa. St. 407.

Redemption in improvement certificates.—Under a statute which authorized the issue of certain certificates in payment for local improvements, and provided that such certificates should be "receivable at all times in payment of any assessment" levied to pay for them, redemption from a sale made to enforce such assessment may be made in such certificates, since a tax-sale does not constitute payment of the tax, but is merely an assignment of the tax lien to the purchaser. People v. Bleckwenn, 126 N. Y. 654, 27 N. E. 378; People v. Bleckwenn, 126 N. Y. 310, 27 N. E. 376 [affirming 13 N. Y. Suppl. 487]; Nelson v. Bleckwenn, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 993 [affirmed in 137 N. Accounting for rents and profits.—Where an assessment lien is foreclosed on mortgaged property without making the mortgagee a party thereto, the purchaser thereunder, who occupied a portion of the premises, need account in an action to redeem by the mortgagee only for the amount of the rents and profits received by him, and a fair rental value of that portion occupied by him, although by the exercise of greater diligence the profits and rents received might have been greater. *Krutz v. Persons not made parties.—Sess. Acts (1871), p. 194, § 9, providing that the owner of lands sold on foreclosure of a special tax bill, who was not summoned, but notified by publication, and failed to appear, may redeem "within two years after the day of sale," does not bar an action brought after the lapse of this period to redeem from such a sale, where plaintiffs and those under whom they claim were not made parties, and did not appear. *McKee v. The purchaser of property at a foreclosure sale for street assessments in which a mortgagee was not joined as a party has a lien analogous to that of a senior mortgagee, from which such mortgagee can redeem as a junior mortgagee. Krutz v. Gardner, 25 Wash. 396, 65 Pac. 771.

Payment under agreement with corporation counsel.—Where the owners of city lots which had been sold for the non-payment of void assessments redeemed the same by paying the amount for which the lots were sold, they could not recover, although such payments were made on the promise of the counsel of the corporation that the payer's rights should be reserved, and the street commissioners assented thereto. Such officers had no authority to bind the corporation in such matter. Fleetwood v. New York, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 475.

Where a lot has been sold on foreclosure of an assessment lien for street improvements, and the owner redeems the property to avoid losing title pending a suit by him to have such judgment declared void, the payment of the money necessary to redeem is not voluntary, and he may recover it back on the judgment being adjudged void. *Keehn v. 1. Conveyance to Purchaser—(i) EXECUTION. The conveyance to the purchaser must be executed by the officer⁶¹ and in the form⁶² designated by statute. A notice to the person in whose name the land is assessed that a deed will be demanded is not necessary in the absence of statute.⁶³

(ii) OPERATION AND EFFECT. In the absence of statute a conveyance to the purchaser upon a sale to enforce a special assessment is not prima facie evidence of the regularity of the proceedings or sale.⁶⁴ By statute, however, it is freeight cents, did not render the notice void. Mankato First Nat. Bank v. Hodapp, 98 Minn. 534, 107 N. W. 957; Willard v. Hodapp, 98 Minn. 269, 107 N. W. 954.

Second notice.—Under the St. Paul city charter, providing that lands sold for special assessments may be redeemed at any time within five years after the sale, and that a three months' notice of the expiration of redemption shall be published six weeks where the notice attempted to be given was void, a new notice might be given after the expiration of the five years. Merchants' Realty Co. v. St. Paul, 77 Minn. 343, 79 N. W. 1040 (holding that the fact that the assignee from the city of a tax certificate received a deed, void because of insufficiency of the notice to the owner of expiration of redemption, retained it, and made no demand for a valid deed, and no objection to the void deed, until it commenced an action to recover back from the city the amount paid for the certificate, should be considered in determining what, under all the circumstances, is a reasonable time for the city to give a new notice of expiration of redemption, after the statutory five years, and to issue a new deed); Flanagan v. St. Paul, 65 Minn. 347, 68 N. W. 47.

Evidence of notice.—The certificate of the street commissioner that an affidavit of the service of the redemption notice required to be served on the occupant or person last assessed as owner has been filed with him, and that he is satisfied that such notice has been served, although it may be sufficient to afford prima facie evidence that such affidavit was filed with him, and that the money remained unpaid, furnishes no evidence that the act had been performed, which was necessary to give effect to the lease executed by the controller pursuant to a sale of realty for taxes. Sanders v. Leavey, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 70.

61. Street v. Hughes, 20 Iowa 131 (holding that a statute providing that, in all cases of a sale of land by virtue of the ordinances of any municipal corporation, the purchaser shall receive a deed which shall have the same effect as the county treasurer's deed under sale made by him, does not require that any special officer shall execute the deed, but it is left to the provisions of the several charters of municipal corporations); Wright v. Leonard, 4 Gray (Mass.) 150; People v. Taylor, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 143 (holding that where the collector of assessments for the Brooklyn park commissioners has sold lands pursuant to Laws (1873), c. 789, providing that "upon a sale being made the said collector shall give certificates of sale to purchasers, and shall execute and deliver conveyances of the land so purchased, unless the same shall have been redeemed," and has issued certificates of sale to a purchaser, he must execute and deliver the conveyances thereof on the expiration of the redemption period, although he may have resigned before that time and another person been appointed).

62. Felker v. New Whatcom, 16 Wash. 178, 47 Pac. 505, holding that under Laws (1883), p. 153, § 13 (Charter of Whatcom), providing that proceedings for the assessment and sale of property for street improvements should be governed by the provisions of the code concerning the sale of real estate for delinquent taxes, a deed to property sold by the city for non-payment of such an assessment was properly made in the name of the territory.

Necessity of seal.—Although a statutory form of a deed conveying land for the non-payment of special assessments concludes: "In testimony whereof the city treasurer . . . has hereunto set his hand and seal," etc., and a statute provides that the deed shall be executed under the "hand" of the city treasurer, attested by the city auditor under the seal of the city, the omission of the seal to the signature of the city treasurer constitutes no defect in the deed. Kirby v. Waterman, 17 S. D. 314, 96 N. W. 129.

63. Kirby v. Waterman, 17 S. D. 314, 96 N. W. 129, holding that a statute requiring the holder of a tax certificate to give notice before obtaining a tax deed is not applicable to the sale of land for the non-payment of special assessments.

C.) 121 (holding that a statute providing that the deed shall be a perfect title to the property does not change the principle of law that a purchaser at a tax-sale must prove the regularity of the proceedings from the beginning to the time of the sale, and that all the requirements of the statute have been complied with); Stebbins v. Kay, 123 N. Y. 31, 25 N. E. 207 [reversing 51 Hun 589, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 566]; Hilton v. Bender, 69 N. Y. 75 (holding also that the rule applicable to sales by executors, guardians, and other officers, that the lapse of thirty years' time raises a conclusive presumption that all legal formalities of the sale were observed, does not apply to sales made in derogation of the common law, as a sale to enforce an assessment, the proceedings for which are required to be evidenced quently made presumptive evidence of such regularity,⁶⁵ or it may even be declared conclusive.⁶⁶ Since the land is sold as the property of another and not of the city, the city is not estopped by the deed, and its recitals from denying the regularity of the proceedings.⁶⁷

m. Recovery of Land Sold. In case property is wrongfully sold under an assessment an action will lie for its recovery.⁶⁸

n. Application of Proceeds. The proceeds of a sale to enforce a special assessment must be applied in the manner directed by the statute.⁶⁹ A statute providing that reassessment liens shall be enforced in the same manner as other assessments for improvements are collected, and that the proceeds of a resale shall be paid to the purchaser at the former sale, is invalid.⁷⁰

by records and public documents which are supposed to remain in the custody of the officers charged with their preservation. These must be proved, or their loss accounted for and supplied by secondary evidence. If they cannot be found or their loss accounted for, the presumption is, in the absence of evidence, that they never existed; Bays v. Trulson, 25 Oreg. 109, 35 Pac. 26.

Rebuttal of presumption.—In an action to quiet title under a tax deed, made pursuant to a sale for special city tax for a sidewalk, the presumption created by the tax deed, that the tax was duly levied, is rebutted by the fact that the legally appointed records of the city council, covering the period, and un mutilated, show a record of action by the council in reference to that sidewalk, but none of a levy of a tax. Hintrager v. Kiene, 62 Iowa 605, 15 N. W. 568, 17 N. W. 910. It is not necessary to show that the "minute book" of the city council contains no record of the levy; that book being a mere private memorandum, not provided by law. Hintrager v. Kiene, supra.

Y. 79)] (holding that the provision in the statute that the lease given upon a sale for taxes and assessments in the city of New York shall be conclusive evidence that the sale was regular refers only to the auction and notice of sale, and does not dispense with proof of the redemption notice); Striker v. Kelly, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 9 [affirmed in 2 Den. 323 (holding that lease, although conclusive evidence of the regularity of the sale, is not proof of authority to sell)].

been condemned for a street, and damages awarded the owner in excess of benefits to abutting property, and a part of the latter property was illegally sold for a benefit assessment, and warrants drawn in favor of the owner on the fund created by this sale and other assessments for the amount of her damages, the owner could accept her award out of the fund created, without impairing her remedy for the recovery of the property wrongfully sold.

Limitations.—An act providing that suit for recovery of land sold for taxes shall be commenced within a specified time after filing of tax deed has been held not applicable to sales for delinquent assessment. Meier v. Kelly, 20 Oreg. 86, 25 Pac. 73.

The complaint must show that defendants have been deprived of their property wrongfully. Metz v. Dayton, 91 S. W. 745, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 1053, holding that in an action against a city to recover land sold to the city under an order in a previous action by the city, a statement in the petition that, under the statute, the city had no authority to charge more than a certain amount for improvements such as those referred to in the previous case, was insufficient to show the nature of the claim adjudged in the previous case, so as to enable the court to determine whether the court erred in ordering the sale.

Rep. 2368 (holding that in a proceeding for the sale of a lot for non-payment of an assessment, where a part of the lot was not within the area subjected by ordinance to the burden of the improvement, while the whole lot was properly ordered sold, it was error to adjudge that the proceeds of sale should be divided according to the proportion of the superficial area of the part of the lot in lien to that not in lien, instead of according to the proportionate values of the parts of the lot). In General. Unless expressly authorized by charter or statute, the collection of an assessment cannot be enforced against personal property.⁷¹ But under some statutes it has been held that personal property may be resected to⁷² in case the procedure prescribed by such statute is strictly followed.⁷³

b. Railroad Companies.⁷⁴ When the property assessed is that of a railroad company and essential to the operation of the road, it will not be ordered sold to satisfy the lien, but the court will award a personal judgment to be collected as an ordinary judgment at law.⁷⁵

8. PERSONAL LIABILITY AND ENFORCEMENT THEREOF — a. In General. The levy of an assessment to pay the cost of public improvements imposes no personal liability upon the owner of land assessed,⁷⁶ unless such liability is created by express statutory provision,⁷⁷ and there are cases holding that the legislature is without power purchaser paid at the first sale, or for more than the amount of the reassessment, the purchaser would receive the entire proceeds of the resale, thus causing the owner of the property to pay him not only the amount of the original purchase but the excess of the second bid over such original price or reassessment, and in effect would be to sell the owner's property and give the proceeds to the former purchaser to whom neither the city nor owner owed any legal obligation to pay anything.

to make a special assessment a personal liability.⁷⁸ It follows that where no personal liability is imposed a personal judgment cannot be entered,⁷⁹ although of course such a judgment is proper where personal liability exists.⁸⁰ Where the only statutory remedy provided is a proceeding in rem an assessment cannot be recovered by a personal action,⁸¹ such as assumpsit⁸² or debt.⁸³ In case the legislature is regarded as having power to create a personal liability it may authorize the city to maintain a personal action,⁸⁴ and under such authority the city may bring Bank, 14 Ohio 605; Cincinnati v. Gwynne, 10 Ohio 192, both holding that an ordinance of Cincinnati, requiring the mayor to enforce the collection of a special tax by suit in the nature of an action of debt, is not violative of the city charter, conferring on the council the power to impose penalties on all persons offending against the ordinances of the city, and conferring on the mayor original jurisdiction of all cases for the violation of ordinances, on the ground that the mayor as a judicial officer has no jurisdiction except in cases of a criminal nature.

assumpsit.⁸⁵ Where the city is given a right of action to enforce the personal liability of the owner in addition to any other remedies provided by law for the enforcement of assessments, such right is not lost by the fact that another remedy is also resorted to;⁸⁶ but otherwise it would seem that a resort to a remedy against the land will extinguish the personal liability.⁸⁷ Where an assessment may be levied against property and the owner thereof personally, failure of the council to direct commissioners to assess the owners will not defeat personal liability for the assessment.⁸⁸ A property-owner who agrees with one having a contract with the city for the improvement of a street to pay his share of the cost of such improvement will be held personally liable to the contractor.⁸⁹

b. Persons Liable.⁹⁰ As a general rule personal liability is imposed only upon the owner of the premises,⁹¹ but where the liability has attached it is not divested by a transfer of the property.⁹²

c. Enforcement. The court may in its discretion refuse to enter a personal judgment at the time of rendition of a decree foreclosing an assessment lien but may wait until after execution thereof.⁹³ Direct proceedings to enforce personal liability for assessments must conform to the statutes under which they are brought.⁹⁴ In order that a personal judgment may be recovered the facts show-

Conditions precedent.—An action of assumpsit cannot be maintained by a city to recover a paving assessment for which no specification of claim has been previously filed and entered as provided by Pa. Act, May 23, 1889, art. 15, § 21 (Pamphl. Laws 277); Scranton City v. Robertson, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 55.

Who may sue.—Where power is given to certain officers of a town to construct certain

ing a personal liability for the debt secured by the lien must be alleged,⁹⁵ and the petition must show a compliance with conditions precedent to suit.⁹⁶ Defendant has the burden of proving the assessment wrongful.⁹⁷

9. WRONGFUL ENFORCEMENT. An action is maintainable against a city for wrongful seizure and sale of property to pay an illegal assessment.⁹⁸ And it has been held that the mayor of the city was liable in trespass for property taken under a warrant signed by him at the direction of council for the collection of an illegal assessment.⁹⁹

XIV. TORTS.*

A. Nature and Extent of Liability — 1. IN GENERAL. A municipality, being not only a public agency, but also a quasi-private individual, is therefore subject to the law;¹ for its wrong to the public it may be prosecuted,² and for its torts against individuals it may be sued in a civil action for damages like a private corporation.³

works and recover the expenses thereof from individuals in an action of debt, such action should be brought in the name of the town. Palmyra v. Morton, 25 Mo. 593.

Evidence.—In an action of assumpsit to recover a paving tax, proof that bills for paving, corresponding in amount with a sum found upon an inquisition to have been due, were shown to defendant, and that he promised to pay them, deducting about twenty-five dollars, is sufficiently definite to enable the jury to ascertain the amount due and to support a verdict for plaintiff. Clemens v. Baltimore, 16 Md. 208.

Judgment.—A judgment in an action for a local assessment payable in instalments properly included the instalments not due, where it provided that no execution should issue for the future instalments until due. Rochester v. Rochester, R. Co., 109 N. Y. App. Div. 638, 96 N. Y. Suppl. 152. Where a jury, in a statutory proceeding to ascertain the advantages or disadvantages to an individual that might result from a public improvement in a city, found that it would be a benefit of a certain value to a lot belonging to heirs and in which a widow had a dower interest, a joint judgment for that value against the widow and heirs, whose interests were different, could not be sustained. Sutton v. Louisville, 5 Dana (Ky.) 28. Where an owner of lands in a city of the third class sold the same, and the city, in an action in assumpsit, subsequently recovered a judgment against such owner for paving a street in front of the lands, such judgment, not being a lien against the lands, could not be revived against the grantee, the terre-tenant. Chester v. Scott, 8 Del. Co. (Pa.) 153.

Appeal.—Since under Ohio Rev. St. § 2285, an action for personal judgment for a street assessment, involving only an issue as to the validity of the assessment, is not appealable, such an action is not rendered appealable by making a mortgagee a party, in order to marshal liens, if the mortgagee claims merely a priority and the owners do not deny the mortgage. Toledo v. Barnes, 8 Ohio Cir. Ct. 684, 4 Ohio Cir. Dec. 195.

95. Corry v. Gaynor, 21 Ohio St. 277.

96. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Shipley, 72 Md. 88, 19 Atl. 1, notice.

Sufficiency.—A complaint in an action to recover a sewer assessment, alleging defendant's ownership of the property at the time of and since the assessment, and pleading the material acts of the board in relation to the assessment, and making an exhibit of that part of the assessment in question, is sufficient, without attaching copies of the various resolutions, orders, and ordinances adopted by the council in the proceedings pertaining to the improvement. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Daegling, 30 Ind. App. 180, 65 N. E. 761.

2. EXERCISE OF GOVERNMENTAL AND CORPORATE FUNCTIONS — a. Rules as to Liability and Non-Liability — (1) IN GENERAL. It has been held that a municipal corporation, being a governmental agency, is not liable to an action for damages sustained by the tort of any of its officers or agents, unless it is made so by its charter or some statute to that effect.⁴ But generally a municipal corporation has a dual character, the one public and the other private, and exercises correspondingly twofold functions and duties.⁵ The one class of its powers is of a public and general character, to be exercised in virtue of certain attributes of sovereignty delegated to it for the welfare and protection of its inhabitants or the general public; the other relates only to special or private corporate purposes, for the accomplishment of which it acts, not through its public officers as such, but through agents or servants employed by it. In the former case its functions are political and governmental, and no liability attaches to it at common law, either for non-user or misuser of the power or for the acts or omissions on the part of its officers or the agents through whom such governmental functions are performed,⁶ or the

C. 213, as to the maintenance of a free ferry under general powers contained in the charter, upon the theory that the state might have done it and therefore the city as an arm of the state may do the same thing.

5. Municipal corporation distinguished from mere political subdivisions.—Where the word "municipal" is applied to all subdivisions of the state, expressions as to municipal corporations which refer to mere political subdivisions of the state are inapplicable to cities and towns which are corporate bodies with many of the general powers of private corporations. Vaughtman v. Waterloo, 14 Ind. App. 649, 43 N. E. 476.

No. 6,149, 13 Blatchf. 289, where the general distinction between public or governmental and corporate or private duties is stated: Public duties are, in general, those which are exercised by the state as a part of its sovereignty, for the benefit of the whole public, and the discharge of which is delegated or imposed by the state upon the municipal corporation. They are not exercised either by the state or the corporation for its own emolument or benefit, but for the benefit and protection of the entire population. Private or corporate powers are those which the city is authorized to execute for its own emolument, or from which it derives special advantage, or for the increased comfort of its citizens, or for the well ordering and convenient regulation of particular classes of the business of its inhabitants, but are not exercised in the discharge of those general and recognized duties which are undertaken by the government for the universal benefit.

privileges for its own benefit.¹² This rule is also stated so that to carry immunity the absolute duty imposed is that of performing some act which the state may lawfully perform and which pertains to the administration of government,¹³ or the line is drawn between acts done in a public capacity in the discharge of duties absolutely imposed for the public benefit and other acts of a private nature, as in the management of property or rights voluntarily held for immediate profit or advantage.¹⁴ On the other hand, whether the duty is imperatively imposed or voluntarily assumed,¹⁵ immunity from liability is made to depend upon the condition that the acts or duties are public, as distinguished from such acts as inure to the special profit or advantage of the corporation rather than the general good;¹⁶ or are legislative or discretionary, as distinguished from ministerial.¹⁷ In other cases, and this seems to be the rule established by the weight of authority, as will be seen by reference to the cases relating to streets,¹⁸ sewers, and drains,¹⁹ a municipality, when charged in its corporate character with the performance of a municipal function in regard to governmental affairs is civilly liable for injuries resulting from misfeasance or nonfeasance with respect to such municipal duty,²⁰ the duty being absolute or imperative and not merely such as under a grant of authority is intrusted to the judgment and discretion of the municipal authorities;²¹

Permissive authority creating duty.—When a power is given to do an act which concerns the public interest, the execution of the power when applied to a public officer or body may be insisted upon as a duty, although the phraseology of the statute is permissive only, especially when there is or, the duty being ministerial as distinguished from the legislative and discretionary functions of the governing officers, the municipality may become liable for damages resulting from neglect to perform it or from its performance in an improper manner;²² and this, although the circumstances are such that an implied nothing in the act save the permissive form of expression to denote that the legislature designed to lodge a discretionary power merely. New York v. Furze, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 612; McDade v. Chester, 117 Pa. St. 414, 12 Atl. 421, 2 Am. St. Rep. 681; Carr v. Northern Liberties, 35 Pa. St. 324, 78 Am. Dec. 342. And even though the exercise of a power under a permissive grant may be optional in the first instance, yet upon electing to act under it the corporation will be held to a complete and perfect execution. New York v. Furze, supra.

Acceptance of charter—grant charged with condition.—The foundation of the rule which makes a municipal corporation liable under the maxim respondet superior is stated as follows: "Whenever an individual or a corporation, for a consideration received from the sovereign power, has become bound by covenant or agreement, either express or implied, to do certain things, such individual or corporation is liable, in case of neglect to perform such covenant, not only to a public prosecution by indictment, but to a private action at the suit of any person injured by such neglect. In all such cases the contract made with the sovereign power is deemed to enure to the benefit of every individual interested in its performance." Missano v. New York, 160 N. Y. 123, 54 N. E. 744 [quoting Weet v. Brockport, 16 N. Y. 161 note]. And here a distinction is to be noted between the liability of a municipal corporation, made such by acceptance of a village or city charter, and the involuntary quasi-corporations known as counties, towns, school-districts, and especially the townships of New England. The liability of the former is greater than that of the latter, even when invested with corporate capacity and the power of taxation. Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 540, 23 L. ed. 440, where it is said that the latter are auxiliaries of the state merely, and, when corporations, are of the very lowest grade, and invested with the smallest amount of power, and that accordingly, in Conrad v. Ithaca, 16 N. Y. 158, the village was held to be liable for the negligence of their trustees; while in Weet v. Brockport, supra, the town was said not to be liable for the same acts by their commissioners of highways. To the same effect see Kinnare v. Chicago, 171 Ill. 332, 49 N. E. 536; Chicago v. Seben, 165 Ill. 371, 46 N. E. 244, 56 Am. St. Rep. 245; Cooney v. Hartland, 95 Ill. 516; Waltham v. Kemper, 55 Ill. 346, 8 Am. Rep. 652; Browning v. Springfield, 17 Ill. 143, 63 Am. Dec. 345; Backer v. West Chicago Park Com'rs, 66 Ill. App. 507; Logansport v. Dick, 70 Ind. 65, 36 Am. Rep. 166; Vaughtman v. Waterloo, 14 Ind. App. 649, 43 N. E. 476; Bell v. West Point, 51 Miss. 262; Eastman v. Meredith, 36 N. H. 284, 72 Am. Dec. 302 (where the non-liability of a town for failure to perform a public duty is declared, and Lyme Regis v. Henley, 3 B. & Ad. 77, 23 E. C. L. 43, 5 Bing. 91, 15 E. C. L. 486, 6 L. J. C. P. O. S. 222, 3 M. & P. 278, 30 Rev. Rep. 542 [affirmed in 1 Bing. N. Cas. 222, 27 E. C. L. 614, 8 Blich N. S. 690, 5 Eng. Reprint 1097, 2 Cl. & F. 331, 6 Eng. Reprint 1180, 1 Scott 29], which declares the liability of a borough upon the principle that the duty was imposed as a condition of the grant of corporate franchises, etc., is distinguished); Galveston v. Posnainsky, 62 Tex. 118, 50 Am. Rep. 517; Noble v. Richmond, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 271, 31 Am. Rep. 726; Wilson v. Wheeling, 19 W. Va. 323, 42 Am. Rep. 780. Where, however, the duties are regarded as of a public nature, the rule is confined to cases in which the city is merely authorized by way of special privilege to perform such an act, in part for its corporate benefit and the benefit of its inhabitants. Hourigan v. Norwich, 77 Conn. 358, 59 Atl. 487. And notwithstanding the particular act or duty is of the kind in respect of which the cases above cited declare liability when the corporation has accepted a charter imposing particular duties, yet where such act or duty is considered of a public nature, then under the rule that a municipality is not liable in the performance of public duties, it is held that the acceptance of a charter authorizing a city to discharge a duty of that kind neither creates a contract between it and the state nor renders the discharge of such duty the exercise of a special privilege for the non-performance or negligent performance of which the city would become liable. Colwell v. Waterbury, 74 Conn. 568, 51 Atl. 530, 57 L. R. A. 218. See also Mead v. New Haven, 40 Conn. 72, 16 Am. Rep. 14 (where it was held that the governmental character of particular duties had been recognized by the state by general legislation touching the performance in the congressional districts of the state of the same duties which were to be performed in the city by its appointee); Whipple v. Fair Haven, 63 Vt. 221, 21 Atl. 533; Winn v. Rutland, 52 Vt. 481 (where defendant was by its charter empowered to make and maintain sewers, the charter having been sought and accepted with a view to the realization of benefits to the inhabitants of the village and not to the discharge of a public duty, and it was held that, the charter power being proprietary in its character, defendant was by implication bound so to exercise it as to work no unnecessary injury to persons or property thereby affected, and that for negligence or unskillfulness in the construction of a sewer, or want of care in keeping it in repair, an action would lie at suit of any person thereby injured).

acceptance of the particular provisions of the statute may not be inferred,²³ and when duties, although imposed, relate to acts in the doing of which the city has some special interest,²⁴ and also where such duties arise by necessary implication.²⁵

(B) Ministerial, Discretionary, Legislative, and Judicial Functions. The rule of an immunity from liability in the exercise of governmental functions extends to discretionary power, and generally there is no liability for damages either for the failure to exercise, for the manner of exercising, or for errors of judgment in the exercise of discretionary powers of a public nature,²⁶ embracing of course judicial and legislative functions.²⁷ A municipal corporation therefore

United States.—Denver v. Porter, 126 Fed. 288, 61 C. C. A. 168, loss by fire caused by negligent management of a municipal dump.

Canada.—Crawford v. St. John, 34 N. Brunsw. 560, holding that an action would lie against a city by one who had been deprived of his vote at an election by the negligent act of the city chamberlain in striking his name off the voters' list. This case is decided on the authority of McSorley v. St. John, 6 Can. Sup. Ct. 531, holding that an officer who issues a warrant and thus directs a distress or arrest to be made, which proceeding is founded upon a void assessment for improvements, is guilty of a trespass; and where he is an officer appointed specially to receive the moneys to be collected and levied under the statute, and the money so raised was to be paid to the city for the extension of a street, he acts as the agent of the city in a matter not for the benefit of the general public but for the peculiar benefit of the corporate body, and the corporation is liable on the principle respondet superior.

As a mere owner of property a municipal corporation will be amenable to the law in respect of its proper use. Brower v. New York, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 254, 258, where it is said: "As a lawgiver, a municipal corporation is irresponsible, and the court cannot interfere with its police regulations, which are ordained as laws for the observance of the citizen. But it can enforce the obligation which rests alike upon owners of land, whether corporations or individuals, so to use their property, as that adjacent proprietors shall be rendered secure in the enjoyment of their estates." See also infra, XIV, A, 5, c, (ii).

Profits applied to maintenance of works.—A corporation uses works constructed for the public benefit for its corporate profit, when the profits are to be applied to the maintenance of the works and the reduction of the debt incurred by the corporation in their construction. Hourigan v. Norwich, 77 Conn. 358, 59 Atl. 487. But in Curran v. Boston, 151 Mass. 505, 24 N. E. 781, 21 Am. St. Rep. 465, 8 L. R. A. 243, it is held that if the duty is purely a public one the mere fact that there may be some revenue on account of which it may be said that the particular institution is not maintained entirely by taxation because the expense of maintaining may be reduced by the incidental profit arising from such revenue, will not render the city liable for acts of public officers in maintaining the institution, as in the case of a workhouse in the conduct of which revenue is derived from the labor of inmates.

Advantage to particular inhabitants.—In Weed v. Greenwich, 45 Conn. 170, where a borough asked for and obtained the power to remove all encroachments upon any of the public highways of the borough, the governmental duty (so considered) of keeping the highways being upon the town and not upon the borough, it was held that the power obtained was for the accomplishment of undertakings specially advantageous to the residents of the territorial limits of the borough, and that the borough would be responsible for wrongs upon private rights committed by its officers in exercising the power. So in Coan v. Marlborough, 164 Mass. 206, 41 N. E. 238, it was held that where private persons pay in part for an improvement and derive special advantage therefrom, and the building and maintaining of the improvement are not imposed by law without the assent of the municipality but are voluntarily assumed, the corporation will be liable for negligence in constructing and maintaining such improvement.

Mere intention to sell property held in public capacity will not create liability, where in the particular jurisdiction there would be no liability for the acts complained of aside from such intention. Stockwell v. Rutland, 75 Vt. 76, 53 Atl. 132.

Taxation to support enterprise.—The mere fact that the municipality is engaged in the performance of a public duty is not enough to free it from all common-law liability for its acts if the word "public" is to be taken prise,³¹ although the property may be used partly for public purposes and the profit or advantage inures ultimately to the benefit of the public.³²

(iii) IN ADMIRALTY. The theory of sovereign attribute does not control a maritime right and cannot justify an admiralty court in refusing to redress a wrong where it has jurisdiction to do so.³³

(iv) STATUTORY REGULATIONS. The legislature may exempt a municipality from liability for nonfeasance or misfeasance by its common council or officers, or an appointee of such council, of any duty imposed upon them by law,³⁴ or limit or remove the liability of a city resting upon duties imposed by its charter;³⁵ but such statutes are confined in their operation to the acts for which, when comin the broad sense of including every enterprise which may be supported by taxation. Rhobidas v. Concord, 70 N. H. 90, 47 Atl. 82, 85 Am. St. Rep. 604, 51 L. R. A. 381, referring to the maintenance of a waterworks system by a waterworks department.

Operating ferry.—Townsend v. Boston, 187 Mass. 283, 72 N. E. 991, holding that where in an action against the city for injuries from negligence in the operation of the ferry, it was admitted that the city was a common carrier, in the absence of other evidence the city must be held to the ordinary duties and liabilities of a carrier. 33. Workman v. New York, 179 U. S. 552, 21 S. Ct. 212, 45 L. ed. 314 [reversing 67 Fed. 347, 14 C. C. A. 530, and affirming 63 Fed. 298], holding that the relation between the city of New York and those in charge of a fire-boat under its fire department was that of master and servant, its ministerial officers being selected and paid by the city which was responsible for the expenses of the department and which owned all the property of the department, and that under the general maritime law the city as owner of an offending fire-boat which committed a maritime tort was responsible under the rule of respondet superior, and this notwithstanding the doctrine in the state court that by reason of the public nature of the service which the vessel was performing when the tort was committed the city would be exempt from liability; further, conceding without deciding that the fire-boat could not be seized by process from a court of admiralty, nevertheless an action in personam to respond for the damages inflicted by the boat may lie against the owner. The same result was reached as to the remedy in personam in Henderson v. Cleveland, 93 Fed. 844; Thompson Nav. Co. v. Chicago, 77 Fed. 984; The F. C. Latrobe, 28 Fed. 377. But see Haight v. New York, 24 Fed. 93 [affirmed in 27 Fed. 230].

The rule that indictment only is the remedy where a public duty is violated by a municipal corporation, unless a private action is given by statute, as established in a state court, does not prevail in the court of admiralty. Boston v. Crowley, 38 Fed. 202, declaring liability for injury to a vessel on a navigable stream by reason of the city's failure to maintain a drawbridge of the required width. See French v. Boston, 129 Mass. 592, 27 Am. Rep. 393, and Corning v. Saginaw, 116 Mich. 74, 74 N. W. 307, 40 L. R. A. 526, where for similar acts the cities were held not liable under the state doctrine.

mitted by its officers, the city is relieved from liability;³⁶ and a charter provision exempting a city from liability for the misfeasance or nonfeasance of its officers does not apply to a failure to discharge a duty resting upon the city itself, and which has not devolved upon any of its officers.³⁷ Municipalities are sometimes made liable for default of their officers in the performance of governmental duties.³⁸

b. Persons Entitled to Relief.³⁹ The rules of law as to persons entitled to maintain an action for tort committed by a municipality are those generally recognized and applied in such actions against other classes of defendants. One whose person or property is injured may bring the action, although he be a corporator.⁴⁰ A municipal corporation may be held liable for negligence at the suit of an employee,⁴¹ and when acting in its quasi-private or ministerial capacity it owes its employees the same measure of duty, and will be liable to them for injuries in the same manner and to the same extent, as private corporations or individuals,⁴² as in the case of an injury to one working on the street,⁴³ or of an injury to one work-

The fellow-servant doctrine, when applicable in other cases, is applicable to injuries to employees of a municipality. Sheffield v. Harris, 101 Ala. 564, 14 So. 357; Flynn v. Salem, 134 Mass. 351; McDermott v. Boston, 133 Mass. 349; McGough v. Bates, 21 R. I. 213, 42 Atl. 873. See also Hourigan v. Norwich, 77 Conn. 358, 59 Atl. 487. But see Turner v. Indianapolis, 96 Ind. 51, where there is a dictum to the contrary. And on the other hand municipal corporations are subject to an employers' liability act. Coughlan v. Cambridge, 166 Mass. 268, 44 N. E. 218.

Proximate cause.—A municipal corporation is not liable if its negligence was not the proximate cause. McGough v. Bates, 21 R. I. 213, 42 Atl. 873.

For the risk assumed by such employee he cannot recover. Wagner v. Portland, 40 Oreg. 389, 60 Pac. 985, 67 Pac. 300; Allen v. Logan City, 10 Utah 279, 37 Pac. 496.

In the execution of a public duty, where the rule is applied that in the absence of statute no action lies for negligence or omissions, an action will not lie for an injury to one engaged in work appertaining to the performance of such corporate duties. Taggart v. Fall River, 170 Mass. 325, 49 N. E. 622 (holding that the working of a street required for public convenience was not a business carried on by the city for profit, making it liable for negligently injuring laborers therein, although land belonging to the city in the neighborhood, together with other land, was increased in value, and the city had taken the work out of the hands of the officers upon whom the duty of performing it was caused by law was immaterial); Jensen v. Waltham, 166 Mass. 344, 44 N. E. 339. On the other hand it is held that notwithstanding the injury may be occasioned in the execution of a public duty there is a common-law liability. Rhobidas v. Concord, 70 N. H. 90, 47 Atl. 82, 85 Am. St. Rep. 604, 51 L. R. A. 381. And so it is also held with respect to the execution of governmental powers that after the legislative power, and the judgment and discretion have been exercised, then in the mere execution of the work or the maintenance of the institution, devised and constructed pursuant to such legislative and judicial action, is ministerial, and the municipality will be liable for any injury occurring to an employee through the negligence of the corporate officers in the performance of such ministerial duties. Bowden v. Kansas City, 69 Kan. 587, 77 Pac. 573, 105 Am. St. Rep. 187, 66 L. R. A. 181. See also infra, XIV, A, 5, a, (1).

43. Sheffield v. Harris, 101 Ala. 564, 14 So. 357; Barksdale v. Laurens, 58 S. C. 413, ing in the construction of a sewer.⁴⁴ The duty of a municipal corporation to keep and maintain its streets in a reasonably safe condition for travel⁴⁵ extends to the protection of firemen and policemen while in the discharge of their duties as well as to others, and the municipality will be liable for an injury occasioned to such fireman by reason of a defect in a street.⁴⁶ But for injuries resulting from the 36 S. E. 661, under a statute providing for liability in favor of any one injured through a defect in any street, etc., or by reason of any defect or mismanagement of anything under the control of the corporation, etc., but holding that plaintiff could not recover in this case by reason of another provision of the act that required him to show affirmatively freedom from contributory negligence.

Working in gravel bank.—In Winfield v. Peeden, 8 Kan. App. 671, 57 Pac. 131, it was held that a workman in a gravel bank who was performing labor in lieu of poll tax, loading wagons of gravel for use in the streets, occupied the relation of servant, and while the duty of improving and repairing streets was imposed by the city by law, the action of the city in purchasing and using the gravel bank was not within the scope of the duty thus imposed, and in using the bank the street commissioner derived none of his powers from the express provisions of the statute but drew them all from the orders and directions of the city officers and acted as agent of the city.

In the absence of statute creating liability, where the duty in repairing streets is held to be governmental, an employee engaged in such work cannot recover for injuries sustained by the use of defective machinery or through the negligence of city officials in superintending such repairs. Colwell v. Waterbury, 74 Conn. 568, 51 Atl. 530, 52 L. R. A. 218.

44. Coan v. Marlborough, 164 Mass. 206, 41 N. E. 238 (for negligence whereby one employed to work in constructing a sewer is injured, upon the rule established in this state actions for negligence in building or maintaining sewers lie because sewers are built and maintained partly for the private benefit and advantage of the abutters, who pay in part for such advantage, and because the charge of sewers is voluntarily assumed by the municipality); Donahoe v. Kansas City, 136 Mo. 657, 38 S. W. 571.

New York.—Farley v. New York, 152 N. Y. 222, 46 N. E. 506, 57 Am. St. Rep. 511.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1561.

Assumption of risk by policeman.—In Galveston v. Hemmis, 72 Tex. 558, 11 S. W. 29, 13 Am. St. Rep. 828, while approving the doctrine that a police officer acts in the capacity of a public officer and not as an agent or servant of the city, and that the city is under the same duty to such officer as to other persons to keep its streets in a reasonably safe condition, it was held that a verdict for plaintiff was not at variance with an instruction that a supernumerary night policeman in the pay of the city is its employee and assumes all the risks ordinarily incidental to such employment and that where there may be an open defect in the approaches from the street to the sidewalk and such policeman knew thereof, or where the defect was open to ordinary observation and such policeman had been on the beat sufficiently long to have become aware of the defect, he is presumed to have assumed all the risks incident to such defect, inasmuch as the charge did not make the policeman assume the risk incident to the defect unless he knew of the defect, etc., there being evidence before the jury to sustain their finding under the charge, from which the jury might have properly concluded that the policeman had not been on the beat long enough to have discovered the defect.

The fellow-servant doctrine does not apply to prevent a recovery because a member of a fire department has no servitude connection with the repairing of the streets by the removal of obstructions therefrom and can in no sense be called a co-servant with the street commissioner or any other officer or agent of the city having charge of the streets. Turner v. Indianapolis, 96 Ind. 51; Coots v. Detroit, 75 Mich. 628, 43 N. W. 17, 5 L. R. A. 315, where it is said that a fireman is in no sense an employee of the city but of the fire commission.

A violation of speed regulations will not avoid a recovery for injury to a fireman arising from a breach of the city's duty to keep its streets in a safe condition for travel. Such regulations do not apply to the fire department. Kansas City v. McDonald, 60 Kan. 481, 57 Pac. 123, 45 L. R. A. 429; Farley v. New York, 152 N. Y. 222, 46 N. E. 506, 57 Am. St. Rep. 511. But see Carswell v. Wilmington, 2 Marv. (Del.) 360, 43 Atl. 169.

Rules of a fire department requiring its members to drive in the middle of the street when going to a fire are made for the safety of the men, teams, and vehicles; and a driver of a hook-and-ladder truck is charged with the use of no greater care and precaution for his safety by such rule than he would be if such rule did not exist. Kansas City v. McDonald, 60 Kan. 481, 57 Pac. 123, 45 L. R. A. 429.

Pension.—The liability of the city for an injury to a fireman by reason of defects in the street is not affected by reason of the exercise of, and to those who are in the performance of, its governmental functions, no liability accrues, and the doctrine of respondet superior is not applicable,⁴⁷ because while one is acting thus as a mere governmental agency, although the city pays for his services, the relation between him and the city is not the ordinary one of master and servant,⁴⁸ as in the case of a fireman injured by defective appliances of the department or by the negligence of others therein in the performance of his duties,⁴⁹ or of injury sustained by one aiding a police officer, on his summons, to preserve the peace,⁵⁰ or of injury to one employed by the municipality fact that the fire commission is empowered by the charter to pension firemen who are totally disabled while acting in the line of their duty. Coots v. Detroit, 75 Mich. 628, 43 N. W. 17, 5 L. R. A. 315.

Insurance.—The fact that the city procured an accident policy for a fireman under the provisions of a statute, which policy cost the city nothing, the premiums being paid by foreign insurance companies doing business in the state from a tax laid by the state on the premiums on policies written by such companies, and that the amount of such policy was paid to the fireman's widow, will not relieve the municipality from liability for injuries caused by a breach of its duty to keep its streets in a reasonably safe condition. Kansas City v. McDonald, 60 Kan. 481, 57 Pac. 123, 45 L. R. A. 429.

Illinois.—Kinnare v. Chicago, 171 Ill. 332, 49 N. E. 536, injury to a workman while engaged in the building of a school-house which was being erected by a board of education with the concurrence of the city council, the charter of the city not investing it with power to construct school buildings or imposing such duty on it, the court holding that whatever connection the city had with the construction of the building was simply for the purpose of discharging a public duty, and the construction was of no benefit to the city as a municipality, the distinction being drawn between this case and that in which the city has voluntarily adopted an act and thereby assumes the burden of exercising the powers therein conferred.

Louisiana.—Spalding v. Jefferson, 27 La. Ann. 159, holding that damage done to a police officer in the discharge of his duties is a risk he assumes.

Michigan.—Nicholson v. Detroit, 129 Mich. 246, 88 N. W. 695, 56 L. R. A. 601.

Washington.—Lynch v. North Yakima, 37 Wash. 657, 80 Pac. 79, holding that a city is not liable to a teamster in its fire department for injuries sustained while training horses, by reason of the negligence of the chief of the fire department.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1561. And see infra, XIV, A, 5, i.

A different rule seems to be applied in some cases. See Lafayette v. Allen, 81 Ind. 166 (where it was held that the city was liable to an engineer for its negligence in putting him to work upon a defective engine. This case was distinguished in Peterson v. Wilmington, 130 N. C. 76, 40 S. E. 853, 56 L. R. A. 959, in that at the time of the injury by the explosion of the engine it was not being used in the extinguishment of a fire but for the purpose of pumping water for ordinary city purposes. It may be remarked, however, that it does not appear from the report of the case that such was the fact or that it was the reason of the decision. It appears that the explosion occurred while water was being pumped into the city's pipes but it does not appear that the water was not for fire purposes); Bowden v. Kansas City, 69 Kan. 587, 77 Pac. 573, 105 Am. St. Rep. 187, 66 L. R. A. 181 (holding that in determining the necessity for a fire department, the number and location of fire stations, kind, quality, and number of fire extinguishers, and all matters involving the efficiency of the department, the city council exercises legislative power, judgment, and discretion, but that having determined these questions the execution of the work and the managing of the property are ministerial and that the corporation will be liable in damages to an employee for personal injuries sustained resulting from the neglect on the part of the corporation to furnish him a reasonably safe place in which to work, the cause of action in this case being injuries sustained by an employee of a city in charge of a fire station whose duty it was to clasp the collar on the horses when they came from their stalls to the tongue of the hose car upon an alarm of fire, by reason of the unsafe condition of the floor in such fire station); Wagner v. Portland, 40 Ore. 389, 60 Pac. 985, 67 Pac. 300; Lawson v. Seattle, 6 Wash. 184, 33 Pac. 347.

3. ACTS OR OMISSIONS OF OFFICERS OR AGENTS — a. Doctrine of Agency in General. A corporation can act only by its agents or servants.⁵² This obvious truth does not imply that the acts must be done by inferior or subordinate agents, but, on the contrary, the higher the authority of the agent the more evident is the responsibility of the principal.⁵³

b. Officer, Board, or Department as Agent of Corporation. To determine whether there is municipal responsibility, the inquiry must be whether the particular officer, board, or department whose misfeasance or nonfeasance is complained of is a part of the machinery for carrying on the municipal government; whether it was at the time engaged in the discharge of a duty or charged with the performance of a duty primarily resting upon the municipality, and if so, such officer, board, or department acts as the agent of the municipality; ⁵⁴ or whether the agents or servants for whose acts or negligence it is sought to hold the corporation are its agents and servants for the performance of a public duty imposed by law,⁵⁵ or merely for the carrying out of private functions which are for its special benefit or advantage.⁵⁶ A board or department which is a part of the municipality, although having full and exclusive power in particular matters, and on the theory of a compulsory agency without hire, since there was no physical compulsion, but at most only a moral compulsion arising from the alternative of compliance with the request of the officer or liability to a small pecuniary fine.

51. Nicholson v. Detroit, 129 Mich. 245, 88 N. W. 695, 56 L. R. A. 601, where the city failed to disinfect a pest-house which was being demolished in the course of the work of constructing a new hospital, and a workman engaged in such construction contracted smallpox and died.

52. Bieling v. Brooklyn, 120 N. Y. 98, 24 N. E. 389; Ehrgott v. New York, 96 N. Y. 264, 48 Am. Rep. 622.

53. Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 540, 23 L. ed. 440, holding that a municipal corporation may act through its mayor, through its common council, or its legislative department by whatever name called, its superintendent of streets, commissioner of highways, or board of public works, and the like, provided the act is within the province committed to its charge.

Officer must qualify.—A city or town is not liable for the wrongful acts of one acting as poundkeeper, but who has never qualified by giving bonds as required by law. Rounds v. Bangor, 46 Me. 541, 74 Am. Dec. 469.

A city cannot deny the legality of the appointment of a superintendent which it has placed in charge of a gang of laborers in an action by one of the laborers for injuries through the superintendent's negligence. Sheffield v. Harris, 101 Ala. 564, 14 So. 357.

Parol authority.—In an action against a municipal corporation for negligence of its agents causing injury it is not necessary to prove that the agent had authority under the corporate seal or under an order entered on the books of the corporation. Hoce v. Alexandria, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,666, 1 Cranch

C. C. 90. See also Akron v. McComb, 18 Ohio 229, 51 Am. Dec. 453.

Connecticut.—Hourigan v. Norwich, 77 Conn. 358, 59 Atl. 487.

Minnesota.—Kleopfert v. Minneapolis, 93 Minn. 118, 100 N. W. 669, 90 Minn. 158, 95 N. W. 908.

New Hampshire.—Lockwood v. Dover, 73 N. H. 209, 61 Atl. 32 [overruling Gross v. Portsmouth, 68 N. H. 266, 33 Atl. 256, 73 Am. St. Rep. 586]; Rhobidas v. Concord, 70 N. H. 90, 47 Atl. 82, 85 Am. St. Rep. 604, 51 L. R. A. 381, water commissioners, under an act authorizing a city to establish water-works and place them under the direction of a board of water commissioners with such powers as the city council might prescribe.

New York.—Missano v. New York, 160 N. Y. 123, 54 N. E. 744 (commissioner of street cleaning); Turner v. Newburgh, 109 N. Y. 301, 16 N. E. 344, 4 Am. St. Rep. 453 (members of common council as commissioners of highway, the duty being imposed upon them to keep the streets in good order, were held to be agents of the city in respect to that function); Niven v. Rochester, 76 N. Y. 619 (commissioners of public works who had charge of the streets of the city); New York, etc., Saw Mill, etc., Co. v. Brooklyn, 71 N. Y. 580 (holding that when, by a municipal charter in the distribution of powers and duties among the different municipal officers, duties of a public character are imposed, the officers are regarded as agents of the corporation, and it is liable for their acts or omissions); Conrad v. Ithaca, 16 N. Y. 158 (holding that the trustees of a village who were by its charter made commissioners of highways were to be regarded in respect to that function, not as independent public officers but as the agents of the corporation); Quill v. New York, 36 N. Y. App. Div. 476, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 889; Groves v. Rochester, 39 Hun 5; *Clark v. E. 911, holding that the trustees of the Brooklyn bridge and those employed by such trustees are agents and servants of New York and Brooklyn under the statutes under which the bridge was constructed. But see Davidson v. New York, 24 Misc. 560, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 51, holding that the municipality was not liable for injuries caused by the driver of a cart in the street-cleaning department.

Ohio.—Johns v. Cincinnati, 45 Ohio St. 278, 12 N. E. 801 (as to the relation of a board of public works to the city, under a statute authorizing county commissioners to levy a tax upon the property of the county to be expended under the direction of said board in opening, grading, and completing an uncompleted highway wholly within the city limits); Dayton v. Pease, 4 Ohio St. 80 (duty to keep street in repair).

Oregon.—Wagner v. Portland, 40 Oreg. 389, 60 Pac. 985, 67 Pac. 300, holding that the board of fire commissioners appointed under a city charter authorizing the mayor to appoint a board of fire commissioners, which board shall have exclusive power and authority to organize and control the fire department, is not an independent body, but its acts are those of the city.

Rhode Island.—Inman v. Tripp, 11 R. I. 520, 23 Am. Rep. 520 (holding that a city is presumably responsible for acts of highway commissioners, who are declared by statute to be subject to the orders of the city council); Aldrich v. Tripp, 11 R. I. 141, 23 Am. Rep. 434 (water commissioners, under a statute enabling a city to introduce water, to elect water commissioners, to prescribe the duties and compensation of such commissioners, and to regulate the mode and causes of their removal from office).

United States.—Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 540, 23 L. ed. 440 [followed in District of Columbia v. Woodbury, 136 U. S. 450, 10 S. New York*, 7 Fed. 479, 18 Blatchf. 273 (holding a city liable for infringement by its fire department, although separately incorporated); Ransom v. New York, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,573, 1 Fish. Pat. Cas. 252.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1571.

The fact that such a board is independent or any control on the part of any other department of the municipality is immaterial if the duties relate solely to the purely corporate interest or special corporate affairs to be managed for private profit. Kleopfert v. Minneapolis, 93 Minn. 118, 100 N. W. 669, 90 Minn. 158, 95 N. W. 908 (park board having exclusive care of a parkway); Esberg Cigar Co. v. Portland, 34 Oreg. 282, 55 Pac. 961, 75 Am. St. Rep. 651, 43 L. R. A. 435. See also Ehrgott v. New York, 96 N. Y. 264, 48 Am. Rep. 622, holding that under a section providing that commissioners of the department of public works shall have exclusive power to locate and lay out, construct and maintain all public parks, streets, roads, and avenues, and to devise plans for and to locate all bridges and tunnels, and shall have exclusive control of the maintenance and construction of all public parks, etc., exclusive separate statute;⁵⁸ and where powers and duties of municipal officers in particular matters which they exercise as agents of the municipality, as distinguished from public duties or those which are exercised by persons acting as purely public officers, are by statute transferred to the exclusive jurisdiction of a particular board created by the statute, such board still acts in these matters as the agent of the municipality and not as a public officer.⁵⁹

c. Public and Independent Officers, Boards, Etc. Where an injury results from the wrongful act or omission of an officer or independent board, commissioner, and the like, or their employees, charged with a duty prescribed and limited by law, and from which the municipality derives no special advantage in its corporate capacity,⁶⁰ such officer or the members of such board are not treated as the servants or agents of the corporation in the performance of these duties, but are held to be the servants and agents of and controlled by the law, for whose acts or omissions the corporation will not be held liable,⁶¹ even though the duty control given is not exclusive of the city, but is exclusive of any other officers of the city.

Arrest by tax-collector.—A constable and deputy tax-collector in serving a warrant for the collection of taxes is a public officer and not a servant of the city, and if he, in excess of his authority, arrests the person named in the warrant the city is not liable. Dunbar v. Boston, 112 Mass. 75.

So where the act or duty is one for which, by reason of its nature, the municipality may be liable, the fact that the agencies through which the duty is performed are subject to the control and direction of the corporation is an element considered in determining whether the municipality is liable in the particular case for the acts of its agents, as where street commissioners who by the charter are subject to the control and direction of the common council of a city are regarded as agents of the city for whose default the city will be liable under the statute making cities liable for injuries resulting from insufficient highways. On the other hand, however, it is held that the rule for determining whether a municipality is responsible for the acts of any particular officer or agent is the character of the duty in the performance of which such officer or agent was engaged at the time of the injury. Butman v. Newton, 179 Mass. 1, 60 N. E. 401, 88 Am. St. Rep. 349 (where it was held that the exemption from liability for the acts of public officers in the performance of a public duty or in the performance of acts for the general good does not rest upon any idea of want of control by the corporation but upon the nature of the duty performed); Lockwood v. Dover, 73 N. H. 209, 61 Atl. 32 [overruling Gross v. Portsmouth, 68 N. H. 266, 33 Atl. 256, 73 Am. St. Rep. 586]; Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 540, 23 L. ed. 440 (where it is said that when the question is whether an individual is acting for himself or for another, the inquiry whether that other directed him to do the work and controlled its performance, and whether he promised to pay him for his services, may be important in determining that question, but that where all the actors are in some form under the same authority, where all are created by the same legislature, and it is a question of the distribution of

may be its agents or servants for other purposes.⁶² But if such officer is employed by the corporation to carry out particular work on its own account and is not acting independently to perform the duty cast upon him by the law, he is held to act as the agent of the corporation and it will be responsible for his conduct; ⁶³ and it is not material in such a case whether the undertaking in fact proved profitable.⁶⁴ And so if in exercising a power of a private nature the corporation employs as an agency a public body which itself is not vested with independent power in respect of the particular matter the corporation will be liable for the acts of such body.⁶⁵

d. Manner of Appointment and Payment of Officer as Affecting Authority. As affecting the question of municipal responsibility for the acts of officers and agents under the rules above stated, the character of the officer's tenure — whether he is appointed by the municipality, even though the appointment is required, or is elected by the people or appointed by the governor is entirely immaterial.⁶⁶ conceded power, these suggestions are unimportant).

That the cost of the particular work and improvement are paid out of the municipal treasury is not material. Gilpatrick v. Biddeford, 86 Me. 534, 30 Atl. 99.

Although the officer has corporate property in his charge, and the negligence imputed is in the use of such property, if the duty of the officer is independent of any relation as agent of the corporation and is laid on him as a public officer, the municipality will not be liable. *Maxmilian v. To illustrate, the city is not liable for delay or neglect of a city council and the mayor in the performance of a municipal duty imposed upon them. Gordon v. Omaha, 71 Neb. 570, 99 N. W. 242. So where the mayor and aldermen were required to perform all duties, etc., of highway surveyors, commissioners, and the like, it was held that in the performance of such duties they acted in their official capacity as such surveyors of highways, etc., so that the municipality would not be liable for injuries suffered by reason of the manner of performance. *Hennessey v. One employed as groundman in repairing the line by the superintendent, who derived his authority from said board, being injured, as he alleged, through the negligence of the city, it was held that the city being engaged in the legal duty of repairing its fire-alarm system through private and corporate agencies was acting in its corporate capacity in the performance of ministerial acts, and was liable for injuries received by a workman therein.

Massachusetts.—The fact that one who has been appointed superintendent of a waterworks construction is under the control of a board of water commissioners and cannot purchase or furnish anything except by their direction will not relieve the city from liability for his negligence in opening a trench because the proper materials for bracing it so as to insure the safety of the workmen were not at hand, and the argument is untenable that because neither the city nor the water commissioners furnished him with materials for bracing the trench or gave him authority to procure them, he had no right or power to do so, so that he cannot be personally charged with negligence, and that therefore as the superintendent's negligence alone is charged, the question whether the city is liable for not furnishing materials is not in issue, the court holding that the superintendent may be negligent in ordering work to be commenced or continued when the proper materials or appliances for insuring the safety of workmen are not at hand as well as in failing to use them when they are at hand. Connolly v. Waltham, 156 Mass. 368, 31 N. E. 302.

is not essential; it suffices that such act occurs in the course and as a part of the

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1584.

Public administrator.—Under a statute in New York making the city of New York responsible for the faithful performance of the duties of the office, it was held that the city was liable for all moneys received by such administrator and for the faithful discharge of the duties of the office (Glover v. New York, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 232; Matthews v. New York, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 132; Douglass v. New York, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 178); but not for acts illegal and done outside of his office, and hence where the public administrator, who had in certain cases authority to take charge of the goods, chattels, and personal effects of persons dying intestate, took into his possession money and property of a third person as being the effects of an intestate, the city was not liable therefor. (Douglass v. New York, supra).

Presumption.—It has been held that in the absence of a showing to the contrary it will be presumed that persons doing municipal work act within the scope of their authority. Elgin v. Goff, 38 Ill. App. 362; Kobs v. Minneapolis, 22 Minn. 159. But see Butler v. Oxford, 69 Miss. 618, 13 So. 626, where this rule appears not to be recognized.

Where the corporation itself is charged with the power and the duty of executing it is not delegated to any particular officer or agent so that the general subject-matter of the power cannot be acted upon at all until the corporation authorizes or directs such action through the legally constituted channel, any act with regard to such subject-matter in the absence of such direction is unauthorized and is beyond the scope of any authority of any other officer of the corporation. Morrison v. Lawrence, 98 Mass. 219. Thus where the grade of streets can be changed only by ordinance passed by a city council and approved by the mayor, so that there is no power on the part of the street commissioner or other officer in regard to the subject-matter in the absence of such action by the mayor and council, any act on the part of such street commissioner or officer in the absence of such legislative action is beyond the scope of their authority and cannot bind the corporation. Stewart v. Clinton, 79 Mo. 603; Werth v. Springfield, 78 Mo. 107; Rowland v. Gallatin, 75 Mo. 134, 42 Am. Rep. 395; Koepfen v. Sedalia, 89 Mo. App. 648; Stuebner v. St. Joseph, 81 Mo. App. 273; Beatty v. St. Joseph, 57 Mo. App. 251; Gehling v. St. Joseph, 49 Mo. App. 430; Thrush v. Cameron, 21 Mo. App. 394; Rumsey Mfg. Co. v. Schell City, 21 Mo. App. 175. And if the city council authorizes such work at a particular place this is held not to be authority to conduct the work any further or at a different place. Beatty v. St. Joseph, supra. So also under the rule that a municipal corporation is not liable for the acts of an independent officer, where the subject-matter is also within the authority of the corporation if it shall undertake the performance of the work on its own account, the acts of such officer upon such subject-matter are not as agent of the corporation but as a public officer where the corporation itself has not undertaken to do the work on its own account, and directions from other municipal officers in the absence of such action being taken by the corporation through the medium legally constituted for that purpose will not render him a corporate agent, since those giving directions are merely public officers themselves acting beyond the scope of their authority. Bowden v. Rockland, 96 Me. 129, 51 Atl. 815 [distinguishing Woodcock v. Calais, 66 Me. 234, in that the municipality, through its legislative body, voted to assume charge of the work]. performance of an authority to act for the city upon a general subject within the power of the city.⁷⁸

(ii) *ULTRA VIRES ACTS.*⁷⁹ A municipal corporation cannot confer upon its agents or officers lawful authority to represent it beyond the scope of its charter powers, and therefore is not civilly liable for damages suffered by individuals in person or property which are caused by the tortious acts of municipal agents or officers assuming to represent it in matters wholly ultra vires, whether such acts

Concurring acts of agent and stranger.—Where a bridge tender employed by a city himself employs a helper without any authority from the city, and a child is injured by the concurring negligence of the helper and the bridge tender, operating as the proximate cause, in violation of the tender's duty to see after the safety of children on the bridge, the city will be liable and an instruction that the city is not liable for the acts of persons not in its employ is properly refused because it is misleading in that from it the jury might find that if the injuries were caused in part by the negligence of the helper the city could not be liable. Chicago v. Hannibal, 71 Mo. 449 (holding that where an agent of a corporation was authorized to open a new channel in order to change the course of a stream, this was sufficient to give him authority to construct a dam across the former bed of the stream to expedite the work); *Hunt v. Authorized acts lawful in their nature.—

It has been laid down as a general proposition that the corporation will be liable for an act done by its agents which is in its nature lawful and authorized, although done at an unauthorized place or in an unlawful manner, but not for an act which is in its nature unlawful or prohibited. Hunt v. Boonville, 65 Mo. 620, 27 Am. Rep. 299 [distinguishing Thompson v. Boonville, 61 Mo. 282, where an act injurious to plaintiff but within the power of the corporation was performed by persons who assumed to act by the authority of the city, but who were in fact without any lawful authority authorizing them to do the acts complained of]. So the laying out and construction of highways, being within the general powers of the municipal corporation, it is held liable in trespass for acts of its agents in entering upon land by order of its town council for the purpose of laying out a highway. Hathaway v. Osborne, 25 R. I. 249, 55 Atl. 700. And in Stoddard v. Saratoga Springs, 127 N. Y. 261, 27 N. E. 1030, it was held under an authority to lay out sewers along a city's streets, although the authority is exceeded by constructing the sewer through private grounds with the owners' consent, yet as the general purpose was to execute the power vested in the corporation it was chargeable with the injury resulting from the failure of its officers to properly perform the duty it had assumed to discharge, and so was chargeable because of the improper location of the outlet so as to cause sewage to be discharged on plaintiff's premises, at least for the damages resulting from the sewage entering the portion of the sewer constructed in the streets. But in Stanley v. Davenport, 54 Iowa 463, 2 N. W. 1064, 6 N. W. 706, 37 Am. Rep. 216, where the injury was occasioned by the frightening of a horse by a steam motor used upon a street railway by permission of the city council, which had no power to authorize such use, it was held that the city had jurisdiction of the subject-matter, that is, the streets, and was liable, although the council mistakenly exceeded its authority by permitting a particular thing to be done which was illegal. See also Macon v. Harris, 75 Ga. 761. But see Hanvey v. Rochester, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 177.

Disobedience of instructions by the agent will not relieve the principal. Barree v. Cape Girardeau, 197 Mo. 382, 95 S. W. 330, 114 Am. St. Rep. 763, 6 L. R. A. N. S. 1090; Hooe v. Alexandria, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,667, 1 Cranch C. C. 98.

are directed by the corporation or are done without express direction or corporate sanction.⁸⁰

(iii) PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES FOR OTHERS THAN MUNICIPALITY. So it is held that ordinarily municipalities are not liable for the wrongs of persons who may be in their employ if such employees are not in the performance of duties or services for the corporation,⁸¹ or the relation of master and servant does not exist, with respect to the particular work being done and out of the doing of which the injury occurred.⁸² And the same rule of non-liability is applied where a public

While a display of fireworks in a city street may be in fact a nuisance, the city cannot relieve itself of liability for damages caused by such a display, licensed by the mayor under the authority of an ordinance, on the ground that the ordinance is ultra vires, since the council, admittedly, has regulating powers in the premises. *Speir v. Action under void statute.—The rule of municipal non-liability applies also where the corporation is at the time of the injury acting under an unconstitutional statute, the duty then being neither imposed nor authorized. Albany v. Cunliff, 2 N. Y. 165.

Exception to the rule has been recognized, however. Thus it is held that a municipal corporation cannot, any more than any other corporation or private person, escape the taxes due on the property whether acquired legally or illegally, and that it cannot make its want of legal authority to engage in a particular transaction or business a shelter from taxation imposed by the government on such business or transaction. Salt Lake City v. Hollister, 118 U. S. 256, 6 S. Ct. 1055, 30 L. ed. 176, which involved the liability of a municipal corporation for internal revenue tax for distilling of spirits.

Canada.—See McSorley v. St. John, 6 Can. Sup. Ct. 531, where it was held by a divided court that an officer specially appointed to receive money for an improvement under a special assessment, pursuant to a statute providing therefor, was acting as the agent of the city, and one of the judges considered that the corporation had adopted the wrongful act of the officer who had caused the arrest of a party who had been assessed, by receiving and retaining the money paid, and authorizing plaintiff's discharge from custody only after such payment.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1585.

Payment.—The fact that a change in the construction of a sewer was not authorized by the action of the common council will not relieve the city from liability for the insufficiency of the sewer as changed, when it appears that the change was directed by one of the aldermen and that the city ratified his act by paying for the additional work. Munk v. Watertown, 67 Hun (N. Y.) 261, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 227. To the same effect see Willoughby v. Allen, 25 R. I. 531, 56 Atl. 1109. But where highway commissioners of a city made excavations on a private way without direction from the city council and the cost of the work was paid by the city in the usual routine of payment for work done by the commissioners, it was held that as the payment was made without any special appropriation but out of the appropriation for highways, upon the expenditure having been vouched for by the chairman of the board of highway commissioners, examined by the auditor, and approved by the committee of accounts, none of which officers had power to act, it could not be regarded as a ratification by the city of the act of highway commissioners. *Pierce v. Massachusetts.—Norton v. New Bedford, 166 Mass. 48, 43 N. E. 1034, holding that a city which is building a sewer, through its officials and with its money, cannot urge, as a defense to an action for personal injuries sustained by a workman therein, that through some irregularity in the proceedings of its officers or board the construction is without authority of law.

matter is beyond the scope of municipal authority the question of ratification cannot arise.⁸⁶

4. WORK DONE BY CONTRACTOR — a. Independent Contractors — (1) RULES STATED. In the ordinary instances of work performed for a municipal corporation, the general rule⁸⁷ is applied that where the relation between the corporation and the contractor is clearly that of employer and independent contractor, for injuries occurring in the progress of the work, the contractor alone is liable.⁸⁸ If, however, the municipality retains control over the manner of doing the work, or

W. 120, in that the acts there complained of were in the line of the city's authority], holding that a municipality cannot be held liable for the acts of an independent board on the ground that it ratified and adopted them, where the matters involved are not within the scope of the powers conferred on the city by the charter, but are expressly confided to the board.

Acts of police or other public officers.—So, as police or other officers performing governmental duties are not the agents of the municipality (see infra, XIV, A, 5, b), it is held that the matters upon which they act are not within the scope of pure corporate duties and the corporation cannot ratify the unlawful acts of such officers in enforcing police regulations. Calwell v. Boone, 51 Iowa 687, 2 N. W. 614, 33 Am. Rep. 154; Peters v. Lindsborg, 40 Kan. 654, 20 Pac. 490; Buttrick v. Lowell, 1 Allen (Mass.) 172, 79 Am. Dec. 721. Under this rule the assumption by the corporation of the defense of one of its officers in a matter involving such acts will not render the municipality liable. Buttrick v. Lowell, supra; Kelly v. Barton, 26 Ont. 608 [affirmed in 22 Ont. App. 522]. See also Mitchell v. Rockland, 52 Me. 118, where it was intimated that the city could not ratify acts committed under the authority of a health officer, but conceding for the purposes of the case that such acts might be ratified, it was held that payment by the city of a bill by one employed by the health officer, without knowledge that the services for which payment was made were so negligently performed as to injure others, was not a ratification of such acts. But see Wilde v. New Orleans, 12 La. Ann. 15, where the city was held responsible for damages occasioned by a trespass committed by a police officer, upon the ground that the acts were ratified by the city, in which case, however, it does not appear that the acts were not done in matters purely municipal, and it would seem to be that they were so committed, the case being decided upon the authority of McGary v. Lafayette, 4 La. Ann. 440, where the acts were of that character.

Invalid contract.—Where the municipal charter required that all contracts relating the men employed, the relation of master and servant arises between them, and the maxim respondet superior applies in such cases;⁸⁹ and the same rule is applied where by charter provision or statute the work is required to be done under the charge of a particular officer of the municipality.⁹⁰ But on the other hand the corporation will not be liable for the negligent performance of a contract by an independent contractor or for the acts of his servants, even if the work is done under the direction of an official authorized to inspect it and vested with all powers necessary to secure compliance with the contract, but with no authority to control the men or the manner of their work, such power of direction referring merely to the result of the work.⁹¹

to city affairs should be in writing and countersigned by the controller, etc., and there was a failure to comply with such requirements, the city was held liable for injuries sustained by the negligent digging of a ditch in its streets by a contractor under a contract made in violation of such requirements. Hepburn v. Philadelphia, 149 Pa. St. 335, 24 Atl. 279.

Liability may be created by express contract, and the rule that a city is not responsible for the acts of an independent contractor cannot be invoked by a city which has made an express contract to pay the property-owner all damages that he may sustain. Leeds v. Richmond, 102 Ind. 372, 1 N. E. 711.

Duty to servant of contractor.—A city which engages a contractor to deliver sand to it is under no obligation to a servant of the contractor, except the obligation that everyone is under to a person lawfully upon or adjacent to his premises — to use the care of an ordinary person to avoid injuring him. *McMullen v. (II) APPLICATION AND EXCEPTIONS—(A) In General. The general rule of non-liability of the corporation for the acts of an independent contractor has no application where the work contracted to be performed will, in its progress, be necessarily or intrinsically dangerous,⁹² however carefully or skilfully executed;⁹³ where the performance of the contract in the ordinary mode necessarily or naturally results in the injury complained of,⁹⁴ unless precautionary measures are taken;⁹⁵ where the corporation causes something to be done, the doing of which casts a duty on it,⁹⁶ as where the work is done pursuant to a special franchise or charter power;⁹⁷ or where the law imposes on it the duty to keep the place of the work in a safe condition.⁹⁸

(B) Acts Collateral to Contract. The general rule that the independent contractor alone is liable is confined to the collateral acts or negligence of such con-

112, 54 Am. Rep. 87, where the reservation was of the right to annul a contract or suspend work under it, and to compel the contractor to discharge any workman disobeying certain directions of the city engineer.

New York.—Uppington v. New York, 165 N. Y. 222, 59 N. E. 91, 53 L. R. A. 550; Kelly v. New York, 11 N. Y. 432 (where a provision that "the whole work" was to be "under the direction and to the entire satisfaction," etc., was held to give the corporation no power to control the contractor in the choice of his servants, and merely gave power to direct as to the results of the work); Pack v. New York, 8 N. Y. 222 (contract to do work according to plan referred to therein, and to conform the work to such further directions as should be given by the street commissioner and one of the city surveyors). Compare Delmonico v. New York, 1 Sandf. 222.

Pennsylvania.—Erie v. Caulkins, 85 Pa. St. 247, 27 Am. Rep. 642 (where a stipulation that an engineer should have power to direct changes in the time and manner of conducting the work was held not such a reservation of power as would render the corporation liable); Ginther v. Yorkville, 3 Pa. Super. Ct. 403.

Interference with private use of a street by necessary destruction of a private drain under a contract for digging in the course of a public improvement imposes no liability. Bennett v. Mt. Vernon, 124 Iowa 537, 100 N. W. 349.

95. Louisville v. Shanahan, 56 S. W. 808, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 163; Broadwell v. Kansas City, 75 Mo. 213, 42 Am. Rep. 406, where in filling in a street a retaining wall was necessary to prevent injury to abutting land.

96. Cabat v. Kingman, 166 Mass. 403, 44 N. E. 344, 33 L. R. A. 45.

Infringement of patent.—In Asbestine Tiling, etc., Co. v. Hepp, 39 Fed. 324, it was held that where a city authorizes a contractor to lay a sewer, and he infringes upon a patent for making sewer pipe, the city is liable for such infringement.

97. Savannah v. Waldner, 49 Ga. 316; Chicago v. Murdock, 212 Ill. 9, 72 N. E. 46, 103 Am. St. Rep. 221 [affirming 113 Ill. App. 656]. Where a city, in building a sewer under a canal by permission of the state, granted on condition that the city protect the canal and the rights of the lessee of the water power, let the work to an independent contractor, by whose negligence the flow of the water in the canal was interrupted, to the injury of the lessee, it was held that the city was liable for the contractor's negligence. Canal Elevator, etc., Co. v. Cincinnati, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 744, 17 Cinc. L. Bul. 117.

tractor or his servant,⁹⁹ or as otherwise stated, as in cases involving liability for a breach of the municipal duty to keep streets in a condition of reasonable safety for travel, the exception to the general rule of non-liability for the acts or negligence of an independent contractor or his servant does not apply where the injury is caused by such collateral acts or negligence.¹

Indiana.—Logansport v. Dick, 70 Ind. 65, 36 Am. Rep. 166.

Nebraska.—Beatrice v. Reid, 41 Nebr. 214, 59 N. W. 770; Omaha v. Jensen, 35 Nebr. 68, 52 N. W. 833, 37 Am. St. Rep. 432.

New York.—Pettengill v. Yonkers, 116 N. Y. 558, 22 N. E. 1095, 15 Am. St. Rep. 442; Turner v. Newburgh, 109 N. Y. 301, 16 N. E. 344, 4 Am. St. Rep. 453.

Ohio.—Cincinnati v. Stone, 5 Ohio St. 38. See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1580. And see MASTER AND SERVANT, 26 Cyc. 1562.

Public duty.—Where the duty is a public one, so that there is no municipal liability for the acts of those through whom it is performed, then there is no liability if they contract for the work to be done in performance of such duty, for injury to one engaged in work under the contract. Sampson v. Boston, 161 Mass. 288, 37 N. E. 177.

99. Nevins v. Peoria, 41 Ill. 502, 89 Am. Dec. 392; Sterling v. Schiffmacher, 47 Ill. App. 141; East St. Louis v. Giblin, 3 Ill. App. 219; Circleville v. Neuding, 41 Ohio St. 465; Kuehn v. Milwaukee, 92 Wis. 263, 65 N. W. 1030. See also supra, note 88.

In doing what the contract does not demand the contractor does not thereby render the city liable for an injury resulting from such act. Sievers v. San Francisco, 115 Cal. 648, 47 Pac. 687, 56 Am. St. Rep. 153, where the contract required the grading of a street to the "official grade," and the contractor filled in several feet above that grade according to erroneous lines furnished by the city engineer and surveyor, whereby damage to land of an abutting owner was occasioned, the mistake of the engineer not being chargeable to the city.

Conversion.—In Detroit v. Michigan Paving Co., 38 Mich. 358, a paving company had forfeited its contract and left a quantity of sand in the street which it had agreed to pave, and thereafter, under another contract to finish the work, another contractor used such sand, and it was held that the city was not liable for the use of the sand made by the second contractor. But in Rich v. Minneapolis, 37 Minn. 423, 35 N. W. 2, 5 Am. St. Rep. 861, where the city made a contract for grading a street by the terms of which the contractors were to receive and appropriate to their own use all stone in the street, it was held that the city was liable to one owning land on both sides of the street, for the value of the stone removed from that part of the street in front of his property, upon the theory that the presumption of law was that the owner of the land was the owner of the fee in the street.

1. Birmingham v. McCary, 84 Ala. 469, 4 So. 630; La Groue v. New Orleans, 114 La. 253, 38 So. 160 (where the planting of trees on neutral ground in an avenue was held not necessarily to constitute a defect in the street rendering it unsafe or dangerous for public travel and that the city was not liable for injuries to one falling at night into a hole carelessly left by the contractor); White v. New York, 15 N. Y. App. Div. 440, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 454 (accumulation of water, sewage, etc., by the negligence of the contractor in providing for drainage, causing injury to health); Wilson v. Wheeling, 19 W. Va. 323, 42 Am. Rep. 780.

Application—Injury to land.—In construction of sewers not necessarily involving an injury to plaintiff's land the city will not be liable for the negligence of the contractor which causes such injury. Harding v. Boston, 163 Mass. 14, 39 N. E. 411; Uppington v. New York, 165 N. Y. 222, 59 N. E. 91, 53 L. R. A. 550, where the injury was to a house resulting from a trench in a street which caused the ground to settle in front of the house. So where the contractor, under a contract for improving a street, unnecessarily throws earth upon an abutting lot the city is not liable. Bloomington v. Wilson, 14 Ind. App. 476, 43 N. E. 37; Fuller v. Grand Rapids, 105 Mich. 529, 63 N. W. 530. See also Reed v. Allegheny City, 79 Pa. St. 300. And a diversion of water upon the land of an abutting owner in making street improvements is collateral to the contract and the city will not be liable therefor. Jewell v. Mt. Vernon, 91 N. Y. App. Div. 578, 87 N. Y. Suppl. 120; Harper v. Milwaukee, 30 Wis. 365, holding that a statute which makes a town liable for damages to person or property caused by insufficiency or want of repair of a highway refers only to damages sustained by a traveler using the highway and not to damages to adjoining property. But where a contract is abandoned after the digging of a deep trench in the street near an abutter's lot, the city will be liable for damages caused to such lot between the date of the abandonment of the contract and resumption of the work under another employment by the city, by the diversion of water from the channel in which it naturally ran before the excavation. Vogel v. New York, 92 N. Y. 10, 44 Am. Rep. 349.

Blowing off steam from a steam roller used by a contractor engaged in paving a street, whereby a horse is frightened and runs away causing injury, will not render the city liable. Cary v. Chicago, 60 Ill. App. 341.

An injury to the contractor's employee by the caving in of an excavation is one for which the city is not liable. Foster v. Chicago, 96 Ill. App. 4 [affirmed in 197 Ill. 264, 64 N. E. 322], where the court distinguishes the case from an injury to a traveler on the street. See also Stalder v. Huntington, 153 Ind. 354, 55 N. E. 88.

(c) Work or Excavation in Street. Under the rule sustained by the great weight of authority the duty of a municipality to keep its streets in a reasonably safe condition for travel cannot be delegated; and if a contractor, in the performance of a contract for the construction of sewers or other improvements in the streets, makes excavations or creates other obstructions in a street, the municipality will be liable for any injury sustained by reason of a failure to safeguard the public by barriers and lights, or otherwise.²

Blasting.—The same rule has been held to apply to injuries caused by blasting in the execution of a contract for the construction of public improvements. Blumb v. Kansas City, 84 Mo. 112, 54 Am. Rep. 87 (injuries to plaintiff from blasting in the construction of a sewer); Herrington v. Lansingburgh, 110 N. Y. 145, 17 N. E. 728, 6 Am. St. Rep. 348 (injury by reason of the frightening of a horse by blasting in the construction of a sewer); Kelly v. New York, 11 N. Y. 432 [reversing 4 E. D. Smith 291] (where a horse was injured by a stone thrown from a blast in opening and excavating a street while the owner was driving along another road); Pack v. New York, 8 N. Y. 222. There are cases to the contrary, however, based upon the theory of the intrinsic danger of the work (Chicago v. Murdock, 212 Ill. 9, 72 N. E. 46, 103 Am. St. Rep. 221 [affirming 113 Ill. App. 656]; Joliet v. Harwood, 86 Ill. 110, 29 Am. Rep. 17), as well as upon the duty to keep the streets in a safe condition (Logansport v. Dick, 70 Ind. 65, 36 Am. Rep. 166). But compare Staldter v. Huntington, 153 Ind. 354, 55 N. E. 88. See also EXPLOSIVES, 19 Cyc. 9.

Michigan.—Beattie v. Detroit, 129 Mich. 20, 88 N. W. 71 (under statute requiring city to keep its ways in safe condition for travel, and a contract for paving requiring the street to be kept open, the city is bound to see that it is not left dangerous to travel); Southwell v. Detroit, 74 Mich. 438, 42 N. W. 118. In this state, where the excavation was made in the construction of a sewer the liability was placed on the ground of the duty as to sewers and not of the duty as to Contra.—James v. San Francisco, 6 Cal. 528, 65 Am. Dec. 526 (the decision being upon the theory that the obligation of the corporation to keep its streets in repair is necessarily suspended while they are undergoing alterations which for the time make them dangerous, and because the law compelled the municipality to give out the contract to the lowest bidder); Susquehanna Depot v. Simmons, 112 Pa. St. 384, 5 Atl. 434, 56 Am. Rep. 317; Erie v. Caultkins, 85 Pa. St. 247, 27 Am. Rep. 642; Painter v.

b. Stipulations as to Duties and Liabilities. It is immaterial, as respects the primary liability of the corporation, whether it has or has not stipulated in the contract that proper precautions should be taken by the contractor for the protection of the public, and that he should be liable for accidents occasioned by his neglect. Such provisions will not relieve the corporation where it would be liable if they had been omitted;³ and neither the omission⁴ nor the insertion of such provisions will create liability.⁵

5. LIABILITY WITH RESPECT TO PARTICULAR ACTS AND FUNCTIONS — a. Construction and Maintenance of Public Works and Improvements — (1) IN GENERAL. In the making and adopting of a plan for a public work or improvement a municipal corporation acts in its judicial, discretionary, and legislative capacity,⁶ and therefore for injuries which result only from a defect in such plan there is no liability,⁷ at least where the defect arises from a mere error of judgment,⁸ although

Pittsburgh, 46 Pa. St. 213; Hookey v. Oakdale, 5 Pa. Super. Ct. 404. But the municipality cannot shield itself indefinitely by a contract requiring the contractor to keep the street in repair after the municipality has resumed control of the street. Harvey v. Chester, 211 Pa. St. 563, 61 Atl. 118.

The principle underlying the decision in Detroit v. Corey, 9 Mich. 165, 80 Am. Dec. 78, was that, if proceeded against by indictment for creating a public nuisance, the contractor could not justify in his own right, but only as agent of the corporation. See also Brooks v. Somerville, 106 Mass. 271. But in Beatrice v. Reid, 41 Nebr. 214, 59 N. W. 770, it was said that it was not necessary to invoke the doctrine of respondet superior, or any exception to that doctrine, but that a corporation, charged by law with the performance of a public duty, when sued for an injury resulting from its failure to perform such duty, is estopped from saying that it had delegated to another the performance of such duty. See also Savannah v. Waldner, 49 Ga. 316.

Statute making others liable.—In Kolloek v. Madison, 84 Wis. 458, 54 N. W. 725, it is held that a statute which provides that whenever any person is injured in a city by reason of any defect in any street, or for any other cause for which it would be liable, and such injury shall be caused by the negligence of any person, such person shall be primarily liable, is not limited to cases in which the person guilty of such negligence sustains no contract relation to such city, but applies where such person was grading a street under a contract with the city, and it is immaterial that he is not an independent contractor. So in Wright v. Muskegon, 140 Mich. 215, 103 N. W. 558, and Thompson v. West-Bay City, 137 Mich. 94, 100 N. W. 280, it is held that where the duty to build a sidewalk is on the abutting owner, although the work must be done under the supervision of the city engineer, and by statute it is made the duty of the city to keep its streets in a safe condition, the city will not be liable for an injury caused by the negligence of a contractor, under a contract with the abutting owner, in improperly constructing a barrier to prevent the use of a new cement sidewalk by the public.

After resuming control of a street, although a contractor was required to keep the street in repair for three years, the city is liable for an injury caused within one year by a defect in the street. Harvey v. Chester, 211 Pa. St. 563, 61 Atl. 118.

An indemnity bond taken by the city from the contractor to secure the city against damages resulting from a failure of the contractor to perform his duty will not create liability on the part of the city for the acts of the independent contractor. *Erie v. such exemption is not extended in some jurisdictions to instances where the lack of care and skill in devising the plan is so great as to constitute negligence.⁹ But, while in the carrying out of a public improvement or work which is authorized by law, the municipality, acting in a lawful manner, will not be responsible for consequential damages,¹⁰ in constructing and maintaining such works it acts ministerially, and, as it is bound to see that the work is done in a reasonably safe and skilful manner, will be liable for all injuries caused by the negligence or unskilfulness of its agents and servants.¹¹

(II) WATERWORKS. Under a legislative delegation to a municipality of a mere power to supply itself with water for fire and domestic uses, the supplying of water is a discretionary function.¹² Whenever voluntarily undertaken, if profit is the object or effect of the undertaking, either in whole or in part,¹³ it becomes a quasi-private business, and the municipality is quoad hoc subject to the same rules of liability as water companies.¹⁴ And so, while the municipality is not an insurer of the condition of the plant, and cannot be held liable except for such damages as result from its negligent construction or maintenance of the plant,¹⁵ it has accordingly been held that the municipality is liable for injuries suffered by Public pleasure resort—bathing beach.—And under an act establishing a public bathing beach and conferring upon a municipality the privilege of carrying the act into effect by constructing and maintaining such institution, no liability can accrue toward individuals until the municipality has completed the work of construction and thrown the beach open to the public for the uses contemplated. McGraw v. District of Columbia, 3 App. Cas. (D. C.) 405, 25 L. R. A. 691, in which case the court seems further of the opinion, although the point was not decided, that even if the duty of establishing and maintaining the beach were conceded, the municipality could not be held responsible for its safety and the safe use of it by those who were likely to have recourse to it in the same manner that streets and highways are to be rendered safe, or even as parks and grounds kept for entertainment and amusement, without direct profit or advantage to the municipality, might have to be maintained in a condition of safety.

Dec. 669 [affirmed in 2 Den. 433], the authority of which case, however, was much shaken if not entirely overthrown by the decision in Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Keeseville, 148 N. Y. 46, 42 N. E. 405, 50 Am. St. Rep. 667, 30 L. R. A. 660, where it was held that in the construction and maintenance of a system of waterworks, the legislative grant of power to the municipal corporation is to be regarded as exclusively for public purposes and belonging to the corporation in its public character, the latter case being afterward distinguished from the former in Southeast v. New York, 96 N. Y. App. Div. 598, 89 N. Y. Suppl. 630, in that the action in Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Keeseville, supra, was not for damages resulting from the invasion and destruction of private property but for the non-user or misuser of the power conferred upon the corporation by its failure to keep the water system in an ample and effective condition, and that while on such grounds the doctrine of Bailey v. New York, supra, may be considered as overthrown, the municipality cannot escape liability for negligence in connection with the construction of a dam for damages from the invasion and destruction of private property in view of the constitutional provision that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

United States.—See U. S. v. Sault Ste. Marie, 137 Fed. 258, where the providing of a water-supply is considered as a governmental function in any event, although the general language is applied to facts which bring the case itself into accord with others cited below.

17. Terry v. New York, 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 504.

The right to exercise legislative powers in other matters cannot be affected by any bargain to furnish water. Thus, since in changing the grade of a street the city exercises legislative power, it will not be liable to a property-owner for the freezing of a private service pipe caused by the lowering of such grade. Miller v. Kalamazoo, 140 Mich. 494, 103 N. W. 845.

18. Cincinnati v. Jacob, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 27, 18 Cinc. L. Bul. 65.

Where the water is furnished to the municipality for a fire hydrant under a contract with a water company which required the municipality to keep the water hydrant in repair, and the hydrant breaks by accident, the municipality is not responsible for the damage caused by the breaking, but after notice, or its equivalent, of the facts, it is its duty to regard the breaking as a source of danger, and where the president of the municipality diverts the escaping water to the ground of an adjoining owner the municipality will be liable for any damage which directly results therefrom. McHale v. Throop Borough, 13 Pa. Super. Ct. 394.

19. Milnes v. Huddersfield, 12 Q. B. D. 443, 53 L. J. Q. B. 12, 50 L. T. Rep. N. S. 73, 32 Wkly. Rep. 265, under an act which did not require the corporation to lay the service pipes, although it was entitled to prescribe in its exercise or for misuser or non-user of the power,²⁰ as distinguished from an invasion or destruction of private property,²¹ and that the extinguishment of a fire, being a purely governmental function, injuries arising from the negligent use of a water hydrant will not subject the municipality to damages.²² But this exemption from liability is confined to the cases in which the injury occurs in the use or maintenance of the plant by the municipality as a purely governmental function, as above indicated, and it is held that where the municipality supplies water to its inhabitants, it is liable for damages directly resulting to persons and property by reason of the negligent conduct and maintenance of the system, except while so acting in its governmental capacity, because then it is considered to act in a private capacity notwithstanding the system may also be used for the extinguishment of fires.²³

(iii) PUBLIC WELLS. When a municipality assumes control of a well as a source of supply of drinking water for the public it may become liable for its negligence, causing injury to a person using the well, either in failing to repair the covering of the well,²⁴ or to keep the water pure, but it is not an insurer of the purity of the water, and becomes liable to one using it for failing to cleanse it only after it knows, or with due diligence should know, of the impurity.²⁵

b. Enactment and Enforcement of Ordinances and By-Laws. In applying the principle that where a municipality is acting in its governmental capacity it cannot be held civilly liable for any act or omission, it is held that there is no liability for a failure to pass ordinances, even though they would, if passed, preserve the public health or otherwise promote the public good, or for any omission to enforce such ordinances or to see that they are properly observed by its citizens or those who may be resident within the corporate limits,²⁶ or for injury occurring while the

the material to be used for such pipes and by its by-laws it prescribed lead or cast iron and plaintiff used leaden pipes which contaminated the water after leaving the main.

Rep. 776, where the well was dug and excavated in the public highway, with a pump in it, yielding water for domestic purposes, and the inhabitants of the neighborhood were invited to go there and get their daily water-supply, citizens having no notice of a rotten platform beneath the covering of a brick roof, and it was held that they had a right to expect that the work was devised with a foundation of brick or material as imperishable, and being put there and covered by the municipality it was charged with knowledge of the condition of the structure; that the doctrine that in the absence of a statute making a corporation a guarantor of the condition of its highways it must appear that in some way it was advised of the condition which brought about the injury before it can be charged with negligence does not apply to require actual knowledge, since the corporation must be taken to know when it lays a wooden structure upon which a sidewalk is built that the wood is certain to decay.

operation of an ordinance is suspended under the action of the municipality.²⁷ This doctrine has been applied to actions brought to recover damages from the municipality for injuries both to person and property based upon failure to enact or to enforce ordinances with regard to the use of streets and sidewalks;²⁸ to injuries resulting from the firing of explosives or setting off of fireworks, even though the acts were permitted or participated in by the municipality through its officers;²⁹ to injuries caused from a conflagration of oils following the failure to enforce an ordinance regulating the storing of inflammable oils;³⁰ and for the failure of the municipality to carry out an ordinance for the projecting and laying out of new streets.³¹ In some aspects of the subject, however, there is a conflict of authority, it being held in some jurisdictions that the duty of the municipality as to obstructions and nuisances in public highways is not affected by the failure to enact ordinances or to enforce those enacted, and that where, for example, the discharge of fireworks in public streets is a public nuisance, the municipality may be liable for injuries occasioned thereby,³² or that a municipality having the power to pass ordinances for the preservation of the public health and the prevention or abatement of nuisances is under a duty in that regard where the acts are nuisances; and such conduct in the public highways as amount to a nuisance will render the municipality liable if it does not exercise ordinary diligence to prevent them.³³

e. Nuisances³⁴—(1) ABATEMENT IN GENERAL. The power conferred upon a municipality to prevent, remove, or abate nuisances is held to be a power for the public good and not for private corporate advantage, and therefore the municipality cannot be held liable for the acts or omissions of its officers with respect to the enforcement of such ordinances,³⁵ or for their failure to enforce the power conferred by the charter, of a public nature as distinguished from a mere corporate duty.³⁶ And so a municipality cannot be held liable for injuries resulting from nuisances maintained by individuals on their own property, notwithstanding such nuisances might be abated or removed,³⁷ especially where the maintenance of

St. Rep. 709, where it is pointed out that the law is radically different in other jurisdictions, referring to cases cited supra, note 29, and indicating that this difference is owing possibly to the absence of large cities in such jurisdictions, and holding that where the setting off of fireworks is in a completely built-up section of a large city, under private management, and without any official responsibility or municipal or public interest, such acts constitute a public nuisance. To the same point see Speir v. Brooklyn, 139 N. Y. 6, 34 N. E. 727, 36 Am. St. Rep. 664, 21 L. R. A. 641. Compare Boyland v. New York, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 27. In Brown v. Hamilton, 4 Ont. L. Revoking permission to commit a nuisance, even if there is error in the action, being the exercise of a governmental function, cannot be made the basis of an action against the municipality. the nuisance, being upon private property, in no way amounts to an obstruction of a public street and in no way imperils the safety of travelers upon such street,³⁸ and noises outside of the limits of the highway amounting to a public nuisance are not defects in the highway.³⁹ So no liability can arise against a municipality or its officers for the destruction of property which is a nuisance, under an act or ordinance expressly authorized by statute,⁴⁰ although it is held on the other hand that the thing must be a nuisance in fact in order to justify the destruction of property under such summary power, and an inquiry as to its nature is not precluded by the order of the municipal authorities.⁴¹ was dug on the premises involved and filled with ashes by the occupants and it was held that aside from the question whether there could be any liability even if this were a nuisance, the injury in this case having been occasioned by the falling of the occupant's child into the ash pit through the violation of the ordinance, it cannot be called a nuisance within the clause of the charter empowering the city to declare, prevent, and abate nuisances.

A license to carry on a business will not be construed to be a license to carry on the business in an improper place or in an improper manner so as to be a nuisance. Hubbell v. Viroqua, 67 Wis. 343, 30 N. W. 847, 58 Am. Rep. 866.

38. Dalton v. Wilson, 118 Ga. 100, 44 S. E. 830, 98 Am. St. Rep. 101; Cain v. Syracuse, 95 N. Y. 83.

Nuisance in or near public street—In general.—The doctrine of the liability of a municipality for failure to abate a nuisance in or near a public street arises out of the rule enforced in those jurisdictions that a municipal corporation is bound to keep its streets and sidewalks in a reasonably safe condition and that failure to perform this duty constitutes a breach of ministerial duty and the liability does not rest upon a failure to perform the judicial duty of abating a nuisance. Dalton v. Wilson, 118 Ga. 100, 44 S. E. 830, 98 Am. St. Rep. 101. And upon this principle it is held that if the nuisance is in or near a public street so as to endanger the safety of travelers thereon, a municipality will be liable for any special damage suffered by reason of the existence of the nuisance and the failure to abate the same. Dalton v. Wilson, supra; Parker v. Macon, 39 Ga. 725, 99 Am. Dec. 486; Moore v. Townsend, 76 Minn. 64, 78 N. W. 880, where a ladder which was placed in the street and extended across the sidewalk and rested against a private building fell and injured a passer-by and the corporation was held liable. Contra, Howe v. New Orleans, 12 La. Ann. 481. See also Hubbell v. Viroqua, 67 Wis. 343, 30 N. W. 847, 58 Am. Rep. 86, non-liability for injuries sustained by reason of the manner in which a shooting gallery was conducted.

Persons not using street.—This liability is enforced in favor of those who are injured while in the use of the highway as such, but is not extended to those who are not in such use of the highway, notwithstanding the injury may occur from a cause which also endangered travelers on the highway. See Butz v. Cavanaugh, 137 Mo. 503, 38 S. W. 1104, 59 Am. St. Rep. 504; Moran v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 134 Mo. 641, 36 S. W. 659, 56 Am. St. Rep. 543, 33 L. R. A. 755 (holding that a municipal corporation is not liable for failure to enforce ordinances requiring property-owners to fill excavations in adjacent streets); Kiley v. Kansas City, 87 Mo. 103, 56 Am. Rep. 443; Bassett v. St. Joseph, 53 Mo. 290, 14 Am. Rep. 446.

Defect not in street itself.—On the other hand it is held that a failure to exercise legislative power to abate a nuisance in the street itself, which nuisance the municipality does not itself create or maintain and which does not render the street itself unsafe, gives rise to no liability on the part of the municipality. Miller v. Newport News, 101 Va. 432, 44 S. E. 712.

(11) NUISANCE CREATED OR PERMITTED BY CORPORATION. If in the exercise of its corporate powers a municipal corporation creates or permits a nuisance by nonfeasance or misfeasance it is guilty of tort, and like a private corporation or individual, and to the same extent, is liable to damages in a civil action to any person suffering special injury therefrom.⁴² So a municipal corporation has no more right to erect and maintain a nuisance on its own land than a private individual would have to maintain such a nuisance on his land;⁴³ it is entitled to exercise the same rights in respect to the use of its property as an individual, and

Y. 268 [affirming Sheld. 317] (where an injunction was granted to restrain abatement in a particular manner upon the principle that the power given to the municipality to abate nuisances in any manner it may deem expedient is not an unrestricted power but intends only that such means should be used as are necessary for the public good).

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1552.

Nuisance in street.—In Miller v. Newport News, 101 Va. 432, 44 S. E. 712, upon the principle that a city is not liable for failure to exercise its legislative and discretionary powers to abate a nuisance which it does not create or maintain itself, it is held that a failure to abate a nuisance in a public street which does not render the street unsafe, as where one constructed a sewer on his premises through which was discharged filth into a city street which injured an adjacent lot, will not render the city liable. But in Little v. Madison, 42 Wis. 643, 24 Am. Rep. 435, liability is declared for injury caused by the exhibition of wild animals in the streets, under license from the city.

The damage must be actual and special to plaintiff. Smith v. Sedalia, 152 Mo. 283, 53 S. W. 907, 48 L. R. A. 711; Whitfield v. Carrollton, 50 Mo. App. 98; Jersey City v. Kiernan, 50 N. J. L. 246, 13 Atl. 170. To render a city liable for the noxious smells arising from garbage deposited by it near plaintiff's home, they must be such as to produce physical discomfort such as would interfere with the enjoyment of the property, but need not be hurtful or unwholesome. Ft. Worth v. Crawford, 74 Tex. 404, 12 S. W. 52, 15 Am. St. Rep. 840.

43. Brower v. New York, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 254, holding that in owning the title to land a municipal corporation exercises a private function and in its use as incidental to such ownership it cannot maintain a nuisance and an injunction will be granted to prevent it.

any lawful use thereof,⁴⁴ or the doing of those things which the law authorizes, cannot, it is held, amount to a nuisance in itself, although the execution of the power may be in such a manner as to result in an actionable nuisance.⁴⁵

44. Whitfield v. Carrollton, 50 Mo. App. 93, holding that the fact that a stand-pipe is liable to be struck by lightning or blown over because of its height and size does not give an adjoining owner a right to recover on the theory that such stand-pipe is a nuisance licensed by the city where there is nothing to show that it was negligently constructed.

45. Logansport v. Dick, 70 Ind. 65, 36 Am. Rep. 166; Haag v. Vanderburgh County, 60 Ind. 511, 28 Am. Rep. 654; Brayton v. Fall River, 113 Mass. 218, 18 Am. Rep. 470; Strawbridge v. Philadelphia, 2 Pennyp. (Pa.) 419 [affirming 13 Phila. 173] (escape of gas from street mains); Suffolk v. Parker, 79 Va. 660, 52 Am. Rep. 640 (manner of maintaining a market).

The eminent domain clause of the constitution requiring compensation when private property is damaged for public uses does not create that a nuisance which was not before a nuisance. Atkinson v. Atlanta, 81 Ga. 625, 7 S. E. 692, injury to property from grading a street and building a sewer.

A sanitary excuse will suffice, as is sometimes held, if there is no alternative. Valparaiso v. Hagen, 153 Ind. 337, 54 N. E. 1062, 74 Am. St. Rep. 305, 48 L. R. A. 707 (holding that a city cannot be enjoined from discharging its sewage in a natural water-course, where it acts skilfully and in conformity to the statute, and is free from negligence); Ft. Worth v. Crawford, 64 Tex. 202, 53 Am. Rep. 753 (holding that if a municipal corporation creates or fails to remove a nuisance, and such nuisance arises from acts done exclusively in the interest of the public, such as the improvement of the sanitary condition of the city, the corporation is liable only for a careless or negligent execution of the duty, but that if the injury arises from acts done for the private advantage or emolument of the corporation, it is liable, irrespective of the question of negligence). See also Ostrom v. San Antonio, 94 Tex. 523, 62 S. W. 909. And see INJUNCTIONS, 22 Cyc. 888. But on the other hand it is held that the fact that sewers are necessary to a city and that the statute directs that they shall follow as nearly as practicable the natural drainage of the country afford no justification for the action of a city in emptying its sewers on the land of an individual to his damage; that the legislature cannot confer on a city authority to injure private property for the public good without due compensation. Smith v. Sedalia, 152 Mo. 283, 53 S. W. 907, 48 L. R. A. 711. See also Bolton v. New Rochelle, 84 Hun (N. Y.) 281, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 442; Jackson v. Rochester, 7 N. Y. St. 853, injunction against continuance of nuisance. And further that the immunity which extends to the consequences following the exercise of judicial or discretionary power, by a municipal body, presupposes that such consequences are lawful in their character, and that the act performed might in some manner be lawfully authorized; that such power can be exercised so as not to create a nuisance, and not to require the appropriation of private property to effectuate it. Seifert v. Brooklyn, 101 N. Y. 136, 4 N. E. 321, 54 Am. Rep. 664 (damage from insufficient sewer system); Bolton v. New Rochelle, supra.

Dumping garbage see New Albany v. Slider, 21 Ind. App. 392, 52 N. E. 626 (where it is held that while a city has exclusive power over streets within the corporate limits, and the cleaning of its streets, when duly exercised, cannot be controlled by the courts, if unavoidable injury results in such work, no liability ensues, because the doing of what the law authorizes cannot be a nuisance so as to give a right of action, yet collecting garbage and filth from the streets, and depositing it in a mass upon some other street, may create a nuisance; and if it does the city must respond in damages); Denver v. Porter, 126 Fed. 288, 61 C. C. A. 168 (holding that the collection of refuse or waste materials of a city, and the deposit thereof by the city authorities on land with the consent of the owner, is the proper exercise of a municipal function, and hence the maintenance of such dump is not of itself a nuisance, but liability may arise for loss on account of its negligent management); Kuehn v. Milwaukee, 92 Wis. 263, 65 N. W. 1030 (where after holding that the removal of garbage is the performance of a public service from which the corporation derives no special corporate advantage, it was held that the dumping of garbage upon Lake Michigan fifteen miles from shore is not prima facie a nuisance).

Hospitals.—So it is held that the establishment of a smallpox hospital cannot be a public nuisance in the absence of carelessness or negligence or an abuse of power in any way, nor a private nuisance unless it should become so in its subsequent use or unwarranted operation having in view the peculiar conditions under which it was established and maintained. Frazer v. Chicago, 186 Ill. 480, 57 N. E. 1055, 78 Am. St. Rep. 296, 51 L. R. A. 306. But a municipality, although possessing the right of eminent domain and the police power, may be held responsible, where a hospital is wrongfully located or conducted by it, or is operated in an unwarranted manner or without due care and skill. Deaconess Home, etc. v. Bontjes, 104 Ill. App. 484; Clayton v. Henderson, 103 Ky. 228, 44 S. W. 667, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 87, 44 L. R. A. 474, holding that the establishment of a pest-house within prohibited territory will render the city liable for a nuisance, the city having the power to establish pest-houses generally. But in Arnold v. Stanford, 113 Ky. 852, 69 S. W. 726,

d. Trespass and Conversion. For misfeasance within the scope of its corporate powers, a municipality may be liable in an action of trespass for direct injury to property,⁴⁶ and when a municipality appropriates to its use the property of any person, otherwise than as authorized by law upon making compensation therefor, it becomes liable to an action for the conversion or use of such property.⁴⁷

e. Infringement of Patent. A municipal corporation is liable for infringement of a patent in the course of the execution of its corporate powers and duties.⁴⁸

f. Injuries by Mob Violence⁴⁹—(I) IN GENERAL. Actions to recover from municipal corporations damages resulting from the acts of mobs and riotous assemblages are actions to hold such corporations liable in damages for a failure 24 Ky. L. Rep. 626, it was held that where the power to establish a pest-house was not conferred upon a city of a particular class, from which the inference was drawn that such power was withheld, the establishment by ordinance of such an institution within the corporate limits of the city in violation of a general statute forbidding the location of a pest-house within the corporate limits of any incorporated city, etc., would be ultra vires, and would not subject such city to liability for injury to property. See also Haag v. Vanderburgh County, 60 Ind. 511, 28 Am. Rep. 654.

A fire-engine house is not a nuisance per se, although it may become a nuisance by reason of improper use, but that furnishes no ground for enjoining its erection. Van de Vere v. Kansas City, 107 Mo. 83, 17 S. W. 695, 28 Am. St. Rep. 396.

Dec. 24, 3 Keyes 444, 3 Transcr. App. 305], holding that where piers and buildings on the Brooklyn shore of East river were taxed by said city, it was liable for their destruction by a mob or riot.

Indemnity.—The statute is one purely of indemnity. Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 81 Fed. 317, as to statute in Illinois.

A statute creating a metropolitan police district for the city of New Orleans and taking away from the city authorities the management of the police force and vesting it in a board of metropolitan police was held not to repeal or modify the statute which made the city liable for property destroyed by a mob or riotous assembly, since the operation of the statute creating such liability did not depend upon the existence or non-existence of a police force but upon the aggregate responsibility of the inhabitants. Williams v. New Orleans, 23 La. Ann. 507. But on the last point see Street v. New Orleans, 32 La. Ann. 577.

Inability to prevent the injury, or diligence on the part of the municipality, is no defense under a statute which does not so provide. Chicago v. Manhattan Cement Co., 178 Ill. 372, 53 N. E. 68, 69 Am. St. Rep. 321, 45 L. R. A. 848; Iola v. Birnbaum, 71 Kan. 600, 81 Pac. 198; Achison v. Twine, 9 Kan. 350; Chadbourne v. Newcastle, 48 N. H. 196; Allegheny County v. Gibson, 90 Pa. St.

397, 35 Am. Rep. 670; Chicago v. Pennsylvania Co., 119 Fed. 497, 57 C. C. A. 509, under the Illinois statute, where the defense was that the city exercised all its power to prevent the loss and that the state and federal governments were also engaged in protecting the property. In Maryland the rule was otherwise under a statute differing from those controlling the foregoing cases. Baltimore v. Poultney, 25 Md. 107; Duffy v. Baltimore, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 4,118, Taney 200.

54. Jolly v. Havesville, 89 Ky. 279, 12 S. W. 313, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 477 (holding that as a general statute making a city liable for damages to property by riotous assemblages of people is expressly limited to injuries to property, it does not modify the rule that a city is not liable for injuries to the person resulting from malfeasance or negligence of its police officers); Duryea v. New York, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 300; New Orleans v. Abbagnato, 62 Fed. 240, 10 C. C. A. 361, 26 L. R. A. 329; Gianfortone v. New Orleans, 61 Fed. 64, 24 L. R. A. 592 (the last two cases holding that the statute which provides for liability for damage to property does not embrace injuries to a person resulting in death, and that such liability cannot be declared under a general statute giving a right of action for wrongful death). But in Kansas under a statute providing for the recovery of damages against cities on account of mobs for loss of property or injury to life or limb, a recovery may be had for all bodily injuries and the statute is not limited to such injuries as result in death or in the loss of limb. Iola v. Birnbaum, 71 Kan. 600, 81 Pac. 198.

Nature of assemblage.—To the terror of the people.—In Duryea v. New York, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 300, the element was required that the acts must have been "to the terror of the people" in order that there should have been a mob or riot, but this was in a case where boys tore down an old and unoccupied wooden house and it did not appear that the injury was with any purpose but was merely to gratify individual propensities and the offenders dispersed at the approach of a policeman.

But no actual fighting or unnecessary noise is necessary where a large number of people, with no other purpose than to destroy plaintiff's property, proceed to accomplish that purpose as peaceably as may be in the absence of any opposition, it appearing that there were no police present to oppose them, and such a case comes within the statute. Marshall v. Buffalo, 63 N. Y. App. Div. 603, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 719 [affirmed in 176 N. Y. 545, 68 N. E. 1119].

The original aim or purpose of the mob is lature to pass such laws and their constitutionality have been recognized and upheld in many cases,⁵⁵ and, as has been said, the right to such reimbursement not material if the other elements are present which would render a municipality liable. Madisonville v. Bishop, 113 Ky. 106, 67 S. W. 269, 57 L. R. A. 130; Solomon v. Kingston, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 562 [affirmed in 96 N. Y. 651].

Fireworks.—In Aron v. Wausau, 98 Wis. 592, 74 N. W. 354, 40 L. R. A. 733, it was held that under a statute which gives a remedy against a city for an injury sustained in consequence of any mob or riot and provides that any three or more persons who shall be assembled in a violent manner to do any unlawful act, etc., shall be guilty of riot, the three or more persons must have a common purpose to do the act in order to constitute it a riot, and therefore a complaint which shows that plaintiff was injured by a fire-cracker thrown by someone in a crowd of thirty or more people engaged in exploding fireworks does not state a cause of action. See also Boylard v. New York, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 27. But in Madisonville v. Bishop, 113 Ky. 106, 67 S. W. 269, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 2363, 57 L. R. A. 130, it was held that the words "any riotous or tumultuous assembly of people" cover an assembly of one thousand people in the main street of a city obstructing its use and discharging bombs, sky-rockets, etc., therein, at private property, and that if injury is thus inflicted liability arises under the statute. See also supra, XIV, A, 5, b.

Armed military force.—Where property is destroyed during a conflict, and as an inevitable result of a collision of arms between organized and contending forces, there is no liability as for injury inflicted by a mob. Street v. New Orleans, 32 La. Ann. 577.

That some of the mob resided out of the city is immaterial. Atchison v. Twine, 9 Kan. 350; Palmer v. Concord, 48 N. H. 211, 97 Am. Dec. 605; Chadbourne v. Newcastle, 48 N. H. 196.

Property of non-resident.—It has also been held that the city is liable for the property of a non-resident (Williams v. New Orleans, 23 La. Ann. 507; Allegheny County v. Gibson, 90 Pa. St. 397, 35 Am. Rep. 670); although it will be seen that sometimes the statute excepts property in transit (see Chicago v. Manhattan Cement Co., 178 Ill. 372, 53 N. E. 68, 69 Am. St. Rep. 321, 45 L. R. A. 848).

Property taken and carried away comes within a statute providing indemnity for property injured or destroyed. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Spring Valley, 65 Ill. App. 571; Baltimore v. Poultney, 25 Md. 107; Solomon v. Kingston, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 562 [affirmed in 96 N. Y. 651]; Sarles v. New York, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 447.

of a provision against such enactment, nor did it violate the provision of the constitution that a municipality should not be allowed to become indebted beyond a certain per cent of its taxable property, as the act did not create a debt, or, conceding that it did, it could not be assumed that the city's indebtedness would thus be made to exceed the limit); *Spring Valley Coal Co. v. New York.—Darlington v. New York, 31 N. Y. 164, 88 Am. Dec. 248, 28 How. Pr. 352 (holding that such an act is not void as taking private property for public use without compensation); Sarles v. New York, 47 Barb. 447; Luke v. Brooklyn, 43 Barb. 54 [affirmed in 1 Abb. Dec. 24, 3 Keyes 444, 3 Trans. App. 305]; Davidson v. New York, 27 How. Pr. 342 (holding that such a provision is not in violation of the due process of law clause, nor does it impair the obligation of a contract under the constitution of the United States).

Pennsylvania.—In re Pennsylvania Hall, 5 Pa. St. 204, upholding the statute over an objection that the right of trial by a jury of twelve men in court was violated because the provision substituted an increase of six men out of court.

United States.—Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 81 Fed. 317, referring to the statute of Illinois. See also Louisiana v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285, 3 S. Ct. 211, 27 L. ed. 936.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1558.

The principle upon which these laws are upheld as within the general scope of legislative power is stated thus in Allegheny County v. Gibson, 90 Pa. St. 397, 418, 35 Am. Rep. 670. "Formerly . . . a person robbed had his remedy against any inhabitant of the hundred; that is to say, the inhabitants were jointly and severally liable. Then the law was so changed, that damages recovered against an individual could be assessed against all the inhabitants, so as to compel contribution. Afterwards it was still further modified so as to give the right of action against the hundred. The principle upon which this legislation rested was that every political subdivision of the state should be responsible for the public peace and the preservation of private property; and that this end could be best subserved by making each individual member of the community surety for the good behavior of his neighbor and for that of each stranger temporarily sojourning among them. The effect was to make each citizen a detective, and on the alert to prevent as well as to detect and punish crime. . . . It was evidently a police regulation, based upon grounds of may be entirely withdrawn or limited at any time at the pleasure of the legislature.⁵⁶

(ii) NOTICE OF APPREHENDED DANGER. Under various statutory provisions declaring municipal liability for damages from mob violence, the municipality must have notice of the impending danger or good reason to believe that a riot threatens,⁵⁷ or the party who would enforce such liability must have given notice of such danger to the municipal authorities if he had knowledge thereof.⁵⁸

(iii) CONDUCT OF PLAINTIFF. So under various such statutes no recovery can be had against a municipality for injuries from mob violence if it appears that such injury was occasioned, aided, sanctioned, or permitted by the carelessness, neglect, or wrongful act of the person complaining or unless he shall have used all reasonable diligence to prevent the injury.⁵⁹ Generally under statutes of this nature it is established that the carelessness, negligence, or wrongful act referred to must be such as actually occasioned or proximately contributed to the injury or destruction on account of which liability is sought to be imposed, although the particular terms of the statute have sometimes been given a wider scope.⁶⁰

Kingston*, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 562 [affirmed in 96 N. Y. 651]; St. Michael's Church v. Philadelphia County, 4 Pa. L. J. Rep. 150. See also Allegheny v. Gibson, 90 Pa. St. 397, 35 Am. Rep. 670, mere apprehension of an attack is not sufficient to deprive an owner of the benefit of such act; but knowledge of a contemplated attack must be brought home to him. St. Michael's Church v. Philadelphia County, supra. And so such notice is held to be unnecessary where it appears that the mayor had notice from other sources of the existence of an organized mob and its attempts to destroy property generally in the city. Newberry v. New York, 1 Sweeny (N. Y.) 369.

Valley, 65 Ill. App. 571 [adhered to in 72 Ill. App. 629, and 96 Ill. App. 230] (holding that it is no defense under such statute that one's own employees formed a part of the mob, or that he did not act to protect his property to the extent of taking human life).

Notice by plaintiff see supra, XIV, A, 5, f, (ii).

60. Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Spring Valley, 65 Ill. App. 571 [adhered to in 72 Ill. App. 629, and 96 Ill. App. 230] (holding that the fact that plaintiff was carrying on a business not authorized by the law of its incorporation did not exempt the municipality from liability for the injuries occasioned by mob violence, since other remedies are provided for such excess of corporate powers and it does not authorize destruction by a mob); Brightman v. Bristol, 65 Me. 426, 20 Am. Rep. 711 (holding that where the use of a house is that which constitutes a nuisance, the abatement consists in putting a stop to such use and that a fortiori the law will not sanction a destruction of the house by individuals); Ely v. Niagara County, 36 N. Y. 297 [affirming 46 Barb. 659]; Blodgett v. Syracuse, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 526 (the last two cases holding that it is no defense that the houses destroyed were kept by plaintiff as bawdy-houses, etc., the first case further illustrating the rule of the text by the opening of a window and its fireproof shutters in the house of one adjoining a conflagration at the time, through which burning embers enter and set fire to the house, in which case no action could be maintained under the act, although the adjoining house was fired by the mob, as the act of opening the window and shutters would be considered as occasioning or aiding the destruction of the property). And see Durvea v. New York, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 300, where it was held that the mere leaving of an old building unguarded and insufficiently secured on election day was not the act of a man of ordinary prudence and that in so doing he did not exercise reasonable diligence to prevent the damage complained of.

g. Care of Poor and Public Charities. The conduct of public charities and the disposition of the poor is considered of that public nature which carries immunity from liability for the acts or omissions of those through whom such duties are performed,⁶¹ although in the conduct of a poor farm from which profit inures to the corporation it has been held otherwise.⁶²

h. Police Powers and Officers — (1) IN GENERAL. When, by the action of the state, a municipal corporation is charged with the preservation of the peace, and empowered to appoint police boards and other agencies to that end, the corporation pro tanto is charged with governmental functions in the public interest and for public purposes, and in the exercise of its powers and duties in respect of the enactment and enforcement of police regulations it is entitled to the same immunity as the sovereign granting the power unless such liability is expressly declared by the sovereign.⁶³ The police regulations of a city are not made and enforced in the interest of the city in its corporate capacity, but in the interest of the public. A city is not liable therefore for the acts of its officers in attempting to enforce Improper or illegal conduct.—In Allegheny v. Gibson, 90 Pa. St. 397, 35 Am. Rep. 670, under a provision that there shall be no liability where the injury “was caused” by the “improper conduct” of the party complaining, it is held that to defeat a recovery the improper conduct must have been the proximate cause of the destruction. But in New Hampshire under a provision against liability for the destruction of property “caused” by plaintiff’s “illegal or improper conduct” it is held that “illegal” means “contrary to law” and “improper” means “not suitable,” “unfit,” “not suited to the character, time and place,” and that the term “improper” is not to be construed as immoral, although not expressly forbidden by law (Chadbourne v. Newcastle, 48 N. H. 196); and that the publication of libelous articles is “illegal conduct,” unless excused by facts sufficient to constitute a defense to an indictment for libel, so as to exempt from liability for mob violence caused by such publication (Palmer v. Concord, 48 N. H. 211, 97 Am. Dec. 605). So also, under such provision, the keeper of a drinking and gambling house was held not entitled to recover for property destroyed therein in a riot growing directly out of a dispute there arising concerning a gambling transaction between the persons engaged therein, although he was not personally engaged in the dispute or transaction. Underbill v. Manchester, 45 N. H. 214.

Non-paying patients in hospital cannot recover for injuries sustained by the negligence and misconduct of the hospital officials and servants. Murtough v. St. Louis, 44 Mo. 479. So in Williams v. Indianapolis, 26 Ind. App. 628, 60 N. E. 367, it is held that under a statute giving control of the department of health and charities to three commissioners, who shall be practising physicians, and placing in their charge the city hospital, and the efficient regulation and management thereof, the board acts for the public, and not as agent of the municipality in its corporate character; and hence a city is not liable to a patient, treated without charge at the city hospital, injured by the alleged unskilful treatment of a physician employed therein. E. 184 (holding that where the mayor of a city appointed a man of vicious character, as special policeman, to keep a street free from obstruction, and, while in the performance of his duties, the policeman committed an assault, the city was not liable on the ground that it created a nuisance or an obstruction in the street in placing an unfit person there as policeman); *Doty v. But see Edwards v. Pocahontas, 47 Fed. 268, where it was held that a town which used a jail of its own was liable for injuries to the health of a prisoner caused by its filthy condition, since under the state statute and a special provision of the town's charter, it might have used a county jail subject to inspection and control.

In North Carolina, the rule of liability in such cases was laid down in Lewis v. Raleigh, 77 N. C. 229, based upon the peculiar provisions of the constitution and statutes of the state, and in later cases while still upholding the doctrine of liability, it has been narrowed in its operation and effect so as to impose upon the city only the duty of properly constructing and furnishing the prison and exercising ordinary care in providing ordinary necessities for the prisoners and supervising subordinates in charge of the prison, and it is held that the city is not liable for injuries resulting from negligence of those in charge of a prison in failing to make use of the improvements and appliances furnished unless the municipal authorities have had notice of such negligence and fail to remedy the evil. *Coley v. Rep. 762 (thawing out hydrant, whereby water was allowed to escape on the street and freeze, so that one slipped on the ice and was injured); Lynch v. North Yakima, 37 Wash. 657, 80 Pac. 79; Lawson v. Seattle, 6 Wash. 184, 33 Pac. 347.

Nature of department.—It is not material whether the fire department is established under a general law or special charter or act of the legislature (Fisher v. Boston, 104 Mass. 87, 6 Am. Rep. 196; Shanewerk v. Ft. Worth, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 271, 32 S. W. 918); or under a general permissive law (Wilcox v. Chicago, 107 Ill. 334, 47 Am. Rep. 434); or that it is a volunteer department (Torbush v. Norwich, 38 Conn. 225, 9 Am. Rep. 395). So the duty being recognized as a public one, and the fire department being sometimes under the control of a board created by the legislature, in the performance of its duties the department and those employed by it are considered as public officers. Grube v. St. Paul, 34 Minn. 402, 26 N. W. 228; Terhune v. New York, 88 N. Y. 247 (fire commissioners of the city of New York are public officers and an action for damages for a wrongful dismissal by them of an inspector whom they appointed will not lie against the city); Thompson v. New York, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 427; Woolbridge v. New York, 49 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 67. They are likewise considered public officers under a statute providing that cities and towns may organize fire departments, etc. Burrill v. Augusta, 78 Me. 118, 3 Atl. 177, 57 Am. Rep. 788; Freeman v. Philadelphia, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 154. And in any event they sustain this character while in the performance of these public duties, although they are imposed upon the municipality itself. Wilcox v. Chicago, 107 Ill. 334, 47 Am. Rep. 434; Robinson v. Evansville, 87 Ind. 334, 44 Am. Rep. 770; Davis v. Lebanon, 108 Ky. 688, 57 S. W. 471, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 384; Greenwood v. Louisville, 13 Bush (Ky.) 226, 26 Am. Rep. 263; Alexander v. Vicksburg, 68 Miss. 564, 10 So. 62; Heller v. Sedalia, 53 Mo. 159, 14 Am. Rep. 444. But see Bowden v. Kansas City, 69 Kan. 587, 77 Pac. 573, 105 Am. St. Rep. 178, 66 L. R. A. 181, where it was held that under a power to provide and maintain a fire department and appoint a fire marshal, prescribe his duties, fix his salary, and control him in the discharge of his duties, the fire marshal, while so acting, was the agent of the city; that in performing legislative or discretionary functions with regard to the organization of the fire department the city acted in its public character; but that for acts on the part of the city or its fire department, as in permitting a floor in a fire station to become out of repair, whereby an injury was occasioned, the city would be liable.

Negligent use of water hydrant.—Injuries arising from the use of a water hydrant will not subject a municipality to liability for damages. Aschoff v. Evansville, 34 Ind. App. 25, 72 N. E. 279.

For injuries to persons upon the public streets caused by the negligence of firemen driving carriages employed in the fire department, in the performance of his duties as a fireman, the municipality will not be liable. Howard v. San Francisco, 51 Cal. 52; Jewett v. New Haven, 38 Conn. 368, 9 Am. Rep. 382; Wilcox v. Chicago, 107 Ill. 334, 47 Am. Rep. 434; Greenwood v. Louisville, 13 Bush (Ky.) 226, 26 Am. Rep. 263; Hafford v. New Bedford, 16 Gray (Mass.) 297;

actually in the discharge of their duties in and about the extinguishment of fires.⁷³

j. Health. The performance of duties that relate to the preservation of the public health and the care of the sick is likewise of concern to the public as a whole; in executing this function the municipality and the officers through whom it acts perform governmental or public, as distinguished from mere corporate or private, duties for which there is no liability,⁷⁴ and the officers and agencies engaged in the performance of such duties are public officers for whose torts the municipal corporation is not responsible.⁷⁵ On the other hand it is held that

Alexander v. Vicksburg, 68 Miss. 564, 10 So. 62; McKenna v. St. Louis, 6 Mo. App. 320; Gillespie v. Lincoln, 35 Nebr. 34, 52 N. W. 811, 16 L. R. A. 349; O'Meara v. New York, 1 Daly (N. Y.) 425; Freeman v. Philadelphia, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 154. So for a like injury to property the city will not be liable. Grube v. St. Paul, 34 Minn. 402, 26 N. W. 228.

Firemen need not be actually engaged at a fire or in putting out a fire in order that the municipality shall be exempt from liability for their acts, as where the injury occurs by the negligent management of a fire apparatus in a practice drill on the street (Frederick v. Columbus, 58 Ohio St. 538, 51 N. E. 35; Thomas v. Findlay, 6 Ohio Cir. Ct. 241, 3 Ohio Cir. Dec. 435); or where a horse is frightened at a stream thrown while testing a hydrant used for fire pumps (Ederly v. Concord, 62 N. H. 8, 13 Am. St. Rep. 533); or where the negligence is that of a fireman while in charge of a truck in the line of his duty, although not going to or coming from a fire (Lilly v. Scranton, 2 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 175); or of a fireman in opening a door of an engine house so as to strike a passer-by on the sidewalk (Kies v. Erie, 135 Pa. St. 144, 19 Atl. 942, 20 Am. St. Rep. 867); or of a driver while exercising horses belonging to the fire department (Gillespie v. Lincoln, 35 Nebr. 34, 52 N. W. 811, 16 L. R. A. 349). So where fire is drawn from an engine in the street and steam is permitted to escape which causes a horse to become frightened and run away, whereby the occupant of the vehicle is thrown out and injured, the city is not liable. Burrill v. Augusta, 78 Me. 118, 3 Atl. 177, 57 Am. Rep. 788. And where the members of a fire department left a ladder truck so standing that a ladder projected across the sidewalk in front of an engine house, in consequence of which a passer-by was injured, it was held that the city was not liable. Dodge v. Granger, 17 R. I. 664, 24 Atl. 100, 33 Am. St. Rep. 901, 15 L. R. A. 781.

Fire department in parade.—The city is not liable for injuries caused by the members of the fire department in a public parade, and this without regard to whether the city authorities did or did not have the right to order the department to take part in the parade. Smith v. Rochester, 7 N. Y. 506; Blankenship v. Sherman, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 507, 76 S. W. 805.

where the municipality is acting in the discharge of a special power granted to it in the exercise of which it acts as a legal individual, as distinguished from its governmental functions, it is liable for the acts of its employees, and the liability is not affected by the fact that the discharge of such duty might incidentally benefit the public health.⁷⁶

k. Education. Education is a matter of purely public concern, and under the general rules already stated the municipality is not liable for the acts of its officers and agents in respect to the performance of the duties relating thereto,⁷⁷ or of independent officers in the performance of duties cast upon them by the statute.⁷⁸

Local health officers acting under a general statute of the state conferring their powers are not performing corporate functions, but are representatives of the state, and the municipality is not liable for the acts of such boards, either of misfeasance or non-feasance. Murray v. Grass Lake, 125 Mich. 2, 83 N. W. 995 (flooding land by raising the level of a lake, by a village council acting on the advice of the board of health); White v. Marshfield, 48 Vt. 20; Forsyth v. Canniff, 20 Ont. 478. See also the cases cited above in this note.

Abatement of nuisance see supra, XIV, A, 5, c.

Hospitals.—Pursuant to the general rules stated in the text, it has been held that in the construction and maintenance of a public institution, as a hospital, by way of performing governmental functions, the corporation can be brought under no civil liability for private wrongs. Thus non-liability has been declared for injuries due to an improper exposure to disease of one engaged in the construction of a hospital. Nicholson v. Detroit, 129 Mich. 246, 88 N. W. 695, 56 L. R. A. 601. The same rule is declared as to injuries caused by confining one who is affected with a particular disease in an improper place and by the improper treatment of him therein (Lexington v. Batson, 118 Ky. 489, 81 S. W. 264, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 363; Twyman v. Frankfort, 117 Ky. 518, 78 S. W. 446, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1620, 64 L. R. A. 572; Having v. Covington, 78 S. W. 431, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1617); or for negligence of the hospital authorities or servants in permitting a patient to escape and wander off, whereby he loses his life (Richmond v. Long, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 375, 94 Am. Dec. 461).

New York*, 40 Fed. 50, which cases involve the function of street cleaning and removal of garbage, which are held to be corporate powers in the exercise of which the city may become liable for the negligence or wrongful acts of its officers and agents. In other cases, however, similar functions are considered governmental and the rule of non-liability is applied. Love v. Atlanta, 95 Ga. 129, 22 S. E. 29, 51 Am. St. Rep. 64 (where the duty to keep the streets clean devolved upon the board of health); Conelly v. Nashville, 100 Tenn. 262, 46 S. W. 565 (where the sprinkling of the streets was held to be a governmental duty for the promotion of general health, and both this and the last case are disapproved in Quill v. New York, supra). See also Kuehn v. Milwaukee, 92 Wis. 263, 65 N. W. 1030, where the removal of garbage is held to be a public duty.

A quasi-municipal corporation, like a board of education, is not liable for the consequences of a breach of public duty or the neglect or wrongs of its officers unless the liability is imposed by statute. Rock Island Lumber, etc., Co. v. Elliott, 59 Kan. 42, 51 Pac. 894; Donovan v. New York Bd. of Education, 85 N. Y. 117; Reynolds v. Union Free School Dist. Bd. of Education, 33 N. Y. App. Div. 88, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 75; Cincinnati Bd. of Education v. Volk, 72 Ohio St. 469, 74 N. E. 646, holding that a board of education is not liable in its corporate capacity for injuries caused by negligently carrying an excavation for a school building below the

1. Acts by Licensees. In the absence of any want of care on the part of municipal officers to perform such duties as the corporation owes the public and for a breach of which it will be liable, as in the case of the duty to keep its streets in safe condition for public use,⁷⁹ the mere granting to another of a license to do work which in itself is not unlawful or dangerous will not render the municipality liable for injuries caused by the acts of those who perform the work.⁸⁰

B. Condition or Use of Public Buildings or Other Property — 1. NATURE AND GROUND OF LIABILITY AS PROPRIETOR. A municipality owning, leasing, or controlling lands or other premises as a private owner is under the same measure of duty and care in respect to their operation, or keeping them in a reasonably safe condition, as private owners or occupants,⁸¹ and is liable for injuries caused by the unsafe condition of such premises, where it is chargeable with notice thereof,⁸² and has a reasonable time in which to make them safe,⁸³ as in the case of its negligent operation of plants for providing water or light for the city,⁸⁴ or of its creating, or permitting to remain, other nuisances on such premises.⁸⁵ But a municipality is not required to keep such premises in a safe condition for the benefit of trespassers or those who come upon the premises without invitation either express or implied and merely to seek their own pleasure or gratify their own curiosity; and in this statutory depth, and that a statute creating liability against an owner or possessor of premises whereon wrongful excavations are made, etc., does not apply to boards of education holding title to land being excavated for school purposes.

Exhibition of wild animals in streets.—Where the city licenses the exhibition of wild animals in the streets, knowing the dangerous character of the animals, it may be held liable for failure to keep its streets free from dangerous obstructions and nuisances and also for authorizing such exhibition. Little v. Madison, 42 Wis. 643, 24 Am. Rep. 435.

80. Schnurr v. Huntington County, 22 Ind. App. 188, 53 N. E. 425 (where a city consented to a county connecting its court-house with a city sewer, and it was held that the city was not liable for acts done by the licensee in the construction of the sewer); Masterton v. Mt. Vernon, 58 N. Y. 391; Dorlon v. Brooklyn, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 604 (holding that a licensed plumber acting under a special permit to make private connections with a city sewer is not an agent or servant of the city). On the other hand it is held that under imperative duty on the municipal corporation to maintain its streets and sidewalks, while it may license private individuals to open a public street in order to connect private drains with public mains, it will still be liable for the manner in which the work is done as if its own servants were performing it, and if by the negligence of a plumber a cellar is flooded, the corporation will be liable for the damages occasioned thereby. Anderson v. Wilmington, 8 Houst. (Del.) 516, 19 Atl. 509.

Under a permit from the mayor to fire explosives it is said that the utmost that can be granted is that the act of the mayor constituted the wrong-doers licensees, and conceding without deciding this, the city would not be liable for injury to property caused by the negligent manner in which the explosives were fired because it was not shown that the act licensed was intrinsically dangerous. Wheeler v. Plymouth, 116 Ind. 158, 18 N. E. 532, 9 Am. St. Rep. 837; Lincoln v. Boston, 148 Mass. 578, 20 N. E. 329, 12 Am. St. Rep. 601, 3 L. R. A city is estopped from denying its duty as to a dangerous pit on its land, where such city has passed an ordinance declaring pits of that character to be a nuisance. Pekin v. McMahon, 154 Ill. 141, 39 N. E. 484, 45 Am. St. Rep. 114, 27 L. R. A. 206 [affirming 53 Ill. App. 189].

The power of a municipality to provide water for its inhabitants and to light streets is of a proprietary character for private advantage and in operating plants for such purposes it is entitled to all the rights and subject to all the liabilities that at common law attach to a natural person. Boothe v. Fulton, 85 Mo. App. 16.

85. Miles v. Worcester, 154 Mass. 511, 28 N. E. 676, 26 Am. St. Rep. 264, 13 L. R. A. 841 (allowing a retaining wall between a school lot and the land of an adjoining owner to remain upon such land, where it had come by the action of the elements or otherwise); respect it is not liable for resulting injuries,⁸⁶ except in the case of children,⁸⁷ unless its negligence is of so gross a character as to amount to a wanton infliction of injury.⁸⁸ Nor is a municipality liable for its failure to do an act in regard to the condition of its premises, which in the absence of statute it is under no duty to do.⁸⁹

2. BUILDINGS— a. In General. A municipality in erecting and maintaining buildings for profit, utility, or pleasure is held to the same degree of care in the erection and maintenance thereof as a private person, and is liable for injuries resulting from its negligence in this respect;⁹⁰ and therefore where a city lets for hire a building erected for municipal purposes, it is liable for an injury caused by a defect or want of repair in the building, or for negligence of its agents or servants in the management of the building.⁹¹ But it is not liable where the dangerous condition of the premises is the result of causes beyond its control, and it had not a reasonable time before the injury to make them safe.⁹² Nor is it liable for negligence in the construction and maintenance of buildings or apparatus used for governmental purposes;⁹³ and in accordance with this rule it is held by

A deep pit in a populous city, wherein are water and floating timbers on which children are in the habit of playing, near a driveway across lots only partially inclosed, will render the city which owned the premises liable for the drowning of a child playing there, if found by the jury so attractive as to entice children into danger, and to suggest the probability of the accident. Pekin v. McMahon, 154 Ill. 141, 39 N. E. 484, 45 Am. St. Rep. 114, 27 L. R. A. 206 [affirming 53 Ill. App. 189].

A city's part ownership of one part of a building does not render it responsible for the defective construction or maintenance of another part in which it has no interest. El Paso v. Causey, 1 Ill. App. 531.

A statutory exemption of a municipality from liability for the nonfeasance or misfeasance of its common council or of any officer appointed by it does not exempt it from liability for injuries caused to one lawfully in a public building, by the negligence of the keeper of the building. Vincent v. Brooklyn, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 122.

Where a board has no other duties or power than to erect and furnish a building and turn over to the city such parts of the building as they are made ready for occupancy, when parts are so completed and occupied the city will be held responsible for the management thereof. Fox v. Philadelphia, 208 Pa. St. 127, 57 Atl. 356, 65 L. R. A. 214.

91. Worden v. New Bedford, 131 Mass. 23, 41 Am. Rep. 185.

Illustrations.— Thus where a city rents its hall for a public entertainment, if it neglects to light the hall and stairs, it is liable for injuries to one attending the entertainment caused by her falling down the stairs because of the negligent failure to light the same, without regard to whether its business of renting is profitable. Little v. Holyoke, 177 Mass. 114, 58 N. E. 170, 52 L. R. A. 417. So if the letting of rooms in a public building includes heating, lighting, and the services of a janitor, the janitor is a servant of the city, and it is liable for an injury caused by his negligence to a person lawfully there by invitation of the lessee. Worden v. New Bedford, 131 Mass. 23, 41 Am. Rep. 185.

the weight of authority that, as the erection and maintenance of a city prison is a purely governmental function, a municipality is not liable to a person arrested and imprisoned therein, for injuries received by him while so confined, by reason of the improper construction and maintenance of such prison.⁹⁴

b. School Buildings. Injuries caused by defects or negligence in or around a school-house or yard may not be redressed by a civil action against the municipality, as the maintenance of schools is a public function.⁹⁵

3. WATER FRONTAGE, LANDINGS, WHARVES, AND DOCKS. A municipality owning and controlling a public landing, wharf, or dock, with the right to charge wharfage, is bound to use at least ordinary care in keeping the water adjacent to such wharf or dock, in which vessels lie while moored thereto, safe from artificial obstructions, and is liable for any damage done to any such vessel by the neglect

Mass. 165, 71 N. E. 299, 6 L. R. A. 429 (city held not liable for injuries caused by snow and ice negligently thrown from the roof of the city hall by men employed by its superintendent of buildings, where the whole building is used and occupied for municipal purposes); Cunningham v. St. Louis, 96 Mo. 53, 8 S. W. 787 (negligence with respect to city court-house).

Providing and maintaining a city hall for the use of city officers, from which the city in its corporate capacity derives no pecuniary advantage, is a public and governmental function, for the negligence of its agents or servants in the discharge of which the city is not liable in a private action. *Snider v. See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1804.

In North Carolina, however, it has been held under Const. art. 11, § 6, Battle Rev. c. 89, §§ 9, 10, that a municipality is liable for injuries to a prisoner by reason of the defective condition or negligent management of the city prison (Lewis v. Raleigh, 77 N. C. 229), except where the city has no notice of such defect or neglect, and is not negligent in overseeing the prison (Moffitt v. Asheville, 103 N. C. 237, 9 S. E. 695, 14 Am. St. Rep. 810); but that, if the city authorities have personal notice of such defect and neglect, they cannot escape liability therefor on the ground that it was never reported to them in their official capacity (Shields v. Durham, 118 N. C. 450, 24 S. E. 794, 36 L. R. A. 293).

Under Va. Code (1887), §§ 927-930, it has been held that a town using a jail of its own was liable for injuries to the health of the prisoner caused by its filthy condition, since under section 927 and a special provision of its charter it might have used a county jail, subject to inspection and control. Edwards v. Pocahontas, 47 Fed. 268.

Ohio.—Finch v. Toledo Bd. of Education, 30 Ohio St. 37, 27 Am. Rep. 414, holding that a board of education is not liable in its corporate capacity for injuries resulting to a pupil while attending a common school from its negligence in the discharge of its official duty in the erection and maintenance of a common school building in its charge in absence of a statute creating liability.

Pennsylvania.—Ford v. Kendall Borough School Dist., 121 Pa. St. 543, 15 Atl. 812, 1 L. R. A. 607. Compare Briegel v. Philadelphia, 135 Pa. St. 451, 19 Atl. 1038, 20 Am. St. Rep. 885; Powers v. Philadelphia, 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 621, holding that a city is liable for injuries to a school boy suffered by reason of negligence in the maintenance of a dangerous board walk running from a main school building to an annex on the property owned by the city, and devoted to the use of the public school.

Rhode Island.—Wixon v. Newport, 13 R. I. 454, 43 Am. Rep. 35, defective heating apparatus, whereby pupil was burned and scalded.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1805.

Liability of board of education.—Although the board of education is vested with general control in the care of school buildings and property for the purposes of public education, to do so,⁹⁶ even though the vessel injured had not in fact paid wharfage, and was not expected to do so;⁹⁷ or although statutory penalties are prescribed for such obstructions.⁹⁸ A municipality is also bound to exercise reasonable care and diligence to keep its wharf, dock, or bridge in proper repair;⁹⁹ to promptly open the toll draw in its bridge;¹ or to provide safe moorings.² But there is no liability on the city where the property belongs to the state,³ where it is under the control of a corporate department,⁴ or where a dike voluntarily erected is permitted to be destroyed,⁵ or where the loss is the result of carelessness or inexperience on the part of the person damaged or his crew or agents.⁶ Where the city has leased the wharf or dock to another, who has exclusive use thereof, it does not owe to such

where the special care and safekeeping of such buildings in the respective wards is committed to the ward trustees, who are not the agents of the board, but are independent public officers, the board is not liable for their negligence in respect to the care and safekeeping of such buildings. *Donovan v. Virginia.—Petersburg v. Applegarth, 28 Gratt. 321, 26 Am. Rep. 357, holding also that the fact that there are statutory provisions for the improvement of a river does not release a city from this liability.

United States.—Fahy v. New York, 61 Fed. 336, 9 C. C. A. 520; The Dave Mose, 49 Fed. 389; Manhattan Transp. Co. v. New York, 37 Fed. 160.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1806.

"Obstructions" as used in a statute requiring a city council to keep navigable waters free from obstructions does not include a rock forming part of the natural bed of the river. Snyder v. Philadelphia, 78 Pa. St. 23.

Possession of obstruction in another.—That the article causing the obstruction is constructively in the possession of the United States marshal under a libel, which does not prevent the city authorities from removing it above high water mark, does not relieve the city from liability to an owner of a vessel injured by striking against such article. *Memphis v. United States.—Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. New York, 38 Fed. 159, holding the city liable for damages to a vessel owner by reason of a dock's lack of repair, although the dock is devoted solely to the department of charities and corrections.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1806.

Notice of defect.—In order to render it liable for resulting damages, a city must have had actual notice of the defect, or it must have been such a defect as to charge it with notice thereof without any particular examination. Garrison v. New York, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 497.

lessee the same degree of care as is due from a wharfinger to navigators invited to a public wharf for safe mooring and using the same in the ordinary way;⁷ and therefore, in the absence of notice, is not liable for injuries caused to such lessee's vessel by reason of the wharf being out of repair,⁸ although it is otherwise if notice of the defect has been given to the city.⁹ Nor where it has made such a lease, is it liable for defects or obstructions caused by such lessee,¹⁰ unless it has notice thereof, express or implied,¹¹ particularly where the vessel injured is navigating in water which the city is under no duty to keep free from obstructions, and is not using such pier or wharf at the time.¹² In the absence of statute a city is under no duty to remove obstructions from or keep safe for navigation a navigable stream which is no part of the highway of the city.¹³

4. MARKETS AND MARKET PLACES. The erection and maintenance of public markets by a city is a private or proprietary right, and it is held to the same degree of care in the preparation and adoption of plans and in the construction and maintenance of the market as a private corporation or individual;¹⁴ and it is not exempted from liability in such case by a lease, under which the market remains subject to all the regulations, control, and authority of the city, applicable to every other market.¹⁵ But the municipality is not liable for inevitable contamination of the air by live stock,¹⁶ for the obstruction of a street appropriated to market purposes,¹⁷ or for damages caused by vis major.¹⁸ Nor is it liable if the person injured did not exercise ordinary care and diligence,¹⁹ or met his accident at a place which at the time was not an authorized market place, although within the limits within which one was authorized, or where buying and selling were carried on against public authority.²⁰

5. PARKS, PUBLIC SQUARES, AND COMMONS. Although there are some cases to the contrary,²¹ the management and care of public squares, parks, and commons is ordinarily not a corporate duty, and therefore a city is liable for injuries resulting from its negligence in caring for them.²² But where the city exercises ordinary care in this respect, its duty is performed; and it is not required to provide against unusual contingencies;²³ nor in such case is it liable for injury to a trespasser,²⁴ or to one accidentally injured by the act of a third person.²⁵

6. VEHICLES, BOATS, APPARATUS, MACHINERY, AND APPLIANCES. A municipal corporation is not liable for injuries caused by defects or insufficiency of any of its instrumentalities used for extinguishing fires.²⁶ But although the instrumentality may on grounds of public policy be exempt from legal process,²⁷ a city is liable in personam for injuries negligently caused by the operation of its ice-boat,²⁸ tug-boat,²⁹ or fire-tug,³⁰ even when working gratis;³¹ and it is also liable for injuries caused by the negligent construction or operation of an elevator used for public purposes,³² or of electrical appliances owned and used by the city whether for the purpose of telegraphing,³³ or of light.³⁴

7. FAULT OF THIRD PERSON. A city is liable, as a private proprietor, for a nuisance maintained by its lessee on its property;³⁵ but not for the torts of a separate department not under municipal control.³⁶

plied becomes useless through changes in the grade of the street the municipality is not liable for failure to provide new means for the same purpose.³⁸ Where, however, the necessity for drainage or an outlet for accumulated water arises through the acts of a municipality, it must remedy the evil which it has caused and is liable for damages resulting from its failure to do so.³⁹ But the law does not impose upon a municipal corporation the duty of providing drainage for private property within its limits to prevent an inundation caused by the owner of another lot obstructing a watercourse by filling his own lot to conform with the established grade of a street.⁴⁰

2. LIABILITY FOR DEFECTS IN PLAN. The duties of municipal authorities in adopting a general plan of drainage, determining when and where, and of what size, and at what level, drains or sewers shall be built, or in fixing upon improvements of watercourses, are of a quasi-judicial nature, involving the exercise of deliberate judgment and wide discretion;⁴¹ and the general rule is that the municipality is not liable for an error of judgment on the part of the authorities in locating or planning such an improvement.⁴² But according to a number of authorities this

A city which is given power to utilize and improve a stream as part of its sewerage system is not liable in damages merely for refusing or failing to exercise that power. Wilson v. Waterbury, 73 Conn. 416, 47 Atl. 687.

Highway improvements.—Where, by improvements on a highway, the land of an adjoining proprietor is in danger of being flooded, it is the duty of the city to construct temporary drains, if practicable, to protect him (Cotes v. Davenport, 9 Iowa 227, 237 [followed in Ross v. Clinton, 46 Iowa 606, 26 Am. Rep. 169], where it is said, however: "How far it would be the duty to keep up such drains or culverts permanently, and after the plaintiffs had had a reasonable opportunity or time to raise their lot to correspond with the grade, we do not undertake to say, for no such question is made"), but the city is not bound to provide permanent protection (*Morris v. rule does not extend to exempt a municipality from liability for negligence in the adoption of a plan for such improvements, and where the municipal authorities negligently adopt or devise a plan or system which is obviously defective, the municipality is liable for the resulting damage.⁴³ It has also been laid down that the rule under discussion is subject to the distinction that where the plan adopted by a municipality must necessarily cause an injury to private property, equivalent to some appropriation of the enjoyment thereof to which the owner is entitled, then the municipality is liable, but where the fault found is with the wisdom of the measure or its sufficiency or adaptability to carry out or accomplish the purpose intended, and where its construction according to the plan adopted invades no private rights, then the municipality is not liable.⁴⁴ And it has been further laid down that the exercise of a judicial or discretionary power, resulting in a direct physical injury to the property of an individual, which from its nature is liable to be repeated or continued, but which is remediable by a change of plan, or the adoption of prudential measures, renders the municipality liable for such damages as occur in consequence of the continuance of the original cause after notice, and its omission to adopt such remedial measures as experience has shown to be necessary and proper.⁴⁵ Where the plan adopted is not carried out but other expedients are adopted, and in consequence injury is caused, the municipality cannot escape liability on the ground that it was exercising its discretion.⁴⁶

Where lots have been injured by a change in the flow of water caused by the improper construction of a sewer, the city is liable, although the volume of water thrown upon the land has not been increased.⁴⁹ A municipal corporation is not liable for special damages to property-owners by reason of the construction of drains or sewers unless such damages are caused by misconduct, negligence, or unskilfulness.⁵⁰ Where a city is authorized by the legislature to lay out and construct common sewers and drains and provision is made by statute for the assessment, under special proceedings, of damages to persons whose estates are thereby injured, the city is not liable to an action for injuries which are the necessary result of the exercise of the powers conferred by the legislature and not due to negligence or an abuse of the powers granted.⁵¹

b. Negligence of Independent Contractor. Where a municipality adopts a proper system of drainage and lets a contract for the doing of the work, the contractor to use his own method and means for the construction of the drain, the city is not liable for damages resulting from the negligence of the contractor in doing the work.⁵²

4. LIABILITY FOR OBSTRUCTIONS AND FAILURE TO REPAIR. A municipality may also be held liable for misfeasance or nonfeasance in the performance of its duty to exercise reasonable care in the maintenance of its sewers, drains, and watercourses and to keep them in reasonable repair and free from obstruction.⁵³ Where a city

Culvert constructed with county funds.—A city is not released from liability for negligence in the construction of a culvert within its limits by the fact that the money for its construction was appropriated by the board of supervisors of the county. Van Pelt v. Davenport, 42 Iowa 308, 20 Am. Rep. 622.

Alteration by private individual under supervision of city.—Where a city grants permission to a person, and appropriates money to aid him, to alter, under the supervision of the city engineer, the course of a sewer over which it has assumed control, and such alteration is negligently made, so as to cause the water and excrement to back up and flow into a private cellar, the city is liable for the damages resulting therefrom. Chalkley v. Richmond, 88 Va. 402, 14 S. E. 339, 29 Am. St. Rep. 730.

Circumstances not amounting to negligent construction.—Where the specifications for grading a street provided for a dry wall, but gave the abutting owners the privilege of constructing a wall of masonry, and the contractor was willing to lay the wall opposite plaintiff's premises in cement, but laid a dry wall because of plaintiff's refusal to pay for the cement, it was held that an action could not be maintained against the municipality for negligence in constructing a wall which allowed water to percolate through it. Watson v. Kingston, 114 N. Y. 88, 21 N. E. 102.

Even where municipal liability for defective streets is denied (see infra, XIV, D, 1) the courts generally recognize and enforce the rule stated in the text with regard to sewers. See Lockwood v. Dover, 73 N. H. 209, 61 Atl. 32.

Jurisdiction of aldermen no excuse.—The negligent omission of a city to make a sewer safe and tight so as not to injure neighboring property cannot be excused on the ground that jurisdiction as to the construction and location of sewers is vested in the aldermen when it does not appear that they ever exercised such jurisdiction, but on the contrary they left the matter entirely to the superintendent of streets. Allen v. Boston, 159 Mass. 324, 34 N. E. 159, 38 Am. St. Rep. 423.

Fault or neglect of municipality must be shown.—A municipal corporation can be made liable only upon proof of some fault or neglect on its part, either in the construction of the sewer or in the keeping of it in repair. Kidson v. Bangor, 99 Me. 139, 58 Atl. 900; Smith v. New York, 66 N. Y. 295, 23 Am.

bility on the ground that the negligent act caused the water to flow where it did originally.⁵⁴ A city has been held liable for damages to property by the collapse of a culvert which it was the duty of the city to maintain, although such collapse was caused by the imperfect construction of a bank by a corporation other than the city.⁵⁵ A city is not primarily liable for an obstruction of drainage by an individual or private corporation; ⁵⁶ but it becomes liable where, after having notice of the obstruction, it does not either compel its removal or itself remove the obstruction or provide an outlet,⁵⁷ and this notwithstanding it did not cause or authorize the obstruction.⁵⁸

5. SEWERS OR DRAINS CAUSING LIABILITY. In order to entitle a person to damages for the failure of a municipality to perform the duty imposed upon it by statute, to properly maintain and keep in repair its public drains and sewers, plaintiff must establish that the drain in question is a public drain or sewer, legally established by the act of the municipal officers.⁵⁹ The drain or sewer complained of must be under the control of the municipality,⁶⁰ and one which it is the duty of the municipality to maintain and keep in repair;⁶¹ and a city is not liable for damage caused by the obstruction of a private drain because it has permitted such drain to be connected with a city sewer.⁶² Municipal control of the drain or sewer complained of is sufficient to render the municipality liable for defects or obstructions therein,⁶³ and it is not necessary that the municipality should have con-

Statutes giving to drainage commissioners the entire charge and control of sewers, and providing that such commissioners may sue and be sued, do not relieve the municipality from liability for a nuisance arising from the manner in which a sewer is maintained. Bolton v. New Rochelle, 84 Hun (N. Y.) 281, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 442 [following In re Smiddy, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 949].

58. Powers v. Council Bluffs, 50 Iowa 197, holding that, where a city has notice of the construction of improvements which obstruct a sewer, the city is liable for injuries caused by the negligent or improper construction, notwithstanding the city council, which was charged with making the improvements, did not authorize the negligent acts to be done.

Notice of defects or obstructions see, generally, infra, XIV, D, 14.

60. Cochrane v. Malden, 152 Mass. 365, 25 N. E. 620; Robinson v. Danville, 101 Va. 213, 43 S. E. 337.

Railroad culverts.—A city is not liable for injuries caused by a sewer or culvert constructed by a railroad in or under a street for its own exclusive use. Indianapolis v. Lawyer, 38 Ind. 348; Stackhouse v. Lafayette, 26 Ind. 17, 89 Am. Dec. 450. And where a railroad company has included a portion of a street containing a culvert within the limits of its road so that the duty of maintaining both the street and the culvert has passed from the city to the railroad company, the city is not liable for damage subsequently caused by the insufficiency of the culvert. Lander v. Bath, 85 Me. 141, 26 Atl. 1091. But where a city granted a railroad company the right to construct and maintain along and on one of its streets an embankment, and required a sufficient culvert thereunder to carry off the natural drainage of the adjacent land, which was toward the street, and the culvert was insufficient, and as the city constructed a drain or ditch leading to the culvert, water accumulated at this point and overflowed plaintiff's land, the city, in causing the accumulation of water, without a sufficient outlet, was jointly liable with the railroad company for the damages caused. Kelly v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 28 Ind. App. 457, 63 N. E. 233, 91 Am. St. Rep. 134.

61. Lynch v. Clarke, 25 R. I. 495, 56 Atl. 779, holding that where a culvert was constructed by a municipal corporation to carry the water of a natural stream under a street, the only duty imposed upon the municipality was to receive the water of the stream at the point where its culvert commenced and carry it under the street to the lower end of the culvert, and it was not called upon to take care of a connecting culvert constructed by someone else to facilitate the flow of water to or through its culvert.

The administrative officers of a city have no authority to convert a private drain into a public sewer, nor to bind the city by any promise or admission in relation thereto. Kosmak v. New York, 117 N. Y. 361, 22 N. E. 945 [affirming 53 Hun 329, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 453].

structed,⁶⁴ or should be the owner of the drain or sewer.⁶⁵ The rule as to municipal liability for defects and obstructions in sewers and drains⁶⁶ remain the same whether a natural watercourse is adopted for drainage purposes or an artificial channel is built;⁶⁷ and so where a municipality converts a running stream into a sewer it is liable for damage resulting from neglect to keep it in proper condition.⁶⁸ But a municipality may connect its sewers and drains with any natural channel for the flow of water, without incurring liability to keep such channel open to its mouth.⁶⁹ The fact that a municipal sewer or drain is situated wholly or partly on private property does not relieve the municipality from liability for damages caused thereby;⁷⁰ but the fact that a city built and repaired a drain does not of itself impose on the city a duty to keep it in repair where the drain is on private property and is itself private property.⁷¹ The acquisition by a city of property on which is located a private drain does not make the drain a public sewer, or impose on the city the duty to remove obstructions for the benefit of a licensee.⁷² A covered drain leading from the gutter to a point under the middle of the sidewalk and thence to a culvert is a culvert within a statute making towns liable for injuries by reason of defects in culverts.⁷³ Where a city, for the sole purpose of abating the nuisance caused by the overflow of a lot after rains, either itself lays or requires or permits the lot owner under its supervision to lay a drain pipe in and across an adjacent street, and thereafter, in constructing a public

Where culverts built by a railroad company are adopted by a city for its use, the city is liable for injuries resulting from the culverts being out of repair or insufficient. Indianapolis v. Lawyer, 38 Ind. 348.

Where a city is negligent in repairing a sewer, by reason of which damage results, it is not relieved from liability by the fact that the sewer was originally constructed by the state. Chalkley v. Richmond, 88 Va. 402, 14 S. E. 339, 29 Am. St. Rep. 730.

Artificial substitute for natural channel.—The right or liability of the city is not changed by the fact that the state or the owners of the lots through which the natural watercourse passes have made an artificial and covered substitute in place of the natural channel. Munn v. Pittsburgh, 40 Pa. St. 364, holding that the fact that the municipality occasionally made repairs on the sewer substituted for the natural channel was no evidence of a voluntary assumption of the duty of maintaining it, and that the municipality was not liable for damages done to the lot owners, by the falling in of the old sewer substituted for the natural channel, unless the damage was caused by the negligence of its agents in connecting the sewer with the old one, or in not keeping its own sewer in order or in bringing into the old sewer such an additional quantity of water as to gorge and break it.

Salt Lake City*, 5 Utah 302, 16 Pac. 598, 3 Utah 63, 1 Pac. 160 (negligence with respect to public irrigating ditch).

The fact that the city has no right to enter on private property to repair the drain or sewer is no excuse. Netzer v. Crookston City, 59 Minn. 244, 61 N. W. 21. But compare McCaffrey v. Albany, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 613.

sewer, destroys this drain pipe so that water again accumulates upon the lot, the owner cannot recover from the city for such damages.⁷⁴

6. DEGREE OF CARE REQUIRED. Ordinary care and diligence is the standard of municipal duty in the construction and maintenance of sewers and drains,⁷⁵ by which is meant such as a man of average prudence and discretion would exercise to protect his own property under like conditions;⁷⁶ and the care and foresight to be exercised should be in proportion to the magnitude of the injury likely to result from its omission.⁷⁷ In the construction of municipal improvements a city is not required to provide against phenomenal floods which are beyond reasonable anticipation;⁷⁸ but it is required to guard against floods such as have occasionally occurred and which may be reasonably expected to occur again, and failing to make such provision it is liable for the consequences of its negligence.⁷⁹

7. INADEQUACY OF SEWERS AND DRAINS — a. In General. The general rule is that a municipality is not liable in damages for the inadequacy of a drain or sewer when such inadequacy is due to an error of judgment committed by a municipal body clothed with discretion to determine the width and depth of drains and sewers;⁸⁰ and a fortiori where sewers or drains were sufficient when constructed

The municipality is not an insurer of the condition of its various appliances for the comfort and convenience of its inhabitants, and hence is not liable for damages for a defect in a sewer where it was guilty of no negligence in the matter and remedied the defect as soon as there was reason to suppose that it existed. *Weidman v. Changes in season.—The ordinary diligence to be used by city authorities to prevent injury from a canal constituting a part of its sewer system extends not only to keeping up the existing banks of a drain but also to keeping it open and in a suitable condition to protect adjoining landowners, in view of the ordinary and usual changes at different seasons of the year. *Savannah v. the municipality is not liable if they subsequently become insufficient by reason of increase of population,⁸¹ the improvement of lots by individual owners,⁸² or the greater extent of property graded and built on.⁸³ There is, however, authority for the view that where the plan adopted is obviously insufficient the municipality is liable for resulting damage;⁸⁴ and where a municipality has built a sewer or drain and by reason of the insufficiency thereof a nuisance is created, the municipality is liable in damages,⁸⁵ if after notice of the nuisance it fails to adopt and execute such measures as are necessary to remove the nuisance.⁸⁶ So also where a city constructs improvements so as to throw upon land more surface water than would flow upon it naturally,⁸⁷ or obstructs the natural flow of a stream or diverts it into artificial channels,⁸⁸ the city is bound to provide adequate means of caring for the flow of water so that it will not be cast upon the property of individuals; and if it fails to do so it is liable in damages, upon the theory that in such case the fixing of the dimensions of the necessary culverts or sewers is a ministerial act.⁸⁹ So also where a city, after the construction of a storm sewer in certain streets, changes the established grade of adjoining streets so as to turn additional water into the sewer, overtaking its capacity, the city is liable for injury to adjoining property-owners caused by the water backing up from the sewer;⁹⁰ and a city which undertakes to improve a stream is liable for injury caused by its delay in providing a sufficient outlet into the sea to carry off the water which by its work upon the upper part of the stream has been increased in volume beyond the natural flow.⁹¹ It has also been held that where a city undertakes to build a sewer and compels objecting property-owners to pay the sums assessed against them for that purpose, it becomes bound to use due care to so construct it with reference to its size and fall and the inlets that it will carry away the drainage for the designated district, and if in the case of an ordinary natural rainfall the sewer proves insufficient it may be inferred that there was negligence in the construction thereof, and the city is liable for the resulting damage.⁹² Where the municipality has prescribed the capacity of a drain or sewer and it is not constructed as directed,⁹³ or where it is constructed in a negligent or unskillful manner,⁹⁴ the municipality is liable for any damages caused thereby, as is also the case where the sewer or drain becomes inadequate through becoming obstructed or in need of repair.⁹⁵

b. Storm Overflow. There is no municipal liability for insufficiency of sewers or drains to carry off surplus water from an unprecedented or extraordinary storm,⁹⁶ especially where such drains or sewers are amply sufficient to meet all ing out this street, or upon the route thereof to be adopted, or the grade to be established, the city was exercising judicial duties, for errors of judgment in the performance of which they would not be responsible; but, having determined these matters, and having decided it expedient to obstruct the natural channel of these waters, and to divert them into another and artificial channel, then, in executing and carrying this out, including the construction of the sewer and fixing upon its size or capacity, they were exercising purely ministerial duties, in the performance of which they are held to the exercise of reasonable care⁹⁷); *Young v. Statute imposing liability as insurer.—Me. Rev. St. c. 16, § 9, providing that "after a public drain is constructed and any person has paid for connecting with it, it shall be constantly maintained and kept in repair by the town, so as to afford sufficient and suitable flow for all drainage entitled to pass through it," imposed upon the city in such a case the liability of an insurer, which could not be affected by proof that the rains caus-

demands upon them under ordinary conditions.⁹⁷ In order to give a stream or body of water the character of an extraordinary flow it is not necessary that it should be the greatest flow within memory, but its character in this respect is to be tested by comparison with the usual volume of floods ordinarily occurring.⁹⁸ Where the negligence of the city was the proximate or immediate cause of an overflow causing damage, the city cannot escape liability because there were extraordinary rainfalls or freshets at the time;⁹⁹ and it has been held that where the negligence of a city in failing to keep its sewers open contributed to the damage to property, it is liable, although the rain causing the damage was of an extraordinary character.¹ But there is also authority for the view that even if there is negligence concurring with an extraordinary flood, a municipality is relieved from liability if the flow is so voluminous in character that it would of itself have produced the injury complained of independently of such negligence.²

8. CREATION OF NUISANCE.³ If a municipal drain or sewer is so constructed or maintained as to amount to a nuisance, the municipality is liable in damages therefor.⁴ So where a stream is adopted by a city as a storm water sewer, but subsequently householders in the vicinity, with the knowledge of the municipal officers, although without formal leave of the city, connect their closets and waste-pipes with the sewer, by reason of which it becomes a nuisance, the city is liable.⁵ A city cannot escape liability because the refuse dumped into the man-hole of a sewer near plaintiff's premises, emitting noxious odors therefrom, was not emptied there by the city itself but by certain persons whom the city had licensed to use the sewer in that way.⁶

9. INJURY THROUGH PRIVATE DRAIN CONNECTING WITH PUBLIC SEWER. It has been held that a city is not liable where the injury complained of was suffered through ing the overflow of the sewer were unusually severe. Blood v. Bangor, 66 Me. 154.

A contract by a city with a proprietor whose lands adjoin a county ditch, found to be inadequate for the city sewage emptied therein, to straighten and enlarge the ditch through his premises, so as to provide for carrying off all the waters without saturating or overflowing his land, and to keep the ditch in repair and maintain a good bridge across it on such owner's premises, and not to obstruct or injure cross ditches, cannot be construed as obligating the city to provide against unexpected and extraordinary floods, or to put such adjoining proprietor in any better condition than he would have been in if the ditch had remained as it was without the extra city flowage. *Coldwater v. plaintiff's connecting a private drain with a public sewer,⁷ especially where the injury is due to the connection being defective,⁸ or where the connection was unauthorized.⁹ But it has also been held that there is something very like a contract to be implied from the construction of a sewer, at the expense of the adjacent property, that it may be used to drain the property thus charged with its construction, and it would seem that the adjacent property holders have a right to open drains into it, and in a suit by such adjacent property holder, who has opened his drain into the sewer upon his own responsibility, and whose premises have been flooded by backwater through the drain in a freshet, a verdict giving him damages must be sustained.¹⁰

10. ABANDONMENT OF DRAIN OR SEWER. Where a city makes provision by sewers for carrying off surface water it may not abandon the same when it leaves the lot owner in a worse condition than he would have been in if the city had not constructed the sewer;¹¹ but where a city, by the abandonment of a sewer, does not leave individuals in any worse condition than they would be in if such sewer had never been made, the city is not liable for an injury to such persons caused by the flow of surface water.¹² In a case where a city discontinued an old sewer and built a new one, and sometime afterward walled up the old sewer without notice to or knowledge of plaintiffs, which caused the sewage to back into plaintiff's cellar, it was held that the city was liable unless it took reasonable precautions to avoid injury to plaintiff.¹³

11. WATERCOURSES.¹⁴ Unless such duty is imposed by charter or other statute a municipality is not bound to keep a stream flowing within the city limits in safe condition or free from obstructions,¹⁵ or to protect private property from overflow

7. Roll v. Indianapolis, 52 Ind. 547 (so holding where the damage could be avoided by closing up the private drain); Sheriff v. Oskaloosa, 120 Iowa 442, 94 N. W. 904; Dermont v. Detroit, 4 Mich. 435 (holding that the city was not liable for injury caused by water backing up through such drain into plaintiff's cellar, notwithstanding the fact that plaintiff paid an annual assessment to the city for the privilege of making the connection). But compare Evers v. Long Island City, 78 Hun (N. Y.) 242, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 825, holding that where a sewer maintained by a city is so constructed that it causes water to flow back into cellars connected with it the city is liable. And see infra, XIV, C, 15.

8. Wilson v. Waterbury, 73 Conn. 416, 47 Atl. 687, where the damage might have been avoided by plaintiff properly placing a check valve in his drain.

Voluntary connection by city.—A city is not liable for damages resulting from the negligent construction of the connection between a private sewer and the main public sewer, where it was not the duty of the city or its officers to make such connection, but the board of public works voluntarily made it to replace a prior connection which had been broken by the lowering of the main sewer. Streiff v. Milwaukee, 39 Wis. 218, 61 N. W. 770.

9. Breuck v. Holyoke, 167 Mass. 258, 45 N. E. 732; Ranlett v. Lowell, 126 Mass. 431 (holding that one who builds a private drain and connects it with a public sewer without a permit of the board of aldermen, as required by an ordinance of the city, cannot recover for an injury caused by an overflow of the sewer through the drain, although such overflow is caused by the negligence of the city); Dasher v. Harrisburg, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 79.

Ratification of unauthorized connection.—In an action against a city for damages caused by the flooding of plaintiff's house with water flowing back from the city sewer through the connecting pipe, the fact that a city contractor, when laying pavement, moved the connecting pipe and then put it back again, does not amount to such a ratification on the part of the city of plaintiff's action in connecting with the sewer as to estop the city from proving that the connection was made without the city's permission, in violation of a penal ordinance. Atlanta v. Word, 78 Ga. 276.

St. Rep. 558, 3 L. R. A. N. S. 1053. See also Loughran v. Des Moines, 72 Iowa 382, 34 N. W. 172.

A mere grant of authority to remove obstructions in a river does not impose the by such stream.¹⁶ And the municipality assumes no new liability by voluntarily undertaking to remove obstructions,¹⁷ or to protect lands from overflow.¹⁸ But a city is liable if it commences to remove obstructions and proceeds in such an improper manner that damage results.¹⁹ Urban as well as rural landowners have rights appurtenant and burdens incident to riparian ownership, and a municipality may not impair the former or increase the latter with impunity.²⁰ So a riparian proprietor has a right of action against a municipal corporation for materially diverting in any manner from his premises the course of a running stream,²¹ or for causing, to his injury, a material increase in the natural flow of a watercourse on or through his premises;²² and the municipality is liable in damages to any proprietor for the injury caused by obstructing or turning a watercourse from its natural channel and causing it to overflow his premises,²³ unless such over-duty to do so. Goodrich v. Chicago, 20 Ill. 445.

The Hudson river is a highway for the passage of vessels, but it is not a highway of the city of New York, and the city is under no obligation to remove obstructions therefrom or to keep it safe for navigation. Seaman v. New York, 80 N. Y. 239, 36 Am. Rep. 612.

The city of Albany is not responsible to property-owners on account of an obstruction in the Hudson river, within the city limits, where such obstruction was not caused by the city. Coonly v. Albany, 132 N. Y. 145, 30 N. E. 382 [affirming 57 Hun 327, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 512].

No. 5,542, 4 Biss. 18 [affirmed in 5 Wall. 566, 18 L. ed. 511], holding that if a city undertakes to remove obstructions from a river which it is under no legal obligation to remove, and abandons the work without having changed the status of the obstruction, it does not become liable for subsequent damages caused by such obstruction.

18. Hamilton v. Ashbrook, 62 Ohio St. 511, 57 N. E. 239, holding that when there is no duty imposed upon a city to make any provision to protect lands from overflow by the waters of a river, it is not liable because of the inadequacy of provisions which it has seen fit to make.

flow was caused by extraordinary floods, the municipality having constructed its bridge, wall, or other improvement in such way as not to prove a noxious obstruction in ordinary high water.²⁴ The fact that the acts causing the overflow and damage were done by the municipality for the purpose of protecting its streets and the property of its citizens from damage does not relieve it from liability,²⁵ nor does the fact that a dam across a stream was constructed by a municipality under legislative authority relieve the municipality from liability for negligently allowing the stream to become obstructed and thus overflow and injure adjoining land.²⁶ A city is not liable in damages to the owner of land upon a stream for an obstruction to the flow of the water caused by the surface wash from the streets of such city, where such wash is the necessary and incidental result of the growth of the city and the construction of the streets;²⁷ or by deposits from underground sewers, where such deposit is less injurious than the natural flow of water would have been if the sewers had not been built;²⁸ or by the defective construction of a bridge built by a railroad corporation under authority of its charter, although it is used for public travel in connection with the highway;²⁹ or by a bridge built by the city, where it has become injurious since its erection solely because of the acts and trespasses of other corporations and individuals, which have altered the original character of the stream, and not by reason of natural causes or such as might reasonably have been anticipated at its erection.³⁰ Nor is a city liable for an overflow of a stream into which it drains surface water, where the drain does not increase the flow beyond what could be accommodated by the watercourse in

The stream need not be a permanent or constantly running one in order to subject a city to liability for damage caused by damming up such stream and thereby flooding the lands of others. Rose v. St. Charles, 49 Mo. 509.

The fact that a board of commissioners created by statute has control of a highway does not relieve the municipality of liability for damage caused by the inadequacy of a culvert over a stream, when the municipality had knowledge of such inadequacy and a reasonable opportunity to remedy it. *Clair v. its natural condition, and the overflow is the result of plaintiff's having unduly narrowed and obstructed the stream.³¹ In the case of an artificial watercourse, such as a culvert, a person who has acquired no right therein by prescription or contract cannot recover for an injury to his property caused by closing up such culvert in repairing a highway in a proper and suitable manner.³² A municipality is not liable for the obstruction of a passage of water through a culvert under a highway, which causes the water to overflow the land of an adjoining owner, where the obstruction is caused by a railroad company that owns land adjoining the highway, in filling up a ravine on their land which constituted the natural channel for the water from the culvert under the highway.³³ The mere failure of a municipality to compel the restoration to its natural channel of a stream which has been diverted by an individual is not of itself such evidence of an adoption or ratification of the wrong as will make the municipality liable as a trespasser ab initio.³⁴

12. SURFACE WATER.³⁵ Surface water is a common enemy, which every proprietor must fight for himself so long as it takes its natural course,³⁶ and a municipality is under no obligation to prevent the natural flow of surface water,³⁷ or to protect individual property-owners therefrom,³⁸ even though they may be so unfortunate as to own property below the level of the street,³⁹ or to provide means for carrying off surface water collecting upon private property.⁴⁰ A city

As to mere surface water running down a street in no confined channel, the dominant proprietor may divert it and turn it upon the servient land without liability. Stewart v. Clinton, 79 Mo. 603; Imler v. Springfield, 55 Mo. 119, 17 Am. Rep. 645.

Construction of street railway.—A city is liable for injuries caused to private property by a diversion of surface water thereon by the construction of a street railway which it has authorized to be built. It is bound to provide waterways sufficient to carry off the water that might be reasonably expected to accumulate. Damour v. Lyons City, 44 Iowa 276.

Obstruction of definite channel.—The general rule that a municipal corporation in the grading and improvement of streets is not bound to provide for the escape of mere surface water has an exception where the surface water, owing to the conformation of the adjoining country, has formed for itself a definite channel in which it is accustomed to flow, although such channel does not come within the common-law definition of a water-course, and if the municipality obstructs such channel it is bound to provide for the escape of the water. Conn. Gen. St. p. 233, § 16, providing that "persons authorized to construct or repair highways, may make or clear any water-

erty,⁴² or surface water which formerly flowed in another direction is diverted upon property below the new grade.⁴³ But other authorities hold that a city is liable in damages where it so changes the grade of a street as to prevent the natural flow of surface water from the street and divert it on to plaintiff's property.⁴⁴ And it has also been held that where a municipality in the construction of ditches and sewers in the improvement of streets causes a large quantity of surface water which naturally flowed in another direction to be diverted to flow on to plaintiff's property in destructive quantities, the municipality is liable for the damage done whether or not the work was done negligently.⁴⁵ Where a city by unlawfully raising a street above the established grade causes surface water to flow on or to accumulate upon an abutting lot, it is liable to the lot owner for the injury occasioned thereby.⁴⁶ A municipal corporation has no right to collect surface water in artificial channels and throw it upon the land of an individual, and if it does so it is liable for the damage so caused.⁴⁷ And so a city is liable in damages course, or place for draining off the water therefrom, into or through any person's land, so far as necessary to drain off such water," reenacted in 1881 (Sess. Laws (1881), p. 34, c. 65), with the further provision that the work shall be done in such a way as to do the least damage to such land, exempts a municipality from liability unless it appears that the work was done in such a way as to do unnecessary damage, or that the water was drained into some place prohibited by statute. Bronson v. Wallingford, 54 Conn. 513, 9 Atl. 393.

Conduit for drainage of private land.—The rule that a municipality is not liable in tort if, in the performance of its duty to keep a highway safe and convenient for travel, it diverts water upon neighboring land, is not applicable in the case of damage caused by a conduit laid and built to drain a large body of land mostly in private ownership. *Westcott v. Under the provision of the Alabama constitution requiring that municipal corporations shall "make just compensation for the property taken, injured, or destroyed by the construction or enlargement of its works, highways, or improvements," a town is liable for damages caused by so changing the grade of a street as to prevent the natural flow of water from adjacent lots. Avondale v. McFarland, 101 Ala. 381, 13 So. 504 [adopting opinion of Somerville, J., in Montgomery v. Maddox, 89 Ala. 181, 7 So. 433, and overruling *Montgomery v. In Illinois it is held that a city is liable for injuries to a building from flowage of surface water occasioned by a change in the grade of the street (Dixon v. Baker, 65 Ill. 518, 16 Am. Rep. 591; Aurora v. Reed, 57 Ill. 29, 11 Am. Rep. 1. See also Shawneetown v. Mason, 82 Ill. 337, 25 Am. Rep. 321), if the injury could have been prevented by proper sewage (Dixon v. Baker, supra), and the fact that a sewer is provided for the purpose does not relieve the city from liability where through a negligent error of judgment it is wholly insufficient (Dixon v. Baker, supra).

No liability where burden not increased.—

The owner of a servient tenement subject to the easement of surface water flow has no action for injury caused by overflow of a sewer from a freshet when the burden is no greater than would be borne by the premises in a natural state. Watson v. Kingston, 114 N. Y. 88, 21 N. E. 102.

Ponding on adjacent property.—Where a city, in grading a street, turns water on an adjacent lot, creating an unwholesome pond, rendering the premises unhealthy and unfit for the business for which they have been used, it is liable for damages for such injury. *Nevins v. is liable to one whose premises are flooded by a brook or ditch in consequence of surface water being emptied into it by the city through drains, when sufficient provision is not made to carry off the surplus water,⁴⁹ but the owner of a swamp which is the natural place of deposit of surface water cannot complain because the city drains such waters into the swamp by a system of sewers after the swamp has been improved.⁵⁰ But a municipal corporation which has increased the flow of surface water in a certain direction is bound only to exercise reasonable care in providing means for carrying off the surplus water,⁵¹ and is not an insurer against unprecedented floods or cloud bursts.⁵² A municipality has been held not liable for discharging surface water through one of its street culverts into a ditch on plaintiff's land, where that was the natural course of the surface water, the culvert was necessary, and the ditch and culvert, both properly constructed, had existed for more than twenty years.⁵³ Where property is injured by surface water by reason of the negligence of a municipality in constructing or maintaining its municipal improvements, the municipality is liable.⁵⁴

Enlargement of drainage area through conforming streets to established grade.—Where the quantity of surface water sent to the point where it is discharged on plaintiff's land is increased by an enlargement of the area of drainage, but such enlargement results entirely from making the grade of the street conform to the grade established by the proper city authorities, any injury resulting from the increase in the quantity of water discharged is damnum absque injuria. See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1787.

A municipality which adopts a natural watercourse as an open sewer is bound to keep the channel of the stream open and to prevent the accumulation of filth, and is liable to respond in damages for any injury which may be done to riparian owners in consequence of its acts or negligence. Glasgow v. Altoona, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 55. But compare O'Donnell v. Syracuse, 184 N. Y. 1, 76 N. E. 738, 112 Am. St. Rep. 558, 3 L. R. A. N. S. 1042 [reversing 102 N. Y. App. Div. 80, 92 N. Y. Discharge at some distance from watercourse.—The fact that sewage from a municipal sewer system is discharged at a point some distance from a watercourse, and near a creek which flows into such watercourse, and down which the sewage is carried, does not exempt the municipality from liability for damages to a lower riparian owner. San Antonio v. Pizzini, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 58 S. W. 635.

Use of sewer by third persons.—It is no defense that the injury arises from the use of the sewer by third persons, who connect their houses with it, and discharge sewage into it. Stoddard v. Saratoga Springs, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 745 [affirmed in 127 N. Y. 261, 27 N. E. 1030].

Limitation of right of recovery.—Where the water of a stream which a riparian proprietor has been in the habit of using in his business has become polluted by the emptying into it of city sewers, he cannot recover against the city for pollution, so far as it is attributable to the plan of sewerage adopted by the city; but he can recover for it so far as it is attributable to the improper construction or unreasonable use of the sewers, or to the negligence or other fault of the city in the care or management of them.

and the air,⁶⁷ and creating foul and offensive odors,⁶⁸ or causing the deposit of filth on the banks,⁶⁹ and rendering property in the vicinity unfit for use or occupation,⁷⁰ or interfering with the comfortable use, occupation, and enjoyment thereof⁷¹ without acquiring the right to do so by some lawful means, as by purchase or condemnation.⁷² And the city cannot escape liability, because under its statutory powers it might have condemned the land injured, where such land was not in fact condemned.⁷³ The right of a municipality to construct an outfall for a sewer into the sea does not include the right to create a nuisance public or private, but is a right to make deposits temporarily, and not a right to permanently obstruct navigation or the use of wharves,⁷⁴ and so a city is liable for injury caused by discharging its sewage into or near docks or ferry slips whereby the same are obstructed or filled up with sand, dirt, and refuse, and the use thereof prevented or interfered with.⁷⁵ The fact that a sewer is built or extended under legislative authority does not relieve the city from liability for emptying the sewage into a stream so as to impede navigation or create a nuisance.⁷⁶ Where the discharge of sewage into a stream is a continuing nuisance, equity may give relief by injunction;⁷⁷ but where the city is endeavoring to remove or obviate the objections to the sewer, it is proper to suspend the injunction for a reasonable time.⁷⁸

14. NOTICE OF DEFECTS OR OBSTRUCTIONS. A municipality may be held liable without notice for injuries caused by defects or obstructions in its drains or sewers where they are due to negligence in construction,⁷⁹ or in failing to guard against or remove defects or obstructions.⁸⁰ But in the absence of negligence the municipi-

15. RIGHT TO REMEDY OR RELIEF. A person cannot recover damages sustained by him from sewage which enters upon his land from an old sewer through a sewer or pipe built on his own land by the municipality with his knowledge and assent if not at his request.⁸⁷ But the fact that the property-owner gave the city permission to build a sewer through his property does not work an estoppel upon him to sue the city for damages resulting from its improper construction and negligent use, where the consent was to a mere overflow sewer, and the sewer, as completed, is one used for the constant discharge of noxious sewage.⁸⁸ Neither does a property-owner waive his right to damages for the overflowing of his land by reason of the construction of a levee by favoring the work and offering to give the right of way for the levee, or by afterward refusing to give such right of way until the levee is extended so as to protect his lowlands.⁸⁹ Where the Repeated flooding from sewer.—Where the section of the city in which plaintiff's property is located has been repeatedly flooded from a sewer so obstructed as to be inadequate, prior to the injury complained of, this warrants a conclusion that the city might by the exercise of reasonable care have discovered the cause of the trouble. 84. Nichols v. Boston, 98 Mass. 39, 93 Am. Dec. 132, holding that notice to the mayor of a city of an obstruction of a dock constituting a nuisance is sufficient to bind the city and render it liable for a continuance of the nuisance.

85. Daggett v. Cohoes, 5 Silv. Sup. (N. Y.) 183, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 882, holding that notice to defendant's street superintendent and mayor that water was running into plaintiff's cellar, followed by evidence that the superintendent thought that defendant should clean out the cellar, was sufficient to warrant a finding that defendant had notice of the obstructed condition of the sewer from which the water was alleged to have been discharged; the court having charged the jury that defendant need exercise only ordinary care to ascertain the existence of the obstruction.

structure or work complained of was completed before plaintiff purchased the property claimed to be injured, and there has been no change in the structure or increase of the injury caused thereby since his purchase, plaintiff cannot recover,⁹⁰ especially where the structure was so placed at the request of a former owner of the property;⁹¹ but it has been held that the acquiescence of plaintiff's grantor in an injury in the nature of a nuisance will not preclude a recovery by plaintiff for injury occurring since he acquired title, where the acts of the prior owner were not such as to subject the property to a servitude.⁹² One who is not a riparian proprietor upon a brook or ditch has no cause of complaint against the city for interfering with the natural flow thereof, increasing the volume or polluting it, if his premises are not flooded thereby.⁹³ The fact that a person voluntarily connected his house with a sewer does not estop him from suing the municipality for a nuisance arising from the maintenance of the sewer,⁹⁴ nor does the fact that a lower riparian owner who is injured by the discharge of the sewerage of a city into a stream owns property in the city which, pursuant to its ordinance, drains into the sewers and thus into the stream, show such contribution on his part to the injury as to deprive him of the right to equitable relief.⁹⁵ The fact that plaintiff's premises are not directly connected with a sewer does not prevent his recovering damages sustained by him through the negligent construction or maintenance of the sewer.⁹⁶ One who has thwarted the efforts or rejected the offer of a municipality to redress or prevent the injury in a proper manner cannot recover for subsequent damages,⁹⁷ or obtain relief by injunction.⁹⁸ A landowner's payment

New Orleans*, 40 La. Ann. 806, 6 So. 100 (holding that a property-owner cannot sustain an action against the city for damages resulting from the alleged construction of a ditch near her property, which at all times was filled with water and overflowed its banks, rendering her property valueless, where the precise condition existing when she brought the action existed at the date of her acquisition of the property, and had existed for many years).

Agreement releasing damages.—An agreement not to make any claim against a city for damages occasioned by the construction, use, or existence of a sewer, in consideration of being allowed to make a connection with such sewer, made under R. I. Pub. Laws (1873), c. 313, § 5, requiring a release of all damages, while not technically a release, operates as such. King v. Granger, 21 R. I. 93, 41 Atl. 1012, 79 Am. St. Rep. 779, holding, however, that such release did not relieve the city from liability for injuries from an overflow caused by a subsequent change in the established grade of certain streets, so as to turn additional water into the sewer, overtaking its capacity.

In Maine the statute gives a right of action against a town for failure to maintain and keep in repair a public sewer only to those who have a right to connect with or to have drainage through it (Evans v. Portland, 97 Me. 509, 54 Atl. 1107 [citing Me. Rev. St. c. 16, § 9 (Me. Rev. St. (1903) c. 21, § 18)]), but nevertheless it has been held that upon obvious principles of justice one whose property has been injured by a neglect to keep a sewer in repair is entitled to recover for such injury, although he is not entitled to drainage through such sewer (Hamlin v. Biddeford, 95 Me. 308, 49 Atl. 1100).

97. Kensington v. Wood, 10 Pa. St. 93, 49 Am. Dec. 582, holding that where the owner of property damaged by a change of grade, which diverts the water upon his premises, rejects an offer of the municipality to construct a culvert for the purpose of carrying off the water, he cannot recover for subsequent injuries which would thereby have been prevented.

of an assessment made by a municipal corporation for the construction of a sewer, which he had reason to suppose would be emptied, when completed, where it would be lawful to empty it, cannot be deemed an assent by him to the unlawful discharge of the sewerage upon his land, and will not affect his right of action therefor as a nuisance.⁹⁹ The owner of an unfinished building may recover from a city damages to such building caused by defective sewerage, although the contractor was bound by his contract to deliver a completed building, notwithstanding such injury.¹ Where the improper construction of a sewer is a temporary wrong liable to be removed at any time, plaintiff cannot recover on the ground that the sewer permanently diminishes the value of his estate.² Where it is the duty of a company to keep a raceway leading to its works in repair, although it does not own the way itself, if a city so constructs a sewer as to deposit dirt and gravel in the raceway and obstructs the flow of water therein, and the company is compelled to expend money to remove such obstruction, an action lies in its favor against the city to recover the money so expended.³ Where matters complained of are in the nature of a public nuisance, an individual property-owner seeking relief or redress must show that he has sustained some special injury different from that sustained by the general public.⁴

Massachusetts.—Breed v. Lynn, 126 Mass. 367 (holding that the owner of a wharf and dock, who dredges out a channel from his dock over flats belonging to other persons and lying between high and low water mark, cannot in a private suit recover damages from a city for an injury to the channel by the discharge of sewage from a common sewer into the dock, whereby the channel is partly filled up and the owner put to additional expense in getting vessels to his wharf, although he dredged out the channel openly and with a claim of right, the court saying: "The injuries to them did not differ in kind from those suffered by other persons owning lands bounding on the harbor or navigating over the flats, and the remedy must be sought by indictment for an injury to the public right of navigation, and not by private suit"); Brayton v. Fall River, 113 Mass. 218, 18 Am. Rep. 470 (holding that the owner of a wharf on a tide-water creek cannot maintain an action for an illegal obstruction to the creek, this being a common damage to all who use it; but he can maintain an action for an obstruction adjoining the wharf which prevents vessels from lying at it in the accustomed manner, this being a particular damage).

In New Jersey the rule is that the neglect of a municipal corporation to perform, or its negligence in the performance of, a public duty imposed upon it by law, is a public wrong to be remedied by indictment, and cannot constitute the basis of a civil action by an individual who has suffered particular damage by reason of such neglect (Waters v. Newark, 56 N. J. L. 361, 28 Atl. 717 [affirmed in 57 N. J. L. 456, 35 Atl. 1131], holding that permitting a sewer to become so defective as to overflow adjacent lots was a public wrong, to be remedied by indictment, and did not give rise to a civil action by an individual who had been injured thereby, and that the fact that an individual specially injured gave notice to the municipal authorities is of no avail if the special injury was in fact part of an indictable offense. See also Jersey City v. Kiernan, 50 N. J. L. 246, 13 Atl. 170), but where such public misfeasance has resulted not in the creation of a public nuisance for which an indictment would lie, but solely in the infliction of a private injury to the property of an individual, the remedy therefor is by a private action by the party damaged (Jersey City v. Kiernan, supra. See also Waters v. Newark, supra), and hence, in any given case of special damage the question as to the right of civil action is narrowed down to the inquiry whether such damage is or is not a part of a public wrong, for which an indictment would lie (Waters v. Newark, supra).

The water of the Passaic river, where the tide ebbs and flows, belongs to the state,

16. PROXIMATE CAUSE. There must be some direct and immediate connection between the negligence of a city and the damage complained of in order to render the city liable for such damage.⁵ But where the negligence of the municipality is the direct cause of the injury it is liable, although other causes may have contributed thereto;⁶ but the liability in such case is limited to the damage which it has caused and does not extend to the entire damage.⁷

17. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.⁸ Where the negligence of plaintiff has contributed to the injury of which he complains he cannot recover;⁹ and as a property-owner must exercise reasonable care to protect his property against injury,¹⁰ if plaintiff could have prevented the injury complained of by the use of ordinary diligence and efforts, and at a moderate expense, his failure to do so constitutes for uses common to all its citizens; and the city of Newark has no such special rights in that water, either by reason of its riparian ownership on the river, or by grant from the state, as to enable it to show an injury, distinct from that which will be suffered by the other inhabitants of the state, to authorize it to maintain its individual suit to restrain the pollution of the Passaic river by the discharge of the sewers of a town situated higher up the stream. Newark Aqueduct Bd. v. Passaic, 45 N. J. Eq. 393, 18 Atl. 106 [affirmed in 46 N. J. Eq. 552, 20 Atl. 54, 22 Atl. 55].

5. Kansas City v. Brady, 52 Kan. 297, 34 Pac. 884, 39 Am. 6. Frostburg v. Dufty, 70 Md. 47, 16 Atl. 642 (holding that the fact that a person's house is built on ground made by filling up a dry run, thus obstructing the natural outlet for the surface water from the surrounding hills, does not preclude him from recovering for the negligence of a city in the construction of a sewer to which surface water diverted from certain streets is conveyed, by reason of which such surface water is dammed up and floods his premises); Constitution Wharf Co. v. Boston, 156 Mass. 397, 30 N. E. 1134 (holding that where plaintiff had a right to erect wharves, and artificially deepen its docks, it is not barred from recovery from the city for filling up its docks with sewage because such use of its property changed somewhat the currents of the tide, and made the matter negligently discharged by the city from its sewers accumulate in larger quantities than it otherwise would have done).

Ordinance requiring abutting owner to keep gutters in repair.—A city ordinance requiring lot owners to keep the gutters opposite their premises in repair and free from obstructions applies only to the ordinary open gutters, and not to blind ditches or culverts covered with planking and soil, and hence a property-owner is not precluded from recovering for injuries from the obstruction of such a ditch or culvert on the ground that his neglect of duty caused the damage. Gilluly v. Madison, 63 Wis. 518, 24 N. W. 137, 53 Am. Rep. 299.

contributory negligence which precludes a recovery against the city.¹¹ But the fact that a cellar wall was not constructed so as to keep out sewage from a defective sewer would not indicate negligence preventing recovery against the city, where there is nothing to show that the owner knew of the defective condition of the sewer.¹² A property-owner is justified in building in conformity with the established grade of the street in front of his property and is not chargeable with negligence in so doing, although there is in the street an embankment above the grade,¹³ and the fact that a person has built his house on a lot below the grade of the street is not such negligence as will defeat his right to recover for the flooding of his property due to the negligence of the city.¹⁴ It is no defense to an action against a municipality for the overflowing of land from a highway that structures erected by defendant on his own land prevented water escaping from his land as quickly as it would otherwise have done.¹⁵ The mere occupation of an area constructed in the street is not contributory negligence precluding a recovery for an overflow of surface water.¹⁶ It is not negligence for a person to store in his cellar goods likely to be damaged by an inundation;¹⁷ nor is it, as a matter of law, contributory negligence for a property-owner to allow goods to remain in his cellar after the same has once been overflowed because of the obstruction of a sewer.¹⁸ In an action for damages for the flooding of plaintiff's brick yard, a finding that plaintiff's negligence contributed to a loss of wood piled near the stream, in that he should have anticipated from knowledge of prior floods that the material would be carried away and damaged, is not a finding that he was guilty of contributory negligence precluding a recovery for the expense incurred in restoring the yard.¹⁹

18. LIABILITY OF PRIVATE PERSONS. An individual who, or a corporation which, wrongfully or negligently obstructs or causes the obstruction of city drains, sewers, or gutters, is liable for the damage to property-owners whose property is overflowed by reason thereof.²⁰ But the inhabitants of a city who invoke its

W. 321, holding that plaintiff can recover only such damage as could not be avoided by such care and means. But compare Anrora v. Reed, 57 Ill. 29, 11 Am. Rep. 1, holding that it is no defense in an action against a city for the flooding of property by surface water from a street that plaintiff might have dug ditches or made other improvements which would have protected his property from injury, for he is under no legal obligation to perform a duty which devolves on the city.

Plaintiff is not entitled to recover anything under such circumstances, and hence an instruction that he may recover to the extent of what it would have cost him to take precautionary measures is erroneous. Hoehl v. Muscatine, 57 Iowa 444, 10 N. W. 830 [followed in Fulleam v. Muscatine, 57 Iowa 457, 10 N. W. 837].

What may be treated as a moderate expense will depend upon many considerations and must be determined by the peculiar circumstances of each case. Cooper v. Dallas, 83 Tex. 239, 18 S. W. 565, 29 Am. St. Rep. 645, holding that where, in an action against a city for injuries to property resulting from an overflow caused by a change of grade of a street and the deficiency of a sewer, it appeared that if plaintiff's premises had been raised to the new grade, at a cost of five hundred dollars, the overflow would have been prevented, and that the value of his property was greatly increased by the grading of the street, it was error to direct a verdict for defendant on the ground of plaintiff's contributory negligence.

power to construct and control a sewer and who use the sewer after its completion for the purpose and in the way prescribed by law, are not liable jointly with the city for the damages which result to third persons from the negligence of the city in the construction, management, or operation of the sewer.²¹ Where the grade of a street has been changed by a person owning property fronting on it and the street so changed has been for fifteen years acquiesced in and used as a highway, it will be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, in an action for damages caused by such change in obstructing a watercourse, that the change was made under the direction of the public authorities.²²

19. LIABILITY OF CONTRACTOR. An independent contractor doing work for a city is not liable for consequential damages where there was no negligence on the part of the city in creating the plan and fixing the location of the work, or on the part of the contractor in the construction of the work, and no departure from the plan adopted;²³ but the contractor is liable if there was negligence in a faulty plan and location of the work so as to make it a dangerous obstruction to a river which ordinary prudence should have guarded against.²⁴ A contractor engaged in the construction of a municipal improvement under the direction and control of the city is not liable for injuries resulting from alleged negligence in the work where the negligence charged consists in the method adopted under the direction of the city authorities.²⁵ Nor is a contractor who constructed a sewer for a city liable for damages to private property caused by the bursting of the sewer after he has completed the work and the city has assumed control thereof.²⁶

IN GENERAL—a. Common-Law Liability. In the absence of statutes imposing liability it has been held in some jurisdictions that the duties of a municipal corporation with regard to its streets are governmental and that it is not liable to an individual injured by its failure to keep them in repair or safe for travel.²⁷ In other jurisdictions it has been held that such duties are corporate such liability being restricted in some instances to those cases in which the duty to repair is not charged upon some other person.³³ The liability created by such statutes cannot be extended by construction or implication,³⁴ nor by contract.³⁵

(11) EXEMPTING FROM LIABILITY. A city may be specifically exempted from liability by its charter,³⁶ in which case general statutes imposing liability are inapplicable;³⁷ but a provision in the charter of a city giving it power to establish, open, alter, and improve all avenues, streets, and sidewalks, and providing that it shall not be liable for failure to exercise such power, does not relieve it from liability for defects in streets and sidewalks once they are established;³⁸ nor does the fact that a statute declares that every city is responsible for injuries to property within its limits by mobs or riots indicate a legislative intent to exempt cities from liability for all other torts.³⁹

Liability for acts of town officers.—In an action against a town for damages caused by a defective highway, the fact that after defendant town's commissioners were elected but before the accident, part of the town was incorporated into a city, does not render the city in any way liable. Embler v. Wallkill, 132 N. Y. 222, 30 N. E. 404.

upon certain officers of the corporation,⁵⁰ or where the neglect of the official is with regard to a duty imposed by law and not by the municipality, the municipality is not liable;⁵¹ but the fact that powers which are merely auxiliary and not exclusive are conferred upon a municipal board by statute will not relieve the city from liability.⁵²

e. Duty Imposed on Abutting Owners. The fact that the municipal corporation has imposed upon abutting owners the duty of keeping sidewalks in repair or may construct or repair sidewalks at the expense of the abutting owners does not relieve the city from liability to persons injured by the defective condition of such walks,⁵³ nor will notice served on the abutter to repair relieve the city of its liability,⁵⁴ nor is a promise of an owner to repair sufficient to release it.⁵⁵

f. Duty Imposed on Private Corporation. The fact that a railroad or street railroad company is bound to maintain and repair a street occupied by it will not relieve the city from liability to a person injured;⁵⁶ and the fact that a street

Park commissioners.—The fact that a board of park commissioners is by statute intrusted with control of the work of embellishing in a certain way streets adjacent to a park does not relieve the city from the duty of maintaining such streets. *Kleopfert v. railroad company has been permitted to occupy a street will not, without more, show that the street has been vacated so as to relieve the city from liability for its condition.⁵⁷ But in Canada a municipal corporation has been held not responsible for an accident which occurs on a road within the limits of the municipality, where the road is under the control of a turnpike company.⁵⁸ Where under the statute the municipality is not bound to keep highways in repair where other suitable provision is made therefor, the liability of the municipal corporation will not be limited by implication from a special obligation placed upon a railroad company to keep the highway in repair, except in so far as such obligation for the construction or operation of the railroad deprives the municipality of the power to discharge the general statutory duty to which it is subjected.⁵⁹

2. WAYS AS TO WHICH DUTY IS IMPOSED — a. In General. In order that a municipal corporation may be responsible for an injury resulting from the condition of a traveled way, it is necessary that such way be a public street or highway which the corporation is bound to maintain and repair,⁶⁰ and to impose liability under a statute, the place to which the accident is attributable must be within the intention of the statute.⁶¹ But the matter of the establishment of a

a tunnel,⁷¹ a boulevard,⁷² a parkway,⁷³ an alley,⁷⁴ or a bicycle path,⁷⁵ but not for a sea beach;⁷⁶ nor is the municipality bound to furnish a safe and convenient access over private property to a place of exhibition licensed by it.⁷⁷ A city is not liable for a defective highway outside the state, although it was constructed under a statute of another state declaring the city liable for improper construction and repair.⁷⁸

b. Unopened or Unimproved Streets. In order that liability may be imposed for the condition of a street it must have been opened for public use,⁷⁹ but it is not necessary that it shall have been improved.⁸⁰ Irregularity in the manner of ordering an improvement is no defense to an action for personal injuries resulting from negligence in failing to keep the street in a safe condition after it has been opened.⁸¹

c. Effect of Improvement, Repair, or Other Acts of Recognition of Streets. If the authorities of a city or town have treated a place as a public street, taking charge of it and regulating it as they do other streets, and an individual is injured in consequence of the negligent and careless manner in which this is done, the corporation cannot, when it is sued for such injury, throw the party upon an inquiry into the regularity of the proceedings by which the land became a street, or into the authority by which the street was originally established.⁸² This rule

Paper street.—The mere fact that a street or public way appears upon the plat of the city is not sufficient to impose liability where it is not opened for public travel. Hunter v. Weston, 111 Mo. 176, 19 S. W. 1098, 17 L. R. A. 633; Heckler v. St. Louis, 13 Mo. App. 277 (holding that a city cannot be held liable for an accident occurring on land which the municipal authorities had laid out as a street and directed to be improved, unless it is shown that under the circumstances it was its duty to have prepared the street and to have thrown it open for travel prior to the accident); Austin v. Ritz, 72 Tex. 391, 9 S. W. 884.

The mere fact of establishing a highway by judicial action does not of itself so far open it to the public as to render the municipal corporation responsible for accidents that may occur to persons traveling thereon. Blaisdell v. Portland, 39 Me. 113, holding, however, that the inhabitants of a city are liable for damages occasioned by defects in one of their highways, after it is built and opened to the public, although the time they were allowed for its construction after acceptance had not elapsed, if they had reasonable notice of the defects.

Street undergoing repair.—A city is not liable for injuries to one attempting to cross an outlying and wholly improved street, undergoing repair, there being nothing in the surroundings to constitute an invitation from the authorities to use the street, and no reason for them to suppose it would be used under such circumstances. McNish v. Peekskill, 22 N. Y. App. Div. 631, 48 N. Y. Suppl. 210.

82. Illinois.—Pekin v. Newell, 26 Ill. 320, 79 Am. Dec. 378 (holding that if a city is is applicable where the city has caused the street to be graded⁸³ or paved,⁸⁴ or otherwise improved.⁸⁵ So evidence that a city repaired a street is admissible to show that it has assumed control of the street;⁸⁶ but the fact that the city had repaired other streets in that part of the city where the street in question is located does not constitute an implied acceptance of the latter street;⁸⁷ nor does a subsequent resolution to repair a street render the city liable for a prior accident.⁸⁸

d. Streets in Annexed Territory. A city by bringing a highway within its corporate limits and leaving it open for public travel becomes bound to maintain it,⁸⁹ and this is true whether it has been formally laid out and opened or has been established by user.⁹⁰

e. Abandonment of Street. A municipal corporation may abandon a street and be exonerated from obligation to keep it in repair and otherwise suitable for public use.⁹¹ But until it has employed such precautions as shall be sufficient to authorized to construct a highway in a particular manner, but does it in a different one, it will be answerable in damages to a party sustaining injury upon it, as much as though it had not exceeded or deviated from its authority); *Chicago v. Unauthorized acts of officers.—The mere fact that a public officer may have exercised some authority over a public road will not impose liability for its condition upon the city, unless it appears that what he did was under and by the authority of the city. Chicago v. Hannon, 115 Ill. App. 183. See also Bishop v. Centralia, 49 Wis. 669, 6 N. W. 353.

Private lane.—The fact that the city has laid drains in a private lane within the city is not equivalent to an acceptance of such lane as a public street, nor does the city thereby incur any responsibility for an accident caused by a person falling on the sidewalk of such lane. *Tongas v. Incidental improvement of private way.—If the officers of a town, in constructing or repairing a public way, dispose of the waste rocks or earth for the benefit of some individual, in such a manner as to improve a private way belonging to him, the repairs so made upon the private way are made for the owner of it, and not for the town; and the town is not thereby estopped from denying its location, in an action to recover for injuries sustained in consequence of defects in such way. *Gilpatrick v. Validity of abandonment.—Where in separating the grade of a street and a railroad, acting under an order of the city council authorizing the mayor to designate the streets which should be closed, and to fix the conditions under which they should remain closed, the mayor authorized the railroad effectually warn travelers in the exercise of ordinary care and prudence that such highway has been closed to public travel, its liability to all persons without notice remains unchanged;⁹² and the question whether or not the means employed were sufficient to bring about an actual discontinuance of the highway is one of fact for the jury to determine in each particular case.⁹³ The decision of the question may involve the consideration of such matters as the situation of the highway, the modes commonly adopted for closing highways, the traveler's knowledge of such modes, and similar facts.⁹⁴

f. Sidewalks and Cross walks—(i) IN GENERAL. By the weight of authority a sidewalk is regarded as part of the street, and under the general rule imposing liability upon municipal corporations for the care of their streets⁹⁵ they are liable to persons injured by the defective conditions of such sidewalks,⁹⁶ although, as in the company, which was required to perform the work, to close a part of the street, it nevertheless remained a public way, which the city was charged with the primary duty of keeping "reasonably safe for the use of travellers." Torphy v. Fall River, 188 Mass. 310, 74 N. E. 465.

case of streets, such liability is in some jurisdictions held not to arise in the absence of statute.⁹⁷ Liability is in some states expressly imposed by statute⁹⁸ or is deduced from statutes imposing liability for the condition of highways,⁹⁹ and liability for cross walks is also sometimes specifically imposed.¹ Where the duty is not on the corporation to construct sidewalks it has been held in some cases that to impose liability for their condition it must have assumed control of them;² but it is not relieved from this liability by reason of the fact that it does not recognize and assume jurisdiction by formal ordinance;³ and when once built sidewalks

Bridges in sidewalk—Where the sidewalk of a street in a city crosses another street, and the crossing habitually used by foot passengers is a bridge over a drain, there being no stepping stones or other convenient crossing, such bridge is to all intents and purposes part of the sidewalk, and the city is liable for injuries sustained by foot passengers on account of defects therein to the same extent as if the injuries occurred on the sidewalk itself. Atlanta v. Champe, 66 Ga. 659. A city is not liable for a defect in a private bridge across a gutter or drainage ditch at the side of the street not at a regular public crossing or street intersection. Crawford v. Griffin, 113 Ga. 562, 38 S. E. 988.

Sidewalk upon county property.—Where a county inclosed only a part of the court-house square as originally platted, and the remaining strip was used for many years as a street, and the sidewalk constructed by the county next to the square inclosed was in constant use by the people generally as a public thoroughfare of the city, the city is responsible for the sidewalk, the same as for others within its limits. Huntington v. McClurg, 22 Ind. App. 261, 53 N. E. 658.

W. 254], holding that in an action against a city for personal injuries resulting from a defective sidewalk, plaintiff need not allege or prove that the street had been used as a highway for the period of ten years, because Pub. Laws (1887), Act 264, § 4, which provides that that act, requiring cities to keep highways in repair, shall not apply to highways which have not been in use for ten years, provides further that nothing in that section shall exempt cities from keeping streets and sidewalks in a safe condition for public travel.

99. See Manchester v. Hartford, 30 Conn. 118; McCann v. Bangor, 58 Me. 348; Gould v. Boston, 120 Mass. 300 (holding that under Gen. St. c. 44, § 1, requiring towns and cities to keep "highways, town ways, streets, causeways and bridges" in repair, and sections 21, 22, and 26, making them responsible for defects in "highways" and bridges, and St. (1816) c. 90, authorizing the city of Boston to widen "alleys," etc., the city was liable for injuries from a defective footway which had been created by prescription); Hall v. Manchester, 40 N. H. 410; James v. Portage, 48 Wis. 677, 5 N. W. 31. But see Detroit v. Putnam, 45 Mich. 263, 7 N. W. 815, holding that Laws (1879), p. 223, which gives a right of action against municipal corporations for any injury sustained by reason of defective public highways, streets, bridges, cross walks, and culverts, does not render a municipal corporation liable for injuries caused by defective sidewalks.

Detroit*, 50 Mich. 133, 15 N. W. 48 (holding that where the question of what is to be considered a sidewalk and what a cross walk has received a settled construction by the practice of the city authorities in levying sidewalk rates, and requiring the owners of property to keep certain parts of their walks in repair, such construction will be followed in an action against the city for an injury caused by a defect in an alleged cross walk, in determining its liability therefor, the city being liable for defects in cross walks only); Pequignot v. Detroit, 16 Fed. 211 (holding that under Acts (1879), No. 244, relating to the collection of damages sustained by reason of a defective public highway, street or cross walk, and creating a liability in favor of persons sustaining injury on any public highway or street by reason of neglect to keep such highway, street, and all bridges and cross walks in good repair, a walk crossing a public alley is a cross walk, within such section, as distinguished from a sidewalk).

must be kept in repair;⁴ and it is immaterial whether the municipality built the sidewalk or not.⁵ Where for a term of years there is a general use by pedestrians of the part of a public street lying outside of the improved portion, the city may be deemed to have recognized such use and assumed responsibility for its being made safe, although no sidewalks have been constructed.⁶

(II) SIDEWALKS AND CROSSINGS BUILT BY PRIVATE CITIZENS. Although a municipality permits a private person to build a sidewalk in front of his premises, the duty still devolves upon the city to see that it is kept in proper repair, and it will be liable for injuries caused by a failure in this respect.⁷ So also where the sidewalk has been constructed without authority, the city having notice of the defect.⁸ And even where it is the duty of the abutter to make repairs, the municipality is not relieved from liability.⁹ The same rules have been applied to crossings.¹⁰

Wisconsin.—Hill v. Fond du Lac, 56 Wis. 242, 14 N. W. 25.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1603.

Bridge in sidewalk.—A bridge built by a private citizen with lumber furnished by the city, and forming part of a sidewalk of a platted city street, and used daily, is a public highway, and the city is responsible for personal injuries occasioned by its being covered with ice. McDonald v. Ashland, 78 Wis. 251, 47 N. W. 434.

9. See supra, XIV, D, I, e.

10. Aurora v. Bitner, 100 Ind. 396, holding that a city is liable for an injury sustained from the defective condition of a street crossing, the defect being one of which the city has notice; and the liability is the same, even though the crossing was constructed by an individual. Compare Fortune v. St. Joseph, (Mo. 1886) 1 S. W. 287, holding that a person injured by the breaking of a plank, placed across a gully in a public street by the residents of the neighborhood, but without the authority of the city, and at a place where the gully was not a part of the sidewalk or traveled way, cannot recover damages from the city for such injury.

Alley crossing.—A city is under no obligation to construct a crossing over an alley connecting the walks of the street, but if it elects to leave such alley in its natural state, it is its duty to keep it free from obstructions; and if it allows persons to place loose boards there which, by reason of their

g. Walks Outside of Highway. A municipal corporation is liable for damages resulting from its neglect to keep in a reasonably safe condition and repair a sidewalk built or controlled by it within the corporate limits, although it is in fact without the limits of the street,¹¹ as where it is on the right of way of a railroad company,¹² on the property of an abutting hotel,¹³ or on the land of a private citizen;¹⁴ but a city is not liable for a sidewalk established beyond the highway limits without its authority and of which it has not assumed control.¹⁵

3. CAUSE OF OR RESPONSIBILITY FOR DEFECTS, OBSTRUCTIONS, OR DANGEROUS CONDITIONS — a. Acts or Omissions of Private Persons — (1) IN GENERAL. The duty and consequent liability of a municipality to keep its streets and sidewalks in a reasonably safe condition for persons traveling thereon extends to those cases where the obstruction or unsafe condition of the street is brought about by persons other than the agents of the city.¹⁶ But in such cases the basis of the action being negligence,¹⁷ it devolves upon plaintiff to show that the city had notice of the defect, or might have had knowledge thereof by the use of reasonable care and watchfulness.¹⁸ But a city is not liable for injury caused by an obstruction which it had no agency in establishing and is powerless to remove.¹⁹ becoming warped and shifted about, renders it dangerous for persons having occasion to cross such alley, it will be liable to the same extent that it would be had it undertaken to construct a crossing and allowed it to become out of repair. Springfield v. Tomlinson, 79 Ill. App. 399.

E. 409, holding that where an injury is received by reason of a defective sidewalk, outside of the limits of a street, and not built by the city, nor under its control, the city is not liable; but if the boundary line of the street is not visible, so as to inform persons whether they are on the street, and the corporation has notice of its dangerous condition, but fails to erect a guard along the limits of the street, it will be liable for resulting injuries.

19. Belvin v. Richmond, 85 Va. 574, 8 S. E. 378, 1 L. R. A. 807, holding that where, by order of the judge of a state court, a rope is put across a public street of a city to prevent travel and the resulting noise, which disturbs the court, and a traveler is injured thereby, the city is not liable, having had no agency in causing the obstruction and being powerless to remove it.

(II) ABUTTING OWNERS. A municipal corporation is liable for injury resulting from an excavation or obstruction in one of its public streets, made by an abutting owner for his own purposes,²⁰ if the corporation had actual or constructive notice of the dangerous condition of the street for a sufficient length of time to enable it to guard the public safety.²¹

b. Acts of Railroad Company. The fact that the dangerous condition of a street resulted from acts of a railroad company does not exonerate the city from liability for injuries resulting to a person by reason of the condition of the street,²² except where the defect in the highway is the necessary result of the building or operation of the railroad, and which therefore the city cannot obviate;²³ and

Repairs by traction company.—If a traction company chargeable with the repairs of a street is in charge of such repairs, the city is not liable for an accident caused thereby; but if it has finished the work and left the street in a dangerous condition, which has existed long enough to charge the city with notice thereof, then the city is liable in damages. Aiken v. Philadelphia, 9 Pa. Super. Ct. 502, 43 Wkly. Notes Cas. 501.

Completion of work enjoined.—In an action against a city for personal injuries caused by a defect in a cross walk left by a street railway company in building its track, it is no defense that thirty days previous to the injury such company was enjoined from completing its work, where such city was not a party to the injunction suit, and in its answer admits that at the time of the injury it was its duty to keep the walk in repair. Dale v. Syracuse, 71 Hun (N. Y.) 449, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 968 [affirmed in 148 N. Y. 750, 43 N. E. 986].

Limitation of liability.—The general liability of a city to keep its street safe and convenient cannot be limited by implication, except to the extent to which the construction and operation of the railroad deprives the city of the power to discharge the duty imposed upon it by law. Davis v. Leominster, 1 Allen (Mass.) 182; Jones v. Waltham, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 299, 50 Am. Dec. 783.

Illegal operation of road.—A town is not liable for injuries done to a traveler on the

although the railroad may be also liable, and responsible over to the corporation for whatever damages it is compelled to pay in consequence of it, that does not affect the liability of the municipality to the party injured.²⁴ Nor does a general railroad act which gives a company authority to occupy a street of a municipal corporation with its tracks discharge the city from its duty to the public to keep its streets in a reasonably safe condition, nor relieve it from liability for the consequences of its negligence in that respect.²⁵

c. Acts of Water Company. The right of a person injured by falling at night into an excavation in a city street insufficiently lighted and guarded is not defeated by the fact that the excavation was made by a company engaged in constructing waterworks for the city,²⁶ provided the city had notice of its existence and failed to remove it.²⁷ So also the fact that a hydrant was erected by a water company under a license for that purpose does not relieve a city of liability after it has notice that the street is thereby rendered unsafe and dangerous.²⁸

d. Acts of Independent Public Officers. If it is the duty of a municipality to keep its streets in repair, or to guard the safety of travelers in case the streets are necessarily out of repair, it cannot escape liability for injuries occasioned by an unguarded excavation or other defects of which it has notice, even though made by an independent public officer in the performance of his duty. The liability is not based upon the act or omission of such officer, but upon the duty of the city as to streets.²⁹

e. License or Permission of Municipality — (1) WHEN GRANTED IN PURSUANCE OF LAWFUL AUTHORITY. There are some authorities which hold a municipality responsible for the negligence of one who, acting under its license or permission lawfully granted, creates any defect or obstruction which endangers the safety of persons using the streets.³⁰ These cases proceed upon the theory that, being charged with the care of its streets, it is the duty of the city to supervise the work permitted to be done and to use suitable precautions to prevent accidents;³¹

and notice of the defect or obstruction in the street is not necessary; in such case, to fix the city's liability.³² By the weight of authority, however, where municipal officers, in pursuance of a lawful authority, grant a license or permit to private parties to use the streets for a purpose not intrinsically dangerous,³³ and no right of supervision is reserved or exercised,³⁴ the city is not liable for the negligence of those doing the work, but only for its own negligence in not correcting the evil after notice, actual or constructive.³⁵

(ii) WHEN GRANTED WITHOUT AUTHORITY. If a municipal corporation exceeds its authority and licenses the placing of a public nuisance in a street, or the unlawful and dangerous use of a street for any purpose, and an injury results therefrom, without negligence on the part of the person injured, the municipality is liable to respond in damages for such injury.³⁶

f. Failure to Prevent Improper Use of Streets—(1) IN GENERAL. The manner in which a highway of a city is used is a different thing from its quality and condition as a street. The construction and maintenance of a street in a safe condition for travel is a corporate duty, and for a breach of such duty an action will lie;³⁷ but making and enforcing ordinances regulating the use of streets brings into exercise governmental, and not corporate, powers, and the authorities are well agreed that for a failure to exercise legislative, judicial, or executive powers of government, there is no liability.³⁸ Hence, upon this principle, it has been held that a municipal corporation, in the absence of an express statutory declaration to the contrary, is not liable for an injury caused by the failure to pass or to enforce an ordinance prohibiting the firing of cannon or firearms in its streets;³⁹ the explosion of fireworks;⁴⁰ the running at large of cattle and swine;⁴¹ horse-racing;⁴² or the riding of bicycles upon the sidewalks.⁴³ Notwithstanding the municipality may not be liable for a mere failure to enact an ordinance or to enforce one which is enacted, it has been held that its duty to preserve its streets and highways in a reasonably safe condition is independent of such questions, and if it permits such acts, either by failure to enact ordinances or by failure to enforce those in existence, as are a public nuisance, it will be liable for any injury arising therefrom.⁴⁴

(11) COASTING. The doctrine of the exemption of a municipal corporation from liability for injuries resulting from the unlawful or improper use of its streets and sidewalks, and not from any defect in their state or condition, has been applied where persons have been injured by "coasting."⁴⁵ The suppression of coasting in a public highway is a police duty, and for the non-performance of such duty by its officers and agents the corporation is not liable.⁴⁶

CARE AND CONDITION OF STREETS AND OTHER PUBLIC WAYS—a. Rule as to Reasonable Care and Safety. Where the municipality is chargeable with notice or knowledge of defects or obstructions, the general municipal duty to exercise ordinary care to keep its streets in a reasonably safe condition is continuing and constant.⁴⁷ Its liability is for negligence, however, and for negligence only.⁴⁸ It is not liable for damages for every accident that may occur within its limits; it is not an insurer against all defects or obstructions in its streets and is not required or expected to do everything that human energy or ingenuity can do to prevent Injury to person on street car.—A municipality is not liable to a passenger on a street car who is struck by a trolley pole placed in the gutter near the track, where the municipality neither fixed the location of the track and poles nor owned them, the injury being caused by a defect in the street car system and not by the condition of the street. Kennedy v. Lansing, 99 Mich. 518, 58 N. W. 470.

In Massachusetts the statute of 1877 made a material change in the law as to the liability of towns for injuries due to defects in highways. Prior to the statute the town was liable if the defect had existed for twenty-four hours without regard to whether it was negligent in permitting or not removing it, but under that statute the town is liable only for injuries due to defects which might have been remedied or injuries which might have been prevented by ordinary care on the part of the town. Flanders v. Norwood, 141 Mass. 17, 5 N. E. 256.

Accident.—There can be no recovery against a city for injuries received from falling into a hole in a sidewalk as the result of a pure accident. Enright v. Atlanta, 78 Ga. 288; Aurora v. Pulfer, 56 Ill. 270; Yeager v. Bluefield, 40 W. Va. 484, 21 S. E. 752.

Act of God.—A municipality is not bound for any injury resulting from the act of God, as where the condition is created by a sudden storm. Seward v. Wilmington, 2 Marv. (Del.) 189, 42 Atl. 451. So where an electric wire belonging to the city was broken down and suspended in a street by reason of sleet adhering to it and without any negligence on the part of the city it was held that the city would not be responsible for such breaking and suspension, although after notice of the dangerous condition, whoever may have been the owner of the wire, the city must remove or repair it within a reasonable time or take precautions to warn travelers of the danger. Colburn v. Wilmington, 4 Pennw. (Del.) 443, 56 Atl. 605.

"At all times."—A city cannot be required to keep its streets in such condition that pedestrians may be able to cross with a reasonable degree of safety "at any and all times," since there may be times when that is impossible, as if there was sleet the night before the accident, in which case it would be impossible for the authorities to keep the street safe. Magaha v. Hagerstown, 95 Md. 62, 51 Atl. 832, 93 Am. St. Rep. 317.

Where the ground of the action is a positive misfeasance on the part of the corporation itself in placing, or causing to be placed, a pile of bricks on the sidewalk without guards or lights to protect persons passing over the walk, an instruction leaving it to the jury to say whether or not it was negligence to leave the walk in such a condition is not objectionable because it imposes an absolute duty without reference to whether or not the corporation had notice of the condition. *Yearance v. Missouri.—Buckley v. Kansas City, 156 Mo. 16, 56 S. W. 319; Kling v. Kansas City, 27 Mo. App. 231.

b. Determination of Reasonable Care—(i) IN GENERAL. In determining whether the corporation is exercising reasonable care in the performance of its duty to make and maintain its streets reasonably safe, each case must depend upon its own surrounding circumstances;⁵⁴ the care must be reasonable and commensurate with the danger.⁵⁵

(ii) DEPENDING ON NUMBERS AND EXTENT. The degree of care and diligence required by a city in keeping its streets in a reasonably safe condition for travel is not affected by the extent and number thereof,⁵⁶ and if the allowance of the existence of a defect or obstruction in a street is negligence, the existence of other such dangerous places is immaterial, since neither the lapse of time nor the existence of like nuisances elsewhere will legalize it.⁵⁷

Reasonable care is such as a prudent person or municipality would use under like circumstances. Wilson v. Atlanta, 63 Ga. 291; Kendall v. Albia, 73 Iowa 241, 34 N. W. 833; Norman v. Teel, 12 Okla. 69, 69 Pac. 791. An instruction requiring such diligence as like officers with like responsibilities usually and ordinarily employ in the discharge of their duties was held not erroneous. Pumorlo v. Merrill, 125 Wis. 102, 103 N. W. 464. And in Kent v. Wilmington, 7 Houst. (Del.) 397, 32 Atl. 464, it was held that the degree of care required by a city in filling up a trench dug in a street was such as a good business man would use under like circumstances. But in Rhyner v. Menasha, 107 Wis. 201, 83 N. W. 303, an instruction that ordinary care and prudence meant such as was exercised by the mass of mankind in their daily affairs was erroneous, since the ordinary care and prudence required are such as the surrounding circumstances would demand and not such as men usually exercise in their daily affairs.

Permitting construction in violation of ordinance.—Where a municipal ordinance directed the construction of a sidewalk of a specified width and designated material within certain limits, and the council permitted the construction of a walk of less width and of greatly inferior material, and allowed it to remain on the street and to be used, such remissness in enforcing its ordinance was held to be some evidence that the walk on which plaintiff was injured was deemed by the city to be unsafe and inadequate for the travel over that particular street. *Reed v. (11) DEPENDING ON EXTENT OF USE. The duty of a city to keep streets and sidewalks within its corporate limits in a reasonably safe condition is not withdrawn by the fact that they are in a sparsely settled part of the city and little used,⁵⁸ and it cannot escape liability solely upon the probability or expectation that no one acquainted with the defects in a walk would pass over it.⁵⁹ And while the same degree of care may be required no matter what the size of the place, yet what may be such care in one place may not be in another, and so the size of the place, the amount of travel, and all other surrounding facts and circumstances are considered in determining defendant's negligence, or whether it has exercised the reasonable care which is imposed upon it in respect of this particular duty.⁶⁰

(iv) TIME ALLOWED TO MAKE REPAIRS OR REMOVE OBSTRUCTIONS. A municipality being responsible only for reasonable diligence in making repairs or removing obstructions after it has notice of the unsafe condition of the street,⁶¹ it must appear that it had such notice a sufficient length of time before the injury to afford a reasonable opportunity to act in the premises,⁶² the degree of

Rep. 364, in that an opening in front of a cellar window, such as was usual and customary in the city for lighting and ventilating cellars and reasonably necessary for that purpose, was not per se a nuisance, and it being held in the latter case that if such custom existed, under these circumstances, time out of mind, it involved a tacit assent on the part of the municipality as well as acquiescence on the part of the public]; *McLeod v. Greater degree of care.—Musick v. Latrobe, 184 Pa. St. 375, 39 Atl. 226, holding that the general statement that the municipality is bound to the same degree of care over its alleys as over its streets is not correct; that the care to be bestowed upon each must be measured by the public use; that when an alley does in fact become a public street by its use, it should receive the attention that a public street requires, but until it becomes a traveled thoroughfare in fact, it is not incumbent on the borough authorities to treat it as such; and that the measure of care is proportioned to its character and the public needs.

celerity required depending on the attendant circumstances, such as the location of the street, the volume of travel over it, and the like.⁶³

c. Sufficiency and Safety—(1) IN GENERAL. The way should be reasonably safe for ordinary modes of travel,⁶⁴ by all persons regardless of age⁶⁵ or condition,⁶⁶ but need not be safe for extraordinary use.⁶⁷

(1) TRAVELED TRACK OR WAY NECESSARY FOR USE—(A) In General. It has been held in a number of cases that a city is not bound to put all its streets or all parts of its streets in condition for travel, even though it improves a part for use; but its duty in this regard is confined to such streets and such parts of

So under a statute in Massachusetts providing that any person who should receive an injury by reason of any defect in a highway which had existed for the space of twenty-four hours might recover, etc., it was held that there could be no recovery unless the defect existed twenty-four hours previous to the injury. Brady v. Lowell, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 121. In Winn v. Lowell, 1 Allen (Mass.) 177, where the injury was caused by reason of an elevation of one edge of a plank which was laid over an open space left for the passage of water in a public street, and this was found to be an actionable defect, it was enough to authorize a verdict for plaintiff if the plank had been split, loose, liable to change, and unsafe for twenty-four hours before the accident, or if the authorities had reasonable notice of its unsafe condition, although the position of the plank which was the immediate cause of the accident had only continued for a short time.

Bicycles—In general.—Bicycle riders are entitled to the same protection as the drivers of other vehicles. Anderson v. Wilmington, 2 Pennw. (Del.) 28, 43 Atl. 841; Laredo Electric, etc., Co. v. Hamilton, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 480, 56 S. W. 998, which, however, does not involve directly, although it recognizes, the municipal duty in such cases. So a municipality will be liable for injuries sustained by a bicycle rider on a walk or street which was not reasonably safe for use by pedestrians in the one case, or by ordinary vehicles in the other; but if reasonably sufficient for such uses there will be no liability merely because they were not safe for bicycles. Wheeler v. Boone, 108 Iowa 235, 78 N. W. 909, 44 L. R. A. 821; Lee v. Port Huron, 128 Mich. 533, 87 N. W. 637, 55 L. R. A. 308; Leslie v. Grand Rapids, 120 Mich. 28, 78 N. W. 885; Morrison v. Syracuse, 45 N. Y. App. Div. 421, 61 N. Y. Suppl. 313; Sutphen v. North Hempstead, 80 Hun (N. Y.) 409, 30 N. Y. Suppl. 128; Gagnier v. Fargo, 11 N. D. 73, 88 N. W. 1030, 95 Am. But where the municipality maintains a bicycle path, the duty of keeping it in a reasonably safe condition for the use of bicycles follows, and having invited such use of the particular way, the municipality cannot relieve itself of liability by saying that other parts of the street were safe. Prather v. Spokane, 29 Wash. 549, 70 Pac. 55, 92 Am. St. Rep. 923, 59 L. R. A. 346.

66. Lewis v. Independence, 54 Mo. App. 183, holding that the fact that a woman's advanced pregnancy renders her more susceptible to injury will not relieve a city from its obligation to keep its streets in such repair that they will be reasonably safe for women in her condition to travel over in a two-wheeled cart. See also infra, XIV, D, 6.

67. Kohlhof v. Chicago, 192 Ill. 249, 61 N. E. 446, 85 Am. St. Rep. 335, non-liability for injuries by breaking of sidewalk while moving a heavy iron safe on it, although one may use a sidewalk for moving, loading, and unloading.

Safety for use of walking cane.—In Harden v. Jackson, 137 Mich. 271, 100 N. W. 389, 66 L. R. A. 986, it was held that the city was not liable for injuries to a pedestrian caused by the cane with which he supported himself going through a crack between two decayed boards, where the sidewalk was in a reasonably safe condition for pedestrians not compelled to use canes.

Between sidewalk and carriageway.—It is the duty of cities and towns to keep that part of the street which lies between the carriageway and the sidewalk in such repair that foot passengers may cross any part thereof with a reasonable degree of safety, using such care and caution as are adapted to the nature of the case; and the establishing of raised crossings at proper distances is not a sufficient compliance with this duty. Raymond v. Lowell, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 524, 53 Am. Dec. 57. But see in this connection infra, XIV, D, 6, f.

streets as are necessary for the convenience and use of the traveling public;⁶⁸ and that if a street is maintained in a reasonably safe condition on the traveled part and is amply wide for such use and to enable persons to avoid injury with the exercise of reasonable care, the municipality will not be liable merely by reason of defects out of the traveled track.⁶⁹ This rule is in accord with, if not based upon, the rule established in other cases as to town or country roads,⁷⁰ and has been recognized broadly with respect to cities,⁷¹ and is applied to suburban or village streets upon the principle that the extent of the use must be considered upon the question of the sufficiency of the care exercised by the municipality and of the safety of the road for the purposes for which it is used and intended.⁷² But the municipality is bound to keep all of such part of a street as it undertakes to open and put in condition for travel in a reasonably safe condition for such use,⁷³

Rep. 52, where it was held that public travel is not supposed to occupy all the country highway leading out of a village, although within its limits, and that the authorities are not required to put the road in condition as if the public required the use of the whole.

Pennsylvania.—Monongahela City v. Fischer, 111 Pa. St. 9, 2 Atl. 87, 56 Am. Rep. 241, holding that in the closely built-up portions of a city it is the duty of the authorities to keep the entire street in a safe condition, but that this is not the rule with regard to country roads within the territorial limits of the city; and that as to the latter it is sufficient that a portion of the width of the road is kept in smooth condition and safe and convenient for travel.

and if the whole street has been opened for travel the entire width must be kept in a reasonably safe condition.⁷⁴ If any portion of a sidewalk be negligently left in such condition that pedestrians cannot travel over it with reasonable assurance of safety, by night as well as by day, the municipal authorities may be chargeable with a neglect of this duty to its citizens and the public generally.⁷⁵

(B) Danger Outside of Traveled Way. The municipal duty is not confined to keeping the mere bed of the way in proper condition, and one injured by a defect or obstruction outside the prepared part may still be entitled to recover, if the defect is so near the traveled part as to render its use unsafe.⁷⁶

(III) EFFORT TO MAKE REPAIRS. It is no defense to an action against a city to recover for an injury caused by a defect in a public way that the city used ordinary care in repairing the way, if it is not in fact reasonably safe and convenient.⁷⁷

(IV) DEFECTS AND OBSTRUCTIONS—(A) In General. The duty as to such ways is to keep them in a reasonably safe condition for travel, and has been held to relate only to their construction, maintenance, and repair.⁷⁸ But it is held that defects need not be structural but may consist of obstructions; ⁷⁹ that a street may be put out of repair by obstructions thereon which impede travel and make it dangerous; and that in such a case to repair a street requires the removal of all such obstructions,⁸⁰ although the statutory duty in this respect has been confined to narrower limits under the terms of the statute.⁸¹ So the municipality will be liable alike for accidents occasioned by negligently constructing defective sidewalks, or by causing such defects in them after they are constructed,⁸² and for negligently permitting the defects to continue, when they might have been remedied by reasonable care.⁸³ But it will not be liable for every mere inequality years old, was repaired by the town authorities by replacing some of the boards with new ones, leaving untouched the stringers on which such boards were laid, the town was chargeable with notice that such stringers were so rotten that they would not hold the nails by which the boards were fastened to them); Shelbyville v. Brant, 61 Ill. App. 153; Sorento v. Johnson, 52 Ill. App. 659; Hutchins v. Littleton, 124 Mass. 289 (holding that if the defect is insufficiently repaired it will be a continuing defect and the town will be liable, although the action of the elements have enlarged it and increased its dangerous character); Blood v. Hubbardston, 121 Mass. 233; George v. Haverhill, 110 Mass. 506; Atherton v. Bancroft, 114 Mich. 241, 72 N. W. 208. See also Moon v. Ionia, 81 Mich. 635, 46 N. W. 25.

Repair of sidewalk by abutter.—So where the duty of repairing sidewalks is primarily on the municipality, and it appears that before the accident the city knew of the defective condition and required the abutting owner to make repairs, the work of repairing will be considered as if done by the city itself and the city will be presumed to know of defects therein. Woodward v. Boscobel, 84 Wis. 226, 54 N. W. 332.

78. Herdenwag v. Philadelphia, 3 Pa. Dist. 292 [affirmed in 168 Pa. St. 72, 31 Atl. 1063].

Unlawful assemblages do not come within the duty to keep streets "in repair," although such conduct may temporarily endanger the safety of those who are traveling upon the streets. Campbell v. Montgomery, 53 Ala. 527, 25 Am. Rep. 656.

Shooting gallery near street.—A statute making a municipality liable for injuries due to "insufficiency or want of repairs" in a street or sidewalk will not authorize a recovery against a municipality for an injury sustained by a person on the sidewalk, caused by a shot fired from a shooting gallery on an adjacent lot but outside of the limits of the street and sidewalk. Hubbell v. Viroqua, 67 Wis. 343, 30 N. W. 847, 58 Am. Rep. 866.

Other corporate acts causing injury in a street may render the municipality liable, although the action would not lie as based upon a defect in the way. Thus in Hand v. Brookline, 126 Mass. 324, it was held that a town which accepted a statute authorizing it to lay and maintain water pipes, etc., was liable for an injury sustained by a traveler on the highway which had been undermined by water escaping from the pipes by reason of negligence in their construction, although the circumstances were such that no action would lie under the statute for a defect in the highway. To the same effect see Wilkins v. Rutland, 61 Vt. 330, 17 Atl. 735.

81. McArthur v. Saginaw, 58 Mich. 357, 25 N. W. 313, 55 Am. Rep. 687, holding that an act "for the collection of damages sustained by reason of defective public highways, streets," etc., covered such defects only as were due to want of repair, and had nothing to do with the presence in the street of building material or other objects that did not affect its condition in that particular; and that the unauthorized or excessive use of a portion of the public highway by an abutting owner in putting lumber or material thereon was a matter that fell within the cognizance of the police power, and had nothing to do with the duty to make or repair highways.

82. Atehison v. King, 9 Kan. 550; Moriarty v. Lewiston, 98 Me. 482, 57 Atl. 790 (where a plank, set edgewise across a brick sidewalk, for the purpose of securing the brick in position, and rising vertically three inches above the level of the brick pavement of the walk, on a prominent residence street in a city, unlawfully impaired the reasonable safety and convenience of the walk); Sebert v. Alpena, 78 Mich. 165, 43 N. W. 1098; Plainview v. Mendelson, 65 Nebr. 85, 90 N. W. 956.

Although a city may not be compelled to build and maintain a sidewalk, yet having exercised its discretion by passing an ordinance to construct one, and having constructed it, it will be liable for an injury caused by the dangerous condition of the walk. Miller v. Bradford, 186 Pa. St. 164, 40 Atl. 409.

Partially invisible cracks in flagstones of a sidewalk come within the meaning of the word "defect" used in a statute rendering a city liable for injuries received through want of repair of highways. Burt v. Boston, 122 Mass. 223.

or irregularity in the surface of the way not likely to cause injury,⁸⁴ and it is not every defect or obstruction that will render the municipality liable;⁸⁵ it is only against danger which can or ought to be anticipated, in the exercise of reasonable care and prudence, that the municipality is bound to guard.⁸⁶ In each case the way is to be pronounced sufficient or insufficient as it is or is not reasonably safe for the ordinary purposes of travel under the particular circumstances which exist in connection with that particular case,⁸⁷ considering the nature of the place and

A rope stretched across a highway from a derrick on one side to a stone on the other, both without the limits of the highway, and in actual use by a city marshal in a search for stolen goods, is held not a defect or want of repair in the highway, and the city will not be liable for injuries thereby occasioned to travelers. Barber v. Roxbury, 11 Allen (Mass.) 318. See also Griffen v. Boston, 182 Mass. 409, 65 N. E. 811, where the principle is announced that if when the injury is done the obstacle is in use, and the acts of a third person who is using it contribute to or are the moving cause of the injury, the municipality is not liable.

The obstruction must be dangerous in itself or of such a character that a person exercising ordinary prudence cannot avoid danger or injury in passing it. Aurora v. Pulfer, 56 Ill. 270; Vandalia v. Huss, 41 Ill. App. 517; Barber v. Roxbury, 11 Allen (Mass.) 318; Badgley v. St. Louis, 149 Mo. 122, 50 S. W. 817; Gottsberger v. New York, 9 Misc. (N. Y.) 349, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 592.

The fact that an accident had never before been caused by the defect does not relieve the city from the charge of negligence in not guarding against it. Bradner v. Warwick, 91 N. Y. App. Div. 408, 86 N. Y. Suppl. 935; Brush v. New York, 59 N. Y. App. Div. 12, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 51. See also Lyon v. Logansport, 9 Ind. App. 21, 35 N. E. 128.

87. Yeager v. Bluefield, 40 W. Va. 484, 21 S. E. 752.

A street need not be paved or improved in a particular way as a matter of law, but its reasonable safety is a question of fact. Brush v. New York, 59 N. Y. App. Div. 12, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 51. See also infra, XIV, D, 6.

Width.—In Fairbury v. Rogers, 2 Ill. App. 961, it was held, in an action for an injury from an alleged unsafe sidewalk in a dark night, that an instruction assuming that maintaining a sidewalk only four feet wide is of itself a circumstantial act of negligence is erroneous.

Stepping-stones.—Assuming that the city is bound to treat an unpaved sidewalk as if it were a part of the highway, yet its allowing stepping-stones placed therein by third persons to remain, they presenting the appearance of stepping-stones, and there being no apparent danger in their form or their distance from each other, and there being nothing to lead to the anticipation of their being or becoming unsafe, violates no duty it owes to, and does not charge it with negligence as to, one who has used the stones with safety knowing their character. Bullock v. New York, 51 N. Y. Super. Ct. 36. So in Yeager v. Bluefield, 40 W. Va. 484, 21 S. E. 752, where a cross walk was muddy and plaintiff stepped on a stone which slipped from under him, causing an injury, it was held that there was no liability under a statute making municipal corporations liable to any person injured by reason of a defective street.

Instances of defects and obstructions creating liability—Loose stones, bricks, etc.—Hazard v. Council Bluffs, 87 Iowa 51, 53 N. W. 1083, where brickbats and other rubbish were deposited on a street by water washing over the street from an insufficient culvert, and the city was held liable for an injury caused thereby. But see McCool v. Grand Rapids, 58 Mich. 41, 24 N. W. 631, 55 Am. Rep. 655, holding that the statute requiring cities to keep their streets in repair did not render a city liable where a horse, while being driven on a trot, was permanently injured by stepping on a cobblestone, several of which were strewn in the street, and which could have been seen by the driver.

Loose bricks out of a walk.—Terre Haute v. Constans, 26 Ind. App. 421, 59 N. E. 1078, where some of the bricks were several inches below the level of others, and some stood up edgewise, and some were entirely gone, and there being no light at the place, plaintiff was injured by falling, on a dark night. But in Gosport v. Evans, 112 Ind. 133, 13 N. E. 256, 2 Am. St. Rep. 164, it was held that bricks being displaced by the action of the elements so that persons might stumble or be otherwise inconvenienced, would not necessarily make the municipality liable, so long as the defect was not of itself dangerous and could be easily discovered and avoided.

Piles of dirt or rubbish.—Chicago v. Brophy, 79 Ill. 277; Streeter v. Marshalltown, 123 Iowa 449, 99 N. W. 114; Stafford v. Oskaloosa, 64 Iowa 251, 20 N. W. 174; Stafford v. Oskaloosa, 57 Iowa 748, 11 N. W. 668; Joslyn v. Detroit, 74 Mich. 458, 42 N. W. 50; Conner v. Manchester, 73 N. H. 233, 60 Atl. 436; Tiers v. New York, 74 Hun (N. Y.) 452, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 688; Archer v. Johnson City, (Tenn. 1901) 64 S. W. 474 (accumulation of discarded fruit, rinds, and decayed vegetables on sidewalk); Galveston v. Reagan, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 43 S. W. 48; El Paso v. Dolan, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 25 S. W. 669 (glass); King v. Cleveland, 28 Fed. 835.

Depression.—A depression of an inch and a quarter in a hexagonal cement block in a city sidewalk might constitute such defect. Bieber v. St. Paul, 87 Minn. 35, 91 N. W. 20. So a depression three feet wide and three inches deep in a sidewalk, causing an injury to one passing over it at night, is an actionable defect. Birmingham v. Starr, 112 Ala. 98, 20 So. 424. But a depression in a street, being not more than an inch and a half deep at any place, into which plaintiff stepped in alighting from a street car at a much used crossing, was held not to be an actionable defect. Burroughs v. Milwaukee, 110 Wis. 478, 86 N. W. 159.

Holes.—Robinson v. Wilmington, 8 Houst. (Del.) 409, 32 Atl. 347; Bloomington v. Mueller, 71 Ill. App. 268; Chicago v. Chase, 33 Ill. App. 551 (broken planks in sidewalk); Lawrence v. Davis, 8 Kan. App. 225, 55 Pac.

492 (holes in sidewalk caused by broken or decayed and removed pieces of plank, although but a few inches in depth); Marvin v. New Bedford, 158 Mass. 464, 33 N. E. 605 (hole from five to six inches in diameter in the flagging of a sidewalk); Lincoln v. Staley, 32 Nebr. 63, 48 N. W. 887 (missing boards in walk); Miller v. New York, 104 N. Y. App. Div. 33, 93 N. Y. Suppl. 227 (hole seven inches deep in paved roadway of a city street); Brush v. New York, 59 N. Y. App. Div. 12, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 51 (hole or rut in city street seven to ten inches in width).

Rotten stringers in board walk.—Joliet v. Weston, 22 Ill. App. 225 [affirmed in 123 Ill. 641, 14 N. E. 665]; Burrows v. Lake Crystal, 61 Minn. 357, 63 N. W. 745. See also Williams v. Hannibal, 94 Mo. App. 549, 68 S. W. 380. And see infra, XIV, D, 4, d, (vii), (B).

Defect may be caused by wear.—Lyon v. Logansport, 9 Ind. App. 21, 35 N. E. 128 (smooth and slippery condition of iron gutter crossing, from long use); Cromarty v. Boston, 127 Mass. 329, 34 Am. Rep. 381 (smooth and slippery condition of a cover, partly of iron and partly of glass, forming a part of the surface of a city sidewalk); Cunningham v. Thief River Falls, 84 Minn. 21, 86 N. W. 763.

Post.—Pueblo v. Smith, 3 Colo. App. 386, 33 Pac. 685.

Projecting iron rails.—Michigan City v. Boeckling, 122 Ind. 39, 23 N. E. 518.

Stump of tree.—Sweet v. Poughkeepsie, 97 N. Y. App. Div. 82, 89 N. Y. Suppl. 618; Foley v. East Flamborough Tp., 26 Ont. App. 43.

Stake in sidewalk.—Rea v. Sioux City, 127 Iowa 615, 103 N. W. 949; Jones v. Deering, 94 Me. 165, 47 Atl. 140.

Raised crossing.—A street crossing of plank raised fourteen inches above the level of the sidewalk is held to be a dangerous obstruction. Indianapolis v. Mitchell, 27 Ind. App. 589, 61 N. E. 947. So where one was injured in driving over a cross walk which was raised eight inches above the roadway, and the planks of which were warped and loose, it was held that a verdict for him should not be disturbed. Vandalia v. Ropp, 39 Ill. App. 344. But a cross walk in a muddy street being laid with heavy plank, and raised above the street grade, the beveling of the ends where they meet the rails of a street car track, being necessary to avoid the car scrapers, is held not a negligent construction. Bigelow v. Kalamazoo, 97 Mich. 121, 56 N. W. 339. And negligence on the part of a city in constructing a street crossing, such as to make the city liable for injuries to a person slipping thereon, is not shown by the fact that the crossing had very wide aprons, where it does not appear that the width of the top part was not ample to accommodate pedestrians. Fairgrieve v. Moberly, 39 Mo. App. 31.

virtue of other public necessities, convenience, and safety.⁸⁸ But on the other hand the fact that contrivances are necessary and usual to effect the purposes

88. Wellington v. Gregson, 31 Kan. 99, 1 Pac. 253, 47 Am. Rep. 482; Raymond v. Lowell, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 524, 53 Am. Dec. 57 (holding that the municipality is not bound to keep all of the way by the sidewalk in an equally suitable condition for crossing by pedestrians; that this would be impracticable in view of the necessity for drainage; and that the projection of a movable grating of a culvert from one to two inches above the level of the edge of the sidewalk against which it rests is not such a defect as shows a want of ordinary care on the part of the municipality and renders it liable for an injury occasioned to one stumbling over the grating in the daytime); Dougherty v. Horseheads, 159 N. Y. 154, 53 N. E. 799; Harrigan v. Brooklyn, 67 Hun (N. Y.) 85, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 39 [affirmed in 143 N. Y. 661, 39 N. E. 21], where one was injured while crossing a street away from a cross walk, by stepping into an opening in a curbstone which formed a drain from the street, and it was held that it was the duty of the city to free the street and walks from water, and that this small aperture in the curb line four inches wide and about three inches deep, and not on the sidewalk or cross walk, but detached some feet therefrom, was a prudent exercise of the power to make the streets and walks dry for public use.

Hitching posts, electric light poles, fire plugs, hydrants, and the like are not regarded as unlawful obstructions when placed at the curb or margin of the street or walk so as not to render the way unsafe. Columbus v. Sims, 94 Ga. 483, 20 S. E. 332; Bureau Junction v. Long, 56 Ill. App. 458; Weinstein v. Terre Haute, 147 Ind. 556, 46 N. E. 1004; Lostutter v. Aurora, 126 Ind. 436, 26 N. E. 184, 12 L. R. A. 259; Vincennes v. Thuis, 28 Ind. App. 523, 63 N. E. 315; Macomber v. Taunton, 100 Mass. 255; Ring v. Cohoes, 77 N. Y. 83, 33 Am. Rep. 574; Van Wie v. Mt. Vernon, 26 N. Y. App. Div. 330, 49 N. Y. Suppl. 779; Jordan v. New York, 26 Misc. (N. Y.) 53, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 716 (curbstone); Horner v. Philadelphia, 194 Pa. St. 542, 45 Atl. 330.

Stepping-stones.—Wolf v. District of Columbia, 21 App. Cas. (D. C.) 464, 69 L. R. A. 83; Dubois v. Kingston, 102 N. Y. 219, 6 N. E. 273, 55 Am. Rep. 804; Cincinnati v. Fleischer, 63 Ohio St. 229, 58 N. E. 568, which cases are as to carriage blocks placed in proper parts of sidewalks.

Covering over slippery walk.—In Kleiner v. Madison, 104 Wis. 339, 80 N. W. 453, non-liability was declared for the placing of an apron and covering over a cement sidewalk in the winter time when the walk became slippery, the court holding that in cold weather sudden changes are liable to occur in consequence of ice and snow, thawing and freezing, and that reasonable care was all that could be required.

Obstructions authorized by statute.—The duty of keeping alleys open and free from nuisances, imposed upon cities by statute, does not apply to such obstructions as a city is specially empowered to authorize, such as the use of its alleys by a railroad company. Heath v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 61 Iowa 11, 15 N. W. 573.

Temporary obstructions.—So it is held that as long as an obstruction placed upon a street is temporary and reasonable in its character there will be no liability. Swart v. District of Columbia, 17 App. Cas. (D. C.) 407; Simon v. Atlanta, 67 Ga. 618, 44 Am. Rep. 739 (non-liability for injury caused by collision with a rope stretched across a street by order of the municipal authorities in order to allow a parade of the fire department); Arthur v. Charleston, 51 W. Va. 132, 41 S. E. 171 (holding that the public should be warned of or protected against such temporary obstruction).

Building materials may be deposited in the street by a city or abutting owner and the same are not unlawful obstructions if not permitted to remain an unreasonable time. Winters v. New York, 15 Daly (N. Y.) 102, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 695; Pinnix v. Durham, 130 N. C. 360, 41 S. E. 932. See also Senhenn v. Evansville, 140 Ind. 675, 40 N. E. 69. It is negligence, however, for a city to leave building materials piled in the roadway of a street at night, without any light thereon to give notice to travelers. Van Vranken v. Clifton Springs, 86 Hun (N. Y.) 67, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 329. See also infra, XIV, D, 4, e, (iv).

A team temporarily stationary in the street under the charge of the owner or driver is not a defect, nor want of repair to be amended, nor obstruction to be removed; and the town is not liable for injuries occasioned thereby. Sikes v. Manchester, 59 Iowa 65, 12 N. W. 755; Davis v. Bangor, 42 Me. 522.

Fence separating bridle path from foot path.—It is not negligence to construct a fence separating a bridle path from a foot path in a park; and a horseman who goes on the foot path at night, and is injured by his horse falling over such fence, cannot recover. Platt v. New York, 8 Misc. (N. Y.) 409, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 672.

Gutters and sloping surfaces.—It being impracticable to bring all streets and walks to a dead level, a slight ascent in a cross walk or gutter crossing the street may sometimes have to exist, and it will not be said that such a condition constitutes a defect. Baker v. Madison, 56 Wis. 374, 14 N. W. 239. See also Kaiser v. St. Louis, 185 Mo. 366, 84 S. W. 19; Lavasseur v. Haverstraw, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 237; Canavan v. Oil City, 183 Pa. St. 611, 38 Atl. 1096; Cook v. Milwaukee, 27 Wis. 191. But where it appeared that a gutter was cut in the natural rock and as originally constructed was eighteen inches deep and sloped gradually from the desired will not justify the municipality in maintaining them in such a position as to render the way defective and unsafe.⁸⁹

(B) Defect in Plan of Construction. In some cases it has been held that since a municipality in determining the character or plan of construction of streets, sidewalks, and other public ways acts in a legislative, quasi-judicial, and discretionary capacity,⁹⁰ it is not liable for injuries resulting from a dangerous or defective condition due solely to a mistake of judgment in the plan of construction adopted;⁹¹ and that the rule is not limited to cases where the plan adopted was determined in advance, but applies equally where it was ratified and adopted by the municipality after the actual work of construction.⁹² On the other hand it has been held that since the duty of seeing that such ways are kept in a reasonably safe condition is a positive duty and not a matter of discretion,⁹³ the municipality may in some cases be held liable for injuries due to a dangerous or defective condition in the plan of construction adopted.⁹⁴ Even where the rule sides to the lowest point in the middle, and the rock had broken out on one side leaving a perpendicular wall about eight inches high, a verdict for plaintiff in an action for an injury caused by the wheels of his wagon running into the gutter at such steep place and throwing him out was sustained. Stone v. Troy, 14 N. Y. Suppl. 616. And where an unsafe condition of a sidewalk caused one to overstep the sidewalk at night and fall into a gutter, as where the sidewalk was covered with water, it was held that the failure to guard against such an accident at that place would render the municipality liable. Bly v. Whitehall, 120 N. Y. 506, 24 N. E. 943.

Ditches or gutters with walks across the same for the use of pedestrians are of such common necessity and general use that they cannot be considered as defects or obstructions in the highway. Loberg v. Amherst, 87 Wis. 634, 58 N. W. 1048, 41 Am. St. Rep. 69.

Statement of rule.—The municipality will not be liable on account of the character of the plan adopted unless it is so obviously dangerous as to show a failure to consider or purpose to misconstrue the work (Clay City v. Abner, 82 S. W. 276, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 602), or the plan is so totally and radically deficient as to leave the highway immediately upon its completion in need of repairs to make it safe for travel (*Hoyt v. of non-liability for the character of the plan adopted is recognized and applied, it will not be extended to cases not clearly within its application,⁹⁵ and a municipality cannot avoid liability on this ground if it appears that no particular plan of construction was ever in fact adopted,⁹⁶ or the work was not done in conformity with the plan adopted,⁹⁷ or where the municipal authorities knew that the plan adopted had resulted in a dangerous condition and they did not remedy the defect or guard against injuries that might result therefrom;⁹⁸ but to render a municipality liable for such defective or dangerous plan it must have notice thereof and a reasonable time to remedy it.⁹⁹ Where a town is required to keep in repair highways which are located and laid out by county commissioners, it is not liable for injuries due to errors of location over which it had no control.¹

(c) Steps or Abrupt Slopes. A municipality is not required to so construct all its sidewalks that they shall meet upon exactly the same level,² and the mere existence of a descent, slope, or step in the sidewalk of a city does not render it liable for accidents to persons in stepping from one elevation to another.³ But it is the duty of the city, when such steps or slopes are necessary to construct and maintain them in a reasonably and ordinarily safe condition as to such persons as may, lawfully, and in the exercise of ordinary care, use them;⁴ and although it is not liable for slight inequalities therein,⁵ recovery may be had against it for

4. McQueen v. Elkhart, 14 Ind. App. 671, 43 N. E. 460; Weiss v. Detroit, 105 Mich. 482, 63 N. W. 423 (holding that a cross walk containing a loose plank, the end of which is raised about two inches above the level of the walk, is reasonably safe within the meaning of 3 Howell Annot. St. § 1446e, which makes it the duty of municipal corporations to keep cross walks in a reasonably safe condition for public travel); Nichols v. St. Paul, 44 Minn. 494, 47 N. W. 168; Miller v. Where two portions of a sidewalk ascending a hill are built on two different planes divided by a perpendicular wall several feet in height, the building of steps with a suitable railing may be a proper method of connecting the two portions. Hoyt v. Danbury, 69 Conn. 341, 37 Atl. 1051.

Where the plan of constructing such steps or slopes is one that many prudent men might approve, or where it is doubtful from the facts whether the street as planned or ordered was dangerous or unsafe, or not, the benefit of the doubt should be given to the city, and it should not be held liable. Teager v. Flemingsburg, 109 Ky. 746, 60 S. W. 718, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1442, 95 Am. St. Rep. 400, 53 L. R. A. 791.

negligently constructing or permitting unusual or unnecessary steps or slopes from which injury might have been reasonably anticipated;⁶ or where the step or slope was constructed in violation of the requirements of the common council;⁷ or where the plan of construction adopted was manifestly unsafe.⁸

(D) Rain, Snow, and Ice—(1) STREETS. A municipal corporation is not required to keep its streets clear of snow and ice to the same extent as its sidewalks,⁹ but the same principle applies that it must exercise ordinary care in removing defects and obstructions caused by accumulations of snow and ice which render

Wis. 652, 24 N. W. 405); nor is a fall of one inch in ten in a stone apron leading from a sidewalk to a cross walk, even though combined with a slight lateral inclination, such a defect (De Pere v. Hibbard, 104 Wis. 666, 80 N. W. 933); nor an ascent of one inch or so to the foot in a cross walk, or a gutter crossing a street (Baker v. Madison, 56 Wis. 374, 14 N. W. 289); nor a shallow gutter in a sidewalk with the bricks on one side three quarters of an inch to an inch higher than those on the other (Haggerty v. Lewiston, 95 Me. 374, 50 Atl. 55); nor a rounded depression in a flag sidewalk about four inches deep, thirty-four inches long, and twelve inches wide (Hamilton v. Buffalo, 173 N. Y. 72, 65 N. E. 944 [reversing 55 N. Y. App. Div. 423, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 990]); nor a depression four feet long, eleven inches wide, and three and one-half inches deep near the curb in a sidewalk fifteen feet wide (Schall v. New York, 88 N. Y. App. Div. 64, 84 N. Y. Suppl. 737); nor a depression two and one-half inches deep, seven inches wide, and two feet six inches in length, in a sidewalk eight feet wide (Beltz v. Yonkers, 148 N. Y. 67, 42 N. E. 401); nor is a decline or slope in a sidewalk not exceeding three inches in four feet, with a lateral pitch one quarter of an inch to the foot, in connection with an accumulation of snow not unusual or extraordinary, an actionable defect as a matter of law (Koepke v. Milwaukee, 112 Wis. 475, 88 N. W. 238).

A municipal corporation must use its own judgment in regard to the manner in which cross walks shall connect with sidewalks, and it cannot be held liable for an injury caused by a part of a cross walk put down by a property-owner being allowed to remain a few inches higher near its intersection with the sidewalk than another part thereof. Shippy v. Au Sable, 65 Mich. 494, 32 N. W. 741.

Indiana.—Glantz v. South Bend, 106 Ind. 305, 6 N. E. 632 (holding that a street crossing consisting of a plank which is raised from two to two and one-half inches above the level of the sidewalk is a dangerous ob-

Iowa.—Ford v. Des Moines, 106 Iowa 94, 75 N. W. 630, holding a temporary sidewalk which sloped five feet in a distance of forty feet without cleats or hand rails on it defective.

Louisiana.—Blume v. New Orleans, 104 La. 345, 29 So. 106, holding that where a municipality permits one proprietor to raise his sidewalk and lets the grade of the sidewalk on adjacent property remain out of grade for more than a year, and owing to an abrupt descent of about five inches at the dividing lines an accident happens, the city is liable.

Minnesota.—Blyhl v. Waterville, 57 Minn. 115, 58 N. W. 817, 47 Am. St. Rep. 596 (holding an unnecessary drop or step instead of a gradual slope an actionable defect); Tabor v. St. Paul, 36 Minn. 188, 30 N. W. 765 (holding a difference of from six to nine inches in the heights of the sidewalks of two streets at the place of their intersection sufficient evidence of a defect to go to the jury upon the question of the city's liability by a person injured there).

Ohio.—Toledo v. Higgins, 12 Ohio Cir. Ct. 541, 5 Ohio Cir. Dec. 485, holding that where part of a sidewalk is at grade and part not, requiring a step of seven inches between them, and this condition has remained for a long time and in consequence a person passing at night is injured, the city is liable.

Pennsylvania.—Kellow v. Scranton, 195 Pa. St. 134, 45 Atl. 676, holding that where a municipality had notice of a decided depression in a level surface of the pavement of a street and failed to repair it, and plaintiff fell and was injured, by reason of stepping into the depression, at that time concealed by snow and slush, she was entitled to recover.

the street unsafe for travel,¹⁰ particularly where the existence of the accumulation is due to some other act or neglect on the part of the municipality,¹¹ such as the defective construction or condition of the way,¹² or the condition of a water main or hydrant.¹³ The municipality is not, however, an insurer of the safety of its streets nor is it required to meet every emergency;¹⁴ it is only required to exercise ordinary care to keep them in a reasonably safe condition,¹⁵ which must be determined by the locality, climate, weather conditions, and other circumstances,¹⁶ it being frequently impossible or entirely impracticable to keep the streets clear of snow and ice.¹⁷ So also a municipality is not liable for an accumulation of snow in the street caused by cleaning off sidewalks and street car tracks,¹⁸ unless the accumulation forms a dangerous obstruction to travel, and the municipality fails to exercise ordinary care in removing it within a reasonable time.¹⁹

(2) SIDEWALKS, FOOTWAYS, AND CROSS WALKS. The rule requiring a municipal corporation to exercise ordinary care to keep its sidewalks in a reasonably safe condition for the ordinary purposes of travel applies to the removal of accumulations of ice and snow,²⁰ and for injuries due to its negligence in this regard it will be liable;²¹ but a municipality is not bound to keep its sidewalks absolutely free

In Massachusetts the statute of 1896 providing that no city or town shall be liable for from snow and ice at all times and under all circumstances.²² It is only required to exercise ordinary care to keep them in a reasonably safe condition,²³ which must be determined with reference to the locality, climate, weather conditions, and other circumstances of the particular case;²⁴ and a municipality will not be liable unless it is shown that under the circumstances it was negligent.²⁵ It is ordinarily held that a mere slippery condition of a sidewalk due to a smooth coating of ice or snow is not such a defect as to render the municipality liable for injuries resulting therefrom,²⁶ and that the rule applies to cases where the presence of the ice or snow causing such slippery condition is due to artificial as well as natural an injury to persons or property, suffered in a highway, by reason of snow or ice thereon, if the place at which the injury was received was at the time of the accident reasonably safe, is construed to mean that a way will not be deemed unsafe if it would be reasonably safe and convenient for travelers but for the presence of snow and ice. Newton v. Worcester, 169 Mass. 516, 48 N. E. 274.

In Connecticut it is held that where a sidewalk had become dangerous for travelers, by an accumulation of ice, and the city had ample notice of its condition and might have rendered it safe by reasonable expenditure, it is liable to a traveler injured by falling thereon, although there was no structural defect in the sidewalk and the ice was smooth and the icy condition extended throughout the causes.²⁷ It has been held, however, that a municipality will be liable for injuries due to a smooth coating of ice or snow, for which it would not otherwise be liable if its presence was due to negligence on the part of the municipality with regard to the condition of the walk,²⁸ or of drains, gutters, conductors, and the like;²⁹ and a distinction has also been made between slipperiness, which is a part of a generally prevalent condition, and that due to some local cause affecting only a particular place.³⁰ Where there is a considerable accumulation of ice or snow, or it has formed in drifts or ridges, or so as to present a rough and uneven condition, it is ordinarily held to constitute a defect or obstruction which it is the duty of the municipality to remove;³¹ but where an accumulation or rough or uneven surface of ice or snow, which the municipality should have removed, is covered over with a new layer of ice or snow, and an injury occurs upon the new surface before the municipality would be chargeable with negligence in not removing it, it will not be liable,³² unless it is shown that the original defective condition due to the old accumulation contributed as a proximate cause of the injury.³³

(3) ACCUMULATIONS CAUSED BY DEFECTS. A municipal corporation is liable for an injury due to an accumulation of ice or snow upon a sidewalk where its own negligence caused or contributed to its being there,³⁴ as where it was due city. Cloughessey v. Waterbury, 51 Conn. 405, 50 Am. Rep. 38.

Sanding walk.—A municipality is not liable for failing to sand a walk which is merely smooth and slippery from level ice formed from natural causes, which were not special to the place of the injury, and where the walk was not otherwise defective. McGuinness v. Worcester, 160 Mass. 272, 35 N. E. 1068.

Application of rule.—The rule as to the non-liability of a municipality for the slipperiness condition of a sidewalk applies to such condition when caused from the freezing of snow carried on to the sidewalk by the feet of travelers (Nason v. Boston, 14 Allen (Mass.) 508), or ice formed from water escaping from hose (Henkes v. Minneapolis, 42 Minn. 530, 44 N. W. 1026), or from a fire engine (Cook v. Milwaukee, 27 Wis. 191), or dripping from the eaves of a building (Kaveny v. Troy, 108 N. Y. 571, 15 N. E. 726; Hausmann v. Madison, 85 Wis. 187, 55 N. W. 167, 39 Am. St. Rep. 834, 21 L. R. (4) NOTICE OF ICE AND SNOW. In order to charge a municipality with responsibility for the dangerous condition of a street or sidewalk by reason of ice and snow thereon, it must have had reasonable notice of such condition.⁴⁴ Except where an ordinance or statute requires actual notice,⁴⁵ or where the dangerous con-

Under R. I. Gen. Laws, c. 72, § 13, requiring at least twenty-four hours' notice to a city before it can be held liable for injuries caused by snow or ice on a sidewalk, a city is not liable, in the absence of notice, without proof that the injury would not have occurred, but for some defect independent of the ice and snow. Allen v. Cook, 21 R. I. 525, 45 Atl. 148.

That an ordinance requires owners to remove the snow and ice from their sidewalks does not excuse the necessity for such notice. Heintze v. New York, 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 295.

45. See the cases cited infra, this note.

Under Me. Rev. St. c. 18, c. 80, providing that to render a town liable for injuries received from a defective way, it must have dition had not existed a sufficient length of time to presume notice,⁴⁶ this notice may be either actual⁴⁷ or constructive,⁴⁸ as where the dangerous conditions have existed for such a length of time, and under such circumstances, that the municipal authorities would necessarily have discovered them by the exercise of ordinary care.⁴⁹ Where a municipality has knowledge that a sidewalk is in such a condition had twenty-hours' actual notice of the defect, a heavy fall of snow, which drifts the highways of a town generally, but blows off in spots, is not such actual notice of a particular drift from which an injury is received. Gurney v. Rockport, 93 Me. 360, 45 Atl. 310.

Under N. Y. Laws (1881), c. 183, requiring actual notice of the defect to be given, in order to render defendant liable, the fact that ice had been on the walk for about three weeks; that there had been sleet a few days before the accident, after which the weather turned cold; that defendant's superintendent of streets had been seen to pass over the walk ten or twelve days, and again about a week before; that when he passed over the walk there was ice on it, but covered with ashes; and that the ice extended almost the entire width of the sidewalk for about five feet in length does not show actual knowledge. McNally v. Cohoes, 127 N. Y. 350, 27 N. E. 1043 [affirming 53 Hun 202, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 842].

R. I. Gen. St. c. 60, § 15, exempting towns from liability for injuries caused by obstructions of snow and ice in the highways, unless notice of the particular obstruction causing the injury has been given to the highway officers, applies to obstructions of snow and ice produced by artificial causes, as well as to those produced by natural causes. Winsor v. Tripp, 12 R. I. 454.

46. Ince v. Toronto, 27 Ont. App. 410, holding that where there was a sudden change in the temperature about six o'clock in the morning, and ice then formed on the sidewalk in question, the municipality, in the absence of actual notice of its dangerous condition, was not liable for an accident which happened about eleven o'clock on the same morning.

48. Ransom v. Belvidere, 87 Ill. App. 167; Todd v. Troy, 61 N. The falling of snow is sufficient notice to the city to impose upon it the duty of clearing its sidewalks. Foxworthy v. Hastings, 25 Nebr. 133, 41 N. W. 132.

ipality liable under Pub. St. c. 52, §§ 1, 18, for injuries to a person by her falling on ice which had been on the sidewalk at that place for three or four days.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1652.

Facts sufficient to charge notice.—That a municipality had constructive notice of the dangerous condition caused by ice or snow has been held to be sufficiently shown from the facts that a defect caused by an accumulation of snow and ice had existed for nine days on a frequented sidewalk, which during that time was patrolled by a policeman, and several times passed by one of the selectmen of defendant town (Fortin v. Easthampton, 145 Mass. 196, 13 N. E. 599); or from a long continued accumulation of ice on the sidewalk (Ney v. Troy, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 679 [affirmed in 123 N. Y. 628, 25 N. E. 952]); or from the fact that on the day of the accident about one tenth of an inch of snow had fallen, and in the ten days preceding not more than five tenths of an inch had fallen; that it had thawed in the first portion of the ten days; and that the ice at the place of the accident was rough and uneven and extended the width of the walk and had been so a week or ten days (Masters v. Troy, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 485, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 450 [affirmed in 123 N. Y. 628, 25 N. E. 952])).

Facts insufficient to charge notice.—That a municipality had constructive notice of a defect caused by ice or snow has been held not to be sufficiently shown by the fact that the accident occurred about eight o'clock in the morning, and that the icy condition at the place where the accident occurred was caused by ice which had formed thereon only the night before (Leipsic v. Gerdeman, 68 Ohio St. 1, 67 N. E. 87); nor from the fact that it snowed on the third day before the accident, rained on the second day before, and froze on the night before, together with testimony that there was ice there on the night before (Davis v. Kingston, 1 Silv. Sup. (N. Y.) 536, 5 N. Y. Suppl. 506); nor from the fact that the president of the common council of a city lived on the opposite side of the street from a sidewalk on which ice was formed, and took a street car frequently in front of his house (Corey v. Ann Arbor, 134 Mich. 376, 96 N. W. 477); nor from the tion that it would be dangerous when covered with ice and snow, a fall of snow is immediate notice to it that the sidewalk at that point is in a dangerous condition.⁵⁰

(5) TIME FOR REMOVAL. While a municipality must perform its duty of removing dangerous accumulations of ice or snow from its sidewalks within a reasonable time after notice, actual or constructive, of such condition,⁵¹ it is not bound to see that its sidewalks are at all times absolutely free from snow and ice,⁵² and it is entitled to a reasonable time to remove such accumulations;⁵³ what is reasonable being dependent upon the circumstances of the particular case.⁵⁴ It may also rely in the first instance for a reasonable time upon residents to attend to the walks adjacent to their premises as required by ordinance,⁵⁵ but such a requirement does not entirely relieve the municipality, which must either enforce the ordinance or do the work itself within a reasonable time.⁵⁶ Where sudden cold following a rain or melting of snow causes a film of ice upon the sidewalks which it is practically impossible to remove, the municipality may, without being guilty of negligence, wait for a change of temperature to remedy the condition.⁵⁷

(E) Overhanging and Falling Objects—(1) IN GENERAL. A city is liable in damages to one injured by the falling of a tree, pole, or other object standing within the limits of the street or highway, where it knew, or might have known, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, of its dangerous condition, and took no steps to remove the same, or to guard passers-by against it.⁵⁸ It has been held, fact that plaintiff was injured at seven o'clock in the evening by falling on a slippery sidewalk, and that the icy condition of the sidewalk was caused by rain that had fallen in the afternoon (Springer v. Philadelphia, 9 Pa. Cas. 395, 12 Atl. 490); nor from the fact that for a week immediately before the accident the temperature of the weather had remained below the freezing point, and that there was snow a week before the accident, but none during the interval (Foley v. Troy, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 396).

The failure of the city to remove snow from the sidewalk within forty-eight hours after an intermittent storm had ceased is not sufficient to constitute constructive notice of the sidewalk's dangerous condition, since the city is entitled to wait a reasonable time for abutting owners to remove the snow. Hawkins v. New York, 54 N. Y. App. Div. 258, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 623.

however, that if the falling object appeared safe to outward observation, and the city authorities had no reason to suspect its dangerous condition, the city is not liable.⁵⁹

(2) STRUCTURES OR PROJECTIONS OVER STREET. The duty of a municipal corporation to keep its streets in safe condition requires it to take reasonable precautions against dangers from overhead as well as underfoot.⁶⁰ The danger and the unsafety may be as great, and the consequences as injurious, as in the case of a defect in, or obstruction upon, the surface of the street; and a city has been held liable for injury to one struck, without contributory negligence, by a structure or object overhanging or projecting into a street dangerously low.⁶¹ On the same principle the liability of cities for injuries occasioned by the fall of dangerous and insufficiently supported structures, which have negligently been permitted to overhang a street, has been maintained in many cases.⁶² But the liability of the city in such cases can arise only when the notice of the danger has actually come to the servants of the corporation, or may be imputed to them while in the ordinary exercise of their duty.⁶³ Under a statute with reference to the liability of municipal corporations for defects in streets, it has been held that anything projecting over the sidewalk from a building, but not connected with the street or sidewalk, and high enough not to interfere with passage underneath, however insecure and dangerous it may be, is not a defect in the street; while a projection, if supported by posts erected upon the sidewalk is such a defect, and, for an injury caused by its fall, the city may be held liable.⁶⁴

(3) BUILDINGS OR OTHER STRUCTURES ADJACENT TO STREET. Whenever a structure exists on the side of a street in so unsafe a condition as to endanger the safety of travelers thereon, it is the duty of the city to remove it; and for failure to do so the city may be liable.⁶⁵ If, however, such structure is wholly on private property, although on the line of the street, it has been held that no municipal liability arises for injuries caused by its fall,⁶⁶ unless it is made a municipal duty to take down and remove dangerous structures.⁶⁷ If such a wall was firm and solid, and was thrown down by a tempest or other act of God, the city is not liable for an injury caused thereby.⁶⁸ Where the duty of examining and removing dangerous buildings and structures is vested in the department of buildings and the officers and agents thereof are not the agents of the city, the city is not liable for their failure to remove such a structure.⁶⁹

(F) Objects Frightening Horses—(1) IN GENERAL. By the weight of authority an object calculated to frighten horses, negligently permitted to remain in a public street or highway, is such an obstruction as makes a municipality liable in case of an accident happening in consequence thereof,⁷⁰ even though it is so far from the traveled path as to avoid all danger of collision.⁷¹ To render the corporation liable in such cases, however, it must appear that the object or obstruction was one naturally calculated to frighten horses of ordinary gentleness,

In Massachusetts and a few other states it has been held that an object in a highway, with which a traveler does not come in contact or collision, and which is not an actual obstruction in the way of travel, is not a defect, for the sole reason that it is of a nature to cause a horse to take fright, in consequence of which he escapes from the control of his driver, and causes damage. Bowes v. Boston, 155 Mass. 344, 29 N. E. 633, 15 L. R. A. 365; Cook v. Montague, 115 Mass. 571; Bemis v. Arlington, 114 Mass. 507; Cook v. Charlestown, 98 Mass. 80; *Kingsbury v. E. 315, 49 Am. St. Rep. 843. Nor does it make any difference that the object which frightened the horse is one which would have been an

and that the horse frightened was of such a character.⁷² Neither the rightful use by men or animals of a highway, which is itself in reasonably safe and fit condition, nor their mere misconduct upon it, although such misconduct may amount to a public nuisance, will of itself render a city liable for damages occasioned by a horse taking fright.⁷³

(2) STEAM ROLLERS AND BUILDING MATERIALS. The liability of a municipality for permitting objects which are naturally calculated to frighten horses to remain within the limits of a highway arises out of the fact that such objects are permitted to be unlawfully there.⁷⁴ Since therefore a city may lawfully use a steam roller for the purpose of constructing or repairing its streets, in the absence of negligence in its management, it is not liable for damages occasioned by a horse becoming frightened thereat;⁷⁵ but unnecessarily allowing a steam roller to remain in a street, after the street is finished and the use of the roller has ceased, is sufficient to render the city liable for damages resulting from the frightening of horses by such roller.⁷⁶ The same rule applies in the case of building materials temporarily placed upon a portion of the street, whether by the city or an abutting owner.⁷⁷ The municipality should give reasonable notice to the traveling public of the presence of such an obstruction,⁷⁸ but a view of it in time to avoid it without injury amounts to notice.⁷⁹

(g) Embankments, Excavations, and Openings — (1) IN STREET — (a) EMBANKMENTS. Where a city in grading a street leaves a high and steep embankment in the street, the city is liable for personal injuries caused by its failure to erect guards or railings to prevent accidental driving or falling over such embankment, in the absence of contributory negligence on the part of the person injured.⁸⁰ The negligence consists, not in the plan of the work, or the manner in which it is done, but in the failure to provide suitable protection against accident after the work of grading is completed.⁸¹

"Exposed place."—An embankment at the edge of a street, the roadway being in good condition and bounded by a gutter or curbstone eight inches high and by ten feet of sidewalk, over which plaintiff was dragged by his horse, which had become frightened, was held not to be an "exposed place," within the meaning of the provision of a city charter giving the city power to compel or cause the making and repairing of railings at exposed places; and a failure to guard the embankment with railings was not negligence. *Hubbell v. (b) EXCAVATIONS⁸²—aa. In General. When a municipality negligently permits an unguarded excavation to remain in its streets, it is liable to any one who falls therein, while in the exercise of ordinary care.⁸³

bb. Ditches, Culverts, and Sewers. A municipality has a right to make such excavations in its streets from time to time as, in its judgment, may be necessary and proper to lay down culverts, sewers, and such other subservice conduits as the business, health, convenience, and comfort of the citizens may require. But in so doing the city must use all reasonable care, and take every reasonable precaution to prevent injuries to travelers along the streets;⁸⁴ and if a person in the exercise of ordinary care is injured through the neglect of such reasonable precautions, an action will lie against the municipality for such injury.⁸⁵

(c) OPENINGS. An opening in a street or sidewalk such as an area way, coal hole or manhole, properly constructed and covered, is not a nuisance per se, but a lawful use of the street, and consistent with the easement of the public to travel over it.⁸⁶ Liability for an injury sustained by a pedestrian, who falls into such an opening, depends therefore on whether there was negligence in constructing or maintaining it.⁸⁷ If such openings are negligently left open and unprotected for such length of time that the municipal authorities ought, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, to know and remedy the mischief, the city may become liable for injuries occasioned thereby to travelers exercising ordinary care.⁸⁸ If, defendant had notice thereof in time to repair, and failed to do so, it is chargeable with negligence. Vicksburg v. McLain, 67 Miss. 4, 6 So. 774.

What is a "culvert."—Where a ditch used to carry off the surplus water of a village runs along the side of a street, the fact that it is covered for the purposes of a sidewalk does not constitute it a culvert, within the meaning of a statute providing for the recovery of damages sustained from defective streets, bridges, cross walks, and culverts. *Kowalka v. however, the opening is so guarded as to be safe under all ordinary circumstances for persons traveling upon the streets, the city is not liable for an injury resulting from some fortuitous circumstance, which could not, in the ordinary course of events, be expected or anticipated as likely to occur.⁸⁹ Nor is a city chargeable with negligence where the occupant of the premises leaves an area or coal hole uncovered, while using the same, and the city officials have no notice that it is uncovered.⁹⁰

(2) ON PROPERTY ADJACENT TO STREET—(a) IN GENERAL. Where a municipal corporation permits an excavation or other dangerous place to remain unfenced or without proper guards, in such close proximity to the highway that one rightfully using it may, without any fault on his part, but as the result of an unintentional deviation or an accidental misstep, sustain injury by falling therein, it will be liable.⁹¹ The danger which requires a railing must be of an unusual character, such as declivities, excavations, steep banks, or deep water.⁹² Furthermore, in order to render the corporation liable for injuries occasioned by such excavation, it must substantially adjoin the highway, so that one making a false step, or affected by sudden giddiness, might fall therein.⁹³ If, in order to reach the place of danger, the party injured must become an intruder or trespasser upon the premises of another, the case will be different, for in such case there is no breach of duty from which the liability to respond in damages can result.⁹⁴

(b) CELLAR AND BASEMENT OPENINGS. Basement entrances and cellar ways on the street side of buildings, and not encroaching upon the sidewalks, are lawful, and a municipality is not liable for injuries caused by a failure to guard such an opening, unless reasonable security to the public requires that it should be fenced or railed.⁹⁵

(H) Dangerous Approach From Private Property. While a municipal corporation is generally under no obligation to guard dangerous approaches from private property to its streets,⁹⁶ yet it is bound to provide guards or signal lights to prevent persons from receiving injuries in entering a street by a commonly traveled road, although such road is in fact a private way, and has never been laid out as a highway or street.⁹⁷ There is no duty, however, to erect barriers or maintain lights to prevent injury to persons entering a street where there is no traveled way either public or private, and nothing to put the city on notice that such entrance is likely to be attempted.⁹⁸

d. Notice of Defects and Obstructions—(i) IN GENERAL. Ordinarily a municipality is not liable for an injury caused by a defect or obstruction in a public street except where it has neglected some duty in that respect after it has had notice of the defect or obstruction, or unless the facts and circumstances are such as to warrant an inference of notice or knowledge of such defect or obstruction, or the defect or obstruction has existed for such a length of time that by the exercise of reasonable diligence it might have been known and corrected.⁹⁹ And so if a defect, when known, is repaired and the way is made suffi-

Notice.—In Smith v. Lowell, 139 Mass. 336, 1 N. E. 412, it was held that where a private way had been dedicated to the public use, under a statute providing that the mayor, etc., should, when public safety demanded it, direct and cause the entrances of such ways entering on and uniting with an existing public way to be closed up or else by other sufficient means caution the public against entering such public ways, etc., a notice posted so as to be conspicuous and legible to persons entering the way indicating that the way is a dangerous one, exempts the city from liability for injuries received by one entering such way, although the notice was not seen by him.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1606.

No notice is required sometimes, as under a statute imposing an absolute duty on the corporation. Arthur v. Charlestown, 51 W. Va. 132, 41 S. E. 171; Gibson v. Huntington, 38 W. Va. 177, 18 S. E. 447, 45 Am. St. Rep. 853, 22 L. R. A. 561; Evans v. Huntington, 37 W. Va. 601, 16 S. E. 801; Chapman v. Milton, 31 W. Va. 384, 7 S. E. 22. But this does not apply to injuries not caused by any defect or obstruction in the road-bed, but from a defect in an embankment maintained in lieu of a barrier along and within the boundaries of a public way, fixing the limits of the road within which any one had a right lawfully to use it, such maintenance not being within the statute requiring the corporation to keep its streets, etc., in repair, but coming under the other classes of cases in which the municipality is liable for negligence in the discharge of ministerial or specified duties not discretionary or governmental, assumed in consideration of privileges conferred by its charter, or as a private owner of property.

2. Hutchins v. Littleton, 124 Mass. 289, holding that if the defect is sufficiently repaired so as to make the road safe and convenient and a new defect is afterward produced, as by the action of the elements, either in the same place or in another place, the town would not be liable unless such new defect had existed twenty-four hours or was known to the town.

however, where the defect is one in construction, as distinguished from a mere condition of repair, or an obstruction by a wrong-doer, the municipality being charged ab initio with defects of its own making or leaving in the construction or repair of any portion of the highway.³

(III) UNSAFE CONDITION CAUSED BY OR UNDER AUTHORITY OF MUNICIPALITY. Municipal corporations are chargeable with knowledge of their own acts, and those ordered by them; and therefore whenever defective conditions in streets are due to the direct act of the municipality itself, or of persons whose acts are constructively its own, no notice, either actual or constructive, need be shown,⁴ or, as it is otherwise stated, notice of the defect is necessarily implied in such cases.⁵ And if a city permits a dangerous structure to be erected in its street it must take notice of such defects therein as ordinary care will discover,⁶ and it will be liable when the defect is chargeable to its own negligence, as by failure of its officers to perform their duty of supervision and inspection.⁷

(iv) ACTUAL, IMPLIED, OR CONSTRUCTIVE NOTICE—(A) In General. Construction of sidewalks by abutters.—When the duty rests on the municipality or its officers to exercise supervisory care and inspection of sidewalks, and in the exercise of ordinary care in this respect the defects could have been discovered, the municipality will be liable for injuries caused by such defects. Boucher v. New Haven, 40 Conn. 456 (where the landowner was laying a sidewalk in obedience to an order of the municipality which was thus put upon inquiry) [distinguished in Cummings v. Hartford, 70 Conn. 115, 38 Atl. 916, where the landowner proceeded upon his own motion, in which case it was necessary to prove either the fact of notice or such an omission by the city to exercise that reasonable supervision over its streets which was incident to its duty to maintain them in repair as would itself be negligence naturally leading to the injury]; Furnell v. St. Paul, 20 Minn. 117; Mannis v. Woodburn, 57 Ohio St. 330, 48 N. E. 1097. See also Abilene v. Cowperthwait, 52 Kan. 324, 34 Pac. 795; Beall v. Seattle, 28 Wash. 593, 69 Pac. 12, 92 Am. St. Paul*, 18 Minn. 279. But under the rule that there is no absolute duty on the municipality to discover and remedy defects in sidewalks but merely to use ordinary care and diligence so to do, where a sidewalk is constructed by an abutter it is held that, conceding that it is the duty of the municipal authorities to supervise the construction, an instruction which would make the municipality liable for defects therein without reference to whether in the discovery or failure to remedy the defect the municipality was in the exercise of ordinary care is erroneous. Warren v. Bowdoinham, 88 Me. 293, 34 Atl. 72 (holding that the words "actual notice" mean something more than an opportunity to obtain notice by the exercise of due care and diligence, and that proof of gross inattention is not proof of actual notice, but that the facts and circumstances in a given case may justify the conclusion that the officer must have had actual notice unless grossly inattentive); Haines v. Lewiston, 84 Me. 18, 24 Atl. 430; McNalley v. Cohoes, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 202, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 842 [affirmed in 127 N. Y. 350, 27 N. E. 1043] (holding that such statute does not conflict with any constitutional right to a remedy, but its object is to demand such certain proofs of liability as shall tend to the more certain administration of justice, and it appearing further in the appellate court that the actual notice required by the statute may be established by evidence either direct or substantially the same as any other fact). Under such a charter provision, evidence that one of the officers had passed over the sidewalk where the injury occurred without showing that he observed the defect is not sufficient to charge the city with notice, although the officer might have been negligent in not observing the defect. Smith v. Rochester, 150 N. Y. 581, 44 N. E. 1128 [affirming 79 Hun 174, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 539]; McManus v. Watertown, 88 N. Y. App. Div. 361, 84 N. Y. Suppl. 638; Tarba v. Rochester, 41 N. Y. App. Div. 188, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 755. See also Sprague v. Rochester, 159 N. Y. 20, 53 N. E. 697. And see infra, XIV, D, 4, d, (vii); XIV, E, 7, d, (iii).

The object of the statute in requiring notice to the city authorities of a defect in a sidewalk, as a prerequisite to a right of action to recover damages for an injury caused thereby, is to give the city a reasonable time to repair the defect and prevent an injury therefrom. It is to protect the city from liability for imputed negligence, or negligence that is implied by law from the lapse of time and the failure to discover the defect. Sprague v. Rochester, 159 N. Y. 20, 53 N. E. 697.

Such provisions do not apply where the dangerous obstruction or defect is caused or created by the city itself. Jones v. Deering, 94 Me. 165, 47 Atl. 140; Holmes v. Paris, 75 Me. 559; Twist v. Rochester, 37 N. Y. App. Div. 307, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 850 [affirmed in 165 N. Y. 619, 59 N. E. 1131]; Stedman v. Rome, 88 Hun (N. Y.) 279, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 737; Houston v. Isaacks, 68 Tex. 116, 3 S. W. 693; Houston v. Owen, (Tex. Civ. App. 1902) 67 S. W. 788; Still v. Houston, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 447, 66 S. W. 76; Ringelstein v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1893) 21 S. W. 634; Adams v. Oshkosh, 71 Wis. 49, 36 N. W. 614. See also supra, XIV, D, 4, d, (ii). And where the charter provision requires particular notice when the defect or condition of repair is the result of gross negligence of the city, the absence of such notice is no defense against liability for ordinary negligence. Peacock v. Dallas, 89 Tex. 438, 35 S. W. 8; Dallas v. McAllister, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 39 S. W. 173. So it is held that a statutory provision that a city shall not be liable for any injury sustained by reason of defective sidewalks and cross walks, unless actual notice of their condition shall have been given to the common council, etc., within forty-eight hours previous to the injury, has no application to an injury caused by the absence of proper guards or railings along the edge of a sidewalk requiring protection. Tompkins v. Oswego, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 371 [affirmed in 131 N. Y. 581, 30 N. E. 67]. But if the defective construction is the remote cause of the injury, the proximate cause being the city's failure to keep in repair, the statute applies. Houston v. Vatter, 32 Tex. Civ. App. 298, 74 S. W. 806. But see Emery v. Waterville, 90 Me. 485, 38 Atl. 534, holding that the mere fact that a street commissioner directed a subordinate to construct a cross walk across a street does not of itself charge the street commissioner with "actual notice" that the cross walk was so constructed as to become a defect in the street.

Transfer of duty without restriction.—Upon the transfer to a city of the power and duty pertaining to highways which were before that time exercised by the road supervisors under the general law of the state which made them responsible for damages resulting from unsafe or impassable roads when notified thereof in writing, etc., the charter making no provision or restriction as to the liability of the city in discharging the duty imposed upon it, such restrictions under the general law on the liability of the supervisors do not accompany the transfer of the duties to the city. Collins v. Council Bluffs, 32 Iowa 324, 7 Am. Rep. 200.

cases requiring the exercise of ordinary care to discover the defect.¹¹ It is a question of fact for the jury,¹² and the inference may be drawn from the magnitude of the defect,¹³ its conspicuity, and the length of time of its continuance, or its notoriety.¹⁴

(B) Time of Existence of Defect or Obstruction. Notice to a city of an unsafe and dangerous condition in its streets or sidewalks may be implied if the defect has existed for such a length of time that the municipal authorities, by the exercise of reasonable care and diligence, could have known of its existence and remedied it.¹⁵ There is no fixed or definite rule as to what length of time would

Actual observation by all passers-by is not necessary for imputation to the municipality of notice of defect or obstruction, but it is sufficient if the defect is of such character as to be noticeable to those who look. Rosevere v. Osceola Mills, 169 Pa. St. 555, 32 Atl. 548.

Notice to private citizens.—Notice to or knowledge by citizens is not notice to the municipality. Kenyon v. Indianapolis, Wils. (Ind.) 129 (as to a latent defect); Cramer v. Burlington, 39 Iowa 512 (notice to two or more citizens); Donaldson v. Boston, 16 Gray (Mass.) 508. In these cases it appears that the notice to citizens must be to such an extent as to show that the defect is notorious. But in Mason v. Ellsworth, 32 Me. 271, a notice to two or more inhabitants of a town was held to be sufficient notice to the town. And in Bill v. Norwich, 39 Conn. 222, it was held that notice to a citizen while not notice to the city might be considered as evidence tending to show notice to the city.

17. Hutchins v. Littleton, 124 Mass. 289, where the defect must have existed twenty-four hours or have been known to the town. In Crosby v. Boston, 118 Mass. 71, it was held that where the landowner had been required by the city to remedy a defect in the cover of a coal hole in a sidewalk, and the landowner replaced the hole cover with a new one which also contained a defect of a different character, the city is not liable for an injury caused by such defect unless the new defect existed for more than twenty-four hours before the accident or the city had reasonable notice thereof.

Provision intended to give time to repair.—In Wisconsin a charter provision declaring that a city should not be liable for defects, etc., unless it appeared that municipal officers had knowledge thereof and that such knowledge should not be presumed unless the defect existed three weeks before the injury "provided, however, that nothing here contained shall be so considered as to mean that knowledge shall be presumed because such three weeks had elapsed," was held to give the city three weeks in which to discover and remove the defect. Byington v. Merrill, 112 Wis. 211, 88 N. W. 26; Rhyner v. Menasha, 107 Wis. 201, 83 N. W. 303; Studley v. Oshkosh, 45 Wis. 380. But the fact that the defect has existed for three weeks is held to have no more force in charging the officers with notice than it had before the law was enacted, and a plaintiff not relying upon previous knowledge of the defect by the officers must show that the defect existed for three weeks and also such a state of facts as will charge the proper city officers with notice of the defect before the accident happened. Rhyner v. Menasha, 107 Wis. 201, 83 N. W. 303; Sullivan v. Oshkosh, 55 Wis. 508, 13 N. W. 468. So in New York it was held that under a charter provision that the city should not be liable for an injury from a defective sidewalk unless actual notice has been given the city officers a reasonable time before the injury and that the officer having charge of the highways shall have power to repair any sidewalk where the property-owner neglects to do so for five days after written notice served on him, notice to the superintendent of repairs of a defective condition of a sidewalk at the time of a notice to the property-owners which is only four days before an injury, was insufficient to charge the city with negligence for failure to repair. Touhey v. Rochester, 64 N. Y. App. Div. 56, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 661. But in Cantwell v. Appleton, 71 Wis. 463, 37 N. W. 813, under a provision that the city should not be liable unless it be shown that one of the city officers had actual knowledge of the defect three days prior to the accident, it was held that no city official could have such notice where the defect had existed only a few days before the accident, and that in such a case if it is shown that the city had actual knowledge of the defect before the accident, through its proper officers, such provision has no application.

Void provision.—In Washington a provision in a city charter adopted by the city that the municipality should not be liable for injuries sustained from defective conditions of sidewalks, unless notice of such defects should have been given to the superintendent of streets or to the city council within twenty-four hours of the injury, was unreasonable and void as the city could not say whether or not it should be held for personal injuries caused by its neglect of duty. Born v. Spokane, 27 Wash. 719, 68 Pac. 386.

St. 550 (holes in sidewalk existing for eight or ten days before the accident); Naylor v. Salt Lake City, 9 Utah 491, 35 Pac. 509 (pile of stones in street for from three to twelve days).

Hours.—Harriman v. Boston, 114 Mass. 241 (evidence that a coal hole in a sidewalk on a much frequented street was opened early in the morning and at noon); Parsons v. Manchester, 67 N. H. 163, 27 Atl. 88 (obstruction consisting of a pile of dirt which had existed in a much traveled street for about ten hours).

Time held insufficient to justify inference.—Recent origin.—Notice should not be imputed where the defects are of recent origin, and particularly where they are concealed in any wise. Bell v. Henderson, 74 S. W. 206, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 2434, holding that where, on the evening before the night on which plaintiff was injured, a plank broke in a platform which the city had permitted a business firm to erect over a gutter in the street to enable the firm to receive and deliver goods, the break being behind a stack of wire and not observable by one passing along the sidewalk, although it could be seen from the street, notice could not be inferred. See also Warsaw v. Dunlap, 112 Ind. 576, 11 N. E. 623, 14 N. E. 568 (where an obstruction created by a third person and which had existed one and three-quarters hours before the injury was held not to have remained long enough to charge the city with notice); Cannfield v. Newport, 73 S. W. 788, 24 Ky.

L. Rep. 2213 (where a manhole in a street was opened by boys in the forenoon and a barrel was immediately placed over it by a citizen which was removed at night by some unauthorized person and before daylight an accident was caused by the opening, and it was held that constructive notice could not be imputed); Butler v. Oxford, 69 Miss. 618, 13 So. 626 (where an hour or two during which objects were placed in a ditch by the side of a street, and which frightened plaintiff's horse, is held not sufficient time to charge the municipality with notice of the presence of such articles); McFeeters v. New York, 102 N. Y. App. Div. 32, 92 N. Y. Suppl. 79 (where the injury was caused by falling into a sewer excavation owing to the absence of a danger signal, and it appeared that a red light was burning up to within one hundred and fifty-three minutes of the time of the accident, and that in the interval the lantern containing the light had been removed and broken without the knowledge of defendant, and it was held that the period of time was insufficient to charge defendant with notice of such removal).

Sudden defect.—Where no defect existed on the day of the accident but it was caused by a hard rain and the corporate authorities had been reasonably diligent in examining the place before this time just before the rain and the accident occurred just after, it was held that the municipality could not be charged with notice. Montezuma v. Wilson, 82 Ga. 206, 9 S. E. 17, 14 Am. St. Rep. 150.

Overnight.—Where a barrier protecting a sidewalk was removed over night, the municipality was held not charged with notice of such removal. Theissen v. Belle Plaine, 81 Iowa 118, 46 N. W. 854. So where persons working on an abutting lot had left a pile of dirt in the street at the end of the day it was held that the municipality was not charged with notice of the existence of the obstruction during that night. Breil v. Buffalo, 144 N. Y. 163, 38 N. E. 977.

After repair.—Where the injury from a defective sidewalk occurred on the day following that on which the sidewalk had been repaired and placed in a reasonably safe condition, it was held that the time was not sufficient to justify an inference of notice. Dittrich v. Detroit, 98 Mich. 245, 57 N. W. 125. So where a gate had been made secure two days before plaintiff was injured and it was safe on the evening before the injury occurred, it was held that there being no evidence tending to show that the authorities had ascertained or might have ascertained the insecure condition of the gate by the use of ordinary care, plaintiff was not entitled to a verdict. Jackson v. Boone, 93 Ga. 662, 20 S. E. 46.

W. 319 (holding that where plaintiff fell through a glass sidewalk resting on framework, and sustained injuries, and it did not appear what the natural life of such a walk was, and the defect was not calculated to attract attention, constructive notice could not be imputed to the city); Baustian v. Young, 152 Mo. 317, 53 S. W. 921, 75 Am. St. Rep. 462 (hollow under sidewalk caused by the ground being washed out, there being nothing to show when the washout occurred); *Carvin v. quiring the city to exercise reasonable diligence in making discovery of existing defects did not require a search for and discovery of latent defects.

Michigan.—Hembling v. Grand Rapids, 99 Mich. 292, 58 N. W. 310 (holding that in the absence of actual notice, municipalities are liable only for such defects in sidewalks as are apparent, or suggested by appearances, or disclosed by a test in the nature of the ordinary use of such walks); McGrail v. Kalamazoo, 94 Mich. 52, 53 N. W. 955.

New York.—Hart v. Brooklyn, 36 Barb. 226.

Pennsylvania.—Lohr v. Philipsburg, 165 Pa. St. 109, 30 Atl. 822, 156 Pa. St. 246, 27 Atl. 133 (in the latter report of which case, which was twice tried, it was said that the duty of a municipality as to sidewalks is secondary and supplemental, to see that the property-owner makes and maintains a safe pavement; that its breach of duty is not in failing to do the work but in failing to compel the owner to do it); Burns v. Bradford, 137 Pa. St. 361, 20 Atl. 997, 11 L. R. A. 726 (where it is held that if the defective condition be such that it is discovered by only one out of very many persons who pass it in the ordinary pursuit of business or pleasure it cannot be said to be notorious or to be such a defect that the municipality is chargeable with constructive notice of its existence); Cole v. Scranton, 4 Lack. Leg. N. 287.

South Dakota.—See Jones v. Sioux Falls, 18 S. D. 477, 101 N. W. 43, holding that the existence in a plank sidewalk six feet wide, of a hole seventeen inches long, seven inches wide, and two and one-half inches deep, where one of the planks had broken off at the end and been forced downward at a place where the walk had been repaired three months before, and to which the attention of no witness had ever been called, although they had frequently been over the walk, is not enough to charge the city, which had no actual notice of the defect, with negligence.

Tennessee.—Jackson v. Pool, 91 Tenn. 448, 19 S. W. 324, holding that the corporation is not required to examine and inspect wooden sidewalks laid on the ground, and that an instruction which would permit a recovery for a latent defect if it might have been discovered "by inspection, observation, or otherwise," is erroneous, such a rule applying only to structures over dangerous places.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1644.

Cover over coal hole.—Where the defect in a sidewalk consisted of a cover to a coal hole which was not properly fastened, it was held that the city was not liable if the condition of the cover was not known to the city officers or was not apparent from the street, under a statute which gave a right of action when by reasonable care and diligence the or in streets, not arising from their original construction, or from an obstruction placed thereon by a wrong-doer,²⁴ either express notice of the existence of the defect or obstruction must be brought home to it, or they must be so notorious as to be observable by all.²⁵ In other cases, however, it would seem that under the rule the mere fact that the defect was hidden, or not observable to passers-by, and the corporation had no notice of it will not exempt from liability, if the defect was of such a nature that reasonable caution on the part of the municipal authorities would have discovered it.²⁶ city might have prevented the injury. Hanscom v. Boston, 141 Mass. 242, 5 N. E. 249 [distinguished in McGaffigan v. Boston, 149 Mass. 289, 21 N. E. 371], in that in the latter case the evidence showed that the cover was loose, and that the stone into which it was fitted was rounded underneath so that the cover would balance and tip up when stepped on; that this was apparent from the street; and that, although the cover would be secure if fastened by a bolt on the inside, it was usually left unfastened, and that this condition had existed for a considerable time]. And in Cooper v. Milwaukee, 97 Wis. 458, 72 N. W. 1130, although laying down the rule that the city was bound to be vigilant in observing defects in the sidewalk, and in remedying them, when they became observable to an officer exercising intelligent and reasonably vigilant supervision over them, it was said that it is not the duty of the municipality to examine covers to coal-hole openings to ascertain if they are unfastened, unless there is something apparent on the surface or otherwise brought to their attention, to lead them to believe that the same are loose and likely to become misplaced.

McCabe*, 93 Ill. App. 288 (as to duty to make reasonably frequent examinations of streets to discover defects); Powell v. Bowen, 92 Ill. App. 453 (where it is said that it is only reasonable that notice of latent defects should not be so readily presumed from their continuance as open and notorious ones); Joliet v. McCraney, 49 Ill. App. 381 (holding that the duty of using reasonable care in discovering defects in sidewalks does not devolve on mere passers-by). A municipal corporation will not be considered to have notice of a defect in a sidewalk which was not such as to put a reasonably prudent man, whose business it was to look after the repairs, on inquiry to examine its condition. Joliet v. Walker, 7 Ill. App. 267. But if the circumstances are such that an inference of notice to any officer or agent of the city whose duty it is to report the defect may be drawn, this will be sufficient without regard to whether the circumstances show notice to the particular person having special supervision of the sidewalks. Hearn v. Chicago, 20 Ill. App. 249.

St. Louis*, 151 Mo. 334, 52 S. W. 210 (where the non-liability of the city was put upon the ground that the defect was latent and had not existed for a sufficient length of time to justify the assumption that defendant knew of the defective condition).

Structure subject to decay.—But even where the rule obtains that there must be some outward indication observable to all

(v) NOTICE TO MUNICIPAL OFFICERS OR AGENTS. The municipality is charged with notice of any defect or obstruction in the highway, to any officer or agent whose duty it was to report, or make provision for the correction of the defect,²⁷ or to look after or control the making of repairs or removal of passers, it has been recognized that the corporation is not under all circumstances relieved from all active duty of inspection, and that if the structure is one which is subject to decay and has stood for the period when decay might be expected to have set in, it would be negligence to omit all precautions to ascertain the condition of the structure. Denver v. Dean, 10 Colo. 375, 16 Pac. 30, 3 Am. St. Rep. 594; Rapho Tp. v. Moore, 68 Pa. St. 404, 8 Am. Rep. 202, as to timbers in a bridge, which case is distinguished in Lohr v. Philipsburg Borough, 156 Pa. St. 246, 27 Atl. 133, from those holding that the defects must be patent, in that the duty to maintain the bridge was primarily and absolutely on the town. But see Miller v. North Adams, 182 Mass. 569, 66 N. E. 197.

27. Connecticut.—Cummings v. Hartford, 70 Conn. 115, 38 Atl. 916, holding that, although a policeman is charged with the duty of reporting defects in the streets, he may presume that one who is laying a sidewalk has a permit therefor and he need not report that the sidewalk is being relaid.

Georgia.—Columbus v. Ogletree, 102 Ga. 293, 29 S. E. 749, policeman.

App. 621 (in which cases notice to policemen was held sufficient); Hearn v. Chicago, 20 Ill. App. 249. Where the evidence showed that a plank in a sidewalk had been loose for some time and that a member of the village board, upon learning the fact, nailed down the loose board but the stringers were decayed and insufficient to hold it, a finding that the defect was known to the city authorities is warranted. *Sorento v. Rep. 168 (where the police force constituted a department of the city government and a policeman was an officer and agent thereof, by express provision, it being held therefore that his knowledge of an obstruction or defect in a sidewalk was notice to the city, the court distinguishing Attwater v. Mayor, 31 Md. 462, which held that the city was not liable for the failure to remove a nuisance from a public street because the power was lodged in the police and they were not city officers, the distinction between the two cases being based upon the difference between the statutes of the two states); Small v. Kansas City, 110 Mo. App. 721, 85 S. W. 627 (inspector); Clark v. Brookfield, 97 Mo. App. 16, 70 S. W. 934 (where it was held that an instruction that there was no evidence "of actual notice" of the defect in a sidewalk was erroneous where there was evidence that the hole in the walk had existed for a month, or all of the fall, and that an alderman resided within seventy-five feet of the place of the accident); *Cropper v. Officer's opinion as to danger.—Where a city ordinance required policemen on duty to inspect cross walks, the failure of a policeman to report a defect is not a defense, although the policeman was of opinion that the defect did not render the cross walk dangerous. Goodfellow v. New York, 100 N. Y. 15, 2 N. E. 462.

De jure officer.—Where one acts as street commissioner and is admitted to be such by the village, his duties being to examine the streets and sidewalks, notice to him is notice sufficient to charge the village, notwithstanding neither the charter nor the by-laws of the village provided for the appointment of such officer. McSherry v. Canandaigua, 12 N. Y. Suppl. 751 [affirmed in 129 N. Y. 612, 29 N. E. 821].

28. Colorado.—Denver v. Dean, 10 Colo. 375, 16 Pac. 30, 3 Am. St. Rep. 594, holding that by virtue of an ordinance prescribing the duties of the chief of police he was charged with the care of coal holes and caps in sidewalks, and that where he had knowledge of a defect existing in a cap the city should be charged with actual notice if it had reasonably sufficient time before the accident to remedy the defect, but that "means of knowledge" within the rule as to constructive notice, except in so far as the term might include cases of neglect to anticipate and prevent certain defects naturally arising from use and climatic influence, is applicable only to defects or obstructions which are so open and notorious as to be observable by all, and knowledge on the part of the officer of latent defects is not "means of knowledge."

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1645.

Notice to individual councilmen has been held insufficient, although the town council, as a body, has much to do with the care of the highways. Jordan v. Peckham, 19 R. I. 28, 31 Atl. 305. And in Frazier v. Butler Borough, 172 Pa. St. 407, 33 Atl. 691, 51 Am. St. Rep. 739, it is held that, although notice given a member of the borough council officially and while in the exercise of his official duties will be sufficient, his mere personal knowledge will not be chargeable to the borough, as where the obstruction was caused by a contractor in grading a sidewalk for a member of the council. But see Keyes v. Cedar Falls, 107 Iowa 509, 78 N. W. 227, holding that an alderman's knowledge of an excavation in a sidewalk imputes notice to the city, although the excavation is made by him in the erection of a private building without direct authority from the city.

Personal knowledge of one bound to act on knowledge, the law fixing no channel through which such knowledge must reach him in order to impose the duty on him personally, must be imputed to him as an officer. Canfield v. East Stroudsburg Borough, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 649.

29. Georgia.—Columbus v. Ogletree, 96 Ga. 177, 22 S. E. 709, as to notice to a police-employees,³⁰ and knowledge before election or induction to office will not bind the corporation.³¹

(VI) GENERAL CONDITION OR PARTICULAR DEFECT. Notice of a defect is notice of that condition of things which constitutes a defect, although the authorities may think that it does not constitute a defect.³² So notice of the particular defect causing the injury is not required, where the municipality has knowledge or notice, actual or constructive, of a general local defective condition in the walk or way,³³ or where knowledge of a particular defect is necessarily extended to man if it is not the duty of the police to look after and report the condition of streets.

Illinois.—Savanna v. Trusty, 98 Ill. App. 277 (treasurer); Reid v. Chicago, 83 Ill. App. 554 (policeman, in the absence of any showing that policemen were charged with any duty in respect to streets and sidewalks).

New York.—Touhey v. Rochester, 64 N. Y. App. Div. 56, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 661 (holding that knowledge by a sidewalk inspector of a defect in a sidewalk, such inspector having no authority to make repairs but being charged only with the duty of inspecting and notifying property-owners to repair, and if such repairs are not made within five days to report the fact to the foreman of repairs or the chief inspector, is not sufficient notice to officers having charge of the highways within a charter provision which allows the property-owner five days' notice to make the repairs after which the inspector is to notify the officers who have authority to make them); Bush v. Geneva, 3 Thomps. & C. 409 (village trustees). The fact that an alderman had knowledge that a gas company was excavating and laying gas pipes under an ordinance requiring it to keep proper signal lights burning at holes, etc., without reserving to the city officers any right of supervision, and none being in fact exercised by them, is not per se evidence of negligence on the part of the city, where the injury was occasioned by one's falling into an unguarded excavation. McDermott v. Kingston, 19 Hun 198 [reversing 6 Abb. N. Cas. 246, 57 How. Pr. 196].

Boston*, 127 Mass. 290 (holding that knowledge by a janitor of a public school-house that a coal hole in front of the school-house is uncovered is not notice to the city of a defect in the highway, the janitor being appointed by the school committee of the city, and having nothing to do with the streets); Monies v. Lynn, 119 Mass. 273 (holding that notice to a lamp-lighter of a defect in a sidewalk does not warrant a finding of notice to the city which

Knowledge of danger.—It is no defense that the city did not know that an unlawful obstruction was dangerous, where it did not act with reasonable diligence after notice of the obstruction and before injury was occasioned thereby. Rehberg v. New York, 91 N. Y. 137, 43 Am. Rep. 657. But where an injury was caused by an explosion of gas in a manhole constructed and owned by a corporation in a street it was held that the city was not liable, having no notice of the probability of danger. Hunt v. New York, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 198 [affirmed in 109 N. Y. 134, 16 N. E. 320].

Nebraska.—Nothdurft v. Lincoln, 66 Nebr. 430, 92 N. W. 628, 96 N. W. 163.

Washington.—Durham v. Spokane, 27 Wash. 615, 68 Pac. 383, holding that if the sidewalk at the place where the injury occurred was old, rotten, full of holes, and out of repair, and dangerous generally, and had been so for a period of four months prior thereto, and such condition was the cause of the injury, it can make no difference as to the city's liability therefor whether the injured person stepped into an existing hole, or a hole made by her at the time of the injury, or, if she did step into an existing hole, whether that particular hole existed for a long or for a short period of time, provided of course she was not guilty of contributory negligence.

Wisconsin.—Viellesse v. Green Bay, 110 Wis. 160, 85 N. W. 665; Weisenberg v. Appleton, 26 Wis. 56, 7 Am. Rep. 89.

include what reasonable diligence in remedying such defect would have disclosed.⁸⁴ But notice of one particular defect which caused an injury cannot be established by proof of notice of another particular defect which is in no way related to the former and did not contribute to the injury.⁸⁵

(vii) KNOWN PROBABLE CAUSES—(A) In General. Knowledge or notice of a condition from which defects proximately follow as a probable cause may be sufficient to charge the municipality with notice of such defects.⁸⁶ But on the

Thus notice that a particular board is loose in a plank walk need not be brought home to the municipality, if there is sufficient to charge it with notice of the general condition of the walk. Aurora v. Hillman, 90 Ill. 61; Columbia City v. Langohr, 20 Ind. App. 395, 50 N. E. 831; Riley v. Iowa Falls, 83 Iowa 761, 50 N. W. 33; Campbell v. Kalamazoo, 80 Mich. 655, 45 N. W. 652; Huff v. Marshall, 97 Mo. App. 542, 71 S. W. 477; Plattsmouth v. Mitchell, 20 Nebr. 228, 29 N. W. 593; Aslen v. Charlotte, 35 N. Y. App. Div. 625, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 754 (where the municipal officers were charged with the duty of inspection); Ripon v. Bittel, 30 Wis. 614 (holding that such a defect is not properly a latent one). But in Ruggles v. Nevada, 63 Iowa 185, 18 N. W. 866, it was held that to charge a town with constructive notice of a defective plank in a sidewalk, by reason of which an injury has occurred, it is necessary to show that the identical defect which led to the accident was open and visible; and no questions with respect to the condition of the walk in the "locality near-by" can be admitted.

An express notice without specifying the place, given to a member of the street committee for the purpose of conveying knowledge that a plank is loose in a sidewalk, has been held to be insufficient to charge notice of any particular plank being loose. Rogers v. Orion, 116 Mich. 324, 74 N. W. 463.

A statutory notice of twenty-four hours must be a notice of the identical defect which caused the injury and notice of another or of the existence of a cause likely to produce the defect is not sufficient. Bradbury v. Lewiston, 95 Me. 216, 49 Atl. 1041; Smyth v. Bangor, 72 Me. 249.

34. Dallas v. McAllister, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 39 S. W. 173, where an injury was caused by the sinking of ground covering a defective sewer at some distance from a point where a dangerous depression had existed in the street for a period of two months, and when the injury occurred the ground caved all the way from the place of the accident to the point where the original depression existed, and it was held that it was a reasonable inference that the sewer was in an unsafe condition all the way down and that notice of this would have followed ordinary care in repairing the first break.

35. Fuller v. Jackson, 82 Mich. 480, 46 N. W. 721; Nothdurft v. Lincoln, 66 Nebr. 430, 92 N. W. 628, 96 N. W. 163; Shelby v. Claggett, 46 Ohio St. 549, 22 N. E. 407, 5 L. R. A. 606, holding that where the cause of the injury sued for was the stepping on a loose board in a sidewalk, the municipality cannot, as a matter of law, be charged with notice of such defect merely because it had knowledge of the existence of a general defect in the walk in that it had become dished through the settling of the middle stringers.

Notice of the defective condition of the sidewalks generally for one or two blocks each way from the street crossing and not as to the particular defect in the crossing itself, which caused the injury, is not sufficient. Dundas v. Lansing, 75 Mich. 499, 42 N. W. 1011, 13 Am. St. Rep. 457, 5 L. R. A. 143. To the same effect see Tice v. Bay City, 78 Mich. 209, 44 N. W. 52. And evidence that a city's wooden walks were generally in a defective condition is held insufficient to show notice of a particular defect in a particular wooden sidewalk. Boulder v. Weger, 17 Colo. App. 69, 66 Pac. 1070.

Notice by the corporation to an abutter to repair a sidewalk is not, as a matter of law, an admission of notice of any other defect than the one stated in the notice or of one so related to it that the existence of the latter according to the usual course of affairs may be inferred from the former. Shelby v. Claggett, 46 Ohio St. 549, 22 N. E. 407, 5 L. R. A. 606.

36. Corts v. District of Columbia, 7 Mackey (D. C.) 277; Bourget v. Cambridge, 159 Mass. 388, 34 N. E. 455; Olson v. Worcester, 142 Mass. 536, 8 N. E. 441 (where the defect was produced by a water conductor upon a building adjacent to a sidewalk, which emptied its water upon the sidewalk and which had been there for a long time, the court holding that the existence of the water conductor might be considered in determining whether the officers of the city might have had notice by the exercise of proper care of the defect caused in the sidewalk by it); Milledge v. Kansas City, 100 Mo. App. 490, 74 S. W. 892 (where the defect consisted of a condition caused by a quantity of earth on a sloping sidewalk becoming saturated with rain).

Knowledge of dangerous use.—Sweeney v. Butte, 15 Mont. 274, 39 Pac. 286, holding that where a city knows that trap-doors which it permits to exist in the sidewalk are dangerous whenever used in the manner in which they were built to be used, and are ordinarily used, and an injury is caused through such dangerous use, it need not be shown that the city knew that the doors were being used at the time of the accident. To the same effect see McClure v. Sparta, 84 Wis. 269, 54 N. W. 337, 36 Am. St. Rep. 924. But the mere presence of hoxes in the street and knowledge thereof by the authorities does other hand notice or knowledge of a cause which might produce the defect is not equivalent to a statutory notice of the identical defect which caused the injury.⁸⁷

(B) Condition of Structure From Use and Decay. Common prudence dictates that a city in the exercise of its duty to care for the safety of the streets should look after the effects of long wear upon a structure in a street, as a sewer basin, which is likely to become dangerous in the course of time,⁸⁸ and the knowledge of the action of the elements on structures of wood, and of the liability of timber to decay under certain conditions, is to be attributed to municipalities, just as to natural persons. The duty of the municipality to exercise ordinary care to detect such natural decay, and to guard against injuries therefrom, follows necessarily.⁸⁹

e. Precautions Against Injury—(1) IN GENERAL. The general municipal duty to put and keep streets in a reasonably safe condition requires the corporation to exercise reasonable care and prudence in adopting such precautionary measures as will prevent persons, exercising due care, from suffering injury from obstructions or defects,⁴⁰ whether the defects or obstructions are caused by its own not constitute notice that the property-owner, who has a certain right to use the street in this way, is exceeding his right or is making an unreasonable or unlawful use of the street. Loberg v. Amherst, 87 Wis. 634, 58 N. W. 1048, 41 Am. St. Rep. 69. So where a manufacturer of machinery has stored iron wheels and other machinery on a public lawn between the sidewalk and roadway there was held to be no liability on the part of the municipality for injuries sustained by reason of a wheel being so negligently placed on the lawn as to fall when touched unless the municipality has distinct notice of the particular negligence in the placing of such wheel or others, and a mere petition of citizens remonstrating against allowing such use of the lawn upon the ground that it was unsightly and liable to frighten horses is not sufficient to give notice of the negligence above referred to. Mattimore v. Erie, 144 Pa. St. 14, 22 Atl. 817.

Inspection.—There is no inflexible rule as to the frequency or particularity of inspection upon the question of municipal negligence, but all pertinent circumstances of each case must be considered. The failure of a municipality to make tests as to the condition of trees in public places after a preliminary examination may be taken as a circumstance on the subject of its negligence in ascertaining whether the safety of the public requires any alteration in a case where such examination disclosed a condition from which suspicion of danger may fairly arise. can be no stronger than the duty of reasonable care and precaution to protect the public from injury.⁴⁷

(III) LIGHTING STREETS. The common law does not require municipal lighting of streets, and therefore a right of action for personal injuries sustained in the night-time cannot be founded solely upon the alleged negligence of the city in this respect.⁴⁸ And so the mere failure to exercise a discretionary power under a charter or to assume the function under a permissive grant in the charter will not be sufficient alone upon which to base liability.⁴⁹ Nor will the voluntary assumption of the function impose liability.⁵⁰ On the other hand this absence of duty refers to ways which are reasonably safe for travel,⁵¹ and if dangerous defects or obstructions exist, the failure to light the street may become pertinent in determining the question of negligence in the performance of the municipal duty to keep the street in a reasonably safe condition for travel, the municipality having assumed to perform the function.⁵²

Isbell*, 83 Ill. 440, 25 Am. Rep. 407; Chicago v. Apel, 50 Ill. App. 132. But see Baltimore v. Beck, 96 Md. 183, 53 Atl. 976, where the city was held liable, and the fact that the lighting was to be done by a light company and that the failure to light was the fault of the company was held no defense in favor of the city.

Governmental duty.—Street lighting is held to be a purely governmental function, in the performance of which there can be no liability. Vincennes v. Spees, 35 Ind. App. 389, 74 N. E. 277; Vincennes v. Thuis, 23 Ind. App. 523, 63 N. E. 315.

App. 345, 57 Pac. 729, it is said that the extent and measure of duty resting upon a city as to lighting a street, which is open for travel, at a point where from any cause there is reasonable ground to anticipate danger in its use by persons who are themselves in the exercise of the required care, is a different matter from the general duty with regard to lighting streets.

52. Jefferson v. Chapman, 127 Ill. 438, 20 N. E. 33, 11 Am. St. Rep. 136 [affirming 27 Ill. App. 43] (holding that the jury should not be instructed as a matter of law that the failure to light streets at a certain crossing was not an act of negligence, and that if the accident occurred solely from such failure plaintiff could not recover); Freeport v. Isbell, 83 Ill. 440, 25 Am. Rep. 407; Miller v. St. Paul, 38 Minn. 134, 36 N. W. 271. See also Terre Haute v. Constans, 26 Ind. App. 421, 59 N. E. 1078; *Davenport v. Sufficient lighting.—The corporation upon undertaking to light its streets is bound only to light them so that they may be in a reasonably safe condition for travel in the ordinary modes. Chicago v. McDonald, 57 Ill. App. 250; Chicago v. Apel, 50 Ill. App. 132.

Lighting is not an absolute defense but may be material only in determining the question of contributory negligence. Giffen v. Lewiston, 6 Ida. 231, 55 Pac. 545.

Steps in park walk.—O'Rourke v. New York, 17 N. Y. App. Div. 349, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 261, holding that the duty of the city of New York as to the walks in Central park

nary prudence in keeping its streets in a condition of reasonable safety for travel,⁵³ and while lighting, railing, or guarding, according to the peculiar circumstances, may answer the demands of the law,⁵⁴ the one or the other of these precautions may be necessary to relieve the city from liability, where the defect or obstruction is such that under the particular conditions the danger may be reasonably apprehended and the adoption of such precaution is necessary, in the exercise of reasonable care, to afford protection against the danger.⁵⁵ The precaution should be sufficient to give such warning as will reasonably notify all persons using the street that the danger is there,⁵⁶ and whenever a barrier, guard-rail, or covering is one of reasonable care; that such walks are not generally used in the night-time for pleasure travel and that there is no duty imposed upon the city to light up such walks so that the attention of people will necessarily be called to irregularities like steps that are found in different parts of the park, which are used for connecting the more or less irregular surfaces.

Duty performed by others.—If a dangerous place is properly guarded by barriers and signals by those in charge of the work in a street, the city will be protected in the same manner as if such guards and signals had been placed there by it. Dooley v. Sullivan, 112 Ind. 451, 14 N. E. 566, 2 Am. St. Rep. 209; Kansas City v. Birmingham, 45 Kan. 212, 25 Pac. 569; Walker v. Ann Arbor, 111 Mich. 1, 69 N. W. 87. But on the other hand, if the municipality trusts to others, to see that guards or covering are properly kept up, it will be liable for the consequences of their negligence, although the barriers are down but temporarily. Blessington v. Boston, 153 Mass. 409, 26 N. E. 1113; Prentiss v. Boston, 112 Mass. 43. See also infra, XIV, D, 4, e, (IV), (C).

Dangerous approach from adjacent property see supra, XIV, D, 4, c, (IV), (H).

56. Anderson v. Wilmington, 2 Pennew. (Del.) 28, 43 Atl. 841 (holding that in such proportion as the character of the obstruction is not manifest to the ordinary observer, the duty on the part of the city to plainly make known its existence by such signals as can reasonably be observed is the more imperative); Carswell v. Wilmington, 2 Marv. (Del.) 360, 43 Atl. 169 (holding that the rule is, not that the city must do the wisest and best thing possible, but that it shall exercise such care and caution as a reasonably prudent and careful man would under is erected along or over an excavation in the street or near thereto, it should be of such a character and placed in such position in reference to the use of the street as will afford protection, and not produce a peril to persons passing on the way.⁵⁷ If necessary to prevent accidents when improvements are being made, the municipality should, by some barrier, close the street against the public so that no harm may happen if the work on the street is delayed.⁵⁸ like circumstances); Prentiss v. Boston, 112 Mass. 43; Foy v. Winston, 126 N. C. 381, 35 S. E. 609 (where in an action for injuries caused by falling into an open ditch in a street it was held not error to refuse to charge that placing planks across the ditch and hanging up a red lantern established the city's freedom from negligence).

Warning signals or lights at night.—There is a municipal duty to warn the traveling public of all casual obstructions or defects in streets, not otherwise safeguarded, by warning lights or signals. Mt. Carmel v. Guthridge, 52 Ill. App. 632 (leaving a street crossing unfinished without placing any danger signal thereon); Baltimore v. O'Donnell, 53 Md. 110, 36 Am. Rep. 395; Salem v. Webster, 95 Ill. App. 120 [affirmed in 192 Ill. 369, 61 N. E. 323]; Canton v. Dewey, 71 Ill. App. 346; Dooley v. Sullivan, 112 Ind. 451, 14 N. E. 566, 2 Am. St. Rep. 209; *Fox v. Violation of ordinance.—Joslyn v. Detroit, 74 Mich. 458, 42 N. W. 50, holding that where contractors building a house left a heap of sand in the street, the city cannot escape liability by showing that an ordinance required that proper warnings and signals should be used in such cases, and that its failure to comply with these were mere omissions of police duty. But it was held otherwise in Maryland because the police department was the only agency to enforce such ordinance and that department was not under the control of the city. Sinclair v. Baltimore, 59 Md. 592.

57. District of Columbia.—Koontz v. District of Columbia, 24 App. Cas. 59, where the obstruction consisted of a post with a projecting plank attached, which was too near the line of the cars running on the street.

Kansas.—Garnett v. Hamilton, 69 Kan. 866, 77 Pac. 583, where, while a sidewalk was being repaired, loose planks were insecurely laid over an excavation.

Kentucky.—Glasgow v. Gillen Waters, 113

Ky. 140, 67 S. W. 381, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 2375, holding that where a barbed wire is stretched across a street, without any other warning for night travelers, it is a nuisance.

Maryland.—Baltimore v. O'Donnell, 53 Md. 110, 36 Am. Rep. 396, holding a rope, stretched across the street without a light at night, not sufficient, the injury being caused by running against the rope at night.

Massachusetts.—Hinckley v. Somerset, 145 Mass. 326, 14 N. E. 166. See also Powers v. Boston, 154 Mass. 60, 27 N. E. 995.

New York.—Ott v. Buffalo, 131 N. Y. 594, 30 N. E. 67, where a barrier which on one's tripping and falling against it gave way and precipitated him into an excavation was held insufficient.

Washington.—Sutton v. Snohomish, 11 Wash. 24, 39 Pac. 273, 48 Am. St. Rep. 847, holding that evidence that an excavation near a public street was protected only by a loose plank resting on one end of a barrel and supported on the other by a board fastened to a post near the edge of the sidewalk would support a finding that the protection was insufficient.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1655.

Protection to children.—Where, to protect travelers from a precipice, a city maintained a fence three and a half feet high, composed of a board nailed flat on top of the posts, and two boards nailed on the sides of the posts with ten-inch spaces between them, it was held that, since the fence was sufficient protection to persons on the street, the city was not negligent for not providing a fence which children could not surmount or go through. Lineburg v. St. Paul, 71 Minn. 245, 73 N. W. 723.

Question for jury see infra, XIV, E, 9, e, (II).

58. Pettengill v. Yonkers, 116 N. Y. 558, 22 N. E. 1095, 15 Am. St. Rep. 442. So as to a tunnel which is one of the municipal highways. Chicago v. Hislop, 61 Ill. 86.

That part of a street being repaired, graded, or paved should be cut off from travel in order to protect the municipality from liability. Alexander v. Big Rapids, 76 Mich. 282, 42 N. W. 1071; Southwell v. Detroit, 74 Mich. 438, 42 N. W. 118.

All responsibility in streets closed for repairs may be suspended by due notice to the public by sufficient signs or barriers (Chicago v. McKenna, 114 Ill. App. 270; Torphy v. Fall River, 188 Mass. 310, 74 N. E. 465; Jones v. Collins, 177 Mass. 444, 59 N. E. 64; Hamilton v. Detroit, 105 Mich. 514, 63 N. W. 511; Stainback v. Meridian, 79 Miss. 447, 28 So. 947, 30 So. 607); but their removal will

(B) Dangers Outside of and Close to Way. Ordinarily fences or barriers are not required along ways to prevent travelers from straying out of their limits;⁵⁹ but, if there are excavations or other dangerous defects or obstructions close to the way, the city or local authorities are required to erect barriers or take other reasonable precautions to protect travelers against the danger.⁶⁰ revive it (Torphy v. Fall River, supra; Blessington v. Boston, 153 Mass. 409, 26 N. E. 1113; Alexander v. Big Rapids, 76 Mich. 282, 42 N. W. 1071).

Work on sidewalk.—But it is not necessary to close a street to travel because a new sidewalk is in process of construction; the most that is required is that the public shall be excluded from that portion of the walk that is not reasonably safe and fit for travel. Walker v. Ann Arbor, 111 Mich. 1, 69 N. W. 87.

Indiana.—Delphi v. Lowery, 74 Ind. 520, 39 Am. Rep. 98; Vincennes v. Spees, 35 Ind. App. 389, 74 N. E. 277; Elwood v. Addison, 26 Ind. App. 28, 59 N. E. 47.

Massachusetts.—Alger v. Lowell, 3 Allen 402, where it is said that the true test is not whether the dangerous place is outside of the way or whether some small strip not included in the way must be traversed in reaching the danger, but whether there is such risk of a traveler in using ordinary care in passing along the way being thrown or falling into a dangerous place that a railing is required to make the way itself safe and convenient; and that the city would have an undoubted right to erect such a railing, although it might obstruct the entrance to the passageway of an abutter; because no person has a right to an open access to his land, adjoining a street, of such a character as to endanger persons lawfully using the street for purposes of travel.

Minnesota.—Ray v. St. Paul, 40 Minn. 458, 42 N. W. 297 (holding that it can make no difference in the principle controlling that the dangerous place is at the end instead of alongside of the street, if the nearness of the dangerous place renders the street unsafe for public use); St. Paul v. Kubly, 8 Minn. 154 (as to a sidewalk next to which was a perpendicular descent of twenty feet and in addition a rapid descent of thirty feet).

Missouri.—Wiggin v. St. Louis, 135 Mo. 558, 37 S. W. 528.

Nebraska.—Kinney v. Tekamah, 30 Nebr. 605, 46 N. W. 835.

New Hampshire.—Davis v. Hill, 41 N. H. 329, holding that the want of a sufficient railing, barrier, and protection to prevent travelers passing upon a highway from running into some dangerous excavation or pond, or against a wall, stones, or other dangerous obstructions, outside the limits of the road, or in the general direction of the travel thereon, may properly be alleged as a defect in the highway itself.

New York.—Warner v. Randolph, 18 N. Y. App. Div. 458, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 1112 (guard-rails on outside of sidewalk); Bennett v. Sing Sing, 14 N. Y. Suppl. 463 (as to necessity of guards where the street was graded down leaving the sidewalk elevated above the surface of the street).

Pennsylvania.—Pittston v. Hart, 89 Pa. St. 389, where a railroad ran parallel to a street about twelve feet below its level, and an injury was caused by a team of horses running over the unguarded side of the street upon becoming frightened at a passing engine. But in Scranton v. Hill, 102 Pa. St. 378, 48 Am. Rep. 211, where a pedestrian on a public street at night intentionally left the highway to take a by-path, but, turning off the street too soon, missed the path, and was injured by falling off the end of a culvert which projected beyond the street line, on a level therewith, it was held that the city was not liable for failure to erect guards at the point where he turned off.

Washington.—Prather v. Spokane, 29 Wash. 549, 70 Pac. 55, 92 Am. St. Rep. 923, 59 L. R. A. 346 (holding that where there is a sharp turn in a bicycle path maintained by a city at a point about four feet from a gutter and sidewalk, with no barrier or light at the turn, the city is liable to one injured, owing to such condition, while using ordinary care); Taylor v. Ballard, 24 Wash. 191, 64 Pac. 143.

Wisconsin.—Olsom v. Chippewa Falls, 71 Wis. 558, 37 N. W. 575 (embankment by side of street); Prideaux v. Mineral Point, 43 Wis. 513, 28 Am. Rep. 558.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1655. And see supra, XIV, D, 4, c, (II), (B).

Canal.—But in Veeder v. Little Falls, 100 N. Y. 343, 3 N. E. 306, where a village street as used embraced state land on the property of the Erie canal, the municipality was held not liable for not erecting a barrier on the state land, which it had no right to do, or on the dividing line between the municipal and state land, if to erect the barrier on such dividing line would render the street more unsafe than it was in its existing condition. And in Reinhardt v. South Easton, 2 Pa. Cas. 90, 4 Atl. 532, where a narrow street ran parallel with a tow-path of a canal which was at right angles to a street crossing the canal by a bridge, it was held

(c) Temporary Removal Without Fault on Part of Municipality. If sufficient barriers are suddenly removed without warning to or fault on the part of the municipality, and an injury occurs before it may be charged with notice of the condition,⁶¹ it will not be liable,⁶² as where, under all the circumstances, including the nature and extent of the excavation, the character of the locality, the state of travel, the manner of the construction of the barrier, and the dangers to which it might reasonably be expected to be exposed if left unguarded by a watchman, the barricade is sufficient protection to persons using ordinary care and prudence, and is removed overnight by the mischievous acts of third persons,⁶³ or by accident of which the municipality has no notice.⁶⁴

f. Proximate Cause—(1) IN GENERAL. Generally, where an injury is alleged to have been caused by a defect or obstruction in a public street, liability depends upon negligence.⁶⁵ Such negligence, or in other words, the defect or obstruction chargeable to such negligence, must be the natural and probable cause of the injury, proximately contributing thereto;⁶⁶ and the danger must be such as in that the municipality was under no duty to guard the canal from entrance by way of the tow-path.

To prevent going upon lot.—In Dennison v. Warren, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 36 S. W. 296, it was held that where a street was graded below a lot there was no negligence in failing to erect barriers to prevent travelers from walking up on to the private lot.

Approach to bridge.—The municipality will be liable for failure to keep the approaches to a bridge, maintained as a part of the street, in safe condition for ordinary travel. Chicago v. Gallagher, 44 Ill. 295 (negligence in failing to guard the outer edge of a curved sidewalk leading to a bridge narrower than the street); O'Leary v. Mankato, 21 Minn. 65. But see Goeltz v. Ashland, 75 Wis. 642, 44 N. W. 770, where, applying the rule that only the traveled track need be kept safe, it was held that a wagon bridge and a sidewalk, both sufficiently guarded by side railings, having been built across a ravine in a street, leaving an open space between the walk and the wagon bridge, there was no liability for the death of a boy by drowning in a hole which had been dug in the open space by some unauthorized person. And see, generally, BRIDGES, 5 Cyc. 1049.

Where a defective railing around an excavation had been repaired and made secure two days before an injury caused by the breaking of the railing, it was held that the municipality was not liable in the absence of evidence of notice that the railing had become defective again. Jackson v. Boone, 93 Ga. 662, 20 S. E. 46.

Missouri.—Myers v. Kansas City, 108 Mo. 480, 18 S. W. 914; Ball v. Independence, 41 Mo. App. 469. So where persons making improvements pile stones on a sidewalk and leave them in a reasonably safe condition for the night, the municipality will not be liable for an injury caused by the act of some third person during the night scattering the stones on the sidewalk. Hesselbach v. St. Louis, 179 Mo. 505, 78 S. W. 1009.

New York.—McFeeters v. New York, 102 N. Y. App. Div. 32, 92 N. Y. Suppl. 79; Parker v. Cohoes, 10 Hun 531 [affirmed in 74 N. Y. 610]; Sevestre v. New York, 47 N. Y. Super. Ct. 341.

Vermont.—Mullen v. Rutland, 55 Vt. 77. See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1655 et seq.

Where a watchman is employed and the barriers and lights are sufficient and are removed by a stranger and an injury occurs while the watchman employed to keep up the barrier is at another part of the trench attending to his duty, there will be no liability. O'Neil v. Bates, 20 R. I. 793, 40 Atl. 236. However, in Baltimore v. O'Donnell, 53 Md. 110, 36 Am. Rep. 395, a street being made impassable, a rope was stretched across it and a lamp was suspended from the rope, and the lamp having become broken and extinguished by the act of third persons, the man in charge took it away to repair it but did not replace it that night, and during his absence one attempting to pass up the street drove against the rope, of which he had no warning, and it was held that the city was liable.

65. See supra, XIV, D, 4, a.

66. Illinois.—Rockford v. Tripp, 83 Ill. 247, 25 Am. Rep. 381, where an injury to a person in a street caused by a horse which was hitched to a post set by the city for a hitching post, becoming frightened at a runaway team which caused him to break the post and run against the person injured, was held too remote.

Indiana.—Vincennes v. Thuis, 28 Ind. App. 523, 63 N. E. 315, holding that, although the municipality is chargeable with negligence the exercise of ordinary care might reasonably have been anticipated from the condition complained of.⁶⁷

(II) CONCURRENT AND INTERVENING CAUSES—(A) In General. Where other causes concur with municipal negligence to produce the injury, the corporation is in respect of defects or obstructions in a street, it cannot be made liable for an injury which results from other causes and to which such negligence does not contribute.

Massachusetts.—Kelley v. Boston, 180 Mass. 233, 62 N. E. 259, where absence of a cover of a catch-basin from its place was held not to be the proximate cause of the injury sustained from voluntarily descending into the basin to rescue a child who had fallen into it.

Michigan.—Hembling v. Grand Rapids, 99 Mich. 292, 58 N. W. 310, holding that if, while plaintiff was advancing on the walk, a horse hitched thereto jerked a plank from its place, and plaintiff stepped into the opening so made, and was injured, the defect in the walk was not the primary cause of the injury.

New York.—Hubbell v. Yonkers, 104 N. Y. 434, 10 N. E. 858, 58 Am. Rep. 522; Fitch v. New York, 55 N. Y. Super. Ct. 494, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 700 (holding that where a street car, from which plaintiff had alighted at a turn-table, was so negligently turned before plaintiff could move a safe distance away that it struck and injured her, the city's permission to locate the turn-table so that a part of a car in turning would pass over the sidewalk did not render the city liable, as the accident would have happened had the location been such that the car would turn wholly between the curbs); Gaudin v. Carthage, 12 N. Y. Suppl. 796.

Wisconsin.—Collins v. Janesville, 107 Wis. 436, 83 N. W. 695.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1666.

Where a street car stops near an open trench in the street, and a passenger in attempting to board it falls into the trench, it is held that the doctrine of proximate cause has no application, the court saying that, although if the car had been somewhere else plaintiff would have gone near the open trench, yet it would be difficult to imagine a case where one would fall into a trench but for the fact that some other fact led him to go near enough to fall into it. Monje v. Grand Rapids, 122 Mich. 645, 81 N. W. 574.

Loss of profits are held not to be the immediate consequence of the neglect of municipal duty to keep the streets in proper repair. Farrelly v. Cincinnati, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 516 [affirming 3 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 115, 3 Wkly. L. Gaz. 277].

67. District of Columbia.—Free v. District of Columbia, 21 D. C. 608.

Indiana.—Vincennes v. Spees, 35 Ind. App. 389, 74 N. E. 277.

New York.—Smith v. Henderson, 54 N. Y. App. Div. 26, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 347, where one riding a bicycle along the middle of a street forty-two feet wide and sloping down from the middle two feet to the sidewalk, lost control of the bicycle and it turned diagonally to the right and ran across the sidewalk, dropping with the rider five or six feet to the ground below, and it was held that the failure of the municipality to maintain a guard-rail at such point did not subject to liability for the injury, since the municipal authorities were not bound to anticipate such an accident.

Pennsylvania.—Heidenwag v. Philadelphia, 168 Pa. St. 72, 31 Atl. 1063; Wellman v. Susquehanna Depot, 167 Pa. St. 239, 31 Atl. 566 (holding that the failure to provide barriers on a road running along an embankment is not the proximate cause of an injury to one being thrown over the embankment by a horse suffering from blind staggers); Kieffer v. Hummelstown Borough, 151 Pa. St. 304, 24 Atl. 1060, 17 L. R. A. 217; Herr v. Lebanon, 149 Pa. St. 222, 24 Atl. 207, 34 Am. St. Rep. 603, 16 L. R. A. 106 (holding that where the falling of a horse was not due to any municipal negligence, and in its struggles to get up it fell repeatedly until it went over a declivity on the lower side of the street, the fall was the proximate cause of the injury); Allegheny v. Zimmerman, 95 Pa. St. 287, 40 Am. Rep. 649 (holding that where a liberty pole standing in the street fell because of an extraordinary wind storm, the pole being sound and so secured and protected that careful and prudent persons considered it safe, the injury resulting from the fall was too remote from the erection of the pole to render the city liable).

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1666.

Remote consequences.—In an action against a city for an injury received on a defective street, a recovery cannot be had for injuries received after the accident when in attempting to walk plaintiff's injured ankle failed her and she fell and broke her leg. Raymond v. Haverhill, 168 Mass. 382, 47 N. E. 101. But in Wieting v. Millston, 77 Wis. 523, 46 N. W. 879, where the injury first attributable to the negligence of a town was a broken leg, and when the injured person was able to go about on crutches his leg was again broken by the overturning of a buggy, the second injury being attributed to the weakened condition of the leg, it was held that he was entitled to recover for the second breaking. In Hazel v. Owensboro, 99 S. W. 315, 30 Ky. L. Rep. 627, 9 L. R. A. N. S. 235, it was held that the fact that a defective condition of a street delayed a fire department in responding to an alarm does liable for all damages which its culpable negligence contributed substantially and proximately to cause,⁶⁸ as where one, while observing due care for his personal safety, is injured by the combined result of an accident, and the negligence of the municipal corporation in respect of a defect or obstruction, and without such negligence the injury would not have occurred,⁶⁹ and the fact that the injury may be increased by other concurring causes will not excuse the municipal negligence without which the injury would not have happened.⁷⁰ If the result is attributable not make the municipality liable for a loss caused by the burning of property.

New York.—Ehrgott v. New York, 96 N. Y. 264, 48 Am. Rep. 622; Ring v. Cohoes, 77 N. Y. 83, 33 Am. Rep. 574.

Texas.—San Antonio v. Porter, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 444, 59 S. W. 922.

Wisconsin.—Papworth v. Milwaukee, 64 Wis. 389, 25 N. W. 431, holding that where the actual neglect of the city, and not merely permitting the owner of a lot to maintain a dangerous opening in a sidewalk, concurred in causing injury to a traveler, it is no defense, in an action against the city, that the wrongful act of such owner contributed to the injury.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1667.

But see Rowell v. Lowell, 7 Gray (Mass.) 100, 66 Am. Dec. 464, where it was held that the injury to plaintiff having commenced by her foot slipping on steps without the limits of the highway, which steps were covered with ice and were unsafe, by reason of which she fell to the sidewalk, there could be no recovery against the city, and that the only exception to the rule that plaintiff cannot recover unless the defect in the highway is the sole cause of the injury must be under circumstances like those in Palmer v. Andover, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 600, where the contributing cause was a pure accident which common prudence and sagacity could not have foreseen and provided against and does not include a case in which the contributing cause involves default and negligence without the limits of the highway. So in De Camp v. Sioux City, 74 Iowa 392, 37 N. W. 971, where the injury was caused by a collision with a vehicle being negligently driven in a street, there can be no recovery, although a defect in the street contributed, the first cause being held to be the proximate cause.

Sudden displacement of plank in walk.—In Chacey v. Fargo, 5 N. D. 173, 64 N. W. 932, it was held that one injured by stepping into a hole in the sidewalk, made by the sudden displacement of a loose plank by a bicycle which passed as he was about to step on the plank, could recover, the municipality being charged with notice of the defective condition of the walk. But see Hembling v. Grand Rapids, 99 Mich. 292, 58 N. W. 310, where for injuries similarly sustained the defect in the walk was held not to be the proximate cause, but the circumstances were not such as to charge the municipality with notice of the defect and the plank was pulled from its place suddenly by a horse which was hitched to it, the municipality being held under no obligation to anticipate such use of the plank.

69. Illinois.—Joliet v. Shufeldt, 144 Ill. 403, 408, 32 N. E. 969, 36 Am. St. Rep. 453, 18 L. R. A. 759; Lacon v. Page, 48 Ill. 499.

70. Atchison v. Jansen, 21 Kan. 560 (where, as to an injury caused by a defect in a sidewalk, it was held that the question was as to the negligence of the city in respect of such defect and not in respect of the existence of an area under the walk notwithstanding such area may enhance the injury resulting from the defect); Conklin v. Elmira, 11 N. Y. App. Div. 402, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 518; Galveston v. Posnainsky, 62 Tex. 118, 50 Am. Rep. 517 (where it is held that to the original negligence and the injury would not have been produced by the intervening cause in the absence of such negligence, the intervening cause will not constitute the proximate cause.⁷¹ But if the intervening acts constitute an independent and efficient cause and the result cannot be said to be the natural and probable consequence of the primary cause, the intervening cause will be regarded as the proximate cause.⁷²

(B) Ice and Snow. The presence of ice or snow constituting an additional or contributory cause of the injury will not exempt the corporation from liability.⁷³

if a fall is caused by a defective condition in a sidewalk, it is the proximate cause of the injury resulting from falling upon pieces of glass in the excavation into which the person fell).

The precise injury need not result immediately from the defect or obstruction, but if in natural sequence it follows as the natural and probable result and would not have occurred but for the negligence of the municipality, the municipality will be liable. Schmidt v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 83 Ill. 405 (holding that the city is liable for an injury to a person run over by a train of cars before he could rise from a fall occasioned by a hole in a sidewalk); Elwood v. Addison, 26 Ind. App. 28, 59 N. E. 47; Collins v. Janesville, 107 Wis. 436, 83 N. W. 695. Contra, Perkins v. Fayette, 68 Me. 152, 28 Am. Rep. 84; Anderson v. Bath, 42 Me. 346; Moore v. Abbot, 32 Me. 46; Marble v. Worcester, 4 Gray (Mass.) 395, in which cases the rule is maintained that the injury must accrue through the defect alone. And see Watters v. Waterloo, 126 Iowa 199, 101 N. W. 871, where it is said that the negligence must be the "direct and proximate cause" of the injury, although the decision seems to be based upon the principle that where the negligence gives rise only to a condition and a subsequent independent act is the direct and immediate cause of the injury, the first cause is remote.

72. Parmenter v. Marion, 113 Iowa 297, 85 N. W. 90 (where one was injured passing along a sidewalk under a platform projecting from the second story of a building by a bale of hay being pushed off the platform into the street below by the occupant of the premises, and it was held that if the platform and its use were an obstruction in the street, the negligence of the occupant of the building was the proximate cause of the injury and that the platform was a mere condition); Setter v. Maysville, 114 Ky. 60, 69 S. W. 1074, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 828; Stanley v. Union Depot R. Co., 114 Mo. 606, 21 S. W. 832; Storey v. New York, 29 N. Y. App. Div. 316, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 580 (where a school child had to go on the street to pass around a mound of earth from an excavation in front of a house near the school and in so doing was run down by a wagon on the street and it was held that the mound was not the proximate cause of the injury, but it was indicated that if the child, while passing around the mound of earth, had tripped over it and been thrown so as to be injured by a passing vehicle, the case would have come within Ehrgott v. New York, 96 N. Y. 264, 48 Am. Rep. 622, and Schafer v. New York, 154 N. Y. 466, 48 N. E. 749, in the first of which cases plaintiff drove into a ditch in a street, breaking the axle of his carriage, and the question was whether the injuries from which he subsequently suffered were due directly to the accident or to the exposure as the result thereof and compensation for the exposure was allowed; while in the latter case it appeared that before plaintiff's wagon reached a manhole he was thrown from the seat to the pole, whence, by reason of the manhole, he was thrown into the street, and it was held that he was entitled to go to the jury on the question whether the manhole was the proximate cause of the injury); Magee v. Caro, 1 N. Y. City Ct. 147 (holding that where an abutter placed a box on a sidewalk and certain boys afterward threw it on plaintiff, the unlawful act in placing the box on the street was not the proximate cause of the injury).

Where the sole cause is found to be the defect the fact that snow had fallen on the crossing recently before the accident does not relieve the city from liability. Lyon v. Logansport, 9 Ind. App. 21, 35 N. E. 128.

That the defect was concealed by snow will not relieve the municipality of liability. Street v. Holyoke, 105 Mass. 82, 7 Am. Rep.

(c) Wrongful Act of Third Person. Generally, if municipal negligence in respect of the duty to care for streets proximately contributes to the injury, such negligence is not excused or obviated by the negligent or wrongful act of a third person concurring to cause the injury.⁷⁴ On the other hand, the municipality is not liable where its negligence does not produce a proximate cause.⁷⁵

(d) Fright of or Accident to Horses—(1) IN GENERAL. According to the weight of authority, if a horse of ordinary gentleness, without fault on the part of his driver, takes fright at an unlawful obstruction,⁷⁶ or at a defect or obstruction chargeable to the negligence of the municipality, and becomes unmanageable and causes an injury, the proximate cause is the defect or obstruction.⁷⁷ And so 500; Waters v. Kansas City, 94 Mo. App. 413, 68 S. W. 366; Lincoln v. Smith, 28 Nebr. 762, 45 N. W. 41.

New York.—Cohen v. New York, 113 N. Y. 532, 21 N. E. 700, 10 Am. St. Rep. 506, 4 L. R. A. 406, holding that where another vehicle collided with a wagon left standing on a street, causing its thills, which were improperly tied up, to fall down and injure plaintiff's intestate, the unlawful obstruction, and not the negligent fastening of the thills, was the proximate cause of the injury.

Pennsylvania.—Carlisle v. Brisbane, 113 Pa. St. 544, 6 Atl. 372, 57 Am. Rep. 483.

Wisconsin.—McClure v. Sparta, 84 Wis. 269, 54 N. W. 337, 36 Am. St. Rep. 924.

Contra.—Block v. Worcester, 186 Mass. 526, 72 N. E. 77; Shepherd v. Chelsea, 4 Allen (Mass.) 113; Merrill v. Portland, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,470, 4 Cliff. 138. See also Griffin v. Boston, 182 Mass. 409, 65 N. E. 811. But where the only way in which a third person could have contributed to the accident was by helping to create the defect which it was the duty of the municipality to abate, in an action to enforce liability for failure to abate the defect it was held proper to refuse an instruction exempting the municipality from liability if the negligence of the third person contributed to the accident. Bourget v. Cambridge, 159 Mass. 388, 34 N. E. 455.

Avoiding collision on walk.—Where an excavation was made by the city authorities in a public street, the end of which extended up to a narrow cross walk at an intersecting street, and was left over night uncovered, without guards or danger signals, and a woman, in crossing the street over the cross walk, met persons who did not turn aside to let her pass, and she, to avoid collision, diverged from the cross walk, and, without any knowledge of the excavation, fell therein and was hurt, she may recover from the city for the injury, and the fact that the strangers did not yield the walk, and caused her to step aside and into the excavation, will not preclude such recovery. Olathe v. Mizee, 48 Kan. 435, 29 Pac. 754, 30 Am. St. Rep. 308.

75. Setter v. Maysville, 114 Ky. 60, 69 S. W. 1074, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 828 (the obstruction being one leaving only a narrow path between it and a street railroad's tracks, in which plaintiff was walking when struck by a street car and injured); Childrey v. Huntington, 34 W. Va. 457, 12 S. E. 536, 11 L. R. A. 313 (where a hole in a sidewalk was such that one's foot could only be got into it endwise or sidewise, and would not go in if he stepped immediately upon it, and a policeman in a struggle with a prisoner whom he had arrested had his foot jammed into the hole, which caused him to fall with the prisoner on top of him and break his leg, it was held that the hole was only the remote cause of the injury).

Wilful act of another.—Where one is wilfully thrown into an excavation by another, the negligence, if any, in maintaining the excavation in the street is not the proximate cause of the injury, the fall being occasioned entirely by the act of another. Alexander v. New Castle, 115 Ind. 51, 17 N. E. 200.

Contra.—Bowes v. Boston, 155 Mass. 344, 29 N. E. 633, 15 L. R. A. 365; Marble v. Worcester, 4 Gray (Mass.) 395.

An injury to a person on the street cannot be attributed to the obstruction, however, where the horse of a third person became when the injury occurs from a negligent defect or obstruction, the fact that the horse was at the time uncontrollable or running away furnishes no defense, the person in charge of the horse having been in the exercise of reasonable care. The rule is applied in such cases that when two causes combine to produce an injury, both of which are in their nature proximate, the one being a culpable defect or obstruction and the other some occurrence for which neither party is responsible, the municipality is liable, provided the injury would not have been sustained but for such defect or obstruction.⁷³ In other jurisdictions, however, it is held that municipal corporations cannot be bound to make their roads so that travelers shall be safe when their horses become frightened and unmanageable and are running away; that the conduct of the horse is the primary cause of the injury in such cases, and that as there are two efficient proximate causes of the injury and the primary cause is one for which the municipal corporation is not responsible, it cannot be said that but for the primary cause the injury would not have occurred.⁷⁹ If the particular occurrence is of such a character, considering the circumstances, that a person in the exercise of ordinary sagacity in such matters could not be reasonably expected to foresee it, the failure to provide against it will not be negligence in the particular instance,⁸⁰ and if the injury is occasioned by the frightened and ran away, running against a telegraph pole set in the street between the sidewalk and the driveway, after which it broke loose from the wagon, ran down the street, and ran over a person on the street. Gaudin v. Carthage, 12 N. Y. Suppl. 796.

New York.—Ring v. Cohoes, 77 N. Y. 83, 33 Am. Rep. 574, where it is said that the rule stated in the text is the reasonable rule, since it exacts no duty from municipalities which has not already rested on them; that they are not bound to furnish roads upon which it will be safe for horses to run away, but only reasonably safe roads, and if the road is not reasonably safe and an injury is caused thereby it does not matter that the horse was running away at the time.

80. Bleil v. Detroit St. R. Co., 98 Mich. 228, 57 N. W. 117; Tarras v. Winona, 71 Minn. 22, 73 N. W. 505 (where it was held that unless the place is peculiarly dangerous, as where the roadway is narrow and the sides precipitous, or where there is something along the side of the highway which it should be foreseen is ordinarily likely to frighten horses, the municipality will not be liable for an injury caused by a horse stopping and backing, thereby precipitating the driver and vehicle over an embankment next to a road, the road in this case being on an embank-viciousness,⁸¹ or disease of the animal, that will be taken to be the proximate cause.⁸² But the fact that there was a defect in the vehicle or harness, although a contributing cause of the ultimate injury, will not defeat the action.⁸³

(2) SHYING OR MOMENTARY LOSS OF CONTROL. If a horse shys or starts or is momentarily not controlled by his driver, and in this state runs into an obstruction or defect, the shying will not be regarded as the sole cause of the injury;⁸⁴

ment thirty-three feet wide and seven feet high); Hubbell v. Yonkers, 104 N. Y. 434, 10 N. E. 858, 58 Am. Rep. 522 (non-liability of a city for injuries sustained by falling over an embankment where it appeared by the evidence that the roadway was perfectly safe, in good condition, bounded by a gutter or curbstone eight inches high and ten feet of sidewalk, and that plaintiff was dragged over the embankment by his horse becoming frightened and unmanageable at a place where no danger from the embankment was to be expected); Kieffer v. Hummelstown Borough, 151 Pa. St. 304, 24 Atl. 1060, 17 L. R. A. 217 (non-liability where it appeared that on one side of the road next to the fence was a pile of stone, five or six feet wide; that the remaining width of the road (twenty-six or twenty-seven feet) was available for travel; that plaintiff was familiar with the condition of the road; that while passing along the road with his wagon, his horses became frightened at some boys in the field shooting pigeons; and in their struggles the one on which plaintiff was riding fell on the stone pile, and plaintiff was injured); Schaeffer v. Jackson Tp., 150 Pa. St. 145, 24 Atl. 629, 30 Am. St. Rep. 792, 18 L. R. A. 100 (where the axle of the vehicle broke, and the horse became frightened and turned around, and the dragging axle caused the vehicle to strike the defect in the road); Johnston v. Philadelphia, 139 Pa. St. 646, 21 Atl. 316 (non-liability of a city to one who, while driving on a street eighty-four feet wide, the center forty feet of which are twelve or eighteen inches lower than the twenty-two feet on each side, is thrown from his wagon because of his horse shying and making the wheels strike one of the elevated sides).

Where a horse securely tied to a post broke away upon becoming frightened, ran along the street, and plunged down an unfenced precipice crossing the street which was impassable except by a stairway for foot passengers, and was killed, it was held that the city was not liable. Moss v. Burlington, 60 Iowa 438, 15 N. W. 267, 46 Am. Rep. 82.

81. Macon v. Dykes, 103 Ga. 847, 31 S. E. 443; Stone v. Hubbardston, 100 Mass. 49; Titus v. Northbridge, 97 Mass. 258, 93 Am. Dec. 91; Hungerman v. Wheeling, 46 W. Va. 761, 34 S. E. 778.

The mere fact that a horse was for a moment unmanageable does not show that it was vicious or unsafe or that the person in charge of him was careless. Kennedy v. New York, 73 N. Y. 365, 29 Am. Rep. 169.

82. McClain v. Garden Grove, 83 Iowa 235, 48 N. W. 1031, 12 L. R. A. 482, non-liability for breaking of a railing by the falling against it of a horse which had dropped dead. But see Houfe v. Fulton, 29 Wis. 296, 9 Am. Rep. 568, where it was held otherwise, when a horse stopped, staggered, and fell off of a bridge containing no railing, no fault of a third person intervening and there being no negligence on the part of plaintiff.

Knowledge.—In Winship v. Enfield, 42 N. H. 197, it was held that, if it appears that vices of the horse or defects in the vehicle contributed to the injury, plaintiff must show not only that he did not know and had no reason to suppose that such vices or defects existed, but also that he was not at fault in not knowing of their existence.

83. Joliet v. Shufeldt, 144 Ill. 403, 32 N. E. 969, 36 Am. St. Rep. 453, 18 L. R. A. 750; Manderschid v. Dubuque, 25 Iowa 108; Winship v. Enfield, 42 N. H. 197; Hunt v. Pownal, 9 Vt. 411, where it was said that the traveler is not bound to see to it that his carriage and harness are always perfect and his team of the most manageable character and in the most perfect training; that if he be always sure of all this he would not require any further guaranty of his safety unless the roads were absolutely impassable.

Where the horse's bit broke upon his becoming frightened at an obstruction, it was held that this fact should not be considered. Cairncross v. Pewaukee, 86 Wis. 181, 56 N. W. 648. See also Halstead v. Warsaw, 43 N. Y. App. Div. 39, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 518.

Missouri.—Hull v. Kansas City, 54 Mo. 598, 14 Am. Rep. 487 (where a horse having got the line under his tail began backing and as the driver was about to jump from the wagon it went into a hole); Burnes v. St. Joseph, 91 Mo. App. 489 (where a horse shied so that the driver did not lose control of him but was injured by coming in contact with an obstruction).

New York.—Kennedy v. New York, 73 N. Y. 365, 29 Am. Rep. 169, where a horse backed off a dock, the negligence being in failing to have a string-piece on the dock.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1669.

Absence of barriers or railings to protect against such accidents at embankments has and this rule is recognized even in those states which deny liability if the horse is beyond control and running away.⁸⁵

5. RIGHTS OF PERSONS INJURED— a. Persons Entitled to Redress. If any one of the public in the ordinary use of the way, without fault on his part, suffers special damage, not common to the public, because of the negligence of the municipality either in constructing or in maintaining it, he has ground for an action; the legal liability arises from the neglect of the legal duty to keep the way reasonably safe for ordinary public requirements.⁸⁶ So an occupant of premises not bound by contract or law to keep the sidewalk in repair may recover for injury occasioned by defects therein.⁸⁷

b. Nature of Injury Sustained. An action based upon a failure of the municipibeen held to be negligence creating liability in such cases. Rockford v. Russell, 9 Ill. App. 229; Harvey v. Clarinda, 111 Iowa 528, 82 N. W. 994; Byerly v. Anamosa, 79 Iowa 204, 44 N. Wisconsin.—Olson v. Chippewa Falls, 71 Wis. 558, 37 N. W. 575.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1669.

Loss of control.—Where the animal is frightened and uncontrollable and backs across a bridge and along the highway at the side of which a railing was constructed for several rods to the end of the railing and then off the embankment, it is held that the act of the horse is the proximate cause of the accident and the city is not liable. Horton v. Taunton, 97 Mass. 266 note. See also Schilling v. Verona, 96 Wis. 456, 71 N. W. 888.

86. Kansas.—Kansas City v. Orr, 62 Kan. 61, 61 Pac. 397, 50 L. R. A. 783 (holding that where a railway is built on a street by authority of a city, and a railway employee in the performance of his ordinary duties walks over the street, and is injured by reason of a defect in the street, of which the city has or should have knowledge, the city is liable for the injuries sustained); Kansas City v. McDonald, 60 Kan. 481, 57 Pac. 123, 45 L. R. A. 429.

Massachusetts.—Eaton v. Woburn, 127 Mass. 270, holding that one employed and paid by another who has contracted with a town to light and take care of its street lamps is not a servant or agent of the town; and if, while engaged in his work, he suffers injury from a defect in a highway, he can maintain an action therefor against the town.

New York.—Avery v. Syracuse, 29 Hun 537.

Pennsylvania.—Megargee v. Philadelphia, 153 Pa. St. 340, 25 Atl. 1130, 19 L. R. A. 221.

Texas.—Galveston v. Hemmis, 72 Tex. 558, 11 S. W. 29, 13 Am. St. Rep. 828.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1660. And see supra, XIV, A, 2, b.

Intoxication at the time of receiving an injury will not prevent a recovery where the intoxication does not contribute to the injury. Alger v. Lowell, 3 Allen (Mass.) 402; Healy v. New York, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 708, 6 Thomps. & C. 92. See also Stuart v. Machias Port, 48 Me. 477; Ott v. Buffalo, 131 N. Y. 594, 30 N. E. 67. And see infra, XIV, E, 9, j, (1).

Immorality of plaintiff is no ground for denying the right to recover. Thus the fact that the person injured by falling into an excavation in the street was returning from a bawdy-house, however immoral it may be to visit such a place, will not preclude a recovery if the other elements of municipal liability exist. McVoy v. Knoxville, 85 Tenn. 19, 1 S. W. 498. So the fact that a woman lived in immoral relations with a man will not defeat her right to recover for an injury caused by a defective sidewalk. Wright v. Kansas City, 187 Mo. 678, 86 S. W. 452.

Author of defect.—One whose extraordinary use of a way, not intended for such use and sufficient for the purposes for which it was constructed, puts it out of repair may not recover for an injury occasioned by the defect caused by himself. Megargee v. Philadelphia, 153 Pa. St. 340, 25 Atl. 1130, 19 L. R. A. 221.

The assignee of non-assignable tolls under a void lease of a pier built for the use of the public acquires no right with respect to such tolls which can be impaired by a failure of the city to keep in repair a road to the pier. Lord v. Oconto, 47 Wis. 386, 2 N. W. 785.

Contributory negligence see infra, XIV, D, 6.

Injury to employee, fireman, etc., see supra, XIV, A, 2, b.

Care as to streets see supra, XIV, D, 4, a.

87. Burt v. Boston, 122 Mass. 223 (where it was held that a sublessee of a part of a house might recover for injuries resulting from defects in a sidewalk, he having no control of the premises, although an owner or lessee of the premises might be liable over to the city for damages recovered against it

pality to perform its duty with respect to the keeping of its streets in repair is maintainable by those only who have suffered some special injury differing in kind and not merely in degree from that inconvenience or injury which is common to the public.⁸⁸ And where the statute giving the action limits the remedy to injuries which are received directly from a defect by one who is using or attempting to use the highway, consequential damages resulting indirectly to the property of an abutting owner cannot be recovered.⁸⁹

c. Use of Way at Time of Injury — (1) IN GENERAL. Any person injured by a defect in a highway while he is lawfully there and using it for those purposes for which there is a municipal duty to maintain it in a reasonably safe condition may recover damages for the injury so resulting.⁹⁰ This liability is declared without regard to the purpose with which the person goes upon the way, whether he happens to be there out of idle curiosity or in pursuit of business or pleasure, for injury resulting from such a defect and could not therefore himself recover against the city); Avery v. Syracuse, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 537 (a lessee who had not agreed to keep the sidewalk in repair, the charter of the city having conferred on the city the power to make and repair sidewalks, and having imposed on the owner of the premises the duty of maintaining the sidewalk in suitable repair).

88. Missouri.—Beaudean v. Cape Girardeau, 71 Mo. 392.

Ohio.—Farrelly v. Cincinnati, 2 Disn. 516 [affirming 3 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 115, 3 Wkly. L. Gaz. 277].

Pennsylvania.—Gold v. Philadelphia, 115 Pa. St. 184, 8 Atl. 386.

West Virginia.—Hale v. Weston, 40 W. Va. 313, 21 S. E. 742.

Wisconsin.—Zettel v. West Bend, 79 Wis. 316, 48 N. W. 379, 24 Am. St. Rep. 715.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1661.

Compulsory circuitous travel.—Thus an obstruction which requires plaintiff in going from his house to his market garden to pursue a longer and less direct route does not give a cause of action. Zettel v. West Bend, 79 Wis. 316, 48 N. W. 379, 24 Am. St. Rep. 715. But in Beaudean v. Cape Girardeau, 71 Mo. 392, liability was declared where an obstruction, consisting of a fence which cut off the road, was held to give a right of action, the injury being special and peculiar to plaintiff.

Loss of business or profit will not constitute such damage resulting from defects in the streets as may be recovered. Farrelly v. Cincinnati, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 516 [affirming 3 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 115, 3 Wkly. L. Gaz. 277]; Gold v. Philadelphia, 115 Pa. St. 184, 8 Atl. 386; Hale v. Weston, 40 W. Va. 313, 21 S. E. 742. But under a statute authorizing the construction of a sewer it was held that the duty of the city to keep the highway where the sewer was building "safe and convenient" was remitted impliedly for such time as was reasonably necessary for the work, but that if there was unreasonable delay in doing the work, during which time access to plaintiff's property was cut off or obstructed, causing him loss of profits and increase in expense and trouble in the conduct of his business, the municipality will be liable. Williams v. Tripp, 11 R. I. 447.

Diverting travel from a ferry outside of a city, by reason of the failure of the city to keep a certain street in repair, will give no cause of action to the owner of the ferry. Prosser v. Ottumwa, 42 Iowa 509.

Injury caused by the natural flow of water see supra, XIV, C, 11, 12.

Nuisances see supra, XIV, A, 5, c, (II).

89. Ball v. Winchester, 32 N. H. 485.

Loss of services and society.—So where the statute provides for the recovery of damages for an injury suffered by any one in his person or property by means of a defect, etc., in an action for injuries to plaintiff's wife caused by a defective sidewalk, there can be no recovery for loss of services and society. Lounsbury v. Bridgeport, 66 Conn. 360, 34 Atl. 93.

90. Bath v. Blake, 97 Ill. App. 35; Waverly v. Reesor, 93 Ill. App. 649; Varney v. Manchester, 58 N. H. 430, 40 Am. Rep. 592; McVoy v. Knoxville, 85 Tenn. 19, 1 S. W. 498; Reed v. Madison, 83 Wis. 171, 53 N. W. 547, 17 L. R. A. 733.

Persons not in use of street.—A right of action which may accrue to one as a traveler on the street cannot be extended to embrace persons who are not in the use of the street at the time of the injury (see supra, XIV, D, 4, c, (IV), (E), (3)); and one injured while passing to a private way over a planking placed for that purpose over a gutter within the limits of a street but outside of the traveled portion thereof is held not to be a traveler upon the street within the meaning of the statute so as to entitle him to maintain an action for failure to keep the street in repair. Philbrick v. Pittston, 63 Me. 477.

Proper use.—Where one went into a street to see a procession formed, and while standing there from three to five minutes was injured by the falling of a pile of lumber on him it was held that it could not be said as a matter of law that he was not "traveling upon a highway." Varney v. Manchester, 58 N. H. 430, 40 Am. Rep. 592. So in Murray v. McShane, 52 Md. 217, 36 Am. Rep. 367, it is held that travelers on a street have not only the right to pass but to stop on necessary and reasonable occasions so that they do not obstruct the streets or doorways. See sometimes upon the theory that he need not be a traveler,⁹¹ and sometimes because such purpose is not inconsistent with his presence on the street as a traveler,⁹² the particular purpose being immaterial if he is there as a traveler,⁹³ and to this extent children are not restricted in passing and repassing on the streets more than adults.⁹⁴ But while this may be so as to the mere purpose of being on the way, when the decisions turn upon the proper or reasonable use of the street, as in the case of children or others playing there, the rules are not uniform in the various jurisdictions. Thus in some the duty to keep the streets in a reasonably safe condition is the same with respect to children who are playing thereon as with respect to others using the way,⁹⁵ although an adult so engaged has been considered as not also Duffy v. Dubuque, 63 Iowa 171, 18 N. W. 900, 50 Am. Rep. 743.

An improper use of a structure in a street cannot create liability against the municipality. Stickney v. Salem, 3 Allen (Mass.) 374, where the injury was to one while stopping in a highway for the purpose of conversation who leaned against a defective railing, the court holding that the obligation to keep a railing was imposed when it is necessary to mark the bounds of that part of the road within which persons may safely travel, or to furnish a guard against dangerous places so that proper protection might be afforded to those in the exercise of due care; that if a person without fault or negligence on his part is forced against a railing or takes hold of it to aid his passage, or falls against it by accident, or has occasion to use it in any way in furtherance of the lawful or reasonable exercise of his right as a traveler, and by reason of any defect or insufficiency it gives way and causes an injury, there would be liability, but that one who leans against or sits upon such a railing is not using it for a proper purpose, or for a purpose for which the city is under any obligation to maintain it.

Protection against surging crowd.—An action lies to recover damages sustained by being pushed from a public street down an unguarded and dangerous declivity, by a crowd, if it was not done through the wilful act or negligence of the crowd or any person therein. Alger v. Lowell, 3 Allen (Mass.) 402. But see Roe v. Crimmins, 10 Misc. (N. Y.) 711, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 807 [affirmed in 155 N. Y. 690, 50 N. E. 1122].

Use in entering private premises.—One who, on finding an entrance to the building which he occupied locked, went on the sidewalk to another entrance, was a "traveler on the street" so that he is entitled to recover for injury from a defective condition of the sidewalk, under a statute giving persons the right to recover therefor. *Strack v. Am. Dec. 281, where it is held that all persons have a right to pass and repass upon public roads so long as they violate no laws for the common good or for the protection of individuals; that within these restrictions they are entitled to the use of the highway for the purposes of travel whether the object of that travel is business or pleasure, whether they pass on foot, with carriages, or in the various modes which each individual may choose to adopt.

Care with respect to children—In general.—In estimating the degree of negligence with which the municipality is chargeable, it has been held that the character of the defect or obstruction is to be considered with reference to the proper uses of the street as a thoroughfare of travel and not as a place for the recreation of children. Chicago v. Starr, 42 Ill. 174, 89 Am. Dec. 422, holding that where a six-year-old child had wandered some blocks from its home and in climbing upon a heavy counter which had been leaned against a fence by the sidewalk by some person unauthorized by the city was killed, the city was not liable; that the most prudent and cautious person would not have anticipated such an accident; and that the negligence of the child's parents was greater than that of the city, and upon this last point the case to be in the reasonable use of the way.⁹⁶ In other jurisdictions protection is withdrawn from those who are in the street merely for the purpose of playing, the municipality being held under no duty to keep its streets in a condition of safety for that purpose under the statutory requirement that it keep such ways in a condition of reasonable safety for the ordinary purposes of travel,⁹⁷ although the fact that one had been engaged in playing will not affect his right to recover if at the time he actually sustained the injury he is proceeding in the ordinary use of the way,⁹⁸ and if he is proceeding on the way it is not necessarily inconsistent with his being a traveler that he may stop to amuse himself momentarily in some childish pastime.⁹⁹

(ii) INJURY SUSTAINED WHILE VIOLATING LAW. A defendant who is sued in tort cannot justify the tort, whether wilful or negligent, by proving that plaintiff, when injured, was transgressing the law, so long as the tort and the transgressions are independent or disconnected, except in time and place, in their relation to each other.¹

seems to turn principally. But see District of Columbia v. Boswell, 6 App. Cas. (D. C.) 402 (where it is said that the use of a sidewalk for play is a use which the municipality must anticipate); Chicago v. Major, 18 Ill. 349, 68 Am. Dec. 553 [distinguished in Chicago v. Starr, supra] (where the injury was caused by reason of the falling into a water tank which was defectively closed and covered, and an instruction which required only such care as would render the street reasonably safe for all persons who ordinarily make use of streets was properly refused); Kuntz v. Troy, 104 N. Y. 344, 10 N. E. 442, 58 Am. Rep. 508 (where under facts very similar to those in the case last cited, it was held improper to direct a nonsuit).

Place attracting children.—In Indianapolis v. Emmelman, 108 Ind. 530, 9 N. E. 155, 58 Am. Rep. 65, it was held that a city was liable where it made an excavation in the bed of a creek at a street crossing and that the city must be held to know that children are attracted to such a place in July weather; that it was gross carelessness with such knowledge, to leave an unguarded pit filled with water in a street into which an unsuspecting child might fall, and that any inference of neglect on the part of the parent is repelled by an averment that he was ignorant of the existence of the danger of the place in question. See also Elwood v. Addison, 26 Ind. App. 28, 59 N. E. 47. So where the municipality negligently allowed water to accumulate partly on the street and partly on adjoining land, without guarding against injury to children therein, liability has been declared. Bowman v. Omaha, 59 Nebr. 84, 80 N. W. 259; Omaha v. Richards, 49 Nebr. 244, 68 N. W. 528.

Improper conduct proximate cause.—Where a boy of seven years climbing in play to reach an awning rod from the top of a pile of empty barrels kept on the pavement in violation of a city ordinance slipped and fell to the street, and one of the barrels fell on him, it was held that the city was not liable inasmuch as the improper use of the awning fixtures was the cause of the injury and not the presence of the barrels upon the sidewalk, the awning rods being lawful structures and the boy being in a place where he had no right to be. Gaughan v. Philadelphia, 119 Pa. St. 503, 13 Atl. 300.

So where a street is closed against travel and guarded against accidents to persons in the ordinary use of it and a child is attracted there by machinery employed in the construction of a public sewer which induces him to climb upon barriers and he falls into an excavation the city will not be liable. 98. Graham v. Boston, 156 Mass. 75, 30 N. E. 170, where several boys had been playing on their way home in a public street and had stopped to rest, and one of them, while walking along before the others, came in contact with an electric wire which had been allowed to hang within a few feet of the street, and it was held that he was a traveler.

99. Gulline v. Lowell, 144 Mass. 491, 11 N. E. 723, 59 Am. Rep. 102, where it was held that a child of seven years of age could not be said to have been guilty of a want of due care because while walking with his father he steps aside for an instant to clasp in his hands a post in the street and almost in his path, nor that in so doing he is making an unlawful use of the street.

At play while traveling.—The fact that a child on her way to a particular place may incidentally play on the way is not inconsistent with her being at the same time a traveler, where the playing does not divert her from going straight on toward her destination. 6. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE²—a. In General. As a general rule, where a person injured by reason of a defect or obstruction in a street or other public way, is himself guilty of some act or omission amounting to a want of ordinary care which concurring or coöperating with the negligence of defendant materially contributes to or is the proximate cause of the injury complained of, he is guilty of contributory negligence precluding a recovery, notwithstanding negligence on the part of defendant in causing or permitting such defect or obstruction,³ and notwithstanding a charter or statutory provision imposing a liability upon the municipality for injuries arising on account of the condition of any to urinate, in violation of an ordinance against indecent exposure of the person); Blair v. Granger, 24 R. I. 17, 51 Atl. 1042 (the violation in this case being the driving on a road in a public park contrary to an ordinance prohibiting the driving of teams in a park for business purposes and making such acts criminal).

While the violation of a speed ordinance might subject the offender to a penalty, unless the commission of the act contributed to produce the injury, the negligence of the municipality is not thereby excused. Pueblo v. Smith, 3 Colo. App. 386, 33 Pac. 685; Baker v. Portland, 58 Me. 199, 4 Am. Dec. 274, driving into an unguarded obstruction at night.

Contra—Violation of speed ordinance.—Heland v. Lowell, 3 Allen (Mass.) 407, 81 Am. Dec. 670, as to the violation of a speed regulation, of which case it is said in Baker v. Portland, 58 Me. 199, 4 Am. Dec. 274, that it was clear the court could not have meant that a concurrence merely in point of time between a breach of law by plaintiff and the accident would bar plaintiff's right of recovery because they had just said in Alger v. Lowell, 3 Allen (Mass.) 402, that intoxicated persons are not relieved from all protection of law and that if one uses due care his intoxication has nothing to do with the accident.

Sunday travel.—In Gorman v. Lowell, 117 Mass. 65, evidence that plaintiff, a woman employed in defendant city, went on a Saturday to an adjoining town to see her children, that one of them being sick she returned to defendant city on Sunday to procure medicine, when she was injured by a defect in the highway, was held sufficient to warrant a finding that she was traveling from necessity or charity.

Injury attributable to plaintiff's act—In general.—Where the injury is attributable to such act rather than to any negligence on the part of the municipality there can be no recovery. Thus in Mullen v. Owosso, 100 Mich. 103, 58 N. W. 663, 43 Am. St. Rep. 436, 23 L. R. A. 693, where the owner was riding and carelessly drove over a pile of sand in the street with full knowledge of the obstruction at a rate of speed prohibited by ordinance it was held that the city was not liable for the injury caused thereby. So in Thunborg v. Pueblo, 18 Colo. App. 80, 70 Pac. 148, an instruction was held erroneous which would preclude a recovery without regard to whether plaintiff was able to restrain a horse going at an excessive rate of speed, since unless plaintiff was himself responsible for the immoderate speed it constituted no defense to the city. See also Anderson v. Wilmington, 2 Pennew. (Del.) 28, 43 Atl. 841 (as to injury caused by riding bicycle at excessive rate of speed); Luke v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 60 S. W. 363.

Driving on sidewalk.—In Arey v. Newton, 148 Mass. 598, 20 N. E. 327, 12 Am. St. Rep. 604, it was held that without considering whether an intentional violation of an ordinance against driving upon a sidewalk, if it contributed to the injury, would necessarily defeat an action, evidence that the driver, without being able to distinguish where the line of the sidewalk was, voluntarily undertook to drive by another vehicle on a narrow street, the width of which was known to him, tended to show negligence on his part.

street or public ground.⁴ Thus if, by the exercise of ordinary care and diligence, the person injured could have avoided the injury, and he fails to exercise such care and diligence, he cannot recover for injuries arising from a nuisance erected and maintained in a public street,⁵ or by reason of defendant's failure to properly safeguard excavations.⁶ But where the party injured exercises ordinary and reasonable care, he is not guilty of contributory negligence even though his acts or omissions in some manner contribute to his injury.⁷ So a failure to use one's senses to discover and avoid a dangerous defect or obstruction does not defeat a recovery if their employment would not have prevented the injury.⁸

b. Care Required—(1) IN GENERAL. A person using or passing along a street or other public way has a right to use it in the ordinary manner, and is required only to exercise ordinary care, or in other words, such care as a reasonably prudent person would exercise under like circumstances, to protect himself against injury.⁹ He is not required to exercise extraordinary care;¹⁰ but on the other hand, in exercising reasonable care and diligence, a person using a street or public way has the right, in the absence of knowledge to the contrary, to act on Illustrations.—Thus it is not contributory negligence for a person to merely pass under a scaffold erected over a sidewalk (Dixon v. Plums, 98 Cal. 384, 33 Pac. 268, 35 Am. St. Rep. 180, 20 L. R. A. 698), to go upon a street little used and largely occupied with building materials (Bunnell v. Berlin Iron and upon the danger reasonably to be apprehended,¹³ and is ordinarily a question of fact for the jury.¹⁴

(ii) OF CHILDREN. A child in a street is ordinarily not held to the same degree of care and prudence as would be expected of adults under similar circumstances;¹⁵ nor, in case of injury by a defect or obstruction, is a child contributorily negligent by reason of the mere fact that it was playing upon the sidewalk at the time.¹⁶ A child so injured is guilty of contributory negligence only where it fails to exercise such care and prudence as could be reasonably expected of a child of its age and intelligence under like circumstances.¹⁷ Subject to these rules, the question as to whether or not a child was so negligent depends upon the circumstances of the particular case.¹⁸

Bridge Co., 66 Conn. 24, 33 Atl. 533), to stop on a public street or thoroughfare (Hussey v. Ryan, 64 Md. 426, 2 Atl. 729, 54 Am. Rep. 772), to hitch a horse in a public street (Tallahassee v. Hannibal, 87 Mo. 673), or to drive in a violent storm through the streets of a city with which the driver is unacquainted (Milwaukee v. Davis, 6 Wis. 377). Nor is an omission to obey orders of one not an officer to get out of the way of an impending discharge of a gun or firecrackers in a public street such contributory negligence as will excuse or mitigate consequent damages (Marionneaux v. Brugier, 35 La. Ann. 13); nor in driving from one side of the street to the other in which a railroad track is laid is it negligence as a matter of law to pass across the track obliquely (Lynch v. New Rochelle, 78 Hun (N. Y.) 207, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 962); nor does the mere fact that plaintiff while walking along the sidewalk in the daytime stepped into an open area way and was injured justify a direction to the jury to find for defendant on account of plaintiff's contributory negligence (Chicago v. Babcock, 143 Ill. 358, 32 N. E. 271).

That a boy eight years old fell through a hole in a bridge which had existed for a long time, and of which he was presumed to have notice, does not raise a presumption of negligence on his part which would shift the

(iii) OF PERSONS PHYSICALLY DISABLED. It is not negligence per se for a person whose eyesight is defective, or who is otherwise physically impaired, to go upon a public street.¹⁹ But such person is bound to exercise a degree of care and prudence in proportion to his impairment, or in other words, such care and prudence as a reasonably prudent person with a like infirmity would exercise under like circumstances;²⁰ and ordinary care in his case would be a greater degree of care than would be required of a sound person under the same circumstances.²¹ It is not contributory negligence for a traveler overcome with illness or fatigue to stop and rest upon the street.²²

(iv) OF INTOXICATED PERSONS. The fact that a person injured by a defect or obstruction in a public street had been drinking or was intoxicated at the time does not bar a recovery,²³ unless by reason of such intoxication he fails to exercise ordinary care and thereby contributes to the accident.²⁴ Yet intoxication in any degree is a material circumstance to be considered, as tending to show a want of ordinary care.²⁵

c. Knowledge of Defect or Dangers in General.²⁶ The mere fact that one using a street or public way had knowledge of the defect or obstruction by reason of which he was injured does not, as a matter of law, constitute contributory negligence precluding a recovery, if in view of such knowledge he exercised reasonable and ordinary care under the circumstances;²⁷ although such knowledge is burden of proof. Strong v. Stevens Point, 62 Wis. 255, 22 N. W. 425.

E. 882 (holding that in an action for injuries caused by falling into a cellar way alleged to have been negligently left open, the fact that plaintiff was blind does not authorize the conclusion that he was guilty of contributory negligence, against an allegation in the complaint that he was free from fault); Salem r. Goller, 76 Ind. 291 (holding that the mere fact that plaintiff, who was injured by reason of a defective sidewalk, was blind is not conclusive evidence of negligence in venturing upon a sidewalk which he had a right to presume was in a safe condition).

the danger,³⁴ and there was no other reasonably safe or convenient way to use,³⁵ or the way was ordinarily used by travelers;³⁶ or where the injured person's knowledge was remote,³⁷ or imperfect,³⁸ or insufficient to give a full appreciation of the danger;³⁹ or where he rightfully acted on the assumption that the municipality had, in the exercise of its duty, remedied the defect and obviated the danger.⁴⁰ So temporary inattention to or forgetfulness of a known defect or obstruction, although a circumstance to be considered, does not of itself constitute contributory negligence.⁴¹

Presumption.—If a person knows of a dangerous defect in a sidewalk and is injured thereby, it is presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that he remembered it and was negligent; but the presumption is rebuttable and gives way so readily to explanatory circumstances that any reasonable excuse for the forgetfulness is sufficient to carry the case to the jury on the ques-

d. Duty to Observe and Avoid Defect or Obstruction. A person using or traveling on a street or public way is required to reasonably exercise his faculties to discover and avoid dangerous defects and obstructions, the care required being commensurate with the danger or appearances thereof;⁴² and he is guilty of contributory negligence if by reason of his failure to exercise such care he fails to discover and avoid a defect or obstruction which is visible and obvious,⁴³ or where the surrounding circumstances indicate danger;⁴⁴ as where he fails to pay attention of plaintiff's contributory negligence. Lyon v. Grand Rapids, 121 Wis. 609, 99 N. W. 311; Collins v. Janesville, 111 Wis. 348, 87 N. W. 241, 1087.

danger,⁵¹ even though he had previously known of the defect.⁵² Nor is such a person contributorily negligent from the mere fact that his attention was attracted in another direction at the time.⁵³

e. Choice of Ways.⁵⁴ Where a person voluntarily elects to travel along a route which he knows to be unsafe or obviously dangerous, with knowledge of another safe and convenient way, he thereby assumes the risk of the chosen way, and if injured while traveling thereon is guilty of contributory negligence precluding a recovery;⁵⁵ as where, knowing of the dangerous condition of a sidewalk, he elects to walk thereon when he could have avoided the accident by taking the opposite side of the street which was safe,⁵⁶ or by walking in the road-

A spike projecting from a plank in a sidewalk, and loose planks in such a walk, are not of themselves such obvious defects as to charge a pedestrian with notice thereof as matter of law. Rusch v. Dubuque, 116 Iowa 402, 90 N. W. 80.

That the person injured had room to pass safely by a defect in a sidewalk, which occasioned her injury, is not of itself sufficient evidence to imperatively call for the conclusion that she was guilty of negligence in not so doing; but that with the fact that she was not thinking of the condition of the sidewalk is a circumstance to be considered in the absence of proof of previous knowledge. *Gillrie v. way.⁵⁷ But this rule applies only where the danger is so great and apparent that an ordinarily prudent person would regard it as dangerous and avoid it;⁵⁸ and the mere fact that the way he used was defective or obstructed, and that there was another and safer way which he might have taken, does not per se establish contributory negligence, if he exercised ordinary care, in accordance with the conditions existing at that place.⁵⁹ And in considering whether or not plaintiff exercised proper care in taking the route he did, the fact that such route was generally used by the public,⁶⁰ or that the alternative route was also dangerous,⁶¹ or was long and difficult,⁶² should be taken into consideration. The fact that the person injured chose the dangerous way does not constitute contributory negligence if he did not know of the danger;⁶³ nor does the fact that there was another and safer way;⁶⁴ nor is it negligence to use a way known to be merely defective, but believed to be safe with ordinary caution.⁶⁵ It has been held that the fact that the dangerous way was not closed warrants travelers in using it, and excuses apparent negligence.⁶⁶

f. Leaving Traveled Way—(i) IN GENERAL. There is no rule of law requiring a traveler at his peril to keep in the usually traveled portion of a public way:⁶⁷ and the mere fact that a person is off the traveled portion of a street at the time he was injured does not constitute contributory negligence:⁶⁸ but he must exercise ordinary care and prudence in leaving the traveled way and going along at another place.⁶⁹

(ii) PEDESTRIAN LEAVING WALKWAY. It is not negligence per se for a pedestrian to step off or pass along the street elsewhere than on the sidewalk,⁷⁰ or to cross it elsewhere than at a cross walk,⁷¹ particularly where he does so to avoid a dangerous sidewalk or crossing.⁷² But he must exercise ordinary care and greater caution than in the daytime.⁷⁷ In exercising ordinary care a traveler at night, in the absence of knowledge to the contrary, has the right to act on the assumption that the street or way is in a reasonably safe condition for travel by night as well as by day,⁷⁸ and is not bound to anticipate that he will encounter excavations, without having some notice thereof by lights, or without other precautions taken for his protection.⁷⁹ A failure to use prudence commensurate with obvious conditions constitutes negligence.⁸⁰ It is not negligence per se for a traveler to run or to trot his horse at night,⁸¹ or to drive a blind horse after dark;⁸² but it is contributory negligence to drive at a trot along a street on a dark night in close proximity to danger signals, which were seen at some distance.⁸³

quently becomes dangerous,⁹⁹ or who has failed to exercise reasonable care with regard to building material piled in the street.¹ But it is not negligence to fail to guard against accidents which cannot reasonably be anticipated.² A contractor with a street railroad company who digs a trench parallel to the track is not liable to a passenger upon a car of the company in case he has provided suitable bridges to enable the company to permit passengers to alight in safety.³ But one excavating a trench across a city street is required to keep it properly guarded, and is not relieved from liability for an injury caused by a failure to do so by the fact that this duty, with his knowledge, had been assumed by a street railroad company for the purpose of facilitating the movement of its cars.⁴ In order to impose liability for causing a defect in a public highway it is not necessary that the highway should ever have been formally accepted by the city or improved.⁵

(II) LIABILITIES OF ABUTTING OWNERS. In the absence of statute a property-owner is under no obligation to repair the street in front of his premises and is not liable for an injury resulting from a defect therein which does not result from his affirmative action.⁶ But where for his own convenience he has interfered with the street, rendering it less safe for use, he is liable to any person who in the exercise of due care sustains injury by reason of his act.⁷ Where an adjoining

v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 25 S. W. 1131, holding that where a railroad company, with permission of the city, digs a ditch across a street and permits it to remain unguarded, if the city becomes liable for injuries received by one falling into such ditch, the railroad company is also liable.

Keeping guards in position.—Where guards placed around excavations made by defendant in a street in a thickly settled neighborhood are liable to be thrown down by boys, it is defendant's duty to station a man to see that the guards are kept up. Crawford v. Wilson, etc., Mfg. Co., 8 Misc. (N. Y.) 48, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 514 [affirmed in 144 N. Y. 708, 39 N. E. 857].

Impracticability of guarding.—It was gross negligence on the part of a light and power company to leave entirely unguarded an excavation in the street, where passengers alighting from street cars were likely to fall into it, although, owing to its proximity to the street car track, it may have been impracticable to fence it in the mode prescribed by a city ordinance. Macdonald v. St. Louis Transit Co., 108 Mo. App. 374, 83 S. W. 1001.

Crouch*, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 882; Thomas v. Hook, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 119 (holding that one who leaves a heavy mass of timber standing unguarded in a city street is responsible for the injury that may result from its being thrown down by the wind on a passer-by, although there is no proof that he put it in the place where it fell, or that it was not negligently removed there by someone else from the spot where he negligently left it, in the first instance). *Compare Kramer v. W. 615, holding that it is, as a question of law, actionable negligence on the part of a manufacturer to obstruct for weeks the street in front of his premises for the purpose of receiving and discharging his goods.

landowner makes a rightful use of the street for the deposit of building materials⁸ he is not under ordinary circumstances charged with the duty to render them safe for persons using them for their own purposes, whether of pleasure, convenience, or profit.⁹ He must, however, exercise due care for the safety of travelers¹⁰ and exercise reasonable diligence in providing warning signals during periods of darkness.¹¹

(iii) PUBLIC CONTRACTORS. A person engaged in work under contract with a city is not liable for acts performed in pursuance of such contract in the absence of negligence;¹² but he is bound to use due care to protect persons lawfully using the street from injury,¹³ and the same rule applies to one employed by the Lumber piles.—One maintaining lumber piles on a street without authority is liable to one injured because thereof without fault of his own. *McKune v. Obstruction of public alley.—The owner of the abutting premises who maintains a dangerous obstruction in an alley is liable for injuries resulting. Osage City v. Larkin, 40 Kan. 206, 19 Pac. 658, 10 Am. St. Rep. 186, 2 L. R. A. 56. Persons toward whom liability exists.—Where a boy, on his way home from a game of ball, sits down near lumber piled in the street without authority, and, without fault on the part of the boy, the lumber falls on him, the person piling the lumber is liable for the injuries. Kessler v. Berger, 205 Pa. St. 289, 54 Atl. 887, 61 L. R. A. 611.

App. 459, holding that for the purpose of erecting a building, a reasonably necessary portion of the street may be withdrawn from public use for piling material, etc.; and when so withdrawn the building contractor is under no obligation to keep such withdrawn space in proper condition for public travel, or a playground for children.

Invitation to children.—That building materials lying in a street may be attractive to children as a place for play or as a resting place does not impose on the landowner a duty to so arrange them as to render them safe for such purposes. Friedman

Rep. 2342, holding that one who, without necessity or license, left a dangerous pile of lumber in a public street where small children were in the habit of playing, was not relieved from liability because the lumber was not negligently stacked.

10. Christman v. Meierhoffer, 116 Mo. App. 46, 92 S. W. 141. See Wood v. Mears, 12 Ind. 515, 74 Am. 11. Christman v. Meierhoffer, 116 Mo. App. App. 46, 92 S. W. 141, holding that a property-owner, piling in the street in front of his premises materials for use in constructing a sidewalk, is not relieved of the duty of placing a warning light upon the obstruction by the fact that it was the custom of the city to light the street lights early enough to disclose the presence of the obstruction.

13. Barton v. McDonald, 81 Cal. 265, 22 Pac. 855 (holding that where a contractor, in violation of a city ordinance, leaves a hole unguarded by light or barriers in a public street which he is repairing, he is responsible to one injured thereby without contributory negligence); Reilly v. Sicilian Asphalt Paving Co., 16 Misc. (N. Y.) 65, 37 N. Y. Suppl. 638 (holding that an asphalt company, leaving a bank of gravel about four feet from the gutter, without a light, is liable to one driving over it in the night, and injured thereby, although piles of asphalt, about twenty feet distant from the gravel, but nearer the gutter, have lights thereon); Zehnder v. Miller, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 556 (holding that particular safeguards to a ditch were insufficient).

Unforeseen results.—Where a company placed planking four inches thick over a hole which it had lawfully made in the pavement at some distance from the usual crossing, and at a point where there was heavy traffic, and the street was well lighted, it was not guilty of negligence rendering it liable for injuries to a pedestrian caused by stub-state.¹⁴ In case the city has assumed control of a structure placed in the street by a contractor, it and not the contractor is liable for a resulting injury.¹⁵ A provision in a contract for public work by which the contractor agrees to indemnify the city for any damages occasioned by his negligence does not impose liability upon the contractor for acts done at the express direction of the municipal authorities,¹⁶ in case the contractor has not been negligent;¹⁷ and a third person cannot avail himself of a provision imposing upon the contractor, as between himself and the city, liability for acts of subcontractors.¹⁸ A mere contract to light the streets of a city will not impose liability upon the contractor toward an individual injured by the fact that the streets are improperly lighted.¹⁹ But where a lighting company agrees to keep its lamps and lamp posts in repair, it has been held that an individual injured by non-performance of the duty so imposed may sue.²⁰ A statute requiring persons operating steam engines on the highway, on meeting travelers, to stop until they have passed, applies only to moving engines on the county roads, and does not regulate the movements of steam rollers on the streets of cities.²¹

b. Sidewalks—(i) IN GENERAL. Any person who for his own private purposes interferes with a sidewalk and fails to restore it to a safe condition is guilty of a nuisance and liable to any person sustaining injury thereby.²²

(ii) LACK OF REPAIR. In the absence of statute, an abutting owner is not liable for injuries occasioned to a person through failure to maintain a sidewalk in repair,²³ and such liability will not grow out of a statute or ordinance authorizing her toe on the planking. Derby v. Degnon-McLean Contracting Co., 112 N. Y. App. Div. 324, 98 N. Y. Suppl. 592 [affirmed in 188 N. Y. 631, 81 N. E. 1163]. See also Carr v. Degnon Contracting Co., 48 Misc. (N. Y.) 531, 96 N. Y. Suppl. 277.

Subsidence of material.—A contractor with the city for work requiring excavation in the street is bound not only to leave his work in proper condition for the time, but to anticipate and provide for the natural effect of rains upon the earth excavated and replaced. Southern Express Co. v. Texarkana Water Co., 54 Ark. 131, 15 S. W. 361; Johnson v. Friel, 50 N. Y. 679.

Necessity of responsibility of city.—The contractor's liability does not depend on the authority of his employer to have the street repaired, or whether the employer would be responsible for the injury. Barton v. McDonald, 81 Cal. 265, 22 Pac. 855.

14. Bliss v. Schaub, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 339, holding that one who digs a hole in a public street, and leaves the same open and unprotected, is liable for damages to others arising therefrom, even though he is in the employ of the state, and acts under its control in digging the hole.

owner³² or other person³³ may be liable for a special and peculiar injury caused by his own artificial accumulation of snow or ice upon the sidewalk, as by the discharge of water at a time when the natural result would be to form ice.³⁴ The liability is confined to what a reasonable man might anticipate and the owner is required to do only what is reasonably necessary to prevent the injury;³⁵ but when he knows that a nuisance has been created he then becomes absolutely liable until he has remedied it.³⁶ A statute limiting the liability of cities and towns to persons injured by reason of snow and ice does not apply to abutting owners.³⁷

Piling up snow.—Where the proprietor of premises abutting on a sidewalk piled up snow thereon in such an accumulated mass as to interfere with travel or by means of the operation of natural causes which he ought to have foreseen to create danger by its melting and freezing, he was liable for injuries resulting therefrom to a pedestrian who was herself in the exercise of due care. Discharge from roofs.—Where the owner of a building negligently maintains a leader from the roof of the building so as to discharge on the sidewalk, so that ice accumulates thereon, and the walk becomes dangerous, he is liable to any person injured thereby. Davis v. Rich, 180 Mass. 235, 62 N. E. 375; Leahan v. Cochran, 178 Mass. 566, 60 N. E. 382, 86 Am. St. Rep. 506, 53 L. R. A. 891; Shipley v. Proctor, 177 Mass. 498, 59 N. E. 119; Tremblay v. Rep. 358 [reversing 22 Hun 60], holding that where a pipe discharging water from the roof of a building on the sidewalk is constructed with due care, the owner of the building is not liable for an injury occasioned by a person slipping on ice which had formed by water escaping from such pipe, in the absence of any municipal ordinance prohibiting such mode of carrying off water from the roof of the building.

Drippings from awning.—One who maintains an awning so constructed that water collected thereon flows off upon the sidewalk is liable for injuries to a person caused by slipping upon the ice formed by the freezing of the water. McConnell v. Bostelmann, 72 Hun (N. Y.) 238, 25 N. Y. Suppl. 390.

Railroad water tank.—Where a railroad company, without a license from the city, allows water to flow from its tank upon the sidewalk of a street, where it freezes, the company is liable to persons who are injured by falling on the ice. Canfield v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 78 Mich. 356, 44 N. W. 385; Thuringer v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 71 Hun (N. Y.) 526, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 1087, 82 Hun 33, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 419; McGoldrick v. Where defendant did not continue nuisance.—Where one buys premises having upon them, or on the boundary line, a pipe discharging water from the roof for the accommodation of his and adjoining premises, but changes the flow and does not use the pipe for his own premises, but the pipe continues to discharge the water from the adjoining premises, he is not liable to one who, passing along the sidewalk, falls upon ice formed by such discharge and is injured. Wenzlick v. McCotter, 87 N. Y. 122, 41 Am. Rep. 358 [reversing 22 Hun 60].

Effect of custom.—Defendant is not relieved from liability to a person injured by his draining water from his house over the sidewalk, through an uncovered drain, forming a ridge of ice, by evidence that in that borough it was customary to so drain water, it not being shown that this was necessary. however, such opening is maintained under municipal authority or permission the owner is liable only in case of negligence in its construction or repair.³⁹ But in some jurisdictions negligence is made the test of liability in either case.⁴⁰ In any event where the owner fails to properly guard or protect an open coal hole, cellar, area way, or other opening,⁴¹ or maintains a defective cover over such an opening,⁴² so that passage is not reasonably safe to persons traveling in the street, he is liable in case of injury sustained by them.

(v) EXCAVATIONS. An abutting owner who for his own private purposes makes an excavation in a sidewalk and fails to restore it to a safe condition,⁴³ or who fails to keep the excavation safely guarded while open,⁴⁴ is liable to a person injured thereby, and it is immaterial that there is a safe walk upon the other side of the street.⁴⁵ An owner who permits an excavation on his land adjoining the sidewalk is bound to use at least reasonable care to see that the sidewalk does not cave in.⁴⁶

(vi) OBSTRUCTIONS. A person who is allowed an extraordinary use of the sidewalk for his private convenience is bound to exercise reasonable care to guard the public from injury,⁴⁷ but where such care has been exercised and his use is proper and reasonable no liability for injury exists.⁴⁸ Where the abutting owner wrongfully uses or obstructs a sidewalk⁴⁹ he is liable for any resulting injury to a passer-by who is in the exercise of ordinary care.

Use permitted to abutting owner see supra, XII, A, 7.

A stepping stone upon a sidewalk in front of a house, which does not interfere with the use of the roadway and bed of the street, nor to any appreciable or unreasonable extent with the use of the sidewalk, does not constitute a public nuisance and is a reasonable and necessary use of the street, and the owner of the house before which it is placed is not liable in damages for injuries sustained by a person who stumbles over the stone.

Duty to guard against unanticipated acts.—One erecting a temporary platform on the sidewalk in front of his property for the purpose of taking down a wall is only bound to take reasonable precautions against injury to persons lawfully using the sidewalk, and is not bound to anticipate that a person will attempt a dangerous trespass by jumping on a moving train just at the edge of the platform, and so is not liable for an injury received by him in so doing by striking against a post in the platform. *Price v. Electric guard-rail in front of window.—Where a bank, facing on a public street, extends a rail in front of a window to protect it from persons congregating on the sidewalk, and connects the rail with an electric battery, operated inside the bank building, it will be liable for injuries sustained by a person receiving a shock from contact with the rail, on the ground that it was maintaining a nuisance in a public street. *Whaley v. e. License or Permission. Where an act affecting the safety of a street or sidewalk is done under municipal permission the act itself does not impose liability,⁵⁵ but the permission of the municipality to perform the act will not exempt the person from taking proper precautions to prevent injury therefrom to persons using the street,⁵⁶ as for example where excavations are made⁵⁷ or poles and wires Suspension of electric light.—Since an electric lighting company would have no authority to place an electric light in the streets near a trolley wire except it obtained the same from the city, its act in placing the same so near the wire that it could be struck and broken by a trolley pole escaping from the wire was not wrongful, so as to render the lighting company liable for injuries to a person injured under such circumstances by the falling glass. *Nelson v. Iowa.—Ottumwa v. Parks, 43 Iowa 119, holding that the fact that a mayor of a city, in granting permission to an individual to excavate a street, provided the kind of barriers to be used, does not relieve the person making the excavation from liability for injuries to third persons in case the barriers are unsuitable.

New York.—Sexton v. Zett, 44 N. Y. 430 [affirming 56 Barb. 119], holding that it is negligence, as a matter of law, for a person to dig a ditch across a public sidewalk and allow it to remain open at night with no provision for warning or protecting travelers.

erected.⁵⁸ A permission which the municipality had no power to grant will not afford protection.⁵⁹ Where openings are left open during the process of construction of a walk which has been ordered to be constructed within a certain time, the owner, for the purpose of determining whether he has exercised due care, will not be regarded as having the entire time allotted to complete the work if it might have been completed in less with reasonable diligence.⁶⁰

ing that the fact that defendant, in digging a ditch along a public way, tapping a private sewer, violated a city ordinance intended to prevent the use of a public sewer without payment of an imposed tax, does not give a right of action to one whose horse was injured by the negligent doing of the work.

When ordinance does not apply.—Where the owner of a building abutting on a city sidewalk has obtained permission from the city to repair the building and lower the sidewalk, and under such permission has erected barriers to close the walk to the public, the measure of the owner's duty to a person employed by another to make the repairs within the barriers must be determined by the common law, and not by a city ordinance requiring openings in the sidewalk to be properly covered. Sullivan v. Dallas City Nat. Bank, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 359, 65 S. W. 39.

Violation of ordinance requiring removal of snow or ice see supra, XIV, D, 7, b, (ii).

62. Shippers Compress, etc., Co. v. Davidson, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 558, 80 S. W. 1032, holding that the act of a compress company in building an inclined gangway from a platform on one side of the street to a platform on the other side without any authority from the city, and in such a way that it left a space of from but fifteen to twenty feet in width for the passage of horses and vehicles, being an obstruction of the street, and a violation of Pen. Code (1895), art. 480, prescribing a fine for the wilful obstruction of any street in an incorporated town or city, is, as to a person injured while using the highway at the place of the obstruction, negligence per se.

Where there is no negligence in construction.—The building of an obstruction across a street in violation of law is an unlawful act, and, where it results in injury to another, subjects the one building it to liability, notwithstanding the fact that there is no defect in its construction. Shippers Compress, etc., Co. v. Davidson, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 558, 80 S. W. 1032.

is liable for resulting injury where he has not complied with the ordinance, although there is no showing that the act of third persons did not contribute to the injury.⁶⁴ But failure to secure a permit for an excavation as required by ordinance will not render the maker liable where the person injured has been negligent.⁶⁵

e. Persons Liable.⁶⁶ In order that liability may exist the obstruction or defect must have been created by the person whom it is sought to charge or it must be within his control.⁶⁷ A tangible and defined interest in the premises involved, coupled with the control thereof, is usually regarded as sufficient to impose lia-

Baltimore Canton Co.*, 40 Md. 312, 17 Am. Rep. 603.

Michigan.—Davis v. Michigan Bell Tel. Co., 81 Mich. 307, 28 N. W. 108, holding that one not owning the premises in which he has his office, and to whom therefore no duty accrues as to maintaining the adjacent sidewalk, does not, by lifting up a loose board in such sidewalk and replacing it, become liable to one who steps on it thereafter, to his injury.

New York.—English v. Brennan, 60 N. Y. 609.

United States.—Mahoney v. Helena, 96 Fed. 790, holding that a receiver of a water company cannot be held liable in damages for a personal injury received by a person in tripping and falling over the top of a stop box which projected above the surface of the ground on the part of a street used for sidewalk purposes, where the box when constructed was placed flush with the surface of the sidewalk, as required by a city ordinance, and its projection was caused by the removal of the sidewalk from around it by someone other than the water company or its receiver.

England.—Chapman v. Fylde Waterworks Co., [1894] 2 Q. B. 599, 59 J. P. 5, 64 L. J. Q. B. 15, 71 L. T. Rep. N. S. 539, 9 Reports 582, 43 Wkly. Rep. 1.

Canada.—Ewing v. Hewitt, 27 Ont. App. 296, holding that a purchaser of premises from one who had, without authority, placed a trap-door with projecting hinges in the sidewalk to obtain an entrance to his cellar, is not liable for an injury to one stumbling over the hinges, merely because she did not remove and occasionally used the door for the purpose for which it was originally intended.

Person originally causing obstruction.—Where contractors ordered sand, but after it was unloaded in the street, in front of where they were erecting a building, claimed that it was not the kind they had bought, and directed the seller to remove it, which was not done, and an accident occurred from its presence in the street, the contractors are liable for the injury, since they were primarily responsible for its being in the street. Rommney v. New York, 49 N. Y. App. Div. 64, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 186.

Liability of contractor after completion of work.—A contractor who has completed an excavation in a sidewalk, as required by his contract, is not liable for injuries to persons falling therein, due to the absence of proper guards, if he did not contract to guard the excavation after it was completed. Cotter v. Lindgren, 106 Cal. 602, 39 Pac. 950, 46 Am. St. Rep. 255.

Liability for acts of person invited on sidewalk.—An abutting owner may be liable for defects in a sidewalk caused by persons who occupy such sidewalk at his invitation. O'Dwyer v. Northern Market Co., 24 App. Cas. (D. C.) 81, holding that a market company, which has no authority to occupy the bility upon a person as an abutting owner.⁶⁸ Such liability is prima facie upon the occupier of the premises.⁶⁹

f. Concurrent Liability of City.⁷⁰ Where a person would otherwise be charged with liability it is no defense that the city is also liable for the injury.⁷¹

g. Notice of Defect or Danger. Where a person is responsible only for negligence he is not liable for the act of a third person of which he has no notice,⁷² unless he is negligent in not anticipating such act and guarding against it.⁷³ But one whose active agency has brought about a dangerous condition in the street is bound to take cognizance of the natural consequence of his own wrongful or negligent act and the rule requiring notice of defect is not applicable;⁷⁴ and it is sufficient to charge such a person with negligence that he might by the exercise of due care have known of the danger.⁷⁵ In order to hold an owner who is out sidewalk adjoining its market house for market purposes, but which nevertheless exercises dominion over the sidewalk for such purpose by inviting dealers and hucksters to occupy it, and collects tolls from them according to the space they occupy, and undertakes in a lease of a store fronting on such sidewalk to have the sidewalk cleaned each day, is liable to a pedestrian who steps and falls on refuse vegetable matter on the sidewalk and is injured, the occupation of the hucksters and dealers being the occupation of the market company.

68. Denver v. Solomon, 2 Colo. App. 534, 31 Pac. 507, holding that in an action for injuries received by falling into an open area, evidence that defendant had the equitable and beneficial title to the property, and received the income, is sufficient to establish her liability, although the actual title was in another as trustee. See Condon v. Sprigg, 78 Md. 330, 28 Atl. 395, holding that where two lots were conveyed to defendant without his knowledge, and defendant, on learning thereof, refused to hold title thereto, and the grantor then presented him a deed to execute, which covered only one lot, defendant was chargeable with the liability which attached to the ownership of the lot, title to which remained in him for injuries received from a defect in the sidewalk in front thereof.

72. Ackerly v. Sullivan, 34 La. Ann. 1156 (holding that a suit for damages resulting from falling over a piece of scantling which stretched across a banquette of a street, with one end resting on a doorsill of a house in charge of defendant, cannot be sustained, in the absence of proof that defendant or his employees placed the scantling there or knew of its being so placed); Cottrell v. Dimick, 1 N. Y. St. 304. See also Lampert v. Laclede Gas-Light Co. (Mo. 1887) 2 S. W. 842.

Removal of light or barrier.—Where a person whose duty it is to guard an obstruction lawfully placed in a public street so as to prevent danger to persons using the street for travel in the exercise of ordinary care performs his duty by the use of a proper light or otherwise, and the guard after being properly placed is removed without fault on such person's part, and a traveler is thereby injured before sufficient time has elapsed for such person in the exercise of ordinary care to discover such removal and remedy it, then he is not liable. Raymond v. Keseberg, 91 Wis. 191, 64 N. W. 861.

73. Cox v. Nova Scotia Tel. Co., 35 Nova Scotia 148, holding that a telephone company which makes an excavation from its premises into the street, and guards the same only by a row of empty barrels, with planks stretching from one to the other and lights attached to the planks, is liable for an injury to one who falls into the excavation, without contributory negligence, at a time when the barriers have been removed by a third person during the temporary absence of a watchman.

74. Southern Express Co. v. Texarkana Water Co., 54 Ark. 131, 15 S. W. 361 (holding that to fix the liability of a waterworks company which left a street in dangerous condition after laying the water mains, it is not necessary that it should have had notice of the dangerous condition of the streets); Flynn v. New York El. R. Co., 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 60 (holding that where a person exercises his right of making an excavation in a street, the obligation to use diligence in protecting passers-by is imperative so long as the excavation exists; and therefore notice that it is not sufficiently protected is not a condition of legal responsibility for injuries from the excavation, although the right is exercised by means of a contract made with other persons); Cairncross v. Pewaukee, 86 Wis. 181, 56 N. W. 648 (holding that under Rev. St. § 1339, providing that action for injuries from a defect in a highway cannot be maintained against a village unless notice is given it, failure to give the notice cannot avail the parties who put an obstruction in a road).

75. Stevenson v. Joy, 152 Mass. 45, 25 N. E. 78 (holding that where the injury arose from the fact that a cover of a coal hole was not fastened, it is not necessary that defendant should have known that it was not fastened, if by due care he might have known it); Dickson v. Hollister, 123 of possession for an obstruction on a sidewalk in front of land in possession of a tenant he must be shown to have had an obligation to repair and notice of necessity.⁷⁶ The owner of property in a city, whose title extends to the middle of the street, is chargeable with notice that he is the owner of a tree planted on the sidewalk in front of his property, and of his liability as such for injuries to wayfarers occasioned by his allowing it to become dangerous, where the city makes no claim to the tree.⁷⁷

h. Abandonment of Property or Use Thereof. Where a structure has been placed in the sidewalk or street for the convenience of abutting property, the owner cannot relieve himself from liability by abandoning the use of such structure.⁷⁸ Nor can the owner of property placed in the street under license from the city relieve himself from liability by abandoning his property.⁷⁹

E. Actions For Torts — 1. NATURE AND FORM OF REMEDY — a. In General. If the injury results from a proper exercise of statutory authority, an action for damages must be in the manner, if any, prescribed by statute;¹ but if it is caused by the unlawful act or negligence of the municipality, an action on the case is the proper remedy;² and in such case a statutory proceeding applicable to damages caused by the taking of land under the right of eminent domain will not lie.³ If the municipal negligence also amounts to a breach of its contract, the injured party may either sue for the breach of the contract or sue in tort.⁴ A recovery under a statute giving damages for injury under the power of eminent domain precludes an action for tort for the same injury.⁵

b. Injunction. An injunction will lie where danger of injury is impending and probable.⁶ But an injunction will not be granted to protect private property where the result thereof would be to jeopardize the public health or convenience.⁷

2. CONDITIONS PRECEDENT — a. In General. In the absence of statutory or charter requirement the only condition precedent in an action on the case for tort against a municipality is some unlawful act or breach of duty on the part of the municipality and injuries resulting therefrom.⁸ But in most jurisdictions there are, by charter or statute, various requirements which the injured party

Dickson*, 88 Me. 362, 34 Atl. 168, holding that where a grantor erected a water box on the sidewalk in front of his premises, the cover of which extended one and one-half inches above the sidewalk, and which constituted a common nuisance, and the grantee, on taking possession, discontinued use of the same, and constructed another box in another place in its stead, the grantee was not liable for injuries occurring through the cover of the old box becoming displaced.

79. Nichols v. Minneapolis, 33 Minn. 430, 23 N. W. 868, 53 Am. Rep. 56, holding that where wires of a telegraph company in a public street were broken by the weight of ice produced by water thrown on them by the city fire department in extinguishing a fire, and fell into the street, where they became partly imbedded in ice, and formed a dangerous obstruction, it was the duty of the company to remove the fallen wires within a reasonable time after notice, and that it could not relieve itself from this duty by assuming to abandon the property.

must comply with before he can maintain an action for damages against the municipality.⁹

b. Exhaustion of Remedy Against Negligent Person. Under some statutes where a party is injured by reason of a defective or obstructed street or sidewalk, the primary liability for such injury is on the abutting owner or other person whose wrong or neglect produced or caused such defect or obstruction, and the party injured must exhaust his remedy against such negligent person as a condition precedent to his right to maintain an action against the city.¹⁰ Under such a statute before an action can be maintained against a city for injuries sustained, a judgment must have been recovered against the negligent persons and execution thereon returned wholly or partially unsatisfied.¹¹ But where the injury is caused by the actual neglect of the city, concurring with the neglect of the individual, an action may be brought against it without first exhausting the remedy against such person.¹²

c. Notice or Presentment of Claim For Injury—(1) NECESSITY. Unless expressly required by statute previous notice or presentment of a claim for injuries by tort, to the city council, treasurer, or other proper authorities is not necessary as a condition precedent to an action thereon against the municipality.¹³ But it is well settled that the legislature has power to make provisions requiring notice or presentation of claims for damages as a condition precedent to actions thereon against the municipality;¹⁴ and in most jurisdictions it is required, either by the charter of the municipality, or by the provisions of the general statutes, that in order that a person who has suffered damages by reason of defective streets or other unlawful or negligent acts of a municipality may maintain an action therefor against the municipality, he must first give notice of or file or present his claim in the time and manner prescribed by such charter or statute; and Sheboygan*, 76 Wis. 335, 45 N. W. 125.

A city is not merely a guarantor of the collectability of a judgment against the negli-

14. Merz v. Brooklyn, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 778 [affirmed in 128 N. Y. 617, 28 N. E. 253].

Where the right to recover of a city is wholly a creature of the statute, the legislaunless he does so there can be no recovery.¹⁵ The requirements of these charters or statutes are variant; and therefore what notice or presentation of the claim shall be made in a particular case depends upon the terms of the charter or statute under which recovery is sought.¹⁶ Thus it is variously provided that no action can be maintained against a municipality for personal injuries sustained through its negligence or unlawful acts, unless notice of an intention to sue, and of the time, character, and place of the injury is filed within a specified time after the happening of the injury;¹⁷ or unless the claim for damages has been ture may grant the right, take it away, or make the exercise of it contingent upon the performance of such conditions, as in its wisdom it may deem best (Schaefer v. Fond du Lac, 99 Wis. 333, 74 N. W. 810, 41 L. R. A. 287), as by reducing the time within which notice of injuries shall be given to municipal corporations (Daniels v. Racine, 98 Wis. 649, 74 N. W. 553).

Rhode Island.—Fugere v. Cook, 27 R. I. 134, 60 Atl. 1067 (holding, however, that where an owner of land abutting on a highway claims damages by reason of the negligent delay of the city in constructing a sewer therein, notice by him under Gen. Laws (1896), c. 36, § 15, is sufficient, and that he need not give the notice required by section 16 of that statute of the time, place, etc., of the injury); Maloney v. Cook, 21 R. Canada.—The Consolidated Municipal Act of 1892, § 581, subs. 1, as amended by 57 Vict. c. 50, § 13, and 59 Vict. c. 51, § 20, applies to all cases of non-repair of highways. Aldis v. Matilda, 29 Ont. 98.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1697.

Notwithstanding the neglect is imputed to servants of the municipality, the prescribed notice to certain officers of the municipality is a condition precedent, where it is not imputable to such servants individually. Parsons v. Ft. Worth, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 273, 63 S. W. 889.

Commencement of the action cannot be such notice, as is required as a condition precedent to its maintenance. Curry v. Buffalo, 135 N. Y. 366, 32 N. E. 80.

16. See cases hereafter cited.

Where notice is given in the manner prescribed by a general statute, the claimant need not, in addition thereto, present his claim to the municipal authorities as prescribed by its special charter as a condition precedent to his suing on the claim. McFarland v. Muscatine, 98 Iowa 199, 67 N. W. 233.

A provision requiring claimant to furnish the names of witnesses to the common council within a stated time imposes no duty upon him to produce such witnesses before the council. Monje v. Grand Rapids, 122 Mich. 645, 81 N. W. 574.

Suppl. 747 (holding also that such provision in the Auburn City Charter, § 140, was not repealed by Laws (1897), c. 172, amending such charter); Krall v. New York, 44 N. Y. App. Div. 259, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 661; Walsh v. Buffalo, 92 Hun (N. Y.) 438, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 997; Frankel v. New York, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 294.

New York Laws (1886), c. 572, § 1, providing that no action against a city having fifty thousand inhabitants for personal injuries shall be maintained unless notice of intention to sue shall have been filed within six months after accrual with the corporation counsel or other proper law officer, has been held to apply to such actions against the city of Brooklyn, although the words "mayor, aldermen and commonalty" as used in the statute form no part of the corporate title of that city. Merz v. Brooklyn, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 778 [affirmed in 128 N. Y. 617, 28 N. E. 253]. Where the action is for injury both to person and property, the failure to serve notice of an intention to sue is not grounds for a nonsuit, as such statute does not require such notice as to injuries to property. Werner v. Rochester, 149 N. Y. 563, 55 N. E. 300 [affirming 77 Hun 33, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 226]. This statute has been presented to the common council or other proper municipal authorities within the prescribed time;¹⁸ or in case of injuries received by reason of a defective bridge, sidewalk, street, or thoroughfare, unless notice of the intention to sue and of the time and place of the injury is given within the prescribed time.¹⁹ Under some statutes the amount of compensation claimed for the injury must be stated in the notice or no action can be maintained against the city therefor;²⁰ but the claimant is not concluded in his action by the amount stated in his notice, but held to apply to a cause of action for personal injuries caused by the fall of a tree because of its rottenness and decay, although the tree is also claimed to have been a nuisance (Kelly v. New York, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 257, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 217), and to a cause of action for a loss of services of claimant's wife or child by reason of personal injuries (White v. New York, 15 N. Y. App. Div. 440, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 454; Kellogg v. New York, 15 N. Y. App. Div. 326, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 39).

The absence or presence of notice of intention to sue relates to the remedy, and not to the right, and hence its service is not strictly a part of plaintiff's cause of action. Sheehy v. New York, 160 N. Y. 139, 54 N. E. 749 [reversing 29 N. Y. App. Div. 263, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 519].

18. California.—Bancroft v. San Diego, 120 Cal. 432, 52 Pac. 712, holding that under San Diego City Charter (St. (1889), p. 658, art. 2, c. 2, § 10) the failure to present a claim for damages for tort to the common council and file it with the clerk within the time specified defeats the cause of action.

Suppl. 126 [affirming 36 Misc. 499, 73 N. Y. Suppl. 953] (holding that the charter of Ithaca (Laws (1888), c. 212, tit. 8, § 8, requires presentation of the claim to be made to the common council within sixty days from the date of the accident and that sixty days is not so short as to be unreasonable); Jones v. Albany, 62 Hun 353, 17 N. Y. Suppl. 232 (holding that under the Albany city charter, a presentation of the claim to the common council and an opportunity to the law department to investigate the same are conditions precedent to the right to maintain an action thereon); Nagel v. Buffalo, 34 Hun 1.

Ohio.—Warren v. Davis, 43 Ohio St. 447, 3 N. E. 301 (holding that the word "damages" as used in Rev. St. § 2326, means damages of the subject-matter and does not include damages for personal injuries);

Wisconsin.—Steltz v. Wausau, 88 Wis. 618, 60 N. W. 1054 (statement of damages to land by overflow of culvert must be presented to the common council within ninety days after the happening thereof); Vogel v. Antigo, 81 Wis. 642, 51 N. W. 1008.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1697.

19. Iowa.—Kenyon v. Cedar Rapids, 124 Iowa 195, 99 N. W. 692 (holding that under Code, §§ 1050, 1051, one injured by a defective sidewalk must give notice of the injury within thirty days); Sachs v. Sioux City, 109 Iowa 224, 80 N. W. 336.

Minnesota.—Moran v. St. Paul, 54 Minn. 279, 56 N. W. 80 (holding such a provision to apply only to injuries resulting from defects in public ways as such, and not to a nuisance to adjoining property maintained in such ways); Ray v. St. Paul, 44 Minn. 340, 46 N. W. 675; Nichols v. Minneapolis, 30 Minn. 545, 16 N. W. 410 (holding such provision (Spec. Laws (1881), c. 8, § 20) to apply to injuries to property as well as to injuries to the person).

North Dakota.—Trost v. Casselton, 8 N. D. 534, 79 N. W. 1071.

Texas.—Ft. Worth v. Shero, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 487, 41 S. W. 704.

Wisconsin.—Ziegler v. West Bend, 102 Wis. 17, 73 N. W. 164, holding Rev. St. (1898) § 1339, to apply to an injury caused by the improper adjustment of the cover of a manhole over a catch basin as a result of which it slid out of place when stepped on.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1697.

Notice for injuries occurring in a ditch in a street is required under a statute applying to injuries resulting from defective "streets or sidewalks." Giles v. Shenandoah, 111 Iowa 83, 82 N. W. 466.

20. Doyle v. Duluth, 74 Minn. 157, 76 N. W. 1029; Bausher v. St. Paul, 72 Minn. 539, 75 N. W. 745; Born v. Spokane, 27 Wash. 719, 68 Pac. 386, holding that a reasonable compliance with such regulation by stating as nearly as possible the amount of damages is all that is required in view of the fact that the claimant may at the time of trial show damages developing subsequent to the date of notice to the city. But see Morgan v. Lewiston, 91 Me. 566, 40 Atl. 545.

A notice demanding a gross amount of damages for several claims is not objection-

may recover his actual damages.²¹ Some statutes requiring notice within a prescribed time are held to apply only where suit is delayed for more than that time; and where the suit is brought within such time, the service of a summons and complaint is the only notice required.²² Where there is no provision excepting infants, such requirements apply alike to infants and adults.²³

(ii) CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTES. Such charter or statutory provisions, so far as the requirement of a notice or presentment as a condition precedent is concerned, are in derogation of common right, and should be strictly construed,²⁴ and cannot be extended by implication beyond their own terms,²⁵ and therefore will not require such notice with respect to damages which are not within the intention of the statute;²⁶ but where a notice or presentation has been given or made, its sufficiency under the statute is a remedial matter, and it should be liberally construed.²⁷ Such provisions are generally declared not to be retroactive.²⁸ It has been held that the requirement of a prescribed notice or presentation does not able. Hunter v. Ithaca, 135 Mich. 281, 97 N. W. 712.

Suppl. 863; Meyer v. New York, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 395, 12 N. Y. St. 674 (holding that such provision applies only to cases where suit is delayed beyond the prescribed time, and therefore is not necessary where suit is commenced by summons and complaint within that time). 25. Garnett v. Hamilton, 69 Kan. 866, 77 Pac. 533.

A provision applying to injuries from street defects does not include injuries occurring to workmen in sewer construction (McIntee v. Middletown, 80 N. Y. App. Div. 434, 81 N. Y. Suppl. 124), or for want of a safe place to work (Kelly v. Faribault, 95 Minn. 293, 104 N. W. 231).

A provision that no action can be maintained until the claim has been presented and disallowed, or the council has neglected to act thereon for a specified period, does not require presentation of a claim based upon a contract made by the council and acceptance by the claimant of a certain sum in settlement of a claim for a larger amount. Sharp v. Manston, 92 Wis. 629, 66 N. W. 803.

26. Scherer v. Cincinnati, 8 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 552, 8 Cinc. L. Bul. 326, holding that a claim for damages for a defective street is not within Rev. St. § 2326, unless the damages are caused by the construction of improvements.

Notice required by Wis. Rev. St. § 1339, for damages occasioned by the "insufficiency or want of repairs of a bridge, sluiceway or road" need not be given where the injuries are occasioned by the obstruction of navigation in consequence of the negligent management of a drawbridge maintained by the municipality; but it is sufficient to comply with section 824 by filing a statement of the claim with the town-clerk. *Winneconne v. Massachusetts.—Shallow v. Salem, 136 Mass. 136, holding a statutory provision that notice of the place where the injury was sustained "shall not be deemed invalid" because of "any inaccuracy in stating the time, place, or cause of the injury" not to apply to a notice given before its enactment.

Michigan.—Broffee v. Grand Rapids, 127 Mich. 89, 86 N. W. 401; Angell v. West Bay City, 117 Mich. 685, 76 N. W. 128; Ather-ton v. Bancroft, 114 Mich. 241, 72 N. W. 208.

implied repeal, viz. : Both laws stand so far as reconcilable ;³⁸ and although the repeal of statutes by implication is not favored, where two repugnant statutes are found relating to the same subject and enacted for the same purpose, the former must be deemed to have been repealed.³⁹

(iii) ABUTTERS OR OBSTRUCTORS. Statutes requiring notice to the municipality as a condition precedent to an action for street negligence do not by implication require such notice to abutters or other persons causing the defect or obstruction, as a condition precedent to a suit against them.⁴⁰

(iv) WAIVER. In some jurisdictions the requirement of such a notice of presentation cannot be waived by the municipal authorities,⁴¹ as by the mayor.⁴² In other jurisdictions, however, such requirements may be waived by the city council ;⁴³ or by other officers or agents speaking or acting within the scope of their authority ;⁴⁴ and in such jurisdictions formal defects are waived if not objected to when the claim is acted upon by the proper authorities.⁴⁵ A waiver, however, can only be predicated upon some duty of the municipality to act ; and where no such duty is imposed by statute, expressly or impliedly, the municipality is under no duty to object to the sufficiency of the notice or presentation until the claimant institutes his suit.⁴⁶ Where the municipal authorities have a prescribed time after presentation to reject the claim for damages, and the claim is not objected to within that time, its form and verification will be deemed sufficient.⁴⁷ It has also been held that objection to the sufficiency of a notice cannot be taken after verdict.⁴⁸ Where a claim for damages is barred by reason of its not being presented within the prescribed time, it cannot be subsequently revived by the municipal authorities, in the absence of express statutory authority.⁴⁹

(v) FORM AND SUFFICIENCY—(A) In General. In order that it may be valid as a condition precedent to an action for injuries caused by a defect in a street, or other tort, it is essential that the prescribed notice, statement, or presentation of the claim, as to its form and contents, should at least substantially comply with the statutory requirements in stating the elements required.⁵⁰ Such statutory requirements being for the benefit of the municipality, in order to put its officers in possession of the facts upon which the claim for damages is predicated, and the place where the injuries are alleged to have occurred in order that they may investigate them and adjust the claim without the expense of litigation,⁵¹ a reason-

W. 754 (holding that the fact that the common council of the city directed plaintiff to appear and produce his witnesses is not a waiver of the notice, it not appearing that the council knew at the time it directed plaintiff to appear that plaintiff had failed to give such notice, and it also appearing that at that time more than three months had elapsed since his injury); Woodworth v. Kalamazoo, 135 Mich. 233, 97 N. Saginaw*, 135 Mich. 61, 97 N. W. 156 (holding that where the notice presented to the city council was an insufficient statement and the statement was referred to the committee on finance and auditing and no action was taken by the committee and the claimant did not ask a hearing nor the city offer one, there was no waiver of any defect or irregularity in the notice); *Blumrich v. Residence of claimant.—Under the charter of the city of Troy (Laws (1892), c. 670, tit. 10, § 19), the claim must state the claimant's residence by street and number; and he is not excused from stating the street upon which his residence is located by reason of the fact that the house being unnumbered it is impossible to state the street number, and in such case a statement which gives a claimant's residence as the city of Troy merely is fatally defective. Johnson v. Troy, 24 N. Y. App. Div. 602, 48 N. Y. Suppl. 998.

Notice may consist of two or more papers properly connected. Walsh v. Buffalo, 92 Hun (N. Y.) 438, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 997, holding that where a notice of an intention to sue is accompanied with a copy of the statement of the claim filed the two papers should be read together to make a complete notice.

able or substantial compliance with the terms of the statute is all that is required; and where an effort to comply with such requirements has been made and the notice, statement, or presentation when reasonably construed is such as to accomplish the object of the statute, it should be regarded as sufficient.⁵² In accordance with this principle, such notice or presentation is to be construed with liberality,⁵³ although express provisions of the statute cannot be ignored;⁵⁴ and enough should appear in the notice or presentation to show that it is intended as a basis of a claim against defendant municipality,⁵⁵ and is given by or in behalf of the person who brings the suit.⁵⁶ Ordinarily the notice or statement should be in writing,⁵⁷ and signed by the person injured or by some person thereto by him duly authorized.⁵⁸ Usually a notice is only required to state the time, place, and character and circumstances of the injury in general terms;⁵⁹ and need not contain specific

Somerville*, 131 Mass. 189 (holding that a notice given in a casual conversation with a police officer by an attending physician of the person injured, but not at his request nor on his behalf, is not sufficient); McNulty v. Cambridge, 130 Mass. 275; Mitchell v. Worcester, 129 Mass. 525; Seliger v. New York, 88 N. Y. Suppl. 1003 (holding that a parent in an action for injury to his infant son cannot rely on notice filed on behalf of the son); Davis v. Seattle, 37 Wash. 223, 79 Pac. 784 (holding that a claim presented by a wife alone for personal injuries is sufficient to enable her husband and herself to jointly prosecute the action); McKeague v. Green Bay, 106 Wis. 577, 82 N. W. 708 (holding this to be true in an action by a husband for the loss of his wife's services where the only notice of her injury stated that she would claim satisfaction and did not show that she was a married woman, that her husband had sustained any damage, or that he was intending to prosecute therefor).

cations of all details of the injury⁶⁰ or defect;⁶¹ nor does surplusage invalidate it;⁶² nor need it state sufficient facts to show the liability of the municipality.⁶³ Some statutes save all such objections by providing that defects or mere inaccuracies in the notice shall not nullify it, unless they were intentional and actually misled defendant;⁶⁴ but under other statutes it is otherwise.⁶⁵ A defect in the notice cannot be cured after suit is brought;⁶⁶ nor will a good notice given after the prescribed period cure a defective notice given before such period had expired.⁶⁷ An unnotified action, brought within the time required for notice, and voluntarily dismissed, may, by its pleadings, operate as a notice for a new action brought in due time.⁶⁸ A single notice will serve for any number of actions which may be instituted for the same injury.⁶⁹

(B) Time, Place, Cause, and Nature of Injury. Where the statute so requires, the notice or statement should set forth with reasonable certainty both the time and the place, cause, and character of the injuries sustained.⁷⁰ Such notice should at least substantially comply with the statutory provision in respect to stating an intention to hold the city liable or to commence an action;⁷¹ and should state with such substantial accuracy as to inform and aid the municipi-

If the notice or statement is specific as to the time, place, and nature of the injury it is sufficient, although it alleges more than one defect in the vicinity where the injury occurred. Bauer v. Dubuque, 120 Iowa 500, 98 N. W. 355.

71. Higgins v. North Andover, 168 Mass. 251, 47 N. E. 85 (holding "I hereby give notice that I hold the town of North Andover responsible for serious injury sustained by my wife" sufficient notice to authorize a suit by the wife); Brown v. Owosso, 126 Mich. 91, 85 N. W. 256 (holding that notice that the person injured believes she is entitled to five thousand dollars for injuries received is sufficient under Comp. Laws, § 3173, in the absence of a request for a more specific notice); Sheehy v. New York, 160 N. Y. 139, 54 N. E. 749 [reversing 29 N. Y. App. Div. 263, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 519] (holding a notice sufficient in this respect, which, while not stating in terms an intention to commence an action, informs the corporation counsel of the nature of the claim, the place where and the circumstances under which it arose, and of a purpose to enforce it); Halpin v. New York, 82 N. Y. App. Div. 311, 81 N. Y. Suppl. 982; De Vore v. Auburn, 64 N. Y. App. Div. 84, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 747 (holding notice not containing a statement of an intention to sue defective notwithstanding the claimant when presenting the statement told the city clerk that such was his intention); Walsh v. Buffalo, 92 Hun (N. Y.) 438, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 997.

pal authorities in investigating the claim, the time,⁷² place,⁷³ nature, and character

72. Gardner v. New London, 63 Conn. 267, 28 Atl. 42; Shaw v. Waterbury, 46 Conn. 263 (holding that Gen. St. tit. 16, c. 7, § 10, contemplates such precise information of the time of such injury as would enable the officers of the municipality to inquire into the fact); Wilton v. Flint, 128 Mich. 156, 87 N. W. 86; Forseyth v. Oswego, 107 N. Y. App. Div. 187, 95 N. Y. Suppl. 33; Freligh v. Saugerties, 70 Hun (N. Y.) 589, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 182; Maloney v. Cook, 21 R. I. 471, 44 Atl. 692.

A mistake of three days in the notice as to the time of the occurrence is fatal even though the municipality was not misled thereby. Gardner v. New London, 63 Conn. 267, 28 Atl. 42.

A slight variation in time will not render the notice so defective as to defeat the action. Murphy v. Seneca Falls, 57 N. Y. App. Div. 438, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 1013; Sullivan v. Syracuse, 77 Hun (N. Y.) 440, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 105, holding that a notice which states that the injury occurred August 5 is sufficient, although it appears that it occurred on the evening of August 4. Compare Lee v. Greenwich, 48 N. Y. App. Div. 391, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 160.

Naming the day sufficiently describes the time of the accident, in the absence of evidence that anything depended upon the nature of the defect, or upon the particular hour of the accident. Donnelly v. Fall River, 132 Mass. 299.

73. Notice held sufficient, in designating the place of the accident, so as to enable the municipal authorities to locate it, see the following cases:

Colorado.—Denver v. Barron, 6 Colo. App. 72, 39 Pac. 989, at a point where a line of sewer "crossed Thirty-Fourth avenue, between F. and H. streets."

Maine.—Hutchings v. Sullivan, 90 Me. 131, 37 Atl. 883, "a hole in the sidewalk situated between Hotel Cleaves and Dunbar Brothers' store upon town way in said town of Sullivan."

Massachusetts.—Fuller v. Hyde Park, 162 Mass. 51, 37 N. E. 782 (holding that notice that plaintiff fell over a root of a tree on the sidewalk of C avenue is not necessarily insufficient); Sargent v. Lynn, 138 Mass. 599 (holding that where a defect at the corner of two ways is minutely described, the notice is not defective merely because it fails to specify the particular corner); Lowe v. Clinton, 133 Mass. 526.

Massachusetts.—Miller v. Springfield, 177 Mass. 373, 58 N. E. 1013; Gardner v. Weymouth, 155 Mass. 595, 30 N. W. 363 (holding that, although the statute (Pub. St. c. 52, § 19, and St. (1888) c. 14) provides that no notice shall be deemed invalid or insufficient solely by reason of any "inaccuracy," a statement that the injury happened on a sidewalk where there was a hydrant without attempting to designate the place of the injury is a fatal defect); *Dalton v. The exact locality need not be stated; and if the notice gives reasonable information as to the locality so as to enable a municipality to investigate it is sufficient. McQuillan v. St. Mary, 31 Ont. 401.

A slight deviation in the description of the place of the accident does not render the notice defective. Wood v. Stafford Springs, 74 Conn. 437, 51 Atl. 129; Cloughessey v. Waterbury, 51 Conn. 405, 50 Am. Rep. 38 ("sidewalk in Bank Street, at a point on the west side of the street in front of the property No. 117, occupied by D. B.," held sufficient, although the place was in fact on the east side of the street); Davis v. Rumney, 67 N. H. 591, 38 Atl. 18 ("at a point indicated by a stake between two large rocks, about 847 feet southerly" from a certain point, although the stake is actually eight hundred and sixty feet southerly from the main point).

Where the injury was caused by a horse becoming frightened and running away, by reason of a defect in a street, the place where the defect was is the place of the injury, in a legal sense, although the loss or damage may have resulted from a collision during the runaway. Carstesen v. Stratford, 67 Conn. 428, 35 Atl. 276. And a notice not indicating any place as defective except where the injury actually occurred is insufficient, where the defect which caused the injury was some distance away. Miller v. Springfield, 177 Mass. 373, 58 N. E. 1013.

Misnaming one of the streets at the juncture of which the notice locates the accident does not make the notice insufficient where one could not be misled thereby as to the exact spot of the accident. Hein v. Fairchild, 87 Wis. 258, 58 N. W. 413.

An incorrect description of the street numbers of the houses in front of which the injuries were sustained renders the notice fatally defective under N. Y. Laws (1886), c. 572, although the complaint contains a correct description of the street numbers of the scene of the accident; nor is the defect assisted by an answer which after admitting the filing of a paper purporting to be a notice denies upon the part of the city any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to any of the allegations of the complaint "not hereinbefore specifically admitted or denied." Learned v. New York, 21 Misc. (N. Y.) 601, 48 N. Y. Suppl. 142.

Texas.—Dallas v. Moore, 32 Tex. Civ. App. 230, 74 S. W. 95, sufficient.

Vermont.—Pratt v. Sherburne, 53 Vt. 370. See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1702.

A notice need not specify the various elements of the damages (Salina v. Kerr, 7 Kan. App. 223, 52 Pac. 901; Morgan v. Lewiston, 91 Me. 566, 40 Atl. 545; Wilkins v. Flint, 128 Mich. 262, 87 N. W. 195), where it states that specific injuries developed at the time (Wilkins v. Flint, supra).

75. The description of the cause of the injury must be sufficiently definite and circumstantial to direct attention to the substantial defect for which recovery is demanded. Olcott v. St. Paul, 91 Minn. 207, 97 N. W. 879.

Description held sufficient of the defect or negligence causing the injury see the following cases:

(VI) VERIFICATION. A notice or statement of a claim for injuries need not be verified unless expressly required by statute.⁷⁷ If a particular method of verification is prescribed, it must be pursued;⁷⁸ if not the usual method in the state is sufficient.⁷⁹ Immaterial defects, however, will not be fatal to the verification,⁸⁰ and it may be entirely waived.⁸¹ Where the claimant has presented his

A general description of the insufficiency or want of repair of a sidewalk is sufficient. Van Frachen v. Ft. Howard, 88 Wis. 570, 60 N. W. 1062.

An enumeration of the causes which produced the injury is not necessary. McCartney v. Washington, 124 Iowa 382, 100 N. W. 80.

An immaterial misstatement of the cause of the injury does not render the notice defective. Denver v. Barron, 6 Colo. App. 72, 39 Pac. 989; McCabe v. Cambridge, 134 Mass. 484; Pecor v. Oconto, 125 Wis. 335, 104 N. W. 88; Duncan v. Grand Rapids, 121 Wis. 626, 99 N. W. 317.

That the cause of the injury was an accumulation of ice and snow which nature had removed long prior to the time when plaintiff's claim was filed does not excuse a failure to describe with particularity the cause of the injury. Mears v. Spokane, 22 Wash. 323, 60 Pac. 1127.

That the injury was caused by stepping into a hole in the sidewalk is not a sufficient description of the cause of an injury to support an action for an injury caused by a loose board in the walk turning and causing plaintiff's foot to slip into such hole. Gagan v. Janesville, 106 Wis. 652, 82 N. W. 558.

76. Olcott v. St. Paul, 91 Minn. 207, 97 N. W. 879, holding that where the notice given sets forth, as the sole distinct ground of claim, conditions caused by ice and snow upon a sidewalk, an action cannot be maintained for a dangerous hole into which the injured party fell, caused by age and decay to which the slippery condition was merely incidental.

A charter or statutory provision requiring all claims against the city to be verified has no application to demands ex delicto. Angell v. West Bay City, 117 Mich. 685, 76 N. W. 128; Evans *v. Verification by a husband as agent of the claimant is sufficient under Kan. Gen. St. (1897) c. 37, § 67. Ottawa v. Black, 10 Kan. App. 439, 61 Pac. 985.

That the notary, before whom the claim was verified, also acted as attorney for plaintiff in the suit for injuries does not vitiate the claim. Allen v. West Bay City, 140 Mich. 111, 103 N. W. 514.

Verification by wife alone held sufficient see McLeod v. Spokane, 26 Wash. 346, 67 Pac. 74.

Dating the jurat the day before the accident occurred does not affect the validity of the claim where it is shown that the claim was actually verified and filed on that day of the following month. Bell v. Spokane, 30 Wash. 508, 71 Pac. 31.

Failure of plaintiff to subscribe the affidavit of verification does not render the verification defective where the notary's certificate recites that plaintiff was sworn, and the notary testifies to that fact on the trial. Place v. Youkers, 43 N. Y. App. Div. 380, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 171.

Although the notary may omit the date from his certificate to the affidavit and notice required to be given to the city by one who desires to maintain an action for injuries caused by a defective sidewalk, yet the notice will not be defective if by other evidence it is shown that the notice was served within the proper time. Reno v. St. Joseph, 169 Mo. 642, 70 S. W. 123.

81. Hunter v. Durand, 137 Mich. 53, 100 N. W. 191 (holding that the failure of one having a claim against a city for injuries to verify a notice to the city was waived, where, when the notice was received, none of the city officials objected to the lack of verification claim for damages, executed in the manner and form, and verified as required by the charter or statute, he is not further required to make proof of his claim before the board or committee acting upon it.⁸²

(vii) SERVICE OR PRESENTATION. Service of notice or presentation of the claim must be made in the manner prescribed by the statute;⁸³ or, if not prescribed, then as provided by general law for the service of notice,⁸⁴ and within the time prescribed.⁸⁵ The notice or statement must be served upon or presented to the board or officers, designated in the statute to be notified,⁸⁶ such as the corporation counsel,⁸⁷ or city council.⁸⁸ Service upon or presentation to the city council or other municipal board or body may be made by service upon or presentation

Presentation to the controller of a verified claim for injuries is sufficiently made, in the absence of objection, by showing the original claim signed and verified to him, and leaving a copy with him. Magee v. Troy, 48 Hun (N. Y.) 383, 1 N. Y. Suppl. 24 [affirmed in 119 N. Y. 640, 23 N. E. 1148]; McDonald v. Troy, 13 N. Y. Suppl. 385.

Service of notice by mail has been held sufficient. Small v. Prentice, 102 Wis. 256, 78 N. W. 415, under Rev. St. (1878) § 1339. Contra, Burford v. New York, 26 N. Y. App. Div. 225, 49 N. Y. Suppl. 969, on corporation counsel under Laws (1886), c. 572.

The time of service allowed is the prescribed time after the date of the injury.—McEvoy v. Sault Ste. Marie, 136 Mich. 172, 98 N. W. 1006; Biggs v. Geneva, 100 N. Y. App. Div. 25, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 858 [affirmed in 184 N. Y. 580, 77 N. E. 1182], holding that where the accident occurred on Feb. 10, 1902, the month allowed for filing notice expired March 10, 1902.

86. Denver v. Saulcey, 5 Colo. App. 420, 80 Pac. 1098; Clark v. Austin, 38 Minn. 487, 38 N. W. 615; Burnette v. St. Joseph, 112 Mo. App. 668, 87 S. Notice to both the controller and corporation counsel must be given under N. Y. Laws (1886), c. 572, and N. Y. City Consolidation Act, § 1104. Frankel v. New York, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 294. See Babcock v. New York, 56 Hun (N. Y.) 196, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 368.

Illustrations.—Service on the “mayor, the city clerk, or the treasurer” is properly made by handing the notice to an alderman, who causes it to be acted upon by the board of aldermen after which it is delivered to the city clerk in the regular course of business by the board. Wormwood v. Waltham, 144 Mass. 184, 10 N. E. 800. But service on an alderman is not sufficient where the statute requires the notice to be given to the mayor or city council. Denver v. Saulcey, 5 Colo. App. 420, 38 Pac. 1098. So service on the city council does not comply with a requirement of notice to the mayor or city clerk. Dorsey v. Racine, 60 Wis. 292, 18 N. W. 928. And service upon the street commissioner or sidewalk superintendent of the city or an alderman of the ward in which the injury occurred is not complied with by service on the mayor and city clerk. Harris v. Fond du Lac, 104 Wis. 44, 80 N. W. 66.

87. Bedell v. New York, 99 N. Y. App. Div. 128, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 936; Walsh v. Buffalo, 92 Hun (N. Y.) 438, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 997.

Service of a notice upon the corporation counsel or other proper law officer of cities of a certain class as required by N. Y. Laws (1886), c. 572, § 1, is not excused by compliance with the charter provisions of a city of such a class (Buffalo City Charter, Laws (1870), tit. 3, c. 519, § 7, as amended by Laws (1886), c. 479, § 8) by presentation of the claim for damages to the common council. Curry v. Buffalo, 135 N. Y. 366, 32 N. E. 80 [affirming 57 Hun 35, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 392].

Notice of intention to sue to corporation counsel may be served by delivering it in his office to one who is acting for an assistant in making the examination of plaintiff regarding the same claim. McMahon v. New York, 1 N. Y. App. Div. 321, 37 N. Y. Suppl. 289. So such notice is substantially served, where the paper is addressed to and served on the city controller, who sends it to the corporation counsel, who files it in his office and acts on it by examining plaintiff on the notice given him by defendant to appear. Missano v. New York, 160 N. Y. 123, 54 N. E. 744 [reversing 17 N. Y. App. Div. 536, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 592].

88. Kleopfert v. Minneapolis, 90 Minn. 158, 95 N. W. 908, holding that under Laws (1897), c. 248, in case of an injury through the negligence of a park board service of notice on such board is not necessary, but service thereof on the city council is sufficient.

to the chairman,⁸⁹ the president,⁹⁰ or the recorder or clerk of such board or body,⁹¹ although the notice is addressed to the mayor and city council;⁹² but notice to the council or other governing body is not properly served on the mayor.⁹³ Service upon a municipal officer is properly made upon a deputy or assistant exercising functions appertaining to the business.⁹⁴ Service may be accepted by the proper officer on behalf of the corporation.⁹⁵

(vii) TIME FOR INVESTIGATION. Provision is also made in some of the charters and statutes that suit on the claim cannot be brought until the municipal authorities have acted upon the claim or until the lapse of a specified time after the notice or presentation of the claim;⁹⁶ but such a prohibition must be explicit and clear and will not be inferred.⁹⁷ Where the time to elapse after notice before suit is not prescribed by law, then a reasonable time must be given to permit investigation of the claim.⁹⁸

App. Div. 377, 94 N. Y. Suppl. 958 (holding notice to a board of trustees of a village properly served upon the clerk of such board, although not made at the meeting of the board, and although he failed to present the claim to the board); O'Donnell v. Syracuse, 102 N. Y. App. Div. 80, 92 N. Y. Suppl. 555 [reversed on other grounds in 184 N. Y. 1, 76 N. E. 738, 112 Am. St. Rep. 558, 3 L. R. A. N. S. 1053]; McIntee v. Middletown, 80 N. Y. App. Div. 434, 81 N. Y. Suppl. 124; Durham v. Spokane, 27 Wash. 615, 68 Pac. 383 (presentation of claim to city sufficiently made by filing with city clerk); Bacon v. Antigo, 103 Wis. 10, 79 N. W. 31; Compare Ft. Worth v. Shero, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 487, 41 S. W. 704, holding that service on the city secretary of a notice of injuries caused by a defective street is insufficient under a provision in the charter requiring it to be served on the city council.

Service on the city clerk or recorder must be served upon that officer at his office or place of transacting the official business pertaining to his office. Peterson v. Cokato, 84 Minn. 205, 87 N. W. 615.

Where the board or committee is not in session at the time of service, it is sufficient to direct the notice to the council or other governing body, and then deliver it to the officer having the care and custody of the records and files of such body, within the time fixed by statute. Kelly v. Minneapolis, 77 Minn. 76, 79 N. W. 653; Roberts v. St. James, 76 Minn. 456, 79 N. W. 519; Lyons v. Red Wing, 76 Minn. 20, 78 N. W. 868, holding that where the notice is left with the clerk and is by him presented and read to the council, the notice is properly served on the council.

Whether the clerk or recorder presented the notice to the council for their action or not is immaterial in so far as the right of recovery against the municipality is concerned, where the notice is properly served on such officer. *Peterson v. Suppl. 583 (holding under the Albany city charter that where the common council refers a claim to the law department no action will lie until the law department has reported to the council, which it may do at any time within three months); Duryea v. New York, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 120 (holding that under Laws (1860), c. 379, an action for damages occasioned by the discharge of water and sewage on plaintiff's land cannot be maintained against the city until after the lapse of twenty days from the time the claim has been presented to the controller for adjustment).

97. Jones v. Albany, 151 N. Y. 223, 45 N. E. 557, holding that Albany City Charter, Laws (1883), p. 298, tit. 3, §§ 45, 51, created no such prohibition as to a claim for personal injury.

(ix) FAILURE TO GIVE NOTICE AND EXCUSE THEREFOR. A failure to give the notice or present the claim in the time and manner prescribed by statute is a bar to the action, and such failure is not excused by the mere fact that the city council or other officers of the municipality had knowledge of the circumstances of the injury,⁹⁹ nor by the fact that the person injured had no suspicion or knowledge of the injuries until after the time for giving the notice had expired.¹ Mental and physical incapacity, however, caused by the accident, of such a character as to make it impossible to give the prescribed notice, is ordinarily a sufficient excuse for failing to give the notice within the time prescribed.² But disability during a portion of the period allowed will not extend the time of performance provided a reasonable time remains within the period after the disability is removed.³ In some jurisdictions the court may in its discretion grant leave to file a notice or presentment after the statutory period has expired, if the claimant has been unavoidably prevented from filing it within the prescribed time, and it is manifest that injustice would otherwise be done.⁴ When the injured party dies before

Spokane*, 22 Wash. 323, 60 Pac. 1127 (holding that the filing of a complaint against the city before the expiration of the time for presentment of the claim does not excuse the required presentment); Sowle v. Tomah, 81 Wis. 349, 51 N. W. 571 (holding that the fact that some of the city officers were at the place of the injury immediately after the accident and knew precisely where it occurred does not dispense with the required notice).

Actual knowledge by officers of the city relative to the time, place, cause, and character of the injury is without effect to dispense with the giving of the notice or with the statement therein of any essential fact. Lyons v. St. Joseph, 112 Mo. App. 681, 87 S. W. 588.

Oral information to the city officers from plaintiff of the place and cause of the injury does not excuse the giving of the required written notice. Dalton v. Salem, 139 Mass. 91, 23 N. E. 576; Shea v. Lowell, 132 Mass. 187.

lapse of the period for notice, the law of notice does not apply to his personal representative in an action for such death resulting from the injuries.⁵

(x) NEW NOTICE. A new notice may be given within the statutory period specifying additional injuries; ⁶ and it does not waive or impair the former one,⁷ nor is it ineffectual because of the insufficiency of the previous notice,⁸ nor is plaintiff confined to the first notice in proving his injury.⁹

(xi) APPEAL FROM DISALLOWANCE OF CLAIM. Under some statutes an appeal to the proper court may be taken from the disallowance of a claim for injuries properly presented to the city council or other municipal board or officer,¹⁰ provided it is taken within the time prescribed therefor,¹¹ and the proper bond is given.¹² Such provisions, however, for an appeal do not apply where the municipal board or committee refuses to act upon the claim until the claimant fulfils certain conditions which it has no right to impose; but in such case the claimant may maintain an original action to enforce his claim.¹³ Nor can an appeal from such disallowance be taken where it is not authorized by charter or statute.¹⁴

3. NOTICE BY MUNICIPALITY OF LIABILITY OF THIRD PERSON. Some charters or statutes provide that where a third person is also liable for the negligent or wrongful acts, and the city alone is sued for damages, it may notify plaintiff or his attorney in writing within a prescribed time of such third person's liability, whereupon he shall be joined as defendant; and the suit cannot be prosecuted further until he is so joined, unless the prescribed notice is not given.¹⁵

4. TIME TO SUE AND LIMITATIONS. The legislature may, either by general statute or by charter provision, fix the period of limitation, usually one year, within which actions may be instituted against a municipality for negligence in relation to streets or other tort; ¹⁶ and such special statutes of limitation prevail over the

Rep. 718, holding that St. § 2752, prescribing a limitation of six months as to actions against cities of the first class for injuries to personal property, is special legislation and therefore unconstitutional.

A provision that no action on contract, obligation, or liability, express or implied, general statutes.¹⁷ But in the absence of such special provisions, or in cases to which the special provisions do not apply, the general statute of limitations relating to torts applies.¹⁸ In some states the special provisions apply unless due notice is given within a fixed period,¹⁹ and if such notice is duly given the action is controlled by the general statutes.²⁰

5. PARTIES. The question who are proper or necessary parties, plaintiff or defendant, to an action in tort against a municipality, is, in the absence of express statutory provisions relating thereto, regulated by the rules governing parties generally.²¹ Where the common duty of keeping a sidewalk or street in repair shall be commenced against a city except in one year after the cause of action shall have accrued, does not include actions for tort, and therefore does not apply to an action against a city for damages resulting from negligence in not keeping the sidewalks in proper repair. McGaffin v. Cohoes, 74 N. Y. 387, 30 Am. Rep. 307 [affirming 11 Hun 531].

In New York the words "personal injuries," as used in Laws (1886), p. 801, c. 572, limiting the time for bringing certain actions against a city of fifty thousand inhabitants or over, include injuries resulting in death and apply to actions brought by an executor or administrator. Crapo v. Syracuse, 98 N. Y. App. Div. 376, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 553. And the words "after such cause of action shall have accrued" contained in such statute refer to the time of the intestate's death in such a case and not to the time when the letters of administration were issued. Crapo v. Syracuse, supra.

A statute of limitation of actions for injuries caused by street negligence controls an action for injuries received from an unsafe bill board falling on the sidewalk (Bliven v. Sioux City, 85 Iowa 346, 52 N. W. 246); but not a case brought to redress injuries from the overflow of a watercourse obstructed by raising a street (Pye v. Mankato, 38 Minn. 536, 38 N. W. 621).

17. Crapo v. Syracuse, 98 N. Y. App. Div. 376, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 553. But see Foxworthy v. Hastings, 23 Nebr. 772, 37 N. W. 657, holding that general provisions of the code limiting the time within which actions may be brought applies to cities of the second class, and that an action against such a city for negligence will be valid if brought within the time thus limited, notwithstanding a provision in the act creating such cities that the action shall be brought within six months.

A special statute will not be held to have been repealed by a city by a subsequent statute, general in its terms, unless the intention to repeal or alter is manifest, although the general act would, but for the special law, include the case provided for by the latter; and hence N. Y. Laws (1886), c. 572, providing that actions for personal injuries resulting from negligence against cities of a certain class shall be commenced within one year after the cause of action has accrued, does not repeal or amend the Syracuse Charter, § 250, as amended by Laws (1885), c. 26, which provided a different period of limitation for such cities. Lewis v. Syracuse, 13 N. Y. App. Div. 587, 43 N. Y. Suppl. 455.

A general statute extending the limitation of actions in the case of infants to the prescribed period after disability ceases does not apply to a special statutory limitation if there is no saving clause in the latter statute. Norton v. New York, 16 Misc. (N. Y.) 303, 38 N. Y. Suppl. 90.

20. Robinson v. Cedar Rapids, 100 Iowa 662, 69 N. W. 1064, holding that, under Acts of 22 Gen. Assembly, providing that no suit shall be brought for personal injuries against the city after six months from the time of injury unless notice shall be served on the city within ninety days from the injury, an action therefor may be brought at any time within the general statutory limitation of two years when such notice is served.

Plaintiff.—An owner of property which has been injured by municipal negligence need not join as a party plaintiff to an action against the municipality therefor one who was using the property at the time. Welsh v. Argyle, 85 Wis. 307, 55 N. W. 412, holding that in an action for injuries to a team from a defective highway while being driven by one who had hired it, such hirer is not a proper or necessary party.

A municipal servant who was guilty of no breach of duty, although engaged at the time in operating the municipal property which caused the injury, is not a necessary party to an action against a municipality for its negligence in constructing or maintaining such property. Stephani v. Manitowoc, 89 Wis. 467, 62 N. W. 176, holding in an action against a municipality for injuries resulting from the leaving open of a drawbridge without barriers or lights, that the bridge tender need not be joined as defendant when it was not his duty to furnish such barriers or lights.

A lessor of premises on which the lessee has created a nuisance is not a necessary party to an action for damages caused thereby against the city and such lessee. Grogan v. Broadway Foundry Co., 87 Mo. 321 [affirming 14 Mo. App. 588].

of enforcing a remedy over.²⁹ Two adjoining municipalities may be jointly sued for a defective bridge between them;³⁰ but a city is not a proper co-defendant with a town, because a portion of the latter, wherein the injury occurred, was incorporated into the former just after the injury.³¹ Objections for non-joinder of tort-feasors will not prevail unless seasonably made.³²

6. PLEADING — a. Declaration, Petition, or Complaint³³ — (1) IN GENERAL. Plaintiff's declaration, petition, or complaint in an action for tort against a municipality is governed by the rules regulating pleadings in such actions generally.³⁴ Subject to such rules, plaintiff should set forth in his complaint, declaration or petition, with such reasonable certainty as is necessary to inform defendant of the wrong complained of,³⁵ all facts essential to his cause of action.³⁶ He should Complaint held insufficient in an action for injuries caused by a defective sidewalk (Waggener v. Point Pleasant, 42 W. Va. 798, 26 S. E. 352), or by a horse becoming frightened at an obstruction in the street (Rome v. Suddeth, 116 Ga. 649, 42 S. E. 1032).

A formal complaint is not necessary in the circuit court under Wis. Laws (1876), c. 47, subs. 5, §§ 25-27, where the person injured filed with the city clerk a notice of the injury and a claim against the city for damages containing all the essential requisites of the complaint, and on defendant's failure to take action thereon appealed to the circuit court. *Koch v. A complaint against a city for a penalty prescribed for the neglect to repair a highway should state in the claim or prayer that the relief demanded is that given by the statute. Lavigne v. New Haven, 75 Conn. 693, 55 Atl. 569.

Ownership of lands adjoining a sidewalk on which the accident occurred need not be alleged. Huntington v. Breen, 77 Ind. 29.

In joint actions the essentials of the case against each defendant must be alleged to warrant recovery against both. Elliott v. Field, 21 Colo. 378, 41 Pac. 504; Oliver v. Denver, 13 Colo. App. 345, 57 Pac. 729;

allege with reasonable certainty facts and circumstances showing that defendant was a municipal corporation,³⁷ that it had power to do the act complained of,³⁸ unless such power is given by a general statute;³⁹ that the act was done by an officer or agent of the city while in the legitimate exercise of a corporate duty which devolved upon him by law or by the direction or authority of the city,⁴⁰ although he need not show the particular officer guilty of the tort;⁴¹ that it was not in the performance of a governmental function;⁴² and that such act was wrongful.⁴³ Thus, in an action for injuries caused by municipal negligence, plaintiff should allege facts showing the municipal duty in the premises,⁴⁴ its breach of that

When a complaint relates to an act which can only be lawfully done under an ordinance of the corporation, an averment in the petition that the act was done by the corporation implies that it was done in pursuance of an ordinance. Stewart v. Clinton, 79 Mo. 603. The declaration must impute liability to the municipality through its actors, its officers, agents, or servants. It must allege some act or default by those for whom the corporation must respond, under the well-established principle of respondet superior. on said street, suffered injury from said defect as a proximate or efficient cause, detailing circumstantially the manner thereof.⁴⁹

(II) LOCATION AND NATURE OF DEFECT—(A) Location. The declaration, petition, or complaint should also allege facts showing that the defect which caused the injury complained of was within the limits of the municipality.⁵⁰ In the case of an injury from negligence in caring for streets and sidewalks, it should show by distinct allegation or reasonable intentment that the defect was on a public street or highway within the corporate limits,⁵¹ and that such street was a public way,⁵² or was treated and controlled by the municipality as a public street or thoroughfare at the time when and the place where the accident occurred,⁵³ and should designate with reasonable certainty the location of the defect which caused the injury.⁵⁴ If the complaint describes the place of the defect with reasonable certainty, its failure to point out the place with particularity is not ground for demurrer,⁵⁵

Where the complaint alleges facts showing that a sidewalk was unsafe or dangerous, it is not necessary to use the technical words that the sidewalk was unsafe or dangerous. Columbus v. Neise, (Kan. 1901) 65 Pac. 643; Clayton v. Henderson, 103 Ky. 228, 44 S. W. 667, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 87, 44 L. R. A. 474. Compare Plummer v. Milan, 70 Mo. An allegation that it was out of repair and in a defective, insufficient, and dangerous condition is sufficient. Byington v. Merrill, 112 Wis. 211, 88 N. W. 26 [distinguishing Rhyner v. Menasha, 107 Wis. 201, 83 N. W. 303].

The petition need not allege that defendant had time to repair the street after it discovered, or might, by the exercise of ordinary care, have discovered, the defect, the burden being on defendant to plead and prove that it did not have time to repair the street before the injury was received. *Covington v. although its failure in this respect may be good ground for a motion to amend or to make more definite.⁵⁶

(B) Nature. A declaration which describes the nature of the defect so as to make it intelligible to a person of ordinary understanding, and shows culpability, is good against demurrer,⁵⁷ although it may be insufficient as against a motion to have the complaint made more definite and certain,⁵⁸ or for a bill of particulars.⁵⁹ But if the declaration omit any essential element in setting forth an actionable defect, it will be held bad on demurrer.⁶⁰

(11) NOTICE OF DEFECT OR OBSTRUCTION. Notice to the municipality of the defect or obstruction need not be alleged where the complaint alleges facts showing that the corporation itself caused or licensed the defect or obstruction,⁶¹ nor where the allegations show a prima facie liability.⁶² But ordinarily the complaint should allege facts showing that the defect or obstruction was occasioned by some positive misfeasance of the corporation, its officers or employees under its authority, in which case notice will be implied;⁶³ or where it alleges facts showing that the municipality did not cause the defect or obstruction, it should allege either that it had actual notice thereof a sufficient length of time before the injury to remedy the defect or obstruction,⁶⁴ or should allege facts from which such notice can be reasonably inferred,⁶⁵ as that the defect or obstruction had existed for such a length of time that notice may be fairly presumed.⁶⁶ Thus where the liability

Time of defect.—A complaint alleging that "at the time of the commission of the grievances hereinafter alleged," etc., and then setting out a defective condition of the sidewalk as a cause of the injuries sufficiently shows the sidewalk was defective on the day plaintiff was injured, where the only date thereinafter alleged was the date of the injury. Hammond v. Winslow, 33 Ind. App. 92, 70 N. E. 819.

Precautions.—A failure to allege that defendant negligently permitted the obstruction to remain without using suitable precautions to prevent injuries to persons using the street, by having placed at that point the necessary and proper lights and signals, does not state a cause of action, in an action for injuries caused by obstructions on a street. depends upon the municipality's neglect to repair a defect or remove an obstruction, the complaint should either allege that it had actual notice thereof or should allege facts showing that the circumstances were such that it should have had notice.⁶⁷ It has been held that the mere allegation of a negligent omission to repair or remove the obstruction is a sufficient allegation of notice,⁶⁸ especially after verdict,⁶⁹ or in the absence of a motion to make more specific,⁷⁰ or a demurrer.⁷¹

delay before suit.⁷⁵ An objection for failure to make such allegations in correct terms comes too late after trial where no one was misled by the defective pleading.⁷⁶

(v) CARE ON PART OF PLAINTIFF. In some jurisdictions, except where defendant is charged with having committed a positive wrong which renders it liable independently of the question of negligence,⁷⁷ plaintiff must allege that he had no knowledge of the defect or obstruction which caused his injury,⁷⁸ and that he was otherwise free from contributory negligence, although this may be alleged in general terms or circumstantially;⁷⁹ but it is not necessary for him to allege the same of a companion,⁸⁰ or of a driver not under his control.⁸¹ By weight of authority, however, contributory negligence is a matter of defense, and freedom therefrom need not be alleged by plaintiff,⁸² unless other matters alleged by him show negligence on his part.⁸³ In any case if his negligence appears from the circumstances alleged, his complaint or declaration is demurrable;⁸⁴ and if such

In Wisconsin a complaint which does not allege that plaintiff complied with the requirements of a city charter by filing his claim and taking an appeal from its disallowance fails to state a cause of action. *Morrison v. A complaint for negligence, resulting in the death of plaintiff's child, which does not show that the child was negligent, is not subject to demurrer, in failing to allege the child's freedom from contributory negligence, and only stating that it was free from fault, since the allegation of freedom from contributory negligence is not necessary if the child is non sui juris, and the question whether a seven-year-old child is sui juris is for the jury. *Elwood v. circumstances fully and fairly show that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, the complaint will be bad notwithstanding a general averment of freedom from fault;⁸⁵ but a general averment of freedom from fault will not be overcome, on demurrer, by the allegation of circumstances which do not necessarily infer contributory negligence.⁸⁶

b. Demurrer, Motion, Etc. A demurrer is ordinarily the proper form of objection to the declaration or complaint on the ground that it fails to state a substantial cause of action,⁸⁷ as for insufficiency in describing the location,⁸⁸ the nature of the defect,⁸⁹ or the place of the accident;⁹⁰ for insufficiency in alleging notice of the defect or obstruction,⁹¹ or a variance between the complaint and the notice or presentation of the claim;⁹² or of objecting to the notice or presentation.⁹³ It is also the proper remedy for objecting to the complaint for failing to allege a compliance with the statutory requirement as to notice or presentation of a claim,⁹⁴ although it has been held that such objection should be set up as a matter of defense by answer,⁹⁵ or plea in abatement,⁹⁶ and that such objection may be taken at any stage of the action as by a motion to dismiss,⁹⁷ or by a general objection at the trial to the admission of any evidence under the complaint.⁹⁸ But a motion to make more specific or for a bill of particulars, and not demurrer, is the proper form of objecting where the complaint states a substantial cause of action but does not use sufficient particularity in describing the location,⁹⁹ or nature of the defect,¹ or in alleging notice of the defect or obstruction.² Mere formal defects in the complaint are generally waived if objection thereto is not made before the case goes to trial.³

notice or knowledge of the excavation and was unable to see it on account of the darkness of the night, and that no warning signals were displayed, are not bad as showing contributory negligence on his part); *Bedford v. A complaint for injuries caused by a defective sidewalk showing that plaintiff, in approaching an open hatchway, into which she fell and was injured, traveled at such an angle with it that the opening was not in her line of vision till she was close upon it, and alleging that she was free from negligence, does not conclusively show that she was guilty of contributory negligence. *Whitty v. c. Answer. An answer setting up contributory negligence should specify with reasonable certainty the acts constituting such negligence,⁴ although any objections in this respect are waived by plaintiff filing his replication and going to trial on the answer.⁵ Under a statute postponing municipal liability to that of the real wrong-doer it suffices for the answer to allege facts showing the primary liability of another.⁶ An answer verified by the mayor and denying any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief touching the matters alleged in the complaint is sufficient to raise an issue as to such matters and whether plaintiff was injured thereby while exercising ordinary care.⁷ An answer admitting that the claim described in the complaint was duly filed admits every allegation as to the description of the claim, such as that it was in certain words and figures, duly verified, and presented by plaintiff on the date named.⁸

d. Amendment. An amendment of the declaration or complaint which does not state a new cause of action, nor surprise or prejudice defendant, may be permitted in furtherance of plaintiff's action⁹ at any time before the case has been submitted to the jury;¹⁰ but not so as to change the original action to a distinctly different ground.¹¹

e. Issues, Proof, and Variance—(1) IN GENERAL. In an action for injuries received through a tort of a municipality, as in other similar actions, plaintiff can rely for recovery only upon the particular cause of action which is set forth in his pleading and established by his proof;¹² and in like manner defendant can rely upon such matters of defense only as are put in issue by its answer, or other pleading;¹³ and the jury may properly consider only the issues made by the pleadings and proof.¹⁴ All material facts must be proven as alleged,¹⁵ even to unnecessary

The constitutional provision that "private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation" has no application to a suit against the city for damages to the goods of a storekeeper which were injured by the overflow of a sewer. In such case if the storekeeper recovers, it must be on the ground of negligence, and not as for the taking or damaging of private property for a public use. Gulath v. St. Louis, 179 Mo. 38, 77 S. W. 744.

13. Denver v. Hickey, 9 Colo. App. 137, 47 Pac. 908, holding that where the answer admits defendant's duty as alleged in the complaint in regard to constructing and repairing sidewalks, but denies the unsafe condition, it cannot insist that the federal government owned the lots, had jurisdiction over the same, and constructed the walk.

Joint action.—Where in an action against a city and a contractor for injuries caused by obstructions on a sidewalk, plaintiff predicates her right of recovery solely on the contractor's negligence in causing the obstruc-particularity; ¹⁶ but immaterial allegations need not be proven; ¹⁷ and what is not alleged may not lawfully be proven, ¹⁸ unless there is an amendment, ¹⁹ except that incident and appurtenant circumstances which have a tendency to prove or explain the facts alleged may be admitted without specific allegation. ²⁰

(n) GENERAL ISSUES. The general issue or its statutory equivalent is usually sufficient for defendant. ²¹ But matters of justification, avoidance, or excuse must be specially pleaded. ²² A general denial or plea of the general issues puts plaintiff to proof of all his material allegations, deniable by plea in bar, ²³ including the filing of his claim in the time and manner prescribed; ²⁴ but a general denial does not deny the corporate character of defendant. ²⁵ A general denial also puts in issue the negligence that caused the injury, and permits defendant to show that it arose from some other cause, ²⁶ or any other fact negating its negligence. ²⁷ In some jurisdictions plaintiff's contributory negligence is put in issue under a general denial so as to admit evidence thereof in defense; ²⁸ but in other jurisdictions

tion, and the city's permission of the obstruction, she is not entitled to judgment against the city where she failed to obtain and did not show herself entitled to judgment against the contractor. Hesselbach v. St. Louis, 179 Mo. 505, 78 S. W. 1009.

Where the gravamen of plaintiff's action is the negligence of defendant in making a fill above a sewer, and there is no complaint of defect in the sewer itself, it is not error to reject evidence offered in rebuttal that the sewer was imperfectly constructed, as the evidence of its construction was immaterial to the issue. *Smith v. contributory negligence is an affirmative defense which must be specially pleaded, and evidence thereof is not admissible under the general issue.²⁹

(III) VARIANCE—(A) In General. The proof must correspond with the pleadings and issues.³⁰ But substantial correspondence of proof to allegation is sufficient and slight variances are immaterial.³¹ Where, however, the proof differs substantially from the material facts as alleged, even though plaintiff's case has some merits, the variance is fatal to a recovery.³²

Quincy*, 83 Mich. 173, 47 N. W. 114, 10 L. R. A. 734 (where the allegation of the injury sustained was held sufficiently specific to warrant admission of evidence that plaintiff's arm was broken by a fall upon a defective sidewalk).

General allegations of a defective sidewalk will admit proof of details of defect. Joliet v. Johnson, 177 Ill. 178, 52 N. E. 498; Clayton v. Brooks, 150 Ill. 97, 37 N. E. 574 [affirming 31 Ill. Cuinely*, 126 Ill. 408, 18 N. E. 753 [affirming 26 Ill. App. 173] (holding that under an allegation that planks in a sidewalk were broken and not fastened to the stringers, evidence that they were loose and not fastened to the stringers is sufficient); Aurora v. Reed, 57 Ill. 29, 11 Am. Rep. 1; Springfield v. Purdy, 61 Ill. App. 114; Springfield v. Rosenmeyer, 52 Ill. App. 301; Bloomington v. Murrin, 36 Ill. App. 647; Rockford v. Hollenbeck, 34 Ill. Indiana.—Nappanee v. Ruckman, 7 Ind. App. 361, 34 N. E. 609.

Missouri.—Sneed v. Salisbury, 94 Mo. App. 426, 68 S. W. 369.

Nebraska.—South Omaha v. Taylor, 4 Nebr. (Unoff.) 757, 96 N. W. 209.

New York.—Dobson v. Oneida, 106 N. Y. App. Div. 377, 94 N. Y. Suppl. 958; Magee v. Brooklyn, 18 N. Y. App. Div. 22, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 473.

Tennessee.—Niblett v. Nashville, 12 Heisk. 684, 27 Am. Rep. 755.

Washington.—McClammy v. Spokane, 36 Wash. 339, 78 Pac. 912.

Wisconsin.—Duncan v. Grand Rapids, 121 Wis. 626, 99 N. W. 317.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1722.

Illustrations.—Thus a variance is immaterial between an allegation that at the place where the injury occurred the boards on the sidewalk were taken up for a space of from twenty to thirty feet, and evidence that the defect in the walk was but from two to four feet wide (South Omaha v. Taylor, 4 Nebr. (Unoff.) 757, 96 N. W. 209); between an allegation that an excavation was "in and on" an alley and proof that it was adjacent to the alley (Niblett v. Nashville, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 684, 27 Am. Rep. 755); and between an allegation of a permit to repair a sidewalk and trap door, and evidence of a permit to construct a brick walk at the same place (McClammy v. Spokane, 36 Wash. 339, 78 Pac. 912).

32. Nappanee v. Ruckman, 7 Ind. App. 361, 34 N. E. 609; Rich v. Minneapolis, 40 Minn. 82, 41 N. W. 455; Smith v. Auburn, 88 N. Y. App. Div. 396, 84 N. Y. Suppl. 725; Gagan v. Janesville, 106 Wis. 662, 82 N. W. 558.

Illustrations.—Thus there is a material variance between an allegation that a city wrongfully and negligently put or allowed to be put on a sidewalk a certain box, and proof that it failed to put up a notice or guard around the obstruction, and failed to remove it or have it removed (Birmingham v. Tayloe, 105 Ala. 170, 16 So. 576); between an allegation of negligence in leaving uncovered a dangerous pit on the premises in defendant's possession adjoining a public highway, and evidence that defendant was possessed of the highway but not of the adjoining premises (Ayers v. Chicago, 111 Ill. 406); between an allegation confining plaintiff's cause of action to injuries received from falling into an excavation, and evidence that the improvement had been completed and that plaintiff had fallen down a flight of steps in the sidewalk (Kane v. Joliet, 103

(B) Notice and Pleading or Proof. The notice or presentation of claim often required to be given as a condition precedent to action must be substantially followed by plaintiff in both pleading and proof and a material variance therefrom is fatal.³³ Plaintiff cannot sue for more,³⁴ although he may for less than the sum demanded in the claim;³⁵ and his pleading and proof may be more plenary and particular than his notice.³⁶ Unintentional variance without intention to mislead is excused in Massachusetts when defendant was not actually misled.³⁷

7. EVIDENCE — a. Presumptions. Neither negligence nor defects are presumable from the mere fact of an accident.³⁸ In the absence of evidence to the contrary, a presumption exists in favor of the performance of sworn official duty,³⁹ and also of municipal permission for the existence of a hatchway in a sidewalk of which the city has exclusive control,⁴⁰ and that the stopping of a street car at a crossing was momentary for the receipt or discharge of passengers;⁴¹ but not that the city ordered or planned a defective walk,⁴² or that a sidewalk at a certain place was constructed on a general plan adopted by the municipality;⁴³ but the unex-

Ill. App. 195); between an allegation that the injuries were caused by a portion of the sidewalk being out of repair so that large and deep holes were in the sidewalk, and proof that two planks were removed from the sidewalk (Bloomington v. Goodrich, 88 Ill. 558); between a declaration of damages from a defective highway, and proof of negligent acts of the city's firemen in the highway (Edgerly v. Concord, 59 N. H. 78); and between an allegation of negligence in permitting an excavation to remain in a street without guards or a light, and proof of negligence in failing to erect a guard between the line of the street and an excavation on an adjoining lot (Caven v. Troy, 15 N. Y. App. Div. 163, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 244).

Waiver.—Where defendant fails to take advantage of a remedy provided by statute (Ky. Code Civ. Pr. § 129) for a misleading variance between the pleading and proof, such variance is waived. Covington v. Miles, 82 S. W. 281, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 609. So where no objection of variance is made at the trial, it cannot avail defendant on his motion for a new trial, since an amendment to the declaration can be allowed to conform to the evidence. Cowan v. Bucksport, 98 Me. 305, 56 Atl. 901.

33. Denver v. Barron, 6 Colo. App. 72, 39 Pac. 989; Shallow v. Salem, 136 Mass. 136; McDougall v. Boston, 134 Mass. 149; McCarroll v. Spokane, 34 Wash. 344, 75 Pac. 973; Bell v. Spokane, 30 Wash. 508, 71 N. W. 31; Van Frachen v. Ft. Howard, 88 Wis. 570, 60 N. W. 1062.

If the notice or claim and the complaint correspond in all substantial respects as to the matters, information of which is required to be given, the variance is immaterial. Langley v. Augusta, 118 Ga. 590, 45 S. E. 486; Van Frachen v. Ft. Howard, 88 Wis. 570, 60 N. W. 1062.

A slight discrepancy in the location of the place of the accident between the notice of claim and the complaint or proof is not a material variance. Cowan v. Bucksport, 98 Me. 305, 56 Atl. 901; Piper v. Spokane, 22 Wash. 147, 60 Pac. 138; Kolb v. Fond du Lac, 118 Wis. 311, 95 N. W. 149; Barrett v. Hammond, 87 Wis. 654, 58 N. W. 1053.

Thus a difference of sixty feet between the place of the accident as proved and the place as stated in the claim filed by plaintiff is immaterial. Masters v. Troy, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 485, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 450 [affirmed in 123 N. Y. 628, 25 N. E. 952].

34. Bland v. Mobile, 142 Ala. 142, 37 So. 843.

37. Cronan v. Woburn, 185 Mass. 91, 70 N. E. 38 (variance, if any, held cured by amendment); Hughes v. Lawrence, 160 Mass. 474, 36 N. E. 485; Conners v. Lowell, 158 Mass. 336, 33 N. E. 514; Bowes v. Boston, 155 Mass. 344, 29 N. E. 633, 15 L. R. A. 365.

38. Atlanta v. Stewart, 117 Ga. 144, 43 S. E. 443 (holding that no presumption of negligence arises from mere proof of injury caused by a defect in the streets); Tiborsky v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 124 Wis. 243, 102 N. W. 549; Grossenbach v. Milwaukee, 65 Wis. 31, 26 N. plained existence of a dirt pile on a sidewalk for days is presumptively unlawful.⁴⁴ Work of a public character being done in a public street, or about property of which the city has exclusive control, is presumed to be done under the orders or permission of the proper city authorities.⁴⁵ Municipal acceptance of a bridge on a street is presumed from its being open and repaired by the corporation, and from its exercising supervision and control over it;⁴⁶ and the existence of a bridge fund may be presumed from charter power to levy therefor.⁴⁷ Where there is no direct evidence as to the cause of the injury and nothing to indicate any want of reasonable care on the injured person's part, he is presumed to have exercised reasonable care for his own safety;⁴⁸ and there is no presumption of negligence of plaintiff from the unexplained fright of a gentle horse,⁴⁹ from his falling at night into a hole in a sidewalk seen by him several days before,⁵⁰ or from the mere presence of his child in the street unattended;⁵¹ nor in such case is there a presumption of negligence on the part of the child.⁵²

b. Burden of Proof—(1) IN GENERAL. Plaintiff has the burden of proving, in the first instance, all facts essential to establish at least a prima facie case in his favor.⁵³ Thus the burden is upon plaintiff to show facts proving that defendant municipality was negligent;⁵⁴ that the negligent acts were done by or under the authority of the municipality;⁵⁵ that, in the case of an action for injuries caused by defects or obstructions, it had notice, actual or constructive, of the defect or obstruction at the time of the injury;⁵⁶ the fact of the consequent a presumption of contributory negligence,⁶⁵ and where the circumstances cast imputations upon his conduct.⁶⁶ In other jurisdictions, however, contributory negligence is held to be a matter of defense, and the burden is on defendant to prove it,⁶⁷ unless plaintiff by his own evidence discloses contributory negligence.⁶⁸

c. Admissibility of Evidence⁶⁹—(i) IN GENERAL. The general rules governing the admissibility or competency of evidence in civil actions⁷⁰ regulate the competency and admissibility of evidence in actions for injuries from municipal negligence or other tort,⁷¹ such as that facts too remote for proper probative influence are inadmissible,⁷² that secondary evidence is inadmissible where the best is attainable,⁷³ and that hearsay testimony is inadmis-

Evidence of motives which influenced municipal officers in refusing to repair a street, or that they were influenced by malice toward plaintiff, is irrelevant and inadmissible. Montgomery v. Gilmer, 33 Ala. 116, 70 Am. Dec. 562.

Contract between a city and street contractor is admissible in an action for injuries caused by the failure of such contractor to properly guard obstructions created by him, to show the relation of the city and such contractor. Godfrey v. New York, 104 N. Y. App. Div. 357, 93 N. Y. Suppl. 899 [affirmed in 185 N. Y. 563, 77 N. E. 1187].

An ordinance may be given in evidence, although it is not pleaded, where the cause of action is not based on it. Bailey v. Kansas City, 189 Mo. 503, 87 S. W. 1182. Thus an ordinance declaring that public safety requires openings in sidewalks to be properly guarded is admissible as an act or declaration concerning a matter involved in the suit, and also as being passed in the performance of a common-law duty. Mc Nerney v. Reading City, 150 Pa. St. 611, 25 Atl. 57. So an ordinance regulating the construction and safe-guarding of cellar ways is admissible in an action for injuries from an open and unguarded cellar way as a declaration of the city concerning a matter involved in the action. McLeod v. Spokane, 26 Wash. 346, 67 Pac. 74.

72. Gilmer v. Montgomery, 26 Ala. 665. And see cases more specifically cited in the following notes.

73. Cleveland v. Beaumont, 7 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 627, 4 Cinc. L. Bul. 345, holding that in an action against a city for damages due to the corruption of a watercourse by sewage, it was not error to exclude a question, asked of its civil engineer, as to whether the city had adopted a system of sewage and districted the city for that purpose, as such sible.⁷⁴ Such rules govern the competency, relevancy, and materiality of evidence on the question of whether or not the municipality was engaged in a private enterprise;⁷⁵ or to show that the acts causing the defect or obstruction or other negligence were done under the authority of the municipality,⁷⁶ or whether the acts complained of constituted a nuisance;⁷⁷ or to show the cause of the injury,⁷⁸ or the place of the accident.⁷⁹ The length of time a street has been opened may be proven by parol;⁸⁰ and also the average duration of a sidewalk.⁸¹ Any evidence competent to prove that the place of the accident was a public street or way, or that the city otherwise had control and dominion over it, is admissible.⁸² facts should be proved by its ordinance to that effect.

Where a policeman, charged in part with the duty of reporting to the city defects in sidewalks on his beat, makes his reports in writing, such reports are the best evidence, and a record of them is not admissible, where it is not shown to be one authorized by the law, on the issue of what information had been received. Lorig v. Davenport, 99 Iowa 479, 68 N. W. 717.

74. Kolb v. Knoxville, 111 Tenn. 311, 76 S. W. 823.

75. Collins v. Greenfield, 172 Mass. 78, 51 N. E. 454.

76. Ross v. Madison, Smith (Ind.) 98 (parol evidence held admissible); Carle v. Desoto, 156 Mo. 443, 57 S. W. 113; Betts v. Gloversville, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 795; Corsicana v. Tobin, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 492, 57 S. W. 319 (holding that evidence of the non-enforcement of a city ordinance in permitting a private sewer to be connected with a city sewer and the mayor's knowledge thereof is admissible to show implied consent by the city).

Ratification of the acts may be shown by evidence that the town council approved bills incurred by the officer or agent in doing such acts, and subsequently paid them. Willoughby v. Allen, 25 R. I. 531, 56 Atl. 1109. Thus a bill furnished to municipal trustees for the laying of a flagstone covering a gutter and forming that part of the cross walk on which plaintiff fell, and that the same was audited and ordered paid, is admissible as tending to show that the laying of the cross walk was approved by the board. Betts v. Gloversville, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 795.

Parol testimony is competent to show that a parveyor of highways was duly authorized to do work on the highways in his district which resulted in the turning of surface water upon plaintiff's land, and plaintiff is not limited in his proof to record evidence of such authority by a formal vote of the town council. Willoughby v. Allen, 25 R. I. 531, 56 Atl. 1109.

A certified copy of a resolution of a city council authorizing the use of a sewer adjacent to plaintiff's premises in violation of an ordinance is competent to show that the city knowingly consented to such improper use. Champaign v. Forrester, 29 Ill. App. 117.

Declarations of a municipal officer or agent are inadmissible to show his authority. Betts v. Gloversville, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 795.

Non-expert witnesses in an action for a nuisance from the discharge of a sewer may state that the smell of gases from the sewer's outlet made them sick. Suddeth v. Boone, 121 Iowa 258, 96 N. W. 853.

In an action for a nuisance maintained near plaintiff's premises, his testimony of what the attending physician said caused his wife's illness is properly rejected, because this is a matter of mere hearsay. Kolb v. Knoxville, 111 Tenn. 311, 76 S. W. 823.

78. Monarch Mfg. Co. v. Omaha, etc., R. Co., 127 Iowa 511, 103 N. W. 493; Johnson v. Sioux City, 114 Iowa 137, 86 N. W. 212; Seranton v. Dean, 33 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 281, holding general evidence as to probable cause of the death admissible, where a dead body was found under a bridge whose abutments were not properly guarded by barriers, it being the city's duty to maintain and repair such bridge.

Expert testimony.—In an action for injuries caused by the giving way of the iron covering over a cesspool entrance in the sidewalk, the stone rim or flange in which it rested being broken in places, it is not error to refuse to allow a civil engineer to testify for defendant that it was a mechanical impossibility for such cover to tip before it slid or before it was dislodged from the rim or edge of the hole, since it is not a subject for expert testimony, the jury being as competent as witness to judge of the mechanical possibilities of the situation. Ward v. Troy, 55 N. Y. App. Div. 192, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 925.

79. Seeley v. Bridgeport, 53 Conn. 1, 22 Atl. 1017.

The street line on either side of the locus in quo as marked by buildings or fences is admissible as tending to show the location of an unmarked line at the place. Bauer v. Dubuque, 122 Iowa 500, 98 N. W. 355.

An incorrect scale will not exclude a street-map otherwise correct. Bauer v. Dubuque, 122 Iowa 500, 98 N. W. 355.

Iowa.—Kircher v. Larchwood, 120 Iowa 578, 95 N. W. 184; Sachra v. Manilla, 120 Iowa 562, 95 N. W. 198, competent for witness to give name of streets as shown in the town map.

(II) NEGLIGENCE OF DEFENDANT—(A) In General. Subject to the general rules of evidence, any evidence of the facts and circumstances surrounding the accident is admissible for the purpose of proving or disproving negligence on the part of defendant municipality,⁸³ or the degree thereof.⁸⁴ But evidence is inadmissible which is immaterial, or which is not otherwise pertinent or competent,⁸⁵

Massachusetts.—D'Amico v. Boston, 176 Mass. 599, 58 N. E. 158.

Missouri.—Bailey v. Kansas City, 189 Mo. 503, 87 S. W. 1182.

Pennsylvania.—Brown v. Towanda Borough, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 378.

Admissibility of subsequent repairs as evidence of ownership or control see infra, XIV, E, 7, c, (vi), text and note 67.

Records or resolutions of the municipal authorities recognizing the place as a public street or way are admissible to show that it was under its control. Huntington v. Mendenhall, 73 Ind. 460; Frohs v. Dubuque, 109 Iowa 219, 80 N. W. 341. Thus resolutions by a city council for the grading and paving of the place where the accident occurred are competent as tending to show the city's control over it. Sewell v. Cohoes, 75 N. Y. 45, 31 Am. Rep. 418. But records referring to a contract for the construction of a sewer in a certain street are incompetent to show that another way had been recognized as a street. Carll v. Desoto, 156 Mo. 443, 57 S. W. 113.

Records of the county court showing that the pavement where the injury occurred belonged to and was controlled by the fiscal court of the county are admissible for defendant in an action against a city for injuries from negligence of defendant in constructing and maintaining the pavement between the court-house and the city hall. Graves v. Hopkinsville, 65 S. W. 339, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1411.

That the corporation was informed, at a meeting of its council, through the report of one of its committees, that some slight repairs had been made upon a street, is admissible evidence for plaintiff, as tending to show a recognition of the street by the corporation, as well as notice to it of the character of the repairs. Montgomery v. Gilmer, 33 Ala. 116, 70 Am. Dec. 562.

83. Alabama.—Abbott v. Mobile, 119 Ala. 595, 24 So. 565.

Michigan.—Edwards v. Three Rivers, 96 Mich. 625, 55 N. W. 1003; Campbell v. Kalamazoo, 80 Mich. 655, 45 N. W. 652.

New York.—Turner v. Newburgh, 109 N. Y. 301, 16 N. E. 344, 44 Am. St. Rep. 453 (evidence of members of city council as to the amount of attention they had given their duty of keeping streets in order held admissible); Crawford v. New York, 68 N. Y. App. Div. 107, 74 N. Y. Suppl. 261 [affirmed in 174 N. Y. 518, 66 N. E. 1106].

Oregon.—Chan Sing v. Portland, 37 Oreg. 68, 60 Pac. 718.

Pennsylvania.—Butchers' Ice, etc., Co. v. Philadelphia, 156 Pa. St. 54, 27 Atl. 376.

United States.—District of Columbia v. Woodbury, 136 U. S. 450, 10 S. Ct. 990, 34 L. ed. 472.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1727.

Evidence of the duty of a policeman to report obstructions is admissible on the question of the liability of a city for an accident caused by an obstruction in a street. Bowman v. Tripp, 14 R. I. 242.

Request to repair street and refusal is competent in an action for injuries for negligently permitting water to run on plaintiff's lands, owing to alleged insufficient repair of a street. Montgomery v. Gilmer, 33 Ala. 116, 70 Am. Dec. 562.

Opinion evidence.—The opinion of a witness as to what is ordinary care on the part of a city is inadmissible. Roanoke v. Shull, 97 Va. 419, 34 S. E. 34, 75 Am. St. Rep. 791.

Opinion of city officers is not admissible to show due care. Angusta v. Lombard, 99 Ga. 282, 25 S. E. 772. So opinion evidence of the inequalities in that portion of the highway between a carriage way and a sidewalk, that they are not deemed to be a portion of the highway which is required to be kept in repair for the use of foot passengers, is inadmissible. Raymond v. Lowell, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 524, 53 Am. Dec. 57. A mining engineer and consulting chemist, who never, as a scientist, investigated ventilation of sewers and never saw any test made of a blower or fan for extracting explosive gases in a sewer and knows nothing of the actual results of such tests if really made is not qualified as an expert to testify that the use of a blower or fan would have rendered the gases non-explosive. Fuchs v. St. Louis, 167 Mo. 620, 67 S. W. 610, 57 L. R. A. 136. A question requiring a witness to state whether a bill board, by the blowing over of which plaintiff was injured, was in any sense in the way of people walking along the sidewalk is properly excluded as calling for the opinion of the witness. Cason v. Ottumwa, 102 Iowa 99, 71 N. W. 192. But testimony of an engineer as to the necessary capacity of a sewer in a particular locality for ordinary occasions is proper evidence of what is an extraordinary rainfall. Hession v. Wilmington, (Del. 1893) 27 Atl. 830.

84. Chicago v. Gallagher, 44 Ill. 295; Flater v. Fey, 70 Mich. 644, 38 N. W. 656.

such as evidence of the failure of persons in the immediate vicinity to observe the defect,⁸⁶ evidence of defendant's habitual negligence in other cases and places,⁸⁷ evidence of the failure of the mayor to notify the street committee of an obstruction,⁸⁸ or evidence which would greatly tend to confuse the minds of the jury, such as a matter of common knowledge.⁸⁹ Nor is evidence of a custom or usage admissible to excuse negligence on the part of defendant.⁹⁰ Municipal ordinances and resolutions in respect to the duty of the municipality and its officers as to the care of streets may be admitted on the question of defendant's negligence with respect to defective or obstructed streets.⁹¹ Declarations of a municipal officer or agent are inadmissible to prove negligence on the part of the municipality,⁹² unless they are made in the course of his official duty in respect to the acts of negligence complained of.⁹³

(B) Condition of Way and Nature of Defect or Obstruction—(1) IN GENERAL. Ordinarily evidence of any fact or surrounding circumstance existing at the time and place of the accident is admissible for plaintiff for the purpose of proving negligence in respect to the alleged defect or obstruction,⁹⁴ such as evi-

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," 1727.

An ordinance requiring occupants or owners of abutting property to keep streets clear from ice and snow is admissible to show that the city had provided for keeping the walks clear, and is entitled to wait a reasonable time for the persons specified to perform their duty. Calder v. Walla Walla, 6 Wash. 677, 33 Pac. 1054. But evidence of such an ordinance is inadmissible where there is no offer to prove that work was done under it. Hayes v. Cambridge, 138 Mass. 461.

The record of the common council showing a report of the committee appointed by that body, and the action taken thereon, in respect to the defect in question is admissible in evidence against a municipality. Delphi v. Lowery, 74 Ind. 520, 39 Am. Rep. 98.

Ordinances held inadmissible.—Evidence of an ordinance relating to the width of sidewalks is inadmissible in an action for negligence in the construction of a street crossing. Fairgrieve v. Moberly, 39 Mo. App. 31. So in the absence of a question of contributory negligence, ordinances providing for the placing of lights by persons occupying the streets for storage of building materials is inadmissible in an action for injuries from a collision with a pile of cinders in the street. Mills v. Philadelphia, 187 Pa. St. 287, 40 Atl. 821. An ordinance prohibiting the suspension of any obstruction over a sidewalk in such a manner as to interfere with free passage over it is inadmissible in an action for injuries by a sign dropping on plaintiff, where there is no evidence to show that the sign in question was an obstruction. Gray v. Emporia, 43 Kan. 704, 23 Pac. 944. An ordinance adopted after the walk, the defect in which caused the injury, was built is inadmissible in an action for such defect. McCartney v. Washington, 124 Iowa 382, 100 N. W. 80.

Minnesota.—Waldron v. St. Paul, 33 Minn. 87, 22 N. W. 4.

Nebraska.—York v. Spellman, 19 Nebr. 357, 27 N. W. 213, holding that where the alleged negligence consists in allowing a crossing to project above the street to an unusual height, testimony tending to show at what angle the side piece of the crossing met the street is admissible, as such angle will show the abruptness of the approach.

New York.—Smith v. Ryan, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 853.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," §§ 1728-1731.

The frightening quality of a municipal street roller may be proven by its effect upon horses generally. Elgin v. Thompson, 98 Ill. App. 358.

Photographs exhibiting the exact condition of a certain sidewalk and driveway as it existed at the time of the accident thereon, except for the absence of snow and ice on the ground, are admissible in evidence. Considine v. Dubuque, 126 Iowa 283, 102 N. W. 102.

In an action for a nuisance by the improper use of sewers, evidence of a health officer of a city as to whether the sewer or the flushing tanks were out of repair about the time that plaintiff made complaint to him is admissible. Kolb v. Knoxville, 111 Tenn. 311, 76 S. W. 823.

A model of an alleged defective walk is admissible in evidence, where it is shown to be a substantial reproduction and the witness points out the details in which the correspondence is not exact. Lush v. Parkersburg, 127 Iowa 701, 104 N. W. 336.

Payment for other injuries.—In an action against a town to recover for an injury to a carriage, caused by a defective highway, it is competent for plaintiff to show payments by the town of damages for injuries caused by the same accident to a passenger in the carriage. *Grimes v. 1. Rock Falls v. Wells, 59 Ill. App. 155; Moore v. Platteville, 78 Wis. 644, 47 N. W. 1055, holding that in an action for personal injuries caused by the breaking of a defective plank which had been put in the sidewalk shortly before to repair a rotten place, and where it appeared that the plank broke when plaintiff stepped on it, it is inadmissible to show that a sound plank of those dimensions would support the weight of two heavy men; nor is it admissible to prove in such case that cows sometimes passed along the walk as tending to show that one might have broken the plank.

Contractor's specifications and engineer's reports are not competent to show the actual depth of a street excavation. Moon v. Middletown, 14 Ohio Cir. Ct. 498, 7 Ohio Cir. Dec. 579.

Upon the question whether the streets of a city are reasonably safe and suitable for the public travel, the city ordinances are not competent evidence. Davis v. Manchester, 62 N. H. 422.

2. Aurora v. Brown, 12 Ill. App. 122. Compare Brown v. Owosso, 130 Mich. 107, 89 N. W. 568.

Testimony that a sidewalk was in a rotten, shaky, and bad condition at the time of an injury is not the expression of an opinion. Harrison v. Ayrshire, 123 Iowa 528, 99 N. W. 132.

3. Gilmer v. Atlanta, 77 Ga. 688, that roots projecting from the sidewalk would be likely to trip a foot passenger.

4. Koester v. Ottumwa, 34 Iowa 41; Moore v. Platteville, 78 Wis. 644, 47 N. W. 1055, holding that evidence that it is the common practice to repair sidewalks in the manner in which the one in question was repaired is inadmissible.

expression of an opinion.⁵ The identity of the place of injury and the location of the defect or obstruction may be proven by any competent evidence.⁶

(2) PRIOR TO ACCIDENT.⁷ For the purpose of proving or disproving a defect or obstruction at the time of the accident, evidence is admissible which tends to show its existence or non-existence within a reasonable time prior thereto, where the evidence is such, in character and time, as to justify the inference that the conditions were the same at the time of the accident.⁸ Such evidence is admissible in corroboration of direct evidence of the defect or obstruction.⁹ Evidence of the condition existing even at a considerable period before the accident is admissible, where it appears that there has been no change in the conditions in the meantime.¹⁰ And defendant may also prove its good material and construction,¹¹ and its previous good condition or repair.¹² But evidence of facts or circumstances which are too remote to bear on the question whether it was defective at the time of the accident is inadmissible,¹³ such as evidence of similar negligence by defendant in former years,¹⁴ or of the condition existing before important changes have been made.¹⁵ The court may, in its discretion, properly exclude as irrelevant proof of previous acts of negligence at or near the place, where the conditions do not appear to have been the same.¹⁶

(3) SUBSEQUENT TO ACCIDENT. Likewise for the purpose of showing the existence of a defect or obstruction at the time and place of the accident, evidence is admissible which tends to show the condition of the place within a reasonable time thereafter,¹⁷ if it is of such a character and within such a reasonable time as to justify the inference that it was in such condition at the time of the accident,¹⁸ and in the absence of evidence of any material change in the meantime.¹⁹ In some jurisdictions the rule is broadly stated that evidence of conditions subsequent to the accident is inadmissible in the absence of any evidence tending to show that the conditions had not changed since the accident.²⁰ But ordinarily evidence of its condition a considerable time thereafter is inadmissible,²¹ unless accompanied by evidence that there has been no material change in the conditions,²² or unless in rebuttal of other evidence as to the condition thereafter.²³

Connecticut.—Hillyer v. Winsted, 77 Conn. 304, 59 Atl. 40; Wood v. Stafford Springs, 74 Conn. 437, 51 Atl. 129, holding that a third person's testimony that a month before she said to the street commissioner that owing to snow and ice "it was dangerous there for man or beast" is admissible.

Georgia.—Columbus v. Ogletree, 102 Ga. 293, 29 S. E. 749.

Illinois.—Brownlee v. Alexis, 39 Ill. App. 135, holding that evidence of notice to the village authorities a year before as to the defective condition is not too remote.

Indiana.—Lafayette v. Larson, 73 Ind. 367.

Iowa.—Smith v. Des Moines, 84 Iowa 685, 51 N. W. 77, holding conversations with the city sidewalk commissioner before the accident, relative to the condition of the walk, admissible.

New York.—Johnson v. Poughkeepsie, 29 N. Y. App. Div. 16, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 190 (notice to a police officer of the city); Michels v. Syracuse, 92 Hun 365, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 507 (evidence that a few days before the accident the attention of the city superintendent of public works had been called to the condition of the walk is admissible).

Ohio.—Payne v. Cleveland, 25 Ohio Cir. Ct. 457.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1729.

Evidence by the street commissioner of a city that he knew by personal examination that the stringers of a sidewalk were "all used up" established actual notice to the city of the defective condition of the walk in that regard at the particular place therein which was in controversy. Manch v. Hartford, 112 Wis. 40, 87 N. W. 816.

A report of the committee on streets and alleys previous to the injury, recommending the building of a new sidewalk on a specified side of a certain street, is admissible to show notice to the street and alley committee as to the defective condition of the walk. Pittsburg v. Broderson, 10 Kan. App. 430, 63 Pac. 5.

25. Bauer v. Dubuque, 122 Iowa 500, 98 N. W. 355.

An ordinance directing a sidewalk to be made passable is competent evidence of knowledge of its defective condition. Erd v. St. Paul, 22 Minn. 443.

Ordinance making it the duty of policemen to endeavor to remove obstructions from sidewalks or report the same to the department of public works is admissible on the question of notice, unless such notice is not controverted. Bibbins v. Chicago, 193 Ill. 359, 61 N. E. 1030 [reversing 94 Ill. App. 319].

Resolutions during previous two years ordering repairs, when connected with evidence that the repairs were not made, is admissible. Thompson v. Quincy, 83 Mich. 173, 47 N. W. 114, 10 L. R. A. 734.

A record of proceedings of a common council after the accident showing an order to the engineer to examine the defective walk and report a remedy is admissible as tending to show that the walk was recognized by the city as defective. Lafayette v. Weaver, 92 Ind. 477.

A rule of the police department requiring policemen to note and report coal holes left open is admissible as tending to show that if such fact came to the knowledge of a policeman, it was duly reported by him to someone having authority to remedy the matter. Payne v. Cleveland, 25 Ohio Cir. Ct. 457.

26. Trappell v. Red Oak Junction, 76 Iowa 744, 39 N. W. 884.

A book kept in the office of a city messenger for the purpose of entering complaints as to the condition of streets, sidewalks, etc., and recording the time when such complaints were attended to, is admissible to show notice to the city of the defect. Blake v. Lowell, 143 Mass. 296, 9 N. E. 627.

27. Wilson v. Cedar Rapids, 123 Iowa 10, 98 N. W. 119; Fee v. Columbus Borough, 168 Pa. St. 382, 31 Atl. 1076.

An ordinance requiring property-owners adjoining a street in which a defective sidewalk was located to rebuild said sidewalk is admissible on behalf of plaintiff to show that the adjoining owners had been notified to rebuild. Beardstown v. Clark, 204 Ill. 524, 68 N. E. 378 [affirming 104 Ill. App. 568].

A resolution of the common council ordering the street commissioner to notify parties to repair the sidewalk is admissible as tending to show that the authorities knew of the need of repairs. Aurora v. Pennington, 92 Ill. 564; Butler v. Malvern, 91 Iowa 397, 59 N. W. 50.

to the municipality of the particular defect or obstruction, including admissions or declarations of such boards or officers made by them while acting in the discharge of their official duties.³⁰

(B) Constructive Notice. For the purpose of showing constructive notice to the municipality, evidence of any facts or circumstances is relevant which tends to show that the defect or obstruction was of such a notorious character as to raise the inference that the city could and ought to have discovered it,³¹ such as evidence of the length of time for which the defect or obstruction had existed,³² of the defective or obstructed condition at other times within a reasonable time before or after the accident,³³ of the existence of other similar defects or obstructions in the

30. Hoyt v. Des Moines, 76 Iowa 430, 41 N. W. 63 (holding, however, that evidence that after the accident the sidewalk commissioner stated that he had given notice to repair the walk is inadmissible where it does not appear whether the notice was given before or after the accident, or where the officer is not shown to have been acting in the discharge of his official duty when making the statement); Smyth v. Bangor, 72 Me. 249; Bonham v. Crider, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 419 (holding that statements as to the bad condition of the walk made before the accident by an alderman who has since died are admissible to show that the city had notice of the defect).

Hearsay declarations of a deceased street commissioner without any evidence that such knowledge had ever been communicated to the borough or owner is inadmissible to show notice to the borough of the alleged defect. Fowler v. Jersey Shore, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 366.

The statements, after an accident, of a trustee of the village, who was chairman of the street committee at the time and as such had the condition of the street especially in charge, is competent as tending to show that he and the village authorities generally knew before the injury occurred that the street was defective. Mt. Morris v. Kanode, 98 Ill. App. 373.

31. Georgia.—Columbus v. Ogletree, 102 Ga. 293, 29 S. E. 749.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1729.

Evidence by a street commissioner of a city to the effect that a sidewalk was generally out of repair, both as to the surface thereof and the stringers, some three months before the happening of an accident alleged to have been caused by reason of a defect in the walk at a particular point, is competent for the purpose of showing constructive notice to the city of such particular defect, notwithstanding evidence by the street commissioner that he repaired the walk, so far as practicable, by using the old material and without putting in new stringers before the accident happened. Mauch v. Hartford, 112 Wis. 40, 87 N. W. 816.

notice of its condition, that the sidewalk was built of old material,³⁷ or had not been repaired for a considerable length of time.³⁸ Such evidence may be given by any witness who had observed the defects or obstructions,³⁹ such as a night watchman paid by private parties.⁴⁰ But it is inadmissible to show the total length of defendant's streets on the question of constructive notice,⁴¹ or other defects of a different nature at the same place,⁴² or any other evidence which is too remote or uncertain in point of time or relation to the defect or obstruction in question.⁴³ As tending to rebut such notice it is competent for a municipality to give evidence showing that the sidewalk was in an apparently safe condition,⁴⁴ as that it was laid down in the ordinary way and constructed out of sound and suitable material.⁴⁵

(iv) SIMILAR DEFECTS AND CONDITIONS AT OTHER PLACES. For the purpose of proving or disproving negligence with respect to the particular defect or obstruction which caused the injury, evidence of similar defects, obstructions, or conditions existing at other places,⁴⁶ or of like conditions, obstructions, or methods in other cities is ordinarily inadmissible.⁴⁷ But evidence of similar defects, obstructions, or conditions in the immediate vicinity under like conditions is admissible as tending to show the existence of the particular defect or obstruction,⁴⁸

Mere remoteness as to time, or whether the generally defective condition existed after as well as before the accident, where the nature of the particular defect is so connected with such condition that the latter would reasonably suggest the probability of the former, does not render such evidence incompetent. Hallum v. Omro, 122 Wis. 337, 99 N. W. 1051.

or to fix constructive notice thereof on the municipality.⁴⁹ Thus such evidence is generally held admissible where the accident or injury occurs on a sidewalk of uniform construction and material for considerable length, and the other defects or conditions offered in evidence were in the same walk and vicinity.⁵⁰

(v) OTHER ACCIDENTS AT SAME PLACE. Evidence of other accidents at the same place or from the same defect or obstruction is generally inadmissible to show negligence in the particular case,⁵¹ or care and prudence on the part of plaintiff;⁵² and for the same reason evidence that no other accident of the same kind or at the same place had happened is inadmissible.⁵³ But by the weight of authority evidence of such other accidents within a reasonable time prior to the accident complained of and under the same conditions is admissible as tending to show the existence of the defect, obstruction, or other dangerous conditions,⁵⁴ and the pos-

(VII) CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—(A) In General. Any legal evidence bearing on the question of contributory negligence, whether circumstantial or direct, is admissible,⁷³ such as evidence of plaintiff's intoxication at the time of the accident,⁷⁴ his defective sight,⁷⁵ his knowledge of the defect or obstruction and of its danger,⁷⁶ his duty or service at the time,⁷⁷ and the relative danger of other possible routes.⁷⁸ But where there is direct evidence as to plaintiff's conduct at the time, evidence as to his ordinary habits or general character for care and caution is inadmissible.⁷⁹

(B) Harmless Use at Other Times. As bearing on the question of contributory negligence on the part of plaintiff evidence is admissible, in some jurisdictions, that plaintiff or other persons had previously used the way, or passed the obstruction, without accident, when it was in the same condition as at the time of the accident complained of.⁸⁰ In other jurisdictions, however, such evi-

Illinois.—El Paso v. Causey, 1 Ill. App. 531; Mendota v. Fay, 1 Ill. App. 418.

Michigan.—Baker v. Grand Rapids, 111 Mich. 447, 69 N. W. 740, holding that where a person is injured by falling into a sewer opening while crossing a street, where there was no walk, evidence that it was customary for persons to cross at that place, and that a path had been worn there is admissible on the question of plaintiff's care.

Wisconsin.—Simonds v. Baraboo, 93 Wis. 40, 67 N. W. 40, 57 Am. St. Rep. 895, holding, however, that in an action by one who while driving in a wagon-load of wood was injured by reason of defects in the street, evidence as to the customary way of loading and hauling wood is inadmissible on the issue of contributory negligence.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1730.

That plaintiff knew that the person who was driving him was a careless driver is immaterial in an action for an obstruction in a street, whereby his vehicle was overturned. Stafford v. Oskaloosa, 57 Iowa 748, 11 N. W. 668.

Evidence of an ordinance prohibiting fast driving is admissible in support of a defense of contributory negligence, although no evidence of plaintiff's immoderate driving has been introduced. Fernbach v. Waterloo, 76 Iowa 598, 41 N. W. 370, (1887) 34 N. W. 610.

An ordinance requiring owners or occupants of real property to make repairs on adjoining sidewalks is not competent evidence to show that the tenant of such property was guilty of contributory negligence, because of his failure to keep such sidewalk in repair. Ford v. Kansas City, 181 Mo. 137, 79 S. W. 923.

Washington.—Benson v. Hamilton, 34 Wash. 201, 75 Pac. 805, that the sidewalk was an old one, and plaintiff had been over it many times, and had seen the defect, is admissible.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1730.

Evidence that plaintiff believed he could safely walk on a certain place is immaterial where according to his own pleading and evidence it appears that he did not know that such place was defective until after he was injured. Keim v. Ft. Dodge, 126 Iowa 27, 101 N. W. 443.

To rebut the inference of contributory negligence of plaintiff in not going to his destination by some other way, where it appears that he had knowledge of the defect, evidence that he knew that the sidewalk on the opposite side of the street was dangerous is admissible. Burrows v. Lake Crystal, 61 Minn. 357, 63 N. W. 745.

dence is held not to be inadmissible on the ground that it is a matter collateral to the issue.⁸¹

(viii) EVIDENCE SUPPLEMENTARY TO NOTICE OF CLAIM. Extrinsic evidence of actual notice by the proper city authorities is admissible, as supplementary to a written notice of plaintiff's claim or demand,⁸² for the purpose of showing that the city was not misled by a defective description in the written notice.⁸³ In the case of presentation of the claim by an administrator his letters of administration are admissible for the purpose of showing that he was administrator when he presented the claim.⁸⁴ Upon proof of the loss or destruction of the original preliminary notice of injuries, secondary notice thereof is admissible.⁸⁵

d. Sufficiency of Evidence — (i) IN GENERAL. The rules governing the weight and sufficiency of evidence in civil cases generally⁸⁶ apply in actions against a municipal corporation or property-owner for injuries caused by a defect or obstruction in the street, or by other torts for which either is responsible.⁸⁷ In accordance with such rules, in order to warrant a recovery, plaintiff's evidence must preponderate,⁸⁸ and must be of such weight and sufficiency as will reasonably justify the jury in finding all material facts essential to his cause of action.⁸⁹ The evi-

An ordinance prohibiting the dumping of refuse material on vacant lots is competent evidence upon the question of reasonable use in an action against a municipality for creating a nuisance by such acts, but is not conclusive thereof. Lane v. Concord, 70 N. H. 485, 49 Atl. 687, 85 Am. St. Rep. 643.

Evidence to prove similar accidents from the same defect or obstruction must establish with definiteness and accuracy that they were due to such defect or obstruction. Corson v. New York, 78 N. Y. App. Div. 481, 79 N. Y. Suppl. 604.

That an awning did not fall until seven years after it was erected is not conclusive evidence that it was properly constructed. Hume v. New York, 74 N. Y. 264 [reversing 9 Hun 674].

That a street commissioner officially examined a bridge three days before the accident and noticed no defect is not conclusive evidence that the defect did not then exist. Sherman v. Nairey, 77 Tex. 291, 13 S. W. 1028.

That many people passed over a sidewalk crossing in safety does not override a finding that it was in a dangerous condition. Lyon v. Logansport, 9 Ind. App. 21, 35 N. E. 128.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a finding that defendant was the person who maintained the nuisance, an awning over a sidewalk, which caused the injury. McConnell v. Bostelmann, 72 Hun (N. Y.) 238, 25 N. Y. Suppl. 390, where it was admitted that the building in front of which the awning was erected belonged to defendant and the evidence showed that his name was over the door of a saloon occupying the entire ground floor, and that he had been seen in and about the saloon and building for four or five years before the accident.

Ownership of premises is sufficiently proved to sustain a recovery for injuries thereto by flooding, by evidence that plaintiff was in possession at the time of the recovery and had been for a period of twenty years. Peoria v. Crawl, 28 Ill. App. 154.

Authority for act.—Evidence that the work on a drain which diverted surface water on to plaintiff's land was done under the supervision of the town marshal, and was accepted and paid for by the town, is sufficient to show that it was done by the order and under the authority of the town. Thorn-town v. Fugate, 21 Ind. App. 537, 52 N. E. 763.

Proof of an act which a statute or ordinance characterizes as negligence establishes negligence as a matter of law. Belleville v. Hoffman, 74 Ill. App. 503.

89. Rushton v. Allegheny, 192 Pa. St. 574, 44 Atl. 249.

Evidence held sufficient to support a finding that plaintiff's lot line at the time of dence need not be direct and positive by someone who witnessed the occurrence and saw how it happened;⁹⁰ but it must be such that the negligence can reasonably be presumed from the facts shown, or such as will satisfy reasonable minds that defendant was negligent as charged,⁹¹ and that the injury complained of the damage was at grade (Monarch Mfg. Co. v. Omaha, etc., R. Co., 127 Iowa 511, 103 N. W. 493); to justify a verdict for plaintiff for injuries received by his horse becoming frightened by a steam roller operated by order of the board of public works (Denver v. Peterson, 5 Colo. App. 41, 36 Pac. 1111), or at other obstructions and backing into an unguarded excavation (Vandalia v. Huss, 41 Ill. App. 517); by his sleigh being overturned by a pile of rubbish in the street (Kane v. Troy, 1 N. Y. Suppl. 536); by his cart being upset by reason of lumber stacked on the side of a street (Palacie v. Gardiner, 112 La. 489, 36 So. 504); by his vehicle colliding with a stump of a tree (Sebert v. Alpena, 78 Mich. 165, 43 N. W. 1098), or sinking into a hole in the paving adjacent to street car tracks (Eckert v. New York, 59 N. Y. App. Div. 611, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 124); by his horse breaking through a water pipe or stepping into an unguarded hole caused by a break in the pipe (Hopkins v. Ogden City, 5 Utah 390, 16 Pac. 596); by his falling into an open sewer (Milledgeville v. Brown, 87 Ga. 596, 13 S. E. 638; Columbus v. Pearson, 82 Ga. 288, 9 S. E. 1102), ditch (Atlanta v. Martin, 88 Ga. 21, 13 S. E. 805), or other unguarded excavations in the street (Grand Island v. Ober-schulte, 36 Nebr. 696, 55 N. W. 301; Lenich v. Beaver, 199 Pa. St. 420, 49 Atl. 220); by his stepping into a hole or depression in the street (Walker v. Philadelphia, 211 Pa. St. 33, 60 Atl. 318); by his being struck by the falling of a rotten limb of a tree (McGarey v. New York, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 500, 85 N. Y. Suppl. 861); by a fall on a defective sidewalk (Minden v. Vedene, 72 Nebr. 657, 101 N. W. 330; Bancroft v. Newburgh, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 38), by reason of ice or snow thereon (Bell v. York, 31 Nebr. 842, 48 N. W. 878; Provost v. New York, 15 Daly (N. Y.) 87, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 531 [affirmed in 117 N. Y. 626, 22 N. E. 1123]; Colburn v. Canandaigua, 15 N. Y. St. 668 [affirmed in 114 N. Y. 617, 20 N. W. 425), or through a trap door therein (Grove v. Kansas City, 75 Mo. 672), or over an iron cylinder used as a "water cut-off" (Rome v. Stewart, 116 Ga. 738, 42 S. E. 1011); by being injured by a loose plank in a sidewalk (Riley v. Iowa Falls, 83 Iowa 761, 50 N. W. 33), or by reason of any other defect or obstruction in the street or sidewalk (Michigan City v. Ballance, 123 Ind. 334, 24 N. E. 117; Huntingburgh v. First, 22 Ind. App. 66, 53 N. E. 246; Rothrock v. Cedar Rapids, 128 Iowa 252, 103 N. W. 475; Gasink v. New Ulm, 92 Minn. 52, 90 N. W. 624; Peterson v. Cokato, 84 Minn. 205, 87

N. W. 615; Lincoln v. Woodward, 19 Nebr. 259, 27 N. W. 110; Omaha v. Krantz, 5 Nebr. (Unoff.) 235, 97 N. W. 1059; Nicholson v. Philadelphia, 194 Pa. St. 460, 45 Atl. 375), or by the city's negligence in the maintenance or operation of its sewers (Knoxville v. Klasing, 111 Tenn. 134, 76 S. W. 814).

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a verdict for plaintiff for injuries received by stepping upon or stumbling over a water box upon the sidewalk (North v. New Britain, 78 Conn. 145, 61 Atl. 68), by tripping and falling on a sidewalk, from which the boards had been taken, and which was filled in with gravel and cinders (Harvard v. Senger, 34 Ill. App. 223), or by falling on an icy sidewalk (Foxworthy v. Hastings, 31 Nebr. 825, 48 N. W. 901).

That defendant owns and occupies the lot in front of which a shade tree stands, which tree the city had authority to rear and trim, is not sufficient evidence that defendant planted or maintained the tree for his own use, so as to charge him with the duty of trimming the same, and with responsibility for injury received by plaintiff on whom a neglected rotten limb had fallen. Weller v. McCormick, 47 N. J. L. 397, 1 Atl. 516, 54 Am. Rep. 175.

Evidence of physicians, some of whom attended plaintiff, and others of whom visited and examined premises in which rubbish was dumped by a city, that the foul air and gases generated by the rubbish were sufficient to cause plaintiff's sickness, and were its origin, and that plaintiff was sick with a contagious fever, although whether it was miasmatic or typhoid there was some divergence of opinion, is sufficient to sustain a verdict of damages for the city's negligence in the maintenance and operation of its sewer system. Knoxville v. Klasing, 111 Tenn. 134, 76 S. W. 814.

90. Lehman v. Brooklyn, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 234.

Evidence held sufficient to justify a finding of negligence in failing to properly and safely guard excavations in a sidewalk (Hildman v. Phillips, 106 Wis. 611, 82 N. W. 566); in permitting a street or sidewalk to become and remain defective (Ledgerwood v. Webster City, 93 Iowa 726, 61 N. W. 1089), by ice or snow thereon (Morse v. Boston, 109 Mass. 446; Fitzgerald v. Woburn, 109 Mass. 204; Graham v. Poughkeepsie, 68 N. Y. App. Div. 262, 74 N. Y. Suppl. 97); in permitting a dangerous resulted from such negligence.⁹² No recovery can be had when the evidence obstruction, a large rock, upon the sidewalk (Davis v. Austin, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 460, 54 S. W. 927); in permitting a hole to remain in the driveway of a street (Finnegan v. Sioux City, 112 Iowa 232, 83 N. W. 907), between the tracks of a street railway (Block v. Worcester, 186 Mass. 526, 72 N. E. 77); in permitting a hole to remain in a sidewalk or cross walk for a year or more (Diamond v. Brooklyn, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 97); in filling a trench in a street (Bingham v. Boston, 161 Mass. 3, 36 N. E. 473); in failing to discover the dangerous character of a rotten limb of a tree (McGarey v. New York, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 500, 85 N. Y. Suppl. 861); in permitting a sewer to become obstructed (Talcott v. New York, 58 N. Y. App. Div. 514, 69 N. Y. Suppl. 360); to charge defendant, owner of a coal hole constructed by permission of the municipal authorities, with negligence in respect to its maintenance (Matthews v. New York, 78 N. Y. App. Div. 422, 80 N. Y. Suppl. 360); and to justify a finding that defendant's superintendent of streets did not use due care in notifying plaintiff of danger impending from operations being carried on in the street where plaintiff's team was hitched (Champaign v. White, 38 Ill. App. 233).

Evidence held insufficient to warrant the jury in finding that the defect in a street existed twenty-four hours, under Mass. Gen. St. c. 44, § 22 (Crocker v. Springfield, 110 Mass. 135); to sustain a finding of negligence in placing a water box upon a sidewalk near the curb (North v. New Britain, 78 Conn. 145, 61 Atl. 68); in respect to an excavation between the rails of a street railway track (Martin v. Chelsea, 175 Mass. 516, 56 N. E. 703); in respect to ice and snow on a sidewalk (Lichtenstein v. New York, 159 N. Y. 500, 54 N. E. 67 [reversing 29 N. Y. App. Div. 542, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 642]); in respect to a slippery walk on which plaintiff fell (O'Keefe v. New York, 29 N. Y. App. Div. 524, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 710); in permitting a hole to remain in a cross walk or sidewalk (Beltz v. Yonkers, 148 N. Y. 67, 42 N. E. 401 [reversing 74 Hun 73, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 106]); and in respect to an excavation caused by the grade of a street (Gilchrist v. South Omaha, 36 Nebr. 163, 54 N. W. 258).

A prima facie case of negligence is not established by proof that the municipal authorities laid out a street, and directed it to be improved, and that at the time of the accident the land remained in its natural condition, having a pond on it, into which plaintiff fell while passing over private property used for travel around the edge of the pond. Hacker v. St. Louis, 13 Mo. App. 277.

Possession of requisite funds for the repair of a road may be inferred from evidence that it might have been repaired for fifty dollars and that defendant was provided by tax with two thousand eight hundred dollars and had expended from two thousand dollars to three thousand dollars. Hyatt v. Rondout, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 385.

A verdict or finding that the way was not reasonably safe or convenient for public travel is not warranted by evidence that a brick sidewalk had some depressions in it varying from one half to two inches in depth, where there are no sharp corners and the surface of the depression is smooth. Newton v. Worcester, 174 Mass. 181, 54 N. E. 521; Jackson v. Lansing, 121 Mich. 279, 80 N. W. 8.

An approach from a street to a sidewalk on a slope of one foot in seven is not negligence per se in the absence of evidence that this slope made the walk dangerous, and a finding that the town was negligent in so constructing and maintaining the same will not be warranted. Lush v. Parkersburg, 127 Iowa 701, 104 N. W. 336.

That lumber piled in a street fell and inflicted an injury is sufficient proof to justify an inference that it was liable to fall and that there was a probability of the occurrence of such an accident as did in fact occur. Smith v. Davis, 22 App. Cas. (D. C.) 298.

Evidence held sufficient to justify a finding that the proximate cause of the injury was a defective sidewalk (Kennedy v. St. Cloud, 90 Minn. 523, 97 N. W. 417); the defective condition of a temporary bridge over an excavation in the sidewalk (Willdigg v. Brooklyn, 30 N. Y. Suppl. 75); a hole in a vault cover in the sidewalk, in which plaintiff's foot caught (Blaechinska v. Howard Mission, 56 Hun (N. Y.) 322, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 679 [reversed on other grounds in 130 N. Y. 497, 29 N. E. 755, 15 L. R. A. 215]), or a hole in a sidewalk in which plaintiff's foot became fastened until she fell and her ankle was broken (West v. Eau Claire, 89 Wis. 31, 61 N. W. 313).

Testimony of plaintiff and other witnesses that she fell into an existing hole in the sidewalk is sufficient to make a case for the jury even if it is contradicted. Gallamore v. Olympia, 34 Wash. 379, 75 Pac. 978.

Injury by fire.—It is not necessary, in an action against a city to recover damages for the destruction of property therein by fire, during the existence of a riot, in order to make such city liable therefor, to establish the absolute impossibility of the occurrence of the fire unless by the agency of the rioters. It is enough to establish, by circumstantial evidence, the probability of the origination of such fire by the rioters, so great as to render that of its having originated in any merely raises a conjecture or probability as to defendant's negligence,⁹³ or that such negligence was the cause of the injury.⁹⁴ Evidence of the mere fact of the happening of the accident,⁹⁵ or of the happening of other accidents at the same place,⁹⁶ does not of itself ordinarily establish negligence on the part of defendant; nor does the existence of similar defects or obstructions in other parts of the city justify an inference that they were not actionable defects or obstructions.⁹⁷

(11) EXISTENCE OR LOCATION OF STREET. In an action for injuries caused by a defect or obstruction in a public street, the evidence should be sufficient to show that the way on which the accident occurred was a public way or street,⁹⁸ and that the defect or obstruction complained of was located within the limits thereof.⁹⁹ That the defect or obstruction was on a public street or highway which the city was bound to keep in safe repair is sufficiently proven by evidence showing that the place of the accident was one over which the municipality had assumed care and control,¹ as by evidence that the city authorities had treated it as a public street by taking charge of it and regulating it as other streets,² or by making other way, on any ordinary principles of experience and reasoning, so remote and improbable as to make it morally, even if not physically, impossible. Ross v. New York, 4 Rob. (N. Y.) 49.

Statements of plaintiff soon after the injury that she stepped on some round object which rolled and threw her is not conclusive against her in an action for injuries alleged to have been caused by stepping into a hole in the sidewalk, it not appearing that there was any such object on or about the walk. De Soto v. Buckles, 40 Ill. App. 85.

93. Brummett v. Boston, 179 Mass. 26, 60 N. E. 388; Menzies v. Interstate Paving Co., 106 N. Y. App. Div. 107, 94 N. Y. Suppl. 492.

94. Menzies v. Interstate Paving Co., 106 N. Y. App. Div. 107, 94 N. Y. Suppl. 492; McCarty v. Lockport, 13 N. Y. App. Div. 494, 43 N. Y. Suppl. 693; McInerney v. Elmira, 11 N. Y. App. Div. 354, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 308; Higgins v. Glens Falls, 57 Hun (N. Y.) 594, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 289; Sweeney v. New York, 17 N. Y. Suppl. 797; Dapper v. Milwaukee, 107 Wis. 88, 82 N. W. 725; Small v. Prentice, 102 Wis. 256, 78 N. W. 415; Hyer v. Janesville, 101 Wis. 371, 77 N. W. 729.

95. Lush v. Parkersburg, 127 Iowa 701, 104 N. W. 336 (holding that the fact that plaintiff slipped and fell on the approach to the sidewalk will not justify a finding that the same was negligently constructed and maintained); Kendall v. Boston, 118 Mass. 234, 19 Am. Rep. 446; Smalley v. Yonkers Electric Light, etc., Co., 56 N. Y. App. Div. 547, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 503 (holding that proof that a bicycle rider came into collision with an electric lamp lowered for the purpose of cleaning it, unaccompanied by other evidence of want of due care on the part of defendant, creates no presumption of negligence on its part); Welsh v. Murray, 2 N. Y. App. Div. 205, 37 N. Y. Suppl. 882; Lehman v. Brooklyn, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 234. Compare Larmon v. District of Columbia, 5 Mackey (D. C.) 330, holding that the fact that plaintiff fell into a hole in the sidewalk is, without more, evidence that the hole was dangerous.

If a sewer and drain proved adequate up to the time of the overflow to carry away the surface water and sewage, the very fact of the occurrence of the overflow tends to show that at that time the sewer had become in some way defective or obstructed, and the rule res ipsa loquitur applies, calling upon the municipal corporation to explain the difficulty with the sewer on the particular occasion, and show that it was not responsible for that difficulty. Magee v. Brooklyn, 18 N. Y. App. Div. 22, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 473. 96. Dubois v. Kingston, 102 N. Y. 219, 6 N. E. 273, 55 Am. Rep. 804.

97. Bacon v. Boston, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 174. 98. Kircher v. Larchwood, 120 Iowa 578, 95 N. W. 184.

99. Barr v. Bainbridge, 42 N. Y. App. Div. 628, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 132, holding that a pile of rubbish about eight feet southerly from the southerly side of the traveled track, about one rod in width, and which was all on the northerly side of the center line of the street, which was three feet in width, is sufficiently shown to be within the limits of the street.

Evidence held sufficient to establish prima facie that an excavation by an abutting owner was within the street line, although such line was not shown by survey or deed. See Ann v. Herter, 79 N. Y. App. Div. 6, 79 N. Y. Suppl. 825.

1. Kircher v. Larchwood, 120 Iowa 578, 95 N. W. 184; Smith v. Des Moines, 84 Iowa 685, 51 N. W. 77, holding that evidence that the defective sidewalk was on a public street is sufficient to show that the city had assumed control of it in the absence of evidence to the contrary.

2. Phillips v. Huntington, 35 W. Va. 406, 14 S. E. 17, holding that such evidence, together with proof of the defect and injury, makes out a prima facie case for plaintiff under W. Va. Code, c. 43, § 53, providing that every street in an incorporated city used and occupied as a public street shall be taken and deemed to be a public street; and it is not necessary to show that such street was laid out properly and that it was actually within the corporate limits.

repairs.³ Where a statute prescribes the limits of a highway or street, proof of such limits which satisfies all the requirements of the statute is sufficient.⁴

(iii) NOTICE OF DEFECT. The above general rules regulate the weight and sufficiency of the evidence of defendant's actual⁵ or constructive notice of the defect or obstruction complained of.⁶ Thus the jury may infer notice from the

3. Anna v. Boren, 77 Ill. App. 408; Gilpatrick v. Biddeford, 51 Me. 182 (holding that where the city denies the location of the street and it is shown that repairs have been made by a street commissioner it will be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary that repairs were made by the city); Sheridan v. Salem, 14 Oreg. 328, 12 Pac. 925.

4. Hutchings v. Sullivan, 90 Me. 131, 37 Atl. 883.

5. Evidence held to establish actual notice see Cowan v. Bucksport, 98 Me. 305, 56 Atl. 901; Hurley v. Bowdoinham, 88 Me. 293, 34 Atl. 72. Thus a finding of actual notice by a street commissioner is warranted by evidence that he was informed that there was a defect on a certain street together with the assumption that he did his duty in going to look (Welch v. Portland, 77 Me. 384), or by evidence that, although the defective sidewalk had been repaired three days before the accident, yet numerous witnesses noticed the defect during these three days, while casually passing over the sidewalk, and the admission of the street commissioner that he passed over the walk during each of these days (Moon v. Ionia, 81 Mich. 635, 46 N. W. 25). So evidence showing a defective refilling of a sewer ditch from which a hole in the sidewalk resulted, and that the city had filled other holes along the ditch and near the one in question, warrants an inference of actual knowledge on the part of the city of the hole in question. Dallas v. Muncton, (Tex. Civ. App. 1904) 83 S. W. 431.

Evidence held insufficient to show actual notice of defects see McNally v. Cohoes, 127 N. Y. 350, 27 N. E. 1043 [affirming 53 Hun 202, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 842].

That defendant's officers had actual notice of the defective condition of a walk is sufficiently shown by evidence that such officers frequently passed over the walk, and that the defective condition was observed by some of them shortly before the accident, and that a man was seen to repair it, although it is not certainly shown that the repair was made. Smith v. Pella, 86 Iowa 236, 53 N. W. 226.

Where injuries occur from plaintiff catching his foot on a guy wire from an electric light pole from a tree which had given way, and there is evidence that a member of the city council knew that the tree had been partly burned away several years before, and more than two months before knew that the wire was attached to the tree, it cannot be said that there is an entire absence of notice or knowledge on the part of the city. Lafayette v. Ashby, 8 Ind. App. 214, 34 N. E. 238, 35 N. E. 516.

Testimony of an alderman that he knew before the accident that the street was more or less defective and that work had been done upon it a few days before, taken with the fact that he described the condition as being such as required careful driving, is sufficient to show notice of the defect to the municipality. Mt. Morris v. Kanode, 98 Ill. App. 373.

Sending a man to repair a sidewalk is evidence that the city has notice of its bad condition. East Dubuque v. Burhyte, 74 Ill. App. 99.

6. Evidence held sufficient to sustain a finding of constructive notice (Bill v. Norwich, 39 Conn. 222), of a defective sewer lid (District of Columbia v. Payne, 13 App. Cas. (D. C.) 500; Woodbury v. District of Columbia, 5 Mackey (D. C.) 127), of a defect consisting of an acoustic wire coming into contact with a defectively insulated electric light wire (Bourget v. Cambridge, 159 Mass. 388, 34 N. E. 455), of a defective or obstructed sidewalk or street (Hoover v. Mapleton, 110 Iowa 571, 81 N. W. 776; Weber v. Creston, 75 Iowa 16, 39 N. W. 126; Ritschdorf v. St. Paul, 95 Minn. 370, 104 N. W. 129; Archer v. Mt. Vernon, 57 N. Y. App. Div. 32, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 1040; Aslen v. Charlotte, 35 N. Y. App. Div. 625, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 754; Harrington v. Buffalo, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 333, ice and snow), of a ditch across a street dug by a private person (Ft. Worth v. Johnson, 84 Tex. 137, 19 S. W. 361), or of a defective bridge (McDonald v. Ashland, 78 Wis. 251, 47 N. W. 434).

Evidence held insufficient to establish constructive notice of a defective sign over a street (Leary v. Yonkers, 95 N. Y. App. Div. 126, 88 N. Y. Suppl. 829), or of a defective sidewalk (Burns v. Bradford, 137 Pa. St. 361, 20 Atl. 997, 11 L. R. A. 726; Bergevin v. Chippewa Falls, 82 Wis. 505, 52 N. W. 588). Thus where injuries occur from the misplacement of a cover to a manhole, evidence that workmen were seen cleaning a sewer through the manhole two days before the accident is insufficient to establish notice. Whitney v. Lowell, 151 Mass. 212, 24 N. E. 47. So evidence that the authorities at the court-house were notified of a defect in a sidewalk does not conclusively establish notice to the municipal authorities. Columbus v. Ogletree, 102 Ga. 293, 29 S. E. 749.

Resolutions of the city council dated more than a year before the accident, and while a tree, the stump of which caused the accident, was still standing, to the effect that obstructions in the form of trees should be removed, etc., is no evidence of actual notice to the city of the defect. Lappread v. Detroit, 95 Mich. 255, 54 N. W. 870.

situation and method of construction of the street at the place of the accident, and from want of evidence that the defect was a recent one.⁷

(iv) CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE. A preponderance of evidence, direct or circumstantial, is necessary to prove contributory negligence,⁸ or freedom from contributory negligence, according to the burden of proof in the particular case.⁹ In those jurisdictions in which there can be no recovery without proof of due care, there can be no recovery where the evidence is equally consistent with either negligence or care on plaintiff's part.¹⁰

(v) NOTICE OF CLAIM. Circumstantial as well as direct and positive evidence may sufficiently show a proper service of notice or presentation of the claim,¹¹ or that defendant was not misled by an ambiguity in the written notice.¹²

7. Sawyer v. Newburyport, 157 Mass. 430, 32 N. E. 653.

8. Gordon v. Richmond, 83 Va. 436, 2 S. E. 727.

Evidence held sufficient to show contributory negligence in an action for injuries caused by a defective sidewalk (Bohn v. Racine, 119 Wis. 341, 96 N. W. 813); for injuries resulting from collision of plaintiff's buggy with lumber piled in the street (Black v. Mishawaka, 30 Ind. App. 104, 65 N. E. 538), in driving over an embankment (Johnson v. Superior, 103 Wis. 66, 78 N. W. 1100), or in passing over a defect of which plaintiff had knowledge (Tuttle v. Clear Lake, (Iowa 1905) 102 N. W. 136). Testimony of nine witnesses that plaintiff was drunk at the time is sufficient against his denial to support a finding of contributory negligence where the jury found that one using ordinary care could pass over the defective place without danger. McCracken v. Markesan, 76 Wis. 499, 45 N. W. 323.

Evidence held insufficient to show contributory negligence see Oesterreich v. Detroit, 137 Mich. 415, 100 N. W. 593; Dickson v. Hollister, 123 Pa. St. 421, 16 Atl. 484, 10 Am. St. Rep. 533.

Where plaintiff received her injuries from contact with a telephone wire lying in the street, at half-past six o'clock on a cloudy morning, as she was hurrying to her work through falling snow, with her mind dwelling on the serious condition of a sick sister whom she had attended through the greater part of a previous night, the mere fact that she had on another occasion, within four days before receiving her injuries, observed the wire with which she came in contact, is not sufficient to show contributory negligence as a matter of law. West Kentucky Tel. Co. v. Pharis, 78 S. W. 917, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1838.

9. Hubbard v. Mason City, 60 Iowa 400, 14 N. W. 772.

Evidence held sufficient to show freedom from contributory negligence or due care (Hazard v. Council Bluffs, 87 Iowa 51, 53 N. W. 1083), in an action for injuries from a defective sidewalk (Normal v. Gresham, 49 Ill. App. 196; Indianapolis v. Mitchell, 27 Ind. App. 589, 61 N. E. 947; Shipley v. Proctor, 177 Mass. 498, 59 N. E. 119; Weare v. Fitchburg, 110 Mass. 334; Adams v. Thief River Falls, 84 Minn. 30, 86 N. W. 767; Cunningham v. Thief River Falls, 84 Minn. 21, 86 N. W. 763; Bartley v. New York, 102 N. Y. App. Div. 23, 92 N. Y. Suppl. 82; Thompson v. Albany, 8 N. Y. St. 518, holding that the legal imputation of contributory negligence from walking on an icy or dangerous sidewalk was met by proof that plaintiff wore new rubber shoes and walked very carefully; Nowell v. New York, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 382); to warrant a finding that plaintiff was free from contributory negligence in falling on an icy sidewalk (Graham v. Poughkeepsie, 68 N. Y. App. Div. 262, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 97); to warrant a finding that plaintiff did not know of the existence of a hole in the sidewalk a short time prior to the accident, and was not guilty of contributory negligence (Hildman v. Phillips, 106 Wis. 611, 82 N. W. 566); to justify an inference of freedom from contributory negligence in driving over a manhole projecting over the street (Schafer v. New York, 154 N. Y. 466, 48 N. E. 749 [reversing 12 N. Y. App. Div. 384, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 744]); or to warrant a finding that plaintiff, a girl nearly nineteen years old, who fell over an embankment unguarded by a hand-rail, exercised the prudence incident to her sex and age (Snow v. Provincetown, 120 Mass. 580).

Evidence held insufficient to show that plaintiff was exercising ordinary care when she fell on a defective sidewalk, where a companion stepped on a loose plank causing her to trip. Huntingburgh v. First, 15 Ind. App. 552, 43 N. E. 17.

10. Crafts v. Boston, 109 Mass. 519.

11. Beattie v. Detroit, 137 Mich. 319, 100 N. W. 574 (evidence held sufficient to raise a presumption that notice was properly served); Omaha v. Ayer, 32 Nebr. 375, 49 N. W. 445 (holding that the fact that a witness stated that he copied a notice from the petition filed in the suit, and the fact that the petition was not filed until after the expiration of the prescribed time for serving notice, does not overcome his testimony that the notice had been served in time, since he evidently meant that he had copied the notice from a draft of the petition); Cresler v. Ashville, 134 N. C. 311, 46 S. E. 738 (evidence of three witnesses held insufficient to show notice).

12. Veno v. Waltham, 158 Mass. 279, 33 N. E. 398.

8. TRIAL IN GENERAL. The general rules of procedure in the trial of civil actions apply in actions for tort against a municipal corporation.¹³

9. QUESTIONS FOR COURT AND FOR JURY— a. In General. Questions of law are for the determination of the court,¹⁴ while issues of fact are to be determined by the jury.¹⁵ Thus it is a question for the jury whether or not the particular act or omission which caused the injury was authorized by the municipality;¹⁶ as is also the question of damages,¹⁷ or whether plaintiff was a person in respect to whom the particular act or omission complained of was a breach of defendant's duty.¹⁸ Whether a street temporarily occupied by an abutting owner while making improvements on his land has been so closed by the city as to notify the public and exempt the city from liability is a question for the jury.¹⁹

b. As Determined by the Evidence. Where there is evidence from which the jury might be justified in finding the existence of the fact in issue, the issue should be submitted to them for determination under proper instructions from the court,²⁰ as where there is evidence tending to show the fact in issue but it is

View by jury.—Unless it appears that the condition of the locus has not been materially changed since the accident an order allowing the jury to view the premises should not be granted. Seward v. Wilmington, 2 Marv. (Del.) 189, 42 Atl. 451.

A jury may not use a magnifying glass to examine a rotted piece of wood taken from the sidewalk. Elgin v. Nofs, 200 Ill. 252, 65 N. E. 679 [reversing 103 Ill. App. 11].

Severance of defenses.—Where a gas company and municipality are joint defendants the order in which they shall present their respective defenses including the order of jury challenge and cross-examination is in the discretion of the trial judge. Grundy v. Janesville, 84 Wis. 574, 54 N. W. 1085.

Objection to petition.—It is too late to object for the first time, upon the trial of a cause, to the insufficiency of a petition upon mere technical grounds, or any amendment or amendments thereto which have been fully answered and issues joined thereon. Guthrie v. Finch, 13 Okla. 496, 75 Pac. 288.

Dismissal.—Where the facts stated by plaintiff's counsel in his opening, if taken to be true, and every fair inference he drawn therefrom which might reasonably be drawn, fails to state a cause of action, on which the jury could have fairly found a verdict in his favor, the complaint should be dismissed on motion. Jordan v. New York, 44 N. Y. App. Div. 149, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 696 [affirmed in 165 N. Y. 657, 59 N. E. 1124].

Motion to strike out evidence.—It is not error for the trial court, in an action against a municipality to overrule a motion by defendant to strike out the testimony of one of plaintiff's witnesses to the effect that he had seen other persons stumble and fall in the same place where plaintiff was hurt, upon the ground that it was not shown that the stumbling had occurred previous to the accident, where defendant failed to make such objection while the witness was on the stand, or to cross-examine him on the subject, but made the motion after the witness had been discharged from attendance on the trial. Although there may be no direct evidence that the premises were set on fire by a mob, and plaintiff seeks to maintain his action solely by force of circumstantial evidence, yet inasmuch as the tendency of the facts proved to raise the presumption that the fire was the act of the rioters depends entirely upon natural presumptions to be derived from the circumstances of the case, by the application of the common experience of mankind, based upon the natural capability of such facts to generate conviction in the mind, it is proper that the case should be submitted to the jury. *Ross v. Where the evidence is conflicting, the jury should reconcile it, if they can; but, if they cannot do so, they should give credence to so much of it as in their opinion is entitled to belief. Colbourn v. Wilmington, 4 Pennew. (Del.) 443, 56 Atl. 605.

Damages.—Where the evidence as to the extent of plaintiff's injury is conflicting, it is proper to leave the question to the jury, although the physician who called to see her has testified that her injury was trivial. Styles v. Decatur, 91 Mich. 443, 91 N. W. 622.

Where plaintiff makes out a prima facie case of negligence on the part of defendant and the defense is that the rainfall which caused the overflow of a sewer was an extraordinary one, the case is one for the jury. District of Columbia v. Gray, 6 App. Cas. (D. C.) 314.

Where there is in a given case a prima facie sufficiency of testimony on the part of plaintiff but a preponderance of testimony in favor of defendant, the trial court is not justified in peremptorily instructing a jury to find for defendant. District of Columbia v. Gray, 6 App. Cas. (D. C.) 314.

24. Massachusetts.—Randall v. Lowell, 156 Mass. 255, 30 N. E. 1020, holding plaintiff not entitled to go to the jury on the question whether the public had acquired a right of way over a narrow strip of land, where he failed to show that there was a public use continued uninterrupted for the length of time required by the statute, which was adverse and under a claim of right, and not merely a use which was tolerated or permitted.

Where the facts proved, the probabilities, and all reasonable inferences are overwhelmingly against plaintiff's case, the trial court should, on motion, direct a verdict for defendant. Maanum v. Madison, 104 Wis. 272, 80 N. W. 591.

pleadings and proof should not be submitted to the jury under any state of the evidence.²⁹

c. Location of Accident. Except where the evidence is legally insufficient, or is undisputed and free from doubt,³⁰ the place where the accident occurred is ordinarily a question for the jury,³¹ as whether or not it was on a public street,³² or whether the place was one of which the city had assumed control for street purposes, so as to impose upon it the duty of keeping it in repair.³³ Whether the city had established a sidewalk at the point where the accident occurred is a question for the jury.³⁴

d. Negligence of Defendant. The doctrine generally recognized and enforced is not only that the jury decide the facts when the evidence is conflicting, but also that even where there is no conflict of testimony, and the street conditions and circumstances attending the accident are obvious and undoubted, if there is any evidence to show dereliction of duty, the jury are the proper judges to decide whether these circumstances and conditions, so conceded or established, show defendant to have been wanting in ordinary care, commensurate to the danger, and therefore guilty of culpable negligence, as in respect to its streets or public way,³⁵ pose of the case without the intervention of the jury, as by dismissal, nonsuit, or by direction of a verdict.⁴¹ But where the evidence is legally insufficient, or where the facts are undisputed and the inference to be drawn from them is clear and certain, the question of defendant's negligence is one of law for the court and it may dispose of the question without the intervention of a jury,⁴² as by a dismissal or nonsuit,⁴³ or by directing a verdict for defendant.⁴⁴ Nor need the court submit to the jury a question of negligence, other than that on which the action is based, although there is evidence of such negligence.⁴⁵

e. Sufficiency and Safety of Way—(1) IN GENERAL. Where there is sufficient evidence for the jury, but it is conflicting or is such that reasonable minds might arrive at different conclusions, it is a question for the jury whether or not there existed, at the place and time of the accident, a defect or obstruction for which defendant was responsible,⁴⁶ as whether the street was, with the defect or case without the intervention of the jury.⁴⁹ Ordinarily it is a question for the jury whether the particular defect or obstruction amounted to a public nuisance in the highway;⁵⁰ whether it was such a defect or obstruction as the municipality was bound to use reasonable care, diligence, and prudence to guard against and remedy;⁵¹ or whether the municipality exercised reasonable care in permitting the defect or obstruction to remain,⁵² or in removing it.⁵³ But where the evidence is insufficient, or is clear and undisputed, the question of negligence in respect to the particular defect or obstruction is one for the court.⁵⁴

(ii) LIGHTS AND GUARDS. In case of an accident occurring because of an unguarded or unlighted opening, pitfall, or obstruction on a sidewalk or driveway, it is ordinarily a question for the jury whether under the circumstances of the particular case it was defendant's duty to have guards, barriers, or lights at the place of the accident, for the protection of travelers, and consequently whether it was negligent in that respect,⁵⁵ as, for example, whether the guards, barriers, or lights at the place of the accident were adequate or sufficient for the purpose;⁵⁶

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1751.

Whether an abutting owner's exercise of his right to obstruct a sidewalk for the purposes of business is necessary, reasonable, or temporary is ordinarily a question of fact to be solved with reference to the time, place,

But where the evidence discloses no actionable negligence the question is one for the court, and it may dispose of the case by dismissal or nonsuit.⁶³

h. Negligence of Person Causing Obstruction. In accordance with the rules heretofore considered,⁶⁴ it is usually a question for the jury, in an action against a person other than an abutting owner, through whose agency the defect or obstruction complained of was caused, whether such person was negligent in causing or guarding the defect or obstruction.⁶⁵

i. Proximate Cause of Injury. It is ordinarily a question of fact for the jury whether under all the circumstances of the particular case plaintiff's injuries were proximately caused by defendant's negligence or whether they were attributable to some other cause;⁶⁶ as whether or not the injuries were caused by defend-and circumstances. Kelly v. Otterstedt, 80 N. Y. App. Div. 398, 80 N. Y. Suppl. 1008; Jochem v. Robinson, 72 Wis. 199, 31 N. W. 383, 1 L. R. A. 178. See Morris v. Whipple, 183 Mass. 27, 66 N. E. 199. Thus whether the use of cellar doors, in opening or leaving them open, has been proper and legitimate for the business of the owner, or capricious and unnecessary, and if legitimate whether habitually used so negligently as to endanger passers-by, are questions for the jury. Chapman v. Macon, 55 Ga. 566.

New York.—Earl v. Crouch, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 882 (holding that where defendant caused lumber to be placed in a street, the mere fact that a child five years old, in attempting to climb on the pile, pulled it over on himself was sufficient evidence of defendant's negligence to make a question for the jury); Clarke v. Crimmins, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 868; Peard v. Karst, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 463 (holding plaintiff entitled to go to the jury on the question as to whether defendant had charge of the premises in which the defect existed, so as to be responsible for the accident).

Texas.—Paris Gaslight Co. v. McHam, 2 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 651.

Wisconsin.—Denby v. Willer, 59 Wis. 240, 18 N. W. 169, holding that whether one who temporarily places articles used in his business on the outer edge of the sidewalk, leaving ample room for passage, is guilty of such negligence as will make him liable to a person injured by falling over such articles is, in the absence of any law or ordinance prohibiting such obstructions, a question of fact.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1752.

In an action against a railroad company for injuries to plaintiff from slipping on ice which had accumulated on the sidewalk from water dripping from the spout of defendant's water-tank, it is a question for the jury whether defendant was negligent and whether its negligence caused or contributed to plaintiff's injury. Thuringer v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 71 Hun (N. Y.) 526, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 1087, 82 Hun 33, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 419.

ant's negligence in respect to the alleged defect or obstruction,⁶⁷ or in respect to its sewers and waters.⁶⁸ But where the evidence is legally insufficient to show a causal connection between plaintiff's injuries and defendant's negligence, or is undisputed, and but one inference can be reasonably drawn therefrom, the question becomes one of law for the court,⁶⁹ as where the evidence shows merely a bare possibility or probability that defendant's negligence caused the accident.⁷⁰

j. Contributory Negligence—(1) IN GENERAL. Where there is evidence tending to show contributory negligence, but the facts are conflicting, or are such that different inferences might be reasonably shown therefrom, the question as to whether or not plaintiff is guilty of such negligence at the time of the accident as will preclude him from recovering damages is for the jury to determine from all the circumstances of the particular case.⁷¹ Thus it is ordinarily a ques-

Contributory negligence of child or parent in case of an injury to a child as a question for the jury see St. Paul v. Kuhy, 8 Minn. 154; Brown v. Syracuse, 77 Hun (N. Y.) 411, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 792; Newport News v. Scott, 103 Va. 794, 50 S. E. 266; Lorence v. Ellensburgh, 13 Wash. 341, 43 Pac. 20, 52 Am. St. Rep. 42.

When there is some evidence showing the exercise of reasonable care, the fact that, owing to the circumstances, the evidence of care is weak, does not justify taking the question of contributory negligence from the jury. crossing;⁷⁴ in attempting to save another from injury;⁷⁵ whether he used due care and caution in riding or driving along a defective or obstructed street or public way;⁷⁶ or whether he used due care to properly treat and care for himself after the injury.⁷⁷ But where the facts are undisputed, or but one conclusion can be drawn therefrom by reasonable minds, the question whether or not plaintiff was contributorily negligent becomes one of law for the court to determine.⁷⁸

(ii) KNOWLEDGE OF DEFECT OR OBSTRUCTION. Whether or not the person injured had knowledge of the defect or obstruction, or other dangerous condition existing at the time and place of the accident, is ordinarily a question of fact for the jury.⁷⁹ The mere fact that he previously had such knowledge does not make him guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law in attempting to use such place; but his negligence is ordinarily a question of fact for the jury to determine from the fact of such knowledge, in connection with all other circumstances existing at the time and place,⁸⁰ such as the facts that it was dark at the

The facts necessary to authorize a recovery need not be stated with the same exactness in instructions as in pleadings. If an instruction be so drawn as to predicate the right to recovery upon a portion only of the facts constituting the cause of action, it will nevertheless be held sufficient, if in view of all the evidence the court can say that the other essential facts necessarily follow those which are required by the instruction to be found. Reno v. St. Joseph, 169 Mo. 642, 70 S. W. 123.

Instructions held proper or erroneously refused on the question of defendant's negligence in respect to the failure of sewers to carry off surface water (Parker v. Des Moines, 53 Iowa 679, 6 N. W. 37), in respect to fence around a reservoir (Carey v. Kansas City, 187 Mo. 715, 86 S. W. 438, 70 L. R. A. 65), and in respect to a defective or obstructed street or sidewalk (Johnson v. Sioux City, 114 Iowa 137, 86 N. Detroit*, 32 Fed. 36, instruction held not erroneous in calling attention of the jury to the proximity of the defect to a police station).

Instructions held erroneous or properly refused as to defendant's negligence (Crete v. Childs, 11 Nebr. 252, 9 N. W. 55, holding an instruction that under certain given circumstances a city is liable for its failure to perform its duties where there is no explanation as to what such duties are is erroneous; Kelchner v. Nanticoke Borough, 209 Pa. St. 412, 58 Atl. 851, holding that a charge of negligence which does not state to the jury that the question of defendant's negligence is for their consideration and does not give any definition of negligence or the degree of care or supervision which a municipal corporation is bound to exercise over its streets is inadequate; Ringelstein v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1893) 21 S. W. 634, holding that an instruction that a city is responsible for any negligence in cleaning its ditches is too general, and does not limit the city's responsibility for such negligence to injuries resulting directly or proximately therefrom), in respect to a defective or obstructed street or sidewalk (Colorado Springs v. May, 20 Colo. App. 204, 77 Pac. 1093; Rock Island v. Starkey, 189 Ill. 515, 59 N. E. 971 [reversing 91 Ill. App. 592]; Hofacre v. Monticello, 128 Iowa 239, 103 N. An instruction need not lay down a comparison as to the duty of the city with respect to one street and its duty as to another street, the question for the jury being the city's duty to the street at the place of the accident. Ney v. Troy, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 679 [affirmed in 123 N. Y. 628, 25 N. E. 952].

An instruction that negligence means a want or lack of ordinary care and prudence, and that ordinary care and prudence is such care and prudence as is exercised by the mass of mankind in their own daily affairs, without qualification, or limiting it to the same or similar circumstances to those in issue, is error, and such error is not cured by afterward correctly instructing the jury. Rhyner v. Menasha, 107 Wis. 201, 83 N. W. 303.

An instruction that the city is not an insurer of the safety of persons traveling upon its sidewalks accompanied by the true rule as to the city's liability is not impertinent and uncalled for. Lindsay v. Des Moines, 74 Iowa 111, 37 N. W. 9; Gilson v. Cadillac, 134 Mich. 189, 95 N. W. 1084; Meisner v. Dillon, 29 Mont. 116, 74 Pac. 130.

W. 303 (holding that the instruction should be so framed as to permit the jury to find whether under all the facts and circumstances of the case the conditions were such as to bring constructive notice home to defendant).

An instruction that notice to a councilman was notice to the council is not an answer to a request to charge that notice to a council member was notice to the municipality. Frazier v. Butler Borough, 172 Pa. St. 407, 33 Atl. 691, 51 Am. St. Rep. 739.

Compare Boyd v. Ames, 110 Iowa 749, 82 N. W. 774.

An instruction relating solely to the measure of damages, and the elements thereof, in the event defendant is found guilty of negligence, need not refer to the care exercised by plaintiff nor need it include the hypothesis that plaintiff used due care and diligence to be cured of his injuries, that being a matter in mitigation of damages and the subject of a proper instruction for defendant. Sheridan v. Hibbard, 119 Ill. 307, 9 N. E. 901 [affirming 19 Ill. App. 421].

An instruction which substitutes the judgment of the jury as to what would be a fit improvement of a street for that of the city council is erroneous. Clay City v. Abner, 82 S. W. 276, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 602.

Special charges, requested by counsel, should be complete and state the law correctly and clearly within themselves. Thus, a charge that it is "a question of fact for the jury to determine, from the evidence, whether the city had either actual or constructive notice of the defect, and if the jury find that the city did not have such notice, the plaintiff" could not recover, without defining constructive notice, and following a general charge, which contained no definition of constructive notice, might have misled the jury and should not have been given, although, standing alone, it does not constitute reversible error. Ohliger v. Toledo, 20 Ohio Cir. Ct. 142, 10 Ohio Cir. Dec. 762.

Instructions held misleading: That if plaintiff was injured on the street by being pressed in a crowd of people or by horses or carriages running against her, or in any other way than by a defect in a sidewalk, she cannot recover, in the absence of testimony tending to show that the injury was received in another way than by a defective sidewalk. *Smalley v. Illustrations.—Thus an instruction as to negligent construction of a sidewalk or street is erroneous where such negligence is not charged, or there is no evidence thereof. Driscoll v. Ansonia, 73 Conn. 743, 47 Atl. 718; Barce v. Shenandoah, 106 Iowa 426, 76 N. W. 747; Cressy v. Postville, 59 Iowa 62, 12 N. W. 757. So where negligent construction is the matter in issue an instruction as to negligence in repairing is erroneous. Achey v. Marion, 126 Iowa 47, 101 N. W. 435. So where plaintiff is entitled to recover on either of two counts, one negligent construction and the other negligence in repairing, an instruction that the city is not liable unless the accident was caused by a loose plank and the city had notice of the defect ted or proved;²⁹ otherwise the instruction is erroneous, even though as an abstract proposition it be a correct statement of the law.³⁰ It is not erroneous to omit proper words of instruction or definition where there is no evidence to require them;³¹ nor to give instructions upon the basis of correct and pertinent legal presumptions.³² An immaterial variance between pleading or proof and instructions does not justify reversal.³³

d. Construction. The instructions are to be construed as a whole, and the fact that one portion considered separately might be open to objection does not constitute error if the charge is correct in its entirety.³⁴ A requested instruction is properly refused. Dallas v. Jones, 93 Tex. 38, 49 S. W. 577, 53 S. W. 377. An instruction as to the liability of one who leaves a dangerous hole in a sidewalk is irrelevant in an action against the city for such injury. Lincoln v. Power, 151 U. S. 436, 14 S. Ct. 387, 38 L. ed. 224. Where there was no allegation of defective construction of a sidewalk, it is proper for the court to instruct, where there has been some evidence of defective construction, that there is no evidence of such fact, and thus confine the jury's attention to the issues made by the pleading. Womach v. St. Joseph, 168 Mo. 236, 67 S. W. 588.

Instructions held proper or erroneously refused under the evidence: As to the fact that if lights were necessary and there were none, the absence would be one of the elements in determining whether the barrier was a defect or not. Powers v. Boston, 154 Mass. 60, 27 N. E. 995. As to the effect of rain and storms in streets. Beattie v. Detroit, 137 Mich. 319, 100 N. W. 574. As to the fact of constructive notice. *Citizens' St. R. exonerated of a city from liability for extraordinary rainfalls. Louisville v. Gimpell, 59 S. W. 1096, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1110. As to the fact of latent defects. Drake v. Kansas City, 190 Mo. 370, 88 S. W. 689, 109 Am. St. Rep. 759. As to the duty to keep the entire width of the street in repair. Lincoln v. Gillilan, 18 Nebr. 114, 24 N. W. 444.

A request for an unqualified instruction that if certain facts are found plaintiff is entitled to recover must be disregarded where there is evidence of other facts having some tendency to show negligence on the part of plaintiff and want of it on the part of defendant. Hyde v. Swanton, 72 Vt. 242, 47 Atl. 790.

In an action for the death of a fireman caused by the overturning of a hose cart on account of defects in a street, an instruction precluding a recovery if the accident was due to the driver's negligence is erroneous, where there is no evidence that the driver's negligence was the sole cause of the accident. *Brabon v. need not ordinarily be given in its exact language; it is sufficient if it is covered in substance by the instructions as given;⁵⁵ nor is it error to refuse a requested instruction which is covered in substance by other instructions given,⁵⁶ or to refuse to charge upon an immaterial matter;⁵⁷ but it is error to refuse an instruction which is applicable to the case on a material matter if it is not substantially covered by other instructions.⁵⁸ An erroneous instruction which positively lays down a rule directly in conflict with the rule laid down in a correct instruction is not cured by the latter, where it is impossible to say which instruction the jury followed.³⁹

e. Contributory Negligence. The above general rules apply to instructions on the questions of plaintiff's contributory negligence or freedom therefrom.⁴⁰ Such instructions should be clear, concise, and accurate, in stating and defining the facts and issue of contributory negligence,⁴¹ as in respect to the degree of care required of plaintiff under the circumstances existing at the time and place of the accident,⁴² stating to the jury what matters may be considered by it in determining such issue,⁴³ and the law applicable to the case.⁴⁴ Such instructions

Where the issue of plaintiff's intoxication is submitted to the jury, defendant is entitled to an instruction that if plaintiff was intoxicated such intoxication is evidence from which the jury may infer that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, the instruction being requested in conjunction with another connecting such intoxication with must not be confusing, misleading,⁴⁵ or argumentative;⁴⁶ must conform and be confined to the issues and evidence in the case;⁴⁷ and must not invade the province of the jury by assuming or determining the existence or non-existence of facts, or by deciding that they do or do not establish reasonable care or freedom therefrom,⁴⁸ nor omit or refuse to charge thereon,⁴⁹ unless the evidence is sufficient to justify the withdrawal of such issue from the jury.⁵⁰ A formal or technical error in one instruction on such question may be corrected in another part of the instructions;⁵¹ and a requested instruction is sufficiently complied with if it is substantially covered by the instructions as given.⁵²

11. VERDICT, FINDINGS, AND JUDGMENT — a. In General. The rules applicable to verdicts and findings in civil actions generally⁵³ govern general⁵⁴ and special⁵⁵ verdict and findings in actions against a municipality for tort. Thus, in order to sustain a judgment in such cases, the verdict or findings must be definite and unambiguous as to all material facts;⁵⁶ and must be supported by the evidence,⁵⁷ and responsive to the issues or instructions;⁵⁸ and if the verdict or findings are,

Washington.—Reed v. Spokane, 21 Wash. 218, 57 Pac. 803.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1761.

53. See, generally, TRIAL.

54. See cases cited infra, this and following notes.

A verdict cures all formal defects.—Chicago v. Selz, 202 Ill. 545, 67 N. E. 386 [affirming 104 Ill. App. 376].

Verdict should be for that party in whose favor is the preponderance or greater weight of evidence. Colborn v. Wilmington, 4 Pennw. (Del.) 443, 56 Atl. 605.

55. See Hoyt v. Danbury, 69 Conn. 341, 37 Atl. 1051, holding that where there was no notice that the defect was caused by snow, as is required by Gen. St. § 2673, defendant was entitled to an explicit finding, if one were possible, as to whether it was the snow that caused the accident.

A contractor bound to keep in repair, who is called in to defend, may not demand a special finding that the accident was caused by municipal negligence as to construction. Harvey v. Chester, 211 Pa. St. 563, 61 Atl. 118.

Where the element of responsible causation appears as a matter of law from the evidence and other facts found, a special finding on the question of proximate cause is not necessary. Hallum v. Omro, 122 Wis. 337, 99 N. W. 1051.

Admissions of counsel on the trial obviate the necessity of findings of the same fact. Henderson v. Kansas City, 177 Mo. 477, 76 S. W. 1045.

An unqualified statement in a finding that a certain thing was the probable cause of the accident imports that it was in fact the cause. Hoyt v. Danbury, 69 Conn. 341, 37 Atl. 1051, holding that a finding that plaintiff slipped on a sidewalk and was unable to save himself from falling "probably because of snow upon said stone" imports that the snow was the probable cause of the accident.

56. Goshen v. Alford, 154 Ind. 58, 55 N. E. 27; McQueen v. Elkhart, 14 Ind. App. 671, 43 N. E. 460 (holding that a finding that plaintiff "walked with ordinary care and at her ordinary gait" is not sufficient to warrant the court in holding that she was free from contributory negligence); Gaston v. Bailey, 14 Ind. App. 581, 43 N. E. 254 (facts found insufficient to sustain judgment against abutting owner); Bluffton v. McAfee, 12 Ind. App. 490, 40 N. E. 549 (holding that, where the only fact found showing the care exercised by plaintiff, who was injured in the daytime by reason of a defect in a sidewalk known and visible, was that at the time of the accident she "was walking slowly," the special finding was insufficient to support a judgment in her favor); Elwood v. Carpenter, 12 Ind. App. 459, 40 N. E. 548; Reed v. Madison, 85 Wis. 667, 56 N. W. 182; Raymond v. Keseberg, 84 Wis. 302, 54 N. W. 612, 19 L. R. A. 643; Klatt v. Milwaukee, 53 Wis. 196, 10 N. W. 162, 40 Am. Rep. 759.

A special verdict in the disjunctive on a material point, as that the street was "in a defective or dangerous condition or out of repair," without any other fact to support it, fails to show actionable negligence on the part of the city, and is fatally defective. Rhyner v. Menasha, 107 Wis. 201, 83 N. W. 303.

A special finding that defendant had no notice of the defective condition of the walk before the time of the accident negatives the existence of constructive as well as actual notice, and entitles defendant to judgment. Bergvin v. Chippewa Falls, 82 Wis. 505, 52 N. W. 588.

To authorize a verdict for injuries sustained by contact with a wire in a street, the jury must find that the falling of the wire rendered travel dangerous to pedestrians using the same with ordinary care, that plaintiff was injured by contact with the wire while using the street with such care, and that the dangerous obstruction of the street by the fallen wire was known, or by the exercise of ordinary care could have been known, to defendants city and telephone company in time to have enabled them to remove the wire before the injury. West Kentucky Tel. Co. v. Pbaris, 78 S. W. 917, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1838.

57. Hoyt v. Danbury, 69 Conn. 341, 37 Atl. 1051 (holding, however, that it is not necessary that the triers should be free from all reasonable doubt as to the probable conclusions to be drawn from the evidence, but it is enough if the judgment rests upon a probability so strong as to induce a reasonable belief in an impartial mind); Bluffton v. McAfee, 23 Ind. App. 112, 53 N. E. 1058 (holding that the fact that a pedestrian knew of a defect in a sidewalk a month before her injury is not inconsistent with a finding that she had no knowledge of it when injured); Nicholas v. Peck, 20 R. I. 533, 40 Atl. 418, 21 R. I. 404, 43 Atl. 1038.

58. Galveston v. Hemmis, 72 Tex. 558, 11 S. W. 29, 13 Am. St. Rep. 828, holding a verdict for plaintiff not in violation of an instruction that if the jury believe plaintiff had equal means of knowing the condi-

as to a substantial matter, inexplicit or defective,⁵⁹ or unsupported by the proof,⁶⁰ a verdict thereon may be set aside and a new trial granted.⁶¹ Nor can a judgment be based upon inconsistent findings,⁶² except where the inconsistency is an immaterial one.⁶³

b. General Verdict and Special Findings. A general verdict or finding carries with it all pertinent and necessary averments and implications and warrants judgment thereon,⁶⁴ unless it is in irreconcilable conflict with some adverse special finding on a material point, in which case the special finding controls, and judgment may be entered thereon notwithstanding the general verdict;⁶⁵ and this antagonism must be apparent upon the face of the record before the court can be called upon to direct judgment in favor of the party against whom a general verdict has been rendered.⁶⁶ But every reasonable presumption should be indulged against the special findings and in support of the general verdict, and if the general verdict thus aided is not in irreconcilable conflict with the findings it must stand;⁶⁷ and nothing will be presumed in support of the special findings as against the general verdict.⁶⁸

c. Special Interrogatories. Special interrogatories in an action in tort against a municipality are governed by the rules applicable to such questions in civil actions generally.⁶⁹ The submission of such interrogatories is largely within the tion of the sidewalk where he was injured as defendant and the defect was patent, open, and visible, they should find for defendant. Drake v. Seattle, 30 Wash. 81, 70 Pac. 231, 94 Am. St. Rep. 844.

Notice.—A special verdict is not defective in failing to find whether notice of an accident was served upon the city where only the sufficiency of the notice and not its service is questioned. Salzer v. Milwaukee, 97 Wis. 471, 73 N. W. 20.

59. Munley v. Scranton, 4 Pa. Dist. 117; Salzer v. Milwaukee, 97 Wis. 471, 73 N. W. 20.

60. Hutchings v. Sullivan, 90 Me. 131, 37 Atl. 883; Parris v. Green Island, 14 N. Y. Suppl. 703 (holding that the evidence on contributory negligence being strong and clear and the jury having failed to take the same into consideration and give it due weight, the court should set aside the verdict of the jury and grant a new trial); Kolb v. Knoxville, 111 Tenn. 311, 76 S. W. 823.

A verdict will not be set aside merely because the jury fail to find certain facts on undisputed evidence where such facts, if found, would not have changed the result. Ft. Wayne v. Durnell, 13 Ind. App. 669, 42 N. E. 242.

61. Parris v. Green Island, 14 N. Y. Suppl. 703; Salzer v. Milwaukee, 97 Wis. 471, 73 N. W. 20.

62. Benson v. Madison, 101 Wis. 312, 77 N. W. 161 (holding that findings that the apron over a gutter was not in place at the time of the accident and that its absence was not through any fault or neglect of the contractor are inconsistent where there is no evidence that it had been removed after the contractor had put it in place as testified by him); Raymond v. Keseberg, 84 Wis. 302, 54 N. W. 612, 19 L. R. A. 643.

63. Robinson v. Washburn, 81 Wis. 404, 51 N. W. 578, holding that, where certain findings amounted to a general verdict for defendant, an inconsistency between a finding that plaintiff was injured by reason of the defect and one that plaintiff suffered no damage therefrom is immaterial.

64. Wood v. Danbury, 72 Conn. 69, 43 Atl. 554; South Bend v. Turner, 156 Ind. 418, 60 N. E. 271, 83 Am. St. Rep. 200, 54 L. R. A. 396; Lyman v. Green Bay, 91 Wis. 488, 65 N. W. 167; McDonald v. Ashland, 78 Wis. 251, 47 N. W. 434.

65. Smith v. McCarthy, 33 Ill. App. 176 (holding a special finding, in an action for injuries caused by the giving way of a guard-rail of a basement area, that plaintiff was leaning against the rail, not inconsistent with a general verdict for plaintiff); South Bend v. Turner, 156 Ind. 418, 60 N. E. 271, 83 Am. St. Rep. 200, 54 L. R. A. 396; Buscher v. Lafayette, 8 Ind. App. 590, 36 N. E. 371; Vance v. Franklin, 4 Ind. App. 515, 30 N. E. 149.

Thacker*, 2 Ind. App. 370, 28 N. E. 559, holding a special finding that plaintiff knew of the defect six or eight months before the accident not inconsistent with a general verdict for plaintiff.

68. Mishawaka v. Kirby, 32 Ind. App. 233, 69 N. E. 481; Bluffton v. McAfee, 23 Ind. App. 112, 53 N. E. 1058; Vance v. Franklin, 4 Ind. App. 515, 30 N. E. 149.

69. See Davenport v. Ruckman, 37 N. Y. 568, 5 Transcr. App. 254 (holding that where plaintiff was partially blind the question whether it was so imprudent for her to go into the street unattended in her then con-discretion of the court,⁷⁰ and it need not submit them in the form in which they are requested, if they are substantially and intelligently submitted in other forms;⁷¹ and may refuse to submit them at all, if they are unsupported by the evidence,⁷² or are upon immaterial matters;⁷³ or where they are informal, irrelevant, insufficient, or likely to mislead the jury.⁷⁴ But it is error to refuse such interrogatories, in the proper form upon material matters.⁷⁵

d. Verdict Against Joint Defendants. A verdict in an action against a municipality and the person causing the defect or obstruction may, if the evidence justifies it, be for or against both defendants or against one and in favor of the other;⁷⁶ and in case the verdict is against the city and in favor of a co-defendant, the city cannot move for a new trial on the ground that the verdict ought to have been against the co-defendant also, unless it makes the co-defendant a party to the motion.⁷⁷ But where the municipal liability depends upon negligence or other tort primarily chargeable to the other defendant, judgment cannot be entered on a verdict finding the city guilty, but the other defendant not guilty.⁷⁸ The same rules as to consistency and sufficiency of findings obtain in joint as in several actions.⁷⁹

e. Judgment. A judgment against a municipality for tort is regulated by the rules governing judgments generally.⁸⁰

12. DAMAGES — a. In General. In accordance with the rules governing damages generally,⁸¹ the measure of damages in an action in tort against a municipality is ordinarily the actual loss sustained by plaintiff,⁸² although if the evidence as to the actual loss is not clear, or the loss is trivial, but a legal right has been invaded, nominal damages may be allowed.⁸³ The fixing of such damages is ordinarily within the discretion of the jury,⁸⁴ which should not be interfered with dition of sight as to prevent her recovering compensation for any injury she might sustain from the negligence of others while passing along the street was proper to be submitted to the jury on the question of her contributory negligence); Reed v. Madison, 85 Wis. 667, 56 N. W. 182. And see, generally, TRIAL.

To combine two interrogatories in one so that a negative answer would inform no one what the conclusion of the jury was upon them separately, or whether any unanimous conclusion at all was reached upon the separate question, is prejudicial error. Peake v. Superior, 106 Wis. 403, 82 N. W. 306.

70. Smith v. Pella, 86 Iowa 236, 53 N. W. 226, holding that where the issue was whether defendant was negligent as to the construction of a sidewalk, the court properly submitted an interrogatory as to whether the sidewalk in question was originally constructed in a safe and proper manner.

by the court except in cases of a palpable abuse of such discretion.⁸⁵ The amount awarded must not be excessive.⁸⁶

b. Injuries to Property—(i) IN GENERAL. As a general rule the measure of damages for an injury to or loss of property by a municipal tort is compensation for the actual loss sustained thereby.⁸⁷ This compensation in the case of destruction of personal property is the value of the property at the time it was destroyed.⁸⁸ In case of injury to real property, the measure of damages ordinarily is the difference in its value before and after the injury,⁸⁹ which in some cases is measured by the difference in the rental value of the property before and after the injury;⁹⁰ and in other cases by the cost or expense of repairing or restoring Missouri.—Clay v. Board, 85 Mo. App. 237.

Pennsylvania.—McCartney v. Philadelphia, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 257 (holding that in an action for injury caused by flowage, the actual damage sustained is the measure of damages, and not the difference in value between the market value before and after the injury); Peach v. Scranton, 5 Lack. Leg. N. 25.

Texas.—Ostrom v. San Antonio, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 683, 77 S. W. 829.

Washington.—Jones v. Seattle, 23 Wash. 753, 63 Pac. 553.

Where damages are claimed for using plaintiff's lands as a dumping ground, it should be assumed that such damages will not be permanent, since it may be abated by the removal of the deposit or by the action of the elements; and the measure of damages is the loss of the rental value up to the time of trial and such other accrued special damages as may be shown, including the necessary cost of removing the deposit. San Antonio v. Mackey, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 210, 36 S. W. 760.

Where a drainage ditch becomes, through the negligence of the municipality, the depository of dead animals and so choked that water overflows the premises of one residing near by, the municipality is liable only for damages to the property and not for physician's bills, medicines, increase in expense of plaintiff's family, or his loss of time, which results from illness caused by the condition of the drain. Williams v. Greenville, 130 N. C. 93, 40 S. E. 977, 39 Am. St. Rep. 860, 57 L. R. A. 207.

Pennsylvania.—McCartney v. Philadelphia, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 257.

Value as dwelling place.—In an action for constructing sewers so as to cause water to flow and collect on plaintiff's premises, if plaintiff's property is of less value as a dwelling place for herself and family because of the flow of water on it, and the overflow was caused by defendant's wrong, the jury may assess to her the difference to her in the value of the lot as a dwelling place so overflowed, and its value as a dwelling place if not overflowed. Eufaula v. Simmons, 86 Ala. 515, 6 So. 47.

the property to its former state,⁹¹ unless the expense thereof exceeds the entire value of the property, in which case the value of the property is the limit of the measure of damages.⁹² In determining the measure of damages to real property the jury may consider any circumstance which has an elemental bearing on the question,⁹³ including the cost of repairing or restoring the property,⁹⁴ the permanency of injury,⁹⁵ and, in the case of injuries by flowage, the effect thereof upon the health of plaintiff and his family and upon others may be considered as bearing upon the rental value of the property, but not for the purpose of finding damages by reason of such illness;⁹⁶ and they should deduct such damages as are the result of plaintiff's failure to exercise ordinary care to prevent damages,⁹⁷ or such as are the result of separate torts of other persons or corporations.⁹⁸ But the jury can consider no element not alleged.⁹⁹ Prospective damages should not be allowed where the injury is remediable.¹

(n) INJURIES BY MOB. Ordinarily the measure of damages for injury to property by mob violence is the full amount of the damages sustained,² although Maryland.—Frostburg v. Hitchins, 99 Md. 617, 59 Atl. 49, holding that in an action for unlawfully tearing down plaintiff's building alleged to be a nuisance, a verbal agreement between the city's attorney and counsel for the property-owner to the effect that nothing further should be done in the matter until after the decision of a pending cause between other parties involving similar principles, and the fact of its breach, may be considered by the jury in ascertaining the damages.

New York.—Wing v. Rochester, 9 N. Y. St. 473.

Wisconsin.—Barden v. Portage, 79 Wis. 126, 48 N. W. 210.

Enhancement.—Where plaintiff sued a city for damage caused by the flow of sewage along the border of his land, it was error to admit testimony on the part of defendant to show that the sewage enhanced the value of land through which it flowed, for agricultural purposes, where the sewage did not flow on plaintiff's land, and it was not possible for him to use it. *Smith v. under some statutes only a fractional part of the actual value of the property at the time of its destruction can be recovered.³

e. Personal Injuries. Compensation for the actual injury sustained is ordinarily the measure of damages for personal injuries suffered by reason of a municipal tort,⁴ including the loss of time,⁵ and expenses incurred in effecting a cure;⁶ the pain and suffering undergone,⁷ except such as results from plaintiff's want of ordinary care in being restored;⁸ and in case of permanent injury including prospective as well as present or past damages,⁹ especially where the injury causes a disability for further exertion, and consequent pecuniary loss.¹⁰ Under some statutes the measure of damages cannot be greater than a specified sum.¹¹ The fact of plaintiff's misconduct in inducing a mob to violence may be considered in mitigation of damages claimed by him for injuries received by reason of such mob.¹²

d. Exemplary Damages. In accordance with the rules governing damages generally,¹³ punitive, exemplary, or vindictive damages, as they are variously termed, can be recovered against a municipality only where the injury was wilfully or maliciously inflicted,¹⁴ unless authorized by statute.¹⁵

e. Interest. In some cases interest may be allowed on a claim for damages, as an element thereof.¹⁶

f. Dependent on Notice of Claim. The amount of plaintiff's recovery is not limited to the amount demanded by him in the notice or presentment of his claim; but he may recover all damages sustained, although they exceed such amount.¹⁷ But it has been held that the recovery must be limited to the damages sustained at the time of the presentation of the claim and that damages occurring subsequent to such presentation cannot be recovered.¹⁸

13. COSTS.¹⁹ In the absence of statutory provision otherwise, a recovery of damages against a municipality also entitles plaintiff to have his costs taxed against defendant as in other civil cases.²⁰ Under some statutes, however, in order that plaintiff may be entitled to costs, he must have duly presented his claim to the proper municipal authorities at the time and in the manner prescribed by the statute.²¹ But a statute or ordinance requiring such presentation as a condition to recovering costs in an action on a claim ex contractu does not apply to claims ex delicto, and the successful party in an action upon the latter sort of claims is entitled to his costs notwithstanding he has not presented his claim in the manner prescribed for the former kind of claim.²²

Under Kan. Gen. St. (1889) p. 826, it is not necessary, in order to enable a claimant to recover costs in a subsequent action, that, in presenting a bill to a city council for damages for injuries received, his claim should specify the various elements of damage. *Salina v. 23. See, generally, APPEAL AND ERROR.

In passing upon the question of variance between the pleadings and proofs the supreme court does not weigh the evidence, and the objection of variance must be overruled if there is any evidence in the record, when taken as true, together with all inferences to be legitimately drawn therefrom, fairly tending to sustain the averments of the pleading. Cicero v. Bartelme, 212 Ill. 256, 72 N. E. 437.

Thus as a general rule the appellate court will review only such questions or objections as are properly raised and saved for review in the lower court,²⁴ or on the application for a new trial,²⁵ except where they are apparent on the face of the record.²⁶ Presumptions are indulged or not, on appeals in such actions, the same as in appeals in other civil actions.²⁷ An abutting owner who is liable over and who is brought in to defend or has appeared and defended may appeal from a judgment against a municipality, even after it has paid and satisfied the judgment.²⁸ So a municipality held liable for tort may on appeal attack a verdict in favor of a co-defendant primarily liable.²⁹

b. Sufficiency of Verdict and Findings. Ordinarily the appellate court will not disturb a verdict or finding in the lower court on a question of fact if there is any evidence to sustain it.³⁰ But it will reverse a verdict and judgment which is

c. Harmless Error. A judgment will not be reversed for an error in the lower court which resulted in no prejudice to the party seeking to take advantage of it,³⁴ as for harmless error in the admission or exclusion of evidence,³⁵ or the giving or refusing of instructions.³⁶ there is evidence to support it, the judgment of the district court in favor of defendant will not be disturbed.

Remarks of the trial court in directing a verdict in favor of one joint defendant, a gas company, giving reasons therefor, are not improper or prejudicial to defendant city where plaintiff has shown a clear right to recover against either the company or the city, and the court has been careful not to speak of the merits of the case against the city. *Grundy v. The admission of evidence of the defective condition of a sidewalk after an accident was not prejudicial error, when the evidence was merely cumulative of testimony describing the walk at the time of the accident. Bell v. Spokane, 30 Wash. 508, 70 Pac. 31.

The admission of evidence of plaintiff's mental anguish caused by injury to his wife, if error, is harmless, where the court properly instructed the jury what to consider in rendering their verdict, and the amount thereof is not excessive. Dallas v. Jones, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 54 S. W. 606.

The exclusion of evidence relating solely to the measure of damages is not error, where the jury finds plaintiff not entitled to recover anything after clear proof of damage. Lush v. Parkersburg, 127 Iowa 701, 101 N. W. 336.

The admission of an ordinance requiring owners and occupants of lands and buildings to keep their sidewalks clear, being material on plaintiff's behalf, is not prejudicial to defendant, in an action against a municipality for injuries by reason of an accumulation of ice and snow on a sidewalk. *Pomfrey v. 36. Colorado.—Colorado Springs v. Floyd, 19 Colo. App. 167, 73 Pac. 1092 (holding that an instruction that it was the duty of the city to "see that its streets were in a safe condition for travel" is harmless where the evidence would have justified the court in directing a verdict for plaintiff and submitting only the question of damages); Denver v. Moewes, 15 Colo. App. 28, 60 Pac. 986.

XV. FISCAL MANAGEMENT, DEBT, SECURITIES, AND TAXATION.

A. Power to Incur Debt and Expenditure — 1. IN GENERAL — a. Nature and Scope of Power. The officers of a municipal corporation cannot create obligations binding on the corporation, unless the power to do so is either expressly granted in the charter of the corporation or necessarily or rationally implied from the powers that are expressly granted, or is essential to the objects for which the corporation was created.³⁷ And where authority is expressly delegated to a municipality to raise and apply money for a special purpose, such authority must be strictly construed.³⁸ But the courts cannot generally determine what municipal expenditures are necessary; if a given expenditure is within charter authorization, and therefore, abstractly considered, a legitimate municipal charge, the courts cannot pass upon the advisability or wisdom of its being incurred. That is a matter within the discretion of the municipal authorities, except, it may be, that abuse of the discretion would be controlled, or, if bad faith attended its exercise, the courts would intervene.³⁹

b. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions. The legislature may by charter or general law confer upon or withhold from municipal corporations any fiscal power,⁴⁰ within constitutional limitations,⁴¹ and may prescribe the manner

Illinois.—Aledo v. Honeyman, 208 Ill. 415, 70 N. E. 338; Wheaton v. Hadley, 131 Ill. 640, 23 N. E. 422 [affirming 30 Ill. App. 564], holding that the fact that an erroneous instruction is given or a proper one erroneously refused is not reversible error where the evidence fully sustains the judgment.

Iowa.—Correll v. Cedar Rapids, 110 Iowa 333, 81 N. W. 724; Bailey v. Centerville, 108 Iowa 20, 78 N. W. 831; Munger v. Waterloo, 83 Iowa 559, 49 N. W. 1028, holding that a reference in an instruction to a defect as the "dangerous character of the walk" is not a prejudicial error where under the findings of the jury the defect was of a dangerous character.

Kansas.—Erie v. Phelps, 56 Kan. 135, 42 Pac. 336, holding an instruction that notice to the city marshal was notice to the city is harmless where it appears that the marshal acted also as street commissioner and was directed by the mayor to keep the streets in condition.

Kentucky.—Louisville v. Keher, 117 Ky. 841, 79 S. W. 270, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 2003.

Missouri.—Campbell v. Stanberry, 105 Mo. App. 56, 78 S. W. 292, holding that any error in an instruction requiring a city both to place a guard-rail or barricade about a street excavation and to place lights along its sides is harmless where there is no evidence that either precaution was taken; Ross v. Kansas City, 48 Mo. App. 440.

New York.—Bishop v. Goshen, 120 N. Y. 337, 24 N. E. 720; Hawley v. Gloversville, 4 N. Y. App. Div. 343, 38 N. Y. Where the record shows that the damages awarded were strictly compensatory, this court will not inquire into the correctness of charges as to the right to recover punitive damages, since, if erroneous, they could not have injured defendant, who is the appellant. Eufaula v. Simmons, 86 Ala. 515, 6 So. 47.

An instruction that the burden of proof was on plaintiff, and that it was for her to prove her case by a preponderance of the evidence, yet "the degree of preponderance is not material," was not prejudicial by reason of the use of the words quoted. Aledo v. Honeyman, 208 Ill. 415, 70 N. E. 338.

Michigan.—Callam v. Saginaw, 50 Mich. 7, 14 N. W. 677, holding that there is no constitutional objection to an act authorizing a city to pay the entire cost of the erection of a county court-house, to be repaid by the county on the removal of the county-seat, and conditions of its exercise.⁴² The legislature, cannot, however, force a municipality to repudiate existing obligations lawfully incurred.⁴³ The validity and effect of such legislation is to be determined by the application of the general rules as to the construction of statutes.⁴⁴ What is meant by the phrase "ordinary"⁴⁵ or "necessary"⁴⁶ expenses, which frequently occurs in statutes, as to municipal indebtedness,⁴⁷ has been discussed in several cases. Municipal indebtedness is not included within the constitutional phrase "debt or liability of the state."⁴⁸

c. Purposes of Appropriation—(1) IN GENERAL. Municipal funds may be appropriated to any public purpose,⁴⁹ within the scope of charter powers;⁵⁰ but ultra vires appropriations are invalid.⁵¹

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1815. See also supra, IX.

Schools.—In Alabama the Greenville city charter conferred no authority on the city in respect to its public schools. The act of Feb. 25, 1887 (Acts (1886-1887), p. 629) authorized the city to issue bonds for the purpose of purchasing school lots, erecting school buildings, and furnishing the same, the proceeds of the bonds to be set aside for the exclusive benefit of the schools and used for that purpose, and the act of Feb. 28, 1887 (Acts (1886-1887), p. 1009) constituted the city of Greenville a separate school-district and provided for the management of the public schools therein. It was held that the city of Greenville had no authority to pledge its general revenues for the payment of furniture purchased to fit up a school, and that a vote executed by the city for such purpose was unenforceable. A. 180, holding that, under a constitutional provision that no county, city, or town, or other municipal corporation, shall appropriate money or loan its credit to any corporation, institution, or individual, the common council has no power to appropriate money to aid the building of a court-house in such municipality.

California.—Taylor v. Mott, 123 Cal. 497, 56 Pac. 256; Heslep v. Sacramento, 2 Cal. 580.

Louisiana.—State v. New Orleans, 50 La. Ann. 880, 24 So. 666.

Massachusetts.—Under Gen. St. c. 24, it was held that the vote of a town having a fire department duly established to appropriate a certain sum for the purpose of paying the members of a private organization, who had not been appointed engine-men under section 14 or 15, for services rendered to the town as engine-men for the preceding year, was ultra vires and void. Greenough v. Wakefield, 127 Mass. 275.

Minnesota.—Castner v. Minneapolis, 92 Minn. 84, 99 N. W. 361, holding that the reimbursement by a city council, of a defeated candidate for a public office, for expenses incurred in conducting an election contest, is an expenditure of public funds for a private purpose and therefore illegal.

Missouri.—State v. Ziegenhein, 144 Mo. 283, 45 S. W. 1099, 66 Am. St. Rep. 420, holding that a statute requiring a city to provide pensions for policemen and their families is unconstitutional.

New York.—People v. Phillips, 88 N. Y. App. Div. 560, 85 N. Y. Suppl. 200 (holding that a city cannot appropriate money to pay damages to an abutting landowner who did not acquire title until the change of grade causing the damages had been completed); Mahon v. New York Bd. of Education, 68 N. Y. App. Div. 154, 74 N. Y. Suppl. 172 (holding that an act to pension teachers who have already retired is unconstitutional); Matter of Fallon, 28 Misc. 748, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 849 (holding that an act providing for the payment of expenses of public officials wrongfully subjected to removal proceedings is unconstitutional); In re Jensen, 28 Misc. 378, 59 N. Y. (iv) REWARDS FOR CRIMINALS. It is generally held that a municipality has no authority to appropriate money to the payment of rewards for the apprehension of criminals.⁶⁶

2. MUNICIPAL PURPOSES—a. In General. Municipal purposes for which an indebtedness may be incurred or for which expenditures may be made have been held to include the lighting of streets and public places,⁶⁷ the development of natural municipal resources for manufacturing purposes,⁶⁸ the employment of counsel for the benefit of the municipality,⁶⁹ the establishing and conducting of liquor dispen-prosecution is unconstitutional); Mercer v. Floyd, 24 Misc. 164, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 433 (holding that a statute is invalid which provides for the relief of tax-collectors who have lost tax moneys collected by them, through the failure of a national bank).

Canada.—The only powers a public corporation can exercise are those expressly given, or, by implication, those necessary to carry the former into effect. No power to pay newspaper reporters their contingent expenses is expressly, or by necessary implication, to be found in the charter of the city of Montreal, and a resolution of the city council to that effect is ultra vires, null and void. *Tremblay v. But compare Daniel v. Memphis, 11 Humphr. (Tenn.) 582, holding that a city cannot employ corporate funds to pay for services in a suit to destroy itself.

Suits in which municipality is without interest.—A municipality cannot pay for the saries,⁷⁰ operating gas works,⁷¹ establishing waterworks,⁷² building a bridge,⁷³ maintaining a police force,⁷⁴ providing for a police pension fund,⁷⁵ having surveys for a ship canal made,⁷⁶ purchasing necessary real estate,⁷⁷ erecting a memorial arch to soldiers and sailors,⁷⁸ erecting a market house,⁷⁹ and building a town house.⁸⁰ But erecting a grand army hall,⁸¹ encouraging the establishment of a private manufacturing enterprise,⁸² and having scrip engraved⁸³ have been held to be purposes for which indebtedness may not be incurred. It has been held that the power to incur indebtedness for municipal buildings is not to be implied from the duty to erect them.⁸⁴

b. Indebtedness Incurred Before Incorporation. Unless expressly authorized by legislation, a municipality has no authority to appropriate money for the payment of expenses incurred by individuals, prior to its corporate existence, in procuring the passage of its charter.⁸⁵ The legislature, however, may impose on a municipal corporation debts contracted by it before it was lawfully incorporated,⁸⁶ and may, when granting a new charter to, and changing the name of, a municipality, expressly provide for the payment of liabilities previously incurred.⁸⁷

c. Beyond Corporate Limits. The power of a municipality to make expenditures for corporate purposes is not limited to expenditures within its corporate limits.⁸⁸

d. Fire Apparatus. A municipality under its general charter powers has authority to provide the means necessary for the extinguishment of fires, and services of attorneys employed in suits in which it has no interest. Peck v. Spencer, 26 Fla. 23, 7 So. 642; *Smith v. Suit to obtain city property.—A city corporation may be compelled to pay the expenses incurred by one of its officers by the employment of his own counsel in a contest to gain the possession of its property, in the result of which it is interested. Stilwell v. New York, 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 376.

3. LIMITATION OF AMOUNT— a. In General. Constitutional limitations upon the amount of municipal indebtedness are mandatory,⁹¹ and so likewise are some statutory limitations;⁹² but others are directory only,⁹³ acting as inhibitions upon officers, but not as absolute restrictions upon the corporation.⁹⁴ Constitutional limitations restrict both statutes and ordinances,⁹⁵ and a violation thereof under any pretext renders contracts and levies void;⁹⁶ but a statutory restriction may be removed by subsequent legislation.⁹⁷ General statutes of limitation bind all municipalities not having special authority from the same source;⁹⁸ but a special provision, constitutional or statutory, may authorize a transgression of a general limitation.⁹⁹ The legislature of a territory has no power to impose upon or require a city to pay debts and liabilities which are in excess of the maximum limit fixed by congress.¹ A statute limiting municipal indebtedness does not authorize municipalities to contract indebtedness but limits their powers.² The general rules of statutory interpretation fix the scope and meaning of statutes of limitation,³ ordinance exceeding the prescribed limitation, is void;²⁰ but an ordinance is not void which provides for a contract when financial conditions will permit.²¹ A contract by a municipal corporation which, when properly construed, does not fix the amount of the liability from its date does not create a present indebtedness, within the meaning of a constitutional restriction on municipal indebtedness.²² Limitations as to departmental expenditures are subject to like rules with municipal limitations.²³

b. Limitations For Particular Purposes. A limitation of the amount of permanent debt to be incurred for a certain work is not a restriction upon the total expenditure to be made therefor;²⁴ nor does a limitation upon the amount of annual expenditure for a particular purpose invalidate a contract in excess thereof;²⁵ but a liability may not be incurred in excess of the sum limited to be raised by bonds,²⁶ and a contract price exceeding the statutory limit is void as to the excess.²⁷ A limitation upon the amount which may be expended for "foundation of a public library" does not prevent additional expenditure for a library building;²⁸ nor does one for the expenses of a fire department apply to the cost of engines and apparatus.²⁹ A limitation of the amount to be expended by the mayor of a city for a particular purpose may not bind the city council.³⁰ Stipulated interest on a debt for an improvement is computable as part of the cost of the work in determining whether the debt limit is being exceeded.³¹ An exception to a constitutional limitation of municipal indebtedness to a certain per cent of assessed values, if more should be necessary to obtain a certain utility, does not apply to cities already possessing such utility.³² The insufficiency of the limited sum to complete an improvement constitutes no objection to its expenditure;³³ illegal expenditures are not ratified by an act giving authority to complete an improvement.³⁴ In ascertaining the balance of a fund which may be subjected to the payment of an improvement illegal expenditures should be rejected.³⁵

must take notice at his peril;³⁷ but "income and revenue" includes sums coming into the municipal treasury from other sources than taxation.³⁸ Municipal contracts may be made, however, covering excess of revenue over fixed charges for more than a single year.³⁹ What is a current expense is for the courts to determine;⁴⁰ whether it is reasonable and necessary is for the municipal council.⁴¹

d. Debts and Expenditures Subject to Limitation—(i) IN GENERAL. Kentucky.—O'Bryan v. Owensboro, 113 Ky. 680, 68 S. W. 858, 69 S. W. 800, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 469, 645.

And see infra, XV, A, 3, d, (viii).

Liability arising ex delicto.—The liability of a city for negligently failing to raise a fund to pay certain warrants is one arising ex delicto and not ex contractu, and therefore the city is liable for damages arising therefrom, although its limit of indebtedness has been reached. Little v. Portland, 26 Ore. 225, 37 Pac. 911.

Damages caused by a change of grade are not an expense or liability, within a charter provision, prohibiting the incurring of any liability by contract or otherwise in excess of estimates fixed by the annual municipal meeting. Cook v. Ansonia, 66 Conn. 413, 34 Atl. 183.

44. Windsor v. Des Moines, 110 Iowa 175, 81 N. W. 476, 80 Am. St. Rep. 280 (holding that a constitutional provision that no city shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner or for any purpose to an amount, including existing indebtedness, in the aggregate exceeding five per cent on the value of its taxable property applies to implied, as well as express, promises creating such indebtedness); French v. Burlington, 42 Iowa 614; Com. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 105 Ky. 206, 48 S. W. 1092, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1127; Adams v. Waterville, 95 Me. 242, 49 Atl. 1042. But compare Smith v. Dedham, 144 Mass. 177, 10 N. E. 782.

Temporary loan.—If a loan, although temporary in its inception, or any part thereof, is carried over into the next municipal year, it loses its temporary character and becomes a debt of the city within the inhibition of the article limiting the municipal indebtedness to five per cent of the city valuation. Blood v. Beal, 100 Me. 30, 60 Atl. 427.

Salary of a health officer.—Norton v. East St. Louis, 36 Ill. App. 171.

Indebtedness for school purposes.—Com. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 105 Ky. 206, 48 S. W. 1092, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1127; Richmond v. Powell, 27 S. W. 1, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 174.

Indebtedness for waterworks.—Helena Water Works Co. v. Helena, 31 Mont. 243, 78 Pac. 220; Brown v. Corry, 175 Pa. St. 528, 34 Atl. 854 [affirming 4 Pa. Dist. 645, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 490].

46. Blanchard v. Benton, 109 Ill. App. 569; Phillips v. Reed, 107 Iowa 331, 76 N. W. 850, 77 N. W. 1031; Booth v. Weiss, 15 Phila. (Pa.) 159.

47. Indiana.—Powell v. Madison, 107 Ind. 106, 8 N. E. 31, holding that neither the issuing of new bonds by a municipal corporation for the payment of a preëxisting debt and accrued interest, nor the execution of coupons for the payment of interest yet to accrue on such preëxisting debt, is the promising a municipal debt,⁴⁸ do not constitute an indebtedness within the meaning of a provision limiting indebtedness. The issuance of negotiable bonds in payment for lands purchased by a city is not making a loan in violation of a statute prohibiting loans exceeding the levy and tax for any given year.⁴⁹ And using a trust fund for which a city is already liable does not increase its indebtedness.⁵⁰

(ii) CURRENT EXPENSES. A city having an aggregate indebtedness exceeding the limitation imposed by law is powerless to create any additional debt even for its ordinary current expenses.⁵¹ A provision in a charter limiting the power of the city to borrow money and issue bonds applies as a limitation to the incurring of liabilities by borrowing money and not to those incurred as part of the current expenses of the city.⁵² A contract by a city for a street improvement is not a current expense to which current yearly revenues are applicable.⁵³

(iii) IMPROVEMENTS, PROPERTY, AND WORKS—(A) In General. Legislative limitations as to indebtedness may be transcended by special legislative authority for the purpose of paying for public works or improvements.⁵⁴ And restrictions as to indebtedness for general purposes do not apply to indebtedness incurred for special objects,⁵⁵ nor do limitations, either constitutional or legislative, apply to improvements to be paid for out of a special assessment,⁵⁶ or cash in the municipal treasury.⁵⁷ After a city's indebtedness has reached the limit fixed by law, it cannot make a contract binding it unconditionally to pay for public improvements, although it contemplates a reimbursement for such payments from proceeds of the sale of bonds which do not increase the indebtedness within said limit, being creation of a new indebtedness, or the increase of an old one.

payable from special taxes for the improvement.⁵⁸ But it is otherwise where the remedy of the holders of the bonds is confined exclusively to the special funds provided for, and to the collection of, assessments by enforcing the lien upon the lots or parcels of ground assessed with the cost of the improvements.⁵⁹ Where a city has already reached its constitutional limit of indebtedness it has no power to render itself liable for the cost of street improvements contracted for subsequent thereto, even though the city fails to levy an assessment and provide a special fund for such improvement as it is required to do.⁶⁰ Excessive indebtedness may not be incurred for the purchase of property on the ground that it is worth more than the price and will increase the municipal revenue;⁶¹ a municipal corporation cannot avoid restrictions upon the amount of indebtedness which it may incur by purchasing property for public purposes subject to liens.⁶² In Iowa it has been held that the obligation created by a contract made by a city for water for fire protection is not an indebtedness within the meaning of the constitutional limitation of the indebtedness which may be contracted by municipal corporations.⁶³

(b) Damages or Compensation. Condemnation awards for property taken for public use are not to be counted as municipal indebtedness under constitutional restrictions as to the amount of municipal indebtedness;⁶⁴ and excess of the lawful limit of indebtedness is no defense to an action for damages resulting from the negligent or unskillful construction of a street gutter,⁶⁵ or for damages for change of a street grade.⁶⁶

(iv) INDEBTEDNESS PAYABLE SPECIALLY. The fact that a municipality has passed beyond its debt limit does not prevent it from contracting a debt payable expressly out of a special fund,⁶⁷ or a special assessment,⁶⁸ or both;⁶⁹ but the general revenues of the city must not be made liable or the limitation as to indebtedness will apply.⁷⁰

(v) ANTICIPATORY OBLIGATIONS. A contract may be entered into, an appropriation made, or a warrant drawn by an overburdened municipality in anticipation of taxes thereafter to be collected,⁷¹ provided that, at the time, the tax has been actually levied and the municipality does not thereby incur any liability.⁷² This is treated as an assignment of anticipated revenue.⁷³ But the debt limitation may not be evaded by the device of a "temporary loan."⁷⁴

(vi) EXECUTORY CONTRACTS. A contract by a municipality to pay for water, lights, sewage, and the like, at stated times in the future, does not create an indebtedness for the aggregate amount of such payments, within the meaning of a provision limiting the indebtedness of municipalities, and the validity of such a contract is to be tested by the amount of the first payment due thereunder.⁷⁵ A

bonds,⁹³ nor merely optional obligations,⁹⁴ nor illegal or void obligations.⁹⁵ According to some of the decisions assets of a municipality, applicable to the payment of its debts, consisting of cash on hand, taxes assessed for municipal purposes during the year in which indebtedness is contracted, and unpaid taxes for prior years are to be deducted in determining the amount of indebtedness;⁹⁶ but according to other decisions a provision limiting municipal indebtedness refers to outstanding debts and not net indebtedness.⁹⁷ A deduction of damages for a city contractor's failure to complete work within the time specified is not to be subtracted from the amount due on the contract, in determining whether the city's indebtedness has exceeded the legal limit.⁹⁸ Revenue anticipated from licenses,⁹⁹ or from a tax roll not yet in the hands of the collector,¹ or money derived from the sale of bonds,² or borrowed to erect a school building is not to be considered in computing municipal indebtedness.³ In a constitutional sense, prohibited indebtedness must be a burden and payable by a city from funds which cannot be lawfully appropriated to the purpose.⁴ A provision that a municipality shall not be allowed to become indebted in any manner or for any purpose beyond a certain amount is not confined to bonded indebtedness, but in determining the amount all classes of indebtedness are to be included.⁵ The acquisition of property by a municipality, on the credit of a special fund not in existence but to be subsequently created, does not create a debt against the city within a constitutional debt limit.⁶ A debt contracted by popular vote is not chargeable to ordinary municipal indebtedness.⁷ "Funded debts" includes coupon bonds payable, principal and interest, out of future levies.⁸

(n) VALUE OF TAXABLE PROPERTY. The basis of computation to ascertain the limit of indebtedness for a municipality is the aggregate valuation of property in the boundaries of such municipality, as determined by the last preceding assessment thereof for taxation.⁹ Under some provisions on this subject such compu-to collect the remainder from taxes by the time the obligation matures, does not alter the fact that such contract creates an indebtedness within a constitutional inhibition.

tation must be based on the assessment made for state and county purposes,¹⁰ while under others the valuation fixed by the municipal authorities is the proper basis.¹¹ Any refund or rebate of corporation taxes,¹² and any subsequent reduction of values, is to be disregarded.¹³ Unless restricted in terms to real estate, personalty is embraced in the aggregate;¹⁴ and in New York certain public franchises are to be considered as part of the assessable real estate of a municipality.¹⁵

4. EXERCISE OF POWER — a. In General. Power to incur indebtedness and to make expenditures is an inherent function of the governing body of a municipality,¹⁶ and is not within the capacity of other boards or officers,¹⁷ unless it is expressly conferred by statute or delegated by ordinance;¹⁸ but merely ministerial functions may be directed by resolution.¹⁹ Constitutional provisions as to the mode of exercise of the power are mandatory;²⁰ so likewise usually are those enacted by the legislature;²¹ and a substantial departure therefrom invalidates the corporate action.²² Under a statute prohibiting a city from incurring liabilities until the city council has duly voted an appropriation sufficient to meet such liabilities, together with all unpaid liabilities which are payable therefrom, the city is precluded from contracting a new liability only where prior unpaid liabilities in excess of the appropriation have been actually incurred, and not where the mere estimated expenses exceed the appropriation.²³

b. Petition by Property-Owners. The statutory requirement of a petition of a majority of citizens or property-owners,²⁴ as evidence of taxpayers' assent to the incurring of municipal indebtedness, is mandatory, and compliance therewith is essential to the validity of the corporate act creating a debt;²⁵ but such a petition is not a condition precedent to a valid contract for lighting the streets for a number of years, as such a contract does not create a debt or liability.²⁶

c. Submission to Popular Vote. The submission to a popular vote of the question of municipal expenditure or indebtedness for certain purposes is required by constitutional or statutory provisions in various jurisdictions.²⁷ Ordinances, by-laws, and contracts in violation of these restrictions are ultra vires and void.²⁸ The action of a city council may, however, be validated by an election held subsequent to such action.²⁹ A voluntary referendum is void,³⁰ unless treated as advisory merely.³¹ Voters or electors and taxpayers or ratepayers are not equivalent terms.³² The details of expenditure need not appear on the ballot.³³ But the purpose of the indebtedness must be published,³⁴ and the expenditure confined to the object so approved or authorized,³⁵ and there must be a separate vote on each subject.³⁶ The notice of election must comply as to time and manner with the constitutional or legislative requirement,³⁷ but need not conform to the order of the municipal council when such order departs from the requirements prescribed by law.³⁸ A resolution or order authorizing an election is sufficient where a formal ordinance is not expressly required.³⁹ Although fraud or substantial variation from lawful requirements will vitiate municipal action,⁴⁰ mere irregularities in the proceeding will not invalidate it;⁴¹ nor will improper influence upon the electorate,⁴² where it does not appear that any voter was actually coerced to cast his ballot contrary to his wishes. Such an election is usually conducted in accordance with the general election laws of the state, applicable to municipalities, where no special provision is made on the subject.⁴³ A single election is sufficient to authorize original and supplementary expenditures within the amount limited.⁴⁴ Authority to incur the indebtedness voted upon is conferred upon a subsequent as well as an existing council.⁴⁵ Where a proposition as to municipal indebtedness is submitted at a general election, the assent of a majority of the voters voting on the proposition, and not a majority of all the voters voting at the election, is necessary.⁴⁶ And a statute which provides that the water commissioners of a village shall not proceed to acquire lands unless the majority of voters and of tax-

d. Requirement of Fund For Payment. In some states there exist constitutional or statutory inhibitions against the creation of municipal indebtedness without a concurrent definite appropriation or provision for its payment.⁴⁸ These apply only to claims arising ex contractu.⁴⁹ Where there is such a provision, one claiming compensation under a contract with a city must show that the obligation was to be satisfied out of the current revenues or out of some fund within the immediate control of the city, and was not therefore a debt within such provision, or he must prove compliance with the provision as to the payment thereof.⁵⁰ It has been decided that such inhibitions do not apply to municipal salaries,⁵¹ necessary current expenses,⁵² contracts for water, sewerage, and light,⁵³

A. 61 (holding that when a city is authorized to borrow money for a public work, a loan effected after the completion of the work to pay therefor is within the statute giving such authority); White v. Rahway, 11 Fed. 853.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1844.

Express power to a municipal corporation to borrow money must be construed and limited with reference to the express object of the loan. Thus "power to borrow for general purposes on the credit of the city" authorizes only a temporary loan to be repaid out of the annual revenue. Allen v. La Fayette, 89 Ala. 641, 8 So. 30, 9 L. R. A. 497; Nashville v. Ray, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 468, 22 L. ed. 164. And "power to borrow money on its bonds" does not authorize issuance of scrip or warrants to raise money for ordinary municipal expenses. Patton v. Chattanooga, 108 Tenn. 197, 226, 65 S. W. 414; Colburn v. Chattanooga, 2 Tenn. Cas. 22.

Borrowing forbidden by charter.—And it is sometimes provided by charter that a municipality cannot borrow money unless it the absence of statute, unless the power is necessarily implied from some special duty imposed, for the discharge of which the power to borrow money is not only convenient but necessary.⁶⁹ When money is borrowed by a municipal corporation without authority of law, but for a legitimate purpose and is used and applied for that purpose, although a warrant issued to the lender may be ultra vires and void, the corporation is liable on principles of equity and justice, as on an implied assumpsit, for money had and received; ⁷⁰ but this principle does not apply where there is an express prohibition of the power to borrow money.⁷¹ In exercising the power to borrow money conferred upon it by charter, a municipal corporation is not exercising sovereign power, but is responsible for the acts of its agents as is a private corporation.⁷² A contract made by a city to pay a sum of money with interest to a person who has assumed the payment of interest on some of the city's debt, as well interest to become due as interest already due, is not a borrowing of money but is a contract for the payment of a debt.⁷³

5. AID TO CORPORATIONS AND STOCK SUBSCRIPTIONS — a. In General. Municipal corporations have no inherent power to lend their credit to aid private corporations, nor to make subscriptions to or purchase stock therein, but such power is derived solely from express legislative grants,⁷⁴ and all unauthorized municipal transactions of this character are ultra vires and void;⁷⁵ but under general authority to give municipal aid, the corporation may in its discretion subscribe for

Where authority is given to municipalities generally, by statute, to subscribe to the capital stock of railroad companies, such authority is not limited to towns and cities incorporated at the date of the passage of the act. *Madry v. stock or make a donation.⁷⁶ A statute validating a municipal subscription for stock operates retrospectively to legalize the subscription to the same extent as though authority had been previously given.⁷⁷ As such statutes grant a power unknown to the common law they should be strictly construed,⁷⁸ and a grant of such power cannot be assumed from implication or innuendo merely.⁷⁹ Without legislative sanction the assent of a majority of the voters of a municipality does not authorize it to make a subscription to the stock of a private corporation.⁸⁰ An act authorizing municipal construction and operation of a public utility plant does not ipso facto repeal an act authorizing stock subscription in a private company to furnish the same utility.⁸¹ A municipal corporation with power to erect public buildings may employ a railway company to do the work of construction.⁸² The sale of a railway owned by a municipality is not the loan of municipal credit to the purchaser or to any corporation that may obtain control of the road, although in making the sale it is contemplated that the road will pass into the hands of the corporation and a per centum of the future gross earnings of the road is to be paid as a part of the price.⁸³

b. Constitutional Restrictions. The right or power of municipal corporations to subscribe for stock, make donations, or otherwise lend their aid to individuals or private corporations is in many states limited by constitutional provisions.⁸⁴

Illustrations.—A clause in the charter of a railroad company providing that "it shall be lawful for all persons of lawful age or for the agent of any corporate body to subscribe to the capital stock of said company" manifestly refers to private corporations and confers no power upon municipal corporations to subscribe for such stock. Campbell v. Paris, etc., R. Co., 71 Ill. 611; East Oakland Tp. v. Skinner, 94 U. S. 255, 24 L. ed. 125. Kelly*, 5 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Such limitations are not retroactive,⁸⁵ and the obligation of existing contracts is not impaired thereby;⁸⁶ but any municipal or legislative action, which is prohibited thereby, taken after the limitation goes into operation, is null and void.⁸⁷ A statute authorizing a city to subscribe for stock in a corporation confers a power which may be modified, changed, enlarged, restrained, or repealed by a state constitution, as such a statute does not import a contract within the clause of the United States constitution prohibiting a law which impairs the obligation of a contract.⁸⁸ A constitutional provision against state aid does not apply to municipal corporations;⁸⁹ nor do provisions against giving municipal aid in money or credit to any person or corporation operate to forbid sole municipal construction or ownership.⁹⁰ A municipality may not, however, under a constitutional prohibition against municipal aid, build a section of a railroad in its limits, intended ultimately to form part of a continuous line of road to be operated and equipped by private capital,⁹¹ exchange railroad bonds for capital stock,⁹² donate money, obtained on the forfeiture of its franchise by a railway company, to its successor,⁹³ or obtain for a railroad a right of way through municipal boundaries.⁹⁴

c. Purpose of Corporation. In the absence of constitutional prohibition, municipal aid may be authorized and granted to a plank road company,⁹⁵ to a private corporation furnishing water to a municipality,⁹⁶ or to a hospital which cares for a municipality's indigent sick.⁹⁷ Railways are highways, and their construction even by private corporations is a public purpose,⁹⁸ to which legislatures in most states may authorize municipalities to give aid.⁹⁹ A municipality cannot, become the owner of corporate stock or bonds); Purcell v. Riverside, 1 Ohio Cir. Ct. 12, 1 Ohio Cir. Dec. 7 (holding that a municipal ordinance authorizing the condemnation of land for the purpose of having the county commissioners build an avenue thereon, under a special law authorizing them to do so, is not within Const. art. 8, § 6, prohibiting the legislature from authorizing any municipality to become a stock-holder in any association, or to raise money for, or to loan its credit to, or in aid of, such an association.

Foreign railroad corporation.—The mere fact that a railroad company is a foreign corporation and that its road terminates at a point in another state from which it runs a line of boats to a city issuing its bonds in aid of such road affords no ground for a constitutional objection to the grant of power by the legislature to such city to subscribe to the stock of the company. on loan on the faith and credit of the city";⁶ but not "to subscribe for stock and issue bonds to pay for the same."⁷ A city has no power to execute a guaranty of a promissory note, as incidental to a power given by charter to sell negotiable paper.⁸ Giving premium notes for assessments to meet fire losses;⁹ assuming the entire expense of track elevation, of which one half is to be repaid by the railway company;¹⁰ or indorsing on the bonds of a water company certain stipulations as to the payment of rentals¹¹ has been held not a loan of municipal credit.

e. Limitation of Amount. Determination of sufficiency of petition.—The adjudication of municipal authorities as to whether the petition for an election for the purpose of having decided a proposition to vote a tax to aid in the construction of a railroad is signed by the number of resident taxpayers required by law is not conclusive, and if it should appear from the return to a writ of certiorari that such fact was not shown to the authorities or that it was shown by insufficient evidence, their action thereon will be set aside. *Jordan v. means legal voters of the municipality;¹⁸ a petition for an appropriation to aid in the construction of a railroad is not vitiated because it contains a condition that the railroad company should build a depot in a certain town.¹⁹

g. Submission to Popular Vote. The common law gives no recognition to the American practice of submitting the question of municipal aid to a railroad or other corporation to a popular vote,²⁰ and therefore elections held by municipal corporations without legislative direction or authority are unnecessary²¹ and futile.²² On the contrary where such election is prescribed by constitution or statute as authority for giving municipal aid to corporations it is indispensable to the municipal action,²³ and every requirement of the law must be complied with or the election will be invalid.²⁴ It is sufficient that a majority of the persons voting vote for a municipal aid proposition, although a majority of the whole number of the qualified voters do not vote at all,²⁵ unless the assent of a majority of all the qualified voters is expressly required.²⁶ And the legislature is impotent to reduce the majority prescribed by the constitution as authority for municipal aid.²⁷ When a proposition has received such vote as is required the municipality is bound without a subsequent contract of subscription.²⁸ Constitutional provisions as to elections are prospective only and do not affect valid action previously taken by a municipality;²⁹ but when inhibitory they operate to repeal all authorizing statutes not expressly excepted.³⁰ Fraud in obtaining a vote in favor of municipal aid, if participated in by the beneficiary, will vitiate the election.³¹ But an election is not invalidated by printing on the ballot a full statement of the question involved in the election;³² nor because the petition, notice, and vote fix the time when the bonds will mature, although the statute authorizing the election is silent on the subject;³³ nor by reason of a failure to furnish to the election commissioners a certified list of voters;³⁴ nor because the registration commissioners styled themselves "commissioners of election,"³⁵ or failed to make a certified return of the result.³⁶ Where there is no express provision as to the mode of conducting such an election, it should be conducted in the usual manner of conducting elections in the municipality.³⁷ The notice of election should contain such statements as will fairly advise the voters of the object thereof.³⁸ Where the only object of the electors of a town in granting aid to a railway company is to procure the construction of a railway from a certain point to such town, the question may be submitted to them in such a form as to provide that the aid shall be given to that one of two companies which shall first complete its road between such points.³⁹

h. Requisites and Validity. A subsidy is valid, which has been granted in substantial compliance with the essential statutory or constitutional requisites,⁴⁰ or when imperfections or defects have been cured by a validating act.⁴¹ It has been decided that municipal power to grant aid includes authority to impose conditions to the grant.⁴² A subsidy cannot be voted to a completed railroad under a statute authorizing the issue of bonds to aid in the construction of the railroad,⁴³ and a subscription cannot be made to a road other than that designated by the petition.⁴⁴ A subscription, conditioned upon a like subscription by other municipalities, is invalidated by their incapacity to subscribe.⁴⁵ A municipality cannot avoid a subscription to a railway company on the ground that the contract of subscription contains a stipulation which the company was unauthorized to make; such stipulation may be disregarded and the contract enforced as far as valid.⁴⁶ An absolute donation, if authorized, is not invalid;⁴⁷ but a vote of a "donation" does not mean a gift, if it appears otherwise that an agreement to give for a consideration is intended.⁴⁸ Where a popular vote is not required the municipal council may make the grant of aid.⁴⁹

i. Rescission or Modification. A municipal subscription to a railway company may be rescinded by consent of the beneficiary,⁵⁰ or on the ground that the company has violated the contract of subscription,⁵¹ or when nothing has been done and no rights of third parties have intervened.⁵² But the conditions of a municipal subscription in aid of a railway can be changed by a vote at a subsequent municipal election only by express statutory authority.⁵³

j. Performance of Conditions. Failure to construct a railway over the contemplated route releases a municipality from its subscription to its stock;⁵⁴ but a subscription for the construction of a designated section of a railroad may, after it is completed by the railroad company's own means, be applied by the company to discharge a mortgage debt.⁵⁵ For the failure of a railroad company to perform its promise to erect certain taxable improvements in municipal limits, it becomes liable to the city for the value of such improvements for purposes of taxation.⁵⁶

k. Municipal Rights and Liabilities. Ultra vires subscriptions to private corporations are void;⁵⁷ money paid thereon may be recovered,⁵⁸ and no liability follows such subscription, although the stock be issued thereon.⁵⁹ A municipality is not liable on an invalid assessment on corporate stock because its council has voted to pay the same.⁶⁰ A municipal corporation making a valid subscription to stock is subject to the same liabilities as other subscribers or stock-holders.⁶¹ A municipality may take any lawful steps to protect or preserve the value of its pecuniary interest in a railway.⁶² A city which has in the exercise of statutory authority subscribed to railroad stock and appointed directors to represent such stock cannot without express authority appoint directors to represent an increase of stock derived from a stock dividend.⁶³ Where a city issues its bonds in aid of a railroad company without authority of law and receives therefor the bonds of the company, secured with other bonds by a mortgage upon its road, the city is not such a lien creditor for a valuable consideration as to entitle it to claim a share of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged premises made in satisfaction of the mortgage.⁶⁴

6. UNAUTHORIZED DEBTS AND EXPENDITURES — a. In General. Unauthorized debts and expenditures do not as a general rule create municipal liability;⁶⁵ but where money is lent in good faith to a municipality, the money applied to legitimate municipal uses and such application ratified by the municipality it becomes liable therefor.⁶⁶ A city which has authorized a proper expenditure cannot by a subsequent resolution, of which persons advancing money for the expenditure have no notice, limit the amount of its liability.⁶⁷

b. Contracts in Excess of Debt Limit. A contract made by a municipality in excess of its debt limit as fixed by the constitution or by statute is void,⁶⁸ at least

Partially invalid appropriation.—Where moneys are appropriated by a municipal corporation for two purposes, one of which is lawful and the other unlawful, the court, if it is practicable to do so, will distinguish between the two objects, so as to sustain the appropriation so far as it is for a lawful purpose; but, if this be impossible, the entire appropriation will be held invalid. *Roberts v. as to the excess;⁶⁹ and every one dealing with a municipality is charged with notice of a limitation upon the amount of its indebtedness.⁷⁰

c. Ratification. Municipal indebtedness in excess of a constitutional limitation cannot be made good by ratification, since power to authorize originally is a condition precedent to the power to ratify subsequently.⁷¹ But an expenditure made in excess of a limitation imposed by a municipal ordinance may be ratified by the municipal council.⁷² Where it is provided by statute that no contract shall be made or expense incurred by a city, unless an appropriation therefor shall have been previously made, a contract in violation of this provision can be ratified only by making an appropriation expressly for its performance.⁷³ The fact that a municipality through its officers holds possession and control of notes given by one of them for an unauthorized loan of the municipal money to himself will not operate as a ratification of the loan.⁷⁴

d. Curative Statutes. A municipal contract, expenditure, or appropriation invalid when made may be cured by subsequent legislation,⁷⁵ unless the invalidity result from a violation of a constitutional inhibition.⁷⁶

e. Municipal Recovery of Money Paid. When the money of a municipality is paid out on a contract or for an indebtedness which the municipality had no authority to make or incur, it may be recovered.⁷⁷

B. Administration, Appropriation, Warrants, and Payments — 1. In GENERAL — a. Collection and Custody of Funds. How municipal funds shall be collected or received and held is, like other fiscal operations, a matter as to which the legislature may make provision; ⁷⁸ and such a provision cannot be altered by ordinance or by-law. ⁷⁹ The courts will not hear any complaint from strangers of the mismanagement of municipal funds. ⁸⁰

b. Adjustment of Accounts With State. State funds are frequently collected by municipal officials, ⁸¹ and when, under the method of collection or receipt by municipal officers of state and county taxes due on property within municipal boundaries, collection thereof is made at the same time with municipal taxes and the moneys deposited in a common account, the quota of state and county taxes has preference of payment out of such fund. ⁸² A fiscal officer of a municipality having only ministerial functions as to the payment of state taxes has no power to withhold payment thereof or raise objections of irregularity and informality in their assessment and collection. ⁸³

c. Adjustment With County or Other Municipality. The legislature may provide by general or special law a method of adjustment of local taxes between municipalities and counties by their official representatives; ⁸⁴ but their failure to perform such function does not effect a waiver or estoppel of municipal right, ⁸⁵ nor does a county's retention of municipal taxes even with municipal consent have such effect. ⁸⁶

d. Disbursements. A disbursing officer may pay out municipal funds only as authorized by law, ⁸⁷ and a void ordinance affords him no legal protection. ⁸⁸ But a city may not refuse to disburse money in its treasury, on the ground of doubt of its power to make the levy which brought it in. ⁸⁹

e. Loaning or Investing Funds. Surplus money in a municipal treasury, not appropriated for immediate payment, may be loaned or invested by the municipality, until needed for municipal use, ⁹⁰ at any lawful rate of interest which may be agreed upon, ⁹¹ and a borrower will not be heard to set up the want of corporate power to make his loan.⁹² A municipal officer who is bound to deposit the public money in some bank⁹³ may contract with the bank that it shall pay interest on the deposit for the benefit of the municipality,⁹⁴ but a bank is not bound to pay interest on such deposit unless it is so agreed.⁹⁵

f. Reports and Statements of Officers. Official statements and reports of fiscal conditions constitute the proper basis for administrative or legislative action, when made by officers thereunto duly authorized,⁹⁶ and in manner and form required by law.⁹⁷

g. General Funds. General municipal funds may be appropriated by a municipal council in its discretion to any municipal object.⁹⁸ And a city holding a fund in general trust with specific direction as to the application of the interest may, by payment of the interest for the designated object, use the principal for any municipal purpose.⁹⁹ A general fund provided for a municipal department may be expended by the department commissioners as they see fit, provided they confine their expenditures to the object specified in the statute.¹ A creditor whose claim is payable out of a special municipal fund cannot compel payment out of a general fund.²

h. Special Funds. Special municipal funds, which are dedicated by express statutory provision or by the act of a municipal council or board, duly authorized, to a specific municipal object, may not be diverted either directly or indirectly to any other purpose;³ whenever diversion is threatened, it may be enjoined by those entitled to the fund,⁴ and no misapplication of such fund can hinder or defeat the right of creditors to be paid therefrom.⁵ Whether a fund is a special fund, and if so what is the nature, purpose, and extent of its dedication, is determined by the statute or ordinance under which it is raised or held,⁶ and those towns having the custody and disposition of it have a discretion in its expenditure only within the requirements and provisions of law.⁷ Special annual funds are applicable primarily to the annual expenses; and that of one year may not be applied to expenses of any other year until all the expenses of the year to which the fund belongs have been satisfied.⁸

1. Apportionment of Funds. It is sometimes required by statute that municipal revenue shall be apportioned by the council to the different municipal funds.⁹ An apportionment of revenues is not an appropriation thereof.¹⁰

j. Appropriations — (1) IN GENERAL. Under statutes forbidding the incurring of debts for which there is no appropriation,¹¹ there is no municipal liability for work done for a municipal corporation before an appropriation has been made therefor,¹² and persons seeking payment from budgeted appropriations are restricted to such appropriations and have no action against the municipality until there are funds to the credit of such appropriations.¹³ But where an ordinance provides that certain salaries shall be paid out of the municipal treasury, an appropriation for such salaries is unnecessary.¹⁴ An appropriation without consideration will not be enforced.¹⁵ A general limitation upon the power of the municipal council to appropriate money does not apply as to money authorized to be borrowed for a specific purpose by a majority of the legal voters of the municipality.¹⁶ Authority to appropriate a fund to either of two purposes does not authorize a division of the fund between such purposes.¹⁷ A proviso in an appropriation for its expenditure by an officer other than the one authorized by law is void.¹⁸ The awarding of damages to persons whose property is injured by the location or alteration of a street is not an appropriation.¹⁹ An ordinance directing the improvement of a street at the expense of the property-owners, the city not to be liable therefor, is not an ordinance appropriating money.²⁰ Interest on municipal bonds is not an item of governmental expenditure for which an appropriation may be made.²¹ Appropriations from contingent funds must be made in accordance with statutory provisions on the subject.²²

(II) MAKING AND REQUISITES. Unless it is otherwise provided by law, in passing an appropriation ordinance the council of a municipality may put their mandate in any form they choose; all that is necessary is that the language should clearly express their intent to make an appropriation.²³ But statutes are mandatory which prescribe requirements for municipal appropriations,²⁴ such as a popular vote,²⁵ the vote of a certain majority of the municipal council,²⁶ a detailed and specific statement of the object of expenditure,²⁷ the lapse of a specified period between the introduction and enactment of the appropriation ordinance,²⁸ or the passage of the appropriation ordinance at or within a certain time;²⁹ and appropriations made in violation of them are void. An appropriation must be made by the municipal council³⁰ even when a municipal board is empowered to estimate the amount necessary to be appropriated.³¹

St. Rep. 45, holding that a council may not in making up the budget estimate interest as a governmental expense, and so by anticipation appropriate revenues to be collected to the payment thereof, thus defeating the rights of creditors of the city to subject to their claims revenues in excess of the necessary current expenditures.

Long Branch Police Sanitary, etc., Commission*, 59 N. J. L. 371, 35 Atl. 1070 (all holding that an appropriation may be made either by resolution or ordinance); State v. Cleveland, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 571, 22 Cinc. L. Bul. 113 (holding that an act providing that a city council shall make no appropriation of money for any purpose, except by ordinance, does not apply to the payment of salaries of employees of the city work-house out of funds which the council had previously set apart as applicable to the payment of the ordinary obligations arising in the carrying on of that institution). Evasion by motion.—A charter provision that no resolution appropriating money shall be adopted by the council, except by a specified vote, cannot be evaded by embracing such action in the form of a motion. Bishop v. Lambert, 114 Mich. 110, 72 N. W. 35.

Philadelphia*, 4 Brewst. (Pa.) 133, 8 Phila. 117. Compare Hoey v. Lewis, 39 N. J. L. 501 [affirming 39 N. J. L. 75].

A statement of every item is not required, a classification of the funds for various purposes being held sufficient. Leadville v. Matthews, 10 Colo. 125, 14 Pac. 112; State v. Smith, 11 Wis. 65.

Ct. 397, holding that it is not necessary that an ordinance for the raising and appropriating of money borrowed for a specific purpose should be passed within the month in which by law the taxes and revenues of the city are required to be appropriated.

What is compliance.—It is sufficient, where the appropriations are required to be made within a certain period, that the board acts within that time; a vote of confirmation over the mayor's veto may be later. King v. Chicago, 111 Ill. 63; Fairfield v. People, 94 Ill. 244.

See also Baltimore v. Gorter, 93 Md. 1, 48 Atl. 445; State v. Ames, 31 Minn. 440, 18 N. W. 277, holding that under the charter of Minneapolis the making or authorizing of appropriations is exclusively vested in the common council, and the mayor has no veto of the action of the council in the making of the same.

31. Baltimore v. Gorter, 93 Md. 1, 48 Atl. 445.

(iii) OPERATION AND EFFECT. A voluntary appropriation of public property or the proceeds thereof by a municipality, when such appropriation is not associated with a contract as part of its obligation, does not remove such property or proceeds from the control of the municipality, but it may alter or repeal such appropriation at pleasure.³² The estimate of revenues for a current year by the mayor and council of a city, and the appropriation by them of a large excess to a sinking fund, is prima facie proof of a surplus for the year, and it is not overcome by the mayor's opinion that probably the revenues will not exceed the current expenses.³³ When a municipality borrows money and specifically appropriates it to a particular purpose, it is not necessary that the money so borrowed should be appropriated over and over again by the council ordinance in case some of it should happen not to be disbursed during the year.³⁴ Although a city council has, under its charter, entire control of the moneys belonging to the city, and no committee of the council or either branch thereof may, except as authorized by vote or ordinance of the council, incur any liability or expend any money, yet, after an appropriation has been made by the council for a department, the committee in charge thereof may lawfully incur debts and audit bills to be paid out of the appropriation therefor.³⁵

(iv) TRANSFER OR DIVERSION. Except when it is otherwise provided by law,³⁶ a transfer of an appropriation in whole or in part may be made by a municipal council at any time;³⁷ but purely administrative officers have no authority to divert or transfer appropriations;³⁸ and an unauthorized transfer or diversion does not discharge a municipal obligation.³⁹ Where the amount of all the taxes collected by a city is sufficient to meet all the necessary expenses, the funds in the treasury may be applied to the full payment of the sum needed to exhaust one appropriation, even if that should not leave money enough to cover the full amount of another appropriation, if the exigencies of the city do not require that the whole of the latter appropriation be expended.⁴⁰

k. Payment of Indebtedness. Municipal debts incurred in a certain fiscal year are usually payable primarily out of the revenue for that year.⁴¹ While a municipality cannot levy a tax beyond the limitation assigned in its charter, such available means as are at the disposal of the municipality, raised under the taxing power and which can be used without diverting the funds from their original purposes, should be applied to the payment of a judgment against the municipality.⁴²

Where a municipal creditor accepts municipal bonds⁴³ or scrip,⁴⁴ or certificates of indebtedness,⁴⁵ he has no claim against the municipality for losses incurred by him in realizing upon the same.⁴⁶ An obligation to pay money, on the part of a municipal corporation, is a sufficient authority to its officers to pay it without a special vote or order.⁴⁷ But merely administrative officers have no authority to pay claims, except when ordered to do so by the municipal council⁴⁸ or fiscal board.⁴⁹ Municipalities cannot bind themselves to pay their indebtedness at any other place than at the municipal treasury, unless specially authorized by statute.⁵⁰

1. Insufficiency or Exhaustion of Appropriation. The fact that an insufficient sum was appropriated for certain claims,⁵¹ or that the special fund out of which certain claims are payable is exhausted,⁵² or has been appropriated for other purposes,⁵³ will not prevent the payment of such claims so long as there is money in the municipal treasury which may be applied thereto.

m. Investigation of Expenditures. In some jurisdictions the statutes provide for the summary investigation of municipal expenditures by experts appointed by the courts.⁵⁴

2. WARRANTS AND CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS⁵⁵ — a. In General. Warrants of a municipal corporation are generally orders payable when funds are found. They are issued for the payment of general municipal debts and expenses, subject to a rule providing that they shall be paid in the order of presentation; the time of presentation to be indorsed by the treasurer on the warrants.⁵⁶ They are usually payable in lawful money of the United States, but in the absence of prohibitory legislation they may be made payable in gold coin.⁵⁷ Both warrants and certificates may be made payable out of special funds.⁵⁸ When authorized by law, municipal warrants are receivable in payment of municipal taxes.⁵⁹

b. Power to Issue. A municipality has, even without express authority, the Violation of penal law.—Certificates of indebtedness issued by a municipality, receivable in payment of public dues, are binding upon the municipality, even though the act of issuing them may have been in violation of a penal law. Black v. Cohen, 52 Ga. 621.

Authorization should be shown by reference to the appropriation under which they were issued, and the date of the order or ordinance making it. Martin v. San Francisco, the requirements of the statute or ordinance under which they are issued is essential.⁷⁰ They must be dated⁷¹ and signed and countersigned as required,⁷² and must be issued by the officer charged with that duty.⁷³ The purpose for which they are drawn should be stated therein;⁷⁴ but it is not essential that they should specify from what particular fund they are payable,⁷⁵ unless a special fund for a special purpose has been created.⁷⁶ If receivable for taxes they may so show on their face.⁷⁷ The corporate seal is not essential to their validity.⁷⁸ They need not be payable on sight.⁷⁹ Neither the vote of a municipal corporation authorizing the payment of money to a person,⁸⁰ nor the minutes of a meeting of municipal officers showing an audit of a claim against the municipality,⁸¹ constitute a warrant.

e. Construction and Operation. Municipal warrants signed by the proper officers are prima facie valid,⁸² and establish prima facie the validity of the claims for which they are issued and authorize their payment.⁸³ But the allowance of claims by granting warrants therefor is not a final and conclusive adjudication so as to conclude the municipality, but it may set up the defense of ultra vires or fraud, or want or failure of consideration.⁸⁴ A city, by drawing warrants against a fund composed largely of assessments and judgments against itself as quasi-owner of the streets and public squares, is estopped to deny the validity of those assessments and judgments.⁸⁵ The form of a warrant attempting to carry on its face an agreement in accordance with an ordinance in effect prohibiting its acceptance as payment of debts due the city until previous warrants have been paid does not change its legal effect.⁸⁶

f. Discounting Warrants and Certificates. A city cannot issue its warrants or certificates of indebtedness at a discount in payment of a debt, or for the purpose of borrowing money.⁸⁷

g. Interest.⁸⁸ It is sometimes expressly provided by statute or ordinance that municipalities shall be liable for interest on their warrants or certificates of indebt-edness⁸⁹ after they have been presented and payment thereof refused.⁹⁰ And it seems that municipal liability for interest upon demand and refusal of payment exists even in the absence of such enactments.⁹¹ Where municipal certificates of indebtedness stipulate on their face that they bear no interest, a judgment thereon cannot allow interest except from judicial demand.⁹² Where municipal certificates of indebtedness on their face bear interest, a resolution of the municipal council, and the publication of a notice in the official municipal paper that after a certain date interest on such certificates would cease, does not, in the absence of any proof that such notice ever came to his knowledge, affect the rights of the holder of such certificates.⁹³ General fund warrants issued as a substitute for warrants drawn on a special fund should be so drawn that when paid they will amount to no more than the amount for which the latter were drawn with simple interest thereon.⁹⁴

h. Negotiability and Transfer. Municipalities possess no power to incur debts and issue negotiable instruments therefor, unless specially authorized to do so by their charters or by statute, or the power to do so can be clearly implied from some power expressly given, which cannot be fairly exercised without it.⁹⁵ Municipal warrants or certificates of indebtedness, while so far negotiable that they are transferable by delivery,⁹⁶ and the holder may maintain an action thereon in his own name,⁹⁷ are not, then, generally negotiable instruments in the sense of the law merchant,⁹⁸ so that when in the hands of a bona fide holder evidence of

i. Surrender For Reissue, Funding, or Redemption. Warrants issued by a municipality in consideration of illegal scrip issued previously by the municipality in payment of bona fide debts or in exchange for valid municipal warrants are valid, and are not open to the objection of illegality of consideration.² The act of a city official in canceling certificates of city stock and issuing others therefor at the request of the transferee, without requiring proof of the genuineness of the transfer, is negligence rendering the city liable to one who advanced money on such new certificates, the indorsement of the transferee proving to be a forgery.³ A statute which empowers municipalities to call in outstanding warrants by order for cancellation and reissue not oftener than once a year, and provides that if any warrant is not presented pursuant to such an order it shall be barred, is not retroactive and does not apply to warrants issued before its passage.⁴

but where there is no recital in a municipal warrant that any or all of the requirements of the law, with reference to its issue, have been complied with, the municipality is not estopped from showing its want of power.²⁷ The holder of void certificates of indebtedness must exhaust his contractual remedies before he can sue for damages.²⁸ Under the charter of the city of New Orleans, appropriations on the budget of that city proposing payment out of the revenues of the year of debts and liabilities of a previous year are illegal, and payments under such appropriations may be enjoined by any party in interest.²⁹

b. Pleading. In an action on a warrant it is necessary to allege presentation and demand;³⁰ and on a warrant on a special fund, that there is money in that fund to pay it.³¹ And in an action based upon the diversion of a special fund by the payment out of their order of subsequent warrants, the diversion of sufficient money to have paid all warrants drawn on the special fund, which were prior to those held by plaintiff, must be alleged.³² It is not necessary to set forth the consideration of a warrant, where by statute it is a negotiable instrument,³³ nor to allege that there was money in the general fund on which it was drawn,³⁴ nor to allege the council proceedings by which the person signing warrants became acting mayor.³⁵ An allegation that warrants were registered according to law at the date of presentation is not a mere legal conclusion.³⁶ Where it is claimed that warrants are invalid because the city had exceeded its constitutional limit of indebtedness, the court cannot consider, on demurrer to the petition, financial statements of the city showing such indebtedness not contained in the petition.³⁷ A plea of non est factum challenges both the genuineness of the official signatures to a warrant, and the authority of the officers to issue it.³⁸ An answer is not demurrable which sets up that the certificate sued on was issued and delivered without consideration or authority, that the pretended consideration was a collusive contract which was ultra vires and illegal, and that the municipal revenue had been anticipated to its full extent.³⁹

c. Evidence. Consideration for a warrant need not be proven, as one will be presumed.⁴⁰ In an action upon municipal warrants, if they are set out in the petition by copy and not denied under oath, they may be admitted in evidence without proof of the signature of the officer drawing them or of the authority to issue them.⁴¹ Where an order on a municipal treasurer is offered in evidence, showing on its face that it is payable out of money in the treasury, from a special assessment tax, it devolves upon the holder to show, before he can recover, that there is money in the treasury to pay his order arising from such special assessment tax.⁴² But an indorsee may recover against the indorser of a municipal warrant payable "out of any funds belonging to the city, not before specially appropriated," without proving that funds were appropriated for its payment and in the treasury.⁴³ Where, in an action against the city on its warrants, there was no claim that the transfer of the warrants to plaintiff was without notice, or before maturity, the admission of evidence that the agent of plaintiff at the time of the purchase of the warrants had never heard of any defense to them, although erroneous, was not prejudicial to defendant.⁴⁴

d. Findings and Judgment. Holders of municipal certificates of indebtedness who are entitled to payment only out of funds appropriated for that purpose, cannot recover an absolute judgment against the city therefor, in case the fund proves inadequate from any cause.⁴⁵ A finding that when a certain warrant was issued the city had exceeded the constitutional limit of indebtedness does not show that such limit was reached when the indebtedness was incurred, for which the warrant was issued, and does not establish the invalidity of such warrant.⁴⁶

C. Bonds, Securities, and Sinking Funds — 1. IN GENERAL — a. Power to Issue Securities. Municipalities cannot issue bonds or other like securities unless the power to do so is conferred by legislative authority, either express or clearly implied,⁴⁷ and any doubt as to the existence of such power ought to be resolved against its existence.⁴⁸ It has been held, however, that power given to a municipality to contract debts⁴⁹ or to borrow money⁵⁰ implies a power to issue bonds, Authority by estoppel.—Authority to issue municipal bonds cannot be conferred by estoppel. Johnson City v. Charleston, etc., R. Co., 100 Tenn. 138, 44 S. W. 670.

Negotiable bonds.—The power to issue bonds includes power to make them negotiable unless restrained by positive enactment. The character of municipal bonds is as well established as that of bills of exchange or promissory notes and it is no more necessary to say "negotiable bonds" than to say "negotiable notes" or "negotiable bills." *Klamath Falls v. but this last proposition has been expressly denied.⁵¹ Power granted to a municipal corporation to give such bonds as may be necessary in the conduct of its litigation or in the current administration of its affairs does not authorize the issue of bonds for raising money.⁵²

b. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions. State legislatures may and frequently do, by statute, authorize municipalities to issue bonds for certain purposes and upon certain conditions;⁵³ but such statutes must be passed in accordance with constitutional requirements,⁵⁴ and must not violate constitutional provisions.⁵⁵ Whether the effect of statutory or constitutional provisions as to issuing bonds is to repeal former acts or abrogate existing powers is to be determined by the courts under the general rules of construction.⁵⁶

Strict construction.—Statutes which authorize the issuance of bonds by the minor political subdivisions of the state are subjects for strict construction when an interpretation is necessary, and where, from a careful study and analysis of the whole act and its several parts, the meaning and intent is doubtful, the doubt should be resolved in favor of the public or taxpayers. *State v. quently prohibited by express statutes;⁵⁷ and it seems that, even in the absence of such express prohibition, municipalities have no right to exercise this prerogative.⁵⁸ A city may, however, execute valid notes for the property purchased by it or for rentals,⁵⁹ which will not be invalidated because the city council contemplates their circulation as money.⁶⁰ Notes issued by a city which on their face are made receivable for all debts and demands due the city are not within the prohibition of the federal constitution against emitting bills of credit.⁶¹ Where notes purport to be executed by municipal officers the payee takes them at the risk of the authority of such officers.⁶²

2. PURPOSE OF ISSUE — a. In General. The legislature has no power to authorize the issuance of municipal bonds for any purpose except a public one.⁶³ A later grant of general power to issue bonds for municipal purposes is not restricted by a prior grant of power to issue them for specific purposes.⁶⁴

sary county buildings are not public improvements or public works for which municipal bonds may be issued.⁷⁷

d. Donations. Bonds may not be issued as a donation to aid mills, factories, or any other private enterprise;⁷⁸ but a city may when authorized by popular vote issue bonds to purchase lands which it is authorized to give, to aid in the establishment of a university.⁷⁹

e. Aid to Internal Improvements. Statutes authorizing municipalities to issue bonds in aid of works of internal improvement have been held to include bridges,⁸⁰ canals for irrigation purposes,⁸¹ and public grist-mills.⁸²

f. Aid to Railways. In the absence of some constitutional provision prohibiting it,⁸³ the legislature of a state has power to authorize municipalities to issue bonds in aid of railroads designed to benefit the public interests of the community;⁸⁴ but a municipality is without authority to issue bonds for this purpose

Power to aid two railroads authorizes the issue of bonds in favor of either separately. St. Johnsbury First Nat. Bank v. Concord, 50 Vt. 257.

Municipality subsequently incorporated.—Under a statute authorizing any municipality in any county through which any portion of a certain railroad was run to issue and deliver its bonds to such railroad, a village which came into existence after the passage of that act and while the road named therein was in process of construction, had authority to issue its bonds in pursuance of that act. Perrin v. New London, 67 Wis. 416, 30 N. W. 623.

Companies afterward incorporated.—An act of a state legislature authorizing a city to issue its bonds in aid of railroads incorporated and organized does not extend to companies afterward incorporated. Smith v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,082.

Railroads in county where municipality situated.—The power to issue bond for railroads is sometimes limited by statute to railroads running through the county in which the municipality is situated. People v. Adirondack County, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 656; Mellen v. Lansing, 11 Fed. 820, 19 Blatchf. 512.

Railroad outside of city limits.—The legislature may authorize a city to issue its bonds to a railroad company to aid in its construction and to levy and collect taxes to pay the same, although the company may be already bound to construct its road and it is to be built outside of the city limits. Davidson v. Ramsey County Com'rs, 18 Minn. 482.

Power in railroad charter.—The power to issue bonds may be conferred, not only by municipal charter or general law (State v. Babcock, 19 Nebr. 230, 27 N. W. 98), but also by the charter of the railway company (Maddox v. Graham, 2 Mete. (Ky.) 56; Glenn v. Wray, 126 N. C. 730, 36 S. E. 167; Richmond Union Bank v. Oxford Com'rs, 119 N. Payment of judgments.—Under a statute empowering the common council of a municipality to "issue new bonds for the refunding of bonds and evidences of indebtedness already issued," the common council can issue new bonds to raise money for the satisfaction of judgments. Stone v. Chicago, 207 Ill. 492, 69 N. E. 970; Port Huron v. McCall, 46 Mich. 565, 10 N. W. 23. But compare Duchenne v. Board of Liquidation, 51 La. Ann. 1142, 26 So. 55. And municipalities are sometimes expressly authorized to issue bonds to pay judgments. U. S. v. New Orleans Bd. of Liquidation, 60 Fed. 387, 9 C. C. A. 37 [affirmed in 108 Fed. 689, 47 C. C. A. 587]; Fisher v. Board of Liquidation, 56 Fed. 49.

To whom payable.—A statute authorizing municipal corporations to refund their indebtedness by the issue of new bonds does not restrict the issue to bonds payable to the holders of indebtedness to be refunded. West Plains Tp. v. Sage, 69 Fed. 943, 16 C. C. A. 553.

Exceeding debt limit.—A refunding contract which increases the bonded indebtedness beyond the aggregate amount provided by law, although at a lower rate of interest, is void. Guckenberger v. Dexter, 17 Ohio Cir. Ct. 115, 9 Ohio Cir. Dec. 667. A constitutional amendment limiting the amount of indebtedness to be incurred by a municipality to two per cent of the taxable property does not render invalid prior indebtedness exceeding that of the municipality.⁹² But power to issue new negotiable bonds having the attributes of commercial paper to take the place of a former issue cannot be implied merely from ordinary municipal powers, nor from the power conferred by statute to issue the original bonds,⁹³ nor from a mere power to borrow money without authority to issue bonds.⁹⁴ Power to issue bonds to replace in the treasury money already used in paying prior bonds is not conferred by a grant of authority to issue "refunding bonds" or original bonds to procure money for use in the "legitimate exercise of the corporate powers" and for the payment of legitimate corporate debts.⁹⁵ Bonds which are void for lack of power in a municipality to issue them cannot constitute the basis of valid funding bonds.⁹⁶ Municipal bonds issued for the purpose of retiring existing bonds cannot be made to bear interest from a date prior to that at which the old bonds fell due, where the municipality is without power to contract a new debt.⁹⁷

3. LIMITATION OF AMOUNT — a. In General.⁹⁸ In consequence of constitutional⁹⁹ or statutory¹ provisions, municipalities cannot as a general rule issue bonds beyond a certain amount. The fact that municipal bonds previously issued are now in excess of the limit on municipal indebtedness does not render them void, limit, nor deny the right of the city so indebted to refund such debt by the issue of a new bond. Myers v. Jeffersonville, 145 Ind. 431, 44 N. E. 452.

Reducing amount of bonds.— Under the authority given a board of education by statute, when necessary for school sites or buildings, or to fund a bonded indebtedness, to borrow money and issue bonds therefor, and to sell the bonds at not less than par, it may refund an old debt by exchanging bonds at par for a greater amount of preexisting bonds. Ewert v. Mallery, 16 S. D. 151, 91 N. W. 479.

Validity of ordinance authorizing issue.— Under a statute authorizing a city council to pass ordinances to provide for refunding the debt of a city, funding bonds can be issued only by ordinance duly passed and a purchaser of such bonds must see that the ordinance has been regularly passed and that it confers authority to issue bonds, but he is not charged with notice of other parts of the record not connected with such bonds. Tyler v. Tyler Bldg., etc., Assoc., (Tex. 1905) 86 S. W. 750.

Assent of voters to creation of debt.— Where the expenses of a municipal corporation, in excess of its revenues, have been allowed to accumulate for a series of years, the municipality has no lawful authority to issue its bonds to raise a fund for the payment of such indebtedness, although two thirds of the qualified voters of the municipality may assent thereto at an election held for the purpose of deciding whether such bonds shall be issued, since before bonds of a municipality can be lawfully issued, two thirds of its qualified voters must vote, at an election held for that purpose, for the municipality to incur or create the debt which the bonds are to cover. Macon v. Jones, 122 Ga. 455, 50 S. E. 340.

the test being whether they were valid when sold by the municipality.² A limitation upon counties or townships from giving bonds in aid of railroads, beyond a certain amount, does not forbid a municipality within the county or township from giving its bonds in addition to the maximum amount of bonds allowed to be given by the county or township.³ A provision in a state constitution that municipal corporations shall not become indebted in any manner nor for any purpose to an amount exceeding a certain per cent of the taxable property therein forbids implied as well as expressed indebtedness, and is as binding on a court of equity as on a court of law.⁴

b. Particular Purposes. Municipalities are frequently empowered to issue bonds in excess of the general debt limit for such special purposes as railroads,⁵ waterworks,⁶ light plants,⁷ and the like. A statute authorizing a municipality to issue bonds "in any amount" in aid of a railroad will be construed to mean any amount within the constitutional limit, and therefore not in conflict with it.⁸ Bonds issued for the purpose of providing a city with funds from which it may reimburse itself for amounts paid to contractors under a contract creating an indebtedness on the part of the city in excess of the constitutional limit are void, although bearing on their face the condition that they are payable only out of a paving fund created by the collection of a special tax levied on abutting property.⁹

c. Funding or Refunding Bonds. Bonds which are issued to fund a valid indebtedness neither create any debt nor increase the debt of the municipality which issues them. They merely change the form of an existing indebtedness.¹⁰

d. Computation of Limit or Amount.¹¹ Bonds of a municipality which are void because in excess of the constitutional limit of indebtedness are not to be counted in estimating the indebtedness of the municipality with reference to the validity of another issue of bonds.¹² Interest to accrue is not included in computing the amount of bonds which may be issued,¹³ and the sinking fund on hand is to be deducted from the amount of outstanding bonds in determining whether the municipal debt limit has been exceeded.¹⁴ Bonds issued for municipal utilities are not to be considered in ascertaining the amount of bonds which may be issued in aid of a railroad,¹⁵ but railroad aid bonds are to be included in counting the total amount of bonds which may be issued.¹⁶

e. Time of Creation of Indebtedness. The time of the actual issue of municipal bonds is the time for determining whether the debt limit is exceeded.¹⁷ A charter provision for funding floating indebtedness does not include a portion of the present floating indebtedness which did not actually exist at the time the provision was adopted.¹⁸

f. Valuation of Property. The basis for computing the limitation of municipal indebtedness is not the actual value of property within the municipality,¹⁹ but the value thereof as shown by the last regular tax assessment made by the proper authorities,²⁰ and completed at the time the debt is created.²¹

g. Validity of Excessive Issues. Where municipal bonds have been already issued to the amount authorized by law, all bonds issued thereafter are void;²² but where the limit has not been previously reached, bonds which in the aggregate exceed the limit are void only to the extent of the excessive issue.²³ Where an issue of bonds is only partially excessive if the bonds are delivered at different dates those first delivered up to the amount of the debt the municipality can law-

Test of validity.—The test of the validity of municipal bonds, for the purpose of determining whether they are to be included as a part of the outstanding indebtedness of the municipality at the time a subsequent issue was made, is not whether they were recognized as valid by the officers of the corporation, but whether they were legally enforceable; and where the indebtedness of the corporation exceeded the constitutional limit when they were issued, they at no time constitute a legal indebtedness, although they may have been afterward paid, and their validity had not been questioned. German Ins. Darlington, 63 Fed. 76.

Tacoma*, 6 Wash. 427, 33 Pac. 1059 (holding that the items upon an assessment roll must be added up before the assessment is complete, and can be used as a basis for computing the limitation of municipal indebtedness).

Excessive issue authorized by voters.—The voting for an issue of bonds in excess of the amount allowed by law does not invalidate the vote, and bonds may be issued thereunder up to the lawful limit; but where at the same election bonds are voted to two railroads, in amounts which taken singly are in excess of the limit, and a subscription is first made by the county commissioners to one of the roads for the full amount voted for it, a subsequent subscription to the other fully create should be paid and the others should be treated as nullities;²⁴ but if the bonds were delivered at the same time so that none has priority over the others, each bond is valid to the extent of its proportionate share of the debt lawfully contracted.²⁵

4. PRELIMINARY PROCEEDINGS — a. In General. While the power of a municipality to issue bonds must be exercised in conformity with the legal requirements as to preliminary proceedings,²⁶ yet such bonds are valid notwithstanding slight irregularities in such proceedings.²⁷

b. Ordinance or Resolution. Where the passage of an ordinance or resolution by the city council, authorizing the issuance of bonds, is required by statute,²⁸ bonds issued without any ordinance or resolution are void,²⁹ although issued under the corporate seal.³⁰ In the absence of a statutory provision requiring a city council to authorize an issuance of bonds by ordinance,³¹ authority may be given by resolution.³²

Subsequent compliance.—A statute providing that municipal railroad aid bonds or subscriptions shall not be valid and binding until a compliance with the conditions precedent prescribed by the act does not make a performance of the conditions before the subscription or issuance of the bonds essential to their validity; a subsequent performance thereof being sufficient. Eagle v. Kohn, 84 Ill. 292.

Prescribing form and contents of bonds.—A charter requirement that an ordinance for the issuance of bonds to cover the cost of a street improvement shall prescribe their form and may provide that the entire issue shall be paid to the contractor is sufficiently complied with, where a contract providing for delivering to the contractor the entire issue of bonds was made prior to the passage of the ordinance approving the assessment roll, and the bonds conformed to a general ordinance prescribing the form of all local improvement bonds, which was in force at the time the contract was entered into. Jones v. Seattle, 19 Wash. 669, 53 Pac. 1105. A resolution need not copy the proposed bonds in full; but it is sufficient to specify that the bonds shall be issued to represent the cost of the proposed improvement, and shall be serial, specifying terms, time of payment, and interest, which description is to be construed in connection with the positive requirements of the statute concerning the form and contents of the bonds. *Chase v. Y.) 374 (holding that a petition for bonds for a railroad must show that the amount of the proposed subscription does not exceed the per centum of taxable property which the law prescribes as a basis for the subscription); Cleveland v. Spartanburg, 54 S. C. 83, 31 S. E. 871 (holding that petitions of freeholders for an election to authorize the issuance of bonds need not recite that the subscribers are a majority of the freeholders).

Statements as to railroad aided.—A petition for the issuance of railroad bonds must designate the railroad company for whose benefit the bonds are to be issued (Horton v. Thompson, 71 N. Y. 513; People v. Franklin, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 129), and must state that such railroad is an existing incorporated company (People v. Franklin, supra). But see People v. Peck, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 528, 62 Barb. 545, 42 How. Pr. 425), in the state (In re Gorham, 43 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 263).

Expression as to investment of proceeds.—The expression of a desire by some of the petitioners for the issuance of railroad aid bonds, that the proceeds thereof should be invested in first mortgage bonds of the railroad, does not render the petition insufficient or informal. People v. Hughitt, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 89. A desire expressed in a petition by taxpayers, for authority to bond a municipality, that the bonds be invested in stock of a railroad company is within the statute authorizing a desire that the bonds or the proceeds be so invested and the variance does not affect the jurisdictional character of the petition. Cherry Creek v. Becker, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 514.

Necessity and sufficiency of statement as to majority of taxpayers see Solan v. Williamsburgh Sav. Bank, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 1 [affirmed in 114 N. Y. 122, 21 N. E. 168]; People v. Hughitt, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 89.

Excluding persons "taxed for dogs or highways only."—A petition to the county judge under N. Y. Laws (1871), c. 925, for bonding a town in aid of a railroad must set forth that the petitioners are a majority of the taxpayers of the town, appearing on the last preceding assessment roll, not including those "taxed for dogs or highways only." An averment that they are a majority and that their names appear thereon is insufficient. Mentz v. Cook, 108 N. Y. 504, 15 N. E. 541; Wellsborough v. New York, etc., R. Co., 76 N. Y. 182; Strang v. Cook, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 46; Rich v. Mentz, 134 U. S. 632, 10 S. Ct. 610, 33 L. ed. 1074 [affirming 19 Fed. 725, and reversing 18 Fed. 52, 21 Blatchf. 492]; Clarke v. Northampton, 120 Fed. 661, 57 C. C. A. 123. Contra, Chandler v. Attica, 18 Fed. 299, 21 Blatchf. 499.

36. People v. Hulburt, 46 N. Y. 110, holding that where a trustee signs a petition in favor of the issuing of railroad aid bonds, in his representative capacity, his authority to represent and bind the estate of his beneficiary must be shown affirmatively.

Signatures procured by misrepresentation.—Where a taxpayer has been induced to sign a petition for the issuance of railroad aid bonds by misrepresentation as to the nature of the instrument signed or as to the company being benefited, and had no opportunity to inform himself as to its contents, his signature is invalid. People v. Franklin, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 129.

Signatures obtained by bribes.—Signatures of taxpayers to a petition for the issuance of railroad aid bonds are valid, although induced by payments in the nature of bribes. People v. Franklin, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 129.

of persons required,³⁷ who possess the prescribed qualifications,³⁸ are void,³⁹ at least in the hands of those to whom they are issued, if not in the hands of every subsequent holder.⁴⁰ And where it is required by statute that a consent in writing shall be filed and recorded, it must be both filed and recorded before the issuance of municipal bonds can be compelled.⁴¹ Attaching conditions to the signatures to a petition for the issue of railroad bonds does not necessarily vitiate it.⁴²

(ii) WITHDRAWAL OF ASSENT. Persons who have signed a petition for or consent to the issuance of municipal bonds may withdraw their names therefrom at any time before a determination has been reached by the officer or board whose duty it is to pass upon such petition or consent.⁴³

d. Determination and Effect. The judgment and determination of a municipal officer or board charged by law with the duty of deciding the questions

Where the name of a corporation appears on the petition for railroad aid bonds, its corporate existence, the authority of those signing it, and that the corporation is solvent must be proved. People v. Hulburt, 46 N. Y. 110. The power of a corporation, as a taxable inhabitant of a town, to consent to the bonding of the town for the construction of a railroad through it must be shown in the acknowledgment of an instrument giving such consent, which is to be acknowledged like deeds. People v. Deyoe, 2 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 142.

Signature by petitioner necessary.—Under N. Y. Laws (1869), c. 907, relating to municipal aid for railroads, the petitioner must either subscribe the petition himself or his name must be subscribed by some other person by his direction and in his presence. People v. Hulburt, 46 N. Y. 110; People v. Smith, 45 N. Y. 772; People v. Peck, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 528, 62 Barb. 542, 42 How. Pr. 425.

In ascertaining the number of freeholders so as to determine numerically whether a petition for railroad aid bonds is signed by a majority of the resident freeholders, all persons resident within the municipality and owning a freehold interest in land therein must be counted. State v. Kokomo, 108 Ind. 74, 8 N. E. 718.

Guardian or trustee.—A person assessed individually and also as guardian or trustee must be counted but once in ascertaining whether a majority of taxpayers have signed a petition. People v. Franklin, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 129.

Persons representing estates of deceased persons are not counted as taxpayers. People v. Franklin, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 129.

Joint owners.—In ascertaining whether a majority of the taxpayers whose names are on the last assessment roll have consented to bond the town for railroad purposes, joint owners of property are to be counted separately. People v. Franklin, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 129. Joint owners, when taxed as a partnership, are to be regarded as one taxpayer only. People v. Peck, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 528, 62 Barb. 545, 42 How. Pr. 425. See also People v. Franklin, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 129.

Petitioner who has sold his property or moved away counted.—People v. Franklin, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 129.

Filing revocation of consent.—Written revocations of consent need not be filed in the town or county clerk's office. It is sufficient if they are delivered to the assessors while the consents are before them, and before they have been acted upon. Springport v. Teutonia Sav. Bank, 84 N. Y. 403.

preliminary to the issue of bonds are conclusive until reversed in a direct proceeding by an appellate court.⁴⁴ Under a statute providing that a judgment of a county judge authorizing a town to create a bonded debt "shall have the same force and effect as other judgments," the judgment of the county judge may be questioned for want of jurisdiction; ⁴⁵ but the burden of proving that such judgment is void for want of jurisdiction is upon those who assert it.⁴⁶ The judgment of a county court that a majority of the taxpayers of a municipality consented to the issue of railroad bonds creates no absolute right in the railroad company thereto.⁴⁷ The representations of municipal officers who are authorized to borrow money upon obtaining the assent of certain taxpayers that such assent has been obtained does not bind the municipality.⁴⁸

5. ELECTION ON QUESTION OF BOND ISSUE⁴⁹—a. In General. Where a constitutional provision requires the submission of the question of issuing municipal bonds to the voters of the municipality, a statute authorizing the issue of bonds without such submission is invalid.⁵⁰ And where the issuance of municipal bonds is authorized only when the proposition has been submitted to and approved by the voters of the municipality,⁵¹ the holding of an election,⁵² conducted as prescribed by statute,⁵³ and the assent of the number of voters required thereby,⁵⁴ is necessary to the validity of the bonds. In North Carolina, as the constitution, article 7, section 7, does not require that debts contracted by a municipality for necessary expenses shall be submitted to the qualified voters of the municipality, a submission to the voters is not necessary to authorize the issuing of bonds to fund a debt incurred for necessary expenses (*Raleigh Gas Light Co. v. Majority of all votes at general election.—A proposition to authorize the issuance of funding bonds was submitted to the electors of a city pursuant to the provisions of such section of the statutes at the same time and place as the general city election. It was held, under the facts shown, to be but one election; that the presumption is that all the electors voted at such election, and the proposition to work its adoption must have received a majority of all the votes cast at such election. *Bryan v. Recital as to statute.—A recital in an ordinance submitting a proposition to bond a city for the establishment of an electric lighting plant, that said ordinance was passed in pursuance of a certain act, is mere surplusage; and where the act recited is no longer in force, but is substantially reenacted by the repealing act under which the ordinance must in fact have been adopted, there is no ground for issuing an injunction against the bond issue. *Lewis v. purpose of issuing them.⁶⁴ The propositions should be submitted in such a way as to obtain a full and fair expression of the will of the voters on their merits.⁶⁵ Two or more propositions for issuing bonds may be submitted at the same election unless this is forbidden by statute,⁶⁶ but two separate and distinct propositions should not be presented as one so as to have one assent of the voters answer for both.⁶⁷ An offer in a proposition to employ bona fide residents on the work for which it is proposed to issue bonds is not an offer of an unlawful inducement so as to invalidate the bonds.⁶⁸ No formal proposition authorizing the levy of a tax need be submitted along with the proposition to issue bonds to be donated to a railroad, as a vote to issue bonds is impliedly a vote to levy the requisite tax to pay them.⁶⁹

c. Application and Notice. The application or petition for a bond election must be made by the persons authorized by law to make it.⁷⁰ It need not be formally addressed to the officer who is to call the election, it being sufficient that he receives and acts upon it.⁷¹ A petition to the mayor of a city need not be submitted by him to the city council.⁷² The names of persons who have been induced to sign such a petition by false and fraudulent representations should not be counted.⁷³ The notice of election should contain such particulars as are required by statute,⁷⁴ and should be published for such a time and in compliance with such formalities as are required by law.⁷⁵

Interest.—It was not necessary to submit to the voters the alternative of making the interest on the proposed bonds payable annually or semiannually, but it is sufficient that the ordinance states the time at which the interest shall be payable; and it is only the amount of the bonds and the rate of interest which constitute the indebtedness proposed to be incurred, and upon which the voters are to express their wishes. *Murphy v. d. Conduct and Record of Election. The forms of proceedings in the submission of the question of issuing municipal bonds being designed as a protection to the taxpayers, a due observance of these forms is essential to valid action;⁷⁶ and therefore bond issue elections should be conducted in the manner⁷⁷ and by the prescribed officers⁷⁸ provided for by statute. But mere informalities of the election officers in holding and ascertaining and declaring the result of a bond election, unless it is otherwise provided by statute, will not vitiate an election otherwise fair and impartial.⁷⁹ Such elections should be held on the day⁸⁰ and during the hours⁸¹ prescribed by law. The requirement of a statute that a record of the election shall be made is directory merely, and a failure to comply therewith does not invalidate the election.⁸² Where it is alleged that an election is invalid because the ballots used were not in the proper form, the election will be upheld if the ballots used were not so ambiguous as to deprive any one of his right to vote,⁸³ and there has been a full and fair expression of opinion.⁸⁴ To ascertain how many votes are cast upon a proposition, in the absence of fraud or mistake, the legal and countable ballots found in the ballot box at the close of the polls, upon which the voter has intelligently expressed himself, is primarily determinate of the question.⁸⁵ The method of determining whether a majority of the qualified voters have voted for the issuance of bonds is by reference to the list of registered voters, if a system of registration has by legislative enactment been provided for the municipality desiring to make the issue; if not, then by reference to the tally sheets of the last general election held for such municipality.⁸⁶ Where outside territory is annexed to a city at such a time that no provision can be made for the residents of such territory to vote at a bond election, the fact that such resi-

Excessive number of votes.—When an election is held in a municipality to determine whether two thirds of the qualified voters will give their assent to the issuance of bonds, and there is no law authorizing or requiring a registration of the voters of the town, and at the election held the total number of votes cast exceeds the total number cast at the last general election in the town, as shown by the tally-sheets of that election, and no question is raised as to the right of any one of the voters to participate in the bond election, the assent of two thirds of the qualified voters is not obtained where the number voting in favor of bonds is less than two thirds of the votes cast at the bond election. McKnight v. Senoia, 115 Ga. 915, 42 S. E. 256.

e. Operation and Effect of Election. Where a proposition to issue bonds has been submitted and acted upon favorably by the voters of the municipality, the executive officers thereof cannot refuse to issue the bonds,⁸⁸ nor may they vary the terms and conditions of the submission.⁸⁹ And where a municipality, at an election for that purpose, accepts a written proposal to issue bonds in aid of a railroad company, the terms and construction of the proposal cannot be modified by representations of the company made to the voters between the time of the proposition and the election.⁹⁰ The defeat of a proposition to issue bonds does not prevent a second submission of the proposition;⁹¹ and the defeat of one proposition, submitted concurrently with others, does not affect the validity of those receiving the requisite majority.⁹² Separate bond propositions all carried at the same election do not necessitate separate bond issues; a single issue for the aggregate amount of all the bonds authorized may be made.⁹³ Where the votes of a majority of the citizens of a municipality have been given in favor of a municipal loan and bonds have been issued therefor, no one interposing to prevent the issue and all parties acting in good faith, the municipality cannot afterward object to the regularity of the preliminary proceedings and set up that the vote was not taken in the form in which under the statute it ought to have been taken.⁹⁴

6. DENOMINATION AND INTEREST — a. Denomination. Where a municipality is authorized to issue bonds of a certain denomination, bonds for a greater denomination cannot lawfully be issued.⁹⁵ It is no valid objection to municipal bonds that a single bond was at first issued in payment of the whole of a subscription in aid of a railroad, and afterward bonds of smaller denomination were given in exchange for the single bond.⁹⁶

b. Interest. It has been held that where a city is authorized to issue bonds bearing a certain rate of interest, bonds cannot lawfully be issued at an increased rate of interest.⁹⁷ But the rule generally laid down is that when bonds bear a greater rate of interest than that authorized they are valid obligations for the principal and the authorized rate of interest.⁹⁸ The validity of municipal bonds will not be affected by the fact that they provide for interest at a lesser rate than that which they are authorized to bear.⁹⁹ Whether the interest on bonds shall be payable annually or semiannually is generally a matter to be determined by the officers authorized to issue them.¹ An objection to the rate of interest which bonds in aid of a railroad are to bear, and the time they are to run, comes too late after mandamus has been granted requiring the issuance and delivery of such bonds.² The fact that a charter provision limits the interest to be paid on certain bonds therein authorized to be issued to a certain rate does not by implication deny the right to pay a higher rate of interest upon any other character of indebtedness.³ Matured municipal, interest-bearing, coupon bonds continue to bear interest after their maturity where there is nothing in the statute providing for them to indicate the contrary; and the fact that the coupons for interest attached to the bonds extend only to the maturity of the bonds is indicative only of a presumption that the bonds will be paid at maturity, and does not affect the continuance of interest if the bonds are not so paid.⁴ The liability of a municipality for interest on coupons attached to its bonds is fully discussed elsewhere.⁵

7. PAYMENT OR REDEMPTION— a. In General. A requirement that before bonds are issued provision must be made for their payment or redemption must be complied with for the bonds to be valid,⁶ and no plan or scheme for making such provision other than that prescribed by statute can lawfully be substituted.⁷ Where an act conferring power upon a city council to incur an indebtedness and issue its bonds therefor is silent in regard to the time when the bonds shall be made payable, and in regard to the terms and conditions upon which they shall be payable, such matters will be left to the city and the person to whom the bonds are to be issued, to be settled, and when agreed to, the city may make the payment of such bonds depend upon conditions mutually assented to.⁸ Municipal bonds having on their face many years to run, but issued and put in circulation with an indorsement upon each of them to the effect that in case default be made in paying any of the interest coupons at maturity then as a part of the contract the bond itself shall become due and payable, are legally due, as to the whole of the principal, whenever a default in paying interest according to any of the coupons occurs.⁹ A promise to pay contained in municipal bonds "without relief from the valuation or appraisal laws of the state" is a mere waiver by the debtor of the benefit of valuation or appraisal in case the obligation shall be enforced by execution at law, and cannot be construed to require levies for payment of the bonds to be made upon the same valuation that existed in the municipality when the bonds were issued.¹⁰ Municipal bonds issued upon a subscription to the stock of a railroad company, under an ordinance which declared that the stock "should remain for ever pledged for the payment of the bonds," are an absolute obligation of the city, the ordinance creating only a pledge of the stock by way of col-

Even after bonds have been validated a provision for an annual tax must be made before the bonds can be sold and the debt thereby actually incurred. Woodall v. Adel, 122 Ga. 301, 50 S. E. 102.

lateral security for their payment.¹¹ Where an ordinance of a city authorizing a contract with a gas company and the issue to it of bonds of the municipality provides that such company shall "guarantee the said bonds and assume the payment of the principal thereof at maturity," the indorsement on the bonds by the president of such company guaranteeing "the payment of the principal and interest" by them is a compliance with the ordinance and contract as to the guaranty.¹² A municipality is liable upon the coupons of municipal bonds, although such coupons themselves show no promise or undertaking on the part of the municipality, where by the express terms of the bonds the municipality is bound for their payment.¹³

b. Time of Payment. Where it is provided by a state constitution or by statute that an issue of municipal bonds shall not extend beyond a certain number of years from the date of issuance,¹⁴ such limitation must be regarded as in the nature of a restriction on the power to issue bonds, and bonds having a longer time to run than that prescribed are void.¹⁵ But the fact that a statute providing that no more than a certain per cent of an entire loan for which bonds were issued shall fall due in any one year¹⁶ is violated does not invalidate bonds which are regular in every other respect.¹⁷ Where the rate of interest which municipal

No. 8,603, 1 Biss. 314 (holding that an act authorizing a city to issue bonds payable in twenty years gives authority to make them payable twenty years from the date of the act, although this is less than twenty years from the date of the bonds).

Time of payment fixed by chance.—An act providing for the issuance of bonds to fund a municipal debt is rendered void by the provision for the payment of principal and interest on the bonds at a time to be determined by chance in a lottery, rather than at the fixed time provided at the original issue of bonds. Louisiana v. Pillsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 1090.

bonds bear does not exceed that provided by the statute authorizing the issuance of the bonds, although the time of payment of interest may vary from that provided in the statute, yet the bonds are valid.¹⁸ Bonds issued for a certain number of years are not redeemable before maturity without the consent of the persons holding them.¹⁹

c. Place of Payment. Municipal bonds should be made payable at the place prescribed by law;²⁰ but where a statute authorizing the issuance of such bonds does not designate the place at which they shall be made payable, the place of payment is within the discretion of the municipal officers whose duty it is to issue them.²¹

d. Medium of Payment. Where a statute authorizing the issuing of municipal bonds is silent as to the kind of currency in which the bonds shall be paid, the municipality has power to make them payable in gold coin of the United States, of the present standard weight and fineness.²²

8. AUTHORITY OF OFFICERS OR AGENTS. The right and duty of municipal officers and boards to issue bonds is derived from and depends upon the provisions of the statutes authorizing their issue.²³ Officers appointed by a court or authorized by a city council to issue municipal bonds or to execute other municipal securities must pursue their authority or their acts will not be binding upon the municipality.²⁴

Where the citizens of a municipality assent at an election²⁵ or by petition²⁴ to a bond issue, the provisions of the proposition submitted, or of the petition, must be complied with. And after the acceptance of a bid based upon valid proceedings, officers have no discretion to refuse to issue bonds.²⁷ Under an act authorizing a city to issue funding bonds to be deposited with its fiscal agent who is required by the act to give such bonds at par to the creditors mentioned in a statement of debts, to be prepared by the city controller, a bank acting as the city's fiscal agent has no power to go behind such statement and refuse to deliver bonds in payment of debts embraced therein.²⁸

9. SALE OR DISPOSAL OF BONDS— a. In General. Authority to borrow money and issue bonds impliedly authorizes the sale of the bonds when issued.²⁹ The power of a municipal council to sell bonds³⁰ is one which cannot be delegated by the council by ordinance or otherwise.³¹ It is not necessary, however, that municipal authorities should act personally in selling bonds and investing the proceeds, but they may do so through the medium of a broker³² or other agent.³³ Where it is required that bonds shall be sold after advertisement and to the highest and best bidder,³⁴ a sale without advertisement, without competition, and not to the highest bidder, is void.³⁵ Where, however, there is no such requirement a municipality authorized to issue and sell bonds to pay a debt or subscription may, the debtor or beneficiary consenting, deliver the bonds at par in payment of the debt or subscription in lieu of raising money upon them by loan and then paying that money in discharge of the debt or subscription.³⁶ Although a notice has been published inviting bids for municipal securities, yet the contract sioners and the railroad company in aid of which they were issued had notice, as between the town and the commissioners the bonds are invalid. Stewart v. Lansing, 104 U. S. 505, 26 L. ed. 866.

Variance between advertisement and resolution.—It does not lie with the bidder for municipal bonds to complain of a material variance, as to time of redemption, between the advertisement and the resolution authorizing the bonds, where the board had power to, and did, make the bonds payable according to the advertisement. State v. Allison, 11 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 62, 8 Ohio N. P. 170.

Conditional bid.—A bid for municipal bonds, containing the clause, "Our bid is to be subject to the approval of the legality of the issues by our counsel," is a conditional bid. Trowbridge v. New York, 24 Misc. (N. Y.) 517, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 616.

Right to reject bids reserved.—Where a city reserves the right to reject any and all bids for municipal bonds, it may award the bonds to a person offering "one hundred dollars more than the best bid"; the only restriction placed upon it by law being that it shall not dispose of its bonds for less than their par value. *Lamprecht Bros. is incomplete until the proposal is accepted and the municipality inviting the proposals is not liable for damages for refusing to accept an offer even though it be the highest regular offer made.³⁷ Where, however, after the acceptance of a contract for the sale of municipal bonds a question arises as to the validity of the sale, the fact that a better bid is made for the bonds does not authorize the municipality to ignore its previous acceptance of the buyer's proposal, neither bid being made in response to an advertisement for bids.³⁸ One who, pursuant to an advertisement of sale, makes a bid for municipal bonds of a certain kind cannot be required to take part of the amount in other bonds, although equally valuable.³⁹ But one who has contracted to purchase certain municipal bonds to be issued from time to time, the proceeds to be issued for drainage and sewerage, cannot refuse to accept the second issue of such bonds on the ground that the proceeds of the first have been used for street improvements, such use being within the general scope of the legislative act authorizing their issue.⁴⁰ A buyer of municipal bonds from the city is not liable in damages for refusing to accept them when their marketable value is destroyed or impaired by questions of legality arising from facts shown by, or omissions in, the city's own records; and it is immaterial that after his refusal, and after the bonds have been sold by the city to other parties, the state supreme court adjudges the bonds to be valid, as the purchaser then has no opportunity to accept them with the benefit of such adjudication.⁴¹ A sale of its bonds by a municipality to the members of its council is void, irrespective of the principles of equity as applied to persons acting in a fiduciary capacity, and independent of the fact that it is a part of a scheme to pervert the property of the municipality from its legitimate municipal purposes to private ends, on the ground that no man can contract with himself.⁴² A municipality authorized to issue bonds during the Civil war could receive payment for them in Confederate money.⁴³

b. Discount and Commission. When expressly authorized to do so by statute,⁴⁴ or unless there is an express prohibition against such action,⁴⁵ a municipality may sell its bonds for less than their par value.⁴⁶ Where the rate of interest which bonds issued by a municipality may bear is fixed by statute, the municipality cannot sell its bonds below par when they bear on their face the statutory rate of interest, as this would result in raising the rate of interest above the statutory limit.⁴⁷ But where the rate of interest is not limited bonds are not invalid because

Accrued interest.—Interest which had accrued on municipal bonds at the time of their sale is as much a part of the amount secured thereby as the principal, and an agreement to sell such bonds for a sum representing their par value exclusive of interest is an agreement to sell the bonds at less than par. Ft. Edward v. Fish, 86 Hun (N. Y.) 548, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 784 [affirmed in 156 N. Y. 363,

Purchasers of municipal bonds with notice that they cannot be sold "for less than par and accrued interest" are liable for the interest accruing up to the time of the delivery of the bonds to them. Edward C. Jones Co. v. Mt. Vernon Bd. of Education, 30 N. Y. App. Div. 429, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 950.

Exchange of bonds for railroad stock.—Where a municipality agrees to give a certain amount to aid in the construction of a railroad, and such amount is expended in the construction of the road, and the municipality pays its subscription in its bonds, of the face value of the amount of its subscription, it does not violate a provision of a statute permitting it to issue bonds in aid of railroad construction—that no bond shall be sold for less than its par value—although in return it is given stock in the road of no marketable value. Atlantic Trust Co. v. Darlington, 63 Fed. 76. But compare Horton v. Thompson, 71 N. Y. 513; Starin v. Genoa, 23 N. Y. 439.

sold below par, if the discount added to the interest expressed does not make the rate usurious.⁴⁸ A statute which authorizes the issue of municipal bonds which "shall be sold at no less than par" and provides that "the councils may allow a reasonable compensation for the sale or negotiation of the said bonds" does not warrant the allowance of a commission to the purchaser of the bonds at par, as such an arrangement is virtually a sale at less than par. The intent of the statute is that compensation shall be paid to an agent of the municipality for his services in effecting a sale of such bonds at or above par, but not to one who purchases the bonds direct from the city.⁴⁹

c. Proceeds of Sale. All the proceeds of a sale of bonds issued for a particular purpose,⁵⁰ premium included,⁵¹ belong to the fund to which they were dedicated.

10. FORM AND CONTENTS OF BONDS. Where a special act authorizing the issuance of municipal bonds contains provisions prescribing the form and conditions of such bonds, it supersedes the general statutory provisions on that subject, and is alone to be looked to in determining the formal sufficiency of bonds issued thereunder.⁵² A mistake in a date,⁵³ or of a single word in the title of the statute,⁵⁴ or a misnomer of a municipality,⁵⁵ will not invalidate municipal bonds. Where the power to issue municipal bonds has been vested in a city by appropriate legislation, a recital on the face of the bonds of a statute which does not grant the authority is not fatal to the securities or material to the issue of their validity,⁵⁶ where it is not claimed that any condition precedent to the issuance required by the statute under which they were in fact issued was omitted.⁵⁷ It is the right and duty of municipal officers to refer in issuing bonds to the authority under which they are acting.⁵⁸ And where municipal bonds do not contain recitals asserting them to be issued conformably to law, a purchaser for value cannot recover.⁵⁹ The fact that a statutory requirement that bonds must state on their face the class of indebtedness to which they belong⁶⁰ is not complied with is not a legal defense to an action on such bonds when they represent a valid indebtedness.⁶¹ A statutory provision that all bonds issued by municipal corporations shall express on their face the purpose for which they were issued, and under what ordinance,⁶² does not require that notes given by a municipal corporation for money borrowed by it shall state the purpose for which such money is to be used.⁶³ The conditions on which municipal bonds are authorized to be issued need not be expressed in such bonds.⁶⁴ Whether railroad aid bonds should be made payable to bearer and not to the railroad company,⁶⁵ or to the company, its assigns, or bearer,⁶⁶ depends upon the provisions of the statute authorizing their issue. Instruments which are notes in form and which recite that they are notes will not be treated as bonds.⁶⁷ Bonds may be antedated when it is so provided by the ordinance authorizing their issue.⁶⁸ Printed bonds duly executed and substituted for typewritten bonds are valid, if the typewritten bonds were.⁶⁹ Although the officers of a municipality have been negligent in signing and issuing bonds without such an examination as would have disclosed an error in their provisions, yet as against one who, when he purchased the bonds, had full knowledge of the error and of the claim of the municipality with regard to it and is seeking to take an unjust advantage of the error, the municipality is entitled to have the error corrected.⁷⁰

11. EXECUTION AND ISSUANCE OF BONDS — a. Execution. Municipal bonds should be executed in the manner and by the officers prescribed in the statute authorizing their issue.⁷¹ The fact that such bonds are not under seal does not necessarily invalidate them.⁷² Municipal bonds are not invalidated because after their issue

Officer whose term has expired.—Under a statute authorizing a city to issue bonds, and providing that the bonds shall be signed by the mayor of such city, the city council has no power after the term of the mayor has expired to authorize him to sign bonds as of a date during his term of office. Coler v. Cleburne, 131 U. S. 162, 9 S. Ct. 720, 33 L. ed. 146.

Persons not officers at time of issue.—Bonds which upon their face purport to have been issued in conformity with an act specified, but which in fact were not issued until after the repeal of said act, being antedated, so as to appear to have been issued prior to such repeal, and which were signed by persons as president and clerk who were not such officials at the date on which the bonds purport to have been issued, are void in the hands of bona fide holders. *Lehman v. a stranger affixes to them wafer seals opposite the names of the officers who signed them but neglected to affix their seals as required by law.⁷³ Where a city having no such seal as is prescribed by statute issues bonds sealed with the seal of the city clerk, recitals in the bonds to the effect that the seal attached is the corporate seal stops the corporation to deny the validity of the seal.⁷⁴ If bonds to which coupons are annexed are properly signed and sealed by the municipal officers it is no defense to an action on the coupons that they are signed by only one of such officers.⁷⁵ The fact that a municipal corporation, although properly a city, issued bonds under the name of a village, does not render the bonds invalid as against a bona fide purchaser, where the corporation has been previously recognized by the legislature as a village and has acted as such.⁷⁶

b. Issue and Delivery — (1) IN GENERAL. "Issuance" properly signifies the ultimate act whereby possession and control of executed bonds passes from the municipality to the donee or purchaser,⁷⁷ and so bonds, although executed and placed in the hands of a public officer, do not become operative if not delivered by him.⁷⁸ The delivery of bonds by an officer authorized to sign but not to deliver them confers upon the holder no right to enforce their payment.⁷⁹ But in the signing and delivery to a purchaser of municipal bonds, the acts of officers de facto are, as to third persons, equally as binding on a municipality as though they had been officers de jure.⁸⁰ A statute providing that municipal officers shall issue bonds within a certain number of days after an election authorizing such issue does not imply that they may not issue them after the time specified.⁸¹ And the fact that municipal bonds were not issued till nearly two years after the passage of an ordinance making provision for their payment does not invalidate them.⁸² Where a subscription to a railroad has been authorized by the assent of the number of taxable residents appearing upon the last assessment roll required by statute, bonds issued for such subscription are not invalid because not issued until after the assessment roll for the next year is by law required to be completed.⁸³

Right to impose condition.—Where a statute authorizes a town to determine by vote whether it will subscribe to a railway company, and requires the town supervisor to make a subscription if it be so voted, but leaves it optional with the town whether it places,⁸⁶ municipal officers appointed to issue such bonds cannot do so until the conditions are fully complied with.⁸⁷ But if such bonds are issued the presumption is that the conditions were complied with and the bonds are prima facie valid.⁸⁸ And it would seem that when municipal railway aid bonds are delivered to a third person to be delivered to the company, on performance of certain conditions, the municipality should bear the loss from any premature or irregular delivery thereof by him.⁸⁹ The delivery of bonds by a trustee with whom they have been placed in escrow for delivery upon the construction of a railroad is not conclusive as to the construction of such road.⁹⁰ Where authority to issue municipal bonds on the performance of certain conditions is conferred by statute upon a particular tribunal, such tribunal has the sole power to determine the fact whether the conditions have been performed or not.⁹¹

12. VALIDITY OF BONDS⁹²—a. In General. In determining the validity of municipal bonds, the questions which most frequently arise are whether the will subscribe at all, in determining the question of subscription the town may impose any conditions it thinks proper and the supervisor has no power in making the subscription to disregard the conditions. People v. Dutcher, 56 Ill. 144.

Failure to complete a railroad within a certain time is a ground for cancellation of bonds issued in aid of such railroad, where the petition presented by the railroad asking for a subscription and the issuance of bonds to pay the same agreed to return such bonds for cancellation if the road should not be completed to a certain point within a certain time, and the action of the council in extending the time of completion of the road is of no effect. Clark v. Rosedale, 70 Miss. 542, 12 So. 600.

Bond for completion.—A vote, at a town meeting called to vote aid to a railroad, that before the bonds of the town shall be issued a bond for the completion of the extension of the road shall be given "in all respects satisfactory, and accepted by, the selectmen" gives the latter discretionary power not only as to the obligors therein, but also as to the form and substance thereof. *Canton v. 92. In Georgia "the legislature has declared the sound policy of determining, by judicial inquiry in advance of the sale, the validity of the bonds about to be placed on the market. The machinery employed is a proceeding in the name of the State against the municipality, county, or political division intending to issue bonds, wherein is alleged a compliance with the constitutional requirements relative to incurring bonded indebtedness. The judgment of the superior court is against the municipality, county, or political division, confirming the issuance of the bonds as in compliance with the statutes and the constitution. As an additional safeguard against possible carelessness or collusion the clerk is required to publish, in a gazette having general circulation in the territory affected, notice of the time of hearing the application to validate the bonds. A substantial compliance with this section of the act is all that is required. No judgment in personam is sought against the individual citizen, but he is permitted and invited to investigate the proceeding and to resist the legality of the proposed bond issue." Rhodes v. Louisville, 121 Ga. 551, 553, 49 S. E. 681; Epping v. Columbus, 117 Ga. 263, 43 S. E. 803, both construing Acts (1897), p. 82. Section 6 of this act, providing for the validation of municipal bonds and for a published notice to the citizens of the municipality, is designed to give information to the citizens of the municipality of the pending proceeding, and a substantial compliance with the section as to notice is all that is required. And where the validating proceeding was served on a municipality described in the caption as "the town of Louisville, Jefferson County," and there is no municipality in such county having such corporate name, but there is a municipality with the corporate name "City of Louisville," such notice is sufficient to notify the citizens of the city of the proceedings to validate its bonds. Rhodes v. Louisville, supra. The mis-

municipality was authorized to issue the bonds,⁹³ for the purpose under consideration; ⁹⁴ whether the debt limit has been exceeded; ⁹⁵ whether the preliminary steps required by law have been taken; ⁹⁶ whether the officers or agents issuing them have pursued their authority; ⁹⁷ whether proper provision has been made for the payment of the bonds; ⁹⁸ whether the bonds are in the proper form; ⁹⁹ whether they have been duly executed and delivered; ¹ and whether they have been sold or disposed of in accordance with law.² Bonds issued by a municipality having no power to issue bonds are not voidable, but void.³ And where municipal bonds carry upon their face unmistakable evidence that the forms of law under which they purport to have been issued have not been complied with, they are likewise void.⁴ Where bonds are issued by a city for two considerations, as to one of which it has power to issue bonds, but as to the other of which it has none, such bonds are wholly void.⁵ And where a number of bonds purporting to be refunding bonds are issued as one series, but part of them are not in fact refunding bonds but are illegal, their illegality attaches to the whole issue.⁶ Bonds legally issued, but illegally made negotiable, are not void but are merely not negotiable.⁷ It is no defense to a suit on bonds issued by a municipality in settlement by compromise of claims against it that such claims were barred by the statute of limitations when the bonds were issued.⁸ Bonds issued by a city to obtain the money for public improvements are not void merely because the statutory provision for levying the assessment to pay such bonds is illegal,⁹ or because the formalities required in making such assessment have not been complied with.¹⁰ The dissolution of a municipal corporation and its reincorporation with less territory does not invalidate bonds issued before its dissolution.¹¹ The validity of bonds cannot be tried in a collateral proceeding.¹²

b. Who May Challenge Validity. The validity of municipal bonds may not nomer of the municipality in a petition to validate bonds under this act does not vitiate the judgment of confirmation, where the officers of the city acknowledged service of the petition and answered the same under oath in its corporate name, and the judgment sets forth the proper corporate name. Rhodes v. Louisville, supra. A judgment validating bonds issued by a town determines that the town has a right to incur the debt and has complied with the conditions authorizing it to issue bonds. Woodall v. Adel, 122 Ga. 301, 50 S. E. 102. Where, in an application for the validation of an issue of bonds, a citizen is made a party to the proceeding, and interposes objections on facts which do not appear in the pleading, he must prove the truth of the facts thus set up, and, unless this is done, the objection should be overruled. Epping v. Columbus, supra. That the authorities of a municipal corporation have contracted to sell those bonds which it is seeking to have validated at a sum much less than they are really worth is no reason for refusing to enter judgment validating the issue. Epping v. Columbus, supra.

be challenged by one not injured thereby,¹³ nor by one for whose benefit they were issued when the municipality has never repudiated them or denied its obligation to pay them, principal and interest, and does not propose to repudiate them;¹⁴ nor by a ministerial officer of the municipality charged only with the duty of paying the bonds;¹⁵ nor by the holders of bonds duly authorized, who have, without objection, allowed a large amount of bonds to be issued in violation of their rights and to pass into the hands of bona fide holders.¹⁶ Where corporate bonds recite their issue under a certain valid statute, and in pursuance of its provisions, and nothing upon their face indicates their invalidity, a defendant to a bill, seeking their sale in part satisfaction of certain liens, may, by cross bill, show that they are in reality void, and thus prevent the court from decreeing a sale, whereby they may pass for value to innocent purchasers.¹⁷

13. ESTOPPEL, RATIFICATION, AND CURE — a. Estoppel to Dispute Validity. Where there is a total want of power to issue bonds, a municipality cannot be estopped from raising such a defense¹⁸ by admissions,¹⁹ by recitals in the bonds,²⁰ by the conduct of its officers as to the bonds,²¹ by acts of acquiescence and approval on the part of the inhabitants of the municipality after knowledge of the facts,²² by issuing securities negotiable in form,²³ nor even by receiving and enjoying the proceeds of such bonds.²⁴ But a municipal corporation which, by the regularity of the execution of its bonds, which is apparent upon their face, induces persons to buy them, is thereby estopped from denying their validity or effect on the ground that, in their execution, or in the preliminary proceedings which warranted their execution, its officers failed to comply with some law or rule of action relative to the mere time or manner of their procedure, with which they might have complied, but which they negligently disregarded.²⁵ A municipality having received and retained stock which was issued in exchange for its bonds cannot raise the objection that the bonds and coupons were not made payable at the time directed by the statute.²⁶ One at whose instance municipal bonds have been issued is estopped to question their validity.²⁷ Abutting owners will not be heard to question the legality of municipal bonds issued to pay for street paving or other like improvements, where the bonds were issued before the assessment was made and the abutting owners allowed the work to proceed to completion without objection.²⁸

b. Ratification of Invalid Bonds — (i) IN GENERAL. An issue of municipal bonds without authority of law cannot be ratified²⁹ without legislative sanction,³⁰ nor will any act of its officers or inhabitants estop the corporation from denying its authority.³¹ Irregularities in the execution and issue of bonds may, however, be cured by ratification.³² Where a town was a de facto corporation at the time it issued certain bonds, and after reincorporation of the town the succeeding de jure corporation assumed the payment thereof as authorized by statute, the bonds became valid obligations of the succeeding corporation.³³

(ii) LEVY OF TAXES FOR PAYMENT. The levy of a tax to pay municipal bonds issued without authority³⁴ or in excess of the constitutional limit,³⁵ or to aid a purely private enterprise,³⁶ or fraudulently issued by officers in satisfaction of a judgment already paid,³⁷ does not estop a municipality from denying the validity of the bonds. And where municipal officers who issue illegal bonds make a tax levy for the purpose of paying interest thereon, and the voters and taxpayers of the municipality at the first opportunity repudiate the officers and the bonds and refuse to pay the interest to the bondholders or to levy further taxes to pay the same, they do not ratify the issue of the bonds.³⁸ Where, however, the power to issue bonds existed but has been irregularly exercised, the levy of a tax for their payment estops the municipality to deny their validity.³⁹

(iii) PAYMENT OF PRINCIPAL OR INTEREST. Where municipal bonds are void in their inception for want of power to issue them,⁴⁰ or because in excess of

Bonds issued before charter effective.—Where a legislature has authorized a municipal bond issue, invalid because made before the charter of the municipality went into effect, a levy of a tax to pay such bonds is evidence of a ratification of them by the municipality. Knapp v. Grant, 27 Wis. 147. And where it appears that the proceeds of bonds issued before the charter of a municipality became effective went into the treasury of the municipality and were expended by it, and that after the charter was in force their validity was recognized by levying a tax for the payment of the interest, this ratifies the bonds and binds the municipality. *Mills v. the debt limit,⁴¹ or because issued in aid of a private enterprise,⁴² and not merely because of irregularities in their issuance, the payment of a part of the principal or the payment of interest thereon by the municipality, however long continued, does not amount to a ratification which estops the municipality from pleading their invalidity. But if there is authority to issue bonds a municipality may, by paying a part of the principal thereof or the interest thereon, become estopped to deny that they are binding obligations,⁴³ because of irregularities or defects in their issuance or in the proceedings preliminary thereto,⁴⁴ particularly where the bonds contain recitals that they were duly authorized and regularly issued,⁴⁵ and where the municipality receives and retains the proceeds of such bonds.⁴⁶ And the fact that a city has for a number of years promptly paid the interest on an issue of bonds raises a strong equity in favor of a holder who purchased during such time, and even if it does not create an estoppel against the city, in a strict sense, is entitled to be considered by the court, in connection with the other facts, where the city subsequently denies the validity of the bonds.⁴⁷ When a city is authorized by the legislature to ratify the illegal issue of its bonds, and to levy taxes to pay the interest on such bonds, the levy of taxes for such purpose and the application of the proceeds to the payment of the interest for a number of years constitutes a ratification of the bonds.⁴⁸ Where a municipality has issued bonds and has paid interest upon them for a number of years without questioning their validity, a court of equity will not at the municipality's instance cancel them in the hands of an innocent purchaser for value, even though they are actually invalid, but will leave the municipality to its remedy by defense at law.⁴⁹

Liberal construction of authorizing statute.

—While obligations issued by a municipal corporation cannot acquire validity through the operation of the doctrine of estoppel if the corporation was without statutory power to issue them in the first instance, yet, where the act from which the power is derived is susceptible of different constructions, and the right to issue bonds is doubtful, the fact that they have been recognized by the municipality and its citizens as valid for a long number of years, during which it has paid interest thereon without objection, will entitle the holders to a more liberal construction of the statute under which the power was exercised than would be given if their validity had been challenged before their issuance or soon thereafter. *Washington County v. c. Curative Statutes. The rule that a subsequent legislative ratification within constitutional limits is equivalent to a prior authorization applies to curative statutes relating to municipal bonds,⁵⁰ or an issue of scrip or other evidence of indebtedness,⁵¹ providing no vested rights have intervened;⁵² but the legislative intention to do so must clearly appear from the terms of the act.⁵³ Where a municipality has authority to issue bonds the legislature may cure any defects or irregularities in the exercise of such power,⁵⁴ or in the manner of disposing of the

The Kansas statute of 1874, providing for the levying and collecting of taxes to pay municipal bonds, was not intended as a curative act or to validate any bonds that would otherwise be void (January v. Johnson County, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,219, 3 Dill. 402); nor is the statute of 1872, providing for the registration of municipal bonds, a curative act, and it does not affect any valid defense which the municipality would otherwise have to bonds previously issued (January v. Johnson County, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,218, 3 Dill. 392 note).

A statute purporting only to cure defects in the mode of submitting to a vote the question of issuing bonds, and assuming that the authority to vote the bonds existed, does not validate any bonds which were voted without authority of law. Williamson v. Keokuk, 44 Iowa 88.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1951.

The legislature may cure any defects or irregularities where the thing done or omitted, or the manner in which it was done, might have been dispensed with or made immaterial by a prior statute. Middleton v. St. Augustine, 42 Fla. 287, 29 So. 421, 89 Am. St. Rep. 227.

Bonds issued in excess of the amount authorized by statute may be validated by a curative act. Read v. Plattsmouth, 107 U. S. 568, 2 S. Ct. 208, 27 L. ed. 414.

A judicial determination that the proceedings were void because not within the authority originally granted in no way impairs the power of the legislature to cure the defective proceedings by declaring them to be valid. Rogers v. Smith, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 475. Where certain bonds of a municipality have been judicially declared to be invalid, an act of the legislature legalizing them is not objectionable as an attempt on the part of the legislature to exercise judicial power in violation of the constitutional prohibition, as respects an action involving the validity of such bonds commenced after the passage of the legalizing act. Schneck v. Jeffersonville, 152 Ind. 204, 52 N. E. 212.

An act expressly relating only to bonds previously issued does not validate bonds issued subsequently to its passage. Concord v. Robinson, 121 U. S. 165, 7 S. Ct. 937, 30 L. ed. 885.

A constitutional prohibition against any "special act conferring corporate powers" does not prevent a statute validating defects and irregularities in corporate bonds, as the statute does not confer any corporate powers, but merely takes away from the municipality the power to interpose an unconscionable defense to a just claim. Read v. Plattsmouth, 107 U. S. 568, 2 S. Ct. 208, 27 L. ed. 414.

The South Carolina statute of 1888 providing for the payment of certain bonds issued in aid of railroads, which were declared invalid because of a constitutional defect in the act authorizing their issue, is not a vali-bonds;⁵⁵ or where the preliminary proceedings were instituted without authority they may be validated and the issue authorized so as to render valid the bonds subsequently issued.⁵⁶ Even where there was no authority for the issue of bonds by a municipal corporation, the legislature may subsequently ratify and validate whatever it might constitutionally have authorized in the first instance,⁵⁷ although the bonds have been declared invalid;⁵⁸ and the legislature cannot subsequently repeal the validating act so as to deprive the obligee of his right to enforce the contract so recognized and made valid.⁵⁹ But the legislature cannot ratify what it has no constitutional right to authorize in the first instance,⁶⁰ and this rule applies where the constitutional inhibition did not exist at the time of the issue of the bonds but intervened prior to the curative act.⁶¹ So the legislature cannot validate bonds which have been issued without the consent of the voters or taxpayers of the municipality and which it could not have authorized to be so issued;⁶²

Validating elections for issuance of bonds.—The legislature may validate an election held to submit to the voters or taxpayers of the municipality the question of issuing bonds which was merely irregular (Bell v. Farmville, etc., R. Co., 91 Va. 99, 20 S. E. 942; Springfield Safe-Deposit, etc., Co. v. Attica, 85 Fed. 387, 29 C. C. A. 214); as where there was an irregularity in the publication of the notice of the election (Otoe County v. Baldwin, 111 U. S. 1, 4 S. Ct. 265, 28 L. ed. 331); but while it may validate the election so as to authorize a municipality to issue the bonds the legislature cannot compel it to do so against its will (Gaddis v. Richland County, 92 Ill. 119; Williams v. Roberts, 88 Ill. 11); nor can the municipality be compelled by mandamus to do so (Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. Sparta, 77 Ill. 505); and the legislature cannot validate an election which was not merely irregular but absolutely void (Berkley v. Lexington Bd. of Education, 58 S. W. 506, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 638), or cure the entire omission of any election (Sykes v. Columbus, 55 Miss. 115), except where under the constitution it might have authorized the issue in the first instance without the necessity of submitting the question to the voters or taxpayers (Middleton v.

nor has it the power to validate an issue of municipal bonds which is in excess of the constitutional debt limit.⁶³

14. REGISTRATION OF BONDS. Where a statute expressly provides that bonds must be registered and certified as such before they shall obtain validity or be negotiated, a compliance with the statute is essential to the validity of the bonds;⁶⁴ but if it merely provides that they shall be registered and does not provide that they shall not be valid until registered, the statute will be construed as directory and a failure to register will not invalidate the bonds,⁶⁵ although all bonds issued as registered bonds, notwithstanding the registration is not a condition precedent to their validity, ought to be registered.⁶⁶ Where bonds have been duly certified as registered by the proper officer, the fact that he failed to make a record of such registration in his office will not destroy their validity.⁶⁷ In some cases it is provided by statute that bonds shall not be entitled to registration unless the question of creating the indebtedness was submitted to the voters of the municipality at an election,⁶⁸ or that when presented for registration any interest coupons shall be detached which will mature before the first tax levied to pay the same will become due and collectable,⁶⁹ or that after registration the auditor shall notify the authorities issuing the bonds of the fact of such registration.⁷⁰ The certificate of the municipal officer required by statute as to a compliance with the conditions entitling the bonds to registration need not be positive but may be sworn to upon the best of that officer's knowledge and belief.⁷¹ Where the bonds issued were not signed by the proper officers as required by statute, the fact and certificate of registration does not estop the municipality from denying their validity.⁷² Where bonds are presented for registration but the registration is delayed by injunction, they should, when actually registered, be registered as of the date when presented.⁷³ Negotiable bonds are not wholly deprived of their negotiable character by registration.⁷⁴ Payment or tender of the prescribed registration fee is necessary before mandamus will be granted to compel registration,⁷⁵ and where convertible coupon bonds contain a recital that they may be registered at the option of the holder, the proper remedy, in case of a refusal of the authorities to register them on demand, is a suit for specific performance of the contract and not mandamus or an action for damages.⁷⁶

the latter statute could not alter the fact that when the election was held there was no law authorizing it.

issuance, directing a tax to be levied for their protection, the law for the tax becomes a part of the contract, and the holder of such bonds has a right to regard it as a part of his security; the measure of his right being the constitutional limit of the power which the legislature could grant to the municipality when the contract was made.⁷⁷ A purchaser of bonds to be paid out of a special tax is bound to take notice of the limitations on the power of taxation, the extent of the special taxing district, and the valuation of the property therein, and if he makes a mistake the loss must fall on him, rather than upon the property-owners in such special district.⁷⁸ So also where the taxing power of a municipality is limited, a creditor accepting a bond payable out of the yearly revenue of the city cannot insist on remedies beyond the limit;⁷⁹ but he is entitled to insist upon the full and proper exercise of the taxing power within the limitation.⁸⁰ Where a city issues improvement bonds stipulating that they shall be payable only out of the assessment levied on and collected by the city from property-owners, a creditor by acceptance of such bonds agrees that he will look primarily to the fund raised by assessment for payment;⁸¹ but such agreement is subject to the condition that the city shall make lawful assessments, file lawful liens, and preserve and enforce them by lawful proceedings, and, if assessments are lost by the negligence of the city in failing to file and enforce liens, the city is liable to the bondholders for the amount of the loss.⁸² It is incumbent upon a purchaser of municipal bonds to examine into whether the power to issue such bonds has been duly granted,⁸³ and if the bonds were issued without authority they are absolutely void in his hands.⁸⁴ So where jurisdictional defects in proceedings to bond a town in aid of a railroad are patent upon the record the bonds issued thereunder are void in the hands of the railroad company.⁸⁵ But where a city is authorized to borrow money for some purposes, notes issued by it for money borrowed for an unauthorized purpose are enforceable in the hands of the lender where he did not know for what purpose the money was to be used.⁸⁶ The ownership of municipal bonds necessarily includes the ownership of the right to interest secured by them and of the coupons attached, which are a part of the securities.⁸⁷

b. Refunding Bonds. Where municipal corporations, already having the power to contract debts and levy and collect taxes for their payment, are authorized to fund such indebtedness and issue new bonds therefor, the same remedy will exist to enforce payment of these as of the old ones, if no provision is made in the law under which the funding is made as to the means by which collection may be had.⁸⁸ Refunding bonds authorized, issued, and accepted in composition or settlement of an existing and outstanding indebtedness are valid obligations, although the original evidences of debt, may not have been enforceable.⁸⁹

16. NEGOTIABILITY AND TRANSFER — a. In General. Municipal bonds were originally held to be not negotiable because they were sealed instruments;⁹⁰ but they subsequently came to be acknowledged by the courts as negotiable instruments,⁹¹ and it is now well established that bonds issued by a municipal corporation under statutory authority are negotiable, with all the qualities and incidents of negotiability,⁹² notwithstanding the fact that they are sealed instruments,⁹³ where they possess the essential requisites of negotiable instruments.⁹⁴ The weight of authority seems to be that municipal corporation bonds payable to bearer are negotiable paper,⁹⁵ and are deemed payable to the holder, who is not regarded as the assignee of the contract but as the holder through transfer by delivery,⁹⁶ and it is also well settled by authority that the omission to insert the name of a payee

Promissory notes of municipality.—Where certain instruments, not under seal, called "Town of Rochester Bonds," declared that the town had caused these presents to be signed by the chairman of the board of supervisors, and countersigned, as required, by the town-clerk thereof, and the form of the obligation was that the town of Rochester was justly indebted and promised to pay to the order of the Fox River Valley Railroad Company the sum of five hundred dollars, with interest as set forth in the coupons, these instruments were essentially promissory notes of the town of Rochester, and negotiable as such, like ordinary promissory notes under the law merchant. Burleigh v. Rochester, 5 Fed. 667.

is not a feature, or a defect, which affects the negotiability of the bonds;⁹⁷ but such bonds are payable to bearer.⁹⁸ The registration of municipal bonds does not deprive them of their negotiable quality,⁹⁹ nor is the negotiability of municipal bonds affected by the fact that by the statute under which they were issued the municipality has the right, at its option, to pay them before they are due.⁷ In order that municipal bonds may constitute commercial paper they must contain recitals that prerequisites or conditions precedent imposed by statute have been complied with.² Municipal bonds are not negotiable when they are payable upon a contingency,³ or only out of a particular fund.⁴ The coupons usually attached to municipal bonds may be negotiated after they have been separated from the bond, and the holder of a coupon may recover upon it without producing the bond to which it was attached and without being interested in such bond.⁵

b. Power to Issue Negotiable Bonds. Unless authorized by their charters or by statute, municipal corporations have no power to make and place in the market commercial paper,⁶ and persons dealing in municipal bonds must see that the power to issue them exists.⁷ Where a municipal corporation has the power to bind itself by written obligation, without the power to make the same negotiable, and it executes its written obligation, making the same negotiable in form, the instrument will not in fact be negotiable,⁸ but it will not be void;⁹ and a recovery

No. 9,485, 5 Dill. 265, holding that a township bond containing a statement that "it is to be converted into a county bond" whenever a certain injunction shall be finally dissolved, and county bonds issued under the order enjoined, not being a promise to pay money absolutely, but a stipulation for bonds thereafter to be issued, is not negotiable in may be had upon such a bond as an evidence of debt, although even in the hands of a third person it is subject to equitable defenses.¹⁰ An express legislative grant of power is not essential to confer the authority to give municipal bonds a negotiable and commercial form and character, but such power may be inferred from the intent of the act, indicated by its purpose and scope;¹¹ and it has been frequently held that a mere grant of power to issue bonds implies that bonds having the commercial quality of negotiability may be issued.¹²

c. Mode of Transfer. It is necessary that they should be negotiable, readily so, that each purchaser and holder would acquire a legal title, divested of all equities that might exist between the original parties. If they have not the characteristics of negotiable instruments under the law merchant, they would not be readily saleable, and would not accomplish the object designed"); Carter v. Sinton, 120 U. Negotiability is a usual and valuable feature of municipal bonds, and a statute authorizing the issuance of bonds by municipalities will be construed as giving power to make them negotiable, in the absence of provisions clearly showing a contrary intention. D'Esterre v. Brooklyn, 90 Fed. 586.

A grant of power to borrow money carries with it the necessary incidental power of executing and delivering such evidences of indebtedness as are sanctioned by the known usages of business in such cases, and it is therefore competent to issue negotiable bonds. *State v. Statute changing rule.—Under a statute providing that every instrument which is payable to bearer shall not be construed as payable to whoever may be the holder, but to the person from whom the consideration moves, the title to a municipal bond payable to bearer can be derived only through the indorsement or assignment of the person from whom the consideration moved. Blackman v. Lehman, etc., Co., 63 Ala. 547, 35 Am. Rep. 57.

16. Ottawa v. Portsmouth First Nat. Bank, 105 U. S. 342, 26 L. ed. 1127. Evans v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,557, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 512.

them to a third person indorsed in blank, it becomes the payee's duty to inform the municipality of any fact on which he, the payee, might object to the redemption of the certificates in favor of the holder and claim payment to himself, and in the absence of such notice the indorsement in blank and possession by the transferee give him apparent ownership and justify the city in making payment to him.¹⁷ Where the statute authorizing the issuance of municipal bonds provides that they shall be transferable only on the books of the city, interest coupons, which have been attached to the bonds, are not transferable, except in the same manner as the bonds themselves, and one suing upon the coupons cannot recover without showing a legal assignment of the bonds to him, for his mere possession of the coupons creates no presumption that he is entitled to the interest.¹⁸ Where bonds in excess of the amount which a township was authorized to issue in aid of a railroad were obtained from the state treasurer on a false certificate by the township trustee that the conditions on which they were issued had been complied with, and the railway company was cognizant of the fraud, and receipted to the treasurer for the bonds, but never had actual possession of them, although it assented to their delivery to the contractor by the township trustees in payment for construction work, this did not constitute a negotiation of the bonds to an innocent purchaser; and, as the conditions on which they were issued were not complied with, the consideration failed, and the township was entitled to a decree for their surrender and cancellation.¹⁹

17. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES ON TRANSFER — a. In General. Purchasers of municipal bonds take the same subject to the law in force at the time of their issuance, including a constitutional limitation upon the taxing power of the city,²⁰ and their rights are to be determined by the law as it was judicially construed when the bonds were put on the market as negotiable paper.²¹ The holder of coupons cut from county bonds issued in satisfaction of a judgment is the owner of a part of the debt evidenced by the judgment, and in privity with the judgment creditor, and in an action on the coupons he may invoke every presumption and estoppel in support of his claim which the judgment creditor could invoke in an action upon the judgment.²² A suit on bonds issued in payment for street improvements is based primarily on the proceedings of the common council and the assessment of the property, and the rights of the assignee of the bonds are no greater than the rights of those to whom they were issued.²³ Where plaintiff purchased certain town bonds from the agent of the alleged owner, who received a portion of the proceeds of the sale from his agent, such owner being estopped to deny the validity of the purchase, the town could not deny plaintiff's title to the bonds.²⁴ Where a municipality has statutory power to contract for the making of public improvements and issue its bonds in payment for the work performed, a bond so issued for work actually done becomes a voucher or evidence of indebtedness to that extent, and an assignee in good faith may recover upon such bond, although the municipality has never been specifically empowered to issue negotiable paper.²⁵ Where municipal bonds do not contain recitals asserting them to be issued conformably to law, a purchaser for value cannot recover.²⁶

b. Purchasers of Stolen Bonds. A municipality is not liable on bonds stolen and put on the market before they were issued by the municipal officers, even though such bonds have passed into the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value.²⁷ But when negotiable municipal bonds, after issuance, are stolen from the owner, and sold or pledged before maturity to a person who acts in good faith, such person has a good title as against the former owner,²⁸ and is entitled to recover the money due on the bond from the city,²⁹ notwithstanding the fact that the number of the bond has been altered by the thief.³⁰ Where, however, a coupon promising to pay a certain sum as interest on a municipal bond designated by a specified number, and stating that it is due on a certain day, is stolen after such day, a subsequent innocent holder of the coupon is not the lawful owner, and cannot maintain an action thereon against a guarantor.³¹

c. Purchase by City Officer. Where, under an agreement between a city and the holder of its bonds, they are assigned for less than their face value to trustees appointed by and in behalf of the city, the fact that some of such trustees are members of the common council, and have contributed to a fund for the payment of the bonds a sum equal to their proportion of taxes necessary to pay them, does not forfeit the debt to the city, under a statute providing that any bond purchased by an officer of the city for less than its face value shall be forfeited to the city.³²

d. Liability of Assignor—(1) IN GENERAL. There is no implied warranty or guaranty on the sale of municipal bonds;³³ and where, on a sale of such bonds, their invalidity not having been determined, the seller stated that he believed the bonds were valid, and the buyer, after notice that the town claimed that the bonds were invalid, sued the town for the value thereof, and their invalidity was determined, the buyer could not recover the price on the ground of false representations by the seller as to their validity.³⁴

(II) TO MUNICIPALITY WHERE INVALID SECURITY KNOWINGLY NEGOTIATED. Where a railroad company has wrongfully and without authority of law procured the issuance of municipal aid bonds and has negotiated the same, and the holders have by judicial proceedings fixed the liability of the municipality on such bonds, the municipality has a right of action against the railroad company for the amount of the bonds with interest;³⁵ and an officer of a railroad company who sells to bona fide purchasers municipal bonds issued in aid of the company, which he knows to be invalid in the hands of the company, is liable to the municipality for the value of such bonds.³⁶ company and the town authorities, which agreement was, however, invalid by reason of the unconstitutionality of the statute pursuant to which it was made, and the bonds were accepted by such company, and negotiated and transferred by it for the full face value thereof, and were subsequently negotiated and sold to the citizens of another state, who, in an action in the circuit court of the United States, brought against the town to recover overdue interest, and tried upon the merits, recovered final judgment therefor, which fixed the liability of the town for the whole amount of such bonds to the holders thereof, the acts of the company in procuring and negotiating the bonds were without authority of law and wrongful, and that, by reason thereof, a cause of action arose in favor of the town, and against the company, for the recovery of the amount of such bonds with interest.

18. BONA FIDE PURCHASERS— a. In General. As municipal bonds are negotiable instruments,³⁷ one who purchases such bonds from the holder thereof in good faith, for value, and before maturity, acquires title free of any equities or defenses available between the original parties and may enforce them according to their tenor.³⁸ And the presumption is that the holder of a municipal bond took it before maturity for value and without notice of defenses.³⁹ The bonds in the hands of a bona fide holder are not assailable upon any ground that does not relate to the authority for their issue,⁴⁰ and such a holder is not chargeable with any fraud or irregularity in the conduct of the officers or agents of the city in negotiating the bonds,⁴¹ nor can his right be defeated by a defect in the considera-corporations, an officer of such defunct corporation, knowing its condition, and having in his hands bonds given by a village to such corporation, and knowing that such bonds were void, and could not be enforced by such corporation, fraudulently sold them to innocent parties, representing them to be bona fide securities, and valid bonds of the village, the officer was liable to the village for the value of such bonds, although he had accounted to the company for the proceeds.

Transfer constituting purchaser a bona fide holder see Briggs v. Phelps, 70 Fed. 29.

Circumstances not affecting good faith.— The good faith of purchasers of municipal bonds issued in fact to aid a private enterprise is not destroyed by the fact that, in addition to relying on a recital in the bonds of a public purpose, they also have before them proceedings for the submission of aid for such public purpose to a vote, and a letter of the prosecuting attorney declaring that the proceedings were valid on their face, and that they took a guaranty of payment from the person negotiating the bonds.

Schmid v. Frankfort, 134 Mich. 619, 96 N. W. 1056.

Purchase from officer of district.— The fact that a holder of bonds of an irrigation district, containing recitals that they were issued in all respects in conformity with the requirements of the statute authorizing the same, purchased them from the president of the district, does not impeach the bona fides of his ownership, nor render the bonds in his hands subject to the defense that the recitals were untrue, where there was no law prohibiting the president of the district from purchasing or owning them, in the absence of any other evidence to charge the holder with notice of invalidity. Perris Irr. Dist. v. Thompson, 116 Fed. 832, 54 C. C. A. 336.

Circumstances constituting sale.— Where a city board of education, authorized to issue bonds for certain purposes, and to sell them for not less than ninety-eight cents on the dollar, issued bonds purporting to be for such purposes, but in fact for an unauthorized purpose, accepted a bid from S therefor at par, delivered them to him, received part of the price, and transferred its right to the balance to the city, receiving a city warrant for the amount, and S sold the bonds for ninety-seven and a half cents on the dollar, this constituted an executed sale of the bonds to S at par, and purchasers from him, who were strangers to his purchase from the board, were not chargeable with notice of the invalidity of the bonds, because they supposed they were buying from the board. Montpelier Nat. L. Ins. Co. v. Huron Bd. of Education, 62 Fed. 778, 10 C. C. A. 637.

Suppl. 554)], holding that under Laws (1892), c. 493, which provides for the issuance of bonds for the construction of highways running through two or more towns of the same county, the bonds

tion for the bonds.⁴² But if municipal bonds are issued and sold before the time when the municipality has authority to issue them, the purchasers and holders cannot claim to be innocent purchasers and holders.⁴³ A bona fide holder may transfer his good title and right to protection to another, regardless of whether or not the latter knows of the original taint or infirmity,⁴⁴ whether the assignment or transfer is made before or after maturity,⁴⁵ and whether or not a consideration is paid therefor.⁴⁶ But a person who purchases bonds payable to bearer and undisclosed, having notice of defenses to the bonds, cannot claim the right of a bona fide holder on the ground that his vendor was a bona fide holder, in the absence of proof that his vendor was not the original payee.⁴⁷ In order to entitle one to protection as a bona fide purchaser of municipal bonds, he must be such not only at the time of the contract but also at the time of the payment of the price;⁴⁸ and a purchaser who wilfully closes his ears to information or refuses to make inquiry when circumstances of grave suspicion imperatively demand it is not entitled to protection.⁴⁹ Where municipal bonds were issued without authority or are otherwise void as between the original payee and the municipality, it is incumbent upon a holder of the bonds to show that he or someone through whom he claims title to them was a bona fide purchaser for a valuable consideration.⁵⁰

b. Consideration For Transfer. One who receives a municipal bond in pay-to be executed by the supervisor and town-clerk, and delivered to the commissioners, to be paid out by them at not less than par, in liquidation of damages, or at their option to be sold at not less than par, and the proceeds applied for the construction of such highways, the sale of such bonds, without taking into account the interest which had accrued upon them, by such commissioners, although an irregular exercise of the power to dispose of the bonds, did not affect their validity in the hands of innocent holders for value.

A purchaser of a past-due and dishonored municipal bond of the face value, including accrued interest, of more than two thousand two hundred dollars, for a consideration of fifty dollars, such bond having been fraudulently issued, and invalid in the hands of the original holder, of which fact the purchaser had knowledge, is entitled to recover thereon only the consideration paid, although the seller was a bona fide purchaser for value before maturity, protected by the recitals therein, and entitled to recover the full amount. *Gamble v. ment of a preëxisting debt,⁵¹ or in payment for services rendered and to be rendered, and which are in fact rendered,⁵² is a holder for value. Bona fide purchasers of municipal bonds or coupons are not restricted in their claims upon such securities to the sums which were paid for them.⁵³

e. Pledges and Their Transferees. One who receives municipal bonds before their maturity as collateral security for an antecedent debt, and surrenders other collateral therefor, is a bona fide purchaser;⁵⁴ but where a railroad company pledges municipal aid bonds issued to it, giving the pledgees authority to sell them, such pledgee, although he would be protected to the amount of his advances to secure which the bonds were pledged, is not such a bona fide holder as to entitle his transferee to recover upon the bonds, where they are invalid.⁵⁵

d. Purchase Directly From Municipality. Where a municipality sells its bonds in the open market the right and title of the first purchaser directly from the municipality is as perfectly and fully enforced and protected as if he were a third person buying the bonds in a subsequent market sale.⁵⁶

e. Effect of Repeal of Enabling Act. The right of a bona fide purchaser of municipal bonds cannot be taken away or affected by the subsequent repeal of the statute under which the bonds were issued.⁵⁷

f. Effect of Decree Enjoining Further Sales. Where an act of the legislature authorized cities to make and negotiate certain bonds, and recited that the council might allow a reasonable compensation for the sale and negotiation of the bonds, but a contract was entered into for the sale of bonds in excess of the authority conferred, and after a large amount of the bonds had been sold a bill was brought and a decree entered enjoining further sale and delivery, it was held that, the city having authority to issue the bonds, the rights of bona fide purchasers were not affected by this decree.⁵⁸

g. Purchase After Maturity. Municipal bonds unpaid at maturity are dishonored like other commercial paper, and a purchaser after maturity holds them subject to all defects which would invalidate them in the hands of the original holder,⁵⁹ unless he can show title derived through a holder in due course;⁶⁰ and protection has also been denied to a purchaser of overdue coupons.⁶¹ But where a bond is purchased before maturity, the fact that unpaid and overdue coupons

Bond not payable to bearer.—Where a municipal bond illegally issued to a railroad company below par, which is not payable to bearer, although the coupons attached are so payable, is transferred by the company in payment of an antecedent debt, the holder occupies the same position in reference to the bond and coupons that the company held. *Atchison v. are attached does not render the whole bond dishonored, so as to deprive the purchaser of the character of a holder in due course.⁶²

19. CONSTRUCTIVE AND IMPLIED NOTICE — a. In General. Where the power to issue bonds existed, the purchaser is not bound to go back and examine all the intermediate steps which should have been taken before the bonds were issued,⁶³ especially where the bonds bear upon their face the statement that they have been issued in pursuance of law and under the contingencies required by law.⁶⁴ Neither is a holder in due course of bonds issued under proper authority charged with knowledge of any collateral facts tending to invalidate the bonds in the hands of a purchaser with notice.⁶⁵ A purchaser of municipal aid bonds is not required to ascertain what conditions as to time of completing the enterprise were imposed by the proposition voted on,⁶⁶ nor as to whether the corporation pursued the regular steps necessary to entitle it to receive the bonds;⁶⁷ but he is chargeable with notice of any inherent incapacity of the corporation to receive public aid under the statute.⁶⁸ A purchaser of negotiable municipal bonds is not affected with constructive notice of the pendency of a suit involving the validity of such Kendallville*, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,638, 5 Biss. 280 (holding that the purchaser is not presumed to have notice of everything which takes place before the issuing of the bonds, and an averment that the proceedings of the city council were spread upon the records of the city is not sufficient to charge him with notice).

66. Chilton v. Gratton, 82 Fed. 873, holding this to be true where such conditions are not shown on the face of the bonds and the bonds recite a compliance with the law.

67. Henry County v. Nicolay, 95 U. S. 619, 24 L. ed. 394, holding that where county bonds, issued by the county court in payment of its subscription to the stock of a railroad company, show on their face that they were issued pursuant to the law which authorized their issue without the assent of the qualified voters of the county, and there is nothing upon them to show that they were not regularly issued, the fact that subsequent to making the subscription, but before the issue of the bonds, the company transferred its franchise to another company, does not make it incumbent upon a purchaser of the bonds to inquire whether the company pursued the regular steps necessary to entitle it to receive them.

Statutory conditions precedent to issuance.—Where a statute provided that a county might issue bonds in aid of a railroad upon the vote of a majority of the legal voters, and prescribed the conditions upon which they should be made, and that such bonds should not be valid until such conditions should be complied with, and a county voted to issue bonds on condition that the road should be begun and completed in the county within specified periods, and the road was not completed within the time prescribed by the original vote, the bonds were invalid in the hands of bona fide purchasers, especially when issued and purchased after a decision by the supreme court of the state holding similar bonds void. *German Sav. bonds,⁶⁹ nor is the pendency of such a suit constructive notice of any invalidity of the bonds.⁷⁰ A purchaser before maturity of bonds payable to bearer is not ipso facto chargeable with constructive notice of their alleged invalidity because he investigated as to the fulfilment of the conditions necessary to their issuance;⁷¹ but such knowledge is, when there are no marks of infirmity on the face of the bonds and no want of power in the municipality, a question of fact.⁷² The test as to whether the officers of a bank, at the time of its purchasing municipal bonds, had notice of facts and circumstances requiring inquiry, is not whether the facts were such as would naturally and reasonably lead an ordinarily careful and prudent man to make inquiry as to what the bonds were given for, but whether the facts were such as to make it bad faith not to do so.⁷³ Although a statute provides that registered bonds shall be made payable to the person to whom they are issued, instead of to bearer, the fact that the bonds are issued by a town with the place for the name of the payee left blank, where in all other respects they comply with the requirements of the law, and contain a certificate of their registry, does not charge a subsequent purchaser with notice of defenses existing against them in the hands of the person to whom they were issued.⁷⁴

b. Matters Apparent on Face of Bonds.⁷⁵ A purchaser of municipal bonds is chargeable with notice of the recitals contained therein,⁷⁶ and no person can claim protection as a bona fide purchaser where the bonds show on their face that they were not issued in compliance with the law,⁷⁷ or that they were issued in violation of the statute authorizing them and of the consent of the taxpayers required by such statute.⁷⁸ But where a statute authorizes the issuance of bonds for the purchase of school sites and the erection of school buildings, a recital in such bonds that they are issued "for the purchase of school sites and the erection of school buildings, and general improvements" is no notice to a purchaser that they are issued for any purpose other than the purchasing of the sites and erection of the buildings.⁷⁹ The fact that municipal bonds bear a date prior to the time when the ordinance under which they were issued went into effect under the statute is not sufficient to defeat a recovery on such bonds in the hands of a bona fide holder, where there is no proof of the date of their actual issue, and their premature issue would be contrary to the recitals on the face of the bonds.⁸⁰ Neither is the purchaser of municipal bonds put upon inquiry in relation to pending suits because a provision appears upon the face of the bonds that they are payable at a place other than the town treasurer's office, which provision is illegal under the law of the state, as such provision is merely void in itself and does not avoid the bonds.⁸¹ It has been held that a bona fide purchaser of railway aid bonds which recite that they are issued under an order of the proper court, pursuant to legislative authority, is not affected with constructive notice of facts recited in such order, contrary to the recitals of the bonds.⁸² Purchasers of municipal bonds or coupons must always take the risk of the genuineness of the official signatures of those who executed the paper they buy,⁸³ and this includes not only the genuineness of the signature itself but also the official character of him who makes it.⁸⁴ So also if municipal bonds are not executed in the manner required by statute, a purchaser is chargeable with notice.⁸⁵ Where coupons refer to the bonds to which they are attached and purport to be for the periodical interest accruing thereon, the purchaser of such coupons is charged with notice of all which the bonds contain.⁸⁶

c. Matters of Record. Where the constitution or the statute under which municipal bonds are issued prescribes a public record which furnishes the test of compliance with the conditions and the validity of the issue, a purchaser is charged with notice of the contents of such record;⁸⁷ and in such case the record and not the recitals in the bonds must be looked to by all persons proposing to deal in the bonds.⁸⁸ But a purchaser is not charged with notice of parts of the record not connected with such bonds,⁸⁹ nor is he required to look beyond the record;⁹⁰ and if the record fails to show the illegality of the bonds the purchaser may rely upon the presumption that the officers faithfully discharged their duty in issuing such bonds and upon the recitals which the bonds contained.⁹¹

d. Lack of Power to Issue. A purchaser of municipal bonds is bound at his peril to inform himself as to the power of the municipality to issue such bonds,⁹² and is chargeable with notice of any want of power on the part of the municipi-

Conditions.—Where bonds in aid of a railroad are issued on specified conditions to be performed by the railroad, which conditions

Omission of statements required by statute.—Where the act of the legislature under which municipal bonds are issued requires especially where the bonds upon their face refer to such statute.⁹⁵ And so where a municipality has exceeded its statutory power in issuing bonds, such bonds are void even in the hands of an innocent purchaser for value.⁹⁶ So also where municipal bonds state on their face that they are issued under a certain ordinance, holders are bound by the provisions thereof.⁹⁷ Purchasers of municipal bonds must at their peril ascertain that the authority assumed by the officers or agents executing or issuing them has been conferred,⁹⁸ and that the power granted has not been exceeded.⁹⁹

e. Defects or Irregularities in Preliminary Proceedings. Irregularities in the exercise of a general power in a municipality to issue bonds are not available that the bond shall state the purpose for which it is issued, and the bond fails to contain such statement, a purchaser is chargeable with notice of the defect in the bond. Brewton v. Spira, 106 Ala. 229, 17 So. 606.

95. Chamberlain v. Burlington, 19 Iowa 395 (holding that where bonds issued by a municipal corporation show upon their face the authority under which they are executed, and such authority is insufficient, they are void in the hands of a bona fide purchaser); Thompson v. Mamakating, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 400 (holding that a municipal bond, which on its face refers to the statute under which it purports to be issued, and is so numbered as to make it apparent, from an examination of the statute and proceedings thereunder, that it was issued without authority, is void); Claybrook v. Rockingham County, 114 N. C. 453, 19 S. E. 593 (holding that therefore, where bonds issued by the commissioners of a county on behalf of a town under an act of the legislature authorizing the issue upon an affirmative vote of a majority of the qualified voters of the town, and neither the declaration of the result of the election by the commissioners nor the recitals in the bonds show that a majority of the voters of the town voted in favor of the subscription, the purchasers of the bonds, although bona fide and for value, will not be protected in a suit by taxpayers to restrain the collection of taxes to pay the same, unless a jury shall find that question in the affirmative); McClure v. Oxford Tp., 94 U. S. 429, 24 L. ed. 129.

96. People's Bank v. School Dist. No. 52, 3 N. D. 496, 57 N. W. 787, 28 L. R. A. 642 (holding that where a statute authorized the issue of municipal bonds payable in not less than ten years from date, bonds issued thereunder, payable in eleven days less than ten years from date, are void even in the hands of a bona fide purchaser); Green v. Dyersburg, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,756, 2 Flipp. 477 (so holding where a municipal corporation, authorized by statute to issue bonds bearing six per cent interest, to be paid in six annual instalments, issued bonds at seven per cent payable in ten years).

97. Klamath Falls v. Sachs, 35 Oreg. 325, 57 Pac. 329, 76 Am. St. Rep. 501 (holding that the purchaser of a municipal bond reciting that it was issued pursuant to a certain ordinance of the municipality, giving its date and full title, is put on inquiry as to the provisions of the ordinance and its validity, although the bond also recites that it was issued pursuant to the town charter since the latter recital, being as to a matter of law, does not estop the municipality from showing the validity of the bonds); Gould v. Paris, 68 Tex. 511, 4 S. W. 650. See also U. S. Trust Co. v. Mineral Ridge, 104 Fed. 851, 44 C. C. A. 218, holding that where the statute relating to municipal bonds requires that "all bonds issued under authority of this chapter shall express upon their face the purpose for which they were issued and under what ordinance," and the only reference to any ordinance contained in bonds issued by a village, purporting to be refunding bonds, is a statement that they were issued to take up former bonds of a certain date, "as provided in the ordinance of said village," and it is admitted that no valid or sufficient ordinance authorizing the issuance of such bonds was passed, and that the bonds refunded were void, every purchaser is charged with notice of the invalidity of such bonds.

Reference to both statute and ordinance.—An innocent purchaser of municipal bonds, which recite that they are issued in pursuance of an act of the legislature, which authorizes their issue for a lawful purpose, and which also recite that they are issued in pursuance of an ordinance or resolution of a given date or title, which, if read, would disclose the fact that they are issued for an unlawful purpose, is not chargeable with notice of the terms or contents of the ordinance or resolution. Fairfield v. Allison Rural Independent School Dist., 116 Fed. 838, 54 C. C. A. 342 [reversing 111 Fed. 453].

Reference to invalid ordinance.—Where bonds issued by a municipality refer by date to an invalid ordinance as one source of authority for their issuance, this reference is notice of the provisions of the ordinance, and of its invalidity, and the bonds are void, even in the hands of innocent purchasers. Risley v. Howell, 57 Fed. 544.

98. Cowdrey v. Caneadea, 16 Fed. 532, 21 Blatchf. 351. See also Aurora v. West, 22 Ind. 88, 85 Am. Dec. 413.

99. Merchants' Exch. Nat. Bank v. Bergen County, 115 U. S. 384, 6 S. Ct. 38, 29 L. ed. 430 [affirming 12 Fed. 743, 21 Blatchf. 13], holding that a county bond containing no recitals, and which, although apparently regular, was in fact issued by the county collector in excess of the amount author-

against a bona fide holder for value.¹ So a bona fide purchaser of municipal securities has a right to presume that everything preliminary to their lawful issue has been done,² and is not bound to see that all the details provided by the law authorizing the issue have been duly complied with by the corporate authorities.³ Where the duly ascertained vote of a majority of the qualified voters is a prerequisite to a bond issue, bonds issued without such vote being ascertained and declared, are invalid even in the hands of an innocent purchaser,⁴ but the action of the persons or tribunal authorized by law to determine the result of such an election is conclusive and a bona fide purchaser of the bonds is under no obligation to look beyond it.⁵ Where, however, a statute conferring upon cities the right to issue funding bonds requires the power to be exercised by ordinance, an attempt to confer authority on the mayor and clerk of the city to put such bonds in circulation by resolution is void, and a purchaser of such bonds in open market is bound to take notice of the defect.⁶

f. Excess of Debt Limit. A purchaser of municipal securities must at his peril ascertain whether the constitutional debt limit of the city is thereby exceeded, for in case of such excess, every purchaser is chargeable with notice thereof and no one is entitled to protection as a bona fide holder.⁷ And where an issue of municipal bonds which are all sold to the same purchaser in itself exceeds the constitutional limit of the city's indebtedness, the purchaser is limited in his recovery against the city to the amount of indebtedness which the city could lawfully contract.⁸ A purchaser of county bonds, in determining whether the aggregate issue exceeds the statutory limit of a certain per cent of the assessed value of the county property, has a right to rely upon the amount of the assessment as finally established by the board of equalization and certified by the county clerk to the auditor of the state, without going to the books of the several precinct assessors.⁹

ized, and pledged as security for his personal debt, is void, even in the hands of an innocent holder for value, when an inspection of the public registry of bonds would have disclosed the overissue.

1. Greeley v. Jacksonville, 17 Fla. 174, holding that where a city has issued bonds which are authorized by its charter, and which have come into the hands of bona fide purchasers, a taxpayer of the city cannot have the bonds declared illegal, because the notice of the election to be held to decide whether the bonds should be issued was not given in conformity with the city ordinances. But compare Duanesburgh v. Jenkins, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 574, holding that persons receiving bonds issued by towns are presumed to know the law, and bound at their peril to ascertain whether the statute authorizing their creation has been complied with.

2. Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496, holding that one buying railroad aid bonds that have been executed by a city and delivered to the railroad company has a right to presume that the mayor had complied with the ordinance requiring him not to issue the bonds until the road was located.

under that act that an election must be held to authorize the action of the township officers in issuing the bonds, such purchaser is bound to examine into the legality of the election.

20. EFFECT OF RECITALS IN BONDS — a. In General. A purchaser of municipal bonds is not required to examine further than the act of the legislature authorizing the issue and the recitals of the bond, when no such duty is imposed by statute;¹⁰ and where innocent persons invest money in the bonds of a municipality because of authorized recitals of its officers and of the commercial credit given to them by payment of interest thereon for many years, they should be sustained unless an insuperable legal obstacle prevents.¹¹ Consequently it is well settled that where the authority to issue municipal bonds exists, purchasers are entitled to rely upon recitals therein that such authority has been regularly exercised, and the municipality is estopped to deny such recitals.¹² Recitals in municipal bonds are, however, binding only in respect to matters of fact¹³ which it may be fairly presumed that the officers of the municipality were left to determine,¹⁴ and not in respect to matters of law of which all are bound to take cognizance;¹⁵ and even as to matters of fact they are not estopped if the facts recited are matters of public record open to the inspection of every inquirer.¹⁶ Where an act authorizing the issuance of township bonds vests the power to issue them, when the conditions precedent have been complied with, in the township board, but without specifying the manner of its exercise, they may direct the bonds to be executed and signed by the appropriate officers of the township, and in such case recitals contained in the bonds are to be given as full effect as though made by the board

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1972.

Defective notice of election.—Where bonds are issued without giving the notice of an election to authorize the same for the length of time required by the statute, the defect is not cured by recitals in the bonds. Springfield Safe Deposit, etc., Co. v. Attica, 85 Fed. 387, 29 C. C. A. 214.

Population of municipality.—Where the bonds of a municipality in aid of a railroad recited on their face that they were issued "in pursuance of law," and one of the statutes relied on provided that towns having more than one thousand inhabitants might issue bonds in payment of their matured liabilities, the recital does not estop the town from showing that in fact it did not have the requisite population, because neither by the statutes nor by any other law was the duty devolved on the officials issuing the bonds, or the town itself, to ascertain the population. *Kelly v. And see as to matters of record supra, XV, C, 19, c.

itself;¹⁷ but a city is not bound by recitals contained in bonds issued by the board of public works where such board is a distinct corporation, acting independently of the city, under the provisions of a special statute.¹⁸ Where bonds recite that the city has caused the bonds to be signed by certain officers, who have in fact signed them, the city cannot urge that they were signed by such officers without its authority.¹⁹ A recital that municipal bonds were issued under the authority of a state and in pursuance of a city ordinance does not necessarily import a compliance with the state constitution,²⁰ nor does a recital in bonds that they were issued by virtue of a certain statute and in accordance with the vote of the electors of the town preclude inquiry into the performance of a condition to be performed after issuance of the bonds.²¹ City bonds are not invalidated by misrecitals therein respecting the particular act of assembly under which the ordinance authorizing the issuance of the bonds was passed.²² A recital in municipal bonds that they were ordered to be issued at a date prior to that fixed by statute for their issuance is, if the bonds are in fact prematurely issued, notice of their invalidity to all persons acquiring them;²³ but such recital is not conclusive, and it may be shown that the bonds were not ordered to be issued nor issued until the time prescribed by statute.²⁴

b. Power to Issue. A lack of power on the part of a municipality to issue bonds cannot be cured or supplied by any recital in the bonds,²⁵ and hence no recitals can estop the municipality to deny its power to issue the bonds,²⁶ where the laws are such that there can be no state of facts or of conditions under which the municipality would have the authority to emit the bonds.²⁷ It has been laid down that if the laws are such as that there might under any state of facts or circumstances be lawful power in a municipality or quasi-municipality to issue its bonds, it may by recitals therein estop itself from denying that those facts or circumstances existed, and that it had lawful power to send the bonds forth,²⁸ unless the constitution or the law under which the bonds were issued prescribed some public record as the test of the existence of some of those facts or circumstances;²⁹ but this statement should be modified so as to limit the application of the rule to cases in which the fact represented by the recital is one which the law empowers or makes it the duty of the local board to ascertain and determine as a condition to its further proceeding.³⁰ The federal courts hold that a recital in municipal bonds that they were issued under a particular statute which is invalid does not preclude inquiry as to whether there is other and valid legislative authority under which the power to issue the bonds can be upheld,³¹ but a state court has held not estop it from denying the power of its officers to issue such a bond under the statute); Swan v. Arkansas City, 61 Fed. 478 (holding that a recital in city bonds that all the requirements of the statutes have been strictly complied with in issuing them does not estop the city from pleading a want of power to issue the bonds); Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Oswego, 55 Fed. 361 (holding that the municipality cannot be estopped, by recitals in the bonds, to deny, even as against bona fide purchasers, the powers of commissioners appointed by the legislature to issue them); Kelly v. Milan, 21 Fed. 842; Chisholm v. Montgomery, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,686, 2 Woods 584 (holding that where a municipal corporation without authority of law subscribed for stock in a plank road company, and issued its bonds in payment, it was not estopped, by the negotiable form or other matter appearing on the face of the bonds, from denying the authority of its officers to pledge its faith in aid of the road, or to issue such bonds).

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 1973.

Unconstitutionality of statute.—A municipal corporation, which has issued bonds purporting to be issued according to a state law, is not estopped by recitals in the bonds to prove that the law was never constitutionally passed. South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260, 24 L. ed. 154. See also Cass County v. Wilbarger County, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 52, 60 S. W. 988.

Where lack of power not ascertainable.—Recitals in municipal bonds may constitute an estoppel in favor of a bona fide purchaser, even where the body that issued the bonds had no power to issue them, and could not, by any act of its own or of its constituent body, make a lawful issue of the bonds, if the fact of this want of power does not appear from the bonds, the statutes under which they are issued, or the public records referred to therein. National L. Ins. Co. v. Huron Bd. of Education, 62 Fed. 778, 10 C. C. A. 637.

Adoption of ordinance.—A recital on the face of municipal bonds that they were issued under an ordinance "adopted" does not estop the city to show, as against a purchaser of the bonds, that such ordinance was never published as required by law, and that the bonds were therefore invalid. National Bank of Commerce v. Grenada, 44 Fed. 262.

Covington*, 8 Fed. 777, 10 Biss. 488.

Municipal aid to corporation not entitled thereto.—Where a city is authorized to issue bonds only in aid of a domestic corporation, the fact that the bonds recited on their face that they were issued to a railroad company incorporated under the general laws of the state does not estop the city thereafter to show that such corporation was in fact a foreign corporation. Johnson City v. Charleston, etc., R. Co., 100 Tenn. 138, 146, 44 S. W. 670, where it is said: "This recital . . . did not estop the city . . . from disputing the existence of any fact which its board was not by the enactment required to decide in the first instance, or which was to be determined by some other authority or from some record accessible to the public." Contra, *Municipal Trust Co. v. c. Performance and Existence of Conditions—(1) IN GENERAL. Where the power to issue municipal bonds exists, a bona fide purchaser of such bonds in the open market is entitled to rely on recitals in the bonds that all antecedent steps necessary to validate the securities have been taken.³³ Accordingly it is well established that the recitals of the officers of a municipal corporation who are invested with power to perform a condition precedent to the issue of negotiable bonds or with authority to determine when that condition has been performed, that they have found that all the requirements of law necessary to authorize the issuance of the bonds have been fully complied with, precludes inquiry as against an innocent purchaser for value as to whether a condition precedent had actually been performed before the bonds were issued,³⁴ for such recital is of itself a decision by the appointed tribunal that the requisite facts exist.³⁵ Such an estoppel may arise in a proper case upon a recital that an act or condition required by the constitution has been performed or fulfilled as well as upon a recital of compliance with the statutory requirements.³⁶ But this estoppel does not arise except upon matters of fact which the corporate officers have authority by law to determine and certify.³⁷

In New York the mere fact that town bonds recite that all necessary legal steps have been taken to comply with the statute authorizing their issue does not estop the town from questioning the validity of the bonds, even in the hands of a bona fide holder, unless it is estopped by an express legislative enactment. Ontario v. Union Bank, 21 Misc. 770, 47 N. Y. Suppl. 927, where it is said that the New York courts "have refused to follow the decisions of the federal courts in reference to bona fide holders of municipal bonds." See also Starin v. Geneva, 23 N. Y. 439.

Recital of compliance with statute and invalid amendment.—When bonds contain a recital to the effect that they were issued in pursuance of a specified statute, and of a later act amendatory of the first, and the later act is invalid, a purchaser without notice to the contrary may presume that the requirements of the original statute were complied with. A. 212 (affirming 48 Fed. 278, 44 Fed. 262)], where it is said: "If the officers authorized to issue bonds, upon a condition, are not the appointed tribunal to decide the fact, which constitutes the condition, their recital will not be accepted as a substitute for proof.

is sufficient if they are given full control of the matter.³⁸ It seems that a municipal corporation may be estopped, by recitals in its bonds that all conditions necessary to their issue have been complied with, to dispute the performance of such conditions, although the bonds were not issued by the regular municipal officers, but by commissioners named by a court.³⁹ Where a statute authorizes the board of commissioners of a county, on petition therefor, to appoint road commissioners for a district, who shall have power to issue bonds for road improvements, to be attested and registered by the county auditor and at once reported to the county board, which has general charge of the improvements and the levying of the tax to pay the bonds, such commissioners, in the issuance of the bonds, as well as in supervising the work done, act simply as agents for the county board, and recitals made by them in the bonds that all things required by the act as conditions precedent to their issuance have been properly done and performed must be regarded as having been made by authority of the county board, and create an estoppel in favor of bona fide purchasers of the bonds, which precludes a defense thereto on the ground of any irregularity in the action of the board as well as of the road commissioners.⁴⁰ An act authorizing the trustees of a township to issue bonds for the purpose of refunding its outstanding indebtedness, which contains no reference to any record of indebtedness, or requirement that such a record shall be kept, but provides that the bonds shall contain a recital that they are issued under and by authority of such act, must be held to confer power on the trustees, who are the officers charged with the duty of incurring the indebtedness of the township, to recite in the bonds that the valid indebtedness of the township is such as to authorize their issuance under the act, in order to refund it.⁴¹

(11) FORM AND CONSTRUCTION OF RECITALS. Fulfilment of all conditions precedent in the issuance of bonds by a municipal corporation and compliance with all requirements is imported by a recital that the bonds are issued "in pursuance of,"⁴² "pursuant to,"⁴³ "in conformity with,"⁴⁴ "in accordance with,"⁴⁵

In other words, where the validity of the bonds depends upon an estoppel, claimed to arise upon the recitals of the instrument, the question being as to the existence of power to issue them, it is necessary to establish that the officers executing the bonds had lawful authority to make the recitals and to make them conclusive. The very ground of the estoppel is that the recitals are the official statements of those to whom the law refers the public for authentic and final information on the subject. This is the rule which has been constantly applied by this court in the numerous cases in which it has been involved. The differences in the result of the judgments have depended upon the question, whether, in the particular case under consideration, a fair construction of the law authorized the officers issuing the bonds to ascertain, determine and certify the existence of the facts upon which their power, by the terms of the law, was made to depend; not including, of course, that class of cases in which the controversy related, not to conditions precedent, on which the right to act at all depended, but upon conditions affecting only the mode of exercising a power admitted to have come into being.³⁸ See also Northern Nat. Bank v. Porter Tp., 110 U. S. 608, 4 S. Ct. 254, 28 L. ed. 258 [affirming 5 Fed. 568, and distinguishing Coloma v. Eaves, 92 U. S. 484, 23 L. ed. 579].

“by virtue of,”⁴⁶ or “by authority of”⁴⁷ a particular statute or that they are “authorized by” a statute to which reference is made,⁴⁸ or by a recital that “all acts, conditions, and things required to be done precedent to and in the issuing of said bonds have been properly done, happened, and performed in regular and due form as required by law.”⁴⁹ So also a recital that bonds were issued by virtue of an ordinance of the city concludes the city as to any irregularities that may have existed in carrying into execution the power to issue the bonds.⁵⁰ A recital in bonds issued on account of a municipal subscription to the stock of a railroad company, that the subscription was “made in pursuance of an act of the legislature and ordinances of the city council passed in pursuance thereof,” imports not only compliance with the act of the legislature, but that the ordinances of the city council conform to the statute.⁵¹ A general recital in bonds issued by a city that “all acts, conditions, and things required to be done precedent to and in the issuing of this bond have duly happened and been performed in regular and due form as required by law,” has been held to estop the city, as against a bona fide holder of such bonds for value, to deny that before or at the time of issuing the bonds it provided for the collection of a tax sufficient to pay the interest and principal thereof as required by the constitution of the state; such act being one to be done by the city, and which it had power to certify that it had done.⁵²

(iv) RECITAL OF PERFORMANCE OF CONDITIONS AT IMPROPER TIME. When municipal bonds recite upon their face that they are issued in accordance with the provisions of a particular act of the legislature, and that certain steps required by such act to be taken as a condition of their issue were taken at a time when the act itself shows they could not legally be taken, such bonds are invalid, even in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value.⁵³

(v) NEW RECITALS IN BONDS ISSUED IN EXCHANGE FOR OTHERS. Where the holder of bonds which were issued illegally and without consideration, and were in themselves in excess of the constitutional limit of indebtedness, procured new bonds to be issued in exchange therefor, containing a recital that they were issued in accordance with the constitution of the state, which recital was not contained in the original bonds, he could not rely on such recital to validate the new bonds in his hands.⁵⁴

(vi) RECITALS AS TO POPULAR ASSENT. The rule that recitals in municipal bonds that the conditions precedent to their issuance have been fulfilled are conclusive in favor of bona fide purchasers, and the municipality is estopped to deny their truth, applies in full force when the statute requires a petition or the consent of the voters or taxpayers as a condition precedent to the issuance of bonds.⁵⁵ But ital in the bonds that “all the acts and things required to be done” had been done as required by law referred only to the acts required by the law referred to in the bond, and did not constitute a statement that a constitutional requirement that a tax should be levied at the time the bonds were issued had been complied with.

a recital in municipal bonds that they were for a subscription to the capital stock of a railroad company, authorized by acts of the state legislature referred to by title and date, does not estop the municipality from setting up, in an action on the bonds, that their issue was not authorized by the vote of two thirds of the voters of the municipality, as required by the constitution of the state.⁵⁶

d. Recitals as to Debt Limit. It has been held that a purchaser of municipal bonds is not obliged to go behind recitals therein to ascertain whether they exceed the debt limit fixed by statute,⁵⁷ but a recital that the limit is not exceeded is conclusive in favor of a bona fide purchaser.⁵⁸ But other cases hold that a bona fide purchaser of municipal bonds is not entitled to rely solely on the recital therein that the debt thereby created does not exceed the constitutional limit,⁵⁹ and the city is not estopped by recitals in the bonds from asserting that the debt created by their issuance exceeds the constitutional⁶⁰ or statutory⁶¹ limit, since the purchaser is bound to take notice of the existing indebtedness and the assessed valuation of property in the city.⁶² The best rule appears to be that a recital on the face of municipal bonds that the indebtedness thereby created does not exceed the constitutional or statutory limit is conclusive in favor of a bona fide holder, and the municipality is estopped to deny it,⁶³ where there is nothing on the face of the bonds to indicate that the recital is untrue and the limit has in fact been exceeded;⁶⁴ but the municipality is not estopped by such a recital where it appears from the face of the bonds that the limit has in fact been exceeded,⁶⁵ as where the total amount of the issue is stated, so that an examination of the assessment rolls and a simple arithmetical conclusion would show the excess,⁶⁶ or where the constitution or the statute prescribes some public record as a test of whether the limit has been exceeded.⁶⁷ Where the statute under which municipal bonds are issued does not authorize the board or officers issuing them to determine whether the proposed issue would, in fact, exceed the limit prescribed by law, and there is no recital in the bonds that they do not exceed such limit, and each bond on its face, when taken in connection with the assessment roll, shows the limit to have been exceeded, a general recital that all the requirements of the law have been complied with will not estop the municipality issuing them from showing that the bonds issued exceed the legal limit; and, when that is shown, they are void in the hands of everyone, whether the limit is imposed by the state constitution or by general statute.⁶⁸ Where an entire issue of bonds exceeding the constitutional limit is purchased from the holder thereof by one person, as a single transaction, such person is not entitled to protection as a bona fide holder, no matter what recitals appear on the face of the bonds.⁶⁹ Where bonds, void because in excess of the amount for which the district could become indebted under the constitution, are canceled by the owner, who is not a bona fide holder, in consideration of new bonds issued to him under a statute authorizing the issue of refunding bonds, no estoppel arises from recitals in the refunding bonds to prevent showing the vice of the original issue.⁷⁰ When the recital is only that the bonds are issued "under" the provisions of a given statute, this is simply an assertion that the bonds are subject to and controlled by the provisions of the statute named, and the municipality is not estopped by such recital from showing that

Stone, 106 U. S. 183, 24 L. ed. 90, holding that a recital in a bond that it "is issued by the board of school directors by authority of an election of the voters of said school district held on [a certain day] in conformity with the provisions of" a particular statute, while it implies that the bond was issued by authority of the election, and that the election was in conformity with the statute, does not necessarily import a compliance with a provision of the statute which, following the state constitution, prohibited independent school-districts from incurring indebtedness exceeding in the aggregate five per cent of their taxable property, and therefore the school-district is not estopped, in a suit on the bond, from showing that it is invalid because issued in violation of that provision.

the bonds are void because they created an indebtedness in excess of the constitutional limitation.⁷¹

e. Recitals as to Purpose and Consideration. A bona fide purchaser of municipal bonds is entitled to rely on recitals therein as to their purpose or consideration, and the municipality is estopped as against such a holder to deny the truth of such recitals or set up that the bonds or the proceeds were not used for the purpose recited,⁷² even though a diversion from the lawful purpose may be shown by the municipal records.⁷³ So where municipal bonds recite that they were issued for the purpose of funding the existing debt of the city, and the city is authorized to issue such bonds, it is estopped as against a bona fide holder to set up that the antecedent indebtedness was fraudulent or invalid,⁷⁴ or that the refunding bonds either created or increased any indebtedness of the municipality;⁷⁵ and an innocent purchaser of such bonds is not required to consider or inquire into the question of excessive indebtedness.⁷⁶ A charter provision requiring all municipal bonds to specify the purpose for which they are issued is not complied with so as to cut off equitable defenses against an innocent holder by a negotiable bond which merely gives the date of the ordinance authorizing its issuance, without reference to any record of such indebtedness, or requirement that such a record shall be kept, but provides that the bonds shall contain a recital that they are issued under and by authority of such act, must be held to confer power on the trustees, who are the officers charged with the duty of incurring the indebtedness of the township, to recite in the bonds that the valid indebtedness of the township is such as to authorize their issuance under the act, in order to refund it; and such recital is conclusive on the township, in favor of a bona fide purchaser of the bonds. *Brattleboro Sav. Bonds issued by a municipal corporation in Ohio, under Rev. The record is the best evidence of the facts where the law requires a record of the facts to be kept, and, primarily, no other evidence is admissible. Thornburg v. School Dist. No. 3, 175 Mo. 12, 75 S. W. 81.

Failure to keep record as required by statute.—Under the Colorado act of March 24, 1877, which authorized counties to issue negotiable bonds for certain purposes and on certain conditions, within the constitutional limitation as to indebtedness, and required the commissioners to make out, publish, and cause the clerk to record, in a book kept by him for that purpose only, and open at all times to public inspection, semiannual statements, showing "the amount of the debt owing by their county," with other material facts and details relating thereto, where the clerk of a county kept no such book, and no statements containing the facts required by the statute were made and recorded, a purchaser of bonds issued by the commissioners, containing recitals that they were issued in conformity to the statute, was authorized to rely on such recitals, which the county was estopped to contradict by other records, for the purpose of showing that the bonds were issued in excess of the constitutional limit of indebtedness. *Lake County v. 22. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF HOLDERS OF INVALID SECURITIES — a. In General.

While a municipal corporation may in some cases be liable for the consideration received for its negotiable bonds, which are void for want of legal authority to issue them, such liability in no case arises on the instruments themselves which are void for all purposes.⁸⁹ When negotiable bonds are issued by a corporation without authority of law and are void as negotiable instruments, an action cannot be maintained upon them as non-negotiable instruments.⁹⁰ A purchaser with notice of the invalidity of bonds cannot maintain their validity under an act to which they do not refer, as valid upon their face under such act, if such act was not complied with and the bonds were actually invalid under it.⁹¹ The fact that money has been collected for the purpose of paying illegal bonds will not afford the holder of the bonds the right to have such funds paid over to him where he has no valid claim against the city.⁹²

b. Statutory Provisions. Under some statutes, although the issuance of scrip by a municipal corporation is prohibited under penalty, it is provided that in case the corporation has issued such scrip it shall be liable to the holder for the face value thereof.⁹³

c. Recovery of Money Paid — (1) IN GENERAL. Where a city has received money for bonds illegally issued it may be compelled to pay such money back when the purpose of the loan was lawful and the creation of the debt was not

A certificate upon the face of municipal bonds that they have been issued in pursuance of legislative authority for the purpose of funding the indebtedness of the municipality is a declaration that they have been issued for the purpose of funding a valid debt in the method prescribed by the law, and that they neither create nor increase any indebtedness of the municipality; and, as against a bona fide purchaser, they estop the municipality from denying this declaration. *Sioux City Independent School Dist. v. prohibited by law.⁹⁴ But such repayment cannot be compelled when the municipal corporation has never received the benefit of the money,⁹⁵ or the loan itself was in excess of its authority to create a debt.⁹⁶ An action to recover from the municipality money paid to it for bonds which it had no power to issue is not based upon an express or implied contract, as distinguished from quasi-contract, but upon an obligation which the law supplies from the circumstances that defendant should pay for the benefit which it has derived at the expense of plaintiff.⁹⁷ A return of the consideration may be compelled by an action in equity when the issues involved otherwise present grounds for equitable jurisdiction.⁹⁸ It has been held, however, that where bonds were issued for the purpose of

A. 230, holding that where the receiver of an original purchaser of bonds had recovered a judgment against the city for the amount paid therefor and brought a new action in the federal court to enforce such judgment, a court of equity had jurisdiction of a suit by the transferees of the bonds against the city and the receiver in behalf of itself and other holders to enforce their equitable right to the amount due from the city on either of the following grounds: (1) That it sought to charge the receiver as a trustee holding the judgment for the benefit of the bondholders; (2) that it sought to follow a fund which had been tendered by the city and in which complainants claimed an equitable interest; (3) because it appeared from the pleadings that there might be conflicting raising funds to pay for the construction of a levee to protect lands from an overflow, and such issuance was without authority of law, a court of equity had no power to determine that certain lands received the benefit of the funds and on that ground declare a lien thereon in favor of the bondholders.⁹⁹

(ii) BENEFIT RECEIVED BY MUNICIPALITY. The benefit received by a municipal corporation must be money paid to it or property delivered into its actual possession under such circumstances that had no express contract been attempted a contract might have been implied.¹

(iii) RIGHT TO FOLLOW SPECIFIC FUNDS. The money paid for invalid bonds may be followed in rem into the thing bought with it.² But where it is sought in equity to pursue the money the complainants must clearly identify the money or the fund, or other property which represents the money, in such a manner that it can be reclaimed and delivered without taking other property with it or injuring other persons or interfering with others' rights.³ A decree declaring the amount of money advanced for invalid bonds a lien upon certain property purchased therewith is inconsistent with a bill which seeks to follow the money into such property, and seeks such property not as that of the city but as that of complainant.⁴

(iv) PERSONS ENTITLED TO RECOVER. The transfer of the bonds carries with it the right to recover from the municipal corporation the money paid to it for them in case the bonds prove to be invalid.⁵ A railroad which has received

4. Litchfield v. Ballou, 114 U. S. 190, 5 S. Ct. 820, 29 L. ed. 132, holding that where money received on the sale of invalid bonds issued without any authority of law has been used in the construction of waterworks, the purchaser cannot have a lien for the amount paid out by him on the works, such lien being inconsistent with the theory by which he sought to hold the waterworks as his property purchased with his money.

A. 230 (holding that where a city issued bonds which were subsequently adjudged invalid for irregularity in the manner of issuance and sold the same to a firm which paid a part of the purchase-price and resold them to others, the right to recover from the city the consideration received by it passed with the bonds to the holders to the exclusion of a general receiver appointed for the original bonds in exchange for its stock and has transferred such bonds cannot object, where, the bonds having been declared void, the municipal corporation takes up the bonds from the transferee and restores to him the stock received from the railroad.⁶

(v) INTEREST. It has been held that in a proceeding to recover the money back, interest may be awarded at the legal rate from the time the city denied its obligation to pay.⁷

(vi) LIMITATIONS. It has been held that where a municipality issues void bonds as evidence of an indebtedness which it had power to incur for work or property of which it received the benefit, and subsequently pays the holder of the bonds interest as it matures, according to the tenor of the bonds, the statute of limitations does not begin to run against an action brought to recover the money so long as the municipality recognizes its express obligation to pay the bonds and pays the holder interest thereon according to the requirements of the bonds themselves.⁸ But on the other hand it has been held that a right of action upon an implied promise by a city to repay money received for void municipal bonds accrues at the time payment is made, and not from the time bonds were adjudged void, or from the discovery of his mistake by plaintiff in the absence of fraudulent concealment by defendant, or from the time of demand.⁹ Where an action is brought upon refunding bonds issued without authority by a municipal corporation, recovery cannot be allowed on the common counts upon the original bonds or indebtedness, where such indebtedness is barred by limitations pleaded in the suit.¹⁰

d. Rescission of Transaction. One who purchases from a city bonds which prove to be invalid has the right to rescind the contract of purchase and recover the portion of the purchase-money which has been paid to the city,¹¹ but he cannot do this unless he is willing and able to restore to the city all of the bonds delivered to him.¹²

St. § 3980, limiting actions on implied promises to five years, where more than five years before action was brought the city refused to pay interest thereon and pleaded in an action thereon that they were void, although it was stipulated in that action that suit might be continued until decision in another suit involving the validity of similar bonds, as on a plea of ultra vires plaintiff could abandon his suit and sue on the implied promise.

f. Rights of Person Exchanging Valid For Invalid Securities. Where the holder of valid bonds surrenders them to the municipality and receives in exchange therefor other bonds which the municipality had not the lawful right to issue he is not divested of his title to the bonds surrendered and may maintain an action on them after they mature.¹⁴

23. SINKING FUNDS, REDEMPTION, AND PAYMENT — a. Sinking Fund — (1) DUTY TO PROVIDE. By statute provision is usually made for the creation of a sinking fund with the view of meeting the payment of the principal and interest on bonds,¹⁵ and under some statutes no valid issue of bonds can be made in the absence of provision for such a fund.¹⁶ Under other statutes provision for a sinking fund is not necessary unless the city's debts have reached the constitutional limit.¹⁷ And it will not be presumed in the absence of proof that such limit has been reached.¹⁸ The provision for a sinking fund may have been made prior to the issuance of the bonds to which it refers.¹⁹ And under a statute requiring the provision for a tax to create a sinking fund upon the creation of an indebtedness, a city may provide for such a tax in providing for new bonds to refund an existing indebtedness.²⁰ It has been held that the measure of damages arising from the failure of a city to provide a sinking fund as it has agreed in the contract with its bond-covered or the proportion of the bonds the purchaser was willing and able to return. But see Paul v. Kenosha, 22 Wis. 266, 94 Am. Dec. 598, holding that where the bonds had been placed in evidence and declared void and of no value by the court, one who sought to recover back the money paid on them, as upon a failure of consideration, need not offer to return the bonds.

Necessity of provision for payment of bonds see supra, XV, C, 7, a.

Amendment of statute.—A city charter which provides that provision shall be made for a levy of two per cent to create a sinking fund to pay bonds is not amended by a constitutional provision providing for a levy to provide at least two per cent as a sinking fund for the payment of the debts of cities. Conklin v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 44 S. W. 879.

A special act applicable to a particular town, requiring the establishment of a sinking fund for the payment of bonds, does not supersede a general act providing for the payment of such bonds, but merely provides an additional security. Van Tassell v. Derrenbacher, 56 Hun (N. Y.) 477, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 145 [affirmed in 123 N. Y. 661, 23 N. E. 750].

Necessity of specific provision.—Where the charter makes a provision for a sinking fund in accordance with the constitutional requirement, a specific provision by the city council is unnecessary. Berlin Iron Bridge Co. v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 50 S. W. 208.

Period of accumulation.—A statutory provision that a sinking fund must be provided for the payment of a principal indebtedness within twenty years is complied with where provision is made for the completion of a sufficient sinking fund within twenty years, although the period of accumulation of such fund is less than twenty years. Boise City v. Union Bank, etc., Co., 7 Ida. 342, 63 Pac. 107.

On funding existing debt.—A statute providing that no debt shall be created without making provision for its payment does not apply to provisions for the funding of an existing debt. Conklin v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 44 S. W. 879.

holders, being the difference in the value of the bonds, is not capable of legal computation.²¹

(i) VESTED RIGHTS IN FUNDS. A statute providing for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of bondholders becomes a part of the contract between the city and its bondholders, and cannot be subsequently changed to their detriment.²² So where at the time of a bond issue the law authorizes and in effect requires the levy of a tax to pay the interest on it as it accrues, the legislature cannot by an act passed subsequent to the issue of the bonds exhaust the taxing power of the city and direct the application of the proceeds of such taxation to other subjects to the exclusion of the bond issue in question,²³ and a limit upon the taxing power of a city, imposed by a constitution adopted after the issue of bonds, is inoperative as against such bonds.²⁴

(ii) REVENUES CONSTITUTING FUND. Where the statute provides what revenues shall be placed in the sinking fund, no special appropriation of such revenues is necessary in order to render them applicable to such fund.²⁵ Where it is provided that a certain portion of the revenue of a city, derived from a particular source, shall be set aside as a sinking fund, it has been held that it is intended that such proportion of the gross revenue shall be so set aside.²⁶

(iv) CUSTODY AND CONTROL—(A) In General. The right to the custody and control of sinking funds is in general fixed by the statutes making provision for such fund.²⁷ The legal title to money raised for a sinking fund is in the city and it has the right to manage and invest the same and sue for its collection, and defend for the bondholders against any attempted depletion of the fund,²⁸ but such legal title is held in trust for the bondholders.²⁹ The actions of officers vested

No. 8,939, 2 Woods 1, holding that a statute providing for a bond issue and prescribing the manner in which a tax for the payment thereof shall be levied and its collection safeguarded constitutes a contract which the purchaser of bonds upon the faith thereof may enforce.

Where there is no pledge of specific revenue.—A bondholder cannot object to a lease of a municipal gas plant upon the ground that the ordinance authorizing the issue of bonds for an extension of the plant provided for a retention of a certain amount of the annual receipts of the plant for the purpose of creating a sinking fund, where there is no pledge of the receipts of the plant for the security of the loan and there is no showing that the sinking fund has not been kept up by appropriation from the city treasury from time to time as required by law. *Baily v. Ct. 109, holding that a sinking fund created by the city of Philadelphia for the payment of a gas loan is no part of the general sinking fund of the city and any surplus should be paid into the city treasury and not to the sinking fund commissioners.

28. Austin v. Cahill, (Tex. 1905) 88 S. W. 542, holding that in an action by a holder of certain original bonds to enforce his rights as to moneys collected for interest and for the sinking fund of such bonds, the holders of refunding bonds were not necessary parties in their own persons but were constructively present before the court through their trustee, the city.

29. Vickrey v. Sioux City, 104 Fed. 164 (holding that under a statute providing that an assessment for a street improvement shall constitute a sinking fund for the payment of

with supervision over a sinking fund cannot be controlled by injunction, unless the fund is in danger of being wasted or impaired,³⁰ or unless a liability will be incurred or an injury done by threatened or probable misfeasance for which the officers' bonds or personal responsibility will afford no probable or adequate redress.³¹

(b) Investment. A statutory provision for a sinking fund, in the absence of an express provision therefor, authorizes the proper investment of such fund.³² Where an investment is made of a sinking fund, such investment must be such as is prescribed by statute.³³ Under some statutes the investment may be in bonds of the municipality;³⁴ but, although the purchase of municipal bonds for the sinking fund is authorized, commissioners of such fund cannot purchase bonds at the time they are offered for sale by the city.³⁵ A purchase by the city of its own bonds to be placed in a sinking fund does not operate as a cancellation of such bonds.³⁶ The city as trustee for bondholders is liable for interest on non-applied special assessments collected by it only at the rate paid to it by depositories of the fund.³⁷

(v) APPLICATION OF FUNDS. A sinking fund cannot be diverted from the purpose for which it is created;³⁸ but where it is not pledged to the redemption of any specific bonds, it may be applied to the redemption of bonds held as a part of the fund under a statute authorizing the sinking fund commissioners to the improvement, and providing further for the issuance of bonds to be used for such payment, a city which has issued such bonds is charged as a trustee with the duty of collecting and applying the special assessments; Maenhaut v. New Orleans, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 8,939, 2 Woods 1 (holding that money which has been levied, collected, and set apart to pay the interest upon bonds under the terms of the statute under which they are issued constitutes a trust fund which the bondholder may enjoy the city from diverting).

Funds which may be loaned.—Under a power to loan a sinking fund the corporation has no power to loan a portion of the proceeds of a sale of bonds issued for the purpose of construction of waterworks. Bonham v. Taylor, 81 Tex. 59, 16 S. W. 555.

Interest.—While it may be conceded that preservation is the principal object to be accomplished in dealing with sinking funds, their earning capacity in the way of interest should not be entirely ignored. Elser v. Ft. Worth, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 739 [citig State Sinking Fund v. Walker, 6 How. (Miss.) 143, 38 Am. Dec. 433; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 25 L. ed. 496].

33. Scott v. W. G. Eads Brokerage Co., 117 Fed. 51, 54 C. C. A. 437, holding that where the statute required the city to advertise for bids and invest the funds in the bonds of those parties who offered them at the lowest price, the city had no power to contract with a brokerage company to repay it the amount it should expend in the purchase of the city bonds, not exceeding their par value and a stated premium, and to pay the company for its services in addition a sum amounting to more than sixteen per cent of the par value of the bonds it bought, and that such contract was void, as was also a contract to pay the reasonable value of such services.

34. See the statutes of the several states. And see Elser v. Ft. Worth, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 739, holding that a provision that municipal officers shall honor no drafts upon a sinking fund except to pay interest on or redeem the bonds for which it is provided does not prevent a draft being drawn upon the fund for the purpose of purchasing bonds to be used as an investment of the fund.

Bonds which may be purchased.—Bonds may be purchased and held in a sinking fund, although they do not mature until after the maturity of the bonds which the fund is collected to pay. Elser v. Ft. Worth, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 739, holding that the securities might be made available by resale when needed.

Power of council.—A duty imposed upon the city controller to see that the sinking fund is properly invested does not require the city council to consult him before making an investment of the funds in the securities in which it is authorized by statute to invest. Elser v. Ft. Worth, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 739.

cancel all bonds that may have been purchased by them for the redemption of the debt of the city.³⁹ Where a sinking fund is created by statute for existing bonds, holders of interest coupons which mature while the statute remains in force have a vested interest in the fund;⁴⁰ but holders of coupons which mature after the repeal of such a statute acquire no rights therein.⁴¹

b. Refunding, Extension, and Exchange. A right to call in bonds for redemption must be exercised in accordance with the statute or condition in the bonds by which it is conferred.⁴² Where the statute authorizing an issue of new bonds in exchange for outstanding bonds provides that the holders of outstanding bonds shall have the right to surrender them and receive the new bonds in lieu thereof, such holders of outstanding bonds cannot be required to receive the new bonds at a premium.⁴³ A provision for refunding the indebtedness of a city does not extend the time for refunding such indebtedness beyond the time in which an action upon such indebtedness should be commenced, and a bondholder who fails to present his bonds until they have become barred is not entitled to the issuance of refunding bonds in their place.⁴⁴ Where a statute confers upon bondholders the right to an extension, its terms must be complied with by the bondholders to entitle them to demand such an extension.⁴⁵

c. Payment of Bonds—(i) IN GENERAL. A municipal corporation does not free itself from liability upon its bonds by merely placing funds for their payment in the hands of the proper officers.⁴⁶

(ii) PLACE OF PAYMENT. In the absence of contrary provision bonds are payable at the treasury of the municipality.⁴⁷ A municipal corporation is not required to seek its creditors in order to discharge its debts.⁴⁸ So in order to stop the running of interest it is not bound to seek out its creditor and tender him the money due.⁴⁹

(iii) TO WHOM MADE. Where a city has had notice of the theft or loss of bonds it is, in order to justify a payment, bound to show that the holders to whom payment was made were purchasers in good faith before maturity and for value;⁵⁰ and it has been held that the city pays overdue coupons at its peril.⁵¹

bonds was not entitled to have such bonds extended.

Where a coupon passes by delivery like a bank-note the holder is not bound to show his chain of title at the time he demands payment.⁵²

(iv) DEMAND, AUDIT, AND ALLOWANCE. Municipal corporations are not bound to discharge their indebtedness elsewhere than at their treasury,⁵³ and a creditor must make demand there when payment is desired unless provision has been made for another place of payment.⁵⁴ While municipal bonds, being ascertained and liquidated claims, need not be presented for audit,⁵⁵ if the bond is transferable by delivery it should be presented by the holder or notice given to the corporate body in order that the owner may be known.⁵⁶ But if no actual notice is given to the holder of an interest-bearing municipal bond which is overdue to present it for payment and surrender, and there is no statutory method provided for the calling in of such a bond and fixing a day beyond which interest will not run, interest will continue to accrue on such an obligation in the same manner as upon an ordinary note of a private person.⁵⁷

(v) FUNDS APPLICABLE. A tax levied and collected as required by law to pay the interest⁵⁸ or the principal⁵⁹ of specific bonds cannot be diverted to other purposes. So in case bonds are made payable from a specific fund a claim against the general fund of the city cannot be enforced,⁶⁰ particularly where there has been no failure upon the part of the city with regard to the steps necessary to provide such a special fund.⁶¹ But where the bond contains a general obligation to pay it cannot be converted into a promise to pay from a particular fund, except upon the plainest grounds of construction.⁶² It is in some cases held that where a city has issued improvement bonds and pledged special assessments therefor, it is not a guarantor of the bonds, but a mere statutory trustee for the collection of such assessment.⁶³

A statute requiring the presentation of claims within two years, being for the purpose of enabling a municipal corporation to make a record of its valid outstanding obligations, does not apply to a bond of the existence and character of which the corporate authorities have actual notice. *Leach v. Bonds declared invalid.—Where moneys have been raised by a municipality by means of a special tax to pay off certain bonds, and the bonds are thereafter declared void, the municipality cannot devote the funds to other purposes and such appropriation may be en-

Refunding bonds.—A provision for the application of taxes upon the property of railroads to bonds issued in aid of such railroads applies to renewal bonds issued to refund the original aid bonds. *Van Tassel v. A. 623, holding that it was required only to exercise due diligence to collect the same according to law and enforce the lien thereof for the benefit of the bondholders, and was liable only for a failure to perform such duty or to pay over the money collected. See Roter v. Superior, 115 Wis. 243, 91 N. W. 651; New Orleans v. Warner, 175 U. S. 120, 20 S. Ct. 44, 44 L. ed. 96.

The extension of the time for the payment of special assessments will not render the city absolutely liable for the payment of improvement bonds in case the bondholder contemporaneously extends the time of payment of the bonds to a corresponding date and retains his lien. Jewell v. Superior, 135 Fed. 19, 67 C. C. A. 623.

(vi) PRIORITIES. A mere provision that a certain sum annually shall be paid upon certain bonds does not give the holders priority over other bonds;⁶⁴ nor does the fact that one issue is older than another give it priority.⁶⁵ Priority of demand of payment will not create priority between bondholders.⁶⁶

(vii) EFFECT. Payment and cancellation of bonds work an absolute extinguishment of the same, and they cannot be vitalized by theft and fraudulent recirculation.⁶⁷

(viii) RELIEF WHERE BONDS HAVE BEEN LOST OR STOLEN. Where bonds have been lost or stolen the owner may have relief in equity in order to secure himself against payment to persons not entitled to it.⁶⁸

(ix) *INTEREST.*⁶⁹ In the absence of a provision to the contrary interest may accrue upon bonds after their maturity.⁷⁰ A rule providing that compound interest cannot be recovered has been held not to prevent the recovery of interest upon unpaid coupons after maturity, under a statute allowing interest upon money due on any instrument in writing.⁷¹

24. ACTIONS — a. Nature and Form of Remedy in General. In the federal courts the proper procedure for the enforcement of bonds and coupons is to sue at law and by the judgment establish the validity of the claim and the amount due, after which if upon return of an ordinary execution it is ascertained that no

Where taxes are collected by the county.—When delinquent special assessments applicable to the payment of street improvement bonds are returned by the city to the county, as delinquent taxes, the city is liable only to account to the holders of local improvement bonds entitled to such assessments when collected for such as were received by the city from the county after collection. Jewell v. Superior, 135 Fed. 19, 67 C. C. A. 623, holding that Wis. Rev. St. (1898) § 1114, providing that delinquent taxes returned by a city to the county shall belong to the county when the county levy is equal to or exceeds the amount of the delinquent taxes in the return, the excess, if any, when collected to be returned to the city, applies only to the relations between cities and counties with respect to the collection of taxes and does not affect the obligations existing between the city and holders of street improvement bonds with reference to the collection of special assessments applicable to the payment of bonds.

Apportionment of funds.—A holder of bonds issued to pay for particular improvements is entitled to such proportion of special assessments collected for their payment as the amount of bonds held by him bears to the total amount of bonds issued less the sums previously paid to him. Jewell v. Superior, 135 Fed. 19, 67 C. C. A. 623.

66. Meyer v. Widber, 126 Cal. 252, 58 Pac. 532, holding that it was no defense to mandamus to compel payment of a bond from a particular fund that other bondholders had made prior demands which had been refused for want of funds.

285, 4 Am. St. Rep. 153, holding that while ordinarily the real owner might tender a bond of indemnity which would authorize payment to him by the maker, yet in a case where the bonds were numerous and would not mature for many years the proper remedy was, where the parties were already in a court of equity, by a petition for an injunction restraining the maker from paying the bonds or coupons to any claimant until his right against the real owner was determined, with an order requiring the maker to make each claimant a party to the suit as the bond or coupon was presented so that he might litigate it with plaintiff.

70. Kendall v. Porter, 120 Cal. 106, 45 Pac. 333, 52 Pac. 143, holding that since there is nothing in the California act of April 24, 1858 (St. (1858) p. 267), providing in sections 35, 37, 38, 40, for an issue of city bonds bearing six per cent annual interest, which, with the principal, is directed to be paid by the treasurer, when due, from the interest and sinking fund therein provided for, to show an intention that interest shall cease upon maturity of the bonds, interest can be collected on the bonds after maturity, and a writ of mandate will issue to compel the treasurer to pay such interest.

The fact that interest coupons attached to bonds do not extend beyond maturity of the bonds does not raise the presumption that the bonds were not intended to bear interest after maturity. Kendall v. Porter, 120 Cal. 106, 45 Pac. 333, 52 Pac. 143.

71. Cripple Creek v. Adams, 36 Colo. 320, 85 Pac. 184. See Ellis v. Witmer, 134 Cal. 249, 66 Pac. 301, holding that the fact that a street improvement bond becomes delinquent will not in itself stop the accrual of interest.

property of the corporation may be found to satisfy the judgment a mandamus may be issued to compel the corporation to raise the amount necessary to satisfy the debt by taxation in case the authority to levy and collect taxes for such purpose exists.⁷² In the state courts a bondholder is usually regarded as entitled to maintain an action at law thereon.⁷³ The action upon bonds is properly covenant.⁷⁴ Where the obligation of a city to pay bonds is unconditional an action may be maintained against it, although they are issued under a statute by which they are payable through the agency of state officials.⁷⁵ And the fact that the revenue for the payment of bonds is to be collected by special assessment does not relieve the city from liability to suit thereon.⁷⁶ The production of the bond is not essential to a suit upon coupons.⁷⁷

b. Statutory Restrictions. Where bonds are issued by a municipal board under a statute specifically providing that the municipal corporation shall not be liable for the payment thereof, no action on them may be maintained against the corporation.⁷⁸ And where a statute provides that no action shall be brought against the city by its creditors, no suit may be maintained by one taking bonds subject to such provision.⁷⁹ But the right of a bondholder to sue a city cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation.⁸⁰

See Wakley v. Muscatine, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 481, 18 L. ed. 980; Galena v. U. S., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 705, 18 L. ed. 560; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 535, 18 L. ed. 403.

San Francisco*, 110 Fed. 615 (holding that in case of bonds issued by a city under the California act of March 23, 1876, authorizing the widening of a street and the issuance of the bonds therefor, and providing, as recited in the bonds, that they shall be payable at the office of the city treasurer from the fund that may be raised by taxation of the property benefited, and that the completion of the work shall operate as an acceptance by the landowners of the lien created by the act and a waiver of all claim on the city for the debt, action cannot, where no fund is collected for payment of the bonds, be maintained against the city for a judgment that a certain amount is due on the bonds, and that the judgment be paid from the fund as provided in the act, or by enforcement of any lien created by the act against the lands, the owners of such lands are the proper defendants); Liebman v. San Francisco, 24 Fed. 705.

79. Kennedy v. Sacramento, 19 Fed. 580, holding that one taking bonds was estopped to assert a right to sue the city given by a constitutional provision that all corporations should be subject to suit by proper persons.

Remedy in such a case.—Where by statute it was provided that no action should be brought against the city of Sacramento by its creditors, and that the city should issue its bonds for the purpose of funding its debt and should levy an annual tax of one per cent, of which a specified portion should be set aside for the payment of the bonds, no action would lie upon bonds issued to those surrendering claims against the city and taking bonds instead, but the remedy of the bondholders was by mandamus against the proper officer to compel him to carry out the terms of the statute. Kennedy v. Sacramento, 19 Fed. 580.

c. Equitable Remedies. A bondholder is not entitled to proceed in equity to enforce his bonds where he has an adequate remedy at law,⁸¹ although the duty of the city as a trustee to collect and apply special assessments to the payment of improvement bonds may be enforced in equity, notwithstanding there is a right to an action at law upon the bonds themselves.⁸² Where a municipal corporation has refused to pay bonds upon the ground that the bonds issued increased its debt beyond the constitutional limit, the facts may be inquired into in a court of equity at the suit of the bondholders to ascertain what part, if any, of the debt created may be enforced without violating the constitutional limitation.⁸³ The holder of bonds in payment of street improvements which are to be paid from the proceeds of assessments upon property benefited has the right to require the city to exercise for his protection every lawful power which it possesses to levy and collect from the property benefited by the improvement so much of its cost as is legally chargeable thereon, and for that purpose may bring all property-owners affected into a court of equity where their rights can be determined and appropriate relief granted to complainant by mandatory injunction against the city or other proper process.⁸⁴

d. Defenses—(1) IN GENERAL. A city, having delivered railroad bonds, payable to bearer, to the railroad company, cannot defeat a recovery thereon by a purchaser, on the ground that it gave the railroad company no directions as to how the bonds should be transferred.⁸⁵ A delay in issuing bonds for fourteen months after the election authorizing the same is not so unreasonable as to constitute a good defense as against an innocent holder.⁸⁶ The failure of the clerk of a municipal corporation to make a record of proceedings relating to the issuance of bonds cannot avail the corporation to defeat the enforcement of such bonds, but parol evidence is admissible to supply the place of the missing parts of the record.⁸⁷ The fact that a judgment may not be enforceable constitutes no defense to an action on municipal bonds,⁸⁸ nor is the fact that an injunction restraining the corporation from paying the bonds involved has been granted in a taxpayer's suit a defense to an action by a bondholder who was not a party to such suit.⁸⁹ Where the right to sue for the principal of bonds has accrued by reason of failure to pay interest it has been held that the acceptance of a tender of the interest and costs does not, in the absence of agreement to that effect, waive the right to prosecute a suit already begun to recover the principal and interest.⁹⁰

(1) *PROTECTION OF BONA FIDE HOLDERS AGAINST DEFENSES.*⁹¹ As municipal bonds are commercial paper,⁹² it follows that many defenses which might be available against the original payees cannot be set up against holders in due course.⁹³ One who purchases bonds from the company to which they were issued with knowledge that they were improperly issued is not, however, a bona fide holder, and all defenses against the payee are available against him.⁹⁴ And so also third holders of negotiable bonds of a parish, issued by the police jury in exchange for illegal parish warrants, against whom the facts raise a legal presumption of notice, negligence, or mala fides, have no better right than the original holders.⁹⁵

(III) FRAUD OR MISCONDUCT IN ISSUING BONDS. Where the power to issue municipal bonds exists, the fraud⁹⁶ or misconduct⁹⁷ of the officers or agents of the municipality in issuing such bonds is not available as a defense against a bona fide purchaser.

Failure to provide for payment.—Bonds are invalid even in the hands of bona fide purchasers when issued without compliance with a constitutional requirement that provision shall be made at the time of incurring any debt for levying a sufficient tax to acts⁷ or by recitals in the bonds.⁸ Other cases hold, even independent of recitals, that where a city is authorized to issue bonds they are binding in the hands of bona fide purchasers, although conditions precedent to their issuance were not observed.⁹

(VIII) LACK OF POPULAR ASSENT.¹⁰ It has been held that where the statute authorizing the issuance of municipal bonds makes the exercise of the power dependent upon the consent of the taxpayers, a lack of such consent is available as a defense, even as against a bona fide holder;¹¹ but there is also a judicial authority for the contrary view.¹² Where bonds issued to aid in the construction of an irrigation ditch recited that they were issued after submission to popular vote of a proposition to issue them for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a canal for irrigation and water-power purposes, it was held no defense to an action by a bona fide purchaser, based thereon, that the proposition submitted was not the same as that recited in the bonds.¹³ A city cannot repudiate its bonds which are in the hands of a bona fide purchaser on the ground of irregularities in the election authorizing their issue;¹⁴ nor can a municipality attack the validity of negotiable bonds issued by it and in the hands of bona fide purchasers for value on the ground that the records do not show a proper and legal canvass of the votes cast at the election called to determine whether such bonds should be issued, where the bonds recite the performance of all required conditions precedent to their issuance.¹⁵

(IX) EXCESS OF DEBT LIMIT.¹⁶ It has been held that the fact that constitutional limitations of municipal indebtedness or bond issues are exceeded in the issue of bonds is a good and sufficient defense against any holder;¹⁷ but that, where limitations as to the amount of indebtedness are imposed by statute and not by the constitution, the legislature may create a board with authority to determine the question of fact upon which the amount of the limitation depends, and the findings of such board will be conclusive in favor of bona fide purchasers.¹⁸

Bonds which are issued to fund a valid indebtedness neither create any debt nor increase the debt of a municipality, but merely change the form of indebtedness; and, as against an innocent purchaser in the open market without notice, the fact that, at the time the bonds were issued, the indebtedness of the city already exceeded the prescribed limitations is no defense to an action on such bonds.¹⁹

(x) FAILURE OR WANT OF CONSIDERATION. Failure or want of consideration for municipal bonds is not an available defense as against bona fide holders in due course.²⁰

(xi) DENIAL OF OFFICIAL CHARACTER OF OFFICERS. A municipal corporation cannot deny the official character of its own officers, who acted as such in performing duties necessary to execute conditions precedent to the issuance of negotiable bonds.²¹

(xii) DENIAL OF CORPORATE EXISTENCE. A municipality cannot question its own corporate existence in a suit brought upon evidences of debt issued by it.²²

(xiii) SALE ON CREDIT CONTRARY TO STATUTE. The fact that the municipal authorities gave a credit to the purchaser of the bonds of a town instead of selling them for cash as required by the statute is not a defense to an action on such bonds by a subsequent bona fide purchaser.²³

(xiv) NON-COMPLIANCE WITH ORDINANCE AS TO DATE OF MATURITY. A bona fide holder of the negotiable bonds of a municipal corporation having express and unrestricted authority to issue them may recover thereon, although they are made payable at an earlier date than directed in the ordinance of the municipality relating to the mode of executing them.²⁴

(xv) ILLEGAL CONTRACT WITH REFERENCE TO SALE. It is no defense to an action upon bonds of a municipal corporation in the hands of an assignee without notice that an illegal contract was made for the payment of a commission upon information than other persons and can ascertain the amount with more certainty than strangers, the bonds will be held valid in the hands of bona fide purchasers.

the sale of such bonds to an officer of the corporation, the first purchaser thereof, such commission never having been actually paid.²⁵

(xvi) IMPROPER SEAL. Under a statute which provides that all bonds issued by municipal corporations shall be signed by the mayor and clerk and be sealed with the seal of the corporation, where bonds issued by a city, under an ordinance containing similar provisions, signed by the mayor and clerk, and attested as bearing the seal of the city, were sealed with the seal of the city clerk, if the same was not in fact the corporate seal of the city a mistake was made by the officers against which an innocent holder of the bonds was entitled to relief in a court of equity by a decree requiring the city to affix the proper seal, or enjoining it from setting up its absence as a defense to an action on the bonds.²⁶

(xvii) FRAUD IN PROCURING AUTHORITY. Railroad aid bonds issued in payment of a subscription, required by act of assembly to be made on the recommendation of the grand jury, are valid in the hands of an innocent purchaser, although the recommendation was obtained by unfair and corrupt means.²⁷

(xviii) COLLATERAL AGREEMENTS AND CONDITIONS. The existence or the breach of collateral conditions or agreements, not appearing in the statute or ordinance authorizing bonds or on the face of the bonds, cannot avail a municipality as a ground of defense against the enforcement of such bonds by a holder in due course.²⁸ But where a city has power to subscribe to the stock of a railroad company and to issue bonds in payment of the subscription, the proceeds of such bonds in all cases to be expended within the limits of the county in which such city is situate, as between the city and the railroad company, or its assignee with notice, such bonds cannot be enforced where no part of the proceeds of the subscription has been expended in the county, and no part of the railroad subscribed to has been constructed therein.²⁹

(xix) USE OF PROCEEDS. As it is no part of the duty of a bondholder to direct or look after the application of municipal funds,³⁰ the diversion or misapplication of the proceeds of municipal bonds constitutes no defense to the enforcement of such bonds by an innocent holder.³¹

(xx) SET-OFF. Debts or claims arising out of transactions on the same bond or series of bonds cannot be set off as against innocent purchasers not connected with such transactions.³²

(xxi) RECOGNITION OF VALIDITY AS WAIVER OF DEFENSES. It has been held that long recognition by a municipality of the validity of bonds issued by it may amount to a ratification and a waiver of defenses.³³

e. Time to Sue. The fact that a municipal corporation repudiates its obligation upon bonds will not cause them to mature before the time specified in them.³⁴

f. Limitations. The statute of limitations may be pleaded by the municipality against the payment of its bonds, unless it appears that there has been legislation extending the time of payment or which has set apart a special fund for payment and so dedicated the same to the special purpose as to create an express trust.³⁵ Where a specific fund has been raised to pay interest coupons and has become a pledge for their benefit, it has been held that the operation of the statute of limitations against the coupons is interrupted.³⁶ Where interest coupons are payable as money comes into the treasury, the statute of limitations does not run against them until the money is received in the treasury.³⁷

g. Persons Who May Sue. Where bonds are payable to bearer suit may be maintained by the legal holder thereof,³⁸ although they are held only for the purpose of collection and the equitable title is in another.³⁹ A bondholder may sue to enforce the payment of his bonds without holding or representing the entire issue.⁴⁰ It has been held that where a municipal board is charged with an official duty to see that bonds issued by them are paid when due they have such interest as will entitle them to maintain mandamus to compel payment.⁴¹

h. Defendants. The fact that bonds are to be paid from the proceeds of assessments against specific property does not render the owners of such property necessary parties to an action thereon.⁴² When the money for payment of bonds has been placed in the hands of officers charged with the duty of paying them, an action will lie on behalf of a bondholder against such officers.⁴³ A committee of the city government whose consent is not essential to the raising of funds for the payment of bonds is not a necessary party to a suit thereon.⁴⁴ A board of education possessing corporate powers may be sued upon bonds issued by it, although, since the issue of the bonds, the city has been changed from a city of the second class to a city of the first class and the powers of its board of education have been correspondingly altered.⁴⁵

1. Pleading—(i) COMPLAINT OR PETITION. In actions upon municipal bonds the rules governing the sufficiency of the complaint or petition in civil actions generally apply.⁴⁶ The petition should show the authority to issue the bond, either by averment of the special act conferring such authority or by stating the recital of the bond in that respect,⁴⁷ although when it is alleged that plaintiff is a bona fide holder and the bonds recite their issuance in conformity with law, it is not necessary that the facts showing the regularity and legality of issuance should be set out.⁴⁸ Where, however, the bonds contain no recital which will preclude the municipality from impeaching them in the hands of a bona fide holder, plaintiff must show in his complaint that they were issued in substantial compliance with the legislative enactments and for a proper purpose.⁴⁹ Subject to these general rules the complaint need not negative matters of defense,⁵⁰ although it has been held that a compliance with the constitutional provision requiring provision to be made for the payment of the indebtedness must be alleged.⁵¹

(ii) PLEA OR ANSWER. Defendant may plead generally non est factum or a 46. See Veeder v. Lima, 11 Wis. 419, holding that a bond for money and coupon attached, issued by a town, is a written instrument for the payment of money, within the meaning of Code, § 68, prescribing the requisites of a complaint in an action founded on an instrument for the payment of money only.

Pleading generally see PLEADING.

Amendment.—In a suit upon interest coupons of bonds which have been issued in excess of the amount authorized, plaintiff should be permitted to amend by alleging facts necessary to show how the holders of the bonds are entitled to share in the amount of the debt the city was authorized to contract. Citizens' Bank v. Terrell, 78 Tex. 450, 14 S. W. 1003.

Sufficiency of particular averments.—That bonds were sold at par (Wetumpka v. Winter, 29 Ala. 651); that bonds were duly authorized and executed (Wiley v. Minneapolis Bd. of Education, 11 Minn. 371); and that bonds have been properly issued and registered (Bissell v. Spring Valley Tp., 28 Fed. 54).

47. Kennard v. Cass County, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,697, 3 Dill. 147.

Coupons.—In an action on negotiable coupons, cut from bonds of a public corporation which has no general authority to make negotiable paper, special authority must be alleged. Kennard v. Cass County, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,697, 3 Dill. 147.

Authority of agents.—In an action on an obligation of a municipal corporation issued by the corporation or its general agents, no averments to show the authority of such agents are essential. Ridgefield Tp. Bd. of Education v. Cliffside Park Bd. of Education, 63 N. J. L. 371, 43 Atl. 722 [affirmed in 67 N. J. L. 415, 53 Atl. 1124]. Where an act gives authority to certain commissioners to issue bonds of the city for certain purposes, the commissioners are thus made agents of the city to issue such bonds, and an averment in a declaration upon such bonds that they were issued by the city is proper. Rahway Sav. Inst. v. Rahway, 53 N. J. L. 48, 20 Atl. 756.

Denomination of bonds.—Where the act authorizing the issue of bonds by a city provided that the bonds were to be denominated on their face "Rahway City Water Bonds," it was held that as such denomination was not made essential to the validity of the bonds, it was not necessary to aver in a declaration upon such bonds that they were so denominated; but, if necessary, an averment that the bonds were writings denominated "Rahway City Water Bonds," was sufficient. Rahway Sav. Inst. v. Rahway, 53 N. J. L. 48, 20 Atl. 756.

Acts to be performed after issue.—The declaration in an action on city bonds need not aver that certain duties, which the acts authorizing the issue of the bonds required to be done by city officials after the issue, had been performed, for the non-performance of such duties could not affect the validity of the city's obligation previously issued. Rahway Sav. Inst. v. Rahway, 53 N. J. L. 48, 20 Atl. 756.

Minneapolis Bd. of Education*, 11 Minn. 371 (holding that in an action upon a bond of a municipal corporation, taken by a creditor in payment of a debt due from the corporation, it is not necessary that the complaint should allege that the bond was taken at par); Brown v. Point Pleasant, 36 W. Va. 290, 15 S. E. 209; Lincoln Tp. v. Cambria Iron Co., 103 U. S. 412, 26 L. ed. 518; U. S. v. Saunders, 124 Fed. 124, 59 C. C. A. 394.

51. Biddle v. Terrell, 82 Tex. 335, 18 S. W. 691.

Sufficiency of averment.—An averment, in an action against a city, that due provision was made before the issuance of bonds for the levy of a special tax annually, to meet annual plea in the nature thereof,⁵² or may plead specially setting up special matter avoiding liability upon the bond after its issuance.⁵³ Where it is alleged that plaintiff obtained possession of the bond in suit the facts constituting the fraud should be specifically pleaded.⁵⁴

j. Evidence — (1) PRESUMPTIONS. It will be presumed as a general rule that the bonds of a municipal corporation issued in apparent compliance with a law authorizing their issue have been actually so issued,⁵⁵ especially where they are in the hands of bona fide holders.⁵⁶ Where bonds are shown to have been delivered by an officer of the municipal corporation it will be presumed that he was acting in his official capacity.⁵⁷ Under some statutes bonds issued for street improvements are prima facie evidence of the regularity of the proceedings.⁵⁸ Possession of negotiable bonds raises a presumption of ownership.⁵⁹ Want of notice of defects cannot be presumed from mere evidence of a purchase for value.⁶⁰

(1) BURDEN OF PROOF. Where bonds for a particular purpose are valid only in case they fall within an exception of a statute forbidding the issuance of bonds for such purpose generally, the burden is upon plaintiff to establish that they are within such exception.⁶¹ Where a bond upon its face shows the condi-

interest thereon and provide for a sinking fund, as required by the constitution and the city charter, sufficiently shows that the provision was for at least the minimum per cent required thereby, judicial notice being taken of both the constitution and the charter. Berlin Iron-Bridge Co. v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 50 S. W. 408.

52. Galbreath v. Knoxville, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1900) 59 S. W. 178 (holding that an allegation in a particular paragraph of an answer that the interest upon the bond in suit was paid from the general fund, and that a sinking fund was created for retiring it at maturity, would be construed in connection with other paragraphs denying that any sinking fund or special tax had been created to pay the bond sued on in such manner as to prevent the city from being estopped to deny the issuance of the bond); Coler v. Cleburne, 131 U. S. 162, 9 S. Ct. 720, 33 L. ed. 146 (holding a plea sufficient as against an objection that it did not negative the idea that the bonds might have been signed by someone authorized by defendant or by law); Merrill v. Monticello, 14 Fed. 628.

An affidavit made in behalf of a village by its president, and filed in an action against the village to recover on a bond, denying the execution and delivery of the bond, although not entitled in the cause, is sufficient to require plaintiff to prove the execution and delivery. Thompson v. Mecosta, 127 Mich. 522, 86 N. W. 1044.

53. Richardson v. Marshall County, 100 Tenn. 346, 45 S. W. 440 (holding that an answer in defense to a bill to collect certain railroad aid bonds from a county, averring that the bonds had been paid and canceled and some unknown persons had purloined them and erasing the cancellation fraudulently placed them upon the market again, properly pleaded a defense which was not available under a plea of non est factum); Galbreath v. San Francisco, 24 Fed. 705, holding that to maintain an action on bonds issued for street improvements, the sufficiency of the petition by property-owners for the improvement must be affirmatively shown, as it cannot be conclusively presumed from the recitals in the bond.

tions upon which it is payable the holder has the burden of showing that such conditions have been complied with.⁶² Where a corporation has power to issue bonds to a limited amount only, the burden is upon it to show that a particular bond in suit was issued after this limit was exceeded.⁶³ Municipal bonds payable to bearer are subject to the same rules as other negotiable paper;⁶⁴ and when they are regular upon their face it is presumed that plaintiff became the holder for value at its date in the usual course of business.⁶⁵ But where the municipality proves that there was fraud or illegality in the inception of the bond, the burden is thrown upon plaintiff to show that he is a bona fide holder for value.⁶⁶ But a mere irregularity not amounting to illegality does not place upon plaintiff the burden of showing that he is a holder for value.⁶⁷ Where nil debet has been pleaded it places upon plaintiff the burden of showing that the execution of a non-negotiable note was within the power of the corporation.⁶⁸

(III) ADMISSIBILITY AND SUFFICIENCY. The rules applicable to civil actions in general⁶⁹ control the admissibility of evidence, including the admissibility of parol and documentary evidence, in proceedings to enforce municipal bonds.⁷⁰

370; Jeffries v. Lawrence, 42 Iowa 498. Compare Hutchinson v. Self, 153 Ill. 542, 39 N. E. 460, holding that in an action against a municipal corporation on a bond, or other common-law security given for deferred payments on real estate purchased by the corporation, the burden of proof was on plaintiff to show that the real estate purchased by defendant was reasonably necessary to the proper exercise and enjoyment by it of the powers and duties conferred upon it by its charter.

Illustrations.—The poll book of an election is admissible to show the vote of a majority of the taxpayers upon the issuance of bonds. Hannibal v. Fauntleroy, 105 U. S. 408, 26 L. ed. 1103. Evidence that the assent of taxpayers to an issue of bonds was secured by threats of the president of the corporation, in aid of which they were issued, is not admissible where it is not shown that the statements were not true or that they were not made in good faith in the course of legitimate discussion. North Bennington First Nat. Bank v. Arlington, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,806, 16 Blatchf. 57. Where the money was received by the borough, evidence that the consideration of the bond was paid to the wrong person is inadmissible. Freeport v. Marks, 59 Pa. St. 253. Evidence that the borough councilmen had individually incurred the debt which the money was borrowed to discharge, and had as officers recognized it as a debt of the city, is irrelevant. Rainsburg v. Fyan, 127 Pa. St. 74, 17 Atl. 678, 4 L. R. A. 336. A certificate of a municipal officer as to the indebtedness of the city and as to its assessed property is inadmissible to show an estoppel of the city, where it is not shown that the bondholders saw or relied upon such certificate. Huron v. Second Ward Sav. Bank, 86 Fed. 272, 30 C. C. A. 38, 49 L. R. A. 534. Signatures of persons signing a petition of assent must be proved by ordinary evidence. Starin v. Genoa, 23 N. Y. 439. Where bonds have been placed in escrow evidence that the custodian had reported their delivery to the council is admissible. Schmid v. Frankfort, 131 Mich. 197, 91 N. W. 131. Upon the question of whether at the time refunding bonds were issued there were outstanding bonds to be refunded, a certificate showing the registration of such bonds with the said auditor is admissible. State v. Wichita County, 59 Kan. 512, 53 Pac. 526.

Parol evidence is admissible to supply the parts of a record left missing by the failure

And the same is true with regard to the rules governing the weight and sufficiency of evidence.⁷¹

k. Questions For Jury. Disputed questions of fact are for the jury when there is a trial to a jury⁷² as in other civil actions.⁷³

l. Submission of Controversy. The statutory provision that in pleading the judgment of a court of special jurisdiction the facts conferring jurisdiction need not be set out is applicable to the statement of a case filed for the submission of a controversy with regard to the validity of a bond.⁷⁴

m. Findings. Findings of fact by the court in proceedings upon bonds are governed by the rules usually applicable to findings in other civil actions.⁷⁵

n. Judgment and Enforcement Thereof. Judgments in proceedings to enforce bonds have the conclusiveness and effect of judgments in other civil actions.⁷⁶ A court of equity, after ascertaining at the suit of bondholders the proportion of a bond issue which may be enforced without violating a constitutional limitation of of the clerk of a municipal corporation to make a record of proceedings relating to the issuance of bonds. Rondot v. Rogers Tp., 99 Fed. 202, 39 C. C. A. 462. See also supra, V, B, 6

On the question of bona fides evidence of the former owner of the bonds that prior to the sale thereof he informed plaintiff that the bonds were bonus bonds given for building a factory, by a letter properly addressed and mailed, was admissible. Schmid v. Frankfort, 141 Mich. 291, 104 N. W. 668.

71. See the cases cited infra, this note.

Prima facie case.—In an action upon coupons of township bonds issued to pay a subscription to railway stock, plaintiff makes out a prima facie case by showing the law under which the bonds were issued, the vote thereon, their issue, the acceptance by the company and compliance with the conditions upon which the vote was taken. Mercy v. Ohio, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,457 [affirmed in 18 Wall. 552, 21 L. ed. 813]. For evidence sufficient to establish a prima facie case that a bank was a bona fide purchaser see Thompson v. Mecosta, 141 Mich. 175, 104 N. W. 694. For evidence held sufficient to establish prima facie that a tax was sufficient to provide for the payment of interest and principal of bonds see Cass County v. Wilbarger County, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 52, 60 S. W. 988.

Evidence held sufficient.—For cases in which the evidence to establish particular facts has been held sufficient see Schmid v. Frankfort, 141 Mich. 291, 104 N. W. 668 (to require submission to a jury whether plaintiff was a bona fide purchaser); Thompson v. Mecosta, 127 Mich. 522, 86 N. W. 1044 (to show that bonds were delivered by authority of the council); Galbraith v. Knoxville, 105 Tenn. 453, 58 S. W. 643 (to establish a plea of non est factum); Jefferson v. Jennings Banking, etc., Co., 35 Tex. Civ. App. 74, 79 S. W. 876 (to show that the city received a consideration); Wright v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 50 S. W. 406 (that provision for sinking fund was made when bonds were sold); Davis v. Kendallville, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,638, 5 Biss. 280 (to show a subscription by the city to railroad stock).

Evidence held insufficient.—For cases in which the evidence to establish particular facts was held insufficient see Thompson v. Mecosta, 141 Mich. 175, 104 N. W. 694 (notice to purchaser that bonds were invalid); Wright v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 50 S. W. 406 (holding that a failure to provide a sinking fund, as required by a constitutional provision, in advance of the sale of bonds, was not shown by proof that the ordinances authorizing the issuance of such bonds did not contain such a provision).

72. Schmid v. Frankfort, 141 Mich. 291, 104 N. W. 668 (holding the question of whether the denial of receipt of a letter overcame the presumption arising from the fact of its mailing, was for the jury); Schmid v. Frankfort, 131 Mich. 197, 91 N. W. 131 (holding the question of bona fides for the jury); Woodbridge v. Duluth, 57 Minn. 256, 59 N. W. 296 (holding that the reasonableness of the time after a special election for the issuance of bonds was a question of fact); Tracey v. Phelps, 22 Fed. 634, 23 Blatchf. 71 (holding that the question of bona fides was properly submitted to the jury).

74. Brownell v. Greenwich, 114 N. Y. 518, 22 N. E. 24, 4 L. R. A. 685 [affirming 44 Hun 611], so holding with regard to a recital that a county judge had duly adjudged the sufficiency of a petition for the issuance of bonds in aid of a railroad company.

75. See, generally, TRIAL. And see Thompson v. Mecosta, 127 Mich. 522, 86 N. W. 1044, holding that where findings recite the records of a village, stating that a village bond payable to hearer was "given to" a certain firm, speak of the bond as issued by the village and state that the bond came into the hands of such firm, they sufficiently find the fact of delivery.

76. See, generally, JUDGMENTS, 23 Cyc. 1106 et seq. And see Marion County v. Coler, 88 Fed. 59, 31 C. C. A. 389, holding that where a judgment has been recovered against a county upon its refunding bonds, and subsequently mandamus is issued to compel the levy of a tax to pay such bonds, their validity is concluded as between the same parties and cannot be again raised in the same suit.

legal indebtedness, may award judgment in accordance with such determination.⁷⁷ Where an action is brought solely for recovery upon bonds and coupons, questions arising out of the liability of the municipal corporation upon a stock subscription, in payment of which the bonds were issued, cannot be determined.⁷⁸ A judgment at law upon a bond is not conclusive upon the question of whether it is entitled to share in the benefit of a trust imposed by statute, by which the property and revenues of the corporation were pledged to the payment of bonds issued under the authority of the statute.⁷⁹ A judgment must be enforced in accordance with specific statutory provisions in case such provisions exist.⁸⁰ In case only the surplus remaining after the payment of current expenses may be applied to the payment of bonds, a court has no right to anticipate the existence of such a surplus and direct the payment of a fixed sum upon such bonds annually.⁸¹

D. Taxes and Other Revenue¹—1. POWER TO TAX IN GENERAL — a. Inherent and Delegated Power. The power of taxation is a sovereign power and belongs exclusively to the legislative department of the government.² While municipal corporations are almost universally invested with the power to levy taxes for local purposes,³ they have no inherent power to levy taxes but only such as is conferred upon them by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions.⁴ The power, however, need not be expressly conferred, but may be implied from the grant of other powers.⁵ Where power has been delegated, mere non-user by the municipality of its power to tax certain property, no matter for how long continued, cannot be construed as a forfeiture of the power.⁶

b. Power Conferred by Constitution. Municipal power to levy taxes is sometimes granted by constitutional provisions.⁷ Ordinarily, however, constitutional provisions conferring the power to tax are not self-executing,⁸ although in some cases it is otherwise and an act of the legislature is not necessary.⁹

c. Power of Legislature to Delegate Authority. Subject to constitutional limitations and exceptions,¹⁰ the legislature has power to delegate to municipalities authority to levy taxes for local purposes within its corporate limits;¹¹ and it may

Personal property.—Where only the power to tax real property has been delegated, the municipality cannot tax personal property. Adams v. Ducate, 86 Miss. 276, 38 So. 497.

Poll tax.—A municipality has no power to impose a poll tax except where it is expressly or impliedly authorized so to do by the legislature. Morris v. Cummings, 91 Tex. 618, 45 S. W. 383.

Power of state officer to compel.—Where a city is without power to levy a tax on personal property, acting through its own legally constituted fiscal officers, the state revenue agent cannot compel it to levy such tax. Adams v. Ducate, 86 Miss. 276, 38 So. 497.

Taxation of corporation.—A charter vesting a city with power to make assessments on those who hold "taxable property" within the same gave no right to assess a specific tax of one thousand dollars on each and every of certain corporations, the legislature not having recognized an incorporated company as taxable property. Augusta v. Walton, 37 Ga. 620.

Grant by judicial construction.—No taxing power can be vested in a municipality, nor can a restricted grant of power be expanded, by judicial construction. Adams v. Ducate, 86 Miss. 276, 38 So. 497.

Extent of power granted.—It is settled law that where the legislature confers upon a municipality the general power of taxation, it grants all the power possessed by itself in respect to the imposition of taxes. Woodall v. Lynchburg, 100 Va. 318, 40 S. E. 915.

confer such measure of power in regard thereto as it deems expedient where it is not different from nor greater than that possessed by the state;¹² but such power is limited to taxes for public objects in which the people of the municipality have a general interest.¹³ Where the grant of power to municipalities to levy taxes is not required by the constitution to be in express terms, the legislature may grant such power by necessary implication.¹⁴ The legislature ordinarily has no power to authorize persons not corporate officers to levy a tax, either directly or indirectly, without the consent of those to be affected thereby, or the municipal authorities.¹⁵ The power cannot be delegated to a private individual or private corporation,¹⁶ nor to officers of the corporation as such.¹⁷ The legislature has no power to establish, or to delegate the power to establish, a district less in area than a political corporation or division of the state, within which to impose taxes.¹⁸

d. Restrictions on Power of Legislature. The power of the legislature in reference to municipal taxation is limited by various constitutional provisions in the different states,¹⁹ such as provisions that the legislature shall not impose taxes on municipal corporations for municipal purposes;²⁰ that the legislature shall restrict

United States.—Henderson Bridge Co. v. Henderson, 173 U. S. 592, 19 S. Ct. 553, 43 L. ed. 823.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 2017.

Poll tax.—A legislature which itself has power to impose a poll tax may authorize a municipality to impose one. Perry v. Rockdale, 62 Tex. 451.

Succession tax.—The power to impose a succession tax may be delegated by the legislature to municipal corporations. Peters v. Lynchburg, 76 Va. 927.

Taxes in aid of railroads.—The legislature, having the control of municipal organizations, and the power to enlarge or abridge their powers at pleasure, may authorize them to make subscriptions for public improvements, such as railroads, and levy taxes and issue bonds to meet the assessment thereon. Gibbons v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 36 Ala. 410; State v. Linn County Ct., 44 Mo. 504. See also supra, XV, A, 5.

Franchise tax.—Const. art. 9, § 1, providing that the general assembly shall have power to tax persons or corporations owning or using franchises, does not prevent the general assembly from authorizing municipal corporations to impose taxes thereon. Huck v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 86 Ill. 352.

13. State v. Owsley, 122 Mo. 68, 26 S. W. 659 (holding, however, that a statute providing for the registration of voters in cities of over one hundred thousand population through a recorder of voters, appointed by the governor, all expenses of the registration and of such recorder's office to be paid out of the city and county treasuries, is not unconstitutional, as authorizing municipal authorities to levy a local tax for other than a local purpose); Citizens Sav., etc., Assoc. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 655, 22 L. ed. 455. See also infra, XV, D, 2, b.

18. State v. Raritan Tp., 52 N. J. L. 319, 19 Atl. 610.

Taxing districts within city.—The legislature cannot bestow upon the common council of a city the power to establish taxing districts within the city narrower in extent than the city limits. Morgan v. Elizabeth, 44 N. J. L. 571.

19. See the constitutions of the several states. See also Braun v. Chicago, 110 Ill. 136; Cornell v. People, 107 Ill. 372; State v. Van Every, 75 Mo. 530; Ballentine v. Pulaski, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 633.

Delegation to other than corporate authorities.—A constitutional provision that the corporate authorities of cities, etc., may be vested with power to tax for corporate purposes is to be construed as limiting the power of the legislature to authorize any other than corporate authorities to assess and collect local taxes. Cornell v. People, 107 Ill. 372; People v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 37.

Taxation as limited to ad valorem.—Under a constitutional provision that taxation on property shall be ad valorem only, the legislature cannot authorize a municipality to levy a specified sum on each horse, etc., in the city, but the tax must vary with the value of the animal. Livingston v. Albany, 41 Ga. 21.

Boyd*, 42 Wash. 17, 84 Pac. 609 (holdthe municipal power of taxation;²¹ that every law that imposes, continues, or revives a tax shall distinctly state the tax and the object to which it is to be applied;²² etc.

e. Construction of Statutes. Statutes conferring upon municipal corporations authority to impose taxes must be strictly construed.²³ If the authority of the municipality to levy and collect a tax is doubtful, the doubt must always be resolved against the tax.²⁴

f. Power of Legislature to Repeal or Change. The delegation of power to tax to a municipality does not deprive the legislature of the power to control such taxing power.²⁵ The legislature may repeal or change the authority granted to a municipality to levy taxes;²⁶ but not so as to violate a contract right or impair the

ing provision to relate to the imposition of taxes concerning ordinary corporate affairs incidental to the existence of the corporation, and not contravened by requiring the corporation to submit to vote of the people, on petition of a certain proportion of the voters, a proposed amendment of its charter, although this will occasion expense to the corporation).

A statute appointing a state revenue agent to supervise the action of county and municipal taxing officers was not unconstitutional, in so far as it applied to a city operating under a special charter delegating to it the power of taxation, on the ground that the city was thereby deprived of the right of local self-government. Adams v. Kuykendall, 83 Miss. 571, 35 So. 830.

Indirect violation.—Where the constitution forbids the legislature to levy taxes on persons or property for the corporate uses of municipal corporations, that which is forbidden to be done directly cannot lawfully be done by indirection. Aachen, etc., F. Ins. Co. v. Omaha, 72 Nebr. 518, 101 N. W. 3.

A statute creating a board of health for a city is not in conflict with that provision of the constitution forbidding the raising of the tax for local purposes without the consent of the city as the preservation of the public health is not a local purpose. Davock v. Moore, 105 Mich. 120, 63 N. W. 424, 28 L. R. A. 733.

A statute requiring a city to set apart annually for a certain purpose a certain proportion of whatever amount it may derive from taxes imposed by itself cannot be said to be the exercising of the power of taxation confided by the constitution to the city. Benedict v. New Orleans, 115 La. 645, 39 So. 792.

21. People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; Oconto City Water Supply Co. v. Oconto, 105 Wis. 76, 80 N. W. 1113.

Construction of provision.—Where the constitution provides that the legislature shall restrict municipal power of taxation, the legislature cannot confer upon a municipality an unlimited power to levy taxes aside from and above what may be necessary and proper for legitimate municipal purposes. Foster v. Kenosha, 12 Wis. 616, holding that, although a charter forbids taxation or raising of money, except for legitimate municipal purposes, without the previous sanction of a majority of the voters, it violates the constitutional provision, as the constitution requires the restriction to be imposed by the legislature, and not by the people. A constitutional provision that the legislature shall provide for the organization of municipalities and shall "restrict their powers of taxation" does not imply that a municipality must be limited to a certain rate of taxation but means that the power of taxation must be restricted as to the subjects and objects of the tax imposed. State v. Beaufort, 39 S. C. 5, 17 S. E. 365. A charter giving a town "power to levy and collect taxes on all persons and subjects of taxation, which it is in the power of the General Assembly to tax for State and county purposes," is not in conflict with such a constitutional provision. State v. Irvin, 126 N. C. 989, 35 S. E. 430. A provision which limits the power of taxation for the maintenance of a police department to the actual expenses as estimated by the governing board, after first limiting the power of the board to incur expenses beyond the narrow limits, is as much a restriction of the power of taxation as if it confined the power to a certain percentage upon taxable property, or to a sum proportioned to the number of inhabitants in the city, and complies with the constitutional requirement. People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481.

22. People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481.

When statute "imposes" tax.—A statute authorizing the levy of taxes by cities in aid of the purchase or construction of waterworks is not in contravention of Const. art. 7, § 7, providing that every law which imposes a tax shall distinctly state the tax and the object to which it is to be applied, and that it is not sufficient to refer to any other law to fix such tax or object, as the act itself does not impose the tax. Youngerman v. Murphy, 107 Iowa 686, 76 N. W. 648.

rights of creditors of the municipality, who, in becoming creditors, relied upon the power to tax as a security.²⁷

g. Submission to Popular Vote. In some jurisdictions provisions limit municipal power to levy taxes, at least for certain purposes, to cases where the tax is authorized by a vote of the people.²⁸ Substantial compliance with the essential requirements of the statute is sufficient to validate the levy.²⁹ The declaration of the mayor and common council as to the result of the election is conclusive until reversed by a direct proceeding.³⁰ Such consent of the people applies only to legal conditions existing at the date of the election.³¹

27. Hawesville Bd. of Education v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 110 Ky. 932, 62 S. W. 1125, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 376; Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 1090. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8 Cyc. 951.

The power of taxation existing at the date of a contract made by a municipal corporation becomes part of the contract, and may be exerted, so far as necessary for the satisfaction of the obligations of the contract, irrespective of subsequent legislation restricting the corporation's power of taxation. State v. New Orleans, 37 La. Ann. 528; State v. New Orleans, 37 La. Ann. 13.

Waiver.—The right of a creditor to insist on a levy is not waived by accepting the interest for several years raised in a different way from that provided by the statute. Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 1090.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 2013.

Power of legislature.—The legislature may provide that the propriety of levying a tax be submitted to a vote of the people. Stein v. Mobile, 24 Ala. 591; Slack v. Maysville, etc., R. Co., 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1; Matter of Neilly, 37 U. C. Q. B. 289.

A charter provision for submitting to a vote of the people whether an additional tax shall be levied in excess of the ordinary charter provision, "for any purposes the accomplishment of which is authorized by [the charter]," has been held not applicable to a levy to pay preëxisting debts as distinguished from future debts. Denison v. Foster, 90 Tex. 22, 36 S. W. 401.

Tax for educational purposes.—In some jurisdictions a municipal tax for educational purposes cannot be levied without a vote of the people. Mitchell v. Fox, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 420; El Paso v. Conklin, 91 Tex. 537, 44 S. W. 988. A tax to maintain a public library is not one for education, within Ky. Const. § 184, prohibiting a tax for education other than in common schools, until it has been authorized at an election. Ramsey v. Shelbyville, 119 Ky. 180, 83 S. W. 1136, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 1102, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 141, 68 L. R. A. 300. In other jurisdictions such a vote is necessary when the tax is in excess of a certain rate. Boguechitto v. Lewis, 75 Miss. 741, 23 So. 549.

In North Carolina municipal taxation for anything except "necessary expenses" must be authorized by a majority vote of the qualified electors. The cost of providing water for a city is not a "necessary expense," and the legislature cannot, by conferring power on a city to provide the city with water, make a water-supply such a "necessary expense." Edgerton v. Goldsboro Water Co., 126 N. C. 93, 35 S. E. 243, 48 L. R. A. 444. So the expense of erecting city waterworks is not a "necessary expense." Charlotte v. Shepard, 120 N. C. 411, 27 S. E. 109.

Effect of partial invalidity.—Authorization to levy a special tax by a vote of the people is not void in its entirety merely because it attempted to convey a power greater than the taxpayers were competent to grant but the power granted is valid up to and within the amount of the special tax lawfully provided for. Gray v. Bourgeois, 107 La. 671, 32 So. 42. 29. See *Bartemeyer v. Rohlf*s, 71 Iowa 582, 32 N. W. 673.

Sufficiency of petition.—Where a petition described the direction of the proposed railroad to be aided by a tax, as "northwestwardly" to a certain point, while the notice described it as "westwardly" to the same point, the variance was not material. *Bartemeyer v. Rohlf*s, 71 Iowa 582, 32 N. W. 673.

An ordinance ordering a vote of the taxpayers on the question of a special tax, although supplemented by an amendment after it is advertised, will not be vitiated thereby, provided the amendment does not materially affect its essential parts. MacKenzie v. Wooley, 39 La. Ann. 944, 3 So. 128.

Scope of election.—An election, which submitted merely the question of the issuance of bonds, but not the question of the levy of a tax to pay therefor, did not confer implied power to levy the tax. Charlotte v. Shepard, 120 N. C. 411, 27 S. E. 109.

Notice to voters of election relative to making an appropriation in aid of railroad see Demaree v. Johnson, 150 Ind. 419, 49 N. E. 1062, 50 N. E. 376.

2. RESTRICTIONS ON POWER TO TAX AND CONSTITUTIONAL REQUIREMENTS — a. Constitutional Provisions in General. Constitutional provisions that taxation shall be uniform and equal apply to municipal taxation as well as to state and county.³² Other provisions found in many of the state constitutions, which are applicable to municipal taxes, are that property shall be taxed in proportion to its value;³³ that the taxes shall be levied and collected under general laws;³⁴ that all the property except such as is exempt shall be taxed for payment of debts;³⁵ that no tax levied and collected for one purpose shall ever be devoted to another purpose;³⁶ that every ordinance levying a tax shall specify the purpose for which such tax is levied;³⁷ and that any municipality incurring a debt shall, before or at the time of doing so, provide for the collection of a direct annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on the debt as it falls due.³⁸ The constitutional prohibition against the taking of private property for public use without compensation has been held not applicable to the power of taxation.³⁹ The option given to municipalities by a constitutional provision to substitute for the ad valorem tax on personalty a tax based on income, licenses, or franchises necessarily carries with it the power to define the class of property as to which the substitution is made.⁴⁰

b. Public Purpose.⁴¹ The power to levy a tax is subject to the restriction that it must be for a public as distinguished from a private purpose.⁴² The incidental

Different systems for different kinds of corporations.—The legislature may properly classify taxpayers in devising an equal system of taxation, and may properly authorize municipal corporations to provide different systems of taxation for different kinds of corporations. German Washington Mut. F. Ins. Assoc. v. Louisville, 117 Ky. 593, 78 S. W. 472, 80 S. W. 154, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 2097.

Statutes violating constitutional provisions.—The statute providing that no city shall impose or collect a greater tax on banks or solvent credits than the state tax for the same year is void. Adams v. Mississippi State Bank, 75 Miss. 701, 23 So. 395.

Construction of ordinance.—An ordinance imposing a tax on "merchandise, meaning dealers in varied stock of goods," and also imposing taxes upon persons engaged in the sale of various articles which would be embraced under the term "merchandise," will not, unless the terms of the ordinance imperatively require it, be construed to authorize the collection of more than one tax on dealers in general merchandise. *Wynne v. benefits which accrue to the inhabitants of the municipality from the development of its commercial interests will not sustain the power of taxation as for a public purpose.⁴³ It has been held that a tax for street sprinkling,⁴⁴ or the maintenance of a gas or electric light plant for furnishing lights to all persons within the limits of the municipality,⁴⁵ or to pay bounties to volunteers credited to the quota of the municipality where soldiers are being drafted during a war,⁴⁶ is for a public purpose. On the other hand it has been held that a tax to pay for entertaining official visitors;⁴⁷ to build a house of entertainment;⁴⁸ to reimburse a tax-collector who has taken a note for certain taxes and accounted therefor to the town as money, and is thereafter unable to collect the note;⁴⁹ to repay a municipal officer for expenses incurred by him in successfully resisting removal upon a criminal charge;⁵⁰ for expenses incurred in opposing before the legislature the passage of an act annexing the whole or a part of the territory to another municipality;⁵¹ or to raise money to assist the county in repairing its buildings located in the municipality⁵² was for a private rather than a public purpose and hence invalid. Taxation for the establishment of a state university in the municipality has been held to be authorized,⁵³ but the legislature cannot authorize a municipal tax for the benefit of an existing private educational institution.⁵⁴

c. Amount or Rate—(1) IN GENERAL.⁵⁵ In the absence of constitutional, statutory, or charter limitation, a municipality may levy such rate or amount as it deems best.⁵⁶ But in most jurisdictions constitutional provisions, statutes, charter

The construction and maintenance of a bridge outside of the territorial boundaries of a city, to serve the convenience of the inhabitants of an outlying district, and to promote the business interests of the city by increasing the trade of its business men, is not such a corporate purpose as will sustain the exercise of the power of taxation. Manning v. Devils Lake, 13 N. D. 47, 99 N. W. 51, 112 Am. St. Rep. 652, 65 L. R. A. 187.

A tax to raise a statue or monument, unless in populous and wealthy towns they should be thought suitable ornaments to buildings or squares, is not for a public purpose. Stetson v. Kempton, 13 Mass. 272, 7 Am. Dec. 145.

A city purpose, according to the general definition, "must be necessary for the common good and general welfare of the people of the municipality, sanctioned by its citizens, public in character and authorized by the legislature." Sun Printing, etc., Assoc. v. New York, 152 N. Y. 257, 46 N. E. 499, 37 L. R. A. 788; Matter of Jensen, 44 N. Y. App. Div. 509, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 933.

Gratuity.—The taxing power cannot be used to furnish a gratuity to a corporation engaged in a private enterprise, although it be one in which many persons are interested, but it may be used to compensate it for a public service. Wisconsin Industrial School v. Clark County, 103 Wis. 651, 79 N. W. 422.

Charitable association.—A constitutional provision prohibiting the giving of money of the state to or in aid of any association or private undertaking does not prevent a municipality collecting a tax and paying it to a charitable corporation to be applied to its purposes and objects. Shepherd's Fold v. New York, 96 N. Y. 137 [reversing 10 Daly 319].

provisions, or ordinances limit to a certain rate or amount taxes which may be levied for any one year,⁵⁷ and a limitation is also often imposed upon the amount

17 S. E. 355; Henderson v. Hughes County, 13 S. D. 576, 83 N. W. 682. See also Hale v. People, 87 Ill. 72.

Amount in excess of that required.—Under a charter directing that taxes shall be assessed at such rate as will be sufficient to produce the sum required, together with the fees for assessing and collecting them, and a reasonable allowance for losses by delinquencies after deducting the whole tax, the raising by an assessment of an amount exceeding that required is not improper, unless it appears that such excess was for illegal purposes. State v. Powers, 24 N. J. L. 408.

Different rate on suburban property.—Under a statute establishing a rate of taxation of property in the city designated as the highest rate, and a rate which is to be assessed on the rural or suburban portions of the city, the property in the built-up portions of the city should be taxed at the highest rate, although it is at a distance from the center of the city, it appearing that the portion of the city in which such property is located is a populous district. Castor v. Philadelphia, 26 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 189.

Review by courts.—Where the law confides in certain officers the discretion to determine the extent of the levy and the amount of money necessary to meet the current expenses of municipalities, the courts cannot supervise or control such discretion. Ward v. Piper, 69 Kan. 773, 77 Pac. 699.

Delegation of power.—A statute amending a city charter and providing that the board of estimates may strike from the yearly budget any item or items it may deem advisable is not a delegation of powers conferred by the constitution on the common council. Robinson v. Detroit, 107 Mich. 168, 65 N. W. 10.

Effect of charter limitation on power of legislature.—The fact that the charter limits the amount of the tax does not preclude the right of the legislature to empower the municipality to levy a special tax in excess thereof, as such a statute is in effect an amendment of the charter. Kelsey v. Nevada, 18 Cal. 629.

Indirect violation.—The prohibition cannot be indirectly evaded by a levy by the state for municipal purposes. State v. Southern R. Co., 115 Ala. 250, 22 So. 589.

Such statutes are constitutional.—Somo Lumber Co. v. Lincoln County, 110 Wis. 286, 85 N. W. 1023.

Amount as fixed by amount collected.—A yearly deficit in the taxes collected cannot be considered in determining whether the percentage of the tax levy exceeded the charter limit. Bassett v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 28 S. W. 554.

Effect of undertaxation in past years.—Where the charter of a city places a limitation upon the total levy of taxes for all general purposes in any one year, the fact that in past years it has not made the full levy does not authorize it to make a levy in excess of the limitation in a subsequent year. Cleveland v. U. S., 111 Fed. 341, 49 C. C. A. 383.

Including taxes for preceding years.—Prohibiting cities from levying taxes "for" any one year which shall exceed two and a half per cent of the taxable property of the city does not prohibit the city from levying "in" one year a tax omitted to be levied in a past or rate of certain special tax levies.⁵⁸ A limitation as to special taxes has no year, where such tax is not, in connection with other valid taxes, in excess of the tax limit for such past year, although the levy for the year in which it is made may exceed the limit for that year. Austin v. Cahill, (Tex. 1905) 88 S. W. 542. But where the fiscal year was changed by charter amendment and the tax levy ordinance thereafter passed described the period for which the levy was made as the "municipal" and the "fiscal" year ending at the time fixed by the amendment and as "the municipal year 1891-92" the levy was held not for the old fiscal year ending in March and the interim to June (the new fiscal year), but for one year only, and hence was invalid as to the excess over the statutory limitation. San Antonio v. Berry, 92 Tex. 319, 48 S. W. 496 [modifying (Civ. App. 1898) 46 S. W. 273].

Reorganization of municipality.—Where a village, after a cause of action has accrued against it, reorganizes under the general incorporation law, thereby obtaining a right to levy taxes at a higher rate than before, and the cause of action is then reduced to judgment, the village may levy taxes at the higher rate in order to pay such judgment. Carney v. Marseilles, 136 Ill. 401, 26 N. E. 491, 29 Am. St. Rep. 328.

A limitation on the power to incur debts does not operate as a limitation upon the taxing power. Habersham County v. Porter Mfg. Co., 103 Ga. 613, 30 S. E. 547.

Different limits for different municipalities.—Under some constitutional provisions the legislature may authorize certain municipalities to levy heavier taxes than other municipalities, although the municipalities are of the same class according to the constitutional classification. Cave v. Houston, 65 Tex. 619.

Effect of reducing claim to judgment.—The fact that a claim payable out of the general revenue fund of the city has been placed in judgment does not alter the nature of the claim, so that an assessment for its payment can be levied in excess of the maximum levy allowed for the general revenue fund. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Stanfield, 7 Kan. App. 274, 53 Pac. 772.

Poll tax.—The constitutional provision that the legislature shall levy a capitation tax equal on each person to the tax on property valued at three hundred dollars applies solely to state and county taxation. Wingate v. Parker, 136 N. C. 369, 48 S. E. 774 [following Jones v. Person County, 107 N. C. 248, 12 S. E. 69].

As determined by population.—Where there is no method prescribed by the statute for determining when a city has more than a certain number of inhabitants, but the legislature has conferred upon the city council power to levy and collect a given rate of tax, conditioned upon the fact that the city has the requisite population, there is an implied grant of authority to ascertain the facts as to population upon which the right to levy the tax depends. Tyler v. Tyler Bldg., etc., Assoc., 98 Tex. 69, 81 S. W. 2.

In Illinois the aggregate tax levy for corporate purposes, in cities working under the general act of 1872, cannot exceed in any one year two per cent of the aggregate valuation of its taxable property as equalized for the "preceding" year, but in computing the rate per cent necessary to raise the required amount the assessed valuation for the year in which the tax is levied must be taken as the basis. People v. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co., 167 Ill. 283, 47 N. E. 518.

What constitutes excessive levy.—A statute which does no more than require a city to set apart annually for a certain purpose a certain proportion of whatever amount she may derive from taxes imposed by herself cannot be said to be the levying of a tax in excess of the constitutional limit. Benedict v. New Orleans, 115 La. 645, 39 So. 792.

Repeal or modification of statutes see Atlantic City Free Public Library v. Atlantic City, 71 N. J. L. 437, 58 Atl. 1101. Limitations as to the amount of a special levy may be modified, expressly or by implication, by subsequent statutory or charter provisions. U. S. v. Howard County Ct., 2 Fed. 1, 1 McCrary 218. A statute or charter provision authorizing a special tax not to exceed a certain amount is not repealed by statutes or charter provisions fixing a limit for general taxes. Galena v. U. S., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 705, 18 L. ed. 560.

Effect of failure to levy in past years.—A statute forbidding cities to levy a special tax for water rents exceeding three mills on the dollar "for" any one year, does not prohibit a city from levying a greater tax "in" any one year, to pay what is due the water company under its contract with the city, where no water tax has been levied for several years, and the levy then made does not exceed the three-mill rate for each year of the entire period to be covered thereby. Bowen v. West, 10 Colo. App. 322, 50 Pac. 1085.

Tax for lighting.—The statute which authorizes cities to levy an annual tax, not ex-application to taxes for general purposes.⁵⁹ The power granted by a charter to a particular city, expressed in general terms, to impose taxes, must be considered in subordination to a general law of the state imposing a limit on taxation by cities generally.⁶⁰ Under some constitutional provisions a limit is fixed for municipal taxation which, however, may be increased by a vote of the people.⁶¹ A limitation on the amount to be levied to pay interest on certain bonds does not preclude the right to resort to the general funds of the municipality, the power to levy general taxes being without limit, where the rate of the special tax is insufficient to pay the interest.⁶²

(11) TAXES INCLUDED WITHIN LIMITATION. It is sometimes expressly provided by statute that certain taxes for special purposes shall not be included in the aggregate of municipal taxes within the general constitution or statutory limitation;⁶³ but whether special authority to a municipality to do an act will impliedly repeal pro tanto existing charter limitations upon the rate or amount of taxation is a question upon which the authorities are not in accord.⁶⁴ In determining whether the taxes are in excess of the general limitation, it is sometimes held, under particular constitutional statutory or charter provisions, that the amount of a special tax authorized by statute is to be added to the amount of the other taxes;⁶⁵ but in most cases it is held that the power to exceed the general limit by a tax for a special purpose is necessarily implied from the authority to levy the special tax.⁶⁶ Taxation to pay municipal debts accruing prior to the adoption of ceeding three mills on the dollar of the taxable property, for lighting purposes, does not apply to a city empowered by its special charter to levy taxes for lighting purposes without limitation, except the general limitation for all purposes. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 623, 66 N. E. 246.

As determined by state tax.—Where the amount of a certain tax is required by the constitution not to exceed one half of the tax levied by the state for the same period, the legislature must impose a tax for the benefit of the state before a municipal corporation can tax it. Hoefling v. San Antonio, 85 Tex. 228, 20 S. W. 85, 16 L. R. A. 608 [distinguishing Hirshfield v. Dallas, 29 Tex. App. 242, 15 S. W. 124].

Water tax.—Under the statute providing that the aggregate amount of city taxes for any one year shall not exceed two per cent, a water tax which the city is authorized to collect must be included within the two per cent, like taxes for other corporate purposes. Dollahon v. Whittaker, 187 Ill. 84, 58 N. E. 301.

A levy to pay a judgment against the municipality is included in the general limitation. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 177 Ill. 91, 52 N. E. 439; State v. New Orleans, 32 La. Ann. 709.

Current debts incurred by a municipal corporation for water furnished for public uses and for the lighting of public streets are for ordinary expenses, which may be incurred without special legislative authority; and the fact that the power to contract for water and lighting is among those specially enumerated in the city's charter does not imply any special and additional power of taxation to meet such expense, beyond the limitation imposed by the charter upon taxation for general municipal purposes. Cleveland v. U. S., 111 Fed. 341, 49 C. C. A. 383.

A grant of a new power to a municipality working under the general law, with the right to levy a tax to carry out the object of the grant, does not authorize a tax levy over and above the general two per cent limitation, unless so expressly provided or necessarily implied in the terms of the grant. *People v. Authority to a borough to increase its indebtedness involves the right to levy a tax sufficient to pay it, in addition to that already authorized for ordinary purposes. In re Millvale Borough No. 2, 14 Pa. Co. Ct. 82.

From an express grant of power to a municipal corporation to create a debt for a specified purpose, a power of taxation for its payment will, in the absence of some other adequate means of payment, be implied, although at the date of such grant there is a statutory limitation upon the corporation's general power of taxation. *Olean v. contract for water for fire protection and other purposes, such delegation of authority clothes the municipality with power to levy the necessary tax to discharge the debt created beyond the charter limitations. Oconto City Water Supply Co. v. Oconto, 105 Wis. 76, 80 N. W. 1113.

b. Public Improvements. Under delegated authority a municipality may levy a tax to pay for a public improvement.⁷² While ordinarily street improvements are assessable only upon abutting property,⁷³ yet where the improvement is one inuring to the benefit of all the taxpayers the cost thereof may be taxed as a common charge upon all,⁷⁴ or a part of the cost may be assessed on abutting property and the balance raised by a special tax on all the taxpayers.⁷⁵ In some jurisdictions Paying a demand not a lawful debt against a municipality is not a "corporate purpose" within the constitutional provision allowing municipalities to levy taxes for corporate purposes. Sleight v. People, 74 Ill. 47.

Taxes to abate a particular class of other taxes.—Towns have no authority to assess taxes and raise money for the purpose of abating a particular class of taxes, and therefore have no right to appropriate the interest of the surplus revenue to the payment of poll taxes. Cooley v. Granville, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 56.

Fire fund.—Authority in a city charter to license and tax insurance companies or their agents to raise a fund with which to procure apparatus for extinguishing fires and constructing reservoirs does not justify an ordinance levying a tax upon premiums earned by such companies in the city to constitute a fund to be applied to the support of the fire department generally. Alton v. Aetna Ins. Co., 82 Ill. 45.

"Other necessary town charges."—Under a statute authorizing the qualified voters of a town to raise necessary sums for the support of schools, for making repairs on town ways, and for other necessary town charges, the words "other necessary town charges" embrace only incidental expenses arising directly or indirectly in the legitimate exercise of the powers granted, and confer no power to raise money for other purposes at the will of the majority of the voters. In re Opinion of Justices, 52 Me. 595.

Repeal of statute.—An act authorizing a tax for a special purpose and expressly providing that it is "in lieu of all taxes now assessed," except those under a specified statute, repeals other statutes authorizing the levy of taxes. Amy v. Selma, 12 Fed. 414.

Implied power.—Under a statute giving a city authority to levy and collect taxes for city purposes, it has been held that the council has power to levy and collect taxes for city improvements. Shepard v. Kaysville, 16 Utah 340, 52 Pac. 592. Power to establish and maintain a public library has been held to authorize a tax to establish and maintain it. Ramsay v. Shelbyville, 119 Ky. 180, 83 S. W. 116, 1136, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 1102, 68 L. R. Bridge not on legal highway.—It has been held that the taxing power of a city cannot be lawfully invoked to raise funds to construct a bridge which is not located on a street or highway having a legal existence. Manning v. Devils Lake, 13 N. D. 47, 99 N. W. 51, 112 Am. St. Rep. 652, 65 L. R. A. 187.

Sewer tax.—St. Louis Bridge Co. v. People, 125 Ill. 226, 17 N. E. 468. It has been held that a municipality may levy a sewer tax where abutting property cannot be assessed as such. Byrne v. Covington, 21 S. W. 1050, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 33.

The expense of fitting up a building for necessary municipal offices is an ordinary current expense which may be paid from a general levy for ordinary expenses. Rome v. McWilliams, 67 Ga. 106.

Survey of railroad route.—A municipality cannot levy a tax for making a survey of a railroad route to another municipality. Douglass v. Placerville, 18 Cal. 643.

74. Maybin v. Biloxi, 77 Miss. 673, 28 So. 566, holding that where a municipal corporation levied taxes on all the taxable property of the city for the purpose of paving one of the streets in the business portion of the city, the tax was not invalid, since, the improvement inuring to the convenience of all citizens, it was proper that it should be a common charge on all.

Tax after assessment.—Where the legislature, under its taxing powers, may direct that a municipal street improvement be charged on the city at large, it is no objection that such act was not passed until after the assessment was levied, and paid by abutting owners, and that the city had thereby acquired a vested right in the money received, of which the legislature could not deprive it, since by the act the city is not deprived of the assessment, but only directed to collect it from the taxpayers at large, and reimburse those who have paid. People v. Molloy, 35 N. Y. App. Div. 136, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 1084 [affirmed in 161 N. Y. 621, 55 N. E. 1099].

a special tax for public improvements, such as sewers and the like, is authorized to be levied according to a division of the municipality into districts.⁷⁶ Provisions for a special tax for the erection of a permanent improvement does not authorize the maintenance of such improvement by a special as distinguished from a general tax.⁷⁷

c. Waterworks or Supplies. In some jurisdictions the statutes expressly authorize a municipal water tax.⁷⁸ Subject to constitutional, statutory, or charter limitations,⁷⁹ a municipal corporation may levy a tax for water purposes when authorized to erect waterworks,⁸⁰ to purchase an existing water plant,⁸¹ or to contract for a water-supply.⁸² So a charter provision requiring the amount of water rents collected over expenses to equal a certain per cent on the water debt does not impair the municipal power to resort to taxation for that purpose.⁸³ A water tax is not void because every part of the municipality is not supplied with water.⁸⁴

d. Educational Purposes.⁸⁵ A municipality may be expressly authorized to levy a tax for school purposes;⁸⁶ but it has been held that a school tax is not one Tax as inequitable.—Where a city had constructed lateral sewers at the expense of the abutting owners, and trunk sewers at its own cost, in various portions of the city, the adoption of the plan of creating a sewer district and levying a tax on the realty therein for the cost of the construction of other sewers was not inequitable. Grunewald v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa 222, 91 N. W. 1059.

Sufficiency of tax.—Statutes empowering a municipality to provide for the payment of its debts and to levy and collect taxes for general and special purposes are limited by provisions limiting the levy for the payment of water rents to a certain rate, so that, if such levy is insufficient to pay a debt for water rents, the municipality is powerless to pay the deficiency; and the fact that complainant spent large sums to establish a waterworks system for the use of which the municipality contracted to pay and that it received the benefits thereof does not authorize a court to compel it to raise more money by taxation than is authorized by the statutes in order to fulfil such contract. Raton Waterworks Co. v. Raton, 9 N. M. 70, 49 Pac. 898.

Territory within which tax may be levied.—A tax imposed by a city council on all the polls and ratable property in the city for the maintenance of waterworks erected within and for the supply of a limited precinct is illegal, because it violates provisions in the act authorizing construction of the waterworks which restricted taxation therefor to the water precinct. Brown v. Concord, 56 N. H. 375.

80. Taylor v. McFadden, 84 Iowa 262, 50 N. W. 1070, holding that where a city council, being authorized to erect waterworks, passes an ordinance levying a tax for a certain amount for the sinking of an artesian well, the fact that the cost cannot be known in advance, or that the effort to obtain water may prove a failure, cannot prevent taxation.

81. Allentown v. Henry, 73 Pa. St. 404, holding that, although an act incorporating a water company is unconstitutional in so far as it seeks to authorize it to levy and collect a tax on the inhabitants of the city, it may be made available by an act permitting the city to buy its works and franchises, and giving it all the rights, privileges, and franchises which previous acts had declared to be given to the company.

A statute giving to a city the power to collect taxes for school purposes, and charging it with the duty of supporting its schools, in force at the time of the adoption by the city as its charter of the general incorporation law, and the passage of the general school law, did not modify or impair any former special laws authorizing such city as a public agency to levy and collect taxes for school purposes. Fuller v. Heath, 89 Ill. 296.

for a municipal purpose,⁸⁷ nor "a necessary expense"⁸⁸ within constitutional or statutory provisions authorizing a levy for such purposes; nor authorized under the general welfare clause of a charter.⁸⁹

e. Aid to Corporations. No tax can be levied, even by legislative authority, as a bonus to a private manufactory.⁹⁰ But, in the absence of any constitutional prohibition,⁹¹ the legislature has power to authorize a municipality to levy taxes to aid a railroad running from, by, or through the municipality,⁹² or to aid a private toll bridge,⁹³ or turnpike road company.⁹⁴ However, a municipality has no power to tax to aid a railroad where no such power is expressly or impliedly conferred upon it.⁹⁵ In some jurisdictions municipal authority to levy special taxes in aid of railroads is expressly conferred by constitutional or statutory provisions,⁹⁶

Discretion of council.—Under Gen. St. (1897) c. 63, § 178, providing that the board of education shall levy a tax for the support of city schools, "which levy shall be approved by the city council," the council may exercise its discretion in approving or refusing to approve such levy. State v. Addis, 59 Kan. 762, 54 Pac. 1065.

The power to levy the tax is in the city council and not in the board of education. State v. Omaha, 7 Nebr. 267.

Compelling council to fix rate.—Under Ky. St. § 3219, requiring the board of education of each city of the second class to annually ascertain approximately the amount of money necessary to maintain the schools, and requiring the general council to levy and collect such taxes for that purpose as may be requested by the board, the board cannot prescribe the exact rate of taxation, and the court will not compel the general council to fix any given rate of taxation, unless it is made manifest that the general council perversely refuses to fix such rate as will raise the necessary amount. *Covington Bd. of Education v. Double taxation see Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. v. Goodenough, 108 La. 442, 32 So. 404, 66 L. R. A. 314.

In Louisiana, under the statutes, it is competent, on obtaining the assent of the property taxpayers in the manner required, to impose a special tax in aid of a railroad which neither passes through nor terminates while in other jurisdictions the power to levy such taxes is implied from a grant of general power to levy taxes to pay debts.⁹⁷

f. Payment of Debts—(i) IN GENERAL. While the legislature may authorize a municipality to levy taxes to pay municipal debts,⁹⁸ and in many jurisdictions authority is expressly conferred upon all or particular municipalities to levy taxes to pay bonds and other indebtedness,⁹⁹ and the authority may be implied in some cases,¹ the municipality has no such authority except where it is conferred expressly or by implication.²

(ii) POWER BY NECESSARY IMPLICATION. The legislature may by implication grant a municipal corporation the power to levy taxes to pay municipal debts, unless there is some provision in the constitution requiring such grant of power in the municipality taxed. Clifton v. Hobbard, 106 La. 535, 31 So. 46. In an action to compel a police jury to levy a tax in aid of a railroad company in pursuance of an election and an ordinance of the police jury, grounds of defense only assertable by the taxpayers who have acquiesced in the election and its result cannot be urged. Missouri, etc., Trust Co. v. Smart, 51 La. Ann. 416, 25 So. 443.

97. Aurora v. Lamar, 59 Ind. 400, holding that a grant to a municipality of power to levy a tax to pay the whole interest of the public debt authorizes a levy of a special tax to pay the whole of the interest accrued on a railroad debt of the municipality.

Authority to issue bonds in payment of a subscription to the stock of a railroad authorizes by implication a tax to pay such bonds. Gibbons v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 36 Ala. 410; Quincy v. U. S., 113 U. S. 332, 5 S. Ct. 544, 28 L. ed. 1001.

See also U. S. v. Cicero, 50 Fed. 147, 1 C. C. A. 499, holding that a statute which provides that town trustees shall add to the tax duplicate of each year a levy sufficient to pay the annual interest on and create a sinking fund for, any debt contracted upon petition of the citizen owners of five eighths of the taxable property of the town, does not authorize the levy of a tax to pay interest on bonds issued under a different statute, and not on petition of property-owners.

Bonds issued but not outstanding.—A statute authorizing a four-mill tax to pay interest on outstanding bonds of the city does not authorize a tax to pay interest on bonds issued, but not outstanding, although it was probable they would be sold before the next tax levy. Tampa v. Mudge, 40 Fla. 326, 24 So. 489.

Time when debt contracted.—A judgment recovered against a city subsequent to Jan. 1, 1889, for an injury occurring prior to that date, is a "debt lawfully contracted prior to the first day of January, 1889," within a statute authorizing certain cities, for the purpose of paying such debts, to levy and collect a tax of twenty-five cents on the one hundred dollars valuation, in addition to the amount levied for general purposes. Sherman v. Langham, 92 Tex. 13, 40 S. W. 140, 42 S. W. 961.

Repeal of statutes.—The grant of power to assess and collect a tax for a particular purpose is a repeal pro tanto of all prior statutory restrictions upon the exercise of the power of taxation. Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496.

Effect of failure to issue bonds.—Under authority granted by the taxpayers of a town to the municipal authorities to incur a debt and to issue bonds, and to secure the debt and bonds by a special tax, the authorities may, without issuing bonds at all, create the debt and levy a special tax within the constitutional limit, if it be more advantageous and advisable so to do. Gray v. Bourgeois, 107 La. 671, 32 So. 42.

Construction of authority.—The authority given the city to levy a tax to pay interest on, and provide a sinking fund for the extinction of, an indebtedness, authorizes the levy of a tax to pay installments of such indebtedness which, by the terms of the contract creating it, fall due from year to year. Mayfield Woolen Mills v. Mayfield, 111 Ky. 172, 61 S. W. 43, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1676.

The statute of limitations is no defense to the levy of a tax on the property of a city to pay funding bonds issued ten years before, in settlement of an indebtedness of the township of which the city was formerly a part, where the failure to levy the tax before was due to a mutual mistake on the part of the township and the city as to the latter's liability on the funding bonds. Brown v. Milliken, 42 Kan. 769, 23 Pac. 167.

Statutes as applicable to boroughs.—A statute conferring authority to direct the proper officers of a district or township to collect by special taxation an amount sufficient to pay its indebtedness has been held to vest no authority to order special tax by incorporated boroughs and it cannot be extended to them by construction. Heiser v. Shenandoah, 1 Leg. Chron. (Pa.) 118.

to be in express terms.³ For instance, in the absence of constitutional or statutory limitations or restrictions,⁴ authority granted by the legislature to a municipality having power to levy taxes, to contract a debt for some specific object or to issue bonds to pay certain indebtedness, where no special provision for payment is made, clothes the municipal authorities with power by necessary implication to levy the requisite tax to discharge the debt.⁵ But authority conferred on a municipality to incur a debt does not carry with it the power to levy a tax to pay the debt where other provision is expressly made for such payment.⁶

(III) ILLEGAL OR INVALID INDEBTEDNESS. A municipality has no power to levy a tax to pay bonds where the issuance thereof was forbidden by statute,⁷ nor where the bonds are otherwise invalid.⁸ So where a debt is in excess of the constitutional debt limit a tax cannot be levied in so far as the excess is concerned.⁹ So where a levy for payment of a claim against a municipality is invalid, one for payment of a judgment on such claim will also be invalid.¹⁰ And where no contract calling for payments beyond the current fiscal year can be made, a special tax cannot be levied to pay a debt for services rendered several years before.¹¹ But a levy is not rendered void because the intention is to pay it to parties with whom the municipality has a void contract.¹²

Authority to levy and collect taxes for city purposes carries with it authority to levy taxes to pay debts incurred for such purposes. Shepard v. Kaysville, 16 Utah 340, 52 Pac. 592.

Construction of particular powers.—The power to levy taxes by a city "for general and contingent expenses, or any other expenses not herein otherwise provided for," is sufficiently broad to authorize the levy of a tax thereunder to pay ordinary debts. Spring v. Olney, 78 Ill. 101.

Power to compromise disputed claims.—A municipality or its officers duly authorized may settle a disputed claim against it, and, doing so in the exercise of good faith and sound discretion, may enforce a tax duly assessed upon its citizens to raise money for its payment. Vose v. Frankfort, 64 Me. 229. See supra, IX, A, 6, k; infra, XVI, C; XVII, B.

Duty to make a second levy.—Where the act authorizing the issuance of bonds directs a special tax to pay the interest thereon, and such a tax, sufficient by computation but in fact insufficient, is levied annually, there is no implied power or duty to levy an additional tax because the levy for a certain year or years was insufficient because of delinquent taxes. *Gay v. Proof as to invalidity of bonds.—Taxpayers can defend against the assessment of taxes to pay interest and create a sinking fund on void municipal bonds, but they must prove conclusively that the bonds are void in the hands of any holder, and cannot afford a basis of recovery against the city. *Tyler v. (iv) DUTY TO TAX AS INCLUDED IN POWER TO TAX. The grant of power to tax for a payment of municipal indebtedness imposes on the municipality the duty of exercising such power,¹³ which may be enforced by mandamus.¹⁴ But in some cases the municipality is vested with a certain amount of discretion as to the time and amount to be levied.¹⁵ In some jurisdictions the duty is imposed upon a municipality, under certain circumstances, to levy a tax to pay a judgment against the municipality.¹⁶ A tax to be imposed as long as needed to pay a particular debt means an imposition of the tax until the debt is satisfied or until a sum sufficient for that purpose has been raised by tax.¹⁷ An agreement to levy a special tax cannot be implied from an ordinance making it the duty of the council to provide means to meet the payment of a designated debt when it becomes due.¹⁸

g. Sinking Fund. Taxation to create a sinking fund must be based upon legislative authority,¹⁹ which may be implied²⁰ as well as express.²¹ But taxes cannot

Levy sufficient only to pay current expenses.—But when the whole amount of the taxes which municipal officers are allowed by law to levy is absorbed by the necessary current expenses of the corporation, they are not bound to comply with a demand of a judgment creditor for the levy of a tax to pay his judgment. Porter v. Thomson, 22 Iowa 391.

Conflict of statutes.—Statutes conferring powers and imposing duties on municipal officers to levy taxes to pay judgments against their cities supersede statutes and limitations conferring less extensive powers on such officers to levy taxes and pay bonds, when the bonds have been merged in final judgments. U. S. v. Saunders, 124 Fed. 124, 59 C. C. A. 394.

Judgments as barred by limitations.—In determining power of a city to levy a tax to pay judgments against it, the judgments partake of the character of, and are governed by the same rules of limitation as, the original claim upon which they are based. State v. Royse, 3 Nebr. (Unoff.) 262, 91 N. W. 559.

20. Wright v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 50 S. W. 406, holding that a charter provision that interest and a sinking fund must be annually provided for on the city's bonded debt authorizes a levy of taxes to meet such debts without the formal action of the council.

21. Youngerman v. Murphy, 107 Iowa 686, 76 N. W. 648 (holding, under particular statutes, that tax may be levied before the creation of the debt); Burlington Water Co. v. Woodward, 49 Iowa 58; Louisville Sinking Fund Comrs v. Grainger, 98 Ky. 319, 32 S. W. 954, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 901; Newark Aqueduct Bd. v. Newark, 50 N. J. L. 126, 10 Atl. 381.

Sufficiency of levy.—A tax levy to pay interest on bonds and create a sinking fund for their payment is not invalidated by the fact that the levy is not sufficient to provide the fund necessary to pay the bonds at their maturity. Conklin v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 44 S. W. 879.

Time of sale of bonds.—Where a city bond issue is sold with the interest accrued thereon, the city may collect a tax to pay the annual interest and sinking fund on the same, although the bonds have been sold less than one year prior to the levy. Nalle v. Austin, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 42 S. W. 780.

Levy to pay instalments.—The authority given the city to levy a tax to pay interest on, and provide a sinking fund for, the extinction of, an indebtedness, authorizes the levy of a tax to pay instalments of such indebtedness which, by the terms of the contract creating it, fall due from year to year. Mayfield Woolen Mills v. Mayfield, 111 Ky. 172, 61 S. W. 43, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1676.

Sale of bonds to city.—A tax levied on the issue of bonds is not invalidated by the fact that the bonds were sold to the city which issued them as an investment for its sinking fund, which was required by the charter to be invested in good interest-bearing securities. Conklin v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 44 S. W. 879.

Bonds not sold.—Where a city levied a tax to pay interest and provide a sinking fund on a bond issue of one million four hundred thousand dollars, and at the time of the levy only nine hundred and fifty thousand dollars of the issue had been sold, no tax could be collected to pay interest and provide a sinking fund on the bonds not sold;

be levied to create a sinking fund for void bonds.²² Where a levy for the sinking fund is discretionary with the council, such a levy cannot be compelled by the courts.²³ A report to the common council by sinking fund commissioners as to the amount to be raised for such fund is required, under some statutes, before such a levy can be made.²⁴

h. Deficit Tax. In the absence of statutory or charter restrictions a municipality may assess the deficiency of the preceding year in the next,²⁵ or may levy a tax to provide for a prospective deficiency.²⁶ And in some jurisdictions statutory and charter provisions expressly provide as to a levy of a deficit tax to make up for uncollected taxes of past years.²⁷

4. PERSONS AND PROPERTY TAXABLE, AND PLACE OF TAXATION²⁸ — a. General Considerations. All property within the corporate limits, whether real or personal, if taxable by the state, is ordinarily subject to municipal taxation under authority conferred by the legislature.²⁹ Unless prohibited by paramount law, real and

but the tax which could be legally collected being easily ascertainable and divisible, only so much of the entire tax as was not necessary for the purpose for which it was levied was void. Nalle v. Austin, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 42 S. W. 780.

Burden of proof.—Taxpayers can defend against the assessment of taxes to pay interest and create a sinking fund on void municipal bonds, but they must prove conclusively that the bonds are void in the hands of any holder, and cannot afford a basis of recovery against the city. Tyler v. Tyler Bldg., etc., Assoc., (Tex. 1905) 86 S. W. 750 [reversing on other grounds (Civ. App. 1904) 82 S. W. 1066].

The good-will of a business is not subject to taxation. People v. Feitner, 44 N. Y. App. Div. 278, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 687.

Land below high water mark.—It has been held that a water tax should be assessed only on land above high water mark. Roberts v. Jersey City, 25 N. J. L. 525.

Slaves brought to market from another state were taxable. State v. Charleston, 10 Rich. (S. C.) 240.

Gas pipes laid in the streets of a municipality are not taxable as land or capital stock, within a statute authorizing the taxation of such property. Pittsburgh's Appeal, 123 Pa. St. 374, 16 Atl. 621.

Personal property.—Authority to tax real property does not confer any power to tax personal property. Adams v. Ducate, 86 Miss. 276, 38 So. 497.

Waterworks.—Waterworks within a city are properly taxed where there is nothing in the contract or circumstances to authorize their exemption. Athens City Waterworks Co. v. Athens, 74 Ga. 413.

Territorial extent.—A tax imposed by a city council on all the polls and ratable property in the city for the maintenance of waterworks erected within and for the supply of a limited precinct is illegal, where it violates provisions in the act authorizing construction of the waterworks which restricted taxation therefor to the water precinct. Brown v. Concord, 56 N. H. 375.

The products of mines are personal property, which may be taxed for municipal purposes. Virginia v. Chollar-Potosi Gold, etc., Min. Co., 2 Nev. 86.

Buildings apart from land see State v. Elfe, 3 Strobb. (S. C.) 395.

Whisky stored in warehouses and owned by residents is taxable as personal property, but the distillers cannot be taxed on whisky which has been sold by them, although it is still in their warehouses. Frankfort v. Gaines, 88 Ky. 59, 10 S. W. 123, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 902.

Double taxation.—The general power to tax conferred on towns and cities ought not to be construed as to subject the property of a corporation to be twice taxed, unless by express words of a statute or necessary implication. Georgia Bank v. Savannah, Dudley (Ga.) 130. An ordinance imposing a tax on "merchandise, meaning dealers in varied stock of goods," and also imposing taxes upon persons engaged in the sale of various articles which would be embraced under the term "merchandise," will not, unless the term of the ordinance imperatively require it, be construed to authorize the collection of more than one tax on dealers in general merchandise. Wynne v. Eastman, 105 Ga. 614, 31 S. E. 737.

Statutory or charter authority to assess all taxable property includes not only such personal property may be taxed separately.³⁰ Authority is also often conferred to impose capitation taxes.³¹ Assessment of personal property for state and county purposes does not preclude its taxation by a municipality where the owner removes with it into corporate limits before the beginning of the fiscal year.³² A taxpayer is assessable where he resides on the annual date fixed by statute,³³ even though a change of territory may operate to change his residence before the assessment is completed;³⁴ but the mere storage of property not in use in a municipality other than that where the owners carry on their business does not give them a place of business therein.³⁵ And a beneficiary's stocks and bonds are, in the absence of a statute to the contrary, taxable at his own residence rather than that of his guardian,³⁶ or the executor,³⁷ or trustee.³⁸

b. Property Outside of City Limits—(1) REAL PROPERTY. Municipal taxes cannot be levied upon land situated beyond the corporate limits,³⁹ the legislature having no power to authorize a municipality to tax for its own local purposes lands lying beyond the corporate limits.⁴⁰ Where real estate lies partly within as was then taxable by the general law of the state but also whatever should be made subject to taxation by any subsequent statute. Anderson v. Mayfield, 93 Ky. 230, 19 S. W. 598, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 370; Buffalo v. Le Couteulx, 15 N. Y. 451.

Retroactive tax.—A tax levied on all merchandise purchased for twelve months prior to the time of the levy is retroactive and therefore unconstitutional. Young v. Henderson, 76 N. C. 420.

30. New Orleans Second Municipality v. Duncan, 2 La. Ann. 182.

Power as mandatory.—Power to tax real and personal estate does not require the corporation to tax both species of property. New Orleans Second Municipality v. Duncan, 2 La. Ann. 182; Oakley v. New Orleans, 1 La. 1.

31. Morgan v. Rowan, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,807, 2 Cranch C. C. 148.

An East Indian, although a "free person of color," is not liable to a capitation tax under a city ordinance imposing such tax on "every free male negro, or free person of color, whether a descendant of an Indian or otherwise"; such ordinance relating to the class of persons who have always been the subject of such tax by the city and state. Ex v. Ferrett, 1 Mill (S. C.) 194.

Under a statute authorizing the taxation of a partnership in a municipality in which it has a place of business, where it has places of business in two or more municipalities, the term "place of business" must be construed as a place where business was carried on by them under their own control and on their own account. Little v. Cambridge, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 298.

Co. v. Maquilkin*, 12 Kan. 301, curative statutes. Compare Bradshaw v. Omaha, 1 Nebr. 16, holding that if lands adjoining a city have been divided into town lots, and purchasers of small parcels have been invited to settle thereon, and the owner has done any affirmative act inducing the corporate authorities to treat them as town property, or if town settlements have approached near to them, so that their enjoyment in peace and good order demands the police regulations of a city, they are justly liable to municipal taxation.

Prescriptive right to tax.—A town does not gain a prescriptive right to tax inhabitants of a tract lying within the bounds of another town by exercising municipal authority over them for twenty years. Ham v. Sawyer, 38 Me. 37.

The fact that a city extended its streets outside of its corporate limits, and that a property-owner subjected them to certain uses with the consent of the city, did not give the city authority to levy taxes on the property so situated. Pacific Sheet Metal Works v. Roeder, 26 Wash. 183, 66 Pac. 428.

Where a statute divided a town into two, and provided that all persons dwelling on lands adjoining the division line should have liberty to belong, with their lands, to either town, at their election, made within a limited time, an election so made was not merely a personal privilege, terminating at the death of the party, but was a definite and perpetual change of the line of territorial jurisdiction, and his estate was therefore taxable in the town to which he had elected to belong, and not in the other. Cumberland v. Prince, 6 Me. 408.

40. Wells v. Weston, 22 Mo. 384, 66 Am. Dec. 627.

But, in the absence of constitutional restrictions, the legislature has been held to have power to authorize the municipality to tax not only property within the city limits but also property within certain boundaries and partly without the corporate limits, the part lying within the limits is taxable by the municipality,⁴¹ but not that lying outside.⁴²

(II) PERSONAL PROPERTY.⁴³ Personal property situated outside the city limits has been held not taxable by the municipality,⁴⁴ although the owner has his domicile in the municipality.⁴⁵ But in some jurisdictions the situs of personal property for the purpose of taxation is the domicile of the owner rather than the actual situs of the property itself.⁴⁶ A municipality cannot tax personal property merely temporarily within its limits.⁴⁷ The situs at the date of the accrual of the tax is the test of taxability.⁴⁸

c. Property of Non-Resident. A municipality may tax not only the lands of non residents situated within its limits,⁴⁹ but also such of their personal property as they habitually keep therein.⁵⁰ In some jurisdictions, by statute, moneys, notes, credits, etc., in the hands of a resident agent of a non-resident owner are taxable and the agent is personally liable for the tax.⁵¹ So, by statute, in some jurisdictions, persons living outside the corporate limits but whose ordinary avocations are pursued within the limits of the municipality are taxable the same as actual residents;⁵² and such statutes have been held constitutional.⁵³

d. Property Annexed. Property brought within municipal limits by annexation is subject to municipal taxation,⁵⁴ although the municipality cannot levy taxes outside the corporate limits to pay railroad obligations. Langhorne v. Robinson, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 661, holding that a statute authorizing a city to tax persons and property, within the corporate limits and for half a mile around and outside of the corporate limits, to pay the interest upon the guaranty by the city of certain railroad stock, is not in violation of the constitution.

Removal after accrual of liability.—Where the duty to pay a tax on property arose while the property was in the city, it makes no difference that it was removed from the city before the ordinance was passed prescribing the amount of tax to be paid, and the manner of assessing and collecting. Virginia v. Chollar-Potosi Gold, etc., Min. Co., 2 Nev. 86.

As a general rule personal property follows the person of the owner, and in contemplation of law has its place where he is domiciled; but municipal corporations, having no power to protect property not within their corporate limits, can render no equivalent for the right of taxation of such property, and there is no propriety in the application of this rule to them for purposes of revenue. *Wilkey v. Statutes.—A provision in a statute for the incorporation of cities, prohibiting cities having a population exceeding twenty thousand from the taxation of notes, bonds, or other evidences of debt which are or may be in the hands of any resident of such city as guardian of persons not residents therein, or as executor or administrator of the estate of a person who does not reside therein, and in which such guardian, executor, or administrator has no financial interest, does not contemplate that such property shall be taxed for such purpose in cities of less than twenty thousand. *McDougal v. on such property where the corporate limits were extended so as to include it solely for the purpose of creating municipal revenue at the expense of the owner and without benefit to him.⁵⁵ But land included within the city limits after the first of the year and before the assessment of taxes has been held not subject to municipal taxes for such year.⁵⁶ A fortiori property annexed after the time it was the duty of the assessor to return his list of taxable property cannot be taxed for that year.⁵⁷ The mere platting of land for addition does not amount per se to annexation.⁵⁸

e. Agricultural and Unplatted Lands. In some jurisdictions agricultural and unplatted lands within the corporate limits of a municipality are taxable according to their value, the same as other lands, although they receive little or no benefit from such taxation;⁵⁹ but in other jurisdictions such property cannot be taxed ville, 58 S. W. 607, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 699; Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 1, 3 L. ed. 19; Alexandria v. Wise, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 187, 2 Cranch C. C. 27. See also Sherman v. Benford, 10 R. I. 559, holding that a tax assessed on the members of a fire district for the purpose of supporting the fire department is binding on members included in such district by statute extending its territorial limits, which takes effect after the passage of a vote to assess such taxes and before the time at which it was voted that it should be assessed.

Grounds for exemption.—Residents of territory annexed to a city cannot escape taxation because the portion of the territory occupied by them has not yet been assigned to a ward of the city, or because they do not yet enjoy all the benefits of the city government. Specht v. Louisville, 58 S. W. 607, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 699.

Taxation to pay debt.—Property annexed to a city after the creation of a public debt by the city is subject to taxation for the payment of such debt. Stilz v. Indianapolis, 81 Ind. 582; Lebanon v. Beville, 38 S. W. 872, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 924. See supra, II, B, 2, g, (I), (II).

Estoppel of taxpayer.—When owners and residents of platted grounds, to include which the limits of a city have been extended, acquiesce in the extension and vote at elections for city officers, and sign petitions for bond elections, as a result of which bonds are issued by the city, and improvements are made by the city in the added territory, such property holders are estopped from denying the liability of their property for city taxes. Seward v. Rheiner, 2 Kan. App. 95, 43 Pac. 423. So one whose property has been included within the boundary of a city upon a petition to the general assembly in which he united is estopped to deny the right of the city to tax it on the ground that it does not receive its full measure of the benefits of city government, his remedy for a denial of such benefits being against those who control the city government. *Lebanon v. In Iowa, where property within the city limits, of a suburban character, remote from the center of a city, is improved with a view of putting it on the market as such when it shall reach a value corresponding with the views of the owner, it is subject to municipal taxation. Durant v. Kauffman, 34 Iowa 194.

When benefit arises.—When the proprietors of undedicated town property, being locally within the corporate limits, hold such close proximity to the settled and improved parts of the town that the corporate authorities cannot open and improve its streets and alleys, and extend to the inhabitants thereof its usual police regulations and advantages, without incidentally benefiting such proprietors in their personal privileges and accommodations, or in the enhancement of their property, then the power to tax arises. Taylor v. Waverly, 94 Iowa 661, 63 N. W. 347; Brooks v. Polk County, 52 Iowa 460, 3 N. W. 494; Fulton v. Davenport, 17 Iowa 404. See also Perkins v. Burlington, 77 Iowa 553, 42 N. W. 441; Cook v. Crandall, 7 Utah 344, 26 Pac. 927. Where land adjoining a town is brought in by an extension of the limits, and is subdivided into lots, and a street is extended through them, a four-acre lot, mostly unfit for cultivation, and on which the owner has built a house, and carries on the business of a tailor, is town property, for purposes of taxation. Lebanon v. Beville, 38 S. W. 872, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 124.

Taxes to which rule applies.—The municipal taxes from which farm property located within the limits of the city is exempt must be limited to those which are required for purposes strictly municipal, and from which the farm property derives no benefit. Sears v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 39 Iowa 417. Farming lands situated within the limits of a city are liable for a tax voted by the city in aid of the construction of a railroad. Sears v. Iowa Midland R. Co., supra. The legislature may authorize property within the corporate limits of a city to be taxed to aid the building of a railroad, although such property may be so situated with reference to the population of the city as not to be taxable for strictly municipal purposes. Courtney v. Louisville, 12 Bush (Ky.) 419.

W. 441 (holding statute not applicable to extensions made prior to the passage thereof); Winzer v. Burlington, 68 Iowa 279, 27 N. W. 241 (holding that the fact that the owner is a merchant and erected a dwelling on the land and resides there will not prevent the land from being exempt).

Kentucky.—Henderson v. Lambert, 8 Bush 607; Arbegust v. Louisville, 2 Bush 271. At present no such exemption exists. Shuck v. Lebanon, 107 Ky. 252, 53 S. W. 655, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 969.

Michigan.—Baldwin v. Hastings, 83 Mich. 639, 47 N. W. 507, exemption from levy for fire department tax.

Ohio.—Barker v. State, 18 Ohio 514, holding that exemption does not extend to taxes for street improvements.

South Carolina.—See State v. Newberry, 12 Rich. 339.

Tennessee.—Carriger v. Morristown, 1 Lea 116, holding statute applicable only to land used for cultivation of crops or pasturage of stock in the usual routine of farming operations.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 2064.

When land is used exclusively for agricultural purposes.—A tract of about fifteen acres of land, of which seven or eight are used for pasture, about one acre for garden, and the remainder for barn, residence, stables, and hog yard, is not land used exclusively for farming purposes, so as to exempt it from municipal taxes under a law exempting land so used from such taxes. Simms v. Paris, 1 S. W. 543, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 344.

Whether property is rural "landed" property within statute see Goebel v. Baltimore, 93 Md. 749, 49 Atl. 649; Sindall v. Baltimore, 93 Md. 526, 49 Atl. 645. The right of way and tracks of a railroad company are not landed property within the meaning of a provision in a statute annexing territory to a city, that the rate of taxation on landed property in the annexed district should not be increased until streets were laid through it, and there should be a certain number of have sustained such exemptions except where they have been held to be in contravention of special constitutional provisions.⁶²

f. Money, Stocks, and Choses in Action in General. Moneys and choses in action owned by residents are generally taxable by a municipality.⁶³ But a municipality has no authority, except where expressly conferred, to tax either its own bonds⁶⁴ or bonds issued by the state.⁶⁵ So mortgages in which the funds of the state have been invested are not taxable.⁶⁶ Shares of stock are taxable in the hands of their owners as personal property,⁶⁷ although the corporation is located outside the municipality or state.⁶⁸ The capital stock of a corporation is not taxable as a corporate asset under a general provision authorizing the taxation of all buildings on every block. United R., etc., Co. v. State, 93 Md. 630, 619, 49 Atl. 655, 923, 52 L. R. A. 772, 86 Am. St. Rep. 453, 54 L. R. A. 942.

Property annexed before passage of statute.—A tract of thirteen acres within the city's limits, used for agricultural purposes and for the owner's residence, is exempt from taxation for city purposes, under Laws (1876), c. 47, § 4, as amended by Laws (1878), c. 169, although it was annexed to the city before the passage of these laws. Tubbesing v. Burlington, 68 Iowa 691, 24 N. W. 514, 28 N. W. 19; Winzer v. Burlington, 68 Iowa 279, 27 N. W. 241.

Statute not retroactive.—Stilz v. Indianapolis, 81 Ind. 582.

Taxes to which exemption applies.—Where agricultural land within the limits of a city is expressly exempted from taxation for city purposes, the lands are exempt from taxation for the purpose of raising money to pay a bonus voted by the city to aid the building of a railroad; but they are not exempt from taxation for school purposes, although all of the territory embraced within the limit of the city constitutes a school-district, and although the school officers levying the tax are the regular municipal authorities, as the tax for school purposes is a special tax, and not a "municipal assessment" in any sense. Bamberger v. Louisville, 82 Ky. 337; Henderson v. Lambert, 8 Bush (Ky.) 607.

Repeal of statutes or charter provisions see Hayward v. People, 145 Ill. 55, 33 N. E. 885; Thomas v. Butler, 139 Ind. 245, 38 N. E. 808; Blain v. Bailey, 25 Ind. 165; Zanesville v. Richards, 5 Ohio St. 589; Serrill v. Philadelphia, 38 Pa. St. 355; Powell v. Parkersburg, 28 W. Va. 698.

A mere temporary occupation and use of land for agricultural purposes, when purchased for speculation with intent to lay it out into lots and sell them, is not a good-faith occupancy and use for agricultural purposes within the meaning of an exemption from taxation for city purposes. *Farwell v. But see Pullen v. Raleigh, 68 N. C. 451 (holding that a municipal corporation can levy a tax upon such subjects only as are specified in its charter; and therefore a city cannot levy a tax upon the money or credits of its citizens, when the power to do so is not specially conferred upon the city by its charter); Mifflintown v. Jacobs, 69 Pa. St. 151. Compare Goepp v. Bethlehem, 28 Pa. St. 249, exemption of debts.

A charter provision that "all property not exempt from taxation under the general laws of this state shall be subject to taxation, as herein mentioned, for city purposes," embraces choses in action. Trimble v. Mt. Sterling, 12 S. W. 1066, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 727. But a charter provision that no stocks, bonds, etc., of a corporation situated within the limits of the municipality, owned by persons residing outside of the city, shall be taxed, refers to owners of stock living in the state but not in the city, and does not apply to non-resident owners of stock. Corry v. Baltimore, 96 Md. 310, 53 Atl. 942, 103 Am. St. Rep. 364.

If municipal bonds are not entitled to registration under the act of April 16, 1869, entitled "An act to fund and provide for paying the railroad debts of counties, townships, cities and towns," etc., the property thereof is not liable to be taxed therefor, even if the bonds are valid. *Flack v. real and personal property.⁶⁹ The situs of infants under guardianship, and not that of their guardian, is the test of liability for municipal taxation on stocks and bonds held by him for their benefit.⁷⁰ So statutory authority to tax debts does not authorize a tax on a debt where the creditor is a non-resident, although the trustee is a resident.⁷¹ But notes, accounts, and other choses in action in the hands of an agent of a non-resident doing business in a city, and which were received in the course of the business so conducted, have been held taxable by such city, it having general authority to tax property of every kind situated within its limits.⁷²

g. Bank-Stock and Property. Ordinarily a bank is subject to taxation by a municipality,⁷³ except where expressly exempted therefrom.⁷⁴ But exemption from, or a limitation on, state taxation has been held not applicable to municipal taxes.⁷⁵ In some jurisdictions the capital stock of a bank is not taxable as an asset of the bank,⁷⁶ but in most municipalities the contrary rule governs.⁷⁷ Except where it is expressly exempted from taxation,⁷⁸ bank-stock in the hands of stock-holders is generally taxable.⁷⁹

Limitations on amount.—A tax levied by a municipal corporation on the solvent credits of a bank in excess of the limitation prescribed by Laws (1890), p. 9, which provides that "cities and towns are prohibited from levying or collecting any other tax on banks, or on solvent credits, owned by individuals or corporations, greater than seventy-five per cent. of the state tax," is illegal, regardless of the purpose for which it is levied. *Huntley v. Legislative authority.—A municipal ordinance imposing a tax of a specified amount on every railroad company operating within the corporate limits, when imposed under legislative authority, is valid. Piedmont R. Co. v. Reidsville, 101 N. C. 404, 8 S. E. 124, 2 L. R. A. 284.

Lands owned by railroad.—Under Gen. Laws, c. 53, §§ 5, 9, lands owned by a railroad and not used in operating the road are subject to municipal taxation, and such tax cannot be abated because the lands have been subjected to taxation under the special assessment required by law in case of railroads. Nashua, etc., R. Co. v. Nashua, 62 N. H. 602. Under the act of Jan. 4, 1859, enabling Pittsburg to raise additional revenue, and providing that all realty within the city owned by any railroad company should be subject to taxation for city purposes, the same as other realty in the city, the lands and improvements of railroad companies are taxable as real estate, over objection that the term "real estate" had no application to real property which was indispensable to the railroad as such and constituted part of its franchise. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Pittsburgh, 104 Pa. St. 522.

Street railroads.—The fact that the lines of a street railway system extend beyond the limits of any one municipality does not prevent its taxation by a city whose streets it traverses. Newport News, etc., Electric Co. v. Newport News, 100 Va. 157, 40 S. E. 645.

Railroad bridge.—Point Pleasant Bridge Co. v. Point Pleasant, 32 W. Va. 328, 9 S. E. 231. Under Const. § 174, a railroad bridge within the limits of a city is subject to city taxation, although it derives no benefit from the city government. Louisville Bridge Co. v. Louisville, 65 S. W. 814, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1655.

A statutory provision declaring a tax on gross earnings of a railroad company to be in lieu of taxes for all purposes has been held to apply only to state and county taxes and not to prevent taxation by a city authorized to tax all taxable property within the limits, of the depot grounds, buildings, and road-bed within the limits. Dubuque, etc., R. Co. v. Dubuque, 17 Iowa 120; Davenport v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 16 Iowa 348.

Specific tax on cars.—Where a municipal ordinance provides for a specified tax per year on street cars "for each car running within the said borough," the borough may collect the tax on each car running having a separate number, and such car need not be scheduled and run every day, nor for the whole of any particular day. Braddock Borough v. Monongahela St. R. Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 262.

Rolling stock.—A city has no authority to tax the rolling stock of a railroad corporation whose road runs through, and whose chief place of business is in, such city. Dubuque, etc., R. Co. v. Dubuque, 17 Iowa 120. But see Orange, etc., R. Co. v. Alexandria, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 176.

In New Jersey, where a portion of lands adjacent to a railroad right of way, and owned by the railroad, is used for railroad purposes, the part so used is not subject to local taxation, but only to special taxation imposed by the state board of assessors. In re West Shore, etc., Terminal Co., (Sup. 1901) 49 Atl. 543; New Jersey Junction R. Co. v. Jersey City, 63 N. J. L. 120, 43 Atl. 577. So land leased to a railroad company, and used for railroad purposes, is subject to assessment by the state, and not the municipality. In re Pennsylvania R. Co., (Sup. 1901) 49 Atl. 543. But property not used for railroad purposes is taxable. Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Atlantic City, 58 N. J. L. 316, companies are subject to municipal taxation, just as other stocks, in the hands of the holders.⁸³

l. Insurance Companies. Under particular statutes or charter provisions the shares of stock of an insurance company are taxable as property of the company.⁸⁴ A statutory provision that a fixed license-tax on a company shall be in lieu of further assessment throughout the state has been held applicable only to state taxes and not to preclude municipal taxation.⁸⁵ In any event such a provision has no retroactive effect,⁸⁶ and in some states such a provision is unconstitutional if applicable to municipal taxation.⁸⁷ It has been held that annual premiums received by an agent residing in a city are not subject to taxation as personal property, but that such premiums are income and do not constitute property in its proper sense;⁸⁸ but other courts hold such premiums to be property and taxable as such.⁸⁹ Power to tax insurance companies to procure fire apparatus and proper reservoirs does not authorize a levy for the support of the fire department.⁹⁰ An ordinance requiring agents of foreign insurance companies to pay to the city two per cent of the premiums received is not one for a license, within a clause limiting the amount of license-fees, as it does not grant permission to do business, but assumes that the authority already exists.⁹¹

j. Bridge Companies. Except where it is otherwise provided by constitutional or statutory provisions,⁹² a bridge within the corporate limits is subject to municipal taxation,⁹³ although it derives no material benefit from the municipal government.⁹⁴

k. Earnings, Receipts, and Sales.⁹⁵ In the absence of express or implied authority delegated by the legislature, a municipality has no power to tax earnings, receipts, and sales.⁹⁶ Authority to tax property and levy a poll tax does not

Tax on sales of cotton.—A city ordinance assessing a tax "on all gross sales of cotton on commission, by warehousemen, factors," etc., is not a tax on business, and violates include authority to impose a gross income tax.⁹⁷ But authority to tax the gross amount of sales, receipts, or earnings has been held to be conferred on a municipality by a grant of full power to tax inhabitants or those who hold taxable property as shall appear expedient.⁹⁸ So authority to license, tax, and regulate merchants, express companies, etc., has been held to confer power to impose an ad valorem tax on the gross annual receipts of an express company from its business done in the city.⁹⁹ Likewise authority to levy and assess goods, etc., and all articles of trade and commerce, sold in the city, including sales at auction or otherwise, confers power to tax the annual sales of a butcher selling his meat at a public market.¹ On the other hand, no such power is conferred by a mere grant of authority to levy on real and personal property,² or taxable property,³ nor does power to tax auction sales and sales of merchandise authorize a tax on the gross receipts of warehouses.⁴ So the gross receipts of a gas company are not taxable as "goods, wares, and merchandise, and upon all articles of trade and commerce."⁵ But the salary of a bank officer is assessable under a by-law taxing income from employment.⁶

1. Franchises. While municipal power to tax a franchise may be conferred by statute,⁷ such power is not given by authority to tax real estate, personal estate, shares and moneys, stocks, bonds, and other securities.⁸

m. Public Property. While ordinarily public property,⁹ including property owned by the municipality itself,¹⁰ is not taxable by the municipality; yet such property is ordinarily taxable in the hands of a grantee,¹¹ or lessee,¹² or where the

Not occupation tax.—The tax upon the capital stock and franchise of a corporation is a tax upon property, and not a tax upon occupation. The Hub v. Hanberg, 211 Ill. 43, 71 N. E. 876.

Franchise of bank.—A city ordinance levying a tax for the fiscal year beginning May 1, 1893, on all taxable property in the city as of its value Nov. 1, 1892, embraced the franchise of a bank, although the law authorizing the taxation of the franchises of banks did not become effective, and was not even passed, until Nov. 11, 1892, and al-municipality has no present interest but only one to become vested in the future.¹⁸ The legislature, however, unless prohibited by the constitution, may expressly authorize municipal taxation of state and county property.¹⁴

n. Vessels. The situs of a vessel is the place of registration and port from and to which it regularly departs and returns.¹⁵ It is also taxable where it is being regularly used, although it is registered as a coasting vessel under the federal statutes, or although the owner is a resident of another state where he is assessed therefor.¹⁶ A municipality cannot levy a tax on all vessels which pass a certain bridge.¹⁷

o. Property Taxable by State or County. Whatever property is taxable according to the general law of the state is subject to municipal taxation in most municipalities.¹⁸ Conversely, property not taxable for county purposes is not taxable by a municipality in such county.¹⁹ But where the legislature confers upon a municipality general powers of taxation, the municipality may impose taxes on all subjects not withheld from taxation by the legislature, without regard to whether they are actually taxed by the state.²⁰

What constitutes violation.—A statute authorizing a city having power to pave the streets at the expense of the city or of the abutting owners or partly at the expense of the city and partly at the expense of the abutters, to allow the latter an abatement of their general city taxes on the same property equivalent to a portion of the assessment for the improvement, is not within the constitutional provision forbidding exemptions from taxation. Erie v. Griswold, 184 Pa. St. 435, 39 Atl. 231.

Tax to pay debts.—A constitutional requirement that all property within the limits of a municipal corporation shall be taxed for the payment of its debts seems to prohibit exemptions only so far as the tax is levied for the payment of debts. State v. Beaufort, 39 S. C. 5, 17 S. E. 355.

Insurance companies.—Under Ky. act of May 8, 1886, applicable to insurance companies other than life companies, and providing "that no ad valorem tax shall be imposed by any city or town on the shares of the capital stock, or the invested and accumulated funds of any company organized under the laws of this state," a building purchased by a fire insurance company with money ac-

tory provisions delegating to municipalities power to exempt from taxation certain manufacturing establishments.²⁵ The fact that for many years annual ordinances have exempted certain lands from taxation for the respective years does not preclude their taxation thereafter.²⁶ A taxpayer not prejudiced by an exemption of certain property, his taxes not having been thereby increased, cannot object to such exemption.²⁷

(n) POWER. Although there are a few cases holding that a municipality has inherent power to exempt property from taxation,²⁸ the general rule is that a municipality has no such inherent power.²⁹ But, in the absence of constitutional accumulated in its business, and held as an investment, was exempt from taxation. Franklin Ins. Co. v. Louisville, 46 S. W. 502, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 489.

Contracts.—Where a city council enters into a contract to exempt certain property of a corporation from taxation in consideration of the corporation transferring to it other property, the fact that the city has accepted the benefits of the contract will not estop it from avoiding the same on the ground that the city council had no authority to enter into it. *McTwiggan v. The condition imposed by congress on the admission of Louisiana into the Union that the people of that state disclaim title to waste and unappropriated land, and that each and every "tract of land" sold by congress should be exempt from any state or local taxation for the term of five years, included town lots sold by the United States, although they were not strictly "tracts of land" within the ordinary meaning of the term. *New Orleans v. New Hampshire.—Franklin Falls Pulp Co. v. Franklin, 66 N. H. 274, 20 Atl. 333, holding that a vote to exempt "any establishment thereafter erected in this town for the manufacture of fabrics," etc., is not sufficient to exempt an establishment not expressly mentioned in the vote.

Vermont.—Richardson v. St. Albans, 72 Vt. 1, 47 Atl. 100.

Exemption as including shares of stock.—Under Vt. St. § 365, providing that certain manufacturing establishments, and all capital and personal property used in their business, may be exempt from taxation for a term of years, if the town so votes, where the stock of a manufacturing corporation had been exempt from taxation by a vote of the city in which it was located, its shares of stock in the hands of the shareholders were exempt. Richardson v. St. Albans, 72 Vt. 1, 47 Atl. 100.

Public service.—The keeping of a hotel, although for the public good, is for private gain, and not a "public service," and hence not properly exempted from taxation within a constitutional provision that "no man, or set of men, are entitled to exclusive, separate public emoluments or privileges from the community, but in consideration of public services." Lancaster v. Clayton, 86 Ky. 373, 5 S. W. 864, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 611.

Commuting taxes.—The city of New Orleans cannot lawfully contract for a commutation of taxation; and an agreement that one erecting sheds on certain public spaces in the levee may, in lieu of taxes thereon, pay a specific proportion of the gross profits realized, is void. New Orleans v. New Orleans Sugar Shed Co., 35 La. Ann. 548. A city council has no power to remit or compromise taxes due the city, and therefore the fact that it has attempted to remit the taxes of a number of persons does not entitle another person similarly situated to exemption from taxation. Shuck v. Lebanon, 68 S. W. 843, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 451. And it was competent for the city to agree with a company upon the amount to be paid by the latter for or in lieu of all taxes or charges which the city had lawful authority to impose upon it on account of its use and occupation of the streets and other public places of the city. Nashville v. Cumberland Tel., etc., Co., 145 Fed. 607, 76 C. C. A. 297. Duration of exemption.—Miss. Laws (1882), p. 838, § 8, providing that a railroad company's property, necessary to railroad purposes, shall be exempt from taxation for twenty years after completing its line to a certain point, and when the exemption period has expired its property shall be taxed at the same rate as other taxable property, and that "all of said taxes to which the property of said company may be subject in this state, whether for county or state, shall be collected . . . dealt with as the legislature may direct; but said company shall be exempt from taxation by cities and towns," does not perpetually and absolutely exempt the company from municipal taxation. Adams v. Yazoo, etc., R. Co., 75 Miss. 275, 22 So. 824.

Goods and produce for export or in transit.—The proviso in a municipal charter exempting from municipal taxation "goods and produce for export or in transit, owned or in possession of any inhabitants of the city," etc., is to be construed strictly. Madison v. Martin, 18 Ind. 35; Madison v. Fitch, 18 Ind. 33. It does not exempt pork owned by non-residents of the city, which has been brought thereto by them to be slaughtered, cured, and stored there, subject to their order.

tion from taxation is not favored by the courts, and unless the language of a statute is so clear and unambiguous that the intention to create the exemption indisputably appears, such a construction will not be given to it.³⁴ In many instances exemptions from taxation in general do not apply to municipal taxes,³⁵ although the general statute is often so worded as to be held to include municipal taxes,³⁶ there being no general rule deducible from the conflicting cases as to when the general exemption does or when it does not include municipal taxes. The exemption in some cases has been considered as applicable only to general, as distinguished from special, municipal taxes.³⁷ Under authority to exempt property for a term of years, the term of exemption does not necessarily commence running from the passage of the statute; but, if the exemption is voted within a reasonable time thereafter by the city council, it may begin then.³⁸ So where a statute authorizes an exemption from city taxes for a specified number of years a vote of the council to exempt for a lesser time is valid.³⁹ An immunity from taxation under a contract by a municipality with a street railroad company whereby it pays a percentage of its earnings in lieu of all other taxes has been held assignable.⁴⁰

(iv) REPEAL OR REVOCATION. The general rule is that an exemption from taxation may be repealed or revoked at any time,⁴¹ although it would seem that where the exemption was an inducement to a contract based upon a consideration entered into between the municipality and the person claiming the exemption the municipality has no right to revoke such exemption within the period for which the exemption was granted.⁴²

Property not used in ordinary business.—Under Ga. Acts (1883), pp. 39–41, declaring that the only property of railroads subject to be taxed by counties and cities is that not used in their usual and ordinary business, a city could not levy a tax on a depot of a railroad within the city. Atlanta v. Georgia Pac. R. Co., 74 Ga. 16. Only so much of a railroad company's property as is indispensable to the construction of its road and fitting it for use is exempt from municipal taxation, and not all which it can lawfully take and hold under its charter. In re East Pennsylvania R. Co., 1 Walk. (Pa.) 428. The exemption from municipal taxation of real estate held by railroad companies extends only to such property as, being capable of acquisition, may be ascertained to be "necessary and convenient" for its use under Pa. Act, Feb. 19, 1849, § 2, declaring what real estate railroad companies may purchase and hold. Berks v. East Pennsylvania R. Co., 1 Woodw. (Pa.) 376.

Power house.—Under Pa. Act, April 21, company and the municipality.⁴⁶ Particular statutory provisions exempting all or a part of the property of a railroad company from taxation or providing for a fixed tax in lieu of all other taxes have been held applicable to and to include municipal taxation;⁴⁷ but other statutory provisions have been held not to exempt the property from municipal taxation but to be applicable only to state and county taxation.⁴⁸ The payment of a license-fee on each car run over the road for the franchise and privilege of operating the road does not exempt the railroad company from the payment of an ad valorem tax on its property.⁴⁹

(B) Water, Gas, and Electric Light Companies. Generally a municipality has no power to exempt from taxation the property of a water, gas, or electric light company;⁵⁰ but to some municipalities such power is delegated to a greater or less extent by the legislature.⁵¹ Conceding that a municipality cannot exempt

1858 (Pamphl. Laws 385), providing that real property of railroad corporations—the superstructure of the road and water stations alone excepted—shall be subject to taxation for city purposes, a power house for the manufacture of electricity, owned and used by a traction motor company operating street railways, is exempt from taxation. *Philadelphia v. W. 447, holding that a municipality may agree with a street railroad company for the payment of a certain per cent of its gross earnings in lieu of all taxes except land taxes.

Construction of contract.—A contract between a city and a street railroad company, that “the road, rolling and live stock of said company” should be exempt from taxation, did not exempt stables, shops, and houses for storage of lumber; and this, although the president testified that he understood “road” to include such appurtenances or conveniences. *Atlanta St. R. Property taxable by state.—Under the charter giving a city the right to tax all property within its limits “which is by law taxable for territorial and county purposes,” it had no authority to impose taxes on the property of a railroad company which was

Payment of license-tax.—Under a city charter providing that merchants and others paying a license or specific tax on their business shall be exempt from any ad valorem tax thereon, the property of a gas company, used in the manufacture and distribution of gas, is not exempt from ad valorem taxation, although it has paid a license or specific tax, imposed by the general council of the city. *Newport Light Co. v. 51. Bowen v. Newell, 16 R. I. 238, 14 Atl. 873, holding that under a statute permitting any town council to grant the right to lay water pipes in a highway, and to erect and maintain reservoirs, including the power to exempt such pipes and reservoirs from taxation, the exemption can only be made as one of the terms of the grant, and cannot be given to works already built.

such a company from taxation, it is well settled that it may agree with the company that as a price of the services to be rendered or commodities furnished the municipality, the latter will pay a sum equal to the amount of the taxes to be levied, where the sum stipulated to be paid is a fair and just allowance and the stipulation is bona fide and not in the nature of an evasion of the prohibition against exemption from taxation.⁵²

(c) Educational and Charitable Institutions. General exemptions of educational and charitable institutions have been held not applicable to local municipal taxes,⁵³ although there are cases to the contrary.⁵⁴ The mere grant of authority to exempt is usually not mandatory.⁵⁵ Exemption of property occupied by religious or educational institutions includes athletic and pleasure grounds as well as halls and dormitories,⁵⁶ but not outside property not used by them.⁵⁷ A half century of exemption has been held to estop the city from changing its construction of a doubtful ordinance.⁵⁸

(vi) PLEADING AND PROOF. A property-owner claiming an exemption must plead⁵⁹ and prove⁶⁰ his exemption.

5. LEVY AND ASSESSMENT—a. General Considerations. The municipal function of taxation generally belongs to the common council,⁶¹ and cannot be delegated by it to any other board or officer.⁶² The method of levying and assessing taxes for municipal purposes is largely the same as in case of state, county, or Machinery.—The provision in a city charter exempting from taxation "machinery in manufactories" does not exempt the pipes, lamp posts, and meters of a gas company. Covington Gaslight Co. v. Covington, 84 Ky. 94; Covington v. Covington Gaslight Co., 2 S. W. 326, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 515.

Public property.—A water district created for supplying the inhabitants of such district and certain municipalities with pure water for domestic and municipal purposes is a public municipal corporation, and under Me. Rev. St. c. 9, § 6, such of its property as is appropriated to public uses is exempt from municipal taxation. Augusta v. Augusta Water Dist., 101 Me. 148, 63 Atl. 663.

In Pennsylvania real estate of an electric light company is exempt from local taxation, although such property is merely held as a reserve plant, to be used in the manufacture of electricity only in case of emergency. The exemption from local taxation of property used in "supplying" electricity includes property used in "manufacturing" it. Southern Electric Light, etc., Co. v. Philadelphia, 191 Pa. tinguishment of fires without charge does not exempt the property of a water company which is paid for all water used by the town. Dover v. Maine Water Co., 90 Me. 180, 38 Atl. 101.

A contract of exemption will not be inferred from facts which do not lead irresistibly and necessarily to the existence of the contract. Wells v. Savannah, 181 U. S. 531, 21 S. Ct. 697, 45 L. ed. 986 [affirming 107 Ga. 1, 32 S. E. 669].

Evidence.—A memorandum, indorsed on the assessment roll of a municipal corporation, to the effect that the property of a corporation, not included in any constitutional or statutory exemption, is exempt from taxation, is incompetent to prove that it is in fact exempt, and cannot operate as notice of such fact to purchasers of municipal bonds. *Darlington v. township taxes,⁶³ except where it is otherwise provided by statute or charter provisions.⁶⁴ The power to make a levy depends upon the power to tax,⁶⁵ and the grant of power to levy carries with it the authority to adopt any reasonable method to make the power effectual.⁶⁶ Statutory and charter provisions as to making the levy and assessment must be substantially complied with.⁶⁷

b. Time For Levy. Generally the time for making the annual levy is fixed by statute or charter provisions.⁶⁸ Some of such provisions have been held mandatory,⁶⁹ while others have been held merely directory.⁷⁰ If no time for the levy is fixed the ordinance may be passed at any time,⁷¹ provided it is made within the year.⁷² In particular jurisdictions a levy cannot be made prior to the adoption of the appropriation bill for the year,⁷³ or before the report of the board of estimate fixing a rate of taxation,⁷⁴ or before the assessment roll is completed;⁷⁵ but mere informalities in regard thereto have been held not fatal to the levy.⁷⁶ Where an original tax levy ordinance was valid, a subsequent alleged validating ordinance was ineffective to change the date of the levy to the date of the passage of such subsequent ordinance.⁷⁷ A levy to meet contract expenses cannot ordinarily be made before the contract is entered into,⁷⁸ but taxes to meet the payment of bonds may be levied in advance of the time when such obligations fall due.⁷⁹

Generally a municipal corporation is authorized to make only one levy a year for the same purpose.⁸⁰

c. Ordinance or Resolution Levying Tax—(1) IN GENERAL. Ordinarily the legislative function of levying taxes is to be exercised by a municipal corporation by ordinance,⁸¹ and no notice to taxpayers is necessary before the adoption of the ordinance.⁸² Ordinarily a mere resolution is insufficient.⁸³ The ordinance must be passed by the council at a meeting held at the regular place,⁸⁴ and when a quorum is present,⁸⁵ although it may ordinarily be at a special meeting if due notice thereof is given;⁸⁶ and the vote must be recorded as required by the charter.⁸⁷ In some jurisdictions the levy must be approved by the mayor,⁸⁸ while in others he has no veto power.⁸⁹ An ordinance levying a tax for railroad aid after the result of an election voting aid cannot be repealed after the road has been built.⁹⁰

(11) CONTENTS AND CONSTRUCTION. The ordinance or resolution must fully comply with the statutory requirements.⁹¹ It must ordinarily state the rate or

Where a levy for general purposes has been made for the year, although less than the maximum rate allowed by statute or charter, no other levy, even for an object that might properly be classed under "general purposes," can be made, except where there is statutory authority therefor. *State v. App. 1899) 50 S. W. 632, holding that a levy made pursuant to an adoption by the council of a report of a finance committee recommending the amount of taxes to be collected, and how it should be apportioned, and not by ordinance, was void. See also Cape May v. Cape May Transp. Co., 64 N. J. L. 80, 44 Atl. 948. But see Smith v. Louisville, 14 S. W. 349, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 337.

The tax rolls are not competent to prove the levy of a tax by a municipal corporation. Such proof must be made by proving the city ordinance levying the tax. Earle v. Henrietta, 91 Tex. 301, 43 S. W. 15.

But statutes requiring a levy for a sinking fund, and in case of omission authorizing clerical extension at a specified rate, are equivalent to levying ordinances, and sales thereunder are valid. Davis v. Brace, 82 Ill. 542.

Present or future levy.—Where a motion to "levy a tax of one per cent. upon the taxable property" of a city was carried in its council, and the clerk duly certified to the auditor that such a levy had been made, such action of the council amounts to a present levy, and the tax is valid. *Meservey v. But see People v. Lee, 112 Ill. 113 (holding that in order to constitute an "ordinance" it is all sufficient that the board of trustees should, by resolution, or by any other proceeding entered upon their journal or record, declare the ascertained amount of all appropriations, and indicate their determination that such amount shall be levied and assessed upon the taxable property within the town); *Witheril v. 86. Auditor-Gen. v. Sparrow, 116 Mich. 574, 74 N. W. 881, holding that city taxes voted at a special meeting of the council were not invalid because it did not appear in the record of such meeting that the members were duly notified of the call therefor, as it will not be presumed that proof of such notice was not on file.

87. Pontiac v. Axford, 49 Mich. 69, 12 N. W. 914, holding that a tax voted by the city council without the votes being recorded at large upon the minutes, as required by its charter, is invalid, and cannot be made valid subsequently by an amendment adopted by a subsequent council, showing such votes, where a majority of the members of the latter were not members of the former council.

amount of the tax or both,⁹² the property in general subject to the tax,⁹³ and the purpose of the tax.⁹⁴ On the other hand it is not necessary to designate the par-

Ordinance providing for submission to vote.—An ordinance providing for a vote to levy an additional tax of one and one-third mills on the taxable property of the city does not violate the spirit of the act which permits municipalities to submit a proposition to vote for a tax of a specific per cent. Austin v. Austin Gas-Light, etc., Co., 69 Tex. 180, 7 S. W. 200.

A mere reference in the ordinance to another void ordinance passed at the same time does not invalidate it. Baltimore v. Gorter, 93 Md. 1, 48 Atl. 445.

92. Hawkins v. Jonesboro, 63 Ga. 527; Fairfield v. People, 94 Ill. 244; Boyce v. Peterson, 84 Mich. 490, 47 N. W. 1095 (holding that under a statute authorizing a village to raise by general tax sums not exceeding a certain rate per cent for the several funds specified, it is sufficient for the council in levying the tax to specify the rate per cent for each fund, and it need not state the sums to be raised); In re Cloquet Lumber Co., 61 Minn. 233, 63 N. W. 628 (holding that where statutes provided that the council should fix the specific amounts of corporate taxes and that subsequently a specified officer should fix the rate per cent, a resolution fixing a certain rate per cent, and not specifying the amount of the tax, was void).

The amount levied may be less than the amount appropriated.—Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. People, 213 Ill. 197, 72 N. E. 774.

Statement of rate in report.—Where a tax rate has not been fixed by an ordinance of the city, but is merely a statement of a rate in the report of the board of estimates to the council, as required by the charter, it has no force as a rate on which to base a tax levy. Baltimore v. Gorter, 93 Md. 1, 48 Atl. 445.

Review of amount.—The power vested in certain commissioners to approve or reject any part of a tax levy confers power to exercise a veto but does not authorize modification of such estimates, since the power to levy taxes is one of the legislative functions of the common council. Ampt v. Cincinnati, 10 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 824, 21 Cinc. L. Bul. 216.

Construction of levy on banks and solvent credits.—Adams v. Capital State Bank, 74 Miss. 307, 20 So. 881.

Rate.—Extending a city tax at the rate of two per cent which will raise an amount fourteen per cent greater than the appropriation ordinance calls for if entirely collected is not an abuse of discretion, where no showing is made as to the amount actually realized from the collection of the tax. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 623, 66 N. E. 246. The county clerk may extend a city tax at a rate per cent which will raise the net amount required by the appropriation ordinance, exclusive of the probable cost of collection and losses and deductions, provided such rate does not exceed the two per cent limit imposed by law. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, supra.

Different rates.—In some municipalities real estate may be classified for purposes of taxation and a different rate levied on each class of property. Jermyn v. Scranton City, 212 Pa. St. 598, 62 Atl. 29. See also Baltimore v. Rosenthal, 102 Md. 298, 62 Atl. 579.

93. Covington Gaslight Co. v. Covington, 84 Ky. 94, holding that under the provision of a city charter, authorizing the levy of an ad valorem tax on real estate in the city, and on such personal estate "as the city council may designate," it is sufficient for the purpose of taxing gas pipes, meters, lamp posts, and the like, that they be designated under the general term "personal estate . . . and any property of any kind subject to taxation under the laws of this Commonwealth."

Construction of ordinance.—A city ordinance levying a tax for the fiscal year beginning May 1, 1893, on all taxable property in the city as of its value Nov. 1, 1892, as assessed by the city assessor, and equalized by the board of equalization, embraces all property in the city liable for ad valorem taxation for the fiscal year named, and not merely all property assessed by the city assessor, and equalized by the board of equalization. Middlesboro v. Coal, etc., Bank, 108 Ky. 680, 57 S. W. 497, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 380.

94. Otis v. People, 196 Ill. 542, 63 N. E. 1053; Clayton v. Chicago, 44 Ill. 280 (holding that an ordinance imposing a tax of one mill on the dollar for "permanent improvements" sufficiently specifies the "object of the levy"); Covington Bd. of Education v. Covington Public Library, 113 Ky. 234, 68 S. W. 10, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 98; Somerset v. Somerset Banking Co., 109 Ky. 549, 60 S. W. 5, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1129; Shugars v. Hamilton, 92 S. W. 564, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 127 (not applicable to license-fee). Compare Henderson v. Hughes County, 13 S. D. 576, 83 N. W. 682.

Failure to specify as cured by reference to other ordinances.—Where a tax levy ordinance refers to the appropriation ordinance, which specifies in detail the objects for which the tax is levied, the failure of the tax levy ordinance to itself specify the objects of the tax is not fatal. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 218 Ill. 463, 75 N. E. 1021. See also Spring Valley Coal Co. v. People, 157 Ill. 453, 41 N. E. 874.

Effect of invalidity.—Where a tax levy made by a city council is void for failure to specify the purpose for which the tax was levied, the council may subsequently make a proper levy. Somerset v. Somerset Banking Co., 109 Ky. 549, 60 S. W. 5, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1129.

Including taxes for different purposes in one levy.—In some jurisdictions taxes for different purposes cannot be levied by the ticular manner in which the tax is to be collected,⁹⁵ and a provision making it payable to a person or board not entitled thereto does not invalidate the levy.⁹⁶ Ordinances levying taxes are to be construed most strongly against the government and in favor of a citizen, and their provisions are not to be extended by implication beyond the clear import of the language used.⁹⁷ The ordinance must not delegate the authority to levy.⁹⁸ Ordinarily the levy can be only for the taxes for one year,⁹⁹ but under some circumstances a levy for a longer period is justifiable.¹ A tax levy ordinance is invalid where none of the items of the levy agree with those specified in the appropriation ordinance.² Where a municipality is authorized by different statutes to levy different special taxes, it cannot combine the objects and give notice and take the vote upon the proposal to tax for an entire sum.³

(iii) PUBLICATION AND FILING COPY. In some jurisdictions the ordinance must be published,⁴ and a certified copy must be filed.⁵

same ordinance. People v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., 116 Ill. 410, 6 N. E. 459. So a levy may be invalid where it mingles, without specification, in one assessment, two or more taxes required to be kept separate. Scranton v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 2 C. Pl. (Pa.) 29. Where authority is given to levy a tax to pay interest on the public debt and also a certain rate to create a sinking fund to pay the debt, a levy is not rendered illegal by the fact that it does not specify the proportion to be applied to the liquidation of each. Aurora v. Lamar, 59 Ind. 400.

Levy of general tax as compliance with duty to levy special tax.—Where a city is required to levy a special tax, and set apart the proceeds for a special purpose, this duty will not be performed by the levy of a general tax. State v. Davenport, 12 Iowa 335.

In Illinois an ordinance for the levy of municipal taxes must specify in detail the purposes of the appropriations and the amount appropriated for each purpose. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. People, 207 Ill. 566, 69 N. E. 938.

Where bonds of a specific kind were described in the ordinance making the levy as being bonds of a previous year, in which no such bonds were issued, the description is material, and the levy is void; and the ordinance is not correctable by averment that such bonds were issued of a date ten years previous to the date described in the levy. Hellman v. Los Angeles, 147 Cal. 653, 82 Pac. 313.

95. Frantz v. Jacob, 88 Ky. 525, 11 S. W. 654, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 55.

97. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. Darenkamp, 66 S. W. 1125, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 2249.

98. Bassett v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 28 S. W. 554, holding that a provision that, in case the amount of the tax is insufficient, certain city officer shall levy the requisite amount, does not render the ordinance void, in that it delegates the authority to levy taxes, as such provision will be treated as surplusage.

Apportionment among wards.—Where apportionment of a municipal levy is directed to be made among the wards pro rata according to the last assessment, it may be effected by the supervisors, under resolution of the council, as a ministerial function. Fay v. Wood, 65 Mich. 390, 32 N. W. 614. In case of a tax to pay a judgment against the corporation, action by the council is unnecessary, the supervisors being required to apportion on receiving a transcript. Shippy v. Mason, 90 Mich. 45, 51 N. W. 353.

4. Southern Warehouse, etc., Co. v. Mechanics' Trust Co., 56 S. W. 162, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1734.

Presumptions.—Where the tax bills are properly authenticated, it must be presumed that the ordinances were duly published. Fonda v. Louisville, 49 S. W. 785, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1652.

In Nebraska the failure to publish an ordinance making the annual levy of taxes for a city of the metropolitan class, in the official newspaper of the city, as required by Comp. St. (1895) c. 12a, § 133, did not prevent such ordinance from becoming a law, where it was duly passed and approved, and signed by the mayor, and a section thereof provided that the ordinance should be in force from and after its passage. Johnson v. Finley, 54 Nebr. 733, 74 N. W. 1080.

In Illinois an appropriation ordinance must be published before the ordinance directing the levy is passed. People v. Florville, 207 Ill. 79, 69 N. E. 623; People v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., 116 Ill. 410, 6 N. E. 459. But the statute requiring all ordinances making appropriations to be published in a newspaper or by posting does not require ordinances levying taxes to be published. Mix v. People, 106 Ill. 425.

5. People v. Kankakee, etc., R. Co., 218 Ill. 588, 75 N. E. 1063; People v. Lee, 112 Ill. 113.

d. Operation and Effect of Levy — (i) INFORMALITIES. Mere errors or informalities in the levy not affecting the substantial justice of the tax itself do not ordinarily invalidate the levy.⁶

(ii) PARTIAL INVALIDITY. A tax levy partially invalid is not invalid in toto if the valid part can be readily separated from the invalid part,⁷ but if it cannot be so separated the entire levy is invalid.⁸

(iii) AS CONCLUSIVE ON COURTS. While certiorari will lie to review the proceedings of a municipal organization in levying a tax,⁹ the determination of the council as to the necessity for a levy and what taxes should be levied will not ordinarily be interfered with by the courts so long as the amount of the levy is within the limits prescribed by constitutional, statutory, or charter provision.¹⁰

(iv) ON DISSOLUTION OF MUNICIPALITY. The dissolution of the municipality annuls a tax levy,¹¹ unless its force is preserved and continued by statute.¹²

e. Assessors and Procedure For Assessing — (i) GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS. The mode of making assessments and the procedure connected therewith is generally fixed by express statutory or charter provision,¹³ and it is well settled that in Filing original ordinance.—The filing of a certified copy of the tax levy ordinance with the county clerk is essential to his authority to extend the tax, and neither the original appropriation ordinance nor the original tax levy ordinance can be substituted for it. Russellville v. Purdy, 206 Ill. 142, 68 N. E. 1035.

Curing error.—On application for judgment of sale for taxes, error in filing the original tax levy ordinance, instead of a certified copy thereof, cannot be cured by allowing a certificate of authentication to be attached to the ordinance. People v. Kankakee, etc., R. Co., 218 Ill. 588, 75 N. E. 1063. If the paper filed does not purport to be a certified copy the court has no power to permit the addition of a certificate to the paper under the guise of an amendment. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. People, 213 Ill. 558, 73 N. E. 310.

6. People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 189 Ill. 397, 59 N. E. 946; Spring Valley Coal Co. v. People, 157 Ill. 543, 41 N. E. 874; People v. Lee, 112 Ill. 113; Purrington v. People, 79 Ill. 11; Taylor v. McFadden, 84 Iowa 262, 50 N. W. 1070 (holding that, although the council of a city fails to certify to the county auditor, on or before the first Monday in September, the percentage of taxes levied for the ensuing year, as required by statute, the omission is without prejudice to the taxpayers, and does not prevent the collection of the tax); *Bartemeyer v. Rohlf*s, 71 Iowa 582, 32 N. W. 673; Hixon v. Eagle River, 91 Wis. 649, 65 N. W. 366.

Presumptions.—Where a resolution for the levy of a tax is offered at the meeting of a city council, and certified to the auditor, but the record fails to show that it was adopted by the council, the adoption may, notwithstanding this omission, be inferred from the fact that it was offered, and ordered to be so certified. Taylor v. McFadden, 84 Iowa 262, 50 N. W. 1070. In the absence of an express provision of the charter requiring entries of estimates of general expenditures to be made on the records of the council, courts will not assume, for the purpose of invalidating a municipal tax, that no such estimates were made from the fact that no entry was made of such on the records. Turner v. Hutchinson, 113 Mich. 245, 71 N. W. 514.

Failure of presiding officer to sign ordinance.—An assessment of taxes, made pursuant to an ordinance passed by a city council, is not rendered invalid by the omission of the presiding officer of the council to sign the ordinance. Blanchard v. Bissell, 11 Ohio St. 96.

The mere statements of the assessors after their work has been completed cannot be al-making an assessment such provisions must be complied with in every substantial particular, or the assessment will be invalid.¹⁴ lowed to invalidate what they have done. Von Storch v. Scranton, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 567.

In boroughs provisions of the general tax laws relative to the mode of assessment for state or county purposes are applicable. Ridgefield v. Goodday, 65 N. J. L. 153, 46 Atl. 590.

The provision of the Greater New York charter requiring the apportionment of the new deputy tax commissioners to the several boroughs was not intended to limit the duties of such officers to the boroughs from which they were selected. People v. Feitner, 30 N. Y. App. Div. 241, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 1094 [affirmed in 156 N. Y. 694, 51 N. E. 1093].

Conflict between charter and general law.—Where a city charter conflicts with a general law, subsequently passed, as to assessment of property for taxation, the charter must be held to be superseded to the extent of any conflict that may exist. Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 27 Fed. 14. On the other hand, it has been held that the legislature may authorize taxes within a city to be assessed in a different mode from that prescribed by the general laws of the state, and the rights thus conferred upon a city by its charter are not repealed by subsequent general enactments, however inconsistent. State v. Blundell, 24 N. J. L. 402.

Effect of bad faith of assessors.—Where a city assessor places upon the city tax roll taxable property, and properly values and extends the taxes due thereon, such assessment is valid, although the assessor knows that the city does not intend to collect such taxes, and his motive in assessing it is to deceive the public into the belief that such property is being taxed. Tampa v. Kannitz, 39 Fla. 683, 23 So. 416, 63 Am. St. Rep. 202.

Rep. 519, holding that an assessment made by one of the trustees of a town by permission of his associates, when he had not been elected and had not qualified as assessor, was void, especially as no board of equalization was appointed to pass upon complaints of taxpayers. Massachusetts.—Nason v. Whitney, 1 Pick. 140, holding all taxes granted for parochial or municipal purposes for any one year must be assessed by assessors chosen for that year.

Washington.—Port Townsend v. Sheehan, 6 Wash. 220, 33 Pac. 427.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 2076.

Record of appointment.—The fact that there was no record of the appointment of assessors by the mayor of a city will not invalidate assessments made by them. Dobbins v. Cartersville, 73 Ga. 137.

Appointment of deputies.—The act of March 27, 1901, relating to the government of cities of forty thousand to one hundred thousand inhabitants, and requiring the tax commissioner to make oath to the correctness of the entire assessment, is not void for uncertainty in empowering him to appoint deputies to assist in making it, on the ground that such assistance is incompatible with his personal knowledge as to the correctness of the return. State v. Aitken, 62 Nebr. 428, 87 N. W. 153.

The statutory requirement that capital stock and franchises of certain enumerated corporations shall be assessed by the board of equalization while the capital stock and franchises of other corporations are to be assessed by the local assessors is not a violation of the constitutional rule of uniformity. The Hub v. Hanberg, 211 Ill. 43, 71 N. E. 826.

16. Cobb v. Elizabeth City, 75 N. C. 1; Germania Sav. Bank v. Darlington, 50 S. C. 337, 27 S. E. 846, holding that a statute authorizing a municipality to make assessments for taxation was unconstitutional as violating provisions that the general assembly shall provide by law for a uniform and equal rate of assessment and that all taxes shall be laid upon the actual value of property, since such provision permits of but one assessment which the law requires to be made by state officers.

Inherent right to have assessment made by municipal officers.—The taxpayers of a village have no inherent right to have the as-

(iii) *TIME OF ASSESSMENT.*¹⁷ Except where otherwise provided,¹⁸ municipal assessments are usually made every year,¹⁹ it generally being provided that the assessment shall be made or completed on or before a certain day, assessments made thereafter being invalid.²⁰

(iv) NEW ASSESSMENTS AND USE OF STATE ASSESSMENT ROLL. Generally a new assessment must be made each year.²¹ Under some charter and statutory provisions, however, the municipal authorities need not make an independent assessment but may use the town, county, or state assessment roll,²² and in some jurisdictions such provisions are not merely permissive but mandatory.²³

f. Mode of Assessment—(i) IN GENERAL. Statutory and charter provisions in reference to the mode of assessing taxes must be substantially pursued,²⁴ assessment or collection of their taxes done by an officer elected by them, and a law providing that such duties shall be performed by town officers is not unconstitutional. Jones v. Kolb, 56 Wis. 263, 14 N. W. 177.

Incorporation of city after assessment by board of railroad assessors.—Where a city of the third class is incorporated after the board of railroad assessors has made assessment of the railroad property of the state, and the returns of such assessment have been transmitted by the auditor of the state to the various counties where the property is located, such city cannot make a valid levy of taxes for that year on railroad property within its limits. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Maxwell, 10 Kan. App. 370, 59 Pac. 1087.

Property annexed during fiscal year see State v. Craig, 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 13, 11 Ohio Cir. Dec. 348.

Special statutes control general ones in fixing dates. Cohoes v. Cohoes Co., 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 343.

Change of time.—The discretionary power given to a common council to change the time from the first Monday in May, before which assessment of taxes shall be made, may be exercised after said Monday has passed. Tousey v. Bell, 23 Ind. 423. Where a city charter refers to the general law of the state for the subject of taxation, and such general law requires that the property shall be assessed by a certain date, and thereafter the general law is changed as to such date, such change works a corresponding change as to the time of taxation by the municipality. Tackaberry v. Keokuk, 32 Iowa 155.

Provision as merely directory.—A charter requirement that the assessment roll must be delivered to the receiver of taxes on or before a certain day has been held merely directory and not mandatory, so that failure to follow it does not vitiate the tax. New York v. Ferris, 91 N. Y. App. Div. 223, 86 N. Y. Suppl. 600.

Pennsylvania.—Harding v. Repp, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 439, holding that where a borough has been created out of a township, the borough may collect taxes on property situated in the borough without any other assessment than that made by the township assessor prior to the incorporation of the borough.

Railroad property.—Atlanta v. Wright, 119 Ga. 207, 45 S. E. 994; State v. Back, 72 Nebr. 402, 100 N. W. 952, 69 L. R. A. 561. But in South Carolina the statute providing for the assessment by a state board of all the property of a railroad company in the state for the taxes to be collected by county treasurers contains nothing which makes such assessments applicable to cities authorized to assess property within their limits for local taxation. State v. Talley, 50 S. C. 374, 27 S. E. 803.

24. Powell v. Madison, 21 Ind. 335.

Number of assessors.—An assessment required to be made by one of the assessors of the city is not rendered invalid by the fact that it was made and reported by two

although the legislature may authorize taxes within a city to be assessed in a different mode from that prescribed by the general laws of the state.²⁵

(ii) LISTING PROPERTY BY TAXPAYER. In some jurisdictions it is provided that residents shall, by a specified time, deliver to the assessor or other officer a written list of their property for the purposes of taxation,²⁶ or that such a list shall be furnished on demand.²⁷ So it has been held that a city may require keepers of boarding houses, restaurants, and hotels to furnish the names of persons liable to poll tax, boarding or lodging in their houses, and impose a fine for refusal to do so.²⁸ The list is merely evidence from which an assessment may be made and the listing is not a condition precedent to a valid assessment.²⁹

(iii) DESCRIPTION. An accurate description of the land assessed is essential to the validity of the assessment,³⁰ but it is generally sufficient that the description be capable of being made certain by extrinsic evidence.³¹ In some jurisdictions the failure to state the abstract and survey numbers of the land does not invalidate the assessment.³² The property must be assessed in the name of the true owner.³³

Power of clerk of court.—Where the duty of levying taxes is imposed on the county court, its clerk cannot certify the amount due from any taxpayer, simply from a certificate from the city clerk as to the city rate of taxation, and without an order from the court. Kansas v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 81 Mo. 285.

Bank-stock.—Under a charter authorizing the city to tax bank-stock, the proper mode of taxing such stock is to assess it against the individual stock-holder and not in the name of the bank. Madison v. Whitney, 21 Ind. 261.

Assessment by wards.—Under Laws (1880), c. 596, an assessment in New York city was properly made by wards, and a confirmation by the board of aldermen is sufficient. McMahon v. Palmer, 11 Daly (N. Y.) 214 [affirmed in 102 N. Y. 176, 6 N. E. 400, 55 Am. Rep. 796].

Sufficiency of particular descriptions.—Description of property, as contained in an assessment, as "store S. 4th and Mary Sts." owned by "Moore Bros.," is sufficient for the purpose of an action to enforce a lien for the taxes, there being no difference between the several lots as to their liability for taxes, although the ordinance provides for giving the numbers of the block and lots. *Cooper Grocery Co. v. Registration of title.—But when the owner has not availed himself of the protection afforded by the registration of his title, the mention of his name in connection with the assessment of the land is only required as descriptive of the land; and, when the assessment and the claim within themselves clearly and absolutely identify the land, that is all that is required. Philadelphia v. Unknown Owner, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 203.

Estates of deceased persons.—Where no form of assessment is prescribed by law, an assessment to "the estate of . . . deceased," where a large estate is shown to have been well known by that designation, is not such an error as will authorize setting aside the assessment. State v. Platt, 24 N. J. L. 108.

(iv) VALUATION. The property should be taxed at its true value to be determined by the proper assessing officer in the manner prescribed by statute, charter provision, or ordinance.³⁴ In some municipalities the assessment, so far as the value of the property is concerned, must be made from the state, county, or town assessment book of the preceding year,³⁵ while in others the valuation must not exceed the valuation for state and county purposes.³⁶ But where not prohibited, a municipality may place a higher valuation on property than that placed on it by the state and county if such higher value is not an overvaluation.³⁷ The assessment in the prescribed mode, when without fraud or collusion, is conclusive upon the question of value, so far as the courts are concerned.³⁸

(v) PROPERTY OMITTED FROM LIST. The power of the assessor, unless it is otherwise specially provided, generally ends with the return of his roll or list to the proper office.³⁹ But in some jurisdictions provisions are made for placing upon the roll property overlooked when the assessment was made,⁴⁰ and taxable

App. Div. 278, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 687. See also Cumming v. Savannah, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 26, holding that the assessment of the value of goods from the best information obtainable was an arbitrary assessment violating private rights.

Fair approximation to reasonable value.—It is generally sufficient that the methods employed result in a fair approximation to reasonable value. Tampa v. Mugge, 40 Fla. 326, 24 So. 489.

In Maine it is proper for the assessors to make only one valuation for each tax, state, county, and town, and blend together the several sums to be thus levied, making but one assessment for the whole. Rockland v. Ulmer, 84 Me. 503, 24 Atl. 949.

Separate valuation of lots.—Under a charter, providing that the assessors shall assess all the real estate in the city both of residents and non-residents by valuing the same at its true, full, fair value, designating the number of lots or parcels of land, the assessment of a block of lots of different values at their collective value in a round sum is not exceptional. Coles v. Platt, 24 N. J. L. 108. The assessors may make and list one appraisal in gross of three separate lots of land not adjoining, nor in any way connected with, one another, instead of making and listing a separate appraisal for each lot. Rockland v. Ulmer, 84 Me. 503, 24 Atl. 949.

Actual value of unimproved lands.—Where the constitution declares that all assessments on property shall be at its "cash value," a charter providing that in assessing lands within the city held merely as farming lands, or wild and unimproved, they shall be assessed at their true cash value, considering the location, and not according to any prospective or supposed value as city property, is unconstitutional, the actual value of the land being the proper basis. Saltonstall v. Cheboygan, 132 Mich. 196, 93 N. W. 246. See also State v. O'Brien, 89 Mo. 631, 1 S. W. 763.

Hearing and appeal.—Where an ordinance providing for the assessment of omitted property gave the taxpayer an opportunity to be heard before the city council, it was not invalid because it did not authorize an appeal from the decision of the council. Muir v. Bardstown, 120 Ky. 739, 87 S. W. 1096, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 1150.

Conferring judicial power on council.—Where a city ordinance authorized the assessment of omitted property by the city council on five days' notice of hearing to the property-owner, it was not void on the ground that it conferred on the council jurisdiction of a judicial nature, violative of the constitutional limitations on the legislature to create any judicial tribunals other than the courts expressly named in that instrument. Muir v. Bardstown, 120 Ky. 739, 87 S. W. 1096, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 1150.

Notice.—The power to assess property omitted carries the necessity of notice to the owner indispensable in all assessments. But the failure to give notice of the assessment of omitted property as required by law is waived by the payment of state taxes based on such assessment, since such payment shows that he had knowledge of the assessment. Hodding v. New Orleans, 48 La. Ann. 982, 20 So. 199.

property omitted for several years may be assessed for each of the years.⁴¹ But authority conferred on the collector of taxes to assess persons whom the assessor has failed to list does not authorize him to add to an assessment property omitted therefrom belonging to a person assessed by the assessor.⁴² And after the assessment has been returned and the tax levied thereon, the council has no power, in the absence of special statutory provisions, to order an additional assessment to be made of property subsequently coming within the city limits.⁴³ When an assessment roll has been substantially completed before passage of an ordinance levying a city tax, the fact that property not reported by owners is afterward added to the roll does not invalidate the tax.⁴⁴

(vi) POLL TAX. The assessor is generally required to ascertain the names of all persons liable to a poll tax and enter them on the roll.⁴⁵

(vii) NOTICE OF COMPLETION OF ASSESSMENT. In some jurisdictions notice to the taxpayers of the completion of the assessment and the receipt of the tax roll by the collector, with opportunity for inspection, must be given by publication or otherwise.⁴⁶

g. Assessment Rolls, Books, and Warrants. The assessment roll, when completed, is generally required to be signed and verified,⁴⁷ and filed⁴⁸ or delivered to the receiver of taxes.⁴⁹ So the tax warrant is generally required to be

Authority independent of statute.—Where property taxable in a city is not assessed there during the period prescribed by statute for making the assessment, the assessor is authorized, independently of statute, to assess it retrospectively at any time before the right to assess and collect taxes is barred by limitations. *Botto v. 46. Sherman v. Fisher, 138 Mich. 391, 101 N. W. 572 (holding that the absence of proof on file that notices were given was insufficient to create a presumption that the notices were not given as required by law, where there was no provision of the charter requiring such proof to be filed); New York v. Vanderveer, 91 N. Y. App. Div. 303, 86 N. Y. Suppl. 659 (holding that publication in the City Record was sufficient unless the board designated some other way); People v. New Rochelle, 17 N. Y. App. Div. 603, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 836 (in which case it was held that the requirement of a village charter that notice of the completion of the assessment roll shall be given by advertisement in a newspaper, and that a copy of the assessment shall be left for a certain time with the village clerk for public inspection, is jurisdictional).

Deposit of books for inspection.—Where the board of tax commissioners made an assessment, and deposited the books for the inspection of the public, as required by law, an erroneous statement by the secretary as to the time when the assessment would be made up would not invalidate the act. Peo- ple v. Feitner, 65 N. Y. App. Div. 224, 72 N. Y. Suppl. 641.

47. Lord v. Cooper, 19 N. Y. App. Div. 535, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 519, holding, however, that the provision in a village charter that the village assessor shall compile the assessment roll as nearly as practicable in the manner prescribed by law in respect to town assessors does not require that such assessment rolls shall be verified as town assessment rolls are verified.

In New Hampshire the signature on the assessments and invoices by the assessors is required. Signature at the end of the record of the warrant is sufficient as it is not required that it be signed in any particular way. Paul v. Linscott, 56 N. H. 347. Where an official invoice of the board of assessors of a town is correctly made and signed by them, and contains a proper description of the land assessed, and such invoice is made up and signed by the assessors as the true one, the fact that the original memorandum of one assessor contains an error in the description cannot vitiate the true official invoice as finally signed. Drew v. Morrill, 62 N. H. 23. Where an official certificate of assessment of municipal taxes is signed by a majority of the board of assessors, it is sufficient. Drew v. Morrill, supra. However, such a provision has been held merely directory and failure to sign does not invalidate the assessment. Odiorne v. Rand, 59 N. H. 504.

48. State v. Ensign, 54 Minn. 372, 56 N. W. 41, holding that a charter provision requiring the assessment roll and district judge's order confirming it to be filed and preserved in the office of the board of public works was not invalid for putting a district court record in a city office, where it was not in violation of the constitution.

49. New York v. Ferris, 91 N. Y. App. Div. 223, 86 N. Y. Suppl. 600, holding that the requirement of the New York city charter

signed⁵⁰ and sealed.⁶¹ In some jurisdictions a tax bill authenticated by the assessor by his signature is prima facie proof that all steps have been taken to make it binding;⁵³ and affidavits annexed to the assessment roll that the same is correct have been held conclusive of the fact recited as against a collateral attack.⁵⁸

h. Review of Assessment—(i) IN GENERAL. In levying an assessment the assessors act judicially and their action has all the force and effect of a judgment.⁵⁴ Every presumption is to be taken in favor of the regularity of assessments,⁵⁵ and they will not be disturbed unless clearly excessive.⁵⁶ In some jurisdictions curative statutes have been passed which preclude reliance on any irregularity in the assessment.⁵⁷ Illegality in the assessment is not ground for setting it aside where it does not appear that the objecting taxpayer was not liable to taxation when the taxes were levied or that they exceeded the sums justly assessable against him.⁵⁸ Except where it is otherwise provided by statute,⁵⁹ there is generally no power to arbitrarily reduce or remit a particular assessment after the levy and assessment,⁵⁰ especially after the delivery of the roll to the collector.⁶¹ Where one whose property is subject only to a certain rate of taxation different from other property has no statutory remedy where the assessment is at a higher rate than is provided for by law, he may obtain relief by injunction.⁶²

(ii) STATUTORY AND CHARTER PROVISIONS—(A) General Considerations. In some jurisdictions a statutory board, which is sometimes the common council, is provided for to review the work of the assessors, either to examine individual assessments to correct errors and inequalities or to examine the assessment as an entirety to equalize assessments.⁶³ In some jurisdictions the board of review is that the assessment roll shall be delivered to the receiver of taxes on the first day of September is merely directory, and not mandatory, and a failure to follow it does not vitiate the tax.

authorized to make alterations of its own motion.⁶⁴ Failure of the taxpayer to avail himself of the remedy by presenting evidence to the board precludes his right to resort to the courts in the first instance to procure a revision of the assessment.⁶⁵

(b) Jurisdiction and Power. Such tribunals to review assessments have only the powers conferred upon them by statute.⁶⁶ Authority to equalize confers no power to determine taxability,⁶⁷ nor does mere power to equalize confer authority to raise the assessed value of all the property in the municipality a certain per cent.⁶⁸ But generally the board may increase⁶⁹ or decrease⁷⁰ the valuation of any particular property.

(c) Procedure. The procedure of the board of review must be in strict compliance with the statutory or charter provisions.⁷¹ It must act at a regular meet-

Constitutional provisions as applicable to municipal taxes.—Const. art. 3, § 18, which declares that the county commissioners' court shall constitute a board of equalizing assessments, applies to state and county taxes, and not to city taxes. *Scollard v. ing,⁷² or at a regularly adjourned meeting,⁷³ at the time and place prescribed by law and fixed by the notice given,⁷⁴ and usually notice of the sittings must be duly given.⁷⁵ So it is usually expressly provided that notice of an increase of an assessment on particular property must be given before the increase will become effectual.⁷⁶

(D) Effect of Unauthorized Alterations. An unauthorized alteration of items on an assessment roll is void;⁷⁷ but it does not invalidate the entire assessment.⁷⁸ The city council has no statutory authority to restore an assessment to the amount originally fixed by the assessor after it has been reduced by the board, although the latter acted without authority.⁷⁹

(E) Review of Acts of Board. In some jurisdictions the decisions of the board are subject to review by the courts by appeal,⁸⁰ or by certiorari.⁸¹ In some jurisdictions where the court has once confirmed a report of the board it cannot subsequently modify or amend the order of confirmation.⁸² Generally the action of the board is judicial and not subject to collateral attack,⁸³ except for want of jurisdiction,⁸⁴ or for fraud.⁸⁵

Palmer*, 42 Misc. (N. Y.) 628, 87 N. Y. Suppl. 614.

Effect of failure to have notice appear of record.—Where the records of a village council do not contain any proof of the posting of the notices of the meeting of the board of review required under Howell Annot. St. Mich. § 2930, this omission alone will not render the assessment void. Boyce v. Peterson, 84 Mich. 490, 47 N. W. 1095.

Irregularities in giving the notice which do not affect the substantial justice of the tax do not vitiate the proceedings where it is provided by the charter that irregularities not affecting the substantial justice of the tax will not vitiate it. Cramer v. Stone, 38 Wis. 259.

6. LIEN OF TAXES⁸⁶—a. Existence. Municipal taxes are liens upon the property upon which they are assessed only where they are expressly made so by statute or charter provision,⁸⁷ or by act of the municipality pursuant to authority delegated by the legislature.⁸⁸ Substantial compliance with the statutory provisions is essential to the validity of the lien.⁸⁹ When fixed it is superior to the rights of subsequent purchasers.⁹⁰

b. Accrual and Duration. The lien usually attaches at the time when the assessment roll and the warrants for collection come into the hands of the receiver or collector of taxes.⁹¹ The duration of the lien is generally fixed by statutes or charter provisions at a certain number of years,⁹² but the claim may be merged

N. W. 675 (holding that under the Omaha charter, the action of the board is not open to collateral attack except for fraud, gross injustice, or mistake, and that the charter provision that no court shall entertain any complaint that a party was authorized to make and did not make to the board nor any complaint not specified in the notice fully enough to advise the city of the exact nature thereof, nor any complaint that does not go to the equity of the tax do not apply to cases of fraud, gross injustice, or mistake); Ludlow v. Lewis, 9 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 600, 6 Ohio N. P. 513.

"Gross injustice."—Nehr. Comp. St. (1901) c. 12a, § 161, providing that the action of the board of equalization of the city of Omaha may be attacked for fraud, gross injustice, or mistake, in the use of the term "gross injustice" means an act so excessive in its nature as to deprive a citizen of his property or a part thereof without due process of law. *Wead v. into a judgment during such time and thus continue as a lien under the general statutes relating to judgments or under special statutory provisions.⁹³ In some municipalities, however, it is provided that the taxes shall constitute a lien until paid,⁹⁴ at least where certain required steps are taken from time to time.⁹⁵

c. Priority. Priority of the tax lien is often fixed by express provisions in a statute or charter.⁹⁶ In some jurisdictions the statutes give the tax lien priority over mortgages, although executed before the tax was levied;⁹⁷ but where the statute does not so provide, expressly or by necessary implication, a prior mortgage is ordinarily entitled to priority.⁹⁸

d. Discharge. A sale of land for taxes, where it is insufficient to pay all back taxes, does not discharge the lien.⁹⁹ Where municipal authorities destroy the lien of a tax lien certificate by settling with the owner of the land and accepting from him a reduced amount, an implied obligation arises that the municipality will pay the difference to the holder of the certificate.¹

7. PAYMENT²—a. In General—(i) TIME WHEN DUE. Taxes are due and payable at the time fixed by the statute, charter provisions, or ordinances.³ Where no time is fixed for the payment, the tax does not become delinquent until the council has determined by ordinance the date when it shall be paid.⁴ Municipal power to provide for the levy and collection of local taxes includes power to provide that such taxes shall become due at a different time from the general taxes.⁵

Where an action to enforce the lien is commenced before the expiration of the statutory period fixed for the duration of the lien, the lien is lost if for any reason the action abates or is dismissed; and the lien is also lost where the municipality is guilty of gross negligence in prosecuting the action in which the lien is asserted. Louisville v. Burke, 87 S. W. 269, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 896.

Confusion of goods.—The lien may be lost by the negligence of the municipality in permitting a confusion of goods so that the property on which the lien exists cannot be separated from other property belonging to the owner. Ft. Worth v. Boulware, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 76, 62 S. W. 928.

97. Macknet v. Newark, 42 N. J. L. 38 (holding that a charter provision that personal taxes shall be a lien on all the real estate of the taxpayer, and that taxes on real estate shall be a lien on the real estate assessed, notwithstanding any encumbrance thereof, taxes on real estate have priority over mortgages, but taxes on personal property of the owner of the land have no such priority); Doremus v. Cameron, 49 N. J. Eq. 1, 22 Atl. 802; Hardenbergh v. Converse, 31 N. J. Eq. 500; Public School Trustees v. Trenton, 30 N. J. Eq. 667; Barclay v. Leas, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. 314. See also Smith v. Gatewood, 3 S. C. 333.

Mortgages to state or public officers.—Such provisions do not apply to mortgages made to the state or its representatives. Jersey City v. Foster, 32 N. J. Eq. 825; Public School Trustees v. Trenton, 30 N. J. Eq. 667 [affirming 30 N. J. Eq. 618].

98. Doane v. Chittenden, 25 Ga. 103 (holding that under a provision that the tax execution shall bind the property only from the date thereof, a prior mortgage is superior to the tax); Lucking v. Ballantyne, 132 Mich. 584, 94 N. W. 8 (chattel mortgage); Ft. Worth v. Boulware, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 76, 62 S. W. 928.

Priority against other lien in case of confusion of goods.—The burden is on the city to point out the particular goods or portion of the whole stock on which its tax lien existed, and, if it has negligently permitted the confusion of such goods with goods which were subsequently purchased, and which were not subject to the tax, it cannot recover. Ft. Worth v. Boulware, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 76, 62 S. W. 928.

2. See, generally, PAYMENT; TAXATION.

3. Brunswick v. Finney, 54 Ga. 317, holding that where a tax was required by the charter to be made payable in quarterly instalments at such times as the mayor and council should direct, and the fiscal year was the same as the calendar year, the council could indulge taxpayers for the first or second quarter and make instalments payable in the second or third quarter so long as they did not make any quarterly instalment payable before each would be due under the charter.

5. Eustis v. Henrietta, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 37 S. W. 632.

In some jurisdictions the time when the taxes shall become payable and the rate of interest which shall thereafter accrue must be determined at the time the tax levy is made.⁶

(ii) MEDIUM OF PAYMENT. Municipal taxes are generally required to be paid in money,⁷ although it is sometimes provided that payment may be made in other specified property,⁸ or that the taxpayers may work out such taxes if they so elect.⁹ Except where it is otherwise provided, the municipality cannot be compelled to accept as payment a cancellation of a debt it owes to the taxpayer,¹⁰ nor can the taxpayer set up a counter-claim or set-off.¹¹

(iii) INTEREST. Except where it is otherwise specially provided,¹² interest on taxes does not begin to run until after a default in making payment.¹³ Where the municipal charter itself creates a liability for interest on unpaid city taxes, no ordinance is necessary to make such provision operative.¹⁴

(iv) POWER TO TAKE SECURITY FOR PAYMENT. Public policy does not forbid a municipality to take the taxpayer's note and mortgage for his delinquent taxes.¹⁵

Void municipal certificates.—Certificates of city indebtedness which are void as having been issued in excess of the constitutional limitation of indebtedness are not receivable in payment of taxes. Fuller v. Chicago, 89 Ill. 282.

8. New Orleans v. Jackson, 33 La. Ann. 1038; Western Town-Lot Co. v. Lane, 7 S. D. 599, 65 N. W. 17 (holding that a statute making city warrants receivable for city taxes does not restrict the use of warrants in payment of taxes to such as were issued on account of debts incurred during the year for which the taxes were assessed); Houston v. Stewart, (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 90 S. W. 49 (coupons and scrip). See also Miller v. Lynehburg, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 330.

Privilege as personal.—The privilege conferred upon particular parties to pay taxes in judgments or evidences of debt against the city does not enable other parties to claim the same privilege. Jones v. Shreveport, 28 La. Ann. 835.

When privilege terminates.—When the privilege is given of paying in coupons, warrants, or scrip, it must be exercised before the time for payment has passed. Bummel v. Houston, 68 Tex. 10, 2 S. W. 740.

9. White Sulphur Springs v. Pierce, 21 Mont. 130, 53 Pac. 103.

Warrants or certificates of indebtedness.—A city is not bound to receive its own warrants or certificates of indebtedness in payment of city taxes, it never having been authorized by law to issue corporate obligations to circulate as money. Lindsey v. Rottaken, 32 Ark. 619.

Right to receive city scrip where nothing can be collected.—But an injunction to restrain a city from receiving city scrip in payment of arrears of taxes levied to pay interest on certain bonds will be denied, where it appears that, unless such scrip is taken, the taxes cannot be collected at all. Ranger v. New Orleans, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,564, 2 Woods 128.

Rate.—A charter provision that unpaid taxes shall bear interest at the rate of eight per cent from the date they are due is not in conflict with a constitutional provision limiting the rate of interest under contracts to ten per cent, and providing that when no interest is agreed on the rate shall not exceed six per cent. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Galveston, 96 Tex. 520, 74 S. W. 537.

In the absence of charter restrictions, a city to which land is struck off at a tax-sale in default of other bidders has the power to surrender the certificates of sale to the taxpayer, and to take from him a mortgage to secure the payment of the delinquent taxes, as there is no rule of public policy which requires the city to sell such certificates of sale for cash only, or which prevents its dealing directly with the owners of the land. Buffalo v. Balcom, 134 N. Y. 532, 32 N. E. 7.

(v) PAYMENT OUT OF PROCEEDS OF JUDICIAL OR EXECUTION SALE. Except where it is otherwise provided by statute, municipal taxes are not payable out of sales of land to satisfy a debt.¹⁶

b. Refunding or Recovery of Taxes Paid—(i) *IN GENERAL.*¹⁷ The refunding of illegal or excessive taxes is often expressly provided for by statute.¹⁸ Independent of statute, the right to recover illegal taxes which have been paid has been held to exist in some cases without considering the question whether the payment was voluntary or involuntary,¹⁹ and even where the payment was voluntary.²⁰ Generally, however, if taxes, although illegal, are voluntarily paid without coercion and without mistake of fact, they cannot be recovered back;²¹ but

16. South Chester v. Broomall, 1 Del. Co. (Pa.) 58.

General statute as applicable to municipal taxes.—The code provision making it the duty of a sheriff selling property under a levy to ascertain the amount of taxes due, and pay them over to the tax-collector, has no application to taxes due to, and collectable by, a municipal corporation. State v. Vincent, 78 Ala. 233; Holling v. Thomas, 62 Ala. 4.

Where claim for taxes a prior lien.—But proceeds of property sold under execution are subject to the lien of the city for unpaid taxes. Vanarsdalen's Appeal, 3 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 463.

Statute as mandatory.—A statutory provision that the common council may at any time order the amounts erroneously assessed against and collected from any taxpayer to be refunded is mandatory. De Pauw Plate-Glass Co. v. Alexandria, 152 Ind. 443, 52 N. E. 608; Indianapolis v. McAvoy, 86 Ind. 587; Indianapolis v. Ritzinger, 24 Ind. App. 65, 56 N. E. 141.

It is within the power of the legislature to require a municipality to guarantee the return, with interest, of all money paid for void delinquent tax certificates. State v. Whittlesey, 17 Wash. 447, 50 Pac. 119.

Defenses.—Under an ordinance requiring a city to refund taxes erroneously levied, a taxpayer is not precluded from recovering by the mere fact that he paid the first installment of a tax without protest, or that he saw without protest the making of the improvement for which it was levied, he not knowing that the city intended to assess the adjacent property for the cost thereof. Robinson v. Burlington, 50 Iowa 240.

Conditions precedent.—Under a statute giving a municipal corporation ninety days either to refund an assessment which it is claimed is illegal or refuse to do so, there can be no recovery where there is nothing to indicate that a formal protest has been made or that the city council has passed on and rejected the claim. McClay v. Lincoln, 32 Nebr. 412, 49 N. W. 282.

What constitutes agreement to refund.—A city ordinance acknowledging the illegality of certain taxes, directing the issuance of certificates of payment of such taxes, and attempting to make such certificates receivable for city taxes contrary to the statute, which provides in what kind of funds taxes shall be paid, does not constitute an agreement to refund such illegal taxes. Conklin v. Springfield, 132 Ill. 420, 24 N. E. 67 [affirming 19 Ill. App. 167].

New Orleans*, 11 La. Ann. 191, holding that where plaintiff paid in error municipal taxes illegally levied for certain years, and afterward a law authorized the taxes for those years to be, and they actually were, levied, plaintiff cannot recover back to-day what he will be forced to return to-morrow.

Liability of county for amount of tax received by city see Merchants' Nat. Bank v. New York County, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 156, 5 Thoms. & C. 393 [affirmed in 62 N. Y. 629].

When collector may summarily distraint.—Where, in case a tax is not paid, the tax-collector may without suit enforce payment by levy and sale, a payment of the tax is not voluntary, so as to preclude an action to recover it back. Mills v. Hopkinsville, 11 S. W. 776, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 164.

Existence of warrants for collection.—The mere fact that the taxes were paid collectors who had warrants for collection is not sufficient proof of duress to make the payment involuntary. Chicago v. Fidelity Sav. Bank, 11 Ill. App. 165; Smith v. Readfield, 27 Me. 145. Contra, Ætna Ins. Co. v. New York, 7 N. Y. App. Div. 145, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 120 [affirmed in 153 N. Y. 331, 47 N. E. 593].

Effect of protest.—A protest at the time of payment does not itself show that the payment was not made voluntarily in the legal sense of the term. Union Ins. Co. v. Allegheny, 101 Pa. St. 250; Raleigh v. Salt Lake City, 17 Utah 130, 53 Pac. 974. See, generally, PAYMENT. Payment of taxes is voluntary where it is made at a time when the receiver of taxes could not institute proceedings to enforce the payment, although at the time of the payment a written protest was served. Baker v. Big Rapids, 65 Mich. 76, 31 N. W. 810; U. S. Trust Co. v. New York, 77 Hun (N. Y.) 182, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 344 [affirmed in 144 N. Y. 488, 39 N. E. 383]. In some jurisdictions, however, by statute or charter provision, a tax paid under protest is not a voluntary payment. Hellman v. Los Angeles, 147 Cal. 653, 82 Pac. 313. See, generally, TAXATION.

24. Osborn v. Danvers, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 98. See also Watson v. Princeton, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 599, holding that where one is taxed, and pays more than his due proportion of a town tax, in consequence of the omission of the assessors to tax other persons their due proportion, he cannot maintain an action against the town for money had and received to recover back any part of the tax so paid. And see, generally, TAXATION.

Where there is one entire assessment on a person in a representative capacity, and he is legally liable for a portion of the tax thus assessed as the representative of certain persons, but not for another part as the representative of other persons, the excess constitutes an overvaluation for which his sole remedy is by an application to the tax officers for an abatement. Bourne v. Boston, 2 Gray (Mass.) 494.

25. Indianapolis v. Patterson, 112 Ind. 344, 14 N. E. 551; Dietrich v. New York, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 421. But see Patterson v. Philadelphia, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. 626, holding that a voluntary payment of taxes made without duress and without protest or objection cannot be recovered, although there was a mistake in the estimate of the amount of land on which the taxes were assessed. See, generally, TAXATION.

Non-resident's ignorance of law.—Where a non-resident pays taxes unlawfully assessed on property owned by him in New York, in ignorance of the New York law, his mistake is one of fact, as non-residents are not presumed to know the law, as in the case of residents. Ætna Ins. Co. v. New York, 7 N. Y. App. Div. 145, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 120 [affirmed in 153 N. Y. 331, 47 N. E. 593].

Ignorance that property was exempt.—A payment of taxes in ignorance of the fact that the property was exempt from taxation is involuntary, and may be recovered by the taxpayer. Barney v. New York, 78 Hun (N. Y.) 337, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 175 [affirmed in 146 N. Y. 364, 41 N. E. 88].

(iii) ACTIONS.²⁸ It has been held that the essential elements of an action to recover taxes paid are (1) a void tax, (2) payment under compulsion, and (3) payment by the collector into the treasury; and the absence of any of these elements is fatal to the action against the municipality.²⁹ A taxpayer may sue either the officer who illegally collected the money or the municipality which illegally received it.³⁰ Where the action is against the municipality the remedy is assumpsit for money had and received,³¹ and in such action the liability is limited to the amount of the payment with interest.³² The action must be brought within the time fixed by the statutes of limitations applicable thereto.³³ Whether the claim must be presented to the municipality before action is brought depends upon the terms of the particular statutes or charter provisions, the action generally being considered as ex delicto rather than ex contractu.³⁴

8. COLLECTION AND ENFORCEMENT — a. In General. The right of a municipality to collect taxes depends primarily upon its authority to levy and impose taxes.³⁵ Tax-collectors, after the assessment roll or tax warrant is delivered to them, have authority to receive taxes and to take the steps prescribed by statute or charter provisions to enforce them after they become delinquent.³⁶ But before taxes

Seymour*, 30 Conn. 394, holding that where a tax has been legally laid and assessed, but has been collected by proceedings that were irregular and invalid, the taxpayer cannot recover the money back from the town in such an action.

³² Raleigh v. Salt Lake City, 17 Utah 130, 53 Pac. 974. See also Torrey v. Millbury, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 64.

Interest.—The right to recover includes interest from the time of payment if paid under protest, and from time of demand if without protest; but interest is not recoverable on the legal taxes subject only to partial abatement by reason of overrating. Boott Cotton Mills v. Lowell, 159 Mass. 383, 34 N. E. 367.

³³ Covington v. Voskotter, 80 Ky. 219 (special statute); Raleigh v. Salt Lake City, 17 Utah 130, 53 Pac. 974 (two years).

Where money a trust fund.—Where a town collected taxes from a railroad to pay interest on bonds which turned out to be void, the money became a trust fund, and hence limitation did not run against a right to recover it back. Aurora v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 19 Ill. App. 360.

General statute as applicable to municipal taxes.—The statute providing that taxes due the state must be paid and, if deemed illegal or unjust, suit must be brought to recover them back within thirty days, has no application to taxes paid to a city or county.

Eau Claire*, 56 Wis. 168, 14 N. W. 10 (holding that a provision that no action shall be maintained against the city "upon any claim or demand" until presentation, etc., referred only to claims arising upon contract and not to one growing out of the illegal collection of taxes); Ruggles v. Fond du Lac, 53 Wis. 436, 10 N. W. 565 (holding that an action for the recovery of taxes wrongfully collected is not an action on contract, within the meaning of a city charter prohibiting the maintenance of an action against the city on contract until the claim has been presented to the city council). But see Mead v. Lansing, 56 Mich. 601, 23 N. W. 444, holding that under a charter provision that the council shall audit and allow "all accounts chargeable against the city" an action to recover taxes paid under protest cannot be maintained before a claim for the refunding thereof has been presented to the city council for its allowance.

In Rhode Island, the statute providing that claims against a town for money due "for any matter, cause or thing whatsoever" shall be presented to the town council before suit, embraces restitution of an illegal tax. Fish v. Higbee, 22 R. I. 223, 47 Atl. 212.

Back taxes.—Under a statute authorizing cities to collect back taxes, the collection of which had been defeated, where the city was unable to collect municipal taxes levied for previous years because of irregularity in the mode of procedure, the fact that such back taxes were not then needed, and that they would not be applied to particular corporate will become delinquent so as to authorize resort to measures to collect them, it is generally provided that a demand or certain notices must be given.³⁷ The particular officer or officers who are authorized to collect the taxes is governed wholly by statutory and charter provisions,³⁸ as are the fees to which they are entitled.³⁹ Except where it is forbidden by statute or charter provision, a municipality may make a contract with any person for the collection of any of its taxes,⁴⁰ and is liable like any other contracting party for breach thereof;⁴¹ but where it is the duty of a particular city officer to collect taxes, a contract made with any other person to collect them has been held ultra vires.⁴² The collector must pay over or account for taxes collected,⁴³ and the sureties on his bond are liable for his failure so to do.⁴⁴

The duty of searching for secreted property is not imposed upon the tax officers of a city, and therefore a city may, under the general power to levy and collect taxes upon all property subject to taxation, contract with a private person to search for property secreted and omitted from the tax duplicate. Richmond v. Dickinson, 155 Ind. 345, 58 N. E. 260.

41. Lafferranderie v. New Orleans, 3 La. 246, holding that where a municipal corporation sells the right to receive a tax which has been illegally imposed and cannot be collected it is responsible in damages to the purchaser to the amount of the revenue which he was unable to collect in consequence of the illegality of the tax so imposed and sold. Compare Hiestand v. New Orleans, 14 La. Ann. 330, holding that the common council has the right at any time to change or repeal a resolution conferring such power, with the sole condition that the city shall be liable for any compensation earned under and in pursuance of the resolution before its repeal.

42. Ft. Wayne v. Lehr, 88 Ind. 62; Gurley v. New Orleans, 41 La. Ann. 75, 5 So. 659, holding that a contract by a city for the collection of taxes for a remuneration is ultra vires when the municipal corporation relieves one of its officers from the duty of collection, which forms part of his functions, without additional pay, and intrusts it to another officer, or even to an individual, under terms which are onerous, and may be repudiated by the corporation.

43. Nashville v. Knight, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 700.

But a clerk or deputy is not liable to the municipality but only to his principal. Snapp v. Com., 82 Ky. 173.

What constitutes final settlement.—An informal settlement by a tax-collector with the city, made upon a statement of the accounts furnished by the collector himself, and without any examination of his books, certain items being omitted, is not a final settlement. Nashville v. Knight, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 700.

Opening accounts.—A fiduciary relation exists between a tax-collector and the municipal corporation by which he is elected or appointed; and the least evidence of bad faith on his part, or of the existence of errors in the settlement of his accounts, is sufficient to open such accounts. Nashville v. Knight, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 700.

The borough auditors are not authorized to settle the accounts of collectors of the borough taxes. Girardville v. Kiehl, 2 Leg. Rec. (Pa.) 260.

44. Delker v. Owensboro, 61 S. W. 362, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1777, holding that street assessments are "taxes," within the statute making it the duty of the tax-collector of a city to collect "all taxes" levied by the city; and the sureties in the tax-collector's bond are liable for such assessments collected by him.

Common-law bond.—The sureties of the collector are liable for breach of his bond as a common-law bond, although it is not good as a statutory bond. Delker v. Owensboro, 61 S. W. 362, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1777.

Who may sue.—Where the bond is payable to the state, the municipality cannot sue upon it. House v. Dallas, 96 Tex. 594, 74 S. W. 901.

b. Authority to Compromise. Independent of statutory provisions, it has been held that a city may compromise a claim for taxes,⁴⁵ as by accepting a deed of land for a road.⁴⁶ But under constitutional or statutory provision providing that the legislature has no power to authorize a municipality to release or extinguish in whole or in part the indebtedness or liability of any person or corporation to the municipality, it is held that after the assessment rolls have passed from the hands of the assessors into the hands of the collector, the municipality has no power to compromise a claim for taxes;⁴⁷ and a municipality forbidden by its charter to compromise municipal taxes cannot ratify an unauthorized compromise made by another.⁴⁸

c. Modes of Collection in General. The methods of collecting unpaid taxes, as fixed by statute, charter provisions, and ordinances, vary to a considerable extent in different states and municipalities.⁴⁹ The ordinary modes of collection are (1) by distraint,⁵⁰ (2) by action to recover a personal judgment for the tax,⁵¹ (3) by a summary sale of land on which the taxes are a lien,⁵² or (4) by an action to enforce a lien on land for the unpaid taxes.⁵³ The statutes in some jurisdictions authorize summary proceedings for the sale of property in general for unpaid taxes,⁵⁴ and such provisions have been held applicable to taxes delinquent before the statute was passed as well as to those becoming delinquent thereafter;⁵⁵ but the municipality has no right to summarily sell property for unpaid taxes except where power to do so is delegated by the legislature either expressly or by necessary implication.⁵⁶ In some jurisdictions an execution against the property in general

Procedure same as in case of state taxes.—

Where, subsequent to a granting of plaintiff's charter, which authorized its tax-collector to proceed to collect its taxes in the same manner as the sheriff could collect state taxes, the authority of sheriffs was increased, the authority of plaintiff's tax-collector was likewise increased. Wilmington v. Sprunt, 114 N. C. 310, 19 S. E. 348.

Collection of tax on city securities.—Where a city taxes its own stock, payment may be enforced by deducting the amount of the tax from interest due on the stock. Jenkins v. Charleston, 5 S. C. 393, 23 Am. Rep. 14.

Repeal of statutes see Bond v. Hiestand, 20 La. Ann. 139; State v. Tufts, (Mo. 1891) 15 S. W. 954; Kansas City v. Payne, 71 Mo. 159; Mattes v. Ruth, 1 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 311; Goodbar v. Memphis, 113 Tenn. 20, 81 S. W. 1061; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Galveston, 96 Tex. 520, 74 S. W. 537. Where the provisions of a city charter as to the collection of taxes conflict with those of the general tax law thereafter passed, the provisions of the city charter are not repealed, in the absence of express words for that purpose in the general law. Stonington Sav. Bank v. Davis, 14 N. J. Eq. 286.

50. Wise v. Eastham, 30 Ind. 133, holding that delivery of the tax duplicate and warrant is a condition precedent to the right to seize and sell property in order to enforce payment of taxes.

Condition precedent.—To preserve the right of distress, charter provisions in some cities require the delinquent lists to be sent to the collector at least once a year. Covington Gaslight Co. v. Covington, 84 Ky. 94, 2 S. W. 326, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 515.

Railroad taxes.—Payment of taxes imposed on the property of a railroad company within the limits of a town for municipal purposes can only be enforced in equity, and not by seizure and sale of the company's cars. Elizabethtown, etc., R. Co. v. Elizabethtown, 12 Bush (Ky.) 233.

Tax against public utility company.—Where a corporation, the functions of which are to supply water to a city, refuses to pay its taxes, its property cannot be seized and sold by a collecting officer, as the property should not be so dealt with as to deprive the public of water. Louisville Water Co. v. Hamilton, 81 Ky. 517. So where a company is under contract to furnish a city gas, de-

of the taxpayer may be issued in the first instance,⁵⁷ while in other jurisdictions a recovery by motion has been authorized.⁵⁸ So, in some municipalities, collection may be enforced by garnishing any one indebted to the delinquent taxpayer.⁵⁹ Arrest for non-payment of a tax is not authorized except where power so to do is expressly conferred by the legislature.⁶⁰ Where the tax is against the estate of a decedent it is sometimes provided that collection may be enforced by presenting to the court a brief statement showing the fact and amount of such delinquency and the issuance of an order to show cause.⁶¹

d. Action to Recover Personal Judgment—(1) RIGHT OF ACTION. In most municipalities power is conferred upon them, either by statute or charter provisions, to sue for recovery of a personal judgment for unpaid taxes.⁶² Independent linquent taxes due from it cannot be collected by distress if the property seized is necessary in supplying gas; but, by a proceeding in equity, the company may be required to pay the taxes into court, and, failing to do so, the court may place the property in the hands of a receiver. Covington Gaslight Co. v. Covington, 84 Ky. 94.

Goods of a tenant cannot be sold for taxes due by the owner except where power to do so is expressly conferred. McAfee v. Bumm, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 157.

Resort to personalty first.—Where the taxes on personalty and realty are a general lien on all the real property of the taxpayer, such real estate may, under some statutes, be sold for taxes on personal property before resorting to such personal property. State v. Newark, 42 N. J. L. 38. See also Thompson v. Carroll, 22 How. (U. S.) 422, 16 L. ed. 387.

57. Miller v. Brooks, 120 Ga. 232, 47 S. E. 646, holding that an execution for municipal taxes, not describing any particular property, but simply directing the seizure of the goods and chattels, lands and tenements, of the estate of A J M, is void, and a purchaser at a sale under the levy of such an execution obtains no title.

W. 467; Jefferson v. Curry, 77 Mo. 230; Rochester v. Bloss, 185 N. Y. 42, 77 N. E. 749, 6 L. R. A. N. S. 694 [reversing 100 N. Y. App. Div. 125, 91 N. Y. Suppl. 642] (holding that the original tax only, and not percentages and interest, can be recovered by such suit); Brunner v. Galveston, 97 Tex. 93, 76 S. W. 428; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Galveston, 96 Tex. 520, 74 S. W. 537; Houston v. Dooley, (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 89 S. W. 777.

The legislature may authorize a city to collect taxes by suit; and where this remedy is given, it will not be held to exclude a summary mode of collection already provided by statute nor will it be limited to cases in which the summary mode may have proved ineffectual, unless the statute so provides. Greer v. Covington, 83 Ky. 410, 2 S. W. 323.

Authority granted by ordinance.—Where the charter of a city provides that the collection of taxes shall be made as may be provided by ordinance, and an ordinance is enacted providing for the recovery of delinquent taxes by suit, an action may be maintained by such city to recover any delinquent tax due to it. Albany Mut. Bldg. Assoc. v. Laramie, 10 Wyo. 54, 65 Pac. 1011.

The fact that a void sale has been made of the property will not preclude the municipality from resorting to a suit to enforce the tax. Henrietta v. Eustis, 87 Tex. 14, 28 S. W. 619.

Associate counsel for a city may continue to represent it in the suit after the city attorney has resigned. Wilmington v. Stolter, 122 N. C. 395, 30 S. E. 12.

Dismissal of action.—Under charter provisions authorizing an order dismissing such an action where defendant has an equitable defense, moving papers which simply denied that defendant was liable for an assessment for the year in question, and stated that he had never before been taxed on his personalty, and received no notice of the assessment until long after the time for correcting the assessment rolls, and had no personal property subject to taxation, but not stating that defendant was unable to pay his tax, show no ground for dismissing the action. New York v. Holzderber, 44 Misc. (N. Y.) 509, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 63.

Power of attorney to bind a city by agreement that action abide result of another suit.—An agreement by a city attorney that a suit involving the right of the city to collect a tax shall abide the result of another suit to which the city is not a party, and of which it has no control, does not bind the city, as the power of taxation is a sovereign of statute, there is a considerable conflict of authority as to whether taxes constitute a debt which may be enforced by a personal action.⁶³ In some jurisdictions it is held that a municipality cannot sue to collect a tax due it except where it is expressly authorized so to do,⁶⁴ while in other jurisdictions the right to sue is the same as in the case of any other debt owing to the municipality.⁶⁵ A statutory remedy other than a personal action has been held to be exclusive where no personal action is provided for by statute,⁶⁶ although there is authority to the contrary.⁶⁷ Where the statutes or charter provisions give a remedy by action and also other remedies, such remedies are generally held to be cumulative.⁶⁸

(ii) CONDITIONS PRECEDENT. Conditions precedent fixed by statute or ordinance must be complied with before bringing suit to recover taxes.⁶⁹ Efforts to collect the tax by distress are not, in some jurisdictions, a condition precedent in an action to recover the tax.⁷⁰ A resolution is usually sufficient as a basis for the institution of the action.⁷¹

(iii) *COMPROMISE OF SUIT.*⁷² The compromise of a suit to recover taxes has been held within the authority of a municipality,⁷³ although under some statutes it has been held that neither the common council nor the city attorney has power to compromise claims for taxes after suit brought.⁷⁴

(iv) DEFENSES—(A) In General. It is no defense that the taxpayer is not benefited by the tax,⁷⁵ nor that it is being improperly expended,⁷⁶ nor that the power, and cannot be lost in this way. Frankfort v. Frankfort Deposit Bank, 60 S. W. 19, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1384, 108 Ky. 766, 57 S. W. 787, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 466.

Where a compromise of a claim for city taxes was void, and not merely voidable, for want of power on the part of the council to make such a compromise, it was not necessary for the city to tender to the taxpayer the amount received thereunder in order to enable it to enforce its claim by suit, defendant being entitled to credit merely by the sum paid. *Louisville v. Tax to acquire lighting plant.—A taxpayer cannot defeat the collection of a tax levied by a city for the purpose of acquiring a lighting plant by showing that the city intends to use the plant to furnish lights to private consumers, the taxpayer having his remedy in case the city should use the plant in an unlawful manner. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 Ill. 541, 66 N. E. 148.

assessment is illegal or excessive unless the facts are such as to warrant an injunction,⁷⁷ nor that the bonds for which the tax was levied were irregularly issued,⁷⁸ nor that there were irregularities in the appointment or proceedings of the board of review.⁷⁹ The power of a de facto municipal corporation to levy taxes for duly authorized municipal purposes cannot be collaterally attacked in a proceeding to collect the tax.⁸⁰ Where the validity of the tax depends upon the population of the city, the taxpayer cannot raise the question whether the city had the requisite number of inhabitants except by a quo warranto proceeding.⁸¹ A purchaser of land may set up as a defense a certificate by the register of unpaid taxes that he found none against the land purchased, where he relied thereon.⁸² A defense that defendant was not an inhabitant of the municipality in which he was taxed at the time the tax was assessed but had removed therefrom, where unsuccessful, does not preclude a defense on the ground that he has not removed from the municipality since the tax was assessed.⁸³ An assessment of certain property as belonging to one other than the owner is no defense to the assessment as a whole where statutory provisions as to the raising of such an objection have not been complied with.⁸⁴ To prove the invalidity of the tax it is not sufficient to show that none of the ordinances authorizing the issuance of bonds contained provisions for a tax therefor, where it is not clearly shown that such provisions were not made at the time the bonded debt was created.⁸⁵

(b) Estoppel to Urge. A taxpayer may be estopped to deny the validity of the tax,⁸⁶ as by his silence while work is going on to pay for which the tax is levied.⁸⁷ But payment of taxes in past years does not estop the taxpayer to set up the defense that the property is not taxable.⁸⁸ So the reduction of the assessment, where it is not shown that the taxpayer asked for the reduction or that he appeared before the board of review does not estop him from questioning the validity of the assessment roll.⁸⁹

(v) TIME TO SUE AND LIMITATIONS. In some jurisdictions the general statutes of limitations do not apply to a suit by the municipality to recover taxes, and lapse of time will not bar the action, although it may raise a rebuttable presumption of payment.⁹⁰ Generally, however, the time within which suit must be brought is limited either by special statutory or charter provision or by general statutes held applicable thereto.⁹¹ A tax to pay a judgment may be sued on after payment of the judgment,⁹² and one levied by a military authority, after the belligerent occupation has ceased.⁹³

(VI) PARTIES.⁹⁴ Generally the municipality may sue in its own name.⁹⁵ But under some statutory provisions suit must be brought in the name of the state,⁹⁶ or county.⁹⁷ A taxpayer may, in an action against him for taxes to pay bonds, impeach the validity of the bonds without making bondholders parties.⁹⁸

was duly assessed for taxation authorizes proof of the assessment.⁵ Where the tax bill is prima facie evidence of the correctness thereof and that all proper steps were taken, the petition need not allege the publication of the ordinance levying the tax, it being sufficient to allege the facts which the statute makes prima facie evidence of the right to recover.⁶

(B) *Answer.*⁷ Affirmative defenses must be specially pleaded,⁸ and an answer denying any knowledge or information as to the allegations relating to matters of public record is frivolous.⁹ A plea that defendant "has no information sufficient to form a belief" as to whether certain ordinances were ever published, as "required by law," is bad.¹⁰ A plea in abatement that the state and county are necessary parties, in order that their respective tax liens may be marshaled, is properly overruled where it does not appear that the state and county taxes are unpaid.¹¹

(IX) PROOF—(A) Presumptions and Burden of Proof. Certain presumptions will be indulged in favor of the validity of the tax,¹² and ordinarily the burden of proof is on defendant where he relies upon the invalidity of, or defects in, the tax.¹³

(B) *Admissibility and Objections.*¹⁴ The tax rolls are not competent to prove the levy of a tax, but such proof must be made by proving the city ordinance levying the tax.¹⁵ An objection to a certificate or tax bill sued on that it was not such as the law contemplated is too general.¹⁶

(C) Sufficiency to Make Prima Facie Case. Generally, by charter or statutory provisions, the municipality makes out a prima facie case by introducing the tax roll or a certified statement of delinquent taxes in evidence.¹⁷ But, except where it is otherwise provided, the establishment of a valid assessment roll is necessary.¹⁸ Where a valid roll is established it is sometimes conclusive of plaintiff's right to recover and not open to attack by defendant.¹⁹ If there is no evidence to show any delinquent tax against defendant, the municipality cannot recover.²⁰

(x) *JUDGMENT, ENFORCEMENT, AND REVIEW.*²¹ Where an action by the municipality to recover unpaid taxes is authorized, a personal judgment for the amount of the tax may be rendered,²² bearing interest from its date,²³ in addition to any right to subject the property of the taxpayer to a foreclosure of the lien for the amount of the taxes.²⁴ In a joint action against numerous delinquents, a general judgment against all is permissible.²⁵ Where a judgment inadvertently entered by default is void, it does not affect the validity of a judgment properly rendered at a subsequent time.²⁶ Where a part of the taxes were unauthorized recovery may be had for the authorized taxes.²⁷ Asking for excessive relief, as where a lien is sought, will not prevent recovery as in an ordinary action,²⁸ but the judgment must correspond with the pleadings and proof.²⁹ Interest is generally allowed in the judgment.³⁰ An execution sale under such judgment does not divest the title of the owner where he was not a party to the suit in which the sale was made and the sale was made after the return-day of the writ had expired, and the constable failed to return it and retain a copy as required by law.³¹ The acceptance of taxes by a clerk according to a judgment reducing their amount, in ignorance of the fact that an appeal had been taken from the judgment, is not such an assent to the judgment by the municipality as to authorize a dismissal of the appeal.³²

(xi) COSTS AND FEES. The costs and fees in proceedings to collect taxes are generally expressly fixed by statute,³³ or by ordinance under legislative authorization.³⁴ Usually attorney's fees are not allowable.³⁵

municipal taxes imposed thereon is generally provided for by statute, charter provision, or ordinance;³⁶ and such authority conferred upon the municipality makes the sale mandatory and not discretionary.³⁷ However, real property cannot be sold for unpaid taxes thereon except where such power has been conferred upon the municipality, either expressly or by necessary implication.³⁸ The power to sell is not to be inferred from mere power to levy and collect taxes,³⁹ but is necessarily implied from charter power to provide for redemption of land sold for taxes,⁴⁰ or from power to collect taxes in the same manner as township officers authorized to sell real estate for unpaid taxes.⁴¹ The municipality may be estopped, however, to sell because of a compromise made by a city officer and ratified by the municipality.⁴²

(ii) RESTRAINING SALE.⁴³ A sale for taxes may be enjoined where it is unauthorized,⁴⁴ as where the tax is illegal.⁴⁵

Second sale.—A city may maintain an action to collect and enforce a lien for taxes, although the land taxed has been previously sold to the city for such taxes, where no tax deed has been executed and delivered, and the sale is probably invalid. McCrary v. Comanche, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 34 S. W. 679. But where property was sold under a municipal claim for curbing, and the duty of the city officials was to discharge out of the proceeds a lien for taxes on the land, but instead they gave a receipt for money on account of the curbing, the property cannot be subjected to another sale for such taxes, since the fact that a lien existed for the taxes and that a judgment had been obtained in the suit on the lien must be presumed to have been within the knowledge of the city officials. Philadelphia v. Lewis, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 135.

Abandonment of suit.—A suit brought for the collection of city taxes is considered as abandoned when the city, proceeding extrajudicially under statutory provisions, advertises the property for the payment of taxes due thereon, and cannot serve as a basis for an injunction to arrest the advertisement and sale on the ground of lis pendens. Carre v. Jacksonville, 37 Fla. 342, 20 So. 538, holding, however, that a suit cannot be brought to foreclose a tax lien for a gross sum assessed against several lots in a block, upon the aggregate valuation and assessment of them made by the city authorities, without a return of the lots as one tract or parcel of land by the owner.

Ch. 673, holding that where the prior sale of land for taxes, at which the municipal corporation became the purchaser, was invalid, the municipal corporation may, by treating the judgments of condemnation and other proceedings as void, sue in equity to enforce its lien for all the unpaid taxes.

Texas.—Grace v. Bonham, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 161, 63 S. W. 158; McCrary v. Comanche, (Civ. App. 1896) 34 S. W. 679, holding that a city may maintain an action to collect and enforce a lien for taxes, although the land taxed has been previously sold to the city for such taxes, where no tax deed has been executed and delivered, and the sale is probably invalid.

Washington.—Port Townsend v. Eisenbeis, 28 Wash. 533, 68 Pac. 1045.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 2126.

Action in name of state.—Where a city charter provided that a tax should be a lien on the real estate and afterward a general statute was passed providing that there should be a lien in favor of the state for city taxes, a suit for city taxes to enforce the lien should be brought in the name of the state. State v. Van Every, 75 Mo. 530.

Pleading.—A bill or petition to sell land for taxes must show a valid levy and assessment, describe the land, and state the name of the owner, if known or ascertainable, the amount due, and the non-payment thereof after due notice. Parker v. Jacksonville, 37 Fla. 342, 20 So. 538. Where a bill filed to enforce a general lien for an aggregate sum for municipal taxes upon several distinct city lots does not show whether the assessment upon said lots was made upon a return of the same for taxation by the owner, who listed the several lots in question as one tract or parcel of land, or whether they were listed, valued, and assessed by the city authorities in the absence of such return, it cannot be construed as alleging a return or listing of the property for taxation by the owner. But allegations as to assessment of the property "that upon the parcels of land so owned by the defendant, the complainant, for the year 1890, duly assessed and levied a tax for the sum of three dollars and thirty cents," are a sufficient averment of the manner of making the assessment of the property. Parker v. Jacksonville, supra. Where the land is described sufficiently to identify it, and defendant could not have been misled, the description will support a judgment. Grace v. Bonham, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 161, 63 S. W. 158.

A return of nulla bona upon a distress warrant is a condition precedent in some jurisdictions. Parker v. Jacksonville, 37 Fla. 342, 20 So. 538.

Judgment.—Defendant in an action to subject property to the payment of taxes cannot complain that the judgment describes the property more fully than it is described in the petition. Powell v. Louisville, 52 S. W. 798, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 554. When lots are ordered to be sold for the payment of taxes due to the corporation, the judgment condemning the lots for sale should be in the name of the corporation; and a judgment in the name of the state is erroneous. Shoalwater v. Armstrong, 9 Humphr. (Tenn.) 217.

Costs.—Where it is impracticable to tax the costs pro rata against various pieces of property on which a tax lien is foreclosed, it is proper to charge the whole amount of costs against all the property, thereby making each bear an equal share of the burden. Cave v. Houston, 65 Tex. 619.

50. Philadelphia v. Merritt, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 433; Pittsburg v. Magee, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 264.

Amount due.—Real estate cannot be sold where the amount of the taxes due is less than the specified sum fixed by statute. Bole v. McKelvy, 189 Pa. St. 505, 42 Atl. 42; Hunter v. Jones, 31 Pittsb. Leg. J. N. S. (Pa.) 251.

Process see Philadelphia v. Merritt, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 433.

Opening judgment.—The judgment ordering a sale will not be opened except for good cause shown why the taxes should not be paid. Philadelphia v. Unknown Owner, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 203, holding that it is no ground for opening a judgment entered on a tax lien in the city of Philadelphia that the property against which the taxes were assessed embraces two or more lots belonging to different persons, and the mere fact that the lien of the taxes for certain of the years had expired before the issue of the scire application for judgment of sale without formal pleadings.⁵¹ Where the sale is summary it must be in strict compliance with the statutes.⁵² The action must be brought,⁵³ or the sale made,⁵⁴ within the time fixed by statute. It has been held that the sale cannot be set aside in equity as invalid because the amount of the taxes was excessive;⁵⁵ but where the sale is for an entire sum and the fees charged and included in the sale are greater than are allowed by law the sale is void.⁵⁶ Except where expressly authorized,⁵⁷ a sale of land for taxes is void where it facias is insufficient, since the taxes may still be due, although the lien is gone, and may be collectable from the owner or from the property if yet in the same hands.

51. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co. v. People, 161 Ill. 132, 43 N. E. 691 (holding that where a city tax is attacked on the ground that, at the time of its levy and extension, no ordinance authorizing its levy had been passed, proof that the ordinance was filed with the county clerk after the extension of the tax is not sufficient to prove that the tax was extended before passage of the ordinance); Hutchinson v. Self, 152 Ill. 542, 39 N. E. 27.

Objections on application for judgment.—On application for judgment of sale an objection that the purported tax levy ordinance was not certified by the county clerk is broad enough to allow the point to be raised that it was not a certified copy of the tax levy ordinance. People v. Kankakee, etc., R. Co., 218 Ill. 588, 75 N. E. 1063. Where the validity of a city tax is questioned below on the ground that it is excessive, and the ordinance is introduced merely for the purpose of showing an excessive rate, the tax cannot be attacked on appeal because the ordinance was defective. Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. People, 201 Ill. 351, 66 N. E. 293. The burden of proving an appropriation ordinance invalid because it purports to be for the fiscal year subsequent to the one in which it was passed is upon the objector, and if he fails to introduce such ordinance in evidence, relying upon proof as to its substance, and the levy ordinance, which was in evidence, recites that the appropriation was made for the "current" fiscal year, the objection is not sustained by the proof. People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 189 Ill. 397, 59 N. E. 946.

United States.—Washington v. Pratt, 8 Wheat. 681, 5 L. ed. 714.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 2126.

Misdescription of property.—A sale of a lot for city taxes is invalid where the description of the lot in the order of sale made by the common council gives boundaries which include another lot not owned by the person for whose taxes the sale was ordered, the city charter providing that, before sale of land for taxes, an order shall be made by the common council, and entered on the records, "particularly describing the premises to be sold." Erschler v. Lennox, 11 N. Y. App. Div. 511, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 805.

Sale for taxes of previous years.—Under a municipal charter provision that, on the first day of May, all property in default for taxes should be then subject to execution sale, the proper city official has authority to issue executions for municipal taxes due the city on assessments regularly made for previous years, where there has been a failure to issue such executions during the years for which the assessments were made. Du Bignon v. Brunswick, 106 Ga. 317, 32 S. E. 102.

Name of owner.—In a sale for taxes due New Orleans by non-resident owners of lots, the owner's name must in all cases be given and published in the proceedings. The statement that the owner is unknown cannot make such a sale valid. Carmichael v. Aikin, 13 La. 205.

Excess in amount.—A summary sale is void where there is an excess of one dollar charged, taken in connection with such other irregularities as failure to comply with the requirements to accompany the roll with an affidavit as to its correctness, to carry out in separate columns the amount issued against each owner, to sell in the alphabetical order of the names of the owners, and to offer to sell to the person who would take the least quantity and pay all taxes against the owner. Gove v. Tacoma, 34 Wash. 434, 76 Pac. 73.

Postponing sale.—Where it is the duty of the marshal to conduct the sale, the city clerk has no authority to postpone the sale or grant other indulgence. Montford v. Allen, 111 Ga. 18, 36 S. E. 305.

Time of sale.—A sale made on a day other than the one fixed by law is void. Brown v. Sharp, (Miss. 1902) 31 So. 712; O'Flinn v. McInnis, 80 Miss. 125, 31 So. 584.

includes costs.⁵⁸ On failure of the purchaser to complete the purchase, the land should be resold.⁵⁹

(B) Notice. Notice to the owner or agent, as provided for by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, either by personal service, by mail, or by advertisement, is an essential prerequisite to a valid tax-sale.⁶⁰ It is not necessary, under some statutes, to show that notice by mail was actually received,⁶¹ although it must be shown that it was mailed to the owner if that is the method provided.⁶² If posting or publication is required, it must appear that the notice was given as many times,⁶³ and for as long a period,⁶⁴ as is required by law; and that, if the publication was in a newspaper, it was in an authorized paper.⁶⁵ It must also appear that the notice contained the matter required by the statute or ordinance.⁶⁶

(C) Mode of Sale. The sale must be at public auction.⁶⁷ In most jurisdictions the municipality is only authorized to sell the land in fee,⁶⁸ but in some jurisdictions a sale of the land to the municipality cannot be for a longer term than a specified number of years.⁶⁹ Under some statutes a sale to the municipality for a term of years does not exhaust its power to sell in fee if at the time of the subsequent sale it is still the purchaser for years.⁷⁰ The general rule is that only as much of the land of one proprietor may be sold as will bring enough to satisfy his entire delinquency.⁷¹

(IV) *PURCHASE BY MUNICIPALITY.*⁷² A municipality has no power to buy in realty for taxes,⁷³ unless it is expressly authorized so to do;⁷⁴ or it has general authority to purchase land for governmental purposes.⁷⁵ When so authorized to Strict compliance with statute.—A provision of the city charter fixing the time for giving notice of a municipal tax-sale must be strictly complied with, and in this respect municipal tax-sales are to be distinguished from tax-sales in pursuance of the general laws of the state. Montford v. Allen, 111 Ga. 18, 36 S. E. 305.

Notice to agent.—Under an ordinance providing that "where real estate is levied on, it shall be the duty of the marshal to give the owner, or the tenant in possession if the owner is unknown, a written notice of such levy five days before the sale," a sale of taxes of the land of a non-resident who has a resident agent who is known to the municipal officers as the owner's agent is void, if notice is not given to the agent. *McPhee v. purchase for its own security, it will hold as trustee for itself and the state;⁷⁶ and, by statute, it may generally assign its own interest under such sale to one who will repay the amount of its bid and interest.⁷⁷

(v) RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF PURCHASERS. Sales of land for municipal taxes are generally governed by the rule caveat emptor.⁷⁸ Ordinarily the purchaser cannot recover his purchase-money because of defects in the proceedings,⁷⁹ although such as to invalidate the sale,⁸⁰ except where the right to recover is expressly conferred by statute.⁸¹ Statutes limiting the time within which an action may be commenced to avoid the sale of property for taxes have been held not applicable to an action by the tax-sale purchaser against the former owner,⁸² nor, in any event, where the deed is void on its face.⁸³ Summary proceedings for possession instituted by the purchaser must be in strict compliance with the statute.⁸⁴ After the expiration of the period limited for redemption, the purchaser may compel a conveyance to be executed to him.⁸⁵ Where a statute regulating the sale of lands leased from the state provides that only the title of the lessee or his assignee shall pass by the sale, the provision cannot be changed by an ordinance.⁸⁶

Terms of sale.—Where pursuant to a city charter, property sold for unpaid taxes is, in default of bidders, struck off to the city, the rights acquired by the city may be sold by it, and it may sell to the original owner. There is no rule of public policy requiring such a sale to be for cash, and in the absence of any provision of the charter requiring it the sale may be upon credit, with such security as in the exercise of good faith and good judgment the common council may deem for the best interests of the city. *Buffalo v. Purchaser as charged with notice of existing liens.—A purchaser at a tax-sale is charged with notice of all existing liens thereon for unpaid prior assessments. Bell v. New York, 66 N. Y. App. Div. 578, 73 N. Y. Suppl. 298.

79. Lynde v. Melrose, 10 Allen (Mass.) 49.

In the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, money paid by a purchaser of real estate at a sale for the non-payment of city taxes cannot be recovered back. Indianapolis v. Langsdale, 29 Ind. 486.

Fraud of collector.—In an action to recover back the purchase-money paid by the purchaser of land at a tax-sale, on the ground of fraudulent representations of the collector, the fact that the town received from the collector who sold the land the note given for the purchase-money does not show that the town had such connection with the fraud as to render it liable for the purchase-money to the purchaser. Treat v. Orono, 26 Me. 217.

80. Logansport v. Humphrey, 84 Ind. 467.

81. Gove v. Tacoma, 34 Wash. 434, 76 Pac. 73.

Defenses.—Money paid to a city on a sale by it of property for municipal taxes, under an ordinance providing that, where such sales were illegal, the money should be refunded, does not become the absolute property of the city; and the fact that its indebtedness exceeds the constitutional limit does not constitute a defense to an action to recover such money where the sale was illegal. Phelps v. Tacoma, 15 Wash. 367, 46 Pac. 400.

Complaint as stating cause of action.—Under an ordinance providing that a purchaser of a certificate of sale for delinquent taxes may recover the purchase-price if such certificate was illegally or erroneously issued, allegations that the assessor did not fix a true value on the property, but, for the purpose of increasing the debt limit of the city in order that certain bonds might be issued with an appearance of legality, he intentionally and fraudulently assessed the property at least four times its true value, stated a cause of action. Gove v. Tacoma, 26 Wash. 474, 67 Pac. 261.

When action barred by limitations.—Where an ordinance provides that the purchaser of a certificate of sale for delinquent taxes illegally or erroneously issued may recover the purchase-price, and that the city controller, on discovering such an error as would place the certificate under the operation of the ordinance, shall cause notice to be given to the holder of such certificate, the statute of limitations does not run against the right to recover until the giving of such notice. Gove v. Tacoma, 34 Wash. 434, 76 Pac. 73 (holding that the payment by the purchaser of an illegally exacted certificate fee of one dollar did not charge the purchaser with knowledge that the fee was illegal, so as to cause the statute of limitations to run from the time of the payment); Gove v. Tacoma, 26 Wash. 474, 67 Pac. 261.

86. Street v. Columbus, 75 Miss. 822, 23 So. 773.

f. Redemption From Sale — (1) IN GENERAL. The right to redeem from a tax-sale is wholly governed by statutory and charter provisions,⁸⁷ but such right may be conferred either expressly or by implication.⁸⁸ However, as in the case of state and county taxes,⁸⁹ it is almost universally provided that the owner or other person shall have a right to redeem property sold for taxes upon the payment of a certain sum within a specified time.⁹⁰ A municipality has the power to make a compromise by which it receives a lump sum from the delinquent taxpayer to effect a redemption and the council cannot subsequently forbid the execution of a conveyance to the person redeeming.⁹¹

(ii) AMOUNT REQUIRED TO REDEEM. The amount required to be paid to redeem from a municipal tax sale is generally prescribed by statute or charter provision,⁹² or by ordinance.⁹³ The amount usually includes all the taxes for which the property was sold and after-acrued taxes,⁹⁴ interest at a specified rate,⁹⁵ and sometimes fixed penalties⁹⁶ and expenses incurred by the purchaser in proceedings to perfect title thereto.⁹⁷ A joint owner may, in some municipalities, redeem

Redemption by resale to interested party.—

Where, after the time to redeem has expired, the city, which has become the purchaser at the tax-sale, sells the property at private sale to one, a grantee on condition, for whose delinquency the land was sold for taxes, the title of the city is extinguished and the payment inures to the benefit of the grantor of the payor. Langley v. Chapin, 134 Mass. 82.

Estoppel to deny title after redemption.—Where the officers of a municipal corporation without authority assess against a person for taxation land belonging to the municipality and collect taxes thereon, and return the same as delinquent for non-payment of taxes, buy the same at the tax-sale, and convey the same upon redemption, the municipality will not be estopped, by these acts of her officers and agents, to claim the property as her own. St. Louis v. Gorman, 29 Mo. 593, 77 Am. Dec. 586.

Service upon the owner of a notice to redeem, after the expiration of two years from the time of the sale, requiring him to redeem within thirty days, is necessary, under some charters, before the city, the purchaser at the tax-sale, can maintain an action for the foreclosure of the equity of redemption. Rochester v. Fourteenth Ward Co-Operative Bldg. Lot Assoc., 183 N. Y. 23, 75 N. E. 692 [affirming 105 N. Y. App. Div. 625, 93 N. Y. Suppl. 1124]. Under a statute requiring a tax-purchaser of lands actually in possession of a third person to give notice to the occupant stating the sale and the amount necessary to redeem, a waiver of notice by an occupant who has no interest in the property is not equivalent to a notice. Jackson v. Esty, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 148.

Recovery of redemption money by purchaser.—A purchaser of lands sold for taxes cannot maintain an action against the city to recover moneys paid to the collector to redeem such lands from the tax-sale, and which moneys the collector has refused to pay over to plaintiff on demand made. Onderdonk v.

Brooklyn, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 505. But it is otherwise where the charter of the corporation provides for payment over, and contains a provision for payment on surrender of the certificate of purchase and payment is made to the assignor of the certificate without requiring a surrender, after the assignment, the municipality is liable therefor to the assignee. Bidwell v. Tacoma, 26 Wash. 518, 67 Pac. 259. Under a charter provision that money received by the city to redeem property sold for taxes shall be paid to the purchaser or his assigns on surrender of the certificate of purchase, limitations do not commence to run against an action to recover such money until the owner of the certificate has offered to return the same and demanded the money. Bidwell v. Tacoma, supra.

Power of municipality.—Under a statute providing for the sale of property for the collection of delinquent taxes, and directing that the towns coming under the provisions thereof may provide by ordinance for the method of conducting sales of property sold for delinquent taxes, and also to provide all other needful rules and regulations for the proper enforcement of the rights granted, an incorporated town is authorized to provide for penalties and interest on delinquent taxes, the payment of which shall be a condition attached to redemption. *Augustine v. his undivided interest by payment of his proportionate share of the whole amount necessary to redeem.⁹⁸

(iii) TIME OF REDEMPTION. The time for redemption, as fixed by general statutes, charter provisions, or ordinances, generally begins to run from the date of the sale or the filing of the deed.⁹⁹ Usually a longer time is provided for in case of persons under disability,¹ and, in some jurisdictions, in case of remaindermen.² After the time fixed by the statute for redemption has expired the right to redeem is gone,³ and there is no power even in a court of equity to thereafter authorize a redemption of the property.⁴

g. Remedies For Wrongful Collection of Tax—(1) *RESTRAINING COLLECTION*⁵—(A) Grounds and Propriety of Writ. While an injunction to prevent the collection of a municipal tax will not ordinarily be granted at the suit of a taxpayer merely because of irregularities in the proceedings of the taxing officers,⁶ nor because the tax is excessive,⁷ nor to compel a set-off,⁸ nor because of the failure to enforce the tax against other persons,⁹ nor because the land was so situated as not to receive the benefit of the taxes;¹⁰ yet an injunction will issue to enjoin the

lowed a person seeking redemption of his lands without proof that they were necessary and approved by the mayor.

6. Morrison v. Hershire, 32 Iowa 271.

Restatement of rule.—If a municipal corporation erroneously or illegally taxes property, which it has the power to tax in a proper manner, the remedy for such error must be sought generally in a court of law; but if it acts ultra vires by taxing property not subject to taxation, or by taxing property, which it has a right to tax, beyond the limit fixed by the law conferring the power to tax, a court of equity will on a bill filed by the owner of the property enjoin the collection of such tax. Christie v. Malden, 23 W. Va. 667.

Requiring correction.—Where the constitution requires an ad valorem tax to be levied on both realty and personalty and a city ordinance provides for such tax on realty, the omission to assess certain personalty in the mode prescribed does not render the entire ordinance void, so as to entitle a taxpayer to an injunction to restrain the collection of taxes thereunder; but a court of equity may require the city council to correct the ordinance by assessing the personalty omitted from the ad valorem system, its value to be ascertained as of the date when the original assessment was required to be made. Levi v. Louisville, 97 Ky. 394, 30 S. W. 973, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 872, 28 L. R. A. 480.

Collection of a general tax for proper city purposes will not be restrained merely because it was levied in part to replace funds illegally expended. Clee v. Trenton, 108 Mich. 293, 66 N. W. 48.

Before issuance of bonds.—Where an ordinance has been passed to raise money by the issuance of bonds, but no bonds have been issued, an action to enjoin the collection of the tax does not lie before the debt has been incurred. Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Scranton City, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. 437.

Action to restrain misapplication as remedy.—Where the objection is as to the application of part of the tax to the payment of an indebtedness in excess of the constitutional limit the action should be to restrain the misapplication and not the collection of the tax. Strohm v. Iowa City, 47 Iowa 42.

collection of illegal taxes,¹¹ as where the property is not liable,¹² or the levy is invalid.¹³ However, there is no right to an injunction where there is an adequate remedy at law,¹⁴ or by proceedings before a board to review the assessment.¹⁵ The municipality cannot, by ordinance, deprive the courts of power to issue an injunction.¹⁶ Payment of so much of the tax as is admitted to be legal is a condition precedent to an action to enjoin the collection of an illegal tax,¹⁷ and long acquiescence in the validity of annexation proceedings bars the right to enjoin the collection on the ground of invalidity of such proceedings.¹⁸ The collection of a railroad aid tax may be enjoined because of false representations as to the road,¹⁹ or where the bonds were irregularly issued,²⁰ but not where there is no valid legal defense to the payment of the bonds in the hands of the holders.²¹

Taxes in excess of statutory limit.—If a municipal corporation taxes property beyond the limit fixed by the organic law conferring the power to tax, a court of equity will enjoin the collection of the amount illegally assessed. Tygart's Valley Bank v. Philippi, 38 W. Va. 219, 18 S. E. 489.

Constitutionality of act to incorporate municipality.—Equity has jurisdiction to entertain a bill to enjoin the officers of a town from undertaking to collect taxes on the ground that the act purporting to incorporate the town is unconstitutional and void. Campbell v. Bryant, 104 Va. 509, 52 S. E. 638.

Cloud on title.—Where the apparent lien of an invalid tax is a cloud upon plaintiff's title, relief may be obtained by injunction. Vesta Mills v. Charleston, 60 S. C. 1, 38 S. E. 226.

12. Augusta v. Central R. Co., 78 Ga. 119; Sioux City Bridge Co. v. Dakota County, 61 Nebr. 75, 84 N. W. 607, holding that where defendant city levied a tax, on property of plaintiff, the situs of which was not within its jurisdiction, plaintiff's failure to appeal from such assessment did not estop him from disputing its validity, since a property-owner is not required to appear before a taxing board in opposition to the assessment of a tax on property whose situs is not within the jurisdiction of such board, the levy in such case being void.

Exempt property.—Morris Canal, etc., Co. v. Jersey City, 12 N. J. Eq. 227 [affirmed in 12 N. J. Eq. 545]; Scranton City Guard Assoc. v. Scranton, 2 C. Pl. (Pa.) 217; Vesta Mills v. Charleston, 60 S. C. 1, 38 S. E. 226. Effect of insolvency.—Injunction will not lie to restrain the collection of a tax assessed by a municipal corporation on the capital stock of a national bank, although the municipality be insolvent, where there is an adequate remedy at law. National Commercial Bank v. Mobile, 62 Ala. 284, 34 Am. Rep. 15.

15. Macklot v. Davenport, 17 Iowa 379, holding that when the charter of a city authorizes the council "to correct or equalize any erroneous or injudicious assessment" of taxes, it is not competent for a court of equity to interfere by injunction to restrain the collection of taxes erroneously assessed in said city.

16. Vesta Mills v. Charleston, 60 S. C. 1, 38 S. E. 226.

Ordinance not retroactive.—Where, subsequent to the commencement of a suit to restrain the collection of taxes by a city, it passed an ordinance providing that the collection and enforcement of taxes for municipal purposes on property within the city should not be stayed or prevented by injunction or order issued by any court or judge, but did not indicate that it was to have a retroactive effect, such ordinance did not deprive the court of jurisdiction to grant the injunction. *Vesta Mills v. Estoppel to set up misrepresentation.—In an action to restrain the collection of a railroad aid tax, the taxpayers are not estopped from setting up misrepresentations which induced the voting of the tax, where a notice was served upon the president of the company, before any grading had been done, that the tax would be contested for fraud and misrepresentation. *Curry v. (b) Pleading.²² The allegations of the bill must be definite and certain,²³ but mere informalities do not make it demurrable.²⁴ Suing the municipality in its corporate name on the ground that it had forfeited its charter before the taxes were levied is not an admission of the legal existence of the municipality.²⁵

(c) Parties.²⁶ One municipality cannot obtain an injunction to restrain the collection of a tax levied by another municipality, since the remedy can only be invoked by taxpayers.²⁷ An action may be brought by a taxpayer in his own name,²⁸ or on behalf of all others similarly situated;²⁹ and it is proper to allow all citizens other than the original plaintiff to be made parties plaintiff.³⁰ But taxpayers cannot join as plaintiffs where their interests are separate and distinct.³¹ The persons to whom the taxes are to be ultimately paid have been held not necessary parties,³² although in an action to enjoin the collection of taxes to pay bonds the bondholders are necessary parties;³³ and where an injunction is asked to restrain a city treasurer from collecting a school tax irregularly assessed, the school-district is a necessary party.³⁴ The municipality itself need not be made a party by name where the mayor and members of the council are made defendants, and appear and answer in their official capacity as well as individuals.³⁵

(ii) RECOVERY OF PROPERTY, OR MONEY RECEIVED. Property unlawfully seized for taxes may be replevied,³⁶ and previous payment of a similar tax will not defeat the action.³⁷ So money received from an unlawful distress may be recovered from the municipality.³⁸

(iii) LIABILITY FOR DAMAGES. Generally a municipality is not liable in tort for the unauthorized and unlawful acts of its officers in collecting taxes,

Narrow gauge road.—The collection of a town railroad aid tax will not be enjoined on a mere showing that since the vote for the tax a narrow gauge road has been constructed, in the absence of any averment or showing that the road as constructed is not fully adequate to meet all the wants or requirements of the taxpayers. *Sioux City, etc., R. although done under color of office,³⁹ unless such acts were afterward ratified by the municipality⁴⁰ On the other hand the municipality is liable for damages resulting from acts of its officers in attempting in good faith to exercise powers and perform duties of the corporation but not conducted according to law.⁴¹ So one whose property has been seized for a tax assessed under an invalid ordinance has a cause of action where the mayor and council, with malicious intent to prevent him from competing with resident merchants, passed a resolution declaring him by name to be within the ordinance.⁴² Whether an action may be maintained against a municipality to recover damages for malicious prosecution of a suit for taxes is doubtful.⁴³

9. TAX DEEDS AND LEASES ⁴⁴— a. Applicability of General Statutes. Statutes applicable to tax deeds for state and county taxes have been held not applicable to tax deeds for municipal taxes.⁴⁵

b. Necessity For and Conditions Precedent to Right To Deed. Where the time for redemption has expired, the purchaser, in order to maintain summary proceedings against an occupant, must generally first obtain a deed in the manner provided by the charter.⁴⁶ In some jurisdictions it is provided by statute that notice of the expiration of the time to redeem from a tax-sale must be served on the person in whose name the land is taxed before a tax deed can be demanded.⁴⁷

c. Authority to Issue. A tax deed cannot be issued by an officer except where he is authorized so to do by statute or charter provision.⁴⁸

e. Operation and Effect. Where the statute provides what the deed shall contain, the recitals therein are not covenants of warranty and do not estop the municipality issuing the conveyance.⁵¹ So there is no implied warranty of the validity of a tax lease, on an agreement to assign it.⁵² Where the tax is illegal and void, the deed conveys no title.⁵³ Under some statutes all prior taxes and assessments are paramount to a tax lease.⁵⁴ Where tax leases are purchased from a city, the title of the purchaser thereunder vests from the date of the lease.⁵⁵ Where a purchaser of tax leases from a city obtained a lease or leases covering all of the years for which the land had been bid in by the city, all of the leases bearing the same date, it was no objection to the validity thereof that, inasmuch as the city had bid in the land, it was not authorized to tax it thereafter.⁵⁶

f. Tax Deeds as Evidence. Ordinarily a municipal tax deed is not sufficient evidence of the validity of the sale,⁵⁷ and the party relying thereon must show that all the necessary prerequisites to a legal sale were complied with.⁵⁸ But in some municipalities, by statute, charter provisions, or ordinances, such deeds are prima facie evidence of the regularity of the proceedings,⁵⁹ and even conclusive as to some facts.⁶⁰ The power of a municipality to provide that the deed shall be prima facie evidence of a compliance with all necessary prerequisites has been denied,⁶¹ although there are cases to the contrary.⁶² ments); Lever v. Grant, 139 Mich. 273, 102 N. W. 848, 103 N. W. 843.

Construction of statutes.—A statutory provision that "all tax deeds for lots or lands sold under ordinances of the City of St. Louis for the non-payment of taxes due said city, shall be received in like manner, and shall have the same force and effect, when recorded, as State tax deeds," etc., cannot be construed as making tax deeds of the city of St. Louis prima facie evidence of title in fee simple in the grantee, as are state tax deeds. Stierlin v. Daley, 37 Mo. 483.

Prima facie but not conclusive evidence.—In a contest upon the title of land sold for city taxes, where the deed is made prima facie evidence, the introduction of a tax deed does not preclude proof that the demand, required by the city charter to be made within a reasonable time before sale, was in fact not made, and that consequently the deed was invalid. Lathrop v. Howley, 50 Iowa 39.

ordinance.⁶³ However, the general rule is that a municipality cannot, without express authority, prescribe a penalty for neglect to pay taxes promptly,⁶⁴ although in some cases the power has been implied.⁶⁵ Such penalties may be remitted by the council as against the objection of the collector of taxes.⁶⁶ When collected, the penalty forms no part of the municipal revenues but should be included with the tax where it is held in trust for a particular purpose,⁶⁷ but the penalty is not to be computed in determining whether the amount of the tax is in excess of constitutional or statutory provisions.⁶⁸ Unless expressly so provided the penal rate of interest does not continue after judgment on a scire facias.⁶⁹ Penalties are collectable in the same manner as the tax;⁷⁰ but where the person owing such tax is liable to an additional penalty, no penalty can be recovered in a suit against a purchaser from the one who owned the land at the time the taxes were assessed.⁷¹ A penalty paid under protest, to prevent a seizure, may be recovered back by the taxpayer.⁷²

the absence of any special direction as to the application of specific revenues, the municipality may apply them in any manner not inconsistent with the charter provisions.⁷⁴ Taxes are to be apportioned between different funds as provided for by the statutes,⁷⁵ but where the amount raised by a tax was a common fund to meet all of certain indebtedness, an appropriation among other kinds of such indebtedness will not prevent its application to any of such indebtedness.⁷⁷ Any surplus in special funds is often required to be transferred to the general fund,⁷⁷ or the option is given to apply the excess to supply the deficiency in any other fund.⁷⁸ Whether the penalty for non-payment is a part of the tax and to be paid out as such with the tax to the proper fund depends upon the particular statutory or charter provisions governing.⁷⁹

A city which is charged with the duty of collecting school taxes, and which collects taxes and interest, and fails to pay the same over to its school-board, which is entitled thereto, but uses the money in its own affairs, is chargeable with interest on the sum so retained in a creditors' suit by judgment creditors of the school-board who are entitled to the fund. *New Orleans v. Contingent funds.—A decision to hold the Grand Army encampment in Cincinnati not having been reached until the estimates and semiannual appropriations for that year had been made, whatever increase in the legitimate expenses of the city is required by such event will be paid out of the contingent fund, which by Rev. St. § 2690 et seq., is created to meet contingent expenses arising after the appropriations are made, and which could not have been foreseen. Stem v. Cincinnati, 9 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 45, 6 Ohio N. P. 15.

What are legitimate municipal expenses.—Payments by a city for lights and water, under a charter making express provisions for such expenses, and also payments on account of streets, are legitimate municipal expenditures. White v. Decatur, 119 Ala. 476, 23 So. 999.

To whom revenues payable in first instance.—Ordinarily the revenues are payable to the treasurer (McFarland v. People, 2 Ill. App. 615; Galena v. Highway Com'rs, 2 Ill. App. 255; Cramer v. Stone, 33 Wis. 212), but may, by statute, be directed to be paid over to others (Osterhoudt v. Rigney, 98 N. Y. 222; People v. Brown, 55 N. Y. 180), and when any fund is not specially disposed of by law, it is subject, within lawful limits, to the control of the fiscal officers of the municipality (Center Tp. v. Marion County, 70 Ind. 562).

Annual revenues undisposed of are usually carried over to the same fund for the next year, but not so as to swell the fund beyond its legal limits. State v. Elizabeth, 51 N. J. L. 246, 17 Atl. 91.

applied to another purpose.⁸⁰ And this rule is often reiterated by constitutional or statutory provisions.⁸¹ It follows that holders of claims against a city which are entitled to payment only from and out of the funds appropriated to payment of such claims are not entitled to an absolute judgment against the city.⁸² But where the taxes collected for a special purpose are in excess of the amount necessary therefor, the municipality cannot be required to pay over the excess to those in charge of such fund.⁸³ However, a city has no power to transfer a surplus in a special fund levied to meet accruing interest on bonds, to other funds, where it has already levied for the latter purposes the maximum amounts allowed by its charter for that year.⁸⁴ Where a tax is collected to pay interest on void bonds and the taxpayers cannot recover it back, it has been held that it may be carried into the general fund of the city and expended like other money in that fund.⁸⁵

e. Priorities. Ordinarily current expenses are payable in preference to debts.⁸⁶

80. Florida.—Chamberlain v. Tampa, 40 Fla. 74, 23 So. 572, holding funds derived from a tax levied by a city to meet accruing interest on bonds cannot be diverted to any other purpose so long as the city has interest-bearing bonds outstanding.

Illinois.—See Chicago v. Brede, 218 Ill. 528, 75 N. E. 1044, holding that where an ordinance provides that a local improvement shall be paid for by special assessment, and the assessment is levied and the work completed, and bonds are issued, the city may not afterward pay for a portion of the improvement by a general fund raised by general taxation.

Tax levied for school purposes.—A tax levied and collected by the common council of a city for school purposes cannot be appropriated by act of the legislature to maintain a public library which is open to the pupils of the common schools only as a part of the general public, and which is not under the control of the board of education or of the common schools. Covington Bd. of Education v. Covington Public Library, 113 Ky. 234, 68 S. W. 10, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 98.

Tax as trust fund.—The levying and collection of a tax by a city to pay its bonds does not make the taxes a trust fund for payment of the bonds where the right to sue on the bonds is barred by limitations. Wurth v. Paducah, 116 Ky. 403, 76 S. W. 143, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 586, 105 Am. St. Rep. 225. Including interest or penalties.—The municipal taxes of particular years, including interest or penalties collected on them, must go to the payment of the debt for the payment of which such taxes have been assessed. State v. New Orleans, 109 La. 110, 33 So. 102.

Effect of judgment on claim.—The fact that interest coupons on bonds of a municipality are merged in a judgment does not affect the character of the indebtedness, and the holder of such judgment is entitled to have funds raised by taxation to pay interest on bonds applied to the payment of the judgment. *Ward v. Decatur, 119 Ala. 476, 23 So. 999 (holding that where interest and principal of municipal bonds are specially charged on the general revenues of the city, only the surplus income, after legitimate expenses have been provided for, can be applied to such debt); Denison v. Foster, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 37 S. W. 167 [following Sherman v. Smith, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 580, 35 S. W. 294].

Priorities in the right to payment are sometimes fixed by statutes,⁸⁷ especially in case of surplus revenues.⁸⁸

d. Liability and Remedies. A judgment creditor whose claims are payable out of a special tax is entitled to require the city to account for the amount of such tax collected by it for such fund, where the proper board declines to make or compel such an accounting.⁸⁹ Where the tax is levied to meet certain contract expenses, the municipality is bound to remit whatever has been collected to the person to whom the money is due under the contract.⁹⁰ However, a city is not liable in trover to the holder of its warrants, issued without authority and to pay a debt which it could not legally contract, because its treasurer, having collected a tax pledged to the payment of such warrants, has diverted it to other purposes.⁹¹

E. Rights and Remedies of Taxpayers—1. IN GENERAL. Taxpayers cannot interfere with the exercise of the discretionary powers of municipal authorities in the absence of fraud or abuse,⁹² or assume to act on behalf of the municipality unless its duly constituted authorities wrongfully refuse to do so,⁹³ or sue to redress public wrongs by which they are affected only as members of the general public,⁹⁴ or to restrain or contest acts of the municipal authorities, although unauthorized or illegal, which do not affect their rights as taxpayers;⁹⁵ but whenever their pecuniary interests as taxpayers are affected they are entitled to invoke the protection of the courts,⁹⁶ and in such cases they may by appropriate proceedings contest the validity of municipal ordinances or acts,⁹⁷ or sue to enjoin any threatened unauthorized or illegal acts,⁹⁸ or for affirmative relief against a wrong already committed,⁹⁹ or they may by mandamus compel the performance of a duty affecting their interests;¹ and in Louisiana by statute a taxpayer may be a relator in quo warranto proceedings to test the right to office of a municipal officer.² In some jurisdictions the right of taxpayers to sue in certain cases is expressly conferred by statutory provisions,³ which are liberally construed to protect their rights.⁴ A taxpayer cannot, where money of a municipality has been wrongfully paid out, sue the municipality in assumpsit to recover an amount proportionate to the taxes paid by him.⁵ Taxpayers have no right to a general inspection of documents in the hands of municipal officers, such as contracts and vouchers for payments for public works, where they have no private interest in the information to be derived therefrom;⁶ and a charter right to inspect tax books is not unlimited but may be restricted to an examination of the assessments against the property of the applicant, or such persons as he represents, and may be reasonably regulated as to time and place.⁷

2. SUING OR DEFENDING ON BEHALF OF MUNICIPALITY. Where a cause of action exists in favor of a municipal corporation it is the proper party to sue to enforce it, and a taxpayer cannot do so except when necessary to prevent a failure of justice, as where the municipal authorities wrongfully refuse or neglect to act;⁸ and so before a taxpayer may sue on behalf of the municipality its proper

Where a town is divided into two towns, private individuals cannot of their own motion maintain a bill to establish the rights of the towns with respect to lands owned by the town prior to its division. Denton v. Jackson, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 320.

Under an Illinois statute providing that "a suit may be brought by any tax payer, in the name and for the benefit of any city or village, against any person or corporation, to recover any money or property belonging to the city or village, or for any money which may have been paid, expended or released authorities must be requested to do so unless the circumstances are such as to indicate affirmatively that such a demand would be unavailing;⁹ but where the municipal authorities improperly refuse and neglect to act a taxpayer may sue on behalf of the municipality,¹⁰ proceeding in equity, since the cause of action is in the municipality,¹¹ and making the municipality a party defendant.¹² Under similar circumstances a taxpayer may intervene in a pending proceeding to protect a right of the municipality without instituting a separate action,¹³ or may prosecute an appeal,¹⁴ or intervene in an appeal taken by the adverse party.¹⁵ Taxpayers suing on behalf of the municipality have, however, no greater rights than the municipality itself.¹⁶

3. CONTESTING VALIDITY OF ORDINANCES OR ACTS — a. In General. Taxpayers cannot contest municipal ordinances or acts merely upon the ground that they are unauthorized or invalid;¹⁷ but they may judicially contest the validity of any ordinance, resolution, or official act which prejudicially affects their rights as taxpayers by increasing the burden of taxation or otherwise.¹⁸ This they may do by certiorari to review the ordinance or resolution,¹⁹ by suit to have the ordinance declared invalid,²⁰ by injunction to restrain threatened wrongful action on the part of the municipal authorities,²¹ or on the part of third persons pursuant to without authority of law," a taxpayer may sue to recover from the persons receiving it money wrongfully paid out by the municipal authorities. Knight v. Thompsonville, 74 Ill. App. 550.

Where it is discretionary and not a positive duty on the part of municipal authorities to institute an action, a taxpayer will not be allowed to do so where it appears that the municipal authorities are exercising a wise discretion by refusing at the time to commence unnecessary and hazardous litigation (Dunn v. Long Beach Land, etc., Co., 114 Cal. 605, 46 Pac. 607); but their discretion as to instituting actions is a legal discretion which cannot be abused, and if they refuse to perform their duty in a clear case a taxpayer may sue (*Land, etc., Co. v. In New York it was formerly held that a taxpayer could not sue to set aside an unauthorized conveyance of municipal property (Roosevelt v. Draper, 23 N. Y. 318 [affirming 7 Abb. Pr. 108, 16 How. Pr. 137]; Warwick v. New York, 28 Barb. 210, 7 Abb. Pr. 265, 16 How. the proceedings of the municipal authorities,³⁸ suit to annul the ordinance imposing the tax,³⁹ or to have bonds illegally issued for such purpose delivered up and canceled.⁴⁰

e. Grants of Rights or Franchises. Taxpayers cannot oppose or question the validity of grants of rights or franchises which can in no way affect their rights as such;⁴¹ but they may do so where their interests as taxpayers are affected,⁴² and may do so by suit to declare the franchise void,⁴³ or certiorari to review the validity of the ordinance or resolution,⁴⁴ or suit to enjoin the grantee from proceeding thereunder.⁴⁵

f. Audit or Settlement of Claims. A taxpayer may sue to vacate the audit of an illegal claim which the board of audit had no authority to audit or where such audit was fraudulent or collusive,⁴⁶ and may oppose the payment of any unauthorized or illegal claim against the municipality⁴⁷ or any illegal release of any one indebted to the municipality.⁴⁸ Since, in the absence of any restriction, a municipality may compromise a disputed claim against it, such settlement cannot be questioned by a taxpayer in the absence of fraud or collusion;⁴⁹ but a taxpayer may sue to annul an ordinance providing for a compromise with a delinquent taxpayer which is in violation of a constitutional provision.⁵⁰

4. RESTRAINING MUNICIPAL ACTION— a. In General. It is well settled that a court of equity will in a proper case enjoin illegal or unauthorized acts of a municipal corporation or its officers,⁵¹ and any resident or taxpayer who sustains a special injury different from that of the public generally may sue to enjoin the unauthorized or illegal act.⁵² A taxpayer cannot, however, maintain such a suit where he has not sustained or is not threatened with any injury peculiar to himself as distinguished from the public generally,⁵³ as in such case the suit must be brought in the name of the state by the proper public officer;⁵⁴ and this rule has been applied where there was an injury to taxpayers as such, but no special injury to plaintiff as distinguished from other taxpayers.⁵⁵ A distinction should, however, be made between a case where the act of a municipality affects plaintiff

Under the Ohio statute authorizing a taxpayer to sue on behalf of the municipality upon refusal of the municipal solicitor to do so, a taxpayer cannot maintain an action to enjoin the awarding of a municipal contract to a certain person or company, where it appears that he is not suing in good faith in the interest of the municipality but in the interest of a person or company whose interests are adverse to those of the municipality (Gallagher v. Johnson, 1 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 264, 31 Cinc. L. Bul. 24), or where he was himself a competitor for the award (Mathers v. Cincinnati, 7 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 521, 3 Cinc. L. Bul. 709).

mere fact that an act is unauthorized or illegal entitle a taxpayer, regardless of its nature and effect, to sue to enjoin it.⁶⁶ An injunction will not be granted where it is not shown that the act sought to be enjoined is in fact unauthorized or illegal,⁶⁷ or prejudicial to the rights of taxpayers,⁶⁸ or that there is any imminent danger of plaintiff's rights being violated,⁶⁹ or where an injunction under the circumstances would be inequitable rather than equitable,⁷⁰ or is not the proper remedy,⁷¹ or there is an adequate remedy at law,⁷² although the existence of a legal remedy will not preclude the granting of an injunction if it is not as adequate and efficient as the remedy in equity.⁷³ The rights of taxpayers to an injunction may be barred by laches.⁷⁴

b. Contracts. Municipal authorities will not, in the absence of illegality, fraud, or misconduct, be interfered with in the exercise of their discretionary powers in contracting on behalf of the municipality,⁷⁵ nor will an injunction be granted where it is not shown that the contract in question is unauthorized or illegal,⁷⁶ or of such a character as to prejudice the rights of taxpayers;⁷⁷ but if the contract affects the rights of taxpayers as involving the creation of a municipal debt or expenditure of public funds, taxpayers may, if it be illegal or unauthor-

In New York the statute expressly authorizes a suit by a taxpayer "to prevent any illegal official act" on the part of municipal officers (Bush v. O'Brien, 164 N. Y. 205, 58 N. E. 106 [reversing 47 N. Y. App. Div. 581, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 685]), but the statute does not apply to every illegal official act irrespective of whether it involves waste of public property or violation of public rights or injury to taxpayers as such, and does not authorize a suit by a private individual to enjoin an unauthorized official act affecting a purely private right (Rogers v. O'Brien, 153 N. Y. 357, 47 N. E. 456 [affirming 7 N. Y. App. Div. 612, 39 N. Y. Suppl. 1131]), or to prevent an unauthorized act which would be a benefit instead of an injury to the municipality (Gilgar v. Low, 38 Misc. 292, 77 N. Y. Suppl. 852).

In Massachusetts it is held that a bill by taxpayers cannot be maintained under the general equity jurisdiction of the court to restrain a municipality from carrying out an invalid contract (Steele v. Municipal Signal Co., 160 Mass. 36, 35 N. E. 105); but it is provided by statute that a petition may be brought for such purpose by ten taxable inhabitants of the municipality, which, however, must be brought in the supreme judicial court and not in the superior court (Baldwin v. Wilbraham, 140 Mass. 459, 4 N. E. 829).

In Ohio the statute makes it the duty of the city solicitor to sue to restrain the execution or performance of an unlawful contract, but provides that if he fails to do so after a request in writing by a taxpayer, the taxpayer may sue in his own name. Knorr v. Miller, 5 Ohio Cir. Ct. 609, 3 Ohio Cir. Dec. 297 [affirming 11 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 165, 25 Cinc. L. Bul. 128].

The fact that a taxpayer is to be indemnified against the costs and expenses of the action by a company which may be incidentally benefited by the success of the action will not affect the right to sue where it appears that the taxpayer intended to sue, and his principal object was to prevent the execution by the municipality of an unlawful contract, but he was unable to undertake the payment of the costs and expenses in case he should fail in the action. McClain v. McKisson, 15 Ohio Cir. Ct. 517, 8 Ohio Cir. Dec. 357.

A taxpayer is not guilty of laches who at the letting of a contract for public works protested against it and within a week brought a taxpayer's action to enjoin payment and had the issue settled and a first hearing in five weeks and a final determination in less than two months when only four days' work on the contract had been performed. Hortenstein v. Herrmann, 9 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 205, 6 Ohio N. P. 93.

When injunction will be denied.—Payment of the consideration of a contract by a municipality will not be enjoined, although the contract was ultra vires, where it was entered into in good faith by both parties and performed by the other party to the contract, and the municipality has enjoyed its benefits and it does not appear that its payment would be prejudicial to the rights of taxpayers. McMahon v. New Orleans, 52 La. Ann. 1226, 27 So. 650.

"Highest and best bidder."—Under a constitutional requirement that a franchise must be granted to the "highest and best bidder," due effect will be given to both the words "highest" and "best," and an injunction will not be granted unless there is about to be a plain and palpable violation of the constitution. Keith v. Johnson, 109 Ky. 421, 59 S. W. 487, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 947.

for a tax to meet the indebtedness incurred,⁸³ or where the contract does not conform to the advertisement for proposals to do the work,⁸⁴ or contains unauthorized provisions the effect of which is to increase the cost to the municipality.⁸⁵ A taxpayer may also sue to enjoin the other contracting party from carrying out an unlawful contract made with the municipality.⁸⁶

e. Issuance or Delivery of Bonds. Where a municipal corporation is authorized to issue bonds a court of equity will not, in the absence of a clear abuse of authority, interfere with its discretionary powers;⁸⁷ but municipal corporations will be enjoined at the suit of taxpayers from making an unauthorized or illegal issue of bonds,⁸⁸ or delivering bonds already issued,⁸⁹ or indorsing or guaranteeing without authority the bonds of another corporation.⁹⁰ An authorized issue of bonds will not be enjoined because the ordinance providing for the issue does not also provide for levying taxes to pay the interest and provide a sinking fund to pay the principal,⁹¹ and injunctive relief cannot be granted where the bonds have been issued and actually delivered before the proceedings are instituted.⁹²

Exceeding debt limit.—Where the indebtedness of a municipality has already reached the authorized limit an issue of bonds will be enjoined (Fowler v. Superior, 85 Wis. 411, 54 N. W. 800), and if the proposed issue will exceed the authorized limit it will be enjoined as to the excess (Seymour v. Tacoma, 6 Wash. 427, 33 Pac. 1059).

A sale of bonds at a discount or for less than their par value, if in violation of law, will be enjoined, although the issue of the bonds was authorized. Rounfort v. Harrisburg, 2 Pearson (Pa.) 101.

It is not material whether the bonds are void so that the city could successfully defend against their collection. Fowler v. Superior, 85 Wis. 411, 54 N. W. 800.

The issuing of bonds will not be enjoined where the issue was authorized and the only illegality alleged is that the ordinance provides that they are to be sold and the proceeds received and expended by an illegally constituted body of trustees. f. Misapplication of Funds. The authorities of a municipal corporation will be enjoined at the suit of taxpayers from making any illegal or unauthorized appropriation, use, or expenditure of the corporate funds,⁶ and it makes no difference in principle whether the amount sought to be wrongfully appropriated is large or small.⁷ It has also been held that taxpayers may by certiorari question the validity of a resolution of municipal authorities in order to prevent an illegal expenditure of corporate funds,⁸ and in New York a summary proceeding to investigate municipal finances is provided by statute,⁹ but injunction is the usual and proper remedy.¹⁰ An injunction will not be granted, however, to restrain acts falling within the discretionary powers of the municipal authorities, in the absence of fraud or palpable abuse,¹¹ or where it is not shown that the act sought

g. Payment of Claims, Bonds, or Warrants. The authorities of a municipal corporation may be enjoined at the suit of taxpayers from paying out money of the municipality upon illegal or unauthorized claims or warrants,¹⁴ or void municipal bonds,¹⁵ or a contract which was authorized but not performed by the other party according to his agreement.¹⁶ They may also be enjoined from paying a judgment if fraudulently or collusively obtained;¹⁷ but in the absence of fraud or collusion, if the liability of the municipality has been established by the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, it cannot be relitigated in a court of equity and its payment enjoined at the suit of a taxpayer.¹⁸ An injunction will not be granted for every trifling injury or technical irregularity,¹⁹ or where its effect would be inequitable rather than equitable,²⁰ so if the claim is just and equitable and based upon a benefit to the public so that its payment cannot be said to be prejudicial to the rights of taxpayers, the payment will not be enjoined, although there may be some doubt as to the authority of the municipality or irregularity in the proceedings;²¹ but where the claim is clearly unauthorized or illegal the fact that the claimant may have rendered services or incurred expenses in good faith in reliance upon the authority of the municipality is not ground for refusing to enjoin its payment.²²

chase property a court of equity will not interfere with the exercise of their discretion in the absence of fraud or collusion or manifest abuse of their powers;²³ but a purchase will be enjoined at the instance of a taxpayer where it is unauthorized and illegal,²⁴ or where it will create an indebtedness in excess of the charter limit,²⁵ or where the conduct of the municipal authorities amounts to a manifest abuse of their discretion or a fraud upon the rights of taxpayers,²⁶ as where it is clearly shown or admitted that the purchase-price is grossly excessive,²⁷ or where the property is wholly inadequate and insufficient for the purpose intended.²⁸

i. Waste or Disposition of, or Injury to, Property. ries.³⁵ Where one taxpayer sues on behalf of the municipality upon refusal of the municipal solicitor to do so, the pendency of such a suit is a bar to another suit by a different taxpayer for the same cause.³⁶ A statute providing the time within which suit must be brought to test the legality of bonds will not be given a retroactive operation, where such intent upon the part of the legislature is not clearly apparent.³⁷

b. Requesting Action by Municipal Officers. A taxpayer cannot sue to enforce a cause of action existing in favor of the municipality without first requesting the proper municipal authorities to do so,³⁸ unless the circumstances are such as to indicate affirmatively that such a request would be unavailing.³⁹ The Ohio statute authorizing suits to enjoin a misapplication of corporate funds and certain abuses of corporate powers provides that before a taxpayer may sue the municipal solicitor must be requested in writing to do so;⁴⁰ but the requirement does not apply where the municipality has no such officer,⁴¹ or where plaintiff is suing not as a taxpayer to protect the public interest but to protect a private interest which the act sought to be enjoined will affect.⁴²

c. Parties. In a suit by taxpayers where their rights as such are directly affected the suit may be brought in their own names,⁴³ and it is not necessary to sue in the name of the state, or that the attorney-general or other public officer should be made a party,⁴⁴ although a suit brought by such public officer on the relation of a taxpayer is not improper.⁴⁵ In such cases where the parties interested as plaintiffs are numerous a party may be permitted to represent the whole,⁴⁶ but the bill should allege that the suit is brought on behalf of all as well as those who are parties;⁴⁷ and under the Ohio statute authorizing taxpayers to sue upon a refusal of the city solicitor to do so, a taxpayer, while he may sue in his own name, must allege that the suit is on behalf of the corporation.⁴⁸ But taxpayers may join as parties plaintiff,⁴⁹ although some are resident and others

non-resident taxpayers.⁵⁰ All persons who are interested in the subject-matter of the suit and whose rights are to be affected by the judgment or decree to be rendered therein or whose presence is essential to a complete determination of the controversy must be made parties.⁵¹ So in a suit to cancel municipal bonds or to enjoin their payment or the payment of interest thereon, where the bonds have been delivered, the holders of such bonds must be made parties,⁵² and also the municipality itself;⁵³ and in a suit to vacate the audit of claims against a municipality, those in whose favor the claims were audited must be made parties.⁵⁴ The municipality itself and not merely the officers thereof must be made a party where the effect of the suit is to divest it of its property,⁵⁵ or where its presence as a party is necessary to a complete determination of the controversy,⁵⁶ as in a suit to set aside a conveyance of property already made to the municipality,⁵⁷ or to set aside a contract of which it has received the consideration;⁵⁸ but in a suit to enjoin unauthorized or illegal official acts the municipality itself is not always a necessary party,⁵⁹ although since an injunction against the municipality binds its officers and agents the suit may be brought against the municipality alone without making its officers and agents parties.⁶⁰ In a suit to enjoin acts of municipal officers those acting as such at the time of the suit are the proper parties defendant, and former incumbents, although they were the authors of the initial wrong, are not necessary parties unless some affirmative relief is sought against them personally,⁶¹ but in a suit to enjoin payment of illegal claims it is proper to join as defendants with the mayor and aldermen the officials who are intrusted with the power of paying claims.⁶² In a suit to enjoin the execution of an unauthorized contract or a donation of public funds, it is not necessary to join as a party the person with whom the municipality proposes to contract,⁶³ or the beneficiary of the proposed illegal donation.⁶⁴ In a purely statutory proceeding the express provisions of the statute as to who may or must be made parties must be strictly followed.⁶⁵

In proceedings under the Kansas statute of 1871 to contest an election held to vote upon the question of issuing bonds in aid

The absence on appeal of one who was a party on the trial but not a necessary party is not ground for dismissal.⁶⁶

d. Pleading. In a taxpayer's action the complaint or bill must allege facts showing a right or interest in plaintiff which entitles him to sue,⁶⁷ and all facts necessary to authorize the relief demanded.⁶⁸ The complaint must allege that plaintiff is a taxpayer,⁶⁹ and show that his interests as such are or will be affected by the act sought to be enjoined or redressed,⁷⁰ and that the acts complained of are in fact unauthorized, fraudulent, or illegal.⁷¹ It must allege issuable facts and not mere conclusions,⁷² and the allegations must be definite and certain.⁷³ In a suit to enjoin or set aside a contract on the ground of fraud or illegality a general allegation is not sufficient, but the facts constituting the fraud or illegality must be alleged;⁷⁴ and, in a suit to declare void an election held to determine the question of issuing bonds, it is not sufficient to allege that illegal votes were received but it must be shown that such votes affected the result of the election.⁷⁵ Irrelevant or impertinent allegations may be stricken out on motion.⁷⁶

e. Presumptions and Evidence. In suits to enjoin threatened municipal action the presumption is that the municipal authorities are acting regularly within the limits of their authority and without intention of violating the law, and the

of a railroad company, plaintiff can proceed only against the municipal officers and litigate only the question of the validity of the election, and it is not proper to make the railroad company a party. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Evans, 41 Kan. 94, 21 Pac. 216.

App. 290, 55 Pac. 513, holding that in a suit to enjoin the making of payments on a paving contract the petition in error may be brought by the city alone without making the city clerk, who was a defendant below, a party, he having no independent interest in the proceeding.

Sufficiency of allegations.—It is not necessary to allege in express terms that the burden of taxation will be increased and plaintiff prejudicially affected by the illegal act, but it is sufficient to allege equivalent facts showing such to be the case. Handy v. New Orleans, 39 La. Ann. 107, 1 So. 593. A complaint shows an injury to plaintiff where it shows that he is a taxpayer and that payments upon an unauthorized contract are to be made out of the general treasury of the municipality. Hanson v. Hunter, 86 Iowa 722, 48 N. W. 1005, 53 N. W. 84. In a suit to enjoin the execution of a contract illegally awarded without examining all the bids, it is not necessary to allege that the bid which was not opened and examined was lower than the one accepted. Baltimore v. Keyser, 72 Md. 106, 19 Atl. 706. In a suit to enjoin the misapplication of public funds, it is not necessary to allege the amount of taxes paid or to be paid by plaintiff. Chicago v. Nichols, 177 Ill. 97, 52 N. E. 359. In a suit to enjoin the collection of a tax by a municipal corporation the extent to which it will increase plaintiff's taxes should be stated either directly or by alleging facts from which it may be shown. *Altgelt v. burden is upon plaintiff to show the contrary,⁷⁷ and to sustain by proof all material allegations of the bill or complaint essential to authorize the relief demanded;⁷⁸ but it is not necessary to show the amount of taxes paid or to be paid by plaintiff.⁷⁹ In a suit to enjoin the issuing of bonds evidence is not admissible as to how a witness voted upon the proposition when submitted to the voters, in the absence of any evidence discrediting the certificate of the election officers or tending to show that illegal votes were cast or the existence of any irregularity,⁸⁰ and evidence as to the motives that prompted individual taxpayers to vote in favor of the issue is immaterial and properly excluded.⁸¹

f. Costs.⁸² In taxpayer's actions the court may decree costs against the municipality but has no power to award an execution therefor.⁸³ In actions against municipal officers relating to their official duties costs should not be awarded against them in the absence of any showing of gross negligence, bad faith, or malice, although the act complained of is shown to be unauthorized and is enjoined.⁸⁴ In a suit by a taxpayer under the Ohio statute where the city solicitor has refused to sue plaintiff may be allowed his costs and a reasonable compensation for his attorney.⁸⁵

XVI. CLAIMS AGAINST CORPORATION.⁸⁶

A. Necessity For Presenting. A distinction is to be observed between presenting a claim as a statutory condition precedent to the bringing of an action,⁸⁷ and the presentation for audit, the former not being a presentation for audit.⁸⁸ Usually it is expressly provided by statute or ordinance that unliquidated claims against the municipality must be presented to a specified officer or board for audit and allowance or rejection.⁸⁹ Many of the statutes apply to claims for damages

Compensation for counsel.—Compensation for plaintiff's counsel will not be allowed under the Ohio statute in an action to enjoin an issue of bonds which is not brought in the interest of the municipality but at the instance of the bidders for such bonds in order to test their validity (Brown v. Toledo, 10 Ohio Cir. Ct. 642, 5 Ohio Cir. Dec. 115); and it is held that such allowance cannot be made in a case where the municipality had no solicitor, as the statute authorizes such allowance only where the solicitor has been requested to sue and refused to do so (Brundige v. Ashley, 62 Ohio St. 526, 57 N. E. 226); but in a case where the solicitor having filed the petition changed his opinion of the merits of the case and filed an answer against the ground taken by the petition, but consented that plaintiff should employ other counsel, it was held proper that compensation for such counsel should be allowed (Miller v. Pearce, 2 Cinc. Super. Ct. (Ohio) 44). The amount of compensation allowed plaintiff's counsel should never be so large as to invite litigation for the purpose of obtaining it, or determined by what is paid by private persons or corporations for similar services, or on a basis of a percentage of the amount saved to the municipality, but rather by what is allowed to public officers for like services. Guckenberger v. Dexter, 18 Ohio Cir. Ct. 244, 10 Ohio Cir. Dec. 174.

arising from tort as well as to those arising upon contract, although some of the statutes have been held to refer only to claims arising upon contracts.⁹⁰ Other statutory provisions have been held applicable only to claims for damages arising ex delicto.⁹¹ Generally a claim for the salary of an officer or for other like fixed charges is not required to be presented for audit.⁹²

B. Audit—1. IN GENERAL. The question as to what officer or board has the power to audit claims, and the scope of their duties, is usually fixed by the statutes and ordinances.⁹³ Presentation of the claim must be made to the officer or board designated by the statute,⁹⁴ within the time prescribed by statute.⁹⁵ Substantial compliance with statutory requirements as to the formal statement and itemization of claims is a condition precedent to their allowance,⁹⁶ but objec-

(N. Y.) 145, 47 N. Y. Suppl. 477. See MacDonald v. New York, 42 N. Y. App. Div. 263, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 16.

Usurping board.—Presentation to a board which has usurped the office under an invalid election will not bind a municipality. Murphy v. Moies, 18 R. I. 100, 25 Atl. 977.

95. Oshkosh Waterworks Co. v. Oshkosh, 106 Wis. 83, 81 N. W. 1040, holding that a claim against a city is "presented" when filed with the clerk, and not when actually introduced into the council, within the meaning of charter provisions as to filing of appeals within twenty days after disallowance.

Revival.—A claim barred for failure to present in due time is not revived by repeal of the statute. Morgan v. Rhineland, 105 Wis. 138, 81 N. W. 132.

96. Kelso v. Teale, 106 Cal. 477, 39 Pac. 948 (holding that where the demand consists of but one item, dates and amounts tions as to verification and itemization may be waived.⁹⁷ Auditing officers are restricted in their powers by the statutes and ordinances,⁹⁸ although power to audit generally includes power to determine whether the claim is just and legal, in whole or in part.⁹⁹ A council, as the governing body, may, by ordinance, allow just claims which are not collectable by action,¹ and, in some jurisdictions, even after the claim has been disapproved by other officers.²

2. HEARING. The audit of a claim is generally considered as a quasi-judicial act,³ and must be conducted as directed by the charter or other governing statute.⁴ It is generally the duty of the auditing officer or board to ascertain the correctness of any claim before approving it.⁵ The claimant has, in some jurisdictions, the right to offer his proof and to confront and examine opposing witnesses;⁶ and some statutes give the auditing officer power to require any person presenting a claim to be sworn concerning it and answer orally as to any facts relevant to the justness thereof.⁷

3. DECISION OR AWARD — a. In General. The claim, where not rejected, must be audited in full or for some exact amount.⁸ But a claim may be allowed conditionally as where it is allowed to be paid when there is money in the treasury.⁹ The auditor is not justified in showing any favoritism by auditing the claim of one person in preference to that of another, upon the theory that there may not be sufficient money in the treasury to meet all demands upon it.¹⁰ An award of a

The verification of a claim against a city by the husband, as agent of claimant, is sufficient to satisfy the requirement of a statute providing that all claims against a city must be presented in writing and verified by the oath of the claimant or his agent. Ottawa v. Black, 10 Kan. App. 439, 61 Pac. 985.

Nature of claim.—Where a constable's claim against a town for services in killing dogs did not show whether the proceeding was had under the statutes or an ordinance, it was properly rejected, it not being shown whether the charge was properly against the town or the county. Matter of Hempstead, 36 N. Y. App. Div. 321, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 345 [affirmed in 160 N. Y. 685, 55 N. E. 1101]. A city charter providing that no claim against the city for damages caused by negligence shall be received for audit unless made out in detail, specifying "when, where and how occasioned," does not require the claim to aver negligence on the part of the city. *Werner v. 4. People v. Amsterdam, 90 Hun (N. Y.) 488, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 59.

Time of audit.—Where claims against a town are not audited by the trustees until after they have been paid by the treasurer, there is a substantial, and not merely a technical, violation of the statute requiring such audit to be made prior to payment. Matter of Plattsburgh, 27 N. Y. App. Div. 353, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 356 [reversed on other grounds in 157 N. Y. 78, 51 N. E. 512].

Presumptions.—In the absence of proof to the contrary, the presumption is that the duty of a common council, in auditing claims, to ascertain the correctness of any bill before giving its approval, was performed, and that the account as audited and allowed is correct. Butts v. Hoboken, 38 N. J. L. 391.

board is insufficient where it is not signed by all the board, as required by statute, and where it is not shown to refer to the contract sued on.¹¹ An allowance of a claim after the expiration of the time prescribed by statute for its allowance or rejection is a nullity.¹² An invalid audit may be validated by competent authority.¹³

b. Review of Decision. In some jurisdictions, by statute, the only mode of review is by an appeal to a particular court from the allowance or disallowance, as provided for in the statute;¹⁴ and in some jurisdictions the right of appeal is also given to taxpayers.¹⁵ In other jurisdictions the remedy is by certiorari,¹⁶ and not by mandamus.¹⁷ Where the proper board passes on a claim presented to it, the common council has no power to review such action and increase the amount of the award.¹⁸

c. Effect of Allowance or Disallowance. The acts of a board of audit, within its jurisdiction, in the absence of fraud and collusion, are final and conclusive, and

In Wisconsin, the sixty-day period of delay which operates, for the purposes of an appeal, as a disallowance of a claim, commences to run as soon as it is presented to the council for allowance by filing the same with its clerk for its action thereon, and an appeal must be taken within twenty days after the expiration of such sixty days. Mason v. Ashland, 98 Wis. 540, 74 N. W. 357. See also Watson v. Appleton, 62 Wis. 267, 22 N. W. 475; Fleming v. Appleton, 55 Wis. 90, 12 N. W. 462. However, by Laws (1901), p. 88, c. 68, the time to appeal does not begin to run until service of a notice by the clerk of the council of the action or non-action of the council. Lyon v. Grand Rapids, 121 Wis. 609, 99 N. W. 311. Where the council has not acted on a claim for sixty days, it cannot, after the time for appeal has expired, by an express vote of disallowance thereof, give the claimant a right to appeal within twenty days from such express allowance. Seegar v. Ashland, 101 Wis. 515, 77 N. W. 880. An objection that the appeal was not taken in time goes to the jurisdiction and is not waived, although not made on the trial. Telford v. Ashland, 100 Wis. 238, 75 N. W. 1006. The appeal-bond must be substantially in compliance with the statute (Stephani v. Manitowoc, 101 Wis. 59, 76 N. W. 1110; West v. Eau Claire, 89 Wis. 31, 61 N. W.

313; Drinkwine v. Eau Claire, 83 Wis. 428, 53 N. W. 673), and an objection to its insufficiency to give jurisdiction to the appellate court cannot be waived by the action of the city attorney and controller in approving the bond (Oshkosh Waterworks Co. v. Oshkosh, 106 Wis. 83, 81 N. W. 1040). On appeal no formal pleadings are required and a general denial will be implied. Davey v. Janesville, 111 Wis. 628, 87 N. W. 813. If a complaint is filed, it is not demurrable merely because of the failure to allege the making and filing of the city clerk's return in response to the appeal. Horan v. Eau Claire, 123 Wis. 86, 100 N. W. 1063. But the complaint must allege the facts made requisite by the statute to give the appellate court jurisdiction. Watson v. Appleton, 62 Wis. 267, 22 N. W. 475. In some cases it is permissible on appeal to interpose a proper counter-claim. Monroe Water Works Co. v. Monroe, 110 Wis. 11, 85 N. W. 685.

15. Lobeck v. State, 72 Nebr. 595, 101 N. cannot be questioned in a collateral proceeding.¹⁹ But boards of audit, in allowing accounts, are limited to the powers conferred upon them by the statute; and when they transgress these limitations, their acts, like those of any other tribunal of limited jurisdiction, are void.²⁰ Generally the allowance of a claim, where the officer or board has jurisdiction, constitutes an adjudication binding upon the municipality.²¹ But a rejection of the claim does not preclude the right of the claimant to resort to the courts.²² Where the claimant takes no steps to review the order nor to compel a further audit, he cannot ordinarily sue for the balance of his claim in excess of that allowed;²³ and the acceptance by the claimant of the amount allowed, although less than the amount claimed, is a waiver of the right to insist upon payment of the balance rejected.²⁴ The auditing officer or board has no power to re-audit claims which have been passed upon by their predecessors in office.²⁵ Where the claim is disallowed, and thereafter a corrected bill is presented to the same auditors, the claimant cannot thereafter allege that they were without power to re-examine and allow or disallow the claim.²⁶

C. Compromise.²⁷ Power to compromise doubtful claims is inherent in the common council as the representative of the municipality,²⁸ and may be specially Sholtis*, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 487 (holding that the allowance of a claim by granting an order therefor is not a final and conclusive adjudication, so as to conclude the municipality, and it may set up want or failure of consideration, or ultra vires). Compare People v. Green, 2 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 62.

A vote by a town to appropriate money to settle a claim against it is binding, even if, upon subsequent examination, it is ascertained that the claim was one which could not have been successfully maintained. Mathews v. Westborough, 131 Mass. 521.

Fraud.—But the auditing of a claim by the board of audit for the amount due on a contract with the city does not estop the city from denying liability on the ground of fraud in the making of the contract. Nelson v. New York, 131 N. Y. 4, 29 N. E. 814 [affirming 1 Silv. Sup. 471, 5 N. Y. Suppl. 688].

Conditional allowance.—The allowance of a claim by the city council with the condition annexed to it, "to be paid when there is money in the treasury to pay with," is binding on the city, and the condition will not defeat an action to recover a judgment thereon. National Lumber Co. v. Wymore, 30 Nebr. 356, 46 N. W. 622.

Acceptance.—Where a common council of a city had allowed a sum smaller than that claimed in settlement of a claim for personal injuries, a written demand by the claimant for an order on the city treasurer for the amount so allowed constituted an unconditional acceptance of such settlement and made a binding contract for the payment of the sum so allowed. Sharp v. Mauston, 92 Wis. 629, 66 N. W. 803.

Estoppel.—The fact that a public officer has not objected to a re-audit of his accounts for certain years by the controller will in no way estop him from objecting to another audit of the same years by a new controller. Com. v. Patterson, 206 Pa. St. 522, 56 Atl. 27.

conferred by statute on other officers or boards.²⁹ But the mayor cannot, unless specially authorized, compromise any claim, nor, by acting under such a compromise, estop the assertion of the city's legal rights.³⁰ Before satisfaction the compromise may be revoked by the municipality,³¹ and the promise of an annuity in satisfaction of a claim,³² or a compromise of illegal claims,³³ is not binding.

D. Arbitration.³⁴ The power to contract and to sue and be sued implies municipal power to submit to arbitration.³⁵ And a statute providing for arbitration by "all persons" includes municipal corporations.³⁶ But the legislature has no power to direct that claims against a municipality shall be ascertained by arbitrators instead of a jury, without requiring the consent of the corporation.³⁷ The officer or board who may consent to arbitration is often fixed by statute;³⁸ but, independently thereof, it has been held that the municipal attorney may consent to an arbitration for the city,³⁹ and a fortiori the council may intrust the selection of arbitrators to him.⁴⁰ So an agent appointed by a municipality to compromise a claim may submit it to arbitration.⁴¹

E. Assignment.⁴² Unless there is some statute or ordinance forbidding it,⁴³ claims against a municipality are assignable the same as other choses in action;⁴⁴ but notice to it is essential to perfect the assignment.⁴⁵ The fact that there was no fund in existence from which the claim could be paid at the time of its assignment, or that the claim was not then enforceable by action because based on an unauthorized contract, does not prevent the assignment of the claim operating as an equitable assignment in case the municipality should subsequently voluntarily recognize its liability or become bound to pay the claim.⁴⁶

F. Interest.⁴⁷ Liability of a municipal corporation for interest on its debts does not ordinarily differ from that of an individual,⁴⁸ although in some jurisdictions no interest is recoverable, in the absence of express agreement therefor, except in case of money wrongfully obtained and illegally retained by it.⁴⁹ Of course interest is recoverable where expressly provided for by statute.⁵⁰ Generally, however, interest accrues only from the date of demand or presentation of the claim;⁵¹ and where the statute provides that no suit can be brought except on audited bills it has been held that interest can only be allowed from the time of the audit.⁵² It has also been held that where, by statute, no right of action exists against the municipality until the lapse of a specified time after the presentation of the demand, interest can be allowed only from the lapse of such time after presentation.⁵³ In some jurisdictions interest is recoverable only after money is in the treasury and the municipality refuses to pay.⁵⁴ The holder of a claim is not bound by an advertisement of a municipality, where in ignorance thereof, that it is ready to pay all obligations and will pay no interest after a certain date.⁵⁵

G. Payment.⁵⁶ Disbursing officers, performing only municipal functions, cannot refuse payment of a claim allowed by the proper auditing officer or board,⁵⁷

To whom notice to be given.—Notice to the controller of the city is notice to the corporation. Field v. New York, 2 Seld. (N. Y.) 179, 57 Am. Dec. 435. Galveston*, 3 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 438).

nor decide priorities between different claims.⁵⁸ Under statutes providing that no money shall be paid except upon a warrant, payment cannot be compelled upon a mere showing of an audit of the claim.⁵⁹ A statute authorizing a particular officer to adjust any claim on which a suit has been brought, and, when adjusted, to duly provide for its payment, has been held mandatory in respect to providing for payment.⁶⁰ The unauthorized payment by officers of a public corporation of part of a claim against the corporation will not estop the corporation from denying the validity of the claim.⁶¹ Where a claim is voluntarily paid with full knowledge of all the facts, the money cannot be recovered back, although it was not due or owing.⁶²

Where receiver of fund appointed.—No action can be brought against a city as administrator or collector of a fund where a receiver of such fund has been appointed. Wilder v. New Orleans, 67 Fed. 567.

An individual cannot maintain an action against a corporation for their fault or neglect, from which he suffers only in common with the rest of the public. The only remedy for such fault is by an indictment. Weightman v. Washington, 1 Black (U. S.) 39, 17 L. ed. 52.

An action to quiet title lies against a city. San Francisco v. Holladay, 76 Cal. 18, 17 Pac. 942.

Quo warranto.—Where the corporation unlawfully holds or exercises a franchise outside of its charter limits the attorney-general is ordinarily authorized, by statute, to bring quo warranto. People v. Oakland, 92 Cal. 611, 28 Pac. 807, holding a municipal corporation a "person" within the meaning of the statute.

School charges.—An action cannot be maintained against a city on a demand payable out of a fund over which its charter gives a board of education control to the exclusion of the municipal officers. Crane v. Urbana, 2 Ill. App. 559. So where a town or city is a distinct municipal corporation for school purposes, and the school corporations thus created can sue and be sued, an action for school services cannot be brought against the town or city in its ordinary municipal capacity but only as a school corporation. Huntington v. Day, 55 Ind. 7.

66. State v. Arnold, 38 Ind. 41; Winne-

ence, although not expressly given by its charter.⁶⁷ But a city cannot sue in behalf of its inhabitants merely to protect their interests.⁶⁸ As a general rule, whenever a cause of action exists in favor of or against a municipal corporation it may be prosecuted by an action in any form which would be appropriate in an action between individuals.⁶⁹ Ordinarily an action ex contractu will lie against a municipality without regard to whether there is a remedy by mandamus.⁷⁰

B. Compromise and Settlement.⁷¹ The municipal council generally has power to compromise and settle suits brought by the municipality,⁷² unless it is deprived of such power by charter or general statute.⁷³ So where a town, by a vote, authorizes its agents to settle an action brought by it, such town and the taxpayers therein are bound by a settlement made in good faith by such agent.⁷⁴ Likewise, a municipal corporation may, by the action of its law officer, definitely compromise a suit against the city, and the consideration is adequate where, in the opinion of responsible city officers, the compromise discharges a moral obligation of the city and averts an apprehended recovery in a far greater amount.⁷⁵

conne v. Winneconne, 111 Wis. 10, 86 N. W. 589 (holding that where a suit was instituted against a municipal corporation, and defendant pleaded in abatement the non-existence of the corporation, because the statute under which defendant had attempted to incorporate had been declared unconstitutional, the fact that a curative act had been passed before trial did not render the plea ineffective); *Lownsdale v. Assumpsit may be maintained against a municipal corporation in certain cases upon an implied promise, but the better opinion is that a promise to pay can never be implied in a case where the corporation possesses no power to contract. *Burrill v. In Washington, while it seems that one holding a warrant drawn upon the general fund of a city cannot maintain an action upon it, yet an action at law will lie against a city for an amount due on warrants, where the city has agreed to provide a fund for the payment of the warrants according to law, and has failed to do so. British Columbia Bank v. Port Townsend, 16 Wash. 450, 47 Pac. 896.

The fact that municipal bonds are payable out of a special fund, known as a "sinking fund," does not prevent the holder from maintaining an action at law thereon to enforce collection. Waite v. Santa Cruz, 75 Fed. 967.

The corporation counsel of the city of New York has power, in the settlement of actions against the city involving at least three million dollars, the outcome of which he considers doubtful, to allow judgments aggregating seven hundred thousand dollars to be entered against the city, where such decision is made in good faith, upon the advice and approval of the counsel in charge of the litigation and of those familiar with the subject-matter thereof. O'Brien v. New York, 40 N. Y. App. Div. 331, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 1039 [affirmed in 160 N. Y. 691, 55 N. E. 1098].

C. Conditions Precedent—1. IN GENERAL. In the absence of a statute or charter provision to the contrary,⁷⁶ the conditions precedent to an action by a municipality are ordinarily the same as if the action were brought by an individual.⁷⁷ Where an action is brought against a municipality, conditions precedent, such as a demand,⁷⁸ or a showing that there is a fund in the treasury applicable to the payment of the amount claimed on the contract,⁷⁹ or other like conditions,⁸⁰ must first be complied with, or shown to exist, before a recovery is authorized. Especially is this so as to conditions precedent imposed by statute.⁸¹

2. NOTICE, DEMAND, OR PRESENTATION OF CLAIM.⁸² As a condition precedent to the right to sue a municipality, it is usually provided by statute that notice, demand, or presentation of the claim must precede an action thereon;⁸³ but such (Ky.) 262, holding that trustees of a town who convey grounds dedicated to the public use and receive a part of the price are not bound to tender back such price before suing in a court of law for the possession of the grounds; for there is no case to which such principle applies in a court of law, except where a party seeks the rescission of a contract entered into while an infant.

United States.—Gamewell Fire-Alarm Tel. Co. v. New York, 31 Fed. 312, construing N. Y. Laws (1882), c. 410, § 1104, as applicable only to such claims as can be prosecuted in state courts by the actions or proceedings mentioned in section 1103.

Strict construction.—Statutes requiring the presentation of claims against a municipality a certain period before action shall be brought thereon are to be strictly construed, and substantial compliance therewith rigidly enforced. MacDonald v. New York, 42 N. Y. App. Div. 263, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 16.

Who must give notice.—Generally the notice must emanate from the claimant or his agent. Ruprecht v. New York, 102 N. Y. App. Div. 309, 92 N. Y. Suppl. 421. Presentation of a claim by one who has assigned it as security is sufficient to enable him to sue, where done with the knowledge and acquiescence of the assignee. Lamson v. Marshall, 133 Mich. 250, 95 N. W. 78.

Under the forcible entry and detainer statute, a notice addressed to a person as mayor of the city, instead of to the city, is not for that reason invalid. Oklahoma City v. Hill, 4 Okla. 521, 46 Pac. 568.

Mandamus.—Statutes requiring a demand before suing a municipality do not apply to mandamus proceedings to enforce a judgment against it. Nicholson v. Dare County Com'rs, 121 N. C. 27, 27 S. E. 996.

Contents.—The mere presentation of the claim of an officer without disclosing the character and extent of his services has been held insufficient. Walpole v. Pueblo, 12 Colo. App. 151, 54 Pac. 910.

presentation and notice is not a condition precedent where not required by statutory or charter provisions.⁸⁴ The statutory requirement of notice and presentation does not, however, apply to a set-off of the claim in an action by a municipality.⁸⁵ The general statutes, other than those relating only to personal injuries and to actions for torts, vary considerably in their phraseology in the different jurisdictions, with the result that many of them have been construed as embracing all claims,⁸⁶ including demands arising from a tort,⁸⁷ while other statutes are held to relate only to claims arising ex contractu.⁸⁸ The claim must be presented to the particular officer or board designated in the statute,⁸⁹ and within the time designated therein.⁹⁰ In case of unliquidated damages, it has been held that the notice need not state the amount claimed.⁹¹ Usually the statement of the claim is required to be verified.⁹² Where a claim is presented, reasonable time must be given to investigate and pass upon the claim before suing,⁹³ especially where the statute so provides.⁹⁴ But where, after presentation, no action is taken on the claim for an unreasonable time, claimant may sue notwithstanding the charter provides that no suit shall be brought until the claim has been disallowed.⁹⁵ It

Failure of auditor to forward.—Where an auditor is authorized to receive and audit claims against the city and forward them to the controller, the fact that the auditor failed to forward a claim properly presented to him is no defense to an action thereon. MacDonald v. New York, 42 N. Y. App. Div. 263, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 16.

Retroactive effect.—Such statutes will not ordinarily be given a retroactive effect. Thoeni v. Dubuque, 115 Iowa 482, 88 N. W. 967.

W. 515, holding that the statute does not apply to an action solely for equitable relief. See also supra, XIV, E, 2.

What constitutes claim.—A demand that a city treasurer shall receive the tax on certain property without requiring, as a condition, payment of an assessment on other property, is not a "claim" against the city, which must be presented to the council for audit before it can be sued on. Hutchinson v. Rochester, 92 Hun (N. Y.) 393, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 766.

89. Leonard v. Holyoke, 138 Mass. 78 (holding that where notice is required to be given to the mayor, the city clerk, or the treasurer, a notice addressed to the city clerk is sufficient where it expressly states that the plaintiff claims damages against the city mentioned in the designation of the city clerk); Mark v. West Troy, 69 Hun (N. Y.) 442, 23

N. Y. Suppl. 422 (holding that the presentation of a bill to the chamberlain and president of the village is not a presentation to the "board of trustees"); Rafferty v. Pittsburgh, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 77 (notice to assistant solicitor sufficient where notice required to be given to city solicitor); McKenna v. Bates, (R. I. 1896) 35 Atl. 580 (presentation to board of aldermen not sufficient where presentation to be made to city council); Whalen v. Bates, 19 R. I. 274, 33 Atl. 224 (notice addressed to mayor and one branch of council not sufficient as presentation to council).

Seattle*, 14 Wash. 438, 44 Pac. 884, holding that an action may be maintained on a claim, although not verified, as required by the charter, where it was rejected solely on the ground that the city was not liable.

The officer or board may waive the verification and affidavit. Kriseler v. Le Valley, 122 Mich. 576, 81 N. W. 580.

93. Mason v. Muskegon, 111 Mich. 687, 70 N. W. 332.

94. Whitney v. Port Huron, 88 Mich. 268, 50 N. W. 316, 26 Am. St. Rep. 291, holding that a claimant may sue where more than two months has elapsed after presenting his claim, during which time the common council has had four meetings at which no action was taken in regard to the claim.

95. Kraft v. Madison, 98 Wis. 252, 73 N. W. 775. See also Gregory v. New York, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 451, holding that where an employee is required to apply for a warrant before he can sue for compensation, an unreasonable refusal of the departmental board to give a warrant gives him the right to sue.

Where two claims under one contract are presented to a city at the same time, and the council acts on one, it is presumed that it has had a reasonable time to act on the other has been held that in no case is a second presentation necessary.⁹⁶ Compliance with the statutory provisions cannot be waived by officers to whom the claim is to be presented.⁹⁷

D. Defenses. The fact that there are no funds for the payment of a claim usually constitutes no defense in an action against a municipality.⁹⁸ A municipality may set up any facts constituting a set-off.⁹⁹ An appropriation by the municipality does not estop it from pleading fraud therein.¹ Where one seeks to recover money paid under protest to avoid prosecution under an invalid ordinance, the invalidity of the ordinance is no defense.² The fact that the commencement of a suit against a city for services prevents the city from negotiating its bonds does not authorize a counter-claim of such damages.³

E. Jurisdiction and Venue.⁴ Although there are cases to the contrary,⁵ the general rule is that actions against municipal corporations are not transitory but local and must be brought in the county where the municipality is located,⁶ except where jurisdiction outside of such county is expressly conferred by statute.⁷ Where a city is partly situated within two counties, it must be sued in the county where its municipal offices and government are located.⁸ A municipality may be sued in courts of general jurisdiction,⁹ unless otherwise specially provided by law.¹⁰ Jurisdiction over a municipality cannot be obtained by attachment of its property in the courts of another state.¹¹ Consent of the officers or agents of also, within a charter provision that the city shall not be subject to suit on a claim until it has had reasonable time to pass on it. Ludington Water-Supply Co. v. Ludington, 119 Mich. 480, 78 N. W. 558.

Suppl. 885 [affirmed in 50 N. Y. App. Div. 502, 64 N. E. 178], holding that the defense of "no funds" to a claim for services rendered, payable out of the general funds, cannot be interposed, unless there were no funds at the command of the village at the time the person rendering the services was employed.

the municipality does not give jurisdiction of actions where jurisdiction is not conferred by law.¹²

F. Time to Sue and Limitations.¹³ Generally, statutes of limitation run for and against municipalities as well as natural persons.¹⁴ In some jurisdictions a shorter period of limitations, usually a year or less, is prescribed by special statutes in actions against a city, or a particular class of cities, for damages from personal injuries;¹⁵ but such statutes do not affect prior charter provisions fixing a different period of limitations.¹⁶ Special limitations fixed by a city charter are ordinarily valid,¹⁷ unless contrary to some special constitutional provision.¹⁸ So the municipality may limit the time to sue on a contract by provisions in the contract itself.¹⁹ Where a statute of limitations is made applicable only to certain actions against a named city, only the city can take advantage thereof.²⁰ It may be provided by charter that no action shall lie until a specified time after the presentation of the claim to the municipality.²¹

G. Suits in Corporate Name. Except where it is otherwise provided by statute,²² actions by or against a municipal corporation should be brought in its proper corporate name.²³ Where two corporate names appear in the charter

Where collections are held in trust by a municipality, and there has been no repudiation of the trust, limitations is no defense. New Orleans v. Fisher, 180 U. S. 185, 21 S. Ct. 347, 45 L. ed. 485 [modifying 91 Fed. 574, 34 C. C. A. 15].

the municipality may sue or be sued in either.²⁴ The municipality may sue in its own name on contracts made by some officer or agent for its benefit.²⁵ A stranger cannot, without authority, prosecute a suit in the name of a municipality;²⁶ but the corporate name may generally be used by any officer or board authorized to represent the corporate interest involved in the action.²⁷ If the name of the corporation is changed it must sue or be sued, in respect to its prior rights and liabilities, by its new name.²⁸ A statute authorizing actions to be brought by and in the name of the state to recover municipal money unlawfully obtained does not deprive a municipality of the right to set off such cause of action in an action brought against it.²⁹ except as modified by statute. And the same is true of the right to intervene,³⁵ etc. Inasmuch as a town council is a continuing body, it is not necessary to bring into a suit against it members who have been newly elected during the pendency of the action.³⁶ Unless the statute has prescribed a different remedy,³⁷ the state, by its attorney-general, may sue to recover moneys which have been unlawfully raised by officers of the municipality or board and converted to their own use,³⁸ or to restrain a municipality from making a contract which is not authorized by its charter.³⁹ So the state and not the city has been held the proper party to bring suit on a forfeited bond where the statute provides summary proceedings in the name of the state for the collection of such bonds, although the amount of the forfeiture inures to the benefit of the municipality.⁴⁰ On the other hand, other cases hold that where moneys belonging to the municipality are misappropriated, it alone and not the state can sue for their recovery.⁴¹

I. PROCESS⁴²—1. IN GENERAL. The rules relating to the contents, service, and return of process in actions by or against municipal corporations are the same as those governing process in other actions, except in so far as modified by statute.⁴³ In an action in the federal courts service of process on a municipality party was merely a formal defect not reached by a general demurrer).

Where a municipality is dissolved, and subsequently a new municipality covering the same territory and inhabitants is incorporated, a bill filed by commissioners appointed to collect the assets of the old municipality, to interpret the powers conferred upon them, must join the new municipality as a defendant. *Amy v. A city treasurer, holding funds alleged to be applicable to the payment of a claim sued for, cannot be impleaded in the claimant's action against the city, unless he is averred to have been in default. Berlin Iron-Bridge Co. v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 50 S. W. 408.

42. See, generally, PROCESS.

43. See cases cited infra, this note.

Necessity.—A judgment rendered against a municipality is void for want of jurisdiction where there is no proper service of process. Fairfax v. Alexandria, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 16 [affirmed in 95 U. S. 774, 24 L. ed. 583]; Mariner v. Waterloo, 75 Wis. 438, 44 N. W. 512; Young v. Dexter, 18 Fed. 201.

Declaration as process.—Under a statute permitting actions against municipalities to be commenced by declaration, such declaration is process within the meaning of a charter requiring all process against the city to run against it in its corporate name and to be served on the proper city officer at least ten days before the return-day. Menominee v. Menominee Cir. Judge, 81 Mich. 577, 46 N. W. 23.

Contents.—The summons is properly directed to the municipality in its corporate name. Loughran v. Hickory, 129 N. C. 281, 40 S. E. 46. A summons is not vitiated because it not only commands the corporation to be summoned but also names the mayor and aldermen. Houston v. Emery, 76 Tex. 282, 13 S. W. 264.

Who may serve.—In Connecticut inhabitants of a town might sign and serve writs. Windham v. Hampton, 1 Root (Conn.) 175.

Manner of service.—The provision of a charter requiring a certified copy of a summons to be served in all suits brought against the town does not apply to an action of ejectment. In such case a copy of the declaration and notice is a sufficient service. Robertson v. Roe, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,927, 5 McLean 459.

Place of service.—Summons against a corporation which is situated in two counties may be served on the mayor in one of such counties, although the action is brought in the other. Fox v. Fostoria, 14 Ohio Cir. Ct. 471, 8 Ohio Cir. Dec. 39.

Time of service.—In the absence of a statutory provision, the common-law practice in the court of king's bench, requiring fifteen days to intervene between the day of service and the return-day of a summons in an action against a municipal corporation, prevails in New Jersey. McNeal v. Gloucester City, 51 N. J. L. 444, 18 Atl. 112.

Proof of service.—Proof that a city was a defendant and served with process may be established by proof filed pursuant to a nunc pro tunc order consisting of an affidavit entitled in the action, naming the city as one of defendants, and averring that a summons and complaint were served on defendants and on the members of the city council. People v. Dwyer, 90 N. Y. 402.

Effect of service.—Service of process on a municipal officer does not of itself make him is regulated by the law of the state.⁴⁴ Statutes expressly relating to service of process on private corporations do not apply to municipal corporations.⁴⁵ The mere delivery of a copy of a summons to an officer of the municipality does not of itself make him a party so as to authorize him to file an answer.⁴⁶

2. PERSON TO BE SERVED. In the absence of statute, service should be made on the mayor or other head of the corporation as at common law.⁴⁷ But in most of the states statutes expressly provide as to the person or persons upon whom process must be served in actions against a municipality.⁴⁸ A charter provision as to who must be served prevails over a later general statute.⁴⁹ Service upon one other than the officer or agent named in the statute gives no jurisdiction,⁵⁰ and when the statute provides for service upon two, service on one only is insufficient.⁵¹ Service upon an officer elect before acceptance and qualification,⁵² or upon an officer whose term has expired,⁵³ is insufficient. Where the act creating a quasi-public corporation does not provide for organization with any head officer, service upon all the members is sufficient in the absence of proof of organization.⁵⁴

3. WAIVER. The acceptance or waiver of service by officers not designated in the statute as officers who may be served is ineffectual to confer jurisdiction.⁵⁵ However, it has been held that an appearance by the mayor in behalf of the a party nor authorize him to file an answer. Miller v. Aracoma, 30 W. Va. 606, 5 S. E. 148.

44. Perkins v. Watertown, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 10,991, 5 Biss. 320.

Where there is no mayor, service on the clerk and three members of the council is sufficient. Cooper v. Cape May Point, 67 N. J. L. 437, 51 Atl. 511.

Who is chief officer.—The chairman of the board of trustees of a town incorporated under Mo. Gen. St. (1865) c. 41, is its chief officer, on whom, in the absence of a statute, service must be made in a suit against the town. Cloud v. Pierce City, 86 Mo. 357.

48. Glencoe v. People, 78 Ill. 382 (holding that under the statute where the municipal government of a town is vested in the council consisting of a president and five councilmen, a summons in a suit against the council in a proceeding to compel the performance of a public duty is properly served upon the president alone); Sacramento v. Fowle, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 119, 22 L. ed. 592 (holding that president of board of trustees was "president or other head of the corporation" within California statute). See also Amy v. Watertown, 130 U. S. 301, 9 S. Ct. 530, 32 L. ed. 946 (holding that Wis. Laws (1879), c. 46, did not give the chairman of board of street commissioners power to receive service of process against the city); Young v. Dexter, 18 Fed. 201 (holding the town-clerk not the head of the corporation nor its managing agent). And see the statutes of the several states.

Where there is no mayor.—Service of the summons by delivering copies thereof to the city clerk and the last-elected chairman of the board of street commissioners of such city, at a time when the office of mayor is vacant and there is no president or presiding officer of the common council, is a sufficient service where the statute requires service on the mayor and city clerk. Worts v. Watertown, 16 Fed. 534.

49. Stabler v. Alexandria, 42 Fed. 490.

50. Fairfax v. Alexandria, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 16 [affirmed in 95 U. S. 774, 24 L. ed. 583]; Amy v. Watertown, 130 U. S. 301, 9 S. Ct. 530, 32 L. ed. 946.

Where there is a vacancy in the office of mayor and there is no president or presiding officer of the common council, service upon the chairman of the board of street commissioners and upon the city clerk is insufficient to support a default judgment where the charter requires service on the mayor. Watertown v. Robinson, 69 Wis. 230, 34 N. W. 139. And the same rule applies where the sheriff is unable to find the mayor. Watertown v. Robinson, 59 Wis. 513, 17 N. W. 542.

51. Mariner v. Waterloo, 75 Wis. 438, 44 N. W. 512.

53. Amy v. Watertown, 130 U. S. 301, 9 S. Ct. 530, 32 L. ed. 946. But see Jones v. Jefferson, 66 Tex. 576, 1 S. W. 903, holding that, where the constitution provides that officers shall continue to perform the duty of their office until the qualification of their successors, service is properly made upon a city officer whose term has expired but whose successor has not been elected.

municipality is a waiver of service of process and is binding upon the municipal corporation.⁵⁶ A defect in the return, in failing to show on what officer the summons was served, may be waived by the appearance of the officer served and a receipt by the proper officer of the proceeds of the judgment.⁵⁷

J. Appearance and Representation by Attorney.⁵⁸ A city or village attorney is generally a municipal officer and has control over municipal litigation.⁵⁹ He generally represents the entire corporation and not any particular officer or board thereof.⁶⁰ His general functions, as prescribed by charter, cannot be varied, nor can his authority be diminished, by the common council by order, resolution, or by-law,⁶¹ and his appearance in judicial proceedings is presumed to be authorized.⁶² Other counsel may represent the corporation with his consent,⁶³ but not otherwise.⁶⁴ He is amenable to judicial rule and restraint,⁶⁵ the same as counsel for other parties.⁶⁶ His general partner, it has been held, cannot appear for the city without special authority,⁶⁷ although he has power, in the absence of a statute or ordinance to the contrary, to delegate his authority to another.⁶⁸ The corporation counsel has no larger powers to bind his client than those connected with the ordinary relation of attorney and client,⁶⁹ and he cannot waive the issuance and service of process so as to give jurisdiction by his mere appearance.⁷⁰ His default in failing to appear, whereby a default judgment is rendered,

Duties.—It is not his duty to defend municipal officers in actions to which the municipality is not a party and for whose acts the municipality is not liable, and in such a case he cannot bind the municipality by a contract for the services of a stenographer. Chicago v. Williams, 182 Ill. 135, 55 N. E. 123 [reversing 80 Ill. App. 33].

Dismissal.—The rule that, where an attorney has been retained and has appeared in the action, the party will not be allowed to revoke his authority and appoint a new one without an order of the court, or of a judge at chambers, duly entered in the minutes of the court, applies to a city attorney. Parker v. Williamsburgh, 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 250.

A provision in a city charter that "the city attorney shall conduct all the law business of the corporation and of the departments thereof, and all other law business in which the city shall be interested, and when so ordered by the common council," does not affect the question of the city's legal capacity to sue; and the objection that the city attorney had not been ordered by the council to commence an action is not ground for demurrer but must be raised, if at all, by answer. Presumptions.—Attorneys appearing for a municipality will be presumed to be duly authorized, although such corporation has by law an official counsel and law department charged with the control of all the law business in which the city is interested. New York v. Exchange F. Ins. Co., 3 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 261, 3 Keyes 436, 3 Transcr. App. 206, 34 How. Pr. 103 [affirming 9 Bosw. 424].

will be more readily excused in the case of the corporation than in the case of a default of an individual.⁷¹

K. Attachment and Garnishment.⁷² Municipalities are generally exempt from attachment and garnishment,⁷³ and property owned by a municipality and devoted to the services of the public cannot be seized in an admiralty suit in rem.⁷⁴ Where an action is brought by a municipal corporation it may, in a proper case, attach property of the defendant, and it is usually provided by statute that no undertaking need be given to procure the attachment.⁷⁵

L. Injunction⁷⁶ and Receivers.⁷⁷ The procedure in injunction suits is practically the same as where an individual is a party.⁷⁸ The same public policy which prevents a claim against a city being attached prevents it from being reached by a suit in equity to restrain the payment thereof and the appointment of a receiver to receive it.⁷⁹ It has been held that a receiver may be appointed for an insolvent municipality,⁸⁰ but only in case of insolvency and where irreparable damage will otherwise ensue.⁸¹

M. Pleading⁸² — 1. IN GENERAL. Municipal corporations are ordinarily subject to the same rules of pleading as private persons,⁸³ except where otherwise provided by statute.⁸⁴ It has been held that the pleadings need not be signed by an officer of the corporation,⁸⁵ and that a pleading of a municipality may be verified on information and belief by a member of the common council.⁸⁶ Amendments are liberally allowed, to set out the proper corporate title,⁸⁷ and a petition against the trustees of a town may be amended so as to make the town itself a

Damages on dissolution of bond.—The fact that a city attorney is personally interested in city bonds will not deprive the city of its right to damages on the dissolution of an injunction against the collection of taxes to pay interest on such bonds. Mason v. Shawneetown, 77 Ill. 533. On the dissolution of an injunction against a city, counsel fees should not be allowed by way of damages, when no special counsel was employed by the city. Nixon v. Biloxi, 76 Miss. 810, 25 So. 664; Uhrig v. St. Louis, 47 Mo. 528.

Bond by corporation to dissolve injunction.—Under the New Orleans charter a city may obtain the dissolution of an injunction against it without furnishing the bond required of other litigants. Jefferson, etc., R. Co. v. New Orleans, 30 La. Ann. 970.

Dec. 189 (holding that a statute providing that a city solicitor shall prosecute and defend all suits in which the municipality is a party does not necessitate the signature by the solicitor of a petition in an action by the city).

The Consolidation Act of 1856 did not destroy, but continued, the corporation of the city of San Francisco; and the change in name which it directed did not require any alteration in the pleadings, or any suggestion upon the records in a suit then pending. People v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 668.

defendant where the issues are not thereby changed;⁸⁸ and it has been held that a municipality will not be so strictly held to promptness in asking for leave to amend as will an individual.⁸⁹

2. EXISTENCE AND INCIDENTS OF INCORPORATION. Describing a municipality by its proper name is a sufficient averment that it is a municipal corporation,⁹⁰ and a distinct averment of the existence of a municipal corporation is equivalent to an allegation that it was duly organized.⁹¹ But where the cause of action depends upon the statutory class to which defendant municipality belongs the complaint should designate the class.⁹² An allegation by a city that it is a municipal corporation and has been for a specified number of years does not fix the date of its incorporation nor preclude it from proving the true date.⁹³ Where the complaint avers that the board of police commissioners was "organized and acting as such under the laws providing for such board," an objection that it does not aver that the board was a legally constituted one is not tenable.⁹⁴ A bare denial will not put in issue its existence as a corporation,⁹⁵ and generally a specific denial thereof must be verified.⁹⁶ Where the municipality appears and makes an affirmative defense it admits its corporate existence.⁹⁷ A municipality sued as a defendant may plead by way of abatement its non-existence because the statute under which defendant had attempted to incorporate had been declared unconstitutional and the fact that a curative act had been passed before trial does not render the plea ineffective.⁹⁸ A variance between the pleading and proof as to the name of the corporation, the payee of a bond sued on, may be fatal.⁹⁹

3. COMPLAINT. Where an action is brought by a municipality it need not specially allege its power to sue.¹ So where an action is brought by the proper officers in the name of the city, it is not necessary in the first instance to plead that the city authorized the bringing of the action.² When it is sought to enforce against the corporation a purely statutory obligation, all the facts requisite to make the liability complete must be pleaded.³ But the petition need not plead provisions of its charter on which the action is based, where the charter has been declared a public act of which judicial notice must be taken.⁴ Where the claim must be presented to the municipality for allowance before bringing suit, such presentation must generally be alleged in the complaint;⁵ and it must be alleged that there has elapsed, since the presentation, the statutory time provided before the expiration of which suit cannot be brought.⁶ Where, however, the statutory provision merely provides that the omission to present the claim shall be a bar to an action against the city, the presentation is not a condition precedent but is merely matter of defense which need not be pleaded by plaintiff.⁷ Where an action is brought on a claim against the original city, but after its consolidation with another city, the complaint must state the facts showing that the cause of action accrued against the original city prior to its consolidation.⁸ In an action against a city on a contract which on its face is valid and within the scope of the general powers of the city, the declaration need not allege that the city had power to make the contract;⁹ but the existence of conditions made necessary by statutory or organic law to the execution and validity of the contract must be alleged.¹⁰ If the contract was made with municipal agents, it is sufficient to allege that the Waiver.—Failure to raise the objection by answer or demurrer has been held a waiver where the presentation is not jurisdictional. Devlin v. New York, 4 Misc. (N. Y.) 106, 23 N. Y. Suppl. 888; Davis v. Appleton, 109 Wis. 580, 85 N. W. 515 (holding that a statute providing that no action shall be maintained against a city, on any claim or demand of any kind whatsoever, until such claim shall have been presented to the council, is not a condition precedent to the right of action, but is in the nature of a statute of limitations, and hence plaintiff need not allege compliance with it, but defendant must allege failure to comply, or the point will be waived); O'Connor v. Fond du Lac, 109 Wis. 253, 85 N. W. 327, 53 L. R. A. 831; Sheel v. Appleton, 49 Wis. 125, 5 N. W. 27.

App. 580, 21 S. W. 393. Compare Lauenstein v. Fond du Lac, 28 Wis. 336, where allegation of power of board was held insufficient.

Purpose of lease.—A complaint against a municipal corporation alleging a lease of property by it is not bad because it does not show the purpose for which the property was leased, as it will be presumed that it was for a lawful municipal purpose, and if it is claimed that the purpose was unlawful, this is matter of defense. Anderson v. O'Conner, 98 Ind. 168.

Ordinances.—A petition counting on a contract with a municipality need not aver that the contract was made in pursuance of an ordinance. The allegation that the contract was made implies the existence of the ordinance. Devers v. Howard, 88 Mo. App. 253. An allegation that defendant city "duly" entered into a contract authorizes proof that the contract was entered into under a valid city ordinance. British Columbia Bank v. Port Townsend, 16 Wash. 450, 47 Pac. 896. Where the contract was made with a committee of the city council, the ordinance empowering the committee to make the contract need not be set out, where the complaint alleges that the committee had power to make the contract, and that the city council had recognized its validity. Harrison v. Sulphur Springs, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 50 S. W. 1064.

In an action to recover the contract price for lighting the streets with electric light, it is not necessary to state in the complaint the population of the town, the amount of its taxables, the amount of its current expenses, etc., in order that the court may know that the contract is one which the town had the right to make, since towns have the right to enter into such contracts, under Burns (1894), § 4301, and fraud or abuse of discretion is never presumed, but must be alleged and proved. Gosport v. Pritchard, 156 Ind. 400, 59 N. E. 1058.

10. Kerr v. Bellefontaine, 13 Ohio Cir. Ct. 24, 7 Ohio Cir. Dec. 93; Texas Water, etc., Co. v. Cleburne, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 580, 21 S. W. 393. But see Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 220, 17 L. ed. 530, holding that where a suit is brought on a contract made by a city, where the laws require the consent of two thirds of its electors to validate debts for borrowed money, such consent need not be averred, since it will be presumed.

municipality made the contract;¹¹ and an allegation that municipal trustees employed plaintiff for a specific purpose is a sufficient averment that such trustees acted officially.¹² Where the action is for services in selling bonds, the complaint need not allege that the bonds were legally issued.¹³ Where an action is brought against officers of a municipality as such, the word "as" should precede their official designation.¹⁴ Where a municipality is sued for services on a quantum meruit a mere averment of acceptance is insufficient unless it is also stated that such acceptance is evidenced by ordinance or express corporate action to that effect.¹⁵ But a petition against a city averring that plaintiff built a bridge for it along one of its streets, which, when finished, was accepted and used, is sufficient, as stating a case on an implied contract to pay for the reasonable value thereof, although other averments therein are insufficient to show liability on an express contract.¹⁶

4. ANSWER, DEMURRER, AND REPLY.¹⁷ The rule which requires a defendant to answer positively as to the facts alleged in the complaint which are presumably within his knowledge applies to municipal corporations.¹⁸ So a statutory provision forbidding an extension of time to a corporation to answer or demur in certain specified actions, except on notice to plaintiff's attorney, has been held applicable to municipal corporations,¹⁹ as has a statute authorizing a judgment by default in certain actions unless defendant corporation serves with its answer or demurrer a copy of an order directing the issues to be tried.²⁰ In some states, by statute, municipalities are exempt from filing affidavits of defense in certain cases.²¹ The answer of the municipality, where it is indefinite and uncertain,²²

Appropriations.—In an action by a physician to recover for services rendered to a village, a petition which does not allege a prior appropriation for such services is bad on general demurrer. De Wolf v. Bennett, 3 Nebr. (Unoff.) 470, 91 N. W. 855. In an action to recover compensation as policeman, it was sufficient to aver in general terms the appropriation of sufficient funds to pay plaintiff's claims. Gorley v. Louisville, 65 S. W. 844, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1782. In Texas a petition in an action of debt against a city which fails to allege that at the time of the creation of the debt provision was made by the city for its payment is demurrable. Ellis v. Cleburne, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 35 S. W. 495; Waco v. McNeill, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 29 S. W. 1109. It must be alleged that the city had made provision to meet the obligations of the contract or had funds which it had a right to apply to such purpose. Peck-Smead Co. v. Sherman, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 208, 63 S. W. 340. An averment that due provision was made before the issuance of bonds for the levy of a special tax annually, to meet annual interest thereon and provide for a sinking fund, as required by the constitution and the city charter, sufficiently shows that the provision was for at least the minimum per cent required thereby; judicial notice being taken of both the constitution and the charter. Berlin Iron-Bridge Co. v. San Antonio, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 50 S. W. 408.

Power of agent to make.—Where a contract is made on behalf of a municipality by persons not general municipal officers, who have no power to contract for the municipality except as authorized by a municipal board, and they can only be authorized under circumstances and upon the condition prescribed in the statute, a complaint on such contract which fails to set forth the taking of any of the preliminary steps which are required by the statute to be taken is insufficient. Holroyd v. Indian Lake, 75 N. Y. App. Div. 197, 77 N. Y. Suppl. 672.

App. 200, 35 S. W. 837. Self-serving statements.—In an action by a city to recover for wharfage, an ordinance of the common council reciting that the suit was commenced without its knowledge or consent, and instructing the attorney of the corporation to forbid the further use of its name, was inadmissible. Trowbridge v. Albany, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 429.

Municipal claims.—Under a statute providing that municipal claims may, in suits thereon, be read in evidence of the facts therein set forth, material averments in the claim filed are prima facie evidence of the things averred. Philadelphia v. Esau, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 425.

A city ordinance providing a punishment for maintaining a nuisance was not admissible as evidence for the city in a prosecution against it for suffering a nuisance. Newport v. Com., 108 Ky. 151, 55 S. W. 914, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1591. Salt Lake City*, 5 Utah 302, 16 Pac. 598.

Amount of city's indebtedness.—Where an attorney rendered services for a city under an implied contract, the liability was incurred when, from time to time, the services were fully rendered and accepted, so that, in an action therefor, evidence as to whether there were sufficient unappropriated revenues at such times to meet the liability was admissible, the constitution limiting the city's liability for one year to the revenue provided for that year. Buck v. Eureka, 124 Cal. 61, 56 Pac. 612. An official publication of a city's indebtedness is competent to prove the amount thereof, and a certificate of the city clerk as to the amount of taxable property within the city, "as appears from the record" in his office, is admissible. East St. Louis Gas Light, etc., Co. v. East St. Louis, 45 Ill. App. 591. The certificate of a city controller as to the city's indebtedness is not evidence thereof, being a mere statement of his conclusions from the records of his office. Chicago v. English, 180 Ill. 476, 54 N. E. 609 [modifying 80 Ill. App. 163]. But see Norton v. East St. Louis, 36 Ill. App. 171.

Verbal instructions by members of a city council to the city marshal to notify a water-works company to discontinue its supply of water to the city, and evidence of the marshal's having accordingly done so, are incompetent to prove a discontinuance of the contract existing between the city and the company for the supplying of water to the former, since corporate action alone could discontinue such contract, such action could only be proved by written minutes and records of the council. *Greenville v. Legality.—It will be presumed that a corporation has acted legally in making a contract. Connell v. Hill, 30 La. Ann. 251. It will be presumed that whatever was necessary to the contract in respect to entries on the record of the proceedings of the council was done. Logansport v. Dykeman, 116 Ind. 15, 17 N. E. 587. When a municipal corporation seeks to avoid its contract on the ground of its want of power to contract, and the contract is not upon its face necessarily beyond the scope of its authority, such authority will be presumed. Chicago v. Peck, 98 Ill. App. 434 [affirmed in 196 Ill. 260, 63 N. E. 711]. See also Anderson v. O'Conner, 98 Ind. 168; and supra, V, B, 6, c; IX, H, 5.

Compliance with the law will be presumed. Enterprise v. Fowler, 38 Kan. 415, 16 Pac. 703 (holding that where the claim was presented to the council, and referred to a committee, who reported in favor of the allowance of part of the claim, it will be presumed to have complied with the statute requiring claims to be presented in writing with a full account of the items, and sworn to be correct, reasonable, and just); St. Louis Gas Light Co. v. St. Louis, 84 Mo. 202 [affirming 11 Mo. App. 55] (holding that the fact that a city auditor enters as charges against a city on his books the bills of a gas company is presumptive evidence that each bill was properly audited at its entry); Howard v. Oshkosh, 33 Wis. 309 (holding that it will be presumed that a claim against a city was duly verified as required by the charter before the common council acted upon it).

Incorporation.—Where a complaint against a village alleges its incorporation, and defendant admits that it is a municipal corporation organized under the laws of the state, it will be presumed that defendant is incorporated under the general statutes; there being no other mode for becoming an incorporated village. Peterson v. Cokato, 84 Minn. 205, 87 N. W. 615.

33. See, generally, EVIDENCE, 16 Cyc. 926 et seq.

Absence of ordinance.—In an action on city warrants issued for current expenses, where the defense is that they were not issued in pursuance of an ordinance previously passed appropriating money to the payment thereof, the burden is on the city to affirmatively show that no such ordinance had been passed. Hubbell v. South Hutchinson, 64 Kan. 645, 68 Pac. 52.

Excessiveness of fees.—In an action by a city against a tax-collector, the city has the burden to show that the fees charged were excessive. Ysleta v. Lowenstein, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 25 S. W. 444.

Power to execute note.—Where defendant city, in an action on a renewed note executed by its mayor, pleads non est factum, the burden of showing that the mayor was authorized to execute such renewal note is on plaintiff. Tyler v. Adams, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 62 S. W. 119.

Power to make contract.—In an action against a city on a contract, the city having had general authority to make the contract, it is not incumbent on plaintiff to show that taking of the steps and existence of conditions requisite to authorize the city to make the contract, such as the making of an appropriation, the letting to the lowest bidder after advertisement, etc. Chicago v. Peck, 196 Ill. 260, 63 N. E. 711 [affirming 98 Ill. App. 434]. Compare Kerr v. Bellefontaine, 13 Ohio Cir. Ct. 24, 7 Ohio Cir. Dec. 93. But when a party who is sued in virtue of a contract made by a municipal corporation denies in general terms that the corporation has complied with the law authorizing it to make such a contract, the burden of proof is on him to show that the law has not been complied with. Connell v. Hill, 30 La. Ann. 251. And where, in an action on non-negotiable notes given for land purchased from plaintiff by defendant, defendant pleads nil debet, the burden is on plaintiff to show that the municipality had power to purchase the land. Richmond, etc., Land, etc., Co. v. West Point, 94 Va. 668, 27 S. E. 460. But where a city defends an action against it on a contract on the ground that such contract is invalid because it created an indebtedness in excess of the limit fixed by the constitution of the state, it has the burden of proving all the facts necessary to establish such defense. Chicago v. Peck, 196 Ill. 260, 63 N. E. 711 [affirming 98 Ill. App. 434]; Adams v. Waterville, 95 Me. 242, 49 Atl. 1042; Crebs v. Lebanon, 98 Fed. 549. See also Arbuckle-Ryan Co. v. Grand Lodge, 122 Mich. 491, 81 N. W. 358.

Presentation of claim.—The burden is on sufficiency³⁴ in civil actions in general apply to evidence in actions by or against a municipal corporation.

O. Trial.³⁵ Except where it is otherwise provided by statute,³⁶ trials in municipal cases are conducted as in other actions,³⁷ the respective functions of judge and jury as to law and fact being preserved and maintained.³⁸ Where a town appoints agents to prosecute an action, such authority to prosecute the suit implies power to refer it by rule of court.³⁹

P. Judgment⁴⁰ — IN GENERAL. Ordinarily there is no difference, so far as the judgment is concerned, whether a municipal corporation is a party or the action is between individuals,⁴¹ except as to the effect thereof as a lien and as to the subsequent procedure to enforce it.⁴² For instance the rules relating to the power to vacate the judgment upon motion,⁴³ the right to collaterally attack the plaintiff to prove presentation of his claim before suit. Lincoln v. Finkle, 41 Nebr. 575, 59 N. W. 915; Lincoln v. Grant, 38 Nebr. 369, 56 N. W. 995; Luke v. El Paso, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 60 S. W. 363.

Shifting burden.—Where the special duties of a controller of a municipal corporation are not defined by law, proof of his usage to receive and file notices affecting the indebtedness of the city is sufficient, in an action against the corporation, to cast on it the burden of proving that his duties did not include the subject in question. Hall v. Buffalo, 2 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 301, 1 Keyes 193.

34. See, generally, EVIDENCE, 17 Cyc. 753 et seq. See also San Francisco v. Bradbury, 92 Cal. 414, 28 Pac. 803 (sufficiency of evidence to show reservation by city of land for engine lots); McWilliams v. Plaquemine, 19 La. Ann. 74; Tribune v. New York, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 240.

A stipulation by the attorney for a city, in an action of covenant on a lease for a water office, that there was an appropriation for the rent sufficient to cover the entire period up to the time of suit, must be regarded as evidence of such appropriation, as against the city's objection, on appeal, that no proof of an appropriation was made. *Chicago v. Delivery of copy.—Where a judgment against the city directs that a certified copy thereof be delivered to the city counsel, compliance therewith is not essential to the validity of the judgment or proceedings to enforce it. Cairo v. Everett, 107 Ill. 75.

Payment.—Statute authority to pay "judgments against the city" does not include judgments against a special board. U. S. v. New Orleans Bd. of Liquidation, 60 Fed. 387, 9 C. C. A. 37. Payment of a default judgment obtained against a city is made at the city's peril where pending an action to restrain the city from paying an award to one named in the award as entitled to damages. Spears v. New York, 87 N. Y. 359. Transfer, by the act of 1877, of the powers of the park commissioners to the city council of New Orleans, did not relieve the common council from providing for payment of any judgment which the park commissioners had obtained against the city. State v. Pilsbury, 30 La. Ann. 705. Where the city corporation and the county organization are separate, county officers have no authority to interfere to prevent payment of a judgment against the city. Baker v. New York, 9 Abb. Pr. Statutory provisions.—Under N. Y. Laws (1859), p. 1127, § 5, the controller of the same,⁴⁴ and its effect as res judicata,⁴⁵ are the same as where only individuals are parties to the action. So a municipal corporation may consent to, or confess, a judgment in the same manner and to the same effect as a natural person or a private corporation.⁴⁶ But judgment should not be rendered absolutely against a municipality on claims payable only out of a particular fund,⁴⁷ and, in most jurisdictions, the judgment cannot award execution.⁴⁸ However, a constitutional provision that no city shall incur indebtedness exceeding in any year the income of such year does not require that a judgment rendered for a past indebtedness shall provide that it be paid out of the revenues received for the years in which it was incurred.⁴⁹ Where a municipality having an option of paying in money or in city orders fails to exercise the option, a money recovery may be had.⁵⁰ A judgment against a municipality is payable only in legal tender.⁵¹

2. PRIORITIES AND FUNDS APPLICABLE TO PAYMENT. It has been held that a municipal budget is not an appropriation of the funds to pay any particular debt due by the municipality, and hence a judgment is the first appropriation and should have precedence;⁵² and that the municipality cannot exhaust the entire revenue provided for unbonded expenditures, with one class of disbursements, and refuse to pay a judgment out of the revenues for the current year.⁵³ But judgments are not payable out of funds raised by levy for another purpose,⁵⁴ nor out of the general funds when chargeable only upon the surplus fund.⁵⁵ Generally a judgment does not take precedence over other claims.⁵⁶ In some states, city of New York had power to proceed to open judgments against the city. Sharp v. New York, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 572, 9 Abb. Pr. 243, 18 How. Pr. 97; Lowber v. New York, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 262; Macomber v. New York, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35. See also Law v. New York, 32 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 385.

Where a compromise judgment is entered against the municipality by consent, it cannot set aside the judgment, in the absence of any irregularity, fraud, or mistake, simply because a new corporation counsel believes a better result can be obtained by contesting the litigation. *Law v. by statute, current expenses have precedence over judgments;⁵⁷ and it has been held, irrespective of statute, that necessary current expenses are entitled to payment out of the current revenues in preference to a judgment against the city for a tort.⁵⁸

3. LIEN AND ENFORCEMENT. The general rule is that a judgment against a municipality is not a lien on its property held for public uses,⁵⁹ and that such property is not subject to execution.⁶⁰ Likewise a judgment is not a lien on the individual property of the inhabitants of the municipality,⁶¹ nor is such property subject to execution.⁶² Mandamus is usually the proper remedy to enforce a judgment against a municipality,⁶³ such remedy performing the office of an execution in ordinary cases.⁶⁴ Statutes prescribing the particular mode of collecting judgments against towns have been held not applicable to judgments against cities.⁶⁵ A judgment against a municipality becomes dormant where no tax is levied and mandamus to enforce it is not brought within the statutory time provided for issuing execution in ordinary cases to keep the judgment alive;⁶⁶ and after the judgment has become dormant, the levy of a tax and payment on such judgment will not revive it.⁶⁷ Scire facias is the appropriate, but not the exclusive, mode of reviving a judgment either for or against a municipality.⁶⁸ Where a judgment by default is recovered against a municipality and an individual, resort need not be first had to the property of the individual.⁶⁹ Where a municipality is the judgment creditor, it has the same right to control its judgment and fieri facias as any judgment creditor,⁷⁰ and may cause a fieri facias once issued to be set aside.⁷¹ Public moneys raised by a municipality by taxation, when in the hands of its fiscal officers are not the property of the corporation or a debt due to it, within a statute providing for supplementary proceedings.⁷² Upon the disso-

Q. Costs.⁷⁴ The general rule that costs are imposed upon the unsuccessful party applies in municipal corporation cases,⁷⁵ except where the municipality sues or is sued in the capacity of agent of the state in the enforcement of local government,⁷⁶ or where it is otherwise provided by statute.⁷⁷ In some jurisdictions, by statute, costs cannot be awarded to one who sues a municipality unless the claim was presented to it before the commencement of the action.⁷⁸ A judgment for costs will not be enforced by execution,⁷⁹ but the proper remedy is by mandamus to compel a levy.⁸⁰ Where the city is entitled to the costs, suit should be brought in its name on an undertaking for costs given by the opposing party.⁸¹

In New York, Code Civ. Proc. § 3245, provides that "costs cannot be awarded to plaintiff, in an action against a municipal corporation, in which the complaint demands a judgment for a sum of money only, unless the claim, on which the action is founded, was, before the commencement of the action, presented to the board of such corporation having the power to audit the same, or to its chief fiscal officer, at least ten days before the commencement of said action." This code provision does not apply to actions ex delicto (Gage v. Hornellsville, 106 N. Y. 667, 12 N. E. 817 [reversing 41 Hun 87]; Taylor v. Cohoes, 105 N. Y. 54, 11 N. E. 282), nor to special proceedings (In re Jetter, 78 N. Y. 601), nor to the costs of an appeal (Utica Water-Works Co. v. Utica, 31 Hun 426), nor to an action commenced in the justice's court and appealed to the county court (Marsh v. Lansingburgh, 31 Hun 514). The "chief fiscal officer" is the officer who receives, keeps, and disburses the moneys of the corporation (Gage v. Hornellsville, supra), and it is generally held that the treasurer is such officer (Gage v. Hornellsville, supra; Hunt v. Oswego, 45 Hun 305; Fisher v. Cortland, 42 Hun 173; Dressel v. Kingston, 32 Hun 526; Taylor v. Cohoes, 5 N. Y. St. 92 [reversed on other grounds in 105 N. Y. 54, 11 N. E. 282]), although in some cases presentation of the claim to the common council has been held sufficient (Williams v. Buffalo, 25 Hun 301; Butler v. Rochester, 4 Hun 321, 6 Thomps. & C. 572). It has been held that presentation of a claim to the treasurer of the water board was insufficient. King v. Randolph, 28 N. Y. App. Div. 25, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 902. Contra, *Hallinan v. Ft. If the claim is not presented and plaintiff succeeds, neither party is entitled to costs. Baine v. Rochester, supra. The statement must be verified (King v. Randolph, 28 N. Y. App. Div. 25, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 902), and must be presented by one asserting authority to act for the claimant (Spaulding v. Waverly, 12 N. Y. App. Div. 594, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 112). The claim must be presented in such a manner as to afford opportunity and sufficient information to the officer to enable him to present it to the proper auditing officers and procure authority to pay. *Spaulding v. is not ground for reversal;⁸⁷ and that the decision on a former appeal is the law of the case⁸⁸ are applicable. Generally the city attorney is authorized to take an appeal from a judgment against the municipality, or at least his authority to do so will be presumed until the contrary appears.⁸⁹ The mayor is not entitled to appeal, it seems, where not personally aggrieved by the judgment and where not authorized so to do by the common council.⁹⁰ Where the action is against a city and its board of equalization, notice of appeal served on the mayor or city clerk has been held a sufficient service as to both defendants when such persons are ex-officio officers of the board.⁹¹

XVIII. PROSECUTIONS.

A. Criminal Liability of Municipality. Although a municipality cannot be indicted for offenses which derive their criminality from evil intention, or which consist in a violation of those social duties which appertain to men and subjects,⁹² it is indictable at common law for either nonfeasance or misfeasance in respect of public duties imposed upon it by law,⁹³ and modern judicial tendency, like public sentiment, is toward assimilating such corporations to natural persons in their liabilities, criminal as well as civil.⁹⁴ So a municipality may be indicted for creating a public nuisance,⁹⁵ or for neglecting its duty to keep its streets or England.—This doctrine has received recognition in the English courts, where it is so extended as to include prescriptive as well as statutory duties. Rex v. Oxfordshire, 16 East 223; Rex v. Stratford-upon-Avon, 14 East 348.

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 2215.

Failure to perform duty imposed by general law.—A municipal corporation is not liable to indictment for failure to perform a duty imposed upon it, not by its charter, but by a general law of the state, except where expressly made liable thereto by statute. State v. Burlington, 36 Vt. 521.

95. State v. Portland, 74 Me. 268, 43 Am. Rep. 586; Com. v. Gloucester, 110 Mass. 491 (holding that an indictment will lie against a municipal corporation for obstructing navigable waters by building a dam therein); People v. Albany, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 539, 27 Am. Dec. 95.

A city is answerable for a merely permissive nuisance arising from sewage matter deposited in tide-water, although there is no allegation of negligence or defect in the plan of the sewer, in adopting which the city exercised its best judgment as to the proper location of the outfalls, and although the city has been guilty of no negligence but constructed its sewers upon a system as good as any one knew how to build at the time of their construction. State v. Portland, 74 Me. 268, 43 Am. Rep. 586.

Burning infected bedding.—Municipal officers cannot be convicted of maintaining an indictable nuisance in burning infected bedding during a smallpox epidemic, although noxious vapors are thus created. State v.

highways,⁹⁶ municipal bridges,⁹⁷ or its sewers⁹⁸ in reasonable repair and proper condition. And a town has been held liable to an indictment for not erecting a bridge ordered by the road commissioners.⁹⁹ It has even been held that a municipality is indictable for permitting a public nuisance to be maintained within the corporate limits,¹ but this has been denied.² A municipal corporation is not punishable for a failure to perform a duty to put up sign-boards at railroad crossings imposed by statute upon overseers of common roads.³

B. Limitations of Prosecutions. An indictment against a town on behalf of an executor or administrator to recover a statutory penalty for a defect in the highways, whereby deceased lost his life, is not barred by a statute requiring actions or suits by individuals to be commenced within one year, or by a statute requiring process for the use of the state to be commenced within two years.⁴

C. Indictment. It has been held that the indictment should be against the municipality and not against the mayor and city council;⁵ but it has also been held that if persons named in an indictment for maintaining a nuisance are described as the burgess and councilmen of a borough, naming the borough, the

See 36 Cent. Dig. tit. "Municipal Corporations," § 2216.

In all cases where the municipality may be held for damages for a defective highway, it may be indicted. Davis v. Bangor, 42 Me. 522.

The forfeiture incurred by a town, under the Maine statute for a defect in its highways, whereby a loss of life has occurred, may be recovered by the executor or administrator of the deceased by an indictment. State v. Bangor, 30 Me. 341.

Street in remote part of town.—The fact that a street kept open by a town corporation as a public highway is in a remote and sparsely inhabited part of the town, that it is but little used, and not indispensable to the public convenience, or that the keeping of it in repair would involve an outlay of money which the corporation could not afford, constitutes no defense in an indictment against the corporation for failure to repair said street. As long as it is kept open as one of the highways of the town, the corporation is bound to keep it in repair. Chattanooga v. State, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 578.

97. State v. Madison, 63 Me. 546; State v.

Bangor, 41 Me. 533; State v. Gorham, 37 Me. 451; Saukville v. State, 69 Wis. 178, 33 N. W. 88.

To what bridges liability extends.—The inhabitants of counties were not liable at common law for not repairing bridges over canals, but only bridges over rivers; and the inhabitants of counties in New Jersey are not responsible for not repairing bridges over rivers in the state. State v. Hudson County, 30 N. J. L. 137.

Structures for the passage of travelers erected over a railroad, where it crosses an established highway, fall under the designation of bridges as that term is used in the Maine statute, and such bridges and their abutments, although constructed by the railroad company, form part of the highway which the town is bound to maintain, and hence the town may be indicted for failure to repair them. State v. Gorham, 37 Me. 451.

1. State v. Shelbyville Corp., 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 176 [approved in McCrowell v. Bristol, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 685], holding that a municipal corporation, vested by its charter with the power to enact such ordinances as may be necessary and proper to preserve the public health, and to prevent the removal of the nuisance, is indictable for permitting a slaughter-house to be kept upon the private property of a citizen within the town, to the detriment of the public health or comfort.

persons so named are indicted in their corporate capacity and not as individuals,⁶ and that the indictment or presentment need not allege in terms that the mayor and aldermen are an incorporated body.⁷ An indictment for failure to keep a highway in repair need not allege the authority by which the highway was laid out,⁸ or set forth the width of the highway.⁹ On indictment against a town for not erecting a bridge ordered by the road commissioners, it is not necessary to set forth that the selectmen had, previous to such order, neglected to build such bridge;¹⁰ and it is not necessary in an indictment for a nuisance caused by a sewer to allege negligence in the adoption of the plan of the sewerage system or careless execution of the same.¹¹ Where a notice, signed by citizens of a borough, requesting a constable to return a nuisance, is attached by the constable to his return, the notice is a part of the return and is sufficient to support an indictment.¹²

D. Trial and Evidence. An allegation or averment in the indictment, not necessary or material to a perfect description of the offense but suited only to negative an anticipated defense, need not be proved in order to authorize a conviction.¹³ Where an indictment on behalf of an administrator to recover a statutory penalty for a defect in a highway, whereby decedent's death occurred, describes decedent as late of a certain county, the right of the administrator to prosecute the indictment may be proved by letters of administration granted by the probate court of another county.¹⁴

E. Fines, Penalties, and Forfeitures. Under a statute subjecting municipal corporations to a fine, penalty, or forfeiture for defects in highways, whereby loss of life has occurred, the amount of the amercement, within the limits of the statute, is to be fixed by the court in its discretion and not by the jury,¹⁵ and the decision of the trial court as to the amount is final.¹⁶

MUNICIPAL COURT. A court usually located in a city and having jurisdiction over adjacent territory,¹ such as the mayor's or recorder's court, etc.² (See, generally, COURTS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.)

MUNICIPAL FINE. A fine imposed by a municipal corporation.³ (See, generally, FINES; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.)

MUNICIPALITY. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

MUNICIPAL JURISDICTION. A phrase which does not necessarily designate the jurisdiction of a common council, but may designate the jurisdiction of any public authority, administering a business pertaining to a city, such as would have to be administered by the common council in the absence of specially constituted authority.⁴ (See, generally, MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.)

upon the subject it is found, as was shown upon the argument, that although the municipal courts are usually located in cities, yet they have usually had jurisdiction over the adjacent territory. This was so in Chicago, Boston, London, and probably in other instances. Therefore we think that those words in the constitution require at most nothing more than that municipal courts should be located in cities or incorporated villages, and that it was never intended to prevent the legislature from giving them such powers as they have usually had in other states."

MUNICIPAL LAW. A rule of civil conduct prescribed by the supreme power in a state,⁵ commanding what is right, and prohibiting what is wrong;⁶ a prescribed rule of civil conduct;⁷ the expression of the legislative will of the state according to the forms of the constitution;⁸ that which pertains solely to the citizens and inhabitants of a state, and is thus distinguished from political law and commercial law;⁹ a law confined to a particular place;¹⁰ the rule of law by which a particular district, community, or nation is governed;¹¹ in a strict sense, the law of a particular place, such as a city or town; and originally the law of a municipium, or free town.¹² It is now, however, more usually applied to the customary laws that obtain in any particular city or province, and which have no authority in neighboring places.¹³ (See, generally, COMMON LAW; LAW; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; STATUTES.)

MUNICIPAL LIEN. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

MUNICIPAL MARKET. A market conducted under municipal regulations for the sale of provisions.¹⁴ (See MARKET; and, generally, MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.)

This definition is criticized in Davis v. Ballard, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 563, 565, 576, as incompatible with the genius of our form of government; neither is it literally true as applicable to our system, in that we accept no supreme power except that of the people. The following definition is there given: "Municipal law may be properly defined to be a rule of civil conduct, prescribed by any power in a state, having, according to its constitution or form of government, authority to act."
